'Cat Claw scratches drug dealers' pocketbooks

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Drug Enforcement Agency officials call it the "wave of the future" in the war against narcotics traffickers, but civil liberties attorneys say it's unconstitutional — maybe.

It is a little-known law passed in 1978 that allows federal agents to seize all property directly traceable to narcotics dealings regardless of whether criminal indictments have been filed.

"It's a civil action. We weren't even looking for any arrests," says DEA Agent-in-Charge Ken Miley of the newest tactic used by officers in the continuing battle against illicit drug activity.

"This is the wave of the future in the war against drug traffickers," he says. "This lets us hit the drug peddlers where it hurts — in the pocketbook."

The latest pocketbooks to be dented belong to Benito and Matias Montemayor, two brothers who have past narcotics convictions and have been targeted by the DEA for civil action.

Among other things, the Montemayors own ranches in Mexico, 13 expensive horses, diamond watches, dozens of handmade boots — and a pair of sprawling, walled-in estates in this South Texas border town.

But the homes — one valued at $180,000 and the other at $98,000 — came into the hands of the DEA during a raid Tuesday when agents carrying warrants swooped down and confiscated the houses and the personal possessions valued at $200,000.

The goods and property seized eventually will total between $800,000 and $1 million, Miley said.

The Montemayor brothers could not be reached for comment. Both were in Mexico when the raid occurred, DEA agents said.

"We call this Operation Cat Claw," says Miley. "It's the first time the law's been used in Texas and the first time in the U.S. when there weren't companion criminal cases."

Jim Harrington, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney in nearby San Juan, says he believes the action "has got to be unconstitutional."

But Miley contends, "you can't violate the civil rights of an object."

"This thing has been carefully investigated over a 5-year period and includes agency reports all over the U.S. and Mexico," he said.

Matias Montemayor is listed as the owner of a construction company in Monterrey, Mexico.

"Hell, if a chain-link fence around a broken-down bulldozer makes a construction company, then he's got one," Miley said.

Miley says the action taken against the Montemayors is just the first step.

"But this is the way we're going from now on. We're working with Mexican authorities to see what can be done about the ranches in Mexico."

Sands near death; No violence urged

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Appeals for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics to abstain from violence when Bobby Sands dies appeared to be making headway today as the IRA hunger striker lay in a coma on the 65th day of his fast.

Official sources said the 27-year-old convicted terrorist had been unconscious since early Sunday. His family, a priest and a team of medical specialists were with him in the hospital wing of the Maze Prison southwest of Belfast.

A prison source said Sands was skeletal, weighing less than 85 pounds and barely alive. He weighed 155 on March 1 when he began his fast demanding that imprisoned members of the Irish Republican Army be treated as political prisoners and not as common criminals.

Three other IRA men were also fasting in the Maze, and one of them, 25-year-old Francis Hughes, was reported close to death after 50 days without food. The other two, Raymond McCreesh and Patsy O'Hara, were in the 44th day of their hunger strike, but their lives were not considered in danger yet.

The belief was growing that IRA leaders had decided against the widespread violence they threatened earlier if the British government did not give in to Sands and let him die.

Pro-IRA sources said they did not think the guerrillas wanted to undermine the propaganda effect abroad of Sands' death by launching another round of terror bombings and attacks against British and Protestant security forces. Such bloody campaigns in the past have usually been followed by a drop in IRA prestige and financial support.

Recent statements from Sinn Fein, the legal political arm of the outlawed IRA, have been comparatively moderate. Sands' mother appealed Sunday for "everyone to stay calm and not to get involved in any fighting.' Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the fiery young fighter for Irish unity and Catholic rights, told 15,000 demonstrators they must "hold our tempers and act in a disciplined and organized fashion."

Pope John Paul II appealed for an end to the 1½ years of sectarian warfare in Northern Ireland.

American left rallies troops for march against Pentagon

By GUY DARST

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American left, marching by the tens of thousands against U.S. involvement in El Salvador and cuts in domestic social programs, has shown it can still rally its troops in the big battalions characteristic of the anti-Vietnam protests of 1960's.

Demonstrators marched in May sunshine Sunday from near the Lincoln Memorial, past the State Department to the main parking lot of the Pentagon for a rally intended to signal resistence to Reagan administration policies at home and abroad.

In marked contrast to many of the Vietnam War protests, Sunday's was peaceful and orderly.

The crowd represented labor, religious, anti-draft and anti-war groups, as well as homosexual, black, Indian and Hispanic rights organizations.

Both the U.S. Park Service police and the Federal Protective Service, responsible for protecting government buildings, estimated the crowd at 25,000. Rally organizer Larry Holmes put it at 100,000, and Bill Masters, press aide for the sponsoring People's Anti-War Mobilization — PAM — said: "Next time we'll set up turnstiles."

One of the 26 speakers, former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., told the crowd: "The same gang of crazies in the Pentagon and at the White House that brought us the war in Vietnam are now trying to get us into a war in El Salvador.

"The main threat to our security comes from the violence...of the Pentagon, the Reagan government and their collaborators in Congress and co-conspirators in the Moral Majority," she said.

Rally organizers were delighted at the end of the day.

"It proves there's a real movement," Masters said. "It's a major step forward and the opening of resistance to the Reagan administration at home and abroad."

Smaller marches were held in Seattle, San Francisco and Kansas City.

Slight shifts made in powers of hospital boards

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a three-part series examining the new management study recently adopted by Midland Memorial Hospital to delineate powers of the governing bodies.

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

In March 1977, legislation created the Midland County Hospital District and its board of directors. Directors became responsible for levying taxes to pay for the county's indigents as well as building expenses for Midland Memorial Hospital. Since then, the elected director's role has expanded and deflated as needs changed.

The recently adopted management agreement between the directors and the board of trustees, which was assigned day-to-day control of hospital operations, may have changed the role of the director slightly — but not much.

"It won't change the director's position," said Ed Magruder, president of the board of directors. "It will more or less change the way the directors make themselves personally involved. It will shift the responsibility down to where it belongs."

Where responsibility for operations belongs, he said, is with the trustees and the hospital administration.

management study

"We recognize that the directors are elected officials whose chief responsibilities are in the assessing and collecting taxes, applying tax money to the retirement of debt and major equipment expenses and paying for the care of the indigents," Magruder said. "Those things are all kept" intact in the new agreement, he said.

However, Magruder said, since a director is elected and essentially "could be anybody, without any business management ability and certainly without hospital management experience...we delegate those responsibilities to the management team (trustees) and to the professional administrator."

Using a more direct management principle — and the Tribrook Group Inc. efficiency study on the hospital's governance system — the boards developed the new agreement. "It is designed with a system of maintaining those people (who) are accountable to the next step up the ladder so you can monitor those activities," Magruder said.

Those activities were delegated to the "people who are professionals in management and who care for the patient," he said, adding no matter who was elected director, the hospital trustees, administration and medical staff and nurses would still be maintaining standards.

In the agreement, directors are specifically alloted "authority over the assets and operations of the hospital." While trustees manage, directors will control the purse strings.

In an accompanying set of guidelines to the agreement, board members agreed to delegate authority by dollar-amount degrees. Called "Guidelines for Delegation of Authority by Midland County Hospital District to Midland Memorial Foundation," the agreement is simple.

Regarding cash flow decisions, the agreement states that if the budget is forecast to change either way by $250,000 or more, trustees must answer to the directors. Preparing a special report, trustees must include "an analysis of the reasons for the anticipated deviation" and actions to change that situation before expenditures are approved.

Up to $250,000 in deviations in a

House likely to hand Reagan what he wants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House appears certain to hand President Reagan the budget blueprint he wants this week, with enough Democrats lined up to help Republicans pass it.

An Associated Press survey found 29 House Democrats definitely supporting the president's plan instead of their own party's alternative and others leaning that way. One Democratic aide said more defections are possible as the vote nears.

The House, where the Reagan program had been expected to face its stiffest test, was resuming debate today and moving toward a likely vote Wednesday.

The outcome in the Senate, which may not vote until next week, is almost a foregone conclusion. Reagan's fellow Republicans are in the majority, and Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd announced over the weekend that he is resigned to supporting the president despite doubts his plan will work.

That was the main question in the House, where the debate was an almost-dizzying volley of figures on the effects of Reagan's proposed tax and budget cuts.

Democrats and Republicans have been using different sets of revenue and expense projections, based on differing forecasts about the future course of the economy, to support their arguments and to compare the administration-backed plan with the Democratic alternative, which would spend more on social programs than Reagan wants.

It is, mused House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, much like the way former President Lyndon Johnson played golf: hitting eight balls for every stroke and counting only the best one.

"They (Republicans) are giving themselves the best shots for their strokes and giving us the worst shots for our strokes," the Oklahoma Democrat said at one point last week.

The AP telephone survey late last week indicated the Republicans were winning.

Besides the 29 Democrats already joining them behind Reagan's plan, five more said they were leaning that way. Twelve others said they were undecided, but administration supporters said privately many of those will back the president.

If Republicans stay solid, a switch of 26 Democrats would be necessary to give Reagan his biggest budget victory yet. GOP leaders say they expect only one Republican to vote against the president.

An aide to one key Democrat conceded the president is likely to score a victory, perhaps by a wide margin, if Democrats see Reagan will win and decide to support him.

The AP survey parallels private assessments made by Republican and Democratic leaders.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has emphasized that the budget vote is only "the first skirmish," noting the budget resolution under consideration merely sets guidelines for Congress to follow. The actual cuts in spending and taxes will be voted separately later in the year.

In the Senate, meanwhile, debate begins Thursday on an administration-backed plan endorsed by the Senate Budget Committee.

Byrd, the Senate minority leader from West Virginia, said Saturday he will vote for Reagan's budget plan even though he believes it is unrealistic.

"The people want to give the president a chance," Byrd said. "So I will give him a chance."

The administration, eager for a big initial victory, has worked hard. The plan's chief lobbyist, Reagan himself, courted Republicans and Democrats alike with telephone calls, Oval Office chats, presidential cufflinks and invitations to state dinners.

Prison inmates stage food boycott

SANTA FE (AP) — Most inmates at the New Mexico penitentiary skipped hot meals Sunday as a boycott was staged to protest new prison policies.

Corrections department spokesman John Ramming said Sunday evening that "at the noon meal, a vast majority were not eating. That was true again this evening."

He said that the inmates in Cellblock 3, the maximum security unit at the penitentiary, "declined at their own choice to have visitors Sunday."

Ramming said about 15 demonstrators showed up along the highway entrance to the penitentiary at about noon Sunday, carrying placards and passing out pamphlets. This demonstration continued until about 2 p.m. near the front gate of the penitentiary, which is about a quarter-mile from the institution itself.

Priso official had been forewarned last week by two life-termers who are inmates in cellblock 3 there would be what was termed a peaceful protest Sunday .

An attorney for inmates Michael Colby and William Jack Stephens had distributed a letter last week advising of the peaceful protest.

The two inmates said the protest was over food service, visitation schedules and recreation time.

Ramming said earlier Sunday it was difficult to determine the extent of the protest because it is discretionary whether inmates show up for breakfast on Sunday morning. They are allowed to sleep in and skip breakfast.

But a majority of the some 700 inmates in the penitentiary did not take the noon meal and most did not show up for the evening meal Sunday.

"Prison authorities cancelled the scheduled hot meal Sunday night because so few turned up," Ramming said. Those that did were served sandwiches.

"We didn't want to waste the taxpayers money preparing hot meals which very few would eat," Ramming said.

Warden Harvey Winans and the three deputy wardens were at the penitentiary throughout the day.

Ramming said it was unknown whether the protest would continue into next week.

"We had no problems whatsoever at the institution," Ramming said. "The warden has been talking to numerous inmates throughout the weekend. That will continue."

Killing animals called indictment of humans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every 2.4 seconds in the United States, about as often as an average person takes a breath, a lost or abandoned pet is put to death.

And the occurrence of "Be Kind to Animals Week," which began Sunday and ends Saturday, is unlikely to have any effect on a phenomenon that one expert termed an indictment of human beings.

"The problem is horrendous. We're still killing from 12 million to 13 million homeless dogs and cats every year," said Phyllis Wright, director of animal control of the Humane Society of the United States.

"It's somewhat demoralizing and dehumanizing to society as a whole, and particularly to the people whose job it is daily to kill large numbers of dogs and cats," Michael Walters of the American Veterinary Medical Association said.

Loose animals are a major headache for city officials, according to Jay Mizychenko of the International City Management Association. He said that clearing the streets of the animals is not only a costly chore but also an emotional issue that often turns neighbor against neighbor.

The bulk of these animals are not strays but pets allowed to run loose, which then end up in animal shelters and are never reclaimed by their owners, said Alan Beck, director of the Center for the Interaction of Animals and Society at the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine in Philadelphia.

"What I'm saying is a horrible indictment against human beings," Beck said. "The myth of the stray dog protects us from facing up to the fact that this country ... is very ambivalent about animals and does some very inhumane things."

He said studies in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis indicate that the actual number of strays is so low that it would likely be non-existent if it were not for pets that are abandoned or escape.

Often, when people no longer want a pet, he said, they let it run loose rather than make a positive decision to take it to a shelter or a veterinarian. When the pet disappears, the owner simply says it escaped.

Beck compared the problem to the widespread custom of infanticide in Europe in the 1700s, when people took no overt action to kill a baby, but simply left it outside to die.

Also, he said of the owners of straying pets, "a lot of people leave them loose out of sheer stupidity. They really think the animal prefers it."

A dog prefers to be with the leader of its pack, and in the case of a pet, that leader is the human, Beck explained. The fantasy of freedom to roam is something humans think about, he said, but dogs don't need roaming.

Ms. Wright said the solution is simple: pet owners must control their animals and have them spayed or neutered.

Communities need to establish strong laws to control animals, particularly licensing requirements and inducements to have pets spayed or neutered, she said. And most important, people should carefully consider the drawbacks of pet ownership before they add one to the household.

"It is too easy to get a puppy from a pet store or a friend," Ms. Wright said, noting that up to 50 percent of animals handled at shelters are simply turned in by their owners.

Oilfield worker killed in accident

O'DONNELL — A 16-year-old O'Donnell oilfield worker was killed early today after he was thrown from his car when it when out of control on FM 2370 one-half mile south of here, ran into a field and rolled over once.

Killed was Joe Sanchez, who suffered a broken neck.

He was pronounced dead by Dawson County Peace Justice Fred Vera.

The Sanchez vehicle was northbound on the roadway went it veered out of control.

The 12:30 a.m. mishap was investigated by Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Jim Lasater of Lamesa.

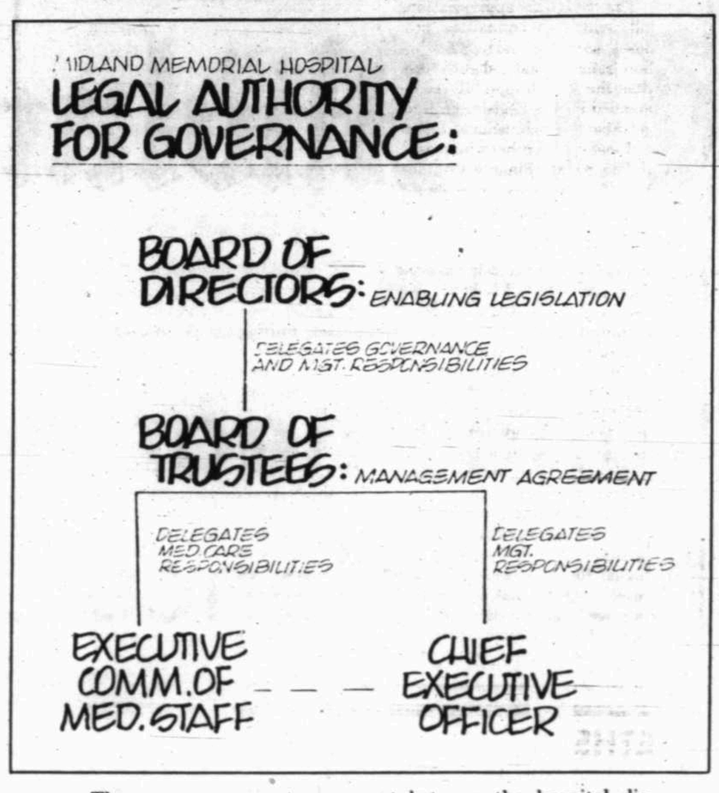
A puppy glances mournfully at a photographer from the arms of a humane society volunteer in Topeka, Kan. There are about 12 million homeless dogs and cats that must be killed every year according to Phyllis Wright, director of animal control of the Humane Society of the U.S. Although May 3-9 is "Be Kind to Animals Week," it is unlikely to have any effect on the growing problem of strays and the large numbers of animals which must be destroyed.



The new management agreement between the hospital district's board of directors and board of trustees clearly establishes legal lines of authority and accountability. With directors accepting full responsibility of all that goes on in the hospital, trustees are responsible for all managment functions. Falling under the board of trustees, the executive committee of the medical staff and the chief executive officer will operate with full accountability to the trustees.

Shifts in powers slight as result of MMH study fiscal year can be handled by the trustees for corrective action and approval. Trustees will further delegate deviations from $50,000 to $100,000 to it finance committee and under $50,000 to the former hospital administrator, now referred to as president.

A safeguard clause allows that if directors do have to approve a change of more than $250,000 a year, they "shall at that time advise the board of trustees of its future authority, both primary and delegatory, with respect to any further negative variances occurring the same fiscal year."

In addition, monthly finance reports and corrective action result reports shall be furnished by trustees to directors.

Staff pay increases and increased personnel which are "reasonably calculated" essentially become the job of the president. "Authority is delegated to the board of trustees up to 4 percent and to the president up to 50 percent of the 4 percent to increase employee compensation more than the then total existing level of personnel costs," the additional agreement states.

New services and programs costing more than $10,000 may be implemented in the annual budget or at any other monthly board of director meeting. However, revenues produced must not exceed $250,000 a year.

In addition the trustees "may subdelegate portions of the authority granted herein to the president and to (its own) committees." In reviewing the Tribrook recommendations, the trustees have limited its standing committees to five:

—Quality assurance and personnel committee.

—Finance committee.

—Long-range planning committee, of which the former building committee will be a sub-committee.

—Joint conference committee.

—Indigents and public relations committee.

An executive committee including members of both boards will also be a standing committee.

Each of trustees' committees will have a director liaison assigned to attend committee meetings and monitor progress, as well.

Allowing the trustees to take a more visably accountable role in hospital management, this agreement is supposed to facilitate directors to make more concentrated efforts in those areas assigned them in the original legislation.

Tuesday: Effectiveness of the agreement.

Weather nothing to get excited about — so far

It's starting out as another one of those ho-hum weeks with the temperatures warm, the winds slight and no rain.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy and cooler through Tuesday. Low tonight should be in the upper 50s with the mercury jumping into the low 80s on Tuesday.

Winds should be southerly and variable at 10 to 15 mph on Tuesday, according to the weatherman.

High on Sunday was 81 degrees, a balmy day compared to the sizzling record of 98 degrees set in 1947. Low today was a sultry 60 degrees as compared to the record low of 38 degrees set in 1935 and 1978.

Precipitation for the month is a trace while the year-to-date mark is up to 3.94 inches.

One person drowned and another was reported missing after heavy thunderstorms dumped as much as 6-8 inches of rain over much of Southeast Texas.

Police said an 18-month-old boy who apparently walked away from his home in Southeast Houston drowned Sunday afternoon when he was swept away by high water in a rain-swollen drainage ditch.

Officers said the body of Jessie Peak was found about 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Midlander killed near Big Spring

BIG SPRING — A 23-year-old Midland woman was killed late Saturday night after she ran into the path of a tractor trailer on Interstate Highway 20 about 600 yards west of the Big Spring city limits.

The woman, Andrea Charles Manriquez of 315 Elm Ave. in Midland, had walked from Big Spring State Hospital, where she was a temporary patient, and ran from the I-20 median into the path of the 1979 White Freightliner driver by Stephen Mark Goodman, 27, of Ontario, Calif.

Ms. Manriquez was pronounced dead at 10:45 p.m. Saturday by Howard County Judge Bill Tune.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Thomas Funeral Home of Midland.

SS Norway due back in port sometime today

MIAMI (AP) — Passengers aboard the disabled cruise ship SS Norway used bottles of expensive sparkling water to bathe, and downed 16,000 cans of free soft drinks and beer while the world's largest cruise ship limped home to Miami.

The luxury liner was due sometime today to reach Miami after it a developed boiler trouble Friday on the last leg of a seven-day Caribbean cruise.

The 1,035-foot ocean liner was slogging along the last 525 miles to Miami on power from two of its four engines.

The cruise ship had stopped at the Virgin Islands and was en route to a small island in the Bahamas called Little San Salvador when boiler problems struck.

The 15-year-old ship had undergone a $50 million renovation in 1980, but all the luxuries were of little relief to the 1,800 passengers on this trip. Some slept on deck to escape stuffy cabins.

The ship has had full electricity since Saturday, but it still has no drinking water or water for bathing. Passengers have been brushing their teeth in soda water or Perrier water at $1.20 per bottle.

During a 24-hour blackout that began Friday, bar manager Tony Fitzsimmons said that nearly $20,000 worth of free beer and soft drinks were consumed.

Midland man reported stable following two-car accident

A 20-year-old Midland man who was injured early Sunday morning in a two-car accident south of the city remained in stable condition early today in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

Robert H. Thomas suffered head and chest injuries in the mishap, which occurred about 7 a.m. some 11 miles south of Midland on State Highway 329. According to the Department of Public Safety, Thomas was driver of one of two cars traveling south at the time.

Driver of the other vehicle, Steven Sapp of Midland, reportedly was uninjured.

Thomas was first brought to Midland Memorial Hospital and later transferred to Medical Center Hospital in critical condition.

The accident was investigated by Trooper David Jones of Midland.

Burglaries at two Midland residences over the weekend were being investigated by Midland police early today.

Tommie W. Floyd Jr. of 1609 E. Oak Avenue told police his residence was entered through the rear door and several items taken between 3 and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Police, Fire Roundup

Taken, Floyd said, were a men's gold ring with five diamonds and a stereo receiver, cassette player and recorder, equalizer and turn table. Total value of the items was $2,870.

Gerald W. Fischer of 1510 Manor Court told police he left Midland on Friday and when he returned about 6 p.m. Sunday, he found a rock had been thrown through his kitchen window and his house burglarized.

Fischer said items taken in the break-in included a stereo turntable, cassette tape deck, tuner and needle cartridge. He said total value of the items was $1,020.

A fire in Midland late Sunday morning completely destroyed a boat, according to fire department reports.

The fire, at the home of Kenneth Freeman at 2804 Metz Drive, was quickly extinguished by firemen. Besides destroying the boat, the fire reportedly caused minor damage to the motor.

Cause of that blaze was not immediately known.

Firemen also responded to a house fire Sunday morning. The fire was at a home occupied by Joe Foster and located on County Road 130 East, about a mile east of State Highway 349. The house is owned by Earl G. Farrington, according to fire reports.

The house was smoldering when firemen arrived. It was extinguished with a garden hose. The blaze caused moderate damage to the ceiling and roof over the bathroom.

Fire department reports indicated the cause of the fire may have been a faulty water heater vent.

House to consider state budget bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state prison reform organization worked over the weekend to rally support for proposals to pay prisoners a daily wage and to allow inmates to have "contact" visits with their families.

Time was short for CURE — Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants — because it wants to amend the state budget bill, which was scheduled for House debate today.

The two-year appropriations bill written in committee proposes spending nearly $26.5 billion from all funds, slightly less than the $26.7 billion bill recommended by the Legislative Budget Board, which includes financial leaders from both houses.

The Senate Finance Committee hoped to have its version of the budget completed by Tuesday, with possible debate this week.

It is virtually certain that the final spending bill will be written by a 10-member conference committee.

Passage of the budget would leave legislative and congressional redistricting as the major unfinished legislative task before lawmakers adjourn the 4½-month session June 1.

'In our opinion, we are losing a golden opportunity for rehabilitation by having the most stringent visiting conditions of any prison system in the country and being about the only remaining prison system that does not pay a wage," said Charles Sullivan, CURE'S executive director. "Prisoners sometimes visit their families for years without touching their wife or children."

Sullivan said the House approved a $1-a-day wage for prisoners in 1979, but the bill died in a Senate committee.

That same bill is lodged in a House subcommittee this session, so Sullivan said CURE decided to try to amend the appropriations bill to include prisoner wages and "contact" visits.

"These are our bread and butter issues," Sullivan said.

He said state prison director W.J. Estelle opposes the proposals, but the prison board has taken no postion.

Also on today's House calendar was a final vote on Gov. Bill Clements' proposal to allow wiretapping of suspected drug dealers and kingpins of dope traffic. House members tentatively approved the bill Friday, 96-32.

Also still alive in the House was a proposed constitutional amendment to wipe out Texas' $80 million-a-year ceiling on payments to welfare recipients. The House tentatively approved the proposal Friday, 94-34, but 100 votes are needed to send the measure to the Senate.

If approved by the House and Senate, the proposal would be on the November 1982 general election ballot. Texas is the only state with a welfare ceiling.

The Senate calendar included 53 proposals, some of which senators already have refused to debate. One bill that could trigger a filibuster would require corpses to be embalmed.

McAllen mayoral race heats up

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Local police department problems have heated up an already fierce runoff fight between incumbent Mayor Othal Brand and Dr. Ramiro Casso, a physician hoping to become the city's first Hispanic mayor.

Voters will choose between the candidates Saturday.

Federal and state grand juries and the state attorney general are investigation allegations of a pattern of police brutality among McAllen officers against poor Mexican-Americans.

This town of 60,000 in the Rio Grande Valley was shocked to watch videotapes on television news programs showing policemen beating, kicking and verbally abusing prisoners at the station booking desk over a six-year period.

Casso has made it a campaign issue.

"The real issue is Mr. Brand. He had four years as mayor and he blew it," said the 58-year-old family practice doctor. "He blew the police situation to where it brought us national disgrace. He didn't stop the beatings."

Brand, finishing a four-year term, says most of the alleged brutality incidents occurred before he was mayor but while he was a city commissioner.

The mayor defends his handling of the matter, saying he did everything possible at the earliest point to stop police misconduct. Brand said he first saw evidence of abuse in 1980.

"As soon as information became available to us about police brutality, I think we acted responsibly," said Brand, adding he went to the state grand jury and the U.S. Justice Department requesting investigations.

The 61-year-old wealthy businessman has been described as the largest vegetable grower in the state. His business, Griffin and Brand, has 22 separate telephone listings in the McAllen phone book.

Casso led the April 4 election with 5,793 votes to Brand's 4,924. A third candidate, Mike Frost, polled 2,071 votes and has endorsed Brand.

Both Brand and Casso have accused each other of injecting racism into the campaign to divide the city's 70 percent Mexican-Americans from the Anglo community.

Some of Brand's longtime enemies, farmworker unions, eagerly are backing Casso.

Jim Harrington, the civil rights lawyer who filed represented plaintiffs in police brutality suits, is married to the state director of the United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO.

Brand says the heightened banter about police problems by Harrington is just politically motivated.

The police controversy was expected to surface during state senate hearings on Brand's appointment to the state prison board. A day before the hearing, Brand withdrew his name, saying he did not have time to campaign, run his business and answer questions at a confirmation hearing.

Casso and the mayor squared off indirectly once before. The dispute was whether to sell the city-owned hospital to a private company.

Casso and a coalition of doctors forced city commissioners to call a referendum on the issue, claiming the private owners would raise room rates and cutback on services to the poor. The doctors won, although the hospital later was taken over by Methodist Hospitals of Dallas.

Turnout is considered a key in the election. The McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg metropolitan area is among the lowest income areas in the nation. Recent figures show a per capita income of $4,323.

McAllen has the only skyscraper in the Rio Grande Valley and is considered a fast-growing retail and business center. However, an estimated one-third of the population lives at or below the federal poverty line including a large migrant farmworker population.

McClellan wins third term as Austin mayor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Incumbent Carole McClellan has won her third two-year term as Austin mayor, defeating attorney Bob Binder in a race focused on the use of nuclear power.

Unofficial returns showed Ms. McClellan polled 36,451 votes in the Saturday's election to Binder's 30,808.

Binder, 36, drew heavy support from environmentalists because he opposed Austin's participation in the South Texas Nuclear Project. Ms. McClellan backed it.

Ms. McClellan drew less votes than Binder in the April 4 election, but the runoff election was ordered because the challenger failed to gain a majority.

ANDREWS — Services for Leona Alene Saffel, 91, of Andrews were held Sunday in Singleton Funeral Home's Chapel of the Chimes. Burial was in the Andrews Cemetery.

Ms. Saffel died Thursday in an Andrews hospital following an illness.

She was born May 22, 1889, in Waco and had lived in Andrews since 1947.

Survivors include three nieces and a nephew.

A. Manriquez

Rosary will be recited for Andrea Charles Manriquez, 23, of 315 Elm Ave., at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel. Funeral Mass will be said at 3 p.m. Wednesday in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Mrs. Manriquez was killed late Saturday night near Big Spring in a pedestrian-truck mishap.

She was born Jan. 23, 1958, in Graham and had lived in Midland most of her life.

Survivors include her husband, Macario Manriquez of Midland; two sons, Joe Manuel Manriquez and John Manuel Charles, both of Midland; a daughter, Joann Charles of Midland; her mother, Maria Rodriquez of Midland; three brothers, Freddie Charles of Graham, and Euginio Charles Jr. and Tony Rodriquez, both of Midland; four sisters, Janie Charles, Mary Alice Charles, Loyce Gavia and Sylvia Muniez, all of Midland; her grandfather, Renigeo Rodriquez of Houston; nine nephews and nieces, and five aunts and six uncles.

Lloyd Hood

Services for Lloyd Hood, 46, of 4632 Princeton Ave., will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. W.S. McKibbon officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He died Saturday evening in a Midland hospital.

Hood was born March 12, 1935, in Anadarko, Okla. He grew up in Morton and Fort Worth. He graduated from The University of Texas at Arlington with a bachelor of science degree in geology.

He was married July 11, 1964, to Peggy Ann Adams in Fort Worth. Hood worked for GSI in Libya, North Africa for a year and then went to New Orleans, Corpus Christi and Houston. He moved to Midland in October 1977. He was a member of Midland Faith Fellowship, the Geological Society and American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Survivors include his wife, Peggy; a son, Robbin Hood of Midland; a daughter, Penny Hood of Midland; four brothers, Gordon Hood of New Boston, Paul Hood of Denver, Colo., Floyd Hood and David Hood, both of Fort Worth; four sisters, Leota Parkhurst, Odena Oberholzer and Beverly Himes, all of Fort Worth, and Janice Keener of Wichita Falls; and several nieces and nephews.

The family has asked that memorials be directed to the Midland Faith Fellowship Building Fund, 3512 Hyde Park, Midland.

Frances Wray

Services for Frances S. Wray, 82, of Marble Falls and formerly of Midland were to be at 10 a.m. today in Monahans. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park here, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Friday.

Pallbearers were to be David Nelson, Clifford Watlington and David Watlington, all of Midland; Mark Nelson of Canyon; Richard Wray of Azel; and Clifford Lawrence of Monahans.

Texas congressmen line up behind program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen have been particularly visible in the recent influence of the Conservative Democratic Forum in the budget discussions.

One of the major news magazines arranged this past week for Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station and Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock to pose for a picture. The photographer took a roll of black and white and a roll of color; supposedly the picture will run inside, not on the cover.

Stenholm is the president of the 47-member coalition that was established late last year to give conservatives more of a voice in party affairs, but which has expanded recently. Many members of the party, including all eight of its Texas members, have lined up behind President Reagan's economic recovery program to reverse what was otherwise a Democratic majority in the House.

Gramm, a member of the House Budget Committee, is the CDF's leader on budget matters and drew up the budget version known as the Gramm-Latta bill that contains the president's far-ranging spending cuts.

Hance, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, is the CDF's leader on tax matters.

A. Preston Washburn, senior vice president of Alexander and Alexander of Texas Inc., was chosen as "Boss of the Year" at the annual bosses luncheon for the Insurance Women of Midland.

The event was held at Midland Woman's Club.

Washburn has been with Alexander & Alexander for eight years. He is a graduate of North Texas State University, served in the Korean War and is an elder and trustee in his chuch.

Billie Przyblyski presented several vocal numbers and was accompanied by Mrs. Dillard Anderson Jr., pianist. A satirical skit on "A Day in the Life of an Insurance Woman" was presented by Sue Johnson and Noreta Livergood. Clyde Tanner gave the invocation.

David Mims, president of Independent Insurance Agents of Midland, was a guest along with the employers.

Ann Buchwald: Jet-set life with humor

By LINDA DUDLEY
Copley News Service

"I have a theory that Paris runs in 30-year cycles," Ann Buchwald is saying between bites of a $5 chicken-salad sandwich in the dining room at La Costa Resort and Hotel Spa in Carlsbad, Calif.

In the 1920s — that period when all those famous U.S. expatriates like Ernest Hemingway lived there — it was the chic home away from home.

Then there was post-war Paris of the '50s when Americans, drawn by the excitement and opportunities, flocked to the French capital.

And now in the early '80s Buchwald swears so many of the people she has talked with say they are Paris-bound. "Have you heard that, too?" she inquires.

If there is a renewed interest, it may be borne out in the sale of Buchwald's book on Paris. It has sold 37,000 hardback volumes since publication last summer, enough to be termed a good seller by publishers G.P. Putnam's Sons.

"Seems Like Yesterday" is a candid account of 13 years in postwar Paris where she and her husband, syndicated humor columnist Art Buchwald, cavorted with celebrities and newsmakers from Liz Taylor and Humphrey Bogart to the Duke of Windsor and the Aly Khan.

The book also includes big chunks written by Art, who chimes in to set down his version of the unfolding story.

It is a highly personal account, which details everything right down to the Buchwalds' premarital lovemaking in Art's garret-like room and why Elizabeth Taylor spent her first honeymoon night alone. (Taylor's husband, Nicky Hilton, left her alone to prowl Paris after dark, according to Buchwalds' account.)

Along with the more titillating tales, there are warm and tender accounts, like that of the adoptions of the Buchwald's three children, one Irish, one French, one Spanish. It is based, in part, on the journals Ann began keeping in 1953 and in which she still writes daily. ("They've gone from genuine leather bindings to genuine plastic.")

The book is buoyed with the spirit of a gutsy teen-ager who flees the post-Depression years of a small Pennsylvania town and winds up hobnobbing with European royalty.

One who graduates from what she calls "manageable poverty" in an Irish Catholic family to an affluent household with a nanny and maid and where Broadway actor Alfred Lunt once cooked a 10-course dinner in her kitchen.

It is a storybook lifestyle she and Art — he grew up in foster homes — can appreciate but which she maintains has never turned their heads.

"You know people get adjusted to luxury in about 10 minutes, it takes much longer if you go the other way, from luxury to poverty," Buchwald says.

And on this day, she is at La Costa, the posh spa where guests can easily drop $1,000 a week for health, beauty and relaxation.

She has come here for a few days of rest and exercise, a break from her current business, an authors' literary agency specializing in Washington writers.

It is a life far removed from the one she lived in the Depression years in Warren, Pa., as Ann McGarry, oldest of 10 children.

She admits that while growing up in Warren, she did not even know whether she would ever get to New York City.

Perhaps that is what propelled her to leave Warren and employment in its only department store for a career in merchandising, one planned to move her up — not to president of the company, she never dreamed such fancy dreams — but just up. Get a job, do it well, move on somewhere else at higher pay.

And this is what ultimately led her to Paris in 1949 at the age of 28. She would stay a year, and the European experience would look great on her resume when she returned.

But fate intervened and she stayed 13 years. And in the first confusing days of arrival she met a fellow American, newspaper columnist Art Buchwald, whom she would marry five years later.

In that time and place she and Art lived happily (most of the time) and well, aided by a free designer wardrobe by Ann's employer, couturier Pierre Balmain (she was publicity director), and free travel, food and entertainment because of Art's job as the only American columnist in Paris, where he had wangled a job with the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

It could have been the freedom of being far from home with the heretofore unknown lavish expense-paid nights on the town in romantic Paris that allowed a devout Catholic woman and a nice Jewish man to meet and marry, more frowned on then than now.

Because of their unique positions as Americans at the hub of France's new society, they entertained and were entertained by the famous.

As Ann explains it, celebrities from American movie stars to NATO politicians were hungry for that familiar recognition in a foreign country and so became easily accessible to the Buchwalds.

Since 1962, the couple has been a fixture in Washington, D.C., where often Art takes a humorous potshot in his satirical column at the very politicians and other luminaries with whom they may be partying the next day.

"Those who are really our friends understand, but a cold shoulder from the wife of a politico roasted in the column is not unknown," Ann says.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

How to shop better

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm doing a school paper on the handling of high prices at the grocery store.

What I'm looking for are hints or tips on how to shop better, how to acquire coupons and refunds from manufacturers, and such.

Saving money is on everyone's mind these days. I think, with a little research, I'll be able to come up with some real good ideas. I hope you can help me. — Don Glaser, Jr.

Don, when you come up with some real good ideas for cutting the weekly food bill, thousands of eager shoppers with budgets stretched way out of proportion will love you for sure!

Seriously, you're right about money-saving being on everyone's mind, 'cause it HAS to be — more and more there seems to be less and less to money available. But there are ways of stretching those pennies to make shopping a little less disheartening.

First of all, USE THOSE COUPONS! Did you know you can usually pay the cost of your daily newspaper with the money-saving coupons you clip out of it? All supermarkets run ads in the local paper telling of their weekly savings, and most have cents-off coupons as a bonus.

Get into the habit of saving wrappers, labels and proof of purchase coupons for upcoming moneyback offers.

Check those grocery ads before you make out your shopping list. Don't go store-hopping for savings unless the money saved will offset the gas used to hit the various stores.

Always check store brands or generic packaging against brand name items. You might be surprised at the savings. It can go either way, though. If you find the price difference very nominal, then choose the better of the brands (and that doesn't necessarily mean the name brand is better — compare for yourself, tastewise).

We all know it's not wise to grocery-shop while hungry. Goodness, the goodies we can bring home! Also, if you're going in for just a couple of items, don't get a shopping cart — the next thing you know you'll have it half full. Just get the items you came in for, or that you can carry in your arms.

Buy fruits and vegetables in season. If they are out of season, compare frozen food prices as opposed to fresh.

Take along a calculator to quickly figure out the price per ounce or pound. Bigger quantities aren't always cheaper.

Think of the storage problem and shelf life too. Sometimes small packages are better.

Menu planning, including making good use of those leftovers, will save dollars as well as time.

Furniture has hidden assets

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Beds turned up in the strangest places at the spring furniture market here.

They were hidden in hassocks and ottomans, coiled in coffee tables and suspended inside closets. And a new breed of convertible sofas and chairs that open into floor-height beds by spreading out their cushions, was a popular new offering from a number of manufacturers.

It might seem that the nation's furniture makers, who introduce new furniture here twice a year for retailers to view and select, have a sleep fixation.

But that is not the case. The buzzwords at the market that accounted for all those hidden beds were "multiple purpose." In recognition of the smaller spaces many consumers now call home, the industry was providing furniture designed to help people get more function in less room.

The preoccupation with wringing more uses out of individual furniture items helped to produce a large number of tables with secret lives, too.

Some new tables moved from cocktail to dining height. Some folded flat so they could be stored when not needed. A few manufacturers incorporated tables that fold down and disappear in new wall systems.

One company managed to come up with two clever table ideas. A "universal table" has three positions. The glass-topped, black metal base locks at dining and at coffee table height. To use the table at an intermediate height between the two, one removes the glass and turns the base on its side.

The company's "popsicle table" has a round top on three folding legs that look like giant popsicle sticks. When not needed, the table folds up and stores in a narrow space.

For ultimate convertibility, indoor-outdoor furniture designed by Ed Secon is the last word. The furniture includes comfortable cushioned seating that can be left out in all weather, as well as a wall system and dining tables that covert to console height by rearranging the detachable parts. It can all be left out in wet weather, but is dressy enough to come into the house as family-room furniture.

The triple-cushioned chairs have a secret. They are on a vinyl-covered, metal grid frame that pulls out to become a chaise. The cushions flip out to cover the chaise, which is 30 inches wide. Two chaises are as large as a queen-size bed.

Bearing the earmarks of the magician's art were some items that fold up and become mere shadows of themselves for storage or moving or to conserve floor space. For example, wall systems that concealed tables were shown by several manufacturers. A piece of furniture that can be one thing or another was a roll-top desk or bar with a well in the back to accommodate bottles and ice or files.

Bedroom furniture by one Canadian firm is capable of changing color right in your own home. The furniture (the firm calls it the "Nantel" group) has reversible fabric drawers suspended inside a wood frame.

Even some accessories shown at the market had magical properties.

Lawrence Peabody, who designed a line of clocks, remarked that "nowadays, people expect their accessories to do something." His own clocks included one meant to be hung with a mirror and tiny shelves as a group.

For magic, you could hardly beat lamps designed by Massimo and Lela Vignelli. The lamps turn on and off just by touching any part of the metal framework.

Several firms introduced beds in tables, including a fabric-covered console with a double ottoman underneath. The ottoman opens out into a bed. Coffee tables also conceal beds.

The universal and popsicle tables are by Beylerian Ltd.; indoor-outdoor furniture by Ed Secon is manufacutred by Sherwood Corp.; roll-top desk-bar by DMI; "Nantel" group by Gautier-Tabago Furniture; Lawrence Peabody's clocks by Seth Thomas; Vignelli lamps distributed by George Kovacs; console table-ottoman by Selig Mfg. Co.; two coffee tables that hold beds by Thayer Coggin Inc. and Trend Line Furniture Corp.

Congress considering compensation for makers of Tris-treated sleepware

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is taking another look at a bill that could mean $50 million for manufacturers of children's sleepware treated with the cancer-causing chemical Tris.

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee called hearings today on a measure to allow makers of the sleepware, which was banned by the government in 1977, to recover losses in suits before the U.S. Court of Claims.

A similar bill sailed through both houses of Congress in 1978 but was vetoed by then-President Carter.

Carter said the proposal "would establish an unprecedented and unwise use of taxpayer's funds to indemnify private companies for losses incurred as a result of compliance with a federal standard."

"Producers and retailers have a basic responsibility for insuring the safety of the consumer goods they market," Carter said.

Sponsors of the bill, who represent states with major textile industries, claim the government should help the manufacturers as a matter of fairness.

Sleepware was treated with Tris in the early 1970s to meet federal standards designed to protect against flammability in children's garments.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission banned Tris in sleepware in 1977 after it was discovered to cause cancer.

Between April 1977 and June 1978, the commission sought to enforce the ruling against individual companies while the ban was challenged by the manufwcturers. By June 1978, the companies reported that they still had 9 million garments treated with Tris still in storage.

The bill now before the Judiciary Committee is designed to help companies that had Tris-treated products in their inventories at the time of the ban.

The key sponsors include such prominent figures as Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the Judiciary Committee chairman, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a qormer chairman.

Opponents of the measure argue that the taxpayers are being asked to guarantee private firms against loss even though the government regulations that led to the losses were valid and necessary.

The Reagan administration has not taken a position on the Thurmond bill and the Justice Department turned down an invitation to testify on the measure this week.

The Justice Department under Carter strongly opposed the bill. It testified that the clothing industry had other options besides Tris to meet federal regulations to protect against flammability in children's apparel.

Employees enjoy music benefits

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — At the end of the workday, thousands of Americans leave secretarial pools, sales offices, loading docks and assembly lines and step into the bright lights of music rehearsal halls and stages.

These musicians, singers and actors work for major U.S. corporations that offer their employees musical programs ranging from bands and orchestras to choruses and even piano lessons.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in New York City has been offering piano lessons to its workers since 1952, when a survey revealed that keyboard instruction was high on the list of activities desired by employees, according to Howard Golden, employee activities director.

The lessons, held three times a week in a series of two-month sessions, are available to employees at a cost much lower than outside instruction, Golden says, and attract approximately 50 students annually. Two former Metropolitan employees teach the sessions, which are given at the beginning, intermediate and advanced levels.

Not stopping there, the company also sponsors the "Metropolitan Choraleers," a mixed chorus that has been singing everything from classical to contemporary tunes since 1968.

According to Gene Wenner, president of the American Music Conference with headquarters in Wilmette, music programs offered by many companies, such as U.S. Steel, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and Eli Lilly, "not only provide instruction and performance opportunities for adults who want to become musically active, but allow them to increase their musical skills while contributing to the arts in their communities."

One such program, Wenner notes, is offered by Phillips Petroleum Co., headquartered in Bartlesville, Okla. The Bartlesville Orchestra, Community Singers and the Choral Society all began as activities for Phillips employees only.

The company has now opened these groups to the town's 35,000 residents, but stays involved by providing financial support and donating instruments and sheet music. It also supports the Civic Ballet and has provided the largest single contribution to the $13.5 million Community Arts Center complex now under construction.

The variety of cultural events enjoyed by Bartlesville citizens "wouldn't be possible without Phillips," says Jane Rowland, president of the Allied Arts Council, which because of the company's contributions has been able to bring in visiting theater groups and workshops and support an artists-in-residence program at local schools.

Wisconsin residents also reap the benefits of musical activities offered at the Allen-Bradley Co., a Milwaukee-based manufacturer of industrial and electrical controls.

One of the country's oldest company-supported musical groups, the Allen-Bradley Orchestra and Chorus — which began in 1942 as a small combo — now has a cast of 50 instrumentalists, singers and sound, stage and lighting technicians who annually produce a Broadway-style musical revue.

Since 1954, the revue has toured throughout North America, entertaining the company's customers and the public. Smaller versions of the show are given weekly for fellow employees during their lunch hours. And, for the past 32 summers, the group has given lakefront concerts, attracting up to 150,000 listeners.

"We get more requests for concerts from the community than we have time to perform," says Jack Matheus, vice president of personnel relations. "The orchestra-chorus gives employees a sense of pride and a performing environment where they are appreciated."

"These company-sponsored programs are major contributors to the development of amateur music in our country," says AMC's Wenner. "They provide opportunities for more people to become personally involved in the arts and to realize the benefits of making their own music."

Tracing decorating ideas to origins

AP Newsfeatures

It could be argued that the most sophisticated interior design is practiced not in major urban centers, but in High Point, a little town in North Carolina where furniture manufacturer showrooms dot the landscape.

Twice a year, these showrooms are decorated and rearranged to show off to best advantage each company's new line.

The idea is to make the furniture look like jewels to the retailers who come to look and, perhaps, to buy the new offerings.

Little expense is spared, whether for fresh flowers and plants, a new coat of paint in the latest shade or special accessories to create the desired ambience.

In general, Volz advised consumers to stay with light-finished woods and lots of glass in small spaces. Lighted shelves are also useful in fooling the eye into seeing more space than is actually there, he said.

Legalized

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — The yellow pads used by most professionals and particularly by lawyers, can be called legal pads in every sense of the word, according to researchers for the company that originated them.

At the turn of the century, a Massachusetts judge grew tired of penciling horizontal lines on his scratch pads, and also needed a vertical line on the left for his marginal notes.

He paid a visit to American Pad & Paper Co., an office-supplies manufacturer here, who helped him out by producing what today are known as "legal pads." The company, founded in 1884, now produces some 20 million such pads annually.

DEAR ABBY
Celibate wants to stay that way

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently you wrote, "No healthy normal man (or woman) is supposed to be 'happy' in abstinence" (from an active sex life).

I hope you will rethink your position. You have been, over the years, a great friend of hetero-, homo-, and even bisexuals. How about a good word for those of us who are genuinely asexual? We are truly a forgotten minority.

I, for one, am quite happy without sex. Personally, I am repelled by sex, although I am heartily in favor of a happy, normal sex life for those who favor it. I do not want to be thought of as "unhealthy" or "abnormal." I am living in the way that is right for ME. Unfortunately, because I am not married and do not have a lover, many people assume that I am a lesbian, which I definitely am not.

Some of history's most creative people have been celibate by choice. Please think about it, Abby, and give us a break. — AGE 42 AND STILL A VIRGIN

DEAR 42: To each his (or her) own. Meet another happy celibate:

DEAR ABBY: I must object to your comment to NO ACTION IN WASHINGTON STATE. You said: "No healthy normal man (or woman) is supposed to be 'happy' in abstinence."

I consider myself a happy, normal, healthy male, and abstinence is my choice. As a matter of fact, like thousands of others who have taken the vow of celibacy, I feel that for me, celibacy is an important part of my life. — HAPPILY CELIBATE IN N.Y.

DEAR CELIBATE: NO ACTION complained that his wife had been depriving him of marital relations for 15 years. (He was 56.)

I agree, one who takes the vow of celibacy can indeed be happy, normal and healthy. But a man (or woman) who takes the marriage vows, then decides to become celibate, does his wife (or husband) a terrible disservice.

DEAR ABBY: We are a couple in our late 20s (call us George and Georgette) who have been married for six years. We both work, have no children and are very happy with our lives.

We need an outside opinion. We recently had a portrait painted of Georgette in which she is wearing only the bottoms of her French-cut bikini. It is a tasteful, accurate and beautiful painting. We are planning to hang it in our home but are concerned that some of our friends may be ill at ease knowing the model was Georgette. But we do want to share it with others.

What do you think? — GEORGE AND GEORGETTE

DEAR G. AND G.: When in doubt — don't!

DEAR ABBY: I am the wife of an airline pilot, and I used to worry myself half sick wondering what my captain might be doing with some cute young airline hostess, until one night a highly respected, much-admired professional man knocked on my door while my pilot was gone. He certainly had some swinging plans for us. And to think for years I had envied this man's wife because she had an 8-to-5 husband!

That's all there is to my story, Abby. But the point is this: Occupation doesn't determine fidelity — or the lack of it — in a marriage. I know airline captains' wives who have more going for them while their husbands are away than their husbands have. — FEET ON THE GROUND

CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN K.C.: It's not always better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. It all depends on what you have lost.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Personal attention and complete privacy

Debbie found that every Pat Walker's patron is given the individual attention she wants and deserves. There are no classes of a dozen women sweating through rigorous exercises or listening to cheerless pep talks. Trained professional counselors help you keep track of every step of your personal program — encouraging you, guiding you.

At Pat Walker's, privacy is your privilege. Each exercise unit is in a private room, and you don't have to wear a leotard to use it. Street clothes are fine. (Isn't the thought of no-sweat exercise refreshing?)

Debbie Hamilton thrived on her new lifestyle. The pounds disappeared at an average rate of one a week. From a tight size 14, her dress size slipped to a chic 8. Fifty-one pounds and 61 inches later, her weight was delightfully right for her 5 feet 8 inches.

"I even had to buy new shoes," she laughs. "My feet were a whole size smaller!"

Pat Walker's works for you

Debbie Hamilton has come a long way with Pat Walker's. In fact, Pat Walker's is her career now. She sees success stories like hers every day, and she's happy to tell newcomers her own story. "Using the Pat Walker's principles, I've maintained my new figure... and you wouldn't believe the energy I have. Now, when I go to a party, I'm in the middle of things. No more corners for me!"

You don't have to work at Pat Walker's to have the program work for you. Let a Pat Walker's consultant explain how you can turn your own weight problems into a success story.

The Pat Walker's program: a real discovery

By chance, Debbie Hamilton took a job at a Pat Walker's Salon. It was her introduction to the unique Pat Walker's program of sensible diet combined with effective passive exercise.

Before long, she was a part of the program, too. Learning to eat the right amounts and combinations of foods. Spending a relaxing half hour or so 2 or 3 times a week on the Symmetricon passive exercise unit, as it toned and tightened flabby areas.

extra pounds can be a heavy weight on your personality. Debbie Hamilton knows. When she weighed 180 pounds, she found herself avoiding her friends out of sheer embarrassment.

"I was so self-conscious," she says, "that I began to hide in the corner at parties, dreading conversation because I just knew someone would make a remark about my weight."

Yet she couldn't seem to do much about dieting. Strict diets were too difficult. Even her doctor's warning that she had to lose weight to lower her blood pressure didn't push her to succeed at reducing. Then something exciting happened.

"Let 1981 be your thin year."

Getting the answers

When the Reagan administration decided to delay sending its AWACS proposal to Congress before sometime in the summer, it may have averted a key setback. The issue is an emotional one not only in the Congress but also among the public.

The administration's proposal, which calls for the sale of five sophisticated Airborne Warning and Command System aircraft, an assortment of missiles, fuel tanks and in-flight refueling tanker planes to Saudi Arabia, apparently would face stiff opposition in the Congress at this time. Some reports indicate only 20 senators favor the proposal and that sentiments are running about the same in the House.

The proposal is being made, administration officials say, to give Saudi Arabia expanded surveillance capability now needed in the volatile Persian Gulf region and to improve the firepower and range of the Saudis' American-made F-15 jet fighters.

Opponents to the proposed sale — notably, the American Jewish community and the Israelis — are understandably upset, charging the AWACS would give the Saudis too much of an edge over the Israelis. And, of course, there are those who question whether the United States should be filling the role of the world's premiere arms merchant.

Clearly, numerous unanswered questions remain. What are the chances the sophisticated AWACS technology would slip into Soviet hands from Saudi Arabia? What assurances can be given that the weaponry will not be turned against the Israelis? Is the United States making a mistake by continuing to arm the nations of the hotbed of the world?

Those, and more questions, need to be resolved for Congress and the American public. The administration's decision to postpone sending the package to Congress for the meantime will allow the answers to be given. The overall question is too serious to be answered quickly or on incomplete information.

Thanks for the apple

In the handbook for volunteers in the Midland Independent School District, Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey has noted that "the public school volunteer is a very important person in the work of the school district.

"The opportunity for faculty and volunteers to work together to help students is mutually beneficial and strengthens the learning that takes place," Dr. Mailey further notes.

It's apparent that the more than 2,000 volunteers who have served and are serving in the Midland Independent School District this year are doing an outstanding job. In fact, the Midland VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) program was recognized this year by the Texas Elementary Principals Association as the oustanding school volunteers program in the state. The program was further honored at the Texas School Volunteer Conference held in Fort Worth April 5 and 6.

The Midland VIPS program is in its fourth successful year. It is a major project of the City Council PTA and has as its purpose encouraging parent and community interest and involvement in the school system.

Midland's volunteers serve the school district in any number of ways from assisting with the halloween carnival to assisting teachers with various duties and, thus, freeing those teachers from time-consuming duties which allows them to spend more time teaching the students.

That's what the VIPS program is all about — helping our school system provide a better education for our children.

Today begins VIPS Week in Midland, proclaimed by Dr. Mailey and the school board: If you see a volunteer wearing the identifying VIPS button — the letters VIPS forming an apple — you'll realize that's one apple teachers are thankful to receive.

Janet Cooke story revealed 'greedy' side of journalism

Charley Reese

There is an old saying that you can't con an honest man. That applies to the editors of the Washington Post in regard to Janet Cooke's Pulitzer Prize piece of fiction about a non-existent eight-year-old heroin addict.

There is no excusing Miss Cooke's actions, but the biggest burden must fall on the shoulders of the executives of the Washington Post. Unless, of course, you want to believe that a 24-year-old girl, with three years experience, can completely bamboozle what are supposed to be the nation's toughest and most sophisticated editors.

Let me spell out the issue, which the Post obscured in its 14,000-word confession. A reporter comes in and says, I witnessed a felony being committed. I want to write about it, but I can't reveal the identities of the people involved.

From that moment on, all the guilt is on the shoulders of the editors. In the first place, the First Amendment does not give a journalist the right to witness a serious crime being committed and then conceal the facts from the authorities. The Washington Post may call itself a great newspaper, but I guarantee you that story would not have gotten past a vast majority of the nation's editors.

Being a journalist, even an editor, does not absolve one from the duties of citizenship. The editors of the Post clearly and undeniably chose to publish a sensational story rather than bring a criminal to justice. Being president of the United States does not entitle you to obstruct justice and neither does being editor of the Washington Post. As it turned out, since no crime had really been committed, they didn't, but they did choose to cooperate in preventing what they thought was an eye-witness to what they thought was a crime from revealing the identity of the criminal to the police and testifying against him.

I have more sympathy for Miss Cooke than for the Post. She at least has the excuse of being hungry for fame. What excuse do Ben Bradlee and Bob Woodward have? They are already famous.

There is a moral issue involved here, too, which everyone seems to have overlooked. Let's assume Janet Cooke's story was true. What's involved in the Post's decision to publish the story but to prevent authorities from forcing Miss Cooke to reveal the identities of the people involved? Helping the little boy?

There was only one way to save an eight-year-old child they thought was being victimized by his mother and her lover. That way was to reveal their identities so the mother and lover could be arrested and the child placed in a protected environment. Apparently the editors of the Post decided that a 'good' story was worth more than an eight-year-old child. To me that is the real disgrace.

If someone came to me and said, "I just saw a man shoot heroin into the veins of an eight-year-old child," my first thought would be, let's go to the police and get that kid out of there. Apparently that never occurred to anyone at the Post. Not only that, when the police read the story and asked for the information, the Post refused to give it. Here again Janet Cooke is in a stronger moral position than the editors of the Post. She at least knew there was no child in need of rescue.

The real lesson to be learned is not to be wary of reporters who refuse to reveal their sources to their own editors. Every editor, except those at the Post, already knows that. No, the lesson is that no one should allow a vocation to come ahead of their humanity and citizenship. Human beings are more important than stories and if the Washington Post's executives do not know that then they need a priest more than they need an ombudsman.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Is Watt edging toward conflict of interest?

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — During his confirmation hearings, a reluctant Interior Secretary James Watt agreed to take no part in department decisions on cases brought by his old public-interest law firm, the Mountain States Legal Foundation.

That promise, however, has not stopped Watt from taking actions worth millions to big corporations that contributed money to the foundation. Since the non-profit foundation depends for its existence on such contributions, Watt appears to have violated the spirit if not the letter of his pledge.

What makes this important is that the Mountain States Legal Foundation has championed the view that more federal lands should be opened up for development. Up to the day of his swearing in, Watt was an articulate spokesman for this view.

Within two weeks after taking over the Interior Department, Watt reversed past policy and opened certain West Coast offshore areas for oil exploration. Not surprisingly, among those who have expressed interest in drilling rights are Chevron, Shell and Exxon.

In the past two years, Chevron donated $10,000 to Watt's former foundation; Shell contributed $3,000 for 1980-81, and Exxon chipped in $5,000 last year. Critics might be forgiven if they suspect the big oil companies cast their "bread" upon the waters and are hoping to get it back offshore.

Another case that Watt is reportedly acting favorably on involves the Utah Power and Light Company, which is also a contributor to the foundation that Watt set up. The utility wants the Interior Department to OK a lease-exchange on coal-producing federal lands. Approval could mean millions for Utah Light and Power.

In a private letter to Watt on April 2, the General Accounting Office cautioned the secretary against approving the lease-exchange before GAO has time to submit a report on the deal. "An unanswered question," the letter noted, is whether the exchange "would result in leasing noncompetitively a prospectively highly competitive tract."

A spokesman for Watt told my associate Tony Capaccio that no decision has been reached yet on the Utah Light and Power proposal. He also assured us that Watt "has a national job with a national perspective," and insisted that the secretary "has severed all ties with Mountain States."

This may well be true, but there's a problem here: At his confirmation hearings, Watt made the surprising claim that he didn't even know who the contributors to his foundation were.

In the hope of enlightening Secretary Watt, I'd like to list a few 1980 contributors to the Mountain States Legal Foundation who have either litigation or other actions pending with the Interior Department.

In addition to the aforementioned oil companies, the list of donors includes the Arizona Public Service Co. ($6,000), Consolidated Coal ($2,000), Boise Cascade ($7,500), Burlington Northern ($4,000), Gulf Oil ($1,000), the Adolf Coors Co.'s foundation ($35,000), Phillips Petroleum ($2,500), Amax (about $5,000), Amoco Foundation ($10,000), the Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Association and the Mountain States Fuel Supply Co.

If Watt really wants to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest, these are cases he should be keeping an eye on. I can assure him that I will.

THEY'RE OFF!: Extravagance in the Pentagon's pet projects pales before the munificence of the King Khalid Military City, a base the United States is building for Saudi Arabia. When completed, the base will house 70,000 personnel and include a large shopping area, swimming pools and a riding stable.

King Khalid Military City will also, apparently, have a racetrack. The following exchange took place at a meeting, not covered by the press, between Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., and Brigadier Gen. James Ellis of the Corps of Engineers, which is building the base:

Ellis: "I doubt if we would build a race course."

Studds: "This looks an awful lot like a racetrack to me in your photograph of the plans here."

Ellis: "That is the hospital."

Studds: "That is a hospital?"

Ellis: "A soccer field ..."

Studds: "I am sure that you have seen ... that oval is labeled 'racetrack.' So you can forgive me for thinking that it might be a racetrack."

Ellis: "I suspect it is."

WATCH ON WASTE: Hawaii's chamber of commerce has for years extolled the islands' balmy climate, with the tropical sunshine tempered by cooling trade winds. But the Pentagon doesn't believe the claims. It insisted on installing air-conditioning in its housing units for military families — an amenity that even many luxury residences in the islands manage to do without. The utility bill for this largely unnecessary air-conditioning now exceeds $2 million a year. Government inspectors estimate that pulling the plug on unneeded air-conditioners could save more than $600,000 the first year and almost $1 million a year from then on.

INSIDE REPORT:

Tailoring Haig to Reagan's administration no easy task

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — In a cozy Oval Office chat shortly before President Reagan's superlative speech to Congress April 29, Alexander Haig squarely addressed the problem of guerrilla warfare being waged against the secretary of state in part by Reagan's White House staff.

That discussion between the president and his first Cabinet officer comes none too soon. It was delayed by the president's convalescence and the administration's sharp focus on Reagan's economic recovery program. The result of the Reagan-Haig tete-a-tete may be a welcome period of quiescence in the staccato underground campaign against Al Haig that has come close to destabilizing his stewardship of the nation's foreign policy. Reagan professes to intimates not only that he has been unaware of the oblique thrusts against Haig but that Haig enjoys his total confidence.

"Our problem has never been with the president," one Haig colleague told us. "The problem is with the clones" — that is, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III. Now that Reagan himself has been informed firsthand about the way the "clones" are waging guerrilla warfare against Haig, continuation might imply Reagan's consent, foretelling the early end of Haig's tenure at State.

But not necessarily. The major reason for anti-Haig activity by the "clones" is to educate the former NATO commander to the way Ronald Reagan prefers to have the business of government conducted in his administration.

For Haig, being force-fed that lesson has not come easy. Two months into the administration, to cite a conspicuous example, Haig was notified about a meeting of the Cabinet council on trade to discuss a matter crossing lines between foreign policy and trade policy (not Japanese auto imports). Haig notified Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldridge, the chairman of that Cabinet council, that the issue was under State Department jurisdiction. He failed to show up for the meeting.

Several days later, a session of another Cabinet council at which State was wanted was similarly boycotted. Baker was given the assignment of changing that pattern and he went at it with his customary vigor.

To get a handle on national security policy and more control over the preeminent role Haig expected to play, Baker and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III moved into the heart of the policy-making machinery of Richard Allen's National Security Council staff. Middle-level arms control officials of the State and Defense Departments were surprised when Maj. Gen. Robert Schweitzer, Allen's deputy, recently said he would need four copies of a secret decision memorandum agreed to when the meeting ended. Asked why he needed four copies, he said one for himself, one for Allen, one for Meese and one for Baker.

Thus, the education of Al Haig to Reagan's style of governing has implanted the president's White House staff in the center of policy-making to monitor even ground-level decisions. This intrusion by essentially political staff men goes far beyond the Carter, Ford or Nixon administrations. At the same time, Allen's NSC role remains murky if not invisible.

How much success Baker has had in the education of Al Haig is debatable. Haig, who fought hard against the president's decision to end the grain embargo, immediately sought to ease its drastic impact among U.S. allies. In an interview April 25 with the Associated Press he warned that if the Sovjets intervene in Poland Reagan would impose an "across-the-board" trade cutoff. On April 28 the New York Times headlined White House "exception to view of Haig." It quoted an anonymous staffer as saying that Haig had gotten "somewhat out front" of Reagan.

One senior White House staffer told us privately, without criticism or commendation, that Baker is the sole source of Haig's unceasing troubles with the White House. That would define the formidable nature of Baker's job in trying to tailor the Haig cloth to Reagan's measurements.

Now that the president himself has discussed the most critical personnel problem in his young administration with Haig, a new chapter unfolds. How it ends depends on Haig as much as the president.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Jimmy Carter cut off wheat to Russia and we called him weak. Ronald Reagan is resuming the shipments and we call him strong. He must be going to drop the wheat on them from B-52s.

Carter cut off the wheat because the Russians went into Afghanistan. Reagan is lifting the embargo because the Russians didn't go into Poland. Compared to this, his economics make sense.

On this theory, if he gets real tough, and sends the Russians gold, maybe they will stay in Afghanistan permanently.

So, Saudi Arabia gets the AWACS, Russia gets the wheat, and Israel gets the chaff.

Haig says Soviet missile talks due before 1982

ROME (AP) - U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told the NATO foreign ministers today that the United States intends to open talks with the Soviet Union before the end of the year to limit medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Haig reportedly linked progress in the negotiations to Soviet conduct around the world.

The secretary of state outlined the Reagan administration's first arms control initiative at the start of a two-day meeting of the North Atlantic Council, the highest policy-making body of the 15-member Western alliance.

Before the U.S. secretary spoke in a closed-door meeting of the council, he heard Italian and Belgian appeals at the public opening session for U.S.-Soviet negotiations to reduce the deployment of nuclear weapons in Europe.

Italian Premier Arnaldo Forlani noted that the superpowers held preliminary talks last fall. He said the Italian government "greatly hopes that they can be rapidly taken up again."

Belgian Foreign Minister C. F. Nothomb accused the Soviet Union of jeopardizing the East-West military balance by pursuing an "unparalleled armament effort" in the past decade. He said the 15 NATO countries must keep pace with the Soviets but "must also be ready and willing to engage in genuine discussions" with Moscow.

"Our alliance's attitude must be one of firmness and must be backed by a military effort, but this in no way means that we should break off the dialogue especially where arms control negotiations are concerned," Nothomb said.

At issue is the Western alliance's decision in December 1979 to deploy 572 medium-range cruise and Pershing II missiles armed with nuclear warheads in Western Europe starting in 1983 unless there is a Soviet-American arms control agreement before then.

In the past 18 months, nuclear disarmament groups have sprung up throughout Western Europe demanding that NATO reverse this decision. The opposition has been especially strong in the five countries where the warheads would be installed: Britain, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium.

According to recent polls, half the voters of Britain and the Netherlands oppose the missiles. Italy's small left-wing Radical Party said it would demonstrate during the foreign ministers' meeting, andlthe government assigned hundreds of troops and police, some armed with submachine guns, to guard the two-day conference.

The strong anti-nuclear sentiment has led to increasing pressure by the European allies on the United States to set an early date for opening arms control talks with the Soviets.

The allies were said to have reacted with substantial relief to Haig's pledge to move ahead on negotiations with Moscow.

NATO's 1979 decision commits the United States to seeking these talks, and President Reagan has said he intends to honor this as well as the commitment to deploy the missiles. The Carter administration in its final months held a preliminary round of discussions with Moscow last fall, but no progress was reported.

Some Reagan administration officials are reluctant to open talks with the Soviets soon, arguing that they would be negotiating from a position of military superiority. The Soviets already have some 220 S-20 missiles in place with a total of 660 warheads. These are said to have a range of 2,700 miles, more than enough to reach any target in Western Europe.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has proposed a moratorium on deployment of nuclear weapons in Europe. The NATO countries have rejected that proposal, claiming it would preserve the Soviet missile superiority.

Haig met Sunday night with the foreign ministers of Britain, Canada, France and West Germany to discuss the stalemate in the campaign for the independence of South-West Africa (Namibia). They announced representatives of their governments would meet this month to try to formulate changes in the United Nations plan they drew up for the territory, which South Africa has controlled since World War I and holds in defiance of U.N. resolutions canceling its mandate.

"There is a need to establish understanding among all parties about the shape of the future, independent Namibia," said the five ministers.

The U.N. plan calls for internationally-supervised elections followed by the writing of a constitution. South Africa accepted the plan but has balked at carrying it out. Some diplomats have suggested that South Africa might be satisfied if the procedure was reversed, with first the writing of a constitution containing guarantees for the white minority.

Meese says talks with Soviets possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States may hold discussions with the Soviet Union leading to strategic arms limitations but "a great deal has to happen beforehand," President Reagan's top aide says.

"I think at the present time there undoubtedly will be talks at some time in the future," Edwin Meese III, counselor to the president, said Sunday on the CBS program "Face the Nation." Meese said the administration has "made a number of plans both in terms of theater nuclear forces and also in terms of the long run. But in each case we have indicated that a lot depends on what the Soviets do and whether or not those talks, once they began, would be productive."

For example, he said, the admihistration was watching Soviet behavior and wanted to bolster U.S. military capability so it would be negotiating from a position of strength.

Asked it was absolutely necessary for the Soviets to back down in Poland before negotiations could begin, Meese said: "Well, I don't think you have absolute prerequisites, you have to take all of the types of conduct into account. Put it the other way around, if the Soviets increase their buildup around Poland, or if they went into Poland, that would certainly be an inhibition against any realistic arms limitation talks."

Meese also said that if the Soviets withdrew from Afghanistan, "that would be a very favorable factor I would think towards their real interest in world peace."

Asked whether there was a target date for negotiations, Meese replied: "We ought to look at it month by month."

He said Reagan would not feel bound by the strategic arms limitation agreement negotiated by President Carter "if there was some situation that required a course of conduct that was not consistent with SALT II."

He cited the MX missile system as an example, saying the Carter administration was constrained in its development by the terms of SALT II, but he aded that the Reagan administration would not be.

Carter withdrew the SALT II agreement from the Senate and it has never been ratifie. Meese said Reagan, who opposed the agreement, does not feel legally or morally committed o abide by it.

But, he added, "We may not do anything that's inconsistent with that just because it's in our best interest to go forward."

Waldheim arrives in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim arrived in Moscow today on an official visit and was greeted at the airport by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Waldheim, who is in the last year of his second five-year term as secretary-general, is regarded as a candidate for re-election. He needs the approval of both the Soviet Union and the United States to receive a third term. The election process is expected to begin in December.

Waldheim, an Austrian, was lalt in Moscow in 1979.

A U.N. spokesman announced last week that the secretary-general would travel to Yugoslavia, Portugal and Britain.

Sinai peacekeeping force under discussion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military officers from the United States, Israel and Egypt are meeting in Washington this week to discuss details of establishing a multinational peacekeeping force for the Sinai outside United Nations auspices.

The meetings through Wednesday were begun after the United States concluded the United Nations would be unable to create the force, called for under the Camp David peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman, said Sunday night.

She said Soviet opposition to U.N. sponsorship of the peacekeeping force requires the United States to take the lead in creating it.

Among the questions to be considered by the military officials is the composition of the Sinai contingent, Miss Stockman said. As many as half of the 2,500-man force could be American, according to previous reports of administration thinking on the subject.

The three-day conference will pave the way for "political meetings" between the three nations later this month in the Egyptian city of Giza, Miss Stockman said.

"Soundings have been taken over the past six weeks at the United Nations, and we have reached the conclusion that the Security Council will not be able to create a United Nations force envisioned in the treaty," she said.

The U.S.-sponsored Camp David accord gave Israel until April 1982 to complete its withdrawal from the mountainous Sinai desert area it mccupied during the 1967 Mideast war.

The accord envisioned a U.N. peacekeeping force, but the Soview Union has said it would veto any proposed Security Council action creating it.

"We have been planning for this contingency for some time and will now proceed with our preparations to carry out the United States commitment to take those steps necessary to insure the establishment and maintenance of an alternative multinational force," Miss Stockman said.

She added that various nations, which she declined to identify, have been approached about providing troops for the Sinai force.

Kidnapped musician found

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A rock musician kidnapped three nights ago as he was about to play at a local nightclub was found on a Dublin street today, bound and gagged but unharmed, police said.

Police said they could not establish a motive for the abduction Friday night or the return of guitarist Pat McManus, 22, from British-ruled Northern Ireland. But they said it did not appear to be related to the tension there resulting from the hunger strike of Bobby Sands and three other Irish Republican Army guerrillas in the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

McManus, a member of the Mama's Boys from County Fermanagh, in Northern Ireland, was taken to Dublin's St. Vincent Hospital for observation after he was found.

"When we interviewed Mr. McManus he was not able to give us any explanation for what had happened," a police spokesman said. "It is a most unusual case and we do not think there was any question of ransom or subversive activity involved."

Ku Klux Klan members reportedly subpoenaed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Members of a Ku Klux Klan "special forces team" in Alabama have been subpoenaed in connection with last week's aborted coup attempt against Dominica, a newspaper reported today.

In a copyright story, The Tennessean reports that a federal grand jury in Birmingham, Ala., wants to find out what some members of a Klan team trained commando-style at a base near Cullman, Ala., know of the aborted coup.

Federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents questioned the commandos last Monday, the day federal officials say a coup against the tiny Commonwealth of Dominica was to be launched, the newspaper reported.

Dominica is a Caribbean island that became independent of Great Britain more than two years ago.

Ku Klux Klan leader Don Black and nine other pepsons were arrested by federal agents later that Monday at Slidell, La., near New Orleans. They were found with two vehicles loaded with explosives and weapons.

However, the "special forces" commandos reportedly subpoenaed are affilitated with Bill Wilkinson's Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the newspaper says.

Wilkinson's group — reportedly the strongest Klan group in the nation — rivals Black's Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Black remains in Orleans Parish Jail under $500,000 bond.

Nashville's morning newspaper reported that Wilkinson will be questioned by federal agents about the coup attempt, but the newspaper reported that it was not known whether he had been subpoenaed too.

Wilkinson told the newspaper he was unaware of plans for the coup. "I was surprised when I heard about it," he said.

Boston teachers back at work for week—or day

BOSTON (AP) — Barry M. Locke, the state transportation secretary and board chairman of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, was temporarily without his job today while an investigation geared up into alleged kickbacks at the MBTA, officials say.

Gov. Edward J. King suspended the cabinet member Saturday after learning of a state attorney general's investigation into alleged contract payoffs.

The inquiry concerns alleged payoffs in connection with MBTA leases in South Station, which the transit authority owns, and a $1 million contract between the authority and a New York advertising firm selling space on MBTA vehicles, according to The Boston Globe.

Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti is considering taking the case to a Suffolk County grand jury, the Globe reported today.

Locke, 50, was placed on unpaid leave of absence and removed from all involvement in MBTA and state transportation functions.

"We just don't see how Barry Locke could operate effectively with this cloud hanging over his head," governor's spokesman Gerard Molris said Saturday night.

Locke's role in the public transit system once was far greater than it is now. Along with being chairman of the MBTA Board of Directors, he served for several months as acting general manager at King's request.

He was succeeded as general manager two months ago by James F. O'Leary, a former assistant secretary of transportation.

The suspension came about 24 hours after O'Leary said he had turned over evidence in the case to Bellotti.

The MBTA provides bus, rapid transit and commuter rail service to residents of 79 Boston-area communities. The system, often riddled by financial problems, shut down for one day last December after running out of money.

Locke was unavailable for comment on the investigation Sunday. On Saturday, he said, "I don't know anything about it."

Locke's attorney, George McLaughlin, also could not be reached for comment Sunday. A woma who answred his phone said he was home, but was on vacation and had nothing to say about the case.

Locke, a former press secretary for former Gov. John A. Volpe, followed his boss to Washington when Volpe became U.S. secretary of transportation. Later he ran the transit system in St. Louis before being named Massachusetts transportation secretary in January 1979 and head of the MBTA in June 1980.

MBTA chairman without job during probe

BOSTON (AP) — It was back to the classroom and more day-to-day uncertainty today for about 64,500 students and 5,000 Boston public school teachers.

For a week, they've attended school unsure which day might be their last in class as they, the penniless school system and municipal officials have reeled daily from crisis to crisis.

Gov. Edward J. King has withheld action on a bill giving Mayor Kevin H. White $9.4 million in repayment from the state for past school construction. The bill has been on the governor's desk since Friday morning. He may act today, according to Gerald Morris, his press secretary.

The money is believed enough to keep open the school system — which officially ran out of money last week — atleast another week to 10 days while White and the City Council bargain over a $75 million bond and tax package that would provide enough money to get the schools to the end of their term June 19.

But City Treasurer Lowell Richards says White won't approve the latest council proposal for a bailout of the nation's oldest public school system

"It's still unlikely he will proceed on the bill," said Richards at a City Hall meeting on Saturday.

The state Supreme Court also has yet to decide on the mayoy's bid to overturn a lower court order requiring the schools to remain open. The mayor, who insists the city has no spare cash to shift to the broke School Department, is appealing the Superior Court order issued last week.

Coal operators agree to resume negotiations

By The Associated Press

The Bituminous Coal Operators Association has agreed to resume talks this week on a new contract for 160,000 coal miners who walked off their jobs 39 days ago, says United Mine Workers President Sam Church.

Negotiations "will resume at 10 o'clock Thursday this week in Washington, D.C.," Church told an Evansville, Ind., television station Sunday night.

He said he had discussed the matter with B.R. Brown, the BCOA's chief negotiator.

But Brown, reached at his Pittsburgh home late Sunday, said that while talks could resume this week, a date had not been set.

UMW spokesman Eldon Callen said Sunday that he was unaware of an agreement to resume talks but added "I hope it's true."

The two sides have not met since talks collapsed on April 17 in Washington. Each group has charged the other with failing to bargain in good faith.

Miners walked off their jobs in March after defeating a tentative contract. Many miners who voted against the contract said provisions ending a royalty paid by BCOA members on purchases of non-union coal and allowing greater sub-leasing of mines would have weakened the union.

Earlier Sunday, Brown said he wanted a pledge by the UMW to "get down to the issues."

Brown said the BCOA has goals it wants to reach in a new contract and would be willing to trade on some issues.

"I suspect I would give something for a dropped holiday. I suspect it would be worth something," he said.

Striking Hollywood scriptwriters reject producers' final offer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Negotiations between striking scriptwriters and the major film studios and television networks have broken off, after the Writers Guild rejection of what they said producers called a "final offer."

The Television and Motion Picture Producers Association "offered us what they referred to as their final contract offer and refused any further negotiations," Frank Pierson, vice president of the union, said at a news conference Sunday.

That proposal was rejected as unacceptable largely because it did not leave room to discuss the major issue of the strike — the amount of writers' compensation for work that is aired on pay television, video discs or cassettes, union spokesmen said.

The continuing strike is bound to hurt production for the upcoming fall television shows, said union spokeswoman Shannon Boyd. She noted that CBS and NBC have announced their fall TV schedules "with 16 new shows and specials for which not a word has been written."

Pierson said guild representatives had been prepared to negotiate Saturday night, but the producers' negotiators "terminated talks at that point."

Guild President Mel Shavelson said the guild will file a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board, claiming that the major producers "refused to bargain in good faith."

Shavelson said the major producers at the Saturday night breakup of talks had refused to discuss an agreement reached last week between the guild and independent motion picture and television producers.

"They said, 'This is our final offer.... We have nothing else to talk about,' I'd say that's pretty final," Shavelson said.

The 8,850 members of the writers guild went on strike April 11. After an initial break-off, negotiations with the major producers resumed April 22.

Reagan, French among foreign editorials

LONDON (AP) — President Reagan's first 100 days in office, the French presidential election and the new crisis in Lebanon were featured on foreign editorial pages last week.

Reaction to the Reagan term was mixed; several papers said because of the attempt on his life it was difficult to assess his progress.

"The aura of the hero that was bestowed upon the president through the drama makes it difficult to assess his political effectiveness," wrote Austria's Kurier. "The shots have lifted him above personal criticism for a time."

One of the few certain conclusions to be drawn from his first 100 days is that Reagan has been more effective with domestic than foreign policy, the paper said.

Oslo's Christian Democratic Vaart Land also cited thehlack of a firm foreign policy, saying the course so far was "unclear and ambiguous".

Taking U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union as an example, the paper wrote: "Warnings have poured down on the Soviet Union, but these have been combined with conciliatory efforts like the lifting of the grain embargo. It is urgent to find a firm and consistent policy both at home and abroad."

Britain's conservative Daily Telegraph said the lifting of the embargo "provides a classic illustration of the handicaps of a democracy in dealings with a totalitarian monolith. The message was that although the invasion of Afghanistan remains unexpiated and unforgiven, nevertheless President Reagan was encouraged by what he saw as signs that Russia would desist from repeating the same crime against Poland."

Britain's liberal Guardian suggested it was not the Soviet Union but American farmers who caused the embargo to be lifted. "The Russians can truthfully say that the embargo damaged American interests as much as it has damaged theirs," the paper said.

President Reagan, said Thailand's conservative Bangkok Post, "cannot be accused of having brought the world any closer to war despite the pre-inauguration predictions of the doomsayers."

Belgium's Standaard said Reagan "still appears determined to change the course of his country" by increasing defense spending, saving on almost everything else and seeing to it that Moscow "promises to behave otherwise there can be no talk of arms control."

But Britain's conservative Daily Express said that despite the massive cuts in domestic spending proposed to Congress, "few will be able to stand against the policy of a president as popular as Mr. Reagan."

Switzerland's well-respected Neue Zuercher Zeitung said it was time the Reagan administration expressed itself more clearly on the future of the Arab territories occupied by Israel and developed ideas "that are acceptable to the Arabs without jeopardizing Israel's security."

Without Syria's co-operation, the paper said, no solution could be found to the problem of the occupied territories, and until such a solution is found, "peace is not likely to return to Lebanon and its Christians."

In Kenya, Nairobi's independent Standard said a solution in Lebanon is a prerequisite for a solution in the Middle East as a whole. It called on the free world to act speedily before the situation deteriorates to the level of the 1975-76 civil war.

India's Hindustan Times said both Israel and Syria were "bent upon trying to achieve their geopolitical objectives at the expense of Lebanon." It said the superpowers were "fishing in troubled waters, as if the situation was not explosive enough."

Egypt's government-controlled Al Gomhuria described the situation in Lebanon as "a human tragedy which everyone should endeavor to stop." The first step, it continued, "should be for all to keep their hands off Lebanon and leave the Lebanese leaders to solve their problems by themselves and the Palestinian guests to punish the culprits among themselves. The Israelis and their agents ... should quit southern Lebanon. The Syrians should also pull out."

Britain's Daily Telegraph said Syria's aim appeared to be to "deal a crippling blow to the Christian forces which would leave them almost entirely broken. If this is indeed Syria's object, she is playing with fire. If it is not, she is still playing a dangerous and foolhardy game."

Many newspapers speculated on the possible outcome of the French election.

If Socialist Francois Mitterand wins, said the London Daily Telegraph, he would be forced to call an election for the National Assembly.

"The Socialists would then probably have to come to electoral arrangements with the Communists, and if together they then achieved a majority, the likely price for this would be the inclusion of Communist ministers in M. Mitterrand's government."

This, the paper said, would be "bad news."

India's independent Hindu, published in Madras, said President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, despite charges that he is "aloof, haughty and imperial, ... has had some success demonstrating that France is now more prosperous, more politically independent and more modern ... than any other European country."

Japanese prime minister leaves for talks in U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki left today for the United States and his first talks with President Reagan. Their two-day meeting was expected to focus on defense issues.

The Japanese announced last week that their auto exports to the United States would be limited for at least two years to give the U.S. auto industry some time to recover, removing the potentially most contentious issue from discussion.

Suzuki and Reagan will meet Thursday and Friday.

The prime minister was accompanied by Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito and will also confer with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Foreign Ministry officials say Suzuki will discuss defense in broad terms, but he is expected to receive some hard questions on the Japanese defense budget that a cabinet ruling keeps to less than 1 percent of the gross national product.

In a speech last Tuesday, Weinberger said the United States spends "six times more of our economic wealth on defense than does Japan" and urged Japan to increase its defense spending.

Suzuki last week gave qualified approval to a plan for a majmr defense buildup by 1987, but he cautioned that the defense budget would not be increased beyond its current share of the gross national product. He has said frequently that the best Japanese aid to Asian defense will be contributing to economic stability.

The prime minister will meet Japanese and American businessmen during a three-day stay in New York before going to Washington. He goes Saturday to Ottawa to meet Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

The threat of another conflict in the U.S.-Japanese talks was eased with the U.S. Embassy's announcement that Suzuki would receive a White House report Tuesday in New York on the collision between the American nuclear submarine George Washington and the Japanese freighter Nissho Maru.

Japan had asked for a full inquiry into the collision in which two Japanese were killed. Embassy offficials said the notification of the White House rzport included the U.S. Navy's acknowgedgment that it was "clearly responsible for the collision."

Negotiations to reduce Japanese exports of automobiles to the United States resulted in agreement by the Japanese to restrict shipments to the United States to 1.68 million units for 1981 — 140,000 less than in 1980. The export restraint is to continue for at least one additional year.

Terrorists kill general, three others in Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Gunmen shot and killed a general and a policeman in Madrid and two paramilitary Civil Guards in Barcelona today in a bloody new outbreak of terrorism, police said.

Unconfirmed police reports said one gunman was killed during an exchange of gunfire with police in the Spanish capital and two other people were seriously wounded.

Barcelona police said that wbout an hour after the Madrid attack, two members of the Guardia Civil in civilian clothes were shot to death as they left a bar. The gunmen escaped.

Police said Brig. Gen. Andres Gonzalez de Suso was wounded as he left hiz Madrid apartment for his office. They said the gunmen fled on foot after exchanging fire with a patrol car and killing the driver, Ignacio Garcia Garcia.

Conflicting reports said one of the gunmen was killed or wounded.

The general, the former press chief for the Defense Department and now assigned to the coastal artillery, died on the operating table.

A police helicopter flew over the fashionable shopping section where the attack occurred, and police blocked traffic to aid their hunt for the killers.

A high-ranking police officizl said the assassins may have been membors of the ultra-leftist Maoist organization GRAPO, the Oct. 1st Anti-Fascist Resistance Group, because shell casings found at the scene were of the type usually used by the urban terrorists.

There also was speculation that the gunmen were members of ETA, the Basque separatist organization that is responsible for most of the political murders in Spain.

The four confirmed deaths brought to 22 the number killed in political violence in Spain this year.

It was the first terrorist attack on a military man on active service since the abortwve military coup Feb. 23. It came in the midst of new milioary unrest fomented by publication of the details of the indictment against officers of the armed forces and the Guardia Civil accused of taking part in the coup plot.

In the February attempt, armed Civil Guards invaded the lower house of the Cortes, the Spanish Parliament, and held the members of the house and the Cabinethostage for 18 hours in an attempt to install a military government. Right-wing politicians and newspapers said they wanted vigorous military action to wipe out the terrorists fighting for the independence of the Basque provinces in northwest Spain.

Ethics committee to map strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ethics committee plans to meet early this week to map its next step in the investigation of New Jersey Democrat Harrison A. Williams Jr., the first incumbent U.S. senator convicted of a crime in 75 years.

Williams, found guilty Friday by a federal jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., of nine counts of bribery and conspiracy in the FBI's Abscam probe, says he plans to appeal and will not resign the seat he has held for 22 years.

Anne Miskovksy, a spokeswoman for the ethics committee, said the panel could meet today or Tuesday "to consider steps necessary and appropriate to the discharge of its constitutional responsibility to determine the fitness of a member of the Senate to hold an office of public trust."

The committee began an inquiry into Williams, who faces maximum sentence of 15 years in prison, shortly after reports published in February 1980 linked him to the Abscam investigation.

The panel agreed last fall to defer its usual investigative procedure until the Williams trial was over. Its staff continued reviewing the tapes which the Justice Department made of Williams and monitored the trial closely.

The FBI used undercover agents posing as representatives of an Arab sheik willing to pay for favors from public officials. Williams was the seventh and final member of Congress convicted in the case. The other six, all House members, no longer are in office.

The 61-year-old Williams was charged with promising to use his influence to steer government contracts to a titanium mine in which he had a concealed interest.

He also was accused of trying to persuade a phony Arab to invest $100 million in the venture and was said to have promised to "do everything" in his power to help the Arab immigrate to the United States.

Powell criticizes Califano's characterization of Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — "Hell hath no fury like a fat-cat Washington lawyer scorned," says ex-White House press secretary Jody Powell.

That was his response to a former Cabinet officer's characterization of Jimmy Carter as an insecure president whose cabinet had "no clear sense of where the president was leading them."

The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution said in their combined Sunday editions that Joseph Califano's description of the Carter presidency is included in a book written by the former health, education and welfare secretary and scheduled for publication May 29.

The newspapers said Califano, fired in 1979, also depicts his former boss as having been caught in a crossfire between his staff and Cabinet and as a man obsessed by news leaks.

Califano's book, "Governing America: An Insider's Report From the White House and the Cabinet," covers the first 30 months of Carter's presidency.

Powell, who served as Carter's press secretary and who remains close to the former president, said Carter would have no comment on the 454-page memoir.

But Powell said Califano's account demonstrates that "whatever lingering doubts I had that we had judged Joe too harshly have been substantially relieved. Hell hath no fury like a fat-cat Washington lawyer scorned."

Child wanders away, drowns in drainage ditch

HOUSTON (AP) — An 18-month-old boy who apparently walked away from his home in Southeast Houston drowned Sunday afternoon when he was swept away by floodwaters in a rain-swollen drainage ditch, police said.

The body of Jessie Peek was found about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, police said, following an intense downpour that had dumped as much as eight inches of rain on the city in eight hours.

Police said the boy apparently left his home and was not missed until his body was discovered in the ditch. He was the only known casualty attributed to the heavy rainfall.

High waters closed many streets in the southern part of Houston and the nearby cities of Pasadena and Pearland, where the Red Cross opened shelters for flood victims.

Courtly couple together again

LONDON (AP) — After a month's separation, Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer are back together, friends say.

The heir to the British throne, who in recent weeks has toured Australia, New Zealand and the United States, arrived in Scotland on Sunday and took off for Balmoral Castle.

His fiancee flew to Aberdeen, Scotland, and left there by car. Her plane had been hit by lightning shortly after takeoff from London, but no damage was reported.

Buckingham Palace declined to say if the two were meeting, but friends said the couple planned to spend five days together.

During Charles' visit to the United States, he visited President Reagan at the White House, inspected Navy and NATO facilities in Virginia and was heckled Saturday night by demonstrators supporting Irish hunger striker Bobby Sands.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Richard Harris says he was in the wrong place when the lights went out during a performance of "Camelot" and narrowly missed being crushed beneath a one-ton set that was being lowered to the stage.

Harris

Harris, who took over the part of King Arthur when Richard Burton was ailing, said he was nearly hurt Saturday when the set was lowered after one scene in preparation for the next.

"There was a luminous mark, which you can't go beyond, and I seemed to have missed it in the action of the play," said Harris, who played King Arthur in the movie version of the musical.

The set "would have hit me in the head," said the Irish actor. "The wife of the stage manager, Carol Adler, screamed across from the wings. I think the whole theater must have heard it."

Burton had been injured during a performance of "Camelot" in Toronto, and was replaced by Harris in March when his neck and back pains became severe enough to require surgery.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Steven Kirtley finally got a chance to chat with a woman who tried to slip him a note while he was held hostage in Iran.

He called in to a radio talk show Sunday to talk to Cynthia Dwyer, a freelance writer from Buffalo, N.Y., who was jailed in Iran for nine months. Mrs. Dwyer, who was interviewed on KLAZ, was back in her home state for a Hendrix College reunion.

Before she was captured, Mrs. Dwyer passed a note for Kirtley to guards at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where he was being held. Kirtley never got the message and said he didn't even know she was in Iran until he returned to the United States. She was released after being convicted on espionage charges.

Mrs. Dwyer said the note followed her to her trial.

"Steve, you know I think there was something in that note that made them think I had prior knowlege of that raid," she said, referring to an aborted mission to rescue the hostages.

Mrs. Dwyer said she had hoped a note from a fellow Arkansan would cheer Kirtley.

"It had a tiny pin from the tourist bureau that said, 'See Arkansas First' and I hoped you'd laugh at that," she said.

"That would have been a little funny at the time," Kirtley said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Tony Orlando, who has suffered from personal and professional setbacks in the last few years, says he is taking on "the biggest challenge of my life."

Orlando

Starting this week, he will replace vacationing Jim Dale in Broadway's musical hit "Barnum" for three weeks.

For the 37-year-old Orlando, playing the legendary circus showman is no easy task. Each night, he must walk a tightrope, dance, juggle, bounce on a trampoline and sing nine songs.

"Things I never imagined doing I now must pull off gracefully and believably," he told People magazine.

Orlando, best known for the hit song, "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Old Oak Tree," trained for the show for weeks, practicing the stunts and working with a dance and singing coach.

He told People that his nervous breakdown nearly four years ago stemmed from physical and emotional exhaustion.

"That momentary stumble made me pick up the pieces, and now I know what my values are," he said. " 'Barnum' proves that I'm past all that ugliness. I have made it."

Deaf-mute youth says movie prompted attack on couple

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 16-year-old deaf-mute charged in the weekend ax woundings of his foster parents allegedly got the idea for the attack from a horror movie, authorities say.

Wesley Smith, foster son of William and Amy Chandler, was held in the Sevier County Jail today in lieu of $50,000 bond on two counts of felonious assault with intent to commit murder.

The Chandlers were cut on their heads and necks with an ax while they slept Saturday morning, said Sevier County Sheriff Carmen Townsend.

Mrs. Chandler, 25, was in satisfactory condition Sunday night at East Tennessee Baptist Hospital, a spokeswoman said. Chandler, 30 was in serious condition.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Chandler, who is six months pregnant, was not expected to lose her baby.

Sevier County sheriff's Detective David Adcox said Sunday that Smith told authorities after his arrest that a horror movie he had seen prompted the incident.

"There was blood on everyone and splattered all over the walls. He wrote on a pad telling us he got the idea watching the movie 'Prom Night,' " Adcox said.

Townsend said authorities had established no motive for the attack.

The youth was apprehended while hitchhiking, Townsend said.

A 10-year-old boy and a 15-year-old boy, also foster children of the Chandlers, were not harmed, Townsend said.

Smith was on parole from the state Correction Department as a result of a window-smashing incident at a car dealership, the sheriff said.

Eddie Franklin, Mrs. Chandler's father, said his daughter and her husband had had nine foster children. Franklin said he and his wife visited the Chandlers on Friday and noticed nothing unusual about the youth.

"I was sitting at the house Friday night at 10 o'clock," Franklin said. "He took his shower and went to bed and told us good night, just like always.

"We drove on home and went to bed and woke up with a phone call telling us that this happened."

Chicago search turns up nothing

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago police say a day-long manhunt in the city's south side has failed to yield a mass murder suspect sought by Maryland authorities for the fatal shootings of six people, including his wife and two daughters.

Sgt. J. Davis said the suspect named in Maryland murder warrants, Ronald Q. Ellis, 34, is believed to "have money, and may no longer be in the Chicago area."

Law enforcement officials say Ellis arrived in the Chicago area early Sunday, along with an acquaintance, Mary P. Turner, and her five year old son, who were abducted from their home in Fairfax County, Va., a suburb of Washington, D.C.

Police in Prince Georges County Maryland, where Ellis lived, said the abduction occurred Saturday evening, shortly after six bodies were discovered at his spacious home in Clinton, Md.

They theorize that Ellis went to Turner's home shortly after the killings, abducted the 27-year-old woman and her son and headed for Chicago in the woman's car.

Indiana authorities reported early Sunday that the woman and her son had escaped at a rest area on the Illinois-Indiana border, and Ellis was believed headed for Chicago.

Indiana State Police said two handguns believed to belong to Ellis were recovered from the Turner vehicle. Law enforcement officials in Maryland, meanwhile, said a number of rifles, shotguns and handguns were recovered from a gun cabinet in Ellis' home. They said an autopsy was being performed on the victims by the Maryland medical examiner's office in an effort to determine the type of weapon that had been used inthe killings.

Bob Law, a spokesman for the Prince Georges County Police Department, said that the victims included Ellis wife, Ingrid, 34, two of the couple's daughters, Monica, 4, Tammy, 12, two family friends, Tyrone Jackson, 12, of Boulevard Heights, Md., and Sherry Vienice Robinson, 32, of Upper Marlboro, Md., and another adult female, whose identity still hasn't been learned.

The couple's eldest daughter, Tracy, 14, was not at home at the time of the slayings and is safe with family friends, police said.

The bodies were discovered Saturday evening by a real estate agent who was attemptimg to negotiate the sale of Ellis' home.

Neighbors of the Ellises recalled on Sunday that the family had seemed to be somewhat reclusive, but otherwise pleasant.

Ronald Ellis worked for a Maryland printing company, while his wife, Ingrid, was a police sergeant with the Washington, D.C. Police Department.

Atlanta police 'frustrated'

ATLANTA (AP) — The failure of police to solve the slayings of 26 young Atlanta blacks has left many officers deeply frustrated, says the chaplain for the city police bureau.

"They have taken it so personally," the Rev. John L. Thompson said. "They've taken it very, very personally."

Thompson, minister at the West Side Community CME Church, said members of the special task force investigating the killings have become so involved in the cases that they have no time to enjoy their personal lives.

"The task force members are so busy that for them it is just a matter of exhaustion," he said.

Other members of the police force, however, may be even more frustrated, Thompson said, because they do not know what's happening from day to day with the 21-month-old investigation.

"They'd like to know more, to be a part of it," he said. "But the fact that they are not there gives them a feeling of distance and frustration that is greater than those closer to it."

In addition, the chaplain, said many officers have a recurring nightmare that a former police officer may be involved in the killings.

"I don't know all the reasons they think this, but it's a gut-level feeling," he said. "If by chance the person is anywhere related to law enforcement, it could put a very dark blot in the hearts and minds of people in the city and the country.

"The thing that frightens them is that perhaps when this thing is solved, how do you police the city when the crisis is over? How do you keep the lid from coming off when you are charged with the responsibility of keeping the peace and enforcing the law?"

Thompson's comments, published today in the Atlanta Constitution, followed a weekend that saw the burial of the 26th victim.

Jimmy Ray Payne, whose body was pulled from the Chattahoochee River on April 27, was the eighth young black found in or near an area river. That prompted members of a local canoe club on Saturday to search a 28-mile section of the Chattahoochee.

The four-hour search uncovered only a black leather jacket, which was turned over to the special task force. One of the victims found in the Chattahoochee, 13-year-old Timothy Hill, was wearing a black leather jacket when last seen.

Meanwhile, the head of the Atlanta Police missing persons unit said Sunday that the attention focused on the slayings has resulted in public ignorance of Atlanta's chronic problem of runaway girls.

Sgt. Ted Hall said his unit was investigating the cases of 13 missing girls aged less than 22.

"No one except police cares about the girls. And they're the biggest problem we've got," Hall said. "Ninety-five percent of them are uncontrollable. They come and go as they please."

Army private awaits hearing on extradition

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — A 25-year-old white Army private is waiting in the Muscogee County jail for a hearing on his extradition to New York to face murder charges, reportedly for three of the ".22 caliber slayings" of black men last year.

An extradition hearing is set for Friday for Pvt. Joseph C. Christopher, of Buffalo, who is being held on a fugitive from justice warrant, Muscogee County Chief Deputy Jim McLendon said.

Erie County, N.Y., District Attorney Edward Cosgrove said he is sending a top aide, John J. DeFranks, to Gŏrgia to coordinate the investigation and make sure prosecutors are prepared for the hearing.

Cosgrove said he would like the hearing expedited, but Georgia authorities said there were no plans for an earlier hearing.

Georgia Gov. George Busbee signed extradition papers Saturday for Christopher's return to New York. Superior Court Judge John Land set the May 8 hearing date last Thursday — before the papers were signed — when Christopher's attorneys told him their client would not return voluntarily.

Christopher, who is also charged with attempted murder in theh stabbing of a black soldier while training at Fort Benning, was in the base stockade before being transferred last week to the Muscogee County jail.

Fort Benning authorities said Christopher was handed over to civilian authorities because the murder charge is more serious than the Army's attempted murder charge.

Income flows to Sun Belt, rises faster than inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's per capita income flowed steadily to the Sun Belt in the last decade, but income rose faster in every state than the 93.4 percent national increase in inflation, according to a new Commerce Department study.

The report issued this weekend offered fresh evidence of soaring economic development in Southern and Western states which have lured people and business from the Northeast with good climates, space to expand and relatively low-cost labor.

Nevertheless, a frigid but oil-rich state, Alaska, had the nation's highest per capita income with an average of $12,406 for each resident, dropping the 1970 leader, Connecticut, into second place.

A Sun Belt state, Mississippi, was No. 50 — unchanged since 1970 — with an average per capita income of $6,508.

The study was requested by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in 1978 after New York City succeeded in getting federally guaranteed loans at a time when New York state had a $2 billion revenue surplus.

Bentsen said the continued flow of income to the Sun Belt means that other Northeastern and Midwestern cities will be looking for federal bailouts.

"You're going to see more of a conflict develop between the Sun Belt and the Snow Belt as you see that kind of approach, and the government ought to develop a consistent policy for it," added Bentsen, who said cities should look first to their states for aid.

The report said the nation's overall per capita income rose 143 percent to $9,458 during the decade. Every state showed income rising higher than the decade's 93.4 percent inflation increase as measured by the Commerce Department's personal consumer expenditure deflator.

The study also said the gap has narrowed between the richest and poorest regions, with 1970's below-average states increasing per capita income about 153 percent by 1980, while states which were above average in 1970 showed a 10-year increase of about 138 percent.

Most of the highest-ranking states still are in the highly developed Northeastern and West Coast parts of the nation, while the lowest-ranking generally are in the Southeast and Rocky Mountain regions.

But the trend during the 1970s was in the opposite direction.

Following are per capita income figures for each of the states and the District of Columbia, by region, for 1980 and 1970:

NEW ENGLAND — Connecticut $11,445 in 1980, up from $4,871 in 1070; Maine $7,734 and $3,250; Massachusetts $9,992 and $4,272; New Hampshire $8,890 and $3,720; Rhode Island $9,250 and $3,878, and Vermont $7,839 and $3,712.

MIDEAST — Delaware $10,195 and $4,468; District of Columbia $11,883 and $4,644; Maryland $10,332 and $4,267; New Jersey $10,755 and $4,684; New York $10,143 and $4,605, and Pennsylvania $9,294 and $3,879.

GREAT LAKES — Illinois $10,658 and $4,446; Indiana $8,978 and $3,709; Michigan $9,847 and $4,041; Ohio $9,398 and $3,949, and Wisconsin $9,254 and $3,712.

PLAINS — Iowa $9,178 and $3,643; Kansas $9,958 and $3,725; Minnesota $9,519 and $3,819; Missouri $8,556 and $3,077, and South Dakota $7,452 and $3,108.

SOUTHEAST — Alabama $7,484 and $2,892; Arkansas $7,180 and $2,791; Florida $8,987 and $3,698; Georgia $8,000 and $3,300; Kentucky $7,718 and $3,076; Louisiana $8,282 and $3,023; Mississippi $6,508 and $2,547; North Carolina $7,852 and $3,200; South Carolina $7,519 and $2,951; Tennessee $7,786 and $3,079; Virginia $9,435 and $3,677, and West Virginia $7,831 and $3,038.

SOUTHWEST — Arizona $8,649 and $3,614; New Mexico $7,956 and $3,045; Oklahoma $9,081 and $3,341, and Texas $9,513 and $3,507.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN — Colorado $9,964 and $3,838; Idaho $8,126 and $3,243; Montana $8,445 and $3,395; Utah $7,485 and $3,169, and Wyoming $10,692 and $3,672.

FAR WEST — California, $10,856 and $4,423; Nevada $10,458 and $4,583; Oregon $9,400 and $3,677, and Washington $10,363 and $3,997.

OTHERS — Alaska $12,406 and $4,638; Hawaii $9,787 and $4,599.

Cities told to ask for financial help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities that run into money trouble should look to their state government for help before running to the federal government, according to a report just released by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Texas and other Sunbelt states can be expected to fight such future requests. He pointed out that the New York state government had a $2 billion surplus when New York City came to Washington in 1978, seeking and receiving guaranteed loans from the federal government.

Bentsen made his remarks Sunday upon release of a study into state and local government conducted during his chairmanship last year of the Joint Economic Committee.

"The question is not whether the federal government should leave ailing cities in the lurch. The question is should the federal government be rushing in at a time that the state itself has a substantial surplus," Bentsen said.

The study — which Bentsen called for after New York City succeeded in its request — looked into whether the federal government should consider giving massive emergency financial assistance to a city when its state government is experiencing strong fiscal health.

"We're going to see more and more of these Northeastern and Midwestern cities coming to the federal government wanting bailouts, and I really don't think that's the solution we should be going to," Bentsen said.

"You're going to see more of a conflict develop between the Sunbelt and the Snowbelt as you see that kind of an approach, and the government ought to develop a consistent policy for it."

Joining Bentsen in releasing the study were Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., vice chairman of the Joint Economic Committee during the 96th Congress; and Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, ranking minority member of the committee last year.

The problems of many large cities have stemmed from the flight of residents to suburbs and the inability of the cities to annex the area around them, thus expanding their tax base.

"In the South and West, states have allowed cities to succeed in repeatedly shifting their borders outward since 1945, thus combining the strengths and weaknesses of inner city and suburban city," Bentsen said.

In many cities in the Northeast and Midwest, that has not been the case and the result has been suburbs largely immune from the needs of the central mother city, he added.

"The states and cities that have prepared to better face the future are going to be very reluctant to shift their needed resources to areas which have done little, if anything, about their own problems," Bentsen said.

Armored vehicles a sound business

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — Robert Soussi speaks five languages, often deals with large international companies and has thwarted more than one would-be assassin or kidnapper.

Soussi is the sales manager for Tetradyne Corp., an innocuously-named company that produces made-to-order armored vehicles in this town 18 miles north of Dallas.

And he says his company is well-versed in the ways terrorists, murderers and kidnappers operate.

"We have all the statistics," Soussi says. "For instance, we know that kidnappers, in countries where government officials are often kidnapped, allow themselves two and a half minutes to carry out the mission. Otherwise, they abort."

He says the plant receives orders daily from businesses and countries around the world, but that the 40 Tetradyne employees can only produce about four cars a month.

Many orders come from the Middle East and Central America, but the company also has requests from U.S. firms that deal in large amounts of money and oil companies with overseas operations.

Numbers — not names — identify work orders posted for welders and mechanics. It's a hush-hush kind of business and sometimes Tetradyne officials don't even know who is buying a bullet-proof car because arrangements are handled by a middle man.

"We don't ask too many questions," Soussi said. "But I need to know, if not which country, which area of the world is involved."

An armored vehicle isn't cheap, with costs ranging from $11,000 for the lowest level of basic protection in a van, to $40,000 for the top-level basic amoring of a luxury limousine.

In addition to armor plating and bullet-proof glass, Tetradyne installs a loud siren and loudspeaker complete with cassette that calls for help, outside speakers for communication with the attackers, a two-way radio, gunports and a grenade launching system.

Batteries are placed inside armored boxes and plastic rollers are put inside heavy-duty tires which, even filled with bullet holes, could take the car another 30 or 40 miles out of the danger zone.

"And when it comes out of here, it doesn't look as if it's been armored," Soussi says.

Former newsman Connie Hurley dies

BOSTON (AP) — Services for former Associated Press newsman Cornelius "Connie" F. Hurley, described by Sen. Edward Kennedy as a "reporter's reporter," will be held Tuesday in Mattapoisett.

Hurley, 72, was driving home from church in Mattapoisett late Saturday when a bulge on a major heart artery burst, according to relatives. He lost control of his car, struck a ulility pole and died of his ailment Sunday, family members said.

"Connie Hurley's name was synonymous with political journalism in New England," said Walter Mears, Pulitzer Prize winner for his coverage of the 1976 presidential campaign and now an AP vice president and Washington bureau chief.

Mears trained at the Massachusetts Statehouse with Hurley in 1961.

Hurley started covering Massachusetts politics after joining AP in 1937. The Kennedys became the big story with John F. Kennedy's first congressional campaign in 1948.

When Kennedy became president and spent time at the family compound in Hyannis, or visited Hammersmith Farm, the Newport, R.I., home of his wife, Jacqueline, Hurley was there.

When it came to news stories about the Kennedy family, Hurley liked to go directly to the source.

Two years before Hurley retired in 1974, he was working on presidential politics when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was offered second place on the Democratic ticket with Sen. George McGovern.

To get the accurate text of Kennedy's telegram rejecting the vice presidency, he walked to the front of a news conference and took Kennedy's copy.

"All these years wherever there was a story, Connie Hurley was there," said Kennedy in a statement. "He was a reporter's reporter. He always saw the story behind the story. I knew him, I respected him, I liked him — and along with so many others I will miss him."

A New Bedford native, Hurley began his journalistic career as a copy boy for the old New Bedford Standard. He was me managing editor of the affiliated Cape Cod Standard-Times before joining AP.

After retiring, Hurley received a Yankee Quill award in 1977 frmm Sigma Delta Chi for distinguished service to New England journalism.

Hurley's wife Georgia died of cancer four years ago.

Surviving are a son, George, and a daughter, Judy.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 5, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Famous Country and Western singer Tammy Wynette shares this birthday with you. Your talent for making money will stand you in good stead this year. Realize that your colleagues may have considerable influence over the opportunities you are offered and treat them with consideration. Sometimes others mistake your reserve for indifference. Make it clear that you can work as part of a team when necessary. Now is the time to set aside money for investment purposes! A real estate deal or securities purchase is indicated. Consult mate before making final decision. Romance flourishes when you treat loved one as a true partner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Buy yourself extra time by being unavailable to certain people today. The conditions for making a deal will be more favorable later on. Observe all safety rules.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make arrangements that will insure greater financial security for you and your loved ones. Be sure you can live with any temporary restrictions. Romance is on the horizon.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Loved ones will be in a joyous mood today. Bask in their good fortune, but also get on with your own life. Business outlook is subject to change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be aided in making difficult decisions. Your ideas for change will not be easily accepted by your co-workers. Move slowly and make a strong pitch for cooperation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be able to make an investment now that will provide a quick return. Be sure you know what you are getting into. Young person may want to confide in you. Listen!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A romance may be proving to be too expensive. Sit down and have a candid discussion with the object of your affections. Take the advice of an old friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to what you know best. Financial affairs continue to be sensitive. Romantic interlude restores your high spirits. Consideration for others pays dividends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid risky financial schemes. Your hunches are likely to pay off this week. Be prepared to put in extra hours at work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance holds an exciting promise! You may find it difficult to concentrate on routine chores but remember to put business before pleasure. Developments at work require your full attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Boredom will set in today unless you push yourself to excel. Others may be in a lazy mood. Complete old projects rather than trying to launch new ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A profitable business venture comes into view. Move swiftly to take the initiative away from your competitors. Seek the cooperation of the entire family to keep expenses down.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A pleasant atmosphere at work makes a difficult chore more palatable. Your associates offer you encouragement and cooperation.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1052 ♡A763 ◇952 ♣874
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble	?

What action do you take?
A.—After an opposing takeout double, we are inclined to raise partner's suit on the smell of an oil rag. However, there are limits to our daring. Our balanced hand detracts from both our side's offensive and defensive potential, so we feel that a raise to two hearts would serve only to alert the opponents to definite heart shortage in one of their hands, which may enable them to bid a game that they would not otherwise reach.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ64 ♡K1083 ◇9 ♣A87
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡

What do you bid now?
A.—Introducing your spade suit can serve no useful purpose—you can play in only one major suit and you have already found a fit. Your hand is worth one move, and that should be a raise of partner's suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1083 ♡A954 ♣AKQ107
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very powerful supporting hand and we would not fault you greatly if you leaped to four hearts. However, since you have forced partner to bid, there is the possibility that he has a very bad hand with only three hearts. We recommend a cue-bid of two diamonds followed by a raise in hearts. That will describe your tremendous strength and, should partner have a solid one heart response, prepare the ground for a possible slam.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q87 ♡63 ◇AK93 ♣AK82
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an awkward hand. Your heart weakness and the fact that almost all your strength is concentrated in two suits made your hand unsuitable for a one no trump opening bid. Now, a rebid of one no trump would be an underbid while a leap to two no trump would greatly overstate your values. The only solution is to rebid two clubs and hope that that action will elicit something positive from partner.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ10963 ♡Q ◇K986 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have to do something to tell partner that you have a reasonable hand. While a bid of two spades would show a six-card suit, partner might think that you are simply competing for the partial. A jump to three spades describes your holding much better.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK85 ♡93 ◇AQ76 ♣KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Another difficult hand. You have the values for a jump to two no trump, but that risks losing the spade suit. Yet you are not strong enough, nor unbalanced enough, for a jump to two spades. We suggest a simple rebid of one spade. If partner passes, it is doubtful whether you have the values for game. But you will be well placed over any bid that partner might make at his second turn.

Davis Fast Photo Service can help you capture those colorful memories

Troy Davis, owner of Davis Fast Photo, has been a professional photographer in West Texas a number of years. In December, Davis opened Midland's first true "quick prints" shop featuring film developing and printing with one-hour service.

How can he do it so fast?

Davis owns on of 12 brand new, complete photo finishing machines called a C-41 Processor. This new machine can develop color negatives and process a roll of prints in less than one hour's time — at no extra cost.

The most modern processing equipment available, the C-41 Processor is commanding so much attention from photo professionals Davis says there is a three-year waiting list on orders.

Bill Moler, owner of A-1 Office Furniture Refinishing, can refinish metal file cabinets in a snap. Militants threaten to blow up natural gas camp

SANTA CRUZ, Bolivia (AP) — Armed ultra-rightists who took over an Occidental Oil Co. gas condensation plant in southern Bolivia and seized 52 hostages threatened to blow up the highly volatile unit today unless Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's ruling junta resigns, sources said.

The sources said about 500 government soldiers surrounded the company's isolated "Tita" camp near the Paraguayan border after the takeover Sunday. Military commanders met in Santa Cruz, 100 miles away, discussing what to do next.

The two army regiments stationed in the area were reported on their way to the camp from Santa Cruz and Cochabamba.

One U.S. citizen, mechanic Leonard Davis, was reported among the hostages. His hometon was notimmediately known.

The government claimed it was in complete control of the "terrorist outbreak." A communique from the Interior Ministry said the rebels were trying "to create confusion in the political and financial world of the United States."

Military sources who asked not to be named said a group of about 50 armed men led by Falange Party President Carlos Valverde invaded the camp about 430 miles southeast of La Paz and demanded the junta's resignation.

They also demanded a meeting of all military commanders to form a transitional military-civilian government and the publication of Falange manifestos in the national press, the sources said.

Some sections of Valverde's party are farther to the right than Garcia Meza and the other conservative army officers who ousted President Lidia Gueiler and her civilian government last July.

In Los Angeles, a spokesman for Occidental said Valverde and his men made no demands on the company.

"We're concerned about the safety of our people," spokesman Gordon Reese said. "The next move must either be made by the Bolivian government or the group taking control of the plant."

The military sources in Santa Cruz called the takeover an isolated incident and said Valverde, a former health minister, had no support outside of his small group of invaders.

The Falangists supported the military coup last year, but criticism of the junta has increased recently anong civilians and in some military circles. A taped message from Valverde, distributed to The Associated Press and some newspapers over the weekend, said the government was inefficient and corrupt.

Eddie Chiles

H.E. Chiles to speak at banquet

H.E. "Eddie" Chiles of Fort Worth, chairman and chief executive officer of the Western Company of North America, will speak at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's eighth Hall of Fame Dinner at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Chiles, whose famous "I'm mad!" radio commercials made "Eddie Chiles" a household name throughout much of the country, will be speaking at the Green Tree Country Club before an audience gathered to honor four recent electees to the museum's Hall of Fame: J.C. Barnes, Sr., N. Ford Chapman, Charles V. Lyman and Stanley C. Moore.

A West Texas oil pioneer, Chiles was born in Itasca and graduated from the university of Oklahoma with a degree in petroleum engineering. He founded the Western Company on a shoe-string, drove trucks and finally built it into a worldwide organization of more than 5,000 employees that specializes in fracturing, acidizing, cementing and offshore drilling.

A believer in the need for citizens to involve themselves more closely with political affairs, he has preached this conviction and his strong support for the free enterprise concepts through the media and in his personal appearances throughout the nation.

He has received numerous awards for his business and engineering leadership, is a member of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, is a regent of North Texas State University and currently is a board chairman of the Texas Rangers Baseball Team.

Research ship held by Iran

LONDON (AP) — A seismographic ship that belongs to a Texas research company was in Iranian custody after it apparently entered the Persian Gulf war zone unintentionally, company officials said.

Damir Skerl, a vice president of Western Geophysical Co., said its ship Western Sea was escorted Thursday to the Iranian port of Bushehr on the southwest coast of Iran. He said the ship and its mostly British crew of 19 were working for Kuwait and were looking for oil and gas exploration areas.

"Focus on Oil '81", the annual photo contest and exhibit on petroleum-related subjects, will be held again this summer at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

The contest is open to any amateur or professional photographer resident in the U.S. Photographers may enter prints in black and white, amateur color, and professional color classes. A total of four prints may be entered per person.

The prints must portray some aspect of oil and gas exploration, drilling, production, transportation, or refining, including people working in the industry. Cash purchase awards include $175 for best-of-show, $125 for first places in each class, and $100 each for the three second places. Certificates will be awarded for the third places and honorable mentions.

Fifty photographs will be selected by the judges for exhibit in the museum during June, July, and August. Judeges will be Tom Livesay, assistant director for administration at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, Mike Slaton, associate editor of Drilling DCW magazine and Dennis Thompson, industrial photographer from Tulsa.

Entries must be received at the museum no later than May 20. More information can be obtained from the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, 1500 Interstate 20 West, Midland 79701.

Company announces completion of Panama oil shipping agreement

Arco Panama Transportation Inc., a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Company, announced it has completed a three-year shipping agreement with the Petroterminal de Panama, S.A., builder of a proposed 80 mile pipeline across Panama in Central America.

The agreement will entitle Arco Panama to transport about 100,000 barrels of north slope crude oil per day through the line beginning in late 1982, when construction is scheduled to be completed.

During the three-year life of the agreement, the compnay is expected to pay $100 million in shipping tariffs to Petroterminal, a Panamanian corporation, owned by Northville industries of New York, CBI Industries of Illinois and the Panamanian governement.

Atlantic Richfield currently ships a portion of its Alaskan crude oil by tanker through the Panama Canal to Gulf and east coast refineries. Canal shipping is expensive and susceptible to delays and interruptions, said James S. Morris, president of Arco Transportation Company.

The throughput guarantee reached by Arco Panama, combined with similar agreements from other north slope crude shippers, makes the Panama line economically viable, Morrison said. He added the line would not conflict with other proposed west-to-east U.S. pipeline projects. "Since no U.S. pipeline system is likely to be built during the three-year life of our Panama contract, we think it wist to protect our interest now," he said.

The agreement gives Arco Panama options to increase throughput to 130,000 barrels per day and to extend its commitment another six years.

EASTMAN WHIPSTOCK...

LEADERS IN DIRECTIONAL DRILLING

We're the first, the largest, and the best!

The first deviated relief well was guided by John Eastman in 1934. In 1972, almost forty years later Eastman merged with Whipstock Incorporated, its major competitor. As a subsidiary of Petrolane Incorporated, Eastman Whipstock is still growing and pioneering new technology in directional drilling. The following is a career opportunity available at Eastman Whipstock.

DIRECTIONAL DRILLER TRAINEES: Our Midland district operation has an immediate need for directional driller trainees. Specific requirements for the positions include a minimum of 2 years drilling rig experience and deep hole drilling experience below 15,000 feet. On site training will encompass utilization of Eastman Whipstock's tools and specialized directional drilling concepts.

Interested and qualified applicants should contact: Dick Giffhorn or Ray Warner at P.O. Box 5577, Midland, Texas 79704, (915) 563-0511. If unable to contact the aforementioned, please call the Houston headquarters, Steve Pitt, at (713) 741-2200. An equal opportunity employer, m/f.

Now that he's seen Tall City, how do you..?

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

When it comes time to leave Midland, the only way they may get big John Evans out of the Tall City is kicking and screaming.

"I liked the ball park here, even before we played a game," said Evans, whose size is adequately described by the high school he attended in Los Angeles...St. Bernard. "It's a major league field all the way."

And now that he has played a few games under the bright lights of Cubs Stadium, it may be tough to return to El Paso.

His solo homer in the eighth Sunday night was just a little extra frill on a 5-2 El Paso win, a little something to let the Cubs know he still has bat and will swing.

It was particularly noteworthy in that it cleared the double-deck eye aid in center, the first time that feat has been accomplished this season, although Evans has bombarded each side of the "eye" with home runs.

Tonight's Game

The Cubs wind up their homestand at 7 p.m. tonight against the Diablos. Lefthander Craig Lefferts, 1-2, will pitch for Midland while Doug Jones will try to make it four straight for the Diablos. Midland leaves for five games in San Antonio, starting Wednesday night.

But it was his fourth homer in the series, all in the last three nights, in fact, all six of his homers this season have come against the Cubs, along with 15 of his 22 runs-batted-in and four-game winning hits...shades of the days when Gorman Thomas tormented Midland pitchers when the Milwaukee farm club was in San Antonio.

THE 22-year-old who signed out of LA Harbour JC has been tearing up Cubs and "He will tear up a lot of people before he's through," says Midland Manager Roy Hartsfield. "He's very strong. Has a good sense of timing. He can be pitched to, but we haven't been able to."

But for a change, it wasn't Evans who beat the Cubs this time as El Paso made it three in a row over the slump-ridden Bruins. "Joe (McClain) pitched well enough to win in the Texas League. Most pitchers have ERAs of four or five in this division," Hartsfield said. "It was a case of his being hurt by a couple of bleeders early. That's part of the game. You can't do anything about that. Then in the seventh and ninth we had the tying run at the plate and couldn't get a hit."

McCLAIN went the route, his second complete game of the year, but was nicked for a couple of third inning runs when Willie Lozado doubled, Al Manning plunked a run-scoring banjo hit to center and then came a controversial play that could have cost a run.

Manning broke from second to third on Eddie Irvine's grounder to third. J.W. Mitchell had a possible double play, but Manning swerved to avoid his tag and Mitchell only got the batter at first. Then John Skorochocki singled to plate the second run. Hartsfield debated the subject, but to no avail.

"All I asked him (base umpire Al Kaplon) was what baseline measurement we were using, three feet, four, six or 10 so I could inform my players."

Evans walked and was forced to open the fourth, then Doug Loman and Bill Schroder followed with singles to load the bases and McClain uncorked a wild pitch that let a run score. Lozado then lifted a sacrifice fly to center for the final run.

TIM COOK went the first 6 2/3 innings for his third win in four decisions. Jim Koontz came in the seventh. A run was in when Mike Diaz singled, was balked to second and scored on Jack Upton's looper to left. An error and walk loaded the bases and brought Jim Koonitz out of the bullpen to get Craig Kornfeld on a grounder to third for the final out.

Larry Montgomery pitched the ninth and yielded a run-scoring double to Mel Hall with one out. After first baseman Stan Davis made a difficult catch on Randy LaVigne's pop foul for the second out, Montgomery gave up a single to Bill Morgan before getting Kornfeld on a force for the game-saving out.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Evans led the Midwest League in homers and rbis last year, although missing 30 games while playing for Burlington. His 14 homers isn't impressive by Texas League standards, but "a lot of the parks are right on the Mississippi River level and the ball doesn't carry like it does out here. The Cubs had a team in the league and I had good success hitting against them. But they beat us two-out-of-three in the playoffs...quite a few of the guys are here now like Hall, Kornfeld, Diaz...

McClain finished with three straight strikeouts to wind up with seven for the night.

Mariners' owner isn't unhappy

SEATTLE (AP) — George Argyros, the Seattle Mariners' new principal owner, says he's unhappy with his American League baseball club's faltering start and vows to turn things around.

But he won't say how, only that, "We are going to whip this problem one way or the other."

Mariners manager Maury Wills, former base stealing whiz of the Los Angeles Dodgers, insists he's not feeling any pressure.

Wills said in an interview, "Dan O'Brien (Mariners president) has made me feel like I'm the boss down here. I don't feel any pressures other than to win a few games and soon."

Wills, 48, replaced Darrell Johnson, the Mariners' original skipper, last Aug. 4 after Johnson was fired by O'Brien in the franchise's fourth season.

Celts stagger by 76ers, 91-90

Face Houston in finals Tuesday

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics staggered on the brink of elimination for three games. But it was the Philadelphia 76ers who took the fatal plunge.

"Some team had to fall and I'm just happy it wasn't us," Boston forward Cedric Maxwell said.

Boston, very often down but never out in its Eastern Conference championship series, mustered a comeback for the fifth straight game Sunday to edge the 76ers, 91-90, in the seventh and deciding contest.

The Celtics host the first two games of the National Basketball Association title series Tuesday and Thursday against Houston, who they beat in four straight games in last year's playoffs.

BOSTON IS only the fourth team of the 69 who have trailed NBA playoff series three games to one to come back and win. In the previous two games, the Celtics rallied from halftime deficits of 10 and 9 points to win by 2.

They trailed 53-48 after two periods Sunday and 87-80 when Julius Erving, who led the 76ers with 23 points, capped a 12-1 Philadelphia run with a fallaway jumper with 6:25 left in the game. After that, the 76ers made just one field goal, committed five turnovers, four of them steals, and had two shots blocked.

"We played good defense going down the stretch," said Boston playmaker Nate Archibald. "We didn't hit that many shots. The defense did the job for us."

Boston's shooting was horrendous. Its 38.2 percent field goal shooting was lower than its worst regular season showing and topped only its 37.8 mark in the second game against the 76ers.

Larry Bird, who led Boston with 23 points and 11 rebounds, got a defensive rebound and hit a fast-break bank shot with 1:03 to go to put Boston on top 91-89. With 29 seconds left, Cheeks was fouled by Gerald Henderson. He missed the first shot and made the second.

The 76ers got the ball back after an M.L. Carr miss and called timeout with one second remaining. But Bobby Jones' inbound pass hit the top of the backboard, the ball was touched, and time ran out.

OF THE other three teams to win playoff series after falling behind 3-1, only the 1968 Celtics, who did it against the 76ers, went on to win the NBA title. That was their 10th crown. They are gunning for their 14th, the most in NBA history.

"It was a great series," said 76er Coach Billy Cunningham. "One thing that disappointed me was the contact at the end and the inconsistencies of the officials," Darell Garretson and Jake O'Donnell.

"There should have been some calls at the end," said Jones. "There was a lot of contact out there, a lot of heavy contact."

"Defense is what brings you back when you're behind," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch. "All great teams come back from adversity."

Carr, who came up with a key steal of an Erving pass with 48 seconds left, recounted Fitch's words in the final timeout as the never-say-die, comeback kings were one second away from becoming conference kings.

"He just said 'Hold on for one more second.'" said Carr. "Coach got the five players that were on the floor all together and said 'God Bless You.'"

Lee hosts Abilene; Pack on road

Rebels can sniff a district pennant

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland Lee is right where they want to be in the District 5-5A baseball race. With two games left, the Rebels are 5-0 in the second half and one win will give them the championship.

If the Rebels should lose both games, they would still be involved in a playoff because Lee shared the first half title with Abilene High and Abilene Cooper. Cooper is out of the race with three second half loses while Abilene High has been beaten twice. The Eagles' future in the playoff picture will be determined when Lee comes calling for a 4 p.m. game Tuesday.

COACH ERNIE Johnson's crew is playing its best baseball of the season. The pitching has been sound, hitting excellent, and the fielding superb.

Randy Velarde and Alan Koonce have been the mainstays on the mound with relief help coming from Bill Dern and Randy Pepper. In the hitting department, the entire team has been hitting well. If one player isn't hitting, another seems to be there to give the team a lift. Early in the season Ron Smedley, Koonce, and Velarde were the big sticks. Of late, the big three have been getting their hits, but Dern, Pepper, Chris Parker, Barry Corley, Kevin Bradshaw, and Ricky Wright have come up with key blows.

Lee will be looking to sweep the season series against the Eagles. In the first half, Lee beat AHS 10-1 behind a combined one-hitter by Velarde and Pepper.

AT MIDLAND High the pressure is on. For the Purple Pack to have any chance at the district title, they must win all their remaining games and hope that Lee loses twice. An added handicap facing the Bulldogs is a makeup game with Big Sping on Thursday at Memorial Stadium field.

Before facing the Steers, the Bulldogs have a big game Tuesday at Memorial Stadium field with Abilene Cooper at 4 p.m. In the first half, Cooper whipped the Pack 14-12 despite 19 hits by the Dogs.

COACH TIM Whalen's club has developed a knack for coming from behind in its last three games. Saturday, the Dogs spotted Odeesa High a 5-0 lead, then stormed back for an 8-5 win.

MHS has finally gotten over the attitude problem that plagued them throughout the first half. The Purple Pack, who averaged seven errors a game in the first half, are now playing solid defense behind the gloves of Teddy Bartley, Eddie Portillo, Jerry Zackery, and Fabian Ramos in infield. The Pack is now averaging one error per outing. Also, the Dogs have been much more aggressive in the field, at bat, and on the bases.

Now, the Pack goes after ground balls with confidence, isn't afraid to wait for a good pitch, and is forcing mistakes by the opposition with aggressive base running. The net result of this aggressiveness has been a three-game winning streak.

Whalen and crew want to keep that string alive through three more games; Abilene Cooper Tuesday, Big Spring Thursday, and at Lee Saturday to close out the regular season. Even if the Pack should fail to win the district crown, the turn-around from the way they played in the first half has been refreshing. It is also something that MHS can build on for next season.

Billie Jean King offers to quit as WTA prexy

NEW YORK (AP) — Billie Jean King has offered to resign as president of the Women's Tennis Association and to bow out as a doubles partner for 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger in the wake of King's admission that she had a lesbian relationship with a former employee.

King told the New York Times in a story for Sunday's editions that she would quit her WTA post because "I don't want to hurt the players."

Despite the offer, King said her friends have supported her since she admitted Friday that she had been involved for a time in a relationship with Marilyn Barnett, a 32-year-old former hairdresser. Barnett filed suit earlier in the week, claiming she was entitled to part of King's property because of their relationship from 1972-79.

"The tennis women have been dynamite through all this," the 37-year-old King said. "Every one of them. I'm going to offer them whatever they want me to do as president. If they don't want me anymore, I can apreciate that fact. It's been a strain on them already, which really bothers me."

Durham's trees, pasture, silence hide football legend

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

Wallace Wade lives in northern Durham County surrounded by trees, pasture and silence. Nothing outside the home tips the visitor that a football coaching legend lives inside.

Only in Wade's study, perhaps when one sees the 8x10 frame holding a Time magazine with Wade on the cover, does one get an idea of what great feats Wade achieved while he walked the sidelines for Alabama and Duke before World War II.

Among the books on the shelf is a history of Alabama football and several thick volumes on the Tournament of Roses as well as the Rose Bowl game itself.

Wade knows very well about the Rose Bowl. He coached in five of them, played in one, and brought home three victories. He even arranged the 1941 game for Durham when Californians feared that the Japanese would follow up on their Pearl Harbor attack with a move on the West Coast.

WADE RELIES largely on a large television in the study to get perspective on college football these days, although he does go to Duke games in the fall.

Wade says college football has lost its character. It is now used just as a stepping stone to the National Football League, he says.

"A boy gets from high school football and he thinks about getting a scholarship," Wade said. "As soon as he gets to college, he begins to wonder where he's gonna be in the draft."

Football during his era was "an exercise to build character in young men," Wade says, who complains that the two-platoon system has moved that task to a secondary status.

"For instance, when you had to play both offense and defense, you had certain skills in one phase of the game or the other. Very few people came along who were outstanding in all phases of the game of football originally," Wade said.

"I think this two-team thing fails to develop the character in the boys," he adds, noting the case of Johnny Mack Brown, the legend of Tuscaloosa.

WADE SAID Brown was one of the best runners and pass receivers he had ever seen. But because of his lack of defensive prowess, Brown had to sit out his entire sophomore year.

Then came the Rose Bowl of 1926 against Washington. The Crimson Tide rallied from a two-touchdown deficit to take a 20-19 lead. Brown saved the day for 'Bama, but only because Brown's defensive skills had finally caught up with his offense.

"They had a great runner on that team, George Wilson, one of the finest runners I've seen," Wade said, adding that on the last play of game, Wilson was headed for paydirt with only Brown to stop him.

"There was our football game hanging on it. Knowing Brown's reputation as not having been a naturally good defensive player, you can imagine how I felt watching.

"Well, that Brown tackled right into him, head first, stopped him right there. That meant more to me than all the touchdowns Brown ever made," Wade adds.

WADE SAW six Rose Bowls in his football life, the first one as a player on the Brown team which lost by a 14-0 score to Washington State in 1916. He avenged that loss as a coach 15 years later when Alabama whipped the Cougars, 24-0.

Probably his most memorable Rose Bowl was the 1942 event staged in Durham, safe from the Japanese. With three weeks left before the game, Wade decided to take matters into his own hands.

"Finally, I went down to the administration. I suggested, 'Why don't we invite 'em to play here?'"

With their Tournament of Roses gone, any salvage effort was appreciated by the organizers in Pasadena.

"I told them we'll do the best we can and divide the gate receipts the way I consider to be fair. That's all the contract we had."

Wade wasn't convinced that the game would come off in Durham. But the night the Durham Rose Bowl was announced, Wade couldn't get a telephone call through to his home from nearby Greensboro.

"The operator said, 'We can get you through in three hours.' That's the first time I knew the thing had gone over," he said. The long-distance lines between Greensboro and Durham were jammed with callers ordering tickets for Jan. 1, 1942.

FOR THE most part, the game came off without a hitch. But Oregon State sneaked away with a 20-16 triumph.

The New Year's Day crowd of 56,000 ranks as the third largest ever to see Duke at home.

Wade's appearance in the Rose Bowl was his last coaching stint for the next four years. When he returned from Army service, he admits, the thrill was gone.

Although he suffered only one losing season in the last five years of his career, he gave up coaching in 1950 after a 7-3 record.

But if Wade could only take the field one more time, he'd tell the young men of today that they should get back to fundamentals. Forget the high-fives, the Super Bowl rings, the end-zone spikes.

"It can be more spectacular, perhaps. But after all, school and college football should be played for the benefit and development of the young men. Not to entertain the crowd."

Jays finally enjoy trip to Baltimore

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays were better to feast on in Baltimore than crab cakes as far as the Orioles were concerned, but the taste turned somewhat sour Sunday.

After dropping their last 19 games in Crabtown dating back to July 6, 1978, the Blue Jays finally ended the embarrassment with a 4-2 victory just three short of the consecutive-game record by one club at home over another. The Boston Red Sox won 22 in a row from the Philadelphia A's in 1949-50.

"It shows that if you keep showing up you've got a chance to win," said Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick.

Toronto's Mark Bomback retired the first 16 Baltimore batters before Gary Roenicke doubled. Al Bumbry then cracked a two-out homer to give the Orioles a 2-1 lead. The Blue Jays tied it in the seventh on singles by Garth Iorg and Alfredo Griffin, a force play and a passed ball by Dan Graham.

Willie Upshaw hit a tiebreaking leadoff homer in the eighth off Steve Stone, and the Blue Jays added another run on a walk, sacrifice, wild pitch and Jorge Bell's single.

Yankees 3-2, A's 2-0

Jim Spencer, who drove in his first run of the season with a double in the opener, broke up a scoreless nightcap with a seventh-inning homer, his first, off Brian Kingman as the Yankees slowed down the red-hot A's. New York won the opener on Jerry Mumphrey's 10th-inning leadoff homer off Steve McCatty while reliever Ron Davis, the winner, struck out all five Oakland batters he faced to end the game.

In the first game, Rudy May and Davis combined for 14 strikeouts. Tommy John went eight innings-plus in the nightcap, allowing five hits. He was relieved after walking the leadoff batter in the ninth, and Rich Gossage posted his sixth save, allowing one hit and striking out the side.

White Sox 6, Indians 0

Richard Dotson tossed a five-hitter and Chicago collected 15 hits as the White Sox snapped a four-game losing streak and handed the Indians only their second loss in 11 games. Dotson walked two, struck out three and allowed only two runners to reach scoring position.

The White Sox scored the only run Dotson needed in the second inning on an RBI single by Jim Morrison and made it 2-0 in the fourth when Ron LeF-lore's single scored Tony Bernazard, who singled and moved to second on one of Bill Almon's three hits.

Brewers 4, Angels 3

Larry Hisle doubled with two out in the sixth inning to drive in a run and then scored the eventual winning run on Don Money's single. Hisle's double off loser Steve Renko scored Robin Yount, who led off with a single and advaned to second on Ben Oglivie's fly ball. Hisle moved to third on Gorman Thomas' infield hit and scored on a single by Money for a 4-1 lead. Mike Caldwell allowed five hits, including solo homers by Rick Burleson and Don Baylor, before needing help from Rollie Fingers in the ninth.

Rangers 9, Royals 8

Pat Putnam clubbed a 10th-inning leadoff home run off Juan Berenguer to cap a Texas comeback. The Rangers, who led 3-0 early in the game against Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff, trailed 8-5 but erupted for three runs to tie the the game in the eighth inning, the runs coming on a double by Putnam and singles by Bill Stein and Bump Wills. Texas starter Ferguson Jenkins was cruising along with a 3-0 lead until the sixth, when Kansas City batted around, scoring seven times, capped by Cesar Geronimo's two-run homer.

Twins 3, Red Sox 1

Pete Redfern and Doug Corbett combined on a four-hitter as Minnesota completed a four-game sweep, nailing down the victory with two unearned runs off rookie Steve Crawford in the third inning. Sal Butera led off with the first of his three walks. He took second as John Castino grounded to first for the second out.

Mickey Hatcher singled over second and Butera was trapped after rounding third but catcher Gary Allenson dropped the ball in the rundown and Butera got back to third, with Hatcher reaching second. After Roy Smalley walked, Adams poked a single to shallow right-center, extending Boston's losing streak since 1977 to seven games.

Tigers 8, Mariners 5

Detroit came from behind with five unearned runs in the seventh inning after Seattle had taken a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the sixth on a three-run pinch homer by Gary Gray. The Tigers scored seven unearned runs all told as Seattle committed three errors and two passed balls. Al Cowens tied the score with a single, Kirk Gibson walked with the bases loaded to force in the winning run and Stan Papi's singled home two insurance runs.

Minnesota Stars take 2-1 edge

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Steve Christoff's goal early in the third period helped lift Minnesota to a 6-4 triumph over Calgary Sunday night and gave the North Stars a 2-1 edge in their National Hockey League semifinal playoff series with the Flames.

The best-of-seven series resumes Tuesday night at the Met Center, with the fifth game shifting back to Calgary Thursday night.

Calgary pulled its goalie with 1:32 remaining but was unable to get the equalizer despite constant pressure. Bobby Smith picked up a loose puck at center ice and scored an empty-net goal with 23 seconds left.

Calgary tied the game late in the second period when Bill Clement fired from close range. The puck narrowly slid between Meloche's arm and the left post and trickled into the net at 17:40.

Gold Sox top Dodgers

By The Associated Press

Amarillo edged San Antonio, 10-9, in Sunday's only Texas League action besides the game at Midland as Joe Lansford and John Alvarez had solo homers for the Gold Sox and Mike Zouras had a three-run homer for the Dodgers.

Randy Miller was the winning pitcher. Rich Rodas was the loser.

No. 6 is a little tougher

Valenzuela goes extra innings to beat Expos

By The Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela has been doing it all for the Los Angeles Dodgers this season ... well, practically everything.

On Sunday, the Dodgers' rookie pitching sensation needed some extra-inning help from his teammates to bag yet another victory, a 6-1, 10-inning triumph over the Montreal Expos.

"This one was a little tougher than the rest of them," said Valenzuela after winning his sixth straight game. "It may look easy out there, but it's very difficult."

It was the first time that Valenzuela failed to finish a game this season. In five previous starts, the left-hander from Mexico pitched four shutouts and allowed but one run in the other game.

Against the Expos, the 20-year-old pitcher gave up only five hits and one run and left after nine innings with the game tied 1-1. The Dodgers then salvaged the victory for him with a five-run 10th keyed by Reggie Smith's tie-breaking single and a spotless inning of relief pitching by Steve Howe.

"All of my teammates have been great," said Valenzuela through an interpreter. "They've helped me both on and off the field. They played great behind me, and my wins are their wins."

The Expos were generally impressed with their first look at the chunky southpaw.

"Every time he wanted to throw a strike today, he could do it," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

Catcher Gary Carter: "He's not afraid to throw breaking pitches when he's behind. Our scouting reports said he was like Randy Jones of the Mets, but Jones doesn't have Valenzuela's fastball."

Smith, pinch-hitting for Valenzuela in the 10th, drove home Pepe Frias from second with the Dodgers' go-ahead run.

Valenzuela had stretched his streak of scoreless innings to 35 2-3 before the Expos scored only the second earned run allowed this season by the left-hander to tie the game in the eighth. The run came home on a single by Chris Speier.

Cardinals 5, Reds 4

St. Louis beat Cincinnati as reliever Tom Hume walked Darrell Porter on four straight pitches with two out and the bases loaded in the 11th. Reliever Joe Edelen gained his first major league victory for the Cardinals, who have now won 11 of their last 12 games.

Giants 7, Phillies 5

Mike Schmidt's second home run of the game, a seventh-inning solo blast, led Philadelphia over San Francisco. Dick Ruthven was the winner with eighth-inning relief help from Tug McGraw, who gained his second save.

Schmidt's homers, his seventh and eighth of the year, drove in three runs for the Phillies and marked the 26th time in his career that he had hit two in a game. Schmidt was obviously not disturbed by a special shift devised by Giants Manager Frank Robinson, who put three infielders between second and third for the Phillies' slugger.

Astros 3, Pirates 1

Don Sutton scattered five hits over seven innings and collected three walks himself to help Houston beat Pittsburgh. Two of the passes to Sutton figured in the Astro scoring, including a bases-loaded walk in the second.

Sutton left the game for a pinch-hitter in the top of the eighth. Dave Smith recorded his third save after pitching out of a ninth-inning jam.

Braves 9, Cubs 7

Chris Chambliss drove in four runs, three on a homer to key a five-run fifth, to help Atlanta beat Chicago. Trailing 6-1, the Braves tied it in the fifth and went ahead to stay in the sixth on Chambliss' RBI groundout.

Padres 4-4, Mets 1-7

Rick Wise and Gary Lucas combined on a six-hitter, Dave Edwards hit a solo home run and Ozzie Smith drove in two more runs as San Diego beat New York in the opener of their doubleheader.

Joel Youngblood's three-run homer in the seventh, his fourth hit of the game, keyed the Mets' second-game victory. The veteran outfielder, unhappy in his role as a reserve, also had three singles and a walk for a perfect day.

Tanana, Jones, Sutter, now Fernando

Frank Tanana gave the Midland Cubs fits when he was pitching in El Paso back in the early 1970s. Randy Jones won two games in one week and was called up to the majors and two years later was a Cy Young winner.

Bruce Sutter's split-finger fastball was the key to Midland's pennant drive in 1975 and in 1979 he also was a Cy Young winner.

Now, along comes Fernando Valenzuela, known to envious disbelievers (and their aren't many to be found) as "Fat Freddie" and he may be the best of all.

The portly Mexican, who was described as "19 going on 24" by his San Antonio Dodger teammates last year, has taken the U.S. like Pancho Villa once tried to. There are more stories stocked piled in the R-T computer bank than there is gold in Fort Knox.

EVERYBODY is talking and writing about the Los Angeles Dodgers' rookie sensation.

Valenzuela made it six in a row Sunday and surprised a lot of folks by displaying a touch of mere mortality by giving up a run to the Expos and actually requiring relief help...in the 10th inning.

Valenzuela pitched in the Texas League last year...and really wasn't all that great. His three-hitter at Cubs Stadum in late August propelled the native of Sonora to the majors, but admit it, before that he wasn't all that devastating.

AGAINST MIDLAND he was 2-2 for the year. In early season appearances here, he hardly frightened any hitters. The first time out, he gave up six earned runs in 2 2/3 innings. The next time he was combed for five earned runs. He was clubbed around one another time in a no decision appearance.

He left the Texas League with a 13-9 record, but at one point was 6-9. So what happened to change Valenzuela from the kind of pitcher that made ailing bats suddenly healthy to the kind who prompted an epidemic of tummy aches the day he was scheduled to pitch?

"That's right, he wasn't that tough early in the year," recalls Midland outfielder Tom Grant. "He wasn't throwing his screwball back then. Oh, he threw it, but it was a waste pitch."

Cub shortstop Dave Owen agrees, "You'd usually see that screwball when he was ahead 3-1. Later he used it as his out pitch."

THE SCREWBALL was something taught Fernando by Bobby Castillo and once he got confidence in it, he was 7-0 and didn't allow an earned run in his final 35 innings in the TL.

He was just as tough the final month of the season in the National League, 2-0 and 0.00 ERA in 17 2/3 innings as a reliefer. Some Dodgers feel that if he had started the playoff game with the Houston, Los Angeles would have played Philadelphia in the post-season championship series.

Perhaps the wonder of it all is that Valenzuela was ever discovered in the first place. Down in Etchohuaquila, Mexico, he was just another Valenzuela on th baseball team that had 18. As the youngest of 12 Valenzuelas, he's the one that always got stuck in right field.

BY THE time he was 13, he had, believe it or not, gotten lanky, a natural for first base.

He was just another pitcher until he learned the screwball, which oldtimers say is the best since Carl Hubbell, the marvel of it being that Fernando mastered practically overnight what it took the King years to control.

After losing to Valenzuela recently, Don Sutton said of the pitcher who it turns out made him expendable to the Dodgers, "We've got to find a way to get this guy into the American League."

Martin miffed over Yankees' Sunday sweep

OAKLAND (AP) — Billy Martin had a dig for just about everybody after his Oakland A's, who carried a 20-3 record into Sunday's doubleheader, lost twice to the New York Yankees.

"I'm not satisfied because we split the series. If I thought we were playing an awesome ballclub, I might feel that way, but they're not awesome," said the A's manager.

Dave Winfield, batting as a pinch hitter, drove in the other run in the nightcap with a checked-swing single in the eighth.

"I can't believe the Yankees are paying anyone $23 million who hits that soft. Winfield didn't show me anything in the whole series," said Martin. "I understand he's a nice guy, but he's got the softest bat I've ever seen for someone 6-foot-6."

Winfield was undisturbed by Martin's appraisal of his talent, which Yankees owner George Steinbrenner paid so much for over the winter.

One of Martin's own hitters, Dave Revering, was the target of the manager's post-game barbs, too. Revering pinch hit in the ninth inning of the first game with two runners on base and one out.

"Ron Davis threw three fastballs right down the middle of the plate and struck him out. I thought he was a better hitter than that. Maybe I sent the wrong guy up. Maybe it was my fault we lost," said the manager.
