Debts—
The President is having plenty of trouble inside on this war debt business. Leaks and hidden opposition are thwarting his best laid plans. He feels somewhat miffed about it.

The thing started when a certain European debtor sounded us out not so long ago on a new idea. It called for partial payment of the June 15 debt installment. Each debtor would pay what he could without taxing the Treasury and we would not call it default.

It was a very ticklish business. The utmost secrecy was preserved. That is, it was until Mr. Roosevelt called in his advisers and asked what they thought.

Next day two New York newspapers published a version of it all over Page One.

The cat could not have been let out of the bag at a more time. The radio spouted it fast, taking the news to Paris. There the French government was trying to cajole the Chamber of Deputies into paying us the installment due last December 15. Deputies were on the verge of making the appropriation when the news from New York upset the speaker. The deal was called off.

The White House here issued a prompt denial but a denial never catches up with a fact. It was too late. The deed was done.

Some abuse has been heaped on the press by the administration for the way this thing turned out. As usual the real root of the difficulty was overlooked.

Somebody told. Obviously it was not one of Mr. Roosevelt's friends who did not want the scheme to succeed. In telling it, as usual, the sponsor made it bigger than it was. What actually was a cage sounding out of opinion became a concluded deal. Arrangements have been made; the President is willing—and all that sort of thing.

It would be unfair to point a finger of suspicion at anyone without being able to prove it. Mr. Roosevelt could probably figure out who it was without half trying.

No one will tell you the truth about anything involved in the debt question, but it appears the original proposition came either from Great Britain or Italy.

The best guess would be that the British ambassador mentioned it informally one day when he strolled into the White House. However, the Italians knew all about it and may ultimately come forward with that or a similar proposition.

At any rate France was not in on the play and felt hurt.

If the administration can get Congress out of town before June 15 this debt business may be settled yet.

You may see Italy come forward with what they call a modus vivendi. That means a way of making the payment without making it. It would be some variation of the partial payment plan. Arrangements for something like that have been going on some time, but they will not be sprung unless Congress quits. The wolves on the hill would howl too much. Already they have an inkling of what is going on and are determined to break it up.

That factor will probably keep things up in the air until the last minute.

News—
No effort has ever been made in peace times here to gag the press on international negotiations. The rule of decency prevails. No one would publish anything he knew was against the interests of his country. No one has lately.

The whole situation resolves itself down to a game. The administration usually tries to keep delicate negotiations secret. It has every right to do so. Despite what the theorists say you just can not conduct the affairs of nations in the open. Too many varied interests are involved. Too many people are waiting to take advantage of you.

The press always is trying to find out what is going on. In its eagerness sometimes it is misled. As a rule you will find the press wrong less often than the statesmen.

League—
Nobody lifted an eyebrow when we sent delegates last week to the International Labor Council of the League of Nations.

The reason was that the news was broken so gently. A newspaperman heard about it 24 hours before the delegates were to sail. He was told by an official source that the information must not be released until 11 a. m. the following day. The delegates sailed an hour before that time. Obviously some

Two Deaths Follow Party And Accident

Slaying And Suicide Occur On Girls' College Campus

MILWAUKEE (UP)—A slaying and suicide on the campus of Milwaukee Downer college, exclusive school for girls, Wednesday followed an automobile accident near Waukesha in which one man was killed and two young women were seriously injured. The tragedies followed a party at Waukesha beach.

Appliances May Be Sold By Utility Firms Court Holds

AUSTIN (UP)—The Third Court of Civil Appeals held public service companies could, under the law, engage in business of selling electric and gas appliances.

Decision was in the case appealed from the Travis county district court by San Antonio Public Service Company which, on application of the state, had been restrained from selling to customers certain merchandise used by takers of gas and electricity.

Indiana Voters Favoring Repeal

INDIANAPOLIS (UP)—Wets continued to maintain advantage in Indiana Wednesday as returns accumulated from scattered precincts on vote Tuesday on the question of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

On the basis of incomplete unofficial returns wets appeared to have definitely won 250 of the 329 delegates.

Reforestation Camp To Be Urged For Scenic Mountain Improvement

Big Spring will join other Texas cities in the parade to secure reforestation camps.

Development of the scenic mountain tract is in mind by those seeking a camp here. The mountain was designated as a state park during the administration of Pat M. Neff, former governor.

For years the driveway around the crest of the mountain has been put in good repair at intermittent intervals. B. F. Robbins has headed this work for the past three seasons and was in charge this spring when the roadway received its latest grooming.

Material and outline for a brief petitioning the federal government for a camp is being collected and will be compiled later.

T-P Employee Loses Leg As Mishap Result

J. P. Hawk, 57, Falls Under Moving Train, Condition Is Serious

J. P. Hawk, 57, a veteran switchman of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company here, had to have his right leg amputated at the knee Tuesday night after he was thrown or fell beneath a moving train in the local yards.

He suffered possible internal injuries. He was rushed to the Big Spring Hospital in an Eberly ambulance, and his condition was reported serious Wednesday afternoon.

Officers Of K. Of P. Lodge Are Elected

H. C. Carson Becomes Chancellor Commander To December 31

Knights of Pythias of Big Spring elected new officers for the next term ending December 31 at their meeting Tuesday evening.

H. C. Carson was made Chancellor Commander. C. D. Walters became vice-chancellor; other officers are C. B. Johnson, Prelate; Hubert Fridge, Master at Arms; L. D. Sykes, inner guard; C. A. Johnson, outer guard.

The offices of Keeper of Records and Seal, Master of Finance and Master of Education were not filled at this time, as these officers are elected for one-year terms and are now being filled by J. H. Wright, W. B. Sullivan, Jr., and J. A. Smith, respectively.

The lodge plans a memorial service the date and program to be announced in a few days.

Local United Store Manager Wins Prize

David Merken, manager of United Dry Goods store in Big Spring, was winner of first prize in the Texas area given by this corporation for showing the greatest increase in sales for the month of May over the same period in 1932.

United Dry Goods company operates stores in Texas, California, New Mexico and Arizona. Mr. Merken recently was given the managerial reins of the local store, having come here from El Paso.

Robbins Reports City May Obtain '34 Golf Tourney

Shirley Robbins, local golfer, who has just returned from the West Texas Golf Association tournament at Wichita Falls, reported an excellent meet with about 236 entrants.

Big Spring is in an excellent position to receive next year's tourney, according to Robbins, and every effort will be made to secure it.

Local Member Unable To Attend Meeting Of World Fair Board

Meeting of the commission arranging details of the Texas exhibit at the Century of Progress in Chicago was held Wednesday in San Antonio.

Clyde E. Thomas, member of the commission, was unable to attend the session.

The commission will arrange for financing of the Texas display. A building is set aside in the exposition for this state.

Debtor Nations Must Open Negotiations Week From Thursday

WASHINGTON (UP)—As date for collection of the next war debt installment approaches, the administration is sticking to the principle that debtor nation can approach its creditors and lay its case before them, but such a move must be initiated by the debtor a week from Thursday when the next installment totaling more than $140,000,000 will be due.

Senate Would Observe Independence Of Texas By New 50c Piece

WASHINGTON (UP)—Coinage of half dollar pieces commemorating the hundredth anniversary, in 1936 of Texas independence was authorized in a bill passed by the senate Wednesday and sent to the house.

Mattern Sighted 400 Miles East Of Omsk On Way To Chita, Siberia

NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia, (AP)—Jimmy Mattern was sighted at 8:10 p. m. eastern standard time Tuesday flying high towards Chita, Siberia, his destination on the fifth lap of his round-the-world solo flight.

Novosibirsk is about 400 miles east of Omsk, and Chita is about 1,300 miles east of here.

OMSK, Siberia—Nearly half a day behind the world girdling record he hopes to beat, Jimmy Mattern was shooting over interior Siberia early Wednesday toward Chita, 1,700 miles due east of here.

Favorable weather ahead and a half a day on the ground here with the refueling stop was a factor to aid him in making up the advantage he lost Tuesday.

The Texan took off from here at 1:10 a. m. Moscow time (5:15 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern Standard Time). As his plane cleared the ground he was just 10 hours, 41 minutes behind the pace set by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty when they set the world circuit traveling record of eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes in 1931.

Mattern left Omsk just three days, 12 hours and 50 minutes ahead of Post and Gatty's time when he landed here from Moscow at 1:35 p. m. Moscow time, yesterday, (5:35 a. m. Eastern Standard Time, Tuesday). A wing strut was broken when he brought the plane down at the Omsk airport and had to be repaired.

MOSCOW—Supremely confident of establishing a new record, Jimmy Mattern, Texas globe flyer, selected Chita, Siberia, 1,700 miles distant, for his next stop beyond Omsk, he disclosed in a telephone interview across 1,400 miles of Russian and Siberia plains.

Bad Headwinds
"I am all right and am getting off within two hours," Mattern shouted hoarsely over the uncertain wires from the city in far Siberia.

"I hit bad headwinds almost all the way to Omsk and my right landing strut cracked when I came down here but otherwise everything is fine."

The American asked the correspondent as Moscow about his time record and was told he was only a few hours behind the schedule set by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in their round-the-world tour in 1931.

"That's great! I'll beat 'em yet," Mattern shouted in satisfaction and determination.

"I'm fine," he yelled in reply to a question as to his own physical condition.

"Everything's all right," he added. "That wing strut's been fixed here. I've had three hours sleep and I am taking off in a couple of hours."

"They have been awfully good to me here. They had more food than I've ever seen in one place waiting for me when I pulled in."

"Just as soon as I stopped eating they put me to bed here at the airport, while they loaded my ship with oil and gas."

"I am going to try to make Chita from here but if the weather and other conditions are unfavorable I will land at Krasnoyarsk."

"I will need a big landing field because I am not sure about that strut. I'll make Chita if all goes."

Mrs. Ferguson Names John Wood Highway Commission Chairman

Governor's Secretary Given Recess Appointment To Position Senate Refused To Allow

Frank Denison

AUSTIN—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, Tuesday named John Wood of Timpan, Shelby county, to be chairman of the Texas highway commission. Wood had been one of the governor's secretaries since her inauguration last January.

Wood will take the place that the courts said Frank L. Denison of Temple was ineligible to fill because the senate refused to give him a two-thirds majority vote for confirmation.

Starts Today
Wood said he would assume his new duties Wednesday. He said he probably would call a special session of the highway commission within the next few days. Mark Wigginton, recently appointed secretary of the commission, announced the commission would meet on June 19 and 20 to award $500,000 in maintenance contracts and confer with delegations from counties seeking designations and asking other favors. Wood said he would call the commission before that date.

Denison had been named to the place occupied by the late Cone Johnson of Tyler, whose term expired last February 13.

The other commissioners are W. R. Ely of Abilene and D. K. Martin of San Antonio, appointees of former Governor Dan Moody and R. S. Sterling, respectively. Ely has been chairman for several years. The governor has the privilege of making her appointee chairman.

The senate refused to confirm Denison's appointment, but the governor sent his name to it a second time in hope of receiving its approval. Each time she was notified Denison had "failed of confirmation by the senate."

The governor claimed only a majority of the senators present and voting needed to give their approval to Denison's appointment, and that a two-thirds majority was not necessary. She asked the senate to say how the vote stood for and against confirmation, but it refused to divulge that information with an explanation only the result of an executive session could be revealed.

Awaits Senate
Wood's name will come before the senate for confirmation when it meets again. Unless the governor should convene an extraordinary session of the legislature it will not meet again until January, 1935, the end of Mrs. Ferguson's present term. The governor has indicated, however, that she will bring the legislature back this fall.

Wood was brought up on a farm in Georgia. He came to Texas in 1902. He covered Texas as a traveling salesman for about five years. Since 1913 he has resided in Shelby county. He has been a close personal and political friend of the Ferguson family since 1914, when Mr. Ferguson first ran for governor.

Big Spring Man Hurt In Crash Near Breck

A. G. Pruitt of Big Spring, had his right arm almost severed when a truck in which he was riding collided with an automobile Sunday night near Breckenridge. He was carried to a Breckenridge hospital.

Garland Sanders, owner and driver of the truck, was reported slightly hurt.

Charles G. Russell, 27, San Angelo attorney, was killed instantly when his machine struck a bridge railing and careened into Sanders' truck. Raymond Orlebeke of San Angelo, who was riding in the car with Russell, was injured.

Oil Field Deputy Is Kidnaped During Night

NACOGDOCHES (UP)—A man identified from a picture as "Punkin" Barefield, wanted in Harris county for robbery, kidnaped Charles Gant, deputy in charge of oil field investigations, Tuesday night, forced him to drive almost to Gladewater city limits and then ordered him to drive to Henderson before stopping.

City, Without Band For Years, Now Has Two Groups Rehearsing

Big Spring, which for some years has been without a permanently organized band, now finds herself with two bands in the process of organization.

A number of musicians started about ten days ago with Roy Hester, director of the Colorado band, to form a band here, and the first rehearsal was held Wednesday evening of last week.

After that meeting, several local men agreed to serve as officers of a band organization.

Monday evening the local post Veterans of Foreign Wars, who had been studying the possibilities of sponsoring a band for the city, voted to retain Sam Goldman, widely-known oil man and bandmaster of Big Spring, to direct a band.

Efforts were understood to be underway to work out a plan whereby all local musicians would be concentrated under one leader.

Those who had been named officers of a band organization with Mr. Hester as leader, prior to the V.F.W.'s decision to retain Mr. Goldman, included Cecil Floyd, secretary-treasurer; Clyde E. Thomas, attorney; Wendell Redelick, president; Nat Shick, B. F. Robbins, P. W. Malone, D. W. Webber, W. Anderson, Calvin Boykin and H. H. Hannah.

Mr. Hester was to be here for a rehearsal in the Douglas hotel building Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Adoption Of Texan's Plan Threatened

Speaker Rainey Says 'Budget Has Got To Be Balanced'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Speaker Rainey Wednesday told newspapermen if congress accepted the Connally amendment increasing veterans outlays, without raising taxes and adjourned, the president would immediately call another extra session.

"The budget has got to be balanced," Rainey explained. He said thus far the compromise offered by the president had not been accepted by proponents of the amendment.

WASHINGTON — Democratic house leaders were more hopeful Tuesday night that President Roosevelt's compromise proposal on increased veterans outlay would be accepted by the house Thursday and the controverted independent offices supply bill sent to conference.

Differ 110 Million
The president's executive order modifying the regulations previously promulgated and originally designed to save $20,000,000 in veterans appropriations was credited by Speaker Rainey with lessening the revolt that spread from the senate to the house.

The situation was canvassed by Rainey, Representative McDuffie of Alabama, chairman of the economy committee, and Lewis W. Douglas, budget director, at a conference Tuesday night at the capital.

Failure of the president to include presumptive as well as service connected disability cases, they found, however, was unsatisfactory to many members of the house.

At the White House the executive order issued was estimated as increasing the outlay for veterans disability allowances compared with the $170,000,000 anticipated cut-outlaw under the amendment adopted by the senate.

May Avoid Tax
"Budget Director Douglas informs me that if the president's compromise, which will embody the regulations issued Tuesday, is adopted, the additional outlay may be made without increased taxes," Rainey said.

"However, if congress insists on the $170,000,000 increase, and does not provide new taxes to meet the outlay, I am confident President Roosevelt will veto the bill and the veto will be sustained. However, I am not authorized to say so."

Douglas is turning over Wednesday to Chairman Buchanan (Dem., Tex.), of the appropriations committee, the text of the amendments embodying the administration of the democratic steering committee.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt invited the special veterans committee headed by Representative Cresser (Dem., Idaho), chairman of the steering committee, to confer with him at the White House in an effort to reach an agreement.

To Senate Friday
Speaker Rainey said, "We hope to work out a compromise tomorrow and get the bill into conference with the senate by Thursday or Friday."

"It is very important," he said, "that we do this."

"If congress, however, insists upon the $170,000,000 increase without increasing taxes, you may watch for a drop in the price of commodities and securities, particularly in cotton and wheat. It will disrupt the president's fiscal plan."

DARLING FOOL

by HENRI MELTON

CHAPTER XXXI

Dan's voice was flat and colorless. "She's gone! For—how long?"

"I am." The man stood for an instant, hands plunged deep in his overcoat pockets. "I see," he repeated vaguely. "She didn't leave any message for me?"

"Monnie?" Kay's voice tinkled. "No, indeed." Into her eyes came a sparkle of malice. "She was wearing Charles Eustace's flowers when she left. Orchids." Kay made the word vastly significant.

Dan gave her a comprehending look; then, without another word, he lifted his hat and withdrew.

"There!" Kay congratulated herself. "Guess I gave him something to think about—the concealed thing!" She felt not the slightest compunction though she remembered Monnie's voice, saying clearly that morning, "If Dan calls give him my address."

Well, Kay wouldn't. Anyhow he hadn't asked for it. He'd looked at Monnie's departure really was a blow. That seemed queer too when he'd been at Sandra Lawrence's back and call for so long. Kay clicked her tongue against her teeth, reflecting that men were really the limit! It was high time that Monnie stopped this nonsense about Dan and discovered there were other men in the world.

She set off for the "News" office quite gaily, feeling serene and capable and alert. It was good to have this thrilling new job, to have a place in the world. Kay wasn't at all nervous about doing Miss Anstice's work. It was simple, really, and she knew just how it should be done. You could, thought Kay coolly, do it with your eyes shut. Life was different for Kay this year. The old silliness and impetuosity had slipped from her like a cloak. She no longer thought longingly of New York, of going on the stage. She had noticed since she had been helping Miss Anstice that people were nicer to her. Even stiff people like Mrs. John Blair. Mrs. Blair had called up last week to remind Kay of the big bazaar at St. Thomas' and to hope she could drop in for lunch one of the days when the Ladies' Aid was serving.

"We're counting on you," Miss O'Dare, the lady had cooed. Kay had tried to keep from smiling, remembering how Mrs. Blair had snubbed her at the High School dance where Linda Blair, her daughter—clumsy and unattractive in an expensive frock—had tried to be the belle.

Kay hummed at what Charles called her "race-horse" gait. Belvedere wasn't such a bad place after all. It was really nice, especially on crisp October days such as this when the maples on Denny street seemed to have turned to pure gold and the air was clear and spicy. Kay didn't envy Monnie any more. Oh, New York and later England. She took a deep breath. The trip would be good for Monnie. She needed to be shaken out of herself. Monnie had been unhappy this past year. Kay set her lips, thinking of the Cardinals. Horrid woman, Dan's mother! It was she, of course, who had made the difficulty between Dan and Monnie. Well, Monnie would forget all about Dan. She would have a marvelous time and perhaps come home with a foreign prince in tow. You never could tell. Monnie was beautiful enough to be a princess.

Kay was half way through a day dream in which she saw herself presiding over a reception to "my sister, the Countess de B—" when she reached the dingy office of the newspaper.

Meanwhile Monnie, speeding eastward in the drawing room which Miss Anstice had insisted extravagantly upon reserving, felt herself living in a dream. The narrow glass reflected a glowing girl wrapped in brown fur, a small hat tilted over her right eyebrow.

"You look awfully smart in that coat," Miss Anstice told her critically. "It's just your style. I am very proud of my traveling companion."

Miss Anstice, 50 and birdlike, her neat gray curls escaping from a new blue velvet turban, smiled benevolently.

"We'll go first to the Splendobil, my dear," she said. "We'll be there by 6. Dinner in our room—or if you'd rather, down in the restaurant. Yes, I think that would be better. You'll like that."

"Oh, so much!"

"Well then, that's settled. I thought if you weren't too tired we might go to a play. There's Katherine Cornell in that new one that's such a success," purred Miss Anstice, taking off her gloves and blowing gently into each finger to keep the shape, as she had seen her mother do.

"I'm never tired," declared the girl in the green coat, meaning it and looking as if the statement might be true.

"The boat sails at 12 tomorrow," murmured Miss Anstice, rehearsing their plans for the doze time. "I won't sleep a wink I'm afraid. It must seem silly to you, at my age, but the fact is I'm terribly excited, my dear."

"Oh, so am I!" cried Monnie. "It's the most wonderful thing that has ever happened to me. I still can't quite believe it."

"That's a very nice young man," Miss Anstice mused a moment later, touching her curls reflectively.

"Who? Oh, Charles!" Monnie O'Dare smiled without a trace of self-consciousness. "Yes, isn't he splendid?"

"Now in my day," said Miss Anstice, "he would have been considered quite a catch."

"Oh, but he is! All of that," protested Monnie innocently. "All the mothers on the Hill are angling for him. At least that's what I hear."

"I understand none of them have been very successful," murmured the older woman with an oblique glance.

"With Charles?" Monnie considered this. "Well, I don't know. Charles is sort of—well, distant. I don't," averred Monnie, "think he cares much about girls."

"Monica O'Dare! I could shake you!"

"What for?" The girl turned a look upon her companion. Miss Anstice primed her lips, shrugging.

"Never mind. Only—I never heard such nonsense in my life!"

It was only, Monnie reminded herself, 12 hours since they had left Belvedere. With her eyes fixed on the stage where the deep-voiced, tragic-eyed girl moved so gracefully Monnie's heart beat more swiftly. All day she had been perfectly happy, looking forward to the trip, the hotel and the excitement of the big boat. But now she was reminded of what a wrenching thing love could be. She wanted desperately to forget that, wanted to be gay, to laugh a little and play a lot.

"Isn't it beautiful, my dear?" That was Miss Anstice, wiping her eyes. "People don't love like that any more. They don't know real romance."

"I suppose they don't," Monnie knew she didn't mean that. Of course, they did! Of course, they did! Manners had changed and speech along with costumes. But the flaming feeling—that was the same.

Coming up the aisle of the theatre later behind Miss Anstice the girl was conscious of eyes watching her. She lifted her own to encounter the bold stare of a tall man in full evening attire. He held his top hat at a most elegant angle and stood negligently on the fringe of a smart party. The women, Monnie observed, were beautifully dressed and talked in shrill, assured voices.

"How extremely rude!" Miss Anstice, taking her arm, was piloting her toward a taxi.

"I think it extraordinary the way people stare in the city," observed Miss Anstice. "That man! I don't like the way he looked at you. Oh, that one's taken my dear, and it's raining. I'm afraid we are in for a wait. The last time my father and I were here we had a most frightful time getting a taxi when it rained."

Car after car, opulent, luxurious, gleaming with chromium, deeply upholstered, slid up and was filled. Monnie noticed that the paragon ladies in the strange man's party and the two rather negligible males with them, had gone on without him. The crowd thinned. Miss Anstice, wrapping her plum-colored velvet about her, chirped nervously.

"I don't know whatever we shall do, my dear. That's the worst of not having an escort. I always say a gentleman's so useful to have about."

A deep voice said in Monnie's ear, "I quite agree. May I offer you ladies my car to your destination?"

Monnie whirled to find the tall man with the top hat before her. Before she had time, in her confusion, to say a word Miss Anstice took the situation in hand.

"That's extremely kind," she said briskly. "We shall be delighted."

The tall man flicked a hand in a gesture that was something like a Fascist salute and a greyhound of a car slid from the shadows under the porte cochere. Deftly he handed the two women in. The chauffeur touched his hat.

"Where to?"

"The Splendobil," said Miss Anstice, leaning forward. "And thank you so much." Her voice dropped.

The tall man was climbing in beside them.

Jack Cummings, in charge of the United States western bureau here, left Tuesday morning for a two weeks' vacation tour that will take him to Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Saint Louis, Detroit, Chicago, Washington and possibly New York. He will drive a new Chevrolet out of the factory near Detroit, having arranged with Carter Chevrolet company here to have his new car delivered there.

L. B. Williams, local agent of the Greyhound Lines, returned to his duties Wednesday morning after a vacation of two weeks, most of which he spent fishing and shooting squirrels near Mason and Menard. He said he felt much better than when he started his rest.

Elbow H. D. Club Meets At Home Of Mrs. Asbury

The Elbow Home Demonstration Club met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bob Asbury for an all-day meeting.

A covered dish luncheon was served at noon to two visitors and nine members. The day was spent in piecing a quilt and visiting. The club voted to hold a food sale at Clare's Grocery on July 1st, Saturday.

Canning Demonstration To Be Given June 22

All women of Precinct No. Three are reminded to make preparations for an all-day canning demonstration to be given on June 22 at the home of Mrs. Ches Anderson. The demonstration will include the canning of pickled carrots, wheat prepared for cereal, and chicken gumbo.

A plate luncheon will be served at noon. Women are asked to bring lunches with them.

MISS GAGE IN HOSPITAL
Alta Mae Gage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Gage, underwent an appendectomy at the Big Spring Hospital Monday. Wednesday morning she was reported as doing nicely.

Slovakia were keeping an eye on Paris. Finland, it was learned on good authority, would predicate its action on the action of Great Britain. Latvia and Lithuania awaited declarations of the attitudes of major debtors.

The final British decision, it was learned on good authority, will be based on the outcome of closely guarded conversations proceeding between London and Washington. The United States can expect no payments from Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Austria or Greece.

While Yugoslavia will not meet her war debt payment, she will keep the private Blair loan, it was learned in sources close to the finance ministry.

Austria will not meet service on her post-war relief loan June 15, but will undertake payment soon after as fast as exchange can be transferred, possibly within a month.

It was probable non-payers would include Belgium, Poland, and Estonia, which defaulted in December, and Czechoslovakia, which paid.

Poland, Belgium, and Czechoslovakia.

"Splendid Isolation" Comes To An End

When President Roosevelt addressed himself to the people of the world on disarmament, America's famous tradition of "splendid isolation" went toppling over into the dust, and it seems probable that it will stay there.

As a matter of fact, of course, this splendid isolation toppled years ago. But the tradition remained, and that was what caused trouble. We had a tradition to which we gave almost unanimous support, and it meant that we had to shut our eyes to the realities.

We were fond of talking—and rating—as if the Atlantic ocean was just as wide now as a century ago. We laid our international course on charts drawn up in the days of sailing ships and stage coaches; and when we steered ourselves into trouble we wondered plaintively, why fate was being so unkind.

Nineteen years ago Europe got into a war and before it was over we got into it also—although we're still trying to figure out just what we gained by it.

Since the war Europe has packed a century of trouble into a decade and a half; and a good many of them have slopped over the edges and spilled right on us. The Bolshevism of Russia, the rivalry between France and Germany, the tangled finances of Europe as a whole, the trade was growing out of the post-war mixup, the need of foreign nations for American money and, later, their inability to pay that money back—all of these things have had a tremendous direct effect on the conditions of life for each one of us.

In the face of those uncomfortable facts, our tradition of isolation has had a thin time of it.

We are as close to Europe today as the England of Pitt was to the France of Napoleon. Not only is it impossible for us to remain aloof from European quarrels; we cannot even restore our own internal prosperity as we would wish to until Europe's most pressing problems are settled. We have, when you get right down to it, about as much real isolation as a traffic cop on a busy corner.

Well, then—so what? Won't it be a good thing if at last we accept the realities of the situation and do what we can to set things right? If we must make commitments overseas, let us make them and be done with it. However it turns out, we done with it. However it turns out, we shall at least be looking the facts in the face.

O.C.D. Club Meets At Mrs. S. J. Davis

Mrs. Stanley J. Davis was hostess to the members of the O. C. D. Bridge club for a very charming party Tuesday evening.

Miss Leeper scored high for members and received a vanity. Mrs. Griffith scored high for guests and was awarded a necklace. A novelty pin was presented to Miss Currie for consolation prize.

Guests of the club were: Misses Hayden Griffith, Horace Reagan, Misses Portia Davis and Jeanette Pickle.

Guests present were: Misses Alice Leeper, Marie Faubion, Agnes Currie, Nell Davis, Mabel Robinson, Fern Wells, Helen Hayden and Irene Kanus.

Miss Leeper will be the next hostess.

Kentucky Man Tells Why He Prefers Black-Draught

"I have tried other medicines, but haven't found any of them that has given me the satisfaction that I have found in taking Black-Draught," writes Mr. W. N. Futrell, of Hickory, Ky. "About three years ago, I began suffering from constipation that made me feel dull, tired and worn-out. I did not feel like I could keep going. I tried remedies but not anything that gave me the satisfaction that Black-Draught has given, and I have told them all aside for Black-Draught. I am truly glad to recommend it to others, for it is a good medicine for constipation."

Thousands of men and women rely on this famous medicine when they need a laxative. Sold everywhere.

Lovely Shower Is Given Honoring Bride-Elect

Miss Mary Happel Feted At Home Of Mrs. J. J. Hair; Mrs. Clarence Wear Is Co-Hostess

An unusually lovely tea-shower was tendered Miss Mary Happel, bride-elect, by Mrs. J. J. Hair and Mrs. Clarence Wear Tuesday morning at the charming home of Mrs. Hair. Miss Happel's engagement to W. G. Akins was announced Friday.

Instead of the conventional pink the hostesses used as a color scheme the green and white colors of the Kappa Delta Sorority of which the honoree was a member during her years at the University of Texas.

This cool and refreshing color combination was used in the cleverly ruffled green and white crepe paper table cloth, and in the costumes of Eloise Kuykendall and Judith Pickle who served the guests. Both wore long frocks of Nile green or-gandy.

Centering the dining table stood a miniature bride and groom under a bower of ferns and flowers. Cut flowers and potted ferns added to the attractiveness of the rooms.

Angelfood squares iced in green, white mints, and limeade in green glasses were served to the guests. The honoree was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. Among those sending gifts who were unable to attend were: Misses A. E. Service, Sidney House, Lloyd Wasson, Mary Bumpass, Anna Mae Lunenburg, John Clarke, W. E. Hornbarger, H. G. Whitney, P. E. McClanahan and Misses Lillian Rhodon and Jeanette Pickle.

The guests present at this delightful occasion were: Misses E. H. Happel, mother of the bride, Henry Edwards, W. K. Edwards, Allen Hodges, R. V. Middleton, H. V. Whitney, W. A. Baas, Charles Read, Randall Pickle, Pat Blalack, Roy Lamb, Lindsey Marchbanks, Larson Lloyd, Frank Pool, Fred Keating, Frank Heffey; Misses Elizabeth Northington, Mabel Edley, Lala Belle Stewart, Lillian Jordan, Dorothy Jordan, Louise Jordan, Eleanor Antley, Janice Mellinger and Katharine Happel.

Mrs. Cornelison Sings At Y.W.A.

The Y.W.A. of the First Baptist Church met at the church Monday night for a regular meeting with a short program preceding dinner. Mrs. Lena Scott gave the devotional. Mrs. W. D. Cornelison sang two lovely songs accompanied by Miss Carrie Irie.

Miss Lenora Reddick was a visitor and Miss Jean Blanke, a new member.

Others attending were: Misses Lillian, Dorothy and Mildred Rhodon, Ruby Creighton, Josephine Tripp, Hazel Brown, Gladys Smith, Lola McAdams, Marie Pittman, Bertie Edwards, Wilrena Richbourg, Opal Creighton, Carrie Irie and Maude Prather.

Miss Zillah Ford Hostess For Bridge

Miss Zillah Mae Ford entertained the members of the Les Deux Table Duplicate Bridge club Tuesday evening with a very jolly session of bridge.

High scores went to Misses Rix and Freeman.

Present were: Misses Lucile Rix, Emma Louise Freeman, Vera Debenport, Margaret Bettie, Mary Alice Wilke, Mary Vance Keneaster and Mrs. Tommy Jordan, Jr.

Miss Freeman will be the next hostess.

Two Nations' Decision Holds Debt Answer

If France And Great Britain Default Others Will Follow Suit

United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1933, By United Press)

LONDON (UP)—If both Great Britain and France fail to meet the June 15 payments on war debts owed the United States, there is every likelihood the remaining European debtor nations will join in a general default, a United Press survey indicated.

The survey showed at least five of the 15 debtor nations already had decided not to meet the payment. The remaining ten will take the cue from the decision of either France or Great Britain. But four of this group may be classed as probable non-payers on the basis of present indications.

The survey revealed the tottering condition of the $22,188,486,000 war debt structure built on post-war funding agreements. With a powerful section of the press clamoring for default, Great Britain still was postponing a final decision, hoping for an 11th hour moratorium offer from President Roosevelt. The French cabinet also professed to be undecided, but well informed observers would be surprised if there were any reversal of the default position taken last December.

The final British decision, it was learned on good authority, will be based on the outcome of closely guarded conversations proceeding between London and Washington.

The United States can expect no payments from Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Austria or Greece. While Yugoslavia will not meet her war debt payment, she will keep the private Blair loan, it was learned in sources close to the finance ministry.

Austria will not meet service on her post-war relief loan June 15, but will undertake payment soon after as fast as exchange can be transferred, possibly within a month.

Lovable Enigmas

THESE puzzles we have married! How disturbingly efficient they are. Patiently they sit across the dinner table from us and listen to our evening complaints—short-handed at the office, chief cranky, customer spoiled golf date, stenographer late, letters misfiled—women have all the best of it! Then they smile riddles.

If you could see the little woman in the morning after you leave for the office! Children to bundle off to school, meals to plan, marketing to do, laundry to send buttons to put on, tears to mend, dozens of trips to the front and back doors, lunch, squabbles to settle, a cut finger to bandage.

At night, she meets you in a chic little gown you never saw before. Junior struts new shoes. There are new towels in the bathroom. There is an unfamiliar and delicious dish to tempt your appetite.

Where does she find time to be company purchasing agent, vice-president in charge of cooking, general manager of sewing, teaching and all the rest?

The advertising columns in this paper are her greatest ally. Here is news of new ways, better ways, better things—and at savings she gloats about, but seldom mentions.

administration sources thought an effort might be made to stop the delegation. They knew opposition protests would be useless after the delegates had gone.
This incident adds another important link in the chain of evidence that we are working closer and closer with the League every day.

Breaks—

Probably the worst break of the administration so far was the Lady Perkins' statement: "The South is an untapped market for shoes. When we have put shoes on the South, the social revolution will have begun."
The second worst was the Labor Department intimation that a forestry camp would be started for girls.
Both ideas have been modified considerably.
Miss Perkins is fully informed now that southern wear shoes, also clothes when they have the money. Thousands of letters have poured in from the southland carrying the news.
Also it has lately been discovered that tree planting it probably a man's job.
However women will continue to do plenty of talking, as usual.

Miss Evelyn Creath And Mr. Garland J. Early Are United In Ceremony Here

Early Morning Rites Solemnized In Beautiful Setting At First Christian Church With Rev. S. J. Shettlesworth Officiating

Just as the first rays of the early morning sun were peeping through the shaded windows of the First Christian church this morning, Miss Helen Creath became the bride of Mr. Garland J. Early in a beautiful yet simple ceremony. Rev. S. J. Shettlesworth used the impressive double ring ceremony.

Proceeding the entrance of the bride party, Miss Marcelle King, who since her husband has been a friend of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly." Miss King was accompanied at the piano by Miss Mildred Creath, sister of the bride. They were both beautifully dressed in the bride's colors. Miss King wearing a gown of pink crepe and Miss Creath one of blue with harmonizing accessories.

Mrs. T. M. Manell, the first music teacher of the bride and a former resident of the city, but now of Colorado and California, played Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus as a professional and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the recessional. She was becomingly dressed in a gown of navy blue, printed georgette with soft beige trimmings.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was simply dressed in white eyelet-embroidered organza with a white tulle jacket, and carried a bouquet of pink rose buds. Her attendants were her life-long chum, Miss Loma Smith, and her sister, Miss Evelyn Creath. Miss Smith wore a lovely blue organza gown embellished in pink with white accessories. Miss Evelyn was also beautifully dressed in a pale pink organza gown.

Both attendants wore wrist corsages of rose-buds, snap-dragons, and fever few.

The groom was attended by Mr. Alvin Smith as best man and Mr. Allen Holley of Hammond, Louisiana.

The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Creath and has grown to young womanhood in this city. She was graduated from Big Spring High school and later from Randolph Junior College in Claco. Last August she received her bachelor of science and her bachelor of arts degrees from the University of Texas. She is well known in church, social and literary circles not only in Big Spring but also in adjoining counties, where she has taught school for a few years. She is a member of the Epistol Sigma Alpha Sorority.

Mr. Early is well-known and highly esteemed by his many friends in church and business circles of this city. He attended school in Fort Worth. He is part owner of the City Hall Barber Shop. He is a member of the Masonic Order.

After the ceremony, the bride party and relatives enjoyed a delicious wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents.

Immediately after the breakfast the happy couple left for a short honeymoon trip to points in central and east Texas. The bride's going away gown was of pink roshnara crepe with white accessories.

Out of town relatives attending the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Tom Onstott of Sterling City, Mrs. M. A. Berry of Colorado, grandmother of the bride; Miss Lucile Berry, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Watson, Harold Watson, Misses Elizabeth and May Watson, and Masters Maurice and Hubert Watson, Mrs. Will C. Berry and Misses Billie and Mary Nell Berry, all of Colorado. Other out of town guests were Mrs. C. N. Daugherty, of Fort Stockton, Will H. Morgan of Carlsbad, New Mexico, Miss Claudine Manell, of Denver, Colorado, A. C. Clendon, of Andrews, Leroy Miller of Overton, and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley L. Clements of Martin county.

Relations Of US And Other Nations Topic

Rotary Club Hears Rev. Thorns And Supt. Blankenship Tuesday

International relations was the subject at the Tuesday meeting of the Rotary club, held in Settles Hotel, with Jesse Hall and Harold Holman in charge of the program. Speakers for the day were Rev. Jack Thorns and Superintendent W. C. Blankenship, who gave interesting talks bearing on this subject.

Mrs. Travis Reed rendered two vocal numbers, "Fairy Love Song," and "Sleepy Hollow Tune," with Mrs. Bruce Frazier accompanying on the piano, as the musical feature of the program.

Rev. Thorns said war has its place in the world today, and will continue to have its place unless there is something devised to take its place. Strained relations existing between nations, he said, caused by misunderstandings and selfishness were the contributing factors in bringing about war.

Superintendent Blankenship followed Rev. Thorns by stating he thought the Rotary idea of brotherhood of man is basis for furtherance of better relations between individuals as well as nations to prevent war. He also said education, not especially in the schools and colleges, would in the end turn out to be the best substitute for war.

There was a meeting of the Crippled Children's Committee after the meeting.

Next week's program will be in charge of Dr. G. T. Hall and Harry Lester.

White House Message

The White House announcement said: "The object of the changes made was to reduce the severity of cuts originally proposed under the so-called economy bill passed by the congress to maintain the credit of the United States."

"The new regulations set forth in the executive order were made possible by the president's original direction that the tentative regulation be carefully reviewed and amended to specifically prevent cuts in compensation of service connected veterans which would be deeper than was intended and to effect more equitable levels of payments."

"Under the new regulations, no directly service connected veterans will be reduced in payment by more than 25 per cent and the average reduction will approximate 15 per cent."

"This regulation applies not only to World War veterans but to Spanish-American war veterans with direct connected disability and to peace time veterans who have incurred a disability."

Two New Schedules Made Necessary By Midland's Change

MIDLAND—Withdrawal of Midland from the Class A circuit which also includes San Angelo, Sweetwater, Colorado, Big Spring and McCombs has necessitated the making of two new grid schedules. The Class A schedule for next fall was announced two months ago. The district committee made the schedule at Big Spring without a Midland representative.

A new schedule for the Class B circuit in which Midland will play must also be made. Pecos, Stanton, Wink and Odessa are other teams of this group.

Nolan County 4-H Club To Conduct Show And Sale

SWEETWATER—Nolan County 4-H Club boys will hold their first annual show and sale June 23, in Sweetwater. Last fall, 21 calves were placed with the club boys, the movement being fostered by the local Rotary club, who after organizing it passed the project on to the Sweetwater Board of City Development to carry on and conduct show and sale.

County Agent Charles Clark has directed the boys in their work. Tentative plans have been made for the organization of a five county show to embrace Mitchell, Fisher, Nolan, Jones and Scurry counties. It is likely that a permanent organization will be perfected during this year's show.

Panhandle-Plains Singing Convention At Lubbock June 17-18

LUBBOCK—With exception of a brief business session Saturday afternoon, June 17, the Plains Panhandle Singing convention here June 17 and 18, will be strictly a singing convention with everything except the invocation in song.

Odell L. Echols, Lubbock, president of the organization, will preside during the two day convention. A singer and teacher, Echols is well qualified to direct the convention and his friends expect a program far above the average under his direction.

Five delegates are expected from each of the Plains counties to participate in the business session Saturday afternoon at which time adopting of the constitution and by laws of the organization, election of officers for the coming year, selection of the next convention city and other matters will be handled in a democratic manner by the entire congregation present in a minimum of time.

Saturday evening a big free concert with only professional singers on the program will be rendered. Sunday morning and afternoon class singing, quartets, trios, duets, solos and specialty numbers will be on the program.

Over 5000 singers are expected here from a radius of three hundred miles, Echols says.

Party Honors Bride-Elect

Mrs. T. M. Manell And Daughter Hostesses For Miss Helen Creath

Mrs. T. M. Manell and her daughter, Claudine, were hostesses Friday at a delightful surprise shower honoring Miss Helen Creath, who was married here Wednesday morning to Mr. Garland J. Early.

The honoree was enticed into playing Lohengrin's Bridal chorus and to her surprise a small bride and groom entered the room.

Dainty little Miss Harriet Ann Luehring, dressed in white and wearing a veil, held in place with time rosebuds and baby's breath, made a most charming little bride. She was accompanied by Master Terry Carter, who handed the parasol full of gifts to the honoree, saying that there was to be a shower, so she might need the parasol.

The guests, who were music pupils of the hostess at the same time that the honoree was her pupil, filed in behind the miniature bride and groom.

Stunts and the renewing of old acquaintances formed the entertainment for the remainder of the evening.

Dainty refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served to the following: Mmes. Morgan Martin, Hub Hayes, Hayden Griffith, Stanley Davis, Harry Luehring, Tim Carter, Miss Loma Smith and the honoree.

Mmes. George Melear and Warren Copeland, and Misses Elmer Laudermlk and Emma Louise Freeman sent gifts but were unable to attend.

Indiana Tenth Repeal State

Wets Gain Majority Of Delegates To State Convention

INDIANAPOLIS—Indiana Tuesday became the tenth state to vote in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Incomplete unofficial returns showed that repealists had mustered sufficient votes to control the convention to be held June 26 at which the state's stand on ratification will be formally registered. There will be 329 delegates to the convention.

Ratificationists rolled up the 163 votes necessary for a majority by carrying all of the larger counties of the state and many of the smaller ones.

The delegate apportionment to counties was based on population with one to each 10,000.

Ratification received a large popular vote. In 2,025 of the state's 3,961 precincts the vote for ratification was 338,133 and against 154,618.

William Stokes, executive director of the united repeal council, which directed the fight for ratification of the twenty-first amendment, expressed gratification over the result.

He said the victory "will go far toward quickly completing the roster of the thirty-six states which must ratify to insure a complete and final end of the onerous experiment."

Ickes Declares
Connally's Oil
Plan 'Useless'

Texas Would Base President's Power On Maxi-imum Allowed In States

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary Ickes described as "useless" the Connally amendment substituted yesterday by the senate finance committee for the administration's plan to stabilize the oil industry.

The secretary of interior told newspapermen the proposal of Senator Connally (D-Tex.) would be virtually useless in remedying the evils of overproduction in the oil fields.

Under the administration's measure which Secretary Ickes had suggested, the president would have been empowered to control production through the interstate commerce laws.

The Connally plan based the president's power upon the maximum production permitted by state laws. Ickes said California had no maximum and that, taking all of the state laws as a whole, the maximum production allowed would be too large to aid the situation.

Cyrus Curtis

Saturday Evening Post
Publisher Succumbs In 83rd Year

PHILADELPHIA—Cyrus H. K. Curtis, newspaper and magazine publisher, died early Wednesday. He was in his 83rd year.

Mr. Curtis, one of the world's great publishers, passed away at 2:10 o'clock (daylight) in his home in suburban Wyncote.

He had been ill since May, last year, when he was stricken with a heart attack while on his yacht Lyndonia, near New York, and was hurried to this city aboard the vessel.

Five days later his wife died suddenly. She had taken a room in the hospital to be near him and passed away in her sleep from a heart ailment from which she had suffered for a number of years. She was his second wife and a second cousin.

Mr. Curtis was chairman of the board of the Curtis Publishing company which publishes the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal, and the Country Gentleman.

Prehistoric Sky-scrappers Erected In Arizona Desert A Good Way To Study
Archaeology

By ONA R. PARSONS

The first American skyscraper was erected, not in the city of New York, as I had always supposed, but in the midst of an Arizona desert, fully seven hundred years ago. I saw them this past week while doing Arizona in the rear end of Betsy, the family chariot.

Funny thing about those prehistoric four-story buildings! The Indians filled up the first story with soil and lived only in the upper three. The idea was betting height so they could see their enemies approach from afar. They knew a three story house would not tumble down but they doubted that a four story house would stay up. They wanted the fourth story for height, so they filled up the bottom floor. They had a four-story house and three-story pressure.

This particular skyscraper is the Casa Grande—meaning great house—located south of Phoenix, Arizona. It is now a national monument, and the government has stationed men and ranges to look after it and explain it to visitors. It is the best specimen of its kind left standing.

Over the ruins is a huge metal umbrella, supported by four legs to protect the ruin from further weathering. It is the only house of its kind left standing; and the rangers are taking care to keep it from being mutilated further.

It is one of those things that must be seen to be appreciated. I can tell you only a few of the interesting things about it. One is the low doors. Although the rooms show that the people were about the height of people today the doors are all narrow and low.

One has to bend double to go through them. That was for protection. One man could stand inside the door and protect a whole family of women and children in case of a raid. All he needed for a weapon was a nice heavy stone tied to the end of a stick with a piece of buckskin. When the enemy put his head inside, the sharp stone cut his head off and that was the end of him.

There were no windows of course but there was a series of very small holes in the rooms so lined that the rising sun on March 7 and October 7 shone through them and made a spot of light on the innermost interior wall. This was probably the signal, said the rangers, for the ceremonial that marked the sowing and harvest seasons.

Cedars were hauled down from the mountains and hacked off with the stone axes and shaped for the support of the ceiling and doorways. The mud of the walls was in layers, two feet high and four feet thick and patted into shape with the hands—one can see the prints of the fingers. By the time the builders had gone all around with this mud wall, the first section was dry and they could start on the next two feet.

This particular ruin showed the remains of a wall protecting the village of which the four-story skyscraper was the tallest building. Other buildings inside the walls were once two and three story. Most of them are now in ruins.

Apparently the people lived inside very little, probably only during bad weather and enemy raids. We stumbled on this ruin more or less accidentally but it was a good beginning for what we found later. I can think of no better place to begin one study of archaeology or of the prehistoric ruins in the Southwest, because the rangers are able to answer questions intelligently, and to tell one the whole story in a consecutive fashion. Inside the ranger's building is a display of articles taken from the Great House, a collection of pottery, stone implements, jewelry and yucca-woven cloth.

From Phoenix we went to Roosevelt Dam up in the mountains and there we heard of the nearby cliff dwellers. So we hiked out to visit them.

These are older ruins than the pueblos of the desert, for the cliff dwellers are said not to have been here for fully a thousand years. No one knows exactly how far back they dated.

These cliff dwellings were no more than homes erected inside huge caves—very much the same kinds of buildings we saw on the desert, except that the first floor was not filled up when the fourth story was added. These rooms were built in stair-step fashion, up and down the hill side as far as the projecting top of the cliff would protect them.

The home of these cliff-dwellers were built in cliffs facing the east; in that way they were protected from the winter winds. But the smoked cliffs showed that they built many and probably some very large fires—in some places the heat had glazed the rocks of the cliff.

The most interesting feature about the cliff dwellers was that the homes were almost as the last inhabitants had left them—except for what white vandals had stolen.

The original beams, the same old cypress logs, ribs of the Saguaro cactus, cedar posts, were left in place, and were in as good condition as they were a thousand years ago when the buildings were put there.

Older Than England
It gave one a queer feeling—this standing in the homes of the first Americans who were busy living their lives in this desert country before there was any such thing as the English race.

The guide for these cliff-dwellers (called, by the way Tonto National Monument) is an Apache Indian. Nothing could be more appropriate. I asked him if he and his wife could go out and live off mesquite beans and prickly pear fruit and whatever that desert country provided in case of a complete breakdown of civilization and he said yes.

He proved it by digging around in the dirt and unearthing some corn cobs, bean pods, seeds left there by the original inhabitants and telling us what each little dried-up thing was. I could not decide which was the more interesting—the fact that I was looking on a corn cob (so small it seemed to be of the popcorn variety) that some early American had chewed on during the time of Julius Caesar, or the fact that I was talking to a descendant of those early Americans who had preserved, in all the intervening hundreds of years, the knowledge of the land which we newcomers have lost in the acquiring of civilization.

Organization Of
Cosmetologists
Formed In Texas

SAN ANTONIO—She is not a "beautician" nor a "beauty operator," but a cosmetologist. So says the State of Texas in its official definition of the professional person whose mission in life is to make the really important half of the human race still more attractive and alluring than even nature herself has been able to accomplish.

This fact is called to the attention of the public by the State Association of Cosmetologists, with headquarters in San Antonio, an organization whose membership is pledged to a rigid code of ethics and limited to skilled leaders of the profession. The practice of beautifying is a profession and not a trade, says the association. It calls for expert knowledge of physiology, as well as delicate skill. The human features and hair are far too susceptible to injury to be entrusted to the handling of an amateur or tyro. Therefore, both for its own benefit and the protection of the public, the association is steadily increasing the amount of basic education which the cosmetologist must have before being admitted to membership.

WOMEN HOSTAGES RELEASED BY ESCAPING CONVICTS

These three women, abducted as hostages by five of the 11 men who made their escape from the Kansas state penitentiary, were released near Pleasanton, Kas., after a wild 12-hour cross-country ride. Left to right: Miss Louise Wood, her mother, Mrs. M. J. Wood, and Miss Gloria Weara, 17, of Kansas City, Kas. (Associated Press Photo) and she carried an arm bouquet of pink butterfly rosebuds.

Only members of the immediate families were present. After the ceremony the guests were served a buffet luncheon.

Mrs. Kayser received her B. A. degree from N. T. S. T. C. at Denton where she was a member of the Kappa Delta Pi and Scholarship Societies of the south. She did graduate work at Texas Technological College at Lubbock. She has taught English in the Junior high school of Breckenridge for many years and was re-elected for the coming year.

Mr. Kayser is a prominent young business man of Wink. He is a pharmacist, a dealer in Gulf products and a member of the city commission.

Those attending the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hayes, parents of the bride, Miss Katherine Hayes and James Hayes; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hayes and Doris Hayes, of Stanton; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Burch, Wayne and Austin Burch, of Big Spring; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cook of Wink; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Huff of Midland.

The bride and groom left immediately after the luncheon for a brief honeymoon trip in Lubbock and other points in West Texas. The bride's traveling suit was a two-piece suit of dark blue crepe with dark blue accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Kayser will make their home in Wink.

LONGVIEW — Ruby Taggart, alias Mrs. Fred J. Morgan, alias Ruby Turley, charged with murder in Sterling county for the killing of H. M. Polan in March 1930, was arrested Tuesday at the Greggton post office three miles west of Longview when she called to receive a decoy registered letter mailed by Ranger O. G. Taylor and Luck Turner.

Officers there were notified by the Sterling county sheriff he would come here to return her to Sterling City for trial.

SAN ANGELO — Ruby Taggart, arrested at Longview by Texas rangers, was charged with murder at Sterling City in connection with the killing of Henry M. Polan, Plentywood, Mont., gambler, March 22, 1930.

Roger Thompson, charged in a companion case, was given a 50 year prison sentence last month at his trial in Sterling City.

Colorado Dam Plans Revived

Project Would Allow Irrigation Of 100,000
Acre Tract

BRONTE—A project which would result in the irrigation of 100,000 acres of land along 25 miles of the Colorado river valley above and below Robert Lee was launched at a meeting held at that place. Coke county residents were joined by citizens from San Angelo, Sweetwater and Winters at the meeting. D. A. Bandeen, Stamford, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and Charles E. Coombes also of Stamford, were present.

A committee was named to meet with the Coke county commissioners court at its next session to present that body with a petition for an election for creation of a water improvement district, creation of the district would be a necessity preliminary to the securing of a self-liquidating loan from the $3,300,000,000 national public works appropriation for the construction of a dam 15 miles up the Colorado river from Robert Lee and for the network of canals included in the proposed project.

The committee is composed of Ed Roane, Fred Roe, Robert Lee, Robert Knierim, Robert Hickman, Bronte, Ralph Harriid, H. G. Wendland, San Angelo and Tad Richards, Wingers.
