Reserve seeks bids on domestic crude

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In an explicit attempt to support the oil industry, the Reagan administration announced Wednesday it was soliciting bids from domestic producers to supply crude oil for the nation's strategic stockpile.

The government will buy up to 35,000 barrels a day and, if necessary, will pay more for the American oil than the prices prevailing on foreign oil. The market price of American oil is now about $15.50 a barrel.

"Today's decision to seek the purchase of domestic oil for the strategic reserve underscores this administration's concern for our national energy security and the need for a healthy U.S. industry," Energy Secretary John S. Herrington said in a statement. "It illustrates our commitment to exploring options and taking actions that we believe will help strengthen the industry."

Herrington said the purchases could be done "without sacrificing our budgetary responsibilities."

The administration had once proposed that filling the stockpile be halted to save money, but on Aug. 6 the president, overruling budget advisers, directed that purchases continue through the fiscal year 1987, which begins Oct. 1.

Pemex, Mexico's state oil company, is currently the sole supplier to the American stockpile, but the contract under which it is selling 35,000 barrels a day expires Sept. 30, the Energy Department said.

The immediate reaction of the oil industry was restrained. Edward H. Murphy, an official at the American Petroleum Institute, welcomed the move, but added that the relatively small volume was unlikely to have much effect on prices.

"That's a pretty insignificant amount," Murphy said. "I don't think it would make much difference as far as the welfare of domestic producers is concerned."

The United States now produces about 8.7 million barrels of oil a day, about two-thirds of its needs.

Another industry source suggested that producers might be disappointed that the proposed purchases were not larger. The Energy Department said the reserve could physically accept up to 100,000 barrels a day. Herrington has said that such a rate, although authorized, was unlikely.

In its announcement, the Energy Department made no mention of the price it would pay for the domestic crude oil.

Conferees start difficult budget-cutting battle

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House and Senate budget negotiators started "grappling for the soul of Texas" Wednesday, beginning deliberations that many say will never succeed.

While Gov. Mark White held out hope that the Legislature will complete its work on the $3.5 billion state deficit before the special session ends next week, House and Senate leaders continued to engage in their struggle over budget cuts and taxes.

"Things are progressing very well," White told reporters after addressing a pro-tax crowd of several hundred social welfare activists. "We won't need another session."

The governor asked the gathering to support his plan for a temporary, 1.125-percent sales tax increase. "Those of you who want good schools, good roads and good health care at the state have got to pay for it...regardless of the political consequences," White said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who favors greater tax increases and smaller cuts than White, told the crowd the Legislature is "grappling for the soul of Texas." "We need more money," Hobby said in English and in Spanish, drawing loud applause.

The 10-man conference committee — four Democrats and one Republican from each house — made little progress Wednesday afternoon in their first attempt to iron out the $322 million difference between the two chambers on a budget cutting bill. Most of the gap falls in higher education, where the House version cuts about $200 million more than the Senate plan.

"Education will probably be the last thing they will get into," said House Speaker Gib Lewis, who said he told his conferees to "work hard and do the best they can do."

The panel spent most of the three-hour meeting discussing appropriations cuts in health and human services programs, passing over most controversial issues and taking the rare step of appointing a subcommittee to examine mental health and mental retardation cuts.

Members of the news media present complained to committee members that they could not hear much of the often-whispered discussions. Several lawmakers replied that they would try to speak up.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple and chairman of the Senate conferees, said the committee will not "complete the work on the appropriations bill until such time as we do have a tax bill."

Two influential House members Wednesday introduced a bill raising the state sales tax rate by 0.875 percent, with the proceeds dedicated to prison construction operation and maintenance. But Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said he has no plans to hold a public hearing on the bill. Lewis stuck to his no-new-taxes plan, saying he expects a second special session to begin Sept. 5.

21 killed in Soweto rioting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said today 21 people were killed in riots in Soweto, including 20 blacks shot by security forces. Anti-apartheid leaders said up to 30 were killed and said they were appalled by the "cold-blooded massacre."

"This was one of the darkest days in our history," said the Rev. Frank Chikane, deputy president of the Soweto Civic Association.

The state Bureau for Information, however, said police fired "to protect life and property" during the street fighting Tuesday night and Wednesday morning in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

It said the 21st victim was a Soweto councilor, who relatives said was hacked to death. Another 98 people were injured, the bureau said.

The government had said previously that 13 people were killed and 70 injured. It said the dead included a 13-year-old boy.

In Cape Town, the government turned down a request from the opposition Progressive Federal Party to hold an emergency debate on the Soweto violence.

Reporters said youths in six neighborhoods rebuilt street barricades Wednesday night, and that security forces fired birdshot and tear gas at them. The government confirmed widespread stone-throwing.

Soweto was reported quiet today.

Chikane and Murphy Morobe, chief spokesman for the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition, told a news conference that reports from Soweto hospitals and doctors indicated up to 30 people were killed and 200 wounded.

They said the violence began Tuesday night when police fired without provocation at blacks leaving a meeting called to discuss threatened evictions of residents taking part in a rent boycott.

They said the shooting began about two hours before the incident that the government said triggered the violence — a confrontation at a street barricade. The government said four police officers were wounded at the barricade when someone threw a hand grenade at them, and that the police fired at the crowd.

"We are appalled by this cold-blooded massacre of our people," said Chikane. He and Morobe called on the Soweto town council to resign.

The council owns most of the township housing, and rent is its only source of revenue.

The Rev. Beyers Naude, a white activist who is general-secretary of the South African Council of Churches, urged at the news conference that Sowetans be allowed "to bury their dead in peace."

"If that is denied, it can only lead to further tension and conflict, with the inevitable consequences," Naude said.

The Sowetan newspaper quoted the township's housing director, Del Kevan, as saying the town council will suspend evictions to avoid further trouble.

Soweto town clerk Nico Malan said, however, that no evictions had occurred in neighborhoods where the fighting took place.

Flash flooding watch in effect for Permian Basin

San Angelo gets 6 inches

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Residents around this West Texas city tried to dry off today after heavy storms doused them with more than 6 inches of rain and flooded roads with up to 15 inches, officials say.

No injuries were reported as an estimated 2 to 6 inches of rain fell in Carlsbad, Water Valley and Grape Creek Wednesday, although at least five homes in Grape Creek were flooded, authorities said.

Deborah Cortez of Grape Creek, for instance, said at first that she wasn't about to sit back and watch the water rise after weathering a hail storm that almost ruined her home last year.

So she called volunteer firefighters and others Wednesday morning to erect barricades against the flooding.

Midland gets intermittent rain

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A flash flood watch is in effect for Midland and the southern Permian Basin until 6 p.m. today, a spokesman at the National Weather Service said this morning.

Rain, which had totaled .67 of an inch at the weather service at the Midland Regional Airport by mid-morning today, is expected to continue intermittently throughout the day, the spokesman said.

Higher totals were reported in various parts of the city.

The rain, beginning around 4 a.m. Thursday, is part of moisture from the Gulf being circulated over West Texas by a high pressure system, he said.

On Wednesday the weather service reported .14 of an inch and .53 of an inch had fallen be mid-morning today.

The rain over the past two days is unusual because it has lingered, the spokesman said.

"Most of our rain out here is not the type where we get a little bit over a long period of time. This is taking a little longer than usual," the spokesman said.

"Around here in West Texas, when we get rain, we often do get a lot at once," he said.

Along with Midland, the flash flood watch is in effect for the southern Permian Basin, the Concho Valley and the Transpecos area.

The police department reported several stalled vehicles this morning at Wadley and Ward streets and at Garfield and Wadley streets. The department also reported flooding in the area of Midland Park Mall.

The Texas Highway Department said no roads had been closed this morning because of flooding.

"As of yet, we have not closed any roads in our district," said Sharlot Sharrock, with the maintenance section of the highway department.

Man has three widows

FORT WORTH (AP) — A funeral director says he's thoroughly confused after three women each claimed to be the widow of Eddie Cooks.

"I've never seen anything like it in 17 years," said Gregory Spencer. "All of these wives swear they are not divorced. Each one wants her own limousine" for the funeral procession.

Cooks, 62, a chicken processor for J.W. Nichols Co. until he retired two years ago, died Friday after being struck by a car. He was to be buried today.

A man's widow would normally be listed in his obituary and be driven to the funeral in a limousine. In this case, Spencer said he would follow the direction of Cooks' niece.

"She pays me, and she says not to list anyone as his wife," the funeral director told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Afree "Effie" Johnson Cooks said she married Eddie Cooks in 1951 and has the marriage license to prove it. Although they separated after only a year or so, she said they never divorced.

Helen Cooks is certain she too was married to the man.

"I know I am married to him," she said. "It's already been checked. I am the one drawing his Social Security benefits. I don't think it's lawful for anyone to have three or four wives."

She said she married him on April 15, 1955, and lived with him for about 12 years. She says Cooks told her his marriage to his first wife was annulled.

Islamic Jihad warns against rescue

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The shadowy Islamic Jihad organization today warned that any U.S. military operation to free American hostages held in Lebanon would cost them their lives.

The warning came in a four-paragraph, typewritten Arabic-language statement delivered to the west Beirut office of a Western news agency along with a snapshot of American hostage David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif.

"We warn everyone who contemplates any military or security foolhardinesss to free the hostages, because his as well as their fate would be much worse than the U.S. Marines (killed) on the outskirts of Islamic Beirut," the statement said.

That was a reference to the Oct. 23, 1983, suicide truckbombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters at Beirut's International airport in which 241 American servicemen perished.

"Let all know we shall have no mercy. We shall not compromise in that matter and the reckoning will be very severe," said the statement from the Shiite Moslem extremist group believed linked to Iran.

The Islamic Jihad statement said "all plots and intrigues hatched nowadays by local and international hands under the sponsorship of the great Satan to reveal the fate of the hostages we hold shall fail."

"The great Satan" is a phrase often used by Shiite zealots to refer to the United States.

The Americans missing in Beirut are:

Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital; Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the university; and William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad claimed last October it had killed Buckley, but no body was ever produced. Kidnapped university librarian Peter Kilburn was found slain April 17.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest from Joliet, Ill., was released July 26 after nearly 19 months in captivity.

Bolivia declares state of siege

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The government today declared a nationwide state of siege and arrested scores of labor and church leaders in response to widespread protests against the closing of mines and economic austerity measures, the Information Ministry said.

The government imposed a midnight to 6 a.m. curfew, banned political and union activity, gave security forces the power to make arrests without judicial orders and prohibited travel between cities, officials said.

Soldiers stopped a protest march of about 7,000 miners and their families 40 miles outside La Paz, put the demonstrators on trucks and sent them back to the mining town of Oruro, said Irving Alcaraz, undersecretary of information in the ministry.

The leaders of the march were detained, Alcaraz said.

The miners left Oruro, 150 miles from the capital, last week to march on La Paz to protest the closing of mines and firing of miners.

Among those detained were United Methodist Church pastors Jorge Pantelis and Gustavo Loza and Agence France-Presse correspondent Andres Soliz Rada, who also is a leader of the Press Workers Federation, the Bolivian Human Rights Assembly told The Associated Press.

Last week, workers went on strike for two days to protest government economic policies and to demand the removal of U.S. troops who have been providing support for police raids on cocaine producers.

On Tuesday, the government announced a reorganization of the unprofitable nationalized mining industry. Under the plan, most mines will be closed or offered to workers as collectives and half the 20,000 miners may be fired. More than 7,000 miners already have been laid off.

A sharp decline in the world price of tin, the main ore produced in Bolivia, has had a devastating effect on the industry.

The Bolivian Mining Company which operates the mines exported $300 million worth of minerals in 1985 and lost $230 million, Mining Minister Jaime Villalobos has said.

"Since the government decided to rehabilitate the state mining company, there have been illegal strikes, the paralyzation of the cities of Oruro and Potosi, destruction of railway links, the occupation of working centers with the possibility the conflict will be aggravated by the mobilization of miners to La Paz," said the decree authorizing the state of siege.

"This situation is generating a climate of violence of unpredictable consequences for Bolivia," the decree said.

The country's year-old conservative government has laid off thousands of workers, reorganized state companies, frozen the wages of public employees and raised gasoline prices tenfold in an effort to control inflation that reached 20,000 percent, the highest in the world.

For the last six months, inflation has been kept to 20 percent, but the economy is in a deep recession and tens of thousands of workers have lost their jobs.

One killed in crash of UPS cargo plane

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — One person was killed early today when a cargo plane leased to United Parcel Service crashed during an approach to Texarkana Municipal Airport, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

"One fatality is confirmed, and there's a possibility of two," said Gerry Cook, spokeswoman for the FAA's Southwest regional office at Fort Worth, Texas.

The plane, a twin-engine Lockheed Lodestar, was on approach to runway 13 at the airport when it crashed at 6:52 a.m., Ms. Cook said. The craft "appeared to pull up and then nose over and crash," she said.

The plane was leased to UPS by Southwest Airlift of Shreveport, La., said Raymond Battle, spokesman for UPS in Little Rock. "They are a contract carrier for us to carry packages," Battle said.

The FAA had said Southwest Airlift was based in Albuquerque, N.M. There was no answer to telephone calls to Southwest Airlift's number in Shreveport this morning.

Ms. Cook said National Transportation Safety Board investigators were en route to the airport from Kansas City, and that FAA safety inspectors were on their way from Little Rock.

Conflict over Libya played down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, while denying the United States is waging a war of nerves against Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, also is playing down the war of words among administration officials over evidence of a Libyan terrorist threat.

Speakes on Wednesday renewed his warnings of plots by the Libyan leader and pointed anew to U.S. resolve to deal firmly with any such activity.

But the spokesman repeatedly refused to cite any specific evidence for the administration's fear of new Libyan attacks, citing an unwillingness to discuss information acquired through intelligence sources.

That discussion was left to unnamed administration officials, who engaged in a transcontinental spat over the type of evidence gleaned about the Libyan leader's terrorist activities.

Speakes said Libya still has "the capability to commit terrorist acts, and we want them to be fully aware that our policy is unchanged.

"We will do what we can to prevent them (terrorist attacks) and be prepared to take the necessary steps, either before or after these are committed, in order to ensure that they don't happen again," Speakes added.

Speakes rejected suggestions that the United States is waging a war of nerves with Libya and attempting to prod Gadhafi into irrantional acts.

"Our goal is to prevent Gadhafi from doing things, not to provoke him into doing things," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, a senior administration official in California with the vacationing President Reagan contended "there is hard evidence that the Libyan government has been planning and seeking to execute terrorist acts ... since the U.S. bombing" of Libya on April 15.

The administration said the U.S. attack was partially in response to a terrorist bombing at a West Berlin discotheque that killed two American servicemen.

"We do have intelligence reports that Gadhafi has not been deterred in his efforts to commit terrorist activity," the official said. Even though the official would not cite specifics, he said, "It is clearly not disinformation. ... It's fact."

The official denied that the carrier Forrestal had canceled a port call at Haifa, Israel, and resumed patrols in the Mediterranean to bait the Libyans.

Asked why the administration had not struck against Gadhafi if, in fact, such evidence exists, the official said, "We will do it when we think it is appropriate."

But other officials at the White House and State Department, who also spoke only when granted anonymity, insisted there was no such compelling evidence.

"We don't have evidence, not of any recent attack directed at us that we can source with confidence to Libya," a State Department official said. "There is lots of information of targeting, but it's not unequivocal, which is the standard we have set for ourselves."

Similarly, a White House official said, "The honest answer is that we have bits and pieces, but that it's not strong enough yet to point to a specific activity. It's not that it is groundless, but it's not the sort of hard evidence that would be necessary to justify another strike."

Speakes sought to minimize published reports from Washington that there was dissension among high-level officials about the administration's assessment of the Libyan threat.

"We have most of the highest level of government present here in Californina, and not in Washington," Speakes said. "And those who may be speculating on an unnamed basis may not be in the know on the thinking of our leadership that is present here in California."

Libyan leader Col Moammar Gadhafi, center, attends ceremonies marking the opening of an American-designed factory at Brega, 160 miles from Benghazi. The factory, built by South Korean construction firm Dong-Ah, will make concrete and steel pipes for an underground water project.

Reagan's message unmistakable: Libya, Gadhafi being watched

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — The confusion over whether the Reagan administration has, or doesn't have, hard evidence on new terrorist plotting from Libya contains a message for Moammar Gadhafi: he is being watched and he had better not misstep.

According to one official, Gadhafi needs to be warned because it has become clear in the last few days that he has emerged with his authority intact in the aftermath of the U.S. bombing of Libya on April 15.

"I think Gadhafi is in charge," an informed State Department official said Wednesday. "I have not seen anything that would lead me to suspect he doesn't have a pretty firm hold on authority."

Administration officials, who thought for a time Gadhafi might be seriously wounded or on the verge of insanity after the April 15 bombing, had hoped the attack would cause Gadhafi's domestic opponents to overthrow him.

But whether serious opposition existed, or whether it was largely wishful thinking, Gadhafi has survived it, at least so far. Underscoring Gadhafi's control was the visit to Libya of Syrian President Hafez Assad on Tuesday and his expression of solidarity with the Libyan leader.

In a joint communique, the two leaders said "any aggression on Syria or Libya will be considered as an aggression on both."

It is improbable that Assad, a cautious and controversial leader in his own right, would have made such a gesture if he thought Gadhafi was on the way out.

Also supporting the view that Gadhafi has retained authority was his appearance at the opening of a pipeline factory near Benghazi on Tuesday. While he didn't speak, the 44-year-old leader looked fit as he presided at the ceremony attended by a crowd that included foreign press and businessmen. He showed no signs of stress.

In the sudden outpouring of confusing official pronouncements on Libyan terrorism, the same senior official who said one thing publicly, contradicted himself in private. Under ground rules for the press, the official could not be named.

But after 48 hours of contradictory interviews, public statements and background briefings, one conclusion that could be drawn is that officials wanted to present a confused picture to keep Gadhafi himself guessing about American intentions.

The Washingon Post, in Wednesday's editions, quoted unnamed officials as saying the administration was hoping to provoke Gadhafi into an irrational act that could undermine his authority at home. This was quickly denied.

But the major confusion focused on whether the administration had proof that Gadhafi was planning new terrorist attacks against American targets and was preparing to retaliate. An unnamed senior official was quoted in a Wall Street Journal article on Monday as saying there was such evidence.

And a senior official briefing reporters in Los Angeles, where President Reagan is vacationing, said Wednesday, "There is hard evidence that the Libyan government has been planning and seeking to execute terrorist acts .... since the U.S. bombing."

But officials at the White House and State Department, who also were speaking on background, insisted Wednesday there was no such hard evidence.

RAIN

"You bet we're going to fight it," Ms. Cortez said as her team prepared to bag a truck load of sand. She noted that rain had fallen so hard and fast that her 9,000 gallon swimming pool filled in 14 minutes.

She ended up winning the battle later in the day, but not before some water seeped into the master bedroom and part of the living room. Her garage flooded with about 5 inches before the water receded.

"If it starts raining any more, I'll be in bad trouble," she said.

The National Weather Service didn't have great news for her, however — the forecast today is for mostly cloudy skies with scattered showers and thunderstorms.

On Wednesday, water from 8 to 12 inches deep made some county and secondary farm roads impassable from south of Grape Creek to north of Water Valley.

Fast-flowing river water carried debris, including trees, fence posts and garbage, downstream toward O. C. Fisher Reservoir.

Water surrounded the home of Jane Wilson, a Water Valley school teacher who lives about five miles north of Carlsbad.

"I'll ruin a good pair of shoes trying to get to my house," Ms. Wilson told the San Angelo Standard-Times while waiting in her car parked on the road near her home. Three other homes next to hers were surrounded by water.

Ruby Schwartz, who lives about three miles east of Carlsbad, said her gauge had over 5 inches of rain in it.

"Water is just everywhere," she said.

Meanwhile in Abilene, up to 4½ inches of rain fell, prompting police to close several underpasses where stranded motorists' cars had stalled in deep water. Several minor accidents were reported.

BUDGET

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Prairie, and House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, would raise the state sales tax rate to 5 percent beginning October 1. A companion piece of legislation would put the increase to the voters in November as a constitutional amendment.

If voters approve, the new tax would become a permanent source of about $750 million a year in revenue for prison operation, freeing up about $500 million in other state funds now spent on prisons. If voters turn the plan down, the tax would expire Jan. 1, having raised about $170 million.

Hollowell said he offered the plan as "something we can use as a bridge between all of the various positions" on the budget. Senators reacted skeptically to the proposal but said they would "be interested in looking at any tax bill that comes out of the House."

The two chambers have agreed on a bill that would save about $70 million by eliminating a 3-percent state employee pay raise scheduled to take effect Sept. 1. The Senate passed the bill Wednesday morning and Lewis said, "We're trying to get it moved over (in the House) as quickly as we can."

WIDOWS

The third woman claiming to be Cooks' wife was living with him when he died, Spencer said. She could not be reached for comment.

Adding to the confusion, a fourth woman has contacted the funeral home, saying only that she was formerly married to Cooks.

"It's a mess," Spencer said.

The funeral director said he had strict instruction from the niece about the women claiming to be widows.

"If they want to ride in a limousine, they can pay for it," Spencer said.

OIL

When asked whether it might be higher than the world price, a department spokesman said, "No options have been ruled out." West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of American crude oil, now sells for about $15.50 a barrel.

The spokesman also indicated that additional solicitations might be made, perhaps for foreign crude. Today's move, he said, "doesn't mean we can't look around."

The current stockpile filling rate of 35,000 barrels a day is far under the peak of 300,000 or more when the reserve was being filled most rapidly — and at far higher prices — in the early 1980s.

McFadden sentenced to life in prison

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Stealing two cans of beer from a Tyler couple at gunpoint has netted a life sentence for Jerry "Animal" McFadden, who still awaits trial on a capital murder charge.

A state district court jury deliberated about three hours before returning the sentence Wednesday, and at least two jurors cried as the foreman read the verdict.

Dorothy McFadden, the defendant's mother, burst into tears when the sentence was announced, rushing from the courtroom with her arm around her son's 16-year-old daughter, Ronda McFadden.

Both had asked jurors for leniency during punishment testimony earlier in the week.

STATE

McFadden, 38, who calls himself "Animal," showed no emotion.

He is also accused of slaying an 18-year-old Hawkins woman, and made national headlines when he escaped from Upshur County Jail in July, taking a jailer hostage and leading more than 200 lawmen on an East Texas manhunt.

The hostage escaped unharmed, and McFadden was later arrested without incident.

McFadden had previously pleaded guilty to two rapes and one aggravated sexual assault, allowing him to be sentenced as a habitual criminal and upping the possible sentence to life in prison.

"From 1973 until the present day, the defendant has chosen a life of violent crime," Wood County District Attorney Marcus Taylor told the jurors.

State District Judge Richard Davis stacked the life sentence on top of the 10 years remaining on the sexual assault conviction. McFadden was paroled in July 1985 on that conviction.

The jury assessed the life sentence without knowing that McFadden faces a capital murder trial Oct.6 in the rape and strangulation of 18-year-old Suzanne Harrison.

She was attacked a day after the May 4 beer robbery at the same park. Her two companions were also slain.

Girl burned after she crawled into power box

GALVESTON (AP) — A 3-year-old Austin girl who was severely burned after crawling into a high-voltage power box was in very critical condition Wednesday night at the Shriner's Burn Institute, officials said.

Patricia Reyna suffered second- and third-degree burns over 55 percent of her body Tuesday, said Brackenridge Hospital spokeswoman Carolyn Hinckley-Boyle in Austin.

The child was undergoing surgery until late Wednesday at the institute, said administrator Dr. Nick Wilson.

"She's just been very badly burned, and it's a long process. She is in very critical condition and is likely to remain that way," Wilson said.

The child was burned Tuesday about 7 p.m. by power lines inside a switching cabinet on the grounds of the Coronado Apartments, where she lives, said Chester Falk of the Austin Electric Department.

Falk said the box holds a trunk line carrying 7,200 volts, and the line branches into smaller lines that carry power to the complex.

Medical board says it will increase its investigations of bad doctors

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Bad doctors often go unnoticed by the state Board of Medical Examiners, but its members told a Senate panel Wednesday they will step up their investigations.

However critics of the board said some appointees currently up for Senate confirmation have contributed to the board's inaction against bad doctors and do not deserve reappointment.

Gene Mitchell, director of Patients Against Injustice and Neglect, said, "I don't think the people of Texas would appreciate the Senate reappointing them to do the job they botched up."

The Senate Nominations Committee, however, already has recommended the Senate approve the five board members up for confirmation, with Chairman Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, casting the lone vote against recommending them.

After Wednesday's Senate Health and Human Services Committee meeting that looked into the medical board, Edwards acknowledged that the five appointees — with the possible execption of one — should glide through the Senate Thursday.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, has held up the confirmation of Board Chairman Dr. Carlos Godinez, one of Uribe's constituents. Uribe, however, said he probably will not block Godinez' reappointment.

Senators chided the board for its backlog of cases and lack of coordination, with Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Wort, saying, "It seems like the process just doesn't work."

Mitchell said board members target doctors who do not practice "mainstream medicine" but steer clear of those in more traditional practices. Board members denied discriminating against certain types of doctors.

G.V. Brindley, the board's executive director, and Dr. Robert Hillard, a board member, told senators they don't have the money or personnel to fully investigate and prosecute every case. They said more money could clear up the current backlog of about 500 cases.

The Health and Human Services Committee is working on legislation that would assure the board is notified of doctors accused of malpractice. The committee staff also is working on other reform legislation to give the board more power in prosecuting bad doctors.

State Bar of Texas President Bill Whitehurst told the committee that he knows of one doctor who lost a multi-million-dollar court judgment for malpractice several years ago, but the medical board has not heard his case yet.

Dr. Harold Wood of Kileen and Army doctors at Fort Hood lost a $6.7 million judgment when their patient, Shiela Wheat, died from complications after a hysterectomy. Ms. Wheat had cancer of the cervix and Wood should not have performed the hysterectomy, Whitehurst said.

Before the $6.7-million court case, Wood had settled with Ms. Wheat's family for $2 million, Whitehurst said, but the Board of Medical Examiners refused to suspend the doctor's license. Wood's case has been pending before the board for two years.

Wood was performing surgery Wednesday morning and did not return phone calls.

STATE IN BRIEF

Three people die, two hospitalized in shootings

COPPERAS COVE (AP) — Three people died and two were hospitalized with gunshot wounds after what authorities in this Central Texas town described as a murder-suicide.

Officers identified the dead as Rexene McGruder, 20, her father, Julius McGruder, 45, and Gary Haygood, 20.

The wounded were identified as Alfriede McGruder, 46, wife of Julius McGruder, and Antoinette McGruder, 16, a daughter of Julius McGruder. Another daughter, identified only as 11 years old, was at the home at the time of the shootings but was not wounded, officers said.

The elder McGruder and the daughter were pronounced dead at the scene and Haygood died early today, several hours after the shooting, at a U.S. Army Hospital at nearby Fort Hood.

Police said Julius McGruder shot his daughter and Haygood to death and wounded his wife and the other daughter late Wednesday and then took his own life.

Couple's bodies found

RALEIGH (AP) — A 68-year-old man and his wife were shot to death about a week before their bodies were discovered at their home Wednesday, authorities said.

Homer M. Howard's body was found in the pasture where he had been building a fence, and his 50-year-old wife Nancy was found in the kitchen, where she had been cooking, Navarro County Sheriff's Sgt. James Jones said.

"Apparently robbery was the motive behind the killings," Jones said, adding that a "considerable" amount of cash and jewelry were taken from the house west of Corsicana.

Howard's billfold was empty and left at the scene, Jones said. Mrs. Howard's 1979 white two-door Cadillac Coupe DeVille also was reported stolen.

Jones said the double-murder occurred at least a week ago during the daytime but the exact time could not be pinpointed.

Police officer charged

MARSHALL (AP) — A Greenwood police officer has been arrested here on a charge of indecency with a child.

Authorities said Roy Paige Morris, 35, of Greenwood, was named in a warrant charging him with indecency with a 7-year-old girl. The alleged incident occurred about two months ago, said District Attorney Bonnie Leggat.

Morris came to the Sheriff's Department in Marshall to discuss the charge and was jailed after being interviewed by investigators.

He was booked into the Harrison County Jail Wednesday evening.

Greenwood Police Chief Melvin Ogburn said that Morris is a sergeant who has served on the police force about seven years.

Ogburn said he was "kind of surprised" at hearing of Morris' arrest.

Smoke inhalation kills boy

BEAUMONT (AP) — A 3-year-old boy found dead underneath a bed after a blaze swept through his grandparents' home died of smoke inhalation, authorities say.

Sean Sawyer was pronounced dead at the north Beaumont residence about 4 p.m. Tuesday by Justice of the Peace Harold Engstrom. Investigators said the child may have been playing with matches.

The boy's grandfather, Gayle Sherwood, was outside the residence when firefighters arrived, fire department spokesman Tommy May said.

"The grandfather told us he saw the boy running toward a front bedroom," May said. "He told us the boy would hide under beds when he was scared. The home was totally involved and our people could not get inside to initiate a search for the child because of the flames and heat."

Vietnamese couple back with five children they hadn't seen since '78

AUSTIN (AP) — A Vietnamese couple who hadn't seen their five children in nearly eight years have been reunited with them.

Thua Thi Nguyen and her husband, Du Ngoc Tran, reminisced Tuesday with their son and four daughters about life in their native Vietnam and discusseed their plans for the future.

It was in 1978 when the parents last spoke with their children — daughters Tu Anh Tran, 23, Phuong Anh Tran, 25, Van Anh Tran, 26, Huyen Anh Tran, 22, and son Viet Anh Tran, 20.

The children fled Vietnam in a rickety boat and spent six months in a Southeast Asian refugee camp before coming to the United States. The children and parents will live in Austin.

"We are very pleased that our long separation has ended," said Tu Anh Tran, an engineer for an Austin electronics manufacturer. "We have enjoyed the freedoms and opportunities in the United States, and we want our parents to enjoy them also. America is our home."

The Tran children were all teen-agers when they left Vietnam on an odyssey they hoped eventually would lead to America. The decision to leave came suddenly, after the two oldest daughters were drafted into the army.

"We only had one day to prepare to leave," said Phuong Anh Tran. "We were told that if the authorities caught one of our sisters or our brother, we should keep going."

The children were crammed in a boat that left late one night from a Vietnamese harbor. A sister and brother who were thought to be too small to make the journey remained with the parents.

The boat could safely carry 100 passengers. It carried 350, the sisters said.

"The first night was horrible," said Tu Anh, who was valedictorian of her class at Lanier High School and an honors engineering graduate of the University of Texas. "The bottom of the boat was leaking. We could feel the water coming inside. We got seasick."

The boat made the journey to Malaysia in five days. The children spent six months in Malaysia, learning about American culture and how to speak English.

The family learned they were coming to the United States when their names were announced over the loudspeaker that served as the major means of communication in the refugee camp, Tu Anh said. That day, she said, she and her sisters and brother "went from hell to heaven."

The Tran children arrived in Austin, where a cousin lived, in 1979. Now, the three oldest children are UT graduates, the two younger children are enrolled at UT.

The children credit each other with helping overcome the difficulties of adjusting to life in an adopted country. They worked from the time they arrived in Austin so they could put themselves through school.

House OKs branch, interstate banking bills

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Wednesday formally approved bills authorizing interstate and branch banking in Texas and sent the package to the Senate.

"(The bills) should be on the governor's desk by the first of the week," said sponsor Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley.

Gibson said the differences between the House and Senate versions of the bills were "trivial" and said he expected no problems in settling those differences with the Senate.

Shortly after members voted to approve the banking package, Gibson headed across the Capitol rotunda to discuss the bills with Senate sponsor O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas.

The interstate banking bill would allow out-of-state bank holding companies to acquire Texas banks under certain conditions.

Supporters of interstate banking, which include the three main banking groups in the state, say the measure will bring much-needed capital to Texas banks suffering large losses on energy, agricultural and real estate loans.

But opponents, including rural legislators, say the banking measures will siphon capital from communities and make it hard for Texans to receive loans.

Branch banking would become law only if voters approve a constitutional amendment in the Nov. 4 general election. The House on Tuesday adopted the proposed constitutional amendment.

The bill would allow banks to operate up to three branches in the same city or county. A branch also could operate two drive-up facilities within 1,000 feet of the branch building.

Proponents say the branch banking bill became necessary after Attorney General Jim Mattox ruled in June that a 1985 change in the state's banking codes effectively allows branch banking and contradicts the constitutional prohibition.

Branch banking will make banks more competitive with savings and loans and more convenient for customers, Gibson said.

Seven-month-long search for remains of Challenger ends

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The largest search and recovery effort ever conducted — for the remains of Challenger and its crew — is ending today after seven months and the retrieval of 45 percent of the space shuttle.

The three ships still participating, down from a high of 31, will call it quits after they return to port tonight, seven months to the day after the Jan. 28 destruction of Challenger and deaths of its crew of seven, officials said.

"It was the biggest search and recovery effort ever in the world and had the most emotional impact on the people involved," said Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor, who directed the overall effort.

"This national tragedy caused the most challenging and emotional salvage effort in my career," said Navy Capt. Charles Bartholemew, who directed underwater salvage.

The project involved 6,000 people, 52 aircraft, 31 ships, a seven-person nuclear-powered submarine, two four-man submarines, five unmanned submersibles and 115 divers. It cost more than $100 million.

About 93,000 square miles of the Atlantic Ocean surface and 429 square miles of ocean bottom were scoured.

Ships made 3,367 sonar contacts, of which 3,197 were Challenger wreckage. Other soundings were made of debris from other failed rockets, eight boats, an airplane that crashed years ago, oil drums, rocks, fish and a kitchen sink.

O'Connor said 245,000 pounds of debris was recovered, representing 45 percent of the shuttle and its attached components. Forty-five percent of the orbiter, 90 percent of the crew cabin, 90 percent of a satellite rocket stage, 35 percent of the satellite, 50 percent of the fuel tank and 95 percent of a second satellite were retrieved.

The booster rocket joint that leaked hot gases and caused the tragedy was recovered, helping investigators pinpoint what went wrong.

The aircraft searched for floating debris in the nine days that followed the explosion that killed the crew of five men and two women.

U.S. now losing race into space, report claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prestigious scientific and engineering group said today that America will become and remain a second class power in space unless money spent for the civilian space program is doubled.

The report, by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, says money to replace the space shuttle Challenger should not come out of the NASA budget but instead should be a special appropriation "in the national emergency" category permitted by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

"The present course is a status-quo caretaker path with no potential growth," the AIAA said. It called for a three-fold increase in spending for space technology.

The report is the product of a two-day workshop held in July, before President Reagan announced a new space policy that calls for building a Challenger replacement and phasing out commercial payloads on the three-shuttle fleet that remains.

Reagan's plan is to ask for $272 million in the year beginning Oct. 1 to get a start on the new orbiter, but is vague on how to meet the $2.8 billion price tag needed to get the vehicle ready to fly in 1991. There is concern in the space community the money will come from NASA's budget to the detriment of science, exploration and developing new technologies.

AIAA is highly critical of the current policy-setting structure in the White House, the Senior Interagency Group-Space, which delayed for months its decision on how the country should proceed.

The White House plan is to encourage a private launch industry, using expendable rockets that mostly exist only on the drawing board, to carry commercial and foreign payloads into orbit.

"The current no-growth budget policy will ensure that the U.S. becomes and remains a second-class power in space," the AIAA report said. "The national perspective necessary for such decisions does not exist in the administration's present policy-setting structure...a dedicated body is needed to formulate national policy independently of parochial agency interests...it must have direct access to the president at a high level."

The AIAA supports a mixed fleet of shuttles and expendable launch vehicles — with the shuttle carrying cargoes that need human attention.

While the group encourages a private launch industry, "there should be no artificial incentives for commercial or foreign users to prefer the shuttle over ELVs (expendable launch vehicles) or vice versa."

The group deplores "the NASA bashing" the agency has undergone within government and in the news media and said loss of morale and confidence within the space agency are a natural result.

GAO study blasts Morton Thiokol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office, calling attention to "significant and potentially serious problems" at the company that makes the space shuttle boosters, is recommending that NASA find additional sources for the rockets.

The only supplier of the boosters, including the one that leaked hot gases and caused the space shuttle Challenger to explode, is Morton Thiokol Inc.

Investigators from the GAO, Congress' auditing arm, testified at a July 31 congressional hearing that Morton Thiokol skipped three of seven mandatory government safety inspections of O-ring seals in the faulty booster.

They said the missed inspections were among 2,075 possible quality control problems that a post-accident probe uncovered in the manufacture of the faulty booster.

"While we did not make an in-depth review of quality control and safety issues at Thiokol," a new GAO report says, "documents available to us indicate significant and potentially serious problems. Further, these documents indicate that neither the contractor nor the government was giving the problems the management attention they deserved."

The report recommended that after a new booster design is established, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration should give Congress a booster-buying plan that will include "alternatives for establishing and maintaining competition in future procurements."

The GAO told the House Committee on Government Operations the same thing in July.

NASA officials have said over the years they were considering a second source for the rockets, and administrator James C. Fletcher told the committee he would decide by December of this year whether an additional source was needed.

The GAO report also said NASA and the Air Force should determine how many government quality control inspectors are needed to ensure quality control in the rocket's manufacture.

Reagan: Worst mistake was basing Marines in one Beirut building

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, asked in an interview to reveal his worst management mistake, suggests it was an error in 1983 to put so many American servicemen in one building in Beirut, where they proved vulnerable to attack by a suicide bomber.

The explosion killed 241 U.S. servicemen and ultimately led to the withdrawal of all American forces from Lebanon.

Reagan at first said he could not think of a particular incident, but then raised the subject of the Marines in Lebanon. Reagan did not say he regarded it a mistake to send Americans to Beirut but suggested it was an error to have so many servicemen in the same building.

He made the comment in an interview with Fortune magazine, conducted Aug. 8 in the Oval Office.

A transcript of the interview, released Wednesday, showed this exchange:

Q. Mr. President, a hard question to ask. What is the worst managerial mistake you feel you've ever made? I know it will be comparatively small but...

A. Oh, golly, the worst managerial...

Q. Yes, if you had to do all over again in terms of managing, what...

A. Oh, I'm sure there are many things here and there — and you look and say if we'd done this, that — but I — I can't — I just can't bring one to mind here.

Q. OK.

A. Not that mistakes haven't been made or situations have changed and things turned out wrong. One glaring one would be the terrible tragedy of our Marines in Beirut.

Now, the decision was made and there was great agreement on it — and the decision was made that with all those factions and with their own militia and so forth, that what Lebanon needed was the ability for the new president after the assassination of his brother — the new president of Lebanon to be able to move out and reclaim for the official Lebanese military and all — these areas there being occupied by various factions with their own militia.

And that we would send in this force — and it was — as I say, our allies agreed with us. It was four countries together that sent in forces with the same idea — that we would send them to, kind of behind the lines, maintain order while the military and the government of Lebanon went forward to reclaim their country.

Now, the terrible part of the tragedy is it was succeeding and that's why the tragedy. They didn't turn on the Americans and the French and the others there suddenly because they just didn't want us there. It was the fact that they recognized that what we were seeking was going to be accomplished. And this is why they turned the — their goal was through terrorism and so forth to get us to withdraw. Well, finally, accommodating terrorism was the result of a decision that maybe because the commanding officers didn't feel that we were in a combat situation.

So the moving for personal comfort of all — as many of the men as they could into one building made possible that terrible tragedy.

In the interview, Reagan also was asked the best way to handle a crisis.

"Well, I think it's making the decision," he replied. "It's the uncertainty that I think leads to panic and upset."

Asked how he paces himself from day to day, Reagan replied, "Well, I have a little exercise routine up there (in the residence) that I do at the end of the day.

"I have a long history of athletic competition all the way through school. I have always been an evening showerer instead of a morning showerer. So I don't get up in the morning early and exercise.

"I go home from here and exercise, then take my shower. And contrary to what a lot of people hear about — or think must go on in the White House every day — why, a great many evenings, most of them as a matter of fact, you'll find Nancy and me then in pajamas and robe having dinner — and an early to bed."

Family-planning funds cut draws mixed reaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's decision to cut off funds for a United Nations family planning agency is drawing cheers from anti-abortion advocates and derision from proponents of limiting population growth.

A "repugnant step backward" was the reaction of Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., to reports that the Agency for International Development would withhold $25 million from the United Nations Fund for Population Activities.

But Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee, commended the action cutting off "U.S. taxpayer funds from a brutal compulsory abortion program operated by China..."

AID said Wednesday it will withhold its $25 million contribution because China's family planning program, designed to encourage each family to have only one child, is coercive and encourages abortions and involuntary sterilizations.

An AID official, speaking only on condition he remain anonymous, said the decision to withhold the money came after U.S. officials determined "there was coercion" in China's family planning program, even though Chinese officials deny that.

The AID action was welcomed by Rep. Christopher H. Smith, R-N.J., who has been among the chief congressional opponents of the family planning program in China — where efforts to cut population growth have become the center of debate over use of American money contributed through the United Nations.

Last October, AID Administrator Peter McPherson, responding to that criticism, announced the United Nations fund would be eligible for U.S. funds only under certain conditions, aimed at changes in the assistance the U.N. fund gives to China.

But other population experts were dismayed by Wednesday's action, pointing out that the U.N. agency also served people in hundreds of other countries.

The action is an "unmitigated disaster," said Sharon L. Camp of the private Population Crisis Committee.

"U.S. withdrawal from UNFPA-...says to the world that we are willing to dismantle our family planning programs abroad to keep happy a small, but noisy, anti-family planning constituency at home," she said in a statement.

Rep. Peter H. Kostmayer, D-Pa., contended that the action will result in more abortions around the world by denying family planning assistance to poor women in the more than 120 other nations served by U.N. programs.

"I think they're doing terrible damage," Kostmayer said.

And Moody termed the action "a tragic and shortsighted decision dictated by domestic American politics..."

"Bangladesh, Haiti and other similar countries will be the ones to suffer," added Moody, incoming chairman of the Congressional Coalition on Population and Development.

"The fundamentalist, anti-family planning fringe groups want to burn down the whole forest to get at one of the trees. This new policy decision is a repugnant step backward," Moody said in a statement.

Questions about U.S. funding for the agency were raised last fall following attacks on the family planning program in China.

Lawyer: Reagan's maid unaware ammunition purchases illegal

Castelo

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Nancy Reagan's personal maid, charged with conspiring to export munitions to Paraguay, was present on two trips to buy bullets but didn't know anything illegal was involved, her lawyer says.

A federal grand jury indicted Anita Sanabaria Castelo and three men Wednesday on charges they conspired to illegally export ammunition without a license from Richmond to Paraguay over a nine-month period.

Mrs. Castelo, 45, of Takoma Park, Md., was charged with conspiracy to export ammunition without a license and exporting ammunition without a license.

Also named in the seven-count indictment were Julio Cesar Baez Acosta and Hernan Perdomo Duarte, both of Paraguay, and Eugenio Silva, a Richmond automobile mechanic.

The indictment charges that Mrs. Castelo bought 10,000 rounds of ammunition at a discount department store in Richmond on May 10, and that she and Acosta bought another 10,000 rounds on Aug. 4.

Mrs. Castelo had "no suspicion and no knowledge that anything was afoul" during the two shopping trips, said her lawyer, Michael Morchower.

Few leads in items' disappearance from Marcos mansion

LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Authorities say they have few clues about the disappearance of most of the furnishings from a mansion believed to be owned by deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos.

Since March, the six-bedroom, Georgian-style mansion and its contents have been under a no-sale order by a judge who is trying to determine if Marcos used money stolen from his country to buy the 13½-acre estate, as the Philippine government claims.

Mercer County Sheriff Gilbert W. Lugossy said Wednesday he did not know if the home, reportedly occupied by Marcos' daughter, Imee, while she attended Princeton University, had been robbed or if Marcos' representatives had removed furniture, paintings and other items.

"There's no sign of a forced entry," Lawrence Township Police Capt. Nicholas Loveless said.

Paul Zarodnansky, the sheriff's officer who discovered a man and his family on the property Tuesday, with the house nearly empty and a door open, said, "I don't think it's a break-in. I think someone had keys. It looked like they knew what they were doing."

Zarodnansky said the man, Orlando C. Dulay of New York, was hauling bags of trash out of a garage. The officer said Dulay told him he was hired by Marcos' attorneys to clean the apartment above the garage, where a caretaker lived.

"I really don't know what happened," said Dulay, who was questioned by police and sheriff's officers Wednesday.

Dulay offered reporters the names and telephone numbers of two men he identified as Marcos' attorneys. There was no answer Wednesday at one of the numbers. A secretary at the other said the man in question was not a lawyer and had no connection to Marcos.

Lawrence Township Detective Jerry Gorski also said the two men were not attorneys and that authorities were investigating Dulay's background.

Dulay said he was wanted for escape in the Philippines. Authorities believe he was a high-ranking military officer wanted in the Philippines for escaping from detention, Loveless said.

According to news accounts in Manila, Dulay, a Marcos supporter, is a retired constabulary officer and governor of Quirino Province charged with trying to manipulate the last presidential election in the Philippines, said Capt. Carlos Agustin, defense attache at the Philippines Embassy in Washington.

"I do not have any information that this is the same man," he said.

U.S. authorities would have no power to arrest Dulay on the escape charge since the countries have no extradition agreement.

Soviet overtures

Maybe Mikhail Gorbachev isn't everything he obviously wants the world to believe, but one thing is clear: He's definitely in the battle for the hearts and minds of the American people.

His courtship continued the other day with announcement that the Soviet Union is continuing its year-long halt of underground nuclear testing until Jan. 1. The Russians began the halt in testing Aug. 6, 1985, and have extended it several times, urging the Americans to join in and make it permanent. But the Reagan administration hasn't been too receptive to Gorbachev's overtures for arms control agreements and Washington has declined on the grounds that the Soviet move was a public relations gesture, that a ban cannot be verified adequately and that testing was needed for weapon development.

Americans shouldn't fall too quickly for the Soviet leader's sleight-of-hand. Gorbachev realizes that the House of Representatives recently voted, 234 to 155, to impose a year-long halt on all but the smallest American nuclear tests, provided that the Soviet Union joined in and agreed to on-site monitoring. The Republican-controlled Senate has not voted for a similar measure, and it's doubtful that the test suspension ultimately will become part of legislation in face of administration opposition.

In another move on behalf of a test halt, leaders of Mexico, India, Greece, Tanzania, Sweden and Argentina, at a meeting in Mexico, called on Moscow and Washington to halt testing under a verification plan the six countries would administer.

These peripheral efforts on behalf of arms control would seem to indicate that the world hungers for arms-control progress. Administration spokesmen, meanwhile, insist that the president himself is determined to reach a substantial arms-control agreement. "There is a sense of legacy about Reagan," a White House official told The Washington Post recently. "He sees this as the opportunity of a generation."

While we believe that Reagan truly does seek peace with the Soviets, we also see the need to move slowly at this time. Granted, there is every reason to be moving in good faith toward meaningful nuclear arms reductions. But if Gorbachev and the rest of the Kremlin leaders truly seek peace, they'll continue to seek it.

Better not to rush in quickly. A real change of philosophy extends further than superficial agreements. It must be, literally, soul-deep.

Lipstick challenge

Can carcinogens be safely added to foods and drugs? Until lately, the law's answer has been clear: Under the 1958 Delaney amendments to the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, the Food and Drug Administration was not permitted to certify as safe for use any food or cosmetic additive that had been shown to cause cancer in animals or humans.

But a few days ago, the FDA gave the law a new twist: When the risk of a carcinogenic additive is so low as to be negligible, it may be certified as safe. Thus, it approved for use in cosmetics two dyes, Red Dye No. 19 and Orange Dye No. 17, even though they have been shown to be animal carcinogens. Citing studies that show the cancer risk of the dyes to be very low — at most, one in 9 million — FDA invoked the legal concept of de minimis: The law does not concern itself with trifles.

At the level of policy, the FDA's decision points in a sane direction. For years, it has been widely recognized that the Delaney rule's flat ban on potentially carcinogenic additives is overly restrictive. The rule allows regulators to ask only, "Is it carcinogenic?" when the relevant questions are, "Does it pose a health risk?" and "Do its risks outweigh the potential benefits?" Congress itself was forced to confront those more complex issues a decade ago, when it reversed the FDA's ban on saccharin, which has been shown to be a weak animal carcinogen. Its decision — that saccharin's value to diabetics and others as a nonsugar sweetener outweighed its cancer risk — exposed the Delaney rule's lack of flexibility as a regulatory tool.

At the level of law, however, the FDA's approval of the two dyes is suspect. Many legal experts question whether the FDA has the authority under the Delaney clause to say that a carcinogenic additive may be safely used, even where the potential harm is negligible. And even if there is wide agreement that the Delaney clause draws the line between safety and risk in the wrong place, there is no consensus on what risks are minimal, and therefore, acceptable. Is having the right shade of red lipstick worth even one case of cancer? Setting those standards is a political choice, to be made by Congress, not regulators. The FDA's decision to embark on its own invites challenge in the courts and risks the ire of Congress.

Still, the FDA's adventurism will have served one purpose if it provokes Congress, at last, to reconsider how to regulate the safety of food and drug additives. With the Delaney clause under attack, it's time for lawmakers to replace it with a more flexible framework, one that explicitly permits the FDA to assess the degree of risk of additives and weigh them against benefits they provide. Common sense dictates that regulators be able to differentiate between, say, sodium nitrite, which protects the public against botulism in processed meats, and Red Dye No. 19, which makes fingernails crimson. The law should, too.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 28, 1963, about 200,000 people joined in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington, D.C., where they heard Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. deliver his famous "I have a dream" speech in front of the Lincoln Memorial.

On this date:

In 1609, Henry Hudson discovered Delaware Bay.

In 1749, German author Johann Wolfgang von Goethe was born in Frankfurt.

In 1828, Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy was born near Tula.

In 1916, Italy's declaration of war against Germany took effect during World War I.

In 1917, 10 suffragists were arrested as they picketed the White House.

In 1922, radio station WEAF in New York City aired the first radio commercial. The Queensboro Realty Co. of Jackson Heights paid $100 for 10 minutes of air time.

In 1968, police and anti-war demonstrators clashed in the streets of Chicago as the Democratic National Convention nominated Hubert H. Humphrey for president.

In 1983, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin announced he would resign, citing personal reasons.

Ten years ago: Three American civilians working in Iran were killed by Iranian guerrilla fighters.

Five years ago: John W. Hinckley Jr. pleaded innocent in a Washington, D.C., court to charges of attempting to kill President Reagan.

One year ago: Actress Ruth Gordon died at her home in Edgartown, Mass., at age 88.

Island leaders promise to bring peace

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Peace has been promised along the Western Hemisphere's most turbulent border. This is the boundary that separates Haiti and the Dominican Republic — a dividing line that has spawned invasions, incursions and massacres, a violent frontier that introduced the word "genocide" into the language.

Jack Anderson

Both countries have just installed new heads of state — Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy in Haiti and President Joaquin Balaguer in the Dominican Republic. They could go down in history and set an example to the world, I suggested, if they would bury the past and bring peace to their border. Both leaders agreed to cooperate with each other.

It will take some tall statesmanship to stop the bloodshed that has soaked this boundary for centuries. For it divides two disparate nations that occupy the same piece of geography — the doorstep to America that Columbus discovered in 1492.

Not long after Columbus planted the Spanish flag and named the island Hispaniola, the violence began. First the Spanish and Indians clashed, then the Spanish and French, then black slaves and their French masters. Freebooting pirates contributed to the bloodshed.

A revolt of the slaves established the world's first black republic in 1804. Adopting the language of the French who enslaved them, the blacks settled Haiti. Forty years later, the descendants of the Spanish conquistadors, their bloodlines thick with Indian and black mixtures, formed the Dominican Republic.

Catastrophe and war and death continued to haunt the border. The worst recorded event occurred in 1937-38. Dominican Republic dictator Rafael Trujillo ordered the killing of all Haitians who had crossed into his country to work.

To separate Haitian from Dominican blacks, they were asked to pronounce the Spanish word "perejil" (parsley). If they pronounced it with an accent, they were assumed to be Haitians and were shot on the spot. No count was kept of the number who were slaughtered, but the estimates ran as high as 30,000. From this horror came the word "genocide."

There have been at least 20 skirmishes between Haiti and the Dominican Republic. No other border has been watched more intently by the Organization of American States, which has intervened repeatedly to stop the fighting. Yet shootings still occur.

Namphy, the Haitian strongman, said he would do his best to reduce tensions between Haiti and its neighbor. The people who live along the border, he said, have already learned to get along. They crisscross the border freely, and on both sides, Dominican and Haitian children often sit together in the same schoolrooms, he said. The governments, he suggested, should learn from the children.

When I asked Namphy whether he would work for better relations with the Dominican Republic, he caught his breath. But he hesitated no more than a second, then he smiled. "We are neighbors," he said. "We want to be at peace with our neighbor."

On the Dominican side, Balaguer was even more responsive. "I would be willing to enter into an agreement for mutual cooperation," he said. "The two countries should work jointly to normalize the border. This must be done for the sake of peace and harmony."

Specifically, Balaguer offered to begin by lowering trade barriers. Goods are already smuggled back and forth across the border. So why not legalize it, he asked. "Only the smugglers now profit," he said.

Balaguer is also willing to share water with Haiti, to oppose any exploitation of Haitian labor and to stop discrimination against Haitians in his country.

I hope these two rulers, both of them honorable men, will display the imagination and boldness, the surging hope born of idealism, the toughness and courage to act on their better impulses.

PRESIDENTIAL GARAGE: I visited with President Joaquin Balaguer in his home, which turned out to be a remodeled garage. He gave up the house to his elderly sisters and moved into more modest quarters in the garage. His living space is cozy but small. For he has converted half the garage into a library — probably one of the finest private libraries in the Caribbean.

• • •

DRUG STORY: Haiti's Henri Namphy and the Dominican Republic's Joaquin Balaguer, in response to my questions, said they were cracking down on smugglers who are trying to sneak drugs into the United States. "Every time a new drug smuggling method is identified," Namphy said, "we crack down. But the smugglers always find a new method." The only way to stop the drug traffic, he suggested, is to persuade the people to stop using drugs. Meanwhile, drug usage supports organized crime, whose leaders pay off government officials out of the illicit profits, thus undermining the democratic system.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Officials in the spacious Western states have been pressing for a repeal of the 55 mph national speed limit and reportedly have even enlisted President Reagan in their cause. Personally, we kind of like it the way it is. Life seems sweeter when it is lived slower. You can't smell the roses at 55 mph, but at least you can see them.

EVANS & NOVAK

Evangelical Christians giving GOP new look

DETROIT — The Michigan Republican Party's attempt to make history at last weekend's state convention consisted not only of rapturous acclaim for their black nominee for governor but a majority on the floor who were evangelical Christians new to politics.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

William Lucas, an ex-New York City policeman and a Catholic, worked closely with delegates recruited and elected by the Rev. Pat Robertson's Freedom Council. After supporting Lucas in the hard-fought Aug. 5 primary for governor, they followed his leadership here in dumping a controversial fundamentalist from the state ticket and forbidding a vote on sex education.

Those are signs that Michigan Republicans might accept Freedom Council newcomers more smoothly than seemed possible after anti-evangelical voting in the primary. But the real significance is a possible new GOP coalition including the Christian right and a substantial influx of blacks.

"Together We Will Make History," read the banner at Cobo Hall, where blacks sprouted on the convention rostrum. "Some will say that I cannot be elected governor — that the barriers of ignorance and bigotry are still strong," Lucas declared. When delegates shouted "No!," he said: "I agree. Because they don't know the people of Michigan. I believe and I shall always believe that I shall be judged on the strength of my character and not on the color of my skin."

Welding blacks and evangelicals is the core of both Lucas's long-shot bid against popular, politically-astute Democratic Gov. James Blanchard and building a new Republican Party. Lucas, elected sheriff and county executive as a law-and-order, fiscally conservative Democrat in Wayne County (Detroit), surely will get a substantial black vote.

However, Detroit Mayor Coleman Young's prediction that Republicans never would nominate a black for governor probably would have proved true had it not been for personal revelations about millionaire Richard Chrysler, runnerup in the primary. We found some conservative delegates still fretting about Lucas's Democratic background.

But not Freedom Council delegates. Like Lucas, they have encountered resistance from a culturally-homogenous GOP. Hostility to religious intruders was clear in primary voting.

Nevertheless, Freedom Council organization in county caucuses elected 750 delegates — 42 percent — to the state convention. Better attendance probably gave them more than half the delegates actually present on the floor.

In defiance of State Republican Chairman Spencer Abraham's plea for presidential candidates to steer clear of Michigan until after the election for governor, "Draft Pat" activists from the Roy Rogers group in California appeared here pressing for a convention test vote on Robertson.

Freedom Council delegates also were anxious to vote against dispensing birth control advice and equipment in schools — confronting Planned Parenthood Republicans who back Vice President George Bush. A final combustible element was introduced when Lucas reneged on his selection of State Sen. Alan Cropsey, a militant conservative and fundamentalist Christian, to run for attorney general.

Lucas was talked out of Cropsey by a phone call from liberal former governor William Milliken. He warned that Lucas would spend each day explaining not his own but Cropsey's positions. That enraged veteran conservative delegates who saw Milliken's hand rising from the political grave. They also grumbled about limiting issues to be considered by the convention to four propositions looking like relics of the 1950s and not even mentioning abortion.

But no complaint came from Freedom Council delegates. Lucas had asked their leaders to oppose opening the convention to an issues debate, and they delivered for him on the floor. With Robertson forces given two State Board of Education nominees and a say on a Supreme Court seat, no protest was made about dumping Cropsey from a hopeless race against an entrenched Democrat. As for test voting on Robertson, his Michigan forces said no.

That resembles something Democrats historically have been able to handle better than Republicans. At Cobo Hall, old-line conservatives welcomed Bill Lucas, the establishment accepted the Freedom Council and evangelical newcomers did not flex their new political muscle. That may not beat Blanchard for governor, but it gives the Republican Party here a very different look.

Oil, real estate another rags to riches tale!

A report of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress indicates that the concentration of wealth in this country is falling into the hands of fewer and fewer people. The conclusion is that the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer.

Art Buchwald

I don't know why this should come as such a big surprise to anybody. A recent survey I took shows most of the wealth in the U.S.A. is now in the hands of real estate tycoons, and for the last few years, poverty has spread to Texas and Oklahoma oil men. It is this disparity in earnings between real estate and oil that is leading to class warfare in the country.

A crude-oil wildcatter, who was living in the Dallas Greyhound Bus Terminal, told me, "It's not right that the real estate people should have it all, and the rest of us be on our keesters. If you don't spread the wealth around, the oil people at the bottom of the pile are going to rise up and take their share by force."

"But didn't you oil fellows have all the money a short time ago?"

"We had some, but that was only because oil was selling for $32 a barrel. At those prices we could afford to buy whatever was for sale. But when the oil plunged to $11 a barrel they took away our Mastercards."

"So from being rich you became poor overnight."

"What else? Don't let anyone tell you the rich always get richer. In the oil business the rich get poorer. There's nothing as sad in this world as yesterday's millionaire."

"And to think that at one time you had it all."

"I don't know if I had it all, but I had whatever was out there. We were such good customers at Neiman Marcus that when my wife told them she couldn't afford to shop there any more, they retired her Adolfo jersey so that no one could ever wear it again."

I said, "But one thing nice about being a poor oil man is that overnight you could become rich again."

"Not with those OPEC bums glutting the market. Every time one of them lowers the price, another American oil producer goes on food stamps."

I decided to seek out a real estate mogul who is getting richer. I found him looking out of his new tower office building which took up 20 acres of Central Park (he had gotten a variance from the zoning board).

"Is it true that people of your ilk are up to your eyeballs in hard cash?"

"We make a living."

"The oil people say you're filthy rich."

"What would you expect them to say? They're all poor."

"They were once rich. They say it's an outrage that people like you are gobbling up the wealth in the country."

"They should have gone into a business with some decent tax breaks."

"Do you believe it's good for society that millionaires like yourself have three houses, a yacht and an airplane, while Texas oil men are capping their wells?"

"I don't know why real estate people should have to do without the necessities just because oil men don't know how the system works. Maybe we're rich, but did anyone ever ask how we got that way?"

"How did you get that way?"

"We did it the old-fashioned way — by using other people's money."

Hydrogen bomb accidentally dropped in 1957, paper says

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A 42,000-pound hydrogen bomb accidentally fell from an Air Force plane 29 years ago, it was disclosed Wednesday, but officials said there never was any chance of a nuclear explosion.

No one was injured when the bomb hit an uninhabited area 4½ miles south of Kirtland Air Force Base's control tower on May 22, 1957, the Albuquerque Journal reported in a copyright story.

The bomb created a crater about 12 feet deep and 25 feet in diameter, and minor radioactive contamination was detected there, government documents obtained by the Journal said.

Non-nuclear explosives in the Mark 17 bomb detonated when it hit the ground, the documents said. But non-nuclear explosives must be triggered in a precise manner to cause a nuclear explosion, said Rich Garcia, spokesman for the Air Force Weapons Laboratory in Albuquerque.

"When a bomb accidentally falls, the impact of the fall triggers some (non-nuclear) explosives to go off, but not in the correct fashion," he said Wednesday.

Dave Jackson, spokesman for the U.S. Department of Energy in Albuquerque, said there was another reason that it was physically impossible for the Mark 17 to produce a nuclear explosion in an accidental fall.

The bomb "had a portion of the actual weapon removed and put in a different location," he said. "It was routine procedure at the time."

The Mark 17 fell 1,700 feet from an Air Force B-36 bomber as it was flying to Kirtland Air Force Base from Biggs Army Air Field in Texas, the documents said. Kirtland is located just south of Albuquerque.

The government first reported the accident in 1981 in a brief release saying only that a nuclear weapon of some kind had been dropped. The documents obtained by the Journal through the Freedom of Information Act contain the first public description of the type of weapon involved and other details of the accident.

An exact reason why the bomb fell from the airplane, taking the bomb bay doors with it, was not given. But the government documents indicate a safety release mechanism apparently had been moved to the wrong position.

The government documents did not show the exact explosive yield of the bomb. But Stan Norris, a research associate with the Natural Resources Defense Council and a specialist on nuclear weapons, said most researchers believe it was more than 10 megatons.

"It is possibly the most powerful bomb we ever made," Norris told the Journal.

Norris said the largest nuclear weapon in the U.S. arsenal today has a yield of about 9 megatons. A megaton measures the explosive yield of a nuclear weapon. It is the equivalent of 1 million tons, or 1,000 kilotons, of TNT.

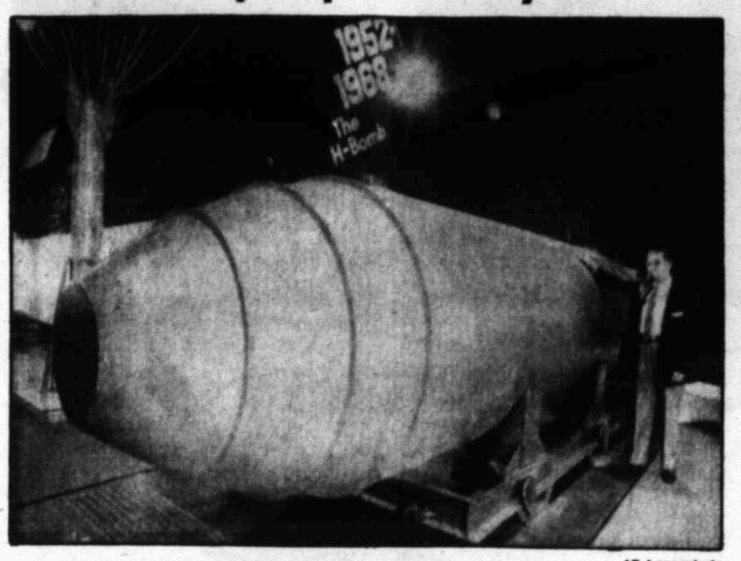
The Mark 17 "was very primitive by today's standards, in terms of safety devices," Norris said. "But it didn't go off and we don't know how serious the accident was."

Capt. Jim Berg, Air Force public affairs officer in Washington, D.C., said nuclear weapons are no longer carried by planes on airborne alert.

"It used to be in the old days that B-52s or, in this case a B-36, would be loaded and would fly around waiting for their need," he said. "That was discontinued."

In addition, he said in a telephone interview, modern mechanisms to attach weapons to planes are "a lot more sophisticated than they were, and the weapons are a lot more sophisticated."

The atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima in World War II had a yield of about 16 kilotons. A 10-megaton hydrogen bomb would have an explosive force about 625 times that of the Hiroshima bomb.



AP Laserphoto

Woody Underwood, a worker at the National Atomic Museum at Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, N.M., lends perspective to the size of a replica of the Mark 17 hydrogen bomb. One of the 42,000-pound bombs fell from an Air Force bomber near Albuquerque 29 years ago.

Board to review writings of Georgia Baptist editor

ATLANTA (AP) — The directors of The Christian Index, the official paper of the Southern Baptists in Georgia, agreed to keep Jack Harwell as editor but set up a separate board to review his writings to make sure they conform to Baptist guidelines.

Harwell, who has been editor of the paper for 20 years, had come under criticism from some of the fundamentalists within the denomination, who charged he was biased in favor of more moderate church members.

The Southern Baptist Convention has been in political turmoil for several years as fundamentalists and moderates battled for control.

The paper's directors met behind closed doors for 4½ hours Tuesday to debate Harwell's work.

"This is a true review board, this is not a censor board," said the Rev. George Barnett, chairman of the Index's directors, of the newly established board.

Barnett said Harwell will have "total editorial freedom."

The decision was "a sensible and workable and realistic solution to a very difficult problem," said Harwell.

He said he will not change his editorial opinions, because he said the directors had not asked him to do so. He said he would be "as sensitive as I can" to the feelings of all Georgia Baptists.

Counties forecast

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Glasscock and Reagan counties: Tonight mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a few thunderstorms. Locally heavy rainfall possible. Low in the middle 60s. East wind 10 to 15 mph. Friday mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms. Heavy rainfall possible. High near 80. East wind 10 to 20 mph.

WEATHER

The closing of highways will depend on how much it rains throughout today, she said.

The Department of Public Safety had no reported accidents due to flooding this morning, a department spokesman said.

The chance of rain will increase from 30 percent today to 40 percent on Friday, the weather spokesman said.

Scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms are expected to continue through the weekend until Monday, the spokesman said.

STATE

A flash flood watch was issued for a vast area of Texas today by the National Weather Service as heavy rain continued to drench much of Texas.

The heavy rainfall triggered flash flooding in West Texas Wednesday.

The flash flood watches in effect through tonight covered Southwest Texas, the Hill Country and the area of South Central Texas around the Hill Country.

Showers and thunderstorms, some producing heavy rainfall, continued today across a vast area of the state. The showers and thunderstorms were developing early today and spreading across Southwest Texas and the Hill Country, forecasters said.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported today along a cold front that extended from Northeast Texas across the central Brazos Valley into the Edwards Plateau area near Del Rio.

Other showers and thunderstorms were reported over Southeast Texas and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico off the upper Texas coast.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thunderstorms over most of the state through tonight with heavy rain possible from the Trans-Pecos across the Permian Basin and the Edwards Plateau into the Hill Country and South Central Texas. Skies were to be partly cloudy to mostly cloudy statewide through Friday.

NATION

A high pressure system over northwest Iowa cleared skies and pushed Midwestern temperatures to record lows today.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the middle and southern Atlantic Coast across the Tennessee and lower Mississippi valleys into Texas as well as across the Pacific Northwest.

Temperatures dropped into the 30s early today in northeastern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota and into the 40s to low 50s from the northern Plains across the upper Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes.

Kansas City, Mo., was 53 degrees early today, breaking a 1974 record of 57.

Houston's Ryan notches win 250

Associated Press

Nolan Ryan, who became the 36th pitcher ever to post 250 career victories when he led the Houston Astros to a 7-1 victory Wednesday night over the Chicago Cubs, figures his strong right arm will hold up down the stretch.

"They keep me at about 100 pitches a game," said the 39-year-old Ryan, who limited the Cubs to one hit in six inning. "Tonight I think it was about 95, and if they keep using me this way, I'm optimistic that the arm will hold up through the rest of the season."

Ryan, 9-8, struggled with his control early, yielding one hit and two walks in the first three innings and staying behind the batters. He had the pitches that counted though, striking out four in those three innings and five for the game. Charlie Kerfield got his sixth save with five strikeouts in three innings.

Garner drove in runs with singles in the third and fourth.

Loser Jamie Moyer, 5-4, entered the game with a scoreless string of 14⅔ innings. It reached 16⅔, ending in the third. He left in the fourth.

Walks to Billy Hatcher and Jim Pankovits, a single by Garner, a sacrifice by Glenn Davis and a single by Kevin Bass brought in three runs in the third inning.

In the fourth, singles by Alan Ashby and Dickie Thon led to run-scoring singles by Pankovits and Garner.

The Astros continue to lead both the San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds by seven games in the National League West.

"No doubt we watched the scoreboard," said Pankovits, "But we have our destiny in our hands. The other teams still have to catch us."

"Sometime after the All Star game, this team really got the feeling we could win," said Garner.

Giants 3, Expos 2

Robby Thompson raced home with the winning run on Andy McGaffigan's second wild pitch in the eighth inning.

Pinch-hitter Dan Gladden opened the eighth with a walk and one-out later scored on Thompson's single to tie the score 2-2. Thompson, who reached second on Will Clark's ground out, went to third on the first wild pitch by McGaffigan, 8-5, and scored on the second wild pitch as Candy Maldonado walked.

Kelly Downs, 1-4, pitched a five-hitter over eight innings for his first major-league victory. Scott Garrelts pitched the final inning for his sixth save.

Phillies 2, Dodgers 1

Von Hayes' two-out single in the ninth inning was the game winner for the Philadelphia.

Rookie left-hander Bruce Ruffin, 7-3, pitched five-hit ball over eight innings for his fourth consecutive victory. Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth to earn his 19th save.

Jeff Stone reached first in the ninth on a one-out fielding error by Dodger shortstop Dave Anderson. Stone stole second and, one out later, Hayes lined a single to left field. Stone scored when he knocked the throw from outfielder Bill Russell out of catcher Alex Trevino's glove.

Los Angeles starter Bob Welch, 6-10, allowed nine hits while walking three and striking out 10.

NL Roundup

Reds 9, Pirates 5

Eric Davis hit the first grand slam of his major league career with two outs in the ninth inning to break a 5-5 tie and give Cincinnati its fifth straight win and ninth in 10 games.

Don Robinson, 2-3, opened the ninth by allowing a single to Ron Oester and walking pinch hitter Max Venable. After Cal Daniels sacrificed, Buddy Bell walked to load the bases. Dave Parker struck out and Davis followed by hitting Robinson's first pitch deep into left-field seats for his 22nd home run.

Rob Murphy, 2-0, pitched three shutout innings of two-hit relief. Parker had a three-run homer, his 26th, and a run-scoring double for Cincinnati, giving him eight RBI in the last two games.

Cardinals 2, Braves 1

Rick Mahler walked Terry Pendleton with the bases loaded in the eighth inning to force in the run that gave the St. Louis Cardinals victory.

Vince Coleman singled with one out took second on a wild pitch. Mahler, 11-14, who has lost nine of 10 decisions since June 30, intentionally walked Willie McGee, Tom Herr grounded out and Andy Van Slyke was intentionally walked to load the bases. Mahler walked Pendleton on a 3-2 pitch.

Todd Worrell, 8-9, got the final seven outs in relief of John Tudor, who left with a stiff left shoulder. Tudor allowed eight hits, walked four and struck out four.

Mets 6, Padres 5

Keith Hernandez hit a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning after the Mets had wasted a 5-1 eighth-inning lead, and New York completed a three-game sweep.

With one out in the 11th, Len Dykstra, breaking out of a 3-for-44 slump, singled off Rich Gossage, 5-7, and went to third on Wally Backman's single. Hernandez followed with a deep fly to center and Dykstra scored without a throw home.

Doug Sisk, 3-2, the fourth Mets pitcher, worked two innings for the victory, escaping a jam in the last of the 11th when Tim Flannery singled into a game-ending double play.

Garry Templeton started the 11th with a double. One out later, Flannery singled through the middle, but Dykstra's throw home nipped Templeton, who bowled over catcher John Gibbons. Flannery, who went to second on the throw, attempted to take third when Gibbons was prone. But the New York catcher got up and threw to third baseman Howard Johnson, who tagged out Flannery.

Ohio State's Jamie Holland is pulled down by Alabama's Chester Braggs on this kickoff play that opened the 1986 college football season Wednesday in the Kickoff Classic. Alabama won the game, 16-10.

College football season underway

No. 5 Alabama survives scare from Ohio State

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The collegiate football season is only one game old, but a familiar name has already stamped itself as a team to reckon with for national honors.

Fifth-ranked Alabama overcame an emotionally draining week and several potentially costly blunders Wednesday night to take a 16-10 victory over Ohio State in the Chase Kickoff Classic.

"I'm just happy to be alive after that," Coach Ray Perkins said with a laugh after his Crimson Tide ducked a number of Ohio State knockout punches.

OHIO STATE marched into Alabama territory on seven occasions in the game but came away empty handed on five of them. Included in the list of misfires was a last-second pass into the end zone from quarterback Jim Karsatos to Cris Carter that was broken up by Chris Goode and Britton Cooper.

The victory was an emotional one for an Alabama football team that lost one of its starters just four days ago. Defensive tackle Willie Ryles died Saturday after collapsing on the practice field Aug. 18 with a blood clot on the brain. The Alabama team was flying back to attend Ryles' funeral this afternoon.

"Everybody was close to Willie Ryles," said Alabama center Wes Neighbors. "You look at a guy working to win a job on the football team everyday and he's just getting better and better and then something like that happens. It was tough for this team to hold our emotions inside."

The Crimson Tide took a 6-0 lead on a pair of Van Tiffin field goals in the first half, but Ohio State came back to take a 7-6 lead at the half on flanker Jamie Holland's 26-yard run and freshman Pat O'Morrow's extra-point kick.

Although O'Morrow did convert a 37-yard field goal early in the third quarter for a 10-6 Ohio State lead, the Buckeyes wasted several prime scoring opportunities in the first three quarters.

Ohio State had drives that stretched to the Alabama 27, 24, 9, 38 and 27 — and didn't score a point on any of them.

IT WAS fullback George Cooper's fumble on first and goal at the Alabama 9 in the third quarter that left Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce distraught.

"That fumble going in, that's a disaster," said Bruce. "... After that, we just couldn't get going. When we had our opportunities, we piddled them away and you can't do that."

After O'Morrow missed his second field goal attempt of the game, a 44-yarder on the second play of the final period, the Crimson Tide summoned up some more emotion.

Quarterback Mike Shula, who completed 11 of 19 passes for 83 yards with two interceptions, completed two passes for 19 yards and scrambled for 14 more on a 12-play, 73-yard drive that concluded with Shula's 3-yard scoring pass to Albert Bell at the 9:33 mark of the fourth quarter. Tiffin added the extra-point and, later, a 28-yard field goal, for a 16-10 Alabama lead.

"The momentum changed in the fourth quarter; that was good for them and bad for us," Bruce said.

Halfback Gene Jelks, who led all rushers with 68 yards, said, "A key factor was, we wore them down in the fourth quarter. We got our adrenalin going."

ALABAMA COACH Ray Perkins said, "I knew the third quarter was big. I knew it would be big if we came out of the third quarter close to them. In the fourth quarter, we got momentum."

Ohio State linebacker Chris Spielman was named the game's most valuable player off a 16-tackle game that also included an interception.

"What are you going to do? I thought we played good defense. Unfortunately, if you're a great defensive team, you don't give up that one drive," Spielman said.

Connors wants net title at 34

U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — He hasn't won a tournament in almost two years and at the age of 34, speculation about his being over the hill increases with every loss.

"It bothers the hell out of me," says Jimmy Connors.

Connors, the sixth seed in the U.S. Open, beat Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 Wednesday. Connors looked sharp and is hopeful that he is peaking for another assault at the national title he has won five times.

"I've had a lot of matches the last four weeks," Connors, who was suspended for 10 weeks earlier this year after quitting in a match against Ivan Lendl, said. "I played in the mountains in Colorado, in Stratton Mountain and Stowe (Vt.) and in Cincinnati. What I was lacking was match competition.

"The forced layoff did not hurt as much as the next seven weeks. I came back at Queen's (where he pulled a groin muscle and retired from the final), then lost at Wimbledon (first round to Robert Seguso). I had something like one event in 17 or 18 weeks. But it was my fault for not playing better at Wimbledon."

Does he still have the tools to avoid a Wimbledon showing here?

"My game is coming around," he said. "I hope it comes around in time, like now, right now."

As opposed to opening day, when five seeds including John McEnroe were beaten, Wednesday was a good day for the ranked players, all of whom won. In men's play, No. 2 Mats Wilander, No. 3 Boris Becker, fourth-rated Stefan Edberg, No. 7 Joakim Nystrom, Andres Gomez, who is seeded 10th, 11th-seed Mikael Pernfors, No. 13 Anders Jarryd and No. 16 Milosiav Mecir were winners.

Among the women, second-ranked Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 3 Steffi Graf, fifth-seeded Pam Shriver, No. 6 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, No. 7 Helena Sukova, Bonnie Gadusek, the eighth seed, No. 9 Manuela Maleeva, 11th-rated Gabriela Sabatini, No. 12 Zina Garrison, No. 13 Stephanie Rehe, 14th-seed Catarina Lindqvist and No. 15 Kathy Jordan advanced.

Today's matches included Graf against Andrea Temesvari of Hungary; Martina Navratilova, the women's top seed, against Betsy Nagelsen; Edberg against Kevin Curren; men's No. 1 seed Ivan Lendl vs. Seguso; Shriver against Csilla Bartos-Cserepy of Hungary; and No. 5 Yannick Noah playing Marcelo Ingaramo of Argentina.

Connors' last tournament title came at the Seiko Super Tennis in Tokyo. He made the semifinals of the French, Wimbledon and here last year, but lost each time.

"I'm not going to worry about the past," he said. "I have to go out and play the type of tennis I am capable of.

"A Grand Slam is better for me because I get a day off in between to recuperate. Everything takes a little extra and it takes a little longer to recuperate after a tough match."

Becker, winner of the last two Wimbledon titles, beat Canada's Glenn Michibata 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2. Becker captured his first hardcourt crown earlier this month at the Canadian Open and the West German star isn't lacking confidence at the Open.

"For myself, I think I can win on hardcourt, I think I can win on clay," Becker said. "It's just that I have to prepare for it — which I did very good at my two tournaments. I'm feeling in very good shape.

"I'll probably always feel more comfortable at Wimbledon than anywhere because I've won it twice already. But I'm feeling better and better on hardcourt."

Graf, another West German, isn't nearly as certain about her chances.

"I don't think I'm able or ready to win this tournament," Graf said after disposing of Susan Mascarin 6-0, 6-1. Graf has played only one tournament since May after a viral infection forced her out of Wimbledon and she suffered a broken toe in a freak accident at the Federation Cup.

"I think I'm going to need a couple more years, two or three years until I can think about this," Graf said.

Lloyd, who toyed with Barbara Gerken 6-1, 6-1, definitely is thinking about her seventh U.S. Open title.

"I feel great," Lloyd said. "I feel I'm in a good frame of mind, I haven't overplayed. I feel very fresh at this stage of the year."

Shriver and Edberg looked sensational in the first matches of the day. Shriver romped over Terry Holladay 6-1, 6-0, while Edberg, of Sweden, beat Stephane Bonneau of Canada 6-0, 6-3, 6-0.

Edberg's seeded countrymen, Wilander, Jarryd, Nystrom and Pernfors, met with varying degrees of success. Wilander got off quickly, then held off Todd Nelson 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4; Jarryd eased by Al Parker 6-4, 6-2, 6-2; Nystrom blitzed Sammy Giammalva 6-1, 6-4, 6-2; and Pernfors routed countryman Jan Gunnarsson 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Gomez, of Ecuador, was a 6-3, 7-6, 6-1 victor over Diego Perez of Uruguay, while Mecir, of Czechoslovakia, struggled to down Tim Gullikson 7-5, 7-5, 6-4.

Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany defeated Christiane Jolissaint of Switzerland 7-6, 6-2; Sukova, of Czechoslovakia, beat Lilian Drescher of Switzerland 6-3, 6-2; Gadusek took Julie Richardson of New Zealand 7-5, 6-2; Maleeva, of Bulgaria, ousted Candy Reynolds 6-2, 6-4; Sabatini ripped Natalie Tauziat of France 6-3, 6-2.

Gabe Rivera finds no cure

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive tackle Gabe Rivera, paralyzed from the waist down since a 1983 auto accident, was unable to find a miracle cure for his crushed spine despite spending nine months in China undergoing daily acupuncture treatments.

Rivera, who lives in Fort Worth, Texas, said the acupuncture, full-body massages and distasteful herbal medications helped him, but still left him saddled in a wheelchair.

"My body seems ... different," he said. "It functions better than it did before. Really, I just went over there to try to see what chance and stuff I had."

Rivera, who played college football at Texas Tech, was told by his Chinese doctors in Kuangchou that "they might have done better if I would've come earlier ... if it would have been within a year of the accident."

"Your spine, if it's going to come back and work, it's in the first six months," he told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

The acupuncture needle "goes deep, into the nerves," Rivera said. "Maybe it releases some kind of stuff to make it heal."

Rivera returned from China a week before the Steelers defeated the Dallas Cowboys 41-28 in an exhibition game last Friday night. Rivera watched the game in person but did not visit the Steelers' locker room.

Rivera has not chosen an avocation since the auto accident cut short a professional football career that had lasted only two months.

"I'll probably have to start working soon, to make ends meet," said Rivera, who owns a home in an affluent Fort Worth suburb. "Go into computer work, or ... electronics. Most people who do that are sitting down anyway.

"I don't know where I'm headed, that's the hard part," he said. "It's hard to look ahead at, what?"

Rivera's rehabilitation expenses are covered by his car insurance and he has some National Football League insurance.

Boston's Bill Buckner slides under Texas Ranger second baseman Toby Harrah for a stolen base Wednesday, but it wasn't enough as Texas won the game 4-1 to gain on California.

Texas Slaught(ers) Bosox

Associated Press

For the first time since July 4, the opposing pitchers couldn't scan the Texas Rangers lineup and ask, "Who is that masked man?"

But on Wednesday night, the Boston Red Sox might have been tempted to check Rangers catcher Don Slaught's ID card after he banged out three hits in Texas' 4-1 win over Boston.

After having his nose and cheekbone broken by a pitch on May 18 in Boston, Slaught returned to action on July 4 wearing a protective plastic shield on his batting helmet.

But he'd been struggling at the plate and went into Wednesday night's series finale with six hits in his past 35 at-bats.

So he shed the shield during batting practice and led the Rangers' 12-hit attack on Boston starter Bruce Hurst, 8-7, and reliever Bob Stanley.

Edwin Correa, 8-11, was the beneficiary of the assault and got 3 1-3 hitless innings of relief from Mitch Williams, who recorded his sixth save.

"Donnie Slaught getting three hits without the mask? That's something," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He said he had a little difficulty seeing the ball through the mask, so he took it off and said the ball looked like a beach ball."

In addition to Slaught's three hits, Larry Parrish contributed his 21st home run and a single and Toby Harrah had his second home run in two nights.

"We know we've done a good job when we take two of three from Boston," said Harrah, whose homer was his sixth of the season. "They don't have an easy out in the lineup."

Williams proved otherwise, relieving Correa with the score 2-1, two outs and the bases loaded in the sixth.

He retired Wade Boggs, the American League's leading hitter, on a fly to left, then pitched three hitless innings to wrap up the victory, the Rangers' fifth in their six-game homestand.

"I like coming into games in big situations, and that's what it was tonight," said Williams. "I feel confident I can get the hitters out, even a great hitter like Wade Boggs."

The victory moved the Rangers to within 3½ games of California in the American League West while Boston's lead over Toronto in the East shrunk to five games.

AL Roundup

Jays 3-6, Indians 2-3

Pinch-hitter Tony Fernandez doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie and give the Toronto Blue Jays a 6-3 victory and a sweep of their twi-night doubleheader against the Cleveland Indians Wednesday.

Ernie Whitt's leadoff homer in the 12th inning gave Toronto a 3-2 victory in the first game as the Blue Jays moved within five games of the American League East-leading Boston Red Sox, who lost to Texas 4-1. Whitt also homered in the second game.

"We always felt that we had a shot at winning this thing, and we're not giving up," Blue jays outfielder Jesse Barfield said. "People counted us out, and that was foolish."

Garth Iorg led off the eighth inning of the second game with a single against Frank Willis, 1-2. Iorg took second on sacrifice bunt by Kelly Gruber and scored as Fernandez, hitting for Manny Lee, doubled to left-center field.

In the first game, Whitt hit the homer on a 2-2 pitch from Bryan Oelkers, giving the victory to Mark Eichhorn. Eichhorn, 11-4, allowed only one hit, striking out three and walking one in 4⅔ innings.

Tom Henke got the save in both games, giving him 19.

"That's what we've been playing for, to get everybody out from in front of us and have one team to concentrate on," Henke said.

White Sox 3, Royals 1

Ron Karkovice, playing in only his ninth game in the majors, hit a three-run home run to power Floyd Bannister to his eighth win of the year.

Bannister, 8-10, allowed six hits in working his fourth complete game and helping the White Sox snap a five-game losing streak. Bannister struck out five. Danny Jackson, 9-9, was the loser.

Karkovice's second-inning blast was his first in the major leagues after hitting 20 this season with Class AA Birmingham. He was called up by the White Sox on Aug. 16.

Twins 7, Brewers 5

Kirby Puckett broke out of a 1-for-21 slump with four hits, helping the Minnesota Twins end a three-game losing streak.

Puckett had three singles and a double, and three RBI as the Twins ended Milwaukee's three-game winning streak.

Minnesota starter Neal Heaton, 5-12, allowed 12 hits, five earned runs and two walks while striking out three through six innings. George Frazier halted a Milwaukee rally in the seventh and pitched the final three innings for his third save.

Mariners 4, Orioles 1

Ken Phelps hit a two-run homer, and Mike Trujillo worked five innings in his first start since coming to Seattle in trade from Boston.

Trujillo, who had appeared only in relief for Boston, scattered five hits, and Mark Huismann relieved to earn his fifth save.

Angels explode in ninth

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Sherman Corbett gave the Midland Angels a much needed pitching gem here Wednesday night, limiting the San Antonio Dodgers to only five hits, but it took a controversial obstruction call in a seven-run ninth to give Midland an 8-1 victory.

Corbett gave up three singles, a double and a harmless ninth inning homer in increasing his record to 7-10. He also struckout nine Dodgers and gave up only two walks in a route-going performance.

Kevin King produced much of the offensive power for Midland with a three-run double in the ninth inning.

Alonzo Tellez had the solo homer for San Antonio in the ninth inning after Midland had scored seven runs in the top of the ninth after a controversial obstruction call.

The umpire's ruling came when Brian Brady bounced a one-hopper to Dodger second baseman Ken Harvey. Harvey threw to third base, where Tracy Woodson caught Midland's Steve Liddle in a run-down between second and third.

Liddle was eventually thrown out at third, but umpire Tom Mellor reversed the call, claiming Woodson got in his way in the basepath.

Brady, who had advanced to second during the run-down, was sent back to first. Liddle remained at third.

King's double drove in three of the seven runs Midland scored after the obstruction call delayed the game for about 10 minutes.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, El Paso defeated Beaumont, 7-4 and the Jackson Mets edged Tulsa, 9-8. The Arkansas-Shreveport game was rained out and will be made up as a doubleheader tonight.

Billy Bates had a run-scoring double and Steve Stanicek drove in a run with a single to highlight a four-run outburst in the fourth inning as the El Paso Diablos defeated the Beaumont Golden Gators, 7-4.

The Gators held a 4-3 advantage at the time after doubles by Scott Parsons and Mark Gillaspie and a single by Jerald Clark drove in three runs.

The winning pitcher was Pete Kendrick, who struck out five and allowed three earned run.

Richardson close to deal

ALLENDALE, N.J (AP) — Micheal Ray Richardson, the former New Jersey Nets star banned from the NBA because of cocaine use, is close to reaching an agreement with an Italian team, his lawyer says.

"A contract is being negotiated with a team in Milan," attorney Robert L. Galantucci said Wednesday. "He seems to indicate that it's a foregone conclusion."

The guard's future career in Italy was threatened by his continuing problems with the law, but at a hearing Tuesday, his wife dropped assault charges against him and a judge put off motor vehicles charges.

Municipal Judge Robert J. Buckalew adjourned the motor vehicle case for two weeks to give the prosecution time to come up with more evidence.

If no new evidence is produced, the charges will be dropped. If Richardson leaves for Italy before the two weeks, and if the evidence is found, the case can be resumed after the Italian basketball season, Buckalew said.

Both charges stemmed from a July 6 incident when police found Richardson dozing behind the wheel of his car, parked with the motor running, and arrested him for driving with a revoked license.

At the Allendale police station, he allegedly threatened his wife, Leah, and shook his fist at her, police said. Mrs. Richardson signed a simple assault and domestic violence complaint against her husband.

The couple had been estranged at the time, but since have resumed living together at their Mahwah home.

Galantucci said Richardson may leave for Italy as early as next week.

Buckalew adjourned the driving charge because the prosecution had no evidence proving his license had been suspended.

Richardson, who has said he is undergong drug treatment, was banned by the NBA in February.

Tolliver wins Tech quarterback job

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Billy Joe Tolliver was the late-season surprise during the 1985 football season. And after losing the starting quarterback job during spring workouts, the Boyd native is again the Red Raiders' No. 1 signal-caller.

First-year Tech head coach David McWilliams made the announcement this week during a question-and-answer session with members of the 1986 Southwest Conference Press Tour Monday.

"Tolliver's still our starting quarterback," McWilliams said. "He's doing a lot better as a drop-back quarterback. That was the hardest thing he had to learn. He was more of a roll-out quarterback last year. He's performed well this fall."

As the leader of the offense, the outspoken Tolliver, a 6-foot-1, 190-pound sophomore, knows just what the Raiders need this season to snap a string of seven consecutive losing seasons.

"I've said it a thousand times. We've got the defense — one rated (among the leaders) in the nation every year," he said. "The only thing that hurts us is a lack of offense."

That's pretty much the story of Tech's 4-7 season last fall. The Raiders were eighth in the conference in both total offense and rushing offense and sixth in passing offense. Tech didn't have a top 10 rusher or passer, and only the ninth-ranked receiver.

Yet the Raiders were close to an 8-3 year. Tech lost two games when two-point conversion attempts failed with less than one minute to play, and lost two others when opponents kicked school-record 57-yard field goals late in the fourth quarter.

"Last year we'd play a good three, three-and-a-half quarters and then come apart," Tolliver said. "It was all mental jumping offside, a lack of execution, stuff like that. The coaches are trying to make us understand when the fourth quarter rolls around you really have to play."

McWilliams' staff is also hoping the Raiders understand a new offense.

Following a trend in college football, Tech will combine several strategies this season with an overriding theme: pass the football.

"I'd like to come in and be able to (complete) 60 percent (of my passes)," said Tolliver, who won the QB battle with junior Aaron Keesee and senior Monte McGuire.

The offense will combine the "I" formation with split-back and one-back sets designed to get as many as five receivers into the defensive secondary.

The primary targets will be five players who will rotate in at split end and wingback: sophomores Wayne Walker, Eddy Anderson and Tyrone Thurman; and juniors Bruce Perkins and Lemuel Stinson. None are taller than 5-foot-10 or weigh more than 170 pounds. But they combined for 60 receptions in 1985 — 26 by Walker, who started last season.

Out of the backfield, I-backs Bouvier Dale and Timmy Smith and fullback Clifton Winston are also above-average receivers.

Meanwhile, sophomore Tony Durden, who is recovering from a hamstring injury, will start in the middle of Tech's 4-3 defense, which appears strong at the outside linebacker, end and defensive back positions.

The Raiders led the SWC and were second in the nation in pass defense last season and return two starters from that unit — senior cornerback Roland Mitchell and senior Leonard Jones, who has been moved from cornerback to rover.

Rozelle still faces major problems

NEW YORK (AP) — At precisely 4:37 p.m. on July 29, a lead weight was removed from Pete Rozelle's back — the NFL won its antitrust battle with the USFL.

Not only did the verdict save the commissioner and his league $1.69 billion, it opened the door for the sparkling talents of Herschel Walker, Jim Kelly and Kelvin Bryant.

Rozelle, though, will feel the weight again in 1987.

The NFL opens its 67th season next Sunday still basking in the euphoria of a federal court jury's decision to give the USFL a token $3 despite finding that the NFL was indeed a monopoly. The measly award forced the 4-year-old league to disappear for 1986 and probably forever.

It also forced it to release its players to the NFL, where about two dozen will play this season and where two in particular — Walker and Kelly — should be of immediate help at the gate and with television ratings. Kelly alone may double season ticket sales in previously moribund Buffalo.

"I started in pro football 40 years ago doing programs for the Rams and I always look forward to a season with great anticipation and optimism," Rozelle said. "I think the song calls for it this year."

But the melody may only be temporary.

Sometime this fall, an arbitrator is expected to rule on Rozelle's drug policy, which calls for mandatory random testing; it has been challenged by the NFL Players Association. Whatever the ruling, the specter of drugs looms over the game, intensified by the post-Super Bowl problems of the New England Patriots and the cocaine-death last June of Cleveland safety Don Rogers.

And whatever the season brings, when it ends, so does the TV contract that brought the NFL $2.1 billion over the past five years.

Ratings declined for the first three of those seasons, the advertising market crashed and the major networks seem disinclined to provide even a token raise. More likely, they will offer less money to the league — a first in the NFL's 20-year marriage with the tube.

Then come negotiations on a new contract with the union. The players want free agency, something they had in a limited way when the USFL was a bargaining option; the NFL doesn't think much of that idea.

If those positions prove intractable, the big word next year will be "Strike."

But first things first, like the 1986 season.

Last year was the Year of the Bear, not only because Chicago dominated the rest of the NFL on the field, but because of the personalities that captured the public's fancy beyond the narrow realm of football.

There was William Perry, The Refrigerator, a 300-pound-plus rookie defensive tackle who became a media star by lining up in the backfield and running over defenses for three touchdowns, including one in the Super Bowl against New England.

There was Jim McMahon, who affected a punk lifestyle and a "who cares?" personality, and spent the week before the Super Bowl leading parades down Bourbon Street.

There was the soap-opera feud between temperamental head Coach Mike Ditka and temperamental defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan, architect of the "46" defense that carried Chicago to a 15-1 regular-season and a romp through the playoffs. It was immediately scrapped — at least in name — when Ryan left to become head coach in Philadelphia. There, he declared his 7-9 Eagles the new champions, at least until they meet the Bears in Chicago the second week of the season.

This year's fued is between Ditka and McMahon.

For one thing, the coach isn't enamored with his quarterback's excess poundage — McMahon's double chin is clearly visible in his "outraaaageous" motorcycle commercials. For another, McMahon has a sore hip muscle and Ditka has been trying to speed his recovery by hinting that second-year-man Mike Tomczak's impressive preseason performance might put McMahon's job in jeopardy.

The NFL, meanwhile, is primed for new heroes and personalities.

Walker and Kelly are candidates, particularly Walker, whose 2,411 yards in the USFL a year ago are an all-time professional record.

Black-clad Glanville giving Oilers respect

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville wears black on the sidelines so his players can see him, and he teaches "smash-mouth" football that emphasizes toughness.

But he lightens the mood during heavy workouts with nicknames for players such as "Bula Bula" (Allen Pinkett), "Captain Video" (Robert Lyles) and "Cornbread" (Frank Bush).

Glanville also has given the team a winning attitude and a winning record going into Saturday's preseason finale against the Dallas Cowboys. A victory would give the Oilers a 4-0 record and their second unbeaten preseason ever.

Although it's only preseason, any success brings applause for a team that hasn't had a winning regular season since 1980.

Glanville's favorite color is black, and he wears it he can be seen against a backdrop of blue-and-white Oilers uniforms.

"I make some of the calls and I don't want the players on the field having a hard time finding me," Glanville said.

At practice, Glanville never is hard to find. He's in the midst of the action, praising, chiding, joking.

"The best thing I can say about Jerry Glanville is that he's a hands-on coach," General Manager Ladd Herzeg says.

There is nothing aloof about Glanville, who is in his first pro head coaching job. He doesn't coach from a tower or leave the on-field instruction to his assistants.

But Glanville is at a loss to describe his coaching style. He didn't plan a style and there is no mold for the Glanville model.

"I didn't sit down and think for one second what a head coach should be like," Glanville said. "A coach has to be himself. If you try to put on a front, the players will see through it in five minutes."

Glanville, the Oilers' defensive coordinator last season, has earned praise for his organizational skills and his knowledge of offensive philosophy as well as defense.

"Sometimes he'll say something to a quarterback or running back and we'll step back and have to say, 'He's right,' " running back Stan Edwards said. "He knows both sides of the football."

Corner Kick

PAUL BREITZMAN

In less than a month Midland youth soccer players will have played their first scheduled weekend of the fall season. While waiting, it might be good to look at what we want our children to get from playing soccer.

Soccer is a game of continuous action with rules that require gentlemanly play, no timeouts and no coaching from the sidelines. Once the whistle blows, players must make decisions without help.

Players enjoy this type of playing environment. It can, however, drive coaches and parents crazy. What can be an obvious play to a 30-year-old on the sideline can be the last choice to surface in the mind of a 12-year-old.

Volunteers should not be abused if his efforts are not perfect. For instance, adults may well applaud a player who "toe punches" a ball over an open goal and speak well of the neighborhood coach for giving up his weekends, even though he still hasn't taught his players not to "toe punch" after eight weeks.

However, we shout at vounteer referees for being only 90 per cent correct on his calls and call him unfit. The referee may soon decide he really would rather watch his own children play instead of making sure other children have a game referee.

We all want our children to learn to think for themselves. Soccer is a great vehicle to teach that very point. The game demands that players think quickly and quickly execute what they think best.

It does not matter if the opponent kicks harder if you can figure out how to get to the ball first. It doesn't matter if the opponent is faster if you think to pas the ball before he runs you down. And it doesn't matter if if you are strong enough to knock an opponent down if he's figured out how to get to the ball first.

To be good at soccer, a player must develop the ability to think on the field and to be creative with his play. We want our children to think on their own and we don't do that by yelling instructions from whistle to whistle. Think about that when a houng player decides he doesn't have to stand on the 18 to be a good fullback, or when the goalkeeper thinks a quick throw to the middle might find an open teammate better than a long kick.

Most people want to teach their children to deal fairly with other people. Would you teach a child that he has to make someone else a loser before he can think of himself as a winner?

After a game, do you ask your child what he learned or what he did, or do you ask if he won or lost?

While waiting for the season, coaches could better spend their time by attending the clinics and reading the books so we can make our players better. If taking extra time to teach skills means we don't have our special free kick play ready for Saturday, let's ask ourselves what really matters in the long run.

Parents should decide before the season what to cheer and encourage. The thunderkick is obvious, usually spectacular and sometimes productive, but our kids should be praised for trying the smart play, the clever play, even when they fail.

Report: Crime up 14 percent

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The number of major crimes reported to Midland police the first six months of 1986 rose 14 percent, but that rise was less than the statewide average of 18.6 percent reported by the Department of Public Safety.

Police said double-digit increases in both thefts and robberies were primarily due to the sagging petroleum industry in Midland.

According to UCR (Uniform Crime Reporting) statistics reported to the DPS by Midland police for the first six months of this year, crime rose 14 percent overall in the seven major categories: homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft, and motor vehicle theft.

Robbery in Midland increased 42.1 percent for the reporting period compared to January through June of 1985, more than the 34.6 percent statewide increase.

The statewide increase was the biggest among the major crimes, according to the DPS.

Midland Police Lieutenant Earl Luckey said although robberies increased, in only 13 of those was a weapon used. He said 13 aggravated robberies, or only about two per month, was an "outstanding" statistic to report.

Reports of forcible rape doubled, from 10 to 20 for the reporting period.

Thefts increased 25.8 percent. Statewide, thefts were up 15.6 percent.

Burglaries, which police say have been escalating this month in the city, nevertheless showed an increase of only 4.3 percent for the six-month reporting period, compared to a 20.5 percent jump statewide.

Luckey said the increase in thefts was tied to the depressed local economy.

"It is greatly related to the layoffs in the city of Midland, on our economy," Luckey said. "Normally people who would not steal will do it in a situation where they may have lost their job. If an air conditioner breaks, they may see one at a vacant house and take it, justifying it deep down in their own minds."

Luckey also said drug use in the area, particulary heroin, causes 75 percent of residential burglaries and 95 percent of the thefts from businesses.

He said addicts typically steal to support their habit.

While crime in every major category increased in the statewide DPS figures, Midland police reported aggravated assaults declined 6.3 percent.

Frontier owners may file for bankruptcy

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The customer relations office of Frontier Airlines leaves a short recorded message: "...we regret to inform you our services have been suspended indefinitely and our general offices are closed."

People Express Inc. said Wednesday it intended to seek bankruptcy protection for Frontier Airlines, prompting hundreds of workers for the grounded airline to sign up for unemployment benefits.

However, a Frontier employee in Midland said today he's not signed up for unemployment and is still on the debt-ridden airline's payroll as far as he's concerned.

The manager of the Frontier office at Midland Regional Airport said he is still being advised daily by Frontier management, and said he didn't know if bankruptcy proceedings would go through today.

Victor White, director of airports at Midland Regional Airport, said he still has heard no word that anyone else hasn't heard.

"The longer they prolong it (not filing for bankruptcy) the better — if they file for Chapter 11, the space Frontier leases from the airport will just sit there and won't be able to be leased because it will be tied up in court as an asset of the company.

"That will hinder our flexiblity in getting a replacement," White said.

People Express spokesman Russell Marchetta declined to say whether the deal to sell Frontier to United Airlines for $146 million was still on.

Though United has paid People Express $46.7 million for Frontier's landing and take-off slots at Chicago, gates and other facilities in Denver and Dallas and two aircraft due to be completed next year, the final sale to United is contigent on completeing negotiations between United management and pilots.

Talks between the two have been fruitless a report indicated, and have broken off for the second time this week.

Even though a People Express spokesman said negotiations with United for Frontier apparently had not succeeded, United spokesman Charles Novak said of the proposed deal: "We're leaving the door open."

With no revenues coming in, Frontier has been losing $1 million a day since it was shut down Sunday, Marilyn Mishkin, a Frontier spokeswoman, said.

When Frontier was shut down on Sunday morning, its owner, People Express, promised bankruptcy proceedings immediately, but has continued to delay proceedings each day since.

MISD has hired 114 new teachers for 1986-87 year

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A total of 114 new faces will be waiting at the doors of Midland classrooms when students march to school next week, say officials with the Midland Independent School District.

A report of MISD faculty hiring for the 1986-87 school year shows the total number of new teachers hired dropped by 65 from 1985-86.

Dr. Thomas Holland, director of Human Resource Services, said the MISD hired 40 first-year teachers and 74 teachers with one or more years of experience for its elementary and secondary classrooms.

Of those, 90 have bachelor's degrees, 20 have master's degrees and four possess post graduate or doctorate degrees.

MISD hired 65 new teachers to serve in the district's 23 elementary schools. As many as 47 new teachers will be employed at the secondary level which includes the MISD's three junior high, two freshman high and two senior high schools, Holland said.

That compares to the 104 elementary school teachers and 75 secondary faculty hired during 1985-86.

Holland said 95 of the teachers hired this year already are certified by the state of Texas, while seven possess out-of-state certification and 12 hold permits.

Holland said the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers created no staffing problems for the MISD.

The district reported two MISD teachers failed the state-mandated literacy test on both attempts. They later resigned their posts, Holland said.

Holland said 26 of the new faculty were graduated from Texas Tech University, while seven received degrees from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, six from Abilene Christian University and five each from Angelo State University and North Texas State University.

Midland AFDC program may lose $108,176

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Texas Department of Human Services proposed budget cuts created to comply with Gov. Mark White's 13 percent state agency budget reduction request, threaten to throw the financial burden on the backs of those who possibly need it the most, according to officials.

At a Budget and Oversight Subcommittee hearing on July 9, TDHS Commissioner Marlin Johnston said of the projected cuts (which will eliminate a minimum of $245 million from the agency's programs): "We cannot reach that level of reduction without carving away critical, life sustaining services..."

Life sustaining services, such as food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), will feel a pinch if the state gives the go ahead to TDHS to begin chopping.

Statistics released by TDHS Area Operations Manager Ann Bradford show that in 1985, an average of 4,324 Midland county residents a month received a total of $2,427,422 worth of food stamps and an average of 412 families a month received a total of $772,219 in AFDC benefits.

AFDC provides financial assistance to families with children who are deprived of support because of the absence of disability of one or both parents and who have no other means of adequate support. This program appropriates about $53 per person per month to eligible recipients.

Food stamps help families and individuals whose low income threatens their ability to maintain minimum nutritional standards for good health.

A draft copy listing the tangibles of these cuts in Rep. Tom Craddick's (R-Midland) district shows that $108,176 will be cut from the AFDC program here if the budget cuts become reality.

A rollback would be created that would at first cut AFDC benefits back to $48 with the possibility of an

Suspects sought who robbed delivery man

From Staff Reports

Midland Police are looking for two suspects, one reportedly armed, who robbed a pizza delivery man Wednesday night.

Dennis Ray Mitchell, an employee of Domino's Pizza, told police he was approached by two men about 8 p.m. in the 900 block of Holly Dr. According to reports, one of the men had a .45 caliber pistol.

Police said the men stole $42 cash and a large pizza valued at $14.50. One suspect is described as a slender white male with short blond hair, about 18 years old, six feet tall weighing 160 pounds. He was last seen wearing a red buttoned shirt and blue jeans. The other suspect in the robbery was not described.

In other reports, a 24-year-old Midland man has been charged with attempted murder in connection with the shooting of an elderly woman Monday night.

Police Round-up

Justin Lane Slatton, address listed as Praise Road, is being held at Midland County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond. The bond was set Wednesday by Municipal Court Judge Robin Smith.

Rosa Nichols, a tenant at Hillcrest Manor, 700 W. Scharbauer, was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital after she was shot in the arm about 8 p.m. in her third-floor apartment. According to reports, she heard a gunshot while watching television, and was reportedly shot when she tried to reach her telephone.

Police found a bullet hole in the apartment window, and further investigation led to a nearby apartment, where the weapon used in the attack was found.

Several thousand dollars worth of musical instruments and equipment were stolen from a storage shed. Bobby Williams, 2310 Humble, told police a guitar amplifier valued at $2,500, speaker cabinets valued at $2,250, a bass guitar valued at $1,000, and other equipment valued at approximately $1,200 were stolen while being stored in the 3100 block of Gist. Reports said the burglary occurred sometime between 12:30 a.m. Tuesday and 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Several auto burglaries were also reported.

Ray Lee Jefferson told police an AM-FM in-dash stereo valued at $289, and an equalizer valued at $161 were stolen from a 1971 two-door Chevrolet. The burglary occurred sometime between 8 p.m. Tuesday and 10 a.m. Wednesday, when the vehicle was parked in residence driveway in the 4500 block of Cimarron.

Assorted food and chips valued at $130 were reported stolen from a vehicle belonging to Permian Distributing. The burglary occurred around 9:30 p.m. Wednesday while the vehicle was parked in the 4410 block of Lanham.

Two batteries valued at $80 and two battery cables valued at $20 were reported stolen from a vehicle while it was parked in the 500 block of W. Louisiana Ave. The burglary reportedly occurred sometime between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Mabee Foundation OKs grant to High Sky Ranch

From Staff Reports

The J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation has approved a grant to High Sky Childrens Ranch of Midland for its physical fitness program.

"We are extremely pleased to receive this grant, as it directly impacts on the physical and emotional needs of the children at the Ranch," said Steve Huggins, HSCR board chairman.

"A grant of this magnitude is especially welcomed considering the economic climate in the Permian Basin today," Huggins said. "It is more important to note that the Mabee Foundation, as well as certain other trusts and foundations, primarily provides funds for building and special purpose programs, as opposed to operational or endowment funding."

Shaving off beard, moustache wounds vanity

My vanity has been struck by the sword's edge.

I am beardless and unmasked.

The beard, representative of manhood, dignity, boldness, wisdom and ruggedness, has been stripped of me. It was my decision — strongly influenced by a loving soul who wondered about this masked man. So, without fanfare, I clipped and shaved my 18-year-old moustache and 10-year-old beard last Saturday in Dallas — the cradle of my birth. I bled a bit from the nicks but stung and burned more from the grating of the razor's blade over my fair skin.

I bled more from a finger than I did from my face. In my haste on a downward stroke, the razor slipped from the soapy beard, nicked a fingernail and cut into the quick.

I was apprehensive and curious. The apprehensiveness was over how old I would appear with the complement of facial lines — character marks — exposed by the fallen beard. I was curious about what I looked like. I had forgotten.

I still don't know for sure.

"I look like my uncle" — my father's brother, I thought, and noticed in me my father and his blue eyes.

From the mirror, I glanced down and, in utter disappointment, studied the paltry pile of beard shavings. What was a well nourished, full beard of whiskers that needed trimming was but a mere pile of hair without pattern or form. There was no art there.

"If that is all there is to my masculinity," I said, "I can do without it."

So, I tossed aside the remnants of a beard and moustache, cleaned up the mess and blood, slapped on some after-shave lotion, and went fast asleep. I wondered what the morning would bring.

The biggest decision in the shave was where to terminate the sideburns. With my vanity in bloom and somewhat wounded, I studied my ears and their forms and finally decided on the length of the sideburns. I was quite decisive.

The most difficult trial of the shave was to vanquish the moustache. We had been through some hard and good times together. But I was consoled in that the moustache would reappear if I so desired. It first emerged in East Texas in 1968 and went through several stages — from the short and choppy to the long and almost handlebar style. I still miss playing with the moustache, flicking morsels of food and drink from it, rubbing it, twisting it, and often tasting, biting and occasionally gnawing on it.

I hardly miss the beard — except my face feels chilled without its cover crop and abused by the razor's bite. It still feels unnatural to shave. But, despite the cost in time in shaving, I rather enjoy the ritual. I run the hot water, wet the brush and shaving soap, briskly whip up a rich lather, splash warm water onto my face, cover up the stubble growth of hair with the lather, replace the razor's blade as needed, run hot water over the razor's head, look into the mirror, and start cutting down the stubble of my hirsute manhood.

Then the chore begins. The actual act of shaving has never been a joy or a pleasure. Never has the razor glided as smoothly over my face as it seems to on those television commercials. Nothing, including, chewing gum, mints and mouthwash, works as well in life as it seems to on those taped advertisements.

After the forest of stumps is mostly gone, then comes the touch-up, clean-up, splashes of water, the drying out, the burning sensation of the after-shave lotion, and the face rub to determine if the stubble is all gone. It rarely or never is.

Tomorrow, the ritual begins anew. And if I grow too weary of it, I may lay down the shaving tools and, without effort on my part, the beard and moustache eventually will appear. I'm considering reviving the moustache. And, who knows, the moustache may beg for company.

Vanity may win. But I know not which is more vain — to be cleanly shaven or to be bearded. Either way, vanity does not depart the human psyche. And my vanity is nourished when my friends comment on the "new" Ed Todd who looks so "different" without the beard. And I am flattered, vain that I am, when those friends comment on the "younger" look of old Ed Todd. Or they'll ask, "Ed, is that you?" I'll ponder and reply, "I think so." Yes. Today."

One of these days, I'll decide which style I'm more comfortable with. The beardless mode doesn't bother me. Shaving does. I was comfortable with the beard. But until last week, I was quite fearful of shaving the beard. What would be revealed in my facial nakedness? I knew not. Then, a change emerged. Ed Todd removed the mask, and there he was. There I was — most willing to advance forward and onward as Ed Todd. Accepting that, I can comfortably do what I will — clean shaven, bearded and/or moustached.

House OKs bill reducing teachers' paperwork

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Wednesday gave preliminary approval to a bill that would reduce the paperwork required of Texas' public school teachers.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Gwyn Shea, R-Irving, would require the State Board of Education, the Texas Education Agency and local school districts to reduce teachers' paperwork.

The bill would prohibit school districts from requiring teachers to write reports on topics other than those covering textbooks, lesson plans, students' grades, attendance and others specifically outlined by law.

"This is a major step forward in attacking this astronomical problem," said Jay Levin, a lobbyist for the Texas State Teachers Association.

Supporters of the legislation, which gained easy approval on the House floor, say it will send a clear message to school officials that legislators want teachers to spend more time teaching and less time filling out reports.

They say provisions in 1984's education reform package, known as House Bill 72, fall short of reducing the paperwork burden on teachers.

But opponents complain that the bill stops short by not requiring punitive action against administrators who do not comply with the legislation.

They also say the bill actually will add to teachers' paperwork by creating more red tape and requiring reports from the Texas Education Agency, which would investigate each district's efforts to reduce paperwork.

The bill would require school districts to include paperwork reduction as part of their training programs for administrators. It also would require the education board to limit each discussion topic in the annual school district performance report to one page.

House Bill 72 requires the education board to consider local school districts' efforts to reduce paperwork when awarding accreditation.

Astronmers will host sky viewing session

From Staff Reports

West Texas Astronomers will host a late summer sky viewing session at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium on Saturday.

Activities will begin at 9 p.m. with a current sky orientation in the planetariaum, followed by outdoor viewing through club members telescopes. Moons of Jupiter, rings of Saturn, polar caps on Mars and the phase of Venus are among the celestial phenomena in position for viewing.

Public planetarium programs are presented at 2 and 3:30 p.m. Sundays and at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

"The Dinosaur and the Asteriod" will be presented through Wednesday, Sept. 3; and "Tales of the Zodiac" will be Sunday, Sept. 7.

The next regular meeting of the West Texas Astronomers will be in the planetarium on Thursday, Sept. 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting will include a presentation of photographs of Mars and a program on the study and exploration of Venus.

CRIME

One homicide has been reported since the end of June, and one possible homicide is still under investigation, and could be presented to the Midland County grand jury.

Luckey said the small increase in burglaries was due to a special program that allows officers to drive their patrol cars home.

"The reason our burglaries are down (compared to the average statewide) is because of our personal car program," Luckey said. "Seventy percent of the (patrol) cars on the street at any one time are off duty, but the burglars don't know that."

Some law enforcement officials concerned about the worsening crime problem in Texas have pointed the finger at a criminal justice system that fails to keep hard-core criminals locked up long enough.

Luckey said he does not blame prison or parole officials, but said early paroles undoubtedly contribute to crime, especially major crime.

"Every busload that comes in the front door they have to let one out the back door," Luckey said. "It's not their fault, it's just a horrible system.

"Your early releases from there are going to hit you; well over 50 percent of your people that get out are your repeat offenders in the major crimes we're talking about."

Rucker can go before high court

Rucker

Midland lawyer Dean Rucker, partner in the father-son law firm of Rucker & Rucker, has been admitted to practice law before the United States Supreme Court. He was sponsored by his father, Hal Rucker.

Dean Rucker, a 31-year-old native Midlander, earned the law degree in 1980 from St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio and studied at the undergraduate level at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Rucker is chairman of the Midland County Republican Party and holds directorships in the Alamo YMCA, Midland Apartment Association, Community and Senior Services Inc., and Trinity School of Midland Alumni Association.

He holds memberships in the State Bar of Texas, Midland County Bar Association, Texas Trial Lawyers Association, and the Midland County Young Lawyers Association. Rucker has been admitted to practice law in the Northern and Western Districts of U.S. District Court and before the Fifth Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals.

TAC will conduct seminar

From Staff Reports

MARFA — The Texas Aeronautics Commission and the High Sky Derby USA will conduct a six-hour seminar on "Aircraft Refueling Safety" at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 9, in the Conference Room of the United States Border Patrol Headquarters in Marfa.

The course will be taught by John C. Eslinger, TAC education coordinator.

"Although the seminar is geared toward those involved in flight-line service and fueling operations at airport fixed-base operations, it is also important for all pilots to update their knowledge and awareness of the subject for their own protection and safety-survival," said Velma Lee Barnett Copeland, former governor of the eight-state South Central Section of The Ninety-Nines Inc., an international organization of women pilots. "Flying is serious business."

The six-hour seminar, which TAC says is "rated extremely informative," offers a detailed view of flight-line service procedures and techniques through the film "Professional Service Training" and the study guide "Refueling and Quality Control Procedures for Airport Service and Support Operations."

Those interested in attending the flight-line refueling seminar may contact Mrs. Copeland by writing High Sky Derby USA, P.O. Box 1493, Marfa, Texas 79843 or by telephoning her at 915-729-3409.

Fund raiser to be held at water park

From Staff Reports

A fashion show, a dunking tank and other entertainment activites will highlight the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce's convention and visitors bureaus Sunday fund raiser at Water Wonderland.

"The purpose for this fund raiser is to promote the efforts made by the two organizations in co-sponsoring the first annual Midland-Odessa Music Festival," said a spokesman for the Midland chamber's convention and visitors bureau.

Water Wonderland will be open to the public from noon to 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Water Wonderland will donate $1 for each paying guest that enters the water park," the spokesman said.

additional $5 cut, thus reducing beneifits to $43, eliminating an additional $37,177 from the program.

Thus if Johnston's proposal is effected by the government, roughly 20 percent of the AFDC beneifts in Midland would cease to exist in the face of 14.2 percent Midland unemployment rates.

While the 1985 TDHS annual report states a legislative resolution passed during the 1984 special session gave the TDHS authority to use unexpended funds to keep all income assistance (financial eligibility) workers on the payroll, unwanted budget cuts threaten to consume 404 administrative positions statewide.

Ms. Bradford said Johnston did request a waiver from White to allow the TDHS to fill jobs in the income assistance office which handles requests for food stamps, among other things.

She said the office has not received a "no" from the governor yet.

But workers at the Midland TDHS office have complained of being overwrought with requests and not being able to handle them all in a timely manner.

Ms. Bradford said she realizes the problem is there, but wants others to realize it's not just in Midland — it's everywhere.

MISD

Other colleges and universities represented include the University of Texas at Arlington (4), West Texas State University (4) and Southwest Texas State University (4).

Holland said the MISD hired 20 teachers who received degrees out-of-state.

Among those colleges and universities represented are Penn State University, University of Arkansas, Quachita Baptist University, University of Arizona, University of Florida, University of Southern Florida, Dominican College of San Rafael, DePauw University, Mississippi College, University of Missouri at Columbia, Duke University, New Mexico State University, Bethany Nazarene College, University of Oklahoma, Southeastern Oklahoma State University, Southeastern State College, Oklahoma State University, George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University, and University of Wisconsin.

GRANT

With an anticipated completion by late fall, the grant includes funds for a wooden playground, aerobic equipment, fenced swimming area, universal weights and equipment for organized sports.

"Physical fitness plays a key role in the development of young adults by helping to build not only their bodies, but also their self-esteem and confidence," said Jackie Carter, executive director of HSCR. "The new facilities and equipment will enable us to expand our current program on the ranch grounds, and provide more direct guidance in the area."

High Sky Childrens Ranch is a non-profit, basic care residential facility located six miles northwest of Midland. The ranch, opened in 1963, provides a homelike environment for abused, neglected and abandoned children in the Permian Basin.

The mission of the ranch is to help the child deal with his or her emotional grief, and resolve conflicts within the family to enable the child to return home, or prepare for the choice of adoption, and also prepare the child for becoming a responsible adult. In 1985, the ranch was relicensed to care for both boys and girls, including brothers and sisters.

Villagers who fled gas disaster now getting food, medical help

By ARTHUR MAX

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Villagers who fled the gas disaster in northwest Cameroon have begun receiving food and medical help by airlift, while scientists examined the murky volcanic lake that released the lethal cloud.

Officials said Wednesday that nearly all of the more than 1,500 dead were buried, most of them near where they were found, and that the bodies of several victims were flown to Yaounde for autopsies.

Rescue operations, burial details and the transport of relief supplies have been the responsibility of Cameroon's army. The rugged terrain, unpaved roads and unreliable communications around remote Lake Nios have hampered relief efforts.

Cameroon's army was strained to the limit to deliver relief supplies, which included aid from overseas to help this West African nation. Food and medicine began reaching refugees of the natural disaster by plane on Wednesday.

"Our first priority is to set our priorities," said Jean-Marcel Mengueme, chairman of the government's crisis committee.

One Western diplomat said the army, which has three U.S.-built Hercules transport planes and a few smaller aircraft, was having difficulty dealing with the influx of supplies.

"It's a problem," said the diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity. "This government never faced anything on this scale before."

Burying thousands of dead animals rotting in the tropical heat also was a primary concern because of fears they might spark an epidemic.

Scientists believe a volcanic tremor under Lake Nios released a giant bubble of deadly gas that rose to the surface and spread over the area last Thursday night.

On Wednesday, they analyzed the lake's water, which turned from a brilliant blue to a murky reddish brown after the disaster.

It still was not known exactly what gas killed nearly all life around the small lemon-shaped lake, although scientists speculated that steam laced with toxic gases wafted over a 10-square-mile area, burning and smothering victims.

"I sent a team yesterday to take samples of the water," said Bienvenu Fouda, secretary-general of the Ministry of Mines. "They will report and make proposals."

Yenwo said area residents had been warned not to drink local water. He said the army provided tanks of purified water but that bottled water was urgently needed.

Army troops evacuated about 3,000 survivors of the gas cloud, but had trouble sealing off the area around the lake to prevent people from returning home.

About 2,000 soldiers have closed off the area, which is about 200 miles northwest of Yaounde, the capital.

Most refugees moved in with relatives outside the stricken area. A few hundred homeless people were evacuated to the town of Wum, about 20 miles from the disaster site, said Ivo Yenwo, an aide to President Paul Biya.

In Washington, the U.S. Agency for International Development said the United States will airlift 15 tons of emergency supplies by week's end, including 250 family tents, acid-proof suits and gas detectors.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan wrote to Biya to express his sorrow at the tragedy.

Deputy State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Washington initially spent about $250,000 for assistance and expects that figure to rise. He said teams of U.S. doctors and scientists were en route to Cameroon.

A 17-member Israeli medical team that arrived in Cameroon on Monday reached the hospital in Nkambe, 60 miles east of Wum, while a six-member French scientific team flew to the provincial capital of Bamenda on Tuesday.

Officials said Canada, Spain, Italy and the 12-nation European Common Market also were sending aid.

Fouda said he planned a study to determine areas of high risk and to encourage people to move away from areas of frequent volcanic activity.

"All this is a volcanic system," he said in an interview, sweeping his hand across a map of northwest Cameroon eastward toward the border with Chad.

The last major volcanic eruption was two years ago in Foumbot, 60 miles southeast of Lake Nios.

Terrorists warn that operations to free hostages would cost lives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Islamic Jihad terrorist group today warned that any U.S. military operation to free American hostages held in Lebanon would cost them their lives.

The warning came in a typewritten Arabic-language statement delivered to the west Beirut office of a Western news agency along with a snapshot of American hostage David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif.

"We warn everyone who contemplates any military or security foolhardinesss to free the hostages, because his as well as their fate would be much worse than the U.S. Marines (killed) on the outskirts of Islamic Beirut," the statement said.

That was a reference to the Oct. 23, 1983, suicide bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut in which 241 American servicemen perished. Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for that bombing, and for a twin bombing that killed 58 French soldiers the same day.

"Let all know we shall have no mercy. We shall not compromise in that matter and the reckoning will be very severe," said the statement from the shawdowy Shiite Moslem extremist group believed linked to Iran.

The Islamic Jihad statement said "all plots and intrigues hatched nowadays by local and international hands under the sponsorship of the great Satan to reveal the fate of the hostages we hold shall fail."

"The great Satan" is a phrase often used by Shiite zealots to refer to the United States.

AP Laserphoto

A photo released by the Islamic Jihad organization Thursday beleived to be that of American hostage David Jacobson, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif. Jacobson was kidnapped May 28, 1985. Islamic Jihad claims it holds him.

"We lay the full responsibility on the ignorant American government, and we call the attention of the families of the hostages that we do not bear the responsibility for the lives of the captives after this statement.

"Pardoned is the one who forewarned," the statement concluded.

The photo accompanying the statement showed a bearded Jacobsen from the waist up, wearing a striped black-and-white shirt and staring straight into the camera. He wore a watch on his left wrist.

In addition to Jacobsen, director of the American University of Beirut at the time of his kidnapping, the other Americans missing in Beirut are:

Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the university; and William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad claimed last October it had killed Buckley, but no body ever was produced. Kidnapped university librarian Peter Kilburn was found slain April 17.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest from Joliet, Ill., was released July 26 after nearly 19 months in captivity.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, gave Jenco a seven-minute videotape to carry with him to freedom on which Jacobsen appealed to the U.S. government to meet the kidnappers' conditions.

Jacobsen said on the tape that he did not know his captors' demands, but "Father Jenco has been given instructions for our government."

Islamic Jihad, which has issued three statements since Jenco's release, had previously demanded that 17 comrades held in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in that oil-rich Persian Gulf Arab nation Dec. 12, 1983, be freed. Kuwait has refused to free any of the 17 convicts.

Haitians breeding U.S. pigs hope to improve diet of residents there

EDITOR'S NOTE — Pigs from U.S. farms have been introduced in Haiti and peasants are clamoring for them in hopes of improving their economic lot.

"They've adapted well here. Farmers are realizing that it can become a business. ...It will re-establish the peasant economy. These pigs are becoming a lot more profitable to the farmer and that surely will improve their buying power. ...Prices will start coming down and people with eat more meat."

— Bob Amlingmeyer

By YVES COLON

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — U.S. pigs are being bred in this Caribbean nation to replace native pigs wiped out by the hundreds of thousands in the late 1970s by African swine fever.

About 60,000 pigs — bigger and fatter than the tough Creole variety they replaced — have been given to Haitian farmers, and projections of a 10- or 15-fold increase offer the prospect of an improved diet for residents of the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

But one local agronomist, Frederick Agenor, doubts Haiti can feed such an increased number of pigs because it is so short of food for its 6 million people.

The government, however, is going ahead with the plan.

"Everybody is asking for a pig, and we're doing everything we can to meet that growing demand," Minister of Agriculture Gustave Menager said in an interview. "We cannot satisfy everyone who wants a pig of his own."

"They've adapted well here," said Bob Amlingmeyer, of the Inter-American Institute for Agricultural Cooperation, which is managing the program for the U.S. Agency for International Development. "Farmers are realizing that it can become a business."

The scrawny Creole pig traditionally had been an important source of income for Haitian farmers and a ready source of protein for the population.

In the late 1970s, about 800,000 Creole pigs died in an epidemic of swine fever, a fatal and highly contagious disease that produces internal hemorrhaging in the animals. Four years ago, because of fears of swine fever spreading, an additional 400,000 pigs were slaughtered in an action that angered and dismayed farmers.

The U.S. development agency, which helped slaughter the pigs, now is spending $5.8 million to bring to Haiti healthy pigs from American farms, breed them and distribute the piglets free to farmers.

In 2½ years, 10,000 pigs have been distributed through 484 reproduction centers, Amlingmeyer said. Agriculture Minister Menager said he expected there would be a million pigs in Haiti within a couple of years.

"It will re-establish the peasant economy," Amlingmeyer said. "These pigs are becoming a lot more profitable to the farmer and that surely will improve their buying power."

"Prices will start coming down and people with eat more meat," he said.

Initially, there were doubts that the light-skinned American pigs, which at 250 pounds weigh five times as much as the Creole variety, would survive Haiti's tropical climate or a diet of mango peels and refuse.

Haitians joked that the U.S pigs, accustomed to eating grain and sleeping on concrete floors, had a better life than Haitian peasants.

"Bourgeois pigs," they were called.

Amlingmeyer said only the first shipment of pigs received special treatment.

"It's not that pigs cannot grow without cement floors," he said. "What we wanted was to create the best conditions. The cement floor is cleaner and fresher."

The American pigs quickly adapted, however, and now thrive on the dusty Haitian farms eating scraps, though that's not what Amlingmeyer recommends.

"They've adapted to eat anything," he said. "But if they (farmers) want their pigs to grow fat, they'll give them better food. It's an economic decision."

However, Agenor, an agronomist with the Animal Nutrition Society, said farmers may not have much leeway to change the pigs' diet because of a lack of crops to use as feed.

In fact, he said, it might not be such a good idea to vastly expand Haiti's pig population because the country already is hard-pressed to feed the people and other animals that live here.

F-111 fighters landing in Britain 'routine' drill

LONDON (AP) — Eighteen American F-111 fighter-bombers flew into Britain on Wednesday for what the U.S. Air Force called routine NATO exercises.

The F-111s included 12 attack planes and six jets equipped with electronic gear to confuse the enemy. They landed at Boscome Down airfield in western England for Operation Coronet, a NATO exercise designed to rehearse the deployment of British-based U.S. aircraft, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The spokesman, Lt. Col. Bob Brus at Mildenhall Air Base in eastern England, declined to say if the warplanes were connected with possible military action against Libya.

The U.S. government recently expressed renewed concern over what it says is the North African country's support for terrorism, and warned there might be more U.S. action against it.

The U.S. aircraft carrier Forrestal has been ordered to remain on patrol in the Mediterranean Sea at the end of joint exercises with Egypt this week.

Carrier-based jets and 18 British-based F-111s took part in the Apfil 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya, which President Reagan said was in retaliation for Libyan involvement in the bombing of a West Berlin disco that killed two American servicemen and a Turkish woman.

Before the raid, the Air Force said the planes were participating in a four-day NATO exercise that had been planned a year in advance.

The aircraft that landed in England on Wednesday will fly over Britain and Europe before returning to their bases in New Mexico and Idaho on Sept. 24, said Brus. He said the flight crews were accompanied by about 500 technical and support staff.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Office said Wednesday that Libya may have been indirectly involved in the Aug. 3 terrorist attack on a British Royal Air Force base recreation area in Cyprus. The grenade and small arms attack on a beach complex at Akrotiri injured two servicemen's wives.

The Foreign Office said in a statement that "it may have been the work of one of the Mideast groups which in the past have enjoyed material support from Libya."

A previously unknown pro-Libyan group, the Unified Nasserite Organization, claimed responsibility for the attack, but British spokesmen refused to speculate who was behind it.

DEATHS

John Pope

John Pope, 53, of Midland died at a local hospital Tuesday evening.

Services were to be today at 11 a.m. at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Ron Moore officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pope was born July 27, 1933 in El Reno, Okla., where he was reared. He moved to Midland in 1950. In 1952 he entered the Marine Corps. He returned to Midland in 1954 following his discharge and began work with his father at Pope Painting. He continued his work there until 1966 when he became an independent paint and remodeling contractor. In 1978 he and his son formed Lone Star Construction in Houston.

Survivors include his wife, Patricia Pope of Midland; two sons, John Oakley Pope III of Dallas and Joseph Pope of Hunnington; one daughter, Tricianna Kay Pope of Hunnington; his mother, Data Mae Pope of Midland; two brothers, Ronald L. Pope of Arlington and Donald B. Pope of Midland; two sisters, Louise Patterson of Midland and Dail Stone of Odessa; and six grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be Tom Canton, Larry Clark, Mike Watlington, Howard Haynie, Gilbert Bates, and Charlie Wheat.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Arthritis Society or the American Cancer Society.

Joseph Burrell

Joseph Burrell of Midland died early today at his home.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Friday at the First United Methodist Church sanctuary of Midland with burial to be in Fort Worth.

Bobby R. Bearden

Bobby Ray Bearden, 56, of Odessa, died Tuesday in the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Kerrville.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at Ellis Funeral Home chapel, and burial will be later in Mertzon.

Bearden was born Aug. 4, 1930, in McCamey. He was an attorney in Odessa and practiced law in Midland and Odessa for 18 years. Prior to that he worked in the oil fields of West Texas, and served in the Army during the Korean War.

Bearden graduated from McCamey High School, Odessa Junior College, Sul Ross State University and St. Mary's Law School in San Antonio.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ike Bearden of McCamey.

Survivors include his mother, Annie Love Bearden of McCamey; two sons, Thomas Edward Bearden and Bobby Ray Bearden, both of Littleton, Co.; and two sisters, Hazel Mae Green of McCamey and Wilma Helen Hardwick of Odessa.

W.A. McClatchy

HOUSTON — W.A. "Bill" McClatchy of Houston died Tuesday following a brief illness.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Friday at Memorial Oaks Chapel in Houston. Burial will be in Memorial Oaks Cemetery.

He was born Dec. 9, 1928 in Dallas. He was graduated from Texas Tech University and owned and operated McClatchy Van Lines of Houston for the past 25 years.

Survivors include his wife, Jan McClatchy of Houston; two sons, Gary McClatchy and Pete McClatchy, both of Houston; a daughter, Jane Morris of Houston; a step-son, Rick Miller of Houston; a step-daughter, Tracy Miller of Houston; a brother, J.A. McClatchy of Midland; his mother, Rosabell McClatchy of Midland; and one grandchild.

Ruth Little

Ruth Ann Little, 70, of Midland died Wednesday morning at a local hospital.

Services were to be at 1:30 p.m. today at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Al Moreau, pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Little was born Nov. 14, 1915, in Chanute, Kan., where she spent her early life. She moved to San Angelo while in her teens. In 1933 she met and married Melvin Little. They moved to Midland in 1949. Little was Midland Fire Chief before his retirement. He preceded her in death in 1980.

She was a member of the Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include two sons, J.R Little of San Angelo and Dale Little of Midland; two daughters, Marilyn Fisher of Rockport and Linda Crocker of Alvin; her mother, Erma Wyatt of Midland; one brother, Tommy Johnson; two sisters, Rosemary McCarroll of Midland and Nita Stebick of Lubbock; nine grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Lutheran Home of the Permian Basin.

House OKs bill reducing teachers' paperwork

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Wednesday gave preliminary approval to a bill that would reduce the paperwork required of Texas' public school teachers.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Gwyn Shea, R-Irving, would require the State Board of Education, the Texas Education Agency and local school districts to reduce teachers' paperwork.

The bill would prohibit school districts from requiring teachers to write reports on topics other than those covering textbooks, lesson plans, students' grades, attendance and others specifically outlined by law.

"This is a major step forward in attacking this astronomical problem," said Jay Levin, a lobbyist for the Texas State Teachers Association.

Supporters of the legislation, which gained easy approval on the House floor, say it will send a clear message to school officials that legislators want teachers to spend more time teaching and less time filling out reports.

They say provisions in 1984's education reform package, known as House Bill 72, fall short of reducing the paperwork burden on teachers.

But opponents complain that the bill stops short by not requiring punitive action against administrators who do not comply with the legislation.

They also say the bill actually will add to teachers' paperwork by creating more red tape and requiring reports from the Texas Education Agency, which would investigate each district's efforts to reduce paperwork.

The bill would require school districts to include paperwork reduction as part of their training programs for administrators. It also would require the education board to limit each discussion topic in the annual school district performance report to one page.

House Bill 72 requires the education board to consider local school districts' efforts to reduce paperwork when awarding accreditation.

Astronmers will host sky viewing session

From Staff Reports

West Texas Astronomers will host a late summer sky viewing session at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium on Saturday.

Activities will begin at 9 p.m. with a current sky orientation in the planetariaum, followed by outdoor viewing through club members telescopes. Moons of Jupiter, rings of Saturn, polar caps on Mars and the phase of Venus are among the celestial phenomena in position for viewing.

Public planetarium programs are presented at 2 and 3:30 p.m. Sundays and at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

"The Dinosaur and the Asteriod" will be presented through Wednesday, Sept. 3; and "Tales of the Zodiac" will be Sunday, Sept. 7.

The next regular meeting of the West Texas Astronomers will be in the planetarium on Thursday, Sept. 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting will include a presentation of photographs of Mars and a program on the study and exploration of Venus.

CRIME

One homicide has been reported since the end of June, and one possible homicide is still under investigation, and could be presented to the Midland County grand jury.

Luckey said the small increase in burglaries was due to a special program that allows officers to drive their patrol cars home.

"The reason our burglaries are down (compared to the average statewide) is because of our personal car program," Luckey said. "Seventy percent of the (patrol) cars on the street at any one time are off duty, but the burglars don't know that."

Some law enforcement officials concerned about the worsening crime problem in Texas have pointed the finger at a criminal justice system that fails to keep hard-core criminals locked up long enough.

Luckey said he does not blame prison or parole officials, but said early paroles undoubtedly contribute to crime, especially major crime.

"Every busload that comes in the front door they have to let one out the back door," Luckey said. "It's not their fault, it's just a horrible system.

"Your early releases from there are going to hit you; well over 50 percent of your people that get out are your repeat offenders in the major crimes we're talking about."

Rucker can go before high court

From Staff Reports

Rucker

Midland lawyer Dean Rucker, partner in the father-son law firm of Rucker & Rucker, has been admitted to practice law before the United States Supreme Court. He was sponsored by his father, Hal Rucker.

Dean Rucker, a 31-year-old native Midlander, earned the law degree in 1980 from St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio and studied at the undergraduate level at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Rucker is chairman of the Midland County Republican Party and holds directorships in the Alamo YMCA, Midland Apartment Association, Community and Senior Services Inc., and Trinity School of Midland Alumni Association.

He holds memberships in the State Bar of Texas, Midland County Bar Association, Texas Trial Lawyers Association, and the Midland County Young Lawyers Association. Rucker has been admitted to practice law in the Northern and Western Districts of U.S. District Court and before the Fifth Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals.

TAC will conduct seminar

From Staff Reports

MARFA — The Texas Aeronautics Commission and the High Sky Derby USA will conduct a six-hour seminar on "Aircraft Refueling Safety" at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 9, in the Conference Room of the United States Border Patrol Headquarters in Marfa.

The course will be taught by John C. Eslinger, TAC education coordinator.

"Although the seminar is geared toward those involved in flight-line service and fueling operations at airport fixed-base operations, it is also important for all pilots to update their knowledge and awareness of the subject for their own protection and safety-survival," said Velma Lee Barnett Copeland, former governor of the eight-state South Central Section of The Ninety-Nines Inc., an international organization of women pilots. "Flying is serious business."

The six-hour seminar, which TAC says is "rated extremely informative," offers a detailed view of flight-line service procedures and techniques through the film "Professional Service Training" and the study guide "Refueling and Quality Control Procedures for Airport Service and Support Operations."

Those interested in attending the flight-line refueling seminar may contact Mrs. Copeland by writing High Sky Derby USA, P.O. Box 1493, Marfa, Texas 79843 or by telephoning her at 915-729-3409.

Fund raiser to be held at water park

From Staff Reports

A fashion show, a dunking tank and other entertainment activites will highlight the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce's convention and visitors bureaus Sunday fund raiser at Water Wonderland.

"The purpose for this fund raiser is to promote the efforts made by the two organizations in co-sponsoring the first annual Midland-Odessa Music Festival," said a spokesman for the Midland chamber's convention and visitors bureau.

Water Wonderland will be open to the public from noon to 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Water Wonderland will donate $1 for each paying guest that enters the water park," the spokesman said.

Other colleges and universities represented include the University of Texas at Arlington (4), West Texas State University (4) and Southwest Texas State University (4).

Holland said the MISD hired 20 teachers who received degrees out-of-state.

Among those colleges and universities represented are Penn State University, University of Arkansas, Quachita Baptist University, University of Arizona, University of Florida, University of Southern Florida, Dominican College of San Rafael, DePauw University, Mississippi College, University of Missouri at Columbia, Duke University, New Mexico State University, Bethany Nazarene College, University of Oklahoma, Southeastern Oklahoma State University, Southeastern State College, Oklahoma State University, George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University, and University of Wisconsin.

With an anticipated completion by late fall, the grant includes funds for a wooden playground, aerobic equipment, fenced swimming area, universal weights and equipment for organized sports.

"Physical fitness plays a key role in the development of young adults by helping to build not only their bodies, but also their self-esteem and confidence," said Jackie Carter, executive director of HSCR. "The new facilities and equipment will enable us to expand our current program on the ranch grounds, and provide more direct guidance in the area."

High Sky Childrens Ranch is a non-profit, basic care residential facility located six miles northwest of Midland. The ranch, opened in 1963, provides a home-like environment for abused, neglected and abandoned children in the Permian Basin.

The mission of the ranch is to help the child deal with his or her emotional grief, and resolve conflicts within the family to enable the child to return home, or prepare for the choice of adoption, and also prepare the child for becoming a responsible adult. In 1985, the ranch was relicensed to care for both boys and girls, including brothers and sisters.

Thus if Johnston's proposal is effected by the government, roughly 20 percent of the AFDC beneifts in Midland would cease to exist in the face of 14.2 percent Midland unemployment rates.

While the 1985 TDHS annual report states a legislative resolution passed during the 1984 special session gave the TDHS authority to use unexpended funds to keep all income assistance (financial eligibility) workers on the payroll, unwanted budget cuts threaten to consume 404 administrative positions statewide.

Ms. Bradford said Johnston did request a waiver from White to allow the TDHS to fill jobs in the income assistance office which handles requests for food stamps, among other things.

She said the office has not received a "no" from the governor yet.

But workers at the Midland TDHS office have complained of being overwrought with requests and not being able to handle them all in a timely manner.

Ms. Bradford said she realizes the problem is there, but wants others to realize it's not just in Midland — it's everywhere.

LHS band concert, ice cream supper postponed

From Staff Reports

The Robert E. Lee High School band concert and ice cream supper scheduled for this evening has been postponed because of the weather.

The concert will instead be held at 6:30 p.m. next Tuesday next to the practice field at Lee High School. The Alamo Junior High, Goddard Junior High, and Lee Freshman Band will also perform.

Olive oil kept properly has longer shelf life than other oils

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. About olive oil: Does it go rancid? How long can one keep it once the container is opened? Should olive oil be stored in the refrigerator after it's opened? Mrs. John Foze, Largo, Fla.

A. According to information provided by the International Olive Oil Council, olive oil, which is essentially a fruit juice, has a longer shelf life than other oils. If it's kept properly capped, allowing no air to enter, olive oil will stay good for about two years. It should be protected from light and kept in a cool cupboard.

Refrigeration, although not harmful, is not necessary and may make the oil cloudy and thick. If this occurs, bring the oil to room temperature before serving.

The shelf life of olive oil is not thought to vary with the grade of olive oil, be it pure, virgin or extra virgin.

Q. I've noticed that recipes used by our grandmothers required less sugar and salt than what we use today. It seems that our cravings for salt and sugar have increased over the years. Has anyone determined just what one teaspoon of salt equals in milligrams of sodium? If the public knew this answer, we might be able to cut back when cooking from scratch. Mrs. A. Kasperski, Columbia, Mo.

A. Salt is also known as sodium chloride. It is composed of those two elements — sodium and chloride. Forty percent of the salt molecule is sodium, and 60 percent is chloride.

One teaspoon of salt is about five grams. There are 1,000 milligrams (mg) in every gram, which means there are 5,000 mg, approximately, of salt in a teaspoon. Since 40 percent of salt is sodium, in one teaspoon of salt there would be about 2,000 mg of sodium.

In the "Nutrition Book" by Jane Brody, the author states, "The actual physiological requirement for sodium, 220 mg a day, is the amount in only a tenth of a teaspoon of salt."

Sufficient sodium is naturally present in food and water to meet everyone's needs except for people who work or exercise strenuously in hot weather. But as you have pointed out, our craving for salt has increased over the years. The government is now advising us to reverse the process.

Q. I'm seeking information covering equipment and/or preparation of meat for outside spit roasting of a whole pig. This information is hard to come by. Blaine Anderson, Salt Lake City, Utah

Q. How can I get information on how to roast a suckling pig? At what age are they slaughtered? Where does one buy them? I've never seen any for sale.

A. For information on the procedures for roasting a whole pig or a suckling pig, write National Pork Producers Council, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, Iowa 50306. A paper entitled "Pig Roast" will give you all the information you need on roasting a mature, whole pig.

Suckling pigs are slaughtered at the age of 6 to 8 weeks, when they weigh 20 to 35 pounds. The Pork Council does not have a list of suppliers of suckling pigs and suggests you contact a local retail meat manager or a local farm bureau organization for a source.

Ask the Pork Council for their paper entitled "How to Roast a Suckling Pig." The little pigs come with their heads attached. According to the directions, "Place a block of wood in the pig's mouth to brace it if an apple is to be placed in the mouth after roasting. Cover the ears with aluminum foil to keep them from browning too much.

"When done, remove the pig from the pan, place a red apple in the mouth, cranberries or cherries in the eye sockets and serve on a bed of parsley or watercress."

READER'S SUGGESTION: Mrs. Lillian Darden, Annapolis, Md.: "I have a suggestion for readers with recurrent problems with bugs in their pantry invading the food. After cleaning storage areas thoroughly, before putting any new boxes or bags into the cabinets, put the product in the freezer for 24 hours.

"This means pancake flour, biscuit mix, piecrust mix, any kind of flour, dry dog food and cat food, etc. I have done this for a number of years and it works. If any insect eggs are in the glue of the package or seams, it kills them."

Calcium important for women

By MARIAN FARR

The food industry is now marketing a number of calcium-fortified foods to nutrition-conscious women who believe they may be at risk for developing osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis is a disease of brittle and porous bones that affects millions of middle-aged to elderly women, making them more prone to fractures. Calcium-fortified foods currently on the market include some brands of diet carbonated soft drinks and non-carbonated soft drink mixes, bread and flour. Most are prominently labeled and advertised as having added calcium.

Eating calcium-fortified products in a balanced diet that still includes dairy products may be helpful, especially since the Recomended Daily Allowance of 800 milligrams of calcium per day is thought by many medical experts to be too low.

However, when dairy products are replaced with calcium-fortified foods, other important nutrients from dairy products such as protein, vitamin D, riboflavin, B-6 and B-12 are lost.

It's especially important that teenagers and children eat dairy products both for the calcium and the other nutrients they provide. Some of the powdered drink mixes supply 100 percent of the RDA for calcium, but other fortified foods provide a smaller percentage. For example, two slices of bread made with calcium-fortified flour supplies only 10 percent of the RDA for calcium.

Adults can be sure of getting sufficient calcium by drinking the equivalent of 2½-cups of milk each day. Children younger than 9 need two to three cups, 9-12-year-olds should have three cups and teenagers need four cups of milk a day.

A cup of yogurt, 1½-ounces of cheese, 1½-cups of ice cream or two cups of cottage cheese all supply the same amount of calcium as a cup of milk.

Consumers should also realize that eating calcium-fortified foods will not necessarily prevent osteoporosis, since general nutrition, hormone balance and exercise in addition to calcium intake have all been found to affect the condition.

While calcium-rich dairy products are a necessary part of a balanced diet at any age, when it comes to preventing osteoporosis, they may have their most critical effect early in life.

A study conducted recently at the University of Pittsburgh measured the density of certain bones in middle-aged women and found that those who drank milk with every meal up until the age of 35 had significantly more minerals in their bones than those who rarely drank it.

The study emphasizes that fact that bones reach their lifetime peak for mineral density during early adulthood and then start to deteriorate. The peak mineral density is determined by genetics. But the amount of milk a person drinks during the first 20-30 years is believed to determine whether a person's bones attain optimum desnity.

Whether or not a woman chooses buy special calcium-fortified foods, probably the best thing she can do for herself, or that can be done for children, is to make sure there is plenty of milk and other dairy products included in the diet.

Booklet offers free Social Security tips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Did you know that Social Security can help provide for your dependent parents age 62 or older in the event of your death? Or that a divorced person who was married 10 years or more to someone insured under Social Security is eligible for benefits at age 62?

Facts about Social Security benefits are in a free booklet, "Your Social Security," available at the Consumer Information Center.

The booklet describes the range of benefits offered and explains how and when to apply for them.

Many new parents have been receiving letters from companies offering to get Social Security cards for infants — for a fee. Brides also have heard from the same companies offering to help them change their names on their Social Security cards.

In fact, the booklet advises, if you need to get your child a card or correct one for yourself, you can get a free application from your local Social Security office.

For retirement benefits, the size of your monthly check depends on when you retire. You can retire at age 62, but your Social Security benefits will be reduced permanently. Sixty-five is the age to begin receiving full benefits, and if you work past 65, you can earn up to an annual limit and still draw benefits.

Mousse not anything fancy

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

About 10 years ago, my oldest child fell in love with chocolate mousse. Whenever we ate at a certain favorite restaurant, she would order the mousse, whether or not she actually ate anything else. (In a restaurant it's mousse; at home it's pudding.)

We have never been able to make it properly at home, however, so when I found a box of mousse mix in the supermarket, I couldn't resist taking it home to try out.

Jell-O Mousse mix is one of the latest products from the General Foods company. (Of course, the comparison between Jell-O mousse and Jell-O pudding is unavoidable.) We sampled a box of chocolate fudge flavor — in our house, the theory is, the more chocolate, the better. And of course we checked out the price and the advertising accuracy too.

A 3.5-ounce box of Jell-O mousse mix, which makes four ½-cup servings, the label claims, costs 89 cents. A 4-ounce box of ordinary Jell-O pudding — in chocolate or any other flavor — costs 49 cents and also makes four servings. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising claims the mousse is "rich and luscious," which is pretty standard with products of this sort. The label also carries suggestions on making ordinary chocolate mousse into something more glamorous, like Mocha Almond Mousse (add instant coffee and almost extract), Mousse A L'Orange (add orange liqueur), Chocolate Chip Mousse (add — you guessed it — chocolate chips) or Nutty Mousse (chopped toasted almonds or walnuts.)

The product is easy to prepare, too — pour milk into a deep bowl, add powdered mousse mix, beat with electric mixer, pour into dishes, chill and there it is. That's nearly as easy as making ordinary Jell-O pudding.

The taste test proved to be a disappointment to the mousse fan in our house. While the product rated an "OK," it wasn't any better than that. In fact, the packaged mousse was described as "Jell-O pudding, a little firmer and with air holes."

If you like Jell-O pudding, you'll probably like the mousse. However, don't expect something fancy because you won't get it.

BETTER BUSINESS

Medigap closes gaps

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Since "Medigap" insurance is a relatively new and often misunderstood type of insurance, the Better Business Bureau advises consumers to get all the facts before they sign up for coverage. Medigap insurance has emerged as a new type of supplementary coverage to help close the gap between older Americans' actual medical costs and the amount Medicare is willing to pay for health services.

However, prospective carriers should keep in mind that Medigap is generally unwilling or unable to pay fees not approved by Medicare; for instance, Medigap does not provide coverage for nursing homes, prescription drugs or health supplies. While most insurance agents and companies operate ethically, some unethical agents and groups deceive elderly persons into buying ineffective, overpriced or duplicate coverage.

Under a recently enacted federal law, Medicare supplement policies must, among other things: clearly disclose the term of the policy, including benefits, exceptions and renewal provisions; supplement Part A, hospital insurance, for a specified period of time; cover 90 percent of all hospital expenses for 365 days after all Medicare impatient coverage is exhausted; cover at least 20 percent of the eligible Medicare expenses under Part B regarding physician and surgeon charges; and allow the buyer to cancel a policy within 30 days of purchase for mail order policies and 10 days for other policies.

The BBB's booklet, "Tips on Medigap Insurance," answers many of the questions consumers have about this type of insurance. To request a booklet, call 563-1880 or 1-800-592-4433.

People skeptical of advertising industry

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — Advertisers have a long way to go before they convince consumers to buy their products. According to a poll conducted at Walt Disney World's Epcot Center, many people are skeptical as to the truthfulness of the industry.

When more than 10,770 adult visitors to Walt Disney World were asked, "How truthful would you say advertising is in general?", nearly half the respondents — 49 percent — said "sometimes." Only 27 percent felt that advertising is "always or usually truthful."

Twenty percent of those polled said they consider advertising to be either "usually untruthful" or a flat "never truthful."

DEAR ABBY

Judgment error costs girl her parents' trust

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl. I have a great family and I love them dearly. The thing I want most is to have my parents trust me. One incident made me feel I lost their trust completely. Here it is:

My parents went out one evening and told me I could have three friends over (my best girlfriend and two boys). I agreed to stay in the house with my guests. Later when my friends arrived and my parents were gone, the incident happened.

While my girlfriend and I were talking in my bedroom, the two boys got into my parents' liquor cabinet. They were having some drinks when my parents walked in.

Dad handled it very well. He took me aside and said, "I think it's time for your friends to leave." As I looked at my dad I could see on his face how very disappointed he was in me. I felt just awful! Later we talked about what happened very briefly.

The next weekend my parents had planned to go out of town, but they canceled the trip, saying, "We don't think we can trust you to be by yourself."

I quickly reminded them that it wasn't me who got into the liquor cabinet. Then they said (unconvincingly), "Well, we can't trust your friends, then."

Abby, why should my parents make me feel like they don't trust me? It was my so-called friends they couldn't trust. Please tell moms and dads to trust their children until they prove to you that they can't be trusted. — TRUSTWORTHY DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Because of that "incident," you have proven to your parents that they can't trust your judgment. You had no business sitting in your bedroom talking to your girlfriend while the two boys were left alone to do whatever they pleased. (Apparently you didn't know the boys very well or you wouldn't have left them alone in the room with the liquor cabinet!) Your judgment was poor, so don't blame your parents for not trusting you.

DEAR ABBY: I am completely confused. While I was in Canada recently, a person said, "I'm not an American; I'm a Canadian."

Then, the July Fourth celebration confused me even more. I always thought America was a continent, that I lived in North America and was a U.S. citizen.

I always thought Canadians and Mexicans were Americans, too. When did all this change? Respectfully — ALICE A. (AGE 71), ELYRIA, OHIO

DEAR ALICE: Nothing has changed. You are a citizen of the United States of America, which is located on the continent of North America, which we share with two other countries — Canada and Mexico. The inhabitants of Canada call themselves Canadians and the inhabitants of Mexico refer to themselves as Mexicans (fortunately) because if they called themselves "Americans" as we do, it would be even more confusing.

We should more accurately be called North Americans as opposed to those who live on the continent of South America, who call themselves South Americans. Wouldn't it be confusing if Brazilians, Argentinians and Colombians called themselves "Americans," too? Fortunately, they don't.

DEAR ABBY: A member of our family is notoriously cheap. Whenever there is a wedding or shower in the family, Dolores (not her real name) says, "Put my name on the card, and I'll pay you later."

With Dolores "later" must mean "never" because she has yet to come up with any money. Meanwhile, her name is on all the cards along with the rest of us who actually pay our fair share for the gifts.

How should this be handled? Reminding her hasn't helped. She's always a little short until next payday. — A MEMBER OF THE FAMILY

DEAR MEMBER: The next time Dolores asks you to put her name on the card, tell her that her name will go on the card AFTER she has paid up. And you won't have to tell her why.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Villagers who fled gas disaster now getting food, medical help

By ARTHUR MAX

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Villagers who fled the gas disaster in northwest Cameroon have begun receiving food and medical help by airlift, while scientists examined the murky volcanic lake that released the lethal cloud.

Officials said Wednesday that nearly all of the more than 1,500 dead were buried, most of them near where they were found, and that the bodies of several victims were flown to Yaounde for autopsies.

Rescue operations, burial details and the transport of relief supplies have been the responsibility of Cameroon's army. The rugged terrain, unpaved roads and unreliable communications around remote Lake Nios have hampered relief efforts.

Cameroon's army was strained to the limit to deliver relief supplies, which included aid from overseas to help this West African nation. Food and medicine began reaching refugees of the natural disaster by plane on Wednesday.

"Our first priority is to set our priorities," said Jean-Marcel Mengueme, chairman of the government's crisis committee.

One Western diplomat said the army, which has three U.S.-built Hercules transport planes and a few smaller aircraft, was having difficulty dealing with the influx of supplies.

"It's a problem," said the diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity. "This government never faced anything on this scale before."

Burying thousands of dead animals rotting in the tropical heat also was a primary concern because of fears they might spark an epidemic.

Scientists believe a volcanic tremor under Lake Nios released a giant bubble of deadly gas that rose to the surface and spread over the area last Thursday night.

On Wednesday, they analyzed the lake's water, which turned from a brilliant blue to a murky reddish brown after the disaster.

It still was not known exactly what gas killed nearly all life around the small lemon-shaped lake, although scientists speculated that steam laced with toxic gases wafted over a 10-square-mile area, burning and smothering victims.

"I sent a team yesterday to take samples of the water," said Bienvenu Fouda, secretary-general of the Ministry of Mines. "They will report and make proposals."

Yenwo said area residents had been warned not to drink local water. He said the army provided tanks of purified water but that bottled water was urgently needed.

Army troops evacuated about 3,000 survivors of the gas cloud, but had trouble sealing off the area around the lake to prevent people from returning home.

About 2,000 soldiers have closed off the area, which is about 200 miles northwest of Yaounde, the capital.

Most refugees moved in with relatives outside the stricken area. A few hundred homeless people were evacuated to the town of Wum, about 20 miles from the disaster site, said Ivo Yenwo, an aide to President Paul Biya.

In Washington, the U.S. Agency for International Development said the United States will airlift 15 tons of emergency supplies by week's end, including 250 family tents, acid-proof suits and gas detectors.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan wrote to Biya to express his sorrow at the tragedy.

Deputy State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Washington initially spent about $250,000 for assistance and expects that figure to rise. He said teams of U.S. doctors and scientists were en route to Cameroon.

A 17-member Israeli medical team that arrived in Cameroon on Monday reached the hospital in Nkambe, 60 miles east of Wum, while a six-member French scientific team flew to the provincial capital of Bamenda on Tuesday.

Officials said Canada, Spain, Italy and the 12-nation European Common Market also were sending aid.

Fouda said he planned a study to determine areas of high risk and to encourage people to move away from areas of frequent volcanic activity.

"All this is a volcanic system," he said in an interview, sweeping his hand across a map of northwest Cameroon eastward toward the border with Chad.

The last major volcanic eruption was two years ago in Foumbot, 60 miles southeast of Lake Nios.

Terrorists warn that operations to free hostages would cost lives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Islamic Jihad terrorist group today warned that any U.S. military operation to free American hostages held in Lebanon would cost them their lives.

The warning came in a typewritten Arabic-language statement delivered to the west Beirut office of a Western news agency along with a snapshot of American hostage David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif.

"We warn everyone who contemplates any military or security foolhardinesss to free the hostages, because his as well as their fate would be much worse than the U.S. Marines (killed) on the outskirts of Islamic Beirut," the statement said.

That was a reference to the Oct. 23, 1983, suicide bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut in which 241 American servicemen perished. Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for that bombing, and for a twin bombing that killed 58 French soldiers the same day.

"Let all know we shall have no mercy. We shall not compromise in that matter and the reckoning will be very severe," said the statement from the shawdowy Shiite Moslem extremist group believed linked to Iran.

The Islamic Jihad statement said "all plots and intrigues hatched nowadays by local and international hands under the sponsorship of the great Satan to reveal the fate of the hostages we hold shall fail."

"The great Satan" is a phrase often used by Shiite zealots to refer to the United States.

AP Laserphoto

A photo released by the Islamic Jihad organization Thursday beleived to be that of American hostage David Jacobson, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif. Jacobson was kidnapped May 28, 1985. Islamic Jihad claims it holds him.

"We lay the full responsibility on the ignorant American government, and we call the attention of the families of the hostages that we do not bear the responsibility for the lives of the captives after this statement.

"Pardoned is the one who forewarned," the statement concluded.

The photo accompanying the statement showed a bearded Jacobsen from the waist up, wearing a striped black-and-white shirt and staring straight into the camera. He wore a watch on his left wrist.

In addition to Jacobsen, director of the American University of Beirut at the time of his kidnapping, the other Americans missing in Beirut are:

Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the university; and William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad claimed last October it had killed Buckley, but no body ever was produced. Kidnapped university librarian Peter Kilburn was found slain April 17.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest from Joliet, Ill., was released July 26 after nearly 19 months in captivity.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, gave Jenco a seven-minute videotape to carry with him to freedom on which Jacobsen appealed to the U.S. government to meet the kidnappers' conditions.

Jacobsen said on the tape that he did not know his captors' demands, but "Father Jenco has been given instructions for our government."

Islamic Jihad, which has issued three statements since Jenco's release, had previously demanded that 17 comrades held in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in that oil-rich Persian Gulf Arab nation Dec. 12, 1983, be freed. Kuwait has refused to free any of the 17 convicts.

Haitians breeding U.S. pigs hope to improve diet of residents there

EDITOR'S NOTE — Pigs from U.S. farms have been introduced in Haiti and peasants are clamoring for them in hopes of improving their economic lot.

By YVES COLON

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — U.S. pigs are being bred in this Caribbean nation to replace native pigs wiped out by the hundreds of thousands in the late 1970s by African swine fever.

About 60,000 pigs — bigger and fatter than the tough Creole variety they replaced — have been given to Haitian farmers, and projections of a 10- or 15-fold increase offer the prospect of an improved diet for residents of the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

But one local agronomist, Frederick Agenor, doubts Haiti can feed such an increased number of pigs because it is so short of food for its 6 million people.

The government, however, is going ahead with the plan.

"Everybody is asking for a pig, and we're doing everything we can to meet that growing demand," Minister of Agriculture Gustave Menager said in an interview. "We cannot satisfy everyone who wants a pig of his own."

"They've adapted well here," said Bob Amlingmeyer, of the Inter-American Institute for Agricultural Cooperation, which is managing the program for the U.S. Agency for International Development. "Farmers are realizing that it can become a business."

The scrawny Creole pig traditionally had been an important source of income for Haitian farmers and a ready source of protein for the population.

"They've adapted well here. Farmers are realizing that it can become a business. ...It will re-establish the peasant economy. These pigs are becoming a lot more profitable to the farmer and that surely will improve their buying power. ...Prices will start coming down and people with eat more meat."

— Bob Amlingmeyer

In the late 1970s, about 800,000 Creole pigs died in an epidemic of swine fever, a fatal and highly contagious disease that produces internal hemorrhaging in the animals. Four years ago, because of fears of swine fever spreading, an additional 400,000 pigs were slaughtered in an action that angered and dismayed farmers.

The U.S. development agency, which helped slaughter the pigs, now is spending $5.8 million to bring to Haiti healthy pigs from American farms, breed them and distribute the piglets free to farmers.

In 2½ years, 10,000 pigs have been distributed through 484 reproduction centers, Amlingmeyer said. Agriculture Minister Menager said he expected there would be a million pigs in Haiti within a couple of years.

"It will re-establish the peasant economy," Amlingmeyer said. "These pigs are becoming a lot more profitable to the farmer and that surely will improve their buying power."

"Prices will start coming down and people with eat more meat," he said.

Initially, there were doubts that the light-skinned American pigs, which at 250 pounds weigh five times as much as the Creole variety, would survive Haiti's tropical climate or a diet of mango peels and refuse.

Haitians joked that the U.S pigs, accustomed to eating grain and sleeping on concrete floors, had a better life than Haitian peasants.

"Bourgeois pigs," they were called.

Amlingmeyer said only the first shipment of pigs received special treatment.

"It's not that pigs cannot grow without cement floors," he said. "What we wanted was to create the best conditions. The cement floor is cleaner and fresher."

The American pigs quickly adapted, however, and now thrive on the dusty Haitian farms eating scraps, though that's not what Amlingmeyer recommends.

"They've adapted to eat anything," he said. "But if they (farmers) want their pigs to grow fat, they'll give them better food. It's an economic decision."

However, Agenor, an agronomist with the Animal Nutrition Society, said farmers may not have much leeway to change the pigs' diet because of a lack of crops to use as feed.

In fact, he said, it might not be such a good idea to vastly expand Haiti's pig population because the country already is hard-pressed to feed the people and other animals that live here.

F-111 fighters landing in Britain 'routine' drill

LONDON (AP) — Eighteen American F-111 fighter-bombers flew into Britain on Wednesday for what the U.S. Air Force called routine NATO exercises.

The F-111s included 12 attack planes and six jets equipped with electronic gear to confuse the enemy. They landed at Boscome Down airfield in western England for Operation Coronet, a NATO exercise designed to rehearse the deployment of British-based U.S. aircraft, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The spokesman, Lt. Col. Bob Brus at Mildenhall Air Base in eastern England, declined to say if the warplanes were connected with possible military action against Libya.

The U.S. government recently expressed renewed concern over what it says is the North African country's support for terrorism, and warned there might be more U.S. action against it.

The U.S. aircraft carrier Forrestal has been ordered to remain on patrol in the Mediterranean Sea at the end of joint exercises with Egypt this week.

Carrier-based jets and 18 British-based F-111s took part in the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya, which President Reagan said was in retaliation for Libyan involvement in the bombing of a West Berlin disco that killed two American servicemen and a Turkish woman.

Before the raid, the Air Force said the planes were participating in a four-day NATO exercise that had been planned a year in advance.

The aircraft that landed in England on Wednesday will fly over Britain and Europe before returning to their bases in New Mexico and Idaho on Sept. 24, said Brus. He said the flight crews were accompanied by about 500 technical and support staff.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Office said Wednesday that Libya may have been indirectly involved in the Aug. 3 terrorist attack on a British Royal Air Force base recreation area in Cyprus. The grenade and small arms attack on a beach complex at Akrotiri injured two servicemen's wives.

The Foreign Office said in a statement that "it may have been the work of one of the Mideast groups which in the past have enjoyed material support from Libya."

A previously unknown pro-Libyan group, the Unified Nasserite Organization, claimed responsibility for the attack, but British spokesmen refused to speculate who was behind it.

Narcotics agent in Mexico detained because he'd 'overstepped bounds'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government said U.S. narcotics agent Victor Cortez Jr., overstepped the strict bounds set for American drug police operating in Mexico and that authorities were justified in detaining him earlier this month.

Responding to a U.S. protest over the incident made on Aug. 18, the Foreign Ministry said in a diplomatic note made public Wednesday that police in Guadalajara had detained Cortez "to establish his identity and clarify his conduct."

The United States claims that the 34-year-old Drug Enforcement Administration agent was "illegally detained, interrogated and tortured" with electric shots while he and a man identified as a DEA informant were in custody Aug. 13 in Mexico's second largest city.

On Tuesday, the Attorney General's office charged 11 Jalisco state policemen with abusing their authority and injuring Cortez. The Attorney General's office asked a criminal court judge in Guadalajara to order their arrest.

Mexico's response to the U.S. protest mentioned the charges filed against the policemen and a medical report that said Cortez suffered bruises on the stomach and right shoulder, but complained about his conduct and cited government limitations on DEA activity in Mexico.

Although Cortez had been issued consular credentials at the request of the U.S. Embassy, he was not carrying them at the time of his detention and "was engaged in activities that are obviously and evidently unrelated to the consular function," the Mexican note said.

It said he was "in the company of a person known for his criminal background (Antonio Garate Bustamente) and that (who), according to Mr. Cortez' own declaration, was his collaborator."

Garate Bustamente, a Mexican, has been identified as a DEA informant.

In addition, Cortez was driving a car with license plates belonging to another vehicle and "had in his possession prohibited weapons," among them a semi-automatic rifle and a 9 mm submachine gun, weapons that can legally be used only by the Mexican military, the note said.

"Certainly, it is of concern to the government of the United States as it is to the government of Mexico that officials of the Drug Enforcement Administration...engage in functions unrelated to those for which they have been authorized," the Foreign Ministry note said.

It said Mexico, at U.S. request, allows DEA agents as part of embassy or consular personnel so they can engage "in strictly limited activity, that is, the exchange of information with Attorney General's office authorities on the combat of narcotics trafficking, a task of interest to both sides."

The note did not elaborate on how such information is to be gathered.

U.S. accused of planning a Libyan strike

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party daily Pravda today said the United States was planning "another piratic sally" against Libya, and that accusations the Arab state was involved in terrorism were groundless.

"The U.S.A. is again entertaining plans for a large-scale strike on Libya," Pravda reported.

U.S. military jets bombed the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi on April 15, and President Reagan explained the action as retaliation for alleged Libyan involvement in terrorist acts.

A high-ranking U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Monday in Washington that contingency plans have been drawn up for a second air raid on Libya because of purported new evidence that Col. Moammar Gadhafi's government is again masterminding terrorist plots.

Egypt and the United States are carrying out joint air and sea maneuvers in the Mediterranean, which Libya has called a "provocation."

On Tuesday, U.S. officials said the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal was ordered to remain on patrol in the Mediterranean after the five-day exercise, which was to end today.

"This time Libya is not only accused without any grounds of its complicity in the terrorist actions which took place in various states," Pravda said.

"Hatching another piratic sally, the Reagan administration leaks to the press concoctions about evidence in the possession of the U.S.A. on new 'terrorist intentions of Libya' and uses these homemade concoctions for whipping up a campaign of threats against a sovereign Arab country," it said.

Pravda said U.S. press reports quoted the unidentified Washington source as saying the administration was planning the attack to scare the Libyan people.

"To scare means to bury under missile blasts, as was the case in April, new victims from among the civilian population," Pravda said.

Reactor changes 'guarantee' for Soviets' safety

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Another nuclear disaster like the one at Chernobyl cannot happen in the Soviet Union because of modifications made to that kind of reactor since the April 26 accident, a Soviet atomic expert said.

"The improvements which have already been introduced make this (type of) reactor safe and are an absolute guarantee against a recurrence of such an accident," Armen A. Abagyan of the Soviet Ministry of Energy and Electrification said Wednesday.

Abagyan, head of the ministry's Nuclear Power Station Institute, also told reporters covering the International Atomic Energy Agency conference reviewing the Chernobyl disaster that the experiment that caused the accident at the Ukrainian power plant had also been performed there two years ago.

He said the recent improvements made to Chernobyl-type reactors "are the most rigid ones which are required to avoid a repetition of this (accident)," but did not disclose what they were.

"These reactors are in our country where we live, where our children and their children will live," he said. "Do you really think that we will allow to operate reactors that could repeat the same story?"

On Monday, Valery A. Legasov, the Soviet delegation chief to the conference, acknowledged that half of the country's Chernobyl-type reactors had been shut down for technical modifications.

An annex to the Soviet report on the accident presented to the conference the same day indicated there were 18 reactors of that design in the Soviet Union including the four at Chernobyl.

Explosions and a fire in Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor released radiation that spread over Europe and gradually worked its way around the world.

Soviet officials say 31 people have died from the accident, hundreds more were injured and more than 100,000 evacuated.

On Tuesday, Morris Rosen, the International Atomic Energy Agency's director of nuclear safety, said up to 25,000 people in the western Soviet Union could die of cancers caused by the Chernobyl accident during the next 70 years.

He said, however, that the estimate was a theoretical figure based on Soviet calculations disclosed in private meetings, and said the actual number of cancer deaths linked to Chernobyl-released radiation could be much lower.

The Soviet report said Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor was brought down to low power on April 25 during a planned test of how long one of the generators it supplied would keep going if its steam supply were cut off.

The report said a key mistake was made when workers allowed the reactor to keep running even though the emergency cooling system had been shut down. Emergency warning systems were also shut down.

When asked on Wednesday what happened to the reactor operators, Abagyan replied, "they were punished for violent violations" of safety provisions.

But he refused to say how, noting with a chuckle "I am not an expert in this field."

Abagyan said that when the same experiment was carried out at Chernobyl two years ago "there were no deviations" from safety rules.

Dan Beninson, chairman of an IAEA working group on dispersion of radioactive particles from the damaged reactor, said he learned from meetings with the Soviets that bone marrow transplants for radiation victims is "not a method without any risk."

Pope refutes polls indicating Satan out of Christian consciousness

By SAMUEL KOO

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The devil exists and "is a cosmic liar and murderer," says Pope John Paul II, going up against polls that indicate Satan has largely crept out of Christian consciousness.

The pontiff addressed himself to Satan in the last of a series of summer sermons that began with discussions of angels.

John Paul maintained that the devil is still very much in the world, "tempting men to evil...to turn them away from the law of God."

He invoked stark Biblical images that portray the devil as an unclean spirit, tempter, evil one, anti-Christ, lion, dragon, or serpent.

Italian newspapers and magazines seized on the sermons — the first papal pronouncement on the subject in nearly 15 years — running special features and drawings of a grotesque creature with horns and tail and armed with a trident battling a white-robed John Paul.

The pope's explanation of the origin and meaning of devil came at the end of six weeks of teachings on God's creation of "all things seen and unseen," including angels.

The devil, in the Roman Catholic Church's teaching, is a fallen angel, a potent force in constant struggle with good, trying to tip the balance of morality in his favor. John Paul's description stuck closely to that traditional line.

But the pope's sermons made headlines because church doctrine on the devil has largely gone out of fashion over the past two centuries.

Many theologians today view the devil as a metaphor used to explain the presence of evil in man and in the world. Polls in several European countries over the past 15 years have shown that most Catholics do not take the doctrine of the devil seriously.

John Paul said he wanted to prepare followers for the end of the world, as prophesied in the Bible, and to "clarify the true faith of the church against those who pervert it by exaggerating the importance of the devil or by denying or minimizing his malevolent power."

Monsignor Corrado Balducci, a Vatican expert on demonology, said the pope's lecture was designed to restore "the rightful perspective" to the church's doctrine of the devil.

Quoting from the Bible, the pope described devils as angels who have sinned and subsequently are "cast in the gloomy abysses of hell" by God. But because of the sin of "our first parents, this fallen angel has acquired dominion over man to a certain extent," he said.

Central to his message was that "the presence of Satan...becomes all the more acute when man and society depart from God." The message was interpreted by Vatican officials as a warning against the advance of atheism in the modern world.

The pope asserted that Satan "has the skill in the world to induce people to deny his existence in the name of rationalism and of every other system of thought which seeks all possible means to avoid recognizing his activity."

Up until the 18th century, Balducci said, the church "perhaps overemphasized" the concept of the devil, fanning fatalism even among Christians.

"But in the modern world, by contrast, the teaching on the devil has lost its acceptance and so the balance should be restored," the monsignor added.

A Vatican official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the pope appeared to be motivated by two concerns — that Catholics should not lose sight of the devil's existence, and by teaching authoritatively on the doctrine, the church can stem the rise of satanic cults and "popular exorcisms" carried out by lay people without church approval.

In February, Cardinal Anastasio Alberto Ballestrero of Turin, an industrial city in northern Italy, named six exorcists, priests charged with casting out demons.

The appointments followed a call from Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, the prefect of the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, for more formal church control over exorcism.

WORLD IN BRIEF

East Germans can't keep pants up, are complaining

BERLIN (AP) — When East German farmers bend down to work, their pants fall down. They've complained to the ruling Communist Party about the shoddy quality of the trousers.

Informationsbuero West, a West Berlin agency that monitors the state-controlled East German news media, said Wednesday the story was carried in Unser Dorf (Our Village), an East Berlin-based newspaper on rural affairs.

Unser Dorf quoted the chairman and party secretary of the Reinholdshain agricultural cooperative near Dresden as saying the tops of the pants are too short, resting on the hips instead of the waist.

When workers stooped to tend their crops, their pants slid down so low "that their behinds peeked out," the newspaper said.

The newspaper said the cooperative protested against excessive "economizing in the use of fabrics" in making the pants.

Stallone's jet gets graffiti

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Graffiti artists spray-painted the words "Ho Chi Minh Air" on the side of a jetliner owned by American movie actor Sylvester Stallone, police said today.

Stallone, whose film character Rambo is ridiculed by some Europeans as an example of crude American politics and militarism, was in Denmark visiting the family of his Danish wife, Birgitte Nielsen.

Police inspector Knud Andersen said the graffiti attack took place Wednesday in a remote area of Copenhagen's Kastrup airport where the unoccupied Boeing 727 had been parked.

In the film "Rambo: First Blood Part II," Stallone played a hero who single-handedly returned to communist-ruled Vietnam to rescue Americans held prisoner since the Vietnam War, when North Vietnam was led by the late Ho Chi Minh.

Stallone and his wife arrived in Denmark on Saturday and were scheduled to depart today.

Princess unhurt in mishap

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Caroline banged her car into a rock outcropping about 200 yards from the spot where her mother, Princess Grace, was fatally injured in a car crash in 1982, the palace spokeswoman said today.

The spokeswoman, Nadia Lacoste, said Caroline, 29, "was a little shaken up at the time, but recovered quickly" after the Saturday accident.

The princess was alone in her car en route to her country residence in the northern part of this Mediterranean principality when the accident happened, Miss Lacoste said.

Blinded by the bright lights of an oncoming vehicle, she pulled sharply to the right and banged into a parapet, damaging the fender of the car, according to the spokeswoman.

"The princess was very surprised that anybody is aware of the accident," Miss Lacoste said.

Princess Grace died three days after a Sept. 14, 1982, car accident near the same location.

An unidentified palace spokesman said at that time that the 52-year-old princess was driving when her brakes failed on a hairpin turn. The car went into a ravine, turning over several times.

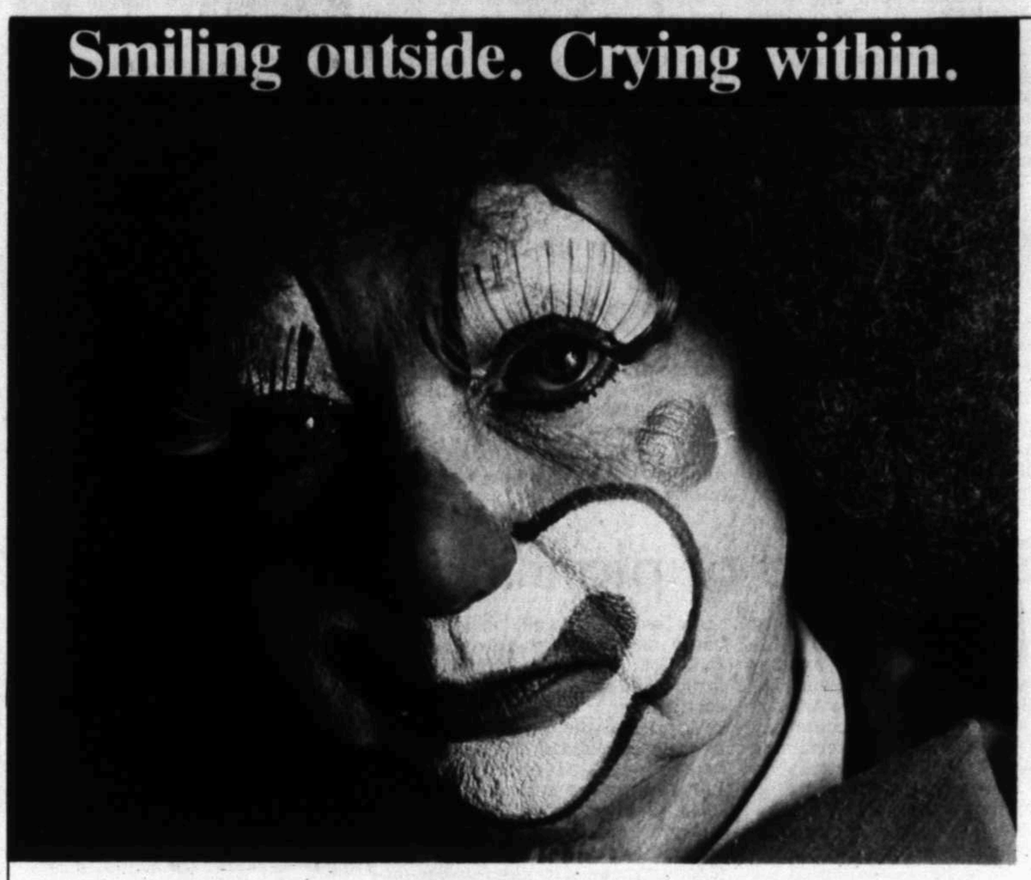
Chess champ leads at half

LONDON (AP) — World Chess champion Garri Kasparov led Anatoly Karpov by one point after the London half of their 24-game challenge series ended with a disappointing draw in the 12th game.

After the draw Wednesday, Kasparov was ahead 6½-5½.

It was the last game of the match to be played in London and a formal closing ceremony will be held Saturday. The two Soviet players and their delegations fly to Leningrad Sunday.

The date of the 13th game has yet to be formally announced, but is likely to be Sept. 3 or 5 in the Hotel Leningrad.



Often we live behind a mask. We hide our feelings, our problems, our emotions deep within ourselves, afraid to let them out. By not honestly dealing with our true emotions, we ultimately suffer. Depression sets in. Relationships flounder. We're robbed of the joys life should bring.

On August 15th, Permian General Hospital established a comprehensive mental health management unit within the hospital offering quality care for emotional disorders on an in and outpatient basis.

Because mental health care is sometimes misunderstood, all patient contacts and treatments are handled in the strictest of confidence. And because our mental health unit is found within the confines of a full-service hospital, the cost for treatment is covered by most hospitalization insurance plans.

Living behind a mask can rob you of the joy and happiness you deserve. Learn to feel the warmth life has to offer.

Dollar slides slightly

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was slightly lower on European currency exchanges today in quiet trading as the market awaited the outcome of a meeting of policymakers at the Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank.

Gold advanced, gaining about $3.50 a troy ounce in morning trading.

Bundesbank heads were to meet later in the day to decide whether to follow up U.S. interest rate cuts with a reduction of their own discount rate.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 154.80 yen from Wednesday's 155.25. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.85 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

-2.0459 West German marks, down from 2.0460

--1.6475 Swiss francs, down from 1.6507

-6.7035 French francs, down from 6.7075

-2.3076 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3115

--1,411.50 Italian lire, down from 1,413.75

-1.3963 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3962

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4830, compared with $1.4840 Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $380.80 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $380.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $384.00.

The Zurich bullion market produced similar figures, of $384.00 compared with Wednesday's $380.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $4.18 to close at a bid $381.28.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.15 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $5.11.

Gauge of econimic indicators rises 1.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose a strong 1.1 percent last month, the government reported today.

The July increase in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators, the sharpest since April, was better than most private economists had expected.

Today's report, however, revised the June figure sharply downward — from a 0.3 percent increase to a 0.4 percent decline — softening the good news the July gain might otherwise have suggested.

Coupled with the June decline and a 0.1 percent decrease in May, the new report was hardly encouraging for a national economy that has been very sluggish in recent months.

The index, a compilation of 11 forward-pointing economic indicators, was given its biggest push upward in July by substantial increases in the money supply and in the rate of new business formation.

Other positive indicators included slower business deliveries and higher raw materials prices — both indicative of a business pickup — an increase in contracts and orders for new plant and equipment, a rise in outstanding credit and a decline in initial unemployment claims.

Negative indicators, which kept the overall index from rising higher, included declines in stock prices, building permits and new orders or consumer goods and materials.

There was no change in the average workweek.

The biggest reason for the June revision was a big drop in business inventories on hand and on order, a figure that had been unavailable when the June report was compiled.

The overall July gain of 1.1 percent was widely rumored on Wall Street on Wednesday, raising the possibility there had been a leak of the closely held information before today's official release, especially in light of the fact that most economists had been predicting a gain of no more than 0.6 percent.

Commerce officials, who have been plagued by occasional leaks of other sensitive reports, had no immediate comment.

The July gain put the overall index at 179.4 compared with the 1967 base level of 100.

For the balance of 1986, Data Resources Inc., the Lexington, Mass., forecasting company, said it expects economic growth at a slightly improved 2.5 percent rate in the second half of the year.

Michael Evans, president of Evans Economics in Washington, also sees growth at a rate of 2.5 percent to 3 percent during the current July-September quarter.

In his latest analysis, Evans described such a gain as "not ordinarily considered a spectacular increase but quite at odds with all those recession forecasts that have suddenly mushroomed on Wall Street."

Exxon elects new chief executive

NEW YORK (UPI) — The board of directors of Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, Wednesday elected Lawrence G. Rawl chairman and chief executive officer to succeed Clifton C. Garvin Jr., who is retiring Jan. 1.

Lee R. Raymond, 58, currently a senior vice president and director, will replace Rawl as president. Rawl is 48.

Garvin, who became chairman of Exxon in 1975, reaches the mandatory retirement age of 65 in December and will step down from the board of directors on the first of the year.

Rawl, who holds a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Oklahoma, joined Exxon in 1952. Following several assignments with Exxon U.S.A., he transferred to the corporation's producing department in New York in 1960. Rawl then returned to Exxon U.S.A.'s producing department.

In 1980 Rawl was named senior vice president and a director and became president of the corporation in 1985.

Fort Worth bank hit hardest by TAB layoffs

From Staff and Wire Reports

Texas American Bancshares Inc. (TAB) has laid off 154 employees statewide, including 80 in Tarrant County in its second major workforce reduction this year, a company official says.

Texas American Chairman Joseph M. Grant said Wednesday the layoffs were needed because of "the cause for concern" over Texas American's loan performance and profitability through the remainder of the year and in anticipation of interstate banking in Texas.

Locally, TAB-Midland CEO and chairman of the board Charles Grimes says, "Due to lower business volumes caused by the Midland economy, the change will not effect service to our customers."

The number of employees affected at TAB-Midland is not yet available according to a bank spokesman, but the impact is expected to be less severe than at the holding company's flagship operations in Fort Worth, she said.

The workforce at the firm's Fort Worth bank, that city's largest; was reduced from 680 to 666.

Grant said that in addition to the layoffs, another 36 employees took early retirement. That number included 13 at the Fort worth bank, he said.

Texas American "considers a return to a reasonable level of profitability the best defense against a takeover attempt" by an out-of-state bank, Grant said.

The bank holding company with 35 banks is said to be a leading candidate for a takeover once the interstate banking bill passed by the Texas Legislature goes into effect.

Grant said the cutbacks will reduce the firm's workforce to 3,065 statewide, down from 3,595 at the end of last year. Most of those involved in the cutbacks were in executive categories, he said.

The layoffs and early retirements will save the company about $1.9 million per quarter, he said.

Those laid off will get one week's pay for each year and service and will be covered by the company's group insurance through November, he said.

The bank holding company laid off 175 workers at its 35 banks in April, including 45 employees in Tarrant County.

Chamber sets sights on industrial development

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Economic Development Department (EDD) of the Midland Chamber of Commerce is concentrating its efforts on targeting much needed diversified enterprises to the Permian Basin. The current thrust of the diversification project is analyzing both the local community and particular industries which would be well suited to West Texas.

According to Steve Hardin, director of economic development at the Chamber, the Midland and Odessa Chambers have jointly contracted with a consultant from SMU to do the study.

"The study is a two-step project. The first step, of which we have already received the first draft, is an economic profile of the area. The consultant has made assumptions of the strengths and weaknesses of both human and natural resources available here," Hardin says.

The joint chambers will meet soon to review that assessment he noted.

"After reviewing the economic profile, the next step will be to attempt to target the industries that the study reveals to be best suited to the area."

Hardin says the EDD will prepare a list of potential industries, classified by job and product and then focus a concentrated marketing effort on those target industries.

He reported that other chambers have successfully used similar studies, noting that, "Money for economic development and community marketing is limited, so we must use that money wisely. We feel that this is the best, most efficient use of our economic development budget."

Hardin likened the approach to using a rifle as opposed to a shotgun, giving the Chamber a specific direction for the next few years.

Other attempts to attract new industry to Midland, will take Hardin to San Francisco and Los Angeles next month on an industrial tour sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

"The purpose of the tour is to recruit business and industry. We will be setting up appointments with individual industrial companies that might be interested in expanding their operations to West Texas."

In October a delegation from Midland's sister city in China will arrive in Midland for a week-long tour. The visit, which coincides with the Oil Show, will enable leaders of Dong Ying's petroleum industry to meet with Midland oilmen and businessmen who are interested in doing business with China.

Texas dealers sue major oil firms

DALLAS (AP) — Nineteen years ago, Garvin Senn ran a Shell service station at Abrams Road and Northwest Highway, an intersection he shared with three other stations flying the Mobil, Texaco and Exxon flags.

Today, Senn operates a Texaco station on a comparatively lonely stretch of Stemmons Freeway near the Market Center, and the outlets he considers his chief competitors are entire interstate exits away.

But he says he fears the competition more now than he did in 1967, even though his station and those up the interstate all sell the same brand of gasoline. The difference is that Senn leases his station from Texaco Inc., while the company owns and operates the competition.

"In 1967, I would lay awake at night and try to figure out how to put the Texaco man and the Mobil man and the Exxon man out of business," said Senn, one of 2,500 Texas dealers who are suing five major oil companies.

"Today the single most serious threat to my future is my own landlord. I lay awake nights trying to figure out how to put Texaco out of business, and Texaco is a lot bigger than me."

Senn and other direct-delivery dealers — who own their own stations or rent them from a major oil company and are obligated to buy that major's gasoline — operate more of the about 127,000 retail gasoline outlets in the country than do oil companies. The companies directly operate only an estimated 22,428 of the stations selling brand-name gasoline.

Garvin Senn is one of 2,500 Texas dealers suing five major oil companies, alleging they conspired to fix gasoline prices at artificially high levels.

BUT AS COMPETITION for the motorist's dollar has heightened in this decade, the dealers have grown worried that they are a dying breed. And they have complained that the very companies who supply them are helping to dig their graves.

"The companies are challenging the dealers on virtually every front," said Vic Rasheed, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America. "They are putting the heat on the dealers to sell as much gas as possible ... and they might be forcing them closer and closer to bankrupcy."

Going for the green (not golf) new national sport

The sports business itself is big business. With antitrust suits, labor strikes and franchises' money woes, the daily sports page can look a lot like the financial section.

But to an even greater degree the separate worlds of business and sports are becoming increasingly interconnected.

From the football field to the tennis court, the auto racing oval to the golf course, companies are finding ways to utilize sports to profit, directly or indirectly.

Sporting events have become major venues for business promotions. One avenue is sponsorship of entire series of sporting events, such as Virginia Slims women's tennis, Winston Cup stock car racing, Nabisco Gran Prix men's tennis, Vantage Cup men's golf and the John Hancock Sun Bowl college football game.

Sport celebrity endorsements are another high-profile promotion medium. Most athletes are more subtle than Chicago Bear quarterback Jim McMahon, who managed to breach NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's sense of good taste and commercial restraint.

The result is the so-called 'McMahon Rule', barring NFL players from exhibiting their commercial sponsors — such as Jimmy's Adidas headbands — on the field or the sidelines. Thus far into the pre-season, neither McMahon nor any other player has tested the commissioner's commitment to ban human billboarding.

CHANCES ARE NOBODY will — it doesn't pay to cross Pete. If you don't believe me, ask Donald Trump or Harry Usher of the USFL.

Tennis has long regulated players using their center court presence for commercial advantage. The size of logos worn by players to show off their endorsements is restricted to two inches square. Even within those limits, the logos are quite noticeable. The red-and-white Avis rectangle on Ivan Lendl's sleeve and the 'golden arches' gracing Jimmy Connors' shoulder grab the eye during the close-ups.

It has also led other companies, particularly tennis equipment and sportswear manufacturers, to circumvent the rules. Racquet makers rely on identifiable stenciling on the strings for fans to recognize their tools when they are in the hands of champions.

Sportswear designers have come to realize that a memorable signature insignia is almost as important as the clothing design itself. Bjorn Borg virtually single-handedly catapulted the Fila line of $100 sweaters and other pricey tennis wear with the distinctive red, white and blue logo into the 'hot' category among the tennis crowd and beyond. Even Ford got into the act and now produces a Fila-design Thunderbird.

SUCH ON-FIELD endorsements pale beside the lucrative contracts offered to current and former athletic stars for on-camera broadcast and print advertising. Former olympic golden boys and endorsers extrordinaire, Mark Spitz and Bruce Jenner, pulled down enormous contracts for endorsing cameras, toothpaste and milk before slipping into the great pitchman's afterlife — guest judging on Dance Fever, and things like that.

However, the last two years have given rise to two of the most prolific, and I think, most annoying hucksters to come down the pike in some time — Mary Lou Retton and William Perry.

Mary Lou and her relentless hawking of batteries, breakfast food and bowling, among other things stretches the bounds of celebrity endorsement value.

If the concept behind such promotions is to establish a strong association between the personality and the product; how can a sponsor be assured that seeing Mary Lou's beaming face is going to remind consumers of their craving for his cereal and not give them the urge to hit the alleys and roll a few strikes?

Same goes for 'Fridge' Perry, who went from what coach Buddy Ryan called a wasted draft pick, to overnight media sensation in the course of his rookie season. By Super Bowl Sunday, Fridge had signed up as 'spokes-appliance' for Coke, McDonalds' and a rash of other national and regional advertisers.

His work for one of those regional sponsors, a long-john manufacturer in Wisconsin, points to another pitfall of the jock-endorsement trap. The print ads, a simple picture of Perry sitting in the advertiser's product, carried the tag line "We keep the Refrigerator warm." A clever idea and a thoughtful incorporation of the endorser and the product.

TOO OFTEN, ADVERTISERS think a celebrity endorsement can take the place of well thought out, creative advertising. Witness anything involving Terry Bradshaw or John McEnroe if you don't want to take my word for it.

If somebody had the inclination and the money I think there are a couple of natural jock-sponsor combinations out there just begging to be used.

Imagine John McEnroe as the new spokesman for Planned Parenthood; or Herschel Walker promoting the new $3,990 Yugo import car. On the management side, George Steinbrenner and Billy Martin would be naturals for Kelly Temporary Services, while Robert Irsay, who spirited the Colts from Baltimore to Indianapolis in the middle of the night, would be perfect for U-Haul.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Meridian reports 173 barrel well

From Staff Reports

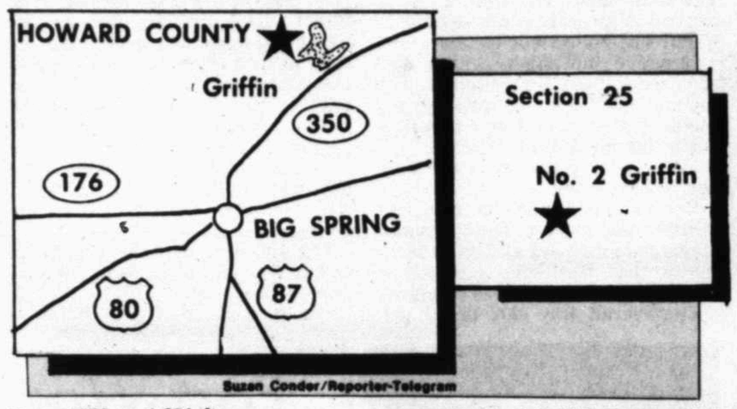
MERIDIAN OIL, INC. has added a Pennsylvanian producer in the Griffin field of Howard County with completion of the No. 2 Griffin.

On potential test, the well flowed 173 barrels of 48.4 gravity crude and 69 Mcfd on an 18/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 260 psi. Production is from perforations 8,031 to 8,092 ft.

The well was drilled to 8,220 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,120 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,534 ft., include the San Andres at 2,700 ft., Clearfork at 3,642, Spraberry at 5,142, Lower Wolfcamp at 7,092, Pennsylvanian at 7,932, and the Strawn at 8,500 ft. Pay was topped at 8,031 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from south and 2,100 ft. from west lines of Section 22, Block 25, H&TC survey, 10 miles southeast of Luther.



Marathon completes four in Yates field

The Yates field of Pecos County has gained four new producers as MARATHON OIL CO. continues drilling activity in the field.

The No. 55F18 Yates Field Unit tested to pump 70 barrels of 31 gravity crude, 15 Mcfd and 72 barrels of water on a four hour test from perforations 1,697 to 1,760 ft.

Marathon finaled the No. 98A22 Yates Field Unit to pump 9 barrels of 31 gravity crude, 12.8 Mcfd and 73 barrels of water on a four hour test. The well is producing from perforations 1,576 to 1,654 ft.

On a four hour potential test, the No. 98A25 Yates Field Unit pumped 16 barrels of 31 gravity crude, 50.1 Mcfd and 234 barrels of water from perforations 1,658 to 1,732 ft.

The fourth, the No. 273F49 Yates Field Unit, was completed to flow five barrels of 31 gravity crude, 2.6 Mcfd and 26 barrels of water on a two hour test. Production is through a 72/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 30 psi from perforations 1,788 to 1,831 ft.

All four are located in Block 194, GC&SF survey.

Runnels reentry yields Palo Pinto discovery

A reentry operation in Runnels County has yielded a Palo Pinto discovery west-southwest of the Motley Northwest field.

CECIL TUCKER, Miles, reentered and cleaned out to original total depth the No. 1 L.T. Balkum, potentialing the well to pump 25.06 barrels of 41 gravity crude and three barrels of water. Production is from perforations 4,004 to 4,012 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 598.56:1.

The well was drilled to an original depth of 5,289 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set and plugged back to 4,026 ft.

The well topped the Palo Pinto at 4,004 ft. and the Canyon at 3,902 ft. on ground elevation of 1,812 ft.

Location is 1,800 ft. from north and 2,200 ft. from east lines of Section 19, H&GN survey, Abst. 279, two miles southwest of Norton.

The well was plugged and abandoned Jan. 15, 1986.

Oklahoma City firm reports Goen strike

A modest Goen lime discovery has been reported in Concho County, located north and slightly west of the Paint Rock South field.

STREAM ENERGY, INC., Oklahoma City, finaled the No. 2 Nell Hartgrove to pump 16 barrels of 45 gravity crude and 120 barrels of water from perforations 3,471 to 3,474 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 4,000:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 3,600 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Goen at 3,424 ft. on ground elevation of 1,743 ft.

Location is 860 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 152, Block 72, T&NO survey, Abstract 1122, six miles south of Paint Rock.

Terrell recompletion tested for 1.2 Mmcfd

PETRA OIL CORP., Katy, has recompleted the No. 1 P.C. Garner "10" to reopen Detrital B production in the Allison field of Terrell County.

The well was potentialed for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.2 Mmcfd. Gas-liquid ratio is 41,018:1, and gravity is 62.6 API.

The well, originally drilled by Texas Crude, Inc., was plugged back to 9,350 ft.

The well topped the Detrital B at 9,005 ft., Woodford at 9,266, and the Devonian at 9,443 ft. on ground elevation of 2,605 ft.

Location is 1,500 ft. from south and 1,000 ft. from west lines of Section 10, Block B-2, CCSD&RGNG survey, six miles south of Sheffield.

The well was originally completed as a Devonian producer, potentialed for 5.6 Mmcfd from perforations 9,246 to 9,316 ft.

WILDCATS

■ 1. ABILENE FIRM STAKES RUNNELS LOCATION. Bridwell Oil Co., Abilene, has scheduled the No. 1 Leon Frerich, a 5,500 ft. prospector in Runnels County.

Location is 2,173 ft. from north and 467 ft. from east lines of Section 16 of the H&GN survey, and two miles south of Norton. Ground elevation is 1,837 ft.

■ 1. TEXACO PLANS CRANE WILDCAT. Texaco, Inc, Midland, will drill its No. 26 C.W. Hobbs -B- NCT-2 15 miles south of Crane in Crane County.

Location is 467 ft. from southeast and 467 ft. from southwest lines of Section 34, Block 35 of the H&TC survey. Contract depth is 3,600 ft.

Pogo wins first round in lawsuit against United

HOUSTON (SWN) — Houston-based Pogo Producing Co. won the first round in its lawsuit filed yesterday against United Gas Pipe Line Co. to enforce the terms of gas purchase contracts covering six offshore blocks in the Gulf of Mexico. A Louisiana state district court in New Orleans yesterday issued a temporary restraining order, requiring United to take at contract prices no less than the contractual monthly minimums of approximately 55 percent of Pogo's delivery capacity of natural gas production from these blocks in the Gulf of Mexico: East Cameron 335; South Pass 57-58, and 78; and High Island 355, and 356.

Pogo estimates its gross sales from the blocks will increase approximately 12.1 million cubic feet per day as a result of the court's order, and that the weighted average price to be received will be approximately $3.30 per Mcf.

The Orleans Parish court set September 15 as the trial date on Pogo's request for a preliminary injunction which if granted would extend the life of the temporary restraining order.

Two months ago Pogo received a preliminary injunction requiring United to take contractual minimum monthly amounts from three other offshore blocks in the West Cameron area of the Gulf of Mexico. That injunction resulted in increasing Pogo's working interest gas sales by approximately 10 million cubic feet daily.

Pogo said it had settled to its "complete satisfaction" two other lawsuits filed in April and July against United. The first of the lawsuits concerned the amounts United could properly charge for transporting Pogo's natural gas liquifiables from four offshore blocks. The other action, filed July 11, sought to require United to pay the full base contract price for all gas taken in May and subsequent months of this year from offshore blocks covered by 29 gas purchase contracts.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Gulf Canada shuts Beaufort Sea operation

NEW YORK — The Gulf Canada Corp., which early this year found the largest oil field yet discovered in the oil-rich Beaufort Sea of the Arctic Ocean, has decided to temporarily shut its operations there because of the depressed price of crude oil.

Gulf Canada officials said late last week that the company could no longer financially justify the high expense of exploration and development in the harsh environment of the Beaufort, which is northeast of Alaska.

The company, which is 85 percent owned by the Reichmann family of Toronto, was the last oil company with a substantial Beaufort presence to continue development there as world oil prices plummeted.

Crutcher considers selling some subsidiaries

GRAND PRAIRIE, Tex. (SWN) — The board of directors of Crutcher Resources Corp. has decided that in view of its continuing financial default, as previously announced, on its secured senior indebtedness and convertible subordinated debentures, the company would actively consider sales of any or all of its operating subsidiaries.

Jerry E. Goldress, CEO, stated that these would include the possible sale of its two primary operating entities, CRC Wireline, Inc. and CRC Mallard, Inc., as well as its land based well servicing companies.

Transco discovers gas in Hidalgo County

HOUSTON (SWN) — Transco Exploration Partners, LTD. (TXP) has discovered natural gas on the Retama Prospect in Hidalgo County, northwest of Edinburg, Texas.

The TXP Margaret Bishop No. 1 unit well was drilled to a total vertical depth of 12,584 feet. Logs indicated 20 feet of net gas pay. During production testing, the well flowed about 7.0 million cubic feet per day (Mmcf) of natural gas and 21 barrels per day (b/d) of condensate on an 18/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,125 pounds per square inch (psi). TXP and Diamond Shamrock Corporation each hold a 50 percent working interest in the well.

This is the second successful well on the Retama Prospect. The first well, the TXP Juan Espinoza No. 1, located approximately one mile northeast of the Margaret Bishop No. 1 unit well, was drilled to a total depth of 12,243 feet, encountering 15 feet of net gas pay. During production tests, the well flowed 3.3 Mmcf/D of natural gas and 26 b/d of condensate on a 16/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,158 psi.

Ashland Oil plans to sell coal subsidiary

ASHLAND, Ky. (UPI) — Ashland Oil Inc. plans to sell its coal subsidiary, Ashland Coal of Huntington, W.Va., which has nearly 700 employees and sold 5.4 million tons of coal last year.

Ashland Coal, which has 610 million tons of reserves in eastern Kentucky and West Virginia, reported a $15 million pre-tax profit last year on revenues of $196 million.

In 1984 Ashland Coal reported a profit of $19 million on sales of $197 million. Its work force has dropped from more than 1,000 to 693 since 1983.

Jim Butler, a spokesman for Ashland, said Monday the company had been saying "for some time we were looking at the possibility of selling off" part of Ashland Coal and the decision to sell the entire operation "is an expansion of that."

GM lowers financing rates

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. said today it will try to clear out a large stockpile of 1986 cars by offering interest rates as low as 2.9 percent and postponing the start of the 1987 model year.

GM announced the low interest rates at a news conference and said it also will offer rebates from $300 to $1,500 as an alternative to the lower rates.

The 2.9 percent rate applies to 36-month loans for most models. The nation's largest automaker also will offer 4.8 percent rates on 48-month contracts. The new program takes effect today and expires Oct. 8.

"GM dealers have over 1 million new 1986 cars and light trucks for sale. This massive new incentive program ... will enable us to clear our decks for a fast start on GM's 1987 model year," said James G. Vorhes, vice president in charge of GM's customer sales and service staff.

"We consider this activity so important that GM's 1987 model introduction has been postponed two weeks from the previously announced Sept. 25 public introduction date for 1987 models to Oct. 9 so the program can achieve maximum impact," Vorhes said.

Many of GM's models have inventories of more than 100 days, and some exceed 250 days. GM's target has been to have a 60-day inventory of unsold cars.

Chrysler Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have similar programs in effect, although the rates are not so low. No. 2 Ford is offering loan rates as low as 6.9 percent and rebates of up to $600 through Oct. 2. Chrysler buyers are able to borrow at rates as low as 5.5 percent and rebates on some of the No. 3 automaker's models are up to $1,500, through Sept. 6.

Word of the new program had leaked out early as dealers who had been wired by GM about the new rates contacted newspapers to change their advertisements.

"I don't think GM has ever had rates this low," said Betty Warner, financing manager of Kaiser Brothers Oldsmobile in Los Angeles. "I think these are the best rates ever."

GM had been offering rates on selected models of 5.9 percent for 30 months, 6.9 percent for 36 months, 7.9 percent to 8.9 percent for 48 months depending on model and 8.9 percent to 9.9 percent for 60 months, depending on model, in a program that was to have expired Sept. 24.

The contracts are offered through General Motors Acceptance Corp., GM's wholly owned financing unit.

New-car loan rates at banks vary nationwide but are closer to 10 percent in many cases, though they and other interest rates have been dropping.

Iran official visits China

ATHENS (UPI) — Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh flew to China Wednesday to ask Peking to cooperate with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' plan to slash oil production and bolster prices.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency IRNA said in a dispatch monitored in Athens that Aqazadeh is heading a delegation to the Chinese capital after a successful trip to Moscow on a similar mission.

China, a major independent oil producer, pumped about 2.5 million barrels a day in 1985, according to the American Petroleum Institute in Washington.

On Aug. 5 OPEC oil ministers agreed to reduce the cartel's production by nearly 4 million barrels to about 16.8 million barrels a day for two months beginning Sept. 1 in a bid to shrink the globol oil surplus and raise sagging oil prices.

Analysts said the OPEC plan, proposed by Iran, would shore up sliding oil prices only if producers outside the cartel cooperated by reining in their production and exports.

DEALER

The oil companies have heard such accusations before.

"There is just not a concerted effort to eliminate them (direct-delivery dealers)," said Texaco spokesman Phil Blackburn. "We're all aware of that accusation, and it's not true."

But while dealers have long been suspicious of the prices the companies charge independents for wholesale gasoline, and of the prices they charge motorists for retail gasoline sold at company-owned and operated outlets, it took the crude oil price collapse of this year to bring the suspicions to court.

Two lawsuits have been filed, in Texas and Connecticut, and Rasheed said investigations are under way in other states.

In Texas, the lawsuit filed in federal court in Houston by the Lone Star Service Station Association claims that Chevron Corp., Exxon Corp., Mobil Corp., Shell Oil Co. and Texaco conspired earlier this year to fix gasoline prices at "artificially high levels" in metropolitan areas, where direct-delivery dealers hold the majority of the market share.

THE SUIT claims the companies took advantage of the free fall in crude oil prices during the first months of the year to make a windfall. The Connecticut attorney general makes similar accusations in a lawsuit he filed against Exxon, Mobil, Texaco and Sun Co.

In the chaos surrounding the price collapse, both suits say, the companies charged dealers who cannot shop around for better deals as much as 20 cents more a gallon than they charged independents who do not buy under contract. The traditional "functional discount" the independent wholesalers have enjoyed is four or five cents.

"The suit says they (the majors) all did the same thing at the same time, which is either an amazing coincidence or what we say it is — that there was the implication, if not express agreement, among the several defendants to engage in this kind of conduct," said Herbert Schwartz, the lawyer for the Lone Star Service Station Association. "The dealers were victimized, and the public was injured."

Spokesmen and lawyers for the major companies have denied the accusations of price-fixing and antitrust violations, calling them "groundless and without merit." But the companies agree with the dealers that conditions during the three months in question were unusual.

Crude oil prices were in a fast-paced tailspin in January, February and March, and wholesale spot market gasoline prices were tracking the dramatic plunging. The competition never had been tougher, said Bob Dietshe, a spokesman for Sun Refining and Marketing Co. "If you want to stay in business, you have to be competitive."

DIETSHE SAID Sun — which directly operates 100 of the 6,200 retail outlets that sell its brand of gasoline — finds the lawsuit in which it is a defendant "totally without validity.

"Dealers see themselves as having a different agenda than the oil companies," he said. "They say the companies are trying to put them out of business. But we deal through dealers, and if they don't make money, we don't make money. We're in the business of selling gasoline, and we want to sell as much of it as we can. And if we could sell it cheaper and make money on it, we'd do it."

Whatever the outcome of the lawsuits — which say the companies reaped millions of dollars in unwarranted profit — the friction between dealers and oil companies is unlikely to diminish, just as the competition is likely to increase.

The number of outlets selling gasoline in the United States has been declining every year since 1972, when there were 226,459, and the face of the retail gasoline industry has changed as dramatically as the number of outlets has shrunk.

"There has been a dramatic decline in the number of stations in the United States, period," said Trilby Lundberg, acting editor of the Lundberg Letter and daughter of its founder, Dan Lundberg. "The biggest single decline has been of the conventional service-oriented, major-brand leasee dealer ... The neighborhood has lost the opportunity to go to every corner to get service. It's the evolution of the system, and there is still shakeout going on."

ANALYSTS SAID direct-delivery dealers who lease their stations have struggled with skyrocketing real estate values that have pushed up their rents — and that all traditional dealers face uncomfortable new competition from the convenience stores that have entered the retail gasoline market, as well as from the company-owned "gas bars" that sell only self-service gasoline from a host of pumps surrounding a cashier's cage.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A strong, silent approach proves most effective in getting things to go your way. You find better ways to communicate with your co-workers and children. A new understanding assists you in making a decision about a relationship later this year. Mate helps you be more realistic in your approach to love.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Physician-author Oliver Wendell Holmes, actor-director Sir Richard Attenborough, California Angels third baseman Doug DeCinces, actress Ingrid Bergman, director William Friedkin, actor Elliott Gould, actor George Montgomery, actress Isabel Sanford, fashion maven Mr. Blackwell, Michael Jackson and actor Richard Gere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for dealing with those in authority. Set your sights high. Business must come before pleasure. Influential person is willing to back a pet project. Show your appreciation by being loyal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A great time for dealing with people at a distance. Favorable agreements can be negotiated. A family matter could try your patience. Mate or partner may resent the time you devote to work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The work week ends on a productive note. Seek quiet and relaxation this evening. Staying at home holds special appeal. Entertain a few friends too. Postpone a romantic encounter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You hit it off with someone influential. Seize a golden opportunity to promote a pet project. Answer mail promptly. Friends are willing to fall in with your ideas for recreation this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be moderate in everything you do today. Keep spending down. A new relationship makes your social life more exciting. Travel is best postponed. Pay more attention to the problems of teenage children.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid risking money on new investments. An influential person is impressed by your work. Do more than you have to and you will be royally rewarded. Important documents should be carefully scrutinized.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid acting rashly. You have great luck in making appointments with influential people. Do your homework diligently and you will get what you are after. Spend the evening in an unusual way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use shortcuts when tackling time-consuming jobs. Stick close to home base this evening. Relaxing in comfort appeals more than going out. A phone call boosts your spirits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Postpone making any new investments until you can obtain expert advice. A great time to launch new projects. Change is inevitable. Welcome it and you will be much happier.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You profit from mixing business with pleasure today. There will be a marked improvement in the office environment. Concentrate on getting more rest on the weekends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Being too outspoken could land you in hot water at home. You may not be able to get out of a commitment. Catch up on your studies or reading this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A parent-child relationship shows vast improvement. Savings grow. A prominent person wants to be your friend. Be more compassionate when dealing with an associate who is very young.

W IS FOR WINKLE

Both vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 5 ♡ K 4 ◇ Q 8 7 6 3 2 ♣ A 9 5 3
WEST ♠ Q 9 2 ♡ A J 10 8 5 ◇ K 10 ♣ J 6 4		EAST ♠ 7 6 ♡ Q 9 6 3 ◇ A 9 5 ♣ 10 8 7 2
	SOUTH ♠ A K J 10 8 4 3 ♡ 7 2 ◇ J 4 ♣ K Q

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♡

The Winkle is really a form of guard squeeze. Although both defenders control the key suit, they cannot unscramble their tricks. The name was given by Terence Reese, who wrote about it in some depth. This is one of those hands he used to illustrate the situation.

When South rebid his spades at the three-level, North decided his partner did not need support in the suit. Since his hand rated to produce at least two tricks, North felt justified in bidding game.

West attacked with the ace of hearts. As a diamond shift could easily have been fatal, he elected to continue with another heart to dummy's king. When the spade finesse lost to his queen, West persevered with hearts. Declarer ruffed and ran trumps, reducing the hand to this position:

	NORTH ♠ — ♡ — ◇ Q ♣ A 9 5 3
WEST ♠ — ♡ — ◇ K 10 ♣ J 6 4		EAST ♠ — ♡ — ◇ A 9 ♣ 10 8 7
	SOUTH ♠ 4 ♡ — ◇ J 4 ♣ K Q

A strange thing happened when declarer led his last trump. West and dummy discarded clubs and East, who was now forced to hold three clubs, sluffed a diamond. Declarer cashed the king-queen of clubs and exited with a diamond. East won perforce and had to give declarer his 10th trick by leading a club to the table's ace. Note that had West discarded a diamond instead, either he would be end played when declarer cashed his club honors and led a diamond or, if East overtook, he would promote declarer's jack of diamonds.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Mayor surrenders sweater in effort to save man

NEW YORK (AP) — When a man threatening to jump from the Brooklyn Bridge demanded to see a priest, visiting San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor gave up her black sweater so a police officer could pretend to be one.

"Time was of the essence," said Detective Brian Mulhearn. "It was a judgment decision that had to be made quickly.

"Normally we would get a priest."

A police report said Officer Gary Lajoe put on the black sweater with a piece of white paper wrapped around his neck to represent a clergyman's collar. He then persuaded David Sanchez, 29, to give up his threat of jumping and climb down. Sanchez, a resident of a shelter for homeless men, was taken to a hospital, police said.

Ms. O'Connor, who is in town for a national conference on drugs, had just finished a tour of police activity with Mulhearn Tuesday.

MIAMI (AP) — Oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau is preparing for the second leg of a five-year expedition aboard his refitted Calypso, in which he will study the impact of atomic bomb tests at Bikini and Eniwetok atolls in the Pacific Ocean.

The 141-foot Calypso has been in dry dock since January following a cruise to Haiti and Cuba. About 27,000 feet of plank and 15,000 bolts have been replaced in the overhaul of the 44-year-old former mine sweeper.

Cousteau also plans to study water management in China, the Tasmanian platypus and the successful farming procedures of Indonesia's Bali, where farmers have cultivated the same ground for 2,000 years.

The schedule of the expedition, the ship's 53rd, calls for a trip through the Panama Canal for the Calypso's first voyage across the Pacific. The trip will produce 12 one-hour television specials.

"The future of the ocean is our own survival. If we damage the ocean, it's our own future we are damaging," Cousteau said here Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress and comedian Lily Tomlin, who has sued to stop distribution of a documentary about the development of her hit Broadway play, has been named in an $11 million countersuit filed by the two filmmakers.

Tomlin

Joan Churchill and Nicholas Broomfield alleged in their Superior Court suit filed Wednesday that Miss Tomlin reneged on several agreements, slandered and defamed them, and improperly used outtakes of their film for commercials.

The countersuit names Miss Tomlin, Tomlin and Wagner Theatricals, and 10 others who may have played a part in allegedly trying to suppress the 90-minute documentary, "Lily." The suit seeks $8 million in punitive and $3 million in actual damages.

Dan Sklar, attorney for Miss Tomlin, said she would respond to the suit vigorously. "We believe it has no merit," he said. "They are simply trying to get publicity for this second-rate film."

On Aug. 8, Judge Jack Newman denied Miss Tomlin's request for a preliminary injunction to block the release of the documentary. Miss Tomlin alleges in her suit that the film contains 30 minutes of scenes from her Broadway show, "The Search For Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe," and could damage her economically.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Mother Teresa, who has dedicated her life to helping the poor and sick of India, was treated to a cake in the shape of a cross and a chorus of "Happy Birthday" by well-wishers who feted her on her 76th birthday.

The party was given Wednesday by the Lions Club of Baroda in western India at a home for destitute people operated by Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity, United News of India reported.

Mother Teresa was born Aug. 27, 1910, in Skopje, now in Yugoslavia. She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for her work with Calcutta's dying and destitute.

ST. MARYS, Ohio (AP) — Paraplegic Nan Davis, who became the first paralyzed person to walk using the aid of a computer that stimulates muscles, will walk down the aisle in December.

Ms. Davis, 26, will marry Greg Ferrall, 29, on Dec. 27, she said Wednesday.

"I plan to walk down the aisle, but I'm so slow, Greg says he'll run circles around me," said Ms. Davis, who was the subject of a movie, "First Steps."

She was paralyzed from the waist down after a car accident on the night of her high school graduation. Four years ago, she became the first person to successfully use the computer-controlled system designed by Professor Jerrold Petrofsky at Wright State University.

Ms. Davis administers a rehabilitation program for the paralyzed at Middletown Regional Hospital.

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television won 22 of 48 news and documentary Emmy Awards, and "CBS Evening News With Dan Rather" won seven, the most for any show, the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences announced.

The Public Broadcasting System's "Frontline" and CBS' "60 Minutes" both garnered four awards. In all, CBS won 14 awards, ABC nine and NBC five at a black-tie awards dinner Wednesday night at the Grand Hyatt Hotel.

Many categories had more than one winner among shows broadcast from Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 1985, said awards spokeswoman Jan Andrew. "The shows weren't competing against each other, they were up against a standard of excellence."

NEW YORK (AP) — Four newspapers have been selected as finalists in the annual Freedom of Information Award competition sponsored by the Associated Press Managing Editors.

The finalists are:

The Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel for its reporting on the causes of the shuttle Challenger disaster despite refusal of official sources to supply information.

The Press-Enterprise of Riverside, Calif., for its legal battle ending in a U.S. Supreme Court decision that established the constitutional right of the public to attend pretrial hearings.

The Anchorage (Alaska) Daily News for its efforts on several fronts to assure open courts and government in Alaska.

The Greenville (Miss.) Delta Democrat-Times for its intensive campaign that opened local government records and meetings.

The winning entry will be announced in October at the annual APME convention in Cincinnati. A plaque will be presented to the winning newspaper and citations to the other finalists.

Planned AIDS hospice angers area residents

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan by Mother Teresa's nuns to open a hospice for AIDS victims in a stable, single-family, Washington neighborhood is running into angry protests from homeowners.

Residents of the tree-lined neighborhood, where homes sell in the $100,000 range, worry they will lose their hard-earned investments and stable community if the hospice opens in November as planned.

"I would not imagine anyone wanting to buy my house when an AIDS facility is a stone's throw from my door," said Ellie M. Kelley, a 34-year resident. It's a stigma."

But supporters of the hospice plan say concern about property values is a screen for deep-seated fears people harbor for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a disease that attacks the body's immune system. There is no known cure for the affliction.

"Fear is so great it blinds," said Monsignor William Curlin, president of the board of directors for the Association Catholic Charities, which owns the building to be used for the home. "You are not listening. Once you listen and sit down and hear that (AIDS) is no danger, fear disappears."

The greatest danger to the neighborhood is not the AIDS virus but allowing unscrupulous real estate agents to exploit the fear of the disease, said Jack Morrison, the Washington director of the Catholic Charities. The result could be an attempt at block-busting by these agents, he said.

"It's called neighborhood busting. It falsely depresses prices," Morrison said.

"Residents could get suckered into doing exactly what white flight did 30 years ago. This time it would be AIDS flight," Morrison said.

Mrs. Kelley, now in her 70s, has seen the neighborhood change once. She and her husband were the first black family to move onto her street in 1952 and watched a rapid shift to what today is an all black block.

The Catholic archdiocese on Aug. 21 announced plans for the Missionaries of Charity, the order founded by Nobel Prize winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta, to establish a convent where 11 terminally ill and AIDS patients in the last stages of their disease could die.

Deirdre Spaulding, an elected neighborhood commissioner, said she is outraged that residents were not consulted in advance about the hospice. She said she has met with about 50 residents twice in the past week to decide how to oppose it.

Report concedes some Contras smuggled drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration concedes that some Nicaraguan rebels trafficked in drugs, but denies that the principal U.S.-backed Contra group is implicated.

"The available evidence points to involvement with drug traffickers by a limited number of persons having various kinds of affiliations with or political sympathies for resistance groups," according to a new report sent to Congress by the State Department.

Specifically, the report cites U.S. intelligence information as saying "a senior member of Eden Pastora's Sandino Revolutionary Front" in late 1984 agreed to help a Colombian narcotics trafficker ship drugs to the United States in exchange for an airplane, two helicopters and money.

It also notes other drug trafficking by people associated with the Contras, but said rebel leaders and the main U.S.-backed rebel group, the United Nicaraguan Opposition, UNO, apparently were not involved.

Last December, The Associated Press, quoting U.S. investigators and American volunteers who worked with the rebels, reported that Nicaraguan rebels operating in northern Costa Rica engaged in cocaine trafficking to help finance their war against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The AP said the smuggling operations included refueling planes at clandestine rebel airstrips and helping transport cocaine to other Costa Rican points for shipment to the United States. The AP also cited a U.S. intelligence report that said a Pastora commander used cocaine profits to buy military equipment.

At the time, however, State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said, "We are not aware of any evidence to support those charges."

Although the new administration report accepts the validity of some accusations, it is accompanied by a cover letter signed by State Department lobbyist J. Edward Fox, stating, "The administration believes these (Contra drug) allegations are false."

Fox's office said Tuesday he was on vacation and unavailable to comment on the apparent discrepancy between his letter and the new report, obtained by the AP this week. Asked for comment, Redman said the report was "totally consistent with everything we have said all along."

Fox's letter is dated July 24, and congressional sources said the report was distributed on Capitol Hill to quiet concerns about alleged Contra drug trafficking that were undermining President Reagan's request for $100 million in new aid for the rebels.

Reagan's aid package won Senate approval on Aug. 13 after clearing the House earlier. The military aid and other assistance is expected to begin flowing to the Contras next month.

NATION IN BRIEF

Student shoots teacher

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — School officials are considering new security measures after a student with a history of disruptive behavior shot a teacher with whom he had argued the day before, authorities say.

A Maplewood Comprehensive High School student was being held in a juvenile center pending a hearing Friday on charges of assault with intent to commit murder and carrying a weapon on school property, authorities said.

The 16-year-old student is accused of shooting industrial arts teacher John Alexander, 33, as classes began Wednesday. Alexander was in critical condition at Nashville Memorial Hospital with a .22-caliber bullet wound to the chest, a hospital spokeswoman said.

On Tuesday, a school official had talked with his parents about disruptive behavior, said assistant superintendent John Younger. The youth also had argued Tuesday with Alexander, said police Lt. Joe Anderson.

Use of weapons discussed

NEW YORK (AP) — President Jimmy Carter considered using tactical nuclear weapons to repel a possible Soviet invasion of Iran in 1980, officials say.

The option was among a number raised during a session of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the National Security Council to discuss a Soviet buildup on the border of Iran, said Jody Powell, Carter's former press secretary.

"The case was then, as it is to a large extent now, that if the Soviets decided to move in a major way, a major offensive into that region, then you would probably have to consider the use of nuclear weapons to stop them," Powell told NBC News on Tuesday.

"We were concerned in the broadest context with the imbalance of power in that area," Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs at the time, told The New York Times in a report published today.

"When there is the possibility of a major conflict with the Soviet Union, there is always a discussion of nuclear weapons," Jones said.

Man held against his will

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American businessman says he was held against his will in Saudi Arabia for 133 days on spying charges and got a $400,000 check and his freedom only after he dropped a lawsuit against a Saudi businessman.

Sam Bamieh of San Mateo, Calif., told a news conference Wednesday that he had filed an affidavit a day earlier in U.S. District Court in San Jose, Calif., to revive the original lawsuit. In the new suit, Bamieh seeks $58.8 million in damages from two close associates of Saudi Arabian King Fahd.

Bamieh, who identifies himself as chairman of the board of directors of Industrial Development Group Inc., said he filed his original complaint last Feb. 25 against Saudi businessman Mohammed Imran, who is a retired head of Fahd's private offices. Bamieh said he sought damages resulting from Imran's alleged breach of a business partnership.

50 LEGAL NOTICES

THE STATE OF TEXAS

TO: R. J. PATTERSON and JEAN PATTERSON
Defendants in the cause herein described:

You and each of you are hereby commanded to appear and answer before the 142nd District Court in the Midland County Courthouse in Midland, Midland County, Texas, at or before 10:00 o'clock a.m. on the first Monday after the expiration of 42 days from the date of issuance hereof, being at or before 10:00 a.m. on Monday, the 15th day of September, 1986, then and there to answer the petition of MAX FEARNOW, Plaintiff in Cause No. A-35,186, styled Max Fearnow, Plaintiff vs. R. J. Patterson and Jean Patterson, in which Max Fearnow is Plaintiff and R. J Patterson and Jean Patterson are Defendants. The said petition, filed September 6, 1985, discloses that the nature of said suit is as follows:

The Defendants materially misrepresented the area of a property that they sold to the Plaintiff. Their representations were both fraudulent and deceptive trade practices.

If this citation is not served within ninety (90) days after date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved.

ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE SEAL OF SAID COURT on this the 1st day of August, 1986, at 4:00 o'clock P.M. at Midland County, Texas.
