White House aid replaces Habib as Mideast envoy

See related story, Page 9C

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan replaced Philip C. Habib as his special Middle East envoy on Friday, apparently bowing to Syria — which refuses to deal with Habib — in hopes of stimulating the stalled Mideast peace process.

After an Oval Office meeting and then lunch with President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon, Reagan announced that Robert C. McFarlane, the deputy White House national security assistant, would take over for Habib, who had resigned. Other shifts in Reagan's Middle East team appeared likely.

Habib had been unable to bring Syria into negotiations for the removal of the foreign forces — including Syrian troops — from Lebanon.

A senior Reagan administration official denied that by making the shift the administration was going "cap in hand" to the Syrians. But he acknowledged that Syria's refusal to talk to Habib on the envoy's recent trips to the region was "a factor in the change" and that Syrian "attitudes were responsible."

"We have every reason to expect this team will be received by the Syrians," said the official, who spoke to reporters at the White House on the condition that he not be identified by name.

A senior State Department official said it was Habib's decision to step down from his post, in part because Syria wouldn't negotiate with him.

"Phil himself is the one who said his ability to effectively operate in the area had been eroded and Phil is the one who said it has got to change," said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

The official said Draper would also step down but would receive "a very high position," probably as an ambassador. He said a third envoy, Richard Fairbanks, would stay in his post and serve under McFarlane.

Reagan and Gemayel met just hours after the Beirut airport was shelled. Among those wounded were three U.S. servicemen. Thirteen Lebanese were killed. A participant in the meetings said there was "great concern" expressed about the violence.

"It's my belief that energy and perseverance will triumph in the end. We do not lack for either. Lebanon can count on our support," Reagan said.

Gemayel told his host that their governments "will intensify their consultations" and that he was confident that the Middle East's major problems "can best be addressed and resolved by full cooperation with our Arab community and our American friends."

Reagan, who said Habib "will be sorely missed" after 28 months on the job, disclosed that McFarlane would head for the Middle East within 10 days. Since late last year, Habib has concentrated on negotiating the withdrawal of the foreign troops in Lebanon.

There were few, if any, signs that the shift from Habib to McFarlane would lead to a breakthrough in the efforts to remove the Syrian, Israeli and Palestine Liberation Organization forces from Lebanon.

But, said one official, "we are open to new ideas."

Copter, seaplane collide

NEW YORK (AP) — A police helicopter and a seaplane collided in cloudless skies over Brooklyn on Friday, hurtling the chopper through the roof of a vacant building and the plane into New York Harbor. Two police officers were killed and two people aboard the plane were presumed drowned.

Two others on the commuter plane, a man and woman on the way to their jobs with Wall Street firms, kicked open the emergency exit in the plane and were rescued. They were hospitalized in stable condition.

Divers tried to locate and raise the plane wreckage thought to contain the pilot and another passenger. It sank in 45-foot deep waters between Governors Island and Brooklyn, off the tip of Manhattan.

Police Chief Patrick Murphy said the helicopter was on routine traffic patrol when the accident occurred.

The Waterfront Airways plane had left Hyland, N.J., at 8:15 a.m. and was coming in for a landing on the East River off Wall Street, according to Murphy.

Jorge Martinez, 28, was looking west out his fourth-floor window when he saw the seaplane and the blue copter collide.

"They spun around and a blade of the helicopter came loose," Martinez said. "Then the blade hit the wall of my building."

He said the two aircraft moved rapidly toward the oceanfront but the copter got no farther than the building across the street from Martinez, a vacant, one-story commercial building.

"The helicopter went through the top of that building in a shot, and the blades never stopped turning," he said.

Martinez ran to the warehouse and discovered the two dead officers — James Rowley, 39, of Nassau County, a married 17-year veteran, and Charles J. Trojahn, 27, of Suffolk County, who had been on the force for just one year and was unmarried.

No one on the ground was injured in the crash. The helicopter missed the surrounding low-rise building and crashed through the roof and into the back of the building.

The plane veered off toward the water.

A survivor, Eileen McCarthy, 35, of the Beechurst section of Queens, praised the pilot for landing the plane in the channel and keeping it intact.

Ms. McCarthy and the other survivor, Joseph Stambler, 48, of Rumson, N.J., had been sitting in the backseat of the plane. Witnesses said the two stood on the plane's fuselage as it sank, and then swam toward Coast Guard vessels based on Governors Island. The Coast Guard picked them out of the water.

Both were listed in stable condition at a local hospital.

Two deckhands on a passing tugboat saw the plane and tried to keep it from sinking.

"The tail was beat up, almost ripped off, and it was going down," said Mark Gobo, 23, of Edgewater, N.J. "I started the engine, called the captain and we went out on deck."

Gobo and the other deckhand, Timothy Hynes, 27, of Manhattan, dove into the water to try to keep the plane afloat, and saw one person floating face down in the submerged cockpit.

They tried to tie lines to the wreck, to keep it from sinking, but one line let go, the other broke and after 20 minutes the plane went under.

Prayers often invoke laughter

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — "Teach us, Lord," prayed one lawmaker over the bowed heads of his colleagues, "that you are not a Republican.

"Comfort us with the knowledge that neither are you a Democrat."

Petitioned another, "Help us avoid adding to the perception that the state Capitol is an island of confusion surrounded by a sea of reality."

In Michigan, as in many other states, each session of the state House and Senate is opened with prayer.

Occasionally they are offered by visiting officials or religious figures. But usually a legislator provides the invocation, and the prayers sometimes stray from solemnity to sarcasm, drawing chuckles from listeners standing with heads bowed.

"If thousands of years ago you could have spoken through Balaam's ass, then surely today you can speak to this Legislature," said Sen. Paul Henry, a Republican from Grand Rapids, in an invocation last month.

In the Old Testament book of Numbers, God spoke through Balaam's beast of burden after Balaam beat the animal for refusing to pass by an angel blocking its path.

The U.S. Supreme Court earlier this month upheld the right of state Legislatures to open their sessions with prayer. The court ruled that lawmakers in Nebraska did not violate constitutional provisions on separation of church and state by hiring a chaplain.

The rivalry between House and Senate revealed itself in a supplication by Rep. John Maynard, a Democrat from St. Clair Shores: "give us wisdom and the patience to correct the Senate's work."

One prayer in the House included an apology for the Legislature's past work. "Sometimes we try to put our will before yours, and we are sorry that we have not first consulted you in running our state and nation," intoned Rep. Margaret O'Connor, Republican of Ann Arbor.

Henry, one of the most regular prayer-givers in the Senate and the lawmaker who sought the reminder of bipartisanship from on high, once offered thanks that the Senate completed its business the previous evening "with a minimum of acrimony."

House Clerk William Ryan, a legislative veteran and former speaker of the House, said there are no guidelines or limits on the prayers that can be offered. "You know if it's a really lengthy one by the number of comments afterwards," he said.

One of the briefest prayers this year was offered Feb. 28 by Rep. Tom Alley, a Democrat from West Branch, as the House neared a politically touchy vote on an income tax increase.

The supplication: "Dear Lord, please give us the courage to withstand this week." It drew cheers and applause.

Texaco Inc. files suit against gas distributor

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Texaco Inc. has filed a $25 million lawsuit against InterNorth Inc. for allegedly breaching 43 contracts to buy gas from Texaco, a major natural gas producer and supplier.

InterNorth, a nationwide natural gas distributor and formerly known as Northern Natural Gas Co., says it has been forced to cut back on its contracts with Texaco and other gas suppliers due to nationwide declines in gas consumption. InterNorth predicts a 45 percent drop in large-volume consumer sales in 1983.

Those consumers include the nitrogenous fertilizer and iron-ore industries, which "comprise a critical segment of Northern's (InterNorth's) total market," InterNorth Vice President W.J. Poehling wrote in a June 24 letter to Texaco's L.V. Stanley of Houston.

Texaco says it cannot sell the surplus gas elsewhere.

The suit was filed Thursday in Midland's 238th Texas State District Court. Texaco made Poehling's five-page letter an exhibit in the suit's petition.

Poehling said InterNorth's contracts with Texaco and other gas suppliers were based on the "basic assumption" that InterNorth's "market would continue to grow or, at the very least, would remain stable...

"Instead..., the deterioration of such markets has been rapid and shows no sign of near-term improvements," he said in the cut-back letter to Texaco. "The events leading to this collapse were wholly unforeseen and unforeseeable. That they were beyond the control of either party to the contract cannot be disputed."

Poehling said the "full risk" of market failure does not fall on Northern (InterNorth) alone."

"THE UNFORESEEABLE economic conditions currently prevailing, which neither party could prevent or overcome, makes performance of the contracts, as originally intended, commercially impracticable despite our every effort to solve these problems."

InterNorth, based in Omaha, Neb., is seeking agreements to reduce the obligations to its suppliers and "to allocate an equitable share" of its markets to them. Texaco and InterNorth have offices in Midland.

"We sincerely hope you will be able to accept this policy and work with us for our mutual best interest," Poehling said in the letter.

In response, Texaco says in its petition that InterNorth's "improperly and illegally attempts to force and coerce Texaco to agree to additional" revisions in the contract. Further, Texaco says InterNorth "has no right under any of the contracts to unilaterally modify and abrogate the terms of each contract and its obligations under each contract."

In seeking the $25 million in damages, Texaco claims it has suffered and continues to suffer loss of revenue from the cut-back sale of natural gas, condensate and natural-gas liquids.

"TEXACO IS is unable to sell to third parties the natural gas which Northern Natural (InterNorth) is obligated to take under the 43 natural-gas sales and purchase contracts," Texaco claims in its suit.

Texaco's 43 contracts range in Texas from Winkler and Pecos counties in far West Texas to the Panhandle; takes in Lea County, New Mexico; the Oklahoma Panhandle and Northwestern Oklahoma, and Southwestern and Central Kansas.

In his June 24 statement of policy, InterNorth's Poehling noted the "serious problems faced by all of us in the natural gas industry." He alluded to "the severity of the situation."

He said InterNorth has "attempted to deal with many of these problems" by "basing its efforts on fair and equitable treatment of all its gas suppliers."

Dietician: Weight loss can be fun

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Jeanne Bradford

She hates the word, because "diet means deprivation and suffering."

"Whatever you do to lose weight, you've got to do it all of your life," said Jeanne Bradford.

As the dietitian for Alamo YMCA's new Weight Management program, Ms. Bradford provides individual nutritional counseling — a new service at the Y — for those in the program.

It's no fad dieting she has planned.

"We're stressing permanent weight loss. That's our goal as opposed to fad diets that promise a 10-pound loss in a week," said the former clinical dietitian and nutrition consultant who worked in an Ohio hospital, an Arizona county health department and a Utah family health program and medical clinic.

Exercise is included because good nutrition and physical activity are something a person must combine for life to effectively stay in shape, she said.

"We're stressing something fun and enjoyable. It may be in conjunction with the Y or it may be something they can do at home, like walk. But it's something they can live with."

Participants in the three-month program receive a food plan based on their individual weight goals and eating habits.

"The first thing I do is a nutritional assessment," Ms. Bradford said. "I ask them what they ate in the last 24 hours. It's interesting how often many people go on an eating binge prior to starting a weight control program."

She determines the frequency with which foods such as milk, soft drinks, candy and sweets, fruits, vegetables and meats show up in the individual's eating pattern. Also, habits such as snacking, eating out and piling on seconds are studied.

During the following week, the participant keeps track of food intake and meets again with Ms. Bradford. At that time, she recommends ways to cut down on amounts of concentrated sugars and fats and increase the amount of fiber in the diet.

All of the plans are developed with the least possible change in the person's eating habits.

"I try to make the minimal changes in their diet," she said. "The less changes, the more they can succeed. Diet means deprivation and suffering. And it usually means a time frame like two weeks or whatever. I tell them, 'It's taken you this many years to put it on — it's going to take more time to get it off.' "

Once the person is established in their new eating and exercising program, three behavioral counseling sessions are held to reduce urges to eat, teach stress management techniques and encourage changes in habitual eating patterns. Also weekly education series and support group sessions are held. Topics include choosing what you eat, managing your thinking, origins of obesity and fad diets, coping with emotions, eating for a healthy heart, rewarding yourself, servicing sizes and calories, working with other people, managing special situations, using imagery — managing self image, mathematics of weight loss and taking charge of your weight.

"Fad diets like the high protein, low-carbohydrate and the liquid diet are really bad news," Ms. Bradford said. "They are good only for setting a person up for failure. When someone repeatedly goes through these fad diets and fails, they keep failing."

One way to eliminate those failures is to stress limits, she said. "It is a matter of limiting (calories). It's deciding where you want to spend your fat limits."

Because the program is designed for an individual's specific needs, it is open to the obese as well as those who may be only a few pounds heavy but wish to begin good eating habits.

"I'd rather see someone now at 10 pounds over than later at 40 or 50," she said.

Dietician lost weight by controlling diet

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Alamo YMCA's new dietitian Jeanne Bradford said she was 40 pounds heavier about four or five years ago.

She lost the weight in a period of eight months. By controlling her diet — although allowing for small splurges from time to time — she has maintained her ideal weight goal.

Ms. Bradford, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees in food and nutrition, has been employed as a dietitian or nutrition consultant for various hospitals and clinics since 1976. Now at the YMCA to provide nutritional counseling for participants in the Weight Management program, she shared her opinions on some of the current dieting trends:

— High protein-low carbohydrate diets: "In the short run it works very well. The high protein diet causes water weight loss. The problem is the brain only uses carbohydrates to function. After a period of time, a person can get headaches and other symptoms. The body fat doesn't change any even though you may lose water weight. You may lose lean muscle tissue, too, but the body fat will be the same." Persons who go on the high protein diet, binge, get back on, binge, etc., will have more body fat than others, she added.

— Why people are overweight: "The number one reason most people are overweight is they have too much fat (in foods they eat). Fifty percent of the calories they eat are from fat." She recommended draining grease from meats and avoiding bologna, bacon, sausage and whole milk and cutting down on butter, margarine and sour cream. "On a pizza, the cheese and meat are the bad parts," she said, adding she recommends six servings of bread a day. "In the long run, it's really more livable and more realistic."

— Cravings and addictions to specific foods, such as chocolate: "You need to get to the point where you're in control. People really get to where they're dependent on certain foods. If that's the case, I'll tell them to try cold turkey for awhile. But if they can have one cookie a day, that's fine."

— Weighing: "I tell people to weigh themselves every day when they've achieved the weight they want. Anytime they get above the three-pound danger zone, they should go back on. If they are dieting, they should only weigh themselves once a week. Always weigh yourself the first thing in the morning."

— Drinking large quantities of water: "If you're thirsty, you ought to drink. If you're not, you shouldn't. It's important you're not dehydrated to have your body function properly. But I think your body lets you know whether you need it or not."

— Drinking diet soft drinks: "They're OK. But if it's something you're getting addicted to, you need to look at it again."

— Caffeine — "Caffeine lowers blood sugar and increases the appetite. I've heard women say, 'I'll skip lunch and have a Tab instead.' By dinner, they're famished. The only way to get rid of that famished feeling is to eat, and they'll overeat at dinner."

— Which meats are best to eat: "The more liquid fat is at room temperature, the less harmful." She recommended fish, chicken and eggs as a source of protein rather than beef. But she cautions dieters to be wary of fried fish and chicken.

— Exercise: "I think exercise is a cure for obesity, but food controls it. Your body can only burn off fat at a rate of about two pounds a week — three pounds if you're really working out. You may lose more, but it won't by just body fat." Marathon runners are thin, she said for example, but if any person was willing to commit that much time to exercise, weight loss would be quick. "If you're willing to put that much time and effort (into working out), no problem (losing weight). But most people aren't."

— Stapling stomachs and wiring mouths — "Normally, the stomach holds one quart. (People who have these procedures done) are limited and usually cut down to one cup or less. It's important to eat really nutritional foods but most people don't. They'll eat potato chips or something. If they could (stick to nutritional foods), they wouldn't have had (the procedure) done in the first place."

"The bottom line is there is no magic in weight control," Ms. Bradford said. "Whatever you do to lose weight, you've got to do it all of your life."

Texaco Inc. files suit against gas distributor

"In spite of these efforts, we continue to experience severe loss of gas sales in our market areas."

Poehling said the company's field purchases in 1981 was 820 billion cubic feet (Bcf), dropped to 740 Bcf in 1982 and may decline to an estimated 630 Bcf in 1983.

Total annual production from InterNorth's various suppliers is estimated at 1.2 Trillion cubic feet (Tcf), while the market requirements is 0.6 Tcf or 50 percent of the available supplies, Poehling said.

HE ATTRIBUTED the decline in field production rates to:

—Price-induced consumer energy conservation.

—Foreign commodity competition in the nitrogenous fertilizer industry.

—Warmer-than-normal weather in the 1982-83 heating season, which is InterNorth's "primary demand season." "This 14 percent warmer-than-normal heating season was the warmest in the past 22 years on Northern's system," he said.

—Severe national economic recession. The recession has idled or destroyed a significant portion of InterNorth's industrial market base and has caused serious operating difficulties in agricultural-based businesses.

—The decline in crude oil prices and associated effects on the price of competitive residual fuels in InterNorth's marketplaces.

—Accelerated development by producers on acreage contracted prior to 1982.

"These factors have placed Northern, and nearly all pipeline companies, in a position where we are now subject to supply contracts requiring that we purchase or pay for substantially more gas than our markets can consume," Poehling said.

He said InterNorth expects the "excess of deliverability" to last until 1985 "at the earliest."

IN THE FIVE—PAGE letter Poehling said it has suspended new gas acquisition activities and other means "to alleviate this problem."

While it cuts back on gas, Poehling said InterNorth's gas-production plan has been and will continue to be "the equitable production rates" from InterNorth's supply sources. Those include Offshore, Anadarko Basin, Permian Basin, Rocky Mountains and Canada.

"This is a monumental task," said Poehling, "given the fact that we must deal with over 4,000 contracts covering production from over 10,000 wells. In these times of restricted markets, we believe it is mandatory to see that all producers are treated as fairly as possible."

InterNorth has had "limited success" in its "aggressive attempts" to re-negotiate take-or-pay clauses in contracts over the past nine months.

"This letter," Poehling wrote in his appeal, "is being sent to you...in a spirit of cooperation in dealing with problems facing our industry. We appreciate all of your past cooperative efforts and understanding in these difficult times."

Habib replaced as Middle East envoy

Another administration official who spoke at the White House said the United States would "try harder," call for more flexibility in the region, and install "new faces."

"I'm not standing here saying there is a watershed event happening here. There is not," he said.

Nicholas Veliotis, the assistant secretary of state for the Middle East, said that Secretary of State George P. Shultz "is a strong advocate of Bud McFarlane replacing Phil Habib."

McFarlane said he would begin "putting together our team." He and Habib stood near Reagan and Gemayel when Reagan announced the shift. Morris Draper, Habib's deputy, was absent.

"It is incumbent on the United States to do everything possible that we can to bring peace to this troubled area first in Lebanon and then to look forward to the broader peace process," McFarlane said, adding that the United States will "be doing what we can to relieve the long history of suffering and tragedy in Lebanon."

McFarlane, 45, resigned from the U.S. Marine Corps in 1979 after a 24-year military career. Before becoming a presidential aide, he was a counselor at the State Department.

He has also served on the staff of the Senate Armed Services Committee and was an was an assistant to Henry Kissinger and Brent Scowcroft at the National Security Council from 1973 to 1975.

Lucas charged with fifth Texas slaying

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, a wandering handyman who claims to have killed about 100 women in 16 states, has been charged in a fifth Texas slaying.

Lucas, 46, faces arraignment Aug. 2 on his indictment in the death of an unidentified woman in Williamson County, Sheriff Jack Boutwell said Thursday.

The indictment returned last week alleges Lucas strangled the woman, whose body was found Oct. 31, 1979 in a ditch along Interstate 35 north of this Central Texas town. The woman was believed to be in her mid-20s.

Lucas, who remains jailed under $1 million bond in Montague, told investigators he picked up the woman as a hitchiker in Oklahoma City.

Meanwhile, Dallas County sheriff's investigators have eliminated Lucas as a suspect in a 1982 slaying, department spokesman Jim Ewell said Thursday.

Detective Bill Mayes, after questioning Lucas, concluded that he was not involved in the killing of Carol Blanchard of DeSoto.

The woman's upper torso was found floating in the Trinity River south of Dallas last Sept. 7.

The interview confirmed the negative results of comparisons of Lucas' fingerprints with those found on an ice chest near the woman's torso, Ewell said.

"What Lucas was talking about did not match up" with details known about the killing, he said.

A spokeswoman for the Blairstown, N.J., police department said plans had been put off to question Lucas about the 1982 killing of a teen-age girl because investigators were told.

Lawyer accuses Mattox of having 'vendetta'

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston lawyer who accused Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox of making a threat has a "personal vendetta" against Mattox, the attorney general's press secretary said Friday.

"This office has had to deal with other attorneys because of the irresponsible actions of" Thomas J. McDade, a partner in the Houston firm of Fulbright & Jaworski, said Mattox aide Elna Christopher.

McDade on Thursday accused Mattox of threatening to put the Houston law firm out of the bond business unless McDade stopped trying to get a deposition from Mattox' sister.

The heated exchange was the latest skirmish in a legal battle over some disputed oil leases in South Texas on ranchland owned by oilman Clinton Manges, who has sued Mobil for $1.7 billion.

McDade's firm represents Mobil in the lawsuit. Mattox has intervened on behalf of Manges, because the state owns some of the mineral rights to the land and stands to gain up to $800 million in royalties if Manges wins in court.

Mattox' sister is involved apparently because of revelations last month that Mattox lent his own campaign $125,000 soon after his brother and sister borrowed that amount from a Seattle bank that had made major loans to Manges.

Mattox has denied the implication that he failed to properly report the source of the $125,000, and said it was part of Mobil's effort to discredit him because of his part in the Manges oil lease lawsuit.

Other complications include the fact that Manges donated $50,000 to Mattox' campaign last year, and Mattox, Manges and the judge in the lawsuit against Mobil held a meeting last year on Manges' Duval County ranch.

Mattox has acknowleged the meeting, but denied the Mobil case was discussed.

Nevertheless, Mobil wants to have that judge, Ruben Garcia, removed from the case.

Ms. Christopher said Friday that McDade had told Mattox if the attorney general would help Mobil get the case switched to another judge, McDade would agree to stop seeking depositions from Mattox' relatives.

Mattox said no deal and now, "McDade has a personal vendetta against Jim," said Ms. Christopher.

Mobil attorneys say they want to question Ms. Mattox in connection with their efforts to disqualify Garcia.

Apprehension of aliens up from year ago, paper says

HOUSTON (AP) — Apprehension of illegal aliens crossing from Mexico into the U.S. is up 46 percent from a year ago, a newspaper survey says. And American authorities say economic problems south of the border are prompting more Mexicans to try to get into the United States.

The Houston Chronicle reported Friday that officers from the 10 Border Patrol areas in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California apprehended 604,070 illegal aliens in the first six months of 1983, compared with 411,365 in the same time a year ago.

"It's the (Mexican) economy. It's in such bad shape," Donald Coe, assistant chief of the Del Rio Border Patrol sector, said. "They're (the aliens) just looking for a better way of life," added Joe Garza, deputy chief of the Laredo, Texas sector.

The 45 percent unemployment rate among adult males in Ciudad Jaurez, Mexico, is a key reason for the boost in the number of aliens, according to Bert Avila, an intelligence officer in adjacent El Paso, Texas. Wages for aliens in El Paso range from $10 to $25 per day, compared with just $4 on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, he said.

In California, where the busy Chula Vista sector reported 253,330 aliens caught, compared with 172,230 a year ago — up 47 percent, apprehensions are reaching the saturation point for 500 Border Patrol agents, Steve Niblet, deputy western regional chief, said.

"We're apprehending as many as we can," he said.

Authorities say most illegal aliens try to cross at major border cities like Tijuana and Juarez because detection is more difficult. "They can mingle in with the residents," Robert Scharr, deputy chief of the Border Patrol in Marfa said. Most of those caught by agents from Chula Vista were within 12 miles of Tijuana, authorities said.

Garza said of aliens caught in the Laredo area this week, 19 said they left Mexico because they were unemployed, 10 were looking for better jobs, 11 blamed crop failures and one said he was fleeing from some kind of violence.

In the Del Rio area, the number of aliens seized in the first six months of the year more than doubled from the same 1982 period to 46,118, the Chronicle said.

In the area from Brownsville to near Laredo, agents reported a 92 percent increase.

Resolution has forged signature

HOUSTON (AP) — The FBI is getting a congratulatory note from Harris County marking the federal agency's anniversary next week but one signature is missing and another is forged.

Judge Jon Lindsay's office produced a resolution of praise and best wishes "for continued success in its admirable crime fighting endeavors."

Commissioner Bob Eckels refused to sign the resolution because apparently Eckels and the FBI had met before. Based on an FBI investigation, he was indicted in April 1980 on mail fraud charges. He subsequently was acquitted.

And the forgery on the resolution? Judge Lindsay is vacationing this week and an aide signed it.

Man throws paint on publisher

PAMPA (AP) — A judge has ordered 90 days of psychiatric counseling for a man who threw red paint on the publisher of the Pampa Daily News.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said during David L. Smith's mental competency hearing Wednesday that the counseling was equivalent to probation. His father, the Rev. M.B. Smith, had sought to have his son committed to the state mental hospital at Vernon for 90 days.

Smith walked into the office of publisher Louise Fletcher July 13 and threw the paint on her, the desk and office because according to a letter written by Smith the newspaper "smeared" him when it ran a story about his attempt to publish the weekly Miami (Texas) Chief. The paper failed after two editions.

DA forgets to subpoena witnesses

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A county judge dismissed charges against three people accused of misdemeanor crimes after the district attorney's office forgot to subpoena witnesses to appear for trial.

County Court-at-Law Judge Keith Burris dismissed two driving-while-intoxicated cases and another case for unlawfully carrying a weapon after prosecutors announced they were not ready for trial.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Terry McDonald, who oversees misdemeanor cases, confirmed Thursday that the subpoenas were not issued.

"Whether that was due to a lack of communication between the prosecutors and the clerks is unclear," McDonald said. "Apparently, Keith is trying to make a point. The message he sent was like the shot heard around the world."

Smuggled parrots carry disease

EL PASO (AP) — Parrots smuggled across the Mexican border into the United States could be disease-ridden, endangering poultry businesses and exotic birds in the Southwest, El Paso authorities say.

El Paso City-County Board of Health member James Koschmann, a veterinarian, said smuggled parrots are flooding into this border city.

Alpine hospital misplaces 34 babies' birth certificates

ALPINE (AP) — At least 34 babies born the last five years at Big Bend Memorial Hospital had no birth certificates issued, say hospital authorities who recently discovered the filing error.

"We didn't even know it was going on," said business manager Evan Moore, who found 34 birth certificate applications in the back of hospital file cabinets.

Four of the tardy applications dated to 1978, and weren't unearthed until the parents of an Alpine child enrolling in kindergarten told authorities they never had received a birth certificate. The mishap was traced to the hospital.

To enroll in school, most states such as Texas require proof of a birth certificate — which usually is sent by the hospital to county officials shortly after a baby's birth. It is recorded and then sent to the parents.

After news of the hospital boo-boo surfaced last month in this West Texas ranching community of 5,500, "everybody in town called. They'd say, 'Hey, where's my birth certificate,' and I'd tell them it unfortunately was just an office oversight," Moore said.

Parents "found out they didn't have a certificate, and that it was the hospital's fault," he said. "We do give away complimentary birth certificates with the baby's footprint when they leave the hospital, but those aren't the real thing."

Blame was placed on three office clerks who formerly worked at the 48-bed Brewster County hospital and were lax in their filing procedures. The applications "fell through the cracks," Moore said.

The problem now has been corrected and most now have their birth certificates, he said. Only one family had to file for a delayed certificate because the hospital foul-up meant their application exceeded the four-year state statute of limitations on such documents, Moore said.

Others were thankful that of the estimated 1,500 babies born the last five years in the Big Bend Country's largest hospital, more weren't undocumented.

Tracing down the remaining undocumented babies, some of whom were born to mothers who came to Alpine from the neighboring Mexican state of Chihuahua, could take forever because the families "could be a million miles away," noted Alpine Avalanche news editor Bob Dillard.

Authorities in Brewster County, Texas' largest county and slightly larger than Connecticut and Rhode Island combined, earlier this month ordered the hospital to change its birth certificate filing procedures.

Hospital administrator Tom Santry said responsibility for filling out and sending birth certificates to county authorities, who then send it to the state capital, would be transferred to the medical records section, "where it should have been all along."

At some point, most of the parents with infants who lacked birth certificates eventually would have discovered the error because "you've got to have a birth certificate to get a passport or to get into school," Moore said.

Still, the hospital was embarrassed because of the inconvenience it caused parents.

Border patrol captures 47 aliens packed into back of rental truck

EL PASO (AP) — Smuggling is "a dirty business," a Border Patrol agent said after the capture of 47 illegal aliens packed in the back of a rental truck near the New Mexico-Texas border.

"The inhumane conditions these smugglers subject the people to when they transport them...is really a terrible thing. They only transport them for one reason — money." El Paso Border Patrol sector official Dale Cozart said.

Forty-seven Mexican aliens and a Chihuahua City man believed to be responsible for smuggling the group into the U.S. were apprehended Wednesday near Anthony, N.M., about 20 miles north of El Paso.

Jose Alderete Dozal, 29, was charged Thursday with aiding and abetting the smuggling of aliens. Alderete Dozal was being held Thursday at the El Paso County Jail on $20,000 bond.

The group, believed to be heading for migrant farm work in Wilson, N.C., was packed in the rear of a 7-foot-by-12-foot truck — "that's less than two square feet per person," Cozart said.

The rental truck had no rear ventilation and no sanitation facilities. The van was found disabled with engine failure beside the Anthony rest stop. About two dozen Mexicans were milling around the truck, and authorities tracked down the remaining aliens on foot.

Abducted woman freed unharmed

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A woman who had been abducted at gunpoint in Texas was freed unharmed three days later after sheriff's deputies tackled a man as he dragged her into a house, officials said.

The three deputies were bitten several times each while wrestling with the man Thursday afternoon, said Caddo Parish Deputy Richard Dunn.

He said Charles Barry Smith, 46, was held on $60,000 bond after being booked as a fugitive from Texas, where he is wanted on charges of burglary, aggravated assault and aggravated kidnapping.

Donna Youngblood had been abducted Monday from her home in Fort Worth, Dunn said.

Rose Kennedy celebrates birthday

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Rose Kennedy, matriarch of the sprawling Kennedy clan, celebrated her 93rd birthday with family members Friday at her seaside summer home.

A public celebration is planned for Sunday with a special ceremony on the steps of Mrs. Kennedy's home at the Kennedy compound. At the ceremony, Mrs. Kennedy's children Eunice Shriver and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., are to announce a major new program for elderly mentally retarded people at the St. Colletta School in Jefferson, Wis.

Mrs. Kennedy's eldest daughter, Rosemary, 64, is retarded and has been at St. Coletta School for 35 years.

The gift "will establish an exemplary program that challenges elderly mentally retarded persons with educational, social, recreational and spiritual opportunities," the senator said.

Charity will provide oil to poor

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Associated Catholic Charities announced Friday a new program that will provide 1 million gallons of heating oil at reduced cost to low-income Baltimore residents this winter.

Archbishop William Borders said Catholic Charities Oil will begin selling heating oil next week to qualifying families at 88 cents per gallon — well below the local average of $1.10 per gallon.

Harold Smith, director of Catholic Charities, said the oil would be distributed in a non-denominational program based on need and is expected to serve about 3,200 city residents, nearly one-fourth of the more than 12,000 residents who received some kind of fuel assistance last winter.

Year-old cat shot with arrow

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Animal shelter officials have offered a $200 reward for information leading them to the person who shot an arrow through a year-old cat.

The cat, nicknamed Arrow by shelter workers, was found in Lowell on July 7 with a 2½-foot target arrow protruding from its torso. The arrow missed its lungs and heart.

Al Davidson, director of the Lowell Humane Society, said Thursday that after a report of Arrow's plight appeared in a Boston newspaper, the shelter received dozens of calls from people interested in acquiring the animal.

Freight trains collide head on

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two slow-moving freight trains crashed head-on at an intersection, spilling diesel fuel and petroleum cargoes and slightly injuring five crew members, a railroad spokesman said Friday.

Tony Adams of Southern Pacific, which owned both trains, said the trains collided Thursday in Watts. There was no fire, despite the diesel fuel that leaked from one engine. Cargoes of anti-freeze and lubrication oil leaked from two tank cars, he said.

No damageestimate was available; none of the crew was hospitalized.

Malcolm X memorial planned

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Vacant lots are being cleaned in the first phase of construction of a memorial to slain black activist Malcolm X, who was born in Omaha.

The city's Comprehensive Employment and Training Agency is supplying the workers, said Rowena Moore, head of the Malcolm X Memorial Foundation.

The first phase of construction will include landscaping, dedication of the site and putting up a historical marker, Miss Moore said. The goal is to have the first phase complete by May 19, the birthdate of Malcolm X.

Anti-Castro group head arrested

MIAMI (AP) — The alleged mastermind of the anti-Castro organization Omega 7 was arrested Friday, culminating a lengthy investigation into slayings and bombings claimed by the terrorist group.

Eduardo Arocena, 40, was captured by FBI agents in Miami, said spokesman Dennis Erich.

Arocena had been sought on charges of interstate transportation of explosives in connection with the March 25, 1980, attempt on the life of Cuba's ambassador to the United Nations, Raul Roa-Kouri.

Arocena had vanished in October 1982 after an arrest warrant was issued for him. An FBI affidavit said he and four associates had tried to kill Roa by planting a bomb in his car.

In previous interviews, Arocena denied any knowledge of the Cuban-exile organization.

Omega 7 claimed responsibility for the September 1980 slaying in New York City of Cuban U.N. mission attache Feliz Garcia Rodriguez and the November 1979 murder of Eulalio Negrin, a member of the Committee of 75, an exile group which supported dialogue with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

The terrorist group also has claimed responsibility, in telephone calls to news organizations, for more than 20 bombings of various diplomatic offices and newspapers.

The seat of the organization was the Union City-Weehawken area of New Jersey, where about 30 revolutionary groups had been aligned under an umbrella organization known in English as the Cuban Bloc.

The first recorded Omega 7 attack was Feb. 1, 1975, when a bomb was placed at the Venezuelan mission to the United Nations. Most of the attacks between 1975 and 1980 were in the New York area but later the terrorism shifted to Miami. Among the latest Omega 7 activities was the setting of three of bombs in Miami on Jan. 11, but one was dismantled by police.

Besides attacks on Cuban, Venezuelan, Mexican and Nicaraguan government offices, Omega 7 also said it was responsible for bombings of a banquet hall in Elizabeth, N.J., 1975; a freighter docked at Elizabeth, 1976; a Union City, N.J., store that sent medical supplies to Cuba, 1977; a New York sporting goods store protest the appearance of boxers from Cuba at Madison Square Garden, 1978; El Diaro La Prensa newspaper office in New York, 1978; a Lincoln Center hall in protest of the appearance of a Cuban orchestra, 1978; and a Trans World Airlines terminal at New York's Kennedy Airport, 1979.

Other bombings that callers said were the responsibility of Omega 7 include: An Aeroflot ticket office in New York, 1980; American Airways Charters in Miami, which arranged charters to Cuba, 1980; Trans Cuba Inc., a firm that arranged shipments to Cuba, 1982; La Hispana Interamerican Pharmacy in Miami, 1982; and Paradise International Inc. Travel Agency in Miami, January 1983.

Bombs twice were planted at the Replica Magazine office in Miami in 1981 and once each in 1982 and 1983. The Padron Cigar Factory in Miami was the victim of Omega 7 bombings once in 1980 and once in 1983, while the Padron Cigar Shop was hit in 1982.

Colorado's Hart calls off filibuster against MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart, a Democratic presidential contender, called off his two-week-old filibuster against the MX missile Friday, setting up a conclusive Senate vote on the powerful new intercontinental weapon next Tuesday.

Although the Senate is almost certain to give President Reagan a victory on the MX next week, Hart said he and a small group of Democratic liberals will re-open the fight in September.

"I think you will see the debate intensifying rather than diminishing," said the Colorado Democrat, following disclosure of an agreement among Senate leaders, and MX foes and supporters, on how to conclude an acerbic legislative battle which began July 11.

Hart has argued that Reagan's plan to install 100 MX missiles in existing underground silos was impractical because they could be destroyed by Russian missiles before the United States had decided to launch them.

Over and over, Hart complained that Reagan's allies in the Senate refused to respond to his criticism of the MX, and said Friday he had been unable to force them to open debate on the issue.

"There is no way to get anybody to talk," he said.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and Hart's chief adversary, disagreed. "I think we stated our case clearly," Tower said.

He predicted the outcome of Tuesday's MX vote would be close to a similar test in May when the Senate voted 59-39 to release funds for flight-testing the MX.

"There could be a little slippage, but not enough to change the outcome," Tower said.

Hart's anti-MX amendments are attached to a $200 billion defense authorization bill which is expected to be approved Tuesday in the Senate.

On a similar fight on the same legislation earlier this week, the House voted 220-207 to build and deploy the MX in existing Minuteman missile silos in Nebraska and Wyoming.

The House also tied some strings to MX production by permitting 21 instead of 27 missiles in the initial batch to be installed by 1989, and requiring development of a smaller Midgetman missile with one warhead.

The agreement for the Tuesday Senate vote followed two days of delicate negotiations among Baker, Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd Jr., Tower, Hart and other MX opponents.

Smugglers sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Three Irishmen and an American, convicted in May of plotting to smuggle weapons to the Irish Republican Army, were sentenced Friday to jail terms ranging from two to seven years.

U.S. District Judge Charles P. Sifton meted out what he described as "the lowest, most lenient" sentences he could give.

Eamon Meehan, 34; American Andrew Duggan, 49; and Gabriel Megahey, 40, were each convicted on six counts of conspiracy and illegal weapons transportation. They had faced up to 10 years in jail but Sifton sentenced Meehan and Duggan to three years each and Megahey, the American leader of the Provisional IRA, to seven years.

Colm Meehan, 36, Eamon's brother, was found guilty on five lesser charges and received a two-year jail term.

EPA notifies cities to begin car inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicago, Houston, Philadelphia and a dozen other urban areas face construction bans and the loss of millions of dollars in federal grants because they failed to require motorists to have their auto exhausts checked.

The Environmental Protection Agency notified cities in 11 states Thursday that they face the loss of the money to run air quality programs and bans on certain factory construction unless they drop their opposition to the tailpipe inspections.

The states are Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin.

The notice was the latest move in a long-running battle over the controversial inspections, which are required in cities with serious auto pollution problems.

Under the Clean Air Act, areas which were unable to meet national health standards for carbon monoxide and ozone — two auto-caused pollutants — could get five-year extensions in the deadlines if they adopted inspection programs.

So far, 20 urban areas in 15 states have begun implementing the inspection programs, but they have faced strong opposition almost everywhere.

Agency officials said they expected many of the holdouts will relent and begin implementing programs before any sanctions are imposed. The states were given 45 days to present evidence that they were moving to put the inspections in place.

In Pennsylvania and Maryland, for example, they said the state legislatures had already voted to begin inspection programs and the plans only needed final EPA approval.

But officials said other states — Illinois, Michigan and Texas — had shown little inclination to approve the inspection programs. They said any sanctions which are adopted would not come for about three months.

EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus last month abandoned a policy of former Administrator Anne M. Burford under which 213 counties in 33 states were facing possible sanctions. These were areas the EPA said had failed to meet a Dec. 31, 1982.

Bearded woman protests

SEATTLE (AP) — A 23-year-old woman says she was fired from her job as a YMCA front desk clerk because she has a wispy black beard, but YMCA officials say her work was below standard and she quit.

"Facial hair has nothing to do with what's inside a person," Beverly Bonnell said Wednesday.

Ms. Bonnell's work evaluation lists "excessive hair growth" as a flaw in her work performance, and supervisor Vivian Katagion said the beard was "unacceptable" to the YMCA.

Ms. Katagion also said Ms. Bonnell was not fired, but quit, and that her work was below standard.

Doctors loaned money to practice in rural towns

SALISBURY, N.H. (AP) — A regional hospital is offering interest-free loans and other perks to doctors who set up private practices in rural towns in an effort to shine up a tarnished image and increase referrals from outlying areas.

Franklin Regional Hospital's image was hurt in the mid-1970s by a series of investigations exposing poor medical practices, hospital administrator Sam Melkonian said in recent interviews.

The problem arose seven years ago, when consultants hired by the hospital reported that three patients had died from prostate surgery in which an obsolete technique was used instead of a newer, safer one, Melkonian said.

Although the questionable treatment has been stopped, bad publicity has kept patients away, the administrator said, so Franklin decided to repair its reputation by setting up private practices for young doctors who had been working at the hospital because they didn't have the funds to strike out on their own.

Since the program began after the investigation it has put 11 doctors in business, and nine still have practices in the area, Melkonian said, adding that he knew of no other hospital with a program as extensive as Franklin's.

Melkonian hopes that once the doctors are trusted by their patients, the community will see that the hospital has changed.

New doctors are often shackled by medical school debts and are forced to join an established practice rather than set up their own office in an area without one, the administrator said.

"We set them up totally," he said. "Doctors coming into a new community are no different than any other young man or woman coming out of school. People expect them to be ready-made businessmen, but they aren't."

One beneficiary is Dr. Carey Rodd, who opened a family practice in Salisbury on July 5. Until then, Salisbury and the surrounding towns of Andover, Webster and Boscawen had had no doctor.

Rodd not only makes house calls, he'll accept a chicken or a roofing job in payment if his patients don't have cash.

"It's very frightening. It is not just hanging a shingle on your door and opening up for business," he said. "You have to view it as a business or you could lose your shirt."

Besides loaning money for equipment — which Rodd is buying secondhand — the hospital also bought the building Rodd is renting and will pay his office expenses. It guarantees the fledgling doctors a minimum income for the first few months and helps some find secretaries and set up their accounting systems.

"Straight out of your residency you cannot afford to start a practice," Rodd said.

"A new examining table costs you the price of a car," he said. "You are supposed to have your diplomas hanging on the wall. I made my own frames."

It may cost the hospital $10,000 before his practice is established, Rodd said, but he will pay back the money as soon as he can.

In the meantime, Rodd is moonlighting in Franklin's emergency room — "I am working (there) to stay solvent," he said. Should his practice fail, he still has a one-year contract with the hospital that he could renegotiate.

Executives want end to projections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television news executives appearing before a congressional committee have been urged to stop projecting results before the polls close during election coverage.

Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News, and Reuven Frank, president of NBC News, both said, however, that they would most likely continue to project a winner from information gathered by interviewing voters leaving the polls.

The executives boasted that their projections were 100 percent accurate for gubernatorial and senatorial races in 1982.

Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., said his constituents don't like the exit-poll projections.

He said an unemployed oil worker in his district asked him: "What are you going to do to keep (the networks) from telling us who won before we vote and ripping off our right to vote?"

The practice received widespread criticism in 1980 when the three networks projected Ronald Reagan as winner of the presidential race before polls closed in the Pacific time zone.

THE BETTER HALF

"The parks aren't safe anymore! I just saw a pigeon mug a sparrow!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 24, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Latin American liberator Simon Bolivar, writer Alexandre Dumas and aviatrix Amelia Earhart were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress Lynda Carter ("Wonder Woman"), comedienne Ruth Buzzi, political activist Bella Abzug and EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus. You feel as if you have been on a roller coaster in recent months. Better slow down a bit and set some specific goals. A new alliance that gives you power could have romantic overtones. Get your financial affairs in better order and develop a more stylish look. A so-called friend tries to take advantage of your generosity. Stand up for your rights!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contradictions make it difficult for you to reach a decision today. Delay may work to your advantage. A compromise you make with a young person will benefit both of you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your optimistic outlook affects your loved ones in a favorable way. Happiness comes in small packages. Something that happens at a social event leads to funding for a private project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can change a parent's mind. Seek a support group for a family member who needs a helping hand. You have the last laugh in a debate with a neighbor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Loved one gives in to your plans today, but you may have to give an I.O.U. for next weekend. Your social life accelerates. Marriage proposals are in the air.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone you love thinks you are selfish. Work to change his/her mind. Be less open with someone you only recently met. Keep your emotions under control until romance is on solid ground.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Social connections are more important than you realize. Others will be happy to share information with you if approached in a pleasant way. Accept a child's decision. Travel should be delayed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Set your work aside for the day. Certain personal relationships are tense. A financial matter may be on your mind. To clear the air, talk frankly with mate or partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone stands ready to help you. Escapist, self-indulgent thinking should be avoided. You benefit from an older person's advice. Entertaining at home is more fun and less expensive than going out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy introducing your old and new friends to each other. Be aware that jealousy could cause a conflict. Share your ideas with someone who is working under pressure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A self-improvement project will give you new confidence. Concentrate on the rewards your self-discipline will bring. You may be pushing a loved one too hard. Let up a little.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are probably active in community affairs. Be wary of a "do-gooder." He or she could have ulterior motives involving your money! Romance is unpredictable. Get together with friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your popularity is on the rise. A romantic weekend lies ahead. Get together and socialize with someone from work. You need to emphasize the need for adaptability when refereeing family disputes.

'PBS late program catches on

NEW YORK (AP) — "PBS Latenight" was introduced 18 months ago to compete with Carson and Koppel and Letterman and the rest, and, by golly, the program seems to have caught on.

Public Broadcasting Service stations recently agreed to help finance another year of "Latenight," which began Jan. 4, 1982 with a lineup of 35 stations, not necessarily including the network's biggest and most influential.

"Actually," says Dennis Wholey, the host, "we started at zero and now we've got around 100 stations. I used to keep track of where we were, but it's gotten pleasantly out of control."

"Latenight" today serves Washington through WHMM, the Howard University station, and much of New York City from WLIW on Long Island. That means WNET in New York, the system's largest station, and Washington's WETA don't carry the program, but if Wholey is bothered by that, it doesn't show.

"The growth of the show," he says, "and the audience that we've developed — slightly under a million a night — to have put together the show we have, with such a small staff, is very exciting."

"PBS Latenight" is broadcast each night from WTVS, the PBS station in Detroit, and if that isn't public television, nothing really is. "I think the people like that," Wholey says. "There's none of the glitter of New York or Hollywood.

"THE SHOW was created for the second-shift worker — the hospital nurse, the student, older folks — and," he says, "we've kept it that way. Most of the time, I've got a sweater on, we're sitting in front of a brick wall, two people in conversation, no notes.

"I think that works," Wholey says.

That doesn't mean "Latenight" will pass up Sammy Davis Jr., or John Oates from Hall & Oates, or racecar driver Dan Gurney, but mostly it is people like Madalyn Murray O'Hair, the outspoken atheist, psychologist Leo Buscaglia or automobile magnate Henry Ford III.

"The downside," says Wholey, "is that we'd certainly like to command — like Ted Koppel can on 'Nightline' — a prominent senator or government official who can comment on an important issue in the news."

Wholey says "Latenight" will invite a guest to Detroit, and pay his or her expenses, but with a budget of just under $1 million, the show sometimes is stuck with whoever, or whatever, it can get.

"ABOUT 70 percent of the people we have are brought in expressly to be on 'Latenight.' Maybe 20 percent are on tour promoting a book or something," Wholey says. "The rest just happen to be there."

Wholey carries a file on the next night's guest home with him after each show, and sometime during the day prepares for the introductory segment. "I work pretty hard, and pretty intensively, until about 9, when I get ready to go to the studio," he says. "It's really like studying for a final exam every night.

"I like to get the guest started with a brief interview," Wholey says, and let the audience take over. Viewers are encouraged to speak with the night's guest by phone, and the tactic seems to work. Ms. O'Hair, for instance, attracted about 29,000 calls, though not all of those got through, of course.

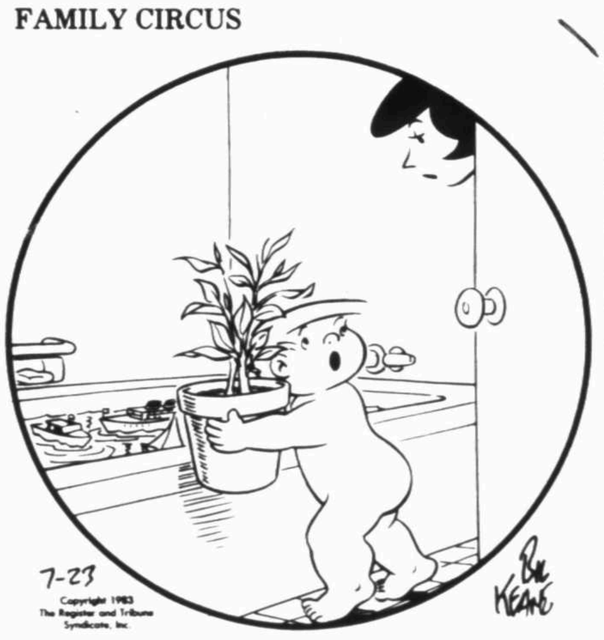

"It's not a personality show," Wholey says. "It's not my show. I just try to get the guest rolling, and the quality of phone calls that come in is amazing. Something's happening that is right. People call in and say they're getting information that has had a dramatic influence on their lives.

world in brief

Band members hurt in collision

GAU-BICKELHEIM, West Germany (AP) — A bus carrying a brass band from Wales collided with a car and tipped over, injuring 39 people, West German police said Friday.

The band was going to Ettlingen, near Karlsruhe, on Thursday to give a performance when the crash occurred.

All the injured were Britons, 17 of them seriously hurt, a police spokesman said. The driver of the car was not hurt, police said.

51-year-old gives birth

KEELUNG, Taiwan (AP) — A 51-year-old woman gave birth Friday to her first child, whose father immediately named the boy "Ta-chi," Chinese for "big accomplishment," a spokesman at Keelung Navy Hospital reported.

The baby, who weighed 7-pounds, 4-ounces, was delivered by Caesarean section. The mother, Chu Tsai-yun, and child, were reported in good condition.

Climbers fall to their deaths

PONTRESINA, Switzerland (AP) — Four climbers fell 650 feet to their deaths in southeast Switzerland, and the Swiss Air Rescue said Friday the victims probably were struck by lightning.

A thunderstorm blew up suddenly Wednesday and lasted a few minutes, said Matthias Roffler, a spokesman for the rescue squad. It was "highly probable" lightning bolts struck the climbers, he said, adding there were no witnesses to the fall.

Motorist shoots police chief

LANDAU, West Germany (AP) — A Bavarian motorist, who was taken off the road on suspicion of drunken driving Friday, returned to the police station and fired four shots at the police chief before killing himself, police said.

The 55-year-old chief, shot in the abdomen, was hospitalized in serious condition, police said.

A police patrol stopped the 42-year-old driver in the early hours for a routine check and took him to the Landau police station for a blood-alcohol test, police said.

Egypt late with repayment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt has failed to make the latest payment on a $2.1 billion debt to the United States but the matter is under discussion and payment is expected soon, U.S. officials said Friday.

John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, confirmed reports that no payment has been forthcoming on the $30.2 million installment due on June 15.

Marines, sailor wounded in barrage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Militiamen rocketed Beirut airport, an army boot camp and a score of other locations from their mountain strongholds Friday, killing 23 Lebanese and wounding 65 other people, including two U.S. Marines and a sailor, officials said.

Eleven Israeli soldiers also were wounded when a bomb blew up as their patrol drove up a road in the mountain town of Aley, the Tel Aviv command said. The upsurge in violence coincided with Israel's plan to withdraw its troops to safer positions in southern Lebanon.

The Lebanese army command said the barrage came from the hills overlooking the airport where Christian and Druse militiamen have been battling with artillery for three days. An Israeli army spokesman in Lebanon said he believed it came from a Druse position about three miles southeast of the airport.

In Washington, President Reagan announced that Philip C. Habib had resigned as his special Mideast peace envoy and would be replaced by Robert C. McFarlane, the presidential deputy for national security affairs. The announcement was made during a departure ceremony for visiting Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, who had hoped to make progress toward getting foreign troops out of his country.

The Beirut shelling began in mid-morning when 11 rockets and mortar rounds fell in a 15-minute period at the airport, where a 1,200-man U.S. Marine peacekeeping force is based. One Lebanese civilian burned to death when a rocket hit his car. Four other civilians and six Lebanese troops were wounded, police said.

U.S. Marine spokesman Maj. John Shotwell said two Marines were wounded, one in the left shoulder and one in the left hand, by flying shrapnel near the Marine mess tent. A U.S. Navy air controller was injured by flying glass in the control tower when the explosions broke windows in the airport terminal building.

The attack, which appeared to be timed to cast a cloud on Gemayel's visit to Washington, was followed by escalating clashes in the afternoon in the mountains overlooking the city as Druse and Christian militiamen dueled with heavy artillery, rockets and mortars. The Druse are members of a sect that is an offshoot of Islam.

Among the targets hit were a Lebanese army boot camp on the Beirut-Damascus highway where one draftee was killed and eight other soldiers were wounded. Also shelled was Gemayel's hometown of Bikfayeh and the Christian suburbs of Doura and Jdeideh where a total of eight civilians were killed and 13 wounded, state and private radios reported.

The shelling of the airport, viewed by the Lebanese as a symbol of their renewed stability, was the first since the multinational peacekeeping force deployed to help restore state authority in the Lebanese capital almost 11 months ago.

One rocket tore through the roof of a hangar and destroyed two private planes parked inside. About 20 cars were heavily damaged by other rounds near the airport's entrance and shells narrowly missed Lebanese army aircraft and commercial airliners.

The first rocket struck as a Cyprus Airways jetliner was preparing for take off and workers were erecting an arch of triumph to welcome Gemayel when he returns Saturday from a five-day visit to the United States.

The airport was closed for three hours by the shelling and Beirut-bound airliners were diverted to neighboring countries.

The thunderous explosions sent passengers, employees, porters and police diving for cover. Panicked motorists and taxi drivers sped away from the airport as ambulances raced into the airport with wailing sirens.

"I first heard the whistling sound and then saw a rocket come like lightning and hit that corner," a porter, 21-year-old Mohammed Taweileh, said pointing to a damaged hangar.

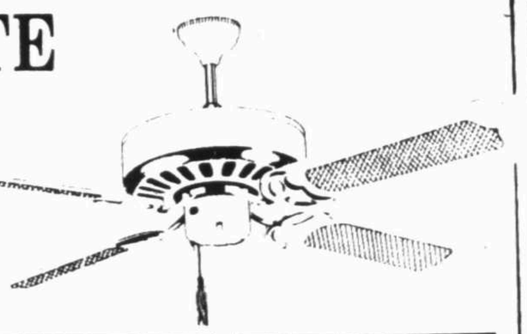

Gemayel's trip to Washington was aimed at resolving the impasse in troop withdrawal talks. The Israelis, who invaded 13 months ago to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization, have agreed to get out under a U.S.-mediated accord. But the Syrians, who have been in Lebanon since snuffing out the 1975-76 civil war, have rejected the accord and refuse to pull out.

Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. walks the corridors of the University of Kentucky's Chandler Medical Center with his son Lincoln. The governor walks about 100 yards daily while recovering from heart by-pass surgery.

Brown walks around hospital

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., recovering from heart bypass surgery and lung problems, is now walking around hospital corridors but doctors can't say when he might be released.

"He is sitting in a chair most of the day and continues to walk longer distances frequently. Yesterday he was off the respirator except for 1½ hours last night," Dr. Edward P. Todd said in a statement Thursday.

Brown, complaining of chest and back pain, was admitted to the hospital a month ago for observation. Tests showed three clogged arteries in his heart and he underwent bypass surgery June 25.

Severe lung complications developed a few days later, and he spent a week in total sedation. A tracheostomy was performed so the respirator tube that had been in Brown's nose could be implanted in his throat. That allowed him to speak and to eat solid foods.

Patrick L. Stone, information director for the University of Kentucky Medical Center, said there still was no "specific time schedule" for Brown's release from the hospital.

"Dr. Todd indicated he'd like to have at least 36 hours (in the hospital) when the governor wouldn't need the tracheostomy tube," Stone said. "It's hard to specify when that will be."

Brown's release "is a possibility this weekend, just as it's a possibility next week," Stone said. "It really depends on what point he's off the respirator completely and at what point he's able to remove the (tube)."

Denis Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — The husband of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has been appointed non-executive director and deputy chairman of a British firm dealing in car retail, waste disposal and gravel excavation, the company reported Friday.

Denis Thatcher, 68, "will be advising us on his knowledge of business and financial matters," said Ken Foreman, managing director of Attwoods. He described Thatcher's fee as "modest."

The liberal Guardian newspaper said the directorship was the fifth held by Thatcher, a wealthy, retired oil executive.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Australian rock group Men At Work opened its first U.S. concert tour by practicing new-found Southern accents on an enthusiastic, mostly teen-age crowd.

"Hi, y'all," lead singer-guitarist Colin Hay and woodwind-keyboad player Greg Ham said as the group greeted the capacity crowd of 4,400 at the Grand Ole Opry House on Thursday night.

At the start of the 1½-hour concert, security guards succeeded in keeping the crowd in their seats, except for two mini-skirted teen-age girls who jumped on stage and joined Hay as he danced a jig. The two were quickly whisked away by Opryland security guards.

The guards' efforts to keep the audience seated proved in vain when Hay asked, "Are you allowed to dance in Nashville?" and added, "As far as I'm concerned, you can dance."

Booklet teaches the art of complaining

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Older people are the most frequent victims of consumer fraud in the United States, but they complain less than any other group, and the federal government and a retirees' organization have teamed up to try to change the situation.

The Federal Trade Commission and the American Association of Retired Persons have put together a guide, "How to Write A Wrong, Complain Effectively and Get Results," to help the elderly learn their rights in the marketplace. And although the booklet is written specificially for senior citizens, the information applies to younger people as well.

Copies of "How to Write A Wrong" are available, at no charge, from AARP, P.O. Box 2400, Long Beach, Calif., 90801.

A recent study by the staff of the Senate Committee on Aging indicated that the elderly are defrauded more often than younger people. But the FTC-AARP guide says, "Those of us who are over 50 tend to complain less than any other group of consumers."

"The art of complaining is easy to learn... the first step is learning when to complain.
—FTC guide

The guide says older people may be embarrassed to admit they've been "taken." They feel they should be smart enough to avoid fraud and tend to blame themselves when they get a poor product or shoddy service.

"The art of complaining is easy to learn," the guide says, and the first step is learning when to complain.

In most cases, the sooner you act, the better. Some companies will refuse to accept responsibility if you do not complain within a certain period. When you buy something from a door-to-door salesman, you generally have three days to change your mind and cancel your purchase without losing any money.

Be as specific with your complaint as possible.

—Does the product fail to perform as advertised or promised? In what way?

—Are you complaining about the payment terms? Did you get a bill for more than you agreed to pay?

—Have you been waiting longer than you should have for delivery? Mail-order items generally should be delivered within 30 days.

Explain exactly what you want done.

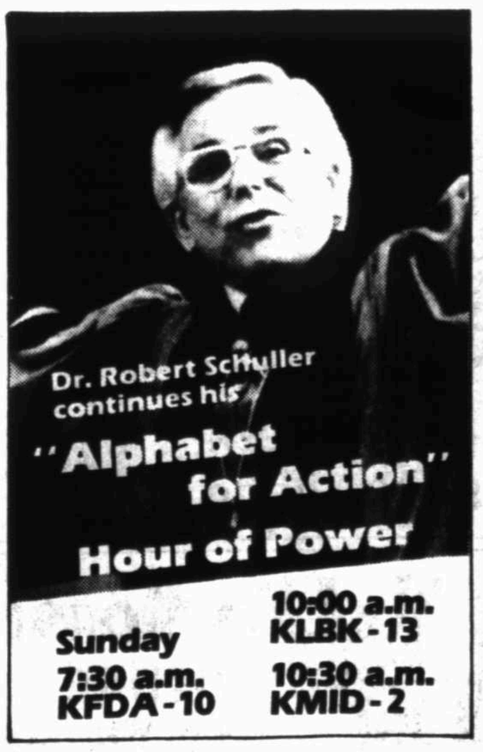

—Do you want a cash refund or will you settle for a credit slip or a gift certificate?

—Do you want a replacement? A different size or model?

—Can the item be repaired? If so, how long are you willing to wait?

Always make your complaint in writing. "More than any other reason, people are denied their consumer rights because they fail to write a record of their problem," the FTC-AARP guide says. If you get a verbal promise or a repair or a refund and the seller doesn't follow through, you have no proof that you ever made a complaint.

White House press secretary assigned to job in Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mort Allin is leaving the White House. Again.

Allin, known formally as Lyndon K. Allin although he's never been known to answer to his formal name, has been the deputy White House press secretary specializing in foreign policy since President Reagan took office.

He is a career foreign service officer who was hauled back to Washington from a post with the U.S. Information Agency in Lagos, Nigeria, shortly before Reagan's inauguration and has worked at the White House ever since, with the exception of a brief stint at the USIA's foreign press office in Washington.

Now, after 2½ White House years, and an earlier tour in the press office when Richard M. Nixon was leaving the White House in 1974, Allin is preparing for assignment to the Soviet Union.

It just so happens that Mort Allin is not a great fan of Yuri V. Andropov.

Larry Speakes, the chief deputy press secretary at the White House, took note of Allin's overall skepticism about the Soviet Union when he announced to reporters that Allin's departure was imminent.

"He's returning to USIA to prepare for assignment, of all places, to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. After a year of study, he'll be posted to Leningrad. Or St. Petersburg, as he prefers to call it. That, I presume, is better than going back to Lagos, but not much," Speakes said, managing a crack at the expense of the Russians, the Nigerians, and Allin, all in one breath.

Allin, said Speakes, is "the only conservative I've ever known to come from the state of Wisconsin."

The president took note of Allin's plans to leave the White House and Speakes offered a public reading of a letter Reagan wrote. When Speakes got to the part about the president's "deep personal regret" about Allin's decision to return to the USIA, one wag in the audience suggested that the letter was written by Charles Z. Wick, the agency's director.

Allin, tightlipped in a tightlipped White House, is not a household name for newspaper readers. He made no attempt to hide this. Indeed, he often seemed to take satisfaction in the fact that his name rarely appeared in print. He began his farewell in the White Houe press breifing room by stating, "Unaccustomed as I am to speaking in this room or anywhere else where there are reporters present..."

And then he turned serious.

Oxygen therapy may affect MS

DURHAM, N.C (AP) — High-pressure oxygen therapy now used to treat divers suffering from decompression sickness could help victims of multiple sclerosis, Duke University researchers say.

Dr. Peter Bennett, director of Duke's F.G. Hall Environmental Laboratory, said the program at Duke Medical Center could be the pilot for a national research project. He said MS is one of 16 maladies that may respond to oxygen therapy.

An earlier study sponsored by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society may have shown a moderate but temporary improvement in victims of chronic progressive MS but did not prove effective in patients with chronic stabilized disease, according to a report issued by the Undersea Medical Society Inc. of Bethesda, Md. The report recommended further study.

Pressurized oxygen is already being used to treat cyanide poisoning, carbon monoxide poisoning, gas gangrene and some crush injuries. The therapy is effective because it improves the flow of oxygen to damaged tissue, speeding healing, Bennett said.

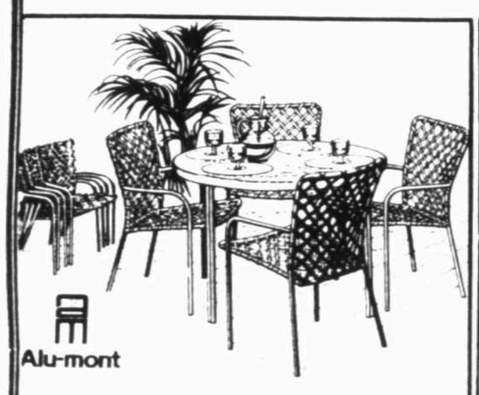

Some hospitals are already using oxygen therapy for MS patients, but Bennett said it will take a coordinated effort to determine if the disease is helped by the treatment.

"This is quite a tricky one because we can only regard this as a research operation," he said. "We, in this hospital, believe you have to do it in a responsible manner with research first to be sure the treatment is efficacious."

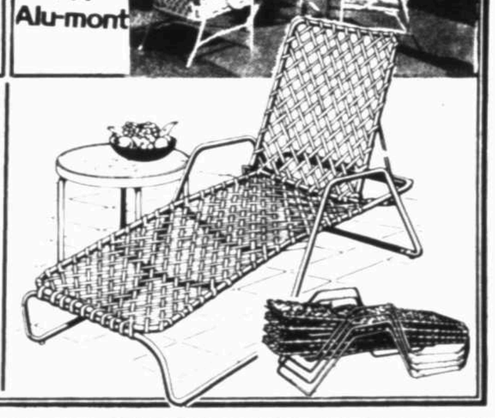

Dr. Roy Myers of the University of Maryland in Baltimore is coordinating a national study that will cover seven regions, Bennett sid.

In Duke's preliminary study, three patients with MS will receive five treatments a week for a month while three others receive conventional therapy, Bennett said. After comparing the groups for neurological changes, their roles will be reversed for another 20 treatments.

Cub shortstop A.J. Hill can't apply the tag on Jackson's LaSchelle Tarver. Tarver stole second due to catcher Don Hyman's throwing error, one of five Cub misplays Friday night.

Jackson ruins homestand opener

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Jackson must like playing Midland, whether on the Mets' home field in far away Mississippi or at Cubs Stadium. Friday night the Mets combined five-hit pitching with strong hitting and five Midland errors to post a 6-2 Texas League victory.

The victory snapped a Jackson four-game losing streak and gives the Mets five wins in six tries against the Cubs this season. The loss gives Midland a 12-17 record while Jackson improved to 12-14.

METS STARTER Phil Huffman, now 5-5 on the year, kept the Cubs at bay after giving up four hits in the second inning, including a two-run home run by Mike Anicich (No. 17 on the year). Byron Ballard came on in the eighth to finish the game.

"We needed it (the victory)," said Mets manager Bob Schaefer. "We had good pitching and any time you get good pitching you can get out of a slump. We played well tonight. We did a lot of little things well, executed well, got good pitching and good defense."

JACKSON LEFT fielder LaSchelle Tarver was nearly a one-man wrecking crew at the plate, and his 3-for-5 performance was the least of his efforts. Of the five Cub errors, he forced four with his base running speed.

In the third inning, trailing 2-0, Tarver beat out an infield single and went on to steal second (the first of three steals). Midland catcher Don Hyman tried for the pickoff but the ball hit the sliding Tarver, bounced away and he went on to third. Tarver made it 2-1 when Kevin Mitchell grounded out to shortstop A.J. Hill.

Tarver tied the game in the fifth. Leading off with a single, he went to second when pitcher Stan Kyles tried to keep him close to first and threw the ball away. Rick McMullen moved him to third and John Christensen sacrificed him home. Score: 2-2.

TWO INNINGS later he scored the eventual winning run. With one out, Tarver singled, stole second and scored on Mitchell's hit up the middle. He added insult to injury (after three more runs had scored) in the eighth when he reached first on an A.J. Hill fielding error (his second of the game), stole second and went to third on Hyman's second errant throw.

"Tarver has made things happen all year," said Schaefer. "He's a hell of a lead off hitter and a hell of a base runner. He's as good a base runner as there is in this league and his running has helped spark us."

Tarver's three stolen bases give him 34 on the year.

"We're not going to win too many ball games making five errors," said Cub manager Tommy Harmon. "We're not doing anything well now. We are getting some good pitching but we're not fielding well and we're not getting hits with people in scoring position."

KYLES, WHO gave up a leadoff home run to Mike Bishop in the eighth to end his spell on the mound, didn't give up an earned run until the seventh inning. On the night, he gave up eight hits, four runs (two earned) and two walks while strking out four.

One Midland pitcher who didn't get the job done was releiver Bill Johnson. After Bishop's homer, Johnson came in, gave up three straight singles and left. Ray Soff finally stopped the Mets, but the score was 6-2.

"He threw 115 pitches," said Harmon about Kyles. "He made the mistake of getting the ball up (Bishop's homer) and he'd made a couple of mistakes one or two innings before that. But, he did pitch well."

ADDING TO the Cubs defensive woes for the remainder of the season is the loss of third baseman Jay Loviglio Friday. The parent team Chicago Cubs decided they needed him in the windy city and sent him his traveling papers.

"Why we're here is to move people up," said Harmon. "It hurts any time you lose a player that's playing as well as he was but I'm happy for him. Somebody will just have to pick up the slack."

Loviglio, who was hitting .306 for the Cubs, will be replacing Junior Kennedy in the Chicago lineup. "I think they sent Kennedy to Des Moinis (AAA)," said Harmon. "I'm not sure."

Getting the promotion to replace Loviglio is Quad Cities' (A) infielder Otis Tramble. "He's played second, third and short, all three infield positions," said Harmon.

Tonight, Midland hosts the Mets at 7:30 in game two of the five-game series.

Elway looks good after two weeks

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — After two weeks of indoctrination at a new level of the game he long ago mastered, and of being dissected by local and national news media, John Elway looks like everything he was supposed to be when he became the National Football League's No. 1 draft choice.

He is a very poised 23-year-old. He has enormous talent. He yearns to be just one of the guys.

And he doesn't want to let people down.

"Sometimes I worry about being able to live up to everything," Elway says.

That sort of pressure might make a person want to sleep with a nightlight. Indeed, Elway's sleeping habits may be the only area left untouched by the hundreds of reporters who have descended on the Denver Broncos' training camp this month.

He's been touted as the best quarterback to come out of college since Joe Namath 18 years ago, and as a can't-miss star. Denver Coach Dan Reeves has insisted he wants to bring Elway along slowly, making sure the youngster has a firm grasp of the Broncos' sophisticated offense before seeing game action.

Elway doesn't force the issue.

"I'm not planning on starting right away," he says. "I still have so much to learn. Coach Reeves will make the decision when I play."

Reeves says the odds are against Elway starting the regular-season opener, both because of the mental load and the presence of veteran Steve DeBerg, last year's starter.

Still, teams don't like to keep million-dollar quarterbacks on the bench. Elway signed a five-year contract for a reported $5 million, and if the Broncos, who were 2-7 last season, start slowly under DeBerg, Reeves will face pressure to go with Elway sooner than he might like.

Fans who line the practice fields at the Broncos' training camp on the University of Northern Colorado campus already have endorsed Elway as their favorite; applause breaks out whenever Elway drills a difficult pass into a receiver's hands or connects for a bomb.

There are many such moments. The Stanford All-American is a young man of numerous skills.

At 6-foot-4 and 202, he is the ideal size for a quarterback, and he has the speed to elude on-rushing defenders. Reeves says Elway is "very sharp mentally."

But above all, there is the arm.

Dallas Cowboys finally punter to rest White

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys may have found their long, lost punter.

Remember the name John Warren, a strong-legged free agent from Tennessee, who has impressed Coach Tom Landry like no other rookie punter he has ever had in training camp.

Landry wants to take the punting chores away from starting quarterback Danny White.

"I want to take it (punting) off Danny's hands if I can," said Landry.

White was knocked out in the National Conference title game loss to Washington in January and was not available for punting duty in the second half. Luckily for the Cowboys they didn't have to punt.

"Warren has tremendous hang time," Landry said Friday. "He hangs it over five seconds a number of times. He has been a 90 per cent NFL kicker in all that he has done. He is consistent. He's the best punter we've had in camp."

Warren was in competition with four other punters, including South African player Nas Botha, who has been erratic.

Landry said Warren "has a good chance" to make the team if he produces in exhibition games like he has in camp.

Other rookies catching Landry's eye at the conclusion of their portion of camp include the No. 5 draft pick, running back Chuck McSwain of Clemson; the No. 1 selection, defensive end Jim Jeffcoat of Arizona State; and the No. 2 choice, linebacker Mike Walter of Oregon.

Also, free agent quarterback Brian Ransom of Tennessee State; the team's fourth-round pick, tight end Chris Faulkner of Florida; and offensive lineman Chris Schultz, a No. 7 draft choice out of Arizona.

Linebacker Scott McLean of Florida State, a 1982 rookie free agent who was injured, has also been a "big surprise," Landry said. "We weren't even sure he could play and he has looked good."

On another matter, Landry said "It was a big mistake" for holdout cornerback Everson Walls not to come to camp.

"He's obligated to come," said Landry. "I'm not sure he will stay retired all the way. It would be a first in this business."

San Antonio's 'El Sid' hailed as next Valenzuela

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Sid Fernandez has a pat answer to persisting comparisons between himself and Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Fernando Valenzuela.

"It's an honor to be compared to Fernando," the 20-year-old San Antonio Dodgers lefthander said. "But we're not the same. We have different pitching styles."

On first glance, however, the two appear from the same mold. Valenzuela, also a lefty, is portly. Fernandez is a hulking 6-1, 220 pounds, and has been known — as has Fernando — to put weight on in his midsection.

AFTER NEARLY every pitch, they ritually hitch up their pants with a tug of their Dodger belts.

Others think Fernandez, like Valenzuela, is another successful Dodger pitching find from Mexico. Fernandez, though, is Hawaiian-born, and three-quarters Portuguese. His family is from the Madeira Islands.

And while Valenzuela speaks little English after three seasons in the big leagues, Fernandez has little trouble making himself heard.

His fastball, for example, whistles across the plate in the 90 mph-plus range, fast enough to be the Texas League strikeout leader with 137 Ks in 104 innings of work. He fanned 7 of the 15 batters he faced Wednesday in the Texas League All-Star game, and was named Most Valuable Player.

BUT UNLIKE Valenzuela, "El Sid" — as baseball pundits call him — hasn't the screwball that propelled Valenzuela to the ranks of baseball's finest contemporary pitchers. Fernandez's out pitch is his fastball, he has a change-up, and he added a curve to his repertoire this spring.

After a shaky start earlier this season — he lasted two-thirds of an inning against the Midland Cubs — his 2.59 ERA in a league known for hitters is the best among starters and second in the Texas League.

"I'm doing all right now," Fernandez said cooly. "I think I'm ready for the bigs, or at least now I wouldn't be in awe." But the Dodgers, with the majors' lowest ERA, haven't rushed the big lefty.

AFTER BEING signed in the June 1981 free agent draft out of Hawaii's Kaiser High School — about 15 minutes from downtown Honolulu — Fernandez was sent to the rookie league in Butte, Mont. "You ever been to Butte?" he asks, shaking his head.

He stopped next in the Florida State League at Vero Beach, where The Sporting News cast him as "the next Fernando." Heady stuff for a teen-ager? "No," he said matter-of-factly.

Fernandez rose to the Class AAA Albuquerque Dodgers for a half-season last year, but this spring was surprised when he was sent to San Antonio for Class AA work. "I kind of thought I'd be in Albuquerque, but this is all right. I get a lot of innings here."

Control sometimes is a problem. He has 71 walks in his 104 innings of work, too many by big league standards. His shoulder — like Valenzuela, he has enormous shoulders and strong thighs — also has troubled him on occasions.

But overall, Fernandez has few complaints. "The bus rides are long in this league," he says. It is 1,008 miles, for example, from Jackson, Miss., where the Mets play, to El Paso, in far West Texas, where the Brewers have a farm club.

ALSO, SCHEDULING in the April-through-August league is occasionally tumultuous — the Dodgers were rained out for five straight nights in Shreveport, La.

Adjustments have been few for the mustachioed young Hawaiian. "It really wasn't any big deal (coming to mainland United States)." He does, however, miss the beach — San Antonio is 150 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, where any waves are miniscule by Hawaiian standards.

Perhaps the largest change has been the weather. "The cold takes getting used to. Sixty-five degrees in Hawaii — now that's cold. So, sometimes I tend to freeze up, and it's hard to feel the ball with my fingertips."

The most important thing in Fernandez's life remains his unfulfilled fantasy. "I was in Dodger Stadium once when I was nine. It would be a lifetime dream come true to pitch there, to see it or even smell it."

Imposter fools a town

It really wasn't Marv Fleming

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — The man who told police he was pro football player Marv Fleming has been identified as a con man named Arthur Lee Trotter who was so good at his masquerade that he even got one town to honor him at a "Marv Fleming Day."

"It's crazy," said city detective Larry Vaughn who was a key man in cracking the case.

"He's been at this thing almost 30 years. And he is very good at it. How many people can con a whole town?"

He said the man, who was arrested last Saturday for attempted felony theft by fraud, had also impersonated Bill Russell, the former professional basketball player, and John Mackey, another professional football tight end who played for Baltimore and San Diego.

HIS REAL identity was traced by FBI fingerprint experts who had a record on him going back to 1954.

Police said he is 49-years-old but they had no home town for him, although there was reliable information that he had been working for a construction company in Fort Worth, Texas.

"He does favor Fleming," Vaughn said. "He is real heavy now...but the facial features have a definite similarity."

However, Vaughn said the man still says he is Fleming.

"I said, 'Look, you can stop playing your game," Vaughn said. He said he told him about the FBI report, showed him the rap sheet, even told him his social Security number.

"He looked at me and said, 'That's wrong. I'm Marv Fleming.' "

Vaughn said Trotter's car was full of Fleming material — checkbooks with Fleming's name; a California and a Texas drivers license with Fleming's name; pictures of Miami Dolphins and Green Bay Packers football jerseys with Fleming's name and number; even three insurance policies made out to Fleming, listing occupation as professional football player.

And there was a big newspaper clipping, complete with picture of Trotter and his girlfriend, taken during a "Marv Fleming Day" celebration in Texas in 1978. The clipping had no town on it.

The FBI had a four-page rap sheet, listing arrests in California and Chicago on charges varying from bad checks to forgery and theft.

INQUIRIES ARE pouring into the Natchitoches police department about similar scams, including one query from Pueblo, Colo., where his girlfriend is from.

She was identified as Bobby Jane Bryant, 42, and was also arrested in Natchitoches.

Trotter was charged with attempted felony theft by fraud after taking a $2,500 check from the woman for shares in a phantom restaurant chain.

In a statement announcing Trotter's identity, police included a note of thanks to Al Ross, Fleming's California lawyer, for help in clearing up the confusion about Fleming.

LPGA Open hot affair

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Stifling heat and humidity will greet the world's best women golfers Monday when they begin arriving for the Women's U.S. Open, a mid-summer event that tour watchers say may decide the top player of the year.

"The heat will be rough on the course, but it may really take a toll on the players," said Jim Back, a spokesman for the tourney, where temperatures are expected to be near 100 degrees all week.

"If we're not careful, we could be seeing a little brown out there," Back said of the 6,298-yard, par-71 Cedar Ridge Country Club course. "It's just been awfully hot for a long time now."

Virtually every top money-winner will be playing in the $200,000 tourney, for which the champion will net $32,000. Only Nancy Lopez, who withdrew because of pregnancy, and Sandra Spuzich, whose entry was received too late, will be missing from the 151-member field.

"We've got the names, and now we're starting to get the crowd," said Back, who said more than 40,000 people are expected to flock to the country club during the steamy week.

Tulsa's heat and 60 percent to 70 percent humidity took their toll on members of the men's tour last year at the PGA Championship, which was played at Southern Hills. Temperatures for that tournament soared to near 100 every day, prompting players to drape wet towels around their necks and seek the shade to avoid exhaustion.

The women are expected to begin arriving at Cedar Ridge on Monday for practice rounds. The championship begins Thursday and runs through Sunday. The field will be cut by half after Friday's second round.

The Open may determine who is named the LPGA's Player of the Year. Five women generally considered contenders for that title — Hollis Stacy, Patty Sheehan, Amy Alcott, Pat Bradley and Jan Stephenson — figure to be in the money at Cedar Ridge.

The tournament "looms larger than life" in deciding the year's best player because the finishes at other tourneys have been divided so evenly, an article in Golf World magazine said.

"The excellent competition this year has helped us out on ticket sales," said Back. "They've really picked up just in the last few days ... people around here are getting really excited."

Stephenson recently won the Lady Keystone Classic, while Stacy captured the Peter Jackson Classic last month. Alcott also has logged a tourney victory this season and Sheehan is the leading money-winner on the tour.

Another strong contender probably will be Beth Daniel, fresh from her victory last week at the McDonald's Kids Classic.

Back said tournament sponsors have spent more than $1 million organizing the Open, but may recoup their money from gate receipts and advertising.

Nate Archibald placed on waivers

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach said Friday that the team has put Nate "Tiny" Archibald on clear waivers because he is no longer needed since the acquisition of Dennis Johnson.

"You ask me why," Auerbach said from his Washington, D.C. home, "We feel that since the acquisition of Dennis Johnson, we have enough in our backcourt, and he (Archibald) is a little older. He may have a few more years, but you can't continue to build a team like that."

But a spokesman for the Celtics said another factor was that the 34-year-old Archibald complained last season.

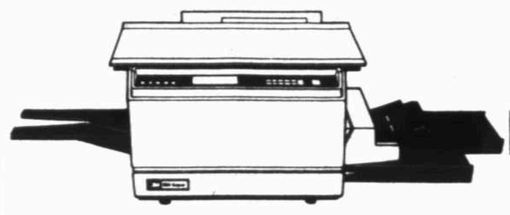

"The rumors I've heard are that he was somewhat of a disruptive force for the team. He was unhappy about not starting," Bill Koenig said.

Clear waivers means the 12-year National Basketball Association veteran, who now makes $300,000 a year, is free to negotiate with any team in the league.

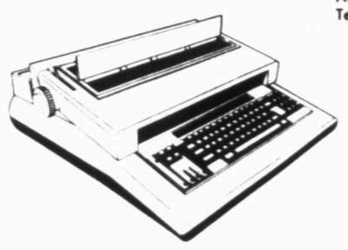

"I think I can contribute for at least a couple of years. My physical condition is good and I have my quickness. Plus, I'm not looking to make a killing. I'm not going to demand a huge salary from anybody," Archibald said Thursday.

Walls offered new contract

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys made a new offer to unhappy cornerback Everson Walls Friday night based largely on incentives.

The Cowboys had offered their holdout All-Pro a renegotiated contract for five years at $1.2 million.

Gil Brandt, executive vice president, offered some incentives to be paid in 1987, including $6,000 a year for making All-National Conference, $10,000 a year for All-NFL, and $16,000 per year for making Defensive Player of the Year.

The bonus' would be paid in addition to the $100,000 signing bonus to be paid in 1987.

Atlanta bats heat up again

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Tony Scott and Omar Moreno delivered two-run singles in a five-run ninth inning that vaulted the Houston Astros to an 11-8 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Astros, who had squandered a 6-2 lead in the eighth, trailed 8-6 when Phil Garner and Jose Cruz singled off Woodie Fryman, 0-2, in the ninth. With one out, Bill Doran made it 8-7 with a single, then Denny Walling's infield single loaded the bases.

Scott greeted Jeff Reardon with a bloop single to put Houston ahead and took second on the throw home, then Moreno singled to center. Dave Smith, 3-1, the third Houston pitcher, worked one-third of an inning to gain the victory and Bill Dawley pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Jim Wohlford's two-run pinch double highlighted Montreal's six-run eighth inning that put the Expos on top 8-6.

The Astros staked starter Joe Niekro to a 4-0 lead, scoring once in the second when Garner doubled and Cruz singled, and adding three in the third, two scoring on Terry Puhl's double to right-center field.

Braves 6, Phillies 1

ATLANTA — Rookie Craig McMurtry allowed four hits in 7 13 innings and Chris Chambliss belted a home run as the Atlanta Braves downed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-1 Friday night.

McMurtry, 11-5, lost his shutout bid in the seventh when Von Hayes hit his fifth home run, a one-out shot into the right field seats.

McMurtry had allowed only a first inning single to Joe Lefebvre going into the seventh. He allowed another single in the seventh and was lifted in the eighth after Mike Schmidt singled following a walk to Joe Lefebvre. Steve Bedrosian finished up.

Chambliss, who has hit safely in 16 of his last 17 games, drilled his 14th homer into the right field seats in the second inning off Kevin Gross, 2-2.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 4

ST. LOUIS — Steve Yeager hit a pair of two-run homers to power the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

His first shot of the game, following a walk to Rick Monday, tied it 4-4 in the sixth inning and his second of the game and 15th of the season capped a five-run seventh.

With two out in the seventh, Dusty Baker doubled off Bob Forsch, 6-8, and Pedro Guerrero doubled him home to put the Dodgers on top 5-4. Mike Marshall singled for two runs before Yeager homered off Jeff Lahti.

Bob Welch, 8-9, beat the Cardinals for the second time this season without a loss, surviving 13 St. Louis hits in 8⅓ innings.

Giants 5, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood's two-run single in the eighth inning lifted the San Francisco Giants to a 5-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Friday night.

Jim Barr, 2-1, the second of three San Francisco pitchers, was the winner and Greg Minton picked up his 10th save.

With the Giants trailing 3-2, Jack Clark opened the eighth against Rod Scurry, 2-6, with the fourth of his five singles, Jeff Leonard walked and both runners advanced on Milt May's grounder.

Scurry also walked pinch-hitter Bob Brenly to load the bases before Youngblood greeted Kent Tekulve with a single to left, scoring Clark and Leonard. Duane Kuiper was walked intentionally and Chili Davis' sacrifice fly scored Brenly for an insurance run.

Cubs 7, Padres 3

CHICAGO — Ryne Sandberg's two-run single capped a five-run sixth inning in which the Chicago Cubs rapped out six straight singles and rolled to a 7-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Keith Moreland singled with one out in the sixth, went to second on a wild pitch by loser Gary Lucas, 4-6, took third on a single by Jody Davis and scored on a single by Larry Bowa to snap a 2-2 tie.

Craig Lefferts, 3-3, who had entered in the top of the inning, beat out a bunt to load the bases. Davis scored on Mel Hall's infield single and Bowa also came across on shortstop Garry Templeton's wild throw past home. Sandberg then singled to score Lefferts and Hall.

Mets 3, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Keith Hernandez and Darryl Strawberry drilled ninth-inning home runs Friday night to power the New York Mets to a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Hernandez drilled his eighth homer of the season over the right field fence leading off the ninth against reliever Ben Hayes, 1-2, to tie the game. One out later, Strawberry punched his 12th homer of the year, an opposite-field shot to left.

Jesse Orosco, 5-5, was the winner in relief of starter Walt Terrell. Doug Sisk got the last out and picked up his ninth save.

Jays rout Texas, 10-5, with rally in 11th

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Dave Collins' fourth hit of the night, a run-scoring double, keyed a five-run rally in the 11th inning to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 10-5 victory over the Texas Rangers Friday night.

Garth Iorg and Alfredo Griffin singled before Collins lined his double to right-center. Rance Mulliniks walked to load the bases before Lloyd Moseby delivered a two-run single and Willie Upshaw singled to give the Blue Jays a 9-5 margin. Ernie Whitt's sacrifice fly capped the rally.

Randy Moffitt, 5-0, pitched two scoreless innings to earn the win in relief. Dave Schmidt, 2-1, pitched 1⅔ innings and was tagged with the loss.

Texas tied it 5-5 with a run in the bottom of the ninth. Dave Hostetler walked with one out and Billy Sample followed with a double to the left-field wall, scoring pinch-runner Mickey Rivers.

Texas right-hander Charlie Hough struggled in the first inning with Toronto's left-handed batters as the Blue Jays raced to a 4-0 lead.

Dave Collins, Rance Mulliniks and Lloyd Moseby each singled for the first run. Upshaw's single scored Mulliniks and Jorge Orta's sacrifice fly scored Moseby. Upshaw, who had moved to third on the sacrifice, scored on Ernie Whitt's infield out.

Pete O'Brien's two-run RBI double in the third inning made it 4-2. Jim Sundberg and Wayne Tolleson singled before O'Brien lined his third double in two days off the right-field wall.

George Wright doubled and Hostetler followed with a single to make it 4-3 in the fourth.

Each team added a run in the fifth to make it 5-4. Toronto's run came when Alfredo Griffin reached on a fielder's choice and scored when right-fielder Larry Parrish juggled Collins' double in the corner. O'Brien's fourth homer of the season gave Texas its final run.

White Sox 2, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Harold Baines singled home the go-ahead run and Greg Luzinski belted his 17th homer, leading the Chicago White Sox to a 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Floyd Bannister, 6-9, who left after five shutout innings because of shoulder soreness, teamed with Juan Agosto and Dennis Lamp to scatter nine hits as the White Sox cooled off the Brewers, who had 10 wins in their previous 11 games.

Bannister earned his third consecutive victory. Lamp worked out of a seventh-inning jam and pitched the final 2 1-3 innings for his third save. Loser Ch

Bethea to retire...again

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Preseason training camp for the Houston Oilers follows a predictable pattern.

Optimism is rampant with players and coaches all confident this will be a banner year. Rookies cringe at the thought of being cut and defensive end Elvin Bethea announces (again) that he is retiring after one more season.

Bethea holds team records for most seasons played (15), most regular season games played (203), most consecutive games played (135) and most consecutive retirement announcements (4).

Oilers officials announced last season they would retire Bethea's No. 65 jersey following the 1982 season.

They may have to begin scheduling un-retirement ceremonies but Bethea, 37, says that is unnecessary. He promises this is his last retirement.

It is really?

"Definitely, no way I'll be back another year," Bethea said.

Bethea, who has had some celebrated contract squabbles and highly publicized trade-me tantrums with Oilers owner Bud Adams, said he only returned this year because Oilers Coach Ed Biles asked him to and because of last year's miserable 1-8 season.

"Coach Biles said he needed me for a leadership role," Bethea said. "I didn't have a reason (for returning). I honestly planned to retire and just fade into the sunset.

"After thinking about it, we'd only played nine games, had a terrible season and turmoil during whole year with the strike. For me, I ddn't want to go out on a down note so I came back."

Bethea has seen high notes, low notes and sour notes and should be an inspiration to the young Oiler rookies, who were grade schoolers when Bethea was drafted in the third round in 1968.

He hasn't stopped giving it his all.

"It's a challenge," Bethea said. For me to go out and see if I can prove to myself and everyone that a 37-year-old man can play this game. I still think I'm as quick as anybody out there. I got the know-how and determination.

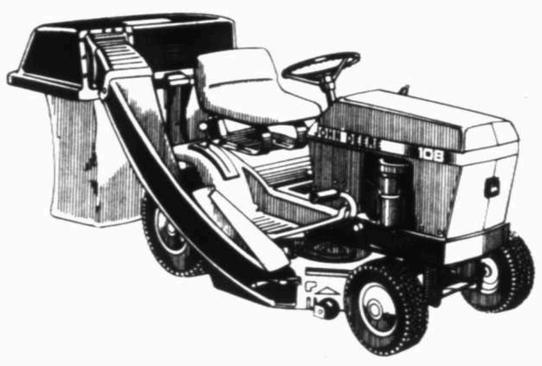

"When I'm out there now, when I line up in front of someone, I say to myself, 'I have to dig deep down and show that I still have that key factor, that I'm a football player.' I won't say I'm great but I'm still good."

Bethea has been through back-to-back 1-13 seasons, he's been to the playoffs three straight years and he's been to seven Pro Bowls, which ties him for the club record with linebacker Robert Brazile.

"I have proven everything I wanted to, accomplished all the goals I wanted to achieve and won the awards, except the Super Bowl," Bethea said. "I've been to the playoffs and I've been through three strikes. That's all the highlights."

Hal Sutton lines up a putt in the second round of the Anheuser Busch Golf Classic. He shot a 6-under-par 65 Friday to take the lead.

Ace helps Howe take 2-stroke LPGA lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A hole-in-one helped Lauren Howe score her second consecutive 5-under-par 67 Friday, giving her a 2-stroke lead over Donna Caponi in the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mayflower Classic.

Howe, who had to requalify for the tour this year after losing her card following an unsuccessful rookie campaign in 1978, had a 134 for 36 holes. Caponi, winless since she recorded five victories in 1981, shot a 67 with a round that included six birdies and one bogey on the 6,101-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course.

CAPONI, WHO has 24 official victories since joining the tour in 1965, had three birdies on the front nine to move into contention. That put her six under for the tournament.

"I'm going to walk out a winner today," said Caponi, who has been struggling this year after undergoing knee surgery in November. "It's (her round) just a big accomplishment."

Australian Karen Permezel shot her second consecutive 70 to move into a tie for third with Janet Coles and first-day co-leader Jo Ann Washam at 140. Coles had a 69 Friday after scoring an eagle 3 en route to a 6-under 30 on the front nine.

The trio was followed by Judy Clark and Kathy Martin at 141, with Betsy King, Patty Rizzo, Chris Johnson and Donna White deadlocked at 142.

Howe used a 4-iron to record her ace on the 185-yard fourth hole. The shot also earned her a free trip to Honolulu — courtesy of American Airlines which made the trip available to the first pro making a hole-in-one during the tournament.

"I saw it rolling and turned around just as it went in," said Howe, who first qualified for the tour in 1978 when she was only 18.

"I played very consistent, very steady all day. I had a lot of birdie putts," she said.

The leader had five birdies and two bogeys to go with her ace, including a 25-foot birdie putt that put her at 11-under before she bogeyed the last hole.

"Maybe I got a little tired," said Howe, who completed her round as the temperature reached 99. "I was probably a little stupid this morning and didn't eat much. I got a little hungry."

WASHAM, WHO began the day tied with Howe, was in the chase until she took a double bogey on the 486-yard, par 5 17th. Her troubles began when she hit the tee shot to the right by some trees. She then hit into a water hazard and later two-putted.

Coles knocked a 3-iron shot around 185 yards for her eagle on the 385-yard third hole.

Laura Hurlbut, who started the day tied with Vicki Tabor one stroke behind the leaders, soared out of contention with a 7-over 79 that put her at 147. Tabor also had her troubles, losing three strokes to par on her first nine holes. She finished with a 75.

Hal Sutton opens up a huge six-stroke lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Hal Sutton birdied the first three holes he played, romped to a 6-under-par 65 and opened up a season-high 6-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Sutton, who won Rookie of the Year honors last season and now tops the PGA Tour's money-winning list, completed two trips over the 6,746-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course in 132, 10 under par.

He has not made a bogey in the tournament.

"For two days I've hit the ball as well as I ever have in my life," said Sutton, who won the important Tournament Players Championship earlier this year.

His only lapse during the warm, breezy day came with the putter, a new addition to his bag that he purchased Wednesday from a display of clubs in a tent by the 10th tee.

His 30-inch birdie putt on the 13th hole hit a spike mark and spun out of the cup.

"I'm pleased with the way I played, but it could have been better," Sutton said. "I'd feel better about it if I hadn't missed that 2½-footer on the 13th."

The little putt kept him from matching the course record. But it did not prohibit him from establishing a seasonal high. His leading margin after 36 holes is, by two strokes, the best of the year on the pro tour.

Giants' Taylor wants new contract

By The Associated Press

Linebacker Lawrence Taylor, the National Football League's defensive player of the year in his first two season, Friday joined the increasing list of prominent NFL players seeking to renegotiate their contracts.

As the Giants veterans reported for their first day of training camp, Taylor was at home in Saddle River, N.J. He is seeking to rewrite the estimated $1.3 million, fiveyear contract he signed as a rookie in 1981, before the creation of the United States Football League drove salaries up.

Taylor vowed not to report until he had a commitment from the team.

"It's something I've gotto do," said Taylor, who was quoted by the Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday as saying: "I'm prepared to sit out the year."

In seeking a contract renegotiation, Taylor joins such luminaries as cornerback Everson Walls of Dallas, offensive tackle Anthony Muoz and fullback Pete Johnson of Cincinnati, offensive linemen R.C. Thielmann and Mike Kenn of Atlanta and wide receiver Roger Carr of Seattle.

All have declined to report to training camp.

Taylor's agent, Jim Paliafito, cited the creation of the USFL as the prime reason for the renegotiation demand. The new league, which signed such college stars as Herschel Walker and Kelvin Bryant, has forced NFL teams to pay for for rookies — for example, the Giants' first round draft pick, Terry Kinard, signed for a reported $1.9 million over six years.

"When the contract was entered into, you just don't know what's going to happen," said Paliafito.

"There are rookies who haven't played a down of football making more money," Paliafito added. "He deserves to be making more. He's exceeded expectations and the market has changed so drastically."

"Here's the deal. Lawrence Taylor failed to report. He has a valid NFL contract. He will be disciplined within the framework of the Giants' fine schedule," said Bill Parcells, the Giants' head coach. "I have no further comment nor will anyone else in the organization."

For the New Orleans Saints Friday, the news was mixed.

Free agent linebacker Rob Nairne said he had agreed to a new two-year contract. Nairne, a starter for New Orleans since 1981, held out last year for a month and again this year for a week.

But the Saints also discovered that cornerback Dave Waymer had broken his wrist in a practice session.

IFL plans to rely on grid castoffs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The new International Football League will draw heavily on older National Football League players and college players passed over by other major football leagues, officials said Thursday.

The franchise plans to operate on about $4 million annually, officials have said.

Officials said Thursday a a press conference formally announcing the formation of the IFL's Nebraska-Iowa franchise that players and a coach will be named later and a playing field will be secured

Yet, co-owner and general manager Quintin S. Hughes of Bellevue said the franchise will be playing games come March — hopefully in Omaha but perhaps elsewhere in Nebraska or Iowa.

Co-owner James Monahan said franchise officials couldn't present their proposal to use the University of Nebraska at Omaha's Caniglia Field at the Board of Regent meeting Saturday because cost estimates for expannsion of the stadium have yet to be firmed up.

Franchise officials have sail they hope to expand the stadium to seat 20,000 to 30,000 fans.

Officials said if the CaniglaField proposal fails to pan out, they may pursue offers from some unnamed Iowa towns. They also would like to use Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, although Omaha is their first cloice.

League officials meeting this weekend in Charlotte, N.C., also have many crucial details to work out before the fledgling rival to the United States Football League's spring and summer games can get off the ground.

Hughes and other IFL officials immediately left the Thursday press conference for the Charlotte meeting. Hughes said a primary goal of the meeting is finalization of a contract with Tanner cable television network.

IFL Consultant Ray Malavasi, who concluded a five-year tenure in 1982 as the NFL's Los Angeles Rams head coach, said negotiations are also under way with NBC and the USA cable television network.

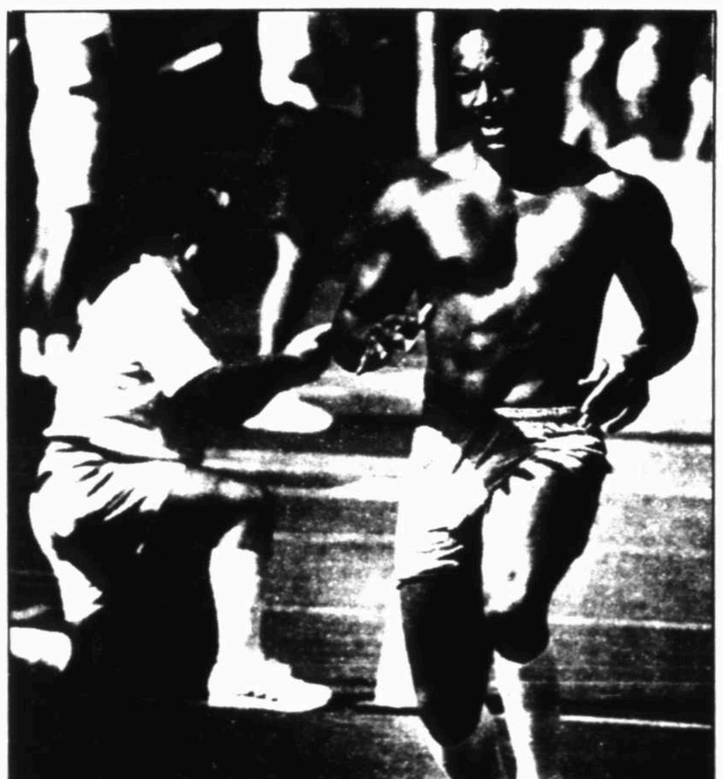

Hughes said the Omaha franchise will need to sell about 10,000 season tickets as well as secure television coverage to survive "without deficit spending."

Also expected at the Charlotte meeting is the signing of three more franchises to the now 12-member league. Hughes said Indianapolis, Seattle and Portland, Ore., franchises are expected to join New York, Ohio (Canton or Akron), Charlotte, N.C., Miami, Chicago, Milwaukee, Nebraska-Iowa, Tennessee (Memphis or Nashville), Houston, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Honolulu.

Hughes noted the league plans to expand internationally, with plans for franchises in Japan, Australia, the Phillipines and Mexico.

"People ask, 'Where are your players going to come from?'," Malavasi said. "Well, number one there are a lot of veteran football players out there who are very thankful the league is in existence because right now they know they can play another two or three years — even though they may have lost a step here and a step there.

"There's a lot of players of that caliber that still can play but are just a step short. They have the experience, they have the knowledge. ... So that's your number source of players," Malavasi said.

Campbell, Biles at peace

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The player-coach relationship between Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell and Coach Ed Biles was so strained last season that the pair avoided talking, Campbell said Friday.

Campbell told sportscaster Mark Berman of Radio Station KIKK of Houston, however, that the two men sat down about two months ago and ironed out their differences.

"It's not to the point now that when I see him, I walk off and I'm sure it's not that way with him," Campbell said.

Asked if that had been the case last season, Campbell replied "a little bit."

Campbell dropped to the lowest production of his career last season, averaging only 3.4 yards per carry.

Campbell said he and Biles did not understand each other and their talk cleared up their problems.

"Unfortunately, there are some things that people like about one another and there are some thing they don't like," Campbell said.

"In order to be able to perform, you've got to be able to talk to people.

Raiders closer to Los Angeles

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders won another court battle Friday when a judge rejected Oakland's bid to seize the National Football League team under the law of eminent domain, moving them a step closer to making southern California a permanent home.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano said Oakland, where the Raiders began playing in 1963, does not have the right to claim the National Football League team under the law, which cities use to claim private property for public use.

THE RULING invalidated an earlier Superior Court preliminary injunction that could have required the Raiders to play in Oakland during the upcoming season. The team's final legal hurdle — on a separate matter — is still in federal appeals court.

Agliano gave both sides 10 days to respond before he issues a final decision, to be based on Friday's preliminary ruling.

Team owner Al Davis called the decision "a great day for America."

Attorney David Self, representing Oakland, said, "We're obviously disappointed, but I won't have any comment until after I've seen the opinion."

Agliano said using eminent domain to reclaim the team probably was not the best idea, although the state Supreme Court ruled the city had the legal right to try.

"The threat of such a taking could intimidate other businesses from establishing themselves in such a municipality," he said.

AGLIANO ADDED that most Raider fans live outside Oakland. The team played in the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum and carried the city's name, "but beyond these factors the recreational use is by Raider fans in dozens of California cities who identify with the team almost, if not as much as, the loyal fans living in Oakland."

Agliano said he rejected Oakland's case because there is "no reasonable probability that the plaintiff (Oakland) will devote the property to a public use within seven years."

During 26 days of testimony which began May 16, witnesses for the city argued the Raiders were vital to the city's recreational and economic well-being. The testimony supported attorneys' arguments that there was a valid "public use" in requiring the team's return.

But the team's attorneys suggested a ruling in the city's favor could allow communities to seize successful businesses that wanted to leave town. They called witnesses who disputed Oakland's claims about the team's pervasive impact on the city.

The Raiders moved after Davis failed to reach agreement with Oakland officials on a variety of stadium upgrades, including additional seating — the stadium now holds 54,000 for football — locker rooms, a new scoreboard, sound system and luxury boxes.

"There can be little doubt that the 90,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum and other items offered the Raiders provided strong inducement to move," the judge said.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, who led the hunt for a team to replace the Los Angeles Rams while he was a member of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, said he was delighted by the ruling.

"It is another hurdle we have gotten over," he said in Los Angeles. "In the main, it means the Raiders have a home and can do the proper public relations job they have wanted to do for so long."

The Raiders completed the move south in time to play last season's strike-shortened schedule after a U.S. district court jury in Los Angeles decided an NFL rule controlling movement of franchises violated antitrust law.

In the federal antitrust case, the same jury that cleared the way for the Raiders' move to Los Angeles awarded $16.4 million in damages last April to the Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, which had filed that suit.

The award was tripled to $49.2 million in accordance with federal antitrust law.

The NFL had sought to block the Raiders move through a league rule stating that no team could move without approval from 75 percent of the league members.

The NFL has appealed both the antitrust decision and the award to a federal appellate court. Attorneys say a decision is expected within 30 days.

"It is unconscionable and un-American to use the awesome power of eminent domain to condemn a viable ongoing business when they had a less restrictive alternative available, which was to bargain in good faith," Davis said in his statement, which was read by executive assistant Al LoCasale.

COACH TOM Flores, who guided the Raiders to victory in Super Bowl XV on Jan. 25, 1981, said he was glad the trial is over.

"I think that at least now we can begin to structure our lives and our season, which has been up in the air for so long. It's going to be refreshing to know which direction we're going.

"It's been a long fight," he said in a telephone interview from the Raiders' training camp at Santa Rosa.

Bonus baby Juan Nieves fires a pitch for the Beloit Brewers of the Class A Midwest League. He recently signed a six-figure contract with the Milwaukee Brewers, reportedly one of the richest pacts ever for a high-schooler.

WVU under investigation

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — West Virginia University's basketball program is under investigation by the NCAA for alleged recruiting infractions, school officials confirmed Friday.

"There was an official complaint and the NCAA is following it up," West Virginia associate athletic director Tom Shupe said. "Right now, we're not treating it as serious and we won't unless we learn otherwise."

Athletic Director Fred Schaus met with National Collegiate Athletic Association officials in Chicago on Friday, but Shupe said the session had nothing to do with the investigation.

Before leaving for Chicago, Schaus told the Morgantown Dominion Post, "The NCAA is checking into a couple of things. I'm not at liberty to talk about it, and I prefer that the NCAA not say anything at this time."

Leland Byrd, former West Virginia athletic director and now commissioner of the Atlantic 10 conference, said the investigation centers on recruiting. The conference is not conducting its own investigation, Byrd said.

Basketball coach Gale Catlett is out of town until Aug. 1 and unavailable for comment, the coach's office said Friday.

Schaus said judgment on the latest investigation should be withheld until the NCAA announces its findings.

"Just recently the president of SMU (Southern Methodist University) complained that his school was hurt more by innuendos (during an NCAA investigation) than by the facts," he said.

Brewers discover pitching prodigy

BELOIT, Wis. (AP) — Juan Nieves sees himself as "just a normal, average, everyday ballplayer." Baseball's judges of talent see him differently.

"He is a phenom. There aren't enough superlatives in the world for that young man," Tim Nordbrook, Nieves' manager with the Beloit Brewers of the Class A Midwest League, said of the 18-year-old pitching prodigy.

MILWAUKEE REPORTEDLY signed Nieves to a six-figure contract, one of the largest ever given a high schooler.

"He's two, maybe three, steps ahead of the average player his age. We were impressed with his maturity, his ability to handle himself," said Dan Duquette, assistant farm director for the Milwaukee Brewers, who signed Nieves out of Avon Old Farms prep school in Connecticut this spring.

Duquette said the three years Nieves spent away from home at Avon Old Farms may have buoyed his maturity. The bonus baby had been brought to Connecticut from his home in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, at the behest of Vic Power, a former major league all-star who has helped bring many Puerto Ricans into the big leagues.

As a native of Puerto Rico, Nieves was not subject to baseball's amateur free-agent draft and, therefore, able to deal with any clubs he chose. The Brewers outbid the New York Yankees, Atlanta Braves, Toronto Blue Jays and Philadelphia Phillies for the left-hander.

Nieves compiled a 19-1 record with a 1.05 earned run average and 288 strikeouts in 196 innings at Avon. He also hit .525 with 10 homers during his three seasons there.

HE SAID Milwaukee General Manager Harry Dalton promised him a chance to swing the bat.Nordbrook has not used Nieves as a designated hitter yet, instead choosing to let the youngster learn his mound lessons first.

"That's the way it goes. But they told me I can hit soon," Nieves said.

Nordbrook, a former major league infielder, said, "I'd hate like hell, with him just coming into pro ball and having so much to adjust to, to rush him up to the plate with a bat and deter his concentration as a pitcher."

"We want to let Juan get his feet on the ground and his arm in shape, but he'll be in the lineup as a designated hitter soon," Duquette said.

Nieves is not only a complete baseball player, but a complete person, said Nordbrook.

"He really has affected me; he's such a fine young man," Nordbrook said. "He asked me to filter the press for him, yet he's accommodated everybody. Heck, I've seen Jimmy Palmer crack under pressure from the press, but I doubt whether this kid will. He's a cool one."

THERE ALSO is a certain "Aw, shucks" attitude about Nieves. After pitching six no-hit, shutout innings in his first professional start last week, he said, "I was just doing the best I could."

After striking out 10 batters and allowing only three hits and one run in five innings in his second start, Nieves said, "I was struggling against myself. I threw too many pitches."

"He's got much more poise, much better command, much better control of many more pitches than I've ever seen a young prospect have," Nordbrook said. "It's rare to see a kid his age throw breaking balls for strikes.

"His first outing, he's got everybody watching him under a microscope, and he throws a no-hitter. I just shook my head. I enjoy watching him. Wow, is he cool."

Airline says its hard to detect quiet, but drunk passengers

NEW YORK (AP) — The quiet drinker can be a hidden danger in the air, according to airline officials who say it's often impossible to tell if someone is too intoxicated to cope in an emergency, such as the Air Canada plane fire last month.

"The possibility a person could get quietly sloshed and then be unable to mobilize himself to make it to an emergency exit can't be easily addressed," said Jerry Cosley, vice president of Trans World Airlines.

"Some people can appear sober and it's a judgment call on the part of the flight crew and captain," he said.

In the Air Canada fire, one of the 23 people who died had a blood alcohol level of 0.2 percent, and two others had levels above 0.1 percent, said Delbert Lacefield, supervisor of the forensic toxicology unit at the Federal Aviation Administration's Oklahoma City office.

Three or four passengers had alcohol levels between .05 percent and 0.1 percent, and two registered less than .05 percent, Lacefield told the Cincinnati Enquirer. Confusion or lack of coordination brought on by alcohol could have hampered their ability to evacuate after the landing, he said.

Most states consider people with blood alcohol levels above 0.1 percent to be legally drunk. A 160-pound person would have to drink about five cocktails in a two-hour period to register 0.1 percent, according to the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration.

One surviving Air Canada passenger, who had been sitting in the "connoisseur class" section where drinks are free, said he was offered drinks five times by flight attendants.

Until the 1970s, U.S. airlines had a limit of two cocktails per person. But now decisions to stop serving liquor to a passenger are made by flight attendants.

Drinks are free in most first-class and business-class cabins. Complimentary champagne is served in all sections on some longer flights, but cocktails generally cost $2 or $2.50 in coach seats.

Refusing to serve booze "would put an airline out of the industry, or at least cause it to suffer significant loss of revenue from passengers who like the idea of having a pop or two on the aircraft," said TWA's Cosley.

Delta, for example, carries 95,000 passengers a day, and serves about 36,000 cocktails. Eastern, with about 100,000 passengers a day, serves about 10,000 cocktails.

Federal rules prohibit airlines from allowing an intoxicated person on board or serving drinks to anyone who appears intoxicated. Also, passengers may not drink from their own liquor supply.

Airlines must "make sure no one gets smashed and causes trouble or really incapacitates themselves," said FAA spokesman John Leyden.

"We try to make sure that the passenger does not get to the point of being immobile, but that's a very difficult call," said Jeff Kriendler, a Pan Am vice president in New York.

Hit the books, get the bucks

A college education can be worth a lot of money. The average male college graduate is expected to make up to $2,700,000 in his lifetime, 50 percent more than a high school graduate and an astonishing 349 percent more than a man without a high school diploma.

For women, the situation is similar. A female college graduate can expect to earn $1.12 million during her working life, 40 percent more than a high school graduate and 431 percent more than a woman who did not graduate from high school. The lower overall earnings for women can be partly accounted for by the fact that the average women works 28 years, the average man, 38.

Programs boost scores for minority students

NEW YORK (AP) — Math and science scores of minority students have lagged behind national averages, but specially designed programs to boost those skills are now achieving results.

"On the California Achievement Test, 11th graders went from grade 9 in math to a level of 11.1 — a two-year jump this year in math," says Moses Clark, acting director of the Math and Science Alabama Regional Plan at Tuskegee Institute.

"For the first time in the Tuskegee public elementary school, we had youngsters in the 3rd and 6th grades going to the public mathematics tournament this year," he said.

Tuskegee was one of 17 institutions to receive grants totaling $1.7 million from the Ford Foundation in 1981 to help raise the math and science skills of black, Hispanic and other minority students. It received $341,000.

ACCORDING TO a report this year from the National Assessment of Educational Progress, at the age of 9, black youngsters averaged 45.2 percent or 11 points below the national average of 56.4 percent.

The report from the federally financed testing agency which surveys the educational skills of students aged 9, 13 and 17, further said that black 13-year-olds averaged 48.2 percent, or 12 points below the national average, and black 17-year-olds averaged 45 or 15 points below the national average.

Tuskeegee has 109 students from rural Macon County studying 3rd and 6th grade math and computer science. Pre-calculus is also given for high school youngsters.

In addition to the summer session, special classes are held on weekends and after school during the school year.

"We want them to decide and find early careers in math and science," said Clark, an associate math professor at Tuskegee. "The hope is that they'll like math and do a better job and choose math as an area."

THE MATHEMATICS and Science for Minority Students program at Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., is designed to have minority students go into scientific fields.

Thirty 10th graders enter the intensive summer program each year and complete it after three summers. After the third session, they receive college counseling.

"We have to work very hard here to get a 'B' or a 'C,'" said Paula Saenz, 17, who goes to Science High School in Newark, N.J. "In school, it's easy to get an 'A.'"

Miss Saenz, who plans to major in medicine in college, is in the third year of the summer program at Phillips. "The good thing about the program," she said, "is that I learned a lot in terms of school work and also about myself and other people ..."

Eric Bibb, 15, of Louisville, Ky., started his first year in the program this summer. "I just want to better myself. It's hard," he said. "It makes you work, but you get used to it."

ACCORDING TO Patricia Edmonds, director of foundation and corporate support at Phillips, the 200-year-old preparatory school started the program to help increase the number of minorities in engineering and science and "to have some impact on math and science teaching in inner city schools."

Ms. Edmonds said the students in the summer program tend to have an influence on how math is taught once they return to their home schools. One Chicago high school, she said, had to revamp its math curriculum to accommodate the increased math skills of returning students.

The program was started in 1977 and received a grant from Ford for $316,400. About $1 million has been raised from other foundations and corporations, Ms. Edmonds said, including International Business Machines Inc., The New York Times and Standard Oil Co. (Ohio).

Lincoln University, a predominantly black institution outside of Philadelphia, Pa., received $50,000 from Ford.

"Essentially, we're trying to encourage youngsters to take four years of college math and take advantage of the new technology that's out there," said Dr. Earle Winderman, vice president for development.

THE SCHOOL recently received an additional grant from the National Institutes of Health for $500,000 to encourage students to go into doctoral programs in the biomedical sciences.

Some programs are designed to assist the teachers of math and science rather than directly work on student skills.

"If we can get teachers in a mode where they can perform at maximum proficiency, a lot of these other problems will go away," said George Baker, project director of the math improvement program at Xavier University, a predominantly black Catholic institution in New Orleans.

Hijackings may stop if refugees receive visas

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - Four times a week and for a ticket price of $386, a passenger can fly from Miami to Havana by connecting through Mexico City.

Except if he is a disaffected Cuban refugee.

And that, U.S. officials contend, explains the current rash of hijackings to Cuba. Three times this week, and nine since May 1, commercial airplanes have been commandeered by desperate men who, when successful, face a long prison term in Havana, and when they fail, a long prison term in the United States.

The State Department asserts that these hijackings to Cuba would stop if the Havana regime would take two simple steps: grant visas to refugees who wish to return, and broadcast over Radio Havana, which reaches the U.S. mainland, that hijackers are receiving stiff sentences.

Anita Stockman, a department spokesman, said that the Cuban government will issue visas only to those holding Cuban passports, thus excluding the thousands of refugees who arrived in the 1980 Mariel-to-Key West "freedom flotilla."

SHE SAID, TOO, that while hijackers are receiving stiff jail sentences in Havana, and the local press publicizes the arrests, the message is not reaching disaffected Cubans in Florida. A Federal Bureau of Investigation spokesman here confirmed that refugees in Florida "don't believe they'll go to jail" if they commandeer a plane to Havana.

Thus the Federal Aviation Administration this week announced that it soon will begin airing television commercials both in English and Spanish in south Florida and New York City warning would-be hijackers that they can expect prison terms of up to 20 years in Havana.

Ever since hijacking became more than a rare episode, beginning in 1968, the FAA has countered with a variety of physical defenses, ranging from metal detectors to X-ray machines to hand-searches of carry-on bags. Sky marshals, too, are said to be in increased use in Florida.

The metal detector, introduced in early 1973, resulted in a dramatic drop in the number of hijacks that had plagued U.S. aviation from 1968 through 1972, when 143 of the 226 hijacks of U.S. carriers since 1930 took place.

THE REASON WAS simple: Until the introduction of metal detectors, hijacks were conducted with guns or knives, which are metal instruments.

But more recently, hijackers have resorted to the use–or threatened use–of flammable substances, which can be carried in innocuous containers that can escape X-ray detection and fool guards conducting hand-searches.

In its semi-annual report to Congress this April, the FAA disclosed that of the nine attempted hijacks in 1982, "all three of the successful attempts were perpetrated by Spanish-speaking males using bottles of flammable liquid as their weapons."

And, it said, "This same method of threat has been used by the hijackers in every successful hijacking of aircraft to Cuba since August 13, 1980."

BECAUSE PHYSICAL detection techniques can be foiled by people bent on doing so, security experts believe that the current spate of hijacks can be stopped only by attacking the core problem–eliminating the incentive or dissuading the would-be hijacker from going through with the act.

"We've got to begin giving some attention to the basic problem," Richard Lally, until recently the FAA's security chief and now the Air Transport Association's security director, said in an interview. "These people don't want to commit a crime. They're frustrated, at wit's end. They only want to go home... Many of them were people plucked off the street (in Cuba) and they've been separated from their families."

A permanent solution, he said, rests in the ongoing talks between the U.S. and Cuban governments on resettling the disaffected refugees back in Cuba.

Son's wheelchair stolen, but mother keeps faith

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Thirteen-year-old Kyle Minnis has learned to cope with cerebral palsy but he wasn't prepared for what happen to him at Anaheim Stadium.

While he was sitting in the stands watching an Angel-Red Sox game at Anaheim Stadium Tuesday, someone stole his wheelchair from the "handicapped" section where it was being stored during the game. Now the eighth-grader is confined to his Santa Ana house until a new electric wheelchair can be custom-made.

"I can't believe someone would actually consider taking something so valuable to another human being," said his mother, Bonnie.

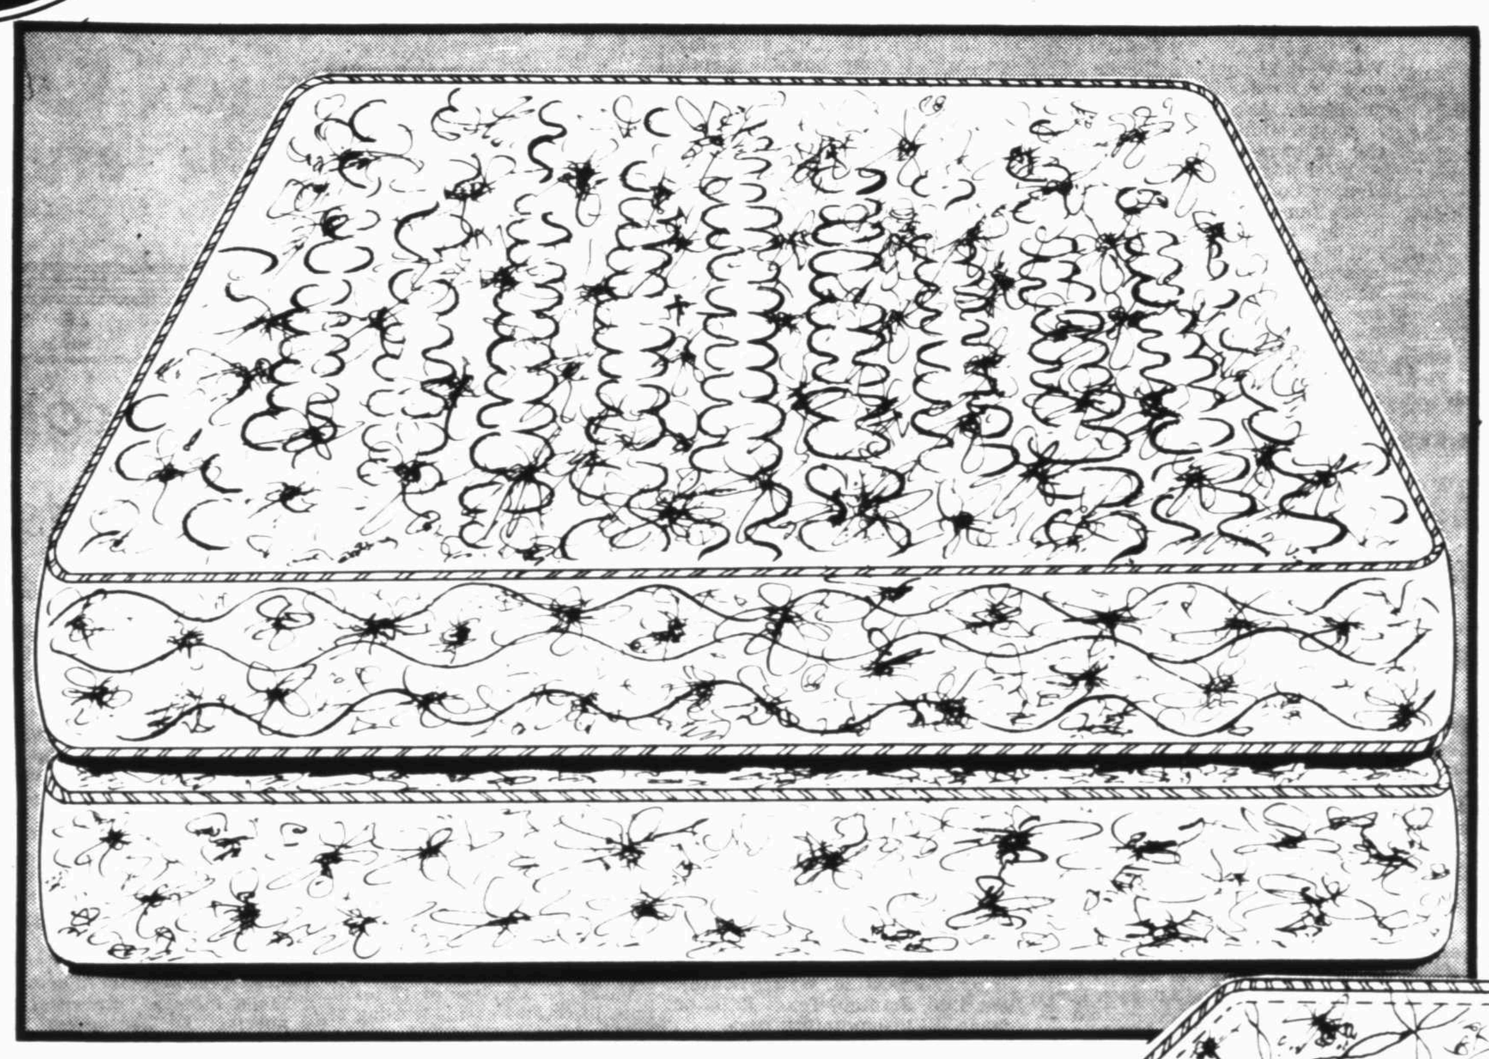

"It would be the same as if someone stole your legs. If they steal your car you can walk to a phone booth and get help. If they take your wheelchair you are completely helpess."

Kyle, the 1980 Easter Seals poster boy, was born with cerebral palsy. He is unable to walk and has limited use of his arms. The only way he can get around is by using a customized wheelchair to accommodate his 80-pound frame.

It will take weeks, however, to have a new chair made and his mother was concerned how she was going to raise the $2,000 it will take to replace the wheelchair. This is the second time the Minnises have had to buy a new wheelchair in the last few months.

Kyle's first chair was crushed in a car accident. The chair that was stolen was rented while a new chair was being made.

Union: Hospital workers exposed to dangerous gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hospital workers are being exposed to a sterilizing gas suspected of causing cancer when well-known methods exist to limit exposure, union officials say.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees said Thursday that a survey it conducted of 21 hospitals around the country shows that many workers are being unduly exposed to ethylene oxide.

Among reasons for this exposure are employees being forced to work in poorly ventilated areas and lack of proper training on how best to work with the chemical, said the union, which represents 250,000 health-care workers.

Testifying at an Occupational Safety and Health Administration hearing on a proposed new exposure standard, union president Gerald W. McEntee said that workers in 12 of the 21 hospitals reported smelling the gas at least occasionally. This indicates high-concentration exposure, he said.

The same questionnaire survey, which drew responses from either hospitals or union locals at the institutions, also found that some hospital managements showed it is feasible to reduce exposures well under OSHA's proposed limit of 1 part gas per million parts of air in an eight-hour period.

McEntee said survey results are "particularly disturbing considering that the dangers of EtO (ethylene oxide) as well as methods available to protect workers from EtO exposure have been well known for a number of years."

Ethylene oxide is a highly flammable gas that is used to sterilize medical equipment that cannot be cleansed by other methods, such as steam. It also is a widely used feedstock chemical that is converted into other products to make plastics.

The chemical, for which there is no replacement, has been shown to cause cancer and genetic damage in animals and is suspected of posing similar hazards for humans.

The union said that in view of the cancer and reproductive risks, the standard should be set at .05ppm, 20 times lower than the OSHA proposal of 1 ppm.

However, the Ethylene Oxide Industry Council, a coalition of producers and users of the chemical, told the hearing that the proposed 1 ppm limit is "very conservative and will guard workers from significant risk."

Arlin G. Voress, chairman of the group, said studies commissioned by the council indicate exposures at or below 1 ppm, and perhaps as high as 5 ppm, are insignificant and pose no apparent hazard to employees.

While the group said it favored a new standard, it asked the government not to specify the methods of achieving the exposure reduction. Industry can find the best and least costly ways of doing this if it is not hampered by specific regulations, it said.

Dioxin may exist in environment, scientist says

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Preliminary results from soon-to-be released dioxin studies indicate the toxic chemical may exist throughout the environment, not just in heavily contaminated areas, a Veterans Administration scientist says.

U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Alvin Young, a specialist in environmental sciences for the VA told a dioxin task force the preliminary results of tissue studies and autopsies show dioxin present at consistent levels.

SBA becomes more selective

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The director of the Small Business Administration's San Francisco office today told Congress that federal cutbacks have forced the agency to be more selective in its disaster assistance and try to induce help from the private sector and charities.

Meanwhile, the head of the SBA told a congressional hearing that recent disaster relief efforts in California "show great promise" in merging federal efforts with those of bankers and private volunteers.

James Sanders, SBA administrator, testified before the Senate Committee on Small Business and singled out the California relief efforts, public and private initiatives in high technology in Pennsylvania and industrial development programs.

He said the three "involved ... projects never before attempted by our agency that show great promise."

"A great factor in the success of these programs has been the spirit of volunteerism that has been manifested in the private citizens who have offered their assistance to us and their communities," Sanders told the panel.

Since assuming his post two years ago, Sanders has been pushing to decentralize his agency and place more authority at the field office level.

Meditation teacher battles educators

By ROGER MUNNS
Associated Press Writer

FAIRFIELD, Iowa (AP) — An upstart instructor who says Transcendental Meditation is dead has stirred up the karma at Maharishi International University by claiming that, when it comes to teaching enlightenment, he can do it better.

The peaceful campus where the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi's TM is taught and where levitation is routine, according to university officials, has been disturbed by Robin Woodsworth Carlsen.

The transplanted Canadian teaches "techniques for the discovery of grace." He says MIU's leaders are a "dying species" and has filed a $43 million lawsuit against the school.

On any other campus, Carlsen, who teaches a meditation seminar at various schools, might be tolerated as a protester. But at MIU, where he is not a faculty member, he's a threat.

MIU officials say there's only one way for the school's 700 students to meditate in the Maharishi's domes — the Maharishi way. And unauthorized meditators will be dismissed.

There is no test to screen out unwanted meditators in the university's two golden-topped amphitheaters, where meditation is a twice-daily routine added to a regular college curriculum. "There's really no way of knowing what's going on when your eyes are closed," said Leonard Goldman, counsel for MIU, in an interview this week.

The university teaches a "scientific" approach to meditation allowing the mind "to settle down to its least excited state." Advanced meditators actually lift themselves off the ground, MIU says. The domes are lined with mattresses to protect against falls.

Foat will be tried

GRETNA, La. (AP) — A judge ruled Friday that California feminist leader Ginny Foat must stand trial on a charge that she murdered an Argentine businessman 17 years ago when she was a go-go dancer at a New Orleans bar.

State District Judge Robert Burns rejected the defense claim that Louisiana should have tried Ms. Foat in 1977 when the murder charge was filed, instead of waiting until 1983.

"I believe she has to show she suffered substantial prejudice because of the delay. She has failed in that regard," said Burns, ruling from the bench at the end of a two-day hearing.

"Society has accused the defendant of a brutal crime and society has a right to its day in court," he said. "I have determined that this case should go before a jury to be decided once and for all."

On leaving the courthouse, Ms. Foat told reporters, "My lawyers clearly proved that I was denied the right to a speedy trial. We will appeal..."

Ms. Foat, past president of California's National Organization for Women chapter, was accused of clubbing Moises Chayo to death with a tire iron 17 years ago during a robbery after luring him out of a New Orleans bar.

The decomposed body of the 62-year-old Argentine businessman was discovered in a ditch in Jefferson Parish on Dec. 11, 1965.

OUR FIRST PAIR OF SHOES

A great king, so the legend goes, once stepped on a thorn in his garden. In a furious rage he ordered his prime minister to cover his entire kingdom with leather. "Your Majesty," replied the wise prime minister, "let me cover your feet with leather, and wherever you go you will be protected." And so the first pair of shoes was made!

The little fellow whose first pair of shoes appealed to our photographer has a long way to travel. His journey through life will not be free of thorns. And he'll need more than shoes to make that journey!

He'll need to develop that spiritual fiber which will do for his character what the first pair of shoes did for the king's feet. A man can't carpet the whole world—but he can acquire the faith and courage which will enable him to climb life's most rugged trails.

Our Churches and Synagogues bring such qualities to the life of man. They point the way to happy, wholesome living—for the grown-up with the burdens of life on his shoulders—and for the little tot in his first pair of shoes.

63rd Paisano encampment to begin in Davis Mountains

The 63rd session of Paisano Baptist Encampment will be held at Paisano Pass in the Davis Mountains Monday through July 31.

Paisano grew out of a prayer meeting of cowboys. Brother L.R. Millican, pioneer circuit rider missionary, worked with the area ranchers for many years, helping them set up the first "encampment" in 1916. Due to World War I, the next camp was not until 1921, and the encampment has met consecutively since that time.

Paisano has maintained the tradition of no registration fees and everyone is welcome to attend. Contributions for meals and the program may be made at the office or at the offering taken on Thursday night and Sunday morning.

Paisano General Encampment is a family camp, with activities fr all age groups.

Abortion opinions surveyed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Most clergy and laity of the Lutheran Church in America who responded to a survey approve abortion in so-called "hard" cases but not when a married couple feels it could not adequately support more children.

Findings from a wide-ranging "Lutheran Listening Post" survey found that most members say abortion is acceptable in case of rape or a pregnancy endangering the mother's life but not because of economic considerations.

Most also say that sexual relations outside marriage is always or almost always wrong, an exception for a majority being elderly couples who live together but whose financial situation makes marriage impractical.

The survey, involving responses from 1,761 laity and 838 clergy, found that about 90 percent think homosexuality is a "departure from the natural order of God's creation," but most agreed that sexual behavior among consenting adults is not a matter for legislation or police action.

Methodists have 'hotline'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — To answer people's questions, the United Methodist Church is keeping its telephone information service open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily during the general assembly of the World Council of Churches July 25 to August 12 in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Ordinarily the service operates four hours a day in the summer, but the longer period was ordered because of wide interest in the assembly. The number is 800-251-8140, or for Tennesseans, 615-256-0531 collect.

'Voluntariness' endangered

ANNANDALE, Va. (AP) — A Southern Baptist historian says a basic Baptist concept of "voluntariness" in religion is threatened by the fact that the Southern Baptist Convention has become, in effect, the "established church" in the South.

As a result, Baptists "no longer think like their Baptist forebears," the Rev. E. Glenn Hinson told a local congregation.

He said Baptists from their beginnings have affirmed the idea that "to be authentic, faith must be free" and "religion must be voluntary religion."

Brethren support 'sanctuary'

BALTIMORE (AP) — The annual conference of the Church of the Brethren says that "sanctuary," by which many churches are illegally harboring refugees, is "an appropriate Christian response to injustice being suffered by Latin American and Haitian political refugees."

Christian ship weathers storm

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Christians running that international visionary ship, Oikumene, moved into this western Canadian city beside the Pacific late this week, facing a storm of criticism.

They came for the sixth assembly of the World Council of Churches which opens Sunday, the first such gathering in eight years and the first one on the American continent in 19 years.

It comes amid sharpened attacks on the council, whose emblem is a ship with a cross as a masthead and the Greek word, "oikumene," meaning the whole inhabited earth, symbolizing the journey toward Christian unity.

"There is evidence that grass-roots pressure for unity is growing stronger in many parts of the world," says the Rev. Michael Kinnamon, a U.S. Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) theologian and on the council's doctrinal commission staff.

He expressed hope the assembly, besides celebrating interchurch ties already achieved, "will renew the call for obedience to Christ's prayer that we may all be one."

More than 4,000 people, 900 of them official delegates of 303 denominations around the world totaling nearly 500 million believers, are expected for the 18-day assembly, July 24 through Aug. 10.

But even before it started, criticisms rolled from the sidelines. A Switzerland-based evangelical group, Christian Solidarity International, began meeting, challenging the council to deal more strongly with religious repression.

"Our persecuted brothers and sisters are excluded from this major meeting," said the Rev. Hans Stuckelberger, president of the organization, which launched a series of meetings focused on victims of religious oppression.

The group readied a petition to the assembly, demanding attention to that issue in communist and other areas.

Other anti-council demonstrations and meetings were scheduled, featuring Northern Ireland's fiery preacher-politician Ian Paisley and fundamentalist Bob Jones Jr. of Bob Jones University in South Carolina, recently denied tax exemption in a U.S. Supreme Court decision because of racist policies.

The criticisms were heighted by recent magazine articles and a CBS TV show, claiming the council was pro-Marxist and funded armed black revolutionaries against minority white regimes.

RELIGION

St. Luke's to hold groundbreaking

Sunday will be an important day for St. Luke's United Methodist Church when the groundbreaking service for the new education and music center will be the climax of the 10:50 a.m. worship service.

The choir will sing "An Anthem of Dedication." The service will conclude with a procession by the entire congregation from the sanctuary to the site of the new addition.

The proposed addition of 8,316 square feet will include four classrooms, a prayer room, family room and music center. Renovation of administrative offices and the addition of three offices will also be included in the construction.

The prayer room, family room and new classrooms will be used for small group meetings, Sunday School classes and weddings. The music center will provide space for graded children and youth choir programs, handbell choirs, adult choral programs and instrumental groups. The center will also be suitable for piano and choral recitals.

A new entrance to the present facilities will be built facing the existing east parking lot which includes a 1,292-square-foot foyer.

Above is a drawing of the proposed education and music center at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

Dr. Jarrell H. Sharp is senior paster at St. Luke's UMC. The Rev. Kenneth James and the Rev. Jarrell V. Sharp are associate pastors. Bert Bostic is minister of program and music. Roy Williamson is chairman of the Building Committee.

Sunday the church will not have an 8:30 a.m. service. The public is invited to attend the 10:50 a.m. service.

Protestants back pastoral letter

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In an extraordinary way, Protestant leaders and assemblies are sounding a swelling "Amen" to U.S. Roman Catholic bishops for their recent pastoral letter condemning nuclear warfare and the arms race.

The explicit nature and scope of the Protestant response to a particular stand of Catholic bishops is considered unprecedented.

"There's been nothing quite like it in its extent and breadth," says the Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, director of the office of international justice and peace of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, D.C.

While Protestants and Catholics often have shared positions on issues, the unusual aspect in this instance is that a succession of Protestant bodies have expressly endorsed a teaching document of Catholic bishops and commended it to members.

That, so far as several church officials could recall, has never happened so widely before. It also has ecumenical overtones reflecting bolstered links and trust between once aloof branches of Christianity.

"It's new, a first," says the Rev. John Hotchkin, ecumenical officer for Catholic bishops. "It's a good sign for the possiblities of teaching in a common voice."

That won't keep differences from being frankly faced where they exist, he adds, but it indicates "people have reached a level of understanding and maturity that they're not afraid to state their agreements."

Some officials noted that they knew of no case in which Catholic bishops had specifically and formally endorsed a Protestant declaration by, say, United Methodist bishops.

The Newspaper BIBLE

DON'T GET DISTRACTED; FOCUS ON HIM!

Jesus said to all, "Anyone who wants to follow Me must put aside his own desires and conveniences and carry his cross with him every day and keep close to Me! Whoever loses his life for My sake will save it, but whoever insists on keeping his life will lose it; and what profit is there in gaining the whole world when it means forfeiting one's self?

"When I, the Man of Glory, come in My glory and in the glory of the Father and the holy angels, I will be ashamed then of all who are ashamed of Me and of My words now.

"But this is the simple truth--some of you who are standing here right now will not die until you have seen the Kingdom of God!"

Eight days later He took Peter, James, and John with Him into the hills to pray. And as He was praying, His face began to shine, and His clothes became dazzling white and blazed with light.

Then two men appeared and began talking with Him--Moses and Elijah! They were splendid in appearance, glorious to see; and they were speaking of His death at Jerusalem, to be carried out in accordance with God's plan.

Peter and the others had been very drowsy and had fallen asleep. Now they woke up and saw Jesus covered with brightness and glory, and the two men standing with Him.

As Moses and Elijah were starting to leave, Peter, all confused and not even knowing what he was saying, blurted out, "Master, this is wonderful! We'll put up three shelters--one for You and one for Moses and one for Elijah!"

But even as he was saying this, a bright cloud formed above them, and terror gripped them as it covered them. And a voice from the cloud said, "This is My Son, My Chosen One; listen to Him." Then, as the voice died away, Jesus was there alone with His disciples.

LA police under investigation for illegal spying

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) must surrender tapes and transcripts of 250 hours of private interviews conducted with the central figure in the investigation of whether sensitive intelligence material was removed illegally from the department, a Superior Court judge ruled today.

Judge Lester E. Olson ordered interrogations of Detective Jay Paul turned over to the American Civil Liberties Union for use in preparing its case against the city alleging illegal police spying.

An ACLU lawyer called it a "very, very important" victory in the suit, and an aide to the litigation said: "This is the ball game."

Fred Bennett, the Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher lawyer representing the city in the proceedings, said he would give "serious consideration" to appealing the decision.

Paul, who must talk to police internal affairs investigators or face losing his job, is protected from criminal prosecution based on anything he tells them.

ACLU LAWYER Paul Hoffman called the ruling "a major event in the lawsuit," and said he expected the tapes and transcripts to help him discover whether high-ranking police officials — including Police Chief Daryl Gates — knew of any improper use or removal of police files.

The police department, complying with an earlier court order, yesterday turned over to the ACLU two boxes containing some 750 pages from the so-called "Paul Documents," material recovered from the detective's residence and the garage of his wife's law office earlier this year.

Those documents revealed that informants within the city attorney's office reported to the LAPD on the political leanings of lawyers in that office, the ACLU charged at a press conference yesterday afternoon.

Also disclosed yesterday was the police department's involvement with a right-wing intelligence publication and its founder, who is affiliated with the John Birch Society.

THE POLICE intelligence documents turned over yesterday ranged from a 1931 county grand jury report on Communist activities to a handwritten account based on a conversation held at the ACLU's December 1982 "Bill of Rights" dinner, spokesmen for the group said.

The files — which were microfilmed at Police Headquarters yesterday morning — reportedly include information on at least three "state-level" judges, members of the ACLU's board of directors and members of the National Lawyers Guild.

The organization says it will try in court to obtain access to nearly 100,000 other documents seized from or voluntarily surrendered by Paul, formerly of the Public Disorder Intelligence Division.

"I am absolutely outraged," said local ACLU director Ramona Ripston at an afternoon news conference. "What we learned from looking at the files today is that the ACLU for any number of years has been the target of surveillance."

"What makes me so angry is it's none of their business," added ACLU information director Linda Valentino.

College students may be selected by computers

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — The gleam of high tech is stealing into the eyes of college admissions officers wondering if the computer is an ideal candidate for picking students.

Instead of applying human judgment to the mountains of applications, recommendations and test scores, some are arguing colleges should apply the unbiased number-crunching power of a computer to come up with the ideal class.

But others argue a computer can be too objective and that humans can make the decisions on a college's next freshman class in less time and with more foresight.

The two sides met recently at Wesleyan University before a meeting of the New England Association of College Admissions Counselors.

"It is just possible that a highly selective college could admit the ideal class by computer programming but it is not practical in the least," said James Rogers, director of admissions for Brown University in Providence, R.I.

Schools such as the Ivy League colleges which painstakingly pick students would have to computerize enormous amounts of information as well as search for ways to deal with special cases and considerations, he said.

But Richard Moll, the dean of admissions at the University of California at Santa Cruz, advanced an automated method he said considers both personal and academic qualifications and someday may be used by his university's eight-campus system.

"The No. 1 reason (for computerizing admissions) is to tell the public what we are doing — so one can plot oneself for admission to Stanford or Harvard," he argued.

Computerized admissions, said Moll, would eliminate the "fuzz factors" in hand-picking successful applicants, where one candidate may be picked over another because of the school he or she came from or who wrote the recommendations.

Moll, talking about his method developed by a group he calls FAIR, or the Force to Adjust Inadequate Requirements, said he takes issue with the University of California's present admitting system, which is computerized.

Most students are let into the schools by one of three criteria: their college board scores, their high school grades in required courses or a combination of scores and grades.

Four percent of the system's students are admitted by committee, which considers such matters as a school's needs for athletes or of underprivileged applicants, Moll said.

But the process largely ignores an applicant's personal strengths, the academic differences of high schools or a student's work in advanced secondary school courses, he said.

Moll said FAIR's method would correct those deficiencies by creating a formula to compare grades from different high schools and take into account advanced courses as well as college board test scores.

Former vice president Donna Dumas was elected as president of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, at 2701 N. A St. Other new officers included Vice President Clarence Tucker, Secretary Edith Aycock and Treasurer Bob Thomas. Retiring officers were Bob Stevens, president, and Gayla Taylor, secretary.

Mattress set on fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inmates at the District of Columbia Jail set fire to mattresses in their cells Friday in the second major disturbance at the overcrowded jail in the past three days.

Five firefighters, two guards and at least six inmates suffered smoke inhalation. The inmates were treated at the scene while two of the others were brought to nearby General Hospital, police said.

Two floors of cellblocks were flooded with smoke from three separate fires, forcing 800 inmates into an inner courtyard, officials said.

Police officers armed with shotguns stood guard as firefighters battled the blazes and set up fans to clear the dense smoke.

Habib's job had lowpoints, highpoints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philip C. Habib received widespread praise for his efforts as President Reagan's special Mideast envoy in a position where frustration dogged virtually his every step.

For Habib, replaced Friday in the key post, the high point came when he helped negotiate the withdrwawal of Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut last year, avoiding an all-out Israeli-PLO battle that could have destroyed the Lebanese capital completely.

It was an an achievement that brought him a nomination for the Nobel Peace Prize.

But Habib's shuttling to the Middle East over the last two years had as many low points as high ones.

THE MOST recent occurred in June when Syria refused to allow Habib to come to Damascus to attempt to negotiate a withdrawal of Syrian troops from Lebanon. The Syrians were said to blame Habib for much of what happened in Lebanon.

Some State Department officials were privately dismayed when Secretary of State George P. Shultz made an overnight visit to Damascus earlier this month, acceding to Syria's request that he not take Habib with him.

A senior State Department official said Friday that Syria's refusal to work with Habib was a factor in the decision to replace him with Robert C. McFarlane, the deputy presidential assistant for national security affairs under William Clark. Another official said Habib himself had asked to retire in view of the Syrians' position.

The most notable lowpoint in Habib's two years as the president's Mideast envoy occurred a few weeks after the Beirut withdrawal when rightist militiamen massacred many hundreds of Palestinian, including women and children, in the refugee camps in west Beirut after the Israeli army had seized control of the city.

The 63-year-old Habib is known to have felt double-crossed by Israel since he felt he had a commitment from them not to move into west Beirut. Furthermore, he had assured Palestinian guerrillas, who had previously protected the camps, that the refugees would be safe.

PRESIDENT REAGAN had brought Habib back from retirement and persuaded him to accept a Mideast peace mission on May 5, 1981, after which Habib spent virtually all his time focusing on Lebanon, even though he also had responsibility for trying to advance Reagan's Sept. 1 peace initiative, which Israel rejected and key Arab nations failed to support.

The gregarious and rotund Habib made it known several times he would like to return to private life, but Reagan kept finding new Mideast assignments and Habib kept accepting them.

Reagan elevated Habib to a position as his chief representative on all Mideast issues in November of last year.

Reagan's inititial assignment for Habib in 1981 was to "reduce tensions produced by recent developments surrounding the situation in Lebanon," said an announcement on June 1, 1981.

Habib succeeded in fabricating a cease-fire between Palestine Liberation Orgnaization guerrillas and Israel along the Israeli-Lebanese border.

THE CEASE-FIRE held for six months, with few violations either way, until Israel shattered it with its invasion of Lebanon on June 6, 1982, aimed at crushing the PLO.

Habib then turned his attention to negotiating a withdrawal of Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, a successful endeavor, and then a withdawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

His efforts on the troop withdrawal, which included months of meetings with Israeli and Lebanese neogotiators, led to Shultz' peace shuttle to the region in May.

Habib was on hand for the final negotiations in which Shultz succeeded in getting a withdrawal agreement between Israel and Lebanon on May 17. The agreement so far has failed to go into effect, however, because Syria has refused to cooperate by withdrawing its troops.

Before Reagan brought him into his administration, Habib had already retired following a distinguished career as a foreign service officer. He had a heart ailment and his health was said not to be good.

BORN IN BROOKLYN of Lebanese-American parents, Habib rose through the ranks of foreign service officers, holding such key posts as senior adviser to the U.S. delegation at the Vietnamese peace talks in Paris, ambassador to Korea from 1971 to 1974, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs from 1974 to 1976, and, finally, undersecretary of state for political affairs, the highest career position in the foreign service.

Reagan said Friday that Habib "has set a high standard in bringing us through eight months of difficult negotiations to the situation we face today and he will be sorely missed."

He said Habib, who resides in Belmont, Calif., would return to business and academic life. Habib had been teaching at Stanford before accepting Reagan's initial appointment.
