■ MISD cancels today's classes in DeZavala building.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Two DeZavala Elementary School students were transported to a Midland hospital and the school was evacuated after a student brought a small amount of mercury to school and part of it spilled Thursday.

A 13-year-old girl and a 12-year-old girl were treated and released Thursday at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after one of the girls brought four ounces of mercury to school. School officials did not release the names of the students, because the girls' parents had not yet been notified.

Midland Independent School District officials made the decision late Thursday night to cancel classes in the DeZavala building today. However, buses running from the school to other cluster schools will be running on schedule.

Students who attend classes at the DeZavala building will resume their regular schedules after spring break.

DeZavala Assistant Principal Roland Moreland said the incident started with one girl's innocent curiousity of the element.

"Apparently, she was just curious about it," he said. "I mean, we all play with mercury when we are kids — you know, breaking a thermometer and seeing what happens. But, while they were playing with it, it got on the carpet in some classrooms and tracked in the halls."

Moreland said the girls told school officials what they had done when one of the

Jobless benefjts

WASHINGTON — President Clinton signed a $5.7 billion emergency jobless benefits bill Thursday that was rushed through Congress to avoid a cutoff of assistance. The measure also imposes a pay freeze on Congress. The measure extends through Oct. 2 a program that gives jobless Americans up to another six months of assistance once they've exhausted their standard 26 weeks of benefits./1D

Spring to break

Spring break for students attending Midland public schools begins Monday. Classes will resume Monday, March 15.

Traffic update

Midland residents are being reminded that making a U turn on Main Street to enter the parking lot of the post office and federal court building is illegal. Officers will be patroling that area today and will be watching motorists for the next several days to ensure they don't make an illegal turn.

Fina explosion

BIG SPRING — Investigators think a gas leak possibly caused the series of explosions and fire that engulfed the Fina Refinery's reformer unit, a company official said Thursday. About 200 people were inside the refinery when the explosions occurred at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, said Fina administrative manager Paul Hinton. A firefighter suffere d heat stress and a contract worker who inhaled gas fumes remained hospitalized in good condition Thursday, Hinton said. The blaze burned itself out in about four hours.

FBI cracks bomb case

AP Laserphoto

FBI agents investigating the World Trade Center bombing told local police that the suspect arrested earlier Thursday is a member of the Al Salam Mosque in Jersey City, N.J, which is linked to Islamic militants.

■ Investigators charge New Jersey man described as an Islamic fundamentalist.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A man described as a follower of a radical Muslim cleric was arrested Thursday in last week's World Trade Center bombing when he coolly tried a third time to reclaim a rental deposit on the van determined to have housed the bomb.

Other suspects were being sought in what prosecutor Gilmore Childres called "the single most destructive act of terrorism ever committed on American soil." The motive remained unclear.

"This investigation clearly is not finished, but a large first step has been taken," James Fox, FBI chief in New York, said at a news briefing Thursday night.

Mohammed A. Salameh, 25, was charged with aiding and abetting the bombing and a fire that followed, and with transportation of explosives across state lines. The Jersey City, N.J., resident was ordered held without bail and faces life in prison if convicted. A hearing was set for March 18.

The arrest was a sudden, major break in the most notorious U.S. bombing in years. Just a day earlier, the FBI had said it could take months to crack the case.

The van Salameh rented was the one that carried the bomb, FBI Agent Thomas G. Donlon said in an affidavit filed with the court. Charred fragments of the Ford Econoline E-350 van — including an axle with a traceable identification number — were recovered at the blast site.

The affidavit also said a search of a Jersey City apartment with a bomb-sniffing dog turned up bomb-making equipment including wiring and man-

Trail of mangled metal leads to suspect

By Robert Dvorchak
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — It began with with a scorched, mangled chunk of metal retrieved Wednesday from the bowels of the gutted basement of the World Trade Center.

The fragment — an axle from a rented van — carried a telltale identification tag. That, along with a parking stub and a rental contract and a man stubbornly wanting his security deposit back, led investigators to a suspect a week after a bloody bombing.

The real breakthrough came when agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms found part of a vehicle identification number from the axle of a yellow Ford Econoline E-350 van. The van, with Alabama license plate XA70668, was rented from a Ryder Truck Rental Inc. shop in Jersey City, N.J.

"Sometimes the smallest, most insignificant piece of evidence can be that big break you need in the case," said ATF spokesman Jerry Singer. "That vehicle identification number was like

Standoff near Waco enters Day 6

By Don Terry
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — Another child was released Thursday in the stubborn standoff between hundreds of federal agents and a religious cult near here. But the recovery of a man's body still clutching a semi-automatic weapon was a grim reminder of the fierce gun battle that started it all.

Twenty children have been released since the standoff began on Sunday, first in small groups and, for the last 48 hours, one a day. But as many as 18 more children are believed to remain inside the group's besieged compound, surrounded by hundreds of federal agents, Texas Rangers, military helicopters and armored personnel carriers.

Federal officials said this slow trickle to freedom was a positive sign that the almost around-the-clock negotiations between the authorities and the heavily armed cult were making progress. Getting the children out is a priority.

"It's a very tedious process," Jeffrey Jamar, the FBI agent in charge of the government force, said at a news conference here.

The standoff began after a fierce, 45-minute gun

Construction crew cancels family-planning clinic deal

FBI agents raid 50 telephone sales businesses in 12 states

■ More National news/8a

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI raided more than 50 businesses in 12 states and the District of Columbia on Thursday in what law enforcement officials described as the biggest crackdown ever against telephone sales swindlers.

As of 4 p.m., some 800 FBI agents involved in a three-year undercover investigation of telemarketing fraud had arrested 116 people in raids on 53 locations where the telephone pitches were made, a bureau spokeswoman said.

FBI Director William Sessions said the investigation had identified 548 individuals involved in 123 illegal telemarketing operations across the country. At least 240 arrests were expected, officials said.

"By the time this investigation is concluded, we expect to find victims in virtually every state in the union," Sessions said. "The tragic dimension is . . . that the largest category of victims are the elderly, those who may be least able to recover from financial losses."

Acting Attorney General Stuart Gerson, a Bush administration holdover until President Clinton gets his nominee for the job in place, said consumers are being conned out of billions of dollars a year through the fraudulent offers.

The raids were conducted on telemarketing operations in Washington; Baltimore; Atlanta; Chicago; Detroit; Las Vegas; Salt Lake City; Phoenix; Los Angeles; San Diego; Dallas, Houston; New Orleans; Buffalo and Albany, N.Y.; Miami; Tampa, and Jacksonville, Fla.

Billed as "Operation Disconnect," the investigation began in Salt Lake City with FBI agents posing as sales representatives for a company that leased one-of-a-kind computerized automatic dialing systems. It was so effective in learning the details of the operations that the same tactic was utilized in the 17 other cities, Sessions said.

Most of the schemes, officials said, involved con artists calling people by phone and saying they were eligible to enter some sweepstakes or had already won a prize: The victims, however, were then told they had to pay a service fee or purchase something through a credit card, check or money order in advance in order to collect the prize, or were lured into buying an item much more expensive.

The most popular offers involved discount coupons, vacation packages, credit and debit cards, automotive service, small business loans, investment and employment opportunities.

USDA tightens standards for beef

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has toughened inspection standards for beef carcasses in response to an outbreak of food poisoning from bacterially contaminated ground beef, it said Thursday.

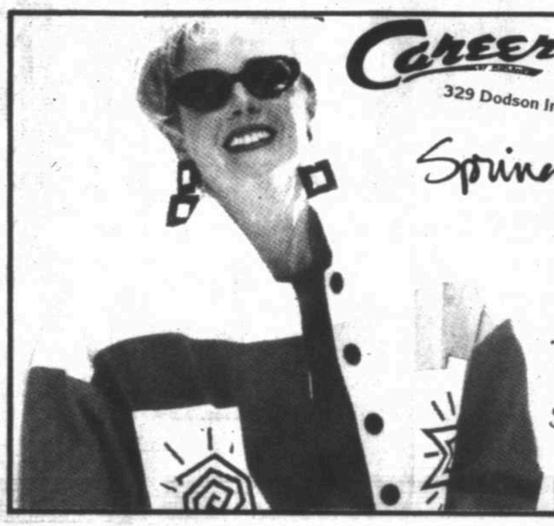

In a memo issued earlier this week, the Food Safety and Inspection Service told meat inspectors and plant operators that no level of contamination by feces or undigested food would be allowed on carcasses or boneless beef.

Previously, a certain number of "specks" of contamination were allowed, said Jim Greene, an FSIS spokesman. "We did allow extremely small amounts," he said. "That's because it's practically impossible to guarantee a carcass that's entirely free."

The memo also said that all contamination with feces, milk or undigested food must be cut from the carcass before it can be washed. Previously, inspectors could try to hose off contamination. But critics said the water pressure could imbed the contaminated material in the carcass.

Feces, milk and undigested food can carry E. coli bacteria, a form of which caused an outbreak of food poisoning in January on the West Coast.

Is Your Child Too Small?

Growing up always has its hazards, but for some children just the process of growing can be difficult. For these children, a normal growth rate does not occur because they lack an essential hormone.

By three years of age, children should grow at least two inches a year until they are 10 to 14 years of age, when they experience an even faster growth. If children are not growing at this rate and are smaller than children their own age, they may have hormone deficiencies.

Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital is offering a FREE Growth Screening for children. By taking an accurate measurement of height. We can determine if their height is normal for their age group. And, if below normal, further evaluation and assessment will be recommended.

Serbs step up 'ethnic cleansing' in eastern Bosnia, officials say

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — U.N. and Bosnian officials accused Serbs Thursday of stepping up their "ethnic cleansing" campaign in eastern Bosnia, as new allegations surfaced of Serbs slaughtering and raping Muslim refugees.

Serb commanders, who have devastated Muslim enclaves in a four-day offensive near U.S. airdrop sites, called the charges of atrocities "wrong and malicious" and reportedly promised their foes safe passage out of the embattled region.

But it was apparently a one-way offer. The Bosnian Serb army command in Zvornik, according to a statement reported by the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug, vowed Muslims and Serbs "will not live together ever again."

In the capital Sarajevo, a sniper targeting an aid convoy near the airport killed a French woman from the Equilibre relief organization and injured two Polish aid workers, said U.N. peacekeepers' spokesman Barry Frewer.

At the United Nations, Bosnia Serb leader Radovan Karadzic rejected a plan to place heavy weapons under U.N. control once a comprehensive peace agreement is signed.

U.N. officials considered the weapons accord — signed Wednesday by Bosnia's Muslim-led government and by the Serbs and Croats in January — as an important step in the beleaguered peace effort.

There were continued reports of Serb atrocities in the war-torn region around Cerska and Konjevic Polje, but they were impossible to confirm. Serbs have barred access to the region after routing thousands of Muslims from their homes this week and burning their villages.

The Security Council on Wednesday night demanded a halt to the tank-led offensive and urged U.N. forces to be sent to the region to protect civilians.

About 10,000 Muslim refugees cowered cold and hungry on Thursday in the ruins of Konjevic Polje, U.N. officials said.

About 500 refugees from Cerska reached nearby Muslim-held Srebrenica, and some accused advancing Serb troops of slaughter and rape.

"There is little doubt that Serb forces, by their current offensives, are intensifying ethnic cleansing," U.N. human rights envoy Tadeusz Mazowiecki said in a letter to the U.N. Human Rights Commission.

"There are accounts of massacres of civilians, burning of homes and attacks on refugees trying to flee the area," the former Polish premier said.

Bosnian Deputy President Ejup Ganic also called the Serb assault a blatant example of "intensified ethnic cleansing" — the policy of killing or expelling one ethnic group by another to consolidate control of conquered territory.

U.N. officials were negotiating with Serb commanders at Sarajevo airport for access to besieged Muslim areas in order to evacuate wounded.

According to Tanjug, Serb army commanders in Zvornik proclaimed all Muslims around Konjevic Polje could "safely leave the war-torn regions."

High near 60, sun on tap

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 60 and north winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 32, Thursday's high reached 59, compared to the record high for that date of 85 set in 1938. The record low was 11 set in 1989.

STATE

Conditions were mostly dry, windy and mild over Texas on Thursday, but northerly winds were ushering cooler air into the state.

Winds of 10 to 20 mph were reported in many cities, with higher gusts at some locations.

Despite the cooling breezes, temperatures rose into the 50s over the northern half of the state and into the 60s farther south. Sunshine was abundant.

The National Weather Service said temperatures in the 50s and 60s can be expected again today and through the weekend.

Temperatures in the 70s were reported in South Texas on Thursday.

A large low-pressure system over the northeast United States provided South Texas with winds from the north and northeast, gusty at times.

The weather service said lows today in South Texas should range from the 30s to the 50s, warming to the 60s and 70s as clouds dissipate.

Isolated rainshowers were reported Thursday in the Permian Basin of West Texas. Low clouds covered the Panhandle and South Plains. Winds were 20 to 30 mph on the South Plains.

Mid-afternoon temperatures Thursday in West Texas ranged from the 40s in the mountains of far West Texas to the 50s and 60s elsewhere. The extremes were 43 at Amarillo and 64 at Sanderson.

NATION

An intense low pressure system spread heavy rain and high wind across parts of the East on Thursday, causing scattered lowland flooding and threatening heavy snow from Ohio into New England. Another storm soaked the Northwest.

A large area of rain blanketed the middle Atlantic Coast states during the afternoon with a mixture of rain and sleet moving into parts of the northern Atlantic states, the National Weather Service said. Rain and snow fell over parts of the Ohio Valley.

Heavy rain was reported over sections of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Minor flooding from up to 2 inches of rain closed roads and schools across West Virginia and 67 mph wind tore roofs from Preston County homes and businesses.

Ice and up to 6 inches of snow caused traffic problems at higher elevations of West Virginia, the weather service said. About 4,000 Monongahela Power Co. customers were without electrical service Thursday in the northern part of the state, said spokesman Russ Lorince.

Between 2 and 3 inches of rain fell overnight over much of Virginia with 3 to 4 inches over the west-central part of the state.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

students read in an encyclopedia that mercury could be deadly.

Both girls were transported to the hospital and school officials notified the Midland Fire Department. The school was evacuated shortly after 1 p.m.

"We evacuated in stages," said Battalion Chief Eddie Klatt. "We immediately got students out of the classrooms in the southwest corner, where they knew there was mercury. Then it was discovered in the north wing, so we evacuated there. Eventually, all students left the school. It was all very orderly and done quickly."

Klatt said mercury was found in two, possibly three classrooms, and in the halls.

Klatt said workers from Eco-Logical Environmental Services Inc. were called to the school to clean up the mercury.

"Basically, we will vaccuum the spills up and then lay solution to absorb the mercury," said project manager Terry James. "Then, we will vaccuum up that solution and bring in a mercury meter and measure for any mercury vapors."

James said there was not enough mercury to have caused a serious health problem, but officials wanted to get rid of any long-term contamination.

"We just want to make sure we get all the mercury out of the school before the kids come back in," James said.

CASE: Agents arrest suspect in bombing

uals on circuitry and electromagnetic devices. On the rental agreement Salameh had given the phone number for that apartment; it wasn't immediately clear whether he lived there.

Salameh, in federal court in New York City on Thursday night, appeared relaxed as an interpreter read the charges to him in Arabic. "Why?" he asked his attorney repeatedly. The court-appointed defense lawyer, Robert Precht, asked unsuccessfully that bail be set at $5 million.

Papers that the suspect presented the rental agency several days ago were covered with nitrates, a government source, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press. Nitrates are found in some explosives; traces of nitrates were found at the blast site.

Last Friday's blast in a garage beneath the twin towers killed five people, injured more than 1,000, left one missing and sent fear through the nation's largest city. It caused a crater four stories deep. The 110-story towers — the world's second-tallest buildings, home to hundreds of businesses more than 50,000 workers — aren't expected to reopen for a month.

One law enforcement source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday the attack could have been in retaliation for the Persian Gulf War. The bombing came on the second anniversary of the U.S. ouster of Iraq's army from Kuwait. But a Clinton administration source said evidence of Mideast terrorist involvement was "iffy."

The arrest came after an army of investigators spent the past week combing through piles of rubble at the blast site, fielding thousands of phone calls and pursuing scores of leads. Detectives systematically checked garage payment stubs and viewed videotapes of entering vehicles.

The suspect had rented the van from a Ryder truck agent in Jersey City on Feb. 23 and returned less than two hours after the explosion last Friday afternoon to say it had been stolen from him in Jersey City, said Paul Mascitelli, owner of a car dealership that shares an office with the Ryder agent.

The man wanted his $400 cash deposit back but was told he would need a police report of the theft, Mascitelli said. He said the suspect returned Monday without the police report and again was turned away.

On Thursday morning, the man called the Ryder office — and spoke with an FBI agent posing as a Ryder official, said Patrick Galasso, the truck rental agent.

"He didn't have a clue as to what was going on," Galasso said. "He thought he was talking to a Ryder rep."

The man returned to the rental office, was given $200 back, and was arrested by eight to 10 agents as he left the office, Galasso said.

"He didn't want to give up that $400. He just wanted that money," Galasso added.

The man was accompanied by another man when he rented the truck, but was alone on subsequent visits, Galasso said. He said he didn't remember what the second man looked like.

Both Mascitelli and Galasso said the suspect didn't behave nervously in any way. Mascitelli described him as short and frail with a beard and a thick accent.

The suspect was affiliated with the Masjid al-Salam Mosque in Jersey City, N.J., where Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman preaches, a Jersey City official said, citing reports from FBI agents to city police.

Abdel-Rahman, 54, is a blind Muslim cleric living in self-imposed exile in New Jersey after his acquittal a decade ago in Egypt on charges that he sanctioned the 1981 assassination of President Anwar Sadat.

The cleric commands a following in Egypt that analysts compare to that of the late Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran.

TRAIL: Fragment carried identification tag

a signature on an envelope."

As a matter of routine, the van and specific parts had been marked with vehicle identification numbers and serial numbers that can help police trace it back in case of theft.

The axle and shards of metal were found on a ramp on the second underground level of the 110-story skyscraper, directly under the Vista Hotel. It was reminsicent of the sleuth work done on Pan Am Flight 103 after it exploded over Scotland in 1988.

From the way the metal was fragmented and twisted, ATF agents figured the van contained the explosive that jolted the world's second-tallest buildings.

The FBI, using a police computer network that tracks stolen cars, traced the serial numbers to a van rented from DIB Leasing Inc. in Jersey City.

Agents went there Wednesday night. They were told a man named Mohammed Salameh, 26, of Jersey City had rented the van on Feb. 23 and reported it stolen on Feb. 26 — the day of the blast and the second anniversary of the liberation of Kuwait City in the Persian Gulf War.

Part of the paper trail included a parking stub from the World Trade Center lot that included a portion of the license number of the rented van. Officials said attendants routinely write down license numbers on rental stubs for security reasons.

Salameh, a slightly built man with a closely cropped brown beard and an accent, used his own name and paid cash for a one-week rental — $200 up front and a $200 deposit. For identification, he used a New York driver's license that listed his New Jersey address.

The van was capable of carrying a 2,000-pound load, or about the contents of a two-bedroom apartment, Ryder officials said.

They said Salameh was accompanied by another man when he rented the vehicle but was alone on return trips.

When he asked for his money back, he was told he needed a police report on the stolen van.

"He told me the truck had been stolen from his possession. He wanted his deposit back," said Patrick Galasso, owner of the rental agency.

Salameh reported the theft to the Jersey City police, then returned Monday and turned in his original rental agreement. A government source speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press that the FBI checked the agreement for fingerprints and found traces of nitrate, an ingredient in explosives which also was found at the blast site.

Salameh telephoned Thursday morning, insisting on his money, and then returned to get the refund. This time, FBI agents were in the office. One agent posed as a Ryder official and asked Salameh about the supposed theft of the van outside a Shop Rite supermarket in Jersey City.

"He didn't have a clue as to what was going on," Galasso said. "He thought he was talking to a Ryder rep. He just wanted that money."

Salameh signed a paper stating that he had rented the vehicle, was given his $200 and went on his way. As he was about to board a bus, he was arrested at 10:05 a.m. by 8 to 10 federal agents wearing gray uniforms and carrying machine guns.

Agents with search dogs later checked the apartment rented by Josie Hadas and listed by Salameh as his contact address for the rental agency. They found a letter addressed to Salameh as well as bomb-making materials including tools, wiring and manuals concerning antennae, circuitry and electromagnetic devices. A police dog trained in sniffing out explosives also reacted to a closet.

ALCOHOL: Chain tries to halt sales to minors

ately dismissed," said Kenny Dresel, director of advertising and marketing research, at a news conference on Thursday.

As part of the crackdown, all employees must ask for identification from anyone appearing to be 30 years or younger. Previous policy required the check for those under 25 years old.

Furthermore, if someone of legal age purchases alcohol with a group of minors, the youngsters will be carded as well.

Those measures will supplement the chain's pre-existent two-day in-house training and the mandatory Alcohol Sellers program.

Dresel also asks the public to become involved by reporting any believed sale of alcohol to minors at a Kent Kwik by calling 1-800-375-5368.

Kent Kwik's action was prompted by a special grand jury report that described rampant alcohol abuse by Midland's youth and easy access to alcoholic beverages.

About two weeks later, a Reporter-Telegram investigation showed that a local teen-ager was able to purchase alcohol without identification at six out of seven stores approached.

One of the stores that sold alcohol was a Kent Kwik. As a result, one employee was fired and another quit.

"It is apparent that our community has a problem with minors having access to alcoholic beverages," Dresel said.

"As with any problem, only after staring it in the face and admitting it exists can we continue on a path to overcome it," he said.

Kent Kwik's pro-active response was applauded by City Council member Claudia Egan, who heads Project Aware, a community task force created as a result of the special grand jury report.

"I could do flips. I'm so happy they're taking a real strong stand," said Ms. Egan, who attended the news conference.

Ms. Egan also commended Kent Kwik for challenging other retailers to take more preventive measures.

Jodie McCarthy, region major for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, also recognized the efforts of the convenience store chain and the problem of sales to the underage.

"I think the problems are uniform statewide," he added.

CANCELS: Construction company pulls out

ened to retaliate against the construction company.

He said he was told that the project was pulled because of pressure from the church Coats attends.

"We had nothing to do with that part. We only made a public protest and prayed that they would drop the contract," Estrada said.

Larry Jackson, owner of TMI Mechanical Inc., said his company canceled their permit after learning the construction company pulled out.

"We're not allowed to work without building permits being in place. Without them, our contract was void," he said.

Estrada said he will call for a boycott of any contractor who accepts the $55,000 job.

"If you believe it's murder. You got to do what you got to do," he said. "It will be interesting to see what happens. Money is very powerful."

He said that he will encourage anyone building an addition to hire Coats' firm.

"We are very pleased with Mr. Coats. I know several of our parishioners called him and told him what a great thing it is that he has done," Estrada said.

Jane Hellinghausen, director of Community Services for Planned Parenthood, said the organization remains undaunted.

"We certainly plan to continue on our push to bring this service to West Texas. It is a legal service and should be available here," she said. "There are a lot of women — 4,000 a year — who need this service." She said many of those women can't afford to travel out of town to receive abortions.

Estrada said a local abortion clinic would be a "stain, a curse" on the community.

"That money is blood money. God can't bless that. We will do what we can to stop it," he said.

The clinic, which had been closed for remodeling since December, was scheduled to reopen in mid-March. Other services offered at the clinic include prenatal care, family planning and screening for cancer and diabetes.

STANDOFF: 20 children have been released battle between federal agents and cult members Sunday morning. Four agents were killed in what one agent described as a "hail" of bullets.

An unknown number of cult members are also believed to have been killed in the raid, their bodies scattered around the compound.

On Thursday, Jamar said that federal agents, using at least two armored personnel carriers for protection, recovered the body of an unidentified white man, lying about 350 yards behind the compound's fort-like building. The dead man was clutching a semi-automatic pistol in his hand.

Agents also were searching the area for clues as to the man's identity, but it appears he was a member of the cult. Dan Conroy of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the man had been shot, but refused to provide further details.

At least three cult members are also believed to have been wounded in the raid.

Both boys released from the compound over the last two days have been turned over to the state's Department of Children's Protective Services, as were the 18 other children released. The children are the sons and daughters of cult members.

Jamar said the talks with those inside the compound have been slow and sometimes dense, and are being conducted in the same fashion as hostage negotiations. Federal negotiators have been working in shifts and have spent considerable time in long discussions with the cult members about religion and readings of Scripture.

Jamar said experts on religion were assisting the FBI in interpreting some of the conversations so "we can understand it."

"The idea is to communicate," he said. "They are doing that."

Over time, the pace of the negotiations have picked up. Two days ago, the cult's leader, David Koresh, seemed to be using the children as poker chips, freeing a handful after the authorities agreed to broadcast a recorded statement by him over the radio. Koresh also promised to surrender but broke his word. The tape was carried out of the compound by one of the children.

But on Thursday, Jamar said the negotiators were not bargaining with the group for the release of the children, who, so far, have ranged in age from 3 months to 12 years.

"It's not a bartering situation," Jamar said. "It's a matter that they agree together that the children should come out."

On Tuesday, when a group of children was released, two women in their 70s voluntarily left the compound and walked into federal custody. They were charged with murder and attempted murder in a wide-ranging federal complaint.

Correction

A letter from Greenwood Independent School District Superintendent Quentin S. Burnett, published in the Feb. 28th Reporter-Telegram, inadvertently omitted two lines from the second paragraph.

That paragraph should have read, "Despite detractors and gloom-and-doom proclaimers, passage of this constitutional amendment is the only proposal the Legislature has endorsed that will satisfy the judge overseeing the public school court case. Failure of the constitutional amendment will most likely result in the judge halting the flow of state monies to public schools. In addition, legislative leaders, such as House Education Chairperson Libby Linebarger, have said that if the amendment fails, then the other options are massive school district consolidation and/or a personal income tax."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Marine faces court-martial hearing on use of excessive force

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The courtroom had been hastily slapped together, the desks were beaten and dented, and the visitors' chairs were a couple of inverted desk drawers. C-130 transport planes drowned out the testimony as they revved up on the runway just outside the door. But there was nothing casual about the proceedings.

Marine Gunnery Sgt. Harry Conde, 33, sat on his chair, shifting nervously, the first American serviceman in Somalia to face a military hearing on charges of using excessive force, in this case the shooting and wounding of two Somali teenagers in early February.

Although Conde's case does not involve a death, unlike that of another Marine sergeant under investigation in the killing of a 13-year-old boy, it underscores the difficult choices American soldiers face here on how to respond to harassment. Their patrols are constantly harried by teenagers who pelt them with stones or try to steal their equipment.

The hearing also highlighted the problem of banditry and increasing violence in Somalia and the need to define a mandate for the use of force for future U.N. forces here. Ismat Kittani, the U.N. special envoy in Somalia, said on Thursday that the American-led military operation here had "barely scratched the surface" of disarming Somalis and that the job of restoring order had hardly begun.

A total of 15 witnesses testified in the hearing for Conde on Thursday, but their accounts left it unclear as to whether the sergeant, a 13-year veteran and a radar technician with the 3rd Battalion, 11th Marine Regiment, had used excessive force.

On the morning of Feb. 4, Conde, riding in a convoy, fired an M-79 grenade launcher loaded with a 40mm buckshot shell as a 17-year-old identified only as Omar tried to grab his sunglasses. Omar was wounded in the stomach and a bystander, Mohamed Hassan, also 17, was wounded in the arm.

Since the shooting, Omar has vanished. But Hassan testified that Omar was a known thief and that he saw Omar run to the vehicle and try to grab something as Hassan stood 100 feet away, drinking grapefruit juice in a crowd.

Lawmakers cast doubt on Yeltsin's referendum

MOSCOW (AP) — Lawmakers refused Thursday to call an emergency session of Congress for next week, possibly snagging Boris Yeltsin's drive to hold a referendum on who should rule Russia: president or parliament.

Hard-liners also demanded Yeltsin come before them to explain his meeting Wednesday with top generals, who insisted he take firmer steps to end the political tug-of-war that has nearly paralyzed the government.

Some legislators also were angered by Yeltsin's warning earlier in the week that he might take "extreme steps" to protect his reforms if lawmakers continued to undermine them.

One hard-liner, Vladimir Tikhonov, accused Yeltsin of plotting to impose "a fascist dictatorship."

A presidential spokesman denied Yeltsin was plotting to seize power.

Another spokesman said the president would not answer lawmakers' questions Friday, when the Supreme Soviet legislature was scheduled to reconsider plans to convene its parent body, the Congress of People's Deputies. The Communist-dominated Congress is Russia's highest parliamentary authority.

Yeltsin wanted the Congress to meet before Wednesday to consider a proposed power-sharing deal with his main rival, parliamentary speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov.

The timing is important because if the Congress rejects the deal, then Yeltsin would have time to put the matter to the Russian people in a nationwide referendum on April 11. By law, questions must be drawn up 30 days before the balloting.

The referendum date was approved at the Congress' last session in December and cannot be changed.

Hard-liners proposed holding the session a week later, on March 17, and expanding its agenda beyond the one item that Yeltsin had sought. The Congress has proved unpredictable in the past, amending the constitution, whittling away at the president's powers and forcing him to fire his reformist premier.

Tragedy in Iraq continues apace

When Britain's Observer newspaper reported early this week that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein has launched a new campaign of terror against the Shiite Muslim rebels, it should have caught no American by surprise. It was Hussein's bloody assaults against the Shiites — along with his quest to acquire nuclear arms and his invasion of Kuwait — that led then-President Bush to launch Operation Desert Storm in January 1991.

Now a United Nations report says Hussein's executioners have executed hundreds of people from Iraq's southern marshes in "death camps" in recent months.

In fact, the report by Max van der Stoel of the U.N. Human Rights Commission indicates that detainees from southern Iraq were transported in groups of up to 200 to death camps in the north. Kurdish farmers said they saw busloads of people with southern Iraqi features arrive at the death camps and heard gunshots on subsequent evenings.

Meanwhile, Iraq has denied the report that it has launched a new campaign of terror against the Shiites.

Yet this activity apparently was carried out while the United States and allied forces carried out a ban against Iraqi aircraft flying below the 32nd parallel, where most of the Shiites were congregated. Hussein obviously outfoxed the United States and its allies by carrying out his program of genocide while the allies were enforcing their ban.

That is a wrenching tragedy that underscores the futility in attempting to exert external pressures on a government to force it to improve the conditions of its people. The final solution to the problems of the Iraqi people necessarily rest with them. Until Hussein is driven from power — and the U.N. report is just another indicator that he still maintains a stranglehold on Iraq — conditions in that nation will never improve.

The tragedy in Iraq continues apace.

GOP foes square off over new plan

WASHINGTON — It's not easy these days discerning whether the Republican trumpets are sounding charge or retreat.

As they grope for an effective response to President Clinton's economic plan, the GOP is divided into two camps: those anxious to counter "tax and spend" Clintonomics with a Republican alternative vs. those who believe Republicans should keep their powder dry for now.

Anderson

The field generals of these opposing camps are Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. Coincidentally, both men are potential rivals for the White House in 1996.

Gramm is the only GOP senator gutsy enough to propose his own plan. His critics say he scores more points for valor than for tactics, because his plan runs the risk of diverting attention from the deficiencies in Clintonomics.

Gramm and Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., broke rank with the Republican leadership last week by offering an amendment that would eliminate the need for more taxes by offering deeper spending cuts. Gramm and Lott's plan calls for eliminating $17 billion in new stimulus and $161 billion in new "investment" spending and tax credits. "If they (Dole and others) don't like it (the plan) now, they will decide that if they want to be leaders they have to be out leading the charge," one Gramm ally told us.

Dole loyalists are quick to return the fire: "Frankly, one of our problems is you have real aggressive agenda pushers like Gramm and Lott who want to get out in front early, rather than going with the pack. We don't think it's smart politics to cave into a liberal demand that we have a package two days after his (Clinton's)."

At a party caucus in Dole's office Feb. 24, Republican leaders agreed not to pursue an alternate package since Clinton is "on the ropes," according to one participant.

Dole believes that by holding their fire, Republicans can aim more effectively when the targets become clearer, and the still-elusive details of the Clinton plan are flushed out. Dole supporters do little to disguise their agitation with Gramm and Lott.

The Gramm-Dole divide is emblematic of the identity crisis some Republicans feel following George Bush's defeat, after 12 years of catering to Republican presidents.

FEUD OF THE WEEK — Although she ran as a "mom in tennis shoes," first-term Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., managed to step on the toes of Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, during her first month on the job. Stevens took umbrage.

It began when Murray last week named Anchorage attorney Laurie Otto, who now works with the Alaska legislature, for a U.S. attorney post in that state. Selection of U.S. attorneys is one of the many prerogatives enjoyed by the party in control of the White House. Since Alaska doesn't have a Democrat in its congressional delegation, Murray assumed the role "because she's a Democrat from the neighborhood," according to a Murray staffer.

Stevens responded to the slight with an unusually caustic press release,

"I am absolutely appalled that an Alaskan (Otto) sought to be nominated through a non-Alaskan U.S. senator," Stevens said. "We are an independent state and do not need Washingtonians — Republicans or Democrats — to meddle in our affairs."

CHARLEY REESE

Some subsidies have positive values

The free market rarely has allies among intellectuals, because the free market rarely pays intellectuals what they think they are worth.

Reese

Hence, they grumble sullenly about capitalism and enviously about the income of athletes, movie stars, rock singers, and just about anybody else who makes more than they do, which is usually just about everybody.

It's not, as some suppose, that the free market has warped values. It doesn't have any values at all. It operates simply on one principle: do only what makes money. Hence, athletes get paid more than really good nurses or school teachers. That's because people will not pay money to watch a nurse, nurse or a teacher, teach, but they will pay money to watch an athlete play. Therefore, a talented athlete can bargain for higher wages than a talented teacher.

Nor does it follow, as the green-skinned intellectuals grumble, that people who pay to see the athlete perform do not appreciate and value the nurse and the teacher. How we spend our recreational dollar does not reveal our philosophy of life or moral values; it merely reveals what amuses us. And what amuses us is a matter of taste.

I, for example, would not attend a Rolling Stones or Michael Jackson concert if someone gave me a ticket. I am not amused by them. On the other hand, I saw a recent movie, "Last of the Mohicans," three times.

There is no right or wrong form of amusement, only a matter of taste. Intellectuals, of course, don't believe that. They are snoots, most of them. They think what amuses them is art, not entertainment. If the free market — which means individuals left free to choose — won't support their forms of amusement, they run to the politicians for a little socialistic subsidy.

What will buy these snoots an especially deep and hot hole in Hell is that quite often they are the very ones who claim to be for the free market and who despise people on welfare. In their perverted minds, a government subsidy to prevent starvation and homelessness is some negative thing called welfare, but a government subsidy for their symphony or ballet ticket is a positive value they call "supporting the arts."

People, of course, ought to dis-elect, if not tar and feather, politicians who tax them to subsidize the snoots' form of entertainment, but people in these twilight days of freedom have lost their spunk.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

The politicians want our money, boys!

A century and a half ago, Jim Bowie, Davy Crockett and 180 other Texas freedom fighters found themselves besieged in the Alamo by a Mexican army 30 times their size. It's a little different today. The Texas political leadership, a fraternity the same size as the Alamo garrison, has the whole state surrounded. Them politicians want our money, boys.

Murchison

What follows is a cautionary tale framed only in part for Texans. The politicians, from William Jefferson Clinton on down, have us hemmed in on all sides. They clamor for us to empty our pockets. We look as though we might oblige, statewide and nationally.

There are two main morals here:

1. No matter how much money we give the politicians, they always want more.

2. They'll say anything to get it.

How does this play out in the Texas context? This way:

Texas public schools, far from underfinanced, are overfinanced. State spending on schools has doubled in the past decade (thanks partly to the "reforms" that Ross Perot peddled so assiduously), yet Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are 42 points lower.

If the public schools were a business, their stock price would be scraping bottom; directors would sack the old management; the new management team would comb the books for inefficiencies and payroll padding; old techniques would go out the window, new ones would take their place.

The Texas legislature, feigning obedience to a state Supreme Court mandate that locally raised revenues be more fairly distributed, can't think of anything to do for the schools but beat up on the taxpayers.

The so-called Robin Hood constitutional amendment that goes before Texas voters May 1 constitutionalizes the form of robbery the state Supreme Court knocked down a year ago. The court said that under the state constitution, you can't take locally raised money from one school district and hand it to another district. The political leadership replied: Oh, yes, we can, provided we give the voters a good scare.

That's the game Gov. Richards and her henchpersons now are engaged in — scare the voters; tell 'em the schools will close unless the amendment passes. The last time I saw a substance of comparable quality was in a cow pasture. I stepped gingerly over it, to avoid soiling my boots.

May I ask who's going to close the Texas public schools? The courts? That ole dog won't hunt. Imagine the voters' gratitude to the elected jurist who tells Texas parents their kids can't go to school. What about teachers, who contract for a year's work? Judges are going to void those contracts?

Remember how I said the politicians never have enough money? The politicians in Texas want a state income tax. The grand strategy behind Robin Hood is to wreak such havoc among local property taxpayers that they get down on their hands and knees to the governor.

The politicians say anything to get our money. The principle, like the danger, is eternal, immutable: Sometimes you wonder what good the Alamo did us anyway.

People doubt plan's promise

It is interesting to see how poorly President Bill Clinton's plan is being received in the business community and by the average person on the street. It is clear from the drop in the stock market and the increase in the bond market that most business people think this plan has the potential to stall the current economic recovery and thus drive interest rates even lower. This expectation is the reason the bond market rose.

The reason people have no faith in Clinton's plan is that the details of the plan have every appearance of creating more taxing and spending. As the details come out we are told the tax increases and spending programs will come first then spending cuts will occur in a few years. Have you ever seen the government come through on this type of promise? Think about it.

Locale doesn't limit violence

PSA television alerted us to the unusually high frequency of home violence on Super Bowl Sunday. Well, violence — senseless violence — was not limited to the home the week before.

On a Sunday afternoon in January, Joe Martinez, a man with mental retardation, was riding his bicycle on the circle drive at Midland College. He was bothering no one, just on his way home. Two black men jumped out of the old, faded yellow General Motors automobile they were driving, pulled Joe from his bike, and began beating him severely. They hit him, kicked him, and broke his bike all the while yelling epithets about Joe's retardation.

Fortunately, Dale Smith was hitting golf balls nearby and witnessed the incident. Dale intervened. When the men saw Dale coming, they got in their car and left. Dale may have saved Joe's life because, according to him, the beating was savage with no sign of let up until his arrival on the scene. Joe was hurt. He required medical attention and was unable to go to work on Monday.

Joe lives in an apartment in the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC) apartment program. He got there by proving he could cook for himself, clean his apartment, live safely, do all the daily living tasks most of us take for granted. He is employed, works hard and earns his own way.

Joe, in his usual way, isn't angry at the men who beat him. He just doesn't understand why two people he didn't even know would attack him without provocation. Neither do I!

Reader demands public reply

I thought it strange to see a Midland City Street Department "sweeper" starting to sweep the approach and parking area in front of Dowell Schlumberger on Industrial Loop East (located in the County) in February, but I didn't pay any more attention to it until I noticed that the sweeper was making pass after pass inside their large fenced-in paved yard. When I called the street department I was told that the city was paying back a favor to Dowell.

When I protested this kind of action I was told that maybe if I could do the city a favor I could get my lot swept also. No one or company should have this kind of clout in order to use city equipment on private property.

I demand a public reply to this blatant misuse of city equipment, especially in the county.

How about it, citizens of Midland, do you think we can get a city street sweeper out of the county long enough to sweep our streets in the city?

Study: Job injuries, deaths cost state 3.8 billion yearly

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas economy loses at least $3.8 billion annually due to on-the-job deaths and injuries, with motor vehicle accidents and homicides accounting for 40 percent of all work-related deaths in the state, a University of Houston study found.

"The tragic aspect of these data is that the majority of these injuries and illnesses are preventable," the study, released Thursday by the school's Health Law and Policy Institute, concluded. "Therefore, these adverse events must not be considered an acceptable risk to our Texas work force."

The study estimates more than 500 workers are killed and 500,000 others are injured at work each year, and that about 4,000 people die from and more than 20,000 others suffer from work-related injuries.

The $290,000 study, commissioned by the Legislature in 1991, shows homicide in that year became the leading cause of occupational injury fatalities.

"Homicide is going to be the hardest to address," Sharon Cooper, co-director of the study, said when asked about solutions to the dilemma. "It's a societal problem rather than an occupational problem.'

Other findings of the workplace study included:

—More than one-third of non-fatal injuries are back related.

—Some 55 percent of all occupational illnesses are cumulative trauma disorders like carpal tunnel syndrome or tendinitis.

—Fatalities in rural counties are 82 percent greater than urban counties.

—The construction industry has the highest fatality rate and is the only industry where the rate is not declining.

—The meat packing industry in Texas has an extraordinarily high injury rate (37.4 per 100 workers per year), topping the national rate by 35 percent.

Construction deaths were blamed on machinery accidents, electrocution and falls.

"The construction data needs study," Ms. Cooper said. "It's the only industry where (the death rate) is not declining and we don't know why."

She said meat packers' injuries typically were cuts, lacerations and amputations.

Ms. Cooper cautioned that the findings of the study were "at very best an estimate" because of difficulties collecting data.

"It's surprising how fragmented surveillance is," she said.

Other data unavailable involves public employees, accounting for about 1 million Texas jobs.

Seventh Day Adventists deny association

WACO (AP) — Seventh-Day Adventists said Thursday they are tired of being mistakenly associated with a religious cult that is under siege after a bloody shootout with federal officials.

"They're not affiliated with us in any way," said Larry Guinn, pastor of the Seventh-day Adventist Church of Waco, the largest of three Seventh-day Adventist congregations in this Central Texas city.

Guinn said many in his congregation have felt "numb" over the past few days as the sect led by David Koresh has been sometimes described as Seventh-day Adventist offshoot or splinter.

Guinn met Wednesday evening with about 20 members, many of whom voiced frustration at the public perception that connected Koresh with the church.

Guinn said the church's members prayed together to "strengthen each other."

Koresh, who claims to be Jesus Christ, has also been called the "leader of a sect of the Branch Davidians.

The Branch Davidians were formed by Victor Houteff, who was thrown out of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church in 1929.

Houteff eventually moved his followers to Waco.

Noah Peniston of Waco, one of a group of about five or six families that he said operate a Davidian publishing house, said the sect also disavows Koresh and his violence.

"He is not really part of us. His message is totally different," Peniston said. "His teachings are very, very weird.'"

All the people at the Mount Carmel Center, including Koresh, have been "disfellowshipped" from the Seventh-day Adventist Church, according to Shirley Burton, a spokeswoman for the church.

Seventh-day Adventists are mainstream, conservative Christians, Ms. Burton said in a telephone interview from the church's headquarters in Silver Springs, Md. There are 7.2 million members worldwide; 783,000 in the United States and 27,000 in Texas, she said.

Koresh was disfellowshipped from a Seventh-day Adventist Church in Tyler in 1981, she said, because of his "other attitudes towards women."

Koresh has been accused of having many "wives" including young girls.

Ms. Burton said Koresh's statements that he is fulfilling Biblical prophecy may be true in a way.

"The Bible says there will be those who falsely claim to be Jesus Christ," she said.

White House bars doctors from health care planning sessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House spurned a bid Thursday by the powerful American Medical Association for a seat at its health care planning deliberations. The doctors signaled a willingness to entertain changes, but not strict controls on what they charge.

President Clinton emphatically defended the secrecy surrounding the work of his task force. He ruled out opening its doors to interest groups, saying, "Nobody does that. You can't get anything done."

Dr. James S. Todd, executive director of the 290,000-member AMA, had appealed to the White House to "bring us into the process, and we can help make it work."

"We know that the status quo must go," said Todd, whose organization has helped block national health insurance since the Truman administration.

White House officials said they already have met with the doctors' leaders, as recently as last week when Todd sat down with Ira Magaziner, the adviser overseeing development of Clinton's health care package.

But Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said neither the AMA nor any other interest groups will be allowed to join Clinton's health working groups. "It would be a conflict of interest," she said.

But she said the administration was "encouraged by their willingness to look seriously at some of the president's proposals."

■ More National news/1D

Clinton, in a brief exchange with reporters during a photo-taking session, said most of the task force's work has already been released or leaked to the public.

"They've got 400 people up there working continuously on thousands of different issues. . . . They have to be able to work," said the president, whose wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, chairs the task force.

George Stephanopoulos, the White House communications director, said there already are doctors in the working groups in an individual capacity, and Clinton officials have met several times with AMA leaders, including a private session with Magaziner last week.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who chairs the task force, said Wednesday it will "take a lot of public support to beat back the powerful lobbies and special interests that are already lining up to defeat any plan we develop."

Todd, in a telephone interview from AMA headquarters in Chicago, responded to Thursday's rebuff from the White House, "We hope that it's not a totally closed operation.

"This is not an effort to go in and scuttle the activity. It's trying to make it more effective and more likely to be acceptable to the American people," he said.

In his letter, Todd expressed the AMA's willingness to accept "shared sacrifice" and negotiate health care spending goals.

But "strict global budgets and price controls are unwise and unworkable," he said. "We strongly support fair managed competition rather than government-imposed price controls."

He voiced support for community-wide insurance ratings which are designed to lower premiums, a federally set minimum benefits package and a mandate on employers to provide insurance — all likely to be part of Clinton's plan.

Clinton favors controlling costs and covering everyone through what Myers called "managed competition and a global budget."

Managed competition means steering people into big groups that would encourage doctors and hospitals to band together to compete for their business.

Global budgets generally envision some form of price controls, with a national board setting ceilings on public and private health expenditures.

The AMA objects to barring doctors from joining more than one managed care plan or cutting patients off "from their physicians of long standing."

It also said that fee-for-service medicine — the traditional method by which doctors are paid for every procedure they perform — "must remain an option under managed care."

Officials: 4 die in heavy storm

N.Y. Times News Service

Gusty wind and a deluge of rain ripped down power lines, tore off roofs and caused street flooding Thursday along the East Coast. At least four deaths were blamed on the storm.

In Sea Bright, N.J., heavy surf battered beaches already eroded by a December storm that caused extensive damage along the New Jersey and New York coastlines. Streets in the resort town were under water and most of the town was without electricity, said police dispatcher Daniel Belinsky.

"We have power lines down everywhere, transformers exploded," Belinsky said. "We haven't even seen the peak of it yet."

One apartment building roof was blown off and several families were evacuated, he said. A shelter was opened in nearby Rumson.

In central New Jersey, an 86-year-old man was killed when his car slid off a rain-slicked road and crashed into a utility pole, police said.

In eastern Maryland, a 24-year-old woman was killed when she lost control of her car on a rain-slicked road and crashed into with another vehicle, police said.

A 42-year-old man died when scaffolding around a building project collapsed in Lancaster, Penn., where wind gusts reached 68 mph, officials said.

In Virginia, a 28-year-old man was killed when a wind gust blew a tree onto his car, officials said. His wife and 3-year-old son escaped injury.

Heavy rain and 70-mph wind lashed Pennsylvania, downing trees and power lines and knocking a Harrisburg all-weather radio station off the air.

Winds gusted to 71 mph in New York City, and on Long Island, N.Y., homes in Southampton were flooded by tides that were up to 3 feet above normal, officials said. Minor flooding was reported elsewhere on Long Island.

In New Jersey, a gust of wind tore the roof off a small building housing administrative offices for workers at Interchange 17 of the New Jersey Turnpike, said Turnpike Authority spokeswoman Lynn Fleeger.

The roof flew over the toll booths, damaging several vehicles that were waiting to pay tolls and injuring one motorist, she said. The motorist's condition wasn't immediately available.

Atlantic City, N.J., got a record 2.51 inches of rain from the storm, and wind knocked down people trying to walk on the boardwalk in Atlantic City.

In North Carolina, two canoeists who climbed a tree to flee raging water on the Eno River were rescued more than three hours later by the crew of a Blackhawk helicopter from Fort Bragg. The boys had set out for some white-water canoeing after 3 inches of rain swelled the river, officials said.

City has economic growth potential

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Midland and Odessa can look to 10 areas that are already spurring economic growth or will in the very near future.

That was the message Dr. Jerry Lee Jones, president of the Midland Business Center, took to the Midland Rotary Club Thursday.

According to Jones, the first area to look at is natural gas. Already, increased drilling for natural gas is spurring significant activity in New Mexico and Jones expects activity to spread into the West Texas portion of the Permian Basin.

Another area of growth, one that is already making substantial contributions to the Midland-Odessa area, is retirees. Jones said the Midland-Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor is tracking $39 million in retirement income as retirees come to the Midland-Odessa area.

A third potential area of growth, one Jones said is little-discussed at present, is a hazardous waste disposal project in Loving County. This project could reshape business activity in this area, he said. Already New Mexico's Carlsbad area is benefiting from the WIPP project and "If the Loving County project materializes as planned, it will have a long-term impact on this area," he said.

He also cited the possible extension of Interstate 27, creating a Midland-Odessa-Big Spring corridor. "How that materializes, well, you can look at a map and analyze and visualize where it should go, but it's not a logical decision, it's a political decision."

Tourism could also bring economic growth to the area, Jones told the audience. He said two years ago Alamagordo, Roswell and Carlsbad, N.M. joined forces to establish a program to attract tourists to their area, a program that Jones said has been successful. He added that the group has been working with MOHRE and wants to extend its program to include the Permian Basin.

The group has identified as a potential market "winter Texans" who winter in South Texas and have been an economic boon to that area. The New Mexico group is being aggressive in soliciting the "winter Texans" and want Permian Basin groups to join with them to make a larger market.

A sixth area that offers great potential, Jones said, is the Midland International Airport, which offers "enormous possibilities in terms of aviation."

The growing trend of passing economic strength from major oil producers to independent producers in the area also brings promise, Jones said, citing spin-off growth of small businesses.

However, these small businesses face significant problems in this area because there are no Small Business Investment Corps. to provide start-up financing, Jones said. Except for NationsBank, there are no locally-owned SBICs; the closest are in El Paso and Dallas-Fort Worth.

GOP group launches opposition campaign to 'Robin Hood' plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A Republican-led group of business and political leaders launched a campaign Thursday against a share-the-wealth school funding plan to go before voters May 1.

The group, calling itself Texans Against Robin Hood Taxes and headed by Rep. John Culberson, plans to spend half a million dollars on the effort, which will include radio and television ads and bumper stickers reading, "Vote No!"

Culberson, R-Houston, helped lead legislative opposition to the so-called Robin Hood plan that lawmakers approved in February.

"The importance of this grassroots effort is to educate the public that there are other choices available," he said.

The proposed constitutional amendment would allow the state to shift some local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts.

Gov. Ann Richards and other supporters of the plan have said it must pass if the state is to avoid a June 1 court-ordered cutoff of state public education money. They have warned that would mean closing schools.

But Tom Pauken of Dallas, a former Reagan Administration official and member of Texans Against Robin Hood Taxes, said Richards is using the threat of school closure to get the plan passed.

He pointed out that the Legislature would still have 30 days after the election to pass another proposal.

"People shouldn't have a gun pointed to their heads and in effect be blackmailed politically into voting yes because there's nothing else we can do," he said.

Pauken said Richards is trying to sell voters a tax increase when there are other ways to solve the problem. He said taxes could go up more than $1 billion a year under the proposed constitutional amendment.

"There are plenty of sensible alternatives available to the governor and the Legislature to address the problem short of this massive tax hike," Pauken said.

He said the group would not endorse one particular plan, but that the Legislature should examine using current resources, such as the proceeds from the Texas Lottery, to solve the problem.

But Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for Richards, said some lottery revenues already go toward public education.

The state gets about 35 cents from every $1 lottery ticket and as of December had deposited $413.2 million into the state's General Revenue fund, lottery officials said. Forty-six percent of that fund goes to public education, McDonald said.

He added that even if all Lottery proceeds were directed to public education, it would not solve the school funding problem. The cost of public education in Texas is about $15 billion, with the state providing about half.

Physician works with AIDS coalition to ensure care for poor

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Dr. Stephen Nightingale

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

ODESSA — Despite the contentions of detractors, AIDS education and treatment have been effective in the nation's gay communities and, lately, among high-school students, said Dr. Stephen Nightingale, a Dallas-based AIDS researcher, professor and physician.

"Right now," Nightingale said on Thursday, "there is a certain cynicism, which I think is unwarranted," that high-school students are not taking the necessary steps to avoid contracting the disease.

AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is largely transmitted by sexual contact and intravenous drug use, and to lesser degrees, by blood transfusion.

"But I very firmly believe that high-school kids aren't any dumber than any other population," Nightingale said in an interview at the Odessa Hilton.

"When the (freight) train comes down the track, most of them get off — not all. They've just got to hear the whistle." And that, he said, is education.

Some years earlier, Nightingale said that many researchers "did not think that the upscale, disco-going gay male communities were going to change their behavior. But they did." What is termed "safe sex" emerged.

"And the AIDS epidemic plateaued real fast," he said.

Since January, Nightingale, who is based in Dallas, has been treating HIV-infected clients twice monthly at the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition (PBAC) Clinic at the Ector County Health Department, 200 N. Texas Ave., Odessa.

The treatment provides a "safety net for HIV patients," he said.

"We are thrilled to be able to give our clients access to one of the nation's finest AIDS-care physicians right here in West Texas," said Cathryn Jackson, PBAC executive director.

Nightingale, who has developed a treatment protocol for HIV-infected clients, is former head of the AIDS treatment program and clinic at Parkland Hospital in Dallas and currently is director of the North Texas AIDS Education and Treatment Center.

He has established and is carrying out AIDS-treatment programs in Wichita Falls and in Odessa. His protocol is at work in Amarillo and is to be established in Tulsa, Okla.

The Odessa program services AIDS-HIV clients in a 17-county Midland-Odessa area.

Currently, the PBAC clinic is counseling and treating 84 clients, Ms. Jackson said, and the client-load is increasing.

While private physicians in West Texas communities have "provided great care for our clients over the years, the caseload has continually grown" and begged for additional treatment sites, Ms. Jackson said.

While providing care for indigent patients, PBAC and Nightingale are "working to allow reduced-cost private payment and insurance filings for other patients in the area," Ms. Jackson said.

Nightingale said he would "encourage anyone who has insurance to seek qualified care" in the private sector.

AIDS, he said, is a devastating disease for well-off people with insurance, but is "more devastating" for people who are in the lower-income levels or are unemployed.

The FDA-drug treatment cost for HIV-infected patients is about $17,000 — including $10,000 for the drugs — a year, Nightingale said.

Lincoln look-alike talks with school-age children

By Deborah Martin
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO — Luis Rubio stands in the middle of the class, telling a rapt group of 5th-graders that some first ladies have said they spotted Abraham Lincoln's ghost in the White House.

"Was it you?" murmured a member of his audience, sparking a giggling fit in her friend.

Their eyes rarely left Rubio during his talk, and it was easy to see why. The 38-year-old La Tuna prison guard is a dead-ringer for the dead president.

Rubio, like Lincoln, is rail-thin, his long torso mounted atop stilt-like legs. His beard heightens the similarity between his facial features and Lincoln's. And the frock coat and top hat don't hurt, either.

The main difference is that Lincoln is usually depicted with a mournful expression, while Rubio's eyes dance with glee as the students spin questions for him. He has been going to local schools to talk about Lincoln for four years at his own expense.

He got his start when a friend, struck by his resemblance to Lincoln, asked if Rubio would speak to a social studies class at Lincoln Junior High School; since then, the number of schools he speaks to has grown steadily to 19 engagements this year.

When he told children at St. Pius X School he doesn't get paid, they were stunned, and one immediately asked why he would speak to them for free. "I enjoy it. I enjoy it because of you guys. You guys

Midlander remarries husband because 'her heart told her to'

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Ygnasia Martinez's heart told her to do it: to remarry her husband at age 71 on what would have been her death bed.

This time, she wanted to be married in the Catholic Church ceremony.

She did. And she lived.

"They (doctors) told her she was dying," said her daughter, Elidia Catano, "but she fooled them."

Mrs. Martinez, a diabetic who suffers from hypertension (high-blood pressure), had undergone open-heart surgery in mid-January at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center because of partially clogged arteries.

While in recovery, she suffered a stroke. From the hospital, she was taken to rehabilitation to regain her physical skills. Shortly after returning home from the rehabilitation hospital in mid-February, she suffered a heart attack.

She was back in the hospital, where physicians told her she was dying and twice performed angioplasty procedures to keep her alive, Mrs. Catano recalled. They were reluctant to do a third balloon treatment to widen the arteries.

"They didn't guarantee her (life)," her granddaughter, Paula Baker of Hot Springs, Ark., said. The doctors said that they were "'not going to go in there a third time'" since Mrs. Martinez was

DEATHS

Joseph Rose

Graveside services for Joseph Rose of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, of Kentucky Street Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Rose died Thursday at a local hospital.

He was born Oct. 4, 1906, in Missouri and was raised in Oklahoma City, Okla. He lived in Sherman prior to enlisting in the U.S. Army during World War II. After his discharge, he returned to Sherman and then moved to Midland during the late 1940s. He was a painter in the Midland area for more than 35 years. He was retired as pastor of the Grace Baptist Church in 1982.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Flora A. Rose, in 1978.

Survivors include many nieces and nephews.

Avis Fieseler

Services for Avis Dale Fieseler of Midland will be at 1 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Larry Ashlock, of Crestview Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Fieseler died Wednesday in Midland.

She was born Aug. 11, 1920, in Duncan, Okla., where she was raised. She moved to Fort Worth, where she married Paul R. Fieseler on Aug. 20, 1951. She later lived in Santa Ana, Calif., for 14 years before moving to Midland in 1968. She co-owned and operated Speedy Pak Grocery from 1968-73. From 1973, she co-owned and operated The Screenery, Inc. She was a member of First Christian Church in Duncan, Okla.

Survivors include her husband, Paul R. Fieseler of Midland; a son, Terry Lynn Fieseler of Midland; two brothers, Leon Watson of Salisaw, Okla., and Youel Watson of Yuma, Ariz.; a sister, Cora Caldwell of Duncan, Okla.; a granddaughter; and many nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland.

Mary Jane Gabbert

Graveside services for Mary Jane Gabbert of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Steve Schorr, of First Presbyterian Church, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Ms. Gabbert died Tuesday in Midland.

She was born June 4, 1904, in Monticello, Ark. She moved to Little Rock, Ark., after graduation in 1947, and then moved to Houston, where she worked for the Arthur Anderson Co. She moved to Midland in 1960 and worked for Peat, Marwick and Mitchell Co. for many years before retiring in 1964. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church.

She is survived by a nephew, Morris C. Neal of Midland.

Bonnie Huddleston
Ken Huddleston

A memorial service for Ken and Bonnie Huddleston, former Midland residents, were held Wednesday in Houston. A private interment was held in Medina.

Mr. and Mrs. Huddleston were killed in a plane crash last Saturday.

Huddleston was born April 26, 1928, in Commanche. He was reared in Iraan, and graduated from Texas A&M in 1951 with a degree in petroleum engineering. Upon graduation, he served as a first lieutenant in the United States Air Force in Florida and Japan.

Following his discharge, he was employed by Marathon Oil Company until he joined Zapata Exploration Company in 1957. Zapata subsequently merged with Pennzoil, and Huddleston advanced from petroleum engineer to Eastern Division Manager and later to Senior Vice President of Operations for Pennzoil.

In 1983, he was elected as president of Proven Properties, Inc., a company formed by Pennzoil. He retired from Proven Properties in 1991, but remained active in the petroleum industry as an independent.

Mrs. Huddleston was born Sept. 29, 1930, in Clarksville, where she attended school. She graduated from North Texas State University in 1951 with a degree in English. Subsequently, she taught in Kingsville and Hobbs, N.M., where she met her husband. She continued to teach in Midland until their transfer to Parkersburg, W.Va.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Scholarship Fund for the Texas A&M Corps of Cadets and/or the North Texas State University Library Fund.

Cecil Hamilton

BIG SPRING — Services for Cecil L. Hamilton, 79, brother of a Midland woman, will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring with the Rev. David Robertson, pastor of First United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton.

Hamilton died Thursday at his home in Big Spring.

He was born Jan. 13, 1914, in Stanton. He married Allene Long on Dec. 24, 1939, in Stanton.

Hamilton graduated from Stanton High School and attended the University of Texas at Austin. He was a gasoline distributor in Odessa until World War II started. Because of his interest in flying, he completed his advanced training and became an instructor for cadets, first at Odessa and later at Curtis Field in Brady.

He was inducted into the Army Air Corps in July 1943 and continued as a flight instructor. He was transferred from Brady to Kansas City, Mo., where he served as copilot with Trans World Airways until he received his discharge in July 1945. Following his discharge, he returned to Big Spring and bought a private flying service which became known as Hamilton Field.

He served as a Piper Aircraft dealer, a flight instructor and did charter flights. He was a patrol pilot for Texas Electric for more than 20 years. After retiring from flying, he took over the management of the family farm and was a local representative for Delta Transmission Network until an illness forced his retirement.

Hamilton was a member of First United Methodist Church and the Men's Bible Class. He also was a member of Staked Plains Lodge #598, A.F.& A.M., the Suez Temple of San Angelo, the Big Spring Shrine Club and the Scottish Rite of Lubbock. For 25 years he had served as an election judge of Precinct #404.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Horace Hamilton of Fort Worth; one sister, Dorothy Hamilton Davis of Midland; four grandchildren; two great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Severiana Prieto

Services for Severiana (Chana) Prieto, 76, are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

She died Wednesday in Odessa.

Survivors include two sons, Sammy Prieto of Kermit and Hector Prieto of San Antonio; a stepson, Ricard Prieto of Austin; a stepdaughter, Senaida Garcia of Midland; two sisters; two brothers; nine grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

■ Lawsuit challenges school board elections

Staff report

A lawsuit challenging the method of electing Andrews Independent School District board members was filed in U.S. District Court on Thursday.

The suit claims the current system discriminates against the minority community and violates the Federal Voting Rights Act.

"This lawsuit is of great importance to the minority community. The minority community has a right to elect candidates of their choice," according to a statement by Willie Serna, director of of the League of United Latin American Citizens, District 5.

"I hope the school district is not offended by the filing of this suit, we want to work with them; we ask that Andrews ISD do what other school districts have done, like the McCamey ISD, go to single member school districts," the statement continued.

Similar lawsuits have been successfully prosecuted in Midland, San Marcos, Hitchcock and Lamar school districts, according to LULAC.

Ervin Huddleston, superintendent of the Andrews ISD, said the school district has not been served with the lawsuit and declined to comment until that time.

■ Drama opens today at Permian Playhouse

ODESSA — "The Diviners" opens at Permian Playhouse at 8 p.m. today.

The drama is set in the Midwest in the early 1930s.

For reservations call the Playhouse, 1-362-2329, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

■ Church to have service for prayer day

The Midland World Day of Prayer Service begins at 10:30 a.m. today at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Andrews Highway at Louisiana Avenue.

This year marks the 106th observance of World Day of Prayer, which was started by women in the United States in 1887. Since 1941, Church Women United has been the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer.

Christians from 170 countries observe this day. The program for 1993 was written by the women of Guatemala and has as its theme, "Instruments of Healing."

The program will be followed by a covered-dish luncheon at which past presidents of CWU will be honored guests.

Midland CWU includes 13 churches locally and supports such projects as Pre-Natal Clinic, Casa de Amigos, St. Andrews Mission, Battered Women's Shelter, Meals on Wheels and the COmmunity Children's Clinic.

All area residents are invited.

HELP: Physician works with poor AIDS patients

(From 1B)

Ms. Jackson said that Nightingale's combination treatment regimen and use of CD4-helper cell counts as markers in the progression of AIDS "are widely recognized as standards of care and treatment for (HIV-AIDS) patients across the nation."

Primary drugs for treating HIV-infected patients are AZT (azidothymidine or zidovudine), DDI (didanosine or dideoxyinosine), and DDC (dideoxyctidine), which are all approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Nightingale said if treatment is sought long before the body is ravaged by effects of the AIDS virus but after the CD4 count is below 500, the administering of AZT (for example) "clearly can delay the onset" of AIDS infection by two years.

Qualified PBAC clients are treated at the Ector County Health Department clinic at no charge and receive the FDA-approved treatment drugs through the HIV Medication Program of the Texas Department of Health.

The clinic is "without frills," Nightingale said. "Frills can cost a lot of money real fast.

"Opening the PBAC clinic is not a "hard thing to justify," he said, "but this can be a hard thing to put into practice.

"This is really a community-driven enterprise," he said.

Nightingale, whose treatment is for people who have already tested positive for the (AIDS) virus, is setting up the AIDS-HIV treatment clinic under a federal grant.

"I am in almost a unique position of saying, 'I am from the government, and I am here to help you,'" he said.

Nightingale said the "public-health area is where I come from and that really is my first love."

He said he has no information that the HIV infection or AIDS is any more prevalent in Odessa, Texas, than it is in any other county or city in the state of Texas."

Evidence indicates that the "first wave of HIV infection has pretty much penetrated the United States," Nightingale said. The AIDS virus, long associated with homosexuality is now entrenched in heterosexual contacts and is "spreading most rapidly, second of all to women, and first of all to poor people," he said.

JONES: Midland has areas of growth

(From 1B)

The independents are increasingly taking the lead in the oil patch, which will have an impact on area businesses.

And finally, Jones cited a development that could impact economic development is that "We have in this area, for the first time, recognized that we cannot be islands unto ourselves. We must work together and cooperate. It's most exciting that Midland and Odessa are beginning to work together. And it's not just Midland and Odessa, but small towns in this area are also working together and forming joint projects."

To spur both economies and create jobs, Midland and Odessa need to target industries, the 10th area of growth he cited, and one that countries throughout Texas are doing, Jones said.

A study by economist M. Ray Perryman for the city of Odessa — one that Jones said could apply to Midland as well — cited such potential industry targets as aircraft maintenance, transportation equipment, medical apparatus, plastics and rubber, industrial equipment, fabric metal production and communications equipment.

"The name of the game in economic development is targeting," he said.

And one thing that area colleges and school systems need to provide to assist targeting efforts is workforce planning to provide a qualified workforce for these industries.

He pointed out that a number of the industries targeted as suitable for this area don't require four-year degrees but rather high school technical training or two-year technical college training.

Jones cited the state of Arkansas' apprentice program, modeled on a program used extensively in Europe, and predicted it would play a significant role in economic development.

"That way," he said, "if the targeted industry doesn't fit your area because you lack a qualified workforce, you can offer to subsidize training efforts."

GHOST: Lincoln look-alike impresses children

make it interesting," he said.

His talks, drawn from every book he could find about Lincoln, trace the president's life from birth to assassination.

When Rubio talks to older kids, he includes a discussion of similarities between the lives of Lincoln and President Kennedy.

After each lesson, he lets the children ask questions. Eager hands shot up all over the room at St. Pius X. Mixed in with standard questions about why John Wilkes Booth shot Lincoln and how Mary Todd Lincoln died were the offbeat inquiries that delight Rubio.

One asked how much he weighs in comparison to Lincoln. (He spreads 125 pounds over 6 feet 3¼ inches in height; Lincoln weighed 148 pounds when he was assassinated, and stood 6 feet 4 inches tall.)

A budding history buff wanted to know whether it was true that Lincoln frequently told the old joke, "Why did the chicken cross the road?"

"Yes, with several variations, depending on the company he was in," Rubio said.

Last year, a student got so caught up in his similarity to Lincoln that he demanded to see the hole in the back of Rubio's head.

"After 45 minutes of that, I was ready to go into the hall and ask somebody to drill one for me," Rubio joked.

Kindergartners usually refuse to let him go until they've either hugged him or shook his hand to make sure he isn't a ghost.

They also sometimes ask for his autograph, and are annoyed when he starts to sign his own name instead of Lincoln's.

Most classes write him "thank you" notes. One of his favorites reads, "I thought you were real, but then we found out you were a fake."

"They say they learned a lot, and they liked the show. that's what makes it worth it for me," he said. The children's comments to him after the show also give him a boost.

Two little girls at St. Pius X walked up to him in a hall clutching library books that they said they intended to exchange for Lincoln biographies. "That's what makes it fun," he said, grinning as he watched them head for the school library.

HEART: Sick woman remarries in hospital

(From 1B)

"not going to make it.'"

Even so, an ailing Mrs. Martinez "made a promise to God that she wanted to be married by the church," Mrs. Baker said. "She wanted to renew her vows not by man but by God."

"I just put myself in God's hands," Mrs. Martinez said through her granddaughter.

When she married Luis Martinez in October 1952, the ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace at the Midland County Courthouse.

Mrs. Baker said it was out of his "undying love" for his wife that Martinez agreed to a church wedding in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit on Feb. 22, the day after the angioplasty.

Her grandfather was certain that his wife "is a good wife and a good mother, and he wanted to do right by her," Mrs. Baker said.

Mrs. Martinez has seven children, 30 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

For the wedding, the nurses made paper flowers and decorated the hospital room.

When the priest recited the vows, "Mam Mamma said, 'I do.' and Papa said, 'Si,'" their granddaughter said.

"They (doctors and nurses) were really wonderful," Mrs. Martinez said in Spanish as interpreted by her granddaughter. "The doctors told me to get up and walk around a little bit," she said in Spanish. "I am really happy with all of my doctors" for their honesty in assessing what seemed to be her fatal condition. "I have a lot of faith."

Her daughter, Mrs. Catano, said that her mother "has always been a strong woman."

"When man says there's no hope, God has the last say," Mrs. Catano said. "And that's so true."

Odessa girl is in stable condition

Staff report

ODESSA — An Odessa girl was in stable condition at Odessa Medical Center with a broken leg after she darted into traffic Thursday afternoon and ran into a van, officers said.

According to a police report, an 8-year-old girl carrying a schoolbook ran into traffic after 4 p.m. in the 2300 block of 8th Street. Several vehicles nearly hit the girl and she apparently ran into a van.

The girl, whose name was not released Thursday, suffered facial injuries and a broken leg.

No information was available Thursday on the identification of the van's driver. However, no citation was given in the incident.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Although you like to have many different irons in the fire, your success rate will go up if you tackle one thing at a time. Otherwise, someone in a position to help you may get the impression that you are impractical. Beginning in June, your income climbs steadily. Do not be surprised, however, if employment problems slow you down at times. Friendships of long standing prove especially rewarding late in the year. Be careful who you kiss under the mistletoe!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Dean Stockwell, business executive Laurence Tisch, actor Michael Warren, actress Samantha Eggar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pay more attention to your manners and appearance. A direct approach brings the best results when talking with an authority figure. At home, avoid bringing up subjects that could cause fireworks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your worries about an older person's health may be unfounded. Check test results. Your ability to cope with difficulties is very impressive to a family member.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is not a good time to change jobs. Be orderly about financial matters. Reinvest any profits from a sale of stock back into the business. Be more realistic about a personal relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Other people's mistakes may cause delays. A business sideline or hobby could yield extra income. A reorganization at work could put you in a management position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A long-time relationship will be put to the test this weekend. Suppress an urge to be lazy. Plunge into work! Limit your shopping to the bare necessities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Handle business affairs with greater diplomacy. Excessive haste could slow you down in the long run. Be supportive; show your mate that you really do care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not be shy about promoting your personal interests today. A phone call or meeting gives you a chance to put your best foot forward. Travel also looks promising.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is time to take the initiative in career matters. Issues affecting your long-term financial security demand top priority. Speak out if you see a chance to right a wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Beneficial trends make this a great day to clear up a backlog of work. Stop procrastinating and dig in! Domestic and financial problems prove easy to solve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone could tell you about an out-of-the-way place to find great bargains. You might want to check it out this weekend. Do not leave travel details to chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A faltering relationship could get a new lease on life. The outlook is good for your personal plans. Avoid hassles over money with loved ones and friends. Pay your own way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A lively influence boosts yesterday's splendid developments; you get more mileage out of a successful project. A relative's insightful suggestion may be all that is needed to light the fire under someone.

TODAY'S CHILDREN thrive on adventure and change. Anything that might make the world a better place to live interests them enormously. Count on these tenderhearted Pisces to sympathize with people who are in dire straits. They seem to know instinctively when someone really needs help. Tolerant of other people's eccentricities, these Pisces are reluctant to pass judgment on a fellow human being. A career in psychology or the ministry would give them a chance to help many people.

Possession of a long, strong trump suit conveys a sense of invincibility on many bridge players. But strange things happen at the table and, if you get your priorities in the wrong order, even the most impregnable holding can be ground to dust.

With the equivalent of an opening bid facing a partner who opened,

APPEARANCES ARE DECEPTIVE

South knew exactly where the hand should be played once North had shown a balanced minimum opening bid. The final contract was reached via the most direct route.

West led the king of hearts and, in response to an encouraging eight from East, continued with a low heart to the ace, declarer ruffing. When East discarded a heart on the second round of trumps, declarer abandoned that suit and started on clubs, cashing the ace and continuing with a club. West won and forced declarer with the queen of hearts. South had no option now except to draw the last two trumps before exiting with a club, setting up a long card in that suit, but the defenders were able to cash a heart for down one.

The 4-1 trump split was a little unlucky, but the debacle could have been avoided had South been prepared for the problem. To protect against repeated forces, declarer must set up the side suit before drawing trumps. After ruffing the first heart, declarer should immediately play the ace and another club. South can ruff the heart return and force out the last club. The defenders are helpless—another heart lead will be ruffed on the table. No matter what the defense does declarer has the rest of the tricks.

Black entertains in Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Country music star Clint Black toured checkpoints, base camps and the city's port Thursday, playing to whooping crowds of American troops and urging Washington to bring the GIs home.

Black

"I'm going to get on my soapbox on national television and see if I can reach someone with brass," he said, then caught himself as troops started cheering as their commanders looked on. "The brass pen set," he added.

Without a mike or backup band, improvising stages out of bombed-out buildings, Black played his guitar in four performances to groups of 150-200 soldiers and Marines and signed autographs at each stop.

One soldier sought an autograph on a combat ration package, known as an MRE, for meal ready to eat. "Do not eat," Black, 30, scribbled on it along with his name.

Black climbed out of a Humvee near the so-called Green Line dividing the city between two warlords and played to troops at a checkpoint. He also dropped in on soldiers based in a bombed-out stadium.

Dressed in camouflage khakis and a desert hat, Black sang "I'm Leavin' Here A Better Man," "You've Got A Friend," "I'm Proud To Be An American" and "Killing Time." Some troops joined in.

"This killin' time is killin' me," Black sang to cheering men and women, guns slung behind their backs and shooting away with their instant cameras.

"We really needed something for the morale," said Pfc. Steven Scullion, 20, based at Fort Hood. "This thing's getting old."

More than 14,000 U.S. servicemen and women remain in Somalia as part of Operation Restore Hope, which began Dec. 9 to guard relief shipments to a starving nation battered by clan warfare.

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II will visit Mexico's Yucatan peninsula in August.

Pope John Paul

The pope will spend a day in Merida, built on the site of a destroyed Mayan city and now the capital of Yucatan state, the Vatican said Thursday.

No date was given for the visit. John Paul is scheduled to be in Denver in mid-August for the Roman Catholic Church's World Youth Day.

The pope canceled a scheduled stop in Mexico in October after undergoing colon surgery in July. He has made two previous visits to Mexico.

Also on his schedule this year: trips to Spain in June and the Baltic republics in September.

PERTH, Australia — Paul McCartney, who turned 50 last summer, said Thursday that he has no plans to retire, even though he once thought 30 was too old to rock 'n' roll.

McCartney is starting a world tour today with a performance in Perth.

Asked if it would be his last tour, the former Beatle only shrugged.

"I thought I'd be finished at about 30 to tell you the truth," he said. "I thought 30 was a very unseemly age to be rocking and a rolling. And you know, 40 came and then 50 comes and I'm having the best time in my life now, you know. So who knows?"

McCartney is scheduled to perform in New Zealand, the United States, Canada and Europe.

CHICAGO — Chicago film critics on Thursday named "Malcolm X" best picture of the year and its star, Denzel Washington, best actor.

Emma Thompson was named best actress for her role in "Howards End" and Robert Altman won the award for best director for "The Player."

The Chicago Film Critics Association comprises about 40 print and broadcast film critics in the Chicago area, who vote on the awards.

Other awards went to Chris O'Donnell, who took the most promising actor award for his performances in "Scent of a Woman" and "School Ties." Marisa Tomei was named most promising actress for her roles in "My Cousin Vinny" and "Chaplin."

Best supporting actor went to Jack Nicholson for "A Few Good Men." Best supporting actress was awarded to Judy Davis for her performance in "Husbands and Wives."

"The Crying Game" was named the year's best foreign film.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — James Earl Ray, who's serving a 99-year sentence for the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., has been granted a divorce from his wife of 14 years.

"This marriage probably was doomed from the beginning," Probate Judge Jim Everett said Wednesday.

He also ruled that Ray, 64, can keep all $11,000 in royalties from his book about King's slaying. Anna Sandhu Ray, 46, had turned down an offer of 25 percent of the royalties.

King was killed in Memphis on April 4, 1968, as he stood on a motel balcony. Ray pleaded guilty to the slaying in 1969, but later recanted.

Mrs. Ray said that at the time they married, Ray told her his release from prison was imminent because he had new evidence to prove his innocence.

FAMILY MATTERS

Divorce doesn't end with legal decree

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My 29-year-old daughter is in the middle of a messy divorce in (another city). She has two little girls from that marriage, 4 and 2 years old. Her husband was and is a cheap jerk. He has taken everything that she has (and what we've given her) and controlled all of it. He is a selfish workaholic who was never a father to his daughters.

May

My daughter in her loneliness made the mistake of getting involved with another man. Her husband badgered her one night until he found out about the relationship and then threw her out. He got temporary custody of the children, even though they had to stay with his awful mother. My daughter got her daughters back after a court battle.

There have been many difficult battles over every aspect of this divorce. Her husband is out to hurt her in every way that he possibly can. He is fighting over the property settlement, child support and custody. We have helped our daughter with all her legal expenses created by his behavior. My daughter is no longer involved with anyone and is concentrating on taking care of her girls and getting through this divorce.

This whole mess has dragged on almost a year. The good news is that it should be over within the next 30 days. My daughter is worn down and I have tried to encourage her by telling her that she's almost through with this idiot! The reason that I'm writing you is that when I said something like that to my best friend, she said that this was "only the beginning." The more we talked the worse that I felt. I'm not even sure that I heard everything that she said.

Can you tell me what else is there to have to deal with after the divorce? I know that I need to be prepared, and I'm sure that my daughter needs to be also. WORRIED NOW

DEAR WORRIED: Unfortunately your friend is correct. A well-known expert on divorce, Dr. Florence Kaslow, describes divorce as a process with six stations, beginning with the "emotional divorce," with one or both of the couple being angry, disillusioned, alienated, withdrawn and so on. This phase may last a matter of weeks, months or even years; however, once it is completed, resolving marital issues in counseling is very difficult.

The next phase is the "legal divorce," the most obvious, visible and clear-cut part of the process. One day your daughter will be legally divorced and free to get on with her life. Unfortunately, this is not the end of the process. The "economic divorce" phase is not over until it is over. It will last at least until your granddaughters are 18 or even longer, if they need economic support from their father for college, marriage and so on.

Another on-going phase is the "coparental divorce and the problems of custody." While this phase tends to be over in late teens, in some cases it continues on until young adulthood. Some children, for a variety of reasons, move back and forth between the homes. In some cases the non-custodial parent constantly threatens or enters into legal action to gain custody.

The last two phases, "community divorce and the problems of loneliness" and "psychic divorce," last until the divorced person finds a new equilibrium and identity. This is a restabilization phase both within the social community — as a divorced person — and within the self.

Share this information with your daughter and encourage her to take part in a divorce recovery group. I encourage divorcing people to seek counseling — either through church or professional counselors — to help normalize this very difficult process.

CONTINUING WITH TIPS FROM THE PERMIAN BASIN CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION PROGRAM ON "KNOWING YOUR CHILD," ask yourself and then your child the following:

- Would your child prefer a vanilla milk shake, a hot fudge sundae or strawberry shortcake?
- What is his or her greatest fear?
- In gym class, would your child rather play basketball, do exercises or run relays?
- What is his or her favorite subject in school?
- What is the subject he or she dislikes the most?
- What names are your child called in school?

Answer these questions yourself, then ask your child. You may be surprised at the answers.

Technology adds tread life to tires

Associated Press

High technology allows tire companies to design street tires today that outperform the best racing tires of a dozen years ago.

New techniques allow tire companies to shorten the length of the development cycle, Ed Jacobs wrote in the current issue of Popular Mechanics, and zero in on desired characteristics.

Tires are extremely complicated structures. Counting individual elements, there are thousands of pieces in each one — and nearly all the pieces interact somehow.

With the coming of desktop computers and work stations for individual engineers and scientists came statistical design experiments, finite element analysis and computer-aided design that allow such things as computing optimum tread pattern for a quieter ride.

Supercomputers make possible virtual reality, which involves simulations so complex they can create the look and feel of a particular environment — then put you in it. The secretive tire companies are mum on the subject, but virtual reality could mimic a car being driven through a test program on any course. The simulation would create a custom environment including such things as ambient temperature, road temperature, weather conditions, road surface type, surface texture, bumps, potholes and tar strips. Changes in construction or compounding could be factored in to see their effect on performance.

Some tire companies use a technology called stereo lithography to produce, in a few hours, plastic models of concepts that might otherwise take weeks.

Tire noise comes from the interaction of tread elements and grooves with the road surface. Until recently, eliminating it was literally cut-and-dry. Now computer simulators truncate months into hours by comparing computer-modeled versions of designs to a large database. They predict how loud a design will be in specific frequency ranges, allowing designers to lower overall noise or shift some of it to less-objectionable ranges.

Since heat weakens materials, reduces durability and can lead to failures, companies pay close attention to heat generation and buildup. Infrared thermography is the key. In a typical system, an infrared scanner examines an inflated tire running under various speed, load, ambient-temperature and operating conditions. Then a graphics monitor or printer converts data to a "false-color" picture of all or part of the surface of the tire. Different colors represent specific temperatures and pinpoint trouble spots.

Technology has allowed tire companies to reduce product development cycles and respond more quickly to consumer and auto-industry needs.

Feminist has new cause: Aging

By Susan Phinney
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Betty Friedan sparked a revolution 30 years ago with her book "The Feminine Mystique," and she's ready to set off another.

Friedan, a pioneer of the women's movement, was in Bellevue, Wash., recently to talk about her latest cause — aging.

She spoke at a fund-raising luncheon for the Overlake Hospital Foundation, and addressed members of the hospital's "Senior Connections" program.

This was her message: Stop looking at aging and the elderly as problems.

Friedan said her inner "Geiger counter" actually went off more than 10 years ago when she picked up on another "mystique": the mystique of age.

She was asking professional women in their 50s about menopause. "They all said they hadn't had it," Friedan said. "They discredited it and didn't recognize it because it meant life was over."

However, she didn't latch onto the subject until recently, when the National Institute of Aging asked her to get interested. She told them she wasn't eager.

"Age!" she exclaimed. "How dreary. I wasn't interested in age." The Senior Connections audience laughed.

But Friedan, 72 last month, began attending conferences and getting more depressed. Conferences were all about Alzheimer's and gerontology and about how the age "problem" was getting to be a big one.

"We weren't dying," she said, describing that as the crux of the "problem."

"There's such a denial of people over 60 in this country."

Friedan said age is seen only as a decline from youth, not as a new phase of life for which there are no guidelines.

The dread and denial that accompany aging prevent people from seeing the possibilities, she said, even though there isn't a terrible decline among older citizens.

Friedan said few elderly suffer from debilitating conditions: 95 percent of those over 65 aren't senile.

"We need to break through the age mystique by continuing to grow, solving problems, making social changes. We need to see our age as an uncharted adventure."

She hopes her next book, "The Fountain of Age," due out later this year, will do for older people what "The Feminine Mystique" did for women.

"Say 'no' to the fountain of youth and turn on the fountain of age," she advised.

Friedan reminded the audience that 30 years ago, before "The Feminine Mystique" was published, women had a housewife-/sex object image and tended to be defined in relation to their husbands.

Women were blamed for everything from dirty sinks to badly ironed shirts, she said.

And 25 years ago, only 4 percent of law students were female; today, they make up 40 percent of law school enrollment.

"In 1993 we've broken through the feminine mystique. Twenty-five years ago we doorbelled for politicians. Today, women are making policy. There are more women in Congress than ever before. Women have discovered the power to change their own lives."

Friedan wants to do the same for older Americans.

An important element of that agenda is providing for housing that keeps the elderly in the mainstream of society, not in nursing homes and "leisure-world ghettos."

At the end of her lecture a woman told Friedan that her book seemed radical years ago, but now seems like common sense.

"Have you mellowed?" she asked.

"You've grown," Friedan replied.

Home safety is priority for elderly

By Dr. Anthony J. Grieco
Associated Press

Home may be where the heart is, but for the elderly — especially the elderly with infirmities or illnesses — the home can be where hazards are.

A number of adjustments can make a home a safer place and help the elderly cope with certain difficulties of old age.

The best safety feature for an elderly person's home is another person. A companion, visiting relative or friend helps ensure that an elderly person is coping well.

These "care partners" can provide the elderly with inspiration to accomplish vital daily tasks such as taking medications and eating healthy meals.

In addition to visiting regularly and providing company, care partners also can ensure that a household is in good shape rather than dangerously cluttered or underheated.

Care partners can also assist with household activities that might be problems or dangerous for a solitary elderly person, such as moving a heavy object or changing a ceiling light bulb.

Environmental adjustments that increase the safety of an elderly person's house range from small, inexpensive changes to more costly projects and additions.

To guard against slips and falls, loose rugs and mats should be tacked down or removed. Adding cushions to chairs can increase comfort and perhaps prevent bone and skin injuries. Buffering or removing sharp-edged furniture and countertops reduces the likelihood of accidental cuts and bruises.

Telephones should have important phone numbers programmed into them and posted nearby. In the case of an emergency or anxiety-provoking situation, the numbers provide security against panicking and forgetfulness. For the elderly who may not be able to reach a phone, portable devices that alert a doctor or family member are available.

The bathroom is one of the most common sites of home injuries. Handrails can be installed at the toilet seat and bath. If a wheelchair is used at home, also install a raised seat on the device as well as a raised toilet seat for ease of transfer. If the bath has a sliding door, ensure that the framing is strong. Some shower doors are of light construction and will collapse if grabbed with force.

In the bedroom, the level of the bed should be low for ease of entry and exit. In all rooms, ensure adequate lighting, especially on the nighttime pathway to the bathroom. It is also important to maintain clear pathways throughout the house and set aside clutter such as newspapers and other items that can cause falls and injury.

To guard against falls and dizziness, people on such medications must learn to make slow movements when getting up from a chair or out of bed. Specific infirmities and medications may require additional measures. Patients and care partners should not hesitate to consult a physician.

Patients should learn as much as possible about their illness. Elderly people who are educated in the warning signs of illness are more likely to foresee troubles.

Dr. Anthony J. Grieco is a professor of clinical medicine and director of the Coop Care Center at New York University Medical Center.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Caregivers go through many emotions

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: You have covered various topics regarding care for an aging parent or relative. What about support for caregivers?

Edwards

ANSWER: Assuming the role of caregiver can be physically, emotionally and financially draining. Your or your family members may experience fatigue, stress, loss of social and job opportunities and sometimes family breakdown.

The number of caregivers is growing. Today 25 percent to 35 percent of the work force cares for elderly parents. Nearly 50 percent of caregiving employees have at least one dependent child at home. One-third of these employees are responsible for two or more elderly persons. The percentage of 40 year olds who have at least one surviving parent has grown to 95 percent since 1980.

In studies of employees over the age of 30, it was found that one in five persons spent time caring for an older person every week. The average time spent in caregiving is 10 hours weekly. One in 12 persons spent 35 hours or more weekly as caregivers. More than 80 percent of caregivers said their duties interfered with their social, emotional and family needs most of the time. Nearly 20 percent of the caregivers had not taken a vacation from their duties in two years or more. The average duration of care is five and a half years.

These studies also found that frequently caregivers report feelings of:

- Anxiety about not being able to do all they think should be done for parents or relatives.
- Concern that they are not doing enough for someone who provided care for them in the past.
- Guilt because they want to be free of the burden of caregiving.
- Conflict between the needs of their parents and their own needs or needs of their family members.
- Frustration associated with juggling job, family and caregiving responsibilities.
- Sadness over the deterioration of their parents' physical and mental health.

Corporations lose an average of $2,500 per year for each caregiving employee due to absenteeism and lost productivity. Of all older Americans who will need care, 80 percent will receive that care from their families.

Recently a new type of help for family caregivers has emerged — the caregiver support groups. These groups are still developing, but include various corporate efforts for their employees. Alzheimer's and Parkinson's support groups provide practical information, shared coping strategies and a setting to talk openly with others who are experiencing the same feelings.

Health and human service agencies such as Community and Senior Services also provide multiple seminars as well as information and referral on aging and caregiving issues.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

DEAR ABBY

Door-to-door witnesses take notice

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the writer who complained of solicitors knocking on her door — especially at dinnertime. Many announced that they were not selling anything — they were there to "share" their religious faith, and were required to make door-to-door visitations.

Van Buren

I used to just close the door in their faces, hoping to dissuade them with a curt, "No, thank you; I already have a religion."

After I had my first baby, even taking time to answer the door became irksome, so I had a "NO SOLICITING" sign posted on my door, but these people insisted that they were not "soliciting" — they were witnessing the word of the Lord, and could I please give them some money for their magazine?

The solution: I simply took an oversized index card and wrote in large black letters: "NO SOLICITING, NO WITNESSING, NO KIDDING!" Since posting that sign, I have not had one person come to my door to sell me his "old-time" religion. — JANE N. POOLE, ROHNERT PARK, CALIF.

DEAR JANE: If for some reason your sign is overlooked, try the following sign suggested by one of my clever readers: "Warning, I am mean and my dog is hungry." Or, an even stronger warning might read: "Beware of our two Rottweilers!"

DEAR ABBY: I went to an optometrist recently and had my eyes checked. I also bought some contact lenses from him. Upon leaving the office, I asked the receptionist for my prescription. She said that she'd give it to me in two weeks when I returned for the follow-up checkup.

I was out of town on business and did not make the appointment. Worse, I lost the bag containing the new contact lenses. When I returned, I called the optometrist. The receptionist told me that she could not give me the prescription over the phone. We later had a conference call, but I never did get my prescription!

A few days later, I went to the same optometrist and the receptionist handed me my prescription, which I took to a new optometrist, who informed me that the prescription was for eyeglasses and not contact lenses!

I called the first optometrist to tell him about it and the receptionist put me on hold forever, saying that she'd "ask the doctor." Then she came back and asked if there was any way I could buy another pair of contact lenses from them. I told her, "No, I didn't like your service." This time she put me on hold for so long that I finally hung up.

Abby, how can I obtain my prescription? My theory is that this greedy optometrist won't give it to me because he wants me to buy the lenses from him. Please help me fight back. — PRESCRIPTION DENIED

DEAR DENIED: Demand your prescription! According to my optometrist, the records belong to you. Tell this to the receptionist if you cannot get in to see the optometrist immediately or appear to be getting the runaround. And it wouldn't hurt to mention that you will have your lawyer handle this if they give you any trouble.

DEAR ABBY: I am confused and angry about something and hope you can help. I live in a rural area and shop by catalog a lot. I am confused over the "shipping and handling" charges. What does this mean? Don't mail-order companies realize they must "handle" their merchandise?

I expect lower prices through mail order because they have less overhead. I love to shop with a catalog in the comfort of my own home, but I get really angry when I have picked out an item and find the price increased sometimes 100 percent because of shipping and handling charges.

I am very familiar with UPS and post office shipping charges, and they go by weight — not dollar amount. But it seems that all of the mail-order catalogs go by dollar amount, which doesn't make any sense to me.

Could you please find the reason they go by dollar amount and how they figure their shipping charges? I wanted to order a pin recently, and the shipping and handling charges increased the price by 25 percent. — CINDY DUNCAN, GYPSUM, COLO.

DEAR CINDY: I checked with the Direct Marketing Association. Shipping and handling charges by their members are done in various ways. Some companies use a flat fee, others charge by weight alone, others go by weight and postal zone, and still others go by dollar amount. But if customers feel that the charges are unreasonable, they should call the customer service number listed in the catalog and let the vendor know.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

ARTHRITIS PAIN RELIEF REPORT

Dr. Christopher Burda, M.D., a leading rheumatologist and arthritis researcher, reports a 93% success rate in relief of pain among his patients involved in an open-label clinical study. These patients had pain associated with arthritis, bursitis, tendinitis and other similar disorders. Their pain relief ranged from good to complete relief. The over-the-counter drug that was used was the new AURUM analgesic lotion. AURUM is a rich, smooth, topically applied lotion for deep penetrating temporary relief from arthritis pain.

Dr. William G. Brelsford, M.D., while conducting a double-blind study at a leading research center said that AURUM can provide a significant level of pain relief for the discomfort of bursitis, tendinitis, arthritis and similar soft tissue injuries and disorders.

Dr. Joseph Kahn, Ph.D., P.T., of New York, a leading physiotherapist and author of the well known textbook "Principles and Practice of Electrotherapy," reports that all of his patients who used AURUM received temporary relief from pain. He said, "AURUM is a significant adjunct in the treatment of arthritis."

AURUM is formulated in a rich lotion base with the highest quality ingredients and combined with powerful analgesics. AURUM is one of the most effective pain relieving applications available without a prescription. AURUM is a safe, tested, alternative to prescription drugs without concern of gastrointestinal problems associated with some pills or tablets. AURUM contains Methyl Salicylate and 24 Karat Gold. Consult physician if allergic.

AURUM is now available in local drug and grocery stores. AURUM is relatively new on the market and some retailers may not be aware of its availability. Ask your retailer to order it through their wholesale drug supplier for next day delivery.

Customers and retailers can get additional information by calling toll free 1-800-256-9008. AURUM is available at Albertsons pharmacies.

Daniels cleared

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes announced Thursday that former Odessa Permian defensive star Tony Daniels has cleared academic requirements and will enroll at Tech in the fall.

The linebacker originally signed with the Red Raiders in 1992, but did not enroll in the fall after not meeting academic requirements set by the NCAA.

Daniels was a Class 5A All-State selections in 1991 and was a member of Permian's 16-0 state championship team.

Tech also announced that running back Andre Brown of Lewisville has also cleared academic requirements.

Attendance up

NEW YORK — The NFL set a record with its total paid attendance for the fourth straight season, the league said Thursday.

Total paid attendance last season was 17,784,354, breaking the 1991 record by 32,215. Total attendance records also were set in 1990 and 1989.

Regular-season paid attendance was 13,828,887 (61,736 per game), third highest ever, surpassed only in 1990 and '91.

The Buffalo Bills led the league in home paid attendance for the fifth straight year with a total of 630,978 for eight games. The league said 14 other teams topped the half-million mark: Kansas City, New York Giants, New York Jets, Denver, Cleveland, Atlanta, Detroit, New Orleans, Miami, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle and Dallas.

The Cowboys came in fourth, with paid attendance of 1,085,047.

Buffalo led the league in paid attendance, home and away, with 1,130,973.

Plainsmen win two

■ Lubbock Monterey starts Tournament of Champions with a no-hitter and two victories.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

In the early going of Thursday's first day of the 19th Annual Tournament of Champions, it looked like Midland's teams might have the run of the high school baseball competition. But by late Thursday night, things began looking pretty bright for two-time defending champion Lubbock Monterey.

After Midland Lee blew out El Paso Irvin in the day's opener, 15-1, Midland High later took a 2-1 victory over El Paso Burges, and the Tall City was 2-0 in the tourney. But sandwiched in between those games were two others.

One saw Monterey pitcher Matt Miller record a no-hitter in a 3-0 win over Del Rio, while the other resulted in a 1-0 El Paso Eastwood victory over Odessa Permian. In the nightcap, Monterey took a 5-2 winner's bracket decision over Lee, vaulting to the forefront of the race for the championship of the three-day tournament.

Today's schedule has MHS starting the day against Eastwood at 10 a.m. in Angels Stadium. Also at 10 a.m., Irvin will face Permian at Lee's Johnson Field. Action then returns to Angels Stadium for the rest of the day, as Del Rio and Burges face off at 12:30 p.m. and Lee takes on the Irvin-Permian winner at 3 p.m.

The MHS-Eastwood loser plays the Del Rio-Burges winner at 5:30 p.m., and the MHS-Eastwood winner faces Monterey at 8 p.m.

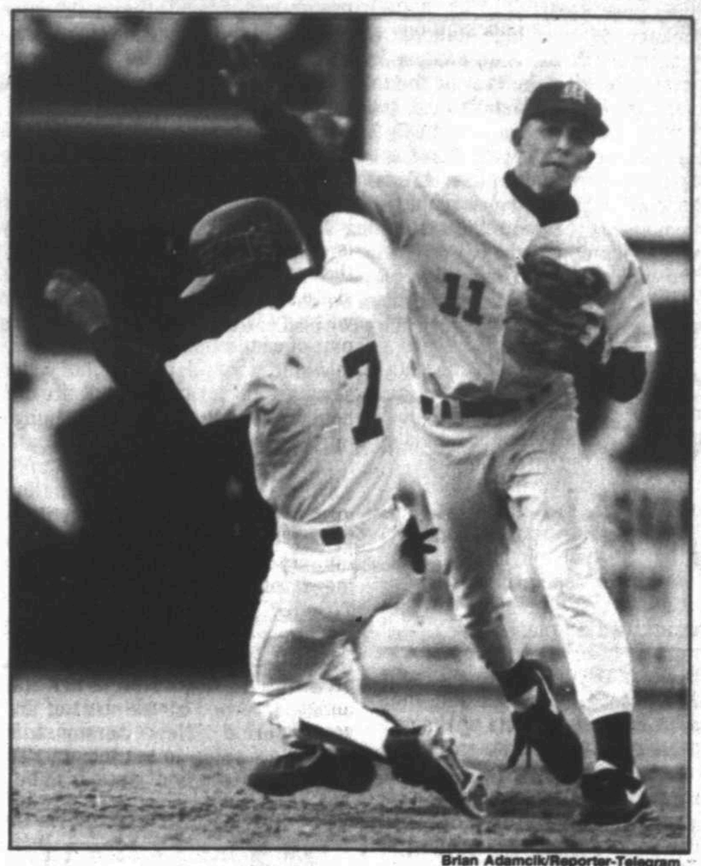

On Thursday morning, Lee's armor looked chinkless as the Rebels exploded for 10 runs in the sixth inning on the way to their 15-1 win over Irvin. Junior center fielder David Galvan drove in five runs while going 3-for-4 with a triple and a double. Catcher Brian Graham was also 3-for-4, driving in two runs, while Eric Benavidez, Chris Connally and Sean McIntosh all recorded two hits each.

If the Rebel offense was impressive, the performance of Monterey's Miller was equally eyebrow raising. Against Del Rio, his no-hitter was just one walk away from being a perfect game, and he struck out nine Ram batters.

When Lee and Monterey met in Thursday's last game, the remaining Plainsmen pitchers also showed they had some firepower. Monty Ward held Lee to one run in three innings, while Britt Carmichael shut the Rebs out in the next 4⅓ before McIntosh drove in Lee's second run.

Lee starter Jason Baker was shaky in the first couple of innings, when the Plainsmen scored

Shaving ritual underway

■ Midland High and Midland Lee swimmers gear for Region I meet with a razor blade.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Shaving.

It's an everyday nuisance that, like it or not, most people must endure. The act of shaving is not given much thought, except for the several minutes one must devote to personal hygiene each and every morning.

Swimmers, though, are an altogether different story. This is the time of year when ridding themselves of unwanted hair, facial or otherwise, becomes almost an obsession.

In fact, according to Midland High swim coach Larry Ridge, studies have been done at the University of Tennessee on the effects of shaving and swimming.

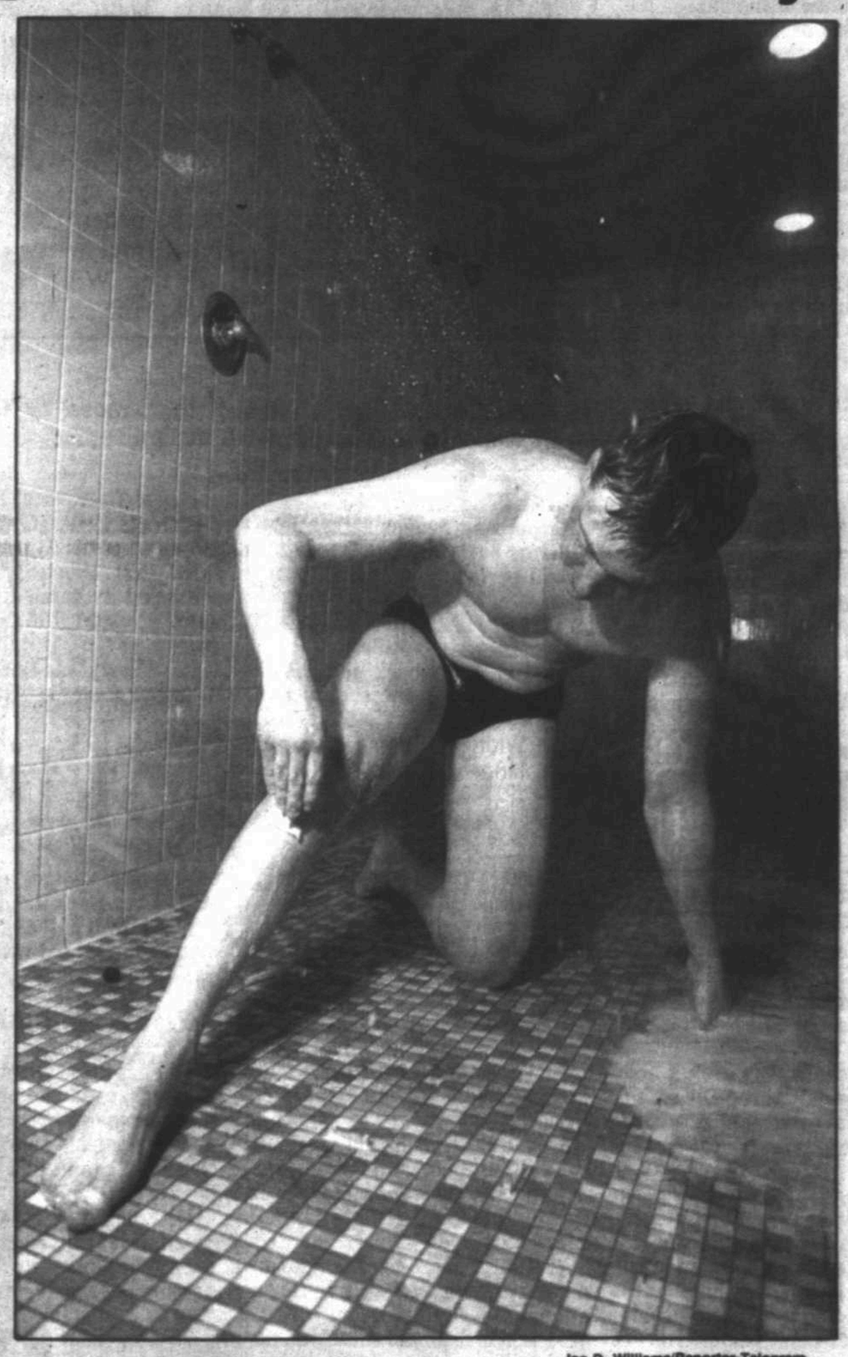

Ridge said the studies show a single-edge razor works best to help a swimmer, "cut down on resistance in the water. If you have no resistance, you glide through the water like a seal, not that I know what a seal feels like."

The affected areas for boys are mainly the palms, legs, arms, chest and sometimes backs. For girls, it's mainly legs, arms and palms.

Midland Lee swim coach Jeff Goelz agreed, saying the kinesthetic sense, or the feel of the water, is very helpful if a swimmer hopes to achieve the desired time in his or her event.

"When you shave," Goelz said, "not only do you remove hair, but some of your skin cells, as well. Shaving exposes a lot of cells and makes the shaven area a lot more sensitive. And when you're in the pool, it's good to have that feel and know what your body parts are doing."

Wildcats love Chap, Region I

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee's Rebels missed its chance to earn its first Class 5A Region I berth since the tournament moved to Midland in 1981 by losing to El Paso Hanks last Tuesday in Alpine — but Fort Worth Dunbar hasn't skipped a beat.

The Wildcats of Dunbar never miss a chance to party at the Region I level. Well, almost never. Dunbar is making its 12th Chaparral Center appearance in 13 years, meeting El Paso Coronado at 7:45 p.m. today in the tournament semifinals.

Hanks, who eliminated Lee from playing before a huge home crowd, will face Hurst Bell in the other semifinal at 6 p.m.

But this is — and has been — Dunbar's tournament. The Wildcats, who are heavily favored to win the championship again this year, have won six of the previous 12 Region I titles since 1981, and since they lost last year in the finals to O.D. Wyatt, the Wildcat faithful feel like it's time to win it again. Dunbar loves the Chap.

Dunbar, 30-4 this year, won Region I titles in Midland in 1981, 1984, 1987, 1988, 1990 and 1991. They have lost in the Region I semifinals only twice, in 1982 and 1989. The only time Dunbar didn't reach the Region I level of the playoffs was in 1985.

It's an impressive record the Wildcats bring to the Chap this weekend, but there is one monkey still hanging around. Dunbar does not have a state championship to put in the trophy case. Robert Hughes has won over 1,000 games, but doesn't have the ring.

And that brings us to Coronado's 27-2 T-Birds. Coronado is making its third consecutive Region I run, but has drawn Dunbar in the first round all three times, losing to the Wildcats 58-37 in 1991 and 55-40 last year.

The T-Birds have become a West Tex-

Blame it on George Washington

If the 1992-93 Midland College basketball season were to be compared to bird species, it could be said the team opened the year possessing the characteristics of the mighty bald eagle.

Patterson

The Chaps flew high and mostly proud at the campaign's outset, complete with a Top 20 ranking, and a spotless record through their first eight games.

Then came the conference season, and that soaring eagle turned into flattened road-kill. MC held a 3-6 record with just three games left in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference season, and it was as if the Chaps had abruptly flown into the front grill of an 18-wheeler fully stocked with frozen chicken parts.

But a funny thing happened after all the losing. The Chaps started winning again. Like the Roadrunner in the old cartoon series, the Chaps took off on a dead run, destined, it seemed, to blow into the post-season tournament with a full head of steam. Meep-meep.

But after MC's win over New Mexico Junior College two Monday's ago, another thing happened, except this time it wasn't so funny. Wiley Coyote, driving an 18-wheeler fully stocked with frozen chicken parts, ran head on into the Roadrunner. Roadkill again.

"I thought it was a bit of a roller-coaster season," MC head coach Steve Green said. "With a little luck in a luckless season, we would have felt extremely good about things."

In MC's last three games, the team looked more impressive than it had all season. Well, make that the last two and a half games, starting with the come-from-behind win against South Plains in which MC outscored the Texans 35-2 during one excruciating stretch for SPC. That was followed by a win over NMJC, probably MC's most impressive 40 minutes of ball all season, and then a season-ending win over New Mexico Military, a game which Green described "the first time I've ever been at NMMI and won by eight, and thought we played really well."

So MC ended the year at 6-6. As did South Plains and NMJC, creating a three-way tie for third. So why are the Chaps sitting at home while the Texans and T-Birds are playing in the Region V tournament in Waco? Quite simply, you can blame it on George Washington.

SPC made the tournament by virtue of having defeated Odessa and Howard colleges, a luxury MC did not have in four tries this season.

NMJC head coach Ron Black and Green were forced to flip a coin to decide who would be the final team to represent the league in the playoffs. The coin, a quarter, was hoisted in the air and Black called tails. The coin bounced on the tartan base of Chap Center, rolled up onto the parquet surface, spun around and finally settled on the tails side. MC had lost the coin flip and knew it was out of luck come playoff time.

"One of the few times I wish we would've played on tartan," Green managed to joke the week after the flip. "What could be more emblematic of the season than to have your future decided by a coin flip. If we would've called both heads and tails, it would've landed on the edge."

So many things went wrong for so much of MC's season, but Green said that in those last three games, more players were playing as well as they could than at any other pont during the year.

Ironic, too, that the two highest points in MC's season — the SPC and NMJC wins — were immediately followed by the two lowest points — the post-game brawl with the Texans, and the news that SPC had beaten Howard to knock MC from the region tournament.

More irony? Look on the back side of a quarter.

Whoa! Mavs have two key moves in one day

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks took two major steps toward rebuilding Thursday, signing former pro guard Quinn Buckner to a five-year contract as head coach and first-round draft pick Jim Jackson to a six-year deal.

Buckner, 38, a college standout at Indiana before playing in the NBA, is an analyst for NBC on league telecasts. He will take over as the fourth coach in the Mavericks' 13-year history next season.

"I went and got me a brand new hat out of the box today," Mavericks owner Don Carter told a packed news conference at Reunion Arena.

Buckner, who has no coaching experience, called the chance to revamp the struggling Mavericks a "tremendous opportunity."

"We will win," he said.

Interim coach Gar Heard will remain on the sidelines this season as the Mavericks (4-50) plod toward the NBA's futility record of 9-73 set by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers.

Buckner inherits a team filled with mostly unknown, inexperienced players. The only solid veteran, 31-year-old guard Derek Harper, has asked to be traded.

But the surprise signing of Jackson moved the team's rebuilding efforts forward. Jackson is a high-scoring shooting guard from Ohio State around which a franchise could be built.

"Surprises are everywhere," team general manager Norm Sonju.

Financial terms were not released on either deal.

Jackson's six-year contract includes this season, for which he will be paid in full. He will see limited playing time Friday in a home game against Houston.

Jackson had vowed he would neither sign with the Mavericks nor accept a trade. That would have enabled him to re-enter next year's draft.

"I'm sorry it took so long, but I'm looking forward to the future," he said. "They want to build with youth — I'm young. I think the difference was .. commitment from the top.

"Quinn and I talked on the phone and he reassured me."

Team officials sent Jackson their proposal last Thursday. He looked over the offer Friday and verbally agreed Saturday.

The deal with Buckner was finalized Monday.

"One of the things that pleases me the most is the chance to coach Jim Jackson," Buckner said.

Dallas, which has dropped its last 12 games, has not won on the road in 26 tries, including Wednesday's 125-97 loss to the Chicago Bulls. The Mavericks grabbed an NBA season-low 24 rebounds in the contest.

Buckner will become the first person to have played for Indiana's Bobby Knight to be named an NBA coach. Buckner, who starred on the Hoosier's undefeated 1976 national champion team, has remained close to Knight.

Buckner's hiring has been long rumored. Team officials reportedly asked him if he was interested in the job last summer, then resumed discussions following the Jan. 13 firing of Richie Adubato.

Buckner's tie to the Mavericks is his long friendship with Rick Sund, Dallas' vice president of basketball operations and a former Bucks' official while the guard was in Milwaukee.

The Bucks made Buckner their first pick in the 1976 draft, then he joined the Boston Celtics, where he won an NBA title in 1984. His career ended after playing for the Indiana Pacers in 1986.

Cavs hit 1,000 with early run

■ NBA Roundup

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 34 points and Indiana hit its first 15 shots of the second quarter as the Pacers defeated the Atlanta Hawks, 136-111, for the franchise's 1,000th regular-season win.

The victory also was the 100th at Indiana for coach Bob Hill.

The Pacers (28-29), who finished an undefeated four-game homestand, now lead the Hawks (26-31) by two games in the race for the eighth and final Eastern Conference playoff berth.

Miller was 10 of 11 from the field in the first half, including 4 of 5 from 3-point range. He had four baskets during the team's second-quarter hot streak as the Pacers stretched a 32-26 lead into a 71-51 advantage.

SuperSonics 138, Hornets 112

SEATTLE — Eddie Johnson's 22 points led eight players in double figures as Seattle won its ninth straight game.

Michael Cage's seven points led a 9-2 run to start the fourth quarter, extending a 96-89 lead to 105-91.

The Sonics, 6-0 since the All-Star break, matched the second-longest winning streak in club history. The club record is 12, set in 1982.

Nets 116, Magic 97

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman scored a season-high 34 points and threw a few dunks down in Shaquille O'Neal's face.

Orlando was in the game until O'Neal picked up his third and fourth fouls on offensive calls early in the third quarter. When the rookie returned at the start of the final period, New Jersey had turned a 1-point deficit into a 81-69 lead.

Knicks 125, Jazz 111

NEW YORK — John Starks broke his nose in the first quarter, then broke a shooting slump with 15 points on 6-for-6 shooting in the second period, and New York held on for a victory over Utah.

Starks, who finished with 22 points, broke his nose in a collision with Jeff Malone of the Jazz in the second minute of the game, then went to the locker room for a facemask.

Cavaliers 103, Timberwolves 95

MINNEAPOLIS — Terrell Brandon, playing for injured Mark Price, scored 17 of his career-high 21 points in the second half as Cleveland rallied from a 15-point deficit to defeat Minnesota.

Brad Daugherty had 20 points and 13 rebounds and Larry Nance scored 16 to become the 64th player in NBA history with 15,000 career points as the Cavaliers won for the eighth time in nine games.

Cleveland had been 0-3 this season without Price, out with a sprained thumb. Since the start of 1989-90, the Cavaliers are 31-58 without the All-Star point guard, 139-76 with him.

Clippers 117, Bullets 98

LANDOVER, Md. — Ron Harper rebounded from his worst game of the season, scoring 20 points as Los Angeles rode a 36-point second quarter to a victory over Washington.

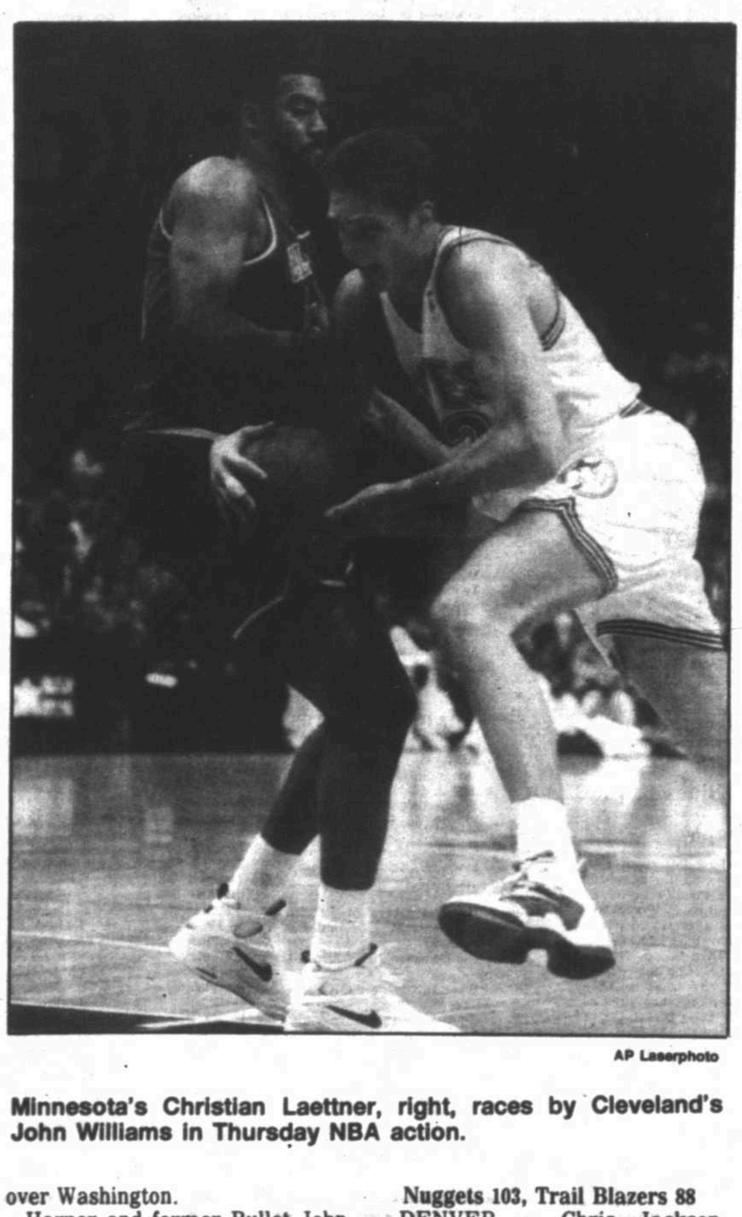

Harper and former Bullet John Williams each had 7 points in the second period, when the Clippers made 17 of 23 shots (74 percent) to turn a four-point deficit into a 63-47 halftime lead.

Washington never got closer than 10 points in the second half.

Nuggets 103, Trail Blazers 88

DENVER — Chris Jackson scored 12 of his 28 points in a lopsided first quarter, and Denver continued its domination at home with a victory over struggling Portland.

The victory was Denver's 13th in its last 14 games at McNichols .

three of their runs, as he had trouble finding the plate. But after he finally found the range, Baker stopped Monterey for the next three innings. But the control vanished again in the sixth, as Baker walked two runners and Carmichael batted them home with a double.

"I think it was just a case of the kids pressing too hard. I still think we can play with Monterey, but we have to get used to going with the pitch they give us," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez. "We just got behind early and Baker had a hard time getting started. He showed he can get the job done, he's just got to get in the right frame of mind earlier."

MHS pitcher Joe Urquidez, whose cousin Julian Urquidez pitches for Lee, also flirted with a no-hitter, taking his into the sixth inning as the Bulldogs led 2-0.

But in the sixth he was touched for a single by Mustang Fred Fierro, and Rafa Reynoso smashed a triple to later break the shutout. Meanwhile, the MHS defense was busy giving Urquidez plenty of help.

Urquidez walked four batters and two errors allowed two more base runners to reach. But the Bulldog infield more than made up for two miscued by turning five double plays. MHS catcher Tim McLaughlin also sent an early message that base stealing would not be accepted when he easily caught Reynoso at second in the fourth.

MHS first baseman Gabe Lawson provided the offensive punch by driving in both runs, on a single and double.

"I was looking for a couple of fastballs because he (Burges pitcher Gino Moreno) was starting us all off with fastballs," Lawson said.

"In our first ballgame we had constant defensive and mental mistakes. But tonight I think we played about well defensively as we can at this time of year," said MHS head coach Rick Wood.

LONDON (AP) — Ben Johnson will learn today whether he will ever race again.

Johnson's fate is in the hands of an international panel of doping experts who will meet at Paris to examine the Canadian sprinter's latest alleged use of performance-enhancing drugs.

If the panel finds Johnson guilty, he faces an automatic life ban by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

That's the penalty for an athlete caught for a second doping offense. Johnson was first caught at the 1988 Olympics in Seoul and stripped of his 100-meter gold medal and world record and suspended for two years after testing positive for steroids.

Friday's meeting comes two days after published reports that Johnson had failed another drug test.

IAAF officials confirmed Thursday that Johnson was tested three times in six days in January in Canada. The results of a Jan. 17 test at a meet in Montreal will be the focus of Friday's meeting.

"Of the three controls, there is one whose results appear suspicious," said Arne Ljungqvist of Sweden, chairman of the IAAF doping commission.

According to IAAF sources, the first and third tests were negative while the second showed high levels of testosterone — a steroid-related substance which enables athletes to train more strenuously and recover more quickly.

Testosterone is listed as an anabolic steroid in the International Olympic Committee's anti-doping charter. It is a male hormone which normally exists in the body at a ratio of 1-to-1 to another hormone, epitestosterone.

Indiana clinches share of title

■ Top 25 Roundup

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Calbert Cheaney set a Big Ten career scoring record Thursday night, scoring 35 points as No. 2 Indiana clinched at least a share of the Big Ten title by routing Northwestern 98-69.

The Hoosiers' 6-foot-7 senior forward passed three players — former record holder Glen Rice of Michigan; Hoosier Steve Alford and Mike McGee of Michigan and now has 2,468 points for his career.

Overall, it was a record night for the Hoosiers (26-3, 15-1).

The conference title is a record 19th for Indiana and record-tying 11th for coach Bob Knight. The Hoosiers can guarantee the outright conference championship with a victory at home next Wednesday against Michigan State.

Northwestern (7-17, 2-13) was coming off a 62-59 upset of No. 24 Purdue but made Cheaney's record easy.

Cheaney, averaging 22 for the season, scored Indiana's first 7 points of the game, including a rebound basket for a 7-2 lead that put his career total past Alford and McGee.

Cheaney missed his next two field goal attempts and two free throw tries as Northwestern rallied from that early deficit to a 25-24 lead with 7 minutes to go in the first half. Matt Nover put Indiana back in front to stay, and a 3-point goal by Cheaney with 6:12 to go put him past Rice's record 2,442.

He finished the half with 16 points as the Hoosiers took a 45-35 lead at the intermission. A 3-pointer by Cheaney started a 12-point Indiana streak at the start of the second half and the Hoosiers steadily built their lead the rest of the way.

New Mexico 69, No. 9 Utah 59

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Ike Williams scored 26 points and New Mexico's 3-point barrage finally wore down No. 9 Utah for a win that provides a booster shot for the Lobos' NCAA tournament hopes.

The win for New Mexico (20-6, 12-5 in the Western Athletic Conference) over the league-leading Utes gave the Lobos their seventh straight season of 20 wins or better.

New Mexico, North Carolina and Duke are the only three Division I teams to have won 20 or more games over the past seven seasons.

No. 11 Florida St. 83, Ga. Tech 82

ATLANTA — Eleventh-ranked Florida State blew a 15-point lead, then rallied in the final 10 minutes and edged Georgia Tech behind Bob Sura's 22-point performance.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for FSU, which finished the regular season 22-8 and clinched second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season race at 12-4.

Tech fell to 15-10 and 7-8.

Sura's two free throws with 16 seconds remaining gave the Seminoles an 83-80 lead.

Malcolm Mackey's dunk with three seconds remaining ended the scoring, the inside shot coming when Travis Best couldn't get off a potential game-tying 3-point shot.

James Forrest led the Yellow Jackets with 23 points and Mackey added 22.

Sam Cassell and Rodney Dobard each added 16 points for the Seminoles.

No. 19 Oklahoma St. 114, Oral Roberts 85

STILLWATER, Okla. — Bryant Reeves, Brooks Thompson and Fred Burley all had career nights as No. 19 Oklahoma State finally shook off Oral Roberts in the final game for ORU coach Ken Trickey.

Burley scored 35, Thompson had 33 and Reeves 31, and the Cowboys (19-6) needed them. Oral Roberts only trailed 88-83 before Oklahoma State outscored the Titans 26-2 in the final six minutes.

Oral Roberts finished its season 5-22, the worst record in the school's 28-year history. Trickey, who agreed last month to resign, winds up his career with a record of 363-261 in 22 seasons, 11 of those in two stints at ORU.

The Cowboys scored 71 points in the second half — six below their per-game average — by hitting 24 of 30 shots including 14 straight during one stretch.

Va. Commonwealth 77, No. 20 Tulane 65

NEW ORLEANS — Sherron Mills had 19 points and 19 rebounds in leading Virginia Commonwealth to an overtime victory over No. 20 Tulane in a Metro Conference game.

VCU (18-7 and 7-4 in the Metro), made only one of five free-throw attempts in regulation, but hit 12 of 15 in overtime and outscored the Green Wave 21-9 in the extra period.

Tulane (20-7 and 8-3) led 56-51 with three minutes left in regulation, but the Rams scored five straight points to force overtime.

No. 21 BYU 84, UTEP 63

EL PASO, Texas — Gary Trost and Nick Sanderson led a fast-breaking Brigham Young attack and as the No. 21-ranked Cougars beat Texas-El Paso to move into a first place tie in the Western Athletic Conference.

BYU (23-3, 15-2) moved into a tie with Utah, which fell to New Mexico, 69-59

No. 22 Louisville 82, Va. Tech 61

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Greg Minor had 17 points and 10 rebounds as No. 22 Louisville defeated Virginia Tech, giving the Cardinals their first Metro Conference championship since 1990.

Louisville's 11-1 conference record is its best since a 12-0 mark in 1983. Last week Louisville (17-8) assured itself of the top seed in the Metro tournament with a 94-67 victory against runner-up Tulane.

No. 23 Mass. 61, St. Joseph's 43

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Louis Roe scored 12 points and No. 23 Massachusetts ran off 21 straight points in the second half to beat St. Joseph's, 61-43, Thursday night in the final game of the regular season.

Massachusetts (20-5 overall, 11-3 Atlantic-10) clinched the conference championship on Monday against St. Bonaventure, 86-62.

SHAVE: Region I swim begins at Tech today

(From 1C)

This week, a lot of hair was shaved, rinsed and drained down sinks in Midland. Today and Saturday, 36 swimmers from MHS and Lee combined will participate in the Region I swim meet at the Texas Tech pool in Lubbock.

Goelz said virtually his entire team has shaved for the event. MHS, in turn, will shave about half its team.

Before the meet, a swim coach will compare the times of swimmers at other schools to see how his swimmers fare. If he feels, for instance, the regional tournament is the best shot his team will have at a championship, the coach will likely shave his entire team so they can get that slight edge, knowing this may be his team's last chance. If a coach feels his swimmers may have an advantage at the next swim meet, the state meet, for instance, he may not have the entire squad trim.

"It's as much mental, if not more, as physical," Goelz said. "You tell a high school boy to shave his legs, psychologically he'll say to himself, 'Boy, I better swim fast, or I'm gonna look like a fool.' So he swims his fastest to make it look worthwhile. Once they get over their initial fear, for the kids that do it, it's their favorite time of the year.

"It's the only way to increase your speed, increase your power, and decrease your drag, and drag is anything from the size of suit you wear to the hair on your head or the hair on your arms or legs. Which is why you go to a region meet and see a guy with a 32 waist crammed into a 28 suit, because they're trying to get the best time."

A fraction of an ounce can mean a fraction of a second, and for a lot of swimmers, it will be their only shot at a victory.

At regionals — where the MHS boys are favored again, and the girls race should be a four-way battle involving both Midland schools, San Angelo and El Paso Coronado — only the winner in each event is assured of advancing to the state meet. Eight more qualify in each event, but those are swimmers with the next eight best times across the entire state.

How dedicated are swimmers to their sport?

"I know some girls that have more leg hair than their boyfriends," Goelz said. "You won't see any of them wearing skirts or shorts from Christmas until now. But if you're going to do something, you might as well do it right, and to get the full effect of the shave, you need to let those leg hairs grow."

Ridge, who said he witnessed the growth of the shaving practice as early as the 1960s, says boys are just as prone to the side effects of not shaving as the girls are.

"They'll take a little gigging, too," Ridge said, "especially after the shave. And the girls .. some of them look like they've committed hari-kari."

Midland High and Midland Lee swimmers qualified for the Region I Swim Meet, today and Saturday at the Texas Tech pool in Lubbock.

5A: Finals set Saturday

as threat, winning Region I berths three years in a row, but those are the only three times Coronado has obtained that status since 1981.

The Hanks Knights own an impressive 31-3 record under coach Danny Lopez. The Knights' only other Region I appearance since 1981 came in 1990 when they lost to — who else? — Dunbar, 77-68, in the semifinals.

The Knights might have a chance to add a step this year since they appear to matchup well with the 26-9 Bell team, which has been coached by Ray DeBord since 1973. This is the first Region I test for Bell.

This was the first year for each district to send three teams to the state playoffs. It didn't make much difference in Region I since all four teams today carry the mantel of district champions.

Tonight's winners will play at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Chap to determine which team moves to Austin's Final Four.

Perry, Maggs change teams

Associated Press

The NFL's new system of free agency became a fact on Thursday when Gerald Perry and Don Maggs became the first two players to change teams, demonstrating how big a premium is being placed on left offensive tackles.

The biggest name involved in the day's dealings, though, was quarterback Phil Simms, who agreed to re-sign with the New York Giants. The signing ended rumors that Simms was ready to rejoin Bill Parcells in New England, and it also turned Jeff Hostetler into one of the more available experienced quarterbacks.

Perry left the Rams to sign with the Los Angeles Raiders, and Maggs moved from Houston to Denver.

The 37-year-old Simms, most valuable player in the 1987 Super Bowl, may have set a certain market value for quarterbacks when he agreed to sign a two-year, $5 million deal — a $900,000 raise over last season.

Earlier this week, new coach Dan Reeves indicated he preferred to keep Simms over Jeff Hostetler, also a free agent, as the transition quarterback to tutor young prospects Dave Brown and Kent Graham.

"Clearly this means Jeff will be seeking another team," said Marvin Demoff, Hostetler's agent, "We have some meetings scheduled. Others will be set up."

The signing of Perry, who the Rams thought they locked up, prompted the team to say it would file a tampering charge with the league charging that the Raiders contacted Perry prior to the March 1 start of the free agency period.

Perry will get $3 million over three years, just under the figure for the league's top 10 offensive linemen.

Maggs, meanwhile, moved from Houston to Denver. The Broncos, ironically, had had a lingering gap at left tackle ever since they traded Perry to the Rams for Gaston Green after Perry had a series of off-the-field problems. The pronlems continued in Los Angeles — he's now awaiting a hearing on charges of sexually assaulting a babysitter he had employed.

Those problems had less effect on the offers Perry received than the fact that he, like Maggs, plays left tackle. That's usually the position on the quarterback's blind side and good left tackles at are a premium.

For example, when teams named their "franchise players" — those that can't move in this first year of free agency — three of the 10 were left tackles — Lomas Brown of Detroit, Jumbo Elliott of the Giants and Paul Gruber of Tampa Bay. That means that five teams have moved to solidify that position in the first week of free agency.

Meanwhile, the team that seemed most aggressive in the early stages was Cleveland.

Defensive end Reggie White of the Philadelphia Eagles will visit Cleveland this weekend on a "recruiting visit." He will be joined by teammate Keith Byars and wide receiver Mark Ingram of the Giants.

White has said he wants to sign with a team that will make a commitment to winning.

Levelland vaults into 4A finals

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Austin Westlake will play Levelland in the Class 4A championship game, advancing to the finals after beating Paris North Lamar, 59-47, in Thursday's semifinal at the 1993 UIL State Girls Basketball Tournament.

The Loboettes (30-5), winners of 17 consecutive games, led 16-2 with 2:11 to play in the first half before North Lamar found enough of a spark to cut the lead to 20-12 by halftime. Levelland tried to put the Panthers away via a 8-0 run in the third quarter, but North Lamar surged back to within 35-30 with :31 to play in the third quarter.

Levelland answered back by scoring the game's next five points to pull away for good.

Senior guard Dana Cunningham led the Loboettes with 20 points and junior forward Trina Pinner added 19.

North Lamar, which ended its season at 31-4, was led by senior center Melissa Rollerson's 25 points, all but four of which came in the second half.

In the earlier game, junior post Lindsay Smith scored 22 points and pulled down 24 rebounds to pace Westlake past Silsbee 61-36.

Smith poured in 18 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in the first half as the Chaparrals (27-8) jumped on Silsbee early and often while building a 30-12 lead at intermission.

Westlake won its 16th straight game by manhandling the smaller Lady Tigers (who ended the season at 29-6) on the defensive end, forcing Silsbee into hurried shots and turnovers. With the 6-foot-3 Smith roaming the paint, the Lady Tigers settled for shots from the outside and their accuracy suffered as Silsbee converted less than 30 percent of its shots in the first two quarters.

Senior forward Lauren Brandt added 16 points for Westlake and senior post Kathy Bieser hit for nine.

Class 3A
Dripping Springs 63,
Mont Belvieu Barbers Hill 57
Dimmitt 54, Winnsboro 43

Melanie McMullin connected on six of eight free throws in the final 1:24 to help Dripping Springs come from behind for a victory over Mont Belvieu Barbers Hill in a Class 3A semifinal.

Barbers Hill led 50-40 with 6:08 to play, but Dripping Springs opened up a 15-5 run, featuring eight points and a crucial 3-pointer by McMullin, to tie the game at 55 with 2:41 left.

McMullin, who led all scorers with 19 points, took over from there, demanding the ball and zigzagging up court as Barbers Hill defenders lunged and fouled the quick-footed 5-5 guard.

Dripping Springs will face Dimmitt, which defeated Winnsboro earlier in the day, in the state title game Saturday.

Amber Follis scored 15 points and Virginia Viverette added 12 for the Eagles, who were making their first appearance at the state tournament in a decade.

The turning point appeared to be when Viverette fouled out with 4:29 to play and her team leading 53-47. She had scored five of her team's previous eight baskets before getting her fifth foul, and the Eagles scored only four points after she left.

Dripping Springs, which is making its first trip to the state tournament, received a strong game from Cassell Punyear, who finished with 17 points, most of them coming inside.

Earlier, Halley Bradley scored 17 points and Rose Cruz added 16 as Dimmitt defeated Winnsboro in the other Class 3A semifinal.

Trailing 37-35, Dimmitt (32-2) went on a decisive 8-0 run started with two consecutive baskets by Bradley that put the Bobbies ahead 43-37 with 5:50 to play.

Dimmitt simply extended its lead down the stretch as Winnsboro, which finished the season 28-7, went cold. The Lady Raiders, who scored only six points in the final eight minutes, were led by Pam Hicks with 12 points and Tina Moore, who added 10.

Winnsboro, which lost in the state finals last year to Canyon, led 32-25 with 5:30 left in the third period. But turnovers and careless fouls allowed Dimmitt back into the game.

Winnsboro was making its third consecutive appearance in the state tournament.

The Bobbies, who have not been to the state tournament since 1957, received a strong inside effort from Cruz, who had 16 rebounds to match her point total.

The Lady Raiders led 8-0, holding Dimmitt scoreless for the first two minutes. But the Bobbies launched a 10-0 run sparked by a 3-pointer from Michelle Schmacher to take its first lead with eight seconds left in the first period.

Dimmitt led 25-23 at intermission.

Class A
Celeste 65, Nazareth 59
Muenster 44, Thrall 31

Shalonda Enis scored 38 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to help defending state champion Celeste return to the Class A finals.

Enis, who is the all-time scoring leader in Texas girls five-on-five basketball with 3,325 points, simply overpowered perennial threat Nazareth.

Celeste (34-1) will face Muenster, which defeated Thrall, in the Class A state championship game Saturday.

The 6-foot Enis towered over undersized Nazareth, which resorted to 3-point shooting to try and keep up with Enis' inside attack.

Melinda Schmucker had 16 points and nine rebounds and Jill Pohlmeier added 15 points to lead Nazareth, which connected on 9 of 28 3-pointers.

The Swiftettes, who finish the season 26-9, won the state title in 1991 and were appearing in the state tournament for the 15th time.

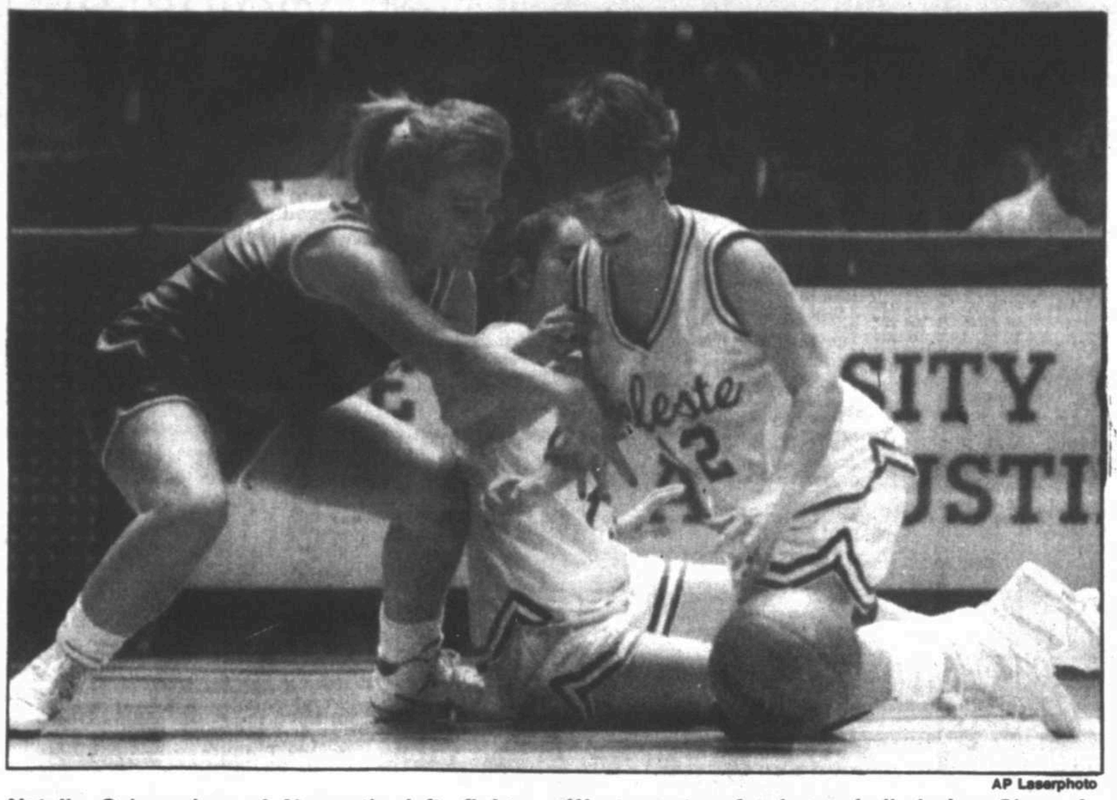

But the game belonged to Enis, who was studied from the first row by University of Texas women's basketball coach Jody Conradt.

Nazareth never got within five points of Celeste in the final period.

Danell Reiter led Muenster (35-1) to its first state championship game with 14 points as the Lady Hornets lost a 10-point first-half lead, but then broke away from cold-shooting Thrall in the second half.

Tracy Coulter, Nikki Harrison and Jenny Bartz each had seven points to lead the Tigerettes, who finish the season 31-6.

Thrall opened the second half with an 8-3 run, highlighted by three points from Coulter as the Tigerettes pulled within 28-27 with 3:02 left in the third period.

Norman birdies earn narrow lead

■ Doral Open Golf

MIAMI (AP) — Greg Norman, playing with the flair and authority that once made him golf's leading performer, scored eight birdies in a 7-under-par 65 and took a one-stroke lead Thursday after the first round of the $1.4 million Doral Open.

"I'm not usually a low first-round shooter," Norman said. "I'm usually not focused that well in the first round.

"This just reinforces the feeling I have about my game right now, the feeling I'm taking into the start of this season."

Even Norman's fast start, however, could not completely separate him from a starry field that included such familiar names as Tom Kite, Fred Couples, Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus.

Kite, the current U.S. Open champ and the winner of his last two starts this season, had a 15-yard chip-in birdie as the highlight of a 66.

"Actually, I didn't hit the ball quite as well as I have been, but, obviously, a lot of things are going good for me now," Kite said.

"I made some good putts and had that chip-in. When you do that, a not-so-good round turns into a pretty good one," he said.

He was tied at 6-under-par with Dave Rummells, a frequent contender this season but not yet a winner in an 8-year pro tour career.

Paul Azinger and Ed Humenik were another shot back at 67.

Couples, the Masters champion, and Watson, who will serve as captain of the American Ryder Cup team this fall, led a large group at 68.

"Just like old times," Watson chortled after holing out a 130-yard wedge for an eagle-2 on the 11th hole.

Among those tied with Watson and Couples were Australian Steve Elkington, South Africa Fulton Allem, Peter Jacobsen, Tom Purtzer, Robert Wrenn and Loren Roberts.

Former M-Cub home as Rangers' pitcher

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Former Midland Cub Craig Lefferts is playing for his third team in less than one season but the Texas Rangers say they'll have a home for him, whether it's as the No. 4 starter or in the bullpen.

"That's why we went after him," General Manager Tom Grieve said. "He could fit into any role on the ball club and there aren't many guys like that, who have that versatility."

Lefferts has started 37 games in his 10-year major league career and 32 of them were last year in a split season between San Diego and Baltimore, when he posted a 14-12 record and regained his desire to be a starting pitcher.

"They've told me that I'm one of six pitchers fighting for two spots in the rotation and that's my goal," Lefferts said after pitching two innings of an intra-squad game.

"I had nine years in the bullpen and one year as the starter. I'd like to continue as a starter. I think I can improve on it."

In his first two seasons at San Diego, Lefferts was among the league leaders in saves. He was fourth in 1990 with 23 saves in 31 opportunities. He had 23 saves again in 1991 in 30 chances.

He stepped forward last year as the starter for the Padres, posting a 13-9 record and 3.69 ERA, tying for second on the staff in victories and third in starts. He had a 1-3 record and 4.09 ERA in five starts at Baltimore.

"He's done everything a pitcher can do as far as a pitcher is concerned," Grieve said. "He's been a stopper, middle reliever and starter. He's coming off a pretty good year as a starter."

The Rangers would like to see one of their younger pitchers step up to take the No. 4 starting spot.

"It would be great if one of the young pitchers really came on and was ready to step into that role, then we have Craig as the swing and as a middle reliever and a spot starter," Grieve said.

Baseball on verge of breaking new ground

PHOENIX (AP) — Baseball owners drew plans for changing the landscape of the sport Thursday, giving preliminary approval for expanded playoffs, interleague play and splitting each league into three divisions.

The moves could be in place by 1995.

In a pair of straw votes that were overwhelming but not unanimous, the 28 teams approved doubling the playoffs from four teams to eight by adding an extra round, and splitting each league into two divisions of five teams and one division of four.

They also asked schedule-makers to include 10 to 20 interleague games per season for each team, taking natural rivalries into account. The only interleague play this century has been in spring training, the All-Star game and the World Series.

"I think there is a great possibility the landscape is changing," said Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

"We're in a very competitive business with a lot of forms of entertainment," he said. "There's no industry that can afford to sit back."

The changes were sparked by a six-month examination of baseball's future following commissioner Fay Vincent's forced resignation last Sept. 7. Many owners are worried about finances, and see expanded playoffs as a way of adding revenue by creating more games for television and pennant races.

"It will add attendance in September," said Peter Magowan, the new managing general partner of the San Francisco Giants.

Baseball has been the most conservative of the major team sports. The National League, which started play in 1876, and the American League, which formed in 1900, sent their champions directly to the World Series before dividing into divisions for 1969.

Traditionalists have ridiculed the NFL, NBA and NHL for their extended playoffs, which, some say, lessen the significance of the regular season.

"When baseball doesn't do anything, they say these guys are staid, they're living in the 19th century," Selig said.

Twelve of 28 teams make the NFL playoffs; 16 of 27 make the NBA playoffs; and 16 of 24 make the NHL playoffs.

"I think eight teams out of 28 is not an excessive number of teams," Selig said. "And while I don't want to comment on the other sports, it's less than the other sports."

The changes must be approved by the Major League Baseball Players Association and could be tied to a change in the collective bargaining agreement.

"I would hope for once in their lives the owners would try to develop something with us from square one. Or, if we're past square one, from square two," said Donald Fehr, the union's eecutive director.

While schedule drafts with the changes will be prepared for 1994, owners said starting the following year was much more realistic.

"It's a very important step," said John Harrington of the Boston Red Sox, who made the proposals in his role as head of the schedule-format committee. "Now we have to put our shoulder to the wheel and develop some schedules."

PHOENIX (AP) — A proposal from Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles for splitting each league into three divisions:

NL East — Florida, Montreal, New York Mets, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh.
NL Central — Atlanta, Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati, Houston, St Louis.
NL West — Colorado, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco.
AL East — Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, New York Yankees, Toronto.
AL Central — Chicago White Sox, Detroit, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minnesota.
AL West — California, Seattle, Oakland, Texas.

Verdict still out on Bo's return

Associated Press

■ Spring Training

Baseball's most famous hip was put to an important test on the first day of the exhibition season. And Bo Jackson, who knows many things, still doesn't know how well he can run.

"It's just the first game," he said Thursday. "I think you guys are expecting too much."

Jackson, playing for the first time with his artificial left hip, went 1 for 4 with an RBI single as the designated hitter for the Chicago White Sox. He left after five innings of an 11-10 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates at Sarasota, Fla.

The 30-year-old slugger never needed to run all out. And that's just as well because he also is hobbled by a sore right hamstring. So he did what any mortal would — he limped on the bases.

Jackson was not on the team's travel roster for Friday game's at Lakeland, Fla. He said he thought he'd be ready for Saturday's game against Texas.

"There's no need to play every day," he said. "I don't need to be the DH every day. I don't need to play first base every day."

Even so, he will need to do enough to convince the White Sox that his plastic-and-metal hip can stand the rigors of a full season.

The White Sox have until March 15 to either pick up his contract, which guarantees him $910,000 and has another $1.5 million in incentives, or pay $150,000 to release him.

Jackson has not played in a major league game that counted since the final month of the 1991 season for the White Sox. However, the club has built a ticket campaign around his return. They just don't know, and neither does anyone else, whether he can make it back.

In other news, some Cincinnati Reds players aren't surprised general manager Jim Bowden said he would trade a star player eligible for free agency rather than lose him without compensation.

Pitchers Jose Rijo and Tim Belcher, second baseman Bip Roberts and third baseman Chris Sabo are eligible to be free agents after this season unless the Reds sign them to long-term contracts.

Bowden said this week that he would trade one of the four by opening day if he cannot sign one to a long-term deal. The Reds' winter loss of free-agent starter Greg Swindell to Houston has made Bowden wary.

"It's certainly not news to me," Belcher said of Bowden's statement. "I've earned the right to choose where I'll work, and who I'll work for. Cincinnati is certainly high on my list. It's not a decision I'll take lightly."

There's now an ironic twist in the Kelly Gruber saga. The California Angels, mainly manager Buck Rodgers, screamed foul after Gruber was forced to undergo shoulder surgery last month. But Luis Sojo, the other party in the Dec. 7 deal between the Angels and Toronto, has a sore left wrist.

While test results showed no damage, the Jays say Sojo had "instability" in a small joint in his left hand.

When informed of Sojo's status, Gruber said: "I hope I can come back and have them (the Jays) complain even more."

The Blue Jays completed their contract-signing process, coming to terms with Sojo, infielder Domingo Martinez and pitchers Juan Guzman, Paul Menhart and Bob MacDonald on one-year deals.

Dodgers pitcher Ramon Martinez displayed newfound command of his mechanics by pitching three strong innings in a minor-league camp game. He struck out six of the 10 batters he faced and allowed only one hit.

"I feel very good about everything," said Martinez, who missed the final month of the 1992 season with tendinitis in his pitching elbow. "Everything is coming together the way I want. I'm a lot happier with my pitching now."

Gregg Jefferies has impressed Cardinals manager Joe Torre with his enthusiasm for the transition to first base.

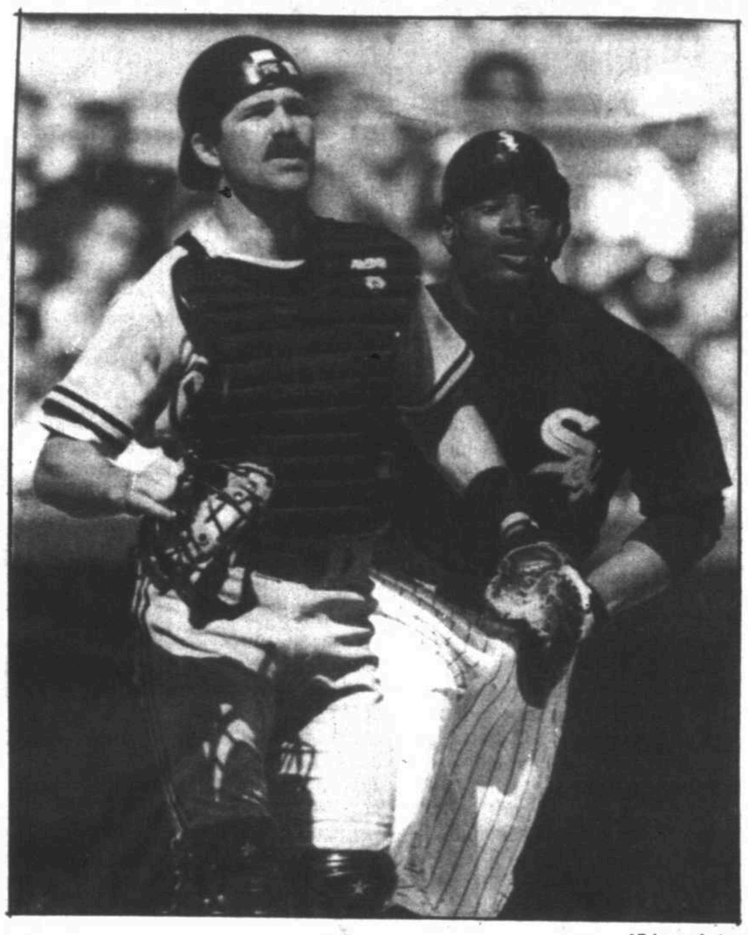

"Jefferies is enjoying himself," Torre said. "I don't see any problems."

George Kissell, long-time field coordinator for the Cardinals, has worked closely with Jefferies in his conversion to first base. With the New York Mets and Kansas City Royals, Jefferies played every infield position but first base.

"He's coachable and loves to work," Kissell said. "And he'll be a good RBI man for us."

Charlie Hayes, the Colorado Rockies third baseman and one of their projected leaders in their inaugural season, tore a ligament in his right thumb and will be sidelined four to six weeks.

Hayes, who was injured sliding into third base Wednesday, hit .257 with 18 homers and 66 RBIs for the Yankees last season.

Fans besiege Ryan

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Fans who lined up beginning at 7:30 a.m. Thursday were delighted to see the posted sign that told them, yes, Nolan Ryan would be signing autographs.

Ryan's fans are turning out in growing numbers to get any kind of memorabilia possible from their hero, who is beginning his 26th and final year in the major leagues before retiring to the Hall of Fame.

It was long after noontime before Ryan — after pitching 30 minutes of batting practice and lifting weights — was able to sit down in a folding chair beside the chain link fence and sign autographs for his adoring fans.

Texas Rangers officials post a sign on the gate telling fans if Ryan is signing on that day, and the 400-plus who stood throughout the morning were rewarded for their patience.

"Thanks for stressing family values, Nolan," said a man in sunburned legs and Bermuda shorts.

Ryanmania is just beginning for the final time. Ryan's autograph line outnumbered fans watching an intra-squad game in progress on the main stadium field.

Ryan is scheduled to pitch against his former team, the Houston Astros, in an exhibition game April 2 in the Astrodome. More than 50,000 tickets already have been sold. It could be the largest crowd ever to see a professional baseball game in Texas.

"Nolan said it's the first time he's had to build his whole spring around pitching an exhibition game," General Manager Tom Grieve joked. "If he doesn't pitch, he can't go home to Alvin."

"We've made it clear that Nolan's availability will be determined by what's best for the team, I think fans understand that," Grieve said.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Aircraft plants

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — The commercial airline industry's travails are taking their toll on two small airplane parts makers.

Rohr Inc. said Thursday it is trying to sell its plant in Hagerstown and may close it if no buyer is found, idling 400 workers. The plant makes composite aerodynamic casings for aircraft engines and thrust reversers that direct the aircraft's exhaust forward to help slow planes on landings.

And an Iowa-based unit of Rockwell International Corp. said Thursday it is laying off about 80 of its 6,000 employees, reflecting fallout from major cutbacks by the Boeing Co.

Wall Street

NEW YORK — Wall Street earned a record $6.18 billion before taxes in 1992, despite a 36 percent drop in fourth-quarter profits.

The securities industry was bolstered by record levels of equity and debt underwriting for the year as well as record trading volume on the NYSE, the world's biggest stock exchange.

Pepsi growth

NEW YORK — Pepsi-Cola International says it will invest $750 million in a five-year plan to expand its bottling, distribution and marketing operatiens in Mexico.

The first stage of the plan includes investments of $115 million in bottling joint-ventures with Mexican partners in key markets — including Guadalejara, Monterrey and the Mexico City area — the company said Thursday.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against European currencies Thursday after Germany's central bank failed to make an expected cut in interest rates. The dollar gained on the yen on hints of Japanese intervention to prop it up.

In New York, the dollar settled at 116.75, up from 116.65 yen on Wednesday.

In New York it cost $1.4560 to buy one pound, more expensive than Wednesday's $1.4510.

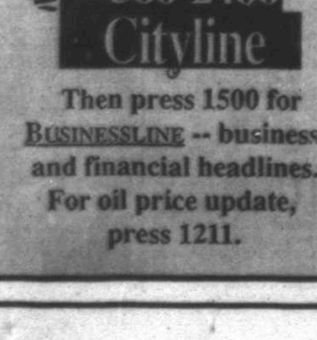

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's rates included: 1.6380 German marks, down from 1.6460; 1.5195 Swiss francs, down from 1.5235; 5.5590 French francs, down from 5.5860; 1,563 Italian lire, down from 1,565; and 1.24365 Canadian dollars, up from 1.24225.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — Stocks finished narrowly lower on Thursday, following a nervous session ahead of Friday's unemployment report.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.13 points to 3,398.91.

Advancing issues barely outpaced decliners on the New York Stock Exchange, with 963 up, 933 down and 598 unchanged.

Economic recovery shows cracks

■ Factory orders fall, retail chains report depressed sales, new jobless claims rise.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economic recovery is showing some cracks, according to reports Thursday. Factory orders fell in January, major retail chains reported depressed sales last month and new claims for unemployment benefits rose.

The bad news followed reports earlier this week that new and existing home sales dropped off in January. But so far economists view the spate of weak numbers as portraying a pause in the recovery rather than the start of a renewed downturn.

"The economy right now is heading into a soft patch. . . . By the end of the spring, though, we should be looking at an economy on a much firmer footing," said economist Louis Crandall of R.H. Wrightson & Associates in New York.

In Thursday's reports:

■ The Commerce Department said orders to U.S. factories fell 1.3 percent in January. the largest drop since August. Much of the decline came in aircraft.

■ Leading retail chains reported the first notable sales slowdown since the fall. However, they listed poor weather as among the factors keeping shoppers out of stores and expected to recover in March and April when consumers begin shopping for spring clothes.

■ The Labor Department said new claims for unemployment benefits jumped an unexpectedly large 26,000 during the week ended Feb. 20. It was the biggest jump in seven weeks, the second in a row and brought the level of claims to 351,000.

■ The National Association of Manufacturers said 90 percent of its member firms responding to a survey do not intend to significantly reduce their work forces this year. Half — 51 percent — expect to expand their payrolls but that growth will be very modest. Overall, manufacturing payrolls should grow an anemic 0.2 percent, the association said.

Economists said some slowdown is only natural after the final quarter of 1992, when the growth rate hit a five-year high of 4.8 percent, and is not necessarily a precursor to stagnation.

"The economy is steady on the middle path," said economist Samuel D. Kahan of Fuji Securities Inc. in Chicago. "I'm looking for solid, unprepossessing economic growth of about 3 percent this year. . . . It's not going to be uniform strength. Some sectors will be strong and some will be weak and it's going to shift around."

In January, new factory orders decreased to a seasonally adjusted $255 billion.

However, the drop followed a 6.1 percent increase in December, the largest in a year and a half. And several measures of how busy factories were likely to be in the future showed improvement.

A rising backlog is a sign that the current factory work force is having trouble keeping up with the flow of orders and the companies may have to add to their payrolls.

Economists are expecting manufacturing to be one of the economy's bright spots this year. With low interest rates, home sales should be strong and that should help stimulate sales of appliances and furniture.

Jobs gridlock fuels Clinton's stimulus case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jobs outlook is improving but very slowly, a "jobs gridlock" crucial to President Clinton's effort to sell his economic stimulus to Congress. A new unemployment report Friday may reinforce his case.

Several economists estimated Thursday that the unemployment rate, which dipped in January to 7.1 percent, stayed there in February or even rose a notch. The underlying trend is improving, they say, but at a painfully slow pace.

The Labor Department will report the February jobless rate today. A companion report on the number of new jobs added in the month is considered an equally important indicator and gets to the heart of the administration's point about jobs.

"The economy is bouncing back, but there's one thing that is not bouncing back and that is jobs," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said in speech earlier this week. "The only way out of this jobs gridlock is a little bit of pump priming."

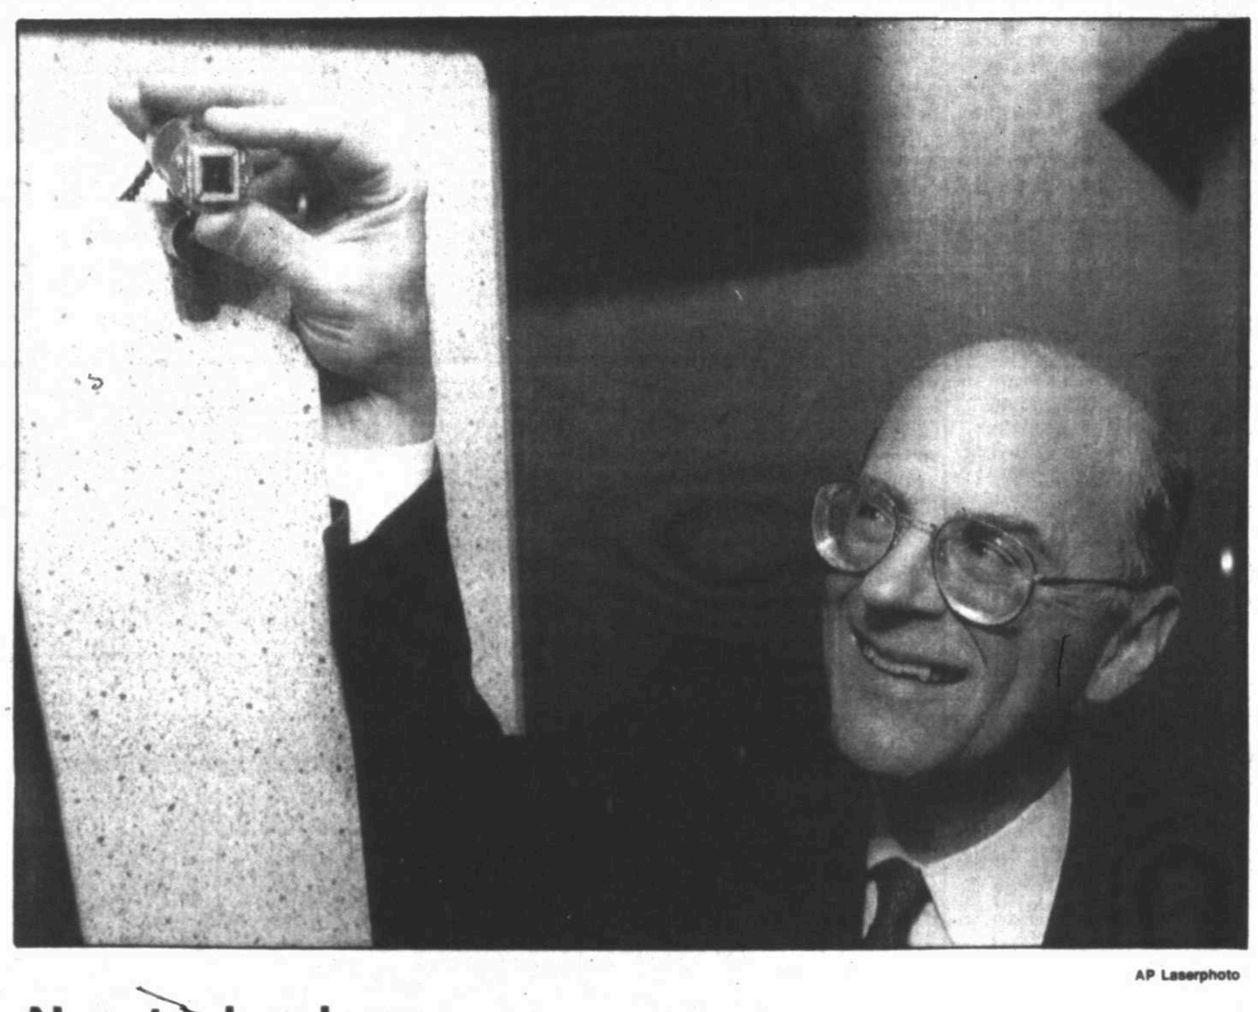

Refining slowdown ignites futures rally

(AP) — Government confirmation of a slowdown in oil refining sent heating oil and gasoline futures prices soaring Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude oil rallied along with the refined products and registered its first settlement above $21 a barrel in more than four months in an abbreviated trading session at the Merc, which is housed in the bomb-damaged World Trade Center.

On other commodity markets, livestock and meat futures rose; grains and soybeans advanced; and precious metals were little changed.

Light sweet crude oil for April delivery climbed 59 cents to $21.07 a barrel, the highest settlement for a near-term contract since Oct. 28; April heating oil soared 1.65 cents to 59.81 cents a gallon; April unleaded gasoline leaped 1.78 cents to 60.77 cents a gallon; April natural gas rose 3.4 cents to $1.798 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Moratorium against policy one option of insurer

DALLAS (AP) — Concerns about exposure to large claims in Texas have prompted an insurer to review whether it should stop issuing new homeowners' policies in the state, company executives said.

State Farm Insurance Cos., which recently lifted a six-month moratorium on new automobile coverage, was reviewing its homeowners' coverage because of larger exposure to claims, according to the executives.

But a State Farm spokesman emphasized that a moratorium on new policies was one of several options possible.

"We are looking at ways to manage and control our growth to protect our current customers," said Rock Jenkins, spokesman at the company's Bloomington, Ill. headquarters. "We cannot, as an organization with finite resources, take in unlimited growth.

"We are looking at different ways to achieve that and still accommodate the insurance needs around the country," he said. "We are taking a look at different options."

But he did not enumerate the company's other options and said that no decision has yet been made on a plan.

"We have experienced a tremendous growth in 1991 and 1992," said Keith Androff, State Farm regional public affairs manager in Dallas. "We feel we may have as much as we can manage, but we have not done anything at this point."

The company insures more than 32 percent of Texas homeowners — up from about 28 percent in 1989 and higher than its national average of 20 percent, officials estimate.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Barring new investors means fund's doing well

By Bill Doyle

Q: I invested my 1992 individual retirement account contribution in a growth mutual fund. I was pleased with its growth in share value last year. But I am confused by a letter I received from the fund in January.

Doyle

The letter states, effective immediately, that fund is closed to investors outside the group of mutual funds in the same management organization. It adds that this decision "is based on the impact that a continuing rapid increase in the asset base might have on the fund's operating policy."

Can you explain? Is it good news or bad?

A: Count it as good news for you and other existing shareholders.

From time to time, some mutual funds halt sales of shares to new investors. By doing that, a fund curbs the future growth of its total size — its asset base.

The reason usually given for such a move is that the fund had become so popular that new investors were pouring money in to buy the fund's shares and fund management could not find enough good investments to make with that money.

Remember that a fund raises money by selling its shares to investors and uses that money to buy stocks, bonds and other types of securities. A tremendous inflow of new money can create a problem.

The letter you sent along indicates your fund took this a step further. It explains the fund's policy is to invest in approximately 20 stocks. As of Dec. 31, the fund's total assets topped $3 billion, which averages out to more than $150 million for each stock in its investment portfolio.

Investing chunks of money such as that wisely is no easy task. Handling even larger amounts while limiting investments to about 20 stocks might approach the impossible.

Be happy with your fund's decision not to accept new investors. Only funds with good records of increasing the values of their shares take such action.

Q: I always thought mutual funds were "open end." If that's so, I don't understand how a fund can stop selling new shares. Doesn't such a restriction make it only half open?

A: Although most mutual funds continuously sell new shares to the investing public, that's not what makes them open end. By definition in the Investment Company Act of 1940, it is the redemption feature that makes them open end.

Technically, a mutual fund is a managed, open-end investment company.

The '40 act requires every open-end investment company to redeem its shares on any normal business day. That landmark piece of federal legislation does not say an investment company must make a continuous offering of new shares to be open end.

Last year, the Securities and Exchange Commission came up with a proposal for a new type of fund called an "interval" fund, which would not stand ready to redeem shares every business day. Instead, it would redeem shares only at predetermined times, such as the first day of every month.

That half-baked idea, which resulted from a long-winded and expensive study by the SEC staff, never worked its way through Congress for enactment.

For that, we can be grateful. The mutual fund business is plenty complicated now. Creating another type of fund would turn the existing confusion into chaos.

Q: What can you tell me about closed-end mutual funds?

A: That is a contradiction in terms. There is no such thing. There are closed-end investment companies, which generally are referred to as "closed-end funds." But it is dead wrong to call them mutual funds.

A closed-ender does not have a redemption feature and does not continuously sell shares. The typical closed-ender sells shares only once. After that, its shares are traded on a stock exchange or in the over-the-counter market.

Congress passes bill for jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signed a $5.7 billion emergency jobless benefits bill Thursday that was rushed through Congress to avoid a cutoff of assistance. The measure also imposes a pay freeze on Congress.

"With this bill becoming law, 1.5 million unemployed Americans who need help making the rent and buying groceries and paying for school clothes will receive it," Clinton said as he signed into law the first piece of his economic revival plan.

"In the end, what we have to do is extend jobs and not unemployment," Clinton said. "That is our next great test."

The measure extends through Oct. 2 a program that gives jobless Americans up to another six months of assistance once they've exhausted their standard 26 weeks of benefits.

Without the extension, the program would have expired at midnight Saturday.

The pay freeze will keep lawmakers' salaries at $133,600 a year. The provision was overwhelmingly endorsed by both chambers so lawmakers can "show that they're going first" on sacrifice, said House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash.

Clinton pressed for the measure as the initial installment of his economic plan, arguing that keeping the jobless afloat during tough economic times is crucial to the recovery.

Democrats who pushed the bill — and shoved aside Republican arguments that it didn't merit emergency funding — said the recovery hasn't shown up yet in the jobs market.

Indeed, new government figures out Thursday showed a worse-than-expected jump in new claims for unemployment benefits in mid-February. There were 351,000 out-of-work people filing new claims during a one-week period, an increase of 26,000 from the week before.

Moreover, a National Association of Manufacturers survey released Thursday showed that while restructuring of the factory work force — that has cost millions of jobs — is nearing an end, manufacturers do not plan to increase their payrolls this year.

The House voted 247-156 to approve the sections of the bill relating to extended unemployment benefits. A separate 403-0 vote adopted the Senate-added language on the pay freeze.

The Senate had passed the measure on Wednesday.

In both chambers, Republicans complained that the jobless benefits extension was a $5.7 billion run-up in the deficit and Congress needed to start taking a pay-as-you-go approach.

They said it was an omen of things to come, and that Clinton and his Democratic allies in Congress weren't really serious about reining in the deficit.

"Where's the beef? Where's the funding so we don't continue to put burdens on our children?" said Rep. Rick Santorum, R-Penn.

But Democrats argued that the extended benefits would be paid for by Clinton's overall economic plan to cut spending and raise taxes.

They held ranks and defeated Republican efforts to start enacting Clinton's plan piecemeal and pay the $5.7 billion now with spending cuts.

The temporary $5.7 billion addition to the deficit doesn't mean Democrats aren't concerned about the future, Democrats said.

"We also have to consider the suffering that goes on in families today," said Rep. Mike Kopetski, D-Ore. "These people are not just statistics."

The pay freeze is in line with Clinton's call for a one-year freeze in the cost-of-living increases for federal workers. Under the bill, Congress won't get its scheduled 2.1 percent cost-of-living increase to $136,405 at the start of next year.

The House vote was unanimous on the pay freeze, except three lawmakers abstained, including Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, who argued that it is unconstitutional for Congress to change its pay scale before facing re-election. He was joined by Reps. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, and Craig Washington, D-Texas.

Officials suggest voluntary HIV testing for all patients

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hospitals with sizeable AIDS caseloads should offer voluntary HIV testing to every patient they admit or treat in emergency rooms, the government recommended Thursday.

Under new guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, voluntary testing for the deadly virus would be routine in about 600 hospitals — 11 percent — primarily in urban areas hit hardest by the epidemic.

The test results would be kept confidential and people could not be denied care because they refused to take the test.

"These recommendations will help people learn of their HIV status and get early treatment to delay the disease and prolong their lives," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala. "They will also be able to take precautions to protect loved ones."

Meanwhile, her department announced the availability of a toll-free hotline for doctors and other health care professionals to call with questions about treating patients with HIV infection or AIDS.

The number — 1-800-933-3413 — is staffed from 10:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. EST, Monday through Friday, by a physician, a pharmacist or nurse-practitioner at San Francisco General Hospital.

The new CDC recommendations for hospitals advise voluntary testing of everyone age 15 to 54 admitted to the hospital or treated in the emergency room, clinics or other outpatient departments.

They urge hospitals to make the tests routine if at least 1 percent of their patients are infected with HIV, or if one in 1,000 discharged patients has full-blown AIDS.

The recommendations are based on CDC studies that found HIV infection rates as high as 8.9 percent among those seeking care in some emergency rooms, and 7.8 percent among patients in some hospitals.

The agency used anonymous blood samples from surveys in 1989-90 to arrive at those figures.

It estimated that the tests would turn up more than two-thirds of HIV-infected persons in those age groups hospitalized for conditions other than AIDS. Studies have found most people were unaware they were infected, the agency said.

Jon Ross, a spokesman for the American Hospital Association in Chicago, called the CDC recommendations "very reasonable and workable," but added, "Hospitals should not be the only place or even the primary place where these things are done." AIDS testing and counseling should be encouraged at other points in the public health system, too, he said.

Cuban-American broadcaster's bankrupt station gets reprieve

MIAMI (AP) — Backers of a Cuban-born broadcaster known for his criticism of Miami's tightly knit Cuban-American community made the winning — and only — bid Thursday at the auction of his bankrupt radio station.

"Of course I am very happy to be back running my station," said Emilio Milian. "I'm going to go on the air tonight and talk to my radio audience."

His 50,000-watt WWFE is known in the Cuban-American community as Radio Fe — "Faith Radio" in Spanish.

Radio Fe landed in bankruptcy court in 1990 after Barnett Bank of South Florida called in a $500,000 loan.

Milian charged that Carlos Arboleya, vice-chairman of Barnett Bank and a trustee of the Cuban American National Foundation, wanted Radio Fe shut down because Arboleya was criticized on a program called "La Mogolla" or "The Big Mess." The fiercely anti-Castro foundation is the most influential Cuban-American group in the country.

Bank spokesman Russ Hoadley has denied politics had anything to do with it and said Arboleya never was involved in the case.

"We don't foreclose on loans except for good business reasons and we do not ever for political reasons, and the only kind of loans we foreclose are bad loans," Hoadley said.

The 61-year-old broadcaster, who lost both lower legs at the knee in a car bomb blast 17 years ago, has long been a controversial figure in the Cuban exile community. The bombing was never solved.

He has a reputation for matching his criticism of Fidel Castro with equally withering cracks against politics in Miami's Little Havana.
