Sununu quits under fire

Bush's staff chief bows to pressure

John Sununu AP Laserphoto

■ Speculation centers on Transportation Secretary Skinner as a likely successor.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — John H. Sununu, the combative White House chief of staff whose abrasive style earned him enemies in both parties, resigned Tuesday, telling President Bush he didn't want to be "a drag on your success."

The resignation came after weeks of rumors that Sununu was on his way out. The 52-year-old former New Hampshire governor had come under increasing criticism from Republicans for his role in what they saw as ineffective White House action on the faltering economy.

Speculation immediately centered on Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner as a likely successor, although the White House said no decision had been made.

Bush accepted the resignation, effective Dec. 15, and said in a statement that Sununu would remain as a counselor with Cabinet rank through March 1.

The president praised Sununu, saying, "He has taken a lot of hard shots that would have landed on my chin."

Sununu noted that Bush was heading into his reelection campaign and said, "He doesn't need an extra political target folks will be shooting at."

Administration and Republican sources said they expected Skinner, a close political ally of the president's who played an active

GM auto recall

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. on Tuesday recalled about 911,000 of its cars for safety repairs. About 830,000 Chevrolet Corsica and Beretta cars built between 1988 and 1990 were recalled because of a potential problem with shoulder safety belt retractors. The automaker also recalled about 60,000 1991 Chevrolet Cavalier and Pontiac Sunbird cars to fix a part of the front doors which, if malfunctioning, could cause the door frame to collapse during a crash.

Three World War II Japanese warriors, including a Zero fighter pilot who participated in the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack of United States air and naval forces at Pearl Harbor, are scheduled to speak in an exclusive appearance at this week's American Airpower Heritage Museum symposium.

"This is an opportunity for people to interact with history," said Barbara Breier, co-chairman of "Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years," which opened Tuesday at the Midland Holiday Inn.

The role of male and female pilots in World War II and the training of bombardiers at Midland Army Air Field (MAAF) were highlighted Tuesday in the American Airpower Heritage Museum's symposium, "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Year," at the Holiday Inn in Midland.

What was "perhaps the greatest opportunity given women" in the two decades between World War I and the end of World War II was the "opportunity to fly" high-performance military aircraft, said Dawn Seymour, a Women's Airforce Service Pilot (WASP) during World War II.

U.N. report: Anderson's release near

Steen

JERUSALEM (NYT) — The seven-year-old Lebanon hostage ordeal appears headed toward a joyful end amid authoritative reports that Terry Anderson, the last American hostage, may be freed today.

"It is my understanding that he will be released tomorrow," Kamal Kharrazi, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, said Tuesday in an interview with the Visnews television network. Iran has been the chief backer of the kidnappers.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar also said Anderson's liberation appeared imminent, predicting Tuesday that he would be freed within 48 hours.

There were indications that freedom was also near for two German relief workers, Thomas Kemptner and Heinrich Struebig, who with Anderson are the only remaining Western hostages being held in Lebanon by Shiite Muslim

Lamar Smith calls for DOE office in Midland

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Congressman Lamar Smith, in a letter to Energy Secretary James D. Watkins Tuesday called for establishing of a Department of Energy field office in Midland.

Smith stated that such an office was of strategic importance to the future of America's domestic energy industry, because the Permian Basin would be the location of several Enhanced Oil Recovery projects.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Tom Hyde, professor of engineering at the University of Texas Permian Basin, assisted Smith in drafting the letter to DOE.

"With the new programs of technology transfer taking place in the oil industry, the Permian Basin would be an ideal place for a DOE field office," Spannaus said. "It would put us a little closer to Washington, giving them a chance to better understand our problems."

In his letter to Watkins, Smith said: "The Permian Basin has 15 percent of U.S. oil production, 65 percent of Texas oil production and 11 percent of the U.S. natural gas production, but no DOE personnel. You can't expect to turn around the decline of the oil industry if you are not there."

Friend testifies accuser cried for help

■ Smith lawyer attacks account; prosecution to call Sen. Edward Kennedy as witness.

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A friend of William Kennedy Smith's accuser testified Tuesday she rushed to the Kennedy estate in response to a cry for help and found the woman disheveled, shaking and crying hysterically.

But the testimony of Anne Mercer came under sharp attack by Smith's lawyer because she accepted $40,000 to tell her story to a tabloid TV show. Attorney Roy Black suggested she tailored her story to intrigue TV producers after "You realized you could cash in on the Kennedy name."

"No, I did not," she said adamantly.

Also Tuesday, the prosecution said it would call Smith's uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, as a witness, and accused the defense of trying to orchestrate the senator's testimony.

Ms. Mercer, 33, who had gone out on the town with Smith's accuser on Good Friday night, said she saw the woman leave a disco with Smith at about 3 a.m. At about 4:15 a.m., she said, she received a call from the woman who was hysterical.

"What did she say to you?" said prosecutor Moira Lasch.

"That she had been raped. She asked me to come and pick her up. She said she was at the Kennedy estate," Ms. Mercer said.

When she arrived, she said, the woman was standing at the top of an outdoor staircase.

"She was literally shaking and she looked messed up,"

Sununu: From triumph to resignation in three years

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press writer

■ Profile

WASHINGTON — John H. Sununu came to Washington in triumph with George Bush after helping rescue Bush's presidential campaign in New Hampshire's pivotal 1988 primary.

The hard-nosed, hot-tempered chief of staff survived run-ins with lawmakers in both parties and seemed to weather a flap this spring over his use of government jets and limousines for personal and political travel.

Sununu became a marked man this fall as the economy sputtered, Bush's popularity fell sharply and gaffes and flip-flops became a weekly staple of life at the White House.

Sununu, 52, a three-term governor of New Hampshire and an engineering professor, on Tuesday gave Bush a handwritten letter of resignation aboard Air Force One on a trip to Florida and Mississippi.

Sununu was accustomed to volleys of arrows and relished being the heavy in what many regarded as a good-cop-bad-cop routine with the president. He often boasted that whatever his critics said, he could count on the support of the president and Barbara Bush.

That apparently changed in recent weeks.

When the stock market plunged last month after Bush decried high credit-card interest rates, Sununu upbraided a reporter who wrote that it had been Sununu's idea. Later he told a television interviewer that "the president adlibbed" the controversial remarks.

Sununu makes no secret of his disdain for most politicians and reporters. A lifelong philatelist, he read stamp catalogues when bored during negotiations with Congress over last year's budget deal. He called a key Republican senator, Trent Lott of Mississippi, "insignificant" to the outcome.

His reputation as a pit bull preceded him to Washington, although Sununu jokingly predicted he would be "a pussy cat."

Sununu was born in Havana, Cuba, on July 2, 1939, where his parents were on a business trip. His father, a descendant of Lebanese immigrants, was in the export-import business.

Sununu grew up in New York City and went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology after graduating as the top cadet at La-Salle Military Academy.

Sununu earned three MIT degrees, including a Ph.D. in engineering, and founded his own company while still a student. He combined engineering work with a teaching career at Tufts University in Boston while he and his wife, Nancy, raised eight children.

Sununu won election to the New Hampshire House of Representatives in 1972. He lost a Republican primary race for the U.S. Senate to Warren Rudman in 1980, but two years later won the first of three two-year terms as governor.

As governor, he was an ardent advocate of nuclear power and licensing the long-delayed plant at Seabrook, N.H. He also brought the state out of a budget deficit, although it slipped back into one soon after Sununu turned the reins over to fellow Republican Judd Gregg.

When Bush finished a calamitous third in Iowa's opening caucuses in 1988, he turned to Sununu to get his campaign back on track in New Hampshire's primary. The vice president won and the nomination soon was his.

At the White House, Sununu hectored Republicans and Democrats alike while presiding over a largely leak-proof staff that basked in Bush's growing popularity.

But he was enveloped in an ethical cloud earlier this year with the revelation that he used Air Force jets on personal and political travel, including family ski trips to Colorado. At the height of the controversy, he rode in his chauffeured sedan to New York City for a stamp auction and a subsequent political stop in New Jersey.

A White House probe cleared him of ethics violations but stripped Sununu of authority to order up his own jets.

He negotiated a deal with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that led to last year's Americans with Disabilities Act and was extensively involved in the long, bitter negotiations over the recently enacted civil rights law banning job discrimination.

Bush was embarrassed on the day he signed the civil rights bill by a storm over a short-lived staff proppsal that civil rights groups said would have shut down federal affirmative-action programs.

Republicans also blamed Sununu for Bush's hasty decision to postpone a major Far East trip amid Democratic criticism of Bush's foreign travels.

Sununu, who earns $125,100 as chief of staff, will step down Dec. 15 but will stay on until March 1 as a counselor with Cabinet rank.

"This White House is an unbelievably 'fun place' to work," he told Bush in his resignation letter.

"I assure you that in pit bull mode or pussy cat mode (your choice, as always) I am ready to help."

extremists.

The anticipated freedom for Anderson, the Associated Press Middle East bureau chief who has been held longer than any other Westerner, comes on the heels of Tuesday's release of fellow hostage Alann Steen.

In turn, Steen was freed less than 24 hours after 61-year-old American Joseph Cicippio was let go after almost five years in captivity.

Looking gaunt and drained, Steen wept as he was turned over to U.S. officials in Damascus. "It's great to be out. It is wonderful," he said, adding: "Five years is no fun."

The 52-year-old Steen was a journalism teacher with the U.S.-supported Beirut University College when he was kidnapped in early 1987.

He was flown from Damascus to Germany, where he joined Cicippio at the U.S. military hospital at Wiesbaden for medical tests and rest. Steen had numerous cuts on his face and neck, which he smilingly explained were the result of having shaved for the first time in years.

Steen told reporters in Damascus that he had tried to exercise for two hours each day during his ordeal to keep his mind off of his captivity. Former hostages have said that at one point during his captivity, Steen was severely beaten after trying to escape.

Doctors at the U.S. hospital in Wiesbaden reported Tuesday that Cicippio was in generally good health despite the lingering effects of frostbite and a dent in his head from being knocked unconscious when he was abducted in 1986.

The frostbite resulted from Cicippio being chained on a balcony during 1986 and 1990, Dr. Uwe Fohlmeister told reporters.

Fohlmeister said Cicippio's hands and feet will always be acutely sensitive to cold and that he has recurring dizzy spells resulting from the initial clubbing.

The rapid release of Cicippio and Steen — they are the seventh and eighth Western hostages freed since August — gave credence to reports that the 44-year-old Anderson would soon join them.

The releases are part of complex — and largely secret — U.N.-brokered agreements that involve Iran, Syria, Lebanon and Israel. A key has been the phased swaps of the Western hostages for about 300 Arab prisoners held by Israel and its proxy militia force in South Lebanon. In return, Israel has sought an accounting of a six of its servicemen missing in Lebanon.

It was learned Tuesday that Israel has given the United Nations a videotape of kidnapped Lebanese Shiite cleric Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid in an attempt to complete a comprehensive exchange involving the missing Israeli soldiers and the remaining Arab prisoners and hostages held by Israel.

Officials in Israel, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said on Tuesday that Perez de Cuellar's office requested the videotape for negotiation purposes. According to reports from Lebanon, the U.N. apparently passed the videotape to leaders of Hezbollah (Party of God), the group to which Obeid belongs and the umbrella organization behind the kidnapping of Western hostages.

Israel's hostage negotiators said Tuesday that Sheikh Obeid, their trump card who was abducted in July 1989, wouldn't be released until Israel received all six missing Israeli soldiers or their remains. Israel believes the only one of its soldiers who could still be alive is navigator Ron Arad, whose jet fighter was shot down over Lebanon in October 1986.

Sunny skies, low 60s ahead

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 60s and southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 24, Tuesday's high reached 52 compared with the record high for that date of 83 set in 1954. The record low for the date of 19 was set last year.

STATE

Texas was mostly clear Tuesday as high pressure pushed clouds away. Only a few high clouds lingered along the upper coast near Port Arthur.

Sunshine provided low to moderate temperatures with highs in the mid-40s in the Panhandle ranging to the lower 70s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

High wind created wind chill factors as low as 60 below zero Tuesday in the upper Midwest and blowing snow cut visibility to near zero. Rain fell over parts of the already soaked Southeast.

At midday, snow was falling over northwestern Montana, western South Dakota, eastern North Dakota, Minnesota, the upper Great Lakes, northern Ohio and northern New England.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUNUNU: Action came after weeks of rumors

role in his 1988 re-election effort, to get the top White House staff job.

However, White House spokeswoman Judy Smith said that as far as she knew, Bush had not offered Skinner the job.

Skinner is well respected by other Cabinet members, GOP members of Congress and Republican campaign workers.

Speculation that he would get the post was fueled by revelations that he had a private dinner with the president on Sunday and breakfast at the White House on Monday with Bush's son and chief political troubler shooter, George W. Bush.

In fact, it was Bush's eldest son — who is co-owner of the Texas Rangers' baseball team — who delivered the bad news to Sununu last Wednesday that there was wide opposition to him among Bush's top advisers, administration and Republican sources said Tuesday.

In his letter, Sununu said that until recently he had been convinced he could be a strong contributor to Bush's efforts.

"But in politics, especially during the seasons of a political campaign, perceptions that can be effectively dealt with at other times can be — and will be — converted into real political negatives," Sununu wrote. "And I would never want to not be contributing positively, much less be a drag on your success."

The controversy over what role Sununu would play next year had also held up Bush's naming of a reelection campaign team.

Charles Black, a GOP consultant expected to play a key role in that campaign, said Sununu's resignation cleared the decks for Bush to move on that front.

"I'm sure the president will pick a successor shortly. Surely, the campaign team is not far behind," Black said. He said he wouldn't be surprised if Bush filled all the posts within the next few days.

Earlier this year, Sununu was the subject of a White House ethics probe — and heavy outside criticism — for his extensive use of government jets and limousines for personal and political travel. Bush, clearly distressed, approved new rules sharply limiting Sununu's access to such travel perquisites.

White House aides noted that this time there had not been specific allegations for Sununu to address. Rather, they said, there was a general erosion of support for him.

Right up until the resignation, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater insisted that Bush had "full confidence" in his aide. But other officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, had said they doubted that Sununu would survive the latest controversy.

Bush wrote to Sununu, "It is with reluctance, regret and a sense of personal loss that I accept your resignation as chief of staff."

He said he was "very grateful" for Sununu's three years of service, adding, "You have never wavered in your loyalty to us and more importantly your loyalty to the principles and goals of this administration. You have indeed helped with the issues and you have intercepted many of the 'arrows' aimed my way."

Bush said he looked forward to working with Sununu as "a trusted adviser outside government."

Asked later if Sununu would have a role in the New Hampshire presidential primary, the president smiled and said, "You bet."

Although he remained an outsider to the Washington establishment, Sununu had Bush's deep gratitude and support because of his performance in the 1988 presidential primaries. Then, as governor of New Hampshire, Sununu waged an all-out campaign that helped Bush to win the state after suffering an embarrassing defeat in the Iowa caucuses. Bush went on to humiliate his GOP opponents to win the party's nomination.

Many White House staff members learned of the decision only after it had been announced. And Sununu called Republican leader Bob Dole to inform him about 40 minutes before the announcement was made, said Dole spokesman Walt Riker.

SYMPOSIUM: Pilots discuss flying WWII aircraft

tion, health and motivation," said Ms. Seymour, who flew, among other aircraft, the legendary Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress.

While the United States was building its military forces after the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack of Pearl Harbor, the nation, like Great Britain, was short of pilots.

Long before, however, female American pilots, including racing-champion Jacqueline Cochran, had been recruited by U.S. Army Air Corps Gen. H.H. "Hap" Arnold to ferry American warplanes from Canada to England for the British Royal Air Force's fight against the German Luftwaffe.

Later, Ms. Cochran organized the WASPs.

WASP pilot Inez Woods noted America's pre-war fascination with aviation but lack of urgency to build a strong force of fighters, bombers, pilots and other aircrew members.

It was a time of "wild rage to set records," including nonsensical loop records, and airspeed records that did much to advance streamlined aircraft and more powerful in-line and radial engines.

In a session on bombardier training at Midland Army Air Field, five men who were brought to Midland at the onset of war and who returned to Midland following the war spoke of their experiences at MAAF and in combat in Europe and in the Pacific.

Hugh Gilmour, a bombardier instructor, surmised that he was lucky to have been "washed out" of pilot training, since many of his classmates ended up flying out of England and into Germany. "Many of them didn't live long."

Louis Bartha, a bombardier cadet, noted the promise of "pickle-barrel" bombing accuracy in using the Norden bombsight at high altitude.

Harold Shull, who piloted the twin-engine AT-11 bombardier trainer, said, as did the others, that he was "much impressed with Midland" and was "blessed with a group of enlisted men" who "ran everything" at the air field.

Jack Matthews, who was trained as a fighter pilot, said he "thought I was at the end of the world when they stuck me into flying the two-engine bombardiers (AT-11s).

John Rahlfs, a research chemist who "always had a yen for flying," said that on a bombing run "the main thing was keeping it (the aircraft) level.

All spoke fondly of Midland's hospitality.

Shull, who ended up flying the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress in Europe, recalled flying a competitive 29 missions in 30 days.

"I was young, dumb, stupid and indestructible," he said, and was "lucky" to be flying in the formidable B-17, which was known for bringing its aircrews safely home "on a wing and a prayer."

Matthews, who piloted four-engine bombers, including the B-29 Superfortress, said the B-29 was a "beautiful airplane, but the engines were poor — not good enough for the airplane.

The atomic bombing of Japan in August 1945 "saved a lot of lives," both American and Japanese, in an island-country that already had become a "wasteland" from conventional B-29 bombing raids.

"The Japs were looking for an excuse to quit," Matthews said.

In another facet of the symposium, Arizona aviation artist Jerry Crandall presented a painting of U.S. Army Air Corps pilot Phil Rasmussen challenging Japanese Zero fighters in his Curtiss P-36 Hawk fighter at the Battle of Kaneohe Bay on Dec. 7, 1941, when Japanese air and naval forces attacked America's naval fleet and Air Corps aircraft at Pearl Harbor.

Rather than celebrate war, the painting and other salutes to air power are "honoring our men, our pilots, who put their lives on the line and did their duty for their country," Crandall said.

"All over the world, the pilots are all the same. They were doing their duty for their country — whatever country they were flying for — and they thought they were doing the right thing. It was their duty to do what they did. They have a camaraderie among themselves."

"It doesn't matter what country the are from," Crandall said. "They get together, have great meetings, shake hands. All the animosities of the past are gone. Because they were pilots, they have great respect for each other. I wish all of our politics and everything would work that way."

CENTER: Mission Square is 97 percent occupied

(From 1A)

Today, the center is 97 percent occupied, and Jan Melton of Re/Max of Midland, who owns the center with her husband Joe, said she has a number of businesses looking at the three remaining retail spaces.

Among those are a tuxedo shop, gallery and a resale furniture shop. She said she is hoping to get a dry cleaner to locate in Mission.

As for the two-story office building, all but 5,500 square feet has been leased.

"It's amazing," said Mrs. Melton, who purchased the center this past May from the Resolution Trust Corp. The 103,193-square-foot center "just needed a little love and understanding," she said.

"The trend in Midland is going from a large space ... to a small space. It means reducing staff, but at least it's staying in business."

She credits her company's leasing success to offering a fair price, short-lease terms, requiring no personal guarantees and offering to "build out," — finish the interiors.

Mrs. Melton said local ownership and management also helped. "People like to deal with local people," she said.

She seriously is considering offering retailers the chance to purchase their space, noting that Mission originally was designed as condominium space.

"You can pay a lease the rest of your life and still not own it. This would be a great advantage to a lot of tenants."

Two tenants already own their space: longtime center restaurateur Kenny Ho, who operates the Golden China Restaurant and Kenny's Lounge; and Lonny Jordan, operator of The Biscuit Barrel 24-hour restaurant.

Other retail tenants at the center are: Brooks' Barbecue and Casa Blanca; hair salons Recherche' and Diana's Hair and Nail Salon; Marc Photography; MB Sharpening; Duo Delights candy; Bob's Design floral shop; Alpha Omega Insurance
; American Tae Kwon Do; West Texas Chiropractor; Gift Baskets Unique; Van Stavern Interiors; Datatech; Christine Taylor, Dave Taylor & Associates; Marshall R. Young Oil Co.; Eco-Logical Environmental; Mary Kay representative April Cox Howard; Josten's; and My Photography.

Among those leasing office space are Woodmen of America Insurance, Drummond Advertising, Jumburrito, Peek Technology, Fitzsimmons Insurance, Tom Cook & Associates, Cardinal Safety Engineering, Wilson/Elliot, J.B. Appling, Will Brinson, Associated Publishing, Advantage Leasing, Homes Unique Inc., George Pearson and Sendero Exploration.

As part of the center's grand opening celebration, there will be an open house from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 14. The open house will be a food drive to benefit the Permian Basin Food Bank. Customers are asked to bring cans of food and, in return, will receive "Mission Dollars" for each can. These Mission Dollars will be entries in drawings to be held throughout the day offering a variety of gift items or certificates from Mission retailers.

SMITH: Spannaus assists

The closest DOE offices are in Oklahoma and Louisiana. Smith said a DOE office with personnel capable of interacting with the oil community on a daily basis in the Permian Basin would help the independent producers become an integral part of federal plans.

Spannaus said getting a DOE office located in Midland would a long shot because of the budget crunch at the Department of Energy, and noted that it probably would be two to three years before an office would open, if approved.

A field office probably would be located in downtown Midland or at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, he said.

"It's one of those things we should be hoping for and working for," Spannaus said.

ZERO: 3 pilots to speak

(From 1A)

Friday's 10:15 a.m. panel discussion by the Japanese — speaking through interpreters — and a noon speech by Joe Foss, World War II U.S. Marine Corps flying ace will conclude the event.

Sadamu Komachi, who flew in the infamous air attack 50 years ago Saturday, was shot down over Saipan and narrowly escaped capture by American forces.

The Mitsubishi A6M3 Zero was Japan's premier carrier-borne fighter. A rare restored specimen of the agile aircraft is in the 144-warplane Ghost Squadron of the Confederate Air Force.

Another Zero pilot, Kaname Harada, will bring "greetings of reconciliation and peace from the Japanese people" to the symposium.

The third Japanese, Ryu Hatano, an engineering adviser in Toyko and a colonel in the Confederate Air Force, was in the Imperial Japanese Naval Academy in 1945 when the war was drawing to a close.

Hatano, who was 13 years old at time of the Pearl Harbor attack, will discuss the mood of Japan in 1941, his experience as a wartime school child, and his reaction to the April 18, 1942, Tokyo raid by a squadron of B-25 Mitchell bombers commanded by Jimmy Doolittle.

Ms. Breier, an Abilene professor who joins Midlander David Smith in coordinating the four-day symposium, said that Komachi's appearance in Midland will be "the first time he has ever (publicly) told his story" about Pearl Harbor.

The symposium features more than 35 academic papers on various aspects of the pre-war years and the war.

Tickets to individual symposium programs, featured World War II combatants and historians, may be purchased at the Holiday Inn.

Wednesday's luncheon address in the Holiday Inn Convention Center will be by Tom Hatfield, an Austin military historian whose forte is military intelligence and clandestine operations. He will speak on "Pearl Harbor: What We knew."

At noon Thursday, Ned Beach, a novelist, naval historian and World War II submarine commander, will speak on "The Naval Battle at Pearl Harbor."

Speaker at the 7 p.m. Thursday function will be political scientist David Eisenhower, grandson of Dwight David Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander for the June 6, 1944, D-Day Invasion and the 34th president of the United States.

The three Japanese warriors, Komachi, Hatano and Harada, are expected to attend Eisenhower's speech.

TRIAL: Prosecution to call Sen. Edward Kennedy

(From 1A)

Ms. Mercer said. "Her makeup was running. She was hysterical crying. She said she had been raped. She asked me to get her shoes. She kept repeating over and over again, 'Where are my shoes?' "

Ms. Mercer said she went inside the Kennedy house to look for the shoes and encountered Smith in the dark. He looked disheveled, too, she said.

"I said to him, "How could you do this to my friend? Where are her shoes?" Ms. Mercer said.

"How did he respond?" Ms. Lasch asked.

"No response. Just a shrug," she said.

In a hostile cross-examination, Black sarcastically asked, "You went in the house where the rapist was?"

"I guess you could say that," Ms. Mercer said.

"You walked into a dark room with a man who was an alleged rapist?" he said, following with rapid fire questions to which she answered flatly, "right."

He also elicited her acknowledgement that she told Smith she was sorry they had to meet under these circumstances.

In her testimony, she acknowledged she had been paid $40,000 for two interviews with the TV tabloid show, "A Current Affair." The figures drew gasps in the courtroom sand Circuit Judge Mary Lupo cautioned spectators to be quiet.

She said she was offered $150,000 by the show to tell her story before she spoke to police but refused that and offers of $100,000 from The Globe newspaper and $50,000 plus roytalties from the National Enquirer. She said the alleged rape victim asked her to wait awhile before telling her story.

"And as time passed, you found the price was going down?" Black said.

"Yes," Ms. Mercer said.

"And that's when you struck your deal with "A Current Affair?"

"Yes," she said and acknowledged she and her boyfriend used the money for a six-day trip to Mexico.

Ms. Mercer said she hired a New York lawyer, Raoul Felder, to negotiate her TV appearances and he received 10 percent.

Kennedy's name arose in her testimony and she said at one point: "I was afraid to get involved with Senator Kennedy and I didn't want to hurt their reputation."

She told of encountering the senator and his son at the discotheque and having a brief conversation that ended with the senator saying, "You don't know anything about world politics."

Black suggested the conversation never happened and she invented "this gem" to get on television.

On the second day of his trial, spectators crowded the hallway outside the courtroom, and more members of Smith's famous family turned up to watch.

As Smith walked out of the courtroom with his aunts, Ethel Kennedy and Eunice Shriver, the crowd applauded and a woman kissed him. "We're praying for you," she said. "Everything's going to be all right."

Prosecutors on Tuesday also disclosed Smith's accuser's answers to pretrial questions by defense attorneys in which she insisted she struggled against him and screamed.

"I put up a fight," the woman said during a three-day deposition last month.

Asked by defense attorney Mark Seiden if Smith had a weapon, the woman replied, "Himself."

Earlier, the defense tried to bar testimony by a potential prosecution witness who claims he overheard Sen. Kennedy tell Smith, "and she will say it is rape." Kennedy strongly denies saying such a thing.

The prosecution accused defense lawyers of trying to orchestrate Kennedy's testimony to avoid questions about whether the senator tried to obstruct investigators the day after the alleged attack.

"It appears they are trying to orchestrate this so Senator Kennedy does not have to worry about impeachment," Mrs. Lasch said.

Black said he didn't want Kennedy questioned because "it is plain that there was no obstruction."

Police investigators have said they tried to talk to Kennedy on Sunday, March 31, the day after the alleged attack, but were told by his friend, William Barry, he wasn't there. Later that day, they were told he had left for Washington with Smith.

Evidence in the case shows that Smith left town Sunday afternoon, less than two hours after the officers visited the estate, and the senator left Monday morning.

The prosecution has suggested they were evading questioning. The defense says the two men did not know about the woman's rape allegation when they left.

Mrs. Lasch did not indicate when Kennedy would testify.

Ms. Mercer was expected to resume testimony today. The state refuses to disclose names of witnesses in advance.

Panic ensues after attack; U.S. Navy shells Honolulu

EDITOR'S NOTE: After the confusion of the dawn raid on Pearl Harbor panic ensued. There were terrifying rumors of paratroopers, saboteurs, renewed air raids and bombs falling on civilian areas that turned out to be shells from the U.S. Navy's five-inch guns. Part three of a five-part excerpt from Pearl Harbor Ghosts.

By Thurston Clarke
L.A. Times News Service

There were many instances of self-sacrifice and heroism on December 7, of men exposing themselves to strafing to pull shipmates from the harbor, or going below-decks on burning ships to rescue crewmates. A black mess attendant on the West Virginia, Doris Miller, grabbed an abandoned machine gun and fired at dive-bombers, and was awarded the Navy cross for heroism. On the California, Machinist's Mate Robert Scott insisted on remaining at his below-decks station despite a torpedo that had holed his compartment, making his drowning certain. On the Nevada, Machinist Donald Ross made two perilous trips to the forward dynamo room to rescue shipmates trapped there. In the port antiaircraft battery, Ensign T.H. Taylor continued directing fire despite being wounded, burned, and deafened by shattered eardrums that sent blood coursing down his cheeks.

There was also fear and panic. A colonel remembered "confusion plus, when the attack came," and men being "simply petrified and frightened stiff." Another recalled a senior officer who "went all to pieces . . . and had to be sent back to the States on a stretcher."

The panic resulted in casualties. American gunners shot down American warplanes hours after the Japanese had left, and American fighters strafed Japanese-American fishermen returning to Kewalo Basin in their sampans. The destroyer-minelayer Gamble opened fire on an American submarine. Machine gunners protecting Kaaawa Beach shot at stars, mistaking them for signaling lights. At Kaneohe, reservists manning antiaircraft batteries fought a night duel, then turned their guns on civilians coming to watch what they imagined to be a Japanese landing. Shore-based gun batteries and ships fired on American fighter planes from the carrier Enterprise, killing a crewman in the mess hall of the Argonne and hitting three aircraft, killing their pilots. A civilian was shot dead by a nervous sentry when he stuck his head and arm through a fence trying to retrieve a hat blown off in the wind.

Panic was responsible for naval gunnery crews forgetting to use fuses, setting them improperly, or mistakenly firing shells that only exploded on contact. These shells fell on Honolulu's buildings, gardens and homes, crashing into the yard of Thomas Fujimoto's home, going through the roof of Lewers & Cooke, destroying the Schumann Carriage Company, and cratering Kuhio Avenue in Waikiki. One burst on the grounds of the Iolani Palace, another in the driveway of Gov. Poindexter's residence, sending splinters flying across the street to kill an elderly Chinese man. American ordnance also hit and killed a woman in upper Nuuanu Valley, two amateur boxers at the corner of Nuuanu and Kukui, four defense workers driving to Pearl Harbor in a green Packard, and 11-year-old Matilda Faufata, who died in her mother's arms.

As Elwood Craddock and his cousin returned from their hunting trip, Navy shells fell on the Waipahu plantation. It was 17 miles from Pearl Harbor, at precisely the point where they could no longer remain in the air. They exploded in fields behind his house, throwing up clouds of dirt and sending pineapples flying into the air. He assumed they were enemy bombs. Later he learned "they were shells our ships were firing broadside at the planes. The sailors just jammed in rounds without setting their fuses, they were so panicked."

Even though naval shells hit Honolulu long after the Japanese had left, civilians still believed they were Japanese. A month after the attack, Honolulu Mayor Lester Petrie would write, "and it must not be thought that the victims of the tragedy were slain in military attack. The ruthless Japanese deliberately slew helpless civilians in areas were the death toll would be greatest. The city proper escaped only because it did not offer so easy a target for mass slaughter."

The shelling killed 68 civilians and wounded 35.

Throughout the war, the Navy never admitted the real source of the "slaughter" in Honolulu. But in 1943, during closed-door hearings of the Army Pearl Harbor Board, an Army ordnance officer who had investigated 40 bomb sights testified, "We found what these things were. They were not Japanese; they were not Army ammunition. . . . They were anti-aircraft ammunition of another service, sir, whose time fuses had failed to function in the air." And the commander of the coast artillery in Hawaii said, "A great deal of it (the ammunition) was defective and 'duds.' Unfortunately the 'duds' detonated on contact with the ground. . . . That 5-inch ammunition was falling all over the island. A great many people thought they were Japanese bombs, but only one (Japanese) bomb hit the town of Honolulu and I think that was an accident. All the rest of them were Navy 5-inch shells . . . I went out and dug up the fragments and looked at the markings on them. I know they were Navy shells; so does the Navy."

This shelling increased the civilian panic. People pulled furniture from houses, scattering it across lawns to protect it from fire. They loaded cars and fled to the heights, just as residents there were heading in the opposite direction to escape enemy paratroopers. Those who were inside rushed outside, fearing fire; those outside ran inside, fearing shrapnel. Plantation workers grabbed children and hid in cane fields. Water mains broke, sending geysers 50 feet into the air. Fire engines and ambulances mounted sidewalks to pass jammed intersections. Nothing moved at normal speed, and for hours Honolulu resembled a silent movie in which everything is blurred, fast and jerky.

Rumors of paratroopers, saboteurs and poisoned water spread from military to civilian communities. Radio unwittingly spread the panic. An announcer suggested listeners remain calm, but his voice quivered. Gov. Poindexter, who came on the air around noon, is remembered being "so nervous he could scarcely speak." Civilian radios received the police band, enabling everyone to overhear the terrifying rumors. These started among the military, were believed by civilians, then were reported to the police, who broadcast them to more soldiers and civilians. Twice on the evening of Dec. 7, police bulletins announced another attack was underway, saying, "All cars turn off your lights! Pearl Harbor is being bombed again!" The panic was increased by civil defense announcements such as "get your car off the street! Drive it on the lawn if necessary. . . . If an air raid should begin, do not go out of doors . . . you may be seriously injured or instantly killed by shrapnel falling from anti-aircraft shells."

Someone identified a barking dog as an enemy agent taught to bark in code, although it was not specified if it was barking in English or Japanese. A man dropped a lighted flashlight that rolled down a steep hill, leading to reports of slowly oscillating signal flares. The hum of an electric pump was mistaken for a radio transmitter, and soldiers shelled a school of fish off Barbers Point, thinking it was an enemy submarine, then fired on clumps of seaweed they mistook for survivors swimming ashore.

Such was the panic that according to the Honolulu Police Department log, a man removing personal belongings from his own bomb-shattered home became a "suspected looter," a backyard luau tent was a tent for Japanese paratroopers, and a "haole man listening to mainland news was a "fifth columnist transmitting intelligence via shortwave radio."

Such was the panic that a lineman became "man up a telegraph pole signaling Japs at sea," two men lighting cigarettes were "spies signaling with blinker lights," and San Jose College football players dressed in warm-up suits were taken for Japanese paratroopers.

For fear and panic to follow a surprise raid on a civilian city was not unusual. But Hawaii's unusual population and geography magnified these emotions. For months the military had been scaring itself, its dependents and civilians with warnings of how local Japanese would rise up once war began, staging massacres. Hawaii's isolation, before a source of comfort, also fed panic as people realized they were too distant for quick reinforcements and had nowhere to flee from invasion and occupation. When Pat Morgan heard Japanese paratroopers had landed behind St. Louis High School and were approaching her house, she and her brothers armed themselves, even though she admits that "we did not know which bullet went into what." She expected "to see the Japanese coming over the hills. . . . Our plan, such as it was, was to shoot from the veranda, and then if they kept coming to get in the car and rush out the back way, up the Tantalus Road, and then, if necessary, try to disappear into the mountains. . . . There was no (other) place for us to run to. We couldn't get in a car and drive to Arizona."

EC officials plan to recognize Croatia, Slovenia within two weeks

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Top European Community officials said Tuesday the EC would recognize the breakaway Yugoslav republics of Croatia and Slovenia within two weeks.

The announcement followed release of an internal EC report condemning the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army for staging terror attacks on Croatian schools, hospitals and other civilian targets.

Croatia and Slovenia, two of the six Yugoslav republics, declared independence on June 25 and fighting since then has claimed 6,000 lives, mostly in Croatia between Serbs, the Serb-sympathizing federal army and Croatian forces. Croatia has lost about one-third of its territory in the war.

Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen told reporters he and his colleagues would recognize the two secessionist republics at a meeting Dec. 16.

Added British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, "We'll do it all together (at that meeting)."

Germany pledged Sunday to recognize the two republics after the EC summit next week in the Dutch town of Maastricht.

Official EC sentiment has increasingly favored diplomatic recognition since the fighting worsened between Croatia and the federal army allied with Serbian irregulars.

New fighting was reported Tuesday in several regions of Croatia.

The army mounted artillery attacks near Gospic, 105 miles southwest of Zagreb, defense officials said, and Podravska Slatina, an important communications link on the central Croatian front, was under sporadic mortar attacks all day. No casualties were reported.

A naval blockade of Croatia's Adriatic ports, meanwhile, was almost totally lifted after more than three weeks. Only the southern port of Dubrovnik, a major tourist center, remained under blockade.

In Zagreb, road barricades that had been in place for weeks were removed overnight. Defense officials said that was a result of the departure of the Yugoslav Army from barracks in Zagreb.

Top aide in German intelligence resigns after snafus

BERLIN (AP) — The overseer of intelligence services has resigned following a series of embarrassing foulups, but opposition politicians pressed Tuesday for more heads to roll in Chancellor Helmut Kohl's administration.

Government spokesman Dieter Vogel announced that Kohl had accepted the resignation submitted Monday by Lutz Stavenhagen as state minister in Kohl's chancellory.

Asked if Stavenhagen had been fired, Vogel said the resignation was "completely his own decision" and was an effort to avoid further damage to the office.

Kohl's administration this year suffered two serious embarrassments stemming from the intelligence agencies — a surreptitious weapons shipment to Israel and dubious help given a former East German intelligence official.

The agencies have a long record of failing to detect Communist spies, highlighted recently by the opening of the espionage trial of a woman accused of 22 years' spying for East Germany while she rose to be deputy head of the Soviet section in the Federal Intelligence Service, known as BND from its initials in German.

But the recent troubles have centered on political control of the services, the job that Stavenhagen, 51, had held since March 1987.

Peter Struck, intelligence spokesman of the opposition Social Democrats, said Stavenhagen's departure was "long overdue" and Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg must "be let go on the same path as Stavenhagen."

No replacement for Stavenhagen was immediately announced.

Stavenhagen's resignation came as the Defense Ministry released a background report on weapons deliveries to Israel, defending them as part of longstanding cooperation on defense technology under which Germany had also benefited.

In October, weaponry mislabelled as agricultural machinery was discovered in the Hamburg port, about to be shipped to Israel in apparent violation of laws on export of weapons to conflict-prone regions.

Middle East peace talks were about to start, and Kohl's government was embarrassed that Germany seemed to be adding fuel to a fire that others were trying to put out.

Japanese pass bill allowing troops abroad

TOKYO (AP) — Nearly 50 years after Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, lawmakers on Tuesday passed a controversial plan allowing Japan to send ground forces overseas for the first time since World War II.

Legislators, meanwhile, considered drafting a formal apology in time for the anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack on Saturday.

The bill creating a peacekeeping corps of up to 2,000 soldiers still must be approved by the upper house, where its opponents plan to delay a final vote. Eventual passage is expected.

Bitter debate over the proposal underscored the raw emotions concerning any action dealing with the military or evoking memories of the nation's World War II defeat. Last week, a brawl in Parliament erupted between opposition lawmakers and Liberal Democrats who pushed the bill through a special committee.

Lawmakers worry about the West's criticism that Japan avoids its global responsibilities by relying on "checkbook diplomacy" — sending money but few personnel in world crises such as the Persian Gulf War. Japan deployed minesweepers to the gulf after the cease-fire.

But opponents say the bill violates Japan's postwar pacifist constitution, which renounces the use of military force overseas. About 3,000 anti-military demonstrators rallied against the bill in Tokyo after it was passed by a 311-167 vote.

Also, neighbors such as China and the two Koreas, which suffered Japanese attacks this century, are uneasy about any hint of a rebirth of Japanese militarism.

"We understand the Japanese motive behind its effort to participate in the U.N. peacekeeping operations but call for prudence in sending its troops overseas because of the unfortunate experiences of the neighboring countries with Japan," said a statement from South Korea's Foreign Ministry.

The governing Liberal Democratic Party is pressing for the corps to join the U.N. peacekeeping effort in Cambodia.

But even Gen. Atsushi Shima, chief of staff of the Ground Self-Defense Forces — from which the peacekeeping troops would be drawn — expressed doubts about the shift in policy.

Gorbachev warns of 'catastrophe, war' if union disintegrates

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev warned Tuesday that the disintegration of the Soviet Union will lead to misfortune, catastrophe and war, but Russia hastened the breakup by recognizing Ukraine's new statehood.

Saying the country was experiencing a destructive "crisis of statehood," Gorbachev urged lawmakers across the Soviet Union to approve his proposed Union Treaty — a plan to hold the nation together as a loose confederation.

"The breakup of such a multiethnic community will bring misfortunes upon millions of our people, which will outbalance all possible temporary benefits from secession," Gorbachev said in a statement distributed to lawmakers in all 12 republics, not just those seven who have said they will sign the treaty.

"A breakup is fraught with interethnic, interrepublic clashes, even wars," he said. "That would be a catastrophe for the entire global community."

Coming one day after Ukrainian officials announced that voters in the republic had overwhelmingly approved a referendum on independence, Gorbachev's comments amounted to a desperate plea to save some form of union as well as what little remains of his dwindling authority.

The proposed treaty would limit the Kremlin's role to foreign affairs, strategic nuclear arms and coordination of economic policy. It also would establish a five-year, directly elected national presidency and an independent judiciary, and allow the republics to introduce their own currencies.

Ukraine's newly elected president, Leonid Kravchuk, previously pledged not to sign the treaty. Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin said in a newspaper interview last week that if Ukraine did not sign the treaty, his republic would not sign either.

Yeltsin on Tuesday recognized Ukraine as an independent state, Soviet news media reported. The move could seal Ukrainian secession and remove a diplomatic hurdle for nations considering the step.

Poland, which borders Ukraine, already recognized Ukraine's statehood, and the United States, Canada, Sweden, Hungary and Denmark announced similar plans.

Gorbachev's appeal to national and republic lawmakers on the Union Treaty did not mention Ukraine.

Trying to put the most positive face on the blow that Ukrainians dealt the Soviet leader, Grachev said the vote would now allow the government in Kiev to work out its future relations with other republics.

NATO officials hold special meeting on Soviets

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO officials met Tuesday to discuss the upheaval in the Soviet Union and underscore the obligations of the central government and the Soviet republics to abide by arms control agreements.

A statement issued after the meeting said the allies "re-emphasized the essential need to ensure the safe, responsible and reliable control of nuclear weapons under a single authority."

Robert Zoellick, counselor for the U.S. State Department, outlined a framework for dealing with the Kremlin and the republics, reported a NATO source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Zoellick stressed that any Soviet republic declaring independence must assume its share of responsibility for following disarmament accords, he said.

He said Zoellick told alliance officials the United States would send an emissary to Ukraine, which voted Sunday to secede.

In the statement, the allies welcomed "the democratic manner" in which Ukrainians voted for independence. But they also called for the republic to "commit itself to a non-nuclear pollicy" and abide by and implement all disarmament agreements signed by the Soviet Union.

Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk has announced that Ukraine will uphold all international treaties agreed to by the Soviet Union, including the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty covering long-range missiles.

At a summit last month in Rome, leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization issued a statement asking the Soviet Union to follow the accords.

The statement supported a plan by the Soviet leadership to maintain control of nuclear weapons under a single authority.

Kravchuk says Ukraine will establish collective control of Soviet nuclear weapons with Russia, Byelorussia and Kazakhstan — the other republics containing Soviet nuclear warheads.

Mexican general says slain drug agents fired first

VERACRUZ, Mexico (NYT) — A Mexican army general under investigation in the killing of seven narcotics police by his soldiers claims that the drug agents took the first shots in a confused gun battle on a clandestine airstrip used by cocaine smugglers.

"We didn't do anything more than repel an aggression," said Gen. Alfredo Moran Acevedo, army commander for Veracruz.

"We were merely defending ourselves against an attack." He said that even though seven agents were killed "it wasn't a massacre. There were ten or eleven survivors."

But extensive interviews in the state capital of Veracruz tend to support a widely-believed theory that the army intentionally shot the soldiers in an effort to keep the agents from making a drug bust. The killings may have jeopardized Mexico's joint narcotics control program with the United States.

Among those interviewed was a forensic doctor, who analyzed the bodies and asserted that the soldiers shot the agents at close range.

The incident occurred in the early morning of Nov. 7 after the agents landed their small plane at the airstrip in El Llano de Vibora, about 25 miles south of Veracruz.

The agents had been pursuing a cocaine-laden plane that landed earlier on the strip. The government first said that the soldiers killed the seven agents by accident in a confused battle between the two forces.

But American and Mexican media reports, quoting Washington and Mexican sources, have alleged that Gen. Moran Acevedo's soldiers were in place at the air strip to protect the cocaine plane. The three smugglers escaped.

Angel Aguirre Gutierrez, director of forensic medicine for Veracruz state, said in an interview Monday that the police were shot from as close as 15 to 30 feet.

Cambodian factions reach compromise on Khmer Rouge

PATTAYA, Thailand (AP) — The four Cambodian factions agreed Thursday to provide security for Khmer Rouge leaders, paving the way for the Khmer Rouge's return to the Cambodian capital after being driven out by an angry mob.

The announcement came after daylong talks involving the Cambodians, U.N. representatives and the five world powers that brokered the peace accord that formally halted 13 years of civil war.

The factions agreed the Khmer Rouge delegation will be housed in Phnom Penh at the compound of the Supreme National Council, the country's reconciliation body, a communique said. The Khmer Rouge officials will stay there until a U.N. peacekeeping force is deployed in February and then will find a new residence, the statement said.

Asked when the Khmer Rouge would return to Cambodia, Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen told reporters: "Within the next few days. You can be sure of that. The Khmer Rouge have agreed to return to Phnom Penh."

"We have settled all the problems," he said.

Two leaders of the Communist Khmer Rouge were beaten, and one of them was nearly lynched, on Nov. 27 by a mob that broke into their villa in Phnom Penh and forced them to flee to Thailand.

The attackers were seeking revenge for massacres of hundreds of thousands of their relatives during the 1975-78 Khmer Rouge rule, when the radical Communists set up vast networks of slave labor camps to try to turn Cambodia into an agrarian utopia.

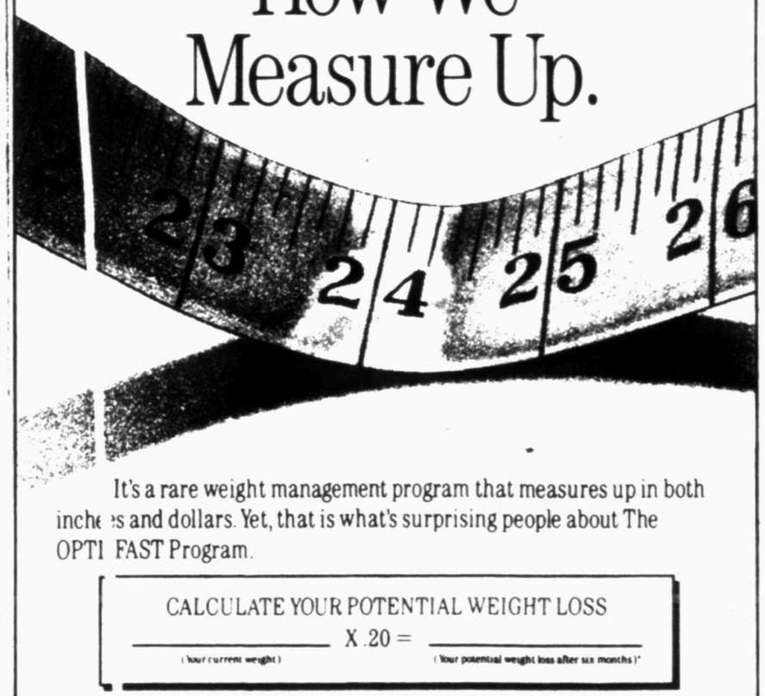
At The OPTIFAST® Program, You'd Be Surprised How We Measure Up.



It's a rare weight management program that measures up in both inches and dollars. Yet, that is what's surprising people about The OPTIFAST Program.
CALCULATE YOUR POTENTIAL WEIGHT LOSS
_____ (Your current weight) X .20 = _____ (Your potential weight loss after six months)*
A recent study shows that half of all people who completed 26 weeks of the Program maintained, on average, over 70% of their initial weight loss one year after completing the active weight loss phase of the Program. Our special maintenance program is recommended for helping you maintain your goal.
When it comes to dollars, our weight management Program can cost less than many commercial diets, if you have 50 lbs. or more to lose. Ask us about insurance coverage and flexible financing, too.

Shopping locally helps economy

The word's out. Thanksgiving is over, and the bird's carcass has been properly laid to rest. Excitement is escalating for that once-a-year Christmas gala, and everybody is aware: Santa Claus is coming to town!

Passersby may not be shouting "Merry Christmas" through the chilly air yet, but it's just a matter of time.

To put the proper sparkle on the season, the holiday shopping season was launched in Midland immediately after the old gobbler was eaten, and merchants reported shoppers waiting in line to get in the stores. Yes, shoppers are being thrifty and looking for bargains, but otherwise store managers are happy and some are reporting the turnout this year better than last.

This year's Christmas shopping season will be an important one for merchants and shoppers alike. Shoppers are not going to be buying extravagantly, but wisely. We hope they buy wisely in more ways than one.

It's important for them to patronize the merchants who have served them well for a period of years, but it's even more important that they spend their dollars locally. That way, their money stays in the local economy and improves the economic outlook for more Midlanders.

Later this week thousands of Midlanders will travel to Lubbock to watch the District 4-5A quarterfinal playoff between Midland Lee's Rebels and the Panthers of Odessa Permian. The game is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium and no doubt will be a thriller.

While we honestly hope those Midlanders who attend enjoy the game and the sights in Lubbock, we hope they restrict the bulk of their shopping until their return to Midland so the money spent will benefit our economy, not Lubbock's. We're all struggling to get through difficult economic times; it only makes sense to shop where the dollars will help us the most — and that's in Midland!

Christmas is coming! Let's deck the halls with boughs of holly and get ready to generate the best Christmas season possible.

LETTER

City court doesn't search for truth

For most law-abiding citizens, the only direct contact with our court system is traffic court. It would seem that some effort would be made to ensure a fair trial. The court does operate for the productive citizen of the community.

I had the unfortunate experience of running into the City of Midland court system. You reported this on the Sunday, Nov. 17th, front page. If your reporter is going to report the trial, surely he can also report the actions of the judge, some out of sight of the jury. The jury did the best they could, under the circumstances. Does the fact that the judge is employed by the City of Midland to keep the fines coming in have any bearing on his actions?

The judge prevented me ("... I will, use my contempt power against you ...") from showing that:

(1) The radar unit was 12 years old, out of production and obsolete.

(2) The next newer model was also out of production and obsolete.

(3) The police had lost the instruction manual, so that

(4) The new officer could not have been properly trained (this is like losing the VCR or computer instructions) and could not have known the astounding number of things that would have given false readings.

Also, the judge would not recognize witness incompetence even when the officer stated that "... the radar beam is shaped like a football. It goes out, gets bigger, then gets smaller, then comes back." The judge, finally, would not let me take traffic school instead of a fine (in direct contradiction of defendants rights that were clearly stated in the film mentioned by the Midland Reporter-Telegram). I should have expected something like this when my first correspondence from the judge contained four spelling errors on the first page.

I have paid the radar fee and a fee for having a jury (?), but I also want to warn anyone expecting a search for truth to look elsewhere, or for everyone to go for a jury trial and clog up the system.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 4, the 338th day of 1991. There are 27 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 4, 1783, Gen. George Washington bade farewell to his officers at Fraunces Tavern in New York. In a choked voice, the departing chief commander of the Continental Army said, "With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you."

On this date:

In 1816, James Monroe of Virginia was elected the fifth president of the United States, defeating Federalist Rufus King.

In 1839, the Whig Party opened a national convention in Harrisburg, Pa., during which delegates nominated William Henry Harrison for president.

In 1875, William Marcy Tweed, the "Boss" of New York City's Tammany Hall political organization, escaped from jail and fled the country.

In 1918, President Wilson set sail for France to attend the Versailles Peace Conference, becoming the first chief executive to travel outside the United States while in office.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the dismantling of the Works Progress Administration, which was created in 1935 to provide work during the Depression.

Kemp stretches beyond Baker's liking

WASHINGTON — Jack Kemp is pushing his luck with the Bush administration. Kemp signed on to the Bush Cabinet as the secretary of Housing and Urban Development with some expectation from the White House that he would keep his nose out of politics. But that's like asking Garfield to keep his nose out of lasagne.

Anderson

A worldwide organization of conservative political parties has picked Kemp as its next likely deputy-chairman, sharing the job with former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. If Kemp takes the position with the International Democratic Union, he will violate a secret agreement he made in 1988 with Secretary of State James Baker. Baker arranged the Cabinet job for Kemp on the condition that he stay out of international affairs as long as George Bush was in office. Bush wanted to be the star on the world scene, and he didn't need a presidential aspirant like Kemp overshadowing and second-guessing him.

The IDU was formed in 1983 at a conference in London where Bush represented then-President Ronald Reagan. The group's goal is to promote democracy around the world, but its definition of democracy is to the right of center. The Republican Party belongs to the IDU, but the Democrats do not.

According to our sources, the agreement to make Kemp and Thatcher the new leaders next summer was brokered by Republican heavyweight Frank Fahrenkopf, who served as head of the Republican National Committee during part of the Reagan years. Fahrenkopf now practices law in Washington. He traveled to London with Bush in 1983 to organize the IDU and was one of the original signatories to the charter representing the Republican Party. He is currently deputy chairman of the IDU.

Fahrenkopf told our reporter Jan Moller that while Thatcher is on the list of candidates considered for the chairmanship, the IDU is not close to making a decision. He also confirmed that Kemp has been mentioned for the job, and said he didn't know anything about Kemp's promise to Baker to stay out of international affairs.

Fahrenkopf said he doesn't believe Kemp would take the job without the blessings of the White House. But don't count on it.

Kemp's love affair with the administration is beginning to show signs of strain. He expected to be able to make big changes in the scandal-ridden HUD, but has been unable to get the president's ear for many of his ideas. The job has turned into a political backwater for him instead of a place where he could showcase his talents.

Last month, one of Kemp's big housing initiatives was rebuffed when Bush signed an appropriations bill that makes deep cuts in some of Kemp's pet programs. Kemp also crossed Bush recently by coming out in favor of tax cuts to stimulate the economy, something many conservatives think is necessary but Bush has declined to endorse.

The European branch of the IDU met in October and indicated a preference for awarding the chairmanship to Carl Bildt, the leader of the Moderate Party in Sweden that recently ousted the ruling Social Democrats. The minutes of the European meeting indicate that Thatcher is being considered as a "patron of honor" to the organization and Kemp as deputy chairman. But, according to our source, Fahrenkopf has more firm plans. He reportedly told Kemp that Thatcher would only agree to take the job of chairman if Kemp agreed to be the deputy-chairman. And then Fahrenkopf told Thatcher that Kemp had agreed to take the job, only if she shared it with him.

Kemp declined our requests for comment. Our sources say he is nervous that Baker will find out he is mulling over the offer.

If he accepts the job, it is likely to cause a rift between him and Baker, both longtime allies of Bush who have been on opposite ends of the policy spectrum since Bush took office.

Answer to economy woes: Tough it out

WASHINGTON — What do you do when the right thing to do is not enough?

That's the Bush dilemma on the economy. The recovery that began this summer from the too-mild, too-short recession turned out to be a "dead cat bounce" — a brief turn-up before a further sinking sensation. Because the consensus economic forecast turned out to be mistaken, public hand-wringing is rising as consumer confidence is sinking.

Safire

What's the right thing for the federal government to do? If the goal is another long period of prosperous, non-inflationary growth, the answer is no mystery: tough it out.

Monetary and fiscal stimulation are already in place. Interest rates are low and getting lower, the best incentive to borrow and to invest. On the budget side, the government is pumping in deficit spending of $350 billion a year; the fiscal accelerator is already pressed to the floor.

The wrong thing to do would be to cut taxes or increase spending. That would dismay bond vigilantes and drive up interest rates, inviting recession to stick around another year, harming those most needing help.

At such a moment, a secure president with a passion for prudence would come before the people with a simple message:

The free-enterprise system includes this thing called the business cycle, which includes a downturn every 5 or 10 years. We all know what to do to help keep recessions short, and we've been doing it. The trick now is to suffer awhile, helping the worst hit along, but to avoid panicking and making a big mistake that would plunge us into the double-digit inflation and interest rates of the late 70s, which were followed by the worst bust of postwar times.

Unfortunately, our president, having lost 40 percentage points of light, is feeling insecure. The political opposition, along with the jobless and careerless, has been joined by the Chicken Little media in urging him to do something now, quick, to stop the pain — to be the nation's daddy — and he feels forced to respond lest he seem unresponsive, uncaring or unleaderly.

His own party piles on; House Republicans urge a tax cut because they believe there is never a bad time for a tax cut, and taxes as a percent of GNP have never been higher; the Senate minority leader, Bob Dole, ever the stalwart when least needed, declares the president must come up with a plan of action in the next six weeks or the game is up.

This is when the right thing to do — to take the heat and stay the course, to refuse to make Jimmy Carter's economic mistakes — needs a little something extra. Not action to "take command" — ask the Soviets about command economies — but enough visible activity to create confidence by giving the illusion of solving the problem.

The appearance of action is comforting, and the confidence it builds is necessary — provided the soothing activity does not become genuine large-scale action (which is the wrong thing except in emergencies).

The point is to dazzle each other with economic footwork while not doing the wrong thing — not overstimulating in political panic now at a cost to be paid by the job-entering generation.

Those of us not running for office can say: Fiddle around with creative ideas at the periphery, Mr. President and Congress, to show you're awake to the pain — but don't mess with a system that is slowly getting itself well.

Nicknames reveal individual's personality

I did an autograph party for a new book the other day and had three requests for nicknames that caught my attention.

I've always liked nicknames, especially ones that say something about certain characteristics of the person who has the name.

Grizzard

There was a boy in my school who walked with each foot pointed slightly outward. The football coach called him "Ten-to-Two."

There was a policeman who would follow the bread delivery truck around each morning and after it dropped off a couple of loaves on someone's porch (you could get that kind of service back then) he would steal the bread.

He eventually was caught and was forever known afterwards as "Crusty," which reminds me of a former colleague who was renowned for doing as little as possible at work.

We deemed him "Colonial," the name of a bread company that advertised its product as, "The eight-hour loaf."

I had a guy walk up and ask that his book be signed to "Hogpen."

"Is that you?" I asked.

"That's me," he said. "I used to work at Billy Carter's service station in Plains."

"Billy give you that name?"

"My daddy did," he replied.

And Charles Schulz heard about it, I presume, and has his Pigpen character in "Peanuts."

I didn't have time to discuss the nickname any further with the man, but you do wonder what he did to earn such a tag.

Did he sleep with hogs? The possibilities are endless.

Next, I got a "Frog."

"It's for a friend of mine," the lady with the book said. "All anybody has ever called him is 'Frog.'"

There was another boy in my school we called "Toad." He actually looked like one. We also had a teacher named "Froggie." She looked like one, too. Her classroom was known as "The Pond." So when Toad was in her class, there was old Toad sitting in Froggie's Pond. That was really great stuff when I was 16.

The other nickname I got was "Goathead."

"You're not 'Goathead,' I hope," I said to the lady with the book.

"'Goathead' is a friend," she answered.

"How on earth would a guy get a nickname like 'Goathead'?" I asked. "It's not a guy, it's a girl," said the lady.

Before I could get a further explanation the lady took her book and was gone.

A girl named "Goathead?" Wouldn't that set her social life back a ways?

"Oh yeah? What's her name?"

"Her friends call her 'Goathead.'"

"Sure. I'll go out with a blind date named 'Goathead.' Where are we going for dinner? The garbage dump?"

I had a nickname when I was young. It was "Skippy." My father was a basketball coach in the army and his players called him "Skipper." So, when I came along ...

I always hated that name, and when I was 10 I pulled a knife on my family and said, "Anybody calls me 'Skippy' again, I'll cut 'em."

My grandmother was the only one who didn't or couldn't comply. She continued to call me "Skippy" the rest of her life, and who would cut his grandmother?

But at least "Skippy" wasn't "Hogpen," "Frog" or "Goathead." For that I am immensely thankful.

"Hi, I'm 16733."

"Nice to meet you. I'm 22841, but my nicknumber is 9."

Talks face uncertain opening

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Mideast peace talks Tuesday headed toward an uncertain opening round with Israel still insisting on a delay and Arab negotiators likely to confront an empty chair.

The standoff persisted as Secretary of State James A. Baker III arranged for the talks to open Wednesday at 10 a.m. even if Israel failed to show up.

Delegations from Syria, Lebanon and Jordan joined with Palestinians challenged the Israelis to attend, but the Israeli Cabinet decided Sunday its negotiators needed until Monday to prepare to deal with the Arabs on three fronts.

"We were invited to come for bilateral talks for the 4th in Washington," said Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation. "We are not going to sit around twiddling our thumbs."

Ashrawi said the Palestinians "can't give any promises" they will still be here on Dec. 9, when Israel says it will appear. That day, she said, comes a day after the fourth anniversary of the start of the "intefadeh" Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories, and her group had other commitments.

"If we face an empty chair across the peace table, the responsibility will fall squarely on Israel," said Abdul Salam Majali, head of the Jordanian delegation.

Israel also wants to stagger the talks so that there would be an interlude between its negotiations with three Arab delegations. Israeli officials said Israel is proposing to start the talks with the Palestinians, to be followed four or eight days later by meetings with the Syrians. The State Department arrangements are for simultaneous talks.

Benjamin Netanyahu, a close aide to Shamir, said Israel would send three teams here, ready to open negotiations with the three Arab delegations on Monday.

But Netanyahu said Israel still wanted the talks shifted to the Middle East after one or two procedural sessions. That way, he said, the Arab people will realize their governments are dealing directly with Israel.

"Israel is not missing any opportunity," he said after an hour-long meeting with Dennis Ross, an aide to Baker and head of the department's policy planning staff. "Israel will be here." He said lower-level Israeli officials will be in Washington until Monday and he hoped the Arab delegations get in touch with them directly to discuss procedural matters, including the opening date if Monday is inconvenient.

Netanyahu said the United States scheduled the talks for Wednesday wihout consulting Israel.

And yet, he said, "neither of us wants a confrontation between the United States and Israel" or to raise "false expectations" among the Arabs.

Meanwhile, the United States and the Soviet Union, working together as Mideast peacemakers, called for an international conference in Moscow at the end of January to ease Arab-Israeli tensions.

They made the announcement even as Arab delegations streamed into Washington for negotiations with Israel on a wide range of bilateral war-and-peace issues.

The Moscow talks Jan. 28-29 will be held at the foreign ministers' level and seek to build confidence between Arabs and Israelis by addressing such concerns as scarce water resources and threats to the environment.

Other topics to be discussed are the arms buildup in the region, to which both the United States and the Soviet Union have contributed, and Palestinian refugees.

A Saudi source said 32 nations were expected to attend. But Syria, rejecting several appeals by Baker, is boycotting the session at least until it succeeds in getting Israel to yield territory lost in the 1967 Six-Day war.

Palestinians and Jordanians arrived in Washington overnight, and the Syrians and Lebanese during the day.

Diplomatic sources said the talks will be held at the State Department. Even the location of the talks had been kept secret until the last minute.

Baker, meanwhile, instructed Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador at the United Nations, to intensify the Bush administration's effort to persuade the General Assembly to nullify its 1975 resolution that equated Zionism with racism.

Passed at the height of the campaign against Israel by the Soviet Union and the Arabs, it stung the Jewish state and its supporters by degrading the philosophy that underpins Israel's existence.

The State Department spokeswoman, Margaret D. Tutwiler, said there was "no link" between the U.S. move and the peace talks. And yet, the announcement was viewed generally as an attempt to ease Israel's irritation with the way Baker scheduled the negotiations over Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's objections.

In another apparent gesture to Israel, she announced no photographs would be permitted when Arab negotiators sit down at the negotiating table Wednesday, facing an empty Israel chair.

"We are not going to play the empty-chair game," she said. "We think that is below the belt, and we are not going to participate in that."

At the same time, Ms. Tutwiler said Baker had granted visa waivers for two Palestinians. Under the law, officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization otherwise are barred from entering the country, since Congress concluded the group practices terrorism.

She said Baker had taken the step to "enhance the prospects for peace."

While Ms. Tutwiler did not identify the two Palestinians, they are believed to be Akram Haniyeh, a member of Fatah's revolutionary council, and Tayseer Arouri, a member of the Palestine National Council, the PLO's executive group.

They will serve as advisers to the joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation, as they did at the opening round of talks Oct. 30-Nov. 4 in Madrid, Spain. They will not sit in the room with the Israelis or have contact with U.S. officials.

In Jerusalem, meanwhile, a new West Bank military post was approved by the government. The action could indicate new settlements will be constructed on the land Jordan held from 1948 until 1967 and the Arabs are determined to get back through the negotiations.

FDA sees benefit in Alzheimer's drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — An experimental drug that is to be tested in thousands of patients with Alzheimer's disease is not a cure, and so far its benefits have been shown to be small, the head of the Food and Drug Administration cautioned Tuesday.

"It's very important to underline that it's only suggestive that the drug works," FDA Commissioner David Kessler said.

He said that even the memory improvement shown in earlier experimental treatment with the drug "may be a technical change."

"Is the patient really improved? We really just don't know yet," Kessler said on CBS "This Morning."

An FDA advisory panel last March found the scientific data supporting the safety and effectiveness of tacrine to be insufficient and declined to recommend approval of the drug.

About 4 million people in the United States are believed to have Alzheimer's disease. It kills more than 100,000 annually, making it the fourth leading cause of death among American adults.

There is no known cure for the disease, which causes a slow deterioration of mental function, including memory, and eventually causes patients to lose control of body functions.

The FDA authorized wider use of the tacrine based on evidence from earlier testing that it produces a small improvement in mental function and that larger doses might have a greater effect.

But while the drug can produce some favorable effects, it also can cause liver damage, Kessler said.

U.S. drops plan to curb AIDS-infected workers

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Overwhelmed by opposition from organized medicine, the federal Centers for Disease Control is dropping its plan to list procedures that health workers infected with the AIDS virus should not perform.

The change amounts to agreement that as critics asserted, there is no scientific reason to list procedures that should not be performed by infected health workers.

Instead, draft guidelines by the CDC suggest, the emphasis should be on identifying infected health workers who do not meet standards of infection control or whose stamina or mental state makes them unfit to practice.

The draft would revise guidelines the federal agency issued in July pending creation of the list.

The new draft strengthens the role of local panls in determining whether individual health workers are fit to perform particular procedures. In effect, the draft guidelines call for decisions on a case-by-case basis, rather than setting general limits.

It was not immediately clear what effect, if any, the federal agency's action would have on legislative efforts to limit the practice of infected health workers.

The earlier guidelines had been approved by Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the secretary of Health and Human Services, who must now approve the change. Officials are expected to meet next week to discuss the revised guidelines.

The CDC does not have direct regulatory powers, but Dr. William L. Roper, the agency's director, has said he expected health workers to comply with the guidelines through the encouragement of professional groups and state licensing authorities. Moreover, other experts said the guidelines could be cited in lawsuits.

In a draft of the new federal guidelines, which have not been publicly announced, the CDC says the factors to be considered by a local panel include a health-care worker's skill and technique in performing a procedure and the worker's physical and mental stamina to perform routine duties.

Experts have repeatedly said that the risk of a health worker transmitting HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, to a patient is close to zero. Such apparent transmission has been found only once, in the practice of a Florida dentist who has died of AIDS.

Five of his patients were found to be infected with HIV, but health experts still do not know how they became infected.

But the emotional appeal of one of the patients, Kimberly Bergalis, swayed opinion in favor of sharp restrictions on infected health workers. Miss Bergalis, 23, is near death from AIDS.

In a bitter letter to health officials in June, she said she blamed them for her condition and called for mandatory testing of health workers.

The draft guidelines, like the previous ones, oppose mandatory testing of health workers for HIV. Instead they call for voluntary tests; those people found to be infected are advised to seek counsel from a local committee of experts before performing invasive procedures.

Invasive procedures are those in which a doctor's hands or instruments enter a body cavity or touch mucus membranes in the mouth or elsewhere. The draft focuses on procedures performed by surgeons, dentists, gynecologists and obstetricians.

The guidelines instruct such committees to focus on three factors in determining whether infected health workers should continue to perform invasive procedures and under what circumstances.

One factor is an evaluation of the type of procedures that the health worker performs and the likelihood that drops of the worker's blood could pose a significant risk to a patient in an invasive procedure.

Today's women twice as likely to have child while single

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today's women are almost twice as likely to have a first child out of wedlock than those of 20 years ago, the Census Bureau said Tuesday.

A survey showed about one out of every four initial births in the late 1980s were to unmarried women. In the late 1960s, only about one in seven first babies were born outside of marriage.

Similarly, pregnant single women now are far less likely to marry before the baby is born, the survey found.

In the late 1960s, more than half the pregnant single women married before the birth. In the late 1980s, about one in four did.

Census Bureau researchers didn't ask why women decided against marriage. The agency's report speculated the reason may be economic.

Some women may believe they'd be better off relying on parents and relatives "than by entering a potentially unstable marriage undertaken solely to prevent an out-of-wedlock birth," said the report's author, Amara Bachu.

Unpublished Census Bureau numbers showed a pregnant, unmarried woman is less likely to get married before the birth if she is poor or lacks a high-school education, she said.

Others said the numbers showed people had changed their ideas about babies and marriage.

"It's not necessarily seen as an economic and social disaster if a woman has a child out of marriage," said Carl Haub, demographer at the Population Reference Bureau, a Washington research group. "It may well be if they have careers of their own, they can afford to have a child outside of marriage."

In 1990, one in four babies was born to an unmarried woman. Half of black babies were born to unmarried women, the study said.

Officials to ban race-exclusive scholarships

WASHINGTON (NYT) — After a seven-month review, Education Secretary Lamar Alexander is expected to issue regulations on Wednesday that ban race-exclusive scholarships for college students, according to Administration officials.

A similar position, taken last December by Michael L. Williams, assistant secretary for civil rights at the Education Department, raised a firestorm of protest by colleges and universities and civil rights groups. They argued that such a policy would undermine minority participation in higher education.

Under the rules to be issued on Wednesday, race could still be used as one factor in awarding scholarships in order to achieve diversity on college campuses, but not the only factor, said the officials, who insisted on anonymity. Campus diversity could be achieved, they say, without considering race but by considering factors like geographic origin, cultural or economic disadvantages, or specific talents.

Williams, who argued that race-exclusive scholarships violated Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, would have completely banned such scholarships except those being used under court desegregation orders.

Alexander rescinded Williams' ruling in April, saying he wanted the issue to be studied further.

Different drafts of the new proposed ruling, first reported in The Washington Post on Tuesday, have been circulating within the Department of Education and the Justice Department and it is still unclear how scholarships given by private donors and designated specifically for minorities would be treated.

One proposal would permit colleges to accept private donations designated for minority scholarships as long as white students would have the opportunity to compete for similar financial assistance. Another proposal would permit race-exclusive scholarships as long as they were not administered by the college or university; a student would instead apply for and receive such financial aid directly from the private donor, then use the funds to pay for college fees.

Robert Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, an association of colleges and universities, said he would withhold any reaction to the ban until he had seen the specific details.

But Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Resources and Intergovernmental Relations, said, "This proposed rule is the same misguided policy the department attempted last year."

"Despite the sugar coating," he said, "the administration continues to deny the legality of race-specific scholarships and the economic hardships faced by minority students who suffer from the remnants of discrimination. It is another example of the administration's blind spot on civil rights."

Scholarships based on race in combination with other factors, like financial need or a student's grades or special talents, would still be permitted.

City seeks resident input on annexation

■ Officials want to know if southside neighborhood wants to be within the city limits.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A proposed city annexation of a south Midland neighborhood north of Interstate Highway 20 is expected to hinge partly on what the residents want.

Under a 1984 agreement, the city of Midland would consider annexation if the county provided water and sewer service to the area, bounded by Gist and Stokes avenues on the north, Fort Worth Street on the east, Longview Avenue on the south and Colorado and Baird streets on the west.

Some of the required improvements have been completed and the plan may be ready to proceed. But Mayor Carroll Thomas has suggested to planners that they send letters to all householders and property owners, asking if they favor annexation.

"We wanted to make sure we consulted with the residents in that area (and) gave them a chance to say what they think," said At-large Councilman John Castro.

A public hearing would be part of the annexation process if it continues.

"If they're all opposed to it, that would weigh very heavily on the decision," said At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth. "I think the council is very sensitive to what the neighbors think." He said at this point, he sees no real reason to annex the section.

Residents may object because they would face city taxation.

Part of the area is completely undeveloped, without buildings or improvements of any kind. A middle section is largely residential and has sewer and water service available, and the easternmost section is only partially developed.

City planners have recommended dividing the section into three parts and annexing only two.

"We propose taking in (the undeveloped section) as a protection,

Councilmen negotiate with citizens unhappy about their annexation

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

With another annexation proposal in the works, city leaders continue to negotiate with residents of a northwest neighborhood unhappy with their annexation a decade ago.

"Right now I would feel terrible annexing this new section when we've got residents in the northwest that don't have water and sewer (available from the city)," said John Castro, at-large councilman.

He referred to a section of the city, located north of Bluebird Lane, that was annexed in the early 1980s without a master plan for development, and despite the residents' opposition. It is zoned AE, agricultural estates, and most residents utilize a septic system and water wells.

New laws require the city to provide the same opportunities to annexed areas as to city residents.

Councilmen said the residents' tax money funds fire and police protection, but not water and sewer provisions.

"But regardless, they should have these other things. They've been disappointed and we're trying to help them work something out," Castro said.

J.D. Faircloth, at-large councilman, said the property owners would normally pay for pipes needed for their sewer and water.

"We shouldn't provide an infrastructure for the select few, we can't do that. But certainly there's a tremendous need here," he said.

District 1 Councilman James Devenport, Castro and Faircloth have been working with city staff to find a middle ground in the issue.

'All they really got for their annexation was a tax bill.'

— Toby McWilliams

Also involved in that process is Toby McWilliams, a resident of Cardinal Lane who bought his house after it had become part of the city.

"All they really got for their annexation was a tax bill," said McWilliams, who has determined fire and police protection — paid for by his tax money — would be provided by his county taxes anyway. The cost, he said, is not worth the benefit.

"We've been working on this for more than a year. I feel like we're pretty close to coming to an agreement that is fair and equitable for everyone concerned," McWilliams said.

"It's been a learning experience for all of us, anyway, because the existing city government were not the ones who did this," McWilliams said. "They really had nothing to do with it and got stuck trying to deal with the situation."

The currently proposed annexation differs from the northwest development in many ways, councilmen said.

"At that time, the area was annexed primarily for the increased tax revenue," Faircloth said. "This time, we're going to get some people involved and find out if there's really any reason to do this."

Defendant reported shooting, testimony indicates

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 38-year-old Midland man, on trial for the fatal shooting of his wife, called Emergency 911 to report the incident and later made a confession to police, according to testimony on Tuesday.

But testimony also showed that Fountain Smith Jr. was paranoid about being followed or sought when he shot 27-year-old Theresa Ann Smith.

Smith pleaded not guilty to the murder in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court on Tuesday. Smith's defense centers on his being temporarily insane because of paranoia and/or fearful of drug dealers, according to defense attorney Glen Aaron.

In presenting the state's case against Smith, District Attorney Al Schorre entered into evidence a recording of the 911 call made by the defendant after the shooting.

On the tape, a calm and cooperative-sounding Smith told dispatchers he had shot his wife outside a house on Cuthbert Avenue near Tyler Street.

Smith said he didn't know how many times he had shot his wife and that he had tossed the gun, the tape revealed.

"I'm just waiting for y'all to come pick me up," he told dispatchers.

While waiting on the phone for police to arrive, Smith answered questions and made comments about being followed.

"She's (Mrs. Smith) been having two guys following my truck all night long," he said on the tape.

Smith also made reference to evidence of prowlers in his backyard and his wife having affairs.

Similar statements were made to police and in a confession, testimony revealed.

Killeen cafeteria that was the site of massacre to reopen

■ After redesiging the interior of the restaurant, Luby's will again serve customers in the spring.

By Karen Potter
N.Y. Times News Service

KILLEEN — The Luby's Cafeteria that was the site of the nation's worst mass shooting will reopen next spring in response to overwhelming community support, including that of victims who want to deny the gunman the lasting memorial of an abandoned building.

Kirby Lack, a minister wounded by gunman Georges Hennard during a bloody October rampage that claimed 24 lives including his own, said all but one of the survivors he had talked to wanted to see the cafeteria reopen.

"I think if we were to close Luby's, it would give Hennard the memorial that he was looking for," said Lack, 40, who was shot in the stomach and lost one of his best friends, Copperas Cove veterinarian Michael Griffith, in the Oct. 16 lunchtime shooting.

"I mean everybody would drive by and say that's the place where 23 people were killed and then they would remember the murderer and not the people who were murdered. And I think probably the best thing would be to reopen Luby's, out of defiance if nothing else."

Mayor Major Blair said the city will build an as-yet-undesigned memorial to the shooting victims at a quiet city park now dotted with swing sets, shade trees and picnic tables. The park, Conder Park, is located about a mile from the cafeteria.

Meanwhile, officials of Luby's Cafeteria Inc. will oversee the redesign of the interior of the nearly new restaurant with an eye to reopening in February or March, said Luby's president and chief executive Ralph "Pete" Erben.

Erben said it is too early to say whether structural changes might be made, such as bricking up part of the window through which Hennard, 35, crashed his pickup and then began shooting. No memorial will be placed on or inside the building, he said.

Erben said the company had received hundreds of letters and phone calls from people asking Luby's to reopen the restaurant, a popular choice among those who live in the Central Texas military

MADD commends lawmen's efforts

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) honored 13 law enforcement officials Tuesday night for their diligence in arresting intoxicated drivers.

The efforts of the 13 men were commended on behalf of family members of those killed by drunken drivers.

"They are certainly worthy of this recognition. And we certainly feel their work is vital to improving our community," Faye Higgins, president of the local MADD chapter, said. Her son, Joseph, died on August 18, 1984, after his car was struck by a drunken driver. He was 24.

On July 23, 1988, Yolanda Ramirez lost her husband, two daughters, a nephew and a niece on a stretch of U.S. Highway 80 between the Midland city limits and Midland International Airport. Killed in the accident were Chon Ramirez, 38, Amy Michelle Ramirez, 16, Amanda Rose Ramirez, 11, Derek Sanchez, 7, and 1-year-old Amanda Kaye Harker.

"I'm very grateful that MADD does this," Mrs. Ramirez said. "I don't know how I would have survived my ordeal. They contacted me and let me know they were there and it really saved me. The support is enormous."

In an effort to increase drunken driving convictions, MADD has recently instituted a program of hand-delivering letters to judges requesting reasons for probationary sentences.

The group also regularly meets to discuss their stories with a panel of DWI offenders.

"Whether it's what happened when the officer came to our door or whatever, it can often be very emotional," Mrs. Higgins said. "The last time we went, each offender came up to us and shook our hands. They tell us that nothing else that they have been told affects them like us telling our stories."

According to Leo Arrieta, a Department of Public Safety trooper, the video cameras installed in a limited number of police and DPS squad cars in April 1990 has dramatically in-

DEATHS

W.H. Hightower

Services for W.H. "Bill" Hightower, 67, are set for 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Jim Wilson of the First Baptist Church of Palm Desert, Calif., officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Hightower

Hightower died Tuesday at a local hospital.

He was born on Jan. 10, 1924, in Dallas and attended Arlington High School in Arlington. He won the Texas State Golf championship in 1938 and 1940. He attended North Texas State College before enlisting in the U.S. Army. During World War II he served in Asia.

Upon his discharge, he moved to Odessa and became the assistant gulf pro at the Odessa Country Club. He began a career in the furniture business, establishing and operating several different furniture stores in Midland. He changed careers in 1966 and became an independent oil operator.

He was an avid golfer and his accomplishments included winning the club championship of the Midland Country Club twice, as well as winning several other tournaments.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Jack D. Hightower of Midland, William H. Hightower Jr. and Don J. Cauthen of Midland and six grandchildren.

Memorials may be directed to the American Diabetes Association, 3404 W. Illinois, Suite 207, Midland, 79703.

Henry Mayfield

Services for Henry "Dutch" Mayfield, 81, of Midland are set for 1 p.m. Thursday at Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bill Skaggs officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mayfield

Mayfield died Tuesday at a Big Spring hospital.

He was born on Oct. 27, 1910, in Grosebeck. He grew up in Midland.

He married Helen Brown Sept. 22, 1935, in Midland.

He worked on several area ranches as a young man and later for Rocky Ford Moving and Dow Chemical.

He entered the service in 1942, served two years with the 11th Armored Division at Camp Polk, La., and received an honorable discharge.

He was affiliated with the American Legion for several years and served as the Sergeant of Arms for two years. He worked for several men's recreation clubs in Midland before retiring from the "Recreation Club" in 1972.

John E. Smith

KNOX CITY — Funeral services for John E. "Chick" Smith, 58, of Midland are set for 11 a.m. Thursday at First United Methodist Church in Knox City with the Revs. Byron Putnam and Bobby King officiating. Burial will follow in Knox City Cemetery under the direction of Smith Funeral Home.

He died Monday in a Houston hospital.

Smith was born Oct. 6, 1933, in Knox City, where he graduated from high school in 1952. He graduated from Texas Tech in November 1957.

He married Jo Denton Sept. 2, 1954, in Benjamin.

A U.S. Navy veteran, he worked as a petroleum engineer for Mobil Oil Co. for 20 years, later becoming a petroleum consultant. He had lived in Midland since 1965. He was a life member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers and earned many awards and achievements. He pioneered ultra sand concentration hydraulics fracturing.

He was on the board of directors of Southwest Petroleum Short Course at Texas Tech.

Survivors include: his mother, Daisy Dean Smith of Knox City; his wife, Jo Denton Smith of Midland; one son, J. Michel Smith of Indianapolis, Ind.; a daughter, Suzan Smith Marks of Midland; two sisters, Jane Schoonmaker of Carrolton and Judy Leaverton of Stephenville; and two grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital transplant division.

The family will receive friends Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at Elton Ramsey's home, 3328 W. Shandon in Midland.

Bessie Peifer

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — Services for Bessie M. Peifer, 87, of Bloomington, mother of Donald Beier of Midland, are set for 11 a.m. Thursday at Beck Memorial Home with the Rev. Philip D. Queen officiating. Burial will be in the East Lawn Memorial Gardens in Bloomington.

Mrs. Peifer died Monday at a local hospital.

She was born on July 17, 1904, in Clay City, Ill. She married Homer R. Beier on Jan. 1, 1922 in Cooksville, Ill. He died on Jan. 22, 1958.

She married Ed Peifer on Aug. 16, 1959 in Cooksville. He died in 1973.

She was a homemaker, a member of the 2nd Presbyterian Church, the Eagles Auxilliary and the Moose Auxilliary.

Survivors include two other sons, Russell Beier of Bloomington and Myron Beier of Normal, Ill.; two daughters, Ida Mae Rueger of Bloomington and Helen Spencer of Cooksville; one step-daughter, Delores Roberts of Heyworth, Ill.; three step-sons, William Peifer of Bloomington, Michael Peifer of Marathon, Fla., and Melvin Peifer of Seattle; 11 grandchildren; 17 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandson.

She was preceded in death by one daughter, nine brothers, two sisters and one step-son.

Memorials may be directed to the Eagle Lodge Memorial Fund.

Marion Brown

Services for Marion Elmer Brown, 71, are pending with the Hawthorn Funeral Home in Carthage. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements.

Brown died Tuesday at his Midland residence.

He was born on May 5, 1920, in Beckville. He graduated from Gary High School in 1938 as valedictorian and he attended Panola Junior College in Carthage and Commercial College in Tyler.

He was a decorated World War II veteran and served as a glider mechanic in Europe. He was a retired salesman.

He was a member of the Lions Club, Veteran's of Foreign Wars, American Legion and was a past Noble Grand and District Deputy of the Odd Fellows Lodge. He was also a member of St. Paul's United Methodist Church and had lived in Midland since 1961.

Survivors include his wife of 45 years, Earline Brown of Midland; and one sister, Clara Lucille Humphries of Carthage.

Douglas Rawlings

SAN MARCOS — Services for Douglas Rawlings, 65, father of Midlander Larry Rawlings, are set for 2 p.m. today in the Pennington Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. John Newby officiating. Burial will follow in Memory Lawn Memorial Park in Martindale under the direction of Pennington Funeral Home.

Rawlings died Sunday at a local hospital.

He was born May 2, 1926, in Port Lavaca.

A U.S. Marine Corps veteran, Rawlings retired from the San Marcos Fire Department in 1986 after 25 years' service.

Survivors include: his wife Elaine Rawlings; three sons, Wayne Rawlings, Larry Rawlings and Michael Rawlings; three brothers, five grandsons, five granddaughters and one great-granddaughter.

Memorials should be directed to the Westover Baptist Church Youth Group, 1310 Advance St., San Marcos 78666.

Martin Alaniz

ALICE — Rosary for Martin H. Alaniz, 76, of Alice, father of Lillian Wallis Smith of Midland, will be recited at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Mauro P. Garcia Funeral Home. Funeral Mass will be celebrated at 2 p.m. Thursday. Burial will follow at San Diego Cemetery in San Diego, Texas, under the direction of Mauro P. Garcia Funeral Home.

Alaniz died Tuesday in a Corpus Christi hospital.

He was a retired heavy equipment operator and a World War II veteran. His wife, Genoveva, preceded him in death on Sept. 21, 1990.

Other survivors include a brother, Manuel Hughes of Corpus Christi.

ANNEX: City to ask residents

and (the developed area) because it has the necessary improvements," said Becky Hamm, city planner.

The easternmost area would be left out until improvements are completed there.

By "protection," Ms. Hamm said she means the city can regulate future zoning in the undeveloped area. The developed area now has situations that violate city zoning ordinances, something planners hope can be avoided in the now undeveloped area.

District 3 Councilman Buddy Sipes said he would favor the undeveloped area, but opposes annexation of the developed area. The streets are largely paved to county standards, which do not match city standards.

"I don't think we ought to annex problems," Sipes said. "Right now we're looking at some other parts of the city that have the same paving problems or lack of paving. I just don't think we need to get into this again."

Called a "windowpane" because it is completely surrounded by the city limits, the area is the last of several residential sections left out in past annexations and has about 250 residents.

Two additional windowpane areas that are largely commercial are recommended for eventual annexation under the city's comprehensive plan.

Planners are preparing a letter to be mailed to residents of the area after council approval, within a few weeks.

creased the number of drunken driving convictions.

"They have also made our job so much easier. It's as different as night and day. It's like having a partner," Arrieta said. "The people can't lie when every move they make is on tape. There is simply nothing they can say."

The appreciation banquet, attended by about 60 people, kicks off MADD's annual Red Ribbon campaign, designed to heighten awareness of the danger of drinking and driving, especially during the holiday season. Red ribbons tied to car antennas and door handles serve as the group's reminder.

Boys & Girls Club sets holiday events

Staff Reports

The Boys & Girls Club of Midland has activities planned for December, including the school holidays.

The club — located at 110 E. New Jersey — will be closed Christmas Day and New Year's Day, but will be open other days during the Christmas break.

Registration for the club's 1992 Basketball League has begun and will continue through Dec. 20. The league is open to boys and girls 6-18. Participants will receive instruction and a T-shirt, and will participate in 10 games. Cost of joining the league is $3 per member. The fee also covers 1992 membership in the club.

During school Christmas holidays, the club will be open from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Activities will include cooking classes, field trips, sports, arts and crafts, games and weight training.

The club will also host a Christmas party on Dec. 24. Cake and beverages will be served. Children 6-12 will receive a Christmas present. For information on the party call 683-5297.

During the month of December the club is offering an early membership special. Any child age 6-18 may purchase their 1992 membership for $1. Beginning Jan. 1, 1992, memberships will cost $3.

For more information on club membership or activities, call 683-5297.

Couple to be honored

Former Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Jr. and his wife, Modesta, will be honored as Distinguished Citizens at a Boy Scout dinner tonight.

Keynote speaker for the event is former Gov. Bill Clements.

The Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts of America will honor the former Eagle Scout and his wife at the Petroleum Club, 501 Wall. The couple were nominated for their outstanding service to the Midland community.

Williams founded the Midland 200 Club, which provides community and financial support to law enforcement officers who are injured or disabled in the line of duty. He also serves on the board of directors for the Plaza Club and the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.

Ms. Williams has served on boards for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Trinity School and the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

A reception will begin at 6 p.m. Dinner and the presentation will follow at 7 p.m.

For ticket information call 570-7601.

Author to sign books

ODESSA — Waldenbooks is sponsoring an autograph party with author Molly Ivins from 6 to 7 p.m. today at Permian Mall.

In her book, "Molly Ivins Can't Say No," this political columnist writes about everything from national politics to the "Bubbas" of Texas, and from the war on drugs to country music. On President Bush she has written, "Calling George Bush shallow is like calling a dwarf short."

Ms. Ivins has been a journalist for more than 20 years. She has written for the Texas Observer and The New York Times and is a frequent contributor to the "MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour."

A resident of Austin, Ms. Ivins recently received the 1991 Carey McWilliams Award, given by the American Political Science Association.

The public is invited to attend the book signing.

TRIAL: 911 tape played as evidence

(From 1B)

said that he had gone to Red's Drive Inn and purchased a gun for $25 from a Hispanic man, testimony showed.

Later, at a friend's home across the street from the Smith's 1121 E. Cuthbert Ave. residence, Smith shot his wife when she answered a knock at the door, testimony about the statement revealed.

Mrs. Smith ran out the door and Smith continued to fire, testimony indicated.

"I loved my wife but I felt she was trying to set me up," Smith said, according to the statement. Smith also said that he did not mean to shoot her.

Mrs. Smith died from multiple gunshot wounds, testified Ralph Erdmann, the forensic pathologist from Lubbock who performed the autopsy.

She had been shot once in the side of the head, once in the mid-lower back and twice in the chest near the neck and shoulder, Erdmann said.

Police never recovered a gun.

After the prosecution rested its case, the defense called several witnesses who testified about Smith's paranoia and Mrs. Smith's use of crack cocaine.

Thomas Moore, 38, a friend of Smith's, testified that on the night of the shooting, the defendant asked to borrow a gun for protection. Moore said he let Smith use the gun to search his home but declined to let the defendant keep the firearm overnight.

Dee Palmer, 25, testified that she had witnessed Mrs. Smith smoke what appeared to be crack on the night of the shooting. Autopsy reports did not indicate any evidence of cocaine.

Another friend of Smith's, Raymond Green, 39, testified that he had known of Smith to use crack. Schorre suggested that Smith's paranoia may have been caused by the drug.

Testimony will resume today.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Store robbery

Staff Reports

Four people were arrested and charged with aggravated robbery and criminal conspiracy stemming from an early Tuesday morning robbery of a case of beer from a 7-Eleven store at 4401 W. Illinois.

Twenty-two-year-old Darrin Dwayne Clemons of 213 N. Eisenhower St., Alex Vedon Stephens, 19, of 3601 Andrews Highway #1407, Robert Fields Lynch, 20, of 4315 Neely Ave. #221 and 18-year-old Davenie Nichole Martinez were placed in the Midland County Jail after being stopped in a car driven by Lynch at 1:38 a.m., police reports said.

Bond was set at $5,000 for each charge by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. Additionally, Martinez was charged with escape after attempting to flee the arresting officer's vehicle while being transported to the jail. A $500 bond was set by Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer for the escape charge, jail officials said.

According to reports, an officer saw Clemons enter the store and leave with a case of beer. Police then received a call from the clerk reporting an aggravated robbery had occurred. The officer had already stopped the vehicle in which Clemons was riding. According to the clerk, Clemons had implied he was carrying a weapon, according to reports.

Drug charge

Two men remained in jail Tuesday following their arrest for allegedly selling approximately two kilograms of cocaine to undercover agents in Odessa.

Rolando Barboza, 37, of Midland, and Miguel Olivas-Gonzales, 26, of Odessa appeared before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes on charges of distribution of the drug and conspiracy to distribute the drug.

The two allegedly sold to an undercover agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration the drug for $46,000 at a residence in the 800 block of Clements Street.

A detention hearing has been scheduled for Friday morning.

LUBY'S: Cafeteria to reopen

community near Fort Hood. He said a smaller number of people expressed concerns about possible emotional problems that might be suffered if survivors or others affected by the tragedy re-enter the restaurant.

"What has struck us about these calls is that so many people have told us that, by reopening, we would actully be helping the healing process and help the community ... get back to normal," Erben told reporters.

Employees of the cafeteria have remained on the payroll since the shooting and most have said they will go back to work at the restaurant. Erben said the cafeteria had produced below-average profits before the shooting, and officials don't know how well it will do when it reopens.

"Again and again, we have heard that Luby's is just more than a dining place in Killeen. It has been a gathering place for meetings, for social occasions, for business people, citizens and families. This probably as much as anything persuaded us in helping us reach our decision," said Erben, whose company donated $100,000 to start a fund for the victims.

The Killeen community's reaction was very different from that of San Ysidro, Calif., where a gunman killed 22 people at a McDonald's in 1984. Within days of the shooting, McDonald's announced plans to reopen its restaurant. But opposition from residents was so great that McDonald's officials changed their minds and razed the building, then deeded the land to a junior college.

Lack, minister of the non-denominational Trinity Worship Center in Copperas Cove, said he would have viewed closing the Luby's as an act of surrender. He said he and his family will go to the cafeteria on the day it reopens as an act of defiance.

Flu spreads across state, health officials say

DALLAS (AP) — The flu bug is taking a big bite out of Texas and state health officials aren't sure if the worst is over.

"Last season was the season that wasn't. This season on the other hand made everybody sort of sit up and take notice," said Lynne Sehulster, an epidemiologist with Texas Department of Health in Austin.

As of Tuesday, 51,277 cases of influenza have been reported statewide, Sehulster said. She said this season puzzles experts because it started out mildly with a B-strain of influenza, and then exploded into the Beijing A-strain.

"By this point it's widespread here in Texas, all over," Sehulster said. "Some researchers say the initial peak has passed, but we're not sure."

Sehulster said Houston was hit hard in the beginning of November, with the flu spreading across the state from there. She said the flu strain then spread to Austin and Galveston, and has now reached Dallas and San Antonio.

"It's all over now, from Lubbock to Galveston," Sehulster said.

She said Central and North Texas businesses and schools will experience more absenteeism between now and Christmas because of the flu.

Charlton Methodist Hospital in Dallas is reporting 20 percent more flu patients at its family practice center, where doctors ran out of vaccine a week ago, said spokeswoman Cari Kaye.

Officials with the San Antonio Metropolitan Health District expect an outbreak there within three weeks, said district epidemiologist Hector Gonzalez.

The State

Most North Texas rural areas are free of the virus because early vaccine shots seem to have worked, state health officials said.

Dr. James Zoretic of the Texas Department of Health said he has received no reports of influenza in a 49-county region of rural north and west Texas.

"It's a lot more contagious in a closed areas, because it's spread by airborne particles containing the virus," Zoretic said. "We've had a lot of flu clinics for senior citizens and gave over 3,000 shots."

Dr. Charles Haley, chief epidemiologist for the Dallas County Health Department, said people who have not gotten flu shots by now probably should wait until next season, because the body takes two weeks to build up immunity and the virus has already spread.

"If they haven't been vaccinated it won't hurt, although it may not help a lot," Haley said.

However, Sehulster recommended vaccinations for high-risk groups, such as the elderly and the chronically ill.

"Because this season has taken all the experts by surprise, we're not sure what to expect after the first of the year. We may have a very short season or it may run well into the new year," Sehulster said.

Sehulster said there have been sporadic shortages of vaccine throughout Texas, and state officials have distributed all the vaccine they have.

Doctors recommend plenty of rest, fluids and non-prescription pain relievers to ease symptoms. Haley said it's important not to give aspirin to sick children, because it may cause Reye's Syndrome.

Sehulster said the elderly and chronically ill should see a doctor right away if they have flu symptoms.

Flu symptoms include a sudden onset of fever higher than 101 degrees, a sore throat, chills, cough or debilitating muscle aches. A flu outbreak occurs when more than 20 cases have been confirmed during the flu season, which generally runs from mid-December through January.

Richards: Trade pact may cause problems

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Gov. Ann Richards warned the Bush administration on Tuesday that Texas will seek government protection against traffic congestion, pollution and unemployment along its border if the United States enters a free-trade agreement with Mexico.

Richards met with U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills in Washington to call attention to potential problems for Texas stemming from open trade with its southern neighbor.

The governor stressed that she supports the proposed U.S.-Mexico trade agreement, but that she wants the federal government to invest in protecting Texas' border.

"This agreement would open the door to the largest trading opportunity, and that is to the South — Central America and South America," Richards told reporters after the meeting with Hills.

She said she enumerated for Hills the problems Texas may face under the agreement, including a need for job retraining programs, overburdened highways, bridges and customs facilities and increased air and water pollution.

A Baylor University study earlier this year concluded that the trade agreement would also strain water supplies, housing, schools, health care and social services along the 2,000-mile border with Mexico.

Congress will have to address those concerns ultimately. Richards said she wanted to make clear to the Bush administration that Texas will press Congress for help.

"I want to be sure Congress has an opportunity to address those questions prior to being asked to vote on the agreement itself," Richards said.

The governor said she believes the agreement eventually will spur industrial expansion in the state, rather than lead to an exodus of jobs as some fear.

"The thing that concerns me is the portrayal of the free-trade agreement causing states to lose jobs," she said. "What the reality is, the jobs are already relocating, and they are doing that without a free-trade agreement.

"It is very difficult for us, in these hard economic times, to think globally."

Meningitis kills teen

HOUSTON (AP) — Health officials on Tuesday were investigating the spread of bacterial meningitis through a Houston junior high school where one student died and two others remained hospitalized because of the illness.

A 13-year-old boy died late Monday after becoming ill over the Thanksgiving holiday.

"We thought he had a cold," his father said. "So she took him to the doctor's to be treated for a cold, but it turned out to be far worse."

The boy was a seventh-grader at Mattie B. Hambrick Junior High in the Aldine school district in northern Houston.

A classmate of the boy, another 13-year-old, was listed in stable condition Tuesday at Hermann Hospital, said Patty Riddlebarger, hospital spokeswoman.

Meanwhile, parents and students at the junior high expressed concern about the contagious illness.

"I'm not going in there," student Jesse Garza said outside the school Tuesday morning. "A lot of people are dying and I don't want to be next."

Counselors met throughout the day with parents and some students in the auditorium, school officials said. Health officials said it was unlikely many of the 1,300 students would be affected.

Officials also decided to provide free treatment to several hundred students who came into contact with the three meningitis victims, said Marco Milazzo, spokesman for the city's Department of Health and Human Services.

A clinic will be offered tonight at the school where students can receive an antibiotic in tablet form, Milazzo said.

Meningitis, which is not considered highly contagious, is characterized by a sudden high fever, headache, stiff neck, mental confusion and coma.

The meningococcal bacteria that causes this type of meningitis is found in the linings of the throat and mouth of about 15 percent of the population, said Mark Canfield, Harris County Health Department chief epidemiologist. But only a few people develop more serious disease.

The bacteria is spread most commonly by sneezing or coughing, or eating or drinking after someone who is infected. Canfield said the incubation period between infection and the first symptoms is between three and 10 days.

Sporadic cases are not unusual in the community, but clusters of cases are, experts said.

The two affected boys were in the same remedial special education classes. The girl was in a regular classroom and had no obvious connection with the boys, school officials said.

Aldine school district officials initially called parents and faculty members of those who shared classes with the stricken students and other students who had been absent from school after the holiday break, said district spokeswoman Judy Williams.

Tilton not planning to sue over 'PrimeTime Live' reports

N.Y. Times News Service

. Television evangelist Robert Tilton does not plan to sue ABC television because the network's criticisms won't financially damage the $80 million-a-year operation, says Tilton's attorney.

"Good lawsuits have to have monetary damages," J.C. Joyce of Tulsa said Monday. "I don't believe his ministry will be damaged. I predict it will be bigger and stronger four years from now."

The reports, which aired Nov. 21 and Nov. 27 on ABC's "PrimeTime Live" with Diane Sawyer as host, questioned direct-mail and other money-raising practices of Tilton's ministry, based in Farmers Branch, north of Dallas.

The broadcasts have prompted investigations by the Texas attorney general's office and the Dallas County district attorney. Joyce said that Tilton has offered to open church records to law enforcement organizations, but not to the news media or those who donate to the ministry.

Joyce and Tilton — appearing on Tilton's broadcast Sunday — lambasted the reports as "yellow journalism." They decried the practice of using hidden cameras and said the reports contained inaccuracies and misrepresentations.

"What right does anybody have to use a hidden camera in the house of the Lord?" Joyce said. "ABC is attempting to burn this church to the ground with lies and yellow journalism."

ABC officials connected with the "PrimeTime Live" broadcast could not be reached for comment.

During the broadcast, Tilton asked his followers to write and call the president of ABC, giving his address and phone number on the screen.

"We demand a public apology from ABC and Diane Sawyer," Tilton said.

ABC employees in New York said they had been warned that calls from Tilton's followers might flood the switchboards.

"We expected a monster day," a receptionist said. "It really hasn't been too bad."

Tilton's flamboyant ministerial style, in which he speaks in tongues and says frenzied prayers for healing, has attracted growing attention. He preaches a controversial "prosperity" theology, saying that those who donate will be rewarded financially and spiritually by God.

ABC's reports indicated that Tilton himself has profited considerably, showing what the network said were his expensive mansions in California and suburban Dallas and a house with yacht in Florida.

The network said many prayer requests Tilton says he prays over were found in a trash bin and that an orphanage in Haiti that Tilton says he supports could not be located.

Joyce said the prayer requests found in the trash of a Tulsa, Okla., bank must have been stolen, because mail sent to the ministry is not opened at the bank.

"I think ABC may have been led down a primrose path on that," Joyce said, adding that he thought someone out to wreck Tilton's ministry had planted the prayer requests in the bank's trash and alerted ABC reporters.

Also, Joyce presented cancelled checks which he said were monthly payments to an orphanage in Haiti. He also showed a certified statement he said proves holy water sent out to Tilton's followers came from the Jordan River. ABC's Nov. 21 broadcast said that similar items sometimes come from Taiwan.

San Antonio school free of guns, drugs Gramm says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and U.S. Attorney Ron Ederer embarked on a publicity campaign Tuesday proclaiming Texas schools gun-free zones under a new federal law.

"Something is wrong in America when people are worried about going to school because of the presence of firearms and the presence of violence," said Gramm, a Republican from Texas.

Gramm and Ederer went to Robert E. Lee High School to tell students, parents and educators about a federal law providing for up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for possessing or discharging a gun at or within 1,000 feet of a school.

The law was enacted in 1990 and took effect this year. It is similar to a federal law that was already in place banning drug possession or distribution on school campuses. The law also allows for certifying juveniles to stand trial as adults.

Gramm and Ederer unveiled a sign in front of the high school declaring the premises gun-free and drug-free. The sign depicts a handgun and a syringe with a slash through them.

"The objective of this sign is to put people on notice," Gramm said, adding that similar postings have been made at schools in Houston and East Texas.

Gramm said the signs will help prove violators knew or should have known guns are banned on campus. He said his goal is to have such postings at every school and school athletic facility in Texas by the end of 1992.

"What I'm hoping, obviously, is that kids recognize that they ought to leave their guns at home in the closet where they belong and not bring them to school," the senator said.

Judge takes baby from mother who uses cocaine

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state district judge has removed an infant girl from a woman who admitted using cocaine on her way to the hospital to give birth to the girl.

Judge Tom Rickhoff took the action Monday during a child welfare hearing. The 39-year-old mother did not show up for the hearing and has not visited her month-old baby at the hospital where it is being treated, officials said.

"Using cocaine and heroin the night before you deliver causes brain hemorrhages," Rickhoff said. "She did cocaine on the way to the hospital."

The baby is being treated in the neonatal intensive care unit at Santa Rosa Children's Hospital for congenital syphilis, the result of being born to a mother with syphilis, said a letter from Dr. Alejandro B. Gonzalez. Traces of cocaine also were in the baby's blood at birth, Gonzalez said.

The mother admitted to social workers that she injected heroin and cocaine about five times a week during her pregnancy and received no prenatal care before giving birth, court records state. She also said she injected cocaine while she was being driven to the hospital.

Rickhoff gave custody of the baby to the Texas Department of Human Services for six months.

The mother, who also has a warrant out for her arrest on a prostitution charge, was ordered to take her other child, a 16-month-old son, to a doctor to be examined.

Bonds on block

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, shaken by Bobby Bonilla's $29 million contract with the New York Mets, apparently believe they can't re-sign Barry Bonds and will try to trade him immediately.

General manager Larry Doughty said Tuesday he will contact the general managers of California teams to see what interest they have in the 1990 National League MVP. Bonds, who is building a house in San Diego, has talked often of returning to the West Coast.

If Bonds were to play in Pittsburgh in 1992 and then sign elsewhere as a free agent, the Pirates would receive only a draft choice as compensation.

Doughty, apparently under orders to trim the payroll in 1992, hinted a Bonds deal could come even before next week's winter meetings in Miami.

UT begins search

AUSTIN (AP) — With the resignation of cracker-barrel coach David McWilliams, Texas began a search Tuesday for possibly a more high-tech football mentor — one who favors pro-style passing, would trim the deadwood and could recruit in the inner city and out of state.

The names of numerous well-known coaches popped up as soon as McWilliams, 49, announced Monday he was resigning following his third losing season in five years and had asked to be reassigned as associate athletic director.

Possible successors mentioned in Texas newspapers included Stanford coach Dennis Green; Dennis Erickson of Miami; Bobby Ross of Georgia Tech; Dick Sheridan of North Carolina State; Steve Spurrier of Florida; and Howard Schnellenberger of Louisville.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds declined to talk about possible candidates. Earlier, in reference to Green and Erickson, he told The Dallas Morning News: "I think they are more interested in the pros right now."

Oilers stall on road to division title

■ Turnovers keep Houston from clinching its first AFC Central Division championship for the second straight week.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers are getting a new feeling about their season. It's called embarrassment after failing two straight weeks to clinch their first AFC Central Division title.

Moon

The Oilers lost five fumbles on Monday night, two by Warren Moon on center snaps, as the Philadelphia Eagles bludgeoned the Oilers 13-6 in a defensive battle.

A week earlier, Moon threw a career-high five interceptions in a 26-14 loss to the disheveled Pittsburgh Steelers.

A victory in either game would have given the Oilers (9-4) their first division title. Their next chance comes in the Astrodome Sunday in a return match with the Steelers.

"I think we have had a little lull in our team, we relaxed a bit," Moon said. "We have to step up our game. This team has to realize we're one of the best teams in the league and teams are going to play us harder."

The Oilers haven't played like one of the best teams the past two weeks. They've lost three of their last five games and the two games they won in that stretch required large doses of luck.

"I get to the point where I feel like somebody beat me with a bat," offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride said.

The Oilers gained 24 yards rushing against Pittsburgh and gained only 21 yards on 11 tries against the Eagles.

"If you can't run the ball, the pass rushers just pin back their ears and come at you," Gilbride said. "We tried some screens early on but they picked it up. We're just not executing. You can't keep fumbling the ball."

The Oilers sprinted to a 9-2 record and were talking about challenging Buffalo for the homefield advantage throughout the playoffs that goes to the team with the best record.

Now they are just trying to avoid the fizzles of the past two seasons when they limped into — and right out of — the playoffs.

"All we've got to worry about is getting ready for Pittsburgh," coach Jack Pardee said. "I'm more concerned about the short-range than what's going to happen later."

Despite losing to the Eagles, Pardee said he sees the Oilers getting some of the problems worked out that has caused their slump.

"A lot of things that have to happen for us to win are falling back into place but we still have to correct the turnovers," Pardee said. "The special teams did their best yesterday and the defense is looking closer to its old self again."

Texas Tech's Rodney Blackshear in SWC action.

Blackshear takes weekly SWC honor

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech wide receiver Rodney Blackshear doesn't make a habit of disrupting his coaches' game plan simply to ask that a few extra throws come his way.

But Blackshear, the Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week, was coming home to Houston for the Red Raiders' season finale against the Cougars Saturday. Nearly 30 members of his family would be there.

"You always want to play well in front of the family," Blackshear said. "So I kind of asked coach (Spike Dykes) if we could try to get a pass or two my way."

Blackshear figured a few catches would show the home folks that he had overcome an early-season injury to his left knee and prove that he hadn't lost his touch since starring at Reagan High School.

Texas A&M linebacker Marcus Buckley was named AP's SWC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance in the Aggies' 31-14 victory over Texas on Thanksgiving night. He returned an interception 19 yards for a touchdown on Texas' first offensive play of the game.

Blackshear told his entourage not to be late to the game because "I am going to score on the first play we have the ball."

It wasn't quite Babe Ruth calling a home run, but on Tech's third offensive play, Blackshear plucked a 95-yard touchdown bomb from Robert Hall en route to a school-record performance.

Blackshear, a senior who led the Southwest Conference in receiving yards (973) last year, caught five passes for a school record 251 yards, including the touchdown grab for 95 yards and another for 80.

Tech defeated Houston 52-46 to finish 6-5 and tied for second in the SWC.

"Right before the half, I told the coaches I could get open on a streak or a post because the safety was leaving the middle," said Blackshear. "We called the play and it worked."

Lady 'Dawgs roll, 74-42

By Jimmy Patterson

Against Lubbock High Tuesday night, the Midland High Lady Bulldogs — as the old saying goes — shot lights out in the first half.

In the second half, they shot as if someone had turned the lights out in the gym.

Fortunately, one half was all the Lady Bulldogs needed, as MHS defeated the 1-6 Lady Westerners, 74-42.

After scoring 50 points in the first 16 minutes, MHS (5-2) looked as if it had a good chance to threaten the all-time Lady Bulldog scoring record of 85 set in 1986. But after failing to hit a field goal until five minutes had passed in the third quarter, it was apparent a more down-to-earth squad would finish the game.

"We played a little more aggressively than we have this year," MHS head coach Jim Raughton said. "That's all I want, for us to go out and play hard and make things happen.

"(In the second half), we lost a little concentration, lost a little intensity."

MHS in fact did have the game won with their first half point production, while defensively holding Lubbock to 42 for the game. The Lady Westerners scored in single digits in all but the first quarter.

Lubbock wins in tale of two stadiums

These are truly the best of times and the worst of times as far as West Texas athletics are concerned.

Anytime Midland Lee meets Odessa Permian on the football field it has to be the best of times. This may be high school football, but few games in this part of the country hold the charm, rivalry, distinction or pure athletic importance.

Williamson

Lee vs. Permian could possibly stand alone as Webster's definition of high school football in Texas.

But when these two teams meet in December, that means a state playoff quarterfinal game — a second meeting of the year with higher stakes and even greater glory to be earned. It also means a Saturday mass exodus from the Permian Basin to the Staked Plains of Lubbock and Jones Stadium.

This is the worst of times. You don't have to look around very hard to realize that this is the height of the Christmas shopping season. And it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that if you transport 20,000 Permian Basin residents out of the country during a Christmas shopping season that local merchants stand to lose some money — maybe a lot of money.

So the calls continually come in when Lee is scheduled to meet Permian in Lubbock, asking, "Why is the Lee-Permian playoff game always played in Lubbock?"

This is where the story becomes a tale of two stadiums — in this case Midland's Memorial Stadium vs. Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Ratliff Stadium has seating for approximately 20,000. Memorial Stadium seats in the 10,200 range. It's easy to see that Ratliff Stadium is large enough to take care of most of the demand. A game of this stature played in Memorial Stadium wouldn't come even close.

John Wilkins, Odessa athletic director, would love to host this game when it comes about, which has come up three times in the last nine years. If his arm was really twisted, he might even consider letting Lee be the home team.

What Wilkins won't agree to is playing in Memorial Stadium, so it is impossible to flip for a home-and-home site. Midland athletic director Jack Tayrien would also be glad to host the Permian-Lee game.

Who can blame Wilkins for his stance? He is between the proverbial rock and hard place. Wilkins has over 5,000 Permian season ticket holders alone to consider. He couldn't even guarantee his season ticket holders a seat and these fans are the life blood of high school football at any school. At the very least, season ticket holders must be guaranteed entry to any playoff game, or you would be cutting your own throat with a very sharp knife.

Under University Interscholastic League rules, which did not take into account the Christmas shopping season, but did take into account complete fairness for both teams in the playoffs, teams must agree to flip for a home-and-home playoff site or agree on a neutral playoff site.

For instance, Permian can't force Lee to come to Ratliff Stadium and Lee can't force Permian to come to Memorial Stadium without mutual consent.

How would you like to be told you had to spend Christmas Day in a home where all your toys were stolen on your last visit? Lee isn't in any mood to accept that offer either after losing to Permian 33-0 in Ratliff back in October.

In short, this game won't remain in the Permian Basin until Midland builds a new football stadium or enlarges Memorial Stadium. Until then, Permian Basin retailers can expect this mass exodus to take place anywhere from three to five times a decade. Millions of dollars will virtually be lost to the local economy.

Associated Press

SWC

MADISON, Wis. — A driving layup by Bobby Wilson with six seconds remaining in the game gave Southern Methodist a 66-64 victory over Wisconsin Tuesday night.

Wilson, a 6-foot-6 junior forward, banked in his game-winning shot from the middle of the lane. Wilson, who entered the game with an 8.3 scoring average, finished with a game-high 21 points.

Wisconsin (3-1) had a chance to win the game, but Brian Good's 3-point shot at the buzzer missed.

SMU (2-2) led by as many as seven points in the second half. A three-point play by Wilson gave the Mustangs a 59-52 lead with 5:30 to play.

But the Badgers crept back and tied the game at 64-64 on a 19-foot basket by Good with 1:20 left.

Wisconsin was led in scoring by Carlton McGee and Michael Finley with 13 points apiece. Good added 12 and Tracy Webster had 10 — 17 below his season average.

Troy Dorner and Gerald Lewis each scored 10 points for SMU.

Good came off the bench to spark the Badgers with 10 points in the first half as Wisconsin took a 37-34 lead. His 3-point basket with 1:20 left in the half put Wisconsin ahead, 35-32.

Good was four-for-four from the field in the first half, including two 3-pointers.

Wilson, the leading returning scorer in the Southwest Conference, had been struggling this season. He was shooting just 39.3 percent from the field in the Mustangs' first three games, but he hit nine of 14 shots Tuesday. The Mustangs shot 50 percent for the game.

Houston 72, Arkansas St. 54

HOUSTON — Craig Upchurch and Sam Mack led Houston with 17 points and 16 points respectively as the Cougars raced to an easy victory over Arkansas State.

Both teams started slowly and shot less than 50 percent from the field during the first half, which ended with Houston leading 22-18.

Charles Outlaw led the Cougars (3-1) in the first 20 minutes, scoring eight points and grabbing four rebounds. Outlaw finished with 14 points on the night.

The teams traded baskets early in the second half until the Cougars outscored the Indians 9-0, and took a 10-point lead at 40-30 with 12:35 minutes remaining. Upchurch and Mack scored all of the points for the Cougars in the decisive run.

Hall and Cook scored 14 and 12 points respectively for the Indians in the second half.

Peebles retires

Peebles was told by doctors in Houston and Cleveland that he would risk permanent paralysis if he continued playing contact sports. He lost all feeling and movement in his arms and legs for about 10 minutes after he was hit as a third-quarter pass from Bernie Kosar fell incomplete at the Astrodome.

Peebles' neck injury occurred the same day Detroit Lions offensive lineman Mike Utley was left paralyzed from the chest down after fracturing a vertebra in a game against the Los Angeles Rams.

"All my prayers are out to him, because for a brief moment in time, I know what he's going through,' Peebles said.

Peebles said his own spinal column narrows in some places, a fairly common condition that can be dangerous for a football player. The condition was discovered during examinations after he was hurt.

"Of course, I want to go out there and play," he said. "Right now, other than some tingling in my hands, I feel just as healthy as I felt three or four weeks ago.

"But going through what I went through — it was the scariest moment I faced in my 25 years. To be paralyzed from the neck down, granted it wasn't for too long, but it's something you can't imagine. It was almost like I was outside of my body looking in, because I could see my hands and I could see my body, but it just didn't feel like it was mine. It had no feeling, no movement."

Peebles was able to move one foot within about 15 minutes after the injury occurred, and feeling gradually returned to the rest of his body after he was carefully taken to the locker room on a cart.

Nuggets snap 25-game road losing streak in Houston

Associated Press

NBA

HOUSTON — Chris Jackson scored 16 of his 22 points in the pivotal fourth quarter as the Denver Nuggets snapped a 25-game road losing streak with a 110-100 victory over the Houston Rockets on Tuesday night.

The Nuggets, whose last road victory was 126-122 at Milwaukee last Jan. 29, also handed the Rockets their first loss at home in eight games this season. Denver is now 1-5 on the road and 8-8 overall after going 20-62 in 1990-91.

Houston, playing without centers Hakeem Olajuwon and Larry Smith because of illness and injury, was led by Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell with 20 points each. Otis Thorpe had 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Hawks 103, Mavericks 99

DALLAS — Kevin Willis continued his dominating rebounding with a career-high 31, and he also scored 29 points as Atlanta beat Dallas.

Willis, now leading the NBA with a 17.5 rebounds per game, broke the Reunion Arena mark of 27 set by Dallas' James Donaldson on Dec. 29, 1989 against Portland.

Willis, with the highest single-game rebound total since the end of the 1987-88 season when Charles Oakley and Michael Cage both had more than 30, now has 20 or more rebounds in seven of his last nine game.

Bucks 126, Lakers 94

MILWAUKEE — Jeff Grayer scored 21 points and the Milwaukee Bucks opened a 20-point lead in the first half before beating the road-weary Los Angeles Lakers.

The Lakers, playing their fifth game in eight days on a seven-stop trip, got 24 points from A.C. Green and 20 from James Worthy. The loss, only their second in 12 games, was the most lopsided this season for Los Angeles.

Moses Malone hit a 3-pointer from just inside the halfcourt line at the end of the first quarter, and Dale Ellis scored six points during an 18-6 run that gave Milwaukee a 39-25 lead ith 9:08 left in the second quarter.

The Bucks had another spurt of 8-0 near the end of the half and went up by 20 before settling for a 62-46 halftime advantage.

Trail Blazers 124, Heat 94

Portland shot 55 percent, well above its season average of 45 percent, to beat Miami handily.

The Trail Blazers hit 13 of 17 shots during an 11-minute stretch midway through the game when they outscored Miami 34-12 to take a 75-54 lead.

Nets 88, 76ers 86

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — How bad are the Philadelphia 76ers without Charles Barkley? Even the New Jersey Nets are beating them.

The 76ers lost their seventh straight game, matching their longest losing streak since the 1974-75 season, when they dropped a decison to the Nets.

Suns 101, Timberwolves 95

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Johnson scored 11 of his 30 points in the fourth quarter as Phoenix rallied for a victory over Minnesota, keeping the Timberwolves winless in nine games against the Suns.

The victory snapped a six-game road losing streak for the Suns, who got 16 points and 14 rebounds from Tim Perry and climbed back to .500 at 9-9 after a 3-8 start.

Pacers 108, Pistons 99

Joe Dumars scored 33 points for the Pistons and Mark Aquirre had 21 for Detroit, which is 5-5 at home after going 32-9 at the Palace last season.

OILERS: Steelers visit Astrodome on Sunday

(From 1C)

Receivers Ernest Givins suffered a broken nose and Drew Hill got a concussion during the game.

Givins underwent surgery to correct the fracture Tuesday but is expected to play in Sunday's game against Pittsburgh in the Astrodome.

"Playing a team like Philadelphia, that's the reason they are ranked No. 1 (total defense), they've been doing that all year long," Pardee said.

"This is the time of year we're supposed to be getting better, not worse," defensive end Sean Jones said. "We picked the wrong time to go into a slump."

The Oilers beat Pittsburgh in the final game of the season to earn a wild card playoff berth last season and then lost to Cincinnati 41-14 in the first round of the playoffs.

In 1989, the Oilers missed a chance to win a division title by losing their final two regular season games and then Pittsburgh beat them in the wild-card playoff game in overtime.

"I think everyone relaxed when they realized we had to win only one game to get the division," Moon said. "We've got to find a way to get that intensity again."

Rangerettes drop Brownfield

Staff Report

GREENWOOD — Greenwood's girls basketball team prepared for this week's Big Lake tournament with a 57-50 victory over Brownfield here Tuesday night at the Greenwood gymnasium.

Tricia Ross led the Rangerettes in scoring with 15 points, while Brownfield was paced by Cristal Cox and Sara Nocholson, who both scored seven points. Also in double figures for Greenwood was Carrie Myers with 11 points.

In boys play, Greenwood gained its first vitory of the season in a 58-43 win over Coahoma. Ray Seales was the Rangers' leading scorer with 27 points, while Eric Clutter had 18.

MHS: Chancellor scores 13

(From 1C)

D.D. Tipps said. "We're 'trying to stress rebounding so we can get us some more shots."

Three Lady Bulldogs finished in double figures. Sophomore guard Julie Chancellor led with 13 points — seven of which came in the fourth quarter; Sally Gibson finished with 12, while Ashley Chase had 11.

"I think we can press the basketball, and attack at the offensive end," Raughton said of his girls' effort at both ends. "We stretched our defense a little bit tonight, and we did a little bit better job on the glass.

"We have a good offensive team. We have good shooters. And when they put it together, we're going to score some points."

Carla Linton's 27 points led the MHS junior varsity to 67-40 pounding of the Lubbock JV. Karie Cornelius and Kim Meldrum finished with nine apiece for the Lady Bulldogs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Success is assured once you come out of your shell! New career opportunities arise early in 1992. Take more initiative at work. The social pace will accelerate in the spring. A class reunion could lead to happy romance. Couples think about enlarging their families. Recent retirees are kept busy by community or charity activities. Donate your time and energy to a project that seems truly inspired. Set a good example for a young person.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A domestic squabble could upset you, but it also teaches you an important lesson. People at a distance may be a source of financial backing or moral support. Dress up tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Search for facts and figures. Even a small shred of information can point out a solution to partnership problems. Long-distance phone calls and fax messages are worth the cost. Romance sizzles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Remain calm and observant today. Although you are raring to go, it may be smarter to take things at a snail's pace. See how the land lies before making significant moves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will have good luck in reaching an agreement now. It could be exactly what you have desired for a long time or the start of something big. Romantic relationships grow stronger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are able to touch people's hearts in a direct and positive way. Make more public appearances; they can turn out lucky for you. At home this evening, everything feels right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Harsh words may be spoken in haste or anger. An apology is the only way to patch things up. Put on a happy face and spread some sunshine. Mate follows your lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone from a faraway place helps you along the road to success. The tiny seed of an idea could grow into a plan for great progress. Recognize your own weaknesses and strengths.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Alliances that have not been going well should be soft-pedaled today. Other relationships are moving along beautifully and hold great promise. Put your best foot forward at any social gatherings.

SAGTTTARTUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Decide what issues are most important, then settle them. A secret financial transaction or talk benefits you or someone in your immediate family. Address your holiday cards.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have a brilliant idea for solving long-standing problems; put your thoughts into action. Loving words will rekindle romance. Marriage enjoys favorable influences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Postpone making any major statements and decisions. There is a danger of your being a little too bullish. Less publicity and more time alone proves productive. Give a pet more pats.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good luck and romance move into full swing today. Go ahead and take a chance at a social event. Your presence and words will attract the attention of an admiring stranger.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are personable, carefree and benevolent. Count on these independent Sagittarians to be non-conformists, with a total disregard for conventional behavior. They think and act big, and tend to exaggerate. Although their teachers may have difficulty getting these youngsters to pay attention in class, these students will absorb a lot more knowledge than anyone realizes. Driven to distraction by routine work, these Sagittarians will be happiest if self-employed.

When an average player produces a card, you can usually take it at its face value. When an expert does so, all you have learned is that the card was among the 13 dealt that player, and any inference about its meaning is drawn at your peril. To illustrate what we mean, consider this hand from a team match.

Both teams reached three no trump by South on identical auctions. Each North checked for a possible 4-4 major fit before settling in the no-trump game. At both tables the lead was the queen of clubs, won in dummy. Declarer came to hand with the king of diamonds and led a spade to the king. At the first table, East took the ace and returned a club, forcing out the ace after declarer held up for one round while discarding two hearts from the board.

Declarer then led a spade to the nine. East won, but had no way to get to partner. When the spades broke evenly, declarer had nine tricks—two spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs.

Sitting East at the other table was former world champion Mike Passell. Not only did he refuse to win the first spade trick, but he dropped the jack under the king! Declarer, sure that West had the ace and East perhaps the ten, returned to hand and tried another spade, going up with the queen. East took the ace and returned a club to force out the ace, but now West had an entry with the ten of spades!

When diamonds did not break, declarer only had eight tricks, and there was no way to collect a ninth, since West could not be kept off lead. Declarer was left to applaud what was arguably the best defensive play of the year.

STAMFORD, Conn. — Sara Lee is known for sweets, but she wants her name to produce rice, pasta and soup for the needy this holiday season.

In a public service announcement for Connecticut radio stations, the bakery queen asks listeners to donate to food banks.

"I just felt this was some way I could help," she said Monday.

Sara Lee's father, Charles Lubin, founded the Sara Lee Bakery Co. in 1949. She is known to millions of television viewers through her commercials for the company and lives in Greenwich.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — If anybody wants to dispute that Universal Gym Equipment makes machines fit for a king, they should talk to Taufa'ahau Tupou IV.

Tupou

He intends to buy exercise equipment for himself and government agencies in the South Pacific island kingdom east of Australia and northeast of New Zealand.

Tupou, who weighs about 300 pounds, said he's on a health kick, but he didn't check out the equipment at the plant.

"I cannot try the machines because I have on very warm underwear," he said.

Pilatus

Joel Parker said the hospitalized Pilatus was thankful he was rescued Saturday by sheriff's deputies who found him straddling a ninth-floor balcony railing at a hotel.

"Pilatus apparently misapplied the dosage of his prescription drug, an anti-depressant Doxepin HCL, which he was using for the first time, combining it with alcohol which caused his irrational behavior," Parker said in a statement Monday.

Reports that Pilatus, 27, had slashed a wrist were wrong, Parker said.

Pilatus was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for 72 hours of observation.

"Pilatus will receive psychological counseling for his recent bouts with depression, stemming from his difficult childhood in West Germany and the stress from the meteoric rise and fall of Milli Vanilli," Parker said.

ATHENS, Greece — Mikis Theodorakis, a Cabinet minister and composer who wrote the score for "Zorba the Greek," sued a newspaper Tuesday after it reported he received $1 million for government-funded concerts.

The newspaper Nike suggested he pocketed the money. Theodorakis and the government say it was used to pay expenses.

Actress-turned-politician Melina Mercouri accused Theodorakis last weekend of taking state money. Theodorakis, 66, warned Monday he would sue anyone making the claim. Mercouri has parliamentary immunity.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Actor Corey Feldman, who completed a substance abuse program four months ago, urged youngsters to stay clean.

"If anyone has a second thought or a doubt about doing drugs and driving, please don't," he said Monday.

Feldman, 20, appeared at a menorah kindling ceremony for Hanukkah at the Beverly Center.

"Anything I do these days is an opportunity to pass a message to young people. My message to users and drinkers is: You can stop. God gave me another chance," he said.

He was arrested March 9, 1990, when officers stopping his car for a traffic violation allegedly found balloons containing heroin and cocaine.

On Sept. 20 that year, he was arrested again in connection with unpaid traffic tickets. Officers allegedly found a small amount of heroin on him during a search and he was ordered to undergo drug rehabilitation.

"I feel better than I ever felt," Feldman said.

Feldman appeared in the movies "Stand by Me," "The Lost Boys" and "Gremlins."

Prices plunge

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices fell sharply Tuesday on expectations that already abundant heating oil inventories would continue to grow.

The January contract for home heatinge oil skidded 2.04 cents to 59.47 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The move sent posted prices even lower, with such local crude purchasers as Scurlock Permian and Texaco Trading and Transportation lowering their prices 50 cents to $19.25.

Crude oil futures declined along with heating oil and gasoline, as higher levels of refined products means less crude needs to be processed to extract those fuels.

The January contract for West Texas Intermediate lost 57 cents and settled at $20.51 a 42-gallon barrel. When the contract fell below $21, more sellers entered the market and carried it even lower, analysts said.

Supply figures, announced by the American Petroleum Institute, showed inventory gains. Heating oil stocks increased by 1.43 million barrels to nearly 140.1 million barrels in the week ended Friday.

Gasoline also rose, by 3.8 million barrels to 206.5 million barrels, while crude oil inventories were down 5.4 million barrels to 341.4 million.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar settled mixed on world currency markets Tuesday in slow trading.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7715 from $1.7760 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates included: 1.6080 German marks, down from 1.6150; 1.4230 Swiss francs, down from 1.4285; 5.4980 French francs, down from 5.5170; 1,213.80 Italian lire, down from 1,218.00, and 1.1342 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1336.

New Visas

NEW YORK (AP) — Competition in the credit card business escalated after Visa USA announced plans to scrap a 13-month ban that prevented non-banking companies from issuing its plastic cards.

In doing so, the San Francisco-based Visa resumes a service offered by MasterCard International, which gained market share because it has been more willing to allow non-banking companies to join its system.

Economy still teeters on recession

Bush offers no initiatives but declares 'more needs to be done'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's chief measure of future economic health edged up an anemic 0.1 percent in October, reflecting virtually no escape from the precipice of hard times.

"It tells me that whatever recovery we had is gone," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa. "The economy is in imminent danger of slipping back into recession."

In Bradenton, Fla., President Bush said he understands the plight of Americans who have lost jobs and income power and declared "we can't sit back and hope for the best."

Bush offered no initiatives for stimulating growth, but acknowledged to workers at a Tropicana juice plant that "much more needs to be done."

The pallid increase in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a 0.1 percent decline in September. The index, designed to forecast the economy six to nine months in advance, was unchanged in August.

The Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development also released on Tuesday a report showing a 2.2 percent increase in new home sales in October, the seventh gain since the housing recession hit bottom last January.

Still, sales were mixed, advancing in the Midwest and South while falling in the Northeast and West. Overall, sales were 7.9 percent below October 1990.

Joel Prakken, an economist with Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting company, said the leading indicators index and other economic barometers showed the economy ended the third quarter with "no upward momentum ... and is still very, very flat."

Presidential economic adviser Michael Boskin noted "the recovery has turned quite a bit more sluggish" and said, "I wouldn't for a moment suggest the economy doesn't continue to have a serious problem."

The president, under fire from Democrats for not acting more decisively to rekindle growth, told his Florida audience that "On fiscal and monetary policy we have some good fundamentals in place. Interest rates, fortunately are down, and I am going to work hard to try to keep them down."

"We all know that too many people are having a tough time right now and I am hearing about it in conversations with working people, and I am reading hardship — hardship stories and letters people write."

The leading index, by posting its first gain in three months, did suggest some chance the economy can skirt a new recession. Three consecutive declines are considered by many a fairly strong sign of an approaching downturn.

But Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said the "minuscule increase ... is not statistically significant and points to a stagnant economy rather than one in recovery."

The index also is not infallible, having failed to predict the last recession. It did not start turning down until August 1990 — the month after the recession began.

Economists dubious about tax-cut plans

- Debate is likely to dominate Capitol Hill's '92 agenda.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rival Democratic and Republican tax-cut plans may give politicians something to talk about with recession-weary voters, but none of the proposals will do much to revive the staggering economy, economists say.

Three weeks of hearing on the proposals begin Thursday, but analysts say that whatever emerges will not be felt before summer.

"It's really going to be June before anyone gets money in their pockets," said Roger Brinner, executive director of DRI/McGraw Hill, an economic forecasting company in Lexington, Mass. "This economy better be better by June."

By then, economists say, the recession that began in the summer of 1990 will have been long and painful and could well be ending on its own.

"The public wants something done about the recession, and politicians want to show the people they're doing something," political economist Robert B. Reich of Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government said Monday.

To generalize:

- Democrats would ease taxes on the middle class and the poor, shifting the burden to the well-to-do. President Bush, the Democrats say, wants only to slash taxes for the rich.
- Republicans would reduce the capital gains tax, raise tax breaks for business and extend other benefits to people and companies that invest and save their money. These moves, the Republicans say, would stimulate the economy.

But economists say that neither side is advancing plans that would do much to significantly prod the country's huge — $5 trillion — but moribund economy.

They say the key is getting more money into consumers' hands so they can spend it — and fast.

Most of the plans would shower taxpayers with relief in the range of $10 billion to $20 billion a year.

Attorneys: Ruling to have little impact on MCorp

DALLAS (AP) — The Supreme Court's ruling against MCorp Tuesday in a dispute with the Federal Reserve Board will have little effect on the company or its nearly-finished Chapter 11 restructuring, attorneys said.

"It's an issue of minimal consequence at this stage of the game," said Alan B. Miller, the New York attorney who argued MCorp's case before the high court in October.

MCorp, once Texas' second-largest bank holding company, had challenged the Federal Reserve Board's ability to require it to maintain adequate capital for its subsidiary banks.

After regulators closed 20 of MCorp's banks three years ago, in a $2.7 billion bailout that is the nation's second-largest, the Fed charged MCorp with failing to act as a "source of strength" to its five remaining banks.

MCorp contended Congress never authorized the Fed to create the rule it had been accused of breaking.

Lower courts agreed with the company. But the Supreme Court reversed them because it said MCorp turned to the courts before exhausting an appeals process within the Fed.

The Fed could now push the company to bolster its one remaining bank in New Braunfels. But the bank is small and, even under the most liberal equity requirements, that would only cost the company a few hundred thousand dollars.

"I would hope the government could find something better to do than deal with this chestnut," Miller said.

"Procedurally, it's a disappointment," said David Luther, an MCorp attorney in Dallas. "Substantively, MCorp doesn't see much of an effect other than the negative publicity of MCorp not winning one this time around."

The Fed does not have any claims against MCorp in the company's Chapter 11 proceeding so the Supreme Court's decision will not affect the case, the attorneys said.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Letitia Clark will preside over another hearing in the confirmation process Thursday in Houston. Final arguments on the Chapter 11 case are scheduled Dec. 18.

MCorp is seeking $1 billion in damages from another bank regulator in a case related to the 1988 bailout. A judge in Dallas ruled the FDIC illegally took over 12 of the 20 MCorp banks. He faulted the agency for refusing to repay money from a failed MCorp bank that had been lent to it by a healthy MCorp bank.

Gift basket store to open in Mission Square

By Mella McEwen

McEwen

Opening its doors this week is GIFT BASKETS UNIQUE, owned and operated by Debbie Funderburg.

She says she offers gift baskets for all occasions — weddings, bridal showers, baby showers, hospital patients. She also has special gift baskets such as a "Golf Lover's" basket, and will stock fancy chocolates.

Her plans are to separate the store into different sections — A children's and babies' section, men's section, a section with Tex-Mex seasonings and cookware, a food area complete with chips, dips and cheese; and an area to the chilren to play in while the parents shop. She promises a different theme each month in her store.

Settled into its new location in Courtyard shopping center across from Midland Park Mall is SKINNY DIP, now found in the former Bless Your Heart location.

Manager Mike Seay stresses that "We're not just an ice cream store. We have a low-calorie, low-cholestorol and relatively sugar-free diet started under the Weight Watcher auspices." Menu items range from lasagna to cheese enchiladas, soups and sandwiches. He offers a daily special of a dinner, four-ounce "Skinny Dip" and drink, all under 300 calories.

He plans to expand the menu, adding new salads such as Caesar and seafood salads, and increasing portions in an effort to attract more men, not just those who watch what they eat. Still, he said, the menu will remain low calorie and low fat.

He says he also hopes to add a tea and coffee bar offering varieties of coffees and teas — both decaffeinated and regular — so people could come in and have some tea or coffee and a muffin in the afternoon between lunch and dinner.

Opening in the next week in Midkiff Business Center, Space 118, is THE DENT SHOP.

Owner Tom Hedke says he can repair hail damage and door dings with no painting involved. "It's the craft of working the metal back in place," he said.

While prices depend on the amount of work that needs to be done, he said prices run from a minimum of about $45 to much higher.

Hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The MIDLAND HILTON is accepting applications for its "Home for the Holidays" Christmas program, offering 25 complimentary rooms to families visiting Midland residents over the Christmas holidays.

Rooms will be awarded in such categories as the largest number of relatives visiting; the families separated longest; and grandparent-grandchild reunions. Applications are available at the Hilton and are due Dec. 15.

With Christmas shopping underway, many shoppers and travelers will make heavy use of automated teller machines.

Plus System Inc., an international network of ATMs, offers these safety tips for using the cash machines.

Treat the ATM card like cash or credit cards — protect it and report it immediately if it's lost or stolen; memorize your personal identification number and don't write it on the card or place in your wallet, check the area before using an ATM; minimuze the time you spend at an ATM; stand between the ATM and those waiting behind you; put the cash in your purse or wallet immediately, don't count or expose it; and don't forget to take your receipt.

El Paso orchestra conductor remembers humble beginning

By Robert Nelson
Associated Press writer

EL PASO — Deep into the weekend nights of 1931, live band music filled the home of Abraham Chavez and the dreams of his sleeping 4-year-old son, Abe Jr.

The next day, like a boy on Christmas morning, Abe Jr. would rummage through those instruments — blowing in a horn, twinking at a string, pounding on the tortured eardrums of his parents.

Sitting in his El Paso office 60 years later, Abe Jr. credits those mornings for his distinguished career as a violinist and for his 28 years conducting El Paso's orchestra.

When he leaves that job at the end of the season next year, it will end an era in which the orchestra was transformed from a group of little merit to a nationally respected symphony.

"From just about every angle, he's been at the heart of this symphony," Symphony Association chairman Kerry Ellison said. "He's absolutely second to none."

And yes, he stopped torturing eardrums.

At age 5, Chavez and his family moved from Juarez to El Paso. At age 7, he gave his first performance — on a small stage in a tiny Episcopal school on Piedras street.

At age 10, he was sitting with nine other children on lard cans in a dimly lit shack in the San Juan area of East-Central El Paso. There he learned to read music and to move his hand up and then down, right and then left, to the four-count beat of the music.

Today, Chavez still flaps that hand to the beat as he gives violin lessons in his office. Everyone sits on chairs, and when he's not conducting or listening to his students, he shows the correct fingering with his Stradivarius violin.

But Chavez is no snob about his instruments or his music. He remembers the carpenter-made violin he learned on, and he empathizes with his students.

Making silly TV satisfies 'Get a Life' star Chris Elliott

By Scott Williams
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Chris Elliott, in jeans and flannel shirt, relaxing in the overstated opulence of a Plaza Hotel suite, looks as incongruous as a gila monster on a wedding cake.

This, after all, is the Fugitive Guy. The Regulator Guy. The Guy Under the Steps. The obnoxious celebrity of "Late Night with David Letterman."

"Weren't they all kind of the same guy though? Or is that what you're saying?" Elliott asked an interviewer. "The Guy Under the Seats was probably the closest to a character. The rest of them were just me trying to get on television."

These days, he's the star of "Get a Life," his own skewed sitcom Saturday nights on Fox Broadcasting Co. It is relentlessly, unstintingly silly.

"I think it embarrasses a lot of people that they laugh at it," said Elliott, whose series character, Chris, is a 31-year-old paper boy, a blithe, not-very-bright narcissist who refuses to grow up.

"The idea was to do a show with a character that on another show would be the goofy next-door neighbor, the weird guy that comes over, bugs them, says his stuff and then leaves.

"The concept was kind of, 'What happens to that guy when he leaves?' And, ah, I'm that guy."

The irony of flogging his series' second season isn't lost on him.

"In the early days of 'Late Night,' I used to come on with these bogus shows that I'd be in," he said. He'd show the "clip" of some hot, steamy NBC show with his face superimposed on it.

This season, a major change has taken place on "Get a Life." Sort of.

Chris has moved out of his room over the garage of his long-suffering parents (played by his real-life dad Bob Elliott and Elinor Donohue) and has moved into a garage. Brian Doyle-Murray plays his irascible landlord.

"Instead of living over a garage, I've moved INTO a garage," he said.

Rumor has it that Chris gets a girlfriend this season. True or false?

"That's a plot line that we have yet to develop — that we want to develop," he said.

Elliott misses his hometown, New York City. He dislikes having to rent a house and furniture for himself, his wife, Paula, their young daughters, Abbie and Bridie, and their cat Alfie, who might just be allergic to people.

He's perfectly happy, though, making silly television.

"Sitcoms take themselves way too seriously," he said. "It's fun to do something different ... to get something that doesn't really pull the strings the way other sitcoms tend to manipulate people into thinking that it's quality.

"We're not saying our show is quality at all, and I think that's what people respect."

Saturday morning cartoons get respect

By Michael Hill
Associated Press writer

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Mickey Mouse and Pluto are mounted and framed with a price tag of $13,500. Elmer Fudd sings "... Kill Da Wabbit!" on Broadway to the strains of Wagner — it's only a matter of time before academics proclaim Bugs Bunny an existentialist.

Call it Cartoon Culture.

Animated films regarded as soft entertainment when produced decades ago are extolled more and more for their aesthetic quality. Somehow, Goofy and Porky Pig have become highfalutin cultural icons.

"That's ridiculous, but it's a pleasant kind of ridiculous," said Chuck Jones, who as a young cartoonist helped create Porky, Bugs, Road Runner and other Merrie Melodies characters. "If someone wants to call my work art, that's OK with me, but I never thought it was merited."

Jones, 79, has lived to see his creations go from being shown before movie features, to Saturday morning television and now onto gallery walls and even the Great White Way.

The Looney Tune gang, accompanied by a full orchestra, has been mincing in front of audiences across the nation in cities like Saratoga Springs. The show, called "Bugs Bunny on Broadway," is a Warner Bros. homage to the sometimes stately, usually loopy, music accompanying the old Merrie Melodies shorts.

Featured are classic music-oriented cartoons like Bugs and Elmer getting married in "The Rabbit of Seville," a clever subversion of Gioacchino's opera "The Barber of Seville."

Children can 'make' cookies

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

It's that time again — now that Thanksgiving is over, it's officially the Christmas Season (as opposed to the unofficial Christmas season which begins sometime in mid-August and leads to severe cases of the "bah-humbugs" by Halloween).

Christmas is the season that children dream of all year long — forget about sugar plums; today's kids have visions of Nintendo, Barbie, rollerblades and bicycles dancing in their heads! But Christmas also is the time when children tend to get in the way more, just because of the constant excitement and expectation.

This year they can help out at Christmas, have fun and be kept safely out of the way for a little while — all at the same time.

Nabisco has introduced Made 'em Myself ready-to-decorate cookies this season, which are designed to appeal to children (especially those who might be feeling a little left out of all the Christmas preparations). These packaged, already-made vanilla cookies come with two tubes of icing (one red and one green, of course) so that little fingers can decorate the cookies any way they please. The cookies have outlines of Christmas images already on them (Santa Claus, reindeer, bells, stars, etc.), but the more adventureous can ignore the outlines and make their own pictures from the icing.

Since these cookies were designed to appeal to children, of course they appealed to mine. We bought a bag to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy, and my kids couldn't wait to get started.

Price for a 13½-ounce bag of cookies and icing tubes was $2.89, and each bag is supposed to contain about 40 ready-to-decorate cookies.

Advertising on the back of the package claims the cookies are "delicious cookies outlined with fun holiday designs. All you have to do is follow the designs with the red and green icing tubes included in the package! Your family will love adding their own personal touch to each delicious cookie!" My youngest taste-tester did more than that — she turned the cookies over and created her own designs on the blank undersides.

The cookies themselves are just plain vanilla cookies (seemed to have a touch of lemon flavor in them) and, according to nutrition label information, contain 45 calories and 2 grams of fat each. They are store-bought cookies, and as such, taste pretty good. Not great, mind you, and certainly not anywhere near as good as homemade cookies, but still, they taste pretty good.

My children loved them. They really had fun decorating each cookie differently than any other cookie. They made sure no two cookies looked alike. They really did get creative with the cookies, and they thoroughly enjoyed squirting the icing on their fingers and licking it off (it turns your mouth green or red). However, I'm not sure they actually ate any of the cookies — they were too proud of their handiwork to want it eaten.

Now they are hoping Nabisco will come out with Made 'em Myself cookies for all major holidays — Easter, Valentine's Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving, Halloween and maybe some for birthdays.

I thought that the price was a little steep for a bag of store-bought cookies, and then I figured how much fun the kids had for less than $3. So now, instead of thinking of them as expensive cookies, I think of them as cheap entertainment.

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Is there a can of cranberry sauce sitting on your shelf? Use the ruby-red sauce to make an easy ribbon of filling for these bar cookies. They're so simple, you won't even need a mixer.

CRANBERRY BARS

1½ cups all-purpose flour
1½ cups quick-cooking rolled oats
¾ cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¾ cup margarine or butter, melted
1 16-ounce can whole cranberry sauce
¼ cup finely chopped pecans or walnuts

In a large mixing bowl stir together the flour, oats, brown sugar, lemon peel and the baking soda. Stir in the margarine or butter; mix thoroughly. Reserve 1 cup of the flour-oat mixture for the topping. Pat the remaining oat mixture into an ungreased 12x7½x2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes.

Carefully spread cranberry sauce atop the baked crust. Stir nuts into reserved oat mixture; sprinkle atop cranberry sauce. Lightly pat oat mixture into sauce. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes more or until top is golden. Cool in the pan on a wire rack. Cut into bars. Makes 24 bars.

MAKE-AHEAD DIRECTIONS: Transfer bars to a freezer container with waxed paper between layers; seal, label and freeze for up to 12 months. To serve, thaw for 10 to 15 minutes at room temperature.

Creamy pudding is low in fat too

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Good news — even on a low-fat diet, you can still eat those comforting custardy puddings that leave you feeling warm and satisfied. With evaporated skim milk, you get the richness of cream minus the fat. Try it in this honey-flavored pudding.

HONEY AND NUT PASTA PUDDING

6 ounces (1 cup) uncooked orzo (also called rosamarina pasta), or 2½ cups cooked small pasta
2 eggs
1 12-ounce can evaporated skim milk
¾ cup honey
½ cup slivered almonds, toasted
¼ cup raisins

Cook orzo or pasta according to package directions. Drain. In a medium mixing bowl beat the eggs lightly. Stir in milk, honey, the ½ cup almonds, raisins and cooked pasta; mix well. Pour into a greased 1½-quart casserole. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree F oven about 20 minutes.

Stir the mixture to evenly distribute the raisins. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes more or until nearly set (the center will be soft set with the outside edge somewhat firmer). Cool slightly on a wire rack. Makes 8 servings.

Craving for variety boosts apple revival

By Karin Davies

FAVERSHAM, England (AP) — Joan Morgan sliced a wedge from a Cox's Orange Pippin, tasted with the flair of a connoisseur sampling a fine wine and rendered her verdict:

"Perfectly balanced with a subtle harmony of complex flavors on top. Nuts, pineapple, pears, spices — you can't quite put your finger on it."

Ms. Morgan, an apple historian and writer, was browsing among aromatic pyramids of 55 varieties at the Brogdale Horticultural Trust on a fall afternoon.

She and other admirers of the fruit had choices ranging from the snack-sized Katy to the Annie Elizabeth, a two-hander for cooking, in hues from bold crimson, emerald and orange to mottled yellow, gold and beige.

The apple is on the rise again in England. Boosters see it as a symbol of resistance to the uniformity enforced by supermarkets, directives of the European Community and ubiquitous American fast food.

Supermarkets have taken the message, offering up to 40 apple varieties this fall, but imports still account for 60 percent of the market.

The Agriculture Ministry has given up its search for a "perfect apple" to compete with the French Golden Delicious and "there is hope that we can get people interested in the diversity of English apples," ministry spokeswoman Sharon Atkinson said.

COMMON GROUND, which fights the spread of sameness in Britain, has adopted the apple as a talisman of variety. On Oct. 21, it sponsored Apple Day across the country, with apple picking and bobbing, picnics in orchards and cider tastings.

About two-thirds of Britain's orchards have been destroyed; Devon has lost 90 percent since 1965. By promoting apples, Common Ground hopes to protect Britain's heritage and culture, said Sue Clifford, who speaks for the group.

"After all, the apple and all the fruits that we have ramify right the way through our lives," she said, "so recipes, songs, the way in which people know about a place are all related to the sorts of crops that grow there.

"To grow and be able to buy the Devonshire Quarrenden in Devon, the Blenheim Orange in Woodstock and the Galloway in the Borders reinforces local culture."

On 150 acres in Kent, "the garden of England," the trust grows 2,300 varieties of apples, 550 kinds of pears, 350 types of plums and 220 of cherries, plus currants, gooseberries, nuts, medlars and quinces.

It is an international gene bank for fruits, one of three. The others are in the United States and France.

BRITISH APPLE varieties span time from Decio, which dates from 450 A.D. and grew in the gardens of Roman villas, to the recently developed Crispin, Jonagold, Gala, Elstar and Fiestas.

From Abbondanza to Zweigelts Zinsahaler, there are apples for eating, cooking, baking, cider, jellies and drying. Some are best eaten right off the tree, others after slow ripening in cellars.

Some names are melodious — Carlisle Codlin, D'Arcy Spice, Golden Spire, Shakespeare, Worcester Pearmain, Lass O'Gowrie, Lord Lambourne — but there also are the Blood Turk, Greasy Pippin, Hog's Snout and Topsy.

The Knobby Russet is hideous, brown and bumpy, with a woody taste, but remains in the gene bank nonetheless.

Brogdale maintains a register of 6,000 varieties that have been grown in Britain. Just 100 are now grown commercially, and only nine are common. Bramley Seedlings for cooking and Cox's Orange Pippins for eating are the best sellers.

More than 60 percent of the British apple market has been lost to imports such as the Washington Red Delicious, South African Granny Smith, New Zealand Braeburn and French Golden Delicious, the most popular apple in Britain.

THE BROGDALE collection aims to be a "shop window" between growers and consumers, and also to turn a profit, said director David Pennell.

In 1989, the government of former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher cut off subsidies, leaving Brogdale as vulnerable as the Prince of Wales apple, an English variety now found only in Belgium.

Prince Charles, the real prince of Wales, saved the orchard through his duchy of Cornwall, which put up 75 percent of the purchase price.

"I am horrified of what I learned of the disappearance of traditional strains of produce," he said at the time. "We seem to be doomed to a rather boring homogeneity."

Fruits and vines have been grown in Kent since the Roman occupation. Richard Harris, fruiterer to Henry VIII, established the first large orchards at Teynham.

Some villages still practice the ancient fertility rite of "wassailing." On Twelfth Night, revelers gather beneath the largest tree in an orchard, fire rifles into its branches to ward off evil spirits and pour hard cider on the roots to ensure a good harvest.

Apple historian, author suggests updates for apple bread recipe

LONDON (AP) — John Claudius Loudon included this recipe for apple bread in his Encyclopedia of Gardening, published in 1824. He described the bread as "excellent, full of eyes and extremely platable."

Joan Morgan, an apple historian and author who updated the recipe, suggests serving apple bread with cheese.

APPLE BREAD

6 ounces apples, weighed after peeling and coring
½ ounce fresh yeast
Salt

Cook the apples to a puree. Blend the yeast to a smooth liquid with a half-cup of warm water. Add to the warm, not hot, apple puree and stir the mixture into the salted flour. After kneading, leave the dough in a warm place to rise to double in volume. When the dough is ready, dust it with flour and work it into a ball. Place in a greased bread pan and leave to rise. When it reaches the top of the pan, bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes, reduce temperature to 375 degrees and bake for another 20 minutes. Turn out of the pan and cool.

Gingerbread is Austria's enduring holiday edible art

By Markus Farbinger

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Making confections like gingerbread — and decorating them — is a Christmas holiday tradition in Austria, where baking and patisserie are considered art forms.

Although most modern gingerbread contains sugar, honey is still included because it adds flavor and helps maintain moisture in the finished product. The gingerbread is also kept moist by the rye flour, which has less gluten than other types of flour.

If stored properly in cookie tins, gingerbread will stay moist and delicious for weeks. Those who discover their gingerbread has become dry and hard can take heart: Stale gingerbread can be revived by placing it in a plastic bag or other airtight container with fresh apple or orange peel.

GINGERBREAD

1½ cups honey
2 cups granulated sugar
¼ cup water
3¾ cups bread flour
3¾ cups rye flour
2 tablespoons gingerbread spice (recipe follows)
¾ cup milk
4 teaspoons baking powder
Gum arabic (optional)

Combine honey, sugar and water in a saucepan. Heat until sugar is dissolved. Cool to room temperature. In a large bowl, combine flours and gingerbread spice.

In a separate bowl, combine ¼ cup of the milk and the 4 teaspoons baking powder; stir to dissolve. Add milk mixture and sugar mixture to the dry ingredients; mix well. Cover dough and let rest in the refrigerator overnight. Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface; knead 5 to 10 minutes.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly grease two large baking sheets. Roll out dough ⅛ inch thick and cut into shapes with a sharp knife or decorative cookie cutters.

Place gingerbread on greased baking sheets and brush lightly with remaining milk. Bake in a 375-degree oven until browned, about 10 minutes. Remove from oven and, while gingerbread is still hot, brush with gum arabic if desired. Cool and store in an airtight container. Makes 15 gingerbread cookies.

GINGERBREAD SPICE

4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
5 teaspoons anise
5 teaspoons fennel
3 teaspoons ground ginger
1 teaspoon cardamom
5 teaspoons coriander
1 teaspoon mace
2 teaspoons nutmeg
3 teaspoons ground cloves
1 teaspoon star anise

Combine all ingredients. Leftover spice should be kept in an airtight container. In addition to gingerbread, this spice may be used to flavor applesauce, spice cake and other baked items.

NOTE: Gum arabic is a colorless, flavorless, natural additive made from acacia bark. It is available in restaurant and bakery supply stores. In this recipe, it is used to give the finished product a glossy surface.

DEAR ABBY

Lines drawn at Kent State still divide

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You recently published several letters on the Kent State killings that reflected your readers' prejudices, not the facts as determined by the official investigative bodies, particularly the President's Commission on Campus Unrest. Some of the myths your readers cling to cannot be adequately addressed in a short column, but I would, at least, like to set the record straight on a few points:

Van Buren

1. The anti-Vietnam War rally that the National Guard broke up at Kent State was peaceful until the Guard made what the President's Commission called a "highly questionable" decision to disperse the crowd. The President's Commission concluded: "There was no apparent impending violence. Only when the Guard attempted to disperse the rally did some students react violently."

2. Though the Guardsmen were subsequently subjected to some abuse, including some rock throwing, the notion that the Guardsmen had to fire because their lives were endangered by an uncontrollable mob was also disputed by every official investigation. The Justice Department concluded the shootings were "neither necessary nor proper." Similarly, the President's Commission concluded the killings were "unnecessary, unwarranted and inexcusable."

3. The students who were killed were not the same students who were responsible for the burning of the university's Army ROTC building or any other act of violence which occurred in the city of Kent the weekend before May 4, 1970.

4. On May 4, two of the four students who were killed had participated in the demonstration and may have at some point thrown rocks at the soldiers. The other two (an ROTC student and a coed carrying books to class) were strictly bystanders. The Justice Department concluded that because all four fatalities were located more than 300 feet from the firing soldiers, none were "in a position to pose even a remote danger to the National Guard at the time of the firing." — WILLIAM A. GORDON, AUTHOR, "THE FOURTH OF MAY: KILLINGS AND COVER-UPS AT KENT STATE" (PROMETHEUS BOOKS, 1990)

DEAR MR. GORDON: Thank you for setting the record straight. I bought — and read — your book, a fascinating as well as factual account of what really took place at Kent State.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please give me some advice on how to make restitution of a large sum of money and still remain anonymous?

I can't send a personal check or walk into my local 7-Eleven store with $4,000 and ask for a money order. And I certainly don't want to send cash anonymously through the mail.

Many years ago, I was reimbursed for a medical insurance claim that I had no right to. My conscience has bothered me for a long time, and I can't seem to come up with a workable solution. I am also uncertain about whom to send the money to. I thought perhaps if I addressed my letter to the president of the insurance company, it would eventually get into the right hands, but I don't want to tempt some other employee by sending some form of payment as good as cash. Any ideas? — GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: I agree that sending cash through the mail would be unwise, but since you do not wish to be identified, advise your attorney to send the insurance company $4,000 with a cover letter to the president — explaining that it is from "a repentant client who wishes to remain anonymous."

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Wild rice dressing easily made ahead

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

When company comes, I prefer to spend time with my guests rather than my range. That's why I look for dishes to make ahead, such as this wild rice dressing that reheats so well in the microwave oven. I cook the rice the day before, then, when dinner's almost ready, pop it into my microwave and rejoin the party.

Everyone loves all the tasty tidbits inside — mushrooms, pecans, pimiento, parsley and prosciutto (pronounced "pro-SHOO-toe") ham. The Italian salt-cured ham really adds a special flavor. You'll find it at your supermarket deli counter or Italian specialty markets.

WILD RICE AND PROSCIUTTO DRESSING

1¼ cups water
⅓ cup regular brown rice
½ teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1½ cups sliced fresh mushrooms
3 green onions, sliced
1 2-ounce jar sliced pimiento, drained
⅛ cup broken pecans
2 ounces prosciutto ham (⅛ cup), snipped, or 3 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
¼ cup water

In a sieve, rinse wild rice for 1 minute under cold running water. In a medium saucepan combine wild rice, the 1¼ cups water, brown rice and bouillon granules. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 45 minutes. Add mushrooms, green onions and pimiento. Cook, covered, over medium-low heat for 10 minutes more or just until onion is tender, stirring frequently. Stir in the pecans, prosciutto or bacon, parsley and the remaining ¼ cup water.

Transfer mixture to a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and chill for up to 24 hours. To reheat, cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 6 to 8 minutes (low-wattage ovens: 9 to 11 minutes) or until heated through, carefully stirring once. Makes 8 servings.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the South Orient Rural Rail Transportation District (the "District") for the lease (with an option to purchase) of the District's interest in real property being acquired from The Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad ("ATSF") no later than 9:00 o'clock A.M. on the 19th day of December, 1991 at the office of the County Judge of Tom Green County, Texas, (who is also the Chairman of the District), County Office Building, San Angelo, Texas. A description of the interest in land located in this county is as follows. All the right of way and other related real estate for the railroad and rail line of ATSF running from an Angelo Junction, Coleman County, Texas in a West Southwesterly direction through portions of Coleman, Runnels, Tom Green, Irion, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Crockett, Pecos, Brewster and Presidio Counties, Texas (the "Rail Line"), including fixtures, whether in the form of an easement, license, fee simple, or other interest and that property described in that certain (i) Deed, Assignment and Transfer dated as of August 1, 1965, by and between Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railway Company, as Grantor, and ATSF, as Grantee, and (ii) Deed, Assignment and Transfer dated as of August 1, 1965, by and between Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway Company of Texas, as Grantor, and ATSF, as Grantee, a copy of each such Deed, Assignment and Transfer is on file at said office of said Chairman for inspection and review by anyone wishing to submit a bid.

The lease will be in connection with and an integral part of the following transaction; and any bidder must be ready, willing and able to assume and perform all of the obligations to be performed by South Orient Railroad Company, Ltd. ("SORC") hereinafter described and to consummate the transaction by December 19, 1991.

ATSF will donate and convey to the District all of the real property portion of the Rail Line as more fully described above.

ATSF will convey to the District, for Five Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($5,500,000) in cash, any and all installed rails, ties, ballasts, tracks, sidings, bridges, building, stations, communication facilities, fixtures, improvements and appurtenances that are installed and consequently are improvements of the Rail Line.

ATSF will transfer to SORC a permanent easement to conduct rail freight transportation service and engage in any related operating, construction or maintenance activity over all and any portion of the Rail Line.

ATSF will assign to SORC all of the rail freight transportation business, including the right to operate freight trains, make freight rates and enter into freight transportation contracts concerning rail freight transportation operations over the Rail Line.

ATSF will sell to SORC all of the rails, ties, spikes, tie plates, angle bars, switches, wires, pipes, poles, ballasts, rail anchors, bridges, culverts, signaling equipment and other supporting structures, tract materials and supplies, all office furniture and machinery, and other items used on the Rail Line in the ordinary course of business that are not installed, and are not improvements of the Rail Line.

ATSF will assign to SORC all assignable rights and obligations that relate to the Rail Line and are set forth in any rail freight transportation contracts or any joint facilities agreements on the Rail Line.

The District will convey to the Texas Department of Transportation ("TDT") for approximately Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500.00) in cash, a 100-feet wide strip of right-of-way (50 feet on each side of the centerline between the main railroad tracks) over land to which the District will obtain fee simple title subject to any easements reserved by ATSF or the District.

TDT will make a grant of approximately Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($2,500,000) secured by a priority lien on installed rails, ties and bridges forming the Rail Line.

The District will grant a lease of the real property and installed improvements purchased from ATSF for a period of 50 years, with 5 consecutive renewal options for 10 years each in consideration for the payment in cash of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($2,500,000) by the lessee, and, thereafter, the lessee will pay One Thousand Two Hundred Dollars ($1,200) annually. The lease from the District will contain a covenant obligating the lessee to operate the railroad and a rail freight transportation business over the rail line at least until December 31, 1993 and an option to purchase the real property and installed improvements at anytime for a purchase price of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) subject to the TDT lien. To qualify, the lessee must demonstrate an ability to provide adequate working capital for the operation of the railroad and must be qualified under the Interstate Commerce Act of the United States, and the rules and regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Texas Railroad Commission, to operate as a common carrier of freight by rail.

This transaction is scheduled to be completed by December 19, 1991. Proposals which include all property described in the notices being published in Tom Green, Coleman, Runnels, Irion, Upton, Crockett, Crane, Pecos, Brewster, Presidio and Reagan Counties will receive priority consideration. A description of all such property may be obtained from the Office of the County Judge of Tom Green at the address shown above.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
