TAC to decide

No scheduled flights for a year?

By BOB BURTON

In what Texas Aeronautics Commission (TAC) officials called "a very unusual, precedent-setting" move, Big Spring's only scheduled airline, Trans-Regional Airlines, has requested suspension of its scheduled flights for one year, beginning Saturday.

The TAC indicated that the request would be granted.

The suspension was requested by airline manager R.E. McClure (in a letter to be mailed to Austin today) because "as the system exists now we find it impossible to continue airline service."

The letter cites "tremendous strain financially, physically, and mentally" as reasons to discontinue, and attributes these problems to relations with the county and "unfair, unconcerned actions and feelings".

TAC official Harry Rogers said today that he had received a call from McClure asking for the suspension because of declining traffic on the flights to Dallas-Ft. Worth (DFW).

"At this time," said Rogers, "I hope the move is suspension only. The possibility of an alternate carrier to handle the route is remote at this time because of the declining traffic picture."

McClure told the Herald he wanted to reassure the town that Trans-Regional would be here a year from now. "We're looking forward to working with the city," he said, "and we'll continue to offer our Cessna sales, fuel and maintenance services, and charter services during that time."

Rogers also tipped his hat to the local firm. "I have had American Airlines observing them at Dallas-Ft. Worth and they do a good job."

Both County Judge Bill Tune and Commissioner Bill Crooker declined to comment on the Trans-Regional move, but Tune told reporters that he and the Commissioner's Court had been discussing the possibility of having Chaparral Airlines begin to provide service to the community.

Tune said he had been discussing the possibility with Ollie Higgins of Chaparral, and although there are no firm commitments, there had been some interest expressed.

"Chaparral recently applied to fly from Abilene to Love Field in Dallas," said Tune, "and they fly over Big Spring twice a day on their way to Midland-Odessa, so why shouldn't they stop here?"

The judge also stressed that Chaparral would not compete directly with Trans-Regional, as the latter flies to DFW field, not Love. The judge also pointed out Chaparral's other services to Austin, Houston, Abilene, and others.

"My intentions are to insure that this community has air service," he continued.

McClure told the Herald that his passenger total per month had dropped in the two years of service from 300 per month to 86 in March and around 60 this month.

The surprise move leaves Big Spring and Howard County without scheduled flights, and with no firm anticipation of them resuming within a year.

Traveling vandals decapitate gas pumps

By MARJ CARPENTER

It wasn't the way President Carter planned it, but parts of West Texas were involuntarily conserving gasoline today after gasoline nozzles were cut from hoses at 14 service stations from Baird to Pecos along Interstate 20.

A total of 115 nozzles were cut from hoses and stolen during the night Wednesday. Total damage was estimated at $10,000.

The 14 stations were out of the gasoline business this morning, awaiting suppliers to bring additional nozzles and repair damage to the hoses.

The trail of snipped-off gasoline nozzles apparently reaches from Baird to Pecos. The only stations involved were along IS 20 and were closed for the night. None of the all-right truck stops or stations open late were hit by the vandals.

The total count includes eight nozzles at Ringhoffer Texaco at Baird; 16 nozzles at an Exxon Station in Abilene; six at a Shell Station in Sweetwater; five at an Exxon Station and seven at a Gulf Station in Colorado City; nine at a Chevron station in Westbrook; 20 at Gus Tatom Texaco in Big Spring; six at Coop's Exxon in Stanton; ten at J.D. Dennam's Fina in Stanton; six at a Chevron Station in Midland; none in Odessa where there were only all-night stations; five at Shell, four at Standard and three at Phillips in Monahans and six at the Interstate Shell in Pecos.

Apparently Pecos was as far west as the culprits went and Baird was the last town to the east. It was not known in which direction, the vandal or vandals traveled.

Callahan County Sheriff Bill Skinner at Baird said that a white and red Chevrolet pickup with two long-haired youths was seen parked and looking over the station that had damage in that county. He apparently was the only one who saw the suspected vehicle.

Sidney Brewer, manager of the Texaco Station in Big Spring said that the nozzles were apparently cut off with long-handled clippers.

Sheriff's departments in eight counties and police departments in nine cities are all working on the case.

Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders reported that he had a suspect but gave no details. However, at that point, the sheriff may have thought he had a local problem. It was late in the morning when law officers realized that damage had been extensive all the way down Interstate 20.

Sheriff Raul Flores in Reeves County said he knew the Pecos police were investigating one incident, but had not realized it was so widespread.

"If this is the last town at one end and Baird at the other, it's possible they are from one of those towns. But then they could have simply run out of time when they reached one of those two communities," Flores stated.

He added, "After all of that driving and snipping, it should have been nearly daylight."

MIAMI (AP) — Jimmy Goddard, who pedals a mail bike through the Coconut Grove section of Miami, has gotten the word from his superiors: He can start singing again.

Goddard, who had been singing on his daily rounds, ended the practice in protest of a recommendation by U.S. Postal Service experts that all bicycle mail routes in South Florida be abandoned.

Miami Postmaster Herbert Daws, who said any decision on Goddard's route will await a review this autumn, added that his office will try to keep Goddard on his bike after that.

"Great," said Goddard, 53, who attributes his 1,184 hours of unused sick leave to the exercise he gets on his bike.

Burleson move scuttles budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders laid heavy blame on President Carter's administration, especially Defense Secretary Harold Brown, today for the wrecking of a proposed budget that now must be replaced.

Early today after a grueling session, the House defeated, 320 to 84, the non-binding fiscal blueprint for the year beginning Oct. 1. The Budget Committee now is trying to have a new one ready for consideration next week.

A major factor was a liberal revolt against the addition of $2.3 billion for the Defense Department.

"It is unfortunate the Secretary of Defense made an end-around play," Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill told reporters. The play, he said, was for Brown to go directly to Rep. Omar Burleson, D-Tex., and ask for introduction of the amendment to increase the Pentagon funds.

"The Secretary just didn't understand the procedures," O'Neill said. O'Neill said Carter had telephoned him, and that he had advised the President to let the House settle the matter.

"This is the United States Congress where the Democratic majority is going to write the legislation," Budget Committee Chairman Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., said at a news conference. "It is not the Georgia legislature ...

"You don't just call from downtown and send word from the Secretary of Defense to the Armed Services Committee members and others and just say 'write a budget resolution'."

Giaimo said Republicans who had no intention of supporting the budget resolution voted for amendments such as the one increasing military funds.

"The administration, the Republicans and the Armed Services Committee took control and wrote the resolution, not realizing they destroyed the chances of passing the legislation," he said.

Giaimo called a committee meeting for Friday. He said the group will work out a resolution acceptable to the Democratic majority, including a compromise figure on defense.

O'Neill said he hoped a new resolution would be ready for House debate next week.

Cutting spending bill

Ezzell picked to take first whack

By MARK BROWNING
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — As chairman of an important subcommittee, of the Health and Welfare Committee, Rep. Mike Ezzell, Snyder, has drawn the dubious distinction of being the first representative designated by the House leadership to sponsor major cuts in the appropriations bill.

This puts him in a good light with the House leadership — which is seeking to cut an estimated $400 million from the $15.7 billion appropriations bill — but has raised the ire of many legislators.

Minority group members are particularly upset because Ezzell sponsored major changes in an especially sensitive area — Health and Welfare.

He led a successful attempt to trim an increase in Aid to Families With Dependent Children from $8 to $3 a month per child.

"Somebody had to run with it," Ezzell said. "I was willing."

"We had to concede that we weren't getting anywhere after the first two days," Ezzell said. "We simply had to make some cuts." Ezzell won approval for his amendment after attempts at compromises by liberals failed.

"I hope they won't hold any grudges," Ezzell said.

Ezzell's amendment was the first of what apparently will be a pattern during the remainder of debate on appropriations bill. The House leadership, including the Speaker Bill Clayton, and appropriations committee chairman Bill Pfesnal of Bryan, has determined items it feels can be cut from the bill and is submitting them to the House in packages for each section of the bill.

Ezzell said work on his comprehensive amendment began several days ago.

Several members opposing Ezzell's changes complained of "arm-twisting" by the House leadership to speed up the appropriations process.

Asked how much work Clayton's supporters had done on behalf of his amendment, Ezzell replied, "Let's just say we did have the support of the leadership on this."

STANTON — The trial of Ollie Biles, 53, of Fort Stockton, charged with murder of a worker who was shot off the top of a cotton trailer at a local gin, has been moved to Howard County on a change of venue.

Chili beats chitlins

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Chili Lobby, having won out over gumbo and chitlins in the House, will now direct its campaign to make chili the state dish toward Texas senators.

Representatives, taking a 15-minute breather from the heavy business of amending a general appropriation bill, adopted a resolution Wednesday, 70-36, to make chili the state dish.

"Just remember the dying words of Kit Carson — 'If I could only have one more bowl of Texas chili,'" co-sponsor Ben Grant, D-Marshall, told House members.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, campaigned to make gumbo the state dish. "Can you imagine the little children in my area — we feed'em gumbo for breakfast, gumbo for lunch, gumbo for dinner. Then tell'em chili's the state dish!" Peveto said in mock disgust.

Black Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, suggested that chitterlings — better known as chitlins — might be more suitable.

"Everybody knows chitlins don't cost as much as chili or gumbo. This is known as the equal opportunity amendment, and we will take food stamps for the state food," Washington said.

The suit claimed the officials maintained a $750,000 illegal "slush fund" from unaccounted-for ticket sales, made an illegal $40,000 contribution to former President Richard Nixon's re-election committee and engaged in criminal antitrust activities.

Supreme Court justices swayed by publicity?

Ex-White House aides prison bound?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, embarassed by what probably is an unprecedented news leak about a final court decision, may soon have to decide whether its own members can be swayed by publicity.

Attorneys for former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and one-time White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman asked the court Wednesday for permission to comment by May 7 on the impact of the news leak, which revealed facts from the justices' private discussions about the three Watergate cover-up appeals.

The lawyers plan to argue that there are effects from "the publicly disclosed circumstances involving the consideration" of the case.

News reports surfaced last week, saying the court already has voted to deny the appeals of all three men. Those reports said the court voted 5-3 to turn down the appeals, but that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger was holding up announcement of the vote in an attempt to get one justice to change his mind.

In such appeals, four votes are needed to grant a full review.

Such leaks from the justices' closed discussions about pending cases are rare. If last week's report proves accurate, it probably would be the first time in history that the final determination in a case was made public before being announced officially by the court.

Speculation about how the leak came about has been rampant, but the reporter who originated the report, Nina Totenberg of National Public Radio, has said only that the information was supplied by unnamed "court sources."

The three high officials of the Nixon administration were convicted in 1975 of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and testifying falsely under oath in connection with the Watergate scandals. Each was sentenced to 30 months to eight years in prison.

While Ehrlichman chose to begin serving time while his appeal was pending, Mitchell and Haldeman have remained free. If the Supreme Court turns down their appeals, they would go to prison.

One reason the three Watergate figures want the Supreme Court to review their convictions is that they were denied a fair trial because of publicity about the criminal charges against them.

If the justices allow attorneys for the three to file additional arguments, it is likely the lawyers will contend that the unusual circumstances of the case's handling in this instance has tainted the Supreme Court itself.

Although it seems doubtful that the justices will declare themselves unable to handle the appeals fairly, they may permit the attorneys to file the additional memorandum. A decision on that point probably will be announced before the weekend.

In another matter Wednesday, the court voted 6-3 that states have a constitutional duty to provide prisoners with "meaningful access" to the courts by making available either law libraries or the assistance of persons trained in the law.

The justices said a prisoner's "fundamental right of access to the courts" demands such assistance at state expense. The North Carolina case involved a state prison system, but the court's ruling on a constitutional issue also applies to federal prisons.

Touch typing

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — In an industry largely automated, James Sechrist handles — literally handles — $6 million worth of tobacco each month.

As tobacco flows past him at the R.J. Reynolds plant here, his hand decides, by touch, whether it has the required moisture content. For tobacco to be the right type it must have 12.5 to 13.5 per cent moisture content to be processed.

It takes money to buy whisky, chips, 'girls'

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police say they would like to crack down on high-class vice in the city but lack the funds to gain admittance to the big poker games or impress the costly prostitutes.

Asst. Police Chief Tommy Mitchell said Wednesday the vice squad officers are "out priced in trying to make arrests in the southwest and northwest areas."

Mitchell said he has asked Police Chief B.G. Bond to try to obtain additional money from sources other than the city budget.

The new budget being considered by the City Council requests $70,000 for the vice division, up $45,000 from the current expenditures.

Bond said he would accept additional funds from civic organizations or state law enforcement groups.

Mitchell said a pocket full of "flash money is needed to gain the confidence of prostitutes so they will solicit undercover officers."

He said the officers need between $400 and $500 to work these high-class vice cases.

Additional money, he said, is spent buying memberships in some fancy clubs and buying drinks for the women.

In gambling cases, Mitchell said, some of the big games demand a player put up $500 to $5,000 just to get in and more money may be spent before enough evidence is collected to make arrests.

Some of the money is returned to the vice squad after arrests are made, but the funds spent on drinks and membership cards goes down the drain, he said.

Earnings records set

First quarter revenues and earnings for The Southland Corporation, which has Seven-Eleven stores in Big Spring, were the largest ever recorded in any first quarter, according to John P. Thompson, chairman.

Revenues increased 15.3 per cent to $536,775,000, compared with $465,473,000 for the same period last year. Net earnings for the three months rose to $6,190,000 from $5,456,000 in 1976, up 13.5 per cent.

Thompson said, "The growth in revenues and earnings was excellent — particularly in view of the severe winter weather in late January and early February in many areas of the country which affected sales and product mix and also increased operating costs."

As of March 31, 1977, 6,252 retail outlets were in operation, including 6,134 Seven-Eleven stores with an additional 204 under construction. During the quarter ia net of 181 convenience stores were added.

The Howard College School of Vocational Nursing is now accepting applications for the next class which will begin September 1.

This class which will be limited to 30 students is a 12-month course including 584 classroom hours and 1250 hours of clinical experience.

On successful completion of the course, the student and school faculty will submit a completed application for State Board examination. On passing the State Board examination, the applicant will be a licensed vocational nurse as registered in Texas.

Applicants for this one-year LVN program must be 17 years of age or older. Student must be 18 years of age to take the State Board examinations.

The applicant must have completed at least two years of high school or its equivalent and are required to submit a transcript. Any applicant not having two years of high school or unable to furnish a transcript, will be required to take the GED Test which is given at the College.

The first step for a prospective applicant is to call Mrs. Johnnie Amos, Director of the LVN program at 267-6311, extension 73, for an appointment at which time complete details and applications will be discussed, and arrangements made for the pre-entrance test to be given by the guidance and counseling department. There is a $10 registration fee that is paid at the time the application is submitted.

The Howard College School of Vocational Nursing is accredited by the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners and approved by the Texas Education Agency and the Veterans Administration.

All hospitals affiliated with the school of vocational nursing are accredited hospitals. These include Cowpers, Hall-Bennett and Malone-Hogan hospitals. Mrs. Johnnie Amos and Mrs. Ramona Harris are instructors and supervisors for the program. There have been about 350 students graduated since the school began operation in 1958.

The jury required only 22 minutes to determine Breeding's guilt and took another 90 minutes to assess the punishment.

IN ANNAPOLIS AGAIN — Gov. Marvin Mandel with his wife, Jeanne, leaves his Johns Hopkins Hospital room to return to the governor's mansion in Annapolis Wednesday. Injured oilfield worker rushed to Midland hospital

STANTON — Raymond Youngblood, Midland, was rushed to Midland Memorial Hospital by Alert Ambulance from Big Spring Wednesday at 9:11 p.m. suffering from injuries received in an oilfield accident four miles northwest of the Brown gin in Martin County.

Youngblood was working on a pumpjack on the Hale Place and was on top of the gear box when the pump jack apparently kicked on. It knocked Youngblood off the jack. He fell to the concrete base, injuring his back, hip and leg.

A laborer who lived in a nearby area discovered the injured man shortly after 9 p.m. and notified the Department of Public Safety and the Martin County Sheriff's Office. Sheriff Dan Saunders assisted in getting an ambulance to the scene.

'Blowout preventer' goof revealed

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — Troubleshooters failed in three attempts today to choke off the runaway well in the North Sea in what was described as a severe setback.

Phillips Petroleum officials also disclosed that a "blowout preventer" had mistakenly been placed upside down on the wellhead before last week's accident.

Phillips officials acknowledged that today's failure to shut off the well was a severe setback in their efforts to save the North Sea from further massive pollution.

The oil company said that the half moon-shaped steel discs called "blind rams" that were used today to try to close off the well had been tested to withstand only 4,000 pounds per square inch of pressure, but that the force of the oil spurting to the surface from the seabed was estimated at 4,350 pounds of pressure per square inch.

Each time the seven-man team put the rams in place today, the oil pressure forced them open and continued to spurt crude oil into the sea.

Robert Archambeault, Phillips director of engineering for the midsea Ekofisk oil field, told a news conference about the misplacement last week of the device designed to stop such blowouts.

"It's a good possibility that the well could have been sealed if the blowout preventer had not been installed in an inverted position sometime last week," he said.

By noon, Norwegian officials estimated that 6½ million gallons of oil had gushed from the well since it blew out Friday night.

Archambeault, of Dayton, Ohio, had told reporters Wednesday night that if the machinery used today failed, the crew might try to winch a four-ton capping device over the gusher.

"It's difficult, but it's been done before," he said.

The crew, stationed on a nearby barge, boarded the runaway Bravo oil rig at dawn in good weather to begin what was hoped would be the final phase of the capping operation. The rig is situated 170 miles southwest of Norway.

The blind rams were forced over the spurting wellhead by hydraulic pressure. A company spokesman said after the first attempt that the blind rams had closed for about one minute, then reopened under the force of the gas that is pushing the oil up from 10,000 feet below.

The well has been gushing 36,000 gallons of oil and shale an hour into the North Sea since it blew out late Friday night during a maintenance operation. The spill has created a slick about 31 miles long and 12½ miles wide in the Ekofisk oil field, but no coastline was threatened yet, and Norwegian fishery experts said they did not expect any "mass killing of fish."

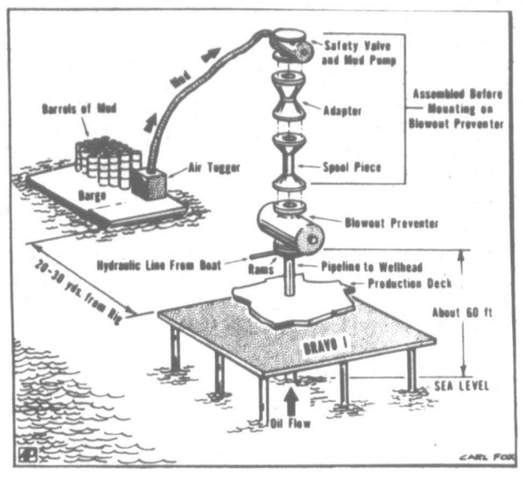
Norwegian Prime Minister Odvar Nordli said the blowout would not halt oil operations off the Norwegian coast.

But he added: "The accident has showed that all aspects of the North Sea activities must be studied, as soon as possible and thoroughly."

This was an indication that the government would not be hurried into a decision on test drilling off northern Norway, an area that so far is closed to the oil companies.

The well-capping crew led by "Boots" Hansen and Richard Hatteberg worked on the rig from daybreak until early afternoon Wednesday, then suspended operations when wrestling with a balky gasket tired them out.

Hansen and Hatteberg are members of Red Adair's oil-well trouble-shooting outfit in Houston.



IF ALL GOES WELL — This is how engineers plan to cap a blown out well which has spilled more than 3 million gallons of oil into the North Sea. They hope rams operated by hydraulic pressure will close off the well so that a four-ton assembly consisting of spool piece, adapter and safety valve and mud pump can be placed on the well. With this in place mud will be pumped down the well until the weight of mud in the shaft stops the oil flow. Diagram by AP staff artist Carl Fox.

New arms system labeled 'must'

New weapon systems are a must if the U.S. is going to keep pace in the "game of one-upsmanship" with the Soviets, the Big Spring Rotary Club was told Tuesday.

Capt. Chip Ambrose, one of two Soviet Awareness Officers at Webb Air Force, said that the U.S. may be even now with the Russians in the arms race, but the nation is falling behind rapidly.

The captain said that the Air Force must have new weapon systems which are now under development, such as the B1 bomber, if it is to keep up.

He noted that one bill now in Congress would kill several major weapon systems.

Capt. Ron Winters, also a Soviet Awareness project officer at Webb, told Rotarians that the idea of keeping military personnel and civilians informed about the Russian build-up originated at Air Force Headquarters. He noted that one of the first rules of the military was to "know your enemy."

The captains showed a film of Air Force accomplishments during 1976. They were introduced by Ralph Brooks, president of the Air Force Assn. and a former Thunderbird pilot. Brooks said that the Russians are spending three times as much on defense as the U.S. and are not slacking off.

Prison guard arrested

McALESTEr, Okla. (AP) — A guard at the state penitentiary here was arrested Wednesday night while allegedly smuggling marijuana and a gun into the prison, authorities said.

He was identified as Raymond T. Nesmith, 36, of Savannah, Okla.

Nesmith was taken to the Pittsburg County jail in lieu of $5,000 bond. No date for an arraignment was set immediately.

Richard Crisp, warden of the penitentiary, said the guard appeared to be part of a larger smuggling ring at the prison.

New wine area

WASHINGTON (AP) — California's Salinas Valley has developed into an important fine wine district in the last ten years, National Geographic says. Better known for its artichokes and onions, the valley now has 37,000 acres planted with wine-producing grapes.

The cool breeze that blows off Monterey Bay helps make the valley good wine country, as does its sandy, granitic soil, which gives wine a stronger flavor.

More soil scientists needed here

In 1967 a feasibility study was done on the Department of Agriculture Experiment Station in Big Spring.

The study came as a result of questions about whether the station should be phased out, but instead, it recommended that the efforts of the station be intensified.

THE STUDY found there are 40 million acres of sandy soils in the Southern Plains, and this soil was among the most productive in the Great Plains region.

But this soil is also subject to drought, wind erosion and blowing which makes it both valuable and delicate.

The Big Spring experiment station, located north of town on Interstate 20, is the only one doing research on this type of soil and these kinds of conditions.

The study concluded that the program of research at the station should be increased from one scientist to eight and that the budget be expanded from $66,000 a year to $450,000.

Nothing happened.

The program has rocked on with little or no gain, despite the very pressing need for answers to sandy dryland farming conditions.

Last year, one additional scientist was finally budgeted, and this person will be joining the staff at the experiment station this summer.

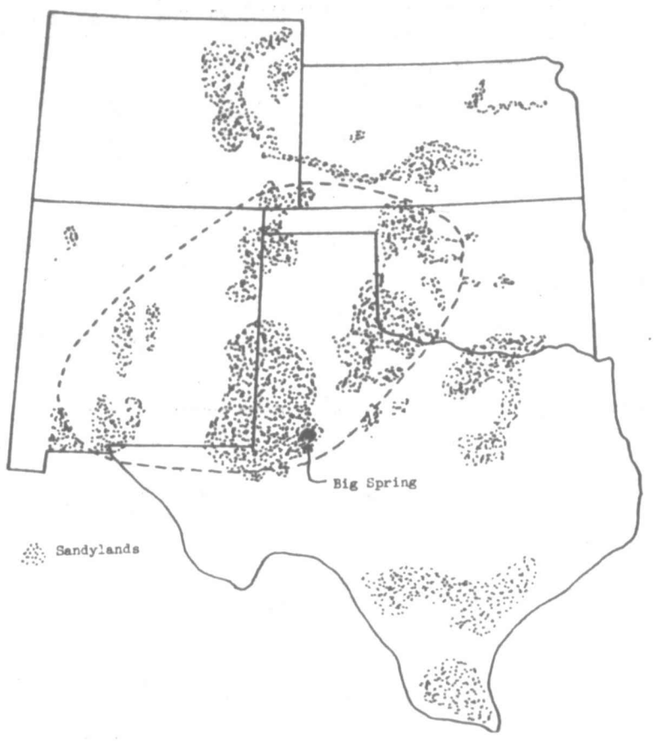
But that is nowhere near enough. As the study pointed out, at least nine or 10 scientists are needed here with 25 or 30 support personnel. Congress should expand the station's budget from a minor $155,000 to more than $1 million annually if these kinds of questions are to be answered:

—Can surface treatments be developed to retard the 50 per cent evaporation loss of soil moisture?

—Can desert-type plants that use little moisture become effective barriers to soil blowing and erosion without loss of crop yield?

—How does livestock management influence the efficiency of water use?

—Can fertilizer be used as a tool in efficiently using water in limited rainfall areas?



40 MILLION ACRES — The above map shows the location of the Big Spring Field Station in relation to the 40 million acres of sandylands in the Southern Plains states. The dotted areas are sandylands. To illustrate the magnitude of the wind erosion problem, the area inside the dashed line oval was covered by a single dust storm in 1972.

THE EXPANSION of such research has fallen by the wayside during the past decade when rainfall has consistently been heavier and more timely than in any other previous decade since weather records have been kept.

Common sense tells us that this will not always be true. We must have an intensified effort into this research before another period of dry years comes around. If we do not, the U.S. may lose a sizeable portion of its bountiful sandy soil production.

With balance of payment problems and food and fiber shortages, the U.S. could not easily afford to withstand this loss.

The study estimated that for every $1 of research spent in Big Spring a return of $400 in benefit to the nation could be expected.

The Big Spring Experiment Station was established in 1915 when a group of citizens, realizing the value of such research, donated the land to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The station now has some of the best wind research facilities anywhere with three wind tunnels and 200 acres of soil.

The program deserves its long-called-for expansion which would benefit the entire Southern Plains and the nation.

The warning in the ad for the movie "It's Alive" reads, "The one film you should not see alone."

It should read, "The one film that you should not see at all."

IT IS WRONG to completely pan a movie when it strives to offer legitimate entertainment or enlightenment, but for one reason or other fails to make the grade. It is also a good idea, when criticizing a film, to allow for differences in taste.

But neither of these considerations can be given to "It's Alive." The flick is pure hype, designed to take your money and run before you are the wiser.

You may have noticed that the movie hit theaters in Big Spring, Midland-Odessa and the surrounding area at the same time. Its premiere was accmpanied by a provocative and expensive television campaign that promised another "Rosemary's Baby" or "the Exorcist."

I have no doubts that the budget for the ad campaign was far above that used to produce the movie itself. The idea behind such a scheme is to lure as many suckers into the theater as possible before word of mouth spreads its mediocrity.

In case you haven't heard, the plot involves a couple that inexplicably produces a "child" that has claws instead of hands, a set of fangs, and the nasty habit of chewing on peoples' necks.

THE LITTLE monster moves with lightning speed, and dispatches doctors, nurses, policemen and a milkman before it is cornered. The final scenes are filmed, appropriately enough, in a sewer.

The color is muddy, the sets are tacky, the acting is atrocious and the plot motivations are nonsensical. You are never even given a closeup glimpse of the monster.

In short, this flick is a ripoff. If you haven't seen it, don't. If you have seen it, you have my condolences.

This is not meant as an attack on a particular theater. At different times all the theaters in town have had excellent movies to choose from.

The movies are a great form of entertainment and the local theaters need the help of the viewing public in order to bring us better fare.

But the only way to bring good films to Big Spring is through public demand. When a film is genuinely good, take the time to see it. When the film is bad, stay away in droves.

'People's president'

Jack Anderson, Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Carter is getting annoyed over the huge entourage of subordinates, bodyguards and automobiles that accompany him everywhere he goes. He wants to be perceived as a "people's president" and, therefore, dislikes the ostentatious display of rank.

In a move to cut back on the presidential retinue, Carter summoned Secret Service chief Stuart Knight and ordered him to review the protective measures that are taken for the president. Carter wanted any service that could be eliminated without compromising security to be cut out.

For example, the Secret Service was asked to stop flying the presidential limousine all over the country. The president indicated that he would be quite content to use whatever autombiles are available in the Secret Service's various field offices.

AFTER STUDYING his requests, the Secret Service informed Carter they could reduce their visibility at the White House, but they could do little to alter their protective procedures when the president is traveling. The Secret Service agreed to curtail the use of the car plane as much as possible.

Carter has also instructed his cabinet members to cut back on the perquisites of their offices. He has suggested specifically that they do less riding around in their limousines and that they fly on commercial airlines whenever possible.

Among the agencies that have been ordered to cut back on the use of official automobiles, incidentally, is the Secret Service itself. All the top officials drive leased Plymouths, Dodges and Fords. They justify this large fleet on the grounds that they must be reachable at all time in case of emergency.

DEFECTIVE AUTOMOBILES — Buried in the confidential files of the Transportation Department is evidence that more than one-third of the automobiles on the road have dangerously defective brakes. Yet a shocking percentage of automobile repairs, including the work done on brakes, is unnecessary.

The Federal Trade Commission, alarmed over shoddy and unnecessary auto repairs, is trying to pry the confidential information out of the Transportation Department. But the commission has been stymied so far, according to informed sources, by Republican transportation officials who have tried to block the investigation. In fact, they have warned staff members bluntly not to talk to anyone from the Federal Trade Commission.

We have obtained the confidential findings, nevertheless, of five federal diagnostic centers, which have inspected 100,000 cars before and after they were repaired by private mechanics. Nearly 35 per cent of the cars examined had defective brakes. "In states without inspection, such as Alabama," the confidential study declares, "the total failure rate can be as high as 95 per cent, while the brake failure rate was 50 per cent."

Explained one official: "The inspection in many states is just Mickey Mouse. That's why so many unsafe brakes go undetected."

THE CENTERS also found that nearly one-third of the repairs at service stations, car dealers, chain stores and garages were either incompetent or unnecessary. Thus, consumers waste 32 cents of every dollar they spend to fix their cars. This adds up to a staggering $10 billion a year across the nation.

In the Alabama center, for example, an incredible 61 per cent of the repairs on brake discs were unneeded. The figures were only slightly lower for other repairs, such as 43 per cent of the brake linings and 42 per cent of the shock absorbers.

The diagnostic centers were created by Congress in 1972, but the Nixon Administration opposed federal intervention in the auto repair business. Therefore the Republican Administrators, highways chief John Snow and assistant secretary William Heffelfinger, tried to block the program, say inside sources.

FIRST THEY delayed the contracts for long periods. Then they clamped a lid on the kind of repair information that could be sought. "They prevented us from getting a lot of important data," complained one participant.

But the new highway chief, Joan Claybrook, told us she will open her files to the FTC, which wants to use them to crack down on auto repair ripoffs.

Footnote: Heffelfinger told our associate Howie Kurtz that he wasn't responsible for the program but "was only pushing administrative paperwork." Snow denied trying to undermine the program but added: "I stand behind whatever limitations were placed on the study."

WHO'S NEWS — The Justice Department's antitrust heir-apparent is John Shenefield, who once represented the monopolists he must now prosecute. But his foot will be kept to the fire by Michael Pertschuk, the new Federal Trade Commission chairman, who can be counted on to keep it hot for the big corporations. He is already giving Big Oil the evil eye.

Political issue 1

Evans, Novak

LOS ANGELES — Chances are better than even that sometime this year the Atlantic-Richfield Co. (Arco) will quit trying to wade through California's red tape and cancel plans for a petrochemical plant, thereby intensifying conflict between jobs and the environment.

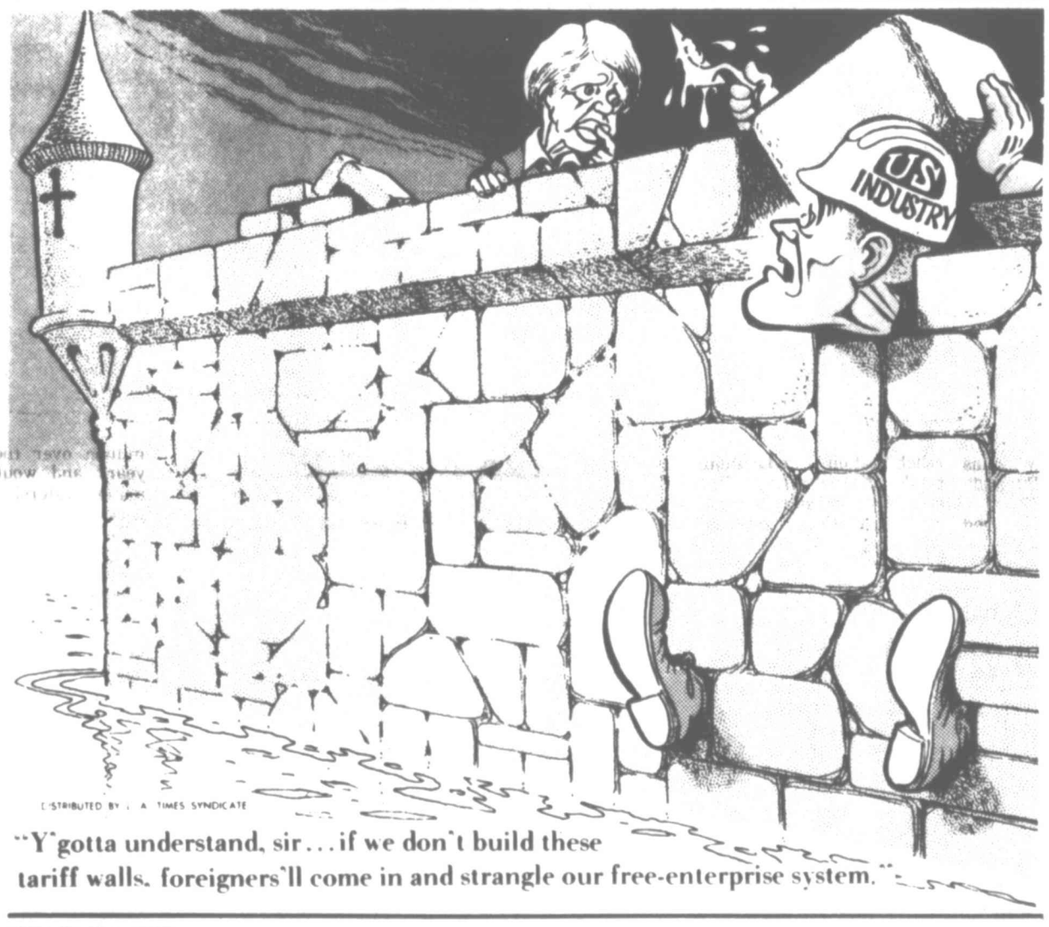
That would cost 2,000 permanent jobs, plus another thousand construction workers, in a state where there is higher-than-average unemployment. But the impact of an Arco withdrawal would extend well beyond that. It would undermine the credibility of the turn by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. away from no-growth environmentalism and toward industrial growth. Consequently, many more than 2,000 jobs are at stake.

IN FACT, the Arco case demonstrates that jobs vs. environment transcends Jerry Brown. The chemical plant will probably be lost because of laws, regulations and an entrenched bureaucracy that have given the environment top priority no matter what elected officials or voters now say. The horrified reaction by workers who prefer a little pollution to unemployment is becoming the nation's political issue No. 1.

The issue crystalized for California in January when Dow Chxmical Co. sacrificed $10 million already spent by abandoning plans for a petrochemical plant in Solano County on the Sacramento River north of San Francisco. The reason: environmental red tape. The cost: 1,000 permanent jobs (plus another 1,000 construction workers). The shock waves abruptly altered Brown's previous stand that luring business into California was none of his business.

To politicians (including some close allies of the governor), Brown's new concern about the business climate is linked to his 1978 reelection. "This is really Jerry's only political problem, and he means to do something about it early," confided a prominent Democratic businessman. "I don't take it that seriously, and I don't know anybody who does. It's a hype-job."

FAIR OR NOT, a test of the governor's new attitude is the fate of the Arco plant — which like Dow's is to be located in Solano County and like Dow's is menaced by anti-pollution restrictions. Brown clearly wants no reenactment of the Dow pullout; for its part, Arco seriously explores all state suggestions (such as locating in Los Angeles, instead of the San Francisco bay).



"Y'gotta understand, sir... if we don't build these tariff walls, foreigners'll come in and strangle our free-enterprise system."

Sunlight can play tricks with cataracts

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother-in-law, who is 83, has glaucoma. She isn't totally blind because she can see in the morning. She is totally blind in the afternoon and evening.

Is there some medicine she can take or eyedrops she can use so she can see again? — Mrs. J.C.

I suspect your mother-in-law has cataracts along with the glaucoma. The two often go together, especially at her age.

One explanation of the better morning vision is that the pupils of the eyes may be a bit more dilated at that time. They gradually narrow as more sunlight strikes the eyes.

This is why I mention the cataract possibility. The extra dilation of the pupils would allow enough light to get around any cataract (which is a clouding of the eye lens) to improve the sight temporarily.

Drops used for glaucoma constrict the pupils. There are other drops to dilate them, but they are not to be used for glaucoma in which there is a build up of liquid pressure within the eyes.

I trust she has been seen by a doctor. Her problem should be resolved by an ophthalmologist. Many times, removal of cataracts produces a reduction of the glaucoma pressure. Then with appropriate spectacles vision is restored to some degree. My booklet on cataracts and glaucoma discusses both conditions in more depth. For a copy send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband's problem has been diagnosed as hiatal hernia. Sometimes an attack lasts about 20 minutes. He's in a lot of pain until he coughs up or vomits. These attacks sometime occur at the beginning of a meal when he has had only a second spoonful of food.

I would like to know if there is anything I can do or give him during the attacks. — Mrs. J.R.

One of the possible complications of hiatal hernia (esophagus hernia) is a stricture (closing off) of the gullet because of the build-up of fibrous tissue at the site of the defect.

When is the last time this has been looked at by his doctor? While most hiatal hernias can be controlled conservatively, some progress to the point where surgical repair is needed. Your husband's may be one of those cases. I suspect he had this problem for some time before it was diagnosed.

X rays will show how much stricture is present.

Meanwhile, any pressure on the area, especially when eating should be avoided. He needs immediate medical attention. No tips I can give on the immediate problem will substitute for that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was told I have what is called sperm-o-seal. My doctor told me an operation is necessary, but that there was no hurry unless the pain and swelling get worse. What causes this, and is an operation the only way out? — L.G.

I suspect you mean a "spermatocele," which is a cyst in the scrotum, specifically in the tubes that carry the sperm. These cysts are usually painless. Removal will probably be your only course of action — sooner or later. The problem is often bilateral (occuring on both sides).

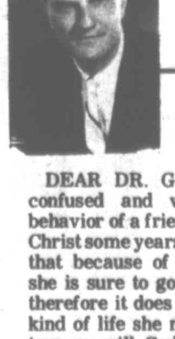
Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does garlic tend to control high blood pressure? I have been taking garlic pills for some time, and they don't seem to help. I will discontinue using them because the odor is offensive to my lady friend. What to d you think? — J.L.

They wont' help your blood pressure on your love life.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a father was using heroin at the time of conception, could that affect the child born? — D.B.

I don't like to use scare material in this column, but your questions deserves an answer because of an apparent increased use of this dangerous substance. The answer I get from authoriative sources is that heroin CAN affect the sex glands (ovaries in females, testis in males). So also, I'm told, can long-term use of "pot." Whether the fetus is affected in any individual case is for time and testing to tell.

To learn of the many factors involved in the treatment of hiatal hernia (which concerns the esophagus), write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Combat It." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.



My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am confused and worried by the behavior of a friend who accepted Christ some years ago. She claims that because of this acceptance she is sure to go to Heaven, and therefore it does not matter what kind of life she now lives. Is this true or will God punish her for living as she is now? — F.F.J.

DEAR F.F.J.: Anyone who claims that they are going to Heaven no matter what they do, may very well NOT be going to Heaven. The Bible tells us that a tree is judged by its fruit.

When God grants salvation it is not only so that people may go to Heaven, but also to keep them from sinning day by day.

Salvation is for the present as well as for eternity. A person who is saved will experience salvation each day of their lives as God enables them to be victorious over sin. We will, of course, fall short from time to time, for no one reaches perfection in this life, but we should be claiming new victories continually in the constant battle against evil.

Jesus told the man He healed at the Pool of Bethesda, "sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee" (John 5:14).

Saigon revisited: Planes rotting at airport

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON, Vietnam (AP) — The old U.S. Embassy stands vacant, guarded by a solitary policeman. Former President Nguyen Van Thieu's palace is a museum and a sightseeing must for the curious. Abandoned American aircraft rot at the airport.

The Continental Hotel, once a favorite gathering spot for Americans, is now the Simultaneous Uprising Hotel

Two years after the Communist victory on April 30, and the flight of Americans, everything — yet nothing — has changed in Saigon.

The new unified government has renamed it Ho Chi Minh City but it still remains what it was during the war — tawdry, dirty, quieter, perhaps, but still a place with something to sell — for a price.

A carton of American cigarettes costs the equivalent of $120 if Vietnamese dong are bought at the official rate of 50 cents each. The same carton costs $24 if dong are bought on the black market, where they can be had for 10 cents each.

Tan Son Nhut Airport was the first change noted by a correspondent who returned to Vietnam after two years with a group of Australian and other foreign tourists. The correspondent had identified himself as an Associated Press correspondent to the Vietnamese authorities in applying to join the group.

The airport once was the busiest in Asia, with U.S. jet fighters, helicopters and transports loading, landing and taking off in what seemed intervals of only seconds.

Now the parking bays are filled with dozens of U.S. helicopters, C7 Caribous, C130 transports and spotter planes, many of them wrecked by Communist rockets during the final days of the war. There are no guards, pilots, airmen or people of any kind in sight.

But workmen are busily finishing the international terminal, started with U.S. aid money several years ago and now almost complete, down to Swiss digital clocks, German pay televises and French television will announce the arrivals and depatures if and when Saigon opens up again to world travel.

At the Continental Palace terrace, known as the Continental Shelf to the Americans and other foreigners who drank there, only coffee and ice cream are now served.

Up To Do street, the chic stores display Pierre Cardin ties, Coty perfume, Du Pont lighters and Rayban sunglasses. But stocks are getting low and there are blank spaces in the windows.

All the French restaurants are closed. The last of the Corsican proprietors left several months ago.

Along the Saigon River, where two years ago people were dying in their scramble to escape before the Communists took over, all is quiet, even serene. Young couples stroll hand in hand along the sidewalk.

Groups of farmers, peasants and schoolchildren and foreign visitors are given guided tours of the gray-colonnaded Independence Palace, Thieu's former headquarters across the street from the U.S. Embassy.

"This is where Thieu used to meet important people, like U.S. Ambassador (Graham) Martin," said the guide ushering us into the Thieu's private office. "This is where Martin and his advisers sat in specially made chairs. This is Thieu's desk. Note that it is raised up on a platform so he could be higher than anyone else."

Visitors are told that Thieu slept with six feet of sandbags on his bedroom roof.

The Ho Chi Minh City Tourism Company also organizes tours to the former U.S. military warden's compound at Le Qui Don and Vo Tanh streets. Now it is the U.S. and Puppet Government War Crimes Museum.

On the surface, life in Saigon seems relaxed.

Three-man squads of soldiers carrying AK47 rifles are seen occasionally. But few buildings are guarded, and most soldiers in the streets are unarmed, apparently on leave. Saigonese say the soldiers are polite and don't cause trouble.

Foreign tourists are allowed to roam the city at will, but Saigonese are cautious when talking to them. They look over their shoulder at the door if they are alone with a foreigner.

The Communists are coming to grips with the economic system in the South and things could get tougher.

"We estimate it will take us three years to eliminate the free market in the south," said a North Vietnamese party worker.

In a bar on Tu Do street, a girl speaking American-accented English complained about the new government and the effect it was having on her bargirl business.

"They'll never send me to the new lands to build monkey house out of bamboo," she said referring to the unsettled or abandoned New Economic Zones in the countryside to which many South Vietnamese are having to move. "No way, honey. I'm gonna get out of here."

Sheriff told to provide gym, improve catwalks at jail

WILL BE GYM? — Sheriff A.N. Standard stands in what he envisions as a recreation area for jail inmates. He plans to request a kind of mini-gym from the county in order to comply with new state regulations for exercise. The new sunshine regulation will be satisfied by trips outside the jail, with the possible alternative of what the sheriff calls "a secured skylight."

By BOB BURTON

Sheriff A.N. Standard returned this week from the Sixth Annual Conference for Sheriffs of Texas with the uncomfortable knowledge that the Howard County jail has been found guilty of 30 infractions of state rules for detention areas.

Structural problems make up 19 of the infractions. They range from the width of catwalks to floor space per prisoner to the lack of exercise facilities.

"Under the new laws," Standard explained, "I am required to provide sunlight and exercise for prisoners quartered here. On a short-term basis, I will ask the Commssioner's Court to invest in some sort of mini-gym, and we will have to take prisoners out to a secured area to receive their sunlight."

The written requirements are more complex, calling on Standard to assemble a complete set of rules for every conceivable aspect of running the jail. Under the written requirements are divisions which will require complete step-by-step explanation.

The rules must cover such areas as sanitation, food service, recreation, rehabilitation, education, civil disturbance, fire security, disaster, mail, medical services, visitation, discipline plans, and others.

"I think they want them so they can point to one and say, 'Here, you broke rule so-and-so.' I think all the sheriffs are concerned. We want to meet professional requirements and we will meet these requirements, but implementation will be hard."

He continued to say that the purpose behind the legislation to rehabilitate a percentage of criminals on the local level, and try to relieve the burden on the state and federal systems.

One example of how the extension of requirements could hurt the Sheriff's Department is in education. If the jail takes in an illiterate, Standard is required to provide a volunteer tutor, a state-run program called general Education Development which compares to a high school diploma, and eventually correspondence courses. These must be made available to any prision despite the fact the average stay is 10-15 days. Standard says it will either require two new employes, or the men on duty now will have to spend less time at their present jobs and more time in the jail. Standard says he will also have to provide a studyroom.

According to the sheriff, to bring the jail into compliance with the new, tougher state standards could require a new facility and cost as much as $100,000.

"But," he said, "if it is any comfort, I don't know another jail in the state that passed either."

The new state regulations are the result of recent federal court actions. "Since 1957," Standard explains, "we have been using updated jail standards, but only since the 1972 Sara Hughes decision have we been required to come into compliance with new federal standards."

The Hughes decision, mandated in federal court, prisoner's rights and jail conditions. It resulted this year in state legislation requiring jails to comply with recently established federal standards.

"It means we'll have to run, in microscopic form, the same procedure used at the Texas Department of Corrections (TDC)," said Standard.

The state jail system is governed by the Jail Commission which performs the inspections and sets the standards for local jails to follow. "We've always passed federal regulations," Standard continued, "three years ago we were in the upper sixth of all jails in the state."

But this year's commission produced a set of 600 rules for jailers to follow. The rules ranged from written codes of procedure to structural requirements to certification procedure.

The Howard County jail will be given until June 20 to comply with written problems. They will have longer periods to comply with structural problems. They will be required to send every deputy through a 40-hour course to be recertified as correctional jail officers. If any personnel have not completed the course within one year, the state says they can no longer be employed by the sheriff's department.

"It will mean that a lot of sheriffs will either have to get into the jail administration business or out of it," Standard summed up. What that will cost the taxpayer remains to be seen.

CATWALKS — Jailer M.D. Cross stands in one of the catwalks ruled too narrow during the jail inspection. Standard says that they may not be required to widen the catwalks because of "tolerances" to the required four feet. The catwalks measure 32 to 39 inches now.

House members chop money bill

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senators planned a final vote today on a controversial bill providing state textbooks to parochial schools. The House continued trimming the $15.7 two-year general appropriation bill.

Free textbooks for parochial and other private school pupils would cost the state from $5.4 million to $7.2 million over the next two years and would mark a major watershed in state policy.

Senators tentatively approved the bill, by Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, on Wednesday.

The House worked until 11 p.m. Wednesday on proposals by the chairman of the House Appropriations committee to trim the bill his committee had approved.

Representatives cut $57 million from the bill in one "omnibus amendment" whose major item was a $43 million slash of proposed increases in Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

They planned a short work session today since buses were scheduled to leave early in the afternoon to take them to the Lower Rio Grande Valley for a weekend as guests of that area's chamber of commerce.

Welfare cuts provoked emotional debate and a reminder that the budget bill had to reduced drastically in order to leave enough money for a teacher pay raise and larger benefits for retired teachers.

"This is the first real opportunity we've had to provide money for a teacher pay raise and for retired teachers," said Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, of the amendment chopping the welfare increase.

The amendment reduced the AFDC hike from the $8.68 per month per recipient recommended by the appropriations committee to $3 — bringing the monthly grant to $35.

Presnal is chairman of the committee, but did not favor the $8.68 increase.

"It is a national scandal how we take care of our cattle, how we take care of our wheat fields, how we take care of our hogs and how we neglect our children," said black Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont.

Burleson wins fight

WASHINGTON — In an uphill battle to restore $4.1 billion for national defense, cut from the President's budget proposal, Cong. Omar Burleson was successful Wednesday in the passage of his amendment to the first concurrent budget resolution considered by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The House approved the Burleson amendment by a vote of 225-184 in an all-night session but later recommitted the resolution to the Budget Committee before adjourning at 1:03 a.m., today.

In his plea to restore National Defense funds, Burleson pointed out that the figure was still $2.8 billion below the figure recommended by President Ford as a minimum consistent with national security requirements.

Burleson stated that the defense task force of the budget committee, of which he is a member, held only three formal meetings and was not asked to make any recommendations on the level of the defense budget, either to the chairman (Cong. Giaimo, Conn.) or to the full budget committee.

"The sum for national defense in this resolution was simply plucked arbitrarily out of thin air and has neither logic nor recognition of the hard facts for our future safety in this volatile world," Burleson said.

Burleson also mentioned that recommendations from other committees in Congress was much higher than even President Carter's recommendations. Burleson apparently was referring to the Armed Services and Appropriations committees.

President Carter became involved in the effort by calling the House leadership to urge support of his total national defense recommendation of $120.1 billion for fiscal year 1978.

Man arrested after siege

JOURDANTON, Tex. (AP) — Murder charges are expected to be filed today against an elderly man who held police at bay for more than three hours with a rifle following a shooting in this South Texas town.

After officers arrested the man, he was taken to a hospital for treatment of what officers described as a flesh wound.

Atascosa County Sheriff Tommy Williams said man who barricaded himself inside his home had been involved earlier Wednesday with a man who was found shot to death about 5:30 p.m.

Williams identified the dead man as Jesus Garcia, 62, who had been farming some land near the gunman's house.

The sheriff said when he and some of his men arrived at the site where Garcia's body was found, they saw the man, about 80, sitting with a rifle across his lap in a room in his house.

"The man yelled out that we'd have to come in and get him," Williams said.

Department of Public Safety officers and police from several surrounding departments aided Atascosa County officers in the siege.

"He fired at us several times, but we talked and talked to try to get him to come out," Williams said. "We used tear gas and did everything we could do to keep from killing him."

"We finally shot out the windows in the house and shined a spotlight in to find him," Williams said. "He got a flesh wound and we were able to take him about 9 p.m."

Beta omicron chapter meets at Barcelona Monday

The 530th meeting of Texas Beta Omicron chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, was Monday at the Barcelona clubhouse.

Mrs. Pam Carroll, president, presided. Hostesses were Mrs. Becky Childers and Mrs. Carroll. Two guests, Mrs. Yvonne Joyce and Mrs. Cecelia McKenzie, attended.

The first program of the evening was on drama and theatre. Mrs. Lauretta Glass read a synopsis of the play, "Here Lies Jeremy Troy," which several members had attended. Mrs. McKenzie, who holds a degree in drama, demonstrated the art of theatrical make-up with the assistance of Mrs. Doris Arcand.

Mrs. Normal Friesen and Mrs. Claudia Cannon presented a second program on economy. They stressed higher prices and more unemployment for the coming year.

The chapter's traditional surprise breakfast was April 16, with Mrs. Toni Shellenberger winning the prize for best-dressed.

Pledges were officially welcomed into Beta Sigma Phi in a city-wide ritual at the Flame Room, April 14.

Beta Sigma Phi will celebrate Founder's Day, the anniversary of its organization, at a banquet on Thursday. Cocktails will be at 6:30 and dinner at 7:00.

The next Beta Omicron meeting will be May 9.

Gardeners are invited

Local gardeners will have the chance to share items from their gardens with the public at the flower show to be sponsored by the Big Spring Garden Club Council Saturday through Sunday at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

The show is slated from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. each day in the Community Center. Admission is 50 cents for adults with children admitted free. Mrs. John B. Balch is general chairman, with Mrs. J.W. Cowan as co-chairman.

Entries will be accepted from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on April 30, and are to be removed from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. May 1.

There will be artistic and horticulture division. The horticulture division includes iris, roses, annuals, perennials, bulbs, cut branches, plants in pots, cacti and succulents.

The public is invited to attend.

Workshop is slated

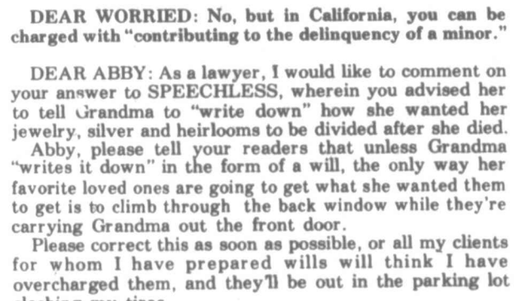
LAMESA — The Lamesa Area Genealogical Society will hold an all-day workshop, Saturday, April 30, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Northridge Methodist Church on the Lubbock Highway. Guest speaker will be Mr. Raymond P. Swofford of Lubbock.

Mrs. Swofford, a retired school teacher, has published many books pertaining to her family background and that of her husband. She is a member of The Nancy Anderson Chapter of the Daughter's of the American Revolution in Lubbock; a charter member of the James Smith Chapter the Daughter's of the Republic of Texas, having served as chapter president and representative of the organization.

She is knowledgeable in the field of genealogy and will be speaking on records available in the State Library in Austin and how to research them. She will also be speaking on census records and how to research them and the genealogical information gleaned from them.

A lunch of sandwiches, etc, will be available at a nominal fee for those who prefer it. The workshop is free and is open to the public. Anyone wishing to avail themselves of this information is invited to attend.

If further information is desired please contact Mrs. Ralph Kinsey, president of the society or Mrs. Boyd Echols in Lamesa.



Can A Woman Be Charged With Rape

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman with a problem I am almost ashamed to admit, but I need an answer, and you're the only one I can ask without embarrassing myself, so here goes:

I've been seeing a 15-year-old boy, and we really dig each other. He's very mature for his age (physically, that is) so when he told me he was 20, I believed him.

I admit, it was dumb of me, but we were at his house and his parents walked in on us and caught us in "the act."

I know that an adult male who is caught having relations with a minor girl can be arrested for statutory rape, but does the same hold true for an adult female and an underage boy?

His parents said they are going to have me arrested. Can they get me for statutory rape?

WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WORRIED: No, but in California, you can be charged with "contributing to the delinquency of a minor."

DEAR ABBY: As a lawyer, I would like to comment on your answer to SPEECHLESS, wherein you advised her to tell Grandma to "write down" how she wanted her jewelry, silver and heirlooms to be divided after she died.

Abby, please tell your readers that unless Grandma "writes it down" in the form of a will, the only way her favorite loved ones are going to get what she wanted them to get is to climb through the back window while they're carrying Grandma out the front door.

Please correct this as soon as possible, or all my clients for whom I have prepared wills will think I have overcharged them, and they'll be out in the parking lot slashing my tires.

LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: You're right. I should have told SPEECHLESS to advise Grandma to engage a lawyer to draw up a proper will because most of those handwritten do-it-yourself wills aren't worth the paper they're written on. In matters having to do with the law, it's wise (and cheaper in the long run) to hire a lawyer and pay him for what he knows.

DEAR ABBY: I have just experienced one of the most uncomfortable afternoons of my life. I had a luncheon for three close friends, one of whom is a widow. The other two women spent the entire afternoon bragging about the gifts their husbands had given them, the trips they had taken and their plans for future trips. The little widow had nothing to contribute to the conversation, so she just sat and listened. I could tell she was hurt.

Don't women realize how often they do this? I am furious because this happened in my home. I haven't as yet had the opportunity to tell those two women how inexcusably rude they were, but I hope you will mention it in your column because they both read it.

DISGUSTED IN DALLAS

DEAR DISGUSTED: I shall. But don't hesitate to let the offending women know your feelings. And should you ever find yousell in the company of such thoughtless and insensitive people, steer the conversation to another subject.

Ms. Dean, Michaelis honored

A pre-nuptial party honored Ms. Mary Beth Dean and Capt. Tom Michaelis on Friday at the Whipkey Room of the Webb Officer's Club.

The couple have a May 28 wedding date set. Helping welcome the guests were the honored couple and her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Peters.

Hosts for the event, held from 7:30-9:00 p.m. were Dr. and Mrs. Henry Butler, Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Ralph Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Spence and Mrs. Louise McAdams.

Spring flowers were placed in wicker baskets on tables covered with red checkered cloths. Green plants were used at vantage points throughout the room.

Guests were registered in the bridal book. Assorted hors d' ouvres in a Mexican style were served.

Over 100 guests attended during the party hours.

Make lists

To save money, make lists. Make lists of "to do" and "to buy" — the cost of forgetfulness is money, reminds Mrs. Linda McCormack, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University system.

Special handling of seams

Many of the fashionable dishcloth and mesh fabrics for summer require special handling of seams to prevent raveling and fraying. In ready-to-wear, look for enclosed seams and narrow double-stitched seams. Home-sewers can use a narrow zigzag seam or two rows of straight stitching about one-eighth inch apart, Margret Ann Vanderpoorten, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

All-day workshop conducted for sew, chatter club members

Members of the Sew and Chatter Club met at the home of Mrs. S.R. Nobles, 405 Washington Blvd. Wednesday for an all-day workshop.

The club members tacked a quilt during the day, and are pictured with it at top. They also took time out for a noon luncheon.

The Sew and Chatter Club members also swapped recipes with the Herald during the day. Several of their favorites appear here.

The club was organized in 1937, according to several members. The purpose of the club is to work on handicrafts dealing with sewing, and to give members the opportunity for fellowship. The group meets on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month in member's homes.

Serving the group as president at present is Nobles. Mrs. Salena Sewell is vice president, with Mrs. Verma McIlvain as treasurer and Mrs. Oma Rosson secretary. Mrs. Rosson also serves as flower chairman, with Mrs. Lee Porter serving as her assistant. Mrs. Marie Daniel is reporter.

Use dry ice in power failure

In case of electrical failure, home freezer owners may use dry ice to maintain the freezer contents. About 50 pounds of dry ice will hold an average freezer load of food at 0 degrees F. for 36 hours. Handle dry ice with thick gloves, because it's extremely low temperature will damage bare skin instantly, cautions Mrs. Sally Coble, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

More natural nutrition.

Mealtime is made with wheat products. Most other dog foods are made with corn. Because wheat has more natural nutrition, Mealtime needs fewer additives. (Compare our ingredient list with other brands). Dogs get the vitamins and minerals they need in a more natural formula.

The right bite size for your dog.

The appetizing red chunks and golden bone-shaped nuggets in Mealtime are available in two sizes: large crunchy bites for larger dogs and small crunchy bites for smaller dogs and puppies. So you and your dog have a choice.

Firm stools.

The unique formula of Mealtime promotes proper food utilization and digestion. This helps dogs produce a firmer stool.

See for yourself.

We say new Mealtime has tail-waggin' taste from meat protein. But don't take our word for it. Get some for your dog, and let his tail tell its own story.

Hill rips Briscoe's energy statement

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill says he is optimistic that Americans now held in Mexican jails can begin returning to the United States by Sept. 1.

Hill made the prediction at a news conference here Wednesday after spending a day conferring with congressional leaders in Washington about prospects for a speedy U.S. Senate ratification of the proposed Prisoner Exchange Treaty.

The Mexican government already has ratified the treaty.

Hill said there appear to be no major hurdles for the treaty to clear, although it currently is being studied by the President's Office of Management and Budget.

The treaty would allow Americans to serve out the remainder of their Mexican prison sentences in jails in this country. Hill acknowledged that many of the prisoners would be eligible for immediate parole under U.S. laws.

He said he is not overly concerned about Americans appealing their Mexican convictions, since the treaty requires that they would have to return to Mexico to make the appeal.

Mexicans in U.S. prisons would also be able to return to their home land and serve out their sentences, also.

The Texas attorney general said he is interested in speeding the exchange because of a situation he is familiar with involving four American women in a Mexican jail.

Hill said more than half of the 604 American prisoners held in Mexico are from Texas or California. He said about 75 Mexican nations are currently held in the Texas State Prison System.

During the news conference, Hill, who is considered an almost certain candidate to oppose Gov. Dolph Briscoe next year for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, unleashed a strong attack on Briscoe's reaction to parts of President Carter's energy plan.

Hill branded as "totally irresponsible" a statement by Briscoe that Texas might cut off its flow of natural gas to other states if portions of the Carter plan are enacted into law.

Hill said he disagrees with parts of Carter's plan, especially a proposal to extend federal price controls to natural gas sold within the producing state—intrastate gas.

"But you don't challenge the President of the United States legally for exercising his right of free speech," Hill said, explaining that objectionable parts of the plan should be defeated in Congress.

Hill has said that if the extension of regulations to intrastate gas prices becomes law he would "leave no stone unturned" in seeking to block it through court action.

In Austin Gov. Briscoe's office said that Briscoe's statement about shutting off Texas gas was taken out of context.

A spokesman said the governor had stated that he would not rule out the move (stopping the flow of Texas gas) and had added, "I think we have to keep all of our options open but I think our attitude has been the correct attitude and this is that we will produce for the rest of the nation."

At the news conference in Houston, Briscoe told newsmen he "would not rule out the option of halting the flow of gas out of Texas. I'm not ruling out any alternative."

Two Dairy Queens here are being remodeled

A business slowdown in Big Spring with the closing of Webb AFB?

Just the opposite, say officials of Dairy Queen of West Texas, Inc.

While some Big Spring area firms may be fearing a business slump, Dairy Queen is moving ahead with remodeling and expansion plans for two of its three drive-in restaurants in the city.

"Our confidence in the economy of Big Spring has never been higher," says Jim Marks of Big Spring, area supervisor for Dairy Queen of West Texas Inc., owner of the Big Spring DQs. "It is our feeling that Big Spring will meet the challenge of the Webb closing and garner new industry and commerce to more than meet any loss of Air Force revenue."

Dairy Queen officials are undertaking two major remodeling and expansion programs — at its restaurants in Coronado Plaza and at East Fourth and Franklin.

The Coronado Plaza location is being improved both inside and out. On the interior, the dining room is being extended 20 feet to allow seating capability of about 100, instead of the 57 previously accommodated. A quarry tile floor is being placed in the extended portion.

New furniture and a new recessed lighting system are also being installed. The interior walls of the restaurant are being wood paneled, and bathrooms are in the process of being remodeled to include new tile and vanity-type fixtures.

One corner of the extended dining room in the Coronado Plaza DQ will be designed as a "Kiddy Corral," complete with a corral fence surrounding booth-type tables that are built with genuine leather saddles for seats rather than chairs at each end.

The kitchen is also being remodeled to better serve the enlarged facilities.

Outside, the Coronado Plaza restaurant will have a mansard added and flower boxes along the front wall on the new portion of the building.

The Fourth and Franklin DQ is being modernized inside with new lighting, wood-paneled walls and drapes, retiled bathrooms with vanity-type fixtures and with a cedar menu board over the fountain area. Outside, a new brown-tone mansard is being added.

Both restaurants are remaining open during remodeling.

Dairy Queen of West Texas Inc., is one of three Dairy Queen corporations headed by I.B. (Barney) Chapman II, of Fort Worth, the nation's largest operator of privately-owned Dairy Queen restaurants. Chapman also holds the Taco Patio franchise for a 127-county area of West Texas and East New Mexico and is president and chief executive officer of Taco Patio of West Texas Inc.

James L. Utley of Midland is executive vice-president and chief operating officer for two of the Chapman Dairy Queen West Texas corporations — Dairy Queen of West Texas Inc. and Dairy Queen of Taylor County Inc. — as well as for Taco Patio of West Texas Inc.

Kelly Taylor is manager of the Coronado Plaza location, and Mary Ann Allen is manager of the Fourth and Franklin restaurant.

Blinky the Lion to knock on doors

Blinky the Lion will be knocking on doors in Big Spring next week.

The Downtown Lions Club annual lightbulb sign, which finances the club's sight conservation and work with the blind, will begin Monday and last through Wednesday.

This year, Lions will carry with them cards which residents may fill out and return to be on record for donating their eyes in event of death. Parts of the eyes are rushed to eye banks and then dispersed to points where they are used to preserve or restore sight in operable cases.

Another service connected with the campaign is the collection of old, unused eyeglasses. These are sent by Lions to glass centers where they are classified, refinished and reprocessed.

In Big Spring, the work centers around providing eyeglasses for individuals, mostly school children, who need eyeglasses but cannot afford to buy them. Annually the club provides 100 or more pair of glasses. Also, it does work with the blind, provide books in Braille, and other services — all financed by the sale of the lightbulbs.

City truckers dirtying town

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — The annual week-long community cleanup was called off three days early because police said city truck drivers were dirtying up the town.

The drivers were hauling away trash and debris free of charge Wednesday as part of the city-sponsored cleanup — until police received complaints that some trash was falling off the trucks.

Alvin Johnson, assistant director of the Riley County Police Department, threatened to cite the drivers for littering.

"I couldn't see how I could allow city trucks to go by but stop private citizens and the contractors," said Johnson.

By Danny Reagan

Just who are those guys anyway?

Word has it that Jack Cowan, the new sports editor at the San Angelo Standard Times, and ex-Big Spring crank call-getter, is very proud of the fact that since he started covering the San Angelo Bobcats baseball team, it haven't lost a game.

That was six games ago, and now the Cats are tied with Big Spring for the second half lead with a record of 4-0. Talked to Jack the other day and he refuted rumors that his new Abraham Lincoln beard was responsible.

Cowan explains San Angelo's successes as the result of a steam-rolling momentum, much like Art Lawler's crayon when Art really gets to knocking out that copy.

The Bobcats have won a number of close games recently, and Cowan believes that if they keep coming up with the clutch plays, then his diamond men may win it all.

However, when I mentioned a small wager on the outcome of the Big Spring-San Angelo tilt May 7 in Angelo, he said he would have to think it over. Not wishing to smear ourselves with the taint of money, I suggested we bet our beards.

Evidently, he didn't feel that lucky.

Wednesday afternoon, the Steers held a short work-out at Blankenship Field. As the future Steer gridders went through their paces on the field, the diamond men did stretching exercises and ran 880-yard relay races against each other on the track.

"We just don't want to tire them out mentally," said assistant coach Rex Scofield, as fleet-footed Clarence Palmer blazed past him in a cloud of dust.

"They're closer now than they ever have been as a team," Scofield continued, "and we've warned them not to get complacent about Cooper just because they (Cooper) aren't doing very well this half."

The Steers will see Cooper at home this Saturday, and in a way that's bad. The locals, for some reason, don't seem to play that well at home. They've won nine out of 11 district contests, and the two losses have come at home. They've also managed a few one-point wins here.

Coach Tom Collins, however, feels that a let-down won't be the main problem.

"We'll play well against Cooper," he said, "and there's no way we won't be up for them. As a matter of fact, I would just as soon see our team stay in a business-like frame of mind, but there's just no way they won't be up. It's no secret that there's no love lost between Cooper and our team, more so than any other squad."

Collins again emphasized that he and his coaches have guarded against a staleness that comes with too much preparation, a condition for which Collins blames the San Angelo loss.

"The guys have done a good job of getting ready to play," he said, "and if we can just get a couple of breaks with the bats, we should be okay. Against Lee we hit five good shots without the smell of a hit. All we got was five outs."

Collins will go with Frankie Rubio, the leading pitcher in District 5-4A, against the Cougars Saturday, and will save Mike Harris and Charlie Vernon for the Odessa game the following Tuesday.

The Cooper and Odessa contests will be the last home games of the season for the local diamond men, and Steer Park hasn't even come close to being filled this year. Gametime is 2 p.m. See you there.

ROYAL-RANGER STANDOFF — First base umpire Ken Kaiser, center, stands between Kansas City Royals George Brett, No. 5, Paul Splittorff, No. 34, and the Texas Rangers who surrounded the pitching mound to protect Ranger pitcher Bert Blyleven in the bottom of the ninth inning after Blyleven struck a Royal batter. Both benches emptied onto the field after the incident.

BIG SPRING, TEXAS, THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1977

SECTION B SECTION B

No-hitter eludes Astro pitcher

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants' Darrell Evans, no match for J. R. Richard early in the game, thought the big Houston pitcher had a good chance to throw a no-hitter.

"He's definitely someone capable of throwing a no-hitter. We were just lucky to be close," the Giants' left fielder said Wednesday night.

Richard's no-hit spell ended in the sixth inning with two cheap infield hits, the Giants pushed across a run in the seventh to cut the Astros lead to 2-1 and Evans slugged a two-run, line-drive home run in the eighth to make San Francisco a 3-2 winner.

It was the Giants' first home victory of the year after four losses, and as Willie McCovey said later, "Maybe this is the one that will get us going."

The Astros, who were one inning away from a third straight victory, looked at it as one that got away.

"I'm just blaming myself. I was worried about the guy on first base instead of the batter. There's no way I should have done that," said Richard. "I know how to pitch to Evans, but I gave him one right down the middle. I have no one to blame but myself."

Protecting his players

Bert crowns Royal

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bert Blyleven, who admits he deliberately snapped one of his classy curveballs into Darrell Porter's leg Wednesday night, wasn't worried about hurting anybody.

"I didn't throw at him hard and I didn't throw at his head the way they did," the Texas pitcher said following his seven-hit, 5-0 shutout of the Kansas City Royals.

"I threw at his thigh and I got him right there."

Moments before Blyleven sent the Kansas City catcher limping to first base, Marty Pattin, Royals reliever, had sent Texas outfielder Juan Beniquez diving for cover. Beniquez, whose three-run homer in the third inning had provided Blyleven with all the runs he needed, missed getting hit in the head by inches.

After Porter went to first he and Blyleven exchanged words and started toward each other, triggering a tense scene as both benches emptied onto the infield. Play was resumed without further incident.

"I'd rather have the respect of my teammates than a shutout," said Blyleven.

"I've got to protect my players or lose their respect. They were throwing at us all night. It just so happened that Porter was the one, and he's the catcher and he was calling them.

"I thought this seemed like a good time to be wild."

Royals Manager Whitey Herzog was furious.

"As soon as Beniquez ducked, I looked over and saw (Texas manager Frank) Lucchesi shaking his fist and saying something to Blyleven," Herzog said. "This is the bad thing about the designated hitter rule. Pitchers don't have to worry about retaliation."

"I said to brush him back," Lucchesi said. "I told him, above all, don't wake them up. They've been asleep all night."

Blyleven, who leveled his record at 2-2 with the shutout, his sixth career blanking of the Royals, was calm in his assessment of the incident.

"I think it puts a little excitement into a game, especially if you can do it with a 5-0 lead in the bottom of the ninth. If it had been a 1-0 game I might not have done it. But tonight I think I would have if we had been behind 1-0. You have to get respect for your players. You've got to protect your players."

Denny wins five first

By the Associated Press

John Denny of the St. Louis Cardinals is the first pitcher in the major leagues to win five games this season, but it is no surprise — he has had more than a little help from his friends.

In his five mound appearances, the Cardinals have backed Denny with 52 runs. Wednesday he was the beneficiary of 19 hits and 21 runs as the Cards pounded six Chicago pitchers for a 21-3 triumph over the Cubs.

"I'd like to think the guys have a lot of confidence in me and they'll swing their bats for me," said Denny. "This year I think they're averaging 10 runs a game for me, and that's nice."

The 24-year-old right-hander, who was 11-9 last season but led the National League in earned run average, credits his development as a pitcher to a more mature attitude he has acquired in the past year, when he says he began to understand the meaning of Christianity.

"Over the last year I've had a lot of spiritual experiences," said Denny. "Through the help of teammates like Bob Forsch and Don Kessinger, I've accepted Jesus Christ. He comes first; pitching comes second."

In other National League games Wednesday, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Atlanta Braves 3-1, the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the Philadelphia Phillis 7-3, the Montreal Expos edged the New York Mets 3-2, the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the San Diego Padres 7-6, and the San Francisco Giants trimmed the Houston Astros 3-2.

Hector Cruz and Ted Simmons wielded the big bats for the Cards, driving in four runs apiece. St. Louis scored four runs in the first inning and two in the second, then broke it open with eight runs in the fifth. Simmons and Lou Brock each drove in two runs in the big inning.

Reds 3, Braves 1

Pat Zachry allowed just five hits in dealing the Braves their fifth straight loss as Cincinnati completed a sweep of its threegame series at Atlanta.

Amarillo wins slugger

By the Associated Press

An 11-inning slugfest finally ended with Amarillo besting San Antonio 12-10 in their Texas League game Wednesday night.

On other fronts Midland outlasted El Paso 12-9, Shreveport beat Tulsa 5-1 and Jackson downed Arkansas 9-6.

Steve Smith's single and Kurt Wittmayer's sacrifice fly drove in the winning runs for Amarillo in the second extra inning at San Antonio. Amarillo grabbed a 10-9 lead on a grand slam homer by Ron Leisle in the ninth. San Antonio loaded the bases with two out in the 11th but the rally died as Jeff Leonard grounded out to the mound.

A three-run homer by Bill Chew was the big blow as Midland scored five times in the second inning, and the winners tallied four more on one hit in the sixth as El Paso pitchers issued three walks with the bases full.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some confusion in your mind early in the day, but overall concepts turn to your advantage later. You find it possible to benefit by doing good deeds for others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have new ideas which are good but you have to do some research before you put them in operation. Obtain the data you need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you first improve your appearance before you go out socially and make the right impression on others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Arrange to entertain good friends at your abode. Ask them to bring their friends, who can also become yours.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Exercise much care in motion everywhere today and avoid danger and expense. Sidestep one who is troublesome.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your financial status and do whatever will add to your present abundance. A new project needs careful analysis.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can easily gain a personal goal by seeking the advice of a good friend. Be sensible when dealing with others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Attend to small chores that have been piling up so you will have time for recreation later in the day. Strive for more harmony with mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try not to criticize a loyal friend who may be upset over own problems now. Forget social affair where arguments could erupt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study the tasks ahead of you and figure out the best way to handle them. Relax at home with family tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new set of circumstances present themselves now so be sure to obtain the right advice from an expert. Widen your horizons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your hunches are erroneous today so be sure to use only your mature judgment or you could easily get into trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk over future plans with associates now and come to a fine understanding. Sidestep one who stands in the way of progress.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have to learn to stay away from persons who are not doing right, otherwise the fine promise in this chart will be lost because of wrong associations. There is much ability in this chart and a good education is essential.

How ABC could have avoided mess

It's Ironic. It's poetic justice. The prize fight that blew up the whole mess in the faces of Roone Arledge and Don King, would not have gone on that memorable day if ABC had listened to Al Braverman and Paddy Flood.

There would be no ABC investigation now. There would be no grand jury holding hearings in Baltimore. The United States Boxing Championships, so called, would still be moving along through its semifinal round, with the big bouts coming up on your tube, if only ABC hadn't tried to run the show. If ABC had settled for televising the fights, as all networks should do with sports events, instead of taking over, ABC would still be enjoying its ratings, instead of scraping egg off Roone Arledge's face.

'WE WARNED THEM . . . '

"I warned them," says Al Braverman. "Paddy and me warned them not to put LeDoux and Boudreaux on TV"

Al Braverman and Paddy Flood are, make that were, Don King's advisors. They are boxing people. They are pros. Don King knows how to ballyhoo and promote and come up with somebody's million bucks. Roone Arledge knows how to hire great fight announcers like Howard Cosell. But when it comes to fighters and fight-matchups, you listen to guys like Al Braverman and Paddy Flood. You may wonder about their motives, but you listen. That day in Annapolis, ABC didn't.

"We wanted them to put Gacic and Saenz in the main event," says Al Braverman. "If ABC had half a brain they wouldn't have put Scott LeDoux and Johnny Boudreaux on as the TV fight. The styles are bad, I told them. They'll stink out the joint. But Chet Forte wouldn't listen."

Chet Forte is producer for ABC sports. "He wants to run the whole thing," says Braverman. "I really and truly blame ABC. They tried to get into the boxing business."

That eventful day at Annapolis, Casey Gacic and Leo Saenz, middleweights, fought a war. They had the middies standing and cheering. ABC featured LeDoux-Boudreaux. They didn't get much of a fight. They did get a bum decision, and LeDoux screaming he was robbed, and they got LeDoux kicking off Cosell's wig. LeDoux and his manager began yelling "fix", and people started prying (including the very competitive and very jealous CBS, which is about to get its nose in too deeply, too). ABC dropped the tourney like a hot coal, and all sorts of unsavory things have come to light.

YOUNG IDEAS

By DICK YOUNG

One of the more regrettable shock waves involves Jim Farley, chairman of the N.Y. State Athletic Commission. Jim is honest, and sincere, and naive and gullible. He permitted himself to be sucked into this thing. He agreed to serve on Don King's tourna ment committee. He thought he was performing a worthwhile service for boxing. Instead, he was being used.

Don King appealed to his ego. "I need a man of your stature," he told Jim Farley.

Of course he did. Don King is the first to admit that, with his criminal background, he must surround himself with respectability. "No matter how much I holler about my integrity, as soon as something happens somebody will reach back to my past," he says.

Jim Farley told King he would accept on three conditions: (1) There would be no pay; only expenses. (2) Don King would not dictate policy. (3) Jim Farley would be free to operate under the rules he applies as N.Y. Commissioner.

Agreed. Don King happily told ABC he had Jim Farley. It helped seal the TV deal. Roone Arledge was pleased, although now, if you ask him, he will admit he was surprised Farley accepted.

So was I. I was flabbergasted, and told Farley so. He told me he was serving as Jim Farley, private citizen, on his own time, not as N.Y. State commissioner.

FARLEY WAS WEARING TWO HATS

But how do you separate Commissioner Farley from Citizen Farley? The public hears of Jim Farley as part of the tournament and thinks of Commissioner Farley, with the integrity of the office behind the tourney's every move. Farley's role is to police and, when necessary, investigate boxing events, boxing tournaments, not front for them. When he is in the middle of something, and it blows up, how can he investigate it?

I would hate to see Jim Farley's neck on the block because of this. I hope he survives as commissioner. Because I believe he is good for New York boxing. As Paddy Flood says:

"He's the only commissioner I've ever seen stand up for fighters and help them out," and that's what counts.

Twins find arms, and win game

By the Associated Press

Bill Campbell's treasure map led to Boston, but the Minnesota Twins still turn to their bullpen for some riches of their own.

Things looked bleak for the Twins when Campbell, the American League Fireman of the Year in 1976 with 17 victories and 20 saves, played out his option and signed with the Boston Red Sox, who made him a rich man. But Tom Johnson is doing the same things Campbell did for Minnesota while Campbell is having his problems with his new club.

Although he was scored on Wednesday for the first time in seven appearances this season, Johnson notched his third consecutive triumph, in Minnesota's 5-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners, with Butch Wynegar's two-run single capping a three-run seventh-inning rally.

The Twins have won three straight and nine of their last 11 games and are tied for the lead in the American League West with the surprising Oakland A's, who came from five runs behind and beat the California Angels 7-5.

Elsewhere in the AL, the Milwaukee Brewers downed the Boston Red Sox 4-2, the New York Yankees edged the Baltimore Orioles 4-3, the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Chicago White Sox 10-9, the Texas Rangers blanked the Kansas City Royals 5-0 and the Toronto Blue Jays nipped the Cleveland Indians 6-5 in 12 innings.

A's 7, Angels 5

Home runs by Manny Sanguillen and Earl Williams helped Oakland overcome an early five-run deficit. Trailing 5-4, the A's took the lead in the fifth inning when rookie Mitchell Page singled and Sanguillen hit his first American League home run off Paul Hartzell. Williams provided an insurance run in the seventh with his fourth homer.

Brewers 4, Red Sox 2

Robin Yount singled home the go-ahead run in a two-run eighth inning and Sixto Lezcano belted a two-run double in the fourth as the Brewers boosted their record to 10-5, their most victories ever in April. Yount's single followed a walk and a sacrifice, and he later scored on an error and Dan Thomas' single.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

Reggie Jackson's second sacrifice fly of the game scored Willie Randolph with the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning, giving the Yankees their seventh triumph in the last eight games. Randolph reached base five times on three walks and a pair of doubles and scored three runs.

Tigers 10, White Sox 9

Rookie Steve Kemp broke an 8-8 tie with a two-run single in the sixth inning and the Tigers held on despite five Chicago home runs by Richie Zisk — his seventh, most in the league — Royle Stillman, Eric Soderholm, Chet Lemon and Oscar Gamble. However, Detroit's Jason Thompson hit a grand slam and Milt May also connected for the Tigers.

Lake lodge opens daily

Beginning this Friday, the Lake Thomas Lodge at Lake Thomas, run by Mr. and Mrs. Tidwell will begin seven-day-a-week operation for the year.

The cafe and lodge had been operation on a weekend basis for approximately two months, but good weather and public demand has prompted the Tidwells to open daily.

Mrs. Tidwell indicated that the lake has been packed in recent weeks and that an abundance of large crappie are being caught, in addition to a number of seven- and eight-pound black bass.

"All the fish are really biting," said Mrs. Tidwell.

Used cars

When buying a used car, be sure to get a written mileage disclosure statement just before completing the sale, Ms. Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

Consumer tip

Mrs. Mary Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

Income drop

Income drops sharply for most people at the time of retirement — as a group, retired people live on less than half of the income of working people, Mrs. Vivian Blair, family life education specialist-aging with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

Why not enjoy a greenhouse

Want a year-round garden where you can grow exotic orchids or fresh fruits and vegetables for your table in the middle of winter? Then you'll enjoy greenhouse gardening.

Greenhouse gardening is simply "gardening under glass." In a greenhouse, you control the level of heat and humidity received by your plants all year. The structure allows light to come in through the roof and sides so that the plants can convert carbon dioxide into sugar and give off oxygen through the process of photosynthesis.

You can build your own greenhouse or buy a prefabricated one from a greenhouse manufacturer.

Some greenhouses have a bolt-together space frame of redwood for easy assembly and performance. The covering of 4-oz. Filon fiberglass and the space frame offer resistance to winds and storms and no special foundation is needed.

Greenhouses should be placed in a location that will offer plants maximum light most of the year. Artificial light can be used to supplement natural light if necessary, but most greenhouse gardening experts recommend natural light.

Ridin' fence

A federal marshal

with Marj Carpenter

Marshal Dillon hasn't been here to my knowledge, but Marshal Jack Graves dropped by the office last week.

For those of you who grew up with Jack Graves, it may come as a shock to learn that he is a federal marshal.

He is marshal up near Leavenworth, Kansas nowadays and consequently does a lot of the arresting and transporting of federal prisoners in and out of that prison.

Jack came back home to attend a family funeral and while here saw many old friends.

He says he's got one eye on retirement which isn't too many years away. He's seriously considering getting a fishing pole and going down near a creek after his retirement and sitting on a stump. If anybody comes near the stump, he may kick them.

Jack has had an interesting career — and never dull. For many years he worked for the Alcoholic Beverage Commission in West Texas, back when they called it liquor control.

From there he went into the business of deputy federal marshal, appointed out of San Antonio and working here, there and yonder.

Back in the early, early 60s when a gentleman named Meredith was the first black to attempt to attend the University of Mississippi, riots broke out.

Federal marshals were sent to Mississippi to help guard Meredith as he went back and forth to class. Jack Graves got hit with a brick and was hospitalized during that duty tour.

When he got back out to West Texas, he arrived in his district just in time for the Billie Sol Estes hassle. This is soon to be known as the first Billie Sol Estes hassle, since we are now apparently in a comparatively mild second one.

One of the things that Graves got to do on that occasion was take Sol from El Paso to Dallas for a special appeal to Judge Sarah Hughes.

On that day, Jack determined that Estes was a split personality. He was alleged to have quoted scripture all the way to Dallas and cursed all the way home. The appeal to get out was denied.

Graves said that one day when he was escorting Billie Sol to one of his many trials, photographers were busy shooting pictures.

Sol quipped, "Well, they say they didn't have many pictures of Billy the Kid in the archives but they're going to have a few of Billie Sol."

Jack is really a great guy. He still likes people in spite of being involved in some of the real hassles of our time.

"There's bad ones and there's good ones," is the philosophy of Jack Graves.

One federal marshal who was raised around Big Spring and who has been around where the action is . . . that's Jack.

It was good to see him again — after so many years — when I was sitting here just back from ridin' fence.

Woman priest ordained

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — The Rev. Sandra Blanche Michels was ordained Monday night as the first woman Episcopal priest in Texas. She received thunderous applause after being ordained in St. Clement's Episcopal Church and was all smiles.

Meanwhile, about 70 parishioners were having a service of "grief and distress" with the Rev. Frank Grubbs in protest over the ordination of a woman to priesthood.

Bishop Richard Trelease Jr. described the protestors as a tiny group.

"But they try to make it look like they're big. The most opposition I have (to women priests) is in El Paso. I've gotten about 100 protest letters. I have about 15,000 parishioners," he said.

Bishop Trelease's diocese includes all of New Mexico and most of West Texas.

"The protestors are claiming I'm dividing the church. But they are dividing the church. The church has said this is right and proper. And I'm a law and order man," he said.

Bishop Trelease said the bishop of the Dallas diocese refused to ordain Sandy and transferred her.

Record sales are reported

Furr's Cafeterias, headquartered in Lubbock, has announced record sales of $16.2 million for the first quarter of 1977. "This was a 9 per cent increase over the same period in 1976", Don Furr, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said.

Earnings for the 67 unit cafeteria chain slowed to $375,000 or $.17 per share for the first quarter of 1977 versus $750,000 or $.33 per share for the first quarter of 1976. "Extremely poor weather conditions and sharply higher food and labor costs were the major contributors to this poorer earnings performance Furr said.

Hair beauty seminar date

Young men and women who think they may be interested in a career in hair dressing and beauty are invited to a special "open house" seminar to be held Monday evening at 7:00 p.m. at the Academy of Hair Design.

No charge will be made for the special session. Speakers will be Nabar Martinez of CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act), Charles Burks of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission (Student aid program, Buster Terrill, speaker for Federal Basic Educational Opportunity Grants).

Highlight of the evening, however, will be talks by three successful Big Spring Beauty Salon owners, Gary Don Cary, Diane Clinton, Eloise Faulkenberry, who will outline requirements for successful Hair Dressers.

The Academy of Hair Design is located in the Town & Country Center on Hwy. 87 South.

Six Britishers to view sights in Big Spring area

Six British subjects will be special guests in Big Spring next week as part of the Rotary Foundation Group Study Exchange.

The educational program is designed to provide to outstanding young business and professional men opportunities for studying another country, its people and institutions through participation in an organized program of study and discussion in the country concerned.

The program also attempts to further international understanding by allowing men of good will to meet, talk and live with each other in a spirit of fellowship so that they may get to know each other's problems and aspirations.

The six men who will arrive in Dallas Tuesday morning will be picked up there by a Big Spring delegation and flown to Big Spring.

They include, Ronald Preston, a past president of the Rotary Club Edgware and Stanmore, who will visit in the home of Jerry Worthy here. Ian Clark, who has worked as a member of the Ford of Europe Finance Audit team in Scandinavia and Italy and as an investigation accountant with the P&O Co., will visit in the home of Ray Don Williams.

Simon Browne, a member of the Institute of Wood Science and a director of a company wholesaling to the Do It Yourself Furniture and Timber Trades, will visit in the home of Ralph McLaughlin.

Dick Harper, employed by the Bank of England where he has so far spent two years working in the Economics Department, will visit Charles Beil.

Gray Hetherington, solicitor in private practice with a law firm in the west end of London, will visit Bob Miller. Geoff Smith, a health service administrator with the North London Hospital Management Committee, will visit in the home of Jimmy Anderson.

Upon arrival, the group will don overalls and tour Walls Industries, Cosden Oil and Chemical and Highwood Products', meeting their hosts at Rip Griffin's at 5 p.m. The group will then attend the Rotary Night event at 6:30 p.m.

The following day, they will be picked up by a Lamesa group and will have breakfast on board a motor home enroute to Lamesa. They will have lunch there and return to Big Spring, going that evening to the Connie Edwards Ranch for a tour of the ranch and dinner.

On Thursday, the group will tour the Colorado River Municipal Water District Office and then go to Snyder for a tour there. The host family will serve them supper that night and also breakfast on Friday, meeting at 8:30 a.m. Friday at the Ramada where they will be picked up by the Andrews Club.

CHERLYN IS ALIVE — Cherlyn Fellows, 9, hugs her mother, Marva Fellows. Around Seattle's Children's Orthopedic Hospital, they call her the miracle girl. She was stricken at 6 with an extremely rare type of cancer and doctors don't know why she has survived.

Rotton deal, says Manges

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Branding the proceedings as a "rotten and filthy deal," secretive South Texan Clinton Manges chose to do most of his talking outside the grand jury room.

The banker-rancher-oilman from Freer and three officers of the Manges-owned Groos National Bank in San Antonio were called before a federal grand jury Tuesday.

"I took the 5th (Amendment)... It's obvious that it's politically motivated," Manges told The Associated Press in a Wednesday telephone interview.

"They know the indictment could destroy me and hurt the bank," he continued referring to the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio. "They are trying to make a name for themselves before going out of office."

Manges also accused the U.S. Attorney's office of leaking stories to the news media concerning the grand jury's investigation of the Groos Bank.

"Investigating $4 million in misapplication of funds...that's a bunch of ..." he grumbled. "Somebody in the attorney general's office gave that to them (reporters)...You talk about hurting the bank!"

The Groos board of directors issued a statement late Wednesday afternoon which said:

"The U.S. Attorney has selected and presented to the grand jury certain loans to customers made by the Groos National Bank and has contended these loans were made in violation of federal banking laws. Let me assure you this was not the case.

"All the loans in question were made in good faith during the normal course of business and are properly collateralized. These loans are good loans and will be paid in full.

"The bank is in a safe, sound condition. The offiers of the bank are innocent of any wrongdoing and have the full confidence of the board of directors."

The statement was signed by Morris Ashby, a member of the board and a long-time Manges associate. Ashby said the statement was not signed by the board chairman, Bud Haun, because "he is also a bank officer."

Mr. Clark has been after me for three or four years," said Manges, referring to the U.S. attorney in San Antonio. "He's been working like a beaver. Now that he's going out of office, he's taking his cuts."

Clark announced earlier his resignation is effective as soon as a replacement is confirmed by the Senate.

Manges, whose bank in Rio Grande City was closed in November of last year after federal examiners classified millions of dollars of loans as "insider transactions," said examiners monitor the Groos Bank so closely that "if anything was wrong, we'd have heard about it before now."

Walkers wanted for Volksmarch

More than 2,000 walk groups all across Europe belong to the International Peoples' Sports organization, the IVV, headquartered in West Germany. There is hardly a weekend when a Walk Fest or Volksmarch is not being held somewhere in Europe.

Last year the first U.S. group was chartered by the IVV in Fredericksburg, Texas. More than 260 walkers came from many states and Germany to take part in the Walk Fest in the Texas Hillcountry north of San Antonio. This year's Walk Fest in Fredericksburg will be held the weekend of June 11, 12. Silver medals will go to those completing the 6-mile route and gold medals for the 15-mile route.

The largest pre-registered group with 10 or more; the group traveling the farthest; person and couple, or family coming the farthest; the oldest man and woman; and others will receive special awards upon completion of their walks. Refreshments are provided along the routes as well as entertainment and an old-fashioned dance that Saturday evening at the fabled Luckenbach Hall.

Participants walk at their own pace. Running or racing is not allowed. The sole reason for the walks is to promote exercise and casual enjoyment out in the fresh air, to meet interesting people, and become acquainted with the countrysides away from home.

To take part in the Texas Walk Fest participants are asked to pre-register before May 11 by sending in the registration fee of $4 by check or money order for each participant, made out to: "Walk Fest". After May 11 the late registration fee is $5 per person; the medals awarded later by mail. Send stamped, self-addressed return envelope when requesting lodging confirmations or other inquiry.

Participant's cards are issued after the march and are used at all future walks in the U.S. and Europe as well as to calculate mileage totals for award certificates. The non-profit, all volunteer International Peoples' Sports-USA, headquartered in Fredericksburg, Tex. is eager to charter Walk Fest groups in other areas throughout America and would like to hear from interested individuals or organizations.

Fundamental school meets

Lynn Hise and Helen Gladden have scheduled five more meetings with parents of students interested in the organization of a fundamental elementary school in Big Spring, including one today at 3:45 p.m., in the Bauer School cafeteria.

Hise is assistant superintendent for instruction in the Big Spring school system. Mrs. Gladden is the school district's elementary curriculum coordinator. They have already met with parents of students in Moss, Washington, Kentwood, Lakeview, College Heights, Park Hill and Marcy attendance zones.

Hise and Mrs. Gladden are attempting to as certain community interest in such an educational concept.

Similar sessions will be held in the Aport school at 7 p.m., Monday; in Cedar Crest school at 3:45 p.m., Tuesday, May 3, in the cafeteria; and Wednesday, May 4, in the Boydstun school cafeteria, starting at 3:45 p.m.

In addition, a community meeting on the community school concept will be held Monday, May 9, at 7 p.m., in the Senior High cafeteria for the convenience of those parents who have been unable to attend earlier meetings.

Farm

Irrigated land may suffer

LUBBOCK — Approximately six million acres of irrigated crop land in the Texas High Plains could be left high and dry because of rising prices of energy used in powering irrigation pumps.

Dr. Kenneth P. Young, of the Agricultural Economics faculty at Texas Tech University, said he conducted research to determine impact of rising energy prices on agricultural production in the High Plains.

The study included effect of higher energy prices on competition with other agricultural areas for production of major crops, cropping patterns, decline in irrigated acreage, farm income and land values.

Higher energy prices could have national impact, creating a new focus on the High Plains' importance as an area of production but, at the same time, eventually result in a possible decline in the numbers of people engaged in farming in this area.

The research strongly indicates that higher energy prices are causing a shift to smaller irrigation appliations per acre of crop land and some movement from irrigated crops to dryland.

Smaller irrigation applications and dryland farming reduce crop yield per acre. This could have a two-fold effect: a reduction in supply of certain commodities, especially crops requiring intensive irrigation, and a lessening of farm income.

"The High Plains will be at some economic disadvantage with other production areas which require less irrigation. Farmers on the High Plains will be producing less at higher production costs due to increased costs of irrigation," Young said.

"There may even be a shift in cotton production. The High Plains has had a production cost advantage over a southeastern areas because of lack of insect problems. However, rising natural gas prices may change this."

Lower farm income implies lower land values. Higher natural gas prices may discourage farmers from paying higher prices demanded for irrigated land, again decreasing land value.

"An additional problem," Young said, "Is that some utility firms apparently are not accepting new customers. One report attributes this to the fact that pipelines are already operating at capacity, and the utility firms may lack incentive to invest in more pipelines because of the uncertainty of continued High Plains irrigation."

As a result, some farmers have to turn to electricity or diesel fuel, but on the High Plains electricity is derived from generation powered by natural gas. Higher natural gas prices thus affect the supply of electricity, while diesel prices are also rising, he said.

Young will present some implications of his research at the annual meeting of the Southwest Region of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at Lubbock's Hilton Inn at 8 a.m., Friday (April 8), in meeting room one.

He was assisted in his research, conducted for the Texas Governor's Energy Advisor Council, by High Plains Underground Water Conservation District One.

Cattle slaughter down 9,900 head

AUSTIN — While cattlemen who have been a long-term reducing plan in Texas are beginning to see results, cutbacks in total cattle slaughter in the state are still being offset by fairly large supplies of pork, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown explained recently.

Commercial slaughtering plants in Texas produced 290 million pounds of red meat during February, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Srvice. This is a six per cent increase from a year ago, but five per cent lower than last month.

Cattle slaughter in February totaled 462,100 head, down 9,900 head from a year ago and 32,900 below January. The February calf kill, at 49,500 head, increased 8,000 from February, 1976, but declined 18,500 from January.

On the other hand, hog slaughter numbered 86,400 head,some 6,900 above a year ago. Total hog slaughter for 1977 is up 12 per cent from 1976 to 187,400 head.

Increases in hog slaughter account for the 12 million pound annual increase in total red meat production for the first two months of the year, with Texas output reaching 595 million pounds in Jan.-Feb., 1977.

While the total sheep and lamb kill of 70,100 head was 600 head above January, it also decreased, by 23,400 head, from a year ago. Texas, which ranks third nationally in sheep and lamb slaughter, has seen a steady decline in sheep numbers since 1960.

Nationally, production of red meat totaled almost 3.1 billion pounds in February, six per cent above a year ago. Commercial meat production includes slaughter in federal inspected and other plants, but excludes animals slaughtered on farms.

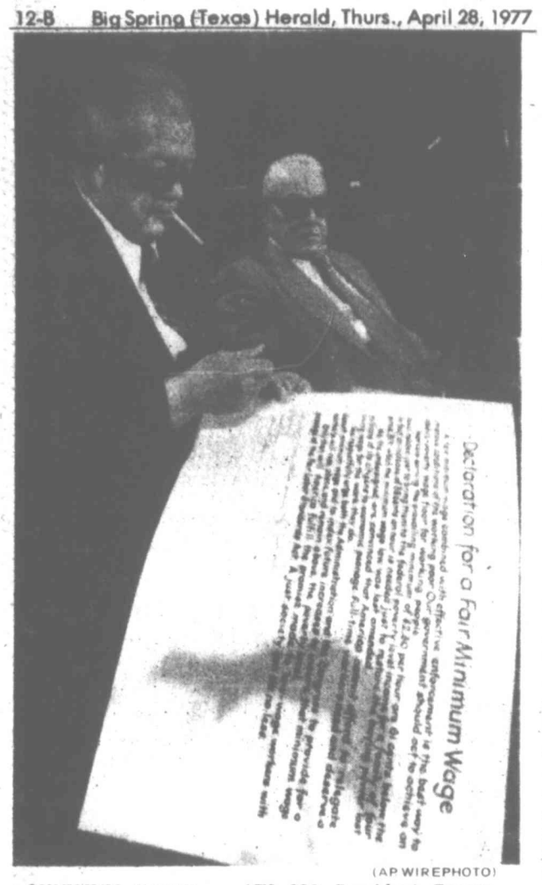
Fuelish idea of 'the other guy'



(AP WIREPHOTO)

By OMAR BURLESON,
M.C. 17th District, Texas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As we have said time and again, no one has yet repealed the law of supply and demand. This principle is involved in the President's energy policy proposal.

The entire thrust of the president's presentation is conservation. Certainly, there is nothing wrong with conservation. All sorts of statistics are available indicating that we use upwards of 50 per cent more fuels for energy than is absolutely needed. On the other hand, this use of energy has given this nation the most viable economy and the highest standard of living to be found in the world.

Energy fuels will be needed for future growth, to maintain our high level of economy, looking to the future development of high technology which furnishes jobs, and improvements for future generations.

The president's proposal on energy does nothing to increase production of energy supplies. The conservation measures mean sacrifices in our economy without anything to replace them.

It makes sense to conserve in an interim period but the controls which go with it are the main reason we are in the shape we are today. If we think we have controls and regimentation on the economy by a bureaucratic government, if all the elements of the energy policy were adopted, there would be inevitably more at the cost of every citizen in this nation. Not only is additional production not encouraged but it is to be more hampered and restricted by the red-tape of environmental controls, which is already limiting the production of coal and nuclear supplies. We have the natural resources in this country if they were allowed to develop without being ham-strung by all the regulations which now exist but which will be just about total if all administration recommendations are adopted to meet the "crisis."

It is something like a man in the middle of the desert with a jug of water. He is told to conserve the water, but not encouraged to search for another supply. If he stands there long enough his bleached bones may be some day found with the jug of water still at his side.

Over the years, there has developed a high prejudice against fuel producers and, particularly, oil and gas. It is "big oil", "big coal", "big utilities", big everything which produces and delivers energy to the American people. Costs have gone up and will go higher if this entire concept is approved. A complicated system of rebates and subsidies of one sort and another is proposed to relieve the costs burden in certain areas. Unfortunately, some other "big businesses" who depend on adequate energy supplies are inclined to stand by, seemingly, for fear of drawing attention to themselves. In consequence, this "every man for himself" attitude is causing this Country's economy to lose ground on most every issue involving government regulations.

Homer's "Odyssey" tells how the hero, Ulysses, and his men were shipwrecked on an island inhabited by a man-eating giant called Cyclops. In the face of this predicament Ulysses was able to persuade the giant to grant him the favor that he be the last of the crew to be eaten.

This ancient Greek story somewhat illustrates the attitude of some people and some businesses towards government intervention in the free market. Each wants to be the last to feel the federal teeth although they are deeply concerned about the preservation of the free enterprise system. Efforts are fragmented to preserve it. This seems to feed the trend here in Washington for more rules, regulations, control and regimentation on "the other guy."

Two charged with murder

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — State police have charged two Hopkinsville men with murder in the shooting death of a 48-year-old Louisville man.

Michael Naylor, 21, and William Ray Morgan, 19, are accused in the slaying of James E. Ransdell, who was found dead of two gunshot wounds in a Hopkinsville motel Wednesday.

In a related development, a man who claimed to be a witness to the shooting has been arrested on charges of cattle theft.

Police said John Wesley Wright, 35, of Billings, Mont., was being held in the Todd County jail on warrants issued in Texas, Clarksville, Tenn.. and Todd County.

According to state trooper R. C. Miller, Wright told him that he saw the two men who were subsequently arrested leaving the scene of the murder.

Miller said Wright's name sounded familiar, so a routine check was run through the National Crime Information Computer (NCIC). The check revealed several outstanding warrants for Wright's arrest, police said.

Columnist recalls top stories

Episodes from a career in journalism, mixed with a bit of philosophy, were recalled by Marj Carpenter for the Lions Club at Howard College community center Wednesday noon.

Ms. Carpenter,, columnist for the Big Spring Herald, recalled interesting stories she had covered over more than a quarter of a century. This, she said, provided such a variety of events and people that it got hold of reporters." The main reason," she continued "is that down deep we think it is important . . ." "A few younger reporters may have an idea they are to make the news rather than report it," she added, "but most newspaper people feel that freedom of the press is basic. If we lose this freedom, we're lost."

She recalled humorous events connected with such episodes as the Billie Sol Estes case at Pecos, where she worked for an opposition paper to his daily publication. Effecting a scoop (on a wager) in his own home, she was frightened when he saw her to the door and said "Just a minute." Presently he returned with an arm load of steak and roast packages, which he handed her with "I love my enemies . . ."

Wayne Henry, lightbulb sale chairman, urged a maximum turnout next Monday when the annual sale will begin. Bert Andries, crippled children's camp chairman said two applications had been approved and one is pending. Nevertheless, the club wants the names of more children who have physical disabilities, or who have diabetes. There will be separate camps for them, and all expenses, including transportation, are provided by the Lions.

Dr. P.W. Malone, dean of the past presidents of the club, received his pin for 45 years of membership, all of it in the club here.

Bert Andrien received a 20-year pin; Harlan Huibregtse 15 years; Jerry Phillips 10 years.

Next week the University of Texas Permian Basin will present a program with Dick L. Chappel as narrator.
