Carter Opens Visit To Texas Today

Trip Combines Business, Politics

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jimmy Carter, making his first trip to Texas since becoming president two years ago, will mix business with politics during a two-day trip that begins here today.

The president's 600-mile path will not be strewn with roses, however.

A band of West Texas farmers, unhappy with the President's agricultural policies, plan to protest the visit in Fort Worth. They are displeased with the adminstration's plans to import beef.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, are not exactly fans of Carter, disagreeing with his energy policy. Hill has stated he would not ask the president to campaign for him. But both say they will attend a Democratic fundraiser in Houston.

Hispanic Meet Set

Some Mexican-American leaders said they are being snubbed by Carter when he meets with Hispanics in Houston.

The president will spend tonight in Houston and make stops Saturday at Beaumont and at the Army's sprawling Fort Hood before returning to Washington. A spokesman said Carter plans to focus on the problems of energy and inflation in speeches he will deliver during the trip.

Texas was a key state in Carter's 1976 election victory and would probably be critical again if he seeks re-election in 1980.

The President is scheduled to arrive at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth at 12:30 p.m. today aboard Air Force One. He will address a joint luncheon of Fort Worth civic organizations at 1 p.m. at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Billed Non-Political

The stop in Fort Worth, hometown of U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright, is billed as non-political, but some Republican Party leaders say the president needs to shore up his popularity, which has plummeted in recent polls.

A regional official of the American Agriculture Movement said Texas farmers from as far away as the Panhandle will stage a demonstration in the Convention Center parking lot to protest low farm prices and their displeasure with the Carter admnistration.

Leaving Fort Worth, Carter will fly to Houston, which was the initial reason for his trip to Texas. He will address a Democratic Party fund-raising dinner at 9:30 p.m. The dinner is one of six regional fundraisers to benefit the Democratic National Committee.

1,500 Tickets Sold

Local organizers said about 1,500 tickets, at $500 each, had been sold for the dinner, which will attract party leaders and followers from Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

The Houston visit also includes private meetings with groups of blacks and Mexican Americans.

A small controversy among Hispanics has developed over the afternoon meeting today with about 25 Mexican-American leaders.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said he was not invited and guessed that was because of his criticism of the Carter administraion.

An aide to Houston Mayor Jim McConn said, however, the session arranged that the request of the White House will be a meeting "of people and not of organizations."

The Saturday morning meeting with about 100 Houston blacks was suggested by Mickey Leland, the Democratic nominee to succeed U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan from Houston's predominantly black, inner city 18th Congressional District.

"If people are left out, it will be an oversight, not intention," said Leland of the meeting with blacks.

"It is the first time the president has made an appearance before any sizeable black group in Texas," Leland said. "It has a lot to do with the groundwork for his future political plans."

Leland said the meeting will include virtually everyone in the black leadership, as well as major officeholders. He said it will be a working meeting.

Carter leaves Saturday morning from Houston for Beaumont, arriving about 11 a.m. He will join in progress the dedication ceremonies for the Jack Brooks Federal Building. The edifice, completed in 1934, is being renamed for Brooks, a Democrat who has served the 9th Congressional District for the past 25 years.

Carter will spend only about 40 minutes at the downtown ceremony before returning to the airport, where he will leave for Fort Hood in Central Texas.

At the huge military installation, Carter will be met by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander. The president will helicopter to a training area where he will witness weapons firing and a combined arms exercise by the 2nd Armored Division.

Carter is to leave Fort Hood for Washington about 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Bond Sale Scheduled To Fund Projects Delayed By Lawsuit

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE Lubbock City Council Thursday decided to sell $2.4 million in general obligation bonds by Aug. 24 to finance water, sewer, street and fire protection improvements.

The bonds are part of a $26.4 million package approved by voters in May, 1977, but delayed by a suit filed by city hall watchdog Jimmy Marshall.

Earlier this week Marshall decided against carrying the suit to the state's highest court.

The council set Sept. 28 as the bond delivery date.

City Mgr. Larry Cunningham said the bond sale schedule is "very tight," and said the remaining bonds from the package will be "sold as quickly as possible."

The city council may be making Texas Tech University an offer soon on the sale of the city's Auditorium-Coliseum.

Councilman Bill McAlister suggested Thursday the complex be sold to Tech for $1 million which the university could pay out at $50,000 a year for 20 years.

Losing $84,000 Annually

"We're losing $84,000 a year" on the facility, McAlister said, "and it's estimated we will lose $90,000 in 1977-78."

The rental fee Tech pays each year is close to the $50,000 annual payment mentioned by McAlister.

When the amount the city loses to operate the facility is combined with the suggested $50,000 payment, McAlister said the city stands to gain $150,000 annually from the sale.

Cunningham said the sale would have to be submitted to city residents for a vote and an appraisal to estimate the value of the building would be required.

To Prepare Proposal

McAlister said he would have a written sale proposal and an appraisal cost estimate ready for council approval at the July 6 council meeting.

A consulting firm representative Thursday recommended the council spend over a half million dollars to upgrade the pay scales of city employees.

Bill Evans of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., made the recommendation while presenting an interim report on the classification and compensation of city workers.

Evans suggested a new system of ranking the jobs of the 1,100 employees and revising pay grades according to the skills and responsibilities of each position.

The $49,000 study, underway since January, was financed by federal revenue sharing funds and a grant from the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

However, at Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's request the council asked that Cunningham seek an estimate from the firm on the cost of a productivity study as a companion to the classification and compensation study.

Discrimination Opposed

The city council approved a resolution Thursday stating its opposition to club owners who discriminate against minority patrons and pledged to continue to research possible ordinances which might halt the practice.

The most important part of the ordinance to McAlister is a section authorizing a letter-writing campaign urging the Texas Legislature to enact legislation to prevent the discriminatory practices.

State Rep. Froy Salinas already has pledged to sponsor legislation which would permit the Alcoholic Beverage Commission to suspend a liquor license if discrimination is found.

The council overturned a Planning and Zoning Commission decision that a zone change request for property located at 78th Street and Indiana Avenue be denied.

Temperature Soars To Record 106

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

BLISTERING temperatures which have soared past the century mark the past two days and set a new record high for Lubbock Thursday, are expected to return to the South Plains today and Saturday.

The mercury sizzled to 106 at the Lubbock International Airport shortly before 5 p.m. Thursday, bursting the 105-degree record for the day set in 1934.

No relief is in sight. Today, temperatures are expected to climb to 102 under fair skies. Gusting winds should blow southwesterly at 15 to 20 mph.

Heat To Linger

The scorching weather is expected to persist for West Texans through Tuesday, with temperatures reaching into the upper 90s and only dropping to near 70s under continued fair skies.

At 4 p.m. Thursday, Lubbock and Wink held the state's hottest recordings of 105. Galveston and Palacios had the coolest readings at 88.

However, El Paso later recorded the high in the state when the thermometer pegged the 109-degree mark, breaking the record for the day of 107 set in 1974, and tying the all time high for the Sun City, which was set in 1934.

The intense heat in the Hub City resulted in Texas Tech officials sending some secretaries home and moving classes to different buildings when half of the university's cooling system broke down Thursday afternoon.

Skies Remain Sunny

Sunny skies remained over most of the Lone Star state Thursday afternoon, except for some low cloudiness in East Texas and the Coastal Plains and some isolated thundershowers in the mountains of southwest Texas.

Winds generally blew southerly over the state at 10 to 20 mph.

Weather conditions should be similar today.

Hot temperatures which also covered most of the Plains and other southwestern states of the nation Thursday, are expected to return to those regions today.

The nation's hottest reading was 115 at Gila Bend, Ariz. The coolest spot in the nation was Hoquiam, Wash., where the mercury never climbed above 56.

Illinois House Fails To Approve ERA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois House failed Thursday by two votes — 105-71 — to approve the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment, but a final tally of the rollcall was postponed so the issue can be called again for another vote.

The resolution calling for Illinois to ratify the proposed 27th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution banning sex discrimination required 107 votes or a three-fifths majority to be approved.

But before the tally was officially recorded, Rep. Corneal A. Davis, D-Chicago, the ERA sponsor, asked for a postponement. The action means the resolution can be called one more time for a vote.

Pandemonium broke out on the House floor during closing moments of the vote tally, with members trying to lobby other members and Gov. James R. Thompson phoning key Republicans and urging them to vote for ERA.

Turncoat Women's Libber Loses Face In Barnyard

WAYNE, W.Va. (UPI) — "Hercules," a rooster who sat for weeks on a nest of eggs, has four baby chicks and a new name — "Sally."

But farmer Otto Pauley, who owns the rooster, said he doesn't know what he plans to do with "Sally" now that he is acting more like a hen.

"He was my prize rooster," Pauley said. "He was, until he joined that women's lib and I fell out with him."

The rooster was at the top of the pecking order in Pauley's coop until one day about a month ago when the family found him sitting on a nest of seven eggs.

"Sally" is now kept penned with the four chicks, which were hatched several days ago, and spends his time walking around clucking and nipping at the babies like a mother hen.

For the time being, Pauley is keeping "Sally" away from the other roosters, fearing what they might do to him.

"These game roosters would jump him," he said.

'RUN FOR YOUR LIFE'

Series To Stress Need For Jogging

ARE YOU TIRED of that "flat tire" around your waist caused by bad eating habits and a sedentary way of life? Are you frustrated by everday problems and stress related to work and family? Chances are it's on everybody's mind these days.

One remedy is running. While it won't solve your problems, running can and will lead to a more healthy state of mind and body, making you better able to deal with life's problems.

For beginners and veteran joggers, The Avalanche-Journal will publish a three-part series adapted from the book, "Run for Your Life," by Dr. Art Mollen, that explains why everyone should run.

An experienced marathoner, Dr. Mollen clearly relates the improved psychological and physical quality of life derived from even a modest running program. He offers tips on buying running shoes, sets up a running program that everyone can adapt to and answers common questions about running in different climates, diets for runners, and medical benefits to heart and lungs that result from a systematic and nerve-relaxing exercise program.

For the running enthusiast and not-so enthusiast, the doctor gives all the reasons why and how to run. The first installment begins Saturday in the "Dimensions" secition of your Avalanche-Journal.

Jail Equipment Bids Received

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

DETENTION equipment bids for the new Lubbock County Jail Thursday ran higher than expected, and Lubbock County Commissioners delayed awarding a contract while they study various bid alternatives.

Although the bids on the materials used to construct jail cells have to be studied to see if they meet state requirements, the lowest bids were submitted by Willo Products Co. of Decatur, Ala., which offered a base bid of $1,518,000 and a barebones bid with less expensive equipment everywhere possible of $1,364,000.

County architect Arnold Maeker noted at the 4 p.m. bid openings at the courthouse that he estimated the jail equipment cost last August at $1,250,000.

"It's not a good sign to me," Maeker said, referring to the general contract bids remaining to be opened next Thursday.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw said prior to the special meeting that the commissioners are hoping for a total cost of no more than $3.5 million.

"We really need to see the bids next week before we can tell how much money we're talking about, don't we?" Shaw asked.

The commissioners approved the seven bidding general contractors being notified now not to include the detention equipment as a subcontract in their offers.

Edwin Stephens, partner in the Maeker-Stephens architectural engineering firm, explained that subcontracts are important because they figure into the overall profit margin planned by a general contractor in his bid.

The other detention equipment bidders Thursday were Roanoke Iron and Bridge Co. of Roanoke, Va., Southern Steel Co. of San Antonio, and Stewart-Decatur Security Systems, Inc. of Covington, Ky.

Roanoke offered a base bid with substitutions of $1,390,000; Southern Steel, a base bid of $1,547,000 with substitutions of $1,440,000; and Stewart-Decatur a base bid with substitutions of $1,499,000.

Stephens explained that Roanoke and Stewart-Decatur submitted bids with the substitutions only because of complications arising from bids being based on Southern Steel specifications.

Although Maeker recommended against taking it, the commissioners also have the option of deleting a 90-man cell block and reducing the jail apacity to 240 inmates.

Maeker said the extra capacity probably would be needed soon after the new jail was completed east of the existing jail early in 1980.

That alternative would reduce the Willo Products bid by $408,000 on the base bid and by $421,000 with substitutions.

Maeker told the commissioners that reducing the overall cost with less expensive equipment would mean different changes with different companies.

For example, he said substitute equipment with one company might mean a less costly automated means of opening and closing cell doors.

Tower Urged To Expand On Koreagate

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger urged Sen. John Tower today to "completely explain" his relationship with Korean influence-buyer Tongsun Park, saying Tower has been "far less than candid" about that relationship with both the Senate Ethics Committee (SEC) and the people of Texas.

Krueger, during a news conference here, said testimony released Monday by the Senate Ethics Committee does not exonerate Tower, but raises additional questions about his association with Park.

"There are two very basic qualities that the public has the right to expect from its elected officials," Kruegar said. "First, honesty or candor about one's dealings and second, loyalty in friends.

"Social Acquaintance"

"Every objective indicator says that John Tower and Tongsun Park were close friends, yet Tower has abandoned his friend, calling him a 'social acquaintance,' and refused to be candid with the people of Texas in explaining what was his real relationship with Tongsun Park."

Krueger cited two incidences in which Tower misrepresented himself in respect to the Koreagate scandal. He handed reporters copies of a Houston Post article which said Tower claimed in August, 1977, to have attended only one Park social function and denied that he had ever been the guest of honor at a Park party.

"But Senate documents show that Tower was an honored guest at a party hosted by Park, and that the two met on at least 14 recorded occasions, in addition to other occasions at other social functions," Krueger said.

"On seven recorded occasions, Park had appointments with Tower in his office. How many Texans have been able to

Newswoman's Grave Gets Stone

NEW YORK (AP) — The grave of the spunky girl reporter who once captured the imagination of the world had gone unmarked for 56 years.

A tombstone, inscribed "in honor of a famous news reporter," was placed there Thursday and dedicated to that heroine of journalism: Nellie Bly.

"Her name became synonomous for words meaning courage, forthrightness and great love of fellow man and life," eulogized Vincent Lee, president of The New York Press Club, at the dedication of the marble monument.

"Perhaps the greatest thing Nellie did was to become living proof women can succeed in a man's world."

Miss Bly, who was born in 1864 and started her newspaper career as a teenager on the Pittsburgh Dispatch, gained global attention in 1889 while she was working for the New York World.

Her publisher, Joseph Pulitzer, sent her on a trip to beat the mark set by Phileas Fogg, Jules Verne's hero of "Around the World in 80 Days."

In 72 days, 6 hours, 11 minutes, while people around the globe read of her progress, she raced around the globe.

She also wrote stories about going under the sea in a diving bell and up in the air in a balloon, and once she posed as a mental patient for 10 days to expose abuses in an insane asylum.

She was working for The New York Evening Journal when she died on Jan. 27, 1922. She was buried in the Woodlawn Cemetery.

Why her grave went unmarked was unknown, but it was ironic since she once wrote about a neglected grave in Mexico that bore "no mark of loving hands."

The reporter got her pen name from an editor who selected it from the Stephen Foster tune which opened, "Nellie Bly had a heart warm as a cup of tea." Her real name was Elizabeth Cochrane Seaman.

"Perhaps with this dedication today we can dispell loneliness from her last resting place," said Lee.

He said the Press Club's Cub Reporter of the Year award now will be named in memory of Nellie Bly.

GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN — Nellie Bly, seen in a late 1800s photo, claimed world attention in 1899 when she circled the globe in 72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes. She once wrote that she pitied the sole whose undistinguished grave bore no mark of loving hands. At right, Woodlawn Cemetery employe Jeanne Capodilup examines the headstone that will be placed on Miss Bly's grave. Her Bronx, N.Y., resting place went unmarked for 56 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas Shows $214 Hike In Family Income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The median incomes for Texas families increased by $214 — 10 times more than the national increase — from 1970-75 with the largest gains made by blacks and hispanics, according to a Bureau of the Census report released Thursday.

The median family income for Texans was $12,672 in 1975, up 1.6 percent from 1970.

Black families in Texas experienced an $882 annual increase, bringing their 1975 median family incomes up 11.1 percent to $8,791.

Hispanics realized a seven percent increase — $619 — to $9,363. Whites had a $58 or 0.4 percent — increase to $13,299.

Southern families experienced a $588 increase during the period, bringing their annual median incomes to $12,443, a 4.9 percent rise. The median family income for the country showed a $21 increase to $14,094. All comparative figures in the report were based on 1975 dollars and adjusted for inflation.

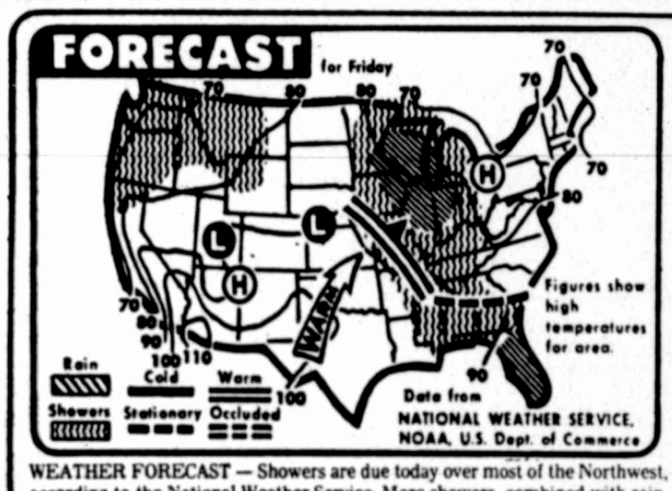

Louisiana paced the South's rise with a 13.8 percent increase to $12,576. The only area in the South to show a decline was the District of Columbia, which fell 0.4 percent to $14,001.

Maryland registered the highest median family income at $17,556, an increase of 8.1 percent. Mississippi remained the lowest at $9,999 although the state's figure rose by 12.2 percent.

The Bureau of the Census defines the South as Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas and Virginias, Kentucky, Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Whites in the South had a median family income of $13,350 in 1975, an increase of 3.2 percent since 1970. The region's blacks experienced a 12.5 percent increase to $8,177 and families of "Spanish origin" had a 1.5 percent rise to $10,009.

Airline Would Quit Route To Eastern New Mexico

HOUSTON (Special) — Texas International Airlines announced Thursday it will seek to suspend service to Clovis, Hobbs, and Carlsbad, N.M.

Airline vice president David L. Brown said TI will file an application today with the Civil Aeronautics Board to suspend service to the three communities July 1.

Brown cited "sharply decreased passenger revenue and traffic" as the primary reason for seeking the suspension.

The airline had been trying to pull out of eastern New Mexico since March but had promised local authorities it would help seek a solution to the problem withdrawal would create. The three communities would be without an air gateway to the east without the TI flights.

Brown said at least three commuter airlines, Air Midwest of Wichita, Kan., ZIA Airlines of Las Cruces, N.M., and Crown Airlines of Clovis, have expressed an interest in serving the communities.

(Lubbock Chamber of Commerce manager John Logan said late Thursday New Mexico officials had indicated to him Air Midwest would file today for authority to fly between the three cities and Lubbock International Airport.

(Logan said the company had informed the Hobbs aviation committee it would seek to replace TI in flights between the three cities, Lubbock and Amarillo.)

Texas International had proposed that all three carriers have an opportunity to serve the cities.

Lockheed Overcharge Accusation Withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office has concluded that Lockheed Shipbuilding and Construction Co. did not overcharge the government for steel used to build seven amphibious transport vessels, an aide to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says.

The Renegotiation Board, a watchdog government agency that checks into profits made from defense contracts, alleged a year ago that the company, a subsidiary of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., might have overcharged the government in building the vessels.

Missing Boy, 5, Found Safe After All-Night Search

A 5-year-old boy really was in the doghouse here Thursday morning.

Lubbock police spent all Wednesday night and most of Thursday morning looking for the child, reported missing from an E. Cornell Street residence. An aunt with whom the child had been staying told investigators he was last seen about 7 p.m. Wednesday.

After an exhaustive search of the area, police again were questioning neighbors Thursday morning in an attempt to get any clue to the boy's disappearance. Officer William H. Britt walked into the home's back yard, made a startling discovery and, suddenly, everyone rushed through the house.

The child was fine, but he had to give up his makeshift bed in the doghouse in which he had spent the night.

New Post Office Site Sought

AMHERST — The U.S. Postal Service is seeking a suitable site upon which to build and lease a new post office building in Amherst, Postmaster Hazel L. Davis said here.

The "preferred area" for site consideration is bounded on the north by 7th, on the east by Henderson, on the south by Washington.

Minimum site size needed is 17,250 sq. ft., or a lot with dimensions of 115 ft. by 150 ft.

Property owners are asked to submit their site offerings not later than July 19, 1978, to Ray F. Barnes, realty management and acquisition specialist, Dallas Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Drawer 239, Dallas, Texas 75221.

After a suitable site has been located, the Postal Service will call for construction bids for a building that will be built with private funds and leased to the Postal Service over a period of 30 years.

The proposed post office will have 1,858 sq. ft. of interior floor space.

Crosby Commissioners Take Action

A-J Correspondent

CROSBYTON — Crosby County Commissioners, during their regular June session, faced a contract with C.R. Law Tax Records to compile the delinquent tax roll from 1939 through 1977 at 20 cents a line.

Tom Brian also was appointed assistant county attorney, effective upon receipt of a properly executed bond.

The commissioners approved hiring an employee in the sheriff's department for a 40-hour week, and authorized the installation of a Ralls phone number there to enable the entire county to call toll free. The bond for the new Lorenzo deputy sheriff, Paul Stone, also was approved.

Unions' Pamphlet Right Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions have a legal right to distribute political pamphlets on an employer's property, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

Federal labor law protects the free distribution of union pamphlets dealing with more than purely organizational matters, the court said in a 7-2 decision.

Employers may not ban distribution of pamphlets dealing with items of union interest, even political matters, in nonworking areas of their property at reasonable times, the justices ruled.

In other decisions, the court:

— Ruled unanimously in a Boston case that hospitals may not automatically bar unions from seeking new members or distributing literature in hospital employee cafeterias and coffee shops.

— Refused unanimously to help settle a dispute between California and Texas over the estate of millionaire recluse Howard Hughes. Each state claims it is entitled to collect sizable inheritance taxes on Hughes' estate because he was a resident of that state.

— Struck down as unconstitutional, also by a 9-0 vote, an Alaska law that gave state residents preference in being hired by private employers in the oil and gas industry.

— Voted 6-3 in refusing to invalidate on constitutional grounds the way Dallas elects its 11 city council members. The case now returns to a federal appeals court, which last year struck down the system as discriminatory against blacks and Mexican-Americans.

The political pamphlet case came from Silsbee, Texas, where in 1974 the Eastex Corp., a paper products manufacturer, banned the distribution of certain union literature on company property.

Members of the United Paperworkers union had sought to distribute leaflets that urged workers to oppose a proposed "right to work" amendment to the Texas Constitution and attacked then-President Richard M. Nixon for vetoing a proposed increase in the minimun wage.

Eastex denied the union permission to do so, claiming that such material was not protected under that section of the National Labor Relations Act that allows unions to engage in activities "for the purpose of mutual aid or protection."

The National Labor Relations Board and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals disagreed with Eastex, which had hoped that the Supreme Court would side with its interpretation of the law.

In an opinion by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., the court said some forms of political speech are definitely union-related and should be protected by labor law.

Powell said "there may well be types of conduct or speech that are so purely political or so remotely connected to the concerns of employees as employees as to go beyond the protection" of labor law.

But such a determination is up to the NLRB to make on a case-by-case basis, he said.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented.

"Congress never intended to require the opening of private property to the sort of political advocacy involved in this case," they said in an opinion by Rehnquist.

Ex-Officer Pleads Not Guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — Carrol Lynn, a former Houston police chief, entered pleas of innocence Thursday to a five-count federal indictment alleging perjury, obstruction of justice and extortion.

The June 12 indictment alleges Lynn, 45, extorted $25,000 from an oil company sales manager in exchange for efforts to have federal officials terminate an investigation of securities violations.

Conviction on the charges could mean up to 40 years in prison for Lynn, a 23-year police veteran who served as police chief in 1974-75. He is the highest-ranking Houston police officer ever to be named on criminal charges.

A Sept. 5 trial date was set by U.S. Magistrate Ronald J. Blask.

Lynn has been free under $50,000 bond since April 10, when FBI agents arrested him on an obstruction of justice charge.

Lynn was fired from the police force May 1 and he withdrew an appeal to the city civil service commission on May 18. Under city regulations, however, he is eligible to receive a pension totaling 36 percent of his $40,239 base annual salary or about $1,200 a month.

On recommendation from Police Chief Harry Caldwell, the city council last week abolished the assistant chief's job formerly held by Lynn.

An affidavit filed by FBI agents said Lynn was carrying $25,000 in bribe money when he was picked up April 10 near the home of John V. Holden, the former oil sales manager who is under a federal securities indictment.

Lynn also is alleged to have told Holden he would seek to have Leonel Castillo, the former Houston city controller who now is head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, to try to persuade U.S. Attorney Tony Canales to end the securities investigation.

Castillo and Canales have denied any knowledge of the alleged extortion scheme and Canales later withdrew from participation in the prosecution of the case.

The indictment named Lynn on two counts of perjury, two counts of obstruction of justice, and one count of extortion in interstate commerce.

Community Services Grant Reported

AN EDITORIAL:

No Forest, Just Buncha Trees

IT MAY BE hard to ignore a rampaging rhinoceros in the living room but the Democratic Party seems determined to try.

At its recent meeting in Washington, the Democratic National Committee fought once again over rules for choosing the party's 1980 presidential nominee, ultimately adopting guidelines which will make it harder for challengers to take on President Carter in the primaries.

Committeemen passed resolutions on everything from Carter's peace efforts in the Middle East to the racial policies of South Africa.

WHAT THEY didn't discuss, astonishingly enough, was the angry tax revolt beast which had just come charging out of California. It was the kind of oversight, deliberate or unintentional, which makes Republican mouths water.

The day after Proposition 13 was adopted 2 to 1 in California, GOP House members took to the floor in droves to cheer and stomp as one after another of them hailed the outcome.

Their Democratic colleagues, according to news reports, "sat sullenly, hands in their laps."

President Carter has proclaimed himself impressed by the message from California and has renewed his appeals to Congress for fiscal restraint and action on his tax reform and reduction proposal.

But as it now stands, the revised Carter tax plan (even if approved by Congress, which seems totally improbable) would do precious little for the middle-income voters who took up the cudgel in California.

ALTHOUGH THERE are exceptions, Democrats on Capitol Hill and elsewhere seem more interested in proving that California will suffer dire consequences from the passage of Proposition 13 than in finding responsible ways to meet public demands for tax relief and lower government spending.

But merely citing this risk, as the Democrats are doing, isn't enough. They control the Congress, and nearly all of the state legislatures.

Clearly, it is within the Democrats' power to make the tough choices necessary to reduce taxes and unnecessary government spending—without harming the taxpayers who tote the fiscal wood and water.

If the Democrats prefer to stand in front of the steam roller instead of reaching for the controls, they'll have no one to blame but themselves if they wind up getting flattened at the polls in November.

AN EDITORIAL:

Teacher Pay Hike Ill-Advised

THE LUBBOCK Classroom Teachers Association is being unrealistic in asking for an additional pay raise out of local taxes.

Teachers receive a hefty pay increase every time the Legislature meets and, in addition, get regular and automatic raises for additional years of service.

In Lubbock, they are paid $500 to $700 a year above the state scale. The average pay for Texas teachers is $12,820 per 10-month school year.

Local trustees also have raised fringe benefits for teachers here in recent years, including a generous health insurance plan.

IN ASKING THE school board for a $500 to $1,500 boost in the locally funded pay increment, a 100 percent (and up) increase, the Classroom Teachers Association demonstrates especially bad timing.

New tax notices are going out dramatically raising valuations on homes in Southwest Lubbock, just as the taxpayers are still reflecting on the passage in California of Proposition 13 not only outlawing such big jumps but even rolling property taxes there back by 50 percent.

On top of that, the Lubbock school budget is going to be beefed up to cover the expenses of busing and other requirements of a new federal court-ordered desegregation plan.

Taxpayers also are digging down to pay for new school buildings and for additional personnel and programs that the Legislature and local officials have approved in recent years.

TEXANS LONG have had a love affair with their teachers, constantly aware of the need to pay them as well as they can afford.

Just as constantly, and understandably, teachers have asked for more. One recent report pegged the average pay of teachers in Texas $1,414 below the national average.

That $12,820 average pay for Texas teachers, though, compares quite favorably with the U.S. Census Bureau's most recent report of per-family income in Texas: $12,672.

On the average, Texas taxpayers rank 34th in the nation in per-family income.

Until other wages and the cost of living in Texas get up to the national average, teachers are complaining too much in saying their own pay should equal the national average.

M. STANTON EVANS:

New Breed Of Fat Cat Purr-fectly Pathetic

WASHINGTON—Citizens who wonder what, exactly, they are getting for their federal tax money will find an answer in the current Harper's.

In a devastating article entitled "The Wealth of Washington," the monthly magazine provides a definitive rundown on the bursting affluence of the capital, made possible by the federal spending spree of recent decades.

Washington editor Tom Bethell shows that, whatever the failings of federal policy otherwise, it has succeeded in creating a new elite of official fat cats who live it up at our expense.

BY MOST AVAILABLE indices, Washington in recent years has become the richest community in the United States. According to the Marketing Economics Institute, the capital in 1976 was the most affluent metropolitan area in the nation, with an average per household income of $27,702.

This placed it ahead of Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y. ($27,422); the Bridgeport-Stamford-Norwalk area of Connecticut ($23,989); Houston, Texas ($23,672), and Sacrameto, Calif. ($21,743), among the nation's other income leaders.

Other measures of Washington wealth include the fact that the two richest U.S. counties in the 1970 census, in terms of median family income, were Montgomery County, Md. ($16,710), and Fairfax County, Va. ($15,707), bedroom counties outside the capital where many federal poverty-fighters live.

IN 1975, ALSO, Fairfax was the richest American county with a population of 50,000 or above, in terms of median household buying income ($22,321)—although in 1976 it slipped to second place in this particular sweepstakes behind hyper-inflated Anchorage, Alaska.

"The lavish spending now going on in Washington," Bethell writes, "would have warmed the heart of old Commodore Vanderbilt himself.

"The expensive restaurants ($70 or more a couple) are becoming harder and harder to get into.

"The nightly display of evening dress at the Kennedy Center keeps plenty of couturiers happy.

"Soaring property values enabled plenty of residents...to refinance their houses and spend $10,000 more landscaping their gardens."

WHAT PERMITS THE federal bureaucrats and a vast supportive apparatus of lawyers, consultants and PR firms to live so high, of course, is taxpayers' money—yours and mine—taken from us by compulsion.

Bethell shows that federal workers get paid far more than workers in private industry, although there is supposed to be "comparability" with the private sector.

There are more than 600,000 federal jobs that pay between $15,000 and $50,000 a year, and the average government salary in the Washington area in 1977 was $20,740.

Moreover, it is virtually impossible for anyone in federal service to be fired.

Civil service, government employe unions and a lack of standards by which to judge efficiency and productivity insure that hardly anyone is ever bounced.

As noted by Leonard Reed in the Washington Monthly, the discharge rate from the federal government is such that a private firm with 10 employes would have to fire one worker every 70 years to equal it.

ALL OF THIS affluence, finally, is guaranteed against the problems that afflict the rest of us.

If there is inflation (caused by federal spending practices), all the Feds have to do is push through another pay hike for themselves.

If there is a recession, they add more programs and hire more people.

Small wonder, viewing all of this, that there were inquiries in 1977 from almost 12 million people seeking federal jobs.

All in all, a pretty good system—as long as the suffering taxpayers don't get wise.

The Brighter Side

A psychiatrist who was examining a friend asked, "Do you ever hear voices without being able to tell who is speaking or where the voices are coming from?"

"Sure."

"And when does this occur?"

"When I answer the telephone."

Overheard: "He's very good to his wife—he never goes home."

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Dinner With Joey

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Health industry lobbyists unable to gain the briefest audience with HEW Sec. Joseph Califano can spend a whole evening with him here June 27—by shelling out a mere $500.

That money would enrich the campaign war chest of Rep. Andrew Maguire, a gravely liberal Democrat from New Jersey whose views collide with the lobbyists' clients.

For that $500, the lobbyists not only get "an intimate dinner" with Califano but also cocktails with the secretary of transportation, the speaker of the House and assorted congressional grandees playing key roles in health legislation.

The annual lobbyist shakedown is clearly alive and well in Washington. Pressure for campaign contributions from lobbyists is traditionally applied by Republicans and Democrats alike, though most heavily by the party in power; it can always order up cabinet members.

Jimmy Carter's non-imperial presidency and the advent of reform congressmen such as Andy Maguire have changed nothing.

WHAT IS BILLED as "an evening with two members of the President's cabinet" to help Maguire's "campaign fund" is in the grand tradition. The evening begins at 5:30 p.m. with "cocktails" at the Folger Shakespeare Library.

Rep. Paul Rogers of Florida, chairman of the House subcommittee considering health cost containment (which includes Maguire), will be present. So will two other senior members of the parent Commerce committee: Reps. John Moss of California and John Dingell of Michigan.

For lobbyists outside the health field, the pickings are joyful: Transportation Sec. Brock Adams; Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee; Rep. Thomas Ashley of Ohio, chairman of the House Special Energy Committee—even Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

That costs $100. For another $400, says the invitation, "an intimate dinner with Secretary Califano will follow the reception" at a private home nearby.

SINCE LOBBYISTS seldom penetrate the HEW secretary's inner sanctum, this provides a golden opportunity for a lobbyist to pay his fee and make his case and, more important, report juicy details to his client about dinner with Joe ("So, sir, I told Joe that...").

Califano is becoming legend for cavalier treatment of businessmen. He recently kept one health insurance executive waiting 60 minutes beyond the appointed hour, then announced he was too busy to see him.

But the secretary has no idea who his dining partners will be June 27. "The guest list is the congressman's responsibility," a Califano aide solemnly told us.

If Califano does now know who is invited, Maguire is not telling. "Are you serious?" cracked the congressman when we requested the names solicited. Maguire is the beau ideal of the famous Watergate class of 1974 elected following Richard Nixon's disgrace, advocating open government and candor.

But when we questioned him, he displayed some of the testiness and secrecy of the bad old days.

DID HE SOLICIT A list of lobbyists? "We have simply mailed to people I know or to people known by people I know or to lists provided by them," he answered. But does that include lists of lobbyists? "I've answered your question," he snapped.

Actually, Maguire probably could not supply the list. One health industry lobbyist who has never met Maguire was invited by a mutual friend to a recent planning session for the $500 affair over coffee and Danish at a Washington law firm's conference room attended by business lobbyists.

Each agreed, in chain-letter style, to produce 20 new prospects. The health lobbyist soon received from Maguire 20 blank invitations, which he mailed to his own list of 20 lobbyists.

Every health insurance lobbyist we checked had received an invitation, though few had ever met Maguire. "I wouldn't know him if he walked through my door," said one who has been rodded by telephone on three occasions since receiving his invitation.

THERE ARE SIGNS, however, that the old lobbyist shakedown may not be quite as alive and well as it used to be. One health insurance lobbyist, with a good record of Democratic party activism, has been unable to gain an audience with Califano.

Our spot check showed no acceptances yet by health insurance lobbyists, a large part of the health lobby. Only one—representing Nationwide Insurance—indicated a clear desire to go if he could get home office clearance.

The telephone prodders have their work cut out for them. Apologists say such shabby methods are necessary for electing outstanding congressmen against tough opposition.

But Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, never has solicited Washington lobbyists, nor accepted more than $50 from anybody, even when facing a strong challenge from Democrat Midge Constanza in 1974.

So there maybe there is a decent alternative to the old-fashioned Washington shakedown.

ANDREW TULLY:

For Men Only...

WASHINGTON—Male politicians from the White House down to the grimiest mayor's office should find some comfort in the comments uttered by an ad hoc comittee of women at a recent gathering of Washington free-lance writers.

Studying these comments carefully, officeholders could discern a cloud no bigger than a male chauvinist's hand hanging over the women's liberation movement—a suggestion, as it were, that females are not quite ready to show men the door.

Indeed it may be that, for all their loud talk to the contrary, the revolutionaries secretly are rather fond of the opposite sex. Mind you, these were all strong and liberated females who found themselves in a relatively quiet corner discussing their attitude toward males.

THUS, YOU COULD have knocked me over with a Midge Costanza bon mot when all seven as much as swore they were in favor of there being two sexes.

Despite the libbers' official demand that girls stop letting boys treat them as after-hours playthings, the ladies came right out and said they didn't object to being regarded as "sex objects."

A couple of them said they found that women like to look at males in swimming trunks just as much as men presumably enjoy a peep at females in bikinis.

These women writers have been making a good living for years talking and writing about the need for females to assert themselves and, if necessary, punch all men in their big mouths.

I once suffered contusions and abrasions in a manly attempt to shove one of them around when covering a state visit by Queen Elizabeth.

MALES WHO WORKED for another panelist at a European embassy still shudder at the experience.

And yet there they all were, saying things like "Love is still the name of the game," and admitting that it felt good to walk into a restaurant with a freshly-shaven guy. I perceived in their talk enormous implications for vote-seeking males everywhere.

Candidates with five o'clock shadow may yet be able to forage for female ballots free of the fear that—give or take the odd tomato—women generally hate men.

Men may not find themselves in equal terms with women candidates, but the panel's surprising tolerance suggested they still might find it possible to capitalize on woman's age-old curiosity about the male sex.

THIS IS NOT to say that women haven't changed. Any male who has ever ventured into a supermarket checkout line can testify that they are a lot more aggressive than in Shirley Temple's Hollywood days, and have louder voices.

But it could be argued that in their relations with men the girls simply wish to make the first pass, a possibility that is deliciously frightening to a male whose mother always warned him that if he let a girl hold his hand the next thing he knew she'd be snapping his garter.

Meanwhile, veterans must have found a touch of the familiar at this garrulous social. At the cash bar, at least 90 per cent of the hooch was bought and paid for by males.

Offhand Thoughts

A motorist from Pennsylvania offered a new excuse to Trooper Buck Ross when stopped for speeding. "This highway is so dangerous," said the offender, "I was just hurrying to get off of it."

JAY HARRIS:

Pass The Prayer?

IS A FOOTBALL game, with the hubbub of thousands in the stands, waiting for the kickoff, the proper—or even legal—place for a prayer?

That question has been raised at Texas Tech.

Before we examine the issue further, it should be noted here and now that Texas Tech may be the only state institution in Texas which now has a prayer at the start of such contests.

If, as we suspect, many persons' knee-jerk reaction is the same as ours, the answer to the question as to whether it is a place for prayer or not is, "Of course, why not?"

However, on more studied thought, and after talking to ministers, Tech officials, ordinary fans and others, there is another side to the coin, it turns out.

RECENTLY, THE question of prayers, not only at football games, but at other functions on the campus, was raised at a meeting of the Tech Faculty Senate.

At its May meeting, the Faculty organization endorsed and forwarded to President Cecil Mackey a recommendation, prepared by the Invocations Committee, suggesting that invocations be discontinued at football games, with no stand on prayers at other campus events.

Dr. Mackey had appointed a special committee to look into the matter after some faculty members and others questioned not only "the propriety but the legality" of prayers at such functions.

The committee was made up of the Rev. Dr. Dudley Strain, Prof. Robert Davidow, of the Tech Law School, and Prof. Murray C. Havens, of the political science department.

After considerable study at the local level and a survey of how the matter is being handled at other state colleges and universities, the group came up with what one member described as "a compromise solution."

IT WAS THAT prayers be discontinued at the grid games, with no stand on those of "a non-sectarian type" at such events as commencement exercises, banquets and such.

The final decision apparently will be left up to the Tech Board of Regents, to whom the committee's recommendation will be forwarded.

It was that body which some years ago "as a policy" decreed that "an audible prayer" would precede such athletic events as football games and presumably other public campus functions. Just for the record, prayers never have been said at Tech basketball contests, except perhaps during the closing seconds by partisans of one side or the other.

In the meantime, times and attitudes have changed. Also, those who oppose such things cite possible legal, as well as personal, objections.

As we understand it, several faculty members had complained about invocations at football games and other functions at Tech. An objection was raised we were told as a result of a prayer at the recent commencement services.

IN THE PAST, those offering the prayers, usually a Tech student or a minister, were instructed to do so in such a way as not to offend any particular religion or religious belief.

This meant "nonsectarian" in the sense of not stepping on the toes of those of any particular faith, rather "than from the standpoint of Baptists, Methodists or whatnot," Dr. Strain says.

As for the legal aspects, the committee report observes that "the Supreme Court has never specifically dealt with the question of the Constitutionality of such invocations at football games and other events at publicly supported colleges and universities."

Yet, the report noted, "two state Supreme Court decisions and two decisions of U.S. District Courts have upheld invocations in analogous circumstances." The report concluded that it is unclear how the U.S. Supreme Court might rule and that arguments can be made in support of opposing positions.

IN REACHING its decision, the committee surveyed 78 institutions "to determine the extent to which invocations are given at various publicly supported schools."

Of 49 answers, not one said prayers were given at football games. An eighth of those indicated invocations are given at other functions.

Actually, after the knee-jerk reaction to which we referred earlier, we can see a good argument as to why invocations are not appropriate in the climate of a high-strung crowd at a grid contest.

Often, the crowd is noisy, pays little attention to what is being said, and instead of a tone of reverence, just the opposite is inadvertently conveyed. In brief, it is the prayer which is demeaned by the setting and the tone of what some regard as an updated version of "the Roman games." Actually, in a facetious vein, it has been suggested that perhaps Tech should drop the prayers and return the "banned" Dixie to the bands repertoire!

AS FOR PRAYERS at other campus functions, frankly we think they are indeed appropriate.

We have never bought the idea that someone's precious personal prerogatives are being infringed upon by someone asking God's blessing upon those present, their thoughts, their deeds. If "they" don't want it, they can always ask Him to count them out!

Just for record, it is not that someone would object to such things that disturbs us as much as we see it as a continuation of the nit-picking and fractionalizing of a society and a nation.

After all, we've got along pretty good these 200 years with some longtime traditions and still maintained the highest form of individual Freedom known to man. Someone must have done a lot of praying in the process...

...Pass It On

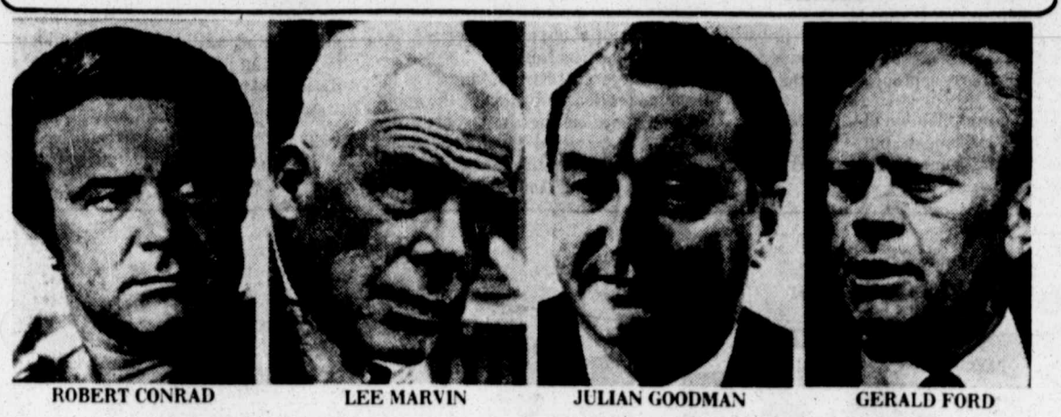

Q. "WHAT ARE the three longest running TV shows?"

A. "Meet the Press," almost 30 years, and "Search for Tomorrow" and "Love of Life," both almost 26 years.

How many definitions can you come up with for the word "fast"? Like: Immobile. Speedy. Abstinence from food. And sometimes to describe a person of easy virtue. Any others?

Was in 1950 that Great Britain's Parliament passed a law known as the Shop Act which permits the Britains now to sell fish or chips but not fish and chips, fresh milk but not canned milk, paperback books but not hard covers and "Playboy" but not The Bible.

Ford Ignores Betty's Pleas

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford is ignoring pleas from his wife, Betty, that he stay free of politics and spend more time at home with her, according to McCalls magazine.

Mrs. Ford reportedly wants her husband to count himself out of the race for president in 1980. Although Ford's frequent absences are said to be the cause of his wife's problems with alcohol and drugs, he has maintained a whirlwind political schedule, close friends say.

'Merry Women' Ride Again

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Robin Hood would have approved.

University of Colorado police investigating bicycle thefts on campus have concluded six middle-aged dormitory housekeepers were the culprits.

"We call them the Over-The-Hill Gang," Detective Rick Johnson said Wednesday. "One woman said she gave three bikes to underprivileged children in her neighborhood."

Johnson said the women used bolt cutters to snap locks on 10 bicycles left parked in bike racks at semester's end.

A county official said no charges have been filed.

"It's hard to prove which maid took which bike and with the Robin Hood aspect of the case it would be tough to convince a jury to convict anyone," said Johnson.

Drinking Drivers Ire Eire

DUBLIN (UPI) — The government proposed a new law under which driving after drinking as little as three pints of beer could land an Irish driver in jail for six months.

Tough new measures to chase drunken drivers from highways were expected to move quickly through parliament, government spokesmen said.

The new laws quintuple fines for drunk driving — to $925 — and set blood alcohol limits at the equivalent of three pints of beer. Refusal to provide specimens of breath, blood or urine for analysis will be punished by up to six months in jail or a $925 fine.

Unborn Child Ruled Fatality

POMONA, Kan. (AP) — The official death toll from a tornado that swamped the Whippoorwill showboat rose to 16 Thursday when an eight-month-old fetus carried by its mother was counted as a fatality.

One of those who drowned in the Saturday night tragedy on Lake Pomona was 25-year-old Judy Patterson of Topeka, Kan., who was eight months pregnant. Osage County Attorney Mike Hines said in a letter to Coroner Dwight Adams that he was ruling the fetus a fatality.

Mrs. Patterson's husband was among 45 survivors of the accident.

NBC Chief Blasts Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — The recent Supreme Court ruling that police may, without notice, obtain warrants to search news offices and seize materials is "a major obstacle to effective news gathering," NBC Board Chairman Julian Goodman said Thursday.

Goodman urged passage of legislation "to protect the press from unannounced searches and seizures and to require police to proceed by subpoena, with notice, if they believe a news entity possesses evidence of a crime."

The recent court case involved the Stanford University newspaper, the Stanford Daily.

Frisbee-Catching Dog Honored

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Zeke the Wonder Dog, your state legislators love you — and they sometimes have funny ways of showing it.

Zeke, a 3-year-old Labrador retriever, was honored by the legislature Thursday for his Frisbee-catching finesse which has delighted sports fans across the country.

Last week, lawmakers approved a resolution honoring Zeke "as possibly the youngest and smallest athlete ever to sport a Michigan State University varsity letter."

The measure also praised the "public-minded pooch" for helping raise money for various public charities.

The resolution was sponsored by the Legislature's own top dog, Democratic House Speaker Bobby Crim.

"We've given resolutions to a lot of people over the years, but this is the first time I can recall we've ever given one to a dog," Crim said in making the presentation on the Capitol lawn.

The resolution was attached to a Frisbee and tossed to Zeke, who expertly caught it and then sat down under a tree to rest.

Marvin Filming 'Big Red One'

TEL AVIV (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin arrived in Israel on Thursday to film "The Big Red One," a story about the U.S. 1st Infantry Division in the two World Wars.

Marvin portrays a sergeant in the $5 million film, which will recreate European and North African locations in Israel. Director Samuel Fuller plans a two-month shooting session here.

Iron Eyes Cody Wins Award

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — Indian actor Iron Eyes Cody, best known for his conservation commercials in which he cries because of littered land, has been given the 1978 Nebraskaland Days Buffalo Bill Award.

Gov. J.J. Exon, who presented the award Wednesday night, thanked Iron Eyes for his "contributions to family entertainment" in the tradition of William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody. The two are not related.

Cody's face became widely-known through promotions for the Keep America Beautiful campaign. He is shown canoeing on lakes or walking in the woods with tears in his eye because of litter in his path.

Actor Enters Plea Of Innocent

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Actor Robert Conrad entered an innocent plea to a misdemeanor charge of third-degree assault in connection with an argument involving a Greeley teen-ager. Conrad, who had been in Greeley for the filming of a television movie based on James Michener's book "Centennial," was not in court this week but entered his plea through his attorney.

Curtis Coffin, 19, who was involved in the argument with Conrad, was charged with harassment and is scheduled to be arraigned June 27.

Coffin said Conrad slapped him in the face while he was parked next to Conrad's mobile home. Conrad said Coffin and other youths pounded on the sides of the mobile home and Coffin was struck in the face by a door when another person got out of the mobile home to see what was happening.

Complex Process Leads To 'Endangered' Spot

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

You've probably heard of the snail darter — the minnow that damned a dam in Tennessee. But did you know about the orange-footed pimpleback pearly mussel? Or its relative, the rough pigtoe pearly mussel? Or the pink fairy armadillo?

Like the snail darter, the two mussels and the armadillo are officially listed as endangered or threatened species, along with 661 other animals and 17 plants.

How did all these creatures get on the list? Who goes around counting them? What do they do that makes them important?

An endangered species is one "that is in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant portion of its range," said John Spinks of the Interior Department's Office of Endangered Species.

The species does not have to be an important one; it does not have to make any contribution to the environment.

"It merely has to exist as a biological entity," Spinks said.

Plants and animals which may be heading toward extinction, go on the "threatened" list, he added, explaining that a threatened species is "something that hasn't reached a basket case (stage)."

There is a complex procedure involved in deciding whether something is endangered or threatened. "We don't just say, 'Aha! This looks good,' and list it," Spinks said. "There is a very specific process."

When the office learns of a potentially endangered species — through an environmental or other group, or from a scientist, for example — it begins an investigation using "accepted sampling techniques for various types of organisms."

Spinks said the techniques depend "on which kind of critter it is." In some cases, where a species ranges over a wide area, the counting is complicated. In others, where a species is limited to a confined area, the creatures "are counted directly — one by one."

If the agency believes a species qualifies for endangered or threatened status, it makes a proposal and publishes it in the Federal Register. Comment is solicited and analyzed.

"Depending on the kind of feedback we get, we go to a final ruling process which might actually list the species," Spinks said.

Many of the creatures on the list are familiar — whooping cranes, grizzly bears, tigers, leopards and some wolves, for example. Others draw giggles. "A number of the mussels have common names that invoke a degree of hilarity on the parts of certain people," Spinks said.

"Our objective is not to put things on the list, but to get things off the list," he added, explaining that the agency has managed to build up the alligator population to the point where the reptile's status has been downgraded from endangered to threatened.

There are more creatures waiting to take their places. About 1,800 plants and 100 animals are under consideration.

Caribbean Island Debates Date Of Independence

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (UPI) — For Premier John Compton, the question is not if the tiny island of St. Lucia will become independent, but when?

Backed by a majority in the island's parliament, he has asked Britain for independence by Dec. 13, and although a vocal opposition is asking for delay, compton is slowly pushing toward his goal.

One of a string of British associated states in the eastern Caribbean, St. Lucia will become an independent county of 138 square miles and 120,000 inhabitants.

The island's economy now is based on banana exports, but Compton hopes construction of the $150 milliom Hess Oil refinery and transshipment terminal will generate greater prosperity and employment.

The premier is also relying on assistance from Venezuela to modernize seaports and expand water services, and he is looking at a plan to harness cheap electrical power from the gasses of Sulphur springs, a bubbling volcano and a tourist attraction.

Of the five British-associate state neighbors, Antigua is the only one shying away from an early plunge into independence. Three others — St. Kitts, St. Vincent, and Dominica — have approached Britain for independence, but opposition parties also are creating roadblocks.

Montserrat and Anguilla have chosen to remain British overseas territories indefinitely.

Compton, a lawyer who has won three general elections since coming to power in 1964, feels he has accelerated the move toward independence in the past 12 months.

He is trying to override an opposition Labor party demand for another general election before independence.

In April 1977, Britain requested Compton publish for public debate a consultative document spelling out the advantages he saw in independence and possible changes to the existing constitution to make it appropriate for a soverign state.

This assignment has been completed, and in more talks seven weeks ago, the Compton government was asked to circulate a draft constitution for further debate.

According to Ted Rowlands, British minister in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, when satisfied with the outcome of the consultation process, he would be prepared to call a full dressed constitutional conference towards the end of July.

Such a conference would automatically pave the way for independence.

The argument being put forward by the opposition is that the majority of St. Lucians are not in favor of independence, although to date, the party has little backing.

How much consideration Britain is giving to the opposition's contention is not known.

The draft constitution currently in circulation proposes no major changes to that now in use. It expands on the rights of citizens to include the right to privacy and the right of persons to be compensated for property appropriated by the state.

It proposes retention of the 19-member elected Parliament, but increases the number of nominated members from three to five.

As in the associated statehood constitution, the proposed new charter would include a clause making provision for the establishment of a senate or upper house if this became necessary.

The government has set June 30 as the deadline for the submission by the public of comments on the draft constitution and has empowered the Independence Constitution Committee, drawn from the house of Assembly, to sit in public if necessary to receive further suggestions.

The committee was appointed in August 1976, when the house adopted a resolution calling on the British government to grant the island its independence "at the earliest possible time."

The opposition, which was given two seats on the six-member committee, has so far boycotted all deliberations by that body as part of its overall protests.

Test Your Skills To Cope With Basic Household Tasks

By Science Research Associates

It's no secret that families in the 1970s are quite different from families of 20 or 30 years ago. Today, it is not uncommon for all adults in the household to work outside the home. There may be fewer children — sometimes none. Household tasks may be determined by one's desires and skills, rather than by one's sex.

Also, as in many other areas of life technology has brought to household management rapid, more efficient ways of cooking, cleaning and decorating. Yet, decisions must still be made about what is best suited for one's own budget and needs.

The skills for running a household often are taken for granted, although this area of knowledge is so basic that it can greatly affect other aspects of one's life.

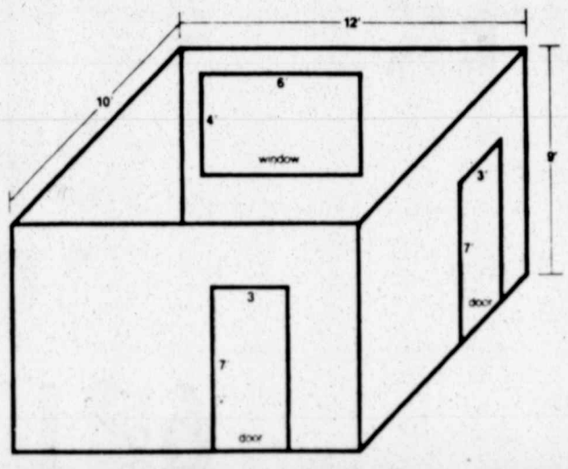

Finding, furnishing, and maintaining a place to live, and taking care of oneself as an adult, require special skills and a good bit of specialized information. Often, the success a person has in doing all this adds comfort, joy, and zest to the rest of one's life.

Another area of concern is nutrition. A number of authorities have speculated that Americans eat not only too much but unwisely, which often results in numerous physical and psychological problems.

The questions included in this section of the SRA Coping Skills Test are designed to assess your knowledge of basic household tasks and nutrition, including maintenance, cooking, cleaning, minor repairs, and some shopping tasks.

Mark the answers you think are correct, then turn to page 15B to see how you score in managing your household.

New Residents Refute Dog Abandonment Charge

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Bando is not exactly a name to put alongside Bob, Son of Battle, Lassie and Rin-Tin-Tin; but the little dog is certainly becoming a cause celebre all the way from Ohio to West Texas.

It all started after the Theodore Whaley family moved from South Russell, Ohio, to Lubbock and an Ohio newspaper reported — in touching detail — that the family dog, Bando, had been abandoned.

Now Bando's in a foster home and the Whaleys think they've had a bad rap hung on them.

The Whaley family moved here May 31, and 15 days later the Chagrin Valley Herald Sun came out with a front page story saying, in part, "Old Bando probably didn't think too much about it when the Whaleys packed up their belongings over the Memorial Day weekend and pulled out of the driveway, leaving him tied to his red, white and blue dog house."

The Ohio weekly newspaper reported that South Russell Police Chief Robert Hamilton verified "old Bando" abandoned and Valley-Save-A-Pet picked up the dog.

But Whaley, now quality control manager at G&H Castings Corp. in Slaton, said Tuesday the 7-year-old dog was being cared for by his oldest daughter, Sue Matsik, who lives near the family's former house in Ohio.

Whaley said his daughter had been feeding the pet and had found a home for it when Bando came up missing from his patriotically painted doghouse. He explained that the dog, which had never known other masters besides the Whaleys, could not be brought to Lubbock until he found a house that would accommodate Bando.

The Whaleys now rent a house on 55th Street, and their landlord will allow only one dog and a cat. The family took Bando's 15-year-old mother, Frisky, and a cat named Ebony.

The Chagrin Herald Sun paints a sad picture in parts of its story; such as, "Bando, you see, is — or was — the Whaley family dog. He had it pretty good, too, for a while there. His own hand-painted red, white and blue dog house, with his name over the door and everything."

The story is accompanied by a picture of Bando — a cute, long-haired animal — tied up to a for sale sign post in front of the Whaley's old home.

"The family is attached to it (Bando)...just a nice gentle dog that's very friendly and very playful," says Whaley.

"I lived in that community for 10 years and have quite a few friends living there. It hurts quite a bit to see something like this (the Sun's article) happen when you move out," he said.

Whaley's 16-year-old son, Mike, who claims Bando as mainly his pet, said his family learned of the weekly newspaper's article through friends in South Russell, a town about 20 miles east of Cleveland.

"We had figured he was already in a safe home, and when we got the article we were very shocked," Mike said. "Now we don't know how we're going to be able to get him."

Timy Sullivan, a Herald Sun reporter who authored the first story on Bando, told the Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that Bando was staying at a "foster home" — a kennel in the backyard of a Save-A-Pet member. The group, which takes care of injured and abandoned pets, took Bando from his old home on June 6, she said.

Mrs. Sullivan stands by her story, but said she was unable to contact the Whaley family about their alleged abandonment of Bando. She said she based her story on accounts from the neighbors, the police chief and Jackie Kaplansky of Save-A-Pet.

The Geauga County dog warden was going to pick up Bando, "but Jackie Kaplansky of Save-A-Pet got there first. She put Bando in a foster home, where he is now waiting to be adopted," Mrs. Sullivan's story reads.

However, Mike said he talked to Mrs. Kaplansky three times, and each time was told Save-A-Pet could not help find Bando a home.

Mrs. Kaplansky could not be reached by the A-J.

Mrs. Sullivan said neighbors told her they worried that "packs of wild dogs" might hurt Bando while he was chained up. She said she was told the dog had not been fed or watered for five days.

However, she said that Bando appeared to her to be "in good health, very friendly and certainly did not look mistreated."

Mike said he has written and sent the "true story" to the Herald Sun, whose acting editor said the weekly will follow up on the story since the A-J decided to print the Whaley family's version of the incident.

As for Bando, well, he's probably thinking it really is a dog's life.

Control Over Lending Agency Denied

By FRANK PATRICK

The defense Thursday elicited testimony on cross-examination from a key government witness to bolster its assertion that W. Jaye Ford exerted no clandestine control over Slaton Savings and Loan Association in 1973.

Edward T. Miller, former owner and chairman of the board of the association, said the board of directors made all key decisions.

"Isn't it true Mr. Ford never had any control over Slaton Savings and Loan?" Houston defense attorney Tom Sims, representing Ford with local attorney Clifford Brown, asked point-blank.

"That's correct," Miller answered.

Miller went on to indicate that he, even as majority owner, did not exercise absolute sway over the organization.

"The board ran things," Miller said.

The testimony came near the end of the first day of testimony in Ford's criminal trial, being conducted here before a six-man, six-woman jury in U.S. District Court.

Because of a problem with tape recordings which the government may put into evidence, testimony will not resume until 9 a.m. Monday.

Government prosecutors alleged Ford, 36, of Dallas, and Miller were involved in a conspiracy to manipulate resources of the Slaton financial institution.

Other counts of the indictment returned against the pair in April accused them of making false statements to a local bank in connection with the sale of the business in 1974.

Miller, 45, of Dallas, pleaded guilty last week to one of the counts accusing him of making a false statement, but did not plead guilty to the conspiracy counts.

Prosecutors agreed to drop the remaining counts against him, partially in return for testimony in Ford's trial.

Miller indicated Thursday that Ford, as his original financial backer in the savings and loan business, was consulted by him for advice on business dealings.

But he indicated neither he nor Ford were in a position to dictate business deals to the board.

One part of the indictment alleged that Miller and Ford caused the association to loan Bay Tree $500,000 for the purchase.

"Wouldn't it be fair to say Mr. Ford didn't force Slaton Savings and Loan to make the loan to Bay Tree?" Sims asked on cross-examination.

"He didn't force them," Miller said incredulously.

Miller said the board of directors was "proud" of the Bay Tree sale. "We were tickled pink," he said at one point.

The government charges that Ford was connected with the savings and loan and acted as its agent while at the same time being connected with Bay Tree.

In earlier testimony, the government introduced a letter indicating Miller, in Ford's opinion, had been acting for him when he purchased control of the association.

The letter — purportedly signed by Ford — was addressed to Frank R. Young, who sold majority interest in the association to Miller in 1972.

The alleged correspondence from Ford to Young said Miller was acting in Ford's behalf in the purchase.

Miller later testified he had never seen the letter.

Along with Young, the government presented testimony from Lubbock real estate man and developer W.B. "Dub" Blankenship.

Blankenship testified that Ford had approached him about buying the savings and loan for a price of about $1.6 million.

The witness said he believed several discussions of the matter between him and Ford took place in late 1973 and early 1974.

At one point during the same approximate time span, Blankenship testified, Ford had discussed with him the possibility of putting Blankenship's son on the board of directors. The witness said Ford told him he would have to discuss the matter with Miller.

Blankenship said his son later served on the board.

Launch Of Trident Missile Goes Awry

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP) — An undetermined problem with the second stage of a Trident missile launched Thursday from Cape Canaveral in a test caused it to crash "somewhere" in the South Atlantic, the Navy said.

A spokesman said no people or land were endangered.

The test was part of a $21 billion program to upgrade the nation's fleet of ballistic missiles.

Navy officials said it might be a couple of days before the cause of the problem is uncovered. They said the rocket did not explode and that no destruct signal was sent to the missile.

It was the 13th Trident launch and the second failure.

The Trident has a normal range of 4,600 miles with a nuclear warhead and 6,200 miles with a lighter payload. At least seven more Trident tests, and possibly as many as 12, are scheduled. It is scheduled to become operational in 1979.

'Problem Solver' Nabbed Near Nazi Headquarter

CHICAGO (AP) — A man describing himself as a "self-employed problem solver" was arrested Thursday near National Socialist Party of America headquarters with six fire bombs in his car, police said.

Irving Lewis, 28, was charged with possession of explosives. He told investigators he had planned to toss the fire bombs into the rear of Rockwell Hall in an attempt to "burn down the Nazi headquarters," said Sgt. Harold Ziegler of the police bomb and arson unit.

Above, pelican patients often resided in the bathroom of the Collett house when recovering from surgery. Rosemary Collett is quick to point out that their home contained two bathrooms. Rescue, Care Of Wild Creatures To Be Slide Show Topic Here

By TED SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

It isn't uncommon for a person in his or her lifetime to encounter an animal of the wild that has been injured or orphaned. For the human, the encounter usually brings about a predicament: how can the animal be helped?

The experience may happen only once, or it can occur frequently, depending on where you live, work, or your interests. For Mr. and Mrs. George Collett of North Carolina, rescuing and caring for native wildlife is an every day experience.

Over the years, the Colletts have had so much success in rehabilitating hawks with broken wings, force feeding oil-soaked pelicans, designing cages for orphaned raccoons and preparing diets for displaced armadillos that their expertise is sought by wildlife organizations and interested individuals across the nation.

Rosemary Collett is the author of "Rescue and Home Care of Native Wildlife" published by Hawthorn Books Inc. The book — originally published by J.B. Lippincott Company and titled "My Orphans of the Wild" — has become a bible of wildlife care for nature centers and a valuable reference for individuals who want to help orphans of the wild.

Chapter one of the book begins: "I have raised and released over thirty raccoons, twenty-five of them from infancy on the bottle." The author told this writer, "When we first started our work, we had an acre of ground in Venice, Florida. We named our home, Casa de Felicidades, Home of Happinesses. We liked to think that our home was a happy place for our wildlife patients."

At one time there were more than a hundred patients in and around the six-room house. The dining room table was covered with cages full of baby birds, a pelican favored a bathtub, seagulls limped around the patio, a pair of baby raccoons turned up by a bulldozer were thriving on a special formula, an orphaned skunk brought to the front door (carefully) had a corner of its own, squirrel cages took up a large part of the living room, and more cages with assorted patients lined the porch.

Word of the Colletts' tender loving care for wild animals spread and the responsibility grew, but at the same time the couple's personal funds were depleted. It became apparent that there was a need to share the knowledge the naturalists had acquired from their library of books, years of experience and the invaluable help of Dr. Suddaby, their veterinarian.

The Colletts oranized the Felicidades Wildlife Foundation. A move was made to North Carolina and a program was started whereby the naturalists could present lectures to schools, clubs and wildlife facilities. Felicidades Wildlife Foundation Inc. now disseminates information to help more people to rescue injured and orphaned wildlife.

"We only have 10 patients right now, because we are more into introducing other people into sharing our concern," said Mrs. Collett. "Presently we have a baby groundhog. She's about seven weeks old, and still on a bottle." The naturalist laughed, "She's so homely, she's cute!"

While some injured animals may seem easy to rescue, they should always be handled with caution. While transporting an injured cormorant (they're the dark birds you see at the coast diving for fish, and then perching on pilings with outstreched wings) Mrs. Collett was holding the bird on her lap.

The sharp beaked bird had a broken wing and appeared to be uncomfortable while riding in the car.

"Like a fool I released my hold on its bill," related the naturalist-lecturer. "In a flash the cormorant around and slashed both of my lips. For several weeks I looked like a Ubangi maiden with my swollen lips."

Such incidents are in a slide show titled "Wall to Wall Wildlife" that the Colletts will present in Lubbock next week. The popular program recently came to the attention of Mrs. Alvalene Barron, a Lubbock resident and friend of Rosemary Collett.

Mrs. Barron explained "One day Rosemary called to say she and her husband would be presenting a wildlife program in Estes Park, Colo., and wondered if an organization here would be interested in sponsoring the program."

The Lubbock woman, a member of the Llano Estacado Audubon Society, passed along the information and soon had an invitation for the Colletts to present their program in Lubbock.

"I know her program here will be most interesting," said Mrs. Barron. "It's the type of show that will be entertaining and informative to every person interested in wildlife."

Mrs. Barron and Mrs. Collett first met when they were selected by WARN (Women Against the Ravishment of Nature) to accompany 10 other women to attend symposiums in East Africa concerning endangered species.

"The purpose of the trip was to study the plights of the animals and upon returning to the U.S. present talks on the subject," noted the Lubbock resident. "The main objective was to lessen the desire of affluent people to wear the spotted furs."

Mrs. Barron said of her safari friend, "Rosemary has always done her best to not make a pet of an animal that can be returned to the wild. Her main purpose is to return wild animals to their natural place in the wild."

In her book Mrs. Collett writes, "I, personally, do not approve or de-fanging wild creatures. If an animal is so dangerous that such procedures must be followed, that animal should not be kept in captivity in the first place, and certainly not in a home."

The naturalist writer-photographer emphasizes that if such de-clawing or de-fanging has taken place, then that animal should never be released to the wild. Release of such an animal would be a certain death sentence.

Wall to Wall Wildlife is first of all an entertaining show with many humorous incidents pictured in the Collett home as skunks, rabbits, ducks, and songbirds take over the private lives of their benefactors.

The show also includes important information pertaining to the rehabilitation of native wildlife. Persons attending the program and meeting the Colletts will learn that permits are needed to keep wildlife regardless of your intentions; the old rule that if a skunk is picked up by the tail, the animal can't "fire" is false; if you get "hit" by a skunk, a bath in tomato juice removes the skunk's perfume from your body; domestic rabbits should never be released in the wild — they are not prepared to live such a life; if an animal appears sick, it may have rabies — contact an official agency to handle the problem; don't shoot a rabid animal in the head — the head is needed for laboratory analysis; after handling any sick or injured animal, always wash your hands with an antiseptic soap.

The Colletts believe we are the stewards of this planet, and most people want to help injured or orphaned animals. To that end George and Rosemary Collett have dedicated their lives. Their tender loving care requires even more of their time and patience. A case in point from Rosemary Collett's book:

"Tiny baby raccoons should be fed about every two hours, day and night, which means setting an alarm clock.

"I always burp my raccoon babies after feeding; they need it. I burp them just like a human baby. If this method doesn't produce a belch, I try rubbing gently in a circular motion between the shoulder blades.

"The baby also must have a bowel and bladder action after feeding, but it can't do it alone. Mother raccoons take care of this by licking the little one. I do it by gently stroking the baby's tummy and groin until I get results." Tender loving care — plus time and patience.

Eventually the moment comes when a rehabilitated animal should be released to the wild. For the animal's benefactor it can be a poignant and apprehensive moment and human tears are not uncommon. That moment has been experienced an unknown number of times by Rosemary Collett.

She recalled a red-tailed hawk that had a severe back injury and infection. The administering of daily medication to a mature bird of prey can be a difficult and dangerous task. After approximately six weeks of care, the hawk was recovered enough to make it on its own.

During the recovery period, Mrs. Collett had become attached to the bird, but she took the hawk to a state park and released it. "It was a beautiful thing to see as she went flying off," recalled the naturalsit. "That is what it is all about."

Rosemary K. Collett of the Felicidades Wildlife Foundation of Waynesville, N.C., holds little Albert, left, one of over 100 orphaned raccoons hand-raised by Mrs. Collett. All the raccoons have been rehabilitated and released. Center, she shows some hand-raised squirrels that have been released. Mrs. Collett stresses to all her audiences that no wild animal was ever born to be a pet. At right, Nicholas skunk is a valuable educational tool. He aptly illustrates the problems of exotic pets whose owners tire of them.

Naturalists To Present Slide Show

An extraordinary slide program by naturalist-author-photographer-lecturer Rosemary K. Collett will be presented by the Llano Estacado Audubon Society and the Lubbock Humane Society on Friday, June 30.

With her husband, George Collett, the woman naturalist has worked for 14 years in caring for and rehabilitating injured and orphaned native wildlife. Mr. and Mrs. Collett have received many awards for their work.

The slide program, Wall to Wall Wildlife, tells of rescues and releases of numerous mamals and birds. The pictures illustrate the joys and frustrations of hand-raising infant birds and of administering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a sea gull, of raising a free-flying great horned owl in their home. Accompanying the Colletts will be a number of their wildlife patients.

Wall to Wall Wildlife will be presented June 30th at 7 p.m. in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Company. The program is free to the public.

Bell Wants Surveillance Limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin Bell argued Thursday for a law setting limits on foreign intelligence gathering activities in the United States, saying it is needed to restore the public's confidence in intelligence agencies.

Currently there are no restrictions on gathering intelligence, including the use of warrantless wiretaps, if the actions are taken against foreign nationals or foreign agents in this country.

Bell said the proposed law, which would require either the attorney general or a special court to approve such intelligence gathering, "is infinitely better than the present system where there are no safeguards at all."

He responded to Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., who called the current lack of restrictions an "abomination" but at the same time said the proposed legislation might be unconstitutional because it could violate individual privacy.

But Bell told the House Judiciary subcommitte considering the bill that with the proposed law "you not only gain protection, you gain public confidence in the system."

The Senate has already approved overwhelmingly one version of the bill and the House Intelligence Committee has recommended another.

The latter bill, which is the one the subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice will work from, involves all three branches of government in granting authority for foreign intelligence surveillance.

One of the most controversial features is a special court to be named by the Supreme Court chief justice which would screen applications from the attorney general for wiretapping authority if a U.S. citizen might be intercepted. Under the proposed law, the attorney general could authorize such a wiretap if only a foreign national or foreign agent is involved.

Another witness, former CIA director William Colby, acknowledged the need restrictions on such intelligence gathering, but he suggested that the category of foreigners who could be bugged be broadened. He said the government ought to be free to wiretap foreign visitors if there is a chance that some useful information might be obtained.

Colby joined Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., in opposing the establishment of the special court. McClory called its inclusion in the plan an example of "overkill and overreaction." Colby said it was inappropriate to involve a judge in the degree of detail which would be required.

"With the new (oversight) committees in the Congress and a clear public charter, we do not need to overcomplicate the structure and delineate every fine line in this difficult field," Colby said.

OSHA Official Says Agency Can't Probe Federal Units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's safety and health agency, with broad powers to crack down on hazards in private workplaces, says it is powerless to inspect federal agencies, where worker-related injury and illness cost taxpayers billions of dollars a year.

That is why, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration says, it is seeking presidential authority to police government workplaces too.

"We're hoping to get more authority to provide better protection for federal workers," Clinton Wright, an OSHA official, said Thursday.

"Some agencies cooperate a great deal with us," said Mrs. Wright, who is responsible for overseeing safety and health programs for federal agencies. "Other times, we have problems."

She said work-related illnesses and injuries last year among the five million federal employees is estimated to have cost the government $5 billion, including sick pay, loss of worker time, disability compensation and other factors.

Mrs. Wright's office is drafting an executive order that if approved by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and President Carter would give OSHA new powers to crack down on hazards in other agencies.

In a letter accompanying the proposed order, Mrs. Wright wrote that a lack of vigilant enforcement of health and safety rules by government agencies has resulted in "an unacceptably high price to pay, both in tax dollars and in lives lost or seriously disrupted."

Carter also complained about inadequate federal safety and health programs in a cover letter to an annual report on the subject sent to Congress earlier this month.

"The report indicates that not all agencies of the federal government have in the past fully followed guidelines set forth by the Department of Labor for workplace safety and health programs," Carter wrote.

"This administration is studying ways to improve the workplace safety and health efforts of all federal agencies, including those programs that affect federal employees," he said.

Each federal agency now is required by executive order to draw up its own safety and health program and conduct its own in-house inspections to see that the programs are being enforced.

Mrs. Wright's office is available for consultation, to propose safety and health programs and to promote such activities, but it cannot impose programs on agenices or conduct inspections.

The report to Congress, which reviewed 1976 safety and health programs, concluded:

"Although some federal agencies could honestly report significant achievements in their development and implementation of effective occupational safety and health activities during 1976, the majority of agencies ... showed a pattern of unresponsiveness to the executive order or the Labor Department guidelines."

The report also noted that the agencies' "top management, on the whole, gave minimal attention" to safety and health programs.

The leaders of military agencies in general were the most indifferent and least cooperative, OSHA officials said.

Credit Cards Approved For Political Donations

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — In what might be called a "vote now, pay later" decision, the state Board of Elections has ruled that credit cards may be used to charge political contributions.

Under state law, all contributions of more than $100 must be "in the form of a check, draft or other instrument payable to the candidate, political committee or treasurer and signed or endorsed by the donor."

As long as the credit card company and the political committee have contracts, the signed credit card slip satisfies the donor identification required by the law, said Remo Acito, chairman of the board.

Fugitive Sans Bullet Shot

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A fugitive who held a woman hostage for six hours may have fired his last shot before he was felled by a police shotgun blast, Madison Police Chief David Couper said Thursday.

Filemon Amaro, 33, emerged from a car, gun in hand, six hours after he allegedly shot and killed one sheriff's deputy, wounded another and took Nellie Gurrath hostage. Officers said the gun was pointed at one of the men who had been negotiating with Amaro and that some of the police opened fire without orders.

Amaro was being held under heavy police guard Thursday at a Madison hospital.

Waukesha County Sheriff's Deputy Michael Geszvain was killed and Sgt. Quin O'Brien was critically wounded in a courtroom scuffle, 60 miles from Madison, which began the drama.

Waukesha County Judge Neil Nettesheim said a hearing on a sexual assault charge against Amaro had just concluded when Amaro grabbed Geszvain's gun. The two struggled and the gun went off. As others in the courtrooom took cover O'Brien was wounded. At least four shots were fired during the fight in the courthouse.

Minutes later, as he fled, Amaro abducted Mrs. Gurrath.

The car into which Amaro forced Mrs. Gurrath later was spotted in Madison, where police disabled it by shooting at the radiator and a rear tire and stalled it at an intersection, Couper said.

After hours of negotiation, Amaro began to get out of the car, gun in hand and Mrs. Gurrath bolted from behind the steering wheel and into the street.

A police shotgun blast knocked Amaro back into the car, and he was arrested. Geszvain's empty revolver was found near the wounded fugitive, officers said.

Mrs. Gurrath, 46, a welfare worker and former member of the Milwaukee Police Department, suffered a scalp wound either from a bullet or flying glass and remained hospitalized Thursday.

Since 1916, when meteorologists began keeping records, tornadoes have killed more than 11,000 persons in the United States and caused billions of dollars worth of damage.

Detecting Outside Help Made Easier By Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is making it easier for professors to catch students who turn in term papers they have bought instead of written themselves.

In a case involving a New Jersey company that sold research materials to college students, the Postal Service announced Tuesday a consent judgment that may form a pattern for other firms.

Plans For Skokie March Halted By Nazi Leader

CHICAGO (AP) — Nazi leader Frank Collin canceled plans Thursday for his swastika-bearing stormtroopers to march through heavily Jewish Skokie, where more than 4,000 residents are survivors of World War II Nazi concentration camps.

Collin, wearing full Nazi regalia at a news conference in his party headquarters, said the proposed march Sunday in Skokie "was pure agitation on our part to force the system to restore our rights to free speech," by granting a permit to march in a Chicago park.

"... As long as we did not have the right to free speech we had to agitate in an area where could get the most attention for our cause," he said.

Collin announced the cancellation after saying he has issued a Collin announced the cancellation after saying he has issued a "shoot-to-kill" order to members of his National Socialist Party of American against anyone "in the area of the headquarters who may do bodily harm to our members or to the building."

Collin also said he would resume his agitation in Skokie if he suspected his free speech rights were still being abridged. He added that his group would continue plans for a rally on Saturday at the downtown federal building plaza in Chicago.

Rabbi Meir Kahane, who openly has threatened violence against the Nazis if they march in Skokie, peppered Collin's announcement with taunts.

"You have no business in Chicago, come to Skokie where we can deal with you!" Kahane shouted.

Mayor Albert J. Smith of Skokie said the cancellation was a "triumph for all mankind, not just for the people who reside in our village." He immediately announced revocation of the Nazis' parade permit.

In Washington, Col. Irwin R. Ziff, national executive director of the Jewish War Veterans of the U.S.A. issued a statement saying "if Collin decides to display the Nazi contempt for humanity anywhere in the United states, the Jewish War Veterans will be there."

That organization, which says it has hundreds of thousands of members, is the oldest active American veterans' organization.

U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton formally signed an order Thursday, saying Collin's group may march in Chicago's Marquette Park without posting insurance as required by the city.

But the park district said it was studying Leighton's order and hoped to find a way to block Collin's request for a July 9 parade permit in the park.

"We haven't given him a permit and we don't want to give him one," said district spokesman Arnie Matansky.

The Jewish Federation of Chicago said it would cancel its counter-demonstration in Skokie if Collin canceled the Nazi march there. The federation said as many as 50,000 persons would be available to attend a counter-rally.

In addition, the militant Jewish Defense League has promised to bring 3,000 to 4,000 supporters to Skokie and physically attack the Nazis if they show up.

Collin also plans a rally and demonstration on Saturday in the plaza of the downtown federal building.

Mishap Kills Local Woman In Tennessee

A 39-year-old Lubbock woman, mother of four children, was killed early Thursday in Tennessee when she apparently fell out of a cab of a moving tractor-trailer rig driven by her husband.

The woman was identified as Mary Ann Gould of 206 51st St. She was traveling with her husband, C.L. Gould, west on I-40 about 38 miles east of Memphis, Tenn., when the 1:45 a.m. accident occurred.

Mrs. Gould apparently choked on some coffee, opened the cab door and accidentally fell out while the truck was moving about 60 mph, according to investigating Fayette County Deputy Bob Gaither.

Mrs. Gould was pronounced dead on arrival at Fayette County General Hospital and then taken to Fayette County Funeral Home. Her body is to be transferred to Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home here, where arrangements are pending.

A family member said Mrs. Gould was "just along for the ride" with her husband, who is a truck driver for Goulds Pumps Inc. He had taken a shipment to Cleveland, Ohio, and was on the way back to Lubbock when the mishap occurred.

Mrs. Gould is survived by her husband; two daughters, Gwendolyn and Glee Ann, and two sons, Timothy and Russell, all of the home; her mother, Mary Alice Blackwell of Newton, Miss.; two sisters, Diane Bryson of Newton and Bonnie Bleck of Fort Worth; four brothers, D.B. and John Blackwell, both of Newton, Dannie Blackwell of Meridian, Miss., and Sonny Blackwell of Borger.

Carter Luncheon Speech Tickets Going Rapidly

FORT WORTH (UPI) — The president of the Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday all but 38 of 5,000 tickets available to the public for President Carter's scheduled luncheon speech Friday had been sold.

"We anticipate we'll be sold out by the end of the day," said Bill Shelton.

One of his assistants Wednesday said ticket sales went slowly at first because the public was not aware the $7 tickets still were available from sponsoring civic clubs, newspapers and federal building outlets.

Carter's appearance in Fort Worth has been labeled nonpartisan. He will attend a Democratic party-sponsored dinner in Houston during his two-day trip to Texas.

Shots Fired In City Traffic Disagreement

A 23-year-old Lubbockite said another man fired three shots at him after a traffic-related disagreement late Wednesday.

Ronald Ray Walker of 1330 E. 24th St. told officers a car pulled up next to his vehicle in the 3300-block of Quirt Avenue about 8:45 p.m. and the driver asked the Walker if he had just passed him.

Walker told police that when he responded that he had not, a passenger in the stranger's car fired the shots in Walker's direction.

Walker, however, suffered only small cuts from flying glass when the three bullets hit the car.

Lynn Francis Robison told police that Wednesday evening someone took a $1,200 wedding ring set from a dresser in her 4804 Canton Ave. home.

Whoever broke a window of a gas station at 2829 Clovis Road late Wednesday or early Thursday made off with more than $700 worth of goods from the business, according to Fred Lee Walker of 1303 65th Drive, No. 33. Walker listed as missing more than 200 8-track tapes, cigarettes, motor oil and 20 watermelons.

Don C. Stotts of 3210 53rd St. said someone pulled a $400 canvas tarpaulin from under the chains securing it to a trailer parked at his trucking firm at 3502 Quirt Ave.

Ted Logou told police that whoever broke into his apartment late Wednesday failed to steal anything, but succeeded in causing $1,500 worth of damage to the residence.

Logou said his home at 1509 Ave. S, No. 24, was ransacked and mattresses and a couch were cut open after the unsuccessful burglars pried the dwelling's front door.

Mark Edgar Haller said that whoever broke into his car that was parked at his 4614 67th St., No. 3, residence made off with a CB radio, a spotlight, a flashlight and damaged a stereo unit in the vehicle. Haller estimated his loss at $140.

Miscreants focused their recent attentions on vehicles across the city, as two Lubbockites reported damage to their cars.

Billy W. Dockery said someone shot out the back left window of his station wagon that was parked at his 2013 70th St. home. He said it would cost about $60 to replace the window.

Jerry D. Holt of 3620 33rd St. told police someone cut tires on four different vehicle's parked at the car lot at 3801 Ave. H where he works as a salesman. Holt set the damage total at $200.

Hill Calls Hughes Will Refusal High Court Victory For Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — California's unsuccessful attempt in the U.S. Supreme Court to "short-circuit" legal paths to Howard Hughes' estate was a victory for Texas, Attorney General John Hill said Thursday.

The court Thursday refused to help settle a dispute between California and Texas over which state was Hughes' legal domicile when he died enroute from Acapulco to Houston in 1976.

"We won that case fair and square in Houston," Hill said in a news conference, referring to a probate jury's ruling in February that Hughes was a legal resident of Texas.

"They (California) ought to be forced to go into their own courts and fish or cut bait," said the attorney general, who personally argued Texas' case in Washington in March.

Hughes' estate has been valued at between $166.8 million and $1 billion. Texas has a 16 percent inheritance tax, meaning the state could receive as much as $160 million, Hill said.

By comparison, the state collects $200 million in sales taxes on utility bills annually.

California made "a deal" with the Hughes estate, Hill said, in an attempt to entice the U.S. Supreme Court to decide in its favor.

Under the agreement, California would lower its inheritance tax rate from 26 percent to 18 percent should the Texas claim be discredited.

The Supreme Court noted that each state is under no obligation to respect the findings of the other as to Hughes' domicile. California lawyers have said the estate could be assessed more in death taxes than it has in total assets.

"There's been no showing at this point that there will be any double taxation, as claimed by California," Hill said. If California wins in its courts, Hill said, he would not want to disclose his strategy.

Hill said a motion for new trial in the Houston case is pending. Following a decision on that request, the attorney general said he expects the case to be appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

Braniff Seeks Concorde Service

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International said Thursday the Civil Aeronautics Board has tentatively approved its application to provide supersonic Concorde service between Dallas-Fort Worth, Washington, London and Paris.

Braniff said it hoped it could start service by October.

The CAB told its staff Thursday to draft an order to show cause why Braniff's application to provide the SST service with Air France and British Airways should not be granted.

Under an interchange agreement with the two foreign airlines, Braniff would operate the Concorde subsonically between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington. Air France and British Airways would assume operation of their respective Concordes at Washington, with the Europe-bound passengers remaining on board for the transatlantic flight at twice the speed of sound.

Braniff's flight from Texas to Washington would be at 95 percent of the speed of sound as compared to the 80 percent of the speed of sound of conventional jets. This would reduce the flight time by 12 percent, to two hours and eight minutes

Cabrito Cookoff Scheduled

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — For those who like to keep abreast of such events, the third annual Cow Creek Cabrito Cooking Championship will feature a Dolly Parton look-alike contest this weekend.

For the great unwashed, cabrito is a well-known Texas and south-of-the border delicacy — cooked goat meat.

For the greater unwashed, Dolly Parton is well known for her song writing, singing and just plain breathing.

"Contestants in the Dolly Parton Look Alike event will only be heavily judged on a couple of major points," says Del McLane, the Supreme Allied Goat Commander. "However, singing is not required and its not necessary to have a sister named Stella."

Any Yankee who shows up and can pronounce Waxahachie (Wawks-uh-ha'-chee) correctly may get in free. Waxahachie, by the way, is Indian for "cow creek."

There will also be a queen contest. Isn't there always?

Miss Parton, in Dallas recently for a concert, was honored as residents claimed her the unofficial winner of the contest bearing her name.

"I entered one of those contests before and lost," she claimed.

The events will be held Saturday and include a seven-mile foot race. This event may stretch into Sunday for some contestants.

The Olympics include a variety of contests such as goat hollering, team egg tossing, tobacco spitting, anvil toss, donkey dunking and skillet throwing.

For those who decide to attend, just have a good time and don't let anyone get your goat.

DISCUSS WHEAT RESERVE -Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, left, chats with Reps. Keith Sebelius, R-Kan., and W. R. Poage, D-Tex., right, in Washington this week prior to testifying before a joint hearing of the House International Relations and Agriculture Committees. The hearing was held to hear testimony on the international emergency wheat reserve. (AP Laserphoto)

Wheat Reserve Plan Assurance Given Solons By Berland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland sought to reassure two House committees this week that the Carter administration's proposed wheat reserve program would not be used to depress farmers' prices.

The stocks for the government-owned reserve of 6 million tons of wheat would be bought during times of surplus and be held off the market, he said.

Some farmers fear that the grain would dumped on the market and result in lower wheat prices paid to farmers.

The reserves would not be released before the 9-million-ton farmer-owned reserves are triggered back into the market by prices 75 percent above government support levels, Bergland told the Agriculture and International Relations committees.

He said the wheat reserve program "is an important component in the administration's coordinated effort to assure that the United States can both do its part in fighting world hunger even when grain supplies are tight and protect American farmers from excessively low prices during periods of excess supply."

U.S. negotiators have been trying to secure treaties covering one reserve to stabilize commercial wheat prices and a second reserve for emergencies.

Even if the government does free emergency reserves, he said, they would be channeled only to developing countries under "the extreme circumstances in which other supplies are not available" or a nation doesn't have cash to buy from commercial sellers.

The administration-drafted legislation before the two panels contains authority for the government to buy the grain for the time when it might come under the terms of such treaties but also for disaster relief efforts before that time.

The international wheat trading agreement would establish a world range of prices for that food grain, using a multination network of government stockpiles to manipulate supplies to keep the prices within that range.

During worldwide grain shortages and famine in several poorer nations during 1973-1975, the United States, lacking a reserve, had to cut its food-aid shipments from almost 8 million tons to 2.5 million in two years' time because of heavy commercial demand for the available supplies.

Bargaining Netted Less

NEW YORK (AP) — Wage increases resulting from major collective bargaining contracts across the country last year were smaller than in any year since 1973 despite higher employment and accelerating inflation.

Crop Production Data Scheduled In Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A week from today the Agriculture Department will publish figures showing how many acres of key crops farmers will have for harvest this year, an important step in computing how much grain and other commodities may be produced.

The report, scheduled for June 30, will include how many acres of crops were planted for 1978 production and, of those, how many acres will actually be harvested this season.

Although the report will not involve yield estimates, it will give USDA experts, farmers and the industry an idea of how the crop situation is shaping up.

For example, based on surveys April 1 the departments said more than two months ago that farmers intended to plant about 80.2 million acres of corn this year and 63.7 million acres of soybeans.

The April 1 survey indicated that this year's corn acreage would be down three percent from 1977 and that the soybean acreage would increase 8 percent from last year.

But that was before the full effect of the government acreage set-aside program to curb grain and cotton production was felt. It also did not take into account what became a muddy spring for farmers in the Corn Belt and a general delay in planting this year's corn and other spring crops.

Thus, the June 30 report will show adjustments in the earlier indications of how much land farmers planted to key crops and how many acres they actually may harvest. Actual production estimates for corn and some other crops will be announced by USDA on July 11. Estimates for soybeans and cotton, however, will be delayed until Aug. 10.

Meanwhile, despite the lag in planting, the latest USDA weekly weather review issued this week shows that good weather lately helped farmers to virtually complete corn planting and practically catch up on soybean planting.

Most states in the Corn Belt had 5 or 6 days of good planting weather in the week of June 12-18, the report said. Planting was "virtually complete" by mid-month, including the corn crop in Missouri which "finally reached 94 percent" completed, a jump of 20 percentage points from the previous week.

Although planting was late in the major midwest areas, corn growth has been about normal for this time of year. Last year, however, planting got off to an earlier start and growth was ahead of the long-time average at this time.

"In the north-central states, corn emerged to good stands," the report said. "Frost nipped some stands in extreme northern areas of the region."

Corn plants were about seven inches tall in South Dakota, ranging up to 12 inches in Illinois and Minnesota, it said. A year ago, corn plants were "at least double" this year's heights in many states, the report said.

Soybean planting was 86 percent completed, close to a year ago's 92 percent progress, the report said.

"Much of the acreage now being seeded is double-cropped beans following small grains or replanted cotton fields where the cotton failed to develop a good stand," the report said.

Cotton planting in the 11 southern states advanced to 96 percent completion during the week, compared with a rate of 99 percent a year ago.

Looking at winter wheat, the report said that the Great Plains crop was rated "good" and was rapidly maturing for harvest, which "advanced rapidly across the south and was almost complete in several states."

TYPICAL QUALITIES OF HIGH PLAINS cotton will enter the Commodity Credit Corp. loan in the 1978-79 marketing year at an average of about 350 points (3.5 cents per pound) higher than in 1977-78.

Loan program premiums and discounts for 1978-crop cotton were announced earlier this month by the USDA and have been calculated on area qualities by the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

The differentials will be applied to the qualities above and below the base of strict low middling 1 1/16th inches, 3.5-4.9 micronaire, at average location.

The loan rate for the base quality is 48 cents per pound, up from 44.63 cents in 1977.

A THREE-POINT LOCATION DIFFERENTIAL was applied to High Plains warehouse points last year, dropping the base loan in this area to 44.6 cents.

Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said location differentials at approved warehouse locations for 1978 will be issued later.

With a base loan level at area warehouses of 47.95 cents, five points below the average, the High Plains base quality rate in 1978 would be 335 points above the 1977 level.

The additional 15-point gain for Plains qualities, the PCG figures, will come from discounts which should average about 15 points less than last year.

A study of 1977 and 1978 premiums and on grades and staples that normally make up more than 95 percent of the average High Plains crop reveals differentials ranging from discounts of 25 points below those of last year to premiums of 10 points below those of 1977.

Also, discounts for low micronaire cottons dropped in 1978 from five to 30 points.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME SINCE 1972 that discounts for qualities below strict low middling 1 1/16th inches have failed to show an increase, PCG officials point out. But it is the second year in a row that micronaire discounts have gone down.

The PCG attributes the reversal of the grade and staple discount trend to the excellent quality crop produced on the High Plains in 1977 and the resultant scarcity of lower qualities.

"To some extent, this probably also is true for micronaire discounts," says Donald A. Johnson, PCG executive vice president. "But the better price for low micronaire cottons also may result in part from increased use of these cottons on the open-end spinning system where micronaire is less important."

Premiums and discounts in the loan program reflect in large measure spot market quotations in the nine-month period from August through April of the previous marketing year.

Award Made In Farming Accident

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A jury has awarded $475,000 to a Cayuga County couple for a farming accident which cost the man his arm.

The six-person state Supreme Court jury unanimously found the Allis-Chalmers Corp. of West Allis, Wis., responsible for the accident that cost George Corey of King Ferry, N.Y., his arm when he tried to unclog a hay chopper that was attached to a tractor.

Attorneys for the tractor manufactor asked the judge to set aside the verdict or reduce the award.

Corey's attorney argued that the mechanism transferring power from the tractor to the hay chopper was defective, preventing the power to the hay chopper from being turned off when the tractor was operating.

While Corey was clearing the hay chopper another person turned on the tractor, entangling Corey's arm in the equipment, his lawyer said.

The jury found Allis-Chalmers responsible on six counts, including one that the tractor had been negligently manufactured and inspected.

Corey had to give up his farming operation after the accident and has been working as a custodian.

Live Hog Futures Mixed Over Pig Crop Report

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live hog futures closed sharply mixed in erratic trading Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Uncertainty stemmed from bearish expectations ahead of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's pig crop report and sharply lower cash markets. However, short covering was noted in the back months, which helped them to close near highs of the day.

The number of hogs and pigs on U. S. farms on June 1 totaled 54.9 million head, one percent above a year earlier and nearly two percent higher than two years ago, the Agriculture Department noted.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said the pig crop for the year ending this November is indicated at 87.3 million head, up one per cent from a year earlier.

The USDA said U.S. producers intend to farrow 6.25 million sows during the June-November period, up four per cent from the same time last year and seven percent higher than the corresponding 1976 period.

The breeding inventory on farms was 8.8 million head, one percent above June 1, 1977, and the hogs intended for market at 46.1 million head, was nearly one percent above both last year and two years ago.

Floor traders said the 50-state pig report should have a bullish impact on prices and looked for sharply higher moves in meat futures today.

Live hog and pork belly futures could open up the limit of 150 and 200 points, respectively, particularly in the deferreds. A move higher might even be a source of strength for the faltering cattle futures, which were locked down the limit on Thursday.

Total inventory, breeding hogs and market hogs, added one percent to year-ago figures, well below the majority of trade estimates.

In the weight breakdown, the 60-pounds-and-under category (indicating four percent fewer hogs than a year ago) was considered the most constructive aspect of the report, reflected in the very bullish ideas for deferred months in hogs and bellies.

However, some bearishness was expressed in the front months on the near-ready marketable hogs. The 200-pounds-and-over category showed a five percent gain and the 180-219-pound group increased nine percent from a year ago.

Traders pointed out that even though most of the hogs in the 200-pounds-and-up category already have been marketed, the figures cannot be overlooked. They were well above earlier expectations and, coupled with declining cash markets, could even prompt some selling of July.

Reaction to sows' farrowing intentions was mixed. June to November farrowings are expected to be up four percent from a year ago, indicating a mild expansion phase, traders said, but the general constructive tone on the rest of the report will likely overshadow this.

Farrowings in all other categories were one percent below a year ago.

Meantime, hog futures opened down the limit in nearby July and August. But the aggressive selling was tempered in other months and eventually led to higher prices.

Futures closed off 125 to the 150-point limit in the nearbys and up 10 to 85 in other contracts. Volume was estimated at 7,683 cars.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off two cents at 70 to 73 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were off $1 to $1.75, with the top at $48.50 per hundredweight in Peoria.

Slaughter was estimated at 263,000 head. Today's arrivals at the six markets are expected to total 16,800 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures recovered in the 1979 contracts to close unchanged to up 70 points while the two nearbys ended off 157 to 197, slightly up from the earlier limit loss. Sales totaled 5,895 contracts.

Technical support was noted in all but the front months after recent new season lows. However, July and August were pressured from local liquidation on bearish expectations ahead of the pig crop report.

Weakness in cash and sharply lower hog markets also led to declines in the nearbys.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off 2 1/2 cents at 49 to 53 cents per pound, f.o.b. river.

With an estimated 4,350 unfilled orders on the close, live cattle futures were locked down the limit of 150 points.

An abundance of margin calls was responsible for the large number of sellers over buyers, traders said. Volume was estimated at 3,327 contracts.

Sharply lower cash cattle markets and continued easy tone to carcass prices contributed to the weakness. Bearish expectations for the USDA's pig crop report, due after the market closed, also led to selling.

Wholesale beef was off one cent at 82 1/2 cents per pound for all weights. Cash cattle were off $1 to $3.50 with the top at $53.25 per hundredweight.

Thursday's kill was estimated at 133,000 head. The major terminals expect 3,050 head to arrive today.

Feeder cattle futures closed down the limit of 150 points, across the board. Traders estimated 900 orders left to be filled, with total volume estimated at 615 turnovers.

The break to limit declines was the second in a row, fueled by limit losses in live cattle futures and sharply lower cash feeders.

The bearish outlook for the pig crop report exerted further pressure in the market, floor sources said. The trade was comprised mainly of local liquidation with light commission hosue selling also noted in early activity.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $5, with the best quote of $67.75 per hundredweight in Dodge City. The major markets expect receipts of 1,425 head today.

Hog Production Boost Less Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hog farmers plan to boost production only 4 percent this summer and fall, well below what some experts had been expecting, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

That will mean the consumer pork supply will not expand as much next winter and in the early months of 1979 as had been thought earlier. In turn, the smaller output will help keep prices of live hogs and cattle up through the next six months or so.

Recent months of relatively high market prices for meat animals had been thought to be a trigger for sharply expanded hog production in the last half of department experts.

"The economic conditions were there but they (farmers) didn't follow through," one Agriculture Department specialist said of the report, asking not to be identified.

As of June 1, the nation's inventory of hogs and pigs was 54.9 million head, up 1 percent from a year ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

"The inventory increase was limited by death losses which were about one-fifth more than a year ago due to effects of prolonged cold weather and disease problems," the report said.

Looking at prospects for baby pig production in June through November, the report said that farmers intend to have about 6.25 million sows to farrow, a 4 percent increase from the same period in 1977 and 7 percent above the same period in 1976.

It will be this pig crop that will provide most of the nation's pork next winter and through the early months of 1979.

The report said that the June 1 inventory included 8.8 million breeding hogs, up 1 percent from a year ago, and 46.1 million market hogs that were destined for slaughter, about 1 percent above a year ago.

$6,000 Scholarship Won By Hale 4-H Club Girl

PLAINVIEW (Special) — A Hale county 4-H Club member, who is an old hand when it comes to garnering state awards, capped her achievements at the recent State 4-H Roundup in College Station earning a $6,000 college scholarship for her outstanding record of accomplishments.

Shanna Igo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merwyn Igo of Plainview, received the scholarship from the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

A May graduate of Plainview High School, she will attend Texas A&M this fall, where she plans to major in animal science.

In addition to the unrestricted scholarship, Miss Igo teamed with her puother, Kevin, to win first place in the natural resources demonstration contest at this year's Roundup. Their project explained the use fo furrow diking.

This was Miss Igo's fourth year to earn a trip to the State 4-H Roundup by winning contests at the local and district levels. Last year she was a member of a Hale County group which won first place in the share-the-fun competition.

She was a finalist last year in the State 4-H Dress Revue and has shown animals in local and district 4-H stock shows.

A member of the Halfway 4-H Club, Miss Igo has held various offices at the local and district levels, including vice president of the district 4-H council, president of her club and teen leader.

At Plainview High School, she was an officer in the student council and a member of the varsity volleyball team. She also serves as a hospital volunteer and is active in the 9th and College Street Church of Christ.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures rallied on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday.

After dropping lower in early dealings, sizable purchases by grain exporters boosted wheat and corn prices.

But the major strength was attributed to short-covering — traders buying back contracts to get out of the market before release of a Department of Agriculture report on grain stocks.

Reports that Brazil wanted to buy a large amount of U.S. corn contributed to the turnaround.

The government said that 51 percent of the nation's eligible farmers had signed up in federal programs to idle almost 24 million acres of wheat and feed-grain land.

The final figures were slightly lower than a week earlier, but analysts said they had a negligible impact on the market.

At the close, soybeans were 3 to 10½ cents higher, with July contracts quoted at $6.86½ a bushel; wheat was 3 to 4⅛ cents higher, July $3.22½; corn was 2¼ to 4¼ cents higher, July $2.59½; and oats were ¼ to ½ cent lower, July $1.35½.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 75 cents to 1.45 a bale higher Thursday.

Polka Party Goes Dry

MOORHEAD, Minn. (UPI) — The polka without beer is like beer without foam, but that's the way it's going to have to be at the Moorhead Armory — even if the dancing is in honor of Gov. Rudy Perpich.

On advice of the city attorney, the Moorhead City Council served notice Tuesday it will not allow beer to be served June 28 at a social gathering and dance, dubbed "Polka with Perpich."

City Attorney Robert Schaefer said a local ordinance prohibits any alcoholic beverages in public places and makes no exceptions for the governor.

"He's an ordinary citizen just like anybody else," Schaafer said. "Whether its a church or whether it's a charitable organization like the Jaycees or the governor of Minnesota or my family reunion, we can't waive the law for something like that."

Rise In Cattle Prices Seen Later In Year

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Cattle prices might be sharply down from the record prices of three weeks ago, but meat industry observers say they'll shoot right back up later this year.

On May 30 and 31, fed steers hit a record high of $63 per hundred pounds at the Omaha Livestock Market. On Thursday, they were going for $53 per hundredweight.

Cattle experts said cattle prices can be compared to a roller coaster — what comes down will go back up.

Bruce Marcue, manager of agricultural relations for Iowa Beef Processors Inc. of Dakota City, Neb., attributed the higher cattle prices this spring to smaller numbers of cattle on feed.

And he said the cattle numbers remain the same and should result in higher prices later this year.

Other industry officials said the price drop could be due to the rapid pace of the earlier climb, that a "correction" was inevitable. They also said consumers, to a modest extent, have resisted the higher supermarket prices and switched to cheaper cuts of beef or to other types of meat.

But drawing fire from a National Cattlemen's Association spokesman was President Carter's decision to increase beef imports this year by 200 million pounds, an action experts said had a psychological depressing impact on prices.

Don Magdanz, senior vice president and secretary of the cattlemen's group, said Carter's role in the beef industry is galling.

Boll Weevil War Stalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest experimental effort to eradicate one of the most enduring pests of American farmers — the cotton boll weevil — has been stymied because of bad weather.

The Agriculture Department said this week that "unseasonably cold spring weather and unusually heavy rainfall" delayed the start of a three-year boll weevil eradication trial project in Virginia and North Carolina.

The project includes a package of weapons such as chemicals, biological and cultural controls which are aimed at being tougher on weevils but gentler on the environment than past methods.

Although the project was delayed, some of its features have begun, including trapping of boll weevils and surveys to determine how many exist at various locations.

"Farmers simply couldn't get into the fields to plant," Dr. Francis J. Mulhern, administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said.

"Many of them switched to other crops because the peak period for planting cotton had passed," he said. "So approximately 15,000 acres will be involved in the trial this year instead of the anticipated 24,000."

The goal of the project is to eradicate the boll weevil in a major cotton producing area. If it is successful, the department plans to consider starting a similar program throughout the entire Cotton Belt to eradicate the pest.

Labor Law Revision Sent To Committee; Filibuster Cut Loses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to send a hotly contested bill to revise the nation's labor laws back to committee for redrafting after supporters conceded that they lacked the votes to crack a lengthy filibuster.

The Senate agreed without objection to a motion by Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to send the measure to the Human Resources Committee.

The move leaves the bill, strongly backed by organized labor and the Carter administration, with an uncertain future. However, the Labor Department, Senate leaders and organized labor expressed confidence that after some changes, the bill would be passed by the Senate.

The failure to end the filibuster was a victory for business organizations and Senate conservatives who staunchly opposed the bill.

Shortly after the bill was recommitted, Byrd told reporters, "Let me put it this way, we didn't have 60 votes and I knew it." But he added: "I fully expect the committee to report out a bill."

Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., committee chairman, described the bill as "very much alive," adding that the legislation would be amended and returned to the floor later this year.

Baker Sees Defeat

But Republican Leader Howard Baker, who supported the filibuster, said, "I don't think there will be a general bill. ... The principal battle is over."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, leader of the filibuster, pledged to lead a second effort to talk the bill to death if the committee sends back a measure drafted along the lines of the present one.

The legislation calls for stiffer penalties against labor law violators and would give unions additional leverage in their drive to organize more workers.

The committee has authority to return the bill to the floor any time after July 15, but is not required to do so. Normally, sending a measure back to committee for redrafting dooms it to defeat.

Cutoff Rejected

The move to send the bill back to committee came shortly after a sixth anti-filibuster vote fell short of the 60 votes needed to cut off debate. The vote was 53-45, seven shy of the total needed.

However, the outcome was a foregone conclusion after Byrd announced in advance that he would vote against ending the filibuster and urged other senators to follow suit.

Five previous attempts had been made to choke off the Republican-led filibuster, but that effort stalled at 58 votes.

When long negotiations aimed at securing the two additional votes failed, Byrd decided to have the measure removed from the crowded Senate legislative calendar.

A stronger version of the bill cleared the House easily last year, but this year, it became the focus of high-powered lobbying campaigns.

City Proposes Coliseum's Sale To Tech

Cumberland Presbyterian Church, had appeared before the council on May 26 to appeal the commission's ruling, but council members continued the hearing when no agreement could be reached with Melonie Park South homeowners.

Rogers requested a change from single-family residential to commercial zoning to allow the construction of an office building.

The zone case has been complex and controversial because the proposed office building location required closing one street and moving another.

To placate area residents, Rogers changed his building plan to include a one-story contemporary building rather than the two-story colonial design originally suggested; a necessary 43-foot setback from the street and the widening and relocation of Indiana Drive south of the office building.

The council approval of Roger's request was contingent on the building being used for non-medical offices, being one-story and of modern architectural design and tied to the site plan.

In a discussion of Mrs. Jordan's proposed substandard housing ordinance, council members decided to invite representatives from the board of realtors and from the apartment association to comment on the proposal at the July 6 meeting.

McAlister's suggestions for a ordinance to curtail false alarms were okayed by the council, which asked that an ordinance containing the suggestions be drafted.

In addition Thursday, the council took back $156,600 in Community Development funds at the request of the Overton South Neighborhood Association, approved an Urban Renewal Plan for the Stubbs School area and heard ideas for a new senior citizens' center.

Hill Details Limits On Session

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said Thursday the Legislature could deal rationally with only four subjects in a special session on tax relief — and they don't include a spending limit.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee talked with reporters amid speculation that Gov. Dolph Briscoe would call a session to begin sometime around July 10.

Hill said there is enough background available from previous legislative sessions to warrant approval of bills or constitutional amendments that would:

— Repeal the 4 percent state sales tax on residential utility bills.

— Tax farm and ranch land according to productivity formulas, not its value — often inflated by speculation — in Texas' booming real estate market.

Raise Exemption

— Raise the inheritance tax exemption from the first $60,000 to the first $200,000.

— Exempt from school taxes $5,000 of the value of the home of every person who is 65 or older.

Hill said lawmakers probably should wait until the regular session in January to take up sweeping proposals to relieve property tax payers and place a constitutional ceiling on state spending.

Hill said he saw no "gut Hill" motivation behind Briscoe's conversations with legislative leaders about a called session.

"I really don't think Governor Briscoe and (House Speaker) Bill Clayton are sitting around trying to conjure up trouble for me," said Hill, who beat Briscoe in the May 6 primary.

Might Impair Schools

Spending limits might impair his ability, if elected, to keep his promise to put more state dollars into public schools.

Hill said a tax relief session would merely be "an extension of his (Briscoe's) general philosophy" of holding the line on taxes.

Hill told reporters that a spending ceiling and direct property tax relief were too complex to deal with on short notice in a 30-day session.

"I am concerned about whether there is time to have sufficient input and the appropriate kind of consultation that would need to take place with those who would be affected," Hill said.

He said more data was needed from both taxpayers and local elected officials before legislators could rationally decide what kind of property relief should be granted.

Hill said he supports property tax relief and a spending limit but feels details could be worked out only after thorough study.

Clayton has proposed limiting state expenditures to the present level, adjusted only for population growth and rises in the Consumer Price Index.

"I have some difficulty in seeing how you could develop that kind of formula between now and July 10," Hill said.

Another proposal would require a two-thirds legislative majority to pass a tax bill.

Panel Says Reports On Korea Ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — High U.S. officials ignored repeated warnings as early as 1970 that Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park and Korean Central Intelligence Agency operatives were trying to buy influence in Congress, the Senate Intelligence Committee said Thursday.

"One overseas intelligence officer informed the committee staff that he could recall no other case where the information he was reporting had met with such deafening silence at Washington," the committee said in a 50-page report.

"The committee has examined the full record of the executive branch and has concluded that prior to 1975, no effective action was taken by anyone in authority to halt what was going on," the report said.

No Concealment Seen

However, the panel said it found no evidence that the lack of action by the U.S. officials was deliberately intended to condone or conceal the alleged Korean influence-buying efforts.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., chairman of the subcommittee which produced the report, told reporters he could not definitely rule out the possibility of a coverup. He said that while no evidence of a coverup could be found, "the circumstances indicate some suspicion."

Stevenson said the panel was unable to locate 23 documents in the files of the State and Justice departments which would have enabled it to learn who in government knew of the intelligence reports.

Plan Considered

The committee's report said the Korean CIA (KCIA) considered in 1973 a plan to use American criminals to kill Kim Dae-Jung, the leading South Korean political opponent of President Park Chung Hee.

The study did not deal specifically with the influence buying charges. Rather, it was a case study of the activities of the role of U.S. intelligence agencies in dealing with alleged improper conduct by the KCIA — a "friendly" intelligence service representing a country with which the United States has close ties.

The report said that U.S. intelligence was aware that KCIA officers were "operational" here as early as 1963 but that the United States had no policy dictating that their activities should be curtailed.

Eliminate Opposition

It had become clear by 1971 that the regime of President Park had set out to eliminate opposition to it by South Koreans living in the United States, it said.

State Department officials issued warnings but the report said "there is no evidence that any action was taken by the United States to halt the disruptive practices."

By mid-1973 the KCIA was trying to block anti-Park demonstrations "by all possible means," the report said. It said Korean associations in the United States "were to be penetrated, manipulated and weakened by the KCIA and demonstrators were to be intimidated."

The KCIA had tried and failed to block Kim Dae-Jung's meetings with U.S. officials during a 1971 visit, it added.

Murder Plot Cited

The report said that U.S. intelligence agents had reported that "when Kim planned a return trip to the United States, the KCIA even considered a plan to use criminals in the United States to kill him."

Kim was kidnapped in Japan and taken to Korea, where he later died.

The intelligence committee said that as early as 1970 the U.S ambassador to South Korea had complained at the highest levels of the Korean government that aggressive and "amateurish" lobbying in Washington by Tongsun Park was proving annoying and eventually could prove extremely embarrassing.

Tongsun Park continued his efforts, and in 1971 the FBI opened a three-month investigation of allegedly improper South Korean lobbying efforts. The report said the probe was "limited in scope and conducted without the benefit of all available intelligence information."

It said the FBI did not have the benefit of a State department memo which stated that "we know for a fact" that Tongsun Park offered to contribute to the campaigns of several members of Congress just before a military aid bill was presented to Capitol Hill.

It said the FBI did get intelligence reports stating that Park was definitely "under the direction" of the KCIA, and that as President Park's official rice sales agent here, he was expected to use lucrative commissions to pay for Korean lobbying in the United States.

However, the Senate report said the FBI officials decided not to make this information available to rank-and-file FBI agents, because the intelligence agency from which it came "has advised that the source of its information is extremely sensitive and such as to preclude any investigation whatsoever."

Intead, the information was passed in memoranda to then-Attorney General John Mitchell and Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, then President Nixon's special assistant for national security affairs.

Kissinger and Mitchell have stated in both public and private testimony that they never saw the most sensitive of these memos.

The committee said it cannot now determine who actually read the FBI memos or what they may have done about them.

House Votes Cutoff In Korea Food Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Thursday to cut off about $56 million in food aid to South Korea next year because of its refusal to let a former ambassador testify about alleged cash payments to some representatives.

Following a May 31 threat to start slicing away at economic aid to the Asian ally, the House voted 273 to 125 to prohibit easy-credit Food for Peace sales to South Korea after Oct. 1.

A $59.5 million contract to be signed Monday with South Korea for such sales in this fiscal year will be cancelled if the Senate goes along with the 1979 ban, an Agency for International Development spokesman said.

Park Testimony

The probe's focal point, rice sales broker and socialite Tongsun Park, testified that part of the money he used for payments to House members came from commissions on Food for Peace sales, which allow long repayment terms and relatively low interest rates.

Such commission agents were banned last fall.

The full $18 billion agricultural appropriations bill for the year beginning Oct. 1 passed 326 to 59 and was sent to the Senate.

The Appropriations Committee said that figure, some $5.5 billion above present spending authority for the Agriculture Department, Food and Drug Administration and related agencies, is slightly below President Carter's budget request.

Assistance Programs

Slightly more than half the funds are for food assistance programs and about $6.9 billion is to support farmers' incomes through various devices. The rest is mainly for research, including $3 million on tobacco-growing which Carter tried to delete.

Even some supporters of the aid cut to the United States' fifth largest cash purchaser of farm products called it a "somewhat token action." But they said they hoped South Korea got the message.

In response to the action, South Korean embassy spokesman Kim Su-Duc said the House action "is particularly regrettable in that it ignores the cooperation the Republic of Korea already has extended to the executive and legislative branches of the government of the United States in their investigation of alleged improprieties. It also ignores the talks that were continuing as a serious effort by my government to resolve outstanding questions to the mutual satisfaction of the concerned parties."

He said South Korea wished to cooperate but "has refused to be coerced into violating international legal order and its dignity as a sovereign state."

Former Ambassador Kim Dong Jo and his wife have been accused in public hearings of trying to give at least three congressmen envelopes stuffed with $100 bills. Receiving money from a foreign agent would be a crime, but Kim Dong Jo himself would be safe from prosecution because of diplomatic immunity.

Leon Jaworski, the ethics committee's special counsel said he needs Kim Dong Jo's testimony to confirm or deny the allegations. He reportedly has told the panel he has classified information that eight to 10 present House members might have received such monies.

In a letter to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Jaworksi said "there has been no substantial indication of cooperation" by South Korean authorities since the 321-46 vote May 31.

Come-Clean Challenge Hits Tower

get appointments with him seven times. Why should a foreign lobbist rank higher than Texas citizens?"

Krueger also asserted Tower misrepresented his voting record to Senate Ethics Committee by saying that he had not been influenced by his contacts with Park.

Tower did not include in a list of Korea-related votes he submitted to the SEC several votes on an amendment about which Park testified he talked to members of Congress.

The amendment would have reduced from 25 to 10 percent the proportion of military aid that a recipient country is required to set aside in its own currency for use by the United States to pay its operating expenses.

The 25 percent reserve requirement in Park's words, "would have created a great burden on Koreans." Korea, in effect would have been able to utilize American military aid with less of a financial commitment by Korea if the amendment passed.

The amendment did pass. Tower voted with Park and Korea.

"Was this vote omission another slip of memory?" Krueger said. "If so, I wonder how many other facts pertinent to the Korea scandal Mr. Tower has forgotten?"

The 21st District representative raised questions about how accurately Tower has portrayed his closeness to Park and whether Park had contributed to Tower's campaign.

He cited testimony in which Park referred to Tower as his "dear friend," "a good friend of mine" and "like a member of the family." Tower, meanwhile, Kruger pointed out, tried to put distance between himself and Park during his testimony to the SEC.

"But Mr. Vic Kramer, chief counsel for the Senate, clarifies, 'Let me tell you this... you were one of five or six he (Park) characterizes as one of his good friends.' In fact, they were such good friends that Park asked only one senator and one congressman to host a party to enable Korean officials to meet congressman and senators.

Hosts Senate Event

"The senate host was John Tower," Krueger said. "The congressman was Richard Hanna, now serving a prison sentence for accepting bribes."

That party, Kruegar said, was held at the George Town Club, a club allegedly financed by the Korean CIA. Tongsun Park, testimony shows, was Twoer's sponsor for membership in the club.

"It doesn't make sense for Park, the 'social acquaintance' to be Tower's sponsor," Krueger said. "It does make sense for Park, the 'friend of the family' to do so."

Krueger also questioned whether Exhibit 21, a list of senators and numbers under columns headed "proposed, paid and balance, was a plant, intended to blackmail Park as he claimed in testimony.

"On that list, a 'proposed contributions list,' the designations "Proposed, 30; Paid 15; Balance 15' appear by Tower's name. Why would Park have written the list of names unless for a specific purpose? His claim that the names were written by him and the numbers by someone else are difficult to accept because no motive exists for such an alleged forgery," Krueger said.

"And if the mysterious person does not exist, as one may suspect, why would Park write the numbers unless they reflected actual payments?

"Texas is a great state whose national importance is just beginning to be fully appreciated by this country. We will play an increasing role in national affairs in years to come, and to accurately and forcefully present Texas' interests, we will need leaders in Washington who will be listened to by their colleagues, who are respected for their honesty, integrity and sound judgment.

"John Tower says he stands for Texas. In light of his association with Tongsun Park, I can only say that Texas stands embarrassed."

Vacationing Prison Guard Leads Police To Terrorists In Bulgaria

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A vacationing Berlin prison guard spotted one of his former charges sunbathing on a Bulgarian beach and gave authorities the break they needed to round up four West German terrorist suspects, officials reported Thursday.

It was the latest in a series of successes in West Germany's war against urban guerrillas — and the second time an East European Communist government aided in the capture.

German authorities said the four included escaped kidnap-murder suspect Till Meyer, 34, the man spotted by his former jailkeeper, and Gabriele Rollnik, 28, allegedly one of four women who helped spring Meyer from a West Berlin jail in a daring rescue May 27.

Another was identified as Gudrun Stuermer, 27. The fourth, also a woman, was not immediately identified here. Bulgaria deported all four to West Germany on Wednesday.

Interior Minister Gerhart Baum told a news conference the four were seized unarmed in a surprise swoop Tuesday by Bulgarian police and specjal German anti-terrorist detectives who spent several days in Bulgaria tracking them down.

"The surprise effect was so great ... that the arrest was completed in an extremely short time," he said. He gave no other details.

But a West Berlin city Justice Department spokesman said the crucial tip-off came from the vacationing prison guard, who spotted Meyer lying on a Black Sea "Sun Coast" beach in Bulgaria and immediately alerted the Bonn Interior Ministry.

Meyer, Miss Rollnik and Mrs. Stuermer were believed to be members of the Movement of June 2, a terror cell allied to West Germany's Red Army Faction that claimed responsibility for the November 1974 slaying of Judge Guenther von Drenkmann and the kidnapping of mayoral candidate Peter Lorenz during 1975 Berlin city elections.

Meyer, who broke out of Berlin's maximum-security Moabit jail last month while standing trial for both crimes, was expected to arrive back in West Berlin with Miss Rollnik later Thursday, Baum said.

Baum said Miss Rollnik was wanted for armed robbery, her suspected role in the kidnapping of Viennese clothing millionaire Walter Palmers last November and for allegedly helping three other women free Meyer last month. Palmers was later released, after his family paid a multi-million-dollar ransom.

Mrs. Stuermer may have been involved in the Meyer escape and the Lorenz kidnapping, Baum said. She and the third, unidentified woman remained in a secret West German location for further police questioning.

Baum hailed the latest four arrests as a new triumph for computer-aided German police techniques and thanked Bulgarian authorities for what he called their whole-hearted cooperation.

The Bonn government's police data center at Wiesbaden, popularly nicknamed the "Kommissar Computer," stores Europe's most comprehensive terrorist data in its memory banks.

Bonn officials say computerized detection has helped net a total of 15 major German suspects since last September — almost all of them abroad.

He said those arrested include five on a list of the 20 most-wanted suspects, sought for their alleged key role in a string of 1977 terror strikes culminating in the Oct. 18 kidnap-slaying of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

Tipped off by German police, French authorities arrested alleged terrorist Stefan Wisniewski at Orly airport May 11 as he was boarding a plane for Zagreb, Yugoslavia. The same day, German and Yugoslav police cooperated in netting four more suspects in Zagreb.

The arrests indicate that German terrorists are using Communist East European countries as "resting places," probably because border checks among these countries are not as stiff as in Western Europe, said Horst Herold, head of the Wiesbaden center.

Pennsylvania Plane Crash Kills Five

LIMERICK, Pa. (AP) — A twin-engined Cessna apparently tried to make an emergency landing in a soggy cornfield Thursday, shortly after takeoff, but somersaulted into a clump of trees and exploded, killing at least five persons.

The accident occurred about 40 miles northwest of Philadelphia in this tiny, rural Montgomery County town, not far from a nuclear power plant now under construction.

Acting Coroner Charles Thomes said that he had found parts of five torn-apart bodies, all burned beyond recognition, in the wreckage, which was scattered over a 50-foot area in the field.

Thomes said that the flight plan indicated that six persons had been planning the trip, reportedly to Chicago. Police and firemen were sorting through the crumpled aluminum and other bits of aircraft in search of another victim, he added.

"I really don't believe there were more than five persons aboard," Thomes told reporters confined to a roped-off area several hundred feet away from the crash site.

Thomes said there was no immediate identification of the victims, but police were sorting out luggage and wallets found in the wreckage to make positive identifications.

MOSCOW SIGNING SET

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams will be in Moscow Sept. 3-5 to sign a two-year extension of a research cooperation agreement with the Soviet Ministry of Transportation, it has been announced. Under the agreement, originally signed in 1973, the two countries exchange ideas on transportation technology and future needs.

Former Boyfriend Held In Slaying

CRANFORD, N.J. (AP) — Almost a year after Neil Costanzo last dated the former cheerleader who had been his high school sweetheart, the 19-year-old advertising agency employee was charged Thursday with killing her.

Police say it was the result of a reconciliation attempt that failed.

Costanzo was being held without bail after arraignment Thursday on a charge of murdering Michelle DeMarzo, an 18-year-old Cranford High School senior whom he had dated for two years.

Miss DeMarco's nude, battered body was found Tuesday in a wooded area near the township recycling center.

The county medical examiner's report said she died Monday night from shock and bleeding from a blow to the head and internal bleeding.

The report said she had been sexually abused.

Police Chief Matthew Haney said Costanzo and Miss DeMarzo, former schoolmates, had known each other about four years and had dated about two years when she broke off the relationship in August 1977.

The relationship was "serious, according to him," Haney said, and Costanzo was attempting a reconciliation nearly a year later.

Haney said Miss DeMarzo's killer was waiting for her when she arrived home from a senior class yearbook signing party Monday night, and that she left home with him willingly.

They drove in his car to an area near the recycling center, the chief said, and got out of the car.

"A struggle began, and she suffered wounds that led to her death," Haney said.

Police located Costanzo Wednesday night at a bowling alley in Clark and took him to Cranford police headquarters for questioning, Haney said in a news conference Thursday.

AUSTIN (UPI) — Taber Ward has joined the staff of the Republican Party of Texas to coordinate arrangements for the party's state convention in September, party Chairman Ray Barnhart announced Tuesday.

Since last 1977, Ward has served as press director for Texans for Tower, the statewide organization supporting the re-election of Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas.

Ward, of Austin, worked on the state party staff from 1974 to 1977 as media director and convention coordinator.

The state convention will be held in Dallas Sept. 8-9.

Carter Praises Egypt's Peace Drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter praised Egypt's determination to pursue Mideast peace talks Thursday, while one of Israel's staunchest congressional backers criticized the Jewish state for failing to do enough.

It was Carter's first public comment on the stalled Middle East peace negotiations since the Israeli Cabinet refused Sunday to make a specific commitment on the future of occupied Arab territories on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Carter's statement preceded a Senate speech by Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., who said that Israel should come up with specific responses to outstanding peace issues or risk having the Carter administration propose a peace plan of its own.

The president praised Egypt's reaction to the Israeli Cabinet's decision as "very constructive, very moderate."

Carter made the observation while opening an Oval Office meeting with Sayed Marei, speaker of the People's Assembly of Egypt. Marei is leading a parliamentary delegation on a one-month U.S. tour.

The president, referring to comments made by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on the Israeli stance, said, "We appreciate his willingness to continue the peace process."

But neither Carter nor his White House spokesmen commented directly on Israel's decision to delay making permanent plans for the future of the captured Arab territories.

The statement issued by the Israeli government on Sunday had been prompted by the administration's request that Israel provide something beyond Prime Minister Menachem Begin's proposal for limited self-rule over the next five years for the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs living in the occupied territory.

The first official administration response came Wednesday, when the State Department said, "We regret the Israeli replies did not fully respond to our questions."

The Carter administration has been playing a behind-the-scenes role in attempting to forge a permanent Middle East peace settlement. It is awaiting new proposals from Egypt on the future of those disputed lands.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Thursday that the United States was soliciting "ideas from the parties." But he declined to confirm reports that Washington wanted Egypt to make a formal proposal.

"While we are having discussions, I'm not going to be able to itemize what we are discussing with the Egyptians," the spokesman said.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is expected to meet sometime next month with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel and his Israeli counterpart, Moshe Dayan, and then visit the Middle East.

Although Sadat's comments on the Israeli Cabinet decision were considered mild, Kamel accused the Jewish state of "intransigence" after a meeting with Hermann Eilts, the U.S. ambassador to Egypt.

Without taking sides on the occupied lands issue, Carter seemed to be seizing on the fact that Sadat apparently is leaving the door open for renewed peace talks.

Responding the Israeli Cabinet statement, Sadat had said Tuesday that he remained "optimistic" about his peace initiative. He said he was ready to discuss "any new plans that Israel will submit" to renew the peace effort.

Javits, one of Israel's strongest supporters in Congress, said a U.S. peace plan "would produce the worst possible situation between the United States and Israel."

Javits said his speech took its surprisingly tough tone because, "I felt I had to be sharper than I would normally be in order to shake them up."

The speech failed to elicit an immediate comment from the Israeli government in Jerusalem.

Javits said the Israeli response to the U.S. questions about occupied territories was a disappointment, and it was "the wrong signal at the wrong time.

"As the mediator seeking to promote a resumption of the negotiations, I believe that the United States was correct in its expectation of a more positive reply from Israel," the senator said.

However, Javits also criticized Sadat, saying the Egyptian leader was "unavailing and occasionally threatening since his historic original peace gesture last December." The senator said he hoped his decision to speak out would lead to disclosure of the Egyptian position.

National Lampoon Runs Parody Of Newspapers

NEW YORK (AP) — Parody is no gentle art.

Publisher Henry Luce was outraged at Wolcott Gibbs' 1936 parody of Time magazine. Ernest Hemingway surely wasn't pleased by E.B. White's "Across the Street and into the Grill." And now, dear reader, it is our turn — and maybe yours — to feel the parodist's bite.

For next week, the National Lampoon parody of a Sunday newspaper, the Republican-Democrat in mythical Dacron, Ohio, will hit newsstands and bookstores.

The Republican-Democrat is the usual jumble of Sunday sections — among them the magazine "Pomade," a section called "Living Life ... formerly the Women's pages," even an ad supplement, for "Swillmart ... Where Quality Is a Slogan."

There also are literally hundreds of improbable headlines, stories, ads and photographs. One page 1 headline screams:

"Two Dacron Women Feared

"Missing in Volcanic Disaster."

"Japan Destroyed," reads a smaller headline underneath, twitting the local newspaper's penchant for local news.

Also on page 1, "The Greater Dacron A.S.P.C.A., honored by Mayor Pilegravey last fall for capturing a pack of 30 wild dogs which were later gassed at the city pound, will now have a lawsuit brought against it for that action, says Dacron Estates Hunt Club Master of Foxhounds Edward Duffy ...."

Or the correction in minuscule type hidden inside under an ad:

"Arnold Piesner of 1554 Woodrow, Dacron, did not commit a violent act of homosexual assault on his next-door-neighbor's seven-year-old son as was erroneously reported in Friday's Republican-Democrat. The assaulter was a Mr. Andrew Neebler and the incident took place in San Jose, Cal. We regret ...."

Reporters and editors may pale at all this. Witness Luce's reaction to Gibbs' description of Times inverted style: "Backward ran sentences until reeled the mind. ... Where it all will end knows God!" Or Hemingway's when White reduced the love affair of "Across the River and into the Trees" to decidedly smaller proportions.

But in this parody, there is something for the reader too. P.J. O'Rourke, the parody paper's editor, notes that he and his staff — many of them Midwesterners, he says — put their teeth into Middle America as much as into the newspaper business.

"Dacron is Toledo," said the Toledo-born editor. "Dacron or Day-cron — there's disagreement about the pronunciation — sounds like the Ohio city that isn't there but should be."

So in Dacron, a drive is launched against child pornography despite the organizer's admission that "so far there has been no child pornography ... we will all have to become very vigilant to keep it out." The drive's organizer will visit Los Angeles, New York's 42nd Street and San Francisco to "identify the problem."

Dacron's major industry is the VanHusen trailer company, and the city's government, not without VanHusens as officials, seems to be constantly buying trailers — for storage facilities, low income housing and portable jails, called "mobile homes of detention."

No one in Dacron seems to make that connection. Nor do they connect when asphalt company heir Bobby MacAdam shows up at a party with a paper bag over his head and in high-heeled shoes — the costume of Dacron's own "Son of Sam," "the Powder Room Prowler."

"Unusual shoes and paper accessories have been his trademark this past year," the society page notes.

Making connections will be the reader's job — and joy. Connecting, for instance, a story on an oceanographers' convention predicting the polar ice caps will melt with one on a meteorologists' meeting that says the ice caps will spread. Or connecting the stabbing murder of the wife of the paper's crossword editor, Hermwood Litmajor, with a bloody knife with initials "HL" found in a city park. Police say an ice fisherman probably dropped it.

There will be more connections for readers of the 1974 Lampoon parody of a high school yearbook in, of all places, Dacron, Ohio. Herbert "Wing-Ding" Weisenheimer, who penned off-color remarks in the yearbook, is now car dealer Hollerin' Herb — "a real kidder."

The parody paper is not without off-color stories, either, nor without what editor O'Rourke calls "rough spots" — parodies of sensitive subjects: abortion, Soviet treatment of Jews, pornography, murder.

This is natural, says O'Rourke. "When you deal with the daily news, you're in a sort of — well, they say, 'No news is good news' — there's a bit more tragedy than in somebody's senior year of high school."

Along with the news, a little unintended parody crept into Dacron's daily. First, the $4.95 price is unlike the typical paper's. Second, at least one copy was so like a Sunday paper that it contained not one but two of those Swillmart ad supplements, hawking grandfather digital clocks, armpit dryers and Legionnaire's Disease Detectolarms.

Where it all will end knows God!

Court Ruling On Dallas Draws Mixed Reaction

DALLAS (AP) — City officials hailed the U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the way the City Council is elected as "important for the future of Dallas" but attorneys for the losers said it was a "serious setback for blacks."

The justices, in a 6-3 vote Thursday, refused to invalidate as unconstitutional the Dallas election of eight single-member councilmen and three members from the city at large.

But the controversy is not over yet. The justices sent the case back to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals with orders to study it under federal law, the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

"The impact of the Voting Rights Act on the city ordinance and on the charter amendment approved by referendum will be open on remand, and we deem it appropriate for the court of appeals to deal with these questions," Justice Byron R. White wrote in the court's main opinion.

The court set aside a ruling by the 5th Circuit court which last year had invalidated the city's election system as racially discriminatory.

The effect of the lower court's ruling had been held in abeyance pending Thursday's decision, and it appears that the challenged system will remain in effect until the 5th Circuit reaches a new decision.

(Trial of a similar suit brought in Lubbock was postponed last year when attorneys for the city and plaintiff Gene Gaines agreed to wait for Thursday's Supreme Court decision.

(City Attorney Fred Senter said he expects that any action locally will be put off again while the 5th Circuit Court reconsiders the matter.

("We'll just have to wait and see," was all Senter would say officially, but his comments were, "Ah, good," as he read a wire service account of the Supreme Court finding and "hot ziggety" when his eyes reached the phrase "...had applied too stringent tests in deciding the case."

(Gaines, president of the local NAACP, said he would reserve comment until after he had a chance to read the full opinion of the court.)

Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom said he was "delighted" with the decision.

"The three at-large members, including the mayor, give us an overview of city problems, and as we continue to grow the overview will play an even more important role," Folsom said.

City Attorney Lee Holt said the ruling was "very important for the future of Dallas."

But Bill Stoner, an attorney who helped challenge the Dallas system, said it was a major setback for blacks.

"I think it brings black citizens in Dallas a little closer to the reality that their lives politically will continue to be controlled by others, and they are living under a system which insures white control," he said. "It is a serious setback from the gains of the 1960s for blacks to have equitable participation in the political system."

Stoner said his side would appeal the case "if there is a legal avenue open."

Justice White said the appeals court had applied too stringent tests in deciding the case.

Only Justice Potter Stewart joined fully in White's opinion. But Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell Jr. concurred in an opinion the voting system was a "legislative plan" that should not have been subject to such strict scrutiny.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan Jr. and John Paul Stevens voted to strike down the city council voting system.

The appeals court had ruled that Dallas's 11-member city council election system resulted in a dilution of minority voting power.

Eight seats on the city council are selected on a district basis — with candidates having to meet residency requirements in a specific district. The voting for those candidates is limited to district residents.

The other three seats, including the mayor's job, are selected on an at-large basis, with no residency requirement in a certain district and providing for citywide voting.

All elections for Dallas offices are nonpartisan, with candidates running on slating groups rather than as Republicans, Democrats or members of some other political party.

The 5th Circuit had ruled that only the mayor's job could be filled by a citywide vote and that the other 10 council seats would have to be decided by single-member district votes.

Then-Dallas Mayor Wes Wise and other city officials appealed to the Supreme Court.

Black and Mexican-American residents of Dallas first sued the city in 1971, when all 11 council seats were selected by citywide votes.

That system was struck down as unconstitutional under the "one-man, one-vote" constitutional doctrine.

Sixty-five percent of Dallas's voters are white, 25 percent are black and 10 percent are Mexican-Americans. Since 1907, three blacks have been elected to the council.

The city's 8-3 election system was devised by city officials as an alternative to the system struck down by U.S. District Judge Eldon B. Mahon. Mahon found the 8-3 system constitutionally satisfactory but the 5th Circuit disagreed.

Houston Police Destroy Weapons

HOUSTON (AP) — A new system was in effect Thursday as police destroyed handguns, shotguns, knives and brass knuckles weighing a combined 700 pounds.

Acting under orders from Police Chief Harry Caldwell, three high ranking officers checked off each weapon from a master list before it was added to the pile to be melted at the Texas Electric Steel Casting Co.

The new system resulted from an investigation of the 1977 death of Randall A. Webster, 17, Shreveport, La., in a high speed chase with police who allegedly placed a "throw down" gun beside the body of the unarmed Webster.

Caldwell has said the gun found near Webster was obtained by police during the investigation of a 1967 suicide but had been recorded as having been among police property room inventory items destroyed on May 24, 1968.

One officer later suspended from duty and three former officers were indicted June 3 by a federal grand jury on charges of violating Webster's civil rights. Another former officer waived indictment April 27 and entered a guilty plea to a charge of concealment of a crime.

Library Of Congress Begun By Jefferson

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1815 Thomas Jefferson sold his private collection of books to the government, forming the basis for today's massive Library of Congress.

The library has now prepared two pamphlets discussing Jefferson and his involvement with books and the founding of the library. Both are available without charge from the Library of Congress, Central Services Division, Printing and Processing Section, Washington, D.C., 20540.

The first is the 37-page "Thomas Jefferson and the World of Books." It contains papers, commentaries and remarks presented during a symposium held at the dedication of the library's Thomas Jefferson building in 1976.

The second pamphlet, 31 pages, contains an essay tracing the growth of Jefferson's personal library, the development of his cataloging system and sale of the books to the government. It is titled "Thomas Jefferson and the Library of Congress."

Space Suits Redesigned For Women

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Those new $150,000 off-the-rack space suits, designed for shuttle flight astronauts, are going to be redesigned a bit.

One of the first six women selected to be astronaut candidates says the suits are not ready-to-wear by women.

Judy Resnik, 29, a mission specialist candidate, was the first woman to try on the suits, designed to fit all astronauts.

Miss Resnik said Thursday the suits are uncomfortable and difficult to put on. She reported difficulties in getting her arms into the upper portion of the suits.

"It doesn't have anything to do with physical size but body dimensions," she said. "It has nothing to do with the size of clothes you wear. The problem is getting your arms through the arm holes into the sleeves."

James V. Correale, chief of the crew systems division at the Johnson Space Center, said the suits will be modified by installing a flexible section between the hard torso section and the armholes and by shortening the length of the torso section.

Correale said the changes resulting from Miss Resnik's tests will result in the best and most comfortable space suit ever developed.

Addition of the flexible section around the arm holes, he said, will allow astronauts, both male and female, to push the openings farther apart while donning the suit and then bring then back into proper position for better comfort and maneuverability.

Suits used during the Apollo program were custom made for each astronaut. They cost about $200,000 each, including research and development.

The off-the-rack shuttle suits separate at the waist like a sweater and a pair of pants. Each portion comes in assorted sizes so each astronaut can be fitted without a need for custom design.

CARTERS DINE OUT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and his wife dined out Wednesday at a fashionable restaurant, where patrons kept their distance. The Carters and Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and his wife were guests of Robert Strauss, the president's special trade representative, and his wife. As the party began to leave, however, a number of diners reached out to shake hands and Carter received a spontaneous ovation.

In most bridge games, South covers the jack of spades with dummy's king. East cashes the ace and queen and shifts to a diamond. South wins, draws trump, eliminates the rest of the diamonds, comes to his hand with a trump, leads the nine of clubs, lets it lose to the jack and claims since East has to either lead a club or give South a ruff and discard.

An expert East leads back a low spade. West wins and leads a club. Now the end play won't come off and South loses four tricks and curses the gods of chance who have set all key cards in the wrong place.

A really expert declarer makes his contract by playing a low spade from dummy. Expert West will shift to a club but expert South goes right up with dummy's ace. Then he draws trumps, eliminates the diamonds and leads dummy's king of spades.

East is in but can only score one club trick since he is caught in a variation of the end play described earlier.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It is rare when adults and children share the same interpretation of a word or phrase.

Thus, water pollution to adults may mean harmful foreign bodies that threaten existence, but to a boy it means "girls swimming in the pool at the same time I do."

Invasion of privacy to kids is "assigned homework on weekends."

Parental brutality is "making me wash my face when I'm not going anywhere."

And incarceration in a penal colony without the advantages of due process of law comes out "summer school."

We've always had a rule in our family. You either get a job or go to school. We initiated this ruling when I spent three years with my son one summer listening to him whine, "There's nothing to do."

We don't care what they take so long as they get out of bed, get dressed, leave the house, and get a credit for it.

Our son appeared at breakfast yesterday morning en route to his first day at the summer session.

"Want breakfast?"

"Do I have time?" he snarled. "Or do you want me to get there early and help set up chairs and check people in?"

"Why are you so angry?"

"Hey, am I hostile? Believe me, I'm going to do the same things when I have kids...roust 'em out at the break of ten in the morning all summer long and send them off to a military compound where they're experimenting with solar heat in the classroom. There they'll load them down with homework so they can't hear a newborn cry, or touch a leaf, or see the sky..."

"Then I'll know why I believe," I said, finishing the song. "It'll never make the top ten."

"C'mon," he said, "I don't know what it is with you and Dad. I thought you wanted happy children out of your marriage. All you've got is a sweaty, irritable kid without affection who goes through every summer having anxiety attacks.

"I just finished up an entire year of study, study, study, term papers, notes, quizzes, tests, finals, research, bibliographies, orals, lack of sleep, dates, places. I don't know how much longer I can go on without cracking!"

If he hadn't been taking a summer class in party guitar he might have gotten through to me.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I learned by accident that our 17-year-old son and his girl friend (the same age) started to have sex for the first time a few weeks ago. I am worried sick because they are not using any contraceptives. I am not guessing about this, I know it for a fact.

The girl is crazy about our son. He may be crazy about her, too, but I doubt it. In my opinion, he is mainly interested in her body.

As my children were growing up, I made sure they knew the facts of life — sons as well as daughters. I am terrified that this girl will trap my youngest into an unwanted marriage.

Should I talk to the girl? Her mother? Please, Ann, give me some help. — Can't Sleep Nights

Dear Can't Sleep: Don't talk to the girl or to her mother. You would probably receive a chilly response plus some hot denials.

Talk to your son. It will be especially difficult since you "found out by accident" — but do it anyway. You may have to confess that you listened in on a phone conversation or read something not intended for your eyes. In any event, take your lumps and point out the seriousness of what he is doing. Urge your son to insist on using protection since it is apparent that the girl is careless and in fact may be trying to trap him into marriage.

And please, no letters asking me why I didn't suggest to the mother that she admonish the boy for his lack of morality, etc. Once teenagers begin to engage in sexual intercourse they are not about to listen to a lecture on morals. Sorry, but these are the facts, folks, and I believe in being practical, realistic, and hopefully, effective.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter was married five months ago. We gave her the kind of wedding she always wanted — spared nothing.

The bride and groom seem blissfully happy, but I am very upset. The reason: Our daughter received at least 300 gifts and a dozen envelopes with checks, but she has not written one thank-you note.

I have reminded her at least 20 times. Finally she said, "Leave me alone. I'll do it when I get good and ready."

I keep running into friends and family who ask if "Mary" ever received their gift. It's so embarrassing I can't tell you. This girl was well-reared. She should know better.

What are parents to do when their children behave this way? I think it's outrageous. I need your wise counsel. — Mrs. A.B.S., Roanoke

Dear Mrs. A.B.S.: Do you have a list of those who sent gifts — and what they sent? I hope so. Often when a bride is busy her mother drops a line to the senders saying, "Your lovely gift was received and 'Mary' will write you at a later date to express her gratitude."

You can do this NOW. It would be better than nothing. And I agree with you. Such procrastination is outrageous and inexcusable.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AMBER MOTIF — Motifs in tones of amber and gold shot with turquoise and ruby are emblazoned on a ground of smoky topaz to make this outstanding top and skirt. The camisole top is banded with a miniature print border...is then wrapped and sashed at the waist, for definition. The skirt is softly gathered at the waist and is loose and flowing. Larger motifs are engineered to fall across the bottom of the skirt and the skirt is bordered in the same motif as the camisole top.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a handicapped 5-year-old son and have some laundry problems which have stopped me cold until recently.

Shirts just gradually reached a point where I threw them out because I could not clean out the ground-in, drooled-in food. I tried soaks, sprays, bleaches (that just ruined the shirts faster) and, in general, anything I could buy on the market. Nothing worked until recently.

I discovered the greatest laundry pretreatment I've ever found. It is unseasoned meat tenderizer. I've used it for years on bloodstains, and one day I decided to try it on one of my son's shirts. The food stains were wet and I sprinkled with tenderizer and scrubbed with a brush.

Then I threw them in the washer with the rest of the laundry. I couldn't believe how well it worked. I've since tried it on some other impossible stains — spilled gravy and chocolate on a white polyester shirt, ring around the collar, and any other food or body stain.

Now I keep a large bottle of tenderizer on the table next to my washer, and laundry is much easier. — "One Tender Mom"

DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does each bout with a stone leave the kidneys weaker? Is there any way to prevent stone formation from infections, etc.? Once a person has had a stone is he likely to continue to have them? — S.L.S.

Kidney stones are a common urinary tract affliction. It is important to know the chemical nature of the stone. Calcium stones can be associated with a parathyroid disorder, Paget's disease, or osteoporosis. Uric acid stones can mean gout.

A single stone does not necessarily weaken the kidneys unless it causes obstruction or fills the kidney cavity (staghorn stone).

Stones can be prevented if the cause is found and treated, such as overactive parathyroid glands, or gout. Stones recur in about 40 percent of those who have passed them, but recurrence is less if the patient drinks from three to four quarts of water daily. Diet and drugs to alter the urine composition (making it either more acid or more alkaline depending on the kind of stones present) can help reduce chronic stone formation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My sister has been in the hospital four or five times for blood. Her blood runs low. What makes a person lose blood like that? She says the doctors can't tell why this happens. Can you tell me a little something about this? — B.C.

Not much from the information you give. Could be some form of aplastic anemia, meaning failure of the body to produce blood. The blood-forming system is deficient.

A malignancy can be a cause. So can chemical poisoning, which could be gradual. More rarely, a nutritional deficiency could be the trouble, but it would have to be a severe one.

I assume appropriate blood and bone marrow tests have been done. If not, they should be, along with a thorough physical examination. Other organs may be involved in a too rapid destruction of her red cells. The problem is complicated and usually requires the attention of a doctor who specializes in blood disorders (hemotologist).

SPECIAL NOTE: I do not at the present time have any written material on the subject of asthma specifically. However, readers interested in the subject should contact local chapters of the Lung Association. I'm told they may have free material on such disorders.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there anything wrong or not beneficial in giving children instant non-fat dry milk fortified with A and D instead of regular whole milk? The children prefer this to the regular milk and the cost savings are cosiderable. — W.E.

Nothing at all wrong with this. In fact, cup for cup, the reconstituted dry milk is significantly richer in just about every component, including calories, protein, and carbohydrates. The only thing lacking is the fat. The dry milk contains but a trace of that, the whole milk as much as 3.5 percent fat. That missing 3.5 percent fat volume allows a greater concentration of other nutrients in the dry milk. The money savings is a plus.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why is it that some babies turn yellowish shortly after being born? What causes this, and is it serious? — Mrs J.D.

It is true that jaundice may occur in about half of full-term babies and in a higher percentage of preemies. It usually appears within 24 hours after birth, but quickly disappears once the liver assumes its full role in disposing of blood pigment (which cause the jaundice). Unless the jaundice increases beyond acceptable levels it is not considered significant.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How large are a woman's ovaries? — Miss K.J.

Normally about an inch and a half in length, three quarters of an inch wide, and about a third of an inch thick.

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble" — it could be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You need to Know About Them." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Accessories Aid Photographers

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

The normal challenge for most camera fans is to be able to get a good picture of what confronts their camera lens. But there are others who find it more exciting and more of a challenge to try tricks with their lenses to produce results that are offbeat and creative.

It was on that premise that the first Front Lens Accessory Photography Contest was conceived by Fred Spira of Spiratone, Inc., in cooperation with the Hall of Science of the City of New York. Recently, I went to see the 100 winning photographs from that competition at the Hall of Science in Flushing Meadows, the site of the New York World's Fair of 1964-65.

The photographs were eye-catching examples of what imaginative minds can do with photographic accessories, the number of which stunned me. I wasn't too much aware of them before but suddenly found myself immersed in a world of pictures produced by holographically produced diffraction gratings, crossed Polarizers, multiple image lenses and Spiratone Rayburst Stellars, Crostars, Mistmakers, Vibracolors and Curvatars.

The exciting winning pictures were on view by rear-screen projection from the original slide transparencies and also as Cibachrome color print produced directly from the slides. The prints permitted close study of individual pictures to analyze how the various elements were put together to get their visual kick.

I cornered Fred Spira and asked what explanation he would give to a beginner who wanted to explore this type of photography.

"Front lens accessories, that is, anything you put in front of a camera lens," he replied, "basically can do three things. One — it can change the color of an image. Two — it can change the image physically by splitting it into components, like multi-image prisms, or alter its shape like fisheye curvetars. And, three — it can make changes in the spectral highlights and do things to them like the Crostar, Mistmaker and holographically produced attachments.

For further enlightment, I consulted the Spiratone catalog and found a list of gadgets to create a variety of different effects. Here are some of the items which, when applied with ingenuity and the right subject matter, can make creative or offbeat pictures:

Vibracolor filters. They provide unusual, "unreal" color effects for dramatic, attention-arresting images. They are available in Aqua, Rose and Purple.

Colorflow filters. They are able to vary their color from pale to deep intensity. They are made in two varieties: Single Color and Bicolor. The latter not only shift their intensity but also shift from one color to another: from Yellow-Green to Blue; from Red to Green; from Red to Blue and from Red to Yellow.

Contrast Blue. This is a deep blue filter which creates a nighttime effect in daylight with color film. With black-and-white film, it accentuates haze and, by reducing subject detail, it simulates fog and haze.

Rainbow filter. It is a diffraction grating replica attachment which creates a prismatic, rainbow-colored streak emanating from any undiffused light source or specular reflection in the scene.

Rayburst filters. They are holographically produced and create powerful, multicolored light patterns from any undiffused light source or specular reflection. They come in two patterns: Stellar and Streaker. Stellar creates an 8-multicolored-spoke pattern around the light. Streaker produces one multicolored streak through the light plus a repeat multiple image pattern of the subject.

Custom Crostars. They are attachments which produce a cross pattern from undiffused light sources and specular reflections. They're available in stronger or weaker crosses.

Multimage Lenses. They are prism attachments designed with a variety of patterns to produce a variety of multiple images with a single exposure.

Rockport Sets Art Festival

ROCKPORT (Special) — The 9th Annual Rockport Art Festival will be celebrated July 1-2 at the ski-basin park on sparkling Aransas Bay.

The natural, rustic beauty of the Rockport-Fulton area, coupled with its relaxed and friendly atmosphere, is quite a drawing card for the Sunday painter as well as those who make art their livelihood and all the shades in between.

Under the gaily striped tents, along the shaded walk-ways, the visitor can enjoy the words of approximately 120 artists from Texas and the surrounding states. Among artists who have established themselves with the festival from its beginning are, to mention just a few: Sonny Timmie, J. Royal Telford, Will Armstrong, Jerev Smith, Lavernis Royal, Jerry Seagle, Richard Korczynski, Charles Branch, Joe Tye, Bette Gago, George Boutwell, Robert Beckner, Jan Bish, Elaine Stockbauer, Armando Hinojosa, Alberto Mesa, Bill Webb, Robert Blake and Nanci Barnes.

Nanci Barnes is the festival chairman as announced by Estelle Stair, president of the Art Association. Miss remarked that they are "planning a beatiful menu. There will be something for everyone. The association will be handling the food concessions."

Admission is free and there will be a children's area for baby sitting.

Crocheted Dolls Become Huggable Toys

Crochet toy-making creates just the right touch for some huggable playtimes in this "Who's Been Eating My Porridge?" doll grouping.

Easy pattern instructions will guide you on your rounds every stitch of the way, through fast combinations of basic chain, single, double, and half double crochet stitches. Doll features are sewn into place after the head is crocheted and before stuffing.

You can give Goldilocks, Poppa Bear, Mama Bear, and Baby Bear happy expressions in outline, satin, and single embroidery stitches. Story-time will come to life when you hand over the uniquely personal, ornate and safe toys to your children.

It is especially important to establish the correct gauge, or stitches-per-inch, at the outset of this crochet project. To check your gauge, simply compare the stitches-per-inch in a piece of practice work with the stitches-per-inch required in the pattern. If you find too many stitches, you will need to loosen up. On the other hand, if you find too few stitches per inch, then your work is to loose. The correct gauge is easily attained with a little practice, though moving up or down to the next size crochet hood may also help remedy the problem.

Crochet dolls are washable and measure from 5½" to 9" tall. They are available in a complete kit containing polyester stuffing, acrylic yarn, a crochet hook, and instructions.

Several Nations Issue Stamps In Honor Of Smallpox Vaccine

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Smallpox, one of the world's most dreaded diseases, is now nearly eliminated — thanks to the efforts of the World Health Organization of the United Nations. To hail this achievement in medical science, several countries are now issuing new postage stamps with this theme. Two of these issuances come from the Republic of Maldives and Lesotho.

In the 18th century, Dr. Edward Jenner discovered the smallpox vaccine which helped reduce the prolific spreading of the disease. In 1959, the WHO instituted a campaign for global eradication, and the program began in 1967. In 1972, smallpox cases were reported only in Ethiopia, Somalia, India and Malaysia. Today, only a handful of cases have been reported in Ethiopia and Somalia.

Lesotho has issued two new stamps. The 5-cent illustrates Dr. Jenner vaccinating a child. The 25-cent depicts the head of an African child against the background of the United Nations' WHO symbol.

Three new stamps for the occasion were issued by the Maldives. One stamp shows the hospital in London where children were first vaccinated against smallpox. Another stamp features Newgate Prison, where the first inoculation experiments were conducted. The highest value bears a portrait of Dr. Jenner.

The British Post Office has put its stamp of approval on international auto racing through its sponsorship of Alain de Cadenet in the 10-event Can-Am Challenge series. De Cadenet's car is painted in green with a Union Jack flag depicted as a stamp. The car is called the "British Stamps Special."

It is interesting to note that De Cadenet is an avid stamp collector, and during his travels on the racing circuit he will be talking to philatelic societies and clubs to discuss stamp collecting. His specialty is the stamps of King George V.

Brian Sproat of the British Post Office says, "As far as we know, this is the first time that a racing car and its driver have been used to promote stamp collecting."

The Can-Am racing circuit for a purse of $660,000 will take place in many cities of Canada and the United States. Included are Atlanta; Charlotte, N.C.; Lexington, Ohio; St. Jovite, Quebec; Watkins Glen, N.Y.; Elkhart Lake, Wis.; Mosport Park, Canada; Quebec, Canada; Monterey and Riverside in California.

The fourth edition of Stanley Gibbons' "Great Britain Specialized Stamp Catalogue, Vol. 2" is now on the market. The hardback edition lists prices and details of stamps issued under the reigns of four kings — Edward VII, George V, Edward VIII and George VI. Since the last edition was published in 1974, many price increases have been noticed.

Collectors in this country can obtain the British catalog ($14 plus $1.50 for postage and handling) by writing to: StanGib Ltd., 601 Franklin Ave., Garden City, New York, N.Y. 11530.

Explanation Provided On Purpose Of Fuses

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — I have a fairly good idea of the purpose of a fuse in an electrical circuit, but I have never seen a clear explanation of how it works. What does it mean when a fuse blows?

A. — A fuse is screwed into a socket so that it becomes a part of the electrical circuit. There is a strip of metal within the fuse container which has a lower melting point than the circuit conductor. When excessive current flows through the circuit, the metal inside the fuse, being weaker than the circuit itself, begins to melt and breaks. That is what is meant by a fuse blowing. If the fuse were not there, the circuit would get hotter and hotter and eventually start a fire. Instead, the fuse blows and the circuit is immediately cut. Let's suppose that somebody had placed a copper penny in the fuse box in place of a fuse — a practice that was fairly prevalent years ago. The circuit, drawing excess electricity because of an overload, would become hot and start a fire because the penny would not break the circuit as a fuse would. A so-called circuit breaker performs the same function as a fuse. It cuts the circuit in the event of an overload or a short.

Q. — I am planning quite a bit of remodeling in my house. If you could give someone like me, who plans to do most of the work, a single piece of advice, what would it be?

A. — You can save labor and money if you plan everything so that you can use standard sizes of building materials. You didn't ask for a second piece of advice, but here is the oldest of carpentry maxims: measure everything twice.

Q. — Although I have never done any interior painting, I expect to do a lot of it this year, the price of professional work being what it is. A neighbor tells me that I need a different brush for paints of different colors. Is this so?

A. — Since he used the word "need," the answer is no. However, some persons believe it is better to have one brush for light colors, another for dark. It's not a bad idea, but it's unnecessary if you clean each brush thoroughly after it has been used. All of this discussion has nothing to do with the advantages of using different types of brushes for different projects, such as a sash brush for windows, an oval brush for railings, etc. Also, if you do any varnishing, you not only should use a brush designed for use with varnish, you shouldn't use it for any other finishing material.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry says it has some four million visitors a year.

Flying Blimp Easy Job, Except...

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)) — Flying a blimp is easy. Just pretend you're steering a good-natured, regal, but slightly uncoordinated whale by constantly booting the big mammal in the ribs.

At least that's what it felt like when chief pilot Nick Nicolary turned over the controls of the Goodyear blimp "Columbia" as we cruised serenely over Portland.

The 36-year-old Nicolary, a cheerful, 10-year veteran of blimp flying, takes pleasure in setting us more mundane fliers in the pilot's chair in the car slung beneath the 192-foot-long gas bag.

Except for being airborne, there are few things to relate blimping to airplane flying. The pilot and six passengers sit in chairs, not seats. Not only is there no "Fasten Seat Belts" admonition blinking overhead — there are no seat belts.

None is needed, since the great airship does little more than bow briefly to acknowledge the presence of the wind currents that are turbulent bumps to airplanes.

Don't worry about it. In Goodyear's 50 years of blimp flying, no passenger has suffered so much as a bruise. Nicolary and his staff of four pilots aim to keep the record unscathed.

Nicolary took care of the takeoff. They call it a takeoff, but launch would be a more appropriate word.

As a dozen men surrounding the car heave airship N4A into the air, Nicolary pours full power to the two 210-horsepower engines and points the great nose 40 degrees skyward at the forward speed of 40 miles an hour.

To do that in an airplane would be to invite, nay, demand, disaster and is the thing of which grey-haired flight instructors are made. Were the big airship an airplane, it would have stalled and tumbled back to earth in retribution for such treatment.

But the unstallable "Columbia," all six tons of her, rises obediently at 1,000 feet a minute, buoyed by its load of helium and the thrust of its engines.

Level at 2,000 feet, Nicolary lets the novice take the controls.

The basic flight controls are a big elevator wheel, alongside the pilot's chair, that controls the pitch up and down and two big rudder pedals to yaw the blimp from side to side. There are a few gauges and engine controls, but no stick or control wheel.

No dual controls, either. One pilot at a time, if you please.

"Turn to the left and we'll head south over the city," Nicolary suggests.

I step on the left rudder hard enough to turn a normal airplane, but nothing happens.

"Push harder," says Nicolary.

I do; still nothing.

Finally, I stomp on the pedal, pushing it as far as it will go.

After a pause, designed, I'm sure, to let the pilot know it does nothing in a hurry, the great ship begins to swing ponderously to the left. A little rotation of the elevator wheel to the rear cures the airship's tendency to lose altitude in a turn.

At the flat-out cruise speed of 35 miles an hour, the blimp seems to be turning in little more than its own considerable length. I know that the slower an airplane travels, the tighter it will turn, but this is ridiculous.

As we come around to the south, I stand on the opposite pedal to stop the turn. After its humbling wait, "Columbia" obliges and proceeds, more or less, straight ahead.

Blimps, obedient to the air in which they sail, wander about with the vagaries of each tiny gust or thermal effect. To counteract the tendency of the nose to wander, the pilot must continually correct with the rudder pedals.

The result is that airship pilots appear to be pumping away at the rudder pedals as if working an old-fashioned sewing machine. At the same time, elevator wheel adjustments must be made to maintain altitude.

A blimper also must be something of an engineer since, whether blimps are lighter than air, depends on temperature and air pressure.

The greater the density of the air outside the gas bag, the more buoyant the blimp. Since the air becomes less dense at higher altitudes and on hot days, the blimp becomes heavier than the air around it.

Director Robson Dies In London

LONDON (AP) — Veteran film director and producer Mark Robson has died in a London hospital after a heart attack, the U.S. Embassy said Wednesday. He was 64.

The embassy spokesman said Robson died Tuesday night in London's Wellington Hospital and the body will be flown to Los Angeles Thursday, accompanied by his widow and three daughters.

Robson was born in Montreal on Dec. 4, 1913, and was educated at the University of California at Los Angeles and Pacific Coast University. He worked for most of the major film companies in Hollywood.

Among outstanding films he directed were "Peyton Place" and "Valley of the Dolls." He produced "The Inn of The Sixth Happiness" and "Von Ryan's Express."

Acupuncture Hailed In New Role

NEW YORK (UPI) — Acupuncture helped 85 percent of smokers give up cigarettes immediately and more than half have not lit up for two years, the International Conference on Smoking Cessation was told Thursday.

Dr. Daniel S.J. Choy said he inserts a circular needle in the tragus — the little flap in front of the opening to the ear.

The needles are changed once a week to avoid infection and the patient is seen for four sessions, one week apart. During the last visit the needles are taken out.

Choy, an attending physician at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York City, has treated 33 with acupuncture. There were 28 immediate successes and five immediate failures. Ten of the 28 went back to smoking after one to four months; the others have continued abstaining, some up to 25 months.

"This appears a fruitful avenue," Choy said at the conference sponsored by the World health Organization, the American Cancer society and the International Union Against Cancer.

During the "treatment" phase the smoker in acupuncture must:

—For four weeks avoid parties and other social situations.

—Tell family, friends and colleagues to rebuff attempts to bum a cigarette.

—Keep an empty cigarette holder on hand as a pacifier.

—Chew sugarless gum and munch carrots and celery, thinking of them as cigarette substitutes.

Another researcher, Dr. Daniel Horn, said many of the 50 million Americans who smoke want to quit but they're having a harder time than the 30 million who have quit.

Many of today's smokers use cigarettes to cope with complicated life problems, according to Horn.

He said stopping under that circumstance is the most difficult of all.

Horn, formerly director of the National Clearinghouse on Smoking, now is with the United States Office of smoking and Health, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In 1954 he co-authored the report linking heavy smoking with bad health — touching off the worldwide anti-smoking crusade.

Horn said the simplest approach for today's smokers is to substitute something for automatic smoking.

Coffee and a cigarette inseparable? Manipulate a spoon instead of a cigarette — "do a lot of stirring, dip it in and out of the coffee, keep moving it the way you would a cigarette."

Cocktail parties are tough, too. Horn suggested would-be quitters stage a few just to practice saying "no" to cigarette offers.

Bid Farewell To Castilian

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The staid Royal Language Academy said Thursday that Spaniards should start calling their language Spanish and not Castilian.

"I know of no German-Castilian or English-Castilian dictionaries, only German-Spanish and English-Spanish dictionaries," said academy President Damaso Alonso in asking Parliament to include a paragraph in Spain's new constitution that would identify the country's official language as Spanish.

"It is grotesque that most of Latin America officially calls its language Spanish but in Spain we do not," wrote an editor, Torcuato Luca de Tena. "Spanish is the common language."

Historically, Castilian was the language of Spain's central Castile regions, whose leaders united the country and for the most part have ruled it for centuries. Their language became the common language of the nation.

Academicians consider it the purest form of Spanish, and the pronunciation in some ways differs from other regional varieties. For example, King Juan Carlos, a Castilian, would call the southern port of Cadiz, "Kah-deeth," while most other Spanish speakers call it "Kah-deez."

If accepted by Parliament in its rewriting of the constitution, the proposal won't change anyone's way of speaking. But it may appease some critics in Spain's outlying regions, who long have considered Madrid and the rest of Castile to have too much dominance over politics and culture, as typified by the language.

The constitutional draft also says that such regional languages as Basque, Catalan, Galician and Majorcan, all banned under the late dictator Gen. Francisco Franco, may be used on official documents and in official proceedings.

Brezhnev, Ecevit Hold Meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit met with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev at the Kremlin Thursday and discussed Turkish-Soviet relations "at some length," officials at the Turkish embassy here reported.

Details of the meeting were not disclosed, but apparently the meeting was longer than most Turkish diplomats had expected. There was no immediate announcement of the meeting in the Soviet press.

The officials Soviet news agency Tass reported Thursday night that Ecevit's talks with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko were concluded.

The meeting, Tass said, produced a political document on Turkish-Soviet relations "which is a contribution to international detente, to consolidation of peace."

"The exchange of opinions on matters of Soviet-Turkish relations, as well as on international problems on mutual interest was continued during the talks," Tass reported.

LOCUSTS INVADE LEBANON

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — South Lebanon has been invaded by swarms of locusts which agricultural experts said came from East Africa, where they have been eating crops in famine-stricken Ethiopia.

They are eating tobacco and wheat plants here, authorities said, adding that fields are being sprayed with insecticide. They were not reported in crisis numbers by farmers.

Hospitals Said Struggling To Cut Back Costs

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Hospitals, working under the threat of federal intervention and inflation, must struggle to cut expenses without reducing quality service, a health insurance official said Thursday.

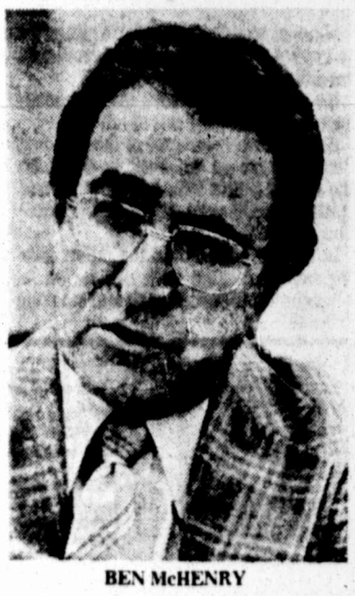

Cost containment — holding the lid on spiraling health and medical care costs — is the primary goal of hospitals nationwide, said Ben McHenry. He is vice president of the state Blue Cross/Blue Shield organization's provider affairs division.

McHenry, in Lubbock to speak about cost containment efforts, said health field professionals will know by early next year whether the nationwide goal for capping medical costs was reached.

If the national cost of health care services is not reduced by two percent this year, he said, standby federal legislation will become effective.

The law would make it mandatory for hospitals and medical services to keep costs within specified bounds, he said.

"It would just mandate that hospitals' costs would not rise above the amount stipulated. Hospitals would lose the voluntary approach," McHenry said.

BEN McHENRY

When asked whether that would create problems for doctors and hospitals, McHenry replied, "I think we all want as little legislation as we can get." If costs can be reduced voluntarily, he added, "then the voluntary effort should prevail."

Health care costs in the United States rose about 16 percent last year, and inflation was the primary cause, he said. Minimum wages increased, as did costs of malpractice insurance, food, supplies and utilities, he noted.

McHenry said that to combat the inflation, there will be a "general tightening of the belt and real close monitoring of hospital costs. There certainly is going to be a real hard look at the way care is being delivered.

"They'll be searching for better and cheaper ways of delivering care without sacrificing quality," he added.

A strong push is being made in Texas for voluntary compliance with cost containment goals, McHenry said, citing efforts of a committee comprised of representatives from the Texas Hospital Association, Texas Medical Association and Blue Cross/Blue Shield, among others.

In addition, he said, his organization attempts to contain costs by negotiating with hospitals, investigating fraud, coordinating benefit programs and trimming internal operations.

McHenry said he believes the efforts at cost containment will be successful and that the 2 percent goal will be met.

New Court District Discussed

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

What the "speedy trial act" to expedite criminal cases will do to a civil docket already proceeding at a snail's pace was uppermost in minds of state representatives and attorneys testifying at a court redistricting hearing Thursday at Lubbock County courthouse.

Need for another district court to relieve caseload congestion in the 121st judicial district and a change to do the same for the 72nd district were outlined before the Judicial Redistricting Committee, a subcommittee of the Judicial Affairs Committee of the state legislature.

Conducting the session were State Reps. Senfronia Thompson, vice chairman, of Houston, and David Cain and Chris Semos, both of Dallas.

Rep. Jim Rudd of Brownfield headed a delegation outlining the problems of distance and two annual two-week civil sessions for the four counties — Hockley, Terry, Yoakum and Cochran — in the 121st district.

Two years to get a civil case to court and two days to reach a judge for a signature were the major problems noted, plus fear of what the situation would become, if not relieved by another judge sitting concurrent with the present judge, under the speedy trial act system.

A number of attorneys from the 121st district added their support to Rudd's statements with former representative Al Allison of Levelland detailing the district's history from the time it was created in 1959 under Allison's guiding hand.

Rep. Joe Robbins of Lubbock read into the record his proposal to make Crosby County, currently a part of the 72nd Judicial District, a part of both the 72nd and the 110th to allow 110th Dist. Judge George Miller of Floydada to handle some trials in Crosby.

The concurrent area would allow, Robbins noted, 72nd Dist. Judge Denzel Bevers of Lubbock "more latitude in scheduling jury, non-jury and grand jury weeks in Lubbock and Crosby Counties."

Miller, Robbins added, has stated that he could handle extra cases from Crosby County.

However, Crosby attorneys believe, Robbins said, that Miller could not handle the entire Crosby load, leaving the necessity for a concurrent area.

The Lubbock hearing was part of a state-wide program.

Europe Study Trip Fails As Deduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attempt by Alice M. Gill of Indianapolis, Ind., to obtain a tax deduction for the costs of a summer trip to Europe in 1973 has been rejected by the Tax Court.

Mrs. Gill, an elementary school consultant in science, mathematics, language arts and social studies, took the tour as part of a home economics course at the University of Indiana.

She claimed the deduction as a business expense of improving her work as a teacher. However, the court held that the trip was instead more of a vacation, with little focus on educational activity.

In sum, the court ruled, "although we believe that petitioner's travel was without question broadening, culturally enriching, and was in fact beneficial, we cannot find any direct relationship between petitioner's European tour and her profession as an elementary school consultant."

Decline In Ultra-High Mortgage Rates Forecast

NEW YORK (AP) — Mortgage interest rates, now at their highest level in about four years, should begin to decline in the next few months, the president of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation said Thursday.

Philip R. Brinkerhoff told a news conference that the average national mortage rate of about 9⅜ percent should begin to decline in the July-September fiscal quarter and by year's end should be ¼ to ⅜ percentage points lower.

The drop still would not bring it below the level of around 9 percent at the start of this year, but Brinkerhoff said record levels of trading in the secondary mortage market should help avert a repeat of the 1973-1974 housing finance crunch which made it impossible for many people to get loans.

He predicted secondary market sales in mortages of about $68 billion this year, up from $59.3 billion in 1977. The Mortgage Corporation plans on buying up about $7.5 billion in mortages up from $4.7 billion in 1977.

Together with private institutions, the Mortgage Corporation, a creation of Congress, buys and sells mortages from savings and loans in a secondary market. The individual mortages are packaged into mortage certificates which can be traded much like stocks and bonds.

Savings and loan associations are the primary lenders of home mortages and so far this year the flow of money into those institutions has been running about 38 percent below 1977 levels, said Kenneth M. Plant, vice president for research of the Mortage Corporation.

That lag has been partially responible for what Brinkerhoff called "the most stringent squeeze for the housing market since 1974."

Although some improvement is expected as the year progresses, Mortgage Corporation officials estimate net gains in savings flows will come to about $24 billion, or about $8 billion less than the $32 billion in 1977.

Brinkerhoff said a combination of factors, including a slackening of seasonal demand in the autumn and an increased ability of savings institutions to turnover money by selling their mortages to the secondary market should result in prime mortgage rates going down an average of ¼ to ⅜ percentage points by the end of 1978.

Using the range of rates, which commonly fluctuate in increments of ¼ percentage point, rather than national averages, the difference of ¼ or ½ percentage point on a conventional 30-year mortgage amounts to a small change in monthly payments but could be several thousand dollars over the life of the loan.

As an example, on a 30-year loan for $30,000, the half-point difference between a 9.75 percent rate, at the high end of the current average range, and a 9.25 percent rate, the low end of the projected one, would amount to a savings of about $11 in monthly payments and $4,000 over the life of a loan.

Brinkerhoff also said he expected the total amount of mortgage lending by savings and loans to increase to $114.5 billion this year from $105.2 billion last. The total number of mortgages on new and existing homes is expected to remain near the 4.5 million level of 1977 but the rising prices of homes will push the total amount of lending up, he said.

Dollar's Fall Hikes U.S. Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices will be boosted by as much one percent as a result of the fall of the dollar against other currencies, a White House official said Thursday.

William D. Nordhaus, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers testifying before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, had varying interpretations on whether the one percent figure is a large amount.

In testimony submitted to the panel, Nordhaus said, "My conclusion is that we are paying an inflationary price for the depreciation of the dollar, but it will not be large."

Yet he agreed when Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said that one percent "sounds like a small figure but it is not."

Said Nordhaus, "I'm not saying that's a small number ... it's regarded as very serious by the administration."

Nordhaus said the direct impact of the dollar's fall on prices is around 0.5 percent. In addition, he said, there are other inflationary factors such as wage and price boosts resulting from higher import prices.

The ultimate effect on prices, he said, would be an increase from ½ to as much as one percent.

Nordhaus said that "the best way to ensure a strong dollar and orderly exchange markets is through policies which produce better economic performance — stronger growth abroad, lower inflation and reduced dependence on oil at home — and policies which promote economic adjustment everywhere."

He spoke against moves to impose restrictions on imports in retaliation for the dollar's fall.

"When we impose quantitative restrictions on imports we not only reduce the level of imports but eliminate potential import competition should domestic producers raise their prices," Nordhaus said. In some cases, he said, import restrictions "are an open invitation to excessive price increase."

John Deaver, head of Ford Motor Co.'s economics department, told the committee that depreciation of the dollar has helped American auto manufacturers since costs are going up for imported cars.

He said the dollar's decline has helped "halt the upward trend" in imports over the last decade.

Deaver said he expects the dollar will depreciate more and said there "should not be an effort to maintain it at an artificial level." He said Ford ideally would like a stable dollar with lessening inflation and a stable economy.

Robert Crandall, a Treasury Department consultant and fellow at the Brookings Institution, said the steel industry also is benefiting from the fall of the dollar as well as from enforcement of trade laws.

Fraud Probe Courses To Be Offered Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department announced Wednesday it will offer brief courses to train government officials in investigating official fraud cases.

The training consists of eight hours of work and each course is taught by a two-man team from the fraud section of the department's criminal division.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. — I am familiar indeed with your recommendation of sound equities for young investors. So is everyone else — IF a sound economy is a remote possibility. From where I sit, and willing to study the forecasts that flood in from every side, I'm not equity oriented. What do you think?

A — If you think I'm going to climb a mountain and hurl thunderbolts at you for daring to qustion equities, you've got another think coming. Where is it written that everyone with a spare dollar must put it into common shares? A lot more money has been made by investing in real estate, racehorses, oil wells, and Gutenberg Bibles. But if you can't evaluate land, or oil wells, perhaps you should consider investing your money in companies headed by people who do know these and other businesses. That's really what investing in common share is all about.

You seem to express doubts about the soundness of our economy. That, by no means, makes you unique. The national and private debt has been climbing steadily. Interest rates continue to climb. Inflation shows no signs of abatement. But the spring stock market really was most impressive. By the time this is in type, all those stock buyers — domestic and foreign — may find themselves caught in a bear trap. Or call those who sold may be cursing their impatience.

When you find out what a "sound economy" is, please let me know. I haven't heard of one for years.

As a forecast: I have no way of checking out the Greeks' Delphic oracles or the Romans' reliance on chicken entrails but 40 years of reading and editing forecasts hasn't made me, or cost me, a dollar. (Could be my fault — but there it is.)

And in the meantime, what do you do with the $5 left over at the end of the week? No decision.

Life Insurance Stocks: a recent study by Dennis J. Callaghan, vice president of Blyth Eastman Dillon, declares that these issues should out-perform the general market in 1978 and '79 just as they did in both 1976 and '77.

"The stocks," he points out, "are selling currently at modest price earnings multiples averaging about six to seven times our 1978 earnings estimates... They are attractive because of their dependable earnings growth which should continue at an average rate of 10 to 12 percent over the next three to five years, as well as their excellent dividend growth potential. Life insurance companies increased their rate by almost 25 percent during 1977..."

Companies mentioned in the study are NLT, US Life, Jefferson-Pilot and Southwestern Life.

• • •

Q. — Who is selling the stock I am buying? It isn't my broker, is it?

A — Could be. A broker "making a market" in an over-the-counter stock may sell you shares from his own inventory, just as he may buy your shares from his own inventory. On an exchange-listed deal the stock you buy may come from a floor specialist's inventory or from the account of another investor who is a client of any member firm — including your own.

• • •

Q. — About 10 years ago I bought some acreage in a western development. Recently I wrote to several real estate companies offering to sell, but got no response. Why?

A — Because real estate developers are in the business of selling land — not buying it.

Convicted Paddler To Appeal Charge

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Sunday school superintendent who used a two-inch-wide paddle to spank a 21-month-old child in a church nursery says he is appealing his conviction on an assault charge.

Air Force Capt. Randall O. Grill, a dentist, was given a 90-day suspended sentence and fined $100 this week after telling a judge he was taking the Bible's advice on the disciplining of children when he spanked the toddler. The child's parents complained when bruises were found on the boy's buttocks and lower back.

BILL BELIEVED INADEQUATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to reorganize regulation of amateur sports must include a bill of rights for amateur athletes before it wins support of the Amateur Athletic Union, the AAU president says. Joel Ferrell told a House judiciary subcommittee the measure is inadequate in its present form.

Volunteer Force Gets Appraisal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Thursday he feels optimistic about the all-volunteer military force, but is uncertain about its future.

"So far, in peacetime and in an economy operating at less than full employment, it is working," Brown said.

But, the Pentagon chief added, "we don't yet know for sure" whether an adequate volunteer-based military force can be maintained when civilian jobs become plentiful and when a declining youth population reaches military age in the 1980s and 1990s.

And Brown forecast more acute competition from private industry for technically trained personnel needed to operate increasingly sophisticated military equipment.

Brown's appraisal of the five-year-old all-volunteer service came in a speech prepared for delivery to graduates of the University of the Pacific College of Dentistry in San Francisco.

The speech followed by two days Sen. Sam Nunn's assertion that "there is growing consensus that the all-volunteer force ... may fail to provide an adequate foundation for the future national security needs of our nation."

The Senate Armed Services Committee, at the Georgia Democrat's behest, has ordered the Pentagon to study alternatives.

Without specifically noting Nunn's criticisms, Brown said the armed services are managing to achieve 96 percent of their recruiting goals while maintaining forces at about 2.1 million men and women. This, he said, "approaches the minimum needed for our national security."

The defense secretary also said fears that the volunteer service would become a "poor man's force" of questionable quality "had not been realized.

"Analysis to date suggests that the armed forces today ... are a reasonable reflection of the population of the United States — perhaps a bit less so than under the draft," Brown said. He added that various indicators of quality are mixed.

"We are obtaining high-school graduates in adequate numbers for the most part, although the number of recruits in the highest mental categories is not so great as previously," Brown said.

"We have problems recruiting and retaining for some technical skills and some less attractive positions," he added. "But discipline and morale in general appear to be higher than under the draft. Commanders tell me that their troops are the best ever."

Brown acknowledged, however, that the National Guard and Army Reserve forces constitute another problem. He said "our ability to attract volunteers for the reserve units ... has not been entirely satisfactory."

Brown also said a number of measures are being taken to improve the attractiveness of military service in both the active and reserve components, and that women are being given an increasingly wider role.

Heartline

(HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Senior citizens will receive prompt replies, but a stamped, self-addressed envelope must be included with the request. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I am 64 years old. I have been drawing my Social Security widow's benefits for the last four years. Do you know if we will get a raise in our benefits this year? — D.C.

Yes, there will be a raise in Social Security and Supplemental Security Income payments this year. These benefits will increase automatically by 6.5 percent beginning with the June 30 checks for SSI recipients and the July 3 checks for Social Security beneficiaries.

Under the law, Social Security and SSI checks increase automatically each year if the Consumer Price Index rises by 3 percent or more over specified measuring periods. Through this mechanism, the purchasing power of Social Security and SSI recipients is maintained despite inflation.

The average monthly Consumer Price Index rose by 6.5 percent from the first quarter of 1977 through the first quarter of 1978, which is the measuring period for the 1978 benefit increase. The increase requires an automatic 6.5 percent cost-of-living increase in Social Security and SSI payments. Previous cost-of-living increases were 8 percent in 1975, 6.4 percent in 1976 and 5.9 percent in 1977.

Heartline has written a guide to Social Security for those persons drawing Social Security or going to start who would like a better understanding of the Social Security program. To order, send $2.00 to Heartline, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 68 years old and I draw a VA check and a Social Security check. I have heard that the VA pays a clothing allowance. Do you know anything about this? — T.A.

There is a yearly $190 clothing allowance that is paid to many eligible veterans. To be eligable for this, the veteran must be receiving a service-connected disability benefit from the VA, and his disability must require the use of prosthetic or orthopedic appliances, including artificial limbs, braces, and wheel chairs which the VA determines to cause undue wear and tear on clothing. Veterans on this VA compensation roll receive the allowance automatically after their initial application. You can apply for this benefit at any VA office.

HEARTLINE: My husband is on Civil Service disability. If the Civil Service says his earning capacity is restored, how will this affect him? — N.J.

Even if an individual remains totally disabled, an annuitant whose earning capacity is restored before reaching age 60 will have the annuity discontinued. If earning capacity is restored, the annuity is continued temporarily (not to exceed one year). If reemployed in government service within the year, annuity stops upon reemployment. If the individual is not reemployed, the annuity stops at the expiration of the one year period.

Maddox Plans To Sell Mementoes

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former Gov. Lester Maddox, hoping to get money to repay debts from his losing 1974 campaign and a heart attack, said Wednesday he will sell mementoes of his political career at public auction this weekend.

Maddox said he will sell the entire stock of a store where he sold alarm clocks and trinkets bearing his pickhandle symbol. He said he would also sell certificates, awards, scrolls and plaques from the walls of the governor's office he occupied from 1967-71.

"It'll be mostly the things that I picked up in politics over the years," said Maddox. "Of couse, I've got to sell out my stock of T-shirts and things from the store — even the bicycles."

As governor, Maddox was fond of riding a bicycle backward.

Maddox became a symbol of Southern segregation in the 1960s when he refused to allow blacks in his fried chicken restaurant and handed out pickhandles to customers of the Pickrick Restaurant, in oppostion to federal orders to integrate.

Along with the "Lester Maddox USA" alarmclocks, phonograph records and trinkets he sold at his underground Atlanta store, Maddox also sold autographed pickhandles — which he referred to as "Pickrick drumsticks."

Now, he said, he is unable to operate the store and will sell its stock to help pay about $123,000 in loans remaining from his unsuccessful campaign to regain the governor's office in 1974. Maddox was trounced by Gov. George Busbee in a runoff Democratic primary that year.

"The debt was about $310,000 when I left office," Maddox said.

Authorities Find Hijacked Truck's Rich Cargo Intact

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (AP) — State police broke the seal Thursday on a truck that had been hijacked with $1.6 million in gold and silver — and found the cargo intact.

Police located the truck partly hidden in woods here Wednesday afternoon, about seven hours after the heist. But the hijackers, who had handcuffed and chained the truck's driver to a tree, were still at large Thursday.

Two armed, masked men waylaid the truck on Interstate 95 in North Stonington about 6 a.m. Wednesday and apparently hid the truck in an isolated section of this town on the Rhode Island line, about 10 miles away. The driver told police he had stopped to inspect a possibly faulty tire when the bandits approached.

The truck contained gold and silver of varying percentages of purity, destined for a Massachusetts refinery.

"They apparently made some efforts to camouflage" the truck, said Connecticut State Police Trooper John McLeod, adding it was covered with cut brush and parked in an isolated area about one-quarter mile from Route 183.

A Rhode Island police officer spotted the truck from the air about 1 p.m. Wednesday, and police guarded the area, "maintaining a discreet distance," throughout the night, McLeod said.

Police and the FBI waited for additional police and representatives of the company which owns the cargo, Handy & Harman of New York City, before opening the truck about 10 a.m. Thursday.

"We didn't want to taint any possible evidence. The perpetrators might have tried to touch the lock, so we wanted to get fingerprints, and we wanted to do it in the daylight," McLeod said.

The truck was on a daily run made by L.P.M. Corp. trucks for Handy & Harman, from the firm's Fairfield plant to its Attleboro refinery.

Handy & Harman is the nation's largest single producer of silver for silversmiths and the major fabricator of silver and gold for industrial uses, company Vice President Richard Daniel said.

FTC Nominee Denies He Favored Dropping Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nominee to the Federal Trade Commission Thursday denied a report that as an FTC staffer he continued a costly case even though he said there was little merit to it.

"I felt it was a good case and that we would win it," Robert Pitofsky said under questioning at his Senate confirmation hearing.

Pitofsky, a law professor, was head of the FTC's Consumer Protection Bureau from 1970 to 1973.

After President Carter nominated Pitofsky to the vacant seat on the FTC, a former FTC staff attorney charged that he refused to drop a costly case against Coca-Cola Foods' Hi-C drink even though he said, "We haven't got much of a case."

Ben Stein, who was an FTC attorney at the time the case was pending, made the charge in a column in the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. He said the FTC staff spent "perhaps millions" to pursue the false advertising case that the commission dropped several years later.

Stein said he went to Pitofsky well before the case went to the commissioners and urged the case be dropped. He quoted Pitofsky as replying, "I guess you're right. We haven't got much of a case."

But Stein reported that Pitofsky was "horrified" when Stein suggested the case be ended.

"We can't go around saying all this was a mistake. We've been working on the case for five years," Stein quoted Pitofsky as saying.

Asked by Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., about the report, Pitofsky said no such conversation ever took place. "If an attorney working on the case had expressed doubt that we could win the case, I would have removed him from the case. But that never happened," he said.

Pitofsky insisted that the High-C complaint was sound and that the case would have been won if the commissioners had decided to press it. The complaint said that High-C had been falsely advertised as the nutritional equivalent of orange juice and other pure fruit juices.

"I never favored harassing any company unnecessarily," he said.

Stein, writer-in-residence at the Herald-Examiner, wrote, "All of the money, both on the government's side and the defendant's side, was spent because my superior could not admit that the government had made a mistake, lest someone ask why the government made such a big mistake."

Stein also charged that his "fellow bureaucrats were pulling billions of dollars out of the country and doing crossword puzzles or sleeping in their offices. This was the rule and not the exception."

Pitofsky, now law professor at Georgetown University Law Center, also has taught at New York University and Harvard and has been a practicing attorney.

EPA Releases Recall Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 2.4 million American and Japanese autos have been recalled to correct the a defective pollution control part, an action that could cost three auto manufacturers $48 million, the Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday.

The EPA figures were released on the same day Nissan Motor Corp. voluntarily recalled 140,000 1977 Datsuns that contained the defective part.

The defect involves a weak braze joint that might break, making the emission control system ineffective by permitting exhaust gases to leak, the EPA said.

American Motors earlier recalled virtually its entire 1976 production of 400,000 autos to repair the same defect. Ford has recalled 1.7 million cars. Nissan also earlier asked 160,000 1977 Datsun owners to drive their cars to local dealers for repair of the part.

The EPA said the part, which is part of the exhaust gas recirculation system, costs $15. Labor to replace it is estimated at $5 per car, the EPA said.

The 1977 Datsun models involved in Thurssday's recall are the B210, F10, 710, 810, 200SX and 280Z, the EPA said.

Senate Okays Nuclear Fuel For India

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has advised President Carter that it has no objections to continued shipment of U.S. nuclear fuel to India, provided that country agrees to accept international safeguards.

In a letter to Carter on Wednesday, the panel in effect approved the sale of 7.4 tons of uranium to India for its Tarapur power plant, a deal sought both by the White House and by Premier Morarji Desai during his visit here last week.

The letter said, however, that it was "of critical importance" that there be "substantial progress at an early date" in bringing India's peaceful nuclear activities under international nuclear nonproliferation controls.

It urged a "vigorous effort" by the administration to gain India's consent, with talks based on the expectation that further nuclear fuel sales are "highly unlikely" if full-scope safeguards are not achieved.

It also said the United States should actively seek a guarantee that no spent fuel furnished by the United States would be used for explosive purposes.

"It may not be necessary for the United States to have physical control of the fuel as long as the fuel will be assuredly under international safeguards and will not be handled in a manner unacceptable to the United States," said the letter, signed by committee Chairman John Sparkman, D-Ala.

The letter removed any obstacle that might have stood in the way of the Tarapur fuel deal in the Senate. That meant it will go through unless the House should impose a legislative veto of its own, which is not considered likely.

The House International Relations Committee last week recommended that the House reject a resolution by some 60 lawmakers to block the sale. No date is set for floor consideration.

Mark 4:37-41, 5:1-14, The Living Bible

37 But soon a terrible storm arose. High waves began to break into the boat until it was nearly full of water and about to sink.

38 Jesus was asleep at the back of the boat with His head on a cushion. Frantically they wakened Him, shouting, "Teacher, don't You even care that we are all about to drown?"

39 Then He rebuked the wind and said to the sea, "Quiet down!" And the wind fell, and there was a great calm!

40 And He asked them, "Why were you so fearful? Don't you even yet have confidence in Me?"

41 And they were filled with awe and said among themselves, "Who is this man, that even the winds and seas obey Him?"

CHAPTER 5

1,2 When they arrived at the other side of the lake a demon-possessed man ran out from a graveyard, just as Jesus was climbing from the boat.

3,4 This man lived among the gravestones, and had such strength that whenever he was put into handcuffs and shackles—as he often was—he snapped the handcuffs from his wrists and smashed the shackles and walked away. No one was strong enough to control him.

5 All day long and through the night he would wander among the tombs and in the wild hills, screaming and cutting himself with sharp pieces of stone.

6 When Jesus was still far out on the water, the man had seen Him and had run to meet Him, and fell down before Him.

7,8 Then Jesus spoke to the demon within the man and said, "Come out, you evil spirit." It gave a terrible scream, shrieking, "What are You going to do to me, Jesus, Son of the Most High God? For God's sake, don't torture me!"

9 "What is your name?" Jesus asked, and the demon replied, "Legion, for there are many of us here within this man."

10 Then the demons begged Him again and again not to send them to some distant land.

11 Now as it happened there was a huge herd of hogs rooting around on the hill above the lake.

12 "Send us into those hogs," the demons begged.

13 And Jesus gave them permission. Then the evil spirits came out of the man and entered the hogs, and the entire herd plunged down the steep hillside into the lake and drowned.

14 The herdsmen fled to the nearby towns and countryside, spreading the news as they ran. Everyone rushed out to see for themselves.

World Scientists Recommend Increased Use Of Sun Power

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Scientists from around the world ended a week-long conference on solar energy Thursday by recommending increased use of sun power in developing countries.

Position papers submitted by the 400 participants from 50 countries covered topics ranging from solar-powered greenhouses for desert agriculture to a space station to collect the sun's rays and beam them back to earth.

Dr. Tarek M. Khalil, of the University of Miami (Fla.), said developing countries should prepare now to tap the sun's energy "so that whenever the economics of solar become feasible ...immediate implementation can take place." He said more research is needed before widespread use of solar power will be possible.

Many scientists wrote papers stressing that supplies of fossil fuels such as oil, gas, coal and uranium are rapidly running out.

"Today, the production of fossil fuels is increasing with a doubling time of 12 years," said Drs. Nejat Veziroglu and Sadi Kakac, also of the University of Miami. "This doubling process is expected to increase with time. It is estimated that the fossil fuel production will start decreasing about the year 2030."

They said if one percent of the earth's surface were covered with solar collectors, the amount of energy produced "would support the world equilibrium population of 11 billion people with a quality of life 10 times better than today's."

Dr. Ibrahim Sakr, Egyptian co-chairman of the conference, said Egypt could save 16 million tons of the 120 million tons of fossil fuel it consumes a year by heating water in homes with solar power. He said Egypt will begin producing solar water-heating units within six months and will manufacture 12,000 a year.

Er. A.A.M. Sayigh of the Unversity of Riyad, Saudi Arabia, noted that the Mideast is one of the sunniest regions in the world and said intense solar radiation has long been a major agricultural problem.

"In general terms the major problem of the area is lack of water combined with excess heat, it is not one of fertility of the soil," he said.

Unprotected plants are scorched by the sun's heat in the daytime and suffer shock from desert cold at night, he said, but solar collectors could be used to distribute the energy evenly, via a water radiator system.

Another Miami scientist, Dr. Homer Hiser, suggested solar space stations should be used to beam sun rays back to the ground via a microwave antenna.

"The microwave beam would permit all-weather transmission so that full use could be made of nearly 24 hours of available solar energy," he said.

He said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is investigating the idea to see if the microwave beams would have harmful side effects.

"This beam would have no effect on humans or on large animals such as cows, but we still don't know yet about insects, lizards and worms," Hiser said.

Two Injured As Fuel Truck, Train Collide

FORT WORTH (AP) — A gasoline truck that apparently lost its brakes struck a train carrying 37 tank cars of jet airplane fuel Thursday, causing an explosion and fire that was quickly extinguished. Two persons were injured.

Police ordered the surrounding residential neighborhood evacuated, but halted the evacuation when fire fighters from the city and Carswell Air Force Base extinguished the fire within an hour.

The accident tore down power lines and knocked out electricity to about 1,500 homes in Fort Worth's southwestern section.

The truck driver, Bobby Thompson, 35, of Dallas, was reported in critical condition in Dallas's Parkland Hospital with second-and third-degree burns over 80 per cent of his body. A brakeman injured his ankle as he jumped from the train.

Witnesses told police the tractor-trailer truck swerved sharply before the crash as the driver apparently tried to miss the train, but did not slow down. Police said before an ambulance took Thompson away he told witnesses the brakes on his truck had failed.

The truck clipped the first locomotive of the Missouri-Pacific train, struck the second, caught fire and stopped at the fourth tank car where fire engulfed two of the tank cars and the truck.

Civil Defense officials said the train carried jet fuel "more volatile than regular aviation fuel." Carswell sent two trucks that sprayed fire-suffocating foam over the site.

Agency Exempts Jet Fuel From Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy on Wednesday proposed to exempt kerosene-base jet fuel, known as kerojet, and aviation gasoline from allocation and price controls.

It said supplies of the fuels are adequate to meet demand and decontrol will not cause inequitable prices to consumers.

President's War On Paperwork Now Reported Bogging Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's war on paperwork, which started like a cavalry charge, has bogged down in the trenches.

There were advances on the tax form front, but then the battle of the bacon report was lost, and the skirmish over truckers' logs is going badly.

The fight to reduce paperwork is nearly stymied, and has been for six months, according to figures soon to be released.

The reason? Pick one. Tangled governmental organization. Industry resistance. Lack of legal weapons. Most important: constant introduction of new programs and regulations, which generate still more paperwork.

The now-defunct Federal Paperwork Commission estimated last year that the annual cost of federal paperwork may exceed $100 billion, or about $500 for each U.S. citizen. More recently, the president's Office of Management and Budget estimated that Americans spend 785 million hours a year filling out federal forms.

Carter told a group of businessmen just after he took office that if his presidency accomplished only one thing, it would be to cut the number and complexity of "regulations, guidelines, directives and required reports."

Official estimates show that during the first nine months of the Carter administration, the government reduced by 9.6 percent the time taxpayers spent filling out federal forms, applications and other paperwork.

But in the next six months, ending April 1, the burden decreased only three-tenths of 1 percent, according to the new figures from the OMB.

"We hit the easier ones at the outset," said Stanley E. Morris, head of OMB's paperwork shrinkage shop. "It's going to get tougher from here."

OMB Director James T. McIntyre concedes that "reducing red tape cannot be accomplished overnight," and he says Carter intends to keep plugging away.

Most federal agencies predict new reductions, and there already have been notable declines in federal job-safety forms and federal red tape linked to regulation of private pension funds.

The Internal Revenue Service, which generates more paperwork than any other agency, says it has cut tax-filing time by more than 10 percent since January 1977.

But paperwork has increased sharply elsewhere, generated by equal employment regulations and by new controls on toxic chemicals, sewage and other pollution.

Even some old regulations like the bacon report and truckers' logs are hardy varieties that resist attempts at weeding.

The government requires long-haul truckers to fill out daily logs, on pain of fines up to $500, showing how they spent each 15-minute segment of their day. The job takes an estimated three minutes a day plus more time for collecting, sorting, evaluating and storing the forms, which must be kept for a full year.

Federal truck-safety enforcers say the forms help keep fatigued drivers away from the wheel. Federal regulations limit the time that long-haul truckers can drive between rest periods. The logs enable the 128 inspectors from the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety to keep track of 4 million truckers, or so goes the argument.

Kenneth Pierson, the bureau's deputy director, says that under prodding by OMB's paper tigers he's hired a private consultant to explore ways to do the job without the logs. But Pierson says he can't imagine what alternatives will be suggested.

As for bacon, the Agriculture Department requires meat processers to send in weekly reports on their production, including, among other things, the amount of bacon they sliced.

Earlier this year the department tried to make the report monthly, instead of weekly, estimating that would save processors more than 100,000 hours of form-filling annually.

But the processors insisted that they need the weekly report themselves.

A monthly report "would just be history; it wouldn't do us any good for planning," says Ewen Wilson, chief economist for the American Meat Institute, the meatpackers' trade association.

The bacon figures are especially prized by those who speculate in the multibillion-dollar pork belly futures market, and also by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the federal agency charged with keeping pork-belly traders honest.

Result: the bacon report still is weekly.

For some, the paperwork problem is getting worse. Farmers spend about 10 percent more time filling out application forms for loans and subsidies from the Carter administration than under the free-market policies of the Nixon and Ford years.

The Environmental Protection Agency increased paperwork for business and state and local governments by 21 percent in the first nine months of the Carter administration and 9 percent more in the next six months, despite what has been cited as a model paperwork-reduction program. This was largely because EPA was given the new job of regulating pollution from toxic industrial chemicals, which had not been controlled before 1977.

The red tape is part of the price of keeping the environment clean of pollutants that, in a simpler age, didn't even exist. "There's no getting around the fact that life gets more complicated every day," observed EPA spokesman Christian Rice.

Internal Revenue Service Biggest Problem Maker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest generator of federal paperwork is the Internal Revenue Service, which accounts for 78 percent of the hours which the public spends dealing with federal forms, according to official estimates.

Here are the five biggest creators of federal red tape and the time the public spends each year filling out their forms, as estimated by the president's Office of Management and Budget.

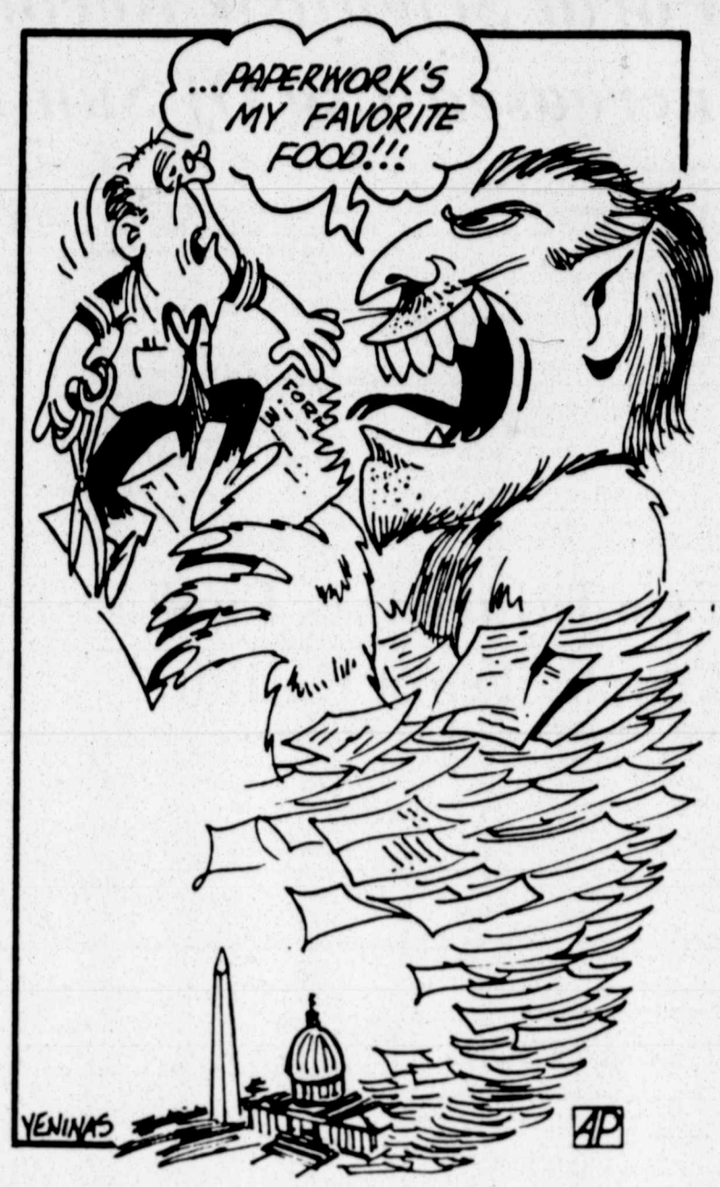

—IRS: 612.6 million hours.
—HEW: 43.6 million.
—Independent regulatory commissions: 40.8 million.
—Labor Department: 18.6 million.
—Agriculture Department: 10.3 million.

The OMB says the most burdensome federal income-tax forms, as measured by the number of hours spent filling them out, are:

—Form 1040, individual income tax return, 149 million hours.
—Form W-2, wage and tax statement for each employee, 109 million.
—Form 941, employers quarterly return for tax withholding, 87 million.
—Form 1099, receipts of interest and dividends, 53.7 million.
—Form 1040A, individual income tax return short form; 32.8 million.

Among non-tax forms, OMB says the five most burdensome federal forms, as measured by the time the public spends filling them out, are:

—FCC radio station program logs, 18.2 million hours.
—HEW forms requesting medicare supplemental insurance benefits, 10.5 million.
—FCC television station program logs, 4.4 million.
—HUD certification required by Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, 4.2 million.
—Labor Department state employment service application, 3.9 million.

Bob Dole, R-Kan., Thursday look over stacks of federal regulations assembled to illustrate how they have grown in number over the years in Washington. U.S. Yachtsman Recounts 10 Days' Ordeal At Sea

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — For 10 days, Alexander Starkey, alone and sick on the Pacific Ocean, flew the American flag upside-down from his 21-foot sloop.

Finally, a Norfolk-bound container vessel sighted his distress signal and picked up Starkey but left his sloop behind.

Starkey arrived here Wednesday, ruing the loss of his boat and saying he won't put to sea again until he sees his doctor.

Starkey, 38, a resident of northern California, said he began his solo voyage in Santa Cruz, Calif., on March 16, bound for Easter Island, off the coast of Chile.

"On the 70th day at sea, about 150 miles from Easter Island, I suffered some kind of disability. I was paralyzed for five days," he recalled.

When he began to recover, Starkey hoisted his upside-down flag, an internationally recognized sign of distrees.

Ten days later, the Associated Container Transportation ship ACT6 happened along, bound from New Zealand for the Panama Canal and eventually Norfolk.

It was "a most unlikely place to fall upon a yacht," said ACT6 Capt. Michael Twomey.

"We spent a few minutes slowing down. I expect we frightened him no end, because we had gone well beyond him before we could turn around."

Starkey said he isn't sure he's heading back toward Easter Island, whose huge stone sculptures he wanted to study.

COSTLY ORNAMENT — London dealer Agnew's paid $2 million for this enamel arm ornament believed to be from the coronation vestments of the Holy Roman Emperor Frederick Barbarosa in the 12th century and recently part of the Robert Von Hirsch estate. (AP Laserphoto)

Art Objects Bring Record High Price

LONDON (AP) — Enamel ornaments, ivories, glass and chess pieces dating back to medieval and Renaissance times sold for the highest prices in history Thursday on the third record-breaking day of the sale of the Robert von Hirsch art collection.

The bidding was hectic and multilingual on the floor of the Sotheby Parke Bernet auction house while a computerized board flashed prices in dollars, yen, francs and other currencies. Direct telephone lines fed bids from New York, Los Angeles, Zurich and Amsterdam to the crowded galleries.

A 5¾-inch enamel medallion depicting the Angel of Charity and dating from around 1150 was sold Thursday for $2.22 million. It was purchased 80 seconds after it went on the block by German dealer Reiner Zietz in behalf of the Staatliche Museum of Berlin.

"This was a world auction record for any work of art other than a painting and the third-highest price ever paid at auction for anything," said a spokeswoman. The sum was also the highest price received for anything ever sold at the auction Sotheby's, she said.

The only art works auctioned at higher prices were the Velasquez portrait of Juan de Pareja, which was sold at Christie's in London in November 1970 for the pound equivalent of $5.54 million and a Titian painting sold at Christie's in 1971 for $3.84 million.

Halfway through the six-day sale, Sotheby's put the total take at $21,768,021, which far exceeds any auction of a single art collection.

The previous record was set last May in a $11.8 million sale of the contents of Mentmore Towers, the Earl of Rosebery's Buckinghamshire mansion.

The pre-sale estimates have been nearly doubled. Sotheby's chairman Peter Wilson said Thursday night he was revising his original estimate of $14.8 million to more than $26 million.

Still to come are furniture and tapestries today, a fabulous array of Impressionist paintings and sculpture on Monday, and Meissen porcelain Tuesday.

"The German museums are over here in force," said a Sotheby's spokeswoman, noting that many winning bids have come from West German museums or their agents.

"There were several big sales in Germany in the 1930s when some highly important things were dispersed and von Hirsch acquired some particularly choice pieces.

"Obviously the German museums would like to get some of them back."

Salesroom sources said there were reports that the West German government had made money available for such purchases, but this could not be confirmed.

Hirsch, a German-born industrialist who fled the Nazis to Switzerland before World War II, assembled his magnificent collection over a lifetime. He died in Basel last November at 94 and left explicit instructions that the collection be sold to enable other connoisseurs to enjoy his treasures.

Bernard Solomon, a private Los Angeles collector, got up at 4 a.m. Thursday to join the bidding by telephone. He was successful in his chase for a 2½-inch enamel pendant made in Italy in the 15th century. The price was $20,350.

The entire town of Moulins, France, chipped in to regain a bronze mount for a famous Bible named for the nearby Souvigny abbey. The Bible rests in the town's library. Moulins hired an expert from the Louvre to act as its agent at the sale, and he offered the winning bid of $29,600.

The Cincinatti Museum bought a late 12th century enamel crozier for $16,650 and the Cleveland Art Museum paid $351,500 for a 4½-inch by 6½-inch Romanesque ivory carving made in Italy around the year 1100.

Government Reveals Standby Ration Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration Thursday announced a standby plan to ration gasoline among motorists in an energy emergency such as another Arab oil embargo.

The rationing plan would distribute coupons for gas based on the number of automobiles a family or business owns. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger called it "a form of insurance" he hoped would never have to be used.

Schlesinger also announced that the administration still intends to remove federal price ceilings from gasoline, but it would not take effect until after the summer driving season.

In another move aimed at getting the nation's energy house in order, President Carter sought to apply new pressure on Congress to wrap up work on his 14-month-old energy plan.

Carter appealed to leading lawmakers on energy issues to complete work on the bulk of the plan by mid-July so he doesn't have to go to the planned economic summit in West Germany empty-handed, according to participants at the meeting.

Carter reportedly renewed his threat to raise oil prices through administrative action — presumably an oil import fee — if Congress fails to pass his proposed tax on domestic crude oil production.

Senate Energy Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., raised the possibility that Carter might announce imposition of import fees at the summit.

Schlesinger said this was an option open to the president, but that the administration does not actually expect Congress to complete work on the long-languishing tax by the middle of next month.

Oct. 1, the planned date of congressional adjournment, might be a more realistic target for the tax, Schlesinger suggested.

White House spokesman Rex Granum stressed that Carter has made no decision on whether to impose oil import fees. However, he said, the president feels a need to demonstrate to other nations at the July summit that the United States is able to deal with its own energy problems.

"He needs to demonstrate credibility," Granum said. "We have to show good faith on our part if we expect our trading partners to make sacrifices themselves."

He said "we remain realistically optimistic" that Congress eventually will pass the crude oil tax, but conceded that passage is taking "far longer than we anticipated."

Government economists claim the nation's heavy reliance on oil imports is a major factor in the decline of the value of the U.S. dollar on foreign currency exchanges.

The nation now imports 44 percent of its oil and petroleum products.

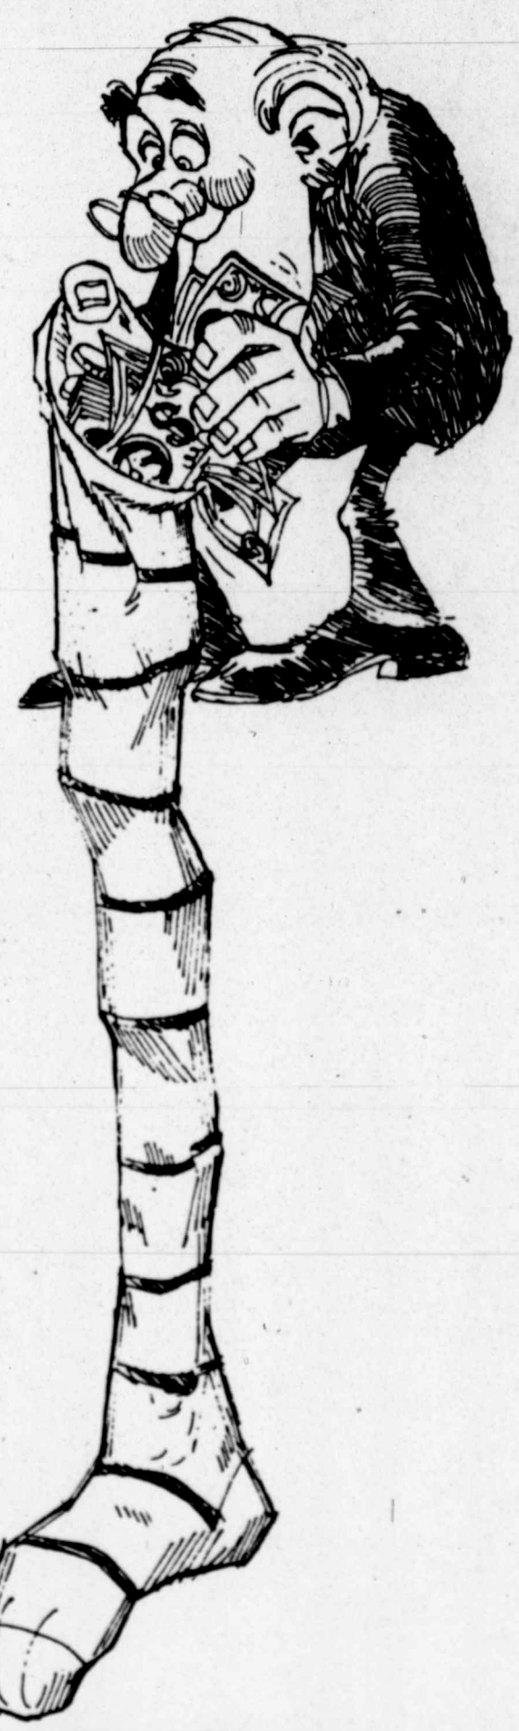

Participants at the White House meeting said Carter urged Congress to enact by mid-July those parts of the energy plan on which House-Senate conferees have already reached general agreement. He also asked for assurance that the tax section would not be abandoned, despite its unpopularity in an election year.

Conferees have completed work on parts dealing with natural gas regulation, industrial conversions to coal, electric rate-setting and energy conservation.

Schlesinger, in outlining the gasoline rationing program, said that, because of U.S. dependence on foreign oil, a standby rationing program is essential.

He said another major supply disruption like the 1973-74 Arab embargo would prompt the president to put the emergency plan into effect.

WHEELING WONDERS — Neither sun, more sun, nor hottest sun keeps the Bicycle Club of Lubbock from holding their regular training rides. The group rides almost daily, generally in the Buffalo Spring Lake area. Each ride is from 40 to 100 miles long, and races are held about three times a year. At left, the cyclists pedal up the Slaton side of Horseshoe Bend Canyon. From left to right are Keith Burt, Tim Redus, Doug Carr, Tom Hutchinson and Sean Miller. At left below, Burt waves a faulty tire in the air to notify his friends he's having trouble. Hewes Nabs Surprise Lead In Canadian Tournament

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Obscure Jeff Hewes, who twice was stripped of his Tour-playing rights because of poor performance, slipped through a howling wind with a 4-under-par 67 and established a surprise, 3-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"That's sensational," said Jack Nicklaus, who designed the 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course that turned into a windswept monster this cool, cloudy day. "I can't believe anybody could play that well in these conditions."

Hewes, carrying only 146 pounds on a 6-foot-3 frame, lost his Approved Player's Card in 1973 and 1977 because of poor play and is making his third attempt at the PGA Tour. He has won $14,848 this year, most of it from a victory in the Oklahoma City Open, a satellite event. He has never before threatened in a major tour event.

Arnold Palmer, the legendary 48-year-old who scored his first professional triumph in the 1955 Canadian Open, Terry Diehl and Ben Crenshaw were tied for second at 70 and were the only others able to break par in the extremely difficult conditions. There were 25-30 miles per hour.

Crenshaw managed to get under par with an eagle-3 on the final hole where Palmer got the benefit of a minor miracle. His second shot skipped off the surface of a pond and up on the bank. He got out of it with a par.

At par 71 were Jim Colbert, Mark Lye and Australian Bob Shearer.

Andy North, who last week won the U.S. Open, headed a group at 72, one over par.

"I'm playing pretty well," North said. "It often happens that you get in a streak. You see it all the time. So why not go ahead and win two in a row?"

Nicklaus birdied two of his last three holes for a 73, which he called "a pretty good score under the conditions." Defending champion Lee Trevino and Gary Player took hard-won 74s.

"Mercy, what a tough day," Trevino said.

Some of the scores bordered on the ridiculous. For example, Hubert Green and Billy Casper shot 81s. Mark Hayes had 82. Lon Hinkle, a winner at New Orleans earlier this year, had 80. Andy Bean, winner of consecutive titles earlier this month, was 9 over par when he withdrew.

Hewes, who has attended the PGA Tour Qualifying School seven times and failed to get his card on four occasions, had a wild round that included a pair of 3-putt bogeys, a chip-in for birdie and a string of four consecutive birdies.

That started on the seventh hole with a 20-footer. He lashed a 3-wood to five feet and made the putt on the next and dropped putts of 15-and 20-feet on the next two holes.

That put him 3-under par and he went to 4-under with a birdie on the 15th when his shot to the green caught the slope and rolled sideways some 30 feet, coming to a stop four feet from the cup.

He bogeyed the next from a bunker, saved par with a 12-foot putt on the 17th, then birdied the 18th from 12-15 feet.

MHS Pitcher Hatfield Inks With Raiders

Derek Hatfield, a Monterey pitcher, Thursday signed to attend Texas Tech on a baseball scholarship.

Hatfield joins teammate Jeff Harp as the second signee Tech has landed from the Class AAAA state finalist team. Harp, a catcher, signed last week.

An all-city and all-district selection each of the past two years, Hatfield compiled a 25-5 career pitching mark with the Plainsmen varsity.

Tech coach Kal Segrist said that MHS pitcher Ron Reeves has expressed an interest in playing baseball for Tech.

Taylor Signs With Giants

Billy Taylor, a running back for Texas Tech the past four seasons and a fourth-round draft pick of the NFL's New York Giants, has come to terms with the club.

Taylor inked a four-year contract with the Giants, who also drafted Tech defensive tackle Jim Krahl.

As a senior, Taylor rushed 209 times for 931 yards and a 4.5-yard average per carry. He also scored 13 touchdowns, setting a school record with five touchdowns in the Raiders' 49-17 win over TCU.

Taylor, a 6-0, 210-pounder, also caught 30 passes for 186 yards. He finished sixth in the Southwest Conference in rushing and sixth in receiving.

Other Tech players drafted by the NFL were cornerback Eric Felton (New Orleans, fifth round), linebacker Mike Mock (New York Jets, eighth round) and offensive tackle Dan Irons (San Francisco, 12th round).

OFF TO THE RACES—Milwaukee's Paul Molitor tries to outrun Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey to first base after the Orioles catcher didn't hang on to a third strike in the seventh inning Thursday afternoon in Milwaukee. Orioles Continue Climb With Win Over Brewers

By The Associated Press

Eddie Murray's two-run homer sparked a four-run first inning and Kiko Garcia knocked in three runs with a double and a single, powering the Baltimore Orioles to a 10-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday.

Mike Flanagan, 11-4, scattered 10 hits in his sixth successive victory as the Orioles, who have won 18 of their last 20 games, climbed to within 6½ games of idle first-place Boston in the American League East.

Loser Moose Haas, 2-3, who had not pitched since April 20 because of a torn muscle in his throwing arm, aggravated the injury and left after the Orioles had taken a 3-0 lead in the first. The runs scored on a walk, Murray's 14th homer, another walk, and singles by Lee May and Pat Kelly.

RANGERS 8, A'S 2

Texas battered Oakland's rookie teenager Mike Morgan for six runs in the first three innings, including Bump Wills' triple and Bobby Bonds' double, and romped to a victory over the A's behind Dock Ellis' six-hit pitching.

The 18-year-old Morgan, losing his third game in as many professional and major league starts, lasted only 2 1/3 innings. Wills delivered a two-run triple in a three-run first inning and Bonds lashed a two-run double in a three-run third.

Texas collected its seventh run off Steve McCatty in the fourth on a single by Bobby Thompson, a stolen base, a fly ball and Bert Campaneris' sacrifice fly.

Ellis blanked Oakland until the seventh inning when Dell Alston singled and Wayne Gross hit his fifth home run of the season.

Ellis, 6-3, gave way to Steve Comer in the eighth after tiring in the 90-degree heat.

It was the 13th loss for the A's in their last 14 games and left them 3½ games out in the American League West. The third-place Rangers are 1½ games from the top.

ASTROS 4, DODGERS 3

Enos Cabell's two-out single in the ninth inning scored Terry Puhl to break a tie and give Houston a victory over Los Angeles.

Joe Niekro, 4-4, scattered six Los Angeles hits to earn the victory. Niekro allowed only three hits after the first inning when the Dodgers scored twice, on Dave Lopes' home run to lead off the game and on a sacrifice fly by Dusty Baker.

In the Houston ninth, Puhl walked with one out, Wilbur Howard sacrificed him to third and Cabell followed with a single to center.

The Astros tied the game in the sixth on a two-run homer by Joe Ferguson, his seventh of the season and second in as many games.

Los Angeles scored an unearned run in the sixth and Houston tied it in the seventh when Puhl doubled and eventually scored on Cabell's infield out.

PHILLIES 2, CARDS 1

Garry Templeton's fourth-inning throwing error allowed an unearned run that gave Philadelphia a victory over St. Louis.

The Phillies led 1-0 in the fourth when Larry Bowa opened with a single and took second on a groundout. Greg Luzinski grounded to Templeton, who threw wild past first, allowing Bowa to score.

ANGELS 4, TWINS 2

Ken Landreaux and Ron Jackson drove in 12th inning runs with consecutive singles, giving California a victory over Minnesota.

Landreaux' hit, a broken-bat single to right field, came off reliever Mike Marshall, 1-6, and drove in Lyman Bostock, who had singled, and moved up on a base hit by Don Baylor.

YANKEES 4, TIGERS 2

Reggie Jackson homered to begin a four-run New York ninth-inning rally as the Yankees defeated the Detroit Tigers for Ron Guidry's 12th consecutive victory without a loss, matching the club record.

Dave Rozema, 2-4, was working on a four-hitter until Jackson blasted his 12th homer just over the fence into the lower deck in right field, 325 feet from home plate and a few feet inside the foul line, to tie the game 1-1 with one out in the ninth.

EXPOS 2, METS 0

Wayne Garrett's first home run of the season staked Hal Dues to an early lead and the young right-hander gave up just two hits in six innings to help Montreal to a victory over New York.

With one out in the first, Garrett, a former Met, hit a Pat Zachry delivery into the Mets' bullpen in right field to provide the Expos with a 1-0 lead.

PADRES 2, BRAVES 0

Left-hander Bob Owchinko combined with Rollie Fingers for a five-hit shutout as San Diego salvaged the finale of a three-game series by defeating Atlanta.

Owchinko, who blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 7-0 in his last outing, struck out two and walked one through 7 2/3 innings before Fingers came on to finish up and record his 16th save of the season.

REDS 5, GIANTS 0

Bill Bonham and Manny Sarmiento combined on a three-hitter and Bonham belted a run-scoring single, helping Cincinnati to a victory over San Francisco.

Bonham, 8-1, was lifted after a one-out single and two walks loaded the bases for San Francisco in the seventh. Sarmiento took over and worked out of the jam, allowing just one hit the rest of the way for his fourth save.

MARINERS 8, WHITE SOX 6

Bob Stinson's tie-breaking double highlighted a two-run 10th inning that lifted Seattle to a victory over Chicago, the lowly Mariners' fourth consecutive victory and third in a row over the White Sox.

Bob Robertson singled with one out in the 10th off reliever Jim Willoughby, 0-5, and pinch runner Larry Milbourne went to second on Bill Stein's single. After pinch hitter Tom Paciorek struck out, Stinson, who had a solo homer earlier, delivered his double down the left-field line. The second run of the rally scored on Julio Cruz' infield single.

Martin Struggles To Keep Job; Bamberger Toast Of Milwaukee

By HAL BOCK

This is the tale of two managers and it just goes to prove that everything is relative, especially in baseball.

While the front office begins sharpening the ax that permanently is perched over Billy Martin's neck, the New York Yankee manager frantically searches for a formula that will turn the world champions around.

Meanwhile, in Milwaukee, the toast of the town is first-year skipper George Bamberger, who magically has transformed the sow's ear Brewers into a silk purse.

But going into Thursday's games, Martin's struggling Yankees and Bamberger's surprising Brewers had identical records. One team was a very bad 38-28 and the other was a very good 38-28.

Analysis

The difference, of course, is that Martin must win to maintain his job. Bamberger need not win right now, so every time he does, it's a bonus.

The Billy Loes theory applies here. Loes was the old Dodger right-handed pitcher who had a southpaw view of the world. He always seemed to have the potential to be a 20-game winner but never quite reached that plateau. Asked why, Loes answered with left-handed logic. "If I win 20 once," he said, "they'll expect me to do it all the time."

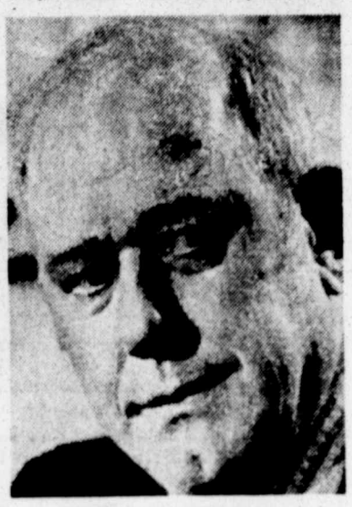

Martin has won with the Yankees twice. Now, they expect him to do it all the time. And if half his pitching staff has aching arms, well that's just too bad.

The Brewers, of course, know very well about pitching problems. Their staff never has been awesome and that's exactly why when Harry Dalton, the team's new executive vice president and general manager, went shopping for a manager last winter, he decided to return to his roots in Baltimore and plucked Bamberger, the longtime pitching coach of the Orioles.

In his 10 years with the Birds, Bamberger's pitchers produced 18 20-victory seasons. Some of them, like Pat Dobson, Mike Cuellar and Wayne Garland never experienced that kind of success before their paths crossed Bamberger's or after they left him.

BILLY MARTIN

GEORGE BAMBERGER

In Milwaukee, the new manager inherited a team that could score runs. The problem for the Brewers was keeping the other team from scoring more of them. A year ago, Milwaukee set a club record with a season's batting average of .258. That's not a bad number, except when you combine it with a pitching staff that was 10th in the league with 38 complete games and an earned run average of 4.32. Only Minnesota and the expansion Toronto and Seattle staffs had worse marks.

Enter Bamberger and with the season just past the one-third mark, the club has 23 complete games, second best in the league. The man obviously knows something about the art of throwing the baseball 60 feet, 6 inches.

He has helped transform Lary Sorensen from a promising young thrower into an accomplished pitcher, and rescued Mike Caldwell from bullpen obscurity to become an important member of the starting rotation.

Sorensen set a club record with eight straight complete games and is 9-4. Caldwell stepped in when injuries sidelined Moose Haas and Bill Travers and is 7-4.

Some of the credit, of course, belongs to Bamberger's pitching coach, the man with baseball's most marvelous name — Calvin Coolidge Julius Caesar Tuskahoma McLish. His friends call him Cal.

Together, Bamberger and McLish have pieced together a pitching staff from something approximating thin air. In New York, meanwhile, Martin and his pitching coach, Art Fowler, have seen theirs evaporate.

Catfish Hunter, Andy Messersmith and Don Gullett have spent more time on the disabled list than they have on the mound. Dick Tidrow has been inconsistent when he wasn't injured. Ed Figueroa is constantly bickering with Martin and his production has been just so-so. Sparky Lyle has been a shell of his 1977 Cy Young form. And on, and on, and on.

Where does it all end? For Martin, perhaps with an invitation not to pilot the Yankees anymore. For Bamberger, perhaps with the Manager of the Year award.

And both had the same won-lost record Thursday morning. Ironic, isn't it?

EYES ON THE BALL—Pittsburgh Pirate shortstop Frank Taveras eyes the ball at recent batting practice in Pittsburgh. Taveras raised his average to .287 when the Bucs beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 Wednesday night. He's batting .393 in his last 16 games. (AP Laserphoto)

NY Boss May Be Yanked If Team Doesn't Improve

NEW YORK (AP) — "A team is supposed to win — if it doesn't, the axe falls on the manager," President Al Rosen of the New York Yankees said Thursday after returning from Boston where he watched the team fall eight games behind the Red Sox.

"We are in danger of falling so far behind we cannot catch up. It is very discouraging. The team seems to lack motivation. It needs to be shaken up."

Rosen's pointed comments came amid recurring speculation that Billy Martin, the Yankees' fiery manager, was in danger of dismissal.

Rosen, the former Cleveland infielder, who replaced Gabe Paul as straw boss of the Yankees, declined to say such action was imminent but he stressed that the New York club, studded with multi-million-dollar free-agent talent, could not be content with a secondary performance.

"The Red Sox are knocking the cover off the ball," he said. "The Baltimore Orioles are on a hot streak (winning 16 of their last 18 games). Milwaukee is pressing.

"All of these teams have had winning streaks. But not the Yankees. We seem to be playing dead-center. That is not enough."

In Boston, Martin, addressing himself to the latest crisis in his stormy career, attributed rumors that he was danger of getting the sack to newspaper sensationalism.

Referring to the Yankees' inordinate epidemic of injuries, particularly to the high-salaried pitching staff — Catfish Hunter, Andy Messersmith, Don Gullett and Ed Figueroa —, Martin said, "I get along great with Al Rosen. I get along great with George Steinbrenner (club owner)."

Rosen countered with his comment:

"Injuries are part of the game. Billy knows this. He is now in the position of having to turn the team around — and quickly. He may do it. We hope so. But if he doesn't, well, the buck stops with the manager.

"This is not a personal thing. It's coldhearted business. It's a situation we must watch closely and then make a hard decision. We feel the fans deserve a winning team, whatever measures we need to take."

Steinbrenner, Rosen and Cedric Tallis, vice president and general manager, were in Fenway Park Wednesday night when the Yankees bowed to the Red Sox 9-2, thus losing the "rubber" game of the three-game series.

The Yankees moved into Detroit Thursday night for a four-game series and will return to Yankee Stadium for two games with the Red Sox Monday and Tuesday nights.

For the Yankees' hopes of repeating as American League champions — and Billy Martin's destiny as Yankee manager — may hinge on these vital six days.

Martin was in almost constant hot water with management last season because of a feud with $2.9-million superstar Reggie Jackson. He was almost fired after a dugout shoving match with Jackson in Boston.

However, on Oct. 18, 1977, just before the Yankees clinched the World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Yankees hastiy called a press conference to give Martin a public pat on the back and a sizeable bonus. Martin, fired by Minnesota, Detroit and Texas after successful tenures, has a $100,000-a-year contract running through 1979. Steinbrenner has said he would leave the managerial decision to Rosen.

Bench Scheduled To Leave Hospital

CINCINNATI (AP) — All-Star catcher Johnny Bench will be released from the hospital and will immediately rejoin the team at Los Angeles, the Cincinnati Reds announced Thursday.

Bench has responded to treatment and therapy at Christ Hospital "and is now almost free of symptoms," the Reds said in a prepared statement. The team did not disclose the nature of the problem or the treatment.

The Reds said simply that Bench had a lower back strain believed suffered May 27 while sliding into home plate.

Bench has made only one appearance as a pinchhitter since then.

The Reds said Bench's return to play "will depend on when he regains playing condition."

Bench, who is among the leaders in All Star balloting, has declined all interviews.

Nancy's Navy Sails With New, Fresh Face

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Once there was Arnie's Army. Now there is Nancy's Navy, a pastel form of hero worshipers hooked on the hotest thing in golf.

In the last few weeks they have turned polite cartwheels over Nancy Lopez, a 21-year-old Mexican-American with a homecoming queen smile, a gorgeous tan and a golden swing.

What Arnold Palmer did for the men's game Lopez is doing for the women's. With a passage of a single spring, she has transformed the LPGA into a viable contender for prime weekend network time and kindled a fresh love affair for the American sports nut — always hungry for a new face, especially a pretty one, up against a new challenge.

"It's had a tremendous impact," Chip Campell, the LPGA's public relations director, said Thursday, the day before the start here of the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open and another chance for Lopez to smash a new batch of records.

"Before we always got good local coverage and everybody else picked up the wire story. Now out of town papers are sending in feature writers to see if she is for real.

"We have had more interest from potential sponsors. We are seeing publications we usuallly don't see — Sports Illustrated, the Washington Post."

No doubt, this Cinderella in spikes is making headlines. Every time she moves photographers and sports writers fall in place, recording her latest second on earth.

Thursday morning, for example, she ate an egg and hash breakfast with a reporter, then was whisked off to a local amusement park where two reporters and three photographers followed her around for an hour.

In that time, she rode a merry-go-round, two roller coasters, two whips, petted a camel and donkey, fed a goat, drank her first birch beer ever, tossed popcorn in the air and tried to catch it in her mouth, and never stopped smiling.

When she returned to the Hershey Country Club, where the three-day tourney is being played, another knot of writers and photographers was waiting.

At a news confernec this week she was asked what she did before she took up golf at age 8. She replied: "I played with Barbie dolls, had a pogo stick, and learned to ride a bike without training wheels."

Everybody wrote it down.

What does she think of all the fuss?

"It's neat," she said. "It's fun being recognized by people and to feel really important. But it's all happening so fast."

First place in the 54-hole Lady Keystone Open is worth $7,500.

GOLF STAR RELAXES—Nancy Lopez, leading Ladies Professional Golf Association money winner in her current rookie year, relaxes riding a horse on a carousel while touring an amusemanet park in Hershey, Pa. Ex-European Player Likes American Soccer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dennis Tueart says he has been pleasantly surprised by the quality of play in the North American Soccer League.

Tueart signed with the defending North American Soccer League champion Cosmos prior to the start of the current season, after playing for Manchester City in England's First Division.

"I really didn't know exactly what is was going to be like. It's much better, though, than I ever expected," said Tueart, whose shifty moves and scoring skill have made him a crowd favorite at Giants Stadium.

"The American players are getting better and the players coming over from Europe are better, too," he said.

Tueart said it was a bit premature to compare the Cosmos and his former Manchester City squad, acknowledged as the best team in England.

"We have a very strong side here," said Tueart, who has scored eight goals to go along with seven assists. "I think we would lose by a goal or two if we played Manchester right now. But it would be a very close game."

Tueart said play in England was more physically demanding, primarily because of the width of the field. The Giants Stadium field is 70 yards wide, while the field in Manchester measures 85 yards wide.

"I had to do a lot more running over there," said the 28-year-old forward. "I had to work harder to get in position because the field was so much wider.

"I had more free room because the fullback couldn't play as close as they can here. Now, I rely more on quickness. I realize I can't play the same way and I've adjusted."

Tueart feels American soccer will benefit as a result of the Cosmos signing Franz Beckenbauer, Giorgio Chinaglia and Carlos Alberto.

Tueart says American soccer fans are becoming more knowledgeable each week.

New Champion Wants To Set Good Example

CLEVELAND (AP) — Larry Holmes says he wants to set a shining example for children as the World Boxing Council's new heavyweight champion.

"I would like people to say, 'There's the heavyweight champion and he's a very nice person,'" Holmes said in an interview Wednesday.

He was in Cleveland to meet with his manager, Rich Giachetti, and to make several personal appearances.

"It took me nine years to win the title and I'm not going to do anything to spoil it now," he said. "I want to be an example for kids.

"I came from no education and no background. Now, I'm the champion. If I could do it, they must now feel there's a chance for them in what they're trying to do."

The 28-year-old boxer from Easton, Pa., captured the WBC version of the heavyweight crown from Ken Norton in a 15-round split decision two weeks ago.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pounder said no plans have been made for a title defense, although it could come in September of October.

"I had two hard fights and took a lot of banging and pounding," said Holmes, who got his shot at Norton after defeating Earnie Shavers in April.

SOCCER CELEBRATION—Shouting, singing, flag-waving Argentinians crowd the streets of Rosario, Argentina, celebrating the national team's 6-0 victory over Peru which qualified them to meet Holland Sunday for the World Cup soccer championship. (AP Laserphoto)

Argentines Paralyze Capital, Celebrate Team's Success

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Thousands of soccer-happy Argentines paralyzed downtown Buenos Aires Thursday with parades and ticker-tape demonstrations celebrating their team's success in reaching the final of the World Cup.

The scenes in the capital were unprecedented. They had been going on most of the night and were resumed at breakfast time.

Singing crowds, banging drums and blowing trumpets, jammed the Avenue Corrientes and Calle Florida, the fashionable shopping street for pedestrians only.

Endless showers of paper floated down from top floors of office buildings throughout the day. The litter lay ankle deep in places.

Argentina has reached the final for the first time since the inaugural World Cup in 1930, and will play Holland for the trophy at Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium next Sunday.

Neither team ever has won the Cup.

Meanwhile, the losers were busy making excuses. Enzo Bearzot, the Italian coach, blamed the referee. Claudio Coutinho, the Brazilian manager, accused the Peruvian team of not trying against Argentina. Four German stars announced they are retiring, and at least one of them complained about the way the team is treated.

Holland came from behind Wednesday to defeat Italy 2-1 for one place in the final. Argentina had to defeat Peru by at least four goals to edge past Brazil for the other place, and won 6-0.

Bearzot campaigned against Angel Martinez, the Spanish referee who was in charge of the Holland-Italy game.

"The referee allowed Holland to carry out an aggressive manhunt, with the risk of breaking my players' legs," Bearzot told a news conference.

Coutinho would not accept that Argentina, Brazil's arch-rival, defeated Peru 6-0 on merit.

"The Peruvians didn't try," he said. "They gave away the match. Some Peruvian players have no respect for the honor of football. The whole team let down its guard."

The German stars who announced they are dropping out of international soccer were Bern Hoelzenbein, Erich Beer, Bertl Vogts and Georg Schwarzenbeck. Vogts and Schwarzenbeck, two survivors from the great German team that won the World Cup in 1974, had hinted at it previously.

Hoelzenbein lashed out at the way the German team is treated.

"All you get with the national team is discipline," he said. "Even the ordering of clothes is not free.

"They treat you like children, writing down everything for you and taling about what to wear after the match instead of worrying about the way to play effectively."

The Germans were the defending champions. Their faint hopes of reaching the final ended with an upset 3-2 defeat by Austria.

The four teams still interested in the competition spent a secluded day at their training headquarters. Brazil, three times the winner of the trophy, and Italy, twice the winner, are set to meet for third place at River Plate Stadium Saturday.

Kentucky Subs Shine In Exhibition Games

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Some of the University of Kentucky's less experienced players have been shining on the Wildcats' exhibition tour of Japan and Coach Joe Hall said Thursday he is beginning to take heart about the team's chances next season.

Sohpmore-to-be Fred Cowan scored 26 points and Kyle Macy added 22 as the Wildcats routed Japan's national team 118-81 in Nagasaki, the sixth straight victory on Kentucky's seven-game tour.

Lavon Williams and Tim Stephens, sophomore reserves on last season's national championship team, added 21 and 17 points, respectively.

"We have to replace four excellent front line players (Jack Givens, James Lee, Mike Phillips and Rick Robey) next year with players who really haven't had a chance to prove themselves," Hall said in a telephone interview with Lexington radio station WVLK.

"They haven't had the playing time. They haven't had the opportunity to gain the individual confidence that you need to play in the league that we play in," Hall said of his reserves. "So these seven games have given an opportunity to Lavon and Freddie and Chuck (Aleksinas) to really show what they can do.

"Chuck was a little overweight when we started the trip, about 25 pounds heavy, and he's had difficulty getting his weight down and getting into condition to play and meet the travel schedule we've had," he said.

"But Freddie and Lavon have really come along," Hall said. "Their scoring tonight is an indication of that. Lavon has been getting 14 to 16 rebounds a night and Freddie 10 to 12. Both are beginning to play more aggressive and gain confidence.

Spinks Arrested Second Time

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the second time in two days, world heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks has been arrested for a traffic violation here, his fifth arrest this year for traffic violations in various states.

Spinks was arrested here early Thursday for speeding. Jacksonville police charged him with driving 45 miles per hour in a 20 mph zone. He was arrested without incident, police said.

On Wednesday he was arrested here for driving without a license and driving with an expired automobile license plate. In both cases here, he appeared before a magistrate and paid fines.

Police said Spinks has a valid Michigan license but was ticketed Wednesday for driving without it. All out-of-state drivers are ticketed if they cannot produce a license when stopped, even if they may have one, police said.

Police said the 24-year-old former Marine told them he was leaving Jacksonville Thursday for Michigan to begin training for his Sept. 15 bout with former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali.

Spinks won the heavyweight title from Ali on a split decision Feb. 15 and holds the World Boxing Association crown. He was stripped of the World Boxing Council version of the title after he signed for a rematch with Ali, instead of taking top-ranked challenger Ken Norton.

The WBC now recognizes Larry Holmes as heavyweight champion while the World Boxing Association still recognizes Spinks.

The arrest Wednesday for driving without a license marks the third time this year Spinks has been charged with that violation.

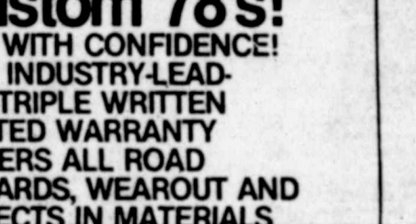

He was arrested in St. Louis in April and charged with possession of one hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana and driving without a license. The drug charges were later dismissed. He paid a fine and court costs on the traffic charge.

He was charged in March with driving without a license and driving the wrong way on a one-way street in St. Louis. He paid a fine in that case too.

In Beaufot County, S.C., a highway patrolman ticketed Spinks for speeding last Saturday as he drove to a training camp on Hilton Head Island.

Wings Return; Big Turnout Seen At Oval

A decision to allow sprint car drivers competing at Lubbock Speedway to put the wings back on their cars is expected to bring about an increase in the turnout for that division in racing at the paved oval tonight.

Wings have created a flap in sprint car circles — not only here but all across the country — since their appearance some 20 years ago, but the undenied benefits in speed and handling qualities have made them almost as necessary as wheels, especially on paved tracks.

The wings — airfoils usually mounted atop the roll cage — exert downward pressure, allowing the car to stick in the corners and increasing the bite of the big tires. They are effective at any speed above 40 mph, well below minimums for the powerful sprinters, which may hit 100 mph, even in the close confines of a three-eighths-mile track such as the one on South U.S. 87.

Many of the late model stock cars competing at Lubbock Speedway utilize a form of wing in the spoilers on the rear decks of the Camaros and Mustangs that dominate that division.

Removal of the wing ban this week prompted the entry of Richard Sweat of Odessa, formerly of Lubbock, and a representative field of cars is anticipated when racing gets underway at 8 p.m.

Track officials also announced that a $5 per carload pricing policy tried out last week will be repeated again tonight.

Standings in the late model division shifted as a result of last week's racing, with J.D. Hughes of Sundown taking over first place from Hereford's Jim Culpepper.

Mayer Advances In Queen's Meet

LONDON (AP) — Sandy Mayer, the second-seeded American, swept into the semifinals of the $125,000 Queen's Club international tennis tournament Thursday with a rain-delayed 7-5, 6-3 victory over second-seeded Briton John Lloyd.

With Mayer leading 3-1 in the second set, rain held up play for nearly 3 hours. And when Mayer finally wrapped up the match, the rain resumed and forced organizers to postpone two other quarter-finals until Friday.

In the semifinals Mayer will meet veteran Australian Tony Roche, who defeated young Nick Saviano of the United States 6-3, 6-4 in a match also briefly halted in the first set by showers.

The two other quarter-finals — one between Americans John McEnroe, seeded fourth, and Tom Gullikson, and the other between Australians John Alexander and Colin Dibley — will be played Friday.

McEnroe, 19, caused a stir when he said that he would not play two singles matches Friday as well as complete a half-finished doubles match. But tournament referee Jim McManus said categorically: "He will play what he has to play."

If rain further disrupts play, however, it is possible the tournament would have to be finished on Sunday, the day before Wimbledon starts.

Lloyd, struggling to find his rhythm, battled to 5-5 in the first set before allowing the 26-year-old Mayer to break through. Mayer took the set and immediately broke again for a 2-0 lead.

When the rain came down he was leading 3-1, and although the British player had a break point at 5-3, Mayer held his serve and then broke Lloyd again to take the match.

CHANG-SANG LEADS TOURNEY

TOKYO (AP) — Veteran Hahn Chang-sang of South Korea fired a 5-under-par 67 Thursday and took a 1-stroke lead over Hsieh Min-nan of Taiwan in the first round of the $119,000 Shizuoka Open Golf Tournament.

Turnbull Ousts Wade

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Wendy Turnbull, the 25-year-old Australian, upset defending Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade of Britain 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 in the quarter-finals of a $38,000 women's Grand Prix tournament Thursday.

Miss Turnbull joined Chris Evert of the United States, the world's top-ranked women's player, American Billie Jean King, and Martina Navratilova in today's semifinals.

Miss Evert had no difficulty in beating Anne Hobbs, an 18-year-old who is No. 10 in Britain, 6-1, 6-0. Mrs. King beat Betty Stove of The Netherlands, last year's losing finalist at Wimbledon, 6-4, 6-4, while Miss Navratilova beat Michele Tyler of Britain 7-5, 6-3.

In the semifinals, Miss Evert will play Miss Turnbull and Mrs. King will play Miss Navratilova, the Czech who now lives permanently in the United States.

Miss Turnbull's victory was the surprise of the day and the three other quarter-finals went as expected, although Miss Tyler gave Miss Navratilova a harder first set than she expected.

Miss Wade, who always seems to be either very good or very bad, sandwiched one very good set between two very bad ones Thursday.

Miss Turnbull, runner-up in last year's U.S. Open, played steady, unspectacular tennis in the opening set. She left Miss Wade to make all the spectacular errors, especially with her backhand volleys — which too often went astray.

In the second set Miss Wade came alive. Her volleys were going in at last, her ground strokes, lofted to both corners, were accurate, and she looked at ease and happy with herself.

But in the third set the picture changed again. Miss Wade was just missing the lines and Miss Turnbull ran up a 3-love lead. Miss Wade won the next game, then made a valiant effort to get into the match. But on the verge of a breakthrough, she dropped three volleys in succession and Miss Turnbull went up 4-1.

In an era where youngsters seem to be taking command of the courts, Mrs. King and Miss Stove can call themselves veterans: Mrs. King is 34 and Miss Stove will be 33 on Saturday. But their quarter-final, a happy-go-lucky affair, saw them both bounding about court like eager teen-agers. Mrs. King won because in the final analysis she had the staying power and ability to bring out the right shot at the right time.

Miss Navratilova and Miss Evert have been cruising in this tournament so far. Miss Navratilova, up to the quarter-finals, had dropped only 10 games but Tyler, who comes back to grass in her native England fresh from a winter playing in America, gave her a hard first-set battle Thursday.

Miss Navratilova, one of the hardest hitters in women's tennis today, seemed uneasy in the blustery wind at first, and dropped service twice — the second time to love — to let Miss Tyler go ahead 4-3. Then she pulled her game together, tied at 4-4, and had no problems taking the set and the next set with a break in the eighth game.

Miss Evert, whose victories up to the quarter-final had been even more crushing, clinically destroyed Miss Hobbs, who seemed nervous. The British girl who Wednesday defeated French champion Virginia Ruzici, held service in the opening game, but that was the only success she managed.

SOVIETS WIN

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — The undefeated Soviet national men's volleyball team beat the All-Japan team 15-10, 8-15, 16-14, 15-10 Thursday for its third victory.

Bolivian Voters Likely To Elect Incumbent's Chosen Candidate

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivians are going into their July 9 presidential elections with 10 opposition candidates backed by about 50 political parties and one candidate backed by President Hugo Banzer.

The situation seems destined to put Banzer's man in office.

A last-minute gesture to unite the forces of two of the leading opposition candidates — former Presidents Victor Paz Estenssoro and Hernan Siles Zuazo — failed because of differences over the vice presidency and dividing up government power.

Another opposition candidate, Col Jose Patino, is a candidate in name only, because the party backing him, the Bolivian Socialist Falange, decided to call on its followers to abstain from voting. The Falange charged that the election results would be fraudulent.

Banzer, an army general who came to power in a coup seven years ago, planned to run for president himself when he called the elections. But he ran into opposition within his own military and failed to get the backing he wanted from rightist political groups.

Banzer reluctantly gave his support to Gen. Juan Pereda, 46, former air force commander and interior minister. The rest of the military and a coalition of small rightist civilian groups also back Pereda.

Pereda does not appear to have the popular support Banzer enjoys. But under Bolivia's electoral rules he will need only a plurality of the popular votes to win.

It works this way: the law requires a simple majority for outright election, but in the likely event no one gets that, the decision will be taken by the Congress, which is being elected at the same time. However, the candidate who gets the plurality in each region will get 80 per cent of the seats in Congress from that area for his party or parties. Thus, a candidate with only a slight plurality can get firm control of Congress, which would then elect him with the necessary majority.

The opposition calls this system antidemocratic, but Pereda told The Associated Press in an interview that he is willing to consider opposition participation in his administration.

Pereda said his government would differ from Banzer's in that it would be constitutional. In addition, he said, "the responsibility will not rest exclusively with the armed forces. The destiny of the country will be in the hands not only of those who make up the government but also the opposition parties and the people in general."

Pereda's most serious opposition is expected to come from the 69-year-old Paz Estenssoro, Siles Zuazo and Gen. Rene Bernal Escalante, the candidate of the Christian Democratic Party.

Paz Estenssoro and Siles Zuazo were leading figures in the National Revolutionary Movement that governed Bolivia from 1952 to 1964 and gave the country agrarian reform, universal suffrage and other social reforms. Paz Estenssoro was elected president in 1952, Siles Zuazo in 1956, and Paz Estenssoro again in 1960 and 1964. A military coup then desposed him.

The two men eventually split to lead different factions of the Revolutionary Movement. Both recently returned to Bolivia from exile.

Immigrant Series To Premiere

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rob Reiner has a quadruple role in the new series "Free Country," which premieres Sunday on ABC.

Two of the roles he plays on the screen — actually the same person as a young man and at 89 — and the other two he performs behind the camera.

Reiner, who recently left "All in the Family" after eight seasons as Mike Stivic, plays a Lithuanian immigrant, newly arrived on these shores in the early 1900s. He is also the on-camera narrator looking back on his life from 70 years later.

He created the series with Phil Mishkin, and the two serve as executive producers. It will run for five Sundays as a tryout series.

Reiner stars as Joseph Bresner. Judy Kahan as his wife, Anna, and Fred McCarren and Renee Lippen are their neighbors, Sidney and Ida Gwertzman.

The premiere episode is an artful blend of comedy and poignant drama.

Bresner is eagerly awaiting the arrival of his wife after he has worked two years to save enough money for her passage. He paid his cousin Willie to arrange for second-class passage to avoid Ellis Island and its medical examinations — she has bad eyesight.

But Willie has booked her in steerage, pocketed the difference, and Anna can't pass the eye examination. She will be shipped back to the Old Country within a few hours unless he can come up with $25 to post bond for her as an undesirable.

It's a humiliating encounter with bureaucracy, but one he solves in time to take her home for a tour of the new apartment — and, as he says, its bed.

Reiner and Mishkin have been writing together since college, including scripts for "All in the Family," the first episode of "Happy Days," and the 1972 summer series, "The Super."

Two years ago they separated and weren't reunited until producer David Gerber of Columbia Pictures Television told Fred Silverman at ABC he wanted to get into comedy. Silverman suggested he get Reiner and Mishkin.

"We said we'd come back, but we wanted to do something unique, something special," said Reiner, who sat across a desk from Mishkin. "We wanted to take chances. The risk of failure is great.

"We wanted something that reflects us, that we could relate to emotionally. What better than our own heritage."

They began work on the show three years ago, before "Roots" and before "Hester Street," a movie about Jewish immigrants.

"If this gets picked up as a series we're going to deal with a decade in the immigrant family's life each season," said Reiner.

"It will be like a saga, with characters coming in and out. It's really the history of a family set against the history of the United States. The focus could shift from Joseph and Anna to the later generations as they go through World War I, the stock market crash, the Depression, World War II."

Mishkin said, "Just think that by the time we get to the '70s, if we get that far, we'll have had five years to look back on it."

Joseph Bresner is an amalgam of Reiner's and Mishkin's grandfathers, Reiner said. "Joseph was a watchmaker and jeweler. My grandfather was that."

The two wrote a TV movie called "Love Me and I'll Be Your Best Friend," which will star Reiner and his wife, Penny Marshall, the star of "Laverne and Shirley." Reiner plays a writer who tells the story through the device of a novel coming to life.

They're also working with a publisher on turning "Free Country" into a series of novels, each one dealing with 10 years in the life of the family.

Reiner and Mishkin are working with Martin Mull of "America 2Night," Billy Crystal of "Soap" and Harry Shearer on a satire of television called "The TV Show" for ABC.

Reiner said, "I like going from one thing to the next. Acting is more fun, writing is more challenging, but satisfying; and producing is something I do to maintain control. I don't enjoy it that much, but it's necessary to keep control over your product."

He may return to "All in the Family" with Sally Struthers for special appearances this next season. "If we can work out our schedules I'd love to do it," he said.

"I left the show with mixed emotions. I was very sad and had grown to love the people so much. It was an incredible creative experience. The last show we could hardly get through the run-through we cried so much.

"It was tough to leave the show," he said, "but at the same time I was very excited about starting my own company and having my own show."

Park's Aerial Ride Jams, Strands 26

AURORA, Ohio (AP) — A jammed cable on an amusement park aerial ride stranded 26 passengers for several hours Wednesday night and early Thursday.

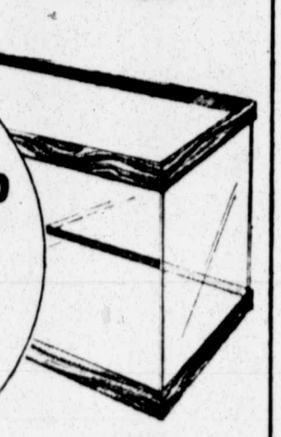

It took firefighers 3½ hours to free the last passenger. "It's just one of those freaks, that's all," said a Geauga Lake Funtime Inc. maintenance man, who refused to give his name. No injuries were reported.

Brother Of Famed Bee Gees Likes His Independent Role

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Gibb is proud that he's a success as a solo singer while his three older brothers, the Bee Gees, are riding a high wave of popularity, too.

"We're both peaking. I couldn't think of anything nicer than this forever," he says.

Even so, he concedes, he admires them so much that if they asked him to join them, he probably would give up his personal fame and do it.

"A lot of people thought I was going to join them when I grew up," says Andy, who's 20. "I'm happy to stay as I am. But if they asked me, I would probably jump at it."

Andy was 10 when the Bee Gees began mounting an international following. "I had a terrible time in school after that," Andy says. "I couldn't get on with anyone, the kids more than the teachers, because I was brother to the Bee Gees. I found that at every school I went to, I left school very early."

When he was growing up and his brothers were away from home and famous, Andy hardly knew them, felt a generation removed from them. Now, he says, he feels they're alike in several ways.

"I like ballads, but romantic and energetic. I don't like dreary tear-jerker ballads," he says. "We have similar attitudes in our song writing. We like uptempo things, positive energy."

The Bee Gees — the name stands for the Brothers Gibb — Barry, 31, and twins Robin and Maurice, 28, spent a number of years in Australia, getting their act together. Andy was 6 months old, in 1958, when the Gibb family moved to that country from England.

Andy started performing at 13, in tourist bars on the island of Ibiza, where the family was living then, and it looked like he was a prospect for show business. The Bee Gees advised him to do what they had done: get seasoning in Australia.

"I planned to stay five years but I just stayed two," Andy says. "I never had a hit single there. I put one out but it never did anything. I was known there, though. I did a lot of TV talk shows."

Andy says, "I don't mean to say anything against Australia but it's a self-contained market. That's very nice, you know. You can make mistakes there.

"But no matter how big you become, you never get heard outside Australia. The Bee Gees became the No. 1 Australian band but they had to leave in 1967 to get internationally known."

Andy left Australia after a telephone call from Barry in 1976. "He told me to come to Miami because I was going to make a record and he was going to take it to the Bee Gees' record company, RSO. I didn't realize how close he was following my career in Australia. I hadn't any idea.

"Two weeks after he called, I was in Miami. I went like a shot; nothing could hold me back.

"I made a single and an album and got a recording contract. Barry sang on some of the songs, in a purely cosmetic way, a nice add-on. He only makes himself involved in places that never take anything away from my singing, which is nice."

When his first album, "Flowing Rivers," came out last summer, Andy went on tour to publicize it, opening shows for Neil Sedaka.

Andy's "I Just Want To Be Your Everything" was one of 1977's biggest hit records and his "(Love Is) Thicker than Water" also became a hit.

This year, Andy went out headlining a tour for the first time. His second LP, "Shadow Dancing," was released in June, while his singie "Shadow Dancing," written by all four Gibb brothers, was the country's No. 1 best-seller.

Blanketing the country with Andy Gibb in June, RSO released another single by him, "Everlasting Love," written by Barry.

Andy took Sherbet, a hot group in Australia, as the opening act on his tour. Having been helped so much by his brothers, Andy says, "I sort of felt like I was doing something to help somebody."

After the summer tour, Andy will perform on some dates of a tour by the Bee Gees.

He is divorced and lives in Miami Beach. His parents live in Miami. It's an all-musical family, the father having been a big band drummer and the mother a band singer.

A sister, 35, married and with three children, in Australia, sang before she was married. But there's still a chance for a Sister Gibb. The baby of the family is a girl, 14. Andy says she sings.

Vinyl Chloride Banned For Use With Aerosols

WASHINGTON (AP) — A few years ago vinyl chloride was a popular propellant for aerosol products, used in items ranging from paint to hair spray to insecticide. Today it's virtually gone.

The latest in a series of bans on uses of the product took effect Thursday with an order from the Consumer Product Safety Commission classifying aerosol household products containing the chemical as "banned hazardous substances."

Vinyl chloride has been associated with cases of angiosarcoma, a rare form of liver cancer, and it was this relationship which led to the bans by various government agencies.

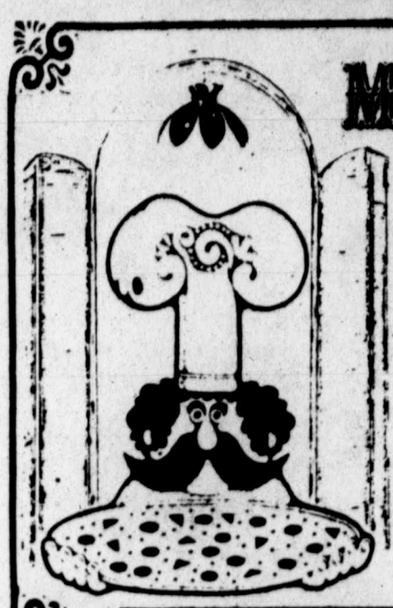

Besides the CPSC action on household products these other agencies have taken action against vinyl chloride.

— Food and Drug Administration recalled 52 brands of products using vinyl chloride in 1974 and banned it from hair sprays and cosmetics. The agency has also proposed a ban on polyvinyl chloride, a related plastic used in packaging, but no final action has been taken.

— Environmental Protection Agency banned use of vinyl chloride in pesticides.

— Occupational Safety and Health Administration set strict workplace exposure levels for vinyl chloride.

Understanding Easier Than Comprehending

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A few years ago when Jason Gould was 5 1/2 years old, he listened to his father talk over dinner. Finally, the boy said, "I understand what you are saying Dad, but what is it that you're saying?"

Elliott Gould tells the story himself, and it helps an inteviewer understand the riddle of Elliott Gould. A little, anyway. After listening to him talk for an hour, you're not sure whether he speaks on a level of profundity incomprehensible to the normal mind, or if your ears have gone bad.

The subject was "Capricorn One." Gould's current movie. It offers the outrageous premise that a manned flight to Mars could be faked by desperate U.S. officials who were willing to kill so the ruse could remain a secret. This reviewer found it to be an original, highly visual and exciting adventure. Other critics complained the plot was full of holes.

"Of course it's full of holes," said Gould enigmatically, "but aren't we all?"

Gould said he undertook "Capricorn One" out of faith in director-writer Peter Hyams, with whom he made "Busting" ("good picture but I didn't like the title"). The actor had his choice of playing the drunken reporter or the No. 1 spaceman. "I couldn't be the first spaceman (James Brolin is) and I didn't want to be a drunken reporter," he said. He plays the TV reporter, sober though unreliable.

Gould said he believes the film will be popular with the public if not the critics (indeed, it has been earning big money in first engagements).

"I see it as the first step toward proving there is no "A Bridge Too Far,'" he remarked.

Does he mean he is ashamed of his participation, along with other highly paid and ill-used stars in the World War II epic?

"Oh, no, I liked the movie," he replied. "Would you like to see pictures of my kids?"

It is, of course, an offer no person can refuse. He displayed a photo of his son by Barbra Streisand, Jason, who recently graduated from grammar school. Also of his two daughters by Jennifer Bogart, with whom he is now living although they remain divorced. "I hope it lasts, but who knows?" he said.

Gould's movie career has had its ups ("M-A-S-H," "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice") and its downs ("Whiffs," "Harry and Walter Go to New York"). He appears to be in an up period right now. Besides "Capricorn One," he has completed "Silent Partner," "Escape to Athens" and "Matilda."

During one of his down periods, Gould starred in Ingmar Bergman's first English language film, "The Touch." The film was a failure, although Gould doesn't think so.

Two American Singers Advance

MOSCOW (AP) — Jacqueline Paige-Green and Zelotes Edmund Toliver, students of the same professor at the University of Michigan, were the only American singers to advance to the second round Thursday in the sixth international Tchaikovsky musical competition.

Of 44 entrants in the voice competition, the judges selected 26 vocalists from eight countries after first-round performances. Fifteen American singers were eliminated.

Miss Paige-Green, 26, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and Toliver, 30, of Silver Spring, Md., both studied under Professor Willis Patterson at Michigan.

She is competing in her first international competition. Toliver, a veteran of international competitions, is a native of Greenport, N.Y., and has taught singing at the universities of North Carolina and Maryland.

The second round begins Friday. The participants will perform arias from Tchaikovsky's operas and romances, fragments from operas of selected West European composers, one work by a contemporary composer of the native country of the singer, a folk song and required works of selected Soviet composers.

Eight women and eight men will be chosen to compete in the final round. The winners will be announced July 2.

Movie Stars Attend Art Works Auction

LONDON (AP) — Actor Jack Nicholson and French heartthrob Alain Delon jostled with aristocrats, museum curators and art dealers from all over the world this week in the crowded galleries of Sotheby Parke Bernet, where the fabulous von Hirsch art collection is being sold.

"It's mind-boggling," said Nicholson, an Oscar-winning performer. Delon, a well-known art collector, said he found the prices too high at the six-day sale.

But Nicholson, who said he was "dabbling," peered at the items on the block through opera glasses from the back of the overflowing showroom.

"You look at this little piece of paper and think 'I could do that,'" Nicholson said of a tiny Durer watercolor that was sold for $1.18 million.

He brought an experienced dealer along to keep him from bidding foolishly.

"I just kept poking him in the ribs. You've got to be careful about this bidding business. It all happens so fast."

The 41-year-old star of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," is in London working on a movie he directed and starred in called "Gone South," about the U.S. Civil War.

He's also starring opposite Shelley Duvall in Stanley Kubrick's new film, "The Shining," which Nicolson described as a "modern gothic horror tale."

Nicholson, who painted as a child and has a collection of paintings of the American West, bought a drawing by the 18th Century Venetian artist Giovanni Tiepolo for $7,770.

"If you put the reputation aside, is still very much to my taste," he said.

"I even dribbled a bid on a Rembrandt, but I wasn't really serious."

CONDUCTOR NAMED

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Lawrence Foster, musical director of the Houston Symphony Orchestra, will become the permanent conductor of the Monte Carlo Opera Orchestra from Sept. 1, 1979, it has been announced. Foster, 37, a native of Los Angeles, worked with Karl Bohm in Germany and Zubin Metha in Los Angeles before taking up the Houston post in 1971.

Red Chinese Produce Rubber Tree Stimulant

TOKYO (AP) — China has produced a new rubber tree stimulant that "raises latex output by 10 to 20 percent" when injected into old rubber trees, Peking's official Hsinhua news agency reported Thursday.

Hsinhua gave no details. But it said in a brief report "the south China tropical plant research institute worked with a farm in south China's Kwangtung Province to make the stimulant which increases the absorption of nutrients by rubber trees."

Anti Search Bill Given Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel opened a campaign Thursday to reverse the Supreme Court ruling that permits searches of news organizations without showing some evidence that a crime has been committed.

One month and a day after the Supreme Court handed down the Stanford Daily decision, the Senate judiciary subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., began hearings on proposals to limit police access to newspaper offices.

In its ruling, the high court said news organizations have no special exemption from search warrants issued by local magistrates or judges at the request of police.

Critics said the ruling will permit politicians under investigation by a newspaper to obtain a search warrant from a friendly judge and cut short journalistic efforts to expose public wrongdoing.

Bayh, who is proposing sharp limits on searches of all homes or businesss of persons not suspected of crimes, said the Stanford Daily ruling "has left us with a serious potential for governmental abuse of our right to privacy."

Proposals to overturn the ruling through new federal law have drawn support from House members and senators ranging from very liberal to very conservative.

Among those testifying in support of new limits on local and federal search warrants were Republican Sens. Bob Dole of Kansas and John Heinz of Pennsylvania; Reps. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., and Danforth Quayle, R-Ind.

Dole and Bayh said a new law should protect all persons and businesses from searches unless there is specific evidence that they may have committed a crime.

Drinan and Heinz argued that coverage should be limited to news-gathering organizations.

Among representatives urging passage of a limit on police searches of newsrooms were Julian Goodman, chairman of the NBC television network; William Small, news director of CBS; Grant Dillman, Washington bureau chief of United Press International.

Cable TV Spokesman Scores Loss Of Viewers Arguments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cable television's chief spokesman said Thursday that broadcasters "don't make any factual case" in arguing that they would lose viewers under regulations allowing cable systems greater freedom to carry programs from out-of-town TV stations.

"There is simply no substantive proof that cable television service — no matter how extensive — jeopardizes local broadcast service anywhere in the country," Robert L. Schmidt, president of the National Cable Television Association, told a news conference.

Schmidt commented as the association filed arguments in connection with a study by the Federal Communications Commission of the economic relationship between hometown broadcast stations and cable TV outlets.

The arguments were filed in reply to a report given the FCC by the National Association of Broadcasters on March 15.

The NAB, to which most broadcast stations subscribe, had said that studies would show audience losses by TV stations competing with cable TV's imported offerings. The association contended that would lead to reduced revenues and a subsequent reduction in the stations' ability to serve the public.

While cable systems must carry all local TV stations, those in the 100 largest television markets may carry only a limited number of out-of-town stations. There is no limit in smaller markets, however, and for cable systems with fewer than 1,000 subscribers.

The NAB said the cable association's "rhetoric has far exceeded its grasp of factual finding."

The cable association then hired a consulting firm to make a new study, on which Thursday's filings were based.

Cable TV's study did not refer directly to a filing with the FCC this week by the Motion Picture Association, which said it had figures to support the view of the NAB. A spokesmen for the movie association, declining to be identified publicly, said giving cable TV systems more flexibility would mean loss of exclusivity for programs that local stations acquired.

Schmidt said the FCC asked for hard facts. "We are putting our hard facts on the table and can stand close scrutiny," he said, adding that it is time for the other side "to put up or shut up."

The Ernst & Ernst study conducted for the cable TV interests concluded that the NAB projections were reached by methods "at variance with commonly accepted statistical procedures."

The cable study also said the local broadcasters were guilty of severe misuse of data.

Ernst & Ernst recommended that the FCC ask the NAB to re-evaluate its findings or, "in the absence of re-evaluation, reject the authenticity of the findings and conclusions presented in the report."

Schmidt said "all broadcasters' difficulties, whatever their cause, were blamed on cable television."

He noted that the proposed revision of the Communications Act now under consideration in Congress calls for almost complete federal deregulation of cable TV.

Schmidt said final action will not come soon, and "we have to deal with the real world" now, a reference to the FCC.

Firms To Swap Cable Operations

ATLANTA (AP) — Responding to federal pressure, a Georgia cable television company has agreed to swap its Atlanta-area operations for $1 million and a Port Huron, Mich., system, a spokesman for Cox Cable Communications Inc. said Thursday.

The agreement-in-principle still requires final contract approval by the communities involved and by the boards of directors of Cox and of Harron Communications Corp., he said.

Cox made the move in line with a Federal Communications Commission order that the company divest itself of Atlanta-area cable operations when Cox Cable becomes a wholly-owned subsidiary of Cox Broadcasting Corp. next month.

Cox Cable will exchange Georgia Cablevision Corp., which serves 7,150 CATV subscribers, and Atlanta Home Theatre, a pay-TV operation, for Harron Cable TV, a 12,000-subscriber system in the Port Huron area, and $1 million.

Harron Communications operates cable TV systems in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Michigan and TV stations in New York and Maine.

Cox Broadcasting also operates WSB radio and WSB-TV in Atlanta. Cox Cable operates 44 cable TV systems in 17 states.

Alaska Lands Bill's Passage Favored By State's Governor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska Gov. Jay Hammond favors congressional passage of an Alaska lands bill if the legislation can be shaped to meet his state's needs.

Hammond said Thursday he was told by the chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, Henry Jackson, D-Wash., that if the bill is stopped this year a more preservation-minded measure likely would be signed into law during the next session of Congress.

At a news conference, Hammond asked Alaska Sens. Ted Stevens and Mike Gravel what they thought of the bill's prospects this year. The senators have pledged to slow down the bill through floor debate unless the legislation, as it passed the House, is substantially revised.

Stevens said there may be a chance yet to make the bill acceptable to Alaskans, judging by some conversations he has had with his Senate colleagues.

Legislative tactics are crucial, Stevens said, adding that a filibuster on the Senate bill could be broken. But a filibuster on the compromise bill that may emerge from a House-Senate conference committee late in the session may be easier to sustain.

Gravel said he doubted if the bill could be made acceptable and that he disagreed with Jackson's view. One more year, he said, and the administration and Congress "will have to come to terms with Alaskan interests."

This year, Gravel said, "there is no possiblity of compromise.... There is nothing we can do but stop the legislation."

Environmental group lobbying, Gravel said, has been extremely effective. Final voting on the Alaska bill in an election year would offer House and Senate members an easy chance "to capitulate to the enviornmental community" and get their environmental voting records in order at Alaska's expense, Gravel said.

Hammond said one of his goals is a final bill which would greatly expand the land that could be administered under state-federal cooperative management. Gravel said he favored cooperative management for the entire "Alaska subcontinent."

The appeal to Hammond, Stevens and Gravel in passing a bill this year is found in several provisions that would expedite the selection of state and native lands. Also, the federal land finally left out of the system of parks, wildlife refuges, wild river corridors and national forests would be open for a variety of uses.

The Senate Energy Committee began work on the Senate version of the bill Wednesday, but the session was devoted to a briefing on the issues by staff members. Actual drafting was set to start next Wednesday.

There are 10 different bills on Alaska lands before the panel, including one already approved by the House.

The House legislation would set aside approximately 120 million acres of federal land in the state for conservation sytems. About half of that would be designated as wilderness, a federal land classification that prohibits most forms of development, including roads.

Orchestra Arrives For Japanese Concert

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — The 107-member New York Philharmonic Orchestra arrived late Thursday on its fourth visit to Japan.

The orchestra, conducted by Eric Leinsdorf, will give concerts in Japan and South Korea, where it has never performed.

Leonard Bernstein was to conduct the orchestra, but the death of his wife last Friday forced him to stay in New York.

The musicians are accompanied by a 77-member staff.

Australian Says Country Music Much Same There

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Reg Lindsay is coming up from "down under" to expand his country music career.

Lindsay, a top star in Australia, has just released a country music single in the United States, will follow it with an album and is spending much of the summer in this country — a long kangaroo jump from "the country down under."

"Country music is pretty much the same here and there," Lindsay, 46, of Sydney, said in an interview at a Nashville record company office. "The basics of a lot of it came to both countries a long time ago. Australians, Southerners and Texans are very similar."

He's been an Australian trailblazer for several years, having organized the first regular country music shows on Sydney Harbour, presented the first full country show in nightclubs and recorded the first country LP and the first live country album in the commonwealth.

He's also been chosen top male country vocalist in Australia and his television show, "Reg Lindsay's Country Homestead," was recently selected top variety show. He's released 41 albums in Australia and "a couple hundred" singles.

He's now recording on an American label with his single titled, "If I'd Have Known I Was Gonna Live This Long." It's a honky-tonk number, although Lindsay's singing style is not particularly comparable to any American star. The most surprising element of his style is that his Australian accent vanishes.

"I've been steeped in the music so long, I just don't sound Australian," he explained.

He has been stamped as something of a rebel in his country because he's tried to keep his music contemporary. It sounds remarkably similar to the career of Waylon Jennings, whose country music with rock overtones has alarmed some traditionalists in the United States.

"I've always tried to be progressive in my country music," he said. "I just like to keep up with the times. Some of the things I did were being done here, but not in Australia.

"Some of the things I did were just a different segment of country music. Variety is the spice of life and the spice of music, too.

"Ray Price had to fight to record 'For the Good Times' and Hank Williams had to fight to record 'Lovesick Blues.' I think it makes it a little bit better to fight for things a little.

"Music of every description is becoming more universal. The English people are coming here to be successful, and of course the Beatles affected the whole music industry. And the Beatles learned from people like Carl Perkins and others."

Country music is as popular in Australia as in America, he said.

"There are lots of country music festivals," he said. "There were 45,000 at a festival recently, and it outdrew a Fleetwood Mac concert. This surprised a lot of people.

"Country music has the same problems there as here. Some executive people just pull a blind down and won't investigate the popularity of it. A certain segment is just not sure what country music is."

Houston Restaurateur Aids ERA Drive

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston restaurateur has decided now is the time for all hungry persons to come to the aid of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Bette Otero will donate her restaurant funds next week to the drive to ratify the ERA, which must gain approval by three more states in the next nine months to become law. It would ban discrimination on the basis of sex.

Ironically, Otero's restaurant is named Gigolo's.

"I've never belonged to any organization and I don't intend to, but sometimes one voice is not enough and you have to band together," Otero said.

She will donate the full cost of a dinner, food only, after a customer pays and only if the customer is willing.

"It's not a free meal," she said. "The customer has to pay and I'm standing the cost. This is one time I want to go on record for being involved in something I believe in."

Otero said she is concerned about the barriers her 18-year-old daughter, who plans to go into business administration, will have to face.

"I'd like to do something to open some doors for her," Otero said.

However Otero is also speaking out for herself.

"I'm doing this because I was just discriminated against again," she said. "I'm tired of it. Nearly all women have been discriminated against in their jobs, passed over for appointments when they were better qualified than the man who got the job."

In addition to running Gigolo's, Otero is a real estate broker, has owned a chain of medical laboratories and has acted as an importer.

"I've managed or owned 27 corporations and raised two daughters," she said. She is divorced.

She has had little trouble getting financial backing from bankers, she said, but she felt discrimination in dealing with corporations. This discrimination drove her to act for the ERA.

Otero said she will channel donations through the National Organization for Women for use in the ERA ratification drive.

Defective Kiddie Seats Repaired By Manufacturer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that Collier-Keyworth Co. of Gardner, Mass., is conducting a voluntary repair program for 5,600 car seat and stroller kits.

The kits are used to convert a baby car seat into a stroller by snapping the seat into a frame.

The commission said a design defect in the metal seat support of the stroller frame could cause the supports to spread apart, allowing an infant to be thrown forward from the stroller. The commission said it has received reports of 13 such cases.

The kits were sold for about $28 each, nationwide, and were manufactured before March 14, 1977. Involved are model numbers 6805, 6806, 7805 and 7806.

Company officials said that if your kit does not have two hinged metal braces riveted at right angles to the top of the stroller frame seat support and reinforcing the seat from directly beneath, call or write Collier-Keyworth Co., P.O. Box 528, Gardner, Mass., 01440. Telephone 617 632-0120.

Stock Mart Edges Higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged higher Thursday, with gambling-related issues again providing much of the interest in a generally unexciting day.

The Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks rose 2.77 points to 827.70, recouping part of the 13.69-point losses of Tuesday and Wednesday.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a small margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Big Board volume totaled 27.16 million shares, against 29.1 million the day before.

Analysts noted the market began to recover as the troubled dollar rebounded somewhat on foreign exchange markets, apparently in reaction to reports President Carter is considering imposing increased oil-import fees to cut petroleum consumption if Congress doesn't pass his oil tax plan.

Worries over rising interest rates still were pervasive on Wall Street. The Federal Reserve said M1, the nation's basic money supply, fell $1.1 bilion in the week ended June 14. Analysts differed over the implications of the report but noted the Fed this week apparently already had moved to push up rates in the market for federal funds, short-term loans between banks. In addition, the analysts braced for a possible ¼-point increase in the prime rate today to 9 percent.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of 4 P.M. close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Official Escapes Bomb

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A bomb, believed planted by left wing terrorists, exploded in the apartment of Secretary of the Treasury Juan Alemann late Wednesday causing serious damage, police reported.

He was uninjured, but his wife suffered a small cut on the head. Police said the bombing could have been linked to Alemann's opposition to staging the World Cup soccer games here. He claimed the games would prove too costly for Argentina's battered economy.
