

MISS OLTON 1964 -- DANA SPEER

Dana Speer Is Crowned 'Miss Olton' For 1964

Dana Speer, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Speer, is Miss Olton for 1964.

The new Miss Olton, replacing Cheryl Poteet in the position, bested nine other Olton beauties for the title.

Jan George, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon George, was first runner-up, and Nancy Brigrance, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Brigrance, was second runner-up.

Gayle Gunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gunter Jr., and Donna Smith, daughter of Mrs. Eva Smith, two 16-year-olds, completed the five semi-finalists in the Friday beauty pageant, sponsored by the Kimichi Club.

Cheryl Poteet crowned her successor to climax the event, which was emceed by Basil Sherman.

Little Miss Olton and Mr. Muscles were presented at the Miss Olton pageant, though they were selected the night before. Mr. Muscles is Cleve Keating, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Keating. Little Miss Olton is Kanetha Hysinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hysinger.

The Little Miss Olton and Mr. Muscles contests were also sponsored by Kimichi Club. Mrs. Harlan Carson, president, D. M. "Bub" Holt emceed the younger folks contests.

Miss Olton for 1963, Cheryl Poteet, is presently entered in two area beauty contests--Miss Grain Sorghum of the Nation, Aug. 8 in Dimmitt and Wheatheart of the Nation, Aug. 22 in Perryton.

Miss Olton of 1964, Dana Speer, is a sophomore at Texas Technological College in Lubbock.

ORC Meet Set

Members of the Olton Recreation Center will have a chance to learn more about the why's and wherefores behind the raise in their membership dues.

The general membership meeting is being called by board of directors to explain just what the effect of a court ruling will be on ORC members. The court ruled that the ORC is subject to a 20 per cent federal excise tax on dues, as a matter of fact, paid since Dec. 1, 1960.

The tax is now being included in ORC dues, and members will be billed for the past tax at a later date.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 18, in the school cafeteria.

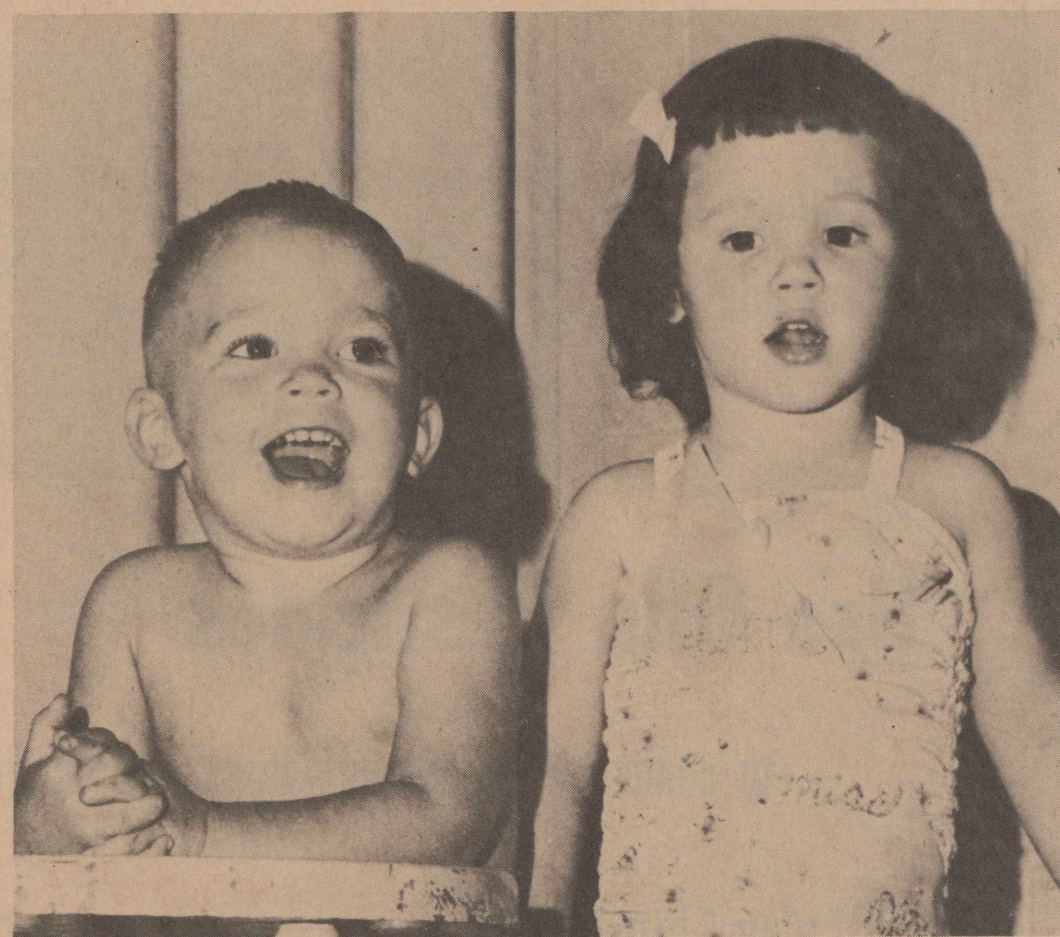

A member of Pi Beta Phi, she is majoring in history and minoring in Spanish. A 1963 graduate of Olton High School, she was on the Dean's Honor Roll at Texas Tech for her grades during the spring semester.

During her freshman year at the Lubbock college, she was selected one of ten Tech Beauties and was an ROTC Sweetheart.

She is also a past Olton Lions Club Sweetheart and Queen.

Miss Olton, who displays both beauty and brains--each at the proper time, all the time--said of winning the 1964 title, "I'm really excited about it."

She does, however, have a full-time job in addition to her Miss Olton duties. She is working toward becoming a junior at Texas Tech.

YOUNGER WINNERS -- Also presented at the Miss Olton pageant were Mr. Muscles, Cleve Keating, and Little Miss Olton, Kanetha Hysinger.

INVESTIGATION IS CONTINUING

Two investigations of recent Olton events currently are underway.

Fire Marshal David Maxey is continuing his investigation into a fire a week and a half ago in the L. A. Marshall home. Maxey has been joined in the investigation by investigators from the state fire marshal's office and the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Police Chief Emmett Burrows is still continuing his investigation into the burglary a week ago of Cashway Food. Approximately $2500 was lost in the burglary--both goods and money.

Both investigators said they would continue their work until several still unanswered questions are answered to their satisfaction.

Potato Worker Hurt In Mishap

A 17-year-old farm laborer, Eddie James Douglas, was injured about noon Tuesday when he got his foot caught in a potato picker while working on the J. T. Tollett farm north of Olton.

When asked how the accident happened, Tollett said that they were working about noon in the field. He said, "We were going to load one more trailer and then go eat."

At the time of the accident, the picker was stopped in the field, but still running. Tollett said that the tractor-pulled machine was at a full stop and they were "just emptying the machine into the trailer."

Douglas was standing on the front of the picker, and he apparently swung his foot into the chain drive for the picker.

The picker is operated from a power take-off on the tractor and is completely driven by the one chain.

The chain does have a spring-loaded idler on it, and the idler apparently kicked the chain off its sprocket when Douglas got his foot caught in it. The foot was caught between the chain and the sprocket drive on the shaft from the tractor.

The chain passed over the middle of Douglas's shoe and trapped the boy. The back of the shoe was torn from the sole when the chain came off the sprocket and kicked the foot free.

Brought to Community Clinic in Olton for treatment, Douglas had a badly mashed foot. However, doctors said that the foot could probably be saved if there were no complications, according to Tollett.

Tollett said that there was no guard on the chain because no one thought anyone could get his foot into it. A guard was around the chain on the picker Wednesday, making it almost impossible to see the chain, and making it completely impossible to reach the chain from the platform at the front of the machine.

Farm Labor Area School Is Boosted

The problem, as summed up by Leo Smith, is that "the need for qualified, trained help to operate farm machinery in this area is critical."

The answer might be a farm labor school in the area. Farm labor schools are sponsored by the Department of Labor and are financed from federal funds.

The nearest such school to Olton is over in Lamesa, according to Smith.

The schools provide both classroom and on-the-farm training of farm laborers. Those attending the school receive an allotment from the government to help them stay in the school until the training is completed.

Smith said that such a school in the Olton area "wouldn't hurt anything and could help a lot." He said that often the only way an area farmer could obtain qualified help to run some of his machinery was to take time out and train somebody for the job.

If enough local interest is shown for the location of a farm labor school in the area, the project is taken to the state employment office in Littlefield. Littlefield then contacts the Department of Labor, and, hopefully, arranges for the school to be located around Olton.

Smith said that any area farmers having any questions about or interest in a farm labor school in the area could find out more about the program and what it would mean to the Olton area by contacting either him or Owen Norfleet.

Cucumber Harvest Moving Along; Yields High

Olton's cucumber crop, less than half the size it was last year, is moving right along.

Last year 750 acres of cucumbers were contracted in the area. This year the contracted crop is only 330 acres.

But averaging 25,000 pounds per acre, the area crop should run well over 8,000,000 pounds. And at 50 pounds per bushel, production should be around 165,000 bushels.

And that's a lot of pickles. Clovis Poteet estimated that the 1964 cucumber crop, which is about a third harvested, would

HAVE A DRINK -- The driest July in Olton's recorded history made the sight of irrigation water a welcome one to many area farmers.

DRY, DRY JULY

So you thought July was dry, huh?

Well, by golly dadburn, it sure was!

July, 1964, was the driest July on record in the Olton area. Though some areas got pretty good rains during the month, James Gallagher recorded only .45 inches of moisture for the official Olton reading.

Irrigation pumps proved themselves life-savers for many area farmers, as some ran pumps 24 hours a day during long stretches of the month.

The Ogallala water proved more valuable than gold during the long, hot summer month of July.

Compared with the .45 inch reading for this year, July readings during the previous eight years for Olton amounting to 4.31, 1.48, 4.18, 2.46, 14.67, 5.48, 10.75, and 3.70 inches during July. The total was 47.03 inches during the eight years--an average 5.88 inches each month.

Blaze Destroys Givens Boat, Shed

A fire late Friday did about $2500 damage as a shed behind the K. Y. Givens home in Olton burned.

Questioned at the time he made the estimate of damages, Givens said that he didn't know what could have caused the fire, but that it "sure burned."

Olton Fire Marshal David Maxey said that the cause of the blaze was undetermined. He added that "there wasn't anything left to tell from."

Maxey surmised that the fire probably started in a boat stored in the shed and then spread.

The alarm was sounded about 10:30 p.m. Friday, and it took Olton firemen almost 45 minutes to extinguish the fire. By the time the blaze was out, the shed and its contents had been destroyed completely.

In the shed at the time of the fire were tools, two new bicycles, a lawnmower, a motorcycle, a boat, motor and trailer, and the assorted paraphernalia that is always found stored in a backyard shed.

Fire Marshal Maxey said that the blaze was no longer being investigated, and that the cause would just be listed as unknown as the damage prevented discovery of the actual starting point of the fire.

HULKING HULL -- This is all that was left of K. Y. Givens' boat, motor and trailer after a Friday night fire.

Construction Estimates Hit $300,000

Olton school trustees have hit the nail right on the head on costs of construction in their $300,000 expansion program. The school board approved a base bid of $183,053.07 for the major part of the building program at a special meeting Monday night.

That figure, coupled with other projected costs of the program, brought total expected expenses to $300,207.07.

Low bidder on the project was a Midland builder, Dean Slavens.

Monday night's meeting was called after the board found a week before that two bids were so close more study was needed before a contract was awarded.

Slavens had been the low bidder by a total of $168.

The board also felt at that time the figures needed paring somewhat, so that costs of construction would not go appreciably beyond the voter-approved $300,000.

Total of Slavens' bid at that time was $188,282, approximately $5000 more than the figure approved by the board Monday night.

The board made minor changes in the construction to reduce costs by $5000. Much of this money was saved by not including a sliding partition which would have cost approximately $2,000 in the planned vocational building.

Another $1,000 was pared by not including new doors in some of the remodeling work. New hardware will be used on doors now in use.

One factor which swung the contract to the Midland builder was his estimate of time it would take to complete the building program.

Slavens estimated 120 days on the new construction and 30 days on the remodeling portion. Other bidders estimated more time, the average being about 210 days for new construction.

In addition to the $183,053.07 on the major part of the building program, these other costs are projected:

$28,811 in contracts previously let.

$50,000 for moving the athletic field and building a bus maintenance garage.

$15,000 for science equipment.

$12,000 for vocational equipment.

$11,340 for architectural fees.

SPOOTIN' OFF

Firmness In Viet Nam Deserves Our Support

LYNDON B. JOHNSON, more often than not, has done things I haven't agreed with.

I've always thought of him more as a politician than a statesman. Somehow I've come to think more of him since he became president. I'm not certain of all the reasons why.

One of them is probably the fact that the President of the United States is due the respect of every American, regardless of whether we agree wholeheartedly with him or not.

Maybe the fact that Lyndon is a Texan who has made good has something to do with my new regard for him.

The first reason I cited is a valid one. Everyone should respect the office of the president of the United States.

The second reason shouldn't make any difference.

We shouldn't think more—or less—of a person because he is a Texan—or a Democrat—or a Republican—or a cowboy—or a movie star—or anything you want to name.

These are simply labels, or names which sometimes hide the real man.

I still think of Lyndon B. Johnson as a politician, however, because that's what he is.

I've worried at times whether "politicians" are good for the country.

The connotation of the word, it seems to me, is that such people look out for themselves, sometimes at the expense of people they represent.

I wouldn't have put this past Lyndon—before he became president. I think, in fact, it is part of the reason he has risen to the high office he now holds.

Regardless of what I think, however, or the rest of the nation thinks about Lyndon B. Johnson of pre-president days, it is a fact that he now is making the country a strong president.

His action this week in the firm stand he took in the Viet Nam situation is an example.

I think the entire country is behind him in this stand even Barry Goldwater—and the entire country should be.

BACK WHEN Amy and I were in New York City in June, the headlines of the big city dailies screamed about the three missing civil rights workers who had disappeared in Mississippi.

The only comments I remember in the North were to the effect that law and order would be restored in the South. They thought it horrible that three youths could lose their lives in such a situation in a supposedly civilized state of the S-nited States.

This week, authorities found the bodies of the youths, buried in Mississippi.

Our reaction in the South has been much like that in the North. It was indeed a horrible crime, and the people who perpetrated it should be prosecuted to the limit of the law.

But the fact remains that the three youths had no business in the South, trying to ram civil rights down people's throats. They just invited troubles.

Certainly, such forces have no business in the South now, because the civil rights bill is law—and can be enforced without outside help.

We would be like the three youths who disappeared if we suddenly decided we should straighten things out in Harlem by going there and telling those people how things should be run.

We simply would not be that foolhardy.

Olton can be proud of Greer and Coye Hamill's new dining room at the Spotlite Cafe.

The Hamills have invested a lot of money in their new dining area, a result of their belief that a "plush" eating place is wanted and needed in Olton.

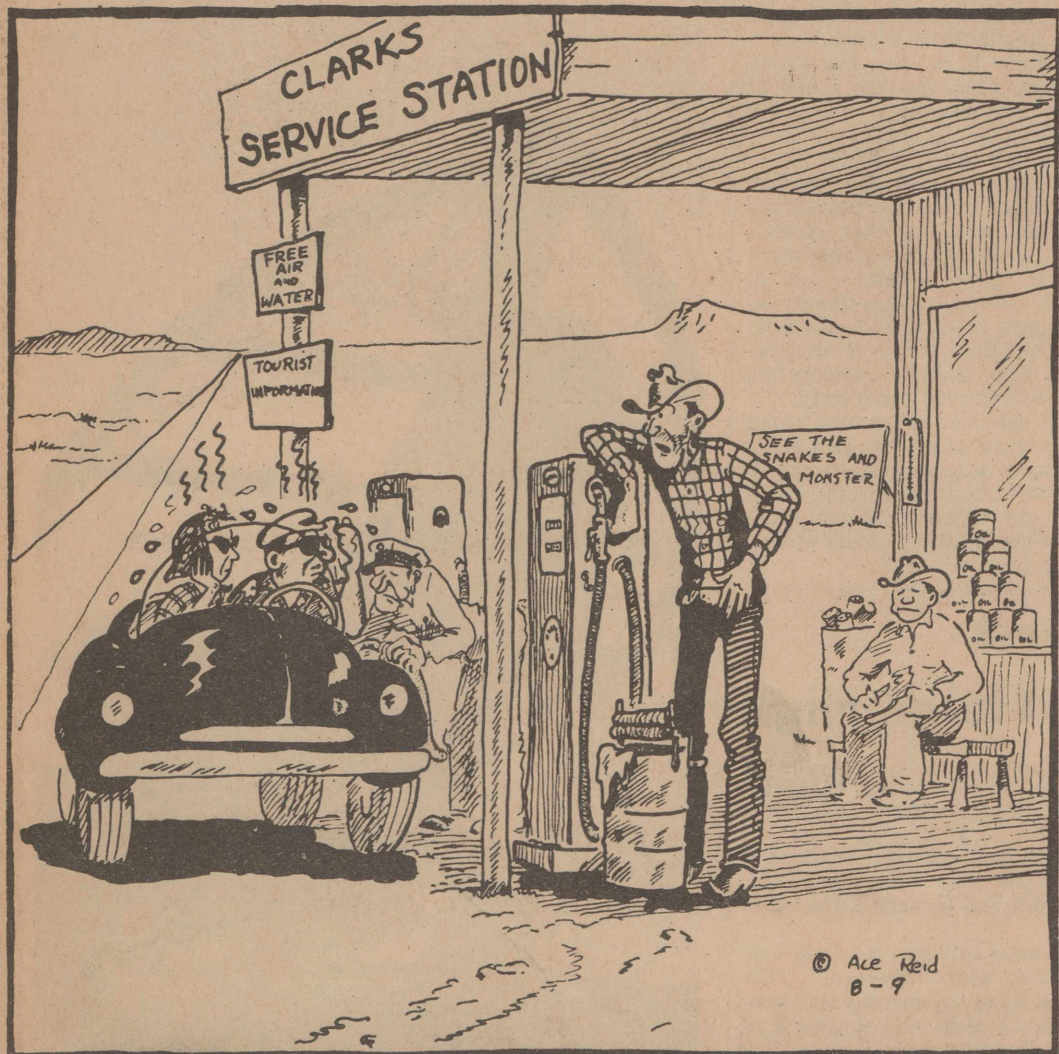

Amy and I tried out Greer and Coye's new place for the first time this week and we like both the atmosphere and the food.

I imagine it will be put to a lot of use by private parties and by clubs.

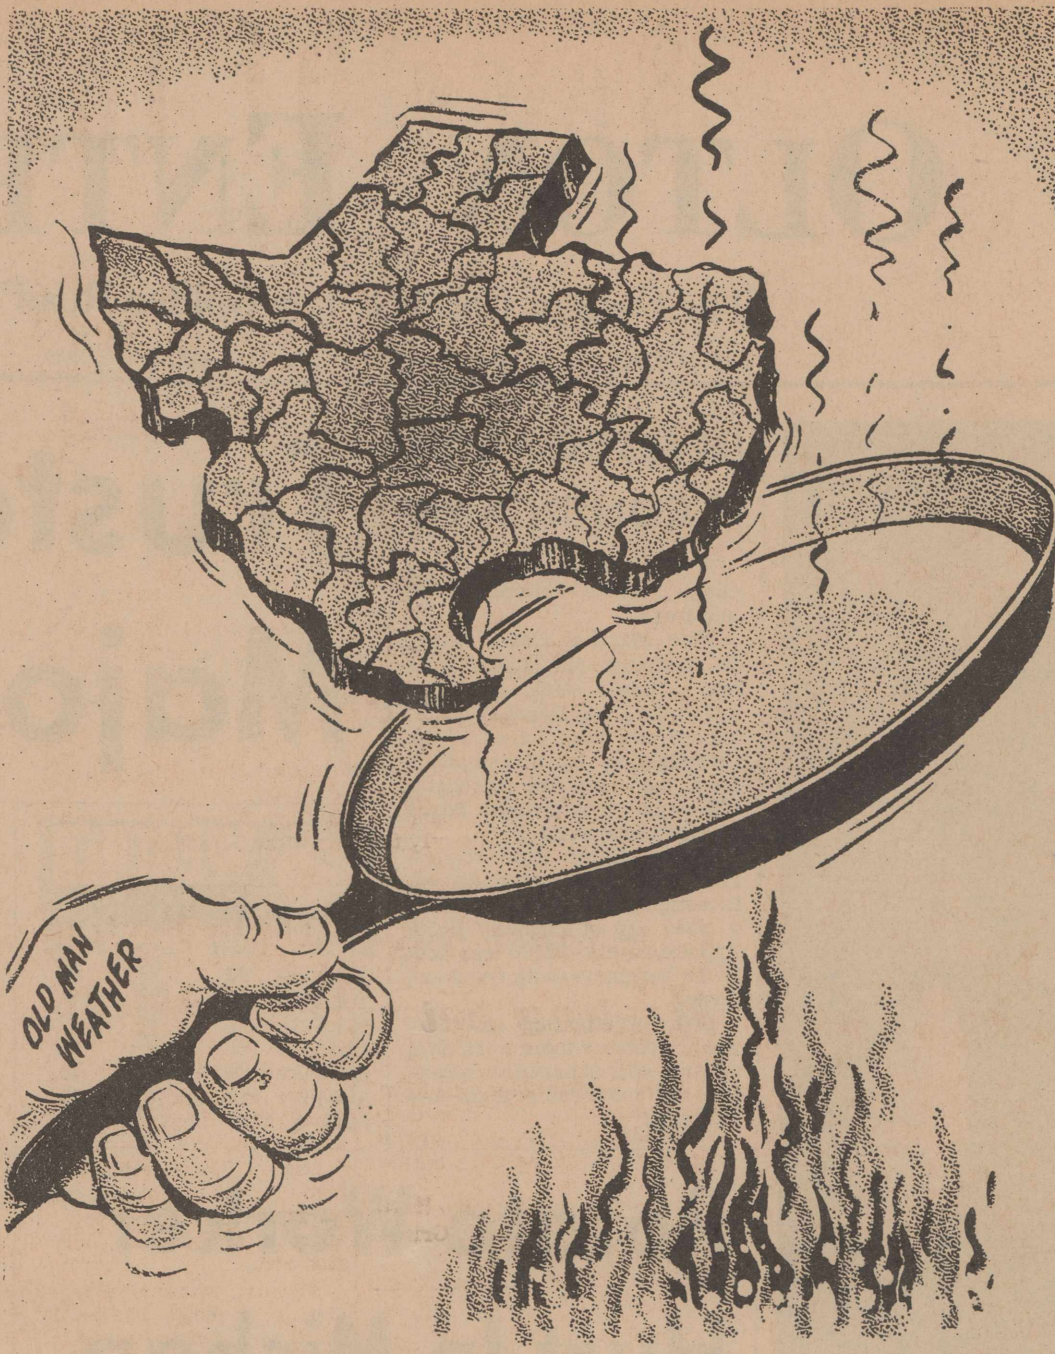

We think congratulations are in order for the Hamills. They've brought a real nice addition to the town.

RUNNING WATER PHILOSOPHER

Espouses Quote Law

Editor's note: The Running Water Philosopher on his care-less weed farm on Running Water Draw probably is on a cold trail this week.

Dear editor:

I read something in the paper last night during a re-run that convinces me this country needs a new law regulating political statements.

Well, not regulating political statements exactly, but, well here's the situation.

According to this article, Senator Goldwater wants to debate President Johnson on television, but some newspaper has dug up a statement by the Senator made only last year saying a President shouldn't debate a candidate, in the heat of the discussion he might reveal some military secret.

This is what I'm talking about. There should be a law prohibiting anybody from quoting anything on anything he said more than 30 days ago.

It's not just this one instance. Before the campaign is over, some of President Johnson's statements a few years ago will be brought out and set up alongside what he says now, and this only leads to confusion.

In fact, I don't suppose there's an office-holder in the land from bottom to top, precinct to Washington, who could stand to have everything he says today lined up against everything he's said in the past.

And this doesn't go just for office-holders alone, it goes for everybody.

I don't know how many words a human being utters in a lifetime, but it must run into the millions, maybe hundreds of millions when you average in women too, and it's impossible to use that many words without getting on practically all sides of all questions at one time or another, especially if you needed a few more votes back in that election 15 or 20 years ago.

I'm not sure this law would work, but that's no reason for not passing it. If you set up the rule a law has to work before you pass it, you'll eliminate half the lawyers in this country.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Ask Amy
BY AMY ADAMS

HEED ADVICE FROM BEST FRIEND

Dear Amy:
My problem concerns my best friend, and if this letter should make the paper, I hope she reads it and takes a hint.

Jackie has the terrible habit of bragging. Whenever she gets something new or from her older cousin, I never hear the end of it. She goes on and on about how expensive it is or that her cousin only wore it once and then gave it to her.

Almost two months ago she went to a Beate rally and that day I couldn't go with her. I don't mind hearing about it, but she still talks about it. Jackie is a real nice girl, but she gets pretty boring when she starts bragging.

Do you know of anything that I could do to discourage her from bragging?

Sick of Hearing It

Dear Amy:
You can make sure she reads it by clipping this column and planting it with that purpose in mind. The saying that "even your best friend won't tell you" is not true if you have a best friend. Jackie has one!

Dear Amy:
Have I got a problem! I've been invited to my boyfriend's sister's wedding this month. Their mother is a beautician, and naturally, the wedding party will go to her shop for their hair-sets and manicures. I never cared for the way she does her work and since I do want to look my best, I thought that I would patronize one of the smarter shops in the neighborhood.

Amy, I'm not obligated to go to her, am I?

Pat

Dear Amy:
Only if YOU feel obligated!

R. T.

Dear Amy:
Concerning your recent column about sneezing, I would like to reply as an English teacher (though I'm not the one referred to in the column). In a private conversation when a friend sneezes, his companion may say, "God bless you," but in so doing, he is following a custom based on superstition of evil spirits being emitted with the moisture droplets which accompany the sneeze. In a large group, it is not proper for 30 students to shout in chorus, "God bless you." It is done to disturb the class, embarrass the sneezer and interrupt the speaker (usually the teacher). Nine times out of ten, sneezes can be prevented and are allowed to occur only for precisely these reasons.

A well-bred person pretends he does not hear certain accidental noises. But children love to call attention to themselves. "God bless you" said in sincerity not in reference to sneezing is a different matter.

Teachers of English teach Philosophy. If we do not teach people to think what they are saying when they use words, what good are we? Grammar you can get from a book. Training in thinking must be taught.

Eunice Lentz
(Parma, Ohio)

Dear Amy:

How do you handle a mother-in-law who favors one of your children over the other one?

When grandma comes, my boy (age 7) is glad to see her and wants to sit on her lap and talk but he's practically pushed away and ignored for his sister, two years younger. My husband won't say anything and I agree, because when you have to remind a grandmother to be nice to your child, that takes the cake. What can you say to a seven-year old without hurting him? My mother-in-law makes no bones about the preference in remarks she makes to me and her actions. She's even snooty to my boy in the way her attitude is. It's not my imagination working overtime because outsiders have noticed it. This has been going on for about two years and I've had it. His sister is cute, but so is he. As I have no mother or father to advise me, I need your help.

Dear R. T.:
It is your duty as a mother not to allow anyone to hurt your children. Regardless of which child is the "apple of her eye," tell her plainly that to be welcome in your home, she must divide her affection equally.

She has an obligation, too, if she wants the love and respect that goes with the precious title of "Grandma!"

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING?

If You Think So, Then- --

PREACHERS -- Should preach only one sermon a year

. . . we are all against sin anyway, so why harp on it?

TRAFFIC LIGHTS -- Should be turned off at dangerous intersections to save electricity. Everybody knows it's a dangerous spot and that should be sufficient.

TEACHERS -- No need to review lessons. Tell the children only once and they'll never forget.

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN -- Stop driving up and down, no need to caution drivers for they know the law and should obey.

MAIL ORDER FIRMS -- That send catalogues are wasting their money. Everyone knows what is sold at stores in town and of course they'll shop at home.

Gayle Nicholas

Trying For Flying Queens

Gayle Nicholas, Olton, is one of 25 to 30 freshmen who will be vying for a place with the Hutchinson Flying Queens basketball team of Wayland Baptist College in September, according to Coach Harley J. Redin.

While freshmen seldom make the team, the Olton girl has several advantages. She has played with the Queen Bees in the National AAU Tournament, and her outstanding record is well known to Coach Redin. Marriages have taken a heavy toll of Flying Queens this summer, leaving a larger than usual number of openings, for which freshmen from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado, California, Illinois and Iowa have declared their intention to compete.

Miss Nicholas, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Nicholas and a May graduate of Olton High School, plans to major in physical education.

For many years the Flying Queens have been known for their beauty, brains and ball-handling and this year will not be an exception, according to Redin. Not only are these who have declared their intentions of trying for a berth able ball players and attractive but many are in the top 10 per cent of their graduating class, he says.

BAILEY HAIR--ACE GOLFER

Bailey Hair Aces Third Hole At ORC

Bailey Hair made a hole-in-one Monday, July 27, on the par-three 125-yard third hole on the ORC course.

The third hole had been aced earlier this summer by Earl Hysinger.

Hair used a 7 iron for the shot, and became at least the third person in the last two years to ace the hole.

He was playing with Max Malone, T. J. Roberson, Uil Gunter, J. L. Carson Jr. and Raymond Carson.

Apparently the unexpected hole-in-one rattled the golfers. Hair said that "everybody bogged the next hole."

SPORTS NEWS

Baseball Finances Given

Olton Baseball Association has started work on a new Olton baseball field.

The new field, in the northwest part of town, is being constructed for use by Pony League and American Legion teams.

The land for the playing field has been plowed and is being leveled and water lines are being laid in preparation for seeding.

Royce Collins, baseball association head, said that the present ball park ran close to $6000 to construct and that the new field could conceivably be more expensive.

Collins also said that anyone wishing to help defray construction expenses on the new field could turn contributions in to Gene Trotter at the bank.

Olton Lions Club members voted Tuesday to help with the project, though they did not specify any given amount for monetary help until they had learned more about the new park.

Collins Wednesday released the financial figures for the past summer's operations of Little League baseball in Olton.

Flower Arrangement Just A Little Hobby

A flower in nature is a work of art. A flower in any other setting may be a flower arrangement.

Mrs. L. G. Elkins, who lives just north of Highway 70 on the road to Hart, produces flower arrangements as a hobby.

She says, "I've always loved flowers." Her love of flowers is turned toward trying to make them as beautiful as possible in an unnatural indoor setting, and she has been working with "permanent" flowers for the past four or five years trying to make the indoor arrangements last longer than just a few short days.

Speaking of flower arranging, Mrs. Elkins says, "I'm just an amateur at this." But she adds, "I do have a lot of fun with it though."

Spending only her spare time with her hobby, she says that she has no idea at all how many arrangements she has created during the years she has spent arranging and rearranging flowers.

She makes special arrangements for special occasions -- weddings, Christmas, Easter -- and other arrangements whenever she feels like it.

Wood is used as the starting point for most decorative flower arrangements, and Mrs. Elkins says, "Getting the wood fixed up can take a lot of time, but the actual arrangement doesn't take too much time."

Her specifications for the wood to be used in an arrangement are that the wood should already have a natural form to accommodate the arrangement and complement the flowers. It should also have natural holes for the flowers and a weathered driftwood look.

The weathered texture of the wood seems to point up the soft, delicate appearance of the flowers.

According to Mrs. Elkins, a knotty piece of wood -- or a wormy piece -- often turns out prettier when the flowers are added than a graceful, smooth piece.

She says that wood-based flower arrangements are "very popular now." Some of the woods she listed as being used in flower arranging were cactus wood, ironwood, oak, cedar, mesquite, juniper -- both natural and finished.

When a well formed piece of wood is so smooth to suit her, she artificially and physically "weathers" it. Most of the wood used in her arrangements has been finished, but she often uses an unfinished piece for a given arrangement.

As for the actual arranging itself, she says, "I just fool with the flowers until the arrangement pleases me. I try to please myself."

She did add a warning that the end result, the arrangement, needed to look natural and needed to have balanced color combinations.

Mrs. Elkins added, "I have made and re-made the same basic arrangement many times."

She did add a warning that the end result, the arrangement, needed to look natural and needed to have balanced color combinations.

Mrs. Elkins added, "I have made and re-made the same basic arrangement many times. When I am no longer satisfied with the way something looks, I do it over."

Both the lasting quality and the ease of re-doing an arrangement were pointed out as advantages of "permanent" flowers over their natural counterparts.

Not that Mrs. Elkins is prejudiced against natural flowers -- she has a yard filled with flowers -- but she says she much prefers the "permanent" item.

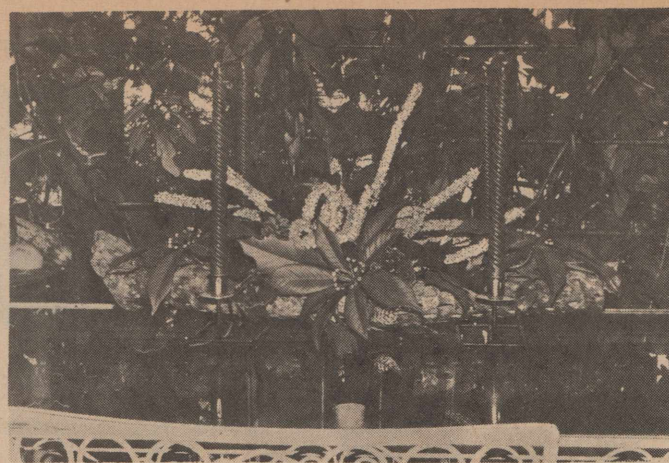

Recent advances have given the artificial flower a realism that often makes it difficult to distinguish from the real thing except under very close scrutiny.

Mrs. Elkins has very few of the arrangements she has done. Some have been kept, but most have been re-made or given away to friends and relatives.

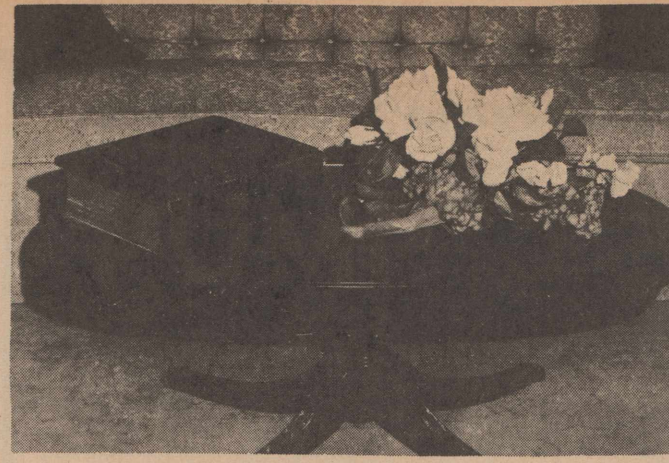

Don't be fooled though. That beautiful flower arrangement in the Elkins home just might be the real thing.

THE PROPER WOOD -- As the most important part of the arrangement, the wood used to set off the flowers should be rough and weathered to complement the smooth texture of the flowers.

FINISH UP -- by adding a base or stand to the arrangement and add any further desired decorations to balance the flowers.

A FINISHED ARRANGEMENT -- of "permanent" roses is shown in the Elkins living room next to the family Bible.

A Prometryne spray at layby keeps killing weeds for weeks

Effective weed control—that's what you get when new Prometryne® herbicide is applied now, at layby. A layby spray of Prometryne will keep on killing weeds in your cotton for weeks. With Prometryne on the job, weeds won't have a chance to compete for moisture and nutrients. And, you won't have rank weed growth to interfere with good, clean picking.

Gets tough weeds

Three years of research by State and Federal research workers in the Southwest proved the effectiveness of Prometryne in controlling most annual broadleaf weeds and grasses. It does an outstanding job, for example, in handling annual morningglory and pigweed (carelessweed).

Easy to use

Prometryne is easy to handle and apply. Its use will not result in residue problems in the cotton seed. It is non-irritating to humans and animals. It can be used on a wide range of soil types, including sandy soils. A fall seeded crop should not, however, be planted the same season that Prometryne is used.

See for yourself

Don't miss this opportunity to prove for yourself what an excellent job Prometryne can do. Call your herbicide supplier now and make arrangements for enough Prometryne to treat at least a portion of your acreage. See what outstanding, economical weed control a layby spray of Prometryne can give.
