AS IT LOOKS TO ME

By Jack Ainslie

PEANUT ROLLERS

Texas is bidding for a new species of fame and glory—fame and glory of the peanut type. For a Texan, according to press reports, is at present aspiring for a place in the sun as the champion peanut roller. The top of Pike's Peak is his goal and his nose is his modus operandi.

Here is fresh evidence that ours is preeminently the land of freak stunts—a land where thrives and flourishes the publicity hounds and the ballyhoo artists to a degree unequalled anywhere in this wide, wide world. Anywhere from New York to Podunk the champion egg eaters, flag pole sitters, and pancake flippers readily attract gaping, admiring audience. Above all others we are the people given to glorifying the apish and worshiping the freakish with an avidity that speaks eloquently of our naive unsophistication and open eyed gullability.

Someone has been credited with saying that variety is the spice of life. If that be true, American life is certainly chuck-full of spice. Indeed our variety runs all the way from asinine silliness to the topmost peaks of sound, solid achievement.

As it looks to me, nose-rolling a peanut, even to the top of Pike's Peak, doesn't indicate that the Texas peanut roller has a very lofty ambition.

RETURNS EX-CONVICT TO HUNTSVILLE

Chief of Detectives Freizier, of Phoenix, Arizona, was here last Friday accompanied by his wife and little son. Mr. Freizier had in his charge a prisioner that he was taking to the State penitentiary at Huntsville. The man had escaped from the Huntsville prison eight years ago and had been living in Arizona ever since. Tired of living the life of a hunted criminal and wishing to make peace with his conscience the man gave himself up to Detective Freizier and asked to be taken back to the Huntsville Pen to serve out the remainder of his term.

CARD OF THANKS.

To our brothers and sisters and friends in general:

We want to express our thanks and our appreciation for all that the good people did during my sickness and the loss of our darling baby, which our Heavenly Father taken home, not only to the little ones but to every one that loves his appraisings. We are thanking everybody and praying God's blessing upon every one.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McDonald

The Methodist Church.

The Methodist and Presbyterian churches will hold their respective services Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. In the evening at 8:30 these churches will meet in a union service at the Paesbyterian church.

W. M. Justice, Pastor.

Three Children Die of Dysentery

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Savage received a telegram last Saturday conveying the sad news of the death of three of their great-grand-children, which occurred at Edinburg, Texas.

Lancaster Earl Tinkler Jr., 8, was the first to die, death coming to him shortly after noon Friday. Rose Marie, aged 5, and Catherine, 10, died early Saturday, within an hour of each other. A fourth child, Coles, aged 6, is ill from the same disease but at the present writing is some better and may recover.

Dr. L. J. Montague, of Edinburg, who attended the children, pronounced death due to amoebic dysentery, caused by infection from water.

The three little bodies were laid to rest in graves side by side in Hill Crest Memorial Park Cemetery at Edinburg.

Friends here extend sympathy to all the bereaved ones.

Capture Truck Load of Booze

Captain W. L. Barler and Customs Officer L. A. Cook took charge of a truck last Sunday night about ten o'clock, on the Sheffield-Dryden road about 43 miles north of Dryden, and arrested the driver who gave his name as Charlie Goolsby of San Angelo. The truck was loaded with 200 gallons of pure alcohol and two cases of beer.

The man was taken to Del Rio Monday morning to appear before a U. S. Commissioner.

Entertains in Honor of Mrs. P. D. Lowry

Mrs. C. L. Sims entertained at her home last Friday afternoon honoring Mrs. P. D. Lowry of El Paso who is visiting in the city. Baskets of larkspurs and verbenas had been arranged tastefully about the rooms where three tables of players enjoyed the afternoon playing bridge. At the close of the games, Mrs. P. D. Lowry was awarded the high score prize, a mayonaise bowl. Mrs. Max Bogusch received the second high score prize, a linen scarf, and the honoree was presented with a string of novelty beads.

Those who enjoyed this delightful hospitality were Mesdames P. D. Lowry, the honoree; S. C. Bodkin, W. H. Savage, Roy Landers, Annie McLymont, Max Bogusch, P E. Dishman, J. S. Nance, C. V. McKnight, E. F. Howard, F. B. Carter, J. E. Landers, Addie Lee Boling, and Miss Mamie Reece.

NOTICE

Stockholders Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Sanderson State Bank, of Sanderson, Texas, for the election of directors and the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting, will be held at the office of said bank on Saturday, the 6th day of July, A. D. 1929.

Joe Kerr, President.

The Presbyterian Church.

All the regular services will be held at this church next Sunday at 11 a. m., the sermon topic will be "The Free-Souled Life."

In the evening, at 8:15, this church will have as its guests the pastor and members of the Methodist church, beginning the Sunday evening Union services agreed upon last Sunday.

Play fair with your church—by being present Sunday.

J. A. McMILLAN, Minister.

TURNER—IVEY

On Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Druse in this city the wedding of Miss Carrie Ivey and William Richard (Son) Turner was solemnized. Rev. W. M. Justice, pastor of the Methodist church read the beautiful and impressive ring ceremony.

The bride is the sister of Mrs. W. M. Druse, and since her graduation from high school several years ago she has been employed at the Sanderson Drug Company. She has made many friends due to her sweet ways and all wish for her much happiness.

The groom is one of Sanderson's native sons being the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Mat Turner who recently moved to Alpine. He is employed at the Ed Downie ranch.

Following several days spent in Alpine with relatives they returned here and will make their home on the Downie ranch.

The Times joines with their many friends in extending best wishes and wish for them much happiness and prosperity as they travel through life together.

MINING NEWS OF INTEREST FROM ARIZONA

Lee Turner, who resides at Winkleman, Arizona, has written a letter to his father here, R. J. Turner Sr., and in it he has quite a lot to say about the mining news of that State, some of which is of local interest. Speaking of the "79" mine at Winkleman, Arizonia, which was formerly owned by I. E. Garten who used to live here, Mr. Turner says:

"I. E. (Shorty) Garten, sold the "79" mine for $65,000, and the Company that bought it from him has refused $2,000,000 for it, and all the mining engineers reports say it is one of the largest lead properties in the state of Arizona."

Speaking of his own mine, Mr. Turner says: "I have been keeping up the work on my claims and now the Government is going to help me out with it. The Government has agreed to put up all costs for 50 per cent of what is unearthed, and I am to hold the ground and the other 50 per cent. I was told by the Government engineer today that he would be ready for me to start my work this week under Government protection."

Danger of Home Cleaning of Clothes

We shudder at the idea of men in mines handling dynamite and niter, and sympathise with them in their daily risks, but as a matter of fact these explosives are not half so dangerous and treacherous as gasoline. Don't risk your lives to save a few cents when our modern cleaning plant will relieve you of all hazard, and, incidentally, do the work better than you can do it.

Cactus Bridge Club.

Mrs. Calvin Stansell entertained the Cactus Bridge Club with a very delightful party, Thursday, June 6, at Mrs. Carlton White's home.

Refreshments of chicken salad bread and butter sandwiches, ice cream and angel food cake were served. A novelty bridge doll was won by Mrs. Carlton White, winner of high score; and table numbers, second prize, was won by Mrs Jim Mason.

Two Things Will Help You

Keep cool this summer; plenty of ice and plenty of clean clothes. And the fresh garments won't cost as much as the supply of ice.

Your dainty frocks of last summer are soiled and some of them forgotten. Let us take away from them their soiled appearance and bring back their fresh wearfulness.

QUICK WAY TO END LIVER TROUBLES

Free Proof!

Nothing else known to medical science acts so quickly and surely—and yet so gently—as Dodson's Levertone, to regulate balky liver and bowels; to purge the system of the poisonous waste which makes people headachy, bilious, weak; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. Thousands say they have tried everything and never found its equal. You can prove its merit for yourself. Just write Sterling Products, Wheeling, W. Va., for a FREE sample bottle. Do it today.

But Tired, Anyway

The person they used to call the "tired business man" was only the tired husband after his emancipated wife had gotten her wind.—American Magazine.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptional product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

If it is Printing we can do it and do it right

COLOR PRINTING

WHEN our experience suggests the use of colored paper, colored ink or a combination of the two for the job you submit, as an aid toward increasing possible returns, we tell you so. If white paper and black ink are best, we suggest them.

Dividend Printing

▶There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

▶A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

▶The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

SYNOPSIS

In New York, Hugh Chesby, English World war veteran, relates a story of a treasure in Constantinople in the existence of which his uncle, Lord Chesby, firmly believes. A cablegram notifies Hugh of his uncle's sailing for New York. At the dock Hugh and his chum, Jack Nash, learn from Watkins, Lord Chesby's valet, that the old gentleman has left with a stranger, purporting to be a friend of Hugh. A mysterious telephone message notifies Hugh that his uncle is in a hospital, dying, victim of an assassin. Before his death he babbles of the treasure, and tells them he was stabbed by "Toutou." With Lord Chesby's body, Hugh and Jack sail for England. In London Hugh and Jack meet their war buddy, Nikka Zarenko, famous gypsy violinist, and pore over some old documents seemingly having a bearing on the treasure and its location. A hidden room, referred to as the "Prior's Vent," is frequently mentioned.

CHAPTER III

The Hilyer Party

Mr. Penfellow, the vicar, received us at the west door of the parish church, a gigantic edifice which was all that was left of the once noble foundation of the priory of St. Cuthbert of Crowden. He escorted Hugh—and incidentally Nikka and me—up the center aisle to a high-walled pew directly under the choir.

The tempered light that stole through stained-glass windows left most of the space in shadow, but I descried beyond the breadth of the crossing a second box-like pew identical with ours, and in it a company whose gay raiment and gabbling ways were out of place in contrast with the stolid piety of the village folk and neighboring gentry.

"There's Hilyer," muttered Hugh in my ear.

But we had no time to spare for observing the county's black sheep. Mr. Penfellow's quavering, nasal voice began to intone the stately rite of the Established Church for the dead. The shrill voices of the choir-boys responded. Our eyes became fastened upon the oblong casket, resting on its low catafalque under the choir railing, which contained the body of James Chesby, that quaint, whimsical, Twentieth century knight errant, who had upheld the traditions of his race by tilting over the world in pursuit of a prize which all sober men proclaimed to be impossible of attainment.

And he had as good as found it! Laughed at, derided, mocked and ridiculed, he had persisted doggedly in what he had regarded as his life work. He had succeeded where all others had failed or feared to venture. And at the last, probably when he envisaged complete success in his grasp, he had accepted death rather than yield the prize to any but his heir. He must have had good stuff in him, that slight wan-faced slip of a man, whom I had only seen as he lay on his deathbed in the hospital, his eyes shining to the end with indomitable spirit.

As I thought of him, cut and hacked by that brute Toutou, I found my fingers clenching on the book-rack in front of me; and glancing down, I saw Hugh's knuckles, too, were white. We exchanged a grim look. For the first time we understood fully that we were playing a man's game, a game in which there was no limit. And we experienced the thirst for action which comes from a desire to slake unsatisfied vengeance. This task we had set ourselves to was more than a hunt for treasure. It was likewise a pursuit of James Chesby's murderers.

My eyes chanced to stray toward the opposite side of the crossing, and in the shadows that hovered over the Hilyer pew I glimpsed a pair of eyes that gleamed with the evil green light of a beast of prey. For an instant only they showed. Then the shadows moved, and they disappeared. Startled, I looked again, and saw nothing. It must have been fancy, I told myself, a trick of the sunbeams filtered through the particolored glass of the windows.

The formal service was soon ended, and after the congregation had filed out, a little knot of men from Chesby arms poised the casket on their shoulders and paced slowly after Mr. Penfellow and the verger down the broad, winding stairs to the illared crypt. At the east end, beneath the altar, the verger unlocked a massy oaken door and behind that an iron grate. There was a minute's delay while we lit tall candles, and then the little procession marched on to the last resting place of the Chesbys.

"A very sad chapter in the glorious history of this ancient family, Mr. Nash," murmured the vicar with moist eyes. "But surely no man could hope for a grander Valhalla."

He gestured toward the encircling tombs.

"All of the line since Elizabethan times. That is, all the lords and their ladies. Cadets and collaterals are buried elsewhere in the church. The famous Lady Jane rests under the sarcophagus with the plain lid. I wish we might find the old crypt. It is somewhere under the priory grounds but she concealed it very effectually. The tradition is that the old lords were buried in their mail. They were all noted as warriors. Ah, Lord Chesby," as Hugh rose and walked over to us. "This has been very sad, very sad, indeed. And yet, as I was saying to Mr. Nash, it is something for a man after he dies to be brought back to wait the Last Trump in such glorious company."

"I am afraid I have been thinking of the criminals who murdered my uncle," said Hugh curtly. "You have been very kind, sir. I should like to thank you and everybody else for what they have done. Where's Nikka, Jack? Gone up? Do you mind if we leave you to shut the vault, Mr. Penfellow? Thank you again."

He hooked his arm in mine, and together we passed out of that sepulchral chamber, with its great company of illustrious dead. Upstairs in the church Nikka was awaiting us.

"I'm sorry, Hugh," he exclaimed, taking Hugh's other arm. "I couldn't wait. There's something in me that rebels against your churches. I feel the same way about mosques and synagogues, for that matter. And as for being buried down in a close, stone-lined hole in the ground, herded in with other dead!" He shivered violently. "I hope not! If there is a God—and there must be some kind of one to make the trees and hills and the grass and to put music in one's heart—why, I pray to Him that I shall lie on a hillside, with only the trees around me and the sun beating down."

"But Surely No Man Could Hope for a Grander Valhalla."

Hugh smiled.

"Each to his own, Nikka. You are a gypsy, a son of the open road. I am an Englishman, son to these stone walls, that old house we came from. So long as they and I last we shall be indivisible."

It was a scant ten minutes' walk through the park to Castle Chesby. As we entered the drive, Watkins, who had driven back with the servants, came around the house from the stables and started to run toward us.

"Somebody broke in whilst we were at church, your ludship," he panted when he was within earshot.

We were all startled.

"Anything missing?" questioned Hugh sharply.

"I can't say as yet, your ludship. They seem to 'ave been only in the unoccupied parts. I fancy, sir, they 'adn't the time to go through the west wing."

We hastened into the house after him. A rear door had been forced. Desks, wardrobes, chests of drawers, closets, armories, every corner or piece of furniture that might conceal anything had been thoroughly ransacked. Drawers and their contents were still piled helter-skelter on the floor.

"Do you suppose they could have found anything?" I asked.

Watkins shook his head positively.

"I am sure they could not, Mr. Nash, sir. I think I know most of the stuff that they have gone through. 'Is late ludship was not in the 'abit of keeping a thing he was precious of in the east wing or the main house, sir."

We left Watkins to supervise the servants in re-establishing order in the upset rooms, and returned to the west wing. In the gunroom, Hugh lit a cigarette and straddled his legs in front of the fire. Nikka and I dropped into the lounge that faced the hearth.

"Well?" said Hugh, and his lips had resumed the grim line I had noticed in church.

"Who are they?" I suggested.

"Good idea," appoved Hugh, and he rang the bell by the door.

Watkins arrived with the celerity of a djin.

"Watty, I wish you'd make inquiries along the roads, and find out if any strangers have been seen around the place this morning. Oh, yes, and tell the servants not to talk. You understand?"

"That was another good idea," said Nikka. "Our best bet is to keep our mouths shut. They, whoever, they are, have us guessing. Maybe we can make them guess a little. And that reminds me, do you realize that they have saved us quite a bit of searching? I'd suggest that we waste no time in going thoroughly over this wing, ourselves."

We set to work with gusto. On my suggestion—they nominated me captain in this enterprise because of my supposed architectural knowledge—we commenced with the gunroom. We examined it from end to end, tapped the paneling for secret recesses, examined the furniture. No result.

After luncheon, we began on the upper floor and went over the entire wing in detail. We measured the different rooms. I even took outer measurements. We studied chimneys. We sounded floors. Immersed in the hunt and baffled by lack of success, we caused Watkins to put off dinner, and worked on until after nine o'clock. Still no success.

We went to bed that night, tired out and disgusted. But in the morning we arose with sharpened interest and determined to canvass the possibilities in the parts of the house the invaders had searched. Again we took careful measurements, inside and out. Again we sounded paneling, investigated recesses and chimney spaces. We hunted for two days. Then we went back, and re-examined the west wing a second time. We ended up in stark disappointment in the gunroom.

Nikka, who had relapsed into one of his frequent spells of silent contemplation, jumped suddenly from his chair.

"If it is here, it is in this room," he said.

"Is that a gypsy prophecy?" jeered Hugh.

There was a racket of motors outside in the drive, and Watkins appeared in the doorway.

"Pardon, your ludship. But I thought you would wish to know Mr. Hilyer and 'is party 'ave just driven up."

"The devil they have!" exclaimed Hugh. "I suppose we'll have to see 'em."

But Watkins lingered in the doorway.

"What is it?"

Watkins cleared his throat.

"You may remember you instructed me to inquire if strangers 'ad been seen on the roads 'ereabouts the morning of the funeral, your ludship? 'Iggins, the carpenter said one of Mr. Hilyer's motors passed on the London road close on noon, but that was all."

"Well, that doesn't help any," said Hugh. "Whoever did it must have taken to the woods and cut across to the Channel road."

"They need only 'ave dropped over the park wall to reach the London road, your ludship," suggested Watkins.

"Oh, I see your point," agreed Hugh. "Then Hilyer's people might have seen them. I'll find an opportunity to speak to him about it."

"Thank you, your ludship."

And Watkins withdrew.

"Mr. and Mrs. Hilyer, your ludship!" he announced a short time afterward.

Hilyer was a lean, rangy chap, with a hatchet face and close-set eyes. He looked what he was: good blood gone wrong.

His wife was a handsome, statuesque woman, awfully well turned out. She was absolutely in the mode, as perfect as a show-girl in a Gayety production. And she had cold eyes that saw everything, and never lost their icy glitter even when her manner was warmest.

"Hullo, Hugh!" exclaimed Hilyer. "Frightfully glad to see you home again, but rotten sorry for the occasion. You don't know Mrs. Hilyer, I believe."

Hugh bowed to her with cold precision.

"Thanks, Hilyer—" just a shade of emphasis on the family name—"it was kind of you to come. We are keeping bachelors' hall, Mrs. Hilyer, and I am afraid our resources are limited."

"Don't let that bother you," protested Mrs. Hilyer affably, "and if you and your friends want any lively diversion on the quiet, remember we keep liberty hall over at Little Depping. We wanted our—"

But I lost the thread of her conversation as I found myself staring into those same evil green eyes that I had seen peering out of the shadows of the Hilyer pew the morning of the funeral. The man they belonged to had entered the room immediately after the Hilyers. He would have challenged attention in any company with his amazing personality, the strange force that radiated from him. He had the long arms, short, thick legs and enormous body of a gorilla, capped by a beautifully modeled head. But his eyes were his outstanding feature. They were large and vividly green like a cat's. The man was handsome in an intellectual way. Yet I found him repulsive.

Hilyer, undeterred by Hugh's frosty greeting, dropped his hand on this man's shoulder, and began introducing him.

"Signor Teodoreschi, gentlemen! The Italian chemist. And my other friends, Countess Sandra Vassilievna and Count Serge Vassilievich! I ought to explain they are brother and sister!"

This last with a well-bred leer.

"And Hilmi Bey, gentlemen! If you know your Levant, you would recognize him without introduction."

I saw Nikka shift his attention at this from the two Russians to the Levantine, an olive-skinned individual, good-looking in a portly way, with a predatory beaked nose, effeminate eyes and a sensual mouth.

"You see we're rather an international crowd—what?" Mrs. Hilyer was drawling.

"Very interesting, I'm sure," said Hugh, cold as ever. "You won't mind if I present my friends to you as a group? Thanks. This is Mr. Zaranko and Mr. Nash."

"Not Mr. Nikka Zaranko?" exclaimed Mrs. Hilyer. "Oh, I say, it's a treat to meet you! How wonderfully you play!"

And she wrenched Nikka away from his obvious intent to probe the Levantine, and carried him off to a corner, along with Vassilievich, a slim-waisted, old-young man, with a hard, dissipated face. Hilmi, after a look around, joined the gorilla-like Italian, who was turning the pages of a review on the table, with occasional flashing glances around the room. Montey Hilyer was volubly describing the prospects of the racing season to Hugh, and I was left by process of elimination to entertain the Countess Sandra Vassilievna.

She was a dark girl, with great, sleepy, almond-shaped eyes and a sinuous, willowy figure.

"You're an American, aren't you?" she said with a slight accent. "How do you happen to know Lord Chesby?"

I explained to her.

"He went to New York to earn his living! Ah, that is an old story, Mr. Nash. Look at my brother and me! Exiles! Forced to turn our hands to whatever we can do. The Old world is a sad place these days. What shall you and your friends do now? But I suppose you will help Lord Chesby enjoy the life of an English country gentleman."

"For a while, yes," I agreed.

"And then?"

"I don't know. America, I suppose. One must earn a living."

"So you would leave him—Lord Chesby, I mean?"

I began to have a disagreeable feeling that I was being pumped.

"I can't stay here forever, you know," I retorted.

"Ah, out of course! And Lord Chesby? Will he marry an heiress, an American, perhaps? But no! He does not need money, they say."

"'They say' a great many things," I commented.

"It may be he did ill to leave America," she suggested. "One is so safe there. In Europe who can say what the future holds? Ah, Mr. Nash, were I an American I should stay at home."

"That sounds like a threat," I laughed.

"God forbid!" she ejaculated with true Russian piety. "It is that I envy your security."

"Are you staying in England?" I asked.

"Only temporarily. We shall be in Paris shortly."

I happened to look up at that moment, and surprised the Italian in one of his lightning surveys of the room.

"Your friend there seems exclusive," I remarked.

"Oh, he?" she said hastily. "He speaks no English, and he is sensitive about it. He talks little in any case. These scientists, you know."

Hilmi Bey left the Italian's side, and sauntered over to us.

"A beautiful old room," he said. "Has it any history?"

"It's the oldest part of the present building," I told him. "I understand it represents a reconstruction during Elizabeth's reign."

Delicacy That Wasn't to Elephant's Liking

I remember years ago we had an elephant which became a positive nuisance for stealing people's bags and parcels, says William Blore, in a London paper.

This particular elephant was much worse than the average. There was no stopping him. If he saw a handbag or a paper parcel anywhere near his walk he had it!

One day there was an old gentleman standing by the side of the board walk with several children. Under his arm he carried a brown paper bag.

The elephant was nearly level with him when he noticed the bag, and before you could say "knife" there was a startled cry from the old gentleman—the elephant had the bag.

His keeper gave him a shout and a sharp tap on the head, but it was no use, the elephant was not letting go, and in a moment had the bag in his mouth!

Only for a second, in a moment there was a shrill trumpeting of indignation and horror, and out came a crushed-looking bag with something green protruding. The old gentleman had been carrying home a fine specimen of South American cactus with prickles about two inches long!

Straw Through Board

The energy with which a body strikes on object determines the piercing effect and damaging effect of the body. Energy is measured by the product of the mass of the body and the square of the velocity. Thus a very small body moving with a high velocity can possess just as much kinetic energy as a large body moving slowly. The straw driven by a cyclone is hurled through the air at an enormous velocity and expends its energy in going through the wood. This happens so quickly that the inertia of the straw keeps it from crumpling up before piercing.

Fast Ocean Traveler

The bureau of fisheries says that the bonito, a member of the mackerel family, probably is the fastest swimmer, but a definite answer is not possible.

CROSS GEESE

Mr. Gander was shrieking. His voice was loud and most unattractive.

He would have said he was laughing, but all the other barnyard creatures said to themselves:

"There is Mr. Gander yelling and shrieking. What a horrible voice he has!"

But Mr. Gander did not pay any attention to them. In fact, he probably didn't hear them.

"No one can be rude but myself," he began saying, "or at least no one should be rude but myself.

"We belong to a cross family. It's a good thing, too. It saves us all the trouble of being friendly.

"We'd hate to be friendly.

"We'd simply hate it. Yes, we would. We like to be cross.

"We like to be horrid to all the other barnyard animals. We want to be left alone, left to ourselves, for in truth we don't think any creatures are as nice as we are."

"Oh, I see," said Billy Goat, "you are the only ones who can be rude.

"That's a fine thing to say about yourselves. Are you so proud of being rude?

"I'm not proud of getting excited over a red flag or a red sweater as I did just now.

"It gets me quite worn out and exhausted and I don't like it in the least.

"It is something I can't help."

"I don't suppose we can help being rude," said Mrs. Goose, "but at the same time we don't try to avoid crossness.

"We don't think much of our neighbors. Why should we? Just think who they are!

"Now in the first place, there is you."

"Yes, and pray tell me what is the matter with my royal self? I am Sir William Goat, I am."

"Usually called Billy," said Mrs. Goose, "but the fact remains you're a goat.

"Now there is nothing fine or noble or brave or good or beautiful about being a goat.

"A goat is something silly. Yes, stupid people are called goats."

"That's right," agreed Mr. Gander. Poor Billy Goat felt very badly.

"I'm only stupid about the red rags and flags and sweaters," he said.

"Enough," shrieked Mr. Gander, "You're a goat, a silly, Billy Goat. A poor neighbor indeed."

"A very poor neighbor," agreed Mrs. Goose. "But then none of my neighbors interest me.

"They're all stupid."

"I feel the same way about it as you do," said Mr. Gander. "I think we have such a poor lot of neighbors, such a stupid, annoying lot, that I don't bother about them at all."

"Except once in a while," said Billy Goat, "when you both come around and quarrel."

"Ah, anyone will do once in awhile for a quarrel," said Mrs. Goose.

"We love to have a quarrel—especially with our neighbors," Mrs. Goose said.

"We most certainly do," agreed Mr. Gander.

"When people say we are cross and that we don't get along with any other creatures but ourselves—they are right.

"We don't believe in getting along with other creatures. We think of ourselves and not of others.

"The most sensible way to think,"

"The most selfish," said Billy Goat.

"You're really worse than the pigs when it comes to selfishness," he added.

But the Geese didn't particularly mind that. They were cross anyway.

Molly Was Right Size

"Curly Molly" was the "middle-sized" child. One day a visitor at her home found her crying, and remarked: "Well, Molly, you always seem to be the one who gets punished. Why is it?"

The little five-year-old replied, between sobs: "Well, you see, Betty's too big to be spanked and Danny's too little, and I guess I'm just about the right size."

Talk Unnecessary

Auntie—Won't it be nice when baby Brother talks?

Joyce (rather jealous)—What does he want to talk for? He gets everything he wants by just yelling.

Why pay more than Buick's price for less than Buick performance?

Motorists who can afford to pay almost any price for an automobile are buying more than twice as many Buicks as any other fine car.

Men who can afford to pay almost any price they desire for a motor car are testing Buick and discovering an order of performance never before known . . . with the result that they are buying more than twice as many Buicks as any other fine car.

With Buick superiority so obvious and outstanding as to result in two-to-one preference, you, too, should investigate thoroughly before you buy any car. You, too, should seek the guarantee of lasting satisfaction which searching test on the road alone can provide!

Come to our showroom! Arrange to drive a Buick! Prove its absolute mastery over street, highway and hill. Compare every element of performance with other automobiles. Then you'll know that you, too, should have a BUICK!

an unhealthy yellow. Everything I ate gave me trouble, instead of strength. Constipation kept my system from throwing off poisons. I was almost hopeless.

"Sargon did more for me in less than a month than all the medicines I used in five years. My friends say they have never seen such a remarkable change in anyone in such a short time. Every trace of indigestion is gone. My food gives me the proper nourishment and I have gained five pounds. I feel good all the time.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills overcome constipation in a natural way. They not only have rid me of constipation but have driven the malarial poisons out of my body.

The Last of the Cavaliers

CUSTER MONUMENT AT MONROE, MICH.

CUSTER THE CADET

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

JUNE 25 is the anniversary of a battle which will be forever famous in American history. It was not a battle upon which great issues, so far as the fate of the nation, hung. In point of the number of combatants engaged it was almost insignificant. It was not a battle to which the student of military science will turn for lessons in tactics. It was an affair of a handful of United States cavalrymen pitted against an overwhelming force of Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, and if it has any particular importance in American history, it is only because it marked the last outstanding success scored by the red man against the white.

For this was the engagement officially known as the battle of the Little Big Horn River, Mont., June 25, 1876, but familiar to most of us under the name of "Custer's Last Fight." Thereby is revealed the reason why this battle seems destined to be remembered when greater and more important military conflicts are long since forgotten. The reason centers around the flaming personality of Gen. George Armstrong Custer.

"A brigadier general at twenty-three, a major general at twenty-five, a great Indian fighter at twenty-seven, he went to his death at thirty-seven, the immortal hero of American youth, and the mystery and gallantry of his death will keep his name shining when all but a scant dozen of the great figures of American military history will be forgotten forever." So writes his latest biographer, Frazier Hunt, in the book "Custer," published by the Cosmopolitan Book corporation, and Hunt happily and aptly characterized this soldier as no other biographer has yet done when he uses as a sub-title for his book the phrase "The Last of the Cavaliers."

For George Armstrong Custer was truly the last of the Cavaliers. He was born in 1839 and died in 1876. There are men still living who saw him often and knew him well. But he does not belong in this period of recent American history. Among the bewhiskered, black-hatted blue-uniformed generals of the Union army, this boy general with his coat of black velvet, his wire-brimmed hat, his navy blue shirt with a broad collar adorned with gold stars and held together at the throat with a wide flowing scarlet necktie, his trousers stuck in great cavalry boots, and with his golden curls reaching to his shoulders, is sadly out of place. More appropriately should he have led a charge against Cromwell's Roundheads and after routing them received the thanks of that gay monarch, King Charles the Second, or he should have been a follower of the fortunes of Bonnie Prince Charlie and ended his short career amid the flashing claymores at Culloden moor.

"A fighter of fighters and a soldier of soldiers, he was the beau sabreur of the American army," one historian has called him. He was born of soldier ancestry; he grew up surrounded by soldier traditions; he became a soldier by choice and he died as a soldier would choose to die. The Custers were a fighting stock. His great-grandfather had been a Hessian mercenary in the Revolutionary war. "He was a curly-haired blond giant who was fighting for the fun of it," writes Hunt. When the war was over and he, with his fellow Hessians, was paroled, he decided to settle down and grow up with the country. The family name of Kuster was changed about the time this good-natured Saxon fighter moved from Pennsylvania to Maryland. His grandson, the blacksmith and farmer, Emmanuel Custer, felt the call of the frontier and migrated to Ohio, and here it was that the sturdy tow-headed boy was born in 1839.

"War was in the air again. The fall of the Alamo down in San Antonio and the great stretch of country north of the Rio Grande owned by Mexico had burned its way into the hearts of the country. A bitter hatred was flaring up against Mexico. Peaceful America was getting ready to have her regular one-war-per-generation conflict. Even the backwoods settlements in Ohio were thrilled by the righteousness of one-sided patriotism. Silver-tongued orators were making the little red brick schoolhouses and the white-framed churches fairly ring with "Remember the Alamo!"

"Emmanuel Custer joined the local militia, the 'New Rumley Invincibles'—and so our future general, 'little Autie'—which was the home manufactured nickname for Armstrong—teased and teased, until his mother made him a uniform out of one of paw's suits and paw whittled out a gun for him. By the time the Mexican war came along in earnest, Autie was seven and could go through the old Scott manual of arms along with the best of them.

"So it was that even in a backwater of pioneer life this farmer boy grew up in a warm reflection of the thrilling atmosphere of war. He dreamed of being a drummer boy and marching with heroic old General Scott or General Taylor in the Mexican campaign. Farming was not for him—the sabre and the musket were to be his tools."

But his opportunity did not come for several years. A visit with relatives in Monroe, Mich., resulted in two years of schooling at an academy there, two years at a seminary, followed by a school teaching job back home in Ohio. Then came a chance to go to the United States Military academy at West Point and when he was enrolled there in the spring of 1857 he was at last started toward realizing his life's ambition.

Custer's career at the academy was not an impressive one. From the beginning he was among the "Immortals," the ten lowest in scholarship (today they call them goats"). The first year he stood 58 in a class of 68. His second year he ranked 58 in a class of 60. In his third year he was No. 57 in a class of 57 and he was graduated No. 35 in a class of 35. But if Custer did not distinguish himself in his academic work and was constantly acquiring demerits which more than once brought him to the brink of dismissal from the academy, he was absorbing something of greater value than mere classroom knowledge, for, writes Hunt:

It would be almost impossible to overestimate what the four years at West Point had done for this blond-haired, smiling, six-foot farmer boy from eastern Ohio. Its fine traditions had sunk deep into his heart and mind. Without his being in the least aware of it, the magnificent spirit of the place—reflected in the three words of its motto—Duty—Honor—Country—had given for him a tone, a resonance to the ancient business of arms. It was as if some one had taken him by the hand to a hilltop and shown him the glory of mounted knights in armor, going forth to war, for honor, for renown, and for the battle's sake. In the very air of West Point he breathed the very greatness of the sword. . . .

It would not have been surprising if Custer had chosen to follow the fortunes of the Confederacy, and to have added the color of his personality to the roll of its cavalier leaders such as Jeb Stuart and John Morgan. Instead he chose to stick with the Union and although he failed to graduate with his class because at almost the last moment he had committed a grave breach of rules which led to his court-martial and his retention at the academy, finally he was ordered to Washington for duty in the summer of 1861.

As a lieutenant in the Second cavalry he saw action almost immediately at the battle of Bull Run. And the next year as an officer in the Fifth cavalry, to which he had been transferred, he so distinguished himself on several occasions as to win a position on the staff of General McClellan. Custer's career in the Civil war has been described as "meteoric" and a casual survey of it will show how apt the word is. McClellan at once promoted him to a captaincy. When McClellan failed as commander of the Army of the Potomac and was removed, Custer suffered his only eclipse of the war. But within a year he was on General Pleasonton's staff, distinguished himself in a charge during a cavalry fight with Jeb Stuart and his gray horsemen, which resulted in the capture of a battle flag and a hundred prisoners. The next day he was recommended for promotion to the rank of brigadier general—a brigadier general at twenty-three, the youngest in the Union army!

He was placed in command of the Michigan cavalry brigade of four regiments, much to the disgust of volunteer colonels old enough to be his father—veterans who raved and stormed at having placed over them that "Custer brat from Monroe, that kid general," that "d—d whippersnapper from West Point." But on the third day on that terrible field at Gettysburg, this boy general not only welded his brigade of Woverines to him with bonds of steel but in a furious cavalry battle defeated Jeb Stuart and his Confederates, who had hitherto been considered invincible. He became the idol of his men. They bought bolts of red cloth and made flowing ties for themselves. They let their hair grow long in imitation of his. "A wild boy named Custer" became famous throughout the Union army. A year later with more brilliant victories to his credit, Sheridan made him a major general and gave him command of the Third cavalry division. George Armstrong Custer, age twenty-five, was a major general with twelve rigiments under his command, twelve regiments which idolized him as had the three regiments of Wolverines.

The story of Custer, the Indian fighter, is too well known to need repetition here. It is the story of one success after another as leader of the Seventh cavalry, which still and for all time seems destined to be known as "Custer's regiment," until that June day in 1876 when, in sight of the great Indian village strung along the Little Big Horn, he made the fatal division of his forces and, trusting to the "Custer luck," which had carried him safely through a decade of warfare, he rode into battle for the last time. A fitting epitaph to this last of the Cavaliers may be found in these words of Hunt:

To the millions of plain Americans he is remembered not as a commander of a dashing and victorious division of cavalry that captured 10,000 prisoners and 65 battle flags from a gallant and stubborn foe, but as an Indian fighter, who with a handful of troopers eleven years later galloped to a tragic death.

He had fought Lee and Stonewall Jackson, Jeb Stuart, and "the gallant Pelham"—great and remembered soldiers—but it was the naked Sioux warriors of the plains who sent him to deathless fame. The gods of battle have their own inscrutable way of making heroes.

Great Need of Today Is Return to the Idea of "Human Partnership"

By DR. RALPH SOCKMAN (Episcopal), New York.

THERE is too much patronage in American life today, and too little partnership. As our citizenry has been increasingly transferred from the soil to the city, we have changed the tempo of our thinking from the slower processes of the seasons to the quick exchanges and ticker tapes of the market place. The race of competitive life is so swift that we do not try to keep pace with one another.

The home illustrates the fact that parents do too much for their children and too little with them. The present generation of youth is more heavily patronized than ever were its predecessors. Somewhere between a bolshevism of adolescents and a paternalism of parents there ought to be a partnership in which the experiences of the elders are blended with experiments of the youngers.

In philanthropy the old friendly personal helpfulness of our simpler earlier communities is being replaced by organized impersonal charity. In religion we have now largely a mere professional propaganda financed by silent spectators. We hire ministers to preach our sermons, evangelists to recruit our church members and musicians to voice our religious motives, while the laity simply sit back and provide the funds. Such patronage can never be an adequate substitute for the partnership methods of the early church.

Between Sincere Religionists and True Scientists There Is No Conflict

By GEORGE R. THROOP, Washington University.

There is a great deal of talk and discussion at the present time on the conflict of education as represented primarily by pure science, and religion as understood in the minds of many, but this is a most unfortunate and unnecessary condition.

To most of the true scientists and sincere religionists of the present day there is no real conflict. All the facts of nature and life and the universe are too unfathomable for us to attribute them to any merely blindly operating force. How this entire world of ours and all the universe could function without some power and guide greater than human comprehension and understanding is beyond the real scientists to fathom.

What we need most is charity and tolerance on all sides. Religious education is to address itself not only to the correction of our present ills, but it renders special service as a great prophylactic agent in human society. We have been working on the theory that somewhere back in the early history of the races, the train of civilization ran off the track, and that the business of religion has been to send out a wrecking crew, to extricate bruised humanity from the wreckage. The church has served as a kind of spiritual hospital for wounded men.

But the big job of the church through religious education is to teach men how to run the train so that there will be no wreck. Religion is not only a cure, but it is also a preventive.

Training of Younger Generation of Immigrants Important for Civilization

By DR. ROMAN DYBOSKI, Chicago Social Worker.

Training children of European immigrants in the culture of their parents' countries seems to me to be the best method of preventing a rift between America and Europe.

There is no use denying that a rift has opened up between America and Europe since the war. We are in danger of losing the unity of Western civilization and if the world breaks into two units a third party may arise, probably Asia headed by Russia.

The civilization of America and Europe is what we believe to be the best in the world, and the link between America and Europe seems to be the second generation immigrants. There must be people on both sides of the Atlantic who understand each other if there is to be unity of peace and unity of culture. It is the younger generation of immigrants who have the best strain of European culture. This helps them to understand Europe.

They should be encouraged to study the culture of America and some of them go back to their own countries to educate their people and help secure this unity.

Inventions and Discoveries Have Not Minimized Reality and Presence of God

By REV. W. HAROLD WEIGLE, Jr., New York.

In spite of what the pessimists of today maintain, it is possible to live a usual life in an unusual way. It is astonishing how hungry the human heart is today for things spiritual, and this applies to the person living in the slums and back streets as well as to those living on Park avenue.

While there are many disturbing factors in our national life yet this is not an irreligious age. The prolific birth of new cults is an evidence that people are very conscious of their need for God.

The great inventions and discoveries in this generation do not in the least minimize the reality and presence of God. We must study down to the spiritual depths in which God alone can be found. And this is not a closed secret. God can be found by any heart which diligently seeks Him. But we must seek and accept.

The church today is endangered by the loss of initial enthusiasm for a great cause and the loss of the keenness of discipleship among people who once enjoyed an ardent and profound religious life.

Men of Wealth Realizing That Riches Constitute Public Responsibility

By DR. ISRAEL GOLDSTEIN, New York.

Wealth is one of the severest tests of character. Mental cares in connection with the possession of wealth frequently cause physical ill-health and nervous breakdown, while the abundance of physical comfort and luxury tends to produce an even more serious malady, "spiritual anemia."

The rich man who is wise, acts upon the principle that wealth is a public responsibility, and that therefore they who have it are obliged to use it in such a manner as to set an example in the art of living. America may point with pride and satisfaction to its two richest men, Mr. Ford and Mr. Rockefeller, as examples of sane and useful living. Even with greater pride may we point to the sons of these men, whose careers present a gratifying contrast with the proverbial "sons of the rich."

Rare Finny Specimens

The Danish scientific ship Dana has found two unusual specimens of deep sea fish in Australian waters. One is the female deep sea angler. Her mouth is of extraordinary size and she carries the male angler, a tiny fish in comparison to her own bulk, attached to her body. The other is a lantern fish, a habitat of deeps where it is believed no daylight penetrates. The fish has its own phosphorescent lights, strung along its sides like a row of portholes on a steamer.

U. S. Breakfast Bill

Young America, which dallies with its breakfast and eats its cereal under protest, faced a tremendous total of breakfast foods as a result of the manufacturing of 1927. The total in pounds for wheat was not found, but for other grains was well over the billion mark, the Department of Commerce census indicates, and the value was $159,644,083.

New Use for Airplane

Dealers in fruit, garden produce and flowers in Holland have solved the problem of transporting their perishable stocks, by the use of airplanes. Two new freight lines will be put into operation soon between Amsterdam and London. Airplanes have made it possible for London residents to enjoy at dinner strawberries picked that morning in Holland.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Smashed Precedent

An American girl relates that when she sat for an examination at Oxford university, the following directions as to costume were handed out: "If the candidate is a woman, she shall wear a dark suit, white jumper and black tie, black shoes and stockings. No detail may be changed or disregarded. N. B.—If anyone should disregard these regulations, proctors are authorized to ask them to withdraw from examinations." This was failure.

She defied them, however, and wore a green necktie, but waited with trepidation the arrival of the Don! Presently he approached her desk from the rear and laid the papers on her table. Catching sight of the green tie, he scowled, hesitated a moment, then the frown gradually melting into a smile, he said:

"So you are still rebels!"—Exchange.

W. May, and the unknown heirs of A. W. May, and the unknown heirs of the unknown heirs of A. W. May by making publication of this citation once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the Sixty-Third Judicial District; but if there be no newspaper published in said judicial district, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said 63rd Judicial District, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terrell County, to be holden at the Courthouse thereof, in Sanderson, on the second Monday in July, A. D. 1929, the same being the 8th day of July, A. D. 1929, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 5th day of June, A. D. 1929, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court as No. 1746, wherein H. C. Goldwire and Lee McCue are plaintiffs, and Nicholas Bay Kuther, and the unknown heirs of Nicholas Bay Kuther, and the unknown heirs of the unknown heirs of Nicholas Bay Kuther; Nicholas Bayrenther, and the unknown heirs of Nicholas Bayrenther, and the unknown heirs of the unknown heirs of Nicholas Bayrenther; and A. W. May, and the unknown heirs of A. W. May, and the unknown heirs of the unknown heirs of A. W. May, are defendants, and said petition alleging that on or about the 1st day of June, A. D. 1929, they were lawfully seized and possessed of the following described lands and premises situated in Terrell County, Texas, holding and claiming the same in fee simple, to-wit:

Being Survey No. 1, Block No. 151, containing 640 acres of land, and being described by metes and bounds as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a stake and mound at the Northeast corner of Survey No. 2, Block No. 152, E. L. & R. R. Ry. Co., for the Northwest corner of this survey; thence South 1900 varas to a rock mound at the Southeast corner of said No. 2, for the Southwest corner of this survey; thence East 1900 varas to a stone and mound for the Southeast corner of this survey; thence North 1900 varas to a stake and mound for the Northeast corner of this survey; thence West 1900 varas to the beginning.

That on the day and year last aforesaid, said defendants unlawfully entered upon said premises and ejected the plaintiffs therefrom, and unlawfully withheld from them the possession thereof, to their damage in the sum of Six Thousand Five Hundred ($6,500.00) Dollars.

That the reasonable annual rental value of said premises is Three Hundred and Twenty and no/100 ($320.00) Dollars.

Plaintiffs further allege that they and those whose estate they have, claiming the same under deeds duly registered, have had peaceable, continuous and adverse possession of the lands and tenements claimed in said plaintiff's petition, using and enjoying the same, and paying all taxes thereon for a period of more than five years prior to the commencement of this suit, and this they are ready to verify.

Plaintiffs further allege that they and those whose estate they have, claiming the same under deeds duly registered, have had and now have peaceable, continuous and adverse possession of the land mentioned in plaintiff's petition, using and enjoying the same for the period of ten years before the commencement of this suit, and this they are ready to verify.

Wherefore, plaintiffs pray judgment of the Court, that the defendants, each and everyone of the above named defendants, be cited to appear in person to answer the same, and that upon a hearing herein the plaintiffs have judgment for the title and possession of the above described lands and premises, and that writ of restitution issue, and for the rents, damages and costs of court, and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and in equity, that they may be justly entitled to receive.

Herein fail not, and have before said Court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this the 5th day of June, A. D. 1929.

The Last of the Cavaliers

CUSTER MONUMENT AT MONROE, MICH.

CUSTER THE CADET

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

JUNE 25 is the anniversary of a battle which will be forever famous in American history. It was not a battle upon which great issues, so far as the fate of the nation, hung. In point of the number of combatants engaged it was almost insignificant. It was not a battle to which the student of military science will turn for lessons in tactics. It was an affair of a handful of United States cavalrymen pitted against an overwhelming force of Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, and if it has any particular importance in American history, it is only because it marked the last outstanding success scored by the red man against the white.

For this was the engagement officially known as the battle of the Little Big Horn River, Mont., June 25, 1876, but familiar to most of us under the name of "Custer's Last Fight." Thereby is revealed the reason why this battle seems destined to be remembered when greater and more important military conflicts are long since forgotten. The reason centers around the flaming personality of Gen. George Armstrong Custer.

"A brigadier general at twenty-three, a major general at twenty-five, a great Indian fighter at twenty-seven, he went to his death at thirty-seven, the immortal hero of American youth, and the mystery and gallantry of his death will keep his name shining when all but a scant dozen of the great figures of American military history will be forgotten forever." So writes his latest biographer, Frazier Hunt, in the book "Custer," published by the Cosmopolitan Book corporation, and Hunt happily and aptly characterized this soldier as no other biographer has yet done when he uses as a sub-title for his book the phrase "The Last of the Cavaliers."

For George Armstrong Custer was truly the last of the Cavaliers. He was born in 1839 and died in 1876. There are men still living who saw him often and knew him well. But he does not belong in this period of recent American history. Among the bewhiskered, black-hatted blue-uniformed generals of the Union army, this boy general with his coat of black velvet, his wire-brimmed hat, his navy blue shirt with a broad collar adorned with gold stars and held together at the throat with a wide flowing scarlet necktie, his trousers stuck in great cavalry boots, and with his golden curls reaching to his shoulders, is sadly out of place. More appropriately should he have led a charge against Cromwell's Roundheads and after routing them received the thanks of that gay monarch, King Charles the Second, or he should have been a follower of the fortunes of Bonnie Prince Charlie and ended his short career amid the flashing claymores at Culloden moor.

"A fighter of fighters and a soldier of soldiers, he was the beau sabreur of the American army," one historian has called him. He was born of soldier ancestry; he grew up surrounded by soldier traditions; he became a soldier by choice and he died as a soldier would choose to die. The Custers were a fighting stock. His great-grandfather had been a Hessian mercenary in the Revolutionary war. "He was a curly-haired blond giant who was fighting for the fun of it," writes Hunt. When the war was over and he, with his fellow Hessians, was paroled, he decided to settle down and grow up with the country. The family name of Kuster was changed about the time this good-natured Saxon fighter moved from Pennsylvania to Maryland. His grandson, the blacksmith and farmer, Emmanuel Custer, felt the call of the frontier and migrated to Ohio, and here it was that the sturdy tow-headed boy was born in 1839.

"War was in the air again. The fall of the Alamo down in San Antonio and the great stretch of country north of the Rio Grande owned by Mexico had burned its way into the hearts of the country. A bitter hatred was flaring up against Mexico. Peaceful America was getting ready to have her regular one-war-per-generation conflict. Even the backwoods settlements in Ohio were thrilled by the righteousness of one-sided patriotism. Silver-tongued orators were making the little red brick schoolhouses and the white-framed churches fairly ring with "Remember the Alamo!"

"Emmanuel Custer joined the local militia, the 'New Rumley Invincibles'—and so our future general, 'little Autie'—which was the home manufactured nickname for Armstrong—teased and teased, until his mother made him a uniform out of one of paw's suits and paw whittled out a gun for him. By the time the Mexican war came along in earnest, Autie was seven and could go through the old Scott manual of arms along with the best of them.

"So it was that even in a backwater of pioneer life this farmer boy grew up in a warm reflection of the thrilling atmosphere of war. He dreamed of being a drummer boy and marching with heroic old General Scott or General Taylor in the Mexican campaign. Farming was not for him—the sabre and the musket were to be his tools."

But his opportunity did not come for several years. A visit with relatives in Monroe, Mich., resulted in two years of schooling at an academy there, two years at a seminary, followed by a school teaching job back home in Ohio. Then came a chance to go to the United States Military academy at West Point and when he was enrolled there in the spring of 1857 he was at last started toward realizing his life's ambition.

Custer's career at the academy was not an impressive one. From the beginning he was among the "Immortals," the ten lowest in scholarship (today they call them goats"). The first year he stood 58 in a class of 68. His second year he ranked 58 in a class of 60. In his third year he was No. 57 in a class of 57 and he was graduated No. 35 in a class of 35. But if Custer did not distinguish himself in his academic work and was constantly acquiring demerits which more than once brought him to the brink of dismissal from the academy, he was absorbing something of greater value than mere classroom knowledge, for, writes Hunt:

It would be almost impossible to overestimate what the four years at West Point had done for this blond-haired, smiling, six-foot farmer boy from eastern Ohio. Its fine traditions had sunk deep into his heart and mind. Without his being in the least aware of it, the magnificent spirit of the place—reflected in the three words of its motto—Duty—Honor—Country—had given for him a tone, a resonance to the ancient business of arms. It was as if some one had taken him by the hand to a hilltop and shown him the glory of mounted knights in armor, going forth to war, for honor, for renown, and for the battle's sake. In the very air of West Point he breathed the very greatness of the sword.

It would not have been surprising if Custer had chosen to follow the fortunes of the Confederacy, and to have added the color of his personality to the roll of its cavalier leaders such as Jeb Stuart and John Morgan. Instead he chose to stick with the Union and although he failed to graduate with his class because at almost the last moment he had committed a grave breach of rules which led to his court-martial and his retention at the academy, finally he was ordered to Washington for duty in the summer of 1861.

As a lieutenant in the Second cavalry he saw action almost immediately at the battle of Bull Run. And the next year as an officer in the Fifth cavalry, to which he had been transferred, he so distinguished himself on several occasions as to win a position on the staff of General McClellan. Custer's career in the Civil war has been described as "meteoric" and a casual survey of it will show how apt the word is. McClellan at once promoted him to a captaincy. When McClellan failed as commander of the Army of the Potomac and was removed, Custer suffered his only eclipse of the war. But within a year he was on General Pleasonton's staff, distinguished himself in a charge during a cavalry fight with Jeb Stuart and his gray horsemen, which resulted in the capture of a battle flag and a hundred prisoners. The next day he was recommended for promotion to the rank of brigadier general—a brigadier general at twenty-three, the youngest in the Union army!

He was placed in command of the Michigan cavalry brigade of four regiments, much to the disgust of volunteer colonels old enough to be his father—veterans who raved and stormed at having placed over them that "Custer brat from Monroe, that kid general," that "d—d whippersnapper from West Point." But on the third day on that terrible field at Gettysburg, this boy general not only welded his brigade of Woverines to him with bonds of steel but in a furious cavalry battle defeated Jeb Stuart and his Confederates, who had hitherto been considered invincible. He became the idol of his men. They bought bolts of red cloth and made flowing ties for themselves. They let their hair grow long in imitation of his. "A wild boy named Custer" became famous throughout the Union army. A year later with more brilliant victories to his credit, Sheridan made him a major general and gave him command of the Third cavalry division. George Armstrong Custer, age twenty-five, was a major general with twelve rigiments under his command, twelve regiments which idolized him as had the three regiments of Wolverines.

The story of Custer, the Indian fighter, is too well known to need repetition here. It is the story of one success after another as leader of the Seventh cavalry, which still and for all time seems destined to be known as "Custer's regiment," until that June day in 1876 when, in sight of the great Indian village strung along the Little Big Horn, he made the fatal division of his forces and, trusting to the "Custer luck," which had carried him safely through a decade of warfare, he rode into battle for the last time. A fitting epitaph to this last of the Cavaliers may be found in these words of Hunt:

To the millions of plain Americans he is remembered not as a commander of a dashing and victorious division of cavalry that captured 10,000 prisoners and 65 battle flags from a gallant and stubborn foe, but as an Indian fighter, who with a handful of troopers eleven years later galloped to a tragic death.

He had fought Lee and Stonewall Jackson, Jeb Stuart, and "the gallant Pelham"—great and remembered soldiers—but it was the naked Sioux warriors of the plains who sent him to deathless fame. The gods of battle have their own inscrutable way of making heroes.

Great Need of Today Is Return to the Idea of "Human Partnership"

By DR. RALPH SOCKMAN (Episcopal), New York.

THERE is too much patronage in American life today, and too little partnership. As our citizenry has been increasingly transferred from the soil to the city, we have changed the tempo of our thinking from the slower processes of the seasons to the quick exchanges and ticker tapes of the market place. The race of competitive life is so swift that we do not try to keep pace with one another.

The home illustrates the fact that parents do too much for their children and too little with them. The present generation of youth is more heavily patronized than ever were its predecessors. Somewhere between a bolshevism of adolescents and a paternalism of parents there ought to be a partnership in which the experiences of the elders are blended with experiments of the youngers.

In philanthropy the old friendly personal helpfulness of our simpler earlier communities is being replaced by organized impersonal charity. In religion we have now largely a mere professional propaganda financed by silent spectators. We hire ministers to preach our sermons, evangelists to recruit our church members and musicians to voice our religious motives, while the laity simply sit back and provide the funds. Such patronage can never be an adequate substitute for the partnership methods of the early church.

Between Sincere Religionists and True Scientists There Is No Conflict

By GEORGE R. THROOP, Washington University.

There is a great deal of talk and discussion at the present time on the conflict of education as represented primarily by pure science, and religion as understood in the minds of many, but this is a most unfortunate and unnecessary condition.

To most of the true scientists and sincere religionists of the present day there is no real conflict. All the facts of nature and life and the universe are too unfathomable for us to attribute them to any merely blindly operating force. How this entire world of ours and all the universe could function without some power and guide greater than human comprehension and understanding is beyond the real scientists to fathom.

What we need most is charity and tolerance on all sides. Religious education is to address itself not only to the correction of our present ills, but it renders special service as a great prophylactic agent in human society. We have been working on the theory that somewhere back in the early history of the races, the train of civilization ran off the track, and that the business of religion has been to send out a wrecking crew, to extricate bruised humanity from the wreckage. The church has served as a kind of spiritual hospital for wounded men.

But the big job of the church through religious education is to teach men how to run the train so that there will be no wreck. Religion is not only a cure, but it is also a preventive.

Training of Younger Generation of Immigrants Important for Civilization

By DR. ROMAN DYBOSKI, Chicago Social Worker.

Training children of European immigrants in the culture of their parents' countries seems to me to be the best method of preventing a rift between America and Europe.

There is no use denying that a rift has opened up between America and Europe since the war. We are in danger of losing the unity of Western civilization and if the world breaks into two units a third party may arise, probably Asia headed by Russia.

The civilization of America and Europe is what we believe to be the best in the world, and the link between America and Europe seems to be the second generation immigrants. There must be people on both sides of the Atlantic who understand each other if there is to be unity of peace and unity of culture. It is the younger generation of immigrants who have the best strain of European culture. This helps them to understand Europe.

They should be encouraged to study the culture of America and some of them go back to their own countries to educate their people and help secure this unity.

Inventions and Discoveries Have Not Minimized Reality and Presence of God

By REV. W. HAROLD WEIGLE, Jr., New York.

In spite of what the pessimists of today maintain, it is possible to live a usual life in an unusual way. It is astonishing how hungry the human heart is today for things spiritual, and this applies to the person living in the slums and back streets as well as to those living on Park avenue.

While there are many disturbing factors in our national life yet this is not an irreligious age. The prolific birth of new cults is an evidence that people are very conscious of their need for God.

The great inventions and discoveries in this generation do not in the least minimize the reality and presence of God. We must study down to the spiritual depths in which God alone can be found. And this is not a closed secret. God can be found by any heart which diligently seeks Him. But we must seek and accept.

The church today is endangered by the loss of initial enthusiasm for a great cause and the loss of the keenness of discipleship among people who once enjoyed an ardent and profound religious life.

Men of Wealth Realizing That Riches Constitute Public Responsibility

By DR. ISRAEL GOLDSTEIN, New York.

Wealth is one of the severest tests of character. Mental cares in connection with the possession of wealth frequently cause physical ill-health and nervous breakdown, while the abundance of physical comfort and luxury tends to produce an even more serious malady, "spiritual anemia."

The rich man who is wise, acts upon the principle that wealth is a public responsibility, and that therefore they who have it are obliged to use it in such a manner as to set an example in the art of living. America may point with pride and satisfaction to its two richest men, Mr. Ford and Mr. Rockefeller, as examples of sane and useful living. Even with greater pride may we point to the sons of these men, whose careers present a gratifying contrast with the proverbial "sons of the rich."

Rare Finny Specimens

The Danish scientific ship Dana has found two unusual specimens of deep sea fish in Australian waters. One is the female deep sea angler. Her mouth is of extraordinary size and she carries the male angler, a tiny fish in comparison to her own bulk, attached to her body. The other is a lantern fish, a habitat of deeps where it is believed no daylight penetrates. The fish has its own phosphorescent lights, strung along its sides like a row of portholes on a steamer.

MOTHER!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even a bilious, constipated, feverish child loves the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

U. S. Breakfast Bill

Young America, which dallies with its breakfast and eats its cereal under protest, faced a tremendous total of breakfast foods as a result of the manufacturing of 1927. The total in pounds for wheat was not found, but for other grains was well over the billion mark, the Department of Commerce census indicates, and the value was $159,644,083.

New Use for Airplane

Dealers in fruit, garden produce and flowers in Holland have solved the problem of transporting their perishable stocks, by the use of airplanes. Two new freight lines will be put into operation soon between Amsterdam and London. Airplanes have made it possible for London residents to enjoy at dinner strawberries picked that morning in Holland.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Smashed Precedent

An American girl relates that when she sat for an examination at Oxford university, the following directions as to costume were handed out: "If the candidate is a woman, she shall wear a dark suit, white jumper and black tie, black shoes and stockings. No detail may be changed or disregarded. N. B.—If anyone should disregard these regulations, proctors are authorized to ask them to withdraw from examinations." This was failure.

She defied them, however, and wore a green necktie, but waited with trepidation the arrival of the Don! Presently he approached her desk from the rear and laid the papers on her table. Catching sight of the green tie, he scowled, hesitated a moment, then the frown gradually melting into a smile, he said:

"So you are still rebels!"—Exchange.

Gossip is the tool of cowards.

Facial Judgments

If you would measure the quality of a man, look first into his eyes But if you would gauge the character of a woman, study her lips first and then try to find out whether her eyes confirm their message. The mouth, lips and chin form the emotional area of the face.—Exchange.
