Caboose Society to stage watercolor show and sale

By ALLISON THOMAS
Staff Writer

The Heritage Museum will be honoring a special art display of watercolor paintings by the Caboose Watercolor Society with a reception and viewing Saturday at 2 p.m.

"We will be having refreshments and door prizes at the reception," said Judy Gibbs, a member of the Caboose Watercolor Society who is being featured in the show.

Artists whose works will be shown also include Kay Smith, Linda Rupert, Carol Berry and Sue Bagwell. All are local artists, except Berry, who resides in Atlanta, Texas.

"All the paintings at the show will be watercolors," said Gibbs. "We should have 30 to 40 paintings or more."

The paintings will be available for sale during the show

Wrong turn lands French couple at Rodeo Bowl

JOHN A. MOSELEY
Managing Editor

When in Texas, do as Texans do.

That's the twist French travelers Gaston and Stefani Trivisanis put on an adage usually associated eternal Rome when they accidentally found themselves in Big Spring during rodeo week.

The Trivisanis, who two years ago began an ambitious drive around the world, discovered that a wrong turn on their way to Amarillo earlier this week provided a bonus adventure — a chance to be featured guests during the first performance of the 67th annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

By the time Wednesday night's performance of the rodeo had come to a close, the couple said they couldn't have planned a better stop on their trip than Big Spring and chance provided.

"This was very interesting ... we're completely satisfied," Stefani said Thursday morning as she and her husband prepared to leave Big Spring. "We had to wait two days for the rodeo, but it was everything we hoped it would be."

For Stefani, the rodeo's rough stock events — particularly the bull riding and antics provided by bullfighters Lance Brittan and Rob Smets — were the most enjoyable, while Gaston, who doesn't speak English and depends on his wife's skills as an interpreter, found the skills displayed by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association's (PRCA) calf ropers and steer wrestlers most appealing.

In fact, the only disquieting moment for the couple from the southern French city of Avignon, came when rodeo announcer Mike Mathis singled them out for recognition.

"I could feel my face turn red," Stefani admitted. "We didn't expect anything like that would happen. We've always heard about how friendly people here in Texas are, but you really don't comprehend the warmth of the people here until you experience it."

What the couple really hadn't expected was to be in Big Spring at all.

In fact, it's safe to say the Trivisanis had no idea a city named Big Spring in Texas existed when they left Avignon in 1998, driving through Switzerland, Hungary,

Yugoslavia, Turkey, Kazakhstan, Russia, Canada and the United States.

Stefani explains that the couple met in Africa where both worked as tour guides. They married and opened their own travel agency specializing in trips to Africa.

But two years ago, the pair tired of their routine and decided to do something different.

"We pulled out a map and began talking about places we'd like to go," she explained. "We were sitting there saying I'd like to go here, and I'd like to go there and Gaston said, 'O.K., let's do that.'"

So the couple sold their business and their home, added those proceeds to their savings and began their odyssey.

"It really has been an adventure," Stefani admitted. "We've experienced so many things we never would have dreamed was possible ... like crossing Siberia during the winter. It's almost impossible to explain."

One thing is certain, however. The two world travelers say recounting their travels will highlight their three-day stay in Big Spring — another of those experiences they hadn't expected.

"We were on our way to Amarillo," Stefani explained. "I was driving and Gaston was asleep. I made a wrong turn

Bakers auction to be an Air Fair highlight

By ALLISON THOMAS
Staff Writer

To benefit Hangar 25 Air Museum, local celebrities will be taking time out of their busy schedules to bake cakes. The treats will be auctioned off to the highest bidder at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

This first-year event will take place in conjunction with the annual Air Fair Auction at the hangar.

Saturday's events begin at 10 a.m. with the arrival of a vintage P-51 Mustang airplane and a hot air balloon. A cake walk, paper airplane toss and other activities will be held. Rides for the kids, including a hay ride, a barrel train, a duck pond and a bouncy air castle are planned.

The Air Fair will also feature a variety of displays, including a static display of military aircraft, classic car and Harley Davidson displays, radio controlled airplanes and an exhibit by the Texas National Guard.

"It's going to be kind of a carnival atmosphere," said McMahon-Wrinkle, Airpark administrative assistant Nelda Reagan, who, along with Pat Simmons, is coordinating the auction.

The "Big Time Bakers," as the celebrities are being called, will donate all profits from their cakes to the Hangar 25 Air Museum, which is dedicated to preserving flight history and artifacts.

So far, approximately 29 celebrities have volunteered their culinary skills to the auction.

"This is the first year we've had this event, and we got a lot of people to sign up," said Simmons. "Most of them are city and county officials."

Simmons believes the event will draw even more local celebrities in the future.

"Next year, hopefully even more will be able to participate," she said. "We won't leave anyone out."

"We'll have the cakes set out and labeled, so everyone can come see who all brought cakes," said Simmons.

Fundraiser planned Saturday for Stowers scholarship fund

By CARL GRAHAM
Staff Writer

A barbecue and a battle of the bands will take place Saturday at Dora Roberts Community Center beginning at 6 p.m.

The purpose of the event is to raise $5,000 for a scholarship endowment to honor the late John Stowers, a Big Spring police officer. Stowers died Dec. 22 last year while vacationing in New Mexico.

The fund initially was started in March when Mike and Pat Craddock of Delta Lightning Arrestors kicked off the effort by presenting Liz Stowers, widow of Sgt. Stowers, a check for $500. Several other donations have come in, but in order for the scholarship to be endowed at least $5,000 must be raised. The scholarship will be given annually to a Howard College student majoring in criminal justice.

Stowers said she appreciates the efforts that have been made to get the scholarship established.

"The people have really been so supportive of this cause and I hope that will can have a good turnout for this worthwhile fundraiser," she said.

OBITUARIES

Homer Lee Gay Jr.

Homer Lee Gay Jr., 71, Big Spring, died on Wednesday June 14, 2000, at his residence. No services are planned.

Mr. Gay was born on Oct. 4, 1928, in DeKalb. He attended Tarleton State University and East Texas State University at Commerce. He had owned and operated a Ford dealership in Bonham. He had worked for Commercial Credit Corporation and had also been a real estate broker in Dallas. Mr. Gay had lived in Big Spring for a number of years. He was a Methodist.

Survivors include: two sisters, Virginia Gay of Dallas and Betty Pruitt of DeKalb; and several nieces and nephews.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Minnie Alvena Mason

Memorial service for Minnie

Alvena Mason, 85, Big Spring, will be 1:30 p.m.

Saturday, June 17, 2000, at Trinity Baptist Church with Dr. Randy Cotton, pastor.

Claude Craven, retired Baptist minister, officiating. Burial will be at Lawnhaven Memorial Park in Clovis, N.M.

Mrs. Mason died on Thursday, June 15, in a local nursing home.

She was born on Feb. 16, 1915, in Priddy and married Charlie M. Mason on May 21, 1936, in Brownwood. He preceded her in death on Sept. 4, 1975. She had lived in Clovis for many years. She was a homemaker and had worked for TG&Y stores retiring in 1972. She came to Big Spring in May of 1999 from Clovis. She was a member of Trinity Baptist Church.

Survivors include: one son, Randy Mason of Big Spring; eight grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Mission Fund, Trinity Baptist Church, 810 East 11th Place, Big Spring, 79720.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

AIR FAIR

The auction will begin at 1 p.m. under the direction of auctioneer Dean Statham.

Simmons and Reagan had the idea for the Big Time Bakers event during a meeting for the Air Fair auction.

"We were in a meeting, and we were talking about the cake walk," said Simmons. "All of a sudden we had this new idea."

"We were looking for a way to generate money, and we had the idea to have community leaders bake cakes," said Reagan. "It's going to be fun, and it's going to raise some money at the same time."

The volunteers are not required to personally make their cake, but most of the local celebrities have been enthusiastic about baking.

"We've had the impression that most of them are actually going to bake the cake themselves," said Simmons.

"Everybody was just so willing," said Reagan. "The response has been great. We hear they are being kind of creative."

If the event proves to be a success, it will become a regular part of the Air Fair.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Simmons. "I think it's going to be a big fundraiser and a wonderful event."

Among those furnishing treats for the auction are State Sen. Robert Duncan, State Rep. David Counts, Mayor Russ McEwen, County Commissioner Bill Crocker and his wife Joyce, Sheriff Bill Jennings, County Judge Ben Lockhart, Peace Justice Quail Dobbs, assistant city manager Emma Bogard, city manager Gary Fuqua, Big Spring Independent School District Superintendent Bill McCreary, Big Spring Police Chief Lonnie Smith and city council members Jo Ann Smoot and Greg Biddison.

Others are local business members Loren Chandler, Verna Davis, Darrel Holley, Carl Graham, Ronald Moss, Terri Newton, Jody Nix, Kent Sharp, John Walker, Tommy Churchwell, Tumbleweed Smith, Delbert Donaldson, Roger Huff, John Weeks, Skip McKenzie, Mark Odle and Jan Hanson.

Survivors include: one son, Randy Mason of Big Spring; eight grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Mission Fund, Trinity Baptist Church, 810 East 11th Place, Big Spring, 79720.

Trivisanis, who plan to meet another French couple in San Francisco on Tuesday, decided there was time in their schedule to spend a couple of days camping at Big Spring State Park waiting for that rodeo to begin.

After meeting their friends in San Francisco, the Trivisanis plan to continue their journey, heading south for an extended tour of the South American continent.

Just how long the two plan to continue their open-ended trip is not clear.

"I guess we'll just keep traveling around the world until we run out of money," Stefani explained. "Then I guess we'll return to Europe and go back to organizing tours. I don't know, maybe we'll bring people to Texas so they can see what we've enjoyed here."

Midland woman
dies in accident
west of Stanton

By CARL GRAHAM
Staff Writer

A 26-year-old Midland woman was killed west of Stanton Thursday when a tractor-trailer crossed the Interstate 20 median and struck her van.

Jeannie Crews was pronounced dead at the scene just after 11 a.m. near mile marker 155. Crews was the sole occupant of the United Snack Group van she was driving, according to Department of Public Safety Trooper Brad Willis. Apparently, Crews had just left Stanton and was headed back to Midland when the accident occurred.

Willis said the tractor-trailer, driven by 63-year-old Sammy Drain, swept across four lanes before hitting the van in the driver's side door.

Ms. Crews was dead when emergency personnel arrived on the scene. Trooper Willis said Drain sustained no injuries.

Drain was taken into custody but was not charged or given a citation. He was later released. He told authorities he was from Houston and was headed back to Houston with an empty load.

Ms. Crews' body was taken to Nalley-Pickle & Welch in Big Spring and later transferred to Ellis Funeral Home in Midland where funeral arrangements are pending.

Cpl. Woody Jackson of the regional DPS office in Midland said this morning that though no charges were made at the site, the investigation has not been completed and charges could still be brought later.

Waco: Judge considers rejecting gunfire accusations against government

WACO (AP) — Accusations that government gunfire contributed to deaths at the end of the fiery Branch Davidian siege may not be allowed in members' wrongful death lawsuit, the presiding judge says.

The Davidians' lawyers have until next Friday to offer "any additional evidence" to support their claim that repeated flashes on an FBI infrared videotape recorded in 1993 came from government gunfire, the judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith Jr., citing the May report of a court-appointed expert that the flashes came only from sunlight and heat reflections, wrote this week that "the court is persuaded that the issue ... may best be resolved through summary judgment."

Government lawyers said Thursday they are now hopeful that Smith will dismiss accusations that they have maintained are baseless and outrageous.

"We think that the evidence is overwhelming that there is no gunfire, that the court-appointed experts confirm what was already very clear, and that a summary judgment order should be granted," U.S. Attorney Michael Bradford of Beaumont, a lead defense lawyer, told The Dallas Morning News in today's editions.

Because the chief analyst for the British firm appointed by the court to study the issue, David Oxlee of Vector Data Systems, was ill and unavailable to testify until late summer, Smith planned to hear evidence at a later date. Vector was retained at Waco special counsel John C. Danforth's recommendation to help resolve the gunfire issue, assisting in a March field test at Fort Hood.

Plaintiffs' lawyers objected Smith's ruling unfairly burdened them in advance of next week's trial, before they could fully question the court's experts. "We offered to go to London and take Mr. Oxlee's deposition so we could present this issue to the jury," attorney Michael Caddell of Houston said.

"I find this order surprising and very strange, to suggest that this issue could be decided on before we ever get to question him."

Smith has also ruled that just one example of each type of weapon owned by the Branch Davidians can be introduced during the trial set to start Monday.

Agreeing with a Davidians' attorney that a larger number could inflame jurors, Smith moved to limit the weapons recovered from Mount Carmel seven years ago that will be allowed into court.

The government may offer photographs of all the weapons recovered, Smith said in Friday's editions of the Waco-Tribune Herald.

Caddell, the lead plaintiffs' attorney, sought to limit the number of weapons actually brought into the courtroom. He argued that the government was attempting to inflame the jury.

Bradford argued during a June 12 pretrial hearing that jurors needed to see all the weapons to understand why the FBI was reluctant to bring in fire-fighting equipment.

A fire engulfed Mount Carmel on April 19, 1993 before Branch Davidian leader David Koresh and some 80 of his followers died — some from the blaze, others from gunshot wounds. Flames broke out six hours into a tear-gassing operation designed to flush sect members out.

Smith stated in Wednesday's order that he doesn't expect the issue of damages, if necessary, to be tried immediately after the close of the liability phase of the wrongful-death lawsuit.

Smith also partially granted the government's motion to exclude the testimony of Jack Zimmerman, the Houston attorney who represented Steve Schneider, Koresh's chief lieutenant, during the siege.

Zimmerman, an ex-Marine, told reporters in 1993 that he saw bullet holes in the roof and front door of Mount Carmel that he believed proved that the government was the aggressor during the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' raid on the Branch Davidians.

However, Smith ruled that Zimmerman did not have the background or training to qualify him as a firearms expert in the analysis of bullet trajectory.

Fate of bonfire to be announced by school president

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The Aggie bonfire, a pre-game tradition that turned deadly for 12 Texas A&M students, will reportedly be replaced by a memorial service this year and will only return to campus under engineers' supervision.

Relatives of last year's bonfire collapse victims said in published reports Friday that the bonfire will be suspended until at least 2002 and will return with much greater university oversight.

Texas A&M President Ray Bowen has scheduled a news conference for 2 p.m. CST Friday on campus to announce what will happen to the 90-year tradition after the Nov. 18 collapse, when the 2 million-pound log stack tumbled to the ground, killing 12 Aggies and injuring 27 others.

Strict guidance of professional engineers and advisers will replace the student-run project, victims' relatives who received advance copies of Bowen's findings told the Bryan-College Station Eagle and The Dallas Morning News.

Michael Self, father of bonfire victim Jerry Don Self, said that a letter from Vice President of Student Affairs, Malon Southerland stated that future bonfires will rely on groups of professional, adult supervisors who will instruct and tell student leaders how the structure should be built.

Self, who has said earlier that he would help students build the bonfire even if that meant doing so off campus, said the changes would be somewhat like "your parents doing your science project for you."

He said that Bowen's decision to delay the ceremony for two years was a disservice to the memory of his son and the other victims.

"I'm not surprised because of all the rumors I've been hearing lately," said Self, whose son chose to attend A&M at least in part because of bonfire. "I'm speaking for my son, because he's not here to speak for himself. As a father, it is hard, but I know in my heart that Jerry would want bonfire to burn this fall."

A five-member commission appointed and funded by Texas A&M to investigate the deaths blamed flawed construction techniques and a lack of adequate supervision of students assembling the stack.

"I really was hoping they'd go ahead and do the fire," Michele Fowler told The Morning News in an interview from her home in Norfolk, Va.

Fowler's brother, 17-year-old Timothy Kerlee, was the youngest of the 12 people killed in the collapse of the bonfire stack.

"I guess I know where Dr. Bowen is coming from and, of course, I'm very glad they're going to do it again," she said.

The reports said Bowen's findings, mailed overnight, arrived Thursday at the homes of victim's parents. A&M officials used that method to get the word to families before the May 2 release of the final report into the collapse.

A&M spokesman Lane Stephenson said Thursday evening that he had no comment or knowledge of details from Bowen's announcement. Bowen has consulted with students, faculty, alumni and others on the bonfire.

Two Dallas television stations reported that future bonfires would be "engineer-driven." The stack would be lowered from the 55-foot-tall wooden structure to a lower, single-tier teepee-style bonfire, according to the reports that said lumber would be purchased and delivered to the school instead of being cut on private property around the Brazos Valley.

An e-mail address set up by A&M after the commission's report was released on May 2 has received more than 1,500 messages, with a 7-to-1 ratio supporting the bonfire.

A student group called Keep the Fire Burning collected 7,204 signatures on paper, 1,229 on its Web site and 841 e-mails requesting that the student-built, student-run bonfire tradition continue.

"Each individual who sent us messages supports Aggie bonfire," said Keep the Fire Burning spokesman Ryan Thompson. "There would be many, many disappointed people (if it stopped). I'm sure there would be a hole in people's hearts."

Christina Horz, communications coordinator for the Association of Former Students, said the group sent Bowen a one-page letter on Wednesday saying "our membership feels a safe bonfire can and should occur."

Floods cause evacuation of homes in Brownwood

BROWNWOOD (AP) — A downpour of over 8 inches flooded streets and several homes in a Central Texas town Thursday, prompting the city to seek a flood disaster declaration from the governor's office.

Over 125 residents of Brownwood were evacuated as homes and streets were flooded, said City Manager Gary Butts.

High winds downed power lines, damaged roofs and shut down some schools for the day, he said.

Police and fire department teams scrambled before dawn Thursday to rescue stranded motorists and help several residents whose homes were flooded, said Police Chief Virgil Cowin.

Lake Brownwood, which had already risen almost four feet from earlier rains, had risen another foot by Thursday afternoon, said Sam Oswood, deputy general manager of the Brown County Water Improvement District.

A three-year drought had lowered the lake to 10.6 feet below its 1,425 sea level spillway. The additional water brought the lake to 1,419.3, only 5.7 below normal.

Most of the rainfall came from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m., dumping rain at a rate of 3 inches per hour, said Butts.

Flooding of streets, roads and low-lying areas was also reported in Johnson, Dallas, Tarrant, Hunt, Hopkins, and Somervell counties. Flash flood warnings were posted for both Brown and Coleman counties and Rains and Van Zandt counties were experiencing localized street flooding.

Administration hails House vote on national monuments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is hailing the House's refusal to limit President Clinton's ability to establish national monuments as part of his land preservation efforts.

The House voted 204-172 early Friday to approve a $14.6 billion measure financing the Interior Department and federal cultural programs for next year. The White House has threatened a veto because of its 70 percent cut in Clinton's proposal for $620 million to buy federal and local park lands, and reductions in his plans for clean water, Indian, arts and energy efficiency programs.

But in a win for Clinton and environmentalists, the House voted to erase language authored by Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, that would have barred the Interior Department from "design, planning or management" of any national monuments designated since the beginning of this year. That would have covered eight new monuments created by Clinton since January and the expansion of a ninth, covering nearly 2 million acres in Arizona, California, Colorado, Oregon and Washington state.

"We're delighted that the House is preserving this important tool to protect America's national treasures," White House spokesman Jake Siewert said later.

The White House had objected strongly to the language.

The overall bill was a battleground, as usual, over the National Endowment for the Arts. And as usual, Republicans seeking to hold the agency's budget to $98 million — about the same as this year — prevailed.

Endowment proponents led by Reps. Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y., and Norm Dicks, D-Wash., won a preliminary 207-204 vote in an effort to provide an extra $15 million for the arts agency. For a while, it seemed the endowment would win its first significant increase in the House since 1992, when its budget peaked at $176 million.

But GOP leaders headed them off by proposing to instead spend the extra money on Indian health services. Their measure was approved by voice vote.

Clinton has designated the national monuments under the 1906 Antiquities Act, which allows a president to set aside federal lands as monuments for historic or scientific reasons. Republicans said he had used the law to set aside more land than it intended, was ignoring the will of local members of Congress and other officials, and was using the designation for election-year politics.

"Don't have a king with a stroke of a pen designate land," said Rep. Randy Cunningham, R-Calif.

With both sides looking ahead to this November's elections, the fight echoed the numerous environmental battles waged between Republicans and Clinton since the GOP took control of Congress in 1995.

Rep. Sam Farr, D-Calif., said Clinton had to make the designations "because this Congress, under this leadership, is failing to deliver these things."

On the pivotal vote, lawmakers voted 234-187 to reject an effort by Hansen to keep his language intact. Thirty-eight Republicans joined 195 Democrats and 1 independent in opposing Hansen; 177 Republicans, 9 Democrats and 1 independent voted "yes."

Two more missing women linked to suspected killer

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — One came from Michigan hoping for a new start and a big paycheck. Another was lured from Texas by the promise of travel and a new wardrobe.

And now, a mother and her daughter from California have been added to the list of 11 missing or dead — 10 women and a baby girl — with alleged ties to a murder suspect, John Edward Robinson Sr.

Robinson, 56, is charged with the deaths of five women found stuffed in barrels in two states. He spoke publicly for the first time since being charged, a subdued "yes" when a judge asked if he understood what was happening during a court hearing Thursday.

For the past two weeks, a missing persons task force has followed leads in Kansas, Missouri and Florida. A court order restricts comment on the information prosecutors say they have gathered on Robinson.

"Now we're going to get down to the business of court proceedings," said Johnson County District Attorney Paul Morrison.

A preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 2.

Robinson is in custody under $5 million bond on two Kansas counts of capital murder, one count of aggravated kidnapping, two counts of sexual battery and one of felony theft. He is also charged with three counts of first-degree murder in Missouri, where authorities say they will seek the death penalty.

Three attorneys from the Kansas Death Penalty Defense Unit representing Robinson declined comment following the hearing Thursday.

Police on June 3 discovered two women's bodies in barrels on Robinson's property near La Cygne, Kan., south of Kansas City. Three more were found June 5 in barrels about 40 miles away in a storage locker in Raymore, Mo.

Authorities have said Robinson trolled the Internet for sex under the name "slave-master," and may have met some of his victims there.

The number of missing with a known link to Robinson grew to six Thursday with the addition of Sheila Dale Faith, 51, and her daughter, Debbie, 21. The apparently left Fullerton, Calif., in 1994 and eventually moved to the Kansas-Oklahoma area. Family members have not heard from them since. The task force did not specify their connection to Robinson.

Earlier, authorities had said Robinson was being investigated about the disappearance of three women and a baby in the mid-1980s: Paula Godfrey, 19, Katherine Clamper, 27, Lisa Stasi, 19, and Stasi's 5-month-old daughter vanished from the Kansas City area.

Three of the five bodies have been identified: Beverly Bonner, 49, a prison librarian who disappeared in 1994; Suzette Trouten, 28, of Newport, Mich.; and Izabela Lewicka, 22, a Polish immigrant.

Murder charge dropped after evidence strand botched

HICKORY RIDGE, Ark. (AP) — James Pipkin held his thumb and index finger less than an inch apart — how close, he says, a prosecutor came to getting the man who kidnapped and killed his 9-year-old daughter nine years ago.

"I thought we had him," the father said Thursday at the John Deere dealership where he works as a mechanic. "I thought we were going to get a conviction. I'm devastated."

Prosecutor Fletcher Long Jr. this week dropped the capital murder charge and freed Robbie Dale Tubbs because the wrong strand of hair was given to the FBI as evidence for DNA testing.

Long took responsibility for the mistake. After announcing that he no longer had a case, Long likened it to quitting a football game at halftime and said after jurors are dismissed, "I'll go throw up."

Christina Marie Pipkin was kidnapped and killed May 4, 1991, while selling jewelry door-to-door for a school fund-raiser. Her body was found five days later in a nearby irrigation ditch — matching a prediction Tubbs allegedly made earlier to his wife.

Long filed charges last November, saying he could link Christina to Tubbs through a lone strand of blond hair found in Tubbs' 1980 AMC Eagle seven months after the girl's death. He considered it solid evidence, the best he had.

But after Tubbs' trial started in April, defense attorney Martin Lilly challenged the DNA evidence. After his own investigation, Long made an embarrassing admission: The two hairs tested by the FBI were both retrieved at the girl's autopsy.

The hair from Tubbs' car was still in Little Rock, in a Crime Lab file. Trial was suspended until June 19.

Although the correct strand of hair eventually was sent to the FBI, its laboratory couldn't extract sufficient DNA material from it, Long said. That left prosecutors without physical evidence linking Tubbs to the crime — and without a case.

"We certainly expected it to happen," defense attorney Martin Lilly said Wednesday. "We knew there was no evidence relating that girl to him. That didn't surprise us at all."

Once a judge accepts Long's request to drop the charges, it cannot be refiled against Tubbs based on the same facts. To do so would expose Tubbs to double jeopardy.

"It would have to be absolutely something else," Long said. "We've got him making some statements that are untrue. We can prove he's a liar, but that doesn't prove he's a murderer."

Coast-to-coast Mexican heroin trafficking ring smashed by federal agents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents made dozens of arrests Thursday as they broke up a multimillion-dollar Mexican heroin ring alleged to have smuggled unusually pure and cheap black tar heroin into new markets from one U.S. coast to the other.

The gang, based in the Nayarit state of Mexico, was distributing heroin in 22 U.S. cities each month, worth more than $7 million, in 22 U.S. cities, said

Joe Keefe, chief of special operations for the Drug Enforcement Administration.

The ring was marketing the heroin at such a high level of purity and such a low price that the Mexicans pushed into eastern U.S. markets formerly served by Colombian drug traffickers, Keefe said in an interview.

Since Operation Fair Play began in October in San Diego, DEA and FBI agents had arrested 70 people through Wednesday. On Thursday, they were arresting between 170 and 200 more people and searching 60 locations.

The ring used juvenile girls and men in their 60s traveling alone from its U.S. command center in Los Angeles to carry drugs to distribution cells from Hawaii to Georgia, Keefe's deputy, Ron Benson, said in an interview. They each would carry 1 pound or 2 pounds of heroin, either wrapped around them in a concealed waistband or hidden in the back of a boom box radio.

"This is the first time either DEA or the FBI has ever done a major operation against black tar heroin in the United States. We learned a lot," Keefe said.

"It will take a lot of law enforcement cooperation to deal with this, because a juvenile carrying 1 pound of heroin in a boom box is a lot harder to detect than the Colombians who move cocaine in tractor trailer loads," he said.

Benson said DEA was alarmed to find that the ring was selling $10 street doses of heroin, weighing half a gram, that were 60 percent to 85 percent pure heroin.

At a news conference, Attorney General Janet Reno said, "This organization opered in a dangerously efficient manner. Not only did this group exhibit disregard for the law, but their peddling of this powerful and addictive drug showed an even greater disregard for human life."

Donnie Marshall, the DEA administrator, said he believes "this operation has some significant implications, not just for law enforcement but for the country as a whole."

Robert Johnson's estate settled by Mississippi court

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Bluesman Robert Johnson's royalties will go to a retired gravel truck driver whose mother had a fling with the musician in 1931, the Mississippi Supreme Court has ruled.

Claud Johnson's paternity case was bolstered by a witness to one of his mother's sexual encounters with Robert Johnson, who wrote such blues standards as "Me and the Devil Blues," "Crossroads Blues" and "Rambling on My Mind."

As the sole heir, the Crystal Springs man is entitled to about $1 million from royalties from record sales.

"Mr. Claud is happy that he's finally been vindicated about what he has known all his life, that he is the son of Robert Johnson," said his lawyer, Jeffrey Ellis.

Robert Johnson died a pauper at age 27 in 1938 in Greenwood and left no will. He produced 41 records.

Claud Johnson's mother, the late Virgie Jane Smith Cain, had identified the singer as his father in a 1992 deposition. Her childhood friend, Eula Mae Williams, testified in a 1998 non-jury trial that she watched the couple have sex in 1931. Claud Johnson was born nine months later.

The court dismissed complaints about the lack of DNA evidence by two other distant Johnson relatives.

The proof "would be nigh impossible to obtain since Johnson's grave site is unknown."

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each week, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play.

This week we salute:

• RODEO PARADE PARTICIPANTS and spectators who helped get the 67th annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo off to a good start Wednesday.

• BIG SPRING MODEL AIRCRAFT ASSOCIATION, for another successful and entertaining Fun Fly-In at the Old Howard County Airport.

• DR. MARIA DOUGLAS and all of the other foster parents in the Crossroads Area who make it possible for children in need to get help from a warm, loving family.

• NATIONAL LITTLE LEAGUE PEE WEE WHITE SOX, who posted a perfect 9-0 record this season.

• TRAVIS McMILLAN, Coahoma High School first baseman, who was named to the Class 2A all-state tournament team.

• Miss Rodeo Texas BRANDY ELLIOTT and local celebrity QUAIL DOBBS, who took time out of their busy schedules to visit with children at the Howard County Library summer reading program.

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

OTHER VIEWS

An epidemic afflicts our nation's children.

To treat it, we don't need prescription medication or elaborate therapies. We just need to open our eyes and see the problem.

An alarming number of our kids are overweight.

President Clinton recently kicked off the first National Nutrition Summit in more than 30 years with new federal dietary guidelines and some cautionary statistics.

The number of overweight Americans increased from 25 to 33 percent between 1980 and 1991, he reported. And the number of overweight children has doubled during the past 15 years. Ten percent of American kids are considered overweight or obese.

We need to get our children outdoors, away from the television sets, video games and computers that encourage hour after lazy hour of physical inactivity. We need to encourage children to participate in activities ranging from bicycling to football to ballet. We need to give physical education classes the respect they deserve. And we need to think twice about the giant-sized drinks, huge candy bars and seemingly limitless junk food available to our kids.

If we look back to Clinton's statistics, we can see why this problem should be of the utmost importance to parents. About 70 percent of overweight children ages 10 to 13 will be overweight and obese adults. So today's problem will lead to even bigger difficulties tomorrow.

It's really a no-brainer. All of us, grown-ups and children alike, need to have a more balanced diet and exercise more often. Tonight, instead of watching a TV show with your kids, go for a bike ride or a walk. There's nothing but reruns on, anyway.

Oxford: A new class war may be brewing

The admission by Harvard University of one 18-year-old English woman has precipitated a crisis in British Prime Minister Tony Blair's Labor Party and threatened his New Labor identity. The crisis might be difficult to avoid, like a large snowball rolling down a hill.

In outline, the facts are these: One Laura Spence, a student at a state school in northeast England, applied for admission to Magdalen College of Oxford University, and she was rejected. Her grades appear to have merited admission, but she flunked her interview, the notation on her record indicating shyness and lack of self-confidence. Some British commentators interpret that notation as an indication that Laura Spence, in the interview situation, had the inhibitions and nervousness of a working-class girl.

Perhaps it is pertinent if I interject here that applications for admission at Oxford go to individual colleges, such as Magdalen, Christ Church, Pembroke, Balliol and so on, and not to "Oxford University." And furthermore, Magdalen is one of the most gorgeous and most snooty of the Oxford Colleges, with its own Deer Park and its frontage on the Isis river for picnics and leisurely floating in a punt, which is a type of canoe. Its Addison's Walk is named for the 18th-century writer who once strolled there as a student.

Maybe Laura Spence did not know that Magdalen is pronounced "Maudlin."

Interestingly, Laura also applied to Harvard University, was accepted and will enter this fall as a premed.

Incidentally, she lucked out as far as academic quality is concerned. All of the first-rate American universities are academically superior to Oxford and the University of Cambridge. Students of mine who have earned Rhodes and other scholarships and were students at Oxford or Cambridge have been surprised by the comedown.

The professors at these English universities are underpaid and overworked, and they are not as well trained as their American counterparts. Indeed, many of the best of them have emigrated in the famous Brain Drain to seek the much higher salaries in America.

Oxford and Cambridge are not what they were before World War II, let alone before World War I, the old Oxford of Arnold and Jowett. But the atmosphere is marvelous, with its dreamy Gothic spires, English beer and long vacations on the continent.

Be that as it may, the rejection of Laura Spence came to the eagle eye of Mr. Gordon Brown, Labor Chancellor of the Exchequer, who exploded: "It is about time we had an end to the old Britain," he said, "where all that matters is the privileges you were born with, rather than the potential you actually have. It is time that the old universities opened their doors to women and people from all backgrounds." Surely both Oxford and Cambridge admit women, although I do not have the statistics. After all, Laura Spence was applying to Magdalen College. But Brown does have a point in regards to some other statistics. Among applicants with comparable records of academic achievement, those from private secondary schools are 25 times more likely to be admitted to Oxford or Cambridge than those from state schools. Private schools such as Eton, Rugby and Harrow educate only 7 percent of the relevant population, but their graduates comprise more than 50 percent of those admitted to Oxford or Cambridge.

It is possible to imagine that the elite private schools provide better preparation — but not that much better. The disparity in the admissions statistics does appear extreme.

Oxford and Cambridge were not always the elite universities that they are today. During the 18th century, they were just regarded as torpid and irrelevant, and it was not until the middle of the 19th century that they entered upon their glory days, avowedly becoming the educators of the governing class.

As such they drew mainly from the upper classes, although not primarily from the aristocracy.

After World War II, both universities were greatly democratized, at least according to the current standards. Note that even in the statistics that Brown is furious about, approximately half of the students come from state schools.

But today the requirements of a governing class are more complicated than they were 50 or even 150 years ago; the kind of knowledge required was more specialized and rigorous. This means that the governing class that does not strive to include the very brightest is likely to be inferior to the governing class that does seek them out and reward them. Today, merit is more important to a vigorous polity than at any time in the past.

Harvard, Yale and other American universities implemented a meritocratic admissions policy during the 1940s, and expanded their appeal to a national student constituency. Harvard once drew its students mostly from Massachusetts, and Yale from Connecticut and New York.

It is true that sons and daughters of alumni do receive a small advantage in admission to these selective schools. But at least two things can be said about that, and probably even Brown would agree that this is a wise policy.

First, the high-achieving sons and daughters of those currently enrolled will have a slight edge in admissions consideration. Thus meritocracy is not contradicted in principle, but only slightly modified.

Those who do not enjoy the advantage themselves will pass it on to the next generation, which, in any case, must have otherwise very strong credentials. Second, even elite universities are not part of Plato's perfect Republic with its abstract perfection. Actual institutions understand the benefits of family identification with the institution in terms of loyalty, financial support and so forth.

However, in England, the uproar over "Oxbridge" admissions is awkward for the Blair Labor government, which already has its hands full over the issue of membership in the European Union. A central appeal of Blair's "New Labor" is that unlike "Old Marxist Labor," it does not wage class warfare or play the politics of envy.

With his re-election effort less than two years away, what Blair does not need is an acrid controversy about state vs. private schools regarding admission to Oxford and Cambridge.

Partial privatization of Social Security a good idea

Two basic Social Security privatization proposals are being floated by politicians and economists. First, there's the proposal that the government invest in the stock market a portion of what each individual pays in Social Security taxes. The second proposal is to allow individuals to direct such stock-market investments themselves. Both proposals are flawed, but one of them is salvageable. Among the flaws is the partial abandonment of the idea that Social Security is an intergenerational transfer tax, which means that the working generation's taxes are paying for the retirements of the retired generation. The idea of each person contributing to his or her own retirement is not inherently bad, but to end the present program could be messy. Perhaps the best solution here would be for the government to fund current retirees out of general tax funds, while allowing current workers to commence accumulating money for their own retirements.

Next, the idea of government-decided investments is obviously a formula for failure. Wayne Angell, a former member of the Federal Reserve and economist at Bear Stearns criticized the idea: "Once the government becomes involved in investing in the private financial market, there are difficult temptations. If you can't invest in an industry because it doesn't meet a social test, then that enlarges the role of the government dictating to the private economy to a degree that many of us would find unacceptable." And Alan Greenspan has raised further doubts, saying, "There is really no strong evidence to suggest any positive aspects of moving Social Security funds into equities."

Greenspan fears that the Federal government would inevitably allow political considerations rather than economic return to color its investment decisions. This would not create the kind of returns either individuals or the government wants.

Yet another concern of economists is that the government's investment would inflate stock values.

Our primary concern about privatization has always stemmed from the concern that the government would in some manner control or direct investment decisions.

The solution to this is to remove the subjective nature of such decisions.

This can be accomplished by opening virtually all publicly traded instruments to Social Security investing. Under this plan, up to 25 percent of Social Security taxes could be directed into stocks, bonds or commodities — yes, even commodities. The essence of the concept is to allow people freedom of investment choice within the broadest possible parameters. Therefore, any security authorized for trading on a nationally recognized U.S. exchange should be included.

These would include, but not be limited to, the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, NASDAQ, NASDAQ Small Cap, OTCBB (Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board), the Chicago Board of Trade, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and the various regional exchanges.

Would there be risk? Yes. But it would be a risk of 25 percent of the Social Security taxes. That's an acceptable level. This concept of partial privatization would provide a combination of security and risk that could satisfy most privatization advocates without undermining the essential need for retirement safety.

Pastor Darrell Hendrickson, inspired by Christ and lead by the Holy Spirit, preaches an encouraging message every Sunday.

With so much confusion in our world today, people everywhere are searching desperately for answers and thirsty for hope. They are looking for a way to rebuild broken walls. We have what you are looking for, and we can introduce you to him. His name is Jesus!

Once you step through our doors, you'll be welcomed by warm hearted folks and trusted as one of the family.

Our children's church is gentle and informative and focuses on a personal relationship with the Father. Our evening service is informed, yet intimate. Our prayer warriors gather to conquer Satan's plans.

Berea Baptist Church

The Vacation Bible School theme for the summer of 2000 at Berea Baptist Church is "Clowning Around for Jesus." While the study will involve serious Bible study on the family, the week will focus on having a good time. Dimple the clown will be a guest of the school three of the evenings. Friday evening children will have an opportunity to put on a funny face and see how it feels to wear the paint, goofy hats, etc.

We invite children to join us at Berea for a good time, refreshments, games, and Bible study. Each evening will also feature a short study of either a mission site in the United States or in a foreign country.

The VBS is scheduled for June 19 - 23 from 8 to 8:30 p.m. and is for children ages 3 through grade 8. Berea Baptist Church is located at 4204 Wasson Road. Parents and kids can call Berea at 267-6438 each morning between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. for more information.

Hillcrest Baptist Church

"Is There a Family in the House?" a series of messages for the family is continuing this week with a message titled "The Fragrance of Faithful Fatherhood." It will be a challenge for our fathers on Father's Day. Read ahead in Psalm 128:1-4, then come and join us at Hillcrest Baptist Church on Sunday morning at 11. Pastor Kevin Parker will be preaching. Childcare, children's ministries and youth activities are provided, also. Hillcrest is located at 2000 W. F.M. 700, just west of Scenic Mountain Medical Center. The series will be available on audio cassette. Call the church for information at 267-1636.

Vacation Bible School begins the Monday morning at 8:30. Classes for pre-kindergarten through sixth grade are offered. The theme for the week is "Diving into the Depths of God's Faithfulness." We're already prepared with all kinds of deep sea surprises. Come and enroll your children. Each day VBS will meet from 8:30 to 11:30 with a special party time on Friday. All activities take place on our church campus. Rates are available by calling the church office.

The third week "Discovering the Bible" is being offered this Sunday evening at 5. This week will focus on an interesting overview of the New Testament. The class is ideal for those new to the Bible and those who've been reading it for years. Children of all ages are invited to attend the class with their parents. The class is held at Hillcrest Baptist Church.

Northside Baptist Church, a mission of Hillcrest Baptist Church, will be celebrating its seventh anniversary on June 25th with special services and a dinner on the grounds at 3 p.m. All friends, former members and neighbors are invited to the celebration. The church is located next to Bauer Elementary School at 204 N.W. St. Call 267-1639 or 267-4016 for more information.

Take a refreshment break! Hillcrest Baptist Church invites all to attend its prayer meeting this Wednesday evening at 7. In addition to a time of prayer, our congregation will be continuing a study of Jesus prayer in John 17 titled "He Prayed for Me!" The study examines the personal way that Jesus prayed specifically for future believers just before He faced the cross. Children and youth activities are also provided during this time.

First Assembly of God

Pastor R.T. Havener and the congregation of the First Assembly of God Church located at Fourth and Lancaster would like to invite you to join them for an exciting day of worship this Sunday.

On this special day for fathers, Pastor Havener will be bringing a message to fathers in the 10:40 a.m. service, "Men you are somebody." This message taken from Hebrews 2:5-11, will elevate man and show what God really intended when He created man in His own image.

In the evening service at 6 p.m. Pastor Havener will be speaking on the "Experiences of Discipleship." This message will be taken from the gospel of Mark and will deal with "The

Don't let your summer vacation keep you from attending church

One of the summer difficulties faced each year in many churches is the loss of attendance. Pastors are forced to deal with the reality of their

KEN McMEANS

Though most secure ministers don't deery their parishioners a much needed break, many become concerned that members don't grasp their own significance in the work of the local church.

Since it's my turn to write for the Herald, I'll gladly say what your pastor would love to say. Let's look at the issues.

First, from the family's perspective. The question that may be on the hearts of many who attend "busy" churches is, "Is this church really good for my family?" Many well-intended churches have overburdened the schedules of already busy members and forced them to choose between good activities and time away with family. Some may feel that they have to get away in order to "get away."

Another valid perspective might be, "Travel allows me to broaden my family to a better understanding of the World in which we live." Many families who love and serve the Lord become more involved in mission activities after traveling outside their own culture. It is good to understand that the world is bigger than Big Spring.

Finally, there is nothing wrong with "STOPPING!" In the fast pace world in which we live we often have to schedule stop time. Even Jesus acknowledged the need for His disciples to have a break from their busy ministry. Some churches equate stopping with sinning. We need to learn the difference!

Now, how do the ministers respond to the members need for getting away. Responses are as varied as the ministers themselves. Some heap guilt on anyone without perfect attendance, or even threaten the leadership positions held by the malefactors. Others anchor down and hold on for dear life, knowing that summer will soon pass. A few even take the position of "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em," and become scarce from June until August, practically shutting down every ministry of the church throughout the summer. Surely God's Kingdom was designed to operate more than nine months out of the year. Let's find some balance!

First, acknowledge reality. Families enjoy getting away while the kids are out of school. Wasn't it God who said, "Let my people go!" Further study shows that when they finally went they wanted to return!

Second, be reasonable. When you travel, be keenly aware that you are important to your local church. In your mind you may be no more than a warm body in a pew. To God, however, you are a strategically placed instrument in His body. They are no minor players! When a part of the body is missing, the loss is always felt. Never overextend your stay. Plan on being back before Sunday, if possible.

Third, care radically. Many people who give regularly during the school year, become negligent during the summer months. If you truly care about your local church, it should be extremely difficult to spend money otherwise set aside for God's work on personal pleasure. When you leave, the expenses of the church continue.

In Malachi, God told the people that failure in giving was equivalent to robbing Him. If you receive pay while away on vacation (and most of us do) don't neglect to give God His portion.

Finally, drive religiously. We really would like to have you back! Enjoy your vacation and stay safe. We'll see you when you get home.

What will become of man's homage to his faith?

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — Nearly every day for 30 years, John Greco would close his law practice in the mid-afternoon and make his way up a rocky hill overlooking the city.

A diminutive man who once considered himself too frail for the priesthood, Greco would cart concrete, scrap metal, discarded church statues and department store mannequins to his plot of land.

At an age when his peers were retiring, Greco began his life's work: a miniature representation of Jerusalem and walk-through catechism he called Holy Land USA. Busloads of church groups — an estimated 40,000 people annually — visited Holy Land after it opened in 1958.

But when Greco died in 1996 at the age of 90, no one knew how to tend his labor of love. The 17-acre site, willed to an order of nuns, has been battered by weather, vandals and neglect and is slowly being destroyed.

Its loss is mourned by admirers of American folk art, who consider it a treasure, and by others inspired spiritually by Greco's creation:

"This was a service to the people," said the Rev. Stanley Smolenski, who once celebrated Mass in makeshift chapels at Holy Land. "I don't think it should just be relegated to the past."

The most enduring piece of Holy Land remaining is a 50-foot cross still lights the night over this city of 100,000; a struggling industrial center once known for the number of priests it turned out.

At its peak, Holy Land contained 150 buildings. A cave-like grotto, 8 feet high by 18 feet wide and housing a Nativity scene, was the centerpiece. On the hill rising behind it were crammed dozens of structures representing Bethlehem and Jerusalem. Beyond that stood a rudimentary Egypt, complete with tiny pyramids and a sphinx.

A Roman Catholic Stations of the Cross wound through the site, ending with a life-size hilltop representation of Jesus' crucifixion.

"You could be standing up to your knees in Jerusalem and the buildings out in Waterbury looked like toy houses," said Sandy Mainieri, who as a child watched Holy Land develop.

The exhibits were far from orthodox. In the 200-foot-long catacombs, stories of martyrs were told using headless mannequins laid in makeshift tombs. The inn in Bethlehem where Mary and Joseph were turned away in the story of Jesus' birth had a No Vacancy sign in motel-style lettering.

The Garden of Eden was a trailer with its side removed; wiggled mannequins represented Adam and Eve.

Mingled with the materials rescued from the trash were factory-made church statues, including the contents of the Vatican booth at the 1964 World's Fair. The pieces considered most valuable were protected from vandals with chicken wire.

"Everything John Greco did at Holy Land was the opposite of what is recommended for liturgical art," said Marek Ciarniecki, an iconographer who admires the site. "But he did it with divine inspiration. He just wanted to bring the experience of Holy Land to the people."

As Greco's health faded, so did Holy Land's. Plywood and plaster, the main ingredients of many displays, became warped with exposure. The Grotto and other structures became shelter for the homeless as the neighborhood grew poorer. The site was closed for renovations in 1994 and never reopened.

A few years before his death, Greco turned over the property to the Religious Teachers Filippini. The nuns, who cared for Greco in his small shingled home outside Holy Land's gates, have often been blamed for its demise.

"They did nothing to protect it and didn't have the vision to have a plan," said Salvatore Scalora, a University of Connecticut art professor whose classes in the early 1990s often received guided tours from Greco.

Big Spring Rotary Club

The Big Spring Rotary Club heard a presentation on Tuesday by South Plains College assistant professor Marla Turrentine of Levelland on month long teaching trip to Kenya.

Turrentine spent four weeks as a volunteer teacher at a small village in Kenya.

She stayed in Gazsi Bay, a village of 800 located by the Indian Ocean where the average home in that area is made from mangrove wood and the homes are packed with mud to seal the gaps. Most of the homes did not have running water and electricity.

The teacher spent most of her time in Kenya working with students at Gazsi Primary School that had 270 students and only seven teachers.

The school had no running water of electricity and books, papers, pens and crayons that Turrentine took with her from the United States were welcomed.

Because she taught in a largely Muslim community, she had to wear long dresses or a traditional African wrap to cover her legs, although her head did not have to be covered.

She is interested in going back to Kenya for another teaching stint, but currently she is working on behalf of Rotary International to raise more school supplies for children in Kenya.

Big Spring Chapter No. 67, Order of the Eastern Star, will meet Tuesday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. at the Masonic Lodge.

TRAVELING TIPS

WACO (AP) — Some tips for traveling with grandchildren as outlined on the AARP website.

How Long Should Our Trips Be?

- Preschool children (ages 3-5) do better on a short trip, such as a day trip or weekend.
- Grade-schoolers can handle up to a week.
- High-schoolers and older can usually go for two weeks.
- Where Should We Go and What Should We Do?
- Children are more interested in activity than information. Take them places that will make an impression through an activity or a unique setting.
- Don't plan every minute. Allow time for spontaneous activities or relaxation time.

How Should I Plan Our Time?

- Let the children have some say about the itinerary. Then be flexible.
- Learn your grandchild's routine ahead of time and then stick to it as much as possible.
- Choose one spot as home-base, venturing out on day trips from there.
- Invite your grandchildren to bring a friend along to help provide entertainment, and consider inviting one of your friends along for some "grown up" conversation.

Supporting role:
Being the pastor's husband

FORT WORTH (AP) — Behind every great pastor is her husband. At least, that's the way the Rev. Ann Stevens sees it. The supporting role that her husband, Hoyt, plays has helped her with her ministry.

"Since I began this adventure, I felt he gave me support that was vital to every success I might have," she said.

Sure, Hoyt Stevens has credentials of his own — not the least of which is a career as an aeronautical engineer. But after retiring from Lockheed Martin four years ago, he took on the supporting role as the pastor's husband.

"He's the ideal spouse of a pastor," Ann Stevens said. "He loves everybody, and he's supportive of everybody. There is no kind of competitive spirit in him. He's a gracious, humble person."

Supportive. Gracious. Humble. Uncompetitive.

In decades gone by, these characteristics also topped the wish list for pastors' spouses, but in those days, "spouse" nearly always meant "wife."

As more women take on jobs as senior pastors, many of their husbands are carving out spots for themselves in a role once mostly the domain of women.

In many ways, that role has not changed much: These husbands sing, teach, support. But there are differences, pastor's husbands say. Few attend gatherings to exchange advice, and there are some indications that the local delicatessen plays a larger role in church potluck suppers.

"I think it is a new role," Ann Stevens said. "Just like women are blazing new trails in ministry, their spouses are as well."

Take Jim Allen, husband of the Rev. Nancy E. Allen, senior pastor at Eastern Hills United Methodist Church and associate pastor at St. Matthew United Methodist Church, both in Fort Worth.

A physician by profession, Jim Allen takes an active part in his wife's ministry by singing in the choir, teaching a Sunday school class and wowing the covered-dish crowd with his wife's crockery, if not exactly what is to be found inside.

"Anything the preacher asks me to do, I do," Allen joked.

But Allen is not an active member of the United Methodist Church's local spouse support group. And though his wife's church is an important part of his life, Allen's identity is not primarily defined by being a pastor's husband, he said.

"It certainly is here," said Allen, referring to how he's seen in his wife's church. "Not in my practice. There I am not known as Rev. Allen's husband."

Not all husbands are active in their wives' churches, of course. But those who are have felt welcome, they say.

Occasionally, there's a mix-up over titles, though.

At a social gathering for Arlington Heights Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), where his wife, Laurie Feille, is the senior pastor, Bryan Feille was mistakenly introduced as the pastor's wife by a member of the congregation.

"It slipped out," Bryan Feille said. "... since then, we have joked, 'This is our pastor's wife.'"

If the work is similar, the big difference for a pastor's husband is that the supporting role is not a command performance, said Bryan Feille, who is a former church pastor and an associate dean of students at Texas Christian University's Brite Divinity School.

"One of the biggest things is that most people have expectations of what a pastor's wife is and should do, and they don't have any expectations of a husband," Bryan Feille said.

Indian state orders security for Christian schools

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — After the beating death of a Roman Catholic priest, security forces India's most populous state are providing protection for all Christian missionary schools, the Press Trust of India reports.

Police in Uttar Pradesh continue to investigate the June 6 murder of the Rev. George Kuzhikandan by unidentified attackers in Mathura, 90 miles southeast of New Delhi. Two days later there were four church bombings in India, though no deaths resulted.

Archbishop Alan de Lastic, president of the national Catholic bishops' conference, said India's Christians face their worst challenge in five decades.

Christians make up just 2.3 percent of India's population of 1 billion. Relations between the two religions have deteriorated the past two years as Hindu groups accused missionaries of using foreign funds to entice poor, low-caste Hindus. Christians deny the accusation.

Methodists get advance look at new hymnal supplement

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The United Methodist Hymnal, last revised in 1989, is already out of date.

The large denomination is preparing a supplement to the hymnal and has sent 70,000 samplers to give an advance look to delegates at regional conferences from May through July. The full song book, "The Faith We Sing," is due in December.

The 285 pieces in the $10 soft-cover will include contemporary Christian "praise choruses," world and ethnic music, gospel songs, new hymns and some old standards, including hymns that were dropped in the 1989 revision.

The most popular of the latter is "Eternal Father, Strong to Save."

Years from now, the next edition of the full hymnal "will be different than anything we've seen before," said senior music editor Gary Alan Smith.

IN BRIEF

Borden County's Smith signs with Lady Hawks

Lindsey Smith, who helped Borden County's Lady Coyotes to the Region I, Class 1A regional finals during the 1999-2000 basketball season, has signed a letter of intent to play for Howard College's Lady Hawks this fall.

Smith averaged 12 points, five steals and five rebounds per game for the Lady Coyotes and has been named to a number of all-region and all-state teams in the past two years.

In addition, Smith will play in the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star game in Arlington next month, as well as the Texas Six-Man Schools all-star game in Lubbock on July 22.

Rangers take revenge in Little League tourney

The National League Rangers earned a measure of revenge Thursday night, taking a 5-4 win over the International Orioles during the only game played in the Little League City Tournament.

The win allowed the Rangers to advance into tonight's 7:30 championship game against the National League Lions at the National League Park.

The Rangers, who were knocked into the elimination bracket with a loss to the Orioles on Monday, now must take two wins over the Lions to claim the tournament championship.

The Lions, having survived the winners' bracket, need only win tonight to chalk up the title.

Another Belle grand slam dooms Rangers in loss to Orioles BALTIMORE (AP) — The book on Albert Belle says he begins to hit in warm weather. He evidently has a knack for crushing the ball in soggy conditions, too.

Belle hit a grand slam for the second straight night and also had a solo shot as the Baltimore Orioles stretched their winning streak to five Thursday by defeating the Texas Rangers 10-1.

Texas has lost eight straight, its longest skid since a 10-game slide in July 1995. David Segui had two hits for the Rangers, who have dropped six straight — and 10 of 12 — on the road.

Belle homered starting the second for a 1-0 lead, hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh that made it 4-1 and capped a six-run eighth with his 13th career slam. The six RBIs matched a career high.

One night earlier, Belle homered in the rain. He did it again this time, connecting off Mark Clark as a light shower drenched the few thousands fans at Camden Yards who stuck around after a rain delay of 2 hours, 7 minutes.

"Albert is Albert," Orioles manager Mike Hargrove said. "He's an RBI monster, a run producer who absolutely legitimizes any lineup he's in."

Belle has 13 homers, seven in his last 12 games. He has hit in 15 of his last 16 games, going 26-for-61 (.426).

Six pitchers combined on a five-hitter as the Orioles completed their first three-game sweep of Texas since July 1997.

"This is basically the same club we had in May," said Rangers manager Johnny Oates, who held a closed-door meeting with his team after the game. "We all got us into this position and we all have to get us out of here. Right now, it doesn't matter if we lose 3-2 or 10-1. ... It's time for us to focus together."

The game was interrupted by rain after the third inning with Baltimore up 2-1. After the delay, Hargrove replaced starter Sidney Ponson, who allowed one run and two hits.

Chuck McElroy (1-0) pitched two hitless innings, Gabe Molina worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the sixth and Alan Mills, obtained Tuesday from Los Angeles, pitched a perfect seventh in his return to the Orioles.

Buddy Groom gave up two hits in the eighth and Mike Trombley finished.

It was a surprisingly strong showing from a maligned bullpen that owns a 6.26 ERA with 15 blown saves.

"It's what we envisioned coming into the season," Hargrove said.

Texas starter Esteban Loaiza (3-5) retired the first six batters after the delay before Mike Bordick opened the sixth with a single. Delino DeShields then delivered a perfect hit-and-run single and B.J. Surhoff doubled in a run that made it 3-1 and chased Loaiza.

Francisco Cordero walked the bases loaded in the seventh before Belle's fly. Harold Baines snapped a 1-for-26 skid with an RBI single in the eighth, and DeShields walked with the bases loaded before Belle homered on a 3-2 count.

Saddle bronc lead changes hands

By JOHN A. MOSELEY

Managing Editor.

Perhaps spurred on by a large and enthusiastic "Family Night" crowd, a number of contestants turned in impressive performances during Thursday night's second performance of the 67th annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

Without question the best of those showings came in the saddle bronc competition where Cole Hardin of San Angelo spurred his way to an 83-point ride aboard "Todd" to take a seven-point lead in that event.

Veteran bronc rider Tom Reeves of Eagle Butte, S.D., also turned in an impressive ride aboard "Chili Bean" during the session, but his 75 points left him trailing a trio of riders who posted scores of 76 during Wednesday's opening performance of the rodeo.

While Hardin was the only contestant to take an event lead during the second performance, the crowd saw a number of thrilling rides.

Beau Mayo of Stephenville provided a solid ride aboard "Grey Eagle" during the bareback bronc riding session and his 76 points was a dozen better than the 64 the Clay McKesson of Lubbock earned for his eight-second stay aboard "Jim Dandy."

The lead in bareback riding, however, belongs to Kirby Berry of Poolville, who was initially announced with a 79-point ride in Wednesday's session. Officials later noted that Berry had earned 81 points for his ride and had a one-point lead over Lance Crump of Campbell.

None of Thursday's calf ropers came close to challenging the lead. Ricky Canton of Cleveland and Keith Hudson of Sonora share after posting times of 17.0 seconds on two runs, but Carter Edmonson managed a time of 9.6 seconds to go along with his 8.4 in the first go, giving him an 18.0 in the "average" and moved into third place overall.

Golf tourney raises $1,000 for Cowboy Crisis Fund

JOHN A. MOSELEY

Managing Editor

A field of 46 players raised more than $1,000 for the Justin Cowboys Crisis Fund during the Cowboy Golf Tournament staged in conjunction with the 67th annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo was staged at the Comanche Trail Golf Course on Thursday.

The fivesome of Byron Harris, Robbie Phernetton, Terry Howell, Steve Ward and Cody Cox of Fluvanna does his best to stay aboard "Yellow Fever" during Thursday night's bareback bronc riding competition at the 67th Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo, but winds up without a score.

Raymond Hollabaugh of Stamford turned in the fastest roping run of the evening, tying his calf in 8.4 seconds.

Alan Oehlert of Ozona maintained his lead in the steer wrestling with a time of 8.3 seconds on two runs, but Clay Bailey of Stephenville grabbed plenty of attention with his 4.3-second clocking during Thursday's show.

Bailey's 4.3 clocking left him with a 9.1 total on the pair, leaving him third in the overall standings going into tonight's third performance at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl.

The rest of the bulldogging field ran into a number of problems, as the best time behind Bailey's was the 6.4-second clocking turned in by Jamie Koonsman of Richland Springs.

Wednesday's proceedings were particularly tough on a couple of Big Spring contestants. Howard College rodeo coach Greg Kernick failed to post a time in the steer wrestling, while Dane Driver posted a time of 10.10 seconds in the calf roping.

As was the case in Wednesday night's opening show, none of the women entered in Thursday's barrel racing competition were able to challenge the 16.70 clocking turned in by Jimmy Kay Davis during slack competition.

Shantae Truelock of Henderson came close to becoming the second rider to crack the 17-second barrier, but her 17.08 clocking was only good enough to put her third in the barrel racing standings.

Several bull riders find the Auger Rodeo Co. stock too much to handle during Thursday's run, but Colby Yates of Azle slid into the No. 3 spot in that event with an 80-point ride aboard "Red Baron."

The bull riding lead, however, belongs to Gary Puckett of Post. Puckett's 88-point ride Wednesday night will make it difficult for the rest of the field to take top money in that event.

In Thursday's mutton busting event, Shelby Rotan of Forsan turned in a 77-point ride to take the evening's top prize in the youngsters' showcase.

64 score turned in by Jim Rodger, Howard Smith, Spot Cockrell, Dewey Cockrell and Dewey Byers.

The tournament's field was completed by a couple of teams that finished with 4-under-par 67 totals — a fivesome composed of Claude Craven, Randy Cotton, Tim Dunn, Steve Moses and Rob Smets, and the team of O.L. Cooper, Jerry Phillips, Cary Burchett, Skipper Driver and Johnny Earp.

Lakers can't hardly wait for their return to NBA throne

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Even though Rick Fox had only a few hours to rest between a late overtime game and the next morning's practice, he was awake before his alarm went off.

"It was hard to sleep last night," Fox said. "The thoughts of a championship have you on edge. It's going to be like that until it's over."

There's just one victory standing between the Los Angeles Lakers and an NBA title. Understandably, Fox and his teammates can't wait — and they might not even have to wait until they get home to win it.

The Lakers hold a 3-1 advantage over the Indiana Pacers entering tonight's Game 5 of the NBA Finals. Los Angeles took a chokehold on the series with a dramatic 120-118 overtime victory in Game 4 on Wednesday night.

"We know how difficult it is to beat this team on their home court," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "We had to have some good fortune and some breaks here and there to win."

For a team that hasn't lost three straight games all season, the title seems to be in the bag for Los Angeles.

The big question is whether the Lakers can hand a particularly disheartening loss to Indiana tonight on its home floor in coach Larry Bird's final game, or whether they will be forced to return to Staples Center and tempt fate for another game.

Los Angeles has a shaky recent history in closeout games, losing three of them to Sacramento and Phoenix before coming within one quarter of blowing a 3-1 series lead to the Portland Trail Blazers in the Western Conference finals.

"No question we'd like to do it here," Robert Horry said. "That's a great test of a team, and we've had trouble closing our opponents out during the playoffs. It would be good to shake that on Friday night."

The Lakers are in this position because of a breakout game from Kobe Bryant, whose sprained left ankle should allow him to play in Game 5. He scored 28 points — eight in overtime — and made a rebound basket with 5.9 seconds left to give the Lakers a three-point lead.

Bryant's image underwent a fundamental change in Game 4 with his transcendent performance. The series' final game will almost certainly bring a change to Shaq.

For seven seasons, O'Neal's sublime skills have been tinged by his infamous comment that he had won at every level except college and the pros. With his rap albums, bad movies and flippant disregard for free-throw shooting, he was criticized by people both in and around the game.

It's hard for O'Neal to escape that past — ABC is rebroadcasting his movie "Kazaam" this weekend. But now that he is 48 minutes away from essentially leaving that reputation behind, he claims he has Jackson to thank.

"I've always been on teams that won 50, 60 games and did OK in the playoffs, but we never had the coach that could get us over the hump," O'Neal said. "In the first, second and third series (this season), when everybody thought we were in trouble, we went back, made some adjustments and got over the hump."

Pirates throw shutout at Braves

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kris Benson grew up wanting to pitch like one of the Atlanta Braves' starters: reliable, consistent, dominating. Unfortunately for the Braves, he did.

Benson shut down the one of baseball's best offensive teams like few other pitchers have this season, limiting the Braves to five hits in the Pittsburgh Pirates' 2-0 victory Thursday.

The right-handed Benson wasn't overpowering — he had five strikeouts — but instead got most of his outs in his first career shutout on 18 ground balls.

It was only the second shutout this season for the Braves, who began the night with the majors' best record.

"I've been waiting for one of these for a long time," said Benson, the No. 1 pick in the 1996 amateur draft. "You know when you pitch against the Braves that every pitch is going to be a big one. I was able to get ahead of the hitters, and I was fortunate I got a bunch of ground balls."

Benson wouldn't publicly acknowledge that beating the Braves meant more than shutting out, say, the Cardinals or Diamondbacks.

However, the right-hander grew up in suburban Atlanta watching the Braves and star pitchers Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz. Benson was impressed at how they always seemed to make pitching look so easy.

Or, just how he made it look in his fourth career complete game. "This is a hot-hitting club he shut out," opposing starter Kevin Millwood said. "This club probably puts more runs on the board than any team I've seen, and he shut us down for nine innings. He was good. He was really good."

Only two Braves outs came on fly balls.

"He was working his sinker, and the ball was running down," Andrew Jones said. "You have to swing at it because it's a strike, but you're just going to hit the top part of the ball, and that's why he got all the ground balls."

In the only other National League games, Colorado beat Houston 4-3 and Los Angeles defeated Arizona 4-0.

In the American League, it was Chicago 12, New York 3; Baltimore 10, Texas 1; Tampa Bay 2, Anaheim 1; and Seattle 12, Minnesota 5.

Benson limited the middle of the Braves' order to one hit and was especially tough with runners on base. The Braves had at least one runner in all but two innings, but never once advanced a runner to third.

"When he has his good stuff — and he has good stuff — he can dominate the game," Pirates manager Gene Lamont said of Benson, who has a 2.09 ERA in his last 10 starts. "That's a good hitting team over there."

Benson's pitching didn't surprise the Braves, who lost to him 7-1 on August 3, 1999. His hitting did.

Benson managed to get his bat on Millwood's fastball in the fourth, lining it off first baseman Wally Joyner's glove for an infield single that drove in the game's first and most important run.

Second baseman Quilvio Vera fielded the ball after Joyner couldn't handle it, but lost a race to first base as Millwood neglected to cover on the play.

"It was a mental mistake, really," said Millwood, who made his second start of the four-game series. "I saw the ball bounce off Wally's glove, but I didn't see Quilvio. I couldn't decide whether I should back up the plate or go to first. I should have just gone to first."

Kevin Young started the inning with a double, and Bruce Aven followed by breaking a 0-for-15 slump with a single.

The Pirates added a run in the eighth on Brian Giles' leadoff double and Pat Meares' two-out, run-scoring single, which also didn't leave the infield.

Millwood (4-6) gave up a run on five hits in six innings, but lost his fourth in a row despite pitching much better than he did in Atlanta's 10-9 victory Monday. Then, he was chased after allowing five runs in one-third of an inning.

Rockies 5, Astros 4
Todd Helton homered off Billy Wagner (2-4), and Jeffrey Hammonds scored from third on a close play at the plate as Colorado rallied in the ninth at Coors Field.

Wagner blew a save opportunity for the eighth time in 14 chances, and the Astros fell to 3-rolled in from the Pacific Ocean, erasing the calm of a sunny, warm morning. By the end, he had a 1-stroke lead over Miguel Angel Jimenez, a Spaniard who has never won a tournament in the United States. Jimenez opened his round with five birdies in seven holes.

The fog halted play just before 4 p.m. EDT, with nearly half the 156 players still on the course. The opening round was to resume at 8:45 a.m. PDT Friday, with the second round getting under way about two hours after that.

Among those still on the course when play was suspended was Nick Faldo, who was at 4 under after 13 holes. Faldo hasn't won a tournament in more than three years.

John Huston finished his round two strokes back of Woods at 4-under 67 and Bobby Clampett, who grew up on the Monterey Peninsula, was at 68. Clampett was playing in his first Open since 1986 and in his first tournament of the year.

"Can you believe this?" Clampett said. "It was extremely emotional for me. At times out there, I was fighting off the tears."

Hal Sutton, who opened his round with an eagle and was 6 under after 13 holes, finished at 2-under 69. He had a double-bogey 7 at the 14th when he pitched long out of the rough and missed a short bogey putt, then bogeyed the 16th and 18th.

Jack Nicklaus, playing in his 44th consecutive U.S. Open, teed off late Thursday afternoon and bogeyed his first two holes. Nicklaus, who won the 1972 Open at Pebble Beach, was at 2-over 37 after nine holes.

Tom Watson, the 1982 Open champion at Pebble Beach, had three straight birdies starting on the fourth hole and was at 1-under 34 after nine holes.

Tom Kite, who won the 1992 Open on this course, was 2 over after nine holes. He started his round with three straight bogeys, then had an eagle on the par-5 sixth.

John Daly wished the fog rolled in just a little earlier. He was at 3 over when he got to the 18th hole, but then everything fell apart.

Daly hit one ball into someone's backyard, three into the ocean, hit a left-handed shot from against the sea wall in the bunker and ended up with a 14 on the final hole. He walked off the course and withdrew from the tournament.

15-in one-run games. Houston overcame a 3-2 deficit in the top of the ninth when Jose Jimenez (4-0) allowed a game-tying single to Bill Spiers and forced home the go-ahead run with a bases-loaded walk to Richard Hidalgo.

Dodgers 4, Diamondbacks 0. Kevin Brown (4-0) pitched a four-hitter at Dodger Stadium for his third straight complete game and struck out 10 in his 17th career shutout.

Todd Stottlemyre (8-4), activated from the disabled list before the game, trailed 3-0 after six pitches, giving up home runs to Todd Hollandsworth and Gary Sheffield around Mark Grudzielanek's double.

White Sox 12, Yankees 3. Chuck Knoblauch's throwing problem hit a new low ... and high ... and wide, as he made a career-high three errors in New York's loss.

As recently as 1997, the second baseman won an AL Gold Glove. Last year, he made a league-high 26 errors, and Thursday's miscues increased this season's total to 12. He even said recently he might retire if his problem persisted.

Knoblauch's misplays led to two runs in the matchup between the teams with the AL's best records.

Paul Konerko and Brook Fordyce each had three hits and three RBIs as Chicago, coming off a three-game sweep at Cleveland, won for the 13th time in 15 games. Magglio Ordonez added a two-run homer.

The White Sox, who have the league's top mark at 41-24, lead the AL Central by 5 1/2 games — their biggest edge since the end of the 1993 season.

Mike Sotok (6-5) won despite giving up 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Especially For Dad

"What Makes Him My Daddy?"
from a child's eyes
Jeanette Marie Valle
(1st Church of God)

It's not the fact he gave me life or that he works hard every day.
It's not his picture on the wall or the bills that takes his pay.
It's not his slippers by the door or the smell of fresh cut grass nor is it good intentions or when he empties Mommy's trash.

My father is my daddy, cause he listens every day.
He kneels by my little bed every time I pray.

My Daddy is my Daddy, cause instead of sleeping in he wakes early in the morning so our fishing could begin and even if its hot outside he'll come with me to play.
That's why I wish my daddy A Happy Father's Day.

My Daddy is My Daddy cause when I'm walking home from school he's by the window watching that seemed to be "a family rule."

But if Daddy wasn't there one day I think my world would just cave in there'd be no one to share my trophies when my baseball games, I'd win. There'd be no "Herald" by his chair, no socks left on the floor - there'd be no day, like Father's Day celebrated any more.

O Daddy, I just love you, I'm so glad you love me, too. And I'm glad that I'm your "Rascal".

Happy Father's Day, to you.

Glory to God!

THIS DATE
IN HISTORY

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, June 16, the 168th day of 2000. There are 198

Today's Highlight in History: On June 16, 1858, in a speech in Springfield, Ill., Senate candidate Abraham Lincoln said the slavery issue had to be resolved, declaring, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

On this date:

In 1567, Mary, Queen of Scots, was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle in Scotland.

In 1897, the government signed a treaty of annexation with Hawaii.

In 1903, Ford Motor Co. was incorporated.

In 1933, the National Industrial Recovery Act became law. (It was later struck down by the Supreme Court.)

In 1955, Pope Pius XII excommunicated Argentine President Juan Domingo Peron — a ban that was lifted eight years later.

In 1960, the Alfred Hitchcock movie "Psycho" opened in New York.

In 1961, Soviet ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev defected to the West while his troupe was in Paris.

In 1963, the world's first female space traveler, Valentina Tereshkova, was launched into orbit by the Soviet Union aboard Vostok 6.

In 1970, Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, N.J., became the first black to win a mayoral election in a major Northeast city.

In 1978, President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos exchanged the instruments of ratification for the Panama Canal treaties.

Ten years ago: A crowd in the Netherlands welcomed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who thanked them for staunch Dutch support for the anti-apartheid movement.

Five years ago: Bosnian government forces aided by Bosnian Croats unleashed a major offensive in hopes of breaking the Serb stronghold on Sarajevo. Salt Lake City was awarded the 2002 Winter Olympic Games.

One year ago: Vice President Al Gore announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination. Kathleen Ann Soliah, a fugitive member of the Symbionese Liberation Army, was captured in St. Paul, Minn., where she was living as Sara Jane Olson. Thabo Mbeki took the oath as president of South Africa, succeeding Nelson Mandela.

Today's Birthdays: Former Washington Post Co. Chairman Katharine Graham is 83. Author Erich Segal is 63. Author Joyce Carol Oates is 62. Country singer Billy "Crash" Craddock is 61. Songwriter Lamont Dozier is 59. R&B singer Eddie Levert is 58. Actress Joan Van Ark is 57.

Thought for Today: "We fear something before we hate it. A child who fears noises becomes a man who hates noise." — Cyril Connolly, British critic (1903-1974)
