Baker says coalition unified against Saddam

■ Baker says the allies must lay the foundation for the use of force in case it's necessary.

Associated Press

Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Saturday claimed success in his mission to shore up the anti-Iraq coalition, but the Baghdad government accused the United States of dragging its allies toward a war they did not want.

After meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand, he expressed satisfaction with the state of the alliance that came together after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's troops seized Kuwait on Aug. 2.

"We believe we are totally united," the secretary of state told reporters. "We have built a consensus, we have increased the pressure on Saddam Hussein."

But, he added, "we must heighten the pressure further. Indeed we have to lay the foundation for the use of force should that become necessary. Clearly, one way to do that is to get ready militarily."

After the Paris meeting, it was still unclear whether the French would be willing to fight Iraq. France has sent 13,000 troops to the Persian Gulf region.

Food collection

The Permian Basin Food Bank and the Boy Scouts of America have joined forces once again to gather food for the needy.

Enclosed in today's Midland Reporter-Telegram is a donation bag which readers are asked to fill with non-perishable food items and leave on their doorstep next Saturday, Nov. 17.

Scouts will pick up the bags and deliver them to the food bank Saturday afternoon.

Bags also can be brought by the scout office at 1101 W. Texas Ave. in Midland.

For more information, contact Dolly Neff, food bank executive director, at 687-3663; or Gerald Petty at 563-2276.

Talkin' turkey

AUSTIN (AP) — A statewide animal-rights group is asking Texans to skip the turkey this Thanksgiving and gobble down tofu because the birds are "magnificent creatures."

Members of The Fund for Animals Inc. in Houston, say they hope to spare turkeys by having youths who belong to 4-H clubs and Future Farmers of America chapters across Texas surrender their Toms, which will then be taken to an animal sanctuary.

Curtain call

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan visited this Midwestern town where the term "Iron Curtain" was coined 44 years ago to preside over the symbolic dismantling of that curtain.

Reagan

The late British Prime Minister Winston Churchill first used the term Iron Curtain in a speech delivered in Fulton on March 5, 1946.

On Friday, Reagan dedicated a transplanted section of the Berlin Wall, which came to symbolize the Iron Curtain. It was torn down last year.

"It's beautiful," Reagan said of the wall memorial, stark gray on its former East front and covered with colorful pro-democracy graffiti on the West side.

Recycler will soon be operating

■ Butts Recycling Center will be accepting plastic, glass and aluminum containers as of Nov. 19.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Environmentalists are down in the dumps about the lack of recycling resources in Midland.

One by one, local recycling centers closed their doors. Midland's only recycling center quit accepting glass and plastic, and people couldn't pay anyone to take their newspapers. Even the Time Machine Recycling Center in Odessa had to begin refusing newspapers due to the glut on the market.

But hope is on the horizon for recycling devotees.

Midlanders will once again be able to turn in their plastic and glass containers to be recycled at Butts Recycling Center, 21 W. Industrial Loop.

"There will even be bins out front for people to drop off glass, colored glass, plastic and aluminum as of Nov. 19," said Rhonda Shelton, local environmentalist and the operating manager of the new recycling venture.

The only hitch is: all recycled items will have to be donated until the venture becomes profitable.

"The center will use the profits from aluminum sales to supplement the transportation costs of shipping out plastic and glass," Ms. Shelton said, noting that she has had experience with the problems of transporting glass and plastic.

Prior to collaborating with Keep Midland Beautiful, Butts Recycling Center, and the Recycling Committee of Keep Midland Beautiful, Ms. Shelton set out on a one-woman crusade to take household recyclables to Odessa herself. She collected items from 30 households, piled them into a pickup and sold them to the Time Machine. "I made seven dollars," she said. "It just about paid for my gas."

Newspapers not being accepted at local recycling centers

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Recycling newsprint has become a pressing issue for the newspaper industry as well as individuals who have nowhere to take their newspapers to be recycled.

Midlanders who want to keep their newspapers out of the waste stream have been disappointed to find no alternatives to throwing them into the trash.

For awhile, the Time Machine Recycling Center in Odessa accepted newspapers strictly as a donation. But as they began to stack up in limited storage space, Administrator Bill Dimler finally had to say "no more."

A glut on the newspaper market nationwide resulted in recycling mills being inundated with yesterday's news. With paper mills refusing to accept newspapers, there is no place for recycling centers to take them.

"The problem with recycling is not that people don't care, or that recyclers don't want to work with us in Midland, it's that there is little demand for recycled goods and they can't sell recyclable items," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful.

Ms. Hotchkiss said the high cost of building paper mills to Environmental Protection Agency specifications have made them cost prohibitive.

"A new paper mill is being built in Houston at the cost of $235 million," Ms. Hotchkiss said. "At least $85 million of the cost is going toward the de-inking process."

Police still interested in collective bargaining

■ Communication with the city and morale within MPD hasn't improved in past year.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

It was a year ago last week when police and firefighter frustrations came to a head in a pay referendum, which Midland voters overwhelmingly turned down.

Angry over a 2 percent pay hike which they called too meager to help make financial ends meet, the disgruntled safety officials asked voters to approve a 10 percent pay hike.

Three months later, talk of collective bargaining power and a civil service commission surfaced among Midland Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) members, who said they could not communicate with city management.

That communication, along with a morale problem, apparently has improved little since the referendum, as evidenced by a collective bargaining and civil service

Midland Cheer Fund launched today

The Midland Cheer Fund, a citywide project to provide food to Midland's less fortunate citizens during the holiday season, is being launched today by the Reporter-Telegram.

The newspaper initiated the Cheer Fund in 1984 and during the first year a total of $7,846 was donated to be used to purchase food for needy, deserving residents. In all, food deliveries were made to 108 Midland households the first year.

In announcing the kickoff of this year's campaign, Reporter-Telegram Publisher Charles Spence said the Midland community has supported the cheer fund every year and he anticipates good support again this year.

"This is a program to help the unfortunate in Midland during the Christmas season. And Midlanders have responded in a great way. The program has made a difference," Spence said.

The Reporter-Telegram is donating the first $500 to start this year's campaign.

Recipients of Midland Cheer Fund will be determined by Casa de Amigos and those wishing to put a name in for consideration should contact that agency.

Foodstuffs will be purchased at Albertson's, packaged by Reporter-Telegram employees and delivered on Dec. 15.

Those wishing to donate to the Cheer Fund may bring their donation to the Reporter-Telegram at 201 E. Illinois or mail their donation to Midland Cheer, c/o The Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas, 79702.

CNN barred from broadcasting Noreiga's conversations

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court on Saturday upheld an injunction barring Cable News Network from broadcasting tapes of Manuel Noriega's telephone conversations with his lawyers.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also called on the Atlanta-based network to produce the seven tapes in U.S. District Court in Miami so the court could decide whether the broadcasts would endanger Noriega's right to a fair trial on drug-trafficking charges.

The ruling came after CNN on Friday defied Judge William Hoeveler in Miami, broadcasting excerpts from the tapes minutes after the judge issued an order instructing the network not to do so.

CNN said it would appeal Saturday's ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We will be pursuing an immediate appeal," CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said in a telephone interview. Haworth said he didn't know yet if CNN would continue televising excerpts of the tapes.

The appeals panel denied CNN's appeal of Hoeveler's 10-day injunction against broadcasting excerpts of Noreiga's phone calls from federal jail.

It called on the network to produce the tapes in Hoeveler's courtroom so that the trial judge can determine if Noriega's Sixth Amendment rights to a fair trial have been violated by the U.S. government and CNN.

"The First Amendment interests of the press and public will best be served by immediate production of the tapes held by CNN so that the district court can conduct the difficult balancing of constitutional rights," the appeals court said.

"CNN has shackled the district court by refusing that court's reasonable request to review the audiotapes it has in its possession," the court said.

The Justice Department on Saturday morning filed a brief with the appeals court, claiming the tapes could make it difficult to select an unbiased jury for Noriega's trial.

Noriega's right to a fair trial and effective counsel also could be compromised if details of the defense strategy are revealed to prosecutors, the brief said.

"The government cannot at this point be more specific with respect to the possible harm that could flow from publication of the tapes because the government, like the district court, does not know the contents of the materials CNN has in its possession," the brief states.

On Friday, Hoeveler said he would hold CNN in contempt of court if it disregarded his order. But in an unusual interview with CNN outside the courtroom Friday night, the judge said he could not rule on contempt without a prosecutors' motion.

On Saturday afternoon, Noriega attorney Frank Rubino asked Hoeveler to find CNN in direct civil contempt and fine the network $300,000 for each time it had televised the tapes and each time it shows them in future.

Before Hoeveler could respond, CNN attorney Terry Beinstock asked the judge to disqualify himself, accusing the judge of revealing a personal bias against the network in the CNN interview on Friday night.

In the interview, a CNN reporter asked Hoeveler if he planned to find CNN in contempt.

"That remains to be seen," the judge said. Asked why, the judge replied, "Well, somebody's going to have to move for that and they (CNN) obviously are in contempt at the moment. The legal proceedings will take place when somebody moves for sanctions."

Some veterans find health care benefits evaporating

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — When Andy Cox retired from the U.S. Army in 1977 after 22 years in the military, he took for granted the promise of lifelong health care.

That was until he fell off a ladder in 1987, suffering a traumatic head injury which left him a quadriplegic — unable to speak, even swallow.

Costs for his around-the-clock treatment were high but his military-sponsored health insurance was good — while it lasted. But provision in the law stripped him of that coverage and put him under the Medicare program — with fewer benefits.

"There's was one thing they forgot to tell him when he was fighting for his country for 22 years," said Cox's wife, Terry. "You only get to keep your health insurance if you stay healthy."

Cox isn't alone. Many military retirees don't find out until it's too late about provisions that end coverage under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services — CHAMPUS — if they are disabled and require continuous medical care for longer than two years, or when they reach the age of 65.

Under the 1972 law, when CHAMPUS ends, the government-subsidized health care plan Medicare takes over. But veterans say the swap cheats them of benefits they earned, leaving them with coverage that is not nearly so extensive in severe cases like Cox's.

For Cox, 53, who has remained almost motionless in bed since his injury, Medicare has been of little help. It offers limited provisions for home health care, and none for him since his case was classified as "maintenance."

The couple has been left financially devastated.

"There's a lot of people out there who don't have the coverage they think they have," said Patrick DeLeon, administrative assistant to Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii. "Trouble is, you don't hear about them until they're hit with a situation like this."

Mrs. Cox also has fired off letters to President Bush, congressmen, senators and military officials asking that the law be changed to allow her husband back in the CHAMPUS program, which covers people in the military, military retirees and dependents when they seek care in civilian hospitals because of lack of space in or distance from a military facility.

She's gotten back a stack of letters, but no action.

"I truly sympathize with your situation and concerns," responded Capt. Paul T. McDavid, director of the Department of Defense's CHAMPUS office in Aurora, Colo. "However, I am limited in authority to effect a change."

Inouye introduced a bill last year that would have changed the law to extend CHAMPUS coverage to people like Cox and to retired military personnel under Medicare who become ill while out of the country. Medicare does not carry coverage overseas, CHAMPUS does.

The bill died without a vote, largely because the Department of Defense had not yet provided figures on exactly how many veterans are affected and the possible cost, DeLeon said.

"We're going to wait on those figures before we introduce the bill again in the next session," DeLeon said. "Senators can't decide on anything until they know how much it might cost."

When Cox was diagnosed after his fall with a subdural hematoma — bleeding within the skull around the brain — some doctors said he would be a vegetable for the rest of his life.

After a year in hospitals and rehabilitation centers, he was sent home — still semicomatose, breathing with the aid of oxygen and taking his food through feeding tubes hooked into his stomach.

With his CHAMPUS coverage, Cox received 24-hour skilled nursing care, physical and speech therapy and prescription drugs. Mrs. Cox estimates CHAMPUS was providing $17,000 in home health care every month.

At his St. Petersburg home he slowly began to improve. No longer was he considered semicomatose. He was weaned from oxygen and his darting eyes and guttural sounds hinted that he was responding to those around him.

But last April 1, Cox's eligibility for CHAMPUS ended. Word came in a Department of Defense letter asking the veteran who retired in 1977 after serving in Korea and Germany to return his eligibility card listing coverage as "indefinite."

"I couldn't believe it. I thought it had to be some kind of mistake," said Mrs. Cox. "Part of the reason he decided to make a career out of the military was the benefits, knowing he'd always be taken care of."

"They did it to the wrong family this time," she said defiantly.

He has a sergeant's pension at about $700 monthly for service in the Army, Navy and the reserves, which makes him ineligible for health programs for the needy.

GAO report blasts INS for spending

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Immigration and Naturalization Service is an administrative disaster, run by managers who do not know how much the agency is spending, where the money is going, or how much is being collected in various fees, a General Accounting Office report says.

The GAO's comprehensive management review of the INS is in draft form, circulating through the agency's parent bureaucracy, the Justice Department. Official release is not scheduled until January.

Officials who are familiar with it, however, say it paints a grim picture of an agency virtually out of control, with regional offices that openly defy commands from INS headquarters in Washington, and separate enforcement branches unaware that they are attempting to root out the same groups of illegal aliens.

"It's awful," said one government official, who detailed the report but requested anonymity. "This is management 101. The worst thing is the INS really has no control over money."

The General Accounting Office generally is referred to as the watchdog of Congress. Though most of its investigations of government agencies are performed for members of Congress, the INS review is for Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to use as an aid in overhauling the agency.

Last week, the Justice Department sought to dampen the report's explosive qualities by naming a three-man panel to help INS Commissioner Gene McNary overhaul the 17,000-employee agency.

"There is some pretty harsh stuff in there," said a senior Justice Department official. "It's clear there's a GAO problem coming, so I think we basically wanted to say 'let's get going.'"

Justice officials are anxious to distance McNary from the report's impact. While they agreed with GAO's harsh assessment of management failures at INS, they stress problems there have built up over the past decade.

McNary, who has been in office a year, was brought in by the White House chiefly for his management experience as chief executive in St. Louis County in Missouri.

INS spokesman Verne Jervis said McNary already has ordered several of the reforms recommended in the report.

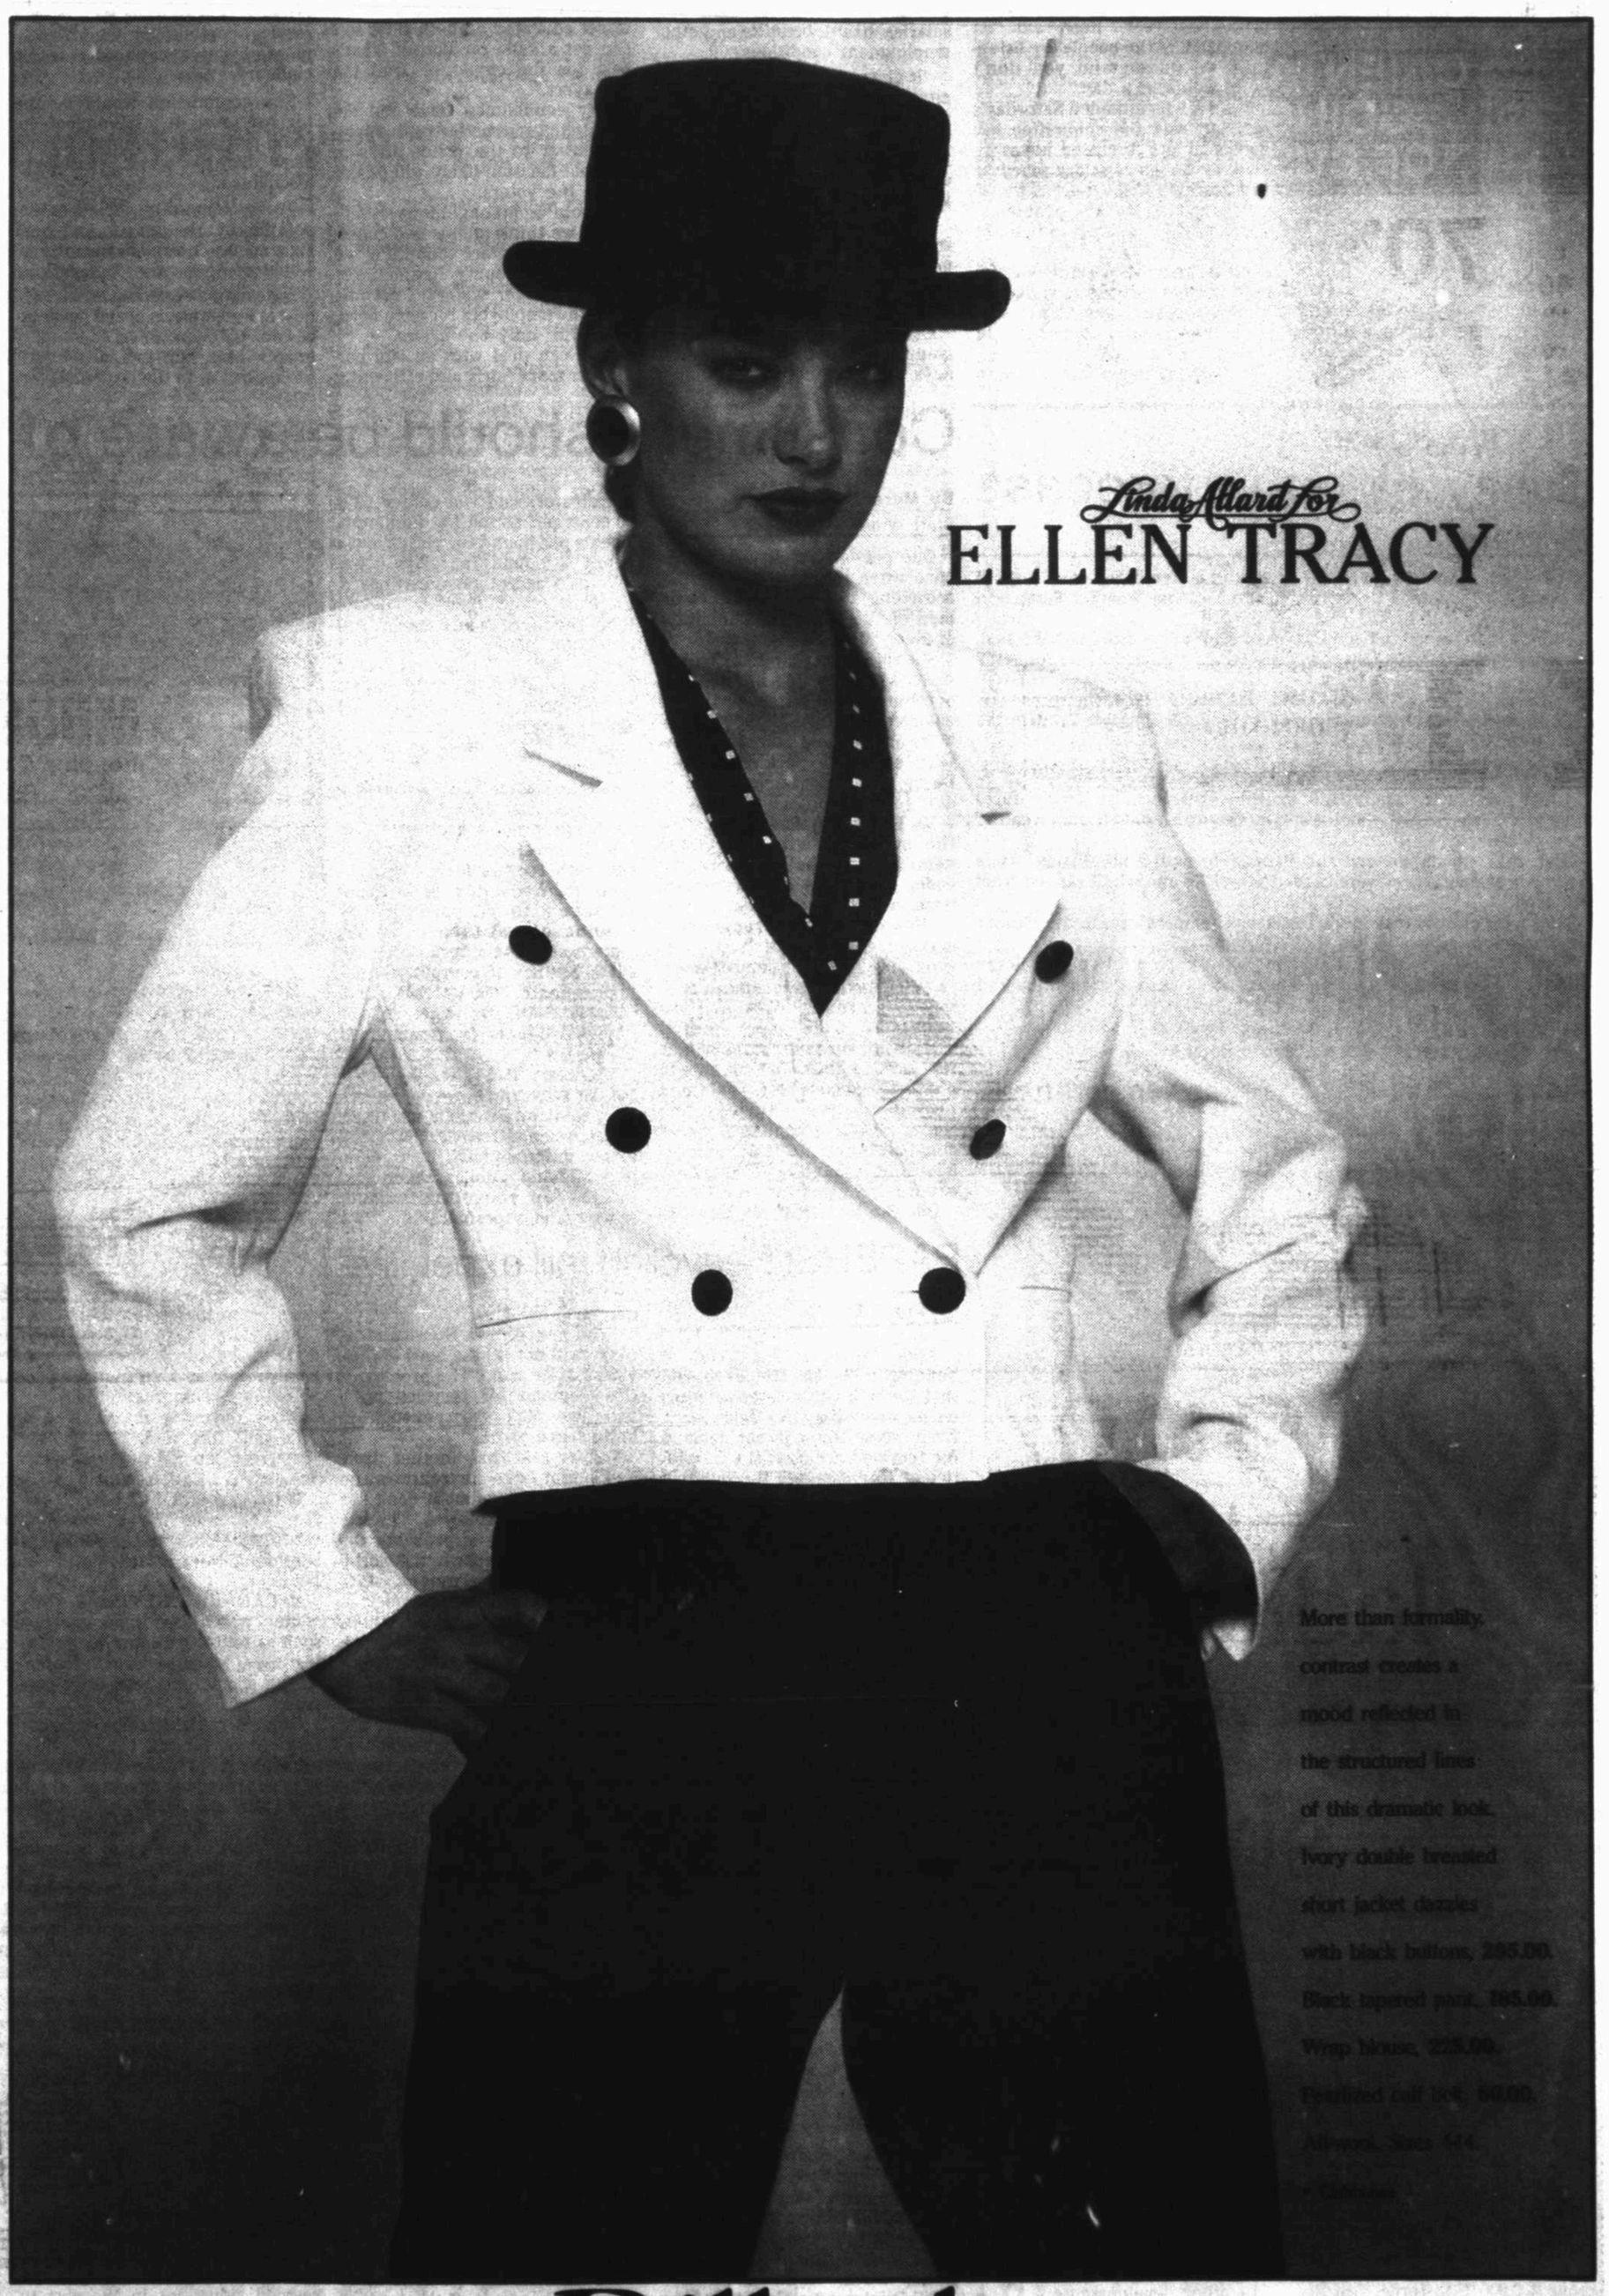

"A lot things in there are things McNary was aware of, and it's uncovered some things he'll devote more attention to," Jervis said. "It's something McNary does not feel reflects on his stewardship of the agency. It can only help him."

Others were not so sure McNary has come to grips with the magnitude of the INS problems.

McNary has named a number of former St. Louis associates to high-level positions who — like McNary — lack experience in immigration.

"He walked into a situation that was very bad," said the official who detailed the report's contents.

FOP: Local police still interested in collective bargaining commission seminar held here Saturday.

About two dozen FOP members from police departments in Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona attended the all-day seminar held at the Midland Ramada Inn.

John Dineer, president of the Chicago FOP, was flown in by the national organization upon the Midland chapter's request. Dineer detailed the benefits of collective bargaining and a civil service commission.

Sgt. Mike Reed, Midland FOP chapter vice president, said a vast majority of members here are interested in collective bargaining but have reservations about a civil service commission.

If the FOP chooses to pursue either, the proposal likely would have to go before voters. To put a referendum on the ballot, officers would need a petition signed by 5 percent of the number of voters in the last general election.

Although city management has taken steps toward improving communication between police officers and City Hall, department morale still is poor, Reed said.

He said inadequate salaries, high insurance costs and weak communication have been the vanguard issues behind the morale problem.

"Nobody wants to get rich," Reed said. "We want enough pay to get by and live on. We want to work out a fair system for everybody."

FOP President Leonard Hendon said the city barely recognizes the FOP's existence, much less works to unclog communication lines to the growing group, which represents more than half the department.

"As the FOP, we've approached the city councilmen on many occasions and asked them to sit down and talk," Hendon said. "We've always been told no and that they'll deal with the police department."

Reed said the recently formed Midland Police Advisory Committee has made strides toward salving wounds opened by last year's pay issue.

The 17 committee members include police officers of different ranks and divisions, Chief Richard Czech and councilmen John Castro and Bill Williams. The FOP is not represented.

"I think in the last month we've made more progress than we have in the past year," Reed said. "At least some of the people are listening. We understand you don't build Rome in a day."

Castro, who attended Saturday's seminar, said the committee has met once and discussed issues including the police salary schedule and morale.

"There's a morale problem," Castro said. "There's no doubt about it."

Although he is currently neutral on collective bargaining and a civil service commission, Castro said committee members hope to avoid a referendum.

"I'm trying to get the council to open up more with the workers," Castro said. "I think the City Council can circumvent a lot of the problems."

City administrators and councilmen were invited to Saturday's seminar, and Castro and Czech attended. No administrators or other councilmen were present.

Hendon said collective bargaining may be the only way to get City Hall to listen to police officer needs, although all city employees have been promised a 3 percent pay hike next April.

"We're not asking for recognition," Hendon said. "Just talk to us. All we want to do is build some lines of communication with the officers and the City Hall."

Having collective bargaining power technically does not make a group a union, although negotiations would be similar to those between unions and employers.

City officials would have to negotiate with police officials over salaries, health benefits and other employment conditions.

"It gives you a contract with the city so the officers know where they stand and the city knows where it stands," Hendon said. "The officers would like to sit down with the City Council and work things out."

Dineer told FOP members that they may be in for a tough fight to get collective bargaining. It took an Illinois police department 23 years to get it, he said.

Other points of collective bargaining negotiations include holidays, fringe benefits, and higher pay for those who work night shifts, Dineer said. Insurance benefits, he said, typically are the main course at the bargaining table.

Upcoming issues include insurance coverage of substance abuse cases and AIDS patients, he said.

Castro, a Southwestern Bell employee who works with union members daily, said that although Midlanders overall are frightened of collective bargaining here, the idea "does not scare me."

A bargaining impasse could mean the city would stick with its final offer. The Texas Fire and Police Employee Relations Act prohibits police officers from strikes, lockouts and work stoppages and slowdowns.

To get the flip side of the collective bargaining issue, Castro said he attended a Texas Municipal League seminar two weeks ago.

"It was totally against collective bargaining," he said. "I'm trying to get educated on both sides so I can get a valid opinion of what's best for the employees and the taxpayers."

City councilmen have the authority to grant collective bargaining power to the police officers, but that decision likely will be left up to the voters.

"From a management standpoint, we think unions and collective bargaining are something we don't want," Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said. "It's not fair to all the employees for us to negotiate with only one group.

"We can deal with all city employees more fairly and efficiently without some third party involved."

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said he is vehemently opposed to collective bargaining.

"To me there's no doubt the council would absolutely not approve it," Faircloth said. "The people I've talked to in the community said it would be overwhelmingly opposed by the voters."

He said the city is making progress without organized pressure.

"We're working well with the police department," he said. "We're trying to get them better salaries. We're doing everything we can within the budget constraints."

Czech, meanwhile, said he will remain neutral on that issue and the idea of a civil service commission until he has the facts from both sides.

Hendon said that while collective bargaining power could be an effective negotiation tool, a civil service commission could be a more objective way to decide disciplinary cases.

The commission would be the highest level in a municipal appeals process for employees who feel they were unfairly disciplined.

Three community members, appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council members, would comprise the commission.

Instead of a commission, the city now has an appeals board made up of two city councilmen and a mayor-appointed Midland citizen. After appealing to the city manager, a grievance can go to the board.

Reed said FOP officials here are wary of a civil service commission because its members, like city councilmen, serve formal terms.

"Once you get a guy in there, it's hard to get him out," Reed said. "A lot of the FOP members are not wanting a civil service commission."

Hendon said the civil service and collective bargaining issues soon will be taken before the full FOP chapter, whose membership has grown from about 80 to 130 since the Nov. 7, 1989, pay referendum. The Midland Police Department has an approximately 150-member force.

Hendon would not speculate if FOP members would approve going to the voters or when a referendum would be held.

"We won't know anything until we talk to the members," Hendon said. "Then we'll look at when."

He said the FOP, though, will continue to push for a payroll deduction for membership dues, a longtime sore-spot issue with the organization.

"A state law provides for it," Hendon said. "There's no cost to the city."

Castro, who approves of the idea, said city officials have been reluctant to provide the service because they do not want to further recognize the FOP in any way.

"What scares the city and the staff is that it will strengthen the FOP and make it easier to sign up," Castro said.

WEATHER SUMMARY
Sunny skies in forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the low 70s and 5 to 15 mph south winds, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be mostly clear with a low near 40, NWS said. Saturday's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-70s, NWS said.

The record high for Saturday's date was 85 set in 1964. The record low of 16 for today's date was set in 1950. Saturday's high was 71, with the low being 36.

STATE

A high pressure system brought sunshine and moderate temperatures to most of Texas Saturday and promised more pleasant autumn weather through Monday.

High thin clouds covered the Panhandle and South Plains, while afternoon temperatures were in the 60s and 70s and winds ranged from 5-15 mph.

Skies were clear across South Texas with temperatures in the 60s and 70s and winds generally less than 10 mph.

North Texas skies also were cloudless with temperatures mostly in the 70s except a few 60-degree readings along the eastern portion of the Red River Valley.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

Consumers should be aware of recycling

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

One person can make a difference when it comes to recycling, according to Faye Beery, chairman of the Recycling Committee of Keep Midland Beautiful.

She said "precycling," or buying items with recycling in mind, has become the new watchword of the environmentally aware.

"People should not buy items with excessive packaging," Ms. Beery said. "Consumers have to quit focusing on convenience."

Ms. Beery said that in light of all the problems with recyclable items glutting the market nationwide, consumers should concentrate on waste reduction.

"People should precycle by making choices which support good recycling habits and also buy recycled products to send a message to manufacturers that we want more of the same," she said.

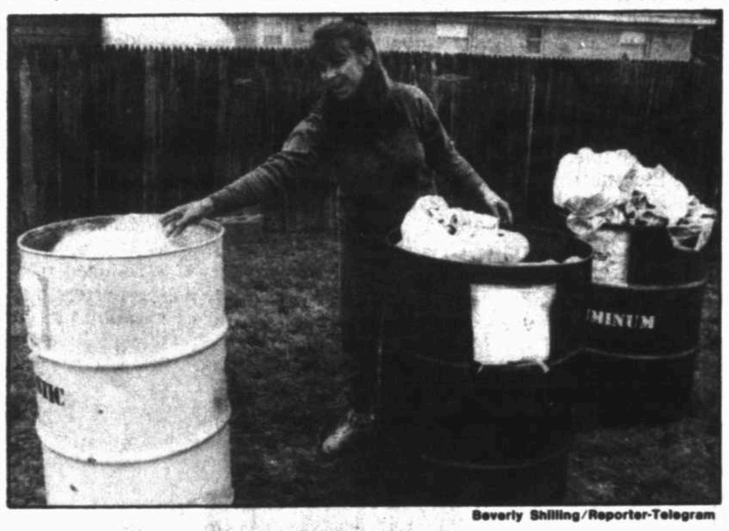

Midland will have recycling bins for plastic, glass and aluminum products available Nov. 19 at Butts Recycling Center. Although the center will be accepting items as donations only, the Time Machine Recycling Center in Odessa does pay market value for recyclables.

Bill Dimler, Time Machine administrator, said the center pays 30 cents per pound for aluminum, 2 cents per pound for plastic and a penny a pound for glass items. "We also accept rags, cardboard, tin cans (which usually contain food products) white paper and notebook paper as donations," Dimler said. "We have handled several hundred thousand pounds of cash products, and though not always profitable, the Time Machine is in the business for the duration."

Sharla Hotchkiss of Keep Midland Beautiful agreed that while recycling is not a profitable venture, it is preferable to filling landfills with recyclables.

"Butts Recycling in Midland managed to recycle 110,000 pounds of cardboard, 60,000 pounds of white ledger paper and 25,000 pounds of computer paper in one month," Ms. Hotchkiss said. "Charlie Butts, the owner, collects paper products from about 61 businesses."

Ms. Beery said other than individuals recycling household items, Keep Midland Beautiful and its recycling committee were working to get environmental curriculum into Midland public schools and setting up recycling bins at schools and supermarkets.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Rhonda Shelton, an avid recycler, fills a collection bin in her backyard with recyclable items. Ms. Shelton is the operating manager of a new recycling venture in Midland which will debut Nov. 19 at Butts Recycling Center, 21 W. Industrial Loop.

"Until then, people should consider donating clothing to churches or other charity organizations and reusing as many items as possible," she said. "Carver Center also accepts many household items."

Butts, who operates between San Angelo and Midland, was not available for comment.

PAPERS: Recycling mill expensive

(From 1A)

Aside from the high cost of building mills, Ms. Hotchkiss said that the mill will not see a return on its investment for four years. Even worse, the current demand for recycled products is too insufficient to encourage the building of other mills.

Ms. Hotchkiss said that many newspaper publishers would also have to buy new equipment to use the thicker 100 percent recycled paper.

John Maddox, production manager of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, said that 15 percent of the newspapers printed on Reporter-Telegram stock are made from a pulp of 50 percent recycled paper and 50 percent new paper. He noted that there was not a lot of recycled paper available from the mills. "As each year goes by, we will probably increase our usage," Maddox said.

Dimler of the Time Machine also said that the new mill in Houston will do little to alleviate the glut of newspapers collected by individuals. "Several big companies will probably fill the mill with their papers and exceed capacity fairly quickly," he said.

"The new mill in Houston most likely will not fill the need of individuals," he said. "The problem is that demand for recycled products just isn't great enough to build more plants."

Dimler said that another problem is that large corporations and the federal government don't use recycled paper products. "The federal government is probably the biggest user of paper in the world. The federal government, state governments and even municipalities all have certain specifications as to what types of papers they can use," Dimler said. "Those specifications have got to change."

Recycling newspapers is a nationwide problem. Until there are resources available, recycling center administrators advise consumers to buy recycled products to increase demand for them.

Rhonda Shelton, operating manager of a new recycling venture at Butts Recycling Center, said, "The greatest contribution an individual can make to the environment is to buy recycled products. It's not just a problem of disposing of newspapers that we need to be concerned about. We should also be concerned with saving trees."

Recycling centers listed

Midlanders who have set their sights on recycling have several options when delivering their recyclables.

Persons who want to contribute items for school projects can donate certain items to Carver Cultural Center. Butts Recycling will accept glass, plastic and aluminum as donations beginning Nov. 19. Donations will show "a commitment to recycling in Midland" according to Rhonda Shelton, operating manager of bins which will front Butts Recycling.

Persons who want cash for recyclables may take them to Odessa's Time Machine Recycling Center.

A list of locations and what they accept follows:

■ BUTTS RECYCLING, 21 W. Industrial Loop, 687-4225 — Accepts rags, aluminum, carpet backing, ledger paper, computer paper and cardboard. Bins will be set out front for aluminum, plastic and glass beginning Nov. 19. Items will be accepted as donations only. Call for hours.

■ CARVER CULTURAL CENTER, 1300 E. Wall, 689-1420 — The center, which uses items in school projects, accepts plastic containers such as butter tubs and ice cream containers, yogurt containers, frosting cans, hosiery "eggs," frozen dinner and microwave containers, thread spools, and rolls from paper towels, toilet paper and wrapping paper.

Other acceptable items include jewelry, beads, sequins, ribbon, lace, fabric trim, fabrics, paper or foam egg cartons, 35mm film canisters, souvenirs from other countries, paper products — plates, bowls, wrapping paper (whole or scraps), aluminum pie plates or cans, and feathers.

■ TIME MACHINE RECYCLING CENTER, 816 W. 42nd St., Odessa, 368-5730. Open from 8-11 a.m. Monday, 3-6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday. Pays 30 cents per pound for aluminum, 2 cents per pound for plastic and 1 cent per pound for glass. Recyclers may accept cash or have the money donated to a charitable organization. Items are weighed and receipts printed out by computer.

Items accepted as donations include tin cans, white paper, cardboard, notebook paper, computer paper, junk mail (no glossy stock or envelopes with windows; glue and glossy ink interferes with paper mill machines).

GULF: Baker forges alliance

(From 1A)

French participation in any military action against Saddam. However, he called their talks "very positive and successful."

Mitterrand's spokesman, Hubert Vedrine, said the French president told Baker that France's position "consists of the strict application" of U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Those resolutions have included the economic sanctions against Iraq, a call for the unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the demand that all foreign hostages be freed.

During Baker's trip, U.S. officials said the American contingent in the gulf would be increased by up to 200,000 troops. Already, about 230,000 U.S. forces are deployed in the region, facing 430,000 Iraqi troops in southern Iraq and Kuwait.

Iraq's foreign minister said the plans to dramatically strengthen the U.S. deployment proved that Washington had planned an offensive from the beginning. The Iraqi official, Tariq Aziz, said President Bush had misled the governments of Saudi Arabia and Egypt and other nations about the true mission of the multinational force.

The increased deployment "makes those who sent troops to the region partners in the American designs for aggression against Iraq," Aziz said in a statement carried by the official Iraqi News Agency.

A senior U.S. official said Baker had not encountered opposition to a U.N. resolution to authorize force to liberate Kuwait. During the trip, he consulted with the governments of the Soviet Union, China, Britain, France, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Turkey and Bahrain, plus the Kuwaiti government-in-exile.

In other developments:

■ Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, a peace activist, arrived in Iraq, saying he wanted to help open channels of communications with Iraqi officials. Clark said he hoped for a meeting with Saddam, but none has been announced.

RECYCLE: Center will soon accept containers

(From 1A)

Faye Beery, chairman of the Recycling Committee of Keep Midland Beautiful, said, "Rhonda is really committed to keeping recyclables out of the landfill. She made several runs to Odessa in a pickup truck."

Bill Dimler, administrator of the Time Machine, said Odessans are fortunate to have Orion Pacific, which recycles plastic, nearby as well as Permian Distributors, which ships aluminum to Alcoa plants.

While Midland has no plastic or aluminum recycling resources, it does have an adequate landfill. But Ms. Beery said that the Environmental Protection Agency will be imposing even stricter regulations on landfills.

"So, people need to become more conscientious about recycling," she said.

Ms. Shelton agreed. "The more items we keep out of the landfill, the longer we will have it without having to develop another one," she said.

While Ms. Shelton admits that collecting products and directing them to centers where they can be recycled is not a profitable venture, she said, "it does keep them out of the waste stream."

"I have three terrific reasons for preserving the environment," Ms. Shelton said, "Daniel, Jason and Thomas — my children."

Although environmental concepts have been taught in Midland schools, Ms. Shelton said it has seemed ridiculous in the past to encourage children to recycle with no outlet for them to take the products they collected.

"Now they will have an outlet," Ms. Shelton said. "It makes me feel good to recycle. I am making a contribution which will live on after I am gone."

NATION IN BRIEF

Families forced out by gas leak

WEST SENECA, N.Y. (AP) — More than 300 families were evacuated from their homes Saturday after an underground fuel line burst, spilling at least 20,000 gallons of gasoline and filling the air with strong fumes, authorities said.

Officials allowed most residents to return home in the evening. James Keane, commissioner of emergency services for Erie County, said those living closest to the break would probably not be allowed to return home until Sunday.

Michael McCowan, an assistant fire chief, said he and a volunteer crew were investigating a complaint of a gas odor when they found gasoline gushing from the ground in a bowling alley's parking lot.

Gasoline from the 6-inch line that runs from New Jersey to Buffalo was flowing into a nearby drainage ditch that connects to the town's sewer system, he said.

About 10 a.m., a crew from Mobil Oil Pipeline Co., the line's owner, cut off the flow and isolated the break, which occurred sometime before 5:30 a.m. in the Buffalo suburb of West Seneca, police and fire officials said.

About 300 federal, state and local emergency workers responded to the leak, said Dwayne Lang, a dispatcher with the West Seneca Fire Department.

Two injured during stunt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two stuntmen were injured, one critically, when an action scene went awry during filming of the movie "The Rocketeer" early Saturday, authorities said.

Varying reports said the two fell down an embankment or hit a tree about 3:30 a.m. during filming near the landmark Griffith Park observatory in the mountainous area above Hollywood.

Jim Madeiras, 50, was in critical but stable condition from head injuries. He regained consciousness and surgery was canceled, said Adelaida De La Cerda, spokeswoman for County-USC Medical Center.

Michael Sarna, 25, was treated for face cuts and discharged, she said.

Police had different spellings for the victims' names, identifying them as Jim Maderas, 46, and Michael Sorna, 25.

"The Rocketeer," being made by Touchstone Productions, a Walt Disney Co. division, is a period film about a jet-propelled backpack and efforts to keep it from the Nazis, said Disney spokesman Erwin Okun.

Disney issued a statement saying the men were filming "a routine stunt which required the two men to be pulled by a car at approximately 7 mph, through a breakaway fence."

"After rehearsing the scene several times, one of the men missed his mark, broke through the fence and fell approximately eight feet. He struck a tree and was knocked unconscious," Disney said.

"The Rocketeer" stars Alan Arkin, Timothy Dalton, Bill Campbell and Jennifer Connelly, according to the Hollywood trade newspaper Daily Variety.

Police reports had different details.

One man was wearing a prop "rocket pack" that, in the film, gets out of control, and the other stuntman was to grab him, Sgt. John Johnston said.

The pair were dragged by cable over the ground and were to hit a balsa wood fence. Behind that were crew members and mattresses to halt the pair.

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A World War II historian says the Marine Corps treated a veteran's family unfairly when it decided the former Marine wasn't in a famous World War II photograph of Marines raising the U.S. flag on Iwo Jima.

The Marines initially identified Sgt. Henry Hansen of Somerville, Mass., as one of six men in the Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph. But the corps changed its position two years later after another soldier's family complained. Both of the soldiers had died in the war.

Professor Parker B. Albee, a professor at the University of Southern Maine, says his two years of independent research indicates the Marines' investigation was not thorough enough.

"I think (the Marine Corps) should pursue the investigation and reopen the case," Albee said. "It's been gnawing at the family for three generations."

But the Marine Corps said Friday that it doesn't see a need for another investigation.

The photograph was taken by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal on Feb. 23, 1945, as the Marines raised the flag atop Mount Suribachi during one of the bloodiest battles in the Pacific.

Bush to sign treaty en route to Saudi

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — As he travels to Saudi Arabia to spend Thanksgiving with U.S. military forces preparing for possible war against Iraq, President Bush will stop in Paris to sign an arms-control treaty that one former U.S. negotiator says will "end the danger of surprise attack" by the Soviet Union against Europe.

The pact, the Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE) treaty, is likely to be overshadowed by Bush's focus on the Persian Gulf crisis and his visit to the desert kingdom. Before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Bush had described the treaty as "the most ambitious conventional arms control agreement ever concluded."

The agreement by 22 nations — the 16 NATO members and the six countries making up the Warsaw Pact — represents the most dramatic symbol since the destruction of the Berlin wall a year ago that the Cold War confrontation in Europe is over.

The CFE agreement limits the numbers of tanks, artillery, aircraft, helicopters and armored combat vehicles that NATO and East Bloc nations can station between the Atlantic Ocean and the Ural Mountains, a chain that runs 1,250 miles south from the Arctic Circle. The Urals, positioned about 1,000 miles east of Moscow, separate the European part of the Soviet Union from the Asian part.

For example, the pact puts a lid of 20,000 tanks that both NATO and East Bloc nations can station in that area.

Because tanks are primarily offensive weapons, the treaty will "end the danger of surprise attack" by the Soviets in Europe, according to Jonathan Dean, a retired veteran U.S. arms negotiator.

"The threat of conventional war in Europe has been reduced to a remote contingency" as a result of the treaty, Dean told reporters last week. He said it would take two years of advanced preparation by the Soviets to attack Western Europe after the treaty is in full effect three years from now.

From the U.S. viewpoint, the treaty achieves a major strategic goal of setting the same weapons limits on both sides, thus overcoming the enormous numerical advantages historically held by the East Bloc. Thus, the 20,000-tank ceiling will require the Warsaw Pact nations to cut their inventory by 45 percent while NATO only has to cut 10 percent of its tank fleet.

NATO also has the statistical edge in the other weapons categories, facing zero reductions in artillery, armored combat vehicles and aircraft while the treaty will require the East Bloc to cut artillery by 38 percent, armored combat vehicles by 36 percent and aircraft by 30 percent in order to achieve parity.

Jack Mendelsohn, deputy director of the Arms Control Association and a former U.S. diplomat, said the equal ceilings set by the treaty represent a "spectacular outcome" of the 19 months of negotiations in Vienna, Austria.

Bush or Secretary of State James A. Baker will sign the CFE treaty in Paris Nov. 19 after the president's visit to Prague, Czechoslovakia, and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's home south of Frankfurt, Germany.

In Paris, Bush also will attend a meeting of the 34-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE). He will sign agreements setting up a regular schedules of CSCE meetings, establishing a permanent staff, and creating a "center for the prevention of conflict" to provide fast communications among member nations to avoid misunderstandings that could lead to hostilities.

From there, Bush goes to Saudi Arabia to inspect U.S. military preparations in the Persian Gulf, give U.S. troops a pep talk and spend Thanksgiving with them.

Democracy faces another test in Guatemala elections

Emotions ran the gamut from weary cynicism to quiet despair as Guatemalans prepared to elect a new president, a vice president, 116 congressmen, 300 mayors and 20 delegates to a new Central American parliament.

Street crime and human rights abuses are rampant. The economy is in shambles. The immense power of the army and a wealthy elite is uncurbed. The government is broke and corrupt.

After only five years of democracy, Guatemalans are so fed up that some polls show a majority want to return to military rule. While coup rumors flourish, democracy remains an alien weed, without firm roots.

"Whoever wins will have to prove democracy is really better than what we had before," said Edmund Mulet, an opposition congressman. "It's going to be the last chance we have."

A dozen candidates — most conservatives and many with ties to past military dictatorships — are vying for president; none is expected to get the 50-percent-plus-one needed to win outright.

Election-eve polls, taking into account voters' options of spoiling their ballots or casting blank ones as a sign of nonconformity, showed "Null" and "Nobody" had as much support as anyone.

The polls said newspaper publisher Jorge Carpio Nicolle, 58, would probably garner enough votes to go to a Jan. 6 runoff with former Guatemala City mayor Alvaro Arzu Irigoyen, 44, or engineer Jorge Serrano Elias, 45.

Both Carpio and Serrano were candidates in 1985. Serrano came in third and Carpio lost the runoff to President Vinicio Cerezo.

Whoever wins will make Guatemalan history Jan. 14, the first time an elected civilian will get a chance to pass the presidential sash to another elected civilian.

But some see that scenario as a hollow victory for democracy.

"Guatemala is still a no-man's land, a land of impunity, death and desolation," journalist Byron Barrera said in an open letter to the army after he was shot and his wife was killed in a daylight ambush last month.

At the end of October, the government's human rights ombudsman had logged 264 "extra-judicial executions" and 176 disappearances. The dead include a congressman, mayoral candidates and party officials.

Guatemalan peasants walk past a soldier early Saturday in this small village 142 kilometers west of the capital. Thousands of extra soldiers and national police have been mobilized to provide security for Sunday's presidential elections. In recent weeks, at least four political candidates have been assassinated.

"As Guatemala prepares for presidential elections ... the nation is in the grip of the worst human rights crisis since the military turned the government over to civilians in 1986," the U.S. monitoring group Americas Watch said in a report released this week.

Even more pressing for most people are pocketbook issues and common crime. The candidates are full of vague promises to slash inflation and bring law and order.

Students surrender after hijack in Burma

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Two Burmese students carrying a fake bomb made out of soap hijacked a Thai jetliner to Calcutta on Saturday to dramatize demands for an end to military rule in Burma.

All of the 219 other passengers and crew aboard the plane were released gradually over a six-hour period before the hijackers gave themselves up to police. No one was hurt, police said.

The Thai Airways Airbus 300 was hijacked during a flight from Bangkok to Rangoon, the capital of Burma.

The two students told a news conference they were unarmed and carried only a fake bomb made out of bars of soap with protruding wires. A third Burmese student was supposed to participate in the hijacking, but the trio ran low on money in Bangkok and could only affort two plane tickets, they said.

The two, who identified themselves as Ye Marn and Ye Htink Yaw, were taken into police custody.

Police Inspector General S.J. Philip said charges were being comtemplated but had not been filed yet. He said the hijackers were unarmed but carried "a reddish kind of container with wires."

The hijackers said they only wanted to win greater publicity for pro-democracy activists struggling against Burma's military rulers, who have refused to turn over power to civilian leaders elected in May.

"We have no desire to kill people," Ye Marn said. "Our bomb was soap."

Ye Marn told the news conference: "We wanted to draw international attention and international support for our human rights and democracy (campaign). Our mission has been fulfilled."

Ye Marn, 24, and Ye Htink Yaw, 22, said they were students at Rangoon University. They wore red headbands emblazoned in yellow with a fighting peacock, which they said was the emblem of pro-democracy student groups.

State of Mexico holds elections

TOLUCA, Mexico (AP) — The ruling revolutionary Institutional Party of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari puts the credibility of its new reforms on the line Sunday in elections in the State of Mexico.

Opposition leaders claimed the PRI will again resort to fraud.

The PRI must convince an indifferent electorate that it has changed its ways and must defeat a growing opposition, mostly from the more conservative sectors around the capital.

With about 10 million residents the State of Mexico is the biggest of the country's 31 states. About 80 percent of the residents live in urban areas around the capital, a city in which Salinas lost in presidential voting two years ago.

The state includes everything from opulent and middle-class suburbs to areas like Chalco and Nezahualcoyotl where thousand of rural newcomers live in unspeakable squalor without water or electricity.

The PRI hopes to benefit here from recent construction of roads, water systems and other services.

While the PRI retains its 61-year-old control of nearly all aspects of Mexican politics, its monopoly on power has been eroding gradually in some areas.

"Democracy must win twice," Gov. Ignacio Pichardo said Thursday. "It must win at the polls with a free election and its must win in the minds of the public with credible results."

Soldiers slaughtered

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem guerrillas fighting to topple the leadership of Afghanistan slaughtered more than 200 government soldiers who had agreed to surrender, diplomatic and guerrilla sources said Saturday.

The killings occurred last month during battles for two provincial capitals in southern Afghanistan, the sources said on condition of anonymity.

Moderate guerrillas blamed Moslem fundamentalists for the massacres. Moderate groups have pulled out of the fighting, aimed at pressuring the Kabul government to negotiate an end to the 12-year-old war, the sources said.

"Everyone is denying responsibility," one diplomatic source said.

Guerrillas gunned down at least 95 Afghan soldiers who had surrendered and paved the way for the Oct. 4 fall of Tarin Kot, the capital of Uruzgan Province, sources said.

About two weeks later, they said, about 125 soldiers were slain by guerrilias negotiating the surrender of Qalat, capital of neighboring Zabul province. The guerrillas had promised the soldiers safe passage if they defected, they said.

Gorbachev visit ends

OGGERSHEIM, Germany (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, transformed from Eastern Europe's liberator to a leader in desperate search of rich benefactors, wrapped up his visit to Germany on Saturday with no clear reply to his pleas.

Thousands of Germans cheered the Kremlin chief as he toured German wine country with Chancellor Helmut Kohl. They gave him lavish thanks for letting the Berlin Wall fall and Germany unite.

At one point on the tour, Kohl pledged that Germany would help Gorbachev's troubled nation as it tries to avoid economic collapse.

But Kohl gave no specifics, and there did not appear to be a change in German caution about increasing the financial assistance already promised.

Delta region in Sudan declared disaster area

TOKAR, Sudan (AP) — Drought has laid waste to the once-lush Tokar delta on Sudan's Red Sea coast for the first time this century, and the government has reportedly declared a famine-struck western region a disaster area.

Both developments are signs the country faces a famine that Western relief agencies say could affect millions.

The Tokar delta's 400,000 acres — once expected to be East Africa's breadbasket — have turned from rich farmland into a gray expanse of baked clay.

"This is the first year since 1899 where there is absolutely nothing," said the delta's chief administrative officer, al-Fadil Abdalla al-Mahdi.

The delta, normally irrigated by floods from the Ethiopian plateau, was chosen by British colonial rulers in 1899 for one of three major Sudanese agriculture projects. It has long been a showpiece, spared the drought conditions that have ravaged much of Africa's largest nation.

In recent weeks, the 16-month-old military government has said the nation of more than 25 million is experiencing only a "food gap" and predicts the coming harvest will be sufficient to prevent widespread hardships.

It blamed the 1 million ton grain shortage largely on relief agencies' panic buying. Officials have seized stocks from merchants and agencies to sell at subsidized prices.

But the U.S. Agency for International Development and most other major relief organizations fear a famine beginning early 1991 comparable to the mid-1980s when hundreds of thousands of Sudanese and Ethiopians perished. Another 250,000 to 500,000 Sudanese died in later years as southern rebels blocked food shipments and clashed with government troops.

Last month, U.S. relief officials said as many as 8 million to 11 million Sudanese are threatened by starvation, but Sudan's government is blocking international food deliveries.

"If the actual level of need is as high as some people fear, and the donor community is not allowed to respond, we are looking at an apocalyptic situation worse than in Ethiopia in 1984," said Andrew Natsios, director of the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance, said at the time.

Unless the government changes its policies, "there is little chance of anything happening in the near future to avert a famine," Richard Graham wrote for the Britain-based charity Oxfam.

Col. Faisal Medani Mukhtar, member of the nation's ruling military junta and governor of the region, was quoted Saturday as saying that news of an imminent famine in the western region of Kordufan was true.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

AP Laserphoto

Marines find novel ways to celebrate

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Leave it to the U.S. Marines to find novel ways to celebrate their 215th birthday Saturday in a liquourless desert.

Marines delivered as much pomp and ceremony as they could. At the main party, a band from the 1st Marines Expeditionary Force slung rifles and gas masks with their trumpets and tubas, escorts carried a birthday cake on a stretcher and a color guard adorned in desert camouflage instead of dress blues paraded with the U.S. and Marine Corps flags.

"We'd have to be up to our ears in firefights to keep us from celebrating," said 1st Sgt. George Spear, 40, of Coleman, Ala.

Spear recalled a time 21 years ago when he was pulled off Hill No. 41 near Da Nang in the Vietnam War and put on duty in the rear as a cake carrier.

"No matter where we are, we're going to take time out to celebrate who we are and what we are," said Spear.

According to one unconfirmed report, a Marine had called to make dinner reservations for 30,000 at a hotel in Kuwait City. That's how many Marines are on the ground in Operation Desert Shield.

Marines in the remotest desert foxholes took time from their duties to mark the day in 1775 when the Continental Congress authorized the formation of two battalions to fight on land and sea.

Every Marine in the world celebrates the birthday. At the main desert celebration, they ate a three-tiered yellow cake with white icing from disposable plates. Some units toasted themselves with non-alcoholic beer.

"Marines, you're a special breed. There are no others in the world like you," said Lt. Gen. W.E. Boomer, commander of the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force deployed in Saudi Arabia.

Boomer then cut the cake with a saber. The traditional drink of rum was missing because alcohol is taboo in conservative Saudi Arabia.

The Marine band was flown by helicopter to 18 desert stops in the past two days to entertain their ranks.

Elsewhere, the Marines gave a special reception to Brig. Gen. Patrick Cordingly, commander of the British 7th Armored Division, or "Desert Rats," who are under Marine command here. As Cordingly spoke, the Marines barked and grunted — a tradition passed on when they were called "Devil Dogs" by the Germans for the ferocity in which they fought in World War I.

Troops ready to take offensive

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Long before President Bush increased gulf troop strength in the Persian Gulf and raised speculation of war, U.S. officers on the front lines were prepared to take the offensive.

They say they were thinking about combat before Secretary of State James A. Baker III spoke of a "new phase" of operations and before the chain of command was set if fighting spreads outside of Saudi Arabia.

"We're ready to fight now. We're just waiting for somebody to tell us which way to go," said Lt. Col. Bill Chamberlain, 39, commander of the 2/18th Infantry Battalion of the 197th Infantry Brigade, which is attached to the 24th Mechanized Division.

"Our mission was to defend Saudi Arabia. That hasn't changed," said Chamberlain, a fourth generation Army career officer. "But we've got to have offensive and defensive capabilities."

But these days — with about 230,000 U.S. troops and a 140,000-member multinational force in Saudi Arabia — political leaders are talking more emphatically about going in to drive the Iraqis out of Kuwait.

That could entail hitting strategic targets and supply lines in Iraq.

Bush announced Thursday that he's beefing up the U.S. force, originally deployed to protect Saudi Arabia and its oil fields after Saddam invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

The addition of four more armored divisions, plus more aircraft carrier battle groups and possibly more combat jets, could push the U.S. force to 430,000 troops within weeks, American military officials said.

Bush has insisted on dislodging Iraq from the conquered emirate, by force if necessary, to demonstrate that aggression cannot pay.

Army Lt. Col. Bill Chamberlin of LaPlata, Md., watches as his tanks participate in maneuvers in the Saudi desert. He is commander of the 2/18th Infantry Battalion of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

If the U.N. trade embargo and 10 U.N. Security Council resolutions don't force Saddam out, Bush can play a military card that gets stronger by the day.

For the troops hunkered down for the past three months in the Saudi sands, at least half of their training and war games are geared for attack.

They practice assaulting bunkers built the way the Iraqis build them. They practice house-to-house fighting, the kind of combat they would presumably encounter in an assault to liberate Kuwait City.

They charge their tanks in old-style cavalry formations against trenches and the type of obstacles they think the Iraqis would throw in their way.

Marines rehearse amphibious assaults in the northern Arabian Sea and maneuver their assault vehicles on a sea of sand once ashore. Supply depots have built up a 45-day stockpile of ammunition.

"We've always had a combat focus. We're a fast-reaction force," said Col. Glynn Hale, 46, commander of the 505th Paratroop Regiment of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division. "These guys know any day we can get thrown into combat."

Elements of the 82nd were the first American ground troops to feel the desert's blast-furnace heat when they arrived Aug. 7.

The 30,000 Marines deployed in the desert and the 10,000 more primed on assault ships off the Arabian peninsula say they've got enough firepower to take on Iraqi strongpoints even without reinforcements.

"Offensive operations, that's our bread and butter," said Maj. John Bates, 44, executive officer of the 1st Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment of the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force.

"We defend for only one reason, so we can regroup and counterattack," Bates said.

The Americans know the Iraqis have been girding for war as well.

In Kuwait and southern Iraq, an estimated 430,000 soldiers are dug in behind layered minefields, 15-foot-high earthen barricades and anti-tank ditches.

U.S. officials have said the Iraqis have also filled trenches along the Kuwaiti coast with oil and flammable liquids that would be turned into a "wall of fire" to block an assault from the sea.

"It's going to be tough, any war is," said Brig. Gen. Tom Draude, 50, assistant division commander of the 1st Marines Expeditionary Force. "It ain't all going to be perfect. You have to be prepared for that."

The Air Force took an aggressive posture from the start. The U.S. and multinational forces have a clear advantage in top-of-the-line combat aircraft of about 2.5-to-1 over the Iraqis, the respected Jane's Defense Weekly has reported.

The U.S. force includes about 20 F-117 Stealth fighters. Those radar-evading warplanes would play a key role in a U.S. offensive, attacking command and communications centers in addition to key military targets in Baghdad.

The U.S. Navy also has more than 50 warships to control the Red Sea, Arabian Sea and the Persian Gulf, the waters on three sides of the Arabian peninsula.

They're ready to attack if the confrontation turns to war, said Capt. Louis Harlow, commander of the guided missile cruiser USS Biddle.

HOUSTON (AP) — Donnita Cole, wife of Persian Gulf hostage John Henry Cole of Odessa, is planning an early December trip to Iraq to see her husband and possibly meet with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Mrs. Cole said Friday she spoke with Mohamed Sadiq Al-Mashat, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, who told her a meeting with Saddam was possible.

"He said he would report it and thought there would be no problem with it," she said.

"I am going to Baghdad for the main reason of seeing my husband, but also to request an interview with Mr. President Saddam Hussein as a peace envoy, not as a member of a political faction or military faction," Mrs. Cole added. "I am going to promote peace between the two countries as a wife and a mother deeply involved in this crisis."

A doctor who heard about Mrs. Cole's desire to travel to Iraq contacted her and is paying for her plane ticket.

She estimated the weeklong trip will cost $4,000.

Her husband, an oil rig drilling superintendent, is a "human shield" at a sensitive installation in Iraq, she said. His 51st birthday was Thursday.

Mrs. Cole said she has spoken with her husband four times since last weekend, when U.S. and British families suddenly began receiving phone calls from their hostage relatives in Iraq.

During her husband's first call Sunday, he urged her not to take Saddam up on his suggestion that families of Western and Japanese hostages journey to Iraq for Christmas. But two days later, Mrs. Cole said her husband had changed his mind and wanted her to come.

Mrs. Cole also has one son serving in Operation Desert Shield, and one more son and son-in-law in the military, she said.

Kuwaiti pilots not allowed to fly armed training missions

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Saudi Arabia is not allowing escaped Kuwaiti air force pilots to fly armed training missions because of fears they would attack Iraqi positions, U.S. officials said.

More than three months after escaping to the kingdom with most of their air force, several Kuwaiti military men refused to say why they were not carrying out armed patrols along with U.S., British and Saudi pilots.

A Saudi Ministry of Defense spokesman said the Kuwaitis were here for training and for safety reasons, and training flights must be unarmed.

The Kuwaiti pilots "very soon are going to fly on armed missions," the spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

But Americans working with the Kuwaitis said the Saudis feared the Kuwaitis would head north and bomb the Iraqis.

"The Saudis won't allow them to. It's very obvious. If they had, they'd probably go home," said Scott Corliss, 30, of Corpus Christi, Texas, who helps supervise launches of Kuwaiti aircraft at a base in eastern Saudi Arabia.

The U.S. Air Force doesn't use missiles on training flights but does arm F-15 training flights with canon rounds, an Air Force spokesman said.

At the moment, the Kuwaitis are flying only A-4 Sky Hawk ground-attack fighters, all recently emblazoned with the logo "Free Kuwait."

The Kuwaiti pilots who arrived here Aug. 3, a day after Iraqi troops invaded their emirate, said they were anxious to return home and ready to die for their country. But they also said they would never launch a solo attack.

"We won't do it because that decision will commit a lot of countries," said Lt. Col. Abdulla Sultan, 40, deputy operations officer of the Kuwaiti detachment at the base.

"We don't want to ignite the war unless it's firm everybody's ready. If we ignite it and everybody's relaxed, they might turn against us," he said.

First Lt. Khaled Malallah, 27, an A-4 pilot said: "I will not do it ... but we are ready. We are ready to go to fight and die for our country."

Kuwaiti pilots flew 15 Mirage F-1 fighters, 20 A-4 Sky Hawks, 6 Hawk trainers and 15 French-made Gazelle helicopters to Saudi Arabia, Sultan said.

One helicopter crashed in Saudi Arabia en route and its two-man crew was killed. Kuwaiti Defense Minister Sheik Nawaf Al-Ahmed Al Sabah said in early September that the Air Force lost 8 Mirages, 3 A-4s and 2 helicopters to Iraq.

Sultan said about 80 percent of the Kuwait air force's planes are in Saudi Arabia and about 95 percent of its pilots.

But after three months, he said, the Mirages are still not flying because of serious problems with spare parts. He said he hoped to get the first Mirage up in the air next week.

Wade Zahnd, 35, of Stockbridge, Ga., part of the A-4 ground support crew, said about half the 35 to 40 Americans working under contract for the Kuwaiti air force on Aug. 2 are either in hiding or held hostage by Iraq.

Zahnd said he escaped on Aug. 13 by driving from Kuwait through the desert.

IRS seizes Willie Nelson's property

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — County-western singer Willie Nelson's tax woes continue as the Internal Revenue Service announced the seizure of the entertainer's property in six states to satisfy $6.5 million in claims.

The fashionable Pedernales Country Club and recording studio, which Nelson calls his residence, was closed at least temporarily in the Friday seizures, an IRS spokeswoman told the Austin American-Statesman.

"Today, in a coordinated effort, Internal Revenue Service employees went out to seize property that was owned by Willie Nelson so that we could satisfy the money that is owed to the government, to protect the government's interests," said IRS spokeswoman Sally Sassen.

The seizures came less than two months after the agency slapped tax liens of $16.7 million against Nelson's private property. Nelson's manager and his attorneys did not immediately return phone calls from The Associated Press on Saturday.

Besides the Austin-area properties, some of Nelson's holdings in Hawaii, California, Washington, Colorado and Alabama also were seized, Ms. Sassen said.

Liens were filed on taxes that the IRS alleged Nelson and his estranged wife, Connie, owed from 1975 through 1982, except for the 1979 tax year, she said.

The property inventory included "a number of different items, but the main thing was the Pedernales Country Club and recording studio. There were also a number of other properties in Austin, Lakeway and the Spicewood area," the spokeswoman said.

Also seized in the Austin area were a house, ranch, more than 100 lots and several condominiums.

"Sometimes we seize the property and everything in it, which means the business can no longer operate," Ms. Sassen said. "Sometimes we seize the property and the business can (continue to) operate.

"In this case, we have seized everything there and (the country club and recording studio) will not be in operation."

She said all the seized property would be released to the singer if he can pay off the back taxes.

Nelson has claimed his tax troubles began in 1986, when a former business manager was careless with his finances and IRS filings. Court documents show that Nelson later hired the Price-Waterhouse accounting firm to correct some discrepancies.

"Once we seize the property, it becomes government property, and we can schedule a sale of that property and sell it to the highest bidder, and generally that's what we do," Ms. Sassen said.

"At any point, he can pay off the amount due and we would release the property to him," she said.

Republicans may have lost bid to control redistricting

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a race that turned on a cowboy's refusal to shake a lady's hand, Texas Republicans may have lost their bid to reshape state government for the next decade.

Going into the general election campaign, Republicans were hopeful they had put together their strongest statewide slate in history, led by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's re-election campaign and Clayton Williams, the colorful Midland oilman and rancher, for governor.

With the support of a Republican president and governor, the GOP hoped to elect five key statewide officials and control redistricting next year.

But in a campaign where more than half of potential voters told pollsters they would rather vote for "none of the above," Democrat Ann Richards seized on a series of mistakes Williams made in the final month of the campaign to close a gap that polls put as high as 15 points in early October.

Richards on Wednesday said the turning point came on Labor Day, when she found that Williams' midsummer advertising barrage had not buried her, but most political observers agreed the gap closed after Williams confronted Richards at a Dallas event, called her a "liar" and pointedly refused to shake her hand.

As the returns rolled in Tuesday, Richards soon established a lead of 52 percent to 48 percent in the matchup with Williams. That lead stood through the night as a record 3,876,603 Texans voted in the gubernatorial election on a clear and mild day.

Richards swept the six largest metropolitan areas, including the first Democratic win in Dallas County in 16 years, as well as South, Central and East Texas regions, while Williams carried many of the smaller cities, West Texas and the Panhandle.

Exit polls of voters conducted for TV networks and the Dallas Morning News showed Richards received 61 percent of the women's vote, while Williams carried 55 percent of the men's vote.

Despite Williams' hope to make serious inroads into the minority vote and speculation that many Mexican-American men would not vote for a woman, Richards carried 75 percent of the Hispanic vote and 91 percent of the black vote, although Williams took 57 percent of the white vote, the exit polls indicated.

As for the issues that decided the election, the poll showed education was the top issue for 44 percent of Richards' supporters and ethics was most important to 24 percent, while crime and drugs was the top issue for 37 percent of Williams' supporters, followed by education with 31 percent.

Of the supposed "hot button" issues, taxes was most important to 21 percent of Williams supporters and 10 percent of Richards supporters.

Abortion was most important to 18 percent of Richards' pro-choice supporters and 15 percent of Williams' pro-life supporters.

Texas Republican Chairman Fred Meyer took solace that the GOP won five statewide offices, electing the agriculture commissioner, treasurer and a fourth Supreme Court seat, as well as re-electing Gramm and Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips.

"What we had hoped to do was take a big step. Instead, we took a small step," Meyer said.

In the last month, he said, the Republican ticket lost 3 to 5 percentage points across the board. "We saw a lot of races decided by 3 to 5 percentage points," he said.

But he was not inclined to blame Williams. "Clayton clearly did some damage to himself, but events were also a factor," including the federal budget chaos and Gramm's inability to spend more time campaigning for Republican candidates, he said.

Control of the Legislative Redistricting Board was critical because it gets the job of redrawing legislative districts in the likely event that the Legislature cannot finish the task in the regular session.

But Democrats won the offices of lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller and land commissioner and Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, is expected to win a fifth term as House speaker, rounding out the redistricting crew. That leaves Meyer the likely option of joining forces with minority groups to seek a federal court master to redraw the districts.

Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said regaining the governor's office put the Democrats back in the driver's seat on redistricting, which also will parcel out three new congressional districts.

Democrats will have a 93-57 advantage in the House. At least 22 of the 31 senators will be Democrats, with a special election due to replace Democratic Sen. Chet Edwards, congressman-elect from Waco.

A Democratic governor also reduces the role of the House Republican Caucus, which flexed its muscle under Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

The 60 House Republicans this past year were able to block overrides of Clements' vetoes, since they were more than one-third of the 150-member House.

They were prepared to hold the line on taxes for Williams, but the 57 surviving Republicans may be reduced to the legislative equivalent of a speed bump if Richards chooses not to exercise her veto power, said Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, chairman of the caucus.

"Time will tell," said Craddick, who was bedridden with a herniated disc the weekend before the election. "We felt like Williams was in a stronger no-tax position, but I think we can still get by without a tax increase," he said.

Craddick as well as Richards said they believe the state can get by without a tax increase next year, but Richards never ruled it out and Democratic lawmakers warned before the election the Legislature will have to come up with $3.5 billion just to keep up current services.

Errors could alter outcome of election

FORT WORTH (AP) — Errors discovered during canvassing of ballots in two North Texas counties could make a Republican the winner in State Representative District 64 for the first time ever.

The seat was vacated by newly elected Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, who won the House seat as a Democrat but switched parties to make the statewide race.

Tuesday night, in unofficial returns, Democrat John Cook, a Breckenridge attorney and rancher, outpolled Republican businessman Fred Gough of Graham, 16,366 votes to 16,318 — a 48-vote difference.

But Friday, when officials canvassed the votes, Young County election officials discovered a 100-vote error in favor of Gough. Palo Pinto commissioners found a possible 31-vote discrepancy in favor of Cook, leaving the Democrat 21 votes behind his Republican opponent.

The district covers eight counties. No discrepancies were found during canvasses in Stephens and Callahan counties Friday. Officials in Hood, Shackleford and Throckmorton counties are scheduled to canvass returns Monday and Haskell County officials will canvass Tuesday.

"The night of the election, what you get is unofficial returns. The canvass is to make the count official," Young County Election Administrator Tim Moreland said. "You always hope something like this doesn't happen. It was unfortunate and it was really unfortunate that it happened in Young County."

The mistake in the Young County vote was discovered on a sheet listing returns from absentee ballots, Moreland said. Ballots in Young County are counted by hand and it took 16 clerks all day Tuesday to count the more than 1,800 absentee ballots, he said.

"The numbers were right on the tally sheet, but there was an addition error on the return sheet where all the tallies are added together that changed the count by 100 votes," he said.

Both Cook and Gough expressed optimism about the final outcome.

STATE IN BRIEF

Chemical leak forms gas cloud

TRINIDAD (AP) — A cloud of noxious gas created by a leak at an abandoned chemical plant drifted across a region of East Texas Saturday, prompting authorities to advise residents to stay indoors.

The leak followed a fertilizer tank rupture at the former Nipak Chemical Co. plant in Navarro County, said Sheriff Jim Hodge. Officials were unsure of the specific chemical inside the tank.

"It's creating a cloud of gas," a Henderson County sheriff's department spokeswoman said. "Some of the residents in the area are evacuating."

The former plant was a storage facility for chemicals near the Trinity River, about 70 miles southeast of Dallas.

The rupture was reported at 6:55 a.m., Hodge said. He told the Athens Daily Review that the Texas Air Control Board was notified, and that Navarro County Civil Defense Director Doug Fogg was at the scene.

The gray-white gas cloud was drifting northeastward over Payne Springs and toward Cedar Creek Reservoir, authorities told the newspaper. Officers were monitoring the leak from Texas Highway 31.

Members of volunteer fire departments in the area were being asked to warn residents of the fumes.

Judge seeks prison beds

HOUSTON (AP) — State prison officials are hiding 3,500 beds that could be used for the 2,000 felons in the Harris County Jail, County Judge Jon Lindsay says.

Lindsay and County Attorney Mike Driscoll accused Assistant Attorney General Robert Ozer of concealing a staff report of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice detailing the existence of unused beds.

"Mike and I have had it up to here with what's going on," Lindsay said, although he offered no proof to support his allegation.

Lindsay and Driscoll said they decided to go public with the alleged subterfuge after Ozer obtained a court order temporarily blocking the deposition of a top prison official.

Ozer called Lindsay and Driscoll's accusations that the state is holding back available bed space "absurd." The state is forced by a federal court decree to maintain inmate population at 95 percent of capacity.

"We are full every day. We are full Monday through Friday and we are full on the weekends, it's just that simple," Ozer said. "There are no vacancies in the big house."

Rosenberg misspelled

ROSENBERG, Texas(AP) — There are some things that just shouldn't happen. And misspelling the name of a city on the cover of a telephone book is one of them.

Southwestern Bell officials are blaming a typing error for the November 1990-91 white and yellow pages which prominently displays a "u" in the final syllable of Rosenberg.

"They were kind enough to let me know before I saw it so I wouldn't blow my stack," said Rosenberg Mayor Larry Wilkinson. "I have to admit I'm not happy about it, but I was impressed with Southwestern Bell's sincerity. They have put a lot of effort toward trying to rectify a serious mistake."

Joe Moomau, division manager for Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages Inc. in Houston, said a correction sticker and letter will be sent to each home and business that received the book.

"We're very sorry about the error and will see to it that it doesn't happen again," Moomau said.

About 24,000 people live in the Richmond-Rosenberg community, located about 25 miles southwest of Houston.

Southland criticized

DALLAS (AP) — The makeup of a committee representing bondholders of Southland Corp. in a reorganization effort has raised "serious questions" with a federal judge.

But Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson on Friday rejected a motion to appoint a second panel, which allowed Southland at least a temporary victory in efforts to restructure quickly under a "prepackaged" bankruptcy plan.

Abramson, saying the day's testimony left him with "mixed findings," will hold a hearing in two weeks to determine whether the current committee representing bondholders should be dissolved.

The upcoming hearing also would study whether Southland conducted a fair vote of its bondholders on its reorganization plan before the company filed for bankruptcy protection, the judge said.

Board approves science books with evolution

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education on Saturday approved science textbooks that teach the theory of evolution, over objections from those who say alternative views are given short shrift.

Textbooks adopted for Texas schools have long been a point of contention between supporters of evolution theory and creationists, who ascribe the origin of species to acts of God as described in the Bible.

"These are the best biology textbooks that have ever been presented to the public schools of this state," said board member Will Davis of Austin after the books were approved on an 11-4 vote.

But board member Jane Nelson of Lewisville said most of the books don't present sufficient evidence refuting or presenting flaws in evolution theory. The board had asked publishers to include such evidence, she said.

"I feel that this board's integrity is at stake," Ms. Nelson said.

The theory of evolution holds that all species of plants and animals developed from earlier forms, through hereditary transmission of slight variations in successive generations.

"I don't think the issue is that we want to put religion in the biology textbooks. I just want to give enough information for the teachers to use to show that we haven't proven the theory of evolution," Ms. Nelson said.

Besides Ms. Nelson, board members voting against the textbooks were Chairman Monte Hasie of Lubbock, Bill Hudson of Wichita Falls and John Shields of San Antonio.

"I think when we have a 1,000-page textbook ... it doesn't hurt to have a page in there" presenting alternative theories, Hasie said.

Shields offered revisions over whether a reference in some of the books saying human embryos have gill slits was accurate. The board didn't approve the revisions.

The textbooks have been criticized by fundamentalist Mel Gabler of Longview. With his wife, Norma, he has fought the teaching of evolution for about 30 years.

Gabler argued that the books treat evolution as a fact without including debate of the theory.

Board member Davis disagreed.

"I think it's very carefully presented. It's hedged a great deal. And it should be obvious to any high school student that it is a theory that is not proven," he said.

The science books approved by the board are for grades 1 through 12. They will be used for six years.

Texas, as one of the largest purchasers of textbooks among the 50 states, influences what publishers put in the books.

The state previously has limited coverage of evolution in biology textbooks, said Michael Hudson, general counsel of People for the American Way. The civil rights group has lobbied for expanded coverage of evolution in science textbooks.

"Students in every state will benefit from the Texas decision," Hudson said. "Adopting science books that adequately present evolution will help reverse the recent trend toward scientific illiteracy among American students."

Saddam ended cheap oil era, oilman claims

■ The chief executive officer of Parker Drilling Co. says doors to increased oil exploration are opening up all over the world, except in the United States.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Parker

The oil business is a brand new game since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2, according to Robert L. Parker, chairman and chief executive officer of Parker Drilling Co.

"Cheap oil is gone. Saddam Hussein changed the oil industry more in 24 hours than the industry has changed itself in the last 24 years," Parker said.

Two valuable lessons have been learned since the invasion: "The U.S. energy policy of keeping energy cheap — no matter what it costs — was invalid, and that OPEC is not a big happy family we can count on."

Speaking at last week's annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, the drilling contractor said Saudi Arabia was very vulnerable to attack, and that Saudi oil is the reason U.S. troops are there.

"The public is not aware of how dependent we are on Saudi oil, because it's difficult to tell parents their sons are being killed for Saudi oil."

But now that the U.S. is in Saudi Arabia, it must do what is necessary to protect Saudi oil, Parker said.

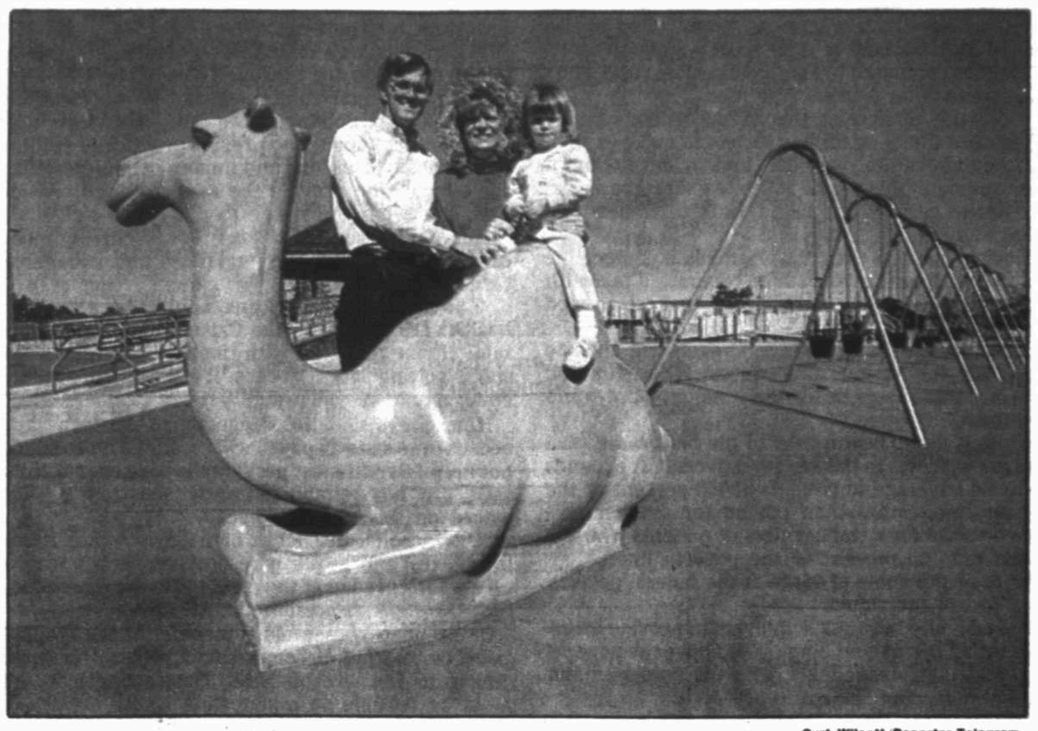

He said the new energy game is setting the stage for exploration around the world. "Doors are being opened to go in and look for 'elephant' oil fields," Parker said.

He said Parker Drilling would soon go to the Soviet Union to drill through a deadly hydrogen sulfide zone, where one well killed 2,000 people. "Chevron is involved with the project, and we hope to find an 'elephant'."

He added the drilling company also will drill two 19,000-foot wells in northwest China in hopes of finding a giant field and that it is drilling four prospects in the Asian Rim that oilmen dream about.

"Doors are being opened everywhere except in

Officials hope new judges will relieve civil backlog

By David Morris
Staff Writer

In October, 13 months after it was filed, Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co.'s multimillion-dollar civil suit against oilfield service companies went to trial in federal court in Midland.

A "remarkable" feat, said one Midland trial attorney who worked the case — civil litigation in some Texas federal courts is held up for years because dockets are clogged with criminal cases, many of them drug-related.

Attorneys and judges statewide are hopeful that Congress' approval of 11 new federal judges in Texas — three in the Midland-based Western Judicial District — will help alleviate this problem.

The three new judges are "going to be of benefit to principally the litigants on the civil side of the docket in El Paso, Austin and San Antonio," said Lucius D. Bunton III, chief judge for the Western District.

"In those three towns, we've had a backlog of civil cases due in part to increased criminal load, and the judges there have had to spend their time on the criminal cases as opposed to moving their civil cases."

The Western District, which extends as far south as Del Rio, includes Midland and Odessa, El Paso, Austin and San Antonio. The district now has seven federal judges and one part-time senior judge.

Special local park honored for bringing people together

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Chris Davidson Opportunity Park gained national recognition Saturday for its unique service to the community.

The Midland park was honored by the National Association for Retarded Citizens for best exemplifying the integration of people with mental retardation into a community recreational facility, said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC).

Steve and Jan Davidson, whose late son the park is named for, picked up the annual Fitzhugh W. Boggs Award on behalf of MARC in Tampa, Fla., Saturday evening. The Davidsons originated the idea that led to the park's development.

The park is special because it is only one of three in the United States that is fully accessible to people in wheelchairs.

But what makes the park unique is that it is the only one available for public use, said Unterbrink.

"I hope winning this award will promote the idea" for other parks like it, Unterbrink said.

"The tremendous integration that occurs between the handicapped and non-handicapped" makes the park a success, Unterbrink said. So much so that about 300 people use the park daily when weather permits, Unterbrink said.

Because the park turned out so well, Davidson said he would like to see one in every community, and like Unterbrink, hopes the award will publicize the idea.

Radical Oregon plan offers basic health care, with limits

■ Because of rising health care costs and the increasingly frayed medical safety net, local doctors are following the Oregon Basic Health Services Act, a proposal in that state to provide medical care for all poor residents, but to ration these services.

By Erin Blair

As medical costs reach epic proportions nationwide, the rumor of crisis in the health care industry is growing to a dull roar.

A recent report by Citizen Action and Families USA Foundation found that health care costs will reach $606 billion this year in the United States and will increase to $1.5 billion by the turn of the century.

"Increasingly, health care is becoming a luxury item fewer and fewer individuals and families will be able to afford," said Robert Brandon, the vice president of Citizen Action, a nationwide grassroots organization.

"The already frayed safety net will be in shreds by the end of the decade."

From 87 hospital closings in six years, to decreased Medicaid payments, to Midland County Hospital District's double-digit tax hike to fund indigent care, some would say indications already look grim for the health of Texas facilities.

Which is why local doctors are paying close attention to the success or failure of the Oregon Basic Health Services Act, a proposal in that state to provide medical care for all poor residents, but to ration the services offered.

"We're looking at cost-efficiency and long-term survival rates as the basis of health service allocation," said Dr. John Kitzhaber, president of the Oregon Senate and an author of the plan, who spoke at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas last month.

The plan has gained notoriety because it ranks medical procedures in terms of what gets the biggest bang for the Medicaid buck.

Kitzhaber said a committee of doctors, legislators, hospitals, insurance companies and citizens groups prioritized 1,600 procedures in what he termed the "gut test." They then took their ideas to 53 community meetings across the state

Among procedures that ranked low on the list were failed conditions where treatment would bring no appreciable improvement in quality of life but would increase the patient's lifespan: life support, for example.

Higher priority conditions were those where treatment would improve quality of life even if it would not increase lifespan: late stage cancer therapy, for example.

"We're out to target resources where they will do the most good," Kitzhaber said. "There's no sense spending organs on those who won't get much use

'Minor' sitcom characters have major roles in memory

Every so often a truly special TV program comes along that grabs the public's fancy and becomes a part of America's consciousness.

There haven't been all that many.

Ott

"I Love Lucy" no doubt qualifies. So does the original "Andy Griffith Show." Likewise, you'd probably have to add "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "M*A*S*H," and the old "Mary Tyler Moore Show" to the list, as well.

I'm sure you have your own personal favorites, but those mentioned above would certainly have to be given strong consideration for any so-called sitcom Hall of Fame. They stood the test of time and had characters that have lived on through the years.

Indeed, it is that last point — the memorable characters — that contributes most to the longevity of a particular program. And it is rarely the main character we most vividly remember, but, instead, one of the supporting players.

Don't believe me? Fine, let's look at some of the programs we've already discussed. I venture to say that when the following shows are mentioned, these are characters you first think of.

"I Love Lucy" ... Fred Mertz.

"Andy Griffith Show" ... Barney Fife.

"The Honeymooners" ... Ed Norton.

"Mary Tyler Moore Show" ... Ted Baxter.

And with "M*A*S*H" there were so many supporting characters over the years — Col. Potter, Radar, Cpl. Klinger, "Hot Lips" Houlihan, Frank Burns, Charles Emerson Winchester III — that it is difficult to narrow it down to just one. All have left indelible impressions on our brains.

Only in the "Dick Van Dyke Show" did the main character so dominate the program that he is the key figure recalled when the name of the show is said aloud.

I bring all of this up, because on Thursday there was a special on "Cheers," specifically celebrating that program's 200th episode.

The network made a big deal out of it. Interviews were conducted with all the characters and popular film clips were replayed from the program's past.

I think we have another legend in the making.

There is just something a little special about the program. The characters are so real they become a part of our lives. We talk about them as though they are our friends.

My parents, who obviously don't have enough to do, have sort of adopted the characters as their second family. They even stay up late at night to watch reruns of the earlier segments.

That's why when I call them long-distance now we end up talking about the gang at Cheers instead of aunts and uncles.

Surprisingly, my mother, who has never hung out in a bar, is particularly fond of the people. She will say things like, "Isn't that Diane something? I don't see how Sam puts up with her."

Or, "I wish Norm wouldn't drink so much."

Or, "Deep inside, Carla is probably a decent person, don't you think?"

When I remind her that it is just a TV show, she invariably responds, "Yes, but the characters are so real."

That's why the program is destined to become a Hall of Fame member.

PLAN: Treatments are ranked

from them, or treating patients for rheumatoid arthritis when they're not going to get much benefit.

"If we're forced to confront organ transplants versus prenatal care, we're going to go with prenatal care."

He said preventative health care, diagnostic procedure and early intervention in chronic diseases also ranked high because of their health- and cost-effectiveness as compared to emergency room costs when the patient is in a crisis condition.

"Oregon is pioneering the way in honestly facing the issue of limits, in forcing society to make explicit resource allocation decisions, and in developing a clear and equitable public policy to guarantee access to a health care system based on effectiveness and social values," Kitzhaber said.

"Society has the clear responsibility to determine the level of funding that will be committed to health care as opposed to other areas that also need investment."

Based on the list's rankings, Oregon will allocate funds for the various procedures. When funding runs out, treatments below the stopping point won't be funded.

While it limits health care to the basics, the plan does make access to the system universal. It expands Medicaid coverage to patients at 100 percent of the poverty line, rather than paying for every procedure possible for a smaller pool of patients who are at less than 50 percent of the poverty line.

An annual income of $6,280 is the federal poverty level for an individual.

The plan also requires employers to provide insurance for all permanent employees above the poverty level and their dependents, with the employer and employee sharing the insurance cost.

The plan also calls for a state-sponsored high-risk pool for people with preexisting conditions who are currently unable to get insurance due to underwriting practices.

At the Thursday meeting of the Midland and Ector counties medical societies, Dr. William Gordon McGee, the president of the Texas Medical Association, said indigent health care costs were a major cause of the 87 hospital closings in the state in the past six years.

He said one Texan in five — 3.5 million — have no insurance, and another 3 million are underinsured, which puts tremendous strain on the public hospitals and doctors. Lowered Medicaid and Medicare reimbursements hurt the business as well.

"Texas physicians conservatively gave $160 million in charity care last year," he said. "They underwrite 50 percent of professional care for Medicaid recipients and 25 percent for Medicare."

However, he said there are better ways to deal with the problem than through state legislation.

"The TMA is concerned that there is no basic insurance policy that the State Board of Insurance requires insurance companies to offer," McGee said. "The insurance companies are cherry-picking the market and trying to avoid risk."

McGee said the TMA is working on a committee with hospitals, plaintiff's lawyers, consumers' groups and legislators to fashion an acceptable insurance proposal to present to the State Board of Insurance.

He added that the state has expressed interest in paying for basic health insurance for people making up to 200 percent of the federal poverty line.

"We have a better chance of resolving the issue this way than through the Legislature," he said.

"As a free market enterprise person, I always feel threatened when the government is determining what procedures will be paid or not paid."

Dr. Jim Humphreys, Midland Memorial Hospital's vice president of medical affairs, shared McGee's skepticism of the Oregon plan, though he agreed that something must be done to reform health care programs for the poor.

"There is a way to figure out which treatments work and which don't through cost analysis, but this is still a humanitarian business and we can't possibly reduce it to a dollar amount," he said.

"Our other choice is to provide practically nothing to practically everyone and impose rationing so that the people who provide the services can't provide them for what the state's paying."

Humphreys said the latter is Texas' current mode of operation within the guidelines and exceptions formed by Medicaid.

"But not many Americans would like a national health care program" like Canada has, Humphreys said. "There they deal with the bare necessities: the rub is getting access to care. If it's not a life-threatening situation, you wait."

Humphreys said the Oregon plan concerns him because the state as payer will set limits on funding, but hospitals still must provide the care even if their costs are not reimbursed. Any shortfall is then placed on the hospital's back.

"Our hospital district is both payer (since it collects taxes) and health care provider; it has to provide what's needed at the moment in the emergency room, even if it's possible that it wasn't necessary."

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, a member of the hospital district's board of directors, said a plan with a spirit similar to the Oregon Basic Health Services Act could be feasible on a statewide level.

"Currently Medicaid patients aren't getting preventative health care, they're not getting any care until their illness reaches the crisis state," he said, in arguing that a basic health care plan would better serve the uninsured population.

"Some procedures do have a great return on investment," he said. "Like prenatal care, where every dollar spent saves $3 in catastrophic care. You also see a great return on investments in pediatric and internal medicine clinics.

"But transplant returns for dollars spent are miserable.

"As a doctor, I would hate to tell someone, 'your treatment's below our cut off point,' but I'd also hate to destroy the hospital system in the city or the state."

Wiesenfeld blamed the federal and state governments' shifting of the tax burden to fund indigent care onto local shoulders for Texas hospitals' dire situation.

Texas will spend $2,192 per capita on health care this year, ranking it 33rd in the nation, according to the Families USA Foundation-Citizen Action survey. Massachusetts is the largest spender, setting aside $3,031 per capita this year.

Many eyes will be watching as Oregon attempts to overcome its last hurdle in implementing its plan: obtaining a waiver from the Health Care Financing Administration to exempt it from federal Medicaid rules requiring states to fund "all medically necessary services."

There's no guarantee the federal government will approve such a bold move; to do so would give every other state the opportunity to set its own health care agenda.

Lamesa citizens lock in prison with united effort

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

LAMESA — While cotton is still king in Dawson County, part of its kingdom will become a land for state prisoners by early 1993.

Southeast of Lamesa on cotton fields neighboring the Los Ybanez community, and way across the road from the country club will be a prison for minimum/medium-risk inmates of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ).

Community leaders and townspeople were delighted when Lamesa won as the site of 1,000-inmate unit to be built by January 1993 for $22 million.

They outfoxed about 50 cities and towns, including Big Spring, Lubbock, Andrews, Fort Stockton, Odessa and Wichita Falls.

Lamesa folks did it in a downhome sort of way: Instead of hiring consultants and Austin lobbyists, they put together their own proposal, did their own lobbying, and showed their hospitality and appreciation to the prison selection board and staff.

"We got a proposal and worked it all up," reflected Luke Nichols, a retired J.C. Penney Co. manager who now runs the Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce. "We did it all ourselves. We put it all together ourselves, and we did our own lobbying," said the 60-year-old Nichols, who worked in concert with Lamesa City Manager Paul Feazelle, legislators, just plain citizens and a task force of citizens interested in bolstering the community's economy.

Cotton is Dawson County's big-money churn.

Last year, the cotton crop of 97,353 bales generated about $25 million. The "conservative estimate" of the 1990 crop of 160,000 bales is to yield about $44 million. The prison, which is to employ 305 workers, will produce a $6 million annual payroll. The prison land, now in cotton ready for harvest, will occupy 689 acres in three tracts — 360, 240 and 89 acres. Except for the 70 acres of the main prison grounds, most of the acreage will be in farmland to be worked by the prisoners.

Though the prison will be built to the escape-proof standards of a maximum-security unit, it will be for minimum-/medium-security prisoners.

Ed Todd/Reporter-Telegram

Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce leader Luke Nichols was a major force in the town's effort to win a prison unit site on cotton fields southeast of the Dawson County seat.

"They'll have guards on the towers on all corners with shotguns and rifles," Nichols said. "And if you start to climb the fence, they'll shoot you."

As for the type of prisoners in the all-male unit, Nichols said, "It doesn't make any difference on the type of crime that got them in prison.

"It's their attitude and how they adjust. If they adapt to it and don't give them a hard time, they put them in minimum-medium security prison."

The Lamesa unit will be one of several state penitentiaries in West Texas; most are in East Texas. The TDCJ — the successor to the TDC (Texas Department of Corrections) — is headquartered in Huntsville.

In 1989, more than 40,000 men and women prisoners were confined to Texas prisons. By 1993, when the Lamesa unit and other new units are operational, the system's capacity will be more than 65,000 inmates.

Currently, five units in West Texas are in the planning stages, under construction, or operational.

As for Lamesa winning the site for a prison unit, it wasn't just luck.

"We had several comments that they (the TDCJ) were proud we didn't have a lobbyist, because lobbyists worry them to death."

Besides, noted Nichols, not hiring outside help saved Lamesa $50,000, which went into the proposal. Dawson County purchased 240 acres for $200,000. And in four weeks' time, the citizens raised $500,000 in donations from $25 to $20,000 to buy the remaining acreage needed for the prison.

"That tells you the people of Lamesa can work together," said Nichols.

Lamesa solicited the help of State Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, an attorney, who is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, an attorney, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"They backed us all the way," Nichols said. "Every time we testified in Austin, they testified for us."

"So, those two people write the checks," Nichols said. "They have a lot of clout. They demand a lot of respect down there. They went to bat for us."

Lamesa's winning attitude was reflected on a windy 1989 spring day when TDC board members and staffers made a bus tour of the proposed prison site and Lamesa, an agricultural community of about 11,700 people midway between Midland and Lubbock.

"When we came back into town and came by the courthouse square," recalled Nichols, "there were a thousand people or more on the square, applauding when they went by."

And across from the courthouse and the brick-lined streets were Lamesa cheerleaders doing their bit in promoting their town and impressing the prison officials.

"The cheerleaders had one of these great, big signs like you run through at a football game that said, 'Lock 'Em Up in Lamesa,'" Nichols said.

"The wind was blowing, and the cheerleaders were having a hard time, and it really impressed those people."

JUDGES: Drug cases up 130% since 1984

(From 1B)

In 1989, the district ranked second nationally in drug case filings, with 708. The Texas Southern District was first, with 1,662 cases, while a California judicial district was third with 576.

Overall, the Western District caseload was twice the national average.

No new federal judgeships have been created since 1984, and government officials say drug cases have increased about 130 percent since then.

In October, Congress voted to add 11 federal judges in Texas, bringing the total to 47. The judicial bill provides one judge for the Tyler-based Eastern District, two for the Dallas-based Northern District, five for the Houston-based Southern District, and three for the Western District.

Bunton said one of the Western District's new judges will be based in El Paso, which now has one full-time judge. The other two probably will go to Austin, which has one, and San Antonio, which has three.

Once the new judges are installed, Bunton said he will be able to spend more time trying cases in Midland and Pecos.

"It'll mean that I won't have to go out there (to El Paso) one week every month," he said, adding that the new judgeships will allow more criminal cases to be tried while speeding up civil litigation.

"Some cases that the U.S. Attorney has had to refuse, he can now accept and they can be tried," Bunton said.

Ron Ederer, U.S. attorney for the Western District, said from San Antonio this week that his office has not dropped cases because of overcrowded federal criminal dockets.

He said his office, which now employs 70 assistant attorneys, will add 18 more within the next six months. So prosecution is not in danger of falling behind judges' ability to hear criminal cases, he said.

Ederer added that more and more court time is being devoted to criminal prosecution of bank and savings and loan fraud schemes. This trend, he said, makes the addition of the new judges especially welcome.

"In the financial institution fraud area, those cases are very complicated and it does take a considerable period of time to develop and try those cases," he said. "You put a federal judge in one of those cases and we lose him for a month."

Bunton said speeding up the process of civil cases will mean less expense and inconvenience for civil litigants. And advantages should accrue to parties involved in criminal cases as well.

"It works to the government's advantage to get the case heard as quickly as you can after indictment — witnesses don't leave and forget," Bunton said. "It's also a whole lot better if you're in custody. If I were in custody, I would think that I'd want my trial to come up quickly."

A speedy trial is mandated by federal law, which requires that defendants be tried within 120 days of their arrest. Ederer said that law has forced some courts to relegate civil cases to the judicial back burner.

"El Paso's civil docket has been stagnant for a long time," he said.

Rodney Satterwhite, a Midland trial attorney, credited Bunton's hard work for the fact that the U.S. District Courts in Midland and Pecos, where Bunton spends most of his time, do not have a civil backlog.

"In Midland, Judge Bunton moves his criminal cases and his civil docket expeditiously. There is no problem getting a speedy trial in the Western District Midland-Odessa and Pecos division," he said.

HONOR: Park called an asset to community needs of the community," Davidson said. "When we got news of the award I was very excited," he said.

(From 1B)

Davidson thinks the park was chosen not just because it is unique but for reflecting a community that cares.

Saturday's award was not the first recognition for the park. It received a similar award in June from the Texas Association for Retarded Citizen.

The Chris Davidson Opportunity Park, which opened May 21, 1989, is on a four-acre plot of land.

Facilities — all of which are accessible to handicapped and non-handicapped individuals — include swings, a physical fitness quadrant, ramps and turrets, a gazebo and picnic tables.

Funding for park construction, about half a million dollars, came primarily from local contributions.

Davidson had the idea for the park in 1987 while taking a stroll in a Dallas park for the handicapped as his son, Chris, was receiving treatment at a nearby hospital. Davidson carried that vision back to Midland.

"It was a coming together of a bunch of folks who said, 'Hey we need to do this'," Davidson said.

Originally the park was to be named Opportunity Park, but MARC directors passed a resolution in February of 1989 to rename the park after Chris, who had died about two weeks earlier. The young boy, who died of viral pneumonia, had muscular dystrophy.

The park "was never intended to be a monument for him but a tool of understanding," Davidson said.

Blaze blamed on welder's torch

DEATHS

T.C. 'Bub' Miles

Graveside services for T.C. "Bub" Miles, 70, of Midland are set for 2 p.m. Monday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Cecil Maxey, associate minister at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died suddenly Friday in Glasscock County while tending his horses.

Born Oct. 4, 1920, in Arkansas, he came to Midland as a child with his parents and attended school here. He graduated from Midland High School and served in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II, being stationed in Casper, Wyo.

After his honorable discharge, he continued his father's farming and ranching business. He had been involved in farming and ranching for more than 60 years. In the 1930s, his father, along with Earl Ray, built an early livestock trucking business, which he helped work.

Miles was a livestock trader, farmer and horseman.

He also was a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include: one son, Bob Miles of Midland, and two grandchildren.

Ann T. Embry

QUANAH — Services for Ann Thurston Embry, 85, sister of a Midland man, are set for 2 p.m. today at Trinity Episcopal Church in Quanah with the Rev. Steven Hackley of Vernon officiating. Burial follow in Quanah Memorial Park under the direction of Quanah Funeral Home.

Mrs. Embry died Friday in a Chillicothe hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born June 24, 1905, at Wolfe City. She moved to Quanah in 1914.

She married Marvin Embry on Nov. 8, 1942, in Quanah. He preceded her in death in 1983.

She was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, Eastern Star, the Quanah Hospital Auxiliary and Sigma Phi teachers' sorority. A homemaker, she also taught school for 49 years.

Survivors include one brother, Paul J. Thurston of Midland.

Jonathan P. Gordon

Services for Jonathan Phillip Gordon, 14-month-old son of David and Lori Gordon, are set for 1 p.m. Monday at Crestview Baptist Church with Roy Martin, chaplain at Cook Fort Worth Children's Medical Center, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born Aug. 29, 1989, in Midland. He died Thursday in Fort Worth.

Survivors include his parents of Midland; his grandparents, Paul and Carolyn Bohnsac of Willard, Mo., and Loyd and Bernadean Medlin of Tuscambia, Ala.; one brother, Ashley Gordon of Midland; and two step-sisters, Natasha and Nakie Gordon of Fayetteville, N.C.

Selwyn S. Smith

Services for Selwyn S. Smith of Iraan are pending with Crowley Funeral Home in Gilmer.

He died Saturday at a local hospital.

Local arrangements were by Ellis Funeral Home.

the U.S.," he noted. "Here the reaction is not to encourage more drilling. We are still more concerned about securing our Middle East supplies than increasing domestic production. We are told not to drill for more oil in the U.S. but to use windmills and solar panels. We have been down that road three times before."

On the subject of supply and demand, Parker noted the oil system — tankers, refineries and storage facilities — is full.

"There is no place to put any more oil." He also noted that demand for oil and gas was higher than ever.

The Tulsa oilman said attitudes have changed since the invasion. "Our company received bids to drill five 30,000-foot gas wells just last week; that is more deep-well bids than we have seen in the last five years."

"It is beginning to happen in the oil industry, and with the elections over I think you will see more energy direction in the months to come. I think both parties will move to provide oil incentives."

Two Distinct Entities Working Together Under the Laws of Texas and Humanity.

Midland County Hospital District

Texas law requires that no one will be denied healthcare regardless of ability to pay. Those who can't pay and who are residents of Midland County are called indigents and their care is the responsibility of Midland County taxpayers when no other payment source can be found.

In 1977, Midland County voters chose to form a Hospital District and elect a Board of Directors to administer the costs of caring for indigents as well as for expanding the Hospital into a first class care facility capable of providing the quality of care we all desired.

Today, the District sets a tax rate that provides revenue based only on the projected cost of care for Midland County indigents - the great majority are emergency cases. That amount this year was $7.9 million.

To meet the projected costs, the Hospital District's elected Board sets an ad valorem tax rate for property owners.

Tax revenues are not used for salaries, real estate, facilities, equipment or maintenance. They are used only for indigent care and only after every effort has been made to find alternative source of payment.

The Hospital District Board consists of Directors who are elected from seven areas of the County. Each Director answers to his or her district's voters and ensures a voice in how tax rates are set and how the costs of providing care are controlled. That's the way government works.

Midland Memorial Hospital

Memorial Hospital provides a 24-hour emergency center for treatment of injuries and illness. Emergency doctors and nurses work under a simple unwritten law (as well as a very clear Texas law): "Treat first, ask questions later." We call that the law of humanity.

Our Hospital is "administered" by an appointed Board of Trustees who oversee how the Hospital's resources are allocated and protected. Trustees are Midlanders selected for financial and management expertise who serve without pay.

Revenues in a not-for-profit Hospital are re-invested into updating of equipment, expansion of facilities and services and in recruitment and retention of high quality healthcare professionals. By law, taxes can also be used for this purpose.

But, NO tax funds are used in the administration of our Hospital; they are not even available for use by management. When tax revenues are not sufficient to pay the total indigent care cost, the hospital makes up the difference. Last year, the amount we were required to take from hospital revenues was $2.7 million.
If tax revenue shortfalls are allowed to continue, the money will come from hospital operations - from funds for maintenance of equipment and facilities. New services won't be introduced, specialists won't be attracted or will leave, and sooner or later, the reserves of the Hospital will be depleted to the point where Midland will face a near disaster like the one our friends at Medical Center in Odessa narrowly avoided.

Even though distinctly different, the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors and the Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees work together to ensure all citizens of Midland County receive the highest quality, lowest cost healthcare and the lowest possible tax rate.
The laws which distinguish us are clear - state law tells us what we must do - humanity tells us what we have to do.

U.S. interests on line in gulf

President George Bush's decision to commit up to 150,000 more American troops to the Persian Gulf should send a message to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that he cannot simply hold onto Kuwait's oil supply.

That should already have dawned on the Iraqi leader due to the worldwide opposition his aggression generated.

Yet that is only part of what's at play in the Persian Gulf crisis. Although Bush hasn't said it publicly, it has been reported by the media in recent days that Hussein is close to acquiring nuclear capability. When he possesses the nuclear bomb, literally thousands of American lives will be in jeopardy.

Thus, Bush's decision to change the thrust of the U.S. deployment in Saudi Arabia from primarily defensive to defensive or offensive signals that a military action against Iraq could be in the offing.

While Bush would not confirm that the troops are to be used offensively, that obviously is a realistic option in light of reports that Iraq is close to acquiring nuclear bomb capability. There are strong grounds to believe Hussein might launch a nuclear bomb against one of his neighboring countries or the United States considering his past use of chemical weapons in Iraq's war with Iran during the 1980s as well as against Iraqi Kurds tribesmen.

The latest deployment could be the turning point in the confrontation, which began Aug. 2, since signs of dissension have been noted among Iraq's forces. Hussein has removed his army chief, a move which suggested dissent among the Iraqi troops.

If Hussein is to be stopped in his quest for control of the Mideast oil supply and convinced to pull out of Kuwait, Bush's move is necessary.

It will increase the number of American troops in the Persian Gulf to about 380,000. Hussein also has been bolstering his forces along the Saudi Arabian border and they now number more than 400,000.

Most Americans have an aversion to war compounded by past involvements. However, it was clear that Hussein would have to be stopped at some point by some nation strong enough to do the job.

The United States sent troops to Saudi Arabia originally to protect our national interests in the event that Hussein launched his forces against that nation. Were Iraq to control that much of the world oil supply, it could cripple all industrialized nations including the United States. Since then the showdown has become worldwide in scope, as many nations have lined up in opposition to Hussein's aggression.

Yet the overriding issue is protection of our own national interests and Bush has reasserted his commitment to that goal by indicating he will use force, if necessary, to oust Hussein.

Richard's position offers opportunity

AUSTIN — Gov.-elect Ann Richards strides into office with a historic opportunity to meld traditional Democratic "people politics" with the "common sense approach" Republicans say they represent.

Some may see her election victory this past Tuesday as a function of opponent Clayton Williams' rough-hewn edges, which parts of his natural constituency found distasteful.

Brown

The thousands of Republican women who defected to Richards are evidence this theory may hold water.

But it really only goes half way. These Republican ticket-splitters, who in most cases also cast ballots for the GOP senatorial incumbent, Phil Gramm, and other party nominees, were actively able to find a place in their political point of view for Democrat Richards.

They didn't not vote for governor; they took a stand.

The result was a Richards victory in the traditional Republican stronghold of Dallas County and a Richards majority in every major Texas city — a feat not accomplished by a Democrat since former Gov. Dolph Briscoe's 1974 campaign.

Williams didn't let Richards off scot-free in what many called the dirtiest campaign in the nation. He tried hard to pin her down as a liberal, hang an income tax around her neck and paint his own image in terms of "family values."

It worked for other Republicans in other races.

But the majority that Richards ultimately molded siphoned off voters that usually find an attraction in the traditional Republican appeal.

As a result, her coalition leans more toward the middle than those of other Democrats who have roots in the party's liberal tradition.

Will she move to the center with these new-found friends, or attempt to draw them to the left?

Will they feel comfortable enough to stick around merely because of Richards' pro-abortion stance, which many support, and "the daughter factor," the feeling of pride women have in pointing to Richards' accomplishments as an example to their daughters.

Will there be a place for these conservative-to-moderates in the group Richards is calling to Austin Jan. 15, her inauguration day, for a march down Congress Ave. to "take back the Capitol?"

Who knows? It's much too early for these kinds of questions, anyway.

"I don't think that far ahead," Richards herself said when asked if she would run for re-election in four years.

The more immediate problems are in the Legislature, which begins its next regular session on Jan. 8. Money, as per usual, is the central issue.

Richards says economic growth should provide $3 billion by the time Comptroller-elect John Sharp certifies state revenues, but other Democrats, including the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, foresee no such positive trend.

JACK ANDERSON

Soviet republics work for autonomy

WASHINGTON — Suppose the large Hispanic population in the American Southwest decided it was time to form a nation of its own. The ethnic and linguistic ties to Latin America are strong, and everyone knows that the Sun Belt is the spoils of war ceded to the United States by Mexico in the last century. If Hispanics wanted autonomy, would other Americans let them go and take Los Angeles, Phoenix and Houston with them?

Anderson

Not a chance. The South tried that once before and the lesson of the Civil War is that nobody secedes from the United States without a fight.

Yet what Americans find unthinkable at home, they are cheering in the Soviet Union. Many in the West are lauding the secessionist rumblings in the Soviet republics as a red-white-and-blue display of democracy. A spate of independence movements is unraveling what remains of the socialist monolith, and Americans couldn't be more pleased. Every nationalist declaration by the republics is greeted by a round of "I told you so" from the United States. The uprisings are belated justice — a confirmation that the oppressive system was a mistake from the start.

Nikita Khruschev vowed that the current generation of Americans would be communists. He pounded his shoe on the table and said he would bury us. And now Americans can't wait to throw the last shovel of dirt on the Soviet Union.

It is not popular to call for moderation when ethnic pride and long-suppressed nationalism are sweeping among the people who are Soviets through no choice of their own. The international right to self-determination is sacrosanct. It has even more appeal when its target is a waning, totalitarian empire.

But not every sign of failure in communism is necessarily a step toward democracy as practiced in the West.

There are politically and economically sophisticated societies such as the three Baltic states that have proved they can stand alone. Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia got along fine without Soviet help before Stalin swallowed them up during World War II. As they hammer out the terms of their independence from Moscow, it looks like they will be able to avert violence and make it on their own.

But the other republics are a crap shoot. The separatist agenda meanders through countries and cultures where there is little experience with independence and probably little idea of what it means. The republics have an understandable zeal to break away. But too often it is accompanied by no political, economic or strategic logic. It is no wonder that Moscow is scrambling to get its nuclear warheads out of those hot spots.

Americans should be more alarmed than pleased when they see nationalist sentiments welling up among the Moslem republics. Cut free from the USSR with no plan for self-governance, they are ripe for the picking by their fundamentalist neighbors in the Persian Gulf.

Examples of the chaos that results from such nationalism abound within the Eastern Bloc, but the best illustration is Yugoslavia. The dizzying array of religious and ethnic groups are eternally at odds. The infighting obscures poverty and instability. All the Yugoslavians have gotten for their fractured ethnic pride is bloodshed.

Would Americans say that all the Eastern Bloc ethnic groups have the right to their own country? That argument cloaks separatism in the fancy garb of democracy, when its underpinnings are really more mundane.

The challenge is to overcome the popular urge to settle past grudges. In a part of the world where economies are in shambles and political pluralism is in its infancy, independence isn't always the answer. Too often it is merely an attempt to run away from those troubles.

RUSSELL BAKER

Worried, angry people hardly noticeable

Press and television keep telling us we are worried and angry. Press and television have a vested interest in having people worried and angry, so it's only natural they may have persuaded themselves that the situation is parlous.

Baker

Yet today, unless all the political wizards are as fraudulent as the Wizard of Oz, we worried and angry people will re-elect practically every officeholder in sight. Not because we really want to, mind you.

No, the wizards say we shall re-elect them en masse because they have all the money needed to buy television commercials which extol them, while the unelected do not. In short, Americans are such suckers for TV commercials that we are powerless to resist the product that hits us with the mostest. Does this sound like a people who are angry and worried? Sounds like a store full of contented customers to me.

The media say it's the tax business that has everybody angry: President Bush having to eat his famous "lips" campaign pledge, and so on. This is the kind of event to which press and TV naturally give bloated significance: President Backs Down on Campaign Promise. That's because the media find campaign promises more interesting than most people do.

And that's because covering politics is easier and more fun than covering most of the other important business centered in Washington. Keeping tabs on politicians' campaign promises is an easy way of keeping score. When "President Breaks Campaign Promise" can be followed by "Voters Worried and Angry," you have the makings of a good story, which means the media have work for another week.

"Sure, but I really am sore about taxes," you say, "and I'm not going to take it anymore." Of course. Everybody hates taxes, but everybody with any sense also knows, as the poets have mournfully sung, that they are as inevitable as death. People are always angry about taxes. Always will be. Yet they go on tirelessly re-electing the wretched politicians who enact them.

What is remarkable right now is how unworried people are, how comfortable they are with the old political order. Consider a few matters that a truly worried people would be worrying about. For instance, what about our slavish national habit of voting for the candidate who batters us hardest with commercials?

If the present habit continues we may soon stop calling them "elections," as in "Who do you think will win the elections?" and start calling them "commercials," as in, "Who's going to win the commercials?"

A truly worried people would be demanding reform of our corrupted election process, but they are not. There might at least be a slogan campaign, as with the so-called war on drugs. Imagine millions of "Just Say No" bumper stickers warning us to tune out when political commercials are offered.

Here's something else that ought to worry everybody sick. It's the breakup of the Soviet Union, which seems to be splitting into dozens of little nationalistic groups. Every day there's a new breakaway. Last week, Russian nationalists and Romanian nationalists were fighting about the future of Moldavia.

This sort of thing is relentlessly praised by everybody who will never believe the Soviet Union is finished until he sees a stake driven through the heart of Lenin's tomb. Yet the Soviet Union is a country with thousands of atomic bombs. Where are those bombs?

Who will be in charge of them after the glorious breakup? Will they fall under control of some Russian version of Saddam Hussein? Or will they be parceled out among small nations created by a Soviet breakup: 100 H-bombs for Moldavia, 150 for Armenia, 300 for Lithuania ... ?

It's mighty agreeable out there among the worried and angry.

Democrats to oversee much of redistricting

In 1992, the big three (California, Texas, Florida) will elect 105 members of Congress, almost one-quarter of the House. California will have the highest percentage of the House (12 percent) of any state since New York in the 1860s (13 percent). On Tuesday, two of the three — Florida and Texas — replaced Republican governors with Democrats who will supervise redistricting of just over half — 53 — of the 105 seats.

Will

The eight largest states (California, New York, Texas, Florida, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan) all elected governors, half of them (as this is written) Democrats. By 1992, these states will have redrawn the lines on 212 congressional districts. Democrats will oversee the drawing of 105 of them. Of the eight most rapidly growing states — those gaining seats in 1992 (California, Florida, Texas, Arizona, Georgia, North Carolina, Virginia, Washington) —five or six (Arizona is a cliffhanger) will have Democratic governors during the 1991 redistricting.

Democrats are even better positioned to dominate redistricting than they were in 1981. So the "struggle" for control of the House in the 1990s appears over already. The year 2002 probably will be the 48th consecutive year of Democratic control of the House.

This political season was supposed to be convulsive. But by the end of the primary season, the score was 459-1 in favor of incumbents. Of 460 governors, senators and representatives seeking reelection, just one lost a primary — and only after being convicted of a sex crime.

Four senators (a modern record) and 74 House members ran completely unopposed and about 300 additional House members were effectively unopposed (facing underfinanced opponents). So it was clear months ago that the congressional lagoon was not going to be roiled.

In the last 10 elections (1970-1988), an average of five incumbent senators have lost. On Tuesday, only one did. And Democrats gained a Senate seat.

Regarding the Senate, Republicans are looking to 1992, when Democrats will be defending 20 seats, including eight that were won in 1986 by 52 percent of the vote or less. But for now, Bush has a problem that was bad before Tuesday and now is worse.

In Bush's first two years, the Senate has been divided 55-45 and has been truculent. (Ask John Tower. Remember the budget.) The Senate now will be divided 56-44 and facing a weakened Bush entering a presidential election season. One additional Democrat and increased partisanship will make Bush's life substantially more difficult.

Evidence of Republican decay is everywhere. In New York, the GOP gubernatorial candidate barely beat the Conservative Party candidate, receiving a derisory 22 percent of the vote. In Pennsylvania, the GOP gubernatorial candidate was buried by 36 points. In that swath of America from the Hudson to the Ohio border, the GOP did not even compete for executive power.

The Republican claim to be an irresistibly emerging majority was by Wednesday morning mere wreckage. Tuesday's results were not a referendum on President Bush, but they were to a significant extent a result of him.

The Republican Party's ideological profile has been blurred by Bush who, in his first month as President, said "the people didn't send us here to bicker." Actually, the people express themselves through two parties because they have differences worth arguing about.

MMH screens all indigent patients

A recent letter written by Marge Merckle, who is actively involved in a group for concerned taxpayers (Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse), made statements that are not only erroneous, but misleading.

Merckle was employed by Midland Memorial Hospital (MMH) as a financial assistant coordinator. As collection manager of MMH, I am ultimately responsible for the screening and approval of all applications submitted by patients seeking financial assistance through hospital district funds (our tax dollars).

Merckle stated in her letter that "there are ways to reduce the cost of indigent care, but that doesn't seem to be what management at MMH wants." I am a manager at MMH, a concerned homeowner who pays taxes, and I can assure you that I do care.

The economy in our area, as we are all aware, has drastically declined the past few years which, in turn, has affected the income of many Midland County residents. The severity of our economy landed right in my own home when my husband, a geologist of 15 years, watched his salary decline from $100,000 per year to $6.50 an hour! Regardless of our income, we still had three teen-age sons to support and a home to maintain.

I think many Midland taxpayers have the erroneous impression that all of our "indigent" patients are individuals who have no desire to work and are looking for a "free ride." Many of these folks are hard-working, honest people who just happen to be sick, unemployed, have no insurance, and have also paid taxes in Midland County all their lives.

I can assure all the citizens of Midland County that a very precise and careful screening process is in place at MMH for qualifying patients.

My husband is again gainfully employed in his field after several years of struggling with the decline of an energy-related economy. A tax rollback would be a costly process directly paid by the taxpayers. I, too, am very proud of our hospital and would like to see Midland stand together in support of a facility that cares for patients, regardless of their ability to pay — which, in many cases, is due to circumstances beyond their control.

Thank you for hearing the other side of the story — from a MMH manager and Midland County taxpayer.

Don't blame lawyers for Permian dispute

To many persons not associated with Permian High School football, it is easy to condemn the attempts by the Permian coaches to file suit and pursue their claims. At least two different governing bodies have concluded that violations of the rules occurred and Permian High School, its coaches and, unfortunately, its players therefore must be punished under the existing UIL rules. However, Permian coaches have every right to hire attorneys to seek to rectify wrongs which they feel have taken place.

In Bill Price's comments contained in the article entitled "Perry Mason enters the sporting world," published on Nov. 1, Price seems to blame the entire situation on the attorneys involved as opposed to those persons hiring the attorneys. The attorneys involved are doing their job by being advocates for the Permian coaches. In any lawsuit, the opinions expressed by the attorney in court may or may not be the personal view of that attorney.

Attorneys do not create the disputes that lead to lawsuits. The Permian attorneys were not involved when the Permian coaches apparently chose to violate the rules. Price should not blame the attorneys involved; he should blame the persons hiring the attorneys if he must blame someone for the involvement of the court system in the dispute.

In the concluding paragraph of Price's column, he repeats the famous quote of one of Shakespeare's characters stating, "The first thing we do? Kill all the lawyers." If Price would read the play and the context of the statement, he would find that it was made by unscrupulous men wanting unbridled power to control the government, and therefore the people.

William Shakespeare obviously understood the danger to a society of such actions. In any society where attorneys are not a powerful lobbying force for the people, government can rule absolutely without regard to the rights of its citizens.

To kill all the lawyers would certainly mean the eventual elimination of the free press and of all written dissent. But, come to think of it, that might not be all that bad because we readers would not then be subjected to Price's inane comments.

Community decides standards of decency

In response to the letter from Nancy L. Hart (Letters, Oct. 28), nobody can tell a person what to see or read, but the community and Supreme Court have already made the decision as to what commercial spectacles and literature cannot be sold or distributed to you — if you choose to live in that community.

The community sets up standards for itself, and has a right to legislate to protect those standards. Nobody is imposing their morality on anybody. It is only the consensus of the community that determines the standards of public decency. When that consensus is properly manifested in public law, that is community or public morality — not "ours."

Private morals are private; however, your privacy rights do not extend to the marketplace. Public morals are the business of the entire community, and officers are empowered by the community to defend the welfare of the community against the willful minority.

Commercial obscenity is public business. It is public morality that obscenity laws are designed to safeguard, not private morality.

To say that there should be no law regulating pornography is to say there are no victims of pornography. A glaring instance of victimization in obscenity are the children used in child pornography.

We also would like to have a choice and make our own decision as to where we spend our money. To do this we have to be aware of who does not profit from pornography.

We'll spend ours with the ones who do not.

Planned Parenthood deserves respect

In response, not only to Daniel Ball's letter on Planned Parenthood of West Texas, but to various misconceptions about that agency, I would like to offer the following facts.

Planned Parenthood is the largest cancer screening agency in the United States and the only health care source available for many poverty level women.

Planned Parenthood offers family planning and sexuality education, birth control services and provision.

Planned Parenthood does not advocate abortion as a birth control method; this is not responsible reproduction.

Planned Parenthood does not promote sex among teens. The best decision for a teen is to practice abstinence, since teens are neither emotionally nor physically ready for the responsibilities of a sexual relationship.

They need the education which allows them to make informed decisions about sexuality and Planned Parenthood provides this education. Teen clients are offered all of the same confidential services available to all other clients.

Planned Parenthood does not encourage women to have abortions. Upon her request, a client with an unwanted pregnancy is informed of all of her options — prenatal care if she intends to keep the baby, adoption and abortion. She is referred to the proper people or agencies to support her personal decision.

The mission of Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc. is to ensure that every child is a loved and wanted child.

Planned Parenthood is committed to the family and to children. In support of this commitment, prenatal care for poverty level women will begin in the summer of 1991 at five of our 10 clinic locations.

It has been my privilege to have been a client, volunteer, employee and past president of the Board of Directors of Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc. My statements are based on personal knowledge of the facts, not upon second-hand misinformation. It is a fine agency and an asset to the communities it serves; Planned Parenthood deserves the support and respect of those communities.

Readers' views on: Lee's Rebel flag

Flag represents bitter oppression

I write to voice my concern regarding the remarks of Dr. Baressi concerning the Rebel flag and its use at Lee High School. If no one has complained or voiced concern about the use of the flag as a school emblem, perhaps it is time someone did.

Appropriate education and instruction is aware of disenfranchising symbols which often hinder and alter the educational process. We believe the Rebel flag is such a symbol. Its presence in the public school system needs to be rethought and its continued use redefined with much more clarity. A culturally sensitive district and board, aware of the ethnic diversity of its students, would have no part of it.

The flag's presence and the school board's lack of concern over its use is a mystery. The flag represents divisiveness and oppression. The stars and bars cannot and do not stand for anything positive and affirming. Furthermore, it brings to mind the brutality and indifference of the institution of slavery which history records as one of the main reasons the South withdrew from the union.

It is wrong to assume someone is being radical or overly sensitive to demand that the flag be discontinued as a school symbol since slavery occurred so many years ago. The same disenfranchisement and antebellum South continues to plague minorities today. We do not need to be reminded of the oppression of the past. The flag is a bitter reminder of what once was and does not point toward the hope of what should be — "Liberty and justice for all." It is time to move forward.

It is ironic that many local citizens were irate because the Supreme Court ruled burning the American flag is a constitutional right, their rationale being the American flag is the symbol of freedom and democracy. Yet, it does not concern them that the Confederate flag, the antithesis of this great symbol, is freely waved and displayed in public schools.

The search for human dignity continues and we encourage the Midland Independent School District to do their part by stopping use of the Confederate flag — immediately!

Rev. Michael R. DeVaughn
Minister
St. Paul CME Church

Flag stands for LHS, not slavery

First let me go on record by saying that I am not a skinhead, not a member of the Ku Klux Klan, not a member of any right-wing splinter group, and I do not believe in slavery. I am, however, a member of the first graduating class of Robert E. Lee High School.

I find it hard to believe that supposedly educated people, like those on the school board, would mandate to the students of Lee High that they cannot display the Rebel flag at any school events.

Yes, I said the Rebel flag not the Confederate flag. We chose the Rebel flag as a symbol of our school and its students, not of the Confederacy and slavery. When people in West Texas see the Rebel flag they think of the tradition of Lee High School, not of slavery or the Confederacy.

It find it incomprehensible that the school board can look at it any other way. Many black athletes at Lee High School have proudly worn the Rebel flag as part of their uniforms, and their parents have waved the Rebel flag to show their support. They didn't have any problem with the flag. Why do you?

I personally believe there are far more pertinent matters that deserve their attention. Don't destroy 30 years of tradition with the swipe of a pen.

Readers' views on: Williams losing race

Oilman lacked dignity, class

Well, Permian Basin, we blew our chances of getting an oilman into the governor's mansion. I say "we" because we didn't "hog-tie and gag" Clayton Williams after his first major blunder of the mouth regarding rape.

Claytie kept preaching that he wasn't a politician, but it would have served him well if he had adopted a few basic rules of a politician, namely knowing when to speak and when to shut up. And how about the courtesy of a handshake to one's opponent. Was it the truth that hurt? Was it being able to dish it out but not being able to take it? Or was it pure and simple "once a hick, always a hick?" At least Ann Richards extended her hand to Clayton despite all his mudslinging at her.

Hey, oilpatch workers of Texas, if we ever get this chance again, let's find us an oilman with dignity and class. We totally forgot those attributes this time! We need better than a good ol' boy with a "foot-in-mouth" disease in Austin. Should we go for an "oilwoman," maybe?

I have never read a more defamatory letter in my life than the one written about Clayton Williams. If Jack Edwards' intent (Letters, Nov. 1) was to cut Clayton Williams down to his size, he failed miserably.

The one thing missing was a photo of Edwards so we could judge his looks as he did Claytie's. His actions speak for themselves. They remind us of an old, scared, barking dog.

Allies preparing to face nuclear bomb threat from Iraq

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — There are growing indications that an imperative reason why President Bush and our allies are preparing for war against Iraq within the next few months is the grave danger that Saddam Hussein may possess a nuclear bomb in the near future, perhaps by 1992, if not sooner.

Hearst

If the Franco-Soviet led peace efforts succeed in persuading the Iraqi tyrant to relinquish his brutal conquest of Kuwait before the end of winter, the most favorable time for battle, there will be no war. Hussein will be allowed to remain in power, and a tight embargo will be maintained to prevent Iraq from acquiring materials essential to completion of nuclear capability.

Hussein's defiance of the United Nations Security Council's demand that he disgorge Kuwait "unconditionally" may mean he is closer to possession of the bomb than Western intelligence knows, or will reveal. Western estimates of when Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin would have an atomic weapon were almost 10 years off target.

Startling evidence is now coming to light that Hussein has been working on development of a nuclear weapon since the early 1980s. His geologists discovered uranium in a remote area of northern Iraq's Gara Mountains. In great secrecy, he launched a major mining operation. How it was discovered was related in the CBS "60 Minutes" program last Sunday.

The area was a Kurdish stronghold during the Iran-Iraq war when the Kurds were supporting Iran. Hussein wiped out most of the population with chemical weapons, but some guerrilla fighters escaped and Western intelligence learned something was going on. That led to satellite photography, presumably by the United States, but if so, it was kept top secret.

Ed Bradley, a top investigative reporter for "60 Minutes," said a British journalist, Gwyn Roberts, commissioned the Soviets to take satellite pictures of the mining area. The photos were taken to University College, London, where they were analyzed by state-of-the-art computer technology. They showed not only the mining excavation area but a network of roads approaching it.

Interviewed on the program by Bradley, a Kurdish guerrilla leader, Hoshar Zabari, now living in London, said the uranium mining operation has been going on since January 1989. Bradley also reported that Hussein has visited the area seven or eight times this year.

Last May, the Iraqi dictator claimed he had acquired a secret American electronic device that could be used to detonate a nuclear bomb. Earlier in the year, British customs seized a consignment of U.S.-made nuclear triggering devices bound for Iraq. In July, the White House blocked shipment to Iraq of three advanced industrial furnaces that could be used for nuclear weapons development. U.S. and German companies have been selling nuclear weapons-related technology to Iraq for some time.

Last Monday, William Safire, the outstanding New York Times Washington columnist, reported that a terrifying explosion ripped apart a munitions plant in Al Qaqaa, Iraq, in August 1989. He said an British journalist, Farzad Bazoft, disguised himself as a medical technician and went to take a look. He was caught and hanged. It is believed materials for rapid detonation of nuclear explosives were being produced in Al Qaqaa.

Safire also reported that Iraq is developing a missile with a 1,200-mile range that may have nuclear delivery potential throughout the Middle East and even to London and Paris.

"That is the clear and present danger the world faces," the well-informed journalist added. "We are not confronting this aggression to save the oil flow, or to protect allies, or to reassert our leadership, or even primarily to establish the noble principle of collective security that would have averted World War II. We are dealing here with our own survival. As soon as Iraq gets the bomb and the missile, millions of American lives are in peril. Those are the stakes. And for all we know, it may be two minutes to midnight."

No wonder President Bush is warning the country we may have to resort to military action with or without U.N. approval. No wonder British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has been the president's staunchest supporter in the Iraq crisis, told the opening session of Parliament Wednesday that "time is running out" for Hussein to give up his conquest of Kuwait. "Either he gets out of Kuwait soon or we and our allies will remove him by force and he will go down to defeat with all the consequences." No wonder Syrian President Hafez Assad is rushing more troops to Saudi Arabia and his Damascus press has declared that "a military solution is necessary." No wonder British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd warned a few days ago, "Time is ticking on."

Those who oppose military action against Hussein because they fear heavy casualties and destruction of the oil wells should give some thought to how much greater would be the casualties and destruction if Hussein gets a nuclear weapon before we get him.

EDUCATION

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Registration for spring semester begins Monday

By H.A. Tuck

Registration for the 1991 Spring Semester begins Monday for slightly less than three weeks. This registration is mainly for current students, plus those who are TASP-exempt.

Tuck

Current students have received letters informing them of the process to register by telephone, along with a special number to call. Those who wish to register in person should come to the Student Services area. This includes first-time freshmen students with TASP or Pre-Tasp Test scores, and transfer students with transcripts.

Students registering in person should come in the following alphabetical order: those with last names beginning with F through L on Monday, Nov. 12; A-E on Tuesday, Nov. 13; S-Z on Wednesday, Nov. 14; M-R on Thursday, Nov. 15; and F-L on Friday, Nov. 16. Hours are 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. each day.

On Nov. 19, it will be time for A-E again, with S-Z on Nov. 20. There won't be any registration on Nov. 21-23. The schedule the following week will be: M-R on Nov. 26, F-L on Nov. 27; A-E, Nov. 28; S-Z, Nov. 29; and M-R, Nov. 30.

If you register during this period, you will select classes, complete your schedule and pay your fees. That assures your place in each class. Those registering by phone must pay by mail or in person, with payment to be received by the Business Office within five working days to assure that registration is complete.

Regular registration will be held only on Wednesday, Jan. 9, with classes beginning Jan. 14.

Students receiving scholarships or financial aid must register in person, as do those who are not TASP-exempt.

If you have questions, call 685-4501.

"Matrix" is a show loaned to the college by the Lubbock Fine Arts Center. In June 1989, a number of Lubbock youngsters came to the LFAC for photo instruction, briefings on cultural groups in the South Plains, and history of the area. The students photographed their neighborhoods and homes, then made prints, and wrote about their feelings.

I can almost guarantee this show will bring tears to your eyes, plus a reaffirmation in the goodness of young people.

Also on display is "Convention Architecture", a most unconventional exhibit of recent student work in architecture as well as interior design, computer aided drafting and design, technical drawing, recent submittals to the West Texas Chapter of American Institute of Architecture, and the furniture designs of MC student Paul Zubiate.

This display is wonderful for its scope, skill, and imagination.

You may see these shows without charge in McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, through Nov. 21. Hours are 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday.

After four games at home last week, the Chaparral basketball team begins two weeks on the road for classics. They'll play Nov. 15-17 at the South Plains College McDonald's Classic in Levelland. Their opponents will be Garden City, Kansas, on Thursday; Trinidad, Colorado, on Friday; and Cisco Junior College on Saturday. All the Chaparral games are at 4 p.m.

Midland saw more of Cisco last week than they wanted, losing to the Wranglers 82-81 in the season opener. And the Chaps are scheduled to play Garden City again Nov. 22 on the opening night of the Cowboy Capital Classic in Dodge City, Kan.

The team returns to Midland for a two-night "Meeting of Champions" on Nov. 30-Dec. 1, which will have Odessa and Midland playing Dixie College of St. George, Utah, and San Jacinto College of Pasadena, in a dream doubleheader. Conference action begins Dec. 3 at home against New Mexico Military Institute.

Fall golf action ends for the nation's No. 2 ranked Chaparrals this weekend at the University of West Florida Invitational Nov. 17-18. This is a tournament where the Chaparrals have done well in the past.

Right now the Chaparrals hold their highest national ranking ever.

We must comment again on the Open House last Sunday for the expanded and renovated Student Center. The turnout was wonderful and all the comments seemed to be most complimentary. But we realize that numerous folks didn't get to see the building. If you'd like a guided tour, give a call to the Public Relations office, 685-4528, or the Student Activities office, 685-4544, and it will be arranged.

The list is short, but interesting, for classes starting this week through the Continuing Education Department. You can take a one-night course on Wednesday from 7-9 p.m. on Christmas Candy Making for just $5 or begin a four-week class on Oil Painting that meets on Thursdays from 6:30-9 p.m. for $21.

Coming up Nov. 19 is a two-week class on how to make a Christmas Gingerbread House, which meets on Mondays, followed on Dec. 8 with a Saturday morning class, 9 a.m-12 noon, on how to handle Christmas With Kids.

A class for would-be Real Estate Inspectors on Electricity is scheduled Saturday (8 a.m.-5 p.m.) and Sunday, (8 a.m.-4 p.m.) for $31.

If that doesn't suit you, take the final class in the Small Business Workshop series on "Income Tax."

It meets in Room 104, Occupational-Technical Building, on Thursday from 7-8:30 p.m. The cost is just $5 per person and may be paid at the door.

Call 685-4518 for information about all the classes except the Small Business Seminar. Information about that one is available through 685-4657.

WARNING

WARNING GAS PIPELINE

American Pipeline Company and its subsidiary, Westar Transmission Company, place warning signs similar to these in areas where our natural gas pipelines are located.

Our pipelines are safe and we keep them that way by designing, installing and operating our pipelines to exacting standards.

If natural gas pipelines are damaged, people may be injured, property destroyed or energy supplies lost. Therefore, American Pipeline conducts an ongoing surveillance program to detect factors which might threaten safe pipeline operations. We also conduct a damage prevention program to inform the public of the importance of using safety measures when digging or excavating near natural gas pipelines.

If you are planning to dig or excavate in an area, remember to look for warning sighs indicating natural gas pipelines. If you see an American Pipeline or Westar Transmission marker, call us at our toll free number, 1-800-562-5879, before you begin working. We will send a company representative to mark the location of the pipeline.

Natural gas cannot be seen and normally cannot be smelled, but gas leaks may still be detected. Any one of the following is among the common indications of a gas leak:

- Dust blowing from a hole in the ground
- Continuous bubbling in one spot in wet or flooded areas
- A gaseous or hydrocarbon odor

If you suspect a natural gas leak in an area where American Pipeline or Westar Transmission markers are located, immediately leave the area and call us at our toll free number, 1-800-562-5879.

Bill Maurer, principal of Santa Rita Elementary; Jimmie Kelly, principal of Midland High Schoo; and Karen Wentworth, instructional services director of Midland High School, have been selected to participate in the 1990 training update of the Texas Academy for Effective Schools Leadership.

The academy is a component of the Texas School Improvement Initiative (TSII) Program established in 1988 by Commissioner of Education Bill Kirby. TSII aims to promote high performance standards of educational quality at campus and district levels.

Beginning participants receive intensive training in effective schools research, school improvement strategies, management techniques, and current educational legislative changes.

Peer evaluation and training is an integral part of the multiple-year program. As returning participants, Maurer, Kelly and Wentworth receive comprehensive training preparing them for roles as supplementary accreditation team members. Accreditation teams inspect districts to monitor compliance with TEA standards and regulations for public school operations.

National Children's Book Week is scheduled for Nov. 12-16.

To celebrate the event, students at Bowie Elementary have planned a special parade. Third-graders will build mini-floats and sandwich boards to illustrate their favorite story or book.

The parade will begin at 1:30 p.m., Friday, Nov. 16, on the school grounds.

Entries will be judged on theme interpretation, originality, creative use of materials, and overall appearance. Trophies and certificates will be awarded.

Nov. 11-17 has been designated National Geography Week by Congress. To celebrate, the Honors Geography class at Midland High School will produce the "Morning Announcements."

The regularly scheduled Lamar PTA meeting will have a special feature, a Thanksgiving program presented by the school's second graders.

This entertainment will follow a short business meeting, beginning at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, in the school cafeteria, 3200 Kessler.

COME CELEBRATE OUR NEW LOOK!

Now your favorite Denny's is looking better than ever.
We've added a few new touches here. And made a couple of changes there. All to make your dining experience that much more enjoyable.
But some things haven't changed.
Our service is just as warm and courteous as ever. And you'll find we still have the same great menu.
Whether you're an early bird or a night owl, you'll be pleased to know that we still serve breakfast, lunch or dinner—morning, noon or night. 24 hours a day.
So come in to Denny's and see what we've done to the place. And help us celebrate our new look.

Permian Basin Food Bank seeks Hunters for Hungry

The Permian Basin Food Bank wishes to remind hunters of its Hunters for the Hungry program, in which hunters can donate deer killed this season to the needy.

The statewide Hunters for the Hungry program is sanctioned by the Texas Department of Agriculture, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Department of Health.

Hunters are asked to donate a kill to an approved meat processing plant, which for a tax-deductible $15 fee will package the venison and give it to the food bank for distribution to charitable organizations.

Participating processors include Carl's Beef and Game Processing, 2101 E. 9th St. in Odessa; Clark's Wholesale Meats, 2101 E. Highway 80 in Midland; and Troy's House of Meats, 2703 W. Cuthbert in Midland.

For more information, call Dolly Neff, Permian Basin Food Bank executive director, at 687-3663 in Midland or 337-6333 in Odessa.

Gas. It's A Natural For Economy.

When it comes to heating your home or business, cooking your food or heating water, nothing does it better or more economically than natural gas.

Heating with gas costs less, by far, than electric heat. Gas also out-performs electric heat pumps. As it gets colder, heat pumps become less and less efficient. But, whatever the weather, the air flowing from gas heat is as much as 30 degrees warmer than heat pump air.

Water heaters using natural gas far out-perform electric water heaters. On average, a gas water heater can save hundreds of dollars in energy costs over five years. And, gas heats water much faster than electricity.

Looking to the future, gas may play a significant role in vehicular use. It is estimated that if only 10% of our vehicles were converted to natural gas in America, it could displace 700,000 barrels of foreign oil per day!

MC English professor nominated for statewide teaching award

Staff Report

Dr. Larry Griffin, instructor in English, has been selected as Midland College's nominee for consideration to receive a Piper Professor Award for 1991.

The Minnie Stevens Piper Foundation annually presents awards to 10 Texas college or university teachers for their exceptional performances.

The awards are based on dedication to the teaching profession, plus outstanding academic, scientific, and scholarly achievement. The 10 winners receive a certificate, gold commemorative pin, and a cash award of $2,500.

Griffin was named from seven nominees, one each from the seven instructional divisions of the college.

"All our division nominees are highly-qualified, highly-dedicated, as was reflected in the close vote of the faculty that resulted in Dr. Griffin's selection," said Jerry Preas, chairman of the Faculty Council.

Griffin earned his bachelor's of arts degree from Northeastern Oklahoma State University, and his master's of arts and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Oklahoma.

He has been a member of the Midland College faculty since 1981, having previously been assistant to the director of the University of Oklahoma English Department's Film Program and teaching assistant at the University of Oklahoma.

He has published several nonfiction articles, more than a dozen short fiction pieces, scores of poems, three short poetry books and one collection of short stories.

He also has presented readings, papers and lectures in several states and in England.

In addition to his membership in several academic societies, he is on the Board of Governors of the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and currently is a member of Leadership Midland.

Griffin was nominated through the Communications Studies Division.

Other nominees included: Dr. Julia Flaherty, instructor in history and government, Cultural Studies Division; Carmen Edwards, instructor in associate degree nursing, Health Studies Division; Dr. Carl Frailey, instructor in physical science, Scientific Studies Division; Robert Peetz, instructor in criminal justice, Technical Studies Division; Thomas Vannaman, instructor in business administration, Business Studies Division; and Kent Moss, instructor in photography, Fine Arts Division.

Cyclists from Netherlands blown over by local hospitality

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Gerald Lange and Chris Hazelhoff had never heard of Midland until a few days ago.

And because of the hospitality of residents, Lange, 27, and Ms. Hazelhoff, 26, will likely not forget it soon.

The two, from the town of Winschoten in the Netherlands, were temporarily delayed by bad weather in the Tall City Wednesday while on a cross-country bicycle trip.

Weathering the cold front that hit the region mid-week, the pair was coming off Interstate 20 toward Highway 80 when they came across a fellow biker, Gary Covington of Midland. They informed Covington they were en route to a campsite to spend the night and Covington welcomed the couple to stay at his home if the weather became unbearable.

After one day at the campsite, Lange and Ms. Hazelhoff took Covington up on the offer. While awaiting the rain and cold to blow over, the pair took Ms. Hazelhoff's bike to Peyton's Bikes shop. The couple were surprised when David Ham of the shop did needed work at no charge.

But it's not just Midlanders who have made a memorable impression on the two, but the people of the entire nation.

"The people have been very friendly," Ms. Hazelhoff said. "Every time we have a stop we meet people who ask us to stay."

Lange agreed, adding that he was pleasantly surprised to find open arms from Americans.

"They have been very good to us compared to what you think. From the media you get the idea people (in the United States) are very hard, but it's not like that," Lange said.

Besides a few motorists yelling out car windows, Lange and Ms. Hazelhoff haven't had any bad experiences on their journey.

The two — on their first trip to the United States — set out from New York Sept. 15 traveling through New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Lousiana before arriving in Texas.

What did they think of Texas?

"Big — I think we've spent the most time in Texas," Lange said.

"And it's not as flat as people say," Ms. Hazelhoff said.

And Midland?

"Midland is so spread out," Ms. Hazelhoff said.

"Suddenly you come to Midland and see the high buildings just go 'pop' in the air," Lange recalled about their arrival.

Overall, Lange and Ms. Hazelhoff said a few things about America stood out in comparison to their homeland.

"Big cars and road vans (motor homes) — they're so big and they take their cars with them," Lange said.

> 'Big — I think we've spent the most time in Texas.'
> — Gerald Lange, tourist from Netherlands

"Food is a big difference. You have a lot of fast food and see a lot of people eating in their cars," Lange observed.

"What also struck me was the amount of poor people in the big cities like New York and New Orleans. I found that quite shocking," Ms. Hazelhoff said.

The couple's adventures continue this weekend as they set out to El Paso, then eventually to San Franciso, where they will end their tour. There they will board a bus to New York and return to the Netherlands in early January.

When they first arrived in New York, Lange said they had not even planned to bike across the country.

Tenor, harpist perform at Pages and Prints

Harpist Troy Andra Rodden and tenor Michael Trost perform today from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Christmas Open House at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center.

Ms. Rodden, a free-lance harpist, is the former principal harpist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Ms. Rodden recently returned to Midland after studying a year in Milwaukee, Wis., with Danis Kelly of the Milwaukee Symphony and the Santa Fe Opera. She performed in concert at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, Odessa, earlier this season.

Trost, who sang the male leads in such Midland Community Theatre musicals as "The Sound of Music" and "Funny Girl" as well as acting in comedies like "Educating Rita" and "The Crate." He sings with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale and the MOS Pops Choir in addition to performing with Ms. Rodden.

The public is invited to hear them perform. No admission will be charged.

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Suns shattered the NBA record with 107 points in the first half and set several other records Saturday night, beating the winless Denver Nuggets 173-143 for Cotton Fitzsimmons' 700th NBA coaching victory.

Phoenix had a shot at becoming the first team to 200 points in a game, but cooled off in the second half and settled for tying the league record for points in a regulation game. The Suns matched the 173 points by Boston against Minneapolis in 1959.

Rebels face Plainview in bi-district

Prep Football

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's voyage into the Class 5A Small School football playoffs will begin against the Plainview Bulldogs at 8 p.m. Saturday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium on the Texas Tech campus.

This is the eighth consecutive year the Rebels have been playoff bound. Lee is 7-2 on the season while Plainview is 4-4-1. The two teams have met only once in playoff action and Lee took that contest 42-7 in 1984 at Jones Stadium.

Tickets for the bi-district contest will go on sale to the public at 8 a.m. Tuesday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office, located at the northeast end of Memorial Stadium. Tickets will be $4 for students and $6 for adults if purchased prior to game day. All tickets will be $7 at the gate at Jones Stadium.

Due to the size of Jones Stadium, all tickets will be sold as general admission. There will be no reserved seating.

Lee is the designated visiting team and Rebel fans will sit on the east side of Jones Stadium.

Lee will be the first District 4-5A team to compete in the University Interscholastic League's new Small School playoff. The Small School bracket will consist of 32 teams, meaning it will take five victories to win a state championship.

Lee ensured its playoff berth last week with a 14-0 win over Abilene High while Plainview got in Friday with a 19-0 win over Lubbock Monterey, winning for the first time at home this year.

Odessa High, who tied Lee for the 4-5A championship with a 5-1 loop record, and third place San Angelo will enter the Big School playoff, which consists of 64 teams with six victories needed to claim a title.

Entry into the Big School and Small School playoffs is determined on enrollment and not on how a team finished in district play. Lee has the smallest enrollment in the top four grades of the three teams that qualified for the playoffs in the district.

San Angelo will face District 3-5A champion Amarillo High at 8 p.m. Friday in Jones Stadium while OHS will meet Amarillo Palo Duro at 8 p.m. Friday at Lowrey Field in Lubbock.

OHS had to wait until Saturday afternoon to find out if the Bronchos would meet Lubbock Coronado or Palo Duro. Palo Duro upset Amarillo High, 28-22, to earn playoff entry.

The Lee-Plainview winner will advance to the Small School region playoff round against the winner of the El Paso Andress-El Paso Bel Air bi-district game. That contest will be played at 6:30 p.m. CST Friday in the Sun Bowl. It is interesting to note that one of Lee's losses was to Andress (10-3) in the opening game of the season. If Lee and Andress advance, Lee would have to go to El Paso for the region game since Andress played in Midland against Lee last year in the area playoffs.

Andress and Bel Air may be in the Small School division, but both won their respective district championships in El Paso.

The San Angelo-Amarillo High winner will advance to the Big School area round against the El Paso Irvin-El Paso Eastwood winner. Those two play a bi-district game at 10 a.m. CST Saturday in the Sun Bowl.

The OHS-Palo Duro bi-district winner will advance against the winner of the El Paso Coronado-El Paso Soccoro bi-district game, which is set for 10 p.m. CST Friday in the Sun Bowl.

Notre Dame nips hosts

Ricky Watters rushed for a career-high 174 yards and two touchdowns, including the go-ahead score with 5:30 left, and Rod Smith made a game-saving interception in the final minute as top-ranked Notre Dame rallied to beat No. 9 Tennessee 34-29 on Saturday.

Rocket Ismail appeared to clinch the victory with a 44-yard TD dash that gave the Irish a 34-23 lead with 3:33 left. But Tennessee nearly staged a miracle comeback before a frenzied crowd of 97,123, second-largest in Neyland Stadium history.

Andy Kelly's 23-yard TD pass to Alvin Harper with 1:44 remaining cut the lead to five points — the Volunteers missed a two-point conversion — and Tennessee's Carl Pickens then recovered on onside kick at his own 46. The Volunteers drove to the Notre Dame 20, but Smith picked off Kelly's pass on the goal line with 46 seconds left and returned it to the Irish 17, allowing Notre Dame to run out the clock.

Notre Dame (8-1), which barely avoided becoming the fifth No. 1 team to lose this season, probably will go to the Orange Bowl for a rematch against Colorado. Despite the loss, Tennessee (5-2-2) can still go to the Sugar Bowl if it beats Mississippi in a Southeastern Conference title showdown next week at Memphis.

■ Texas quarterback Peter Gardere spearheaded Texas' 45-24 romp over previously unbeaten Houston.

Associated Press

Quarterback Peter Gardere's passing set up six rushing touchdowns as No. 14 Texas, a slight underdog, defeated previously unbeaten and third-ranked Houston 45-24 Saturday in the Southwest Conference.

Houston's loss means for the first time since the 1936 season there are no undefeated, untied major college teams.

Texas, bidding for its first SWC football championship since 1983, extended its season record to 7-1 and 5-0 in the SWC, with three conference games remaining.

Officials had to clear thousands of UT fans — who were eager to celebrate — from the field with less than a half minute remaining in order to run off the final play.

Houston, the nation's No. 1 team in total offense, fell to 8-1, with two non-conference games left. But the Cougars are on NCAA probation for rules violations and are barred from bowl games after this season.

Gardere, who was injured in the Houston game last year when the Cougars won 47-9, had a career-high in passing yardage with 322, completing 20 of 28 with one interception.

He had at least key completion in each of Texas' touchdown drives as freshman Butch Hadnot hammered in from 5, 1 and 8 yards out.

Adrian Walker scored from the 2 and 1 in the first half, and Chris Samuels capped Texas' scoring with a 1-yard run on fourth down with 3:45 to go in the third quarter.

Houston, which scored 10 first half points, did not score again until 11:02 remained in the fourth quarter on Chuck Weatherspoon's 7-yard fourth-down run.

Klingler was only 10 for 34 after three quarters for 164 yards, and finished with only 22 of 52 for 297 yards

MC's Marlon Jefferson shoots over Jacksonville's Jerome Holmes as the Jaguars' John Strickland looks on.

Chaps hope overtime win builds character

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Character, heart, desire.

Three words that have been welcomed back to the Midland College basketball program with open arms this weekend as the Chaparrals closed out the three-day Chaparral Classic with an edge-of-your-seat, 93-92 overtime win over Jacksonville Saturday night.

The Chaps, along with Howard College, ended the Classic with three wins and no losses to share the mythical title. The Hawks defeated Murray State 122-88 Saturday to win their third game.

MC sophomore post Carroll Boudreaux plopped in a turn-around jump shot from the right side of the basket with 17 seconds in overtime to give the Chaps the one-point victory. The defensive effort that followed Boudreaux's basket was just as impressive and important as the go-ahead jumper, though.

The Jaguars returned quickly to their end of the court after MC took the one-point lead with just seconds remaining in OT. Forward Chris Dinkins put up a shot that missed. Two other follow shots went up and failed to find net before MC forward Charlie Craine put in an extra leg and tipped a third-follow up away from the basket. Craine and Jacksonville's James J. Canty chased the ball out of bounds as time expired.

"I worked hard throughout the tournament," said Craine, who along with Boudreaux and Eric Walker, was named to the All-Tournament team. "We've got a lot of guts. And we want to win."

Walker had his best game in his two years as a Chaparral, scoring 25 points and bringing in five rebounds before fouling out late in the fourth quarter.

"Coach Franklin is looking out for us," said point guard Malcolm Milam, who embraced Franklin after the game. "He recruited people who could play but who also have good

Bulldogs loaded, ready for run at playoffs

Outstanding sophomore, returning All-District star and several lettermen help MHS

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Could this be the year of the sophomore in Midland high school basketball?

Stephenson

Reportedly, two of the best first-year prep players to grace the hardcourt in Midland school history are dressed out this season.

Nicknamed "Goodtimes", Goodley is hailed by Bulldog head coach Jack Stephenson as one of the best athletes at Midland High School. A 6-4 forward, Goodley looks to step into a valuable role almost immediately after a year's experience on the freshmen squad.

"We're excited about his basketball future," Stephenson said. "He is one of the few who can participate and excel in several sports activities." Goodley is just coming off a starting defensive back position with the 5-4 Bulldog football crew.

By no means is Goodley the sole hope of the MHS squad which finished 21-12 overall, 9-3 and in third place in District 4-5A last season. MHS is looking forward to playoff experience this season after welcoming back six MHS lettermen. A seventh, Phillip Koss, averaged over 30 points a season last year for Midland Baptist and should be another to quickly step into a vital position with the Dogs.

One problem Stephenson foresees is the slow start the 'Dogs experienced in preseason practices.

"We aren't nearly as far along at this point as we were last year," he said. "I haven't had the opportunity to practice all my kids during third period every day."

The Bulldogs open the season Thursday night at Amarillo High. With the Sandies still in the football playoffs at that time, MHS could have an inherent advantage.

Stephenson said at this time it is "impossible" to name a starting lineup and hinted a repeat of his platooning technique he utilized to a certain extent last year.

"So many kids are pretty equal," he said. "I'd like for every kid to play.

"We can contend for the championship probably, if the coach can get the right kids on the floor at the right time."

Fifteen of the 18 Bulldogs on the roster are seniors. This would seem the ideal time for MHS to take avantage of, if nothing else, the age factor.

"Its a two-edged sword," said Stephenson of having so many seniors. "They know it's their last go-round and they want to play. If we can keep everybody healthy, passing (academically), getting along and on the floor, we've got a chance."

Bulldog strengths this campaign include quickness, size, and the return of All-District guard Rodrick Hickey.

"At 6-0, he does things others much taller cannot do. He plays the game with every ounce of emotion and energy he has."

The Bulldogs will also again push the ball up the court, preferring the more popular uptempo version over the slow-it-down concept which seems to be going by the wayside.

"Basketball in West Texas in the last 20 years has come 10,000 miles," Stephenson said. "I hate that darn slow down stuff. I wouldn't walk around the corner to watch it. If you can't press and run, you're not going to have people come and watch you play. What they're doing in football with the run-and-shoot, they've been doing in basketball for years and years."

The loss of players such as point guard Scott Melzer, Michael Wright, Albert Ray and Keith Gilbreath would have broken beyond repair most teams. Not Midland High. Not with the returners they have and their apparent desire.

"I think this bunch of kids, I think they love the game a little bit more. They're maybe a little hungrier. We've been right on the threshhold for so many years."

Stephenson reiterated the quality and depth of his 18-deep roster saying he he'd have no qualms about putting any of them into a key situation. In the same breath, though, Stephenson expressed his desire to instill a proper "level of compatibility" and keep it the entire season.

"By the time we get to the Jan. 5 ballgame against Lee High School, we'll be ready to play."

Stephenson also noted that Lee has "as good of people as anybody in the district," further saying the Rebels should contend for the title.

"San Angelo's got to be the pick of the litter with six of its first seven back, but Lee will be there. Anybody can beat anybody. Abilene Cooper's sitting their with a 6-9 and a 6-6, and Odessa High has a great bunch of athletes, 'course a lot of them are still on the football field.

In addition to the strengths provided by Hickey and Goodley, the 1990-91 Bulldogs include:

■ Frank "Skeet" Bowers, 5-10 Sr. Stephenson refers to Skeet as "perhaps the quickest player to ever play at Midland High. Experience is a big factor in Bowers' return.

■ Paul "Z" Zarate, 5-4 Sr. Zarate was a key component in the MHS junior varsity's 28-1 record of last season. His money shot is from three-point range. He is proof, Stephenson said, heighth is not a prerequisite for success in high school ball.

■ James Lee, 5-10 Sr. Can he perform the same miracles on the basketball court as he did on the gridiron, leading District 4-5A in rushing? Stephenson likes the odds. "He is a tremendous athlete and his great quickness will be an asset to our team."

■ John King, 6-0 Sr. Work ethic in practice and enthusiasm are his assets. Not to mention his smarts. King plans to attend college and study marine biology.

■ Mark Farias, 6-0 Sr. Nicknamed "Rainman," he is described as one of the "smoothest" players on the Bulldog team. "He is a very intelligent player who rarely makes a mistake," Stephenson said of the JV product. Another with a talent for book-cracking, Farias plans to have a college career at Texas A&M where he will study engineering.

■ Brian Rounding, 6-1, Sr. Like Goodley this year, Rounding is one of the few to letter in basketball his sophomore year. Shooting is his main attribute.

■ Phillip Koss, 6-5 Jr. With a great deal of experience at Midland Baptist — not to mention a great deal of height, Koss is described by Stephenson as a "student of the game" who has already turned the heads of some college recruiting types. Koss has narrowed his collegiate choices down to Texas Tech or Pepperdine where he plans to study either business administration or architecture.

■ Earl McDonald, 6-1 Sr. Likes to pattern his game after Magic Johnson, and has even been nicknamed "Showtime." "He is perhaps the best passer to play at Midland High," Stephenson said.

■ Eric Johnson, 6-1 Sr. Would win the Mr. Congeniality award if one were given in the district. Oddly enough, "E.J." likes to fish in his spare time, not a known hobby of many basketball players in West Texas. Johnson is looking forward to studying science at Mayor Hardin-Baylor University.

■ Jose Rios, 6-0 Sr. An intelligent player, he is also an outstanding shooter. Rios volunteers at the Midland Boy's Club and plans to study civil engineering at Texas A&M.

■ Stephen Canon, 6-1 Sr. His leadership an asset, Canon fills a utility role with the Bulldogs. Academically, he ranks at the top of his senior class, and plans to declare himself a pre-medicine major in college.

■ Scott Allen, 6-5 Sr. A transfer from Breckenridge, Allen provides an above-average shot, heighth and experience.

■ Roy Allen, 6-0 Sr. No relation to Scott, Roy returns off the Bulldog JV from last season, Allen's work ethic and determination are solid. Another engineering major hopeful, Allen plans to enroll at Texas Tech next year.

■ Russell Van Husen, 6-2 Sr. Van Husen, off the junior varsity, wins the off-season most improved player recognition. "It is a pleasure to see such improvement," Stephenson said.

House has Rebels running and gunning for glory

New style of play finds a home at the Rebel gym and so far, nobody's complaining

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Like his coaching counterpart with the Midland High girls team, first-year Midland Lee boys' head basketball coach Jon House has a bundle of changes in store for the Rebel hoopsters.

House

Suffice it to say that Midland has its own version of the Runnin' Rebels. Whether they're championship bound, however, is yet to be seen.

History would suggest that, at the very least, Lee is playoff bound. House is in first year at Rebel Gym after coaching at Rosenberg's Lamar Consolidated, just outside Houston.

When House arrived at Lamar Consol, he found a team in a shambles. Not to be intimidated, though, he whipped that group into shape and took the once-bedraggled Mustangs to consecutive playoff appearances.

Might the same be in store for the Lee program, a team which finished (13-16 overall, 4-8 in District 4-5A in Paul Suteckler's final year at the helm?

"We're going to work harder than the other guys," House said. "It's kind of like General Patton's speech. I don't expect kids to die for Robert E. Lee High School. We'll just make the other guys fold their tents for their schools. Nobody ever won a war by dying for their country."

House's basketball philosophy seems quite simple, really: Play hard, run fast, control the tempo defensively.

"We're going to be very relentless about how we play," House said. "We're slow, but we'll run all night long."

That's all very nice, but how will it work? How can a slow team that's expected to run all night win?

"We're just going to be a lot more willing to win than the other guy. And we'll be better conditioned than the other guy.

"I took over the slowest team in the district (at Rosenberg), one that hadn't won a district game in five years and took it to the area playoffs two years in a row."

One thing for sure: House has been drilling his team much like Patton would his privates. Two weeks before the Rebs began practicing in the gym, House had them run 10 200-yard dashes in 32 seconds time each. Players were given just 60 seconds rest in between each sprint. Only one failed to accomplish the grueling task.

Rebel practice can be just as tedious as it is strenuous, it appears. House is installing a five-phase offense at Lee. The Rebs are learning one phase at a time with House refusng to allow the Rebels to begin practice on, for instance, Phase 2 unless Phase 1 works to perfection.

In addition, House's philosophy of scheduling the toughest pre-district opponents he can round up in order to physically and mentally prepare the Rebels for district play may result in a stunted overall record, but, as far as House is concerned, an overall record is not top priority.

"We'd play Midland College if we could," he said. I don't care who we play. The only way to get better for district is to play the best you can. If you want to soar with eagles, you've got to fly with them."

House, however, will play is team under Stueckler's schedule. The Rebs' won't get a chance to work the House theory until the 1991-92 campaign.

On the one hand, House sounds enthusistic about the Rebels' chances and the newly-installed philosophy. On the other hand, though, House sounds as pessimistic as the next coach on his team's chances. Those attributes, however, are typical in the preseason. Two examples from House.

Example No. 1: "When those kids walk into a game experience, they've never been there before. It'll all be a new experience for them. We'll be lucky to be in the hunt."

Example No. 2: "Our goal is to win the championship. We expect to hang a banner up in our gym, and if we keep everybody healthy, we'll be pretty good."

Regardless of the outcome of the season, House's practice of playing as many Rebels as possible in as many games as possible is likely to be popular.

"I think the parents are excited," he said. "I haven't seen any probems. And I think the kids are very positive.

"Our kids are pumped up. I'm a very positive guy. I told them if they fall, we'll just pick up the boot straps and do it again. I hope I don't ever put a kid on the floor who hangs his head after a game. It's not the winning or the losing, it's the way a kid feels about himself after the game. They've got to be able to look at themselves in the mirror the next morning."

House picks San Angelo to win the district, followed in second by Midland High, then Abilene High, Abilene Cooper, Odessa High, Odessa Permian and Midland Lee. Preferring to remain humble probably explains his pick of the Rebels to bring up the rear.

The 1990-91 Rebels include:

■ Eugene Hicks, 6-1, Sr. In House's scheme of the things, Hicks is the main man. Shooting guard is the offensive force and team leader. A lot of responsibility, but being only one of two returning lettermen, he's the one who would be looked to for leadership regardless of the coach or his methods.

■ Martin Lattibeaudiere, 6-0 Soph. Even though Lattibeaudiere has only freshmen experience, he has been hailed by MHS head coach Jack Stephenson as one of the best sophomores ever to come out of Midland (his own Antwan Goodley notwithstanding). Lattibeaudiere receives even higher praise from House. "He's one of the best sophomores I've seen in 13 years of coaching," House said. "He's got a great jump shot and he can dunk. But he'll make a lot of freshmen mistakes." Lattibeaudiere will serve as one of the teams guards, most likely at the point.

■ Herb Crisp, 5-8 Sr. Can serve a either a quick forward or guards, he is described by his coach as the quickest guy on the floor. Scored 27 points in a 110-48 intra-squad scrimmage recently. Another asset is Crisp's defensive ability. "Second best defender on the team," House said.

■ Rube Harrell, 6-3 Sr. Best vertical leap on the team, Harrell had eight dunks in the intrasquad scrimmage. Other assets include free throw shooting, defense, ability to quickly recover after mistakes.

■ Brian Rippee, 6-4 Sr. The other returning lettermen, Rippee lacks as much as experience as Hicks, but, House expects him to be "one of the best posts in the district."

■ Michael Lane, 5-4 Sr. A fill-in at point guard, Lane's biggest area of improvement came in his defensive game. While he will not be asked to score many points, he will provide plenty of assists.

■ Cliff Angelo, 5-9, Sr. The first perimeter player off the bench, Angelo's strength's include his shooting and zone-busting.

■ Brian Smith, 6-0 Sr. A good passer, and "sneaky," said House. His steady play will enable him to picked off the bench and contribute in a hurry.

■ Matt Campbell, 6-3 Sr. Defensive desire will mean more minutes for this forward. Team's most improved scorer since House took over.

■ Brian Massey, 6-6 Sr. Physical player, shot blocker will be center off bench along with, John Watson, a 6-4 Sr. Watson holds the scoring advantage over Massey.

■ Brian King, 5-9 Sr. Will fill a guard role, is known for being above average shooter.

■ Jeremy Skaggs, 5-11 Jr. Third point guard off bench, can also play off-guard.

Texas Tech 40
Texas Christian 28

Texas Tech stole five passes and Ronald Ferguson returned one 75 yards for a touchdown as the Red Raiders rolled.

The Raiders (3-7, 2-5 in the SWC) ended a three-game losing streak, wrecked TCU's homecoming and most likely dealt the Horn Frogs' bowl dream a fatal blow.

UCLA 25
No. 2 Washington 22

UCLA's Brad Daluiso kicked a 43-yard field goal with 10 seconds left to put a damper on the Huskies' national title hopes.

The upset loss to the Bruins (5-5, 3-4 Pacific-10 Conference) virtually eliminated the Huskies (8-2, 6-1) from a shot at their first national championship since no team has ever captured the crown with two losses.

The Huskies, who clinched their first Rose Bowl trip in nine seasons last week, made too many mistakes in the wind and the rain. A fumble by quarterback Mark Brunell and an interception of a Brunell pass set up two Daluiso field goals in the fourth quarter.

UCLA's Tommy Maddox, a redshirt freshman, completed 23 of 41 passes for 239 yards and two touchdowns and Brian Brown rushed for 113 yards on 12 carries, including an 88-yard touchdown in the opening period. Maddox was intercepted once.

No. 5 Colorado 41
Oklahoma St. 22

Darian Hagan passed for a school-record four touchdowns and Eric Bieniemy ran for 148 yards and another score to lift Colorado to at least a share of the Big Eight title.

The victory also appeared to clinch an Orange Bowl berth for the Buffaloes (9-1-1 overall and 6-0 in the Big Eight). Nebraska could tie Colorado for the title if the Cornhuskers beat Oklahoma in their last game and if Colorado loses to Kansas State. But Orange Bowl officials already have indicated they would choose Colorado in the event of a tie, since the Buffs beat Nebraska 27-12 last week.

With the triumph over OSU (3-7, 1-5), Colorado became the first team other than Oklahoma and Nebraska to win back-to-back Big Eight championships.

Hagan, who had never before thrown more than two TD passes in a game, had four, including 28- and 34-yarders to wide receiver Mike Pritchard.

Ohio State 27
No. 6 Iowa 26

Greg Frey hit Bobby Olive with a 3-yard touchdown pass with 1 second to play to give Iowa its first loss in the Big Ten.

Iowa (7-2 overall, 5-1 Big Ten) needed a victory and losses by Illinois and Minnesota to clinch a tie for the conference title with two games remaining. Ohio State (6-2-1, 4-1-1) instead pulled within a half-game of the Hawkeyes.

Iowa seemed in command with a 26-14 lead after a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Lew Montgomery, his second of the game, with 11 minutes remaining.

Suns score 107 - in first half

Associated Press

The Phoenix Suns shattered the NBA record with 107 points in the first half and set several other records Saturday night, beating the winless Denver Nuggets 173-143 for Cotton Fitzsimmons' 700th NBA coaching victory.

The Suns eclipsed the first-half record of 90 points set by the Nuggets on Thursday night when they led San Antonio 90-83. Phoenix got its 91st point on Kenny Battle's three-point play with 3:31 remaining in the half, then went on to set an NBA record with 57 second-quarter points, surpassing the mark of 52 by Baltimore in 1965.

Phoenix had a shot at becoming the first team to 200 points in a game, but cooled off in the second half and settled for tying the league record for points in a regulation game. The Suns matched the 173 points by Boston against Minneapolis in 1959.

The Suns, hitting 17 of their first 19 field goals, also tied the NBA record for most points in the first quarter when they led 50-37. They matched the mark of 50 first set by Syracuse against San Francisco in 1962 and tied three other times.

Phoenix also set NBA records with 43 first-half field goals and 33 assists. The previous records with 40 field goals by Boston came in that 1959 Minneapolis game and Milwaukee had 30 assists against Detroit in 1978.

Kevin Johnson and Battle finished with 23 points, Dan Majerle 21 and Tom Chambers 20 for Phoenix, which 137-110 after three quarters.

Orlando Woolridge led Denver (0-6) with 40 points, 27 of them in the first half. Chris Jackson, playing his first NBA game after being activated off the injured list, scored 26 points and Walter Davis had 22.

NBA Roundup

Fitzsimmons, in his 18th season, is the seventh coach to reach the 700-victory mark — joining Red Auerbach, Jack Ramsay, Dick Motta, Gene Shue, Bill Fitch and Lenny Wilkens.

Spurs 111, Rockets 110

Strickland scored 27 points in his first game of the season after missing all of preseason and three regular-season games with a possible stress fracture in his left fibula. He scored six points in the final 11 seconds for the Spurs, who overcame an 18-point deficit.

Strickland hit a layup with 3.3 seconds remaining and was fouled by Olajuwon. His winning free throw gave the Spurs their first lead of the game.

Cavaliers 104, 76ers 88

Larry Nance scored 23 points and inspired his teammates by blocking Manute Bol's shot during an 18-4 Cleveland run in the second quarter as the Cavaliers beat Philadelphia.

Cleveland, which won for the third time in its last four games, trailed 29-24 early in the second quarter after Charles Barkley completed a three-point play for his 20th point.

The Cavaliers ran off the next 11 points, getting fired up when Nance jumped high near the basket and stuffed a layup attempt by the 7-foot-7 Bol. Craig Ehlo hit two 3-point shots during the 18-4 spurt, which put Cleveland ahead 42-33.

Philadelphia got no closer than four after that, as Barkley scored 31 points. The 76ers were short-handed because Johnny Dawkins is out with a knee injury and Bob Thornton was traded to Minnesota earlier in the day.

Celtics 105, Nets 91

Larry Bird had four points, two assists and a steal to set up another basket as Boston outscored New Jersey 19-2 in the final 6:28 of the game.

Bird finished with 21 points and 13 rebounds despite a dismal 3-for-9 shooting performance in the opening half.

Heat 120, Pacers 105

Kevin Edwards scored 13 of his 30 points and Sherman Douglas contributed seven of his 14 assists in the third quarter as Miami pulled away against Indiana.

Leading 58-56 at halftime, the Heat scored the first 11 points of the second half, five by Edwards, and took a 69-56 advantage 4:10 into the third period. Douglas had three assists and two of his 25 points during the surge, which saw the Pacers miss their first eight shots of the second half.

Bulls 105, Hornets 86

Tyrone Bogues led the Hornets with 14 points, while reserve Kenny Gattison had 13.

The Bulls led 77-64 entering the the fourth quarter, but Kendall Gill's basket with 5:22 left closed the gap to 92-82. But then the Bulls outscored Charlotte 13-4 the rest of the way.

Hawks 112, Clippers 94

Glenn Rivers scored 12 of his 23 points on 3-point shots as Atlanta handed the Los Angeles Clippers their third straight lopsided defeat.

Los Angeles, which dropped its previous two games by 21 points at Golden State and 27 to Detroit after opening the season with two victories, were led by Ken Norman with 21 points and Charles Smith with 20.

Stephens leads Rams

Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — Greg Stephens threw touchdown passes of 39 and 11 yards in the second half, rallying Angelo State to a 21-13 victory over Texas A&I Saturday afternoon.

Joel Smith added a 5-yard touchdown run in the fourth for Angelo State (7-3, 5-2 in the Lone Star Conference).

Texas A&I, which led 13-0 at halftime, finished its season at 6-4 and 5-2.

Texas Schools

Stephens hit Darron Johnson for a 39-yard touchdown and Myron Turner for an 11-yarder, giving Angelo State a 14-13 lead in the third quarter.

Charles Thompson scored on a 22-yard run and Kevin Randle scored on an 18-yard run for A&I.

ACU 24, W. Texas St. 22

ABILENE — Abilene Christian avoided its first winless season ever by beating West Texas State in a Lone Star Conference game behind 328 yards passing of reserve quarterback Mike Fuller, who also scored on runs of 1 and 52 yards.

West Texas State (1-10) led 14-3 at the half, but Fuller's 52-yard run and two-point conversion pass to Sean Grady with 10:03 to play tied the score at 14-14. Dennis Brown's 42-yard field goal put ACU (1-9) in the lead, and Fuller added the Wildcats' final touchdown with 3:58 to play.

The Buffaloes took their 14-3 halftime lead on a 46-yard from Mark Reiland to Keith Miller and a 12-yard run by Maurice Williams. Royce Slechta hit Williams with a 5-yard TD pass late in the game.

North Texas 16, SW Texas St. 15

SAN MARCOS — North Texas squeaked past Southwest Texas State when Kelly Dennis was whistled for offensive pass interference, nullifying a 2-point conversion with 2:15 remaining in the game.

North Texas improved to 6-4, 2-3 in the Southland Conference. Southwest Texas fell to 6-4 and 3-2.

Trailing 16-9, Gilbert Price led a 12-play, 75-yard drive, capped by a 5-yard touchdown pass to Scott Moore that pulled the Bobcats to within 16-15 with 2:17 left.

The Bobcats went for the victory rather than kicking for a tie, and Price hit Dennis in the right corner for the apparent go-ahead score. But Dennis was called for offensive pass interference.

E. Texas St. 59, Cameron 0

LAWTON, Okla. — East Texas State won the Lone Star Conference title as Bob Bounds threw for 230 yards and four touchdowns to lead his team over Cameron.

Three touchdown passes went to Gary Compton, who broke the conference record for career TD receptions with 30. The old record was 28 held by Wes Smith of East Texas from 1982-1985.

Tarleton St. 35, Sul Ross St. 7

ALPINE — Eric Lugo connected on 13 of 35 passes for 229 yards and three touchdowns as Tarleton State defeated Sul Ross State in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game.

Tarleton State is unbeaten at 10-0 and advances to the NAIA playoffs. Sul Ross State finished at 3-6 overall and 2-4 in the TIAA.

Austin College 58, McMurry 10

SHERMAN — Dale Trompler threw for 160 yards and three touchdowns, leading Austin College in a 58-10 blowout of McMurry in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game.

Tommy Savage caught nine passes, including touchdowns of 9 and 37 yards, as the Kangaroos improved to 8-2 overall and 6-2 in conference play.

Michigan edges Illini; UVA bounces back

Associated Press

J.D. Carlson tied a school record with five field goals as No. 19 Michigan defeated No. 17 Illinois 22-17 in the Big Ten on Saturday.

The Wolverines (5-3, 4-2 Big Ten), who led 19-3 after three quarters, got a key interception by Vada Murray at their own 2-yard line with six minutes remaining. Michigan then ran out the clock, driving to the Illinois 22 before time expired.

It was the second straight loss for the Fighting Illini (6-3, 4-2) who have lost five in a row to Michigan and haven't won in Ann Arbor since 1966.

Carlson kicked field goals of 28, 51, 19, 18 and 18 yards. He tied the record set by Mike Gillette in a 22-7 victory over Minnesota on Nov. 5, 1988. Freshman Ricky Powers, who ran for 113 yards on 23 carries, had a 3-yard run for Michigan's only touchdown.

Shawn Wax, who had four catches for 64 yards, caught a 30-yard TD pass from Jason Verduzco and Wax tossed a 26-yard scoring strike to Steven Mueller for Illinois. Doug Higgins kicked a 32-yard field goal for the Illini.

No. 11 Virginia 24 North Carolina 10

Shawn Moore threw two touchdown passes as 11th-ranked Virginia recovered from its tumble out of the No. 1 spot.

Herman Moore, playing despite two sprained big toes, caught a touchdown pass for the ninth consecutive game, an NCAA record. He tied another record by catching a scoring pass in his 10th straight regular-season game.

The Cavaliers (8-1, 5-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) continued with their standard first-half offensive explosion, running up a 21-3 halftime lead. But just as Virginia did in losing to Georgia Tech last weekend, the offense struggled and managed only a field goal in the closing 30 minutes.

Jake McInerney's 40-yard field goal with 5:53 left in the third period capped the Virginia scoring, and marked Virginia's second-lowest output this season. The Cavaliers beat Clemson 20-7 in September.

No. 12 Florida St. 70 Cincinnati 21

Terrell Buckley returned an interception 83 yards for a touchdown and set up another score with a long punt return as Florida State scored on its first nine possessions.

Florida State (7-2) led 49-7 at the half and punted only once in winning its third straight.

Bowl bids cannot officially be extended until Nov. 24, but Florida State will play in the first Blockbuster Bowl on Dec. 28, according to an athletic department spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Although Cincinnati (1-9) was never in the game, the Bearcats rolled up a season-high 459 yards.

Lawrence Dawsey, Amp Lee and Paul Moore scored two touchdowns apiece for Florida State. Dawsey caught seven passes for 141 yards by halftime, extending his string to 28 straight games with a reception.

Quarterback Casey Weldon completed 14 of 20 passes for 217 yards and sat out the second half.

Lee, whose 14 touchdowns ranks among the nation's leaders, scored on runs of 13 and 11 yards.

Edgar Bennett, Sean Jackson and Maurice Pinckney also scored and Richie Andrews kicked 10 straight extra points for the Seminoles.

No. 13 Nebraska 41, Kansas 9

Johnny Mitchell caught two touchdown passes and Scott Baldwin rushed for 170 yards and two TDs to key the Huskers' 22nd straight victory over the Jayhawks.

Nebraska (9-1 overall, 5-1 in the Big Eight) trailed 3-0 in the first quarter and was having trouble moving against Kansas (3-6-1, 2-3-1), a 26-point underdog. But a bad kickoff after Dan Eichloff's 36-yard field goal gave Nebraska the ball on the Kansas 41. Then on fourth-and-4, Mickey Joseph found Mitchell all by himself down the middle and hit the backup tight end with a 35-yard scoring pass.

After Eichloff missed his second field goal of the second period, Nebraska's Greg Barrios booted a 40-yarder for a 10-3 lead with 6:10 left. Baldwin ripped off a 22-yard gain to help put the Huskers in position for their second touchdown, a 28-yarder from Joseph to Mitchell that made it 17-3 with 11 seconds left in the first half.

The victory assured the Golden Bears (6-3-1 overall, 4-2-1 in the Pac-10 Conference) of their first winning season since 1982, and moved them into second place in the Pac-10. The Bears finish their season next Saturday against Stanford.

The Ducks (7-3 overall, 3-3 in conference) turned the ball over five times and were held without a touchdown for the first time this season. They have lost all three of their road games this season.

No. 23 Southern Cal 56
Oregon State 7

Shane Foley, who played most of the game after replacing Todd Marinovich, threw for two touchdowns and ran for another as Southern Cal racked up its 19th consecutive victory over Oregon State.

Curtis Conway returned a punt 71 yards for a touchdown and Jason Oliver went 66 yards with an interception for another score for Southern Cal (7-2-1, 4-2-1 Pacific-10 Conference. Oregon State (1-9-0, 1-5-0) scored on a 93-yard kickoff return by Dwayne Owens.

The Trojans led 28-7 at halftime after limiting the Beavers to 27 yards and two first downs.

Foley completed all nine of his passes for 115 yards. He threw his first touchdown pass of the season, hitting Travis Hannah with a 15-yarder in the corner of the end zone with four seconds remaining in the first half.

No. 24 Michigan St. 28
Minnesota 16

Touchdown runs by Tico Duckett, Hyland Hickson, Courtney Hawkins and Dan Enos capped long drives as Michigan State kept its slim Rose Bowl hopes alive.

Enos completed his first 11 passes for 121 yards for the Spartans (5-3-1 overall and 4-2 in the Big Ten), who moved within one game of Iowa. But Michigan State, which closes the season against also-rans Northwestern and Wisconsin, has already lost to the Hawkeyes. Michigan and Illinois are also 4-2 and Ohio State is 4-1-1.

Minnesota (5-4 and 4-2) probably needs a victory next week at Michigan to have a chance at any bowl game.

Michigan State showed why it came into the game as the conference's second-leading rushing team, grinding out 242 yards.

The Spartans alternate Duckett and Hickson at tailback and hammer away at the opposition. Saturday, Duckett ran 16 times for 76 yards and Hickson 16 for 97. Duckett, who entered as the nation's sixth-leading rusher, has 1,157 yards this season, Hickson 810.

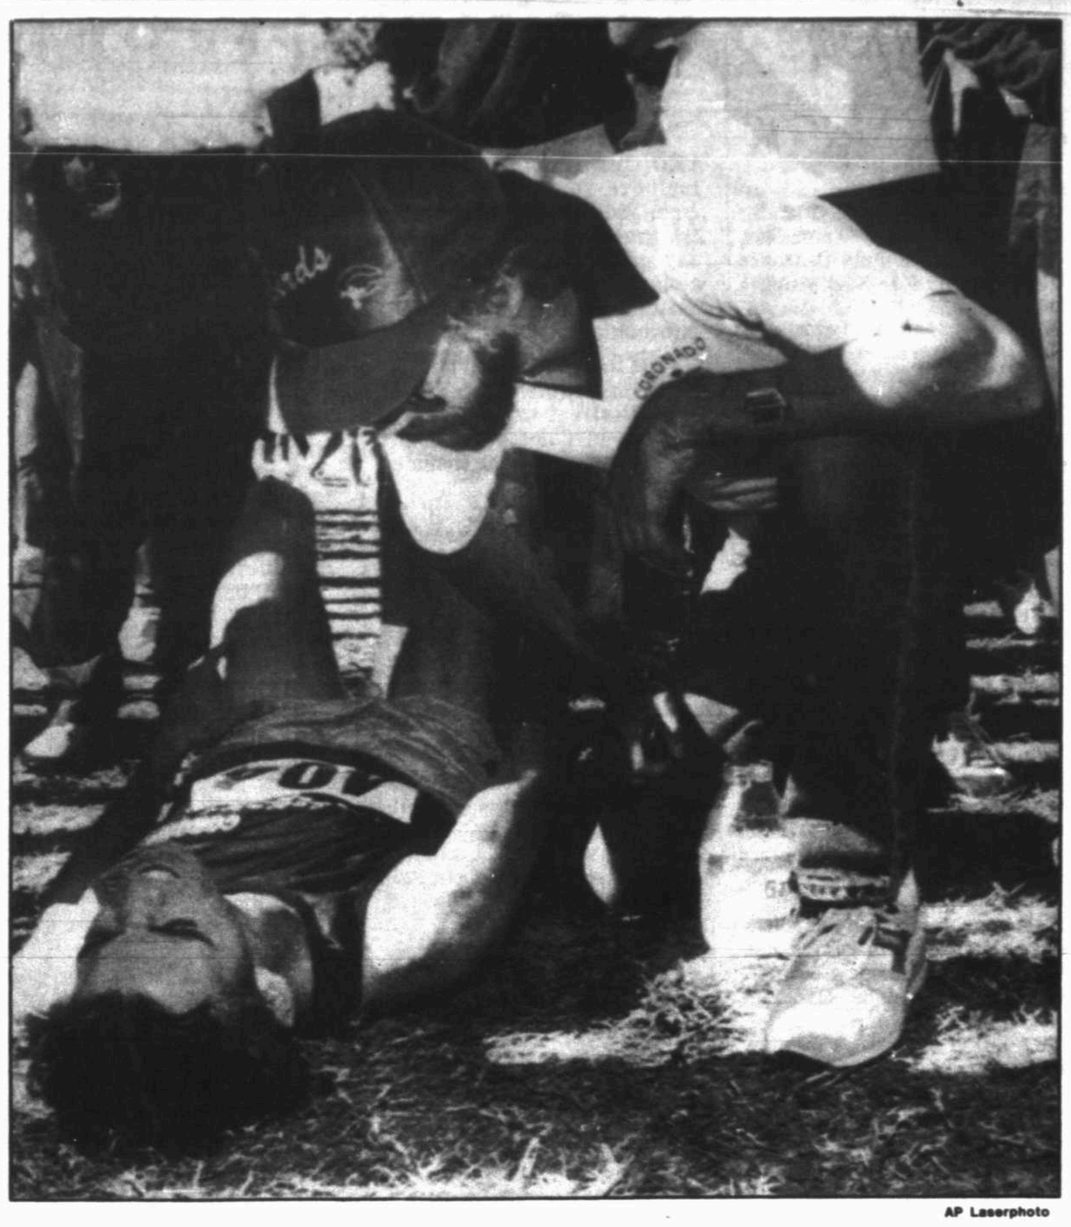

Minnesota's lone bright spot was the passing of Marquel Fleetwood, who missed the last game with a collarbone injury. He completed 16 of 27 passes for 164 yards and scored on an 11-yard run.

Culpepper takes second title

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Alan Culpepper of El Paso Coronado on Saturday won his second straight Class 5A boys cross country state championship, finishing in 15 minutes, 38 seconds. Bryce Cramer of Clear Creek was second, three seconds behind.

The fastest winning time, however, was by Ricky Gallegos of Crystal City in 3A, who finished in 15:25.

In other classifications, the state champions are Raffeg Ayyad of Mesquite Poteet in 4A (15:55), Larry Romero of Sundown in 2A (16:39) and Stephen Shifflet of Graford in A (16:55).

In girls cross country, Desi Avila of North Mesquite captured the 5A title over a shorter course in 11 minutes 38 seconds.

Melony Patterson of Crowley won the 4A title (11:56), Jennifer Myers of Yoakum the 3A crown (12:10), Elizabeth Silva of LaVilla the 2A title (12:08) and Stephanie Duke of Utopia the A gold medal (12:07).

Cross Country

Boys team titles went to Conroe McCullough in 5A, Mesquite Poteet in 4A, West Oso in 3A, Sundown in 2A and Gruver in A.

Girls team titles were won by Klein Oak in 5A, Austin Westlake in 4A, Canyon in 3A, Abernathy in 2A and Sabinal in A.

Mesquite Poteet and Edcouch-Elsa actually tied for first place in 4A boys, but Poteet won when sixth place runners for each team were brought into play as a tie-breaker.

The 5A title was the second straight for the Conroe McCullough boys. Sundown won a state title for the second consecutive year. Last season, Sundown won in 1A and repeated this year after being classified into 2A.

In girls competition, Canyon was a repeat winner in 3A.

4A coin flip to be fought in state court

ATHENS (AP) — Athens and Corsicana beat defending Class 4A state champion Chapel Hill for state high school playoff berths Saturday in a coin flip that could be challenged in court.

The Athens school district sued the University Interscholastic League Friday in an attempt to stop the scheduled toss after a week-long dispute over tie-breaking procedures.

Chapel Hill sources told the Athens Daily Review they expect the school to seek court intervention to void the coin flip. Chapel Hill coach Dickie Meeks left the meeting without commenting.

The three teams were tied with 4-1 records in District 17-4A.

The Daily Review said papers in the lawsuit urge Judge Mace Thurman to stop the coin flip because it is arbitrary and unfair. The lawsuit claims that 17-4A officials apparently bypassed two tie-breaking procedures originally spelled out in the district's bylaws.

By those procedures, Athens and Chapel Hill would have represented the district.

Stars win big

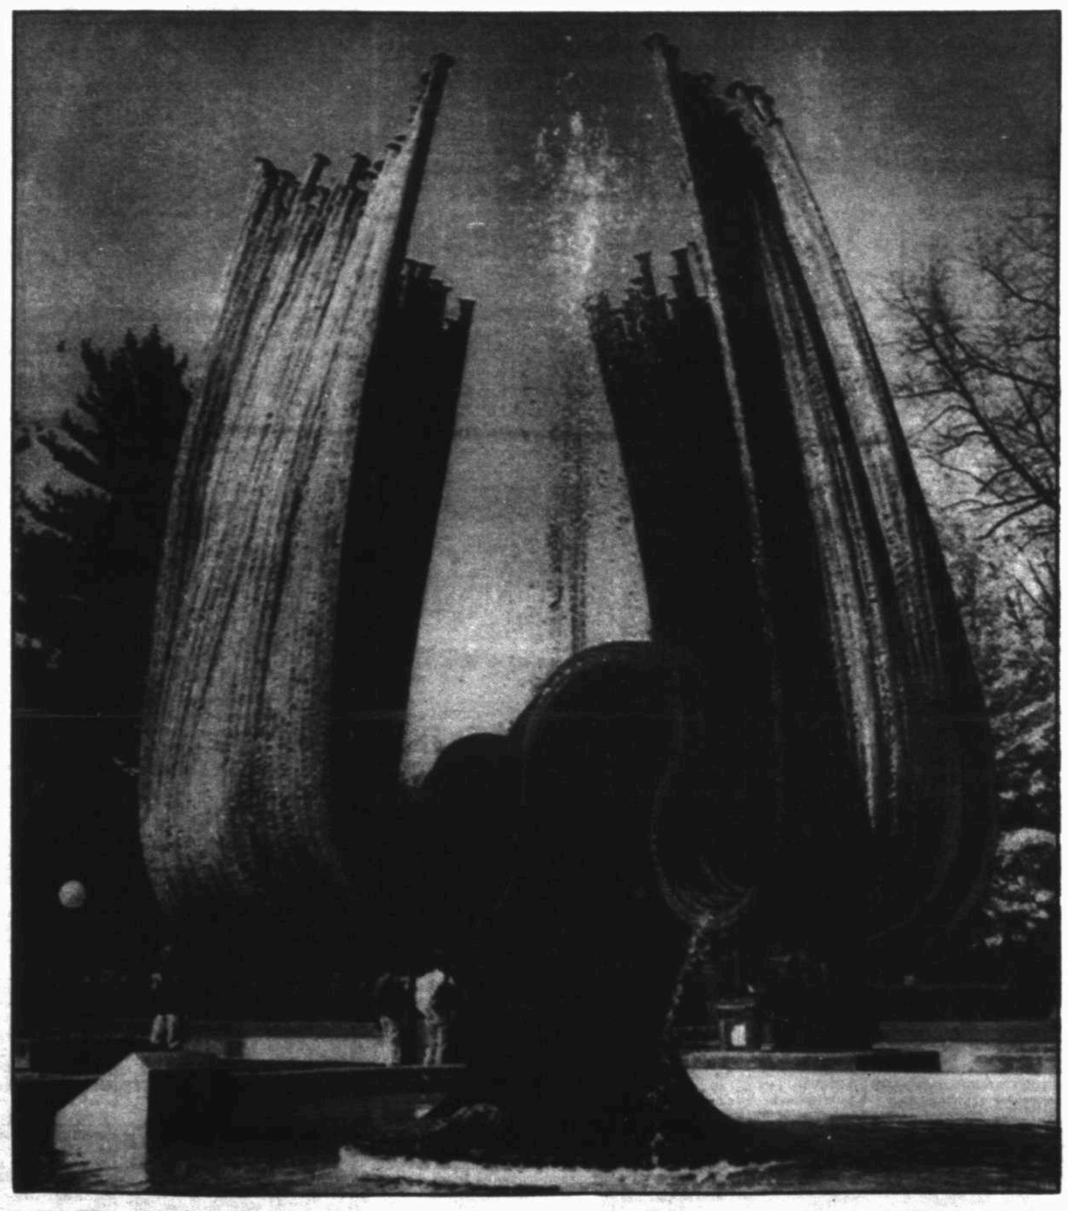

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Shootin' Stars opened their indoor season in the Sunbelt Independent Soccer League with a dominating 11-4 win Saturday over the El Paso Spurs at the Permian Basin Sports Center.

Jim Bailey scored three straight times to give the Stars a 6-2 halftime edge, and Juan Flores turned in three assists to help spark the offense.

Alvin Alexander added two goals for Permian Basin. Other scorers for the Stars were Vinson Brown, Matt Garrett, Martin Velasquez, Hector Murrguia, Chad Peterson and Alex Vasquez.

The Stars hosts the New Mexico Roadrunners at 1:30 p.m. today in the Sports Centre.

In Memoriam

Marshall University students pause in front of the Memorial Fountain on the school's Huntington, W. Va. campus. The fountain is dedicated to the 75 football players, coaches, administrators and fans who died when the team's plane crashed 20 years ago Wednesday. The Marshall tragedy has been one of several involving sports teams since teams forewent railroad travel. Other teams involved in fatal air accidents were the California Polytechnic State College-San Luis Obispo football team in 1960 and the Wichita State football team in... 1970, just weeks before the Marshall tragedy.

Peoples picks up win

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — David Peoples, who led every round, collected his first victory as a professional Saturday, setting a Kapalua International tournament record in the process.

Closing with a round of 5-under-par 66, Peoples finished the $700,000 event at 264, 20 under par and five shots better than Davis Love III. The previous record at the par-71 Bay Course was 266, set in 1984 by Sandy Lyle and tied in 1988 by Bob Gilder.

Peoples started the final day with a three-shot lead, and Love briefly closed it to two with a birdie at the 3rd hole. Peoples responded by chipping in from 35 feet for a birdie on the next hole and was never seriously threatened again.

Golf

He made birdies on four of the first seven holes.

He refused to buckle on the back side, offsetting a lone bogey with two more birdies.

The victory earned him $150,000, his biggest check ever.

"I just can't believe this happened," Peoples said. "I told Melissa (his wife) this morning that whatever happens, happens. I kind of stuck to my own game and it worked.

"I never thought that I would be able to hold a lead like that throughout the tournament. It's a real confidence builder."

The 30-year-old Orlando, Fla., resident turned professional in 1981 and joined the PGA tour in 1983. He has been through the qualifying school nine times.

Pokes entertain 49ers

IRVING (AP) — In Joe Montana's last playing appearance in the Dallas area, he produced the first of his many football miracles.

Stricken with the flu on a day the wind chill factor was a minus 6 degrees, Montana did unto the Houston Cougars what he's done to numerous NFL teams.

Montana rallied Notre Dame with 22 fourth-quarter points to give the Fighting Irish a 35-34 victory with a touchdown pass on the last play of the 1979 Cotton Bowl.

On Sunday, Montana returns for his first game since that infamous "ice bowl" as the unblemished San Francisco 49ers meet the downtrodden Dallas Cowboys.

Montana, nursing a slight injury, didn't play last year when the 49ers beat the Cowboys 31-14 in Texas Stadium.

Texas Stadium and Sun Devil Stadium, home of the Phoenix Cardinals, are the only two stadiums where Montana has yet to ply his trade.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said he hopes his young quarterback, Troy Aikman, learns something by watching Montana and the 49ers play.

Pro Football

"Montana is the best quarterback I've ever seen," Johnson said. "You just can't read his eyes like you can most quarterbacks. If you try to read his eyes you're going to be wrong. Troy can learn from watching him. Sometimes you can read Troy's eyes where he is going to throw the ball. Troy needs to learn to scan the field like Montana does."

The 8-0 49ers bring the NFL's longest road winning streak, 14, into Texas Stadium. San Francisco has won 16 consecutive games, including playoff opponents. Dallas is 3-6 with a recent 25-9 loss to the New York Jets.

"Montana has been just fantastic this year," Johnson said. "He's at the top of his game. With the talent the 49ers have around him, he is very difficult stop."

Johnson said a team can never get enough points against the 49ers because of Montana.

"You just get as many as you can then hold on for dear life," Johnson said.

attitudes. This is our class and we want to win."

The decision to bring in Milam at a critical juncture in the game was one of a couple of coaching decisions made by Franklin that paid full dividends.

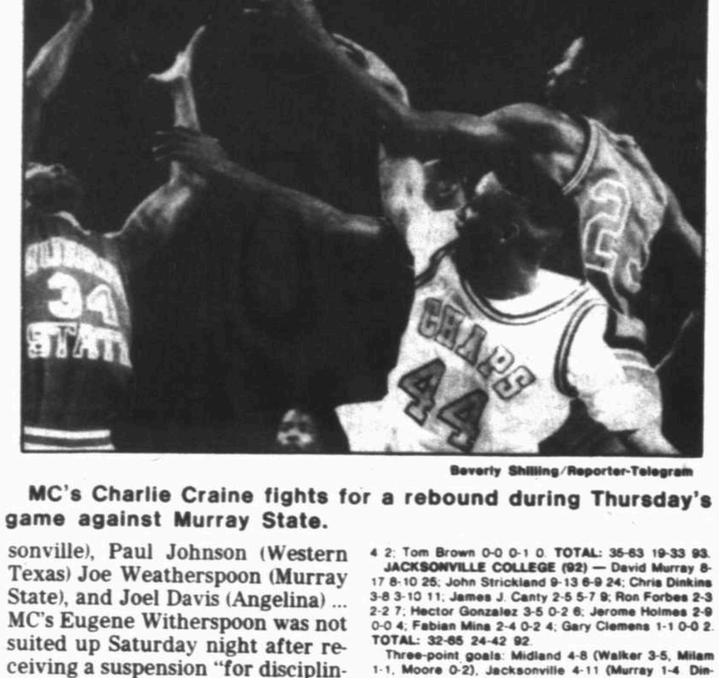

After Jacksonville had spent most of the night guarding against the more deliberate point guard play of Steve Armstrong, [illegible] was inserted and quickly dropped in a three-pointer to bring MC within one, 90-89.

"I really thought Malcolm was the difference in the ball game," Franklin said. "(Jacksonville) was sagging off Steve and they didn't think he'd shoot. We put Malcolm in and he hit the three-pointer right off."

Franklin also had the Chaps play a slow, half-court type game in the first half, taking the Jaguars out of their up-tempo style. The result saw Jacksonville's big men John Strickland and Chris Dinkins get into foul trouble in the first half. Strickland eventually fouled out, and Dinkins, one of the nation's top JUCO forwards, was clearly beaten and broken at his position.

"This is the kind of win that builds character early in the year," Franklin said. "This team shows a lot of heart and a lot of guts."

SHORT SHOTS: In addition to Craine, Walker and Boudreaux being named to the All-Tournament team, also chosen were Harvey Petty, Vernon Broughton and Johnny McDowell (Howard), Chris Dinkins and David Murray (Jacksonville), Paul Johnson (Western Texas) Joe Weatherspoon (Murray State), and Joel Davis (Angelina) ... MC's Eugene Witherspoon was not suited up Saturday night after receiving a suspension "for disciplinary reasons." It is not known when he will return. "I don't know how long he'll be gone," Franklin said. "I'm here to talk about this game." ... MC, 3-1 on the season, meets Garden City, Kan. in the first round of the South Plain's McDonald's Classic in Levelland this Thursday.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS

MP - 628.

Isn't there at least one decent gentleman around 60 to 65 who would appreciate a good woman to help make your golden years wonderful. There should be at least one in Midland who is not to tight to answer this ad. I'm educated, retired, like a healthful, clean life and exercise as well as making a nice home for the right gentleman. All replies answered.
MP - 629

Where are YOU? That honest, sharing, caring healthy, self supporting man with a sense of humor who has 55-75 years of living experience? I'm looking for you. A widow, 62 years young, happy, healthy, honest, romantic, have sense of humor and many hobbies. Only sincere need answer.
MP - 632

I am a 25-year-old Caucasian, 6', blonde hair, hazel eyes, seeking to meet a fun-loving, affectionate man 276-35 with similar interests or option to discover new interests. I enjoy skiing, fishing, c/w dancing, and staying home with someone special. Non-drug user, occasional social drinker. Send letter with phone nimber and picture if possible.
MP - 634

Retired, educated, Caucasian, Christian lady in her sixties (60s) would like to meet a gentleman 65 to 70. Non-smoker, non-drinker. I am warm, kind, flexible, romantic and compassionate with no dependents at home. I enjoy clean fun! I like to walk, c/w music, eating in or out, movies, concerts, travel, bridge or just making new friends. If you have the same values, write me. You won't be disappointed.
MP - 636

I'm all woman: attractive, feminine, interesting, well-educated, adventurous, young-at-heart, and compassionate. You're over 55, college educated, see life with humor, optimism, tolerance, even in an election year! I like to cook for a man, dress up or down and discuss anything except science or sports. I love home life and travel, daybreaks and moonlight, laughter and sentiment.
MP - 637

I'm a 32-year-old slim, Caucasian female who enjoys movies, travel, dancing, sports, quiet evenings at home and just about anything as long as I'm with someone special. I'm looking for a Caucasian male with similar interests who is honest, secure, intelligent and caring. No drug users or smokers and only light to non-drinkers. Please send phone number and tell me about yourself.
MP - 631

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS

Divorced, Caucasian female with one child looking for male companionship. He must be a Christian, 32-42, enjoy family life and be financially secure. Social drinker ok, but no drugs or smoking. I am petite, brown hair, green eyes, and love movies, romantic candlelight dinners and especially being with someone I care about. Send phone number and photo if possible.
MP - 646

Seeking an honest, caring, financially secure, single, Caucasian man 50 - 65 years old, non-smoker. I enjoy movies, travel, TV, dancing, walking - almost anything with the right person. Let's talk.
MP - 645

NEW IN TOWN: professional 54-year-old anglo woman would like to meet someone who enjoys everything and would like to share those things with someone. I am a sincere person and not critical of others' habits. I am not petite, but am considered attractive. I will answer all replies and exchange pictures.
MP - 640

MALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by males looking to meet females

If you're a single lady with a pretty smile, pleasant laugh, dark curtie hair, slender, 25-29 years old, 5'6" - 5'9", non smoker, social drinker, play some musical instrument (piano or violin preferred) and not too many kids, we could be enjoying time together instead of reading personals. I'm single, Caucasian, 37 years old, 5'11", 190 lbs, well paid, degreed professional, looking for that someone special for some fun and more.
MP - 625

Hello! I'm a black male, late 20s, college educated, good job, 6', 190 lbs. I don't smoke, drink or use drugs. I'd like to meet a nice lady 21 - 30, who is ambitious and has a positive attitude. Children ok. Send name, phone number and interests. I will answer all.
MP - 626

Adventurous educated, fun loving romantic male, 6', 175 lbs., blonde hair, blue eyes and fifty years young. Professional Rodeo Cowboy with several business interests. I enjoy romantic evenings, traveling to romantic places and dancing the night away. If you are slender, gorgeous, and sexy, let's get together and have some fun.
MP - 627

I'm a single, Caucasian male, 34 years-old, 6'3", 180 lbs., financially secure professional who loves life, traveling constantly, athletic, rock & roll music, reading, rafting and cuddling. People say I would be a great catch, but I've never been married and am very independent. I'm looking for a tall, tank, athletic woman who is confident in herself and is a worthy challenge.
MP - 633

Ugly, short, with no personality, seeking one night stand with raving beauty... does not describe me. However, if you're a strong Christian, 35-40, and enjoy the arts, perhaps you're curious enough to find out who I am. Send letter, phone number and photo at your discretion.
MP - 630

Single, Caucasian male, mid-30s, educated, not just trained. A "mere" Christian. Enjoy music, movies, theatre, non-smoker, intelligent, virtuous, and loved by animals and small children. All this plus neat handwriting.
MP - 635

28 year-old Caucasian male, brown/blonde hair, blue eyes, 6', 190 lbs. Hard worker, non-drinker, non-drug user. Very laid back with good sense of humor. Would like to find a gal who is open and honest. No games, just fun. You could check this out or you can just stay home and watch HBO. What will it be?
MP - 648

Do you want to have fun? Like dancing and listening to c/w music? Between the ages of 23 and 27? I am a Caucasian, 26 year-old male who likes the same things. I am a social drinker and smoke, but do not do drugs and am not interested in anyone who uses drugs. Why don't we get together?
MP - 647

I am a tall, attractive, born again, spirit filled, Christian man, 38 years-old. I have a good job, but I'm not rich and don't drive a new car. I look at what's in a person's heart, not what's in his or her bank account. I like country, gospel and 50s rock and roll music. I'm seeking a Christian Lady up to 45 years old for possible lasting relationship. Photo phone address please.
MP - 644

Single, Caucasian, male, 29, 6', fit and trim. Christian, non-smoker, educated, homeowner, old fashioned. Seeking old-fashioned woman interested in marriage, having children, and living a quiet country life.
MP - 643

Looking for that special lady, 40-53, Caucasian, non-drinker, who knows how to show her feelings toward a man. There must be one good one still around. I am 6'3", 185 lbs with brown hair and eyes. I have a good job and attended college. I enjoy dinners out, TV at night and riding motor cycles. Please send picture and phone number. All replies answered.
MP - 642

I am a Caucasian male, 36 years-old, 6'4" looking for a special lady, ages 18-40, who is interested in a strong, caring, loving, giving and honest man, and possible commitment. I own my own home, am a non-drug user, non-smoker. I drink a little socially and enjoy movies, dining out, camping, children and home life. I'm hardworking and responsible.
MP - 641

Attractive male, 30 years-old, brown hair, eyes, outgoing. Likes country and rock and roll music, dancing, fishing, walks on the beach. Would like to meet lady who likes the same things. I'm a social drinker.

SIT AND SWING

One of life's pleasures is to swing and sway in the summer breeze. Somehow the cares of the day seem to vanish. This swing may be hung on your porch or from the patio roof, carport or backyard tree. The seat is suspended on a chain and can be raised, lowered or tilted back. The plans include step-by-step directions and a complete materials list. Photos of certain construction steps will aid you.

CUSTOM DETAILS

THAT ADD ZEST TO YOUR HOME

By JILL HANCOCK

If a person was required to list every minute and distinctive detail in this week's featured home, it would be an endless and possibly, an impossible task. For example, this four-bedroom home has been personalized by a distinctive color scheme, especially in the family room, loft and master suite. Each of the four bathrooms are well-designed and fashionable wallpapers highlight each one. The functional kitchen has pale gray cabinets and gourmet appliances. Practically every room has a shuttered window which provides a wonderful view of the Trinity Estates neighborhood and back yard.

Please see CUSTOM/2D

A breakfast bar divides the kitchen and breakfast area. The kitchen was remodeled in 1988.

DETAIL: Two-story home located in prestigious area

(From 1D)

Large oak trees shade the circle drive that leads to the entrance of this two-story home. Etched glass is inlaid in the front door. Sponge painted walls in shades of mauve create a unique look to the foyer walls. The parquet flooring leads to the study, to the left and to the formal dining, at the right. A wall divides the foyer from the formal living room and kitchen. The master suite is situated at the end of a corridor which flows past the formal dining room.

Two shuttered windows, a concealed wet bar and pale gray walls are the amenities in the study. This room is sequestered for privacy and can easily accommodate an office desk and a sitting area. Doors line one wall and open to reveal a wet bar with a SubZero refrigerator.

The formal dining room is located to the right of the entrance. Carved pillars are used to visually divide this room from the foyer. A bay windows frames the front yard, in addition to allowing natural lighting into this area. An exquisite server and china cabinet is inset along an adjacent wall. This room is also highlighted by sponge painted walls.

An over-sized doorway leads from the foyer into the formal living room. The parquet flooring extends into this area. It lines one end of the room and provides a useable pathway into the family room. Two chairs can be placed towards one end, creating an intimate sitting area. A French door opens onto a beautifully landscaped courtyard.

A white brick fireplace is centered along the back wall of this elegant room. A plantation shuttered window is placed on each side. Pale mauve walls ascend into the angled second story ceiling. A set of French doors, along the left wall, divides this room from the family room.

A person can not help but be drawn into this brightly colored family room. The deep rose walls are accented by white trim and a vaulted ceiling. Two walls are lined with floor-to-ceiling windows. One frames the front courtyard and the other views the spacious back yard. A unique appointment in this room is a transom window which is placed above a built-in cabinet. The cabinet is painted to match the walls and is centered along the back wall.

The kitchen is situated across from the formal dining room and to the right of the living room. Pale gray cabinets with white counter tops are placed against a slate gray wallpaper which has flecks of rose, teal and white. The kitchen was totally remodeled in 1988 and is planned around a work island. A Sub Zero refrigerator and freezer is inset along one wall and the other appliances include a Kitchen Aid double self-cleaning oven, a Thermadore cooktop with griddle, a General Electric microwave and a Maytag dishwasher. A gray sink is inset across from the breakfast bar and views the breakfast room. A desk is built-in along the wall to the right of the sink. The kitchen also has a walk-in pantry and a storage closet.

The breakfast table is centered in front of a plantation shuttered bay window. The window provides a great view of the pool and spa. A large grassy play area is situated behind the pool.

A hallway leads from the breakfast room, to the right, to the laundry room and a guest bath. A door in this hall provides access to the back yard. A lot of thought was put into the design of the laundry room. It features a sink, storage cabinets, closet, built-in ironing board and an area for air drying clothes. It even has a small door which opens into the master bath for dirty laundry!

A lovely guest bath is located at the end of the hall. A rose paper lines the walls and is complemented by a classy border. The bath has a gray marble vanity, brass fixtures and a built-in shower.

Access is also made from this corridor into the rear-entry garage. The back of the home also has additional parking.

Teal walls immediately welcome a person into the master bedroom. This room has a large window that overlooks the front yard and two vertical windows are placed along an adjacent wall and view the side yard. This spacious room can easily accommodate a couch and chair at one end. Owners will enjoy unwinding in this tranquil area. A cabinet with space for a television is inset between the two doorways that lead into the master bath.

The bath is divided into two parts and features back-to-back marble vanities. One side has a make-up area and a large walk-in closet. A spacious tub is centered along the back wall and is framed on three sides by mirrors. A built-in shower is situated in a private area to the right of the bathtub. The bath is decorated in shades of mauve and blue.

A huge walk-in closet is located across from the shower. The closet is planned around a cabinet which has shelves for storing shoes. The four walls are lined with rods which were designed to keep every piece of clothing organized. A customized cabinet is placed along one wall and features deep drawers and shelves of various sizes. This area even has a ceiling fan!

Another factor about this one-of-a-kind home is the placement of the staircase which leads to three bedrooms and a loft. The staircase is situated at one end of the breakfast room and is hidden between the kitchen and formal living room.

At the top of the stairs, a loft is located to the right and overlooks the formal living room. The walls in this area are identical to the ones in the family room. Shelves for books line one wall. A small window and skylights brighten this cozy area.

A hallway across from the loft leads to the three upstairs' bedrooms. The first bedroom is papered in primary colors, with an alphabet border separating two complementary patterns. It opens onto a bath that also serves the third bedroom. The bath is decorated in blue and white. It features a double sink vanity and a bathtub.

The walls in the second bedroom are covered in a floral paper in shades of blue, green and mauve. A matching border is placed along the top of the walls. A bay window views the front yard.

A gorgeous hall bath is situated across from this bedroom. It has a free-standing sink and a corner shower. A mirror lines the wall behind the sink.

The third bedroom is sequestered at the end of the hall for privacy. The walls are also decorated in a fashionable paper and it opens into a full bath. This room even has a large cedar closet for out-of-season clothing storage.

The other amenities in this fabulous family home are ceiling fans, recessed lighting, a sprinkler system, plush carpeting and humidifiers. The home contains over 4,500 square feet and is being offered by Carriage Company, Realtors for $350,000.

Carriage Co., Realtors discusses home inspections, warranties

Louise Culver, President of Carriage Co., Realtors, reminds home buyers that many improvements have been made in the procedure for evaluating a home for purchase. Significant changes relate to the improved protection that is now available to the buyer regarding the condition of a pre-owned home.

Home inspection

A buyer now has the opportunity to have the selected home inspected by a certified home inspector who will furnish a detailed and unbiased report of its condition. An inspection will help the buyer to decide if repairs are needed before the purchase is completed

You, as the buyer, are responsible for contracting the inspector. Carriage Company will provide you with a list of the certified inspectors in Midland for your convenience; however, they cannot endorse or recommend a selection for you. When your selection is made, we will be happy to assist you in making arrangements for the inspection, mailing you the reports or by helping in any other way that we can. Of course, the home inspection is optional, but it is highly recommended by the real estate profession and the cost to you is very reasonable.

Home "winterizing"

Normally, central heating systems in vacant homes are set to maintain heat in the range of 50 to 60 degrees during winter months. This practice is usually adequate to protect internal plumbing facilities from a destructive freeze. Many homes in the Midland market will also be "winterized" by the absentee owner to provide an extra measure of protection. Water service is cut off and all water lines are emptied and purged by air pressure. Antifreeze is added to toilet bowls and traps where water cannot be removed. If you order a pre-purchase inspection of a home that has been winterized, the inspector should be asked to restore water service so that plumbing facilities may be adequately tested. Depending upon your closing date, the home may need to be "re-winterized" at a nominal cost.

Home inspectors will usually recommend that a refrigerated air-conditioning system not be tested if the outside temperature is 60 degrees or colder. The test would not be reliable and there is a possibility of causing minor damage to the compressor. An option to consider is the purchase of a home warranty policy provided the prior owners will stipulate that the unit was functioning properly before shutting it down for the winter. Of course, Midland climate usually provides a number of "warm" days during the traditional winter months, so this may not be a problem.

Home warranty

All systems and equipment may be working well when inspected, but there might be a failure in service sometime after the closing. It is impossible for an inspector to predict future operating conditions. For a full year's protection after the closing, Carriage Company, Realtors has arranged to offer you a Buyer's Warranty Program which protects you from major repair or replacement bills caused by unexpected mechanical failures on many major components of your home. Your own washer, dryer, and refrigerator may be covered as well.

The warranty policy is not related to the home inspection in any way. Warranty policies are written through Homeowners Marketing Services, Inc., the nation's leading supplier of real estate support services, and we believe the coverage and the costs are the best you will find in the industry. The cost is low and varies with the level of deductible selected. The deductible charge is applied to each service call. Certainly, this coverage is optional, but we believe that you will want to invest in this peace of mind.

"As we mentioned in an earlier article, we are celebrating our 21st year of service to the Midland community with pride in our reputation for prestige listings, in our professionalism and in our thoughtful concern for the public we serve. Our client follow-up program reports that a poll of our customers made following sales reflects a consistent rating of "excellent "for our sevices," said Culver.

Call Carriage Company, Realtors collect at 915-684-5881 or FAX 915-684-3907 and ask for their "Newcomer's Information Booklet" which has been prepared especially for you. "We have been told that it is one of the best booklets of its kind," concluded Culver.

With cool weather upon us, now is the time to prepare home for winter

By Jackie Fitzpatrick
Copley News Service

It's that time of year again. Time to batten down the hatches, bundle up the house.

Fall is the best time to get the house ready to do battle with the winds, rains and snows of winter, and routine care can mean saving on major expenses in the future.

Starting at the top is often the best bet, and that means the roof. Examine it for broken or curled shingles that can mean leaks. Roofing experts say that a 20-year-old roof with evident signs of wear should be checked and likely should be replaced.

If you need to make a fast temporary repair, use flashing. According to John Saladyga in Newsday, cut the flashing a few inches longer on all sides than the missing shingle so that it slides under the surrounding shingles. Put roofing cement on the surface and place the flashing on it. Smear the cement along the seams where they join as well.

Have the chimney checked annually. Chimney sweeps recommend a full cleaning after about 180 uses.

Pull out the ladder and make for the gutters this fall. First, clear out all gutters and downspouts and check for any alignment or leakage problems.

Mike McClintock, author of "Home Sense: A Year-Round Practical Guide for the Homeowner" (Scribner), says that one way to keep unwanted snow and ice from gutters is by installing heat tapes in a zigzag pattern along the last few courses of shingles and in the gutter trough.

Windows are often the big culprit when it comes to drafts and loss of heat in the house. Windows should be caulked every two or three years. Putty where it's necessary. Take down the screens and put up the storms. Replace any loose weather-stripping around the doors.

The cold can do extreme damage to water lines, so insulate any pipes that might be subject to freezing. While, you're still outside, check the driveway for any cracks and seal them.

Beyond checking the efficiency of the heating system, people often save much of the interior work for a spring overhaul. But cleaning experts say the fall is one of the best times to get the house in shape in preparation for vigorous winter use.

Chaparral, Realtors is noted for dedicated agents, brokers

Chaparral, Realtors has been serving the Midland real estate market for 12 year with a staff of professional associates who demonstrate an enthusiasm and dedication for their profession on a daily basis. Chaparral is currently enjoying the traditional "slower months" by putting approximately one house under contract every day.

Pine

"In a previous article, I talked about our excitement with our six new agents and our new corporate director/office manager. I also discussed what our office offers new trainees and the reasons for their affiliation with us," explained Norma Pine, owner of Chaparral, Realtors. "Deborah Pierce is our newest associate and I would also like to brag a little about some of our other super agents — Ella Barnett, Jean Farris and Alice Howard — all of whom are brokers who have been with Chaparral a number of years."

Chaparral has seven brokers associated with their office. Obtaining a broker status is the highest attainable license that is issued by the Texas Real Estate Commission.

"As a broker of 15 years in our community, I have a great appreciation for Midlanders," explained Pine. "In this profession, I am one who is constantly in motion, talking enthusiastically about what I do best — selling real estate. As the owner/president of Chaparral, Realtors, I am an aggressive woman who has a very aggressive company."

For a multi-million dollar producer, Pine is modest about her accomplishments. Her recipe for success works. "I do not think of this work as a job. I really do not know if it is work or play because I love this business so much."

Barnett

Ella Barnett, broker, is a cofounder of Chaparral, Realtors. She is very proud to be a part of Chaparral Realtors' past and present.

"This company has maintained its reputation for honesty, fairness and professionalism through out its lifetime. I wish each of my friends, customers, clients and associates the best in health and happiness in the holidays to come. Also, I wish for them a wonderful 1991," stated Barnett.

Farris

Jean Farris is a broker/associate who has been in Midland for 38 years. She is active in the Republican Women's Club and Crestview Baptist Church. Farris appreciates the many friends, customers and clients who have made her 15 years in real estate so satisfying.

She has been an associate of Chaparral, Realtors for over six years. "I wish everyone a happy Thanksgiving and very joyous holidays," concluded Farris.

Pierce

Chaparral's newest associate, Deborah Pierce, is a graduate of Lee High School. She attended the University of Texas at El Paso and has been a professional for many years.

"My husband is active in commercial real estate, so I am not new to the real estate field. I am very excited about my association with Chaparral, Realtors and I invite all of my friends to come by and visit me at my new office," said Pierce.

Howard

Alice Howard is a dedicated, full-time real estate professional who has lived in Midland for over 30 years. She is also a broker and she knows Midland, from its schools and special attractions to the housing market. Before obtaining her real estate license in 1981, Howard worked for Shell Oil Company and as a teacher in the Midland Independent School District for 20 years.

She received her broker's license in 1985 and has received recognitions and awards as having excelled in real estate sales. Howard has also consistently received the Midland Dollar Sales Award from the Midland Board of Realtors.

"I enjoy aiding people in their home needs, from the first time home buyer to marketing Midland's finer homes. I would like to take this opportunity to to express my appreciation to all of my clients and friends in helping me to real the Million Dollar Sales Award again this year," concluded Howard.

Pine feels that these super agents are what makes Chaparral, Realtors the outstanding firm it has become in the past 12 years and one of the reasons they pride themselves with the reputation that the Midland community has given them. "Please call and visit with these super agents on any of your real estate questions. Or just drop by and see us. We are located on the corner of Loop 250 and Garfield in The Colonnade at Polo Park," concluded Pine.

Langston Realtors Talk about...

Strengthened market, firm's growth

Langston

Each month's MLS statistics on residential sales give us an even more positive view of the Midland market.

Since July, 1989, those statistics have shown increase every month in the number of sales over that same month the year before. They have also shown definite trends for an increase in average sales prices and in sales price to list price ratios, and accompanying trends for a decrease in the number of homes on the market and for the average days on the market of those properties.

October's statistics were no exception:

	10/90	10/89	10/88
Number of Sales	138	127	110
Average Sales Price	$79,497	$72,269	$69,068
Sales price: List price	96.47	94.45
Number of homes on market	1046*	1154	1167
Average Days on Market	131*	146	147

*September, 1990

However, one of the most encouraging signs of our aggressive market is a 35 percent increase (YTD 1990 over YTD 1989) in the number of sales of new homes as reported through MLS. One only has to drive north and west of the city to see the splurge of new construction: only a few lots are left in Polo and Saddle Club South. Within two years, Briarwood and Grassland Estates have grown from acreage to lovely subdivisions; Trinity Meadows has built out and that market moved over to a booming Trinity West; and Fairmont Park has experienced a new popularity because of some exceptionally nice homes for the mid-range market built by some of our finest builders.

Greentree North, because of the number of large executive homes being built and the enormous number of lots sold in just the past few months, is another extremely positive example of the vigorous new construction market. No lake lots, only one or two estate-sized lots and a limited number of other golf course lots remain for purchase by an individual; builders who have monitored the quality and speed of development in the area have purchased the balance for their own inventory of sites for custom and speculative construction.

More than 18 months ago we predicted this strengthening in the market. And, realizing that if you stand still in an improving market, you are actually going backwards, we made a commitment to growth for our firm, Langston Realtors. Within the past 14 months, we have added an Administrative V.P., Pat Orseth, who is one of the most effective, qualified administrators and educators, we've ever seen; an outstanding new Corporate Services V.P., Penny Willhite; and a Third Party/REO Specialist, Tish Duncan, to market Langston's corporate services. We have also added office space, a receptionist, three new support members for our sales associates, a state of the art Voice Mail system, and new agents to make Langston Realtors nearly twice or more as large as other firms in the city.

Our commitment to expansion has resulted in the company's positive growth, increasing market share, and a secure lead in volume and unit sales of properties over $100,000. We've expanded this commitment in 1991 to include additional top associates, staff, office space, and training opportunities for experienced as well as new associates. Our goals for Langston Realtors are the same as those of this vibrant city: continued growth, recognition, excellence, diversity and development of opportunities. Both the city and our firm are well on the road to meeting those goals!

Thinking of leasing a new apartment?
Consider the comments of this Rental Expert.

Initially, I thought all rental agents were the same - they just wanted to lease apartments.

Yet, at Polo Park they really did try to help me find just the right apartment to suit my needs. Plus, they helped me get familiar with the area and made my move a pleasant experience.

But the final factor affecting my decision to lease my new apartment from Polo Park was the "We Care" Attitude of the entire staff and the service and attention I received personally. I really felt like my concerns were important and when it comes to making a decision about moving I feel thats important.

When you care to give THE VERY BEST

By Tina Stewart
Staff Writer

If you've looked at the calendar lately or walked down the "seasonal aisle" at the local grocery stores, it's hard not to notice that Christmas is right around the November corner. Already, department stores are gearing up for holiday shopping, store managers are pacing the floors and salepersons are preparing for the 44 days of Christmas shopping that loom ahead.

But for some, the best gifts are homemade. For example, Paula McCarroll of Midland remembers distinctly the time her Mom stayed up all night pouring extra care and energy into a handmade birthday gift for one of her school friends. Sheepishly, Ms. McCarroll presented the gift and hoped it wouldn't stand out against the shine, shimmer and elegance of the store bought presents.

But a funny thing happened. After her friends saw the special characteristics and details of the homemade gift, they wanted one too. Ms. McCarroll said her Mom would end up taking orders for look alikes of the gift for several of her friends.

You could say that Ms. McCarroll "inherited" her mother's talent. As she sat among wreathes, decorated T-shirts and sweatshirts, and handmade jewelry in the room that was supposed to be a office, she said she enjoys spending time making gifts and crafts because it's something to do instead of watching television.

To get ideas for new craft designs, Ms. McCarroll usually spots items already

HAVE YOU HEARD

Engaged couple honored with parties

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

McKnight-Harrison

Co-hostesses were Sudy (Mrs. H.G.) Bedford, Carol Jo (Mrs. Jack) Blake, Betty Rae (Mrs. Paul) Davis, Louise (Mrs. Garland) Lang, Ruth (Mrs. Richard) Story, Betty (Mrs. Bill) Sumner, Peggy (Mrs. Gene) Schafer and Barbara (Mrs. Ralph) Way.

Special guests included the bride's mother, Barbara (Mrs. Charles) Hartwell, and sister, Holly (Mrs. Phillip) Huffines of Dallas, and the groom's mother, Sylvia (Mrs. Charles) Branch of San Antonio.

Delicious teatime refreshments were served from a table decorated with fall flowers.

Among the guests sharing in the festive occasion were Elizabeth (Mrs. H.W.) Davidson, Lynn Mashburn, Jeanne (Mrs. William) Beach, Mary (Mrs. Bob) Watson, Rosalind Redfern, Nancy (Mrs. Richard) Gibson and Sarilyn (Mrs. Bill) Black.

The couple will be married Nov. 24 in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

WEARING HER MOTHER'S 1939 wedding gown, Laura Hamilton became the bride of Robert Volkmann the afternoon of Nov. 3 in the Unitarian Universalist Church. The groom's family was unable to attend, but they had the next best thing to being there. The ceremony was piped in live to their home in Wisconsin, and a video tape made to send to them.

Following the 1:30 o'clock service, a reception was held at the residence of James Stevens.

Among those present to offer their congratulations and best wishes to the couple were Betty and Charles Moore, Elinore Chase, Treva and H.L. Beckmann, Mary Frances Beverley, Lois and Ken Carpenter, Pam Howell and Nellie Fields.

After a honoeymmon at the Gage Hotel in Marathon, the couple are at home in Midland.

THE GREEN TREE Country Club Ladies Association held its fifth annual bridge tournament recently, with 20 tables in play. Marcie (Mrs. Ed) Lohmann was chairman.

High scores were won by Mary Reton, Mary Basset, Sue Fisher and Kathy Motley. Winning second high were Jerry (Mrs. Ralph) Crays, Jan Brown, Patt (Mrs. Ross) Simpson and Marion (Mrs. Cliff) Matthews. Third high winners were Sharon (Mrs. John) Brose, Wana Bickerstaff, Thelma Frazier and Snookie Howard.

The awarding of a number of door prizes and table prizes added to the fun of the occasion.

A NUMBER OF MIDLANDERS and former Midlanders attended the wedding and reception of Risa Renshaw and Steve Mendenhall, both of which took place Saturday afternoon at the Dallas Arboretum Camp Estate on White Rock Lake.

Parents of the couple are Charlene and Johnie Renshaw of Longview and Diane and Richard Mendenhall of Midland.

The Rev. Dick Braun of Midland officiated at the wedding. Interestingly enough, he also had baptized Steve and his sisters, Stephanie Stewart and Sharon Mendenhall at Westminster Presbyterian Church (now Trinity Presbyterian Church) when they were infants.

Former Midlanders attending the festivities were Dan Wiger of Dallas, Sue and Everett Sharp of Houston, Sharon Mendenhall of Dallas and Stephanie and Vernon Stewart and children, Lacey and Will, of Lewisville.

Among the Tall City residents present were Annette (Mrs. Dick) Braun, Sharon and Jerry Dunnam, Brookie and Don Green, Emily and Dave Goodfellow, Karen and Paul Raymond, Colleen and Vince Scury, Sandy and Jim Alsup, Devin Alsup, Shailete Dunnam and John Abbott.

Following a honeymoon to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, Steve and Risa will move to Burlington, Vermont, where he will be the general manager for a new Marriott Hotel.

Parties in Midland, Dallas and Lake Cherokee near Longview honored the couple prior to their wedding. The rehearsal dinner was hosted at Dallas' Lakewood Country Club by the groom's parents on the eve of the wedding. The tables were decorated in the bride's chosen colors of teal and purple.

GIFT: Best gifts can be homemade made in stores or at craft shows and carefully examines them. Then she can usually create a replica of the item, or something similar. That is how she got the idea to start making paper earrings.

The earrings, made out of mat or poster board, offer a lightweight alternative to wearing metal jewelry. Ms. McCarroll creates a variety of shapes by either tearing or cutting the paper. She then uses fabric stiffener, paint, shellac — and occasionally her microwave — to complete the earrings.

Although her craft habit has become more of a business because she sells items at craft shows and open houses, Ms. McCarroll admitted that she gives a lot of her crafts as gifts to friends. "I give away a lot to people I like," she said, adding, "A gift means more if it's homemade."

If you've always had the itch to "do something" creative and like the idea of giving a handcrafted gift but feel apprehensive about trying to make something — the thought of making a decorated sweatshirt sounds like the equivalent of painting the Mona Lisa — then Sue Johnson, owner of Barker's Gifts in Imperial Shopping Center, has a solution. Ms. Barker is convinced everyone can be creative. "Some are just luckier, but everyone can find out how a product works and get started," she said.

WALKING INTO MS. Johnson's world, ordinary purses become artistic canvases, plain sweatshirts and T-shirts become designer originals, and tennis shoes make a personal statement. However, it's not just that these items are originals or that their quality is outstanding, but also — as Ms. Johnson pointed out — they all look good. "We like to think you can carry something Anne Klein would design," she said.

Ms. Johnson doesn't call these handmade items crafts. Instead, she refers to the items as designs. "Ours aren't crafts. It is designing. Most women want their family and homes to look good, and that's right in line with Christmas giving," she said.

By touring the store, Ms. Johnson can show a plethora of gift-making and gift-giving ideas. She said one of the hottest items going this year is the slip-on button covers. These button covers can be worn on anything with buttons. The covers sport designs ranging from ceramic cows, western boots and hats to faux pearls and jewels. These accessories can update and add life, as well as personalize, any shirt or jacket. The button covers can be made easily or can be purchased preassembled.

The button covers can compliment a tuxedo shirt or a blouse for a fun, upbeat look. The tuxedo shirts are available for $19.95 (undecorated) in white, pink, red and black and can be handpainted to coordinate with the button covers.

DECORATED T-SHIRTS and sweatshirts, especially in holiday designs, are perfect for festive giving. Ms. Johnson has endless list of ideas on designing personalized garments. Handpainting and fabric cutouts (applied like decals) are one of the easiest ways to accessorize a shirt. Often bows and other add-ons are used in combination with the paints and cutouts to create a design.

Even music and lights can be attached to these handmade fashions. For holiday fun, battery-operated devices can be easily attached with Velcro to the inside of a sweatshirt or T-shirt. The device is activated by gently pressing it and can be easily removed from the garment for cleaning.

On the cutting edge of designed garments are the "cutouts." The idea of the cutout sweatshirt or T-shirt is similar to the idea of making cutouts on a snowflake — designs are actually cut out of the garment. For example, during Halloween, a popular design was to cut a pumpkin out of a black T-shirt. The shirt would then be worn layered over an orange shirt so that the cutout area of the black T-shirt would appear orange. The cutouts are especially well accepted as seasonal favorites. Currently, Ms. Johnson has a turkey cutout and other holiday cutouts for shirts for the holidays.

As far as specific trends in the designing element, Ms. Johnson predicts a revival of the western rodeo look. "There will be a change from the southwest to western look. Not the true western look, but the fun 50s, Roy Rogers cowboy look," she said. This look includes cowboy hats, spurs, cowboy boots and "bigger than ever" black and white cow spots.

GIFTS THAT COVER from head to toe are easily in the realm of creative possibilities for the motivated designer. Ms. Johnson displays an array of handmade jewelry (including earrings, necklaces, bolo ties and barpins), hair bows, handpainted purses and cutout tennis shoes that she said any beginner can easily make. "The satisfaction is unbelievable," she said, adding, "and if you do more than one item and use all your supplies, you can save money."

If apprehension still clouds your creative motif, Ms. Johnson offers reassurance and suggestions through her free, half-hour demonstrations weekly at Barker's Gifts. "The thing that takes the most time is designing. We try to eliminate that time so you can get to the fun. Beginners can easily copy, we encourage that, and when they become more confident they can change the design," she said.

Crafts Etc., 4706 N. Midkiff, also offers free demonstrations. Billie Jean Pipkin, floral designer, presents demonstrations on decorating evergreen, spruce, baby's breath and straw grapevine wreathes. "You can make a beautiful arrangement for very little cost," Ms. Pipkin said.

Basically, during the demonstration, Ms. Pipkin said she helps clients design their wreath. Very often this includes picking the supplies and offering assistant with tying bows. "The wreathes are economical and beautiful. They're something you don't buy in a store and there is always a lot of love and interest put in a gift you make yourself — it's something special," she said.

For more information regarding demonstrations, contact Barker's Gift at 694-9425 and Craft Etc. at 694-2696.

Tall, dark, handsome men not necessarily best marrying type

By Barbara DeWitt
N.Y. Times News Service

Tall, dark and handsome guys may turn women's heads, but they're not marriage material.

When they want to settle down, they look past the flash of capped teeth and black, wavy hair. And they zero in on average-sized guys (5 feet 8 inches to 6 feet 2 inches) with large, gentle eyes, a friendly smile, a large chin, high cheekbones, bushy eyebrows and a manly 5 o'clock shadow.

Uh huh. Those are the latest findings from a study on male attractiveness conducted by Michael R. Cunningham, associate professor of psychology at the University of Louisville, Ky., who adds that the ideal man is both cute and rugged. He has good grooming, high social status, is nurturing, protective, friendly, sexually mature and possesses that must-have of the '90s: sensitivity.

Self-esteem seems to be more fragile for girls than it is for boys

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Early adolescent women feel less attractive than their male counterparts and consequently suffer lower self-esteem, according to a Bucknell University psychologist.

"Females between ages 11 and 13 consistently were more down on themselves than males were," says Joel Wade, assistant professor of psychology who has studied more than 1,000 young teens over the past 10 years. "Early adolescence is more turbulent for a girl than a boy. She has a new body to deal with and may experience a little anxiety toward it."

By the time a young woman reaches late adolescence, he says, she becomes less self-conscious and more self-confident. "The women at that age, as a whole, did not tend to belittle their own appearance," he says.

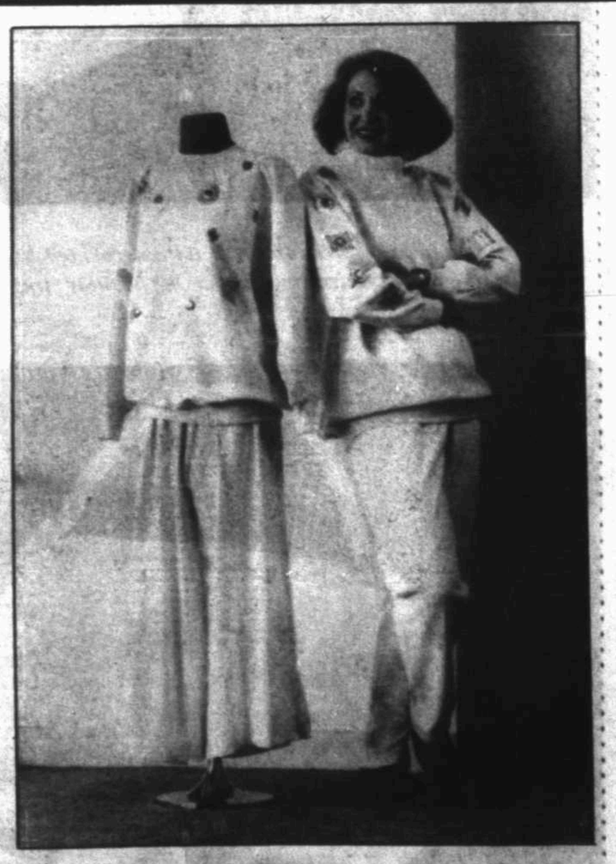

Wade says his findings contribute to a growing body of research on the psychology of self-esteem, which offers hope for understanding and dealing with body image problems that can lead to eating disorders and suicide.

On road to good health, 'follow your nose'

Associated Press

Country air has always had a cleansing effect on the whole body.

But some of the fresh smells found naturally in country air have specific healing powers to clear the head and ease the spirit, according to Country America magazine.

These healing powers are called aromatherapy, which is an example of the growing interest in natural ways to achieve good health, along with exercise and relaxation techniques such as deep breathing, soothing music and pleasant sights and sounds. These have all recently become more accepted and popular.

It's the breathing of fragrances of healthful herbs that lifts our spirits, soothes our minds and relaxes our bodies.

Much of what ails us is more than just physical. Peptic ulcers, colitis, headaches, muscular pains and high blood pressure are just a few of the ailments that relate directly to our stress level and harried state of mind.

The theory behind aromatherapy is that if the mind can be soothed, good health for the whole person will follow on its heels.

Aromatherapy relies on the use of essential plant oils. They are available from natural food and herb stores and farms.

They are highly concentrated, so just a few drops at a time are all that's needed.

For a clogged nose or a tight chest, try these plant oils as an expectorant: Put a few drops of eucalyptus, pine, rosemary or thyme oil in a bowl of just-boiled water, and breathe the vapors every three to four hours for a few minutes each time.

If having a bout of insomnia or just simply needing to relax, blend any of these oils into sachets, potpourris, candles or powders, or mix a few drops with water to breathe in: verbena, lemon, violet, geranium, thyme, lavender, mint, pansy, clove, orange, lime, spearmint, cinnamon, nutmeg, lilac and honeysuckle.

Copley News Service

Trust your taste buds when judging the nutritional value of orange juice, advise United States Drug Administration experts. Their research shows that as orange juice loses flavor it also loses vitamin C. If juice tastes old, flat and stale, it can no longer provide its full complement of vitamin C.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Avoid drain problems during holidays

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — The holiday season usually is the busiest time of the year in America's kitchens. It's also the time most kitchen drains get clogged and garbage disposal systems need fixing. Here are four tips from Roto-Rooter Corp. to avoid problems:

- Don't put banana peels, carrots, celery or other hard-to-grind fibrous waste into your garbage disposal.
- Always run water for 20 seconds before and after using the unit and never start it with a full load of garbage.
- Never try to sharpen disposal blades by putting in items such as broken glass, marbles or bones, which can damage the unit.
- Avoid putting any grease down drains. It builds up a coating on pipes which leads to serious clogs. Put grease into a container and place with the trash.

Newlyweds use home for workplace ideas

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

New ideas for home design often come from the workplace. The home Karen Daroff and Jim Rappoport designed and built for themselves incorporates commercial ideas into comfortable quarters.

As principals in Daroff Design Inc. in Philadelphia, they create interiors for offices, hospitals and hotels. They decided to cooperate on their home, using the theories, techniques and materials they generally apply on the job. The pure white pavilion they created — a severe temple of modern architecture — is set on a wooded acre adjacent to Philadelphia's Fairmount Park.

The designers used materials that have performed well in commercial space: The windows are standard-size insulated reflective glass, which keeps the rooms cooler in summer and warmer in winter. White marble tiles in the bathroom, says Karen "make you feel as though you're in a Milanese hotel.

"We installed all the necessary smoke detectors and security devices. Edges are rounded, not sharp. Materials we are using don't contribute to flame spread and toxicity."

Their expertise helped keep costs for the 4,500-square-foot house to about $100 a square foot, compared with the usual $180 for custom building.

They chose ready-made components and limited on-site work to save money without sacrificing the look they wanted. For example, though pocket doors can be expensive to install, selecting a door size that is available precut minimized the cost.

Rappoport situated the house to take advantage of the trees that surround it. In summer these trees cool and shade the many-windowed structure. In winter the house should be flooded with light, the sun providing solar heat.

All the rooms on the first floor open onto the main living space in the center of the house, where the ceiling is a pyramidal skylight. Rappoport calls the concept "interpenetrating spaces." When you are in any one room, you can see other rooms beyond, which creates a sense of spaciousness. Pocket doors — they slide into the wall when not in use — allow rooms to be closed off when desirable.

The couple purchased their sleek laminate-surface kitchen cabinets, the granite for the countertops, some storage furniture, floor and bath tiles and marble directly from the Italian manufacturers. All were shipped from Italy to Philadelphia in a container.

The $55,000 cost of the Italian components was about one-third the U.S. retail price, according to Rappoport, who makes the procedure sound easy: "When the container arrived at the seaport here, I hired a guy with a truck to deliver the container to our site. It cost $250."

As his own contractor, Rappoport went to the site daily at 7 a.m. He hired the subcontractors himself. He made sure materials were there when needed because, he says, scheduling is usually the biggest problem on jobs.

"Workers leave the site when the materials they need are not right on hand," he says. "Once they leave, it's very difficult to get them back, and the time needed to complete the building starts escalating."

If trust is an essential part of marriage, Karen and Jim are ahead of the game. This spring, Karen was planning the couple's wedding, set for mid-June in the house that was then just a shell. Construction was being supervised by Jim. Building a house together is not usually recommended as a good introduction to marriage. Perhaps it should be.

"Overall, it was a positive experience. We both worked hard to incorporate each other's ideas," says Karen. "At first, it was difficult. We are both very opinionated."

Though the house would not be ready to live in for several months, Daroff and Rappoport were married there in June.

"It was a beautiful day," says Karen. "The house was cheerful with a great sense of welcome and light and our guests commented on what a wonderful party house it is."

Color can 'dress up' family home

Associated Press

The color of a home makes a first and lasting impression. People who have been playing it safe the last few years by painting the exterior of the house white or beige, may want to consider splashing on a little color.

According to Do It Yourself, color works its magic by altering proportions, calling attention to details, helping a house to blend with its surroundings and masking flaws. Best of all, it can give the house a fresh new look without seriously denting the family budget. An average-size house costs about $2,000 to paint.

Homeowners should start by thinking about the kinds of colors with which they feel the most comfortable. Cool sea colors, warm earth ones and restrained neutrals are all very different options. Each choice would result in a different image — from a conservative facade to a bold expression. Family taste should be considered before making a decision.

Then, consider how color can help achieve the desired results.

- Perk up a boxy house with colorful trim around windows and doors, along the eaves, and on the porch.
- Unify the look of a home with subtle paint colors in the same color family.
- Emphasize architectural detailing with a contrasting color.
- Tie together a sprawling house by using a strong trim color all around.
- Turn a boxy house into an eye-catcher with distinct colors that accent peaks and details.
- Paint bold and bright colors on a large house, and highlight its architectural features with white or a neutral.

Utilize laundry bin

NEW YORK — If you're entertaining for the holidays and have more dirty dishes than counter space, Gala Foods, a New York caterer, has a suggestion.

Use a laundry bin lined with a trash bag to stack the dishes until the guests have gone.

Not only does it look neat, it will provide more work space.

AT WIT'S END

Silence not golden off silver screen

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

Men who walk around like they have a mouthful of Novocain have always been admired and respected for it. The moody, silent type is the goal of every woman who lusts — for Brando or Bronson, for Eastwood or Redford. All these sex symbols have to do is to sit there and stare, and imagination writes the dialogue for them.

On the screen, it's great. In real life, it's the pits. A man who does not talk eventually can drive you crazy. Talking with some husbands and fathers is like an evening of sound bites.

"What do you want for dinner?"

"I don't care."

"I want you to speak to your son."

"What about?"

"Talk to me."

"What do you want me to say?"

"Do you love me?"

"What a question."

I think men have romanticized this image for so long, they're beginning to believe that silence presents them as mysterious and deep. They don't answer phones. They don't waste breath talking to recordings. They don't gossip. They never hear rumors. In fact, they never know anything until it is on the 6 o'clock news.

If I was that quiet, my husband would put a mirror near my lips to make sure I was breathing.

The basic difference between the social interaction of the sexes can best be described by a phone call that comes into your home. If it's for your husband, he will respond, "Yeah? No kidding! That's astounding. I don't believe it! Have you told anyone else? You've got to hang tough. Talk to you later."

When you ask, "Who was that?" he says, "Nobody." When you ask, "What happened to nobody?" he replies, "Nothing."

I can go into a roadside restroom for five minutes and come out with 200 miles of non-stop conversation about it. I know who was in there, what they said about road conditions, restaurants, their kids, their gas mileage and their financial statement.

In a world where communication is state of the art, I worry about the silent types. However, the other day I heard a voice and realized my husband was talking to himself.

What a waste. He should have confided in someone who listens.

LIVING IN THE WILD, WILD WEST

Midlanders Wayne Barton and Stan Williams may have their homes firmly established in modern West Texas, but they each spend many hours "living in the wild, wild West." However, this doesn't mean they play cowboys and Indians — even though after talking with them, you might think that they would prefer to — but they do write about the Old West days. In fact, the trail they have blazed in Western fiction writing has earned them several awards as well as the distinction of being billed as "Today's hot new Western action team!"

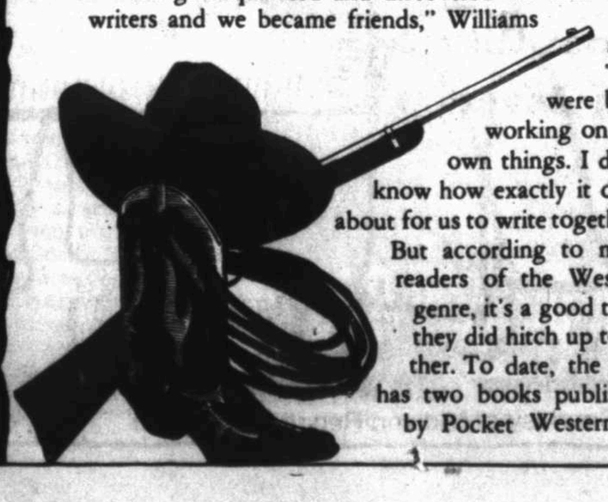

The duo will be speaking about their writing experiences at the Writers' Society meeting 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Midland Community Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley. The meeting is open to the public.

"One thing we've discovered is we really enjoy speaking together almost as much as writing together," Williams said.

Both men have what others would term "normal" lives. Barton is an engineer with ARCO, and Williams is an assistant professor of English at Odessa College. But they also have a dream they share; a dream to write.

AFTER MEETING one another about 15 years ago at a meeting at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, the two didn't see each again until they ended up serving on the same jury.

"We got aquainted and discovered we were both writers and we became friends," Williams said. "We were both working on our own things. I don't know how exactly it came about for us to write together." But according to many readers of the Western genre, it's a good thing they did hitch up together. To date, the duo has two books published by Pocket Western — "Warhorse" and "Live By the Gun" — and Bartons' two previous individual books titled "Ride Down Wind" and "Return to Phantom Hill" (which were published in hard back) were reissued as part of the four-book deal with Pocket Western. They also have several short stories published in magazines, both as individual writers and as a team. In fact, the two joke that they put one magazine out of business.

"Warhorse," their first collaborated book, was a project the men worked on during 1986-87 and it was published in April 1988.

"It took about six to nine months for it (the book) to go through the process (of being published)," Barton said.

On the back cover of "Warhorse," Barton and Williams are described this way: "Writers in the classic Western tradition, award-winner Wayne Barton and partner Stan Williams are today's most exciting Western storytellers. Wayne Barton has received the Golden Spur award and the Medicine Pipe Bearer's award from the Western Writers of America."

Their second Western fiction, "Live By the Gun," was published in the spring of 1989. In fact, the book was a finalist for the 1989 Golden Spur Awards.

"We've been very lucky," Barton said of team's first efforts being accepted by a publishing house.

AS FOR THEIR formula to success, the recipe seems simple.

"We brainstorm a plot and the characters. Then Stan (Williams) does the first draft. I follow up with a final draft and we meet periodically," Barton said. "We've asked a lot of teams how they do their writing, and they all seem to do it in different ways. You should just do whatever works. ... We have a good balance."

Barton said he had always been interested in writing. "It was something I had always wanted to do, but I knew nobody made any money writing, so ... I became an engineer," Barton said.

After settling into his career, he found that his desire to write had not dimmed. He started writing short stories and sold the first two he attempted to sell. "I got lucky," Barton said. "I thought, 'Hey, there's nothing to this.' But it was almost two years before I sold another one."

Barton's first book, "Ride Down Wind," was really more of an accident than a plan. "I started writing a short story, and it kept getting longer," he said. "I worked on it off and on. With the first one (first book), at the beginning, I really learned a lot."

Williams, who has been a professor of English for 20 years (17 of which have been at OC), had always been interested in writing and had several published works before hooking up with Barton.

"The hardest part of writing is dealing with the disappointment of getting one back in the mail. You never get used to the rejection," Williams said.

Although both men had written about topics outside the Western genre, "I kept coming back to this area and the people I know," Barton said.

To write accurately about the period of time in a manuscript, many writers spend months doing nothing by research, but, "Research implies a lot more organization than we have," Barton said. "We read a lot and explore a lot of that area (that the book will be set in). The people we write about are not all that different from those we know today; their attitudes, their dreams, their desires."

Barton and Williams both said it is important for the proper hardware to be used in their books, not only in the guns used by their good guys and bad guys, but also the farm equipment and other utensils.

"If you convince people you know what you're talking about in certain areas, then they'll believe what you're talking about," Barton said.

"And if you get the background right, it makes it easier for people to believe in your characters," Williams said.

FOR THOSE WHO are interested in becoming writers, "Take two asprin and lie down until it goes away," Barton advised jokingly.

"But probably the advice that everybody gives and nobody listens to is to set aside some time and space everyday and write. And don't stop when you get

Please see WRITERS/2F

WRITERS: Duo works on third book

discouraged. Work on writing like you would work and anything else," Barton said.

"Oh! Is that what I should do? That's very good advice," Williams quipped.

Although both writers believe writing everyday is good advice, they admit it doesn't always work that way with their schedules.

"You should also read what you want to write," Williams added, "the best in that area."

For the Western genre, Barton and Williams selected Elmer Kelton of San Angelo as the best living Western writer.

"Anyone who doesn't write does not realize how much work it is," Barton said, adding that it helps to have an understanding family as well if you want to be a writer.

"When it's going well, it's a tremendous amount of fun," Williams added.

'Anyone who doesn't write does not realize how much work it is (but) when it's going well, it's a tremendous amount of fun.'

— Author Stan Williams

As for projected completion dates, the team said they set a time limit for the finish of their projects, "but we never conform," Barton said.

Therefore, there is not a set date for the arrival of their third joint effort, tentatively titled "Manhunt," which is now in the works. The plot involves an investigative western murder set in this region. The title is tentative due to the publisher's option to change it.

For those who might like to read one of the Western duo's books, Waldenbooks in Midland Park Mall, Miz B's Used Books at 402 Kent and Daily News & Tobacco at 1028-D Andrews Hwy. try to keep them in stock. And for those who would like to hear an inside view of writing in the Western genre with a dusting of humor attached, visit the Writers' Society meeting and listen to Barton's and Williams' presentation.

Who knows, they may be blazing a trail into the wild, wild West that will lead them straight to the top of the best seller list some day.

When baby's all-night wails get on your nerves, get to his belly — with a heating pad on low setting, or a warm water bottle. Both can help ease Junior's pain, according to Linda Jonides, a pediatric nurse practitioner in Ann Arbor, Mich. Make sure you place a towel between the baby and the water bottle to prevent burns.

DEAR ABBY

Family fights over military service

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Is it true that if a man or woman has lost a family member in war, that person is automatically exempt from active duty should a war break out?

Please clarify this in your column, as we are having a small war in our household over this question. — BATTLING IN BOSTON

Van Buren

DEAR BATTLING: Hold your fire! According to the Public Affairs Office of the Department of the Army, if a member of the armed services has lost an immediate family member (father, mother, brother, sister or child) in a DESIGNATED hostile-fire or imminent-danger area (the loss may be due to death, missing in action, or from a 100 percent physical or mental disability), the service person can apply for exemption. It is not "automatic."

The service member initiates action by contacting his company commander. For an immediate family member to make application, a request must be made in writing to: HQDA, DAPC-EPO-C, Alexandria, Va. 22331-0400. And the service member may waive a request initiated by an immediate family member and still serve in the hostile-fire area.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you had a letter about a woman who had left her dentures on a counter of a large department store in Washington state. The finders tracked her down and shipped the dentures to her, but she never bothered to write a note of thanks. Well, you ain't heard nuthin' yet:

I am the manager of a fine restaurant in Atlanta that caters to conventioneers. After a busy evening, one of our busboys turned in an envelope containing $465 in cash and a check stub with nothing but the name of a New York university and "travel advance" printed on the envelope. The busboy, who makes $3.35 an hour, turned the money over to me, since I was the manager on duty, and I put it in the safe. The next day, I phoned the university in New York and explained the situation.

The next day, the woman who had lost the envelope came in to claim the $465. She gushed her thanks saying, "I'm from New York and I'm not used to this kind of honesty." She asked for the name of our supervisor so she could write a letter of thanks and praise for the busboy who had turned it in. I gave her the information, hoping she would reward the busboy with a little something.

Not only did he receive nothing — not even a note — she did not write to our supervisor. I was flabbergasted. The busboy is young, and I can only hope he doesn't go through the rest of his life thinking honesty stinks. — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: Why do joggers run in the street instead of on the sidewalk?

I nearly killed one the other day; he was running at night, in the street, wearing dark clothes. — FURIOUS IN FALLS CHURCH, VA.

DEAR FURIOUS: I have dealt with this problem several times in an effort to protect not only joggers, but also the motorists who hit them. This is what one motorist had to say back in May 1985:

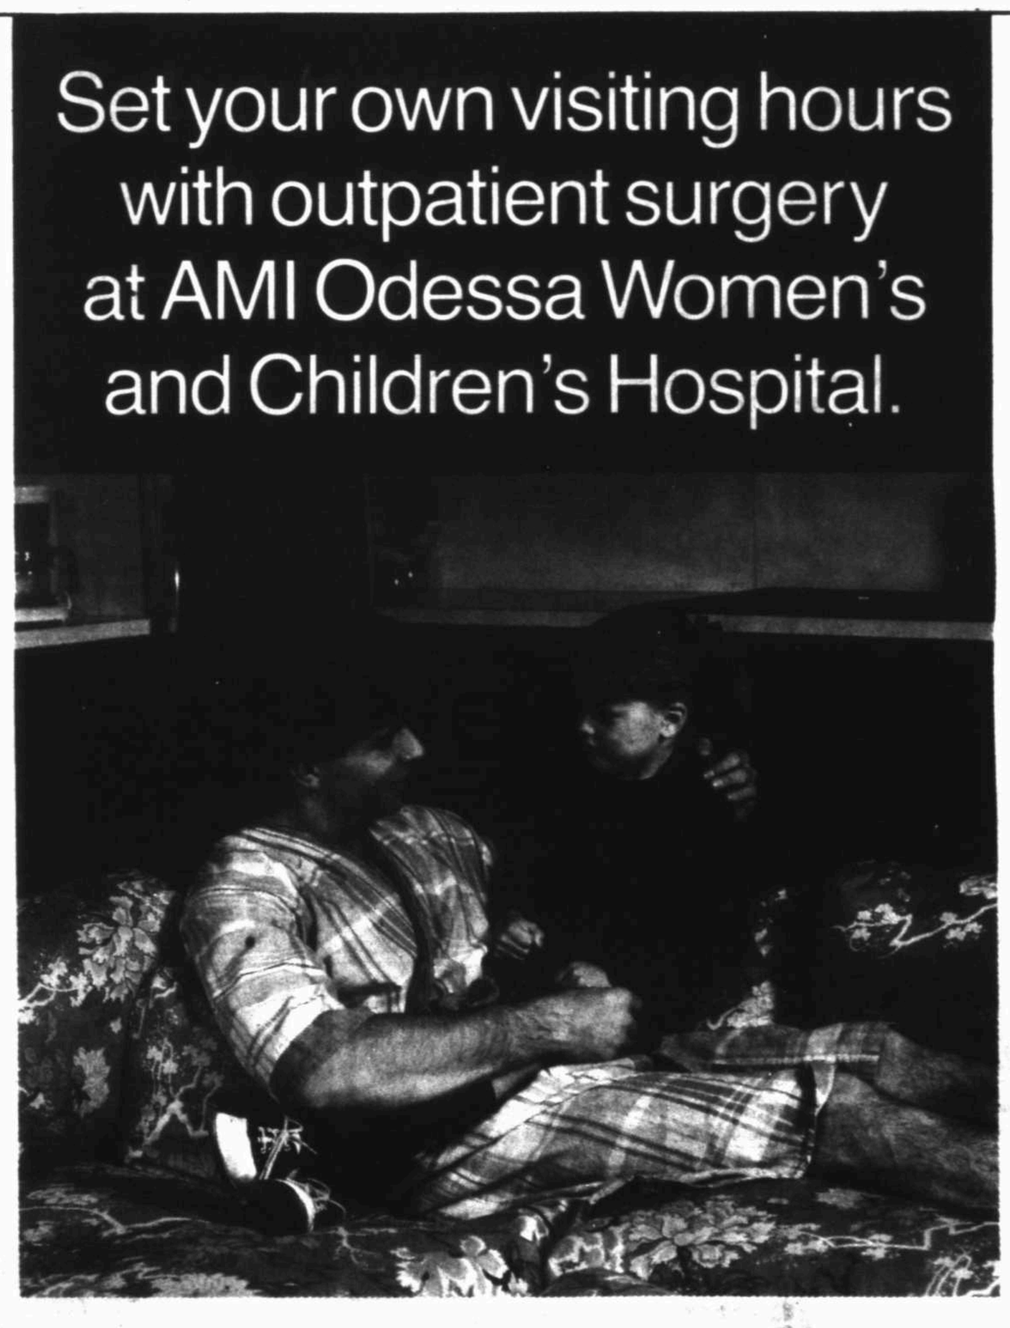

DEAR ABBY: This evening I came so close to hitting a jogger, my heart is still pounding. In the first place, this idiot was jogging on a dark street at about 11 p.m. He was wearing a black sweatsuit with a hood, and nowhere did he have any reflectors or luminous tape. You can buy that stuff by the yard in any sporting goods shop and sew (or pin) it on your clothing. There are even reflecting shoelaces that light up in the dark.

People that stupid make me sick. Every day, nuts like that are killed by innocent motorists, who then have to carry the unearned guilt around for the rest of their lives. — STILL SHAKING IN VEGAS

Problems? Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Six Flags Over Texas readied for holidays

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — Elaborate Christmas decorations and more than a half million twinkling lights will set the scene as Six Flags Over Texas begins its 6th annual Holiday In the Park celebration Nov. 23.

New for the 1990 event well be the "Bugs Bunny Merrie Holiday Ice Revue" in the Good Time Theater. Daffy Duck, Sylvester and other members of the Looney Tunes gang will strap on their ice skates for the show which also features a final birthday salute to Bugs.

Still another ice show, with the emphasis on precision skating, will be featured in the Music Mill Amphitheater.

Most of Six Flags' traditional rides will be silent during the Christmas event, but guests will be able to ride the Silver Star Carousel, the Six Flags Railroad, the Avalanche Bobsled, a real snow hill for siedding and a special holiday version of the Spelunkers Cave.

Special holiday musical productions will be staged in the Southern Palace Music Hall and the Crazy Horse Saloon.

Carolers and musical groups will stroll the streets of Six Flags, adding to the holiday mood.

The Parade of Trees will present lavishly decorated Christmas trees styled and executed by friends of Six Flags.

Holiday foods will be served in the park's restaurants, and shops will be filled with gift ideas.

There will be a special fireworks show on opening night only. "Holiday Fireworks In Stereo" will feature show 20 minutes of aerial fireworks in the holiday colors: red, green and gold, with occasional flashes of white to simulate snowflakes.

The fireworks display will be choreographed to holiday music broadcast in stereo by Dallas radio station KVIL-FM.

Holiday In the Park will be staged Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings begining Nov. 23. Nightly operation will begin Dec. 14 and continue through New Year's Eve. The park will be closed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

Hours of operation will be 5 p.m.-11 p.m. each night. All tickets will be $7.95, plus tax. Children age two and under are admitted free.

Christmas exhibit features miniature train set-up

Staff Report

DALLAS — Hitch a ride with your imagination as 350 miniature train cars journey through a snow-covered Texas country side from Dallas at Christmas.

The image is created by one of last season's most talked about must-sees on exhibit, the one-of-a-kind train exhibit by collector Ban Bywaters benefiting the Ronald McDonald House of Dallas.

More than 100,000 people are expected to view the Holiday '90 exhibit at the Dallas Galleria, Dallas Parkway and LBJFreeway on Level III by Marshall Field's.

The private collection includes 12 "0" gauge Lionel type trains running simultaneously over 2,000 linear feet of track departing from a miniture Dallas skyline and traveling through moonlit mountains amidst a winter wonderland.

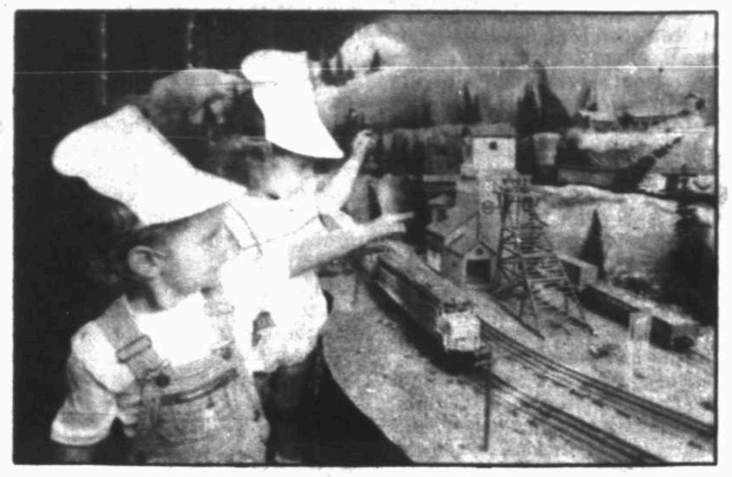

The orginal collection was bought secondhand by Bywater's father as a Christmas gift for him and his brother. Every year there would be an additional set under the Christmas tree.

The exhibit is opens to the public Saturday. Hours are 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and noon-6 p.m. Sundays.

The exhibit will close at 5 p.m. Nov. 21 and Dec. 24 and 31, and will be closed Thanksgiving and Christmas days. It will be available for viewing through 5 p.m. Jan. 1.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 14 and senior citizens.

Natural history expedition scheduled for January

Staff Report

Texas State Aquarium in Corpus Christi will sponsor an 11-day natural history expedition to the world's second largest barrier reef in Belize, and to the archaelogical sites in Tikal, Central America. The expedition, scheduled for Jan. 28-Feb. 7, 1991, will be lead by Dr. Quenton Dokken, executive director of the Aquarium, and Dr. Lee Harper, tropical ecologist and orinthologist from Betchart Expeditions Inc.

The Belize Barrier Reef, a series of reefs extending along the Caribbean coast of the Yucatan and Belize and south, is a creation of coral polyps formed over thousands of years. These colorful reef gardens of coral are home to tropical fish and other aquatic creatures.

The ancient Mayan city of Tikal flourished from A.D. 300 to 900. The city mysteriously collapsed about A.D. 900, and its people disappeared. The ruins include about 3,000 stone temples surrounded by a lush forest.

Also included in the expedition will be visits to Crooked Tree Wildlife Sanctuary, Bird Caye, and Hol Chan Marine Reserve.

The expedition is open to the public but is limited to 17 persons. Accommodations are based on double occupancy with airfare from Houston. Expedition fee is $2,190 per person. Deposit of $300 is required with final payment due Nov. 18. For more information call the Aquarium, (512) 881-1306.

Festival of Lights planned for Dec. 2 at Lake Amistad

Staff Report

Lake Amistad Festival of Lights, a water-borne parade of vessels decorated for the Christmas season, will be presented Dec. 2 along the south shore of Lake Amistad.

The vessels, which are from 18 feet to 50 feet long; include pleasure boats, sailboats, cruisers and houseboats.

Entrants, who pay a nominal entry fee, will begin assemblying their crafts Nov. 27 at the courtesy dock space made available by Lake Amistad Resort and Marina, the event's sponsor.

Viewing areas will be Black Brush park site, Diablo East park site, the cliff area within Diablo East part site and Governor's Landing park site, all along the south shore of Amistad International Reservoir near Del Rio.

The parade will begin near Black Brush park site soon after sundown and proceed westerly along the south shore to the Herb C. Petry Bridge (U.S. 90) and then return to the Diablo East Marina, where the judges will award the prizes.

The Amistad Navy, a social and service organization in which all members are titled "Admiral," is co-host for the event.

Entry forms are available at Lake Amistad Resort and Marina, Del Rio Chamber of Commerce or from Amistad Navy members.

RVs ideal for winter travel

Copley News Service

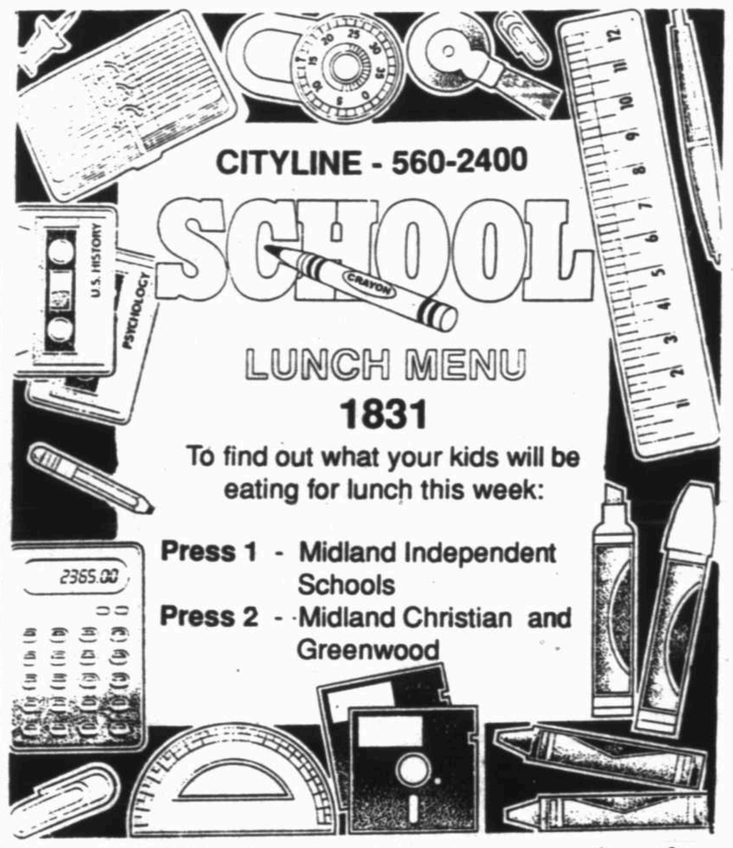

Don't leave your RV parked in the driveway this fall. With their own heat and power source, RVs are catching on as an ideal mode of cool-weather travel.

Touring in an RV makes it easy to admire fall foliage at your own pace. It also makes fall and winter camping a viable alternative. In fact, according to the U.S. Travel Data Center, summer vacations are on the decline, while fall and winter trips are on the rise. That means seeing national parks and other destinations when they're less crowded and at their most spectacular.

For more information contact Recreation Vehicle Industry Association, P.O. Box 2999, 1896 Preston White Drive, Reston, Va. 22090; (703) 620-6003.

SUNDAY BUSINESS DIGEST

Nutty M&Ms

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — M&M-Mars has introduced a peanut butter M&M to cash in on what analysts say is a booming demand for the palate-clinging product.

The newest version of the familiar M&M consists of a creamy peanut butter center covered by a layer of milk chocolate and wrapped in the candy-coated outer shell.

It can be bought only on the West Coast because of limited production capacity, said Bill Deeter, a spokesman for M&M-Mars, a division of Mars Inc. He declined to predict when it would be widely available.

"We're rolling it out as we have the capacity to supply," Deeter said in a telephone interview from his office in Hackettstown, 35 miles west of Newark.

Deeter denied that the popularity of Reese's Pieces — Hershey Foods' peanut butter candy — had fueled M&M-Mars' marketing strategy.

"Mars makes up its mind based on where it sees its opportunities and consumer appetites," Deeter said. "This was the logical next step for the product."

Industry analysts said the new product, which was rolled out in September, underscores an insatiable appetite in the United States for peanut butter.

Yard sale

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Smack in the middle of the upscale neighborhood the former Dallas developer built in the mid-1980s was a sign of the times: "Kenneth Good Estate Liquidation Sale Today."

All day Sunday, the financially troubled developer opened his home for deals on household items ranging from a zebra-skin rugs to plastic tissue dispensers.

The family advertised the sale with signs posted at the main entrances to the 9,000-acre Tampa Palms community north of the University of South Florida.

"We're just getting rid of some stuff," said a young man who identified himself as Good's son.

Good greeted bargain-hunters to the home he once tried to sell for $650,000.

Bad pipe?

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Excavation has begun on nine buried sections of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline for corrosion rechecks after charges the original inspectors were poorly trained or worked under the influence of drugs or booze.

In all, 19 sections of the approximately 800-mile line are to be re-inspected for rust or cracks. A federal criminal investigation, meanwhile, is under way into accusations by a former corrosion inspector that his employer ignored drinking and drug use on and off the job.

"The quality of information related to the corrosion repair work along the pipeline is in question," said Mike Mengle, federal pipeline officer for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Camera provides downhole vision

■ A minature camera, designed to withstand extreme heat and pressure, is allowing oil companies to do a visual inspection of downhole problems.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

"If only we could see what was happening down there!"

That has been the plaintiff cry of the oil industry for generations, as it pondered the problems associated with drilling and producing a well several miles deep.

Now, thanks to a unique downhole video camera, oil operators are able to see what is going on down hole.

They are able to see corroded pipe, plugged perforations, casing leaks, the orientation of formation fractures, and the position of drilling bits, tools and pipe that have broken off and must be fished out of the hole.

The camera is able to provide many unique sights, but perhaps the most spectacular is the actual sight of oil flowing into the well through perforations.

"I have been in the oilpatch for 32 years, and this is the first time I have ever seen oil flowing into a perforation," said Boyce Wilke, divison manager for Otis Engineering Corp., the Odessa service company which rents the new downhole camera.

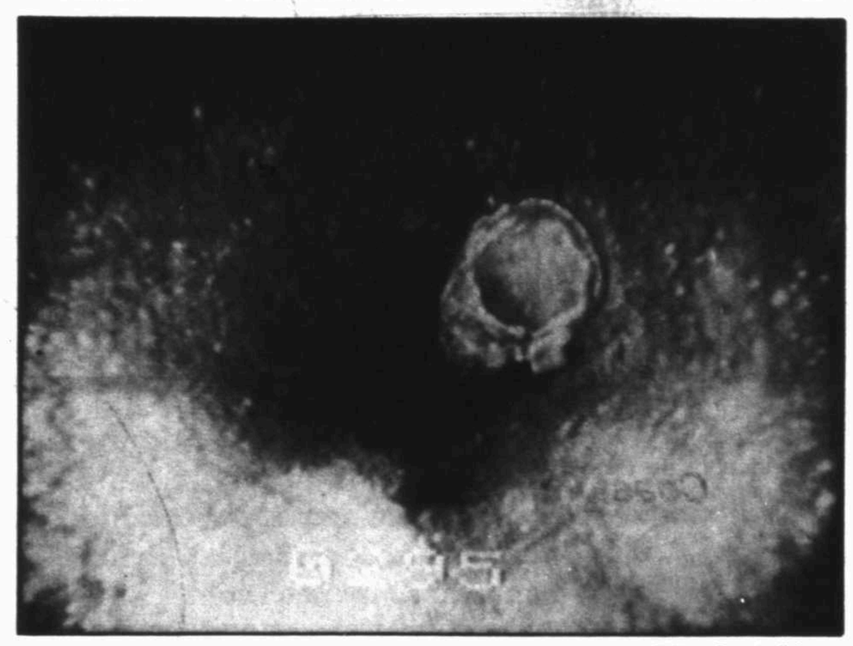

Downhole video cameras have been around for a number of years and have been used primarily in shallow water wells where heat and pressure were not critical and a clear fluid permitted photography. But has been only in recent months that a camera capable of withstanding the hostile conditions of oil and gas wells has been available.

In fact, Westech Inc. which developed the camera chose the 1990 Permian Basin Oil Show to debut the one and one-sixteenth inch camera which is designed to pass through small diameter tubing. The company plans to put the camera to work first in the Permian Basin, then offer it in Alaska and finally the entire U.S.

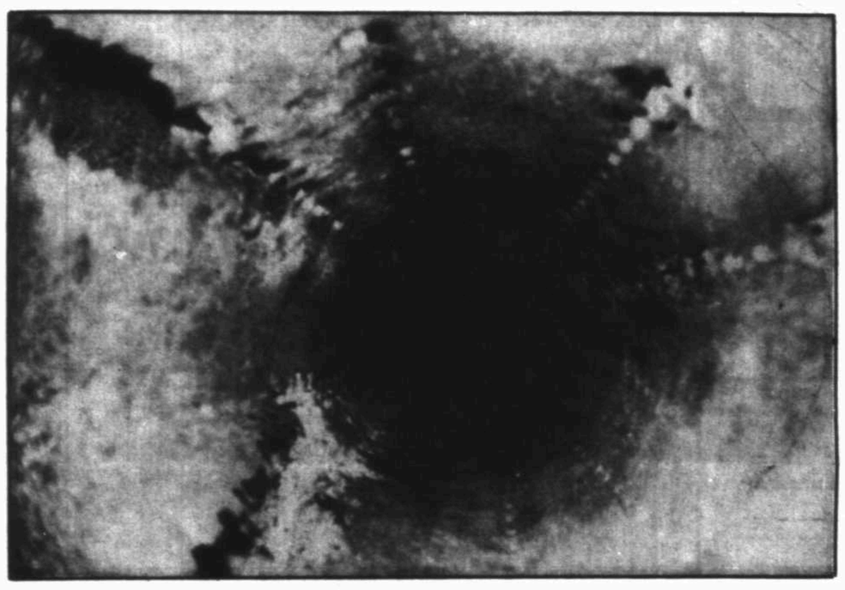

Since making its debut at the Oil Show, Otis has successfully used the camera on six jobs in the Permian Basin and expects demand for the tool will grow rapidly. "We think there will be a many applications for the camera in the Permian Basin, especially since there are so many fields here on secondary and tertiary recovery," said Philip Schultz, vice president and general manager of the California-based Westech Inc.

Baker Hughes chief is a company man

■ Baker Hughes chairman James D. Woods is positioning his company to take advantage of markets, such as international and horizontal drilling, that offer the most promise.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

James D. Woods is a company man. He's the first to admit it.

"I love my job," says the chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of Baker Hughes Inc. "Even when I was at the bottom of the totem pole, I found it challenging and rewarding. When I got restless, they found new challenges for me. Basically, I've only had one job with one company. One company and one wife," he grins.

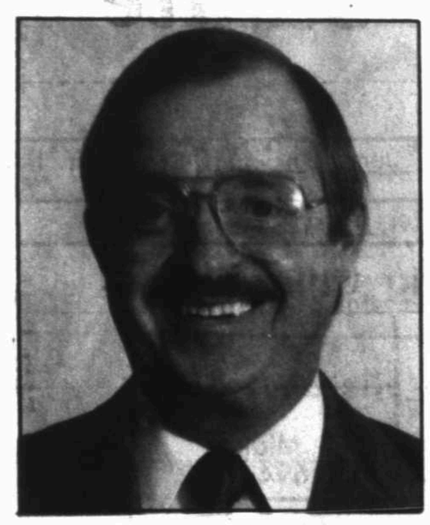

Woods was in Midland this week for the grand opening of Baker's West Texas Region and Odessa District facility on Highway 80, and he had several things on his mind.

Such as the recent lawsuit in which Parker & Parsley won $185 million from former Baker Hughes subsidiary BJ Services and Dresser Industries, former owner of Titan Services Inc. At the time of the alleged infractions, BJ Services was owned 72 percent by Baker Hughes and 28 percent by Dresser Industries.

Asked if he thought the suit would have an impact on how the oil service industry operates, Woods said no.

"I think this was a remote case," he replied. "We'll appeal it, of course, and I think the jury's still out." Since the matter is still under litigation, he declined to comment further.

Woods began with Baker Oil Tools in 1955, working for $1.65 an hour. He started out in the accounting, personnel and pricing departments. "I simply worked my up through that area," he recalled, adding that he was put in a training program that sent him out into the field. He later became company comptroller and vice president, finance before being named chief executive after Baker's merger with Hughes Tool Co.

James D. Woods

As head of one of the nation's leading oil field service companies, he has a definite business philosophy. That philosophy is illustrated by Baker's acquisition last month of The ChemLink Group Inc. by Baker Performance Chemicals Inc., a Baker-Hughes subsidiary. He said at the time the purchase was announced that "ChemLink and its employees are an important strategic addition to our oilfield chemicals business, and will allow Baker Performance Chemicals to be a prominent participant in a growing market segment."

Baker Hughes, according to Woods, is concentrating on those markets in the oil and gas industry where it has the number one or number two position.

"We're pulling the company into a position where the revenue base is high quality. We're strengthening the companies we already have that are high-quality, and spinning-off the lower-quality units. We're not a revenue-chaser as much as we are profit-motivated," he explained.

He noted that Baker Hughes has 13 products and service units, and most of those hold the number one or two position in their market.

Layoffs indicate slowed economy

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Citicorp, General Dynamics, Aetna and General Motors are only a few of the major employers that announced layoffs in recent days. Many economists say it could be just the start of a widespread job scaleback as the economy stalls.

"There will be more layoffs, the unemployment rate will rise, job market conditions will deteriorate for the next six months or longer," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch & Co.

"We haven't had a recession for so long that people forget what happens." Some economists said service jobs may be hit hardest. That's due partly to the 1980s boom in the banking, finance, advertising and other service industries, which allowed these companies to grow fat.

Finance and banking companies "were basically taking anyone who could walk through the door," said Robert Dye of the Wefa Group, an economic forecasting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

But in the face of increasingly grim economic forecasts and figures — compounded by the economic shock from the Persian Gulf standoff — these companies have been letting go of workers in droves. Citicorp, for one, said it will eliminate 2,000 jobs by the end of next year.

"They grew too fast and this is the consequence of growing too fast, a shakeout if you will," said Kenneth Goldstein, an economist with the Conference Board, a New York-based business research group.

The slowdown among financial companies began with the Wall Street crash of October 1987, but has since intensified as small investors have grown more cautious and avoided the stock and bond markets.

The crash, along with the end of the real estate boom and the spread of the savings and loan crisis, also hurt banks and insurers. Aetna Life & Casualty Co., for example, plans to eliminate 2,600 jobs through layoffs and attrition.

Manufacturing companies have fared somewhat better because they learned from the last recession eight years ago to keep operations lean, economists said. But the recent sluggishness has prompted many of them to lay off workers as well.

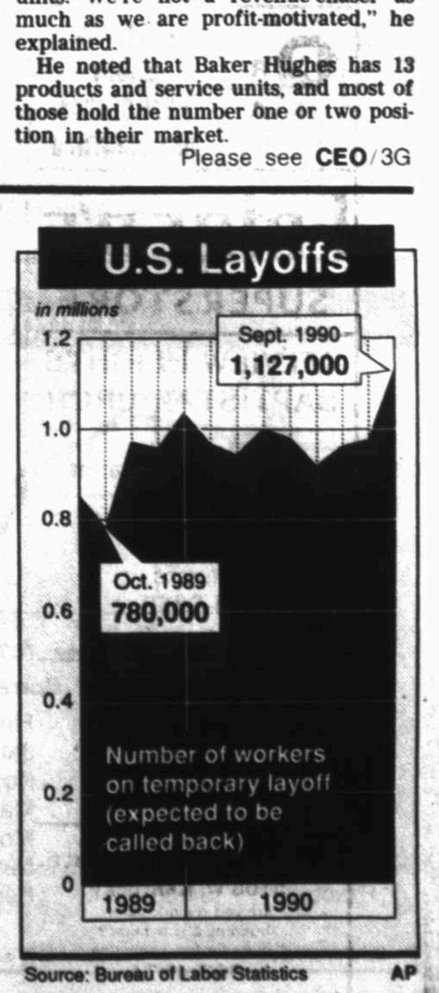

In perhaps the largest such cutback, General Motors Corp. said it would close four plants and idle others temporarily, affecting thousands of workers. Experts say GM was responding to excess car-making capacity as well as to the economy.

State and local government jobs also are facing cuts due to withering tax revenues. Reductions are planned by Massachusetts, Virginia and the city of Pittsburgh, among others.

Defense cutbacks also are hitting employment. General Dynamics Corp. said it will lay off 700 to 1,000 workers in January because of budget cuts and declining demand for the F-16 jet fighters.

In all industries, middle-management jobs have been particularly hard hit. Economists say companies are cutting

■ RIG COUNTS RISE. Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts rose this past week, according to Baker Hughes.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count inched up three to 162 after remaining at 159 for two weeks.

The U.S. rig count rose to a near three-year high of 1,144, a gain of 37.

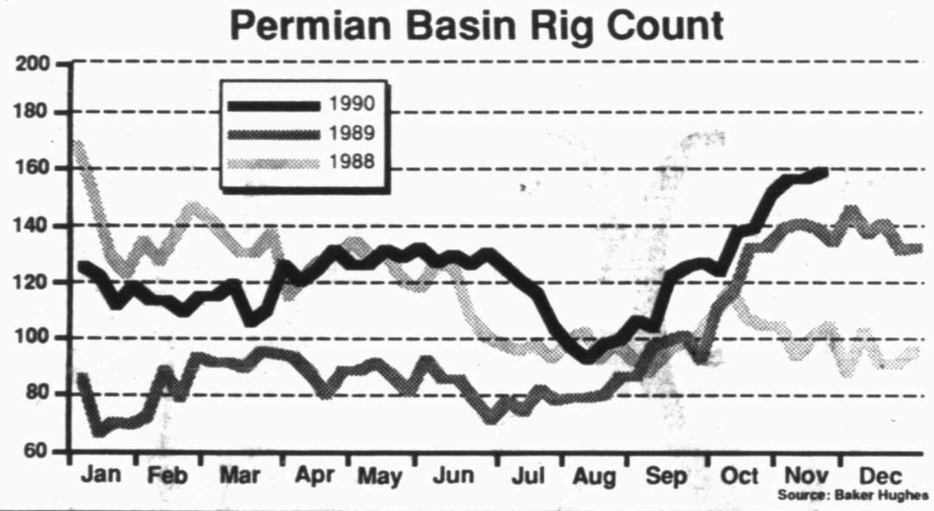

Texas led the nation's major oil producing states with an increase of 23 rigs, the Houston-based oil tool-maker said.

Among other major oil-producing states, Colorado, Oklahoma and North Dakota's counts were each up by two and Wyoming's count was up four.

British oil firms see higher profits

LONDON (AP) — British Petroleum and Royal Dutch Shell Group on Thursday announced dramatically higher third-quarter profits, after riding a sharp rise in crude oil prices prompted by the Persian Gulf crisis.

British Petroleum announced third-quarter net profits of 822 million pounds, or $1.5 billion, nearly a three-fold increase from the 211 million pounds earned in the same period last year.

The percentage of increased profits in dollars might have varied, because of fluctuating exchange rates.

BP said the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait sent the average crude price to $26 a barrel in three months, $10 higher than last year's same quarter.

Since the Aug. 2 invasion, prices "have been extremely volatile because of the changing perceptions of the risk of war," the company said.

Earlier in the day, the Anglo-Dutch company Shell reported that its net third-quarter profits rose 68 percent, from 1.094 billion pounds from 652 million pounds a year ago.

Shell also said profits were helped by higher exploration and production earnings which were largely due to sharply increased crude oil prices.

The company said that the crisis in the Middle East and the United Nations embargo on exports from Iraq and Kuwait led to initial losses of some 4 million barrels a day of crude oil and oil products from world markets.

"While the crude oil loss has been largely made up by increased production elsewhere, prices have reflected market fears that the crisis might escalate," Shell said.

Reacting to the announcement by Shell, the Automobile Association called on the company to explain the enormous profits.

"This sort of announcement is likely to make motorists suspicious that they have been profiteering," a spokesman for the motoring organization said.

Tenneco unit orders pipe for gas pipeline in West

N.Y. Times News Service

Tenneco Inc. said Tuesday a subsidiary had ordered pipe for a 904-mile, $940 million natural gas pipeline from Wyoming to California.

The pipeline will deliver gas to the heavy oil fields of Kern County, Calif., where it will be burned to make steam for enhanced oil recovery.

According to Vernon T. Jones, the president of Williams Cos. of Tulsa, Okla., Tenneco's partner in the pipeline project, the new Clean Air Act may enlarge the market for gas in California, as industries seek cleaner fuels.

Construction on the pipeline is scheduled to begin next month and take about a year.

CAMERA: Downhole problems

(From 1G)

He explained that the camera permitted an actual visual inspection of injection wells and producing wells. "When pressure goes up in an injection well, an operator will be able to see exactly which perforations are plugged and more effectively spot acid."

Schultz noted also that the camera would permit the operator to better evaluate the effectiveness of his entire chemical program.

He said both applications should allow the operator to save money and produce more oil by eliminating guess work. The cost to run the camera in a normal 5,000 foot well is about $3,000, with the cost going up 65 cents per foot for additional depth. Additional tools and time can also affect the cost, which includes an Otis pump truck which pumps water or nitrogen in front of the camera, displacing oil or murky fluid and allowing it to take pictures.

A 150 watt light powered from the surface provides the light source for the extremely wide angle lens (4.8 to 6.0 mm) which is designed to virtually "look sideways" and photograph the sides of the pipe or hole. The lens, which is housed behind a special window like the ones used in submarines, can focus from one inch to infinity.

Developed by a former Unocal executive, the entire package, lens, camera and telementry system is housed in a half-inch thick stainless steel housing, capable of withstanding 8,000 psi.

"The objective," said Schultz, "was to make a camera small enough to pass through small diameter tubing, and rugged enough to withstand the tremendous heat and hydrostatic and formation pressures downhole. We also had a challenge in developing a telemetry system that could be housed in the small casing and still be able to send a digitized FM signal several miles back up the hole."

Schultz said the camera unit was the smallest and strongest on the market. "There are other downhole cameras, but none can go as deep as we can."

Schultz expects the primary application will be on fishing jobs. The camera is able to provide a view that one would never get with an lead impression block.

One fishing job an oil company had tried for about a week to fish a broken bit out of the hole, but only succeeded in pushing it further down the hole. When a downhole camera was run, it was revealed that there was a small wash out to one side of the bit. It was determined to try and stab tubing into this hole and pump gravel past the bit to keep the bit from going further down the hole. The procedure worked. The bit was fished out by a tap on the next run and the gravel was circulated out of the hole.

On a horizontal fishing job a number of fishing trips failed to retrieve the broken drillpipe. When a camera was run down the hole and the pipe was found to be lying against the top of the hole rather than the bottom, a fishing tool was improvised and the pipe was fetched on the next rip.

Otis says it is looking to adapt it coiled pipe to accomodate the camera allowing it to be pushed the length of a horizontal lateral. This could provide operators with a visual inspection of fractures and fracture orientation.

ECONOMY: Weakness causing more layoffs jobs not deemed crucial or revenue-producing.

(From 1G)

Regardless of the cause, employers should view layoffs as a last resort, said Martha White, a Chicago-based consultant who helps troubled companies reorganize.

"Because the victims go away during a downsizing or layoffs, people tend to think the problems go away. But that's not true, there's always residual fallout in the organization" in the form of morale and loyalty problems that can hurt productivity, she said.

Some economists said they believe employers announcing layoffs recently were prompted by actual signs of economic decline, not by a desire to take pre-emptive action before the downturn worsens. That means more layoffs are almost certain if the sluggishness intensifies.

The Labor Department said last month that 1,127,000 people were out of work in September due to temporary layoffs, up from 918,000 in June.

The unemployment rate in September actually was higher for manufacturing and low-skilled jobs than for white-collar jobs.

For example, the jobless rate for managerial workers was 2.7 percent in September, virtually unchanged from a year earlier. For low-skill manufacturing jobs it was 7.3 percent, also almost unchanged from a year ago.

"The impression has been created that there are just zillions of professionals who are suddenly out on the street, but that is just not the case," said Jay Meisenheimer, a Labor Department economist.

Private economists are looking to the release Friday of October unemployment figures for further insight into the economy's direction. September's overall rate was 5.7 percent, up from 5.6 percent in August.

(From 1G)

Woods is trying to position Baker Hughes to take advantage of those oil field markets that will have reasonably good growth, even with moderate crude prices. He lists four markets:

- International
- Natural gas drilling
- Offshore drilling
- Horizontal and directional drilling.

"That's where those 13 products and service companies are headed," he said.

The merging of Baker International and Hughes Tool Co. did not create a mammoth, highly-profitable corporation, according to Woods. Since the merger, he pointed out, oil activity has increased roughly 5 percent, though it has increased recently thanks to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and resulting jump oil prices.

In fact, this year, he said, Baker Hughes, by concentrating on strong markets, consolidating facilities, warehouses and business, has made money instead of losing money. "That's due not to activity but consolidation and efficiency," he said.

Woods has another philosophy — one that helped him rise from the accounting department to the head of a major corporation, and one that could be show how he wants his company run.

"I believe you get ahead," he said, "by doing the job you're in well — then the next one is likely to come along. Be honest, show integrity, and stand up for yourself."

Wal-Mart to buy McLane grocery chain

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. could pay $265.4 million for a Texas grocery retail and distribution company, according to documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The purchase of McLane Co. Inc. of Temple, Texas, would entail a stock swap for the 96-year-old firm, according to the documents.

The purchase was announced a month ago, but a price was not revealed until SEC documents were filed Wednesday.

ABWA kicks off membership drive

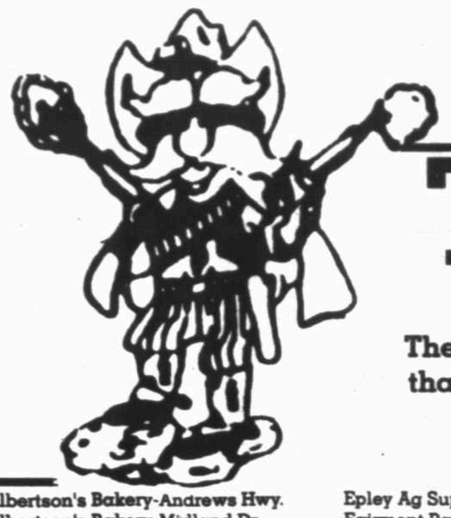

Staff Report

The Petroplex chapter, American Business Women's Association will hold a membership campaign during November.

The kickoff activity takes place Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Information Center, Wildflower Apartments during the regular monthly meeting.

Chapter president Angela Hines says the campaign's theme is "Create New Patterns of Success" and will focus on personal and professional growth opportunities for business women.

Also on the meeting schedule is recognition of Shirley O'Neal for being a member of the association for 25 years. She is an accountant for Mid-America Petroleum.

Kimberly-Clark names new president, COO

DALLAS (AP) — The board of directors of Kimberly-Clark Corp., makers of facial tissue and other personal health products, has elected Wayne R. Sanders as the company's president and chief operating officer.

The election signals Sanders as the most likely successor to Darwin E. Smith, who is retiring as chairman and chief executive officer in April 1992.

The election, announced Monday, is part of a plan the company implemented several years ago to prepare for Smith's departure, said Kimberly-Clark spokeswoman Tina Berry.

The company has not had a president since 1985 and chief operating officer is a new post.

Sanders, 43, was most recently president of the company's international and service and industrial operations, based in Neenah, Wis.

Sanders joined the company as a financial analyst in 1975. He rose through the managerial ranks of Kimberly-Clark's Canadian affiliate and later became president of the company's personal care sector.

SEISMIC METHODS FOR RESERVOIR DEFINITION AND DEVELOPMENT: Three-dimensional seismic methods and exotic borehole seismic applications are the major techniques of development geophysics. These methods are practical and in use today, and along with other techniques to be discussed, constitute development seismology. Processing necessary to preserve stratigraphic information content and subsurface detail is described and the results in terms of color inversion displays having enhanced visual dynamic range are illustrated. The 20-fold increase in visibility enables anamolies to be observed which relate to porosity, fracture permeability, hydrocarbon presence and reservoir geometry and continuity. Quantitative calibration studies with borehole data are considered in the context of all advanced techniques. Fee $295; Norman Neidell, Alistair Brown, instructors; Nov. 19-20, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Texas urged to build plastics recycling

By Jan Rich

Texas' largest cities, following a popular national trend, have recently launched pilot recycling programs that include the collection of soft drink bottles, milk jugs and other plastic products that frequently line streets, highways and beaches.

Plastics recycling, however, poses special dilemmas for Texas, where the petrochemical industry produces 80 percent of the resins used to make the world's plastics.

State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says the newfound enthusiasm for plastics recycling ultimately could cause Texas to lose jobs as the petrochemical industry loses business to recycled plastics.

To compensate for the potential loss, Mauro is encouraging Texas to create its own multimillion dollar recycling industry, something he believes is possible within two years.

"We are the plastics production capital of the world, and we better become the plastics recycling capital of the world or we are going to lose jobs," Mauro said, although he could provide no estimate of that loss.

"When you talk about 80 percent of the world's plastics, when we've had $15 billion of new construction in the petrochemical industry in the last eight years, that's a lot of jobs and a lot of growth," Mauro said.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that in the United States, slightly less than 1 billion pounds of plastics are recycled annually in the United States, just 1 percent of the 60 billion pounds of plastics produced.

Mauro expects the numbers to improve as consumers demand their cities do more to protect the environment.

But for the cities that collect plastics, recycling is complicated by a lack of technology for separating the many types of plastic consumer items, escalating collection costs and traditionally limited markets for reused plastics.

Despite the collection programs in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and other cities, Texas remains behind other states in establishing collection systems that can produce enough reused plastic to attract major recyclers.

Such a system is the key not only to a successful municipal recycling program, but also is the only way to lure large reclamation centers that can buy the recycled plastics and process them for future manufacturing.

Texas has very few of those recyclers and few are likely to come until the state can provide them with a steady, sizeable flow of recycled plastics, say industry representatives.

Du Pont, through a joint venture with Waste Management of North America, Inc., plans a total of five reclamation centers by 1995, but none so far for Texas because the state cannot provide the needed recycled materials, says Du Pont spokeswoman Pat Getter.

Mauro wants to attract more of those large facilities to Texas, and predicts it will be done in spite of the state's rudimentary collection system.

He notes that two years ago, "there wasn't a single plastics broker in the state. There wasn't anybody calling around, saying, I'll buy your plastics."

Today, he says, Texas has 12 plastics brokers.

But private recyclers and the EPA say that recycled mixed plastics have been used only for relatively low-value products like parking lot bumpers, flower pots and plastic lumber. They question whether markets for these products can support major recycling efforts.

New demand for recycled plastics is developing daily because "everybody wants to put recycled on their packages," Mauro says.

To help spur the creation of new markets, Mauro plans to push for state legislation that forces state agencies to buy recycled products. He encourages corporations to make the same demand for recycled products.

"Once Wal Mart says we are going to buy recycled plastic coat hangers, every manufacturer in the state wants to build them."

SCOTT BURNS

More companies feeling squeeze of debt

By Scott Burns

The exercise is easy. Take your daily newspaper, find the business section, and count the stories. Then count the stories that have to do with liquidation and debt. The number of stories is constant; the number with liquidation and debt as the topic has been rising steadily since last year.

Burns

Why is this happening?

The economy is slowing. Debt burdens that looked manageable a few years ago first pinch, then squeeze, and finally crush.

The explanation can be found in the September report to clients of the Comstock Partners, probably the most prominent bears on Wall Street. Recall that it was the Comstock Partners, Stanley D. Salvigsen, Michael C. Aronstein, and Charles L. Minter, who enraged Wall Street a few years ago with a Barron's interview in which they predicted that the decline in real estate values would extend to residential real estate far beyond the Sun Belt.

Since then it has. The entire Bos-Wash corridor is trembling with decline; and coastal California, once believed vulnerable only to earthquakes, is suffering from stagnation and declining prices.

Now, they say, we are heading for a further decline in asset prices of all kinds as the burden of debt forces weak holders to sell assets to repay debt.

The process is called liquidation.

Why does it happen? Here's a rule from the Comstock Partners:

"If for any reason the growth rate of debt falls below the cost of carrying that debt (the interest rate), the result can be simply described as trouble."

They go on to say:

"The more debt that exists in relation to GNP (gross national product) when this condition arises, the bigger the trouble. The problems stem from the need to then service existing debt out of current activity and incomes rather than out of new borrowing. In a system used to living on borrowed money, the need to divert current income to service past borrowings is devastating."

In case that went by you a little fast, what they are saying is that the amount of new debt issued each year has to be greater than the interest rate people are paying. In other words, if interest rates are 10 percent, the amount of new debt created in a year has to be 10 percent or more. Otherwise the interest payments come out of other activities and debt starts to squeeze.

That, alas, is exactly where we are now.

You can understand this by taking a look at recent history:

In 1980, 1981, and 1982 debt growth was under 10 percent a year while interest rates ranged from a low of 11.46 percent to 13.91 percent. The result, weak economic growth and a 2.5 percent decline in real economic output in 1982.

In 1984, 1985, and 1986 debt growth exceeded interest rates handily and the economy showed strong growth.

Credit growth has been shrinking since 1986, however, and continues to shrink. From a peak expansion rate of 14.4 percent in 1984 it will probably be under 7 percent in 1990. While interest rates have declined, they have not declined as much.

Result? In 1989, the cost of servicing debt exceeded the rate of credit expansion and the long economic expansion began to slow. From a peak of 4.5 percent in 1988, real economic growth has declined to 2.5 percent in 1989, and an anemic 0.2 percent in the second quarter of this year. A minor revision could wipe out that figure and turn it negative.

Without Debt Growth There is No Economic Growth.

The answer — at least the answer that comes from the Comstock Partners — is disturbing. Tracing total debt, Gross National Product, and growth of GNP back to 1915, the partners point out that the only comparable period in this century is the credit driven economic expansion that preceded the Crash of '29 and the Great Depression.

Is there a happy ending?

Perhaps. While the current situation promises debt liquidation, the dilemma could change if one simple thing occurred: if interest rates dropped enough to be lower than the rate of credit growth.

Scott Burns' column, syndicated by King Features, appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Thursday and Sunday.

N.Y. Times News Service

Smith Corona Corp. has filed an "anti-dumping" petition with the Commerce Department, claiming that producers from Singapore and Japan were selling personal word processors at unfairly low prices in the United States.

In an interview, G. Lee Thompson, Smith Corona chairman and chief executive, said price cuts forced by the dumping had cost the New Cannan, Conn.-based company $40 million in sales last year.

The complaint, filed Monday, is the latest step in Smith Corona's decade-old struggle against what it calls unfair pricing.

"They are moving to close that last door," said Robert E. Gerson, editor of Twice, a consumer electronics trade magazine.

Other officers elected include KATHLEEN OWENS, president-elect; and JULIE DEITZ, secretary-treasurer.

The first Women's Council, a support group for women in real estate within the National Association of Realtors, was first established in 1939. Midland reestablished their chapter in 1987.

J.K. "RUSTY" WALL has been approved by the State Bar of Texas for recertification as a specialist in family law. He has been practising law since 1973.

Certifications are approved for five-year periods and are granted by the State Bar's Board of Legal Specialization.

Midlander BOB BRADSHAW, owner of Bob's Designs, has been certified a "Master Designer" by Florists' Transworld Delivery Association.

Requirements for the certification include completion of flower and design style identification and flower care and handling tests, passing a series of tests on the design of specific floral arrangements from predetermined categories, and a background of at least five years experience as a full-time designer in a full-service retail flower shop.

Houston delays tax breaks

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Kathy Whitmire persuaded council members to delay imposing some $6 million in tax incentives in a move opponents say will prompt businesses to locate in other Texas cities.

City Council members voted Wednesday to grant a special business tax exemption in 1993, a year later than big business and the Greater Houston Partnership had wanted.

The exemption will allow Houston to join all major Texas cities as a free port, where businesses holding merchandise in transit for less than 175 days would not pay property taxes on their inventory.

City Controller George Greanias and Greater Houston Partnership officials lobbied council to begin the exemption in 1992 as a way to entice businesses to relocate here.

Council members also received letters from existing local businesses, including George Mitchell Enterprises, Mrs. Baird's Bakery and oil field drillers Baker Hughes Inc., asking that the exemption start in 1992.

But Mrs. Whitmire's administration maintained the city could not afford the loss of an estimated $6 million in tax revenues that would occur with the 1992 start date.

Mrs. Whitmire and Councilman Ben Reyes argued that the exemption would not attract companies to Houston during 1992 because they need more than 14 months to move.

Preucil
... bringing music to life

By the time he was 1[illegible] years old, William Preucil knew what he wanted to do with his life.

"I had a pretty well-rounded education. I was exposed to a number of things, but I always had it in my mind that I was going to be a musician," said Preucil, who comes to Midland to perform as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony this week. Preucil is first violinist with the Cleveland Quartet.

He grew up to the sounds of classical music — live and recorded — in his parents home.

"My mother's a violinist, and my father's a violist, and so to me as a 4 or 5-year-old kid, it seemed perfectly normal that everybody did this. I was anxious to get started. And I loved it immediately. I remember always enjoying playing even when I was very small," said Preucil, who added that his parents are master Suzuki teachers as well as performers.

Other family members also influenced Preucil.

"My grandfather, who also lived in Iowa City — which is where I grew up — was a professional violinist. He was also playing so I had some inspiration and influence from him." He paused then added, "My grandfather was the teacher of my mother, then my mother was my teacher, so it kind of went from generation to generation."

Preucil recalls Iowa City as "a good place to grow up culturally." Besides being a "nice town in the Midwest," a lot of culture was brought into town by the University of Iowa. When he was 14, Preucil went to Interlochen Arts Academy, a boarding high school in northern Michigan which concentrates on the performing arts and academic education.

"I studied there for two years and finished high school," Preucil said. He attended Indiana University where he studied with Josef Gingold. His orchestral career began in 1980 when he accepted a position as the concert master of the Nashville Symphony, Nashville, Tenn.

Since that time, Preucil has served as concertmaster of the Utah and Atlanta symphonies. During the seven years he spent in Atlanta, he appeared as soloist in more than 60 concerto performances, performing with the Lanier Trio and the Georgia Chamber Players during the last five years. The latter ensemble has collaborated with such guest artists as Emanuel Ax, Shlomo Mintz and Andras Schiff.

Also he was featured in a recording of the Steven Paulus Violin Concerto, written for and dedicated to him. The recording will be released by New World Records this year. In addition, Preucil has performed regularly at major American music festivals including Seattle, Sitka and Santa Fe, as well as at leading European festivals and in the Soviet Union.

Currently he teaches at Eastman School of Music, where the Cleveland Quartet is in residence. He has had this position since July of 1989.

"I enjoy it very much. If I didn't, I wouldn't do it. That's the same way I felt about being in the orchestra. I didn't leave the orchestra because I didn't enjoy it anymore. The quartet offered different challenges and a wonderful repertoire."

MCT to do 'The Runner Stumbles'

Currently on stage at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., is Milan Stitt's mystery, "The Runner Stumbles," which is based on the true story of a priest accused of murdering a nun in Michigan in 1909.

Although the Midland Community Theatre production is a membership show, single admission tickets are available. Remaining performances are today at 2:30 p.m. and Thrusday through Saturday at 8 p.m.

Don Bachmann directs the drama, which features John Burke as the priest and Jennifer Helms as the nun. Roomful to perform

Ticket price is $10. Tickets will be sold at the door only. Doors open at 8 p.m. No opening act is scheduled.

Roomful of Blues recently filmed a Christmas comedy special for Lifetime Cable Network. Entitled "Six Ladies Laughing," the hour-long show features six comediennes including Andrea Marshall, Victoria Jackson, Kim Coles and Stephanie Hodge. First broadcast is set for Nov. 28.

Arts, crafts show set

The Tall City Arts and Crafts Festival is set for Saturday and Nov. 18 at Midland Center, corner of Main Street and Wall Avenue.

The festival will feature artists and craftspeople from as far away as Pennsylvania and Colorado.

Included in the list of participating artists is David Brownlow of Fort Worth. His work is collected by, among others, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bellamy, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hope, Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller and Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Tandy.

Hours for the festival are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Nov. 18. No admission is charged.

Quartets will sing

The Permian Basin Barbershop Chours is presenting "Mr. Touchdown, USA" at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

The performance features the Sun Country Gentlemen as well as the following local quartets — Mayor's Four-Um, Majestic & Exhaulted Paragons of Harmony and Uncalled Four. In addition, special guest quartets the Houston Chord Authority and the Crystal Collection: Lubbock Sweet Adelines will perform.

For more information and admission price call 688-7814 during business hours.

'Play On!' to close

"Play On!" is a comedy with a play within a play. The story concerns a theater group trying to produce a play while experiencing maddening interference from the play's haughty authoress who keeps revising the play almost until opening night.

Performances left include 2:30 p.m. today and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. For reservations call 1-362-2329.

Christmas show set

The Andy Williams Christmas Show comes to Midland College's Al G. Langford Chaparral Center Dec. 2.

Showtime is 7:30 p.m.

Tickets, priced at $19.50 with all seats reserved, may be purchased at Chaparral Center box office or Endless Horizons, in Midland and Odessa. Tickets also may be charged to a credit card by calling (915) 685-4584. A service charge is added for tickets which are billed to a credit card.

Local art on display

Works by four "plien air" Midland artists were on display at an invitational showing in Fort Worth this week.

Artists represented were Doris Spires, Mary Rasmussen, Don Parks and Charles Pruitt. The invitational showing was in the home of Barbara and John Howell.

All four artists paint on location.

Blaine at Rumors II

Johnny Blaine and the Spur band play Rumors II, 3305 W. Front St., through November.

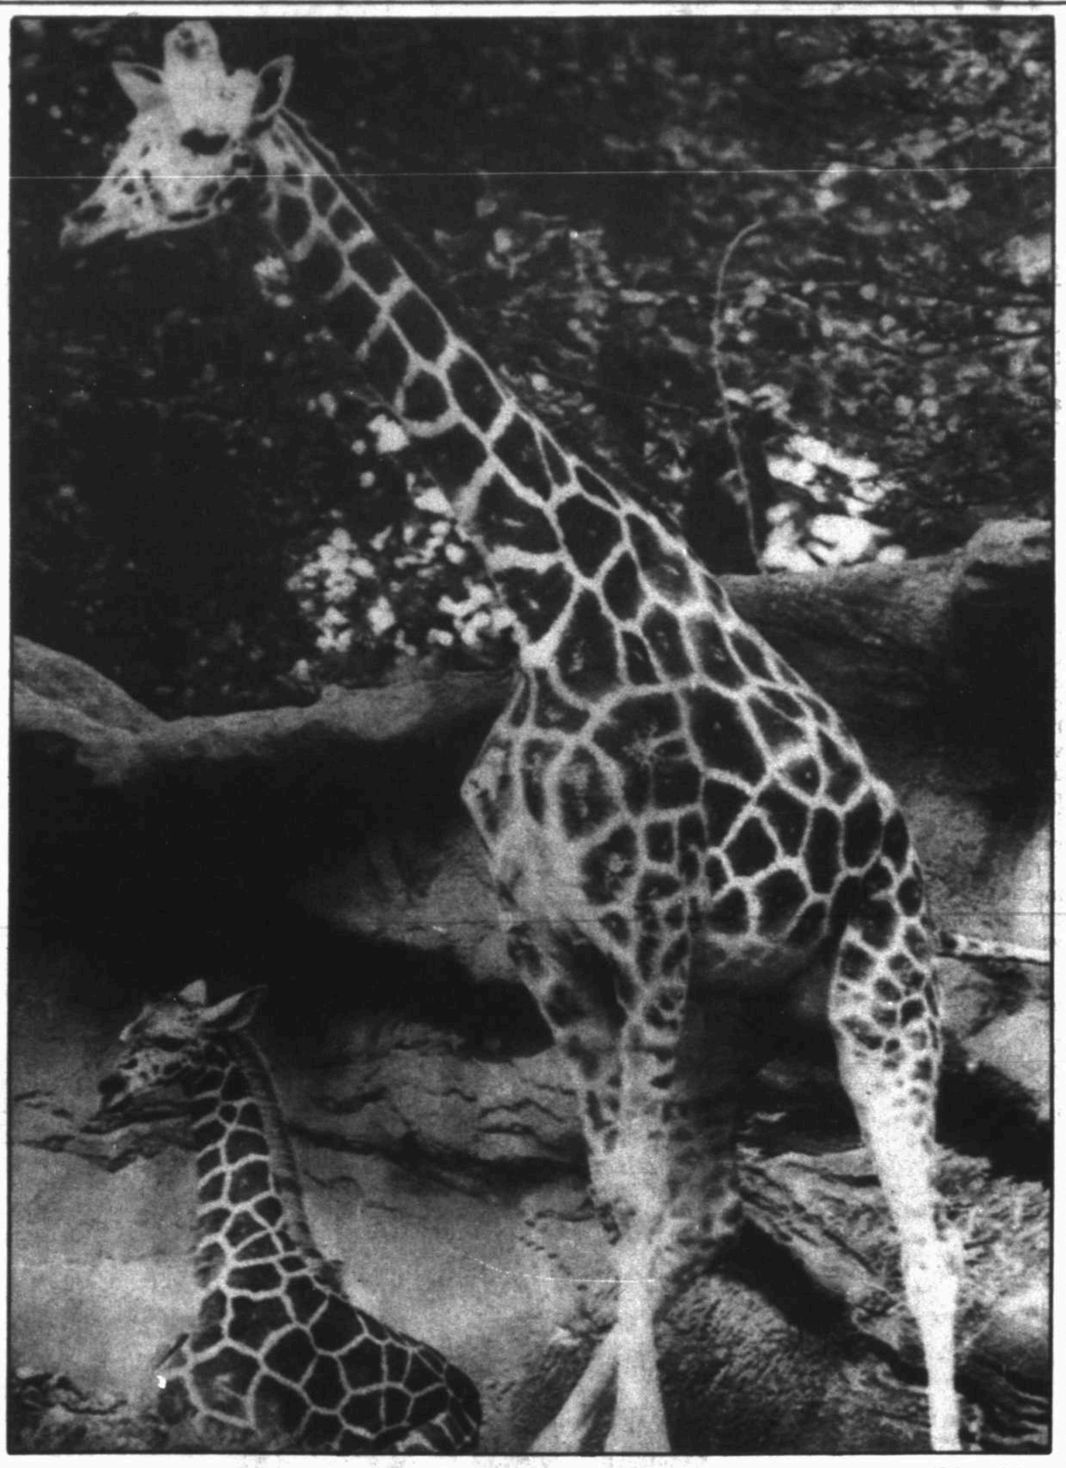

The band has two albums and four singles to its credit. Another album, "Fool Moon," is set to be released soon.

Blaine, who is from Hamshire, wrote his first song when he was 14. He now owns his own publishing company, Gator Hole Music. For more information call Triple 'J' Promotions, 694-3206.

Pair to give recital

CONCERTS: Guest violinist Preucil to perform with MOS

fers, Preucil said, "a closeness and a kind of mind reading ability that comes from knowing people that well — having performed with them and rehearsed with them that much. That's what makes a quartet great. There's such a trust you know what the other person is going to do before they do it. You all turn your radar on and go out there and play."

Preucil's interest lies "in the entire musical experience.

"When I go out to perform, I want to bring the music alive for people, to communicate what the great composers wrote down through me to them. Some of me rubs off on that. That's why people play differently. Basically, I'm trying to communicate the emotion."

While in Midland, he will join the symphony for performance of the Brahms Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D Major. Don Th. Jaeger, maestro, also will lead the orchestra in "Fanfare for the Common Man" by Aaron Copeland and "Gymnopedies" by Erik Satie and Richard Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

In his years on stage, Preucil has faced some awkward moments. One in particular made him rethink his wardrobe. The story begins during a performance around 12 years ago, when he was performing a work by Bach. Suddenly the unexpected happened. His cummerbund came unattached and started to fall.

"I was kind of twisting my weight one way so that it wouldn't fall and hit the floor," Preucil said. He laughed. "I sort of finished the piece bent over, grabbed it and went off the stage."

He came up with a simple solution.

"For about five or six years after that I didn't wear a cummerbund. No one ever noticed. I kept my jacket buttoned. No big deal."

Again the unexpected happened. This time, Preucil was performing a concert conducted by Don Th. Jaeger, MOS conductor.

"Afterwards, a lady came back stage and said to me something along the lines of — 'Young man, you really play quite well, but you know it's very important how you look, and you're not wearing a cummerbund.'"

The patron was Francis Heiftz, the wife of Heiftz.

"So, of course, I was a little embarrassed," Preucil said. "Now, I wear a cummerbund. What can I say?"

When Preucil is performing, he said he experiences the music dancing around him.

"When you're performing, you're bring the music to life, bringing it off the page to the people who are listening. It takes over everything you are doing." He paused, laughed softly, then added, "You're not thinking about what you are going to have for dinner afterwards."

William Styron insists he's completely recovered

"Yesterday he had been happy, but this sorrow — descending upon him as it had the night before — seemed to have confounded him beyond all hope, since, for the first time in his life, he was unable to cut his trouble adrift, to shed it like some startling and unwelcome chrysalis ... "

— "Lie Down in Darkness"

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK (AP) — Late afternoon. William Styron looks tired, slouched in a chair in his hotel room, his tie and jacket lying on the bed. The air is hot and musty and the curtains are almost completely drawn, blocking out the sun of a crisp September day.

Styron

The author is making a two-day trip to New York to promote "Darkness Visible: A Memoir of Madness," a brief chronicle of his near-suicidal bout with depression, and eventual recovery.

The night before, he appeared in a packed Manhattan auditorium at the 92nd St. Y Poetry Center, reading one passage from his new book and another from a novel in progress. He seemed comfortable discussing his problems and expressed delight that his book had temporarily knocked Donald Trump's latest opus from the top of best-seller lists; the audience responded enthusiastically.

But Styron was also anxious to finish, agreeing to a mere five to six minutes of questions and checking his watch to make sure that limit was not broken.

At his hotel room, the author is again checking his watch. He seems edgy, distracted, noting periodically he has to leave the hotel at 5:15 p.m. sharp; that evening Vanity Fair is holding a reception in his honor at the Century Club. His original article on depression had first appeared in the magazine.

"I barely realized it but I was in a deep crisis. I actually had ached so intensely over this wicked, this monstrous disappointment — this betrayal! — that a kind of quivering St. Vitus' dance had begun to possess my limbs. ... I was suffering from an anxiety attack which each one of my psychic monitors had begun to regard gravely, flashing alerts all through my flesh."

— "Sophie's Choice"

"Darkness Visible" begins with a trip to Paris in the fall of 1985 when Styron realized his emotional difficulties of the past several months "might have a fatal outcome."

He soon broke down completely, unable to sleep or drive or write and barely capable of speaking. Alcohol nauseated him (in the book he admits to a history of heavy drinking and at the reading he said he still enjoys a glass of wine), and the author was seized by uncontrollable fits of anxiety.

Anti-depressant medication prescribed by a psychiatrist only worsened his condition. By early December he was ready to kill himself — he couldn't even write a suicide note — but "drew upon some last gleam of sanity" and checked into a hospital instead, recuperating after a seven-week stay.

"I haven't had any real afteraffects for a long, long time," Styron insisted during the interview. "It's over. I've tried to make a point about it. Once it's over, it's over. Once people get well, they're restored to the way they were before."

Other writers have suffered from depression including F. Scott Fitzgerald and Sylvia Plath. Leo Tolstoy's midlife crisis led him to become a devout Christian. Philip Roth writes about his problems in "Zuckerman Unbound" and "The Counterlife," and Camus' novel, "The Fall," is a monologue by a depressed lawyer.

William James in "The Varieties of Religious Experience" says, "It is a positive and active anguish, a sort of physical neuralgia wholly unknown to normal life."

Styron, 65, could easily pass for a senator or a head of state. He is stocky and broad-shouldered, with a wide forehead, jowls, nearly white hair and narrow eyes, pinched at the edges. His speech is fluid, polished, the vowels clipped, the timbre rich.

He is a man who likes to get things finished, done with. A native of Newport News, Va., he knew in his late teens he wanted to be a writer and was impatient to get his first book published.

That came in 1951 with "Lie Down in Darkness," a sprawling novel influenced by William Faulkner and centered, ironically, on a young woman's suicide.

Styron has since become one of the most honored writers of the past 40 years, winner in 1967 of the Pulitzer Prize for "The Confessions of Nat Turner" and the American Book Award in 1979 for "Sophie's Choice," which included a double suicide.

But there has also been this nagging sense of unfinished business. It started at age 13, the author said, with the death of his mother. He became a "hell raiser" as a child, admitting now he should have properly expressed his grief, allowed it to work its way through his system.

If there were any guilty feelings about his mother, Styron did have a chance to make amends at an early age. He served as a lieutenant in the Marines during World War II and in 1945 was stationed in Okinawa. He was to take part in the invasion of Japan and didn't expect to come out alive.

The invasion never occurred; the United States dropped the atom bomb instead.

"Some of my problems I think came from a continuing anguish over my mother's death and if I had gotten shot it would have been, I suppose, some kind of completion. It's hard to say how that would have worked out," said Styron.

"When I was a young Marine platoon leader, there was this incredible sense of fate. The myth at that age is you're going to live forever. Well, I never believed that and my friends didn't. I thought I was going to die."

Styron insists "go with the flow" is now his philosophy. "The world will roll merrily on without me if I stop writing," he says. Looking back on a "respectable" body of work, he considers "Darkness Visible" a fitting way to put his troubles behind him.

"One thing you do learn is that you're really at the whim of forces beyond your control," he said. "Most people think mental health is something they're invulnerable to. They go through life thinking it's something that happens to other people."

Author chronicles his own depression

A Review

William Styron ranks among the very best fiction writers currently working in the United States. His distinguished books include such critical and popular successes as "The Confessions of Nat Turner" and "Sophie's Choice."

In "Darkness Visible: A Memoir of Madness," Styron turns to nonfiction to relate an acutely personal story of an illness that afflicted him and nearly cost him his life. The book began as a lecture at a symposium on affective disorders, was expanded into an essay for a magazine, and then expanded again into a book.

Styron first became aware of his malady in 1985. A few months after realizing something was wrong with him, Styron went to Paris to receive an award. While there, he "concluded that I was suffering from a serious depressive illness, and was floundering helplessly in my efforts to deal with it. I wasn't cheered by the festive occasion that had brought me to France. Of the many dreadful manifestations of the disease, both physical and psychological, a sense of self-hatred...is one of the most universally experienced symptoms, and I had suffered more and more from a general feeling of worthlessness as the malady had progressed."

On his return to this country, he sought help for his depression, but neither doctors nor psychiatrists could do anything for him. As he relates his symptoms in absorbing detail, Styron also tells of others — many of them prominent artists — who have suffered from depression, suffered so greatly that they took their own lives. He observes, "Depression afflicts millions directly...It has been estimated that as many as one in 10 Americans will suffer from the illness."

On the threshold of taking his own life, Styron had himself admitted to a hospital and over time managed to conquer his tormenting disease. How he did so is most revealing and terribly touching.

Lambert will be featured at Woman's Club

The November artist at the Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park, is Patty Paup Lambert, who began her career in watercolor and oils at the Midland Palette Club.

The daughter of Midlander Chan Driscoll, Mrs. Lambert graduated from Midland High School in 1963. While here, she studied under Arnold Leondar, Bonnie Bogardus, Inez Parker and Mary Barnett.

She continued her artistic pursuits at Trinity University, San Antonio, earning a degree in painting and commercial art. She was a student of Bill Bristow and Elizabeth Ridenhaur.

While a student at Trinity, she studied and worked with Caroline Shelton, a well-known artist in the San Antonio-Austin area. Recently, Mrs. Lambert exhibited with Mrs. Shelton at the Bright Shawl Gallery, San Antonio.

Mrs. Lambert has worked with a variety of art projects including bronze casting with David Parsons, professor emeritus at Rice University, a limited edition of original hearts for Duchesne Academy and several commercial art works for both industrial and political organizations.

Her most recent projects include watercolor studies with Betty Wentworth and Chinese Brush Painting with Stella Dobbins. Mrs. Lambert's works are on display at Rice University, Trinity University, Spring Branch Independent School District and the Watercolor Society of Houston gallery.

Mrs. Lambert will be honored by the Woman's Club with a tea reception Nov. 18. The public is invited to view her watercolors from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Woman's Club.

Jody Forster photographs at OC gallery

ODESSA — "Majestic Moments in Nature," a photographic exhibition by Jody Forster, is on display through Dec. 5 in the Third Floor Gallery, University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"Though Jody Forster's prints are often compared to the works of Ansel Adams and Edward Weston, he is carving out his own place among the masters with his Western landscape photography," said a release from UTPB. His work is held in numerous private and corporate collections and museums.

Forster is the third person to have taken such a large camera to the rugged Himalayas.

Forster has traveled throughout the world, but has found a special place to explore in the desert mountains of Arizona and the Southwest. He lives in New Mexico where he has said his "work concentrates on atmosphere and deep space."

Pianist will give first MCC performance

Lincoln Mayorga performs at Midland High School Saturday for the first concert in Midland Community Concerts current season.

The descendant of a pianistic line which began with Beethoven and continued through Carl Czerny, Leschetizky, Arthur Schnabel and his own teacher, Aube Tzerko, Mayorga has balanced his tradition training with the contemporary teachings of Leonard Shure and Gyorgy Sandor.

As a concert artist, he has toured Europe twice and performed with Arnold Steinhardt, Michael tilson Thomas, Richard Stoltzman, Gerard Schwarz, the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, among others.

Concert time is 8 p.m. Admission is by season membership only. To secure a membership call 684-4767.

Hank Snow says he'd entertain troops in gulf if he were younger

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music pioneer Hank Snow, who performed for American soldiers in Korea and Vietnam, would be eager to entertain U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf if he were younger.

The 76-year-old Snow established himself as one of country music's ambassadors by making several overseas tours to perform for U.S. armed forces between 1950 and the mid-1960s.

Snow

Besides Korea and Vietnam, Snow also sang for military personnel in Germany, France, Norway, Italy, England and Japan.

"If I was 20 years younger, I'd jump at the chance to go over again," said Snow, celebrating his 40th anniversary on the Grand Ole Opry country music show.

"I've seen what good it can do. When we entertained over there before, the amount of good you could feel you were doing made you want to go back. They just needed a touch of home.

"It's one of the things that stays in my memory. This was a great experience, one that money couldn't buy. It was the most important part of my life as far as entertaining is concerned."

While in Korea, he offered to write letters if soldiers would give him the names and addresses of their loved ones. He expected to get a few hundred, but 7,000 were turned in. When he returned to the United States, a secretary was needed to send form letters to the soldiers' relatives.

"Someone came up to me at the Opry not long ago and thanked me for the letter I wrote to his mother," Snow recalled.

Snow, known as "the singing ranger" because he prefers cowboy attire, has been a performer for more than 40 years.

RCA Records has just released the "Hank Snow Collector's Series," reissuing eight of his records. Bear Records of Germany is putting out every song he ever recorded. This is a mammoth undertaking. Snow has sold an estimated 70 million records and made more than 100 albums.

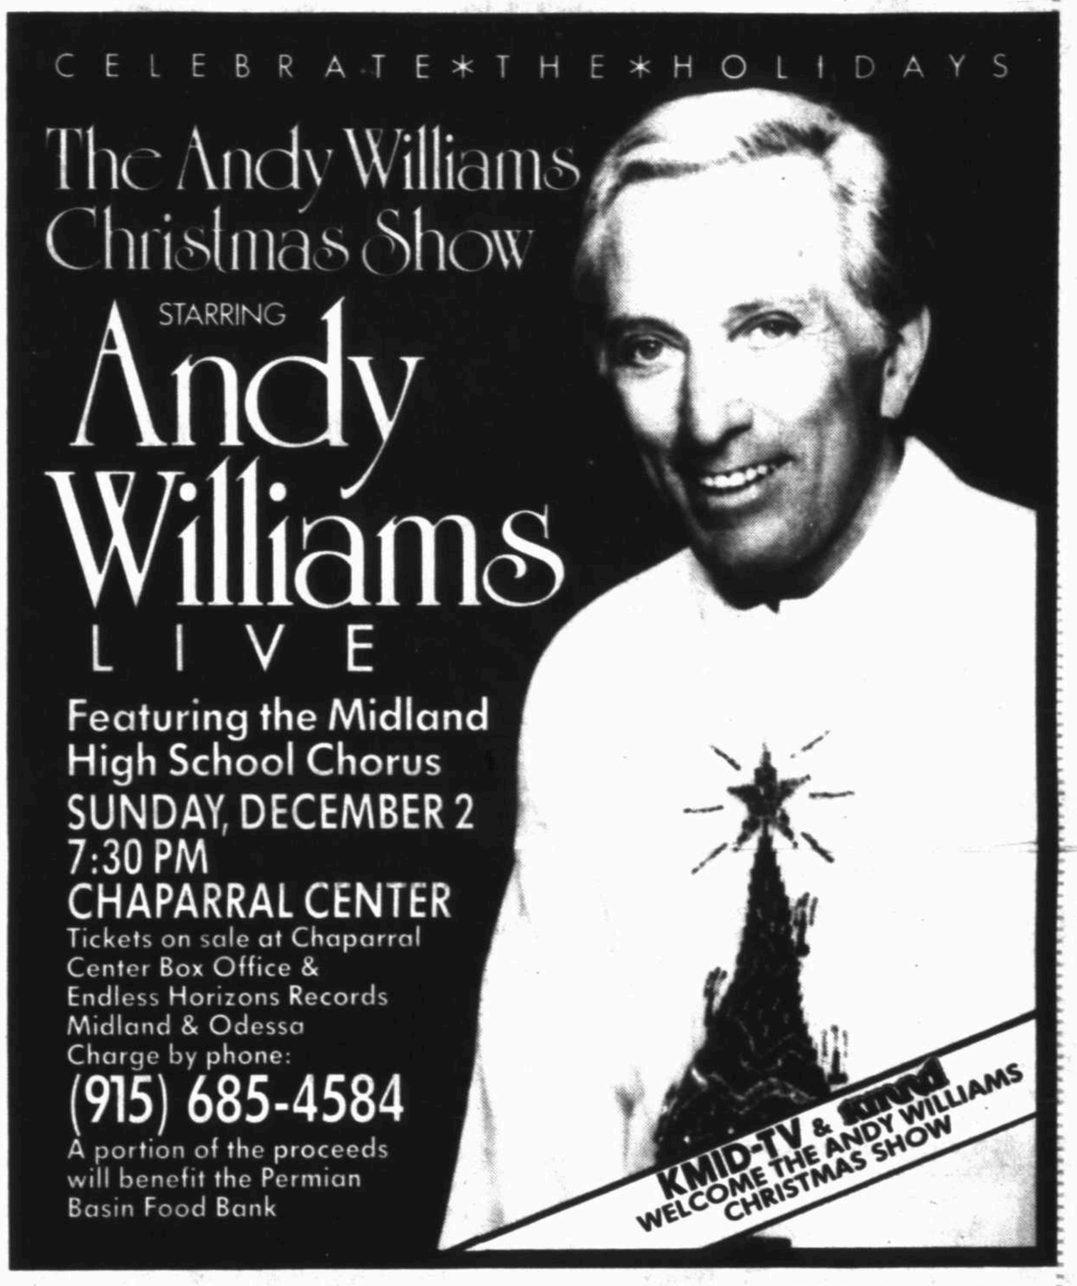

His "I'm Moving On," which he wrote, was No. 1 on the country music charts for almost a year in 1950. Emmylou Harris, one generation younger, brought it back with her version six years ago. The song, about boarding a train to leave a wayward lover, has been recorded by about 60 other performers.

The "Hank Snow Collector's Series" includes "I'm Moving On," his version of the pop music classic "Sentimental Journey" and "Today I Started Lovin' You Again," which was a hit for Kenny Rogers.

Snow has had more than 40 songs in the Top 10 of the country music charts. His heyday was the '50s and '60s.

He was born in Liverpool, Nova Scotia. He left home at age 12 and

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to lots of adventure. The winter holidays could center on a happy new romance. Your professional plans get off to a productive start in January 1991. You are in the right place at the right time. Vacation in July or August and you will make wonderful new friends. Postpone expanding your business operation until September. Check the background of potential employees very carefully.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian Jonathan Winters, novelist Kurt Vonnegut Jr., golfer Fuzzy Zoeller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone who promises undying love is not completely serious. Get started on a big project of your own this afternoon. A quiet conversation spawns beautiful plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A busy day lies ahead. Married couples can patch up their differences. Your word is your bond. If you have been trusted with a secret, squelch the temptation to share it. Be discreet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take it easy today and rest up for the busy week ahead. Avoid long drives that could tire you out. Your patience is short. Try to postpone seeing fussy family members if you can.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you are looking for adventures — or for someone to love — you will have better luck away from home. Give your imagination free rein. Drive out into the country and you could strike gold!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Guard against emotional outbursts. A visit to a church will give you quiet time for thought. Write or call siblings. Your encouragement means a lot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Once again, the chances for romance are excellent. Just be careful not to get involved with the wrong person! A change of scenery lifts your spirits. Be open to new ideas and experiences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You feel healthier and more lively. Do not renege on a promise you made to a friend. If you can, visit the countryside with your family. Dine at home tonight with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Gather your courage and confront a friend who has been talking about your affairs. Reject a proposition from someone who thinks only about himself. Devote more time to your children.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not allow others to take advantage of you. Put your foot down when it comes to running unnecessary errands. Singles should socialize tonight. A newspaper provides good job leads.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Complications in your love life result from jealousy or a misunderstanding. You may have to accept a more open arrangement. Insist that your feelings be considered.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Discuss financial matters with your mate early in the day. Excessive spending could cause a serious quarrel. Be willing to shoulder more responsibility. Curb a tendency to overindulge.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A temporary change of scene could do you a lot of good. Even if you get away just for one day, your energy level will rise. Make some overdue changes at home.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

The poet might be right that living in a state of blissful ignorance has its own rewards. However, being wise enough to recognize a problem may exist means you might be able to work out a solution.

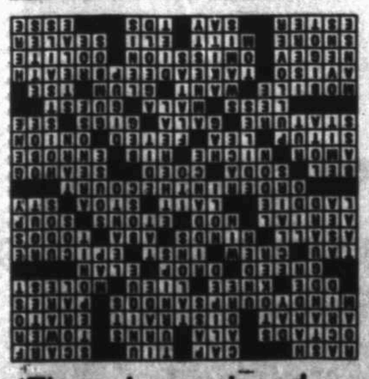

North's jump to three spades was a limit raise, showing some 11–12 points and four-card support for opener's suit. Since there was no way to determine accurately the full potential of the hand, we applaud South's practical decision to jump straight to slam. Six spades rated to be no worse than on a finesse.

West led the king of diamonds. Declarer ruffed, led a spade to the ace and was only slightly taken aback when East showed out. After drawing a second trump, declarer cashed the ace of clubs. This time West failed to follow, and declarer found he had a loser in each black suit—down one.

A more prescient South would have avoided the debacle. Since one of dummy's hearts could be discarded on the fifth club, the only threat to the contract is for clubs to be 4–0, and for East to hold the length—if West has four clubs, declarer will be able to take the marked finesse for the jack. It is well-nigh impossible for West, who is marked with the ace-king of diamonds by the lead and has not bid, to be void in both spades and clubs. Therefore, declarer should lay down the king of spades from hand at trick two.

When the spade position shows up, it is a simple matter to take the marked finesse for the queen of trumps and claim the hand even though both black suits break as badly as possible.

Museum will mark 25th anniversary

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum is commemorating its 25 years of service with an exhibit celebrating the history of the museum.

The exhibit, which remains on display through December, traces the museum from its founding in 1963 following the death of Pres. John F. Kennedy to the dedication of a historic marker about Pres. George Bush.

The museum began as the Presidential Room in the basement of the Ector County Library. Featured in the exhibit are items from the museum's collection which reflect some of the types of artifacts collected by the museum. The items range from paintings and photographs to folk art and wood carvings to commemorate coins and ceramics.

Museum hours arr 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. No admission is charged. For more information call 1-332-7123.

Symphony guild plans holiday event

Events include the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Holiday Pops at Midland Center Nov. 29; the "Paint the Town Red" Ball at ClayDesta Atrium Nov. 30, featuring Little Anthony and dancing to the Monte Carlos, a West Coast band, and a cocktail buffet; "Mistletoe & Mink Brunch and Style Show ffeaturing styles from Julian Gold Dec. 1; and an open house in the ClayDesta Atrium Dec. 2, featuring Santa Claus and Christmas musical selections.

Little Anthony's hits include "Tears On My Pillow," "Shimmy Shimmy Ko-Ko Bop," "I'm On the Outside Looking In," "Hurt So bad," "Take Me back" and "Goin' Out Of My Head."

For more information on any of the events listed call 682-0305.

SNOW: Eager to sing for troops

became a cabin boy on a freighter for four years. As a teen-ager, he used $30 in earnings from a two-week stint unloading salt from a ship to buy his first guitar.

He moved to the United States in the '40s and began singing in Dallas. Country music star Ernest Tubb helped him get a spot on the Grand Ole Opry in 1950 and he's performed on the show ever since.

"I think it gets in your blood," Snow said about the Opry in an interview in his office at his modest home in suburban Nashville.

"Sometimes you say, 'I'm tired of going to the Opry.' But if you didn't go over there and laid off for three or four weeks, you'd want to get back there again."

Looking back on his lengthy career, Snow is uncomfortable when called a legend or pioneer.

"There are legends, living legends, dead legends and all that. I don't go for that. I appreciate it when people say I'm a pioneer, but you have to earn that right."

"Fiddler on the Roof" will kick off the Midland Community Theatre 1991 season. Singers, actors and dancers are invited to audition Dec. 8, 10 and 11 for the musical.

The show will open Feb. 8. Although auditions are in December, most rehearsals are scheduled for January. Darryl Knapp is the musical director and Don Bachmann is the director.

The audition for children over 10 years old will be at 1:30 p.m. Dec. 8. Adult auditions are at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 10 and 11. All auditions will be held at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The age range for men and women is very broad. The production calls for a large cast. there will be no pre-casting of roles.

Scripts are available in the MCT box office, 200 W. Wadley Ave. For more information call 682-2544.
