IRAN CLAIMS ATTACK

Iraq Calls Raid Lie

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iraqi forces firing havy artilery attacked an Iranian border post Friday but withdrew a short time later, Iranian reports said. Iranian revolutionary guards killed or wounded a number of infiltrators, Tehran Radio reported.

Iraqi diplomats at their embassy in Kuwait denied the report, with a spokesman calling the Tehran broadcasts "fabricated and untrue." Official Iraqi news media in Baghdad made no mention of Iran's claims, but the spokesman in Kuwait said, "The report is designed to draw attention away from the dilemma in which the policy of the Iranian ruler finds itself."

Iran Claim Backed

An Arab League spokesman at the United Nations in New York backed Iran's claim. League representative Clovis Maksoud told a a news conference he would describe the incident "as unfortunate border skirmishes that have already been terminated."

Tehran Radio implied that the United States masterminded the attack because America had "failed in the face of Iranian resistance" to gain the release of 50 American hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

A later broadcast quoted the Foreign Ministry as saying the Iraqis drove three miles into Iranian territory but then pulled back and peace was restored in the area. A Tehran Radio Turkish-language broadcast said several persons were killed and several were wounded in a clash between revolutionary guards and "a group of armed people" from Iraq, but did not say if it was referring to the same border incident as the Foreign Ministry.

Relations Strained

Relations between the two countries have been strained for years, with each accusing the other of border provocations.

Reports in southwest Iran said the attack was launched against the small border post of Shalamcheh, 12 miles northwest of the city of Khoramshahr in Iran's southwest corner.

The heightening of tensions with Iraq added to the problems of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as he sought to overcome restiveness among Iran's minority groups and to deal with a possible showdown over the holding of the American hostages.

Khomeini ridiculed President Carter's "futile" attempts to organize an international economic boycott to pressure Iran into freeing the hostages, who spent their 41st day in captivity Friday.

But Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who flew home from Europe on Friday, said he was encouraged by the "solidarity" of U.S. allies in support of the American plan for an embargo of some kind.

Washington was awaiting a decision today by the International Court of Justice in The Netherlands on its request for an emergency order that the hostages be freed. If Iran does not heed that call, the United States is expected to move within days for Security Council sanctions against Iran.

An Iranian spokesman, Abolghassan Sadegh, predicted the Soviet Union, which has veto power in the council, would not go along with such a move, but U.S. officials said they believed the Soviets would not block it.

Sadegh of the National Guidance Ministry also said Iran stands by its basic demand — the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi must be returned to Iran before the hostages will be released.

Maksoud told his news conference the Arab League opposes sanctions against Iran at this time. He said there has been an "atmospheric improvement" in negotiations "and we should encourage it."

Reports reaching the southwestern city of Abadan said the attack on the border post lasted about 15 minutes.

Tehran Radio said Iranian revolutionary guards intercepted and repulsed Iraqis who had infiltrated Iran "with the aim of carrying out acts of sabotage." It said the Iraqis left behind a "number of dead and wounded."

In a commentary, Tehran Radio said, "This attack was deliberately planned and carried out to coincide with Iran's righteous struggle against the United States." It said the Carter administration, having "failed in the face of the resistance ... of the Iranian nation" may be now "appealing to their agents and their puppet regimes in the region."

Iraq has territorial claims on Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province, where Khoramshahr is situated, and the Iranians ac-

Court Upholds U.S. Review Of Illegal Students From Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals said Friday the government can continue to investigate Iranian students who may be in the country illegally.

The ruling temporarily stayed the effect of an order handed down Tuesday by a U.S. District court which had ordered the government to halt its program of investigating Iranian students and deporting those found to be in the country illegally.

While the brief order by the appellate court allows the government program to start up again, Justice Department officials said that they would not resume deportation proceedings against any persons until the legality of the whole program is decided by the courts.

The appellate court's decision came in response to a lower court ruling that the Carter administration's effort to single out Iranians for possible deportation was unconstitutional.

The Court of Appeals did not overturn the lower court's decision, but set arguments for next Thursday to decide whether the government deportation program against the Iranians is legal.

The Carter administration launched the campaign against the Iranian students as a response to the Nov. 4 seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the holding of 50 American hostages.

Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel said the Immigration and Naturalization Service will resume interviewing the Iranians immediately. However, he said there would be no effort to deport any of the students until the courts reach a final decision on the legality of the program.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green had ruled Tuesday that the program violated the equal protection clause of the Constitution because it singled out the Iranians for investigation.

She called the deportation program "the wholesale nullification of the rights of the students." Her order not only blocked deportations but relieved the students from the responsibility of reporting for interviews ordered by immigration officials.

At the time of Mrs. Green's ruling, federal officials said they had already interviewed more than 50,000 Iranian students and had found that 6,042 were subject to deportation. The officials said

Thaw, Freeze To Keep Area Roads Hazardous

AN UPPER LEVEL disturbance that brought rain, ice and then a sudden and powerful snowfall Thursday moved eastward and away from the area Friday, insuring warmer conditions this weekend.

Forecasters are predicting partly cloudy skies and near 50-degree temperatures today and Sunday across the South Plains.

Lubbock recorded up to 10 inches of snow in some parts of town. Snowfall reached 7.5 inches at Brownfield and Tahoka, 6 inches at Post, 5 inches at Floydada and 1.5 inches at Hereford.

At the National Weather Service observation post at Lubbock International Airport, where the official snowfall reading was 6 inches, precipitation totals from the snow and the rain which preceded it stood at .80 of an inch, pushing December's total to 1.25 inches of moisture.

The totals made this month the wettest December since 1959 and the sixth-wettest on record for the Hub City.

Considerable thawing occurred Friday as temperatures hovered around the freezing mark, but temperatures dipping into the 20s Friday night made city streets slick and hazardous early today.

Temperatures are again expected to move into the upper 20s tonight, freezing today's thaw and endangering travelers on South Plains roads and highways tonight.

Forecasters predict southwesterly winds today at 15 to 20 mph.

Weathermen reported that cattle, especially the young and sickly, have suffered from the cold, wet weather, but the storm was not expected to have much impact on the cotton harvest.

The Lubbock Marketing Service Office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that High Plains offices had graded 1.2 million samples through Wednesday, as compared to 560,000 samples at the same time last year.

The front which so radically changed the weather on much of the South Plains Wednesday and Thursday weakened considerably as it passed from the area and had no signicicant impact downstate.

Widely scattered showers and light rain extended along an area from Del Rio to San Antonio Friday, although precipitation totals were in the quarter-inch range.

Strong winds prompted small craft warnings along the Texas Gulf Coast.

Temperatues were expected to climb into the upper 40s over most of the state today and into the 50s by Sunday.

Suspect Gets Immunity To Gain Toxin's Return

By RICHIE D. REECER

A LUBBOCK MAN who apparently helped plan a burglary in which research equipment containing a highly toxic, cancer-causing agent was taken received immunity from prosecution in return for aiding in the recovery of the equipment.

However, a second suspect, Stephen Leslie Graves, 19, of 2505 Ave. X, was charged Friday with the Nov. 30 burglary at A&L Plains Agricultural Laboratories at 707 Ave. H. He was released from the Lubbock County Jail after posting $15,000 bond.

Lubbock police recovered the stolen equipment Wednesday when another suspect in the theft informed them of its location. The suspect was promised immunity in return for disclosing the location. Police reports indicated the informant did not participate in the actual burglary.

Mass Suicide Hits Turkeys

CORNING, Calif. (UPI) — The holidays won't be the same at a Northern California turkey ranch where 13,000 terror-filled birds committed mass suicide.

State veterinarians say the 20-pound turkeys flew into fences and barn doors and trampled and pecked each other to death in early November.

The disaster wiped out more than half of Ruth Mitchell's 20,000 birds. A turkey rancher for 40 years, she blames the deathly panic on foxes roaming the wilds near her Tehama County ranch.

But the authorities aren't so sure. Veterinarian George West of the state Bureau of Animal Health says anything could have set off the mass hysteria — "lightning, a jet plane or a kid popping a brown paper bag."

Friend Voices Appeal For Troubled Family

THEY ARE having difficulty paying for the baby and saving at the same time for the surgery."

The father was injured, the mother needs surgery, the children all have been sick.

It was another plea for help for a family having a rough time making ends meet without worrying about Christmas presents.

To answer this and other pleas, Chief Goodfellow issues his own plea for contributions to help make this Christmas bright for about 10,000 Lubbock children.

With inflation the way it is, the cost of filling a Christmas sack with a toy, some fruit and a bit of candy will be about $2.25.

That means Chief Goodfellow will need about $20,000 this year to be sure that all children needing his help will get a Christmas sack.

Cost is kept down a little each year through the help of Lubbock merchants who donate toys from their inventory rather than hold them over a year until next Christmas.

Individuals and groups may send contributions to Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock 79408.

Decrease In Automobile Production Triggers Industrial Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nosedive in automobile production during November resulted in an 0.5 percent decline in overall industrial production last month, an indication of a weakening economy, government figures showed Friday.

The Federal Reserve Board reported that production of autos and light trucks were down 8 percent, "reflecting lower sales and large dealer inventories ..." The Commerce Department said the decline in auto output will continue well into 1980.

The drop in industrial production, following an unchanged performance in October, could mark the beginning of a slide toward the recession that many economists have been predicting for months.

However, a one-month decline that is attributed primarily to weakness in the auto industry is inconclusive.

The Federal Reserve said auto assemblies were runing at a annual rate of 7.2 million in November, 20 percent below average during the first alf of th year.

There also was bad news for the auto industry in a separate Commerce Department report which said auto sales will decline further in 1980 because of a slowing economy and consumer resistance to large and mid-sized models.

"Quite apart from fuel supply concerns, economic factors are also exercising a depressing influence on passenger car sales," the department said in an outlook report for the industry.

It said the "current high rate of inflation is depleting the real purchasing power of the average buyer," while consumer indebtedness already is high.

"Assuming the recession will be mild and petroleum supplies will be stable and adequate, car sales are expected to continue their decline through the early months of 1980 and then recover slowly during the balance of the year," the report said.

The department projected 1980 auto sales at 9.8 million, down from 10.6 million in 1979 and 11.3 million in 1978. Domestic-made car sales are projected at 7.7 million autos next year, down from an estimated 8.3 million in 1979 and 9.3 million in 1978.

The report said the share of the market held by imported autos should decline slightly in 1980 to 21.4 percent of total sales, down from a record 21.7 percent in in 1979.

While the decline in industrial production in November was a negative measure of the economy, some other statistics for November — especially a 1.8 percent rise in retail sales and a drop to 5.8 percent in the unemployment rate — reflect underlying strength in the economy.

The consensus among most economists is that the economy will sink into a moderate recession in the first quarter of 1980 at the latest, and that it will last until midyear, after which a slow recovery will begin.

One factor contributing to the recession forecasts is the steady upward rise in world oil prices, which increased about 70 percent in 1979. Several major oil-exporting nations announced price hikes of more than 30 percent Thursday.

But there were some encouraging statements from Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, who said in Brussels that the $6-a-barrel increase by his country was the limit for the time being.

He also said the Saudis will continue to pump oil at a peak level of 9.5 million barrels a day "at least through the first quarter of 1980," a level the Carter administration says will go a long way toward helping ensure an adequate oil supply next year.

Meanwhile, the nation's second largest bank, Citibank, announced a reduction in its prime lending rate to 15 percent, down from 15¼ percent, indicating some further easing of the upward pressure on interest rates. Other banks were expected to follow suit. in auto production, and overall production of durable goods materials, including steel, was off 1.3 percent.

Man Fighting Time To Break Bird Record

BOSTON (UPI) — Time is running out for James Vardaman, who is trying to spot 700 different kinds of birds in a single year. He has 697 so far.

"It's the ninth inning, there are two outs and two strikes on me," said Vardaman, 58, of Jackson, Miss. "I have a chance. It's slim as hell, but I still have a chance."

Vardaman broke the previous one-year record of sighting 659 species in July.

"I'm not a great birder by any means, but I'm able to do it and can't resist the challenge," he said.

Vardaman had a setback this week, however, when he flew first to New England and then out to a fishing fleet off Nantucket in hopes of spotting number 698, the Great Skua, a brown-colored gull with white patches on its wings.

For four hours, he circled the area in a light plane, peering through rain and snow, before calling it a day.

"Didn't get the bird," he said later. "We went out there ... and we found 13 fishing boats and every one of them had birds around it. And not a one had the bird we were looking for."

He said he plans to take a boat off Ocean City, Md., Dec. 29, in an effort to see the gull.

Vardaman, who owns a forest management business, has spent about $35,000 and traveled more than 150,000 miles for his hobby.

Storm Washes Out Bridge Approach, Kills One

FORKS, Wash. (AP) — A powerful rainstorm hit the Olympic Peninsula, knocking out power, washing out a bridge approach to U.S. 101 and causing at least one death, authorities said Friday.

Clallam County Sheriff's Deputy Darrell Spidell said two dams on the Elwha River west of Port Angeles were "being watched closely."

In Forks, police said many streets were 4 to 6 inches deep in water Friday morning with rain still falling heavily. Patrolman Ken Rollins said most of the town still had power, and no major wind damage was reported.

Spidell said residents of Port Angeles filled 550 sandbags to prevent problems from developing along Morse Creek.

About 100 Elwha Valley resident were evacuated starting at about 9 p.m. Thursday, deputies said. By 8:30 a.m., the evacuees were allowed to return to their homes.

Dave Berry, assistant superintendent of the Clallam County Public Utility District, said scattered power outages affected about 1,000 persons. About half of them were without power because of the washout at the Bogachiel River bridge 4.4 miles south of Forks, he added.

A sander-dumptruck and a logging truck plunged into the river shortly after the washout of a 40-to 50-foot stretch of road about 5:30 a.m., said Communications Supervisor Monte L. Simpson at the Washington State Patrol office in Port Angeles.

Troopers arriving at the scene found three wrecked vehicles at the two-lane structure near Bogachiel. A mobile crane pulled the sander-dumptruck from the riverbed, and the body of the driver was found inside, Simpson said.

He said traffic on U.S. 101, the only north-south highway on the western side of the Olympic Peninsula, probably would be rerouted around the washout via a road used mainly by logging trucks.

The washout came after 3.76 inches of rain fell at the weather service recording station in Quillayute.

Four Americans Die After Shooting Spree

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Unidentified terrorists fired on a bus carrying five Americans home from the Cakmakli NATO munitions base Friday evening, killing three civilians and one serviceman, authorities said.

One was dead at the scene and three died later in hospitals, bringing to seven the number of Americans slain in political violence this year in Turkey.

The state radio said he four wre shot at 5:45 p.m. (9:45 a.m. CST) in Florya a resort town near here, by a terrorists who fired from a Turkish-made sedan and then fled the scene.

U.S. officials in Washington said the car had been following the bus, and that the Americans were shot as they tried to flee on foot. The Anatolia news agency quoted police officials as saying there were four terrorists, one of them a woman.

The serviceman was a non-commissioned officer and the three civilians worked for Boeing Services International, the U.S. officials said. They were unable to account for the fifth American on the bus.

The victims were identified as Elmer Cooper, Robert French, Jim Clark and James Smith by the Anatolia News Agency. It said Clark died at the scene of the shooting, Smith at the American Hospital in Istanbul and French and Cooper at the Cerrahpasa University Hospital.

The Cakmakli Base is a North Atlantic Treaty Organization munitions depot run jointly by U.S. and Turkish military authorities several miles away from Istanbul.

A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Ankara said further details on the victims would be withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Alan Flanigan at State Department's Turkish desk said in Washington: "Our ambassador has received a formal statement of regret from the Turkish Government, from the acting foreign minister.

"He called him up and said that he personally, and the Turkish Government, were deeply grieved, that they regretted this terrorist action had taken place, and that the government had given urgent instructions to all Turkish security organizations to search out and find the terrorists who acted against the four American citizens."

Political violence has plagued Turkey in recent years, and observers have said the killing of more than 2,500 people by rightist and leftist factions led to the defeat this fall of Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit by Suleyman Demirel.

Violence has largely been directed at Turks, although terrorists have gunned down an American teacher and two U.S. servicemen in three separate incidents this year.

Authorities have arrested 13 members of a branch of the Turkish Peoples' Liberation Front, which claimed responsibility for the slayings of Sgt. Edward Claypool at Izmir in the Aegean Coast on April 12 and Spec. Thomas Mosely in Istanbul on May 11.

The identities of the gunmen who killed teacher David Goodman in the southern coastal city of Adana in June are still unknown.

Marxist groups have repeatedly attempted to hamper the movements of 5,000 American military personnel serving at two dozen U.S. military and NATO bases in Turkey. Incidents have included machine gun fire into an empty officers club and two bombings of the Turkish American Association in Ankara.

In addition to the victims of inter-factional and anti-American violence, two Turkish security men and one Egyptian diplomat died in July when Palestinian gunmen took over the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara.

Wave Caused By Quake Kills At Least 180

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — At least 180 persons, including 25 children, were swept off a tiny Pacific island by a 10-foot wave caused by Wednesday's earthquake and all presumably drowned, a Colombian civil defense official said Friday.

The death toll from the pre-dawn quake continued to rise Friday, and while Red Cross reports placed it at 300, other reports said as many as 500 had died and up to 120,000 persons were homeless.

San Juan, a 10-square-mile island a few miles off southwest Colombia's Pacific coast, "was reduced to a mass of sand and rock," said Col. Alvaro Castillo. Bodies of at least 80 persons have been recovered, he said.

The wave also caused heavy damage on Amarale, Juachal, Isla Brava and La Tola, four small, nearby islands, the daily El Pais of Cali, Colombia, reported.

A report in Bogota's El Tiempo quoting the Rev. Agapito Locomberry, who flew over San Juan, said only scattered wood and rock remain on the island.

The quake was centered near Colombia's coastal border with Ecuador and what it did not knock down in half a dozen villages near the epicenter, the wave it spawned did, authorities said.

America has sent massive aid to help the homeless and President Julio Cesar Turbay has ordered his forces to help fly the aid to the stricken areas.

Torrential rains and low clouds hampered efforts to fly in supplies and quake damage to the airstrip at Charco, where 76 persons died, prevented planes from landing.

In Tumaco, about 40 miles north of the Ecuadoran border, 40 persons were killed and hundreds were homeless. One out of every 10 buildings was reported destroyed and 7,000 were homeless.

"Why go on living?" one Tumaco resident asked a reporter. Hector Antonio Quijano, a fisherman, said his wife, their four children and two nephews were killed in the quake.

U.S. Sending Aid To Quake Victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is sending 300 large tents and 1,200 double-decker cots to Colombia to aid people left homeless by the earthquake that struck that country earlier this week, U.S. aid officials announced Friday.

The supplies will be flown to Colombia over the next three days from relief stockpiles in Panama.

According to reports, the earthquake Wednesday left 40 dead and 500 injured in the city of Tumaco.

AN EDITORIAL:

Leftists Throw Down Gauntlet

A BLUEPRINT for the destruction of the American economic system and for a radical leftist shift in our system of government has been unveiled by a coalition of labor union bosses, Ralph Nader types and the Kennedy-loving Americans for Democratic Action.

Bluntly targeting big business in the manner of Jane Fonda and her husband, the coalition has drafted what it calls the "Corporate Democracy Act of 1980" as the kickoff of a 10-year economic revolution.

Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith and other organizers are smart enough to know the draft legislation has no chance of passage next year.

But they also know that, with persistence, they stand a very good chance of getting much of their program adopted during the next decade.

"A BASIC THEME is that our giant corporations have gross public impact without public accountability—that they govern us though we cannot govern them," the warring faction said in scheduling "Big Business Day 1980" for April 17.

The coalition wants to put union bosses and production workers on corporate boards and, in an era when over-regulation already is adding enormously to consumer prices, to burden business with even more governmental regulations.

"It's not an anti-business day but a pro-competition day," organizer Mark Green said in a statement typical of the misleading tactics the coalition will use in trying to drum up public support for its radical goals.

ONE OF THE organizers is Patsy T. Mink, president of the ADA, which reported in its latest bimonthly sheet that the coalition makes "a heavy case against Big Business."

Among the allegations:

—Industrial pollution poisons our water, air and workplaces.

—Consumers are overcharged billions each year through widespread price-fixing and other monopoly practices.

—Corporate pressure for budget cuts undermines public services.

—Advertising urges us from early childhood to eat foods and use products that are dangerous.

—Union-busting corporate consultants promote a union-free environment.

—Inflation outpaces wages, while profits swell.

—A handful of men run the corporations while shareholders, workers and consumers are excluded from decision-making.

THE ALTERNATIVE to letting the men who own and operate business make the decisions is, of course, to let the hired hands and the politicians make the decisions.

Whatever name you call that alternative, it is not the free enterprise system which, capitalizing on the profit motive, has given Americans the highest quality of life in the history of mankind.

Using that criteria, to destroy, or attempt to destroy, that system or bring about radical changes in it is to be anti-American by definition.

The ADA, which triggered the movement last summer to draft Sen. Ted Kennedy for President, says the purpose of the "task force (is) to develop an alternative economic plan for the nation."

The leftists having thrown down the gauntlet, the question now is whether Americans who love their country the way it is love it well enough to fight to preserve it by working for the defeat of incumbents and candidates who embrace the concepts of the so-called Corporate Democracy Act.

AN EDITORIAL:

Congress In Firm Decontrol

PRICE CONTROLS on oil are costing Americans over $3 billion a year because the controls foster excessive oil demand, discourage adequate domestic oil production, impose compliance burdens on producers and, last but not least, involve the government in expensive administrative activities, according to an ever-enlarging mountain of evidence.

A study released this week by the American Enterprise Institute contends that even policy makers who believe the income redistribution implied by decontrol is inequitable "should support decontrol on the grounds that decontrol would produce greater overall equity-weighted gains than losses."

THE AUTHORS ARE Kenneth Arrow, Stanford University economics professor, and recipient of the 1972 Nobel Memorial Award in Economic Science and Joseph Kalt, Harvard University economics instructor and former member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers staff.

On the demand side, write Arrow and Kalt, every barrel of crude oil now imported produces goods and services that are worth less to the American public than the cost of acquiring the oil from foreign sellers.

On the supply side, petroleum price regulations discourage domestic production and encourage the importation of foreign oil.

Arrow and Kalt estimate that the producers spend an additional $500 million carrying out administrative obligations created by current regulations.

THEY FIGURE THE federal administrative burden of regulation on taxpayers to be another $200 million annually and the extra oil imported to cost "conservatively" $2 billion a year.

These economic losses would disappear if crude oil prices were decontrolled, the authors write.

Congress, meanwhile, continues to appease northeastern state legislators—who are major consumers of oil but not producers—by resisting any effort to let domestic demand be supplied by domestic production at a price established on the open market.

ART BUCHWALD:

Ted Knows Less Than He Gets TV Credit For

WASHINGTON—"Teddy, this is your mother."

"Yes, Mother."

"What have you been doing lately?"

"I'm running for President. You said I could."

"I said you could run for President, but I didn't expect you to run THAT way."

"What did I do wrong?"

"To begin with, why did you go on the Roger Mudd television show?"

"I thought that would be a good place to explain my political philosophy, articulate the issues of the day and tell the American people why I wanted to be President of the United States."

"WELL, WHY didn't you?"

"Gosh, Mother, it's hard to remember everything. Besides nobody saw the Roger Mudd show. They were all watching 'Jaws.'"

"They may have all been watching 'Jaws,' but they all think they saw the Roger Mudd show, which is just as bad."

"If everyone who claims to have seen you and Roger Mudd really did, I think the man who runs the Nielsen ratings should be impeached."

"Mother, I'm terribly busy. I have to go out and campaign."

"That's what I'm calling about, Teddy. Why do you have to go out and campaign?"

"BECAUSE I'M running for President."

"Are you going to talk about the Shah?"

"I've got to talk about something. The Shah's a very bad person."

"We all know that, Teddy. But talking about him now is like talking about lemons and bananas."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The Shah's a lemon, and the Ayatollah is bananas."

"You don't understand, Mother. It's a jungle out there. President Carter is safe in the White House and he's on television every night. If I don't say something provocative, nobody will know I'm running for office."

"I'll know, Teddy."

"IT'S NOT enough. I've got to win Iowa, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. How do I do it?"

"Why don't you attack the American Medical Assn.?"

"Nobody cares about my National Health Insurance program now. It isn't playing in Des Moines."

"How about inflation? No one likes inflation."

"People go to sleep when I talk about inflation. I told you if I ran for President it wouldn't be easy. I have to go out on a limb if I hope to win the primaries."

"I have a good idea. Why don't you ask Roger Mudd if you can go on his show again?"

"WHAT FOR?"

"Tell him you just thought of a reason you want to run for President, but ask him to make it a multiple choice question."

"It's too late, Mother. CBS has done me already."

"What about Barbara Walters?

"Let her come to your home without TV cameras, and allow her to take a Polaroid picture of you as she did with the Shah. In that way she can't hurt you."

"All right, anything you say, Mother. Can I go now?"

"Who's stopping you? I just called to cheer you up."

GEORGE WILL:

An Immodest Success

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.—Some facets of American civilization are—let us face facts—less than excellent. The saxophone, for one. Football halftime shows, for another. Frozen French toast, for a third.

But there is, I insist, a form of excellence for almost everything, even excess. So let us now praise (sort of) two-and-a-half blocks of Rodeo Drive here.

Beverly Hills (5.7 square miles, 33,500 population) is blessed with 678 law firms—one whole firm for every 49 residents—according to Marcia Seligman, a student of Beverly Hills' strangeness.

There are, she says, no hospitals or cemeteries. A place in which there is no birth or burial is not a serious place.

Perhaps. But according to a serious source (a country music song): "All the gold in California Is in a bank in the middle of Beverly Hills In somebody else's name."

But that money is just resting there, en route to Rodeo Drive, where it belongs.

You can walk the stretch that matters in three minutes. The tone of this stretch is so, well, toney, that the Gucci store is just a kind of K-Mart, and Hermes is, at best, a Woolworth's.

Even Juschi, a boutique that cost $3 million to decorate, is a pale fire in comparison with Bijan, a men's store.

If excess is, in its way, a fine art, then Bijan Pakzad is its Bernard Derenson, a stern, standards-setting critic. He was born in Iran, but is at pains to mention that he is an American citizen.

HE IS, I assure you, the kind of Iranian that gives ayatollahs the willies.

He says his store averages three to five customers a day and this year will gross more than $8 million. Each customer must spend thousands of dollars.

Many customers are foreigners, some from OPEC countries, so think of his store as, among other things, a national asset and a patriotic enterprise—a device for recycling petrodollars.

You can, of course, window shop on Rodeo Drive. A recent window display at Bijan included a $42,000 item for the man who has everything except a bedspread made of gray fox fur from China or Mongolia. But don't plan on dropping by to browse in the store.

Customers must make appointments, a precaution Pakzad has taken against what he calls, with magnificent impudence, "the Rodeo Drive riffraff."

HE SAYS you should not make an appointment unless you earn $100,000. A month. Those of you in that bracket can get some nice, oh, $300 cotton shirts.

Why so much? Well, Pakzad explains that he takes the finest cotton, from Egypt, and sends it to Switzerland to be woven into cloth. The cloth goes to Italy to be made into shirts.

They are displayed for customers here on a table made of marble from Versailles, by sales people whose manicures Pakzad personally checks.

"I like America," he says, with unquestionable sincerity. "In America you have opportunity."

But he thinks the American male is an inexcusably drab creature, and that a little more peacockery would serve the cause of world peace.

HE SAYS that European men, who have a civilized sense of style, see Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on television and say, "I don't believe him—look at his tie."

I knew there was something wrong with our foreign policy but I couldn't quite put my finger on it. Now I blame Vance's tailor.

Speaking more in sorrow than in anger, Pakzad says, "The American man wears something because he must cover his skin."

Clod that I am, I had hitherto thought that covering skin was, indeed, the heart of haberdashery.

But Pakzad insists that America will not measure up to its potential until its men start wearing, among other things, perfume.

To hasten the day, he is bringing out a man's perfume, $400 for four ounces in a Baccarat crystal bottle.

RODEO DRIVE, and especially those stores that sell things (belts, ties, shoes, handbags, etc.) with the store's name or symbol all over them, is a monument to the fact that some people are nothing if not earnest in their pursuit of whatever status can be purchased and worn.

In a new novel that is alternatively funny and gruesome ("The Pope of Greenwich Village," by Vincent Patrick) one character impresses his girl friends, and makes himself feel good, by tipping toll booth attendants.

There is the unconquerable American spirit. It turns the New Jersey Turnpike into the average guy's Rodeo Drive, a street of dreams.

ANDREW TULLY:

Do Not Disturb

WASHINGTON—"Yeah, I've got a good expense account," writes the New York oil company executive. "But it burned me to pay $120 for a double room in a Washington hotel that will never be mistaken for the Ritz."

So this is only incidentally a plug for a caravansary operated in the capital by my friend, Morris Rodman.

It is intended as a bit of aid and comfort for tourists who visit Washington every year and who complain in the hundreds about the high cost.

I was reminded again of the financial pleasure of dossing down in Morris's Park Central Hotel in downtown Washington when I spent three days there recently to put the finishing touches to a book.

The Park Central is clean, reasonably spacious, and quiet. It harbors no noisy conventions. And it is dirt cheap in a town that mostly charges more than the traffic can bear.

YOU CAN buy a single room for $38 a day, a double for $46. Add an efficiency with a completely furnished kitchenette and the tab runs from $41 to $49. There is no charge for kids (limit two) sharing a double with parents.

The 11-story, 250-room Park Central has no restaurant, no room service. But just around the corner is Kay's Sandwich Shop, serving three-inch thick corned beef sandwiches and the best bacon and eggs in town.

In the hotel itself, there is no tipping because there are no bellhops and no waiters.

But if you're under doctor's orders not to carry your baggage, or just plain lazy, Manager Roberta Hayes will find a member of the service staff to hustle your gear to the elevator and up to your room. No hand is held out for this chore.

YOU WANT convenience? The Park Central is only two blocks from the White House and a few minutes walk from the famous Kennedy Center.

And the neighborhood is prestigious, the Park Central is surrounded by the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the National Academy of Sciences.

Buses are everywhere, and there's a subway station nearby. Shops, art galleries and good restaurants abound. There are six parking garages within three blocks, two of them less than a block away.

But what I like best about the Park Central is its silence. Trying to commit a book in as readable English as possible, I jump if a throat is cleared two rooms away.

NO PROBLEM at the Park Central. It was built when people hated noise; its walls and its modest carpeting are thick. There is, of course, air conditioning, but you can open any window in the building.

George Bernard Shaw remarked that "The great advantage of a hotel is that it's a refuge from home life." The Park Central offers that. But it also is as different as can be from those noisy motels in our wilderness of turnpikes.

It's smack dab in the center of things, but the "Do Not Disturb" sign is up 24 hours a day.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Not A Dip In Chips

DALLAS—It's too late for the catalogs ... you can't get through to the switchboards at the big department stores ... and even if you do, the way deliveries are running, the most numerous items under the tree will be broken ornaments.

The only hope now is to get in there and slog it out with the rest of the last-minute Christmas shoppers.

Last-minute? The second week in December is last-minute?? You'd better believe it.

And you'd better hurry. Santa's elves have long since snapped up most of the electronic goodies, and what's left is so expensive you almost have to swing a loan to sign the sales slip. (If you can afford the interest rates.)

THIS, IN case you've been spending most of the season under a rock, is the year of the "electronic Christmas," and desperate parents are scrounging the shelves for one last "Simon" or "Mania" or any of the 120 games and toys with moving lights and the required blips and bleeps and whistles.

They're not cheap, either, the day of $4.95 checkers or Monopoly has given way to the $35-to-55 micro-chip game. It's the biggest thing since plastic, a $500-million bonanza for the toy industry.

It could have been even bigger if the toymakers could get all the chips they need.

But the automobile folks got in early with orders for all kinds of electronic gimmicks for the new cars and Scrooged poor Santa out of almost 50 percent of the tiny programmers that make electronic games do their thing.

THERE'S ANOTHER reason for the shortage. Grownups are going for the toys as fast as the kids, and wives are scooping them up for Pop as a welcome substitute for the traditional Christmas tie.

Especially the games that let him play football, basketball, soccer or space-war without straining a single middle-aged muscle.

There is, in fact, a new shop in my neighborhood called The Executive Toy Store that sells gifts only for men. Or, to be precise, men who don't blink when the monthly bills roll in.

Come January, several local gentlemen are going to find themselves shelling out $325 for the talking chess game they found under the tree.

Or $379 for their new automatic phone dialer, or $79.95 for a wallet-sized bio-rhythm computer, $175 for a solar-powered copper derrick for their desks, $450 for steak knives with staghorn handles ... or maybe $65 for a non-electronic four-foot crayon that doesn't do anything. It just stands there.

THERE'S A new Monopoly-type game now, too, called "Beverly Hills."

It costs $25 and the object is to accumulate status. Just to give you a rough idea: You trade up from a Ford to a Mercedes, the player wearing the most expensive Guccis rolls the dice first, and each one starts with a $25,000 line of credit. (Cash is too tacky for this game.)

"Things like this are actually selling," says store owner Samuel Papert III. "Price doesn't seem to matter to the wife of the man who already has everything."

Toy stores for men began to catch on a couple of years ago when a group of young swingers opened up a "frankly expensive" shop in (where else?) Beverly Hills.

There are also a few in New York, one in Palm Beach, Fla., and probably others in cities where rich folks don't pay any mind to talk of a recession.

AT AUTONOMICS Inc. of New York, for instance, you can find stocking-stuffers like the "Pieces of Eight" building blocks that really are little hunks of solid gold. Priced at $46,000. (El cheapos can settle for sets in aluminum or teak for "only" $40.)

One of the most popular games at The Executive Toy Store is "Exec-U-Play," an electronic problem-solver that, for business decisions, offers a choice of solutions: "Stall like hell. Fire everyone. Do it, but deny it. Blame someone else." All for $35, batteries included.

(It solves sex problems, too, but "Take a cold shower" is the only advice I can quote in a family newspaper.)

JUST A shelf away from the $500 luggage (made of Rolls-Royce leather, natch) is the "Nurd," a rubber face with instructions that read: "Don't punch your boss, punch me. Don't mangle your wife, scrunch me," etc. This one's a best-seller at $10.

And for the missus who misses out on the electronic goodies, there's always pornography to fall back on—"flasher dolls," complete with raincoat and anatomical details. (Ask for "Uncle Sherman" or for "Aunt Sophie," a gray-haired old crone, and be prepared to spend $20.)

On the other hand, for a little more, you could buy a raincoat for your favorite flasher.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THE EARLY processors of tobacco thought it necessary to put cardboard stiffeners in cigarette packages so the pocketed smokes wouldn't get crushed. But the blank cardboard wasn't imaginative enough to suit them.

So they decorated the cards with pictures of baseball players. The game of swap with those collectible baseball cards was not a stroke of promotional genius. It just took off on its own, and stuck.

Most favored toy of American children is neither the doll nor the teddy bear, although both have been credited with that distinction at one time or another. The honor now goes to the television set.

If typical, half of what you learn in school, you learn by age 9, according to the experts.

That outdoor temperature whereat a hog is happiest is said to be 86 degrees F.

Q. Who invented the doughnut?

A. A boy aged only 15. Hanson Crockett Gregory was his name. He got tired of fried cakes that were soggy in the middle. So in 1847 at Rockport, Maine, he scooped out the middle, having not yet learned any reason why he shouldn't.

To more easily do the job that's expected of you, young lady, wipe down your snow shovel with floor wax. Makes it slippery. That helps.

Ohio Mayor Hosting Dinner For Town

WEST RUSHVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Mayor C. Ford Shaeffer is hosting a holiday dinner this Sunday — for everybody in town.

Schaeffer, 74, has invited every one of the 227 or so residents of this small farming community southeast of Columbus to dinner at the local Lions Club hall.

"I go personally door to door to invite them," he said.

"It's only for good will. I don't have anything to sell, no ax to grind," Shaeffer said. "I hope it brings us closer together and possibly rubs off further out than the town."

Before digging into the food, everybody at the dinner is introduced and asked to shake hands, he said. Town council members are pointed out to newcomers.

This is the second year for the mayor's free dinner. Last year 225 attended.

Sunday's menu includes a chicken dinner catered by a Lancaster restaurant along with some of the mayor's own home cooking.

"I have a specialty of ham and beans that I cook myself," he said.

Ice cream and cookies are for dessert.

Shaeffer was town postmaster for 28 years and now is in real estate. He says he doesn't want to pocket the annual mayoral pay of $300.

"I wanted to do something, not to receive the money for being mayor," he explained. "I wanted to return the money to the people of the town."

But the $300 salary "wouldn't be half enough" to pay for the dinner, he said. The balance he pays himself.

Indiana University Official Appointed

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Robert O'Neil, vice president in charge of the Indiana University campus at Bloomington, was appointed president of the University of Wisconsin System on Friday.

The Board of Regents unanimously approved a resolution appointing O'Neil to succeed Edwin Young as president, at a salary of $65,800 a year.

Young, 62, who has headed the university since 1977, is retiring to return to teaching on the Madison campus.

Families To Place Wreaths At Memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families of the American hostages in Tehran will lay wreaths at the Lincoln Memorial and the Iranian Embassy on Sunday to dramatize their "hope that our people will get home for Christmas."

Penne Laingen, wife of L. Bruce Laingen, the charge d'affairs of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, said four children will place a wreath and placard at the Lincoln Memorial. Laingen has been detained at the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

On the placard will be a quotation of Lincoln: "Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves and under a just God cannot long retain it."

Mrs. Laingen said the families will then go to the Iranian Embassy where she and two other women will present a wreath and a card saying "Set our people free. Let our people go." They will hold a brief candlelight vigil.

SPINNING WHEELS — Motorists weren't the only ones spinning their wheels in the snow. Christopher Barton, 4 1/2, son of Mr. and Mrs. F.R. Seven Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) cadets and three Army ROTC cadets from Texas Tech Univerity will be commissioned as second lieutenants in commissioning ceremonies Thursday.

The joint commissioning ceremony will be at 10 a.m. in the University Theater. Col. Monte Montogomery, commander of Reese Air Force Base, will deliver the commissioning address.

The seven Air Force ROTC cadets have completed a four-year program in aerospace studies involving officer training and an understanding of the Air Force mission, organization, operations, problems and techniques. The three Army ROTC cadets have completed a four-year program in military science involving an understanding of human behavior, methods for motivating others, indoctrination in the techniques of leadership, and practical applications of leadership principles.

Each of the newly commissioned officers will be stationed at a United States military establishment.

Missile launch officer Clayton A. Church, Air Force, will be stationed at Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota. Church is a political science major from Dallas.

Kathryn E. Cook, Air Force, a transportation officer and a biology major, will be stationed at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Arizona. She is from Richardson.

Raymond S. Mehringer, Air Force, missile launch officer, will be stationed at Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota.

POLISH PARTITIONS

For 118 years, between 1895 and 1918, Poland did not exist. The last of three partitions among Russia, Prussia and Austria, 1795, erased the nation of Poland from the map of Europe and not until after World War I did it reappear.

PRESS CONFERENCE — Santa and Mrs. Claus held a press conference Friday at Santaland to announce they will be in Lubbock from 6 p.m. until 10 p.m. today through Dec. 23 at Santaland, Avenue L and Sixth Street. Mrs. Claus is seen here talking to Pancho Claus, Santa's cousin, who will be at Santaland on Feliz Navidad night, Wednesday. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

Santa, Friends Set Appearances

The traditional Mr. and Mrs. Saint Nick, a black Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus and Santa's cousin Pancho Claus of the South Pole have all scheduled appearances this season at Santa Land.

A reindeer flight from the North Pole will arrive in Lubbock at 6 p.m. today and Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry will be there to greet the long-awaited visitors.

Santa and Mrs. Claus will receive visitors and pass out candy each evening from 6 until 10 p.m. today through Dec. 23. This is the 25th annual celebration at Santa Land, which is at Avenue L and Sixth Street.

Feliz Navidad night will be Wednesday when a Spanish-speaking Mr. and Mrs. Claus will greet children, along with local hero Pancho Claus. Pancho, who is Santa's cousin, also wears a traditional red suit but adds to his costume a serape, a sombrero and sandals. He has a black beard instead of a white one.

Also on Feliz Navidad night, several Lubbock church choirs will sing Christmas carols in Spanish.

Soul Christmas will follow on Thursday night as a black Mr. and Mrs. Claus greet children. Music will be provided by the Federation of Choirs, representing several East Lubbock churches.

Several animated displays such as the Melting Snowman and the reindeer barn are part of Santa's Village, which is clustered beneath a 65-foot Christmas tree. Canterbury carolers will provide music. A bonfire will burn at Santa Land each night.

In a special rush telegram to The Avalanche-Journal, Santa said, "Any interested singing group not yet on the schedule should call Jim Flippo and join us at Santa Land." Flippo, of the parks and recreation department, may be reached at 762-6411, extension 2680.

Santa and Mrs. Claus also noted that private parties are welcomed at Santa Land during morning and afternoon hours. Arrangements for such parties may also be made through the parks and recreation department.

Tech To Conduct Horse Show Judge Seminars

Texas Tech University has been selected to hold seminars for more than 150 applicants interested in becoming judges for horse shows arranged by two leading national horse clubs.

The seminars, which will include written and judging tests, will evaluate applicants who want to become judges for horse shows arranged by the American Quarter Horse Association and the Appaloosa Horse Club of America.

Initial screening of applicants will be done by the two horse clubs.

The AQHA seminar will be held April 23, 1980, while a date for the ApHCA seminar has not been confirmed.

Dr. James C. Heird and David D. Whittaker of the animal science department at Texas Tech will arrange the seminars.

"The written test will be provided by the two clubs, while Texas Tech will set up the judging test with 18 classes," Heird said.

This is the first time that the two clubs are selecting judges based on this type of testing, he said.

Heird, director of the Texas Tech horse program, hopes that the AQHA and the ApHCA will hold similar seminars in the future at Texas Tech.

Four courses are offered in horse management, production and judging at Texas Tech. More than 150 students enroll in those courses each year.

Heird joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1976 and has been instrumental in developing the horse teaching program. Whittaker, a research associate, joined the university in 1979.

Effort To Save Condor Begun By Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $1 million, five-year effort to save the California condor from extinction is being undertaken by the federal government.

The Interior Department, saying it believes only about 30 of the birds have survived, announced the program on Friday.

Tech Students To Get Special Recognition

Three Texas Tech University students will receive special recognition at the 25th annual Southwest Park and Recreation Training Institute Feb. 3-6 at Lake Texoma.

Each of the three holds institute scholarships and one of those, Claire Dean, is the first recipient majoring in health, recreation and physical education with a special interest in recreation. The other two scholarship winners are Dave Callahan, majoring in landscape architecture, and Mark Thornton, a park administration major.

The institute awarded the three $500 scholarships from a fund established by contribution made by institute participants.

Dr. J.W. Kitchen of the Texas Tech University faculty in park administration and landscape architecture, is director of the institute.

"The scholarships demonstrate the personal interest of participants in promoting professionalism among the people who will be working in our parks and developing future recreational opportunities," he said. "By supporting students undertaking academic training, we support our future professionals."

Dr. John Alford, director of parks and recreation in Lubbock, is the scholarship committee chairman. He said he expects to receive sufficient contributions at the 1980 conference to continue or even expand the number of scholarships.

Panel Approves Several Variances

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on Jail Standards has approved several variances on state jail standards for the Dawson and Terry county jails.

Dawson County was granted six variances pertaining to a processing area not located inside the inmate occupied area, lack of at least 30 percent single-man cells, lack of dayrooms for all inmates, lack of safety vestibules in all areas, lack of remote unlocking capabilities on all cell doors and exit doors which swing against the traffic flow.

The variance on dayrooms was granted contingent to any inmate housed over 72 hours being given access to a dayroom.

The remote unlocking variance was granted contingent upon a certified corrections officer being in the jail on a 24-hour basis and that a means of communication with the cells be provided.

Terry County was granted four variances for its jail. The variances pertain to two cells which do not prevent the passage of contraband, lack of safety vestibules in all three-man cells, lack of remote unlocking capabilities on all cell doors and lack of floor drains in the kitchen and corridors.

The remote unlocking variance was granted contingent upon the installation of life safety equipment.

Kennedy Says Carter Changed Mind On Nuclear Aircraft Carrier

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Friday it was "general knowledge" among members of Congress that President Carter reversed his position on a nuclear aircraft carrier as part of a deal under which Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., eased pressure for lifting economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

Both the White House and Helms denied Kennedy's allegations.

Asked about the allegations, first made by Kennedy Thursday night, the senator reviewed the circumstances of Carter's reversal on the carrier and the Senate fight on Rhodesia, and said:

"If it looks like a duck, walks like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it's a duck. That's a duck."

Kennedy, D-Mass., recalled that Carter vetoed a defense bill because it included $2 billion for construction of a new nuclear aircraft carrier.

He said that at the same time, Helms and other senators were mustering Senate support for legislation that would force Carter to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

"I went to the White House and sat in with the president and Jesse Helms and a handful of other senators on that issue (Rhodesian sanctions)," Kennedy said in an interview with KRON-TV.

Kennedy added that the president "made a strong plea not to have a vote in the United States Senate because the delicate negotiations (on Rhodesia) were in progress.

"Several weeks later the conference committee took place (on the defense bill) between House and Senate conferees about whether we were going to put the nuclear carrier back in, and the administration agreed to put the nuclear carrier back in and the president signed the bill to put the nuclear carrier back, and there was no vote on sanctions."

At a news conference later, Kennedy said, "I have talked to members of the Armed Services Committee and the House, as well as to the conferees, and I am absolutely convinced there was a quid pro quo."

Kennedy also reviewed the circumstances which prompted him 10 days ago in another interview with KRON to say that the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi had presided over one of the most violent regimes in history.

Kennedy's remark stirred sharp criticism from the administration and elsewhere.

Kennedy recalled that within the previous day-and-a-half, Ronald Reagan had proposed granting the shah permanent asylum in the United States while the Mexican government had said it would not permit the deposed Iranian ruler's return to that country.

Kennedy said he also believed that granting the shah asylum "was being considered in high councils of government as a possibility."

The senator also noted that the shah was admitted to the United States for medical treatment "secretly, without consultation with Congress.

"He had been moved from a hospital to a military base ... without any contact effectively with the Congress."

Kennedy said it was under those circumstances that he spoke out and that he does not regret his remarks. When asked whether he still believes it had been "an appropriate time" to criticize the shah, Kennedy said if he had spoken out after the shah had been granted asylum, "it's effectively too late."

The senator said he was satisfied with assurances from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance that Congress would be consulted before any decision to grant asylum to the shah.

One-Day-Old Siamese Twin Girls Die

MIAMI (AP) — Siamese twin girls born Thursday with a shared heart both died Friday before doctors had decided whether to attempt to separate them, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Death was attributed to a combination of heart and respiratory failure, said Ardie Jones of Variety Children's Hospital. She said it was "essentially a breakdown of the life support system."

The girls, Mary and Lucy Acosta, were joined at the chest and abdomen and shared a heart, liver and part of a small intestine. They were born Thursday by Caesarian section and each weighed 5 pounds.

"There had not been a decision yet to operate before the twins died," Miss Jones said. "They were going to see what developed."

Doctors had said that it would not have been possible for both survive and that it was unlikely even one of the twins could have lived with the defective heart.

"The chances for survival were next to nil," Miss Jones said.

She said, "The babies were loved as soon as they came in."

"There was one nurse in the intensive-care unit who was patting them and cooing to them as soon as she saw them," the spokeswoman said. "There is a sadness in the hospital."

The parents, Peter and Margie Acosta, were not available for comment Friday.

"They had the natural reaction of any parent who has lost a child," Ms. Jones said.

The Acostas have a 3-year-old son and said they were looking forward to a daughter. They learned two months ago that the twins they were expecting would likely be Siamese.

When Siamese twins share a heart, they usually do not live more than a few weeks without separation, according to Dr. Paul Weinberg, a Philadelphia cardiologist who has studied such cases. Weinberg said in two recent cases the surviving twin died three months after surgery.

Siamese twins occur about once in every 100,000 births, according to the national Center for Disease Control.

Cancer Study Could Take Three Years

DETROIT (AP) — It will take at least three years to complete a federal study on whether auto workers using cancer-causing chemicals in wood-modeling shops suffer higher-than-normal cancer death rates, investigators say.

Federal officials from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health originally thought the study would take up to six months. But Dr. Richard Lemen, assistant chief of the agency's study branch, said the study involves more detail in tracking cancer cases than previously anticipated because the disease has a latency period from 20 to 40 years.

"I know the government works slow, but this is ridiculous," said Jim Bruce, one of the GM Tech Center employees who first raised questions about deaths potentially linked to carcinogens used in the wood shops.

The study will compare the workers' causes of death with expected national mortality rates from cancer and heart disease to determine whether wood shop model makers face a higher risk from those diseases.

Investigators will examine the job histories of 5,000 employees at GM's Fisher Body Division, Ford Motor Co.'s Engineering Center and Chrysler Corp.'s Highland Park facility. Microfilming of records is expected to begin next month.

Two other independent studies commissioned by GM will involve the Michigan Cancer Foundation and the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research in New York. GM spokesmen said Thursday they have no idea when those studies will be completed.

Tempers Burn In City Despite Cool Weather

As Lubbockites Friday dug out from under Thursday night's generous snowfall, some citizens' tempers rose higher than the snow drifts, while the snowy blanket lured others into mischievous acts.

A Lubbock teen-ager told police an unknown man hit him in the mouth about noon Friday apparently because the man thought the youth had splashed his pickup truck with water from the melting snow.

The 16-year-old told investigating officers that he was driving south on Avenue A when he stopped at a traffic light at the intersection of Avenue A and 50th Street. The youth said the suspect got out of his white pickup truck, walked over to the driver's side door of the youth's car and tried to get into the vehicle.

Reports indicate when the suspect couldn't get into the teen-ager's car, he started beating on the door window with an ice scraper. The youth told police he rolled down his window and the man began cursing him and claiming the boy had splashed water on his truck.

The man then reportedly hit the youth in the mouth and got back into his truck and drove away.

A Lubbock woman reported to the police desk sergeant that a snowball apparently thrown from atop Bromley Hall at 1001 University Ave. about 1 p.m., struck the hood of her late-model Chevrolet, denting the vehicle. Reports indicate the misguided snowball was responsible for about $300 damage to the hood of the woman's 1979 Monte Carlo.

A Lubbock teen-ager, found dazed early Friday in the 2300-block of Fifth Street, told police he was struck over the head and robbed of $30.

Rudy Gonzales, 17, of 408 Ave. F said he hitched a ride shortly after 10 p.m. Thursday, and the next thing he knew he was lying in the snow in front of a vacant apartment at 2314-A Fifth St.

Gonzales, who was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital, said he thought he had been struck in the head with a tire tool.

Police were called to the apartment on a report of a burglary in progress. However, the victim said he had just entered the unlocked residence to warm up.

Reports indicate Gonzales had left a party on Broadway and was walking to his girlfriend's house near Clovis Road and Avenue U when he hitched a ride with a young Mexican-American man driving what was described as a 1967 green, two-door Pontiac.

The suspect was described as short, thin and wearing a brown coat, green shirt and blue pants.

In other activity, police said a drunk driver on snow-covered streets early Friday almost caused several serious accidents, including a head-on collision with a tractor-trailer rig in the 2600-block of Avenue Q.

Police first spotted the 25-year-old motorist driving erratically in the 1900-block of 19th Street about 1:30 a.m. Friday. The man allegedly ignored a patrolman's attempts to pull him over.

Reports indicate a truck driver had to swerve his rig onto the wrong side of Avenue Q to avoid hitting the man's car, and almost rammed head on into another vehicle. Other cars pulled to the side of the road when they saw the suspect coming their way, according to police.

The man was finally apprehended when he attempted to get into his 29th Street residence. He was booked into the county jail on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Tony Weber and Ladonna Jones told police they lost more than $10,000 in property, including a large amount of camera equipment, when their residence at 1710 Ave. R, Apt. 109, was burglarized between 10 p.m. and 11:10 p.m. Thursday.

Other items reported stolen were telephone recorders, a video cassette recorder and a television set.

Lubbock police Friday were looking for two white men traveling in a blue Ford van who allegedly stole two television sets from the El Dorado Motor Hotel, 2120 Amarillo Highway, and then dumped their loot near the Mackenzie State Park entrance on U.S. 87.

The hotel desk clerk saw the suspects leaving the two burglarized rooms about 8:45 p.m. Thursday. An employee of another motel in the city located the TV sets near the state park and saw a blue van driving from the scene, according to reports.

The television sets had been heavily damaged, police said.

Tommy K. Harmon of 1607 28th St. said he lost $2,100 in property, including two television sets, guns, a clock and a radio, when his house was broken into Thursday morning.

Clothes, a Home Box Office television hookup, camera equipment and jewelry were reported taken in a break-in at Ronald S. Peeling's 2213 29th St. residence between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. Thursday.

Blaze Destroys Repair Shop

A television repair shop on U.S. 62-82 west of Idalou was destroyed Thursday night in a fire which ignited two full gasoline tanks on a pickup truck parked in the structure's garage.

The blaze broke out about 7:45 p.m. and volunteer firemen from Idalou and Roosevelt were called back twice Friday when the repair shop, located about four miles west of Idalou near the FM 2641 cutoff, rekindled.

Idalou Fire Marshal Weldon McKinney said the building and its contents were destroyed and estimated the loss to be at least $50,000, "maybe twice that." The structure's roof collapsed the first time firemen were at the scene.

McKinney said the gasoline tanks apparently exploded as firemen were first arriving on the scene. Exploding television tubes inside the building also hampered firefighters' efforts to control the blaze.

No one was injured in the fire.

Volunteers spent 2½ hours battling the blaze on the first call, and McKinney said their main concern was to keep the fire from spreading to adjacent buildings, including a large auction barn. Other buildings sustained little damage, according to the fire marshal.

Firemen were called back out into the snow shortly before 3 a.m. Friday when the repair shop began burning again. Volunteers were out of their beds again when fire broke out a third time at the building at 8:15 a.m.

In addition to the numerous explosions inside the structure, firemen were hampered by a lack of water at the scene because their tank trucks were slowed by treacherous road conditions.

McKinney said it appeared the fire was caused by an electrical short in the back of the building near where the truck was parked. "I saw some bad connections there," the fire marshal said.

Three firefighting units from Idalou were called to the scene, and Roosevelt dispatched two units.

Ex-Press Secretary May Be Nominated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liz Carpenter, former press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson, is expected to be nominated as assistant secretary for public affairs in the new Education Department, government sources said Friday.

Mrs. Carpenter's nomination is expected to be announced within a week but probably will not be submitted to the Senate for confirmation until Congress convenes in late January.

Mrs. Carpenter was in Washington earlier this week from her Austin home working as a consultant with the transition team preparing the new department to begin operations.

Mrs. Carpenter was press secretary for the wife of former President Lyndon B. Johnson from 1963 to 1969.

EARTHWORM MEDICINE

Earthworms were once considered an all-round wonder drug in Iran. They were baked and eaten with bread to reduce the size of a bladder stone, and were dried and eaten to cure the yellowness of jaundice. Their ashes were even applied with oil of roses to make their grow.

Leaders Express Doubts About Disputes Referee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business leaders and a conservative senator took aim Friday at President Carter's choice for a powerful new referee of labor disputes.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah., and spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce expressed doubts that William Lubbers, a long-time aide to the chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, could be an effective, independent NLRB general counsel.

Lubbers' 20-year work relationship with agency chairman John Fanning and "his role in writing many of the chairman's decidedly pro-union decisions" raise questions of impartiality, Herbert Markley, a spokesman for the manufacturers group, testified at the confirmation hearing.

Lubbers, who is executive secretary of the NLRB, testified he would be impartial as general counsel, an important position with final authority over which disputes the board will judge and what formal complaints will be filed alleging unfair labor practices.

The general counsel is legally bound to work independently of the NLRB in making those decisions, though the board decides the disputes he brings before it.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., chairman of the Labor Committee which conducted Friday's hearing, gave strong backing to Lubbers saying his NLRB work "should merit a presidential citation," not criticism from opponents of his nomination.

Lubbers, 55, "has a long and distinguished record of non-partisan public service," Williams said. "I intend to vote for you."

Hatch, on the other hand, argued that it would be difficult for Lubbers to be an impartial judge of union-management disputes and that it would be even more difficult for employers in disputes to consider him as such.

Besides noting Lubbers' years as a legal aide to Fanning, Hatch suggested the nominee worked with organized labor for passage of Carter's labor law revision bill, which failed last year.

Lubbers denied he worked for the bill, though he said he answered private congressional questions about technical aspects of it. He also acknowledged meeting with AFL-CIO officials on the same subject and on "essentially procedural aspects of the board's operation."

Lubbers would replace John S. Irving, who has resigned as general counsel.

Sir Humphrey Gilbert set sail on his first trip to America in 1578.

Carter Vows Gas Consumption Curb Without Hurting Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Predicting new gasoline shortages, President Carter says he thinks he can curb consumption, possibly through rationing or a higher gas tax, "without hurting our economy."

Forecasting reduced supplies of petroleum at ever-higher prices, Carter promises a decision "before long" on a new plan to discourage the nation's voracious appetite for gasoline.

The president made the statements at a meeting Thursday with representatives of the Gannett newspaper and broadcasting organization. The White House released a transcript Friday.

Noting that "gasoline is obviously the easiest energy supply to curtail as far as waste is concerned," Carter said this can be done by rationing, a tax hike or unspecified "voluntary action on the part of governors and states."

Reporting that "we are exploring opportunities," Carter promised a decision "before long — I don't know the time schedule yet."

But he expressed confidence, without elaborating, that "we can do it without hurting our economy."

His remarks could be taken as a hint that the president leans toward rationing rather than a federal tax hike of up to 50 cents a gallon — an increase some economists argue would have an unacceptable inflationary impact. Or he could be thinking of rebating the higher tax in a way that might reduce the effect on living costs.

Noting that many oil producing countries talk of reducing rather than increasing oil production, Carter said U.S. gasoline consumption has dropped recently by 7 percent or 8 percent.

In saying larger reductions are needed, Carter offered succor to backers of a higher gas tax by reporting that higher prices at the pump provide twice as much incentive for conservation as officials had been estimating.

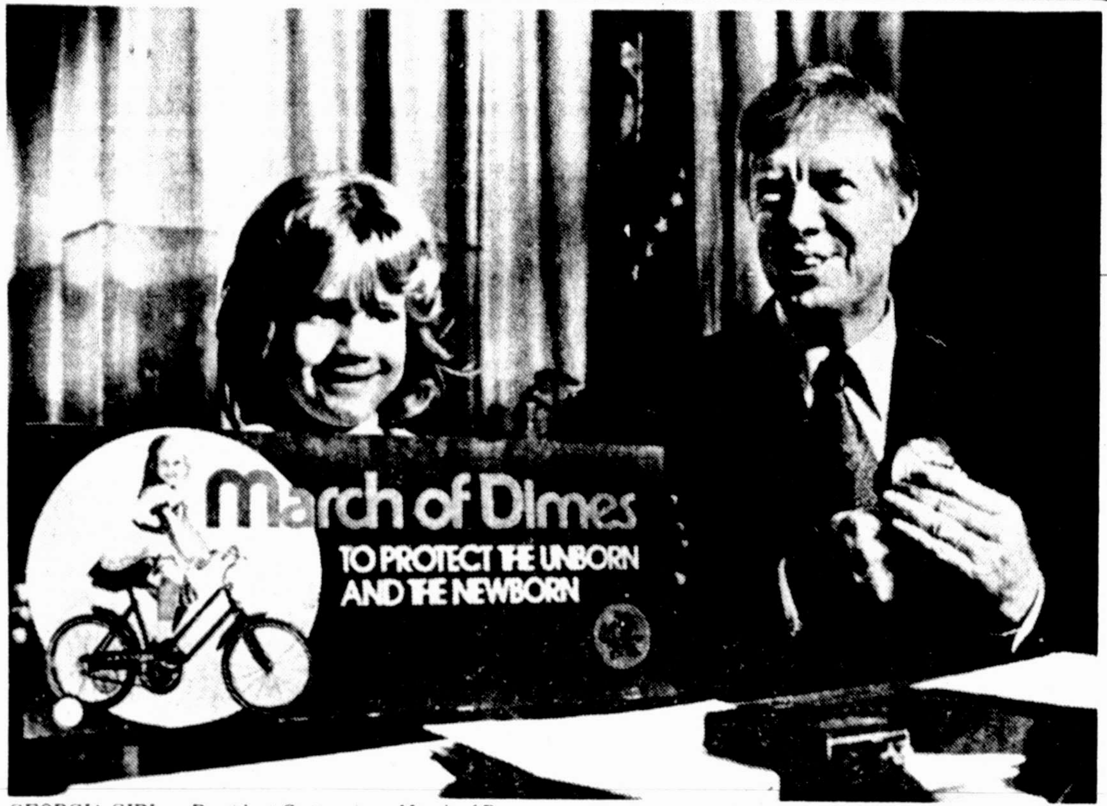
"There was a guess earlier ... that if you increase the price of gasoline 10 percent, you would only have a 1 percent reduction in consumption," he said. "It is probably twice that much, which has been a fairly pleasant surprise ...."

Carter added that factors like "smaller cars, more careful driving," have reduced gasoline consumption nationwide by an additional one mile per gallon.

In summary, Carter said:

"With the shorter and shorter supply in prospect, there is no doubt in my mind that prices will be going up. It would be a mistake for me to mislead the American people ...

"I don't know of any instance where there is an inclination among the Arab producing countries to increase production. So we are going to see shortages, and it's a very serious problem for us in not having an adequate national energy policy."



March of Dimes
TO PROTECT THE UNBORN AND THE NEWBORN

GEORGIA GIRL — President Carter pins a March of Dimes button on his suit as Betsy Burch holds the foundation's 1980 poster, which features her picture, at an Oval Office ceremony Friday. Poster Child Visits With President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six-year-old Betsy Burch, the 1980 March of Dimes poster child, gave President Carter a blue "Give to the March of Dimes" button Friday.

Carter introduced her as "a very beautiful young girl. She's not only lovely but brave."

Betsy, born with a malformed right leg and webbed fingers, has had 14 operations. Her fingers have been separated, extra toes removed from her left foot, and her right foot has been amputated. She wears a prosthesis and walks well.

She was accompanied by her parents, Robert and May, and her sister Sara and brother John. They live in Stone Mountain, Ga.

Carter, who also is from Georgia, said he has known the family for years. The Burches are Baptists, like the president.

Betsy's visit to the White House was part of her nationwide tour for the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. She represents more than a quarter million American children born with physical or mental damage each year.

First Lady Plans Iowa Campaign Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter and two of her daughters-in-law will campaign Thursday in Iowa, the first lady's office announced Friday.

Mrs. Carter will be accompanied by Pat Marshall, wife of Labor Secretary Ray Marshall; daughters-in-law Annette and Judy Carter; Edna Langford, Judy's mother; and Juanelle Edwards, president of the Georgia Federation of Democratic Women.

Mrs. Carter will attend coffees in Marion, Olin, Maquoketa and Clinton while the others attend coffees elsewhere around the state.

The group will meet in Davenport at the end of the day. President Carter's mother, Lillian, also is expected to make the trip.

Man On FBI's 'Most Wanted' List Captured

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — George Alvin Bruton, who was on the FBI's 10 most wanted list, was captured Friday after being wounded while trying to elude an FBI stakeout at his mobile home, agents said.

FBI agent Mickey Drake said Bruton, 37, of Swann, Mo., suffered a shotgun wound in his leg and underwent surgery at a hospital. Drake said agents opened fire after Bruton rammed an FBI vehicle with his pickup truck, then shot at one of the agents.

Only Bruton was injured.

He was wanted in connection with two slayings at Kansas City, Mo., and for allegedly taking hostages and wounding two law enforcement officers in Utah, according to William E. Kell, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas.

The FBI said Bruton and Steven Scott Pannell, a fellow Fort Leavenworth inmate, took hostages at a Davis County, Utah, residence in December 1978. Both men escaped after a gunfight with authorities that left two law enforcement officers wounded, the agency said.

Pannell was captured a few days later, Drake said.

Bruton then returned to Kansas City, Mo., and moved in with a former prison associate there, Michael Walker, and Walker's girlfriend, Drake said. A few months later, Walker was found shot in the head in an abandoned auto.

Walker's girlfriend's body was found March 10, 1979, outside Kansas City, Mo. She apparently had been strangled, Drake said.

Kell also has said Bruton was wanted in connection with the 1965 robbery of a bank in Mountain View, Ark., and the 1975 robbery of a grocery at Brinkley, Ark.

Drake said agents staked out Bruton's mobile home early Friday, then hemmed in Bruton as he started to drive away about noon.

Official Says Texas Badly Treated

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent described Texas on Friday as an "energy-rich island" that is being badly treated by the Northeast.

Nugent's statements before a Senate subcommittee were so critical of the Northeast that Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston commented:

"Your testimony sounds like regionalism."

"You look at Texas natural gas and that's exactly what has happened," said Nugent, a former state representative.

He said national energy policies consist of taking natural gas from Texas at below market prices and requiring Texas to convert to coal as a fuel source.

Historically, he said, one-third of Texas gas has gone out of state, but that figure is expected to rise to 35-37 percent this year.

"The Northeastern power bloc does not want the risks and costs of energy development — they would rather fix the game so they can get our energy at bargain basement prices," Nugent told the Subcommittee on Energy.

He accused the Northeast of "political and economic misuse of Texas and the Southwest."

Asked what he proposed to do about it, Nugent said Texas should try to get the federal government's "attention and ask for equal treatment."

The Railroad Commission regulates oil and gas production in Texas.

Nugent said Texas crude oil production will fall short of one billion barrels in 1979 "and the probabilities that it will ever be back to one billion are not good."

He said at the current rate of production Texas' proven natural gas reserves would be depleted in 7½ years.

One "real bright spot" in production, however, is the fact that Texas should produce more natural gas this year than in 1978 as a result of higher gas prices.

"We have more drilling rigs running than at any time in the past 20 years," said Nugent.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, asked Nugent to respond to the "feeling of many Texans that there is a conspiracy" by the oil and gas industry "to hold back production" until prices go up.

Nugent said in his many speeches to audiences across the state he often asks if anyone has heard stories of wells being capped until prices rise, and almost everyone raises heir hand.

Then, he said, he tells the audience to notify the commission of the location of any such well and he will see to it that production is resumed or the well is capped permanently. "There has yet to be a single well brought to my attention," Nugent said.

Nativity Program Set At Moody Planetarium

One of the Moody Planetarium's most popular shows, "For Unto Us ...," will be shown at 2:30 and 3 p.m. each Saturday and Sunday through Dec. 31 at The Museum of Texas Tech University, with additional programs at 2:30 p.m. weekdays.

The exact year and date of the birth of Jesus of Nazareth is not known, but the possible date and year and the possible "star" the Wise Men of the East saw, heralding the birth that changed the world, is explored in the program.

Cost of the presentation is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students. Preschoolers are not encouraged to attend because of the level of programming.

Whether the Wise Men saw a comet, meteor, nova, supernova or the conjunction of planets in the constellation Pisces (the fish) still mystifies men, even astronomers.

The possibilities of what they might have seen, however, drawn from clues left in recorded history and in astronomers' knowledge of patterns in the sky, can be projected at the planetarium.

Each of these possibilities is seen by visitors, leaving them with enough information to decide for themselves what they believe the Magi saw that led them to Bethlehem, to incur the wrath of King Herod and to worship at the manger of the infant that Christians call the Christ Child.

During the holiday season The Museum, Fourth and Indiana, will be open Dec. 26-30 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. It will be closed Christmas and New Year's days, Dec. 25 and Jan. 1, and open Dec. 24 and 31 from 8:30 a.m. until noon.

House Votes To Cut Assistance Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the Treasury Department's breakdown of how much each congressional district would receive from the $250 million House version of President Carter's targeted fiscal assistance program. The House on Friday tentatively voted to cut the total to $150 million, a move that would reduce the figures in the list by about 40 percent.

The amounts, based on the $250 million version, are given for each state and by congressional district based on the name of the representative for each district. Specific figures for each district under the $150 formula were not available.

Student Loan Program Investigated

AUSTIN (AP) — A little-known mechanism for putting low-interest loans in the hands of college students — especially those from middle-income families — came under legislative scrutiny Friday.

Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, chairman of a House higher education subcommittee, said all he was interested in at this point was "fact-finding" about the four local higher education administrations (HEA) in Texas.

HEAs were authorized by the 1975 Legislature, but Gaston said he didn't know they existed until this year.

Gaston said the HEAs caught his eye when former House Speaker Rayford Price lobbied for changes in a bill providing state administration of federally guaranteed bank loans to Texas students.

Gaston claimed Price "offered six little corrective amendments that would have put the guaranteed student loan program completely in the hands of the four existing HEAs."

HEAs may be created by city councils and expand to other areas with approval of county commissioners. They issue bonds and lend the proceeds through banks to college students from their areas at 7 percent interest.

There now are HEAs in Abilene, Hays and Travis counties, Arlington-Denton and 58 South Texas counties, including Bexar, Nueces and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Mack Adams, director of the Texas College Coordinating Board's student services division, said the Abilene HEA had sold $15 million in bonds, the Central Texas HEA $20 million, the Arlington-Denton HEA $10 million and the South Texas HEA $20 million.

"There are more loans in existence because of the HEAs," Adams said.

Ralph Rushing, an independent financial adviser to the Central Texas and Arlington-Denton HEAs, said plans are being made for HEAs at Houston and Bryan-College Station.

While HEAs receive 7 percent from students and another 6 percent from the federal government on the loans, Rushing said Internal Revenue Service rules allow them no profit. He said about half the interest goes to bondholders and the rest is used to pay expenses — such as collection costs — and to make more loans.

Gaston claimed the South Texas HEA sat on $20 million in bond proceeds for four years, but Rushing said this was impossible.

"The IRS says if you don't have 90 percent of your bond proceeds lent in 2½ years, you run the risk of having your bonds made taxable," he said. "The motive of the HEAs is to get loans made."

Rushing said the only purpose of the HEA lobbying effort was to preserve the integrity of the HEAs and assure they would be able to continue lending to students.

The word "diamond" comes from the ancient Greek word "adamas," meaning unconquerable.

Santa and the Elf Boy

(SYNOPSIS: Charlotte's mother has been placed in a never-ending sleep by the Hangdog Hag. Charlotte tells Esteban her father plans to kill the witch with a powerful gas, even though it will mean killing all fairies. Esteban and Charlotte plan to hid the bottle of gas, but the professor discovers them.)

CHAPTER EIGHT
POOR BLUE BIRD

THE professor led Charlotte and Esteban into the room next to that of his sleeping wife. They could see it was a large and well furnished room. But the windows were barred.

"I will bring your meals and see that you are comfortable," said the professor kindly. "But you cannot get out until Christmas Day when I have destroy the Hangdog Hag."

"But, father!" beggedk Charlotte. "What good will it do? Destroying the Hag will not bring mother back agin.!"

"Perhaps not," said the professor. "But it will keep the Hag from casting a spell over anyone else."

"But-but, sir," protested Esteban. "Must you destroy all Fairyland, too?"

The professor nodded unhappily. "Yes, if that is the only way I can reach the Hag."

Then he went out and bolted the door.

Through the long night, the children huddled together and near morning, they fell into a restless sleep.

When they woke, the sun was streaming into the room. Esteban ran to the windows and pushed at the bars but he could not budge them.

"It's useless," cried Charlotte.

ESTEBAN turned from the window. His eyes sparkled with new hope. "Santa Claus could help us!"

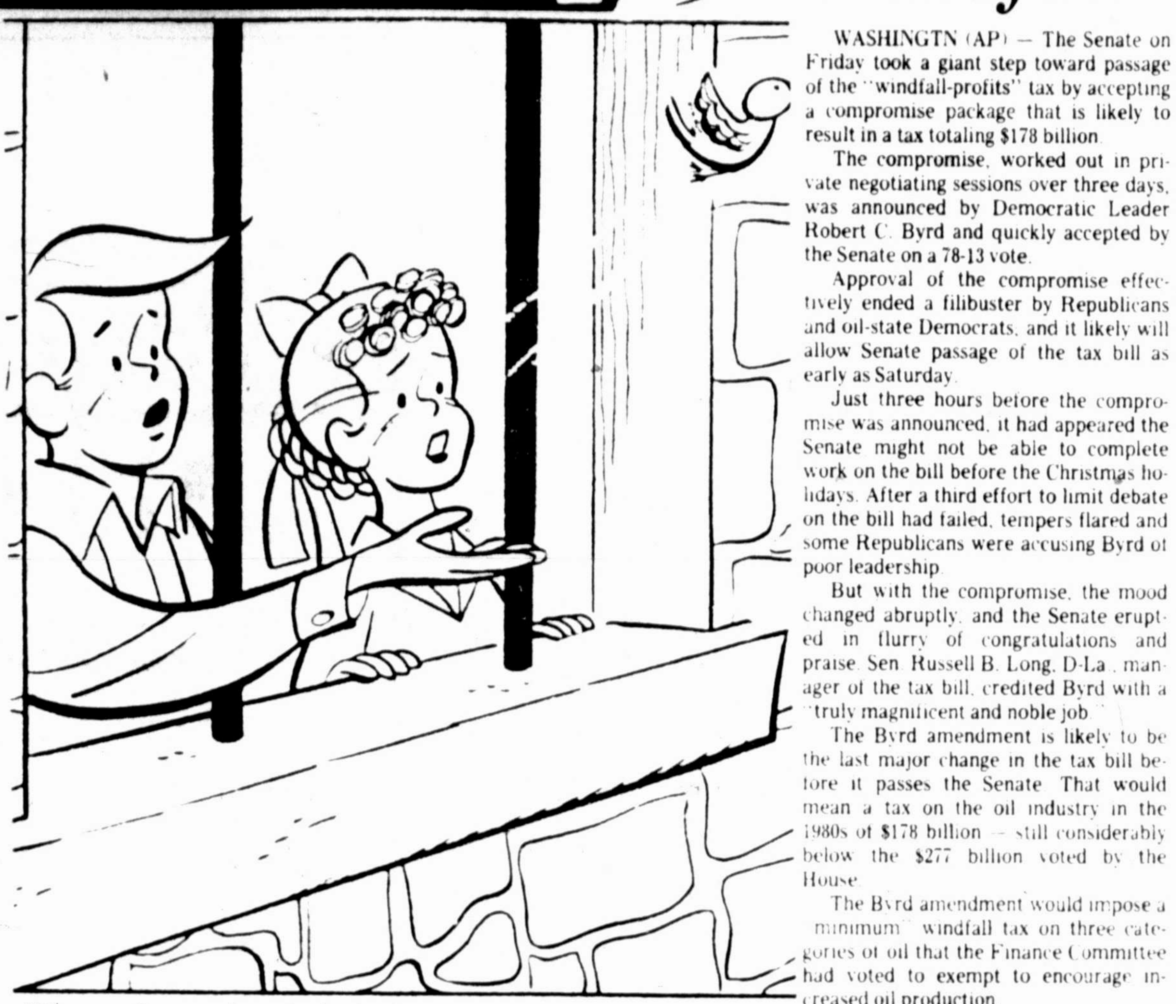
"How would he ever know?" moaned Charlotte.

"My bird!" cried Esteban joyfully. "She'll go to Santa!" He took the little blue bird from his shirt. "Santa himself gave her to me and tole me to send her if I ever needed help." He put his lips close to the bird and whispered excitedly.

"Fly to Santa Land, little blue bird. Quickly! Fly for help!"

He reached his hands through the bars of the window and released the bird. She spread her wings and gently stone wall surround the castle.

Esteban watched eagerly through the bars. "Now everything will be all right!" he cried.



"Fly to Santa Land, little blue bird. Fly for help!"

But even as he spoke an awful thing happened. A great hawk, perched atop the castle, saw the little blue bird and, shrieking fiercely, swept down after her.

The blue bird saw the hawk coming and changed her course. The hawk followed. The blue bird flew faster and faster. So did the hawk.

BUT it was no use. As the children wathed the hawk overtook the blue bird fastened its huge talons around her and brough her back to its nest on top the castle.

Charlotte burst into tears. Esteban put his arm around her. "Don't worry. I'll think of something," he comforted her.

For two days he thought. On the third day he had his plan. He put Charlotte in her bed and piled all the covers on her and told her what she must do. At noon the professor brought in their dinner.

"Oh, sir," said Esteban. "Charlotte has a terrible chill. See, she can't stop shaking."

The professor turned to his daughter. Under the covers she was shaking and quivering with such violence that even the floor beneath the bed creaked and rattled.

"Good heavens!" cried the professor. "I'll get hot water bottles!"

White-faced, he rushed away so quickly that he failed to bolt the door behind him.

"It worked!" cried Esteban to Charlotte. And he ran from the room.

Senate Approves Compromise Windfall-Profits Package

WASHINGTN (AP) — The Senate on Friday took a giant step toward passage of the "windfall-profits" tax by accepting a compromise package that is likely to result in a tax totaling $178 billion.

The compromise, worked out in private negotiating sessions over three days, was announced by Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and quickly accepted by the Senate on a 78-13 vote.

Approval of the compromise effectively ended a filibuster by Republicans and oil-state Democrats, and it likely will allow Senate passage of the tax bill as early as Saturday.

Just three hours before the compromise was announced, it had appeared the Senate might not be able to complete work on the bill before the Christmas holidays. After a third effort to limit debate on the bill had failed, tempers flared and some Republicans were accusing Byrd of poor leadership.

But with the compromise, the mood changed abruptly, and the Senate erupted in flurry of congratulations and praise. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., manager of the tax bill, credited Byrd with a "truly magnificent and noble job."

The Byrd amendment is likely to be the last major change in the tax bill before it passes the Senate. That would mean a tax on the oil industry in the 1980s of $178 billion — still considerably below the $277 billion voted by the House.

The Byrd amendment would impose a "minimum" windfall tax on three categories of oil that the Finance Committee had voted to exempt to encourage increased oil production.

That would result in a 20-percent tax on increased production from "tertiary" recovery methods, such as chemical injection; 20 percent on "heavy" oil, found mostly in California, which is so thick that extra expense is required to pump it, and a 10-percent tax on newly discovered oil, which generally is any from field that wee discovered after 1978.

The tax on the first two categories would apply to future price increases above today's level of $17 per barrel. On newly dicovered oil, the tax would apply to prices above $20.

The Byrd amendment was hammered out after the third effort of the week to break a filibuster had failed by a 56-39 margin — four votes short of the 60 required.

The filibuster had begun after a test vote showed the Senate was likely to accept Byrd's original amendment. Several alternatives had been considered in private negotiations but none could win acceptance.

Republicans had insisted through the negotiations that no tax at all be imposed on newly discovered oil on grounds there could be no windfall since the cost of finding and producing such oil could not be determined. They settled for a 10-percent tax.

The 10-percent tax, said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., would cost producers of newly discovered oil — which would sell for $30 a barrel or more — only about 60 cents a barrel. The tax would be applied on price increases that remain after state severance taxes are paid.

The windfall tax is part of President Carter's plan to reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil by encouraging greater domestic production. His decision to remove federal price controls on U.S. crude oil will cost consumers $1 trillion over the next decade.

The misnamed tax would not apply directly to profits but to price increases above current levels. Like any tax, it would ultimately reduce profits of the oil industry.

The compromise was reached and accepted only after lengthy sessions which disrupted the holiday season. Tempers were wearing thin.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., hinted that private negotiations were no succeedig because each Democratc senator was, in effect, given veto power over any compromise even before GOP members were given a chance to consider it.

When Byrd delayed a roll call so Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., could have time to vote, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, cautioned that such "abuse of Senate procedures" would make it difficult for Republicans to provide the degree of cooperation necessary to keep the Senate operating in the closing days of the session.

And for the second time this week, Byrd found his personal leadership under attack from a Republican. Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., announced that he would oppose Friday's effort to limit debate in protest of Byrd's parliamentary tactics Wednesday night.

Packwood said that action "could be a dangerous trend" for minority's rights in the Senate.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., had assailed Byrd earlier in the week as a "mealy-mouthed" senator with no character who proved that "a wheeler-dealer does not a leader make."

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., responded to Packwood's complaint with praise for Byrd as a leader with concern for the rights of all senators.

Committee Agrees On Synfuels Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a congressional conference committee reached tentative agreement Friday on a $20 billion program for the development of synthetic fuels as an alternative to imported oil.

The vote virtually assures that a major component of President Carter's energy program will be approved by Congress, perhaps before the end of the year.

"This is going to break the logjam," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., a senior member of the Senate Energy Committee.

The Senate has previously voted approval of a$20 billion synthetic fuels measure, while the House had approved a $3 billion measure. As a result, Friday's unanimous vote marks a major breakthrough on one of the most expensive energy programs ever to be considered by Congress.

Twice before the Senate had approved a synthetic fuels program, which then failed by narrow margins to clear the House.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas played a direct role in pulling together divergent views on what should be included in a synthetic fuels bill.

Synthetic fuels are generally defined as oil and gas extracted artificially from coal, oil shale and tar sands.

They have not been developed as a major source of energy so far because of their high risk and the absence of firm guarantees that enough fuel can be produced from an expensive investment, roughly $2 billion a plant.

Environmentalists oppose rapid synthetic fuels development because of potential damage to the atmosphere and threats to the water supply in western states.

The plants require enormous amounts of coal and water.

Under the proposal outlined by Wright, there would be an independent Synthetic Fuels Corporation with authority to use the $20 billion to encourage the energy industry to invest in synthetic fuels over the next four years.

The corporation would offer loans and loan and price guarantees. In some cases, it would pay for the construction of synthetic fuels plants and then lease them out for operation by an energy company.

Wright proposed that the corporation be assigned a goal of producing the equivalent of 500,000 barrels of imported oil daily by 1987 and 2 million barrels by 1992.

After four years, additional, as yet undetermined, amounts of money would be approved by Congress for further synthetic fuels developmet.

The Senate synthetic fuels bill is linked to other proposals providing about $10 billion for various energy conservation measures and a program for the development of gasohol, an organically-produced fuel mixed with gasoline.

If the conservation and gasohol provisions of the legislation can be separated from the bill, there is a slight chance that Congress might complete all work on the synthetic fuels proposal by Christmas.

A similar energy conference committee has also been working on a companion measure that would establish an Energy Mobilization Board, another key Carter energy proposal which would expedite high priority energy projects.

Runaway Home From Adventure

NEW YORK (AP) — An 8-year-old Philadelphia youngster was reunited Friday with the parents he left 2½ weeks ago when he decided he wanted to see the Big Apple.

Joseph Woods was given a gala going-away party by social workers, nurses and medical staff at Harlem Hospital, where he was taken Nov. 27.

A former employee of the hospital had found the youngster at 2 a.m. wandering around the men's room at Pennsylvania Station.

A hospital social worker who recognized Woods' Philadelphia accent later learned that the youngster had taken a train here.

When asked Friday why he ran away from home, the boy said, "Because I wanted to see New York."

Clad in a white hospital shirt, Woods was treated to a cake and given several children's toys before his father and stepmother, Joseph and Marie Wilson, accompanied him back home.

Iran Crisis Puts Japan Between Oil Supplier, Western Ally

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S.-Iran crisis has again brought Japan face to face with the realities of oil politics, with one of its main oil suppliers on one side and its most important Western ally on the other.

Conflicting statements by politicians and businessmen in Asia's most industrialized nation reflect confusion and embarrassment to the Nov. 4 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the holding of American hostages there.

Oil companies in Japan, which is 99 percent dependent on imports for its oil needs, increased their purchases of Iranian oil after the takeover. Under pressure from the United States this week, the Japanese government ordered the purchase of Iranian oil cut to pre-takeover levels and firmly condemned the hostage-taking.

"We truly are afraid of a total cutoff of oil from Iran if we cooperate with the United States," said Toshio Akatsu, director of the prestigious Petroleum Association of Japan.

"On the other hand, we don't want bad relations with the United States — it puts us in a very delicate position. Our problem is oil, we cannot survive without it," he said.

Iranian oil accounts for about 11 percent, or 450,000 barrels a day, of Japan's petroleum needs. Experts in New York said Japan has oil stockpiles adequate to last about three months.

This is not the first time that Japan's reaction to an international crisis has surprised or even appalled its friends.

During the 1973 Arab oil embargo of some Israeli allies, panicky Japanese housewives staged a run on kerosene and battered down supermarket doors to buy toilet paper. The government moved with what some Western nations thought was startling haste to recognize the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians.

In 1977, Japan drew criticism when it paid a huge ransom and traded a handful of imprisoned Japanese Red Army members — linked to Palestinian terrorists — for hostages taken in an airplane hijacking. The official explanation was that "human life comes first."

The Japanese fear the U.S.-Iran crisis could result in another "oiru shokku" — oil shock — like the one in 1974 that plunged the economy into recession and sent consumer prices soaring. Faced with gloomy predictions over future oil supplies, the government already has revised its annual growth rates downward — from 7 percent to tree.

"If we don't get oil, our GNP (Gross National Product) collapses. Really, it's that simple," said a government economics expert who requested that his name not be used.

Other Japanese feel concern over the precedent set by the hostage-taking outweighs the economic danger.

"The Japanese people really are concerned for the hostages, but the government thinks only about economics and trade. That is very irresponsible," said Yoshiharu Fujiya, finance chief of Nippon Oil Co. Ltd., one of Japan's biggest oil companies.

"I am really afraid the United States will get mad at us. They could stop importing our products and that would be suicide for Japan," said Fujiya.

Under heavy U.S. pressure, Japanese leaders this week toughened their stand and publicly condemned the hostage-taking.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance criticized Japan after several major Japanese companies rushed to purchase Iranian oil on the spot market, despite President Carter's embargo on American purchases of Iranian oil. Spot market oil prices run to $40, nearly double the ceiling set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for contracted sales.

Japanese Official Apologizes For Oil Buys

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan's vice minister of international trade and industry apologized Friday for the actions of Japanese firms that paid inflated prices for Iranian oil being boycotted by the United States.

"It is a matter of regret that the Japanese companies bought excessively," Naohiro Amaya told a news conference here. He said the Japanese firms have been told to act "prudently" in regard to buying Iranian oil on the world market.

President Carter shut off US. import of Iranian oil following the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and had hoped to use the boycott as an economic weapon in the effort to free 50 American hostages held in Iran since Nov. 4.

However, the oil that normally would have been shipped to the United States was purchased at sharply higher prices by Japanese companies, drawing criticism from U.S. officials.

A spokesman for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance accused Japan earlier in the week of helping the Iranians avoid the economic consequences of the U.S. boycott by quickly paying inflated prices for oil that would have been sent to the United States.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said Wednesday that he was "bitterly disappointed" with Japan's actions and that "for them to be consorting with our enemy doesn't strike me as a friendly act."

The high prices paid to Iran by the Japanese has been blamed for driving up the cost of petroleum on the world market.

Amaya, in Washington for talks with Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and other officials, voiced regret for the actions of the Japanese oil firms and said the companies have been told they "must behave themselves" in the future.

It was announced in Tokyo earlier that oil purchases from Iran will now be limited to what the Japanese were buying prior to to the takeover of the U.S. Embassy.

Amaya said that in the rush to buy the oil boycotted by the United States, Japanese firms purchased about 20 million barrels of Iranian oil at an average price of $40 a barrel. Some, he said, was bought at prices perhaps as high as $44. This was at a time when there was an official ceiling of $23.50 a barrel agreed to by the Organization of Petroleum Exportng Countries.

Amay said Japnese companies have been told to act "prudently" and not to take the lead in pushing up prices on the spot market.

Bill Would Prohibit Offshore Well Annexation

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate subcommittee — citing a Port Arthur case — asked the General Land Office on Friday to write legislation to prohibit coastal cities from annexing offshore wells simply to take in additional property taxes.

The legislation would be proposed for the 1981 Legislature.

Chief Clerk Jack Giberson of the land office testified Port Arthur annexed five offshore wells Monday that would result in an extra $618,000 in city taxes next year and $1 million a year in subsequent years.

Giberson said the land office had asked Attorney General Mark White to file suit against Port Arthur.

Giberson said the land office feared such annexations could affect the Permanent School Fund by reducing the amount oil and gas companies might bid for offshore state leases.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said, "We'll let Sen. (Carl) Parker (D-Port Arthur) come and tell us why" Port Arthur annexed the wells at a future subcommittee hearing.

Giberson said Port Arthur annexed a 600-foot strip that stretched 10½ miles to sea to gain taxing authority over the five wells.

"They are merely taking the land in for the purpose of taxation," said Giberson. "Assuming someone else would be so greedy to do that ... this could be precedent-setting."

Giberson said land office studies show there are 17 wells off the Gulf Coast from Corpus Christi, 13 from Port Aransas, 26 from Galveston, 18 from Freeport and 12 from Port O'Connor. Most are natural gas wells, he said.

"Why wouldn't residents of those cities say, 'My mayor and city council should protect me,'" stated Giberson.

Giberson said the land office asked the attorney general to file suit before Jan. 1 to keep the five wells off the 1980 tax rolls. The Senate Subcommittee on Energy voted to write a letter in support of the land office's request.

"You think this could have serious effect on tax dollars for education?" asked subcommittee chairman, Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

"I don't think there's any question," replied Giberson.

Also, he said, there would be nothing to prevent the coastal cities from charging location fees or orderng additional drilling restrictions, which could force companies "to walk off and leave production they normally would recover."

Asked if cities had adequate protection from environmental hazards such as offshore oil spills, Giberson replied:

"I don't think we need any more regulations."

Shah's Spleen Enlarged; Condition 'Not Critical'

Physicians Institute Non-Surgical Therapy

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Two physicians from New York's Cornell Medical Center examined Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi at Lackland Air Force Base Friday and announced the deposed monarch's spleen was enlarged but his condition was "not critical."

"The shah's doctors examined him today and have returned to New York," shah spokesman Robert Armao said in a statement, ending a nine-day blackout of news on the shah's condition.

"They reported his condition as not critical. His spleen is enlarged and they have instituted a non-surgical course of therapy. They will make further evaluations from time to time."

Armao's short pronouncement was his first since Dec. 5 and contradicted the shah's attorney, Fletcher Yarbrough, who stated in a court brief at Fort Worth that doctors believed "further surgery may be required."

"May Have Worsened"

Fletcher's brief, filed to support his contention that the shah was not physically able to give a sworn statement in a Bell Helicopter lawsuit, stated that "within the past few days medical personnel attending the shah have come to believe that his condition may have worsened."

Fort Worth District Judge Albert White planned to review the medical report and decide within five days whether the shah would be required to give a deposition in the lawsuit.

The 60-year-old shah has been recuperating from cancer and gallstone surgery at Lackland since Dec. 2. In his only other statement since arriving in San Antonio, Armao told a Dec. 5 news conference the shah had a "good prognosis."

Doctors Fly In

Dr. E.W. Hibard Williams, chief of medicine at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, and Dr. Benjamin Kean, emeritus clinical professor of medicine at the hospital, flew to San Antonio to perform the medical examination and then left.

Until Armao's statement was issued about 4:15 p.m., State Department and Air Force officials, in keeping with a news blackout imposed when reporters were escorted off the base the afternoon the shah arrived, had refused to confirm or deny that the examination was taking place.

There was no indication any regular bulletins on the shah's recovery would be forthcoming.

"I really don't have anything new to give you about the shah," State Department spokesman Thomas Reston in Washington, D.C. "I really don't have anything new to offer on the shah's medical condition."

Shah Walks Dogs

The shah, whom Armao previously said lost 20 pounds during his gallstone and cancer surgery in New York, has been seen walking one of two dogs he brought with him to the base.

Meantime, the shah, in an excerpt from his memoirs published Friday in London, says he hopes "the masters of inquisitorial power" who now rule his country "at last understand" they serve not God but "the forces of evil."

"Iran's apparent leaders," the shah wrote, "are, despite their mistakes and the crimes they have had committed, men of faith who say they act in the name of God.

"I hope they at last understand that their revolution is not to the glory of God but serves the forces of evil."

Defends Policies

The second installment of the shah's "Response to History," published in Britain's "Now!" magazine, vigorously defended his achievements and policies but lamented what Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his mullahs have done to Iran.

"I offered to the greatest number of citizens the power to go up in the world," the shah wrote.

But he said he pushed too hard, too fast.

"To be honest, I must admit that my own principal fault — and contribution to the present unhappy state of my country — was without doubt to try to force march an ancient people toward independence, health, culture, freedom, the comforts of life."

"Those who 'govern' in Tehran since my departure ... the masters of inquisitorial power," have "plunged the kingdom to the bottom of a slough of despondency," the shah said.

The shah bitterly condemned the regime of "The Personage" or "the old man," Khomeini, whom he only once mentions by name. Khomeini was "nothing more than a puppet of those who, from the outside, had condemned my regime," the shah said.

The final excerpt from "the shah's own story" begins at the end — with his parting from Iran to what seems likely to be permanent exile.

"I wanted to believe that my departure would calm tempers, soothe hatreds, disarm the killers," he wrote.

His defense of his actions and policies included the secret police organization SAVAK, "the favorite target of the international press."

He said SAVAK was guilty of "some slight 'irregularities,'" but of people arrested for political reasons, "I swear that they were treated correctly, that they were never molested. Nobody can cite the name of one political figure liquidated by SAVAK."

Newspapers claim his personal fortune is "immense," but "the reality is slightly different," the shah said. In 1978 he "decided to bequeath to it (the Pahlavi Foundation) all that remained of my personal fortune in Iran," and "I never made the slightest personal profit out of the Pahlavi Foundation.

Now, he said, Iran is in "economic chaos," the middle classes "have been practically ruined" and "little by little, the Communists are taking over the unions and workers' and peasants' organizations."

"All that remains now is for the Communists to reap the fruits of disenchantment and anger, and take over the revolution for their own profit.

"That is the future which awaits my country — if God does not intervene and provide a remedy."

Iran Charges Attack By Iraq; Claim Termed As 'Fabricated'

cuse the Iraqis of supporting anti-Khomeini Arab Iranians in Khuzestan and rebellious Iranian Kurds in Kurdistan.

There was speculation in Abadan that the reported attack may have been provoked by the arrest last week of 16 Iraqi teachers at a Khoramshahr school where Iranian authorities said they found an arms cache.

The majority of Iraqis are Shiite Moslems — like almost all Iranians — but the Baath Socialist Party leadership in Iraq belongs to the rival Moslem sect, the Sunnis. The Iranian revolutionaries accuse the Baghdad government of suppressing the Shiites. Khomeini himself, after a long exile in Iraq, was expelled two years ago under a deal worked out between the shah and the Iraqis.

In national broadcasts throughout the day Friday, Khomeini insisted that the United States had been "turned down" by its allies in its request for an economic embargo against Iran.

He said "all Carter's futile attempts" are aimed at being re-elected. The hostages "are not even being considered" by Carter, he said.

Sadegh told The Associated Press: "If the world wants to climb on Iran's back for the sake of 50 people who are not, in my view, in any danger, the whole thing is completely out of proportion."

In an unexplained move Friday, the Khomeini regime recalled Iran's ambassadors from France, West Germany and Scandinavian countries.

It is believed the Iranians may permit a team of Western ambassadors to visit the hostages within the next few days.

A spokeswoman for the Moslem militants holding the embassy said Friday they will pass along Christmas cards mailed to the hostages, and had already begun doing so. But when informed that U.S. postal authorities report a buildup of 100,000 pieces of mail, she said: "Well, I think that would be too much."

An Iranian journalist who was detained for the past 16 days in the embassy said he doubts the hostages will be freed by Christmas. The Iranian, Ali Reza Jahan-Shahi, was detained and questioned about possible connections with the embassy.

The militants "are well prepared, physically speaking ... they are willing for a long, long, long siege of the compound," he said in an interview with Mutual Radio.

Some 100 Iranians who volunteered to go to Lebanon to help Palestinians fight against Israel ended their sit-in at the Foreign Ministry and returned to the Tehran airport. They were recruited by the eccentric son of one of Iran's leading ayatollahs, but Lebanon said it would not accept them and Iran refused to provide them with planes.

Suspect Gets Immunity To Gain Toxin's Return

purposes, were taken in the burglary. However, A&L employees were not aware the equipment had been taken until Wednesday.

Several other items, including a typewriter and other office equipment, also were reported stolen.

Assistant District Attorney Rick Howell said immunity was granted so that the toxin, a potentially serious health hazard, could be recovered.

"We couldn't wait," Howell said. "If a child or anyone else got hold of it (the aflatoxin), they'd be dead."

Police had feared the burglar might sell the equipment, which would remain highly toxic even after the blender and tank had been washed thoroughly.

The equipment reportedly contained aflatoxin in concentrations 50,000 times as potent as that deemed hazardous by the government.

Howell said the suspect, whom he declined to name, has several other unspecified charges pending against him.

A&L manager Art Carnrick told police Wednesday of the potential health danger after discovering the blender and tank had been taken in the burglary.

Hostages Ruling Due From World Court

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — The International Court of Justice will rule today on the U.S. demand for the release of the 50 American hostages held in Iran, a court official said Friday.

Diplomatic sources said they had little doubt the court would decide in favor of the U.S. application. Sources were less confident, however, that the decision would be a complete endorsement of the American position.

A court official said a copy of the judgment would be sent immediately to the U.N. Security Council, but he said the court has no powers to enforce its decisions.

Staff at the Peace Palace, headquarters of the United Nations court, would work late into the night Friday to prepare for the session scheduled for noon CST today, the official said.

The judgment follows an American application Nov. 29 for provisional measures of protection to secure the release of the 50 American hostages in Tehran.

At a public hearing in the Grand Hall of the Peace Palace Monday, U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti in person appealed for the release of the hostages from their "barbaric captivity."

Civiletti accused Iran of violating every principle of international justice and called on the 15 judges to act as quickly as possible to safeguard the lives of the hostages.

Although the Iranian government declined to appoint a court agent and an ad hoc judge with full voting rights as its right, it sent a letter read in court rejecting the U.S. demands.

The Iranian government letter said the embassy siege was just a "minor" aspect of a greater dispute. It accused the U.S. government of crimes against the Iranian people over a period of 25 years.

Coming within five days of the public hearing, the judgment today will set a new record for speed for the International Court, an official said. The quickest decision until now was one made six days after the public hearing.

Observers expect the judgment to be read by court president Sir Humphrey Waldock, 75, of Britain. Traditionally, they say, the actual decision comes at the end of a lengthy summary of the arguments presented and considered.

Churchill Grandson Linked To Scandal

LONDON (AP) — In Britain's latest political scandal, a grandson of the late Sir Winston Churchill was identified today by his lawyers as the member of Parliament linked to a case involving a love affair and possible arms sales.

Winston Churchill, 39-year-old grandson of the war leader, was named in a statement by his attorneys as the "Mr. X" mentioned in a trial at Old Baily court this week. In the trial, three Scotland Yard detectives were convicted of attempting to blackmail Soraya Khashoggi, English-born wife of Saudi millionaire Adnan Khashoggi whose business deals reportedly include international arms trading.

Vance Optimistic About Sanctions Against Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance returned from Western Europe Friday to report to President Carter that U.S. allies in Europe are likely to line up behind a plan to impose economic sanctions against Iran.

"No decisions have yet been taken," Vance said in a brief statement at Andrews Air Force Base. But officials aboard his plane made it evident that the United States had virtually decided to seek international economic action to try to force the release of 50 Americn hostages in Tehran.

"In the days ahead," Vance said, "decisions will be taken."

Vance later briefed Carter at the White House on his talks.

Meanwhile, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the State Department detects a milder, more hopeful tone in the rhetoric and actions of Iran's revolutionary leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and his followers and an encouraging turn away from a decision to try some or all of the hostages on spy charges.

Christopher, commenting after a meeting with congressional leaders at the Capitol, said that Vance's discussions with European leaders resulted in "a high degree of unity on the Iran issue."

"Now is coming a time to turn that collective determination into concrete steps," Christopher said.

The administration is likely to make its move after the International Court of Justice in The Netherlands rules on a U.S. petition for the immediate release of the Americans held captive since Nov. 4.

That decision is expected in The Hague today.

Defiance by the Khomeini regime would set in motion moves by the United States to gain final Soviet approval of sanctions through the U.N. Security Council, according to administration officials who asked not to be identified. These could include a total cutoff of world trade with Iran, but it is not clear whether all the countries around the world would observe a boycott.

Early American colonists had a do-it-yourself way of making change. If they needed a quarter, they simply broke two bits off of a dollar coin, which was made of soft silver. For 50 cents, four bits. Some people still use the names today, National Geographic World magazine says.

Haven Plan Readied For Iranian Students

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday Texas colleges and universities have prepared plans to provide "safe havens" for Iranian students, and predicted there will be tremendous dislocations in the American economy if the Iranian crisis halts oil production in that country.

Clements said there was a 50-50 chance the political instability in Iran would bring oil production to a halt.

"The crippling effect that could come out of the Iranian hostage situation could be very, very bad and could cause enormous dislocations within the economy," Clements told reporters at a luncheon meeting of the journalism society, Sigma Delta Chi.

Clements revealed state colleges and universities have prepared contingency plans to protect Iranian students in the event of violence, but said he does not expect such "safe havens" will be necessary.

"I understand the various instutitions across the state are addressing this problem, working through their administrations and with their staffs and students to identify the names and phone numbers of the Iranians, and are thinking in terms of establishing a safe haven in case there are any problems," the governor said. "I would hope the private institutions would do the same thing. It makes sense.

"This is just precautionary," he said. "I don't think we're going to have any problem. I think the thing is well in hand."

Clements said contingency plans are being made to accomodate the students in a central location if protection is necessary.

"It's just so much easier to look after these people where they'd be in one place," the governor said.

Clements said the procedures for protecting Iranian students at Texas campuses were discussed at a meeting he held with presidents of 14 state colleges and universities a week ago.

"We decided that this would be the proper and prudent thing to do," Clements said.

Clements said he informed San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell that the Department of Public Safety and National Guard would help local authorities if they were unable to deal with disturbances stemming from the shah's stay.

Clements said the crisis in Iran could have far worse impact than the loss of 750,000 barrels of oil a day that the United States previously purchased from that country.

"Instead of 750,000 barrels of oil, we're talking about plus or minus 4 million barrels of oil a day out of the international market," Clements said.

On other issues at his regular weekly news conference, Clements said he:

—Asked legal advisers if there was anything he could do about busing ordered to desegragate Austin schools.

"I am opposed to the principle of busing. But I don't think there's anything that I could do about it. I have no authority, I am told."

—Opposes a compromise in Congress that would allow Southwest Airlines to make interstate flights from Dallas' Love Field.

"I do not think the federal government has any business whatsoever telling the Dallas-Fort Worth area how they should run their airport," Clements said.

U.S. Probe Of Iranians Reinstated

they had asked more than 3,000 of the students for additional information to determine their status. Under the government program, the students were required to show that they had valid visas and to produce evidence that they were full time students.

In its appeal of the District Court ruling, the government called Mrs. Green's decision "a most serious and totally unwarranted intrusion by the judiciary into the constitutional authority of the political branches of the government."

Lawyers for Iranian students challenging the deportation program had asked the appellate court to uphold Mrs. Green's decision, arguing that merely granting a stay of her order would result in "utter confusion and further administrative morass."

Carter's order for immigration officials to begin the crackdown on Iranians in this country illegally was one of his first responses to the seizure of the U.S. embassy.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher had argued that suspending the deportation program "would impair the president's flexibility in his conduct of this nation's foreign relations and in his handling of the crisis in Iran."

Jurors' Error Voids Award

ABILENE (AP) — Misreading a jury's verdict, a judge announced in his courtroom Friday that a jury had awarded $720,000 in damages to the wives and children of three men killed here five years ago while repairing an oil pipeline.

Minutes later, the judge said he had made a mistake. The jury had awarded damages, but the absence of a finding that West Texas Gulf Pipeline Co. was negligent will bar recovery of the money, District Judge J. Neil Daniel said.

When the judge corrected himself and polled the jurors to determine their intent, attorney Warren Burnett of Odessa turned to the stunned wives and turned his thumb down.

"We get nothing, absolutely nothing," Burnett said solemnly.

The wives and children began to cry as Daniel dismissed the jurors.

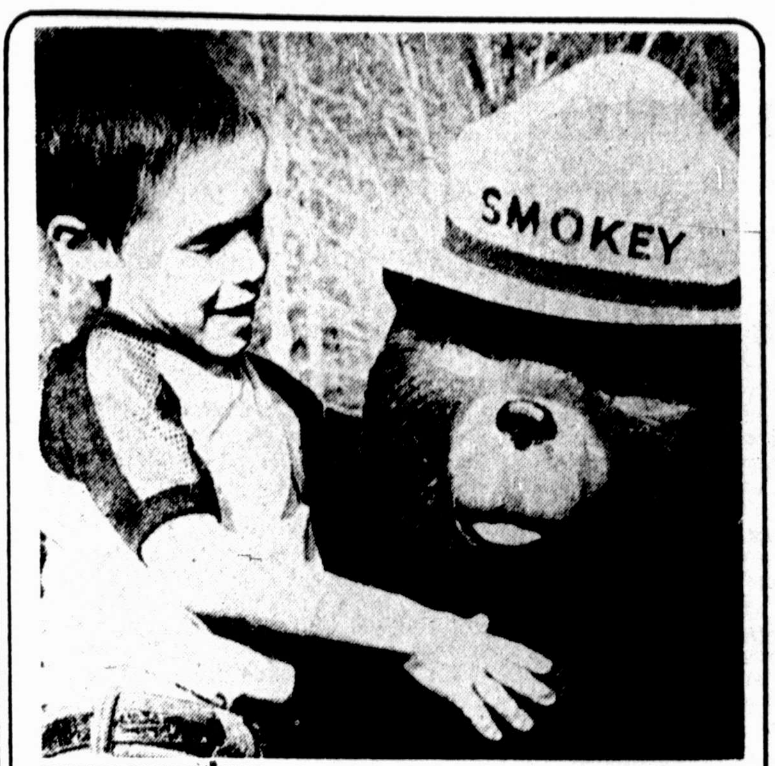
After deliberating for more than five hours, the jury decided unanimously Friday that the pipeline company should not be held responsible for the deaths of the men who, along with three other men, were overcome by hydrogen sulfide gas on Dec. 1, 1974.

"It's not like they are destitute," said defense attorney Bill Hankinson. "It was a fair verdict. The jury followed the law."

All families involved are collecting the maximum Workman's Compensation benefits of between $100,000 and $150,000 per family.

The wives and children of Tommy Raines, 58, of Sweetwater; Don White, 56, of Roscoe; and Robert Joe Redman, 31, of Sweetwater filed suit, seeking $7.5 million in damages.

CAROLERS TRAPPED — A group of carolers trapped in Lubbock's late autumn snowstorm was frigidly rigid at Santaland Friday morning as A-J photographer Dennis Copeland called for them to hold their pose. The display at the east edge of the civic center complex is a popular yuletide attraction each year.



DREAM COMES TRUE — Seven-year-old Jose Cardenas of Houston, stricken with terminal liver cancer, had his dream of meeting Smokey Bear come true recently after relatives in Asheville raised money for his trip and Forest Service officials arranged a meeting at Brevard Ranger Station. (AP Laserphoto)

Dream Comes True For Cancer Victim

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Jose Cardenas, stricken with terminal liver cancer, realized a dream-come-true recently when he got to meet and play with Smokey the Bear and Woodsy Owl.

The 7-year-old Houston boy met the pair thanks to the work of his relatives who live near Asheville and the cooperation of the U.S. Forest Service.

Relatives of Jose's mother raised money to finance an airplane flight for Jose, his mother Juanita Ray Cardenas, sister Christina and brother David from Houston to Asheville. They contacted neigbors and solicited contributions in downtown stores.

Jose's father, Jose Luis Cardenas, is a truck driver in Houston.

Seeing Smokey was arranged by his aunt, Alice Fulp of Asheville, an employee of the U.S. Forest Service, who made Smokey and Woodsy legend to the boy with her stories about working with them over the years.

When Jose arrived in Asheville, the Forest Service arranged for the two to meet him at the Brevard Ranger Station.

Smokey, actually Danny Owen in costume, carried Jose around the station and into the woods where Woodsy, also a man in costume, showed up.

The boy spent about an hour with the two and told his mother, "It was just like a dream, when you hit yourself to see if you are really awake."

His mother said: "You always think this happens to other people. But when it happens to you, you're really thankful to the people that help," she said.

Five Iranians Continue Hunger Strike

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Sheriff Rudy Garza said Friday five Iranians on a hunger strike had eaten nothing since they were forcibly dragged from the steps of City Hall at noon Wednesday.

"I can tell you they have not eaten anything," the sheriff said. "The only thing they have had is tea."

Jalil Rezal, Ali-Seyed FanaiKhayat, Farshad Rafizadeh, Mohsen Towlait and Fazshid Furooz-Andeh were taken into custody in the third day of a hunger strike and sit-in on the steps of City Hall.

They were protesting the presence of Shah Mohammed Rez Pahlavi at Lackland Air Force base and the refusal of the city to issue the Iranian Muslin Organization parade permits to demonstrate.

Garza said physicians who visit the jail nightly were examining the five Iranians who vowed to keep up the hunger strike, "as long as we survive."

Asked whether the protesters would be force-fed if they became ill, Garza said: "that would be up to the doctor."

Other members of the organization reported the five students were becoming weak on the fifth day of the hunger strike.

They refused to post $1,500 bonds each on charges of obstructing a passageway and announced through attorney Louis Linden they wanted to stay in jail and fast to prove to the world their hunger strike was legitimate. Linden said the five took strong exception to remarks by a radio commentator that they were eating food on the sly during the hunger strike.

The Netherlands covers about 13,10 square miles and is still growing. The Dutch add roughly 12 square miles to their nation every year as they keep reclaiming land from the sea, the National Geographic Society says.

Iraq Feared To Be Next Nation To Detonate

By TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK (NEA) — While much of the world's attention has been focused on the welter of outrageous events in Iran these past weeks, increasingly concerned United Nations officials have also been looking anxiously across that nation's border.

TOM TIEDE

They say Iraq may be the next to detonate in the area.

And detonate is the appropriate word. If Western observers here are at all correct, Iraq is spending tremendous amounts of time and treasure to build an atomic bomb.

No one believes the state is ready for testing right now. But not even Iraq itself denies it has nuclear potential. One British delegate thinks Iraqi scientists could put a warhead together in as little as 12 to 18 months. That, he warns, would mean trouble is only beginning in the Middle East.

Moreover, the trouble could take any direction. Western authorities describe Moslem Iraq as one of the most paranoid societies in the world. It might use the bomb against Zionists, but it also has grudges against capitalists, Communists, Arab royalists — and most of its neighbors.

The neighbors include Iran, to be sure. And here is where the immediate worry lies. Iraq and Iran are ancient adversaries, and the 700-mile border they share has long been rife with hit-and-run fighting. War between the oil-rich domains has been continuously predicted throughout the latter 1900s.

Now the Iraqis may be gearing up for a big strike.

If they are, and if they do, the consequences could be woeful. Diplomats doubt the war would stop at the Persian Gulf.

Wherever it stopped, U.N. authorities believe a war between Iraq and Iran would likely begin in the town of Tuwaita, outside of Baghdad. That's where the Iraqi nuclear facility is located. Iraqi envoys say it's a "small installation." Israeli intelligence sources describe it in larger terms.

The plant was set up in the late 1960s with the cooperation of the Soviet Union. The Russians provided a small research reactor (two megawatts), and Iraqi nuclear power was born. The Israelis believe the only thing that keeps Iraq from a bomb now is the absence of a source of sufficient fuel.

Earlier this year it appeared as if that source would be France. The French decided some time ago to sell Iraq two more reactors and 70 kilograms of weapons-grade uranium. But the deal was delayed when Israel complained that 70 kilos of enriched uranium could be used to make 10 to 15 explosives.

The Israelis should know, by the way. They are reportedly the first nation to use small reactors (also from France) to build an A-bomb stockpile. They fuel their system with stolen uranium, apparently, and may now have the world's sixth largest arsenal (behind the U.S., U.S.S.R., Britain, China and France).

Given their own experience, then, the Israelis are particularly sensitive about other nuclear activity in the region. Last April Israeli agents allegedly blew up the French plant preparing uranium for shipment to Baghdad. That bit of vandalism was supposed to have crippled Iraq's bomb schedule.

But France isn't the only atomic supply house in the world. Iraq continues to buy $50 million worth of nuclear equipment from Italy, for instance. The Italians insist the equipment is strictly for research purposes. U.N. pessimists believe it will be used for plutonium separation.

And how will Iraq get the fuel for plutonium separation? France may still provide some. More likely Baghdad will follow the Israeli example. In November of 1968 the Israelis are said to have hijacked a freighter loaded with 200 tons of Belgium uranium.

Or Iraq may simply decide to purchase the uranium. As a nation that rests on one of the globe's largest oil reserves, it can afford any price. Baghdad could hire an army of terrorists to steal plutonium, for one thing; or it might pay nuclear workers large rewards to smuggle the stuff from repositories.

Smuggling, actually, is an ever more attractive possibility. Last year, for example, 20 pounds of enriched uranium disappeared from U.S. vaults. The government says it's still not accounted for. Some U.N. observers believe the material was pilfered by workers, and is in Israel or elsewhere today.

Conceivably, the 20 pounds may be in Iraq. And that amount would go a long way toward the creation of a first bomb. If the bomb were built, of course, Iraq would be subject to sanctions from most nuclear supply nations; the nonproliferation treaty would prevent future atomic trade with Baghdad.

Still, Iraq would have at least one bomb. And emotionally that's the same as a stockpile. Presumably, as a Western diplomat here says it, no logical nation would go to war with one bomb, but, he adds, who says the Arab states use logic?

NEXT NATION TO DETONATE? — United Nations officials have expressed increasing concern over the amounts of time and money being spent on producing an atomic bomb in Iraq. A British delegate thinks Iraqi scientists could put together such a bomb in 12 to 18 months. (NEA Photo)

Singer Banging Hole In Musical Wall

ON HER WAY — Martha Davis, singer with the Los Angeles-based rock group The Motels, relaxes with feathered friend in her Encino, Cal., home recently. (AP Laser photo)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martha Davis is so new to the big-time money commanded by a hot rock group — even one whose first album has barely reached the record store racks — that she's still awaiting deliveries of re-upholstered furniture to her home in suburban Encino.

Her two daughters, aged 10 and 13, are still having trouble convincing their radio-listening friends that the sultry looking crooner spearheading The Motels — the hot new act in question — is their mother. And a visit from a reporter is still a fairly exciting event, to be celebrated by glasses of wine and crackers.

In fact, the 28-year-old Miss Davis and her brood from a two-year marriage at age 15 are obviously still on that very special high that only comes off a fast trip to, if not yet the top, at least a darn good jumping-off point.

Acclaimed as one of the best new bands to emerge from the currently fashionable Los Angeles club scene, The Motels have already won fans in tours all over this country and in Europe as well. And Miss Davis, the group's tall, statuesque songwriter, lead singer and rhythm guitarist, has been singled out as one of the most promising female talents around.

"My approach to the music business has always been, continue to bang the head against the wall — soon there will be a hole," says Miss Davis, a green-eyed brunette with a ready laugh and an admirable ability to poke fun at her own ups and downs.

It's probably easier to laugh today than it was less than a year ago when there was no home in Encino, no record to hear on the radio and, except for Miss Davis, no Motels either.

There were some ex-Motels, former members of a band she had joined in her hometown of Berkeley. That group had moved to Los Angeles in 1974 "to make our fame and fortune," Miss Davis recalls.

"We were going to do it in about two weeks," she adds, glancing at her watch with a rueful laugh, "and it's like, now, six years later."

The original Motels struggled gamely to make inroads in the Los Angeles scene, at one point attracting 500 paying customers to a "Radio Free Hollywood" concert they organized with two other local bands. But the record companies couldn't have cared less.

"Everybody was complaining about the Eagles at that point, but nobody was doing anything about it," cracks Miss Davis — who then quickly admits that she herself is an Eagles fan.

"The old Motels were basically too punk for the music industry, that's basically what the diagnosis was," she adds. "I don't think we were ready, and I don't think I was ready."

The group finally called it quits and Miss Davis began looking for new blood. The final lineup — lead guitarist Jeff Jourard, bassist Michael Goodroe, keyboard-sax player Martin Life Jourard and drummer Brian Glascock — was assembled in the summer of 1978, but their first real club date was last January.

The timing was perfect: the local news media had just discovered the Los Angeles rock renaissance and record companies were ready to jump in. Almost the next day, The Motels started getting offers.

"It's like the stock market or anything else," all it takes is somebody saying, 'Gee, there's a real scene happening in L.A.,'" Miss Davis says. "It's sort of like a feeding frenzy, a lot of sharks."

"I think that this is the year of the female in music," she adds. "There've been a lot of women in rock 'n' roll and they've all been very good, but what they've done is try to be like a man, or like their favorite guitar player, rather

College Officials To Use Noise To Remove Blackbirds

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — It will be a bloodless war against the blackbirds, say Mississippi State University officials. But it certainly won't be noiseless.

Next Monday evening, the university and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service embark on a campaign to shoo five to ten million blackbirds from a 25-acre patch of brush and trees north of men's dormitories.

Dr. John Longest, director of the student health center, says only noise will be used to scare away the birds. Longest said timed, repeated harassment with amplified sound and special fireworks would be used. A shotgun shell that explodes with a loud report away after firing, and a bird bomb that explodes 50 feet away after being shot out of a modified pistol will be used.

Most Mississippi State students will have left school on Christmas break when the campaign begins.

"To be effective, the noise harassment method should be done during cold weather and — because the noise level is so intense — at a time when the student population is reduced," Longest said.

Longest said the din from the birds when they leave in the morning to forage for food and return in the evening is just one reason for wanting them out. He said the stench of bird dropping and the health threat make it "desirable and, indeed, necessary that this roosting area be disrupted."

South should really play dummy's ace of clubs at trick one. After that start the rest of the play would be simple. South would lose one club, one diamond and one heart and that would be all she wrote.

However, Victor Mollo was writing about defense and in order for there to be some real defensive skill involved, he needed to have South duck at trick one.

So East is in with the king of clubs. It now becomes necessary for East to decide that his partner's lead was not a singleton. He comes to that conclusion for no reason at all except that he felt that South with three clubs to the queen would have raised clubs rather than rebid his queen-high heart suit.

Now East leads back his eight of diamonds. South plays the deuce and it is up to West to make the winning defensive play, which is to play his 10 spot. He should know that East has led from a doubleton. That eight can't be third or fourth best. The only higher diamond that West doesn't see is the queen.

It can't be a singleton. That would give South five diamonds and he surely would have rebid two diamonds instead of two hearts.

Now, when a heart is led East grabs his ace, leads his last diamond and gets in the killing ruff.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:

This little tip just might save a life in a situation where every second counts, so answer this question:

In an emergency, how easy would it be for an ambulance or doctor to spot your house number?

You know where it is — but is it prominent enough for others to see it pronto?

A good tip: Paint your house number with white paint on the curb in front of your house so it can be seen easily, especially at night.

Also, if you are waiting for an emergency vehicle, it's a good idea to have someone stand outside or to turn on an outside light or leave the front door open. Do something that calls attention to your house. This is especially important in an apartment complex or housing development.

Hope you never need this hint but just in case... — Love, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Stuffing down into jackets or sleeping bags can make a terrible mess and you're apt to lose some of that expensive filling too.

I find it helps to work in the bathroom, turning on the shower until the room's steamy. This eliminates the static charge buildup caused by dry air.

This trick works for those pesky little plastic foam balls I use to fill a beanbag chair and would also be effective when working with shredded foam — anything that's tough to stuff because it's attracted to everything in sight. — Marj Ottenberg

DEAR HELOISE:

I burned food in an enamel pan and tried a number of things to remove it — but nothing worked. Finally I poured chlorine bleach and water (one-half cup bleach to a quart of water) and let it soak overnight. The next morning the burned substance was loose and came off easily. — Arkie

DEAR HELOISE:

My son is learning to crawl and in this cold weather it's been a problem keeping his legs warm. While trying to decide whether to mend or throw out my husband's holey socks, I came up with the solution!

I cut two socks off at the heel and slipped the rest of the socks all the way up each of Baby's legs. The elastic tops are snug enough to stay on but don't bind. If the socks are too long and show under Baby's coveralls, you can cut them to fit! — Linda H.

An ingenious idea, Linda, but why put the the socks under Baby's coveralls? Slip them over each coverall leg and save rub-a-dub scrubbing on wash day because a baby who's learning to crawl picks up more dust than a mop. — Hugs, Heloise

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I knew my daughter was having sex with her boyfriend but I did not take your advice and put her on the pill, because I felt it would be condoning her actions. Instead, I told her to quit fooling around.

Now she is pregnant and I am heartsick. "Eve" wants a big church wedding. My head says no, but I hate to deny her this. She wants it so badly. I'd like to suggest abortion, but I know she would never agree. Her boyfriend is a high school drop-out and a bum.

If "Eve" has this baby, we'll either have to pay for it or let the county welfare pay, since they have no money. Then we'll probably have to support them. I don't know which way to turn. Please advise — A Sick-At-Heart Mother

Dear Mother: You give me no clue as to "Eve's" age, if her boyfriend is employed, and whether or not you've discussed the problem with his parents. Could or would they help?

Talk this over with your clergyman or go to the Family Service Assn. for some guidance. You've given me too little to go on.

Dear Ann Landers: I have read several letters in your column from sons and daughters who have suffered guilt and remorse because they neglected their elderly parents. Here is the other side.

I'm a woman who spent my life caring for my father and mother. Father passed away eight years ago. Mother died recently. She was in her late 80s. I never married. It wasn't possible. I felt my first responsibility was to my parents.

I have no friends because I was too involved with parental responsibilities to meet people and cultivate friendships.

I've talked with a minister about my loneliness. He praised self-sacrifice — said I was a wonderful daughter. I spoke with my doctor. He said I have the normal physical problems for a person my age. (Precious little comfort from either one of them.)

May I be Ann Landers for a moment? Here's a message for all children who have aging parents: Find a middle road. Don't forget that you, too, are a person who deserves consideration. I am over 50 and filled with rage because I now know that life has passed me by. — Alone And Sorry

Dear Alone: Don't look back. Look ahead. It may not be too late. Call the Chamber of Commerce and find out what goes on in your city. I also recommend adult night school classes, church and political groups. Good luck to you, dear. Your name is legion.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter will be married in a few months, and we are having problems over the reception.

My husband and I are simple people of modest means. We want to have something nice but not lavish. Frankly, we can't afford to go overboard.

Our daughter's future in-laws are party people. They are pressing for an elegant affair and have offered to split the cost.

My husband refuses to allow this. Our daughter changes her mind every day. Please advise. We are going crazy. — Schroom Lake, N.Y.

Dear N.Y.: Tell your daughter and her future in-laws that the wedding reception is going to be in keeping with your financial status, and the decision is final. End of hassle.

CURLY HAIR

Curly hair develops from the angle of the follicle, which lies beneath the scalp. A curved follicle produces a curly hair, while a straight follicle that's perpendicular to the scalp results in a straight hair. This follicle formation cannot be altered; the amount of curl can be changed only after hair has grown out from the scalp.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a hypoglycemia patient and have been for 11 years. I was having blackouts, so went to the Scripps Clinic to find out the cause. I was told that my pancreas was overactive. I was given a diet low in carbohydrates, which I have followed religiously. At times I feel a bit dizzy and faint. I would like to have your booklet on this subject. — Mrs. E.P.S.

There are two basic forms of hypoglycemia (low blood sugar). One kind is due to an insulin-producing tumor (almost always benign) of the pancreas.

As you know, the function of insulin is to lower blood sugar. A diabetic lacks insulin, hence has high blood sugar. Your pancreas makes too much, so you have low blood sugar.

A second form of hypoglycemia is called "reactive." It is not due to a pancreatic tumor, but to one or a combination of several factors prevent the proper utilization of carbohydrates. I have not space to go into the various causes, but they are discussed in a listing of 10 separate causes of low blood sugar (beginning on Pg. 8) in the booklet you asked for.

The low carbohydrate diet, which emphasizes protein food in several small daily feedings, helps control the blood sugar problem. Carbohydrates have the effect of stimulating insulin production, so the less you get the less insulin is produced and the better chance of your blood sugar remaining normal. This diet is also discussed in the material you asked for. Other readers may request a copy by mailing 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. You are lucky. It would be difficult to find a better medical facility than the Scripps Clinic.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I notice that from time to time you list addresses of organizations where folks can write for information about various diseases. I am interested in Friedreich's ataxia, which my child has. Can you help? — B.F.

This unfortunate nervous system disorder afflicts children. Not too much is known about it. The Muscular Dystrophy Association, Inc. will supply you with the information you want. The address is 810 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: What would cause a green stool? — R.E.

It can result from eating spinach and other green vegetables. The body finds little use for the coloring in foods so tends to eliminate it. Calomel, an old remedy for constipation, produces green stool, and some oral antibiotics can cause the greeness. That's about all I can come up with. So far as I know it doesn't indicate an underlying illness.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I wrote before but got no answer. I have a rectal bulge, according to my doctor. It presses against my vagina. I am 75. Do you know anything about this? How common is this and what can be done for it? — M.F.

This is called a rectocele (pronounced RECK-toe-ceel), a bulging of a portion of the rectum into the vagina, which are neighbor structures.

The problem is that there is only a thin tissue separating these structures, and when this tissue loses its firmness, the rectum bulges through it. If we could redesign the female anatomy this area would be a top priority.

If the rectocele interferes with bowel elimination, the bulge can be corrected by surgery. Otherwise, you should avoid heavy lifting, straining at stool, or coughing spells.

I have no statistics, but rectocele is fairly common among women who have had several children.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently, a dear family friend passed away. He had cancer of the prostate gland. Many of his clothes were given to us, a large family. Although clean, I tossed them into a washer. I feel uneasy, and it could be psychological. Can cancer be passed on this way? — Mrs. J.G.D.

There is no possibility of transmitting cancer through clothing.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Job Market Looks Good For College Graduates

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Despite gloomy economic predictions, a national survey concludes that a strong job market will await most college graduates next year, particularly engineers.

The survey says that overall, 16 percent more college graduates with bachelor's degrees and 4 percent more with master's degrees will be hired in 1980 than in 1979.

"These findings can be interpreted in a positive way — as a definite upturn — in the job market for new college graduates," said Frank S. Endicott, author of Northwestern University's 34th annual Endicott Report and retired director of the university's office of placement.

The greatest demand will be for graduates with majors in engineering, accounting, business administration, sales and computer science, according to the survey of 170 of the nation's larger corporations. Job prospects for liberal arts majors, however, will be somewhat dimmer.

Average starting salaries overall will increase by 6 percent to 8 percent.

The report also indicates that the participating firms have brighter hopes for the coming year than may have been expected from widespread projections of a national recession.

Only 23 percent of the corporations believe the general business outlook for 1980 is worse than the present year. More than one-third — 39 percent — think it will be better, and 38 percent believe it will be about the same.

Here are some breakdowns by academic background for graduates with bachelors degrees:

•Engineering jobs up 29 percent and starting salaries up 9 percent, averaging $20,136 a year.

•Computer science jobs up 37 percent, starting salaries up 7 percent, averaging $17,712 a year.

•Sales and marketing jobs up 15 percent, starting salaries up 6 percent, averaging $15,936 a year.

•Liberal arts down 3 percent, starting salaries up about 5 percent, avaraging [illegible].

The report also shows that some employers believe starting salaries for graduates with master's degrees in some areas are outpacing the worth of the individual on the job.

Many firms, Endicott said, prefer to hire bachelor-degree graduates, put them in a training program and encourage those who qualify to attend evening classes toward advanced degrees.

Another problem facing corporations, Endicott said, is the turnover of college graduates on the job. He said that 30 percent of bachelor-level graduates hired from the 1976 class have left their companies. More rapid advancement or higher salaries are the greatest lure away from the firms which originally hire graduates, he said.

Official Expresses Housing Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-ranking official of the Roman Catholic Church has written President Carter expressing "deep concern" over the possibility that federally assisted housing will be given a lower priority in the fiscal 1981 budget.

"Our national policy must be one of expanding low-income housing programs, not cutting them back even further," Bishop Thomas C. Kelly, general secretary of the United States Catholic Conference, said in the letter to Carter.

"The housing needs of our nation are becoming increasingly severe," the bishop said.

FILMETER

A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

'Horseman' Termed 'Loving Production'

ELECTRIC HORSEMAN, THE (PG) — Robert Redford, Jane Fonda. (Romantic drama) A texbook case of much ado about nothing, this is a lavish and loving production, ninely acted, artistically photographed, with great stunts — all tacked on to a flimsy, wispy story. A famous cowboy befriends a horse — and a female TV report (Jane plays it again) tags along. GRADE: B

ONION FIELD, THE (R) — James Woods, John Savage. (Drama) The true story of two hoodlums and two cops. One is killed in the inevitable confrontation, and we learn what effect that has on the three survivors. Well acted, but slow. It is based on Joseph Wambaugh's book, which was plodding, in the movie, the plod thickens. GRADE: B

APOCALYPSE NOW (R) — Martin Sheen, Marlon Brando, Robert Duvall. (Drama) This is Francis Coppola's long-awaited and very expensive epic — and worth the wait and the cost. It is a study of the madness of war, and Coppola has created a procession of insane images of Vietnam and that terrible war to make his point. It is long and flawed, but must be rated an American classic. GRADE: A-plus

BREAKING AWAY (PG) — Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, Jackie Earle Haley. (Romantic comedy) The American film is the kind of thing the French do so well: warm, funny, a little romantic, tied up just right. It's set in Bloomington, Ind., a college town, the summer the local boys finally realize they don't mind being "townies." Briefly, it's the "Rocky" of bicycle racing — but so much better. A fine job by these four young actors. GRADE: A

HEAD OVER HEELS (PG) — John Heard, Mary Beth Hurt. (Comedy-Drama) On-again, off-again romance between a confused young woman and a flakey young man. Film is uneven but the performance are a constant delight. Heard is one again brilliant. GRADE: B

METEOR (PG) — Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Brian Keith. (Adventure) This is the latest disaster movie, and the problem now is a huge chunk of meteor, zooming towards us and there's no way to stop it. But wait! Maybe the Russian and American scientists, working together, can as well as some pretty dumb ones. GRADE: B

QUADROPHENIA (R) — Phil Daniels, Leslie Ash. (Drama) Teen alienation in mid-'60s British mod garb, but a good treatment of an old and troubling theme. Taking its cue from a powerful concept and score by the Who, the film portrays a youth wresting with his sense of identity. Cast and crew of relative unknown turn in a movie which is exciting, turbulent, yet touching. GRADE: A-minus.

ROSE, THE (R) — Bette Midler, Alan Bates, Frederic Forrest. (Drama with music) This story of the tragic decline of a Janis Joplin-like singer is ugly and unpleasant, but tremendously effective and moving. Midler's performance is truly outstanding, and you'll find yourself aching with her, as booze, drugs and men destroy her. Caution: Guter language. GRADE: A

RUNNER STUMBLES, THE (PG) — Dick Van Dyke, Kathleen Quinlan, Maureen Stapleton. (Drama) Producer-director Stanley Kramer always aims high, and does so again with this film version of a play a bout a priest, a nun, a romance (after a fashion) and a murder. The troubl is it sounds more exciting than it is, and the film is very slow going. The runner may stumble, but the film falls down. GRADE: B-minus

10 (R) Julie Andrews, Dudley Moore, Bo Derek. (Romantic comedy) You've heard about guys who rate girls on a scale of one to 10? Well, this is about a girl who is a 10, and how that assessment mightily affects a songwriter, as well as the girl and her new bridegroom. Nothing weighty here, just good clean fun — and some of it isn't so clean. GRADE: B-plus

YANKS (R) — Richard Gere, Vanessa Redgrave, William Devane, Lisa Eichorn. (Drama) Story of American GIs stationed in a small English village in 1942 and of the local women they become involved with. Slow, richly textured and splendid to look at, but the romances ultimately sink subject matter, language. GRADE: B

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

Junkie Leaves Dope Behind For Law

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — When Arcangelo M. Tuminelli was 16, a friend offered him some cough syrup. He tried it "partly because I was curious, and partly because I didn't like the alternative — alcohol."

He eventually found himself drinking up to six bottles of the addictive syrup a day, lost interest in classes, and was expelled from school. Then he moved on to heroin. In the next two years, he was arrested five times on drug-related charges and in 1961 entered the Maryland House of Correction to start a five-year sentence.

Today, 14 years after leaving prison, he's a lawyer.

Last month, the Maryland Court of Appeals granted Tuminelli's application for the state bar, calling him fully rehabilitated. Two judges objected, complaining his prison record made him unfit.

Tuminelli says he has nothing to brag about. "I grew up a lot in prison, and what I've been able to accomplish since then was through my own determination," he says. "I realized there was no future in using drugs."

When he was released after 44 months, he picked up his heroin habit again. Then Dr. Emmutt Davis, who formed the Man Alive drug program in Baltimore, got Tuminelli on a rehabilitation program that gradually replaced heroin wih methadone, then replaced methadone with nothing.

Hollywood Film Star Denies Nepotism

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cries of nepotism often arise when Trish Van Devere is cast in a movie with her husband, Gorge C. Scott, with whom she has starred in a half-dozen projects.

The same hue is heard when Jill Ireland appears in a film opposite her husband, Charles Bronson, a not uncommon occurence.

Wile there is no nepotism involved in the strictest sense of the word, a similar accusation is fixed against Clint Eastwood when Sondra Locke, his blonde girl friend, appears in his movies.

It is almost a Hollywood tradition that acting husbands and wives work together in a movie at least once or twice, e.g., Natalie Wood and Robert Wagner in "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof."

Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton starred in several boxoffice bombs, including "The V.I.P.s," "The Comedians" and "Taming of the Shrew" after they met and fell in love in "Cleopatra."

Woody Allen loved and costarred with Diane Keaton in his movies before Warren Beatty fell in love with Diane, with whom he is currently starring in "Reds." Beatty made several films with lady love Julie Christie before Diane entered his life.

One must assume there is something especially cozy about working closely with someone with whom you are inamored. At least, the arrangement may bring a sense of credibility to intimate love scenes.

In some instances of nepotism male and female stars are of equal brilliance or at least celebrity. Probably the best example: Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt who rarely worked with anyone else.

But in cases where one member of the twosome is a superstar and the other is something less, the accusation of nepotism carries a ring of resentment or, failing that, contempt.

"Individuals react differently to seeing a husband and wife in a scene together. I think it all depends on what people bring to the theater with them. Most audiences forget the husband-wife relationship once they become immersed in the film." Trish Van Devere

There is an imbalance in the fame and popularity of Van Devere and Scott although not necessarily a disparity in talent. Scott won an Oscar for "Patton" and is generally considered one of Hollywood's finest actors.

Van Devere, Actors Studio trained, is a gifted performer who has never been in a boxoffice success even though she has appeared with her huband — usually a box-office magnet — in six major projects in the past eight years.

"People comment adversely when George and I work together," Trish said dispassionately. "But some people like to see us as a team.

"Indivduals react differently to seeing a husband and wife in a scene together. I think it all depends on what people bring to the theater with them. Most audiences forget the husbandwife relationship once they become immersed in the film.

"George and I don't necessarily look for scripts that contain good parts for both of us. It depends on the nature of the piece and what's appropriate, or whether our relationship adds any particular value to the project.

"I will say it is easy for us professionally to work together. But doing several movies together was as coincidental as the fact that I'm doing some things without George now."

Trish recently completed a pair of occult movies, "The Hearse" with Joseph Cotten and "The Changeling" with her husband.

Trish met and fell in love with Scott on locations in Spain for "The Last Run" in 1971. They were married a year and a half later.

Scott and Van Devere subsequently starred in "Day of the Dolphin," "The Savage is Loose," "Movie Movie," the TV Film "Beauty and the Beast" and "Sly Fox" on Broadway.

On her own, Van Devere distinguished herself in "Where's Poppa," and "One Is A Lonely Number" on film and in the TV movies "Sharon: Portrait of a Mistress" and last month in "The Voyage of the Mayflower."

Trish is more disturbed about not having a hit movie to her credit than accusations of nepotism.

"It's really hard to do as many pictures as I've done without being in a boxoffice success," she said, "although 'Where's Poppa' has become something of a cult film.

"There's a certain irony in the fact that an actress' career can be helped more by doing a mediocre job in a boxoffice hit than doing a terrific job in something that is never seen.

"A hit wouldn't make me a better actress, that's for sure. But a hit would give me more access to the sort of roles I'd like to play, increasing the number of offers and providing me with a greater choice.

"Both 'The Hearse' and 'The Changeling' are due for release next March. If either one is a hit, I'll have a choice of a dozen other pictures instead of, say, four choices.

"I've formed my own production company and have a couple of projects ready to go — if I can get the financing. That's one way to increase your choices."

Trish did not say if either script includes a role for husband George.

Authorities Using Hypnosis Find Bones Of Missing Man

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Using hypnosis to focus a daughter's memories of her dead father, Hoke County authorities say they have uncovered human bones near the family home where the man disappeared more than 35 years ago.

Sheriff David Barrington declined to discuss details, but he confirmed that his department had reopened the case of Edward Leon Cameron, who vanished from his home the night before Easter in 1944.

Barrington said digging at the family homesite began Wednesday and continued Thursday after a search warrant was served on Winnie McNeil Cameron, wife of the missing man who still lives in the house.

"Human bones were found in an area where the outhouse was once lcated," Barrington said. The bones were taken to the state medical examiner's office for analysis.

Sources told the News and Observer of Raleigh that Annie Blue Perry, Cameron's daughter, recently told of having visions of her father's body. After discussions with law-enforcement officials, she traveled from her home in Orlando, Fla., to Hoke County.

Mrs. Perry, who was 10 years old when her father disappeared, had dim recollections of seeing Cameron buried beneath the family privy, the sources said.

The Fayetteville Observer reported Mrs. Perry remembered seeing her father's body floating in the water beneath the outdoor privy. The painful memories led her to seek psychiatric help, and the doctor advised her to consult law officials, the sources said.

Part of the investigation involved hypnotizing Mrs. Perry to help focus her memories. State Sen. Joe B. Raynor of Fayetteville, a practitioner of hypnosis, said he had hypnotized Mrs. Perry as part of the investigation. He declined discuss details of the session.

Mrs. Perry accompanied law-enforcement officers to her family's home west of Raeford to guide them this week, the newspaper reported.

Records show Cameron, then 34, disappeared from his home on April 8, 1944. He was a member of the Works Projects Administration in Hoke County when he disappeared.

The state Bureau of Investigation is assisting in the investigation, said Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. He declined to discuss details of the case.

Schlitz Brewing Company Slips, May Sell Out

MILWAUKEE (AP) — If you think gusto isn't quite the same as it was 20 years ago, shake hands with the people at the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., who make the beer that made the slogan famous.

In the last two decades, Schlitz has slipped from the nation's largest brewer to an uncertain No. 3. It not only has discarded some of its breweries but has put out signals that it now is willing to merge with another company, or even sell out entirely to a buyer at the right price.

The Oct. 18 announcement by chief executive officer Daniel McKeithan Jr. that Schlitz was shopping for a buyer meant that, under Securities and Exchange Commission rules, public reports on progress of the rehabilitation project undertaken by a new management team two years ago have ended.

But critics, including former board member David Uihlein, whose family holds about 68 percent of the company's 29 million shares outstanding, say the McKeithan squad, although armed with impressive credentials in the beverage industry, has not awakened the slumbering company. McKeithan has remained silent in the face of that censure.

Schlitz reported a loss of $5.9 million on sales of $818.3 million during the first nine months of this year, compared to a profit of $13.2 million and sales of $857.8 million during the same period a year ago. The company blamed the reversal on declining sales volume, which fell 20.4 percent in the third quarter from 5.4 million barrels of beer to 4.3 million.

The SEC-imposed reticence deprives business community forecasters of a clear answer to the big question: Can Schlitz regain its beer sales?

Schlitz gradually has retrenched its business structure and points to taste surveys that indicate its new brew formula is beginning to attract consumers again.

"We think of this as a continuing change or adjustment," Vice President John Rourke said. "There are gradations to all of this."

The immediate question is whether Schlitz can recapture that share of a highly competitive market that has been absorbed by the top two brewers — Anheuser-Busch Inc. of St. Louis and Miller of Milwaukee — and the eastward and Texas thrust of Coors of Denver.

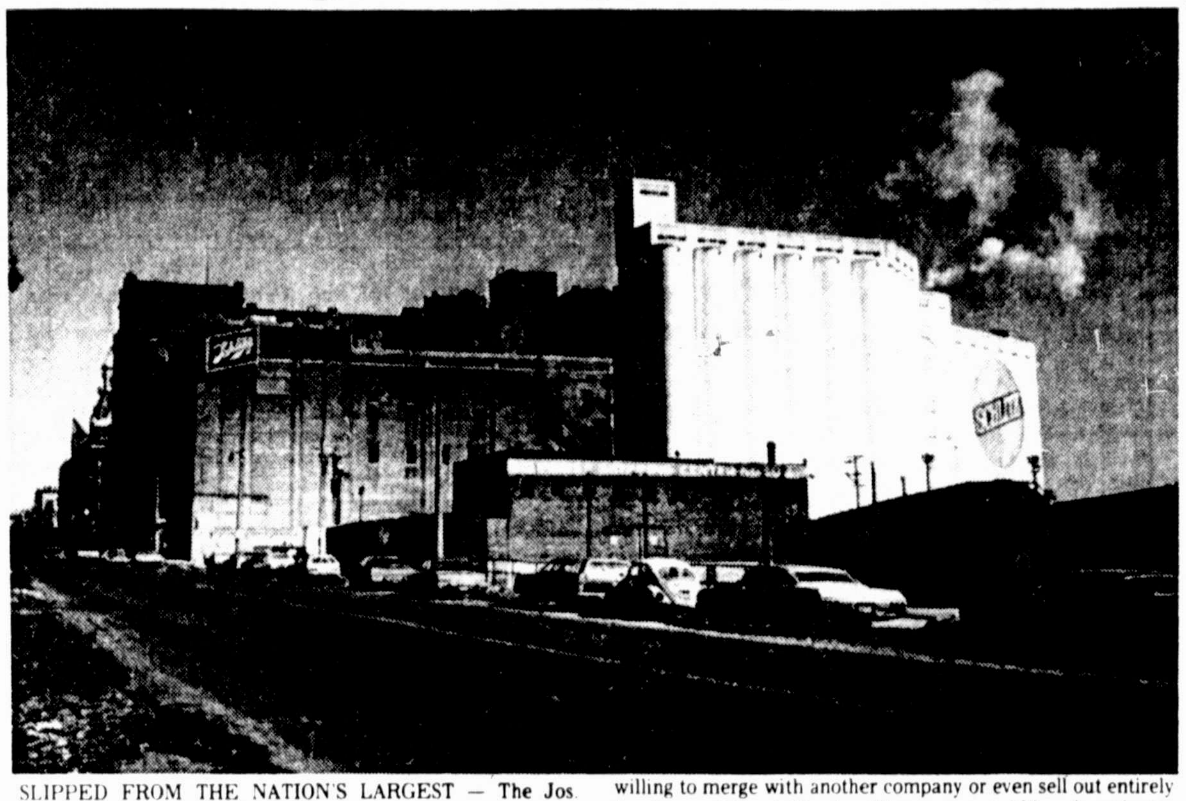
In 1953, a year after the top seven companies represented 34.7 of the nation's beer sales, Anheuser-Busch succeeded Schlitz as No. 1 while big brewers accelerated their plant expansions, advertising and mergers in a war for dominance.

By 1978, Anheuser-Busch had a 25.1 percent share of sales. Miller — having overtaken Schlitz in 1977 — had 17.7 percent, Schlitz 11.7, Pabst 9.3, Coors 7.6 and Heileman of La Crosse, Wisc. 4.3.

Schlitz had expanded too, but not as rapidly. In 1976 it reached a record shipment of 24.1 million barrels, reported an earnings gain for a 15th consecutive year and rose to No. 220 among the Fortune 500 list of industrial sales leaders.

It has now faded to 274th on the 1978 list.

The restructuring includes abandoning in May the Honolulu brewery that was primarily a producer of Primo beer, and announcing Oct. 30 it planned to sell its three-year-old Syracuse, N.Y., brewery to Anheuser-Busch.



SLIPPED FROM THE NATION'S LARGEST — The Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. has slipped from the nation's largest brewer to an uncertain No. 3 and has put out signals that it now is willing to merge with another company or even sell out entirely to a buyer at the right price. The company's Milwaukee plant is pictured. (AP Laserphoto)

"Would it bother me to sell to a foreigner? I would sell to anybody that's sincere."

That would leave Schlitz with an annual brewing capacity of 25 million barrels. But sales slipped to only 22.1 million barrels in 1978, and 1979 sales may slump to 17 million. Schlitz has shipped about 8.3 percent less beer in the first nine months than for the same period last year.

There has even been talk of selling the Memphis or Winston-Salem breweries, leaving only the breweries in Milwaukee, Tampa, Fla., Van Nuys, Calif., and Longview, Texas, to handle the four main brands: Schlitz, Schlitz Light, Schlitz Malt Liquor and Old Milwaukee.

One of the problems inherited by the McKeithan team after the 1976 death of Robert Uihlein, fourth-generation leader of the family brewery, was a sentiment that the taste of the flagship Schlitz variety had been eroded by profit-minded refinement of the brewing process.

The company said its brewing cycle remains reduced from five weeks to an economically efficient three weeks, bypassing some filtering, aging and double-brewing techniques.

But it said it has restored to Schlitz a more traditional proportion of barley malt, the ingredient that gives beer its body and color. Less-expensive corn and rice figure in the lighter beer formulas.

The Schlitz reformulation is counted on to restore consumer preference for the old name that made Milwaukee famous.

Meanwhile, Erlanger, a new breed, has graduated from its test-market incubator. The company says Erlanger is now available in 16 percent of the nation's market.

Executive vice presient Allin W. Proudfoot, a former Coca-Cola marketing expert whom McKeithan installed as Schlitz marketing chief in 1978, turned over adverising to the Jm Walter Thompson agency with a remark that commercials would stress Schlitz tradition.

In August, 1978, "Schlitz makes it great" became an advertising battle cry, followed by the current and punchy "Go for it."

But Uihlein, and Proudfoot too, have said advertising is not the sole key to success.

Instead of what he called functional management, Proudfoot factored a marketing blueprint to give the separate brands individual sales attention, hoping to bolster morale in a previously discouraged sales corps.

Marketing handicaps had begun proliferating in 1973. First came a government crackdown on the industry's use of kickbacks and other unsavory incentives to win distributors' allegiance to a specific brand.

Schlitz eventually was indicted on 747 counts of alleged payoffs, leading to a 1978 settlement with the government and $761,000 in fines.

As profits became pinched, many distributors switched their dealings to other brewers.

Even advertising seemed to misfire. Schlitz tabled the "gusto" theme, tried another and later went back to "gusto." The public did not respond satisfactorily.

Gremlins remained lively in 1979. Some Schlitz brands, particuarly Old Milwaukee, received unpleasantly poor ratings in reports that several U.S. and European beers had nitrosamines, a suspected villain in laboratory studies of cancer causes.

The misfortune haunted Schlitz stock values, causing understandable pain among the stockholding Uihleins.

The ogre of recession has been eating at stock prices throughout the brewing industry, with Schlitz doing worse than several others.

In the final four weeks of October, while all stocks were down more than 8 percent, Anheuser-Busch was reported off 14.3 percent, Pabst 16.5, Schaefer 18.9, Coors 9 and Heileman 10.6. In the first seven days of November, Schlitz was off 19.8.

If Uihlein's disenchantment with the performance of the McKeithan team is common among the family, why have directors not received more pressure to install other managers?

Business obervers suggest that the steady-hand strategies of McKeithan, formerly married to an Uihlein, are generally approved among the banking influences who oversee a large proportion of Uihlein stock held in trust.

Sale of the Syracuse brewery, while admittedly giving Anheuser-Busch more business punch in the competitive East, could ease Schlitz' depreciation charges and interest charges while improving cash flow.

A healthier fiscal condition could make Schlitz more appealing in the merger or buyer market, where unconfirmed suitors are reported to have included Japanese brewer Kirin, Swiss holding company Sandos, Grand Metropolitan Ltd., America's Reynolds Industries, Coca-Cola and Ligget & Myers.

Uihlein himself said he would try to persuade the family "if we get a reasonable offer."

"It would have to be someone that could bring Schlitz what it doesn't have now: innovation and talent," he said. "Would it bother me to sell to a foreigner? I would sell to anybody that's sincere."

Two Uihlein associates resigned recently from the board of directors, having controlled large blocks of stock at shareholder meetings.

They are industrialist Robert C. Brumder, a director since 1973, and New York investment counselor Robert B. Trainer, who retired in 1978 as senior vice president in charge of administration.

The replacements are non-Uihleins: Chicago advertising executive Charles S. Winston Jr. and California business executive Frederick W. Patton.

The resignations of Brumder and Trainer were interpreted by some business writers as evidence that the family approves of the search for a buyer.

Smallpox Experts Urge Drop Of Reward Offer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Smallpox experts said Friday nobody has collected the $1,000 reward offered by the World Health Organization since 1978 for anyone reporting a verified case of the disease, and recommended the U.N. General Assembly drop the offer.

Meeting here, the organization's Global Smallpox Commission endorsed the October announcement in Nairobi the disease had been eradicated and urged that governments end smallpox vaccinations. "Because vaccination may result in serious complications ... no one except investigators should be vaccinated in any country," the commission said in its list of recommendations.

Calendars Used As Effective Advertising Tools

IRVING (UPI) — The year 1980 is fast approaching and businessmen are handing out calendars as fast as they can, considering them valuable advertising with 365 exposures every year.

Since at least 1845, commercial calendars have been popular in this country — beginning when an Auburn, N.Y., insurance salesman discovered merchants gave his advertising signs a better reception when they were attached to calendar pads.

But even the $382.5 million spent by businesses on imprinted calendars to distribute freely to customers and prospects was insufficient to satisfy the public, according to Specialty Advertising Association International.

The Irving-based trade association — which counts calendar manufacturers among its members — said some estimates indicate an equal sum is spent annually on retail calendars by individuals unable to get their hands on the millions of timetables distributed annually by businesses.

Steve Linham, sales manager for a Philadelphia calendar manufacturer, says part of the demand for commercial calendars today is they offer beauty and utility.

"If properly selected for the target audience, the commercial calendar is one of the most effective, least expensive forms of advertising available," he contends.

Many sponsoring businesses pay 80 cents to $1 for each calendar bought in 100 lots, a minimal cost when computed on the basis of 365 exposures annually, according to the trade association.

Calendar manufacturers polled recently by the trade association agree the public's appetite for calendars has surpassed commercial calendar distribution.

Fred Seely, vice president of a Minneapolis, Minn., calendar manufacturer, adds that in spite of the growing public demand, commercial calendars aren't being promoted as much as they once were. Instead, according to Seely, businesses can choose from 15,000 specialty advertising items rather than using what was once a primary form of advertising — The calendar.

But the survey shows many businesses still use the calendar to advertise.

Speed Limit Violators Only Slow For Police

By The Editors of Psychology Today

President Carter has urged drivers to obey energy-saving speed limits. Yet if urgings fail and stricter enforcement is needed, recent experiments show that little short of more police cars parked by the side of the road is likely to have much effect.

Working with the Wilmington, N.C., police department, two psychologists at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington set up a hidden radar post on a two-lane road in a residential area with a 35 mph speed limit. Over a series of weekday mornings, from 8:30 to 11, Mark Gaizio and Lee Jackson clocked a total of 240 private cars as they entered a 450-foot stretch, and again as they left.

The drivers were reacting to three familiar kinds of speed control. The first was a standard speed-limit sign at the entry point. The second was a similar sign, but with the added warning that the speed limit was "radar enforced."

The third was a clearly visible, well-remarked Wilmington police car at the end of the experimental stretch.

Whether or not speeders had passed the signs, only the police car slowed them down. To the researchers' bemusement, the police car even slowed people who were not speeding.

A more dramatic setup of signs produced similarly discouraging results when it was tried by the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. In the experiment, researchers set up a radar post that triggered an electronic display, visible from the highway. The display showed a driver's actual speed, and if the speed exceeded the area's 55 mph limit, the display flashed a warning message.

That, too, produced little response unless it was cupled with a marked patrol car.

Galizio and Jackson did not measure how long drivers kept their speed down after passing the police car. In the second experiment, however drivers generally had resumed their original speed by the time they were clocked at a point two miles farther down the road.

Going through a divorce is easier for men. Or so men say.

Stan Albrecht, a sociologist at Brigham Young University, studied 293 divorced women and 207 divorced men in the eight Rocky Mountain states. Twenty seven percent of the women said their divorces had been "traumatic, a nightmare." By contrast, only 16 percent of the men reported such intense pain.

At the other end of the scale, 32 percent of the women but 44 percent of the men agreed that divorcing was "easier than expected" or "relatively painless."

The disparities do not merely reflect men's tendency to keep emotional distress to themselves. "Divorce brings an economic crisis for the majority of women even though they may receive alimony or child support," Albrecht says. "Men don't usually have that problem, and sometimes even have an increase in income."

The disparities did not keep 90 percent of the men and women from agreeing on one point. After periods ranging from several months to several years after their divorce, they all thought their lives were better than they had been before splitting.

Fathers of boys are more inclined to help feed and diaper their babies than fathers of girls.

That's the conclusion of a study by Ross Parke, a psychologist at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. Parke's earlier studies helped establish that fathers are as responsive to newborns as mothers.

For his latest study, Parke worked with new fathers who were participating in a project that encouraged them to hold and care for their babies in the maternity ward. He showed 32 of the fathers a 15-minute videotape of other fathers feeding, diapering and playing with their babies. The tape was intended to set an example for the new fathers.

Three months later, Parke and his assistants visited the new fathers at home. Fathers of boys who had seen the tape were more involved in feeding and diapering than fathers who had not.

But fathers who saw the tape but had daughters were letting their wives do most of the work. Parke says that for reasons he cannot explain, a baby boy seems to predispose fathers to follow the model fathers on the tape.

Governor Refuses Extradition Of Utah University Student

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's governor has refused to extradite a University of Utah student to face charges in connection with the takeover of a council house at a northern New York Indian reservation in May.

In a letter to New York Gov. Hugh Carey, Gov. Scott Matheson said Lawrence Jacobs, 29, would not be returned, at least until the courts rule whether New York state has jursidiction on the St. Regis Reservation near the Canadian border.

Jacobs was arrested here several months ago after he and 20 others were indicted in connection with the May takeover of the reservation council house and the blockading of several roads on the rsservation by "traditionalist" Mohawks in a dispute with their elected tribal leaders.

The takeover ended after several hours when the traditionalists agreed to leave the council house. No serious injuries were reported, although some reservation police officers said they were roughed up.

Jacobs attorney, Milva Curl of Salt Lake City and the Washington-based Indian Resource Center are arguing that New York state has no jurisdiction over the reservation.

Scrooges May Have 'Christmas Neurosis'

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

What was wrong with Scrooge — whose "bah humbug" tried to dim the Christmas spirit of Tiny Tim and others in the Charles Dickens tale?

The old miser's attitude was a lot like that of some people who have a Christmas Neuroses, says Dr. Lawrence Balter, professor of psychology at New York University and a practicing psychoanalyst. Balter said there are many people who bad-mouth Christmas from Thanksgiving on.

"Scrooge could be thought of as a person who is protecting himself," Balter said.

"His self-protective device is to not acknowledge friendly and warm feelings. By denying his concern for others and not allowing others to care about him, he wards off the possibility of being rejected.

"So, so having a bitter exterior, he can keep himself safe from the risk of being hurt."

Balter said people in contemporary society who have negative reactions to the holiday season may have many reasons other than protecting themselves, of course.

"These other things tie into a whole host of different feelings people have at this time of year," he said.

"I would prefer to think of Thanksgiving through Christmas as the holiday season.

"And it's during this time of year that many people feel particularly sad. Very often it is because in their minds there is an ideal that they themselves are not living up to.

"It's a time when families are supposed to be together and having a good time and a lot of warmth and good cheer is supposed to be in abundance. However, in real life there are constant sources of friction and tension and real worries that can't possibly live up to that ideal fantasy."

Another reason people feel downbeat or sad around the holidays is that the season conjurs up in their minds times past.

From the memory bank come tumbling visions of the holiday celebrations from childhood — When, if recollection serves correctly, they received a holiday from school and a lot of attention and gifts.

They also recall, Balter said, visits from relatives and a general kind of party spirit.

And now they may feel a sadness over the loss of those Christmases as they experienced them.

But what they don't realize as they grow mellow or morose or even tearful is that their child's eye view of things probably was through rose-colored glasses.

"The tendency," said Balter, "is to make things look rosier than they were. And that almost makes the present look gloomy and dismal by comparison."

Another problem for some who with kinks in their Christmas circuitry is negative feelings that emerge when families are thrust together — Husbands, wives, children, grandparents.

"Sometimes this is not the most favorable situation, especially if family tensions are present," Balter said.

One family argument will detour the season's quest for peace and joy.

Another major reason for sadness is the loss of loved ones, from death or the end of an affair, Balter said.

The Christmas season is an especially difficult one for persons who have lost a loved one.

"It really doesn't matter how many years ago a person lost a loved one because the memory of that important relationship is usually stimulated at special times of the year. The holiday is one of those times.

"What happens is that there may be a mourning again."

The scenario:

•Thoughts wander to how previous times were spent together — joyfully.

•There is a tendency to idealize aspects of the lost relationship. Feelings of longing for that relationship again build.

•The aloneness intensifies until it becomes an almost inconsolable loneliness.

"Loneliness is a very profound feeling," Balter said. "And many persons cannot tolerate it well. They become depressed."

How can you pull yourself back from the brink of a deeper and perhaps pathological depression when that happens?

"Acknowledge the cause of the depression, know that it is understandable and you are not sick if at this time of year you are depressed about losses," Balter said.

"In fact, it is normal, although painful and unpleasant.

"In contemporary society, people have this idea if it doesn't feel good it must be bad. But that is not true. One of the many things maturity means is to be able to tolerate anxiety and depression.

"Cope, rather than run and hide or do self-destructive things.

"It is weird to think a person could live through life without feeling frustrated or depressed at times. That is why kids are taking drugs. They were not taught to tolerate such feelings."

Alcohol will not be a cup of cheer that will pull you out, by the way.

Balter said alcohol temporarily loosens inhibitions so people become more extroverted. Some time after sipping from the cup of cheer, however, alcohol's depressant side takes hold.

"Shortly after, it is not unusual," he said, "to see a crying jag start. And there's the serious problem of developing a dependence on alcohol."

A survival plan for those vulnerable to Christmas depression:

•Avoid being alone and that means avoid having no plans for the holidays.

•Be aware of the fact that when you feel depressed you are less likely to reach out to others. And that is just the time the presence of others would be best. It could become a vicious cycle if you don't make a conscious effort to recognize what is happening and try hard to overcome it.

•Make plans to be with other people before the feeling hits you and drags you down.

•Avoid being without an agenda. Schedule a lot of activities for yourself. If you find yourself with a lot of empty hours, you will feel empty, too.

If someone in your circle — a neighbor, relative or fellow worker — seems a good candidate for Christmas depression due to loss of a loved one, Balter suggested going out of your way.

"If you want to give a good present to such a person, invite him or her over for dinner or a get together," he said. "IF that is not possible, call and have a lengthy phone conversation."

But this may be hard.

He said you've got to recognize that the person with dragging spirits will be trying to keep a distance, attempting to give the holidays and those who celebrate a cold shoulder.

"Remember," he said, "they are depressed. That's the reason for the distance.

"Try to rise above this. Don't fee hurt.

"Pull them into your activities."

Beeman Family Profession True To Their Name

EAGLEVILLE, Calif. (NEA) — You might think the fact that Henry and Fred Beeman raise bees is something the Ripley people would be interested in knowing. But believe it or not, they already do.

Most residents of Northern California's Surprise Valley know about the Beemans, too.

Folks buy their tasty natural honey in containers ranging in size from 2½ pounds to 60 pounds. They stir it into cups of tea, substitute it for sugar in cooking or spoon it onto graham crackers for a snack.

Just how Henry Beeman became a bee man is better known. It happened about 1932 when Beeman entered the bee business with a large Central California firm.

As his son, Fred, explains, "They were paying a little better than they were on the ranches."

By the mid-1930s, Beeman was into business for himself.

Surprise Valley became the focus of operations because of its abundant dryland alfalfa farms, which caused the bees to produce a steady honey flow.

Changes in agricultural practices have reduced the flow. Years ago the average amount of honey per hive was 60 to 120 pounds, today it's closer to 20 to 30 pounds. But the valley is still home to the Beemans.

Actually, the family's operations move around Northern California on an annual basis.

In early spring, the Beemans travel south for their bees to pollinate almonds near the town of Chico. They gradually work north as the weather warms, finally arriving in the valley sometime in May.

In fall, the Beemans again load their hives onto trucks and drive south.

Throughout much of the year, either Henry or Fred is on the road, moving or tending hives.

The hours are often difficult.

Transporting, for example, must be done at night or on cloudy, rainy days. The bees fly off if the skies are to bright or if temperatures climb above 55 degrees.

Night travel is necessary for other reasons, too.

"Sometimes bees come out when you stop at a restaurant," explains Fred with a big smile. "And sometimes people don't appreciate that."

Something Ripley may not appreciate is the problem of a Beeman being a bee man.

Years ago a curious stranger in a tavern asked Henry's profession. Then he asked his name.

The man became frustrated upon receiving the same reply to both questions.

"I know what you do," he reportedly exclaimed. "What's you're name?"

"My dad had a heck of a time getting out of there, says Fred.

Ripley might also be interested in knowing that life with bees is not all sweetness and honey. As the saying goes, "The bee that hath honey in her mouth hath a sting in her tail."

According to Fred, people working with bees get stung 20 to 50 times a day. He says that is not dangerous as long as you are not allergic to bee stings.

He even claims that "you build up a pretty good immunity over the years."

Beekeepers also learn to wipe out the stingers rather than squeezing them.

But one problem persists.

As Fred explains, the "zap" always hurts.

"You feel it," he sighs. "Every time

Indian Legislator Ambushed, Killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Unidentified men wielding automatic weapons ambushed and killed a state legislator and two companions Friday in the Meghalaya state of eastern India, the United News of India reported. Manik Das, a lawmaker belonging to former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's opposition Congress Party, his driver, and a woman party member died in the attack and legislator Bhadreswar Koca was wounded and hospitalized. Details were not available.

Civil strife continued in the neighboring state of Assam as Indian army units were ordered to assist civil authorities and a curfew was imposed in parts of Gauhati, the capital, the news agency reported. It said the security measures followed incidents of arson and violence between the local Hindu population and Moslem immigrants from Bangladesh.

COMMUNIST REVIEW

BERLIN, East Germany (AP) — The Politburo of the ruling Social Unity Party on Friday proposed a review of all party members this spring in a possible prelude to a purge in this Communist-run state. Party General Secretary Erich Honecker proposed the review be conducted between March 1 and April 30, 1980, but did not specify whether critics of the regime would be removed from the party rolls, the Neues Deutschland newspaper reported.

Denmark Plans Abolition Of Securities

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Denmark is preparing to become the first country to scrap traditional securities and replace them with computer data to eliminate a mounting paper-handling problem.

After years of commmission studies, the Ministry of Trade and Industry has notified parliament that an upcoming bill will provide the legislative conditions for "the abolition of physical securities" and "the creation of a self-governing institution" to register the financial instruments.

"The age of the coupon clipper is running out fast," said Mogens Laursen, a leading Copenhagen banker.

In Denmark, securities mean chiefly bonds. Thanks to an unusually extensive real estate mortgage credit system and an avalanche of government issues in recent years, bonds now outnumber stock shares nearly 35-1 in terms of nominal value.

In this nation of 5 million there will be an estimated 30 million bonds worth more than $80 billion in circulation next year. With annual volume increases of 17-20 percent in prospect, the government commission predicted "serious strains" on the printing, registration, administration, safe-keeping and transport capacities of the existing system.

The securities data center will be the answer to the explosive growth in the volume of securities and will end what a government commission described as "an unnecessary waste of resources" in the administration of tons and tons of paper.

Other countries long since moved to streamline the handling of their mountains of securities. Their systems, however, are largely voluntary. None is more than partial and all remain tied to the presence of the physical instrument.

"The ritual function of the printed security causes most of the problems. So the lgical solution is to do away with that," said analyst Jens Bache.

For the past two years Bache has been heading a four-man group of experts who have quietly been laying the foundation of the securities data center.

Its sponsors are the national bank, commercial and savings banks, stock exchange brokers, real estate mortgage credit houses and such large-scale investors as insurance companies, private pension funds and public social security funds.

They will also finance the center, but expect to reduce their combined securities-related costs by about $40 million annually once the center has taken over the registration and handling of new and existing securities, including the clearing of transactions.

Plans are for the old-fashioned bond to become virtually extinct by 1985, converted into data in the memory of a national securities data center. For various reasons, printed shares will survive somewhat longer.

Brokers shudder at the thought of the fortunes in securities being moved across the city daily. Others worry that modern color photo-copying techniques could make security counterfeit easy.

"The electronic security will not only be handier, but also safer," said Bache.

The plan calls for a staged transition beginning with all new bond issues in 1982. Over the following three years all existing bonds will then be recalled for destruction after registration at the data center, and eventually a procedure will be worked out for stock shares.

There is not the same urgency about shares. For one thing, the market is relatively small, about $2.2 billion. There is also some reluctancy in the industrial sector.

"Corporate ownership structures can still be a rather sensitive matter. But far from all companies are unwilling and stock brokers definitely want shares to go electronic, too," said Ejgil Moelgaard, a trade ministry department chief. "Under the circumstances it is likely that a start will be made on a voluntary basis."

Under the new system, the bond investor will place his orders for securities with issuers or dealers the usual way, but instead of the printed instrument will get a receipt certifying the terms of his claim as registered on his data center account.

"Transfer of a security becomes valid only on registration," said Bache. "But the legal rights and consequences are exactly the same as if the investor held the physical security."

The ordinary, small-scale investor may at all times demand a statement of account, usually to be supplied at his bank as a data print-out through a link-up with existing bank terminal systems. Payments of dividends and maturity capital will be made through the same channels.

But no cash will flow through the data center. It will have no financial engagement in the market, and no direct electronic recording of stock exchange shares is planned.

The securities center is expected to handle about 1.2 million small and large bond accounts and to record and clear 15,000 transactions on a busy day. In addition, it will make 50 million to 60 million dividend payments annually along with transfer of capital.

With a staff of about 100 the data center will do the job of some 1,000 persons in the bank sector alone. But a looming conflict over the reduction in jobs has been averted thrugh agreeents safeguarding the jobs of affected bank staff.

The recall of 30 million or more bonds will be vastly simplified by the fact that 94 percent of them are on deposit with issuing houses and banks, many never traded before maturity. Only 6 percent are in "free" circulation — kept in private safety deposit boxes or under the mattress.

"Conceivably, a few conservatives may cling on to their printed bonds and will probably be given a period of grace," said Bache. "But after that dividends can be cashed only if the security is given up for registration and destruction."

Girl Undergoes Treatment For Possible Rabies

VIENNA, Ill. (AP) — Six young girls were undergoing treatment for possible rabies after being scratched by rabid cats in a federal housing project in this southern Illinois community, officials say.

A sheriff's spokesman said Thursday the girls were scratched last weekend. Six cats have been captured and sent to a state lab in Carbondale for testing.

One case of rabies has been confirmed and the other girls are receiving precautionary treatments at the Massac Memorial Hospital in nearby Metropolis, the spokesman said.

American Spends Life Helping China

PEKING (UPI) — At a Thanksgiving party at the U.S. Embassy, a smiling American in a new gold-colored velveteen suit dug into his first turkey and cranberry feast in 35 years.

Next to him sat his Chinese wife, their son and three daughters, all wearing new American clothes and excited smiles.

"That Thanksgiving dinner sums it all up for me — American exchange students and scientists there with the ambassador, me and my family. Now I feel it's all been worthwhile," mused Sidney Rittenberg, 58.

Rittenberg in the 1940s was a man with a dream that China would pull out of its feudal backwardness with a revolutionary regime that would have ties with his own country.

Toward that dream, Rittenberg for more than a decade worked on radio broadcasts for the Chinese communist government, was jailed twice for a total of 15 years with 10 in solitary confinement, lost one wife and nearly ruined his health.

Rittenberg came out of his second prison term in 1977 to find the United States and China friends.

And he found himself a standout among the dozens of Americans who, emotionally attached to China, have lived here for decades trying to help the Chinese people. Rittenberg is busy finishing one book for an American publisher and preparing two more.

"The U.S.-China thing is really getting off the ground and I'm getting started at last myself," said Rittenberg as he sat in his Peking apartment while his wife knitted beside him.

"I feel young. I'm going to promote exchanges of professors between the two countries."

In his first book, Rittenberg said, he will tell how he grew up in a political atmosphere. "My father was city council president of Charleston, South Carolina. At the University of North Carolina, I became interested in social problems."

After graduation, he was a labor union organizer, "like Leonard Woodcock," he laughed, referring to the U.S. Ambassador, a former union leader, who invited him to Thanksgiving dinner.

During World War II, Rittenberg learned Chinese at a Stanford University army school. He worked as a U.S. Army translator in China in 1945 and handled a U.N. grain relief program for both sides of the Chinese civil war.

Communist revolutionist Chou En-lai, later premier of China, "asked me to stay on to help build a bridge between them and the American people by setting up an English radio program."

Rittenberg organized the program and was about to write a biography of Mao Tse-tung in collaboration with American journalist Anna Louise Strong when she was arrested in Moscow as a spy. The Soviets ordered the Chinese to arrest Rittenberg as her accomplice.

"I was detained in 1949 in the hills of Yenan by the revolutionists, and when they went to Peking (to seize power in 1949) I was taken there in the back of a truck and put in jail for five years," he said.

"Well, there were a lot of books I always had wanted to read."

CRACKING DOWN — Authorities are cracking down so tightly on Christmas tree rustlers that if Santa Claus carries a fir in his sleigh when he swoops through Europe, he had better have a permit for it. Holiday evergreens are big business these days on the black market. (AP Laserphoto)

Authorities On Prowl For Tree Rustlers

LONDON (AP) — Authorities are cracking down so tightly on Christmas tree rustlers that if Santa Claus carries a fir in his sleigh when he swoops through Europe, he had better have a permit for it.

From Robin Hood's Sherwood Forest in central England to the sparsely forested mountains outside Athens, authorities are on the lookout and in several countries are spot-checking cars and trucks.

Anyone carrying a fir tree in a vehicle in Yugoslavia needs a certificate of origin. In Austria, the certificate is a lead seal, in Czechoslovakia it is a bill of sale.

Holiday evergreens are big business these days and forest pirates brave arrest to reap bundles on the black market. In some cities even public parks are plundered of trees by night.

In Sweden, where cutting your own tree used to be a holiday tradition, a hapless bandit skids his truck off the road and winds up buried under 200 stolen evergreens that he might have sold to the city-bound for $15 each.

Policemen on horses rove farther than ever into the depths of giant Sherwood Forest to thwart robber bands whose aim isn't giving to the poor.

A Moscow newspaper laments that otherwise "solid and respectable people" seem to have no morals when it comes to holiday trees.

"I don't know how it must feel to sit beneath a Christmas tree that's been stolen," says a spokesman for Germany's Agriculture Ministry.

He said tree stealing is apparently too big a bother in prosperous Germany, but for those who crave "that Mother Nature experience" some forest areas are set aside to cut-it-yourself for a small fee.

But elsewhere forestry authorities are alarmed at the plunder of the forests.

Denmark's Private Forest Owners Association reports tree thievery is on the rise — and you cannot even leave logs lying around in the woods any more as the spiraling cost of oil heat makes a rich market for bootleg firewood.

Authorities in Czechoslovakia complain tree thieves lop off only the pointed tops, leaving bare stumps behind.

In Greece the loss of 30,000 fir trees every year poses a special danger of erosion to the thinly forested mountains. Authorities have assigned 130 guards this year to Mount Parnes, which rises temptingly close to the outskirts of Athens.

Russian police and student volunteers are patrolling the dense forests around Moscow to catch hatchet-packing private enterprisers seeking New Year trees for the black market.

Muscovites illegally chop down 300,000 firs for New Year trees yearly — for private use or sale on the black market after approved trees have sold out. The fine — as little as $4.65 — is less than the cost of a tree in an official store.

East European communist governments manage to play down religion, but have not been able to curb the market for holiday trees, and some firs are stolen from Moscow boulevards, and the parks and gardens of Prague.

In Yugoslavia the custom of cutting a fir tree used to be denounced as bourgeois, but when the custom persisted there was an about-face and the tree was accepted as a traditional New Year symbol. Many Yugoslavs get their trees early for New Year's — before Dec. 25.

The Western trend toward artificial trees has spread to the East bloc as authorities seek to discourage tree cutting, but it has met with mixed success.

European Parliament Decreases Aerosols

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — In a move designed to protect the environment, the European Parliament on Friday called for a 30 percent decrease in the use of chlorofluorocarbon gases as propellants in aerosol containers by the end of 1981. The resolution cited scientific research indicating that the non-toxic gases destroy the ozone layer in the atmosphere which protects the earth from ultraviolet radiation that can cause some forms of skin cancer.

The Parliament urged that chlorofluorocarbons, also used in refrigerators, air conditioners and the manufacture of polyurethane, be replaced in the nine Common Market countries as soon as possible by mechanical devices and harmless substances.

FULL CAPACITY

Manfacturers never operate their plants at full capacity, The Conference Board notes. Their preferred rate of output under good conditions is 85 percent to 90 percent of capacity. But this goals is often unattainable, due to high prices for raw materials and goods, excessive wage demands, shortages of supplies or lowered demand for the products being manufactured.

Scientologists Sued For 'Mind Control'

BOSTON (AP) — A 29-year-old former member of the Church of Scientology filed a $200 million lawsuit Thursday against the church, charging that the group has cheated thousands of converts by subjecting them to "mind control."

Lavenda Van Schaick of Somerville contended in the suit filed in U.S. District Court here that the church misled her into divorcing her husband, paying about $13,000 for Scientologist instruction and working for the church without pay for nine years in Clearwater, Fla., and Las Vegas, Nev.

Since she turned against the church, Miss Van Schaick said, Scientologists have followed her, subjected her to electronic "bugging" and leaked details of her private life she had revealed in counseling sessions.

Scientology officials, who describe their belief as an "applied religious philosophy," branded the lawsuit "anti-religious" and "money-motivated."

Miss Van Schaick's suit seeks compensation not only for herself but for "thousands" of others who she claims have been defrauded of $10,000 or more each by Scientology.

The lawsuit also asks that 17 persons, including church founder L. Ron Hubbard, be removed from power and the that church be placed in the hands of a federal receiver.

A statement issued by Robert E. Johnson, a local church president, said Miss Van Schaick had been offered a refund of her money but that her attorney refused it. "It looks to us as though what they are trying to do is grandstand it and make an easy million dollars," he charged.

And Gary Klingler, a national church spokesman, estimated that as many as 3.5 million people have taken Scientology courses in the United States, including about 20,000 in the Boston area.

He said fees vary but added that a common introductory course, called "Communication," costs only about $75 and requires about two to four weeks of self study.

The suit filed here is the latest of several legal problems facing the 25-year-old movement.

In Washington, D.C., nine Scientology members were recently convicted of obstructing justice in connection with burglaries of federal and private offices in Washington and Los Angeles. In Oregon, a former Scientologist was recently awarded $2 million in damages against the church.

Miss Van Shaick's suit asserts that Scientologists use a techniqe called "auditing" in which new members undego extenive questioning while monitored by a crude lie detector and gradually come under the psychological domination of the "auditor."

According to the suit, a typical subject must pay at least $625 for 12½ hours of auditing but usually agrees to further treatment that costs thousands of dollars.

The suit also contends that auditing is falsely advertised as a technique that will improve IQ, cure neuroses, heal injuries, prevent colds, improve eyesight and enhance careers.

Investigators In Arkansas To Probe Dog-Fight Ring

TRUMANN, Ark. (AP) — U.S. Agriculture Department investigators were sent to Arkansas on Friday to assist in the investigation of what authorities believe to be a large-scale dog-fighting operation.

Dozens of federal, state and local police raided a barn here last weekend and said they found about 200 people with about $500,000 to bet on bulldog fights. Donald Walton of Trumann was charged with operating a gambling house and about 20 others were booked on various misdemeanor charges.

Remodeling Project Pushes Newsboys Off Chicago Street, Out Of Business

CHICAGO (UPI) — The fancy new State Street mall has no place for the little shanties from which "newsboys," for as long as anyone can remember, have proclaimed the news of the day and hawked papers to passers-by.

The rag-tag shacks are being replaced by $15,000 prefabricated newsstands.

The commission overseeing the mall has asked the city to revoke the licenses of the shanty newsboys and get their shacks off the mall.

The city is taking bids for operation of the fancy new newsstands. The right to sell papers on State Street will go to the highest bidders. And the froggy-voiced news hawkers are likely to be priced out of the market.

Mike Russo sells his papers from a shanty at the corner of State and Madison, the world's busiest intersection.

He's been in the business 50 years and plied his trade in Seattle and San Francisco before working his way up to the nation's second city, a town whose special brand of journalism was immortalized by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur in "The Front Page."

Now Russo figures his career is over.

He says the city will probably demolish his shack and he'll be home for good.

Russo says he and the other veteran newsboys won't be able to outbid a large firm like the Charles Levy Circulating Co., which has expressed interest in an exclusive contract to operate all eight newsstands on the mall.

"What am I gonna do about it?" asked Russo. "How come Levy owns the Loop?"

Harry Dorman, who has peddled papers at State and Washington for 17 years, said City Hall and the State Street Council, in announcing plans for the mall, had promised the newspaper vendors space.

"What a doublecross," he complained.

"They spend $17 million to build this piece of junk and they can't spend a few thousand bucks on the newsboys who've been here for years and years? That's a kick in the behind. I couldn't bid $10 on a stand."

He said suggestions the newsboys move to other streets are absurd.

"There is no other business off State Street," Dorman said, charging other Loop streets are "dead" as far as newspaper sales are concerned.

"I'll take my stand and shove it in the street and (Mayor) Janie Byrne can pick it up. You couldn't move my stand five feet without it falling apart."

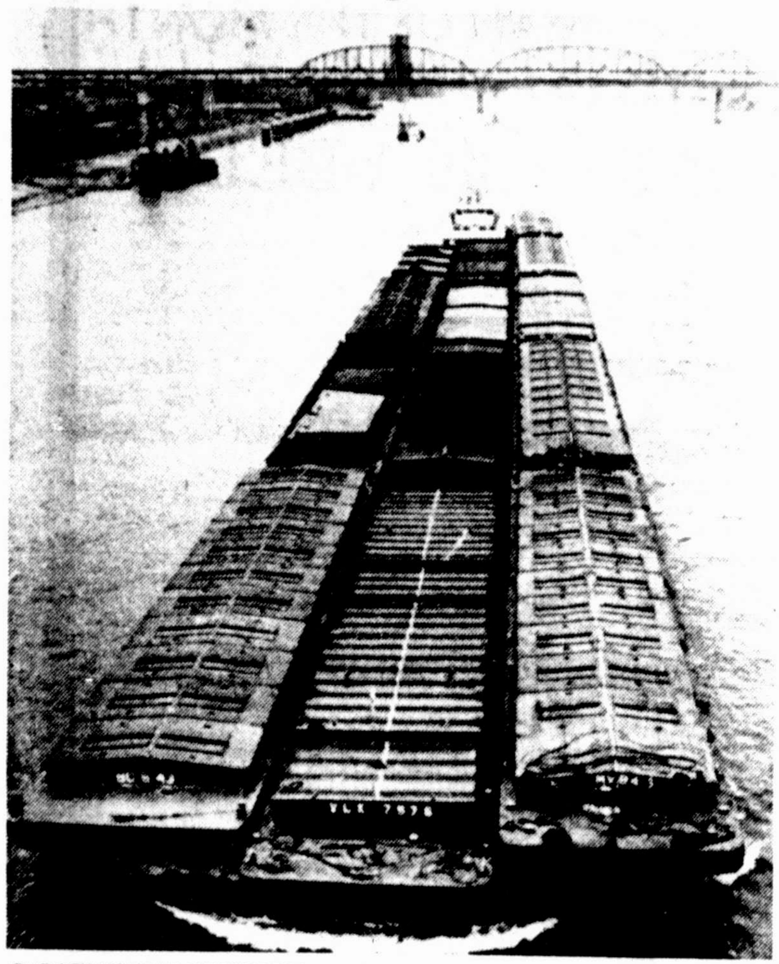
More Freight Than Ever Travels Up, Down Inland Waterways



BARGES ON THE MISSISSIPPI — A towboat with a load of 1,500-ton barges churns down the Mississippi River near St. Louis. These are boom times in the American barge industry, with more commercial river traffic than ever before. (AP Laserphoto)

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The square-nosed towboat eased out of the river channel, glided toward the shoreline and nudged its fleet of grain barges against the sandy bank.

The Joseph Patrick Eckstein, a 5,600-horsepower tug owned by Marquette Transportation Co., had stopped to collect another barge before continuing its trek down the Mississippi River.

While the crew secured the barge, Captain Frank Van Wagner watched as other tugs, pushing barges of grain, coal or oil products, made their way up and down the channel.

These are boom times for the American barge industry, with more barges and tugboats pushing freight on the nation's inland waterways then ever before.

"This is a very dynamic industry," said Vern Barth, operator of a marine service depot at Hartford, Ill. "It's growing by leaps and bounds."

The Joe Pat Eckstein, as its crew calls it, was en route to New Orleans to deliver its 25 barges, and then head back upriver for another load of grain.

"They're saying river traffic will triple in the next 10 years," said Van Wagner, a riverboat pilot for 38 years. He scanned the far shore where two towboats had stopped to yield to southbound traffic. "I don't know where they'll put all the boats if it comes to that," he said.

Estimates vary widely on how quickly the industry will grow — a Batelle Institute study forecasts only a 5 percent annual growth rate through 1990 — but industry officials agree growth will be steady.

Bob Steinmeyer of National Marine Services at St. Louis said his company wants to add about 20 new barges to its fleet next year — at a cost of about $250,000 each.

"Business is good. We're not able to even keep up with all the demand for barges," Steinmeyer said.

The industry is benefitting from this year's peak level of grain exports, a strong chemical industry and increases in shipments of western coal, industry officials say.

"The towing business is great now," said David Esper, president of the one-year-old Marquette Transportation Co. of Cassville, Wisc. Esper said the quick success of Marquette is a reflection of strength in the industry.

But while times are good today, industry officials say they fear the consequences of a possible new oil crisis in the United States.

"The next time there is a cutback in fuel suppplies — and it could happen anytime — will the barge industry get enough fuel?" asked Andrij Bilyk of the American Waterways Operators. "If we don't get enough fuel, we won't be able to move — among other things — critical fuel supplies to farmers."

The fear of a cutback in diesel fuel arose most recently during last summer's fuel shortage when supplies were tight and prices shot upward. Barge operators today are paying more than double the price of a year ago for diesel, but suppplies are plentiful, they say.

As fuel costs increase, so do the rates being charged for the movement of barges, Esper said. Marquette Transportation has nearly doubled its rates since January in order to account for the higher fuel prices, he said.

Statistics compiled by the Army Corps of Engineers show a steady increase in the amount of freight moved by barge on the nation's busiest rivers, the Mississippi and Ohio.

For example, 62 million tons of cargo moved through Lock and Dam 26 at Alton, Ill., on the Mississippi last year, compared to 54 million tons in 1975, an Army official said.

The growth is also shown in the amount of barge freight moving through the Gallipolis Lock and Dam on the Ohio. Three years ago the figure was 38 million tons. Last year it was 41 million tons and the Corp says it expects the total for 1979 to exceed 45 million tons.

At its northernmost point, at Minneapolis and St. Paul, the river system provides an outlet for wheat, rye and other grains. From there, boats puh the bares downstream through a series of 27 locks. As these convoys move south, they pick up cargoes of corn and soybeans. Once the boats clear the last lock just north of St. Louis, the lower 1,025 miles is clear sailing to the Gulf of Mexico.

Although the barge industry is on the upswing, it is not without growing pains.

Congestion has long been a problem at Lock and Dam 26, and it's getting worse, officials say. After years of court battles, preliminary work on a nine-year project to build a new, larger system of locks at Alton is about to begin.

Towboats often have to wait longer than 40 hours — up to 80 hours in some cases — at Lock and Dam 26, said Robet Dacey, commander of the St. Louis district of the Corps of Engineers.

Inconvenience aside, the waiting time means lost revenue for the barge and towing companies. Esper said he figures Marquette losses about $3,850 each day the Joe Pat Eckstein waits at Alton.

Another problem is delays in the unloading of grain barges at New Orleans, where port officials say seasonal congestion can result in delays of more than two weeks for unloading.

While the barge companies are prospering, the upswing appears even more dramatic for the builders of barges.

Robert Green of Jeff Boats Inc,, at Jeffersonville, Ind., said his company is booked up with orders for new barges through 1980. Jeff Boats already has set an industry record by building 415 barges this year and expects to reach 440 by year's end, Green said.

Gren says he has noticed a new phenomenon in barge buying — Investors are going through brokerage houses to invest in barges and lease them out like small-scale Greek shipping magnates. Green estimates those investers account for 10 to 15 percent of the orders for new barges each year.

Offshore Drilling Firms Facing Antitrust Suits

By The Associated Press

The two major manufacturers of offshore oil and gas drilling equipment face 27 private antitrust suits filed in federal courts in three states, with potential damages running to many millios of dollars.

The suits, filed by 48 companies, claim J. Ray McDermott & Co. of New Orleans and Brown & Root of Houston conspired to fix prices on offshore oil and gas drilling facilities.

The suits repeat allegations made by the federal government in an antitrust case that resulted in the largest fines ever levied in a price-fixing case.

A spokesman for McDermott said Friday "the lawsuits are not entirely unexpected by our legal department and will be defended. Beyond that, we have been advised it would be inappropriate to comment on pending litigation."

A Brown & Root spokesman said the suits, filed in New York, Houston and New Orleans, had not been received and no comment could be made.

None of the suits, filed Thursday, specify the damages being sought, although several said they were in the millions. They asked that the courts determine the damages and then triple the amount, in keeping with antitrust law.

Some of the suits also named Halliburton Co. of Dallas, Brown & Root's parent company.

The two firms each drew $1 million fines in federal court in New Orleans last year and two Brown & Root and four McDermott officers drew fines. All pleaded no contest and the case did not go to trial.

A total of 22 suits, with 43 plaintiffs, were filed in New Orleans. Plaintiffs include Exxon Corp., Pennzoil Producing Co., Conoco Inc., Cities Service Co., Phillips Petroleum, Tenneco Oil and American Petrofina Co. of Texas.

A similar suit was filed in New York by Texaco Inc. It also named Halliburton Inc., Brown & Root's parent firm.

In Houston, suits were filed by Consolidated Gas Supply Corp., CNG Producing Corp., Forest Oil Corp. and Cabot Corp.

Burned-Out Santa Turns In Boots, Pillow, Beard

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — This shopping center Santa turned in his pillow, beard and boots two weeks before Christmas.

"I got burned out — too much routine," says Dieter Jester.

"All the kids started looking the same. They all started wanting the same toys.

"You get tired playing that three-minute role ones who really believe in Santa and come up and hug and kiss you."

The 31-year-old radio newsman says he took the job to research what children want for Christmas.

He says they still want Star Wars items, roller skates and pink and purple bicycles.

He says he quit because of "screaming kids who have not yet become accustomed to visiting Santa.

"They're too young. They see the hair and the beard and stand there and scream," he adds.

"Being a dedicated Santa I tried my darndest to get them to sit on my lap or stand next to me for that important picture parents wanted.

"I worked hard winning them over but that gets old too."

Jester suggests, "parents should whisper the child's name so Santa can pretend he is familiar with the kid."

Also, "I had a 12-year-old sitting on my lap and a substantial number of 11-year-olds. Am I expecting them to quit believing in Santa too early in life?"

He adds, "Some of them are 65-pounders. I had a hard time lifting them to my lap.

"One lady wanted all eight kids including her 6-week-old baby in a picture with me. She handed me the baby and a clean diaper. Was that an indication she was handing me a kid with poopy pants?

"They warned us about that in Santa school. But I never get wet," says Jester.

The big problem, he says, is the parents insisting a youngster should sit on Santa's lap.

"There's only so much two grown up people — a parent and a Santa — can do to coax a kid to visit," he says, "Some parents should just accept the fact that junior isn't going to visit Santa."

Jester says the high point of the job was when a beauty queen climbed aboard for a publicity photo.

Man Has Box Home To Save Money

TALLAHASSEE, Fla (AP) — James McCauley, 72, says he didn't want to impose on his family when he couldn't make ends meet on his Social Security check. So he decided to live in a corrugated cardboard box.

McCauley was so determined not to bother his son or other family members that he wouldn't give out their names.

"They have their lives and I have mine," McCauley said. "My children like me now, and I want it to stay that way."

After almost a week in the box, McCauley was taken Thursday to another man's home. He will stay there while state officials try to find him a permanent place.

A former baker and carpenter, McCauley took a bus to Tallahassee about a week ago after giving up his Columbus, Ga., apartment. He stayed with the Salvation Army the first night but decided to leave because that agency doesn't provide permanent shelter.

"I have trouble sleeping in those places anyway," McCauley shrugged. "They put somebody else in the upper bunk who rattles the bed and there's too much commotion."

Wearing a T-shirt and oversized blue pants, his blue canvas shoes splitting from wear, McCauley built his cardboard home in a vacant lot, hidden in a woods about 100 yards from a street. It was 3 feet high, 3 feet across and 6 feet deep and furnished with a roll of toilet paper and a pink blanket to protect him from the cold, damp nights.

Near the can he used as a chair was a paper bag filled with sardines, a loaf of bread and a grapefruit. He said he has eaten the same fare for several weeks, eating sardines three times a day.

Then a woman who lived nearby called Tallahassee police Sgt. Billy Hudson, who went by the vacant lot. He didn't see anyone at first, then heard McCauley working on his shelter. He talked to him for a while, and called the Tallahassee Democrat, the local newspaper.

"He's a proud man," said Hudson. "It's unusual. He's not a wino. He's very a intelligent gentleman. I've talked to him a lot. He reads a lot. He seems like a fine person."

After the Democrat reported McCauley's plight Thursday morning, Hudson received almost a dozen calls from people offering a place for McCauley to stay. Hudson also took state officials to meet him. Until they find a permanent home for him, Hudson said McCauley will stay with another man in town.

Hudson picked up McCauley to take him to his new home.

"He was real happy," said Hudson.

This year in particular, and for the last couple of years, with Patti Smith and Blondie, it's coming to the surface that women can actually go out there and do something completely different than anybody's ever done before.

DOLPHIN FACTS

Dolphins seems to be able to sleep with one eye open, and with half the brain still awake, National Geographic says. They need only about as much sleep as a cow — perhaps two or three hours a day. Before they left the land to return to the sea some 50 million years ago, dolphins may have been related to forerunners of today's cows, goats, and sheep. Like these animals, dolphins have several stomachs.

Families Make Do Without Electricity

SINKS OF GANDY, W.Va. (AP) — When Mary Tingler wants to press a shirt for her husband, Newt, she uses an old-fashioned stove-heated iron, not an electric one.

When she wants to speak to her neighbor Roselena Teter, she walks down the road instead of using a telephone.

It's not that she has anything against electric irons or telephones, it's just that the telephone and power lines end 10 miles down the road in Whitmer.

The power company says it could cost more than $13,000 apiece to bring electricity to the five or so families in this remote Randolph County mountain community, which takes its name from a sinkhole nearby where Gandy Creek disappears into the earth.

A telephone company says providing service would be "very expensive."

The people in Sinks of Gandy have found ways to compensate.

Mary Tingler uses three old-fashioned irons. She sets them on a sizzling hot wood stove and uses them in turn until a garment is pressed.

"They don't stay hot too long, maybe about three minutes," says Mrs. Tingler.

The Tinglers have a gasoline-fired electric generator in the backyard, which they use to run tools around their farm. But Mrs. Tingler said she'd rather use old-fashioned methods in her housework.

"It's so un-handy to hook up the generator all the time, I'd just as soon not bother with it," Mrs. Tingler said.

Max and Roselena Teter used to have a television, which they would hook up to their home generator. But the set broke, and the Teters haven't bothered to repair it.

"It just seemed like more trouble than it's worth," Teter said.

Both the Teters and the Tinglers have gas lights and gas refrigerators.

"There's lots of times we'd like to have electricity," Mrs. Tingler said. "Instead of having to go out and start a motor, I'd rather just plug a cord into the wall like most people do."

"Back around 1970, we asked the power company to bring electricity out here," Teter said. "We talked to man in there at Elkins and he said it would cost us $700 to install, plus $24 a month."

Teter said that after talking it over, he decided to go ahead.

"We went back to see him and he doubled it on us, $1,400 and $48 a month. He was just trying to scare us out. He wasn't the slightest bit interested in putting electricity out here."

Jim Patton of Monongahela Power Co. said this week that the cost of stringing lines into Sinks of Gandy would have to be borne almost entirely by the families there. He said it could cost them more than $13,000 apiece.

SIX GEESE A-LAYING — Catherine Catalane struggles with the six geese that arrived as a Christmas present from her fellow radio announcer Jonathan Green. Green, who has an on-the-air "romance" with Miss Catalane, promises to send the rest of the gifts in "The 12 Days of Christmas." (AP Laserphoto)

Announcer Giving 'Girlfriend' 12 Days Of Christmas Gifts

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Her landlady won't let her take home one goose, let alone six geese-a-laying.

And Catherine Catalane doesn't know what she'll do with seven swans-a-swimming, eight maids-a-milking, nine ladies dancing, 10 lords-a-leaping, 11 pipers piping and 12 drummers drumming.

The presents spelled out in "The 12 Days of Christmas" song are being sent by Miss Catalane's partner on a Milwaukee radio station, announcer Jonathan Green.

The two say it started as a hoax to promote their rumored on-the-air romance, but now has turned into an elaborate scheme with Green promising actually to deliver the gifts.

"I'll have to wait and find out" where to put the next arrivals, said Miss Catalane, 27.

She found the first live installment — the gaggle of six geese — honking in an airport hangar recently when she returned from a flight reporting traffic conditions for WTMJ.

Green had the birds transported to Milwaukee from The Ranch, a center for the handicapped. The geese were later returned, but now Green, 35, is conniving with listeners to keep up the parade of presents.

Live swans will be hard to come by, so Green is thinking of substituting rubber ones. Finding milkmaids, ladies, pipers and drummmers will be a snap, he says, and he's trying to recruit people named Lord to jump up and down for the 10th day.

Green says he and Miss Catalane didn't think the idea would mushroom when the two agreed to fake the gift-giving on the air. "Up to the five gold rings I said I'd spent $1,945, but I really hadn't spent anything," he says. Then Green says he decided to give bonafide presents "just for something fun to do."

OLD MUSICALS NEVER DIE — "Oklahoma!", considered the first "concept" musical, is 36 years old. It's not yet ready for retirement, though. Yet another Broadway version, starring (l. to r.) Mary Wickes, Laurence Guittard and Christine Andreas, is being mounted. Previews began Dec. 6.

Margaret Truman talks toys

Last year Americans spent $3.8 billion dollars on toys and Christmas decorations. With the year's stagflated economy, it's anybody's guess whether that figure will be higher or lower this season.

Partly to insure the former and partly because they wanted a "name" as spokesperson, Margaret Truman (yes, Harry's daughter) was hired last summer by the Toy Manufacturers of America to stump for the coalition, talking up toys and, specifically, toy safety.

An actress, radio interviewer and author, Miss Truman has been married since 1956 to Clifton Daniel, a former New York Times editor. The couple has four sons, which makes Miss Truman something of an old hand at toy selection and supervision.

More fundamental empathy with toys, however, can be traced to her own childhood. On her eighth birthday she was given a baby grand piano by her parents, much to her disappointment. She had actually wanted an electric train.

Human rights blast

Vietnam's Prime Minister Pham Van Dong has ripped into President Carter's human rights policy, calling it "antihuman rights."

An interview with Penthouse writer Edward Rasen during the Non-Aligned Nations Summit in Havana marked the first time that the prime minister has talked extensively — more than three hours — to a Western journalist since the Vietnamese drove the Americans out in 1974.

Said Pham: "I don't see such a human-rights policy. A policy of antihuman rights, the policy to make use of human-rights issues perhaps."

Pham added in the January-issue interview, "We cannot talk with Carter about human rights. You must tell this to Mr. Carter."

Europe Planning Competition With NASA's Space Shuttle

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The bugs of rocketry and the weather permitting, Europe will take its first independent step into the space age from a jungle launching pad here Saturday.

The European Space Agency is set to launch an Ariane missile in a test of a program designed to compete with the U.S. space shuttle for the lucrative satellite business of the next two decades.

Officials in the launch center here, 40 miles north of the South American colony capital of Cayenne, said the final countdown started on schedule Friday morning, aiming at a launch between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. (8 a.m.-1 p.m. CST).

It is the first of four planned test flights of the multinational missile over the next year. If at least two succeed, Ariane will start operational launches in 1981, officials said.

The first rocket will carry only an instrument package to monitor its performance but three test launches set for 1980 will carry satellites for scientific, meteorology and communications, as well as a special satellite for radio amateurs.

The project, now dominated by France and West Germany, is the result of 18 years and some $1.6 billion. The initial $770 million vanished in a series of fireballs as the first Eurorockets failed in the early 1970s, and Britain pulled out as a major participant.

Study is under way on more powerful launchers to carry bigger satellites into orbit in the mid-1980s, and on a booster for the 1990s that could launch a manned reusable glider, similar to the space shuttle.

ESA has already had one important gesture of confidence. The international Intelsat communications organization has placed a firm order for a 1981 satellite launch, and has an option on a further launch.

Both had originally been scheduled for the troubled space shuttle program.

ESA also has firm orders for 10 satellite launchings through 1984, including European satellites for telecommunications, direct TV broadcast, maritime navigation and scientific purposes.

The Franco-German domination is made clear in the shareholdings in Arianespace, which will be the operational company to produce, finance and market the missile.

France has 59.25 percent, West Germany 19.6, and the next biggest participant is Belgium with 4.4 percent. The other nations involved are Italy, Spain, Switzerland, Britain, Sweden, Holland, Denmark and Ireland.

France's national space agency has 34 percent of its country's holding, and the launches will be here, just north of the equator, because rockets get an additional boost from the increased speed of rotation at the Earth's midsection.

Space Shuttle Engines Testing Not To Happen Before Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A 520-second "full duration" test firing of three engines identical to those to be used in the first U.S. Space Shuttle will not take place before Monday, according to space agency officials.

The cluster firing of the engines will be held at the National Space Technology Laboratories in Bay St. Louis, Miss., Dick Young, Kennedy Space Center spokesman, said Thursday.

Several previous attempts to test fire the engines for 520 seconds — the time needed for the spacecraft to reach orbit — have failed. After the last attempt Nov. 4 it was found a defective wire had been used in welding a joint in the nozzle area of one engine.

That type wire is used in many of the engines' joints so National Aeronautics and Space Administration experts have been trying since then to determine whether the defective material was used elsewhere.

The engines actually installed in the shuttle Columbia, scheduled to be launched from here sometime next year, will be modified after the testing in Mississippi, officials said earlier.

The engines have presented one of the major problems in determining the date of the first orbiting of the Space Shuttle, which is designed to enter space and then return to earth gliding on airplane-type wings for reuse in later missions, said NASA's John Yardley.

Problems with attaching thousands of heat-resistant tiles to the Columbia also have forced several postponements in setting a launch date.

Soviet Union Technologies Available In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Advanced energy technologies from the Soviet Union, including a process that increases efficiency of fossil fuel conversion by nearly 40 percent, are now available in this country, officials of American and Soviet organizations said Friday.

An agreement making the technologies available to U.S. industries was signed Friday by Control Data Worldtech and the Soviet foreign trading organization, Licensintorg.

More than 30 processes are covered by the agreement, including methods of eliminating high sulfur content from fuels to reduce atmospheric pollution and development of electric power by MHD — or magnetohydrodynamic — techniques, said to be cleaner and more efficient than conventional techniques.

"Generation of power by means of an MHD plant, burning gas or coal, should reduce dependence on foreign oil while providing a safe power source with little or no impact on the environment," said Dr. Hajo Onken, vice president for Control Data Worldtech, a technology marketing arm of the parent computer and financial services company.

"Today gas turbines and traditional steam turbine equipment together with coupled rotary electricity generators convert energy with an efficiency of approximately 40 percent," Onken said. "The balance is waste — losses through heat, noise and friction."

With MHD, Onken said, less energy would be lost and less sulfur would enter the air. Practical efficiency, he added, would be 55 percent for a combination MHD-conventional power plant.

Potential purchasers of the technology are utilities and manufacturers, Onken said. He said construction and startup time would be the same as for other conventional plants — between six and 10 years.

Nutritional Needs May Be Monitered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is being asked to consider a proposal that the departments of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare draft a plan for monitoring national nutrition needs.

Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., said that while progress has been made in providing food assistance since the 1960s, "we have made little progress in building a nutrition surveillance system that permits prompt remedial action to specific groups."

"With unemployment and food and fuel prices rising at the current rates," he said, "we must take even greater precautions to see to it that no one is deprived of food because we did not know they were hungry."

Only one out of every $8 spent by the average American family is rung up at the supermaket checkout counter, the Conference Board observes.

Couple's Three Trucks Stolen In Nine Months

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Cliftons admit it stretches the imagination — "but it happened," says Mary Clifton.

The couple bought three pickup trucks in the past nine months, and every one of them has been stolen.

Now they have decided they can't handle the worry of owning another truck.

"We're through with them," said Mrs. Clifton. "Apparently we've learned we can't have anything nice no matter how hard we work for it."

The first theft occurred last March when they were living in an apartment in nearby Arlington. Someone stole their souped-up Silverado Chevrolet pickup from the apartment parking lot. They collected theft insurance and bought another one.

The second truck was stolen only two weeks later. The Cliftons then moved to Bedford and parked their third truck on the lawn of the apartment so they could keep an eye on it from their front window. It was not stolen there, but someone sneaked in and siphoned away a tank of gasoline while it was parked on the yard.

The Cliftons then moved to Fort Worth. But on Nov. 29 the truck was taken.

"It seems impossible to believe, but it happened. We took every precaution," said Mrs. Clifton. "It's just been awful. It's like losing a dog. It's out there somewhere lost and you can't do anything."

She said it has changed their lives.

"It's made us a lot more suspicious of people. We haven't even told some of our friends our new address," she said. "I don't actually think anyone is following us around, but I don't know."

But the Cliftons' troubles are not over yet. Now they can't get theft insurance for a car to replace the stolen trucks.

"Our insurance company told us to forget it," said Mrs. Clifton. "They said we're a high risk. Can you imagine that? People rob hell out of us and the insurance people say it's our fault.

"We'd be a high risk if we had wrecks or a lot of traffic tickets. But this is thievery, and we're not to blame."

Lubbock Woman Collects Nativity Scenes

The desire to have her children "remember Mary and Joseph and the Baby more than the commercial aspect of Christmas" led a Lubbock minister's wife to begin a collection of nativity scenes. Mrs. Charles Carman's display in the foyer of University Christian Church features a portion of that collection.

In the 1960's, she said, she began the collecting and decided to concentrate on small and special sets. Her reasons for limiting the collection in this manner, she explained, were that she wanted to have them out so the children could see, touch and enjoy and also so that they would be easier to store once the season was over.

Some of the unusual scenes Mrs. Carman has collected include one housed in a black pot, pictured at left, one from Ecuador, a scene on an olive wood plate and another from Hawaii on a coconut slice. She also has two done by her children while they were in grade school. Altogether the collection numbers more than 100 nativity scenes.

Weekly Magazine Calling For Exercise In Reason

"The Christian Century," an ecumenical weekly magazine, calls for American churchmen to exercise reason in dealing with Iranians now in this country. In a page of editorial comment authored by Associate Editor Linda Marie Delloff, the "Century" cites examples of hatred for what is happening in Tehran turning into indiscriminate violence against innocent individual Iranians in this country.

The editorial likens the feeling which is growing against all Iranian to the fear which led to the rounding up of all Japanese Americans and placing them in relocation centers during World War II.

Calling the situation "a moral question," the magazine says that "if particular Iranians in the United States (students or other; contrary to popular impressions, not all Iranians are students) are guilty of some crime on our books, let them be arrested and brought to justice. But if they are here legally and have kept within our laws, then we must guard against allowing our frustrations over Khomeini to lead us into a reaction which we would later regret."

Some who have been in the United States may be in danger if they return to Iran now, the editorial continues. "A particularly vulnerable group is composed of Iranian students undergoing U.S. Air Force and Navy flight training which has just been discontinued by order of Defense Secretary Harold Brown. Most of these students were selected during the rule of the former shah."

Urging the government to apply the same "humanitarian reasons" which led to our taking the shah for medical treatment, the editorial warns we must apply similar principles to our treatment of Iranians remaining in the United States.

Jews Begin Celebration Of 'Festival Of Lights'

Friday night marked the beginning of the eight-day Festival of Lights, known as Hanukkah, for the Jews of the world.

The festival commemorates the defeat of the Syrian Greeks in 160 B.C. by the Jews and the subsequent rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem. This marked the end of the oppression of the Jews under the rule of Antiochus who tried to force the Jews to worship pagan idols and give up their belief in one God. The leader of the Jews at this time was Judah the Maccabee. The account of this part of Jewish history is recorded in the books of the Maccabees in the Aprochropha.

In earlier days, this festival was not one of the major observances of the Jewish year. But its closeness to the Christian celebration of Christmas has been influential in its increasing popularity.

The main observance of Hanukkah centers in the home and family. Focusing on the lighting of candles in a special holder called a Menorah, the head of the family lights one candle each of the eight nights and recites special prayers giving thanks for God's liberation of his people. The Menorah has one central candle, known as the "servant candle" from which all the others are lit, and eight other candles.

In many Jewish homes, the traditional potato pancake or latka will be served.

This year the congregation of Lubbock's Temple Shaareth Israel will have a covered dish supper Sunday at 5 p.m. The Sunday School will present a program reminding the families of the congregation of the events which the holiday celebrates.

Religious Committee Chides Excommunication Of Mormon

The Religious Committee for the ERA, an interfaith organization of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups whose purpose is to secure ratification for the Equal Rights Amendment and its inclusion in the federal Constitution, has issued a statement saying it is "saddened" by the excommunication of Sonia Johnson by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

In its Dec. 6 press release, the RCERA explained the reason for speaking out on this issue at this time. "When women in their religous contexts act out their faiths and begin to suffer pain and fear because of their beliefs in equality, we have the duty, not only to support and minister to them, but also to state our perceptions."

The statement continues: "It appears that Sonia Johnson was excommunicated because of her work toward the equality of all women and men and her effective efforts to lift up the role of the Mormon Church in its opposition to the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. Further it appears to RCERA that through its excommunication of Sonia Johnson, the Mormon Church is seeking to make an example of her and thereby suppressing the active support of the ERA by all Mormon Church members."

Mrs. Johnson has appealed the decision of her church. The committee which consists of 32 member church and synagogue organizations stated, "We support Sonia Johnson in her appeal...We hope that the leadership of the Mormon Church can find a means of settling its ecclesiastical disagreement wth her short of the violent step of excommunication."

Local Red Cross Conducting Fund Drive

The Lubbock County Chapter of the American Red Cross is conducting a local fund drive with a projected goal in the Lubbock area of $14,487, chapter executive Walt Ahrens has announced.

The American Red Cross is a relief agency which helps families during times of disaster. And because 1979 has been a particularly bad year for disasters, the Red Cross, both locally and nationally, is in need of more funds, Ahrens said.

Ahrens said the local fund drive will be conducted now through Jan. 15 and that all checks for donations may be sent to Lubbock County Chapter, American Red Cross, 2201 Avenue X, Lubbock, 79411. He added that checks should be marked "Disaster Fund" so the money could go into the proper account.

In the past 10 years, the American Red Cross has provided about $27 million in relief in Texas alone.

Report Supports Women In Ministry

Another group of Roman Catholic scholars has concluded that there are no Scriptural obstacles to ordination of women. Instead, the group says, the New Testament evidence "points toward admission of women to the priestly ministry."

The findings came in the report of a three-year study by a seven-member task force of the Catholic Biblical Association, made up of about 1,000 U.S. church experts on the Bible.

The Biblical evidence is that "many of the functions which later were associated with the priestly ministry were in fact exercised by women, and no evidence that women were excluded from any of them," the report says.

Its conclusions run counter to the 1977 Vatican declaration that women cannot be priests because of tradition against it, because Jesus and his apostles were all men and women lack that natural resemblance to him. That position recently was reaffirmed by Pope John Paul II.

However, the Rev. Josep Jensen, executive secretary of the Washington-based association, points out the study was initiated in 1976, prior to the Vatican declaration, and was not intended as a response to it.

The findings parallel those of the Pontifical Biblical Commission which also, just before the Vatican declaration, found no Biblical barriers to the admission of women to the priesthood.

The new report says the apostles were "part of a wider circle not restricted to males," including women and men both of whom "after the resurrection provided the early church's leadership."

"The roles and functions which later came to be associated with the priestly ministry were never limited to the 12," the report says. In fact, it says some of those roles — such as administering a local church or leading public worship — are never explicitly attributed to the 12, but are to others who included women.

Citing Scripture references for it, the report says women founded churches, held leadership positions, functioned in public worship, were ministers and teachers and among those acclaimed in Romans 16:7 as "outstanding apostles."

"While male leaders may have been more prominent and numerous in the early church, and while women's activities may have been somewhat limited by what was culturally permissible, many roles which ultimately were associated with the priestly ministry were evidently never restricted to men," the report says.

It says the priesthood, as it came to be established about the end of the first century, arose in connection with the Eucharist (Holy Communion), and while the 12 presumably presided at it, the only New Testament evidence in that teachers and prophets took that role, and they included women.

"The claim that the intention and example of Jesus and the example of the apostles provide a norm excluding women from the priestly ministry cannot be sustained on either logical or historical grounds," the report says.

It also says exclusion of women from church office cannot be deduced from passages in Paul's epistles admonishing women to be silent or submissive, inasmuch as the passages relate to proper congregational decorum "motivated by social and cultural factors." Further the report says other passages of Paul cite women a praying, prophesying and teaching at worship.

The task force, made up of four men and three women, was commissioned by the association in August, 1976, to study "the role of women in early Chistianity." It was headed by the Rev. Richard J. Sklba, former rector of St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee, who has been named to become auxiliary bishop of Milwaukee this month.

The report says the central New Testament conviction is that God has broken into history through Jesus, transforming the old social order so there is "neither Jew nor Greek ... slave nor free ... male nor female."

Experts Say Writings Lean Toward Heresy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Vatican experts on Friday finished questioning Belgian-born theologian Edward Schillebeeckx about his writings. Some churchmen say the works lean toward heresy.

Schillebeeckx, a professor at Holland's University of Nijmegen and a leading adviser to Dutch bishops, was interrogated for a second day by four Vatican experts. Later, he declined comment until a scheduled news conference Saturday.

The Vatican experts who questioned Schillebeeckx are members of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith. They included Belgian Jesuit Jean Galot, who said last week that Schillebeeckx's writings on dogma were dangerously close to heresy.

The investigation, first ordered by Pope Paul VI more than 15 years ago, is likely to have far-reaching impact because f the Doinican scholar's prominent position. The decision by Pope John Paul II to summon Schillebeeckx to Rome was seen as part of the pontiff's efforts to tighten doctrinal and disciplinary behavior in the church.

Many consider the Schillebeeckx case a test of the pope's willingness to allow doctrinal scholars to explore new ways of expressing traditional doctrine. Even some of those critical of his writings have praised his efforts to express church doctrine in modern language.

Schillebeeckx said recently the questioning, which the Vatican stressed was meant as "clarification" and not a trial, would center on nine doctrinal points.

Schillebeeckx has written in his books that Mary's virginity should not be taken necessarily as a biological fact and that the resurrection does not necessarily imply the physical recomposition of Jesus' body, but "the impact of his personality on his disciples and his presence in the hearts of all Christians."

Galot, the Belgian Jesuit who questioned Schillebeeckx, said the Vatican objects to the books because they give readers the impression "Jesus is no longer the true God, but a human person — and therefore precisely the most essential part of Chistianity is being questioned."

After the first day of questioning Thursday, the Vatican said a report with the questions and answers will be sent to "higher superiors" for further action. The statement did not elaborate.

In the past, the Vatican has ordered controversial theologians to stop teaching and writing. Until a few decades ago, the Vatican used to excommunicate or oust heretical theologians.

POINSETTIAS and Puppy Dogs

Poinsettias for Grandmother, a puppy for brother Joe, stationery is perfect for Aunt Sue.

"Tis the season to be jolly," carol the loudspeakers in the department stores, but each year it becomes harder. Days are frantic with shopping, wrapping, and addressing. There's too much to do, too many things to remember: Sally's school play, a white elephant for Joe's Scout party, the Kirby's gala on the twenty-second.

There's no time for thinking, but sometimes late at night; a moment for reflection. In the rush of doing all the right things have we forgotten our reasons for doing them? Have we come bearing gifts, like the Magi, with hearts empty of the wonder and awe that was theirs?

Perhaps we need to hear anew the age-old story of a tiny Babe wrapped and gently laid in a manger while shepherds quaked and angels sang. The door of your Church stands open. Worship there the newborn King this Christmas and every Sunday.

Carson Move Slated

JOHNNY CARSON

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Johnny Carson, who makes frequent appearances in Las Vegas, will be taking his nightclub show to the East Coast's gambling capital next year.

Carson will appear at Resorts International Hotel Casino on March 7 and 8, in late April and in the fall, according to Tibor Rudas, the casino hotel's vice president for entertainment.

Carson will appear in the facility's 1,750-seat show theater. He has hosted NBC-TV's "Tonight Show" for 17 years.

Silence Terminated

PARIS (AP) — Former King Michael of Romania broke a 10-year political silence Friday to call on his exiled compatriots to unite in readiness for "the day of salvation" — the overthrow of Romania's Communist regime.

In a message sent from his Swiss exile to the French news agency Agence France Presse, the 58-year-old former King expressed regret ove indiffernce and disunity among rival Romanian exile groups.

"At this period of great worldwide tension, I consider it my duty to address myself to Romanians everywhere to reaffirm my unshakeable confidence in our nation," he said.

He said Romanians "must quickly close ranks so that on the day of salvation we should again be united to confront all the enemies of Romania at home and abroad."

The Communist takeover in Romania forced Michael, the son of former King Carol, to abdicate and flee abroad in 1947.

Pope Plans Haiti Trip

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Friday he will "do all" to visit Haiti.

The pontiff received Haiti's amassador to the Holy See, Jean Claude Andre and told him he had been invited to Haiti twice "with persistence" and added:

"We will do all to realize this project."

The pontiff gave no other details. It is known that he plans trips to Brazil and the Philippines next year.

RCA To Replace Lost Satellite

NEW YORK (AP) — Plans are under way to launch a replacement in 18 months for Satcom III, the $20 million communications satellite that mysteriously vanished in orbit, RCA said Friday.

The company said in a statement that a complete search for the missing satellite could take several weeks but that so far "contact has not been regained."

RCA said it would seek authority from the Federal Communications Commission to launch a spare satellite now under construction. It will be at least 18 months before a replacement can be launched, the company said.

Satcom III stopped sending radio signals Monday, 15 seconds after the planned firing of an onboard kick motor that would have put it in a stationary orbit.

The craft, designed for use by the cable-television industry, was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Dec. 6.

RCA said its subsidiary, Americom, is continuing to provide service through two other RCA satellites and is contacting other companies for possible use of their satellites.

Bathroom Spy Causes Flood

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Police say a man who was apparently spying on women in the bathroom of the Albuquerque International Airport was responsible for causing a flood on two floors of the building.

Police said Friday it appeared someone had entered a crawl space above the women's restroom and made a small hole in the ceiling to peer inside the room. While crawling around in the small space, he apparently stepped on a copper water line and broke it. Flood damage was minimal, airport officials said.

Police said they suspected the man is an airport employee who also may have been involved in a series of break-ins in other offices at the terminal.

'Santa' Plays Dual Role

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Yes, there is a Santa and he lives in Missouri, where by day he assembles telephone computer parts.

But by night, Richard A. Santa dispenses holiday greetings to dozens of children who find his name in the telephone book.

"We've always had fun with the name," said Santa. "We talk to the kids right down to the wire and then we tell them that Santa needs their names and addresses to deliver all those gifts."

When Santa is out, his wife, Jan, has telephone duty. There are also two Santa helpers, daughters Tami, 13, and Marcea, 12.

Love Letter Never Opened

HONOLULU (AP) — Thirty-six years ago, when Alan R. Cason was a Marine, he wrote a love letter to his bride of one week as he sailed from New Zealand to the Gilbert Islands for the Battle of Tarawa.

Cason received the unopened letter Wednesday. It was postmarked Nov. 16, 1943, carried a six-cent airmail stamp and another stamp indicating approval by a censor, a practice during World War II.

The addressee, Cason's wife, Catherine, died in 1978.

Cason, who now manages the University of Hawaii bookstores, read the letter in disbelief. "I was sure long-winded in those days," he said.

The letter was addressed to Catherine Lashley, NNC, U.S.N., Navy 133. It was sent to Judy Bagshaw, public affairs officer for the Navy Exchange office at the Pearl Harbor Submarine Base, who passed it along to Cason.

Cason said he met his future wife at a hospital in Wellington, New Zealand, while he was recuperating from a tropical disease. They married soon after and had a week's honeymoon before "my ship sailed."

Marines Recruit Toddler

DEARBORN HEIGHTS, Mich. (UPI) — The U.S. Marine Corps apparently wants more than a few good men. It wants 2-year-old Charles Reyna.

So much so, in fact, that Charles this week was recruited for the second time in his short lifetime. The first time was when he was just 4 months old.

"I just don't understand it," said his mother, Consheila Reyna.

"The first letter came when we lived in Taylor, and you wouldn't think they would do something like that again. They followed him to our new home, too."

The latest bid for Charles to join the Marines came in a letter signed by Maj. Jerry Hudak of Los Angeles. It asked Charles to return a post card indicating if he would like to enlist.

"He knows a lot of words, almost every word there is — I guess he could talk for himself," Mrs. Reyna said. "But the Marines aren't ready for him yet. He plays mostly with his toy soldiers and goes around screeching."

Communism Disavowed

TOM HAYDEN

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Tom Hayden, political activist and husband of actress Jane Fonda, says he had a short-lived "engagement with socialism" but never has been a Communist.

He says he is being "slandered" by rumors that he was once a Communist, rumors he says are being circulated because of his growing influene in the Democratic party.

"I was never a Communist," the former antiwar leader said Thursday night after an acrimonious, hour-long debate with state Senate President Pro Tem James Mills. The debate was sparked by a feud that developed after the Senate rejected the appointment of Hayden's wife to the state Arts Council.

"I had the briefest engagement with socialism," Hayden said. "I don't think it's un-American to absorb or think about socialist ideas."

Hayden said he had "modified my position on socialism over the years because I have seen socialism does not solve all the problems."

He said he was being criticized by some Democratic party leaders "to divert attention from the real issue, that party leaders have become tired."

Soviets Say NATO Destroyed Basis For Further Talks

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union Friday charged that NATO has "destroyed the basis" for further arms control talks in Europe by approving the deployment of nuclear missiles and that the West must bear "a heavy responsibility for a new round of the arms race."

The sharp criticism came in a 500-word commentary by official Tass news agency in response to NATO's approval Wednesday of a plan to deploy 572 Pershing-2 medium range missiles in Western Europe.

In a rare move apparently designed to lend added authority to the commentary, the article was signed by Tass Director General Sergei Losev.

"It should be stated with full responsibility that those countries who voted in favor of the deployment of American missiles in Western Europe destroyed the existing basis for talks," Losev said.

"Talks from a position of strength which were suggested by NATO are not the talks on the basis of equitable security of the sides which were suggested by the Soviet Union and the countries of the Warsaw Treaty.

"There can't be any talks on NATO's basis from a position of strength and don't let anyone be deceived in this respect," the commentary said.

"The NATO Council killed the very basis for the talks on midrange weapons and thus they placed upon themselves a heavy responsibility for a new round of arms race."

Losev described the so-called Eurostrategic missiles, Pershing-2 and Cruise Tomahawk missiles capable of striking targets well inside the Soviet Union, as "a qualitatively new weapon intended to change the present balance of forces in the region in favor of NATO and create a new strategic situation in Europe."

The argument that an attempt to change the acknowledged balance of forces would "destroy the basis" for talks was first advanced by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at a news conference in Bonn on Nov. 23. It has been hammered home in the Soviet Union's mounting press campaign almost every day since.

"The trouble here is the Soviets have not yet clarified what basis they are talking about and what talks," a Western diplomat commented on the Losev article.

"Although the Eurostrategic weapons were originally supposed to be discussed in the SALT-III talks, Gromyko suggested on Nov. 23 that they might be dealt with in separate talks. They have never made anyone privy to the details of their thinking on this. We are still waiting for the shoe to drop," the diplomat said.

Dissidents Detained To Stifle Protests

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish police detained 26 dissidents late this week in an apparent effort to stifle protests on the forthcoming anniversary of bloody food price riots in Poland's Baltic ports in 1970, dissident sources said Friday.

Jacek Kuron, spokesman for the Committee for Social Self-Defense, said two of those detained had been held without charge for longer than the 48 hours allowed by law. He said the dissidents plan requiem Masses in Warsaw and other Polish cities next Monday in honor of workers killed in the riots, and will commemorate the dead in wreath-laying ceremonies Tuesday.

The December 1970 riots toppled the administration of Wladyslaw Gomulka, who was replaced by current leader Edward Gierek.

Texas Comes Of Age In Eyes Of National Business Community

United Press International

From Louie Welch's 25th floor office in downtown Houston, the former mayor and one of Houston's biggest boosters can look out one window and see a 55-story office building under construction.

From another window in his Chamber of Commerce office he can see a 50-story skyscraper going up.

Also in view are three other major office buildings at varying stages of completion. And foundation work has begun on a 75-story skyscraper that will tower over the rest of Houston's skyline. The current building boom in downtown Houston is taking place at varying levels throughout the state.

•In Dallas, where cranes perched on buildings under construction have become as much a part of the skyline as the lighted dome atop Reunion Tower.

•In Austin, where the traditional government and college town atmosphere is giving way to a more big-city feel, with suburban, bedroom communities springing up and major corporations like IBM And Motorola establishing major plants.

•In San Antonio, where the population has grown enough to make it the 10th largest city in the nation.

Texas came of age in the eyes of the national business community during the 1970s and rather than being surprised by the phenomenon, many business leaders simply wonder why it took so long.

Growth was not so much a result of Sunbelt sunshine — "the favorable business climate" touted by state boosters — as it was economic deterioration in other parts of the country coupled with the realization that cheap energy was a thing of the past, says Charles Zlatkovich, former director of the University of Texas Institute of Business Research.

Much of the substantial growth of the last decade can be attributed to hard times outside the state, especially in the traditional business centers of the Northeast, Zlatkovich said.

Texas had the basics that often were lacking elsewhere: low taxes, a large non-union labor force and the availability of large, developable tracts of land. Companies, especially during the recession of the early '70s, deluged the state with inquiries, and then decided to make the move.

And while the energy crisis that burst onto the U.S. Economy with the Arab oil embargo of 1973 has been harmful to America's economy overall, it has been nothing short of a boon to Texas' economic development. "It got us back in the oil business on a big scale," said Zlatkovich. "And the fact that they've had severe winters for the last few years in the Northeast hasn't hurt us any either."

The rejuvenation of Texas' oil industry had a strong ripple effect on the state economy as a whole.

Howard Horne, the premier leasing agent in downtown Houston, put it simply.

"Our economy and growth are tied directly to the energy business. As the energy business expands, the related businesses expand and that creates demand for more expansion," he said.

The growth of the Port of Corpus Christi during the last decade illustrates the trend.

From the late 1950s to 1972, the port handled an average 25 million to 30 million tons per year. Business was consistent but showed very little growth.

"Then in 1972, business zoomed off the scale," said port spokesman Don Rodman. "In '73 we only imported 13 million barrels of crude a year. During the last three years we imported about 150 million barrels each year. In a period of six to seven years, we essentially doubled our tonnage."

Port officials are unworried by stated goals to decrease national energy consumption.

"The reality of what we're looking at in the future is that we'll be importing every bit as much oil as we have the last few years, regardless of what (President) Carter might say he wants," Rodman said.

As new business and industry began moving to the state, officials moved to accommodate their needs and plan for even stronger future expansion.

Dallas-Fort Worth went out and built the biggest airport in the world, located midway between the two cities that had been served by cramped airports in each.

Air traffic roughly doubled between the time D-FW airport opened in 1974 and 1979, with passenger traffic increasing from 12.8 million to 23 million. If ever built to total capacity, D-FW could serve 200 million passengers annually.

In Houston, airport expansion was hard pressed to keep pace with the local boom.

In the early 70s, the airline companies operating out of Houston Intercontinental told officials they would not need to expand the airport until 1996.

Municipal officials disagreed and in 1975 went ahead with plans to double the airport's size. It was the right move, airport spokesman Frank Ward says the airlines currently are standing in line for additional space.

"That has problems of its own," he said, "but it's a nice position to be in." Plans to quadruple the size of the original airport also have been formulated.

Texas' business relationship with Mexico underwent substantial alteration during the decade, due primarily to the fact that Texas — and the rest of the United States — seemingly overnight was put in the position of taking Mexico seriously.

During the '70s, Mexico discovered vast oil reserves, devalued the peso and instituted what was called the "Maquiladora program," designed to reduce the country's widespread unemployment.

Mexico's oil finds, which rapidly brought Mexico new importance in the international arena, proved a quick bonanza to American oilfield equipment manufacturers, whose goods were needed to begin and sustain production.

Numerous oil-related Mexican businesses, including Pemex, the government oil monopoly, have opened offices in Houston.

Border cities, like Brownsville, Laredo, Eagle Pass and Harlingen, began increased business dealings with their suddenly more visible — and important — neighbor to the south.

The improved business relationship caused political changes as well — Americans, including Gov. Bill Clements who founded SEDCO, the largest oilwell drilling firm in the world, began courting Mexico. And Mexican officials made it clear they now wanted to deal with the United States as equals.

The devaluation of the peso in 1976 caused a sharp decrease in purchases of American goods by Mexicans. With their buying power roughly halved, U.S. goods were out of reach for many and American border retailers suffered.

In San Antonio, where Tom Frost Bank vice president Earl Chumney said pesos used to circulate almost as freely as dollars, the Mexican currency suddenly became unwanted. Department stores which had been relatively free with extending credit to Mexican nationals adopted tougher rules.

McAllen is typical of small American cities along the border that have reaped the benefits of Mexico's "maquiladora" program which allows foreign companies to build plants in Mexico, assemble products and export the back out with taxes based only on the value added by the assembly work.

Frank Burkhead, director of business development with the McCallen Chamber of Commerce, said the program has been the most pervasive economic force for the border area in the last decade and provided jobs for 300,000 Mexicans in American-owned plants.

The program, in which Mexican workers assemble American-made parts, takes advantage of American raw materials and technology as well as inexpensive Mexican labor, Burkhead said.

American trade unions argue that the program has eliminated American jobs, but manufacturers say the program allows them to remain competitive with countries like Taiwan and Japan whose labor costs are substantially cheaper than those in the United States.

Economists predict the '80s will be another decade of growth for Texas, but the boom, while outstripping the national pace, is expected to be less rapid than that of the '70s and centered in different locations, Zlatkovich said.

If the '70s was the time in which Texas' big cities soared, the '80s should profit the state's smaller metropolitan areas, particularly those in the eastern half of the state.

Tyler, Longview, Nacogdoches, Lufkin, Corsicana — all should experience increased growth rates in the next decade, and Belton-Temple-Killeen should continue the boom that began in the '70s, Zlatkovich said. El Paso and San Angelo also were expected to fare well in the '80s.

Zlatkovich said a big part of the predicted trend of business to migrate toward Texas' smaller cities is based on growth problems associated with the boom years.

"Houston for example had a great transportation system in 1970," Zlatkovich said. "Since then the system just hasn't kept pace with the demands on it. In a way some of that congestion is just irreversible — it's very hard to go back and build freeways in a city that's already there."

Zlatkovich also said he was worried by the lack of progress in certain areas, notably transportation, that once served to attract outsiders to the state.

"In the 1970s in transportation, we kind of went downhill and backwards. There was expansion in airport capacity, but our rail system mainly just deteriorated, the highway system which had always been a source of great pride in Texas began to get congested and deteriorate in some areas; with mass transit, nothing much happened at all."

But officials of Houston and Dallas, for example, are hoping to counter such predictions.

> Texas came of age in the eyes of the national business community during the 1970's and rather than being surprised by the phenomenon, many business leaders simply wonder why it took so long.

COLUMBIAN MINES

Though Colombia is best known for coffee, more than 600 mines make it a leading producer of gold in South America. Colombia also mines 90 percent of the world's emeralds, the National Geographic Society reports.

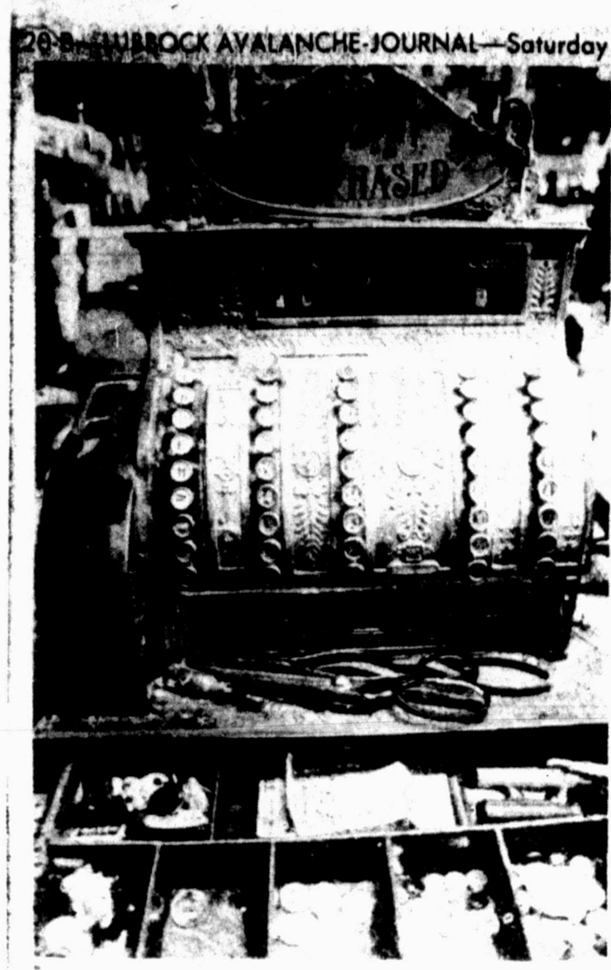
Hardware Store Has Few Changes Since 1905

By DIANE JENNINGS JUSTICE

IN AMERICA



FEW THINGS CHANGED — Burwell Cox, co-founder of Jones-Cox and Co. in 1905, would have little trouble recognizing his store today. Little has changed including this venerable cash register that remains in use today

HASKELL (NEA) — Walk into the Jones-Cox and Co. hardware store and Wallace Cox Sr. will drop his newspaper, rise from his resting place in the oak rocker that was once his father's and ask if he can help you.

Cox has been asking that question since he started blacking stoves for 10 cents each when his father, Burwell Cox, opened the store in 1905.

The hardware and furniture store is the oldest continuous family business in this West Texas town. It was passed down from Burwell to Wallace Sr. and now is run by Wallace Jr.

There is also a fourth generation to pass it on to since Wallace Jr. and his wife Jo have five children.

The Jones in the store's name stands for one-time part-owner J.F. Jones.

If Burwell Cox walked into his store today, he would have no trouble recognizing it because little has changed since it opened at the turn of the century.

The original flooring and decorated tin ceilings are intact as well as the old-fashioned pine cabinets, display cases and storage units.

The hand-made ax holder is still in use, as is the old nail scale and the cash register.

Modern lights hanging from the ceiling appear to be the only innovation since the store was opened.

"We're trying to keep it old," Wallace Jr. explains as he points out the new wooden display areas and other additions designed to fit in with the other fixtures.

But that wasn't always the owner's intention.

"In 1962 we had a tornado come through here and tore up a lot of these new buildings," recalls Wallace Sr. "This old thing only lost one window. We were hoping it would get torn up so we could get a new building."

Remodeling plans have come and gone through the years.

Finally, says Jo Cox, "the nostalgia craze hit and we had a genuine country store on our hands."

But Jones-Cox and Co. was more than a country store in years past. It has also served as a blacksmith shop, funeral home and cooking school.

In the early 1900s, it was common for the local hardware store to double as a funeral home. In the back of the store was an embalming room, casket room and parlor for small services.

The Coxes quit the funeral business in 1944 because, says Wallace Sr., "we couldn't work all day and work all night."

His son still remembers when bodies were brought in and out of the establishment.

"I used to bring my buddies to play hide and seek in the caskets," he says.

The younger man also remembers when county extension agents used to setup chairs in the upstairs balcony area and hold cooking schools for area homemakers.

The elder Cox still works six days a week, 9½ hours a day — with a three-hour lunch break and time for a nap, he jokes. He used to get up at 6 a.m. to open the store; sometimes he stayed open until 11 p.m. or midnight.

"I found out it didn't make me rich, so I quit it," he says.

Although the business may not have made the Coxes rich, the contents of the store are invaluable. Among them is an old wooden screw case that sits next to the rocker.

"I had a gal who wanted to buy it for $300 years ago," Wallace Sr. says, pulling out the triangular drawers. "I told her no. I wouldn't have any place to put my screws. That's 10 times more than it was worth."

Woman Stabs Assailant With His Own Knife

RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) — When a man climbed into her car and put a knife to her throat, petite Franka Slattery, a 105-pound bank teller, said she thought of "biting him real hard."

Instead, the 4-foot-10 woman grabbed her assailant's hunting knife and stabbed him through the leg.

Mrs. Slattery, 36, said her initial reaction when the man jumped into her car as she was leaving work Tuesday was, "You must be kidding."

"At first I didn't think it was a real knife," she said.

But Mrs. Slattery said that when he placed the 4½-inch blade against her throat and shoved her into the passenger seat, she knew he wasn't kidding.

"I kept thinking that I don't want to die," she said.

The man was trying to start the car when Mrs. Slattery grabbed the knife and stabbed him in the right thigh, police said.

Police said Raymond Hughes, 36, of West Rutland, was arrested shortly after the incident as he hobbled bleeding down a nearby alley. They said the 5-foot-11 Hughes, who weighs 160 pounds, would be arraigned on aggravated assault and attempted kidnapping charges.

Mrs. Slattery said she kept thinking that "if we drive away, he will rape me and then kill me."

"I was thinking of biting him real hard," she said.

But when the man fumbled for a moment with a safety harness, she saw an opening and snatched the knife.

Mrs. Slattery said a brief wrestling match ensued, until she pulled the knife away and plunged it into his leg.

It went through to the seat, she said.

Number Of New York Voters Drops 13.5 Percent

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — In the five years since 1974, the number of registered voters in New York state has dropped by more than 1¼ million or about 13.5 percent, according to the state Board of Elections.

The greatest decline appears to be between 1978 and this year when there was a loss of 586,084 registered voters or 7.5 percent.

The decline from 7,801,328 registered voters in 1978 to this year's total of 7,215,244 reflects a normal pattern of lower voter registration totals in the years between presidential or gubernatorial elections such as 1979. In 1974, the state had 8,341,198 registered voters.

Election Board officials on Thursday said they were not certain that an "off-year" election year was enough to explain the decline.

The decline does reflect, however, a nationwide trend with fewer and fewer people bothering to vote or register.

Another factor may be that there are simply fewer New Yorkers to register. State and federal officials estimated in 1978 that the state's population had decreased by about 500,000 since the last federal census in 1970.

The biggest enrollment declines in the past year have occurred in New York City, a bastion of Democratic strength. There, voter registration dropped from 2,948,633 in 1978 to 2,669,242 this year.

There were also losses in the city's traditionally Republican suburbs, but nothing as dramatic as that recorded in New York City.

Nassau County fell from 689,415 to 623,049 registered voters; Suffolk fell from 539,089 to 480,622 while Westchester County dropped from 399,629 registered voters to 378,335.

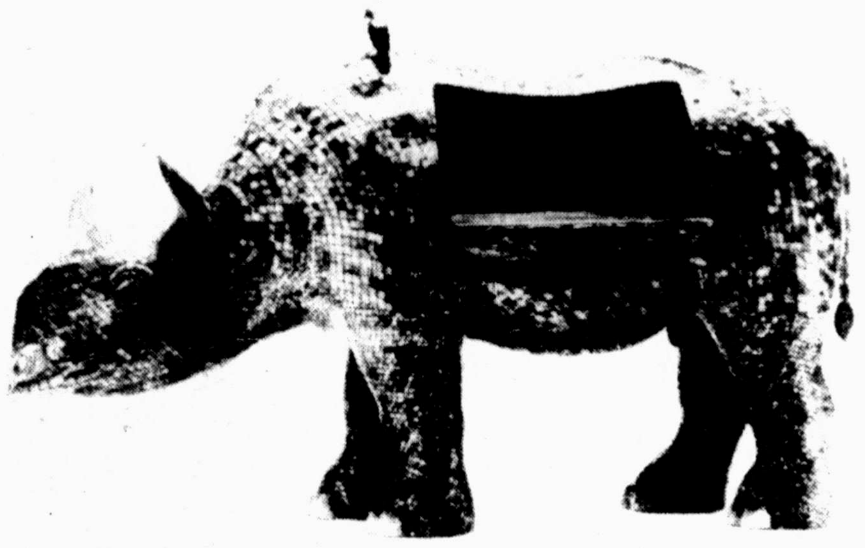
NEWS VISUALS



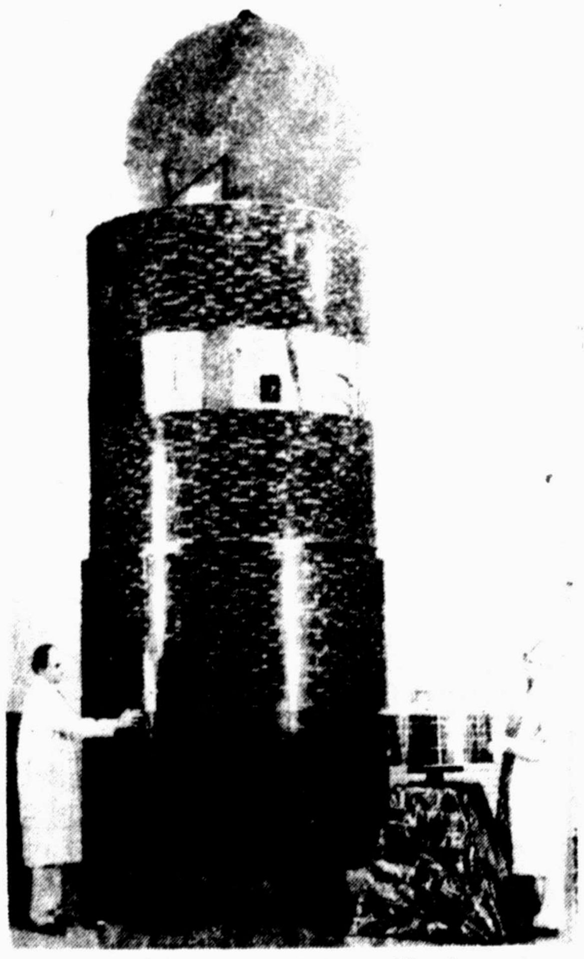
ZOOLOGISTS WOULD PUZZLE over this rhinoceros with drawers for a stomach. Actually, it is a rhino desk of koa wood and ebony built by Michael Speaker of Los Angeles. It is one of the unusual pieces featured in the "New Handmade Furniture" exhibit that is beginning a two-year tour of museums in the United States and Canada.

HALF OF HIS old pants are now "waisted," says Gary Thomas, who filled them out just 14 months ago when he tipped the scales at 420 pounds. Thomas attributes his new self to a 700-calorie diet of lean meat, vegetables, fruits, diet soft drinks and lots of grapefruit, cereal and gelatin sweetened with saccharin.

TIRES ARE NOW being designed with help from computer-controlled drafting devices like this one. Technician Stanley Fish compares the tread pattern of a new model of radial tire with an enlarged mold drawing of its tread design at an Akron, Ohio, facility of Firestone.

THIS EWE HAS TRIPLETS! She is half Finnsheep, a crossbreed prone to multiple births, according to an Agriculture Department geneticist. The department estimates that increased use of such ewes would lower the costs to farmers of producing a pound of lamb by 20 to 25 percent.

SINGER PATTI LABELLE has launched her third musical career — this time as a solo performer. She entered the business in 1963 with Patti LaBelle and the Bluebelles ("I Sold My Heart to the Junkman"), which in the early 1970s became LaBelle ("Lady Marmalade").



MY, HOW COMMUNICATIONS satellites have grown over the past two decades! At lower right is a model of the original Syncom, which could handle 50 telephone calls when demonstrated at the 1961 Paris Air Show. It is dwarfed by a model of the new Satellite Business Systems, which has a capacity for 13,900 simultaneous phone calls. The SBS is scheduled to begin service in 1981, according to its manufacturers at Hughes Aircraft, which also produced Syncom.

SPINNING TESTS ON LOW MICRONAIRE High Plains cotton are being conducted by domestic mills and also by some foreign mills that normally don't use qualities of this kind.

Plans also are underway for new tests at the Textile Research Center at Texas Tech University. Fiber strength of this year's crop is surprisingly good, in view of the mike values, and it is believed the spinning performance will be better than otherwise might be thought.

Low mike cotton is particularly well suited to open-end spinning and the use of this machinery, as compared with the more conventional ring-spinning method, has been gradually expanding.

The Far East, the major market for High Plains cotton, has a large number of open-end spindles. But tests now underway and planned may open up markets outside the traditional outlets.

France, for example, earlier this month bought 1,000 bales of 3.2 mike Texas cotton to conduct tests on whether European mills can successfully spin cotton with lower mikes than they are accustomed to using.

MIKE VALUES THIS YEAR HAVE BEEN far below earlier expectations and have aborted a three-year trend toward higher miking cotton.

The base mike range of 3.5-4.9 accounted for 24 percent of the 1974 crop and about 13 percent of the 1975 output. This improved to 56 percent in 1976, when the mike average was 3.6, and to 83 percent in 1977 and 73 percent in 1978.

The improvement helped to stimulate domestic interest in High Plains cotton. Exports still constitute the bulk of the market for the High Plains crop. But more domestic mills have found how to spin area cotton and some now depend rather heavily on it for such constructions as denims and corduroys.

Merchants, not expecting such a heavy percentage of low mike cotton, sold ahead earlier this year a larger proportiof the higher mikes than may be available in this crop.

But the orders could be revised under mutual agreements — with compensating price adjustments — to low mike cottons, with the large discounts in the spot market as a mill inducement.

Or if low mike cotton is shipped against a higher mike order, the mills could take the matter to arbitration and reach a discount settlement through that approach.

TO AVOID LOSING CUSTOMERS, however, merchants will be forced to ship qualities that mills can use, sources said. In some cases, they said, where mills can use only base mike cotton, merchants will be forced to substitute more expensive Delta, Southeast or South Texas growths for the cheaper High Plains qualities.

Aware of the declining mikes and the amount miking below 3.0, more foreign mills now are buying under specifications of "no control limit." This means mike can vary only one-tenth point, without a penalty, from what was specified by the foreign mill.

Thus if the mill asks for 3.2 mikes, merchants must ship cotton ranging from 3.1-3.3. There is more leeway, depending upon different rules in different countries purchasing the cotton, when the no-control-limit rule is not applied.

The small amount of cotton miking 2.6 and below is expected to wind up mostly in the government loan or eventually be sold very cheaply to mills making mattress batting and other similar products.

In contrast to this year, there have been other seasons when merchants sold more low mikes ahead than ultimately were available from a high quality crop.

Farmers aren't the only ones with high risks in High Plains cotton.

COTTON FUTURES SOARED TO NEW CONTRACT highs Friday and rallied on late commission house buying to close near the day's top levels, up 124 to 110 points in nearbys.

Floor brokers said a surge in gold prices on renewed tensions in Iran prompted hectic afternoon trading, with March posting 124-point gains to close at 73.01 cents and May up 114 points at 74.35. July closed up 110 points at 75.70. Estimated volume was a hefty 13,050.

The market opened lower and continued downward until mill fixations and speculative buying, based on technical strength and Thursday's bullish USDA export report, pushed prices higher. New contract highs were established for the second day in a row except for March, which Thursday rose to within eight points of what was then its life-of-contract high of 72.28 before crashing through it Friday.

Trading on Telcot totaled 31,755 bales on an average price of 53.72 cents and an average over the loan of 1,041 points. The call difference under the new fast-flow program was plus 61 points.

The USDA reported Thursday that U.S. cotton export sales for current marketing year delivery totaled 263,700 running bales during the week ended Dec. 2. China took 122,200 bales, bringing its 1979-80 commitment to 2,117,000. Other major purchasers included Japan at 27,700 bales, Hong Kong at 25,000, and Taiwan at 28,200.

Exports for the week totaled 170,600, high for the season so far, and included 39,700 bales to China.

COTTON GROWERS WILL NOT BE REQUIRED to set-aside acreage to qualify for target price protection under the 1980 cotton program, the USDA announced Friday.

However, the USDA said, producers will be required to reduce their 1980 acreage by 10 percent from their 1979 plantings in order to be assured of target price protection on their total planted acreage.

Cotton acreage in 1980 is likely to be 13.5 million, down nearly 500,000 acres from this year, reflecting shifts to grain sorghum in Texas and Oklahoma, the USDA said.

With no acreage set-aside, growers are expected to plant between 12.8 million and 14.0 million acres, the department said. With 13.5 million acres planted and yields of 485 pounds per acre, production would be about 12.8 million bales, down sharply from 14.5 million estimated for the 1979 crop.

THE FINAL TARGET PRICE WILL BE announced when the final yield and cost estimates for the 1979 crop become available, the USDA said, but it is likely to be between 57 and 61 cents. The 1979 target is 57.7 cents.

Decisions are based on current conditions, the department said, and should the demand situation change the USDA would consider establishing a cotton reserve program similar to the program for grains.

Jim Williams, acting secretary of agriculture, said the decision for no set-aside or voluntary diversion program is based on exceptional cotton export demand this season and indications of a modest gain in domestic use next season.

The preliminary national program acreage is 11,602,285.

A set-aside or diversion program in 1980, coupled with a bad weather year, could result in tight supplies and a sharp reduction in cotton stocks, the USDA said.

Farmers May Have To Delay Profits From Corn-Gasohol

By The Associated Press

Corn farmers dreaming of OPEC-style profits from gasohol may have to wait 1½ years or more before the nation's energy troubles inflate corn prices, grain analysts say.

Still higher gasoline prices and more production plants are needed before much corn begins disapearing into the nation's gas tanks — and there are other barriers a well.

Although many motorists already are using gasohol — a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol distilled from corn or another sugar source— it's still too epensive at today's corn prices to compete with gasoline.

Even future prospects for increased gasohol consumption haven't yet sent eager speculators scurrying into the corn futures market, where one can bet on one's price predictions, analysts said.

This week, for example corn futures languished under the weight of a record harvest amid only routine export activity, dropping 5 cents a bushel to $2.68¼ for December deliveries.

"It all depends on what petroleum prices do," said Tom Carpenter, grain analyst with Cargill Investor Services in Chicago. "They would have to rise above $1.50 a gallon before gasohol becomes competitive. It's possible that the OPEC meeting Dec. 17 may make it economically feasible," he added, citing widespread market expectations of another oil price increase.

Then, if gasoline prices should rise enough for gasohol to become comptitive, it would take 18 months to 2 years to get new gasohol production facilities operating.

"In the next year or so I don't think it (gasohol) will have much effect (on prices)," said Roger Eisenhauer, industrial coordinator at an Agriculture Department research center in Peoria, Ill. "But down the line there is a distinct possibility. It depends on whether our imports of petroleum stabilize.

"If we get into an embargo situation, it could afect prices. If we are cut off from our Middle Eastern (oil) sources, this is the only viable short term alternative we have," he added.

The Grand Canyon, the largest gorge in the world, could hold more water than 20 Lake Eries, the National Geographic Society says.

Tech Graduate Gets Government Position

Becky Thornton, who recently received Texas Tech University's first master's degree in interdisciplinary arid lands studies, was hired by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) in Washington, D.C.

Thornton will serve as an assistant to Dr. J. Eleonora Sabadell, who heads BLM's National Program to Combat Desertification.

Desertification is the process by which deserts spread to surrounding areas through degradation of land, either as a result of man's activities or because of extreme weather conditions.

Thornton received a bachelor's degree in geography from Texas Tech.

Dr. Idris R. Traylor Jr., deputy director of Texas Tech's International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS), said that the interdisciplinary degree with the arid lands emphasis is unique in higher education.

"We are certainly proud that our first graduate was selected for a position within the BLM," Traylor said.

Traylor is also a professor of history and serves as graduate advisor for students in the arid lands studies curriculum. The arid lands option, developed by ICASALS, is administered by Dr. Eric G. Bolen, associate dean of the graduate school, who supervises all interdisciplinary programs at the master's level.

Ndu Uzoh Usoh, a student from Nigeria, completed requirements for the master's degree this fall to become the program's second graduate. He will return to his home country.

The Shell Companies Foundation provides scholarship monies for students entering the curriculum. Students who major in arid lands studies are eligible to apply for scholarships. Thornton received a $2,500 scholarship under the Shell program.

For more information on the graduate curriculum write to Dr. Idris R. Traylor Jr., P. O. Box 4620, ICASALS, Texas Tech University, Lubbock Texas 79409, or call (806) 742-2218.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Most grain and soybean futures edged higher late Friday in a reaction to news of increased Middle Eastern tensions.

Reports of Iraqi raids on the Iranian border led to renewed buying in precious metals and to moderate gains in grain and soybean futures. Traders reason that ownership of commodities is superior to currency or other paper assets in times of international strife.

Earlier in the session, prices had drifted lower, continuing a slow downtrend begun earlier in the week. Export markets were devoid of major news, with the Soviet Union reportedly in the market only for Malaysian palm oil.

Moderate country cash corn sales pressured corn futures.

At the close, soybeans were 2 to 5¼ cents higher, January $6.68½; wheat was 3¾ to 5½ cents higher, December $4.33¾; corn was ½ cent lower to 1½ cents higher, December $2.71, and oats were 1¼ to 2¼ cents higher, December $1.44¼.

Cattle Futures Close Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 110 points lower to 47 higher in cautious trade of 20,079 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. December was off the most at the day's low with April up the most. August was up 70 for a time on buying spurred by Mideast tension.

The erratic trade stemmed form evening up ahead of the weekend and the day's cattle on feed report. The nearby contract ran into resistance after prices edged ahead of most cash markets although the Panhandle sold at $70 again.

Deliveries total 1,105 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 104½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady with the best top $69 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 116,000 head. About 17,000 head are expected on Monday at the major markets.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said cattle and calves on feed on Dec. 1 totaled 8,269,000, 11 percent less than one year earlier. During November, 1,848,000, two per cent less, were placed on feed. The number marketed during November stood at 1,438,000 head, 16 percent less than a year ago.

In Texas, 1,990,000 were on feed as of Dec. 1 compared to 2,120,000 a year ago. About 405,000 were placed on feed and 355,000 were marketed compared to year ago figures of 370,000 and 460,000, respectively.

Chicago Mercantile Exchange floor traders immediate comments on the report were negative to bearish.

Heavier than expected placements, lighter marketings and slightly more than expected cattle on feed are expected to weigh on futures.

Feeder cattle futures closed 47 lower to 40 higher on 2,192 contracts. March was the weakest with November up the most. Trade was erratic ahead of the weekend and the cattle on feed report.

Selling carried over from Thursday's profit taking with support at times on Mideast tension.

About 1,200 head are expected at the major markets on Monday.

Hog futures closed 92 higher to 20 lower on 5,973 lots. December was up the most at the day's high with February down the most.

The mixed pattern followed that of other meat futures with weekend evening up a factor. Support was generated by Mideast tension and the discount of futures to cash with selling traced to profit taking.

Deliveries total 28 thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 1 at 77½ to 83½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top $42.25 at Indianapolis. Kill was 364,000 head. Receipts at the major terminals on Monday are expected to total 36,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 1 to 40 higher on 7,661 cars. The market rebounded after a loss of 80 and ran up 85 for a time to the highest in more than two weeks. Much of the late short covering spilled over from record high gold as Mideast tension flared.

Initial selling followed heavy hog runs and kill along with increased belly storings and softer cash trade Friday.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off 1 at 30 to 43 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

WEIGHT

Two systems of weights and measures exist side by sie in the U.S. today, with roughly equal but separate legislative sanction: the U.S. Customary System and the International (Metric) System. Throughout U.S. history, the Customary System has been, as its name implies, customarily used.

Cougars Oust Seagraves

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ABILENE — Not only did China Spring beat Seagraves 16-9 in Friday night's Class A semifinal playoff game, but the Cougars also beat the Eagles at their own game.

All year long, Seagraves, which won the District 5-A football crown and carried a 13-0 record into Friday night's game, had used its superior quickness and a stifling defense to smother its opponents. Friday night they found out how it felt to be on the other side.

Folks who have seen Seagraves may find it hard to believe, but China Spring was indeed quicker than the Eagles. The Seagraves defense, which relies on pursuit to stop its opponents, was easily solved by the Cougars.

They simply outran the pursuit.

The Seagraves offense, which had relied on quick-opening holes freeing its shifty running backs, was shut down when those holes closed even quicker than they opened.

Actually, the game was really not as close as the final score indicated. Although they lost by only seven points, the Eagles (who averaged over 350 yards a game total offense this season) were held to under 100, and almost half of that came in the second period.

The Eagles did get on the board first when, as was the case almost all night, it was China Spring's own mistakes which hurt the Cougars most.

Seagraves was stopped cold on its first possession at its 29 yard line and forced to punt, but China Spring was called for roughing the kicker to give the Eagles an opportunity to drive the ball further.

The Eagles took the ball to the Cougar 41 before being stopped again.

This time Seagraves' punt rolled dead at the China Spring 16. On first down, the Cougars were called for holding, moving the ball back to the eight. On second down, quarterback Mark Davis faded back to pass but was trapped in the end zone by Eagles Mike McCormick and Richard Wilson. He got the pass off before hitting the ground, but the whistle had already blown, ending the play as a safety for Seagraves.

The second quarter was decisive for China Spring.

It opened with Davis scrambling 25 yards for a touchdown with 9:54 remaining. His pass for the extra point failed, leaving the Cougars up 6-2.

They stretched that lead the next time they touched the ball, driving 53 yards in 13 plays for another touchdown. Davis scored this one, too, on a four-yard keeper. Kenneth Elliot kicked the extra point and, with 2:56 remaining, China Spring led 13-2.

The Cougars dominated the third period but couldn't get anymore points on the scoreboard.

That drought ended early in the fourth quarter.

With 10:949 remaining in the game, Elliot came on and split the uprights with a 38-yard field goal, apparently assuring China Spring the win.

But Seagraves had other plans, and the Cougars did all they could to help them.

Twice in the fourth quarter, China Spring stopped the Eagles cold, but two costly back-to-back fumbles enabled Seagraves to keep rolling.

After three plays gained only one yard, the Eagles punted 28 yards to the midfield. On first down, however, Davis fumbled after losing five yards, giving Seagraves a first down at the Cougar 45. The punt and the fumble combined for a 33-yard gain for Seagraves.

But again the Eagle offense could do nothing.

On fourth down and seven, the Eagles punted to Jeff James at his own 15. He promptly fumbled the ball and Alfredo Serna recovered it there.

Two runs gained one yard but, on third down, Seagraves quarterback Dale Welch found end Scotty Middleton on a down-and-out at the two yard line.

This time the Eagles didn't hesitate as Davis Morgan cracked over for the touchdown on the next play. He kicked the extra point to make the score 16-9.

Still, China Spring remained hospitable after losing three yards on a running play following the ensuing kickoff. Davis tossed the ball up for grabs and it was intercepted by Seagraves' Kenneth Hart at the Cougar 48.

He found an open field and carried the ball all the way to the China Spring 13 before finally being tackled. But the Eagles just couldn't take advantage of the break.

On first down, a running play lost five yards and then, on second down, Welch fumbled after scrambling to the Cougar 14.

Eagle running back Ronnie Griffin, who had gained 1,500 yards this season, was held to only 22 yards on 19 carries. Fullback Morgan was somewhat more successful, picking up 47 on 14.

Eagles Find Composure, Claw Panthers 71-57

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Gary Bowe just couldn't quite believe what was going on right in front of his very nose. It was a real honest to goodness mirage. Sort of like seeing a "Hot To Go" sign peering over the next sand dune.

There were his Lubbock Christian High Eagles, a team laden with experience, acting like a group of wet-behind-the-ears rookies. And for the whole Reese AFB gym to see.

"There we were down by only six points," explained Bowe, "and we were acting like we were losing by 20 (points). I felt we'd lost our composure."

So Bowe formed his hands in shape of a T, called the crew back to the bench and offered a little fatherly advice. "I told them not to rush it," continued Bowe. "That all it took was three buckets and we were tied. It was no time to panic."

Apparently coacher knew best this time.

The Eagles bounded back from the three-bucket deficit and went on to dust off Dunbar 71-57 Friday night. LCHS now moves into the championship game of the Reese AFB Christmas Classic basketball tournament against first-year participate Clovis, a narrow 63-60 winner over Lubbock Coronado. The key game is set for an 8:45 p.m. tipoff tonight.

The Eagles thus become the first team ever to play in both division championship games. LCHS captured the Commander's Trophy Division (for small schools) back in 1975 — the first year of the three-day event.

"I felt this could be the year we compete with the bigger schools," said Bowe. "Next year might be different, though. We're losing eight seniors off this team."

LCHS had advance into the winner's bracket by knocking off Roswell, N.M., 87-51 Thursday night. Earlier that evening Dunbar had edged Abilene Cooper 59-57 in overtime on its way to Friday's date with the Eagles.

Dunbar, which had rattled LCHS into turnover-after-turnover in the opening stanza, jumped out to a 21-15 first-period lead. However, the Eagles came right back during the second quarter and outscored the Panthers 18-8. That meant, of course, LCHS held a 33-29 halftime advantage.

Shawn Bowe opened the third period with a layup to up the count to six points 35-29, but LeRoy Rivers and Stanley Whitfield both connected on short-rangers to cut the Eagle margin to two points, 35-33. And that was as close as the mistaken-ridden Panthers would come the rest of the night.

Using buckets by Billy McConnell and Shawn Williams, the Eagles built up an eight-point lead, 41-33, with 2:39 left in the third frame.

But the clincher for LCHS came with 4:59 remaining in the fourth period when Whitfield, DHS' standout center, was whistled for his fifth foul. Playing throughout the early going in foul trouble, Whitfield was far from effective and scored only nine points for the night.

"We put a lot of pressure on him," said Bowe. "We felt we had to stop him if we were going to be effective against Dunbar. He's an important part of the team.

"What we wanted to do was make them shoot from outside. And by blocking out Whitfield we were able to do that."

Coronado gave Clovis the scare of its life before eventually falling 63-60.

The Mustangs, led by the hot shooting of Scott Williams, at one time held a seven-point lead. However, with 2:07 left in the third period, Bruce Roise hit a key bucket to put Clovis up 48-47.

Although Coronado continued to threaten, the Wildcats never relinquished the lead.

In other President's Trophy play, Abilene Cooper downed Roswell 64-41 and Andrews edged El Paso Andress 69-64.

Today's action pits Roswell and Andress at 11:30 a.m., Cooper and Andrews

AREA CAGE ROUNDUP

Free Throws Enable Plainsmen To Trip Mats

The Estacado Matadors and the Monterey Plainsmen battled to a dead-even deadlock at the Plainsmen Gym Friday night before Monterey broke the game open in overtime to emerge with a hard-fought 74-68 victory.

After four periods the score was deadlocked at 66-66, but the Plainsmen got four points from Ian Hyslop in the extra period to nail down the win. Estacado's only points in the final period came on a pair of free-throws.

Ironcially, they were the only two-points the Mats got at the line all night. And it was only the second time an Estacado player even went to the line. On the other hand, the Plainsmen got 16 points at the charity stripe.

Monterey's Trav Clardy led all scorers with 27 points and Hyslop had 23. The Matadors got 20 points from Preston Davis and 18 from John Jones.

The Matadors led 36-34 at the intermission but trailed 52-50 at the end of three quarters.

duced no outstanding statistics but six different players carried the ball and five gained more than 20 yards apiece.

China Spring advances to play Hull-Daisetta next weekend for the Class A state championship. Hull-Daisetta nipped Troup 22-21 to advance to the final.

That will be the second time in as many years that the Cougars have played in the state finals. They won last year.

This was the second time in three years that Seagraves managed to move this far in the playoffs. In 1977, the Eagles made it to the state finals before losing.

Robinson Claims USC Can Win National Title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach John Robinson said Friday his undefeated but once-tied University of Southern California Trojans could win the mythical national collegiate football championship on New Year's Day.

The Trojans, who finished the regular season 10-0-1, battle the Ohio State Buckeyes in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1 and the latter was the No. 1 club in The Associated Press poll at the end of the regular season.

Ohio State finished with an 11-0 record, the same as No. 2 Alabama.

"I think the voters will watch the games and vote for the team that looks the most impressive," Robinson told newsmen the day after his club opened Rose Bowl training. "Hopefully, we'll do a good job, win the game and someone will vote for us."

He discounted reports that offenses in the Big Ten were better this season and that Ohio State would have a better passing attack than other of the conference teams which have appeared in the Rose Bowl.

"There is not much difference between the Ohio State team we will play and the Michigan teams we have played," he said, referring to the the 1977 and 1979 Rose Bowl games when his Southern California clubs beat Michigan 14-6 and 17-10.

He termed Buckeye quarterback Art Schlichter outstanding "but to assume Rick Leach of Michigan was not a fine quarterback is ridiculous. He was one of the best of the past 10 years."

Schlichter finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy voting and Southern California's Paul McDonald was sixth.

"Our basic job before Christmas will be getting ourselves ready," said Robinson of his practice plans. "After Christmas, we will concentrate on the Ohio State team."

He said he didn't plan to put many new plays into the offense because, "usually when you put them in late, the don't wok."

Anthony Munoz, a 280-pound offensive tackle who tore ligaments in his left knee in the 1979 season opener, will return to the Trojans lineup.

"It's a day to day thing," said Robinson of the big lineman. "He's being fitted with a brace and should be able to go all out."

SWC Officials Warn Lemons

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas basketball coach Abe Lemons has been sent a letter of reprimand by the Southwest Conference because of his criticism of officials in the Longhorns' 90-71 victory over Vermont.

The officials called 55 personal fouls in the game.

"They don't believe in constitutional rights in this league," Lemons said in response to the letter. "You can't even comment that the game's too rough."

After Texas had defeated Vermont, Lemons said of the officials: "They're doozies. They need glasses. Two of them I'd never seen before."

Vermont coach Peter Salzberg also criticized the officials, saying, "Those three were pineapples."

SWC Commissioner Cliff Speegle, who sent the letter to Lemons, said the conference has its own rules regarding coaches commenting on officials.

"The principle the conference goes by is you do not discuss officiating with the press," Speegle said.

TEXAS TECH PUNTER MAURY BUFORD
Named To Academic All-America Squad

Tech's Buford Earns Honor

Texas Tech sophomore punter Maury Buford has been selected to the academic All-America team named by the nation's College Sports Information Directors and sponsored by U.S. Tobacco.

A grade point average of no less than 3.0 (B) is required for nomination.

During his frosh year in 1978, Buford led the nation's punters with a 44.1 yards per kick average and averaged 42.1 in 1979. The latter figure ranked him among the country's top 15 punters.

As a freshman, Buford's figure enabled him to be the first freshman to lead the NCAA in punting in 35 years.

"I'm very excited about making the team," Buford said. "It's a big honor to be recognized for both football and academics, and I'm looking forward to meeting with other members of the team."

The unit will be recognized during halftime ceremonies at the Sun Bowl in El Paso Dec. 22.

Joining Buford on the honor squad are Southern California quarterback Paul McDonald; running backs Major Ogilvie, Alabama, and Angelo Colosimo, Colgate; tight end Pat Bowe, Stanford; receivers Phil Williams, Florida State, and Mike Ball, Central Michigan; center Kelly Saalfield, Nebraska; guards Randy Schleusener, Nebraska, and Brad Budde, USC; tackles Keith Van Horne, USC, and Jim Downing, McNeese State; and placekicker Craig Jones of Virginia Military Institute.

The defense consists of linemen Bruce Filarsky, Pacific, Rod Horn, Nebraska, Ken Loushin, Purdue, and Jeffrey Whitton, Arizona; linebackers Bruce Harrell, Washington, Milt McColl, Stanford, and Lamont Jefferson, Rice; backs Joe St. Geme, Stanford, Ed Cerkovnik, Montana; William Jones, Florida State, and Alan Davis, Michigan State.

Queens Drop Heartbreaker

DALLAS (Special) — The Wayland Baptist Flying Queens dropped a heartbreaker here Friday night as Stacy Brown hit a 22-footer from the top of the key to give LSU an 80-78 win over the Queens.

The Flying Queens had trailed 78-68 before they rattled off 10 unanswered points to get back in the game. Miss Brown's shot came with the WBC defense swarming around her and dropped WBC to 5-5 on the year.

Janie Denton led the Queen scoring parade with 20 points. Kathy Harston added 18 for WBC and Kathy Booth had 17.

Renee Morgan paced LSU with 23 points in this game played at the Dallas Classic. Tonight the Flying Queens travel to Denton to face hapless North Texas State.

Doc's Cure Aids Raiders

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Thad Sanders is — most definitely — a team player.

The 6-foot-5 senior from Port Arthur has weathered more than his fair share of hard times since coming to Texas Tech after a brillant prep career at Lincoln High. And he has survived.

Sanders, who goes by "Doc," spent most of his junior year at Tech on the bench — playing only 102 minutes the whole season. As a sophomore he'd played considerably more than that (447 minutes) and scored quite a few more points.

In fact, Sanders scored more points as a freshman (28) than he did as a junior (19). And those aren't high-game statistics either. Those are Sanders' season totals.

Instead of "Doc," Sanders could've changed his handle to "Sad Thad" or maybe "Mad Thad".

But "Doc" persevered and this year he's been giving the 5-1 Raiders just what they need most — immediate first aid off the bench.

Sanders is the Raiders sixth man, and through Tech's first six ballgames he has been a noticeable key. Already he's seen 91 minutes of action — that's over 15 minutes a game. And Sanders doesn't just come in with the mop-up crew either. He comes in when the pressure is on.

Against Air Force on Monday, starter David Little just couldn't buy a bucket. And without his usual scoring output, the Raiders were in trouble. Gerald Myers looked down the bench and knew what he had to do...

It was time for the doctor to make a house call.

Sanders came in and hit three of four field goal attempts, pulled down a couple of rebounds and aided the Tech defensive effort that held the Cadets to only 54 points enroute to a 58-54 Tech victory.

"Most definitely I'd like to start," Sanders said. "But I'm happy with my role as long as I get some playing time. Sitting on the bench, I'm ready to play. I can look over the game and see what's going on. And, you'know, analyze it — check out the players."

"Last year," Sanders said, "I just kinda hung in there. I did what I could. I'm here for two reasons — to get an education and, most definitely, the ball.

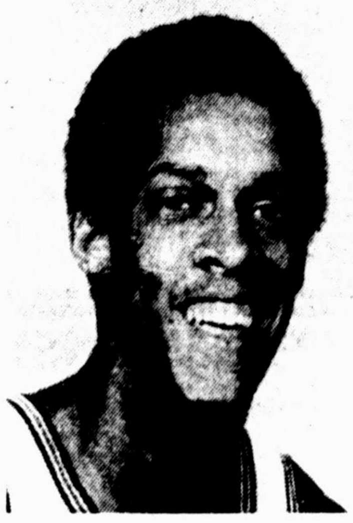
"I thought about transferring," he admitted. "But I would've had to sit out a year. I didn't want to have to give up the school."

So far, Sanders' senior season has been his best. Besides the added playing time, he's already accomplished some individual goals that had eluded him in his first three years.

Against South Dakota he poured in 17 points — a career high. Against North Texas he led the team in rebounds with nine. Right now his per game averages are 6.5 points and 3.3 rebounds. Most definitely impressive for a non-starter.

"I'm trying to do what I can," he said. "I think I could've been doing this last year or the year before. But I'm satisfied right now."

Aiding and abetting that satisfaction was Tech's big 83-68 victory over Lamar Thursday night. Sanders played 10 minutes in that contest, finishing with four points and two rebounds. And the win came against a bunch of familar faces and names for Sanders.



THAD SANDERS
Tech's Valuable Sixth Man

"Yeah, I've played against most of them in the summer," said the Port Arthur native. "I talked to 'em before the game but afterwards they really didn't have much to say.

"I've played against B.B. (Davis — Lamar's inside threat) six times now," added Sanders, "and we've won every time — so that was nice. He's a great player."

Five of those wins over B.B. came in high school though, where Sanders led Port Arthur Lincoln to a 32-5 record the regional playoffs his senior year. He averaged 20.6 points and 16.3 rebounds a game that year.

Although he's relatively small at 6-5, Sanders is one of the best leapers on the Raider roster. At times this year, he's been a dominanat force under the basket.

"Like coach (Gerald) Myers has said, we're not a very big team," said Sanders, "so everybody has to go to the boards and try and block out. My jumping ability helps me with that."

Jumping ability, quickness and lightening moves to the basket — Sanders has them all. But he's just now starting to put them all together.

Before the season started Myers praised Sanders for his attitude of a year ago. "Hopefully, Thad will come into his own this year," Myers said, "He's got all the tools..."

There was a little over seven minutes left in Thursday night's game against Lamar when Sanders flashed some of those moves to the crowd at the Municipal Coliseum.

Taking a pass at the top of the key, Sanders dribbled around a couple defenders, stopped, double-clutched twice, lept in the air, twisted in the other direction and banked in an easy-looking bucket off the glass. His old buddy B.B. Davis was left swatting the air at a man who wasn't there.

The crowd erupted. Tech led 66-49 and Lamar coach Billy Tubbs was forced to call a time-out to try and regroup his team. But the Cardinals never came back.

"It feels good when the ball's going in," Sanders stated.

Most definitely.

Henderson Asks League For Return To 'Pokes

DALLAS (AP) — Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, who retired from pro football last month rather than be placed on waivers by the Dallas Cowboys, has appealed to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle asking for immediate reinstatement, a Dallas newspaper said Friday.

Henderson's telegram through the NFL Players Association asked Rozelle to reinstate him "at this time so he may be able to participate immediately," the Dallas Times-Herald said.

Henderson was not available for comment on the report. The newspaper said Rozelle is expected to act soon on the request.

Cowboy coach Tom Landry dismissed Henderson from the team on Nov. 19 and told the five-year veteran he would place him on waivers. When Henderson retired instead, the Cowboys placed him on their reserve retired list.

NFL rules prevent player movement this late in the season. One rule prohibits players coming off the reserved list in the last 30 days of the regular season. Other rules prevent a player from returning to the Cowboys, being traded or being placed on waivers at this time.

Wednesday was the deadline for any player to be placed on the waiver list until after the Pro Bowl Jan. 28.

Hawks Snap 76ers' Streak With 103-98 Win

By The Associated Press

Steve Hawes scored 10 of his 18 points in the last quarter to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a 103-98 win over Philadelphia Friday night, snapping the 76ers' nine-game National Basketball Association winning streak.

Hawes put the Hawks ahead to stay with a field goal for a 91-90 lead with 5:22 left in the game. The 76ers were within one point with one minute left when Julius Erving put in two free throws to make it 99-98.

But Armond Hill made it 101-98 for the Hawks with 42 seconds remaining when the Sixers' Caldwell Jones was called for goaltending.

Dan Roundfield, the game's leading scorer with 22 points, intercepted the ball underneath the 76ers' basket and Hill was fouled by Erving. Hill scored two free throws to make it 103-98 with 19 seconds left.

The Hawks then froze the ball to insure their victory, their third straight and fourth of their last five games.

Erving was high scorer for Philadelphia with 21 points, followed by Clint Richardson with 18 and Darryl Dawkins with 15.

Pacers 111, Bullets 109

James Edwards scored 24 points, including the game-winning basket with 53 seconds remaining, as the Indiana Pacers held off a late Washington Bullets' rally to post a 111-109 victory.

Washington, which trailed by six points 105-99 with 3:48 remaining, missed an opportunity to tie the game as Jim Cleamons' 20-foot shot just before the buzzer fell off the rim.

Indiana, playing without starting forward Mike Banton who injured an ankle in practice Thursday, had six players finish in double figures. Alex English, who made a pair of free throws to put Indiana on top for good 99-98 with 5:08 remaining, scored 22.

The Bullets were led by Bob Dandridge and Kevin Grevey with 20 points apiece.

Johnny Davis and Billy Knight scored 16 apiece for Indiana.

Edwards scored 15 of his points in the first quarter, sparking the Pacers to a 37-30 lead. The Pacers opened a 9-point edge early in the second quarter, but Washington rallied to take a 59-56 halftime lead.

Roger Phegley sparked the comeback with 10 points in the second quarter when the Bullets hit 12-of-20 shots.

Kings 103, Jazz 87

Rookie Reggie King came off the bench to score eight points and grab three rebounds in the fourth quarter to lead the Kansas City Kings to a 103-87 victory over the Utah Jazz.

The Jazz scored eight unanswered points to trim the Kings' lead to two points with 7:58 left in the game. But Utah didn't score a field goal for the next five minutes, enabling Kansas City to pull away to a 96-83 advantage.

The victory was the fifth in a row for the Kings, who have won 13 of their last 16 games. The win moved Kansas City to within a half-game of the Milwaukee Bucks, leaders of the Midwest Division. Milwaukee dropped its fifth straight game Friday night, a 97-94 loss to Boston.

For Utah, the loss snapped a four-game winning streak.

Six Kings finished in double figures, led by Scott Wedman's 24 points. Otis Birdsong contributed 17 points for the winners, while Sam Lacey added 13 points and grabbed nine rebounds.

Celtics 97, Bucks 94

Long-ball shooting Chris Ford took a pass and sank a 3-point field goal with a running jump shot as the final buzzer sounded, lifting the Boston Celtics to a 97-94 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Ford, one of the league's premier outside shooters, took a pass in from Cedric Maxwell at center court, took a few strides and let go his long shot, spoiling a Milwaukee comeback and handing the Bucks their sixth consecutive defeat.

Ford earlier had hit on a pair of 3-point field goals, stretching his field goal streak to 12 consecutive games and capitalizing on the NBA's new rule for accuracy from outside a perimeter stretching to 22 feet.

Nets 118, Knicks 105

Eddie Jordan scored 25 points, 13 during a key third-quarter stretch, to lead the New Jersey Nets to a 118-105 victory over the New York Knicks.

After the Nets took a 64-53 halftime lead, Jordan scored 11 of New Jersey's first 15 points of the third quarter as it upped its edge to 79-67. Then the Nets, who snapped a two-game losing streak, broke the game open by scoring 10 straight points.

Calvin Natt and Mike Newlin combined for 45 Nets points.

'Too Tall' Earns TKO In Front Of Friends

DALLAS (AP) — Ed "Too Tall" Jones, performing before his former Dallas Cowboy teammates for the first time, staggered Jim Wallace with a hard left hook and earned a second-round technical knockout Friday night in a scheduled 6-round heavyweight bout.

The 6-9 Jones, who weighed in at 246 pounds, dominated the 6-4 Wallace, 248, from the very beginning with his superior reach.

Wallace, who went into the fight with a 5-2 record and was a former American martial arts champion, made the mistake of leading with his right hand.

After a slow first round, Jones, who is now 4-0, nailed Wallace with a left hook and banged him into the ropes with a straight right. Referee' Steve Crosson rushed in to stop the fight at 2:59.

"I knew I was going to catch him when he kept leading with his right hand. His fight plan should have been like mine. He was just too aggressive and it left him open," Jones said.

Jones bought $4,000 worth of tickets to distribute among his former Cowboy teammates and the hit of that group was naturally Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson.

Henderson, who was dismissed from the team by Dallas Coach Tom Landry, showed up wearing a Texas Ranger baseball jacket and made a pre-fight visit to Jones' locker room telling him, "Keep your tail off the canvas."

"I figured I would get more aggressive in the third round but when I caught him I finished him off," said Jones. "When I hurt you, I feel like I can put you away. I could see his eyes and I knew he was gone."

"I was really tight in front of my teammates and I wasn't able to relax. I can't figure out just why I get so tight," Jones said.

Most of the former Arizona football player's punches beat harmlessly against Jones' gloves. Jones said he was never hurt.

Jones said he would like to fight again at the Dallas Convention Center.

"I'm going to take some time off now and probably won't fight again until January or early February."

Chaps Advance At Classic

BROWNWOOD (Special) — Lubbock Christian College defeated Angelo State 71-61 in the first round of the Howard Payne Classic here Friday night.

The Chaparrals, 7-8, will meet Howard Payne at 8:30 tonight in the round-robin tourney.

Against Angelo State, LCC moved out to a 40-32 halftime lead on the strength of a zone defense that caused Angelo to hit only 16 of 39 shoots from the field in the first 20 minutes. LCC, meanwhile, hit 14 of 26.

The Chaps built their biggest lead at 56-43 with 7:23 left in the game.

Balanced LCC scoring was paced by sophomore Jim Steensma, with 13 points. Steensma, from Richardson, also set a LCC school record by hitting his 23rd straight free throw late in the contest.

McNeese State Meets Syracuse

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — McNeese State may not be in the same league with Ohio State, Alabama, Brigham Young and Florida State but its 11-0 record is, and that worried Syracuse (6-5) heading into today's Independence Bowl football game.

"We know they have a good defense," said Syracuse Coach Frank Maloney on the eve of the Orangemen's 7:30 p.m. bowl date with the Southland Conference champions from Lake Charles, La.

It is the first bowl appearance in 13 years for Syracuse and the Orange was favored. But so was Tulsa in the first Independence Bowl in 1976 and McNeese upset them, 20-16.

"They're 11-0 and if you're undefeated you've done something well," said Maloney. "People may not know about them back East, but we do. We've been watching films."

The films showed McNeese winning six of its 11 games by four points or less against the likes of Lamar, West Texas State, Southwestern Louisiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

On the other hand, Syracuse lost to such powers as Ohio State, Penn State, Pittsburgh and Temple — all bowl-bound — and supporters felt it demeaning for the Orangemen to play an "unknown" like McNeese.

"I've seen a few films on them," said McNeese's Ernie Duplechin, whose Cowboys compiled just the second perfect season in school history in his first year as head coach. "It's pretty hard to judge them.

"We know they have fine talent at quarterback, running back, wide receiver and in the offensive line, but I'm no more worried about them than Lamar (34-25 losers to McNeese). I feel like we've got to play the best we can and hope that it will be good enough."

Close to a 55,000 capacity crowd will watch the game in State Fair Stadium, as well as a viewers on an Atlanta-based sports nedwork.

On offense, Syracuse will be led by sophomore Joe Morris, who has rushed for 1,372 yards on 238 carries, and by the running and passing of quarterback Bill Hurley. Hurley has run for 813 yards on 203 carries and has completed 79 of 158 passes for 1,276 yards and six touchdowns.

McNeese will be led by running back Artie Shankle, who had 853 yards on 202 carries before his jaw was broken with three games remaining in the season.

Gerulaitis Wins, Opponent Hurt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Corrado Barazzutti twisted his right ankle early in the second set against Vitas Gerulaitis and was forced to retire in the opening match of the Davis Cup tennis finals, giving the United States a 1-0 lead over Italy Friday night.

John McEnroe was heavily favored to give the Americans a 2-0 lead later in the evening when he faced Adriano Panatta.

Gerulaitis had rallied from a 2-0 deficit to beat Barazzutti, 6-2, in the opening set of the competition at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium. However, Gerulaitis trailed 1-2 in the second set when his opponent went down.

Barazzutti, who trailed 15-30 in the fourth game, injured the ankle moving to his right near the net attempting to reach a passing shot.

After about eight minutes of work on his ankle, the Italian finished the game and played one more, which he also lost, before retiring.

Italian team doctor Giorgio Santilli said Barazzutti would definitely miss his scheduled match Sunday with McEnroe and that his badly sprained ankle might be put in a cast.

"He got caught going the wrong way," said Gerulaitis. "He thought I was going to pass on his forehand and I passed on his backhand ... he shifted his weight and went down."

Gerulaitis, after a shaky start in which he lost the match's opening service and the following game, seemed in full control when the Italian went down. He took the final six games of the first set, including 14 points in a row to close the set.

As he did in the opening set, Gerulaitis lost the first two games of the second set, but was on the verge of evening the set at 2-2 when Barazzutti was injured.

After Barazzutti was taped, he moved gingerly through the last point of the fourth game, but after losing four straight points on Gerulaitis' serve in the fifth game, the Italian called it a night.

Memorial Romps Past Alice 22-8

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Paul Morales and Ben Heinrich turned two Alice turnovers into 13 quick first-quarter points as Houston Memorial romped past the Coyotes, 22-8, Friday night in a Class 4A schoolboy football semifinal.

Memorial, 10-3-1, will play the winner of Saturday's Temple-Lewisville game in the 4A championship game next week.

A bad snap from center on a punt attempt gave Memorial the ball on the Alice 12, and Morales' 3-yard run gave the Mustangs an early lead.

Alice, ending its season at 12-2, fumbled again later in the quarter, and Todd Kissner connected with Heinrich on a 63-yard halfback pass on the next play. After holding Alice at the Mustang 8 just before the first half ended, Memorial moved 73 yards in a time-consuming drive to start the second half, with Mark Schroeder diving over from the 1 for the touchdown and a 19-9 lead. Tom Murphy added a 36-yard field goal with three minutes to play.

Alice's only touchdown came on a 2-yard run by Ernie Balboa with 1:09 left in the game.

Playoff Ifs, Buts Should Be Settled This Weekend

By The Associated Press

The National Football League settles a sea of "ifs" and "buts" Sunday when most of the playoff picture will fall neatly into place on the final day of the regular season.

Seven teams have clinched playoff berths but there are three more postseason slots to be settled as well as the matchups. And for a couple of clubs, the suspense will stretch into Monday night.

Cleveland, playing at Cincinnati Sunday, still has a shot at an AFC wild card berth but there are three "ifs" attached to the chance. First, the Browns must beat the Bengals and hope that Seattle beats Oakland Sunday. If those two come through, then the Browns can sneak in if San Diego defeats Denver Monday night.

The Broncos in the AFC and Washington, Tampa Bay and Chicago in the NFC face unusual situations.

A victory over the Chargers Monday night would make Denver AFC West champs but a loss could tumble the Broncs right out of the playoff picture, should Cleveland or Oakland win their games.

The same thing is true of the Redskins, who can win the NFC East by beating Dallas Sunday but could be shut out of the playoffs if they lose and Chicago beats St. Louis.

The Bears are bidding for the NFC Central crown but must beat St. Louis while Tampa Bay loses to Kansas City. If both the Bears and Bucs lose Sunday, Tampa Bay wins the division as a reult of the complex NFL tie-breaking formula.

Should the Bucs win their game and the division title, then Chicago's only playoff chance would be a wild card long shot, available only if they beat St. Louis big and Washington loses by a large score to Dallas.

Confused? By Tuesday we'll know the answers.

Sunday's schedule lists Cleveland at Cincinnati, Seattle at Oakland, Buffalo at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at Los Angeles, St. Louis at Chicago, San Francisco at Atlanta, Washington at Dallas, Baltimore at the New York Giants, Kansas City at Tampa Bay, Minnesota at New England and Philadelphia at Houston.

Denver at San Diego Monday night concludes the regular season schedule.

The final weekend of action gets an early start today with the New York Jets at Miami and Green Bay visiting Detroit in two games which have no bearing on the postseason tournament.

Set for the playoffs already are Miami, Houston, Pittsburgh and San Diego in the AFC and Dallas, Philadelphia, and Los Angeles in the National Conference. But only two of those clubs — Los Angeles in the NFC West, and Miami in the AFC East — have clinched division titles.

Pittsburgh and Houston are tied for the AFC Central crown. As a result of different tie-break procedures, if both win Sunday, the Steelers win the title. If both lose, the Oilers get it.

The Denver-San Diego winner earns the AFC West title.

In the NFC, the winner of the Washington-Dallas game gets the East title joining LA and either Tampa Bay or Chicago as division champs.

Cowboys, Steelers Predicted To Capture Championships

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Writer

The Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers will be champions once again when the sun sets on Sunday. And as midnight approaches on Monday, the San Diego Chargers will also wear a crown.

Oh, one more thing — the apple in Tampa Bay's throat will remain there and the dream of a division championship will pass the Bucs.

Kansas City's victory over the Buccaneers, by the way, isn't the upset special. It's Baltimore's over the New York Giants.

Last week's 8-6 mark put the record at 129-78, .623, heading into the National Football League's final regular-season weekend.

The picks:

PITTSBURGH 35, BUFFALO 13: Had the Steelers won last Monday night, the Bills might have had an outside shot at a victory. Now the question is whether they'll survive. Pittsburgh knows that a loss will give Houston the American Conference's Central title, regardless of what the wild-card Oilers do . . .

HOUSTON 27, PHILADELPHIA 20: . . . and the Oilers will ride another 100-yard game by Earl Campbell and some fancy Dan Pastorini passing past the wild-card Eagles. Philadelphia's only hope for the title in the National Conference East is a Dallas-Washington tie . . .

DALLAS 31, WASHINGTON 23: . . . and that's about as likely as the Cowboys' cheerleaders turning ugly overnight. No matter how important Mark Moseley's last-second field goal four weeks ago really was, the Cowboys still think it was an insult and will respond accordingly.

SAN DIEGO 38, DENVER 17: The points the Chargers didn't get in Denver last October they'll get this time as they clinch the AFC West and bust the Broncos out of the playoff picture . . .

OAKLAND 30, SEATTLE 20: . . . and deal the AFC's other wild card to the Raiders. Like Dallas, Oakland believes it has a score to settle, namely the Seahawks' run-it-up score 13 weeks ago.

KANSAS CITY 20, TAMPA BAY 10: The Bucs, to put it simply, are choking. Getting victory No.1 a few years back wasn't as hard as getting victory No.10 now. The Chiefs are going for a .500 season.

CHICAGO 21, ST. LOUIS 14: Call it the Miracle of the Midway. The Bears, written off by everyone except themselves, are heading for the playoffs, and ruining Larry Wilson's perfect coaching record, too.

BALTIMORE 24, N.Y. GIANTS 17: Throw out the names. Throw out the numbers. Look at the letters. AFC vs. NFC. That's a mismatch.

SAN FRANCISCO 26, ATLANTA 20: So is the 49ers' wide-open offense vs. the Falcons' wide-open defense. It's a fitting finale for O.J.

CLEVELAND 28, CINCINNATI 21: The Browns may be disheartened, but they're not so down that they can't at least try.

DEROIT 17, GREEN BAY 14 (today): The Lions are tough at home. The Packers are winless on the road.

MIAMI 31, N.Y. JETS 21 (today): Don Strock redeems himself, but not enough to bench Bob Griese again.

LOS ANGELES 16, NEW ORLEANS 10: The end of an era. The California Rams? The Anaheim Rams? Phooey!

NEW ENGLAND 35, MINNESOTA 13: Too late. Too bad.

BLAZERS ACTIVATE HOLLINS

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers announced Friday they were activating guard Lionel Hollins and placing veteran forward Larry Steele on the injured reserve list. Hollins, the Blazers' team captain, played in the first two games of the current National Basketball Association season, but has missed the last 30 because of continuing problems with both knees.

FAMILY WEEKLY
The Maturing Of TERRY BRADSHAW
It's the American Dream once again achieved. Football's Terry Bradshaw came out of the Louisiana swamps to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to three Super Bowl victories. But this week's FAMILY WEEKLY profile tells of nightmares along the way. First of all, he had a disastrous rookie year; he was labeled as "stupid" by some sports writers. But Bradshaw moved on to football excellence, and along the way, as it should in the American Dream come true, he married skating star JoJo Starbuck of the Ice Capades; he has appeared in a movie with friend Burt Reynolds; and he is pursuing a new career as a country and western singer. His and JoJo's deep religious faith have played a critical role in the young life of this fine athlete.

Young Bruins, Younger Blue Demons Meet Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The young UCLA Bruins will face the even younger DePaul Blue Demons this afternoon in a nationally televised college basketball game matching last spring's NCAA Western Regional finalists.

The seventh-ranked Bruins bring a 3-1 record into the game — their only loss was a heart-breaking 77-74 setback to fourth-ranked Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., Tuesday night, while the 11th-rated Blue Demons are 3-0.

UCLA is led by senior forward Kiki Vandeweghe, who is averaging 23.0 points per game and has made 61 percent of his field goal attempts.

While Vandeweghe is joined by upperclassmen James Wilkes, Gig Sims and Darrell Allums as key members of the Bruins, freshmen Rod Foster, Darren Daye, Michael Holton and Cliff Pruitt and sophomores Tony Anderson, Tyren Naulls and Mike Sanders are also important UCLA players.

First-year UCLA coach Larry Brown has started a front line of seniors — Vandeweghe, Wilkes and Allums — and a backcourt of sophomores — Anderson and Naulls — in the Bruins' first four games.

DePaul is led by sophomore Mark Aguirre, who is joined in the Blue Demons' starting lineup by freshmen Terry Cummings and Teddy Grubbs and veterans Clyde Bradshaw and Jim Mitchem.

The Blue Demons are coached by 65-year-old Ray Meyer, the winningest active coach in major college basketball with a 600-333 record.

Although the Bruins were beaten by Notre Dame, Brown and his team received high praise this week from former UCLA coach John Wooden, who worked the game as an analyst for a cable television sports network.

"Larry Brown will never win a game in which he will be more proud of his players than he was against Notre Dame," said Wooden, who coached the Bruins to 10 national championships in 12 seasons, ending with his retirement in 1975. "I like Larry personally and now I like his team."

Brown is the third head coach at UCLA since Wooden retired. Gene Bartow and Gary Cunningham guided the Bruins for two seasons each.

"The style of Larry's team and overall philosophy is similar to the way I liked to coach," said Wooden. "By that, I mean the transition game, getting off quickly on the fast break, pressure defense, emphasis on team play and conditioning."

Brown still uses Wooden's high-post offense while implementing his own offensive philosophy, the passing game and four-corners delay game.

"I think he's keeping the high post in for some of the older players who are used to that system," said Wooden. "But he'll gradually bring the passing game along."

Wooden, now 69, said he's in good health. He had a heart attack in 1972 but has had no serious problems since then.

"I still walk five miles a day," he said. "I watch my diet and take some medication and that's about it."

Will any team ever be as successful as UCLA during the Wooden years?

"It's difficult, but I think it can be done again if things fall into place," said Wooden. "Before we did it, people said that it couldn't be accomplished."

Bowl Barrage Begins With Garden State

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — California and Temple reached today's Garden State Bowl — pick one — (a) via different routes, (b) the same way.

You're right whichever one you picked.

The first answer is correct because the Golden Bears of California had to fly 3,000 miles from Berkeley while the Owls of Temple just bused 100 miles or so up the New Jersey Turnpike from Philadelphia.

But both really got here on the strong right arms of their quarterbacks, Temple's Brian Broomell and Cal's Rich Campbell, who combined for 35 touchdown passes this season.

Under the National Collegiate Athletic Association's pass efficiency formula, Broomell finished second while Campbell was seventh.

Translated into English, Broomell completed 56.1 percent of his passes — 120 of 214 — for 2,103 yards with 22 touchdowns and 13 interceptions while leading Temple to a 9-2 record and a No. 20 national ranking. Campbell hit on 67.1 percent — 216 of 322 — with 13 TDs and 12 interceptions in Cal's 6-5 season, and the five losses were by a total of 24 points.

"I've no one to blame but myself for not finishing first," Broomell said. "I lost it in the Penn State game. That was the best rush we saw all season. In the other games, I just stood in the pocket and took my time. This time, I should have moved up through the pocket, but I stayed too long."

Broomell was only 4-of-16 against Penn State, which defeated the Owls 22-7. Temple's other setback was a 10-9 loss to Pitt's Eastern champions. Cal was beaten by Michigan 14-10, Oregon 19-14, UCLA 28-27, Southern Cal 24-14 and Washington 28-24.

Both teams are likely to display plenty of different formations. "We try to hide what we are doing and catch our opponents in the wrong defense," says Cal coach Roger Theder. Meanwhile, Temple's Wayne Hardin calls his attack a "smorgasbord" offense because Broomell is likely to do a little bit of everything — option, dropback, sprint-out, etc.

The second annual Garden State Bowl hopes to better last year's crowd of 33,000 which saw Arizona State defeat Rutgers 34-18. More than 54,000 tickets have been sold for 76,000-seat Giants Stadium and Bob Mulcahy, chief executive officer of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, predicts a crowd of around 60,000 "with a good break from the weatherman."

The forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-40s, above normal in the Northeast for this time of year. It was 52 for last year's game.

The Garden State Bowl will be televised nationally (Mizlou, noon, CST), with delayed telecasts in New York and Philadelphia. Temple's only other bowl appearance was on Jan. 1, 1935, in the first Sugar Bowl. Cal has been in eight Rose Bowls, the last on Jan. 1, 1959.

January Leads PGA Golfers

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Don January finished strongly again Friday for his second straight 68 and maintained his two-stroke lead in the $100,000 PGA National Seniors Championship.

January birdied the last three holes for an 8-under-par 136 total for two rounds in the four-day event. He grabbed the first-round lead Thursday with four birdies on his last five holes.

"It's been a fine two days," said January, a 50-year-old Texan. "But I had a problem on a few holes when my knee popped on me.

"But I began to feel better on the back nine," he said.

George Bayer fired a 5-under-par 67 and took over second place at 138. Grouped at 139 were Dan Sikes, Gardner Dickinson and Bill Johnston.

January, a 23-year PGA tour veteran, had only one bogey against five birdies Friday.

Bayer had a chance to tie for the lead until he three-putted two of the last three holes, one for a bogey. Johnston also shot a second-round 67 with six birdies and a bogey.

Mike White Takes Over At Illinois, Promises Exciting Football

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Mike White, who coached Stanford's offense in two Rose Bowl victories before reviving a troubled University of California team, took over Illinois' ailing program Friday and promised exciting football.

"I tell you this, it will be entertaining. It's a multiple offense, pro-oriented with wide receivers," said White, who left an assistant coaching job with the San Francisco 49ers to become head coach at the University of Illinois. "You'll see men in motion all over the place."

Illinois had dropped to 6-24-3 in three years under coach Gary Moeller, and home attendance in 1979 was the lowest in nine years.

Moeller, who was fired last month, had a Big Ten background in defensive coaching, and until this season had relied primarily on the ground game.

White, on the other hand, comes from the offense and likes his teams to pass.

"I will run the offense myself," said White. "I think that is my strength ... what I do best."

Athletic Director Neale Stoner, who came to Illinois from California last month, introduced White at a news conference on campus. White, in turn, introduced his first two assistant coaches, Max McCartney from the San Francisco 49ers and John Teerlinck from Eastern Illinois University.

White said McCartney would be his assistant head coach and would guide the defense. He said both men were leaving immediately for Chicago to begin recruiting, which already is behind schedule.

MIKE WHITE

For the first time in Illinois history, White said he would hire two, three or four full-time recruiters so that his coaches could devote more of their time to working with the established players.

Once the recruiters line up top high school talent, he said he would visit the players and make the final arrangements for them to attend Illinois.

"We know that recruiting is competitive and we're not promising miracles," said White. "I see no reason why we cannot develop a program that will attract student athletes from all over the state of Illinois."

He said nationwide recruiting was expensive and difficult, but indicated Illinois should be able to get some of the top quarterbacks and wide receivers because of his reputation and style of offense.

White said he and Stoner discussed the Illinois job this fall, before Stoner became athletic director. White said the main reason he came to Illinois was because of Stoner's personality, reputation and winning attitude.

"I just sense a new feeling here," said White. "I'll be honest, I was reluctant at first. But, he talked to me about the new president, the new chancellor and the opportunities he felt there were for success."

Texas A&I Battles For NAIA Title

McALLEN (AP) — Central State of Oklahoma will try to contain the swift backfield of Texas A&I, whose backs will be up against a defense known for stinginess, when the two meet today in the Palm Bowl for the NAIA Division I national football championship.

Both teams have 11-1 records with Texas A&I the Lone Star Conference champ. Independent Central State from Edmond, Okla., lost its final game to Northeastern Oklahoma, 22-14. The Javelinas of Texas A&I fell short of a perfect season with a 3-0 loss to East Texas State.

Kickoff is at 1:30 p.m. in McAllen's Memorial Stadium.

"On offense, A&I is probably the most physical team we'll face all year," Central State coach Gary Howard told reporters before the game.

"Their speed factor — it's a concern," added the Bronchos' coach.

"I believe it will be a tight ball game. I believe it will be a close one," said Texas A&I coach Ron Harms. The Kingsville school will be in its eighth NAIA championship bout.

Central State shut out four of its 10 regular season opponents and held all opposing teams to 1,947 yards total offense while piling up 3,819 yards.

"We're not able to boast those kind of statistics," Harms said.

Running backs Robert Poole and Marcus Bonner for Texas A&I will be out to continue their season average rushing marks of 101 yards and 68 yards per game, respectively.

Quarterback Martin Stroman ran for seven touchdowns and passed for 10 more this season.

On defense, senior linebacker Andy Hawkins was named to the Associated Press Little All-America team and gained conference lineman-of-the-year honors. He leads the team with 62 unassisted tackles.

Central State senior linebackers Steve Perkins and James Bledsoe along with tackle Terry Jones will try to thwart the Javelinas' offense.

Broncho quarterback Scott Burger is a 6-foot-4, 215-pounder described as someone "who scares you when he gets off the bus," by the Texas A&I coach. Burger notched 12 touchdowns on the run this season and threw 11 more.

His favorite receivers are tight end Ben Young and split end Johnny Scott.

On the ground, fullback Clifford Chatman and tailback Steve Tate lead the team.

NFL May Set Ticket Record

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League will draw more than 13 million fans this season and could set a per game average attendance record, Commissioner Pete Rozelle's office said Friday.

Total paid attendance going into the final weekend of the regular season was 12,352,812. With approximately 831,000 tickets sold for the final 14 games, total ticket sales will exceed 13.18 million. The previous record was set a year ago when the NFL expanded its regular season to 224 games and drew a total paid attendance of 12,771,800.

At 13.18 million, the paid per game average would be 58,850, which would be the second highest ever. Depending on game-day sales at six games which were not sold out, the average could push past the record of 58,961 set for 182 games in 1973.

BUFFONE TO RETIRE

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Doug Buffone, who ranks fourth in National Football League history in number of games played at linebacker, said Friday he will retire after the Chicago Bears complete the current National Football League season.

UNM Council Ponders Ellenberger's Future

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The University of New Mexico Athletic Council made recommendations Friday night to university President William E. Davis on the future of basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger, but Davis and the council members refused to disclose what was said.

An assistant to Davis said it probably would be Monday before the recommendations are made public.

The 13-member council met all day to discuss the fate of the 47-year-old Ellenberger, who was suspended two weeks ago by Davis after the release of allegations by the FBI of mail fraud and bribery involving the possible doctoring of a junior college player's transcripts.

After the council met with Davis to inform him of its recommendations, council spokesman Al Utton, a law professor, told reporters that the findings would not be made public "until after Mr. Ellenberger and his lawyers are notified." Davis said he would review the recommendations over the weekend.

Utton refused to comment on what the council members discussed during the meeting.

Through his attorney, Ellenberger requested a closed hearing. However, neither the coach nor his attorney attended the meeting.

Ellenberger's attorney, David Norvell, also had asked that the meeting be postponed until after a federal grand jury concluded its investigation, but Davis denied the request.

The grand jury heard a second day of testimony Friday concerning the allegations to the FBI.

Ellenberger and his chief recruiter Manny Goldstein were suspended Nov. 30 in the wake of the FBI's investigation into the transcripts. Goldstein resigned Thursday, although he appeared before the council on Friday.

The revelation of the transcript, contained in a sworn affidavit filed in U.S. District Court, resulted in guard Craig Gilbert being declared ineligible.

Further investigation by the university led to five more basketball players being declared ineligible when school officials learned the students were credited with a course they never took and needed the hours to remain eligible. Another player, who claimed he took the course, was suspended pending further checks of his academic records.

UNM forfeited one basketball victory as a result, but the university's athletic woes spread Thursday to its football team.

University officials said the Lobos would have to forfeit their six 1979 football triumphs because a tight end was academically ineligible.

Marvin Johnson, UNM vice president for student affairs, said the decision to forfeit the football games was made after school officials conferred with Western Athletic Conference Commissioner Stan Bates.

Gov. Bruce King said Friday that New Mexico citizens "are insisting that we take action immediately and they want an investigation to determine why it was allowed to develop."

The governor said "the board of regents and the president of the institution are the ones who should be monitoring it. They are the ones who must move very rapidly to control these kinds of situations."

King said it seemed that some people at UNM have lost sight of the fact that "the basic operation of the university is its academic program.

"The athletic operation is supposed to be the caboose, not the engine."

Goldstein met with the council about 30 minutes Friday afternoon, then told awaiting news reporters: "There was this athletic council meeting. Correct. They said they would investigate every athlete's transcript. How come it took them a week to declare the football players ineligible?

"You feel you're being told everything? Now that's my question."

Goldstein, asked if he felt he was being treated unfairly, said, "Yes, by the press and everyone else."

He also said, "I don't think they ever tried to find me and find out the truth."

Before jumping into a waiting car to leave, he added: "My mother still loves me."

Investigation Underway At Oregon

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Officials at the University of Oregon say an assistant coach made arrangements for one of the school's football players to take a controversial extension course through a private Kansas university.

But Athletic Director John Caine said head coach Rich Brooks has assured him there were no arrangements made to allow the player to get credit for the course without doing any work.

The player, freshman Paul Perez, has admitted receiving credit for the course although he did nothing but send the school his $75 fee.

Caine said assistant coach John Becker arranged for Perez to take the course by correspondence.

Two other Oregon players, Mike Honeycutt and Rock Richmond, took the course entitled "Current Problems and Principles in Coaching," which was offered in a garage and lounge at Los Angeles Valley College in Van Nuys, Calif.

No attendance was required for the course. All that was required was a term paper that could be mailed to sponsoring school Ottawa University in Ottawa, Kan. Thursday, University of Oregon President William Boyd said an investigation by the university concluded Honeycutt and Richmond had fulfilled the requirements of the course.

Boyd said Perez did not violate any NCAA rules because he didn't play football last season, due to illness and injury.

"Perez was in Chicago last summer and needed to stay in Chicago," Caine said. "He had a job there and it would have cost him a lot of money to come to summer school here (in Eugene) or actually attend the class in Los Angeles.

"I asked Rich Brooks if he or any of his staff made any type of arrangement with the instructor to receive the grade by simply paying for it, and Rich said absolutely not," Caine said.

"This was an acceptable technique; it violated no rules, but it is something we shall never again be involved with at the University of Oregon," the athletic director said.

Holmes To Box Against Zanon

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes will defend the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship against Lorenzo Zanon of Italy Sunday, Feb. 3 at Las Vegas, Nev., promoter Don King announced Friday.

King also announced that Roberto Duran of Panama, the former lightweight champion and leading welterweight contender, will fight a scheduled 10-rounder against Josef Nsubuga of Uganda, the No. 9 WBC welterweight contender Jan. 13. They will fight at Caesars Palace, which is the site of the heavyweight title bout.

The Duran-Nsubuga fight will be televised by CBS while Holmes will meet Zanon on ABC.

Zanon, the European champion, has a 24-8-2 record with eight knockouts. Holmes, of Easton, Pa., will be making his fifth defense of the WBC title and has a record of 31-0, with 22 knockouts.

The World Boxing Association champion is John Tate of Knoxville, Tenn.

Nation's Second Largest Bank Lowers Prime Lending Rate

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime lending rate continued to fall Friday, with Citibank cutting the key rate to 15 percent from 15¼ percent. Analysts said the decline indicates that the Federal Reserve's sweeping anti-inflation credit-tightening policies may be working.

Chicago's First National Bank, the nation's ninth-largest, matched No. 2-ranked Citibank's move, and analysts expect other major banks to follow in coming days. But the analysts said interest rates may now level off for a few weeks before resuming their decline early next year.

"While I think short-term interest rates will be declining significantly more this winter, I don't think in the next week or two there will be any decline in short-term rates," said Larry Kudlow, an analyst at Bear Stearns. "I think the direction, however, of the prime is clearly lower, and I believe the peak in interest rates has been reached and there will be a softening of interest rates in 1980."

"I think we'll probably basically see the prime stabilize at this level," said David Jones, an analyst at Aurbey G. Lanston & Co. For the near future, "I'd be surprised to see the prime move down further from this level," he added.

The prime rate is charged by major banks on loans to their best commercial customers. While it is not directly connected to other loan rates, it is seen as an indicator of where other rates might be headed. Banks use the prime as the basis for setting rates on almost all commercial-industrial loans.

The cut by Citibank was its third in as many weeks, taking the prime down from its record level of 15¾ percent. Citibank had also led the move up to that level, on Nov. 16.

That peak followed three months of credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve, done in an attempt to stem inflation by discouraging the borrowing of money.

The Fed's major credit-tightening move came on Oct. 6, when it sharply boosted the interest rates banks must pay to borrow money and increased the amount of reserves member banks must keep on hand.

In the weeks following the move, the nation's money supply, which had been growing quickly, began to slow its increase, and loan demand began to taper off as banks passed their higher borrowing costs on to their customers.

"In general, you would have to say the loan demand is basicallly consistent with stable rates in the near-term and possibly declining rates as you move into the new year," said Jones.

"I think credit demands are beginning to abate as a result of the higher cost of money and anticipation of softening business conditions early next year," Kudlow said. He said of the Fed's credit-tightening policy: "I think certainly the early evidence has been that it was successful."

And Kudlow suggested that once the Iranian crisis is over and the economy and dollar digest the latest round of oil-price increases, the Fed's moves will look even better, particularly in terms of the troubled dollar and the spiraling price of gold.

"When those factors are lifted, we will see an underlying strength in the dollar currency and a weakness in gold, and that will show more of the success of the Fed's actions this fall," he said. "As we move toward a sounder monetary policy in 1980, the value of the dollar will rise appreciably against other currencies and the value of gold will decline appreciably."

Report Of Invasion On Iran Sends Price Of Gold Soaring

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports of an Iraqi invasion of Iran sent gold prices soaring in late trading Friday, and the metal closed at $464.10 an ounce on New York's Comodity Exchange, besting its day-old record of $464. The dollar was stronger overseas but mixed at home.

Tehran Radio reported that Iraqi forces firing heavy artillery attacked an Iranian border post Friday but withdrew a short time later.

Although border skirmishes between the two nations are not uncommon, rumors circulated in metals and currency markets that Iraq had mounted a full-scale attack, and the news reversed a daylong slide in gold.

"Whether the rumor's true or not, that's what pushed gold up," said one New York gold trader.

Gold has been rising steadily for the past two weeks, gaining almost $70 an ounce in the process. The rise has been based on worries about the Iranian situation, concern about the dollar and world economy, and anticipation of a large increase in OPEC oil prices next week.

The latter came partially true Thursday, when Saudi Arabia and three other OPEC members jumped the gun and raised the base price of a barrel of oil from $18 to $24.

That news sent gold up sharply Thursday. It hit a record $464 in midday trading at Republic National Bank in New York before closing at $461. Republic said gold cosed Fridy at $464. The Comex price of $464.10 an ounce for December future contracts was a $1.90 increase from Thursday.

European gold and currency markets closed before the Iraq-Iran rumors hit, and gold was generally weaker there.

Gold closed in London at $457.30 an ounce, down $5.45 from Thursday but up $30.80 for the week. In Zurich, Friday's close was $457 an ounce, off $2 from Thursday but up $27.50 from last Friday.

The climate of uncertainty now has helped the metal but hurt the dollar, which generally has been sliding steadily in recent days. A feeling that the United States will be hurt by higher oil prices because of its heavy dependence on imported oil has hurt the dollar. But the U.S. currency has gained ground against the yen, because Japan, 99 percent dependent on oil imports, is even more vulnerable to oil-price increases.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 243.10 yen, up from 238.95 yen Thursday. The dollar closed at 243.95 yen in New York, up from 241.30.

The dollar was also stronger in Europe, partly in response to gold's drop and partly in response to a statement by Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani that he thought the dollar might soon gain strength.

But the U.S. currency didn't fare so well in New York, where it was hurt by the rumors of the clash between Iraq and Iran.

Henry O. Flipper was the first black to graduate from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, in 1877.

Reunion Set For Infant, Mother In California

OMAHA, Neb (AP) — Police said Friday that a 6-month-old baby found in a San Bernardino, Calif., apartment has been positively identified as an infant abducted from an Omaha hospital Oct. 19.

Omaha Police Lt. Charles Circo said the mother, 15-year-old Gladys Glass, would fly to California along with her mother at the hospital's expense this weekend to bring home her daughter, LeTisha Tylynn Glass.

"Now we'll have her home for Christmas," said Miss Glass. "I'm so happy, I don't know what to do."

Circo said the infant's footprint sent to San Bernardino authorities Thursday showed "several points similar and no points dissimilar."

Circo said those findings, along with a birthmark and an abdominal scar matched to similar body markings on LeTisha "indicates that the indentification is positive."

He said a former nurse's aid, Elizabeth Cross, 30, charged Thursday by Douglas County authorities in connection with LeTisha's abduction, has refused to make a statement to San Bernardino authorities.

The felony kidnapping warrant accuses Mrs. Cross of taking the baby from a pediatrics ward at St. Joseph Hospital.

Authorities were seeking more information on why another Omaha youngster, Mrs. Cross' 12-year-old niece Kennette Allen, was found in the woman's San Bernardino apartment. Originally, San Bernardino police suspected Kennette had been abducted, but Omaha police said the incident may be handled as a civil matter.

Circo said the baby was in "good to excellent condition."

At the time of her abduction, LeTisha was under treatment for a lung infection. She and the other child found in San Bernardino have been placed with a child protective agency, officials said.

Authorities said no charges have been filed against Mrs. Cross' husband Donnell, an Air Force sergeant.

Cross, stationed at Norton Air Force Base and a former airman at Offutt AFB near Omaha, was arrested with his wife.

LeTisha, who weighed 8 pounds, was taken from a nursery at St. Joseph, where Mrs. Cross had worked until about a month before the abduction. Hospital officials said she was a patient escort, taking persons to and from surgery.

Mrs. Cross resigned last Sept. 21 to join her husband in California. Authorities said she apparently returned to Omaha in October for a visit.

Authorities said a relative apparently tipped Omaha police that the Crosses had a child not belonging to them, and San Bernardino police were asked to stake out their apartment. The two were arrested after police saw them enter the apartment with an infant.

Nationwide Death Toll From Rabies Highest Since 1959

ATLANTA (AP) — The nationwide death toll from rabies has reached its highest point in 20 years with the death of a 45-year-old distillery worker in Frankfort, Ky, the national Center for Disease Control reported Fridy.

Dr. William Winkler, chief of the respiratory and special pathogens branch at the CDC, said the last time there were more deaths was 1959, when seven people died. Only three persons are known to have survived human rabies since 1970.

Winkler said the CDC is concerned about increases in rabies in both animals and humans. Reported cases in animals have been averaging about 3,100 a year, but this year, Winkler said, the rate may increase 50 percent above that.

The CDC said the Kentucky victim was unable to give any clues to his exposure to rabies before he died last month. Epidemiologists said he could have had the disease for as long as a year before the symptoms became evident.

They said he worked as a mechanic in a distillery near Frankfort, raised tobacco and hunted deer occasionally. He said his neighbor had a dog that died of rabies five years ago, but this was eliminated as a probable cause. He said the patient may have been exposed to a groundhog with rabies last spring, but confirmation is unlikely.

The symptoms of rabies include headache, fever and muscle spasms in efforts to swallow. That leads to a fear of water known as hydrophobia, followed by delirium and convulsions.

Treatment includes antirabies serum or vaccine.

Ether was first demonstrated as an anesthetic in surgery in 1846.

OPEC Members Pledge To Honor Proposed Price

By MARK POTTS
Associated Press Writer

Officials of Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, two of the OPEC members that raised prices 33 percent four days before OPEC meets Monday, indicated Friday that the new $24-a-barrel price is their final offer to the cartel.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said in Brussels that his and the other three nations had no intention of going above the $24-a-barrel price announced Thursday. The new price, $6 higher than the previous one, was made retroactive to Nov. 1.

And Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon-Berti said he hoped the move "clipped the wings of the hawks" — OPEC members like Iran and Iraq that have been urging that raises be raised above $30 a barrel.

Venezuela also raised its prices $6, to a $24 base price, but with differentials for quality that will make the actual price of Venezuelan oil slightly higher.

Venezuela will host next week's OPEC meeting, with the oil ministers scheduled to gather in Caracas Monday.

Thousands of army troops and police were assigned to guard airport and hotel facilities to provide protection for some 150 OPEC delegates, who will be covered by at least twice as many reporters.

The oil ministers will convene amid circumstances quite unlike previous meetings of the 13-member cartel. The erosion of the dollar, world energy crisis and instability in Iran are not new preludes to an OPEC meeting.

But never before have four of OPEC's members — the United Arab Emirates and Qatar, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela — taken so firm and visible a stand on a price increase before a meeting.

The new price is 85 percent higher than the OPEC price of $12.93 per barrel a year ago, and if the increase is adopted by the whole cartel, will add at least 7½ cents a gallon to gasoline and heating oil prices in the United States.

And while several of OPEC's more militant members have raised their prices through surcharges in recent weeks and before the two other meetings this year, never has such an increase come from Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest member and the one considered msot friendly to the United States.

Yamani said he and leaders of other moderate oil producing countries wanted to avoid a confrontation at the OPEC meeting that might lead to much higher prices. Others either would have to accept the $6 increase or force a possible split, he said.

Calderon-Berti and oil analysts would not rule out the possibility of a split price, or that OPEC would adopt prices even higher than those adopted by the four nations.

Yamani indicated that Saudi Arabia's reasoning in making the price increase retroactive was to erode some of the profits earned by major oil companies. He said OPEC has found that the difference between the prices they charged before November and those finally paid by consumer countries was going directly to oil companies.

"That's unfair," Yamani said.

Oil analysts in New York said the backdating of the price increase would be costly to the oil companies and probably cut into fourth-quarter profits, although the earnings would still be very large.

Gus Fliakos, who follows oil companies for Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Smith, estimated that the Saudi move would cost Exxon, Mobil, Standard Oil of California and Texaco — Saudi Arabia's four biggest customers — $700 million each.

The OPEC ministers are also expected to discus production levels and the possibility of moving away from the dollar as OPEC's chief currency.

Yamani said his country would continue to produce 9.5 million barrels of oil a day "at least through the first quarter of 1980," and expects to be able to produce as much as 12 million barrels daily by the early 1980s.

Algerian Energy Minister Belkhacem Nabi said in Algiers Friday that the OPEC nations are in favor of abandoning the dollar and replacing it with a basket of currencies, but conceded that the mechanics of such a move might be too difficult.

"This is more complex, since a certain number of conditions would have to be met before the dollar can be replaced," he said.

Exxon Rejects Terminal

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Co. USA became Friday the second major oil company to decide against making use of the $1 billion offshore crude oil terminal the Texas Deepwater Port Authority proposes to build 27 miles south of Freeport.

Shell Oil Co. had reported Oct. 17 it does not plan to sign an agreement to use the facilities.

Directors of the port authority have said use agreements totaling 1.4 million barrels a day are needed before bonds can be sold for the project the Texas Legislature sanctioned after a five-year effort by Seadock Inc., a consortium of Exxon and other companies, was abandoned.

Bob Casey, authority chairman, said Friday he was well aware of the decisions by both Exxon and Shell.

"They both said from the beginning they wouldn't sign, and that's all I have to say," the former Houston congressman said.

Exxon said uncertainties and financial risks involved in the project stem from both the federal license for the port and "the many questions regarding future throughput and economics of the port."

No reference was made to announced plans by the Carter administration to reduce the quantities of foreign oil the nation has been importing.

"The uncertainties and financial risks of the project are of such magnitude that Exxon cannot commit its capital to underwrite the bonds," Exxon said.

A Shell spokesman said that company's long range supply plans do not warrant "the financial commitment the state is requesting."

"Signatory users would have to bear all of the financial risk of the bonds until the year 2010," the Exxon statement said.

Signers of the use agreements would pay 20 cents a barrel to unload tankers and move the oil to an onshore terminal through use of a 27-mile pipeline. Companies failing to sign the agreements would pay 25 cents a barrel.

Earlier in the week, Casey said the future status of the project must be determined soon because construction should start next summer.

"If we can't decide soon, the engineering work will not be completed in time to start construction," he said.

The giraffe has a tongue so long it can clean its ears.

Decision May Cost Companies Millions

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia's decision to backdate its new $24-a-barrel oil price to Nov. 1 is going to cost the nation's four largest oil companies hundreds of millions of dollars, analysts said Friday. One of the firms, Standard Oil Co. of California, responded by boosting its gasoline prices 6 cents a gallon.

Sellers Stough, SoCal's comptroller, said he expected the other three firms to take similar moves. None had by late Friday afternoon. But Mobil Corp. said it had raised prices three cents on Wednesday, before the Saudi move, and had no other increases planned.

Analysts say other companies, which get oil elsewhere, will probably raise their prices in coming weeks as the result of the price increase expected to be decided upon next week by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Saudi Arabia is OPEC's largest member.

SoCal, Mobil and the other two firms, Exxon Corp. and Texaco Inc., are partners in the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco), which operates the Saudi oil fields and gets much of Saudi Arabia's oil exports.

Because of the lower price of the Saudi crude — formerly $18 a barrel, compared to the OPEC average of $21.50 — the Aramco partners have enjoyed a competitive advantage over other oil companies who must buy oil from more expensive sources.

Because of price controls in the United States, most of that advantage is lost because the firms must charge less for their gasoline than other firms. But overseas, where there are few price controls, the firms can charge whatever the market will bear. Analysts have said this has given the four companies bigger profits than their competitors overseas.

Saudi Arabia has often complained about this advantage, and Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Zaki Yamani called it "unfair" Friday and hinted that that was the reason for making the new price retroactive to Nov. 1.

The move might accomplish what Yamani desired. Analysts and industry officials estimated that the retroactive price increase would cost each company about $700 million, and reduce each firm's fourth-quarter profits by as much as $300 million. Exxon, the biggest of the oil companies, earned about $1.14 billion in the third quarter.

"The net impact of making it retroactive was to take away some of our profits," said Stough. "The price increase itself, had it been put in without the retroactive part, would not have had this impact on us."

"It's bound to have a negative impact on fourth-quarter earnings," said Gus Fliakos, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Smith. "But their earnings were going to be so tremendous anyway."

"There's no question it will be a negative for them," said Eugene Nowak, an analyst at Dean Witter. "It would have to have an adverse impact on the companies."

Some analysts speculated privately that the companies might have taken steps to cushion the impact of a retroactive increase after the Saudis made a similar move in July, backdating the last OPEC increase to June.

But Stough said there was no way his firm could recover the higher costs between Nov. 1 and Thursday because of Council on Wage and Price Stability Rules on price increases.

"We don't have any possibility of recovering the retroactive increase with respect to future prices under the COWPS guidelines," he said.

The Saudis could make the price increase retroactive, Stough said, because the bill for oil bought in November came due on Thursday.

VAN STOLEN

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — A van containing about $8,000 worth of musical instruments was stolen from a restaurant parking lot this week after a group of junior high school students had given a Christmas concert. Detroit police found the van Wednesday. It was stripped of tires, battery, radio and side windows plus the instruments and a new public address system, bought with proceeds from candy bar sales.

Status Of HSCH Revenue Bond Payments Remains Unsettled

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The status of revenue bond payments due the federal government from Health Sciences Center Hospital is still in a holding pattern after a visit from government officials Friday morning.

Representatives from the Dallas and Washington Health, Education and Welfare offices told the county hospital district board that they want to avoid hasty decisions and would like to see the hospital get back on its feet.

The hospital district missed its July 1 payment on an $8 million loan for the hospital's construction, and the hospital probably won't be able to make the Jan. 1 payment.

But the hospital officials are asking for a two-year waiver of the payments which add up to $1.8 million. Hospital district legal counsel Charles Galey pointed out that the initial request was for a one-year waiver.

Galey distributed to both board members and HEW reprepresenatives a projection of the hospital's financial situation through 1980. Dallas representative Stanley White and Washington representative Jay Earle questioned granting a two-year waiver based on a one-year financial projection.

The hospital takes the position that since the bond was to be paid back through net revenues — and there are no net revenues — the debt is not due to HEW. The government representatives declined to discuss that particular point, saying they were not qualified to speak as attorneys.

Texas Tech Medical School spokesman Dr. Richard Lockwood made a plea to the government visitors to consider the hospital's financial problems in terms of the effects on the teaching program.

"We're at the point now where we're going to start losing people because of the financial difficulties at the hospital." He said he needs to be able to convince them that the hospital will survive.

"I really would hate to see us lose the really good people we have here," Lockwood stressed.

White asked Lockwood about the future of the medical facility as far as the kind of services that could be offered. Lockwood answered, saying "I think all of us are here because we think it has incredible potential. White explained that both HEW and the hospital district are in a different financial situation than when plans for the hospital first surfaced.

Removal of the HEW debt would, by itself, not assure a bright financial future, he said.

"We don't feel HEW should shoulder the entire burden," White said. "If it would work, that's one thing."

White stressed that his comments were not to be taken as a refusal for help, but a request for commitment on everybody's part that improvements will come.

"We'll make our decision as quickly as possible," he continued. "We have an obligation to the American taxpayer."

Newly appointed administrator Jake Henry and new financial director Charlie Trimble were present at the meeting, as well as Lubbock County commissioners and County Judge Rodrick Shaw. Henry and Trimble were signed to a two-year contract last weekend and will assume their duties Jan. 1.

Railroad Crossing Warnings To Be Installed

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Warning signs required by the federal government should be installed at all railroad crossings on Lubbock County roads by sometime this summer.

County commissioners agreed on a 3-1 vote Friday to allow the county to participate in the federally-funded Passive Railroad Crossing Protection Program. Commissioner Jim Lancaster cast the only negative vote, saying that he is opposed to the federal government dictating any programs that eventually would be a cost to the county.

The purpose of the program is to standardize and update all railroad crossing warning systems in the nation. By standardizing the warning devices, supporters of the program believe that motorists will readily recognize when they are approaching railroad crossings.

In Texas, the federal program is being administered through the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. George Wall, district engineer for the highway department, explained that permission must be granted by city and county officials before any installation work can be done at railroad crossings within their jurisdictions.

According to Wall, all installation costs for the new warning signs will be paid for with federal funds. However, participating cities and counties will be responsible for maintaining the systems in their areas.

Wall is trying to carry out the new safety program in District 5, which covers 17 counties and 52 cities. Lubbock County is the 14th county that has agreed to participate.

The estimated cost to update warning systems throughout the district is $850,000. "We don't have a handle on what the maintenance costs would be," Wall said.

One of the major goals of the program is to provide adequate advance warning signs at all railroad crossings so that people will know to approach them with caution. Wall noted that across the district, there are no advance warning signs.

Federal standards call for pavement markings on all paved roads where the crossings are located. Warning signs are required on all unpaved roads.

In other business Friday, commissioners made appointments to three local boards, but they failed to come up with a name to fill the vacancy on the Lubbock County Hospital District Board.

Commissioner Alton Brazell said following the meeting that some members of the commissioners court are making personal contacts with individuals in the community regarding serving on the LCHD Board, but he doesn't expect any appointment to be made until after the first of the year.

Technician's Friends To Establish Tech Scholarship

Family and friends of Hunter Heath Jr., who died Nov. 24 in Lubbock, have announced that they are establishing a Hunter Heath Memorial Scholarship in the Texas Tech University College of Engineering.

They have requested that the scholarship account be set up with Texas Tech University in Heath's name. The first scholarship will be awarded after the fund reaches $5,000 although an ultimate goal of $10,000 has been set.

Heath had worked 10 years as a master technician in engineering services at Texas Tech and before that he had owned and operated Hunter Heath Electronics in Lubbock for 23 years.

Heath's son, Dr. Hunter Heath III, spoke for the family in explaining that his father's "great unfulfilled wish was to have obtained a degree in electrical engineering." Because of this the family established the scholarship as "a fitting memorial for him."

Contributions to the memorial should be sent to the Office of Development, Texas Tech University, P.O. Box 4650, Lubbock, Texas 79409, and should bear the designation, "Hunter Heath Memorial."

Veteran Of 'Roots' To Play Heavy In Made For TV Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fay Hauser is not your everyday movie heavy in "Christmas Lilies of the Field."

She's not mean and she's not bad, she just represents government bureaucracy threatening to tear apart the orphanage that a group of nuns is trying to build.

Actually, it's the orphanage they're trying to con Homer Smith into building. Those sisters are at it again, and Homer is once again the reluctant victim. In the original "Lilies of the Field," the nuns conned Homer into building a chapel.

Billy Dee Williams stars as Homer Smith, the role that won an Oscar for Sidney Poitier as Best Actor in the 1963 movie. Maria Schell is as Mother Maria, who heads the order. Fay Hauser stars as Janet Owens, a welfare worker who follows regulations to the letter.

"Christmas Lilies of the Field" airs Sunday evening on NBC.

"The nuns have acquired orphans that no one else wants," said Miss Hauser, who played Sister Carrie in "Roots: The Next Generations." "Homer Smith, who's a vagabond carpenter and builder, wanders back into town again when the sisters are having a dispute with the government.

"I work for the county social services. I'm the heavy. I am the thorn in the side because I say they are not providing adequate housing and care."

Miss Hauser does not long remain the heavy. She eventually is won over. Along the way, she and Williams engage in a Tracy-Hepburn love-hate relationship that winds up something akin to romance.

"Not much of a romance. It would turn out to be unrequited love because Smith is a traveling man. In the end, he wanders off again, not to return again until the next sequel — or when NBC picks up the option for a series.

"I think it's written well enough that you see the perspective of each of the three major characters, Homer, Mother Maria and myself," Miss Hauser said.

The sequel was directed by Ralph Nelson, who directed the original.

The deadline for closing the orphanage laid down by Social Worker Owens is Dec. 15. She will find good homes for the kids, who represent a wide range of nationalities. In the meantime, the kids are rehearsing the pageant they plan to put on Christmas Day at the orphanage.

"Working with the original director, Ralph Nelson, really helped," Miss Hauser said. "He wanted the same kind of feeling. He created that international atmosphere with the kids and Maria Schell. He also created that Tracy-Hepburn atmosphere. He gave it a lot of elements you don't often find in television.

"I think it has good series possibilities," she said. "All three of us have been signed for a series if NBC picks it up. There are two lines that Homer says to me that I think tell a lot about the concept. Once he says, 'Nobody tells Homer Smith what he can't do.' The other is, 'Nobody tells Homer Smith what he can do.'"

Miss Hauser has no immediate television projects, and after Christmas she is going to Nashville to record an album of her songs.

"I'm working on the music now," she said. "I write pop, some country, rhythm and blues and disco. I was a lyricist for a record company once and was trained to write for different markets. I didn't write just what I felt like writing." originally went to work for the record company when she couldn't find an acting job. She got back into acting later, and was in the road company of "Purlie" when she met Robert Guillaume, now the star of "Benson."

"It was the real chorine-star bit, just like in the movies," she said. "He was the star and I was in the chorus line."

She and Guillaume have lived together for the past five years. "We've discussed marriage," she said, "but I think we'll get married only if we decide to have kids."

Guillaume came to Hollywood first for "Soap," and Miss Hauser arrived a short time later. She did guest spots for such shows as "What's Happening," "Good Times," and "Love Boat" before landing her first major role in "Roots II."

Mayor Conference Backing Conservation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Conference of Mayors is backing legislation aimed at stimulating energy conservation and development of renewable energy sources at the community level.

Known as the Community Energy Efficiency Act, the measure, sponsored by Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., would establish a three-stage, $5 billion program of government grants over a five-year period.

"For many years, mayors of our cities have been making the case for the link between urban and energy problems," Ted Wilson, mayor of Salt Lake City, Utah, told a Senate panel this week.

"We have begun to build the urban energy record. We can do more and better," he said.

Tax Assessment Board To Hold Seminar

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The School Tax Assessment Practices Board will hold a regional Seminar in Lubbock April 17, 1980, for directors of the newly-created county tax appraisal districts.

The seminar is one of 20 seminars to be held across the state to aid the district directors in getting their offices under way in 1980.

The county tax appraisal districts will take over property appraisals for all taxing bodies in their county including cities, school boards, special districts and, possibly, the county government.

The districts were created by the Legislature during its recent session.

Rock Bands To Give Concerts To Raise Money For Cambodians

UNITED NATIONS (AP) -Famous English rock bands and singers will give four concerts in London just after Christmas to raise money for U.N. Cambodian relief, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced Wednesday.

The first concert Dec. 26 will present Queen; the second Dec. 27 Ian Dury and the Blockheads, Matumbi and a mystery act; the third Dec. 28 The Specials and The Who; and the fourth Dec. 29 Billy Connally, Elvis Costello and the Attractions, Rockpile featuring Dave Edmunds and Nick Lowe, and Paul McCartney and Wings.

Waldheim's spokesman, Francois Giuliani, said the concerts were the result of contacts Waldheim had with McCartney "for the purpose of raising funds for the suffering people" of Cambodia. He said other artists readily responded when asked to join in the effort.

Giuliani said it was also hoped that Elton John would appear at the final concert. John did not appear as scheduled at a concert for the International Year of the Child given here last January. Giuliani said he was sick at that time.

Giuliani said profits from the concert would support emergency relief work of agencies in the U.N. system. The U.N. Children's Fund headed by Henry R. Labouisse of the United States is the lead agency in the relief effort of those agencies. It cooperates with the non-U.N. International Committee of the Red Cross in helping Cambodians inside Cambodia. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, Poul Hartling of Denmark, helps Cambodian refugees, most of them in Thailand.

The U.N. estimate is that about 3 million civilians, 800,000 of them children, are short of food and lack most other basic necessities.

The announcement said Harvey Goldsmith, a leading producer-promoter of contemporary music in Britain, would produce the benefit concerts; they would be filmed for airing on television next spring and worldwide TV distribution would be handled by EMI, a major film, TV and record company.

University Releases Magazine's Archives

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The long feud between Rutgers University and the Partisan Review over ownership of the magazine's archives ended Wednesday when the school agreed to relinquish all claims to original documents.

The out-of-court settlement was reached Wednesday on the third day of trial of a suit brought by William Phillips, founder and editor of the literary journal. Phillips sought to regain possession of 45 years of papers from the university's library.

Phillips said that among the manuscripts he wanted back were works by Norman Mailer, Saul Bellow, Mary McCarthy and Susan Sontag.

The school retained the right to copy Partisan Review materials now stored in its library. The original documents will be transported to Boston University, where Phillips now edits the magazine.

Until the copies are made, nothing is to be removed from the permanent collection at Rutgers, according to the terms of the settlement before Superior Court Judge David Furman.

Most of the archives were placed in the Rutgers Library in 1963, when Phillips and the university moved the editorial offices to Rutgers from New York University.

Besides editing and publishing the review here, Phillips served as a lecturer in English. He was forced to retire from the faculty when he reached 70 and decided to switch the review's editorial offices to Boston University on Aug. 4, 1978.

When he attempted to remove documents, security police told Phillips that Rutgers considered itself to be the owner of the archives.

The magazine was founded in 1934 as part of the New York John Reed Club, which functioned as an organ of the Communist Party U.S.A.

Demand For Power Plants Expected To Decrease

WASHINGTON (AP) — The departments of Energy and Labor say demand for construction workers to build new power plants will drop slightly each year through 1983 as new plants are completed.

Nonetheless, the two agencies said Friday, power plant construction in the United States will still provide some 900,000 year-long jobs over the next five years.

According to a study carried out jointly by the two departments, demand for on-site construction labor is expected to total 200,330 year-long jobs in 1979. This total will decline each year until 1983, when 142,840 jobs are projected, according to the study.

Hostage's Wife Allowed Phone Conversation With Husband

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — "The only bad news I've got to report," hostage Jerry Plotkin told his wife, "is that I've started smoking heavily again."

"Oh no!" came the reply at the other end of the phone, 11,500 miles away in Sherman Oaks, Calif.

"It's OK. I'll quit the day I get out of here," Plotkin assured his wife Deborah.

Plotkin, 47, one of the 50 hostages held in the U.S. Embassy for 41 days, was allowed to talk to his wife for 15 minutes Thursday. The conversation was monitored and taped by his captors, who afterward gave a copy of it to a reporter.

It was an emotional conversation. Plotkin said he was being well treated but would not be released unless the United States agrees to the militants' demands and surrenders the ailing shah.

"You know me, Debbie, nobody can make me say things that I don't want to say. You know what I mean so you can rest assured that a lot of the things you are hearing are just political bull — to confuse the American public.

"The only way we will be free is for them (the U.S. Government) to return the shah," Plotkin said. "There will only be trials, perhaps, for agents who did things against their (the Iranian) government. The rest of the civil workers and the Marine and the boys like that — no way."

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said Plotkin's remarks should be viewed with the understanding that he has been held prisoner for 41 days. "The man's been a prisoner for six weeks and says it under duress and it should be viewed in that light," the spokesman said.

"I wish you could know what's going on here," Mrs. Plotkin said.

"What's going on?" Plotkin began, then stopped and said, "Well, no, I can't ask you that."

"I know," said his wife. "I know."

"You can only tell me personal things, sweetheart," he said.

Plotkin said the 20 letters he wrote to his wife — letters she said she did not receive — had to be submitted first to his captors "to be censored."

Plotkin and his wife both expressed concern that neither had received any letters from the other other.

"Maybe the (U.S.) government doesn't want you to hear what I have to say," Plotkin said. "I've written you 20 letters exactly."

"If you had only read my letters you would know the things that I have seen, the things that I have learned and what's really going on here. As a matter of fact, I feel these people are absolutely right," he said.

Mrs. Plotkin asked her husband if he had lost weight.

"Oh yeah, you're going to love it and I've grown a beard and "I'm not going to shave it off until you've seen it," he said.

Actress Sets Off On Second Career As Singer Of Pop Tunes

NEW YORK (AP) — Her phrasing sometimes is shaky, her intonation at times a bit uncertain, but there she is — actress Cybill Shepherd, off on a second career as a singer of the better pop tunes.

For seven years the personal and professional leading lady of film director Peter Bogdanovich, who gave her instant fame in his 1971 hit, "The Last Picture Show," she also has a new career on the home front.

She's now married to David Ford, a former Mercedes-Benz parts dealer who plays guitar with her. They met in her hometown of Memphis, Tenn. They live there now and have a five-month-old daughter, Clementine.

They both were with Miss Shepherd this week as the blonde-haired, fine-featured former model, backed by a three-piece jazz band, opened a two-week gig at Reno Sweeney, a smart-set boite here.

Her singing act includes such golden oldies as "Memphis in June," "A Foggy Day," "My Ship," "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" and a hit of more recent vintage, "Masquerade."

Is's safe to say she hasn't reached the point where she rivals such respected veteran club singers as Sylvia Syms.

But she readily admits that as a vocalist she's still in the learning process, and "if I ever get out of it, I'm in trouble."

Though relatively new to professional singing, she says she's been vocalizing since age 8. She grew up listening to such top talents as Louis Armstrong, Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett. During her years with Bogdanovich, she says, she used to sing on the sly with top Hollywood jazzmen like trumpeter Jack Sheldon and trombonist Frank Rosolino, and with Bill Berry's big band.

She first tried the big-band route, she says, in Hawthorne, Calif. — she can't recall the leader's name — under the nom de canary Brook Carter: "I didn't do too well. It was terrifying."

But she kept at it, despite critical snickers that attended a bit of warbling she did in Bogdanovich's "At Long Last Love" and what she calls, with a shudder, "a really bad" first album.

It was coyly titled, "Cybill Shepherd Does It to Cole Porter," and "it almost was my last," she says in her soft Tennessee accent.

But she's since cut two others, an as-yet unreleased album with tenor sax great Stan Getz, and a new big-band record, "Vanilla," cut in Memphis after she did a brief warmup club date here last year.

In a way, the club date marked her serious entry into singing.

She was at loose ends at the time, she explained: "I knew my relationship with Bogdanovich was not going to be the same, and I was just a free spirit. So I went back to Memphis to make the album."

Miss Shepherd, 29, says she studied operatic singing when she lived in Los Angeles but never jazz-style singing with a jazz vocal coach because "it's hard to find a good one.

"But I think you just have to listen a lot to know what's happening in jazz, to listen as much as you can. That's the only way I know to learn jazz, by listening to the musicians."

A six-movie veteran, she says she's still interested in acting, perhaps on the stage here in perhaps a musical, or in films back in Hollywood. That she lives in Memphis doesn't mean she's bid adieu to Tinseltown.

"Oh, no," she declared. "I flew out like a bird. But I'd never say never again."

Iranian Detained By Militants Skeptical Of Early Release

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Iranian who says he was detained and questioned by militants inside the U.S. Embassy compound in Tehran the last 16 days, doubts the American hostages will be released by Christmas.

"From my discussions with the people who are controlling the compound, I have the definite impression that this business is going to go on for quite some time," Ali Reza Jahan-Shahi said in a telephone interview from Tehran with his employer, Mutual Radio.

"They are well prepared, physically speaking ... they are willing for a long, long, long siege of the compound and for the siege of hostages."

Jahan-Shahi said the militants instituted exercise periods for their captives after learning of reports the hostages were being ill treated. He said some of the Iranians guarding the hostages seemed to be "innocent, harmless people," but that others are working in a "well-planned" manner.

Jahan-Shahi has been a journalist in Tehran for eight years, Mutual said. He has worked in the past as a part-time correspondent for The Associated Press, the London Times and the German news agency.

He said he was picked up by revolutionary authorities and taken to the embassy where he was questioned extensively about embassy employees he knew.

He said other Iranians have been detained by the militants, but that he was questioned longer than any of the others. He was released, he said, after the militants decided he had "no illegitimate connections" with the embassy.

"What they were worried about was my connection with the U.S. mission in Tehran in the past several years. Apparently they found some documents in the compound on which my name had been mentioned ... I was watched very carefully," he added.

He said he wasn't allowed near the Americans but could see them from a distance at exercise time.

"A couple of them that I knew before the accident, I find they had put on some weight," Jahan-Shahi said. "It must be attributed to the long period of inaction and inactivity they had to endure.

"And from the look on their faces ... they were indeed happy to be able to come out and get some whiffs of the fresh air and do some light exercises, of course under the watchful eyes of their guards, some of whom were armed."

Leonardeo da Vinci died in 1519, the same year that Cortez began his expedition to conquer the Aztecs of Mexico.
