Israeli Jets Attack...

Heavy Fighting Erupts East Of Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes and artillery attacked Syrian and Palestinian guerrilla forces trying to advance into Israeli-held areas in the mountains east of Beirut today. Heavy fighting also erupted near Beirut airport.

Israel said its forces killed two Syrian soldiers and wounded several in the mountain battles. It also said two Israeli soldiers were wounded when their vehicle struck a mine near Rachaiya, in southeastern Lebanon.

The Tel Aviv command said the Syrians tried to push into Israeli-held territory east of Lake Qaaroun, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, and then, joined by guerrillas, attempted to move south of the Beirut-Damascus highway in central Lebanon under a covering artillery and tank barrage.

Israeli heavy guns and warplanes were "silencing the sources of fire," the Tel Aviv command said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said Israeli forces launched an intensive artillery barrage in the hills around the Syrian stronghold of Aleq and tried to advance from their positions around Mansouriyeh.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Baldwin reported from the vicinity of the Israeli-surrounded presidential palace at Baabda that artillery shells exploded in Syrian-held territory every 10 or 20 seconds.

Baldwin reported that intensive small arms fire could be heard from Beirut's international airport where Israeli and Palestinian forces have faced each other in almost static positions for more than a week.

The Israeli military command said the Syrians pushed into Israeli-held territory east of Lake Karoun, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, but withdrew when they came under Israeli artillery fire.

Despite the new reports of fighting, Barry Swersky, an Israeli military spokesman with an armored unit near Baabda told reporters "the cease-fire seems to be holding."

The Israelis agreed to a renewed cease-fire Tuesday evening, conditional on Syria holding its fire. The truce, mediated by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, was requested by Lebanon's National Salvation Council.

The Council met again today to seek an Israeli withdrawal from the immediate vicinity of Beirut, a return of the Palestinian guerrillas to their camps in encircled west Beirut and assumption of responsibility for security in the urban areas by the Lebanese army.

The Israelis invaded Lebanon June 6 to stamp out guerrilla bases and get the Syrians to withdraw from Lebanon, where they have maintained an army for six years, ostensibly to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

On Tuesday Israeli warplanes, gunboats and artillery unleashed a fierce artillery barrage on Palestinian areas in west Beirut, and Israeli tanks battled Syrian forces along the Beirut-Damascus highway.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said 47 Israeli soldiers were wounded during the Tuesday battles with Syria, three seriously. He also said Israeli gunners destroyed several Syrian artillery batteries. The fighting shattered an 11-day-old cease-fire between the two Middle East foes.

Damascus Radio today claimed the Syrians killed or wounded 100 Israeli soldiers and destroyed 20

Syrian tanks and armored vehicles in Tuesday's fighting. The radio said

Syrian forces responded to the "repeated violations of the cease-fire by the Israeli enemy."

The Israelis had agreed to a renewed cease-fire that went into effect Tuesday evening, conditional on Syria holding its fire.

The truce was requested by Lebanon's National Salvation Council.

Several hundred Iranian volunteers sent to help Syria fight the Israelis were known to be stationed along the Beirut-Damascus highway. War correspondents who toured the area later said the Iranians may have joined the fighting, which pockmarked the road with craters and wrecked nearby buildings.

In Washington, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin conferred Tuesday with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Petitions For Liquor Vote In

Petitions calling for an election to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages in Justice of the Peace Precinct No. 4 (Hermleigh) have been turned in to the county clerk's office.

The petitions were reported to have some 99 signatures. A total of 90 registered voters in the precinct is required to mandate an election.

County Clerk Beverly Ainsworth said she would check the names on the petition, and if 90 are certified, the petition will go to the Scurry County Commissioners Court at its next regular meeting, which is set for July 12.

If the petition meets legal requirements, the commissioners court must call an election to be held at least 20 days but not more than 30 days from the date the petition is presented to the court.

The petition requests an election on a proposal to legalize the sale of all alcoholic beverages for off-premises consumption in the precinct. The Hermleigh voting precinct will be the only one involved in the election.

A relatively heavy turnout of voters is anticipated for the election. A number of new voter registrations have been recorded in the county clerk's office since circulation of the petition began. Those registered 30 days prior to the election date will be eligible to vote in the liquor election.

Court Agrees

Prisons Cruel

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court agreed today that the 33,000 inmates in various Texas prisons have been held in what amounts to cruel and unusual punishment.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling also agreed that some of the Texas Department of Corrections practices deny prisoners due process of law.

However, the ruling also said that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler, Texas, ordered some reforms which are not required to protect constitutional rights and intrude on matters of state concern.

The 105-page typewritten decision narrowed the scope of the reforms ordered by Justice and said the practical problems of operating the nation's largest prison system must not now become "a ceaseless guerrilla war with endless hearings, opinions and appeals and incalculable costs."

The ruling said the district judge and the federal master must "respect the right of the state to administer its own affairs as long as it does not violate the constitution."

"The state must equally recognize the duty of the District Court and the special master as its agent to ensure the restoration of constitutional conditions of confinement in the Texas Department of Corrections."

SNYDER TEMPERATURES: High Tuesday, 89 degrees; low, 61 degrees; reading at 7 a. m. today, 63 degrees; precipitation, 1.15; total precipitation for 1982 to date, 17.98.

WEST TEXAS: Scattered showers and thunderstorms, mainly late afternoons and evenings most sections through Thursday. Continued very warm to hot. Highs 90s except near 100 to near 110 southwest. Lows 60s except low 70s southeast and extreme south.

Rains Are Back In Scurry Area

The rains returned to Snyder last night, but, except for some lightning and thunder, there was little if any turbulence.

Thunderstorms which rambled down from the central Panhandle and High Plains areas put 1.15 inches of rain in the official gauge at the city water plant. The southwest part of the county, which was hard hit in last Friday night's weather seige, was mostly left out this time, as most of the activity was moving to the east and southeast.

Only a sprinkle fell at Lake J. B. Thomas.

However, final reports on weekend rains show that area lakes benefitted considerably. Lake Thomas ultimately wound up with 11,000 additional acre feet, while Lake E. V. Spence gained 35,000 acre feet. Lake Spence reached a record elevation of 1882.26 feet and a volume of 306,600 acre feet. The elevation of Lake Thomas reached 2231.44 and its volume stood at 60,000 acre

'Blanket Rule' Nixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — States cannot impose a "blanket rule" excluding the public and press from all criminal trials while young victims of sex crimes are testifying, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices struck down a Massachusetts law that made such exclusion mandatory.

The law was challenged by The Boston Globe as an unconstitutional infringement on free-speech rights.

In today's decision, the nation's highest court agreed.

Ships Exchange Fire

SUBIC NAVAL BASE, Philippines (AP)—A pea-sized bullet hole in the hull of the U. S. destroyer Turner Joy was the only evidence of battle visible to reporters today when three U. S. Navy ships docked here after reporting an exchange of fire with Vietnamese fishing boats.

Navy authorities showed reporters the tiny hole where a .30 caliber machine gun pierced the steel wall of the destroyer, entered an officers' lounge and lodged inside a cabinet.

No one was reported injured in the skirmishes, which occurred Sunday night and Monday morning. The incidents were the first engagement of the Navy in Southeast Asian waters since 1975.

Amtrak Fire Kills One

GIBSON, Calif. (AP) — Fire erupted early today aboard an Amtrak passenger train, killing one person and routing more than 50 passengers, authorities said.

An undetermined number of passengers inhaled smoke and were bused to hospitals. Officials could not say immediately how serious their injuries were.

Reports Given To Chamber Board

Snyder Chamber of Commerce directors got reports on plans for the July 4th celebration and from the committee searching for a new manager at their meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Murray Anne Ray, general chairman of the July 4th committee, told the board that plans are moving on schedule for the annual celebration. Increased participation is expected in some areas, especially in the tennis tournament, which is headed by Mike Boles, and the arts and crafts show is attracting widespread attention. Also, a racquetball tournament is being added this year, and it is expected to draw a number of contestants.

Contestants in the queen's race are now selling tickets at $1 each. The queen will be determined on the basis of the number of tickets sold on her behalf. The funds will be used to pay for the fireworks display and for other expenses involved in putting on the celebration.

Brenda Hedges, president, who heads the committee seeking a new manager, said the committee is still at work. Several other chambers also are seeking new managers, she reported, and the local group is moving slowly because they want to recommend the best prospect available for the position here.

The manager's post has been vacant here since Bill Warner resigned to join an Odessa bank's staff in April.

In other business, the board approved a proposal for putting a soft drink machine in the chamber office building and discussed a proposal for a telephone line to serve the Texas Employment Commission representative. The chamber has been furnishing office space for a TEC representative two days a week and TEC has been using the chamber phone lines. The frequency of calls has increased to the point that TEC has been asked to provide its own telephone service.

Mrs. Hedges presided over the meeting, and other board members attending were Elizabeth Potts, Truett Bryan, Troy Williamson, Wedge Turner, David Thompson, Brian Boswell, Tommy Lay, Ernie Armstrong and David Hines.

Ask Us

Q.—Are there any states that have higher sales taxes than Texas?

A.—Yes. Several have sales taxes of 6 percent (the Texas sales tax is 4 percent), and the highest is Connecticut, with a sales tax of 7½ percent. Also, a number of the other states have state income taxes as well.

We got an invitation the other day to participate in an event, but it will be impossible to accept because the event took place more than a month before our invitation arrived.

The first impulse is the laugh and make a joke about the Postal Service. We were about to consign the invitation to "file 13" but decided to check a bit farther just to satisfy our curiosity.

It was an invitation to sponsor a team in a big softball tournament sponsored by one of the major brewers. The dates of the tournament were May 14-16. Since our invitation came on June 21, we wondered if they were getting them out early for next year. But no, it said 1982. Then, of course, the Postal Service was our first suspect. However, a glance at the envelope revealed that it was postmarked the day before we got it. Now, we wonder if anyone showed up for the tournament, or if our invitation was the only one that got left behind.

One element in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's latest application for a rate increase runs counter to most business situations. The company cites increased business as one of the reasons it needs more money. In most businesses, a greater volume means lower prices.

A particular item in the phone company's application that we question is the charge for directory assistance. It is our contention that if you subscribe to a service, you should be provided with whatever is necessary to use it. A patron should have routine access to directory assistance, or else he should be provided with an updated directory each month.

Another case of yesterday's "old" becoming the "new" of today: A family on vacation was driving through a small town in a remote section of Appalachia. They passed a house with an old-fashioned clothes line, laden with the week's wash.

Lady Di Leaves Hospital...

Baby Sleeps During Appearance

LONDON (AP) — Cradled in his father's arms, the heir presumptive to the British throne slept through his first public appearance when Prince Charles and Princess Diana took their new baby home, just 21 hours after his birth.

Wrapped in a white shawl with his blue eyes firmly shut, the little prince was unaware of the adoring crowds, waving Union Jacks, television cameras, photographers and a portable gramophone playing "Land of Hope and Glory" Tuesday night outside St. Mary's Hospital at Paddington in west London.

Diana, wearing a green polka-dot maternity dress, smiled and waved. When the crowd broke into applause she blushed.

The princess, who will be 21 on July 1, looked radiant but slightly tired after her 16-hour labor Monday. Her early departure from the hospital was questioned by some in medical circles, but gynecologist George Pinker said she was "in very good health and this will not cause any problems."

Press reports said Diana was heard to joke to a doctor as she and Charles thanked hospital staff before leaving with their first-born child: "Will you be here next time?"

Then she hastily turned to her husband and said:

"I'm only joking, dear."

Charles, 33, showing every sign of a proud new father, constantly peered at his son's blondish head just visible inside the shawl. He still declined to announce the name of his baby, second in line to the British throne.

"You'll just have to wait," Charles told reporters. London bookmakers favored George as a first name at 6-4 odds.

The normal hospital stay British doctors recommend for new mothers is five to eight days to let them rest and learn about baby care.

Asked why the princess was leaving the hospital so soon, Buckingham Palace press secretary Michael Shea told reporters: "It is the fashionable thing to do."

Pinker, who delivered the baby Monday night, said: "Medically I can say I am not against anybody going out of the hospital early."

Robert Atlay, secretary of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, leading British institution for those fields, said he believed the decision was right for Diana but should not be taken as a precedent for other mothers.

"Those who want people to race back to their home environment after a birth will say that if the princess of Wales can do it so can they," he said. "The difference is that most of them are not going back to the same circumstances as the princess."

For several months Charles and Diana will reside with the baby in Kensington Palace, their London home.

Brothers Sue Ma Bell Over Incorrect Number

DALLAS (AP) — Two brothers who say the incorrect listing of their company's telephone number in the Yellow Pages forced them out of business are suing Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The incorrect listing forced them to sell their five-year-old chemical company, Chem-Strip, Feb. 1 for half what they were offered two years ago, according to the suit. Tommy and Ken Helms filed in state District Court Monday.

Their Mesquite-based company's business

"declined precipitously" soon after the October 1981 home edition of the Yellow Pages erred in one digit of the phone number.

Phone company spokesman Joe McNamara said that while the Dallas phone book's Yellow Pages listed the number incorrectly, the number was listed correctly in the Yellow Pages of the Mesquite phone book.

He also said the phone company believes there was no intentional negligence involved in the error.

The brothers, who since have opened a glass-repair business, say Bell refused their request for installation of an automated operator service to intercept their calls and redirect callers to the correct number. McNamara said such a setup was not possible technically.

The brothers' attorney, Lawrence Mealer, said his clients could get damages equal to their loss plus $3,000 if they can prove the phone company was negligent. And if they can prove the phone company was intentionally negligent, they will be entitled to three times the amount of their loss, he said.

Fear of loss of control

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem that I'm ashamed to discuss with my regular physician. During the past two years I've had a major personality change. I can't even explain it well, but for no reason at all I'll start screaming and I have no control over it. Sometimes I feel like I'm losing my mind. I get a real tight feeling in my chest while it happens and I have the desire to kill.

Of course I've been able to handle it up until now, but I'm really afraid one of these times I'll completely fly off my rocker. Lately the feelings have been turned inward and I've been feeling like killing myself. I know I would be more likely to do that than hurt others that I love.

Two years ago I was so calm. My patience and understanding for people was actually beyond what one might expect from most people.

I don't know whether it is related or not but I have not menstruated in eight months. However, I've had no hot flashes; just the opposite, I'm cold all the time. I'm really frightened and need your advice.

DEAR READER — Your story is an outstanding example of one form of anxiety. One reason for anxiety is the fear of loss of control over an impulse, often a violent or destructive impulse. Psychiatrists refer to this as id or impulse anxiety.

I would strongly recommend that you seek help from a psychiatrist to work out your cause for such an impulse and to help relieve your anxiety. Anxiety is a close cousin to fear. The fear may be related to external threats or circumstances and the internal threats are those such as you are experiencing. It is understandable why you are frightened. But you need to know that you can probably resolve the situation with professional help. You are not losing your mind.

Many people do have anxiety. It is directly related to a large number of health problems, including headaches, blood pressure and nervousness. It is common in our society.

To help you understand the problem better I am sending you The Health Letter number 19-8, That Anxious Feeling. Others who want information on anxiety can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue, to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor told me I have an enlarged spleen. I had all the tests including a CAT scan and everything was normal. The doctor said as long as I have no pain and the spleen functions well they will not do anything. If I eat too much I get a heavy feeling in the stomach. That is my only complaint.

Please tell me if I can eat all foods and if there is any medication for my spleen. I'm 83 years old and my blood pressure is 150 over 80.

DEAR READER — Many people have some enlargement of the spleen. It is so common in so many illnesses that if you said the spleen is enlarged in 15 percent of cases you would be about right. The fact that you have had such a complete evaluation and all tests were normal suggests it has little or no significance in your case.

That means you should live as if you didn't know you had a spleen. Just forget about it. The spleen is a specialized large lymph gland, important in the balance of blood cells. Since your doctor said yours functions OK, there is no reason for medicine or surgery or a special diet for your spleen.

Over my shoulder a backward glance.

Nowhere on earth are the Harveys more at ease than on their modest highway hilltop rock farm in the Missouri Ozarks.

Last week there I let my self-winding watch run down — awakened each dawn to birdsong — and spent each day playing farmer.

I'm pretty good at machinery maintenance and I'm learning the rest — about discing and harrowing and planting — soybeans this year.

Weather was perfect — the woodlots are embroidered with dogwood — And you can't take rough, raw, week-strewn sod and tediously scratch its belly and turn it pregnant with new life — and not share some of the gut-deep satisfaction that keeps farmers farming.

It's good for me to escape world problems and listen to the hill people once in a while —

Some profound truths have evolved over generations of colloquial shorthand.

They can dissolve some insoluble complexity with a single sentence, sometimes.

Or as they would say — they "shuck right down to the cob."

There are hill-country sayings for any occasion.

She drove her ducks to a poor market.

Or, as Aunt Betty Ruth says, "the bird never flew so far but what his tail followed him."

Or, "You dance, you have to pay the fiddler."

Voltaire never said it better.

Roy Dickerman keeps himself and me reminded: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

I wish Alex Haig could learn that.

And cousin Jane Stanek says, "You'll never do anything in the dark but what it doesn't come to light."

Amen.

Uncle Joe Maier says, "Tell me the company you keep and I'll tell you who you are."

And if there is a lesson sod-busters learn young it is that "for the weeds to take over the garden, all you have to do is nothing."

Progress report on the old car. For years you've heard me talk of renovating the car in which Angel and I honeymooned 42 years ago. 1938 Nash Lafayette.

Well, except for some cosmetics — it's done.

Engine purrs. I'm going to get some professional help with upholstery — but otherwise our first car, like the love it represents, is as shiny and new as ever.

So, yes, it was perhaps the happiest week of my life.

And having the family together is such a happy experience — I find myself holding my breath sometimes —

There's another hill country homely which says: "Little bitty house with a lot of children in it; great big house with nobody in it."

But for now our little house is so full...

You know, it occurs to me that heaven was built the first time in a garden.

Maybe next time on a hill.

Your Birthday

June 24, 1982

You are likely to have a few rocks strewn in your path this coming year, but you'll be able to deal with them and turn negative situations into winners.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take extra pride in your work today and, once you begin a project, finish it with the same enthusiasm as when you started. The experience will be rewarding. Find out more of what lies ahead for you for each season following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you choose to do so today, you'll know how to make all the right moves to switch the spotlight from others back to yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The additional pluses you have going for you in commercial matters today are your hunches and imagination. Put them to profitable use.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a possibility that someone you're fond of could step on your toes today. You'll know how to correct the situation tactfully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This should be a very successful day for you. One of the major reasons: You harbor strong desires to do for others as well as for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The best way to lift your spirits today is to find sincere ways to bolster the sagging psyche of someone who really needs a morale boost.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be disturbed by shifting conditions today. Changes tend to work for your benefit, even though you may see little value in them at first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep in mind today that everything is negotiable. Regardless of what circumstances you're in, begin to bargain for something better. You'll get it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before asking assistance today, make a sincere effort to do what needs doing yourself. Once others see you're trying, they'll pitch in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You are very adroit today at getting situations properly organized. Even when directing others, you'll do so in ways to which they'll want to adhere.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to tackle difficult tasks you've been postponing. Your imaginative touches will make hard chores seem easier.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It will be hard for others to say no to what you have to sell or offer today. Regardless of any objections they might raise, you can overcome them.

Other Geneva Arms Control Talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Once a week, a black Mercedes and three beige Fords bearing Russian diplomats, Red Army officers and faceless bureaucrats ease through the opened iron gates at the Soviet diplomatic mission and proceed in single-file formation down the Avenue de la Paix.

Three minutes later, at the end of the Avenue of Peace, the Soviets emerge with decided haste from their cars for a perfunctory reception. They are met by a handful of Americans waiting at the door of a building that houses U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency offices.

The routine, almost-ritual exchange of handshakes and nodded greetings is the only real public moment in the talks on intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe, talks that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. once said "constitute a special category of East-West relations." Since they were convened Nov. 30, the negotiations — the harbinger of parallel Strategic Arms Reduction Talks due to open in Geneva June 29 — have been veiled in secrecy. And given the worldwide attention that is certain to be devoted to the opening of START, the talks on intermediate-range forces or INF are likely to recede further into the background.

At the outset of the INF deliberations, the two sides said a news blackout was a prerequisite for progress.

Never have they departed from that agreement to remain tight-lipped in Geneva about the results of their twice-weekly meetings. The sessions alternate between the Arms Control Agency offices and the Soviet mission compound where there is seldom occasion even to glimpse the negotiating teams.

Chief U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze, who has crafted and criticized American arms control policy since World War II, is known literally to turn his back on reporters asking about the course of the talks.

While staying well within the prescribed limits, Nitze's Soviet counterpart, Yuli Alexandrovich Kvitsinsky, delights in dropping cryptic, one-line hints. Asked once how the negotiation was proceeding, Kvitsinsky smiled and said, "As it should be."

Questioned on another occasion about what he was looking for from the talks, the 45-year-old Soviet, Nitze's junior by 30 years, replied with a smirk: "Success."

Success, however, has proved elusive after more than 30 rounds of arcane bargaining, which is to continue apart from the START negotiation.

Eugene V. Rostow, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said in London in early June that the INF talks "have not succeeded in overcoming, in any respect, the gaps between the two positions."

The differences seem staggering. The Soviets, for example, argue approximate parity prevails in intermediate-range weapons strength; the Reagan administration, however, says the Kremlin holds a 6-to-1 advantage, and possesses weapons for which the West has no match.

The basic U.S. position is essentially to swap its paper missiles for the Soviets' deployed missiles. The offer, commonly called the "zero option," proposes cancelling NATO plans to deploy a new generation of 108 Pershing 2 and 464 ground-launched cruise missiles in western Europe, beginning next year.

The Soviets, in return, would dismantle their imposing arsenal of about 600 SS-series weapons, most fearsome of which are 300 mobile SS-20 systems, each bearing three warheads with a range of 3,100 miles. They can strike targets anywhere in western Europe, as well as points in the middle East.

Bignone New President...

Army Is In Control

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The army has taken control of the Argentine government, appointing retired army Gen. Reynaldo Bignone president over the objections of its junta partners.

It will now face alone the growing public pressure for a return to democracy following the nation's humiliating loss in the Falklands war.

The navy and the air force reacted to the army's choice of Bignone Tuesday by announcing they would limit their future cooperation in government to military matters — in effect dropping out of the six-year-old military regime.

Both services had pushed for a civilian to lead this nation of 28 million people.

The appointment of Bignone, a 54-year-old conservative administrator, ended five days of nervous speculation as to who would succeed army Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri as president. Bignone takes office July 1.

The military establishment forced Galtieri to step down last week in the wake of Argentina's defeat by Great Britain in the undeclared Falklands Islands war.

Growing demands for a return to democracy and the disintegrating unity of the junta forced an announcement from the army that it supports restoration of a civilian government by early 1984.

The army pledged to undertake negotiations with civilian political factions "in the quickest time possible" with the aim of restoring democratic rule by "the first few months of 1984." The junta of army, navy and air force commanders previously had promised to consult with "representative sectors" of the population to achieve a "national political, social and economic reorganization."

But it was the first time the armed forces gave a timetable for returning power to civilian politicians. Galtieri, who had been scheduled to remain in office until March 1984, once said, "The ballot boxes are tightly locked up."

Argentines put aside political differences to back Galtieri in his disastrous military campaign to recover the Argentine-claimed Falklands from Britain. But when Britain retook the islands June 14 after a 10-week military campaign that claimed hundreds of Argentine lives, demands for a democratically elected government were quickly rekindled.

Argentina's five largest political parties — all of which have been suspended since the 1976 coup that overthrew the civilian government of President Isabel Peron — met Tuesday night to analyze the army's decision. Earlier they had issued a note labeling the presidential selection process "a degradation of our country's historic republican virtues."

Claiming the people have been "cheated" by recent events, the parties demanded an immediate "return of the constitution."

'Buckle Up for Safety' Applies to Children, Too

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here in New York, the state legislature recently passed a law requiring all car passengers 4 years old and under to be strapped into approved safety seats. There is a $25 fine for parents who have not equipped their cars as yet, and that $25 goes toward the purchase of a seat. I can't believe all the grumbling and complaining about this law.

We moved here four years ago, leaving behind in Ohio a deep, dark secret we never mention here. Six years ago I was driving my 6-month-old daughter, unbelted, sitting in her carrier beside me. Five blocks from home, I was broadsided by a mail truck. My car was flipped over twice, and my precious baby girl was tossed around inside like a pingpong ball. She died 72 hours later of massive head injuries. (I was told it was a blessing — that she would have been a "vegetable" had she lived.)

Going home to an empty nursery drove me crazy with guilt. I had always been so careful. I had padded her crib, made sure she had only the safest toys, guarded her with my life and loved her with all my heart. If I had only known what I know now, she would have ridden home from the hospital as a newborn baby in a safety seat instead of in my arms.

We buried the truth with Tina and moved here to escape the memories. No one here knows we ever had a child. My husband finds it too hard to talk about. Since I can't tell the story, I beg you to do it for me, Abby. If it saves only one child's life, Tina's death will not have been in vain.

LEARNED TOO LATE

DEAR LEARNED: My heart goes out to you and your husband. But since you are still not able to talk about your loss, it is apparent that you have not yet worked through your grief and accepted it, which you must do in order to "get over it."

Get in touch with "Compassionate Friends," P.O. Box 1347, Oakbrook, Ill. 60521, a supportive group of people grieving over the loss of a loved one. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Ours is not an ordinary problem. We have a home in the country very near my husband's overweight brother (almost 400 pounds). We moved into our brand-new home a year ago. The first day "Brother" stepped on our porch, he broke the steps. Then he sat on a living room chair, which is part of a very expensive set, and broke one of the legs. There is only one piece of patio furniture he can sit on (the lounge), and the springs are beginning to sag already.

We are having a swimming pool installed now, and no ordinary ladder will hold him, but he keeps talking about how wonderful it will be to swim here every day when the pool is finished!

He's a nice person, congenial and intelligent, and we don't want to hurt his feelings, but we can't have him ruining our furniture and breaking the ladder on our pool.

Can you help us? Don't suggest that we try to get him to lose weight. It's hopeless.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Buy one very sturdy chair for this man, tell him it's "his" chair and ask him to please use it exclusively. (He knows he's overweight and he shouldn't be offended.) Install a pool ladder that can support a 400-pound person. It may cost a little more, but it's preferable to denying a congenial relative the use of your pool.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very delicate problem that requires a lot of tact. My mother is a social bore. When I introduce her to people, the first hour they have her life story, including all her physical ailments. (She's a chronic complainer.)

This embarrasses me terribly, and I notice that people shy away from her. Please tell me what to do.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: I don't know what kind of relationship you have with your mother, but I hope it's honest and open because she needs to be told in a loving (not judgmental or unkind) way to talk less about herself on first meeting. It's not uncommon for a person who's eager to make a good impression to talk too much. Your embarrassment is secondary to the reputation your mother is earning as a bore.

On Next Shuttle Flight...

Soviets Piqued By Experiements

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With the countdown under way for the space shuttle Columbia's first defense-related mission, the Soviet Union is accusing the United States of making space a new frontier for the arms race.

The countdown began Tuesday for Columbia's fourth and final test flight, scheduled to lift off at 11 a.m. EDT Sunday, and the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda criticized U.S. plans to test military hardware on the flight.

"American brass hats make no secret that they regard outer space as a potential theater of operations," Pravda said. "The Pentagon also is planning to put laser weapons, spy satellites and anti-satellite systems into near-Earth orbit" and it plans "to spread the arms race to outer space."

Meanwhile, the major activity scheduled today for Columbia was the pumping of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into the spacecraft's three power-producing fuel cells. The process takes several hours because workers must condition the fuel cells and lines to the frigid temperatures at which the hydrogen and oxygen is kept.

Through a chemical process, the cells produce electricity that operates the shuttle in orbit. It was a malfunction in one of the three cells that forced the curtailment of Columbia's second mission.

The Soviets started a manned space flight countdown of their own Tuesday, aiming for a Thursday launch of two cosmonauts and a French pilot to join two Soviets already aboard the Salyut 7 space station.

Only twice before have U.S. and Soviet spacemen been in orbit at the same time. The first was in 1973 when two cosmonauts were aloft while the three-man Skylab 3 crew was in the midst of an 84-day flight. The other was a joint U.S.-Soviet flight in 1975, when three Americans and two Soviets linked their ships in orbit.

Columbia's fourth test flight, scheduled to end on Independence Day at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., with President Reagan on hand, is to be its last before it begins operational satellite-ferrying missions in November.

The pilots, Navy Capt.

Ken Mattingly, 46, and Henry Hartsfield, 48, plan to test several sensors and instruments for the military for future space satellites. The Defense Department acknowledges the defense payload, but has classified it top secret.

The security label was said to stem mainly from a recent Air Force policy decision to give top secret classification to all military-oriented shuttle cargo.

The Pentagon eventually plans extensive use of the reusable spacecraft to carry communications, navigation, surveillance and other defense satellites. Later, it might test weapons such as lasers, capable of shooting down hostile missiles and satellites.

The Pentagon says its military space hardware is defensive and is needed to counteract the Soviets' own military space effort.

"The Wild One," a 1954 film starring Marion Brando as one of a gang of motorcyclists who terrorize a small American town, was banned by the British Board of Film Censors and was not approved for viewing in Britain until 1967.

Depression Is Multi-Faceted

SAN DIEGO, Calif.—More women suffer from depression than do men, according to current statistics, but California psychiatrist John P. Feighner, MD predicts that "the 60 to 40 ratio that now exists in favor of women is likely to change." The shift may be due to current lifestyles and a re-evaluation of what should be diagnosed as symptoms of depression, he contends.

Dr. Feighner is associate professor of clinical psychiatry at the University of California School of Medicine in San Diego and director of research at the Feighner Research Institute.

Alcoholism is symptomatic of depression, according to Dr. Feighner, and in the past more males have been prone to this problem than women. Male alcoholics have not always been counted in the overall statistics, says the psychiatrist, and there has been an increase in alcoholism among women in recent years.

Depression in women may be caused by a number of factors, he explains. Some may have a hormonal origin, some genetic, and some psychosocial. Women are at significant risk to become depressed following menopause when there are significant shifts in estrogen and progesterone production which has a profound effect on central nervous system metabolism. There is also some evidence that there are certain types of familial disorders that are "X" (chromosome) linked and appear more frequently in women than in men.

"There are a number of theories about psychosocial causes," says Dr. Feighner and at least one thing is clear: "Although we used to think that men are the stronger sex, this is not true in our current society."

There is a tremendous demand on a woman's time today. She may be the manager of the household budget, the family secretary and chauffeur. When her husband becomes ill, she cares for him and when she is sick, family and household are often in trouble. She is likely to be working outside the home and the additional income she brings home is now essential to pay bills, and is no longer discretionary. Having grown up in a predominantly male society she may feel conflicted about her role.

The woman who doesn't work or have interest outside the home and whose children have grown up may be faced with "empty nest" syndrome.

There is also the increased rate of divorce, and the woman whose husband dies and leaves her unprepared for widowhood or for entering the job market. She may lack a skill and feel threatened by loss of the security of home and the necessity for earning a living. "There is a tremendous adjustment to make," Dr. Feighner explains.

Left untreated, a deep depression can last a year or more and interfere with life and living.

drugs designed to combat depression—have improved the quality of life for many depressed persons, according to Dr. Feighner, and in fact, were a breakthrough in the treatment of depression when the first one was introduced in the 1950s. However, they have also had significant side effects.

Early this year, Dr. Feighner participated in a meeting in New York City at which Food and Drug Administration clearance of a new medication was announced for treatment of depression with or without accompanying anxiety. Dr. Feighner and other researchers described the new antidepressant called Desyrel (trazodone) as having few of the anticholinergic reactions (dry mouth, blurred vision, constipation, delayed urination, dizziness), and low incidence of adverse effect on the cardiovascular system, both of which have frequently presented problems with other antidepressant medications. Overdose with Desyrel has not resulted in fatalities, it was also reported.

Not everyone with depression requires medication, Dr. Feighner explains, and no one should be taking a drug for the problem without careful medical evaluation and supervision. Dr. Feighner reports that in spite of the increased pressures on today's woman, mental illness has not increased in the United States. He attributes this to increased awareness by American physicians and public education programs which encourage people with problems to seek help with the knowledge that such help is available.

Here is another example of the "obligatory false-card." The hand is a lot like yesterday's and again it is up to East to make the play.

The contract is four spades, although three no-trump would be a better one. Again the defense starts with three diamond tricks and shifts to a heart.

On normal, basic play, South will bring home the trump suit by a simple finesse for the king. Nevertheless, if East is wide awake he can give declarer a mighty tough problem and declarer will be likely to go wrong.

When South leads the six of spades from dummy, as he will, it is up to East to false-card with the king.

It is a play that can't lose. East can see that South needs both the ace and queen of spades to have an opening bid. If he just follows with the 10, South will finesse with the queen, drop the king under the ace and make the rest of the tricks.

Now let's see what may happen if East drops the king. South is likely to assume that West will be holding the 10 and two smaller spades and will try to pick it up by leading to dummy's nine. If he does, East will score the setting trick with his 10.

Arkansas Inmate Finds Long Lost Texas Sister

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Carol Walker and Kenny Gene Turner have closed a gap of 20 years with a 20-minute telephone call, she sitting in a newspaper office, he, in an Arkansas prison.

They may be reunited in person later this summer.

Mrs. Walker last saw her brother the year, she said, that her parents put him up for adoption and he moved to Okinawa. She was 10 and he was one.

Tuesday night she talked to the long-lost brother, an inmate in the Arkansas state prison at Grady.

"At first I thought I was going to faint! When they told me my call had come through I just sat there. They had to tell me two times before I went to the phone," Ms. Walker said.

"When I started talking to him I had such mixed emotions — I wanted to cry, I wanted to laugh, I wanted to jump," she said.

The call came about after Turner wrote to San Angelo Postmaster Lonnie Monreal from the prison, looking for the sister he heard was living in San Angelo. In the letter, Turner enclosed a snapshot of him and his sister taken shortly before their separation in 1962.

The San Angelo Standard-Times published the photograph and a story on Turner's search Monday. His sister's former mother-in-law recognized the Mrs. Walker in Turner's picture and left a clipping of the story on Mrs. Walker's desk.

"I just started crying, because I remembered him right away," Mrs. Walker said.

"I always wondered where he was and how he was. You know, you may have other brothers, but somehow you still remember the one that's not there."

Discovering that he is imprisoned on a burglary conviction isn't important, she said.

"I would never disown him for it or feel shamed because of it," she said. "Who are we to say? ... We haven't walked in his shoes. After finding out after all these years he's not who he thought. Who knows what happened?"

She said he told her he was coming home to San Angelo in August.

"The bad thing is knowing that he has been so confused and hurt inside all this time. He found out he was adopted when he was 13 years old and ran away from home for the first time that year," she said.

"He wanted to know what Mama's name is, how many kids I have and about his other brothers and sisters. He wanted to know if his Daddy was still alive — he is. I know Mama's gonna just throw a fit. I'm gonna call her now," Mrs. Walker said.

She said he didn't even know his original name was Tootsday Hegemann.

"I told him what his real name is and he said 'Boy, that's a weird name.' Ain't that something? He was named after a rodeo man."

She said her parents put her brother up for adoption for financial reasons.

"Momma just couldn't take care of all us kids," she said.

The family that adopted Kenny moved to Okinawa, she said, "and after that, we just never had any more contact with each other."

Tuition Tax Credit Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says his bill to provide tuition tax breaks for private education will not only give parents a choice of schools but "maintain a healthy pressure" on public schools to keep up their standards.

But public school groups blasted Reagan's "Educational Opportunity and Equity Act of 1982" as a waste of taxpayers' dollars in an era of scarcity.

Reagan and Vice President George Bush unveiled the bill Tuesday in a closed-door meeting with leaders of private school and conservative groups.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was to introduce the bill today.

When Reagan unveiled the outlines of the tax credit plan two months ago, Dole expressed skepticism about its chances of passage this year in the face of the $100 billion-plus federal deficit.

An aide said Tuesday Dole is still concerned about the cost and "is not tied to every word" of the bill.

The tax credit would cover half the cost of tuition up to a maximum of $100 per child in 1983, $300 in 1984 and $500 in 1985.

The White House estimated the credit would be taken for 4.5 million private school students at a cost to the Treasury of $100 million in fiscal 1983 and $1.5 billion by fiscal 1987.

In sending the bill to Congress, Reagan said tuition has always been a barrier to lower-income families and "rising costs are now putting private schools beyond the reach of a growing number of middle-income Americans as well."

Poll Says People Not Satisfied With Verdict

NEW YORK (AP) — Three of every four people questioned in a national poll said justice was not done when a jury found John W. Hinckley Jr. innocent by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan and three others, ABC News reported Tuesday night.

And a large majority, 78 percent, said they guessed that the 27-year-old presidential assailant would someday go free, according to the telephone poll of 505 people taken by ABC during a four-hour period Tuesday evening.

ABC said 94 percent of the people questioned were aware that Hinckley had been found insane Monday night by a U.S. District Court jury in Washington. Hinckley was committed to a hospital and his mental condition will be evaluated.

According to the poll, 90 percent said Hinckley should not be allowed to go free, even if it is determined later that he has recovered from mental illness. And 75 percent disapproved of the law that allows someone to be found not guilty by reason of insanity, ABC said.

When asked, "Do you think justice was done in the case of John Hinckley or not?" 76 percent said justice was not done, 16 percent said justice was done and 7 percent were unsure.

Asked whether they approve or disapprove of the insanity law, 75 percent said they disapproved, 20 percent said they approved and 5 percent were unsure.

To the question of whether Hinckley should be allowed to go free if he is later found to have recovered, 90 percent said no, 8 percent said yes, and 2 percent were unsure.

And when asked to give a "best guess" whether Hinckley would be allowed to go free again, 78 percent said he would, 18 percent said he would not and 4 percent were unsure.

ABC said the poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent. That means if one could have talked Tuesday night to all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 5 percentage points.

Jurors Disillusioned By Insanity Plea Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — As John W. Hinckley Jr. begins his stay in a mental institution, some members of the jury that acquitted the presidential assailant on grounds he was insane joined the public clamor for a change in the law.

Juror Maryland T. Copelin, who said she argued for conviction until the final hours of deliberations, said Tuesday she felt "like an American sucker...because of the way the system was."

"He's just a spoiled brat that wanted his way," said Mrs. Copelin. "Now, he's the smart one there. You see how he manipulated the whole country?"

On Monday, Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity on all counts stemming from his March 30, 1981 shooting of President Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and then-Washington policeman Thomas Delahanty.

The 27-year-old Hinckley was flown by helicopter about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday from the stockade at Fort Meade, Md., to St. Elizabeths Hospital, a federal institution where he will undergo evaluation to determine if and when he is sane enough to be released.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who presided at Hinckley's trial, set Aug. 9 as the date when he will determine if Hinckley will be released. Parker ordered the staff at St. Elizabeths to give him a report on Hinckley's mental condition by Aug. 2.

Although it is possible that Hinckley might be released at the hearing, his wealthy parents said they would not seek his freedom "until he has recovered to the point that he is judged to be harmless and responsible."

John W. Hinckley Sr. and his wife, JoAnn, of Evergreen, Colo., issued a statement saying they believed their son would not have wounded the president and three other men "unless he were terribly ill."

If Hinckley is found mentally ill and dangerous at his hearing, he would remain at St. Elizabeths indefinitely but would have the right to request a rehearing every six months.

Meanwhile, some of the seven women and five men on the jury expressed uneasiness about the insanity defense.

"I think the law is confusing on that point," said jury foreman Lawrence H. Coffey, 22. "If it can be rewritten, I guess I would prefer he get his treatment and then be punished."

Mrs. Copelin, 50, complained the options for a verdict — guilty, innocent or innocent by reason of insanity — weren't broad enough to suit the circumstances.

"I wanted him guilty of everything he did. But I took into consideration his mental disorder," she said.

She said she backed down and voted with the other jurors when she could not longer take the strain of deliberations. "We were more prisoners than the prisoners...We had to get out for our own sanity."

"The system doesn't have it right," said juror Nathalia Brown, 30. "The man can have some mental disorder. You treat him for that illness and after that let him serve the time. I still want to see him punished."

Farabee Calls For Overhaul Of Defense

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Ray Farabee says the Legislature should review the insanity defense used by lawyers for John Hinckley Jr. because it undermines public confidence in the criminal justice system.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said he would ask the 1983 Legislature to change state laws that allow the defense, but he said he was not yet ready to offer a specific revision.

Jurors in Washington, D.C., found Hinckley innocent by reason of insanity Monday on charges he shot President Reagan and three other men in March of 1981.

"The public reaction to the Hinckley case illustrates how the defense, as it is sometimes used, undermines public confidence in our criminal justice system," Farabee said.

Farabee also cited another case involving a Wichita Falls woman found innocent by reason of insanity in the February 1980 death of her daughter, whose heart was cut out with a knife.

"The mother was found to be insane and committed to Rusk and Wichita Falls State Hospitals. Almost two years to the day after her child's death, the woman was released because the hospital felt she was no longer dangerous," said Farabee.

"The average citizen has difficulty believing that if such a person was really insane, that she could be 'cured' so quickly," said Farabee. "Mental health care is not yet a precise science."

Farabee said he would ask the Mental Health Code Task Force to study the insanity defense.

Two Local Firms In Mobil Guide

The Purple Sage Motel and The Shack Restaurant have been selected to appear in the 1982 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide.

"The Shack has been in the Mobil Travel Guide for five of our six years in business," said Randy Perkins, manager. "Our friendly and courteous employees, our consistency of service and food, and especially our local customers have been the key to our success."

"Helen and I have owned the Purple Sage for nine years," said Art Feinsod. "We have continually upgraded the property, focusing on those things which our commercial guests wanted, such as in-room coffee and queen-sized beds. Our manager, Kathy Williams, has over nine years of experience managing motels in Snyder, and our desk clerk, Ola Glasscock, really knows each guest and their individual requirements. We are really proud to have been in the Mobil Guide for seven years."

Over 20,000 restaurants, hotels, motels and resorts are listed and rated on a one to five-star basis in the seven-volume Mobil Travel Guide, which has been compared by travel experts to the famed Guide-Michelin. Each of the seven regional editions provides valuable information on local history, sightseeing, amusements, sports and recreation facilities, in addition to the star-rated food and lodging listings. Also included are regional road atlases and detailed maps of major cities, special auto tour routes and helpful advice to travelers.

The 1982 Southwest and South Central Region Mobil Travel Guides are on sale at the Purple Sage Motel. Other volumes are on sale at company service stations and other places where books and magazines are sold.

Honeycutt Puts Cuffs On Angles, Rod Carew

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Throughout his 25-game batting streak, California first baseman Rod Carew expressed his unconcern about such personal accomplishments.

"You can run into a hot pitcher one day, and there won't be anything you can do about it," Carew said while building the major leagues' longest streak in two years.

Carew's premonition came true Tuesday night when Texas lefthander Rick Honeycutt held him hitless and the Angels scoreless in a 4-0 win by the Rangers.

"I'm happy to make him (Carew) go 0-for-4 anytime, ending his streak was an extra bonus," said Honeycutt, 3-7 after his third consecutive win and first shutout of the season. Four times Carew had extended his streak on his last at-bat and his best shot at a hit Tuesday night also came in his final chance.

The Rangers were having all the fun Tuesday night, touching Bruce Kison, 6-3, for two runs in the first inning and, after Kison was knocked out by a line drive off his leg, getting to Dave Goltz for another pair in the fifth.

"I was happy to get those early runs," said Honeycutt. "They helped me relax. I get really keyed up against those guys. Everybody they have is either an MVP or an All-Star. I was able to stay ahead of them and Honeycutt walked two and struck out four in turning in his fourth complete game of the season. Not only was the shutout the first for him, but it was also only the Rangers' second of the season.

After Billy Sample led off the game with a triple, he scored on a single by Terry Bogener, who advanced on another single by Buddy Bell before scoring on a single by Grubb.

Grubb, his next time up, lined a ball back to the mound that hit Kison slightly below his right knee. Kison was removed from the game for X-rays which proved to be negative.

After the Rangers loaded the bases in the fifth on Bell's double and walks to Grubb and Lamar Johnson, Jim Sundberg singled to drive in the final two runs of the game.

Hooper Executes Upset

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - While John McEnroe, the defending champion and top-seed, again was the star attraction at Wimbledon, another American, Chip Hooper was getting plenty of notice.

As the crowd awaited McEnroe's second round match with Eddie Edwards of South Africa, the talk was of Hooper's latest triumph.

The 6-foot-6 serve-and-volley specialist whose game is tailor-made for grass, upset eighth-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia 7-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 Tuesday.

Hooper, able to hammer the serve from a frightening angle of attack, pounded serve after serve off his oversized racquet, rattling the curtains and an occasional linesman at the opposite end of the court.

McNamara, who became the second ranked player to exit the event, left immediately after the match without talking to reporters. He ran out of steam in the third set, seemingly disheartened as Hooper's service, clocked at 135 mph, appeared to get even stronger.

Former champion Virginia Wade and defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd were among the standout women win-

Ruhle Fires Four Hitter By Giants

HOUSTON (AP) - Good pitching stops good hitting and the Astros got all the pitching they needed when they summoned up one member of Houston's battered bullpen to start against the Giants.

Verne Ruhle stopped San Francisco on three hits, faced just 28 batters, struck out five and earned his first shutout since 1980 as the Astros beat the Giants 2-0 Tuesday night.

"Ruhle's always tough. As far as pitching goes, he is as good as anybody in the league," said the Giant's Joe Morgan. "You never see the same pitch twice. You may see two fast balls, but they're at two different speeds, on sinking and one rising. He's got about 900 different pitches."

The Houston right-hander has spent the season as a swing man, getting seven starts and seven relief appearances. His complete-game shutout Tuesday night was a confidence builder for the faltering bullpen corps. "I can't say I've had any Wimbledon women's play - as she pounded out a 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory.

Wade's match highlighted the first day of women's play, which also saw Lloyd dispatch 17-year-old Barbara Sue Gerken of Thousand Oaks, Calif., 6-0, 6-4 on the rain-slicked Center Court.

Meanwhile, sixth-seeded Gene Mayer came from a set and a service break down to overtake Tim Gullikson 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5, becoming the 10th of the 16 seeds to reach the second round. Yannick Noah of France pulled out Monday with a strained thigh ligament.

In other women's matches, 15-year old Kathy Rinaldi defeated fellow American Stacy Margolin 6-2, 7-6; Lucia Romanov of Romania toppled Britain's Anne Croft 1-6, 6-3, 6-1; South Korea's Duk Hee Lee stopped Glynis Coles of Britain 4-6, 6-4, 6-1; American Wendy White defeated Brenda Remilton of Australia 6-3, 6-4 and American Sharon Walsh defeated Britain's Sue Barker 6-0, 6-4.

The right-hander went on to retire 23 straight Giant batters until pinch-hitter Dave Bergman singled with one out in the ninth. Jim Wolford ground into a double play to wrap up the game.

The win was the first shutout for Ruhle since his 2-0 win over Cincinnati on Sept. 16, 1980.

Losing pitcher Rich Gale, 2-7, kept pace with Ruhle for five innings, allowing only two hits until Ray Knight and Jose Cruz led off the sixth with singles.

Knight went to third on Cruz' hit and scored when Alan Ashby grounded into a double play. Phil Garner's triple and Tony Scott's single gave the Astros a 2-0 lead.

2 Border Patrol Officers Guilty Of Violations

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two Border Patrol officers convicted of violating the civil rights of two Mexican women by coercing them into having sex will be sentenced July 13.

David M. Davila and Robert Jacques also were convicted of obstructing justice by falsifying arrest reports to cover up their contact with the women.

Davila faces a sentence of up to 27 years in prison on the various counts and Jacques could be sentenced to up to seven years in prison, said Norma Jean Flanagan, a prosecutor with the U.S. Justice Department.

Jack Luscombe, attorney for Davila, said the defendants "probably" would appeal the verdict reached by a federal jury of seven women and five men. The jury deliberated nearly four hours before reaching the decision Tuesday.

"You always get a little surprised by something like that," Luscombe said. "But that's the way the jury saw it and you go from there."

The officers were accused of coercing Alicia Ortiz Palmer and Norma Munoz-Pro into having sex after picking the women up on Oct. 18, 1980, during a patrol near one of the international bridges between El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

The women were being helped through a hole in a fence by two Fort Bliss soldiers, William Ward and Warren Palmer. After the officers caught the four, they released the soldiers and placed the women in the patrol car.

The women testified that the officers said the women and the soldiers would get into trouble if the women did not agree to have sex with them. The women testified they were driven to Davila's apartment where the sexual activity occurred.

Ms. Flanagan said the turning point in the case came when investigator Nicolas Gallardo drove the women through a neighborhood near William Beaumont Hospital, which they had seen from the apartment.

Woman Sues To Get Cat

LEAGUE CITY, Texas (AP) — A veterinarian says a 19-year-old Dickinson woman who has picketed his office could be suing a cat to engineer his financial ruin.

"I'm a small businessman trying to make a living," said Ron Ludwig, who faces a lawsuit from a former employee who contends he is holding her cat, Tobias, hostage. "If I let her get away with something like this, then everyone will run over me."

Miss Overton said Ludwig charged her $275 to operate on her cat to remove five feet of fishing line. But she contended he estimated the cost of the surgery would be about $100. She also says he has refused her offer to pay in installments.

Miss Overton, her mother and four friends picketed Ludwig's office during the weekend with placards reading "Tobias Wants Out," "Set Tobias Free," and "Ransom. Never!"

"This whole fiasco is ridiculous," Ludwig said. He refused to reveal the whereabouts of Tobias, and an office assistant said Tuesday he was too busy with other animals to discuss the matter.

But Ludwig said now it would take a lot more than just the $275 surgery bill to get him to free the cat. He said he intends to also charge Miss Overton for sheltering Tobias and for legal advice he sought in response to her lawsuit.

"They'll have to pay a big bill before that cat is returned," he vowed.

Gallardo testified the women shouted, "That's it," when they saw a red-brick apartment that later turned out to be Davila's.

After the identification was made, the women were shown photograph spreads of Mexican-Americans and "immediately identified" the two officers, Ms. Flanagan said.

Luscombe and John Langford, Jacques' attorney, had argued during the trial that the soldiers both had testified that one of the officers was an Anglo. Both defendants were Mexican-American.

But Ms. Flanagan said the soldiers' inability to identify the officers was immaterial because the women, who had been with the officers longer, recognized them.

Langford and Luscombe also had argued that details of the statements from the four witnesses did not match the facts. For example, the soldiers had said the patrol car had red flashing lights on top and the car used by Davila and Jacques had no such lights.

But Ms. Flanagan told the jury such details were "just smoke in your eyes."

Weather Causing Headaches For Texas Farmers

By Scott McCartney
Associated Press Writer

Just a month after heavy May rains spawned crop-killing floods, few Texas farmers expected to see the fruits of their labor withering in sun-baked fields.

But below-normal rainfall and above-normal temperatures this month in most of the Panhandle, Southeast, South Central and West Texas have left fields scorched and important crops stunted, state agricultural experts say.

"It has been a study of contrast from one extreme to the other. Certain areas had far too much rain plus hail in May... Now in some areas of the state the need for moisture is critical," said Mary Mahoney, spokeswoman for the Texas A&M University agriculture department.

"We didn't have all this turbulence last year," Ms. Mahoney said. "This year has been chaotic and hectic."

"But that isn't abnormal for Texas. We can have both flood problems and drought problems at the same time."

Ms. Mahoney said that in North Central Texas and much of East Texas, farmers have had adequate rains for their crops. But heavy thunder-showers, hail and a few tornadoes also have taken their toll on farmlands.

After May storms washed out newly planted cotton crops, farmers replanted. Now, Ms. Mahoney said, cotton fields aren't getting the moisture they need and farmers face financial problems if the plantings fail.

Rain last month destroyed 1,250 acres of the 7 million acres of cotton planted in Texas annually, the Texas Department of Agriculture in Austin reported.

In the South Plains area around Lubbock, farmers lost at least another 300,000 acres of cotton last weekend in hail storms, Ms. Mahoney said.

That cotton, in one of the state's most productive farming areas, can't be replanted because it is too late in the season, she said.

Harvests of the state's No. 2 crop, wheat, were delayed because of wet fields and two weeks of heavy rain in the Rio Grande Valley and nearby counties destroyed almost one-third of the cantaloupes and watermelons planted as well as numerous other vegetable crops, the agriculture department said.

Farmers in the Upper Gulf Coast region need rain to complete their soybean crops and farmers inland of the coastal bend are in danger of losing their grain sorghum crops if they don't get rain soon, Ms. Mahoney said.

Most hay growers, who are important to Texas livestock ranchers, have made one cutting of their

F. Durrrough Sentenced To Life Term

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — After nearly nine years behind bars and five trials, Fred Durrrough has been convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

But Durrrough says he will go back to court again, hoping the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals will again overturn the conviction.

Durrrough was assessed the death penalty in two previous capital murder trials for the 1973 slaying of retired Air Force Col. Henry Tyler, 56, in the San Antonio suburb of Olmos Park.

The Corpus Christi jury, hearing the case on a change of venue from San Antonio, convicted Durrrough Monday on a reduced charge of murder, and on Tuesday recommended the maximum life sentence.

grain but are in danger of losing the second, third and fourth cuttings if they don't get additional rain, she said.

"In parts of our state it is so dry that crops are burning," she said.

Harsh weather has knocked the peach crop in half this year. The agriculture department estimates that 354,000 bushels of peaches will be harvested this year, down 11 percent from its initial May 1 estimate and down 50 percent from last year's harvest.

This year's wheat harvest will be about 11 percent behind last year's record harvest, agriculture department spokesman Celia Baker said. Delays in harvesting wheat in May also damaged the quality of the crop, she said.

Despite the problems, most Texas farmers have weathered the spring growing season with less difficulty than their counterparts in the midwestern sections of the country where heavy rains have but fields under water.

"The reverse is true here. Most of the state could use that precipitation," Ms. Mahoney said.

"We really missed out on a lot of the rains that hit the Midwest. The big question is whether we will get the rains we need to finish out the crops."
