Gas, Food, Machinery Prices Fuel Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rising costs of gasoline, food and machinery pushed wholesale prices up 0.8 percent in December as inflation kept up its momentum, the Labor Department said today.

For all of 1978, wholesale prices rose 9.1 percent, the biggest such increase since an 18.3 percent jump in 1974, the department said. In 1977, prices went up 6.6 percent.

The wholesale price figures are important, because they are an early sign of what consumers can expect in the way of price changes in the next few months.

The 0.8 percent increase for December was the same as in November and about average for the past four months. If averaged out over an entire year it would amount to 10 percent - slightly above the 9 percent to 9.5 percent rise in the consumer Price Index projected for 1978.

Beef and veal prices turned up in December after declining in November, but pork prices slipped.

Prices were higher for process poultry, fruit and vegetables, dairy products and candy. Prices of eggs dropped 4 percent.

The price of gasoline, sold at the refinery, rose 4 percent in December, and kerosene rose in price by 2.8 percent.

The report measured finished goods, or the price of products just before they are sold to consumers. The Producer Price Index for Finished Goods stood at 202.4, meaning that wholesale products that cost $100 in the base period of 1967 cost $202.40 last month.

The report was released as urban officials and the Senate leader of President Carter's party were giving the administration little encouragement on its anti-inflation program.

At earlier stages of production, there were some signs of improvement. The cost of intermediate goods rose 0.6 percent and the cost of crude goods, the earliest stage of production, slowed markedly to 0.4 percent because of a decline in crude food prices. However, food at the intermediate level was still a high 1.2 percent.

The administration is trying to cut its budget and promote its wage and price standards as a way to fight inflation.

Alfred E. Kahn, who heads the anti-inflation program, told the National Urban Coalition Wednesday that "the prescribed medicine for inflation is restraint" by government and the public.

As part of the anti-inflation effort, he said, more money cannot be spent to fight unemployment, to rebuild the cities or to pay for universal medical care.

His audience was not pleased.

13 Hurt In Bus Wreck

EDINBURG, Texas (AP)—Thirteen persons injured in a South Texas bus wreck remained hospitalized today.

The injuries - including broken bones and lacerations - occurred Wednesday when a Valley Transit Co. bus careened out of control on a rain-slicked U.S. 281 about 1 miles north of San Manuel in northern Hidalgo County.

A Department of Public Safety official said the bus rolled over several times and came to rest on its side on the highway median.

An Edinburg General Hospital spokesman said none of the injured were in serious or critical condition.

Special Session Set By Board

Snyder School Trustees have set a special meeting for 7 p.m. tonight to begin a study of the school system's curriculum and discuss the outlook for the 1979-80 school year.

The meeting will be held in the board room at the administration building.

Wait For Ruling

PITTSBURGH (AP)-Steel haulers ordered by a federal judge to end their nine-week shutdown will probably wait for an appeals court ruling before deciding whether to comply, their attorney says.

An appeal was filed in the U.S. Third Circuit Court immediately after Wednesday's U.S. District Court ruling against the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers, said FASH attorney Jon Hogue.

Jump Jet Funds Cut

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Carter's new defense budget will deny the Marine Corps $203 million it had sought to continue development of its prized "Jump Jet" bomber program, administration sources say. The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the rejection of funds in the fiscal 1980 budget could spell the end of the AV-8B Harrier, which the Marines have envisaged as their main battlefield bomber to provide close support for ground troops.

Flees Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)-A Thai helicopter whisked former Cambodian Deputy Premier Ieng Sary from his homeland to safety today as Vietnamese tanks were reported closing in, and the ousted official then flew out of Bangkok for Hong Kong, Thai airlines officials said.

Another helicopter also made a brief landing inside Cambodia and then returned to Thailand, but there was no confirmation either of the choppers picked up ex-President Khieu Samphan or other ex-officials of the fallen Phnom Penh government.

Thai Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan told reporters earlier he had been told troops still loyal to the toppled Communist regime were spreading out to wage guerrilla war and that Ieng Sary would not flee his country "very soon."

HOLE IN THE WALL—A hole was knocked through a courthouse wall this morning, but it was to provide a doorway linking the sheriff's old office to the expanding tax assessor-collector's office. The SDN Column

It is time for us to get something in this column about Howard Petty, the veteran tax representative of Mobil Oil Co.

Petty was among his fraternity on hand Tuesday night to discuss tax matters with the Snyder School Board and he casually observed that he had been attending budget hearings and tax discussions here for 20 years. Then, he suddenly discovered that he had made an error in his calculation (something that tax men are not supposed to do) and that it had been 25 years rather than a mere 20.

Thus, his trip here this week launched his 26th year of watching after tax matters for his employer—Mobil--in Snyder, Scurry County and area. It means that he probably has first hand knowledge of recent history of local taxing agencies that surpasses that of the people who sit on the local boards. The same is true of at least two of his colleagues, Art Dimney of Chevron, and Carlton Meredith, who represents R.E. Smith and several smaller oil operators.

But getting back to Petty, he usually wants to discuss East Texas with us when we sit in on the same sessions. He grew up at Winnsboro, which is on the north edge of Wood County and only a hop, skip and jump from Gilmer, where we were reared, and just a little south of Mount Vernon, whch produced such people as Dandy Don Meridith and a bunch of Joyces, who have lived in Snyder for a number of years.

Petty says he always likes to come to Snyder and he expects to continue making trips here to take care of tax matters for his company until he retires. He didn't say how long that will be, but he already is assured a record that will be difficult to top.

There was a time when sharp disagreements developed between oil company tax men and some members of boards and commissions that they dealth with. Now, they mostly cry on each other's shoulders as they try to fight the battle of government regulations and mandates that seem to keep demanding more and more tax money.

Speaker's Rules Adopted...

Clayton An Easy Winner

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)-One dissident House member laughed bitterly Wednesday and told Speaker Bill Clayton, "I think I see the writing on the wall." And he was right. Clayton easily overcame the new legislative session's first test of his power.

The House voted 120-5 for procedural rules sought by Clayton and clobbered repeated efforts by members of the Sam Houston Caucus to change them.

Lawmakers meet in joint session today for the largely ceremonial task of officially counting election returns for governor and lieutenant governor.

Totals issued by Secretary of State Steve Oaks show Republican Bill Clements defeated Democrat John Hill, 1,183,839 to 1,166,979, but Clements' election was unofficial until certified by the Legislature.

There was a chance the House might work late and make its decision in the election contest filed by Kae Thomas Patrick, a Republican who lost by 738 votes to Rep. Don Cartwright, D-San Antonio.

A select committee that heard testimony in Patrick's challenge completed its report Wednesday night and recommended that Cartwright be seated as the legally elected winner.

Conceding that procedural and mechanical irregularities in the District 57-H election wouldn't have affected the outcome, Patrick's lawyers challenged the 1973 state law that changed the district boundaries.

Tom Joseph of San Antonio told the select committee Wednesday that the Legislature had no right to revise district lines drawn in a federal court order.

But the committee concluded in its report to the House that "the Legislature has full power to reapportion the state for representative districts at

Q--It has been well established that driving 55 mph rather than 70 on the highway will improve gasoline mileage, and now that the price of gasoline appears to be going upward, I was wondering if there is anything a driver can do to get better mileage in town.

A--Experts say these practices help: Avoid jackrabbit starts and hard stops; don't start your engine until your are ready to roll, and kill your engine if you get tied up in a line of traffic at a drive-in window, etc. If the engine is warm, it won't require extra fuel to re-start it.

Oil Union Issues Own Guidelines

DENVER (AP)-The 60,000-member oil workers union, still troubled by the Carter administration wage-price guidelines, has issued some guidelines of its own in the latest attempt to avert a nationwide strike.

A.F. Grospiron, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, said at a press conference Wednesday that the union has rejected all contract offers, but said negotiations would remain open for an indefinite period.

Grospiron then issued a list of demands that he said the oil companies must include in future contract proposals.

"The union does not want a strike, and responsible companies within the oil industry do not want a strike," he said.

"If the companies respond to our proposals in a reasonable manner, a general strike can be averted."

The negotiations are the first to be conducted by a major union under President Carter's voluntary guidelines, which call for a 7 percent limit on wage and benefit increases. The outcome is expected to influence settlements in other major union negotiations this year.

The union president reemphasized that he felt the Carter guidelines remained an obstacle to achieving a settlement. Despite lengthy talks with federal officials, Grospiron said the union still didn't understand how the government intended to apply the guidelines to the oil industry.

Ballots Out For Foundation Vote

Ballots have gone out to members of the Scurry County Industrial Foundation for the election of four directors.

The ballot lists the names of four nominees with space for write-in votes for members who may wish to cast their ballot for additional candidates.

The nominees are Carlton Chapman, of West Texas State Bank; Bill Wilson III of Wilson Motors; Truett Bryan of Snyder Motor Co., and John Reed of Clark Lumber Co.

Board members whose terms expire are Bobby McCormick, John Boren, Mel Gilbert and James Rosser.

All members of the foundation are eligible to cast ballots and they have been asked to return their ballots by Jan. 19, the day the votes will be counted. Ballots may be mailed to the Scurry County Industrial Foundation, P.O. Drawer CC, Snyder 79549.

West Texas-Cloudy north through Friday with slight chance of light rain Friday. Decreasing cloudiness south today, becoming fair tonight and Friday. Area Welcomes Warm Forecast

Forecasts calling for clearing weather were welcome news to Snyder area residents today as a prolonged cold spell held on overnight.

Some light, powdery snow fell during the night, but it apparently caused no further problems. However, some of the ice from a sleet storm which fell on the night of Dec. 30 remained in shady places and in gutters. The warm-up in the next day or two is expected to clear out the last remnants.

The snowfall last night was not enough to halt traffic and schools were in session for the third day in a row. They are expected to concentrate on making up days lost since the first of the year. Snyder Schools plan to hold classes this Saturday to make up one of the four days missed.

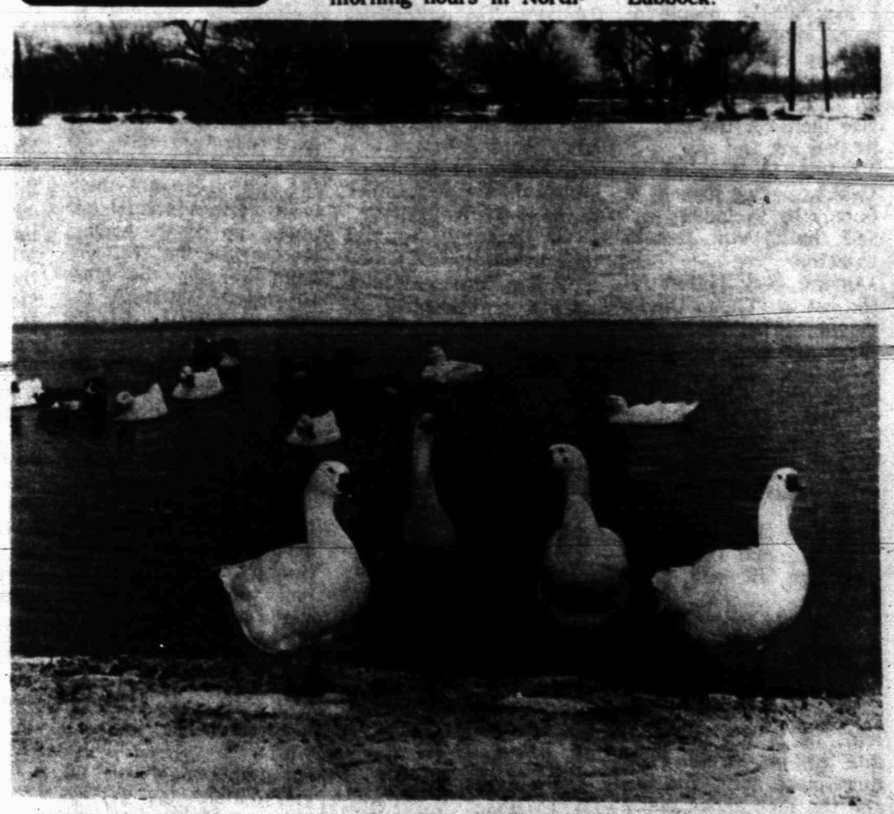
Today, forecasts called for light rain and freezing drizzle to end during the morning hours in Northwest Texas and a clearing trend was expected to set in from the west. South Texas was expecting a few thunderstorms.

Snyder's low temperature overnight was 24 degrees, following a high of 32 Wednesday. It was expected to move up some today.

Highs were expected to range from the middle 30s in the Panhandle to the upper 30s in Central Texas to the 50s along the gulf coast.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the upper teens in the Panhandle to the 40s along the gulf coast. Extremes ranged from 19 at Dalhart to 48 at McAllen.

Some early morning readings included 23 at Amarillo, 24 at Wichita Falls, 27 at Texarkana, 33 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 35 at Austin, 36 at Lufkin, 40 at Houston, 43 at Corpus Christi, 28 at San Angelo, 33 at El Paso and 26 at Lubbock.



MOURNFUL SIGHT — It was a mournful sight that caught the eye of a Snyder Daily News photographer this morning who saw the Towle Park ducks swimming around in ice-crusty waters. In the foreground and background is ice, and the little patch of open water the ducks were swimming in had to be ice-cold. Today's low was 24 degrees. The weatherman promised some relief within the next day or two. (SDN Staff Photo)

abating government

More and more taxpayers are beginning to view government with a jaundiced eye. So many have felt the sharp edge of agency regulation or have been hurt by controls and arbitrary attitudes that there is a great loss of faith in government at all levels.

Some politicians still try to make hay with the situation by taking a stance contrary to their partisan leanings and even making a complete U-turn in previous positions.

There are others who, by their actions, appear to be sincere in making a change in direction. Politicians too are citizens as well as taxpayers and must at times weigh their previous "liberal" stance in the light of the total burden.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., calls himself a "liberal" but has sponsored legislation aimed at balancing the budget. Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., and from Harlem, has said he would lead the fight to cut costs. Rangel wants to "have a look at some of these bureaucracies where consultants are hiring consultants to study the problems of the poor, which (studies) we don't need, writing cockamamie reports on what we'll be doing in the year 3000."

A good many in Congress believe that cynicism about government and inflation are linked and that both the Congress and the President will be in serious trouble if this number one problem is not solved.

Polls show a seeming paradox among Americans. About half the people believe that government spending is the prime cause of inflation. Yet, 70 percent have indicated that they favor national health insurance.

This indicates to us that a good percentage of our people have not taken the time to become aware of what this one idea could do to government spending. They would only have to take a look at England, the Netherlands and some others of the nations which have taken that route to become aware of the danger.

However, the seeming paradox is not nearly as great today as it has been in the immediate past. Once political strategist said, "We are coming to an end of an era. The people now seem to think that the federal government should have less to say and to do about problem solving, which is contrary to what it was in the 1940s, '50s and the '60s."

Even some of the agency heads are becoming more aware. The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission observed that a new action has entered the regulatory process and the people are asking, "Do the benefits really outweight the burdens?" Just a few weeks ago he recalled that one of the regional offices recommended that toxic labels be put on houseplants. "The commission looked at that and said no. Ten years ago we might have said yes," he said.

Before the election it might have seemed that every candidate was dedicated to cutting governmental spending, lowering taxes and getting the public fiscal house in order.

We doubt that the people took all this at face value. Citizens will be watching to see just how truthful their candidates really were. Faith in all governmental functions is at a low level and will not be restored with political rhetoric.

For many years we have heard the promises of lower taxes and efficiency brought in the bureaucracy. As the promises faded to just words and no action, we remain suspicious. We hope we will be proved wrong this time.

Nothing would please us more to find that a new era of responsibility has entered the political arena. We don't expect much in this area. And, in this too, we hope we are proven wrong.

when outsiders misbehave

In Iran the peacock throne was about to be pulled out from under the shah. Rioting raged in a dozen Iranian towns. Oil field strikers refused to take orders from either the shah or his political opponent. The military, discouraged by the shah's refusal to get tough, mumbled and grumbled and threatened to get tough on its own.

At the same time, 1,000 miles away in Beverly Hills, Calif., the hillside home of the shah's mother and sister was under siege.

Enraged students--most of them in this country on visitor visas--hurled stones and set fires and overturned and burned cars and shouted, "Death to the shah and his family."

The princess and her mother were moved from their house to an "undisclosed location" under heavy escort for "safekeeping."

It is especially sad when fugitives from the repression and violence of the Old World bring with them to our country their violent Old World ways.

In 1977, through a go-between, the Shah of Iran invested in 158 acres overlooking Beverly Hills. It is likely that the shah foresaw what was happening in his own country and planned a "palace in exile" in our country where his family would be safe until his own nation's turmoil subsided.

After all, he had been entirely friendly to us through years as an oil supplier and intermediary with more volatile Middle East leaders. In the Persian Gulf, in shirtsleeve English, he "ran a lot of errands" for us.

As recently as New Year's Eve a year ago, President Carter was in Tehran toasting the shah: "Iran under the great leadership of the shah is an island of stability in one of the most troubled areas of the world. This is a great tribute to you, Your Majesty, and to your leadership...."

Obviously, our President underestimated those opposed to the shah--spearheaded by Red-led young people running interference for Moscow.

Iran has been the world's second-largest oil exporter and a major importer of United States weapons and technology.

If this shakeup eventuates in a pro-Russian government in Iran, Saudi Arabia will become susceptible--and so will other oil-rich sheikdoms over there.

So the shah has been a buffer between East and West and we must hope the next government also will be.

I'm not sure all his past friendship obligates our country to take him in and provide for his security--yet we take in very many outsiders with lesser credentials.

Our State Department has said he will be welcome if he decides to come here.

I'm not sure, after the manner in which his wife and mother were menaced in California, that he will want to.

Significantly, most of the rioters in Beverly Hills were exchange students, invited guests in our country.

Americans in their country are obligated to respect their laws. They should respect ours or be invited out.

donald f. graff

J. Carter to the rescue, and not a test case too soon.

The administration's recent request for legislation restricting police access to press materials may well be the beginning of a long-needed clarification of both the protections enjoyed by and the responsibilities incumbent upon the press in our democratic society of laws. Given the time-consuming complexities of the legislative process, however, that must be in the long run.

Meanwhile, the very fact that government, as here proposed by the Justice Department, is on record as favoring a more specific statement of First Amendment rights should in itself take some of the heat out of the controversy and provide an opportunity for reassessing its basis and implications.

For the past year, the press has appeared to be on a collision course with the law enforcement establishment. It has lost most of the initial skirmishes in a series of unfavorable court decisions upholding police searches of newsrooms and denying confidentiality of news sources.

The result has been rising alarm in editorial offices at what has been viewed as an erosion of constitutional guarantees. The precedent being established case by case seemed to be that anything goes in bringing the press into line. On the other side, growing numbers of judges have taken umbrage at press criticism and what could be construed as attempts to tell the courts what the law is and how it should be interpreted.

It has reached such a pass that at a recent symposium in Washington, a well-known newsman suggested it might be time for the press to "get into the trenches" in its confrontation with the judges.

Other press figures, such as the eminent editor emeritus of The Wall Street Journal, Vermont Royster, have cautioned against promoting an adversary relationship that could only complicate efforts to resolve the issues and work to the great disadvantage of the press.

A point with which Prof. Robert H. Bork, now of Yale University and formerly U.S. solicitor general, firmly agrees. None of the headlined cases, he believes, "strike to the heart of either the sanctity of the law or the freedom of the press." And in any case, the press is doing itself no service in attacking a judiciary upon which in the end it must depend for enforcement of its First Amendment protections.

In another expert view, the issue being argued in a historical constitutional context is actually of much more recent origin. Some of the celebrated cases of recent years would not have been news a half century or more in the past, according to University of Chicago sociologist Michael Schudson, because the media was not then considered so important a social institution.

It would certainly seem to be the case that only in recent decades, as the press has taken more seriously its role as independent observer and critic of government, have its public service functions and privileges been stressed. As a consequence, the ambiguity of the protections as set forth in the Constitution have increasingly become a problem.

The administration proposal does not seek in one fell swoop to resolve all the issues and answer all the questions about press protections. It restricts itself to barring surprise police searches, such as occurred in the Stanford Daily case decided against the press by the Supreme Court last May. A subpoena would be required to investigate a newsroom or any other premise for material being prepared for publication, broadcast or other public dissemination. Its provisions would not apply to the most publicized of recent cases, the demand by a New Jersey court for the confidential notes of New York Times reporter Myron Farber. And it is not the broad conferring of immunity on all confidential professional relationships plus individual privacy which many civil libertarians urge.

But it is a start in dealing with a very complex and sensitive issue. And it deals with it through the proper procedure - legislation - not charge and countercharge in editorial columns and from the bench.

It serves to remind us that we are still a nation of laws, not of individuals or institutions. The courts are the interpreters, but they are not the law. Neither is the press.

protecting the estate

NEW YORK (AP)—When the undertaker, the taxmen, the courts, the attorneys, and the creditors are through with the estate there might be little left for the heirs, said the insurance man.

Using an electronic computer, and the executive's current net worth, he showed that if the man were to die that day, "closing costs" would consume 38.2 percent of his $665,662 estate.

The result: Another million dollar whole life insurance policy was sold, almost guaranteeing that the executive's estate would pass intact to his family, and actually grow in the process.

The executive, age 50, or in some instances his company, would be charged about $30,000 a year in premiums, but dividends, averaging $9,000 a year over 20 years, would greatly ease the payment burden.

The insurance agent would be well paid - about $16,000 in the first year and $1,500 a year for the following nine years. Thereafter he might receive $500 a year for servicing the policy.

Happiest of all might be the life insurance company, which has found a growing market in big policies. In this case it was Massachusetts Mutual, but almost all other big insurers are sharing in the trend.

Whatever company is involved, the technique is similar, with the agent relying heavily on hypothetical, computer-produced probate of the individual's estate, using actual inventories of assets.

"After he catches his breath," says Dave Birkhaeuser, director of estate planning for Mass Mutual, "the client realizes how important estate planning is." The sale often follows immediately.

So effective is the technique, especially in times of inflation and high taxes, that the once illustrious Million Dollar Roundtable has lost its polish. A more exclusive club has been formed. The Top of The Table, made up of those who sell $5 million of insurance in a year. Mass Mutual alone sold more than 800 of the million dollar-plus policies last year. While some covered the lives of housewives and children, the vast majority were on executive lives.

A growing number of these policy sales are for the sole purpose of provviding estate liquidity, or to leave an estate intact for the deceased' heirs - 261 in 1977, and 310 or so last year.

Birkhaeuser is convinced the trend will continue, especially since many insurers have recently lowered prices and raised dividends, a result of lower than expected mortality, and business efficiencies.

Life insurance, Birkhaeuser says, may be a unique vehicle for preserving estates since it isn't subject to taxable gains taxes if the beneficiary is other than the deceased's estate.

To accomplish this, the policy owner must be other than the executive otherwise a million dollar policy on a million dollar estate would make it a $2 million estate. Frequently, a wife or a business or an irrevocable trust is named both owner and beneficiary.

Set up this way, the heirs are immediately in a position to pay off creditors, federal and state taxes and professional fees without being forced to liquidate real assets, such as a business.

my turn

by john long

The announcement of the Ten Worst Dressed has opened my eyes and caused me to look at the people around me. When I look at the people around me, I, of course, see my coworkers. Only now, looking at them with an eagle eye, do I recognize them for the mangy lot they are.

In these considerations, I am excluding myself. It is only by excluding myself that I can remain objective.

At the very bottom of the list are Glenn Davis, David Thompson, and Mark Guynes, the press operators. Although there are several of them, I am counting them as one motley group. That is a practical consideration on my part because they all look alike, basically. They are all about the same size and weight and they are all besmeared with ink.

Next to the bottom of the list is the newspaper publisher, Roy McQueen. McQueen is an immaculate dresser. That is his problem: he is too immaculate in his dress. The three-piece suits, the tie, and the nice shoes make him stuffy and hard to talk to. Going from the press operators to him is going from one extreme to the other.

One might think there would be a middle ground between those two extremes. Unfortunately, there isn't.

Pulling a number three rating on my list is Nell Holdren. The cigarette dangling from her lips destroys her looks. Being a reformed smoker myself, I notice now more than ever the smoking of other people.

Bill McClellan and Joyce Smith tie for a number four spot. Actually, I have nothing against their dress. However, I do have a natural prejudice against short people.

Then come Nancy McFatridge and Debbie Goodlett. They tie for fifth place. They really fill their clothes up to the very seams. An ounce more and they would be bursting at the seams.

Tying for sixth place are Jim Washington and Wayne Burney, the advertising salesmen. They are reasonably sharp dressers, but a little on the stuffy side, I think. They need to do away with the coats and go about in just shirt, tie, and pants.

Patsy Burney, Paula White, and Dixie McClellan are next. Actually, I don't know where else to put them, so I am assigning them seventh place.

Coming in eighth are Genelle Barnson and Dot Stokes. They are not bad dressers. They are casual but generally sharp in appearance. They are rarely seen, however. They pretty well stay in their little room to themselves.

Then comes Wacil McNair, the newspaper editor. He is next to the least worst dressed. Although he wears a coat, tie, and nice pants, there is a certain casual air about his dress. Around the office, he refrains from wearing the coat. His dress is not stuffy.

The least worst dressed award is a tie between Jo Ann Nunley and John Dunnan. They are usually very casual in dress and not at all stuffy. They are easy to talk to and a festival to the eye.

(Editor's Note--John Long was last seen racing across the Borden County line frantically hunting for a buffalo wallow, an over-sized gopher hole, or any place where he could hide out until some of his coworkers can cool their wrath. He was dressed in a tattered khaki jumpsuit which a salesman assured him would repel tar and feathers as well as being flame-resistant, which some of his coworkers agreed would stand him in good stead in the remainder of his life on this earth as well as in the hereafter).

The defense started with three rounds of diamonds. South ruffed, led his jack of clubs and let it ride.

East returned the 10 of clubs. South discarded a heart, led dummy's ace of trumps and a second trump to his queen. He was about to claim when West showed out.

All this early play had been fast and furious. Now South stopped to think but the time for thought had passed. The contract had gone to the point of no return.

A little early thought could have shown South how to guard against the possibility that East would hold four trumps.

He should have played trumps backwards. First his king — then dummy's ace. If everyone followed, he could come to his hand with the ace of hearts to draw the last trump. When West showed out South would cash dummy's last high club to discard a second heart. Ruff a club to bring his trumps to the same length as East's. Play a heart to dummy's king and lead the last club. East would be right between a rock and a hard place and unable to get a trump trick.

Fresh Fruits For Winter Salads

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Fresh fruits make a big difference in the flavor of standard desserts.

For example, use fresh strawberries in winter to make an easy frozen dessert or add fresh bananas to a basic tapioca pudding.

STRAWBERRY SPRING THAW

½ cup butter or margarine, melted
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 cup flour
½ cup chopped nuts
2 egg whites
1 cup sugar
1 pint California strawberries, sliced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

In a jelly-roll pan, stir melted butter and brown sugar. With a fork, mix in flour and nuts. Distribute over bottom of pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Set aside to cool.

In a large mixing bowl, beat whites to soft peaks, gradually adding the cup of sugar. Add berries, lemon juice and vanilla. (Note that beater crushes sliced berries sufficiently.) Beat on high speed until triple in volume and stiff peaks form. Fold in whipped cream.

Spread all but ½-cup crumbs in bottom of 9-inch spring-form pan. Top with egg white mixture, then remaining crumbs. Freeze.

To serve, remove ring of pan. Transfer to serving platter. Cut in wedges. Makes 12 servings.

BANANA-TAPIOCA PUDDING

3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
3 tablespoons sugar, divided
1 egg, separated
1/8 teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
1 cup mashed ripe bananas (3 medium bananas)
½ teaspoon vanilla

In a medium saucepan, mix tapioca, 2 tablespoons sugar, egg yolk, salt and milk. Let stand for 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, beat egg white until foamy. Add remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and beat until stiff. Set aside.

Cook tapioca mixture over medium heat, stirring constantly, for 6 to 8 minutes. Combine mashed banana and beaten egg white. Gradually add to tapioca mixture, beating constantly to blend. Add vanilla and chill. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Search For Best Beef Cook Is On

AUSTIN--The search is on for the best beef cook in Texas.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced that the Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA), the Texas Cowbells and the Texas Cattle Feeders Association will sponsor the 1979 Texas Beef Cook-off in Houston March 13.

Ten finalists, chosen from recipes they submit, will compete for a $300 first prize and the chance to attend the National Beef Cook-off in Omaha, Neb., Sept. 26-28. Contest deadline is Feb. 15.

To participate cooks must submit an entry form available from state cook-off chairperson Marian Balke, P.O. Box 504, Breham 77833 or any TDA district office. Recipes must accompany the forms.

Contestants must be Texas residents 18 or older with a non-professional food status. They may submit recipes using two to five pounds of chuck, round, rump or fresh brisket. Cooking time must not exceed four hours, excluding such preliminary preparation as marinating.

Judging will be held at the Albert Thomas Convention Center during the Texas Cowbells-Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Convention. Dishes will be judged on taste, appearance, originality and ease of preparation and practicality.

Second place winner will receive $200, third place, $100.

Marriage Making Comeback

NEW YORK (AP)-The divorce rate is leveling off, marriage is making a comeback and romance is in vogue, claims Kathy Lowry in an article in Family Weekly magazine.

"This resurgence of romantic love is partially a benign reaction to the more strident excesses of the feminist movement, the New Morality and the '60s' drug-rock-sex culture in general," she says.

Ms. Lowry cites figures from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare showing the number of marriages has climbed from 1.5 million to 2.1 million annually in just two decades.

This Kangaroo Is a Bounder!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: There are organizations to protect women from sexual harassment on the job, but who protects us from our husbands' employers?

My husband quit his job and moved us from one side of the continent to the other. And, accepting a work load that nearly put him in the cardiac ward, he went to work for an Australian businessman who promised us a share in the profits.

This Australian was unable to drive in the U.S., so my husband invited him to stay in our home on his frequent business trips. On these occasions, he made overtures to me, which I declined as diplomatically as possible without insulting him outright. Not easily discouraged, he persisted until I opened avoided him. At that point, he fired my husband.

My husband thinks that with the business firmly established and profits booming, the Australian figured he could hire a new manager with whom he did not have to share profits.

I suspect the man felt rejected and sought retaliation. Who do you think is right?

LADY IN DISTRESS

DEAR LADY: You could both be right. Only the cad from Down Under knows. (P.S. The next time your husband makes a deal, remind him to get it in writing.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old Catholic. Years ago, when I was in high school, I had an abortion. I felt that it was the only sensible choice and I still feel that I did the right thing.

My problem is that I have not been to confession since my abortion because I am afraid I will be excommunicated.

Regardless of what it sounds like, I have high moral standards and I want to be forgiven.

I don't need a lecture on morals or birth control. I've had both, and I know I will never again become pregnant accidentally. Please answer in your column. I don't want a letter from you with this information delivered at my home. I can't ask a priest, and I do not want to give up my religion.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Go to confession and talk honestly with your priest. It is possible that he can give you absolution.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 years old and I'm engaged to a man I'll call Mike, who is also 27. We have known each other for a long time, but have been engaged only a month. Before the engagement we didn't discuss having a family. That was a mistake.

Now Mike tells me that he would like to have three or four children. Maybe I'm selfish, but I don't want any.

Abby, I have absolutely no patience with children and, knowing myself as I do, I wouldn't make a very good mother.

Mike and I love each other, but this has become a big issue. Please don't tell me that if I had a child I'd learn to love it. I don't want the work and responsibility of raising children. Perhaps I'm weird, but I don't think they're worth it. So what is your advice?

DOESN'T WANT KIDS

DEAR DOESN'T: Tell Mike that unless he sees it your way, he'd better find another girl. I agree, you'd probably make a poor mother, but I applaud your honesty.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Lawmakers In Oregon May Change Rape Law

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

SALEM, Ore. (AP) As John and Greta Rideout worked to patch up their marriage, state legislators considered ways to mend the Oregon rape law under which Rideout was unsuccessfully prosecuted.

"I don't believe the general public believes the traditional definition of rape is applicable to the marital situation," said state Sen. Ted Kulongoski. "I think the recent Rideout trial made this clear."

He said he is working on a bill to classify rape within marriage as a felony sexual offense to combat the "many social connotations and beliefs people have about the crime of rape."

Rideout was found innocent two weeks ago in what was believed to be the first criminal prosecution in the nation of a husband charged with raping his wife while they lived together.

The couple announced their reconciliation Tuesday and 21-year-old Rideout says it took the ordeal of the trial to save their marriage.

"I think we are both changed for the better through it, a whole or deal," Rideout said Wednesday in an interview at the restaurant where he is a cook. "I don't think we'd be together now if it was not for the trial. It made us both see things average people in the world don't get to see.

"I believe the law is right," he said. "It's a hard thing for a person like me to come back and say he believes the law is right when the law was used on me."

State Sen. Vern Cook, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said the law should be amended to provide for a lesser charge in the case of husband-wife rape. But he said: "We have to be careful about judging a statute on the activities of nuts....the reconciliation could be used as an argument against the substance of the law itself."

District Attorney Gary Gortmaker, who prosecuted Rideout, said the reconciliation may affect "the scrutiny of the citizen members of the grand jury on future cases of this nature."

He said sexual abuse cases involving persons known to each other frustrate prosecutors and police, as "...often, too often, they reconcile after arrest, or after indictment and before trial or even after trial, thus rendering all of this effort and expense fruitless and sometimes counter-productive."

Charles Burt, Rideout's attorney, said the reconciliation "...points out the absurdity of bringing the crime of rape as a law into a marriage....It's a waste of the criminal court's time to get into that area."

Rideout was indicted under a 1977 change in the Oregon laws removing marital privilege as a defense against rape. His 25-year-old wife said he beat and raped her Oct. 10 at their Salem apartment. During the trial, Rideout admitted hitting his wife but said they had sexual intercourse after they made up.

He said Wednesday the couple will not divorce and will seek counseling.

Turkey Producers To Boost Output

WASHINGTON (AP)-Encouraged by higher prices in the past year, turkey producers plan to boost output by more than 11 percent to record levels in 1979.

Growers in 20 states which produce about 96 percent of the nation's turkeys plan to raise 150 million birds in 1979, compared to 134.6 million last year, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

The average national farm price of live turkeys last month was 49.6 cents a pound, up more than 23 percent from 40.2 cents a pound a year earlier, according to the department.

Allowing for production in the remaining states, total U.S. turkey production this year could easily soar to more than 155 million birds.

Total production in all states in 1978 was 139.8 million turkeys. That was up about 3 percent from the 1977 output of about 136.4 million birds but fell short of the 1976 record of almost 149 million.

The new figures also showed 1978 turkey production of 139.8 million birds was 1.2 percent less than the 141.5 million USDA predicted last September.

Prices of turkeys and other poultry rose sharply last year along with beef, pork and other red meat. With high meat prices expected to continue in 1979, turkey and broiler producers are rapidly expanding to take advantage of the market.

But the officials cautioned that "the number of turkeys actually raised in 1979 may vary from growers' intentions shown in this report, depending on feed prices, supply and prices of hatching eggs and poults, and prices growers receive for turkeys during the next few months."

Judge Orders Psychiatrist....

Gacy Pleads Innocent

CHICAGO (AP)-John Wayne Gacy Jr. stood silently as his attorney entered innocent pleas to charges of murder, mute as a judge ordered he be examined by a psychiatrist.

It was the stocky contractor's first public appearance since his arrest Dec. 21 and the discovery of 27 bodies at his home.

Gacy was flanked by four sheriff's deputies as his attorney, Sam Amirante, entered the pleas Wednesday to charges against his client in the slayings of seven young men and boys ages 15 to 20.

The hearing before Circuit Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald was conducted at the Cook County jail complex, where Gacy has been held without bond since his arrest.

Gacy, 36, was dressed in a brown sportcoat and beige pants, a white shirt, tie and brown shoes.

Judge Fitzgerald ordered Gacy be examined by a psychiatrist to determine his competency to stand trial. The judge said the psychiatrist should also determine if Gacy was sane at the time of the slayings. A report is due Jan. 24.

Amirante made a series of motions, including one to quash the indictments. He also argued the grand jurors' judgment must have been tainted by news accounts.

"None of us will ever know the amount ot taint on that grand jury," Amirante said. "Nowhere in the annals of history has there been so much pre-indictment publicity."

The lawyer also asked that searches be discontinued at Gacy's house in an unincorporated area northwest of Chicago.

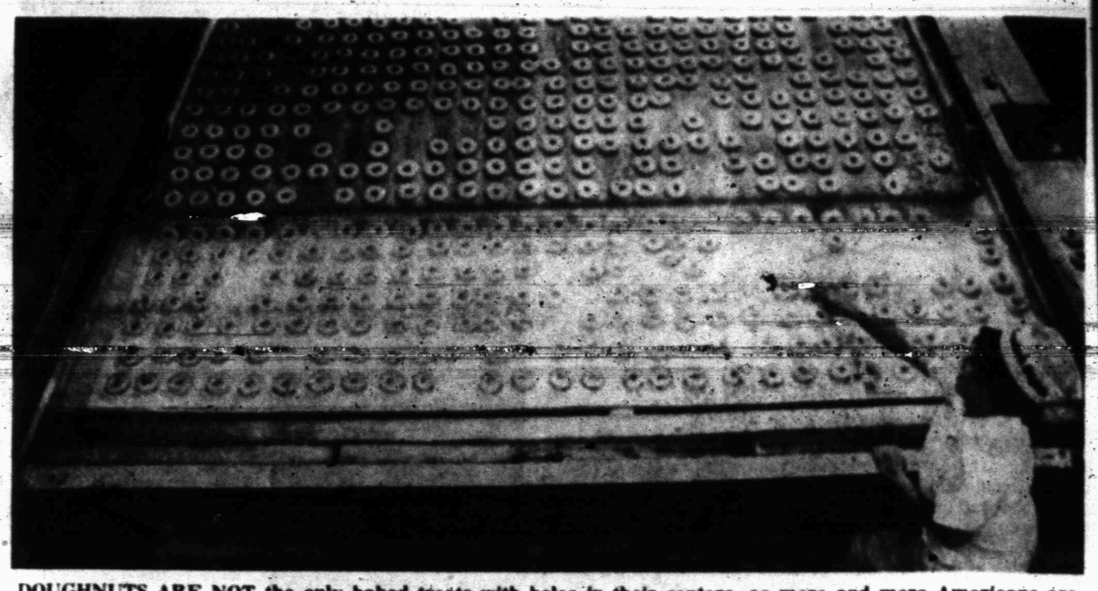
Fitzgerald did not rule on the motions.

The skeletal remains of 27 bodies have been found at Gacy's home, and two more bodies that authorities say are linked to Gacy have been pulled from the Des River. A body taken from the Illinois River also may be connected with Gacy, authorities say.

A nude corpse identified as that of Timothy O'Rourke, 20, of Chicago, was found in the Illinois River near Morris on June 30.

Slight Rise In Scuba Drownings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Deaths among nonprofessional scuba divers have risen only slightly nationwide although sharp increases have been recorded in Hawaii, and Florida fatalities continue to be high, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says.



DOUGHNUTS ARE NOT the only baked treats with holes in their centers, as more and more Americans are discovering. An estimated 25 million bagels took this route last year from proofing ovens (where they double in size) through boiling water, baking, slicing, packaging and freezing at a Connecticut bakery.

Hard Go For Workers Of Losing Candidates

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Catherine James wonders if she has a great future behind her.

The 22-year-old from Iowa City, Iowa, took her degree in government from Radcliffe last June and almost immediately landed a $15,000 job with Democratic Sen. Dick Clark, writing briefing papers and news releases.

Moreover, Clark promised her a raise and promotion to legislative assistant - caseworker - after he won the election.

Except he didn't win. And now Catherine James is but one of about 1,300 persons who left the congressional payroll last Tuesday for an elite unemployment line.

For them, the promise of politics has turned to quicksand. Their fortunes, by definition, are as fickle as those of the boss. And those who served liberal Democrats, especially, find themselves mired in the loss column while Republicans count their Capitol gains.

"I've contacted everyone I know who works on the Hill," says Ms. James. "Out of 50 possibilities, I've had about four-and-a-half bites, and only one in the Senate." And, as yet, nothing definite.

Congressional job hunting after election is never easy, and this year's record turnover of 78 seats in the House and near-record 20 in the Senate have made it even more brutally competitive than usual. Some of the new senators have had thousands of applicants for the 25 or so positions they have to offer.

Typically, a new senator will hire one or two top hands with previous Hill experience, regardless of their party or ideological affiliation. "The very good professionals are always in great demand," said one key Senate administrator with access to the entire payroll record. "I've seen several cases of Republicans hiring Democrats, liberals hiring conservatives and vice cersa because they realize they've got to have someone who knows the agencies and the other contacts necessary to run a congressional office."

But that phenomenon extends only so far. The new officeholder usually brings along most of the staff from his or her campaign team. And in any case, it doesn't look good to the folks at home if the payroll is full of names from out of state, regardless of expertise.

One new senator, Democrat David Boren of Oklahoma, has already completed the hiring of a staff of 27 while most others have filled at least three-fourths of their payroll. Boren probably leads the pack in drawing upon experienced Hill workers, having retained the receptionist of his Republican predecessor while drawing two key aides from other outgoing congressmen. In addition, Boren brought back Charles Ward, for years the top staffer for former House Speaker Carl Albert, from a job in private industry to run the office.

Two Officers In Odessa Demoted

ODESSA (AP)—Shortly after a 41-year-old Odessa man disappeared in June 1977, an Ector County sheriff's deputy questioned one suspect three times but couldn't get the suspect to talk to him.

Two other investigators, working under District Attorney John Green, grilled the same suspect again last week and got a statement that led to the discovery of skeletal remains in a shallow grave south of Odessa and to filing of murder charges.

As a result, deputy James Brown, 53, and a captain overseeing the 1977 investigation have been demoted from the criminal investigation division to the sheriff's patrol division, Sheriff Elton Faught has announced.

"I don't believe the district attorney's office would be able to rely any more on any criminal case that Brown might work in the future," Sheriff Faught said in a statement announcing the demotions Tuesday.

Green called a news conference last Friday to criticize the 1977 investigation. He mentioned Brown by name and Faught noted: "I believe his credibility now as an investigator has been destroyed."

Faught said Capt. Don Register, 41, was demoted and stripped of his rank for not properly overseeing the missing person's case "and for his handling of other cases that I don't intend to discuss right now."

Faught said at least one other case not properly investigated or supervised involved sexual abuse of a child.

Steven P. Perrin, 21, of Odessa was charged with murder last Friday after the remains of Raymond Carl White, 41, were found in the secluded grave. Perrin was placed in Ector County Jail on $50,000 bond. An autopsy said White had been shot once in the back of the head.

Neither Register nor Brown would comment about their demotion Tuesday by Faught. They referred all inquiries to the sheriff.

But No Effective Methods Of Quitting Found Yet...

Report Confirms Smoking Harmful

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— The surgeon general says he has "overwhelming" evidence that smoking causes death and disease. What he doesn't have is a way to help people stop.

Those were among the conclusions in a 1,200-page report issued today by Surgeon General Julius Richmond in a "review and reappraisal" of research accumulated over the past 15 years.

"This document reveals, with dramatic clarity, that smoking is even more dangerous - indeed, far more dangerous - than was supposed in 1964," said HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

"It is hoped that in another 15 years we will not have to say, 'We still don't know what works!'" in helping people stop smoking, said Richmond.

Califano contended the report "demolishes" claims by cigarette manufacturers that there is no proven link between smoking and cancer and chronic diseases.

Commenting before the report was released, the Tobacco Institute predicted it would be "more rehash than research" and issued its own 168-page report saying the "Preoccupation with smoking may be both unfounded and dangerous.... because evidence on many critical points is conflicting...and it diverts attention from other suspected hazards.".

The new surgeon general's report is based on no specific new research and contained no startling new conclusions. Its thrust is that the volume of research carried out since the initial surgeon general's report 15 years ago makes all the more certain the conclusion that smoking contributes to cancer, heart disease, bronchitis, emphysema and other ills.

That first report created a furor and led to the now-famous warning printed on each pack of cigarettes sold in the United States: "Warning: The Surgeon General has Determined That Cigarette smoking is Dangerous to Your Health."

Unlike the initial report, the main findings in the new study generally have been reported separately as the research which led to them was completed. Much of the material incorporated in the new report was contained in 10 earlier reports to Congress, the most recent one last fall on the sharp increase in lung cancer among women.

Among the findings reemphasized in the latest report:

-The risk goes up as the amount smoked goes up. For example, two-pack-a-day smokers have a death rate twice as high as nonsmokers. And 30 to 35-year-old smokers can expect to die eight or nine years earlier than a nonsmoker.

-Women are dying from lung cancer at a rate of three times as high as in 1964. The disease may overtake breast cancer as the leading cause of cancer deaths in women "if present trends are not reversed during the next decade."

-Coronary heart disease from smoking causes more premature deaths than lung cancer and other lung diseases.

-Pipe and cigar smokers "experience overall mortality rates that are slightly higher than those of nonsmokers, but at rates substantially lower than those of cigarette smokers."

-Smokers of low tar and nicotine cigarettes run lower risks of lung cancer and coronary heart disease, but "may in fact increase their hazard if they begin smoking more cigarettes or inhaling more deeply."

-Youngsters who smoke may suffer immediate harm in the form of lung damage and respiratory problems.

-90 percent of the people who smoke "have either tried to quit smoking or would probably quit, if only they could find an effective way to do so."

Citing soaring lung cancer rates among women and risks posed to fetuses and newborn babies by smoking mothers, Richmond said the "report's findings have grave public health implications for women of all ages."

The report suggested it may be harder for women to quit smoking, perhaps because they worry more than men about gaining weight.

HEW estimates that although 54 million Americans still smoke, 30 million have quit since 1964, and the percentage of adult smokers has dropped from 42 percent then to an estimated 33 percent in 1978 - "its lowest recorded point in 30 years."

HERE'S GOOD NEWS for sloppy artists. Paint-splattered overalls now qualify as art by virtue of their inclusion in a recent exhibit at San Francisco's De Young Museum. Cabinetmaker Karen Werner looks as if she may be considering similarly "framing" her work jeans.

Solar Power Day Coming

WASHINGTON (AP)—A scientific society says a solar power satellite system may someday be able to supply all of the nation's energy needs - but the idea must be studied at length.

The American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics recommended Wednesday that a five-year, $150 million federal study be conducted to determine the possibility of using satellites to convert the sun's rays to energy. "But a considerable effort is needed to determine its economic, environmental, societal and political viability," the 27,000-member society said in a report.

Copts Celebrate Christmas Sunday

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)— Egypt's seven million Christian copts celebrated Christmas Sunday and prayed with their Pope, Shenouda III, for peace in the Middle East and the world.

Parts of the Mass were shown on local television in a traditional honor to the Christian minority in the predominantly Moslem population. The Copts follow the Julian calendar that makes Christmas Day Jan. 7.

Collecting Laundry Lint Is Love Of Her Life

rtists. Paint- virtue of their rancisco's De erner looks as framing" her

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

PLANDOME MANOR, N.Y. (AP)—Wendy Ward Ehlers is a lady with a glint of mischief in her eye and, she believes, the largest and rarest collection of its kind in all the world.

She collects laundry lint. She also collects rusty nails and used teabags and dried up orange rinds and burnt waffles and other pretty things but it is the lint from her dryer that fires the heart of this housewife-turned-artist.

Lint is really nice stuff, don't you think?" she said. "I began stuffing it in paper bags because I thought it was a shame to throw it away, that something should be done with it."

She does something with it, all right. She makes art pieces.

Some titles of her works: "Booberry on Lint;" "Lint with Dried Red Peppers;" "Ehlers' Homage to Rothko's Homage to Matisse," in lint.

"Booberry," she explained with a straight face, "is breakfast cereal. It tastes ghastly. The children wouldn't eat it, but it is pretty. That work is part of my Serial Series on Cereal." Others in the series are "Trix of Lint" and "Puffed Wheat on Lint."

Wendy Ward Ehlers has done more than 250 such art works. Each is encased in plexiglass, which she cuts and fashions expertly, and each is a spoof of the precious world of art, artists and museums.

Like any serious artist she takes great pains with each piece. "You can't make fun of something unless you do it very well yourself. It took me a year to learn to work plexiglass."

Not long ago her county's Museum of Fine Arts dared to have a showing "From the Private Collection of Wendy Ward Ehlers."

As it happened, it appeared simultaneously with a showing of masterpieces from a famous foundation collection.

"Couldn't have asked for a better setup." Art lovers, in angry letters and phone calls, treated her as though she had profaned a temple.

Collectors, you see, are the prime targets of her burlesque.

Some years back, when her five children were younger, the family custom was to spend a month each summer touring the country in a house trailer.

"It seemed that every museum we visited, every art gallery, was full of collections. Collections of spoons, butterflies, bubble gum cards. The absurdity of it struck me. Are we a people possessed by possessions?

"I thought to myself, ruefully, here I am at 40 and I haven't collected a single thing. Then I thought of my dryer lint."

Voila. A new art form.

Since, Mrs. Ehlers has expanded her palette to include other kitchen debris. Her "Teacups and Used Teabags," is just that. Her "Pheasant Under Plexiglass" is a plate with a pheasant painted on it and decorated with feathers plucked by the artist.

Dryer lint, though, remains her forte.

"My project this year is to start a lint museum. I wrote to 60 celebrities asking for their lint. I guess they didn't take me seriously. Only seven responded."

One who did was Charles Adams, the cartoonist.

He sent not only his dryer lint but, in a separate plastic bag, a small bonus dutifully labeled: "pocket fuzz."

Golf Course Tabbies Get Daily Care

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Edward Jackson is a 75-year-old retired merchant marine sailor who goes to Golden Gate Park golf course every day at 5 a.m. and 2 p.m. But he doesn't swing a club - he goes there to feed the cats who gather around the third and seventh tees.

At each site, Jackson has built four "cat mess halls," including two miniature tree houses made of wooden slats and two on the ground with wooden roofs.

The feedings began four years ago during a round of golf.

"I was playing one day when this scrawny little tabby about a year old, came up to me," he said. "I looked at those funny little sad eyes of hers and I knew she was a stray and that nobody was caring for her so I decided to get her something to eat."

From that cat, Lady Baby, came other strays, along with Lady Baby's kittens. And Jackson fed them all, rain or shine.

Sometimes, in the early morning darkness, patrolling police will ask Jackson what he is up to.

"I always tell them, 'Don't worry. I'm just feeding the cats.' And they go on their way."

In 1971, President Richard Nixon signed a bill requiring able-bodied welfare recipients to sign up for jobs or job training.

Demented Radio Show Thrives

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)- The disc jockey slips the record onto the turntable, puts needle to groove, and out comes the evening's most requested hit:

"I took my fish head out to see a moo-vie, I didn't have to pay to get it in."

It's time for Demented Radio, and your host for the evening, Dr. Demento!

Demento, known to his mother as Barry Hansen, is a balding, 37-year-old man who makes a living by letting America listen to his records. It's a huge collection, 100,000 or so, and the common denominator is comedy.

Dementia, if you prefer.

Hansen hosts a nationally syndicated radio show featuring records you don't ordinarily hear on commercial radio, or anywhere else, for that matter. It's not exactly the Top Pop 100.

Included in his collection - "Fish Heads," with the catchy lyric above, "Flying Purple People Eaters" and the memorable 1895 Sam Quinn recording "Henrietta, Have You Met Her?"

"The purpose of my show is to relax you and get your mind off your troubles for a couple of hours," Hansen says. "I play demented music.

"I play records with no regard whatsoever as to whether they're available in record stores. That's different from most radio shows, which work hand in hand with the record companies, and all you hear are the hit records."

Many of Dr. Demento's best songs are homemade tapes, sent to him by fans with a flair for strange.

"On the national show, the No. 1 hit is a homemade tape called "My Dead Dog Rover," a song that kiddies have been singing for years."

He promptly sings it into the first verse, set to the tune of "I'm Looking Over a Four-Leaf Clover":

"I'm looking over, my dead dog Rover, who I ov'ran with the mower..."

Remember, this is demented radio.

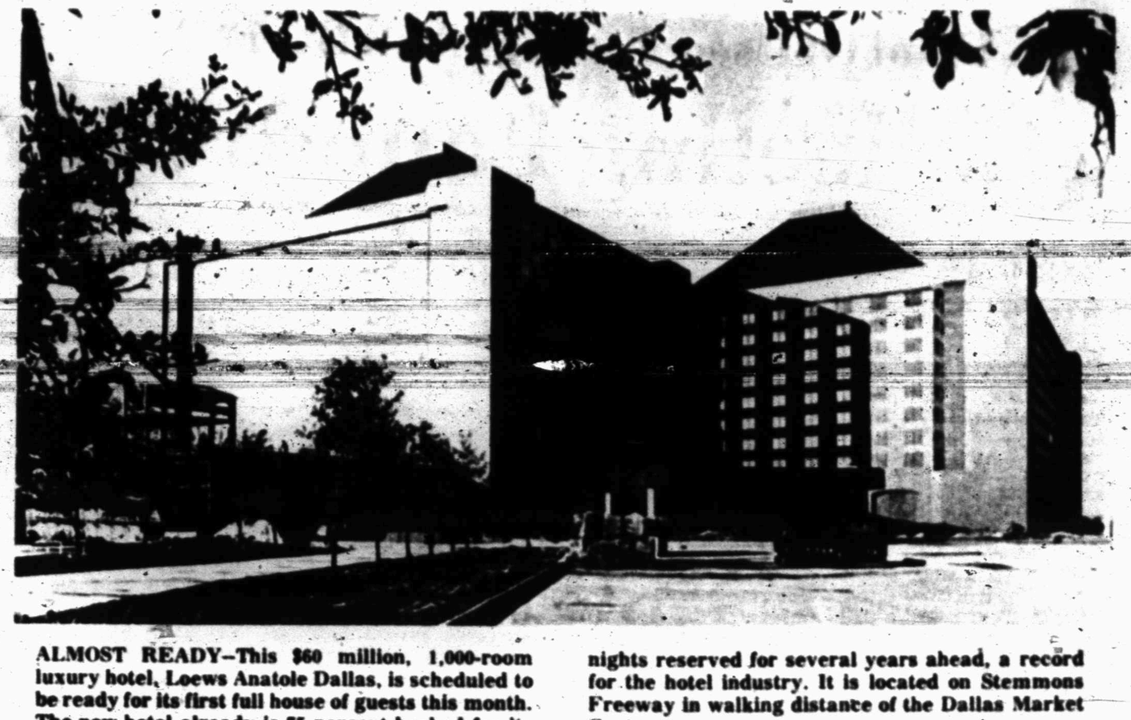
"That's typical of what I do," he says proudly. "That song is by Stu, Dave and Hank."

Hansen became Dr. Demento in the early 70s, back in the beginning days of "underground FM stations," which bucked the usual Top-40 radio format by playing long cuts, and hip, sometimes obscure artists.

Hansen was working as a record company editor when a disc jockey who'd heard of Hansen's collection asked him to do a show on an underground station here.

"I played some of my crazy old records and it lit up the phones, as they say in radio. So, I was asked back again and again and it eventually led to my own show."

Bill Dineen, later an umpire, won three games for the Boston Red Sox against the Pittsburgh Pirates in the 1903 World Series, the first ever played.



ALMOST READY--This $60 million, 1,000-room luxury hotel, Loews Anatole Dallas, is scheduled to be ready for its first full house of guests this month. The new hotel already is 75 percent booked for its entire first year and has more than 1.4 million room nights reserved for several years ahead, a record for the hotel industry. It is located on Stemmons Freeway in walking distance of the Dallas Market Center.

Money Cliches Are Now Only Pennies A Dozen

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)-Back in 1880, the story goes, Secretary of State William M. Evarts showed an English friend where George Washington was supposed to have thrown a dollar across the Potomac.

His friend expressed surprise that Washington was able to throw it that far.

"But, you must remember that a dollar went farther in those days," Evarts is said to have replied.

In these days of inflation, everybody can remember when a dollar "went farther," since it was usually just yesterday. And as inflation grows and grows, as the beast is prone to do, among the victims will be a lot of well-worn cliches.

For example, we could reach the point where a man who calls his girlfriend "my million dollar baby" will be called a cheapskate by the young lady.

Or the man who ends up his day saying resignedly, "another day, another dollar," will have to say something like "another day, another wheelbarrow full of worthless dollars."

And what about that favorite of bombastic orators, "almighty dollar"? What can they say when the dollar isn't "worth a plugged nickel"?

It's already rather insulting to tell somebody "a penny for your thoughts." And if all you've got to contribute is "my two cents' worth" it's probably better to keep your mouth shut.

And "a dollar to a doughnut" may soon be an even bet.

At least one popular game might have to make some revisions to meet the inflation mentality. Whoever heard, in these times, of only getting $200 for passing Go?

Of course, many things have already gone by the board. Remember the days when some wiseacre would answer the telephone by saying, "It's your nickel"? In Washington, D.C., he would already have to say, "It's your 20 cents," which somehow doesn't have the same ring.

If Thomas Riley Marshall were to say today, "What the country needs is a good 5-cent cigar" somebody would probably come back with, "What this country really needs is a good 5-cent nickel."

With inflation eating away savings, such exhortations to thrift as "a penny saved is a penny earned" are likely to be replaced by something like "a dollar spent quickly is a dollar saved."

WTC Plans Concert By Mrs. Kaun

Exercise won't hurt

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if it's harmful to do exercises for the abdomen if one has a fibroid tumor? My doctor says the tumor is not changing and I have nothing to worry about as long as we keep a check on it. I forgot to ask him about exercise and my stomach is getting bigger.

DEAR READER — If you want to maintain the strength of your abdominal muscle, there is no reason you can't do sit-ups and modified leg lift exercises for this purpose. Good muscle tone can help prevent developing a large abdomen.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control, Avoiding the Big Middle. It will give you a more complete description about the exercises you can use and the factors that affect abdominal girth. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There is no reason that the types of exercises described in the Health Letter I am sending you would affect the fibroid tumor of your uterus in any way. You must understand, though, that your abdomen will not get smaller as long as you are building fat inside the abdomen. That's why it is important that a woman who is gaining weight must eliminate the obesity if she wants to slim down her abdomen.

The fibroid tumor is much in the same category as the fat. There is no way the exercise can reduce its size or the effect it'll have on your girth. If your fibroid tumor is enlarging enough to cause a significant enlargement in your abdomen, I suspect your doctor may wish to reconsider what he wants to do about it. As long as it remains small and doesn't produce symptoms, the present course is certainly a prudent one.

Fibroid tumors can enlarge and cause pressure upon the bladder, bowels and produce other symptoms. These are mechanical symptoms and if it becomes necessary to remove the fibroid tumor, the symptoms can be eliminated.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could a forceps delivery in which the child's head was badly misshapen have contributed to a learning disability? He also had 11 concussions by the time he was 16. If these factors were significant in causing brain damage, is there anything that medical science can do to repair such damage?

DEAR READER — Yes, birth injuries can damage the brain. That's one of the reasons doctors don't like for women to be in prolonged difficult labor.

Any physical injury to the head can cause brain damage. It's a common complication of an automobile accident in which there is a head injury. A person who has done a lot of boxing may develop symptoms from that. After a head injury you could even end up with a scarred area in the brain which could be a cause of epilepsy thereafter. I should add that many cases of epilepsy occur that are not associated with brain damage.

What can be done about brain damage? It depends on what the symptoms are. If you have epilepsy because of the brain injury, the usual medicines that are used to prevent or control convulsions, of course, are helpful. So to answer your question, it depends on what the disorder is that's related to the brain damage.

There certainly is a limit to what can be done to improve people's intelligence medically, but as most of my readers know there are medicines that can be used to help in some cases of learning disorders. A good example here might be a child who has learning problems because of being a hyperactive child.

Willie Misses Football Games

ATLANTA (AP)—Instead of stretching out his 45-pound frame and watching the National Football League playoffs on Sunday, Willie B. just stared at the empty space where his color television used to be.

The $400 television was stolen Saturday - three days after it was installed in the Atlanta Zoo's primate house.

Football was one of the first things the 20-year-old African lowland gorilla had watched "and he was very interested in it," said zoo spokeswoman Pat Dann.

She said Willie knew the television was gone when he saw the empty space where it had been. "I was absolutely amazed by the expression on his face," Ms. Dann said. "I just felt absolutely sick."

Ms. Dann said a $400 reward had been offered for information leading to the arrest of the thieves.

Man Impaled With Plank

LOS ANGELES (AP)- Hospital officials look at Jose Olmos and shake their heads. The 42-year-old Paramount, Calif., man had pulled through surgery after he was impaled by an 8-foot-long plank in an industrial accident.

On Tuesday, a nurse said Olmos was "just great," one day after the board went into his left chest and out his right shoulder. Olmos, an employee at a mobile home manufacturer, was feeding lumber into a saw when it kicked the board back into him. Emma Farmer, a nurse at USC Medical Center, said the 1½-by-1¼-inch piece missed Olmos' vital organs.

"We all look at him and say how lucky he was," she said.

Widow Asks For Pancho's Pardon

McALLEN (AP)—Sixty-three years after her marauding husband rode north of the Rio Grande, Mrs. Pancho Villa has returned to the United States to ask that the famous Mexican bandito be forgiven.

The bed-ridden Maria Luz Corral de Villa, 84 and in ill health, came to this South Texas border town by air ambulance Wednesday to present a pardon request to U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas.

"People of good will will remember the unfortunate invasions of my husband's army against the people of the United States," her formal request, to be presented to de la Garza today, states.

"I ask that he be exonerated for his act of war against the United States on that dark page of his history at Columbus, N.M."

It was at 2:30 a.m. on March 9, 1916, that Villa - variously acclaimed as a patriot and a bandit - led his army across the border. The invaders headed for the U.S. cavalry garrison in the New Mexico town and left a trail of death along the route.

The town was left in flames.

"With this act, Pancho Villa and his men are recorded in history as the only Army to have invaded the United States in this century," the pardon request says.

Mrs. Villa lives in a meager home in Chihuahua, Mexico, now. A small museum attached to the house includes memorabilia from her husband's checkered career.

The elderly woman speaks little English, but did say she was glad to be north of the border.

"My husband liked the children, he liked the poor people and he liked the old people," she said in Spanish.

Mrs. Villa was placed on a stretcher upon arrival here and taken to a local hotel. She will remain in the Rio Grande Valley for this week's premier of "She Came To The Valley" - a movie that includes some of Villa's escapades in the area.

Villa was pursued across the border by Gen. John J. Pershing after the New Mexico attack. But he was never captured. Villa was killed in 1926.

"I feel my husband committed an injustice to our friends of the United States," the request says. "I humbly ask for this pardon not only for the good name of Pancho Villa but to further cement the good relations between our two great countries."

Though previously branded as an outlaw in Mexico, Villa was pardoned in 1976 and his remains were placed in Mexico City in Monument of the Revolution.

Sol Marroquin, a de la Garza aide who helped arrange Mrs. Villa's trip, said the congressman might seek a congressional resolution exonerating Villa.

More than 60 percent of all Americans now carry credit cards, compared with only half of the total population in 1970, reports Lillian Chenoweth, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The Snyder Tigers have surprised a lot of folks this season. They'll be trying it for keeps Friday.

Ranked third in the state and boasting a 19-4 record, Coach Jack Stephenson's charges open the District 3-3A season in Lamesa tomorrow at 8 p.m. The contest will be preceded by a junior varsity tilt.

"But the rankings and a 19-4 record don't mean a thing if we don't go over there and win," points out Stephenson, in his third year as coach of the team.

Lamesa sports a 12-6 record going into the crucial contest.

The reasons for Snyder's success are many. Stephenson has cited the great play of Greg Hinton and floor leader Sid Everton, the efforts of Brad Richardson and the rapidly improving Mike Hick as reasons.

Perhaps his greatest strength is depth.

"I feel like there are 10 guys I can put out there who will really get the job done," he says. "We are two and, in places, three deep at every position."

A good shooting average - something the team was inconsistant on last year - has also been a big factor. The Tigers average 48 percent from the field and 60 percent from the line. Kyle Short and Eric Arnold led the individual free shot averages with 72 and 80 percent respectively. Short also accounts for 4.69 assists a game behind only Everton, who leads with 5.6.

One of the biggest surprises is the increase in scoring talent (over last year) from Hinton and Everton. Hinton has averaged 16.95 points per game, while Everton - always a floor leader but never before a whiz at popping the net - has averaged 12.09.

Sophomore standout Richardson has managed 15.7 points per effort, and leads the team in rebounds with a per-game total of 7.23.

With that trio averaging in double figures, and [illegible] Crayton at 7.73, David Jackson at 7.0 and Short at 6.04, the Tigers offer a per game figure of 75.1 points.

And finally, defense has been a key to the Tiger machine. A hawking press - which averages over 19.1 steals and 4 offensive fouls a game - has demoralized many an opponent.

A total team effort is the easiest way to sum up Snyder's success. Attitude is important.

"I like them to be a little cocky," muses Stephenson. "Not overconfident, but confident they can beat a lot of people."

They'll begin a "second-season" Friday - trying to do just that.

Henderson Says He's Ready For Pittsburgh...

'Hollywood' Takes In The Spotlight

DALLAS (AP)—Hollywood Henderson was loving it.

It was the first day of Super Bowl XIII practice and the brash one himself was the center of attention at the Dallas Cowboy practice field.

Lights glinted off his numerous gold necklaces as television cameras and photographers crowded around.

"Look menacing, Hollywood," a photographer requested.

Hollywood looked menacing.

As his teammates quietly dressed around him, Henderson, the Cowboy strongside linebacker, held court.

The questions came rapid fire.

"Would Pittsburgh choke like Los Angeles?"

"Does Pittsburgh have class?"

Thomas Henderson, never the diplomat, said "The Steelers are intimadators. They are leading the league in penalties. We have to take the same approach they did when we played them in Super Bowl X.

We have to give them a dose of their own medicine.

"I will be a renegade in the game. I'm not leaving the field. I'm the outlaw. I'm on every team you can think of. I wish I could play offense. They are going to look on that field and see No. 56. They are going to have to think No. 56. They are going to have to stop him."

Then he added, glancing down at his shirt "If you ain't for Dallas you ain't for B-L-E-E-P" T-Shirt, and said "They know how tough I am."

Nearby teammates never looked up.

Asked about Henderson's outspokeness, defensive tackle Larry Cole laughed. "Well, Thomas has to live with what he says and does."

Center John Fitzgerald said "That's the way Thomas plays. If he talked and didn't play it would B-L-E-E-P me off. That's his style...he can do what he wants as long as he plays football."

Westerners Bid For ABC Title

BIG SPRING–Coach Nolan Richardson's Western Texas College Westerners are scheduled to play McMurry at 9 tonight in round one of the ABC Tournament here.

The three-day, four-team "classic" will be held in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The tournament, barring an upset, is expected to be highlighted on Saturday night, when the Westerners challenge Midland College at 9. Both squads - members of the WJCAA conference - are 4-0 in loop play. The tournament however, has no bearing on the conference standings.

Opening the annual tourney will be a 7 p.m. game between host Howard College and Midland. Friday's fare, with games at 7 and 9, will feature in order Midland versus McMurry and WTC versus Howard College.

Howard will take on McMurry in the first game Saturday night.

Sideline Glances...

Football Notes

By BILL McCLELLAN

WE'D LIKE to applaud several members of last year's Tiger Football squad who were named to the Avalanche-Journal South Plains AAA Team recently.

Baron Land, senior, was named to the first team offense, while Morris Anderson was selected to the first team defense. Anderson is a sophomore. Making the second unit offensive team were quarterback Clay Johnson, tailback Richard Crayton, end Mitch Mackey and tight end Scott Crenwelge, all seniors.

GREAT HONOR

BEING NAMED to such status is a great honor, and a well-deserved one for Coach Mike Jenkins' charges, who advanced to the bi-district playoffs.

In our opinion, many other players on the championship team deserve special recognition, too. The varsity coaching staff - in fact, the entire athletic program at Snyder High School - deserves praise.

NOT THE MANPOWER

WE'VE BEEN asked on occasion why The Snyder Daily News doesn't compile such a team, or why it doesn't give more recognition of other releases such as the Avalanche-Journal All South Plains Team.

Simply, it is a matter of manpower. It's not exactly fair, we feel, to list our choices of an All-Whatever team because we are not equipped to cover a wide area and see as many individuals as we'd like too. Larger papers - such as the Journal - are better equipped, though many of their choices are based on speculation, coaches' reports and statistics, and don't always take into consideration talented players on teams which had a poor season, or the caliber of opposition a player has met with.

THE BEST

DESPITE SUCH articles compiled by the larger papers, we feel that The Snyder Daily News has given more complete football coverage to this area (Snyder, Roby, Rotan, Hermleigh, Hobbs, Borden County, Colorado City and Ira) than any other news source.

Occasional features and minor game coverage can't compare to the postgame, pregame and mid-week articles and insights, plus photos, provided by local coverage. From the letters and "street talk" we've received, it is apparent that the community agrees with us.

ALL CHAMPIONS

WHILE IT is obvious that a few players on any team will standout above his or her teammates, we believe that each football, baseball and volleyball player has helped contribute to the team's success.

Our congratulations go out then, to the individuals - and the teams.

Sims Cops O'Brien Award

FORT WORTH (AP)—When Billy Sims learned recently he had won the Davy O'Brien Award, "It didn't faze me much. I didn't know much about Davey O'Brien."

Since then, he says. "I have found out about him. To me, this award means just as much as the Heisman. I hope some day it will be as big as the Heisman."

Sims, who won the Heisman Trophy for his performance with the Oklahoma Sooners this past season, appeared at the Fort Worth Club Wednesday night to receive the second annual Davey O'Brien Award.

Texas' Earl Campbell won the first award, presented to the player voted by sports writers as the best football player in the five southwestern states of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana. Like Sims, Campbell also won the Heisman.

Hogs Locked With Aggies

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M and Arkansas have moved into a first-place tie with Texas Tech in the early Southwest Conference basketball race, and Guy Lewis is trying to get over what he terms "the most embarrassing moment of my life."

Tenth-ranked Arkansas nailed down its 10th win without a loss Wednesday night, riding Sidney Moncrief's 23 points to a 79-66 victory over Rice.

And 11th-ranked Texas A&M exploited a frigid 7 pecent shooting performance by Houston in the second half for a 69-43 conquest, the third in five days by SWC opponents over the Cougars on their home court.

Tech, A&M and Arkansas lead the league with 2-0 marks. Texas is 2-1, Baylor 1-1, Rice 1-2, SMU 0-1, TCU 0-2 and Houston 0-3. Baylor plays Tech at Lubbock in tonight's only game involving SWC schools.

Houston's full-court press harassed Texas A&M into 14 first-half turnovers Wednesday night, and the Aggies led only 39-38 at the half.

But Houston then collapsed. The Cougars scored only five points the second half, going the last 11:54 of the game without scoring as the Aggies ripped off the final 19 points, turning a 50-43 lead into a runaway.

"This is the most embarrassing moment of my life. I'm embarrassed for myself, the fans and my team," a downcast Lewis said, hanging his head as he talked with writers after Houston's loss to the Aggies.

Duo Leads Hope Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. —Bob Murphy carded a 7-under-par 65 and shared the first-round lead with veteran Charles Coody in the $275,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

John Mahaffey, the PGA champion, was in second place, one shot back.

JUMP SHOT–Duster freshman Joyce Plagens shoots over two Tarleton State players in WTC basketball action here yesterday. Defending are Jackie Rose (41) - a former Duster - and May. The Dusters lost the game, 66-64 in the final seconds, making it six games WTC girls have lost by a total of nine points. They will host Abilene Christian University at 3 p.m. Saturday in WTC Gym. (SDN STAFF PHOTO)

Dusters Defeated In Final Seconds

Yesterday's Duster contest here was a unpredicitable as Snyder's weather in the waning moments, but the Tarleton State Tex-Anns finally put on the freeze that iced the game, 66-64.

The loss gives Coach Joe Cushing's team a 7-8 mark for the season, with hopes of bouncing back to .500 when Abilene Christian University comes calling Saturday.

It was obvious that the month-long holiday break took it's toll on both squads, but the Dusters seemed just a tick more out of timing. Workouts this week had been disrupted when icy highways stranded several players out of town, and co-captain Karen Williams was unable to make the game at all.

Two miscues and a number of fouls within the final seconds finished off the local squad, which had come from behind to take a slight lead.

On a Duster upsurge, Joyce Peden put the Dusters ahead late in the game with a pair of free-throws, 58-57.

Peden aided in two more scores as she ripped off the Tex-Anns on back-to-back occasions. Nodia Vaughn made the first pay off on a layup. She then tossed to Katie Fisher who scored two more to give WTC a 62-57 lead.

But the Tex-Anns rallied back to cut the margin 62-59, and with 3:30 remaining, both squads traded rebounds before Joyce Plagens put Tarleton's May on the line with a foul. May basketed both free shots, trimming the margin to 62-61.

WTC still appeared in good shape seconds later as Fisher scored two points and Plagens stole the ball on the Tex-Anns' bring-down, but the 5-8 Rankin freshman was whistled for another foul under the Duster basket.

Again it was May at the line, and true to form, the Tex-Anns player ripped the net on both ends of the effort, cutting WTC's lead to 64-63.

The Dusters had several opportunities to score before the final gun. A Vaughn shot from underneath the basket rolled over and out with 41 seconds to play, and Fisher was called for fouling on the rebound.

Tarleton's Smith made good on the shots, putting the visitors ahead 65-64, and setting up the first late-game Duster miscue.

The Tex-Anns, taking advantage of a quick bring-down, intercepted WTC's toss, and held possession until Belva Marsh purposely fowled Riggo with 16 seconds left.

Riggo hit one end of the one-and-one situation to push Tarleton's lead to 66-64, but WTC garnered the rebound on the second effort and headed downcourt for a tying score.

Again, however, the Dusters got ripped off - the ball lost somewhere in a maze of blue and white shirted players - and Tarleton held out for the victory.

Both teams had a share of steals in the contest, but the Dusters paid the price for a number of sluggish passes - easily tipped away by the quick Tex-Anns. May led the Tarleton scoring effort with 16 points, but Smith and Dunlap - who garnered most of her points with a near hook-like style - added 14 each.

Fisher scored 17 behind Vaughn's effort for WTC.

In all, the free throw line became a major difference in the contest as Tarleton hit 16 of 21 for 76 percent and WTC went 12 of 24 for 50. The Tex-Anns managed 25 of 54 shots from the field, while the hosts scored 25 of 58.

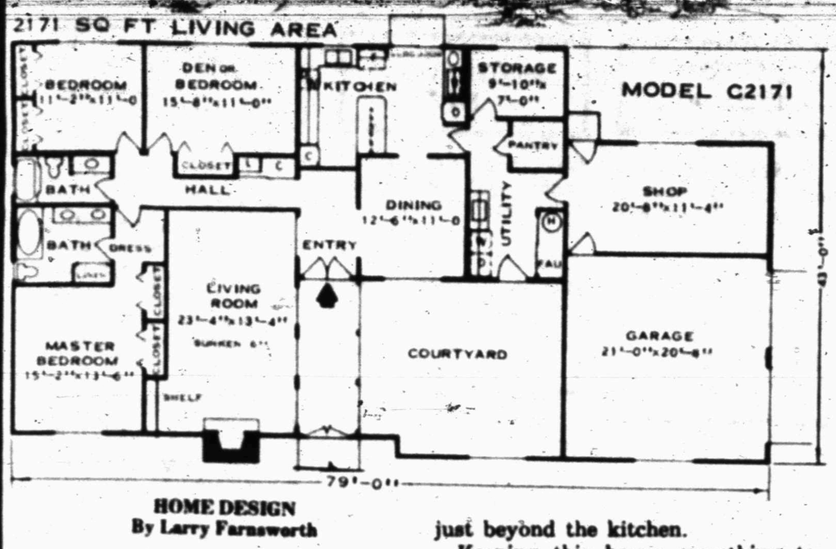
Spanish Southwest



HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

This attractive, three bedroom contemporary plan, with a feel of the Spanish Southwest in its charming exterior details, offers any house proud homeowner full justification for being that way. And its efficient floor plan includes everything needed for owners who take their homeowning seriously.

Check the charming exterior details — the wrought iron gates leading to an exciting entry courtyard, the gracious lines of that tiled-edged rock roof, the just-right accent of that distinctive chimney.

Inside the central entry, its just a step to either the big, beautiful living room with its wonderful, focal point — that great fireplace, or the charming, formal dining room with its delightful courtyard view.

The kitchen, at the rear of the house, with sliding glass doors providing a beautiful view of grounds and gardens, offers three walls of counters and cabinets plus a handy and practical island dining counter. But for even more practicality, take a good look at that homemakers operational center just beyond the kitchen.

Keeping this house something to, indeed, be proud of is amazingly simple when you have something like the large utility area offered here. Besides the usual laundry room equipment, this home command center also provides space for a separate pantry and offers also a big storage room. Note its convenient courtyard entrance, too.

As if this weren't enough, there's another convenience offered for the seriously dedicated homeowner — a big, separate workshop, situated just behind the large garage with convenient access to the garage, the utility area and back yard.

The three bedrooms at the far side of the house show equally good planning. Their closets are ample; their location insures privacy and quiet. Note, too, the practical back-to-back location of the main bath and that delightful twin-lavatoried bath serving the master bedroom.

Friendly Congressmen Get Aid From Special Interest Groups

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Thirteen congressmen who helped kill a federal no-fault car insurance bill in committee received $28,600 in contributions from the political fund-raising arm of the trial lawyers' association, a leading opponent of the bill.

Two dairy industry groups donated $110,750 to members of the House Agriculture Committee, which helps decide milk price supports and other issues worth millions of dollars to dairy farmers.

The trucking industry's political action committee contributed to the campaigns of two-thirds of the members of the House subcommittee that will handle deregulation of the $31 billion trucking industry.

The chief political fund-raising committee of the marine engineers' union donated $1,000 or more each to 24 of 36 members of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee who sought re-election. The committee handles shipping legislation, and one member, citing a conflict of interest, sent his contribution back.

These contributions and thousands of others mark a growing trend in congressional campaigns - heavy financial support for candidates by political action committees, the campaign fundraising arms of businesses, unions and professional associations.

These political action committees - known as PACs - now number more than 1,700 and are allowed by law to give candidates up to $5,000 per election. Last year, they donated an estimated $40 million, raised through voluntary donations. Two years ago, the amount was $24 million.

Common Cause, which calls itself a citizens' lobby and researches and publicizes what it believes are government abuses, refers to the PAC contributions "the buying of Congress."

"The greater the growth of PACs in the political process, the less reason citizens have to believe their interests are going to be part of the decision-making process," says Fred Wertheimer, Common Cause vice president.

Common Cause gets most of its money from $15 year memberships and does not contribute to political campaigns. It advocates a system of partial public financing to reduce the influence of special interest money on elections. However, the prospect for passage of such public financing in this budget-conscious Congress is not considered good.

Most PAC officials say the current system of making contributions encourages "broad-based" participation in the political process.

Some PAC officials also contend their donations are needed to protect their interests in Congress against competing interests that also contribute money to candidates.

In the House, much of the campaign money was directed to key committee and subcommittee chairmen, and PACs generally focused attention on committees dealing with their special areas of interest.

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, won a tough re-election fight in November, helped by $67,300 from political action committees representing agricultural interests.

Foley says he favors public financing for congressional but has "no apologies to make" for accepting the money. He says he "never accepted any strings attached" to contributions and is "not going to give any individual or group special consideration."

Four ranking members of the House Banking Committee received a total of nearly $100,000 from financial, insurance and housing interests that are affected by legislation handled by the committee.

Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions supervision, regulation and insurance, was given $37,475 by political action groups representing interests affected by Banking Committee actions.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., committee chairman, reported $23,600 from such groups; Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the housing and community development subcommittee, received $21,300; and Rep. William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., chairman of the economic stabilization subcommittee, got $17,200.

Cash Bonuses Offered Army, Guard Enlistees

DALLAS-A cash bonus of $1,500, or up to $2,000 in educational assistance will be offered to non-prior service volunteers who enlist for six years in the National Guard or the Army Reserve, DoD officials have announced.

A re-enlistment bonus of $1,800 for six years or $900 for three years is also available under the new Reserve Selected Incentive Program.

The enlistment incentives are offered in certain "selected units," Lieutenant Colonel Harlin L. Fenn, Jr., Commander of the U.S. Army Dallas District Recruiting Command explained.

The program is designed to increase the strength of those units "most critical to the Army's mobilization mission," he further stated. These include combat units such as infantry and armor and support elements such as aviation, signal, engineer and transportation.

"Volunteers must choose either the cash bonus or the educational aid at the time of enlistment," LTC Fenn said.

Seven hundred fifty dollars of the cash bonus will be paid upon completion of basic training and advanced individual training. At the end of the second and third year, a $200 payment will be made. The balance of $350 will be paid at the end of the fourth year.

Educational assistance pays a portion of education expenses incurred for instruction at an accredited institution during the period of the enlistment. There is a limit of $500 per year or 50 percent of the reservist's expenses, whichever is less, for a total of $2,000 for the six year enlistment.

This assistance will be provided until the reservist earns a bachelors degree or the equivalent from an accredited institution, or until completion of the six year enlistment, whichever occurs first.

Soldiers with less than six years of service at expiration of term of service must re-enlist for six years to obtain the $1,800 bonus. Soldiers with at least six but not more than eight years of service may re-enlist for either three years ($900) bonus or six years ($1,800 bonus).

Soldiers with more than eight but not more than nine years service must re-enlist for either three or six years but will receive a bonus of $900 even if the length of re-enlistment is over three years.

Half the re-enlistment bonus will be paid on the effective date of re-enlistment. The remainder will be paid in increments of $150 at the end of each year of the term.

"This is the first time cash bonuses have been offered to reserve volunteers. Re-enlistment bonuses were offered last year on a test basis and results were promising," LTC Fenn concluded.

Further information may be obtained at your nearest Army Recruiting Station.

Course Examines World Religions

What makes people act the way they do? One very important influence is the religious faith of the individual, Gary Lowe, director of the Christian Student Center at Western Texas College, said.

The mass suicide-murder at Jonestown recently reminds us that not everyone thinks the same, Lowe added, and it also warns us to examine the objects of our devotion.

The suicidal devotion by cult members at Jonestown has parallels in the histories of several religions. For the Japanese warrior, honor was more valued than life itself. The Kamikazi pilot of World War II was following the ancient Bushido code of the Shinto religion when he sacrificed his life for the emperor, for example.

Shinto is one of the major world religions which students will examine in History of Religion (REL 131) at WTC during the spring semester. Lowe will teach the course, with classes meeting from 9:55-11:10 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The goals for the course are, first, to introduce the student to the basic history, sacred literature, worship, and teachings of the world's major faiths, and, second, to help the students see the influence these faiths have on world culture. Several films and filmstrips will be used to supplement the textbook, bringing the textual material nearer for the students to examine in added dimension.

This course is not offered every semester at WTC, so those interested are urged to enroll this spring semester. Registration is scheduled next Monday and Tuesday, with classes beginning on Wednesday. Persons wishing details about History of Religion may contact Lowe at the Christian Student Center.

CLAYTON

Clayton's rule changes included:

Creation of a new Committee on Government Organization to handle all bills relating to state agencies that will expire automatically in 1980 unless their lives are extended by the Legislature this year.

Establishment of new committees on health, human services and "sanctions and security" to replace the old health and welfare and social services committees. The Sanctions and Security Committee will deal with such things as prisons, parole and reform schools.

Allowing members of the House Appropriations Committee to serve on other committees.

Requiring committees to file "Regulatory Impact Statements" when they approve bills giving state agencies new rulemaking power. The statements would have to justify the new authority and, if possible, tell the added cost to government and industry.

The Sam Houston Caucus, a loosely knit group of liberals, Republicans and a sprinkling of conservative Democrats, began meeting during last summer's special legislative session.

Uniting them was a conviction that Clayton was becoming autocratic and not listening to the House, beyond a select few friends and allies.

Caucus members and some associated with them tried several times to amend Clayton's rules, getting no more than 60 votes and watching their total steadily decline.

Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, tried twice to establish a lottery system for ranking each member within his seniority class for committee assignments.

Another caucus member, Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, joined Maloney in the fight and asserted that representatives don't even know how they are ranked with members of like seniority.

"You and I are in the same class. What number are you?" he asked Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, who sponsored Clayton's rules resolution.

"I really don't know," Davis said, adding that it never had created problems for him.

Maloney's amendment was defeated, 82-57.

Hunter Satellite Ban Talks Set

WASHINGTON (AP)— The United States and the Soviet Union will renew talks Jan. 23 in Bern, Switzerland, in an effort to ban satellites capable of hunting down and destroying other satellites.

The two superpowers are searching for a way of halting development of the satellites, which could be used to destroy another nation's surveillance and communications satellites.

CHOICES

Karen Blaker Ph.D.

No laughing matter

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — All my friends are sure something is wrong with me because I am so superstitious.

Not only do I avoid walking under ladders and get upset when a black cat crosses my path. I also believe I must never talk in glowing terms about anything I really want because it will only be taken away. That makes me always sound very negative.

And I never violate the sayings I learned as a child.

For example, my boyfriend is leaving town this week to spend a few months with his ailing mother. Even though he says he will write and miss me, I was taught, "Out of sight, out of mind." I know he will forget about me.

As a result, I have completely turned him off. Why should I stay involved when I will only get hurt? My friends think I am crazy to throw away such a good relationship for such a stupid reason.

I was shocked when they suggested I write to you for advice. For years they have been laughing at my silly behavior. I was sure my superstitious ways were quite entertaining. Now I am insecure and mixed up.

DEAR READER — Your friends might have been initially entertained by your superstitions or they might have been laughing because your behavior made them uncomfortable.

Whatever the reason, they now have made themselves clear. They seem to feel it is self-destructive for you to live by superstitions and meaningless sayings.

I agree. Sayings are hardly definitive enough to serve as a basis for life. There is one for every side of an issue.

Why, for example, did you base your actions with your boyfriend on the saying, "Out of sight, out of mind"? You could just as easily have chosen, "Absence makes the heart grows fonder."

If you choose the saying to fit each situation, we might conclude that you make a choice — in this case, withdrawing from your boyfriend — and then blame it on a saying instead of taking responsibility for your action. You are making choices but not acknowledging them to yourself.

Superstitions serve the same purpose. They give you something — other than yourself — to blame or thank when you have a streak of bad or good "luck."

I am glad your friends were able to convince you that your behavior is no laughing matter. Now you no longer have to keep up the routine for them. You are free to change.

If, as your letter leads me to believe, you have been using this behavior for a number of years, you will probably need professional counseling to break with the past.

But you will have to make the first move because, as the old saying goes, "You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink."

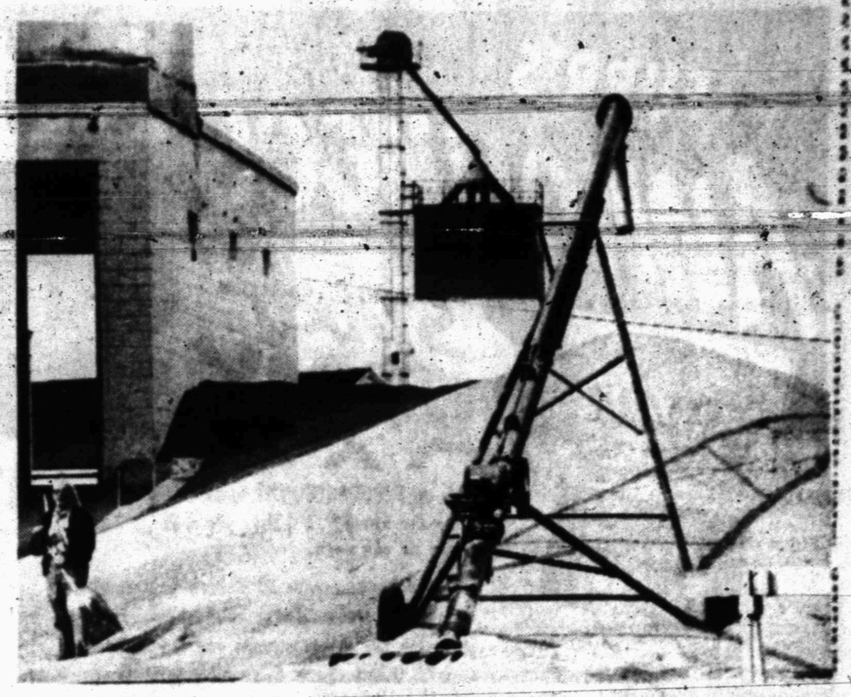
LAFF-A-DAY

"I wonder what they're paying those guys now."



HERBERT BENSON GOT some early practice at snow shoveling when 60,000 bushels of corn were dumped in the streets of his Minnesota town. The reason for the mountain of corn was a large harvest that filled the small farming community's grain elevator.

Theft Case Under Probe

A theft, a criminal mischief, and a minor traffic accident were investigated by city police Wednesday.

The theft report was made by Allen Gleghorn who told officers someone took the rocker arm cover off his motorcycle. He set his loss at $80, and said the incident occurred between Dec. 25 and Jan. 9.

A $200 windshield was broken on a van parked at 320 32nd St., reported J.C. Schwartz. The incident is alleged to have occurred Jan. 9 or Jan. 10.

The traffic mishap occurred in a parking lot at the Scurry County Courthouse about 10:45 a.m. yesterday. It involved, reports show, a 1975 Chevrolet driven by Eloisa Fuentes and a parked 1978 Ford owned by N.L. McCullough Co.

Media Barred From Hearing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)- A judge has signed an order barring the public and media from a Jan. 17 hearing for Dan White, the ex-city supervisor accused in the Nov. 27 murders of Major George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

White's attorney, Douglas Schmidt, requested the closed hearing Tuesday. His client has pleaded innocent to the murder charges, but Schmidt said he reserves the right to change the plea later to innocent by reason of insanity.
