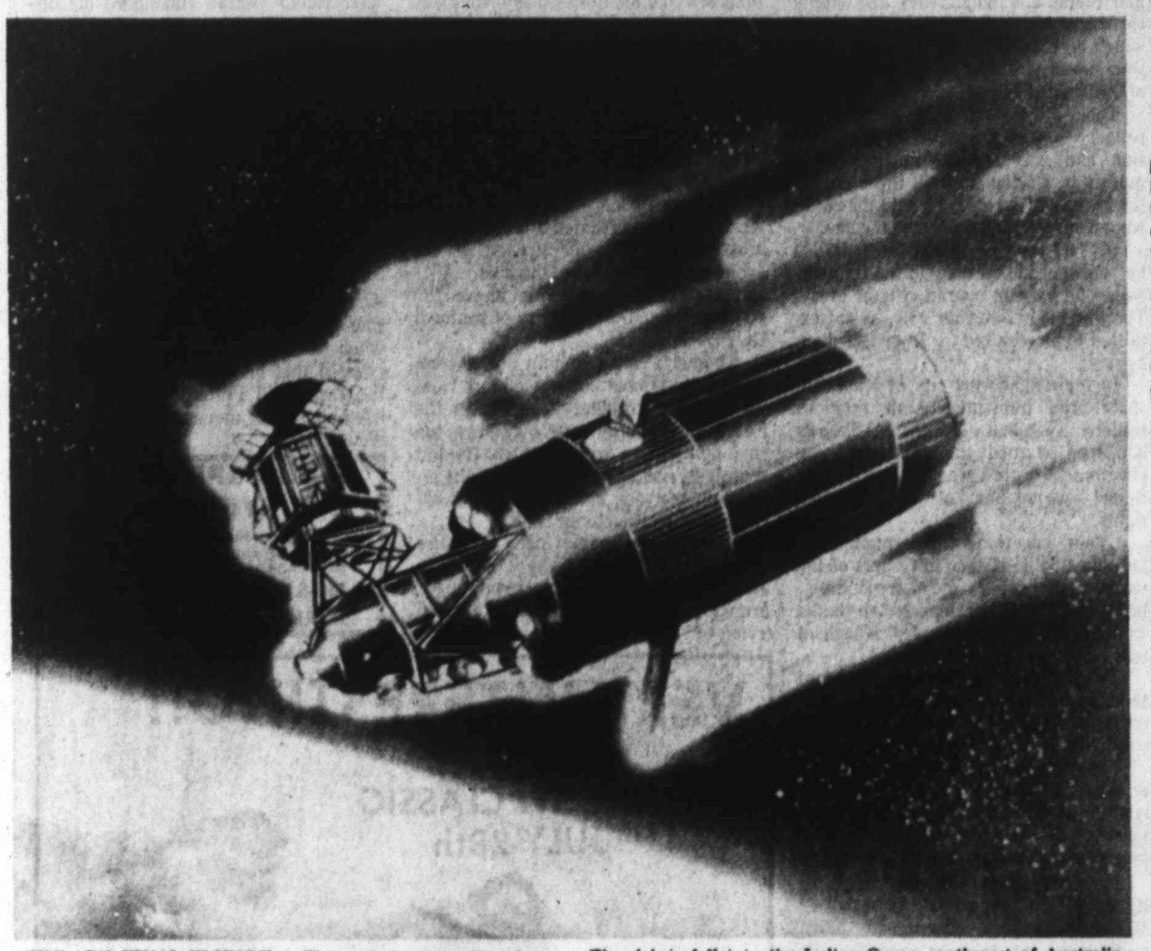
Fiery Plunge Ends Skylab Epic



SKYLAB'S FINAL PLUNGE — This artist's conception shows the Skylab space station streaming flaming gas as it began to burn after re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere this morning. The debris fell into the Indian Ocean southwest of Australia, despite earlier fears that the larger pieces might pose a threat to populated regions. (AP Laserphoto)

Debris Falls Into Sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skylab, a ghost ship with a proud tradition, plummeted back to Earth like a flaming meteor today. Trackers said tons of molten debris fell into the Indian Ocean southwest of Australia.

No one reported any pieces falling on land.

About 20 tons of fiery metal were scattered over 3,700 miles of the Indian Ocean, the North American Air Defense Command reported.

NORAD said the largest pieces of Skylab apparently hit at the front of the 100-mile wide corridor about 200 miles from the southwestern Australia city of Perth.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it received reports that the flaming laboratory was seen plunging through the sky from several points in southwestern Australia, including Perth, Kalgoorlie, Esperance and Albany.

It was nighttime there, which made the flaming pieces clearly visible in the atmosphere.

Sightings of 20 to 50 pieces were reported from Perth at 12:33 a.m. Thursday (11:33 p.m. CDT).

A space agency spokesman said a tracking station at Ascension Island in the south Atlantic off central Africa confirmed at 11:07 p.m. CDT that Skylab's solar panels were ripped away by the thickening atmosphere at a height of 69 miles.

About 500 pieces of the 77.5 ton spacecraft, including a 5,100-pound airlock shroud and a 3,900-pound lead safe which protected film from radiation, were expected to splash into the ocean.

Skylab's last signal was recorded at 11:11 p.m. CDT by the Ascension Island tracking station.

The space ship began its final plunge after the space agency sent it into a tumble to steer it away from North America.

In a final prediction of a long vigil, trackers forecast that Skylab would plunge back into the atmosphere between 11:01 p.m. CDT and 11:53 p. m. CDT.

The announcement came as Skylab was on the last of the 34,981 orbits it has logged since it was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., six years ago.

The Skylab control center reported that the spacecraft had dropped below orbital speed and "is indeed on its re-entry."

The final orbital path passed over the north Pacific, the northwest tip of the United States, north of Everett, Wash., south central Canada, north of Montreal and Ottawa, and the state of Maine, north of Augusta.

Earlier today, when it appeared Skylab would shower pieces on North America, the space agency ordered it to start tumbling in space. This reduced the drag on the spacecraft and extended its life long enough so that it would clear the continent.

"We think this is the safest and most prudent action we can take at this time to give us the absolute minimum probability of casualty of any sort from Skylab," NASA spokesmen told reporters.

A radio signal was sent at 2:47 a.m. CDT today to fire nitrogen gas thrusters which started the 77.5-ton craft "wobbling and rolling" as it passed through an altitude of 92 miles.

Confirmation that the maneuver worked came 30 minutes later when Skylab passed within range of a tracking station in Madrid, Spain.

NASA spokesman Bob Gordon reported, "The rate is not as high as anticipated at this time, but indications are that Skylab is beginning its final entry to earth."

The action was intended to delay Skylab's fiery re-entry about 30 minutes, until about noon. On that timetable, the tons of Skylab debris that did not burn up would fall harmlessly into the Indian Ocean.

The decision to start the craft tumblimg was made after the North American Air Defense Command, which has been tracking the spacecraft, issued a revised re-entry prediction at 11:35 p.m. CDT Tuesday. It forecast Skylab was likely to re-enter over the north Pacific, posing a potential threat to North America, primarily Canada.

The earlier predictions had placed the most likely re-entry area in the south Atlantic or Indian oceans, far from land.

"We decided to change our plans and initiate the tumble early to allow us an extra 30 minutes to get back over the Indian Ocean," the spokesman said. "If

Price Surge Dims Outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surging fuel and food prices are pushing the nation's economy toward a deeper recession than earlier believed and will likely mean double-digit inflation for the year, the Congressional Budget Office said today.

The budget office, which advises Congress on economic matters, also said unemployment will rise 1 to 2 percentage points above its current level by the end of 1980, meaning roughly 1 million to 2 million more workers would be without jobs.

The office's mid-year report on the nation's business outlook is gloomier than one it issued last January, when it predicted a mild recession in the second half of 1979, followed by an economic recovery in 1980.

The budget office is now forecasting a slightly deeper recession this year and a weaker recovery next year.

"There appears to have been no significant gain in overall economic activity so far in 1979," the office's report said. "Nevertheless, CBO does not expect a major recession this year."

However, the worsening economic outlook will confront Congress with difficult policy decisions, the report said.

"Economic growth could be boosted by cutting taxes, but this action would conflict with the goal of a balanced budget as well as with long-run efforts to reduce inflation," the report said.

The Carter administration had predicted a relatively modest inflation rate and continued economic growth this year. However, new figures due this week are expected to raise estimates for inflation and project near-zero growth in 1979.

Administration sources who asked not to be identified said Tuesday the administration's official forecast for unemployment by the end of next year would be raised from 6.2 percent to 6.9 percent — an increase of more than 700,000 people without jobs.

The new Congressional Budget Office report projects a 1979 economic growth rate of -2.0 to 0.0 percent after inflation is considered, compared to 0.0 to 2.0 percent growth in its earlier assessment. The administration had predicted 2.2 percent growth.

One congressional budget source, who asked not to be named, said the recession could also be longer than previously expected, possibly having already started and lasting three quarters instead of two.

The budget office's inflation and jobless estimates are also more pessimistic than earlier. The agency now foresees inflation for 1979 running at between 9.9 and 11.9 percent and unemployment hitting 6.4 to 7.4 percent by the end of the year.

Last January, the budget office put inflation at 7 to 9 percent and unemployment at 6.2 to 7.2 percent. Earlier this year, the administration predicted a 7.4 percent inflation rate and a jobless figure of 6.2 percent.

However, last week President Carter said hikes in crude oil prices charged by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could drive the inflation rate up an additional 2 to 2.5 percent, push the jobless rate over 6 percent and cut economic growth by 2.5 percent.

He declared the price hikes made a recession "much more likely."

The latest government estimates put unemployment at 5.6 percent in June, the lowest point in five years, and inflation at 13.4 percent on an annual basis. Economic growth last year was 4.4 percent after being adjusted for inflation.

The budget office has also downgraded its assessment of next year's expected recovery. Growth in 1980 is projected at 1.9 to 3.9 percent, compared to 3 to 5 percent. The administration has projected a 3.2 percent growth.

Inflation and unemployment will also remain stubbornly high in 1980, according to the budget office. Inflation is seen as slowing to 7.9 to 9.9 percent and the jobless rate would climb to 6.7 to 7.7 percent, the budget office said.

The administration has projected a 6.3 percent inflation rate in 1980.

Most private economists are predicting a moderate 1979 recession comparable in severity to the 1969-70 downturn.

Top U.S. General Bares Criticism Of SALT Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, laid out in blunt terms today the military's criticisms of SALT II. But his civilian boss assured the Senate the country would be better off with the pact than without it.

Jones endorsed the treaty without enthusiasm, calling it a "modest but useful step in a long-range process..."

Both Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Jones put particular stress on proceeding with the $30 billion MX missile and other programs designed to upgrade U.S. strategic weapons.

"I do not believe the United States will face strategic inferiority in 1985 or at any other time before or later," Brown insisted in answer to hard-line Senate critics of SALT II, "if we have SALT and if we do the things we need and plan to do to modernize our forces.

"I have no doubt that approval of SALT II will improve our military security as well as well our overall national security," he said.

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during the third day of hearings on the treaty was Dr. William Perry, undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, who came prepared to give detailed answers to questions on America's military weaponry.

Jones also disclosed the nation's top military officers were disappointed that the U.S. SALT negotiators had not been able to conclude more stringent limitations on two Soviet weapons systems: the Soviet Backfire bomber — an aircraft the Soviets say is a medium bomber, but which some U.S. experts say has intercontinental range —and the Soviet force of 308 giant SS-18 missiles.

Jones said: "Some may conclude that the agreement, by itself, will arrest the very dangerous adverse trends in Soviet strategic forces, including projected qualitative improvements.

"This is simply not the case."

Dallas Jury Says Estes, Pal Guilty

DALLAS (AP) — A jury today found paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes guilty on two of five counts dealing with an alleged scheme to bilk leasing companies of $500,000 in a phony oil field steam-cleaning operation and on conspiracy to conceal his assets from the Internal Revenue Service.

Co-defendant Raymond K. Horton was found guilty of one count of conspiring to conceal assets.

The eight-woman, four-man jury found Estes innocent on one count of violating interstate commerce laws dealing with the scheme to defraud the leasing companies and two counts of mail fraud.

These five counts were covered in two indictments.

The jury deadlocked, however, on five counts of a third indictment involving the steam-cleaners. The vote was 9-3 for acquittal.

U.S. District Judge Robert Hill ordered the panel back into deliberations to try and reach a verdict on the third indictment, even though the jurors said they did not feel they could arrive at a verdict.

The convictions will stand if the jury cannot decide the other issues, the judge said.

Estes faces a maximum 15 years in prison and fines up to $20,000 on the counts for which he was found guilty. Horton faces five years and $10,000.

Both defendants stared straight ahead as the verdicts were read at 11:55 a.m. Both were emotionless.

Feeble Hurricane Lashes Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hurricane Bob, the first Atlantic-season storm to bear a man's name, washed inland over the Louisiana coast today with gusty winds, high tides and heavy rains — but not much punch.

"There's not a great deal of wind damage and only a small amount of water damage," said Mayor Wayne Guidry of Grand Isle — one of the first spots passed by the storm. "Our most pressing problem seems to be from power failure. All of the island is out."

Other areas in the path of the storm reported only slight damage. At Houma, three inches of water splashed into the city hall basement and there were isolated power failures, but no electric lines were down.

"This is a small hurricane,," said forecaster H.R. Ramirez at the U.S. Weather Service in New Orleans. "It does not have a very well defined eye. It is very weak."

The storm, the second of the 1979 season in the Atlantic, developed suddenly Tuesday, forcing the evacuation of 8,000 offshore oil workers and an estimated 25,000 residents from towns along the low-lying Louisiana coast.

Some of the refugees whose homes were out of the path headed for home shortly after daylight.

"This is one of the easiest I've ever had," said Principal Carlee Nevel,whose Belle Chasse high school housed nearly 1,600 evacuees from southern Plaquemines Parish. He said he had handled 14 evacuations in 17 years.

As it blew over the marshy coast, Bob had winds just higher than the 75 mph needed for certification as a hurricane.

Actual landfall of the eye was at 6:15 a.m. at Lake Barre, according to radar at the New Orleans weather bureau. That is slightly west of Grand Isle, about 18 miles south west of the little town of Golden Meadow.

"It's not as scary as it sounds," said Bob Baldwin at radio station KLEB at Golden Meadow. "The roads are still open all the way to Leeville. Tides are running 3½ feet above normal. It doesn't look that bad at all."

At Grand Isle, about 60 miles southwest of New Orleans, the Coast Guard clocked wind gusts up to 50 mph. To the west in Lafourche Parish, civil defense

Texans Jailed In Cavern Caper

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Four whiskey-drinking, armed men who held a hostage nearly four hours Tuesday in Carlsbad Caverns and trapped another

(Other Stories About Takeover On Page 1, Sec. C)

105 persons in a nearby cave chamber were jailed today on misdemeanor charges.

The men, all from Texas, released their hostage unharmed and surrendered Tuesday night to authorities after talking with a newspaper publisher and negotiating a deal with federal officers so that they would be charged only with a misdemeanor.

District Attorney Mike McCormick said the men were jailed on a federal charge, attempted false imprisonment. It is a federal charge because the incident occurred in a national park.

"The misdemeanor charges were approved during negotiations by the U.S. attorney, R.E. Thompson, on the condition the men give themselves up without harming the hostage.

"Because of the way the negotiations went, there will be no state charges. When the U.S. attorney made that promise, it was my position that New Mexico was bound by that," McCormick said.

FBI agent Ron Hoatson said the misdemeanor deal came through "a legal officer in our office."

McCormick said the men would be arraigned today by a federal magistrate. He said bond would be set at that time. He said he wasn't sure where the arraignment would be held.

The hostage, Linda Phillips, 24, of Chattanooga, Tenn., had been held in the lunchroom, 750 feet underground. The men holding her were armed with two rifles, a shotgun and a pistol. After about three hours she and her captors were joined by Carlsbad Current-Argus publisher-editor Ned Cantwell, who responded to the men's demand that a reporter come into the Caverns to talk with them. The ordeal for the two ended at 7:10 p.m. when they were allowed to go to the surface in the Caverns elevator.

Cantwell said the men had demanded $1 million and an airplane to take them to Brazil, but otherwise were not specific.

The men, taken to the Eddy County jail in Carlsbad, were identified by Sheriff Tom Granger as Dennis James Mark, 39, of Riesel; and three from Odessa, David W. Kuczynski, 28, Eugene Hiram Meroney, 21, and William Charles Lovejoy, 28.

While waiting to be interrogated at the jail, the men were asked by a report-

Ginzburg's Wife Told To Leave

MOSCOW (AP) — Passport officials have told the wife of dissident Alexander Ginzburg she must leave the country to join him by July 25 or lose her chance to emigrate, her friends say.

MRS. GINZBURG

Ginzburg was one of five dissidents traded to the United States for two convicted Soviet spies April 27, under an agreement that included the emigration of close family members.

Irina Ginzburg and her two small sons are the only relatives still here. She has refused to leave without an informally adopted 19-year-old youth, Sergei Shibayev. Soviet authorities say Ginzburg has no legal relationship to Shibayev, who is now in the army.

Friends said Tuesday Mrs. Ginzburg was told of the deadline Monday when she went to the Moscow passport office.

Inmate Attacks 'Son Of Sam'

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Confessed "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz is in good condition at the Attica state prison infirmary after having his throat slashed by a fellow inmate.

Berkowitz was attacked early Tuesday. Officials said about 60 stitches were needed for the wound. He is expected to stay in the infirmary for one or two days.

Berkowitz walked away from the attack, but refused to identify his attacker, corrections services spokesman Lou Ganim said. State police began an investigation, but the weapon used was not immediately found, Ganim said.

Berkowitz, 26, confessed to killing six New York City residents and attacking seven others with a .44-caliber handgun in 1976 and 1977.

Actress' Bodyguard Enters Guilty Plea

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Steven Schiano of Norwalk, Conn., former handyman-bodyguard for actress Linda Blair, has pleaded guilty to a federal charge of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine.

Schiano, 23, was the last of 40 persons to be tried or enter pleas to federal or state charges of participating in international drug operations in 1977. Schiano's plea, entered Tuesday, includes a guarantee of his probation.

Miss Blair and her former boyfriend, rock musician Ted Hartlett, previously pleaded guilty to federal misdemeanor charges. All three will be sentenced after U.S. District Judge Howell W. Melton gets background reports from the U.S. probation office.

Indiana Governor Gets Top Post

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Otis R. Bowen, a Republican serving his second term as chief executive of Indiana, has been elected chairman of the National Governors' Association.

Bowen, 61, succeeded Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, a Democrat, at the closing session of the group's annual meeting here Tuesday. The chairmanship annually alternates between the two parties.

Guard Pleads Guilty To Theft

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A security guard has pleaded guilty to stealing $13,000 in cash and jewelry from the Los Angeles mansion of Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger.

James Harrington, 27, remained free on $3,000 bail after he entered the plea Tuesday to one count of felony grand theft before Superior Court Judge Carlos Velarde. Sentencing was scheduled for Aug. 7.

Jagger testified at a preliminary hearing in November that $3,000 in cash, a guitar-shaped diamond stickpin, a heart-shaped gold locket, two watches and a set of cufflinks were taken from his residence. He also testified that Harrington had a key to the Los Angeles house.

Jagger's girlfriend, Jerry Hall, testified she saw Harrington run out of the house the night of the burglary, Sept. 14. Harrington was a security guard for the Rolling Stones' U.S. tour last summer.

Lynde Out Of Hospital

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Actor-comedian Paul Lynde has been released from Akron General Medical Center following a bout with hepatitis, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Lynde was allowed to go home Tuesday, after having been hospitalized on July 3, three hours before he was to open in a production of "Don't Drink the Water."

Doctors have instructed Lynde to rest one week before opening in the play in Columbus on July 17.

Woman Gives Heart To Husband

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Barbara Thurber loves her husband, Gary, with all her heart — quite literally.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

She first gave him her heart when they were married, 15 years ago. Now, as an anniversary present, she's deeded it to him.

She presented her husband with a duly recorded quitclaim deed Monday to the "cardiac muscle that maintains the circulation of the blood, and controls the emotions which generate the term love."

Mrs. Thurber, who works for an attorney, said "I think I'm more romantic than he is and I'm more sentimental. But he really thought it was cute when he realized what it was."

Second Blaze Reported At Iranian Oil Refinery

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The second fire to hit the pipeline system feeding the Abadan oil refinery, the world's largest, was reported today by officials in southwest Iran.

Police sources, meanwhile, said they had found automatic rifles and empty cartridges near the sight of the first fire which occurred Saturday after an explosion ruptured a line 50 miles northeast of the Abadan facility.

Today's fire — 37 miles north of the refinery — was not caused by an explosion and was brought under control quickly by firefighers from three nearby towns, an official said. He said the cause was an unexplained rupture in the line.

He said the line, which brings 60,000 barrels of crude oil daily to the refinery, would be back in operation later today. The line hit in Saturday's fire is not expected to be repaired for five more days, he said.

In the neighboring city of Khorramshahr, the influential Arab religious leader Ayatollah Taher Al-Shobeir Khaghani warned the central Iranian government against what he saw as continued subjugation of Arab human rights.

"Your government has maintained an unjustifiable silence in respect of the violation of people's social freedoms ... in view of the current oppression that is troubling the Iranian people," Khaghani told a cheering group of Arabs.

To the north in Kurdistan, tens of thousands of Kurds, another disenchanted Iranian minority, demonstrated their continuing demands for autonomy.

The demonstrators, many of them armed, met little resistence from the central government, which withdrew most of its security forces from the province after violent battles last March.

Meanwhile, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has slapped Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's government down again overruling its order dismissing the head of the military police.

Defense Minister Taghi Riahi conceded that Khomeini, the religious leader of the Iranian revolution, "is above the government and the ministry of national defense" after Brig. Gen. Seif Amir Rahimi rejected his dismissal by Riahi and the ayatollah supported the general.

Rahimi said Khomeini, as leader of the revolution, replaced Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi as commander-in-chief of the armed forces and only he could hire and fire general officers.

"If the imam (Khomeini) wishes Gen. Rahimi to stay as commander of the military police," the defense minister told The Associated Press, "then I must confess that our strength is not even near equal to that of the imam.

"Ayatollah Khomeini is above the government and the Ministry of National Defense."

Khomeini called Rahimi out of compulsory retirement and named him commander of the military police after the February revolution that overthrew the shah and left the army in chaos. Rahimi reportedly had been forced out of the army with the rank of colonel in 1963 because of opposition to the shah.

Rahimi has made many enemies since his return because he has tried to enforce discipline in the demoralized armed forces. He also has been reported trying to replace Gen. Nasser Farbod as army chief of staff.

The general on Monday told a news conference he had uncovered a conspiracy against himself and Khomeini's Islamic revolution and would be arresting the plotters within hours. A few hours later Radio Tehran announced his dismissal, but an aide to Khomeini reported that the 79-year-old ayatollah said Monday night that "he must not go."

In another development Wednesday, a group of men armed with sticks and knives stormed a hotel in the popular Caspian Sea resort of Motel-e-Que because men and women had been swimming together on the hotel's beach.

Sadat, Begin Uphold Lebanon's Integrity

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed today that Lebanon should not be partitioned, but Sadat failed to win a pledge from the Israeli leader to stop new West Bank settlements.

Sadat, after a second day of summit talks with the Israeli leader, opened a joint news conference with a strong statement on Lebanon.

"We are for the full integrity of Lebanon and we shall never agree on anything that causes disintegration," Sadat said.

Begin said that although Israel has backed right-wing Christians and maintained its right to defend itself against the "so-called PLO" (Palestine Liberation Organization), "I share unequivocally the opinion of the president that the integrity of Lebanon be preserved."

Begin and Sadat, sitting in the ballroom of the 19th-century Ras El-Tine palace on the Mediterranean, said they had "very important" discussions on Palestinian autonomy but refused to divulge what progress had been made. They said they would meet again at the end of August in the Israeli port city of Haifa to continue their negotiations.

Two key stumbling blocks to broader Arab participation in the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty are Israeli bombing raids on Palestinian guerrilla camps in South Lebanon, and continued building of Jewish settlements on war-won land where Palestinian self-government is to be established.

Sadat said those two subjects were the main points of the summit.

Begin defended Israeli settlements, two of which have been started since the peace treaty was signed in March, and said, "We don't do any wrong" in seizing uncultivated land in the Occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

In the talks with Sadat, Begin said, "Each of us expressed his opinion and as President Sadat rightly said they are not identical. We agreed to differ."

Begin indicated Israel would not recognize the "free Lebanon" state declared by Christian militia leader Saad Haddad in southern Lebanon, but Israeli reprisals seemed likely to continue.

CUBA SIGNS PACT

ST. GEORGES, Grenada (AP) — Cuba has signed a two-year technical assistance pact with Grenada, strengthening the Communist government's ties with the Caribbean island's new government. Details of the agreement were not made public. The Cuban government reportedly has been supplying medical aid to the 110,000 Grenadans since Maurice Bishop ousted Prime Minister Eric Gairy while Gairy was in New York.

Mail-Via-Satellite Demonstrated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service, in its biggest step into the electronic age, is inaugurating a mail-via-satellite network that photographs letters and transmits them from Washington or New York to London in less than a minute.

The new computerized INTELPOST was beginning this week a month-long demonstration stage between the United States and England. The Postal Service then plans a one-year field test in which actual mail will be sent between the United States and seven countries.

England, Argentina, Belgium, West Germany, France, Iran and the Netherlands have purchased computer equipment to join in the project in August.

The cost of mailing a letter to Britain will be $5 a page — the rates may be reduced if the system proves profitable — plus additional postage for hand delivery if the sender desires.

The Postal Service, contending the rate is far cheaper than Telex fees, hopes the system will someday be a big moneymaker and timesaver for the public.

INTELPOST has headquarters at newly remodeled, computer-filled rooms in the Postal Service's Washington offices and at the World Trade Center in New York.

The satellite system works like this:

A person bearing a letter arrives at the post office and fills out a brief form stating his address and the address of the intended recipient.

The postal clerk glances at the letter to make certain the print is dark enough to photocopy. ("We don't want to read the letter," says Jack Funderburk, director of the Postal Service's new Office of International Electronic Message Systems, stressing the importance of protecting individual privacy.)

The clerk adjusts the computer coding and inserts the letter in a scanning machine, which photographs it in black and white and transmits it in digital form to receiving equipment in England.

Within a minute or two, a post office in London receives copies of both the letter and the address form and promptly folds them into a window-envelope that displays the address of the recipient.

Senate Rejects Popular Vote Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Birch Bayh says lobbying by blacks and Jews, fearful of having their voting strength submerged, doomed his drive for popular election of presidents.

The Senate overwhelmingly rejected Tuesday Bayh's proposed constitutional amendment to scrap the Electoral College, giving it only a 51-48 margin instead of the two-thirds majority needed.

The Indiana Democrat, who has pushed such a constitutional change for more than a decade, said he will not try again in this Congress.

"We lost progressive and liberal senators who have always before supported efforts to achieve voter equality," Bayh said, blaming a "very strong lobbying effort" by such groups as the National Urban League and the American Jewish Congress.

"There were a number of minority citizens and heavy contributors in the Jewish community that really put pressure on their senators," he said.

These black and Jewish leaders argued that the Electoral College gives minority voters an advantage because they are concentrated in big states with large electoral votes.

Bayh denied this and argued that the winner-take-all rule, giving a state's entire electoral delegation to whoever does best at the polls, often nullifies the votes of minority citizens.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Infirm Action On Somoza

THE INTERNAL challenge to the Somoza regime in Nicaragua provides President Carter with one of the best opportunities since he took office to implement his touted international human rights policy.

But Carter is frittering away his chance to exercise the bold leadership needed, displaying instead a preference for relatively timid half-measures that have produced no visible results to date.

The failure of the White House to take firm action could lead to precisely what the United States fears most in Nicaragua—a new government influenced if not dominated by Marxists and terrorists.

THE EVENTUAL toppling of the Somoza dictatorship is regarded as a virtual certainty, but timing is increasingly emerging as a critical factor.

Because most of Nicaragua's anti-Somoza political leadership is concentrated within the Broad Opposition Front, the country's next generation of leaders logically would come from its ranks.

Inadequate pressure on Somoza, the third consecutive member of the same family to rule the country since 1933, undoubtedly contributed to resumption of civil war led by the armed opposition, the Sandinista Liberation Front.

Protracted struggle will only enable radical elements to develop more sophisticated internal leadership and to conclude that they, not the BOF civic opposition represented by moderates, are the sole rightful heirs to the revolution.

ONLY AFTER the most recent recurrence of war in the Central American nation did U.S. policy-makers muster the courage to semi-publicly repudiate the regime.

Administration insiders told nationally syndicated columnist Robert Walters they would have disowned Somoza long ago were not for the efforts of Rep. Charles Wilson, a Democrat who represents a predominantly rural congressional district in East Texas.

"When the U.S. sought to sever its support, Wilson threatened 'rough treatment' of the bill needed to implement the Panama Canal treaties and warned that he would fight to 'torpedo' that legislation," Walters reported.

The probability of another Communist government on the face of the earth increases each day the U.S. lets pass without replacing its limp, flabby rhetoric with outspoken opposition to the family that has misruled Nicaragua for the past 45 years.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

A'mount A Mount

IF HE COMES down from the mountain with a plan for leading Americans out of the Arabian desert and into a Promised Land of their own, Jimmy Carter can yet write his name favorably in the sands of history.

But if he comes down with 10 more tablets of "thou shalt nots," such as he did in 1977, the President will be buried under the twin pyramids of energy dependency and economic ruin.

As this is written, the world is waiting to learn if Carter has spent his days at Camp David chiseling out meaningful policies or merely polishing his image.

Few believe that he'll "pull a Lyndon" and announce that he's too busy fighting inflation and looking for oil to spend any of his time running for re-election.

On the contrary, a roster of those Carter has summoned for counsel at his Domestic Summit offers little hope that he'll put the nation's interests ahead of his personal ambitions.

THE PRESIDENT'S political problems and the nation's economic and energy crises, though, all are rooted in a failure to find a sense of national direction and rally support for it.

Carter's key to winning in 1976 has proved to be his undoing.

He was elected because conservatives and liberals both believed, erroneously, that he was one of their own.

Conservatives thought they heard him saying he would reduce the role of the government in economic decisions, cut spending, balance the budget and curb the bureaucracy.

Liberals thought they heard him saying he would cause government to make better economic decisions, increase spending for domestic programs, balance the budget by cutting defense and streamline the bureaucracy so it could enforce more regulations more efficiently.

A bare majority, from both ends of the political spectrum, thought he would make the system work better.

AFTER HIS ELECTION, Mr. Carter continued trying to please all people, as he had done during the campaign.

It didn't work. A President must decide who he is, what he stands for, where he's going, before he can hope to lead the people.

By failing to chart a clear national course, the President has let the nation drift in a no-man's land in which it's difficult to get more than a 55-45 split of public opinion on any issue except that the President is doing a lousy job.

If the President comes down from Camp David with a clear-cut decision to turn to the left or turn to the right, he at least will have taken the first step toward leadership.

If he is confident and forceful, he'll lead a majority with him. But if he's wishy-washy, still trying to find a national consensus instead of mold one, he will mark himself as a failure.

IN FAIRNESS to the President, it has been a big spending Congress—just as it was with his Republican predecessors—which has caused inflation and which has vacillated, along with him, on energy and foreign policy issues.

But it is the President who could make himself a hero, in time, by pronouncing that America is alive and well and living somewhere in the future.

This can be done by unshackling American business, giving it incentive to produce more energy, more goods, more services; by rewarding productive workers rather than drones living off the federal treasury; and by drastically reducing the scope of government programs and intervention in social and economic welfare.

If you want more productivity, you get it by freeing the producers, not by over-taxing them. If you want to be captive to a foreign oil cartel, you get bound tighter by trying to live off what they'll let you have, not by trying to break loose through your own productive efforts.

SUGGESTIONS THAT Mr. Carter save himself by blaming OPEC countries for all of America's economic and energy woes are nothing more than recognition that, throughout history, wars have been fought for political and economic reasons.

No country has ever permitted itself to be brought to its knees because its supply lines have been cut off; it always fights for national survival, just as a man fights for his own survival.

But America has within its own borders the means and the will to produce and break out of the international straitjacket if government will quit trying to make its citizens dependent on it and encourage them, instead, to invest their money and time in productive enterprises.

And Jimmy Carter would do well to remember that Moses, because of his frustration and anger over disobedience to the "thou shalt nots" he brought down from the mountain, was denied the opportunity to lead his people out of the Arab wilderness into the Promised Land.

They got there without him.

Bentsen Sees 'Wolf' At Door

(First of two related columns)

WASHINGTON—It's bad enough to find America a "pitiful helpless giant" in the Vietnam bush war, but it's getting so that we don't come out winners on our home turf—the workshop.

Unless we're saved by the Nuclear Holocaust, which might not be nearly so hard on our pride, the U.S. seems likely to reach the end of the 20th century as an unproductive and self-defeated hobo among nations.

The trend is not a new one, since it began when we started playing Mr. Big Heart as the principal victor of World War II. Presidents from Truman through Ford—and the Congresses which served with them—have been primarily absorbed with foreign policy.

CONSEQUENTLY, THE country has drifted into social causes which are much easier to catch the attention and stir the adrenalin than doing a day's work in the heat of the sun or the boredom of the assembly line.

President Carter is the first of his kind to make war on Federal paperwork. The 96th Congress is the first to do serious work on Sunset legislation, or laws that terminate useless spending.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the tall Texan who is chairman of the Joint Economic Committee is running an investigation with some shocking revelations about the central cause of our inflation, slow economic growth, declining dollar and loss of foreign markets.

He finds that American productivity wanes while that of our competitors zooms. The output per manhour for Americans is equivalent to the inability of the U.S. to win a battle or campaign—and, in the long run, just as disastrous.

CHAIRMAN BENTSEN was aghast last month at the preliminary findings of his committee staff. Japan in 1950-77 increased its productivity four times faster than the U.S.

France, Italy and Germany worked 2.5 times faster than we, and even socialistic Britain turned out work at twice our speed.

A witness before Bentsen's committee, Deputy director Johan P. White, Office of Management and Budget, dug much deeper. A large factor in the productivity dropoff, 1965-73, resulted from the virtual end of farm migration into the industrial jobs.

Much more injurious to productivity was the slowdown in technological innnovation—Yankee ingenuity. The quality had put our country in front of the world and kept it there for decades.

But by far the most retarding force has been federal regulation in the name of environmental improvement.

Back in 1887 the central government created the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) for the purpose of protecting free enterprise, but from the New Deal onward the government has used its regulations for social reform.

This trend became something like a spasm in the 1960s when Congress authorized 26 new regulatory agencies.

They forced industry into improving the environment, promoting public health in factories and mines and generally raising the cost of doing business, besides introducing hordes of inspectors and more mounds of paper work.

Whether the money-and-manpower investment in clean air and water, safer workplaces and patronizing attitudes toward the consumer has been worth the cost, or whether the results are greater than the waste, we can only measure in one way—the continued dropoff of productivity.

It is certain, as it was in Vietnam, that America has lost its place at the top of the world.

Sylvia Porter:

No Policy Can Plug All Medicare Holes

(First of two columns)

ITEM: AN 80-year-old woman spent more than $50,000 in a three-year period, paying premiums on 31 health insurance policies to supplement her Medicare coverage. At the end, she took out a loan to help her pay the premiums.

ITEM: Two elderly sisters with a combined income of about $5,000 a year, were sold identical policies with premium payments totaling $2,200 over an 18-month period. The premium payments wiped out the life savings of one sister and there was no possibility whatsoever that either sister could keep up the payments.

ITEM: A Pennsylvania widow, nearing 80, was found to be spending $100 of her $109 monthly old-age pension on insurance. She said she sold baked goods and dug into her savings to survive.

AN ESTIMATED 15 million of the 23 million Americans 65 and over have at least one insurance policy to supplement Medicare, according to a just-released report of the Select Committee on Aging in the House of Representatives.

Almost one-quarter of that huge total have more than one policy; some have three, four, or more.

This—despite the fact that most policies include a "coordination of benefits" clause which means that in cases where the coverage of the policies overlaps, only one will pay off.

"The truth is that there is no policy that will plug all of Medicare's gaping holes and provide them with the comprehensive coverage they desperately want," says Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., committee chairman.

"But agents selling complicated policies with hundred word sentences that supplement the intricate Medicare benefits, promise these scared old people the sun and the moon and convince them to buy 10, 20, 30, and in one instance that we know about, 91 different policies."

SOME COMPANIES give the agents a cut of up to 65 percent of the premium paid on any policy they sell the elderly, the committee report states. After the company takes one bite for profit, another bite for administrative expenses, only 20 to 30 cents of every $1 goes for the payment of benefits.

According to the report, experts such as former Pennsylvania Insurance Commissioner Herbert S. Denenberg recommend that those older people who need individual Medicare supplementary policies should look first to Blue Cross and Blue Shield "because they return more than 90 cents out of every premium $1 to the policyholder in benefits."

Commercial insurers find it hard to match this proportion, the report notes, because unlike Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans, they must pay agents' commissions and other sales costs.

SOME COMMERCIAL companies must satisfy their stockholders as well as their policyholders. The amount of claims a company pays, measured against the premiums it collects, is, in insurance lingo, the company's "loss ratio."

The higher the loss ratio, the better the value of the policy to the insured person.

Policies that pay service benefits are more valuable than those which pay indemnity benefits, for service benefits automatically keep pace with rising costs and pay for all or a percentage of the charges not covered by Medicare.

Indemnity benefits pay a flat fee per day.

* But be warned: the ads may not tell you that their coverage does not start until the hospital stay has lasted a long time—say, starting the 61st day. Since the average hospital stay for a person 65 or older is 14 days (for a younger person, eight days) few will ever collect on such policies.

* Also be cautious about buying policies from mail order insurance companies, which don't have to be registered with the State Insurance Commissioner.

WHILE MOST HEALTH policies bought on an individual (not group) basis will not provide benefits right away for an illness or condition you have when the policy is issued, good companies will pay for treatment of those conditions after a waiting period of about a year.

* Check how far back in your medical history a company will go in searching for pre-existing conditions (as far back as birth?). Find out about all these points before you sign for a policy.

Tomorrow: Exploitation of the Elderly in Medi-Gap Insurance.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Getting To Know All About You

SCRABBLE, VA.—The American Society of Newspaper Editors last year commissioned a study of newspaper readers.

The purpose, to put it painfully, was to determine why newspaper readership is declining or barely holding its own. What are we doing that turns you off? What can we do to regain your affection?

The study, just completed, was undertaken by professional pollsters in 12 different daily newspaper markets. Some of the findings are enough to make an old-timer gulp.

One of the principal conclusions is that many of us in the newspaper business have been trying earnestly to give you the kind of product you seem not really to want.

WE HAVE BEEN trying our hardest to be objective, dispassionate, impersonal and unbiased; we have been living up to the credo of Sergeant Friday: Just the facts, ma'am.

Well. Says the study: "There is strong evidence that the impersonal nature of most newspapers, their remoteness from ordinary people, is an important factor in declining readership.

"Many comments suggest that readers feel little emotional attachment and less loyalty to newspapers whose editors and reporters are strangers to them."

In an age of TV celebrities and glamorous anchormen, the people have come to expect personal relationships with those who bring them news and commentary. They expect "a much more personalized journalism than tradition has permitted."

They ask, "How can I believe you if I don't even know who you are?"

Let me do what I can to make amends. I am me, James Jackson Kilpatrick Jr., born in Oklahoma City, Nov. 1, 1920.

My father, who died some years ago, was a timberman; my mother, who still lives in Oklahoma City at 85, is a gentlewoman who early in my childhood detected the writer's spark and breathed upon it.

We were moderately well-to-do through the 1920s. I remember a Hupmobile and then a Nash sedan as big as a covered wagon, and after that a series of Studebakers.

IN THE SUMMERS we used to drive all the way to Brainerd, Minn., for a vacation on a lake. The roads were terrible, but my father—a great godlike figure with shaggy eyebrows and a formidable mustache—drove the Nash as if he were Poseidon driving a chariot drawn by dolphins.

It was a good childhood. A precocious little fellow, I went to a preschool kindergarten the autumn I was 4. I learned to read by the phonics method, so successfully that I was a committed bookworm at 6.

Thereafter I read insatiably; I still do. My first published poem was in a magazine called Child's Life. I may have been 7 at the time. It was the year of Lindbergh's flight to Paris.

My father dealt in fence posts, railway ties and bridge flooring. Came the Depression and the bottom dropped out of his business. The stresses of that experience, plus some personal tensions I couldn't comprehend at the time, led to divorce.

MY MOTHER WENT to work in a bookstore; I held down summer jobs as a copyboy at the Oklahoma City Times.

Then I went off to the University of Missouri and worked my way through the journalism school. Early in 1941 I accumulated enough credits for a B.J. degree.

I am numbered among the "day people" who function best in the early morning, run down by afternoon and go yawning to bed by 10 o'clock.

Therefore I wanted to work on an afternoon newspaper. The Richmond (Va.) News Leader took me on as a general reporter.

Chronic bronchial asthma put me 4-F in the draft. Every branch of the service turned me down. I couldn't even give blood to the Red Cross. So I served out the war as a brigade leader in the local fire guard and a volunteer in the air watch.

Meanwhile I was covering every local beat on the paper—business news, state and federal courts, City Hall, police, fire, politics, the Virginia General Assembly.

AFTER EIGHT YEARS as a reporter, they moved me into editorial writing. In 1949 Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, another godlike figure, named me his successor as editor.

For the next 17 years I wrote thousands of words every week of solid conservative gospel. In 1964 I began writing this nationally syndicated column.

Fifteen years later, here I am—married, three sons, three grandchildren, two dogs, a mortgaged home in the mountains 80 miles from Washington, a lawn full of crab grass and a garden full of rabbits.

It's nice to get acquainted.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Jupiter, Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, was born July 11, 1767.

On this day in history:

In 1933, all school teachers in Germany were ordered to read Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf" to become familiar with the Nazi creed.

In 1952, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was nominated as Republican presidential candidate with Richard Nixon as his running mate. They were elected in November.

In 1955, the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado was dedicated with 300 cadets in its first class.

In 1973, a Brazilian jetliner crashed on approach at Orly Airport in Paris, killing 122 of the 134 persons aboard.

In 1978, a trank truck carrying liquid gas exploded at a campsite in Spain, killing 188 campers.

A thought for the day: American attorney John Calhoun said, "The surrender of life is nothing, compared to acknowledgement of inferiority."

Carter Criticizes OPEC, Praises Saudi Arabia

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after blaming the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for America's economic woes, is now praising Saudi Arabia as a good friend of the United States.

The president at first accused the oil cartel of causing world suffering and possibly an election-year recession in the United States. He seemed to be running for re-election as though OPEC were his opponent.

But now he has gone out of his way to thank the cartel's most important member for pumping a little more oil, promising to ease fuel shortages but swelling for a while the petroleum imports Carter has promised to cut.

The president's zigzag runs counter to the advice given him by his domestic policy aide, Stuart Eizenstat, who had said "a statement which goes light on OPEC ... will not convince the public that anything is different."

The seeming inconsistency thus leaves questions about whether Carter can seize what his advisers tell him is an unprecedented opportunity to rally the nation, cure the nation's energy sickness and enhance his chances for re-election.

Ironically, the cartel's huge price increases were seen in the White House as a political windfall for Carter.

As OPEC acted, American voters were fuming in gasoline lines, inflation was running at an annual rate of more than 13 percent despite nearly a year of anti-inflation efforts by Carter, a recession was viewed as all but certain and the president's approval rating had sunk to virtually the lowest point of any president since the advent of public opinion polling.

The price increase, while it promised to worsen inflationary pressures and dampen economic growth, gave Carter someone else to blame.

It also added to a crisis atmosphere that may have scared Congress enough to follow where Carter wants to lead.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the OPEC boost and long gas lines had made Congress more receptive to Carter initiatives than at any time since he took office.

Maybe so. After rejecting virtually every proposal made by Carter over the last two years to curb the U.S. thirst for imported oil, the House passed the president's oil-profits tax and Congress began talking seriously about reviving a standby plan to ration gasoline. Criticism of Carter's decontrol of domestic oil prices receded.

Eizenstat wrote a memorandum to Carter dated June 28, which was later published in the Washington Post. His advice: "assert leadership ... shift the cause for inflation and energy problems to OPEC ... seize this opportunity." He said it could be Carter's last chance.

At first Carter followed that lead. He said OPEC's price boost would cause "worldwide suffering." Then he said it makes a U.S. recession "more likely." Then Powell said it is "at the root of all our economic problems."

No exceptions were made for Saudi Arabia, even though it was charging $5 a barrel less for its oil than other OPEC nations and was reliably reported to be planning to boost production.

Carter promised a "bold and forceful" program to curb oil imports, said it would be tailored for quick congressional approval and scheduled a speech to the nation to explain its broad outlines.

But then Carter canceled his speech without explanation, launched into a series of secret meetings whose purpose is not yet entirely clear and generally left the public mystified about what he was up to.

But Monday, White House spokesman Rex Granum summoned reporters and read a statementsaying Saudi Arabia had agreed to increase oil production, something that was already well-known.

"The president has expressed the appreciation of the American people for this decision," Granum said.

Rather than standing up to OPEC, the president was at pains to thank publicly the biggest oil exporter of all.

Not what the Eizenstat memo envisioned. The last paragraph said: "With strong steps we can mobilize the nation around a real crisis and with a clear enemy — OPEC."

Pit Bulldogs Flatten Tires

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (UPI) — Two pit bulldogs who "just don't like uniforms" chased a policeman into his patrol car, then stalled the vehicle by chewing through all four tires.

"They were real friendly — they just don't like uniforms," said Santa Clara County Animal Control officer Bill Manley, who helped round up the dogs and impound them at a Humane Society facility.

Patrolman Ruben Grijalva said he answered a report of vicious dogs Sunday night at Lakewood Park.

"I spotted two pit bulls and a Labrador," Grijalva said. "They attacked me and forced me back into my car."

He said he attempted to drive away but "I heard a thump and thought I'd run one over — so I stopped." Instead, he said, he heard his tires going flat.

"When I arrived, they'd eaten all four tires," Manley said.

The dogs were identified Monday as Lady and Isaac. Their 17-year-old owner was cited for a city leash law violation.

Pinto Explodes After Repairs

CENTRALIA, Wash. (UPI) — Geraldine Volk says the mechanic assured her she need not worry about an explosion if her Ford Pinto was hit from the rear because he had made factory-suggested modifications to the vehicle.

But Sunday Mrs. Volk's 18-year-old daughter and two passengers barely escaped with their lives when the Pinto was rear-ended and burst into flames.

The State Patrol said Lila Volk and two teen-age friends were driving four miles south of Centralia when a vehicle in front suddenly slowed for a turn.

Lila hit the brakes, and the Pinto was struck from behind by a pickup truck, the patrol said.

The Pinto's gas tank caught fire. The flames licked at Lila's hair as the three teen-agers struggled to escape, finally kicking open the door on the driver's side.

"As soon as they got out, the car just exploded," Mrs. Volk said.

Long before the accident, Mrs. Volk said, she had taken the Pinto into a mechanic to make the safety modifications suggested by Ford. The auto company had acknowledged the original design could present a safety hazard in rear-end collisions.

"Don't worry about it exploding," Mrs. Volk quoted the mechanic as telling her.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures declined Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade on speculative selling before the release of a major government crop report.

The Agriculture Department report, set for release Wednesday, will show estimated grain production based on crop conditions as of July 1. Commission houses sold futures ahead of its release on expectations that it will show increases in expected production, portending larger supplies of grains this fall.

Also, recent government reports on crop conditions in various states showed that conditions may not have been as dry as traders had expected.

Private Carrier Mail Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private carriers would be permitted to deliver extremely urgent letters in certain limited circumstances under a proposal made public by the U.S. Postal Service.

The Postal Service, in a formal notice of proposed rulemaking, said it was "inadvisable" to restrict private carriers from delivering mail if the Postal Service cannot provide "the type of urgent delivery than some senders need."

Former Store Employee Testifies At Brown Trial

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A former employee of the market destroyed by a Jan. 26 blaze testified Tuesday he saw Calvin Brown and the two men killed in blaze inside the store about 15 minutes before the fire broke out.

However, under cross-examination from Brown's attorney, Tommy Turner, Delfino Rodriquez said that it was under duress that he gave a statement to police about what he saw the morning of the fatal blaze.

Rodriquez, who had worked at the East Broadway Serv-U Food Market, was one of nine persons called to the 137th District Court witness stand during the second day of testimony in the 35-year-old Brown's arson trial.

Brown, of 3227 67th St., was indicted in February by a grand jury on the charge of setting fire to the 704 E. Broadway market in order to collect insurance money.

Just before 1 a.m. Jan. 26, the fire killed the structure's owner, Andrew Zournas, 52, of 3011 42nd St., and Mark Corley, 27, of 2126 52nd St.

Tuesday afternoon, Rodriquez told the five-woman, seven-man panel he had left work about 8 p.m. the night before the fire, but returned to the store about 12:35 a.m. Jan. 26 to buy some food after spending the evening at a city nightclub.

Rodriquez said the store was closed but that he saw Brown's car parked outside and knocked on the grocery's front doors. In response to the knock, he said, Zournas and a man he later learned was Corley came from the back of the store.

He said that he did not talk to either man and that Zournas motioned for him to leave. But, Rodriquez testified, he did talk to Brown, who also came from the back storage area of the market, before leaving.

And, Rodriquez said, he saw white smoke coming from the area where the men apparently had been.

"I mentioned it (the smoke) to Calvin," Rodriquez said, "and he said everything was all right and go to the other store to get some chicken."

But under relentless questioning from Turner, Rodriquez admitted he earlier had told Brown's attorneys that he told police he was "too drunk" that night and didn't remember anything.

And Rodriquez also hesitantly said that it was only after police pressured him for a written statement that he agreed to provide authorities with one relating the testimony he gave Tuesday.

"Isn't it true that not until police threatened to charge you with the same thing they were going to charge Calvin with, and threatened to book you and book you again that you gave them the statement?" Turner asked.

"Yeah," Rodriquez answered after a lengthy pause.

On re-direct examination, Rodriquez told Assistant District Attorney Clint Averitte that the reason the former market employee did not want to give a statement was "Calvin is a good friend."

Also Tuesday, a former employee of the second Serv-U grocery, at Fourth Street and Avenue U, owned by Brown, told the court a "shocked" Brown came to close that grocery about 1:15 a.m. Jan. 26.

David Ruddy, who now lives in Vernon, said Brown had called the store at 12:45 a.m. to say he would be over shortly afterward to close the market. About five minutes later, Ruddy said, the grocery's alarm company called trying to locate Brown because the Broadway store's hold-up alarm had gone off.

Ruddy said when Brown arrived at the Fourth Street store about 1:15 a.m., he went directly to the back of the market. Ruddy said that when he called after Brown with the alarm company message, Brown said that he knew the alarm had gone off.

After returning to the front of the store, Ruddy testified that he told a dazed and "shocky looking" Brown about the day's business at the store.

"He (Brown) said nothing was good and I asked him about the other (Broadway) store and he said it was a total loss," Ruddy said.

Under questioning from Turner, Ruddy, a licensed vocational nurse, said Brown appeared to be in shock and that persons in shock often act strangely.

Earlier during Tuesday's testimony, Fire Marshal Robert Stokes said he found burn patterns in the front grocery area and back storage room of the gutted building that indicated the fire was intentionally started by using a flammable liquid.

Stokes also said that the way the structure was damaged by an explosion indicated that a heavier-than-air type of incendiary gas vapor was ignited.

The structure's walls were tilted in at the top, Stokes said, the type of damage usually sustained in a "low-explosion."

Stokes explained that most vapors are lighter than air and rise so if ignited the upper portion of a structure is damaged. However, the fire marshal said, some vapors are heavier than air and tend to accumulate and spread near a building's floor.

Gasoline vapors, Stokes said, are heavier than air and the prosecution also introduced testimony from several policemen and fire officials who said they detected an odor of gas at the fire scene.

A 55-gallon barrel with a pump connected to it also was entered into evidence. Police Detective Cpl. George Parramore testified that about two inches of gasoline was found in the drum, which was badly damaged by the explosion and fire.

Oil Company Responds To Damage Suit Charges

SAN ANGELO (UPI) — Sun Oil Co. has responded to a $10 million damage suit by saying it could not be held liable for the deaths of two men and the injuries of two others because the subcontracted workers were aware their oil field jobs were dangerous.

Ector County officials testifying in the trial of the suit Tuesday said they detected natural gas spewing from a pipe in early 1977 near Big Lake where the two men had been fatally injured in a fire and explosion three months before.

The testimony came in the second day of the $10 million federal suit against Sun Oil and Texas Tanque Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Odessa. The action was brought by the relatives of two men who died in the explosion and two others who were injured.

Sun Oil attorney Lucius D. Bunton said the company leased the property from Texas Tanque and had no responsibility for the explosion. He said Don Holliday and his crew knew the dangers inherent in their work.

Texas Tanque attorney John E. Gunter also said his client "had nothing to do" with the accident although it owned the property.

All four of the men injured in the explosion and fire were employed by Don Holliday Co., an Odessa oil tank repair firm. Holliday's crew was hired by Texas Tanque, a subcontractor for Sun Oil, to construct a walkway between an existing tank and a tank recently brought to the site about five miles from Big Lake.

Hydrocarbon fumes from one of the storage tanks apparently ignited as the men worked in November of 1976, resulting in an explosion and fire. Ector County Justice of the Peace James E. Harris and district attorney's investigator Jerry Davis said they visited the site and saw evidence of gas leaking from the pipe three months after the fire and explosion occurred.

Holliday's son, Donald Royce, 16, and Garvin Dean Moore suffered severe burns over most of their bodies. They died several weeks later at Brooke Army Burn Center in San Antonio.

Another worker, Guy Hadorn Jr., suffered burns over 50 percent of his body and Holliday himself was burned on his hands and back.

The suit, filed by Billye McClane, mother of Donald Royce Holliday, Don Holliday, Guy Hadorn Jr. and Wilma Moore, mother of Garvin Moore, alleges that negligence by Sun Oil and Texas Tanque caused the accident. All the plaintiffs are Odessa residents.

Holliday testified Monday that when he was notified Nov. 4, 1976, to install the walkway, he was told the "job was ready. Everything was ready to go." Thus, Holliday testified he "assumed" the tank was safe.

Boston Pops Performs Without Fiedler

BOSTON (AP) — The scene at Symphony Hall was as if Arthur Fiedler had never left — except that the podium was empty.

Leaderless, the 86 members of the Boston Pops swung into "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by John Philip Sousa to open the regular Tuesday night concert at Symphony Hall.

"We shall miss him enormously," the Pops assistant conductor, Harry Ellis Dickson, told the audience. "He would have insisted that the show must go on."

Dickson, a 41-year veteran with the Pops, then gave the down beat and stepped from the flower-banked podium, leaving it vacant as the orchestra played.

The tune was the orchestra's tribute to the maestro who had led it for 50 years. He died of heart failure at age 84 Tuesday morning in the bedroom of his Brookline, Mass., home.

First, only the strings played. Then the orchestra burst into a full sound, the flutes, the brass and the percussions picking up the beat, the way it blared when Fiedler conducted.

Members of the audience, solemn at first, shook their heads gaily to the beat of the march that Fiedler had made a signature in a half century of conducting.

With a crescendo, the music ended and the orchestra members stood, heads bowed. The audience joined in a moment of silence.

Dickson mounted the podium to begin a concert typical of the Fiedler era, a touch of Handel, a dash of Tchaikovsky, Morton Gould's arrangement of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and a spot of Neil Sedaka's "Love Will Keep Us Together."

The public will have another chance to pay tribute to Fiedler Sunday, Dickson announced, when the orchestra plays an outdoor memorial concert on the banks of the Charles River, where Fiedler conducted the Fourth of July concerts that became a tradition a half-century ago.

Fiedler's family will attend a private funeral Thursday.

A feeling of loss was evident Tuesday as expressions of sorrow poured in from prominent musicians, Boston's cultural elite, and the Symphony Hall workers who cleaned the conductor's office.

Skydiver Makes Birthday Jumps

FOREST CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Ron Green celebrated his 38th birthday Tuesday by jumping out of an airplane — not just once, but for nearly eight solid hours.

Green, a factory service representative who has made more than 1,300 jumps during 14 years of skydiving, parachuted to earth once for each of his 38 years, then repeated the process two more times for the benefit of a television crew.

The jumps included a noontime dive that landed Green in the parking lot of a restaurant where he paused briefly for lunch.

The style of celebration is not unique for Green, who dived out of a plane 35 times three years ago.

Shipyard Seeking More Workers Following Threat To Close

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., which two months ago threatened to shut down its repair yard, now has so much work that it's advertising for additional shipyard employees.

The South Baltimore facility has openings for machinists, pipefitters and electricians, said Gerald Walls, assistant general manager.

It was Walls who submitted a recommendation earlier this year to close the shipyard because of financial problems and a lack of work. The move would have put more than 1,000 persons out-of-work.

But this week he said 65 to 75 new employees will be hired to supplement the workforce of 1,100, which has more work than it can handle.

"In fact, we're short in several skilled areas. We've been pretty busy," Walls said, noting there are five ships in the yard, while another seven have passed through since June 1.

While most ships come and go, the shipyard is working on a $15 million overhaul contract of the USS Raleigh, an amphibious-transport dock-type troopship.

Next week, the military ship Observation Island is expected to arrive from the West Coast for $19 million in work, Walls added.

"Now that our labor situation is settled, we've had quite a lot of owners bring their ships in," Walls said.

At the time of the shutdown threat, the members of Local 31 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America had turned down the company's final offer.

"The fact that the yard is now hiring additional workers confirms my feeling that the threat to shut down was a (contract) negotiating ploy," said Curtis Lundy, executive secretary of the union.

"They said they didn't have enough work, when they had contracts for as much work as I've ever seen at the yard," he said, referring to the major repair contracts for the military ships.

Shoppers Rate Kennedy, Reagan Top Presidential Contenders

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — As far as patrons of a New Hampshire shopping mall are concerned — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan — are the presidential contenders to beat.

The shoppers at the Mall of New Hampshire in Manchester also thought enough of Alexander Haig, former Supreme Allied Commander of NATO, to place him ahead of five declared Republican presidential aspirants.

The five official GOP candidates have spent a considerable amount of time campaigning in New Hampshire in recent months. Haig, who has expressed only a passing interest in the presidency, has made one recent appearance in the state, at a college graduation.

About 2,150 shoppers participated in the computerized mock poll, conducted at the mall between July 2 and July 8.

When the results were tabulated, Kennedy, a write-in candidate, was the runaway winner with 34.9 percent of the vote.

Reagan came in second with 20.6 percent, but led all the candidates listed on the shopping mall ballot.

President Carter finished a dismal third with a 9.9 percent rating.

Rounding out the top five were a pair of write-ins, former President Gerald Ford, with 7.8 percent, and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., 6.4 percent.

Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker, a Republican, was the only other candidate to outpoll Haig. Baker finished with 5.8 percent.

The declared Republican hopefuls behind Haig were:

Illinois Rep. Philip Crane, 2.4 percent; former Texas Gov. John Connally 2.2 percent; former CIA Director George Bush, 1.4 percent; Illinois Rep. John Anderson, .7 percent and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, .7 percent.

Carter Studies Job Picture

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met today with union leaders, two governors and others on the employment outlook amid reports the administration foresees a jobless rate of nearly 7 percent by the end of 1980.

Joining Carter at the morning meeting at Camp David were Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Govs. Jay Hammond of Alaska and Bill Clinton of Arkansas, four union chiefs, three businessmen, four members of Congress and others concerned with urban problems.

A half-dozen governors and a delegation of mayors were invited to spend this evening at Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat where Carter has been cloistered for more than a week.

The administration, acknowledging a worsening economy, is revising its official jobless forecast from 6.2 percent to 6.9 percent for the end of 1980, said administration sources who asked not to be identified. If that prediction holds, 1.3 million more Americans could be out of work by the end of next year than now are.

The new unemployment estimate is to be released publicly later this week. Neither the White House nor the Office of Management and Budget would confirm or deny the report.

Participants in the employment-oriented session also included: Jerry Wulf, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees; Sol Chaiken, International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Jack Lyons, Iron Workers union; Lloyd McBride, United Steelworkers.

Also Reuben Mettler, president, TRW, Inc.; John Filer, board chairman, Aetna Insurance; David Mahoney, board chairman, Norton-Simon; Benjamin Hooks, executive director, NAACP; Carl Holman, president, Urban Coalition; Vernon Jordan, president, National Urban League.

Also Sens. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Reps. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., and Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., Nicholas Carbone, president, Hartford, Conn., city council; David Lizarraga, East Los Angeles city council, and Eli Ginzberg, chairman, National Commission on Employment Policy.

During the week-long retreat, presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Tuesday, Carter has decided against removing federal price controls on gasoline, a proposal that White House staff members had been considering submitting to their boss.

"The president has no intention to deregulate gasoline at this time," Powell said. He estimated such action would boost retail gasoline prices to between $1.10 and $1.50 a gallon, draining "several tens of billions of dollars from the economy."

Complex federal rules limit the amount of increases in gasoline costs that can be passed on to consumers. The issue of deregulating gas prices is separate from the gradual lifting of prices on domestic crude oil, currently underway.

Powell also reported general agreement among those attending the summit that it is too soon to consider federal actions to counter the expected economic slump.

He said the administration would "need a better idea of the nature of the slowdown" before considering action to counter recession by such means as tax cuts.

In a conference call to reporters, Powell said the president is finding "a surprising degree of consensus" among summit participants.

He said Carter feels such recent events as the long gas lines at service stations around the country and higher oil prices have had a "sobering effect" that has spurred demands for action.

The president is expected to remain at Camp David at least through this evening. The Washington Post today quoted unidentified officials as suggesting Sunday night is a likely time for Carter to report on the results of his talks with a diverse group of government officials and private citizens.

Summoned to the Maryland retreat Tuesday night were 10 clergymen, theologians and sociologists.

The president discussed inflation and the economy, as well as energy, for three hours Tuesday with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall. He also met with Republican Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont and a group of economists, investment bankers, businessmen and union leaders.

Afterwards, Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, said the administration is "probably at the point of no return" politically and must act to deal with pressing domestic woes.

In related developments:

—The Congressional Budget Office today predicted the impending recession would be deeper than earlier forecasts because of climbing food and fuel prices.

In its mid-year business outlook, the budget office predicted inflation likely would top 10 percent this year

House Panel Considers Plan For Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to meet a challenge laid down by President Carter, House energy legislators are pressing for prompt consideration of a new gasoline rationing plan.

The House Commerce energy and power subcommittee was beginning work today on the measure, designed to replace Carter's own proposal for standby gasoline rationing, which was rejected last May by the House.

The new measure would not automatically impose gasoline rationing, but would give the president clear-cut power to invoke it whenever he felt energy supplies were seriously threatened.

Congressional leaders cited growing support for the concept when they told the president at Camp David earlier in week they hoped to deliver the new rationing proposal to him before the August recess.

After House rejection of the Carter plan in early May, the president challenged Congress to come up with its own rationing plan within 90 days.

Subcommittee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., said the new proposal, drafted by his staff, is aimed at avoiding some of the pitfalls which did in the earlier admnistratio plan.

For instance, instead of setting a state-by-state formula for distributing ration coupons, the Dingell plan would have Carter set his own guidelines without prior congressional approval.

Distribution formulas in the ealier plan submitted by the White House led to partisan bickering on the House floor, contributing to the measure's defeat.

The new proposal would allow the plan to take effect automatically once Carter invoked it — unless either chamber of Congress votes to veto it within a specified amount of time.

This is less complicated that the earlier measure, which first had to be approved as a standby plan and then approved again when and if the president decided to use it.

Dingell said he will offer the rationing plan as an amendment to a proposal by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., that would allow the president to order motorists to leave their cars home one day a week to save fuel.

If the whole package is approved, then the president would have the option of deciding which of the two fuel-saving devices to use in an energy emergency, Dingell said.

However, he said he couldn't guarantee that the panel or the House would buy completely his proposal to give the president nearly unfettered rationing power.

"I expect there will be amendments offered" this week aimed at limiting the president's powers and trying to define in advance what kind of rationing plan should be drafted, Dingell said.

He said he hoped they would be rejected, claiming any attempt to write the specifics of the rationing plan in Congress could lead to its rejection.

In other congressional energy developments Tuesday, a Library of Congress study cast doubt on the ability of synthethic fuels to replace foreign oil anytime soon. It said that even with large federal subsidies, "commercial levels of liquid synfuels by 1990 are projected to be less than 100,000 to 200,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day."

That suggests that the goal of 500,000 barrels a day by 1984 and 2 million barrels by 1990 — targets set by a recently passed House bill authorizing $3 billion in federal subisides for synthethic fuels — couldn't be met.

The nation now imports roughly 8 million barrels of oil a day — about half its total daily consumption.

The report was requested by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee. The panel is studying the House-passed bill and another proposal by Jackson.

we didn't do it, we would increase the likelihood of coming down over North America and picking up the possibility of North Africa."

He added, "We have looked at this, and in the worst case situation we find no condition where we fail and create a hazardous situation that was worse than what we started with."

NASA continued to emphasize that even if parts of the giant station hit land, the chances of injury or damge were slim.

The sudden shift in the prediction indicated the difficulty in forecasting the demise of an orbital vehicle. The rate at which it falls depends on such things as variations in gravitation fields over ocean and land areas, weather and solar activity.

As Skylab began its final two days in orbit, NASA established a coordination center in Washington to follow the spacecraft's progress and be ready to dispatch emergency teams to any areas of the globe where debris might cause injury or damage.

Defense Department medical and engineering teams were on alert around the world to provide assistance requested by any country. The Federal Aviation Administration was warning aircraft from possible re-entry zones, and the Justice Department was set to handle liability claims anywhere in the world.

The Federal Preparedness Agency set up an elaborate system for handling emergency situations in the United States,

Skylab was launched May 14, 1973, and was inhabited by three different teams of American astronauts for periods up to 84 days. It has been floating around as a piece of space junk since the last crew abandoned it in February 1974.

Torrential rains all but stopped traffic on the highways through the marshes of Terrebonne Parish north of Houma, where the storm seemed to be aiming its blow.

The high tide that was pushed ahead of the storm rolled over beach-front streets in Grand Isle. One road was under 28 inches of water at the yellow line, said Lee Mallaha of the civil defense. Electricity was out in the western part of town, he said.

In New Orleans — where part of the city lies saucer-like below sea level — the greatest threat was water. Massive pumps at the city's 21 pumping stations were readied for heavy work.

Flash-flood warnings were posted for southeastern Louisiana. Possible high tides were estimated at up to 6 feet. Flood-control gates on canals and bayous were closed.

Most public schools in the New Orleans area canceled today's summer classes. Charity Hospital canceled its 150 outpatient clinics, which normally handle 1,400 patients.

Bob developed so quickly and so close to shore, just 400 miles south of New Orleans, that most big oil companies went straight into the evacuation phase of their hurricane-emergency plans.

It caught at least one fishing party out in the Gulf. The Coast Guard sent a helicopter to rescue the five fishermen. Another Coast Guard helicopter crew reported helping a disabled vessel caught in heavy seas but gave no details.

Cargo Plane Being Held In Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — An American-based Boeing 707 cargo plane bound for Costa Rica from Beirut, Lebanon, was being held today at a Tunisian military base under mysterious circumstances and reportedly had been loaded with 50 tons of arms, U.S. and airline officials said.

An airline spokesman in Kansas City, Mo., said the the plane left Beirut, where it was supposed to have been loaded with medical supplies and clothing for Nicaraguan refugees in Costa Rica.

The spokesman, Farhad Azima, Global Intertional Airways Corp. board chairman, said the plane was being held on the ground at Bizerte, about 40 miles north of Tunis. He said three members of the four-man crew had been released to the U.S. Embassy. He said the plane had been diverted to Tunisia, but added that the company was not calling the incident a hijacking.

U.S. officials in Tunis agreed.

"We have no reason to believe a hijack is involved here," said one official, who asked not to be named.

The Tunisian government clamped tight security around the incident and it was not immediately clear who had forced the plane down or why, officials said.

er what motivated their action. One of them replied, "Nothing."

After the hostage and newsman were released, one of the four men came to the surface to negotiate with authorities.

At 9 p.m. all four came up the elevator and surrendered.

The 100 tourists and five park employees who had been trapped in the dead-end "Big Room" beyond the lunchroom were then brought out of the Caverns.

There were no injuries.

Texas Fuel Prices Continue To Rise

HOUSTON (AP) — The price of gasoline in Texas is still rising — but not as fast — and there's more of it.

The American Automobile Association says its survey of 420 Texas service stations shows that only 4 percent of the stations are out of any grade of fuel and 2 percent are limiting customers' purchases, compared to 10 percent out of fuel and 3 percent limiting purchases last week.

The price of fuels stayed the same as last week or increased up to 1.1 cents per gallon. Last week the increases were 1.1 to 1.9 cents per gallon.

But the shortage also seems to be spreading to smaller cities and rural areas, forcing more stations to close nights or Sundays, the AAA reports.

The percentage of stations closed Sunday increased from 71 last week to 75 this week.

Stations closed by 8 p.m. weekdays increased from 72 percent to 77 percent, and those closed by 6 p.m. Saturday rose from 59 percent to 61 percent.

AAA said the major week-to-week decline in Sunday gasoline availability was in the category of "miscellaneous cities," which includes smaller cities, many of which are along Interstate highways.

Last week 38 percent of the 84 stations surveyed in these cities were open Sunday; this week only 24 percent of 80 stations surveyed pump gas on Sunday.

The survey indicated that night and weekend availability of gasoline was about the same in Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth, but it declined in San Antonio.

Last week 30 percent of the Alamo City stations surveyed were open after 8 p.m. weekdays, 40 percent pumped gas after 6 p.m. Saturday, and 22 percent were open Sunday. This week the corresponding figures are 18, 30 and 20.

Despite the reduced night and weekend availability of fuel in San Antonio, its gasoline supply remains much better than the situation in Houston and D-FW.

Austin's fuel availability remains among the worst in the state, with only 7 percent of the stations surveyed pumping gas at night or on Sunday.

Weekend availability improved since last week in Beaumont-Port Arthur and declined slightly in Amarillo. Supplies in Corpus Christi improved on Sundays but got worse on weekday and Saturday nights.

Gasoline prices continued upward, but at a slower rate than in recent weeks.

Average full-service prices this week (last week's average in parentheses) are: Regular 85.0 cents per gallon (84.1); unleaded 89.0 cents (87.9); and premium 90.4 cents (89.7).

Self-service average prices are: Regular 82.4 (81.4); unleaded 86.3 (85.4); and premium 87.4 (87.4).

The average price for diesel fuel rose from 88.9 cents last week to 89.7 cents this week.

Pump Closings Planned By Eastern Dealers

By The Associated Press

Some independent Pennsylvania and Delaware gasoline dealers say they're shutting down their pumps Thursday to protest federal fuel allocation and pricing policies, but dealers in other states say a shutdown is premature.

The Pennsylvania-Delaware Service Station Dealers Association voted Tuesday to strike indefinitely and spokesmen predicted 60 to 80 percent of Pennsylvania's 8,100 gas stations would close.

"Our main objective, and I'm going to be quite blunt about it, is to make the public angry," said Tom Anderson, executive director.

Meanwhile, major oil company officials said between one-third and one-half of the stations may close, said Robert Shinn, executive director of the Governor's Energy Council.

The dealer's group represents 3,756 stations, or about 30 percent, of the 13,000 gas stations in the two states.

However, members of the Keystone Service Station Dealers Association in northeastern portions of the state voted unanimously Tuesday night not to join the shutdown.

"Local residents have been hurt enough by the oil companies and their greedy raises," said James Summa of Dunmore, president of the Keystone association with 200 member dealers in 17 counties.

The New Jersey Gasoline Retailers Association is announcing today whether it will urge a shutdown.

Independents service station operators claim the present federal allocation system favors stations owned by big oil companies and they want it changed.

Talmadge Testifies Before Senate Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., swore under oath today that he never diverted Senate or campaign funds to his personal use and said his chief accuser is a liar.

Talmadge told the Senate Ethics Committee he did not know his office had overstated his expenses and was improperly collecting excess money from the Senate until June 1978.

The senator testified he never directed his former administrative assistant, Daniel Minchew, to open a secret bank account or to divert Senate and campaign funds into that account.

"When Minchew says he gave me funds from that account or that I benefited from it in any way, he lies ... ," Talmadge said.

"To the best of my knowledge, Minchew lies when he says he gave money to my former wife and my deceased son.

"I have never diverted Senate or campaign funds to my own use."

Talmadge told the committee he never kept large sums of money at home and that he does not know the source of $7,700 in $100 bills which his former wife, Betty, had turned over to the committee.

Mrs. Talmadge testified under oath she removed the money from the pocket of an overcoat which the senator kept in their Washington apartment. She said Talmadge often kept large amounts of cash hidden in the house.

But the senator said: "I did not fill the envelope (containing the $100 bills) with $10,000 or with any amount of cash. I do know that I did not place any envelope containing large amounts in the pocket of my overcoat."

Talmadge's comments came in a sworn opening statement he made as he appeared before the committee in his own defense against five allegations of financial misconduct. He was the first senator in 12 years to be called before a panel of his peers to testify publicly about his affairs.

The testimony was the first public statement Talmadge has made under oath about his alleged involvement in financial improprieties.

The last senator to testify before the committee under oath was the late Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., who appeared in 1967 to answer allegations that he had used campaign funds for his personal benefit.

The Senate eventually voted to censure Dodd — the seventh person in Senate history to be so chastised. Dodd later lost a re-election bid.

Committee special counsel Carl Eardley peppered Talmadge with questions on why the senator never noticed that he was collecting far more for expenses than he was actually spending.

Eardley noted, for example, that Talmadge signed 18 checks totaling $1,500 for home office expenses in 1975 but that his office collected $13,500 from the Senate in home office expenses.

Talmadge replied that he never tried to determine whether his expenses balanced and he added, "I didn't figure the people of Georgia sent me to the Senate to be a bookkeeper."

"If I had thought that was more important than being on the floor to vote, of chairing the Agriculture Committee ... I'm sure I would have discovered it."

Talmadge said he had no idea why his staff systematically filed for the maximum in expenses even when the costs were never incurred.

"It just happened. It was an error on the part of my subordinates. You must delegate responsibility," the senator said.

Close Inspection Of DC-10s Delay Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline mechanics and government inspectors are checking every inch of the critical DC-10 pylon areas in hopes of learning what caused newly discovered cracks in three of the jets.

The search for additional cracks and the investigation of those just discovered are delaying a decision to allow DC-10s to fly, the Federal Aviation Administration said Tuesday.

James B. King, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, testified in Congress today there is "no reasonable doubt" that a crack in a wing flange of the American Airlines DC-10 that crashed May 25 in Chicago was caused by faulty airline maintenance.

King told a Senate Commerce aviation subcommittee the crack was the result of maintenance performed between March 30 and April 3.

William G. Laynor, an NTSB official, said the ill-fated plane made 166 flights after the maintenance was performed before it crashed on takeoff in the nation's worst air disaster.

The flange where the crack was found helps hold the engine pylon mounting to the wing of the DC-10.

King said the crack was about 10½ inches long. There was evidence of fatigue at both ends of the fracture, he said.

King and Federal Aviation Administrator Langhorne M. Bond were summoned to testify as the subcommittee began hearings into the certification and inspection of DC-10s and other aircraft.

The DC-10 has been inspected continually since a May 25 crash in Chicago claimed 273 lives in the nation's worst air disaster. The FAA grounded the 138 U.S.-registered DC-10s June 6.

Dennis Feldman, an FAA spokesman, reported Tuesday night that 36 of the 138 DC-10s had been inspected under the latest recommended maintenance procedures.

Those inspections revealed that one United Airlines and two Trans International Airlines DC-10s had cracks in the pylon, the assembly that attaches the engine to the wing. But preliminary findings indicate the cracks are not in an area critical to the plane's safety, Feldman added.

Another FAA spokesman, Fred Farrar, said investigators want to know whether the cracks are symptoms of more serious problems.

"The cracks we're talking about now do not involve the safety of the DC-10s," Frank Costello, attorney for World Airlines, told a National Transportation Safety Board hearing Tuesday. "They can be repaired."

Once the FAA decides to lift its grounding order, the planes can fly without approval from a federal judge.

Israeli Official Denies Woman's Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) -An Israeli Embassy spokesman has denied Terre Fleener's claim that psychological and physical intimidation was used to extract her confession to spying for Palestinian terrorists.

"That is not true," Avi Pazner said Tuesday. "She admitted her guilt of her own free will and she was aware of what she was doing. She spent long periods of time in Lebanon and Kuwait and was carefully instructed in the ways of assisting Arab terrorists and carrying out their activities against the civilian population of Israel."

Miss Fleener, 24, told a Washington news conference Tuesday she was innocent. The San Antonio woman said she confessed under duress to taking pictures of beaches and hotels for use by terrorist acquaintances.

"I was never advised of my rights under Israeli law," she said.

Miss Fleener said she then entered a guilty plea after her lawyer told her it would be impossible to contest the confession.

She was paroled June 29 after spending 20 months in prison.

The former stewardess for Kuwait Airlines was the first American to be imprisoned in Israel on espionage charges.

"She was visited numerous times by officials of the U.S. Embassy in Israel, which were by the way present throughout her trial, and she never complained about any mistreatment during her time in prison," Pazner said.

Miss Fleener had said she might embark on a national speaking tour to present her belief that the Palestinians' have a right to self determination.

"I believe ultimately any settlement rests at the grass roots level," she said. "I want to be able to explain to people a different point of view than is usually presented."

Pazner said the Israeli Embassy will not be keeping track of Miss Fleener's travels but will be available to answer any questions she might raise.

"She is a free woman now in a free country. We don't keep track of anybody. What I can do is tell the truth about the nature of her activities in Israel," he said. "All that we are going to do is explain that the lady was caught, given a free trial, sentenced and we hope that we have been able to prevent by her arrest the massacre of innocent civilians."

CAB Rules Airlines Can Continue Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board says the free market place will best decide the next owner of National Airlines despite concern by some in government that the takover will reduce competition.

The board decided Tuesday to let Pan American World Airways and Texas International Airlines go ahead with their head-on battle to obtain National, the Miami-based carrier which also has been eyed by Eastern Airlines.

Trading of National's stock was suspended at noon Tuesday in anticipation of a CAB decision, but the stock is expected to be in heavy demand when trading resumes.

National has been the subject of intense maneuvering among potential buyers for more than a year, but the Justice Department as well as two of the CAB's administrative law judges have expressed concern that no matter which of the three airlines buys the airline, competition will suffer.

At its hearing Tuesday, the four CAB members disagreed and said they saw no serious harm to domestic competition if either Pan Am or Texas International obtained National. They did not specifically consider the Eastern offer, which is expected to be heard at a later date.

Board member Elizabeth Bailey called the National routes "one of the most competitive markets in the United States." The three other members, including Chairman Marvin Cohen, agreed.

Building Falls, Kills Workers

ROUND ROCK (AP) — The mayor, city manager and building inspector will meet here today to discuss inspectors' reports on an unfinished building that collapsed in "hurricane strength" winds Tuesday, killing two workmen and injuring four others.

Work on the two-story frame building had stopped earlier when city building inspectors had tagged it because of faulty construction or building code violations, Mayor Larry Tonn said. Workmen at the site said the building had collapsed at least twice before.

A small but intense storm cell, with dark clouds, high winds, heavy rain and hail passed over the construction site.

Teacher To Supervise Interns

Judy Wiebusch, special education consultant for the Lubbock Independent School District, has been selected team leader for teacher interns in the Program 78 Teacher Corps.

As team leader Mrs. Wiebusch will supervise four Texas Tech University interns and will assist in coordination of pre-service and in-service teaching preparation for the project.

Teacher Corps is a national program designed to strengthen the educational opportunities available to children from low income family areas. The project also is aimed at broadening the program of teacher preparation and improving the retraining of teachers, teacher aides and other educational personnel.

The Lubbock program, one of 80 new projects in the United States and other territories, is operated in the feeder system consisting of Jackson Elementary, Thompson Junior High and Lubbock High.

Texas Tech, the LISD and representatives from the school community plan and operate the five year program.

Mrs. Wiebusch is a graduate of Baylor and Texas Tech and holds all-level teaching, supervisory and language learning disability certification. She is a member of numerous professional and scholastic organizations.

LPOA To Petition Council

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council officially will be petitioned Thursday to call an election to limit city taxes to current levels.

The Lubbock Property Owners Association has collected more than 15,000 signatures during the past four months on petitions calling for the submission of three charter amendments to the voters.

If approved by voters, the amendments would:

— Limit the city tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation.

— Limit the assessment ratio to the current 60 percent of market value.

— Require voter approval for any increase in the tax rate or assessment ratio, even if the increase keeps taxes below the 1979 level.

Council members will not call the election until City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga has ensured there are enough signatures on the petitions and that the signatures are those of registered voters.

The council, at a later meeting, probably will call the election for Nov. 7 following the validation procedures.

LPOA chairman Bob Green, who will present the petitions to the council, also will announce the group's opposition to future annexations and to the sale of tax-exempt bonds to provide mortgage loans for low- and moderate-income persons.

Council members will meet at 2:30 p.m. with financial consultant Joe Smith of First Southwest Company in Abilene to discuss the sale of such mortgage bonds through a non-profit corporation.

Also at the 9:30 a.m. meeting in council chambers:

Lonnie Hollingsworth, chairman of the Electric Utility Board, will ask the council to authorize a $125,000 power supply study for Lubbock Power and Light.

The study, to be financed from an LP &L capital improvements fund, would examine the feasibility of possible sources of future additional electric supply and the coordination of an interconnect with present and future generating units.

Gilbert Herrera will ask the council to approve an ordinance prohibiting the sale of glue and spray paint to minors.

Although the council passed an ordinance in 1977 which making it illegal to sniff or inhale spray paint and chemicals, the ordinance did not restrict sale of the products.

The passage of such an ordinance in Austin resulted in a 50 percent reduction in the number of glue-sniffing cases.

Also at the meeting, council members will discuss joining officials of other Texas cities to fight a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate increase request which would raise one-party residential rates more than 25 percent in Lubbock.

The council additionally will discuss joint action in a suit by U.S. Steel chal-

Deaths Of Educators Affect School Staffs

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Tommy Herring was an exuberant leader — an educator who was almost charismatic in his ability to instill enthusiasm, and most of all hope, into teachers, parents and students.

Bill Bravenec, also an educator, was a willing listener who had the respect of all those involved in the operation of his school. He was a promising young administrator full of optimism and ideas for the year ahead.

Herring, principal of Ballenger School and Bravenec, principal of Rush Elementary, were killed June 17 in an auto collision, leaving a loyal community of followers shocked and unnerved by the tragedy.

Three weeks later, the shock still is with many, but a sense of acceptance and even determination to carry on the work of the two men, has emerged.

Much of the staff and parents of Ballenger, the school district's facility for the trainable mentally retarded, particularly feel a renewed sense of hope for the future of their school.

As principal of Ballenger since the school was housed in the building on 40th Street, Herring helped develop a unique instructional program that would function within a structure built especially for handicapped students.

The program at Ballenger is aimed at teaching students to become productive members of society. In order to achieve that aim, Herring drew in parents as an integral part of that program.

"I feel a big void," said Barbara Scheffler whose son, Stewart, attends Ballenger. "But what he (Herring) had to give — we can't lose. I know it sounds strange, but I think (his death) is going to make everybody stronger. It will be stronger because of what he was."

What Herring was, said Mrs. Scheffler, was a man with "lots of charisma. He sparkled. He wanted to teach children, to make them productive citizens in a community when they reached 21."

Said Dr. Cecil Green, director of special education for the schools, "One of the most damaging things you could say about Tommy Herring would be to say that the program at Ballenger was Tommy-centered. In watching Tom work with faculty and parents, I was impressed with the teamwork that went on and the leadership he developed in other people."

"I have no doubts about the future quality of the programs," he continued. "The work he accomplished will continue."

Most of the Ballenger summer school teachers echoed Green's hopes.

"At first there was the usual grief that comes with something like that," said language arts teacher Eddie Henderson. "Then when everyone realized that Tom wouldn't stand for us moping around, we got busy. The kids helped heal the hurt. There was work to be done and we had to do it."

Henderson added, "The staff as a whole is dedicated to the principles that Tom was dedicated to. I think the staff will pull together and carry out his program."

Barbara Jordan, an early childhood teacher, said, "We all will be willing to work with a new administrator because we have the same sense of believing in the kids as Tom had. I'm more determined now to work with the kids — I guess because Tom was."

Several of those in the tightly-knit family of Ballenger, however, feel more lost than hopeful at this point. "I feel lost — I don't know what we're going to do," said Leslie Maness, functional living skills and physical education instructor.

"I know everything's going to work out in the long run, but right now I'm just going from day to day," she said.

Nona Archer, whose son, Barry, is a Ballenger student, said, "I'm not optimistic about the school. I don't know how we're going to replace a man like Tom. He was 100 percent for our kids."

The description of Bill Bravenec that was repeated over and over again by teachers, parents and administrators was that of a young and successful educator who was just beginning his career.

"He was on the ladder to success and this is what's so sad," said Bravenec's secretary, Frances Wells.

"Children and their parents liked him," she said, "because he would listen. And I think the children respected him."

"He was prone to let children speak their minds, but they knew there were guidelines," added first grade teacher Ola Mae Ewing. "He could be their buddy, but they knew he had a place they needed to respect."

Mrs. Ewing said she is optimistic for the future, howev

District Landholders Receive Tax Cuts

Property owners in the 15-county High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 have received a 10 percent water district tax cut for fiscal year 1980 beginning Oct. 1.

The district board of directors voted Tuesday to slash the tax rate from the prevailing 5 cents per $100 valuation to 4½ cents after being advised of anticipated increases in tax income from two counties in fiscal 1979.

According to district manager Wayne Wyatt, fiscal 1979 tax income from Lynn and Armstrong counties "will be in excess of 3 percent of what it was last year." He attributed the expected increase in revenues to Armstrong County almost doubling its appraisal rate and Lynn County re-evaluating property there.

"Our income from Lubbock County (in fiscal 1980) will be less, but we've had some new building here," Wyatt said today. He said estimated fiscal 1980 revenues from Lubbock County were not available, but the approved fiscal 1980 district budget shows a net deficit for the year.

Wyatt said the fiscal 1979 district budget anticipated total expenditures of $673,094 and a net surplus of $135,000 at the end of the year. In fiscal 1980, he said, the district has budgeted $650,495 in total expenditures and a net surplus of about $100,000 at the end of the year, indicating a net deficit of about $35,000 during fiscal 1980.

Wyatt said an expected loss in revenues from the tax cut would primarily account for the budgeted deficit in fiscal 1980.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Okay, so it's only two ads, but they've appeared within one day of each other and if the momentum holds, we could have a trend on our hands.

I'm talking about an ad to sell a house and another one seeking employment that have dared use a refreshing and unique approach to advertising: honesty.

The first ad was out of London and was placed by a man trying to sell his house. His ad read: "Two and a half bedroom box located in suburbia, miles from any pretty country, yet lacking the cultural facilities of any decent sized town. Pocket handkerchief garden which floods in winter, acid soil suited only to rhododendrons and thistles.

"It's convenient, expensive and dirty. The whole in terrible decay."

The second ad was placed by a woman newspaper executive who had had a hard day and decided to place an ad in the Job Wanted Female classification in Florida. She wrote:

"WANTED: EASY JOB: Educated, experienced woman wants what most people want — a high-paying job in an advisory role, three days a week with long lunch breaks, good benefits, including one-month vacations and a secretary. Does not do windows."

The possibility for honesty in advertising is unlimited. Wouldn't it be wonderful to see a husband embrace his wife, tweak her nose and say, "Honey, I don't know how you do it, taking care of the house, the six children, running an engineering firm, and serving on the Supreme Court bench," and she would look deeply into his face and smile, "I drink."

I told my husband what I'd really like to see is an ad under Used Cars that reads:

"We don't want to be your friend. We just want to sell you a car. We have the second-best deal in town with no intention of matching another offer. For this week and for as many weeks as it takes to unload it, we have a four-door, undependable gas hog that needs brakes, tires and a mechanic for an owner. Has a lot of toys under the hood (also in the back seat and trunk) and has been owned by everyone in town. We're pushing this turkey because it makes our lot look shabby."

My husband winced. "Who would buy a car with a pitch like that?"

"We did."

Don't feel insulted if we tell you that, when playing a small slam contract, it is good policy to count up to twelve tricks, if possible, before mapping out your campaign of play. This advice might appear too fundamental, yet failure to observe this little ritual proved very costly to an experienced declarer on this hand.

Because of his excellent fit for opener's suit, North's jump shift is eminently sound. Having shown his strength, North needed to do nothing more than take preference to spades after South introduced his second suit. South cue-bid in case North was interested in a grand slam, but North was content to try for six spades.

West got his side off to a good start by leading a trump—after any other lead, declarer would have been able to surrender a club and ruff two clubs in dummy for his contract. Declarer lost the club finesse, won the trump return, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club, but when the suit failed to break, declarer was forced to concede another club trick for down one.

How simple this hand would have been had declarer stopped to count to twelve as follows: six spade tricks, two hearts, one club and three diamonds. After winning the first lead, declarer should have cashed the ace of diamonds, drawn trumps, ending up in dummy, and then led the queen of diamonds, discarding a club from his hand. It makes no difference which defender holds the king of diamonds. Declarer wins any return and discards three more clubs on the two high diamonds in dummy and the high heart. He surrenders only one trick to the king of diamonds.

As we suggested at the outset, playing a slam can be so simple if you can count to twelve!

NEW YORK (Special) — He always said he would give you the shirt off his back. Well, now you just might want to take it. With a few tucks, a touch of accessories and a little imagination, menswear pieces take on a whole new style for gals.

His tweed jacket is all hers when she wraps a skinny leather belt around the flannel shirt (yes, it's his) and a V-necked cardigan.

Suit yourself in his suit by opening the shirt at the neck to show off a delicate necklace. The oversized jacket and loose-fitting pants work fine together or separately. His favorite necktie becomes her favorite belt by stringing it through the loops of the pants.

His western jacket makes a cowgirl out of her, along with his straight-leg jeans, work shirt, and string tie. The feminine touch? Earrings and a beaded belt.

He'll see it her way when his cardigan dresses up for her with a big buckled belt that wraps around her waist. His very proper tie turns feminine with tiny earrings used as tie tacks.

A trench coat is a trench coat is a trench coat — and terrific no matter who wears it. What's underneath it works double time also — an Izod sweater, couduroy pants and a plaid shirt.

The very versatile corduroy jacket. For him it's paired up with a striped polo shirt and western blue jeans. For her — the same!

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Summertime, and the livin' is easy. Or at least, it should be. If that's your culinary philosophy, we've got a trio of speedy seafood dinners for barefoot cooks.

In addition to being nutritious and low-calorie, these easy-do dishes minimize clean-up and make use of ingredients convenient to keep on hand in getaway places like cabin or cottage.

BAREFOOT FOILED FISH

For each serving:
2 or 3 bay leaves, broken up
4 to 5 oz. hake
(or other fish fillet or fish steak), about an inch thick
2 tbsps. lemon juice
(or dry white wine)
2 tsps. dried onion flakes paprika salt (or garlic salt), pepper, to taste
optional: pinch of dried garlic optional: pinch of hot pepper or dash of red pepper sauce
1 tsp. soft butter or margarine
(or diet margarine)

Tear off 1 large sheet of foil for several fillets or several small sheets of foil for individually wrapped fillets. Place the foil shiny-side up. Break up the bay leaves on the foil and place each fillet on top of the bay leaves. Sprinkle fish with remaining ingredients, except butter. Fold foil over loosely. Place the packets on a shallow cookie tin or baking tray in a preheated, very hot 450-degree oven. Bake 8 minutes. Open foil and spoon pan juices over fish. Spread top of fish lightly with butter. Bake an additional 4 to 5 minutes, just until fish flakes easily. Each serving: about 130 calories with butter or margarine; 115 calories with diet margarine.

SPEEDY SKILLET SPAGHETTI WITH FISH SAUCE

12 oz. (¾ lb.) any fish fillets, fresh or frozen
16-oz. can stewed tomatoes, broken up
16-oz. can plain tomato sauce
¼ cup dry white wine (or water)
1½ cups water
1 onion, finely minced
(or 3 tbsps. dried onion flakes)
1½ to 2 tsps. dried oregano, basil or pizza seasoning
6 oz. very thin spaghetti
(vermicelli), broken up
1 tbsp. grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Partially defrost fish, if frozen. Cut fish into 2-inch cubes. Put the stewed tomatoes in a large non-stick electric frypan and mash well with a fork. Stir in tomato sauce, wine, water, onion and seasonings. Heat to boiling. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Uncover and stir in broken-up spaghetti, a little at a time. Cover and simmer, stirring often, about 10 minutes.

Arrange the fish chunks on top of the mixture. Spoon on a little of the sauce in the skillet. Cover and simmer about 4 to 5 minutes. Uncover and continue to simmer until most of the liquid has reduced to a thick sauce and fish flakes easily, another 3 to 4 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese. Serve from the skillet. Makes four servings, about 310 calories each.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I have been miserable and depressed for the last seven months — ever since my only brother wrote me out of his life.

The reason is still unbelievable. After eight years of marriage and no children, my husband and I adopted a beautiful baby girl. My brother and his wife were her godparents and seemed so happy for us.

A few months later my brother told my husband that he wanted nothing more to do with us because our baby is of a different heritage than ours. She is Mexican. We are of Swedish and Irish descent.

I could not believe it, so I phoned my brother. He hung up on me as soon as he heard my voice. We haven't spoken since. His wife, who was like a sister to me, agrees with my brother's thinking and will have nothing to do with us.

Abby, he is my only brother and we were so close. We were not raised with hate and prejudice. I cannot imagine what has come over him. In years to come, how do I explain to my child that the only aunt and uncle she has don't want to know her — or us?

My husband and I do not speak of this. I want so desperately to talk to my brother and resume friendly relations with him. What can I do to change his outlook? Or am I hoping for something that is out of reach?

Brokenhearted Sister

Dear Sister: Your brother and his wife have shown themselves to be despicable characters, unworthy of your friendship. (Maybe they've both flipped their lids.) In any case, judging from their behavior toward you, and particularly their reason for it, I advise you to let him know that if he should ever recover from his "sickness" to let you know. In the meantime, write him off — and good riddance.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that people who don't work always choose the lunch hour to do their shopping?

Our town is not very large. The noon hour congestion around the few shopping places we have is absolutely unreal!

We working people MUST shop on our lunch hour. Parking places at that time are almost impossible to find. When we do get into the store, we find them crowded with little old ladies and non-working mothers with small kids.

Abby, is it asking too much of those folks who have all day to shop to reschedule their shopping time?

Frustrated In Russellville, Ark.

Dear Frustrated: No. You have a legitimate gripe. And may I suggest that those who can do their BANKING at another time please do so?

DEAR ABBY: I used to think you made up some of the letters in your column. I just couldn't believe that people could be so dumb. Now here I am, with a problem so unreal it sounds like a soap opera plot. I am 23 and have been married for five weeks to Joe, a swell guy I've known for a year. This is my second marriage. I have three small children.

Joe never mentioned that he had been married before. Now I find out that he has been married twice and has five kids! His mother is taking care of them. I found out only yesterday and I am ready for a nervous breakdown. When I told Joe I knew about the five kids, he said he was relieved since he didn't know how much longer he could keep it from me — and, as long as I knew, would I mind taking his five kids to raise since his mother was in very poor health!

Abby, I'm a night-shift waitress. I have enough with my own three. I can't raise eight kids. All the love I had for Joe is dead. Do I have grounds for divorce?

Shocked In Reno

Dear Shocked: Talk to a lawyer. You might even have grounds for an annulment.

Astronaut Says Skylab Provided Needed Data

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For days now, the world has focused its attention on the impending crash to Earth of Skylab, the world's first space station. Unfortunately, amid all the controversy surrounding the crippled ship's final hours, some of its most significant discoveries have been almost completely overlooked.

The goals of the largest manmade object ever launched into space were threefold, according to astronaut Joseph P. Kerwin, a member of the first of the three Skylab crews who docked with and lived in the capsule for one to three months.

"The whole purpose of Skylab was to learn whether man could exist in space for an extended period of time," Kerwin told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday in an exclusive interview. "Without that knowledge, plans for the Space Shuttle and all future space travel were by and large useless."

"We also wanted very much to study the Earth from orbit, and to study the sun without interference from the Earth's atmosphere," Kerwin said. "And we got nearly 100 percent of what we were looking for."

The 77-ton space station, which was put into space in the spring of 1973, has provided a literal library of new information ranging from the discovery of new fishing grounds in remote waters to the chain of events involved in the fusion of thermonuclear energy in a solar flare.

Using special cameras and telescopes, the crews shot miles of film of the Earth, sun and stars. Because of those special pictures, scientists have been able to locate hidden oil and mineral reserves, assess land for agricultural purposes and study the movements of air pollution in the atmosphere. But perhaps the most significant findings involve the studies of the sun, which were made largely by the third crew.

"The information from some of the solar experiments will be used for years to come," said Terry White, a NASA research specialist. "In fact, Ed Gibson (a member of that third crew) was so impressed that he wrote a book ("The Quiet Sun") about what he discovered from Skylab."

"The second and third crews really built on our foundation," Kerwin added. "And we're still learning even now. Every month I get at least a half-dozen new reports on the findings and new information that has come and is still coming from the Skylab missions.

"Now, the questions we're able to ask are much more specific. We don't have all the answers yet, but we're getting there," he continued. "For example, because of Gibson's studies of the sun, we're now able to look at it and seriously ask questions about temperature and density, and really get into the occurrence of solar flares and other such things."

The major concern the Skylab astronauts faced during their stays in space was how the human body would react to long durations of weightlessness. Without that basic information, the future of manned space flight remained in doubt.

"Weightlessness is very strange but easy to overcome," Kerwin said of his month in a zero-gravity situation. "We were very worried about spending much time in space after watching the Apollo astronauts stagger onto the recovery ship and pass out in the shower. But we found that a proper program of diet and exercise can keep the body in shape, even in that strange environment."

One of the biggest mysteries to the scientists was the reaction of human blood to the space flights. After the first Skylab crew came home, doctors discovered that the astronauts all had suffered unexplained losses of red blood cells. Such losses, which are seen as primary symptoms for several diseases, have been studied intensely since 1973, and while they haven't been fully explained, scientists are able to predict how the losses might occur.

Weightlessness was the most interesting experience Kerwin had, and some of his most vivid memories are of his crew floating around their orbiting laboratory.

"It's very different from any sensation here on Earth," he said. "We trained underwater, but even that doesn't come close to the feeling of having no weight for a month. "But, like riding a bicycle where all your sensations are new, you can adjust to it. In space, sometimes we thought that weightlessness was our natural environment and that gravity was just something we were saddled with on Earth."

No one will deny that Skylab had its problems in space. The first and most major problem occurred upon take off, when a special heat shield blew off, leaving the craft completely exposed to the sun's pounding rays without the protection of the Earth's atmosphere. At times, the temperature inside the ship reached as high as 150 degrees. But even those problems, which were corrected by extensive work from Kerwin's crew, turned out to be a blessing in disguise.

"Well, the ship would have been better off with the heat shield, " Kerwin admitted, "But we really got a lot out of the repairs. We discovered the value of having people up there to kick the tires and put a wrench to a bolt. We found that we can keep things going up there even if it requires a spacewalk (like Kerwin's three-hour stroll) to do it.

"A lot of our malfunctions would have required parts of the mission to be completely aborted had there not been someone up there to make the repairs. Now, every such flight will have extra-vehicular (spacewalk) capabilities."

Kerwin has nothing but the highest regard for the Skylab program, and is an unequivocal backer, even in the light of recent controversies surrounding both Skylab and the entire space program.

"A failure by Skylab could have hindered any future space plans. But Skylab was really worth the time, cost and effort," Kerwin said.

"Skylab was an integral part of NASA's plan to one day inhabit space, and without it, we'd be much worse off. And even though the thing is coming down much earlier than we expected, we're learning from it still. Because of this fall, we're able to further refine our equations, and we'll be able to make pinpoint landings on all future flights.

"So, even with the problems, we're always learning from Skylab," Kerwin concluded. "And learning is what the whole space program is about."

Governors Endorse Oil Decontrol Program

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — When the nation's governors assemble, about the only action that can be taken by majority vote is to adjourn.

Thus it appeared for a while Tuesday that the National Governors Association, after wrestling for three days with energy issues, might be hog-tied by its own rules and unable to speak as a group on the vital question of oil prices and windfall taxes.

Gov. Richard Lamm, D-Colo., brought a carefully constructed compromise to the closing session.

It endorsed President Carter's gradual decontrol program, called for a tax (of unstated percentage) on the extra profits of the oil companies and recommended that those revenues be used to encourage energy production and conservation and be used to help people on fixed or low incomes pay higher fuel costs.

In its eagerness to please everybody, the resolution also approved "plowback" of windfall profits into new production by the oil companies.

Nobody expected Gov. William Clements, R-Texas, to be for that approach. He said, and said again, the companies should be required to plow back every cent of excess profits into new production or pay a 100 percent tax on them.

But then Albert Quie, R-Minn., got into the act with a proposal he called "cold turkey deregulation" — immediate decontrol of oil prices. He said that would solve the oil shortage in a month.

Gov. Brendan Byrne, D-N.J., added to the general confusion by suggesting windfall taxes should be used for mass transit as well as helping pay fuel oil bills of the poor, and several other governors asked why rail transportation of coal and wood for fuel shouldn't be added.

Chaos loomed.

Clements got testy with Gov. Bruce Babbitt, D-Ariz., for suggesting the oil companies wanted to use their profits "to buy circuses and men's clothing stores." The Texan acidly observed, "The biggest circus I know of is in Arizona."

Lamm found himself faced with a parliamentary snarl, with the necessity, under association rules, to achieve two-thirds majorities to take action. At one point, he announced that 19 of 29 votes had been cast for a proposal and that was two-thirds. A little grade-school arithmetic soon straightened that out.

Finally, several governors warned that the organization was in danger of being unable to approve anything, and that would not really look very good.

A mood of compromise returned, and the governors managed to approve the original compromise resolution.

The governors had no trouble whatsoever, however, approving a resolution urging the Federal Communications Commission to grant at least one very high frequency television franchise to each state.

Byrne, who presented the resolution, pointed out that he and Gov. Pierre duPont, R-Del., were the only governors in the country whose states didn't have VHF stations to call their own.

Educators' Deaths Affect School Staffs

er. "We know there are people who won't take their (Herring and Bravenec) places, but they will make a place of their own. We will come back, ready and willing to do what's necessary for the school."

Loretta Pond, PTA president at Rush said that Bravenec worked closely and cooperatively with parents at the school. "There are things we hope to accomplish as a PTA and he was right in there with us."

Mrs. Pond said she believes the administration will choose a competent successor to Bravenec because "I really think the administration is very aware of what we need in a principal. We won't settle for less than the best."

Though the memories of the two principals' deaths may be less painful by the time school starts in the fall, several Rush teachers said that the impact of their loss really will not be felt until then, both for teachers and students.

"School is not in session — it's a holiday time," said Mrs. Pond, "so the reality of it will hit them (students) in the fall."

But, added Mrs. Pond, "Children are very resilient. They do catch you off guard though. We as adults work through the grief, but children bottle it up and let it out at unexpected times."

The teachers at Ballenger said that the students are aware that Herring is gone, but they do not know where he is.

"The kids will be sad he's not here when they return in the fall," said Tomi Covington, arithmetic and ceramics teacher. "The kids (in summer school) know but they don't realize why he's gone. They probably don't grasp death. It's not a loss like we're feeling."

"The kids know something is different," said Mrs. Jordan. "They know he's gone and they'll ask about him. But if I can't understand his death, how can I expect them to?"

Youths Spend Summer Excavating Site

CANYON (UPI) — A half-dozen youngsters participating in two federally funded summer programs are spending the summer of 1979 unearthing a prehistoric Indian camp site at Canyon Country Club.

Four of the youths hired to sift the artifact-strewn dirt are paid with Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds, while two others are participants in Upward Bound at nearby West Texas State University.

Herschel Allen, Randall County CETA director who approved the program, said the project was attractive because it gives youngsters the chance to learn as they work.

"I don't know of any similar project," Allen added.

Van James, a WTSU grant analyst and administrative assistant, originated the idea of employing CETA-supported youths in the project.

The excavation is being monitored by WTSU students Hank Kalokowski, project archaeologist, and Bruce Thompson, field assistant. Dr. Jack Hughes, a WTSU anthropology professor, also supervises, and additional assistance is provided by members of a WTSU Summer field archaeology class.

The camp site under excavation may have been a rest stop used by Apaches between 1300 and 1500 A.D. and is located in an arbor of trees beside the golf course's fifth green.

The site is believed to have been a rest spot for nomadic tribes who crisscrossed the plains in search of their primary food source, the bison, said Hughes.

Artifacts gleaned from the excavation so far indicate the Indians who used the site had not encountered Spanish conquistadors or their metallic objects, nor had the inhabitants been exposed to the Pueblo Indians and their colorful pottery.

For the moment, the youthful archaeologists have uncovered a panoply of animal bones, some flint artifacts and several brown pottery shards.

"We're pretty sure it is a prehistoric site," Kalokowski said.

The project archaeologist said excavation at the site could not have been postponed. Country club maintenance workers plan to plow the area soon so that it may be sodded, Kalokowski said.

Amendment Vote Faces Lubbock City Council

lenging the constitutionality of the one-cent local option sales tax in Texas.

An ordinance requested by the Lubbock Police Department would, if passed by the council, create a legal presumption that a driver involved in a hit-and-run accident is the owner of the vehicle involved in the accident unless the owner produces evidence to the contrary.

Currently, many of the reports on the 170 such accidents each month are never completed because police cannot ascertain who was driving the vehicles involved in the incidents.

Council members also will consider appointing temporary Municipal Court judges until someone is hired to replace Judge Drew Littleton who resigned last month.

Former city attorney Fred Senter may be named a temporary judge and attorney Syrian Marbut, who has been filling in nearly two decades as judge, may be reaffirmed.

Other items on the council agenda include:

— The allocation of $65,000 Community Development contingency funds to finance traffic lights and street improvements at East 50th Street and Quirt Avenue as requested by the Lubbock school district.

— Adoption of a revised Community Development citizen participation plan which would expand citizen participation in all phases of the Community Development Block Grant program.

— Approval of a grant application for $218,525 from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to fund improvements on an athletic field quadraplex to be constructed in the Yellowhouse Canyon Park.

Guerrillas Attack Thai Payroll Train

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Communist guerrillas knocked out an armored car escorting a payroll train in southern Thailand, killing seven police guards, but the $400,000 payroll got through, border police headquarters said today.

The police said a land mine blew up one of two armored cars escorting the train Tuesday, and guerrillas hiding along the track opened fire with rockets and small arms. But a near miss by a bomb failed to stop the train, and it reached a nearby station safely.

Advisory Board Studies Problem Of 'Acid Rain'

DETROIT (UPI) — The vast Great Lakes watershed is subjected to rain and snow with up to 40 times more acid than precipitation under normal conditions, scientists say.

This "acid rain," although not expected to cause significant damage to open waters of the lakes, already has affected inland waters and aquatic life within the basin, researchers said Monday.

The problem was outlined in a study prepared by the Great Lakes Science Advisory Board and presented to the International Joint Commission, the U.S.-Canadian group that oversees clean-up of the lakes.

Researchers said they fear acid rain — the product of water vapor mixing with emissions from coal-fired power plants, autos and industrial sources — not only could kill off fish but also could harm soil and plants.

"Certain areas within the Great Lakes drainage basin are heavily impacted by acid rain, especially with respect to aquatic organisms," said Dr. George Hendrey, one of the participants in the study.

"We have individual episodes of rain 1,000 times more acid than normal," said Hendrey.

'Project Autoline' Launched In Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — What may be the nation's first voluntary mediation program to handle consumers' complaints about their automobiles is beginning in Polk County.

Officials of the Better Business Bureau and Attorney General Tom Miller said this week their offices and 37 Des Moines area auto dealers will participate in "Project Autoline," a pilot program of the national Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Miller said the program — which will include binding arbitration if needed — is aimed at settling consumer complaints that don't involve violations of Iowa law.

"Project Autoline will seek to mediate or arbitrate car owners' complaints where a factory defect or warranty problem is alleged," Miller said, noting that his office receives several hundred such complaints from Polk County each year.

"By participating in this program we hope to provide faster and greater service to complaining Iowa consumers who may not have been the victims of fraud but who still need assistance."

Miller said his office first will review all complaints it receives to determine whether a law has been violated. If not, the complaint will be referred to the Des Moines Better Business Bureau for mediation, providing the complaint is lodged against a dealer participating in Project Autoline.

Jim Young of Washington, D.C., an official with the national Council of Better Business Bureaus, said six automobile manufactures will participate in the pilot project: General Motors, Ford, American Motors, Chrysler, Nissan and Volkswagen.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Oil Issues Lead Mart Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today with oil issues leading the retreat.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 6.74 to 843.60 in the first two hours.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors' expectations of some major steps by President Carter to deal with the energy situation had apparently faded.

The White House said late Tuesday that Carter had decided against removing controls on the price of gasoline.

Visitors to Carter's domestic summit at Camp David, Md., also indicated he doesn't plan any big changes in his anti-inflation policies.

Actively traded oil stocks included Exxon, down ⅜ at 55¼; Conoco, off 1¼ at 39⅜; Texaco, down ¾ at 28⅝; Atlantic Richfield, off 1¼ at 67⅛, and Occidental Petroleum, down ⅝ at 24.

On the American Stock Exchange, Dome Petroleum fell 1½ to 39; Houston Oil & Minerals ¼ to 20, and Total Petroleum of North American ¾ to 21⅞.

Harnischfeger jumped 4¾ to 25. The company said it received a $27.50-a-share takeover offer from a European concern, topping a previous $20 bid by Paccar, Inc.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index lost .38 to 58.78. The Amex market value index tumbled 2.09 to 198.13.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 15.79 million shares by noontime, against 19.49 million at the same point Tuesday.

DR. LAMB

Stapling Not Simple

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a terrible weight problem and I want some information on surgery. I know about the bypass operation and I wouldn't have anything to do with it, but I've read about the stomach being stapled so that the patient automatically eats less but everything goes through its normal tract. What do you think about this operation?

DEAR READER — It's in its early stage of use and whenever any procedure is new, sometimes it's a good idea to wait and see what the experience really is. I gather from your remarks that you know that a lot of people have had trouble with the intestinal bypass operation. When it was first started many enthusiasts thought it was the ultimate answer to obesity.

The stapling of the stomach operation you referred to is being used by some surgeons because they recognize the intestinal bypass operation can create a lot of problems. What remains to be seen is how much trouble is caused by stapling the stomach.

It's not a simple operation. Any time you have to open the abdomen, it's not simple. Basically, you can think of the stomach as a large canvas bag. The surgeon puts two rows of staples near the top of the stomach. Right in the middle of the two rows he leaves a space where no staples are put.

The final result is that the upper part of the stomach is a small food pouch with a small outlet to allow the food to pass on to the lower part of the stomach. The small food pouch is not able to store much solid food, so after the staple operation a person has to eat very small meals to avoid getting pain or having nausea and vomiting. It doesn't prevent a person from consuming large amounts of liquid high calorie foods.

It simply prevents some people from consuming too many calories. There's no magic to it. It fits completely with the basic rule that if you decrease your calories enough, you will lose fat.

Even the surgeons who have been developing the operation agree that it shouldn't be used if you can enable a person to lose fat through other means — specifically, restriction of calories and increase in calorie use by the body.

So, I'm not going to recommend the stomach staple operation to people at this time. Since its effects are strictly through calorie control, I would much prefer to see patients achieve this without undergoing major surgery.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which is a basic diet you could use and learn to live with. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you have a major weight problem, I think you should certainly be under medical supervision. But the two major tools that you should use are calorie control and increase in physical activity. Perhaps a third ingredient should be added — it's called patience. You have to lose fat slowly to lose weight safely. And you must learn to eat properly and develop a proper life style, otherwise the problem will simply recur.

Rare Animals Kept From Public Scrutiny At Primate Center

By DEBRA WILLIAMS

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Few people are familiar with Duke University's primate center and the director likes it that way.

It houses some of the world's rarest animals and they are protected from public scrutiny that might further endanger their survival. The research center has about 300 lower primates, most of them lemurs.

Dr. Elwyh L. Simons said some might become extinct if it were not for the efforts of scientists. He estimated about 90 percent of the animals are on the endangered species list.

Lemurs, which have been in existence for more than 100 million years, continue to reproduce in the quietness of cages concealed by bamboo.

The lemurs, which resemble dogs but have human-like hands, are not monkeys although the two are related. Those at the colony are valued at $500,000 and two of the species at the center are not in captivity anywhere else in the world.

"They're so quaint and attractive that I don't want the world to be without them," Simons said. "Here they are not disturbed by the public and they can be studied.

"They are raised under gentle circumstances. We try to treat them like wild animals. We don't try to make pets out of them."

The lemurs live in social groups in 130 different size cages at the center. Each animal has a name, medical records and an ancestor chart. Usually composed of a male, female and their offspring, the groups normally number eight or nine in captivity.

The 10-member staff and visiting researchers have turned to the Bible, planets and the Greek classics for the lemurs' names that are assigned according to the species the animal belongs. For example, ruffed lemurs are all named after planets and stars.

The unique facility became the world's largest lemur colony through successful breeding.

"That is very unusual because they usually do not breed well in captivity," Simons said.

He said reproduction of the animal is very rare in zoos because of the noise.

But it is different at the Duke center where uninvited guests are not welcome. A total of 60 lemurs were born and survived this spring.

When the animals become too numerous, some are sent to zoos.

Formed in 1966, the research center is devoted to studying all areas of the animals' lives, including longevity, bonds between parents and children and the similarities in thir social groups to man.

"We would like to diversify our studies and have more rare species," Simons said.

Often called living fossils, lemurs are found mainly in Madagascar although there are three species in Africa and three in Southeast Asia.

Tribe members living away from Madagascar's urban centers believe the tree living vegetarian lemurs are ghosts — The spirts of their ancestors. In many areas, the people are afraid of the animals and believe they are bad luck.

They try to kill the animals, further depleting the species.

Some of the species may disappear in the wild by the turn of the century, Simons predicted, with only animals living in research centers surviving.

Carlsbad Editor Listened To Gunmen's Demands

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — The newsman who went into the Carlsbad Caverns Tuesday to talk with four Texas men holding a young woman hostage said the men told him they "wanted to walk out, not be carried out."

Publisher-editor Ned Cantwell of the Carlsbad Current-Argus said the men, who surrendered after negotiating a deal with federal officers that they would be charged only with a misdemeanor, also told him they "would rather die than go to the penitentiary."

After more than an hour with the men, Cantwell and the woman hostage, National Park employee Linda Phillips, 24, of Chattanooga, Tenn., were allowed to return to the surface unharmed.

The four men were identified as David W. Kuczynski, 28, William Charles Lovejoy, 28, and Eugene Hiram Meroney, 31, all of Odessa, and Dennis James Mark, 39, of Riesel.

Following is Cantwell's account of his part in the drama, based on an interview:

"I got a call at the office about 4 p.m. (5 p.m. CDT) and was told there were four gunmen holding a hostage or hostages in the Caverns and one of their demands was that a newsman come down so they could tell their story."

He said he went to the Caverns and first tried to talk with the men on the Caverns telephone system, but they insisted that he join them in the huge cave.

"Finally I said 'Okay, Im coming.' I borrowed a tape rectrder and told them I was coming down. I went down approximately 5:30 p.m., alone.

"They took my recorder and put it on the table with my notepad. They turned me around and searched me."

Cantwell said they then took him through revolving doors into the cave chamber that serves as a lunchroom for visitors to the Caverns.

"There were three people there at the time. I identified myself and asked where Linda was and whether she was all right. They had the fourth person bring her in. We talked and I saw she was all right. She appeared very calm."

He said they then took her away.

He said the men confirmed demands they had made earlier in telephone conversations with authorities.

"They said they wanted amnesty, that they wanted out alive, one million dollars and a helicopter to take them to the airport 'so we can fly to Brazil.' They wanted me to promise I would come up here (to the surface) and tell the people they wanted to walk out, not be carried out."

Other than the specific demands, Cantwell said the men talked about general grievances. He said they didn't seem to represent any group.

"They spoke of repressed Indian nations in the United States. They spoke about the general chaos of the country — the fuel shortage, the OPEC stranglehold."

"They kept repeating their demands, but they weren't particularly coherent. They were drinking. There was a fifth of whiskey that was about half full when I got there and empty when I left.

"They kept talking about how they wanted more booze to be sent down and suggested they would trade me for it."

Tourists Detained Six Hours During Caverns Negotiations

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Some 100 tourists detained for nearly six hours in Carlsbad Caverns Tuesday when four gunmen commandeered the lunchroom and took a National Park worker hostage weren't told exactly why they couldn't leave.

But they knew there was something wrong.

Two of the tourists said the three Rangers supervising the group trapped in the "Big Room" of the cave told them only that there was an emergency in the lunchroom. There were indications, however, that the situation was serious.

"My husband left one time because he wanted to find out exactly what was going on," said Irene Duran of El Paso. "One of the Rangers followed him and asked him to come back because he was endangering the group.

"The Ranger told him we made a deal and wanted everybody to stay together, so he came back," Mrs. Duran said.

Park officials said the tourists were in the "Big Room" when Dennis Mark, 39, Riesel, and Odessa residents David Kuczynski, 28, Eugene Hiram Meroney, 31, and William Charles Lovejoy, 28, took 24-year-old Linda Phillips of Chattanooga, Tenn., hostage and barricaded themselves in the Cavern lunchroom at 3:20 p.m.

There were only two exits from which the tourists could have left the cave — by elevator or the cave's mouth.

The lunchroom is adjacent to the elevators so that exit route was cut off.

The trail leading from the "Big Room" to the surface at the mouth of the cave passes near the lunchroom and park officials said anyone using it could have been spotted by the gunmen.

Rangers evacuated one man from the "Big Room" by using the trail because he told them he had a heart condition that could be aggravated by claustrophobia.

The rest of the group was brought out after the gunmen surrendered at 9 p.m.

One woman, who became ill, had to be carried out by stretcher.

Bikers Claim Discrimination By Owners Of Bars In Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty years ago, the Scorpions might have handled their predicament differently.

But now, most of the motorcycle gang members are in their 30s, and they hope to iron out their differences with Dallas bar owners through peaceful methods.

Zig-Zag, Rowdy, Scum and their compadres say they are denied admittance to some bars because "they don't like our type."

While the bikers still proudly display their colors, tatoos and machines, they want to be able to relax with a brew without jeopardizing their steady jobs and house payments.

"We're big enough and bad enough that we could hurt a lot of people," Scorpions president Zig-Zag said, "but we're not that kind of people. When we were younger, it was different. Now, we're more serious."

A Dallas Times Herald reporter accompanied the bikers to one bar to test their claim that many bar managers throw them out or call the police when they arrive.

Sure enough, a minute or two after their arrival, the Scorpions came back outside. Within five minutes, two Dallas police patrol cars arrived, and officers began checking the bikes' license plates. The bar manager declined comment on the matter.

"A lot of places, they call the police as soon as we park our bikes," Animal said. "It's really stupid. We should have the same rights as the wackos that go to most places. A lot of us are veterans and just good Americans."

"These places wouldn't think about discriminating against blacks or blues or reds or greens or any other colors," Rowdy said. "I don't think we should have to pay for their hangups and fears about motorcyclists, especially when they're not true."

The Scorpions admitted some bike gangs are looking for trouble. "We call them the sidewalk commandos," Gypsy said. "They wear these big old chains and Bowie knives and act weird. But we're not like that at all. Just because one black person does something wrong, you don't hold that against all of them. It should be the same for all of us."

Roland Allen, an assistant Texas attorney general, says the bikers might have a point. "A general rule requiring certain attire, such as a shirt, is okay," Allen said. "But I just doubt that anybody can legally refuse to serve motorcyclists. It's a good question."

The Scorpions say they can't afford to hire a lawyer, but hope they can make bar owners realize they just want to enjoy themselves.

"When you walk into a place with your old lady or a girl, it's embarrassing when they don't let you in," Rowdy said.

WANT A LITTLE RESPECT — Scorpions motorcycle club members Scum, Rowdy, Gypsy and Zig-Zag stand outside a Dallas bar. The club members are upset because local bars refuse to serve then and often call the police. The Scorpions say they don't want any trouble and aren't looking for it. They say all they want is a little respect. (AP Laserphoto)

Chemical Engineers To Swamp Market

NEW YORK (AP) — During the next few years record numbers of new chemical engineers are expected to be seeking jobs in chemical process industries, according to Chemical Engineering magazine.

Luring students to enroll at U.S. chemical engineering schools are high starting salaries and plentiful job opportunities, says the publication.

American Breaks Ground For Chinese Industry

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

For more than two years, we've been reporting on the progress of Charles Abrams and his China Trade Corp., which has been breaking new ground in developing business opportunities with China.

He started seven years ago by importing Chinese movies, moved into vodka, followed with textiles and peasant art, and then formed a joint venture between his company and a West German manufacturer to produce plastics and artificial leathers inside China.

Now, Abrams, just back from one of his frequent trips to China, is about to take China Trade Corp. on one of its biggest steps so far — a project to build huge pieces of roadbuilding equipment in a Chinese factory and sell them to the outside world, including the United States.

Despite widespread belief to the contrary in this country, Abrams contends that the Chinese have the technical expertise, the skilled manpower and the managerial capability to run a large number of manufacturing facilities and produce top-quality goods.

"They started buying modern machine-tool equipment in Europe 15 years ago," he told us, "and now they have hundreds of well-equipped factories. But they need advice and guidance on how to use what they've got and they need the technology to make new products."

To conduct his company's newest project, China Trade Corp. has formed a joint venture with Pan American World Engineering Inc. of Vero Beach, Fla. This new company, called New China Roadbuilding Corp., has signed an agreement with a Chinese government agency, the China Corp. of Shipbuilding Industry, which controls a modern factory in Ruichang near the banks of the Yangtze River about 450 miles from Shanghai.

The first piece of heavy equipment to be built in the factory under the three-year contract will be the Stevens cement spreader, a 12-ton, 20-foot-long monster developed by Pan American and built in limited quantities for its own roadbuilding operations. The China-made version, which will go into production early next year, will carry a price tag of $125,000.

Abrams, a former investment banker who has visited manufacturing plants on several continents, is enthusiastic about the Ruichang factory. "It's a first-class industrial center, with superb equipment and a high level of engineering ability," he says. "They have a every type of machinery which can be found in factories in Detroit and Essen."

He also gives the plant high marks for its managerial capacity. "They are eager and cooperative and very willing to bend over backwards to help make things work," he says. "Their engineers went over the plans we submitted in great detail. They asked all the right questions about assembly, storage, shipping and additional schematics. They know their way around in engineering and technology."

The new project calls for New China Roadbuilding to provide all the raw materials, components and major parts during the first year. After that, the Chinese will decide whether they will provide parts made in China, rather than bringing them from outside. The Ruichang plant, Abrams explained, will machine most of the chassis, frames, shafts and some of the other parts, as well as complete the assembly of the cement spreader.

Abrams stressed that his company had no commitment from the Chinese at this time to buy the vehicle for domestic use. However, he noted, roadbuilding is considered very important in China, and officials have cited the need to construct more than 10,000 miles of secondary roads per year for the next five years as part of the over-all modernization program. Since most such roads now are made of dirt or stone, the potential is obvious, he says.

Abrams has long contended that the greatest opportunities for Western companies in China can be found in joint manufacturing projects, where the output will be both used domestically and sold on the international market.

His goal is the creation of joint ventures in China that would carry through from design to marketing. "We already have such projects in the works," he told us, "and we hopt to be among the first to have a true joint venture with the Chinese. Guidelines setting the terms and conditions for joint ventures and foreign capital investment are currently being discussed by the National People's Congress now meeting in Peking."

We asked Abrams what comes next after cement spreaders. "Oil rigs," he answered. "We're taking to a Norwegian company about a joint venture to produce oil rigs in China."

North Carolina City Celebrates 'Windmill Day'

BOONE, N.C. (UPI) — It's "windmill day" in Boone in honor of a a 10-story tall, $6 million windmill — billed as the world's largest — which needs 24 mph winds to get cranked up.

Celebrations surrounding the dedication of the mighty windmill apparently have not been dampened by the cold statistical fact that the wind in Boone averages only 18 miles an hour.

"We all feel a certain fondness for it," said Jane Smith, vice president of special events for the Boone Area Chamber of Commerce and an organizer of the "windmill day." She said musicians and other entertainers will be on hand for the festivities.

The windmill's steel blades, 200 feet in diameter, are connected to a tower housing that swivels in any direction to pick up the prevailing winds.

The machine will go into operation in about three months, and is expected to produce up to 2,000 kilowatts of electricity for the Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp., a cooperative serving seven northwestern North Carolina counties.

Even if it runs only half the time, Blue Ridge officials predict it can provide 1 to 2 percent of the cooperative's electrical needs — a saving of $150,000 a year.

Air Traffic Surge Continues In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scheduled airlines now account for 84 percent of intercity public passenger miles in the United States, with more than 300 million passengers expected to fly this year, according to the Air Transport Association.

ATA President Paul R. Ignatius says, "The 1978 air traffic surge has continued through the winter and spring of 1979. There is the prospect that the airlines this year will carry more than 300 million passengers, continuing their predominant role in intercity public passenger service — 84 percent domestically and 95 percent to overseas points.

U.S. Borrowers Add To Installment Loan Debt

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans owe at least $288 billion of installment loans, an increase of about $45 billion in a year, to say nothing of more than $1 trillion of residential, commercial and farm mortgages.

They owe the money to commercial banks, savings banks, savings and loan associations, retailers, finance companies, insurance companies, credit unions, and private parties, including parents and employers.

They continue to add to it, with the aid of lenders. Lenders like the high interest rates they receive. Borrowers like the idea of deducting that interest on their tax returns, and paying back in cheaper dollars.

Once upon a time, borrower approached lender hat in hand. Times have changed. Some lenders now try to drop money in the hat; they solicit customers, they offer credit cards with automatic lines of credit.

Inevitably, as happens when any custom changes, worries have arisen among borrowers about the wisdom of all that credit, especially as the economy weakens and the worker's hold on his job becomes more tenuous.

Analysis

Is it unwise to use credit? No. It may be unwise not to use it. Credit in itself is neither good nor bad; what gives it such designations is the use to which it is put. That use can be wise, or unwise.

Rules of thumb can be misleading, but almost inevitably a household is straining its budget if it uses more than 20 percent of takehome pay to reduce an installment loan. Many families now have that problem.

Families that use credit to pay routine, recurring bills, such as for groceries, are misusing credit. So are those who use credit for items of little permanence. And those who use it to finance whims.

Those who pay for durable, big ticket items such as houses, furniture, home repairs, automobiles and appliances are generally thought to have used credit wisely. In fact, it sometimes can be demonstrated.

Assume, for example, that a family wishes to buy a car for $8,000. To save for that purchase might take three or four years, during which the price of the car will have risen, and the value of the dollar declined.

By borrowing, the family will incur interest payments of perhaps 12 percent on the declining balance, but so long as inflation continues at its present rate, more than 13 percent, the interest cost is wiped out.

Meanwhile, the family has the use of the car, it has avoided the higher price, and — assuming inflation continues — it repays in cheaper dollars. Moreover, interest payments are tax-deductible.

Depending on the way in which it is used, credit can be the salvation as well as the economic death of a family, and millions of homebuyers have attested to this in the past decade of rising home prices.

Although they put up only 25 percent of the purchase price, these buyers have enjoyed the same dollar return as the person who paid the full 100 percent. And based on percentage, four times as much.

Assume the house cost $60,000 and the purchaser put up $15,000 and borrowed $45,000. In a four-year period the market value of the house rose to $90,000, an increase close to the national average increase.

The family's equity in the house is now at least $45,000, based on a down payment of $15,000, $30,000 in appreciation, and whatever additions to equity have been made. The family has tripled it's money.

Other considerations must be factored in, of course, such as the cost of the money and the general inflation rate (the rate by which the value of the dollar has declined). Regardless, the return is huge.

Is the current level of debt dangerous? To individual households, it obviously is. Personal bankruptcies have risen and credit counselors have files filled with horror stories.

Credit authorities are divided, however, in their concern for the national economy. In a downturn, some fear, the credit that at one time might have seemed like a life preserver might become a lead weight.

The more optimistic of them believe that the system is flexible enough to accommodate borrowers with easier repayment terms, for a limited time, if the burden becomes too great during a recession.

While that question might still be debated, there is little argument that credit can indeed be an enormous force for economic good, or evil. It depends on the people who use it, and use to which they put it.

Former Power Company Official Forms Utility Consulting Firm

By GEOFF DORNAN

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — After 15 years as a utility company executive, Ralph Cromer has hung out his shingle as a consultant to consumers.

A former top executive with Sierra Pacific Power Co., Cromer has established Utility Consulting Associates.

"I recognized the need for some interface between the cold-blooded utility and the average developer, contractor or other consumer," he said.

"There is a big credibility gap between utilities and the public. The general businessman doesn't know what the utility needs from him and doesn't understand its problems. I hope to overcome that by trying to get the customer some consideration of his needs and by interpreting the rules of the utility so the businessman is advised as to what his rights are."

So far, he said, the response has been good.

"I know what the utilities need, so I can save the businessman time and money by handling his utility problems."

Cromer said businessmen apparently aren't the only ones who can use his services. He already has testified as an expert in a court case, and expects to do more of the same "when people need an objective, expert viewpoint."

In addition, he said several business associations, particularly in the ouilding and allied industries, are considering paying for his expertise in utility matters before the state's Public Service Commission, the courts and the legislature.

He said there is another field where he has been called on for help, especially in Nevada where there are many developments outside service areas of established utilities. In that case, he said, he was asked to help organize a water company for a developer.

Cromer emphasized that he is not a representative for "consumer activists" in the popular sense.

"Mine is a positive approach, to work out the problems between the consumer and the utility, to provide communication," he said. "Many of the consumer activists are negative."

He said, however, he can see himself helping out a group of consumers in finding a solution to a specific problem in dealing with a utility.

"I believe you've got to have a thriving utility to have a thriving economy," he said.

He said one thing he has been able to help developers with is making their arrangements with utilities for new service as soon in planning as possible. He said because of the Reno area's rapid growth over the past three years, lead time to get even a simple project equipped by utilities has increased to 17 weeks and that subdivisions take even longer.

He said many developers don't think about that until the project is well along and then get mad at the utility for not being able to meet their schedule.

He said another surprise developers in Nevada got recently was that the PSC rules on how much money they had to put "up front" with a utility for a project were changed, increasing the capital they needed.

"They weren't represented at the PSC hearing where the rules were changed. I could do that for them," he said.

Japan Reports Certified Exports Hike

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's certified exports totaled $8.761 billion in June, up 2.3 percent from a year ago, but down from $8.871 billion in the previous month, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry announced Tuesday.

Certified exports indicate the trend for exports over the next few weeks.

On a yen basis, exports certified by the ministry in June totaled 1.903 trillion yen, down 1.6 percent from a year ago and up from 1.885 trillion yen in May.

On a yen basis, certified exports of chemical products rose 9.8 percent from a year before, metals 2.7 percent and iron and steel 16.5 percent.

However, exports declined from year-ago levels in several categories: machinery, 5.3 percent; television sets, 2.6 percent; radios and tape recorders, 4.2 percent, and ships, a sharp 59.7 percent.

International trade officials, especially traders in foreign currency, viewed the month-to-month decline and the small year-to-year rise as an indication that the volume of Japanese exports was declining.

A decline in exports, combined with a rise in dollar-denominated imports — particularly higher-priced oil from members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Nations — could lead to a balance of trade deficit and aggravate tendencies to price inflation already apparent in Japan. The nation is heavily dependent on imported oil for its energy needs.

Government Wants To Tax Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and congressional experts say existing tax exemptions for some areas of health insurance coverage cost the United States billions of dollars in lost revenue.

As a result, a congressional subcommittee is exploring everal poposals that would allow the government to tax part of the contributions that employers make to provide health care insurance for workers. Current law says that when a corporation pays health insurance premiums for its employees, the employees pay no income tax on the benefit. But if the company were to give the money to employees, the employees would have to pay tax on it even if they used it to pay for health insurance.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.
The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

Police Probing House Shootings

Lubbock police were kept busy this morning investigating separate reports from three residents who said shots were fired into their North Lubbock homes.

Harvey Williams of 2920-B Baylor St. told police he awoke about 1:30 a.m. to find someone pouring four or five shots into his house.

Both Williams and a witness described a suspect they saw shooting at the house. However, the suspect later told police he was sitting on his front porch and saw someone in a blue station wagon firing three or four shots at Williams' house.

No arrests have been made.

Audelo Jimenez of 2608 First Place told police he believed two persons he had fought with earlier fired eight or nine times at his house and car about 2:35 a.m.

Two of the shots hit the tire and gas tank of Jimenez' car, police reports show. Five more hit the house.

Several blocks east, Valentina Torres of 320 N. Sherman Ave. said someone in a yellow or white Mercury automobile shot out her kitchen window as she was closing her drapes.

Police said they found five large-caliber bullet holes in the walls and door of Mrs. Torres' home and two more in her car.

In other activity, a 16-year-old male told police he was stabbed in the arm by a middle-aged woman when he tried to move his father's truck from the suspect's curb.

The victim's father told police he had had a disagreement with the woman earlier.

Another Lubbock woman accompanied her daughter to a local hospital and wound up in jail.

Police answered a report of a fight on East Broadway about 10 p.m. Tuesday to find that instead of a fight, a woman was in labor.

One of the officers recognized the mother of the woman in labor as being wanted for allegedly writing bad checks.

While the mother and daughter were en route to the hospital, police confirmed the information and arrested the woman at the hospital.

A 22-year-old Lubbock woman was arrested on suspicion of prostitution at a city motel.

She reportedly hailed the car police were using as bait and offered to have sexual intercourse with the driver for $40. She later accompanied him to a motel where detectives arrested her.

Lubbock police also arrested an escapee from the Giddings State Home and School in Central Texas at a city apartment.

The youth reportedly escaped from the Texas Youth Council facility in early June.

Todd Stafford of 3108 Vicksburg Ave., No. 1201, told police Tuesday night someone stole a $2,300 gold ring from his apartment.

Workmen were in the apartment when the custom-made ring with an emerald stone disappeared from a bookcase about 6:15 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Although Lubbock fire officials believe Sunday's fire at the Studio 1 disco was the result of arson, it may be be a week before they have proof.

Assistant Fire Marshal John Anthony said Tuesday the Department of Public Safety's analysis of "suspicious looking" materials found after the fire was extinguished may not be completed until next week.

Fire investigators found evidence of what appears to be a trail of flammable liquid in the nightclub, located at 714 Broadway.

No one was injured in the fire, which destroyed the interior of the building and its contents.

In criminal activity Tuesday, a 24-year-old Lubbock man reported to police that someone broke into his apartment and stole a $500 Seiko Quartz watch, a guitar and $30 in change.

Edgar Paschsio of 6302 Elgin, Apt. 99, said the burigary occurred either late Monday night or early Tuesday morning. The victim said he had left his front door unlocked and open during the night because his air conditioning was broken.

A Lubbock finishing carpenter told police that a compressor, saw and sander, valued at $730, were stolen late Monday or early Tuesday from a house under construction at 5110 56th St.

Jeff D. Lynslkey, 25, of 6801 West 19th said the house was broken into between 6 p.m. Monday and 1 a.m. Tuesday.

The pastor of the One Way Church of God, 1510 E. 15th St., reported to police Tuesday that someone stole the church's air conditioner, valued at $100.

Jimmy Brown, 54, said the air conditioner was taken from the church building between 10 p.m. Monday and 9 a.m. Tuesday. Brown said the church had obtained the air conditioner only a week ago.

SPAG Board Fails To Decide Course Of Action For Funds

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Local rights versus federal authority became the central issue Tuesday, as the South Plains Association of Governments board of directors again failed to decide a course of action for seeking Economic Development Administration funding.

SPAG President Medlin Carpenter said he learned in conversations Monday with EDA officials that the board will have to be expanded to include citizen (non-elected officials) and minority representation to qualify as an Economic Development District.

He added that by doing so, the 15-county SPAG region very likely will receive final designation as a development district.

"I've been trying to get through it (EDA regulations), but you've got to change the board to become a district," Carpenter said.

Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw responded, "Lubbock County is opposed to that unanimously. I think if we (SPAG) give up our own right to decide local government representation we are giving up too much."

Shaw said a resolution in support of SPAG becoming a development district passed recently by Lubbock County was based on a different set of assumptions. He said he had been under the impression that SPAG might elect to form a separate, non-profit corporation to oversee a development district in the region.

Lubbock City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan seconded the judge's statement, saying the city had passed the same resolution with the belief that a separate administrative body could be created.

Currently the SPAG board contains no minorities, and Mrs. Jordan said a past attempt to include them had proven unsuccessful because minority members had failed to attend meetings, making a quorum difficult to attain.

As a means to prevent a recurrence of this problem, Carpenter said the idea of allowing minorities in the SPAG region the right to elect their own board representatives was being considered. He said this policy would identify the minority members' constituents, and in the event that minority members had poor attendance records, the SPAG board would have access to their supporters.

Carpenter said EDA regulations provide for a minimum of 51 percent elected officials, 25 percent minorities and 20 percent private citizens on the board of an organization overseeing a development district. The present SPAG board, he said, is comprised largely of elected officials, although a small number qualify as private citizens.

The announcement that there is no alternative to expanding the SPAG board to bring EDA funds to the region also caught the SPAG staff by surprise.

Last Friday, Glenda Robinson, acting SPAG executive director, said the staff was recommending the formation of a separate, non-profit corporation, which would oversee a development district in the region. The recommendation stated further that the SPAG directors would be authorized to appoint the members to the corporation.

Following the discussion, Shaw proposed that no decision be made by the board until next month's meeting to allow members time to think through the matter.

Meanwhile, Carpenter made no secret of his sentiments. "What I want is a full show of support," he said.

Asked what effect the City of Lubbock and Lubbock County's refusal to support an eepanded board would have, Carpenter said, "It'll hurt."

An amendment to the SPAG by-laws will be necessary to change the method of selecting representatives on the board. According to Carpenter, the SPAG general assembly, scheduled to meet in September, must adopt a proposal by a two-thirds vote to amend the by-laws.

At the Aug. 14 SPAG board meeting the directors are eepected to decide upon a permanent SPAG executive director.

Hale County Judge Henry Heck said the list of candidates for the job had been narrowed to five after amination of resumes, and interviews of the remaining five are now in progress.

Earlier Tuesday, the directors approved a resolution of support for funding of the Texas Tech University School of Nursing, with the message to be transmitted to Gov. Bill Clements and area state legislators.

Sellie Shine, a registered nurse representing a 15-county South Plains area of the Texas Nursing Association, told the board that 224 budgeted nursing positions in the region currently are vacant due to an insufficient supply of nurses

She asked SPAG to emphasize to state government officials the importance of placing funding of the nursing school on any upcoming special legislative session agenda.

Sudan Teen Shot By Policeman

LITTLEFIELD (Special) — A 19-year-old Sudan man was in serious condition today at Health Sciences Center Hospital after he was shot Monday by a Littlefield policeman.

Derin Beauchamp was taken to Lubbock's HSCH shortly after 2 a.m. Monday after he was shot by officer Jan Witkowski on FM 303, Littlefield Police Chief James Cox said.

Beauchamp reportedly had run a roadblock set up by officers Witkowski and Steve Carver and allegedly was trying to run over Witkowski when he was shot in the head with a .12-guage shotgun, according to Cox.

The sheriff, who has asked Texas Rangers to conduct an investigation of the incident, said this morning he had not learned why authorities were chasing the teen-ager.

The pursuit began about 1:45 a.m. when Beauchamp allegedly attempted to outrun Amherst City Marshal Buddy Boleyn. The marshal could not be reached for comment this morning.

Boleyn reportedly chased Beauchamp's pickup truck south on FM 303, and radioed Littlefield police for help. Cox said when Beuachamp ran a Littlefield police roadblock and allegedly attempted to drive over Witkowski, the officers fired several at the teen-ager's vehicle and Beauchamp was wounded.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Invite Everybody To Join New Club

By SHARI LEWIS

Before you start your own Kids-Only Club, make sure there is no other club just like it around the block. If there is another club around that does what you want to do, think about joining it rather than starting your own. Competition for members could make it hard to get your brand new club off the ground.

Of course, even if there is another club going you may have a reason you would rather put together your own. If so, go ahead.

Okay! You've decided to form your own club.

The first step is to invite everybody you think might be interested in joining the club to a meeting. You'll probably invite your best friends to the first gathering. If your friends have pals, they can join later.

Most clubs have some rules describing who can join (say, kids on certain blocks, girls in the fifth and sixth grades, kids who like bicycle riding and so on). Since you are starting this club, you probably have the best ideas about who should belong and who should not. But the best clubs are the ones that welcome any kids who fit the description, not just the ones you might have in mind at the very beginning.

If your club is going to last, let all of the members decide which kids are to be invited. That's how long-lasting, strong clubs work.

Once you get started, keep your eye out for new members, because after any club gets going, there are always one or two who drop out. Perhaps they are hurt that they were not chosen president or that their suggestions were not acted on by the group. Maybe they had second thoughts about the whole thing or found out that they just didn't have the time for many of the club's activities.

Whatever the reason, don't let such dropouts turn off the rest of the group. If you look, you will find others who will be eager to join.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: Which of the 50 United States has the longest name in one single word?

Answer: Massachusetts.

Today's Brain Twister: Start at the A at the top of this picture and move down, as you spell out the word abracadabra. You can pass from one letter to another one that is next to it (for example, you can start at the top of A go to either B, and from the B to any of the Rs that is adjoining it and so on.) How many ways can the word abracadabra be spelled? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Hurricane-Force Winds Rip Portions Of State

A-J News Services

Hurricane-force winds ripped through parts of Central Texas late Tuesday and killed two men, injured four others and collapsed a building at Round Rock.

However, Texas probably will escape most of the still-developing Hurricane Bob, weathermen said as it churned toward the Louisiana coast during the predawn hours today.

The destructive winds at Round Rock came out of a late afternoon thunderstorm — one of several that roared through Central Texas late Tuesday — and were measured at 89 mph 15 miles away at Lake Travis.

James Louis Rodriguez, 19, of Manor and Larry Trent Moore, 30, of Georgetown were killed at Round Rock.

The Lubbock area forecast calls for fair skies and hot afternoons today and Thursday with temperatures in the high 90s both days.

Winds will be southerly at 10 to 15 mph today and five to 10 mph tonight, weathermen said.

The low tonight will be in the high 60s.

Murder Trial Set Nov. 27

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — The trial date for a Dimmitt couple accused of the shotgun death of 15-year-old Roxanne Casas on Halloween night two years ago has been changed from Monday to Nov. 27.

The trial of Loy and Louise Stone will be heard in the 64th U.S. District Court of Judge John T. Boyd in November, following a motion of continuance from the Castro County District Attorney's Office.

The trial, originally scheduled for last April, was moved to July when the prosecution asked for a postponement because a Department of Public Safety chemist was unavailable for testimony.

The latest delay occurred when two prosecution witnesses were unavailable to appear in court Monday. They include a DPS chemist and Amarillo pathologist Jose Diaz-Esquivel.

The trial has been moved to Hale County from Castro County on a change of venue.

Miss Casas, a Dimmitt High School student, was shot to death Halloween night in 1977 while she and other high school students drove to the Stones' rural home. The couple, who are avowed witches, are members of the Church of Wicca.

The defendants contend they had been harassed by young people at their farm home and had told them that if they returned they would be fired upon.

Adult Education Classes Scheduled

The Lubbock Independent School District adult education program will offer automobile repair and painting training beginning July 30 and continuing to Jan. 18.

Students will accrue 960 hours during the course, which will be conducted Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Training is available to those who are accepted by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act's Manpower Intake Office. Payment to accepted trainees will be $2.90 per hour.

Additional information is available.at the school district's adult education office, 765-9338, or from the Manpower Intake Office, 763-6493.

Circus Plans 'Animal Walk'

The animals of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus will arrive in Lubbock by train late Thursday night, and will parade to the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum at 9:30 a.m. Friday.

The circus' "animal walk" will begin at the Santa Fe depot, where the animals will be unloaded from a 38-car train. From there the animals will walk down Broadway, turn north on University Street, then proceed to the Coliseum,where the circus will perform.

The exhibition of elephants, camels, horses and rare animals will precede the 108th edition of the circus, which will stage six performances Friday through Sunday.

A number of Lubbock personalities will ride elephants which will lead the procession. Among the celebrities will be Mayor Pro-Tem Alan Henry, Criminal District Attorney John Montford and others.

The pachyderms will be followed by a herd of thoroughbred Arabian stallions, ponies, llamas and camels.

Tigers, leopards, panthers, pumas and chimpanzees, all in cages, will follow the herds. The animal caravan will be joined by the Clown Corps, which the circus says is the largest clown brigade in existence.

Tickets for the performances may be purchased at Hemphill-Wells stores and at the Coliseum box office.

Houston Loses Fourth In Row

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Bibby and the Pittsburgh Pirates got a taste Tuesday night of what the Houston Astros have been dishing out all season without having to swallow a bitter pill.

The Astros, famed for milking the most out of a few good hits, rallied with two runs in the ninth inning but still lost to the Pirates 4-3 and extended their losing streak to four straight, Houston's longest of the season.

Bibby, 4-2, getting only his third start of the season, retired 14 batters in a row at one stretch before needing relief help in the ninth inning.

"Tonight was not only good for me but good for the club," said Bibby,who has been used to fill both relief and starting assignments this season by Manager Chuck Tanner. "This road trip hasn't been as good as we expected so this was a good victory tonight."

The Pirates got one run in the third off loser Joaquin Andujar, 10-5, when Rennie Stennett singled and scored on Omar Moreno's triple off the rightfield fence.

Houston second baseman Art Howe just missed Dave Parker's single up the middle in the sixth inning and two more runs scored. But it eventually took Rennie Stennett's run-scoring sacrifice fly in the eighth to preserve the victory.

Terry Puhl singled in the sixth to end Bibby's string of 14 straight outs and Cesar Cedeno scored Puhl with a double to the leftfield corner.

The Astros mounted their fruitless rally in the ninth when Puhl singled and Cedeno doubled again. Puhl scored Houston's second run on a balk by reliever Enrique Romo and Denny Walling's single netted the final run.

Tanner charged onto the field following the balk call against Romo but his protests went unheeded.

"They said he quick pitched but he didn't do anything different from any other pitcher," Tanner said. "Luckily it didn't make any difference."

Tanner was on the field again moments later when Art Howe singled to shallow centerfield and Walling came charging around third base headed for what would have been the tying run.

Walling was held up by third base coach Bob Lillis and had to dive back into third base to escape Bill Madlock's tag.

"The umpire made a good call," Walling said. "I was going until he put his arms up a little past the base and I had to get back in."

Astros Manager Bill Virdon said he isn't getting concerned yet about the losing streak.

"They're not hitting right now but they are staying loose and it's not time to panic," Virdon said.

Despite the loss, the Astros still lead the National League's Western Division by 6 1/2 games over second place Cincinnati.

Mike Schmidt. The fans in Philadelphia show up expecting him to hit a home run, and if any home run records are to be set, he's the one they figure can do it.

. But Del Unser?

Both Schmidt and Unser homered as the Phillies rallied for a win over the San Diego Padres. Unser's, though, outdid Schmidt's in importance. Not only did it set a major league record, it scored three runs and won the game.

Schmidt's 30th homer of the season tied a National League record for homers in five consecutive games — seven. Unser's made him the first player in

Kern's Error Costs Rangers

By The Associated Press

Apparently, there is a way to beat Jim Kern, the Texas Rangers' fireballer relief ace. Make him throw a bunted ball to a corner base.

Kern's wild heave past first base on a bunt by Mike Squires in the seventh inning Tuesday night opened the door for three runs as the Chicago White Sox rolled to a 6-3 triumph over the Rangers.

Home runs by Bump Wills, his second, and Richie Zisk, his sixth, had held the Rangers to a 3-1 lead and they were sailing smoothly behind the three-hit pitching of John Henry Johnson.

Johnson opened the seventh by walking Greg Pryor and had a 3-1 count on Mike Colbern when Kern, named to the American League All-Star team because of a sparkling 10-1 record and 15 saves, took over.

Kern completed the walk to Colbern, which was charged to Johnson, and when Squires bunted, Kern threw the ball past first as Pryor and pinch-runner James Morrison scored to tie the game.

Squires went all the way to third on the error and scored the lead run on a sacrifice fly by Alan Bannister, who also drove in two runs in the eighth after the Sox had loaded the bases against Kern on a single by Jorge Orta and pair of walks.

"No, the throw didn't upset me," said Kern, whose only other loss came in the ninth inning against Baltimore on June 10 when he fielded a bunt and threw wild past third to allow three runs to score, turning a 4-2 lead into a 5-4 loss.

Bannister, the Sox' leading hitter with a .325 average, couldn't hide his feelings.

"It makes me super-duper happy to drive in three runs against a super-duper relief pitcher," Bannister said. "He didn't have his good stuff. That was obvious. Still, he's tough to hit.

"I think we got up a little because he is the league's leading relief pitcher. And, of course, he didn't help himself any."

The victory was the sixth in the last seven games for the Sox, who now hold a 7-2 edge this season over the Rangers. They whipped Texas 11 times in 15

Rose Named NL All-Star Backup

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose will have an opportunity to set an All-Star Game record by playing at his fifth different position in Tuesday night's game at the Kingdome in Seattle.

The Philadelphia Phillies first baseman was among 13 reserves named to the National League squad today by All-Star Manager Tommy Larorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

It will be the seventh straight All-Star Game for Rose, who will back up Steve Garvey of the Dodgers at first base.

Rose, who has already appeared at second base, third base, left field and right field in his 11 All-Star games, was joined on the list of reserves by second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati, third baseman Ron Cey of Los Angeles, shortstops Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati and Garry Templeton of St.Louis, outfielders Lou Brock of St. Louis, Jack Clark of San Francisco, Gary Matthews of Atlanta, Dave Kingman of Chicago and Lee Mazzilli of New York and catchers Bob Boone of Philadelphia, Gary Carter of Montreal and Johnny Bench of Cincinnati.

The fans across the country voted Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres, Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates and George Foster of the Reds to start in the outfield, while the infield starters are Garvey and Davey Lopes of Los Angeles and Larry Bowa and Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia.

The top vote-getter among the catchers was Ted Simmons of the Cardinals, but he'll miss the game due to a broken wrist, so either Boone, Carter or Bench will get the start. Bench was the runnerup in the fan voting, the first time he has lost since the fans were allowed to select the All-Stars in 1970.

It will be the first All-Star Game for Matthews and Mazzilli who, like Clark and Parker, are the sole representatives of their respective teams.

Kingman, the Cubs' slugger, was hitting home runs at a near-record pace during the first half of the season but is now second to Schmidt for the NL home run lead. Carter has been one of the main forces behind the Expos' drive to the lead in the NL East, while the switch-hitting Mazzilli, whose Mets are in last place in the division, has been among the league leaders in hitting all season.

Brock, who already has announced his intention to retire at the end of the season, will be making his sixth All-Star appearance.

AL Managers, Umpires Need Counseling

"Any time you lose it's tough," said Rangers Manager Pat Corrales. "No, they don't have any hex against us. We just made it tough on ourselves."

As to yanking Johnson when he did, Corrales said, "It was hot out there and he had thrown 115 pitches. Also, he got himself in a jam by walking the leadoff hitter in the seventh and going 3-and-1 on the next guy."

Sox Manager Don Kessinger admitted his team got a big break. "Yes, sir. Yes, sir, we sure did. Any breaks we get we certainly appreciated. Didn't Ed Farmer do a great job?"

Farmer, acquired from Texas, pitched two perfect innings of relief for his first save while Richard Wortham, 9-8, picked up the victory.

"It doesn't make any difference who I'm pitching against," said Farmer, who has been ineffective since joining the Sox and has a 7.87 earned run average and 0-3 record. "I just pitch against a ball club. That's all."

Tigers 6, Twins 5

As the song says: It's one, two, three strikes, you're out at the old ball game. No one knows that better than Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch, who was thrown out of the old ball game for insisting Detroit's Lou Whitaker got one swing too many.

There was one out in the ninth inning of a 5-5 game at Tiger Stadium when Ron LeFlore, who had walked, broke for second as Mike Marshall pitched to Whitaker.

The 2-2 pitch to Whitaker, with LeFlore in full flight: Whitaker swings through it and catcher Butch Wynegar pegs to second to try for LeFlore and an inning-ending double play. Right?

Wrong. Plate umpire Dallas Parks calls it a ball. Wynegar's throw goes into center field and LeFlore goes to third. Whitaker, given new life, singles LeFlore home to win it 6-5 for Detroit.

The single came after Mauch's enforced departure for differing with Parks' ruling.

"Whitaker struck out. He swung at it," said Mauch, who kept his clubhouse closed long after the contest. "I looked up there and I couldn't believe it when I saw that little rascal still up there."

"Whitaker foul-tipped the third strike," said Wynegar. "There's no doubt in my mind he foul-tipped that pitch. He should have been the second out."

Right?

Wrong.

"If I foul-tipped the ball," deadpanned Whitaker, "I would have walked to the dugout."

Right?

Anyway, Mauch wasn't the only manager to hear the cheery refrains of baseball's anthem. Baltimore's Earl Weaver got the thumb in Oakland after another questionable swing.

A's 7, Orioles 6

It's the eighth inning and the Orioles are ahead 6-4 when reliever Sammy Stewart hits Jim Essian with a pitch. Essian takes second on a groundout, then Stewart hits Jeff Newman on the left hand.

Right, Earl? Wrong, he replies.

"The ball hit his bat," the manager cried, unperturbed by Newman's split batting glove and what is suspected to be a fracture of the catcher's little finger.

Weaver was ejected by plate umpire Rich Garcia and went to his dugout. But while the A's were deciding whether to pinch-run for Newman, Stewart started warming up.

The umpires stopped him from doing so, and Weaver — who should have left by then — charged right back out for another conference with the crew. Then, ordered to leave the field again, Weaver proceeded to the rest room in the dugout.

"I was in the bathroom throwing up," said Weaver. "You can only take so much of this (aggravation)."

The game finally gets started again and Tony Armas knocks Stewart out of the game with an RBI double and it's 6-5 — whereupon A's Manager Jim Marshall notices Weaver still hasn't left. So he strolls out on the field for yet another chat with the umps.

"I knew Weaver was in the bathroom, but I told the umpire they'd have to carry me off the field if they didn't get him out of there," said Marshall.

Tippy Martinez came on to relieve, Mike Edwards greeted him with a game-tying single, then rookie Rickey Henderson clubbed a fly ball to right, scoring the winning run and really upsetting Weaver's stomach.

"When all was said and done, I guess he (Newman) did get hit with the pitch," mused Weaver after another ho-hum evening at the old ball game.

Mariners 5, Yankees 1

If that wasn't enough, New York left fielder Lou Piniella threw his glove at the San Diego Chicken while the Yankees were losing to Seattle and Rick Honeycutt at the Kingdome.

Ted Giannoulas, who amuses baseball crowds while masquerading as the furry mascot, is making a week-long appearance at the Seattle ball park prior to the All-Star Game. Giannoulas bobbed onto the field while Ron Guidry was warming up in the third, and put a "hex" on the Yankee pitcher.

"If the people want to pay to see a chicken," said Piniella, "dress up the players as chickens. It's a business to us and not a joke. Tell him to get off the field."

Giannoulas' hex might have worked.

Guidry gave up homers to Bill Stein and Leon Roberts, the latter coming after a foul pop by Roberts glanced off one of the speakers suspended 150 feet above the domed stadium's playing surface.

Honeycutt gave up just two hits — Reggie Jackson's single and Graig Nettles' RBI triple — to record the first two-hitter in Mariners history. Seattle, meanwhile, scored its 12th home victory over New York in the 15 games the teams have played at the dome over the last three seasons.

Star Pitcher Sky-High

By The Associated Press

Cleveland Indians Manager Jeff Torborg was "scared to death" he might have to use reliever Sid Monge against Kansas City.

That would seem a strange attitude for Torborg to take, since the hard-throwing left-hander is the ace of Cleveland's bullpen. But, the fact is, Torborg wasn't so sure Monge would even be able to find the mound Tuesday night.

The Mexican-born pitcher found out just before the start of Cleveland's 7-4 victory over the Royals that he had been picked by American League Manager Bob Lemon to play in next week's All-Star Game in Seattle.

"When he (Torborg) told me, I had no feeling — none at all," said the mild-mannered Monge. "I'm still numb. I'm on cloud nine. I'm higher than Skylab. I'm higher than 27 kites on the longest string you can put together.

"When I found out, chills went through not just my spine, but all over my body. I thought making it to the big leagues was a dream. This is frosting. Maybe one of these days I can get a World Series ring, too."

Lemon is planning ahead, for the latter stages of the game.

The deposed manager of the world champion New York Yankees included four full-time relief pitchers and one part-time fireman among the nine pitchers named to the AL squad that will try to end the seven-year dominance of the NL in this year's 50th annual classic, to be played at the Seattle Kingdome.

Chosen from the AL bullpens were fireballing Jim Kern of the Texas Rangers, rookie Mark Clear of the California Angels, Don Stanhouse of the Baltimore Orioles and Monge.

The remainder of the staff consists of Boston's Bob Stanley, whom the Red Sox use as both as a starter and reliever, as well as starters Tommy John and Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees, Nolan Ryan of the Angels and Dave Lemanczyk of the Toronto Blue Jays.

The 28-year-old Monge, a native of Aqua Prieta, Mexico who grew up in Los Angeles, leads the Indians and stands second in the AL with 43 appearances. He is 6-6 with nine saves and second in the league behind Texas reliever Kern — the former Cleveland bullpen bellweather — with a 1.95 earned run average.

Kern, traded to the Rangers by Cleveland this season, has a 10-1 record with 15 saves and a league-leading 1.34 earned run average.

Clear, a top candidate for the AL Rookie of the Year award, has a 9-2 record with seven saves and a 2.56 ERA.

Stanhouse is 6-1 with 12 saves and a 2.64 ERA for Baltimore's East Division leaders. Monge is 6-6 with nine saves and a 1.95 ERA.

Of the starters, John has the best record with a league leading 13 victories and just three losses. Guidry, who was 25-3 and won the Cy Young Award last year, is 6-5 with two saves and has been troubled by injuries.

Ryan is 11-6 and leads the league with five shutouts. His 151 strikeouts is tops in the majors. Stanley is 10-5 with one save and Lemanczyk is 7-6 with a 3.09 ERA.

The combined record of the nine-man AL staff is 78-35, a .690 percentage, with 46 saves. Six of the pitchers are right-handers with Guidry, John and Monge the AL southpaws. Only four — Ryan, John, Kern and Guidry — have previous All-Star experience.

Among the pitchers the AL chose to pass up included Minnesota bullpen ace Mike Marshall, whose 18 saves lead the league, teammate Jerry Koosman, 11-6, and Baltimore teammates Dennis Martinez, 10-6, and Mike Flanagan, 11-6.

The National League staff, also named Tuesday, includes three Houston hurlers — Joe Niekro, Joaquin Andujar and Joe Sambito. The other pitchers are Steve Carlton of Philadelphia, Montreal's Steve Rogers, Gaylord Perry of San Diego, Mike LaCoss of Cincinnati and Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs.

Niekro, Andujar, Carlton, Rogers, Perry and LaCoss are all starters while Sambito and Sutter work out of the bullpen.

Schmidt Home Run Streak Stays Hot

baseball history to pinch-hit three homers in consecutive at-bats. They have been well-spaced, the first on June 30th against the St. Louis Cardinals, and the second on July 5 against the New York Mets, but they go into the record book as if they were one after the other.

Schmidt, who has hit three in one night — as he did last Saturday night in part of his current surge — but it was Unser who was fielding the questions about home runs in the aftermath of his sudden climb into the spotlight.

"I was just wanted something I could see and hit," he said of the first pitch from Padres' reliever Rollie Fingers that he sent over the center field wall, the deepest part of the stadium.

Unser said he didn't think the ball would leave the park.

Phillies Manager Danny Ozark, who sent Unser up to hit for Larry Bowa, who had a triple earlier, was surprised, too. He said he was hoping for a double.

If Unser provided Ozark with the unexpected, think what he did for Padres Manager Roger Craig. Asked what he said to Fingers on a visit to the mound as Unser was coming to bat, Craig recalled, "I told him you've got good stuff. You're throwing the ball good. Use it to get out of the inning."

Unser's blast, which capped a five-run rally by the Phils, broke a record he shared with 21 others for hitting two consecutive pinch-hit homers.

Craig said Unser's homer proved again that nothing is impossible in baseball."Give him credit," said the Padres' manager. "He came off the bench and he must have had supreme confidence."

Cubs 7, Braves 3

Barry Foote delighted his parents and a busload of hometown fans from Smithfield, N.C. by hitting two home runs for Chicago. Bruce Sutter posted his 20th save when Rick Reuschel tired after taking a two-hitter into the ninth. Foote said he felt Reuschel could have finished, "but you don't take chances when you have a Sutter in the bullpen."

Giants 11, Expos 7

The Giants scored four runs in the 13th inning, the first when reliever Woody Fryman hit Terry Whitfield with a pitch and the bases loaded. Roger Metzger followed with a two-run single, and Fryman balked Whitfield home. San Francisco rallied from a 5-1 deficit earlier, helped by Willie McCovey's three-run homer, his 14th this season, and the 519th of his career.

Dodgers 7, Mets 4

A two-run seventh inning put Los Angeles in front to stay in a rain-soaked affair. Ron Cey singled home the go-ahead run after Reggie Smith's double scored the tying run.

Reds 4, Cardinals 2

Tom Seaver passed Cy Young and moved into sixth place on baseball's all-time list of career strikeout leaders before he left after six innings because of stiffness in his pitching shoulder. Seaver struck out eight and boosted his career total to 2,823. George Foster's two-run double in the first inning started Seaver off with a cushion, and later Johnny Bench singled home one run and Cesar Geronimo homered.

SONICS SIGN JOHNSON

SEATTLE (AP) — John Johnson, a starting forward on the Seattle SuperSonics' National Basketball Association championship club of this past season and a nine-year professional, has signed a three-year contract, the club announced.

Netters Have Surface Change

NEW YORK (UPI) — In case you didn't know, the Forest Hills Invitational is being played on clay.

Well, Har-Tru, actually, a dark green artificial surface that's a little faster and more slippery than the traditional red European stuff, but it seems to be close enough for the 12 professionals vying for shares of the hefty $300,000 purse at the West Side Tennis Club this week.

On Tuesday two clay-court specialists from Florida and a brother act from New Jersey capitalized on that fact and today it might be Victor Pecci's turn.

Harold Solomon, the 5-foot-6 master of the moonball, routed Sandy Mayer, 6-1, 6-2, for a 2-0 record and Eddie Dibbs, Solomon's 28-year-old lookalike, notched a 6-4, 7-6 triumph over Peter Fleming to even his record to 1-1 in the 12-man, round-robin singles action. Sandy and Gene Mayer, who profess to be ill at ease on the clay-like surface, found John McEnroe and Peter Fleming even more uncomfortable and scratched out a 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 triumph in doubles play.

"I think that was about the worst doubles match any of the four of us have ever played," said Gene Mayer, who teamed up with his brother to take the French open title last month. "It was close and pretty exciting at the end, because we were equally bad.

"I don't think we've adjusted to the conditions yet."

"It's really difficult changing surfaces," agreed McEnroe, who consoled himself after a surprising fourth-round loss in the Wimbledon singles by taking that doubles title with Fleming. "It's hard playing anyway after Wimbledon."

McEnroe had better adjust in a hurry because Pecci, the towering Paraguayan whose first singles match was rained out Tuesday, is raring to go and he likes his odds on the clay.

"I would rather play McEnroe on this kind of court than on grass," said Pecci through his coach-interpreter Tito Vasquez. "I prefer clay because it's what I am used to and I just practiced for a week in Paraguay on it."

Pecci, 23, may be ready to upset McEnroe. After winning the Nice International in April, he upset four seeds — including Solomon, Guillermo Vilas and Jimmy Connors — to reach the finals of the French Open and then beat Arthur Ashe before extending McEnroe to three sets in the Queen's Club finals. And that was on grass.

Knight Takes Fight With Policeman To Court

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — It could take up to 90 days to resolve Bobby Knight's complex legal predicament which stems from his run-in with a policeman last Sunday.

By then, though, it's likely Knight's escapades, the overwhelming performances of his talented basketball players and the entire VIII Pan American Games will be little more than a small footnote in history.

Once again Tuesday, the highlight of the activities at these hemispheric Olympics was Knight's continuing saga.

A judge was expected to hear today a sworn deposition from Knight's legal counsel here, Patrick Sullivan, who also represents the U.S. Olympic Committee, accusing Hato Rey precinct policeman Jose de Silva with assault and battery, violation of Knight's civil rights, humiliation in front of his team and incarceration without charges.

De Silva, in his deposition, is accusing Knight of assault and battery. De Silva entered his formal accusation as an individual, not a police force member.

Under this island Commonwealth's complex legal system, the judge decides if there is probable cause for charges. If not, the matter is dropped. Otherwise, the charges are formalized and sent to a higher court for possible action that could take up to 90 days.

Knight apparently became involved in an argument with the policeman over use of a practice facility. Knight said at a press conference Tuesday morning that he shoved the policeman after the officer, gesturing, poked Knight in the eye.

The policeman responded by handcuffing Knight and putting him behind bars for a few minutes until USOC Director Col. Don Miller arrived at the precinct and orchestrated Knight's release.

Until Knight's extraordinary press conference Tuesday, the USOC had insisted the matter was closed and finished.

Knight's players were unaware of developments until Monday. Knight said he didn't want to burden them with it because "the kids are here to play basketball."

That they have been doing quite well.

The Americans moved within two victories of a gold medal in the sport with a 101-83 shellacking of Cuba, which was unquestionably the sports highlight of Tuesday's light slate.

Only one gold medal was awarded Tuesday, apparently intended as a rain date if needed. That went to Cuba in individual women's foil fencing.

Track and field athletes had the day off.

The United States entered today with 85 gold medals and 193 medals overall. Cuba had a 50-106 gold-total count. Canada was third at 20-104.

In Tuesday's action involving Americans, the U.S. baseball team beat the Bahamas 12-2; the women's softball team took a pair of 9-0 victories over Bermuda and El Salvador; the U.S. and Cuba tied 3-3 in field hockey; Chile downed the U.S. 4-1 in roller hockey, and Peru beat the U.S. 3-1 in women's volleyball.

The only U.S. medal of the day was a bronze in the fencing to Nikki Franke, Philadelphia.

There was abusy schedule today topped by six finals in track and field. Renaldo Nehemiah was featured in tonight's 110-meter hurdles. Other finals were the men's high jump with Franklin Jacobs, the discus with Mac Wilkins, the men's and women's 200-meters and the men's 5,000.

Also on the schedule was U.S.-Cuba baseball, Canada-U.S. women's softball, and Canada-U.S. men's volleyball.

It's a day off for the basketball teams.

Two members of the Cuban delegation who defected to the U.S. this week were expected to be granted political asylum today, officials said.

Tennis champion Osvaldo Cruz and soccer referee Juan Jose Rojas were interviewed Tuesday by federal officials who were processing the paperwork.

The Cuban delegation had no comment on the subject.

'Stardust Twins' Back With Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — A year ago Houston Oiler hopeful Johnnie Dirden had just retired from driving a cement truck and was spending his midnight hours bouncing a football off a dormitory wall at Angelo State University.

Diminutive Robert Woods, despite his 9.1 sprinter speed, was receiving a series of rejection slips from Kansas City, Cleveland and finally San Francisco and wound up working at a center for juvenile delinquents.

Dirden stepped in for injured Billy "White Shoes" Johnson and returned 32 kickoffs for 780 yards and a 24.4 yards per return average.

Woods, signed as a free agent during the season when injuries in the receiving corps mounted, gained appreciation with an 80-yard touchdown pass-run play against New Orleans that clinched a playoffs spot for the Oilers.

Both players signed contracts for last season only and they're back in camp this year.

Athletes More Fragile Than Before?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Of players selected for next Tuesday's All-Star baseball game in Seattle, Rod Carew of the Angels, the game's best hitter, is idled by a torn ligament inhis thumb, catcher Ted Simmons of St. Louis can't perform because of a broken wrist and Boston's Carl Yastrzemski is questionable because of an injured Achilles tendon.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers, champions of the National League the last two seasons, limped into New

Sports Analysis

York's Shea Stadium — on the bottom of their division, 17 games out of first place, their squad riddled with walking wounded.

The New York Yankees have just activated such key men as Reggie Jackson and Rich Gossage, whose absences caused the world champions to plummet at one time 12 games behind the high-flying Baltimore Orioles. The Phillies and Royals, both division winners a year ago, are struggling to see daylight after a siege of injuries.

Last Saturday at Wimbledon, Bjorn Borg won his fourth straight men's tennis title after a hamstring pull that threatened to force his withdrawal, and the indomitable Billie Jean King finally won her 20th All-England title on knees on which surgeon scalpels had played a grim game of tic-tac-toe.

At Forest Hills, young John McEnroe, the 20-year-old phenom, is shooting for another crown with a leg injury that spoiled his bid at Wimbledon.

In season, the weekly National Football League injury lists look like a battle casualty report.

What's going on, anyhow? Is the modern athlete — bigger, stronger, better fed and better attended — a more fragile athlete than his iron man predecessor of a half-century or even a quarter-century ago?

Not at all, insists Dr. James Parkes, prominent New York orthopedic surgeon who, among his other responsibilities, treats the broken bones and torn muscles of the New York Mets.

"There has been no deterioration in the modern athlete," Dr. Parkes said. "On the contrary, today's sports competitor has a much greater physical potential than the old timers, whom we are inclined to regard as rugged individuals not easily hurt.

"Actually, in the old days, they were hurt much more than was ever revealed. The players themselves often hid ailments either because they wanted to act tough or they feared they might be sent to the minors.

"The athlete today is much more sophisticated. He realizes he is an expensive property, so he is not anxious to jeopardize his career. Similarly, management is disinclined to take chances with their investments. So injuries, major or minor, when detected, are given the closest scrutiny and the most thorough care."

The physician said the seeming proliferation of injuries can be traced to greater gains in sports medicine and to a more aggressive approach by doctors.

"Doctors are now quicker to tune in on the various problems," he said. "They are also freer and more honest in discussing them with the athletes and exposing them to the press. The press and the public are made aware of injuries which in the past might not have been revealed.

"Did you ever see Roy McMillan? He has scars all over him. And Yogi Berra's hands — they look as if they have been through a meat grinder."

The current pennant races are apt to be decided not by the talent on the field but by the skiled player in the infirmary.

The hard luck Dodgers didn't have ace reliever Terry Forster for the first six weeks of the season. Outfielder Reggie Smith has been out a total of 39 days with leg and neck injuries. Ron Cey was out twice, then Rick Monday got hurt.

The Yankees lost their Cy Young ace, Ron Guidry, for 17 days, reliever Rich Gossage for six weeks and Reggie Jackson at a time when his bat was sorely needed. The Royals got Frank White and Al Cowans hurt in the same game. The Phillies at various times have been without Larry Bowa, Greg Luzinski and Manny Trillo.

When have the top teams suffered so many casualties? But it's not that guys are more brittle, Dr. Parkes says, it's just that we get a truer count in this enlightened age.

Potato Chip Industry Remains Competitive

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The potato chip has allowed Jim Terrell to be his own boss, a rare opportunity in the food industry that is usually dominated by big business.

While much of the food industry belongs to such corporate giants as General Foods and Procter & Gamble, Terrell has been holding his own in the potato chip business with one automatic potato peeler, one pressure cooker and 30 employees.

"The potato chip industry is one of the few left with any competition. The soups, the soft drinks, and the others are all dominated by two or three companies," Terrell said.

But the opportunities for entrepreneurs like Terrell may be jeopardized by the recent expansion of companies seeking a national market for their potato chips.

Terrell is one of 200 potato chip makers in the United States. Ninety companies battle for 95 percent of the market, according to Larry Burch, executive vice president of the Potato Chip and Snack Foods Association. Terrell counts 10 companies his potato chips compete with in the Syracuse-Rochester area.

The fragile nature of the product has made it difficult and expensive to ship in great numbers over great distances, protecting the small chippers from intense competition with giant companies.

Only Pepsi's Frito-Lay Division, the country's leading potato chip maker, can claim a national market. But that may be changing.

"There's quite a trend going on with a few companies buying up some pretty good sized companies," Burch said.

Terrell says he will continue running the business he started 17 years ago, turning 8,000 pounds of potatoes daily into chips with his automatic peeler.

Critic Says CBS Movie Looks Good Following Weeks Of Reruns

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Perhaps "Rendezvous Hotel," tonight's CBS movie, is really a cute bit of summer fun. That, or it just seems like fun compared to the other stuff the networks serve up during television's off-season.

Anything original would look good after eight weeks of reruns. Original, that is, in the sense of not having been on TV before.

This two-hour movie looks like it was put together at Rent-a-Sitcom; the situations, characters and jokes have been used before, and will be used again. It is fat with the standard sight gags — fumbling, bumbling and stumbling abound.

But it's not a rerun, at least; and Bill Daily, the principal bumbler, is a pleasant sort of fellow who can make you laugh at least a couple times on goofiness alone.

Daily, who won fans as crazy neighbor Howard on the old "Bob Newhart Show," plays Walter Grainger, proprietor of the resort hotel Rendezvous.

Daily and Jerry Greenwood, who plays Daily's shiftless nephew, spend much of the time trying to out-klutz each other.

Walter Grainger's lifelong dream is to run a hotel that earns three Golden Ashtrays — symbols of quality meted out by the travel critic, Albert Church, who, it so happens, is staying at the Rendezvous.

The predictable complications arise, with Walter and his staff confusing a toilet salesman for Mr. Church, heaping special treatment on the former, abuse on the latter.

In the meantime, the stars of a dozen or so subplots are experiencing major life breakthroughs at the Rendezvous.

There is nephew Jerry, who is trying to find himself; Walter's sister Lucille, who has left her husband of 30 years because he forgot their anniversary; Concetta the head maid (Talya Ferro), who memorializes the Mexican-American stereotype ("Three of my girlce are out weeth the Aid-jun flu"); Barbara the social director (Bobbie Mitchell) who is in a "bad relationship" with an airline pilot; a suicidal young actress, and others.

Together, Walter Grainger and all these side characters manage to make a two-hour movie.

There is nothing particularly clever about "Rendezvous Hotel," just a lot of light, bubblegum comedy. But for all its cliches, for all its unvarying predictability, this is (thank you, CBS)...new.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Didn't John Wayne once come up with his own epitaph? — Juan R., Austin.

A: Yes. Drawled the Duke: "The Mexicans have an expression — 'Feo, fuerte y formal' — meaning, 'He was ugly. He was tough. But he had dignity!'"

Q: About Mary Pickford — why did we never see her on TV? And what was her very first talking picture? — Mrs. Elaine Weiler, Forest Hills, N.Y.

A: "Coquette" was the name of the first talkie made by America's Sweetheart (in 1929). And she won an Academy Award for it. Miss Pickford was a stranger to TV because she believed she shouldn't dim her image as a silent picture superstar. Also, she owned most of her movies. And, rather than sell them, she contributed the historic features to the Library of Congress.

Incidentally, back in the heyday of Palace vaudeville, comics like Henny Youngman and Milton Berle would ask audiences: "Do I look like Mary Pickford's husband?" When the laughter subsided, they'd explain, "A fellow in the lobby just asked me, 'Buddy, have you got a match?

PERSONAL TO FLORIDA attorney Ellis Rubin: You may have started something when you defended Ronnie Zamora on a murder charge by saying it was motivated by TV violence. According to a news report in Jet, Michael Spearman, chauffeur for country singer Linda "Charlee" Scott, confessed to detectives that after he saw a woman clubbed to death with a pipe on "Starsky and Hutch," he murdered the 28-year-old entertainer in similar fashion as she slept in her New Rochelle, N.Y., bedroom.

"She treated her elementary school-age daughters like they were slaves," Spearman said. "Charlee was very brutal to the kids, making them eat cologne and soap. I thought," he declared, "it was something I had to do!"

Q: I say John F. Kennedy was the youngest candidate ever to be elected president of the United States. My dad insists I'm wrong. Am I? — M.D.L. Jr., Washington, D.C.

A: No. Technically you're right. JFK was the youngest man ever elected to the highest office in the land. However, Vice President Theodore Roosevelt was a year younger (42) when he assumed the presidency following the assassination of President William McKinley in 1901.

PERSONAL POSTCARDS: To Yolanda M., Denver: It's a wrongo you picked up somewhere. Ricardo Montalban hasn't got a wooden leg. You're confusing him with the late Herbert Marshall... To Mrs. C.L., Cocoa Beach, Fla: That powerful, sure-to-be controversial TV special on Sen. Edward Kennedy, "Heritage of Power," has finally been released by BBI Productions for syndication in the U.S. and overseas. The documentary includes footage from the Kennedys' private film collection. Also excerpts of some difficulties and tragedies in Teddy's private life — including Chappaquiddick, wife Joan's personal problems — and the senator's alleged womanizing. (It had a premier presentation in Boston last June 21 via WCFB-TV.)

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

CHILD ABUSE: Will the wounds ever heal?

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord My Soul to keep...
And please, God, help Daddy to stop hurting me..."

Child abuse! Authorities expect between two and four million cases to be reported this year! But child abuse is not just beating your son or daughter. It's also being somewhere else when they need you. It's not really listening when they talk to you. It's being too busy or too afraid of losing them to show them the right way to live. It's not wanting them, throwing them away out of your heart and your home. America's kids are hurting. America's families are hurting.

Tonight James Robison, who is a husband and the father of three, tells us how we can start living and loving like families again!

Harry Reasoner Lightens News With 'Gascasts'

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS broadcaster Harry Reasoner, clever fellow, has come up with a wonderful idea that may soon become part of our evening news ritual — gascasts.

Reasoner offered his vision in a recent "Reasoner Report," a daily five-minute bright on CBS Radio in which Reasoner proves there is a place for whimsey in the day's news. His reports have eased the anxieties of many an afternoon traffic snarl.

The gascast idea, though delivered with tongue nestling cheek, is not as far-fetched as it may sound. Reasoner's reasoning:

"It's clear that we are at least as concerned about our gas as we are about the weather, and the weather is cast already. We are as concerned about gas as we are about the news, and that is cast. We are at least as concerned about gas as we are about sports, and they too are already cast. Never mind about broadcasts."

You'll have to admit his gascast case is well presented. Reasoner's example gascast:

"'As you can see,' the CBS gascaster will say, touching the tip of a pointer to a photo, 'as you can see on the daily satellite gas picture, we have a fleet of tankers off the coast of our area, moving in our direction at the rate of about 15 knots.

"'They are expected to put in early tomorrow morning or tomorrow afternoon at the latest. Inland, these blips here represent areas of high-pressure tank-truck activity. Pockets of cold arctic gas have been developing just to the north and northwest of us, and these are expected to continue moving in a southerly direction...

"'There's a 75 percent chance of gas by midmorning, improving to 95 percent by afternoon. The National Gas Service estimated average-length-of-line for tomorrow is 62.6 cars in the city, rising to 75.5 in the outlying suburbs...'"

As you can imagine, these gascasts could become part of our national life pattern.

Of course, there is some chance of danger in the idea of gascasts. A gascaster, if cut from the same cloth as weather forecasters, is likely to be wrong much of the time.

Suppose for example that your morning gascaster tells you there is "slight chance of gas with length-of-lines estimated at 95.8 cars." You figure that's okay because your weather forecaster told you to expect a warm summer day.

You walk to work. But halfway to the office, an ominous cloud appears. It grows darker and more ominous-looking, then finally bursts.

Since your weather forecaster told you it would be sunny, you didn't bring your umbrella. Your shoes are soaked. Slipping and splashing, you run for shelter, which you find at a deserted gas station.

As you are drying off, wondering what to do and cursing forecasters of any ilk, you hear a voice. It is Ace, proprietor of the gas station.

"What are you doing here?" you ask.

"Looking for customers," Ace replies, "I've got more gas than I can pump. Funny, nobody seems to need gas today."

By Bernice Bede Osol

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to devote some time tomorrow to artistic or creative projects. Tasks of this nature will afford you a tremendous amount of pleasure and satisfaction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If your friends appreciate you even more than usual tomorrow it will probably be due to the fact that you see only their virtues and not their faults. Good going.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Partnership arrangements should prove very fortunate tomorrow. Doing things in tandem with harmonious allies, you'll accomplish what can't be done on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your willingness to be of service will obligate others to do something nice for you in the future, although this won't be your reason for aiding them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone you know socially can be very helpful opening doors for you tomorrow that you couldn't budge on your own. This person will be delighted to help if asked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something important you want to have finalized tomorrow can be accomplished by using the soft sell. Lay on the charm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Co-workers will be extremely cooperative tomorrow, because they'll know you are willing to do more than your fair share in any endeavor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep an eye peeled tomorrow. There is financial opportunity about you. Something good could develop from an unexpected source.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your leadership qualities will be very strong tomorrow, because you will lead by an example which others are eager to emulate. They know a good thing when they see it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Let your heart, rather than your head, guide you tomorrow. The results will benefit everyone, including yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friends will be looking out for your best interests tomorrow. In fact, something very pleasant could occur which might benefit you materially.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your charm and wit will be your greatest assets tomorrow. Properly used, they could help you easily outdistance your competition. Smile and say nice things.

Coors Wins Approval Of Zoning Request

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Adolph Coors Co., fresh from a victory before a county board, will begin testing the air quality at the site of the new brewery it wants to build near Elkton, a company attorney says.

After only 20 minutes of discussion, the Rockingham County Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 Monday night to approve Coors' request to rezone 236 acres of land from agricultural to industrial use.

"The next move, which will begin immediately, is environmental testing," said Harrisonburg attorney Henry C. Clark, who represents Coors. He said Coors should know within four months whether it is feasible to seek state and federal environmental permits.

The Colorado-based brewer wants to expand its operations to this Shenendoah Valley community to try to capture more of the East Coast beer market. Some Rockingham County residents have opposed the plan, and Coors may meet more opposition.

Welby Showalter, an attorney for Rockingham Concerned Citizens, said the group is exploring the possibility of a court challenge to the rezoning. He said the group is concerned that a Coors development on some 1,900 acres of land on the Shenandoah River will drastically increase the county's population.

Brewery pay scales are an unknown factor, Showalter said, and the citizens' group fears they could price existing dairy and poultry producers out of the local labor market.

Showalter said his group believes Coors would have to bring in some 600 laborers to build its brewery, bottle and can plants, recycling facilities and water and sewage treatment plants.

Ice Puts Hole In Man's Roof

AURORA, Colo. (UPI) — It wasn't a bird. It wasn't a whole plane. And it certainly was not Skylab. But Harry Davis does have a hole in his roof and wishes the projectile had been a little more exotic.

A piece of ice ripped through the roof of Davis' suburban home Sunday, shattering a beam and pulling insulation into the den. Davis said he was able to preserve the chunk in his freezer.

Two similar ice bombs have hit other Denver-area homes, said George Beckwith of the Federal Aviation Administration. The ice forms on planes when the caps to airplanes' water or wastewater tanks are leaky and sometimes it breaks off.

Zoologist Speaks At Opening Session Of Institute On Aging

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Eliminating all the current major causes of death would lengthen the human lifespan by only five years, says zoologist James Giesel.

If cures are found for cancer, heart disease and kidney disease, he said this week, other illnesses would become bigger killers.

"The older person's immune functions decline so that they have difficulty fighting infections," Giesel explained. "They would die of things like pneumonia and flu."

He spoke at the opening session of a two-week institute on the aging process at the University of Florida, where he is an associate professor.

The short course is to familiarize nurses, therapists and social workers with principles of biology as they relate to aging.

"There are as many definitions of aging as there are belly buttons," Giesel said, "but so far no one can precisely define the concept.

"There are two rather popular theories on aging making the rounds today. One is that it is a process — a continued expression of development. The other is that aging is due to mutation, to random changes in the genetic makeup. Both theories probably are partially true."

Basically, he said, aging is the deterioration of all vital functions — the nervous system, cardiac system, kidneys and the rest.

"The accepted idea that aging begins at 30 is a lot of garbage," Giesel said. "There is no particular age that scientists can put their finger on."

Some researchers claim that greatly increased longevity is feasible if scientists could learn how to control the enzymes that repair DNA — the material in cells that determines heredity.

However, Giesel said, DNA repair enzymes are very error-prone and researchers haven't learned how to control the enzymes.

"Aging is definitely a function of both heredity and environment," Giesel said. "Right now, we don't throroughly understand the heredity factors of aging, so there is little chance that we will greatly increase life expectance or postpone aging in the near future."

He said researchers are studying the effects of exercise, diet and the environment on aging.
