A bulletin from J. C. Kellam, assistant director of the NYA for Texas, stated:

"In Texas, part-time work during the regular 1936-37 school term will be provided for approximately 8,000 elementary and high school students 16 years of age and over at a maximum wage of $6 per month. State allotments for school aid will be revised in accordance with the revised estimates of youth population, and just as soon as the allotment for Texas has been made, county allotments will be made by this office on the same basis as that on which the state allotment was made."

"Each county superintendent, following notification of the quota given a county, should form a county placement committee, and, on the basis of youth population and need, determine the quota for eligible school in the county. The county placement committee should consist of at least three persons: the county school superintendent, the superintendent of one of the larger independent school districts, and the principal from a common school district; if the number of parochial schools in the county is significant, a representative of them should be included in the committee."

ASPIRANT TO CONGRESS IS FETE TALKER

Says to Conduct Campaign
As Before First Vote
Unless Change Made
By Rep. Blanton

County Judge Clyde L. Garrett Thursday morning termed as a "malicious lie" the charge that a $25,000 slush fund from Washington is being used to elect him as the 17th congressional district representative. The charge was allegedly hurled before the Taylor County Blanton-for-Congress club in Abilene by Fred O. Jaye, DeLeon attorney endorsed by the Townsend clubs, defeated in the primary Saturday and a joinder this week of the "Blanton forces."

Preparing to deliver his first speech since the primary at a Bass Lake picnic near Gorman Thursday afternoon, Judge Garrett reserved comment on Jaye joining the Blanton forces. "I shall have nothing to say about that at this time, as his reason for doing so is already too well known to the people of this district."

"I propose to continue my campaign along the same lines as in the first primary unless my opponent should adopt methods other than those he used in the first primary," Judge Garrett declared.

"Blanton told the voters that he was running purely on his record and that he was not mentioning his opponents' names; that if he had to deal in personalities he did not want the office. It is to be hoped that it will not be necessary for me to have to adopt any other type of campaign other than that used heretofore."

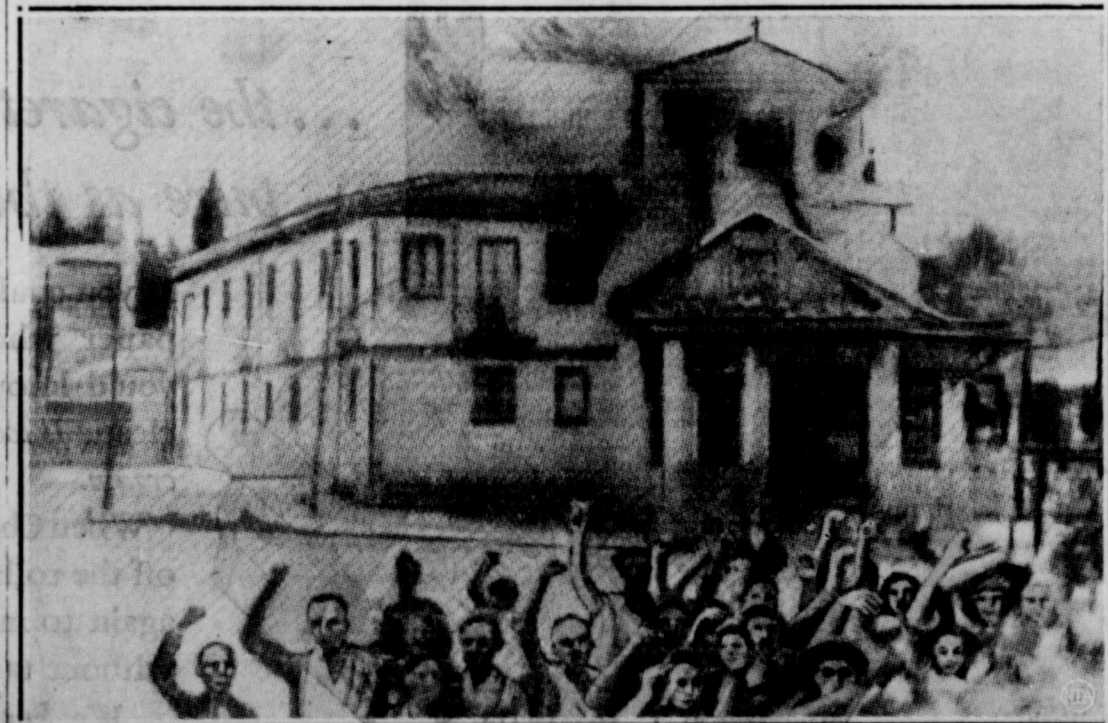

Continuing, Judge Garrett asserted, "The result of the first primary clearly indicates that the character of campaign I waged met with the hearty approval of the voters of the district, they having given me about 5,000 votes lead over Mr. Blanton."

Garrett had not fully outlined his speech. Stores in Gorman, near where Garrett was born, prepared to close for the candidate's speech.

Garrett stated he would favor in his speech at Gorman: An adequate and liberal old age pension, free speech and a free press as guaranteed by the Constitution, adequate hospitalization and reasonable compensation for disabled veterans of all wars, a balanced budget attained by elimination of useless expenditure instead of increased taxes, a tariff on foreign oil and foreign farm and ranch products, more jobs and less idleness, strengthening of the federal anti-trust laws, army, navy and air service adequate for national defense, repeal of federal emergency legislation as business improves, elimination of income tax loopholes, establishment of merit system for all postmasters, restoration of agriculture as the nation's basic industry, better protection of labor and small producers and distributors.

Garrett said he would oppose, as in the campaign before the first primary, issuance of more tax-exempt securities, and federal sales tax, the federal tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline and four cents on lubricating oil, federal control of oil industry and use of the franking privilege.

Investigators Should Be Investigated, Too

It is an odd little comedy of errors that is being played in Washington these days, with the investigators for one government department investigating the investigators for another government department, and the investigated investigators investigating right back at them.

The Secret Service men of the Treasury Department seem to have been looking into the activities of the Bureau of Investigation men of the Department of Justice. Most recently J. Edgar Hoover, boss of the latter group, got on the trail to check reports that his own brokerage accounts—of which, he says, he has none—were being investigated by somebody.

Meanwhile, Treasury Department officials are reported to be investigating reports that their own Secret Service men have been investigating the G-men; and about all we need now to complicate matters for good is a congressional committee to investigate all of them.

But while the whole business does have some of the aspects of a rather bewildering joke, it is worth remembering that there is nothing especially funny about the idea of investigating the investigators.

These government sleuths who have compiled such brilliant records are, after all, public servants; and, however complex and peculiar the present tangle of mutual investigation may seem, it doesn't hurt to have everybody reminded that it is perfectly in order for their records to be brought out into full daylight any time the public demands it.

That point is worth knowing. The one thing that would end all the great usefulness of such an organization as that of the G-men would be for the organization to drift into a semi-sanctified position above the reach of inquiry.

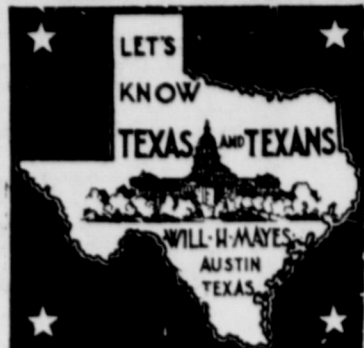

If that ever happens, we shall have perfected an ideal tool for the use of any administration which has hankering toward a dictatorship.

After all, the OGPU of Russia and the Gestapo of Germany have nothing in the world but organizations of G-men which have been made superior to all criticism, inquiry, or restraint.

The dictators of those countries can use their outfits to strike down political opponents, because no one in either country has the right to ask what the organizations are doing, or under what legal enactment they are operating.

If the next session of Congress should desire to make a full public inquiry into the entire record of the G-men, the Secret Service, the postal inspectors, or any other group of federal employees, it would be entirely within its rights.

No such investigation seems especially advisable, as it happens; the thing to remember is that the right to make it exists.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquirers must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What was a "bond marriage" as practiced in Colonial days? T. Y. Barstow.

A. Mexican laws required marriages to be before a priest. Priests wishing to marry appeared before an alcalde and signed a bond or agreement to be married by a priest when one visited the colony and an ad interim marriage was recognized. The priests' marriage fee was $25.00 and often the ceremony was not performed. When divorces were desired the bonds were torn up in the presence of the alcalde.

Q. When and where was the temporary capitol building erected at Houston? R. E. P. Austin.

A. The first congress of the Republic of Texas located the temporary capitol at Houston and the building was erected there in 1837 on what is now the site of the Rice Hotel. After the permanent building was located at Austin the building was converted into a hotel, then known as the Capitol Hotel.

Q. What is the most northerly town in Texas? C. C. Decatur.

A. Texhoma, Sherman county, is on the Texas-Oklahoma line, population about 1,200 with one-fourth in Texas. The postoffice is in Oklahoma.

Q. What are some of the greatest benefits to Texans to be expected from the Centennial observance? T. E. Nocona.

A. A better understanding of Texas, past, present and future, greater State patriotism and pride, increased development of Texas resources of every kind, improved living conditions, broader views, and a stronger determination to make life in Texas all that it should be for every citizen.

Texas Has Highest Crude Oil Tax In United States

DALLAS — Texas oil producers actually pay a total production tax of seven and three-quarter cents per barrel of crude oil produced, which tops the tax rate of every other oil producing state, according to data collected by the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association of Texas.

This fact is accurately revealed for the first time through the collection of tax statistics from Texas oil producers by questionnaire, the returns from which have thus far accounted for 60 per cent of the state's crude oil production in 1935.

Production taxes paid within the state during the past year, by more than 4,000 Texas oil producers, aggregated $30,175,317 on a total production of 391,097,000 barrels, or an average tax per barrel of 7.72 cents. This makes it evident that the gross production tax of two cents per barrel on crude oil is only one of many taxes imposed upon the producing branch of the Texas oil industry.

Last year, the gross production tax paid by Texas oil producers and royalty owners amounted to $8,126,995, which constituted only about one-fourth of the oil production taxes collected in the state. In addition, $22,048,322 was collected in the state, county, city and school ad valorem taxes, franchise taxes, regulatory taxes, gross receipts taxes and various other state levies on the producing branch of the oil industry.

Texas oil operators are shown by these facts to be at a decided disadvantage with those in other oil producing states. In Oklahoma, the crude oil production tax is 5 per cent of its market value, which makes the average tax per barrel

No Weary Mothers On Western Trains

CHICAGO.—A whole family, even on of quintuplets, may now tour the North American continent without a sign of prickly heat or a smack from a tired mother. More than any other group of travelers, perhaps, women and children are benefiting by the remarkable progress which the Western Railroads are celebrating in their annual observance of "Railroad Week" from July 13th to 18th.

The regulated, even temperature of air-conditioned cars, now used on all the principal trains of the western roads, makes a vacation trip cool and comfortable instead of the nightmare it once was for mothers of young children. From midwestern heat and dust, the family may step at once into fresh, mountain atmosphere aboard a train, and the relief to fretful children and tired mothers is immediate.

ALLEY OOP - - - - - By HAMLIN

On our last trip to the coast, three years ago," said one recent passenger. "I changed Jean's dresses at least five times a day. And in spite of that, she looked the coal mines, most of the time." On the same trip this year, both Jean and her younger brother can romp in spotless aisles, press their noses against dustless windows and manage to stay cleaner than they do at home. The end of an air-conditioned railroad trip finds mother with a much smaller heap of clothes for the laundry, and none of them begrimed by soot.

In planning more comfortable family travel the Western Railroads have added many features to the prime feature of air-conditioning. Special cars on many trains are reserved exclusively for women passengers. Stewardesses and trained nurses are in attendance on many vacation trains to aid in the care of child travelers. Thus, the mother traveling alone with her children has that precious chance of occasional relief when she can turn her charges over to an experienced nurse.

RESORT HOTEL

ANN HAMILTON held herself erect as she walked down the avenue. There was new life in the air, reflected in the quickened step and eager eye of every passerby. The boys and girls, strolling during their lunch hour, were well-dressed and confident. The summer heat had not yet begun. Under the cloudless blue overhead the colors were gay. Life was gay.

"Spring on Silk Stocking avenue in any city in the world!" Ann thought, with a sensation of joy. She felt like singing this refrain. The words had a lilt to them.

She stopped before a shop window to admire some brown suits and yellow sweaters. "For travel," a card said. There was a profusion of travel advertisements and booklets in the display. Vacation in the Adirondacks. Dude ranch days. The Minnesota lakes. The Catskills. Les Cotes D'Azur.

Ann looked at the attractive posters and sighed.

Each year in July she looked at travel advertisements and sighed just this way. What person doesn't, she thought, look ahead longingly to a summer vacation?

Ann's secretarial job kept her busy all year. Her annual vacation kept her keen on living, and brought her back eager for the job again. And each year she seemed to live her vacation more intensely, both in her dreams, and in reality. She was 26, and she had made her own way in the world for exactly seven years.

When she glanced into the show window mirrors, conscious of her dark good looks and trim figure, she saw a young man looking at the travel folders, almost over her shoulder.

She noticed that he wore soft, expensive woollens and carried a downy polo coat over his arm. His collar was snug and high. The very crush in his hat was redolent of good taste and luxury. He had brown hair and blue eyes; his face was pale, and he looked tired.

When he moved away from the window, swinging along gracefully, Ann started after him with faint recognition; she had seen his likeness somewhere—perhaps in a rotogravure section.

Ann didn't quite realize what she was doing, but she found herself following the course the young man took. He walked a few blocks and entered the arcade of the tallest building in the city.

JUST as he went into the smart travel bureau which occupied half of the ground floor she remembered who he was. He was Jaime Laird, a rich young man who followed the races from Hialeah to Santa Anita to Saratoga again. Ann thought that he must have been ill, for a man who followed the sun all the time as a vacation should have a tan complexion.

This was the travel office in which she had made arrangements for her vacations each of the past seven years. Ann hadn't intended planning her vacation today, but the sight of Jaime Laird in the bureau gave her an adventurous spur. She entered the room with its attractive travel displays, and waited while the fabulous Jaime Laird was served.

Ann stole furtive glances in the mirror as she waited. Her dark brown hair was parted at the side and waved back softly. Her face was radiant. Her blue eyes sparkled.

"I've just had an operation," Jaime Laird said to the clerk. "I

Pioneer Women's Club

Held Monthly Meet

The monthly dinner of the Pioneer Women's club, held Tuesday noon at the home of Mrs. R. F. Jones, was marked for the program that followed, and the old time dishes that spread the dinner table in profusion.

Mrs. R. F. Jones presided over the flower centered table, and customers were reversed from those of pioneer days, for Mr. Jones, the head of the family, waited on the table most gallantly, giving the ladies leisure to enjoy each other without having to do the serving.

The board literally groined with pioneer dishes of yore tyme flavor, chicken pie, ham and gravy, fried chicken, salmon salad, potato salad, English peas, beet and cucumber pickles, black eyed peas, okra and tomato, poaches and cantaloupes, pound cake, banana cake and last course of ice cream with the cakes, tea and coffee.

The table reminded one of those days of fifty years ago, when the covered wagon pilgrim was offered the hospitality of the home.

The program was in keeping, bringing history of old times by several members, all recorded in their minutes by their secretary.

Mrs. Miles Westbrook read a historical poem, and Mrs. E. D. Townsend, president of the club, contributed "Good old time poetry."

James, Gene McDonald and Lorin D. Black.

UNEMPLOYED
TO REGISTER
FOR WPA JOBS

A statement concerning applications for jobs under the new WPA setup has been received at the local WPA office from J. C. Sweeney, district administrator, Texas Relief Commission. Those desiring jobs under the WPA setup can secure additional information from the local office Thursday when applications will be received for jobs.

The statement from Sweeney follows:
Under an arrangement entered into between the Federal Works Progress Administration and the Texas Relief Commission, applications will be taken from needy unemployed persons for employment with the WPA. Applications to visit welfare offices and passed on to the WPA district office for final acceptance or rejection. This last duty is one that will be handled by a special staff of workers who will do nothing else. From the application blanks, they will gather data that will establish the actual need of applicant, and when accepted, the persons will be advised directly. Calling at the local or district offices to find out what is being done, or what will be done, is discouraged. The applicant is urged to await notification.

The employment of a person is based upon need—this fact has been overlooked by many persons who think the new program is to give employment to everyone needing a job. The quota of jobs in Texas has been set at $1,000, and it is anticipated that at least 185,000 applicants will have applied for them. Consequently, some disappointments will naturally be in line and it is requested that only those who are in dire need make application.

The Texas Relief Commission is placing seven full time case workers back and in the smaller counties where the local welfare workers have been working part time, their present salary will be supplemented and full time allowed. The taking of applications, which will be followed by home visits and other procedure to verify statements, will naturally be slow due to the limited personnel, but everyone will be allowed to make application, sooner or later, as the program will last several months, and there is no need for crowds to assemble at the various offices.

All county judges have been fully advised of this new program and it is felt that through their cooperation and assistance the work will be accomplished with the least possible delay. We now request the general public to bear with us while we are endeavoring to place at work the most needy of its citizens. Direct relief, in the form of money or groceries or rents, is not contemplated, although surplus commodities will be distributed to those whose applications are accepted until their first month's checks arrive.

Mr. Moore will be in the office Thursday, July 30th, to consider applications.

New Orleans to Ask Noose For Eight of Gang

By United Press
NEW ORLEANS — Eight survivors of the notorious Cefalu-Ugarte gang are under indictment for murder here and they will face trial as soon as they can be rounded up from jails and prisons in Louisiana, Mississippi and Illinois.

Individually and collectively, the young New Orleans gangsters are blamed for seven murders in the past six years and five of their own number have been executed. It is the bloodiest criminal episode in this region since the reign of the Mafia terrorist gangs here 50 years ago, which was climaxed by mass lynchings on Canal Street.

John Groesch, chief of detectives, and his "gang-busters" have known the records of these eight suspected outlaws and most of the details of the crimes charged to them ever since the Whitney branch bank robbery — massacre of New Years Eve, 1930, but legal technicalities delayed the final roundup.

Two years ago Groesch dictated under his own signature for New Orleans newspapers, a statement giving the entire story of the Whitney bank robbery and the names of six men who he said perpetrated it. At that time one of the men he named, Owen Cauche, was walking the New Orleans streets, and another, Joe Ugarte, was serving a four-year prison term for automobile theft, but neither had even been charged with the bank robbery. Groesch mentioned the fact and deplored it.

Now, Groesch believes he has adequate evidence against the entire eight men and he convinced a grand jury of it July 7, in two hours. He has just returned from Los Angeles with James Oliver, the last of his suspects, who was arrested there on Groesch's tip.

The series of outrages began when three figures, grotesquely garbed in long black rubber coats and white hoods and goggles, stormed into the Whitney bank at the height of the pre-holiday rush. They carried revolvers and sawed-off shotguns.

Pierre Rizan, the bank guard, reached for his gun. A shotgun blast at close range killed him instantly. Then the three gunners began "burning powder."

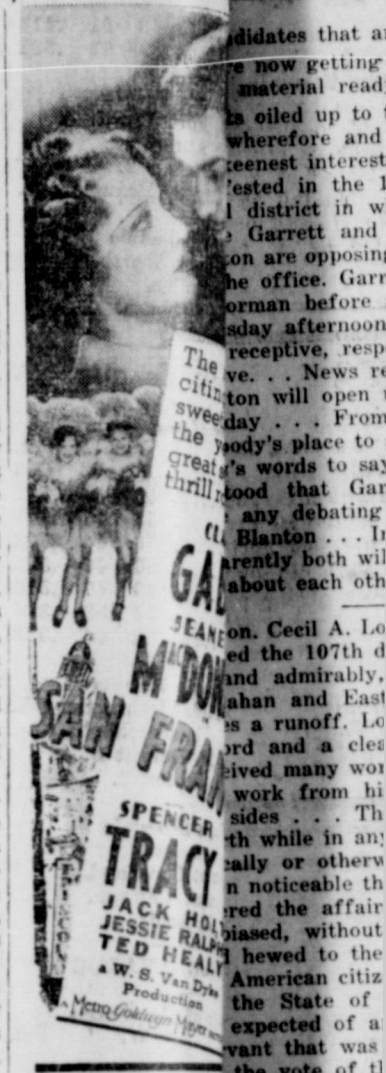

Gilbert Dietrich, a bank patron, fell dead. Albert Brownson, a teller, was critically wounded, but survived. Another customer was shot in the hand. The cash was seized from the tellers' cages and the raiders fled in a motor car.

Groesch arrived just as the hearse drew up for the dead. He made hurried notes and went for his No. 1 suspect, Joe Ugarte. At noon, Ugarte was in jail. An hour later, two of his notorious friends, Claude Cefalu and Owen Cauche, were found in a garage washroom, nearly a can full of money, part of the loot. Both youths, Cefalu only 20, had the jitters.

Cauche broke from an officer's grip and fled. Cefalu grappled with Detective Captain Frank Lannes and was shot. Cauche was found the next day. Groesch said he "broke" after 20 hours of questioning, and named all four bank robbers: himself, Cefalu, Cauche and James (Red) Cavanaugh, who at 22 was the oldest of the band. Cavanaugh confessed readily, Groesch said, and told how the robbery was planned.

GUM-DIPPED CORD BODY—Every cotton fibre in every cord in every ply is soaked in liquid rubber. This is the only process known that prevents internal friction and heat, providing greater strength, blowout protection and longer life.

TWO EXTRA LAYERS OF GUM-DIPPED CORDS UNDER THE TREAD—This patented Firestone feature binds the whole tire into one unit of greater strength, cushions road shocks, gives extra protection against punctures.

LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—The new scientifically designed non-skid tread is wider, flatter, with more and tougher rubber on the road, giving long even wear and thousands of extra miles.

LOW PRICES—These low prices are made possible by volume production in the world's most efficient factories.

THE FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE—Every Firestone Standard Tire bears the Firestone name, your guarantee of greater safety, dependability and economy.
