Texans say yes to lottery; Houston mayor ousted

By ARNIE STAPLETON
Associated Press Writer

Now even dreams are bigger in Texas. The lottery hit its biggest winning number yet Tuesday when Texans overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment to lift a 146-year-old ban on the numbers game. Texas will join more than 30 other states with lotteries. It had been the largest without one.

Voters also adopted a $1.1 billion prison bond proposal and in Houston, ousted Mayor Kathy Whitmire, whose 10-year reign ended when wealthy developer Bob Lanier and state Rep. Sylvester Turner qualified for a Dec. 3 runoff.

In Dallas, voters elected Steve Bartlett, a five-term Republican congressman who resigned to run for mayor. He will lead a new council that gives widespread political power to the city's ethnic minorities for the first time.

Backers of the lottery hailed it as a shot in the arm for the state government, forced to raise taxes repeatedly since the devastating oil and real estate busts of 1986. Opponents said it would encourage gambling and not prevent higher taxes.

Texas approved the lottery by a 64 percent-to-36 percent margin. With all but two precincts reporting, the results were 1,331,618 in favor and 733,288 opposed.

Instant games will start by July 1, 1992, and computerized "lotto" games in January 1993. The lottery is estimated to generate $462 million for the current two-year budget cycle and $1 billion for the 1994-95 budget.

"We badly need that additional revenue to educate our young, to fight crime and to bring jobs to Texas," said Gov. Ann Richards. She had urged lawmakers to put the lottery on the ballot — something they had refused to do eight times since 1983.

In Houston, the nation's fourth-largest city will get a new mayor for the first time in a decade when Lanier and Turner face each other next month.

Lanier, 66, and Turner, 37, sent five-term incumbent Whitmire to defeat for the first time ever. Lanier cashed in on public opposition to a controversial $1 billion monorail project favored by Mrs. Whitmire.

Turner, trying to become Houston's first black mayor, drew support from black voters who accounted for much of Whitmire's backing in her previous five successful races.

Lanier got 136,918 votes, or 44 percent, to Turner's 109,801, or 35 percent. Whitmire had 62,608, or 20 percent.

Whitmire, 45, had come under fire for not reacting to crime problems and for her insistence in promoting the monorail project.

During her tenure, she presided over a city ravaged by the oil industry bust of the mid-1980s, then took credit for Houston's subsequent economic resurgence.

She was Houston's first woman mayor and broke new ground by appointing the city's first black police chief and then Houston's first female police chief.

In Dallas, Bartlett won 54 percent of the vote in a crowded field of mayoral candidates.

With all ballots counted, Bartlett had 84,785 votes. His nearest opponent, lawyer Kathryn Cain, had 41,985 votes or 27 percent. Forest Smith, a former president of the Greater Dallas Chamber of Commerce, had 20,887 votes, or 13 percent.

Incumbent Annette Strauss did not seek a third two-year term.

Bartlett, who resigned from Congress March 11, will lead a new City Council that was expanded to 14 single member districts to settle a 3-year-old lawsuit over minority representation.

With all but the mayor's post chosen from single-member districts, the elections were considered one of the most important in the city's 150-year history.

Depending on the outcome of Nov. 19 runoffs, at least six and possibly seven of the 14 council seats will be held by minorities.

"I think a newly elected, a newly empowered, a newly energized City Council will be able to put the City Hall itself onto the track of problem-solving," said Bartlett.

Of the $1.1 billion in bonds approved, the Legislature has earmarked $672 million for new prison beds, $41 million for youth correctional facilities and $35 million for mental health and mental retardation.

The money would build 25,300 new prison beds — 13,300 maximum-security and 12,000 for drug and alcohol treatment, which is said to be unprecedented.

In El Paso, voters narrowly approved a proposal to increase the help to thousands of border residents who are in dire need of improved water and sewer service.

The amendment will allow the state to spend another $150 million on projects that provide clean water and flush toilets to people living in substandard subdivisions, known as colonias, along the Texas-Mexico border.

Voters passed 11 of 13 amendments on the ballot, including one authorizing Texas to issue up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to finance loans to college and university students.

Rejected were a measure to allow cities, counties or junior college districts to exempt from taxation "freepoint" tangible personal property within an enterprise zone and a proposal that would have allowed the state Employees Retirement System and the Teacher Retirement System to invest assets in such a "manner" as their boards may consider "prudent" rather than in such "securities" the boards may consider "prudent investments."

Pampans reject Sunday sale of beer within city limits, but issue isn't over

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

In one of the largest voter turnouts in recent history, Pampans rejected Sunday beer sales inside the city limits.

Fifty-seven percent of the 3,530 tabulated votes were against Sunday beer sales, instead supporting a 45-year prohibition.

The margin failed 1,998 to 1,532 with all wards reporting.

First Baptist Church Pastor Darrel Rains reacted to news of the defeat by saying, "I'm just pleased the people of Pampa have spoken about their desire to limit the use of alcohol. Hopefully this will help us be a safer and better community to live in."

Mayor Richard Peet, after watching the votes being tabulated at City Hall, said he was happy with the outcome.

"Personally, you know my stand," Peet said. "I've been against the sale of beer on Sunday from the beginning and as an individual I'm satisfied with the outcome. Probably more important is that the people themselves had the opportunity to express how they feel. It didn't come as a decree from City Hall."

Jesse Whitson, owner of the Harvey Mart at 304 E. 17th and a supporter of lifting the ban, was undaunted by news of the defeat.

"I feel fine," he said. "We tried to get this and it didn't work. We will just try it again."

City Secretary Phyllis Jeffers said the City Charter sets no limit on the number of times an issue can be voted on if proponents can muster enough support through petitions. Blaming evangelicals for the defeat, Whitson said the majority of Pampans will now respond to the churches' stand by defeating the law once and for all the next time it comes to the ballot.

"The churches pushed against this and that's what pushed it down," Whitson said. "People don't realize beer is already being sold. We are just asking for things to be fair. We will try it again."

"It was close this time," Whitson said. "It won't take much for us to get it passed now."

Norman Rushing, pastor of Central Baptist Church, expressed surprise that the issue could be voted on over and over.

"I'm pleased with the turnout and people speaking their hearts. That is what this country is all about, isn't it?" he said. "Each time it arises I will urge people to stand behind their convictions and voice them as they have done tonight."

While ministers expressed joy the measure failed, they also said the evening was one of mixed emotions since the lottery appeared on its way to overwhelming statewide approval.

A heavy voter turnout in Pampa caused tabulation of the beer issue ballots to take over one-and-a-half hours.

In early voting prior to Tuesday, 210 citizens registered their feelings on the issue, with 129 opposed and 81 voters in favor.

During Tuesday's polling, 3,347 votes were cast. However, only 3,530 of the total 3,557 votes could be counted, Jeffers said.

"On some of the ballots people will vote both for and against it, others are defaced. You can't tell what their intentions were, so you can't count them," she said.

Some of those working at the polls complained to Jeffers that voters were unusually surly during this election.

One woman reported she was cursed by some who came to vote.

The Sunday beer sales measure was defeated in each of the four city wards, with the 57 percent opposition holding just about equal in all parts of Pampa.

Whitson said he will begin his campaign to get the issue back in front of voters "in the next couple of days."

Opponents countered with promises they will continue their opposition efforts through local churches each time the issue surfaces.

Pampa policeman back on duty after vehicle accident

Pampa Police Officer Nick Fortner passed a drug and alcohol screening test and is being returned to street duty, officials with the department said this morning.

Fortner's cruiser ran into another car Friday at 3:16 p.m. at the intersection of Reid and Denver.

Police reports showed Fortner was on his way to an accident that happened at 3:10 p.m. when he failed to yield the right two blocks from the scene of the first accident.

A 1979 Oldsmobile driven by Cecilia Hopper, 30, 803 Denver, had entered the intersection and was hit on the passenger side by Fortner's police car.

The Oldsmobile was pushed up into a yard at 700 S. Reid, damaging the home's fence and front porch, an accident report indicates.

A passenger in the Hopper vehicle, 48-year-old Shirley Remy of 803 E. Denver, was taken to Coronado Hospital, where she was admitted for injuries. She was released over the weekend.

Twelve-year-old David Bogges of 826 E. Denver was taken by private vehicle for treatment, the accident report shows.

Lt. Steve Chance said a routine drug and alcohol test was administered to Fortner following the accident.

"I was notified yesterday by city personnel director Phyllis Jeffers that Officer Fortner had passed the drug screening test and will be re-assigned to driving duties," said Lt. Steve Chance, director of the patrol division.

City officials said an city accident review board will look into the collision, probably sometime next week.

Their findings will be forwarded to Police Chief Jim Laramore for any action.

Sgt. Jess Wallace, who investigated the accident, determined Hopper's vehicle was traveling too fast for the icy, snow-packed conditions of Pampa's roads Friday. She was issued two citations at the scene.

Gray County turns down lottery

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The lottery in Gray County was narrowly defeated by 292 votes Tuesday, bolstered by a heavy anti-lottery lobbying effort by some of the county's church leaders.

However, statewide and in Carson, Hemphill, Roberts and Wheeler counties the lottery issue — Proposition 11 — passed with games predicted to start statewide on July 1. As of this morning, tallies showed the lottery passed with 64 percent of Texas voters in favor and 36 against.

In Gray County, 2,390 people voted for the lottery while 2,682 voted against, which equals 47.1 percent voting for the lottery and 52.9 percent voting against the lottery. Precincts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 10, 12 and 13 in Gray County all voted in favor of the lottery with Precincts 6, 8, 9, 11, and 14 voting against the measure.

Numerous pastors of churches in the county persuaded and urged their congregation members to vote against the lottery, with some preaching Sunday sermons on the matter. The Baptist General Convention distributed anti-lottery literature to churches and media throughout the state.

Early voting totals in Gray County also went against the lottery with 432 voting against and 242 voting for the measure.

County Clerk Wanda Carter said that the one day of Sunday voting in the early voting period drew a lot of people after church.

Carson County voters approved the lottery with an 873-589 vote. Hemphill County residents voted 521-465 in favor of the lottery. Roberts County said yes to the lottery with a 174-156 vote. Wheeler County residents voted 742-641 in favor of Proposition 11.

Backers of the lottery throughout the state say the game will help the state budget and prevent higher taxes. By the overwhelming vote in favor of the lottery, the constitutional amendment will end a 146-year-old ban and allow the state to start the lottery operation.

Gov. Ann Richards had urged the Legislature to put the lottery issue to a vote of the people.

Richards told the Associated Press on Tuesday, "I've always said the people of Texas wanted a lottery, and today they proved that."

Anti-lottery literature, however, said the lottery will be a push toward more gambling, vice and crime.

In a published brochure, sent out by the group Texans Who Care, the literature states, "Its supporters make the lottery sound like a magic cure for the taxpayer blues. But the fact is, even under the most optimistic predictions, the lottery will save you only pennies a day ... The lottery is a sham. It won't keep the income tax at bay. It won't bring in the money Texas desperately needs for education, health care and economic development."

"And when you consider how much the lottery will cost us in terms of irreparable harm to our children, families and businesses, it's clear that a lottery in Texas isn't worth it."

The governor estimates that the lottery will bring in $500 million in its first year of operation. The lottery is expected to bring in $1 billion for the 1994-95 budget, according to State Comptroller John Sharp.

Alanreed, Lefors voters nix school consolidation with McLean district

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Alanreed and Lefors independent school district voters gave the thumbs down signal Tuesday to consolidation of their school districts into the North Fork Consolidated Independent School District.

Voters in McLean Independent School District approved the measure by a wide margin.

For the three school districts to be consolidated, a majority vote was needed by the voters in each of the three school districts. By state law, the same three school districts could not consider consolidating again for three years.

However, a combination of two of the school districts could have the matter on the ballot sooner, if a petition was filed. Or any of the three could consider consolidating with another school district, if the proper petition was filed to put the issue to a vote.

Alanreed voters turned out 85 percent of its registered voters to defeat the consolidation with a 22-for, 33-against vote.

Lefors voters said "no" to the consolidation by a 63-183 vote with 51 percent of the registered voters casting ballots.

McLean voters OK'd the consolidation measure with 43 percent of its registered voters casting ballots in the 241-96 vote.

The McLean Independent School District Board of Trustees enthusiastically got behind the consolidation issue by unanimously voting to issue a public statement support the joining together of the three school districts.

Lefors school board members, although initially in support of the consolidation, began telephoning people and talking to residents as election day drew near and urged them to vote "no" because of too many unresolved issues.

Garrel Roberson, Lefors ISD school board president, said Tuesday night that the vote turned out the way he expected. "There are still some things we didn't have worked out yet. There was too much at risk there really to be for it all the way."

By state law, McLean ISD school board would have had control, during the first year, if the consolidation passed because it has the most student population. It could have had all seven seats on the school board. However, in negotiations with Lefors and Alanreed, the McLean trustees had said they would voluntarily give up two seats to Lefors and one to Alanreed, leaving four for McLean.

Lefors school trustees wanted to be on an equal footing with McLean and wanted to have control of three school board seats. That point of disagreement, Lefors school trustees contend, was a major problem in the consolidation issue.

Dick Bode, president of the Alanreed school board, said this morning that he had no idea prior to the election which way Alanreed would vote on the consolidation issue.

Bode said the Alanreed school board chose not to take a position on the consolidation issue. "We didn't call anybody and we didn't communicate with the people. We felt like this was an issue they needed to resolve for themselves. I guess the people have spoken," Bode said.

The Alanreed school board president said that at first, he believed public opinion in Alanreed would have gone for the consolidation.

However, he said, there was a change as the election drew near.

"It's hard to tell how people would think. They were not particularly open about their feelings on this issue ... It's not unexpected entirely (the defeat of the consolidation). There was a substantial change of opinion in the last month or so."

Gwen Henley, a McLean school board member, said today, "I'm really disappointed. I'm not too surprised, though, after attending the Lefors town meeting."

"I think that's real sad, overall," Henley said of the failed consolidation, adding that she believed it would have been best for the students in all three school districts.

McLean ISD Superintendent Stanley Lamb said today that he would guess there are a lot of disappointed people in McLean today, since 241 voted for the consolidation and only 96 voted against the issue.

"They (Lefors) wanted us to give up another seat, and our board wasn't willing to do that. It was unfortunate the way things occurred. I guess we'll go on and make the best of it," Lamb said.

The McLean superintendent did say that there was verbal word given near the time of the election by the McLean school board to Lefors that the McLean school board would agree not to make decisions, if the consolidation passed, until the general election in May 1993 when board members from each of the school districts would be elected to serve on the new consolidated board.

Lamb said he believed the public statement made by the McLean school board in favor of the consolidation carried some weight in the way McLean residents voted.

Hemphill voters decline county road plan

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

CANADIAN - Hemphill County voters declined to adopt the optional county road system with a 395-551 vote Tuesday with 43 percent of the registered voters casting ballots on the issue.

Overall, 45 percent of the registered voters in Hemphill County cast ballots in the 13 proposed constitutional amendments election.

In September, the Hemphill County Commissioners Court received a petition seeking an election to vote on adoption of an optional county road system.

The county voters were voting on whether to adopt central management of road building and maintenance in all four of the county commissioners precincts.

According to state law, the issue had to be put before the voters and approved by a majority vote in order to be adopted.

Some voters were concerned by what the Canadian Record called "ridiculous charges being circulated about the potential effect" of the election, including that all or almost all of the road hands would be discharged.

In an editorial published recently in the Canadian paper, the writer pointed out that state law permits adoption of such a county road system to be directed by a county road engineer appointed by and responsible to the County Commissioners Court.

"It does not do away with the office of, or the responsibilities of, the County Commissioners Court as the elected officers responsible for management of county business, including the maintenance of its roads and bridges," according to the editorial.

The editorial also pointed out that the law would provide "the construction and maintenance of county roads, the ownership and use of all county roads, the ownership and use of all county road department equipment, and the administration of the county road department shall be on the basis of the county as a whole, without regard to commissioners precincts."

Area voters favor prison bond proposal by a 63 percent margin

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

With backing from area governmental, civic and economic leaders, Proposition 4 - providing bonds for more state prison construction - passed handily in Gray County in Tuesday's constitutional amendments election.

The measure, which received voters' approval statewide, also passed in three area counties - Carson, Roberts and Wheeler. Hemphill County voters turned down the proposal.

Area-wide in the five counties, Proposition 4 carried with 5,777 votes, or 63 percent of the 9,110 ballots cast. Turning down the bonds were 3,333 voters, or 37 percent.

In Gray County, Proposition 4 had received endorsement from the Gray County Commissioners Court, Pampa City Commission, the Industrial Foundation and the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. Officials are hoping that with the measure passing, the 1,000-bed Rufe Jordan Unit might be expanded with additional beds.

The state is considering adding 25,000 beds to the current prison inmate occupancy level.

Pampa City Manager Glen Hackler said this morning, "This is very favorable for Pampa and Gray County and any hopes we might have for a possible prison expansion."

"Proposals are due in Austin by January 15 for new prison beds pursuant to this prison bond issue. The Board of Criminal Justice has always made it clear that support for the issues by constituency is as important as the proposal itself. It is significant that Pampa passed it," he said.

"We are preparing a submission for an expanded prison unit east of Pampa. When we connected utilities and other incentives we had in mind a unit approximately two times the size that we currently have (under construction). There are tremendous cost savings in having units adjacent to one another.

"It's no secret we would like to see more jobs here, and the people of Pampa and Gray County have shown their support in an early survey and throughout the process. We view all this as a long-term partnership with the state," Hackler said.

At a County Commission meeting last month, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said the additional prison beds would relieve overcrowded county jails and possibly bring more state jobs to the Panhandle through new prisons.

Gray County voters approved the constitutional amendment by 65 percent, with 3,267 casting ballots in favor and 1,763 - 35 percent - against.

In Carson County, 872 voters - 61 percent - favored Proposition 4, with 562 - 39 percent - voting against the measure.

Roberts County voters favored the proposition by 65 percent, with 211 ballots for and 113 - 35 percent - against.

In Wheeler County, Proposition 4 received its largest support in the five-county area. The measure carried by 975 votes, or 72 percent, with 383 votes - 28 percent - cast against it.

Hemphill County voters went against the area trend, with 53 percent rejecting Proposition 4 by 512 against and 452 - 47 percent - in favor of the bond issue.

Proposition 4 authorizes the issuance of up to $1.1 billion in general obligation bonds for acquiring, constructing or equipping new prisons or related punishment, correctional and/or substance abuse facilities, in addition to allowing for major repairs or renovations of existing facilities.

The issuance of the bonds will be dependent upon action taken by state legislators as they decide which prisons to build or repair.

Gray County turned out a higher percentage of voters in Tuesday's election than the state predicted would vote in the 13 proposed constitutional amendments election.

The state predicted a 30 percent voter turnout. But in Gray County, 40 percent of the 13,119 registered voters cast ballots. Likewise, in Carson, Hemphill, Roberts and Wheeler counties, higher than 35 percent of the registered voters turned out Tuesday.

"It was more than we usually have in constitutional amendment elections," Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said of the turnout.

Asked what brought the voters out, Carter said, "I think it was the lottery and the beer sales (on city of Pampa ballot). Clear and simple."

Also voters in Alanreed, Lefors and McLean independent school districts helped turn out voters in the issue of whether the three districts should consolidate. That measure was defeated.

In Hemphill County, a local issue was also part of the balloting as voters defeated the adoption of a county road system by a 395-551 vote. Hemphill County had 46 percent of its registered voters casting ballots. "It was a fairly good turnout," a spokeswoman in Hemphill County said of the vote.

Roberts County had 44 percent of its 747 registered voters casting ballots in the constitutional amendments election.

Carson and Wheeler counties each had 36 percent of the registered voters taking part in the Tuesday election.

Statewide, 11 of the 13 propositions passed. Proposition 5, which dealt with giving tax exemptions in the enterprise zones failed. Proposition 7, which dealt with allowing the state retirement system trustees to invest the funds in a manner the board considered prudent, also failed.

In Carson, Gray, Hemphill, Roberts and Wheeler counties, voters not only voted against Propositions 5 and 7, but in all five counties, voted against Propositions 2 and 3.

Proposition 2 is the repayment of the Department of Transportation from monies expended to assist the Texas Turnpike Authority in the construction, maintenance, and operations of turnpikes, toll roads and toll bridges. Proposition 3 was an enhancement of veterans' housing.

In Carson County, voters also voted against Proposition 6, 10 and 12. In Gray County, voters also went against Propositions 10 and 11. Hemphill County residents also cast ballots against Propositions 4, 6, 9, 10 and 12. Roberts County voters also cast ballots against Propositions 6, 8, 10 and 12. In Wheeler County, voters also went against Proposition 6.

See related chart on Page 3 for the county votes on the propositions.

All vote totals are unofficial and will have to be canvassed before becoming the official results. In Gray County, the Commissioners Court is scheduled to canvass the votes at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the second floor courtroom of the county courthouse.

AMENDMENTS AT A GLANCE

AUSTIN (AP) — Here are summaries of the 13 proposed constitutional amendments, and how they fared in balloting Tuesday.

1 — Home Rule

Under strict reading of current law, a home rule city loses the authority to amend its charter if population falls to 5,000 or less. In such a case, the charter must be amended by an act of the Legislature. The amendment would allow home rule cities to amend their charters regardless of population.

PASSED, 81 percent to 19 percent.

2 — Toll Roads

The amendment would permit the Legislature to authorize the Texas Department of Transportation to allocate funds to the Texas Turnpike Authority for the construction of turnpikes, toll roads or toll bridges. If the money comes from the state highway fund, it must be repaid from tolls or other turnpike revenue.

PASSED, 51 percent to 49 percent.

3 — Veterans Investments

To allow the Legislature to determine how to invest proceeds of Veterans' Land Board bonds, eliminating the constitutional limitation on board investments to U.S. bonds or obligations. It also would permit the Legislature to delegate to the board other duties, responsibilities and functions for the board's housing program, as it already does for the land program.

PASSED, 54 percent to 46 percent.

4 — Prison Bonds

To permit the state to authorize up to $1.1 billion in general obligation bonds to acquire, build and equip facilities for prisons, youth corrections and mental health-retardation services; to repair such existing facilities; or to repair other facilities for use as prisons or substance abuse punishment centers.

PASSED, 68 percent to 32 percent.

5 — Freeport Exemptions

To allow cities, counties or junior college districts to exempt from taxation "freeport" tangible personal property within an enterprise zone. The property is stored or processed in the zone and transported from the state within 175 days.

FAILED, 63 percent to 37 percent.

6 — Ethics Commission

To establish a Texas Ethics Commission as a constitutional agency. It would allow the commission to propose to the voters legislative salary amounts higher than the current $600 a month and to independently set the amount of daily expenses legislators could receive.

PASSED, 53 percent to 47 percent.

7 — Retirement Investments

To allow the state Employees Retirement System and the Teacher Retirement System to invest assets in such a "manner" as their boards may consider "prudent" rather than in such "securities" the boards may consider "prudent investments."

FAILED, 63 percent to 37 percent.

8 — Bond Debt

Allowing creation of state debt through propositions that would be submitted to voters, but which would not amend the Texas Constitution. A proposition to create state debt would have to be authorized by at least two-thirds of the House and Senate, then ratified by a majority of voters. The ballot proposition would be required to describe the amount, purpose and repayment source of the debt.

PASSED, 72 percent to 28 percent.

9 — Land Patents

The amendment would allow qualified landholders who, in good faith, purchased land dedicated to the public school fund to obtain title from the General Land Office to those lands. Certain lands, including beaches and state-owned land producing under a mineral lease, would be excluded from the amendment.

PASSED, 64 percent to 36 percent.

10 — Water Corporations

To allow the Legislature to exempt property owned by a non-profit water or sewer corporation from property taxes. To qualify, the property would have to be reasonably necessary for and used in acquisition, treatment, storage, transportation, sale or distribution of water or waste water service.

PASSED, 54 percent to 46 percent.

11 — Lottery

To allow the state government to operate lotteries, with revenue generated by the games going to the state.

PASSED, 64 percent to 36 percent.

12 — Colonia Water

To provide that up to 50 percent ($250 million), rather than 20 percent ($100 million) of the $500 million in water development bonds authorized in 1989 may be issued for subsidized loans and grants for water and sewer projects in economically distressed areas.

PASSED, 55 percent to 45 percent.

13 — College Loans

Authorizing the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to issue up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to finance loans to college and university students.

PASSED, 65 percent to 35 percent.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Too many fees block recovery

When you're feeling flush, raise taxes. When you're feeling strapped, raise taxes. When you're enjoying the benefits of an economic boom, raise taxes. When you're suffering from the pinch of a recession, raise taxes.

That seems to be the philosophy of most of our local governments, especially regarding a hidden tax known as a "developer fee." In the midst of a recession, one felt especially by a construction industry so vital to many local economies, and in between tut-tutting about the lamentable shortage of affordable housing, local officials just keep increasing the fees charged to developers for the privilege of building a house or apartment.

Fees, of course, vary from one locale to another. Fees in south Orange County, Calif., for example, typically range from $25,000 to $30,000 per home. According to the Building Industry Association, they have been rising faster than the cost of living this year — as usual. And adding more to the costs of housing, buildings and other construction projects.

Proponents claim such fees can help increase city government revenue, sometimes in the six-figure range over a 12-month period in bigger communities. But such static analysis ignores the economic impact of taxes and fees. Consider:

In the early 1980s, the Reagan administration reduced marginal tax rates — first gradually, then dramatically. Congressional Budget Office analysts predicted a decline in tax revenues. But the actual result was not only an increase in tax revenues, but an increase in the percentage of total taxes paid by high-income taxpayers.

The reason was simple to anyone who understands that incentives matter to most people. Faced with a lower tax penalty on economic activity, people engaged in more of it. And wealthy people, looking at a lower tax rate, took money out of unproductive shelters and put it into more productive investments.

The process works the other way, too. Last fall, Congress passed and President Bush signed into law a new 10 percent "luxury" tax on boats, planes, jewelry and cars above certain prices. But rather than generate new revenue, the new tax has cost the Treasury millions of dollars and thrown thousands of people out of work. Even the well-to-do sometimes have to budget their expenditures for luxuries.

According to a Congressional Joint Economic Committee report in July, boat builders have laid off 7,600 employees. The JEC predicts that by year's end 1,470 Americans in aircraft-related industries will lose their jobs because of the tax.

The moral? Reduce taxes, especially during a recession, especially on an industry that is so vital to many local economies.

The lynch mob won't go home

WASHINGTON — In the aftermath of the hearings on Judge Clarence Thomas, we are witnessing an atmosphere of virulence beyond anything I can recall in recent years. A poisonous smog has settled. Thomas has now been sworn in as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, but his enemies won't let go.

This is unlike Washington. The unrelenting hostility to Thomas violates all the canons of civility and protocol by which the capital lives. Grudges are expensive. At the centers of power one cannot afford to keep them long. When the Senate rejected Robert Bork four years ago, the wounds were deep and painful, but once the vote was taken the smoke of battle lifted and the city went on about its business.

This is different. It is as if some long-festering boil on the body politic had been lanced. All the pus has erupted. Old infections bubble up. Ted Kennedy goes to Massachusetts to publicly confess his sins. In Wyoming, Alan Simpson says mea culpa, mea culpa, my fault, my fault.

This city serves as headquarters, or at least as rallying ground, for resurgent, militant feminism. The major black organizations are here. The principal news media are here. Professional, full-time advocates of civil rights are here. These are talented people, highly paid. They lost in the Senate, and they bitterly hate to lose. A spirit of vindictiveness animates them now.

Hendrik Hertzberg, Washington diarist for The New Republic, spouted venom in his dispatch for Nov. 4. Thomas "has forfeited his honor and besmirched his country." Thomas conspired in "a deliberate lie." Thomas embraced a "poisonous accusation" against Anita Hill. Thomas displayed

James J. Kilpatrick

"a coarse contempt for the very concept of evidence."

That last charge is of interest. In his uncontained fury Hertzberg asserts that Hill's veracity was "indisputably proved" by the supportive testimony of four persons in whom she had confided a decade ago. Bosh! The testimony proved nothing. It was "evidence" of the flimsiest kind.

The four witnesses testified — we may assume they testified truthfully — that Anita Hill told them certain things. Asked for independent corroboration, each of the four confessed to having none. All they knew was what Hill told them.

Hertzberg recalls the strange case of Tawana Brawley, and attempts to fashion a parallel. The attempt fails. Brawley is the black girl who faked a story several years ago of being kidnapped and abused by whites. Comparing Thomas to Brawley, Hertzberg says that Brawley "began with a relatively small lie." Then the lie grew, as she sought to distract attention from its inconsistencies. Finally the small lie became a big lie, as outsiders applied pressure. In the end "an entire community was riven by racial bitterness and demagoguery."

The supposed parallel might with equal application be reversed. More than half the country, according to polls of public opinion, believes that Anita Hill, not Clarence Thomas, is the "Tawana Brawley" of this affair.

It is entirely plausible that in a conscious or subconscious effort to claim a spotlight, to be the object of sympathy and attention, Hill long ago embroidered a petty incident. She tells four friends, adding stitches. Poor Anita! He said that? He really did? The creep! How can you stand to be near him? Anita becomes an object of compassion. She enjoys the solicitude. Curiously, when Thomas is nominated for the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the most powerful of all the circuit courts, she says nothing.

Now Thomas is nominated for the high court. Rumors of her confidences begin to circulate. The four friends are talking. The FBI calls. The little lie, the small embroidery, is getting huge. She proposes to tell her tale to the committee, but on condition: She cannot be identified. Chairman Joe Biden refuses; he will not tolerate a shot from ambush. Calamity ensues. Pope said it all: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive!"

I don't know that it happened that way. No one knows but Anita Hill. The Senate disbelieved her 52-48. May we have an armistice? Let us stop the bloodshed! We hear rumors that publicity-seeking members of the House are about to introduce a resolution of impeachment. If so, it will charge Thomas with perjury. Such a resolution would go nowhere, but in this sad business, nowhere is quite far enough.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 6, the 310th day of 1991. There are 55 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 6, 1888, Republican Sen. Benjamin Harrison of Indiana won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Democrat Grover Cleveland, 233 electoral votes to 168, even though Cleveland received a slightly higher percentage of the popular vote.

On this date:

In 1854, the king of American march music, John Philip Sousa, was born in Washington.

In 1860, former Illinois congressman Abraham Lincoln defeated three other candidates for the presidency of the United States.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was elected to a six-year term as president of the Confederacy.

In 1869, the first official intercollegiate football game was played in New Brunswick, N.J. Rutgers beat Princeton, six goals to four.

Dynamite between your ears

Now it can be told: Last baseball season, before Boston catcher Bent Mayne went to Fenway Park to play, he went to a nearby health center.

There, as he lay under a yellow-green light, he was hosed down with gallons of sesame oil. Then ginger was squirted up his nose.

After that he ate a meal of vegetables and some jam made from rose petals.

Then — energized — he went to the ballpark to play.

This Hindu fitness program is called Ayurveda. It promises athletes a level of lucidity where time slows almost to a standstill, where a baseball coming toward you looms "as large as a watermelon" and "so slowly that you can see the seams."

The ball thus appears impossible to miss. Season-end batting statistics do not necessarily justify that conclusion.

But if it helps even a little bit, in the world of million-dollar contracts, perhaps it's worth a try.

Wade Boggs of the Red Sox insists on a meal of chicken before every game, and he does have an enviable batting average.

Other athletes rely on hypnosis, biofeedback and cybernetics.

And there is some validity to all of these rituals. Keith Henschen, sports psychologist, assisted our United States team at the World Track and Field Championships in Tokyo. What at first appears nothing more than cleverly commercialized folklore can and does improve athletic performance.

The ritual can involve almost anything. If you believe in it, you can benefit from it.

The recent book Secrets of the Amazing Kreskin reveals that "mentalists" techniques for enhancing your strength are nothing more than Norman Vincent Peale's Power of Positive Thinking.

Athletes thought the four-minute mile was a human impossibility for hundreds of years. In 1944 Roger Bannister did it, and the mental barrier was broken. Soon the the four-minute mile became commonplace.

Once athletes knew it was attainable, they attained it.

Performers performing stage magic can convince you with the power of suggestion that you cannot move a certain piece of furniture — and you can't.

Subsequently you can be convinced that you can lift it over your head — and you can.

To reach your highest potential, physical or mental, begins with belief in yourself and your potential.

If it takes hocus-pocus to accomplish that, have at it — the placebo may be just as good as the medicine.

Now ...

Attempts to manipulate the human mind can be misdirected.

Jim Jones-type preachers and politicians and some governments have learned thus to manipulate masses of people.

While we must remain alert for and beware of these, somewhere not far up the road ahead, humankind — having satisfied itself that "outer space" is mostly nothing — will begin seriously to explore "inner space." It is there we may discover the infinite power of prayer.

Some of us already have.

Let's clean up campaign financing

By MARTIN SCHRAM

Jack McDonald still likes to talk of the good old days, in the late '60s, when he wore his new title of "Congressman" as a badge of honor and folks back in Michigan viewed his Washington workplace as a House of high-repute.

The Republican raconteur tells of the night he and fellow Rep. Guy Vander Jagt were late for a reception across town at the Shoreham Hotel, but not to worry, McDonald said he knew a shortcut — "just follow me." He sped off — the wrong way down a one-way street.

Vander Jagt stopped just in time to evade the motorcycle cop who tore after McDonald. Eventually, Vander Jagt made it to the Shoreham to find McDonald already inside, schmoozing, Scotch in hand, regaling all about how the cop had spotted his congressional plate and given him — not a ticket, but an escort.

Back home, folks no doubt were glad to hear their representative commanded such respect. Now, a quarter-century later, McDonald makes an honest living as a lobbyist — and it's a good thing, because folks in Michigan and everywhere are furious with Congress. The House and its repute have fallen ill.

Talk-radio hosts and listeners rage about how we are struggling to make an honest living while members of Congress live in a world of privilege and perks — and they are right. Citizens from Brooklyn to Beverly Hills are shouting: "T'row 'da bums out!" — and they are right.

We've seen members use the House bank to bounce checks like the Globetrotters bounce basketballs — 134 members wrote 581 rubber checks for more than $1,000 each; 24 members regularly overdraw their accounts by more than $1,000 — EVERY MONTH! They help themselves to free lunches; 250 members owe the House Restaurant $300,000 in unpaid bills dating back to 1986. And of course, the House Sergeant at Arms has fixed their parking tickets all over town.

So talk-radio hosts and callers are demanding term limitations for Congress. And that's where they are wrong. Term limitations will not make representatives honest — members who no longer have to answer to us will turn their lame-duck days into great-big-come-and-get-it days.

If we really want to get rid of the incumbents, we have but one sensible course of action: We must level the playing field that has given incumbents such an edge that 98 percent of them win every time they run. We must make sure that challengers and incumbents have the same amount of money to spend. And we must make sure that, once in office, they are not out with tin cups, soliciting campaign contributions from the special interests whose activities are regulated by the committees on which they serve.

Just as we spend money to keep the Capitol dome shined and its offices staffed, so too should we consider the cost of our elections as just another cost of operating a democracy.

Ellen Miller of the Center for Responsible Politics and Randy Kehler of the Working Group on Electoral Democracy estimate that it will cost $500 million per year to have genuine "citizen-financed" campaigns for the Senate, House and president — financed by tax revenues. (The funds would pay for general elections and primaries; candidates would become eligible for public funding by accumulating a specified number of very small contributions, $10 or less, to show broad community support and discourage frivolous candidacies.)

Can we afford that? Consider author Philip M. Stern's notable comparison: The Pentagon spent just under $200 million in fiscal 1990 on military marching bands.

It all comes down to priorities. Right now, we pay through another channel — political action committees, America's business PACs alone gave candidates for Congress $109 million in 1990; labor PACs gave $37 million. Russell Long, former Senate Finance Committee chairman, once put that into perspective: "The distinction between a large campaign contribution and a bribe is almost a hairline's difference."

So let's stop splitting hairs: The case for citizen financing is a case that beats the band.

Republican elected Mississippi governor; Democrat wins in Pennsylvania

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

Sen. Harris Wofford scored a Democratic upset in a Pennsylvania race that rehearsed White House campaign issues, while Republican businessman Kirk Fordice ousted Gov. Ray Mabus in Mississippi, in odd-year elections that raised stern warnings for incumbents, now in 1992.

President Bush, leaving the White House this morning for Europe, said he was "depressed" that former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh lost in Pennsylvania, but noted that Republicans won big in Mississippi, New Jersey and Virginia.

"Please don't look at the part of the glass that is only half full," Bush said. "It was a political day yesterday and we did very, very well."

The president said "one of the loud messages" Tuesday was not to raise taxes, and another was "to try to help people with health care. ... We've got to balance these two."

Democrat Brereton Jones was elected governor of Kentucky, easily defeating a veteran GOP congressman caught up in the House check-bouncing episode.

In New Jersey, voters angered by hefty tax hikes ended Democratic control of their Legislature and elected Republican majorities in both Senate and Assembly, a turnaround so total that the GOP will have majority margins wide enough to override vetoes.

While voters rejected some of the biggest names on the ballots in the scattered elections of 1991, in Washington state they took the advice of Speaker of the House Thomas S. Foley and voted against a term limit measure that would have been the nation's toughest.

Foley went home to campaign intensely against the measure that would have forced him and the other seven Washington House members to retire in 1994. He said it was an unconstitutional affront to voters.

With 98 percent of voting precincts counted, Initiative 553 was failing 699,564 to 604,494, or 54 percent to 46 percent.

None of Tuesday's signals was more striking than Wofford's one-sided victory over Thornburgh, converting an appointed Senate seat into a three-year term as the successor to Republican Sen. John Heinz, killed in an airplane crash.

Thornburgh, twice elected Pennsylvania governor, had been the pollsters' favorite by as much as 44 percentage points. Wofford wasn't even the Democrats' favorite at the outset; he was named to the seat six months ago after other prospects, thought to have a better chance of holding the seat in the special election, declined.

Wofford turned it around with a campaign in which he pressed economic issues, urged national health insurance, demanded emergency extension of unemployment benefits and cast himself as the outsider—in effect the challenger for the job he was trying to hold.

In his campaign finale, he said he tried to set a bonfire "to send a message to Washington that we don't need another person satisfied with the way things are." He found a wildfire instead.

"I... have a mission from the people of Pennsylvania. We want action on our problems in this country," Wofford said this morning on NBC's "Today." "We've rushed overseas with generosity and resources but we haven't dealt with problems of our own."

With 95 percent of the Pennsylvania vote counted, Wofford had 1,765,029 or 55 percent of the vote, Thornburgh 1,420,552 or 45 percent.

"The clear loser was President Bush," said Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, the majority leader.

Bush made two Pennsylvania appearances in Thornburgh's behalf. So did Vice President Dan Quayle.

Democratic National Chairman Ronald H. Brown said Pennsylvania was "a preview of next year's presidential race. ..."

"Americans are ready for a change," he said.

Pennsylvania Republican Sen. Arlen Specter said the outcome should alert Bush to the strong concerns of a major state. "There are many, many domestic issues that have to be faced," said Specter, who will be running for re-election himself next year.

The Wofford victory also cements the Democratic majority in the Senate at 57 to 43, increasing the odds against a Republican takeover when 34 senators are elected next year.

In Mississippi, Mabus lost a state that has been electing Democratic governors for 107 years.

"Please don't look at the part of the glass that is only half full. It was a political day yesterday and we did very, very well."

—President Bush

"Any incumbent these days is in for a close race," said Mark Gearan, executive director of the Democratic Governors' Association in Washington. "There's a lot of cynicism and anger out there."

Fordice campaigned against racial quotas, criticized welfare and said recipients should work. Those are similar to themes David Duke—whom Bush rebuked today by saying he would vote for Democrat Edwin Edwards if he had to choose—is using in his campaign for governor next door in Louisiana.

With 99 percent of the votes counted, Fordice had 357,083 votes or 51 percent, to Mabus' 334,208 or 48 percent. An independent candidate had the rest.

In Kentucky, Jones, the lieutenant governor, gained 65 percent of the vote to 35 percent for Rep. Larry Hopkins, a seven-term GOP congressman. Hopkins had been making campaign headway with questions about Jones' personal finances when he had to admit that he'd bounced 32 checks at the House bank.

The Washington vote was a surprise setback for the term limits campaign, which had won in three states in 1990, and aimed at a dozen to 15 more in 1992.

Bush had endorsed the concept of term limits. Quayle has pushed hard for a 12-year congressional limit.

Foley's personal opposition and that of Rep. Al Swift, another House veteran who renounced 1994 candidacy so as to speak without a personal stake, were high-visibility counter campaigns that had been lacking in earlier tests, in Oklahoma, California and Colorado, the latter the only state to apply the ceilings to Congress, and not until 2002. The Washington measure was retroactive, and barred House members from more than three straight terms, or six years in Congress. Foley has 27.

Voters in Cincinnati and Houston backed local term limits, while White Plains, N.Y., turned them down. Worcester, Mass., endorsed local, state and congressional limits in an advisory vote.

In Washington, the voters also turned down a ballot measure to legalize physician-assisted suicide for the terminally ill. That vote was running 54 percent no today.

A measure to make legalized abortions a right under state law, even if the Supreme Court reverses its abortion rights ruling, was narrowly behind in partial returns.

In contests elsewhere:

—Democrat Lucien Blackwell was elected to Congress in Philadelphia, to succeed the retired Rep. William Gray III, who had been House whip and the top black congressional leader.

—George F. Allen, a Republican state delegate and the son of the late football coach, won a House seat in Virginia. He succeeds Rep. D. French Slaughter Jr., resigned because of ill health. Slaughter's cousin, a Democrat, ran and lost.

—In New Jersey, Republicans captured both branches of the Legislature for the first time in 20 years. Gov. Jim Florio had asked the voters to send Bush a message; they sent Florio one instead, ousting Democrats in a backlash against a $2.8 billion state tax increase.

Joseph Doria, the Democrat who has been speaker of the Assembly, blamed it on the recession, saying people are unhappy "and they are taking it out on their elected officials."

—Mayors Ray Flynn of Boston and Kurt Schmoke of Baltimore easily won new terms. But Houston voters retired four-term Mayor Kathy Whitmire.

—Steve Bartlett, a Republican who resigned from Congress to run, was elected mayor of Dallas.

Teen-agers sentenced for stealing home plate

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Teen-agers trying to steal home plate as a birthday tribute to a friend killed in a freak baseball accident were sentenced by a judge to perform community service.

The 11 were ordered Tuesday to work eight hours each at the city park where the attempted theft occurred. They also agreed to attend two 90-minute grief counseling sessions.

The youths were arrested Oct. 26 as they tried to take the 50-pound concrete home plate marker from the park to Peter Butanowicz's grave at Milford Cemetery.

Butanowicz, 15, a Foran High School freshman, died May 22, two days after he was struck in the head by a baseball during practice at the high school. Ten of the 11 who were arrested are current or former Foran athletes.

The youths were charged with sixth-degree larceny and conspiracy to commit sixth-degree larceny. They said the idea to dig up home plate and cart it to the grave grew out of a discussion of Peter's death at a recent party.

Public Notice

On October 18, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to add a new optional service offering called SmartTrunk™ Service. The application has been assigned Tariff Control No. 10687.

SmartTrunk Service provides access between the customer's premises and the serving Southwestern Bell central office for circuit-switched voice and data communications. This communication capability is provided where facilities are available using Integrated Services Digital Network architecture. ISDN services available with SmartTrunk Service use Primary Rate Interface (PRI) technology. SmartTrunk Service requires PRI ISDN compatible Private Branch Exchange (PBX) customer provided equipment registered under FCC Part 68 Rules. SmartTrunk Service employs a 1.544 Mbps facility (denoted as SmartTrunk Interface) typically divided into twenty-three B channels and one D channel. B channels are used for voice and data communications while the D channel provides out-of-band signaling.

If approved by the Commission, the rates for each SmartTrunk Interface facility will be $1,110 per month under a 36-month service contract or $1,010 per month under a 60-month service contract. The proposed rate for the use of the central office varies from $12.25 up to $18.90 per month for each B channel depending on the rate group classification which is determined by the customer's location. Southwestern Bell estimates revenue of $2.8 million from this offering during the first year.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should file comments regarding this application with the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256. ## Meet the Connecticut state 'chilihead' champion

By THE CULINARY INSTITUTE OF AMERICA For AP Special Features

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — "Chilihead" is what insiders call someone who loves to compete in chili contests — someone like chef Jim Heywood, a self-confessed "chili fanatic" and seasoned veteran of the chili circuit.

"These events are always fundraisers," says Heywood, an instructor at the Culinary Institute of America, "and many worthwhile organizations benefit from the proceeds of chili competitions. Camaraderie and the thrill of competition are also part of the attraction."

The first chili cook-off was held in Terlingua, Texas, in 1967. Only two contestants rose to the challenge: Wick Fowler, a dedicated Texas chili cook, and H. Allen Smith, writer, humorist and author of "Nobody Knows More About Chili Than I Do." The contest ended in a dead heat.

This year, about 80 state and district winners will compete in the International Chili Society's world championship cook-off, scheduled Oct. 20 at the Tropic Gold Mine in Rosamond, Calif. The first-place prize is $25,000.

Heywood, a 1988 Connecticut

State Champion, provides the following recipes for chili and chili topping sauce. The chili recipe is a good one, he says, but not even close to his award-winning "Big Jim's Hogbreath Chili." Like any true "chilihead," Heywood is keeping his prize-winning recipe a closely guarded secret.

Not Big Jim's Hogbreath Chili
5 pounds lean beef (chuck or round), cut into 1/2-inch cubes
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 1/2 pounds onions, cut into 1/4-inch cubes
6 cloves garlic, minced
2 cups dark beer
1 pint beef broth
One 6-ounce can tomato paste

1 1/2 cups diced green chilies, cut into 1/4-inch cubes
2 to 3 fresh jalapeno peppers, minced very fine
3/4 cup chili powder
3 tablespoons ground cumin seed
1 1/2 tablespoons dried oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
Brown beef in oil. Remove beef, reserving oil in pan. Cook onions and garlic in remaining oil until soft. Add dark beer, reserved beef, beef broth and tomato paste; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 1 hour, stirring frequently. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer for another hour, stirring frequently.

Chili Topping Sauce
1 pound skinless hot dogs
1 pint water
2 medium onions, peeled and coarsely chopped
1 pound 80 percent lean ground beef
One 28-ounce can crushed tomatoes
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon ground cumin
3 teaspoons chili powder
1/2 cup beer
2 tablespoons cornstarch
Salt to taste
Cook hot dogs in water until heated through. Remove hot dogs; reserve water. Grind hot dogs and onions using a meat grinder. Combine with the 1 pound ground beef in a large frying pan; cook over medium heat until beef is cooked through. Add the reserved water, tomatoes, hot pepper sauce, Worcestershire sauce, cumin and chili powder. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Combine beer and cornstarch; mix to form a smooth paste. Stir into meat mixture and cook until slightly thickened, about 3 to 4 minutes. Season to taste with salt. Sauce can be served with hamburgers and hot dogs. Makes 1 1/2 quarts.

Salt and pepper to taste. Makes 5 quarts.

'Junk' food the wrong word, dieticians say

By MARY MacVEAN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever happened to junk food?

You can still find all manner of gooey cakes, rich candy and other high-fat snacks in any food shop. But many of the dietitians trying to reform Americans' eating habits would find a bite of "junk" food.

Parents of a generation ago would have had no trouble telling a good food from a bad, or junky, one. But these days, many dietitians say, it's all food, neither good nor bad.

The idea is that all foods can be eaten — in moderation.

"I have problems with the terminology," said Judy Dodd, president-elect of the American Dietetic Association. Any food that "contributes calories and some nutrients can be part of a balanced diet."

At least in part, this stance results from the notion that people will be less likely to improve their diets if they think they must never take another lick of ice cream or handful of chips. If they think it's too much work to eat well, they won't try.

"People eat because it tastes good, and we need to deal with that," Dodd said. "I am less likely to follow any diet that tells me I can't have my pierogi."

Dodd said people presume "bad" foods taste good and should be avoided: cake, candy, chips, fatty meats.

There are, however, problems with refusing to criticize some foods, said Joan Dye Gussow, a professor of nutrition and education at Teachers College, Columbia University.

"If the public thinks bacon is a food you should not eat much of because it's an unhealthy food, that's good," she said. "Potato chips are not a good food for people to eat. I have potato chips once a week."

That doesn't mean she has a bad diet, and it doesn't mean potato chips are good food, Gussow said. The debate over good and bad foods, she argued, has led people to focus not on food, but on components of food: grams of fat and fiber, milligrams of cholesterol or sodium.

In a survey conducted for the ADA, people were asked whether they agreed with the statement: "Nutritionally speaking, I believe there are such things as 'good foods' and 'bad foods.'" Seventy-seven percent said they held this "mistaken belief," the ADA reported.

Gussow, too, finds trouble with the words — if not the concept — of a "bad" food.

"The bad, naughty idea is such a flag," she said. "It's like calling someone a Red. Of course, bad is a silly thing to call a food." She suggested poor or unhealthy would be more useful to consumers.

Gussow told the story of a food company executive who talked to her students. When a student questioned whether the executive worried about making a soft drink that provided few nutrients, he said the drink could fit into a child's healthy diet.

Theoretically true but very unlikely, Gussow said.

She also criticized an item in a newsletter called "A Matter of Balance," part of a nutrition education campaign by Kraft General Foods announced at the same news conference as the ADA survey. In a quiz on eating right, one question asks whether a person should choose an apple or a candy bar as a snack.

The answer reads: "Both are fine. 'Good' or 'bad' foods don't exist. Any food can be part of a balanced diet as long as you select a variety of other foods from all food groups each day to meet your nutrient needs and stay within your fat gram target. Watch your portion sizes to help balance out the fat content of your day's meals and snacks, too."

It's not that an occasional candy bar will ruin most people's health.

"If you tell people there's no difference between a candy bar and an apple and they have bad eating habits already, what do you think they'll do?" Gussow asked. "There's already a lot of mental justification going on."

Englishman Montagu Kingsmill Brown seeks his fortune in Texas

Museum Mementos

Eloise Lane
White Deer Land Museum

Montagu (Mont-a-geu) Kingsmill Brown was born on May 22, 1878, in the little village of Eastcote, Middlesex County, England. His British father, Thomas Davy Brown, was a broker with the London Stock Exchange. His Irish mother, Margaret Kingsmill Brown, was a sister of Andrew Kingsmill. Each of Margaret's twelve children had "Kingsmill" as a middle name.

When "Montie" was seven years old, he was sent to a boarding school at a place called Brackley, sixty miles from London. The school, known as Magdalen College School, was twenty miles from Oxford.

When Montie was fifteen, his father "went brokers, by jove," and it was necessary for the boy to leave school and seek employment. The remainder of his education was acquired in the "school of hard knocks," which he did not recommend over formalized education. For this reason, in later years, he provided the means for many students to have a college education.

Montie first worked as office boy for a timber merchant in the heart of London. For two and one-half years he drew the "huge salary" of two dollars a week.

Then he worked in a bank at a salary of $250 a year, later raised to an additional $50 a year. At the time there were no adding machines or computers, and all checks had to be listed and added by "main strength and awkwardness."

This experience was invaluable to him in later years when he worked at the "stand-up" desk which is still in the White Deer Land Museum in Pampa.

Montie became bored with his job at the bank and told his father that he would like to go to Australia or Canada to begin farming or stock raising. He had an inquisitive nature and an eagerness to learn about everything he could. He had become interested in farming from visiting some of his relatives, and throughout his lifetime he had a great interest in land and its productivity.

Montagu Kingsmill Brown, age four. This picture was taken May 22, 1882.

Margaret Kingsmill Brown and Thomas Davy Brown, parents of Montagu Kingsmill Brown declared war on England, and the various yeomanry units were called upon to furnish manpower. This seemed a golden opportunity to Montie who decided to "join up and see the world" at no expense to himself.

In later years, people often commented that M.K. Brown was always as straight as a ramrod. When asked about this, he replied: "Queen Victoria taught me. When I sat my horse, the equerry gave me a good whack when I was not erect. A good whack will make you remember."

Young Brown joined Queen Victoria's army at the grand salary of four dollars a day and worked up from trooper to regimental sergeant-major. He had many interesting and colorful experiences in what he called "the only decent gentleman's war that ever had been fought." When the war was over (May 31, 1902), Brown returned to England with the feeling that he would return to Africa some day.

While he was trying to decide whether to return to Africa or to go to Australia, his uncle Andrew Kingsmill suggested that he should go to the Texas Panhandle and work for the White Deer Land Company. Kingsmill told his nephew that the land company needed him and that he would be a good cowboy in Texas.

Kingsmill wrote to rancher Jesse Wynne in Carson County that

Brown "had time on his hands" and "was a steady, hardworking person" who would add much to the "scant population of the area."

Brown decided to follow his uncle's suggestion and began the journey to Texas with one hundred dollars in his pocket — the amount required for entry into the United States. Arriving at New Orleans, he threw his hat and cane into the water and declared that he was going to be a good Texan. He came directly to Pampa, arriving on April 27, 1903.

He began work with T.D. Hobart, the new manager of the company, for $25.00 a month plus room and board — "and the board was what I slept on!" he joked.

Memories of Kent State will not rest in peace

DEAR ABBY: I must take exception to your response to Karen A. Tamura of Cerritos, Calif., concerning the Vietnam War.

You said that National Guard units fired into a group of peaceful demonstrators at Kent State University, killing four and wounding nine.

Mobs are seldom "peaceful." These "students" confronting the National Guard at Kent State that day in 1970 constituted a mob. Their zeal for a cause led them astray. Four had to die before reason regained the upper hand. They were armed with bricks, rocks and clubs, and were scarcely in a mood to exercise discretion. It is ever so easy, after the fact, to declare what was should not have been.

DEAR ALLAN: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: For years I have fumed as I read the sob stories about the "peaceful anti-war demonstrators" at Kent State. I know Vietnam wasn't a popular war — I hated it, too. It is too bad these demonstrators were killed — but peaceful? NO!

1. These "peaceful" demonstrators burned the ROTC building.

2. These "peaceful" demonstrators had been ordered to leave, but refused.

3. These National Guardsmen were about the same age as the "peaceful" demonstrators. They were there obeying orders. Wouldn't you feel your life was threatened if you were a member of a small group facing a large crowd who was pelting you with stones and other missiles? Small wonder someone panicked and fired.

Everyone has heard about the "peaceful" demonstrators who were injured or killed, but the public has never heard about the guardsman who phoned his young wife and cried as he told her what he had seen, and who today, at age 48, still has problems as a result of what happened that day, and the subsequent questioning and harassment these innocent young men were subjected to because of the Kent State riots!

No, I wasn't there — but my 22-year-old brother was an Ohio National Guardsman protecting his country, his state and the taxpayers' lives and property.

HAD IT WITH KENT STATE IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps being attacked with bricks, bottles, etc., is a peaceful demonstration to you, but those 18-year-old guardsmen were scared into retaliation. Where, oh where, has the truth gone?

PHYLLIS GOLLESLIN,
MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: The governor of Ohio did not send for the state National Guard because of "peaceful anti-war demonstrators" at Kent State in May 1970. Mobs of raging students were roaming the campus — pillaging and burning everything in sight (including whole buildings). Local authorities were terrified and helpless. Blame the issuance of live ammunition to a group of frightened soldiers, completely inexperienced in mob control, who were being shouted at, spit on, or hit by bricks and rocks. These guardsmen were no older than the students.

Abby, please read current accounts (unbiased) before wrongfully reporting this terrible tragedy.

DAVID PAIGE,
PUYALLUP, WASH.

DEAR DAVID AND DEAR READERS: My source for the explanation of the Vietnam War and reference to Kent State came from the World Book Encyclopedia. I felt that this was an unbiased account, and it was in no way intended to mislead or inflame. Referring to it as a "peaceful" demonstration was my mistake.

Oilers to test 'Pokes

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys aren't in awe of the Houston Oilers but they're worried about the Astrodome crowd noise and Warren Moon.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said it will be the biggest test his team has had in the three years he has been coach.

The Oilers host the Cowboys at noon Sunday and have won their last seven games in the Astrodome.

"The crowd noise will be tremendous, they'll be fired up from the opening kickoff, they'll be a fanatical crowd," Johnson said.

"It's a severe test because of Warren Moon, their quality receivers, all the No. 1 draft picks in their offensive line, their tremendous defense and their outstanding special teams," Johnson said. "You have to consider Houston's track record when it plays in the Astrodome."

The Oilers are seven-point favorites and Johnson said that's about right.

"It's as big a challenge as our team could have," Johnson said.

Johnson said potential crowd noise for the noon kickoff has him concerned. The Cowboys recently had problems with noise in the Pontiac Silverdome, blowing several snap counts against the Detroit Lions.

"The crowd noise limits our offense some," Johnson said. "Our offense will have to concentrate on every play; we can't have any false movements, linemen jumping. It limits our audibles."

Johnson said he will advise quarterback Troy Aikman to go ahead and run the play despite the noise.

"The quarterback has to go ahead and snap the ball," Johnson said. "It (the noise) really doesn't get any better if he backs out."

Johnson said despite all of Houston's advantages the Cowboys won't back down from the Texas death match.

"We played 'em in preseason and worked against 'em in training camp and that takes away some of the possible awe of playing them," Johnson said. "It's not an easy task. But we're not in awe."

Dallas holds a 4-2 regular season edge in the series with Houston winning 25-17 in the last meeting in 1988.

Johnson has decided to start rookie defensive tackle Russell Maryland, a first round draft pick, for the first time this year to beef up the pass rush.

Groom Tigers are one win away from playoffs

Lefors, Miami face off in big 6-man contest

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

With five returning starters from a 7-3 club and a group of outstanding prospects, the situation looked good for Groom to make the playoffs in pre-season speculation.

Now after the 56-24 win over Miami last week, the Tigers are just one win away from joining McLean as the District 1-1A six-man playoff representatives.

"We want to be in the playoffs and things are looking right for us, but our philosophy is take it one game at a time. We've got to take care of business this week," said Groom head coach Terry O'Dell.

That "business" O'Dell is speaking of concerns Follett, Groom's final regular-season opponent. The two teams meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Follett.

"We're sure not taking Follett lightly, I guarantee you that," O'Dell said. "We're preparing for their shotgun spread offense as best as we can."

A Groom loss and a Miami victory against Lefors Friday night would produce a three-way tie for second place and a coin flip to determine the No. 2 playoff seed.

Groom is alone in second place with 3-1 league mark while Follett and Miami are tied for third at 2-2. McLean (4-0 in district, 8-1 overall), clinched the district title last week with a 50-6 win over Follett.

Groom (7-2 overall) has a high-ignition offense that can break a game wide open. Brian Baker (150-pound senior) is averaging over 100 yards rushing per game. Paul McLaughlin (145-pound junior) and Kirk Webb (150-pound senior) are both close to averaging 100 yards per outing.

"If one of them happens to have a bad game, the other two take up the slack," said O'Dell, who is in first year at the Groom helm. "All three have done a good job."

Good news for Groom is the possible return of offensive end-defensive guard Shannon Miller, a 215-pound junior who sustained a broke bone in his foot about three weeks ago.

"Hopefully, we'll have him back for the playoffs. He's a big player," O'Dell said.

Follett (5-3 overall) is paced by speeding running back Greg Frazier, a 152-pound junior who was an all-district second-team pick a year ago.

"Frazier is a very, very dangerous runner and he's got a pretty good crew to back him up," O'Dell said. "He doesn't do it all by himself."

Groom's last trip to the playoffs was in 1976 when the Tigers were playing 11-man football. This is Groom's fourth year in the six-man ranks.

All the other high school teams in the Pampa News circulation area close out the regular season Friday night.

Canadian hosts White Deer, Wheeler visits Memphis, McLean goes to Higgins and Lefors welcomes Miami.

It's a foregone conclusion that unbeaten Wheeler will be in the Class 1A playoffs, but the Mustangs can go in as the No. 1 seed by defeating Memphis Friday night. The two teams are tied for first in the District 1-1A standings with 4-0 records and both have already qualified for post-season play.

Wheeler's Jason Beers (12), left, and Canadian's Shad Jergenson are expected to quarterback their teams in Friday night area football action.

Minnesota's Knoblauch is selected American League Rookie of Year

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At precisely 4 p.m. Houston time, Chuck Knoblauch's telephone rang.

"As soon as he said his name, I knew what he was calling for," Knoblauch said. "My heart was definitely racing."

The person at the other end of the telephone was Jack Lang of the Baseball Writers Association of America, and he called Tuesday to tell Knoblauch he had been chosen American League Rookie of the Year.

"Luckily I was with a winning team, did some things well and had a consistent year," Knoblauch said. "There's been a lot of people saying I was going to get it, but I didn't feel like it until I got the call."

Knoblauch, a second baseman who made the jump from Class AA to the majors and helped spark the Minnesota Twins to a World Series victory, received 26 of 28 first-place votes. Toronto pitcher Juan Guzman and Detroit outfielder Milt Cuyler split the other two first-place votes.

Knoblauch got two second-place votes and finished with 136 points in the 5-3-1 voting system. Guzman got 20 seconds and three third-place votes, finishing second with 68 points. Cuyler got two second-place votes and 11 thirds and was third with 22 points.

"It's the same like the World Series. It won't sink in for awhile," Knoblauch said.

Knoblauch was drafted by the Twins in the first round in June 1989 after making second-team All-America at shortstop in his junior year at Texas A&M. He hit .286 in 51 games at Kenosha of the Midwest League and .364 in 18 games at Visalia of the California League.

The following year, he was promoted to Orlando of the Southern League and hit .289 with two homers and 53 RBIs. That earned him an invitation to spring training as a non-roster player.

"Our feeling was that we would more or less hold an open and even tryout at second base between (Nelson) Liriano and Knoblauch, and whoever had the better spring would make the club," Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said Tuesday.

"We had decided not to arbitrarily send him back to Triple A and held the position open."

Knoblauch hit .388 in 20 spring games, going 26-for-67 with six RBIs. He impressed the Twins enough that Liriano was released six days before the season started.

"Going to spring training, I had no plan to leave but on the flight to Oakland to open the season," Knoblauch said.

He made a quick impression, going 25-for-75 on April with nine RBIs. He wound up at .281 with 24 doubles, six triples, 50 RBIs and 25 steals in 30 tries.

"At times, you question yourself whether you belong," said Knoblauch. "But Kirby Puckett was a big help — Puckett and Chili Davis and Kent Hrbek. They said, 'They wouldn't have you here if you didn't belong.'"

"When you have a superstar like Kirby Puckett saying that to you, you have to believe it."

Knoblauch's hot bat continued in the postseason. He was 7-for-20

with three RBIs against Toronto in the playoffs, then went 8-for-26 with two RBIs against Atlanta in the World Series. He set a rookie post-season record with 15 hits.

through the minor leagues and all through his college career," MacPhail said. "There was an opinion we needed some youth and enthusiasm, needed to change some faces in the infield."

Giants' coach: QB change 'isn't the way to go'

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ray Handley is the first to admit the New York Giants need a jump-start to make the playoffs.

But making Phil Simms the starting quarterback instead of Jeff Hostetler isn't the way to go, the rookie coach reiterated Tuesday after watching films of the Giants' 30-7 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles on Monday night.

"I don't feel the play of the quarterback is the reason we're not playing well offensively, so I won't make the change," Handley told a packed news conference at Giants Stadium.

In fact, Handley did not say whether he planned any changes heading into Sunday's now crucial matchup with the Cardinals in Phoenix.

The Giants (4-5) have seven regular-season games left and they probably need to win six of them to get into the playoffs. That won't be an easy task for a team which has not won more than two games in a row this season, and one now riding a two-game losing streak.

The Giants also appear to be a team in disarray.

Handley gives no indication of knowing how to right the problem and his best player said after the game that he was playing with a bunch of quitters.

"We didn't do anything out there at all," perennial Pro Bowl linebacker Lawrence Taylor said. "In my 11 years in the league, I can't remember a game where all 47 players and all the coaches quit like this ... ever."

The loss was the Giants' worst since a 44-7 decision to San Diego in 1980. Its severity may have made people realize this defending champion may not be a playoff team — a fate which also fell to the 1987 team after winning the Super Bowl.

The start is also the Giants' worst in a non-strike year since 1983 (2-6-1). With seven games left in the season, New York is out of a playoff spot, tied with Philadelphia and San Francisco for the eighth best record in the NFC.

Handley refused to address Taylor's comments Tuesday, saying he had not read them and did not want to comment. He said if Taylor wanted to talk to him, they would.

"We have to try to get the players to rally and, I think, as I said, there are some things they want to regain, and part of that is their pride," Handley said. "I think that has been hurt and they can attempt to regain that. We have to get started winning some games in order to regain that."

One thing is apparent. Handley believes his way is the right way and he is not going to change things or even threaten to change things in hopes it sparks a better performance. The soft-spoken coach even ruled out a locker room tirade, saying even the more vocal Bill Parcells didn't do that in recent years.

The only thing Handley will admit is the team has a confidence problem.

The offense has struggled all season with Hostetler at quarterback instead of Simms, who had held the job since 1984. The unit is averaging a little more than 15 points per game, and it has not scored more than 23 points in any game. It has been outscored 107-60 in the second half of games.

In the last six quarters, the offense has scored just seven points and is 2-for-14 on third-down conversions. In the last two games, the Giants' so-called "ball-control offense" has run 34 plays in the second half compared to 81 combined for Washington and Philadelphia.

Hostetler has been the focus of the offense's ineffectiveness and there have been plenty of calls for Simms, the Giants' all-time leading passer, who got his first action late Monday night in garbage time.

Defensively, the Giants just aren't the same team as in recent years, when they dominated games. They have given up 160 points compared to 211 all of last season and, more importantly, they just aren't making the big plays. The Redskins and Eagles each staged long ball-control drives the past two weeks that the Giants couldn't stop.

"I think there is a lot to be gained by coming back and playing well over the last seven games of the season," Handley said. "For the most part, I feel the players do want to play well."

Playing it safe can save score

With all the cold weather last week, golf in Pampa was put on hold.

Because I don't have much to write about, we will concentrate on a helpful tip.

After talking with David Teichman of Hidden Hills, we decided "PLAYING IT SAFE" would be a good topic.

If you're like me, we all try to hit a career shot when we get into trouble on the course.

This usually causes double or even triple bogies, which can ruin your score real quick.

A perfect example of this is a drive hit into the trees. Do we try to hit around or through the trees? No. Chances are, the ball is going to end up in worst trouble.

The smart way to play this shot, is to chip back into the fairway. Although we've wasted one shot, we still have a chance to salvage par with a good shot from the fairway. This is real important for high-handicappers and beginners.

This tip can also apply to other situations on the course, such as sand-traps and deep rough.

Remember, when you're in trouble, THINK ABOUT THE SHOT.

Teichman, also wants to remind you that 60% of golf is chipping and putting.

If you think it's too cold to play a round of golf, get on the putting green and practice.

With the ski slopes on the courses melting, it's time to get the clubs out again.

Until next week, SEE YA IN THE ROUGH.

Knicks are hit at home; Nuggets surprise Spurs

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

After flopping on the road, the New York Knicks polished their act and opened on Broadway to rave reviews from coach Pat Riley.

"After what happened over the weekend, they were committed to come home and have a great home opener, and they did it," Riley said after the Knicks whipped the Milwaukee Bucks 113-85 Tuesday night. "This team wants to win."

Returning to the bench after an absence of one season, Riley watched the Knicks lose twice to recent expansionists Miami and Orlando. And for a while, it seemed that the Bucks might upstage him in his debut at Madison Square Garden.

Hardly blessed with the talent he had in compiling the best winning percentage in NBA history while leading the Los Angeles Lakers to four league titles, Riley coached his way to this victory. With the Knicks leading just 42-41 at halftime, the director changed the script.

NBA Roundup

"We changed defenses at halftime, going to a pressure defense," he said of the strategy that resulted in eight Milwaukee turnovers in the third period.

Leading the way for the Knicks was Mark Jackson, who got 14 of his 16 points, five assists and three steals as New York outscored Milwaukee 40-13 in the third period.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Philadelphia 107, Washington 106; Atlanta 98, Utah 94; Detroit 117, Charlotte 93; Boston 93, Miami 89; Golden State 118, Chicago 110; Cleveland 112, Dallas 101; Houston 106, Portland 99; Indiana 111, Phoenix 105; Seattle 98, Sacramento 87; Denver 97, San Antonio 96; and the Los Angeles Clippers 114, the Los Angeles Lakers 109 in overtime.

Xavier McDaniel, acquired from Phoenix just before training camp started, had 28 points and 13 rebounds, and Patrick Ewing scored 24 points for the Knicks.

Dale Ellis and Jay Humphries had 14 points each for Milwaukee, which had won its first two games.

Clippers 114, Lakers 109 OT
Loy Vaught scored six of his career-high 20 points in overtime to lead the Clippers over the injury-riddled Lakers for their first victory at the Forum in 10 years.

The Lakers, playing their third consecutive overtime game — to tie an NBA record shared by eight other teams — were without Magic Johnson, Vlade Divac and Tony Smith.

The Clippers' last road victory over the Lakers came on Nov. 27, 1981, when they were based in San Diego.

Danny Manning scored 22 points for the Clippers, including a basket that forced overtime at 102-102. Sedale Threat led the Lakers with 25 points and James Worthy added 22.

Nuggets 97, Spurs 96
Reggie Williams' layup with 6.7 seconds left capped Denver's 8-0 run and a rally from a 14-point deficit in the final 4:47.

Williams had 24 points and rookie Dikembe Mutombo 21 points and 13 rebounds. Antoine Carr led the Spurs with 23 points, Willie Anderson had 18 and David Robinson 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Warriors 118, Bulls 110
Chris Mullin scored 38 points and led a 20-2 fourth-quarter charge as unbeaten Golden State stopped the defending NBA champions at Chicago.

Hakeem Olajuwon led the Rockets with 27 points and 20 rebounds, and Otis Thorpe added 16 points and 17 rebounds. Clyde Drexler had 18 points to lead Portland and Cliff Robinson added 17.

Celtics 93, Heat 89
Free throws kept Miami in the game, then beat the Heat as visiting Boston made six straight in the final 63 seconds.

Miami, hitting just 39 percent from the floor, made 30 of 36 free throws.

Hawks 98, Jazz 94
Blair Rasmussen hit shots from both corners in the final 1:42 and Dominique Wilkins scored nine of his 25 points in the final 6 minutes as Atlanta rallied.

Auburn coach goes on offensive

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The NCAA, and not the media or the public, should decide on the validity of tapes secretly recorded by a former Auburn football player, according to an attorney for Auburn coach Pat Dye.

Sam Franklin accused the ex-player, Eric Ramsey, and Ramsey's lawyer, Donald Watkins, of creating a "media mirage" by releasing only portions of the tapes, which allegedly show that an Auburn booster and assistant coaches made illegal payments to Ramsey. He demanded that all the tapes be turned over to the NCAA.

Watkins, however, said the only things he and Ramsey "are trying to bring out are things that come to bear on potential NCAA violations, and we've done that, so I think it's irresponsible and in some ways reckless on the part of Auburn athletic officials to have this war cry for us to put all the tapes out there on the table."

Watkins has released two batches of the tapes and has said that within two weeks he will release others that contain conversations between Dye and Ramsey, a defensive back at Auburn from 1987-90.

Franklin said at a Tuesday news conference that Watkins is undermining the effectiveness of the NCAA investigation by releasing some of the tapes to a Birmingham newspaper.

Agassi, Sampras to play in Davis Cup final

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras have been tapped to play singles for the United States in the Davis Cup final against France, it was reported today.

U.S. Davis Cup captain Tom Gorman has decided to skip over veteran John McEnroe, who has lobbied for a spot on the team that will play in Lyon, France, from Nov. 29 to Dec. 1, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The United States Tennis Association will officially name the team today. The Times said Gorman also has decided on the veteran Davis Cup team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso instead of the duo of Scott Davis and David Pate. Davis and Pate were upset by Germany in their Davis Cup debut in September.

Agassi was the hero of America's semifinal victory over Germany. McEnroe, who has played and won more Davis Cup matches than any other U.S. player, was bypassed in favor of Sampras, the 1990 U.S. Open champion who will be making his Davis Cup debut. Sampras is ranked No. 7 in the world.

Larger-than-life publishing magnate dies mysteriously at sea

By RICHARD LORANT
Associated Press Writer

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (AP) — The death of tabloid tycoon Robert Maxwell, whose nude body was found floating in the Atlantic Ocean after he disappeared from his yacht, leaves a legacy of mystery and a troubled empire with an uncertain future.

An autopsy was under way today on the body, which had a mark on the forehead. Authorities questioned the crew of the 180-foot yacht from which Maxwell disappeared before dawn Tuesday near the Canary Islands.

Dr. Luisa Garcia Cohen, head of the forensic team conducting the autopsy, reported the presence of one scrape or wound. "There is a mark on his forehead. We'll see whether it's important or not," she said.

Speaking in Las Palmas, the capital of Spanish-held Grand Canary Island, she said results of the autopsy that began this morning would probably not be available for about a week because samples had to be sent to the Spanish mainland.

Maxwell was last seen before dawn Tuesday, pacing the deck of his $21 million yacht. The crew did not realize until hours later that he had disappeared.

The 68-year-old publisher had skipped an appearance on the eve of his death, and his company and family told organizers he was ill.

However, he had spent Saturday and Sunday on the vacation island of Madeira, swimming, drinking beer, visiting a casino and browsing in shops. Witnesses said he appeared happy and relaxed.

His crew said he dined alone Monday night on the island of Tenerife, returned to the vessel and told the crew to cruise all night.

The death of the brash, rotund publisher raised questions about the future of his holdings. The $2 billion global publishing empire he personally ran is burdened with debt, and Maxwell had been selling assets to raise money to meet a $750 million payment due in October 1992.

In addition to New York's Daily News, which he rescued from the brink of collapse in March, Maxwell owns several British tabloids and The European, an English-language weekly he founded in May 1990.

The boards of Maxwell's companies named Maxwell's son Kevin, 32, as acting chairman of Maxwell Communications, and son Ian, 35, as acting chairman of the Mirror Group. The sons have long worked in the family business.

This year, Maxwell sold 49 percent of the Mirror Group of newspapers in a public offering and his Pergamon-Press publishing house to a Dutch company. He also sold part of his U.S. publishing house, Macmillan, to a British publisher.

Maxwell was also suing American journalist Seymour Hersh for alleging in a new book that he had ties to Israel's Mossad spy agency.

Spanish national radio said earlier that Maxwell's body, found naked, showed no signs of violence.

Maxwell was last seen before dawn Tuesday, walking on the deck of his 180-foot yacht, which was underway at the time.

Fourteen hours later, a rescue helicopter pulled his body out of the sea.

Company officials said in a statement that Maxwell had been the vessel's only passenger, in addition to about a dozen crew members. Weather reports said the skies were clear and seas calm.

The Daily Mirror of London, Maxwell's flagship newspaper, said Maxwell had dined alone on Tenerife Monday night, then boarded the yacht and instructed his crew to cruise all night at sea.

In London, Charles Wilson, director of the Mirror Group, said there had been no suggestion of foul play in the death: "We can only assume that Mr. Maxwell slipped and fell overboard."

Wilson also said he did not believe suicide was a possibility. "He had too much of the arrogance of his own ability to conceive of such a thing," he said.

Maxwell was a big man with a powerful basso voice who browbeat his editors, fought a titanic running battle with rival publisher Rupert Murdoch, and jettied about the world visiting presidents and prime ministers.

"My primary duty is to hire and fire editors," he said recently.

Born Labji Hoch to Jewish peasants in Czechoslovakia, Maxwell lost his parents in the Nazi Holocaust and escaped to Britain in 1940. He was a highly decorated World War II veteran.

"He was larger than life," British Conservative Party lawmaker Anthony Beaumont-Dark said of Maxwell. "He was the Citizen Kane of his time."

Maxwell's oldest son, Phillip, flew to the Canary Islands with Maxwell's widow, Elizabeth, to identify the body.

Mrs. Maxwell, wearing black, looked somber but calm. British Vice-Consul Campbell Livingstone said he heard her say "something to the effect that her husband was a colossus in life and a colossus in death."

The yacht's captain, Gus Rankin, said Maxwell wanted "to cruise all night out at sea" so they decided to head in the direction of Grand Canary Island.

Maxwell was reported last seen by a member of the crew at 4:25 a.m. Tuesday, walking the deck of the yacht, the Lady Ghislaine. His last message was a call to the bridge 20 minutes later, asking that the air-conditioning be turned down.

The yacht anchored five miles off the southern coast of Tenerife at 9:30 a.m. Ninety minutes later, a phone call to Maxwell's stateroom was not answered, triggering a search.

Three Spanish helicopters, a plane and three ships searched for six hours and found the body floating in the Atlantic between Grand Canary and Tenerife, said Fernando Cano, spokesman at the Spanish rescue center in Madrid.

Maxwell was to have addressed the Anglo-Israel Association at a London hotel Monday night, but organizers were told about 30 minutes before the event began that he was ill.

He is to be buried in Jerusalem, most likely on Sunday, but the timing depends on when the body is released by Spanish authorities, said Dov Judkowski, editor of the Israeli daily Maariv. Maxwell's empire has a major share in the paper.

Fred MacMurray of 'My Three Sons' dies at age 83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred MacMurray, who dispensed fatherly wisdom between puffs of his pipe on television's "My Three Sons" and played lovable kooks in a string of Disney movies, has died at 83.

MacMurray died of pneumonia Tuesday at St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica, a day after being admitted for cancer treatment.

Although light comedy was his strength, MacMurray played almost any film role with success, including Western hero, high-society figure and double-dealers of various stripes.

MacMurray played against type in 1944 when he starred opposite Barbara Stanwyck as a crooked insurance salesman recruited for murder in Billy Wilder's moody "Double Indemnity."

He worked with Wilder again in 1960, playing a philandering husband in "The Apartment." In "The Caine Mutiny" of 1954, he played a deceitful Navy lieutenant.

Wilder joked about the character switch, saying MacMurray "gives people the feeling that he's kind to dogs, children, mothers and widows."

The good-guy image served MacMurray well in "My Three Sons," in which he played widower father Steve Douglas.

The show ran from 1960 to 1972, second only to "Ozzie and Harriet" as network TV's longest-running situation comedy. It still is popular in reruns.

He also played good guys in several Walt Disney films, including 1960's "The Absent-Minded Professor," in which he portrayed an inventor who created a lighter-than-air substance called flubber that enabled his Model T to fly.

Other Disney roles included the sequel "Son of Flubber," "The Shaggy Dog" and "The Happiest Millionaire."

Friends said that image better reflected the real MacMurray.

"Such a lovely, shy, funny, wonderful man. I'll miss him," said Beverly Garland, who played MacMurray's second wife on "My Three Sons."

"He was a fine gentleman and a wonderful actor. He was adept at both comedy and drama, with a style all his own," said actor Jimmy Stewart.

Barry Livingston, now 37, played son Ernie on "My Three Sons." His real-life brother, Stanley, played his TV brother, Chip.

"He would always defer to his boys as the success behind his show," Livingston said. "He was always a very humble man."

MacMurray's stage, film and television career spanned more than 50 years. He made more than 80 motion pictures before retiring a decade ago.

Interviewed when he turned 80, he said: "I have some wonderful memories and people have asked me, 'Why don't you write a book like everyone else is doing?' I have trouble remembering the names of guys I played golf with last week."

Born in Kankakee, Ill., MacMurray sang and played in orchestras to earn tuition at Carroll College in Wisconsin. The son of a concert violinist, he formed a three-piece band called Mac's Melody Boys in which he sang and played sax.

He came to Hollywood in the 1920s and worked with dance bands and as a movie extra. He then went to the East Coast, making his Broadway debut in 1930 in "Three's a Crowd." He moved to Los Angeles when Paramount signed him.

His first hit film was the 1935 romantic comedy "The Gilded Lily" with Claudette Colbert. He followed that with such comedies as "Champagne Waltz," "True Confessions" and "Take a Letter, Darling."

He is survived by his wife, actress June Haver, three daughters and a son. His first wife, actress Lillian Lamont, died in 1953.

Record cold drives homeless to shelters

ATLANTA (AP) — Shelters in the South scrambled to accommodate homeless people caught unprepared by a cold snap in its third day today.

Atlanta had a record low of 26 degrees Tuesday.

"I have mothers here who do not have coats or sweaters for their children, and some mothers who don't have coats for themselves," said Cheryl Proctor, director of Atlanta's Moreland Avenue shelter, which was filled to its 130-person capacity Tuesday night.

At the Atlanta Union Mission, homeless people searched through piles of donated clothing for winter gear.

The nation's eastern half was expected to get a brief respite from severe cold today, but another polar air blast was due Thursday.

Temperatures before dawn today were in the 20s and 30s in the South, the mid-Atlantic states, and the Midwest; and in the teens in the Great Lakes region.

International Falls, Minn., upheld its icy reputation with a record 3 below zero today, after tying its record of minus 1 Tuesday. Gusty northwesterly wind this morning combined with the temperature to make a wind chill factor of around 40 below zero.

The cold claimed at least one life Tuesday: An elderly Atlanta man died of hypothermia, authorities said. Cold, snow and ice since last week also have been blamed for 13 deaths in Minnesota, six in Illinois and five in Nebraska.

Record lows mostly in the teens and 20s were reported Tuesday in cities from Florida to New Jersey and from Minnesota to Texas.

Records Tuesday included Alamosa, Colo., 4 below zero; Del Rio, Texas, 31; Baton Rouge, La., 26; Birmingham, Ala., 21; New Orleans, 32; and Pensacola, Fla., 30. In Knoxville, Tenn., the temperature fell to 21, breaking the record of 24 that had stood since 1879.

Temperatures across Maryland dipped below freezing Tuesday. The mercury at Baltimore-Washington International Airport hit a record low of 26.

Baltimore had already implemented its winter homeless plan, which includes an extra 334 beds in shelters, said Joanne Selinska of the city Department of Homeless Services. The plan didn't kick in until Nov. 15 last year.

"We made a conscious choice to start early this year," she said.
