HIJACKER VICTIM QUESTIONED IN MOONEY CASE

Lightning Blamed For Airplane Explosion Fatal To Five Kansas Cityans

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Orville Bullington is advised by the postoffice department that advertisements for proposals for a federal building site in Wichita Falls will be published next week; that site owners then may submit their proposals and at the expiration of the publication inter-departmental representatives will be sent to Wichita Falls to inspect the sites offered and to make a recommendation.

This seems to indicate that work might be started on Wichita Falls' new federal building before the end of the year. Of course, after the site is purchased, plans for the building must be drawn, advertisements for bids made and much detailed preparation made, so that we can hardly expect work to be started before early winter. It is the policy of the administration, however, to speed up public building work as much as possible.

A month or so ago The Times and Record News opened their columns to letters from the people telling why this or that site ought to be chosen. All the letters received favored some site near the courthouse. There are other sites being offered and we are wondering if they have champions who will write us a letter for publication.

There was a time when it seemed as if filling stations would be placed on every corner lot in town. But the supply of corner lots outlasted the requirements of the gasoline retailers and left nearly enough for the miniature golf courses. It begins to look like the problem of the unemployed might be solved by making them managers of putt-putt enterprises.

Deaths from drownings are increasing in the United States from year to year. Such deaths numbered 5,991 in 1920 and were over 9,000 in 1929. The increase doubtless results from the increased numbers who seek the oceans, lakes and rivers for recreation.

It may not be possible to reduce the totals of the deaths from this cause but they can be held in check by the provision of lifeguards, the posting of dangerous waters, instructions in swimming and instruction in resuscitation methods.

Instruction in swimming will be the most effective means of reducing or holding in check the death toll from drownings. And large numbers are receiving such instruction at the commercial swimming pools. And the hired instructor is more likely to help the boy or girl or man or woman become proficient in swimming than the companions he might have at the old swimming hole. A lot of us oldsters spent many hours year after year in the old swimming hole and learned less about swimming than a professional instructor could have given us in half a dozen half-hour lessons.

The other day a carload of tomatoes was shipped from Alvord to northern markets. This was probably the first large shipment of tomatoes to be made from any Texas point west of Fort Worth. Not so many years ago we were being told that tomatoes could not be grown in this section. Now many truck farmers are finding them a profitable crop.

Western Wise county and eastern Montague are growing a diversity of fruit and vegetables. Their watermelons are famed as the most delicious grown in Texas.

Everybody knows that watermelons rank right along with fried chicken, ice cream and peaches as a delight to the taste. And now Talker reads in the Pathfinder:

"Watermelons are an excellent source of vitamin A, that essential to growth and physical well-being. They are also good sources of vitamin C, so much required for the development of good teeth and for body nourishment. Vitamins B and D, the appetite and digestion regulating and the antirachitic vitamins, are also present."

Exports of merchandise from Texas were valued at $657,559,600 during 1929 compared with $817,002,082 for the preceding year, according to figures made public today by the department of commerce. Unmanufactured cotton, valued at $196,503,231, ranked first among the state's exports for the year and was followed in order by gasoline, exports of which reached a valuation of $19,711,116; wheat, $9,315,951; illuminating oil, $6,504,110; and crude sulphur or brimstone in lumps, $4,547,166. Animals, lard, eggs in the shell, sawed timber, copper manufactures, carbon black, firearms, paraffin wax, cotton cloth, rubber manufactures, hides and skins, canned pears, and iron and steel manufactures were included among the diversified commodities exported from the state during the year.

Crew of Raided Yacht Sought by Dry Agents

NEW YORK, July 10. (US) — Capt. Arthur Schoensted, skipper of the yacht Halcyon, and three of his crew were being sought today by federal agents. The only member of the crew arrested is Philip Pistocelli, who was shot in the abdomen, captured and taken to a hospital, when the agents raided the yacht Wednesday night.

The prohibition men seized the rum cargo of the Halcyon, off Scarboro-on-Hudson, and the captain and crew jumped overboard.

GULF FISHING PARTY

Leading Professional Men Of Kansas City Claimed By Strange Blast

ARANSAS PASS, Texas, July 10. (AP)—Five Kansas City men who flew to the Gulf of Mexico on a fishing trip, four of them prominent business and professional men and the fifth a transport pilot, met death near here today when their airplane exploded in the air and crashed to the ground.

The dead:

Murat Boyle, 48, president of the Missouri Bar association and prominent civic leader in Kansas City.

Raymond Watson, 39, attorney and son of J. N. Watson, veteran Kansas City attorney.

R. J. Delano, 47, for the last 20 years a builder of apartments and residences in Kansas City and formerly chairman of the Republican city committee.

Eugene Lynn, expert accountant and prominent of the Kansas City Golf association.

Gene Gabbert, a transport pilot of several years' experience and for the last year pilot for Dr. W. M. Cross, former city chemist of Kansas who loaned his plane for the fishing trip.

Explosion Witnessed

Witnesses of the crash said their attention was attracted by an explosion and, looking skyward, they saw both wings break from the six-passenger monoplane. The fuselage hurtled down with the trapped victims and buried itself in the salt flats about five miles from here. It did not catch fire. The wings were found 500 feet from the fuselage.

Persons who saw the plane fall and inspected the wreckage expressed the opinion that the ship had been struck by a bolt of lightning.

The theory that lightning struck the plane was given credence by experienced pilots. They pointed

Midwest Heat Wave Takes Heavy Toll

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—Withering weather held its unrelenting grip on the Middle West today with more than a dozen states experiencing 100 degrees or hotter. Numerous new prostrations and deaths were attributed to the heat wave which has hovered over the broad central plains all week.

In Illinois, a severe rainstorm and high wind swept across the north part of the state, bringing temporary relief from the heat but causing extensive damage to telephone and telegraph lines, wrecking many silos and windmills and trampling down grain fields.

The St. Louis area reported two more deaths and a dozen or more prostrations. A street worker in Council Bluffs, Iowa, collapsed while at work and died later.

The wave stretched as far northwest as Montana where Miles City reported 108 and as far southwest as Arizona. It was 95 or near there in most of Ohio and Indiana and sections of Tennessee and Kentucky reported 100 or worse.

Endurance Flier Takes Bride in Home Town

CHICAGO, July 10. (US)—John Hunter, who, with his brother Kenneth, broke all airplane endurance records recently, surprised folks today by returning from a secret air trip, to Sparta, Ill., his home, with a bride no one knew he had.

Hunter announced not only that he was married, but had been since May 7, 1929.

His bride is the former Laura McCarey and their wedding was not announced previously as she has been teaching school near Modoc, Ill. She has known John for the last 14 years. John formerly was a miner at Sparta and his bride is the daughter of one.

Lost Boy's Body Found In Crevice

Party of Searchers Ends Three Day Hunt In Mountains

ZION NATIONAL PARK, July 10. (AP)—The body of Eugene Cafferata, 19-year-old St. Louis boy missing in the park since Tuesday afternoon, was found late today in a crevice 100 feet from the top of Lady mountain.

The body was discovered by a party of 15 searchers headed by Chief Ranger Don Jolly. The news was brought to Zion lodge by searchers who arrived at the lodge ahead of the party returning with the body.

The first clue to the probable location of the body was found this afternoon in the signature of the youth on the register on top of the mountain, which is 7800 feet above the floor of the valley and considered very dangerous after dark.

It is believed Cafferata reached the top of the peak about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night after a hike alone from the lodge in the afternoon. The location of the body indicated he had lost the trail immediately after starting his descent and fell over a ledge into the crevice.

JURY RETURNS 52 TRUE BILLS

Report Fails to Mention Police Complaint

A total of 52 indictments were returned in the first partial report of the grand jury for the July term of the 30th district court, the report having been made to Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court in the absence of Judge Allan D. Montgomery late Thursday afternoon.

It was learned that the complaint of a Wichita Falls man that he had been arrested without cause by police here and placed in the city jail without being allowed to make bond or communicate with an attorney had been presented to the grand jury, but no report on the complaint was included in the partial report made Thursday, according to George W. Anderson, assistant district attorney.

More than half of the indictments returned, the attorney said, were on charges of wife or child desertion, but less than one-third of the persons named in the bills were under arrest Thursday night. The jury report was not given to Mrs. A. B. Eichelberger, district clerk, Thursday afternoon, by an order from Judge Martin, who directed that the report be filed with the district clerk Friday morning. At least a whole day will be required to file the large list of indictments and issue warrants to Sheriff W. G. Bralley, it was said.

Senate Requests Treaty Documents

WASHINGTON, July 10. (AP)—After three days of spirited debate, the senate today adopted a modified McKellar resolution requesting President Hoover to transmit to the senate all correspondence bearing on the London naval treaty exchanged between the powers prior to its negotiation. The vote was 53 to 4.

As finally passed, the resolution would make the action of the president subject to whether he felt it would be harmful to the public interest. This is the attitude assumed by Mr. Hoover when he refused to transmit to the senate foreign relations committee all papers requested by it.

Opinion was divided tonight on whether the executive would accede to the senate's request. Some senators believed he would stand by his original position. Others thought he would produce the documents with a request that they be held in confidence.

Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, a delegate to London and a Hoover supporter, said the resolution as amended was satisfactory to him.

Executive to Wait Until After Senate Adjourns For Statement

WASHINGTON, July 10. (AP) — Claudius Huston faced the irate officers of the Republican National committee today and held off their threatened demands for his resignation as national chairman with a statement that he would discuss this "after the adjournment of the senate."

The statement was immediately subjected to the interpretation in political circles that Huston then would announce his resignation, but the chairman told newspapermen after the all-day conference with his officers that "I made no promises."

Opposition Melts

The belligerant officers, who went to the party conference today determined to tell Huston that they believed his usefulness as chairman was at an end, left the room saying they were satisfied with his statement.

Three of these officers who have been demanding that Huston quit—Daniel E. Pomeroy, of New Jersey, a vice-chairman; Joseph R. Nutt, of Ohio, the treasurer; and James Francis Burke, the counsel—con-

Cole Given Death Penalty in Slaying

WEWOKA, Okla., July 10. (AP)—Paul Cole, former secretary of the Seminole county election board, was convicted of murder here tonight by a district court jury which recommended the death penalty. Cole was charged in the death of Ernest Irby, former Texas banker.

The verdict was returned at 7:24 o'clock, approximately six hours after the jury was given the case. Cole turned pale and his lips quivered as the jury foreman read the verdict.

Cole is the first person to receive the death penalty in Seminole county. He was convicted of shooting Irby to death near Lake Wewoka the night of April 24 because Irby refused not to testify against him in federal court where a charge of liquor law violation was pending against him. The body was found in the lake April 11, weighted down with iron pipe.

Frank Hunt, former Tulsa lawyer, also faces a charge of murder in connection with Irby's death.

'Mooney's Innocent,' Says Man Questioned Here

John H. McDonald, slugged and robbed by hijackers in Clay county Wednesday night, denied in a Wichita Falls hospital Thursday that he is the John McDonald sought as a witness in the Mooney-Billings bombing case. The injured man was questioned after news dispatches told of a search being made by friends of Thomas J. Mooney, right, and Warren K. Billings, left, for a John McDonald who is believed to have information which will clear the two men of the charge of participation in the San Francisco Preparedness day bombing of 1916. The two accused men, now in prison, were denied pardons by Gov. C. C. Young, lower center. The upper center picture shows Mooney as he appeared when he entered the prison more than a year ago. The man questioned here Thursday said he was in California at the time of the bombing and that he had followed the case through newspapers. "I know Mooney is innocent," he said.

California Airman Loses Money and Effects To Two Thugs

While John H. McDonald, who told police he was a California airman, was under treatment in the Wichita General hospital Thursday afternoon for injuries he said were inflicted by two men who slugged and robbed him on the way from Fort Worth to this city early Thursday morning, officers were conducting an investigation seeking to determine if he is the John McDonald wanted in California as key witness in connection with the San Francisco Preparedness day bombing in 1916.

A United Press dispatch to The Record News Thursday afternoon said one John McDonald is being sought by the Mooney-Billings Defense league to support an affidavit in which he contended that he gave perjured testimony in the trials which resulted in the convictions of Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings for having participated in the San Francisco bombing.

The dispatch also quoted the Los Angeles Record as having interviewed persons who had identified Tom Vernon, convicted train wrecker, as the John McDonald, wanted as a key witness in the Mooney and Billings cases. Former friends of Vernon, upon viewing photographs of the missing McDonald, had said there was a most positive likeness between the two men and that it was their belief that they were one, the dispatch said. The league in defense of Mooney and Billings, however, continued their search for the witness in an effort to gain his support of the affidavit.

Tardieu Defeats Two Attacks by Opposition

PARIS, July 10. (AP)—Premier Andre Tardieu's government, fighting a series of skirmishes with an increasingly dangerous opposition this week, today by strength and strategy succeeded in beating off two attacks from the left of the chamber of deputies.

After a debate in which fist fights were often threatened and a good deal of personal scuffling went on between Conservatives and Socialists, the government defeated an opposition attack on a measure dealing with finance for the numerous communes into which France administratively is divided.

COURT HEARS BOLTER PLEA

Quick Decision Promised In Wichita Case

By Record News Staff Correspondent

FORT WORTH, July 10.—The question of the Wichita county Democratic executive committee's right to keep Hoovercrats' names off the primary ballot as candidates for county and precinct chairmen is now up to the court of civil appeals here, which took the injunction and mandamus case under advisement at noon today after hearing two hours of argument.

Spokesmen for each side expressed confidence, at conclusion of the argument, that the result would be to their liking. The Hoovercrats base their hopes upon the decision in the Love case and in other cases of somewhat similar nature which, they claim, require that the voters and not the committee must pass upon an applicant's democracy. The committee members believe that their contention that the court has no jurisdiction will be upheld.

Judges Put Questions

Only two of the court's judges heard the case, Judge Irby Dunklin being absent. Again and again during the argument Judges Conner and Buck interrupted counsel with questions on various phases of the case. Some of those present thought they saw, in the trend of the questioning, some indication that the two justices might be unable to agree. Such an outcome would leave the committee free to pursue the course it has already adopted.

Intimation of an early decision was given by Judge Buck who, in limiting the arguments to one hour for each side, pointed out that the court wanted to begin its considera-

'Brains' of Lamar Bank Bandit Gang Dies on Gallows

CANON CITY, Colo., July 10. (AP)—A few minutes after Ralph Fleagle, white-haired leader of the Lamar Bank bandit gang, had made a last assertion that the state had broken its promise to spare him his life, he was hanged at the state penitentiary tonight.

The trap was sprung at 9:30 p. m. in the presence of official witnesses for the state. The outlaw was declared dead 13½ minutes later.

Until the time the black cap was adjusted over his head and the noose tightened around his neck, the desperado maintained his nerve. There was no faltering as he walked to the execution chamber.

Preparations for the execution were completed at the penitentiary shortly after noon. A formal message was received from governor W. H. Adams he would do nothing to stay the hanging.

"It was what I expected," the bandit leader commented as the warden relayed him the governor's message.

Fleagle's wife, mother and sister visited him at the prison this afternoon. The final reunion of Fleagle and his family was held in the office of Warden F. E. Crawford. They talked for a considerable time.

Although plainly making an effort to appear composed and calm as he walked to his death, Fleagle displayed no signs of a breakdown. His step was firm. His hands were clenched. His face was unusually hardened.

Fleagle stood firmly on the cement floor of the death house as the straps were adjusted around his legs and the belt and straps placed in position pinning his arms to his sides.

The gang leader went to his death without becoming a member of any church.

STATE ENTRIES SPREAD AGAIN

Blistering Sun Witnesses Busy Campaign

(By The Associated Press)

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Tom Love and Ezrie B. Mayfield, the three candidates for governor who were together at San Antonio Wednesday had scattered to as many sections of the state Thursday night, but Ross S. Sterling once more had crossed the trail of Barry Miller in West Texas.

The other two active candidates, Clint Small and Jim Young, were far from home and far from each other. Young was at Galveston Thursday night for his only Thursday speaking engagement, and Small spoke at Valley Mills Thursday afternoon and at Waco at night.

Use Radio More

With the primary only a little more than two weeks away, the gubernatorial aspirants were utilizing the radio more and more. Mayfield is the leader in the air campaigning. His address at Austin, his home, Thursday night, was broadcast by station KUT. At the same time, Small's talk was put on the air by station WACO. Sterling's speech at San Angelo Thursday morning, where Miller spoke Wednesday night, was sent out over a five-station hookup.

The candidates continued to stress the same issues for the most part, Sterling, arguing for the state highway bond issue at San Angelo, repeated his accusation that Miller was exaggerating in stating that the revenues of the state highway

Woman Hears Call Of Conan Doyle's Wraith

By T. C. WATSON
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service)

LONDON, July 10.—A humble scrubwoman, Martha Perkins, working in a psychic book store in Victoria street, was the first to receive a psychic contact from the spirit of the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, it was declared today.

While scrubbing the shop at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, Martha was seized with a heart attack, and on recovering, she said:

"I must have been in contact with Sir Arthur. I distinctly heard him calling 'oh! Mary! Mary! where are you?'"

At that time, Martha did not know that Sir Arthur was dead, for he had succumbed only 15 minutes previously at his home in Crowborough, Sussex, where his body is to be interred tomorrow.

The creator of Sherlock Holmes often visited the shop, which he originally founded, and it was a few minutes after Martha's heart attack that the news of Sir Arthur's death arrived at the store.

Mary, the person whose name Martha heard so distinctly, is Sir Arthur's only daughter, who was the only member of the family absent from the death-bed. Mary, thinking her father would recover, had gone away for the week-end.

These facts are vouched for by Miss Neville, who manages the book shop. She said the scrubwoman has become psychic only since working in the shop, and that this fact was known to Sir Arthur.

Miss Neville believes that Conan Doyle's spirit wandered into the shop and that Martha was the only one there in a sufficiently psychic state to receive the contact, and as usual when spirits revisit the earth for the first time, the recipient of their contact experiences the death pains of the body from which the spirit has departed.

Mrs. Perkins says her pains were those of a violent heart attack, akin to that from which Sir Arthur died, and that normally her heart is most sound.

With the revealing of the spirit message, Mrs. Perkins immediately became the center of London's attention, and spiritists have besieged her with questions. Meanwhile, the news that Sir Arthur's spirit is active has again spurred mediums who believe they will be able to reach the wraith of the late departed.

"Red Cloud," internationally active spirit control, known both in America and England to his favorite mediums, has promised to do all possible to contact Sir Arthur's spirit on Sunday night for spiritualists at a memorial service in Albert hall.

Doyle's Message to Humanity Concluded in Dialogue

A dialogue with the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, recorded by George Sylvester Viereck.

SCENE: The library of Conan Doyle, one of the world's most eminent proponents of spiritualism, in England.

Probably the author's last pronouncement on this subject.

(Copyt., 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

GEORGE SYLVESTER VIERECK: Why don't you ask the spirits for knowledge that would help to make man's progress less troubled?

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: If we ask the spirits for some technical point such as a problem in wireless, they reply, "you must work out your own salvation. Do not come to us with such things. Our help takes the form of inspirations. We slip ideas into your mind, but you must toil and labor to work them out." Henry Ford speaks of his helpers. I am convinced that the voices he hears are spirit voices.

VIERECK: Modern science denies your doctrine.

DOYLE: No, science moves in our direction. The atom, the ion, radiation, relativity, etc., have conspired to make scientists less cocksure than of old. In many great universities in Europe spiritualism is studied. In the beginning, when I knew less about spiritualism I was inclined to say to myself, "if the dead have nothing better to do than rap on tables, death must be a vulgar experience."

During the war, when we lost eight members of our family, including my son, I realized that this rapping is like the knock of a friend at the door.

If you hear him rap, you must ask him in. Many soldiers who have been through the fiery oven of war have reached the same conclusion. Our mind must be attuned to receive a message. We must west across the continent to Chicago.

John McDonald Queried In Mooney Case

He was found lying by the roadside near the Montague-Clay county line about 8 o'clock Thursday morning by L. P. Hodge, Bellevue city marshal, and was revived by a Bellevue physician, having been brought to the hospital here when he was in condition to be moved. He was placed in the detention ward at the hospital but Police Chief Frank Burns said Thursday he would be removed from the cell Friday and placed in a hospital room.

Familiar With Case

When questioned Thursday afternoon at the hospital by a Record News reporter, McDonald said he was in California at the time of the Preparedness day bombing and had followed the progress of the trials which resulted in conviction of Mooney and Billings. He denied, however, that he was the John McDonald who was key witness at the trials.

"I know absolutely that Tom Mooney was not guilty," he said, "but what I know wouldn't carry any weight now that he has been convicted. Besides, I would be a lot older than I am if I had been the McDonald in those trials. I would be up toward 45 but I'm only going on 36 now."

It was pointed out the bombing took place 14 years ago, which would have placed him at the age of 22 during the trials.

"Well, take a look at your telephone directory and see how many John McDonald's you find," he said.

Talks of Flying

The injured men signified no desire to talk of the bombing case, breaking off after each statement in connection with the trials with comments on air travel, airplanes and pilots. He inquired about the airports here and told of his years of flying experience and about "many a cold winter night of flying over the mountains." He said he had been in the war and "could show enough bullet wounds to make him a freak in a circus." He showed scars in his abdomen, back and shoulder which he said were left from bullet and shrapnel wounds, and pointed to a scar on his hip where he said doctors had removed a machine gun bullet lodged there.

Ploice investigations were spurred on Thursday evening when a United Press dispatch to The Record News reported that Maj. Gordon W. Little of Pawnee, Okla., famous as Pawnee Bill, doubted that Tom Vernon and John McDonald were the same. Major Lillie has known Vernon since his boyhood days in Montana when, attracted by the youth's expert horsemanship, he hired him in his "wild west" show. Vernon visited Pawnee Bill's home shortly before he was arrested in Pawnee last year on charges of wrecking and robbing trains in California and Wyoming. The major said that although Vernon was a jack-of-all-trades, he never had known of him working as a waiter, the occupation McDonald was said to have followed.

More Facts Asked

Chief Burns here Thursday evening wired the Los Angeles police department for further information in regard to the McDonald sought in connection with the bombing. An answer to the wire and information which is expected to clear the way for the next step in the investigations is expected Friday morning, the chief said.

The McDonald here said he had been making a tour of other air lines while on sick leave from his own company following slight injury in an airplane accident eight weeks ago. He was on his way to Cheyenne, Wyo., with two men with whom he had become acquainted in Fort Worth, at the time of the robbery Thursday morning. The two men claimed to be licensed airplane mechanics, he said.

When he received word that a relative in California had been seized with a paralytic stroke late Wednesday evening, he asked the two men to take him to Cheyenne, where he intended to take one of the Boeing planes to San Francisco. The two had been planning to drive to California and thence to Canada and for that reason he asked them to speed up their plans and leave Wednesday night, he said.

While stopped at Decatur for something to eat, the two men whispered to themselves but he thought they were only dissatisfied with his trying to hurry them, he said. They had driven about eight miles out of Bowie when one of the men suddenly drew a soft rubber blackjack and struck him over the head, he told officers. About $250 in checks, $78 in cash, a Lone Eagle watch given him by the Boeing system for meritorious service, a ring given him by his mother, and his pilot's license and identification papers were missing when he was revived, he said. He said it was about 7 o'clock when he was slugged.

Officers from Bellevue said McDonald had told them of having a brother living near Wichita Falls. McDonald later said he had a sister living near this city and had intended visiting her as he passed through. Asked about his mother, he was reluctant to tell Chief Burns anything about her, stating that she was in very poor health and could not stand the shock of receiving a telegram from him about his present injuries and situation. He did not say where his mother lived or give her name, nor that of relatives near this city.

Attendants at the hospital reported late Thursday evening that the injured man was resting quietly and that his condition was not serious.

Huston Wields Lash at Parley

ferred with President Hoover before the meeting and again at the noon recess. It was after this last White House conference that the belligerency of the Huston foes faded noticeably.

No Word From Hoover

Huston said he had received no word from Mr. Hoover, directly or indirectly. He said he had not talked with the president since last Sunday night when Mr. Hoover told Huston of the opposition to him. It was then the stories started that Huston would resign at today's meeting.

A solemn agreement was entered at the party conference today that all talking about the party's troubles would be ended. It was agreed Huston should make any statements that were made. He asked for an opportunity to be freed from the constant round of speculation about him, resulting from the gossip within the party.

Huston was smiling and genial as he subjected himself to a bombardment of questions by newspapermen at the close of the meeting. His lips quivered slightly when the pointed questions were put but he insisted he had not resigned; that he had not been asked to resign, and that he would speak only after the senate had adjourned.

Meeting in Fall

Asked why he was waiting for an adjournment of the senate, he hesitated and replied, "There is no particular reason for it."

He did concede that there "probably" will be a meeting of the executive committee in the fall, but he quickly added "it is customary to call the committee together before a campaign." This committee has the power to fill vacancies in the national committee organization.

Entering the meeting today aware that he faced almost unanimous opposition from his officers, Huston took command of the conference and the subject of his chairmanship did not even get up for discussion at the morning session. He himself brought it up at the afternoon meeting.

"I discussed some of the erroneous and contradictory stories in the press about me and that opened a full and frank discussion," he said.

Frank Hawks who was scheduled to take off from here for New York tomorrow for a transcontinental air speed dash may postpone his departure until next week, he said today, to make a change in the cooling system of his motor. The change probably will hold him here until the first of the week, he said, when he will go by easy stages to New York to await favorable weather for a round-trip speed flight.

department would be $50,000,000 this year.

"Miller is trying to fool the people," Sterling said. "He could easily find out that the revenues last year were less than $1,000,000."

Love Confident

Love, en route to Denton from South Texas, stopped at his Dallas headquarters long enough Thursday to repeat his expression of confidence in the outcome.

"In South Texas, the dry vote is substantially a unit in my support while the wet vote is hopelessly divided among my opponents," Love said. He said that Miller would carry the "wet" counties of Guadalupe and Comal, largely through the active support of A. J. Wirtz of Seguin, senate leader, and that Mrs. Ferguson would lead in the "wet" county of Fayette.

"A remarkable phase of the campaign in South Texas is the desperate effort that is being made to get the support of these wet counties for my friends, the dry chairman of the highway commission (R. S. Sterling)," Love said.

"I am told that his backers are urging his support on the ground that the counties that support him will get preferred treatment in allotments from the highway fund. This sort of campaigning I am sure the chairman of the highway commission does not know of and does not approve of."

Keeping on Run

Love spoke four times and Sterling three Thursday while all the other candidates were content with one or less speeches. All of Love's talks were at Denton. Speaking on the courthouse square Thursday afternoon, he urged the voters to guard against anyone buying governor's office. He pointed out that a statute forbade a candidate from spending more than $8,000 in the first primary.

After his appearance at San Angelo, Sterling spoke Thursday afternoon at Winters and Thursday night went to Abilene, the home of his fellow member of the highway commission, W. R. Ely.

Miller rested Thursday night after speaking at Springtown in Parker county in the afternoon. Before going to Austin, Mayfield addressed a crowd at Lockhart Thursday afternoon. Yoakum was the Thursday night stop of Mrs. Ferguson.

Small Claims West

In the address prepared for delivery at Waco tonight, Small said that West Texas was for him and that that section had grown until it polled more than one-third of the vote. He added, however, that he would represent the whole of Texas. He stated several of the candidates were too well known to be elected governor, singling out Love as a "trouble maker" and "strife breeder."

From Amarillo came word that plans were completed Thursday for an all-Panhande rally for Senator Small there Friday night. Every city in the Panhandle was expected to send delegations and six bands had been promised. Speakers will include John Erhard of Dallas, Small manager in North and East Texas, and Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock, Small's colleague in the state senate.

John Davis of Dallas, former state senator, went to Hillsboro Thursday night to be the principal speaker at the organization of a Miller-for-Governor club there. J. D. Buster, Sherman attorney, was reported campaigning for Miller in his section.

George Washington Cassell, 75, of Mexia, former resident of Plano, took a batch of campaign cards away from Miller headquarters at Dallas Thursday. Cassell took Miller to Plano in 1884 for one of his first public speeches in Texas. Miller was only 19 years old at that time.

Representative Adrian Pool of El Paso brought cheering news to Sterling and Miller headquarters at Dallas Thursday. He reported that both were gaining in his section.

When informed that charges had been made that Sterling was spending more than the allowed amount of money, attaches at his Dallas headquarters replied they were certain he was staying within the legal bounds. "Possibly his friends are making expenditures without his authorization," they added.

FIVE MEN DIE IN AIR BLAST

Lightning Blamed for Explosion of Plane

out there had been scattered showers in the vicinity all day and that local squalls were noticeable over Corpus Christi bay.

Sixth Member Saves

Frederick H. Diekrs, Kansas City lumberman, the sixth member of the party that arrived at Corpus Christi Sunday in quest of tarpon fishing, was the only survivor of the group. He decided at the last minute to let the plane leave without him while he remained at Port Aransas, across the bay from here, for more fishing.

The plane had been left at Corpus Christi until today, when Gabbert went for it, landing at the Port Aransas field to take on his passengers. After leaving the field the ship traveled about 10 miles before it crashed.

Dierks bade goodbye to his companions at the air field.

Successful Trip

"They had had a successful fishing trip and were talking about reaching Kansas City tonight," he said.

"The plane made a perfect takeoff. I stood watching it until it was fully 4,000 feet up. The sky was clear. Ahead several miles I could see an exceedingly dark cloud. I watched the plane until it disappeared in this black cloud. A few minutes later I heard there had been an accident.

"Farmers who had gathered told me the story of the accident. Some of them had noticed the plane disappear into the black cloud. All of a sudden the plane came crashing out of the cloud. One wing was off, or partly so. Before the ship was half way to the ground the gasoline tanks separated from the remainder of the plane.

"I don't suppose anyone will know positively just what happened up there in that black cloud but it seemed to be the impression of nearly all who saw the accident that the plane had been struck by lightning. What an awful ending to what had been the most perfect fishing trip imaginable."

It was Texas' second air disaster to claim five lives. A passenger plane crashed near Spur in West Texas several months ago, killing all five aboard.

Court Hears Bolter Plea

tion of the case as promptly as possible. As the committee is required by law to start printing the ballots next Monday, failure to render a decision before that day would occasion some confusion.

F. W. Fischer of Wichita Falls appeared for the committee. G. A. Smoot of Wichita Falls and W. M. Taylor of Dallas, the latter a supporter of Tom Love for governor, appeared for the relators. About a score of Wichita county citizens attended the hearing.

The Hoovercrats are seeking to mandamus the committee to print the names of their candidates for county and precinct chairmen and are also asking an injunction to restrain the committee from printing the ballots without including their names.

Jurisdiction Questioned

The committee contends that in the absence of any statute explicitly defining its authority with regard to candidates for party office, it is justified in establishing its own rule and in barring from the ticket those who it declares to be Republicans. It contends also that the failure of the applicants to state that they were Democrats and to pledge themselves to support the primary's nominees gave the committee ample grounds for its action.

The chief contention on behalf of the committee was that the court of appeals is without jurisdiction in the case for the reason that a mandamus may not be obtained from an appellate court except where there is an agreed statement of facts, which is lacking in this case.

The relators contend that the decision in the Love case stripped the county committee of any authority it might have had or could pretend to have to bar the applicants. Decisions were cited tending to show that the rule is that the voters, not the committee, should pass upon such matters as the qualifications and the party regularity of those wishing to become candidates.

As the hearing came to a close, County Chairman Scurry declared he was ready to turn the committee over to the bolters if it was held that it could not be conducted in the interest of the Democratic party.

Sheppard to Stay With Naval Treaty Battle

WASHINGTON, July 10. (UP)—Because of the London treaty fight, Senator Sheppard, Democrat of Texas, announced today he would forego his plans for a personal campaign for renomination and stay here until the session ends.

Sheppard pointed out that as Democratic whip he must aid in maintaining a quorum. He added:

"I shall return to Texas immediately upon the adjournment of the present session.

"In the meantime I appeal to my supporters throughout the state to keep in mind my interests in connection with the coming primary."

BOY BANDIT'S MOTHER AIDS

Mrs. Esther Cole Pleads for Son, Ted

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 10. (UP)—A mother pleaded with Gov. W. J. Holloway today to commute the death sentence given her 18-year-old son who pleaded guilty to robbing with a gun.

Mrs. Esther Cole of Huntington Park, Calif., conferred with the governor after visiting her son, Ted Cole of Tulsa, in the state penitentiary at McAlester.

Cole received the death sentence last year when he pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery with firearms. He was sentenced to death by District Judge Saul Yager of Tulsa.

Governor Holloway has announced he would not allow Cole to die in the electric chair but he has never commutted the death sentence. He has ordered Cole removed from the death row and he is working in the penitentiary tailor shop.

"Ted looked mighty bad and the strain is telling on him," Mrs. Cole told Mabel Bassett, state commissioner of charities and corrections.

Mrs. Cole said she would talk with W. H. Woods, Oklahoma City attorney, who as state legislator wrote the statute providing death penalties for robbery with firearms. Woods has taken an interest in the case and announced that this sentence was too extreme and did not follow the intention of the law.

Ted's father, a juvenile judge at Kansas City, died when the child was two years old. Since Cole's imprisonment a child has been born to his wife.

City of San Antonio Loses Annexation Suit

SAN ANTONIO, July 10. (UP)—The city of San Antonio lost its annexation suit today when Judge George C. Calhoun of Austin held that the annexation ordinance by which suburbs were annexed last September was void.

The ruling, if sustained by the higher courts, will cost San Antonio 11,000 people from its population figure and reduce its area from approximately 80 to 36 square miles.

The ruling will nullify the city's municipal bond issue of last May when nearly $5,000,000 was voted for civic improvements.

NEW YORK, July 10. (UP)—A letter has been dispatched to President Hoover by the Pan-American Fellowship of Reconciliation suggesting complete withdrawal of United States troops in Nicaragua. The letter suggested that "American imperialism" was a breach of the Kellogg pact.

ART COLLECTION SOLD

NEW YORK, July 10. (INS)—The Gustave Dreyfus art collection in Paris, including many old masters, has been purchased by Sir Joseph Duveen and will be brought to America, it was announced today. The purchase price was said to be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Negro Gold Star Mothers Dislike Accommodations for Trip to France

NEW YORK, July 10. (AP)—Sixty negro gold star mothers will sail on the liner, American Merchant, Saturday to visit the graves of their sons in France, but a spokesman said today that "many of them will sail unhappily because of inferior boat and hotel accommodations and discrimination made in segregating them."

Walter White, acting secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, voicing dissatisfaction of the negro mothers, said that 55 of those who expected to sail had canceled their reservations and sent a protest to President Hoover against their segregation from other groups.

Col. Alexander E. Williams of the war department, said the American Merchant, although a smaller liner than others used to carry war mothers, offered "first class accommodations." He pointed out that it is a sister ship of the Somme and the Cambral, used to transport officers and their families to Porto Rico, Panama and United States possessions.

Efforts to quarter negro mothers in midtown New York hotels failed, Colonel Williams said, because the managements refused to accept them. Hotels in Harlem were then chosen upon the recommendation of Fred R. Moore, New York negro editor. Ceremonies aboard ship and at the city hall will be conducted for negro mothers just as for white mothers, the colonel said.

Officials of the White Star line, which operates the American Merchant, said the boat offered "the same cabin accommodations" as liners carrying other war mothers on the pilgrimage to France."

Ship Abandons Mermoz' Airplane

PARIS, July 10. (UP) — Jean Mermoz's seaplane, in which he had hoped to cross the South Atlantic from Brazil to Africa, was abandoned by the dispatch boat Phocee and sank in the ocean, the Aeropostale company announced today.

The Phocee, an Aeropostale vessel, had taken the seaplane in tow after Mermoz and his two companions made a forced landing near the ship yesterday when well across the ocean on their flight from Natal, Brazil, to Dakar, Senegal.

The Phocee continued its voyage to Dakar with the aviators and the mail safely aboard.

Capone-Owned Club In Chicago Raided

CHICAGO, July 10. (INS)—The Cotton club, which government agents claim is owned by Ralph Capone, brother of Al, was raided early today by prohibition forces. Joseph J. Murphy, cashier, Henry Girompiny, cook, and Harry Macrae, waiter, were arrested. The owners face contempt proceedings, since the night club is under temporary injunction for dry law violation.

The agents, who entered the place at 2 a. m. and remained until 5, said they found bottles of liquor in the kitchen and on the guests' tables.

Health Expert Warns Against Looking at Thermometer

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 10. (UP)—If Oklahomans wish to escape the discomfort of the prevailing hot weather, they should not spend too much time watching the thermometer, State Health Commissioner Clyde W. Beson, said today.

"It is disturbing to the peace of mind and makes the heat feel like a personal affront," Beson said.

Beson warned against undue exertion during the warm weather and said that proper clothing is often the controlling factor in a person's comfort.

New Time Payment Plan To Be Used

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—A general reduction of prices and the adoption of a time payment plan for the summer months have been announced by Montgomery Ward & company.

George B. Everitt, president, said the new prices were the lowest quoted by his company in many years, being virtually on a pre-war basis. The new time payment plan will be effective until Sept. 15 on all purchases of $25 or more excepting groceries.

Mr. Everitt said the company considered the plan a constructive move, intended to stimulate consumer buying. "Even a small upturn in demand will start order to factories, wheels turning and a decrease in unemployment, leading to a general upward trend in business," his statement said.

Sales of new automobiles in Oklahoma since Jan. 1 show a decrease of more than 10,000 over the same period in 1929.

Tea-Shower Pretty Honor Given Popular Bride-Elect

Pink and green, the bride-elect's chosen colors, were again emphasized Thursday afternoon, when Miss Mildred Mays of Atlanta, Texas, whose marriage to Joe B. McClung of that city has been announced for July 16, was honoree at one of the lovely affairs of the week in a tea-shower given by Mesdames John Ebner and C. V. Reynolds at the home of Mrs. Ebner on Monroe street from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Tinted shasta daisies, clusters of pink crepe myrtle, ferns and feathery sprays of sea lavender made the house seem a summer garden and the dining room was particularly beautiful with the table holding a great massed center of these flowers and tall pink candles in green crystal holders emphasizing the motif.

In the receiving line with the charming brunet bride-elect were Miss Dolores Peavy and Mesdames Jasper Ferguson, Clifford Deaton, H. A. McCarty, John Ebner and C. V. Reynolds.

Mrs. Ray Hirschi presided over the bride's book and in the dining room, the pretty girls serving were Misses Madelyne McCarty, Mary Alice Johnson, and Wilma Brown.

Miss Maxine Champion presided over the table where a heap of beautifully wrapped gifts spoke the popularity of the honoree and a lovely gift noted among them was the handsome electric outfit presented by the hostesses. Pink and green ribbons and pink buds and blossoms made the gift table a lovely spot.

The refreshment course emphasized the pretty summer motif. With a cool green punch and green ice, cakes were of pink embossed in a deeper pink and green leaves. The artistic plate was served with a dainty guest favor of tinted shasta daisies and fern tied in pink and green ribbons.

Among those bidden were Mesdames Jasper Ferguson, Ray Hirschi, J. O. Presley, C. M. Hester, J. M. Bland, Ed Crump, R. A. Wolf, Emmett O. Moore, R. Porter, Bert Baber, Fred Sehmann, Gordon Caldwell, Misses Reva Rae Brown, Mary Catherine Gould, Lena Fisher, Sadie Fisher, Dolores Peavy, Lona Brown, Juanita Kinsey, Juanita Bachman, Mary Tancred, Mesdames T. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Not but one time in our life have we "camped out." And we have never forgotten it. We know of two Wichita Falls families who are going, one to New Mexico and one to Colorado, to camp through the summer, and we were asked to go with one of them. The words keep ringing in our ears, "By punctual eve the stars were lit," and we do wish that we might be able to put up at "God's green caravanseral."

Thursday morning the birds seemed to be mocking at us for living beneath a roof. We think it was just one mocking bird, but he used the language of his kin. It made us think of Charles Darwin's letter to his wife, "At last I fell asleep on the grass," he said, "and awoke with a chorus of birds singing around me and squirrels running up the tree, and a woodpecker laughing; and it was as pleasant and rural a scene as ever I saw; and I did not care one penny how any of the birds or beasts had been formed." That's much more interesting talk from Darwin than his thoughts on evolution.

Birds were the things held forth to lure us in Colorado. And having lived there, it is strange no memory of birds links us with the state. We lived in no woods, however. We lived in Pueblo and in Denver and our only clinging memory of Pueblo is lilacs and floods while in Denver, appetite ruled for first in our thoughts are the grapes and pears and melons and the delicious little brick cheeses made in the city. Then came the parks and the snow shining on the mountains.

We would like to camp. Our one experience was in the bottoms of the Forked Deer river, so named because its prongs ran out like the many prongs of a deer's horns and the lowlands of a river are always the "bottoms" in Tennessee. Those bottoms are lush and green, but when one camps there, it is necessary often to build a smudge to get rid of the mosquitoes.

But at that, it is sheer happiness to sleep beneath the stars at any time. We know a couple in Wichita Falls who each night take to their open air beds a pair of strong binoculars to gaze upon the stars and moon and the deep blue of the Texas sky. Who would say they are not better acquainted with celestial things than every day folk?

And to a person with imagination, it is like going back to primeval times to live in the deep woods. We have "played like" at it. Once in Mississippi when, after being lost in a deep cane brake, we came into a depth of unbroken timber. And once in Spearfish Canyon, S. D., when after wading for miles in the sparkling little stream, "making portage" round the fords, we climbed a precipitous cliff and rested in a virgin pine forest. We imagined painted Indian faces peeping out at us. But even at that, the peace was that of "green pastures and still waters."

Dorothy Wonders If Rich Girl Has Right To Poor Girl's Job

Is the Poor Little Rich Girl Entitled to Compete With the Poor Girl for a Job, or Must She Live a Life That Has no Meaning for Her in Order to Assure the Poor Girl a Living Wage?

Yesterday no girl went out into the world to earn her own living unless she was driven to it by dire necessity. Today so many girls, who do not need work, go into business that it has become a fine ethical question as to the right of the girl who has cake to eat to take the bread and butter of the poor girl out of her mouth.

For there are not enough jobs to go around, and when Gwendolyn Millionbucks goes into the front door of an office or a shop she automatically pushes little Mamie Nocent out of the back door, and that this is hard on Mamie no one can deny.

"Why do these girls, who have fathers able and willing to support them and give them every luxury, come down and steal our places from us? Why aren't they satisfied with their parties and their bridge and their golf and their pretty clothes and their fine cars?" cry the poor girls. "What they earn doesn't mean a thing to them. They blow a week's wages in on a bunch of orchids, or a pair of slippers, but our pay envelopes mean food and shelter and warmth and the decencies of life to us and our families, maybe medicine for a sick little brother or sister, or some comfort for an old mother.

"At Christmas the store I work in took on a lot of additional saleswomen, many rich girls among the number, and when the rush was over and the extra help was let go, it was nearly always the rich girls who were kept and the poor ones who were discharged.

"Why, I saw girls in shabby coats, and with broken shoes, poor little thin, half-starved girls who had been hoping and praying that they had landed a job at last, go off crying when they got their dismissal, and I saw rich girls, who had not only kept their places, but had been advanced to better ones, ride off in limousines driven by liveried chauffeurs who had been waiting for them around the corner, and I wondered how they could be cruel and selfish enough to take the work that they didn't need, and that the poor girl needed so desperately."

"Of course I don't need the money," says the rich girl, "but money isn't everything, nor do the things that money buys supply your every need and want. You can be just as hungry for some real purpose in life as you can be for food. You can die of boredom just as surely as you can of starvation.

"I hate and loathe what is called society, and I think no other life on earth is so deadly dull and monotonous as that of the girl who has to drag around to endless parties and lunches and dinners, gorging herself on food she doesn't want to eat, meeting the same group of people whom she knows by heart, listening to the same stories, hearing over the same jokes she has heard a thousand times before, giving ear to the same old scandals.

"Of course there are girls who adore that sort of life and who get a kick out of it. Good. Let them go to it. But it is not for me. I got to the place where I felt I would scream if I heard another jazz band, and throw things at my next dinner party. I was fed on the cinders, ashes and dust of so-called amusements. What I wanted was work. Hard work. Something constructive to do. Something that you had to use your brains about. Something in which you had to match your wits against other people's wits.

"You see I am my father's daughter, and he is one of the self-made men who started out with a collar button and has run it up into a chain of department stores, so I have his trading blood in my veins and maybe a little of his talent. Biologists tell us, you know, that daughters inherit more directly from their fathers than sons do, so why shouldn't a girl get a love of business from a business father?

"And if a rich girl wants to work why hasn't she a right to do so? Nobody thinks a rich man's son should sit down in idleness and live on his father just because he doesn't need to support himself. On the contrary, we have a contempt for the waster and spender sons of the plutocracy. We think they should have manhood enough to follow some useful occupation, yet every one who does displaces a poor boy just as much as a rich girl displaces a poor girl when she goes to work.

"So there we are, and I see no way out of it unless rich women, who have a yearning for the business life, develop their talents to the point where they will be able to establish commercial enterprises in which they can give many other women work.

"The poor girl who sees a rich girl get the job she wants and watches the rich girl's rapid advance, calls it favoritism and thinks that the rich girl has some pull that she hasn't.

"To a degree this is true because the rich girl has influence and a clientele that she can bring with her that is valuable to her employer. But after she gets a job she has to make good on it, and she does that because she has generally had a better education, and better trained taste than the poor girl, and a social experience teaches her how to approach people and 'sell' herself to them.

"Also she works because she wants to, not because she has to, as the poor girl so often does, and so she puts more pep and enthusiasm into her job. In business it is the survival of the fittest. And may the best woman win."

So said the rich girl, and it leaves the question of whether the girl who doesn't need to work should come in competition with the girl who does need to work up in the air until old dame nature settles it by sending some good looking chap along and then suddenly a home looks better than any career to both the poor girl and the rich girl.

Hot, Dry Weather Retarding Cotton

DALLAS, July 10. (UP)—Scant subsoil moisture and suddenly hot, dry weather have proved unfavorable for the best growth of cotton in the western half and along the eastern edge of Texas, the Dallas Morning News will say Friday in its weekly crop report.

"Weather, usually regarded as ideal for cotton, has been distinctly unfavorable for the cotton crop in the western half and along the eastern edge of Texas during the last week, emphasizing the effect of extremes earlier in the season," The News will say.

"With scant subsoil moisture the western area has suffered quickly in a drouth which is not unusual in that territory, while indifferent recovery of plants in the east and northeast sections from excessive rains and sudden high temperatures left them unprepared to make the most of the hot, dry weather. Conditions are more favorable in North Texas, where moisture is sufficient at present and in the central area where actual suffering is confined for the most part to badly washed or replanted fields.

"Moisture is sufficient for the present needs along the northern and western fringe of the cotton belt but plants are reported dying or blooming in the top at various points on the low plains. The entire West Texas crop has been checked sharply with plants too small at the present stage to put on an average crop."

G. O. P. LEADERS FEEL BETTER

Primaries Remove Part Of Pessimism

By HERBERT LITTLE

WASHINGTON, July 10. (UP)—Republican primaries in one-fourth of the states have indicated, party leaders say, that there is no undercurrent of revolt within the party against the administration. From the developments of the candidacies for the house of representatives, they have gained confidence in their ability to hold their majority there.

Off-year elections are notable for their tendency to throw out the "ins" and the final decision, which has been privately feared by many Republicans, will not be made until the Democrats and Republicans meet squarely at the polls in November.

Senate Contest

The fights for senate places are in a different category. Democrats have little hope of capturing control of the senate, because only three more than one-third of the senators are up, and there is little chance of overturning the present Republican margin of 17 votes.

The house margin of the Republicans is 103 votes. Democrats would have to capture 53 seats and hold all their present ones to gain control, organize the house and seize the chairmanships of all committees and put the speaker's gavel, now held by Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, in the hand of John Nance Garner of Texas.

In none of the 12 states which have nominated so far, including the important Republican states of Pennsylvania, Illinois, and New Jersey, has there been any serious challenge of the party organization.

Republican political men forsee they will lose some of the house seats won in the Hoover landslide of 1928—some of those from the former "solid South" which now appears to be reverting to the Democratic party—probably in Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, Missouri, and perhaps also in Indiana.

Economic Nub

But the problematical seats in these so-called "border" states do not number more than 40, say the Republican leaders.

Upon the economic situation, they predict, may depend the ultimate outcome. If business and employment pick up after the dull summer months of July and August, they expect their chances to be very good in November.

The only prominent incumbent in the house who has lost out in the primaries so far is M. Alfred Michaelson of Illinois, who was first reported nominated, but more recently counted out in a checkup of votes. Leading Republican house members in Illinois who stood successfully in the primary include Chindblom, Reid, Britten, Denison, De Priest, Yates, and William and Morton Hull.

In Indiana, Rowbottom, Elliott, Vestal, Purnell, Wood, and other leading incumbents won. In Iowa 10 of the 11 incumbents were renominated, the other having won the senatorial nomination. In Maine three out of four incumbents won. The fourth being named for the senate. Nine incumbents out of 10 were named in Minnesota. New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania and South Dakota returns show the same indications, the Republicans now holding a majority in the delegations from all these states.

Rescued French Fliers En Route to Senegal

DAKAR, Senegal, July 10. (AP)—Jean Mermoz, French air mail flier, and his two companions who were forced to descend on the sea yesterday while en route from Brasil to Africa, were en route here today aboard the dispatch boat, Phocee, which rescued them.

As the sea was rather rough it was out of the question to tow the seaplane. All detachable things were removed and the plane set adrift about 600 miles southwest of Dakar.

Sutro Company's Stock Suspended

NEW YORK, July 10. (UP)—The final chapter in the colorful history of Manhattan Electric supply stock was recorded today in the suspension from the New York stock exchange for three years of the firm of Sutro and company, one of the largest stock exchange commission houses in the United States.

James H. McGean, floor member of Sutro and company, was suspended and the firm thus automatically eliminated from stock exchange privileges. Logan & Bryan will assume Sutro & Co. open exchange contracts.

Suspension resulted from alleged wash sales in the stock of Manhattan Electrical Supply, a stock with a hectic career on the exchange for the last 10 years and one that caused losses of many fortunes and making of others.

Manhattan Electric Supply is now extinct in name, having been substituted a little more than a week ago by a new company, American Machine & Metal, Inc.

The specific charge against Sutro & Co., by the stock exchange was "that through the manner in which the 44th street branch office of Sutro & Co. was conducted, transactions to buy and sell the same security were executed at the same time, and at the same price, and in the opinion of the governing committee did not involve a change of ownership."

Stops Pain Without Deadening Nerves

Of course you want immediate relief from pain, but why use strong drugs that deaden your nerves? Capudine relieves headaches, neuralgia, etc., just as quickly and soothes the nerves.

Capudine acts at once because it is liquid. Solid remedies are slower; your system must first dissolve before absorbing them.

When in pain take two teaspoonfuls of Capudine in water. You will be delighted with the speedy relief. Thousands keep a bottle of Capudine always handy at home and at their place of business. Why not follow this wise example and avoid suffering? All drug stores in single doses, and 10c, 30c and 60c bottles.—Adv.

DOYLE'S VIEWS ON HAPPINESS

Spiritualist Tells What Makes Hell

have a medium—a telephone connecting us with the other world. The conditions must be perfect. There must be someone willing to talk to you on the other side and you must be willing to listen. (With deep earnestness). Spiritualism is either rot or madness or the most important thing in the world. For me it had blotted out everything else. I have lectured on spiritualism in Africa, Australia, America and at home. Faith in spiritualism is strong everywhere. A recent inquiry of the London Daily News elicited 10,000 replies. Twenty-five hundred stated that the case was "not proved." Seventy-five hundred expressed a belief in spiritualism. (There is a gentle rapping at the door. It is not, however, a spirit, but Lady Doyle inviting us to a cup of tea. Seated at the table in the large dining room, we continue our conversation).

VIERECK: Has Lady Doyle ever seen the fairies? Do they help in the management of the house like the Kobeld in fairy tales?

LADY DOYLE: (Shaking her head smilingly). The fairies have never bothered or helped me.

VIERECK: Are you a convert to spiritualism?

LADY DOYLE: I was not fully converted until the war. I was not converted by my husband but by my personal experience and by the three brothers.

experience of a friend who lost

VIERECK: Matrialists would say that the human mind invents the hereafter because it cannot face the thoughts of its own annihilation and the total loss of its loved ones.

LADY DOYLE: Spiritualism takes away the fear of the great abyss. It fills the heart with anticipation of happiness.

VIERECK: What happiness do you anticipate?

DOYLE: Not singing hymns, or strumming a harp. Life goes on after death. From all reports which I have received, we have a definite home on the other side. We do not drift about like gaseous shadows. Our fate in the other world is linked with the souls of those we love.

LADY DOYLE: Heaven is harmony.

VIERECK: Do we meet our relatives on the other side?

DOYLE: Not necessarily.

VIERECK: Are husbands and wives always reunited?

DOYLE: Not unless they harmonize.

LADY DOYLE: One message said: "Over here the heart is never hurt."

DOYLE: Our dear ones hover near us while love is there. Later on they move to a second heaven. Then to a third and on and on and on.

VIERECK: Does this mean then that the soul like the body passes through various stages of evolution?

(Doyle nods).

VIERECK: Does spiritualism recognize hell?

DOYLE: Evil, selfish back-biting people, people who do not play the game are excluded from heaven. They live among themselves. This is the only hell of spiritualism.

LADY DOYLE: But they may advance if their conduct warrants. Some may be left behind a year or two, like children in school.

DOYLE: A year or two or an eon or two. Before God, a thousand years are as one day.

VIERECK: Where is heaven?

DOYLE: The kingdom of the spirit may be in this very room. The spirits may live in the same world as we, governed by another rate of vibration. The land of the spirit may be simply a fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh dimension.

VIERECK: Einstein told me modern mathematicians include in their calculations an infinite number of dimensions.

DOYLE: Einstein merely expressed what every spiritualist knows. Some time ago, I read an article in an American magazine called Seven Minutes in Eternity. This article, written by an American journalist, upon his own experiences in a trance, corroborated our gospel. After death the new etheric body lies resting for a time. There is something like a bath in the waters of the spirit and a new birth. Then we realize there is no death. After that we are overcome by unspeakable happiness. I have preached all this for years and this account was only what I have proclaimed from American platforms time and again.

VIERECK: Are you a psychic yourself?

DOYLE: No. My guide comes through my wife.

VIERECK: Are spiritual messages always clear?

DOYLE: It depends on the conditions. At one session three distinct spirit voices were speaking at one time while the medium lay in a trance. The spirit of Stead addressed itself to a journalist present. At the same time a lady spoke conveying a personal reminiscence to my wife. Finally there was a mother sending a mesage to her son, an important mesage, a message that I would like to impress upon you.

VIERECK: What was that message?

DOYLE: "We are never too old to learn a great new truth."

VIERECK: Is spiritualism inimical to other religions?

DOYLE: By no means. The spirit of the universe manifested itself on the earth in Buddha, Moses, Christ and Mohammed. It manifests itself today in the new movement. There is nothing in spiritualism that is irreconcilable with the Sermon on the Mount. The new knowledge fills the old forms and gives a new reality to religion. Religion is half dead today. It can be resuscitated only by spiritualism. The Jew, the Catholic, the Protestant, the Mussulman, the Hindu all believe that life is continuous. But they do not all realize that communication with those who have passed on is possible. Spiritualism is the most important contribution to religious thought. No other religion tells us definitely what happens after death. The pagans did not know. They went to the oracles as we go to fortune tellers but they lacked spiritual insight.

VIERECK: May I write freely what you have told me?

DOYLE: Yes. You may say anything about me, about my house, you may call me a fool or a scoundrel, but do not ridicule my faith.

(Doyle accompanies the interviewer to his car and waves a friendly good-bye. The car is about to start).

DOYLE: (Asking the chauffeur, with a motion of his hand, to wait). General Booth at the end of one of his meetings saw a young man leaving the hall. The general stopped the youth and said sternly: "Are you saved?" The young man looked at him in surprise and said: "No, sir, I am a journalist." I hope that your attitude toward spiritualism will be somewhat more enlightened. (He smiles and waves his hand goodbye).

VIERECK: (To the chauffeur). Do you ever take part in Sir Arthur's seances?

CHAUFFEUR: Yes, sir. Sir Arthur is very kind. He treats me like an equal.

VIERECK: Are you a believer?

CHAUFFEUR: It is a little too deep for me.

VIERECK: Has Sir Arthur converted many of the villagers?

CHAUFFEUR: He has many converts elsewhere, but few at home.

Sweepstake Prize Mystery Unravelled

LONDON, July 10. (AP)—The great Calcutta sweepstake mystery caused by the telegraphing from Calcutta of conflicting numbers as to the ticket which had drawn the Derby winner, Blenheim, has been solved at last—and seven Barnstable workmen are happy.

Then men who held the ticket which they were told had drawn Blenheim had their happiness dashed soon after the race when they were told there had been some mistake in the number. But today the full prize money of something like a half million dollars was paid over to them by a London bank.

The seven lucky men were Percy Hogg and C. Brent, locomotive engineers; L. Locke, a road sweeper; W. Weeding, an automobile mechanic; E. M. Van Stone and A. Beer, switchmen, and F. Alford, a porter.

Judge J. B. Robinson of Marysville, Kan., was called out of bed four times during May to perform marriages.

GASOLINE 'WAR' SINKS PRICES

Five Cents per Gallon Is Charged on Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10. (AP)—Gasoline retailed as low as 5 cents a gallon, including a 3-cent state tax, as the price cutting war raged on the Pacific coast today. Predictions were widely made the price would be pounded down to the state tax of 3 cents in California.

The price reached the 5-cent level in Fresno yesterday. One large distributing company in Tacoma which had been selling at 7½ cents retail planned to shade that quotation by 1 cent a gallon. Another firm announced a wholesale price of 4½ cents in Tacoma.

The lowest retail price in Los Angeles was 8½ cents, including the 3-cent tax. Seattle motorists were paying 9½ to 11 cents, including a 3-cent tax. Portland retail prices ranged from 10 to 13½ cents, including a 4-cent tax. Quotations in San Francisco ranged from 10 to 14 cents, including tax.

Independent dealers in San Francisco have asked Governor Young to aid in having gasoline distributors classified as public utilities operating under regulation by the state railroad commission.

New 'Jean Valjean' Seeks Clemency

ATLANTA, July 10. (INS)—The second clemency appeal of Robert Elliot Burns, 20th century Jean Valjean, serving a six to ten-year chain gang sentence for a $4 robbery, this afternoon was taken under advisement by the Georgia prison commission.

It may be several days, or several months, before the commission hands down its decision. It was generally expected, however, that the commission would not delay its verdict for more than a week or so.

Burns escaped from the gang a few weeks after he was sentenced. He went to Chicago and became publisher of a civic magazine there. His whereabouts were not known to Georgia authorities until his former wife revealed that he was the escaped convict from Georgia. He was returned to the chain gang.

Home Owner Draws Attack When He Charges Fence With Electricity

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—John Kulczak built a fence around his yard. That was all right.

But Mr. Kulczak went further. He connected the metal fence with the electric current of his house circuit. That, it now seems, was not so right.

Neighbors told the police. Mr. Kulczak was arrested. They said is was illegal diversion of current for one thing. Some one else discovered that if a person stood on wet grass and touched the fence with its 110 volts he might be killed.

The humane society is squinting inquiringly into the matter on account of the possibility that dogs might have been injured against the fence. The fire attorney has wagged an angry finger in Mr. Kulczak's direction because of the fire hazard. The fire insurance company is upset.

Viewed dispassionately, it seemed an odd thing to do, but, as Mr. Kulczak pointed out, he was getting very tired of having neighbors' children and pets use his yard as a playground, and something just had to be done.

William S. Cuthbert, Atlantic City director of public safety, was the grand marshal of the procession, which was reviewed by officers of the grand lodge and city officials.

In line was Mayor Harry Bacharach, who was sworn into office today, succeeding the late Mayor Anthony M. Rufu Jr.

Rebels Victors In Surprise Attack

SHANGHAI, July 10. (AP)—With a surprise attack invading northern rebels swept government troops before them today and penetrated 25 miles farther south to Tsinging, Shantung.

Caught unprepared by this latest move in China's civil war, Nationalists hurried reinforcements and are reported planning a counter offensive with 50,000 men commanded by President Chiang Kai-Shek.

Westward on the northern front, Nationalists claimed their plunge toward Kaifeng, rebel stronghold in Honan, was continuing. Elsewhere in this section, a half million men rested, spent by two weeks' indecisive fighting.

Keep Cool this summer with home-made iced Drinks

Sweetened to taste with Sugar

THINK of the variety of beverages you can make with tea, coffee, chocolate, lemons and other fruits. When chilled with ice and sweetened with sugar you couldn't ask for more refreshing and taste-pleasing hot-weather drinks.

You can also make sparkling punches by adding carbonated bottled beverages to the fruit juices. These bottled drinks are always pure and delicious because they are made under most exacting standards. It pays to keep them on hand.

Cool drinks sweetened with sugar belong in the summer diet. They satisfy thirst and invigorate the system. A flavored milk drink in the late afternoon overcomes fatigue and causes one to eat the evening meal with calm enjoyment. The Sugar Institute.

Prophecy

Time to act as though nothing mattered,
Hide the bruises and stem the tears;
Dead the fire and the ashes scattered,
Tokens drab of the vanished years;
Who remembers the vows we uttered?
Who remembers the lanes we strolled?
Fairy castles are barred and shuttered—
Eyes are sullen and lips are cold.
Thus we come to a sorry ending.
We who played at a losing game;
Time for healing and a time for mending
Scars we gained at a fitful flame.
Little I care to stop or reason
Why we've quarreled or why we're through.
Save the tears for another season—
I'll be needing them—so will you!
—ST. JAMES INFIRMARY.

Gag

Maxie Rosenbloom, the light heavyweight champ, took Harry Bow and Clara Richman to witness the Dexter park bouts the other night. Most of the fighters gave listless performances and the crowd was fed up.

The star bout brought on a pair of lazy heavyweights who clung to each other, and otherwise refused to fight for five rounds. Finally, a heckler decided to "ride" the fighters, who were in a tight embrace.

"Hey!" he cried, "why don't you bums get married?"

And Harry and Clara got up and took a bow.

On Second Thought

The only difference between Earl Carroll's "Profanities" and Aristophanes' "Lysistrata" is that Mr. Carroll's girls are prettier.

Oop!

After the delightful Nancy Carroll distinguished our radio program Monday evening she motored us back to Broadway. Her driver didnt hear the traffic whistle to halt, and he kept going. The officer, however, soon caught up and motioned him to the curb. Nick Kenny, of the staff, tried to talk the cop out of issuing a summons. "If you are a nice guy," said Nick, "maybe Miss Nancy Carroll, the star, will give you her autograph."

"That's very sweet of you," was the retort, as he handed over the ticket, "and here's mine."

O. Mr. Wilstach!

By all means . . . include the following swelegants in your annual Dictionary of Best Similes: Judge: As scarce as nickels and dimes in a taxi-driver's change pocket . . . Rose Natkins': Her alleged heart was as cold as a streetsweeper's fingerprints in February . . . James R. Quirk's: Natural as an Italian's appetite for garlic . . . Edith Hudnall's: She looked like a left turn on a red right . . . Nancy Boyd Turner's: Wild as a tiger's lust . . . H. I. Phillips': As tired of golf bags as a porter on a Pinehurst train . . . Rebecca West's: Cordial as an insult, and Helen Rowland's: Love like a balloon is kept up mostly by hot air.

A Form of Philanthropy

At the Palace this week for the steenth engagement is Bill Robinson, the peer of hoofers (please don't write in your objections—our wastebasket is choked to capacity now). Bill Robinson, who has been in show business for over 30 years, is 52, and he improves with each performance. He is among the major successes on the current Palace program and the most obliging guy around. Watch him willingly appear in some of the other turns after he has perspired during his own act and go into another stepping routine that ties the house into a knot.

But what we started out to report was that he taught one of his more intricate routines to a girl child within a week, and she appears in one of the encores. The lass is named Eleanor Winton—from Cleveland. She is chaperoned by her mother and her tuition is paid for by a Mr. Rosenbloom of Cleveland. Mr. Rosenbloom, it appears, is a philanthropist, and finances anyone who has ambition or who aspires for some special training. It doesn't matter what your color, creed or religion is—if you need coin to improve yourself, Mr. Rosenbloom obliges.

List Mr. Rosenbloom among The Unusuals.

The Morning Mail

"Dear Sir:" affectionately writes Jean B. Laframboise," please include the following 'Things I've Known All Along': That there are many ways of saving money but none of them so popular as spending it, and that there can't be freedom for all, considering that if one man is enjoying free speech, the other must listen."

How Cynics Are Made

It happened on Recreation Pier, 50th St. and the North river, the other week-end. A loafer was slumbering on the edge and toppled over into the Hudson. He started yelling for succor.

A Times Squareguy removed his coat and panama lid and then jumped in to rescue him. After great difficulty he saved the loafer's life.

Back on the pier the rescuer discovered that a person who obviously isn't a hero-worshiper had thefted his watch, his panama hat, which cost $25, and his pocketbook containing $100. This didn't irritate the hero, however, for he had served humanity.

After he helped carry the loafer home, though, he was rebuked by the loafer's wife, who said to him: "You are a brave man and all that sort of thing, but I wish you hadn't saved him. I had him insured for $50,000."

Chicago gangsters put 'em on the spot, but they don't call their shots.

Congress has voted to probe the shoe-string tariff. We hope they discover also how these merchant princes manage to run a shoe-string into a couple of country homes and yachts.

People who can't afford a vacation can at least take on that far away look.

They say a trip to the moon is possible now. But apparently a great number of vacationers this year have taken a little moonshine along with them.

The average husband could honestly say to his wife, "Thank goodness I haven't a talking picture of you."

It is customary to review briefly the deeds of congress as it adjourns. Here is our review: It was the 71st congress of the United States of America.

How Gangs Get Started

SINCE an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, there are several cities in this land which might study the plight of Chicago, look around their own bailiwicks and put the clamps on their own underworld gangs before it gets too late.

Chicago's gangs, a portent for the law-abiding, are not peculiar to Chicago. Every large city has them in embryo. In every case they will take the path Chicago's gangs took unless they are choked off before they get fully established.

Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland have all been troubled by gang fights lately. Cleveland's situation is a case in point, worth examining briefly because it illustrates the general rule so perfectly.

The bootleg liquor business in Cleveland, as in every other large city, is controlled by certain lawless gangs. These gangs, since they operate outside of the law, cannot go to court over trade disputes and sales agreements. They have only one remedy—the gun. Recently they have been using this remedy in Cleveland very effectively.

Five gangsters have been killed on Clevland's streets in the last fortnight. The story is the same in each case; rivalries over territorial rights, sales agreements and the like in the bootleg business. In each case the police tell how certain "known criminals" are suspected, and how certain "known speakeasies" are involved in the warfare. In each case the higher-ups are men of considerable wealth and political influence.

Now the point is that this is precisely the way Chicago's trouble all started. Chicago let it go; its citizens didn't feel that it mattered much if the bootleggers did take pot shots at one another. As a result, Chicago's gangs today are entirely out of control, and the prospect of putting them down is very slim.

In Cleveland it isn't too late. Swift and efficient action by the police and prosecutor could put the gangsters where they belong. And Cleveland is mentioned specifically here only because it is typical of other American cities.

In other words, the time to curb the gangs is before they have reached their growth. Chicago failed to do it, and has a terrible mess on its hands as a result. Cleveland—along with Detroit, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Omaha and a dozen other cities—can still do it.

If it fails it will, eventually, be where Chicago is today.

These underworld shootings are not trivial affairs, in any city. They are symptoms of a very dangerous situation. The only way to deal with them is to clean them up promptly. Delay—as in Chicago's case—is fatal.

The "Safe and Sane" Fourth

SURVEYING, at a slight distance, the Fourth of July casualties, one is struck by the thought that we have been putting most of the emphasis in the wrong place in our campaign for a safe and sane fourth.

This year the holiday celebration cost more than 200 lives. Of these, 14 were taken by fireworks, 107 by autos and 65 by drownings, with the rest due to miscellaneous causes.

Our safety campaigns have nearly all hinged on fireworks. Yet fireworks, it appears, are about one-eighth as dangerous as automobiles and about one-fifth as dangerous as plunges at the bathing beach.

The answer can be summed up in one word—carelessness. Long-continued educational work has reduced the fireworks hazard to a minimum, but the motorist and the bather still fail to take the proper precautions. Until they do, the Fourth of July will remain as the deadliest holiday on our calendar.

Niagara Claims Another

THE FATE of the sanguine philosopher who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel, to die of suffocation when the back-wash of the cataract imprisoned him for a longer time than his oxygen supply would last, is hardly surprising.

This cataract is a dangerous thing to monkey with. You can count on the fingers of one hand the people who have gone over it and lived—three is the exact total we believe. If a man wishes to risk his neck there doesn't seem to be any way of stopping him; still it might be that the police on each side of the border could find some way of restraining these impetuous dare-devils.

The cards are stacked against the venturer at Niagara. If his barrel hits the rocks a good whack he is done for, no matter how strongly it is built. If it misses, there is a good chance that it will be held behind the falls until the rider is suffocated. There isn't much chance for victory, either way. Let's hope there won't be any more attempts to carry through this risky, senseless stunt.

Q.—Why do fish bite?—A. H.

A.—American Forests and Forest Life says that contentiousness, water temperature, the angler's skill, tempting bait, and sheer perversity as well as appetite cause fish to decide whether to bite or not to bite. The pugnacity of some species causes them to strike at objects that get in their way. Feeding is governed to a great extent by temperature changes, and it is well known that fish are more or less inactive when the water temperature is low, requiring little food at such times. During the winter months they take practically no food.

Guggenheim to Aid Rocket Experiment

NEW YORK, July 10. (UP)—For 15 years Prof. H. Goddard has been experimenting with rockets to discover for science the mysteries of extreme altitudes.

His tests have proven so successful that Daniel Guggenheim has announced a grant to aid him in continuing the work. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is a member of the committee under whose direction further experiments will be made.

Although the immediate object of his rocket tests was to develop a means of getting information about altitudes of from 25 to 250 miles above the earth, Goddard feels that inter-planetary communication by means of large rockets is not impossible.

The rocket being developed will carry thermometers, barometers, electrical measuring apparatus, air traps to collect samples of the air.

The rocket will shoot straight up and come down slowly by means of a parachute. The information gathered is expected to be of special use to aviation.

Negroes Surrender After Week's Search

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 10. (AP)—Seven negroes, sought as participants in a disturbance at Emelle, Ala., July 4 in which four negroes and two white men were killed, were in Kilby prison here today.

Jacob Robertson, whose twin brother, Esau, was lynched Friday night, was brought here Monday night, and the other six were brought here Tuesday and Wednesday night, by officers who kept their arrival secret until today.

Officers who took the negroes into custody said they surrendered voluntarily after having hidden in a corn field near Emelle without food or water.

No charges as yet have been preferred against them.

The disorder started when Grover Boyd, a merchant, was shot and killed by negroes in a dispute over the purchase of a storage battery.

Mexico Protests American Laborers

LAREDO, Texas, July 10. (AP)—In an attempt to forestall an invasion of Mexico by American laborers, union employes of the saloons and restaurants of Nuevo Laredo last night blanketed that place with large posters, urging strict adherence to the Mexican constitutional provision that not more than 20 per cent of the employes of any concern be made up of foreigners.

The posters singled out one bar where it was alleged six foreigners were working with possibly some of the 10 others on the force being American citizens. Summary action was threatened if the condition was not righted by July 13.

CENSUS ENTERS LAST STAGES

Twenty States Complete Count Record

WASHINGTON, July 10. (AP)—Twenty states have shut up shop on the census.

The census bureau here has marked them "closed out," meaning that the last employe has been dropped from the payroll; the last item of expense has been marked paid; the last record sent to Washington.

Eight more states will "clear" by Saturday.

Monday will see but 31 of the 575 supervisors' offices still in operation, and those are scattered through 20 states.

Re-Checks Underway

When New York's report came in yesterday, only two more difficult jobs of city census taking remained with the bureau—the Philadelphia enumeration and the recount in St. Louis.

Census bureau experts were sent to both those cities to check on counts which were being challenged by civic organizations.

E. W. Koch, chief supervisor of the 1930 census, who had been for some time in Philadelphia, returned to Washington today.

E. K. Elsworth, who accompanied Director William M. Steuart in pre-census instruction trips, is still in St. Louis supervising a careful check of its population figures.

69,731 Counts Made

Census Director Steuart today announced that 106,233 portfolios of enumeration districts have been received by the bureau here. The districts numbered about 120,000 in all.

He said population announcements of 69,731 places — cities, towns, counties and precincts—have been made.

Unemployment announcements have totaled 20,094.

This speed in nation-wide dissemination of census facts in unprecedented in census history. In past enumerations, the people of the United States have had to wait months before such information was available. The 1930 system of having each supervisor announce his subdivisions just as soon as the count was completed quickened returns.

Twenty Finish Task

The states in which all supervisors have shut up shop are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Rhode Island and Wyoming.

The states which will finish this week are: Florinda, Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee and Utah.

That will leave 31 supervisors knitting up the tag ends as follows: Four in New York, four in Iowa, three in Pennsylvania, two each in Missouri, Texas and Wisconsin and one each in the remainder.

Will of New Orleans' Club Prexy Is Upheld

NEW ORLEANS, July 10. (INS)—The late A. J. Heinemann, owner of the New Orleans Baseball club was sane when he made his will, in which he provided that all stock losses of Larry Gilbert, club manager, should be paid from his estate, Judge William H. Byrnes decided today.

Shortly after making his will, the bachelor owner of the local Southern league franchise committed suicide in his office at Heinemann park.

Relatives attempted to have the will broken, maintaining that Heinemann was of unsound mind, due to worry over losses he and Gilbert sustained in last year's stock market crash, at the time he made out the document.

BLACK FLAG LIQUID

THIS LIQUID KILLS FLIES and MOSQUITOES like magic because "IT PENETRATES"

VITALITY!

"SURE! I can finish that today"

A strong, healthy body and mind always respond to the occasion. Employers appreciate and recognize unfailing freshness—always ready—cheerfully ready to carry on—minus that "tired feeling."

DON'T let a weakened body hold you back. Prolonged, it may result in so-called premature old age. Today's happiness and friends may be gone tomorrow. Has it ever been made clear to you that a strong, healthy body depends upon the right number of rich, red-blood-cells?

Thousands of people have a low blood count—to this may be attributed skin troubles, "run-down" systems and even more serious ailments.

Healthy blood should contain about 5,000,000 red corpuscles to every cubic millimeter—those tiny workers which give blood its color and are carriers of nourishment to every part of the body. Rich, red blood is the body's protector against infection and disease. It is dangerous to let the blood count remain below normal.

If you tire easily—lack pep—if your skin is not clear—if your appetite is "gone"—you owe it to yourself and friends to try S.S.S.

When you get your red-blood-cells back up to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, lack of appetite, skin troubles disappear. You should get hungry again and sleep soundly; firm flesh should take the place of that which was once flabby. You should feel strong. Your nerves become steady.

S.S.S. helps Nature build rich, red blood. It improves the processes by which the body is nourished.

For more than 100 years S.S.S. has been helping people regain and retain their strength and charm. Thousand of users have testified to its benefits in unsolicited letters of gratitude. Many have found it beneficial to take a few bottles at least once a year to keep their blood in good condition.

S.S.S. is made from strictly fresh vegetable drugs and is easily assimilated. All drug stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

CLAUDE WHEAT CROPGATHERED

Farmers Turn Attention To Row Grains

Special to The Record News

CLAUDE, Texas, July 10.—Harvest work is practically over in this section of the state, and the wheat turned out much better in some of the fields than was expected after the drouth. Some fields averaged 15 bushels to the acre.

Row crop farmers are busy in the cultivation of these crops. There is a big acreage of row feedstuff and some cotton in this section that will turn out a big yield if rain comes in time. Dry weather prevails again and crops are needing rain.

Dairy and poultry farming are being carried on to a great extent, and if rain fails to appear in time to make the row crops, many of the farmers will have enough proceeds from these products to carry them over another year, and will still feel independent.

Grass is dying, owing to the dry weather, but milk cows are being fed roughness in the form of bundle maize, kaffir, or cane. This feed produces milk in abundance.

Fruit is very scarce in this section this season, owing to the late freeze and snow which caught the greater portion of the fruit in the bud. There will be some pears, apples, peaches and plums, however, and strawberries are fine. These berries produce abundantly here almost every year.

Much foodstuff is canned and put on the cellar shelves for winter use. Steam pressure cookers are used for this work and much time and labor are saved by putting up a very large quantity at one time.

Briscoe County Gains 89 Per Cent

Special to The Record News

PLAINVIEW, Texas, July 10.—Population of Briscoe county gained 89 per cent in the last 10 years, according to the census figures released by O. M. Unger, district supervisor. There were 5,586 people in the county this year, as compared with 2,948 in 1920, a gain of 2,638.

Briscoe county had 679 farms this year, as compared with 546 in 1925. Unemployment for the county was placed at 164.

Much of the county's increase in population can be attributed to the opening of a large amount of farming lands by the coming of the new Fort Worth and Denver railroad.

Flighty Waitress

Miss Beulah Unruh, 23-year-old restaurant waitress in New York, took the tips of her patrons and won a flier's license. The tips were 10-cent ones and there were 13,000 of them—that's how much the course of instruction costs for the limited commercial pilot's license. Beulah, whose eyes are very blue and whose hair is very auburn, has been the recipient of much expert attention at the flying field and hopes soon to fly the additional hundred hours necessary for her coveted transport pilot's license. These photos show her as flier and waitress; she has never had a crash in either role.

Bobbitt Rules On County Oil Lease

AUSTIN, July 10. (AP)—Proceeds to a county under an oil and gas lease on county permanent school fund lands are subject to the same restrictions that govern like proceeds to the University of Texas from its school lands, Attorney General Robert L. Bobbitt ruled today.

Such proceeds, the attorney general advised Sam D. W. Low, county judge of Washington county do not belong to school districts as county available school funds, and may not be apportioned to school districts in the county.

The ruling arises, the opinion said, from state law that the oil and gas is a part of the land and that a lease constitutes a sale of the oil and gas as part of the land. As such, the proceeds must be handled as a part of the permanent school fund of the county.

TACOMA-TOKYO RACE LOOMS

Bromley to Attempt To Cross Pacific

TACOMA, Wash., July 10. (AP)—An air race across the Pacific from Tacoma to Tokyo loomed today as a possibility.

Lieut. Harold Bromley is expected here tomorrow with a monoplane designed for the flight. Bob Wark and Eddie Brown, pilot and co-pilot of the biplane Pacific Area, also announced they planned to have their ship in shape for the hop "in time to give Bromley a race."

Bromley expects to be ready for the flight in 10 days. Though the rivalry is friendly and they are "wishing Bromley luck," Wark and Brown hope to be the first to take off for Tokyo. They believe a week or 10 days may see auxiliary gas tanks installed in their plane, ready for the gruelling flight of nearly 5,000 miles.

Bromley's flight would be nonstop without refueling. Wark and Brown's would be nonstop but they expect to refuel their plane over Juneau, Alaska, again at Nome and at Petropavlosk, Kamchatka, after crossing the Bering sea.

The public has been advised not to waste bread and the minister of agriculture has ordered all wheat merchants to declare their stocks so the government may be able to fix the quantity to be imported above the legal quota.

During the day alarming reports reached Lisbon from certain parts of the interior where there is serious corn shortage.

Montana Woman Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 4 Weeks

When stout women can lose fat and at the same time gain in energy and vigor.

Gain in charm and vivaciousness.

Gain a healthy complexion and have eyes that sparkle with buoyant health.

And at insignificant cost—isn't it time to use common sense?

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewiston, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I first saw your advertisement in a Billings, Montana, paper and decided to try Kruschen Salts.

"I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

"I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give 'Kruschen Salts' a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better. Kruschen Salts had a decided effect upon the quantity of food I took and stimulated my desire to greater activity.

"I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many of my friends, in fact, have a number of them taking Kruschen Salts.

"May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince any one."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at Allison Drug store or any drug store in America.—Adv.

CHAPTER I

The wind rocked the big limousine . . . sheets of rain dashed against the windows. Heavy glass as they were, they shivered under the impact. The woman sitting on the soft mohair cushions jerked down the blinds with a white gloved hand that trembled. The next minute she picked up the speaking tube near her, groping for it in the dark of the car, and warned her chauffeur to be careful.

Not that Mallory was careless. Otherwise, Mrs. Talbot would never have hired him, or for that matter kept him. He knew she didn't like fast driving, knew that half a dozen times on any trip she would caution him, as she had now. Even when she merely went down town to shop, it was the same thing.

Devilish Night

At first it had annoyed him that she, from her back seat, should watch the road so closely when she was paying him for that task. Sometimes, still he grumbled about it at home, but he was used to it, and merely nodded when her warnings came through the speaking tube.

Devilish night. Even the windshield wiper wouldn't work fast enough.

Mallory swore under his breath as the car skidded a little into the gutter and a fountain of muddy water splashed over the hood. He swore again as a sharp voice came to his ears. He had expected it.

The car seemed to be plowing through a river, so heavy was the water on the streets. He could hardly see ten feet ahead. The rain was a gloomy leaden mass through which the street lights were dim, blotted bits of light, almost invisible.

The dull tramp of it on the roof of the car. The gurgle of it against the windows and on the hood. The air that seeped into the car was close, muggy, as if the force of the storm were compressing it into nothing.

A few hurrying cars passed, pitifully small and helpless they appeared to Mallory. Several were huddled close to the curb, waiting, he supposed, for the rain to cease.

He wiped away the fog that had settled on the inside of the windshield, but the effort was wasted. His breath brought it back again.

Through the misty blur he saw a light suddenly flash. He stopped abruptly. A traffic signal. Nearly had missed the corner. Running down the window at his side, he peered out and found his bearings.

"I'm late, Mallory. Twenty minutes already." Mrs. Talbot's voice came through the tube.

That was the way! First she was telling him to slow down, then reminding him she was late.

A Scream Pierces Storm

He touched his cap and threw in the gear, waiting for the signal. It came at last and the car plunged forward, the wheels spinning in the street. Again his window flew down and he put out his hand for a turn. When he drew back his arm his coat sleeve was drenched.

The windshield misty again. His cuff touched it quickly. Headlights pushing — ramming themselves through the rain . . .

"Twenty-five minutes late, Mallory!"

He wanted to tell Mrs. Talbot he didn't care how late she was, whether she ever got to her dinner on time, that she never should have started out in the storm, but he didn't. He only ground his teeth and gripped the wheel tighter.

Something in front of him. He couldn't see . . . Four brakes shrieked as he jammed his foot pedal to the floor! Above them a scream that sharply pierced the roar of the storm.

Mallory was shaking as he jumped from his seat to the street. A girl. God! Had he killed her? He could hear Mrs. Talbot wildly beating on the window, calling to him.

A girl. How still she was with the rain beating down on her face! He looked around quickly. There was no one on the street, not even a car in sight.

No time to linger. With a swing the girl was in his arms and he was opening the door of the tonneau.

"Let me put her on the seat, ma'am," he muttered. He laid the limp figure, dripping wet, on the cushions as Mrs. Talbot huddled in a corner.

"You've Killed Her"

"Mallory, you've killed her!" Mrs. Talbot was crying.

"We'll get her to a hospital right away."

"Mallory, wait!" But the driver was in his seat and the car was moving.

Mrs. Talbot was alone with the girl. Her face was so white, whiter than anything she had ever seen before. Suppose she were dead! The woman's face hardened. Mallory had been going too fast. She had warned him. She would tell the police that. Of course, she would have to report the accident. All Mallory's fault.

A dim light gleamed as she flashed on the dome lamp, shedding a pale glow on the seat and its burden. Gingerly Mrs. Talbot withdrew one glove and felt the girl's pulse. She couldn't tell . . . the car was moving so jerkily. Mallory was going so fast . . .

She shrieked at him through the tube and it seemed as if he answered her, but she could not be sure. At any rate, he was not slowing down. He was going faster.

The girl's wrist was so cold. Did that mean—she was dead? Mrs. Talbot was afraid of death. She shivered and looked away.

She would be terribly late now. Her fingers touched the cloisonne watch hung by a chain about her neck. Twenty minutes to nine. And she always prided herself for being on time. She had allowed Mallory plenty of time. The usual time.

The car stopped with a jerk and Mallory was around opening the door, lifting the girl in his arms.

"St. Luke's hospital, ma'am. It was closest." Then without waiting for any orders from her, he ran ahead with his burden.

Mrs. Talbot hesitated. The sidewalk was swimming with water. Her slippers! Gathering her cloak about her, she started to the door where Mallory was looking at the girl. There were tears in his eyes.

Then two internes were bending over her.

"She's not dead?" Mrs. Talbot asked, eagerly.

"No," an interne answered, shortly. Then he glanced inquiringly at the woman standing at his side. Her silver cloak was spotted with rain, silver the color of her hair. Her eyes seemed silvery, too, gray-silver. A pretty woman, one who had been beautiful.

"Do you think she will live?"

"No bones broken. She may have a concussion, though. Can't tell yet. She'd better stay here awhile—a few days, anyway."

Soft, Pale Cheeks

"I'll pay all the bills, of course," Mrs. Talbot hastened to say. "Put her in a room by herself, please, and take good care of her."

A nurse was sponging the girl's rain wet face, touching the soft pale cheeks tenderly, brushing the wavy golden hair from her forehead. How fragile, how lovely she was. Her hair so golden, her face so still, so white. Long dark lashes rested quietly on her cheeks. Above the closed eyes arched slender brown brows, so slender they seemed penciled into her forehead. Full lips, drained now of every particle of color, the lower slightly fuller than the upper.

Thin she was, too. Carefully the nurse removed the mud-stained coat and dress and covered the figure with a clean white sheet.

"You don't know her, of course?" she asked Mrs. Talbot.

"No, I don't."

"She must have a purse, somewhere." The nurse started rummaging in the pockets of the stained coat. Nothing there.

"Did she have a hat?" she asked again.

"She—she didn't have one when Mallory put her in the car." Mrs. Talbot swept into the hall where Mallory was sitting on a bench, his head in his hands, his body swaying from side to side. "Mallory! Did the girl have a hat and purse when you picked her up?"

"I don't know, ma'am. I didn't see anything but her—lying there in the street. I can go back and see. It isn't far."

Mrs. Talbot assented. After all, it was too late for her engagement.

When Mallory returned later, the girl was lying in a private room, still unconscious, her golden hair spread out over the pillow, her soft lips drooping.

At Gower and Market streets, where the accident had occured, there was no sign of a purse or hat, he reluctantly admitted. The storm was over. The street absolutely clear.

"We'll have to wait until she regains consciousness," the nurse said. "It shouldn't be long. The shock, you know—"

The girl seemed so delicate, so pale, all white and gold. The white room, the white bed, her white face. Then her hair, spun sunshine on the pillow.

"Perhaps I'd better call Mr. Dane," he suggested weakly to Mrs. Talbot.

"I've already called him, Mallory. There may be complications. The girl may sue, and I want to be protected. The doctors say there are no broken bones, but you never can tell."

Mallory was looking at the girl.

A Long Red Bruise

"Queer, not knowing who she is. She may have been on her way home, someone may be waiting for her—" Mallory's eyes were still on the girl.

"I have done all I can. We'll go home, now." Mrs. Talbot arose from the small rocker where she had been sitting.

Miss Nason, the nurse, watched her leave the room, and then turned back to the bed. The girl had been unconscious for a long time. The accident according to the chauffeur was at eight-thirty. Ten-thirty, now. She drew back the cover and looked at the long red bruise on the girl's arm. The only mark on her body.

She thought she saw the long brown lashes flutter, and looked again. No, it was nothing. But the doctor wanted her to watch carefully. Again she forced a stimulant between the girl's closed lips, and felt her pulse. Better. Stronger.

The lashes had fluttered! The girl shivered, and a spasm of pain crossed her face. Her eyes opened, great brown melting eyes, puzzled, worried.

"You've had an accident," Miss Nason said, quietly. "You're in a hospital.

"Oh!" Still the puzzled, half frightened look in the brown eyes.

"You're to stay here a few days, and then you can go home." Miss Nason spoke encouragingly, smoothing the girl's forehead.

"Home?" Her voice was low, sweet.

"Yes, if you'll tell me your name and address, I'll phone your home for you. We weren't able to find your purse." Miss Nason fished a paper and pencil from her apron pocket, and stood in readiness. "Your name and address," she prompted.

There was a short silence, and Miss Nason repeated her question.

"I——can't seem to remember," came the worried answer. "My head aches—"

"I'll give you something to put you to sleep in a minute, but I thought your family might be worried, not knowing where you are."

"I can't—remember. Where did you say I was?"

"St. Luke's hospital."

"Where is that?"

"New York City."

The girl's fingers touched her head as if to press away the pain.

"You live in the city, don't you?"

The brown eyes sought Miss Nason's face questioningly. Pitiful eyes now, pained. The voice that came from the smooth lips the nurse could scarcely hear. "I don't know. I can't remember."

"Can't you tell me where your home is?"

"No ——" Tears were sliding down the pale cheeks.

Miss Nason snapped off the light, and admonished the girl to try to sleep. Her patient was in no condition to be bothered tonight. The questioning would have to wait until morning.

Closing the door quietly after her, the nurse went in search of Doctor Haller. She found him talking to a tall, good looking stranger. Not a patient, evidently, and the hour was too late for visitors.

Dismay

"Doctor Haller, the girl in 210 cannot remember who she is. I'm worried. She's the one injured by Mrs. Talbot's car."

There was an exclamation of dismay from the stranger, and he stamped his lighted cigaret out quickly.

"This is Mr. Talbot, Miss Nason, Mrs. Talbot's nephew." The doctor nodded to the nurse. "Looks like amnesia, eh?"

"Yes. Perhaps, though, there'll be a change in the morning. I'm letting her sleep now."

"Good. We'll let her rest until morning. Don't awaken her. Don't ask her any questions when she does awaken. I'll have Doctor Raleigh look in on her about noon."

"You don't mean to say," Dane Talbot broke in, "that she can't remember her own name?"

"No, Mr. Talbot. I asked her several times."

"She must have something about her to identify her." Talbot persisted. He was frowning now, and his eyebrows nearly met over the bridge of his nose.

"I wouldn't worry, Mr. Talbot," Doctor Haller said quickly. "We'll wait until morning. She may be all right, then."

But when morning came and Doctor Raleigh, after an examination that lasted an hour, met Talbot in the hall, he shook his head gravely.

"I'm afraid we'll have to wait. Keep her here awhile. She can remember nothing of her past. Name, family or where she came from.

"Shock, of course," he went on. "Whether it was the shock of the accident or something else, I cannot say. Her bruises are superficial, and there is no brain concussion. She seems well educated, charming. She cannot even remember the accident. Rest and quiet—I have prescribed. There is nothing else I can do."

He turned away, and Dane was left alone to puzzle out the strange occurrence that had left this nameless girl on his hands. For his hands it must be. His aunt relied on him in everything, personal and business.

Fragile Loveliness

He rapped softly on the door, and Miss Nason smiled as she let him in. He found himself looking down at a pair of brown eyes, eyes filmed with tears. The eyes searched his face eagerly. The girl was beautiful. There was a dresden-like loveliness about her face, a softness about her features, a charm to her lips. She seemed just a child lying there among the white bed cloths. A very small, unhappy child.

"You mustn't cry," he begged, uneasily. He sat down on the chair beside the bed.

"I've been trying not to—but when I can't remember anything, and when I've been trying so hard to remember. You must be Mrs. Talbot's nephew—" A smile passed over her face, while a tear slid down her cheek, unheeded.

"How did you know?" he asked, quickly.

"Miss Nason described you this morning. Nice of you to come—"

Talbot was uncomfortable. He wanted to tell the girl how sorry he was. How terribly sorry, but he could find no words to do it. He could only sit and look at her, and think how lovely she was, and how pitiful it was that she could not remember who she was. He turned to Miss Nason, in his embarrassment.

"You're on day duty, too?"

"Doctor Haller thought it better I tend to her—a familiar face."

There was an awkward pause, then the girl pulled a rumpled handkerchief from under the covers, and played with it seriously. Dane eyed it curiously.

As if understanding his unspoken question the girl said simply:

"It was in the pocket of my coat. The only thing that was marked."

She handed it to him. In one corner he saw a "K," hand initialed. Dane examined it carefully, then consulted Miss Nason.

"No marks on her clothing at all?"

"I've looked over everything time and again. There was no other mark—not even a store label on her coat or dress, or shoes. If there had been we might find out who she is by asking at the stores. As it is, this is the only mark—"

"There will be inquiries as soon as she is missed," Dane said, comfortingly. "Probably today." He was thinking of the initial on the handkerchief. What it could possibly stand for. Katherine? Kitty? Kate? All derivations of the same thing. The flimsy bit of fine linen interested him. He looked at it again. The hem was rolled by hand, and the initial itself put in with tiny painstaking stitches. Had she made it herself some time in this past she couldn't remember?

"Funny, not having a name—Miss Nason says all the nurses call me 210—from the room—"

His eyes caught her smooth white hands. Delicate fingers, the nails evidently well taken care of. The palms soft. Unringed fingers.

The girl went on as if she were talking to herself: "Doctor Raleigh says I'm probably 18 or 19—"

"What do you definitely remember?" Dane leaned forward and studied her face.

"He asked me that, too. I remember waking up here—in this room—and seeing Miss Nason, although of course I didn't know her name then. She was dressed in white and stroking my forehead."

"Nothing more?"

"Nothing more."

"Do you suppose your name might have been Katherine?"

"I don't know. Doctor Raleigh asked me that, too. I'd like a name instead of a room number—210 isn't very appealing!" She laughed, a soft, tinkly laugh.

"Suppose we call you Kay, then, after the initial on this handkerchief? Would that be a name?"

A flush suffused her face, and her eyes twinkled.

"Just Kay? Nothing more? I ought to have another name, too."

"Why not call yourself Kay Smith? Until you know what your real name is. Until someone claims you." Dane suggested, hesitantly.

"Kay Smith—why not?—until someone claims me." The red lips trembled, and her eyes filled with tears again. She fought them back, bravely. "Miss Nason! Please put me down on the books—you have books, don't you?—as Kay Smith. Mr. Talbot has christened me! It's better than Miss 210!"

"It will just be temporary," Dane protested, "but if it will ease your mind any to have a name, you might as well have one. The Smith is not particularly original — perhaps we could think of a better one ——"

"No!" Her hand went up imperiously. "Kay Smith it is—until I know my real name."

Talbot arose reluctantly to go. He really wanted to stay. Something about the girl fascinated him. Her eyes, her hair, the quick smile that came to her face, and faded so swiftly. The sadness in her eyes when she had laughed. The beauty of her. So child-like, yet so wise and brave. When he had come last night at his aunt's call, he had been plainly frightened and not a little annoyed. He had no idea how badly the girl had been injured, and he knew his aunt's horror of publicity, or any newspaper notoriety.

She called on him for everything, every bit of trouble she managed to get into. Quarels in her clubs, her church, among her servants. Now this. He didn't blame Mallory. He was the most careful driver he knew. He had to be to drive Mrs. Talbot. No, the fault was not the chauffeur's. Instead, it was the storm, the rain, the slippery streets . . .

"Good-by — Kay." He took her hand, gravely.

When the door had closed after him, the girl who had been so newly named turned to Miss Nason. "I—like my new name."

Two weeks later it still was the only name she had. There had been no inquiries for her although her complete description had been broadcast over the radio:

"Blond girl, weight 105 pounds, height five feet two inches; eighteen or nineteen years old; eyes brown, complexion fair. Now at St. Luke's hospital. Found night of September twenty-third at Gower and Market streets, New York."

What Eaters!

NOME, Alaska.—Eskimos are big eaters, according to restaurant owner here. They state that Eskimos eat two or three times as much as the average white man. It is ordinary for one to ask for three meat orders and devour a whole loaf of bread at the same meal. They are good customers, paying in gold, fur or cash.

"... a word about the used car situation—"

Yes, of course you can get stung in buying a Used Car. Some Used Cars have been stolen and disguised. Some Used Cars are totally beyond reconditioning but can be painted up and patched up to run a month or so after the sale has been legally consummated. Some Used Cars are "orphans" on which neither service nor new parts can be assured. BUT none of these types of cars are ever found in the Salesrooms of an Authorized New Car Dealer.

What You Should Know Before You Buy—

That your dealer can be depended upon on all promises he makes.

That your dealer is permanently located and reliable to make all necessary adjustments.

That your dealer is responsible financially and conscientiously.

That your dealer can give you a clear, clean bill of sale.

That your dealer will back up his written or verbal guarantee of condition, terms and service.

That your dealer has an efficient, careful and reliable service department.

That your dealer is in a position to take care of needed repairs, parts and towing service.

That the finance plan he provides for you is legal in its rates, terms . . . reliable, considerate, responsible.

That your dealer is not seeking an exorbitant profit but merely an outlet for his traded-in cars at a fair cost value.

FIVE RALLIES ON SCHEDULE

Open Air Meeting To Launch Political War

Candidates for state and county offices will speak Friday night in the open air at the Memorial auditorium grounds in the first of five speaking engagements scheduled for Wichita county. The rally will begin at 8 o'clock and each speaker will be limited to five minutes.

The order of speaking was decided by drawing lots at a recent meeting of the candidates here. The candidates for state senate will speak first, followed by those for state representative and on down the list to precinct candidates. It was decided at the recent meeting that candidates for offices higher than state senate should not be allowed to speak at the county rallies, unless they desire to speak after the list of county candidates has been called upon.

Extensive arrangements have been made for the speaking here Friday night. Seats for a large crowd of listeners have been provided on the west side of the auditorium building, where a platform used for the regular Thursday night vaudeville crowds will be used as the speaking stand. The open-air arrangement was decided upon in view of the small crowds drawn to previous speakings held inside buildings, it was said. An arrangement of loud speakers has been provided to make the talks audible to all persons in attendance.

Following the engagement here Friday night, the candidates will speak at Burkburnett, Electra, Iowa Park and again at Wichita Falls on the night of July 23, just prior to the primary. The last speaking here will be held at the same place.

Big Prizes Open To Revue Entrants

Although a committee of 15 will begin calling on Wichita Falls merchants Friday morning soliciting their participation in the bathing beauty revue to be held at Lakeside park pavilion Friday night, July 18, several merchants called to add their names to the list of those sponsoring entries Thursday and by evening the volunteer list had grown considerably, according to an announcement of Will McKemie, chairman of the Junior chamber of commerce bathing revue committee.

Wichita Falls girls desiring to be selected as participants in the revue were urged Thursday to have their pictures made at Bartlett's studio, 710½ Ohio avenue, within the next 48 hours if they wish to be selected to represent some local merchant. The photographs will be made free of charge, preferably in bathing costume, and merchants will select their entries from the photographs if they have not already decided upon a girl to vie for honors in the beauty parade.

It was pointed out that winners of the contest here will be given free trips to Fort Worth to the Southwest pageant of pulchritude and to Dallas for a revue in that city, and that if any of the girls from this city win in either of those contests, they will win trips to Havana, Cuba; Florida and Colorado and have chances to carry away part of the $1,500 offered in prizes. All girls from 16 to 25 are eligible to submit their photographs or be selected by some merchant to take part in the contest.

Butterfly Collection Added to Museum

Addition of extensive collections of natural history specimens to the Municipal Museum now being established by the Junior chamber of commerce in the Industrial Mart building was announced Thursday.

Prominent among the new items received for the museum was a collection of butterflies, moths and beetles provided by Allan Harrison, son of B. J. Harrison of this city. The array of specimens is considered one of the best in the country, it was stated. Numbers from the collections of other persons were obtained in order to make complete the assembly of butterflies to which Mr. Harrison has given almost six years of work. Specimens range from the tiniest butterflies to those having a wingspread of eight inches.

Oddities found in Russia during the world war make up a collection which has been donated by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Michaux, 1607 Bluff street. Military and domestic life of various nations is represented in the relics assembled in this group.

Large Crowd Sees City Vaudeville Performance

The largest crowd ever to witness a weekly free vaudeville program at the Memorial auditorium grounds attended the show given Thursday night when one of the most entertaining programs of the year was presented by the park department.

Numbers on the 11-act bill included music by the Lions club band, followed by a flapperette dance by Peggy Jo Pond and Martha Lee Harvey. Miss Billy Ralph Hyer gave a saxophone solo and R. A. Covington presented vocal numbers. The Rhythm Symphony orchestra gave several special numbers under the direction of Jimmie Giddings. Miss Pauline Leverett gave a specialty dance.

Two acts including Hawaiian music and songs were given by Jack Kukuna and his pupils. Following a dance duet by LaFaun Duncan and Emmy Taylor, accompanied on the guitar by George Taylor, "Slim and Bim" entertained in a black-face comedy act. The concluding number was a tap dance act by Truston Fox.

O. E. S. SOCIAL

Mrs. R. B. Turner will be hostess to the members of Faith chapter, No. 713, Order of the Eastern Star, at 8 o'clock Saturday night at the home of Mrs. A. B. Mercer, 1908 Pearl street, it was announced Thursday evening. All members of the chapter have been invited to attend. The affair will be a watermelon feast and social, with no business to be brought up, according to Miss Lucille Scott, secretary of the chapter.

Commercial fishermen took approximately 15,000,000 pounds of prawn from Georgia waters last year.

Rabbit Breeders To Meet Friday Night

Members of the North Texas Rabbit Breeders association will meet Friday night in the basement of the courthouse at 8 o'clock for the purpose of discussing means of meeting the demand for domestic rabbit meat, according to an announcement issued Thursday by W. L. Smith, publicity director of the association. The public has been invited to attend the meeting. Mr. Smith said useful information regarding the raising of rabbits for meat and fur would be given. Domestic rabbit meat is in great demand and the supply cannot be kept even with the consumption, he said.

GOP TO LIMIT VOTING BOXES

Committee to Decide On Primary Vote

The Wichita county Republican executive committee decided Thursday night at a meeting at the courthouse here to have voting boxes at scattered places over the county but no decision was made as to the number of boxes or the definite locations. The action of the committee was in ratification of the recommendations of a sub-committee, which favored a few scattered boxes in place of one in each precinct.

The meeting was brief and no other business was brought up. O. R. Hartt, county chairman, presided. Mr. Hartt stated the sub-committee would announce within the next few days the exact number and location of the boxes planned. The Republican committee has named candidates for a large number of county offices for places on the July 26 primary ballot.

The sub-committee is composed of Mr. Hartt, Orville Bullington, W. H. Sanford, Ralph Maricle, Harry Gray, T. L. Ball, Melvin E. Peters, and L. H. Gould.

Health and Diet Advice

VEGETABLE VARIETY

Leo Tolstoy, the great Russian author, frequently referred to his vegetable garden as his medicine chest. The healthful quality of vegetables is recognized by all dieticians regardless of minor differences about other foods. Even though most people realize how wholesome vegetables are, they often complain, "I know vegetables are good for me, but I am tired of them." If vegetables are always prepared in the same old way, noon and night, we do tire of them.

The housewife who wants her family to profit from the health-building quality of vegetables should learn a variety of ways of preparing them. Here is a different way of preparing the common vegetables which will develop an entirely new flavor unlike any you have tasted before. It is simply to use the ordinary vegetables, but to grind them up first and bake them. In my estimation, the most delicious way of preparing the non-starchy vegetables is by baking. One or more should be used, and should first be ground fine and then placed in a dry baking pan, such as a casserole or glass baking dish and cooked with a cover in a moderate oven for about 10 minutes. After this, remove the cover and continue the cooking until the top is browned. You will find that several different varieties of vegetables will blend together in this manner and bring about a different flavor than you have been able to obtain by any other method of preparation. No seasoning of any kind is needed, but you may add salt or butter if you desire as the vegetables are being served. They require very little salt when prepared in this manner, however, as the vegetable juices are more concentrated than when prepared by boiling or steaming. You will never know the rich, sweet flavor of vegetables until you have tried them baked.

If you are searching for vegetable varieties, use some unusual combinations, for example, mix young carrots, beets, turnips and cauliflower through the grinder; or string beans, carrots, okra and potatoes. I am sure that you will find many blends which taste well together when you begin to experiment.

By mixing your vegetables, you will often find they are more appreciated when cooked together than when cooked plain. Other good combinations are turnips and corn, tomatoes and okra, lettuce and celery.

Try different ways of cooking and preparing vegetables, and I am sure you can find some which your family will enjoy. Once they have become accustomed to properly prepared cooked vegetables they will enjoy the home cooking more, and you can keep your family in better health because of the valuable bulk and mineral salts which are so plentiful in all vegetables.

For vim, vigor and vitality, eat a variety of valuable vegetables. Here are some articles on similar subjects which I have prepared for free distribution. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Glands

Question: Reader asks—"Have you ever published an article on gland transplanting? If so, under what date? If not, will you give an idea of the results? Are the looks rejuvenated?"

Answer—I have written many articles on this subject. When gland transplantation is successful the patient always experiences a short period of rejuvenation, but it is far better for the patient to depend upon developing his own glands through the rejuvenating effect of healthful living.

Are These Fattening

Question: M. J. writes—"Would like to know if Melba toast is fattening if eaten without butter. Also would like to know if berries are fattening if eaten without cream or sugar."

Answer—The dextrin of Melba toast is considered just as fattening as the starch of the bread before being toasted. The only thing which can be considered fattening about berries is the sugar they contain, but if the only sugar you use is that which you get from berries, you need have no fear about gaining too much weight.

Headaches

Question: Mrs. O. W. writes—"I have suffered with headaches for seven years and lately I notice my memory is badly affected. Will you kindly tell me if headache medicines are harmful?"

Answer—The use of headache remedies is always a bad habit but, of course, is excusable under certain circumstances. When taking such a remedy, don't forget to study the real cause of the headache, and prevent its recurrence by eliminating the causative factors.

Dalhart Population Increased to 4,679

Special to The Record News

DALHART, Texas, July 10.—Dalhart's 1930 population will be announced as 4,679 instead of the first announcement of 4,430. This was made known here when George Kelling, chief clerk for Galen R. Smith, district census supervisor, completed a checkup on the population in the Kendricks and Kella Hill additions.

When the census was first made in Dalhart the new addition had not been actually taken into the city although the residents of the districts had agreed to come into the city as of Jan. 1, 1930, provided a school bond issue carried successfully.

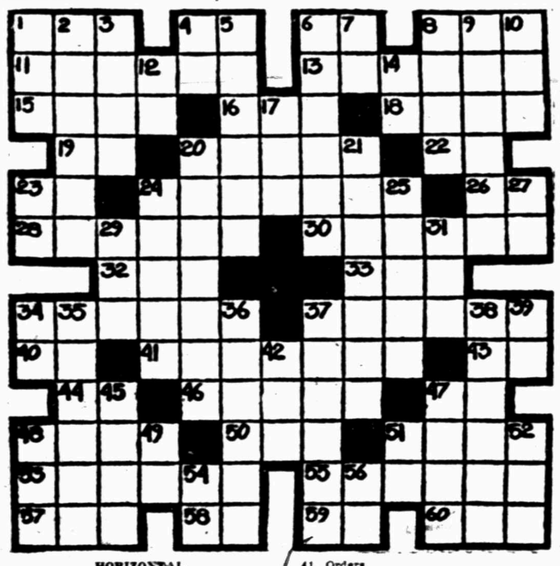

Immediately after the announcement was made that the bonds had been voted the Dalhart Chamber of Commerce took steps to have the new addition included in the 1930 census enumeration. Nation-wide publicity was given the effort when a news correspondent at Washington noticed the correspondence from Dalhart officials. The St. Louis Globe-Dispatch wrote an editorial commending the city of Dalhart upon its efforts to be placed in the 5,000 class.

SPUDDERS CHARGE FROM REAR TO WHIP CUBS IN FINAL, 18 TO 8

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Old Pete Alexander, we read in a dispatch from Dallas Wednesday, is working under one of the strangest contracts in the history of organized baseball, a contract that allows him to do anything he wants to so long as he's ready to take the mound on his assigned day. In other words, when he knows he's not due to work for a coupla days he can burn the midnight oil and, er—er, well, have a good time.

Scene: Steer stadium.

Time: Fifth inning of a game between Dallas and Wichita Falls. Old Pete is sweating on the mound. The Spudders have a five-run lead, two men are on base with none out and Fitzgerald is up to bat.

Old Pete, holding the ball and and starting to wind up: Oh, Lord, here comes that guy. They tell me he's the sockinest Spudder there is. Oh, why didn't I use a little better judgement! I knew I had to work today, but I just couldn't resist the temptation. Well, here goes. Gosh but that guy has a home run look in his eye!

(He chunks the ball and it is a called strike.)

Old Pete: So that's the way he feels about it. And then they say I'm not good enough for the big time. Well, there's ball in this old arm yet. Just what I told those bozos when they released me from the majors. Who said I couldn't stand the gaff on the amount of sleep I was gettin'? Well, last night I played the radio 'til 4 a. m. and before I tucked in I raided the refrigerator and ate a pound of sausage and sauerkraut and at that I've derned near got this swatter out. Believe I'll fan him and show these guys I can play the radio and eat as much sauerkraut as I want to and still work.

(He twirls a beautiful curve down to the plate and Fitzgerald swings at it terrifically.)

Old Pete: See there, Jakie? See there, old man Tarleton? Told you so. Now here goes for another.

(His curve breaks too soon and it is a ball. The next one does the same. So does the third. It is three and two now.)

Old Pete: Aw, well, that happens to the best of 'em. Can't hold anything against me for that. If I'd gone to bed with the chickens last night I still might have done this. But now to get this feller out o' here.

(He tries to duplicate that beautiful curve, but Fitz had learned all about the slant by now, and he banged the pill over the centerfield wall, scoring the two runners and himself.)

Old Pete: Oh, Lord. Well, it's eight to nothing now. What's the matter with my curve. Oh, if I'd only gone to bed last night. By, George, I'm worn out. Aw well, a guy who would have turned that radio off right in the middle of such a program just wouldn't a had any soul, that's all. A guy's got to get some pleasure outa life. They can't fool me. I've got winning ball in this old arm yet and I'm going to show 'em I can come from behind an eight run lead and win. Oh! Gosh what a pain in my stomach. Aw, well, that sauerkraut was good, and a guy's got to get some pleasure outa life. Well, who's this guy up?

(Jack Kloza strolls up to the plate with a fierce look in his eyes and on the first ball pitched triples to left. The Spudder dugout rolls with cheers, but a great sigh is heard from the Dallas bull pen and Jakie Atz pokes his head out. Then comes his shoulders and the rest of his squat anatomy. He starts walking to the pitcher's box.)

Old Pete: Aw, for goodness sake, why don't that little Scotchman leave me alone. What's a nine run lead? Oh, my stomach! Well, what is it Jakie?

Jakie: Er—er—Pete, old man, guess you'd better go wash up, hadn't you? Terribly hot out here. Know you're not used to this terrible Texas heat. Whatta ya say?

Old Pete: Er—er—yes, Jakie, this heat IS awful. It's given me a stoma—I mean a headache. Cripes, my eyes hurt and I can't even see the plate. (Aside: Gee, what a blessing this Texas heat is!)

(The two reach the dugout. Old Pete crumples up on the bench.) Jakie turns to Old Pete.

Jakie: Er—er—Pete, how're you feeling these days? That is, is everything alright, getting plenty sleep, and all that?

Old Pete: Sure boss, getting plenty. Sat up a little with the radio last night, and took a little bite to eat and went right to bed. 'Sall right, skipper, everything'll be alright when I get used to this heat.

Jakie: That's fine, old man. Now you just take it easy in the workouts for a few days until you get used to this sun, and things will be alright, I'm sure. You're sure you're getting the right food, and all that?

Old Pete: Sure boss, everything's lovely. It's just this awful heat!

(Bob Tarleton, Steer business manager, walks up and calls Jakie aside.)

Bob: Say now, listen here, I got it straight that Pete ate a pound of sauerkraut last night before he went to bed and he might be the best on earth, but he can't do that the night before a game, according to our contract. Why don't you talk to him about it?

Jakie: Aw, that's all rot. Pete's alright, he's just not used to the heat. He'll get over it.

Bob: Well the quicker the better. (He walks aside, muttering) $1,800 per month, and he hasn't lasted nine innings yet!

Mandel and Singer Fight Next Thursday

NEW YORK, July 10. (UP)—Sammy Mandell, dean of the current crop of ring champions, will make his annual defense of the lightweight title a week from tonight in a 15-round bout at Yankee stadium against Al Singer, dark-eyed Bronx Hebrew.

Although admitting to only 26 years, Mandell has been fighting for 10 years and has held the lightweight title four years. He won the 135-pound crown from Rocky Kansas July 2, 1926, and has successfully defended it once each year, outpointing Phil McGraw in 10 rounds in 1927, Jimmy McLarin in 10 rounds in 1928 and Tony Canzoneri in 10 rounds in 1929.

VINCENT TURNS BATTLE'S TIDE

Home Run Attack Defeats Visitors

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Well, after Thursday's carnage, it wouldn't be a bad guess that the Waco Cubs are good and eager for a little more moonshine, that is, night baseball. They don't seem to fare so well in the sunlight, if the present series is any indication. For the Spudders, just for a change, littered this end of Wichita county with home runs Thursday afternoon and overcame a six-run lead the Cubs had amassed off Earl Caldwell in the second, and swept the short series with the visitors by a margin a mile wide.

The score was 18 to 8. As usual, timely swatting got the Williamsmen out of an early inning pinch, and good pitching thereafter called their foes to a halt. The timely swatting in the early innings was done by Storti, who looped one over the center field palisades in the second, and by Larry Bettencourt, who shoveled out his 29th of the season in the same inning with two aboard. Burns and Kloza later got homers. Kloza's punch scoring a mate.

Vincent Saves Day

The good pitching was done by Fred Vincent, who, though he may wobble sometimes as a starter, is an ace of a relief twirler. Earl Caldwell fared ill. He squirmed through the first inning even if he did allow two passes in a row, but the Cubs scored a sextet of tallies off him in the second on five hits and two errors, both of the latter being made by Caldwell himself.

Thurman started for the Cubs, but after the Spudders had ridden him for nine runs and 10 hits in four and one-third innings, he gave way to Becker, who, in turn, allowed nine runs and nine hits during the remainder of the game.

The Cubs got right down to business in the second inning. Rye opened it up with a single to center. Stuvengen singled in the same direction, advancing Rye to third, and took second on the throw-in. Molesworth singled center, scoring Rye and Stuvengen. Piet strolled and Molesworth took second. Thurman hit to the box and Caldwell juggled it. The bases were loaded. Tate sacrificed to center, scoring Molesworth, Piet taking third and Thurman second. Witry popped out to Levey. Munson singled to center, scoring Piet and Thurman, and Caldwell, who received the throw-in, attempted to catch Munson at second, he threw wild, enabling Munson to score. Robbin singled to right, and Skipper Williams came to the mound for a conference with Caldwell. An agreement was reached and Fred Vincent came to the box. Vincent struck out Rye to retire the side.

Spudders Get Started

In their half, the Spudders scored only two, these coming on singles by Burns and Bettencourt, and a double by Geygan which scored them. The Cubs went scoreless in the first of the third, but the Spudders squared the count. After Levey struck out, Storti hit one over the center field fence. Fitzgerald doubled to center and Kloza singled to right, advancing Fitzgerald to third. Burns poped out to short but Bettencourt came in then with a home run over the right field wall, scoring Fitzgerald and Kloza and tying the score. Crouch struck out to close the inning.

In the fourth the Cubs went into the lead with a tally scored on Witry's single and Rye's triple, but the Spudders returned in their half to tie the score a second time. This time Geygan made it on the shortstop's error, sacrifices by Vincent and Levey, and Storti's double.

After that, the game reverted to a batting practice, in which the Spudders seemed the more expert. Kloza flied out to center to open the fifth, but Burns, next up, hit a home run over the left field wall to put the Spudders once again in the lead. Bettencourt walked, Crouch singled to center and Bettencourt went to third. Thurman was relieved at this juncture by Becker. Geygan sacrificed to right and Bettencourt scored after the catch. Vincent forced Crouch at second, short to second.

Levey struck out and Storti popped out to third to open the sixth. Fitzgerald walked and Kloza hit a homer over the left center field boards, scoring Fitzgerald and himself. Burns was hit by a pitched ball, but Bettencourt grounded out, short to first.

More Scoring

Crouch singled to center to open the seventh. Geygan singled in the same direction, and when the centerfielder bobbled it, Crouch scored and Geygan continued to second. Vincent grounded out, pitcher to short to first, Geygan taking third. Levey singled to center, scoring Geygan. Storti singled down the third base line, advancing Levey to third, and took second on the throw-in. Fitzgerald singled to right, scoring Levey and Storti. Kloka walked. On the shortstop's error in handling the throw from second, Burns was safe at first, loading the paths. Bettencourt sacrificed to center, scoring Fitzgerald. Crouch flied out to right to close the riot.

The last two came in the eighth. Geygan lined to the pitcher and Vincent fanned. Levey doubled to left. Storti tripled to left center, scoring Levey. Fitzgerald singled to right, scoring Storti, and took second on the right ifelder's error. Kloza grounded out, short to first, to close it.

The Cubs made their final tally in the ninth, on Robbin's double to right and singles by Rye and Molesworth.

The Spudders open their warfare with the Beaumont Shippers today.

Cups or medals will be presented to the winners of each event through the courtesy of local merchants and business men, it was announced.

Wichita Falls will be well represented in each event, with Charles Cook, Raymond McPhail, Tom McCarty, Clifton Haynes, B. B. Toone, Maurice Cheek, Edd Bebb and Olin Harvey scheduled to uphold the city's claims to championship in the men's divisions. Sonny Sherrod, M. C. Baumgardner, Rufus King, John Graham, Babe Anderson and Homer Donahoo will represent this city in the junior and boys' divisions. Jewel Williams, Marjorie Bright, Dorothy Cline and Wynona Gregg promise to give stiff competition to visiting players of their sex.

SPORTS LOSE NIGHT BATTLE

Buffs Win Inaugural Of Arcs, 9 to 5

SHREVEPORT, La., July 10. (AP)—Shreveport's first night game in the Texas league resulted disastrously for the home nine when the Buffs romped off to victory, 9 to 5. About 4,000 persons witnessed the game and for the first half it was a real contest. Toward the latter part of the battle the Sports defense cracked and they lost an early lead. Both teams were guilty of several wild throws but the lights did not seem to worry the athletes to any great extent. Score:

Texan Stars

"FOOTSY" BLAIR

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—"Footsy" Blair stepped in Rogers Hornsby's big shoes at second and started the Chicago Cubs off on a winning streak.

The husky six-footer from Texarkana, Texas, took Hornsby's place when the Rajah fractured his ankle on May 30. In his first game, Blair clubbed out a homer, two doubles and a single, driving in six runs, enabling the Cubs to come from behind and annex the second of the Memorial day bill with the St. Louis Cardinals.

A winning streak followed. Blair had considerable to do with each game won.

Blair's forte with the bat is hard smashes along the foul line, usually to left field. Slow and fast balls look the same to him. His blows are powered by 190 pounds of muscle. Defensively he has done well, although errors are credited to him because of his eagerness to cover too much ground.

Blair was with the Cubs last year, and batted .319 although he spent most of his time on the mench. He is 27.

Scribe Contrasts Central Park Pond With His Arkansaw Swimmin' Hole

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Twenty years from now there will be grown New Yorkers recalling fond memories of "the ol' swimmin' hole" of their childhood in the very heart of the big town. In Central park, to be exact.

From the pleasant swinged patio that Dr. Julius Lempert has pitched on the peak of his office building in West Fifty-ninth street, I had a good view today of the youngsters bouncing around in the city's "ol' swimmin' hole," one of the most unique sights in all Blaseville.

It is at a point that would locate it around Sixty-third street if that street charged on across the park. From Dr. Lempert's roof, looking northward, the park suggests a little green valley between two huge ranges of mountains, the mountains being represented by the line of tall buildings on Fifth avenue on the one side, the towering structures of Central park west on the other side.

Peaceful, and restful looking is the valley, criss-crossed by smooth winding asphalted lanes, along which the taxicabs and private motor cars flow in an unending stream. Down there in this valley, in view of the windows on Fifty-ninth where the park begins, is a little basin of water sparkling in the sunlight, and nestling at the foot of a huge rock. That is Father Knickerbocker's "ol' swimmin' hole."

It is for the kids only. There is a place for them to dress, as they are not permitted to appear au naturel for fear, perhaps of shocking the artistic sensibilities of the peerers from the surrounding peeks. The only place in New York where anyone may lawfully appear in the altogether, I believe, is the stage.

A little fountain spurts briskly from the center of "the ol' swimmin' hole," and there are springboards, and sliding boards, and other modern conveniences, such as we never had at the "One Arm Minnie," or "the water wheel," or "the county bridge," or any of the other "ol' swimmin' holes' of my adolescence. But they were royal "ol swimmin holes," at that. I recall them with the same pleasure that the New Yorkers of 20 years from now will be recalling the "ol' swimmin' hole" that a munificent municipality has given them in Central park.

The best of our "ol' swimmin' holes" back in my old home town out West was "the water wheel." All our "ol' swimmin' holes" were located somewhere along the Arkansas river, that being about the only water course in those parts sufficiently moist to permit of swimming, and even that, in the dog days, was sometimes apt to run out of water.

Then again there would be periods when it would carry so much fluid, due to a cloudburst, that it would make the citizens along its banks hard to catch. To this day I shudder at the thought of the unearthly scream of our town siren, sounding in the dead of night as a warning that high water was coming, and that it was time for the folks to take to the taller ground.

"The water wheel" was so called because it was located at an ancient wheel on the banks of the Arkansas that had once pumped water to irrigate the surrounding fields, most of which belonged to the state insane asylum.

The milder patients of the institution farmed the fields, and bitterly resented forays by the youthful swimmers against the watermelons and the cantaloupes, and the roasting ears of the state lands. Still, they were never as tough about it as a whole-souled old farmer hard by that "ol' swimmin' hole" that was generally known as "the county bridge."

The "One Arm Minnie" was a dangerous, treacherous "ol' swimmin' hole" in the river well above the town, and along the tracks of the Missouri Pacific, as I remember. In the cliff that hung over the river at this point was an old cave, and there was some sort of vague tradition, which I never heard confirmed, that a one-armed woman known as One Arm Minnie" had once lived in this cave.

I don't know why she lived there. It was a very small cave, and the location wasn't much. But that was the story. The river below the cave was always twisting with whirlpools, and a desperate current ran there.

We had no quiet water for our "ol' swimmin' holes" back in my old home town. You had to swim almost altogether with a high overhand stroke to breast the swift currents. The underwater strokes of the effete East were—and I presume they still are—unknown, if the water still runs as swift and hard and dangerous today in the old Arkansas as it did in my time.

But no beneficient municipality ever bestowed on us an "ol' swimmin' hole." I can well imagine, even now, the expressions on the faces of some of our city fathers had such a thing been suggested. And I doubt if the youth of my old home town would have cared for a made-to-order "ol' swimmin hole," because there wouldn't have been any loose provender to nab, which was much of the romance of "th' ol' swimmin' hole" of my time.

REDS RELEASE GEORGE KELLY

Joe Stripp to Take Place Of Veteran

CINCINNATI, July 10. (AP)—George Kelly, first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds for the last three years, was released unconditionally today by Manager Dan Howley.

"Long George," as he was known to the fans, will be supplanted at first by Joe Stripp, who has been playing third and Tony Cuccinello, recruit third baseman obtained last winter from Columbus in the American association, will hold down the hot corner, Howley said.

Kelly was born in San Francisco on Sept. 10, 1895. He joined the New York Giants in 1915 and went to the Pittsburgh Nationals in 1917 on a waiver loan. He soon was sent to Rochester in the International league but rejoined the Giants in 1919 and remained with John McGraw until 1927. He had a major league lifetime batting average of about .297.

Kelly probably will return to the Pacific Coast league.

New Foul Law Is Officially Read To Boxing Referees in New York

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, July 10.—The minions of the boxing law foregathered in New York state today for the supreme assault on the foul fighters and foul pretenders who have been grimacing and groveling main bouts into fiascos for the past year or more.

With due solemnity more than a score of the state athletic commission's licensed referees gathered in the offices of the fistic fathers to hear the fouls that come through low blows read completely out of boxing. In the future, they were told, there shall be no more of the painful ending that have marred $1,000,000 worth of fights since the epidemic started with Otto Von Porat and Phil Scott in Madison Square Garden in December, 1929.

It will be possible, Commissioner James A. Farley told the arbiters, for a man to be disqualified for butting, kneeing, biting or any of the other time honored means of evading further combat, but punches below the belt now are merely something to record on a slip of paper and turn into the commission. The gladiator who slugs low must automatically lose that round on the score sheets. If an offender slices out of bounds in three rounds in one fight, the commission promised to suspend him anyway.

The 20-odd referees, listening officially for the first time to the new regulations promulgated following Max Schmeling's capture of the heavyweight championship on a foul over Jack Sharkey, nodded sagely as the rules were read and agreed that fouls would never again harass boxing in this state. Some expressed private opinions later, however, that some of the boys, being victims of habit, would find brand new means of evading the issue when the going got hot.

GALLANT FOX RACE FAVORITE

Arlington Classic to Be Run Saturday

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—Gallant Fox, the super-horse of the year, probably will go to the post a 2 to 5 favorite in the $80,000 Arlington classic at a mile and a quarter to be decided at Arlington Park Saturday afternoon.

This was the guess today, after the Fox, already proclaimed the three-year-old champion, because of his five successive victories in rich stake events in the last 60 days, went through his final training gallop. The Fox, with Earl Sande up, did a slow gallop twice around the mile and an eighth track, which was a trifle heavy due to a drizzling shower. He will be sent through an exercise dash of three furlongs tomorrow, in the nature of a tightening up sprint.

In today's workout, Sande at no time allowed the great thoroughbred to have his head, but stood upright in the stirrups, and permitted Gallant Fox to bob along at a canter. The marvelous three-year-old appeared to be as sharp as steel, and ready for the richest three-year-old event of the season.

VETERANS NOSE JONES OUT OF LEAD IN INTERLACHEN TOURNEY

ARMOUR, SMITH BOTH SCORE 70

Pair Ahead of Jones And Cox by One Stroke

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor

INTERLACHEN COUNTRY club, Minneapolis, Minn., July 10. (UP)—Along about the time when a scorching summer sun, which had taken terrific toll of scores at Interlachen today, was heading down toward the forest-fringed horizon, the two veterans of the golfing war came strolling home late in the afternon to take a joint lead over all the field in the national open championship.

Tommy Armour, the lanky Scot, who is baked such a luscious brown that the sun's fierce rays cannot affect him, and MacDonald Smith, the old timer who tied for the title 20 years ago and never got that close again, are out in front of the field at Interlachen with first round scores of 70, two strokes under par.

This pair finished late in the day, to head off Bobby Jones and Whiffy Cox, who had been enjoying an early joint leadership with cards of 71.

Sun Main Handicap

It was a day to try the golfing temper of the stoutest hearts among the 142 contestants in this 34th national championship. All day long a blazing sun beat down mercilessly upon the hard-baked fairways, providing a handicap which outrivalled all the traps and treacherous rough along the course.

Many a contestant wilted under the terriffic heat and played dispiritedly, "anything to get it over with." Even Bob Jones himself, here to defend his championship and if possible win his third national title of the year, declared he didn't care much what happened to his score after the 15th hole.

But Tommy Armour and Mac Smith, to whom all kinds of weather are just one more handicap in the game they have played so long, shot inspired golf, particularly on their last nine holes.

For a time today, it appeared as though Bobby Jones would lead the field, just as he has so often in a national championship.

The Atlantan likes nothing better than to hang up a mark for the rest to shoot at and he said so today with a 71, one under par. But Whiffy Cox is a gentlemanly sort of roughneck from Brooklyn, to whom the majesty of the Jones dynasty means less than nothing. When Whiffy went to school they didn't teach him the meaning of "lese majeste." Whiffy, who was a stoker in the navy and has developed into a mighty fine golfer, went right out and blasted his way into a tie with the king from Atlanta.

Until late in the day, it seemed as though this pair would go out in front at the end of the first round. Neither Armour nor Mac Smith appeared particularly formidable when they reached the turn in 37, one over par.

Scot Gets Eagle

But out on the last nine, which is spread over the fiery-hot rolling hillocks beyond the roadway which cuts through the Interlachen course, Tommy and Mac got hot themselves. The slender Scot, a former open champion himself, ripped off an eagle and two birdies and came blazing home in 33 for an aggregate of 70.

Then it was Mac Smith's turn, and the old timer, "the mystery man" of Interlachen, bagged four birdies on the homeward way. Smith had a great chance for a 69 to take undisputed lead at sundown, needing a par four at the eighteenth for that figure.

With the gallery banked in red and white rows around the sloping green upon the hill by the clubhouse, Smith made his first bad move of the day. He had to play his second shot directly into the fiery rays of the setting sun and was short of the green in a trap. The hole cost him a five and he finished in a tie with Armour.

Mac Smith is indeed the "mystery man" of the championship. The other day he went out and shot a 67 over the present course, five strokes under par. And then Mac told his caddy if the kid breathed a word of it, he would wallop him with a niblic. And the caddy kept mum.

"I don't want any more gallery than I can help having," explained Smith, when an explanation was demanded. He had his wish today, for not over a hundred followed him around and these were recruited in the latter stages of his round.

Mac Smith tied for the open championship at the Philadelphia Cricket club in 1910 with his brother Alex and J. J. McDermott. In the play-off, Brother Alex won with a 72. Tommy Armour tied with "Light Horse" Harry Cooper at Oakmont in 1927 and won the title in the play-off.

It was quite a day for the Smiths, this blistering day with the thermometer flirting with 100 in the shade and a dozen spectators and one official scorer prostrated from the heat.

Smith Ends in Tie

Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., finished in a tie for fifth place with a score of 72. George M. Smith of Lake Forest, Ill., was another who equalled this mark, par for the sunbaked course. Others up there in the even par class were Harry Cooper, now Glen Ellyn, Ill.; John E. Rogers of Overland, Mo., and the one and only Walter Hagen, who had far more than any white man's share of terribly bad luck today and still managed to shoot right up with the leaders.

Jack Forrester of Oradell, N. J., Craig Wood, Belleville, N. J., Eddie Williams of Cleveland, and Irwin Ottman of Louisville, Joe Turnesa, White Plains, and Morte Dutra, Long Beach, Calif., completed the ranks of the low scorers with aggregates of 73, the "first 15" of Interlachen.

Not so far back in the ruck are Leo Diegel, Sd Dudley, Johnny Farrell and Jim Barnes—all of them dangerous, especially if a change of weather can be mercifully afforded to the golfing host at Interlachen.

But it looks now as though the golfers who Bobby Jones must beat if he is to retain his title and achieve his great ambition are right out along with him, showing their sunburned noses in the van of the field.

Security Bankers Beat McClurkans

The Security National bank baseball team took the full advantage of Marion Smith's wildness and four McClurkan errors and came out on the top side of a 5 to 3 score Thursday afternoon on Harrison field. Smith issued seven bases on balls and hit one batter during the four innings that he toiled while he was nicked for only three singles which were well timed. Shorty Thomas, Security ace, was touched for seven bingles but he kept them fairly well scattered through the first three innings.

Ed Satterwhite, the Jim Levey of the Security bank, continued his sensational work on short which has been featured with the Bank in the last half of the season. Satterwhite handled five hard chances on short for the Bankers. McCaleb, in right field for McClurkans, had a very busy day for outfielders with five perfectly handled chances.

Jack Doyle led the batting attack for the winners with two of the three Banker hits being credited to him. Satterfield drew three walks on his three trips to the plate and scored two runs. Denton and Thomas each collected two hits for the McClurkans nine. Score:

Bunion Derbyist In Mood to Sue C. C. Pyle

NEW YORK, July 10. (UP)—A bunion derbyist visited the district attorney's office here today and made it known he is in a mood to file suit against C. C. (Cash and Carry) Pyle, the heel-and-toe tournament promoter.

The foot-weary complainant is Samuel Richman, 28, and bearded. Richman told the district attorney he has just returned from California, having walked most of the way back. And that, on top of having dog-trotted from Atlantic to Pacific in the contest.

Richman took part in the derby which Pyle promoted in the spring and summer of 1929. He finished fourth at Los Angeles, he said, but he wasn't even given a laurel wreath for his pains. He claims plye owes him $3,500 in prize money and that he's willing to go to court for it.

A summons has been sent to Pyle, who is in California, by the district attorney's office.

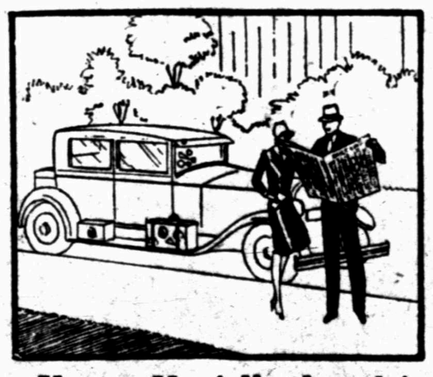

SOME HITTING

MINNEAPOLIS, July 10. (UP)—Five home runs were scored against the record of Dinty Gearin, Milwaukee pitcher, here today in the fourth game of a five-game series. Elmer Smith and Andy High, both met his offerings for two homers each in the third and fourth innings while Nick Cullop circled the bases in the fourth for another.

More than $1,000,000 annually is received from the sale of wild animal pelts in North Carolina.

—look at him with a knowing grin and say:

"Sure! We know— You're Napoleon!"

LEADERSHIP is the coveted prize in every industry, and the rubber industry is no exception.

So it is only human that our aspiring friends occasionally indulge in the thrill of talking about Leadership, whether they have it or not.

We mention this in all good humor, and merely to explain the somewhat confusing advertising you see now and again, in which one rubber company or another blithely forgets its definitions and shoots the works.

The justification for such a fling is that the use of the term Leadership in most cases is qualified, even if obscurely, by being based on some subordinate phase of the business in which the advertiser claims to excel.

BUT what's all the shootin' for—is Leadership really an important matter?

We think it is, as the most dependable indorsement of a product that the public can find upon which to rely.

When a plurality of the world's motorists, for example, year after year singles out one make of tire as the highest representative of value and merit, that is tremendously important.

It affords the average buyer the finest and safest possible guidance in his purchasing—and for his good and our own we desire to keep that guidance clear.

DISPENSING, then, with equivocal claims, evasions, qualifications and adroit expression, what company actually holds Leadership in the rubber industry?

The public has decisively answered that question in concrete terms of dollars and cents, and has conferred the award upon Goodyear.

Goodyear in turn submits to you the solid facts which support its Leadership.

It does this in no spirit of boastfulness; on the contrary with a privileged sense of the responsibility which its outstanding position entails:

In both volume and value of annual sales, Goodyear is the largest rubber company in the world.

Goodyear consumes 1/6 of all the crude rubber used annually in the world—approximately 50% more than any other manufacturer.

Goodyear builds more than 1/4 of all the tires sold in America, the remainder being divided among some forty manufacturers.

For years Goodyear has factory-equipped between 1/4 and 1/3 of all the new motor cars manufactured.

Goodyear exports approximately 40% of all the tires exported from the United States and Canada for other parts of the world.

Goodyear maintains the largest development laboratories and corps of experimental engineers of any rubber company in the world.

In the last seven years Goodyear's annual production of pneumatic tires has increased 172%, as against an increase of approximately 75% for the industry as a whole.

WITH special reference to tires, Goodyear holds Leadership because:

Goodyear has made more tires for motor vehicles than any other manufacturer—by millions.

Goodyear is making, today, more tires than any other manufacturer in the world—by millions.

Goodyear's tire business has increased faster in the last five years than any other manufacturer's—by millions.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind—by millions.

THERE'S the story, good people, figure it out for yourselves.

Certainly it means that in Goodyear Tires the average user finds a quality and a value which he cannot equal elsewhere.

Certainly it means that when you buy a Goodyear Tire you buy something good enough, outstandingly good enough, to have won a special and unrivalled place in the confidence of the public.

And when any other rubber company confuses you with talk about Leadership, just treat yourself to a knowing grin and say: "Sure! We know — You're Napoleon!"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 10. (AP)—Cotton was higher today on covering and scattered buying attributed to the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and reports of continued dry hot weather over greater part of the South.

July was comparatively slow to follow the advance but sold up from 13.04 to 13.23 and closed at 13.19, while the new October advanced to 13.04 and closed at 13.02. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 8 points on July while new crop positions were generally 22 to 26 points net higher.

Buying in Liverpool was attributed partly to the continent and there were reports of increased cloth sales in the Manchester market. Exports today 1.036, making 6,718.193 so far this season. Port receipts 3.348. U. S. port stocks 1.622.014.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 10. (AP)—Cotton was a little more active today, and the price trend was upward. Good cables and high temperatures in the belt with drouth in the Central portion induced covering and trade buying, and prices by mid-session had advanced 19 to 21 points on active new crop months. July did not advance as much, gaining only 12 points. Notices for July are still being issued. The market became firmer in late trading on short covering owing to firmness in stocks and scarcity of contracts. All active months made new highs 24 to 27 points above the previous close and closed at the top. The general market was steady at net gains for the day of 22 to 26 points.

Leading Stocks Consolidate Gains Against Professional Bear Pressure

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 10. (US)—Further improvement was scored in the stock market today as maintained strength in all groups brought about considerable short covering coinciding with more active sponsorship on the constructive side. In several issues the recoveries were quite substantial, particularly in stocks where the short interest had been built up to large size. Volume of transactions increased materially as the renewed efforts of professionals to unsettle prices were successfully resisted. The day's total sales were over two million shares, compared with 1,358,000 shares Wednesday. The betterment in price carried through from the opening dealings and while at no time was the advance unusually rapid, except in comparison with recent desultory fluctuations, the close found the majority of leading stocks close to their highs for the day. An encouraging feature of the market, at least sufficient to disclose that its technical position was in large part responsible for the price movement, was its continued disposition to ignore unfavorable news. This included the 91,000-ton drop in U. S. Steel's unfilled orders in June, although this much of a decrease was fully expected; announcement of a 10 per cent cut in prices by Sears-Roebuck, which is merely following the trend of wholesale prices; further easing in Copper prices; renewed weakness in wheat and other grains. Cotton, however, furnished cheer by achieving a gain of $1 a bale.

As the day progressed it became more evident that professional sentiment had veered more actively to the bull side, at least for the time being. Large-scale shot accounts were covered in recognition that the short side temporarily had become overcrowded by amateurs, thereby improving the market's technical position. Today's market undoubtedly materially reduced the sort interest, however, and to that extent at least weakened the position of the market, since covering by shorts has furnished principal support in various issues.

Gains were spread throughout the list. Steel common reached 160 and closed within the smallest fraction of the top, for a net gain of 2⅝, stimulating the other steel shares and furnishing desired leadership on the upside. Westinghouse Electric, in which a bear crowd had been active, gained 5 points. General Motors achieved a new high on its recovery closing at 42½ for a 1½-point gain as credit was given to a new group formed to sponsor this leading motor issue. Its report for the second quarter which, if it includes the profit on sale of stock to the Managers Securities corporation, will make a very pleasing showing, is due at the end of this month. Standard of New Jersey continued to be bought in steady fashion and gained a price of 70 for a net advance of three points. This stock seemingly is discounting a favorable decision on the Standard of New York-Vacuum Oil merger case, which will open the way for the Standard of Jersey to carry out its own expansion program. This, as already officially disclosed, had contemplated a consolidation with the Standard Oil company of California. The utility stocks shared in the general improvement, although there seemed to be a disposition to regard them somewhat differently than other issues where the price-to-earning ratios and yields are more attractive. Consolidated gas, however, closed up over two points and United corporation more than a point.

Railroad stocks again exhibited the most encouraging performance, with New York Central up 2⅞, Southern railway up 2, Pennsylvania up ½ and Atchison up over 8 points, with corresponding advances in other issues of the group. The rail stock betterment was chiefly in response to the Interstate Commerce commission's approval of the Chesapeake & Ohio plan to split its stock four-for-one. Naturally this revived talk of other leading railroads whose shares are selling in the higher price brackets, following the C. & O. action. Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific and other high priced rail stocks would attract much greater public interest if they were reduced in price per unit.

Durant activity was again rumored as being responsible for much of the constructive sponsorship, but even his closest associates admit there is no "general bull pool" under his guidance. His activity seems confined to a few issues, of which Richfield Oil appears his most active interest at the moment.

Decrease of $16,000,000 in brokers' loans the past week indicates the temporary end at least of the downswing in such borrowings. More important was the disclosure that total borrowings of all New York stock exchange members as of July 1 amounted to only 5.83 per cent of the market value of all listed shares, compared with 6.33 per cent a month earlier, a decrease of one-half of one per cent, and comparing with 9.15 per cent a year ago. Bond transactions on the exchange continued to expand, totaling $11,725,000, against $9,331,000 Wednesday, and $8,066,000 Tuesday.

Bids and offers on coast grains ranged as follows, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid:

Corn—No. 2 mixed 95½@96c; No. 2 white $1.01@1.02; No. 2 yellow 98½@99c.

Oats—No. 2 red 44@45c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, July 10. (AP)—Kansas and Indiana reports of bigger yields than expected, together with predictions that government crop estimates would prove bearish, pulled wheat downward late today. Likelihood of cooler temperatures northwest promising some relief where wheat has been suffering from prolonged heat and drought tended also to induce many traders to switch to the selling side of the wheat market. On every dip in prices, however, buying broadened, and special notice was taken of dispatches saying wheat crops are almost completely ruined in Montana from Havre to Great Falls.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous 1⅛@1⅜c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅝c off to ⅛c up, oats ⅛@½c advanced, and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 15c.

Corn showed independent strength much of the time today, but finally developed weakness owing to downturns in wheat values. News was received that the corn crop is firing in parts of Nebraska and Illinois. Arrivals of corn at primary terminals today were decidedly smaller than a year ago. Oats were responsive to a good cash demand.

For the most part, provisions were lower, affected by downturns in the value of hogs.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—July 85⅞@90½c; Sept. 89⅛c, 93⅞@94c; Dec. 95⅛c, 99⅞c@$1.00. Corn—July 77c, 79⅞c; Sept. 74⅛c, 77⅛@77⅛c; Dec. 67⅛@67⅝c, 70⅛c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, July 10. (US)—Government figures on wheat were regarded as about a stand-off. The total for all wheat was 3,000,000 bushels less than the average of the private estimates, for while winter wheat production was placed 6,000,000 larger than private figures at 558,000,000 bushels, spring wheat yield was estimated at 9,000,000 bushels less than the local experts report.

The one report which held possibilities of considerable influence on the grain market it concerned was the corn report. In several ways it was regarded as highly bullish to begin with, at 2,800,000,000 but, it suggests a yield 74,000,000 bushels less than the average of the private estimates. Then there is the fact that complaints because of dry weather have all been received since July 1, the basis of the report. Next is the phenomenally short crop of hay, indicated to be 2,000,000 tons less than a year ago.

The Canadian report indicated that there has been benefit to the wheat crop in some sections by the recent rains. The conditions of all wheat was placed three points higher than a year ago.

Black Sea shipments of wheat the past week were 520,000 bushels of which Russian shipments were 352,000 bushels.

POULTRY PRICE TAKES SLUMP

Chickens Lower, but Turkeys Advance 2 Cents

Attributing further decline in prices to growers to a market heavily congested with hold-over stocks from 1929, Armour creameries posted lower prices on chickens Thursday, but raised the offer on turkeys two cents per pound.

One cent per pound was taken off the price of heavy and light hens, reducing the quotation on those items to 14 and 11 cents per pound, respectively. Roosters remained at five cents per pound, but broilers took a one cent cut, lowering the prices to 14@17 cents per pound. Extra and No. 1 eggs also participated in the decline, marking down one cent per dozen to offer 17 and 14 cents respectively. No. 2 eggs remained at 10 cents on the new price list.

No. 1 toms and hens of 14 and 9 pounds and upward, respectively, were boosted from 12 to 14 cents per pound.

Immense supplies of chickens carried over from the preceding year have resulted in a stagnant poultry market, it was said. Lowering of prices on beef and pork during the past month in various places was attributed in some measure to the low prices prevailing on chickens.

According to buyers here, no curtailment of the supply can be anticipated during the coming fall and winter because an unusually large number of chickens have been raised this year throughout the country. This section of Texas, it was said, will show a record production of chickens for 1930.

A number of branch houses of the Armour creameries in towns within a redius of 150 miles of Wichita Falls have been closed for the remainder of the summer, it was said Thursday. Supplies of poultry and eggs were better than usula in most localities, it was stated, but the market was described as badly over-crowded.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, July 10. (AP) (U.S.D.A.)—Further price upturns were registered around the 11 market circuit on fed yearlings, but matured steers and western grassers ruled weak. Fed yearlings are out-selling matured steers. Chicago scored $11.25 on yearling steers and yearling heifers, while the practical top on weighty steers was $10.75. Good 1295 pound Texas cake feds in Kansas City landed at $9.00 and were feed-lot mates of the $10.00 steers of last Monday. Oklahoma grass steers, averaging 900-1060 lb. brought $6.00@6.50 at Kansas City while 1150 lb. Texas grassers in St. Joseph sold at $7.00. Aggregate receipts, were estimated at 29,000, as compared with 11,974 a week ago and 22,600 the corresponding day last year. Hogs were slow at weak to 25c lower rates with weight averages aboue 220 lbs. showing the most decline. Extreme top of $9.75 was paid at St. Louis. Total offerings were around 78,400, an increase of 22,000 over last Thursday and about the same as a year ago.

Sheep numbered 37,500, against 27,722 a wek ago and 41,258 a year ago. Fat lambs found an active outlet at strong to 25c higher prices and steady values were maintained on aged stock. Choice range lambs in Chicago scored $11.25 while at Kansas City choice Idaho lambs made $11.00.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, July 10. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Packer buyers were in no hurry to bid on slaughter steers and butcher cows today and the market for these classes proved dull.

Best steers were light weights at $8.00 and $8.50. Off quality, grassy slaughter steers were around $5.00. Bulk of butcher cows were reported from $7.35 to $8.00.

RANGER PUSHES DEATH INQUIRY

Demise of Candidate At Huntsville Probed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, July 10. (UP)—Despite the fact that a verdict attributing the death of Earl Swanger, 37, candidate for district attorney from the 12th judicial district, to an automobile accident has been returned, Special Ranger Homer T. Glover announced tonight that he would continue his investigation of the case.

Swanger, returning here from a campaign speech in Trinity, was found dead Wednesday morning. His car had plunged 50 feet off the highway into a creek. Death at first was attributed to the theory that the candidate had gone to sleep while driving but officers decided later the man had been murdered when three wounds, resembling knife stabs, were found in his body.

Justice of the Peace R. J. Camp today held Swanger's death due to the wreck after receiving reports from Sheriff N. L. Speer that the wounds could have been made by nails in the bridge through which the candidate's car plunged.

Sheriff Speer revealed today that a woman, whose name he refused to divulge, had accompanied Swanger on his fatal Tuesday night drive from Trinity to Huntsville. The woman admitted that she and the man had quarreled and that she jumped from the automobile to hail a ride from a passing motorist.

She declared Swanger had been drinking and said she did not learn of his death until Wednesday morning.

The woman, reported to be the wife of a Trinity business man, was not arrested.

Ranger Glover said he would continue his investigation, attempting to determine whether the wounds in Swanger's body were the result of knife stabs or had been caused by nails in the bridge.

Fisherman Chokes On Catch He Tried to Bite

SAN JUAN, P. R., July 10. (UP)—Antonio Ramos was dead today, the victim of a fish he tried to bite.

Ramos, a fisherman by trade, caught a fish in the river La Plata Toa Alta and, following local custom, tried to kill the fish by biting its head.

The fish, however, wiggled down Ramos' throat, lodged there, and choked him to death before it could be dislodged.

The Blackface Is Ours!

"In "Boston and New England," a publication of the Gray Lines, Inc., Mayor Curley, in a tercentenary address, says in part: 'She (Boston) asks the visitor to rehearse with her the struggles of the fathers in the early days, and to take pride in the persistence with which succeeding generations have carried on the work that they so well began down to this day, when the name of Boston has become a synonym for all that is most sublime in literature, science and the arts."

8 to 5 that the Boston Record (one of our New England bosses) doesn't print it.

Air Ferry

SAN FRANCISCO.—The air ferry which operates a fleet of amphibian planes between here and Oakland, a distance of six miles, has possibly the most air traffic of any line in the country. It is said to be the shortest and most frequently used air line in the world. In its first 60 days of operation it carried more than 21,000 passengers.

Steam-Powered Plane

ALAMEDA, Calif.—Work is being rushed here on what is thought to be the first steam-powered airplane in the United States. It is being built by William J. Besler, pilot-inventor. It will have a two-cylinder compound type engine weighing about 300 pounds, with 150 horsepower.

Here's the Whole Want Ad Idea in a Nutshell— Read It Carefully

"Want advertising is the oldest and simplest form of advertising," says the Worcester Telegram-Gazette.

"It is the only form of advertising written and placed and checked by the masses. It is a public utility similar to the telephone. Like the telephone, it must approximate universal use to be of a maximum value. A telephone system that reached only a few families, or that was open on certain days, would be of slight value. Each telephone subscriber is interested in having as many other subscribers as possible and in having continuous service. Similarly, each want advertiser profits from all the other want advertisers whose offerings surround his and compete with it, because it is the conveniently classified grouping of many offerings which attract ready buyers."

"Want ads constitute a unique addition to the markets of the world. Probably no other means ever brought buyer and seller together so efficiently. The cost of selling and distributing merchandise through the usual channels of trade ranges from 25 per cent to 50 per cent, yet $1.00 worth of want advertising may sell a $500 piano or a $2,000 automobile or a $20,000 home. No phase of the modern newspaper is essentially more romantic, more amazing, than the service of the want ad. A few lines of agate type buried among the thousands of lines of agate type bring together employer and employe, or landlord and tenant, or buyer and seller, drawing each other to each other."

Lovers of the lightsome, melodic airs which have sustained the popularity of light opera will find a treat on the air at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, if they will single out station KRLD, Dallas, for a clear audition at that hour.

Using a quartet of solo voices with a small symphony, the CBS chain will present at that time a select group of light operatic solos and choruses, including the famed lullaby from Jacobowsky's "Erminie." Comedy elements will include "The Mermaid and the Whale," with contralto and quartet, from Edwards' "The Wedding Day." The program will open with excerpts from the delightful "Chimes of Normandy," by Planquette.

Later in the evening, at 6 o'clock, the group of comedy actors which radios under the name of the Nit-Wits will present a burlesque version of Shakespeare's "Othello." This program also will come from CBS station WABC through KRLD, Dallas.

Those who prefer a heavier type of music during the early afternoon will find in the classic hour of station WLW, Cincinnati, from 2 to 3 p. m. a concert program by Ida Blackson, soprano, a string trio, and solo piano. The classic tone of that program will be continued in the "German Lesson" from the same station during the succeeding half-hour. The German period will open with Strauss' "Blue Danube Waltz."

A Form of Criticism

Overheard in one of the Broadway Asylums: "Know her? I'll say I do. She's as fickle as the stock market and just as low!"

Heheheh

Then there's Eddie Vogt's swifty on a Scotchman, who cut himself while shaving, so he phoned the hospital to see if they needed a blood transfusion!

CITY IMPROVES WATER PLANT

New Chlorinator Added To Equipment Here

A new chlorinator and ammoniator will be installed at the city water plant at Twenty-first and Burnett streets within the next 10 days, it was announced Thursday by Dr. A. H. Douglass, head of the water department.

The chlorinator will be used to introduce liquid chlorine into the water and the ammoniator will serve to facilitate the action of the chlorine in disinfecting the water, Dr. Douglass said.

"This process of adding chlorine and ammonia to the water is practically new in water works practice but its efficiency has been established in several large cities, namely, Cleveland, Ohio. The purpose of the double treatment is to prolong the action of the chlorine making it possible to obtain complete disinfection of the water to the remote ends of the distribution system," Dr. Douglass pointed out.

"The double treatment is also more effective in destroying obnoxious tastes and odors in water which are caused by the presence of algae, which are small plant growths that produce green mossy particles that are frequently seen on surface waters in this section of the country. A complete dosage of chemicals used in this double treatment will not exceed the total amount of chemicals heretofore used. The dose will be approximately one pound of chemical to every 250,000 gallons of water.

"The new system will be operated at approximately the same expense as the present one and we hope to deliver a better quality of water to the more outlying sections of the city."

The new apparatus will be installed at a cost of approximately $2,000, Mr. Douglas estimated.

A similar device for the purpose of killing obnoxious odors and also for the disposal of sewage in a more sanitary manner will be installed next week by F. M. Rugeley, city engineer. The location for the new chlorinator has not yet been decided upon, Mr. Rugeley said.

At the Theaters

By ELEANOR FLEMING

STRAND: Will Rogers and Irene Rich in "So This Is London." Short talking subjects and Paramount sound news.

MAJESTIC: "The Big House" with Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Robert Montgomery, Chester Morris, George F. Marion and Leila Hyams. "Dangerous Females" with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. Screen song and sound news.

STATE: William Collier Sr. in "Harmony at Home." Comedy and sound news.

GEM: "Courting Wildcats" with Hoot Gibson. Chapter one of "Lightning Express" with Jack Perrin and Louise Loraine. Comedy, "Apartment Hunting."

Never in a Wichita Falls theater has there been such a 100 per cent genuine, spontaneous and hearty burst of laughter as that which Marie Dressler got with her convict-capturing idea at the Majestic theater Wednesday night. There is nothing that can compare with a sudden delightful outburst from 1,046 persons, which was the exact number that broke all records to fill the Majestic to see "The Big House." Those standing were not counted.

For pure comedy based on realism "Harmony at Home," opening at the State Thursday, approaches the sort of thing done by Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris." No person except the one who grew up in an orphan's home could fail to find it strangely reminiscent of his own family life.

Those who saw a special screening of the picture Wednesday night recognized some members of their own family as well as those in the family next door. The mother who scared off all the older daughter's beaux with her constant chatter, the little girl who was eternally practising the same piano exercise, and lazy Willie are almost as common as billboards along the road. It remained for father, however, to play his role most convincingly, attempting throughout to secure the harmony that is never possible in a family of such different types.

C.-C. TO STUDY FLOOD RELIEF

Business Council to Meet For Luncheon Today

Discussion of flood relief and prevention of damaging overflows in this vicinity in the future is expected to be included in the program of the business council in its meeting Friday noon at the Kemp hotel, according to members of the program committee.

Other subjects which have been brought before the council by the program committee through its chairman, R. D. Kennedy, are those of chamber of commerce memberships and the establishment here of a community trust fund. Proposals relative to membership in the chamber of commerce have suggested the advisability of accepting half-year memberships under certain conditions, and have recommended that membership in the organization be made continuous until resignation, rather than annual.

C. W. Snider was made chairman of a committee one month ago to investigate the matter of a community trust fund, and report the feasibility and need of such a plan in Wichita Falls. It was said that a report on this investigation probably would be made Friday.

The meeting will begin at 12:10 p. m., with luncheon preceding the council's open discussion.

Thomas P. Gore to Speak Over Station KWKH

Thomas P. Gore of Lawton, Okla., United States senator from Oklahoma for 14 years prior to 1921 and now a candidate for the same post, will speak through radio station KWKH, Shreveport, at 9:15 p. m. Friday, July 11, according to information received by The Record News Thursday evening.

Mr. Gore, blind since his early youth, but active during the past 40 years in Democratic circles, is well known in this section of the country. He spoke at the Memorial auditorium here on May 30 under the auspices of the Home Owned Industries association.

Mine Disaster Death Toll Mounts to 157

NEURODE, Silesia, Germany, July 10. (US)—With rescue work at the Wenoeslaus mine temporarily abandoned tonight, officials feared that the death toll will mount to at least 157.

Efforts at reaching the 81 miners still entombed in the shaft that yesterday became their tomb were suspended tonight until the gas still pocketed in the explosion area clears away. Little hope that the 81 will be found alive is held.

So far 76 bodies have been recovered. Of the 206 miners in the shaft at the time of the explosion only 49 escaped death.

Clark Warns Council on 'Counting Dollars' Against Junior College

Recapitulation of the facts made public recently relative to the status of Wichita Falls Junior college featured an address given by C. H. Clark, president of the school board, before members of the Rotary club Thursday noon at the Kemp hotel.

Importance of providing some means of financing the continued operation of a junior college here was expressed by Mr. Clark in the form of a warning against further measuring of progress merely in terms of dollars. The citizenship of this community has made that mistake in the past, he said.

"If we leave out higher things in our city building, the day will come when we shall be sorry. The educational towns of the state are the best towns in Texas," Mr. Clark declared.

Impossibility of continuing the college under present arrangements was outlined by the speaker, and its conversion into a county institution for distribution of the supporting-tax burden was proposed. An increase of 12 cents per $100 of property valuation in the county would provide the needed funds, he said.

Musical numbers by Ted Williams, baritone, accompanied by Mrs. A. H. Mahaffey, and a singsong led by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Shepherd, comprised the entertainment for the hour. Walter Campbell was in charge of the program. J. M. Spoonts presided, and guests were introduced by C. A. Rogers.

Vesuvius Threatens Valley Inhabitants

NAPLES, July 10. (UP)—A number of inhabited centers on the slopes of Mount Vesuvius were feared endangered today as back-up lava overflowed the craters and moved toward "hell valley."

The new tendency in the regular spring activity of the volcano, which began Monday, probably will lead to a lava flow down the southeastern slope of the mountain, where numerous families dwell.

SIGNOR PUCCINI DIES

MILAN, Italy, July 10. (UP)—Signor Elvira Puccini, widow of the famous Italian composer, died today from heart disease from which she had suffered for a year. Pope Pius XI sent a special blessing.
