Kurile islands deal?

MOSCOW — A leading minister in the new transitional Soviet government has endorsed Japan's claim to several Soviet-held islands in the Kurile chain, heightening speculation that a deal might be possible in return for Japanse economic aid. Grigory A. Yavlinsky, vice chairman of the Soviet State Council's economic management committee, said the islands, seized by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II, seemed to properly belong to Japan under the terms of a treaty signed in 1855./7A

Food data doubted

WASHINGTON — The government may be all wrong about what Americans eat, says a congressional report released Tuesday. So few people responded to the last Nationwide Food Consumption Survey that it's questionable whether the data accurately reflects the general population, the General Accounting Office said in its report. Yet, the survey, conducted every 10 years, continues to be widely used by the government, academic community and industry as the leading authority on who consumes what foods, the GAO said.

Travis document

AUSTIN — A document signed by Lt. Col. William B. Travis shortly before his death at the Alamo was returned to the state Tuesday. The historic paper, which had been taken from the Texas State Library and Archives Commission during a rash of thefts in the 1960s, was found this year hanging on the wall of failed San Antonio savings and loan, officials said./3B

Dahmer enters plea

MILWAUKEE — Jeffrey L. Dahmer, who admitted to police he killed and dismembered 17 people since 1978, pleaded innocent Tuesday to 15 murder charges and said if convicted he would claim insanity. The plea means Dahmer would first be tried on charges he committed the crimes. If found guilty, a jury or judge would then determine whether he was insane and could not be held responsible for his acts. But defense lawyer Gerald P. Boyle said there was "a strong likelihood" Dahmer will change his plea later./7B

Navratilova offers lawsuit settlement

FORT WORTH (AP) — Martina Navratilova Tuesday made a settlement offer to a former companion who has filed a palimony lawsuit against the tennis star.

Judy Nelson emerged from a Fort Worth courtroom late Tuesday and said she would consider the offer overnight before deciding whether to accept it and end her legal quest for a share of the nine-time Wimbledon champion's assets.

Nelson, who had a seven-year relationship with Navratilova, said both sides have compromised in trying to reach a settlement.

Texans wary of action on petroleum pollution

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Environmentalists are pressing for a law that would drive thousands of small oil operations out of business by forcing them to adopt costly methods of discarding drilling wastes, Texas Railroad Commissioner Robert Krueger said Tuesday.

"It would be like a scythe sweeping through Texas," said Krueger of the law. "The sheiks would smile, and unemployment lines would grow."

The environmentalists are targeting U.S. oil and gas producers' exemption from the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), which governs the disposal and transportation of industrial wastes.

But as Congress prepares to update the law, the oil industry fears that lawmakers will remove that exemption, compel-

Nominee refuses to comment on abortion

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas refused to tell the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday whether he believes the Constitution protects a woman's right to an abortion and attempted to blunt the controversy over his support for "natural law," saying he doesn't "see a role" for it in deciding court cases.

In the first round of questioning in his confirmation hearing, Thomas, a political conservative, also declined to answer Committee Chairman Sen. Joseph R. Biden's question on whether he would vote to overturn Roe vs. Wade, the court's landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

"I don't think at this time I could maintain impartiality as a member of the judiciary and comment on a specific case," Thomas said. For the past year, the 43-year-old judge has been a member of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, one rung below the Supreme Court on the judicial ladder.

City OKs air terminal funding

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The Midland International Airport new terminal project is ready to move ahead after the City Council's approval Tuesday of funding and contracts with architects.

Councilmen approved a $1.6 million loan from the general fund to the airport fund for design work, and authorized city staff to contract with the architectural firms.

"I'm very excited about this," said Airport Director Ken Day. "I'm pleased with the direction the city fathers are heading in. It's a bold step, a dynamic move. There's a lot of work ahead of us, but I'm very excited."

Day said the council's choice takes the project into its second phase — design. After recent completion of the conceptual phase, the project for replacement of the airport terminal is ready for the work of a team of architects and planners, expected to take about 10 months. Two phases are then left to follow — bidding for a construction contractor and actual construction.

'I'm pleased. . . . It's a bold step, a dynamic move.

Airport Director Ken Day

In the design phase, the goal is to create a terminal that will fit into the scope of the entire airport's future, Day said.

"We've got to meet with the airlines and all the tenants to determine how to make the terminal work," said Day, who will oversee the project.

The terminal is expected to be built behind the current structure, in the space now occupied by covered parking. According to preliminary designs, it will have five gates with space for another to be added later. The current facility has four gates.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the new terminal is

Santa Claus poses with a 'Hummer,' the featured item of the Neiman Marcus 1991 gift list.

His-and-hers 'Hummers' top gift list

By Scott Nishimura
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Looking for the perfect Christmas gift this year?

Neiman Marcus — always ready with an answer to such a perplexing question — has a great idea: his-and-hers LTV Hummers, civilian versions of the four-wheel-drive vehicles used by U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf War.

The vehicles, the modern equivalent of a Jeep, come in three colors — red, sand or white. They can negotiate as much as 30 inches of water without special equipment and feature air conditioners and stereos.

From Neiman Marcus to you, they're each just $50,000.

"These would be great camping vehicles, and very strong vehicles for someone who has a ranch," said Neiman Marcus spokeswoman Pat Zajac.

Ah, young love.

Neiman Marcus rolled the Hummer out Tuesday as the annual "His and Hers" gift selection in the specialty retailer's "1991 Christmas Book." The upscale retailer, based in Dallas, unveiled the book during a news conference at the Willow Bend Polo Club in nearby Plano.

But there were, as expected in the company's much-anticipated annual holiday catalog, numerous other gift ideas for those with the wherewithal to match their whimsy. They included:

■ Your own personal, hand-carved totem pole at $2,000 a lineal foot. That means a 10-foot totem pole would cost $20,000.

■ A two-week safari in Kenya priced at $6,500 per person, not including airfare.

Cuba hits hard times; begins tobacco limits

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Fidel Castro no longer smokes his trademark Cuban cigars, and for years he has encouraged his countrymen to quit smoking. But now they have good reason to kick the habit: tobacco rationing.

The country is eliminating unrationed cigarette and cigar sales at home because of an economic crisis brought on by collapsing aid and trade with the former Soviet bloc.

Virtually everything available to Cubans is rationed these days — from food to fuel to paper and shoes — and long lines for goods are common in Havana.

Fidel Castro's Cabinet added to the list on Monday by voting to abolish the domestic market on which Cubans freely purchased tobacco products, the Mexican news agency Notimex reported from Havana.

The Communist government said Cubans over age 17 would now be limited to two or three packs of cigarettes every 15 days, according to Notimex. The report did not indicate the limit on cigars or other tobacco products.

Cuba's cigars are described by many smokers as the finest in the world.

Cuba began imposing austerity measures last year, as Soviet aid began to dry up and the collapse of communism in Eastern Europe robbed it of key markets there.

But Castro, who has ruled since his 1959 revolution, has vowed to stick to his hard-line communist policies at any cost, while warning his people that times may well get worse.

Cuban officials in some regions have begun testing a "zero option" to see how they might cope with a complete cutoff of Soviet aid.

While Soviet officials have not threatened such a measure, they have said Cuba will have to start paying for more goods at unsubsidized prices and in hard currency that the island nation sorely lacks.

Soviet Foreign Minister Boris D. Pankin said last week it was time again to re-examine Soviet ties with Cuba. But President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has indicated he would like to maintain a strong relationship with Cuba.

Philippines rain forest needs help, group says

NEW YORK (AP) — An overlooked patch of forest in the Philippines is one of the world's richest natural areas, harboring 5,000 kinds of plants and 200 species of birds, and it needs protection, a conservation group said Tuesday.

"The Palanan rainforest is among the world's top conservation priorities, and it may not survive the 1990s," said Russell Mittermeier, president of Conservation International.

"At current deforestation rates, the Palanan ecosystem will be destroyed by the year 2000 unless effective management strategies are put into place."

Conservation International issued the results of a rapid, preliminary survey of the Palanan wilderness area, on the island of Luzon in the northern Philippines.

The region is threatened by a proposed road that would open the area to development and exploitation of its natural resources, the group said.

The 500,000-acre area was found to contain five new species of plants, seven species previously not known to exist in the Philippines, and a population of the seriously threatened dugong, a marine mammal similar to the Florida manatee.

Aquino leads march demanding lease

MANILA, the Philippines (NYT) — President Corazon C. Aquino led thousands of Filipinos in a march through heavy rains to the Philippine Senate on Tuesday to demand ratification of a new American lease on Subic Bay Naval Station, a day after a majority of the senators announced their intention to reject the base agreement.

Before the march, a rally in support of the agreement drew an enthusiastic crowd estimated by the police at 100,000 to 200,000 people, but there was no indication that Mrs. Aquino's plea or the turnout had changed anyone's vote in the 23-member Senate.

The treaty, which would allow the United States to retain its largest military base in Southeast Asia for 10 more years, still seems headed for Senate rejection.

Six people were wounded after the march when a bomb concealed in a delivery truck exploded outside the Senate while Mrs. Aquino was inside meeting with legislative leaders over the base agreement. The motive for the bombing was not known.

Wearing her trademark yellow dress and braving torrential rains that washed out much of the route of the march through downtown Manila, Mrs. Aquino insisted that she was still optimistic about salvaging the base agreement, which requires a two-thirds vote of the Senate to become law.

"Let us shout to our senators, 'Yes to the treaty!'" Mrs. Aquino told supporters at the rally.

Reviving the rallying cry of the popular movement she led in toppling President Ferdinand E. Marcos in 1986, Mrs. Aquino said Tuesday that the senators needed to be reminded of "people power."

The treaty seems certain to be rejected in a full Senate vote in the next few days. Washington has said that if this happens, it will reluctantly make plans to move the base elsewhere in Asia.

Senate opponents of the treaty say the agreement offers too little compensation — the United States would provide $203 million a year to the Philippines for the use of Subic — and perpetuates an unhealthy and outdated dependence on Washington by this former American colony.

Some senators say they might accept a renegotiated treaty, while others insist that as a matter of national pride it is time to put an end to the presence of foreign troops on Philippine soil.

The harshness of the debate is reflected even within President Aquino's own family. A brother-in-law of Mrs. Aquino, Sen. Agapito Aquino, is among the lawmakers opposing the treaty.

At a separate anti-treaty rally in Manila Tuesday, Agapito Aquino said, "The long-term interests of our people calls for the removal of American military bases."

Under the agreement reached this summer after 15 months of negotiation, the United States would remain at Subic while abandoning Clark Air Base, a sister installation on the central Philippine island of Luzon that was smothered beneath volcanic ash in the eruption of Mount Pinatubo last June.

Many members of the Senate are staunch nationalists who were swept into office along with Mrs. Aquino. They have long equated the U.S. military presence in the Philippines with what they describe as misguided American support of the dictatorial rule of Marcos.

Canada officials walk out

TORONTO (AP) — Trucks backed up at the U.S. border, air traffic was disrupted and grain shipments dwindled Tuesday in the second day of a strike by Canadian civil servants angered by a threatened wage freeze.

There was no sign of a quick return to work by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which told 110,000 of its members to strike Monday. An additional 45,000 members in essential services are barred from striking.

The union says the strike will continue until the Treasury Board, which represents the federal government, agrees to negotiate a pay raise.

The government says it will freeze wages this year and set pay increases at 3 percent for 1992 and 1993. The decision is not negotiable, it says.

Daryl Bean, the union's president, said he had heard nothing from the Treasury Board or its president, Gilles Loiselle.

"I saw Mr. Loiselle three times last night as we went from (broadcast) studio to studio to do interviews," Bean said Tuesday. "But there is no movement on any negotiations. We must accept zero, three and three before we go into negotiation. I say if we're going to negotiate, there can't be preconditions."

Loiselle said early reports estimated about 50 percent of the eligible employees were off the job Monday.

Bean said at least 70,000 port workers, clerks, grain inspectors, weather forecasters and other federal employees were on picket lines Monday.

About 800 auditors from the Professional Institute of Public Service, a rival union, joined the strike late Monday.

Customs officers, who are among workers prohibited from striking, supported the walkout by processing truck traffic slowly, causing backups at border crossings for a second day.

American tourists say French get friendlier

PARIS (AP) — The French, long reputed to turn a cold shoulder toward American tourists, have gotten friendlier over the past five years, according to a survey released Tuesday.

More than half of the 1,000 American tourists polled by American Express and Maison de la France, a French tourism group, said they got a warmer welcome than expected and detected a definite improvement since 1986.

Only 14 percent said not speaking French caused insurmountable problems.

Polish prime minister stops in Washington

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Facing parliamentary elections in 47 days, Prime Minister Jan Krzysztof Bielecki of Poland made a campaign stop here Tuesday.

His schedule, including speeches and calls on businessmen, members of Congress and international bankers, culminates Wednesday in a meeting with President Bush. An administration official said that the Polish elections on Oct. 27 will in effect be a referendum on Bielecki.

The 40-year-old former entrepreneur was appointed nine months ago by President Lech Walesa to head a government of experts. He embarked immediately on a crash program to introduce free-market policies.

Bielecki's austerity program stirred resistance among workers and rising opposition in Parliament, which took office in 1989 under a formula that accorded the Communist Party 65 percent of the seats.

Last month, Bielecki sought and was denied powers to make more budget cuts without parliamentary approval. He then offered to resign, but in a vote of confidence the Parliament refused to accept the resignation.

THOMAS: Nominee tries to blunt controversy

(From 1A)

Thomas for specifics on speeches the nominee made in 1987 that appeared to endorse applying natural law theory against legal abortion and against government regulation of business.

Natural law is the philosophy that some rights are God-given and do not come solely from the Constitution. Some Thomas critics say that they fear that, if he is confirmed, he might apply natural law theory to overturn precedent-setting Supreme Court decisions.

Asked by Biden why he found theories questioning minimum wage laws and environmental protection to be "attractive," Thomas said he was motivated by the belief that "the right of my grandfather to work deserved protection." Thomas' grandfather, who reared him, was a semi-literate black laborer and businessman in Pin Point, Ga.

Thomas opponents also say his writings harken back to the late 19th and early 20th centuries, when the Supreme Court used natural law arguments to strike down the right of women to attend law school and nullify federal health and safety rules and minimum wage laws.

Thomas told the senators, however, that he believes that Supreme Court decisions in the New Deal era of the 1930s overturning those earlier cases were "rightly decided." Those decisions, by a court dominated President Franklin D. Roosevelt's appointees, upheld the government's right to regulate business.

Biden also asked about a 1987 speech in which Thomas characterized as "splendid" an article linking natural law to anti-abortion efforts.

The article, by former Republican New York gubernatorial candidate Lewis Lehrman, argued that "God-given" rights in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution are sufficient to outlaw abortion.

"My exploring natural law and natural rights was purely in terms of theory," Thomas said.

When he made the remark, Thomas said, he did not in fact agree with all of Lehrman's conclusions, but made a complimentary reference to the article so that his conservative audience at the Washington-based Heritage Foundation could see that "one of their own" endorsed natural law.

Under further questioning, Thomas said: "The Constitution is our model. It's the law of our land. Natural law philosophy is political theory, not constitutional law."

After the first round of questioning, Biden told Thomas, "You leave me with more questions than answers."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, an outspoken liberal who stated before the hearing that he would vote not to confirm Thomas, said the nominee "obviously had great difficulty" responding to questions about natural law."

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., another liberal, said he also was "a little surprised" by Thomas' vague responses on natural law questions because the topic received so much attention before hearings began.

Metzenbaum said he was puzzled that Thomas commented on some matters that may come before the court — such as capital punishment and prison overcrowding — in answers to questions posed by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., but begged off on stating his views on abortion because the court may have to consider that issue.

Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, an umbrella group encompassing 165 civil rights and religious groups, said Thomas' answers damaged "his chances for confirmation. Most of the groups in the Leadership Conference oppose Thomas.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, an ardent Thomas supporter, scoffed at that assessment. "He made it clear he's not going to be a judicial activist. As long as he says that, these groups don't have anything against him," Hatch said.

LAWSUIT: Navratilova makes settlement offer

(From 1A)

"Neither of us ever wanted this to happen. It has, and we're in it, and I think that we would both like to see the pain and the suffering stop so that we can both recover from it and get on with our lives," she said.

Navratilova's publicist, Linda Dozoretz, said talks reached a halt after both sides could not reach agreement on non-financial aspects of the settlement.

"Ms. Nelson this evening substantially reduced her economic expectations but has not yet acknowledged the invalidity of the non-marital cohabitation agreement," Dozoretz said. "Therefore Martina Navratilova has not accepted the settlement offer. Attempts to minimize litigation expenses continue and will be considered by Ms. Navratilova and her lawyers tomorrow."

Dozoretz said she could not speculate on why it was important for Nelson to accept the fact that the couple did not have a legal cohabitation agreement.

"I just know that it's really important to everybody," she said.

"Court will resume again tomorrow morning," Dozoretz said.

Dozoretz said earlier she was "optimistic" both sides would come to terms.

Nelson said the lawsuit is about more than the millions of dollars she could win in a judgment.

"It's about Martina honoring a contract, an agreement that she did honestly and that we both wanted," said Nelson, a former beauty queen.

"I really don't want to look at the dollars and cents of it. I mean it goes beyond that."

Nelson met twice privately with Navratilova on Tuesday, calling the discussions the first talks the two have had since ending their relationship earlier this year.

Earlier Tuesday, the two women returned to a state district courtroom in Fort Worth for the second day of a preliminary hearing in the lawsuit. Navratilova's attorneys are trying to have Nelson's attorney removed from the case, saying he has unfair knowledge of Navratilova's financial status due to previous work for her.

Both women cried when a videotape was played Monday showing them agreeing to a non-marital cohabitation agreement.

Nelson contends Navratilova reneged on the 1986 agreement in which Nelson was to get half of the estimated $5 million to $9 million the tennis player earned during their relationship.

"I would like to have settled this before it ever began," said Nelson, 45, of Fort Worth. "Every day and every night, I hope that tomorrow will be the last day and the last night."

She declined to say how much Navratilova had offered her in any proposed out-of-court settlement. Nelson said she had been forced to cash in some of her retirement savings for support since her split Navratilova earlier this year.

"Well, you have to live on something," Nelson said. "They actually cut off any support or help to me, or any access to bank accounts, or any privileges that I had from being her partner. (They) were cut off from the beginning."

Navratilova, 34, formally ended the relationship in April with a letter to Nelson after an initial breakup in February.

Nancy Lieberman-Klein, another of Navratilova's former companions and a member of the courtroom audience, said that the player could be easy prey for gold diggers.

"I'm not saying she (Nelson) is a gold digger," Lieberman-Klein said, adding that Navratilova is a trusting person.

"I guarantee you that if she has 25 attorneys, she's probably seen two of them face to face."

Navratilova, who underwent six emotional hours on the stand Monday, maintained her composure Tuesday as attorneys continued to question her and review the videotape of the February 1986 agreement.

State District Judge Harry Hopkins is expected to rule from the bench in the hearing on whether Nelson's attorney, Jerry Loftin of Fort Worth, should be disqualified from the case.

Nelson lived with Navratilova in Fort Worth from 1984 through 1989, and then the couple lived in Aspen, Colo.

WARY: Krueger warns of dire consequences

ling producers to undertake what producers say are unnecessary and expensive disposal measures that will force tens of thousands of wells to be plugged.

"I don't wish to come in as such a scare-prophet or Jeremiah," said Krueger, who will testify before a House panel Wednesday on the issue. "But if the wrong policies were to be enacted, much of the domestic energy industry in the U.S. would be killed ... and our environment would be no better for that effort."

Krueger, citing an industry-funded study of a law proposed by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said the measure would lead to abandonment of as many as 148,000 operating oil wells in Texas alone, amounting to 74 percent of the state's daily production. Most of those are "stripper" wells, which produce less than 10 barrels a day, which he said would be especially vulnerable to a change in the law.

In 1989, Texas had 250,000 producing oil and gas wells, employing over 150,000 people.

Briny salt water accounts for the overwhelming majority of the wastes generated by exploration and production of oil, especially in marginal wells, the industry said, along with drilling muds and "associated wastes," including benzene, hydrochloric acid and heavy metals.

Melinda Taylor, associate general counsel for the Audobon Society, took issue with the industry's cost study, saying that environmentalists are asking Congress to impose federal regulations only on the "associated wastes," which she said were highly toxic substances.

"With these wastes, ou tend to see the worst contimination of ground water and soil contimination," she said. Forcing the industry to comply with federal standards for disposing of the relatively small volume of such wastes would result in a much smaller cost, she added.

Krueger said the states should be responsible for regulating such wastes, which he said posed little if any public health threat.

"We have a long track record of regulating this industry," he said. "Nobody is going to be more concerned about the quality of our environment, the water in our state than the people of Texas who drink that water and take their food from that soil and breathe that air."

Salt water, injected into marginal wells to force oil out, is "harmless" and "goes back to those locations in nature from which it is taken," said the railroad commissioner, whose agency has regulated the Texas oil and gas industry since 1919.

But environmental groups said that salt water can and does cause damage.

"I would not characterize that as harmless," said a House committee staffer who asked not to be named. "That stuff is not harmless, it ends up getting spread on roads, spilled or put in unlined pits."

Asked about the potential damage to stripper-well operators, the staffer said lawmakers could grant an exemption to very small oil operations.

LIST: Dallas retailer has idea for ultimate Christmas gifts

(From 1A)

■ Your own personal lemonade stand on wheels, for use at parties, business outings, family get-togethers and school events. You can buy it at Neiman Marcus and forget the hassle of building it yourself.

But it will cost you $2,000.

■ A mechanical polo pony that helps develop correct timing. Cost is $12,000.

There is one catch: The price tag doesn't include gift wrap.

"It would be hard to gift-wrap," Zajac said. "It would look kind of funny, wouldn't it?"

But the 133-page "Christmas Book," while known for its extravagances — one of last year's gifts was an $85,000 antique gypsy wagon — also includes numerous lesser-priced items.

The lowest-priced gift in the catalog is a $10 Christmas platter, an annual "Christmas Book" mainstay. It has variations in the design every year.

"That's always a popular item," Zajac said. "We sell bezillions of them. I don't know how you spell bezillion, but we sell a lot of them."

Other popular and relatively low-priced items in the "Christmas Book" were foods, related housewares, fashion accessories, sportswear, and crystal, Zajac said.

Also popular were items that feature Neiman Marcus' name prominently, such as the "official NM nightshirt," tote bags and golf balls.

"It seems like everybody wants something from Neiman Marcus," Zajac said.

So Neiman Marcus, not one to disappoint its customers, plans to have 100 of the Hummer jeeps on hand. The vehicles, a "squared back" adaptation of the military transport Hummer, are available for order exclusively through Neiman Marcus this year.

The vehicles carry warranties and will be available in October 1992, Neiman Marcus said.

Based on preliminary police reports, the Midland-Reporter Telegram reported on Monday that a car involved in a accident on Sunday may have ran a red light.

According to a later traffic report, Stephanie Wallace, driving east on Andrews Highway said she had a green light. The traffic light cycle and witnesses colaborated this view.

Deborah Saxon, driving north on the Loop 250 service road, said she did not recall the light color.

FUNDING: Terminal project's ready to proceed necessary because of increasing operating costs at the airport.

"We've got numerous and expensive operating costs associated with problems at the building," he said. Officials have said fire prevention, plumbing and electrical systems were badly in need of extensive repair and renovation.

Midlander Edna Walger told the council they might be "putting the cart before the horse" with the $30.8 million project, but councilmen were unwavering in their support.

"This is something we've not done lightly," said at-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth. "We've had more than a year of thinking about this and I think it's necessary."

"There's no real demand for increased facilities," Ms. Walger argued.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said replacement of the new terminal was expected to solve some safety concerns as well. Now, there are space problems for airplanes, and the terminal's current location causes sight problems from the control tower, he said.

Based on a year-long examination, officials said, construction was deemed the most cost-effective choice.

The new building and associated parking and road work will be funded from three sources. The city hopes to impose a passenger facility fee of $3 per enplanement, to be added to airline tickets. An estimated $15 million revenues from that charge will fund half of the project.

Existing bond revenues will fund one-tenth of the total cost, and FAA grants are expected to fund the remaining $12 million.

Armored vehicles patrol Soweto Township Tuesday after six people died in tribal fighting.

Six die in South African fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six people were shot and stabbed to death Tuesday in attacks on commuter trains, bringing the death toll to 92 in the latest wave of black faction fighting.

Black leaders said they intended to sign a peace accord on Saturday that was worked out before the clashes broke out last weekend between rival factions in black townships near Johannesburg.

The peace pact involving the white-led government, the African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party has been billed as an important attempt to end the fighting. But previous peace accords have collapsed, delaying President F.W. de Klerk's efforts for additional political reform.

Police and army reinforcements patrolled the strife-torn townships Tuesday after imposing an overnight curfew in the hardest hit areas.

But new fighting erupted in the Soweto township, southwest of Johannesburg, when gunmen opened fire early Tuesday on people waiting for trains at the Dube station, killing three women.

At least three people were stabbed to death during the night on commuter trains, police said, and six more were stabbed and wounded when they tried to get off a train at a station in Soweto.

All of the violence involved blacks in impoverished townships scattered around the city. White residential areas were unaffected.

"The situation is still tense. We have mobilized military and police reinforcements and are trying to control the situation," police Maj. Reg Crewe said.

Armored police vehicles and army patrols moved through the Johannesburg-area townships, and some residents stayed home to guard their property and avoid possible trouble in the streets. Police patrols with semi-automatic weapons also guarded railway stations Tuesday evening.

Crewe said police patrols came under scattered gunfire and were pelted with rocks in Soweto.

Yugoslavian violence spreads

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Violence flared on two fronts Tuesday, leaving at least 15 dead in Croatia and pitting Serbian police against ethnic Albanian protesters in Serbia's Kosovo province.

But in a move to ease tensions, leaders of the Serb-controlled enclave of Krajina in western Croatia signed a truce accord negotiated by the European Community's envoy in the republic.

Meanwhile, Macedonia moved closer to becoming the third republic to split from Yugoslavia. Results of Sunday's independence referendum released in the Macedonian capital, Skopje, and cited by the Tanjug news agency had 95 percent of voters endorsing independence.

Before the plebiscite, however, Macedonian leaders had suggested they could seek loose association with the rest of Yugoslavia instead of outright separation.

The cease-fire, which was agreed to earlier by the federal army and the Croatian government, was signed in Knin, the capital of Krajina, the Tanjug news agency said.

Krajina was the scene of earlier Serb-Croat fighting before most of the violence moved to Slavonia in eastern Croatia.

Cease-fires signed in Slavonia have not held. But because the Krajina region has a more clearly defined Serbian leadership, and because there has been less violence there, the chances of success for a Krajina truce appeared greater.

City's rally was real celebration

City unity snubs Klan."We don't often comment on headlines appearing in this newspaper but that one, written by News Editor Dallas Merrick, perhaps warrants an exception.

It not only accurately reflected content of the front page story over which it appeared in last Sunday's edition but exemplified what we believe was the prevailing mood Saturday when about a dozen Klu Klux Klan representatives came to Midland.

The highlight of the activities Saturday was the exciting and uplifting counter-rally so aptly labeled by its planners as a "Unity Celebration."

That, it certainly was. As speakers wisely pointed out, the gathering of a cross-section of Midland citizens didn't mean differences do not exist or would never be in the forefront again. But it illustrated in a moving way that Midland still is a city where differences can be put aside, where citizens can and still will come together.

The involvement of Mayor Carroll Thomas, Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Gregg Owens and Isabell Jiminez, president, Permian Basin Chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens, was particularly important due to the message it sent.

But we particularly commend those black leaders who had a major role in planning and carrying out the rally, especially Rev. Michael DeVaughn, Rev. Hadley Edwards, Rev. Billy Ashley and Alma Marshall. Their response to the appearance of representatives of the nation's foremost hate organization was no less than inspiring. Midland is fortunate to have such leaders among us. All our citizens should realize that.

And who can quickly forget the stirring contribution made by soloist Carolyn Nelson who brought members of the racially-mixed audience to their feet.

Her rendition of "If I can Help Somebody" gave a new definition to the word "caring" and made the gathering in Centennial Plaza last Saturday truly a "United Celebration."

Liberals 'nitpicking' at Judge Thomas

From what I have heard about Clarence Thomas, I think he is an excellent choice to serve as justice of the United States Supreme Court. He had to overcome extreme poverty and personal difficulty to get through school and then he went on to obtain a law degree from Harvard.

He was appointed to several government positions and confirmed by the Congress to those positions in spite of their knowledge of his experimenting with marijuana as a young man. He divulged this information voluntarily long before his nomination for Supreme Court justice. Judge Thomas is a conservative jurist and he seems like exactly the kind of person I expect and want our president to nominate.

I would like to hear more about the positive side of Judge Thomas and his qualifications. All I have heard recently are liberal politicians and special interest groups "nitpicking" at Judge Thomas. I challenge the Reporter-Telegram to do an in-depth article or a series on Clarence Thomas. Certainly as important an issue as selecting a Supreme Court justice deserves that exposure.

Animal Control's workers really care!

This letter is prompted by a recent walk through Animal Control. A special officer walked down the aisle leading a malnourished female and holding a small puppy against her chest. These were victims of breeding animals with no regard for a home for them.

There are many animals turned in every month guilty of nothing except there was no home for them. The animal control officer must deal with this overpopulation. It hurts them to take away a life that they have fed, cleaned up after, gotten to know in a special way.

It is said that God put many different wags in a tail. I believe this is true. Most tails wag in a friendly manner, but other emotions are displayed by the dog's tail. Their eyes speak to you too. An animal only reacts to nature; that is why it is so necessary that we, as responsible pet owners, recognize pet overpopulations and don't be guilty of breeding up animals that must be destroyed.

Don't blame animal control for killing animals. Their hearts hurt as they handle the situation. Every day cards must be pulled to make room for others. I am so grateful we have caring officers in Midland. Remember they care; its why they work at Animal Control. Nothing makes them happier than to see an animal leave by the front door wagging his tail, knowing someone did care.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 11, the 254th day of 1991. There are 111 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Sept. 11, 1941, in a speech that sparked charges of anti-Semitism, aviation hero Charles A. Lindbergh said in Des Moines that "the British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt administration" were trying to draw the United States into World War II, and that Jewish groups should oppose the prospect of war.

Customs chief ignores agency woes

WASHINGTON — July was a bad month for U.S. Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett. Our columns and the findings of a blue-ribbon panel exposed bungling of Customs operations along the U.S.-Mexico border. Hallett wisely acknowledged the dirty laundry in public and promised to make changes.

Anderson

But that was her last smart move. She has since busied herself trying to find out who told us about that dirty laundry in the first place. And Customs employees who continue to speak out about problems are still being harassed on the job.

After the blistering findings of the blue-ribbon panel appointed by Customs were publicized, we reported on the troubles Hallett would have in trying to reform an agency run by a series of good-ol'-boy networks about which she had previously seemed oblivious. Hallett read our column aloud to her top management staff in Washington. Several sources told our associate Dean Boyd that Hallett appeared more interested in retribution than reform.

In a recent meeting with senior Customs field officials, Hallett reportedly asked them to tell her what they knew about who was leaking information to us. Then, on Aug. 16, the Customs Congressional Affairs office circulated a memo to Customs employees around the country warning them against loose lips: "... matters involving national media attention must be coordinated in advance with the Office of Public Affairs in headquarters," the memo said. "Similarly, any contact with congressional offices concerning U.S. Customs issues should be coordinated with the office of Congressional Affairs in headquarters." In other words, Customs employees are not to speak to the press or to members of Congress without permission.

It isn't a policy that encourages whistleblowers, but given the state of affairs in Customs, it is easy to see why Hallett is paranoid. There is so much about which to blow the whistle.

Take the scandal in Chicago. We reported last month that a senior Customs official in Chicago was being investigated by the Treasury inspector general in connection with allegations that he pressured junior office employees to engage in sex with him in exchange for promotions. After our report appeared, some Customs managers in Chicago began to harass employees who were suspected of cooperating with the inspector general. The manager under investigation — a man who was once in charge of Customs enforcement for more than a dozen states — has been placed on leave and refuses to comment.

When Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., heard about the continuing harassment of those who speak out, he sent a stinging letter to Hallett telling her to get her management off the backs of whistleblowers. The letter referred to "a pattern of continual harassment, threats and intimidation," and said that "supervisory agents involved allegedly believe they can proceed with impunity, because they can get away with it."

Barnard told Hallett it was "distressing" that she had promised to reform the agency as recommended by the "blue-ribbon" panel, but had not cracked down on those who harassed whistleblowers. Ironically, the congressman's letter to Hallett was written the same day as the Customs directive warning employees not to talk to members of Congress without permission.

Bush holds innocent Soviet Jews hostage

WASHINGTON — George Bush's Rosh Hashana message to Jews around the world: Until Israel signals its willingness to give up the West Bank before direct negotiations begin, the United States will deny credit guarantees needed to prepare to receive one million more Jews in their exodus from Russia.

Safire

Nobody puts it so baldly, of course. Americans would take offense if their president admitted holding the lives of a million harried and worried people hostage to his demand that Israel surrender its most cherished position beforehand. To demand a ransom of land for humanitarian aid would be diplomatic blackmail, never the way the U.S. has done business.

To conceal the nature of that hostage-taking, Bush asks Congress for a four-month "delay" in consideration of Israel's urgent request for our cosigning its notes to put roofs over the refugees' heads.

But everybody knows there is only one reason for the delay: to hang a sword of Damocles over the heads of Israeli negotiators who may resist a predetermined, Bush-imposed solution. This is clearly intended to put an agonizing choice before Israel: lose the land or lose the people.

Nobody suggests any other reason. The United States recognizes the plight of the Jews eager for emigration; no American politician wants the blood of any possible pogrom on his hands; rather than take them in the U.S., we want them to go to Israel. And we are prepared to guarantee loans to help house them; that is not an issue.

But there is an issue before the Congress: are we, for the first time in our history, prepared to use humanitarian aid as a lever to force another democratic government to act against what it sees to be its interests?

Not so, insists the president; he merely intends to use the "delay" as a means to lean on Israel to forbid its citizens from moving to lands that the PLO claims. The continuation of Jewish settlements, in Bush's eyes, is an obstacle to the grand settlement he has clearly in his mind and is determined, as the only superpower left standing, to impose.

Both Bush and the Israelis are well aware what a "settlements freeze" really would be. It is no mere pause in an activity that irritates Arabs, as our State Department likes to pretend it is; on the contrary, the day Israel bars Jews from moving to the West Bank is the day that Israel in effect gives up its claim to that disputed territory.

Everybody knows that, too; that's what the settlements fuss is about. To insist that Israel make Judea and Samaria, including the outskirts of Jerusalem, verboten to Jews is to take the first long step toward the creation of a Palestinian state on that land, forever off limits to Jews.

That issue is one of those to be discussed at a face-to-face conference. Why, then, require that the issue be settled symbolically in advance? The White House answer is that settlements "inflame passions" and such a concession is needed for the Arabs to come at all.

But Tom Friedman of The New York Times, who is far more evenhanded than me, reports this fact: "In the last three months of diplomacy, Secretary of State Baker managed to talk the Arab states out of making a freeze on Israeli settlement building activity a precondition for their participation in the proposed peace conference, but he was not able to talk Mr. Bush out of it, officials said."

Can you believe it? George Bush's position on settlements is more pro-Arab than the Arab position. Assad of Syria was ready to meet Shamir of Israel without a settlement surrender in advance, but America's George Bush was not.

I am not among Secretary Baker's acolytes, but even he deserves some sympathy as he must be coming to the conclusion that there is no greater obstacle to peace in the Middle East than George Bush's obsession with forcing Israel out of the West Bank.

Decent people can disagree about the West Bank, but humanitarian aid delayed is aid denied.

God topples trees just to start arguments

The first question people ask after a hurricane is, "If a tree falls in your back yard and it doesn't make a sound, who is responsible for cutting it up?"

Ever since Hurricane Bob hit Martha's Vineyard this question has been debated from one end of the island to the other. I was in Shirley's Hardware Store trying to return batteries that I had been hoarding during the storm when I saw Thompson confront Bigalow. "When are you going to get your bloody oak tree out of my back yard?" he demanded.

Buchwald

Bigalow responded, "It is no longer my oak tree. It's your oak tree. As soon as it fell over I stopped worrying about it. Besides, it was leaning on your property for a long time, so it shouldn't have come as a surprise when it blew over."

Thompson was yelling, "Don't try to get out of it. The law specifically states that the person who owns a tree is responsible for the violence committed by the tree branches and even its sap. If that tree had hurt anyone when it fell in my yard, you would have gotten 20 years in maximum security."

"That's where you're wrong. If the tree fell on your house I could have collected insurance for it, and so could you. The fact that it hit nothing is why we are arguing. Here's what I'm prepared to do. I'll split the cost of the chop with you. I'll pay for half and you pay for the other half, and we'll divvy up any money we get for firewood."

Thompson was fuming. "Why should I pay to get rid of your tree?"

"Because if you don't, it will stay there and really start to smell."

Thompson said, "Do you remember when your cherry tree fell on my rose garden five years ago?"

"Do I?" said Bigalow. "My wife cried over the tree for a week."

"Well, I cut it up and cleared it away at my own expense, and you didn't even say thank you."

"You did it because you had to. Your dogs were always doing things against the tree and they loosened the roots."

"Do you really believe that?"

"Cherry trees don't take a dive for nothing. You're not going to use that tree as an excuse for not cutting up my oak," Bigalow said. "I don't know if you're a religious man or not, Thompson, but when the oak tree keeled over it was an Act of God."

Thompson asked, "How do you know that it was an Act of God?"

Bigalow replied, "Because Prudential says it was. They say that only God can heave over a tree, and they don't pay for what He does when He's mad. Thompson, there is nothing I can do for you. But I know one thing, while you're standing there the trunk is filling up with worms and termites, and someday you'll have nobody but yourself to blame if your house falls down."

Thompson yelled, "I'm taking you to court, Bigalow."

"It won't do you any good. The judge has enough tree cases to last him until the year 2000. The best thing now is for you to buy a good chain saw from Shirley's, but whatever you do don't use it while I'm taking a nap. I hate the sound of chain saws in the afternoon."

If we hadn't all been there to stop Thompson, he would have strangled Bigalow.

Bigalow said to us, "That oak gave Thompson a lot of shade when it was standing up. He used to tell me what a wonderful tree it was. Now that it is lying on his lawn, he hates it. People sure are fickle when a tree is down and out."

Soviets hint at deal for Kurile islands

MOSCOW (NYT) — A leading minister in the new transitional Soviet government has endorsed Japan's claim to several Soviet-held islands in the Kurile chain, heightening speculation that a deal might be possible in return for Japanse economic aid.

Grigory A. Yavlinsky, vice chairman of the Soviet State Council's economic management committee, said the islands, seized by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II, seemed to properly belong to Japan under the terms of a treaty signed in 1855.

"By observing this treaty we will get rid of yet another legacy of our totalitarian past," Yavlinsky said in a written reply to questions on the issue from the Japanese news agency Kyodo.

His was the first contradiction of the official Soviet position to be heard from a Kremlin official. But Yavlinsky, one of the interim government's leaders in the task of planning the transition to a market economy, is not a foreign policy expert, and one of his aides stressed that Yavlinsky was basically speaking for himself.

Boris N. Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic, was quoted by the Interfax news agency as saying as recently as Saturday that the islands were not a subject for bargaining.

Yavlinsky's remarks were noteworthy, nevertheless, because the new transitional government is such a new and unknown quantity and there is no clear indication from whom its major initiatives will come.

Disputed Islands

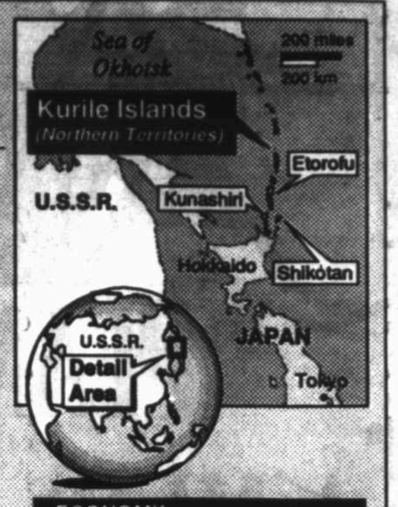
Here are some facts on the islands coveted by Japan and the Soviet Union:

PEOPLE

About 50,000 Soviets live on the islands. Half or more of them are military personnel. No Japanese live there.

HISTORY

Japanese fishermen inhabited the islands in the late 19th century. Soviet forces seized them two weeks after World War II, driving off about 16,000 Japanese, and the islands were given to the Soviet Union at Yalta in 1945. The Japanese and Soviets never have signed a peace treaty. In a joint declaration in 1956 that formally ended hostilities, the Soviet Union agreed to return the smallest territories— the Habomai islet group and Shikotan Island— when a peace treaty was completed. The Soviets later abandoned the agreement.



ECONOMY

Waters around the islands abound in salmon, crab and trout, and are considered one of the world's best fishing grounds. The Soviets accuse Japanese fishing vessels of stealing 10,000 tons of fish a year. On land are sulfur deposits, mineral springs and some gold and silver. The islands remain largely undeveloped.

AP/Martha P. Hernandez

In his comments. Yavlisnky clearly was indicating his view that the Kurile issue should be jogged from the usual chauvinism that it stirs domestically and should be used to improve relations with Japan.

Yavlinsky made no mention of any request for Japanese aid for the badly debilitated Soviet economy.

But a current visit to Tokyo by diplomats from the Russian republic has raised speculation that Yeltsin might be seeking large-scale Japanese aid in return for the disputed islands, which lie northeast of Japan's northern island of Hokkaido. Monday, Secretary of State James A. Baker III advised Moscow to return the territories to Japan.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a visit to Tokyo in April, firmly resisted Japanese claims to the islands and found his request for economic aid rebuffed in undiplomatic, almost angry terms by Japanese business and Government officials.

As speculation about the fate of the islands grew, statements of dedication to hang on to them increased in some political circles here.

Georgi Kunadze, deputy foreign minister of the Russian republic, was quoted Tuesday by the Soviet press agency Tass as emphasizing in Tokyo that Russia had no intention of treating the island issue as part of combined negotiation for economic aid. He described such a tactic as "immoral," Tass said, and grounds for the "downfall" of any Russian government that might attempt it.

Yeltsin has sent a letter to the Japanese government, and while its contents have not been disclosed, speculation about an islands-for-aid deal is rampant in Tokyo.

The islands — known in Japanese as Etorofu, Kunashiri, Shikotan and the Habomai group — were populated by Soviet settlers after the war, with many Japanese natives emigrating rather than live under occupation.

Other Japanese were forced to leave.

Georgians construct barricades outside the opposition party headquarters as tensions rise in the republic.

Georgians protect opposition offices

MOSCOW (AP) — Demonstrators protesting the rule of Georgian President Zviad Gamsakhurdia built metal and stone barricades Tuesday around the headquarters of an opposition party as tensions grew in the southern republic.

Thousands of people in Tbilisi, the Goergian capital, massed in the street in front of the barricaded National Independence Party. Meanwhile, counterdemonstrators staged their own rally in front of Georgia's parliament, according to news reports and independent journalists.

The anti-Gamsakhurdia demonstrators feared an attack on the headquarters of the party whose leader, Irakli Tsereteli, has harshly criticized the Georgian president.

They fashioned a crude barricade of large stone blocks and scrap metal around the building on Rustaveli Prospekt, witnesses said by telephone. No attack came by nightfall.

"It is an extreme form of protest which we are using today, but it is the only way to prove to the people that a dictator has come to power," Tsereteli said in an interview Tuesday with the government newspaper Izvestia.

Gamsakhurdia, a strong Georgian nationalist who was overwhelmingly elected president in May, has become the focus of anti-government rallies this month by protesters who denounce him as a dictator.

His government has been accused of human rights abuses and oppression of minority groups in Georgia, especially in the wake of diminished Kremlin authority following last month's failed coup.

Soviet television reported Tuesday night that Gamsakhurdia has banned its reports and those of Russian television from Georgian airwaves.

Soviet TV said the Georgian authorities were using "old, well-tested methods" of winning support in the republic by filling grocery stores with supplies of scarce meat and butter.

Tension has been running high in Tbilisi since Sept. 2, when Georgian troops opened fire on anti-Gamsakhurdia demonstrators, wounding five people.

Baker sets conditions needed for U.S. aid

MOSCOW (HNS) — Signaling a softening in U.S. conditions for Soviet aid, Secretary of State James A. Baker III indicated Tuesday that a Soviet commitment to an economic reform plan could lead to direct U.S. assistance.

Previously, the Bush administration has tied direct Soviet aid to actual implementation of free-market reforms.

"What needs to be done is to make sure that they understand what we think is required," Baker said of direct aid to the Soviets. "And if they can take those steps, we will be there. They don't have to take the steps first, but commit to taking the steps."

The secretary of state spoke to reporters aboard his plane shortly before arriving in Moscow for his first Soviet visit since last month's failed coup.

During his five-day visit to the rapidly crumbling Soviet Union, Baker will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian Republic President Boris Yeltsin.

Baker will also introduce himself to leaders appointed since the coup, such as Foreign Minister Boris Pankin and KGB Chief Vadim Bakatin. He will visit Leningrad, the newly independent Baltic states and the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan.

"We'll be seeing a much wider and broader range of officials than we usually have," Baker said. "This will provide us with a good sense of the different kind of center that has developed, is developing, and what it may become."

Baker declined to say how much U.S. aid may be given to the new Soviet leadership.

"If they are prepared to commit to taking the actions that are required ... we will join with others in assisting the transformation," Baker said. "But if you are asking me, am I coming over here and saying, 'If you do X, you will have X millions of dollars' — that is not the way it is going to work."

American academics and Democratic members of Congress have proposed an assortment of financial aid plans for the Soviets.

Women's rights group denounces Tyson

NEW YORK (AP) — Women's rights advocates denounced boxer Mike Tyson on Tuesday for going forward with a title bout despite being indicted on rape charges, saying it sends out a tacit message that sexual assault is acceptable.

"What's most disturbing to me is that men like Mike Tyson are seen as heroes by so many young men," said Melanie Baham, president of the New York chapter of the National Organization for Women.

"These athletes, making so much money, are hero-worshipped. You can't keep the man from working ... but really, what kind of an example is Mike Tyson?"

The former heavyweight champion is a troubled example, facing one count of rape, two counts of criminal deviate conduct and one count of confinement for allegedly attacking a beauty pageant contestant July 19 in Indianapolis.

He's also a wealthy example, destined to become wealthier. Tyson is guaranteed $15 million for his Nov. 8 fight with champion Evander Holyfield. Most agree the fight will come off in spite of the rape charge, although the effect of the indictment on pay-per-view sales remains to be seen.

Tyson, who is due in Indiana later this week to post $30,000 bond, would face up to 63 years in prison if convicted. Through his lawyer and a spokesman, he has asserted his innocence.

Tyson is scheduled to appear Wednesday in Marion Superior Court in Indianapolis, prosecutor Jeffrey Modisett said Tuesday.

Tyson's denials are unlikely to put off protests against the Las Vegas showdown. Lisa Sliwa, who led demonstrations outside NBC-TV after it identified the woman who claims she was raped by William Kennedy Smith, said protests would be held in New York.

Sliwa, a New York radio show host and a leader of the Guardian Angels, said she was outraged by Tyson's decision to step into the ring with an indictment hanging over his head.

"I think it sends a terrible message to young men: It's OK to rape women," Sliwa said. "Tyson is held up as a hero, and this sends the idea that you can abuse a female and be able to get away with it."

NOW's Baham said the New York chapter wasn't sure what it would do yet; in Las Vegas, Nevada state NOW president Naomi Millisor said her feeling was a protest was premature.

"I think it's inappropriate to do it at this time, because he's still indicted, not convicted," Millisor said. "With all the violence and rape and battering of women, it's important these celebrity things do come out, but he's still not convicted."

One potential target for a boycott would be the pay-per-view sales, which are projected to smash the $55 million record set by the Holyfield-George Foreman fight.

Ross Levinson, a spokesman for the fight's pay-per-view outlet, TVKO, said her organization had not received any protest threats.

Evidence of Tyson's hero status was readily available within hours of the rape indictment.

"It was obvious in the way the media played it," said Judith Condo, the head of Albany County Rape Crisis in upstate New York. Tyson started his boxing career in the area.

"It was a lot of 'He's not that kind of guy,' little kids being asked, 'Who is he?' and saying, 'He's my hero,'" Condo said.

MISD trustees OK 44.5-cent tax rate

■ Of that 44.5 cents, 10.5 cents to be used for retiring debts and 34 cents to be used to pay current general expenses.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Estimating a $1 million cutback in state funding this year, Midland school board trustees approved a 44.5-cent tax rate Tuesday night.

Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland public schools, encouraged board members to adopt the rate at a previous board meeting. "I can look taxpayers in the eye, and I hope you can," he said.

Baressi noted that the tax was prudent in the wake of proration cuts and the uncertainty of state funding in Austin.

Last year, expecting a $440,000 cut in state funding, the district actually experienced a $1.1 million loss, forcing use of reserve monies to fund operations.

This year the district's budget totals more than $83.8 million — a $7.6 million increase from last year.

The additional expenditures will cover $5.2 million in payroll costs for new personnel and salary increases, and $1.4 million for construction and renovation costs. The remainder will cover contract services, supplies, materials and miscellaneous expenses.

Revenues to balance the budget will come from the newly formed Andrews-Midland County Education District (CED) — $33 million or 39.3 percent; state aid — $28 million or 33.5 percent; local funds — $18.6 million or 22 percent; and federal sources, $4.2 million or 5 percent.

The tax levy of 44.5 cents on the $100 valuation of all taxable property in the district includes 10.5 cents allocated for payment to interest and principal on outstanding debts. The remaining 34 cents will be allocated to pay current general expenses.

CED board trustees recently passed a 77.5-cent tax rate per $100 property valuation.

Midland homeowners will pay a total of $1.22, compared to $1.10 last year.

Homeowners will benefit, however, from more exemptions provided by the new taxation system.

For MISD-direct revenue, taxpayers can receive a flat $5,000 state homestead exemption and a 10 percent MISD exemption of the market value of the property.

A home with a $55,000 market value, for example, will have a taxable value of $44,500 after the two exemptions.

For revenue collected through the CED, taxpayers will be entitled to a flat $5,000 state exemption and a 20 percent CED exemption. A home with a $55,000 market value will then have a $39,000 taxable value.

Homeowners over 65 will receive additional exemptions. As a result, school taxes paid by senior citizens will decrease.

School board trustees also approved a plan which will allow the school district to offer services to the local CED.

Under the proposal Midland Independent School District will provide administrative services to the CED.

MISD will perform services from preparing, distributing and posting agendas for CED meetings to establishing and maintaining a bank account for the new taxing entity.

The CED will reimburse MISD for the costs of performing the services, and either entity can terminate the contract.

Twin sisters scholarship semi-finalists

■ LHS seniors are among Midland's six semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Staff Report

Twin sisters in Midland proved that talent is their middle — or, rather — their last name when it comes to academic achievement.

Teresa and Jerri Talent, identical twin sisters, each were recently named semifinalists in the 1992 National Merit Scholarship competition.

The Talent sisters were two of six Midland semifinalists.

"I am about six feet off the ground," said Donna Talent, mother of the twins. She said Teresa is a senior at Lee High School and Jerri is attending her senior year in Germany as an exchange student.

"Jerri will still come back and get her diploma from Lee High School," Ms. Talent said.

Four other Midland students also made the grade as national semifinalists.

The competition honors students who show exceptional potential for academic success in college, according to the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

Semifinalists will compete for finalist status, an achievement which will make them eligible for scholarships and bring their names to the attention of colleges and universities nationwide.

Lee High School boasts four semifinalists — the Talents, Marc Bruner and Sanjay Patel. Midland High School and Trinity School each had one semifinalist — Krista Stanton at MHS and Stefan Durham at Trinity.

Last year LHS had six, MHS had three and Trinity had two semifinalists.

Although Midland had only six semifinalists, compared to 11 last year, the Tall City rated a high percentage of semifinalists per capita.

Midland rated more semifinalists than districts of similar size and even those of substantially larger population.

In fact, Tamara Cagle and Angela Skaggs of Permian High School were the only semifinalists named in Odessa. San Angelo had three semifinalists, Abilene had one and Amarillo had six.

Floyd James, spokesperson for Trinity School, noted that the school graduated its first senior class last June. "Of the 13 students who have composed the school's two senior classes, three have been named as Merit Scholarship competition semifinalists," he said.

About 15,000 students nationwide were named semifinalists. Approximately 90 percent — or 14,000 of the semifinalists — will be named finalists.

To continue on in the competition, semifinalists must submit

Piles of illegally dumped trash like this on Fairgrounds Road, and the litterers responsible for them are the targets of litter constable Scott Welch, whose job is under examination in the county's budgeting process.

Litter constable wants to keep job

■ While the position of litter control officer will be retained, who it will be and how it will be funded are still uncertain.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Illegal dumping and littering keep Scott Welch prowling city streets, alleys and vacant lots and traveling country roads into pastures and oil-field leases ferreting out litterbugs.

"It's a blast," said Welch, the 37-year-old Midland County deputy sheriff, former Midland County commissioner and jailer who seeks out illegal dumping and perpetrators of the misdemeanor offense.

What has become a blast to Welch started out in January as an experiment proposed by Keep Midland Beautiful, to generate concerted efforts to clean up Midland and environs.

It's working, but slowly, he said, at a pace suggestive of a farmer using one mule to plow up 939 sections of weeds. As soon as one acre is plowed up, weeds start cropping up again.

Welch took the job in hopes that, after the experiment is completed at the end of this month, the litter constable position would be re-funded and that he would be reappointed to the position with a $23,484 annual salary.

The position seems certain to be funded again but in a possibly different manner.

And there are doubts on who will be the 1992 litter officer: Welch or Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little.

"We hope that there is an officer who will take care of the problem of illegal dumping," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful. "We will support him in anyway we can. We will support the city and the county in any way to address the problem of illegal dumping. It's not going to go away."

Ms. Hotchkiss and Joel Ford, board chairman of Keep Midland Beautiful, were aware of that when the experimental litter-abatement program got under way last January.

The nine-month, $25,850 program was funded by $17,500 in donations from the Abell-Hanger Foundation and other private sources and by $4,175 each from county and city government.

The private monies are not being renewed.

The $35,000 to fund the program for the 1992 fiscal year is to be provided by Midland County and the city of Midland along a 75-25 split, because most of the officer's time is to be spent in the county. The county is to provide $26,250 and the city's share is to be $8,750.

The proposed split came about after Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer suggested that one person ought to be considered for four assignments.

Under Seltzer's proposal the litter constable also would be responsible for fire marshal, emergency planning, and health-safety environmental duties in the county.

Commissioner Guy McCrary opposes the judge's proposal, saying one person "cannot perform all of those functions effectively."

Meanwhile, the five-member Commissioners' Court is to decide who does what and where the money will come from before the 1992 county budget is activated on Oct. 1.

Welch wants to stay on the payroll and has no desire to return to the confinement of jail-keeping. Raised around cattle ranching and riding horses, he worked with his late father, Charlie Welch, a county commissioner before him, in the water-well drilling business.

KMB receives grants for tree plantings

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Keep Midland Beautiful is branching out with projects for improving the city's appearance.

The organization has just been approved for almost $30,000 in grants for planting trees. Beneficiaries of the saplings are to be Bluebird Park, Lamesa Road and the Confederate Air Force museum grounds.

"We're very excited about this," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful. "Trees are such an environmentally correct thing to do. They help with (eliminating) the carbon dioxide cars emit. They filter out other harmful elements in the air. They are just very nearly perfect."

A $10,000 grant from the Small Business Association will be matched by the Abell-Hanger Foundation, for a total of $20,000 to be spent on tree plantings at Bluebird Park.

Hotchkiss said winning the competitive grant will allow KMB to provide numerous shade trees for the park, as well as complete an irrigation system to keep them healthy. They are planned for planting near Bluebird's otherwise sparse parking area.

UT medical school featured in AMA's journal

GALVESTON (AP) — The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston is the lone subject of the latest issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. It marks only the second time in its 100-year history that the world's most widely read journal is devoted to a single medical school.

"We're just delighted," Dr. George T. Bryan, dean of medicine at the school said Tuesday. "I would anticipate the faculty are very proud of the accomplishments of their colleagues in putting together a set of articles for this."

The school, founded at Galveston when the southeast Texas coastal city was the state's richest and most sophisticated community, is celebrating its centennial this year.

"As medical schools go in this country, that is quite a long time," Dr. George Lundberg, editor of the Journal, said. "They're in very elite company."

Only once before, when Johns Hopkins University Medical School marked its 100th anniversary in 1989, did the journal devote an entire issue of the weekly publication to a medical school.

"UTMB has a tremendous longterm reputation as a great school particularly in terms of education, where it has placed graduates virtually everywhere in this country and many other countries," Lundberg said. "It was THE medical school in Texas for a very long time. You will find UTMB medical graduates at the top of the heap everywhere you look.

"From an education standpoint, it has an outstanding reputation, very long lived and well deserved."

A statewide referendum in 1881 designated the University of Texas medical school would be separate from the rest of the university. Ten years later, it was founded in Galveston, where researchers hoped to find a cure for continuing fatal outbreaks of yellow fever.

"I think the founding fathers would not be surprised that we're still around," Bryan said. "But I think to look around the campus at 64 acres, 70-some buildings and 8,000-plus employees — they would have no ability to imagine that.

"Even people who were around the institution 20 years ago and come back find it hard to believe the growth and activity and development that's taken place in the last couple of decades."

The Journal highlights a UTMB program known as the decedent affairs office, which since 1984 has helped families of deceased patients get information about autopsies and organ donations. As a result, skin and organ donations have increased and its eye bank is among the largest in the state.

Another article presents the case of a 4-year-old boy who died last summer from a jellyfish sting off the coast of Galveston.

A third Journal piece examines a UTMB program in place since the 1970s in which people are trained to act out illnesses or medical conditions so medical students can develop examining and diagnostic skills.

The school has about 700 faculty and nearly 2,400 medical and nursing students. It is known worldwide as a burn treatment center, as well as for studies in gastrointestinal physiology, psychiatry and for work in problems with children.

The AMA Journal circulates some 350,000 copies in 132 countries. It also has 15 international editions in nine languages.

Lundberg points out that the establishment of John Sealy Hospital as the medical school's hospital was particularly noteworthy, since the hospital promised to treat anyone, regardless of their ability to pay.

"Providing care for the poor has been a proud and historic tradition of this institution, and moreover, offers an abundant and vital opportunity for the teaching of medicine, an equally important tradition here," Dr. Thomas N. James, president of the school, said in an editorial he wrote for this week's Journal.

"At UTMB we share the national apprehension about the future of medical care in the United States. Those laboring over how to cut costs must not be blind to the fact that everyone is entitled to some level of health care."

"UTMB stands out as a beacon as a school which has never turned its back on the poor and, as such, has much to be modeled after," Lundberg added.

Group hopes to block James Russell's execution

HOUSTON (AP) — Members of a community group who succeeded two years ago in getting death row inmate Clarence Brandley out of prison said Tuesday they were working to block next week's scheduled execution of James "Sugarman" Russell for a 1974 killing in Fort Bend County.

"The state's evidence linking Russell to the abduction and murder, as in the case of Clarence Brandley, was wholly circumstantial and came exclusively from non-credible witnesses, who perjured themselves on the witness stand," said Jew Don Boney, chairman of the Houston Chapter of the Black United Front. "Let's not have innocent blood on the state's hands."

Russell, 42, is among the most senior of the more than 300 inmates on death row in Texas.

The two-time convict from Sugar Land was convicted in 1977 of abducting and shooting Thomas Stearns, 24, of Houston, three years earlier.

Stearns was slain the day before Russell was about to go on trial for a robbery at a Radio Shack store where Stearns was the manager. Stearns, whose identification of Russell had led to the ex-convict's arrest, was abducted, sexually abused and then shot twice point-blank in the head.

"This is one of the coldest murders I've ever seen," says Bob Walt, the assistant attorney general in charge of capital case litigation.

Russell is scheduled to die by lethal injection Sept. 19.

"We're not going to stop here," Lucille Johnson, who was identified as the mother of Russell's daughter, said at a news conference at a Houston church. "It's just beginning. I'm very mad. I'm very mad because this thing has gone this far. It needs to stop and stop now."

Attorneys from the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, who recently took over Russell's case, on Tuesday filed a 77-page petition with district court in Fort Bend County and with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The petition challenges the credibility of witnesses at Russell's trial, complains that black jurors were improperly dismissed at the trial where the defendant was black and the victim was white, and contends Russell's legal assistance was inadequate.

"We believe we are on very strong footing," attorney George Kendall said. "But if you're asking me to look into a crystal ball and predict what the court's going to do, I don't know. We can only hope that if they see it half our way, he should get a stay."

TREES: KMB receives grants

(From 1B)

Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services, said the trees will help the city with its long-range plans for the park.

"This takes care of about two-thirds to one-half of our total costs for landscaping out there," he said. "It's a great help."

The agency has been pre-approved for two grants from America the Beautiful, a national foundation for funding tree plantings. Both awards require final approval from the organization and have to be matched by private donations and volunteer services.

Along Lamesa Road near the intersection of Highway 80, $6,500 will be available for beautification with trees.

Hotchkiss said live oaks will be planted on both sides of the road along the median, following a plan by the Eastside Economic Development Task Force.

At the Confederate Air Force headquarters and museum, $3,384 will be used for planting of trees and plants, including Chinese Pistache, Yaupon and various pines.

"I'm really hoping we're going to get these out there in time for the grand opening," Hotchkiss said.

America the Beautiful also awarded the local agency $1,000 for production of educational brochures about tree planting.

"This is going to be an opportunity for us to get the nurserymen together and develop the brochure for the people of Midland, about what they can do planting trees here," Hotchkiss said.

Hotchkiss said Midland's own Johnny Appleseed, Ed Vogler, best described the benefit of trees when speaking to a group of schoolchildren recently.

"He told them to be like trees — to give more to the Earth than they take from it," Hotchkiss said. "That's what trees do. They provide shade, welcome you. Seeing them is uplifting."

Joel Ford, president of Keep Midland Beautiful, said he's thankful KMB can accomplish things "and spread them around."

"We're working on the east side, the north, all over," Ford said. "And when they get that big east-side park going, we hope to do something over there."

LITTER: Welch wants to keep job

(From 1B)

Little, who wants to continue his now-volunteer job as the county's fire marshal, is the operations supervisor of a Midland seismographic company and is son of the late Midland fire chief, Melvin Little.

Assistant chief of the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department, Little is trained in environmental safety areas, but he is not a certified Texas peace officer though he intends to be.

Welch is already certified by the state.

The litter officer, who may be deputized by Sheriff Gary Painter, must be a certified lawman.

Ms. Hotchkiss said "the county threw a problem in there," with the four-in-one proposal.

"The time spent on litter control would be lessened," she said. "I saw that as being a problem."

Another problem has been the funding. By design, the litter-abatement program was to be self-sustaining through fines, which, in almost nine months, have generated less than $1,000, noted Commissioner Durward Wright.

While the city and the county are under tight budget restraints, the anti-litter program is "really a community project," said Ms. Hotchkiss.

"We are addressing a problem that isn't going to go away."

Ford said the city of Midland was "generous in picking up a quarter" of the proposed program's expenses in the 1992 fiscal year.

"We wanted this thing to be more self-sustaining (through litter fines) than it turned out to be," said the KMB board chairman.

In his work, Welch may give a litterbug a choice of cleaning up his mess or paying a fine. He may seek both.

The penalty for simple littering may be as high as $500 per offense. The penalty for illegal dumping from a vehicle, such as a pickup truck or a dump truck, may be up to $2,000. But Midland County's justices of the peace never have imposed the maximum fines, Welch said.

While Midland city and county officials are supportive, Ford said, "reality sets in. The city and county only have so much money to go around."

In his role, Welch has "made some inroads" into the litter problem, Ford said. "Just like any program, it takes awhile. I think overall, he has done a pretty good job, and his heart is in it. We hope it continues."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Fatal accident

Staff Reports

A 43-year-old Midland man was killed after the truck he was driving turned over and caught fire eight miles west of Ackerly in Martin County on Tuesday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Thomas Dwain Massingill was pronounced dead at the scene about 1:48 p.m by Martin County Justice of the Peace Shirley Scoggins.

Massingill was driving a 1989 Western Star truck tractor and semi-trailer west on Farm to Market Road 2002 when the accident occurred, DPS officials said.

Reports stated that Massingill entered a curve to the left at an unsafe speed, applied the brakes and skidded about 450 feet off the north side of the road. The truck overturned and caught fire, trapping Massingill in the vehicle.

Drug charge

A 43-year-old Odessa man remained jailed Tuesday following his arrest for delivery of two ounces of heroin, according to U.S. Marshal's Service officials.

Reynaldo Oscar Levario was arrested Tuesday as a result of information furnished by Crime Stoppers to the Odessa Police Department.

Levario was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes on Tuesday and a detention hearing was scheduled for Friday.

Bicyclist injured

ODESSA — A 69-year-old bicyclist broke his pelvis and right leg after he failed to yield right of way at a stop sign and collided with a pickup truck Tuesday morning, police said.

Willard B. Mims of Odessa was injured at the intersection of West County Road and 15th Street, police said.

Mims was towing a small homemade trailer behind his bicycle east on West 15th Street when he failed to stop at the intersection of West County Road. He ran into the right front portion of a 1990 Chevrolet 3500 pickup driven by Arturo B. Melendez, 23, of Odessa.

Alleged assault

ODESSA — Police are investigating a sexual assault reported Tuesday that allegedly occurred on Sept. 2, officials said.

A woman, no age available, told police an acquaintance came to her north central home and asked to talk. The two went into a bedroom, where the man shut the door, pushed the woman on the bed and assaulted her.

The assailant was described as a white man, 22 years old.

Injury settlement reaches $3.9 million

Staff Report

ODESSA — A portion of a civil lawsuit that involved the injury of a 3-year-old boy who fell into an apartment swimming pool in May 1988 was settled for $1.4 million Monday bringing the total out-of-court settlement to $3.9 million, the largest such verdict in Ector County, according to attorneys in the case.

The settlement went to Christina Nease of Odessa for injuries suffered by her son, Christopher Lawrence, who fell into the pool at Oakwood Manor Apartments in Northeast Odessa.

The youngster, who remains in a chronic vegetative state, has incurred medical bills of more than $350,000 to date.

Defendant in the most recent settlement was Briercroft Savings Association, owner of the apartment complex.

A previous suit against First Interstate Management Corp. of Amarillo settled for $2.5 million.

Abner Burnett of Burnett & Burnett Inc. represented the boy and his mother.

DISD superintendent has plan to rehire teachers

■ Official proposes raising tax rate from 17.5 to 18 percent in order to be able bring back all 270 laid-off teachers.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Marvin Edwards called late Tuesday night for a tax increase to hire back all 270 teachers who had been laid off last month.

The layoffs touched off a firestorm of controversy, capped by a student walkout that numbered in the thousands.

The school board was considering the plan late Tuesday and scheduled a vote later in the night.

Edwards' plan calls for an increase in the property tax rate to 18 percent from a 17.5 percent rate already approved.

In addition to higher taxes, the plan would eliminate 11 non-teaching positions, including several administrative jobs.

A state district judge last week declined to issue a restraining order requested by the teachers' union and other groups. But Judge Frank Edwards said the layoffs would not be effective until after trustees met to review the budget and, if necessary, ratify the job cuts.

The teachers, if the school board approves the plan, would return to school immediately.

Edwards has been meeting with staff members since he announced the creation of a plan Saturday. Larry Ascough, a DISD spokesman, did not immediately return a telephone call Tuesday from The Associated Press.

"I don't think there is anything, anywhere, that can make everybody happy," Edwards said Monday. "We're just trying to solve the immediate problem."

Bob Baker, president of Classroom Teachers of Dallas, said trustees could decide to raise property taxes by 19.5 percent, rather than the 17.5 percent tentatively approved last month, to make up for a $47 million shortfall in state aid.

But five DISD trustees, including president Rene Castilla, remained opposed to increasing taxes. Cutting administrative costs was another proposal.

A third possibility mentioned, Baker said, is refinancing a 1985 district bond issue that could free up $275 million in funds for operating expenses. The unencumbered operating funds could then go for teacher salaries.

Ollie Besteiro, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, warned Monday that the National Education Association would discourage its members from working for Dallas schools if the problem wasn't solved.

"If all teachers aren't hired back, we will ask the NEA to put sanctions on the DISD," Ms. Besteiro told teachers during informational picketing Monday outside district headquarters.

"I'm not worried about that," Castilla said of the warning. "This isn't going to last forever. We're going to get it resolved."

About 300 teachers gathered at the district's headquarters near downtown Sunday night for a candlelight vigil. About 100 took a day off on Monday to picket the school district headquarters.

Organizers had expected larger crowds, but Baker said most teachers had decided to do their demonstrating at the board meeting.

Several hundred people, including teachers, students and parents, converged on the district's headquarters to hear what Edwards had to propose. The police increase security.

Over the weekend, teachers produced fliers, made telephone calls and cajoled supporters to guarantee a large turnout at the board meeting.

Trini Garza, a board member who is opposed to increasing taxes further, said Friday he was "not yet convinced that we need to raise taxes to rehire teachers," adding, "I will wait for a report from the administration on how we will deal with the remaining teachers that have been laid off."

The New York Times contributed to this report.

The State

Document signed by William Travis found at failed thrift

The historic paper, which had been taken from the Texas State Library and Archives Commission during a rash of thefts in the 1960s, was found this year hanging on the wall of failed San Antonio savings and loan, officials said.

The document was dated Feb. 19, 1836, five days before Travis led 186 soldiers in defending the Alamo against thousands of Mexican troops.

After a 13-day siege, Travis, 27, and all his forces had been killed.

Officials from the Resolution Trust Corp. found the framed paper in the Travis Federal Savings and Loan Association. The RTC, which handles assets from failed savings and loans, closed the thrift June 21.

RTC officials said the document had been purchased by the thrift several years ago, but that they did not know which individual purchased it and whether they knew it had been stolen.

"We're never quite sure what we might run into," said Carmen Sullivan, southwest regional director of the RTC.

"We are pleased to be able to return the Travis document to its rightful owner," she said.

William Gooch, director and librarian of the Texas State Library and Archives Commission, said the document is in excellent condition, and "irreplaceable."

The paper verifies the sale of 65 head of cattle to the Texas provisional government for $780 from Felipe Xaimes.

Travis' signature alone makes the paper worth several thousand dollars, said Chris LaPlante, director of the archives division, But, he added, it is difficult to put a price on the document.

"This is not an overwhelmingly significant document in terms of content, but it is a very fine Travis signature," LaPlante said.

"It also attests to the participation of the Mexican citizenry at that point in revolutionary activities," he said.

"Xaimes was a citizen of San Antonio, or Bexar, and he was providing goods to the Revolutionary army, one of many people ... a number of other Mexican citizens who actually were involved in the cause," he said.

LaPlante said the state library is in the process of putting together an inventory of other documents believed to have been stolen during the 1960s.

RTC officials also announced that they found another historic document at the failed savings and loan — a paper signed by Texas Republic President Sam Houston. Ms. Sullivan said that document will be donated next week to the Alamo Committee of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

Number of users down, says drug policy director

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal drug policy director Bob Martinez said Tuesday the number of drug users nationwide is decreasing, but additional budget money is needed for treatment programs.

"We still have 12.9 million Americans who use drugs, which is way too many, and we still have some hard-core addicts numbering about 5.7 million that we need to get into treatment," Martinez said. "We still have a lot of work to be done."

Martinez, the former Florida governor who succeeded William Bennett in the federal post earlier this year, addressed a U.S. Marshal's Service conference before visiting youths in drug treatment programs.

President Bush is seeking an additional $100 million for treatment programs, which Martinez said he wants pumped into "capacity expansion programs."

Martinez said federal money should be allocated where addicts are rather than by population formulas. Treatment programs are operating only at an 82 percent capacity, he said.

After speaking to the marshals, Martinez went on to visit San Antonio treatment programs and elementary school children. Martinez said he is observing treatment programs across the country and comparing the differences.

For instance, he said, treatment centers in non-Hispanic areas tend to stand alone, while those in Hispanic neighborhoods — like the Mexican American Unity Council that Martinez visited in San Antonio — often are connected to other programs.

In his speech to the U.S. Marshals, Martinez said the number of American drug users declined from 23 million in 1985 to 12.9 million in 1990.

A Bush administration goal of reducing drug use by 10 percent from 1988 to 1990 was achieved and exceeded, he said, citing an 11 percent reduction in use during that period.

Opening lead: Four of ◇

There are hands where you can derive a feeling of security from the fact that you are playing rubber bridge, not duplicate. You don't have to worry about the possibility of scoring overtricks and, instead, can concentrate on making your contract. This deal is a case in point.

With 21 high-card points and three tens, South's hand was too strong to open with one of a suit. The choice of two no trump meets with this department's approval, despite the fact that only three suits were stopped. North checked for a 4-4 spade fit via Stayman because of the ruffing value in diamonds, then raised South's spade rebid to game.

Declarer ducked the diamond lead and won the continuation with the ace. After cashing a high trump in hand, declarer crossed to the jack of trumps and tried the heart finesse. When West held up the king, declarer returned to dummy with the ace of clubs to repeat the finesse. This time West took the king and continued the suit, and East's ruff rang down the curtain on a perfectly sound game.

At duplicate the hand might be difficult to play, but a rubber-bridge veteran should handle it with ease. After winning the second trick, declarer must draw only one round of trumps. Even without the warning provided by West's nine, declarer should then abandon trumps and lead the ten of hearts from hand!

If West takes the king, the rest is easy, so let's suppose West holds off. South ruffs a diamond, then continues with ace of hearts and another, and is in complete control. If necessary, South can ruff the fourth heart with the table's jack of trumps, and loses only one trick in each side suit.

Magic will say 'I do', finally

LANSING, Mich. — Will she say "I take you, Earvin" or "I take you, Magic?"

Either way, Detroit native Earletha Kelly and Los Angeles Lakers star Magic Johnson again are planning to wed — this time Saturday in Lansing, Johnson's hometown.

Johnson

The couple, who met while both were students at Michigan State University in 1978 and 1979, have announced their engagement before, but postponed the ceremony. Johnson said they were just delaying the jump into marriage.

The Rev. Melvin Jones, pastor of Union Missionary Baptist Church in Lansing, said Monday he will officiate at a wedding ceremony for the pair on Saturday evening.

The Detroit Free Press on Tuesday also quoted an unidentified relative of Johnson's as saying the two would be married Saturday.

LONDON — A 16th-century, carved oak four-poster bed once owned by Mick Jagger and then by Bill Wyman of the Rolling Stones fetched $24,700 at auction Tuesday.

"I'm just going to enjoy owning it and sleeping on it," said the buyer, Ray Gaffney of London.

Jagger bought the bed in the late 1960s and used it in his country home, Stargrove in Berkshire, where he lived for a time with singer Marianne Faithful.

Wyman, the Stones' bass player, bought the bed from Jagger in the late 1970s, Sotheby's auctioneers said.

Along with the bed, Sotheby's said Gaffney would get a photograph of Wyman sitting on it.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.— Martha Raye may be best known these days as a denture cream saleswoman, but a generation of soldiers knows her as Lt. Col. Martha Raye of the Green Berets. That's right — Martha Raye, war hero.

Raye

That being the case, the Special Forces Association has begun anew its 6-year-old campaign to urge President Bush to give the Medal of Freedom to the actress, who visited Green Beret camps during fighting in Vietnam.

Ms. Raye, 75, was so closely associated with the special forces that she was named an honorary Green Beret lieutenant colonel.

"For 9½ years, the woman did volunteer service work in Vietnam by putting on shows for everyone, but she took up the Green Berets," said James C. Dean, the association's administrator and national secretary.

Gov. Jim Martin and Sen. Jesse Helms have written President Bush in support of the request.

The Special Forces Association has been trying without success since 1985 to get the award for Ms. Raye and is making "one big push" this year, Dean said.

"We're certainly hoping so," he said. "It's way past time."

The new autobiography by Geraldo Rivera, entitled "Exposing Myself," already has people talking about steamy descriptions of sexual liaisons with a variety of women.

But slipped onto page 461 of the 480-page volume is a mention that Rivera, the talk show host and former television reporter, intends to donate all of his profits to a class of students he "adopted" three years ago at the Rafael Cordero Bilingual School, a program at Junior High School 45, at 2351 First Avenue.

Rivera

Inspired by the "Adopt-a-Class" program begun in 1987 by Mayor Edward I. Koch, Rivera adopted an eighth-grade class at the school but soon realized, he said Sunday, that the program did not go far enough.

"I felt that they needed financial help, that if they stuck it out to graduation, I would reward them. So I told them that I would pay for their entire college educations." But even that did not suffice, he said, "to counterbalance the reality in which they live, " so he hired a fulltime counselor for them, regularly invites them to his office, and every six weeks holds a social event for them.

Four students have dropped out of school, one died of cancer and the remaining 23 are now in 11th grade in high schools around the city.

Rivera figures that with 20 of them likely to go on to college at an average cost for all expenses of $30,000 a year, he will have to spend $600,000 a year.

"I have already put $300,000 in the bank, and every penny of profits to me from the book will go to this," he said.

Asked how he reconciled the image he has tried to project as a role model and benefactor for the youths with the book's sexual adventurism, he said, "This is a case of sin paying for virtue."

Bank, utility bail out struggling south Texas city

SAN BENITO (AP) — Defaulted loans, a flood, bills and delinquent taxes put this South Texas city's back to the wall, leaving it struggling to pay off creditors.

But rather than try a trip to bankruptcy court, as some financially strapped cities have done, city officials instead managed to get a loan from the bank, and a hefty advance from the local power company.

The $572,500 bailout did not come without strings, however.

The bank asked the city to cut its budget, and to raise taxes while the power company got an agreement it would serve the city for 11 more years.

The money will go to pay off several creditors, most notably the Cameron County water district, which had threatened to cut off the city's water supply.

San Benito still is facing a $700,000 cut in the new budget, which must be approved by Oct. 1.

"We're scaling back so we can meet this debt and also provide the same level of service," City Manager Richard Hinojosa said.

He said he didn't foresee many dismissals of city employees. "There may be a couple of reductions but we're not going to have a wholesale change," he said.

San Benito, a city of about 26,500 people 16 miles north of Brownsville, has a multi-faceted economy, with manufacturing, agriculture and tourism playing large roles.

Its fiscal problems stem in part from an attempt at economic development that resulted in city commissioners authorizing more than $1.3 million in U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development loans.

In addition, city taxpayers are behind $647,000 in payments and this year's spring rains resulted in a flood that cost $204,000 to clean up.

First National Bank has agreed to loan the city $240,000 to pay off some creditors. The city has to pay back the money by Feb. 15.

Before approving the loan, the bank "wanted to see what our next year's budget was, whether we would be able to pay back the loans, which we'll be able to do," Hinojosa said.

The bank suggested the city adopt a general fund budget with total expenditures not to exceed $2.67 million. The current budget is $3.2 million.

"It's not absolute," Hinojosa said. "They just wanted us to adopt a budget that would take into account the city's ability to pay the loan."

The bank also asked the city to adopt a property tax rate not to exceed an 8 percent increase. Of the resulting 90-cent-per-$100 tax rate, about 28 cents will be channeled into an account to pay off the bank.

The plan is expected to be approved during a special meeting Monday.

The rest of the debt will be paid off with a $332,500 franchise fee advance from Central Power & Light, a creditor which retained about $100,000 of the regular fee to settle the city's account, Hinojosa said.

The utility will not pay the city any franchise fees until the latter part of 1992, said Bret McCants, CPL area manager.

As a condition of the agreement, the utility will also be allowed to extend its franchise agreement by 11 years, he said.

"We've been serving the city for years and we've had good relationship and we wanted to see the city succeed," McCants said. "It's something that was just worked out mutually."

Much of the debt results from good intentions gone bad.

In an effort to bring new jobs to the economically depressed area, the city authorized more than $1.3 million in HUD loans.

But the city was forced to foreclose on Phoenix Semiconductor, leaving it with $525,000 worth of unpaid HUD loans and the $347,327 it borrowed for operating costs.

It also has begun foreclosure on Hydromold Plastics, which defaulted on $820,000 worth of HUD loans and the $193,000 it borrowed for start-up. The city plans to use future Community Development Block Grant funds to pay that debt.

HUD and the FBI are investigating whether there was any misconduct in the way the companies handled the money.

Hinojosa said that other unexpected expenses, particularly the flood, also strained city resources.

BGCT OKs giving Baylor more power

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Deciding to compromise rather than fight, the top policy-making body of Texas Baptists on Tuesday approved a plan that sharply decreases church control over Baylor University — the nation's largest Baptist-supported school.

The executive board of the Baptist General Convention of Texas voted 110-36 to give Baylor the right to elect 18 of its 24 regents. The remaining six would be elected by delegates at annual Texas Baptist conventions. In the past, delegates elected all of Baylor's governing board.

Board members said they hoped the compromise will head off an expected battle at the annual Texas Baptist convention Nov. 10-11 in Waco, where delegates must give final approval.

The Rev. Joel Gregory, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, denounced the compromise.

"I hope thousands of Texas Baptists who are outraged by this action descend on Waco and reverse the board's decision," he said.

But Mike Nichols, vice president for communications at Baylor, said the agreement has broad support and is best for all Texas Baptists.

"There's no reason for anyone to come to the state convention with his hair on fire," Nichols said.

Baylor president Herbert Reynolds said the university wants to remain Baptist, but needs a self-governing system to protect it from a takeover by fundamentalists.

Fundamentalists now control the national Southern Baptist Convention. Moderates control the state Baptist organization, but Reynolds said fundamentalists are gaining strength among Texas Baptists and want to take over Baylor.

The 12,000-student school in Waco has been a frequent target of fundamentalists who accuse Baylor's religion faculty of being too liberal and complain about a Mormon who teaches Spanish at the school.

Under the compromise, leaders recognize Baylor's independence from control of the BGCT — the state organization of Southern Baptists — and the Waco school agrees to change its charter to guarantee it remains "Christian" and true to Baptist principles.

Baylor set off the dispute last September when it secretly changed its charter to declare its independence from majority control of BGCT.

Clinics to shower moms-to-be with gifts

■ Public health clinics, hoping to entice women to receive prenatal care, will give them bags of goodies.

Associated Press

AUSTIN (AP) — Pregnant women who get health clinic checkups will receive a bag of gifts for themselves and their baby under a program announced Tuesday by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

The campaign is aimed at increasing prenatal care and reducing the number of babies born with problems from maternal use of tobacco, drugs and alcohol during pregnancy, TCADA officials said.

"Babies born to mothers who do not receive prenatal care are much more likely to be born prematurely, have low birth weights or other serious health problems," said acting Health Commissioner Dr. Robert MacLean.

"Yet it is a sad fact that about one in three pregnant women in Texas receives inadequate or no prenatal care in this state at this time," he said.

Under the new program, any woman seeking prenatal care at more than 250 public health clinics around the state can receive a canvas tote bag. The bag contains information on prenatal care and items such as cosmetic samples for the mother and bowls, bibs and T-shirts for the baby.

Numerous private companies and organizations have donated gift items and other assistance through the Texas Prevention Partnership, a public-private TCADA initiative.

The Texas Department of Health will distribute the bags to the clinics, MacLean said.

One in six infants in Texas will be born exposed to drugs this year, and as many as 100,000 infants born next year are expected to have been exposed to drugs or alcohol, said TCADA executive director Bob Dickson.

Nearly 11,000 of those babies will be of low birth weight, and their initial hospital costs are expected to approach $400 million, he said.

Enticing women into prenatal care can save the state money by producing healthier babies and reducing medical costs, MacLean said.

"This 'Baby's First Gift' is just a beginning. We do hope that it will bring more women into prenatal care in the first three months of pregnancy," he said.

TCADA plans to distribute 100,000 gift bags in the first year of the two-year project. A two-months' supply already is being shipped to clinics statewide, agency spokesman Bill Britcher said.

The cost of the program to TCADA this year is $498,000, which has been supplemented by $2.2 million in corporate donations, he said.

Gov. Ann Richards endorsed the program in a letter distributed Tuesday. She asked individuals and organizations to donate items to place in the bags.

Recovering addicts, parolees hog-tie suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — A group of recovering alcoholics, crack addicts and prison parolees hog-tied a man they believed stole a $3,000 computer from them.

Joseph Reed, 35, has been charged with burglary in connection with the Sunday night theft.

"When I got there, he was tied up like a suitcase," Houston Patrolman M.D. Egbert said. "I was impressed."

The men of the Enlightened Chapel Ministries Fellowship Home came home from a late night church service to find the computer they had worked weeks to buy had been taken.

"The team really pulled together," Evans said. "They had worked six long weeks in the hot sun washing cars to buy that computer."

The men canvassed the neighborhood, which is home to many prostitutes and drug addicts, and tracked down the man and the computer.

The ministry houses 44 drug addicts, alcoholics, prison parolees and others who want to straighten out their lives with hard work and Bible ethics.

Reed dropped out of the program about a month ago and was known by other residents.

"We're really sending notice to the neighborhood," said ministry administrator Tyrone Evans. "We're really sick and tired of the dope dealers and dope fiends who think they can throw their weight around. They're really weightless because they're mindless."

Dahmer pleads innocent, claims insanity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeffrey L. Dahmer, who admitted to police he killed and dismembered 17 people since 1978, pleaded innocent Tuesday to 15 murder charges and said if convicted he would claim insanity.

The plea means Dahmer would first be tried on charges he committed the crimes. If found guilty, a jury or judge would then determine whether he was insane and could not be held responsible for his acts.

But defense lawyer Gerald P. Boyle said there was "a strong likelihood" Dahmer will change his plea later. He might plead guilty to committing the crimes but ask the court to rule that he couldn't be held responsible because mental disease or defect prevented him from realizing his actions were wrong.

"I always found it somewhat inconsistent for a person to stand up in front of the court and tell a jury my client did not commit this offense and then say later, come to think of it, even if he did he was insane at the time," Boyle said.

If found sane, Dahmer would have to serve Wisconsin's mandatory life-in-prison term for each murder. If ruled insane, he would be sent to a mental hospital and could petition for his release every six months after one year of treatment.

To gain release, he would have to convince the trial judge he was no longer mentally ill and no longer posed a threat to the public or himself.

District Attorney E. Michael McCann said he was not surprised by the insanity defense but would vigorously fight it because of the possibility Dahmer could be freed someday if found insane.

Boyle said he doesn't plan to request a change of venue for the trial, saying police and prosecutors had thus far acted correctly to limit the effects of pretrial publicity that could bias jurors.

The judge granted a defense request that Dahmer be transferred to the Milwaukee County Jail from the state prison at Portage, about 100 miles west of Milwaukee, where he has been held since his probation on a child molestation charge was revoked last month.

Dahmer, 31, a former candy factory worker and Army veteran, was arrested after a partially handcuffed man flagged down police July 22 and took them to Dahmer's apartment, where they found 11 dismembered bodies.

Police say he admitted killing 17 young males in the last 13 years, including a 14-year-old missing child, a 19-year-old hitchhiker near his boyhood home in Bath, Ohio, three males at his grandmother's home in a Milwaukee suburb and 11 men at his Milwaukee apartment.

Worms may be used to eat trash

PETALUMA, Calif. (NYT) — In an attempt to find an ecologically correct way to dispose of waste, Petaluma may wind up with a worm factory, where millions of the slippery creatures would devour waste products normally trucked to landfills.

Waste-Tek Conversion Corp. of Seattle has asked Petaluma officials whether it can build a $500,000 factory, where waste products, including treated sewage sludge, would be heated and then placed on a conveyer belt for the consumption of hungry worms.

A large pilot whale thrashes and arcs it's body while attempting to free itself from a marsh at Chipman's Cove in Wellfleet, Mass.

Rescuers return 25 beached whales

WELLFLEET, Mass. (AP) — Twenty-five pilot whales beached on Cape Cod were returned to the sea Tuesday by human rescuers, but four other whales died.

Scientists said it was too soon for a prognosis on the survivors, weakened by hours of not having their bulk supported by water.

"Right now, it's anybody's guess," said Gregg Early, director of the marine mammal rescue and rehabilitation program at the New England Aquarium in Boston.

The whales were discovered at low tide early Tuesday in Chipman Cove, an inlet at the end of Wellfleet Harbor, inside the arm of Cape Cod.

"They were pretty much high and dry," said Early. "Almost all of them were up on the mud flats."

The whales were believed to be part of the group that was shooed away Thursday by volunteers in motor boats and kayaks from First Encounter Beach, a few miles south in Eastham.

Three whales in that group were killed Monday after they were found dying in Brewster. Two others, including a baby separated from its mother, swam into Rock Harbor, 10 miles away in Orleans. They were trapped for a time Tuesday until they were taken out to join the animals rescued from Wellfleet Harbor.

Marine officials had no ready explanation for the beachings.

Nearly 400 whales have been beached in Cape Cod towns in the last 10 years, most recently last Dec. 11 on Squaw Island near Hyannisport. No mass strandings have occured before Oct. 6 in recent years, however.

Panama serves Noriega with papers

MIAMI — Manuel Noriega and his family were served Tuesday with a flurry of legal papers growing out of lawsuits filed by Panama's government against them and the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

Panama says it is the rightful owner of $23 million the family funneled into BCCI, and has frozen London accounts of Noriega's wife, Felicidad, as well as firms allegedly linked to the bank.

"Panama is determined to collect every penny of public funds misappropriated by General Noriega and others, and will leave no stone unturned until the money is returned to the Panamanian people," said Panama's Miami attorney, Thomas Equels.

The deposed Panamanian ruler was served in his courthouse jail cell just as the third day of jury selection got under way at his drug and racketeering trial.

Two of his daughters — Sandra and Thays — were caught by process servers as they walked into the courtroom. They were asked to bring their credit card and other financial records to a Miami deposition later this month.

The process servers were still trying to approach Felicidad Noriega and the remaining daughter, Lorena. All four women have been attending Noriega's trial.

The lawsuits, filed in Miami and London, say that under Noriega, BCCI shifted huge sums of Panama's public funds from bank to bank and laundered drug money.

The Noriegas' London BCCI account was used to pay for hundreds of thousands of dollars in credit card purchases made by the wife and three daughters, the lawsuit charges.

The women jet-setted around the world, patronizing Paris boutiques, restaurants from Tokyo to Buenos Aires, and a Miami Toys 'R' Us, bank records show.

Filed with the Miami lawsuit is a letter from Noriega to his personal BCCI banker Amjad Awan regarding "placement of secret funds of the National Guard in your bank."

Baby delivered early to undergo transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A baby diagnosed in the womb with a deadly heart ailment was delivered five weeks early so it could immediately receive a transplanted heart, doctors said Tuesday.

Sarah Kelton of Pittsburgh was in critical condition and breathing with the aid of a respirator after receiving the heart in a six-hour operation that began late Sunday at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

"The child looks well," said Dr. John M. Armitage, one of two surgeons who performed the operation. "We're pleased with her progress."

Sarah is taking the experimental drug FK-506 to help prevent rejection of the heart.

Sarah was delivered by Caesarean section shortly before 2 p.m. Sunday at Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburgh after doctors learned a newborn donor, who wasn't identified, had been found. Sarah weighed just over 5 pounds at birth.

Sarah's parents, who have one other young child, asked doctors not to identify them, said hospital spokeswoman Sue Cardillo.

Sarah was diagnosed with hypoplastic left heart syndrome as a 17-week-old fetus. Infants born with the syndrome have an underdeveloped left ventricle and rarely live longer than six weeks.

MHS takes Lee to task

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Shawn Whelan, Midland High's No. 1 girl's singles player, breezed to a 6-0, 6-1 victory Tuesday at the MHS courts.

■ The Bulldogs open their District 4-5A tennis season with a 13-5 victory over the Rebels.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland High flexed its tennis muscles Tuesday, as the Bulldogs defeated cross-town rival Midland Lee 13-5 in a dual team meet at the MHS courts to open District 4-5A play for both teams.

The Bulldogs were strongest on the boys side, where they swept all six singles matches and took two of three doubles pairings.

And as MHS' George St. Clair — who won his No. 1 singles match 6-2, 6-2 over Lee's Ben Bacon and teamed with Lanny Temple for a 6-1, 6-1 doubles win over David Stark and Scott Beaubien — it should be just the beginning for the 'Dogs.

"We're as good as any team in the district. Abilene High is the toughest competition, but we're capable of beating them. We have a good shot at taking the district," he said.

For first-year MHS coach Cynthia Hazen, the win was her inauguration into 4-5A play.

"We kind of started out slowly. We got a few split sets and in boys doubles we lost the second match (where Bacon and Raymond Streeter downed Gavin Hudgeons and John Waller 6-2, 6-3). But it was also their first match playing together as a doubles team," she said.

As a matter of fact, if the 'Dogs showed a weakness Tuesday it was at doubles, where MHS dropped two of the four matches it lost (Lee won one match by default).

"We have been working a lot on singles and just haven't had the time to work on doubles. You can tell we have played a lot of singles because in doubles we were kind of shaky and then we took off in singles," Hazen said.

The top three boys singles players for MHS were overwhelming, as they all won in straight sets.

As Temple overtook Streeter 6-0, 6-2 in the No. 3 spot and Hudgeons won the No. 2 match over Stark 6-4, 6-2, St. Clair dominated Bacon with a well-rounded game.

"I did what I needed to do. I didn't play badly, and Ben's a pretty good player. I had to hold him off.

"Everything was working for me. I made a few errors I didn't want to make, but he came up with some good shots, too," St. Clair said.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Norm Charlton has stunned and angered the Los Angeles Dodgers by admitting that he purposely hit catcher Mike Scioscia for stealing signs, and he intends to hurt him again the next time they meet.

The Cincinnati Reds reliever hit Scioscia on the right arm with a pitch during the Dodgers' 10-4 victory Monday night. Charlton later claimed it was a payback for Scioscia stealing signs from the catcher while on base.

Johnson heartened by effort

■ Cowboy coach insists his team will win a lot of games following Dallas' narrow loss to Washington.

Associated Press

IRVING — On the day after their return to NFL prime time, the beaten Dallas Cowboys were feeling much better about themselves.

Even coach Jimmy Johnson, whose comments were brief and to the point immediately after the 33-31 loss to the Washington Redskins, had a different outlook about the game on Tuesday.

"As disappointed as we were with the loss, it was very encouraging to show what we can do with the football team," Johnson said. "We showed we've made enough improvement to know that we are going to win a lot of games. We had two crucial turnovers to probably the best team in the league and their kicker had a career game. We will win."

The Redskins cashed a fake punt into a touchdown and Chip Lohmiller hit four long-distance field goals as Washington snapped a string of six consecutive losses on Monday Night Football.

It was the Cowboys' first appearance in a Monday night game since 1988.

Owner Jerry Jones stayed in the press box until after 2 a.m. basking in the glow of the wild offensive show.

"I think the game showed the nation we're back on track with this franchise," Jones said. "We lost but it may have bee the finest hour we've had since we tool over the team."

Jones hung around like former Texas president Tex Schramm used to do, asking each writer how he saw the game.

"How do you think we did?" Jones pressed. "We almost pulled it off, didn't we?"

Indeed. Had the Cowboys not been

Omohundro takes flight

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The way Sale Omohundro views everything, birdies and bogeys have taken a back seat in life.

Tuesday, following completion of the second round of the North Texas PGA Sectional Championship, it was those back seat birdies — as well as a round-finishing eagle — that again became important for Omohundro.

With a birdie-birdie-eagle finish on day two of the NTPGA at Green Tree Country Club, Omohundro returned to his hotel room having shot a 4-under par, 67 to take a two stroke lead over Terry Lester.

Lester, Midland Country Club's assistant pro, slipped to 137 overall with a second-round, 1-over 72. Lester had opened the tournament Monday with a 65.

"I played about as good as I could. I made a few short putts and there were no big mistakes."
— Sale Omohundro

"I played about as good as I could," Omohundro said. "I made a few short putts and there were no big mistakes.

"I couldn't ask for more. I'm very satisfied."

Omohundro, who in the early 80s was on the PGA tour briefly but failed to earn enough money to retain his tour card, said his priorities have changed, and golf doesn't hold quite the importance it once did — back when he struggled to make a living as a touring pro; when he had a bad temper, and before he settled down and had a family.

Omohundro didn't wait around Tuesday to find out if he had wrestled the lead from Lester. He had to leave early to go pick up his 14-month old daughter from the babysitter's.

"A bogey's not as bad as it used to be," Omohundro said. "I guess my pri-

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Mojo game is homecoming for Wilson

Williamson

Many Odessa Permian fans probably don't realize it, but when Tyler John Tyler comes roaring into town for its 7 p.m. Saturday meeting at Ratliff Stadium, Permian will be meeting an old nemesis.

Most people know that John Tyler beat Permian last year under the direction of Carlous Stone, who is now the head coach at Abilene High. Few know that the new John Tyler coach is Allen Wilson, and he also owns a victory over Old Mojo — not as a coach, but as a player.

Wilson is a graduate of Midland Lee and he was a running back for the Rebels back in 1968 when Lee pulled off its first victory ever over Permian, 28-26. And now he is back as a coach with the opportunity to meet Permian again.

"It feels really good," Wilson says of the Saturday meeting. "Permian is one of the class acts in the state and this is a dream come true for me. It's kind of like a homecoming.

"Anytime you play a team of Permian's magnitude, you're excited about it. We beat them the first time in Lee's history in 1968 and that was a big one even back then. I think it made them mad when we beat them."

Permian came back with a 49-6 win over Lee in 1969.

Wilson was good enough at Lee to earn a scholarship at Abilene Christian, but he is making no brash claims.

"I could give you some big numbers and nobody would probably ever know, but in those days we threw the ball almost every down," Wilson remembers. "I played safety at Abilene Christian and we won a national championship in 1973."

Ray Burris was head coach at Lee in those hazy days of Air Rebel and Midland High assistant coach Johnny Williams was then at Lee, coaching Wilson.

"You got a good background playing for those guys," Wilson said. "That district has always been a good one."

Will Wilson be throwing the ball like Lee did in 1968 — Burris style?

"Well, we'll probably look more like Permian than they do. We run the Wing-T. Teams in this part of the state are all going to some form of the Run and Shoot. You don't see as much of that in West Texas. The wind out there may have something to do with that. But we're still running the Wing-T and will throw anywhere from 15 to 20 times a game."

Wilson comes to John Tyler after 16 years at Class 4A Paris. He was head coach at Paris for eight years and won the state Class 4A title in 1988. And just when it looked like Wilson was staring security in the face, he moves to Tyler.

"In this business, you are always looking for an opportunity to move up," Wilson said. "I've had several opportunities, but not the right one. I guess this was the right one."

And he is off to a good start. In Wilson's John Tyler debut, he beat O.D. Wyatt, 49-0, Friday.

Wilson admits that he has often thought about coaching against some of the teams that he played against in high school. Saturday is his first chance. He would also like the opportunity to face Lee.

"I'd like to meet Lee in the quarterfinals," Wilson says, but adds, "That means something good has happened to both teams and that's the ideal way for a game like that to take place."

(From 1C)

Brett Shannon and Waller all came away victorious in singles, the Bulldog girls split their singles matches 3-3.

Shawn Whelan had little difficulty taking the win in the No. 1 spot with a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Wendy Hobbs, and MHS' Stephanie Masterson and Kari Brewer won at the No. 5 and 6 holes. But Lee upset the MHS party somewhat when Joann Kelly and Monisha Poudyal both took singles wins while Stacey Stroman was credited with a default win for the Rebels after Shanna Burgin became ill.

DALLAS: Cowboys have to bounce back against Eagles fooled on a fake punt, they might have upset the Redskins like they did last Thanksgiving Day in Texas Stadium. Brian Mitchell ran three yards up the middle on fourth-and-one from the Redskins 48 and Washington eventually scored the go-ahead touchdown.

Lohmiller hit field goals of 53, 52, 45 and 47 yards when Washington drives stalled.

"He was a hot kicker, that's for sure," Johnson said. "One of the best nights I've ever seen."

The loss cost one Dallas player his job. Kelvin Martin, who fumbled a first-period punt that led to a Redskins touchdown, will be replaced by Derrick Shepard as the punt returner, Johnson said.

Johnson also announced that Alonzo Highsmith will be activated this week and Tommie Agee will be moved to tailback, replacing injured Curvin Richards.

In other moves, running backs Keith Jones and Undra Johnson were cut from the practice squad and linebacker Mickey Pruitt was put on the injured reserve list with a pulled hamstring.

Johnson said Sunday's game with Philadelphia becomes even more important than the one against the Redskins.

"We can't afford to lose two division games in a row at home," Johnson said. "An emotional hangover from the Washington game concerns me. We can't belabor and rehash this game. It was a tough loss. But we have to bounce back."

Washington (2-0) moved into a tie with Phoenix for the early lead in the NFC East.

A&M's 12th-man unit disbanded

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — The lone walk-on left on Texas A&M's 12th-man kickoff unit says he is chagrined the eight-year tradition has been disbanded.

The unit, made up entirely of student walk-ons, met with controversy last season after Rodney Blackshear of Texas Tech returned a kickoff for a touchdown for the first time in the history of the 12-man squad.

This season, coach R.C. Slocum will use only one walk-on player on kickoffs. The unit will be made up of 10 players who will rotate from kickoff to kickoff and game to game. They will also all wear jersey No. 12.

The only walk-on, Jay Elliott, will line up to the right of kicker Terry Venetoulias. Elliott, a 6-foot-1, 195-pound senior construction science major, is a fourth cousin of famed Sugarland high school running back Kenneth Hall, who holds the all-time national rushing record of 11,232 yards.

Elliott's brother Tal played for the University of Texas and their father, Richard, was an offensive lineman for the Houston Cougars from 1959-62.

"We always kind of hated Texas," said Jay Elliott, who was an all-district linebacker at Rosenberg Lamar. "And oh, well (Tal) went there so I had to pull for Texas for two years and bite my tongue."

Tal Elliott's stay at Texas was a short one after teammates claimed in published reports that he was the bookmaker of a gambling ring among Texas football players.

Red Sox drop Tigers on two-hitter by Clemens

Associated Press

AL

DETROIT — Roger Clemens took a perfect game into the seventh inning Tuesday night and finished with a two-hitter as Boston beat Detroit 4-0 for its season-high seventh straight victory.

The win moved the surging Red Sox within four games of the Toronto Blue Jays in the AL East.

Clemens (15-8) lost both his perfect game and no-hit bid with one out in the seventh. He walked Lou Whitaker on a 3-1 count and Alan Trammell, the next batter, lined a 1-1 pitch to left field for a clean single.

Clemens then struck out Cecil Fielder and got Mickey Tettleton on a grounder to first to end the inning.

The right-hander struck out six and walked one for his third shutout and 10th complete game of the season.

The Red Sox scored three runs in the first inning on four hits off Frank Tanana (11-10).

M's 5, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Seattle snapped a 13-game road losing streak as Harold Reynolds broke an eighth-inning tie with a run-scoring double.

Toronto's lead over second-place Boston in the AL East was sliced to four games as the Red Sox won 4-0 at Detroit.

Omar Vizquel started the Seattle eighth with a leadoff double and David Valle's fly ball to right sent the runner to third. Reliever Mike Timlin struck out Jeff Schaefer before Reynolds sent a roller past second baseman Roberto Alomar to score Vizquel.

The Mariners turned the seventh triple play in club history to get out of a first and second jam in the fifth.

Indians 5, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Doug Jones, Cleveland's long-time relief ace, won his first major-league start and Reggie Jefferson hit his first grand slam as the Indians beat Milwaukee.

Jones (2-7), whose contract was purchased last week from Cleveland's Triple A affiliate in Colorado Springs, gave up two runs and eight hits over 8 2-3 innings in making his first start in 272 major-league appearences since 1982

The win also ended a personal seven-game losing streak for Jones as he had not won since beating Milwaukee on May 25.

Orioles 6, Yankees 3

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles handed the New York Yankees their fifth straight loss, using consecutive homers by Mike Devereaux and Cal Ripken.

Bill Ripken drove in two runs for the Orioles, who won a second straight game for the first time since Aug. 23. Todd Frohwirth (6-3) got the victory with 4⅔ innings of one-hit relief.

The slumping Yankees have lost 14 of 19, falling to 60-77.

Baltimore took a 1-0 lead against Eric Plunk (2-4) in the first inning when Devereaux singled, stole second and third and came home on Sam Horn's two-out double.

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo pitched six strong innings as Cincinnati dropped Los Angeles into second place in the NL West.

Millard's knee worse than thought

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Further damage was discovered Tuesday when Minnesota Vikings defensive tackle Keith Millard underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee for a cartilage tear, the team said.

"Damage to the previous anterior or cruciate ligament reconstruction was discovered," a brief statement from the Vikings said. "A decision will me made later on a future course of action."

Magnetic resonance imaging tests over the weekend had indicated the cartilage tear. Cartilage damage is considered less serious than torn ligaments.

Dr. David Fischer, Vikings medical director, told KSTP-TV that "the situation is much more complicated than we had hoped. Keith has some decisions to make. I have a lot of evidence, but I cannot make the decision for him."

Fischer declined to reveal further details, citing doctor-patient confidentiality.

Coach Jerry Burns told the station Millard's health was the first priority.

"There's no question that Keith Millard is a great football player, and whatever decision he makes relative to these latest findings, he's got to take into consideration his future and his well-being," Burns said. "Football is important, but his well-being is more important."

Before Tuesday's surgery, Millard had said he hoped to be back in the lineup for the game against Detroit Oct. 6.

Young Detmer fires six TD passes

Associated Press

Mission's Koy Detmer is the David Klingler of Texas high school football.

Oops, we'd better make that the Ty Detmer of Texas high school football, at least if you're talking to Detmer family patriarch Sonny Detmer, the coach at Mission.

The younger brother of last year's Heisman Trophy winner threw for 430 yards and six touchdowns last week, leading Mission in a 52-0 pounding of Laredo Nixon. The effort earned Detmer mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Detmer's scoring passes were for 42, 45, 30, 52, 12 and 57 yards. Four went to flanker Carlos Blanco, who finished with six catches for 250 yards.

Detmer was named to the AP all-state team last year after completing 134 of 208 passes for 2,238 yards and 32 touchdowns during the regular season.

At 6-1 and 160 pounds, he is similar in stature to his older brother. He also has comparable abilities, Sonny Detmer said.

"You watch them play and they're a lot alike. It's just amazing that two quarterbacks can be that much alike," he said. "What Ty has done gives you an idea of what Koy could be."

Texas Prep Roundup

Detmer had planned to follow his brother at Brigham Young, but the school's recent addition of star quarterbacks from California and Texas prompted him to withdraw his oral commitment. He now is considering Texas and Penn State.

Before heading for college, Ty Detmer scorched the record books in Texas, passing for 8,005 yards at San Antonio Southwest. He now holds or is tied for 25 NCAA passing records.

"I really truthfully believe Koy can do a similar job," Sonny Detmer said. "A lot of these so-called experts said Ty couldn't play college ball coming out of high school. Then he wins the Heisman Trophy. Now they're saying he can't play in the NFL."

Andy Gass, a wide receiver and defensive back for El Paso Coronado, scored touchdowns on a 100-yard interception return, a 26-yard run and an 85-yard kickoff return in a 35-13 victory over El Paso Eastwood.

In a six-man game, Ira's Mike Hughes ran for touchdowns of 6, 18, 32 and 17 yards. He also threw three touchdown passes, but the Bulldogs lost 71-64 to Guthrie, which got six touchdowns from running back Darren Jones.

In other outstanding performances:

—Running back Anthony Holmes of San Antonio Marshall had 239 yards on 25 carries and touchdowns of 86 and 14 yards in a 26-7 victory over San Antonio MacArthur.

—Quarterback Glenn Winship of San Antonio Alamo Heights completed 19 of 33 passes for 358 yards and touchdowns of 19, 48, 27, 13 and 16 yards, including two to Trey Watson, in a 45-28 victory over Central Catholic. In the losing effort, Central Catholic's Keith McKinney completed 16 of 26 passes for 301 yards and touchdowns of 51, 28, 43 and 23 yards. Two of the scores were to Chris Marcinowski.

—Linebacker Allen Wilbon of Dallas Kimball had 27 tackles in a 20-8 victory over Fort Worth Trimble Tech.

—Running back Michael Ross of Carrizo Springs carried 17 times for 207 yards and two touchdowns in an 18-13 victory over San Antonio West Campus.

—All-purpose back Matt Longoria, a sophomore at San Antonio McCollum, scored five touchdowns in a 48-8 victory over San Antonio Brackenridge. Longoria scored on a 44-yard punt return, passes of 70 and 12 yards and runs of 55 and 61 yards.

NTPGA: Bogey at No. 18 drops Lester two strokes off pace

orities have changed. My wife and little girl are my inspiration these days."

If that's indeed the case, mom and daughter worked mental wonders for dad, as Omohundro shook off his third bogey of the day on the par-4, 15th hole in time to begin his four-under par finish over the last three holes.

To secure his eagle on the finishing hole, Omohundro's second shot on the par 5, 18th landed within three feet of the pin.

■ Complete results/3C

It was on that same 18th hole where Lester's problems mounted. Playing level par through 17 holes, Lester put his drive on 18 into the trunk of a pine tree, right of the fairway. His second shot skidded up and across the fairway, 20 yards short of the green and this time behind a trio of pines.

Lester's approach cleared the trees but rolled too far for comfort up the sloping green. A lengthy putt for birdie fell well short, and a four-footer for par caught the very edge of the cup before Lester converted for bogey and 1 over for the day.

"A bogey on the 18th leaves a bad taste in my mouth," Lester said. "I just hit it as hard as I could. There's not that many trees on the hole, I just figured I'd hit it long and take a short iron to the green.

Omohundro, who tied for third at a San Angelo NTPGA event earlier this summer, Lester, and Robert Hoyt tee off in Wednesday's final round today at 9:57 a.m.

Hoyt, from Dallas Brook Hollow, has a 68-71 for a two-day 139 total.

The only other players with two-day totals under par (142) are Lindy Miller, Bill Merritt and Doug Higgins Jr. Each sits at one-under-par 141.

Wall Street rushes to clean house

■ Firms are examining the breadth of authority and access they allow to key traders.

By Richard D. Hylton
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Salomon Brothers scandal has sent tremors along Wall Street, as firms rush to clean house and distance themselves from employees who may have violated securities laws.

Investment bankers, traders and analysts say some firms are overreacting as they try to make sure they are not hit by the kinds of troubles that have engulfed Salomon.

Last week, two firms — Shearson Lehman Brothers and UBS Securities — announced that they had suspended or dismissed executives who may have violated securities laws.

"Regardless of how tight your organization is and how many rules you follow carefully, when a lot of publicity hits someone in your industry it causes people to look again," said Arnold Kroll, a managing director at Wertheim Schroeder & Co., a Wall Street investment bank.

And Felix G. Rohatyn, a senior partner of Lazard Freres & Co., an old-line investment firm, suggested that the moral climate was changing much the way the mood in Japan had changed in the wake of financial scandals there. Some kinds of behavior are suddenly no longer acceptable, and executives now tend to be more deliberate than bold.

"There is a change in mood in the industry that is making people more introspective," Rohatyn said, adding that this was "not only in view of what happened, but in view of changes in legislation and regulatory procedures that may be forthcoming."

In some cases, firms are examining the breadth of authority and access they allow to key traders and are considering limiting this reach as a way to prevent future problems.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose modestly Tuesday, snapping a five-day plunge as traders awaited the latest industry supply statistics.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October settled at $21.41 per barrel, up 8 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. In the previous five trading sessions, the price of oil had dropped a total of 93 cents per barrel.

The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Marathon Oil to raise their posted price 25 cents to $20.25.

Refined petroleum products turned in a mixed performance.

After the market was closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported the nation's supply of crude oil fell sharply for the week ending Friday. The crude stockpile dropped 6.9 million barrels, to 343.3 million.

The supply of gasoline rose 3.3 million barrels, to 212.9 million, while the supply of distillates, which include home heating oil, rose 3.4 million barrels to 130.1 million.

The nation's refineries were running at 91.1 percent of capacity, up from 90.5 percent a week earlier.

In other futures trading in New York, natural gas was mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in October settling at $1.683 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 5.4 cents.

Estate planning

Shearson Lehman Brothers is hosting a seminar on "Estate Planning and Strategies" Saturday at the Plaza Club, sixth floor of ClayDesta Center. The seminar will begin with a continental breakfast at 8:45 a.m., with the seminar beginning at 9 a.m.

Dawson of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson, whose expertise is in the areas of estate planning, probate matters and preparation of wills and trusts., and Joe Sims of Joe Sims & Associates, a Dallas firm that specializes in providing support to financial service professionals.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed against major foreign currencies in a slow session Tuesday as most traders and analysts awaited release of new inflation reports later in the week. Gold prices fell.

The dollar held steady against the German mark.

Banking posts a 12 percent earnings drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Earnings at the nation's banks fell 12 percent in the April-June period from a year earlier for the most dismal second quarter in four years, the government said Tuesday.

Banks earned $4.63 billion, compared with $5.64 billion during the first three months of the year and $5.27 billion a year earlier. It was the worst second-quarter performance since the industry lost money in the April-June period of 1987.

However, the deterioration in profits masked some early signs of stabilization in the troubled industry. Non-current loans — those 90 or more days past due — shrank slightly for the first time in a year and a half, to $83.1 billion from $83.3 billion in the first quarter.

"Unfortunately, the second-quarter figures could be characterized as the banking industry bumping along the bottom of the recession," said outgoing FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman. "It doesn't look like it's getting much worse, but it doesn't look like it's getting much better."

He predicted the industry would finish 1991 with $18 billion or $19 billion in profits. That would be a modest improvement over 1990, when the industry posted profits of $16.7 billion.

Regionally, bank profits were weakest in the Northeast, followed for the first time by the West. The Northeast has been suffering from a real estate slump for two years, but in recent months commercial real estate in Southern California has begun to show signs of trouble.

American Airlines now talks DC-10 revamping

By Dan Reed
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — After two years of analyzing various aircraft to replace its aging fleet of McDonnell Douglas DC-10s, American Airlines now is talking to McDonnell Douglas officials about possible major modifications that would extend the useful life of the aircraft well beyond 30 years.

Such a modification program potentially could reduce or remove American's need to order new widebody jets for service on high-demand, long-range domestic and trans-Atlantic routes. In the process, modifying its 49 domestic versions of the DC-10 could save American up to $4 billion or more than what it would have to pay to replace that many aircraft with new jumbo jets.

The final amount depends on the number of changes made to the planes and the associated cost per plane.

"We are looking at modifications of the domestic DC-10 fleet that conceivably could prolong their service life," American spokesman John Hotard said this week. "But I would hasten to caution you that that is only one of many things we are looking at in our continuing study of how to replace our DC-10s."

McDonnell Douglas spokesman Don Hanson said he had no information about any DC-10 modification talks with American.

American recently informed all three major aircraft manufacturers — McDonnell Douglas, Boeing and Europe's Airbus Industries — that it will not be making a decision to buy airplanes to replace its DC-10s later this year as previously planned. American initially had been expected to order DC-10 replacements early last year, but has pushed back the decision on several occasions.

U.S. international trade performance is best in 9 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States posted a $2.97 billion surplus in the broadest measure of foreign trade from April through June as payments by foreign countries for the Persian Gulf War continued to give America its best international performance in nine years, the government said Tuesday.

The rare surplus in the country's current account during the spring, followed an even larger $10.5 billion trade surplus in the first three months of the year, the Commerce Department said.

Both surpluses came about because of $34.3 billion in cash payments made by Japan and other countries during the first six months of the year to reimburse the U.S. military for the Persian Gulf War.

Without those payments, the current account would have been in deficit by $6.4 billion in the first quarter and $5.2 billion in the second quarter.

Even though the Desert Storm payments are winding up, analysts believe a combination of forces will help give the United States its lowest current account deficit this year since 1982.

The current account is considered the most important trade statistic because it tracks not only the flow of merchandise between countries but also earnings on foreign investments and payments for services such as tourism.

More banks return computer images of canceled checks

By Michael Quint
N.Y. Times News Service

Big changes are coming in consumers' monthly checking account statements as a growing number of banks try to convince Americans that they do not need to get back every one of the more than 56 billion checks they write annually.

One of the newest methods is to give customers computer-generated images of canceled checks with their monthly account statements, rather than returning the bundle of 30 or more checks the average household writes. The system is in place at three banks, with more expected to begin in the next few months.

One is the Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond, Va., which began offering the option of check images on Jan. 1. Since then, 26 percent of its checking account customers have switched.

"We found that the shoebox and the shopping bag were the two primary methods for keeping check records," said John S. Nania, vice president at Central Fidelity. Giving consumers a sheet of paper with check images "is an improvement in service that people seem to appreciate," he said.

Even with the acceptance of such new wrinkles in checking accounts, the banker's dream of a checkless society still remains far off.

But the growing power of computers and the pressure on banks to cut costs and improve profits have banks looking for ways to curb the river of paper created by check processing, which costs banks and their customers more than $45 billion annually.

One of the biggest savings for banks is the reduced postage costs for the 20 million or so monthly account statements they mail that weigh more than an ounce.

Banks also benefit from the reduction in the number of times checks must be run through giant sorting machines that handle about 1,800 checks a minute.

The check-imaging system is similar to one used by American Express, which now provides pages of black and white images of charge slips with monthly account statements.

The Frost Bank in San Antonio estimated that it saves 9 to 14 cents a month on each account that accepts check images, with most of that coming from reduced mailing costs.

In shift, Nutrasweet Co. plans fitness center

By Eben Shapiro
N.Y. Times News Service

Shifting its focus from the food ingredient business, Nutrasweet Co. said Tuesday that it was planning to open a fitness center for people who are at least 50 years old.

Nutrasweet, a unit of Monsanto Co., is best known for its sweetener by the same name. It has been under intense pressure to develop new products because its patent for the sugar substitute expires next year, opening the way for competition that will force the company to reduce prices.

Nutrasweet's other product, Simplesse, a fat substitute introduced last year, has so far been regarded as a disappointment.

Monsanto attributed weak sales for Simplesse in part to "heavy competition in the fat-free market."

George Rosenbaum, president of Leo J. Shapiro and Associates, a market research firm, said that both of Nutrasweet's businesses were "in fundamental jeopardy." But Rosenbaum said the fitness center would help the company by providing it with a laboratory to test fat-free food products.

So far, the company plans to open a fitness center next year in Newton, Mass. Called the Wellbridge Center, it was designed with experts on nutrition and aging from Tufts University and will offer counseling on exercise and nutrition.

The company indicated that other centers would eventually be opened around the country, but declined to elaborate.

Robert E. Flynn, chairman and chief executive of Nutrasweet, was not available for comment, but a statement from his office seemed to anticipate criticism that the venture would steer the company away from its main business. The exercise center "fits well into the vision" of the company, the statement said.

"We have been exploring new business opportunities which would enable consumer to live healthier lives," it said. "Exercise is a natural extension of our company vision."

Rosenbaum said the new centers were likely to include snack bars serving Nutrasweet products.

REVAMP: American discusses modifications

(From 5C)

A source familiar with the discussions between American and McDonnell Douglas described those talks as being "in the very preliminary stages." Various types of modifications are being discussed, ranging from relatively minor technical enhancements to major changes that would include all new engines and cockpits.

The source said the cost of those modifications could range from as little as $2 million to more than $20 million per plane, depending on what changes American might want to make. And the changes could add 10 years or more to each aircraft's life.

By comparison, replacing the DC-10s with new planes would cost about $100 million a plane.

The source said that both sides are excited about the possibility, but added that neither knows yet whether modifying American's DC-10s would reduce the airplanes' operating costs enough to justify undertaking such an unusual project.

While several military jets — including the Navy's A-6 Intruder and F-14 Tomcat — have gone through remanufacturing programs that extended their service lives and improved their operational peformance, the concept has not been applied to commercial jetliners.

In one exception, a few commercial aircraft — used mostly in cargo operations — have been re-engined, that is, their original engines were replaced by an entirely different type of engine.

Re-engining the DC-10 is one of the biggest modifications being discussed by American and McDonnell Douglas. Currently, the DC-10-10 — the domestic range version of the DC-10 — is powered by three General Electric engines that produce about 40,000 pounds of thrust each.

But the MD-11, a larger, more technically sophisticated wide-body jet based on the DC-10 design, is powered by three General Electric engines.

TRADE: U.S. posts surplus in broadest measure

(From 5C)

Many analysts predict that this year's current account deficit could dip to $20 billion or less as the allied war payments and lower imports resulting from the U.S. recession make a dramatic improvement from last year's $92.12 billion deficit.

David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, was even more optimistic than most economists, predicting the deficit could fall to a small negative of $6 billion this year.

"We are forecasting that the current account will be close to balance," Wyss said.

But Wyss and other analysts said the deficit would begin to balloon again in 1992, climbing to around $68 billion as an improving U.S. economy boosts demand for foreign goods.

"Much of the improvement in the current account is due to the recession and as we come out of the recession, imports will turn up," said Bruce Steinberg, senior economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

A rising trade deficit next year is likely to be a factor in the 1992 presidential campaign as Democrats try to blame the Bush administration for failing to aggressively fight to open foreign markets to U.S. products.

For the second quarter, the $2.97 billion current account surplus reflected $11.6 billion in payments by countries for Desert Storm.

Flapsticks are a flop

By Linda Anderson

Let's face it, eating with your fingers is more fun than eating the polite way, with a fork. (Ever tried to eat fried chicken with a fork? Not fun.) Most people's favorite-foods lists include hamburgers, hot dogs, french fries, pizza, chips and dips, crackers, and fruits and vegetables that can just be washed and eaten, and of course, fried chicken.

Anderson

Maybe that helps explain why Jimmy Dean Meat Company Inc. has recently introduced Flapsticks for the microwave — they were designed to be eaten with the fingers. Never having heard of anything like this before, the youngest taste-tester and I got a box of Flapsticks and checked them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

According to company information, Flapsticks are "a unique new item" in the company's "breakfast sandwich line," and "a fun way to serve pancakes and sausage — on a stick."

Yup, on a stick. I guess you could consider Flapsticks to be a sandwich if you can consider a corn dog a sandwich. A Flapstick consists of a link sausage (although longer than most link sausages) surrounded by what the company refers to as "a special recipe pancake batter," then pre-cooked so all you have to do is heat it in the microwave. I'm not sure how special the recipe for the batter is, but Flapsticks are available in three flavors: original, blueberry and apple-cinnamon. Since the special pancake-batter recipe is pre-sweetened, the company reassures consumers that "No syrup is necessary." (I'm sure that will take care of any worries you might have about what happens when you pour syrup on something that looks like a corn dog.)

A four-Flapstick box cost $1.99, or about 50 cents each.

"Flapsticks are delicious and fun," according to Jimmy Dean himself, as quoted by the company information. "Mothers want to provide a nutritious, warm breakfast their children will eat and enjoy. They will save preparation and clean-up time because Flapsticks go directly from the box to the microwave to their child's hand, ready to eat."

Turned out he was right about the preparation time and the clean-up time — just zap a Flapsticks in the microwave for a little bit and it's ready to eat. Clean-up involves throwing the stick in the trash.

The problem at our house turned out to be not getting the Flapsticks from the microwave to the child's hand, but getting it from the child's hand to her mouth. She took one bite and said "Ick." She was not impressed with the pre-sweetened batter — she said sweet pancakes and sausage are not a winning combination, even though she likes them separately.

OK, I said, why don't we take the pancake part off and you can eat just the sausage? She took one bite of the naked sausage and said it was too hot. (I took one bite of it and could hardly taste it, it was so mild. She must have gotten the one hot bite, or — more likely — she just didn't like it.)

As for Flapsticks being nutritious, since the sausage used is "pure pork sausage links," I imagine the fat content of the product leaves a lot to be desired.

Flapsticks are certainly an interesting concept and I wish the company well on their new venture. I doubt that we'll buy another box, though. I'm going to have a hard enough time figuring out what to do with the other three Flapsticks from the first box that no one at our house will eat.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Italian bread looks like pizza

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Here's a pizzalike snack that's supergood, supersimple and super any time — from brunch to late at night! It's based on Boboli (BO-bo-lee), a round, flat, bubbly pre-baked bread. Look for Boboli in the frozen, refrigerated, or bread sections of supermarkets or specialty food shops.

ZESTY ITALIAN PEASANT BREAD

1 16-ounce package Boboli (Italian bread shell)
1 to 2 tablespoons olive or cooking oil
1 clove garlic, minced
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
¼ cup crumbled Gorgonzola cheese or blue cheese
1 tablespoon snipped fresh rosemary, oregano, or basil or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary, oregano, or basil, crushed
Fresh rosemary, oregano, or basil

Place Boboli on a lightly greased baking sheet. In a small bowl stir together oil, garlic and pepper. Brush generously over bread. Sprinkle tomato, cheese and desired snipped herb over bread.

Bake, uncovered, in a 400-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until warm and cheese is melted. Cut into 12 wedges. Top with fresh herb bundle, if desired. Serve warm. Makes 12 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 129 cal., 4 g pro., 19 g carbo., 4 g fat, 5 mg chol., 228 mg sodium, 57 mg potassium, 1 g dietary fiber. U.S. RDA: 10 percent thiamine.

Book's author gives tips on fresh fruits, vegetables

Associated Press

Ingredients make the meal, says cookbook author Bradley Ogden, so it's important to know how to judge when fruits and vegetables are at their peak.

To be able to recognize the scent of a ripe, sweet peach, "can mean the difference between an ordinary dish and a spectacular one," he says.

Among his suggestions:

- Shop roadside stands for fresh produce. Ultimately, the less time between the farmer and the table, the fresher the produce will be.
- Store produce properly.
- Use foods as soon as possible after purchase.

"Don't make the mistake of stopping off for some fresh-picked corn or vine-ripened tomatoes and then leaving your purchases in a hot car for two hours while you complete the rest of your shopping!" Ogden warns in his new cookbook, "Bradley Ogden's Breakfast, Lunch & Dinner" (Random House, $27.50).

DEAR ABBY

Man wants to open door wife shut on his family

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I would be writing to you. My wife, "Annie," does not care for my family, so we spend every holiday with her family. She says my family lives "too far away" to visit, although hers lives only a few miles closer.

Van Buren

Annie and I are happy together, but shutting out my family completely is starting to bother me. I think of them on holidays and their birthdays and would like to share these times with them. I try to discuss this with Annie, but she always says, "We'll talk about it another time" — then she always initiates sex. (I just realized this.) It does take my mind off the discussion for the time being.

Have you had letters from anyone else who neglected his family because of his spouse and later regretted it? — "SAM" IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR SAM: Yes, I have heard from many readers who deeply regretted not spending more time with their families while they were able to. (Especially parents.)

A large part of a loving marriage is compromise, which may mean spending time with people because they are important to one's spouse. The next time you discuss this with Annie, point this out, take a cold shower and keep talking.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old single woman, independent and very nice-looking — so I am told. For two years, I was seeing a married man who was separated from his wife. He said he and his wife were trying to work out their problems with a counselor for the sake of their three kids, but he was still very much in love with me. I sent him back to his wife and family.

I took a month's vacation to try and forget him. Now I'm home, and he is on the phone trying to get me to see him. I don't want to see him because he is a very convincing man and I don't want to start up with him again. On the other hand, I really love him. Half of me wants to see him again, and the other half tells me I shouldn't. I need your advice as soon as possible. — IN LOVE IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR IN LOVE: Listen to the half with the brains in it, and tell him to stay with his family.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a universal sign of apology? There are many universal rude gestures known by everyone, but I often wish I had a signal saying "I'm sorry."

For example, if I were daydreaming at a red light and the driver behind me had to honk the horn, how could I let that driver know that I'm sorry? Other examples: splashing someone on the sidewalk, or misjudging the distance in passing so the other driver had to slow down.

Perhaps this "I apologize" sign would work if you absentmindedly jostled another person in a multilingual area, and you weren't sure which language to apologize in.

If there isn't such a sign, maybe you should invent one. You have enough readers. Perhaps we could create a more polite environment. — SMALL TOWN IN NEBRASKA

DEAR SMALL TOWN: A smile, a salute, a nod, or just a plain "Oops" with the appropriate facial expression would do.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate
1991 Property Tax Rates in Midland County

This notice concerns 1991 property tax rates for Midland County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate and taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate;
Last year's operating taxes	$ 5,067,416.49	$ --	$ 547,168.12

+ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$3,631,459,757	$	$3,631,459,757
= This year's effective tax rate for each fund	$ .1650/$100	$ /$100	$ .0150/$100
Total effective tax rate	$ .1800/$100
x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$ .18540
This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property and including taxes for state criminal justice mandate	$10,993,963.83	$	$ 544,802.63
+ This year's adjusted tax base	$3,631,459,757	$	$3,631,495,757
= This year's effective operating rate	$ .302742/$100	$ /$100	$ .01500/$100
x 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$ .326961/$100	$ /$100	$ .01620/$100

= This year's rollback rate for each fund	$ .353161/$100	$ /$100	$ .01620/$100
This year's rollback rate	$ .369361/$100

(A county that collects the additional sales tax (including one that collects the tax for the first time this year) must insert the following lines:)

- Sales tax adjustment rate $ .141400/$100
- = Rollback tax rate $ .227961/$100

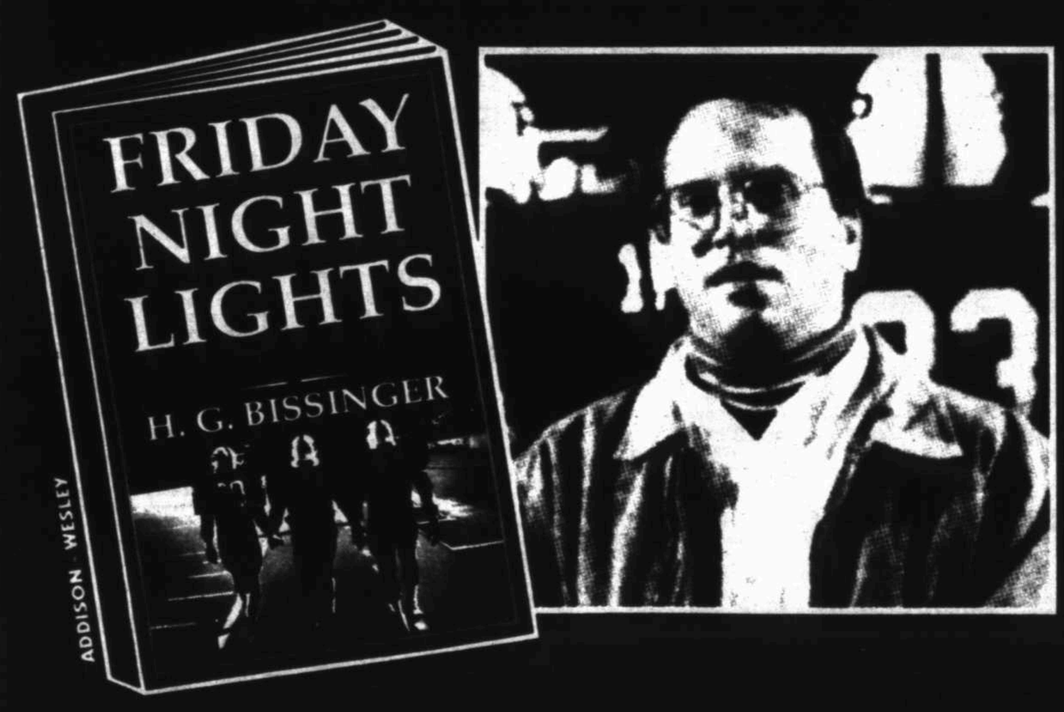
WITH JOURNALIST
H.G. BISSINGER



Thurs., Sept.12th, 5:30-7 p.m.
See Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist H.G. BISSINGER in person and pick up a copy of his book FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS. BISSINGER chronicles a season in the life of Odessa, TX. The coaches, the mothers and fathers, the ministers, the politicians - and most of all the high school football players, who carry an entire city's image of itself on their young shoulders. FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS is both a deeply moving story and a deeply disturbing one. It is a startling examination of the role of high school sports in America, but it is much more than just sports, it is a fascinating portrait of life in America.
