MURDER CHARGE FOLLOWS SHOOTING

Seven Barely Escape Death As Fire Razes Wichita Home

FAMILY ASLEEP WHEN BLAZE COVERS HOUSE

H. A. Williams Family And Four Guests Roused By Dense Smoke

MAN'S SECOND BREAK

Boy Snatched From Fire By Father; Girl Seared Making Dash

Seven people narrowly escaped death by suffocation or burning early Sunday morning when the home of H. A. Williams, 1605 Elizabeth street was destroyed by fire. It was Mr. Williams' second narrow escape within a week.

Dense clouds of smoke, rushing from an inferno at the front of the house, awakened the Williams family and four guests and by the time they had fought their way outside the flames were licking at the sleeping rooms from which they escaped.

When Miss Grace Williams attempted to open the door leading from the sleeping porch into the kitchen, her hair was caught by the flames and her eye brows and lashes singed.

Father Saves Boy

James Baxter, a 15-year-old nephew of the household, was snatched back from the flames by his father, J. B. Baxter, just as the boy, frightened from sleep, started into a blazing room.

Mr. Williams early last week met an equally narrow escape when the truck in which he was driving went off a Red river bridge. Half drowned and almost freezing, he fought his way to the shore. The truck was loaded with bottled soft drinks. He explained that something went wrong with the steering apparatus, taking the car out of his control.

Mrs. Williams, who is just recovering from influenza, was first awakened Sunday morning, and with Mr. Williams, struggled through the smoke to awake the sleepers on the porch and unlock the back door. The entire household, scantily clad, were almost smothered by the fumes before they were clear of the house.

Guests in House

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Williams and their children, Grace and Cleo, Mrs. Williams brother, J. V. Baxter, his son James, and Miss Pauliine Lynsky, a guest of Miss Williams, were in the house.

The alarm was first given to the fire department by Mrs. A. C. Stearnes, 1607 Elizabeth, who was awakened by the noise of a window glass cracking from the heat. The high north wind then blowing endangered the Stearnes home, the walls and roof of which were scorched by the flames.

Fire Chief McClure estimated the damage at $4,000. All the clothing and household furnishings were destroyed. The Williams family took up temporary quarters in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Thompson, 1603 Elizabeth.

Guatemalan Revolt Reported Near End

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (US)—Guatemala's revolution is virtually at an end, the governmental troops having forced the rebels to the wall, according to official advices received today from the Central American republic by Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, Guatemalan minister to the United States.

Pre-War Splendor Planned For 70th Birthday Celebration Of Wilhelm II

BERLIN, Jan. 20. (AP)—Monarchists who have survived the 10 years of German republicanism will be in their glory Jan. 27 when the 70th birthday of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II is celebrated with the pomp and ceremony of pre-wartime days.

Faithful monarchists will make the pilgrimage to Doorn manor, in Holland, where the former ruler has been living in exile. An entire week will be given over to receiving deputations, culminating in a family reunion in exact imitation of those brilliant ceremonies which took place at the imperial palace.

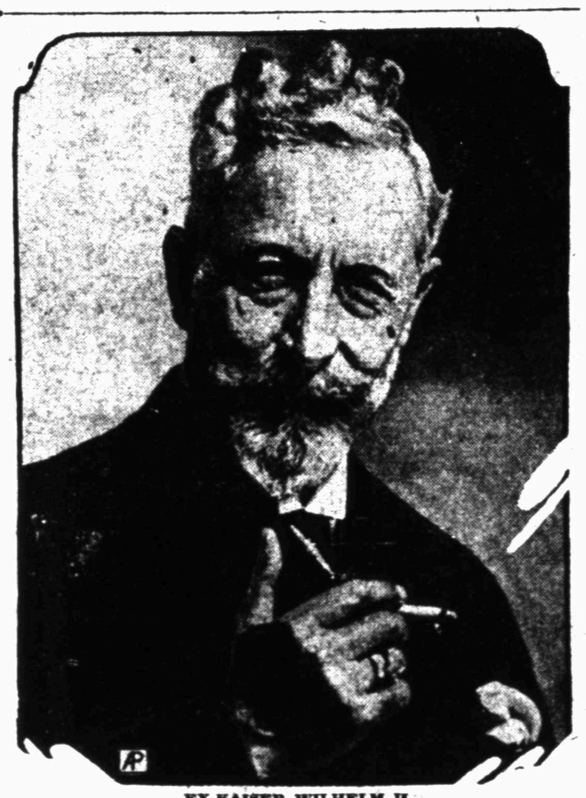

"Gala uniforms and decorations" is the word which has been passed and, as the list of the faithful includes much of Germany's nobility, the scene should be colorful. Women attending the reception will wear the ordered court costume with elaborate trains and everything possible will be done to reproduce the scenes of other days.

Monarchists over the republic have set aside Jan. 27 for proper observance of the former ruler's anniversary. Plays have been written for the occasion and a number of village festivals have been arranged.

Doorn manor, where the ex-kaiser has been quartered since his flight from Germany, is too small an establishment to house the vast number of relatives attending the reunion and Dutch officials have been sorely pressed to provide accommodations for the visiting notables.

Hotel rooms have been reserved and private houses at Doorn have been urged to release their available rooms. More than 40 members of the ex-kaiser's immediate family are expected to make the pilgrimage.

Originally, it was planned to limit the celebration to Jan. 27, but so many former officials in the royal household applied for permission to pay their respects that an entire week was set aside.

AVIATOR HELD ON CHARGE OF MOONSHINING

Commercial and Stunt Flier Held for Operating Big Still Here

WIFE ALSO IN JAIL

F. H. (Slats) Rogers Denies Allegation in Complaint; $1,000 Bonds Set

F. H. (Slats) Rogers, commercial aviator and stunt flyer, widely known in connection with years of flying all over Texas and Oklahoma, was arrested in Oklahoma City early Sunday morning charged with the operation of a 2,000 gallon still seized here in December.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Rogers were arrested by members of the constable's department here, after the return of a joint indictment by the 30th district grand jury in its report on Friday afternoon.

Big Still Captured

The still involved in the charge was captured by Constable Frank Morgan and his deputies in one of the biggest hauls ever made by county and precinct officers here. It was taken from a residence in the thickly settled section of Fifth street on Dec. 22. At the time of the raid Mr. Morgan said he believed a man had escaped through an underground tunnel leading from the house to the garage.

Rogers was employed as test pilot, instructor and demonstrator for a big commercial company at the time of his arrest, he told Mr. Morgan. His own ship, a Curtiss biplane, is in a hangar at Dallas, he told the officers. He explained that aerial acrobatics are no longer as popular with crowds as they were when aviation was younger, and that he had sought a regular job, leaving his ship temporarily out of use.

Acrobatic Flier

Both Rogers and his wife are held under $1,000 bonds. In a statement made Sunday afternoon he denied the charges, saying he could establish that he was working at the time the still was seized.

The aviator has been seen here and in other sections of Texas and Oklahoma in aerial acrobatic exhibitions.

Biologist Presents New Theory On Origin Of Man

Monkey Evolution Idea Blasted by Newest Explanation of How We Happen to Be on Earth

By ALFRED P. RECK
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Man is an accident—a freak of nature—appearing on earth before the dawn of history substantially as he is in the present day, Dr. Austin H. Clark, noted biologist of the Smithsonian Institution, explained today in revealing his new theory of life, which combines a radical conception of evolution with the Biblical story of the creation.

Dr. Clark's theory, arrived at after a lifetime of study in all parts of the world, is expected to create a furor in scientific circles as Darwin did when he published his ideas on evolution. He has just announced his theory to the scientific world in the quarterly review of biology.

No Monkey Connection

"There is no evidence which would show man developing step by step from lower forms of life," Dr. Clark said. "There is nothing to show that man was in any way connected with monkeys.

"Man appeared in the pliogene age, just preceding the ice age. He appeared suddenly and in substantially the same form as he is in today. There is not the slightest evidence of his existence before that time.

"He appeared able to walk, able to think and able to defend himself.

"There are no such things as missing links. Missing links are mininterpratrions. Fossils skulls, which have been dug up, have been advanced as missing links showing connections between man and monkey but they have all been shown as misinterpretations."

Dr. Clark accepts neither the theory of the creationists nor that of the evolutionists. His ideas are more or less a compromise between the two.

Mass of Evidence

He supports his theory by a mass of evidence, highly scientific and technical, gathered from many years of study and observation of plant life and animals.

Modernists and fundamentalists alike may be able to derive some hope from Dr. Clark's ideas. There is no doubt but what his theory will add new fuel to the controversy.

Al Smith and Party On Way to Florida For Vacation

Accompanying him were Mrs Smith and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kenny, close friends.

John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, was to join the party at Wilmington, Del.

The former governor said he was "getting away from politics."

He and his party planned to spend six weeks with Carl Espy, at Sarasota, Fla.

800 Arrested by Cops In Chicago Cleanup

CHICAGO, Jan. 20. (US)—More than 800 persons, 200 of whom were found to have criminal records, were arrested today in a city wide raid by police to check crime.

All day handcuffed prisoners filed past victims and authorities alike on the "show up" stage at detective headquarters, in efforts to identify the leaders of recent holdups and slayings.

The raids are to be continued until every law-violating establishment has been suppressed and its owners and patrons put under custody.

FLIGHT HERO'S MOTHER DIES

Mrs. Y. Y. Eaker Dead At Home in West Texas

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Jan. 20 (AP)—Mrs. Y. Y. Eaker, mother of Captain Ira Eaker, who piloted the army monoplane Question Mark in its record breaking endurance flight, died today in her home in Eden, Texas, near here, only a few hours before her son took off in the Question Mark's flight from San Diego to Washington, D. C.

The plane is due to stop at Midland Monday, and it was thought Captain Eaker might leave it there to attend his mother's funeral. A week ago today Captain Eaker flew to Midland and went from there to Eden to be with his mother, who was suffering from pneumonia. Thursday, when her condition seemed to warrant it, he returned to his post.

Captain Eaker's father is in a hospital here with mastoid trouble.

QUESTION MARK LANDS AT TUCSON

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 20 (UP)—The army plane Question Mark and its convoying refueling plane landed at Tucson at 4 p. m. today on the first lap of its San Diego to Washington trip.

The flight from the coast was made in five hours, bucking a head wind the entire distance.

Approximately 6,000 persons, headed by city officials, greeted the crews of the two planes.

Major Spatz announced an early take-off for Midland, Texas, on Monday morning on the second leg of the flight.

The monoplane, holder of the world's sustained flight record, left Rockwell field, San Diego, at 10 a. m., accompanied by the refueling ship.

Other stops will be made at Midland or Dallas, Texas; Shreveport, La., or Montgomery, Ala., and Norfolk, Va. It was not planned to make any refuelings in the air.

C. E. WOOD DIES AFTER BEING SHOT 8 TIMES

Murder Charge Is Laid Against O. C. Heither After Probe

WOMAN IN HOSPITAL

Wife of Accused Man Under Treatment; Dying Man in Statement

Charges of murder were brought against O. C. Heither, 2308 Buchanan, in a complaint made Sunday in connection with the death of Clifford E. Wood, shot at the Heither home at 11:30 Saturday night. Wood, whose body showed 14 wounds, died at 6:15 Sunday morning at the Wichita General hospital.

A few hours before the murder complaint was signed, Mrs. Heither, who was being held for questioning at the city hall, was rushed to the Wichita General hospital.

Hospital officials said efforts were being made to remove pieces of broken glass from her stomach.

Heither, Mrs. Heither, and Miss Beatrice King, Mrs. Heither's sister, were taken to the city hall for questioning immediately after the shooting Saturday night. After the complaint was made, Heither was removed to the county jail and Miss King was released. No bond had been set Sunday night, Sam Spence, district attorney, said.

In a statement made to Sam Spence a short time before he died Sunday morning, Mr. Wood told the district attorney that the shooting had followed a fit of jealousy. He said Heither, who had announced his intention of going to Lake Kemp for a fishing trip, had been in the house about an hour when the shooting occurred. He, Mrs. Heither and her sister had been at the Heither home all through the evening, except for a short time when they went to a picture show, the dying man stated, according to officials.

Heither in Statement

After being quizzed by Mr. Spence, Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, and Frank Burns, chief of police, all Sunday afternoon, Heither made a statement to the officials, asserting that he had returned home unexpectedly and that the shooting occurred after he had been in the house some time.

Wood was shot eight times with a .32 Colt automatic. One shot went through a window and another through a door of the house. Heither called an ambulance. Officers Elmer Thornton, Ralph Rohatch, M. A. Perdue and John Lowery of the city police answered the call from the ambulance driver and accompanied Heither and Miss King to the police station.

Mrs. Heither rode to the hospital in the ambulance with Wood, and later went to the city hall, according to Elmer Thornton and Ralph Rohatch, who took her in charge after Wood was taken into the operating room.

Wood first refused to make any statement but about 4 o'clock Sunday morning made his dying declaration to Mr. Spence.

Wood's wife was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Burkburnett a few months ago. He is survived by his mother, a little daughter and a brother-in-law, Ben Hicks of Wichita Falls.

The body will be held at the Hines mortuary pending word from Wood's mother who lives in Ohio.

Would-Be Interurban Wreckers Are Sought

DALLAS, Jan. 20. (AP)—Officers endeavored tonight to discover the identity of persons who placed a pile of ties across the tracks of the Dallas-Sherman interurban line near Vickery, Dallas county, early today. The obstruction was discovered in time to avert danger. A fire had been built near the ties and telephone wires in the vicinity were cut.

Childress County Pulls Away From One-Crop Idea After Good Year

County Funds to Buy Terracing Equipment Is Plan of County Agent; Business Men Optimistic

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

CHILDRESS, Texas, Jan. 20.—The pessimist is denied comfort in Childress county this year. The only lamentation that he can justify is the fact that crops were a trifle short over a small area in the southeastern portion of the county and that the cotton crop was just about 2,000 bales short of that of the previous year.

Offsetting these trivial contentions is the fact that the cotton crop was actually around 6,700 bales in excess of the 12-year average, 1916 to 1927 inclusive; and further that vaults of the Childress county banks are overflowing with money; that the city of Childress has just experienced its greatest year of building construction, its merchants their greatest year in volume of sales; that hundreds of new farm homes have been constructed or remodeled in every section of the county; that farms are being equipped with domestic water plants and those in proximity to gas and electric lines are being modernized with these conveniences; that farmers everywhere are terracing their land or clamoring for aid of the county agent in terracing; that education in home economics is being given girls under the direction of the county home demonstration agent; that boys' and girls' farm clubs have active organizations in every community and are educating their elders; and more important than any of these, 75 per cent of the farmers of the county have gained independence by adopting dairying

REEF CLUTCHES BIG STEAMSHIP

President Garfield Passengers Reported Safe

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (US)—The Dollar line steamship, President Garfield, bound on a round-the-world pleasure cruise, was aground on Mantanilla reef east of the Bahamas tonight.

All fears for the safety of those on board the vessel were allayed, however, when a terse message was received here early in the evening direct from the master of the liner. The message read as follows:

Passengers Transferred

"President Garfield ran ashore Mantanilla shoal 7:10 a. m. Fast fore and aft. Passengers baggage all mail transferred to Pan-America. All well. Fine weather. Smooth sea."

The Pan-America referred to in the message was a liner of the Munson Steamship company, which had radioed earlier in the day that it would reach the reef by 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

There were 81 passengers on board the President Garfield, with 125 officers and members of the crew.

The President Garfield, grounded and helpless on the reef, did not send out an SOS call, according to the naval communications watch officer at Washington, but radioed for assistance. The ship's captain reported his vessel was in no danger, and that the weather was good.

Tug Dispatched

The navy's sea-going tug, Umoqua, moored at Charleston, S. C., was ordered to rush to the disabled liner as soon as news of the grounding was received at the naval department in Washington. The Pan-America, however, seems to have got there first.

The President Garfield left New York Thursday with passengers from various parts of the country. Salvage operations will be started at once, and little fear was expressed for the ship itself unless the weather should turn worse.

It has not been one of the luckliest of the Dollar ships. On June 1 last it rammed and sank the Collier, Hershaw, in Vineyard sound. Seven members of the Hershaw's crew were lost. The President Garfield picked up 29 survivors.

About two years ago while bound from Boston to New York with Captain Robert Dollar on board it ran aground on the Half Moon shoals off Nantucket. It was on the bar for 15 hours before it was released by a rising tide with the assistance of two coast guard cutters.

Dry Enforcement Should Not Lag, Says Bishop

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Elaborating on his recent telegram to Secretary Mellon urging the proposed $25,000,000 prohibition enforcement increase, Bishop James Cannon Jr., chairman of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, today in a statement said the dry law's enforcement should not lag because of the lack of a more adequate program "than is possible with present appropriations."

Hoover Starts Today for Florida Where He Will Work Out Address

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—After two weeks of conferences with Republican leaders, President-elect Hoover will leave tomorrow for Florida, where he will prepare his inaugural address and rest up to take over the nation's chief executiveship.

Traveling on a special train, Mr. Hoover will leave at 10:30 a. m. and will arrive at Miami at 2 p. m. Tuesday. There he will be greeted by the governor and other state officials and accompanied to the J. C. Penny estate on Belle Island where he and Mrs. Hoover will be guests.

During his last day in Washington, the president-elect and Mrs. Hoover attended services at the Friends' church; went for an automobile ride in the evening, and entertained a few friends at dinner during the evening.

Out of his conferences have developed decisions to call an extra session of congress to act on farm relief and tariff revision; to appoint a commission to make an investigation of prohibition and law enforcement, and a realignment of party control in New York state.

Oklahoma Awaits Resumption Of Johnston Ouster Battle Today

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 20. (AP)—Oklahoma tonight awaited the next chapter in the right to remove Gov. Henry S. Johnston from office on impeachment charges. The writing of that chapter was looked for with the reconvening tomorrow of the legislature after a week-end intermission.

Five impeachment charges, voted by the house were expected to be transmitted tomorrow to the senate, which will sit as the impeachment court.

Acceptance of the impeachment articles by the senate automatically would suspend the governor from office, leaders said. In that event W. J. Holloway, lieutenant governor would succeed to the executive's chair pending the impeachment trial.

Five additional articles of impeachment, returned by the house investigating committee which last week called many witnesses in its inquiry into official acts of Governor Johnston, remained before the house for action.

With a special committee already appointed for the purpose, the state senate was scheduled to begin an investigation of its own this week. The committee named to inquire into rumors that a slush fund entered into the sudden dispersal of the senate in the attempted impeachment session of 1927 has announced it would begin hearing witnesses Tuesday.

IOWA PARK MAN GIVES TESTIMONIAL

"Since Taking Orgatone I Feel Simply Fine," Says R. L. Redman

R. L. Redman, residing on route 1, Iowa Park, Texas, is still another Northwest Texas representative citizen to give his unqualified endorsement for Orgatone. Mr. Redman has been a resident of this section for many years and his standing and influence are too well known to require further comment.

In a conversation with the Orgatone representative a few days ago, Mr. Redman said:

"For three years I suffered from indigestion, nervousness and other troubles and was never able to get more than a little temporary relief until I began taking Orgatone. I had no appetite, my stomach was all out of order, and I hadn't eaten a square meal in so long that I was all out of sorts. I would swell up with gas after meals and feel miserable for hours, and for years I rocked along eating barely enough to keep me up. The truth is, eating had become a matter of more or less dread to me on account of the suffering I had to undergo from it. I looked strong and hearty and no one suspected that I was not a well man, but my health was broken in many ways. My nerves were becoming all shattered and I couldn't sleep at all well. I was away off in strength and energy and felt so bad all the time I was in no shape to give my work proper attention.

"I was in a very bad way and seemed to be losing ground every day. I realized something had to be done if possible to check my troubles and as Orgatone was so highly endorsed I decided to give it a trial. It proved to be just the right thing, and very much to my satisfaction. I now have an appetijte to eat anything without it hurting me in the least. I have no swelling or gas after eating, everything tastes good and I enjoy every bite. My nerves are strong as iron. I feel just fine and can look after my work without the slightest trouble. I know there are lots of other people who need just such a medicine as Orgatone to get them over their suffering and make them well and happy and that is my reason for giving this statement."

Orgatone may be obtained in Wichita Falls from Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue. A special representative of the Orgatone laboratories is meeting the public daily and is glad to explain the therapeutic value of Orgatone. Out-of-town customers are being supplied by mail upon receipt of price, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles, $6.25. —Adv.

MARRIAGES FOR LOVE ARE BEST

Money Seekers Never Find Happiness

If a Girl Marries for Money She Has Only the Poor Things Money Buys, Whereas if She Marries for Love She Has Something That Grows More and More Precious As the Years Go By.

A young woman asks: "What should a girl marry for, love or money?" Love, because if you are willing to work you can acquire money, and then if you have married for love you will have both love and money.

Love is a gift of the gods. You cannot make that, no matter how hard you try. No effort of the will can make you thrill at the touch that is repulsive to you or give flavor to kisses that are dust and ashes on your lips. So, if you marry for money and lose it, you have nothing left.

If you marry for love you have something of which you never tire, something that keeps your heart alive, something that keeps your interest in life fresh and vivid and alert, something that grows more and more precious as the years go by. No woman ever grew satiated with love. No woman ever grew weary of loving and being loved.

If you marry her for money you will find that its joys soon pall upon you. You will find that one dinner is like another, one frock like another, and that there is not much difference between automobiles or country houses or town houses, and that you can be just as much bored in one place as another. The very knowledge that you can have everything you want will keep you from wanting anything.

If you marry for love you will have romance, the rapture, the glory and the circling wings. You will have companionship. You will have sympathy and understanding. You will have something to laugh with and cry with and play with. You will have something that calls out everything that is fine in your nature and that makes you a better and a nobler woman.

If you marry for money you will have the poor things that money buys, and that will be all. You will have duty instead of love. Being a good sport and playing the game instead of being part of your husband. And you won't have much self-respect.

Love satisfies a woman. But money never does. Notice the faces of the women who have married for love, how soft and tender and beautiful they are; then look at the faces of the women who have married for money, and see how hard and bitter and cynical they have grown.

You will find many happy women who married for love, and who have never had much else. They have always had to live in poor homes, and year shabby clothes, and do their own housework, but love has turned their rented rooms into palaces. It has made their hand-me-downs royal robes, and every dinner they have ever cooked for their men has been done with the sacred joy of a priestess ministering before the altar.

But you never see a woman who has married for money who is happy. Invariably she is peevish and fretful and discontented. She may live in a house that has cost a fortune and that is furnished with the belongings of kings, but it is no home, no place where her soul can rest and be at peace, because there is no love in it. She may be clothed in silks and velvets and diamonds and furs, but they cannot put warmth into her cold heart. She may have a checking account that will enable her to buy everything she wants in the world except the things she wants most of all—love, the comradeship of two hearts that really beat as one.

You see, my dear girl, marriage is a very queer business. And then some. It isn't just a trade in which one gives so much and gets so much and in which one is justified in making the best bargain one can for oneself. It is literally more blessed to give than to receive, where one must give without counting the cost and in which those who put in the most get out the most.

Nor is there any way by which a woman, however astute she may be can protect herself against the hasards of matrimony. Money won't do it. There are sacrifices of personal tastes and inclinations that have to be made alike by the millionaires and the pauper. Rich husbands are just as cantankerods and had to get along with as poor husbands are.

The only thing that makes marriage worth while is love. It takes love, and lots of it, to sweeten the inevitable sacrifices that marriage demands of every woman.

It takes the magic of love to blind a wife to her husband's faults and see in them nothing but adorable peculiarities; to keep her believing that a mediocre man is an oracle whose every utterances is worth repeating ,and to see in some bay-windowed, bald-headed, middle aged husband a sheik that she believes every flapper is trying to steal away from her. It takes the miracle of love to prevent any husband from getting on his wife's nerves and keep her out of the divorce courts.

It would seem that heaven prospers the love marriage and puts a curse upon the mercenary marriage. Half the prosperous men and women you know will tell you that they married on a shoestring, and how they scrimped and saved and worked together and lived on bread and cheese and kisses to get a start in the world.

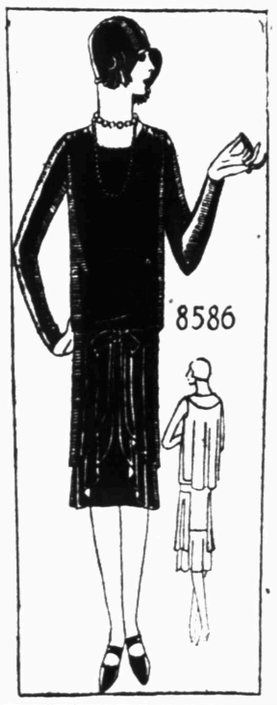

The had love, and that gilded their hardships, and they look back with joy to the battle they fought shoulder to shoulder. Nine-tenths of the women you know who marry for money have lost even that by the time they are middle-aged, and they are poor indeed, because they have nothing. They have not even the memory of love to comfort them

So my dear girl, don't be afraid to marry for love. Marry your poor young man and work up with him That is the great American romance.

Grandfield Dramatic Club Selects Plays

Special to The Record News

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 20.—Two of the three one-act plays which the Players Dramatic club will present sometime during the latter part of February, have been selected. They are "The Valiant," a tragedy, and "The No 'Count Boy," a comedy by Paul Green. "The Valiant" is one of the most popular of modern one-act plays and comprises a cast of five, while the "No Count Boy" is composed of an all-negro cast.

The third play, which will be a fantasy, has not been chosen, but will be selected during this week. It will probably be either "The Maker of Dreams" or "The Slave With Two Faces," Miss Nell Chism, dramatic art instructor and sponsor of the club, has stated.

COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ada Bessr, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

BEAUTY AND UTILITY ARE COMBINED IN THE NEW FORD

The new Fordor Sedan is impressively smart yet sturdy and substantial. An unusually comfortable car because of its wide, deeply cushioned seats, generous room between front and rear seats, transverse springs and Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers. Finished in a choice of beautiful two-tone color harmonies.

WHEN you see the new Ford, you are impressed instantly by its trim, graceful lines and air of sturdy strength. Its very appearance is a reflection of the alert, capable performance of the car. Without being extreme, it has struck a new note in automobile designing.

A particularly interesting feature of the new Ford is the way beauty has been combined with utility. This is found in the length, width and height of the body, the size and shape of the radiator, the position of the gasoline tank in the cowl, the outward flow of the body, the design of the welded steel spoke wheels, the shape and position of the full nickeled headlamps, the sweep and curve of the heavy full crown fenders.

Everything has been planned for service

When a thing perfectly fits its uses, it is pleasing to the eye. Every part of the new Ford has been designed and built not only to be attractive, but with a very definite thought of the work it has to do.

Even in the very little things you can see evidence of quality of material, careful workmanship and quiet good taste. The upholstery is of woolen material, rich and luxurious, yet long-wearing.

Attractive colors add to beauty of the new Ford

Every one of the new Ford body types is available in a choice of several beautiful two-tone color harmonies with attractive striping. This is an unusual feature in a low-price car.

The finish is pyroxylin lacquer, selected for its enduring qualities. It is not affected by heat or cold, is not easily marred or scratched, and polishes to a beautiful luster. Once a month at least your car should be washed and polished.

The beauty of the Ford is not of the outside only, but extends deep down into every part—even to those hidden parts which you may never see. In the eyes of the engineer and technical man, the mechanical beauty of the new Ford is one of its greatest features.

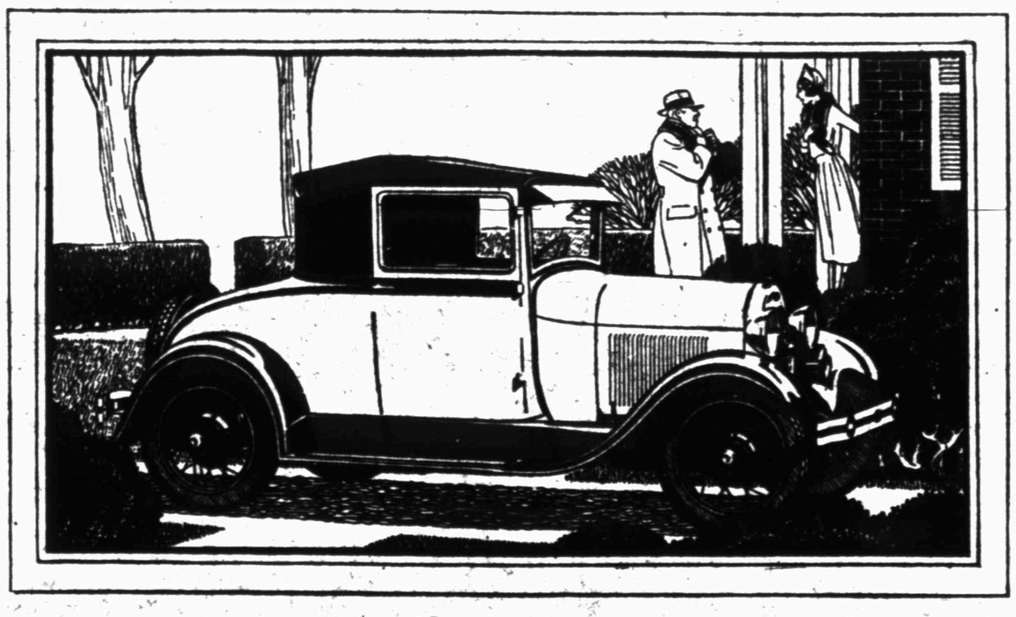

The practical beauty of a fine machine

There is beauty, for instance, in the fine steel forgings which are used everywhere in the chassis of the new Ford where there is a possibility of wear—in the manner in which electric welding has been developed to give increased strength without increased weight—in the simplicity of the cooling, lubrication, ignition, and fuel systems—in the extensive use of ball and roller bearings—in the simple operation of the fully enclosed six-brake system—in the close limits of accuracy maintained in the manufacture of important parts—in the way the engine develops its speed, acceleration and power without sacrificing reliability or economy.

To the man who drives his automobile many thousands of miles every year and who looks to it for continuous service at low cost, this mechanical beauty is of more importance even than beauty of line and finish.

For it is a reflection of simplicity of design, quality of materials and careful workmanship, which are the three fundamental factors in motor car performance.

There is indeed no greater tribute to the value of the new Ford than the simple, homely phrase which you hear so often from Ford owners, experienced garage mechanics and all who know and understand the workings of an automobile—"It is a sweet mechanical job."

The new Ford Business Coupe has been especially designed for professional men, executives, salesmen—for all who use an automobile constantly for business use. Handy package space behind seat and unusually large rear deck are welcome features.

All the girls get that way about Willie Howard when he does his little song and dance in George White's "Scandals." Willie has been actoring on Broadway for some years now. During his early barnstorming days he toured the whole country—not an easy task then, for in those days there were no rubber heels.

"It happened in an east-end kosher restaurant," he said. "I was sitting at a table when an irritable man hastened in and asked the waiter to bring him a steak.

"'The rust biff iss fine, eff you plizz, sir,' said the waiter.

"'I want a steak,' said the man, firmly.

"'The rust biff iss fine, eff you plizz, sir.'

"'But I said,' thundered the patron, 'I want a steak!'

WILLIE HOWARD

"'I was h'unly trying to suhjest, sir, det de rust biff was h'excellent,' persisted the waiter.

"The man finally summoned the manager.

"'Look here,' he said, 'I've been asking this fellow to bring me a steak and he keeps telling me the roast beef is good!'

"'Veil,' drawled the manager, 'do you t'ink de rust biff iss bad?'"

Progress and Shadows

THREE SEPARATE prizes for non-stop flights around the world have been offered in the last few days. At the same time, a western millionaire offers $25,000 to any man who can communicate with any of the planets in our solar system. A British statesman, furthermore, predicts that 100 years from now we shall have such knowledge of obscure physical processes that we can change the climate of any part of the world to suit our tastes.

The world, beyond doubt, is moving somewhere pretty rapidly. We are doing things that never before were deemed possible; furthermore, we are beginning to think that there will be no limit whatever to our future achievement. No dream is too fantastic to be given belief. The wildest imagination is not accused of being unbalanced. We are ready to believe anything.

Yet, side by side with this breath-taking advance, there exist strange patches of darkness. A firm belief in witchcraft has just been uncovered in a populous eastern state. A lady astrologist is commonly reported to be the chief adviser of the governor of a neighboring state. An aged and blind Holy Roller pastor in the middle west marries an 11-year-old girl, with her parents' approval. A southern state prepares to bring criminal proceedings against a backwoods school teacher who allowed a book on evolution to stray into his school library.

These things develop hand in hand with the advances in science and invention. No sooner do we get through patting ourselves on the back for a new intellectual achievement than some bit of age-old superstition or ignorance pops up to make us reconsider.

It is quite possible that we are advancing too fast at the top and too slowly at the bottom. To be sure, that is the way the human race has always made its progress. But it so happens that modern conditions have made it supremely important that that system be altered.

In the old days society could put up with a great deal of submerged darkness. It didn't matter how ignorant the bulk of the people were, because the bulk of the people didn't count for anything. They had no voice in the conduct of affairs, and the tasks they had to do could be done just as well in darkness as in light.

But we have changed all that. First, we established democratic government, under which the most downtrodden, benighted citizen has as much to say about his nation's course of action as the highest. Then our scientists began to invent a great variety of new tools which completely revolutionized every-day life. Ignorance and superstition are not to be tolerated anywhere in a world of automobiles, radio, television and large-scale industrialism. They are altogether too dangerous.

The universal education which our forefathers insisted on establishing in this country is probably the most important institution we have. It is the implement with which we must dispel these black shadows that dot our countryside. If we fail to do it we shall run into a fearful mess. To paraphrase Lincoln's famous remark, the nation cannot exist half ignorant and half enlightened.

The World Almanac

WITH THE NEW YEAR comes The World Almanac, that handy book of a million facts and figures. So this year is now well begun with The World Almanac for 1929 out and in hand. This is the 44th annual issue by The World and the seventh edited by Robert Hunt Lyman. It grows better every year and is more heartily welcomed. It is the standard reference book of America and maintains its place on office and factory desks, in homes and schools, on farms and in traveling bags. Those who use it keep it within arm's reach always. Its flow of readily accessible information is always on tap.

The country has had a year of prosperity, President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon say so, and The World Almanac gives you not only what they say but also the figures of the country's manufacturing, mining and farm production, transportation, banking, trade and commerce, which prove it; pages upon pages, an imposing array. Here is where figures fascinate. The economic and financial articles point their meaning.

Always the outstanding reference book for politics, The World Almanac gives the election figures by states that brought Hoover and Curtis their great majorities, the nomination conventions and platforms and the new congress. It also prints a summary of the Volstead act, and government officials have supplied it with their figures showing how it has been enforced. It tells what the peace pact of Paris is, and why this country is interested in naval disarmament.

The government figures, rosters and articles have been revised by government officials, and the compact information about the states of the union and about the foreign countries has been brought up to date.

But The Almanac gives one more than public affairs and high finance. The notable feats of aviation are chronicled. In 1928 alone were Lindbergh's good-will tour; the magnificent flight of the French aviators, Costes and Le Brix from Paris to Paris via Africa, South America, Central America, the United States, Japan and India; the German Bremen's first crossing by air from Europe to America; the Australians' hop, skip and jump across the Pacific from San Francisco to Australia; Sir Hubert Wilkins' flight across the frozen Arctic ocean, and the round trip of the glorious Zeppelin.

Then one is kept up to date on the Olympics, baseball, football, tennis, golf, boating, swimming, racing and the ring, with the records of championships.

The concise listing of scientific progress during 1928 impresses one in achievement, and the list of benefactions for the years forms a sound basis for renewed faith in humanity. The Daily Diary, the memorable events and the like form an indispensable record.

And a word to Dad. He will find in The World Almanac the answer to most of those puzzling questions the growing youngsters ask—no man could ever answer all—from the metric system to the kings of England and the loss of the Lusitania. Or he can tell the kid where to hunt up the answer himself, which may be better for both.

The World Almanac is published by The New York World. Price 60 cents, postpaid.

Turning Toward Asia

THE EMERGENCE of the United States as a great Asiatic power is described in the current Review of Reviews by Nicholas Roosevelt, student of far eastern affairs.

In the future, says Roosevelt, the United States will play the leading part in a new world in which Canada, Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines will form a trading community unparalleled in wealth and opportunity.

Our trade across the Pacific, he points out, has grown from 283,000,000 in 1900 to $2,064,000,000 in 1927, and is still going up. But he warns that "prestige" counts for a great deal in the far east, and that America's commercial and industrial advance there would be greatly hampered if we let our naval strength lapse.

Whether this last point be correct or not, there is no question but that tremendous opportunities are emerging on our west coast. Some huge new fortunes will be built by the Americans who see them ahead of their fellows.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"When I grow up I'm goin' to be an aviator and see the world."

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—In spite of the promises of the prohibition people, a friend of mine who is a prohibition agent, tells me that New York was never so wide open, and across the river in Hoboken I understand that one can get as good beer as can be purchased in Munich, Germany.

Even before the days of prohibition, there was some dispute on this subject. In fact a well known editor, who was a friend of mine, started out one evening, after he finished work to find some good Munich beer in New York. He became so disgusted with the samples of what had been represented to him as Munich beer that he took a ship for Germany without the formality of getting a leave of absence from his office, because he had reached the conclusion that the only place to get good Munich beer was in Munich.

In East Eighty-sixth street in New York in the German section, there are four or five places, which are, as far as the causual observer can see, wide open, and something that is supposed to be beer is served in old-fashioned seidels with a collar on it while the waiters sing German songs. These waiters are attired as Tirolean yodellus and look very fancy and impressive. My friend, the prohibition agent, however, informs me that this is not the real thing but near-beer in spite of the music and the costumes of the waiters.

This writer was riding with a friend through a town about 20 miles from New York the other night and the friend's chauffeur was stepping along about 50 miles an hour when a motorcycle cop drew up alongside and with a majestic wave of his hand instructed the chauffeur to pull into the side of the road.

With the precision always displayed by motorcycle policemen, he carefully parked his machine, took off his gloves, drew out his pad of summonses and prepared to write out the bad news.

"Pretend you're asleep," whispered the owner of the car and we, in the tonneau, did.

The cop started by bawling out the chauffeur in a good broad Irish brogue and asked him where the fire was and the customary sarcastic questions which are always employed to establish a cordial cop atmosphere. During these preliminaries, my friend snored a couple of times and then suddenly awoke with a start.

"Where are we?" he demanded. Apparently discovering the cop for the first time, he said:

"Has that blooming Irish chauffeur of mine been speeding again?" Mike, you're fired. Get out of the car, and I'll drive it myself."

The cop, an Irishman, at once began to sympathize with the chauffeur and urged the owner not to dismiss him for speeding. It was not long before the officer of the law had made himself a special representative and was pleading the chauffeur's cause. Finally the owner relented and agreed to retain the chauffeur and the cop, with a magnanimous wave of his hand, permitted us to proceed sans-summons. As we drove away, I said:

"That would have been pretty rough to fire your chauffeur for that."

The owner of the car replied with a chuckle.

"I had no idea of firing him. He has been with me for twenty years, but whenever you run into an Irish motorcycle cop that works. Some times I can even pass him off as a Jew if I find out that's what the cop is."

As we moved along the road I could see the chauffeur's shoulders bobbing up and down, evidently not from the motion of the car, but from only partly suppressed amusement.

STOCK-A-DAY

GUANTANAMO SUGAR CO.
Five-Year Record

The Guantanamo Sugar company ranks fifth among the Cuban sugar producers. The concern also owns the control of the Guantanama Railroad company. The corporation has 104,000 acres of sugar lands near Guantanamo, Cuba, and has three sugar factories with a capacity of 600,000 bags of raw sugar during the grinding season. Among other assets is a 1,000,000 gallon molasses storage tank at Deseo. The concern controls through leases additional lands to the extent of 15,850 in the cultivated regions and 60,000 acres of virgin forest.

The concern, under government restriction, produced in 1927-28 only about 75 per cent of the amount turned out in the 1926-27 crop year. There was a heavy deficit in 1921 due to price lowerings and while improvement has been shown since, profits have not approached war time periods. In 1928 the profits did not cover preferred dividend requirements. For the year ended Sept. 30, 1928, the deficit was $469,891. This compares with a net of $564,340 the previous year and $290,388 in 1926.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $1,784,600 in 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par, and 397,490 shares of no par common. The two classes of stock have equal voting power. Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred stock at the required rate. On the common nothing has been paid since 1921.

As of Sept. 30, 1928, total current assets amounted to $2,559,410, current liabilities were $2,612,595, and excess of liabilities over current assets was $53,185, and book value of the common stock amounted to $12.80 a share.

LIONS PLAN PARK

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 20.—The local Lions club has renewed its work in planning a city park, a project which was started some time ago. The building of a community auditorium plans have been discarded until the completion of the proposed park.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuse to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air, and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamar-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed.

The easy relief Brainard had been enjoying slid from him like a warming garment snatched away. Despite the Vicarion's tricks, he had still been unable to believe that a thing which he could see and hear could be less than real, living and present! Was he, then, in very fact caught in a trap? What was the trap? Could desire roused by a dream-being close with steel jaws upon the heart of a living man? Was she dream—or woman—that Darling of the Dawn? If she were woman and not still alive, but only had lived among dim distances of the past, what was his plight? Could he go back to the then and live in her life whom he could not bring to the now to live in his? And what of the lover she had sought, with a seeking he had fatuously thought for him? Had he been found at that sunrise trysting-place? If found, had he claimed possession of the prize, that historic lover,—historic, if only of yesterday? Could the luckless wight who loved her now bear to go back and look upon that other's fortune, unalterable, fixed forever in the scheme of things, changeless as truth, recorded eternally in a medium that is not erased? And could he—maddening thought!—look upon that love and live vicariously in the raptures of that other lover, through the damned, damning trick he had himself devised?

Vicarious living! Lightly offered to an unsuspecting world as a philter of fulfillment! A bait, which was the trap itself!

At daylight he went to his window and looked down upon the street. A little crowd was gathered even at that unearthly hour, about a spot of fascination in front of a theater called the Swan.

When Ushigi was up, Brainard called for more coffee. The Jap's start at him made him remember that he must take heed to his appearance, and he spent a long hour bathing and shaving and dressing with care. At 9 o'clock he went into his office, where Miss Ashcroft regarded him gravely and Miss Arden gave him a radiant smile that had the effect of having accumulated overnight. His younger secretary followed him into his private room and hovered about. Here was a woman plainly offering him loveliness and love. He was vaguely annoyed.

But he never knew what she said to him, or whether she spoke or was silent, or whether she left him or he left her. For on his desk, among the telegrams, the begging letters and the notes of threat and volunteered devotion lay a small sphere of blued-steel, unmarked, featureless—except that the light falling across its polished surfaced took on for his inflamed eyes a strange quality—sly, fleeting, sinister, like a furtive grin!

Found Out

He found himself, with the mysterious thing in his grasp, at the door of his studio, opening that door with a hand that trembled so that his keys jangled noisily. But he locked himself into the muffled room once more. In another moment he was breathlessly watching a scene that first amazed him, and then struck in like the edge of a tested blade which cuts through a callous to the quick. He saw himself, as he had sat here in this studio of his the night but one before, secure in what men have been wont to call privacy behind shut doors watching some projected scene excluded now from the unity of this, rapt, absorbed—caught and held by those fibers of a man's being that are at once infinitely stronger and more tender than fibers of flesh! Himself, as he had first looked upon his Dawn Maiden! Looking upon himself, he watched and listened to the external gestures and sounds of a man who has forgotten to consider his effect. He saw himself a thing toyed with by the power outside himself, made sport of, jerked like a puppet out of limp ease into rigid poise, dragged from his chair, propelled upon limbs moved by unseen strings in the hands of an invisible showman, and dropped like a discovered fraud at the edge of his little stage—its very curtains torn loose and falling as if to expose him to a grinning world.

Long after the thing was done he got up from his chair and mechanically shut off the light behind the blazing lens. Then he stood in the darkness and tried to think. What did it mean? It meant that the man who had set the trap for him had watched him fall into its jaws and struggle there. It meant that the bearded operator of the machine which had recorded that woodland scene had used the same machine to record its effect upon him. It meant that the fellow Honer had looked, as any reasoning creature might have known he would look, upon the result of the thing he had planned. It meant that an enemy knew that he, Brainard, was entangled in toils more ensnaring than a net of guilt. The man who had cut a peep-hole in the curtain of the past had fallen in love through it, madly, ludricously, helplessly, with the being of another world—who might be a creature of any clime or age, Druid damsel or modern maid, Judith or Jezebel, Lelah or Lorelei, or simple Anabel Lee! Snared! For no fantastic trick of the new laws he had introduced to a wondering world equaled those at that old law the world seemed to be just introducing to him—that strange law by which a man enshrines suddenly and irretrievably in a single figure all the endowments that make woman his goddess! A single figure—to which he raises his altar and makes his sacrifice!

To her identity his enemy alone held the clue—and his enemy knew that Brainard knew it. What that enemy might be able to do with it would depend wholly on what Brainard might be able to do without it!

Quite true that no man to whom he did not choose to reveal his secrets could readily steal them. But it was evident enough that they could be used by other hands than his. It was obvious that his own career lay open to a man who knew how to use his machines and had access to them. Why had it not occured to him before? For the simple reason that he hod not been conscious of any fact or episode in his career that would lend a handle by which another could wefld him. But now? What handle was this which Fate had riveted to his vital tissues?

Fool! Fool! But what of that? Every man is the fool of what he fears, or wants—if he fears or wants it enough!

He did not try to dodge now the fact of his predicament. He recognized it frankly enough. In the first flush of his power, he was balked of the thing he wanted first. To desire was added the quick blaze of resentment. That any obstacle should be set in any path of his infuriated him. To his new sense of the dictatorship thrust into his hands anything less than omnipotence would have been galling limitation. The fevered thrist of every sense in him for the utterly desirable thing was multiplied by the freshly conceived idea that he had only to reach out for whatever he desired, and by the sudden soft, transparent, intagible, insurmountable barrier he found in his way! If the rough path of true love tempers its quality, infatuation is inflamed by denial. Stirred and delighted, he was eager to grasp; crossed, he was on the fire to possess!

He stumbled across the studio in the dark and opened the door. Daylight half blinded him and he had to stop and wait for his eyes to regain their normal vision. Then he went back to his private office.

On his desk lay a telegram signed by a great banking firm in New York, requesting an interview for a representative on his way by airplane to the western coast; a clipping from a morning paper reporting the formation of a syndicate to control the product which he still held in his two hands; a letter from some crank promising to take from him his "unlawful and ungodly power" in a day by setting up vibrations that would wreck his plans for recording events—unless admitted to his councils and payroll; a statement from a crank of another stripe that the death of a woman who had taken her life in the street last night lay clearly at his door; a claim from an inventor that he controlled basic patents upon which Brainard had infringed; a sheet of note paper generously hieoglyphed with crude skulls and black hands, threatening to kill him by mysterious method if he did not surrender certain funds in less mysterious way; a letter from a so-called reform organization protesting in anvance against anticipated offenses of the Vicarion in giving the public ruinous things; advance proofs of a scientific article from a magazine, purporting to explain completely and explicitly to the unscientific reader the exact procedure for producing Liquid Life. Threats, cajolery, pleading, outcry, flattery, demand! In every form, from high source and low, came the messages of those who fasten upon the suddenly rising man in envy, jealousy, rivalry or mendicancy—enemies and parasites, wolves and leeches, tigers and ticks!

He pushed them all aside and took up a memorandum sheet of telephone calls. The attorneys for Mortimer and Ballard asked an appointment; a steel manufacturer's representative wanted to bid on supplies; newspapers begged for interviews; requests came from "personal friends" for very personal records to be shown in ultra-personal exclusiveness; calls from women who left their names and women who did not; old acquaintances looking him up and new ones discovering him worth it; offers of service from bond salesmen and masseurs; offers of creature comforts ranging from new apartments to new garters, from taxis to toothpaste, from lavender water to love!

He had not yet reached the point of delegating all his details. He had not accumulated half a staff. He had not foreseen the embarrassment of celebrity and advertised wealth. He had not foreseen the need power has for trustworthy tools. He had taken his aids for granted. Experience had not prepared him for his new position; imagination had not envisioned its circumstances. He had fancied offices with people in them; factories perhaps, with machines; secretaries, pretty and otherwise; managers, agents, clerks, confidential men. But he had selected few. He must give it attention—he must take advice.

But from the leafy mass of evidence attesting his triumph an aroma arose that soothed his shaking nerves. What with overnight liquor, sleeplessness, lack of food, and plethora of emotion, he needed it. He rang for Ushigi and ordered breakfast. Then he sat still, waiting—hardening.

There was but one way to deal with an enemy who waxed dangerous; that was to strike, quick, hard, once for all. There were ways to strike his one dangerous enemy—his one immediately dangerous enemy who had already struck at him. A condition of the possession of power was that it be used. Only the hand that could wield the thunderbolt was worthy of it. He did not smile now at the conceit that suggested this figure. With his determination rose the fury that would lend it force. And slowly before his mind's eye his means began to take shape.

As a preliminary he would have a condenser in the studio. He rose from his chair and started to go back to the small white room; he must consider where the machine would stand. As he closed the door in the hall, a man passed him and looked in his face. It was Honer! Honer, who chanced fortuitously to pass just at that instant—and look in his face. And the man smiled—respectfully, obsequiously, bowing.

Brainard passed on with a nod—but that smile went with him, one of those records to store away in the files of memory—a smile that was faint, repressed appraising, patient—jeering!

The illness of Phyllis, with the consequent indefinite postponement of her wedding day, the growing conviction that she was losing the love of Radley Brainard, the fear of what he was doing to himself and to the world, terribly emphasized for her by the events of that evening in, and in front of, The Swan, the knowledge that others near and dear to her were involved, and finally her whole sense of weakness and inefficiency in the great crisis in her life, reacted at last upon the girl as lesser crises had acted in lesser degrees before. All that she loved was at stake, and she was powerless to save it, yet her spirit rose against the fate that was sweeping her life bare.

But her sense of personal loss, her impulse to fight for her own, grew quickly into greater things. She began to see that what Brainard had done was unhinging the balance of things. She was well aware that she had only glimpsed the surface of forces he had set seething by the injection of a new element; but the half-considered opinions of others, the hasty criticisms aimed at him—the hints of a turning of many weathervanes to the new wind were sure signs of a mighty storm.

"Nobody upsets or defies natural laws," he had said on one of those days when they had first viewed his product. And fundamental to all natural law was the law of balance. If new laws had been discovered and used to tilt the universe off center, new laws would appear that would swing it back to equilibrium! Or old laws would act in new ways!

Great theory—small comfort, but something to cling to. Hope does not need much.

But her eyes were opened to see more. She saw the growing threat in some things she had only partially recognized before. John was definitely changed. She understood him to some degree. Her father was quite frank to admit that he had found a new interest—he talked about it a little, and went away to indulge it a great deal. Her mother was more of a mystery to Phyllis—but her mother clearly was caught by something she found in the private rooms at the Bonmar. It was beyond credence, but it was true—her mother went like a child to its play, into some dream-world that had been created for her, and told no one what it was.

Friends, outside her family circle, showed similar symptoms. Radley's private booths were filled. In the days following her evenings at The Swan she watched the throngs fill the streets for hours before the opening of the Vicarion's shows. People rushed to see its marvels, and then added themselves to the mobs that demanded more and more. The novelty, if it could be called by so slight a name, was enough to hold them captivated for a time; but the thing Phyllis had seen in faces of spectators in and out of theaters was no mere astonishment at a miracle.

Phyllis Decides

As for the girl herself, she recognized the drawing power of opportunity to look back upon the past, more the more she considered it. Happy always in her own immediate present, she had not been in the habit of trying to escape it; she had none of the motives born of that desire, though she could perfectly understand it in others. But she realized what it might mean to review one's own choice of what had made life joyous or interesting or thrilling in those moments that had been the happy present of other days; she could see how sweets could be concentrated, multiplied, their ultimate honeys extracted. But she remembered the half ribald newspaper debate that had bandied the words anodyne and anesthetic, as if either were a term on which to hang a joke.

She could discern multitudes of uses for the Vicarion—though its very name, which the public had chosen readily to adopt, singled out the use to which it would be mainly put. There was no doubt whatever that it would change the complexion of society. Publicity had often been held up as the cure-all for many social ills; and no publicity ever devised could compare with the Vicarion's revelations. If it were true, however, as the old maxim said, that "'Tis an ill wind that blows no one good," it was equally true that it would be hard to find a good that did not trail an attendant vice in its wake. And here the vice was the more instantly apparent.

If men realized that they could not commit crime or indulge vicious tendencies without exposure at the will of others conscious that their lives already contained damning things? Would they adopt the philosophy lightly expressed by Carol, or would they follow the example of the woman who had taken the only means of escape? And what of the vast majority who followed blindly that instinct to learn how, the other half lives, on which is based everything from back-fence gossip to the tomes on library shelves? If that appetite had been avid when fed upon the pale provender of mere words, what madness would arise over the red meat of suddenly accessible reality?

Again and again Phyllis came to that point in thought where her faculties staggered before the prospect. And then she invariably came back to the man she loved. Suddenly one day she recalled the awful thing John had described—the thing he had seen with Brainard, the thing that had been accidentally recorded, apparently, contained in an unlabeled bomb! And strangely she drew a terrifying parallel, thinking of Radley as a man at a half-understood machine, who might catch, if had not already caught, his hand in the cogs!

It was at this idea that all recollection of her own pique, her excellent reasons for resentment, her causes for righteous wrath, vanished. She loved him—and his hand was in the cogs. She had spent days coming to this vision; but once caught, she was in an agony to return to his side. Whether he wanted her or not—and he seemed to want her little enough—she must go back to him. Whether there was anything within the power of a loving woman to do or not, she must be with him. Here was a law that was resistless!

Epilepsy Is Curable

There are a number of diseases which may simulate epilepsy, but if a person has once seen a true epileptic fit, he can usually thereafter easily distinguish the disease. An epileptic attack is often preceded by some "aura" such as a hallucination, a sense of contriction in some part of the body, or a feeling of anxiety. At the beginning of the attack, the patient usually emits a sharp cry and falls unconscious upon the floor without making any effort to protect himself against injury from falling. The voluntary muscles undergo acute spasms followed by tonic convulsions, during which the muscles of the face and jaws may work furiously and often cause the tongue to be bitten. The mouth may froth. Loud breathing follows and then a profound sleep, from which it is impossible to awaken the patient for a time.

Patients sometimes have nocturnal attacks of epilepsy for years before they discover it. They may awaken in the morning with a sore tongue which they have bitten during sleep, or they may find themselves exhausted after what they often consider "nightmares."

These attacks may recur one after another or only once in several years. There are also minor attacks of epilepsy, known as petit mal, which are not typical fits, but only a momentary loss of consciousness, without falling, in which there may be a flushing of the face, sweating and headache, and a variety of similar symptoms.

Sometimes epilepsy is complicated by a twilight state, lasting from an hour to several months, wherein long journeys or other acts may take place without the patient's knowledge. Some of the acts in this stage may be quite natural, but they may be extremely violent. Murder or incendiarism may be committed. As the disease progresses, the patient's character changes — easily enrages, there is egotism, lying and an apparent disregard for ethics. Under excitement, criminal acts may be performed. The disease sometimes terminates in death or insanity.

Not every convulsion can be considered as epileptic however, since there are digestive convulsions of early childhood, hysterical attacks from tumor pressures, and various types of poisoning and intoxications.

Hereditary, accidents, alcoholism and various diseases and reflex conditions may influence the appearance of epilepsy. There seems to be some change in the superficial cells of the cortex (gliosis) which makes them especially susceptible to any form of toxemia.

For many years I have seen one case after another yield to treatment with fasting and dieting, and manipulative treatment to the intestines. Practically the only cases which cannot be cured by these methods are the ones caused by injuries to the brain from accidents. For these, surgery offers the only hope, and the patient sometimes recovers as soon as the brain pressure has been relieved.

Many experiments clearly prove that the intestines are the principal source of the toxins of epilepsy, but still many physicians have not profited by these facts. Epilepsy is still spoken of in whispers, and patients are told that there is no hope for them.

(In tomorrow's article I will explain the cure of epilepsy.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pyelitis

Question: J. B. K. asks—"What are the symptoms of pyelitis? Is it possible to have it at intervals for a period of years? Is it curable? If so, what is the cure?"

Answer: Those with pyelitis usually develop a fever, but the most characteristic diagnostic point is the presence of pus in the urine. It is often associated with other disorders. The treatment would depend upon the findings from a thorough diagnosis.

Bread With Meals

Question: Mrs. C. L. W. asks: "Will you please tell me why you never recommended bread with meals in your menus, only Melba toast? What harm is there in eating yeast breads and baking powder bread?"

Answer: I do recommend bread occasionally in my meals, but I believe most people use too much bread to the exclusion of other more vital foods. When any kind of bread is used it should be taken with non-starchy vegetables and not in addition to other starches or with protein foods.

Perspiring

Question: P. C. writes—"I am a girl of 21 years and perspire very much. What would you advise me to do to stop this?"

Answer: Take at least two sponge or shower baths daily. Rub the skin briskly with a towel each time, also increase your elimination of toxins through the lungs, kidneys and bowels.

Vernon Theater Man Fined for Sunday Show

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 20.—Robert Sparks, manager of Dent Theaters, Inc., of this city, charged with operation of moving picture show on Sunday, was found guilty by a jury in Justice of Peace H. C. Justin's court Friday afternoon, and the minimum fine of $20 was assessed. Notice of an appeal has been filed by his attorney, John Storey.

There are two more similar charges pending against Mr. Sparks. The case yesterday was the third in which he appeared in court within the last five weeks. He plead guilty to the first charge, and was assessed the minimum fine of $20. A trial last week resulted in a hung jury.

Floydada Pastor Offers Prizes for Best Essays

Special to The Record News

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Jan. 20.—P. D. O'Brien, pastor of the First Baptist church, Floydada, is offering two prizes for best essays to be submitted in a contest at Wayland college in which all students are eligible. Essays are to be written on the two subjects, "The Advantages of a Junior College," and "The Advantages of Wayland College." Fifteen dollars is the award in each contest.

The essays will be printed in phamplet form for distribution over the territory, according to O'Brien. Wayland college officials are endorsing the contest, and Dean Z. T. Huff will have supervision of the contest.

Grandfield Boy Reported Missing by Relatives

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 20.—Joseph Malone, 15, of this city, is reported to be missing by relatives of Crane, Texas, whom he was supposed to be visiting. He left Grandfield a number of weeks ago. The relatives, however, report that he has not been heard of since leaving here.

The boy had been living with his grandmother, Mrs. Julia Malone, in this city, who believes he was lured away by two men, who told him that his grandfather, of Crane, Texas, was ill.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

LONGHORNS FORLORN HOPE TO STOP ARKANSAS BASKETEERS

PORKERS SEEM 'IN' WITH TITLE

Razorbacks Set New Marks For High Scoring

CONFERENCE STANDING

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
Arkansas	6	0	1.000
Texas	2	0	1.000
Aggies	2	1	.666
Rice	1	1	.500

Baylor	0	3	.000
T. C. U.	0	0	.000

(By The Associated Press)

It looks like it's up to the Texas University Longhorns to uphold the Lone Star State in basket ball. It isn't reasonable to suppose that even Coach Littlefield's pupils will stop the triumphant march of the Arkansas University Razorbacks toward their fourth consecutive basket ball pennant, but the boys in the conference would like to see some team at least make the Porkers work hard.

On the strength of their 29 to 19 victory over Southern Methodist university Saturday night the Longhorns look like the class of the Texas contingent. So long as Arkansas' lean young giants intend to go on winning the championship, the Texas bloc might as well choose up and have a private argument of its own.

Aggies Still in Running

The Aggies remained in the running by tripping up the Texas Christian Horned Frogs Saturday night at College Station, 27 to 22.

While Longhorns, Mustangs, Aggies et al. were fiddling around here in Texas, the Razorbacks got the young Baylor university Bears cornered over at Fayetteville and walloped them, 71 to 23, incidentally setting a new all-time record for scoring in a single game. With their captain, Tom Pickell, spearing the basket in rare form, aided by his stellar running mate, Wear Schoonover, the Porkers outclassed Coach Jennings' hopefuls. The Bears did not register a field goal in the first half.

Pickell Leads Scoring

Pickell's 24 points ran his total for the season to 91 and put him back in the lead among the individual scorers. Schoonover, with 11, dropped into second place, four points behind his captain. There is a long gap between the two Arkansas aces and the next high man, Albo Brown of Southern Methodist, with 35.

Other leading scorers are A. Hale, Arkansas, and Smith, Baylor, each with 32; Eury, T. C. U., 30; Holt, Arkansas, and Roberson, T. C. U., 28; Hess, Rice and Webster, Aggies, 26; Johnson, S. M. U., 25; Caudle Aggies, 23; Lambert, Arkansas, 20; Brock, Texas and Keeton, Aggies, 16; Pruett, Arkansas, 14; Wilson Baylor, 13; Bonner, Rice, 12; McDonnall, T. C. U., and Wray, Texas, 11.

The Stagger Plan

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (INS)—All towns will be interested in New York's efforts to make jay-walking punishable by amendments.

It is the general idea among traffic engineers that all pedestrians should be treated as spies.

Still, they cannot make walking a crime provided that you can prove you were wearing your own shoes at the time.

At present, crossing a street in New York is a game of red and green checkers.

You leave the curb on a green light and your first move lands you in the middle of a one-way street.

Just as you are about to jump a Ford, the green lights switch on and you are crowned by a double truck.

Commissioner Whalen's stagger plan was tried out this week with great success among Grover.

Mr. Waldo Prabble signed the first health testimonial. His last will and document read.

"I tried your stagger plan. And was arrested for intoxication."

Mrs. Sam Dink wrote in:

"My husband went out for a walk last Monday and came home dangling on the crane of a wrecking car."

Donald Kerblatt, a visitor to New York, spent his two weeks' vacation in New York trying to cross Fifth avenue on a weak pair of ankles.

When interviewed in an endowed bed in the emergency ward of the Cat and Pedestrian hospital, Mr. Kerblatt said:

"I think the Swiss carved cuckoo has the right idea about life. He sticks out his neck and then pulls it back."

Walking is not a crime, yet.

The Kellogg-Briand treaty reduces the cruising radius of ambitious ankle excursionists. We were seriously thinking of joining the army just to take a legal stroll.

There is still a wire-walker in the Ringling circus. But he is taking bicycle lessons.

The old proverb about fools rushing in where angels fear to tread was written about city traffic.

When the fool leaves one side of the street he is an angel before he gets to the other.

Navy Football Captain Undergoes Operation

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 20. (UP)—Eddie J. Burke, captain and guard on the 1928 Navy football team, was reported resting easily in an Annapolis hospital tonight where he was operated on for appendicitis. Burke's operation today followed intermittent attacks of the ailment which had bothered him during the football season.

Why They Called Him the Man Mauler

Rickard Starts Back for Texas After Selling Saloon at Nome

But With $65,000 in Pockets, He Hears of Nevada Gold Strike, and Opens Establishment at Goldfield

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Tex Rickard sold out his interest in the Northern saloon at Nome to George Murphy for $50,000. This conveys some idea of what a gold mine the place must have been. In addition to the $50,000, Tex had $15,000 of his own which he had saved. That was his capital when he headed south, intending to spend a few days in San Francisco before returning to Texas where he planned to buy a ranch.

In recalling those days long afterward, Rickard said to me:

"I guess I was a sap not to go through with my Texas plans because the people who finally bought the Texas land that I intended to buy became multi-millionaires through the discovery of oil and gas on the property.

"But, somehow or other, I still had that hankering to see what Jim Corbett looked like then though he had lost the heavyweight title to Bob Fitzsimmons while I was in Alaska. I guess it was because Jim was the man who had beaten John L. Sullivan. That was what lured me to Frisco. And going there changed the whole course of my life. Many years passed before I saw the plains of Texas again."

Before closing the Alaskan chapter of Rickard's life and passing on to his promotion of the Gans-Nelson fight at Goldfield there are a few things that should be mentioned. One is that it was in Nome in 1902 that Tex had his first attack of appendicitis, the disease that eventually was to cause his death.

Dr. A. E. Southworth, now a practicing physician in Seattle, was called in. His version of that incident is interesting:

"My office was over Frank Scow's saloon, a few doors from Rickard's place. One day a man came in and told me that Tex was sick in bed and had a terrible pain in his right side. I went to him and found that it was his appendix that was causing the trouble. There were no facilities in Nome at that time for performing the operation that I knew was necessary. But there was plenty of ice and by using this I managed to relieve him.

Might Be Alive Today

"I can remember very well advising Rickard to start immediately for some city where he could find a modern hospital and have his appendix removed. He said he would, but when the pain subsided and he got on his feet again he said he didn't think the operation would be necessary. I told him it was only a question of time before it would return, but he didn't heed my warning. If he had taken my advice he would probably be alive today."

Rickard established friendships in Nome that were to last throughout his life. One of his bartenders on the original Northern saloon is now a wealthy business man in Seattle. One of his partners in that enterprise, George Murphy, accumulated a fortune and also settled in Seattle where he was a Democratic county chairman at the time of his death.

The Rev. Dr. Raymond Robbins, now prominent in the interchurch movement in Chicago, was a young preacher in Nome at the time Tex Rickard was running the Northern saloon there. He and Tex became fast friends and one Sunday Robbins made Rickard the subject of his sermon. He told his congregation of rough miners to hold Tex Rickard, the honest gambler, as their ideal and to mold their lives after his.

That was considered good stuff at that time and in that country where honest men were recognized regardless of what their personal habits might be. It probably wouldn't be so hot today.

Paul H. Watt, now a prominent hotel man in Seattle, recalls that Rickard was elected to the Nome city council. Speaking of those days Mr. Watt says:

Tex Good Official

"Tex was a good city official for those times, when there was no reform legislation to worry about. He was progressive in his political ideas. He spent money readily and lost it with the same fixed smile that he won it. Many a miner gone broke found a new stake awaiting him at the Northern where Tex spun the wheel.

"It was a common occurrence to see him hand out a $20 gold piece to a miner down on his luck. Nobody knows how many miners went back into the hills with Rickard's money financing them."

Ira D. Orton, now a conservative lawyer in Seattle, is another who can remember Rickard in those Nome days. At that time Mr. Orton had his law offices over the El Dorado saloon, which was directly next door to the Northern. He was then known as "The In-and-Out Kid." Recalling those distant days, he says:

"The Northern earned the reputation of being the squarest gambling house in the territory. Because of this, most of the play was around Rickard's tables. Tex was always there to see that there was no funny business and the big sports came in droves to play in his games."

When Tex passed the Alaskan frontier for the last time and headed for San Francisco he said to himself:

"I've got $65,000 in cash and now I'm going to settle down and enjoy myself for a while."

Little did he suspect that he was just entering a phase of his life that was to be even more tumultuous than the Alaskan days had been.

In Frisco he began knocking about the hotel lobbies and saloons, probably trying to catch a glimpse of his pet hero, James J. Corbett. In one of the saloons he ran into a friend he had known in Dawson City. At the time Tex was planning to pack up his things in a day or so and start back to Texas. That chance meeting changed the entire course of his life.

After five minutes conversation with that friend Tex Rickard had forgotten all about Texas and his desire to take things easy and enjoy himself. Once more he was fired with the gold fever. That friend told him of the gold, silver and copper strikes that had been made in Tonopah and Goldfield. Tex was enthralled.

"That's right down my alley," he declared. "I've always wanted to see Nevada anyhow!"

An hour later his bags were packed and he was headed for the Nevada desert and one of the most picturesque episodes of his career. A few days later we find him staking out claims for himself at Goldfield and preparing to open another gambling house and saloon to be known as The Northern.

Sharkey to Fight Christner Friday

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. (AP)—K. O. Christner, Akron, Ohio, gets a chance this week to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery set up for the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling bout at Miami Beach Feb. 27. He battles Sharkey in a 10-round match in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

The chances are William F. Carey and his garden associates will not rest easily until after this battle is over, if then.

Council to Consider Two Ordinances Tonight

Two ordinances will come before the Wichita Falls city council for third and final readings at the Monday night meeting in the council chamber in the Memorial auditorium.

One would prohibit the washing of automobiles on streets, sidewalks and in alleys. The other would eliminate a conflict in existing ordinances by giving the city engineer the right to issue permits for housemoving after all city ordinances pertaining to housemoving have been complied with. The present ordinances give this duty to the city clerk, in one ordinance and to the city engineer in another.

VERNON LIONS GIVEN LETTERS

1928 Grid Team Honor Men Named

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 20.—Letter awards for 17 members of the Vernon high school football team, 1928 season, were announced by Coach Heinie Weir at a meeting of the squad in the high school building.

The awards were made at the close of the second semester in order that the scholastic record of each player, who merits the letter by reason of service, might be taken into consideration. This system of delaying awards was adopted by the executive committee of District No. 1 for the purpose of discouraging participation in athletics of any student who might be enrolled in school for football alone.

The following were letter men: Roy Rodman, Clifford Bowden, Vernon Manis, Bill Price, Clyde Sharp (deseased), Clifford Hindman, Hubert Stevens, John Coffee Sam Parker, Emmett Crawford, Johnny Gelhausen, Robert Cox (captain), Byron Phillips, Kenneth Lawrence, Hubert Baird, Waldon Sharp and Lemuel Ramsey.

Havana-Miami Rates Reduced

Steamship Fares Cut For Strib-Sharkey Fight

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 20. (UP)—With the vanguard of newspaper correspondents beginning to arrive for the Stribling-Sharkey heavyweight bout on Feb. 27, it was announced today that steamship fares between this point and Havana will be reduced in order to encourage Cuban fight fans to attend the show.

Railway officials have advised Jack Dempsey that trackage is available to accommodate 1,533 Pullman cars, and he was informed that the greater Miami area afforded hotel and apartment accommodations for from 300,000 to 400,000 persons.

Young Stribling will do no more of his airplane houring until after his engagement with Sharkey, Dempsey informed the southern boxer today.

"Stay on the ground," Dempsey told Stribling. "Stay just as close to the ground as you can and look both ways before crossing the street."

Stribling is due here Feb. 1 to establish a training camp.

Brooklyn Robins Release Pair of Rook Outfielders

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. (AP)—Max West and Overton Tremper, outfielders, were released today on option by Brooklyn, West to Newark, of the International league, and Tremper to Macon of the South Atlantic association.

West, purchased from Waco in the Texas league at the close of the 1927 season, played last year with Atlanta.

Paavo Nurmi May Run In Texas Track Meets

AUSTIN, Jan. 20. (AP)—Working with Southern Methodist university, managers of the annual Texas relays, to be held here March 29, are endeavoring to bring some of the most brilliant track and field performers in the country to Texas for the relay season.

Nurmi, the Finnish long distance star, is one of the stars sought.

Corsicana Ball Fans Keep Lone Star Club

CORSICANA, Texas, Jan. 20. (AP)—Belying rumors that the Corsicana Lone Star league baseball franchise would be turned over to the Dallas Texas league team, baseball fans in a meeting here today decided to raise enough money in a public campaign to keep the club in the East Texas loop.

Nurmi Is Still Winged Mercury

Paavo Starts Another Campaign in America

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. (AP)—A bit more bald than when he left here four years ago and with a little less spring in his hitching stride, Paavo Nurmi, Finland's phantom, has made a successful start on his second campaign of record breaking in American indoor track meets.

Three unofficial world's marks fell before the Finn in his first race of the new tour at the Brooklyn college games last night when he outdistanced a fair field to win a special event at the odd distance of 3,000 yards.

Paavo led Ove Anderson, fully 100 yards. The time was 7:43 2-5 more than two seconds better than the best previous mark, made by Nurmi in 1925. Times were taken at six points along the route and two besides the final one went down as new records.

At 2,500 meters he was timed in 6:58 and at 1 5-8 miles the watch snapped at 7:23 2-5. Neither is a standard distance.

Bluejackets Defeat Air Corps, 11 to 10

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 20. (AP)—Overcoming a three-goal handicap, the Wichita Falls Bluejackets defeated the Air Corps training center 11 to 10 here today. Horace Robbins shot three goals in the seventh chukker, in the low goal event of the sixth annual Southwestern Midwinter Polo tournament.

In the meantime the 12th and 15th field artillery squads had a merry battle resulting in a 6-5 victory for the 15th, aided by a two-goal handicap besides a gift goal when a pony kicked the ball through the uprights.

Quakers Present Sacred Program

Rev. and Mrs. Jesse A. Bates of Roosevelt, Okla., members of the Quaker (Friends) church, presented a program of sacred solos and duets Sunday afternoon at station KGKO during the laymen's hour from 4 to 5 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Bates also played the guitar, while Mrs. Bates furnished the piano accompaniments.

Harry Hines, who has been the regular lay speaker for this hour for several weeks, delivered a short sermon Sunday.

The Bible class hour, from 4 to 5 o'clock, was given to the mixed quartet from the Grant Street Methodist church, and to Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor.

The program for Monday night was announced as follows:

7 to 7:30—Chamber of Commerce program.

7:30 to 8:30—Little Rovers' orchestra.

8:30 to 9—Musical program.

9 to 10—Houser's Fiddling band.

NATIONAL LOOP LOOKS TO KIDS

Promising Juveniles Seek Berths This Spring

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (UP)—Future baseball stars are concealed in the list of 1929 newcomers to the National league compiled for the United Press by Cullen Cain, head of the league's service bureau.

The National league has been fortunate for the past several seasons in securing and developing many fine young stars. Last season more than 20 rookies made good.

Among the more prominent are Del Bissonette, Brooklyn, first base; Wally Roettger, St. Louis, outfield; Everett Purdy, Cincinnati, outfield; Art Whitney, Philadelphia, third base; Dick Bartell, Pittsburgh, shortstop; Fred Maguire, Chicago, second base; Martin Callaghan, Cincinnati, outfield; Don Hurst, Philadelphia, first base; Andy Cohen, New York, second base; Charlie Klein, Philadelphia, outfield; Ralston Hemsley, Pittsburgh, catcher; Ervin Brame, Pittsburgh, pitcher; Carl Hubbell, New York, pitcher, and Pat Malone, Chicago, pitcher.

The Interesting Rookie

"Of all the many uncertainties and fascinations of our national game of baseball," Cain says, "there is none more uncertain and more fascinating than what the minor leaguer will do in his first big league year.

"The future life and favor of the game depends upon him, for, sure as fate, he must some day take the place of the slipping stars of today."

Although the St. Louis Cardinals have acquired only six new players for the coming season, Billy Southworth expects at least one of them to blossom into one of the brightest stars in the National league.

Gelbert Great Prospect

Charley Gelbert, who played shortstop at Rochester under Southworth last year, is the player in question. He batted .310 last season in 164 games and led the league in runs scored, 145, and walks, 97. Southworth believes he was the greatest infielder in minor leagues last season.

The Pirates have picked up a promising infielder in J. M. Stroner, purchased from the Wichita Western league club, where he hit .367. Steve Swetonic, the Indianapolis pitching star, is expected to add pitching strength to the Pirates' staff.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson has high praise for Billy Rhiel, second baseman who was with the Brooklyn Robins last season but was sent back to Atlanta for more seasoning. Rhiel batted .329. Robbie expects him to play third base or in the outfield.

The Boston Braves have a brilliant pitching prospect in Socks Seibold, obtained from the Chicago Cubs in the Hornsby trade. Seibold won 22 games and lost six for the Reading International league club last season.

One of the New York Giants' best looking newcomers is Tony Kaufmann, who failed to make the major league grade as a pitcher. He is coming back as an outfielder, with a batting average of .393 compiled at Rochester last year.

Confessed Negro Robber Identified as Slayer

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (AP)—Leonard Shadlow, one of four negroes who confessed robbing the Franklin Trust and Savings bank Friday, today was identified, police said, as the man who shot and killed Matthew Taylor, theater manager, during a holdup three weeks ago.

CHILDRESS TO AID FARMERS

Terracing Plans Before Commissioners

and poultry raising as a part of the farm program.

The crop yield of the county as a whole in 1928 was satisfactory. The total cotton crop is estimated at 30,000 bales by Eugene Stringer, cotton buyer for Dorsey Brothers, who is regarded as an authority. This is just about 2,496 bales short of the yield of 1927. For a period of 12 years, including 1927, the annual average production of cotton in Childress county has been 23,348 bales.

Supplementing the revenue from the cotton crop, other row crops and grain, has been that derived from dairying and poultry raising. This latter has reached proportions that commands respect.

A majority of the business men of Childress are positive in the belief that in the not distant future the cow and the hen will become the major sources of revenue and cotton a supplementary farm product.

Dairying Gains

According to competent authorities there has been little difficulty in converting the farmers of Childress county to belief in the reliability of the cow and the hen as providers of ready cash the year round. Statistics compiled in one agricultural survey by a foreign agency places the number of farmers engaged to a greater or less extent in dairying at 50 per cent of the total and the number of poultry raisers at 75 per cent.

County Farm Agent Bill Pinson, as this is written, cannot be reached for statistics compiled by his office due to his being engaged in extensive terracing operations.

In this connection, it is said that Mr. Pinson at this time has demands to aid in terracing several thousand acres.

Mr. Pinson appeared before the commissioners court and explained that the new requirements of his department demanded heavy duty equipment. It is said that the commissioners will order purchase of the equipment required at the expense of the county.

Official Sees Need

In discussing Mr. Pinson's request, County Judge W. B. Howard said:

"I consider terracing one of the most important jobs of the county agent. We have a young county agent who is a willing and efficient worker. I feel it is our duty to provide him with the equipment necessary to do this work in a thorough manner."

The influence of the progress of the farmer on the prosperity of the business interests of Childress is shown in statements that follow.

Childress banks in their statements of the current call reflect a condition of prosperity that is convincing testimony to the prodigal productivity of the soil in the "heart of the green belt."

Total of deposits in Childress banks is $3,802,981.97.

The First National bank, according to statement furnished by Cashier Joe S. Ward, had deposits of $2,324,969.29 as compared with $1,761,846.02 the previous year. Capital stock of this bank is $50,000, surplus and undivided profits $115,384.32, compared with $80,305.26 Resources total $2,490,693.61.

The City National bank, according to the current statement furnished by Cashier T. L. Hardin, had deposits of $924,336.10, as compared with $940,378.60 the previous year. Capital stock of the City National is $100,000, surplus and undivided profits $33,538.96, compared with $30,939.03. Resources total $1,057,875.06.

Deposits of the First State bank increased $100,852.61 in 1928. Capital stock is $25,000, surplus and undivided profits $11,157.51, compared with $5,037.44.

Kirkland Bank

First State bank of Kirkland, Childress county, capital stock $35,000, lists individual deposits subject to check at $164,637.50 and surplus and undivided profits at $5,905.98.

First State bank of Tell, Childress county capital stock $10,000, list individual deposits subject to check at $173,401.73 and surplus and undivided profits at $8,800.

"The year 1928 was the biggest of the more than 21 years in which this firm has been engaged in business in Childress," declared D. K. Lyster, president and general manager of the Norris Implement and Furniture company. This concern occupies one of the largest mercantile buildings in Childress in addition to a number of large warehouses for the storage of implements, farm hardware and furniture.

"Our old accounts due have been pretty well cleaned up and we are starting the new year with a feeling of confidence.

"We have the finest town and the finest county in Northwest Texas," Mr. Lyster added.

Implements Bought

"This concern is selling more implements at this time of the year than in any year that I can recall," was the response to an inquiry made of B. V. Jones, of Jones and Felt, Childress hardware and implement dealers. "Our business in sales of implements since the first of the year has been at least one-third over the corresponding period of last year. The demand so far has been largely for listers and harrows. Later on cultivators will be in demand.

"Practically all of our customers liquidated their indebtedness before the end of the last year.

"It is our opinion that most of the farmers of Childress county are in comparatively easy financial circumstances. It has been our observation that a growing number of farmers do not require extensive credit accommodations, due to the fact that the poultry and dairying industries are more and more each year being included in the enterprises of the farm.

"Many of our customers pay cash the year round for their requirements from this store. These latter are in poultry raising and dairying as a major source of revenue."

Farm prosperity in the territory surrounding Childress is contributing directly to the prosperity of the utilities companies, it was learned from local managers.

Farm Electrification

According to Carl Hudson, local manager, the West Texas Utilities company, electric service company, of late has extended lines to several farm homes. Mr. Hudson stated that a demonstration was being contemplated, illustrating the practicability of electrification of the farm home.

G. L. Taylor, local manager of the Northern Texas Utility company, stated that many farmers between Childress and Kirkland, nine miles east, and in the vicinity of Kirkland, have their homes connected with the trunk line of the gas company. One farmer, J. W. Whitehead, had gas piped to all of his tenant houses. School houses around Kirkland are heated by gas.

From the Red river to Shamrock, Mr. Taylor said, more than 40 farms are connected with the trunk line of the gas company. Some farmers having Delco lighting and power plants are using gas for fuel, finding it more economical than gasoline.

"A number of farms I have visited have all the conveniences of the city home."

Home demonstration work, directed by Miss Mary Sitton, has had much to do with modernization of the farm home, in the opinion of Mr. Taylor.

One "Pessimist"

Louis G. Rainey, president of the Louis G. Rainey Investment company, real estate and loan brokers, is probably the only pessimist to be found in Childress and notwithstanding his temporary depression he hopes soon to vision a silver lining in the somber clouds.

Mr. Rainey, a few days ago, was deploring the fact that he had several customers besieging his offices, carrying an abundance of cash and clamoring to purchase improved farms in the vicinity of Childress—which he was unable to supply.

"Owners of improved farms hereabouts," said Mr. Rainey, "assert they are willing to sell but the price they place on their holdings is prohibitive. The truth of the matter is that they are contented and do not wish to sell."

Wichita Scout Area To Elect Officers

The annual election of officers and making of plans for the year of the Wichita area of the Boy Scouts of America will occupy the time of the area council when it meets Tuesday night in the offices of Frank Creighton in the Memorial auditorium at 7:30 o'clock.

The area includes Wichita, Archer, Wilbarger, Clay, Young, Baylor, Jack and Throckmorton counties, Mr. Creighton said, and a good attendance is expected. James H. Allison of Wichita Falls is the present president of the area.

COMMISSION ON GAME FAVORED

Wichita Sportsmen For Board of Six Members

Much interest is being shown by local sportsmen in a bill now before the legislature at Austin which proposes to place the fish, game and oyster affairs of the state in the hands of a commission of three men who are to be appointed by the governor, and who would employ two salaried officers for full time service in the administration of department business.

As written, the bill provides for the appointment Sept. 1 of this year of three members of a commission to be known as the game, fish and oyster commission. The office pays no salary, but commissioners' expenses and a per diem allowance of $10 while engaged in state business is provided. The bill further provides for the employment of a full time executive secretary at a salary of $5,000 annually, and an assistant secretary whose salary shall be $4,200 per year. Meetings of the commission are to be held every three months, beginning in January, and as often at other times as required by affairs of the department, according to the proposed measure.

The bill was submitted simultaneously in the senate and house a few days ago.

The senate committee to which it was referred reported the bill favorably for passage as written, it was said, but the game and fisheries committee of the house of representatives returned the bill with several amendments after extensive deliberations.

It was made to read that members of the commission shall be six in number, and shall be appointed "by the governor from different sections of the state"; the per diem allowance was struck out, and the salaries of the executive secretary and his assistant was reduced from $5,000 and $4,200 respectively, to $4,200 and $3,600. The most important of the proposed amendments, local sportsmen said, was that providing for the appointment of six instead of three members, and the specifications that they shall represent different sections of the state.

Will J. Tucker, present fish and game commissioner; Dr. J. A. Stanfield of Fort Worth, and Ben G. Oneal, president of the Izaak Walton league chapter in Wichita Falls, were called before the house committee to discuss the measure, and the proposed amendments.

Mr. Oneal stated that large numbers of local members of the Izaak Walton league, and others who are interested in game conservation, wired and wrote to representatives of this district who are now in Austin, urging the importance of having at least six members on a commission in event the affairs of the fish and game department be placed in the hands of such a body.

GRAFTON TALKS ON FAITH CITY

Essentials for Building Of Metropolis Told

Unselfish and competent leadership, newspapers whose management is conscious of their responsibility to the public, educational and charitable institutions, and active, vigorous churches were extolled as the requisites for a "city four-square" by Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in his sermon Sunday morning to a large congregation which included many persons not members of that church who attended to hear Dr. Grafton's discussion of "The City that Faith Built."

The speaker chose for his text the sixteenth verse of the twenty-first chapter of Revelations: "And the city lieth four square. The length and the breadth and the height are equal." John, the author of the book, was described as being essentially a man of the city, having spent the greater part of his life in Jerusalem and Ephesus, which were among the foremost cities of that period. His description of heaven took the form of a picture of a great city.

City Building Not New

"The development of community centers began very early in man's history," said Dr. Grafton. "Rapidly growing commercial cities are not peculiar to this age. From the day when there were first sufficient people upon the earth for one group to be foreign to another, the need for co-operative life has existed. From meager beginnings in the ages before antiquity, man has grouped in increasingly large numbers.

"The written history of the last five centuries are replete with description of cities with merchant princes, wealthy bankers, heads of great commercial organizations, temples of worship, libraries, schools, paved highways, public baths and numerous other centers of community activity.

"Many of these cities are known to the present generation only as plague spots, dens of wickedness, and 'modern Sodoms.' While the history of cities is filled with stories of excessive vice, the entire significance and bequest of that city to posterity is not found in that element of sin.

"Large cities have become an economic necessity, due to the increasingly complex life which we live. The assembly and distribution of what people eat and wear, the buying and selling incident to that intricate system of transfer of commodities, demand the centralization of commercial, industrial, scientific and social enterprises.

Cities Have Lure

"The city of today has a fascination and lure for the boy and girl in the country who have visited and read of it. Its potential possibilities and wonderful opportunities challenge the youth of the land and they are coming in great numbers to the cities. In this influx of young people is found the greatest responsibility of the city to be truly 'one that faith built.'

"History shows too many of the great cities of the past ruined by the incompetency and selfish greed of those to whom the government was intrusted. This can not be a city that faith built unless its leaders justify by unfailing honesty and uprightness of purpose the faith reposed in them by the people whom they serve. I believe that no city in America has been blessed with more competent and faithful leadership in administration of all governmental, industrial, civic, educational and social agencies than this city in which we live.

Clean Newspapers

"The press must be clean and honest in a city built on faith. What the people read daily in our newspapers is more influential upon their lives than any other source of information. In this respect we are to be congratulated, for whatever else you may say about our newspapers, you will admit that from the standpoint of observing a moral code, they are above the average paper.

"The city that faith built must have its hospitals, its libraries, its study and musical organizations, its schools and colleges. The system of education in our country is changing rapidly. The movement is from church to state schools with but little moral supervision exercised over the students. The establishment of the college which is now within the grasp of our city would be a timely and valuable addition to our equipment for offering all that a 'faithful city' can offer to its young people.

Need for Y. M. C. A.

"Our text calls for a four-square city; but gives measurements for only three sides. There is a side that cannot be measured. We have no yard-stick that will apply to it. That is the spiritual side. No city, nor any other group of people, can achieve permanent success unless they keep fresh the streams of spiritual power to cleanse and refine the other streams of city life. Civic virtue dies when the churches die. Morals and ethics pass when the altar fires cease to burn in our places of worship.

"There is an institution which we do not have, and which is needed badly in Wichita Falls to supplement the work of our many churches. This is a Y. M. C. A. Some years ago it seemed that the citizens here were about to inaugurate a movement which would give this city a Y. M. C. A., but counsel at the last moment called the time unpropitious, and the effort was abandoned. I think the time is ripe when we should renew our attention to the need for such an institution here, and that the city of faith should set this among its earliest objectives."

Stewart Fight Assumes International Role

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (US)—The battle to win leadership of Standard Oil company (Indiana) assumed international aspects today.

With John D. Rockefeller interests reaching out everywhere for stockholders' proxies, and Col. Robert W. Stewart, whom they seek to depose as head of the corporation, back in Chicago today from New York determined to retain his post, efforts to corral foreign-held proxies were disclosed.

Today { At the Theaters

MAJESTIC: Alice White in "Naughty Baby." Fables. Topics. Paramount newsreel.

STRAND: Lois Wilson, H. B. Warner and Monte Blue in "Conquest," a vitaphone show. Three acts vitaphone vaudeville. Pathe news.

OLYMPIC: Tom Lewis and his company in musical comedy. On the screen: Hoot Gibson in "King of the Rodeo." Comedy. Fox news.

MISSION: "Sin Town." Western. Comedy.

GEM: "The Big Hop." Comedy.

◇ ◇ ◇

Amusements are rather looking up in Wichita Falls with some good movies, vaudeville, three Shakespearian plays and a musical comedy due in the immediate future.

◇ ◇ ◇

And Wichita Falls is not behind Dallas or Fort Worth in its vaudeville.

This observation is based on a little vacation which the writer of this column has been enjoying for the past two weeks.

The vaudeville seen at the Majestic theater here is, to begin with, the same identical vaudeville that Fort Worth and Dallas are enjoying. Furthermore, those two towns have no other vaudeville, so this city is seeing as good vaudeville as they are. In the third place, this city is seeing it ahead of them. And here's the dope on that. The vaudeville shows swing to Wichita Falls from the west and are here Thursday and Friday. They then go to Fort Worth and then to Dallas so that the vaudeville seen here last Thursday and Friday is now in Fort Worth at the Majestic there. Next week it will be "new stuff" to the Dallasites. And that's that.

◇ ◇ ◇

And another thing. Lou Tellegen, who was recently here, was in Dallas last week. He gave out an interview there saying he was through with the stage as the talkies have everything their way. He said the talkies represent the entertainment of the future and that the stage is "through." It seems funny that Lou is not in the talkies if this is a fact instead of on the vaudeville stage.

◇ ◇ ◇

"Hamlet" will be at the Memorial autditorium Friday night. "The Merchant of Venice" will be here Saturday afternoon, and "Macbeth" will be here Saturday night. Fritz Leiber, who is just about the greatest American actor of the Shakespearian field today, is the star.

◇ ◇ ◇

Vincent Youmans' "Hit the Deck," the musical comedy which features the famous "Hallelujah" song, will be at the Majestic theater Monday, Jan. 28.

Fritz Leiber, who will appear here Friday and Saturday with his own Shakespearian company in "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Macbeth."

Kiwanis to Observe 14th Anniversary

Observance of the fourteenth anniversary of the founding of the Kiwanis club organization will mark the program to be given at the regular weekly meeting of the local club Monday noon at the Kemp hotel, according to J. L. Jackson Jr., who is in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

The week of Jan. 20-26 will be observed by the 1,758 Kiwanis clubs in the United States and Canada, according to Mr. Jackson, comprising a total membership of more than 102,000. The first Kiwanis club meeting was held Jan. 21, 1915, in Detroit, Mich. O. S. Cummings of Dallas is now the president of Kiwanis International.

The principal objectives of the organization for 1929 will be discussed by members of the committee on Kiwanis education, it was announced. Special musical numbers and a singsong of Kiwanis songs will be included in Monday's program.

C. L. Smith, Employe Of Continental, Dies

C. L. Smith, 28, employe of the Continental oil company, died in a local hospital at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the Merkle Undertaking company's parlors by Rev. C. G. Lee of Petrolia.

The Dundee Masonic lodge No. 994 and local Masons will also officiate at the services.

The body will be forwarded to Fort Worth where services in charge of the Southside Masonic lodge will be held from the Gause-Ware Undertaking company parlors.

Mr. Smith is survived by his wife, his parents, two brothers and three sisters.

Attendance Cut by Winter Snap Sunday

The measure of control on Sunday school attendance exercised by the weather was illustrated in the reports submitted by 24 local churches which showed a loss of 622 from the attendance registered on Jan. 13. Decreases were shown by 22 of the 24 reporting schools, the two exceptions being the First Presbyterian church with a gain of 32 and the Salvation Army whose mark exceeded that of the preceding Sunday by the margin of one person.

The First Baptist church retained its leadership in total attendance, with 1,004 present. The total attendance was given as 5,667.

TAX ASSESSING STARTS SOON

Renditions to Be Under Way in Week

The first work on tax assessment for the present year will start about the end of this present week, according to an announcement made Sunday by W. R. Hyer, city tax assessor and collector.

Rendition blanks were given to the printers last week, and delivery to the assessor's office in the Memorial auditorium is expected in the next few days.

Four deputy tax assessors are expected to start to work the last of the week, calling on business firms and private residences to get the renditions, and it is expected that they will be on the work for three to four months.

The usual procedure is for them to go over the ground with the property owner and, if possible, to arrive at a fair value for rendition for the year. The tax payer then signs the rendition and his worries generally are over—save for the actual paying of the tax a number of months later.

Twelfth Juror Sought In Nashville Trial

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 20. (AP)—A call went out today for 250 eligible citizens in the hope that one of them would be accepted as the twelfth juror in the trial of Walter Liggett, grain dealer, member of a prominent family, accused of the murder of Turney Cunningham, hotel manager.

Meanwhile Mrs. Cunningham stood ready to take the witness stand for the state and admit that her companionship with Liggett brought a crisis between the two men.

Wichita Girl And Henriettan Wed Here Sunday

Surprising their friends, Miss Ona Work, of Wichita Falls, and H. L. Bear, of Henrietta, were married at noon Sunday at the home of the bride, 1304 Monroe street.

The impressive double ring ceremony was solemnized by Rev. J. L. Hunt, of Henrietta. The bride was charming in a black and honeycomb ensemble.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Bear left for Dallas and other points in Texas. After the first of February they will make their home in Henrietta.

Miss Work has been librarian at Zundelowitz Junior high school for the past three years. Mr. Bear is a well known business man in Henrietta.

Old Rip May Be Given Pedestal

EASTLAND, Texas, Jan. 20. (AP)—"Old Rip," Eastland's superannuated horned frog who died here yesterday, may spend the rest of eternity on the scene of his greatest triumph, the court house square here where he is alleged to have slept 31 years immured in the courthouse cornerstone.

Will M. Wood, owner of the eguanidae, said today that at least three resting places had been suggested for the body. The frog may be mounted in the new $300,000 courthouse here, already embellished by sculpture depicting "Old Rip." A suggestion has been made that the mounted animal be given to Texas Christian university, since athletics of that school own the nickname "horned frogs" and a suggestion has come from other quarters the body be given to the Smithsonian institution.

RECORD QUAIL SEASON ENDS

Duck Shooting Lasts 11 Days More

One of the best quail seasons experienced in this section in several years closed last Wednesday, while 11 more days of shooting remain before the close of season which has given local hunters the thinnest showing of ducks afforded them in the last decade, according to discussion prevalent among sportsmen in the city.

Many hunters have reported unfailing success in bagging an abundance of quail with very little hunting in almost any section of the country during the last few weeks. Following the first cold spell, which dropped on this district late in November, ducks were found in profusion on Lake Kemp, but it was noted that the lower water level had greatly decreased the former area of feeding grounds on the shallow flats near the edge of the lake.

The scarcity of wild fowl at the big lake has been attributed in part to this change in the water line, and partly to the comparatively open winter which has prevailed further north. These birds are said to remain in any location where ample feeding grounds are found until a freeze is imminent, and such conditions have existed commonly in states north of Texas until after Jan. 1, it was reported.

During the last two weeks hunters from this city have reported an increase in the number of ducks stopping in this vicinity. Practically no geese have been reported.

While the bass fishing is closed, many good catches of crappie are being brought back from Lake Kemp, it was said. Crappie fishing is limited now chiefly to the deep waters of the lake, with unusually large fish of this variety being brought up from 50 and 60 feet of water.

Michigan University President May Resign

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 20 (AP)—The resignation of Dr. Clarence C. Little as president of the University of Michigan, it was reported in university circles today, may be presented at the regular monthly meeting of the board of regents tomorrow night.

Dr. Little declared he had not resigned and Shirley W. Smith, secretary of the board of regents, said the board had not received the resignation.

The report persisted, however, that the resignation would be presented and accepted because of a disagreement over policies of administration.

Oil Worker Found Dead In Electra Hotel Room

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Jan. 20—Leo Moore, about 30, employe in the oil fields here, was found dead in his bed in a local hotel this morning. W. H. Kaufman, justice of the peace, in a coroner's verdict, held that death was due to an attack of acute indigestion.

He registered at the hotel here Jan. 7, giving Vernon as his home, officials said. Papers on his person gave his wife's address as 2136 West Seventh street, Fort Worth. The body is being held here until his wife is informed.

Thousands Are Protecting Themselves Against Worry—Plan Sent Free for Your Inspection

The Postal Life and Casualty Insurance Co., 703 Moriarity Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., is issuing a new accident policy that pays up to $100 a month for 24 months in case of total disability—$1,000 in case of death, and costs less than 1c a day—$3.50 a year.

Over 40,000 men, women and children over 10 years of age already have this protection. No costly examination is required—you do not even have to pay a cent until you have thoroughly examined the policy.

Simply send name, address, age, beneficiary's name and relationship and they will send this policy on 10 days' Free inspection.

If you are not entirely satisfied after a thorough examination that it is the best and cheapest insurance you can buy, just return the policy and you owe nothing. Write them—Adv.

Throat Sore, Fever— Be Careful, May Be Flu

If you have a sore throat and are feverish, go to bed and call a doctor. And MOST IMPORTANT get the poisons out of your system at once by cleaning out your bowels. The best intestinal cleanser is the simple glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline compound, known as Adlerika. This acts in ½ to 2 hours on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only).

Adlerika often brings out foul matter which may have poisoned you for months and which you would never believe was in your system.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, well-known New York bacteriologist, after testing Adlerika on living subjects, reports: "Adlerika markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel! Just ONE spoonful gives wonderful relief in chronic constipation, GAS bloating, sour stomach and sick headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

It contains no aloes, calomel or senna, therefore acting without griping or discomfort of any kind. Adlerika is sold by leading druggists in tin-foiled bottles.—Adv.
