Campaign started on Bentsen's turf

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis and running mate Lloyd Bentsen launched their general election campaign Friday with a trip to Bentsen's home turf and a promise that "We're going to make every American a shareholder in the American dream."

About 1,000 supporters endured blazing heat to greet the Democratic ticket on an airport tarmac here, adjacent to Bentsen's hometown of Mission. "I don't want to kid you," Dukakis said. "This is going to be a tough race."

A mariachi band played, and both Dukakis and Bentsen, perspiring in the July heat, addressed the crowd in both English and Spanish. Dukakis' command of Spanish helped him win Texas in the Super Tuesday primary.

"You know how important Texas is going to be to us. And we need your help," Dukakis told residents of the state also claimed as home by the certain Republican nominee, George Bush. "I know what you did on Super Tuesday for Michael Dukakis. You can do it again."

Bentsen said "What we have seen on the part of Michael Dukakis is a reaching out, a bringing in," of all segments of society.

The pair met briefly with reporters. Asked about Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater's characterization of his acceptance speech as negative and non-specific, Dukakis replied "Well, he's an expert on both subjects."

Dukakis and Bentsen then headed to Houston for another rally, after which they were bound for California for the night.

In Houston, Dukakis stood with Bentsen, their arms upraised, at a rally surrounded by the city's skyscrapers before a crowd of about 3,000 people.

"The Republicans are confused," Dukakis said. "They don't know what to make of this ticket. And they're worried, let me tell you. Because they know we're not going to concede one single state of the 50 to the Republican Party this fall."

Bentsen was to accompany Dukakis throughout a five-state, coast-to-coast swing through the weekend.

Aboard their plane were several members of the Texas congressional delegation and Ann Richards, the state treasurer who delivered the Democratic keynote address in Atlanta last Monday night.

Enroute to McAllen, Dukakis noted that the community is in the Rio Grande Valley, an area suffering unemployment of "25, 30, 35 percent."

"We're going to make every American a shareholder in the American dream — that's what this campaign is all about," he said.

Ron LaMar and his family return to the burned-out mobile home which they had called "home" until a week ago when the dwelling was gutted by fire. LaMar, his wife, Hazel, and their children, from the left, Marshall "Buck," 9, Laura, 6, Tracy, 11, and Eugene, 8, currently are living with relatives in Midland.

House fire doesn't discourage Midland vet

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ron LaMar has set up his "base station" from which he plans to blow away defeat by building his life anew.

LaMar, a former military cannoneer and a disabled Vietnam War-era veteran, and his family lost their worldly possessions in a fire that gutted their rented mobile home in south-central Midland a week ago today.

"It took us 4½ years to get all of this stuff," LaMar, 34, said of the charred remains of household goods — from an upright piano and a typewriter to clothes and television sets. "The firemen went through here and scattered stuff like a cat."

The six-member family was unscathed by the fire and smoke. At time of the outbreak, LaMar was away from the house to scavenge an old steering-wheel column for the family car. His oldest daughter, 11-year-old Tracy, was the first to be awakened by the fire but quickly fell asleep.

"I first awoke, and I went back to sleep because I thought it was a bad dream," Tracy recalled of the fire and smoke. Moments later, she was re-awakened from her slumber on the living-room couch. She roused her 6-year-old sister, Laura, and brothers, Eugene, 8, and Marshall "Buck," 9, who were asleep on the floor, and her mother, who was sleeping in a bedroom.

"We got out of there just in time but barely," said Mrs. LaMar. "It was blazing."

LaMar rushed home after he learned of the fire.

"Oh, shoot, you talk about bargaining with the Good Lord," he said. "I made some bargains that morning" in praying that the family was safe.

He was in anger when he viewed his homeless wife and children.

"I was mad," LaMar said. "I was steaming. They were all there crying."

After the fire, which Midland firefighters say started from a shorted extension cord leading to an air-conditioning unit, LaMar, his wife, Hazel, 33, and their four children moved in with relatives to form a crowded household and LaMar's temporary "base station" of operations.

Ruptured water tank sends torrent of water through town

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The wall of a concrete water tank ruptured Friday, killing four people and injuring 20 when a torrent gushed through a neighborhood of adobe houses, destroying nine homes.

Residents said they had recently warned city officials about cracks in the 3-year-old tank, which was perched on a hillside.

More than 750,000 gallons of water poured down the hillside, officials said, and the tank's east wall, about 120 feet long, separated cleanly from the rest of the tank.

A 90-foot section of the 9-inch-thick, reinforced concrete wall was thrown 20 feet across a dirt road and came to rest against a house. The rest of the wall broke away and blocked the road.

Manuel Ortega, director of the city Water and Sanitation Department, said the tank was built in 1985, though neighborhood residents said the tank was six months old. Ortega said crews worked on the tank about six months ago.

The tank was about 120 feet wide, 60 feet deep and 12 feet high. Ortega said it was at full capacity, or 780,000 gallons.

"We heard a very loud sound, like an explosion," said Vicenta Saucedo, 33. "But I didn't pay attention because I was feeding my children breakfast. And then the girls went out to see what happened, and I went out too, and I saw a torrent of water flowing past."

The gray tank was perched near the top of a foothill to the western mountains bounding this border city near El Paso, Texas. Below the tank was a cluster of houses made of adobe, cinderblock and concrete. The rush of water flattened houses in its path and then drained into a gully about 100 yards downhill from the tank.

The displaced families spent the day digging through mud and rubble to retrieve their belongings. Some placed clothes on automobiles to dry in the desert sun. Others cleared spots where they placed dishes, religious statuettes and paintings, alarm clocks and other items.

Perfecto Guerrero de la Cruz said he was at work when he was notified of the accident. He rushed home and found that his nephew, Francisco Olvera Guerrero, had died.

Jorge Martinez, 3; Francisco Olvera Guerrero, 17; and Jose Antonio Martinez Lin, 9, were killed in the accident, Fire Chief Gabriel Rodriguez said Friday night. He said a man died Friday afternoon at a hospital, but that his name was not being released pending notification of relatives.

One person was in critical condition at Juarez General Hospital, a police spokeswoman said. Twelve others were hospitalized with minor injuries and six people were treated and released.

During a break from digging through his house's rubble with a pick ax, Perfecto Guerrero said he and neighbors had notified city officials a few weeks ago about cracks they had seen in the tank's walls.

Hikers dedicating 470-mile long Colorado Trail

By ELLEN HADDOW

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — The 470-mile Colorado Trail, 15 years in the making mostly by volunteers and winding through aspen-covered mountain valleys, is to be dedicated this weekend.

But some of its builders couldn't wait. They're already out hiking.

Spanning two-thirds of Colorado, the Colorado Trail passes through five national forests, crosses the Continental Divide five times and skirts not only 14,000-foot Rocky Mountain peaks but also historical sites, ghost towns and environmental no man's lands scarred during the mining boom days.

Most of the trail was built by 3,000 volunteers, said Dennis Neill, a Forest Service spokesman. Many spent entire weeks of vacations clearing brush and building trail.

"The Forest Service did the dangerous stuff, like blasting rocks and chain-sawing trees, but the volunteers brought in by the Friends of the Colorado Trail Foundation did the real work," Neill said.

The trail begins at Waterton Canyon southwest of Denver, and climbs gradually over Kenosha Pass to Breckenridge. Then it wends its way toward Copper Mountain near Leadville and past a cluster of 14,000-foot peaks west of Buena Vista and Salida.

It turns southwest near Saguache and veers toward Molas Pass, near 11,000-foot-elevation Silverton, before dropping into the Animas River drainage in the San Juan Mountains to Durango, in southwestern Colorado.

Teens who died in church camp flood memorialized

Kyle Hankins of Dallas places a wreath for one of 10 teen-agers who died in a flash flood last year in Comfort, Texas.

By DAVID SEDENO

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — Parents and friends of 10 flash-flood victims remembered their loved ones Friday at the spot where the young church campers were swept away by the Guadalupe River a year ago.

More than 500 people, including some of the 33 survivors of the disaster, their parents, relatives and area officials attended the memorial service in which a bronze plaque was unveiled and 10 carnation wreaths were placed to remember the dead.

"The river holds a lot of scars," Melody Faulkner, a Kerr County emergency medical technician told the crowd that had gathered under pecan trees at the Pot O'Gold Ranch, about 75 yards from the river.

"We can't tell you parents we know how you feel. We can only say we saw," she said in a quivering voice as she wiped away tears. "What we can say is we're here if you need us."

It was about 7 a.m. on July 17, 1987, that a church van and a bus from the Seagoville Road Baptist Church in Balch Springs, a Dallas suburb, joined other church groups in trying to leave the camp.

More than 12 inches of rain had fallen on the area that day and the Guadalupe River, located near the exit of the ranch, had crested more than 30 feet.

As the buses tried to exit the camp, water stalled the vehicles and the 43 passengers had to abandon them and attempted to reach dry land by forming a human chain.

Escaped murder suspect hunted

From Staff Reports

Authorities in Big Spring Friday continued their search for a capital murder suspect who escaped Thursday from the Howard County Jail.

The Howard County Sheriff's Department issued an all-points bulletin late Thursday after Antonio Aguilar, 21, fled from an outdoor work duty assignment at the courthouse.

Aguilar, described as a "model" prisoner, now faces an additional charge of escape as the result of Thursday's incident, according to a sheriff's department spokesman.

Two other inmates and a deputy supervisor had been on the south side of the courthouse taking garbage to the trash when Aguilar escaped, Sheriff A.N. Standard said Friday.

Aguilar had been in custody since October, following his arrest on two counts of capital murder. The charges stem from the Oct. 10, 1987 robbery and killing of two Mexican nationals in Luther, a town about 15 miles north of Big Spring, according to the sheriff.

After the robbery, Miguel Calixto and Narberto Gurrala were burned in a fire set in a farmhouse in which they resided, Howard County District Attorney Rick Hamby has said.

Aguilar was wearing a white county jail uniform when he fled the area, but has since changed clothes, the sheriff said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Hot, sunny weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The heat is on.

High temperatures in the upper 90s make a return to Midland this weekend under mostly sunny skies.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport predict today will be sunny, with a high in the upper 90s, and winds from the south to southwest at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight calls for fair skies and a low near 70 degrees.

On Sunday, skies will be sunny and the high will reach the upper 90s.

Friday's high of 86 was 17 degrees cooler than the record of 103, set on that date in 1981. The low Friday of 58 broke the previous record of 62 degrees, set on that date in 1947.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms in South Texas on Friday were blamed on warm, moist, unstable air ahead of a slow-moving cold front that extended from Laredo to near Corpus Christi and along the Texas coast.

The rest of the state was under the influence of high pressure, with resulting variable winds at 5 to 15 mph. Skies were clear to partly cloudy, except for mostly cloudy skies in deep South Texas.

The National Weather Service said skies should be partly cloudy on Saturday, except mostly cloudy over deep South Texas, where scattered showers and thunderstorms were likely.

Highs Saturday are expected to be in the 90s, the weather service said.

NATION

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain over parts of the South on Friday, soaking parched crops and causing some flooding, and rain also fell on parts of the drought-stricken Midwest.

Eastern North Carolina got heavy rain from a cluster of nearly stationary thunderstorms that were part of a large area of slowly moving showers and thunderstorms that formed ahead of a cold front along the Atlantic Coast states.

Rain also was heavy over other areas of eastern North Carolina, where New Bern got 1.60 inches and 1.31 inches fell on Jacksonville.

But rainfall in North Carolina's southern and central Piedmont is running about 8 inches below normal for the year, while the mountains would need 14 inches in a short period to eliminate the drought, experts said.

In the Midwest, widely scattered thunderstorms carried briefly heavy rain over northern Indiana, western Ohio and Lower Michigan, where some Kalamazoo streets were reported flooded, the National Weather Service said.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered over southern Texas, southeastern Louisiana, southern Georgia, eastern sections of the Atlantic Coast states and sections of Kentucky.

Widely scattered thunderstorms developed over the mountain and desert regions of southern California and southern Nevada and isolated rainshowers were over central Oklahoma.

For Saturday, scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast over the Atlantic Coast states, the eastern Gulf Coast region, Alabama and Florida. Numerous showers were forecast over southeastern Maine. Scattered showers and thunderstorms also were forecast over the mountains and desert regions of southern California.

MCH administrative staff will be reorganized

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — From now until the beginning of the new fiscal year — Oct. 1 — efforts to reorganize and "downsize" the administrative staff at Medical Center Hospital will be under way.

"The reorganization," said Administrator Sam Glenney, "basically entails combining two jobs into one. We're going to take two of the assistant administrator positions and combine them into one called 'associate administrator.' That person, then, will function as chief operating officer."

Glenney said the exact scope of duties of the new position "is as yet undetermined in my mind." However, he envisions the person selected by the board of managers will generally perform the duties of the two replaced positions, as well as oversee daily operations.

"The whole thrust," added Glenney, "is one of just streamlining the organization and downsizing the administrative staff because, basically, the hospital is downsized," he stated.

According to Glenney, the number of patient days and size of the staff are down.

Glenney said the announcement that Russ Kyler, MCH chief financial officer had resigned "is not really involved in the reorganization."

Kyler, who has been with MCH for about four years, "has been thinking about leaving for some time," Glenney said.

"He's been here for a long time and I think he just feels there are other opportunities and it's time for him to move on. He's a good man and I hate to lose him."

Glenney said Kyler will be leaving sometime in August, though no date has been firmed up.

BENTSEN

Earlier, former Democratic rival Jesse Jackson gave Dukakis and Bentsen an enthusiastic sendoff from Atlanta before a crowd of Jackson's convention delegates. Jackson called on his supporters to provide the ticket with the same "street heat" that led to civil rights gains in the 1960s. He said they needed to find millions of new voters for the November election.

"We've got to keep on that street heat...enough heat for George Bush to get out of the kitchen," Jackson said.

"The stakes are very high," Dukakis said before leaving Atlanta, where he accepted the Democratic nomination Thursday night. "We can't take another four years of what we've been going through for the last eight."

The campaign stakes in Texas are the third highest in the country. It trails only California and New York in electoral votes with 29 and Dukakis is counting on Bentsen to put those in the Democratic column.

The senior senator's personal popularity in the Lone Star State is solid and his fund-raising ability unparalleled. He first won the Senate in 1970 by defeating then-Congressman Bush, and has been re-elected twice since, netting 60 percent of the vote in 1982, and he's staying on the ballot again this year.

Modesto, Calif., was the next stop after the Texas visit, where the ticket will be eyeing California's top prize of 41 electoral votes. The swing back East will take them through Minot, N.D., and St. Louis, Mo., and then a rally in Pennsylvania, fourth with 25 votes in the electoral college.

Dukakis' aides said the trip was designed to demonstrate their intent to battle in every state, conceding none to the Republicans.

Jackson and his audience gave a polite reception to Bentsen, the more conservative half of the ticket. Jackson acknowledged that Bentsen might be what the Democatic party ticket needed now.

"He represents a wing. We represent a wing," he said. "It takes two wings to fly."

TRAIL

The trail has been a struggle since its inception in 1973 when Bill Lucas, then regional forester in Denver, and a group of hikers hashed out the idea one evening.

The Forest Service was being criticized for providing only the extremes of recreation — rugged wilderness treks or roadside camping.

Lucas' idea was to use trails to link major tourist centers. A hut system would be developed so hikers would not have to lug tents and stoves.

"The huts are still a long way off," Neill said.

At first, plans called for the Colorado Trail to be finished in 1978, two years after it was launched as one of the state's centennial-year projects. The foundation bearing its name collected its first $150,000 easily, including a $100,000 grant from the Denver-based Gates Foundation.

But the foundation did not get anything done because of "unrealistic expectations," said Mayo "Butch" Sontermeyer, a Fort Collins lawyer who served on the foundation board from its beginning.

About the time the foundation began to fall apart, Gudy Gaskill of Evergreen, who had been involved from the beginning, decided to take charge of the volunteer effort.

Gaskill, now 61, organized crews to clear a mile of trail a week. By using volunteer labor, she and the Colorado Mountain Club got the work done for $500 a mile, compared with the $8,000 per mile she estimated it would cost the Forest Service.

"You can't say enough about Gudy's leadership," Neill said. "She can out-walk, out-run and out-work anybody half her age. I know, because she did it to me.

"I'd call it her fanatical attachment to a dream. She got things moving again and the bulk of the trail work has been done in the last four years, since she, (former Gov. Richard) Lamm and (then regional forester) Jim Torrence got things rolling again."

Gaskill couldn't be reached for an interview this week because she was out hiking her trail. She was expected to reach Durango in time for a dedication ceremony today at the Junction Creek Trailhead, five miles northwest of town.

A second ceremony, Sunday at Waterton Canyon near Denver, is to feature the arrival of four Durango residents who have spent the last two weeks running the trail.

BUS

A wall of water knocked the group into the raging river, forcing some to cling to trees while others were swept away.

Local, state and U.S. Army personnel, some on helicopters, coordinated their efforts and pulled survivors from the river. It took four days to recover the bodies of some of the dead, and one never has been found.

"It's very easy in this day and time, especially in law enforcement, to become very cynical about people," said Texas Department of Public Safety Sgt. Charles Seale of Kerrville, who rescued several children in a DPS helicopter and later coordinated the rescue effort.

"My life changed during that day and during the next three weeks on this river, (seeing) the volunteers, the families of children that perished and many law enforcement agencies that pulled together during that time. It was just phenomenal," Seale said.

Many of the survivors traveled to the camp for the first time since last year. They said kind words about their friends and later placed wreaths for them near the bronze plaque that held the names of both victims and survivors.

"My flesh does not want to be here today," said Richard "Whitey" Koons, 27, the church's youth minister who was driving the bus.

"But it helps to see families that lost kids and to see them try to smile and try to go and to know that they stood behind our church and our preacher," Koons said.

The group prayed especially for John Bankston Jr., a 17-year-old star athlete who saved several children before disappearing under the flood waters. His body has not been found.

"I loved John. He was a good friend," said Scott Chatham, who also survived the accident. "John and me had a bunch of good times and I hope they find him."

The Rev. Claud Bonam, owner of the camp and pastor of the Huisache Avenue Baptist Church in San Antonio, said he decided to hold the memorial service for both area officials and survivors.

"I don't think anyone will ever forget what happened," said Bonam, who also hosted a barbecue lunch after the memorial service.

After the memorial service, numerous survivors walked along the banks of the river.

Chip Asberry, 16, clutched a Bible as he went to the river bank.

"That was my home for about five hours," Asberry said, pointing to a 40-foot pecan tree.

"Coming back here brings back both good and bad memories, mostly good because my friends are in heaven," he said.

Courtland Sewell, whose children William Christopher and Cindy Sewell died in the accident, said he and his wife, Donna, had reservations about attending the memorial service.

"I didn't really want to come. I guess I was afraid," Sewell said. "Now, I'm glad I came."

FIRE

"We've come up through the ranks — came up the hard way," said LaMar. Along the way, LaMar has concentrated much of his energies into volunteer work, such as playing blue-grass music for old veterans, serving in the Texas State Guard, working at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Big Spring, and working with youth.

"I'm a Tennessean," LaMar said, "and I play all of them (stringed musical instruments). I just like helping people. I don't ever keep an empty schedule."

His volunteer work keeps him busy.

"The wife don't get to see me much," he said. "I'm active. I can't tolerate sitting at the house."

Melle May, Midland County veterans service officer who counsels LaMar, said the veteran is loyal to his country.

"I usually get involved when it comes to my veterans (who are in distress)," Ms. May said. "I think he's very patriotic." LaMar "flat believes in helping people anytime he can."

At age 17 in 1971, LaMar volunteered for the United States Army and was trained in field artillery.

"The (Vietnam) War was going on, and I wanted to get in the Army before it was all over, so I dropped out of school," LaMar said. "My uncle got half his face blown off over there, and it made me mad. He survived, but he don't look too pretty now. He was in the artillery. That's why I joined the artillery."

LaMar, who is supporting his family on military-service-disability benefits and food stamps, is a paralegal student at Midland College, where he is attending classes under the Veterans Administration Rehabilitation program. It is rough, LaMar said, to support a family on a $700-monthly income "providing nothing folds up on me."

"But I'm going to tough it out," LaMar said. "Losers are the ones who sit down and give up. I don't give up. Anybody who accepts the bottom of the ladder is a loser. I reach for the top, and I'll get there one day."

DEATHS

Edward Wagner

ODESSA — Edward B. Wagner, 60, died Thursday at his residence.

Funeral services will be at 4 p.m. today at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Bratcher officiating.

Burial will follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

He was born Jan. 27, 1928, in Climax, Mich. He married Margie Breedlove Sept. 11, 1949, in Waco.

He had lived in Odessa since 1953.

Wagner worked for Maloney-Crawford Tank and Manufacturing for 30 years.

He served during the Korean War in the U.S. Army.

Survivors include his wife of Odessa; one son, John Michael Wagner of Roswell, N.M.; one daughter, Connie Wagner Mendez of Midland; one brother, Matthew Wagner of Deland, Fla.; four sisters, Lois Wagner and Edna Johnson, both of Battle Creek, Mich., Julia Allen and Alice Beach and five grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Cancer Society.

Florence Shaner

Services for Florence Shaner of Midland are scheduled for 11 a.m. today at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Marshall Mason, pastor, officiating. Burial is to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers are to be Frank Petty, Harry Harrison, Martin Mogford, Mike Fitz Gerald, Bill Heck and Tom Scott.

Jacqueline Crittenden

Jacqueline Crittenden, 71, of Midland, died Friday at a local hospital.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Sizemore Funeral Home Chapel of Memories, with the Rev. Robert Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Mausoleum.

Mrs. Crittenden was born July 9, 1917 in Stuttgart, Ark., and married Thomas Crittenden Jan. 30, 1970 in San Diego, Calif. He preceded her in death in March 1983. She was a restaurant hostess and cashier most of her adult life.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Arthur (Paula) Henson of Midland and Donna Faubion of Dallas; 13 grandchildren; and 18 great-grandchildren.

4 Midlanders arrested on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Four men arrested on felony drug charges stemming from a Midland and Odessa police department raid at a northwest apartment complex were in jail Friday in lieu $15,000 bond.

According to a police department spokesman, officers raided the Canyon Creek Apartments, 5244 North Loop 250, about 1:45 p.m. Friday to make the arrests and seized 1 ounce of methamphetamine and two automobiles.

Police estimatate the drug's street value at about $2,800.

Charged with delivery of a controlled substance were Wade Dawson, 20, 5244 North Loop 250; Elzie Edington, 20, 3212 W. Wadley Ave.; and Glenn Dormady, 22, 4315 Neely Ave.

All three men were being held in the Midland city jail in lieu of $15,000 bond following their arraignment Friday before Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Also, 24-year-old Dale Merrifield, who gave his address as 2512 Dengar Ave., was charged with possession of a controlled substance. His bond was set at $15,000.

TANK

"We called them (city officials) before to tell them there was some cracks, but as always they never listen until they see (the damage)," he said.

The structure was filled earlier this year, giving residents of the Lopez Mateos and Diaz Ordaz subdivision running water for the first time, residents said.

"So we finally got water, but then we got too much — and lost a life," Guerrero said as he gazed at the destruction around him.

Nine-year-old Martin Torrez de la Rosa said he was grinding corn at the bottom of the hill when he heard the sound and looked up.

"When I was running away, I saw a boy over there," he said, pointing to a spot farther downhill. "The water took him away."

City engineer Luis Soria told the El Paso Herald-Post that investigators were looking into the possibility that the tank's foundation might have been weakened in the wet ground. Three inches of rain have fallen since July 1, as measured at El Paso International Airport, compared with 1.6 inches in a normal July — the area's rainiest month on average.

Juarez, a city of 1.1 million with an annual growth rate of almost 10 percent, uses different types of water tanks, from ones like the concrete box that ruptured Friday to the steel, cylindrical tanks on stilts that are common in the United States.

U.S. retaliates for Brazil's denial of patent protection

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan imposed trade sanctions against Brazil on Friday in retaliation for that country's denial of patent protections for U.S. pharmaceutical products.

Acting under a section of the Trade Act of 1974, Reagan started a process which will lead to sanctions against $200 million worth of yet unspecified Brazilian imports.

Reagan's move came after what the White House said was a years-long quest by the U.S. government and the American pharmaceutical industry to persuade Brazil to enact "adequate patent protection."

Brazil has been unwilling to abolish a longstanding industrial property code which holds that pharmaceutical products and the pharmaceutical manufacturing process are ineligible for patent protection.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association petitioned the government for an investigation, arguing that Brazil's refusal to protect intellectual property rights has restricted U.S. commerce and cost American pharmaceutical manufacturers more than $160 million from 1979-86.

An administration official, commenting on condition of anonymity, said the loss to U.S. producers is now running at about $36 million a year.

"We regret that it is necessary to impose trade sanctions in this matter," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in a statement read to reporters here as Reagan neared the end of a week-long vacation.

"But the U.S. cannot tolerate the piracy of its intellectual property," he said. "Over the past three years, we have challenged the infringement of U.S. intellectual property rights and denial of rights throughout the world."

Fitzwater said this policy has "resulted in strengthened patent laws in many foreign countries." He said "this progress stands in stark contrast to Brazil's lack of action in this area."

"By denying this basic commercial right," Fitzwater said, "Brazil permits unauthorized copying of pharmaceutical products and processes that were invented by U.S. firms. This not only deprives American companies of sales, it discourages investment in the research and development of new drugs."

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assocation said it welcomed Reagan's move. The association's president, Gerald J. Mossinghoff, said, "the United States cannot permit its pharmaceutical industry to sustain substantial losses as a result of Brazil's refusal to recognize patent rights for pharmaceutical products and processes."

The United States had come close to slapping trade sanctions on Brazil earlier this year, but backed away when that country responded to complaints about its policies regarding importation of software products.

The administration official said the sanctions would more likely take the form of tariffs against $200 million in Brazilian imports — as opposed to embargoing $200 million in that country's products.

Reagan's order triggers a process through which the U.S. government will hold public hearings to determine which Brazilian products will be affected by the punitive measures.

Fitzwater said the administration had given Brazil "every opportunity to change" its patent policy. He also said that while he did not believe Brazil would retaliate, "that's always a possibility."

Reagan has only occasionally invoked sections of the trade laws to retaliate against countries suspected of engaging in unfair trade practices, and Congress is near completion of legislation that would revamp American trade laws.

Reagan vetoed an earlier version, citing several factors, including a provision requiring major employers to give workers at least 60 days notice of layoffs and plant closings. That provision now has been passed, as separate legislation, by both the House and Senate via veto-proof margins.

The White House has not said specifically whether Reagan would veto the new plant-closing bill, although that is believed to be his intention. Nor has it said whether he would veto the revised trade bill, which is still pending in the Senate.

Last year, Reagan imposed sanctions against Japan, accusing it of dumping electronic products into the United States at below-market prices and of refusing to open its own markets to U.S. computer components and other such products.

Eastern will eliminate 4,000 jobs

Bakes

MIAMI (AP) — Money-losing Eastern Airlines said Friday it will cut 4,000 jobs, or 12 percent of its workforce, and eliminate service to 14 cities on Aug. 31.

"We are preserving the airline. We're strengthening the airline. I don't care to place the blame anywhere," said President Phil Bakes, citing high operating costs and increased competition for Eastern's huge losses.

The announcement came in the seventh month of bitter contract talks between Eastern and the Machinists union, which is seeking raises for 10,000 workers at Eastern. The carrier is seeking $161 million in pay cuts and other concessions.

The Miami-based airline also is seeking $69 million in concessions from its pilots union, which began formal contract talks with the company Friday.

"Last year we lost $182 million. In essence, Eastern is returning to its basic roots in an attempt to regain strength in the marketplace," said Bakes.

Eastern's operations in Boston, New York, Washington, Atlanta and Miami will be the core of the carrier's service, he said.

The 14 cities being cut are Albuquerque, N.M.; Fort de France, Martinique; Las Vegas and Reno, Nev.; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla; Omaha, Neb.; Dallas and San Antonio, Texas; Pointe-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe; San Diego; St. Lucia, West Indies, and Tuscon, Ariz.

The personnel cuts will be to both union and non-union members and include management personnel, Bakes said. The cuts will reduce the workforce to 29,500, down from 43,300 in September 1986.

Included in the 4,000 employees to be cut by layoffs or early retirement will be 520 jobs in Miami, 300 in Atlanta and 350 in Kansas City, Mo., which will no longer be the carrier's Western hub, Bakes said.

The 12 percent reduction in the workforce will allow the airline to sell off a proportional share of its fleet. "We have been funding our losses by selling assets. No company can absorb losses of this magnitude," Bakes said.

Eastern's parent, Texas Air Corp., lost $466 million last year.

Ron Cole, spokesman for Eastern's branch of the Air Line Pilots Association, said the move was "cavalier" and "and a real slap in the face to the loyal Eastern employees of Kansas City, who made the hub a success."

Machinists local chief Charles Bryan was en route to Miami from Atlanta, and could not be reached Friday. Earlier this week, after word of the impending cuts leaked, he said Eastern would have "no credibility."

Eagle found dead

WESTBORO, Mass. (AP) — A young bald eagle raised in Massachusetts as part of an attempt to re-establish a breeding population has been found shot dead in West Virginia, officials said.

Three of 35 bald eagles the state has raised and released since 1982 at the 38-square-mile Quabbin Reservoir in western Massachusetts are known to have died, said state ornithologist Bradford G. Blodget.

One died of mercury poisoning and the other drowned after being caught in a leg-hold trap, he said. The latest victim and that of a second bald eagle were found last month in a sinkhole in a mountainous portion of West Virginia, he said.

The birds were believed shot in early 1987. The Massachusetts eagle was still carrying a radio transmitter attached to its tailfeathers when it was released July 12, 1986, he said.

Under federal law, the maximum penalty for killing a bald eagle is a $20,000 fine and a year in jail.

Blodget said a number of eagles have been shot in an area of West Virginia.

"A lot of people erroneously believe that eagles kill young lambs," he said. "They don't. They mainly feed on carrion and fish."

U.S. rejects Soviet inspectors suspected of being spies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight Soviets nominated by Moscow to inspect American military facilities under the new treaty to ban medium-range nuclear missiles have been rejected because the government suspects they are spies, a U.S. official said Friday.

The eight were among hundreds of prospective monitors submitted by the Soviets to oversee compliance with the accord signed in Washington last December by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

About 80 inspectors have since been admitted to make short-notice inspections at U.S. sites in Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida and Texas, while about two dozen Soviet inspectors have begun a 13-year monitoring assignment at a Hercules plant in Magna, Utah, where Pershing rocket engines were manufactured.

An equal number of U.S. monitors will be assigned to make sure the Soviets do not violate provisions in the treaty, which calls for the dismantling of nuclear missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,600 miles and a ban on further production.

The U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said seven of the Soviets rejected last month had been proposed for surveillance of the Hercules rocket plant in Magna, and the eighth as a short-notice monitor elsewhere.

The lists submitted by the Soviets included 600 names, but some appeared twice or even three times.

The list also included 200 names of prospective aerial crew members whose job is to fly the monitors to the United States and then take them home.

Under the treaty, both sides have the right to veto prospective inspectors without giving an explanation. The process is comparable to the peremptory challenge of prospective jurors in American trial courts.

Kendell Pease, spokesman for the U.S. On-Site Inspection Agency, declined to discuss the exchange of lists of prospective monitors between Washington and Moscow.

"The specifics of what was submitted and was returned is part of the privileged communication between the two countries and it would be inappropriate to get into the specifics of it," he said.

The Los Angeles Times reported the Soviet Union was not known to have complained about the U.S. rejections.

The Soviets' choice of the eight was seen by U.S. officials as evidence that the KGB intelligence agency and its military counterpart, the GRU, have not curbed their activities despite a warming in U.S.-Soviet relations, the newspaper reported.

The proposed inspectors had been linked to Soviet intelligence activities in the past, but not necessarily in the United States, the Times said.

None of the U.S. inspectors was rejected by the Soviets, the newspaper said.

U.S. counterintelligence officials consider the Hercules plant in Utah the facility most susceptible to technical and human intelligence gathering barred under the missile treaty, the newspaper said.

"The Soviets have (listening) platforms and agents on the East Coast and the West Coast, but none in middle America," an official told the newspaper. "We want to keep it that way."

NATION IN BRIEF

Shuttle engine test delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said Friday it is delaying the launch pad test-firing of space shuttle Discovery's main engines two days until July 30.

The decision was made after shuttle managers reviewed preparations and concluded that all elements were not ready, including a hazardous gas detection system that is not completely checked out.

The 20-second firing of the main engines is considered critical to certifying Discovery for the first shuttle flight since the Challenger explosion killed seven astronauts on Jan. 28, 1986.

It will test modifications made in the engines and provide countdown experience for the launch team.

NASA officials said the delay in the test-firing could postpone for a day or two the launch, now scheduled for early September.

However, the status of the launch date is very much in doubt as engineers are puzzling over how to fix a small gas leak in a steering engine system that is separate from the main engines.

They hope to make the repair on the pad and avoid rolling Discovery back to a hangar, a move that could delay the flight by as much as two months.

Experts are considering several ways to reach the inaccessible leak, from cutting a hole through the cargo bay wall to running a snake-like tube through the gas line in an effort to plug the leak.

Fire doesn't scare falcons

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pair of peregrine falcons apparently still consider the Union Bank building home despite a fire that burned offices several floors below their roost.

"They're fine," said Union Chairman John Harrigan, who monitors the nest on the 39th floor by a closed-circuit television in his office a floor below.

Offices on the 34th and 35th floors of the 39-story building were scorched Monday night after a paint thinner-soaked cloth touched an outlet and ignited a fire.

The peregrines were brought to Union Bank six years ago by the national Peregrine Fund and the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology in an effort to re-establish the endangered species downtown.

The falcons already have raised a male offspring.

"They identify very much with this building. It is the center of their little universe," Harrigan said. "They came by yesterday (after the fire) and looked the place over. I don't know what they thought. They might have thought it was a little smoky."

Murder trial continues

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Richard Wade Farley talked about how he might shoot up a defense company "to wake them up" about six weeks before his alleged shooting spree there, a former co-worker testified.

Farley also referred to ESL Inc. engineer Laura Black as his girlfriend, said Jerry Hirst, a computer technician who once shared an office with two men who died in the Feb. 16 attack.

Hirst testified Thursday in Santa Clara County Municipal Court at Farley's preliminary hearing. Farley is charged with seven murders and three attempted murders.

His alleged shooting spree was motivated, Farley told police, by Black's refusal to date him after he spent four years trying to persuade her to do so.

Hirst said he thought Farley's comments were a joke. "On departing I said, 'Well, good luck at finding your girlfriend.'"

Sally Ride to be honored

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Astronaut Sally Ride and poet Gwendolyn Brooks will be inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in a ceremony later this year, Hall of Fame spokeswoman Susan Barber said Friday.

Ride, 37, became the first American woman in space in 1983 when she flew on the space shuttle. On her second flight the next year, she carried a scarf from the hall of fame that belonged to aviator Amelia Earhart, also an inductee.

Brooks, 71, of Chicago, was the first black woman to receive a Pulitzer Prize for poetry. She won in 1950 for her volume of poetry "Annie Allen." In 1958, she succeeded Carl Sandburg as poet laureate of Illinois.

Seneca Falls, between Syracuse and Rochester, is considered the birthplace of the women's movement because it is where a group of protesters in 1848 wrote the "Declaration of Sentiments" calling for equal rights for women.

Iran-Contra grand jury's duty extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Friday granted a six-month extension in the life of the Iran-Contra grand jury, allowing prosecutors to continue investigations into illegal Contra resupply operations in Central America.

The extension follows the indictment last month of a former CIA station chief in Costa Rica and comes as independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh prepares for the trial of Oliver L. North, a former White House aide. North and three others are charged with conspiring to illegally divert profits from U.S.-Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

U.S. District Chief Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. ordered the grand jury, which had been scheduled to dissolve on July 28, to continue its work through Jan. 27, 1989, extending its original 18-month authority into the term of the next president.

Robinson's order referred to a sealed request from Walsh, saying the purpose of extending the jury's authority was "for the investigations identified by the government in its motion."

Jim Wieghart, Walsh's spokesman, said he could not comment on specifics of the investigations mentioned in the judge's order.

But the indictment of the former CIA official, Joseph F. Fernandez, and unidentified co-conspirators indicated that Walsh has expanded his investigation to cover an operation to organize a private arms supply network for the Nicaraguan rebels at a time when U.S. Contra aid was banned by Congress.

Walsh's investigation previously focused on U.S. fund-raising efforts for the Contras, arms sales to Iran and the diversion of profits from the sales to the rebels. This led to charges against North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealers Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim.

Two fund-raisers and former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane earlier pleaded guilty to other charges resulting from the investigation.

The charges against Fernandez accused him of helping North and Secord coordinate air drops of weapons and supplies to Contra groups in 1986.

Trials of Poindexter, Secord and Hakim will follow that of North, whose attorneys have petitioned for a postponement six months beyond the scheduled Sept. 20 starting date.

School sued for locking former student in closet

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 19-year-old Trinity Valley College student is suing Alvarado High School, its superintendent and two former officials for locking her in a janitor's closet five years ago.

Rowena Louise Hickman is suing Superintendent Sidney Pruitt, former Principal Riley Dunn and former Vice Principal Gary Swan for $1 million, saying the unusual punishment violated her constitutional rights.

Pruitt has acknowledged Hickman was put in the closet.

The suit, filed Thursday, seeks $500,000 in actual damages and $500,000 in punitive damages.

Papers filed in the suit state that on Oct. 17 and 18, 1983, Dunn and Swan, with Pruitt's approval, "incarcerated (Hickman) in solitary confinement in a janitor's closet" under a stairwell at Alvarado High School.

The suit notes the closet contained an electrical load center and air conditioning controls, making the area "an extremely dangerous place for (Miss Hickman) to be detained."

Pruitt pointed out that the closet also contained a desk and was used as a custodians' office, having a door handle that opened from the inside.

Pruitt said the suit was the first he has heard of the incident since the 1983-84 school year, and he refused to answer further questions.

Miss Hickman's lawyer, Sam Callaway Jr. of Fort Worth, said the suit was filed "because (Hickman) was mistreated," but he said he did not think Miss Hickman suffered any permanent injury from the incident. Callaway also said no attempts were made to settle the suit out of court.

T.J. Hickman, Miss Hickman's father, said it took five years to file the suit because: "It takes a long time to do it if you're going to do it right. She and her sister were still in school." He said the last of his four children graduated from Alvarado High School two years ago.

Miss Hickman told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in November 1983 that she was disciplined for "saying a few bad words to a teacher and a coach."

The suit claims the punishment suppressed Miss Hickman's freedom to express her opinion, violating her First Amendment rights. The suit also states the disciplinary action constitutes "cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth Amendment."

Miss Hickman's punishment also included an F grade in citizenship, which was upheld by a 6-1 vote of the school board.

Miss Hickman, now 19, is a sophomore at Trinity Valley in Athens. She could not be reached for comment.

Mother of baby who died after left in car could face charges

DALLAS (AP) — The 16-year-old mother of a baby girl who died after being left unattended in a car for two hours could still face a charge of negligence, although the infant's death has been ruled an accident, police said Friday.

The baby girl, who was to have turned 1 year old today, died of hyperthermia, according to the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Police said the infant was left unattended in a South Oak Cliff parking lot while her mother shopped with a friend. When the mother returned to the car, the baby was not breathing, police said.

The mother, whose identity was not released because she is a juvenile, was being held at a Dallas County juvenile detention facility while a police investigation continues.

Cisneros says U.S. has goal of creating unity among cultures

MEXICO CITY (AP) — San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros said here Friday that the United States has as one of its main goals "creating a sense of unity and cooperation" among its diverse cultures.

"The United States has many goals to reach in the future," he said an accepting an honorary doctorate in international relations from the Universidad de las Americas. "One of the principal ones is creating a sense of unity and cooperation among us."

The institution bills itself as Mexico City's bilingual university.

Cisneros said that it was "no accident" that many mayors in the United States are black or Hispanic.

"The point is that we are together, like it or not, whether we are comfortable or not.

"We are experiencing a dramatic change. What we are seeing is a great change," he said.

Cisneros, a highly touted Mexican-American mayor, was mentioned Thursday night by Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis as an example of successful Americans of a number of origins.

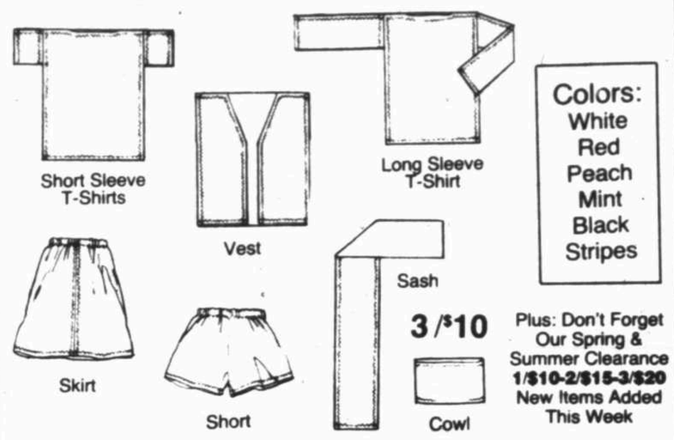

The mayor emphasized in his remarks the importance of bilingual education, noting the number of cultures that live together in the United States.

The citation said Cisneros was given the honor "for furthering better relations between Hispanics and Anglos, both in the United States and the Western Hemisphere....This young Hispanic leader, a man who aspires to better the lives of all people, typifies the kind of individual this university strives to prepare."

Western engineers ready to drill where Bedouin fear to tread

By MEREDITH CAMPBELL

MUSCAT, Oman (AP) — Bedouin tribesmen won't go near the quicksands in the desert of northern Oman. They say caravans of camels and herds of goats have been swallowed up in what they call the Umm as-Samim — Mother of Poisons.

But Western engineers are moving in just the same, defying the desert nomads' superstition in hopes of tapping natural gas believed to lie deep below the surface.

"We've heard the stories and we're obviously concerned," said John Hayhurst, the British plant manager of Desert Line, the Omani company that is preparing to build a road and set up drilling rigs in the region.

"You have to approach a project like this with infinite care. You have to investigate every inch of land before you move."

Bedouin tribes such as the nomadic Duru know how to endure the sandstorms and blazing sun of the Rub al Khali (Empty Quarter), the great sand-sea of Arabia with its 600-foot-high dunes.

But they will not venture near the quicksands in the belief they are haunted by devils.

Bedouin tales speak of caravans of camels and their riders and herds of goats disappearing in the quicksands of Oman, which is in the southeastern corner of the Arabian peninsula.

Most of Hayhurst's workers are foreigners, mainly from India and Pakistan.

Hayhurst said if workers wander off the compacted areas, they could indeed sink without trace.

"We've very nearly lost equipment," he said. "We're well equipped with ropes and chains."

Hayhurst, 39, is a 17-year veteran of prospecting in the Middle East and Africa, but this is his first experience with quicksands.

Drillers will shortly move into the area, just south of the Yibal oilfield discovered in 1962, targeted under the Omani government's gas exploration program directed by the state-run Petroleum Development Oman (PDO).

Oil is the backbone of Oman's economy. Its production is about 600,000 barrels daily. Gas exploration is being intensified, mainly for local consumption.

PDO's project engineer, Dutchman Jan Martens, said: "The surface is a salty, silty material which is reasonably hard when dry, but when wet is soft and would swallow a vehicle.

"The sandy layer is nine meters (27 feet) deep at the drilling locations."

His engineers will "float" a road across the quicksands to support a 1,500-ton drilling rig. The road will be built from layers of webbed matting that will bind the soft sand together beneath compacted surface material.

The first European to observe these quicksands was the British explorer Wilfred Thesiger, who described them in his book, "Arabian Sands."

"The ground of white gypsum powder was covered with a sand sprinkled crust of salt, through which protruded occasional dead twigs of salt bush," he wrote.

"These scattered bushes marked the firm land; farther out, only a slight darkening of the surface indicated the bog below."

His Arab companion warned him not to go too near, telling Thesiger a raiding party of Bedouin warriors had perished in the sands and that he himself had watched a flock of goats disappear.

The scientific explanation lies in the quicksands geographical position as Oman's lowest inland area just 177 feet above sea-level.

The area acts as a sump for rainwater running out from gulches in the mountains of northern Oman.

As the water runs down, it leaches salt from the earth and carries it to into the Mother of Poisons, where the water evaporates in the roaring sun, crystallizing the salt in a thick white crust on the surface.

Arab women jump at chance to take aerobics

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is one of a series of periodic reports by Associated Press correspondents on people, places and things in other countries.

By BRENDA SMILEY

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The veiled Arab woman checked in at the desk, Reeboks peeping from under her abaya, the black, shroud-like robe Moslem women wear.

In the locker room, she shed the robe to reveal the latest in latex exercise gear. Within minutes, she was gyrating to the pounding beat of the aerobics class music.

Physical fitness is a sensitive subject in the Arab world, where religion and custom decree that women's bodies, and sometimes their faces, be covered.

Even in the relatively Westernized Arab states on the Persian Gulf, many women, young and old, adhere to tradition, walking the streets in their abayas.

But the female fitness craze has arrived, and among gulf women it is just beginning to hit its stride.

In another Manama gym, a young girl in red stretch jogging pants and a T-shirt reading "Bye Bye Worry" is one of 33 Arab women, all physical fitness instructors, taking a training seminar.

The women, 19 to 34 years old, have been training for two years and now teach their own community courses, currently drawing about 1,300 women.

Kathy James, an American sports specialist and guest instructor for the seminar sponsored by the U.S. Information Service and the Bahrain Sports Institute, says she was surprised to find such an active group in the Arab world.

"I think they're becoming more aware of how important it is to keep your body physically fit," she said.

Medical experts say oil wealth and other factors beginning in the 1970s have helped bring about changes in eating habits. Saturated fats, refined sugars and processed foods have become part of the diet and people are adopting a luxury-loving, more sedentary lifestyle.

"It's overindulgence," said Dr. Essa Amin, chief of the medical staff at Bahrain's Defense Force Hospital.

"There's definitely a link between the diet habit, the lack of exercise and higher incidence of diabetes, cardiac and cardio-circulatory problems."

Interest in fitness has been encouraged by European and other expatriate women who bring a more active, sports-oriented lifestyle to the region.

Apart from those operated at major hotels, Bahrain now has about 15 women's fitness centers in schools, gymnasiums and private health clubs and health studios also operate in nearby Dubai and Abu Dhabi.

In Cairo, Egypt, aerobics instructor Samia Allouba has kept her popular television show going despite Islamic fundamentalist opposition that, she says, has included telephone threats and street taunts from both men and women.

She compromises by wearing discreet, high-collared tops with long sleeves during her TV presentations.

But having crusaded for female fitness for eight years, she now thinks she's winning. Egyptian as well as foreign women fill her suburban Cairo studio from morning to night.

"In the last two years, I've noticed a definite change in the attitudes of women," she said in a telephone interview. "They've become more interested in becoming healthy."

Odette Alagasi, aerobics instructor at Bahrain's Gulf Hotel, said that when she arrived from the Philippines more than a year ago, virtually all her students were foreign women. Now at least one-fourth are local.

Alagasi, 24, said most of her students enroll to lose weight and aren't aware of such things as the cardiovascular benefits of exercise.

Mona Al-Ansari, 29, who has trained the 33 aerobics and fitness instructors for the Bahrain government's Council for Youth and Sports, says Arab women, naturally shy, are more at ease in being taught by another Arab.

"We understand their special needs...They trust us to do their classes for them," she said. "Before, they didn't have the chance to do anything like this for themselves. Now the opportunity is there.

"Wives, mothers and girls, women from 12 to 60 years old, are coming to classes. And I like to encourage the women to do sports, to be on a level with the men."

The advocates of exercise say they see is no conflict with the teachings of Islam.

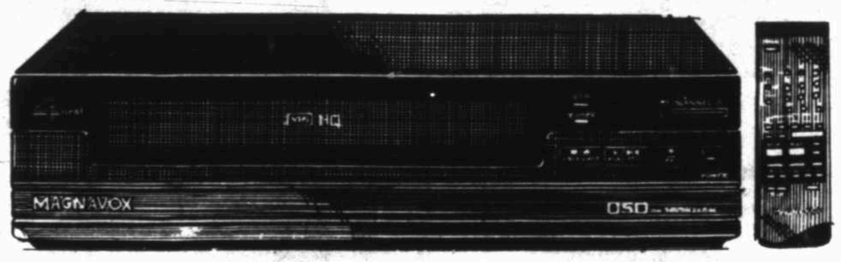

Instructor Al-Ansari quotes the prophet Mohammed as saying, "The strong Moslem is better than the weak Moslem."

Right-wing Africaners seek to secede, form all-white state

By DAVID CRARY

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Calling minority rule unjustifiable, prominent right-wing academics are proposing that Afrikaners secede from South Africa and form an all-white state of their own.

The idea has jolted white political circles.

The proposal, based on the premise that black majority rule is inevitable, represents a remarkable shift from the "grand apartheid" plan envisioned by Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd 30 years ago.

Verwoerd sought to relocate blacks in nominally independent rural homelands while whites maintained control over the bulk of the country, including the industrial centers, gold mines, ports and the best farmland.

Now, Verwoerd's son-in-law, Professor Carel Boshoff, and several other conservative ideologists are renouncing long-term hopes of dominating the entire country, where blacks outnumber whites by more than 5 to 1.

They propose creation of a "volkstaat" — a state for the Afrikaner people — while the black majority gains control over the rest of South Africa.

About 60 percent of the country's 5 million whites are Afrikaners, descendants of the Dutch and other European settlers who arrived three centuries ago. Collectively, the Afrikaners are far more concerned with ethnic nationalism than other whites, many of whom have dual citizenship in such countries as Britain, Italy, Greece and Portugal.

Establishing a volkstaat is "the only chance of survival for the Afrikaner people," Boshoff wrote in a document distributed last month to members of the Afrikaner Volkswag (People's Guard), a conservative cultural group he heads.

"MINORITY domination as currently practiced in South Africa is morally unjustifiable," Boshoff wrote. "He (the Afrikaner) simply does not have the numbers and power to enforce such a destiny."

The National Party government of President P.W. Botha rejects the volkstaat plan as unfeasible. It is struggling to find support for its concept of racial power-sharing, in which blacks would be brought into the central government but would not be allowed to overrule white interests.

The far-right Conservative Party, now the National Party's main opposition in Parliament's dominant white chamber, officially endorses the 1960s-style concept of partition, with whites maintaining exclusive control of most of the country. The party's leader, Andries Treurnicht, has tried to distance himself from Boshoff's volkstaat plan without explicitly repudiating it.

But Boshoff believes a growing number of the Conservatives' supporters view a separate state as the only realistic means of avoiding black domination and ensuring Afrikaner self-rule.

Boshoff was a theologian at the University of Pretoria and is a former chairman of the Broederbond, a secretive society of influential Afrikaners. His endorsement of a volkstaat lends a new legitimacy to a concept that in the past was touted mostly by extremist groups such as the paramilitary Afrikaner Resistance Movement.

The movement's leader, Eugene TerreBlanche, says blacks could live in the volkstaat only as migrant workers and Jews would be barred from citizenship.

HIS PROPOSAL has gained little credence outside the extreme right because it envisions a volkstaat encompassing two of South Africa's four provinces and part of a third, leaving only Cape Province and the coastal area around Durban for those who accept blacks' right to govern. TerreBlanche's volkstaat would include Johannesburg, Pretoria and other major centers.

Boshoff and his colleagues have not yet proposed specific borders for a volkstaat, but they are signaling their willingness to accept less territory than TerreBlanche.

"We want a state that is big enough for us to live there and work there, and small enough to defend it," Boshoff said in an interview.

One small band of Afrikaners already has tried to make the volkstaat concept a reality, setting up a community in eastern Transvaal province that tries to get by without the use of black labor.

He does not endorse TerreBlanche's ban on Jews from citizenship in a volkstaat — he has said he is not anti-Semitic — and says non-Afrikaner whites would be welcome so long as they were willing to assimilate into Afrikaner culture.

He envisions a non-partisan political system but holds that forced removals of blacks would be necessary to consolidate a white state.

One small band of Afrikaners already has tried to make the volkstaat concept a reality, setting up a community in eastern Transvaal province that tries to get by without the use of black labor. They are part of a group called the Oranjewerkers, cofounded in 1980 by Hendrik Verwoerd, the son and namesake of the prime minister.

HERBERT ADAM, a West German sociologist who studied South Africa's far right, sees some merit in allowing white supremacists to form their own homelands.

"These enclaves may help to neutralize the potential terror of hardcore racists," he wrote last year in a South African business magazine, Optima. "Private communes of racist escapists from a threatening reality will inevitably fade into insignificance as long as the non-racial post-apartheid state lives up to its promise."

Moderate Afrikaners hope a volkstaat will not be needed.

Deer going in search for food and it's costing them their lives

By A.J. DICKERSON

BIG PINE KEY, Fla. (AP) — The gentle Key deer who inhabit the Florida Keys are so cute it's killing them.

Emboldened by handouts from well-meaning residents, many of the Bambi-esque creatures have been run over by cars while crossing highways in search of food.

The smallest species of white-tailed deer in the nation, the endangered animals roam among the ever-increasing houses on this island, nibbling roots, homeowners' plants and flowers — and begging for snacks.

"A few days ago, a young one was eating our tomatoes. I went out to take its picture and he trotted up to me for a handout," said island resident Grace Manillo.

"They'll sit there and be cute and beg for food. They'll eat anything. It's the deers' undoing — you can love them to death," added Deborah Holle, manager of the National Key Deer Refuge.

The deer, about 2 feet tall and 70 pounds when full grown, will even munch marshmallows and potato chips, said Holle.

"We have one herd fed junk food daily. We noticed two of them with the worst coats we've ever seen."

But poor coats are the least of the deer's troubles. Dogs and wild pigs maul them. About a fifth of all newborns drown in ditches dug years ago to control mosquitoes. They lack sufficient fresh water. Development is whittling away their habitat outside the 7,400-acre federal refuge. And the handouts make them lose their savvy, becoming easy prey for poachers.

The handouts, which are illegal, have a more insidious effect: They make the deer bold enough to cross busy streets to reach houses where they can count on snacks.

Between 1980 and 1987, 345 of the 431 deer found dead on Big Pine Key and the several neighboring keys they also inhabit were killed by cars.

Cars killed all but eight of the 31 found dead so far this year, prompting Holle to spend $20,000 from the refuge budget for extra Monroe County Sheriff's deputies to ticket speeders on nearby roads. But she fears more of her 250 precious wards may soon die on the highway.

Compounding the problem is a controversial road first proposed in 1985 to siphon off traffic from often-clogged U.S. 1, the main drag through this island. The road would cut through prime deer-roaming territory, and is opposed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which manages the refuge; the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission and local environmentalists.

But area residents overwhelmingly favor the road so they can avoid U.S. 1, and say objections to the route come too late.

"The route was published in newspapers. We followed the county attorney's advice. We picked a route able to move people in the most efficient way with the least disruption to the environment. Now people are yelling, 'Key deer!' " said Bill Becker, who founded the committee that drew up the highway plan.

Said Mrs. Manillo: "We need a bypass road, but I'm not convinced that's the place to put it. But some say people are more important than the deer, and get annoyed. They are inconvenienced by the deer."

Holle said the deer have always struggled. "It was never a garden of Eden here. They had storms, and fresh water was probably the biggest limiting factor."

The refuge was established in 1957 to save the 50 deer that remained then. In 1967, the deer received endangered species protection, and by 1978, the population grew to about 400. Now it's dwindling again, mostly because of development that destroys habitat and brings cars, says Holle, who spends $2 million a year to add land to the refuge.

But she fears her efforts may not save the deer from extinction. "They have a very low reproductive rate," says Holle. She also views the proposed road as a deer death trap.

Mrs. Manillo agreed.

"The deer run right out into traffic," she said. "People speed. The deer kills go on and on and on."

Despite four years of research, oceanographer gets seasick

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Sciremammano gets seasick and has more stories about getting stuck in airports than getting stuck at sea.

So it may seem surprising that NASA has given him more than $100,000 in grants the past two years to study the Antarctic Ocean.

Sciremammano, a professor at Rochester Institute of Technology, has only actually seen the Antarctic twice, but he believes he knows as much about it as anyone, thanks to satellites and computers.

"Satellite oceanography is still in its infancy, but more and more people are getting interested," he said. "When I got started in 1984 there were really only two or three groups involved."

Now, there are textbooks on the subject and seminars held to discuss new developments in the field that involves sophisticated radar measurements taken by satellite to study a wide range of information about the ocean's behavior.

Sciremammano says satellites can revolutionize some aspects of oceanography because scientists will no longer be limited to bits and pieces of data.

"The satellites provide a global picture that traditional methods can't," he said. "You can put instruments in the water and get a lot of wonderful information, but only about that particular point."

That's especially important in a place like the Antarctic Ocean, where a dearth of shipping activity makes dropping off measuring devices expensive and time-consuming. Studying the Antarctic the traditional way convinced Sciremammano that satellites were the way to go.

"We spent millions of dollars over years, a lot of time and effort on the part of a lot of people...and we really got one data point," he said. "One good picture...but in a very limited geographic area."

So now, Sciremammano pores over charts and tables, constantly checks his electronic mailbox and keeps stacks of computer disks in his office. He's using one-tenth of all of RIT's computer memory to store the data he gets from space.

He said his research, which focuses on the nature of the circumpolar current which swirls around the continent of Antartica, could someday provide some definitions for the El Nino, an unexplained weather phenomenon that causes severe droughts and flooding on both sides of the Pacific Ocean, and for the much-talked about "greenhouse effect."

"We're trying to g[illegible] whole budget for the earth's heat balance," he sai[illegible] Everybody understands that heat comes in at the eq[illegible]or and goes out, more or less, at the poles, but the ex[illegible]echanisms for that transfer are not understood."

Sciremammano admits that his work — he teaches mechanical engineering — and his landlocked location make him somewhat of an oddball oceanographer.

Italy's pasta may not be so pure anymore

ROME (AP) — The land of pure pasta and taut tortellini is afraid that Italians won't be using the old noodle anymore.

Italy, the mecca of macaroni since the days of Marco Polo, is bracing for what purists say will be an invasion of rubbery ravioli, squishy spaghetti and limp linguine.

"In the coming weeks, Italians will have to say goodbye to their beloved firm pasta," said the newspaper La Repubblica.

Italy has lost its bid to maintain its so-called "pasta purity" law, a 1967 rule requiring all pasta sold in the country to contain durum wheat, which is firmer and more expensive than other varieties.

The European Economic Community's Court of Justice ruled that Italy could not use the law to block pasta imports from other EEC nations, even though Italy still can compel its own pasta makers to use durum wheat.

"That flavorful and firm macaroni, the product of our able pasta makers, will be challenged, and maybe even replaced, by the gluey and insipid pasta from Germany or Holland," La Repubblica moaned.

Italians have been eating pasta for at least 700 years. It is always cooked "al dente," or firm.

"We have a profound respect for pasta," said Giuseppe Menconi, director of the Italian Union of Pasta Makers.

"Go to Germany and eat their pasta. It practically melts on the plate. Our pasta is alive on the plate," he said.

Italian pasta makers insist the issue was not one of trade barriers, but "a question of protecting the consumer," said Albino Ganaspini, the spokesman for Barilla, the world's largest pasta producer with an output of 450,000 tons a year.

Italian firms produce about 1.8 million tons of pasta a year, and the average Italian gulps down about 55 pounds annually.

Ganaspini said imported pasta could cost up to 30 percent less than the kind made with durum wheat, but predicted few Italian customers would lower their standards.

Claudio Cecarelli, owner of a pasta shop in central Rome founded by his grandmother, said Italians will not mind paying more for the purer pasta.

"When we eat pasta it is with a certain amount of religiosity," he said.

But Roman seamstress Orsolina Petrini said she would "buy it, because it's cheaper."

The pasta case was brought to the Common Market's court by West German pasta producer Drei Glocken after an Italian court sought to block the company's export of pasta made with a wheat blend.

Alumni gather for extraordinary school reunion

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Albert Conley and Vito Altieri smiled and shook each other's hands.

"I haven't seen you, I guess, in about 10 years," Conley said, stretching one hand while holding a beer in another.

"Yeah, it's been 10 years. Why weren't you at the last reunion?" said Altieri, who lives in Santa Monica, Calif.

"I didn't know about it" Conley said. "What are you doing?"

"I work for, uh, a celebrity," Altieri said, hesitantly. "I work for Arnold Schwarzenegger. I work in administration. I am one of his office aides."

Hundreds of high school reunions are scheduled for this summer, but for Conley and Altieri and some 200 military brats who attended the Tehran, Iran, American School, their gathering that ended Sunday seemed more familial than other stateside reunions.

The sons and daughters of military officials and American businessmen who attended the Tehran school between 1960 and 1978, are not able to visit their alma mater because of the expense and because of the strong anti-American sentiment in Iran, heightened even more by the U.S. Navy's recent downing of an Iranian airliner that claimed 290 lives.

The Tehran alumni now living in the United States, talked, laughed and danced. Some shared pictures of their children and nearly all of them reminisced about their own adolescence in pre-Ayatollah Khomeini days in Iran.

"The people are basically good over there," said Conley, 26, who now lives in Dallas. "But we are dealing with extremists. We want a simple solution to problems, but when you are dealing with extremists you can't find an easy solution."

Conley and Altieri said they were among the last people to leave Iran in the winter of 1978 and the spring of 1979 after the shah was overthrown and the ayatollah returned from exile.

The reunion of Tehran alumni started in 1982 when several former teachers and students gathered in Houston. Another reunion in 1984 attracted 200 people, said Joe Condrill, president of the Tehran American School Association.

Condrill, who graduated from the TAS in 1973, became so interested in keeping in contact with other military brats that he started Overseas Brats, a magazine that caters to former military dependents.

Deborah Winstead, 35, who attended the school between 1966-1968, said Americans grew up independent, but also saw an oppressed society.

"The Americans were like family," said Ms. Winstead, who now lives in Kennsington, Md., and works at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

"It was an alien culture and you had to brace yourself with each other when something went wrong in your life," she said.

The alumni said that some students, because they were Americans with cash, had easy access to liquor and drugs.

For the most part, however, they said they had a good education.

Taj Baksh, an Iranian who was the assistant school superintendent before the revolution, said the children were well cared for.

"They got to see everything. Their parents were housed all over Tehran and we had buses that took the children anywhere they wanted to go," said Baksh, 55, who now works as an importer-exporter in Nashville.

The alumni shared numerous humorous, and, some life-threatening experiences.

Conley remembered that he and several other Americans were being chaffeured in a car that came upon a demonstration in which an American-owned building was set ablaze.

"The driver told us, 'It's OK. I know of a way to get out of here. When I step out of the car you just follow me where I run.'

"I thought to myself, 'Sure. We are in the middle of a riot. There is an Iranian running down the street with four American kids chasing him. That wouldn't have looked very good,'" Conley said. "We stayed in the car and were able to drive away."

Baksh said many Iranians are disenchanted with the current regime, with the war with Iraq and many are following in the footsteps of the American school children.

"People are leaving the county every day," he said. "There is no hope for many of the people, no future for them."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Those wishing more information about the Tehran American School Association, other foreign school associations or Overseas Brats should contact Joe Condrill at 512-692-0761 or write to P.O. Box 29805, San Antonio, Texas, 78229.

Forensic experts touch on new ways to lift prints from bodies

Hearst News Service

On any given day, Peggy Fiderio may be called out to a murder scene to try to find a killer's fingerprint on a body.

Right now, it's a long shot. But Fiderio, a Los Angeles police forensic expert, believes someday police will be able to identify killers by the prints they leave on their victims.

The inability to lift fingerprints from bodies has always hampered murder investigations. But now Fiderio and others are experimenting with new technology that would enable police to obtain a suspect's fingerprints from a murder victim's body.

Although latent fingerprints have been obtained from live bodies, successes with corpses have been few and far between.

In the last decade, U.S. and Canadian law enforcement agencies have started to collect fingerprints from the bodies of murder victims. The few success stories — mostly in humid areas where prints are easier to pick up — have provided enough of an incentive to keep fingerprint experts in other regions trying.

Their persistence paid off last January in Los Angeles when print specialists successfully obtained a latent print from a corpse in a controlled experiment at the coroner's office.

Bodies of a man and a woman were recovered from separate traffic accidents. Forensic experts placed their own fingerprints on the bodies, and after intense examinations, they successfully recovered a latent print from the woman's body.

Margaret Black, senior forensic specialist at the Orange County Sheriff's Department, south of Los Angeles, said it was believed to be the first time California forensic experts obtained a latent print from a corpse in a simulated homicide situation.

"It was encouraging," she said. "It is possible to obtain a fingerprint from a body."

In their experiments, experts found the most promising cases involved nude bodies, particularly those that had been bound and gagged. In those cases, the body had been handled extensively by the killer, increasing the chance fingerprints were left behind. Humidity also helps preserve a body's chemistry and the oil from a fingerprint.

The latest technology uses a high-tech laser to highlight a possible print. A plastic chamber is then constructed and the body is exposed to fumes from a super glue for at least an hour. The fumes adhere to the oils of the print, making it visible on the skin's surface. A dye is placed on the print and it is photographed.

The biggest drawback, print experts say, is that bodies of murder victims are often too badly decomposed when discovered to make the technique useful.

James Anderson, a Los Angeles police criminologist, said lack of humidity appears to make it much harder to lift prints in California.

In North Miami Beach, Fla., humidity from an air conditioner is credited in helping preserve a latent fingerprint recovered from the body of a woman, one of three people shot and killed in a health club on July 23, 1978.

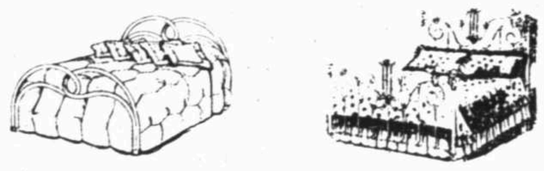

Although suspects' prints have been recovered from blood stains left on corpses, that Florida case was believed to be the first in the United States in which a latent fingerprint was obtained from the skin and identified, said Richard Hall, identification supervisor with the Metro Dade Police Department in Miami.

Foster displays courage

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Florence Griffith Joyner was a vision in speed. Greg Foster was a profile in courage.

The two, who were once engaged, were linked in drama Friday night at the U.S. Olympic Trials.

The colorfully dressed Griffith Joyner shattered the American record in the women's 200-meter dash and Foster, competing for the first time since suffering a broken left forearm, advanced through his first two heats in the men's 110-meter high hurdles.

Griffith Joyner, who set the women's world record of 10.49 in the 100-meter dash last Saturday, won her second-round heat in 21.77 seconds. That erased the U.S. record of 21.81, set by Olympic gold medalist Valerie Brisco at the 1984 Los Angeles Games.

Foster competed with his arm heavily wrapped, after having removed a light, plastic brace, just before each of his races. He admitted he was in much pain.

Appearing nervous as he paced around the start area before the first heat, Foster was called for one false start before the gun went off. He also appeared to have much difficulty setting his injured arm in the blocks.

But once he got going, Foster ran relatively well.

He led all the way and was timed in 13.58, edging Andre Phillips, second in 13.60.

In the second round, Foster got out of the blocks slowly, never led and finished a tired third in 13.69.

After the race, he sat on the track, put his arms over his head and lay down on the track for a short time, before being helped up by track attendants. He did not appear hurt, just exhausted.

The hurdles semifinals and final will be run Saturday.

Foster, the 1983 and 1987 world champion and 1984 Olympic silver medalist, suffered the broken arm July 4 during a hurdles drill. He underwent surgery that night and was hospitalized for three days.

This week, he had 54 surgical staples removed from the arm, which was broken in two places. The arm now has four plates in it, held together with 12 screws.

In finals Friday night, Jackie Humphrey scored a narrow victory in the women's 100-meter high hurdles in 12.88, Brian Abshire won the men's 3,000-meter steeplechase in 8:23.64, the fastest by an American this year, and Lynn Nelson captured the women's 10,000 in 31:51.27.

Humphrey, from Eastern Kentucky University, finished just ahead of Gail Devers-Roberts, the co-American record-holder, second in 12.90, and LaVonna Martin third in 12.93.

Benita Fitzgerald-Brown, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist, barely missed making the team, finishing fourth in 12.94, as she was outleaned by Martin. The 1984 Olympic co-bronze medalist, Kim McKenzie, finished fifth in 13.01.

In the steeplechase, American record-holder Henry Marsh finished second in 8:24.21, earning his fourth Olympic berth, and Brian Diemer was third in 8:24.40.

Joining Nelson on the 10,000-meter team were Francie Larrieu-Smith, 35, second in 32:03.63, and national cross country champion Lynn Jennings, third in 32:07.74.

Earlier, Jackie Joyner-Kersee continued her outstanding long jumping and long-time rivals John Powell and Mac Wilkins extended their feud.

Joyner-Kersee, who set the world heptathlon record a week ago, sailed into Saturday's women's long jump final with a qualifying leap of 23 feet, 8¼ inches, also a meet record.

And Wilkins and Powell, two of track and field's "old guard," finished 1-2 in the men's discus qualifying — and renewed their perennial verbal battle

Griffith Joyner had sped to an easy victory in her first-round heat in the 200. Her time of 21.96 was the fastest by an American this year — until she bettered it in the second round.

Records fall in 2nd round

By JIMMY PATTERSON

Bruce Vaughan broke tour and course records in second round action of the ProGolf Tour's United Bank West Texas Classic Friday at Green Tree Country Club.

Vaughan's 10-under par, 61 also thrust him into a five stroke lead. The Hutchinson, Kan., native is alone atop the leaderboard, with a two-round total of 128, good for 14-under-par.

The previous course record at Green Tree was 63, set Wednesday by Marco Dawson in the PGT Pro-Am. Vaughan's second-round score also felled — by one stroke — the former tour mark of 62 set two weeks ago by Steve Haskins at the El Paso Coronado Open.

Vaughan's 61 was six strokes better than his opening round 67 and gives him a distinct advantage going into the last half of the four-day event.

A field of seven golfers remain five shots back, each with a two round total of 133.

Among the seven is former Abilene Cooper and University of Houston standout Mike Standly, who had a 68 Friday.

Perhaps the most amazing aspect of Vaughan's day was his realistic chance of shooting a 59 and possibly a 58.

The former fireman-turned-hog farmer-turned golf pro actually bogeyed one hole and parred the 18th, where he missed an eight-foot birdie putt.

Vaughan, though, made up for the bogey by firing an eagle on his first hole, No. 10 on the Green Tree course.

"I had a lot of good, close putts for birdies," Vaughan said. "Six or seven times I shot from three feet for birdies."

When it was over, Vaughan had birdied nine holes, eagled one, bogeyed one and parred the remaining seven.

"We've always had people shoot a 29 or 30 on half the course, but we've never had any who could string two good scores together," noted Green Tree pro Randy Kahn. "With 140 golfers out here of this caliber, we knew this was going to happen, we just didn't know when."

Kahn fell just short of making the cut by one stroke, finishing his two days with a 140.

Cuts made after Friday's round knocked out all golfers with scores higher than 139 for two rounds.

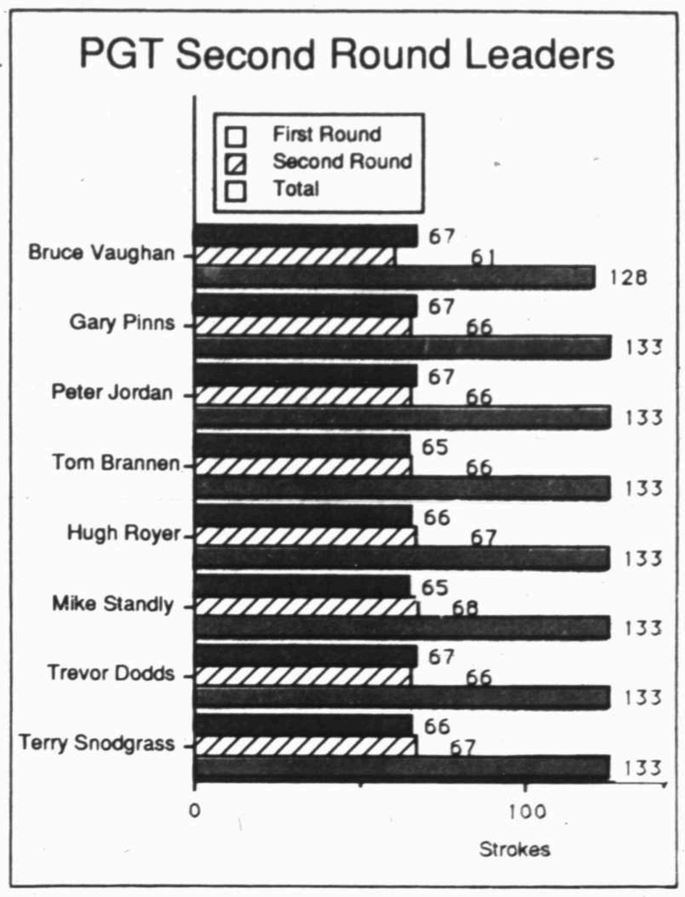

Abilene's Bob Estes, a pro for just two months, pulled up in the hunt and remains seven strokes behind Vaughan with a 135. Estes, recipient of the first annual Jack Nicklaus Collegiate Golfer of the Year this year, finished Friday with a 66, three strokes better than his opening round 69.

Estes said it was not a growing familiarity with the course that accounted for his improvement, but his chance to work on his game after Thursday's round.

"I just had a good night of practice," Estes said. "I got a lot accomplished and it showed today."

First round leader Ricky Smallridge fell back on the second day, pulling even for a 71.

PGT pro beats heart problem

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The Pro GolfTour features some of the top young competitors around nowadays. Ask anyone associated with the tour and they'll tell you just how tough these guys can be.

Hugh Royer is one of the tough ones.

It's not his driving or putting abilities that make him a winner. Nor is it because he can place the ball on the green with the greatest of ease more often than not.

What makes this Aiken, S.C., native such a competitor is that he successfully defended himself against a life-threatening heart condition and turned professional golfer just a year after being released from a South Carolina hospital.

It was 1986, at the young age of 22, when doctors discovered a leaky valve, which caused his heart to dilate.

With a new valve and a healthy prognosis, the Columbia (S.C.) College graduate looks at the surgery much as he looks at his golf game.

"I'm just going to try to survive and play the best I can," he said.

Unlike many, Royer does not become overly philosophical about being so close to death and then pulling away with a vengeance. He might even give you the impression that the biggest distraction of heart surgery was that it pulled him off the golf course.

"Going in and having surgery cost me some stuff," he said. "It forced me to be out of golf for a summer. But it gave me a chance to start all over again and I took advantage of that."

Playing since the age of seven, Royer learned much of his technique from dad, Hugh, Sr., who retired from the PGA tour in 1973.

Burcham caps Driller bat punch

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Tim Burcham started out as though it might be a short night when George Threadgill and Mike Scanlin greeted the Midland righthander with game-opening singles.

Over the next seven innings, however, Tulsa managed just three more hits as the Angels made it two straight over the Drillers, 4-2, before 2,708 fans at Angel Stadium Friday night.

Kurt Walker supplied a ninth inning nail-down job, surrendering two singles, in earning his ninth save of the season.

GOING INTO tonight's 6 p.m. Angel Stadium doubleheader, Midland trails the season's series with the Drillers 3-4.

But Burcham was the story Friday against the Drillers, following up his complete game win against the Drillers in Tulsa with a nine-strikeout effort.

"He's back to his old self," said catcher Erik Pappas, "When he throws like that he's tough to beat."

"He was throwing his curve for strikes and his changeup for strikes, even when he was behind," marveled Manager Max Oliveras of his 24-year-old fourth year pro from the University of Virginia. "His other pitches were so good that even his fast ball looked better."

AN ERROR cost Burcham a third inning run when Jesus Alfaro dropped Threadgill's pop up for a two-base error and Scanlin promptly drove him home.

Jeff Manto tied it with his 20th homer, an authoritative belt to the scoreboard in the home third.

Midland inched ahead 2-1 in the fourth. Norm Carrasco singled and with two out scored from first when rightfielder Gar Millay played footsie with Lee Stevens' flair single to right. The throw had Carrasco beat, but Norm came in head-first to the right of the plate and tagged the plate with his hand as he slid by.

Two more runs off loser Mitch Thomas, 3-3, in the seventh proved the winners. Stevens doubled off the right field wall, his 20th of the season, and scored on Jim Opie's double. Thomas eventually balked Opie home.

Kevin Reimer's 12th homer and second in two nights here made it 4-2 in the eighth.

"Burcham had thrown 120 pitches," noted Oliveras, "And a Kurt Walker in the bullpen I decided to bring him in in the ninth, even if they call me 'Captain Hook.'"

HALO HOOPS— Todd Eggersten, 5-8, and Marty Reed, 2-1, go for the Angels tonight....Manager Oliveras is afraid Manto may have pulled a hamstring, "I don't think that grounder in the ninth would have gotten by him for a hit if he hadn't been hurting."...Manto is hitting .374 for his last 35 games with 10 homers and 39 rbi in that stretch....Tulsa pitcher Thomas uncorked what should have been a wild pitch with Manto on third in the seventh, but his hustle gave him an assist on the play when he retrieved the ball and threw out Manto at the plate.....

Cowboys sue NFLPA and agent

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys announced on Friday the filing of a suit against the NFL Players Association and a sports agent in connection with the refusal of placekicker Roger Ruzek to report to training camp.

In a suit filed Friday in state district court in Dallas, the Cowboys sought $210,000 in actual damages against Steven A. Weinberg, the agent for Ruzek, and $1.150 million in punitive damages against Weinberg and the NFLPA.

The Cowboys said Weinberg and the players association are guilty of "tortious" interference with Ruzek's contract, thus keeping him from reporting on Thursday with other Cowboys veterans.

Weinberg, complaining that the Cowboys bargained in bad faith in renegotiating Ruzek's salary, filed a grievance on Wednesday with the NFLPA.

Ruzek made $65,000 last year and was scheduled to receive $71,000 in 1988.

Weinberg said the Cowboys offered a new contract that would pay Ruzek less than the average salary for NFL kickers, about $160,000 per year.

The Cowboys' suit said: "Ruzek was required by the club, pursuant to the contract, to report to the club's preseason training camp on July 21, 1988. Defendant Weinberg, in his capacity as contract advisor, prevented Ruzek from reporting to training camp as agreed.

"The actions of its agent Weinberg are presumably at the direction and with the consent of defendant NFLPA. The tactics of the NFLPA and Weinberg are part of a course of conduct by NFLPA agent Weinberg of interference with NFL player contracts, which course of conduct and/or similar conduct has been condemned in an earlier no-injury grievance arbitration, Doug Walter Plan vs. Chicago Bears, decided Feb. 4, 1983."

Club president Tex Schramm said the club is "tired of having people under contract interfered with."

N. Central takes title

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It took two weeks of double elimination to put North Central and Mid City into an All-Midland District 3 Little League final at Hogan Park, but North Central won the title Friday night with a 16-6 victory to advance to the bi-district playoff round.

North Central will face the District 4 champion at Hogan Park Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the first game of a best-of-three playoff. The winner will advance to Waco's state Little League tournament.

North Central went through District 3 play unbeaten, but it looked like they may have met their match Friday night as Mid City erupted for five runs in the top of the first inning. Things looked bad for the North Central crew at that point.

Davis leads slugging Astros to 5th straight

HOUSTON (AP) — Glenn Davis hit a three-run homer to give him a league-leading 74 RBI as the Houston Astros defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-3 Friday night for their fifth straight victory and 10th in 12 games.

The Astros homered for the 10th game in a row, tying a club record. Davis' 22 homers are second in the National League behind New York's Darryl Strawberry, who has 24.

Bob Knepper, 10-3, gave up six hits, walked four and struck out a season-high eight in six innings. Danny Darwin pitched three hitless innings to earn his third save.

Houston jumped on Philadelphia starter David Palmer, 5-7, for four runs in the third. With one out, Billy Hatcher walked, stole second and scored on Bill Doran's single. After a walk to Terry Puhl, Davis homered to left.

The Astros made it 5-0 in the fourth when Craig Biggio doubled, went to third on a sacrifice bunt, and scored on Hatcher's sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia broke through in the sixth when Mike Young doubled, John Russell singled and Ricky Jordan hit his third homer in only 17 major-league at-bats.

Dodgers 4, Pirates 2

Pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher's two-run double in the seventh inning broke a tie and Tim Belcher pitched 5 1-3 no-hit innings for the Dodgers. It was only the Pirates' second loss in 14 games.

Belcher, 7-4, combined with three relievers on a five-hitter as the Dodgers ended a three-game losing streak and the Pirates' three-game winning streak. The Pirates had beaten the Dodgers six times in a row.

Dave Anderson walked with one out in the seventh and Steve Sax walked with two outs, prompting Pirates manager Jim Leyland to lift starter Mike Dunne, 6-8. Hatcher, who has a .418 average against the Pirates, greeted Dave Rucker with a sinking line drive that glanced off the glove of diving Pirates center fielder Andy Van Slyke and bounced into right-center field.

Jeff Hamilton drove in an insurance run with an RBI double in the eighth.

Belcher, 7-4, making just his second start since June 18, did not allow a hit until Barry Bonds singled to right with one out in the sixth inning. Dunne, who had walked, advanced to third, and Bonds reached second on the play when right fielder Mike Marshall threw wildly trying to throw out Dunne.

Jose Lind's groundout scored Dunne and moved Bonds to third, but Belcher struck out Van Slyke swinging for the third out.

Belcher was lifted for a pinch hitter after striking out six and walking two in six innings. Alejandro Pena allowed Sid Bream's double and Mike LaValliere's RBI single in the seventh, the first run he had allowed in 22 2-3 innings.

Jay Howell retired the last four batters, striking out two, to earn his 11th save.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead with two out in the third when Mike Davis walked and Kirk Gibson and Marshall singled. Dunne avoided further trouble by picking Marshall off first base.

Mets 6, Braves 1
Mets 5, Braves 1

David Cone scattered six hits for his first victory since June 24 and Mackey Sasser and Dave Magadan each drove in two runs for the Mets in the second game.

In the opener, Dwight Gooden pitched an eight-hitter and struck out his 1,000th career batter as the Mets won 6-1.

New York had lost eight of its last 12 games. With the Pittsburgh Pirates losing to Los Angeles, the Mets increased their lead to two games in the National League East.

Cone, 10-2, struck out seven and walked none for his third complete game. He lost his shutout in the seventh inning when Andres Thomas hit his 10th homer.

The Mets scored two unearned runs in the first innings against Rick Mahler, 8-9.

Lenny Dykstra, the leadoff batter, reached first when first baseman Gerald Perry booted his grounder. Dykstra took third on Wally Backman's single and scored on Dave Magadan's sacrifice fly. A walk to Darryl Starwberry and a single by Kevin McReynolds loaded the bases and Backman scored on Howard Johnson's groundout.

McReynolds and Johnson walked with two outs in the sixth inning and Sasser doubled to score both runners and give the Mets a 4-0 lead.

The Mets added a run in the seventh on Magadan's RBI single.

In the first game, Gooden, 23, struck out Dion James with two out in the second inning and became only the third pitcher in major-league history to reach 1,000 before his 24th birthday. Gooden struck out four for the game, giving him a career total of 1,002.

The only other pitchers to strike out 1,000 batters before turning 24 are Bob Feller and Bert Blyleven.

Reds 4, Expos 1

Eric Davis capped a two-run first inning with an RBI single, and left-hander Danny Jackson scattered seven hits over eight innings for the Reds.

Jackson, 12-5, won for the seventh time in his last nine starts. He struck out six and walked three, pitching out of trouble frequently in the early innings. John Franco worked the ninth and earned his 18th save.

Franco has saved eight of the last nine Cincinnati victories. In his last 10 outings, Franco has one victory and nine saves.

Brian Holman, 1-3, allowed just the two first-inning runs in his six innings. It was his sixth start since being called up from the minors June 25 to take Floyd Youmans' spot in the rotation.

Cubs 5, Padres 4

Manny Trillo scored the winning run from second in the 11th inning when second baseman Roberto Alomar dropped a pickoff attempt.

Trillo led off the 11th against Lance McCullers, 1-6, with a single and went to second on a sacrifice bunt. With two outs, Damon Berryhill was walked intentionally and when Alomar dropped catcher Benito Santiago's throw, the ball rolled into center field as Trillo came around to score.

Frank DiPino, 1-3, worked two scoreless innings.

The Padres tied the game in the ninth against Rich Gossage, trying to earn his 299th career save. Randy Ready led off with a single, took third one out later on Garry Templeton's single and scored on Tim Flannery's fielder's choice grounder.

Berryhill's second homer of the year came in the fifth inning and was the Cubs' first homer at Wrigley Field since Shawon Dunston homered against Philadelphia June 27, a span covering 114 innings.

Berryhill, who entered the game with only nine RBI in 37 games, doubled to the wall in center in the second against Eric Show to score Vance Law and Gary Varsho.

The Padres scored twice in the sixth with one out when Tony Gwynn singled, John Kruk doubled and Keith Moreland hit a two-run single, chasing starter Al Nipper.

Cardinals 4, Giants 2

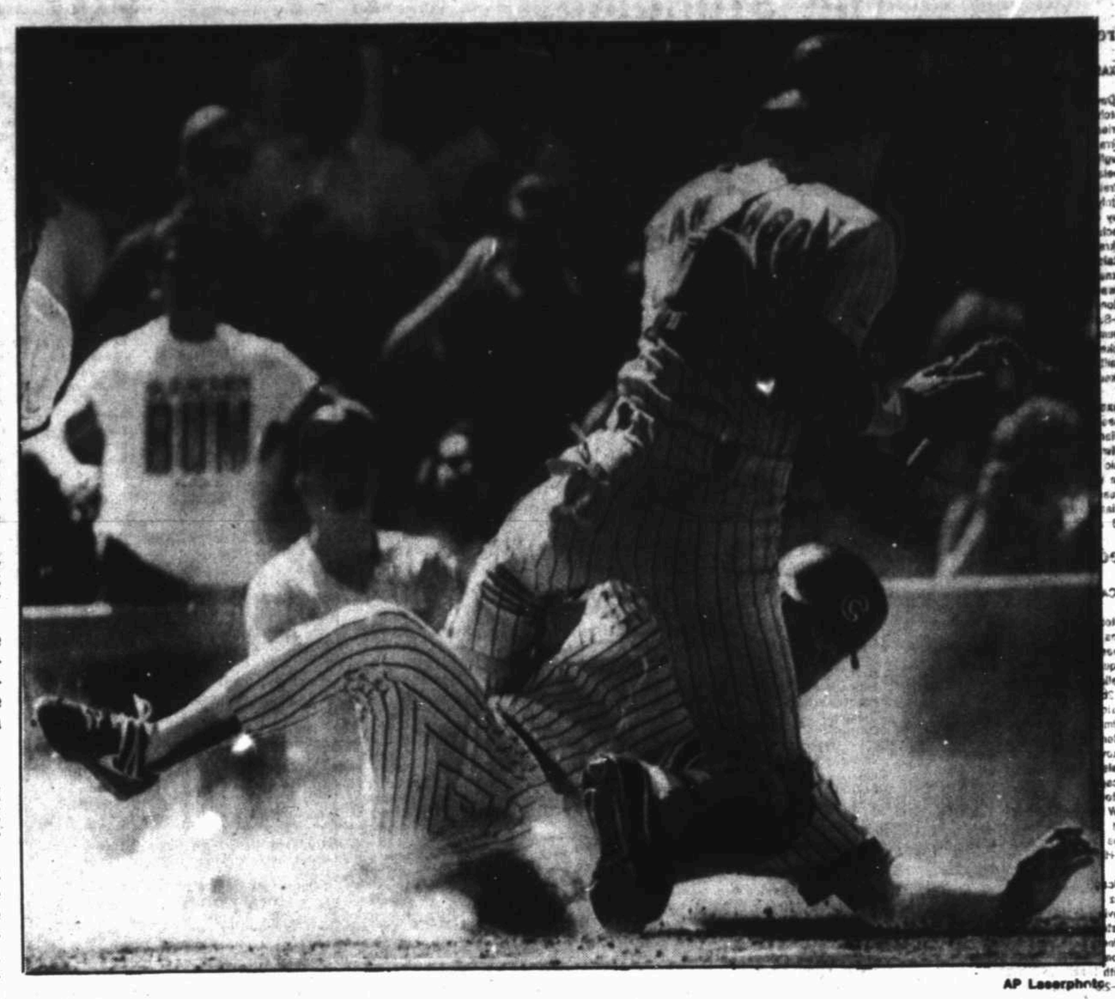

Jose Oquendo hit a two-run homer with one out in the 11th inning to lift the Cards to their fourth straight win.

With one out in the 11th, Mike Laga singled off Craig Lefferts, 2-7, and Oquendo hit the next pitch to left for his third homer.

Dan Quisenberry, 1-0, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, worked one inning for his first National League victory.

San Francisco tied the game in the seventh, but missed an opportunity to take the lead. With one out, Bob Melvin walked, Jose Uribe singled, and pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood walked to load the bases.

Pinch-runner Ernest Riles scored on Brett Butler's fielder's choice groundout, but Uribe tried to score from second on the play and was cut down at the plate by first baseman Mike Laga.

Sveum, Surhoff provide Brewer heroics

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dale Sveum tripled home the tying run and scored on B.J. Surhoff's single in the ninth inning Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied past the Texas Rangers 2-1.

Jeff Russell held Milwaukee to three singles before Billy Jo Robidoux opened ninth with a single. Mitch Williams relieved and Sveum hit the first pitch off the top of the left-field wall wall. Left fielder Pete Incaviglia hurt his shoulder trying to catch the ball and left the game.

Surhoff followed with a fly ball over drawn-in center fielder Oddibe McDowell for the game-winner.

Chuck Crim, 3-4, pitched the ninth inning and got the victory. Williams fell to 1-3.

Ruben Sierra drove in the game's first run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning. McDowell and Scott Fletcher led off with singles and one out later Sierra hit a fly ball to left field.

Chris Bosio gave up seven hits in eight innings for Milwaukee. He failed in his 12th start, a span of eight straight losses since May 16, to win his seventh game.

Red Sox 4, White Sox 3

Larry Parrish hit a two-run double and the Red Sox won their ninth straight game without a loss under Manager Joe Morgan.

The Red Sox remained undefeated since the All-Star break when Morgan succeeded John McNamara, who was fired. The nine-game winning streak is their longest since September 1986. The victory was their 14th in a row at Fenway Park, a club record.

With the score tied at 3, Wade Boggs led off the seventh inning with a walk against John Davis, 2-3. On a hit-and-run, second baseman Donnie Hill booted Marty Barrett's grounder for an error, putting runners at first and third.

Dwight Evans then grounded to Hill, who started a double play, as Boggs scored the go-ahead run.

The Red Sox had tied the game when Todd Benzinger doubled with two outs in the sixth, Jody Reed walked and Parrish doubled to deep left center off starter Melido Perez.

Wes Gardner, 4-1, allowed five hits in 7 1-3 innings. Lee Smith got two outs for his 14th save.

Chicago had jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first. Daryl Boston led off with a single and Steve Lyons sent him to third with a double. Boston scored on Harold Baines' sacrifice fly and Lyons came in on Greg Walker's single.

For the sixth straight game, Boston scored a run in the first as Evans doubled with two outs and Mike Greenwell singled for his 77th RBI.

Gardner retired 12 consecutive batters before the White Sox made the score 3-1 in the fifth on a walk to Boston and a double by Lyons.

Twins 6, Orioles 1

Frank Viola became baseball's first 16-game winner, pitching eight shutout innings Friday night.

Viola, 16-2, won his seventh straight start and remained unbeaten in 19 decisions at the Metrodome since May 22, 1987. He gave up five hits and lowered his American League-leading earned run average to 2.18.

Viola, who struck out six and walked three, had been tied with Greg Maddux of the Chicago Cubs for the most victories in the majors.

Juan Berenguer worked the final inning for Minnesota and gave up Larry Sheets' home run. It was the first homer Berenguer has allowed in 67 innings this season.

The Twins ended a three-game losing streak. The game drew 52,284, the fourth consecutive 50,000-plus crowd in Minnesota.

Yankees 9, Royals 8

Rickey Henderson reached base five times, scored three runs and stole three bases Friday night.

Henderson went 3-for-4 and increased his major league-leading stolen base total to 49. He scored on Willie Randolph's single in the sixth inning, capping a three-run rally as the Yankees overcame an 8-6 deficit.

Reliever Neil Allen, 3-2, got the victory and Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his 12th save. Israel Sanchez, 0-1, took the loss. The Royals outhit New York 15-14.

Joel Skinner and Rafael Santana singled in the New York sixth and Henderson grounded to deep short. Kurt Stillwell threw the ball over the head of second baseman Frank White as Skinner and Santana scored and Henderson sped to third, setting up Randolph's single.

Pat Tabler hit a three-run double as the Royals scored four runs in the second off Tommy John.

Slumping Cards declare desire to seek free agents

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It took the loss of Jack Clark and an embarrassing season to convince them, but the St. Louis Cardinals have decided that shopping the free-agent market may not be so bad after all.

General Manager Dal Maxvill said no changes are planned for the remainder of the season for the club, which was in fifth place in the NL East on Friday, 14½ games behind the New York Mets. But the Cardinals are not likely to stand pat with their losing hand for long.

"I think we intend to be aggressive in the free-agent market this year," Maxvill said. "I'd say we're very interested."

Before this year, the Cardinals had not pursued free agents since signing catcher Darrell Porter in 1980. St. Louis acquired first baseman Bob Horner in January mainly to save face after losing Clark to the New York Yankees.

This time, Maxvill said, it will be a different story. The organization is painfully aware that the team, at its best a volatile mixture of speed and occasional power but at its worst one of the most feeble lineups in the game, needs more hitting.

In one recent 12-game stretch, the Cardinals scored only 23 runs. They've been shut out 10 times this season, and they can't get what they need via trades for a very elemental reason.

"Basically, we don't have a lot to trade," Manager Whitey Herzog said with a shrug. "Even if everyone was healthy, we wouldn't have any excess players.

"We're short of people because of injuries. That's part of our problem. Then we've had problems with our relief pitching, first base and third base. It just hasn't worked very well."

Rozelle 'excuses' Manley from 'Skins camp

Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins was temporarily excused from training camp Friday by Pete Rozelle after a one-hour meeting between the defensive lineman, his lawyer and the commissioner.

"Commissioner Rozelle told Manley that he wanted to review additional information and that he would contact him during the next few days," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said in a statement. "Pending this review, Manley is excused from attending the Redskins' training camp."

The Washington Post reported this week that traces of a "minor" substance had been found in Manley's urine during a physical examination. Manley underwent rehabilitation for an alcohol problem in 1987.

Manley had little comment afterwards other than: "it was a nice meeting."

"It's a private matter," lawyer Bob Woolf said. "They asked us to keep it quiet. They're looking for information."

NFL Camps

TOP GUNS

Running back Lorenzo White of Michigan State agreed to terms with the Houston Oilers and was expected to arrive at camp Saturday. White was the 22nd player chosen in the 1988 NFL draft after finishing his career with the Spartans, for whom he gained 4,513 career yards.

Clifford Charlton, another first-round pick, agreed to terms with the Cleveland Browns. Charlton, a 6-3, 240-pound linebacker from Florida, was the 21st player taken overall. The Browns agreed to terms with second-round choice Michael Dean Perry, a second-round pick from Clemson, and signed linebacker Van Waiters, a third-round pick from Indiana.

OTHER AGREEMENTS

Four-time Pro Bowl selection Russ Grimm signed a three-year contract with Washington. Grimm, a a seven-year veteran, lost his starting guard's job last season after injuring a knee Nov. 8 against the Philadelphia Eagles. He was a backup in the Redskins' Super Bowl victory.

Free-agent quarterback Cliff Stoudt signed with the Phoenix Cardinals after missing his second day of camp. Stoudt, a 10-year veteran scheduled to back up All-Pro quarterback Neil Lomax, had been offered $350,000 recently by Phoenix. He made $310,000 last season.

Tony Eason, who had off-season surgery on his throwing arm after he lost the starting quarterback job, re-signed with the New England Patriots. New England also re-signed veteran free agents Tom Ramsey, its third-string quarterback, and Ed Williams, who could replace the retired Don Blackmon as the starting right outside linebacker.

Placekicker Louis Zendejas was re-signed by the Dallas Cowboys. Zendejas was released by Dallas last September, but was re-signed after the strike. He played in the replacement games and was released again.

PAYOFFS

Kansas City Chiefs running back Paul Palmer said he accepted monthly payments and a $5,000 loan from two sports agents during his senior year at Temple.

Palmer, the Chiefs' top draft pick in 1987, previously acknowledged he signed with agent Norby Walters before his college eligibility was up, but hadn't admitted taking payments from Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom. The agents are under investigation for racketeering, mail fraud, extortion and obstruction of justice by the United States attorney in Chicago.

HOLDOUTS

Six veteran free agents did not show up when the other New York Giants' veterans reported Friday. Missing were veteran free agent Mark Bavaro and linebacker Carl Banks, both All-Pros, and offensive guard Chris Godfrey, running back Maurice Carthon, punter Sean Landeta and offensive tackle William Roberts.

Four unsigned veterans will miss the Miami Dolphins' trip to England — wide receiver Mark Duper, quarterback Don Strock, tackle Jon Giesler and linebacker Jackie Shipp.

Paul Gruber, an offensive tackle from Wisconsin, is Tampa Bay's only holdout. He was the Bucaneers' first-round pick.

SIDELINED

Linebacker Todd Shell of the San Francisco 49ers apparently bruised his spinal cord during a controlled scrimmage and is expected to miss at least several weeks and perhaps two months.

Shell was taken by ambulance to Roseville Community Hospital after lying motionless on the field for several minutes at the 49ers' Sierra College camp.

Coach Bill Walsh said that although there Shell was numb in his extremities, a full recovery is expected.

Mountain runs help Newton pare tonnage

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — While William Perry undergoes treatment for an eating disorder, Nate Newton of the Dallas Cowboys works off some of his 320 pounds a different way — trekking into into the mountains not far from where John Wayne filmed the "Sands of Iwo Jima."

Morning and afternoon Newton, the "Kitchen" to Perry's "Refrigerator," has dragged his body up and down the mountain near California Lutheran College. Upon his return, his sweatsuit is so soaked he appears to have fallen in a pond.

As with Perry, who checked into the Chicago Bears' camp at 357 pounds and was promptly shipped off to a treatment center, there has been a Newton weight watch since the first day of the Cowboys' training camp.

When there were reports during the off-season that he weighted as much as 360 pounds, the alarmed Cowboys dispatched offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck to Florida to warn Newton that his NFL career as an offensive lineman was in jeopardy.

Newton got down to 327 pounds but was supposed to be at 300 on Thursday. He's being fined $25 per pound over 300 each week.

Hence the trips to "Iwo Jima."

"It's pretty neat once you get to the top of the mountain," Newton says. "I saw a coyote up there and some rabbits."

Asked if he saw any rattlers, Newton's eyes widened: "You mean there are rattlers up there?"

Informed that a Cowboys' coach killed several snakes last year, Newton shuffled his massive feet toward his dormitory room just shaking his dead.

Meanwhile, Newton's exact weight remains something of a state secret, but he's still too fat.

"He just has to decide if he wants to play pro football," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He can't have any edurance in the fourth period weighing as much as he does. He just needs to learn to leave pizza alone."

Newton is trying hard although there was one report of him being seen after hours at a fast food restaurant.

"When the season starts I'll be standing strong," Newton said. "I'll be fine, you'll see."

Newton said he actually enjoys his trips to the outback of the Cowboys' training facility.

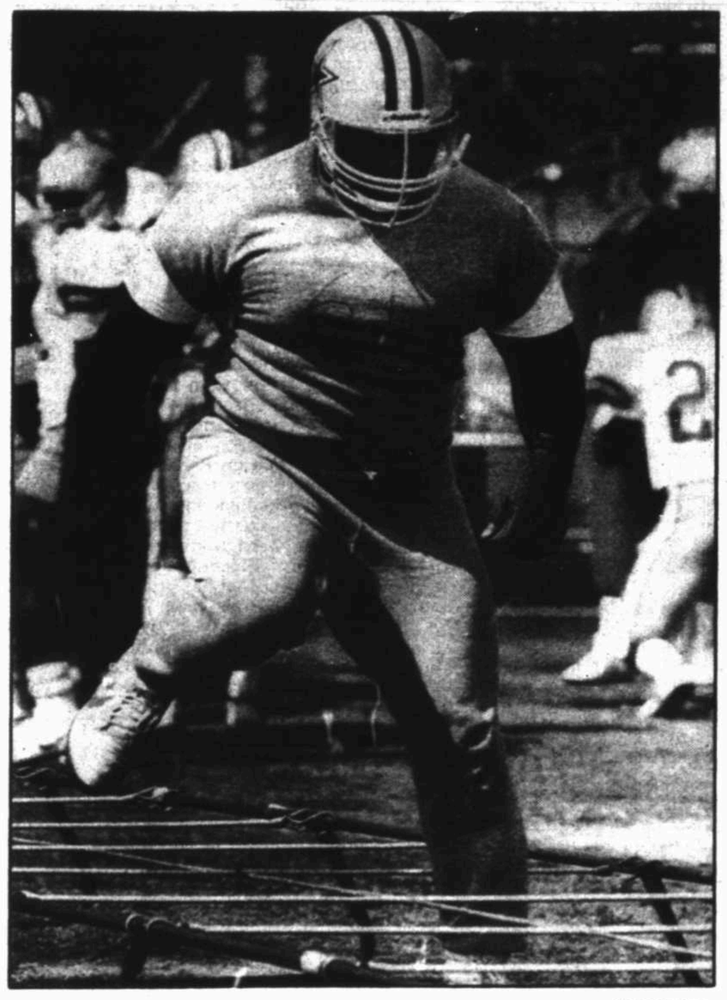

He is often accompanied by guard Jeff Zimmerman and tackle Kevin Gogan, who are also members of the Cowboys' 300-pound club. They all eat at a fat man's table so their diet can be watched.

"Sure, it's tough but I can't get mad," he said. "The mountain is something else and if I can dominate it then I can dominate a defensive lineman. I get to see all sorts of little animals running around up there besides me.

"If I stay on the path, I'll be OK."

Erkenbeck, who has just about lost patience, hopes so.

Last year he made Newton quit calling himself "The Kitchen" because he didn't think it was flattering.

Dallas Cowboys offensive lineman Nate Newton works out Friday during the Cowboys' training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif. Newton is being fined $25 for each pound over 300 that he weighs until he reduces to the 'magic figure.' Newton reportedly weighed 360 pounds during the off-season, but he's not the only NFL lineman to fight a battle with the scales. Chicago Bears standout William Perry has entered an eating disorders clinic in an effort to reduce.

SMU board plans less emphasis on sports

College

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University will put less emphasis on sports, stressing instead academic excellence, minority recruitment, financial stability, increased enrollment and community involvement, new trustees said.

"It is essential that SMU be the best educational institution our dollars can afford," said new trustee Jerry Geist, 54, president of the Public Service Co. of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

The 41 new members of the board, elected last week to four-year terms by the South Central Jurisdiction of the United Methodist Church, hope to put the school's play-for-pay football scandal behind them, some trustees say.

"Athletics certainly are to be part of the program, but one of the key words here is balance," said trustee Glen Cox, 58, president of Phillips Petroleum Co. in Bartlesville, Okla.

Several people who made headlines during the 1985 scandal are missing from the list of new trustees, including Gov. Bill Clements, who admitted to ordering continued payments to football players after the National Collegiate Athletic Association put the school on probation for earlier rules violations.

The NCAA imposed the so-called "death penalty" on the Southwest Conference school, suspending the football program for one year and imposing penalties for the next season so severe that the school decided to forego the 1988 season.

Others no longer on the board include Edwin Cox Sr., chairman of Cox Oil and Gas Inc., and Dallas investors O. Paul Corley and William Hutchison. The bishops' report indicated the three arranged severance payments for former SMU athletic officials, including former Athletic Director Bob Hitch, after Hitch agreed to accept blame for continuing the payments to conceal Clements' involvement.

The new trustees will meet for the first time Oct. 7. One of their first priorities will be to support President A. Kenneth Pye's plan to focus resources and attention on SMU's stronger academic programs.

Penn flunks Poke physical

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Linebacker Jesse Penn flunked his physical and Dallas Cowboys' doctors decided on Friday that it would no longer be safe for him to play.

Penn, a second-round draft pick in 1985 from Virginia Tech, suffered from a "degenerative condition" in his spine, club president Tex Schramm said.

"It built up over the years and Penn risks serious injury if he plays," Schramm said.

San Marcos enjoys press from Oilers camp

SAN MARCOS (AP) — The Houston Oilers' summer camp brought more than 100 athletes, coaches and equipment to town when it opened this week. San Marcos officials say it also brought publicity that money couldn't buy.

Newspapers, radio and television stations from across the state have sent reporters and photographers to the college town of 24,000 about 30 miles south of Austin. And daily, their reports mention where the Oilers are training.

"It's great for the town," Mayor Kathy Morris said Friday. "We're really enjoying the media coverage. And it gives us exposure that we couldn't afford to buy."

The mayor, along with City Manager A.C. Gonzales, were among the several hundred San Marcos residents who've attended Oilers practices.

The team chose San Marcos for its camp site this year after spending several summers at San Angelo.

"Everybody's excited."

Two rookies, Inkster tie for lead

Women's Open

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dottie Pepper Mochrie bogeyed the final hole Friday and dropped back into a three-way tie for the lead after the second round of the 43rd U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship.

Mochrie, 22, a rookie on the LPGA Tour, completed two trips over the hilly Five Farms course at the Baltimore Country Club in 139.

That tied the Women's Open record score for 36 holes, set by Donna Caponi in 1970, but it wasn't enough to put her alone at the top. She was tied with first-round leader Liselotte Neumann of Sweden and Juli Inkster at 3 under par.

Mochrie, daughter of former Detroit Tiger player Don Pepper, was alone in first place until she hit a tree limb with her second shot on the 18th hole and the ball kicked straight back.

Her third shot made the fringe and she had to get it up and down, making a 3-foot putt, to save bogey and a share of the top spot.

"A very good bogey," she said after finishing off her 69.

Inkster, a three-time women's amateur champion who admits to a fascination with this tournament, had her husband Brian as a caddy in her round of 68.

"We work as a team. It really helps me having him out there. He calms me down. And, yes, we're still speaking," she said.

Neumann, who set a tournament record with an opening-round 67, had to overcome some jittery nerves to compile a 72.

"I was very nervous," said Neumann, like Mochrie a 22-year-old LPGA rookie. "I guess I was scared I might do what I did in Sarasota. I had a big first-round lead, maybe five shots, and lost it all on the second day.

"I wanted to keep my lead, and I guess maybe I played a little too safe," she said.

Tammie Green and Vicki Fergon were two strokes back at 141 after shooting 70s.

JoAnne Carner, at 49 the oldest player in the field, had sole possession of the lead at one point, but bogeyed four times in a stretch of five holes and finished with a 74.

"To hit it as squirrelly as I did on the back nine and still be in contention, it's hard to believe," Carner said.

She reached the tournament halfway point at even-par 142 and was tied with Donna White, Amy Benz and Patty Sheehan. White had a 70, while Sheehan and Benz shot 72s.

McEnroe, Agassi lead U.S. to 2-0 zone lead

Davis Cup

Associated Press

John McEnroe beat Guillermo Perez Roldan in five sets and Andre Agassi beat Martin Jaite in straight sets Friday as the United States took a 2-0 lead over Argentina and moved within a victory of returning to the Davis Cup World Group.

The United States, knocked out of the top level of the 16-team competition last year when it lost to West Germany, competed in the American Zone this year.

In the World Group semifinals, Boris Becker and Eric Jelen won straight-set victories to give West Germany a 2-0 lead over Yugoslavia. In the other semifinal, Yannick Noah of France led Mats Wilander of Sweden 6-2, 4-4 when the match was suspended by rain.

Four nations will join the World Group next year. In zonal Group 1 finals Friday, Austria led Britain 2-0, South Korea led Indonesia 2-0, the Soviet Union led the Nethlerlands 2-0 and the United States led Argentina.

In Dortmund, West Germany, Becker beat Slobodan Zivojinovic, his former doubles partner, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4. Jelen beat Goran Prpic 9-7, 9-7, 6-2. West Germany needs to win one more match to advance to its second final since 1985.

Becker, two-time Wimbledon champion and ranked fourth in the world, served 15 aces against Zivojinovic, ranked 25th.

"I knew he couldn't play much better than in the first set, and he still lost it," Becker said. "That's why I really went for it at the start of the second set, I wanted to use my chance and force my game."

Clark Burroughs exults after his fairway shot went in the hole for an eagle Friday in the Canon Greater Hartford Open.

Brooks uses 65 to lead by shot at Hartford

PGA

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Mark Brooks, homing in on flagsticks with radar-like accuracy, shot a 65 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Roger Maltbie and rookie Clark Burroughs after two rounds of the $700,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

"He's not doing it with the putter. He's just striking the ball and placing it really well," playing partner Lee Trevino, a fellow Texan, observed.

Brooks, a 27-year-old from Fort Worth who is in his fifth year on the PGA Tour, had six birdies, four from less than five feet, and no bogeys over the par-71, 6,786-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course. He finished with a 36-hole score of 11-under-par 131.

He has struggled in his five years of professional golf, shuffling back-and-forth between the Tour and qualifying school four times.

"I'm getting older and I've made some swing changes. It's basically been a simplificaton process," he explained.

Brooks' best previous finishes were a tie for eighth in last year's Hardee's Classic and a tie for 11th in the Kemper Open in early June.

Burroughs, with the help of a 192-yard eagle from the rough, shot his second straight 66 and Maltbie, the first-round leader, shot a 68.

The cut was made at 2-under 140 as the rain-softened greens on the TPC course yielded an unusually large number of birdies for the second straight day. There was a 15-minute rain delay early in the round, but the sun came out briefly in the afternoon.

Shepherd wins pole after tire flap

NASCAR

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Substitute driver Morgan Shepherd won the pole Friday for Sunday's Winston Cup Summer 500 after NASCAR officials banned use of Goodyear tires they said were larger than allowed.

Shepherd, whose Pontiac was the last of 45 cars to take the track in the rain-delayed first round of qualifying, took his second pole of the season in an event-record, one-lap speed of 157.153 mph on Pocono International Raceway's 2½-mile three-turn track.

"Everything worked good. I worked good in turn two and I was off a little in turn one but we were lucky enough to get the pole," said Shepherd, a substitute for Neil Bonnett, who underwent a gallbladder-appendix operation July 5 in Birmingham, Ala., but has practiced.

"It did help us to go out when it was cool. We ran faster than we did in practice. I can't answer the question whether Neil or I will start the car on Sunday."

Bill Elliott grabbed the second spot with a 156.563, followed by Alan Kulwicki, Ken Schrader and Geoff Bodine, all of whom bested the previous event record of 155.979 set last year by Tim Richmond.

Friday's qualifying set the first 15 positions for the race Sunday. Optional qualifying laps Saturday will determine the rest of the field.

Shepherd, of Conover, N.C., ha yet to win this season. His best finish this year is a second-place showing to Elliott in the June 5 Budweiser 500 at Dover, Del. He has two Winston Cup victories in his career, his last coming March 16, 1986, at Atlanta Raceway in the Motorcraft 500.

The outlawing of Goodyear tires stopped the continuing battle of tire companies before it started for Sunday's race.

"Goodyear is definitely out on Sunday," NASCAR spokesman Chip Williams said.

Williams opts for Wildcats

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Brian Williams, who averaged 13 points and 6.5 rebounds as a freshman at the University of Maryland last season, announced Friday he is transferring to the University of Arizona and will play basketball for the Wildcats starting with the 1989-90 season.

As a high school senior, Williams was recruited by just about every major school in the country. He said in the end, he chose Maryland over Temple. He also said he considered Arizona while in high school, but both Maryland and Temple were more attractive to him at that time.

Africa's food output grows too slowly

Although most African countries have the potential to feed themselves in the long run, Africa's food production has grown at only half its population growth rate over the last 15 years.

That's the opinion expressed in a newly published paper by Professor Carl K. Eicher of Michigan State University.

LITTLE THINGS

Whenever a man or a woman is asked to recount their life, they are most likely to mention their wedding, the birth of their children or their first promotion in their job. These events are certainly important but, in reality, life is made up of many small events.

The things that make life joyful and exciting are a collection of many little things. Praise for a job well-done, a freshly-baked cake from a friend or a phone call from home, these are the things that make life worthwhile.

You can make a difference in the quality of another's life. The things you do for others each day can be very important. It's the little things in life that count.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Master Design set to perform Sunday

Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St., will present Master Design in concert at 6:40 p.m. Sunday.

Master Design is an adult vocal ensemble from Crescent Park Baptist Church, Odessa. The ensemble sings contemporary as well as traditional Christian music. The group was formed by Barry Owens, minister of music at Crescent Park Baptist Church.

The Sunday evening presentation is part of Bellview's Summer Concert Series. This is the 4th year for the series. Concerts include soloists, quartets, instrumental ensembles, blue grass groups and musical presentations.

The Rev. G.A. Magee, pastor at Bellview, invites the public to attend.

Youth seminars planned

Midland-Odessa Youth Spiritual Enlightment Summer Session will be held Aug. 25-28.

"YSE began in the summer of 1985 as a vision and God has made it a reality — a body of non-denominational believers working with teens ages 12 through 17," says a release from YSE.

This year's event includes seminar classes, mini-olympics, a park rally, a mass choir, outreach activities, a picnic and a close-out explosion.

Pre-registration by Aug. 5 is encouraged. Youth workers, teens and parents seeking more information are asked to call Wanda McGrew, 682-0041, Linda Bailey, 684-4659, or Rose Christian, 1-337-3668.

Club expands to ClayDesta

The Business Women's Downtown Bible Study is coming to ClayDesta.

The Bible study will be expanded to include men and will begin with a complimentary luncheon Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. and noon. The luncheon will be held downstairs in Twin Towers-West, Suite LL 100.

Interested parties are asked to call 683-5610 or 682-4780. Those needing to return to work may leave the luncheon at any time.

In addition, a Bible study will be started in the same room at noon on Wednesday.

BWDBS, which began meeting about two years ago, contines to meet at 312 E. Illinois Ave. at noon Wednesdays. The public is invited to attend the meetings.

Church to have VBS

"Jesus Loves Me" is the theme of Vacation Bible School at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 Neely Ave., Monday through Friday.

Classes are being conducted for 3 year olds through 6th grade.

During the school, children will paint their own furnished T-shirt with symbols and pictures that represent the Bible school theme.

Bible stories, worship, music and art activities will center on the ideas that Jesus loves all people, he cares for people during sad times, he brings joy and his love is forever.

Registration is now in progress. To register a child during the evening hours, call 683-7741.

Workers to meet Tuesday

The monthly meeting of Parish Workers of Grace Lutheran Church will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the home of Rita Hendricksen, 4006 Westminister. Lyn Brown will serve as co-hostess.

Praying will be discussed by Millie Maxson, and Becky Holdern will give the closing prayer.

Membership is open to all female members of the congregation. All current members are reminded to complete their personal information sheets and activity lists. Contact Lyn Brown for more information.

Paisano runs until Friday

The 68th consecutive session of the Paisano Baptist Encampment is being held today through Friday at the historic encampment grounds located mid-way between Alpine and Marfa on Highway 90, in the mile high Davis Mountains near Paisano Peak.

Started in 1916 by a group of cowboys led by pioneer circuit riding missionary L.R. Millican, the encampment has met every year since 1921 on the 1000-acre, oak grove clustered campgrounds.

Film series continues

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., is presenting Dr. James Dobson's family relationships film series "Turn Your Heart Home" Sundays at 5:45 p.m.

The schedule of remaining showings is "Power in Parenting: The Adolescent Child," Sunday; "The Family Under Fire," July 31; "Overcoming A Painful Childhood," Aug. 7; and "The Heritage," Aug. 14.

The films are being shown in the Adult 4 classroom. A nursery is being provided. The public is invited to attend.

VBS to begin Monday

The Greater White's Chapel Church of God in Christ, 1106 Cherrylane, has announced that its annual Vacation Bible School will be held Monday through July 29.

The school is designed for children aged 3 to those attending high school. Theme for the week is "Great Achievements by Great Christian Heroes."

School hours are 7 to 8:30 p.m. For more information or to register call the Rev. Roy Colvin, the church's pastor, 682-8497.

Worship seminar planned

Petroplex Covenant Church, 601 W. Missouri Ave., will host a special "Musicians and Leadership Seminar on Worship" from 9 a.m. to noon July 30.

The seminar will be conducted by Chris Hyatt from Covenant Church of Mobile, Ala. Hyatt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hyatt of Midland, has been involved in the production of the Hosanna Music Tapes.

For more information call John Moreland, pastor, 682-2190, or Henry K. Hermann, 685-4426.

Midlander to speak

ANDREWS — The True Lite Baptist Church, 1103 N.E. Mustang Drive, will host its 5th Sunday Mission Program at 3 p.m. July 31.

Guest speaker for the service is Midlander Helen Morris. Guest churches joining in the service are Ideal Baptist Church, Mount Rose Baptist Church and Goodwill Baptist Church, all of Midland.

For more information call Olean Hearne, 1-524-5353. The public is invited to attend.

Volleyball meeting set

Church recreators meeting for volleyball leagues is set for noon Aug. 18 in the First Baptist Church Fellowship Hall.

Fee for the league is $20 per-team. The league begins Sept. 12.

Those interested in ensuring that their team gets in a league need to have a coach or representative at the Aug. 18 meeting.

Reservations for the noon Aug. 18 meeting need to be made by Aug. 17 by calling 682-7669.

Gospel meeting begins

Church of Christ, 1701 Hughes St., is conducting a Gospel Meeting Sunday through July 31.

J. Wayne McKamie of McGregor is the guest speaker. Hours are 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sundays and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The public is invited to attend.

Lutrick to be honored

A reception honoring the Rev. Dr. Charles Lutrick and his wife Ruth is set for 6 to 7 p.m. July 31 at Midland Center. A registration table will be set up in the foyer of the Center.

Lutrick, senior minister at First United Methodist Church, is retiring and the Lutricks are moving to Lubbock.

For more information please call the church, 682-3701.

Church helps ease transition time for Korean immigrants

WACO, Texas (AP) — The transition from Korean culture to American culture is not without its rough spots, and the Rev. Sung Chul Lee said he hopes his congregation helps smooth the path.

Lee, a recent Korean immigrant himself, has several goals for the Korean United Methodist congregation, which meets in Waco's Service Memorial United Methodist Church.

"My first goal is to grow my church congregation for Korean immigrants. My second goal is to educate the Korean second generation," Lee said.

"The third goal is to communicate with the United Methodist Church for world mission, and my fourth goal is to serve in this community — Waco."

Lee is the third pastor the small congregation has had since its birth a year and a half ago.

About 25 Korean immigrants formed the congregation under the leadership of the Rev. Byong Lee (no relation to Lee), who was visiting relatives in Waco at the time.

Some Waco-area Koreans "didn't go to church because they can't speak or they can't hear English very well," said George Lieu, a church deacon who was one of its original members.

"We thought, if we start our own church with our own language, we can share our customs here," he said.

Members united to form the Korean church from various Christian denominations — Baptist, United Methodist and Presbyterian. The congregation aligned itself with the United Methodists because the first pastor was a Methodist and and because the church is highly supportive of the congregation, Lieu and Lee said. The church has nearly doubled since its inception, from about 25 members to 40 adults and 15 children.

Children are another focus for the congregation.

Both Lieu and Lee spoke of the congregation's desire to keep second-generation Koreans familiar with the Korean language and their cultural heritage. They pointed out Korean lettering across the wall in the church's Fellowship Hall.

"Some of them moved to this country when they were very young, so they almost forgot their language," Lieu said. "Some of them already have experienced some identity crisis; they ask, 'Who am I?' We are trying to prepare for those kinds of challenges."

As well as Sunday morning church services and Sunday School, the congregation holds Bible study meetings Sunday nights, church services Wednesday nights, and fellowship meetings in members' homes on Friday nights.

Lieu translated Lee's description of what he believes are some unique challenges for Korean-Americans.

"As a pastor, he sees a lot of negative characteristics in Korean logic, a melancholy sadness," said Lieu. "Our Korean mind, even if we are in this country, we still have some kind of negativeness inside."

The sadness is partly due to past upheavals and conflicts in Korea, Lieu said in his role as translator, but also because of the effects of Confucianism, a religion founded by the Chinese philosopher Confucius.

"Enjoying life is restricted in that ethic," Lieu said. "We have the tendency of closing our minds to any new or more positive thing."

RELIGION

Is America "One Nation Under God?" Lifescope Says, "Some 'Pledge Allegiance' While Others, 'For Witches Stand!' "

For rebellion is as bad as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as bad as worshiping idols. My people mingle with the heathen, picking up their evil ways; thus they become as good for nothing, as a half-baked cake! Worshiping foreign gods has sapped their strength, but they don't know it.

Woe to my people for deserting Me; let them perish, for they have sinned against Me. I wanted to redeem them, but their hard hearts would not accept the truth. They lie there sleepless with anxiety, but won't ask my help. Instead, they worship heathen gods, asking them for crops and for prosperity. I have helped them, and made them strong, yet now they turn against Me. They look everywhere except to heaven, to the Most High God.

What profit was there in worshiping all your man-made idols? What a foolish lie that they could help! What fools you were to trust what you yourselves had made.

So many people love the ritual of their sacrifice, but to God it is meaningless! He will call for an accounting of their sins and punish them.

Come back to God! Live by the principles of love and justice . . . I alone am God, your Lord. You have no other God but Me, for there is no other Savior! I took care of My people in the wilderness, in that dry and thirsty land. But when they had eaten and were satisfied, then they became proud and forgot Me.

Bring your petition. Come to the Lord and say, "O Lord, take away our sins; be gracious to us and receive us, and we will offer you the sacrifice of praise."

Whoever is wise, let him understand these things. Whoever is intelligent, let him listen. For the paths of the Lord are true and right, and good men walk along them.

San Antonio archdiocese grows by 8,500

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — The 23-county Archdiocese of San Antonio grew by more than 8,531 members in 1987 for a total of 577,721 Catholics, officials reported.

The 1.4 percent increase locally compares to a national increase of 1.1 percent, or 600,000 Catholics, last year. Catholics in the United States total 53.5 million.

Most of the archdiocese's growth occurred in Bexar County where church officials attribute it to the increase in San Antonio's population.

"Most of the growth was from people moving to San Antonio, which is the biggest population center in the archdiocese," said Brother Edward Loch, director of Catholic Archives at San Antonio. "There wasn't that much growth in little towns."

The archdiocese's population figure represents 173,596 Catholics in rural areas and 404,125 in Bexar County.

A significant change in figures showed an increase of 8,902 students under Catholic instruction during 1987 as compared with 1986. There were 76,605 high school and elementary school students in Catholic schools in 1987.

"It's a significantly larger number because we were more careful in gathering the data," Loch said.

The data was compiled as of Dec. 31, 1987, from questionnaires, records and annual reports Loch received from parishes in the archdiocese. The national statistics represent new data released in June in the Official Catholic Directory.

The increase in the archdiocese's population offset an annual increase in the number of deaths among Catholics, up by 353 to 4,190, and an annual decrease in the number of baptisms, which fell by 2,394 to 13,567.

The drop in baptisms, however, is proportional to the drop in the national birthrate, Loch said.

The reported decrease in the number of marriages in the church to 2,646 in 1987 from 2,953 in 1986 reflects new church doctrine which requires couples to prepare for their marriage and ceremony for six months instead of one.

"Because of the strict marriage preparation involved, there are less marriages in the church," Loch said.

The number of nuns dropped by 145 to 1,094. The number of brothers fell by 11 to 125. The number of permanent deacons in the diocese increased by nine to 166.

The number of priests increased by four to 406 and the archdiocese gained one new parish, bringing the new total to 135. Once the new church is built in Stone Oak it will be called Holy Trinity.

Next year's figures will show an increase of one more parish, which will be located near FM 471.

"They have a priest assigned, but they haven't broken ground or released the name yet," Loch said. "The priest has been using a trailer home for an office."

There were 55 seminarians studying at Assumption Seminary, up by 11 from 1987. The seminary serves 16 dioceses.

Vietnam ranks fourth in countries with most saints

NEW YORK (AP) — Vietnam, trampled by colonizers, scourged by an ugly 20th century war and now ruled by a Communist government, is getting new attention as a prolific producer of saints.

Pope John Paul II was scheduled to canonize 117 Vietnamese martyrs recently, apparently making that small country rank fourth in the world for the number of Catholic saints.

The only countries with more saints are Italy, Spain and France.

"There is an obvious and awesome reason for Vietnam's standing in this glorious competition," writes the Rev. George W. Hunt, the magazine's editor-in-chief.

"In untroubled times, holy people often remain anonymous; persecution makes them known by making them martyrs."

The Catholic Church says it has, in 455 years in Vietnam, suffered persecution during 240 of those years, with the number of Christian martyrs in that time estimated at between 130,000 and 300,000.

Most of the 117 were slain under rule of mandarins, who saw the Christian gospel as undermining their authority, in the 50 years before 1883, when Vietnam became a French protectorate.

Ninety-seven were beheaded or hanged; 11 died by fire or were cut to pieces, the rest by other violence — one, a little girl trampled by a raider's elephant.

Of the 117, 96 were Vietnamese, 40 of them priests and 56 laity, 16 of them lay teachers, while the others were 11 Spanish priests and 10 French priests. They represented all Vietnam before its temporary modern division, now ended.

The Rev. Michael Viet-Anh of New Orleans, executive director of the U.S. national committee for the canonization, said the ceremonies will be the church's largest, simultaneous making of saints.

It is the first time in church history for 117 to be elevated at one time, he said.

They were beatified early in this century in successive batches under previous popes as first steps toward sainthood.

Viet-Anh said about 2,000 Vietnamese from the United States were expected to make the pilgrimage to Rome for the occasion, with probably 10,000 attending from Europe and elsewhere.

Of Vietnam's 63 million people, most are Buddhist, but there are about 5 million Catholics led by Archbishop Nguyen Kim Dien of Hue and other bishops, and about 200,000 Protestants.

So far, the archbishop, kept under virtual house arrest, has been refused permission to make the trip to Rome for the canonization, America reports, and it's unlikely many people in Vietnam will be allowed to go.

Most pilgrims were expected to be from among the more than a million Vietnamese who have fled that country since Saigon fell to the Communists in 1975, about 200,000 now in the United States.

Vietnam's Communist authorities have objected to the Vatican canonization plan, claiming it has anti-communist purposes and linking the 19th century victims to European imperialism.

However, the Vietnam government lately has called for an end to discrimination against Christians, freed dozens of priests from re-education camps, and allowed opening of Catholic and Protestant seminaries.

Many other clergy, however, remain confined in that country where life often has been hard, as it was for the 117.

Permian Nazarene Crusade to feature Haines in concert

Sponsored by the Permian Basin Church of the Nazarene, the Permian Nazarene Crusade will begin today at the Midland First Church, 1208 W. Wall Ave.

The 7:30 p.m. service will feature evangelist and singer Gary Haines in a concert.

"Mr. Haines, former renowned nightclub singer and entertainer in Detroit's top clubs and elsewhere in the Midwest, gave his heart and life to Jesus Christ in 1972," says a news release from First Church of the Nazarene. "After 14 years as a professional entertainer, he now uses his voice to sing and speak the Good News of God's salvation."

Following his conversion and call into full-time evangelism, Haines attended Nazarene Bible College, Colorado Springs, Colo., where he graduated in 1975.

"In great demand in both large and small churches throughout the country, his voice is golden, his message moving," the release says.

In addition, a Teen Choir from Houston, led by former Midlander Lisa Chandler, will perform at the 10:30 a.m. Sunday service.

Then at 6 p.m. Sunday, the service will be held at Odessa's First Church of the Nazarene, 2223 Lyndale. The crusade continues at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday at the Odessa First Church.

The public is invited to attend.

SUNDAY, JULY 24, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Get more involved with the arts. New interests will make you better company and bring greater contentment. Business begins a turnaround that will put additional cash in your pocket. You get an opportunity to showcase talents you have never used before. You may be able to land a better position soon. Relationship decisions become easier when you communicate more openly.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: South American liberator Simon Bolivar, the city of Detroit, aviatrix Amelia Earhart, former Sen. Charles Mathias, comedienne Ruth Buzzi, actress Lynda Carter, former Congresswoman Bella Abzug, textile designer Vera, mystery author John MacDonald.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Faulty communications could foul up a family celebration. Express the way you feel and you will improve your chances for a happy relationship. Children reach out. You touch their hearts with kindness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A comedy of errors will turn out OK. Fortitude must be your long suit today if you want to preserve family ties. A mystery will be solved to everyone's delight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A certain amount of confusion reigns early in the day. You will be able to pull out all stops and proceed to fun and fellowship. Focus on being more understanding within your relationships.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tackle a health problem head-on and you will be able to resolve it. Take care of a relationship that has been dragging on for too long. Buy yourself a small gift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find joy almost everywhere today. Travel may be difficult, but you will reach your destination in high spirits. Romance shifts into high gear. Be sure you are headed in the right direction now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Plan a special day for your loved ones, but guard against overspending. A talk with an older person brings about new understanding. A personal matter demands diplomacy. Avoid bringing up past mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An influential person can be reached at a social function. Take a chance! Family or neighborhood reunions hold special interest. Include spouse and offspring in plans for future business expansion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give more time and attention to your personal relationships. A confrontation can be easily avoided. Be decisive. A change of activity or scene proves very welcome to loved one. Plan special outing.

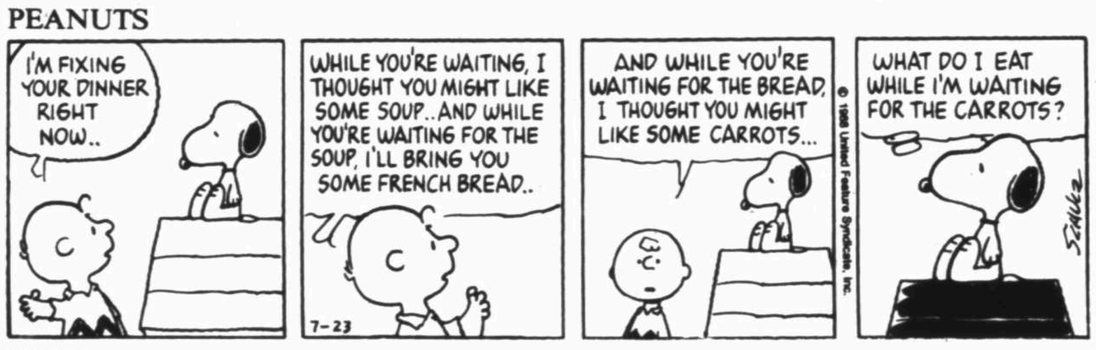

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends or relations will host a celebration. Keep the conversation light and breezy. Avoid talking shop. Children or a special friend play a prominent role in your vacation plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Domestic matters need careful handling. Money could be at the root of a dilemma. A change of scene is an exciting way to learn something new and worthwhile.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use your special talent for pouring oil on troubled waters. Choose an out-of-the-way restaurant to enjoy Sunday dinner. Or pack a picnic. Loved one shares a fun secret.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Talking with an older person can provide you with valuable new insights on business or church matters. Remain calm even if things are not moving fast enough for you. Spend time outdoors.

Rose Kennedy turns 98-years-old

Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Rose Kennedy turned 98 Friday, and the family planned a weekend celebration at their cluster of houses at Hyannis Port.

The guest list for dinner Friday night included her only living son, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., her daughter, Eunice, and son-in-law Sargent Shriver; daughters Patricia Lawford and Jean Smith; daughter-in-law Ethel Kennedy, and an assortment of grandchildren.

Dinner was to be preceded by a Mass.

Barring rain, the family might take Mrs. Kennedy out in her wheelchair for some fresh air, Mrs. Smith said.

Mrs. Kennedy has been bedridden since suffering a stroke in 1984.

Brown

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — A judge has ordered soul singer James Brown to hold a benefit concert for police and abused children as part of a sentence on drug and weapons charges.

The 55-year-old Godfather of Soul pleaded guilty Thursday to resisting arrest and carrying a pistol. He pleaded no contest to possession of the drug PCP.

Circuit Judge James E. Moore fined Brown $1,200 and placed him on probation until he performs a concert to benefit the local chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police and Helping Hands, a private organization for abused children.

No concert date has been set.

"This is a back-door way of getting me to do a concert," Brown said after the sentencing. "I would have done a concert for the children anyway...I would have done it gladly, but they didn't have to arrest me."

Hopper

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Dennis Hopper says he's trying for a new kind of old look in his latest film, "Backtrack," which has just finished three weeks of shooting here.

Hopper, 52, remarked during a break in filming last week that he was using direct, bright lighting in an effort to recapture the essence of "those 1940s films that were very bad when you saw them but have very romantic kinds of images."

Hopper directs and stars as a Chicago Mafioso who becomes involved with a girl, played by Jodie Foster, who is on the run from him after she witnesses a murder.

"It's about the old and the new meeting," says Hopper. "It deals with the art world, it deals with the Mafia, it deals with a love story."

He said things are going well for him now, but "I haven't taken the time to really think about it. I haven't had a weekend off in four years, so I don't know if that's being on top of the world or not. I just know I'm working, and every day's a rat race."

NEW YORK (AP) — Pulling down the pants of one star and snapping a nude shower shot of another are just a few ways the cast of "Cheers" tries to beat boredom.

After six successful seasons on NBC, such relaxation is necessary, director James Burrows said in an interview in Gentlemen's Quarterly magazine. "If we just rehearsed, they'd get bored," he said.

Britain's Prince Charles grimaces as he puts on a crash helmet before driving a vintage Bentley motor car around the Brands Hatch race circuit Thursday. The prince was attending the Car of the Century rally to raise money for his charity, the Prince's Trust.

On the day when GQ writer Karen Stabiner visited the set, "Cheers" star Ted Danson pulled down the pants of co-star Woody Harrelson in front of the cast, crew and a small band of tourists.

"If Harrelson wore Minnie Mouse boxer shorts, he might have found the prank amusing," Stabiner wrote. "But as Danson well knows, his 27-year-old comrade doesn't wear any kind of underwear at all."

Harrelson, who plays the ditzy barkeep Woody, eventually got his revenge, with a little help from co-stars Kirstie Alley (Rebecca Howe) and George Wendt (beer-swilling Norm.)

Wendt got Danson to keep the men's room door unlocked so he could shave. When Danson went in to take a shower, Harrelson whipped the door open, Wendt snatched the shower curtain back and Alley clicked a Polaroid.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — It's risky buying a star's home, especially when it's still prominently listed on maps to the mansions of the stars.

That's what one man says he learned when he became the owner of singer Diana Ross' old digs about 18 months ago.

The man, who asked that his name be withheld, told the Los Angeles Times that sightseers constantly rang his doorbell, day and night. Many were Scandinavian fans of Miss Ross, who is married to Norwegian shipping tycoon Arne Naess Jr.

"We did everything possible to get this off the maps," he says, "but it doesn't do any good."

Ten days ago, he put up two big signs proclaiming, "Diana Ross Does Not Live Here Anymore." Since then, he says, there has been not a single unwanted visitor.

U.S. drought helping farmers in Brazil, Argentina, experts say

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The drought in the United States is turning into a multi-billion-dollar boon for farmers in economically distressed Argentina and Brazil, agricultural experts say.

While U.S. crops wilt under the worst drought conditions since the Dust Bowl, recently harvested crops of soybeans and winter wheat in Argentina and Brazil are fetching the highest export prices in years, the experts say.

Many of Argentina's 450,000 farmers are planting as much as possible to cash in on record prices for soybeans, which last year replaced wheat as the country's No. 1 cash crop. Argentina is the third-largest producer of soybeans after the United States and Brazil.

Soybean plantings increased 19 percent in Argentina and 15.6 percent in Brazil this year compared to 1987, the experts say.

Olacyr de Moraes, Brazil's soybean king and one of the country's richest men, just bought 74,100 acres in northern Maranhao state to plant the crop.

After suffering from years of low world grain prices, Argentine farmers of wheat, corn, sorghum and soybeans see a bright short-term future. They are buying land and ordering new tractors and farm equipment.

"We're all conscious that our well-being is owed to the drought in the United States," said Rogelio Luraschi, manager of the Carlos Casado farm cooperative outside Rosario, 200 miles northwest of the capital.

Earlier this month, Agriculture Secretary Ernesto Figueras estimated revenues this year from grain exports — primarily soybeans, wheat and corn — at 3.8 billion dollars, up 2 billion dollars from 1987.

In Brazil, the government estimated revenues from soybean exports, its top cash crop, at $3.5 billion this year, up $1.2 billion from 198. It expects a bumper soybean crop of 18.2 million tons, up from 17 million tons in 1987.

The multi-billion-dollar boost couldn't have come at a better time.

Argentina is plagued by an average annual inflation rate of 322 percent, unproductive state industries and worker unrest over wages that fail to match the rising cost of living.

Brazil too is suffering from an economic crisis. It is the developing world's largest debtor, owing creditors $121 billion. Mexico is second, followed by Argentina, which owes $55 billion.

Although the Argentine and Brazilian soybean crops are close to being fully harvested, farmers in both countries say they are holding on to much of their stock to see what the market will do.

For instance, the price of a 132-pound bag of Brazilian soybeans has tripled since April, compared to an inflation rise of 68 percent in the same period. Inflation in Brazil is averaging 600 percent this year.

"The new international prices will signify a big boost in revenues for the country, " said Guillermo Alchouron, president of the Argentine Rural Society, an association of the nation's most important farmers and ranchers.

But the Argentine Association of Grain Producers fears the government may cut new-found profits by reimposing export duties abolished last year.

When Argentine President Raul Alfonsin denied such plans last month, Alchouron said: "Farmers were waiting for this message. It's necessary to prevent the deterioration of a sector like farming, which can bring the country out of the (economic) crisis."

One result of higher international grain prices is the rising cost of farmland in productive areas like that outside Rosario, which has doubled since January, Argentine farmers say. Brazilian soybean farmers report similar trends even in the normally dry northeast.

Feed prices also have risen for poultry and livestock producers, forcing some Argentine producers to slaughter their livestock or reduce poultry stocks.

Even the price of cookies in Argentina, the fourth-largest consumer of cookies per capita in the world, has risen because of the rise in the price of wheat, producers note.

Curiously, Argentina's government has been low key about its farmers' good fortune.

The daily business newspaper Ambito Financiero of Buenos Aires noted the government "doesn't want to show too much euphoria with all of this because it is negotiating for fresh funds with the foreign lending institutions."

Hector Huergo wrote in Somos Magazine last month that Argentine farmers would be wise to take their profits now.

"As Keynes said, in the long-term, we'll all be dead," Huergo said. "In the meantime, the question is how to take advantage of the drought."

Contra director will resign as commander

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Col. Enrique Bermudez will step down as military commander of Nicaraguan rebel forces to defuse the controversy caused by his appointment to the Contras' directorate, a fellow leader said Friday.

Alfredo Cesar, one of the seven Contra directors, also said he is asking President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica to try to arrange a new round of peace talks between the U.S.-backed rebels and Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Cesar is the chief Contra negotiator in the talks.

He told a news conference the new Nicaraguan Resistance directorate "will delegate areas of responsibility and, in this sense, Col. Enrique Bermudez will step down next week from the general command of the National Liberation Army.

"In this manner, Col. Bermudez, who now forms part of the directorate, will only be the military supervisor of our military forces, but without any command."

Bermudez was a colonel in the National Guard of the rightist, pro-American Somoza dynasty that ruled Nicaragua for 42 years until it was overthrown by the Sandinistas in July 1979. He long has been a source of friction within the Contra coalition known as the Nicaraguan Resistance.

The controversy heated up after Bermudez was elected to the directorate, the political leadership, at a meeting Monday in the Dominican Republic.

Seven commanders of the small Contra organization called the Southern Front, which fights in southern Nicaragua, resigned in protest.

Cesar publicly appealed to the seven to withdraw their resignations, saying they had been badly informed about the changes.

"The resignation of these commanders and the threats by other groups such as the Social Christians and members of the Central Front to withdraw is precipitous, but we must also recognize they feel frustrated because they do not receive (American) aid," Cesar said.

Cesar said the Southern Front received no U.S. humanitarian aid because the Costa Rican government did not approve its delivery through Costa Rica.

The Southern Front has a political base in Costa Rica. The Northern Front led by Bermudez is based in Honduras, which raised no objections to deliveries there.

The U.S. Congress has not approved any military aid to the Contras since February.

Cesar said the Contras asked Arias two months ago for permission to deliver humanitarian aid still in the pipeline through the Costa Rican Red Cross, but have received no reply.

10 people die, 51 injured in car bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded near a Syrian military base in Moslem west Beirut during morning rush hour Friday, killing 10 people, wounding 51 and destroying more than a dozen cars, police said.

Thirty-three pounds of explosives concealed under the rear seat of a yellow Mercedes-Benz and connected to a timing device went off in the working-class Cola neighborhood, they said.

The blast occurred between a pharmacy and a gas station about 20 yards from the Syrian military intelligence base and a Syrian checkpoint erected at the entrance, police said.

"We have not been informed of any Syrian casualties," said a police officer on the scene.

Reporters counted 19 parked cars destroyed, six of them reduced to smoldering piles of metal. Glass shards littered the bloodstained main Cola street as civil defense rescuers sieved through debris.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, which appeared aimed at discrediting Syria's law-enforcing mission in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

It was the 10th car-bombing in violence-ridden Lebanon this year, bringing the overall casualty toll in such attacks to 106 dead and 354 injured.

Most of the victims in Friday's blast were Lebanese civilians from the gas station and three adjacent high-rise apartment buildings that sustained severe damage, he said. The driver of the car was also killed.

"We saw something like lightning and then an ear-splitting blast rained glass shards on us. We were flat on our bellies," said Ahmad Muti, an employee at the Cola gas station.

Cyprus, Turkey leaders to meet in U.S. for talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The leaders of Greek and Turkish Cypriots in Cyprus will meet in New York next month for talks aimed at resolving problems in the divided nation, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said today.

U.N. officials said Georges Vassiliou, president of the Republic of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, president of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, will visit New York for talks Aug. 24.

"The leaders of the two sides in Cyprus have accepted my proposal for resumption of talks to negotiate a settlement of all aspects of the Cyprus problem," Perez de Cuellar said.

He did not elaborate on his proposals for peace in Cyprus, which has been divided since Turkish troops invaded in 1974 and captured the northern third of the island.

Turkish Cypriots, who comprise one-fifth of the island's 650,000 people, have formed their own breakaway state, headed by Denktash, in the Turkish- controlled territory.

School may take Chinese

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's most prestigious university is considering allowing Chinese students to enroll in what would be another sign of thawed relations between the two countries, officials said Friday.

Prof. Lee Hyun-ku, head of academic affairs at the state-run Seoul National University, told a National Assembly meeting that discussions were under way on admitting Chinese students. He did not give details.

The university, the largest and most prestigious in South Korea, has an enrollment of 20,000. About 100 foreign students are currently enrolled but none are from communist nations, Lee said.

South Korea and China do not maintain diplomatic ties, but trade and other non-political contact between the two nations has been expanding in recent years.

Bank guard robs bank

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A security guard hired to protect a bank from robbers held up the bank himself, police and bank officials said Friday.

Investigators said the guard waited for other guards to leave the Quezon City branch of the Philippine Commercial and Industrial Bank as it closed Thursday and made his move just before the remaining tellers closed the vault.

Armed with a 12-gauge shotgun, the guard ordered the tellers into the vault and scooped up nearly $25,000, said a bank security officer who asked not to be identified. The guard then fled.

Heart transplant success

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A team of surgeons performed the first heart transplant in Mexico at the Social Security Institute's La Raza Medical Center here, a statement from that hospital said.

The statement claimed the operation Thursday was a success.

It said the donor was a young woman who died of a brain tumor, but did not give her name. The recipient was identified as Fernando Tafoya, a 45-year-old worker who was given four months more to live with the old diseased heart.

The operation lasted four hours and the surgical team was headed by Dr. Ruben Arguero Sanchez.

Houston attorney appointed to PUC

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Houston attorney William B. Cassin will serve on the powerful Public Utility Commission, Gov. Bill Clements announced Thursday.

Cassin, 56, fills the unexpired term of former Chairman Dennis Thomas, who resigned from the three-member panel May 31. The term expires Sept. 1, 1989.

He becomes the second commissioner appointed by Clements in less than a year, joining fellow Republican Marta Greytok at the agency that regulates electric and telephone utilities.

Cassin or Greytok, also of the Houston area, likely will chair the commission. The third seat is held by Commissioner Jo Campbell, who was appointed by former Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Now in private practice, Cassin is former general counsel and a director of United Gas Pipe Line Co. and United Energy Resources Inc., both of Houston. He also was a director of the Iowa State Regulatory Conference.

"I look on this as a chance for public service and a real challenge," Cassin said. "I bring no particular agenda or any particular point of view to the job."

Before joining United Gas Pipe Line in 1970, Cassin worked 10 years representing Houston Lighting & Power Co. as a lawyer in the Houston firm of Baker & Botts. He was no longer with the firm when the PUC began regulating utilities in 1975.

Consumer Union's Carole Barger and Tom Smith of Public Citizen questioned the appointment as HL&P prepares to file a major rate case at the PUC to recover the costs of building the $5.8 billion South Texas Nuclear Project.

Cassin said he will not cater to special interests after joining the PUC in early August.

"I have been on both sides. I guess I am familiar with the Light Co., but I am also a consumer," he said. "I have been selling utilities natural gas and sometimes have fought them tooth and toenail."

Other consumer attorneys who regularly practice at the commission said they knew little about Cassin and his background.

In a statement released through her office, Campbell, an attorney, said Cassin has "excellent credentials."

"From what I have heard, Mr. Cassin sounds like a highly qualified individual," she said.

Greytok, who said she has met Cassin briefly, also lauded his credentials. She said she saw no problems with his former ties to HL&P.

Cassin's appointment comes at a time when relations between Campbell and Greytok have cooled significantly. The two commissioners in recent weeks have been unable to agree on important issues, and there has been no third commissioner to cast deciding votes.

Israelis grow hawkish about occupied lands

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

JERUSALEM (AP) — More than seven months of Palestinian riots and strikes have turned Israelis hawkish, but the hard line often masks ambivalence about the future of the occupied lands and the army's use of force.

Israeli defensiveness stems from a belief that the occupied territories, especially the Jordan River's West Bank, are uniquely bound to the state of Israel.

Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, the armed forces chief of staff, said the West Bank and Gaza Strip were not distant battlefields like Algeria was for the French or Vietnam for the Americans.

"There is no debate among the soldiers. They know that, by and large, this problem is inside our own house, and there is no one who can take charge of the situation and solve it but the army," Shomron told the Foreign Press Association in Jerusalem.

Some critics, however, fear Israelis are becoming callous about the violence in which more than 200 Palestinians have been killed, at least 1,500 wounded and 5,000 jailed since Dec. 8.

"Society has been brutalized," said Dedi Zucker, parliament member from the liberal Citizens Rights Movement. "We can see it in the army, in the police, even in the way our children talk. I think we all have become accustomed to a higher level of violence."

On the other hand, Avner Shaki, a hawk recently elected head of the National Religious Party, defends the Israeli army.

"Are we angels? Is there any nation that would have been, per capita, more noble or moral than we have been, taking into consideration all the terrorism that surrounds us?"

Zucker, who has emerged as an outspoken critic of the government's "iron fist" approach to suppressing riots, said initial Israeli public reaction was low-key because many remained unaffected.

"People in Tel Aviv just heard about the troubles on TV at night," he said in an interview. "The bulk of society succeeded in ignoring developments in the West Bank. The reason is they did not pay a price."

But they may be starting to pay a price and all parties agree the Palestinian uprising has become the No. 1 issue in the campaign for national elections Nov. 1:

— Four Israelis (as opposed to more than 200 Palestinians) had been killed by the end of June, and the an estimated 425 soldiers and Israeli civilians have been injured, most lightly by stones thrown by protesters.

— Minister of Economy Gad Yacoubi estimates Israel's losses from the uprising at mid-May totaled $500 million, most in lost tourist business and increased security costs.

An Orthodox Jewish settler helps carry the body of a 15-year-old Israeli girl accidentally shot by another settler during a confrontation with Palestinians April 7.

— The government increased the annual military reserve duty from 40 to 62 days annually, a decision felt in nearly every Jewish household.

While life 60 miles from the West Bank in Tel Aviv is largely untouched, many more civilians walk the streets of Jerusalem with automatic pistols clipped on their belts.

Moshe Weiss, the Interior Ministry official in charge of gun licensing, said 200,000 Israelis were authorized to carry firearms last year and the number grew by as much as 20 percent since the Palestinian riots, with many more denied permits.

"There is a drift to the right," said Hannoch Smith, a leading Israeli pollster.

He added in an interview that polls of 1,200 Israelis in December and March indicated the number who supported Israel's harsh measures jumped from 51 percent to 74 percent.

But polls also indicate some trends in public opinion favorable to the liberal Labor Party of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Smith said Israelis' support for Labor's idea of giving up land for peace was the highest in a decade with 48 percent in favor, 41 percent against and 11 percent undecided.

Polls by Smith and the rival Dahaf organization also found a majority of the public ready to talk with the Palestine Liberation Organization if it recognized Israel and renounced violence.

"The public is saying: put down the unrest by all means necessary and then think about negotiating," said Smith.

Palestinians increasingly challenge Israeli rule

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

BANI NAIM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The uprisings in the West Bank and Gaza Strip have spawned a new generation of Palestinian leaders and given their people confidence to challenge Israeli army rule.

The change is evident here in Bani Naim, a farming town 17 miles south of Jerusalem, where the streets are blackened from tires burned in protest of Israeli occupation.

Hassan Manasara, 27, a leader of the town's resistance, said a new community spirit has taken shape and that a senior Israeli officer encountered it when he came to Bani Naim to urge calm.

Manasara said the residents confounded the Israeli by refusing to answer simple questions about their place of work.

"When the officer asked how many people are farmers, everyone raised his hand," Manasara said. "And when he asked how many work as laborers in Israel, everyone raised his hand.

"The Israeli threatened to cut off the water, and everyone laughed."

Even so, Bani Naim has paid a heavy price. Residents say three townspeople have been killed, 35 wounded and 150 arrested since December. The town of 10,000 also spent 20 days under an around-the-clock curfew.

Residents agreed to austerity measures, such as banning large wedding and graduation parties, to conserve resources to support the families of those without work or in jail.

The town is now run by "popular committees." A security committee patrols at night to watch for Israeli patrols, a first-aid committee treats the injured, a finance committee handles welfare.

Sari Nusseibah, a leading Palestinian intellectual, said committees such as those in Bani Naim were the most hopeful sign of the uprising because they could be the foundation for a Palestinian state.

But he added the new leadership was untested and suggested that if the committees "faded away," it might be more difficult to rally Palestinians in the future.

He also said he was disappointed that Palestinians had not developed a political strategy during the uprising.

"I felt from the beginning that it is not enough to wage war, but you have to wage peace equally strongly," he said. "To do one without the other is to waste effort."

Palestinians with covered faces throw stones in the direction of Israeli soldiers and wave the outlawed Palestinian flag during a demonstration in Nablus, Occupied West Bank, last April. The Palestinian uprising has given Arabs more confidence in challenging Israeli army rule in the area.

Some Israeli leaders contend the grass-roots leaders in towns and villages only carry out the orders of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, but Bani Naim's local leaders dispute this.

"What's decided here is not from the outside. There are no orders from outside," said Manasara.

Much will depend on whether Palestinians continue to support strikes and civil disobedience, such as refusing to pay taxes or accepting Israeli identity cards.

Saif-Edin Natsheh, 34, owner of a stone-cutting factory in the West Bank town of Hebron, noted leaflets urged the development of Arab business to lessen dependence on Israel. But he complained the Palestinian self-reliance campaign was undermined by strikes and tax boycotts.

"This month we only worked five days because of too many strike calls," he said. "How am I going to pay the seven workers and feed my seven children with five days of work?"

Natsheh also said he was caught in the middle by the tax boycott, threatened with jail by the Israelis if he failed to pay and fearful his factory would be burned down by Palestinians if he did.

"I pay in secret," he added.

Before the violence erupted in December, a web of economic and personal relations linked the 1.5 million Palestinians to Israel.

Some 110,000 Arabs shuttled daily to jobs in Israel and brought home $500 million to $700 million a year. The West Bank and Gaza Strip also became Israel's second-largest market, accounting for $780 million, or 11 percent, of exports in 1987.

Nusseibah, a professor of philosophy at Bir Zeit University in the West Bank, said the biggest achievement of the uprising was re-creating, at least psychologically, the border that divided Israel from the West Bank and Gaza before the 2,200 square miles of land was seized in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

"A process of integration had been under way for the past 21 years," he said. "It was challenged in the uprising, and for the first time people began to practice what they preach."

Bonds of practical coexistence have been torn by the bloodshed and mass arrests, which touched most villages and neighborhoods.

During the unrest, more than 200 Palestinians were killed. According to left-wing Israeli lawmaker Dedi Zucker, Arab injuries totaled 5,1..2 by June and arrests had reached 17,000.

The hatred that fuels the unrest is also born of humiliation, which is intensely felt by those who have been arrested.

Abdel Aziz Randisi, a pediatrician jailed for six months without trial in the Ketziot prison camp in Israel's Negev Desert, complained to a reporter during a prison tour about being made to kneel down for roll calls and infractions of camp rules.

"I would rather die than do this kneeling," he said.

Bush: Dukakis' speech 'good'

MILWAUKEE (AP) — George Bush praised Michael Dukakis's acceptance speech as "very good" Friday, but said he was puzzled by the Democratic nominee's pointed insistence that a vice president shouldn't hesitate to tell the boss when things are awry.

"I don't know what that was all about, but I'm sure it wasn't complimentary," Bush deadpanned to reporters.

In his speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination in Atlanta Thursday night, Dukakis drew thunderous cheers when he declared: "We're going to have a vice president who won't sit silently by when somebody at the National Security Council comes up with the cockamamie idea that we should trade arms to the ayatollah for hostages.

"We're going to have a vice president named Lloyd Bentsen who will walk into the Oval Office and say, " 'Mr. President, this is outrageous and it's got to stop.' That's the kind of vice president we're going to have," Dukakis said.

Bush, the certain Republican nominee, suggested that Dukakis could benefit much from the advice of Bentsen, the senior senator from Texas.

"If he's suggesting that Bentsen can change his views on gun control, that's good. That would be an effective use for Lloyd Bentsen," Bush said.

The vice president sought to portray Dukakis as far more liberal on most issues than Bentsen.

Ask if he wanted to suggest that the Democratic party was running against itself, Bush said: "It'll be running against itself by the time we get through."

The vice president spoke with reporters as he campaigned at a lakefront Italian festival here.

Asked his impression of Dukakis' speech, Bush said "I thought he gave a very good speech. He did a very good job."

Asked why he arrived at that assessment, Bush, balancing a plate of scrambled eggs and sausage as he moved through the crowd, quipped "because he didn't say anything nasty about me."

Bush, as he has done in the past, defended his own access to President Reagan. Democrats have long accused him of being silent or contradictory about his role in the administration's controversial decisions, including the aborted arms sale to Iran.

"I didn't take it as personal criticism," said Bush, "because I have a relationship with the president where I can walk in, tell him anything I think. And then he knows I'm not going to go out and talk to the press."

Bush said he was willing to "take a shot" from Democrats on the arms-for-hostages deal, but said he would talk about the accomplishments of the administration at the same time — including the current record peacetime economic recovery.

The vice president declined anew to disclose what advise he gave to President Reagan on the arms deal.

Later, Bush told a news conference in the rain on the beach at Point Pleasant, N.J., that he supports a ban on all ocean dumping "the sooner the better."

"Frankly, it's a national tragedy," Bush said, standing alongside a display of medical wastes that had washed up on New Jersey beaches.

New Jersey Gov. Tom Kean, who stood alongside the vice president, called Bush "a candidate who really cares about the ocean." Kean criticized Dukakis for not also advocating a ban on ocean dumping.

A small group of protesters stood on the beach as Bush held his news conference, holding placards and chanting "Where was George?"

Bush, as he had done earlier in the day, praised Dukakis' acceptance speech, although he said it struck him as superficial. He said that Democrats had made an impressive show of unity, even though he claimed it might be short-lived.

But, Bush said, "our (convention) will be much more positive. I won't be saying what's wrong with the country."

"Jesse Jackson made him (Dukakis) look conservative. He's not, he's a liberal," Bush said.

Vice President George Bush tries on an Italian hat at Festa Italiana on Milwaukee's lakefront in his first public appearance since Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis accepted the Democratic nomination. Bush was interested in Festa Italiana because it is the largest Italian-American ethnic festival in the country.

Check out the vital statistics.

The new Eagle Premier has more passenger room than Cadillac Seville or Audi 5000.*

More standard horsepower than Ford Mustang LX or Pontiac Grand Am.

A smaller turning circle than Porche 928-S4 or Ford Escort GT.

More cargo volume than Rolls-Royce Silver Spirit or BMW 735i.

It comes with a fully independent suspension while Chevrolet Camaro Z28 IROC and Saab 9000 Turbo do not.

Plus, it's backed by a 7-year/70,000-mile powertrain Protection Plan. Which is much longer than anything offered by Ford, Jaguar, or Alfa Romeo.

Introducing the 1988 Eagle Premier. A North American-built car with European sophistication and handling.
