College Students Aid HSC Project

Members of Phi Theta Kappa at Western Texas College have voted to give volunteer time to helping prepare the Dodson House for moving and to work on its restoration, and they got their first experience on the project Monday.

Dr. Harry Krenek, president of Historic Scurry County, Inc., a non-profit organization overseeing the house-moving project, met with the group to get them started chipping mortar from bricks in the structure's two chimneys. The bricks will be moved with the house so that the chimneys can be replaced later.

Vinyl siding put on the outside of the house in recent years is also to be removed, and Snyder Jaycees have agreed to give volunteer time to that work.

The Dodson House, built in 1883, has been given to Historic Scurry County by First Federal Savings and Loan. The house is the oldest remaining residence in Snyder and plans are to move it to a new site where it can be restored to its original appearance. First Federal plans to construct a new office building on the house site at 3007 College Ave.

Phi Theta Kappa is a national honor fraternity for junior college students and encourages chapters to give time to community projects.

Vickie Says Warning Shot Was Fired

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel finished detailing today how she fired a warning shot at her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., but said she did not remember firing the second, fatal shot.

Mrs. Daniel, in court trying to retain custody of her two young children by Daniel, told how the shooting culminated an argument in the couple's spacious home. She is charged with his murder.

In Hijacking...

U.S. Criticizes Russians' Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, contending that three hijackers of a Pakistani jetliner received machine guns during a stopover in Afghanistan, says it is holding Soviet authorities accountable.

The allegation, outlined Monday by spokesman William Dyess, was based on eyewitness accounts of the events at Kabul airport, where the Pakistani International Airlines flight spent the first five days of the 13-day hijacking ordeal which began in Pakistan.

"At one point, all three hijackers stood in view of Afghan and Soviet security personnel without any apparent concern for their own safety," Dyess said.

He added that several passengers aboard the plane alleged that the hijackers received additional weapons while in Kabul.

"They arrived with pistols, they left with machine guns," he said.

A statement from the Soviet Embassy in Washington called the accusations "completely groundless" and "crude and undignified."

In February...

Industrial Production Down; Personal Income Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's industrial production declined about 0.5 percent in February after six straight monthly increases, the government reported today.

Federal Reserve Board officials said output dropped off "in most major components" of the board's production index and that "significant drops occurred in the production of primary metals, instruments, furniture and lumber."

The overall production index had been rising by ever-smaller percentages in recent months, and economists had predicted it might dip into negative figures in February. The new statistic is generally in line with analysts' predictions of sluggish economic performance in the first part of this year.

In another report released today, the Commerce Department announced that Americans' personal income rose about 0.7 percent in February, an increase that probably did not keep pace with inflation.

February income was up $15 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.3 trillion, while personal spending rose $23.5 billion to a rate of $1.9 trillion, an increase of about 1.3 percent.

The inflation rate, as measured by the consumer price index, has been rising at an annual rate of more than 10 percent. February's inflation rate is to be announced next week.

February production figures showed output declining about 0.7 percent for products and 0.3 percent for materials, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

The decline in output of products would have been greater except for "a moderate increase in automotive products as auto assemblies increased nearly 7.5 percent to an annual rate of 5.8 million units from the very low January rate," the report said.

The January increase, reported earlier at 0.6 percent, was revised to 0.4 percent in the new report. The preliminary February figure also is subject to later revision.

In other production details, the Federal Reserve reported that mining output rose 0.7 percent in February, while utility output was down, "largely because of relatively mild weather and less demand for electricity."

The 0.7 percent gain in personal income followed a 1 percent rise in January, according to the Commerce Department figures.

And the fact that increased personal spending outstripped the income increase for the second consecutive month meant a second straight decline in new personal saving. New saving dropped about 12 percent in February after declining 7.7 percent in January, the report said.

Budget Slashes Are Not Enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate budget writers, starting the "torment and torture" of slashing federal spending, now are being told by congressional economists that the deep cuts proposed by President Reagan still are far from enough to balance the budget by 1984.

Preliminary estimates from the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office forecast that the Reagan administration underestimated inflation, interest rates, unemployment and spending.

Spending could be as much as $25 billion more than the administration figured in 1982 and up to $50 billion more in 1984, Reagan's target year for balancing the budget, the report said. If accurate, that would require more budget cuts or smaller tax cuts for Reagan to meet his goal.

As Reagan headed into a meeting today with Republican allies in Congress, he said of the report: "The figures are phony. ... Their estimates are based on continuing things the way they have run them for the last 30 years."

But as he left the Capitol later, Reagan said he probably shouldn't have used the word "phony."

"Actually, what they really are is differing assumptions and I think their assumptions are based on the continuing curve of decline in the economy," the president: "In other words, that our program is not going to have any effect on the economy."

Asked whether he intended to find new budget cuts to offset the $25 billion, Reagan replied: "No, no. We believe our assumptions or projections are correct. ... What we claim about our program is that our program is going to change that."

Budget Director David Stockman said today of the analysis by the congressional agency: "CBO is forecasting that the most drastic policy change in postwar history

Reagan Deplores Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a St. Patrick's Day statement, condemned violence in Northern Ireland today and urged Americans not to give money to groups involved in the fighting.

"The United States will continue to urge the parties to come together for a just and peaceful solution," the president said. "I pray and hope that the day will come when the tragedy of history which now afflicts Northern Ireland will be overcome by faith, the courage and the love of freedom and justice of the Irish."

Report Oil Production Cut

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia and three other Persian Gulf oil producers met today today amid speculation they were about to decide on a big cutback in their crude oil production to offset the glut on world markets.

The four countries together produce 14 million barrels of crude oil a day, with Saudi Arabia alone pumping 10.3 million barrels.

Sales Bills Pondered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Old people, children and disabled persons shouldn't be taxed on their purchases of such necessary items as denture cream, school supplies and wheelchairs, the House Ways and Means Committee was told Monday.

The committee is considering four bills that would exempt such items from the sales tax.

Rep. Henry Allee, D-Houston, is carrying the most ambitious bill. It would exempt certain clothing, such as blue jeans; personal hygiene items such as denture cream and toothpaste; school supplies; and over-the-counter medicines.

Allee's bill would cost the state $602.4 million in lost revenue over the next two years.

Taxing school supplies "doesn't seem ethical," Allee said, because "those things are essential for the education of children."

The SDN Column

This is St. Patrick's Day, an event that likely attracts more attention in the United States than it does on the Emerald Isle, despite the fact that Patrick is the patron saint of Ireland.

The reason, of course, is that there probably are as many, or more, people of Irish descent in this country than there are in Ireland itself, and if they keep their civil war going long enough, we will really have them out-numbered.

The Irish have quite a history in this country, and there are enough of them that it wouldn't surprise us if they should demand their rights in the field of bilingual education. Yes, the Irish with the heavy accent are just about as hard to understand by the unitiated as other ethnic groups.

But they are good at celebrating, and back in the Northeast where they flourish, you will find a lot of non-Irish names in the celebrating groups. Their enthusiasm is contagious.

The middle of March also brings the college basketball season to its high point. It is difficult to imagine such a thing, but the during the past week, if you are on ESPN, you had a chance to see more basketball games than there were football games on the busiest week of the gridiron season.

But the television people continue to amaze us. They didn't give us Houston and Villanova, but they treated us to Georgetown vs. James Madison. However, when we heard the Houston-Villanova score, we wondered if they knew something ahead of time that we didn't.

If we have nothing pressing on hand, we watch games like Georgetown and James Madison because we can lay back and be an objective spectator. But most of those four dozen teams in the NCAA playoffs and 32 in the NIT attract little attention around our house. Margie doesn't get very excited about basketball, unless the Snyder High, Western Texas College, Baylor, Hardin-Simmons, or Texas Tech teams are involved. And in football, it's the Snyder Tigers, Baylor Bears, Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers in that approximate order that attract her attention. If none of these teams is playing, a game may put her to sleep by the end of the first quarter. Her contention is that there is no use watching a game unless you really care who wins.

But she did get excited over the finish of the Arkansas-Louisville game the other day. It was enough to make a temporary Razorback fan out of nearly anybody in this area after listening to the commentators bad-mouth Southwest basketball earlier in the week.

Q.—When people cut limbs and leave them beside a dumpster, who is to take them to the dump grounds?

A.—It is the responsibility of the property owner, or resident to haul trash and refuse that the containers will not accept. However, City Manager John Gayle said that if prunings can be cut into small enough pieces to fit into the containers, they may be disposed of piece-meal along with the regular garbage. This may require several days to keep from using up all of the container space at one time.

No Action Taken At Board Session

Scurry County Junior College District Trustees last night met with WTC men's basketball coach Larry Dunaway in a closed session and then conferred with a local group concerning closer ties between WTC and the Diamond M Museum, but no official action was taken.

Dunaway had requested the closed session following rumors last week that he had been relieved of his duties, but which proved to be unfounded.

Following the meeting with Dunaway, the board opened the session and Edwin Parks, board president, announced that the board planned to meet again with Dr. Don Newbury, new president of WTC, and discuss further the college's athletic program. Dr. Newbury was in the process of moving his family from Fort Worth to Snyder and was not present at last night's meeting.

In the discussion concerning the Diamond M Museum, Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president, said that several interested in the museum had inquired about the possibility of the college and the museum forming closer ties and promoting the facility as a regional cultural attraction and as an educational implement for WTC.

Board members assured that they were interested in the Diamond M Museum and that they would cooperate in any way possible in expanding its use and in its operation. The Diamond M Museum, founded by the late C. T. and Claire McLaughlin, has the most extensive display of fine art between Fort Worth and Denver.

Working Hours At Issue...

Coal Talks Broken Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks between the United Mine Workers and the soft coal industry broke off early today in an apparent deadlock over the volatile issue of miners' working hours.

Union President Sam Church, entering consultations with his negotiators several hours after the talks broke down, declared: "From the very start, the union has not wanted a strike, but at this time it appears the operators do."

Church refused to elaborate on the differences between the two sides, but acknowledged that no more formal bargaining sessions had been scheduled. "We are in telephone contact with them," he said.

Representatives of the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry's bargaining arm, had continued to talk past the union's self-imposed midnight deadline, signaling progress toward a settlement that would avert a strike March 27, when the current three-year contract expires.

One UMW official said after the deadlock developed, however, that the negotiations could conceivably run into Wednesday night and still give the union adequate time to have members vote on a proposal before the present pact expires.

The session at a downtown Washington hotel broke up shortly after 4 a.m. EST and negotiators left the room grim-faced.

And, for the first time since the talks entered the critical stage over the weekend, the two sides failed to announce jointly when they would meet again.

Union officials said then that they expected to resume bargaining by mid-morning.

But the BCOA's three representatives, asked if that timetable were correct, refused to comment. The trio, briefcases in hand, headed to the association's Washington headquarters.

UMW spokesman Eldon Callen confirmed subsequently that the two sides had not scheduled another bargaining session immediately. He said that the union bargainers were meeting at mid-morning and that the union's 39-member bargaining council scheduled an early afternoon session at the union's headquarters near the hotel.

But Callen said a contract settlement could still be achieved in time to avoid a strike.

"If we work through the night tonight and Wednesday night, we could jam the administrative procedures up front and still make our (strike) deadline," he said.

Harrison Combs, general counsel to the union and one of the bargainers, also confirmed that no new bargaining session had been set.

UMW bargainer Tom Gaston said the two sides had failed to resolve differences over the industry's efforts to put mines on a seven-day production schedule.

"There is still a lot of ground to be covered ...," said Gaston.

He said the industry had dropped its proposal to have miners work mandatory overtime but said the mine operators were continuing to insist on keeping mines open all week.

alternate tax plan

In the first weeks of the Reagan administration a great deal of attention has been given to the Kemp-Roth tax cut proposal, which would cut income taxes by 10 percent per year for three years. The promise of some of its backers is that lower taxes will stimulate productivity so much that the government will, in three or four years, not lose revenue, but perhaps gain revenue, since there will be more productive income to be taxed.

It's a promising idea, but there are other tax cut proposals that deserve a hearing as well.

Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman has suggested that if all taxes were reduced to a top level of 25 percent government revenues would actually increase, not three or four years down the road, but right away. He contends that many of the 31 million Americans now paying more than 25 percent are busily engaging, not in productive activity but in seeking tax shelters, less work, money-losing tax write-offs and ever more exotic ways to reduce their confiscatory tax liability.

If the top tax rate were reduced to 25 percent, Friedman insists, a great deal of these incentives to waste money in unproductive activities would disappear, and more of that money would be available to productive ventures.

In fact, with a top rate of 25 percent, many of the really wealthy, contends Friedman, would find it less troublesome to just shell out, rather than spend endless hours consulting with attorneys and accountants. A fair number might end up paying more than they do now, but doing it reasonably willingly because their financial lives would be simpler.

The proposition carries a reat deal of logic. When you add to it the fact that at present only 13 percent of government revenues come from taxes paid at a rate higher than 25 percent, we can see no compelling reason not to try it.

The payoff for all Americans, in terms of increased productivity, and more genuine jobs, could be immense. We'd only be risking 13 percent of government revenues if Prof. Friedman is wrong, which is highly unlikely. That's about the same as an average Carter year deficit.

Nope, they never said it.

Sometimes it seems like the only reason people, especially celibrities, want to be interviewed is so they can get more publicity later by hollering "Misquote." However a few of them have their points.

For instance, "You dirty rat," was never uttered by James Cagney, although every impersonater of the craggy-jawed, Hollywood hoodlum uses the line. Cagney doesn't mind particularly because it sounds like something the raspy-voiced gangster in the felt-brimmed hat might have said.

"Play it again Sam," is attributed to Humphrey Bogart in Casablanca. It fits his tough guy screen image but it was actually Ingrid Bergman who said, "Play it Sam."

In this 1942 flick, Bogart is a nightclub owner who is haunted by the song, As Time Goes By, because it reminds him of his lost love. When Miss Bergman tells Sam to play it, Bogart hears the tune and realizes his sweetheart has returned. (Thus forgetting his wrath at Sam, the piano player, whom he had instructed to never play the tune.)

Casablanca is a classic Bogart and considered one of his best films. Personally, I like a Woody Allen spoof of the movie better. You may have seen it. Its called, "Play It Again Sam."

Sometimes the quote can be remembered just a little wrong or taken out of context and the whole meaning is changed. In October of 1789 the poor women of Paris marched on the royal palace in an attempt to force Louis XVI to create a new, fairer government. Queen Marie Antoinette, heard the crowd outside and was told they were hungry and had no bread. According to tradition, she said something that roughly translates to, "Let them eat cake."

It was interpreted to typify her stupidity or callous indifference. But there is no evidence she ever made the remark, or at least at that time. The first reference to the phrase was in the 1760s—when Marie was still a young girl—and tells about a great princess who when told the peasants had no bread said something to the effect of "Then why don't they eat cake." It was kindly meant and reflected nothing more than the ignorance of a sheltered little girl.

Commoners got wind of the story and preferred to believe the first version. The whole argument was soon academic to the queen, however, because she was executed.

Perhaps the most memorable misquote of all pertains to the fictional stickler for details, Sherlock Holmes. The mere phase, "Elementary, my dear Watson," brings to mind the pipe smoking British detective of 221B Baker St.

In The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, he visits Dr. Watson, his former assistant, who has married and no longer lives at Holmes flat. He makes a few deductions about his old friend, observing that Waston still smokes the same pipe tobacco—by the ash on his coat— and has been very busy.

Watson asks how he knows this. Holmes says that Watson takes a cab when he is busy and walks when he is not. Watson's shoes are dusty enough to have been outdoors but not for him to have been walking.

"Excellent!" says Watson.

"Elementary," says Holmes.

Oddly, the best known and probably most often quoted line is right on the tee. Likely because it has a four-letter word in it. You're bound to know to what I am referring. And if you don't, well frankly Scarlet, ...

pen is mightier

There is no scalpel ever honed as sharp as a ballpoint pen.

With that lethal instrument you can destroy a man, subvert a government.

Vancouver's professional writer, Jerry Buchanan, once advised would-be-professional writers: "In the end it will be written words which save the world or destroy it."

The pen is mightier than the sword -- for better or worse.

As the writings of Dickens exposed and abolished the sweatshops of England -- Mein Kampf mobilized Teutonic hate and hurled the world into war.

Presently, social issues of immense proportions are being influenced by the writers who put pertinent words on the lips of actors and actresses.

Sally Struthers on gun control...

Susan Clark on abortion...

Valarie Harper on divorce...

Dana Hill in child pornography...

So manipulatable are human emotions that the gifted writer can move you to take sides with the Godfather against the FBI.

With one presentation of "Deerhunter" on TV with its scenes describing the grim game of Russian roulette a writer can motivate sixteen youngsters to kill themselves.

And if an enlightened generation is led to a realization of the futility of dead-end wars it may well have been because of the genius of the writers of the TV series "Mash."

Newswriters, especially, have an awesome responsibility. The power to make us laugh at what we should blush at; the weapons and skills to make us so white-hot angry we will mobilize ourselves, arm ouselves -- with ballpoint pens of our own -- and spend an angry evening writing to editors, congressmen, humane officials, whomever...

If only for fleeting moments we direct and control human emotions...

On sex, love, marriage, politics, religion, philosophy, morality, we can teach children constructively or scar them permanently.

None of us would volunteer to drop a weapon of annihilation on an innocent civilian population -- yet potentially the power of the wordsmith is infinitely more devastating.

And with modern media we hurl them -- flower-seed-words -- or poison-weed-words at human targets we may never see.

God help us.

commentary

donald f. graff

Someone, somewhere, must be saying "I told you so" about now.

Back in a simpler, less-threatening era — way back, in fact, to 1978, before the Iranian revolution and all that followed — considerable misgivings were expressed in Congress and elsewhere to the provisioning of Saudi Arabia with 60 U.S.-built F-15s, then and still one of the world's most advanced warplanes.

There was some question as to whether the modest Saudi military establishment was up to managing such super-sophisticated weaponry, and more as to the possible unsettling effects upon the Mideast power balance. The F-15s were, as pointed out repeatedly, most often by Jerusalem, capable of reaching Israel in addition to whatever other targets Saudi strategists may have had in mind.

But the friends of the Saudis in the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill carried the argument with a compromise deal in which Israel was also tossed a little something, and it was agreed the F-15s would not be equipped with bomb racks that would make them an offensive threat.

Even so, there were mutterings that this was not likely the end of the matter, but only the beginning of another twist to the perpetual Mideast crisis. And taking an even broader view, then-Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., declared "every pore in my body goes against seeking peace by arming countries."

Well, if you've been following the news in recent days you already know that those F-15s are back in it. The Reagan administration has a brand-new diplomatic-military plan to restore U.S. "credibility" as a partner for assorted nations in the Mideast labeled friendly. It includes immediate sale of air-to-air missiles and extended-range fuel tanks to give the planes more offensive punch.

And with this much already in the works, can bomb racks be far behind? The Saudis have requested them and the matter is, it is reliably reported, "under study."

Ineveitably there will also be a little something more for Israel so Jerusalem is not making a fuss — at least not yet.

With the administration talking about investing an additional trillion-plus dollars into our own military buildup in the next few years, a few hundred millions worth of hardware to be passed out in the Mideast may seem scarcely worthy of comment.

But as with the 1978 situation, this is almost certainly, only another beginning. Authoritative sources in Washington are making it no secret that additional countries — notably Turkey and Pakistan — are in line for similar tangible reassurance and the ultimate evidence of U.S. credibility is to be a permanent American military presence in the area, to secure above all the Persian Gulf and Western oil supplies therefrom.

There are, as in 1978, misgivings on Capitol Hill. But there is no serious question that the administration has the support to get essentially what it wants. Still, questions remain as to the wisdom in the long run of defining security and seeking to maintain peace almost exclusively in terms of arms.

After all, if weaponry were all that mattered, there wouldn't be any security problem in the Persian Gulf area today. We would still be relying upon our lavishly equipped great and good friend, the shah of Iran.

And considering recent events in which he figured so prominently, there is at least one person who could in the present circumstances say, "I told you so."

Former Sen. Muriel Humphrey.

letter to the editor

To The Daily News:

I have always been amazed at the enthusiasm shown by many of the young Americans of today, especially the enthusiasm involved with the willingness to fight for our country in time of need. It makes me happy to see we have such dedication. But it worries me when I think of the "wars" we having facing us in our own backyard.

These "wars" include two main destructive forces—pollution and vandalism—and Snyder is no exception. Our schoolyards especially are strewn with paper, and graffiti is written all over public property. It looks as if young Americans do not respect the things we should be proud of, and also neglect to think of less fortunate people on earth. Maybe then we would be able to learn to appreciate and respect our country more. I would like to see a change in upcoming generations. Maybe, little by little, we can eliminate the urge to destroy our valued property all around Snyder, especially at the schools, the main sources.

I challenge and ask the future adults of our All-American City to "clean-up their act." Let's truly get that American spirit back into our hearts and minds. Let's all count our blessings and remember the freedom we have in the United States of America, and strive toward keeping it that way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Sharing time today with persons with whom you have little in common will be boring. It could also be counterproductive. Seek thinkalikes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You won't deliberately seek challenge today, but should you be confronted by it you will conduct yourself like a winner. Opposition awakens your assertive qualities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This should be a rather enjoyable day, because you're capable of treating whatever life has to offer philosophically.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Joint ventures should be a profitable area for you today, even though that which you gain may be minor rather than monumental. Every little bit helps.

Dear Abby

Well of Confession Best Kept Capped

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old single female engineer working in an oil field. I've worked for the same company for four years and am making a very good living.

When I was new in this business, and insecure in my position, I was pressured, or you might say, "sexually harassed," by a fellow engineer who was much older than I, married, and in a position to do me a lot of good (and harm) in the company. He got me alone several times and I had no choice except to comply with his wishes, so I did. I never told anyone. Fortunately, after a while he stopped bothering me.

Now I am involved with another engineer who recently joined the company. He is more my age, single, and I am really in love with him. We haven't advertised the fact that we're seeing each other because we figure the less talk, the better.

My problem is that the older engineer has sort of taken the younger one under his wing, and they have become very friendly. I am worried sick that the older engineer will tell the younger one about what went on between us.

So far I haven't said anything, and I don't plan to, but I wonder if that is wise. Should I keep quiet and hope he doesn't find out? Or should I tell him myself and hope it won't make any difference?

NOT OK IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR NOT OK: What was, was. If the younger engineer confronts you about the older one, don't lie. But for now, save your confessions for the confessional.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year-old man who has recently started dating a very attractive 37-year-old woman. We both enjoy theater and movies — especially comedies, and that's the problem. Abby, this lady's laughter attracts a lot of attention. She doesn't just laugh, she screams and hoots! I am sure I am not overreacting. When she laughs, people turn around and look at us.

I'm afraid if I ask her to try to hold it down, she will become self-conscious, and that would spoil the entertainment for her.

I am a fairly quiet person and dislike being conspicuous. Should I remind this lady that too-loud laughter is embarrassing? If it weren't for this one fault, she would be an ideal companion.

EMBARRASSED IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Hearty, explosive laughter is characteristic of an uninhibited, outgoing personality — a healthy plus. Furthermore, it's appropriate to laugh at comedy, so why not accept the lady as she is?

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry Jeff in a few months, but a problem has developed.

I have three cats who are like a part of my family. Jeff hates them and is jealous of the attention I give them. Now he tells me that after we are married he doesn't want to see any cats around the place! Abby, I really do love Jeff, but I just cannot see myself parting with my cats. What should I do?

TORN IN TOLEDO

DEAR TORN: If you are honestly "torn" between Jeff and the cats, you'd be better off with the cats.

Has Woman Prime Minister

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Gro Harlem Brundtland, a 41-yearold physician with a master's degree from Harvard, was designated Norway's first woman prime minister in February.

She is the youngest woman to run a modern government.

Aside from politics, she describes herself as "absolutely typically Norwegian," citing her interests in the outdoors and cross-country skiing. Three of her teenage children live at home. Her eldest works on an offshore oil rig.

Here is another hand where you have to discard so as to avoid an overruff. Actually, it isn't necessarily an overruff, but a form of the play called an uppercut where if you ruff high you promote a trump trick for the defense.

South finds himself in a rather normal spade game after West has overcalled in hearts.

West leads the king of hearts and continues with the ace. East has played the eight first, so West continues with the jack.

You can ruff in dummy with the queen and pick up the spade suit if it breaks 2-2 or if the jack is singleton or you can ruff with the 10 and be in good shape if West holds the jack. Now, as a reader take a look at the East hand. He holds J 9 7 and either play loses.

Now let's get to the winning play. Why ruff at all? You see three clubs each in your hand and in dummy. If you ruff that heart you will still have to lose a club later on, so just chuck a club and let East and West whistle for another trick because they won't get one.

If another heart is led you can ruff in your hand. If anything else is led just win, play three rounds of trumps and eventually ruff your third club in dummy.

Women Better At Cow Milking

MONTICELLO, Fla. (AP) — Farmer's daughter Alfredia Thompson didn't milk cows when she was growing up. It was man's work.

So when she joined America's growing legion of professional milkmaids, Mrs. Thompson admitted she was afraid of the animals.

"But I got over it in a couple weeks," she says. "If you treat them (the cows) nice, they'll treat you nice."

Many dairymen are convinced that women are better milkers than men, says Eugene C. Meyer, managing editor of Hoardes Dairyman, a nationally circulated magazine based in Wisconsin.

During the past decade, farmers like Wilmer and Bill Bassett near Monticello have converted to all-female milking teams. Monticello is the seat of Jefferson County in the Florida Panhandle.

The Bassetts hire nine women — most of them related to male employees on the sprawling dairy farm — to milk 1,200 cows twice a day.

"I don't think there have been any scientific studies on it," says Bill Boardman, executive vice president of Dairy Farmers Inc., an industry group in Orlando. "Women are quieter and aren't as likely to be abusive to the animals."

The rise of modern-day milkmaids is correlated to industrywide automation in recent years. In large, mechanized dairy operations, farm hands no longer carry milk to bulk containers.

Instead, milk flows directly from cows' udders via automatic suction devices and pipe networks to storage tanks.

Milkers' responsibilities include cleaning the udders, attaching the suction devices and applying disinfectant.

Another reason for the increasing number of women on dairy-farm payrolls is simply economics. Rural families — like many of their urban counterparts — need at least two incomes to make ends meet.

Besides working as milkers, women are now being paid for other dairy jobs. Since last August, Elizabeth Dunn has been employed at the Bassett farm as a heat detector, one of three full-time workers who spot cows in heat.

The job is critical in maintaining high milk-production levels because heat detectors' mistakes can cause delays in cows' scheduled pregnancies.

Florida dairy farmers produced nearly 2 billion pounds of milk in 1979, according to the State Department of Agriculture.

Why a high blood fat level?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, age 39, just had a blood test which showed his cholesterol at a high level of 308 and his triglycerides at 400. He may also have a duodenal ulcer. The doctor put him on a very strict low-fat diet for three months. He is not overweight.

I don't really understand why his cholesterol is that high as we don't like fat meat and rarely eat pork, but he does not like vegetables and never eats fresh fruit. What makes triglycerides go up? He is keeping his smoking to a minimum with this diet.

DEAR READER — First, you can't be sure what a person's cholesterol or triglyceride level is with just one test. They can fluctuate a great deal in some people. Three successive tests are a better indicator of the usual level.

Triglycerides are blood fats. When you hear triglyceride, think fat. Often high cholesterol and high triglycerides are associated with being overweight and with diet, but you can be skinny and have high levels.

Your cholesterol level is set by your liver. If you don't get a lot of cholesterol or fat in your diet, your liver may still manufacture too much cholesterol from other food substances, and that can even include making cholesterol from carbohydrates. A person may inherit the tendency to have high levels.

Whether your cholesterol is in small packages of fat or is in larger fatty-cholesterol particles in your bloodstream makes a difference. This, and other important aspects of cholesterol and triglycerides, is explained more fully in The Health Letter number 15-2, Understanding Your Cholesterol, Triglycerdies and Other Blood Fats, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Stress is sometimes a factor. I would encourage your husband to stop smoking entirely, eliminate coffee, tea, colas and chocolate. He may also benefit from a sensible fitness program. Regular exercise will lower triglyceride levels and some research shows that it can favorably influence the cholesterol levels.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I drink diet soda because I don't want to gain weight. Recently I heard that a person would be better off to drink a smaller portion of regular soda instead, because diet soda contains a lot of salt, which causes the body to retain water. In other words, a person may actually gain weight. I usually drink two bottles of diet soda a day. Am I really defeating my purpose?

DEAR READER — Nonsense. Any weight a normal healthy person gains from reasonable amounts of salt intake is from retaining needed body water, except for water retention with premenstrual tension. Water retention is not body fat and has nothing to do with being fat. If you happen to gain a pound of fluid while dieting your body probably needs it. Many diets result in a loss of normal body water.

The goal of sensible dieting is to lose pounds of body fat, not normal body water. I'm not an advocate of diet sodas or other sodas either, for that matter. But two diet sodas a day will not cause you to gain fat.

Reagan Moves Closer To Auto Import Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Cabinet, still sharply divided on what to do about Japanese autos flooding into the country, is nonetheless inching closer to recommending some form of temporary import curbs, administration sources say.

A Cabinet-level task force headed by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis was to meet again later today to discuss the issue with hopes of making a recommendation to the president this week.

However, one official said there is increasing doubt whether the president's advisers will be able to reach a consensus on the issue, raising the possibility it may present him with alternate recommendations.

Meanwhile, one White House source said Monday that Reagan has indicated he doesn't want the Cabinet members debating the issue in public.

"The president really wants to cool this one," said the source, asking not to be identified.

Pressure has increased in recent weeks for Reagan to begin negotiating with the Japanese a voluntary reduction of cars allowed into the United States in an attempt to take some of the competitive pressure off the ailing U.S. auto industry, which lost $4.2 billion last year.

Lewis is known to favor such a rollback for the next three years, arguing in Cabinet sessions that Reagan's overall economic recovery plan will not be enough to help the industry immediately.

He has been joined by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, who told a congressional subcommittee recently that the U.S. industry needs "some running room" over the next three years so automakers can retool their plants and compete in the production of fuel efficient cars.

Strong opposition to any import curbs has come from budget director David A. Stockman, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council on Economic Advisers.

Stockman told an interviewer over the weekend that imports were not the cause of the U.S. industry's economic problems, saying the drop in domestic car sales have by far outnumbered the increase in imports during recent years.

Administration sources said Stockman and Regan fear import restrictions would add to inflation, might prompt similar requests from other industries, and could send a signal that the administration does not have full confidence in its overall economic recovery plan.

The Japanese exported 1.9 million vehicles to the United States last year, compared with 900,000 in 1976.

U.S. sales, on the other hand, dropped dramatically. Unemployment among auto workers and industry-related employees reached 600,000.

This Guy Thinks So...

Today's Auto Junkyard Tomorrow's Goldmine?

HURRICANE, W.Va. (AP) — Kenny Davis spends his days surrounded by twisted, rusting idols that once were worshiped, petted and pampered but now lie abandoned on a wooded hillside patroled by a flock of chickens.

To put it plainly, Davis runs an auto junkyard.

But Davis, a wiry man with oil-stained hands and a greasy grin, sees no eyesore when he surveys his immobilized fleet. He sees the wave of the future.

"A few years ago people would just get rid of their old cars and buy a new one, but not anymore," he said, watching a bedraggled hen scratch beneath a 1950s vintage bus he had towed in with his wrecker a few months earlier.

"No sir. Not anymore. From now on, I think, people will be hunting for parts so they can keep their old cars running for as long as possible."

And when the people arrive, in search of a thingamajig for an old Hupmobile, Kenny Davis will be ready for them.

"I used to sell most of my stuff for scrap," he said, "but the money's going to be in parts from now on. I've begun stripping my cars and cataloging the parts."

Davis, who estimates he has some 500 vehicles scattered over two hillsides that border his rural Putnam County home, says a day doesn't go without somebody calling in search of parts.

"I get 'em from all over the country. Ripley, Point Pleasant, from over in Ohio; you name it and I get calls from there.

"Say you're looking for a hood for a 1970 Impala," he added, warming to his subject. "Well, there's a lot of those cars still on the road these days but the dealers quit carrying parts for them after five years. So where are you going to go if you need the parts? You're going to some salvage yard, that's where."

Jobs depend on energy. . .

let's keep on working.

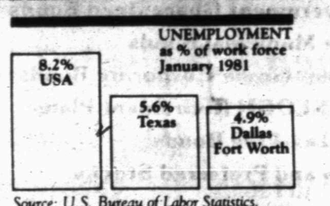

We Americans have always understood that we can't get something for nothing. We're hard-working people.

One of the things that has kept us working, and kept our standard of living climbing here in the Southwest, has been a ready supply of reasonably priced electric energy. It makes our labor more productive, and helps hold down the cost of the goods we produce. It helps keep our industries competitive, and that enables them to grow and employ more people.

The costs of energy everywhere keep rising. But an even bigger problem is making sure we have enough electric energy here.

At your electric company, we're working to keep this area attractive by supplying the electricity we all need at reasonable cost. We're planning ahead to keep our supply abreast of the need, so business and industry can plan confidently for their future here.

Because that means jobs here.

Hijacking Over, Except For Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The hijacking is over for most of the hostages but not for Syria. It's left with a bunch of Pakistanis who didn't want to leave home, three hijackers it doesn't know what to do with, an American wanted on drug charges in the United States and a Canadian believed to be an escaped convict.

The hijackers of the Pakistani airliner and the 54 political prisoners released by Pakistan in response to the hijackers' demand are being held under heavy guard at the Damascus Airport Hotel while the Syrian government decides what to to with them.

Libya agreed to give them and the hijackers asylum, then reneged. So far, they have been granted only temporary asylum by Syria.

A member of the hotel staff reported many of the freed prisoners said they want to return to Pakistan "to continue the struggle against the government of President Zia ul-Haq."

He quoted a spokesman for the prisoners as saying, "None of us wanted to leave Pakistan," and that Zia's government forced them to go.

They were exchanged Saturday for the 101 passengers and crew members who were held hostage aboard a Boeing 720 jetliner for 13 days in Kabul, Afghanistan, and Damascus by three heavily armed young opponents of Pakistan's military regime.

President Zia said Pakistan got rid of "some bad eggs."

One of the freed hostages, Craig Clymore, 24, of Laguna Hills, Calif., has been indicted in New York on charges that he was a member of a ring smuggling heroin and hashish oil into the United States. The State Department revoked his passport and said he would be issued documents for travel only to the United States. But for the time being he was holed up in a Damascus hotel.

Another freed hostage who passed himself off as Lawrence Clifton Mangum of New York City was arrested by Syrian police at the request of the Canadian government. It tentatively identified him as an escaped convict named Lawrence Lome, who escaped from Canada in 1976 while serving a seven-year prison sentence for importing drugs.

Neither the United States nor Canada have an extradition treaty with Syria, but officials in Washington and Ottawa expected the Syrian government to cooperate in sending the men home.

The 86 Pakistani passengers and the crew of the airliner Pakistani jetliner flew to Saudi Arabia Monday for a pilgrimage to Mecca, Islam's holiest shrine, as guests of the Saudi government. They are to be flown home Wednesday.

The other freed American hostage, Frederick Hubbell, a 30-year-old lawyer from Des Moines, Iowa, flew to Frankfurt, West Germany, for a reunion with his wife Charlotte, and his parents.

Hubbell and his wife were on a round-the world trip when the jetliner was hijacked over Pakistan. She was freed with other women and children in Kabul on March 7, one day after the hijackers shot and killed a Pakistani diplomat who was among the passengers.

Arguing Bill To End Inspections

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A legislator says auto inspections don't prevent accidents, but the director of the Department of Public Safety contends traffic deaths would increase if the annual check-ups are abolished.

Rep. Jim Horn, R-Denton, said Monday that lawmakers should pass his bill repealing the inspection law because there is no evidence inspections catch defects that cause accidents.

"A light can go out or the brakes fail on the way home from the inspection station," Horn said.

Col. Jim Adams, DPS director, later issued a statement saying eliminating required inspections would be "taking a backward step at a time when traffic deaths are running at an all-time high."

He said only 3 percent of the state's traffic deaths last year were attributable to vehicle defects, compared with 12 percent when the inspection program began in 1953.

"Without an adequate inspection program, the number of fatalities attributable to vehicle defects would rise again," Adams said.

Horn said he became interested in the subject because his hobby is working on cars.

Since 1977, federal law has permitted states to repeal inspection laws without forfeiting any highway aid, and six states already have cancelled their requirements, he said.

Texas inspection stations must check not only brakes and lights but also tire tread, windshield wipers, steering mechanisms and exhaust systems.

Horn said some motorists switch tires with their second cars before inspections.

"On steering, when they check it, they will get inside and just turn the wheel," without looking at linkages, power steering belts and other under-the-hood components, he said.

"You can normally hear or smell" exhaust problems, Horn added.

The legislator quoted the former chief of the National HIghway Traffic Safety Administration, Douglas Toms, as saying, "There is no data showing the vehicle inspection programs in themselves have brought about any substantive reductions in accidents."

'Getaway Specials' On Space Shuttle

By The Associated Press

Most Earthlings can't hitch a ride on the space shuttle just yet, but many are plunking down dollars to reserve room on the craft for their fantasies.

Vanilla plants, clams, bees — and Mickey Mouse balloons — may be among those to experience space travel before their human owners.

Their reservations on the shuttle are called "getaway specials," available for a down payment of $500 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Although few companies have taken up NASA's offer to sell an entire space shuttle mission to conduct experiments, the small spaces have fired the imaginations of everyone from high school students to government agencies.

Since the program was announced in 1976, 139 industrial companies, 78 schools and universities, 49 private individuals and 27 federal agencies have reserved space on the shuttle. Thirteen Texas individuals and groups are among them.

Commercial gimmicks aren't allowed on the shuttle, and neither are experiments that might be dangerous. But just about anything else is a "go."

Three payload packages are available: a space of 2½ cubic feet for a payload weighing up to 60 pounds for $3,000, the same size for a payload up to 100 pounds for $5,000, or a space of 5 cubic feet for up to 200 pounds for $10,000.

The shuttle Columbia, which can take off like a rocket, orbit the Earth like a spacecraft and land like an airplane, is scheduled to blast off from Cape Canaveral April 8.

The first payloads will go up in September 1982, after four test space shuttle flights.

Some people, like Mrs. James Holland of Houston, sent in their $500 thinking they were reserving a seat on a flight for themselves.

"I'm not a scientist. I'm a housewife with six children," she said. "I bought space thinking it was for future seats on rides back and forth to the moon.

"I've just about traveled everywhere. I've been to China. I've been up the Nile. I've been to the North Pole. I'd like to go into space and take my children. My husband didn't want to go. He's a banker and he doesn't like to go any farther than the golf course."

Mrs. Holland said she donated her space to NASA, which turned it over to a West German industrial company.

Paris, Texas, businessman Edmond Castleberry, who's disappointed he won't live long enough to travel to another planet, donated his getaway special to Paris High School and Paris Junior College.

"They say old men dream dreams and young men have visions," said Castleberry, who has spent all of his 67 years in the Northeast Texas town. "But I've got a vision here. This is the great adventure of an era and I'd like to participate."

Job Offers, Housing Scarce For Refugees

DALLAS (AP) — Job offers are scarce and the need for housing is "desperate," but the first group of 1,000 Cambodian refugees targeted for Dallas will be arriving in April, a local resettlement coordinator said.

There are 5,000 refugees currently getting English instruction at a holding area in Thailand, the last stop before the Cambodians immigrate to the United State, said Fay Worrall, just back from a New York meeting of resettlement agency representatives.

Dallas and Houston are among nine U.S. cities selected for resettlement of as many as 1,000 Cambodian refugees apiece.

"We were told that the first 5,000 will be coming in April, May and June," said Mrs. Worrall.

Some "generalized" job offers have been made but the refugees are still "in desperate need of decent, affordable housing," she said.

"We would like to put 10 families in one site. We don't need efficiency apartments," Mrs. Worrall said, explaining the agencies plan to "cluster" the Cambodians together to ease their transition to life in a new country.

Meanwhile, an official for the national resettlement effort said the refugees appear to be healthier and better-educated than first thought.

"It looks like the people who are in the holding areas are the remains of the middle class," said Cindy Coleman of the Health and Human Services Department.

"The Pol Pot government (of Cambodia) killed off a huge number of people, and they really did start with the educated and the military," she said. "There's not much left of the middle class.

"I don't know a Cambodian who has not lost a member of their immediate family to death by execution, starvation or disease."

The refugees are among an estimated 30,000 Cambodians — at least 5,000 more than predicted in late January — scheduled to immigrate to the United States from holding centers in Thailand, a State Department official said.

The extra refugees already have at least one relative in the United States, said John Lloyd, acting director of the office of Asian refugees at the State Department.

Other definite sites for resettlement are Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, New York City, Atlanta, Columbus, Ohio, and Phoenix, Ariz.

Young Man Alleges He Was Forced To Sell Magazines

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A 19-year-old Arizona man who took a job he thought offered travel and lots of money says he was forced to sell magazines door-to-door and sometimes deprived of food because of poor sales.

Tony Collins of Phoenix has filed a complaint with the state attorney general's Tacoma office against Jerry Rogers, an independent contractor with U.S. Publishers Circulation Inc., a company based in Fort Worth, Texas.

Rogers said the allegation that he told Collins he could go home only after repaying a $69 debt to the contractor is "totally untrue."

Collins also complained that Rogers opened his mail and would not allow him to talk on the telephone without a supervisor standing nearby.

Collins was not prevented from leaving, Rogers said. Money for food was never withheld as punishment for poor sales, he said, although he forgot to give Collins food money one night.

Rogers also denied that he monitored the mail or phone calls of his young salesmen.

Collins is now back in Phoenix. He got money for the bus ticket after Kathy Muir, an investigator with the attorney general's office, contacted one of Rogers' associates.

The allegations against Rogers are being investigated, Ms. Muir said.

The FBI and the U.S. Postal Service also may check into the complaint, officials said.

"Rogers Sales" apparently had no county business license to operate in the area, said Pat Spencer, a law clerk with the attorney general's office.

It is not uncommon for young people who join interstate magazine sales companies to "get stranded," Ms. Muir said.

Collins said in an interview last Thursday he joined Rogers Sales about seven weeks ago after responding to a newspaper advertisement offering a chance to travel and earn lots of money. He was told by one recruiter that he could make as much as $600 a week, he said.

Collins said he sometimes earned only $10 a day in commissions.

He and other salesmen lived out of motel rooms and were provided $8 a day to buy food, Collins said.

He was afraid a good deal of the time, he said, because he was told to improve his sales record or "get thrashed around."

Rogers called those allegations an excuse to get a bus ticket.

Collins finally asked to use the telephone of a homeowner in Tacoma Thursday and called the Better Business Bureau, which referred him to the attorney general's office.

Chinese Children Well Disciplined

PEKING (AP) — In kindergartens across this nation of a billion people, China's youngest citizens are the model toddlers of a society that rewards discipline above all. But some parents say the price of such youthful good behavior is stifled creativity.

For 9 million children in state-run kindergartens, the powerful and primary lesson is: Don't be an individual, be a team player — there is safety in numbers.

The message is basic and clear.

In vain, a 4-year-old girl tries to pull up a monumental turnip in a kindergarten morality play. "I can't do it alone," she wails in defeat. "It's too big for one person." Her friends come to the rescue and together the children conquer the turnip.

The moral: You can't do it alone.

Visitors to China often remark on the well-behaved children who applaud on cue for visitors and march smartly in rows. Seldom does one see a baby cry.

Older children sit upright in class, hands clasped. They are the youth and future of a society that requires discipline. Fundamental dissent is forbidden; orders must be obeyed.

The discipline is not necessarily harsh. In state-run kindergartens spanking is forbidden. The principal of a model school says, "we never criticize or bully because it harms their self-respect.... Although they are small, we must respect and never mock them."

More than 17 million babies are born in China each year and about 100 million Chinese are under the age of 6. China has 165,000 kindergartens with 9 million children aged 3-6, plus makeshift schools in rural areas.

Typically, parents pay 13 to 16 yuan a month ($9.75 to $12) for day or boarding school. Children fortunate enough to attend receive basic education, recreation, meals and moral values.

Hunt For Football Coach Continues

Two dozen applications had been received Monday for the head football coach's position at Snyder High School.

Supt. Bill J. Hood said that a meeting of the board of trustees probably would be scheduled for Tuesday, March 24, to consider the applications.

Meanwhile, the staff will assemble as much information as possible on the applicants. The detailed procedure for naming a new coach will be left up to the board.

Monday was the deadline set earlier by the board for accepting appliations.

The head coach's post was vacated when Mike Jenkins resigned to accept the position of head football coach at Pearce High School in Richardson. Jenkins had held the post here five years.

Several applicants from highly successful established programs are included in the list seeking the position here, said Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent-personnel and administration.

Brown Takes Job With New Jersey

LOS ANGELES (AP) -- After two winning seasons at UCLA, Larry Brown has been lured back to the National Basketball Association as coach of the New Jersey Nets.

He disclosed his decision to the Bruins at a closed-door meeting with them Monday, and although he would not confirm he was leaving, two players who asked to remain anonymous said that was what Brown told them.

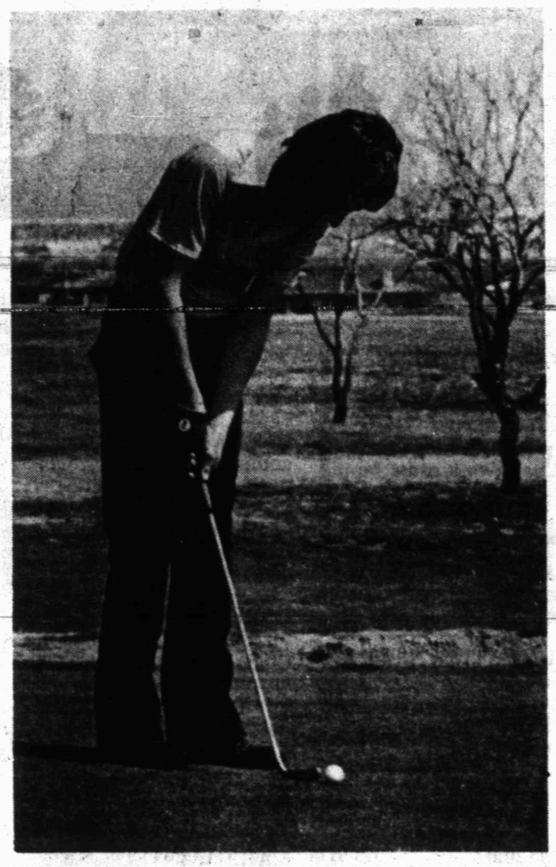

They also said Larry Farmer, a Bruin assistant basketball coach for six years and a player under former coach John Wooden, would be the new UCLA head coach.

Nets General Manager Charlie Theokas confirmed late Monday night that Brown, a former coach of the Denver Nuggets, had signed to coach the team starting next season.

Theokas, in an interview with ABC Radio Sports, said: "We're really excited about Larry and about next year. We feel we have half turned around our program and with the addition of Larry Brown we feel next year basketball in New Jersey will be exciting."

Bye Good For Goodbye In NCAA Cage Tourney

by The Associated Press

"It would seem," Ron Abernathy observed, "that this year, the word 'bye' is short for 'goodbye.'"

Louisiana State's assistant coach knows whereof he speaks. Eight of the 16 teams which received first-round byes waved bye-bye to the rest of the field in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament by the end of last weekend's second round.

That included the nation's three top-ranked teams - DePaul, Oregon State and Arizona State - leaving LSU's Tigers, No.4 in the final regular-season poll, the highest-ranked team still alive heading into the regional semifinals.

The other teams to receive first-round byes, then leave sooner than expected, were UCLA, Wake Forest, Kentucky, Louisville and Iowa. Along with LSU, the "bye" teams still alive are Notre Dame, Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Utah, North Carolina and Indiana.

"Considering all the other upsets," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said Monday, "we are awfully happy to be where we are right now."

Thursday night it's Brigham Young, 24-6, vs. Notre Dame, 23-5, and Virginia, 26-3, vs. Tennessee, 21-7, in the East Regionals at Atlanta; and Kansas State, 23-8, vs. Illinois, 21-7, and Utah, 25-4, vs. North Carolina, 26-7, in the West at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Friday night it's LSU, 29-3, vs. Arkansas, 24-7 and Wichita State, 25-6, vs. Kansas, 24-7, in the Midwest in New Orleans; and St. Joseph's, 24-7, vs. Boston College, 23-6, and Alabama-Birmingham, 23-7, vs. Indiana, 22-9, in the Mideast at Bloomington, Ind.

Notre Dame has been a giant killer of sorts dating back to the 1940s. More recently, the Fighting Irish have halted winning streaks of 28 games by Virginia (this year), 26 games by DePaul (last year), 29 games by San Francisco (1977), 34 games by South Carolina (1974), and 88 games by UCLA (also 1974).

Now Notre Dame faces the unenviable task of trying to put the clamps on Danny Ainge, BYU's scoring machine whose 37 points last Saturday helped demolish UCLA's once-awesome Bruins 78-55.

In the schools' only previous meeting, in New York's Madison Square Garden Dec. 28, 1956, the Irish routed the Cougars 91-66.

Tulsa Holds On To Stop Miners

TULSA, Okla. (AP) -- Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson says his Hurricane played its "best 35 minutes of defense of the year" in putting together an 18-point lead over Texas-El Paso.

But the last five minutes almost eliminated the Hurricane from the National Invitation Tournament.

Mike Anderson hit two pressure free throws with 12 seconds left to allow Tulsa to survive a UTEP rally, 72-67. Tulsa, 23-7, hosts South Alabama in the third round of the NIT Friday night.

"I never expected to win this game by a big score," Richardson said. "But after playing our best 35 minutes of defense of the year to get the big lead, I was disappointed that we allowed them to make it so close."

Richardson said his team was guilty of "some silly things" and contended officiating hurt his club at the end.

UTEP Coach Don Haskins, for whom Richardson played in college, was also critical of the officiating and said questionable calls "let us get back in the game."

"We had absolutely no intensity," said Haskins, whose Miners end their season at 18-12. "I thought we were ready to play, but we weren't. This was the most we've been behind all year."

Tulsa outscored the Miners 25-5 to zoom from a 27-25 first-half deficit to a 50-32 lead early in the second half. Tulsa was ahead 65-47 with 5:44 left when UTEP began its comeback.

Forward Paul Cunningham reeled off 10 points to spark the rally and pull the Miners to within 68-66 with 14 seconds left. Anderson, who finished with 14 points, made it 70-66 with 12 seconds left and Phil Spradling hit two insurance free throws with 6 seconds left.

Tulsa hit 32 of 49 free throws, including 10 of 18 in the final 7:25 when the Hurricane did not score from the field.

Fred Reynolds tossed in 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Miners. Tulsa got 12 points from Paul Pressey and Bob Stevenson and 10 from Greg Stewart.

Three In Quarterfinals Big Ten Shows Stuff;

by The Associated Press

The Big Ten is looming bigger every day in the National Invitation Tournament.

On the verge of the quarter-finals, Minnesota, Purdue and Michigan are all still standing tall - and looking pretty healthy at that, according to their latest victims.

"That team was 9-9 in the Big Ten - and it gives you an idea of how they play basketball in the Big Ten," said Connecticut Coach Dom Perno after suffering an 84-66 humiliation at home to the Gophers Monday night.

"They got inside people, they got outside people, they have seven quality players and will be tough to beat in the NIT."

So will Purdue, which beat Dayton 50-46 in another second-round game Monday night.

Those games were two of seven played Monday night as the NIT field dwindled to eight teams. Elsewhere, Syracuse whipped Holy Cross 77-57; Duke stopped Alabama 75-70; South Alabama nipped Georgia 73-72; West Virginia edged Temple 77-76 in overtime and Tulsa downed Texas-El Paso 72-67. Michigan scored a runaway 80-68 victory over Toledo in the only NIT game played Sunday night.

The results set up the following quarter-final pairings: Michigan at Syracuse and West Virginia at Minnesota on Thursday night and Duke at Purdue and South Alabama at Tulsa Friday night.

Trent Tucker, hitting 14 of 17 shots from the field, scored a career-high 35 points as Minnesota rolled past Connecticut. Seven-foot-two sophomore center Randy Breuer added 19 points for the Gophers, 16 in the second half when the Big Ten team pulled away from a tight 37-33 lead at intermission.

Forward Mike Scearce had three baskets and two assists in the final seven minutes to help Purdue beat Dayton. Dayton was forced to play most of the game without Mike Kanieski, its leading scorer and rebounder for the season. The 6-10 junior center sprained his right ankle taking a jump shot at the 17:02 mark of the first half.

He was sent to the hospital for X-rays, which were negative, at halftime after soaking the ankle in ice. Later, he returned to the Flyers' bench on crutches.

Leo Rautins and Erich Santifer combined for 41 points to power Syracuse over Holy Cross.

Ed Rains hit two pressure free throws with four seconds remaining to give South Alabama its tight victory over Georgia.

Feline Golfers Place Third In 2-4A Meet

PECOS -- Fort Stockton took an early lead in the District 2-AAAA girls golf race here Monday, holding to a nine-stroke edge over Sweetwater. Snyder is 29 strokes back of the leader and in third.

The loop race consists of three tournaments of 18 holes each. Monday's was held at Pecos Valley Country Club. Future tournament rounds will be held at Lamesa on March 23 and at Western Texas College Course in Snyder on March 30. The rounds begin at 11 a.m.

The Lady Panthers fired low of 387, while Sweetwater carded a 396 and Snyder a 416. Pecos took fourth with a 421, followed by Monahans, 423; Andrews, 425; Andrews B, 464; Snyder B, 539; and Lamesa, 553.

"We're in pretty good shape, really," said Snyder Coach George Byerly. "If we can pick up some strokes next week, we'll have a chance at finishing well at our own place. But we need to do well next week. We can't make it all up at once."

This season marks the first for Snyder High School girls golf. Sweetwater and Lamesa are also fielding first-year teams.

K. Perry of Sweetwater led for medalist with an 87. Runnerup was Fort Stockton's C. Gallemore, 89, followed by Snyder's Theresa Hildreth, 92.

Hildreth led the Snyder A team. Lisa Franklin was next with a 105. Others were Laurie Donelson, 108, Tracey O'Day, 111 and Karla Gist, 119. The four low scores on each team make up a team total.

Patricia McFaul and Natalie Gist paced Snyder B with 128s. Diane Risenhoover had a 143, Vickie Gregory a 147, and Shauna Pate at 140.

The Sheriff's Office is investigating a case of possible kidnapping. The incident is to have occurred Monday afternoon when a 30 year old Andrews man took two women, aged 19 and 28, from a residence in Snyder and held them against their will at a residence south of town.

The women escaped his custody, said a Sheriff's Department spokesman, and notified authorities. The suspect, formerly of Snyder, was being processed at the county jail this morning.

The district attorney, Pete Greene, is expected to file charges in the case.

Rep. Shaw Introduces 'Agent Orange' Bills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Vietnam veterans afflicted with diseases allegedly caused by the defoliant Agent Orange are the victims of a "national scandal," a state representative says.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, has introduced two bills to help veterans who want to sue for money or for more information about the use of the controversial chemical during the U.S. involvement in the war in Vietnam.

Shaw said evidence is "overwhelming" that many veterans' physical, emotional and mental problems result from exposure to Agent Orange contaminated with dioxin, which he called "the most toxic substance known to man."

"This whole Agent Orange situation is a national scandal," he said. "The 55,000 Americans who died in Vietnam were only the beginning of our Vietnam casualties. Thousands more are dying every year from cancer or liver diseases, and thousands and thousands more are ... disabled by everything from respiratory problems to internal bleeding."

Shaw chastised the federal government, saying it has "been trying to pretend like there's no problem, like the thousands of veterans aren't dying or fathering children with birth defects."

One of his bills would let the Texas attorney general represent veterans in class action suits for damages, or for information about the use and effect of Agent Orange and other chemicals and herbicides used in Vietnam during the war.

The measure also directs the Texas Department of Health and the health science centers at the University of Texas to set up programs helping veterans file claims for aid and providing genetic screening to discover physical or genetic damage caused by the chemical.

Shaw's second proposal would require doctors and hospitals to give the health department a full report on any veteran treated for symptoms typical of those allegedly caused by Agent Orange, and would mandate further study of the problem.

Saying President Ronald Reagan favors eliminating the Vietnam veteran counseling program, Shaw said he is "outraged."

"How can we justify that kind of treatment for these people who went to Vietnam for us?" he asked. "These two bills will ... let the country know that in Texas we think a little more of our veterans than that."

Resolution Gets Association OK

The West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association has endorsed a resolution submitted by the Scurry County Commissioners Court calling for the state to recognize property owners' rights to minerals under highway right-of-way.

Preston Wilson, Scurry County Judge, said the association includes members of commissioners' courts in some 90 West Texas Counties.

The resolution urges the legislature to take action following state claims to minerals under property that was deeded to the highway department for right-of-way. Until recently, royalties from this property had gone to the property owners who had deeded the right-of-way to the state, and the resolution maintains that they intended to dedicate land for right-of-way purposes only and that minerals should not have been involved.

In recent months, the state has claimed mineral rights under highway right-of-way in a number of counties, including some on both U. S. Highway 84 and U. S. Highway 180 in Scurry County.

Horse Club Sets Demonstration

The Scurry County 4-H Horse Club announces a demonstration will be given by adult leader Kent Mills at their first mounted meeting of the spring, March 21.

The demonstration and meeting will take place at 9 a.m. at the old rodeo grounds on West 30th and will be on the subject of "Preparing Your Horse for the Show Season."

Included in the demonstration will be tips on grooming and feeding to benefit the health and appearance of the horse and a plan for conditioning horses through the spring to have them in proper shape for the beginning of the show season in May and June. Questions will also be answered on individual problems of the riders.

There will be no admission charge and everyone is invited to attend. 4-H Senior members will be available to discuss the club and its functions and goals with anyone interested in joining the club.

There are no dues and members meet twice a month to receive instruction, or to pleasure-ride with their horses. This year's agenda includes several horse shows, trail rides, a barbecue and riding in the Scurry County Rodeo Parade.

Anyone wishing further information on either the demonstration or the 4-H Club may contact County Agent Billy E. Roach at 573-5423, or Adult Leader Kent Mills at 573-2073.

Youth Rocks For Church

PATCHOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — Most often a "rock-a-thon" would be associated with a dance marathon contest, but not at this church youth-group fundraiser.

The "rock-a-thon" was a rocking-chair contest, won by Jon Rossman, 17. He kept his chair rocking for nearly 12 hours, even while eating. He "outrocked" 30 other participants, attributing his success to "lots of padding."
