BULLINGTON ELECTED C-C PRESIDENT

Ed Pryor Claims 'Political Frame Up' As Defense In Trial

CHIEF ADMITS "ILL FEELING" AT ELECTRA

Fund Raised to Assist Prosecution; Donors Are "Unknown"

STATE CLOSES CASE

Woman Tells of Taking Shumate's Message To Two Officers

With the testimony of Mrs. Lillian Blair, 2306 Buchanan, who said she had delivered a message from Henry Shumate to Ed Pryor and Tom Shook, and had seen the three together on a side lane off the Seymour road on the night the three were arrested, the state Tuesday afternoon rested its case against Ed Pryor, former Electra constable, as an accomplice in a burglarly alleged to have been committed by Shumate.

"Promised Protection"

The state announced that it would stand on the second count of the indictment which named Pryor only as an accomplice, accusing him of advising, commanding and encouraging the commission of the crime. Shumate, first witness for the state, Tuesday morning testified that Pryor, then constable, and Tom Shook, former chief of police, had suggested the robbery of the Jackson news stand in Electra in May, 1928, and had promised him protection.

The defense, as indicated by cross examination Tuesday, will take the line of a political frame up against Pryor, which Shumate utilized in an effort to obtain immunity. Shields Heyser, counsel for the defense, sought all through the day to bring out that Shumate did not implicate the former Electra officers in his statements until after he had broken jail and had been rearrested in Pryor's home, where he was found asleep the night following his sensational jail break here.

In his cross examination of Mrs. Blair, the chief witness presented by the state in the afternoon session, Mr. Heyser asked the witness if she were not protecting a "very dear friend" and if her testimony were not "bought and paid for." He demanded to know if she were not told by the district attorney's office that unless she gave the testimony just completed she would be sent to the penitentiary as an accessory after the fact.

Weeks Special Prosecutor

The questions brought immediate protest from Fred Weeks, special prosecutor, and Sam Spence, district attorney, and negative answers from the witness. Mrs. Blair's name was first brought into the case last summer when deputies flew to Lampasas to summonis her to appear before the grand jury here.

Throughout his cross examinations, Mr. Heyser Tuesday sought to expose the existence of a political rivalry between Shook and Pryor and the city officials and police officers in Electra. He brought admissions of the existence of ill feeling from several of the state's witnesses. They admitted that the citizens of Electra had raised a sum of money for the purpose of prosecuting Pryor but could not name any of the donors. The defense attempted to show, through its cross examination, that Electra officials took the opportunity of arresting Pryor and Shook on the night Shumate was found in Pryor's bed. They will try to show, according to indications in the questioning, that Pryor intended to turn Shumate in to the authorities on the following morning, and that the occasion was seized as an opportunity by political enemies.

The trial opened at 9 o'clock

Hijackers Shoot Up Bus But Fail To Halt Driver

Wichitan Sticks to Wheel of Machine As Bullets Smash Windshield and Windows Near Mabelle

Lady luck and sheer nerve kept C. D. Abbott, driver of a Seymour to Wichita bus, from being shot and probably killed near Mabell Tuesday night when amid the hail of bullets from the guns of two hijackers who attempted to stop him, he stuck to his course and drove his bus to safety.

Abbott was on his route to Wichita Falls from Seymour and had gotten a short way out of Mabelle when he was signalled to stop by two men in a roadster. They drove around the bus and stopped in the middle of the road but he ignored their signals and speeded past their machine.

Wild West Style

Upon seeing that the driver had no intention of stopping the bus, the men opened fire as he passed them, shooting straight through the front windows of the bus and shattering both glasses. When Abbott still stuck to his course and refused to stop the pair fired through the rear windows of the bus.

The bullet, Abbott said, went through the left front window of his car and another shot which was fired after he had passed the would be hijackers went through the top of the bus just above the window.

There were no passengers on the bus at the time of the attempted holdup. Abbott drove into Wichita Falls after the affair and reported to headquarters at the Union Bus station.

Narrow Escape

How the bullets missed the head of the nervy young man is a miracle officials said. From the track that the bullets left through the bus all of them except the one which was fired above the rear window must have come within three inches of his head. He received no injuries.

Abbott was driving one of the Wichita Falls-Seymour-Abilene division busses, a line which is owned and operated by his father, G. G. Abbott.

Reports of the affair were made by the elder Mr. Abbott to the local police headquarters and the sheriff's department. Warnings were posted to officers along the road to Seymour to be on watch for the pair.

PAMPA BANDIT PAIR IS HELD

Buffalo, N. Y., Police Hold Ace Pendleton Men

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 15. (AP)—Two men arrested here several days ago on suspicion are Clyde Roberts and Fred Nave, members of the Ace Pendleton gang of bank robbers and killers, of the Southwest, Buffalo police were informed tonight by the criminal identification bureau of the department of justice. Identification was made through finger prints forwarded to the department of justice by the local police.

Citing the previous record of the pair, the telegram from the department of justice urged Buffalo police by all means to hold the prisoners until Texas Rangers arrive to extradite them for alleged participation in the holdup of the Pampa National bank of Borger, Texas, during the course of which two policemen were killed.

Mrs. Hammonds' Husband Shares Johnston's Favor, Testimony Shows

By DON A. HIGGINS
United Press Staff Correspondent

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 15.—Political investigators were engrossed tonight in an intriguing inquiry which by inference would mark a woman clerk as the "big medicine maker" of the Oklahoma capitol.

It is the second war council of the county seat braves out to scalp the woman whom they assert made a "squaw man" out of Gov. Henry S. Johnston.

While the woman, Mrs. Mamie Hammonds, confidential secretary of the governor, hides her dimpled diplomatic smiles and remains a stoic in administrative councils, an insurgent house investigating committee has gone down into the valleys of government affairs.

Pardon Probe Unfinished

They have yet to finish their first job—finding the bottom of the deal wherein recently the governor unwittingly pardoned Dewey Crosthwaite, a convicted and fugitive murderer.

Simultaneously they launched today a quiz of alleged highway department favors given contractors and an examination of unproved charges that Mrs. Hammonds, with the governor, dictated appointments and suggested salaries of various departments.

As the parade of departmental heads and subordinates pass by the witness stand, one thing stands out. Whenever house prosecutors desire to add the proper crescendo to a series of questions, they ask in stentorian tones whether Mrs. Hammonds or the governor directed or influenced the matter under fire.

The name "Mrs. Hammonds" seems to electrify even the most routine cross examination and witnesses become evasive and prosecutors press their cases harder.

Husband Questioned

The woman secretary is rarely referred to without the name of the governor attached but today her husband, Dr. O. O. Hammonds, state health director, was brought into the cross examination. Prosecutors sought to substantitate allegations that he obtained fees from insurance companies for examining disabled workers who came before the industrial commission for compensation.

Mrs. Faye Roblin, state industrial commissioner, testified that the governor had suggested that whenever possible Dr. Hammonds should be named examining physician in cases before the commission.

Later witnesses in today's hearing included Uncle Dave Faulk, farmer, "who wears no man's necktie," who asserted he had been offered from $1,200 to $1,500 by the father of Dewey Crosthwaite, if Faulk would put the pardon through.

Faulk said he refused and that his answer would have been the same "if it had been one million dollars." Several days later the governor granted the pardon.

Slump in Flu Cases In Texas Reported

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—Spread of influenza in Maryland, coincident with a decline in Iowa and Texas, was announced by the public health service today.

Maryland reported 5,616 new cases for last week, compared with 3,610 the week before. New cases dropped in Iowa from 1,447 to 103 and in Texas from 6,019 to 1,696.

HELEN ENGAGED

Tennis Queen Will Wed Son of Capitalist Of San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15. (US)—Rumor long denied is at last acknowledged truth—Helen Wills is engaged.

Frederick Shander Moody Jr., son of a San Francisco capitalist, is the young man who has won the heart of America's tennis queen—that same young lady recently acclaimed by Gertrude Atherton, novelist, as "America's most beautiful girl."

The engagement was announced in formal notes mailed to friends of the young couple today by parents of the bride to be.

JAILER BALKS ARMED INMATE

Prisoner Presents Artillery After 'Visitors Day'

Ordered to "stick 'em up" at the point of a .380 caliber automatic pistol in the hands of a prisoner in the county jail, Frank Watkins, night jailor, thwarted an attempted jail break Tuesday night by dodging to cover before the weapon could be fired.

Watkins had gone to the second floor of the jail to deliver cigarets when the prisoner attempted to halt the officer with the gun. Once out of range of the weapon, Watkins hastily summoned Sheriff W. G. Bralley, who called both county and city police forces to the jail. The combined group rushed the second floor, but found prisoners in their alloted spaces. In a search of the floor, the gun was finally discovered in a basin by W. P. Belcher, city officer. Its magazine contained nine cartridges.

Officers said the pistol was probably smuggled into the jail by relatives or friends during "visitors day" Tuesday. Watkins was unable to identify the prisoner who attempted to break because of the dim light in the jail, but Sheriff Bralley and his aides questioned Chief Eaves of Electra and another man Tuesday night. Eaves is charged by indictment with assault to rob in connection with an attempted holdup at Electra.

Appreciation for the prompt answer of city officers in his call for assistance was expressed by Sheriff Bralley. City officers who answered were Ellis Summers, N. Daves, L. N. McKelvey and W. P. Belcher, while B. O. Hamm, Warren W. Belcher and Charlie Gant were on hand from the sheriff's department.

Gallant Foch At Crucial Period In Hardest Fight

PARIS, Jan. 15. (UP)—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, fighting with all of his waning strength against a grave heart attack, continued to make slight improvement tonight and one physician expressed the hope that the commander of allied armies in the world war might recover.

The next three days, however, are expected to be the most critical in the battle, and so serious is the marshal's condition that his doctors would not issue a bulletin this evening, as previously planned. Dr. Heitzboyer, one of the six physicians in attendance, will pass the night at Foch's bedside.

Engine and Seven Cars Of Train Leave Track

PLEASANT HILL, Ill., Jan. 15. (UP)—The engine and seven coaches of the "Hummer," fast Chicago and Alton passenger train, Chicago to Kansas City, left the tracks when the train ran through a broken rail near here today. None of the passengers was seriously injured, railroad officials said. A special train carried them to their destinations.

Solons Put on 'Good Show' As Crowds Witness Final Clash

By THOMAS WRIGLEY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—The senate ratified the Kellogg-Briand multilateral peace pact renouncing war as an instrument of national policy among the nations late this afternoon. The vote was 85 to 1.

Action on the pact came after senators of the Republican-Democratic bloc demanding an interpretation of the treaty had scored a brilliant victory following days of raging debate.

Led by Senator Reed, Democrat of Missouri, and Senator Moses, Republican of New Hampshire, the group of irreconcilables forced a report from the foreign relations committee to safeguard this nation from entanglements.

Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, chairman of the committee, filed the report. It was read to the senate and the vote on ratification followed.

Blaine Dissents

The one dissenting vote was given by Senator Blaine, Republican of Wisconsin. He had fought from the first against the treaty and met defeat in his resolution declaring this nation did not accede to the British note of interpretation. The resolution was defeated without a record vote.

INVALID WOMAN BADLY BURNED

Covered Wagon Destroyed Near Paducah

PADUCAH, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—An invalid for two years, Mrs. Mary E. Reid, 70, was near death today from burns received when a covered wagon in which she and two sons were moving from Chattanooga, Okla., to Sedan, Texas, burned.

An oil stove the sons had been using to keep their mother warm exploded, firing the wagon and its contents. Mrs. Reid was burned about the legs and body before she could be removed.

RE-ELECT HARRISON

Budget Total at $33,800, Francis Announces At Banquet

Orville Bullington was elected president of the Wichita Falls chamber of comemrce for 1929 at the banquet meeting of the board of directors held Tuesday night at the Kemp hotel. Hubert M. Harrison was re-elected general manager of the organization.

Mr. Bullington served as first vice president during the year 1928, besides being a member of the agricultural committee. He was especially active in the development of dairying interests in this community.

Other Officers

Other officers named to work with Mr. Bullington during the current year are Harry Hines, first vice president; J. L. Jackson Jr., second vice president; and W. U. McCutchen, treasurer.

The present department and office personnel of the chamber of commerce will remain unchanged, it was said.

Subscriptions of the membership toward the 1929 budget totaled $33,800 Tuesday evening, according to the report given. Pledges are still coming in, the report said, and the directors expressed themselves as well pleased with the plan of raising the annual budget without a campaign of personal solicitation. It is expected by the officials of the organization that the entire budget of $35,000 for the year's work will be realized in responses to the letters mailed out a few days ago to the membership.

Silver for Francis

Charles L. Francis, retiring president, was presented with a handsome silver piece from the board of directors. Harry Hines made the presentation speech, expressing the pleasure and appreciation with which the directors have worked during 1928 under Mr. Francis' leadership.

Other retiring officers were Dr. O. B. Lee, second vice president and W. S. Abbott, treasurer. All but two of the board of directors were present at Tuesday night's meeting, which was largely a social affair.

Solons to Attend Fete Given Farm Champions

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 15. (INS)—The legislature today accepted an invitation extended by Senator Margie Neal of Carthage to attend a reception to be given Feb. 6 to the southern crop champions, who are touring 12 states. The champions are celebrating the silver anniversary of farm extension work in the United States.

The tour is being sponsored by the Chilean nitrate of soda educational bureau of Texas.

Pencil Stops Bullet Fired at Dallas Youth

DALLAS, Jan. 15. (UP)—A pencil saved I. C. Lister, 19, from being wounded by a hijacker last night.

Lister grabbed the hijacker's pistol and the gun was discharged against his breast.

The bullet went through his overcoat and struck a pencil in his pocket, the lead of the bullet falling into the lining of his coat.

The hijacker escaped.

Graham Chamber of Commerce Holds Annual Banquet; Progress Reviewed

By TEX ROGERS
Staff Correspondent

GRAHAM, Texas, Jan. 15.—The 21st annual banquet of the Graham Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture was held Tuesday evening at the Methodist church with the largest attendance of any similar function in the history of the organization. Plates were arranged for 300 guests.

Six new members of the board of directors were elected for the two-year period to follow. Retiring directors were Graham P. Stewart, who has served as president of the chamber the last two years; Irby Rhodes, J. E. Hightower, W. N. Varble, H. L. Tidwell and R. L. Morrison.

Directors Named

One of the first events on the program was the selection of the new board of directors, members of which will meet in the next few days to elect the new officers. The following directors were elected: Charles Atkinson, A. W. Maddox, A. A. Morrison, Graham P. Stewart, H. L. Thornton, and R. V. Tidwell.

The principal address of the evening was made by Dr. H. E. Griffin, vice president of the organization, who spoke for President Graham P. Stewart, who was ill. E. S. Graham, toastmaster, preceded Dr. Griffin in a short talk in which he praised Wichita Falls and her chamber of commerce, and compared the accomplishments of the latter with the Graham Chamber of Commerce.

Projects for Year

Dr. Griffin outlined the chief projects of the chamber for this year, the main one of which was the effort the chamber will make to secure the consent of the commissioners' court to a 50 per cent reduction of taxes on all oil stored in Young county for all companies which will install tank farms, provided they will allow the court to count the tanks as full on the day of rendition. In this regard, Dr. Griffin said he thought the oil men of the county had been unjustly taxed in the past.

Other projects for the year include:

LONG SUPPORTS SMALL'S PLAN

Wichita Legislator Favors Oil Suit Change

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Jan. 15.—Representative Bob Long of Wichita Falls announced today that he is supporting the bill by Senator Clint Small of Collingsworth changing the venue in state land suits that may be filed against oil companies and others. The law at present fixes the venue in such suits in Travis county. Defendants now are required to come to Austin at great expense to defend such litigation. Senator Small's bill fixes the venue in the county where the land controversy may be located.

W. B. Hamilton, chairman of the oil and gas bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Comemrce, is backing the bill.

AUSTIN, Jan. 15. (AP)—Two hundred and forty-six bills had been introduced today when the house recessed to clear its decks for an attack on the constantly increasing mass of proposed legislation by effecting the organization of 38 committees announced yesterday by Speaker W. S. Barron.

Less than 10 of the groups had met to consider measures routed to them for consideration.

Legion Bureau Files Receivership Plea

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 15. (AP)—Application for appointment on a receiver for the tenth national American Legion convention bureau was filed late yesterday by Killey Maverick Lumber company, Service Engraving company and the Fort Sam Houston Athletic association. Their claims total $6,026.23. The convention bureau's indebtedness to other parties, the claim allege, amount to approximately $61,000. Hearing was set for Friday.

Stewart-Rockefeller Fight Takes On New Aspect With Swimming Hole Row

ALTON, Ill., Jan. 15. (UP)—A dance pavilion and a swimming pool were injected into the John D. Rockefeller-Robert W. Stewart fight for control of the Standard Oil company of Indiana tonight by Frank J. Carstens, postmaster of Wood River, Ill.

In a special delivery letter to Colonel Stewart, who arrived here by special car on an annual inspection of the Wood River refinery of the company, the postmaster brought personally to Stewart's attention a long-standing grievance he has held against Standard Oil.

Colonel Stewart, accompanied by other members of the board of directors, were dinner guests of the employees' committee on industrial relations at the local plant tonight.

Carstens' complaint goes back to a time when Standard Oil donated $100,000 to Wood River to construct a swimming pool and a dance pavilion. That project, now in operation, came into immediate competition with a dance pavilion Carstens operated on an adjoining lot.

He charged that his subsequent failure to get a renewal of license to operate his pavilion was engineered by Standard Oil employees who happened to be members of the city council which refused his application. The matter has been taken successively to Stewart, Rockefeller, and to President Coolidge, and a congressional inquiry is hinted.

Learning that Stewart was due here tonight Carstens several days ago inserted in a Wood River paper a paid advertisement addressed to the oil leader and reading in part:

"You challenge the authority of John D. Rockefeller Jr., to speak for the stockholders. Now I challenge you the authority to speak for them when their superiors give them orders to sign as directed. Why doesn't the local management call me over to the office and di-

Capitol Hill Stays Dark as Moody Prefers Home to Inaugural Ball

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—For the first time since Gov. Neff opened his second term, inauguration night passed in Austin tonight without an inaugural ball. Governor Moody, who took the oath of office today, on the bible that was used to swear General Sam Houston into the same office, spent the evening at home with his wife and Dan Moody Jr., his nine-day old son.

The ceremonies in the house today were colorful but lacked the estentation of Moody's first inauguration on the capital lawn two years ago.

Bands from the University of Texas, North Texas Junior Agricultural college and John Tarleton Junior Agricultural college furnished ample music for the ceremony and entertained the crowds before and after the inauguration with concerts in the house and the capitol rotunda.

Chief Justice C. M. Cureton of the supreme court administered the oath of office to Lieut Gov. Barry Miller and the governor. Seated beside the chief justice was former Gov. J. D. Sayres, who took the same oath on the same Bible in 1898. At the age of 87, Gov. Sayres is now chairman of the board of pardons.

Baker to Join Mates On Question Mark Thursday

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Jan. 15. (8)—Capt. Ira C. Eaker, pilot of the Question Mark in its endurance record breaking flight, tonight wired Major Carl Spatz, his commander, that he would be in San Diego Thursday night ready to help pilot the huge army plane on its contemplated cross-country hop to Washington.

Capt. Eaker flew here from San Diego when his mother, ill with influenza, took a sudden turn for the worse. She was reported much better today.

Texas Press Ass'n Meets Friday in Convention

AUSTIN, Jan. 15. (AP)—A discussion of newspaper legislation and preparations for the organization's golden jubilee celebration this spring will be chief items of business before the Texas Press association when it assembles here Friday and Saturday for its mid-winter convention.

The association is expected to ask passage of a bill requiring counties and subdivisions to publish all legal notices instead of posting them. The jubilee celebration is to be held at Mineral Wells, June 13-15.

Identity of 'John Doe' Unknown in Death

MEXIA, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—The identity of an aged man who died here Sunday under the name of "John Doe" remained unsolved today.

"John Doe," about 85, came here five years ago during an oil boom. He made no friends and led a lonely life.

Erasures of his name had been made on papers found among his effects.

NEW AIR LINE OFFERED HERE

T. A. T. Planes to Connect With Major Routes

A passenger air line from Fort Worth to Amarillo by way of Wichita Falls is included in a list of eight such lines to be inaugurated within the state in the near future by the Texas Air Transport, Inc., according to dispatches from Fort Worth headquarters of the concern Tuesday afternoon.

The new lines will form a network over the state and will connect with eight out of state lines, it was stated by Tom Hardin, vice president.

A meeting of the representatives of the new air corporation with local chamber of commerce officials scheduled for Thursday has been postponed.

Aside from Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Amarillo, the proposed system of air lines will afford regular passenger service to Laredo, San Antonio, Austin, Houston, Galveston, Waco, Texarkana, Dallas, Brownsville and El Paso.

$25,000 STOCK MEET

Subscribing of $25,000 of stock here in the Braniff airlines as an aid to obtaining an extension of passenger air service from Oklahoma City to Dallas by way of Wichita Falls and Fort Worth will be discussed Wednesday noon at the Wichita club by about 50 local business men who will meet with Paul Braniff as guests of the chamber of commerce.

PRYOR CLAIMS CASE "FRAMED"

Officers Planned Robbery, Shumate Testifies

Tuesday morning with the calling of Shumate as the state's chief witness. His examination and cross examination lasted until 12 o'clock and was resumed after the lunch recess. He told the jury that the idea of robbing the warehouse of the news stand of the 60,000 cigarets involved in the burglary was suggested by Pryor and Shook, and that he acted on their advice and under their protection.

In his cross examination, Mr. Heyser asked Shumate if he weren't seeking an avenue of escape for his "own neck" and attempted to show that Shumate entertained "animus" against the defendant.

Bralley Tells of Arrest

The state next called W. G. Bralley, sheriff, who described the arrest of Shumate, discovered in Pryor's bed, and the later apprehension of Pryor and Shook. The sheriff said he had identified Shumate by scars on the back of his neck, that Pryor had told him the man in bed with him was his kid brother.

Mr. Heyser asked the witness if he knew of enmity between Pryor and Jim Taylor, chief of police at Electra, and of ill feeling which had grown up in connection with some prisoners claimed by Pryor, who had paid fines and fees to the chief. Mr. Bralley denied knowledge of the affair, and said the Electra officials had nothing to do with his calling at Pryor's house.

Mr. Taylor was later put on the stand and admitted that the feeling between himself and the defendant was "not the best in the world." He denied that he had had anything to do with the arrest and the prosecution in the case.

Warren W. Belcher, deputy sheriff, W. H. Jackson, half owner of the warehouse which was robbed, and R. H. Hart, night chief of police at Electra, were called to the stand. Mr. Hart testified that on the night of the burglary he had gone with Pryor, at Pryor's suggestion, out on the road to Vernon to search for a car reported stolen there. He admitted that ill feeling exists between the city officials and Pryor and said he had heard something of a charge of official misconduct in which the city officials had testified against Pryor in the county court. Pryor was acquitted of the charges.

Politics Barred

Mr. Heyser here asked the witness if he did not know that in politics one faction is willing to send another to the penitentiary in order to keep itself in power. The state objected, declaring that the trial was a law-suit, not a political argument. Judge Martin sustained the objection and said that no bars would be let down and no political arguments allowed.

Mrs. Blair, who gave her age as 33, and her address as 2306 Buchanan, was next called to the stand. She said that Shumate was a friend, but not a special friend, of hers. On the morning of Sunday, June 24, the day after Shumate broke jail, he came to her house, she said. She did not know at that time had ever been in jail or was escaping, she told the jury.

Shumate, she said, asked her to deliver a message to Pryor and Shook in Electra, asking them to meet him after dark that night off the Seymour road. She drove to Electra, telephoned Pryor, told him she had a message from Shumate, and agreed to follow him out on the Vernon road to deliver it, according to her testimony. She followed the car in which Shook and Pryor were driving out beyond the Waggoner refinery, down a lane, and into a pasture, she said. There she delivered the message.

Meet With Shumate

That night, she went on, at Shumate's request, she drove to the railroad station here, secured two traveling bags for him, paid the storage charges and delivered them to him at the meeting place on the Seymour road after dark. Shook and Pryor were there, she said. She denied any knowledge of what was going on, asserting in answer to the questions of the defense counsel, that it was none of her business and that she would do as much for any one else. She denied that she had concealed Shumate in her home all that Sunday, and that she had purposely left town soon after the arrest of the three men. She said she owned the concessions in a carnival and was traveling on the business of the show.

Mr. Heyser asked repeatedly if the delivery of such messages in such a way did not arouse her womanly curiosity, but the witness repeated that she made no inquiries and thought nothing of the affair.

The state rested at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon, leaving the defense time to call only a few preliminary witnesses. "Uncle Ed" Wilson, justice of the peace of Electra, was summoned, testifying that he had known Pryor for 10 years and had not seen him in company with Shumate. Gage McDermitt, former assistant district attorney, and Ben Allred, formerly district attorney, were questioned in an effort to show that Shumate had been offered immunity if he would agree to implicate Pryor and Shook in his statement. The witnesses said they had heard no such promise made.

Verdict Overruled

Testimony for the defense will be resumed Wednesday morning and the case is expected to go to the jury by noon. The jurors are: E. D. Wright, Burkburnett; W. S. Mullin, J. F. Sims and J. C. Turkett, Iowa Park; G. A. Barron, Electra, and W. N. Deaton, J. B. Parris, C. V. Smith, G. B. Campbell, B. F. Quarton, J. D. Perry and Charles S. Crean, Wichita Falls.

The defense, conducted with the assistance of Harry Bunnesberg, objected to the testimony of Shumate, on the grounds of his credibility as a witness, and to the statement of Mrs. Blair as being immaterial to the court in the indictment elected by the state. The court overruled a motion for an instructed verdict offered just after the close of the state's evidence.

Two Texas Fliers Killed When Repaired Plane Plunges to Earth

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 15. (AP)—H. W. "Marty" O'Toole of the Southwest Air Service agency and Melvin Smith of the 52nd Aviation school group, Kelly Field, Texas, were instantly killed late this afternoon when their plane went into a nose dive and crashed from an altitude of 700 feet.

Smith had been detailed to the municipal airport here to service army airplanes and he and O'Toole had gone aloft. The motor of their plane apparently failed and the bodies, badly mutilated, were dragged from the wreckage and identity of the aviators established.

The plane, which was being taken up on a test flight after a minor overhaul, was owned by Lieut. H. W. Sheridan, of Minneapolis, who arrived here Monday en route to the Pacific coast.

Senate Okehs Kellogg Pact

final hours of the treaty debate. Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, and Lady Howard; Ambassador Claudel of France and Minister Ciechanowski of Poland, were in the diplomatic gallery.

Good Show Put On

Scores of women of national organizations staging a peace pact rally in the capitol, bedecked with imposing badges of bright colors, were in the assemblage.

The senate, it may be said, put on a "good show." Although agreement had been reached to bring out the report of the foreign relations committee demanded by the "interpretationist" forces, the suspense was held for more than two hours as debate continued.

Rights Not Impaired

Then the report was presented. It was what the Reed-Moses forces had insistently demanded, and what Secretary of State Kellogg and administration forces who stood for ratification without interpretation, had as insistently opposed.

The report set forth that the committee approved the treaty with the understanding that America's right of self-defense was in no way impaired or curtailed. It declared that the historic Monroe doctrine is regarded as part of the national security and self-defense. It made clear that no obligation is implied to join in coercive measures in treaty violations.

Farm Expert Visits Archer City Ranch

Charles Weeks, specialist in intensive development of small farms spoke to a large gathering of citizens of the Archer City community in the American Legion hall at that place Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Archer City chamber of commerce.

Mr. Weeks discussed "Land Culture and Life Culture."

Prior to the meeting, Mr. Weeks visited the chicken farm and broiler plant of F. M. Power, mayor of Archer City, where several thousand broilers are being raised in "batteries," or continuous double-decked coops.

Mr. Weeks and James Yoths, general sales manager in the Weeks organization, were entertained by Mr. Power at a dinner.

WIDOW TELLS OF SHOOTING

Jury Complete in Childress Murder Trial

Special to The Record News

CHILDRESS, Texas, Jan. 15.—Mrs. Alonzo Keasler took the stand as a state witness in district court here, in the trial of Will Bales on a charge of murdering her husband, when the introduction of testimony got under way after completion of the jury early this afternoon.

The widow told of the shooting to death of her husband on their Donley county farm near Giles, after he had argued with a man concerning the keeping of cattle within proper bounds.

Two other witnesses, a Mr. Johnson and a Mr. Stroud, both of Hedley, testified that Bales came to Hedley and purchased a pistol shortly before the shooting.

Nine jurors had been selected when court adjorned yesterday. The remaining three were chosen this morning and early this afternoon.

State testimony is expected to be completed early Wednesday, when the defense will present its case.

2. Continue efforts to secure milk condensary or a cheese factory.

3. Continue to encourage terracing of the soil.

4. Continue efforts towards improving the Murry road to the county line, and secure state designation.

5. Consider the establishment of a junior college.

6. To induce business men to form a revolving fund of $30,000 to assist small industries in locating here.

7. To encourage voters to support the chamber of commerce by public taxation.

8. To consider the feasibility of enlarging for irrigation purposes the lake and dam now under construction here.

9. To ask the federal radio commission for a permit to install a 200 watt broadcasting station.

10. To hold meetings every Saturday afternoon, during which farmers can discuss their problems.

11. To buy two large terracing and ditching machines.

The committee on program and entertainment was composed of H. L. Thornton, W. N. Varble and Milton Snoddy.

Included in the entertainment features were an address by E. S. Graham, acting as toastmaster; solos by R. L. Shepherd, renowned during his term of office as the "singing mayor of Wichita Falls," vocal solos by Miss Maud Gruby, organ recital by Miss Lois Johnson and dinner music by the Graham High School orchestra.

The banquet menu was evolved exclusively from products of Young county, the feature being barbecued baby beef selected by Graham P. Stewart, president of the chamber.

The program follows:

Assembly prelude (organ) by Miss Lois Johnson.
Introductory remarks by E. S. Graham.
Invocation by the Rev. W. E. B. Lockridge.
Singing ("America") led by R. E. Shepherd.
Dinner music by Graham High School orchestra, F. H. Bowron, conductor.
Balloting on directorate.

"Songs for Everybody," led by R. E. Shepherd.
Rural work reports by Miss Norfleet Grimes, home demonstrator, and W. C. Hale, county farm agent.
Vocal solo by R. E. Shepherd.
Introduction of guests.
Closing remarks by E. S. Graham.

Due to illness, Graham P. Stewart, president of the chamber of commerce, was unable to appear on the program and deliver his review of the accomplishments of the chamber during the last year.

FOR LEADERS

Ad Club to Sponsor Award of Cups For Civic Service

Recognition for service to the city of Wichita Falls in 1929 through financial aid and through work and ideas of development will be provided by the Advertising club, whose members voted Tuesday noon to sponsor the award of cups to the two citizens contributing the most of such service during the current year.

Decision in the "contest" will rest with a committee representative of the entire citizenship, it was said. Regulations will be drawn up by a committee appointed by A. E. Kelly, club president, consisting of W. S. Abbott, chairman; T. A. Bradley, M. A. Ellis, V. N. Armstrong, and Cecil Putty.

H. C. Jhonson was the speaker of the day, addressing the membership on "Ads that Create Desire."

Armed Men Take Payroll Of Baking Powder Co.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15. (AP)—Eight men armed with machine guns and shotguns today held up 200 employes in the offices of the Calumet Baking Powder company and escaped with $8,000.

The loot consisted of payroll cash which had just been delivered at the baking powder company when the robber gang entered, menacing the employes, many of whom were girls. The robbers ordered them to line up along the walls and with their hands up while the cashier was ordered to enter the vault and produce the money.

SEYMOUR LAYS BANQUET PLANS

Annual Feast to Be Held Early in March

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 15.—O. C. McDaniel, president of the Seymour Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a program committee in preparation for the forthcoming annual banquet of the chamber of commerce to be held about March 7.

A large representation from chambers of commerce from other cities in northwest Texas is expected at the banquet.

An effort will be made to secure Josh Lee, noted after dinner speaker from the University of Oklahoma who appeared at the recent Wichita Falls chamber of commerce annual banquet, to assist in the program of entertainment.

According to H. K. Jackson, secretary of the Seymour Chamber of Commerce, major projects already adopted by the chamber for 1929 embrace:

1. Effort to induce location of Gulf, Texas and Western railroad shops in Seymour.

2. Active participation in plans for a proposed irrigation project, involving construction of a huge dam on the Brazos near Seymour.

3. Continuation of intensive effort to expand the poultry and dairying industries in Baylor county.

4. Support of the agricultural division of the chamber, particularly with reference to the activities of County Farm Agent S. A. Palmer.

5. Support of any nature required to effect early completion of the paved highway system of Baylor county now under construction.

A resume of the progress of Seymour in the year just ended, according to Secretary Jackson, discloses the greatest volume of building construction of any year in Seymour's history, the greatest manifestation of civic pride, greatest exhibition of interest in the development of agriculture, dairying, poultry raising, and modern farming practices on the part of the commercial and financial interests of Seymour and a renewed determination to take advantage of every opportunity and resource to add to the substantial growth of Seymour and Baylor county.

Particular reference was made by Secretary Jackson to the increased interest in poultry raising resulting from financing a start of farm club boys and girls in poultry raising by a group of 50 local business men. These youngsters almost without exception were so successful in their projects that their parents have made poultry raising a part of the farm program, Mr. Jackson declared.

Thin Folks! Here's 5 Pounds of Solid Flesh or Money Back

Underweight means your vitality is under par, your strength and energy below normal, so no wonder if you are thin, scrawny with sunken chest and hollows in your cheeks, you always feel down in the mouth, discouraged and rundown in health.

There isn't an underweight man or woman on earth who wouldn't feel better if their weight was what it should be.

That's why every man and woman whose bones are scantily covered and who want to gain in health and have an attractive figure should take advantage of McCoy's offer.

McCoy takes all the risk — Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking four 60 cent boxes of McCoy's Tablets or two $1 boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least five pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health —your money will be returned.

Just ask for McCoy's Tablets at Renfro Drug Co. or any drug store in America.—Adv.

Life Worth Living Now, He Declares

Wichita Falls Man Gains Seven Pounds On Orgatone and Strength and Energy Returns

"I've gained seven pounds on Orgatone already and feel better than I have in two years," said J. W. Beasley, a well-known painter and paperhanger residing at 506 Adams street, Wichita Falls, Texas, a few days ago, in a conversation with the Orgatone representative, in Allison's Drug Store.

"I was bothered almost constantly with my stomach for about two years," Mr. Beasley continued, "and I would have severe sick headaches almost all the time. Some times I could hardly bear to stand up, I suffered so, and even when I would lie down it didn't seem like I could get any relief. I felt dull and listless and without any strength or energy and I was so racked by the pain that I kept on falling off in weight and my nerves started going to pieces so that I couldn't sleep hardly any. Then on top of all these troubles I suffered from gas formation, which just made life miserable for me and no matter what I did or what treatments I took, nothing seemed to do me any good, but I just kept going down hill and getting worse from day to day.

"I read a lot of statements in the papers about Orgatone from Wichita Falls people that I knew or had heard of and some of them described their troubles just like mine, so I decided to try the medicine, too. Well, sir, it did me a lot more good than I ever hoped it would. After the first few doses my stomach eased so I could eat without suffering any afterwards and I began feeling better every day. The pain stopped and my nerves didn't seem to be on edge like they had been and I could sleep in peace once more. I have just finished my first bottle and I can truthfully say I am feeling one hundred percent better and I have gained seven pounds in weight and my strength and energy is coming back and I feel fine—like life is worth living again. All those pains in my head, which I have been trying to get rid of for two long years, are gone and my stomach seems all right now. It didn't take me long to see that Orgatone was the right medicine and was just the thing I had been looking for all the time and I am always ready to pass the good word on and let others know what Orgatone will do."

Orgatone may be obtained in Wichita Falls from Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indiana avenue. A special representative of the Orgatone laboratories will be glad to explain the therapeutic value of Orgatone which is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles $6.25.—Adv.

BRITAIN SEEKS AIR LAURELS

Old Chappies Hot for Future Contest

LONDON, Jan. 15. (US)—Turning from the one unofficial, and the five official records set by British aviators during 1928, Great Britain is looking forward to 1929 as the "air wonder" year of the age.

Every possible effort is being exerted by leaders in British aviation to capture new laurels during the coming year. Besides measures looking towards an assurance of aerial supremacy in South Africa where German competition already is offering stubborn opposition, British flyers will attempt to set new marks in speed, duration of flight and duration.

Speed Trials

In connection with speed trials, planes are being built in England for entry in the Schneider cup competition which will have estimated speeds of seven miles a minute, or more than 400 miles an hour. For endurance flights, a secret plane is being tested out at the big Cranwell airport with which it is hoped to fly non-stop from Capetown to London.

Even the celebrated total duration record set by the American "Question Mark" will come within the aim of British aerial aspirations, and announcement of the offer of a $50,000 prize by a Denver publisher for the first non-stop round-the-world flight is stimulating interest here at the possibility of an English flyer winning this award.

Point to Greig

Considering the achievements of the past year, Britons are prone to set prime importance on the speed record set by Flight Lieut. D'Arcy Greig, who established a speed of fractionally more than 319 miles an hour over Southampton water. Although this record was unofficial, since it did not surpass by the necessary five miles an hour the previous speed record, it is considered by Britons as setting England in the forefront of aerial speed merchants.

Pride over this achievement is heightened by the fact that the plane in which Flight Lieutenant Greig attained this great speed was only built to develop 300 miles an hour. Machines now being built for this year's Schneider trophy races by Great Britain are designed for 400 miles an hour.

Holds Cup

The Schneider cup is at present held by Great Britain, and this year's trophy race will be held over Southampton. Every effort, therefore, is being exerted to retain the cup in the air classic which will be held late in August or early in September. Five nations are expected to compete for the trophy.

Wowan Granted $3,000,000 And Divorce Says She Only Wants $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15. (US)—Here's a woman who has just received a present of a nicely bound divorce decree and $3,000,000 and doesn't want either.

The rebellious beneficiary of these donations is Mrs. Nannie Inman Brokaw, New York society woman and until the decree was signed in Reno, the wife of Clifford V. Brokaw of the eastern family of Brokaw millionaires.

Mrs. Brokaw indignantly protests that she doesn't want a divorce and that she has no use for $3,000,000.

What she wants is a quiet little court order for separate maintenance and $100,000 to put in the bank as a safeguard against a rainy day. That's her idea of straightening out her matrimonial tangle, and she declared in Reno today that she was going to get it despite the protests of her Reno attorneys. She declared that she would appeal the divorce granted last week by Superior Judge G. A. Ballard to the Nevada supreme court.

Brokaw, who is now in San Francisco, seemed quite puzzled over this new turn. He refused to discuss the matter.

POLE HUNTER WANTS TO FLY

Veteran of Early Arctic Trip Again Feels Urge

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—General Greely said today that he would like another whack at the north pole! But this time on wings.

He is General A. W. Greely, U. S. A., retired, leader of the famous Greely arctic expedition of nearly half a century ago. At 85 he has his seventh book just off the press and is working on another.

General Greely is like an old fire horse that smells smoke. He can't go exploring himself any longer, but he reads avidly every line that tells what younger men are doing just now in the antarctic.

Particularly, he thinks Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins, leader of the Wilkins-Hearst expedition, is giving a wonderful contribution to scientific knowledge of the south polar region.

It was back in 1881 that General Greely—with civil war wounds to his credit—was made commander of the United States expedition to establish one of a chain of 13 circumpolar stations.

With his party of 25, he reached further north than any other explorer before Peary and discovered a new land north of Greenland, crossing Grinnel land to the Polar sea. There the party was lost. The last of three relief expeditions months later found it, reduced to seven through exposure and starvation.

"That was a hard trip," General Greely says. "It took up many months to do what could be done in as many days today. Yes, I think I would like to try polar exploration in an airplane."

He has been decorated by a number of geographical societies and represented Uncle Sam at the coronation of King George of England in 1911.

New Attack on Houdini Spirit Message Launched by Magician

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. (UP)—The mystic message "believe" allegedly sent from the realms of the spirit world by Magician Harry Houdini to his widow here, was under a new attack today.

Joseph Dunninger, magician, and like Houdini in his lifetime, an unrelenting foe of spurious psychic phenomena, was the generalissimo in this latest effort to disprove the validity of the message which Mrs. Houdini herself had declared convinced her of its genuineness.

Aiding him in his attack was a fish handler, Joseph Bantino, 28, from the Fulton Fish market, old stamping ground of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Apartment Visited

Dunninger, Bantino and a small army of press folk descended upon Mrs. Houdini's apartment last night while Dunninger, without even rolling up his sleeves, produced Bantino, and Bantino produced a story designed to cast doubt upon spiritualism in the "believe" message.

In a word Bantino related that he had courted a girl who knew one Daisy White, herself a magician and acquaintance of Houdini. Bantino opined that the Rev. Arthur Ford, medium in the transfer had had her code and the message from Houdini long before he ever became a spirit.

Mrs. Houdini seemed bewildered at this new turn, but indignantly refused to believe that Daisy White had had her husband's confidence. She said she had found letters from Houdini to the woman, who, she added had often brought her "message" from Houdini.

"But none ever came in our secret code," she said.

Dunninger then gave an exhibition of reading messages reporters wrote and secreted, and offered $21,000 if he and his spirits could read a message he would write and secrete.

Girl Knew Bantino

Later Daisy White at Ford's apartment admitted knowing the fish handler slightly, but said she had never discussed Houdini in that quarter or never said she had got Houdini's code before his death.

The Rev. Mr. Ford observed:

"Mrs. Houdini accepted the message as genuine and that is the important thing."

He denied having any material or spiritual assistance from Daisy in his communication with the world beyond.

This ended the night's developments.

Mrs. Houdini claimed still to believe, while the scoffers continued to scoff.

Trophy Awarded To U. S. Air Branch

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—The Collier trophy, presented annually to the individual or organization contributing most to the development of aeronautics in the United States, was today awarded to the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce.

The selection was made by a special committee of the National Aeronautics association, appointed by Senator Hiram Bingham as president.

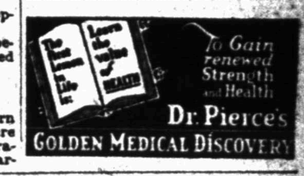

Declaring that the growth of commercial aviation in the United States "has been amazing during the past year," the committee in announcing the award added:

"America now leads the world in the use of aircraft for commercial purposes. The committee feels that the efficient, unselfish and untiring efforts of the entire personnel of the aeronautics branch, department of commerce, has contributed more to this advancement of American aeronautics than any other one thing.

RATES REMEDY AS PERFORMING NEAR MIRACLES

Former Sufferers From Stomach Trouble Praise Internal Antiseptic

G. M. GORDON
Discoverer of Gordon's

Thousands of former sufferers from stomach trouble, many of whom had given up hope of ever being well, unqualifiedly indorse Gordon's (formerly Gordon's Antiseptic). Some go so far as to rate it as performing "near miracles."

Gordon's, an internal antiseptic, stops fermentation (souring of food matter), which is the greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of stomach disorders. It goes right to the seat of the trouble because it exercises a distinctly antiseptic as well as digestive effect.

It will soothe and heal the irritated or inflamed condition of the stomach and bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, gas, dyspepsia, sour stomach, "that tired feeling," excess acid, bloating, bad breath, constipation, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion. It will tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. The first dose will convince you.

Gordon's is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.10—less than three cents a dose. At druggists.

Tough Hang On Coughs Dangerous Company

Get Rid of Them Quick

After coughing for two years almost continuously a man of considerable means got thin and tired and worn out, made his will, and was ready to quit the big game of life.

A friend spoke to him about Bronchuline Emulsion and now life to him is very sweet indeed.

That's the kind of a cough that is put out of business with amazing speed when the cougher is wise to Bronchuline Emulsion.

Tough old coughs—persistent coughs—coughs that hang on and rob people of their sleep—those are the kind of coughs Bronchuline likes to tackle.

Many times such coughs linger after the Grippe or a heavy cold, and if you have one or know of anyone who has one keep Bronchuline Emulsion in mind.

It isn't just a cheap sweet cough syrup—it's the best cough remedy—and the best is never cheap. Allison's Drug Co. and dealers everywhere can supply you.—Adv.

Facing the cruelest test a skin can meet

The huge new incandescent "sunspot" lights stream down heartlessly on the star's skin while the close-up is being taken. Any tiniest defect will be registered on the film, now more highly sensitised even than before. In consequence, of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 guard the smoothness of their skin with Lux Toilet Soap.

"Without smooth skin, no girl can be lovely," say leading directors

IT is the most precious charm a girl can have—clear velvety skin. All Hollywood agrees on this, leading stars and directors alike.

For there is something about lovely skin that sends a ripple of emotion through every heart.

And for the screen star, skin as smooth as a flower petal is a prime necessity.

"People open their hearts instantly to the appealing loveliness of exquisite skin," says Edward Sedgwick, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, expressing the experience of 39 Hollywood directors. "Every star knows how essential it is to have beautiful, smooth skin."

JOAN CRAWFORD, fascinating Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, meets the brilliancy of the new incandescent "sunspot" close-up lights with perfect self-confidence—because her lovely face and arms and shoulders are kept beautifully smooth with Lux Toilet Soap.

"I have tried innumerable French soaps but never have I had anything like Lux Toilet Soap for keeping my skin fresh and smooth. And 'studio skin' is the all-important asset for the star who must face into the glaring lights of the close-up."

Joan Crawford

JOAN CRAWFORD finds this delicately fragrant white soap delightful both in this lovely bathroom and in her special dressing room on location. It keeps her skin in such marvelous condition.

The next time you see RUTH TAYLOR in a close-up, notice how softly smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps her fair skin. This little Paramount blonde says: "No art of make-up can deceive the close-up. I guard my skin as my most priceless possession and know that Lux Toilet Soap treats it gently."

9 out of 10 screen stars guard their smooth skin this way

HOW well the lovely girls whose beauty stirs a million hearts every time they appear in a close-up, know that the skin must be kept rarely smooth!

Of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 depend on Lux Toilet Soap to guard their skin.

The very next time you see Joan Crawford or Ruth Taylor in the close-up, notice how captivatingly smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps their skin.

Following the example of the stars, every one of the great film studios has made this soap the official soap in all dressing rooms.

If you haven't already discovered for yourself just how smooth this fragrant white soap keeps your skin, try it today.

You'll like it in your bath, too. It lathers so generously! Remember: 9 out of 10 screen stars use it.

James Daly Lectures to Drama Department at Meeting Tuesday

Members of the drama department of the Woman's Forum met at the Forum clubhouse Tuesday afternoon when James Daly, professional director of the Little Theater, lectured. Mr. Daly discussed the Little Theater from the standpoint of the theaters in Europe, using those of Italy and France as examples.

"In Italy they care more for the actors and acting than for the plays themselves," Mr. Daly said. He only cited one famous author and that was Pirandello. "The French theater at best is far inferior to the American theater at best," he declared, using for example the French play, "Maya." This play is "profanely moral," he said, but he was not surprised when the police took it off the stage in New York."

Regarding the production of a play, Mr. Daly pointed out that the play is only the seed that the director has to cultivate. He explained that there were two ways in which a play could be approached. One way is to submit himself to the play and give an objective production and the other is to take two characters and try to make the audience see the play through the eyes of the characters. This is an objective production. Mr. Daly used the play, "Outward Bound" as an example.

"There is an essential difference between stage setting and interior decoration. In the stage setting the people are to be the observers and not the actors while interior decorating is not so much for the people to look at as for the effect upon the actors."

Mr. Daly discussed several ways of presenting the play, "Hamlet." He cited the different ways some of the great directors would present it, using Craig, Appia and Bragdon as examples and then portrayed one or two imaginary directors.

Preceding Mr. Daly's talk, a straw vote was taken for the election of officers of the general Forum..

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Just Rub Away Danger

Influenza, Pneumonia and Grippe usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches rub on good old Musterole.

Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old Mustard plaster without blistering.

First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Mary Garden Injured During Chicago Play

CHICAGO, Jan. 15. (AP)—Mary Garden, opera star, was injured during a performance of "The Love of Three Kings," here yesterday. Virgilio Lazzari, as the blind king, in hurling the diva from him during a scene inadvertently put too much force into it and Miss Garden was bruised. She stood up until she reached the wings where she collapsed and fainted.

W. O. W. Insurance Head Not Guilty of Fraud

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 15. (AP)—Without deciding the legal questions involved, District Judge W. G. Hastings, today found that W. F. Fraser, sovereign commander of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance association, and other officials of it, were not guilty of fraud in connection with the sale of the Woodmen building here early in 1926, for approximately $1,600,000.

Federal Trade Balance Favorable at Year's End

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (UP)—American business ended 1928 with a favorable trade allowance of $1,089,202,000, Secretary of Commerce Whiting announced today. Exports were $5,129,132,000, and imports were $4,089,930,000 in 1928—compared with exports of $4,865,275,000 and imports of $4,184,742,000 in 1927.

Salary Hike Given Harmon Officials

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 15. (UP)—The senate today passed house bill No. 2 by Representative Carmack increasing salaries of Harmon county officers.

The bill as passed was amended by Senator Easter and fixed the salaries of county judge, attorney and sheriff at $2,250 each, and providing $1,800 yearly salary to the county clerk and similar officers.

The original bill would have provided $3,500 for judge, attorney, and sheriff, but factions compromised at the amended figure.

Cast for Initial Play of Little Theater Selected

As a result of the Little theater tryout held Monday afternoon and evening in the office of the director, James Daly, on the second floor of the Forum clubhouse, the following cast for "Dulcy" has been chosen by Daly and the casting committee: Angela Forbes, Ruth M. Henry; Mrs. Forbes, Mrs. A. D. Duck; Mr. Forbes, Paul Barnett; Bill Parker, Louis Bond; Dulcy, Gretchen Comegys; Gordon Smith, Harry Brady; Henry, Frederick Behmann; Leach, Robert C. Humphrey; Patterson, W. D. Bent; Sterritt, Elmer Pegley; Van Dyck, Edward Smith.

Mr. Daly expressed himself as being greatly pleased by the amount of talent revealed in the tryouts. "The fact that nearly 50 people tried for parts proves that interest in the Little theater is vital, he said; "I only hope those not cast for 'Dulcy' won't be dispirited. It was very hard for us to choose; in many instances we refrained from casting candidates not because it seemed to us that they would be inferior in 'Dulcy,' but because we believed them to be even better fitted for parts in the proposed later productions."

Oil Tanker Still Held Fast on Florida Rocks

STUART, Fla., Jan. 15. (AP)—The Gulf Refining tanker Trinidadian, aground on Gilbert's shoals near here since Friday, still was firmly held today on the rocks while tugs strove to float her.

A calm sea since she went aground was conceded in the distressed tanker's favor.

The grounding cost the life of Ben Sawyer, member of the crew of the tug Warbler who was crushed by a flying tackle during salvage operations.

Announcement Halts Flight of Ford Stock

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. (INS)—Flat denial by Vice President W. R. Campbell of the Ford Motor company of Canada of any intention to split up the stock or declare a stock dividend put a sudden end today to the wild flight of the stock in the curb market and pricked a bubble of speculation that had already carried Ford stock up 160 points from the previous close.

Campbell said that no dividend could be declared in 1929, as the company had lost $4,000,000 last year.

American Artists Belong at Home Declares Critic

By WILLIAM B. McCORMICK
Universal Service Art Critic

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—In a recent interview with Gari Melchers, in connection with his current retrospective exhibition in the Anderson galleries, he is quoted by my colleague, Malcolm Vaughan, as saying: "America is where Americans belong. This particularly true for painters." And to press in this wisest of words of guidance for the young American artist Mr. Melchers added: "Had I my life to live over again I should go to Europe only for visits."

These quotations are made here since they emphasize, on the most distinguished authority, a point I have been insisting on in these columns for a long time, and also for the reason that they are especially happy in relation to the current exhibition in the Whitney studio galleries, which is made up of four one-man shows.

These painters are Max Kuehne, Karl Free, Joseph Pollet and Henri Burkhard; and Mrs. Force has "hung" them very handsomely and generously by giving to each of them a room for his own work, so that it may be seen and enjoyed to the fullest.

Source of Inspiration

Max Kuehne is considered here first owing to the place he has made for himself in American art, and owing to the fact that his Spanish and Cape Ann paints illustrate perfectly and completely just how much more inspired a painter is by scenes in his native country, whose atmosphere and color is in his blood, than by those of any foreign land. And if any one is inclined to doubt this simple statement it may be called to their attention that we go to Italy to see Italian pictures, to France to see French pictures, to Holland to see Dutch pictures. For the greatest masters of any country always won that place in art by painting things belonging to their native world.

As it happens, Kuehne shows four Spanish landscapes and city scenes as against an equal number of American themes. In the first named group he has simply carried on a traditional contemporary manner that has no particular distinction, but in his views of city streets in Gloucester and Rockport, on Cape Ann, he at once becomes intensely American, personal and wholly free from any memories of other painters' work. His color sparkles. His scenes are vividly realistic. He impresses the spectator with the verve, the "pleasantness" of American summer life. Neither here nor in the canvases of Karl Free or Joseph Pollett does one feel any waving of the American flag. Yet all that is best in that symbol envelops the work of these three young men.

Liberal Display

Karl Free emerges here almost as a new discovery, since he has never before been accorded so liberal a display of his work. He paints almost the detail of the pre-Raphaelite school and yet quite without any of that affectation. His "Iowa Landscape" is an admirable example of the gentle serenity of his painter's spirit in its breadth, its commendable details, its enveloping atmosphere. What magic he can work with nothing more than tones of green is shown in the delectable "Landscape," a little prospect of a sloping hillside and some trees. His "Rising Storm" shows how varied can be his mood in interpreting a countryside overshadowed by threatening clouds, and his feeling for design in the water color of "The Hunt" further stressed by a provocative bar of music beneath the lively composition.

Since his last exhibition in the Dudensing galleries, Joseph Pollet has moved so far ahead as a painter that he seems quite like another man. He continues his devotion to painting large nudes that arrive at little save in the case of his "Blonde Model," the head of which is almost a complete justification for his work in this metier. But it is rather in his landscapes and interiors that he shows such marked improvement.

is Not the Safe Way to Soft-cook 1000 EGGS

Neither is Roasting huge Quantities of Coffee at a Time the sure Way—that's why Hills Bros Roast a few Pounds at a Time by a Continuous Process

CAN you imagine what would happen after you had moved the kettle from the fire? Before you could take out all the eggs many would be over-cooked. Certainly it pays to soft-cook eggs a few at a time. You have control!

Hills Bros. control the flavor of their coffee because they roast a few pounds at a time by a continuous process. Every berry is roasted evenly—to that exact point where matchless uniform flavor is assured. No other coffee is roasted this way.

Every bit of the delicious aroma and flavor created by this exclusive process of Controlled Roasting comes to you intact because Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum. You sense it the instant you open the can.

Hills Bros. Coffee is drunk everywhere. Always ask for it by name and to be sure—look for the Arab, Hills Bros.' famous trade-mark, on the can.

Pitfalls for Youth Are Cause of Old Age's Deafness to Pleas

It Is Not Because Age Has Forgotten What Youth Is Like, but Because It Remembers Pitfalls on Every Side That It Turns Deaf Ear to Youth's Cry for Indulgence.

A girl, who plainly regards all elderly people as prehistoric fossils, asks: "Why is it that old people can never understand young people?" Oh, but they do, my dear. The trouble is not that the old do not understand the young. It is because they understand the young too well. That is where the conflict between the two ages comes in, for the old, knowing what the young are thinking and the experiences they are going through, are trying to tell them the things they don't want to hear and to which they will not listen.

It is the young who cannot understand the old because they lack the wisdom and the knowledge that years alone bring. They are in the kindergarten stage of life. They are learning their A B C's while the old are finishing their post-graduate course in advanced philosophy and psychology.

The young think they are very mysterious, that they are somehow different from any other human beings who ever existed, and that no one else ever thought of surging thoughts, or palpitated to the same thrills, or had the same hopes and pains and ambitions as they have.

It would surprise them to know that all of us older people have been down the road that they are just starting to travel. That there is not a single man or woman of us who has not been confused with the muddled thoughts of youth as they are; who has not been torn by the same temptations; who has not sent up the same little painted balloons of hope, and wept the same tears of disappointment when they collapsed.

Not one of us but know how alluring the primroses that bloom along the roadside and how easy it is to wander off to gather them. Not one of us but knows how youth craves to step on the gas and take life on high. Not one of us but who has skidded to within an inch of the edge of the precipice and would have gone over but for the grace of God. Not one of us but knows where the hairpin turns are. That is why we try to hang out a few lanterns of warning. It is because we know the road. Not because we are ignorant of it.

The young think they have discovered life and that it is a new country of which the older people know nothing. Probably Cain and Abel told Adam and Eve that they knew nothing about life, and every generation since has been telling its parents the same thing.

It isn't true. Life has gone on being monotonously the same since the beginning of time. Men and women love and marry, children are born, death comes, in the same old way. There is even the same old cut-and-dried formula for achieving prosperity. Nothing new about any of it.

So mother sheds a tear or two when she pins on Mary's wedding veil, in pity of the disillusions that she knows marriage is bound to bring her, and father sighs when he sees Tom starting out in a vain quest for some occupation that will bring him a large salary, and give him a perpetual kick, and that won't interfere with his golf, or involve his getting up early in the morning.

For we older people have found out that life is just the same sort of 24-hour job now as it has always been, and that only those succeed in it who put their hearts and their backs in it, and who don't count the cost of the effort they make. We would like to pass this tip on to the young, but they won't take it because they consider it old stuff.

The young never complain more bitterly that the old can't understand them than when they advance the theory that they have a right to live their own lives.

When Sally courts pneumonia by going out half clad in sloppy, sleety weather; when Bertha marries a drunkard and a ne'er-do-well; when Fanny loses her taste for her husband and abandons him and her children for a career; when Tom elects to loaf and invite his soul instead of going to work, and Sam takes up some grandiose profession for which he has no talent because he thinks it is romantic, instead of going into the store with father, they justify themselves by saying they have a right to live their own lives, and they feel aggrieved because their parents do not see eye to eye with them in the matter, and they wail out that the old never understand the young.

The older people do understand, and they know that the thing cannot be done. They know that none of us can live our own lives because our lives are so interlocked with others. They know that none of us can alone bear the consequences of our folly and our sins. Others must suffer with us and for us. Others must be branded with our shame. Others must pay the debt of our failures. Others must nurse us when we are sick, feed us when we are hungry, shoulder the burdens we have ducked.

Above all, girls complain that their mothers object to their going joy-riding at night and coming home at 3 o'clock in the morning, and to their petting, and to their going out with men of whom they know nothing. They think mother cannot understand what it is to be young, and made for a good time, and to have one's feet ache for the dance, or how it feels to be kissed, or to be so crazy about a boy you grow hot and cold if he so much as looks at you.

It is because mother does understand just exactly how weak a girl is with a man she is in love with, and because mother knows how drunk a girl can get on kisses, and because mother knows that a girl can pay for one good time by a lifetime of remorse, and because mother knows just what the neighbors say of every girl who comes in late that she tries so hard to protect her poor, blundering little daughter from doing some of the things that, perhaps, she herself did when she was a girl.

Oh, it isn't that the old don't understand the young, my dear. They do. Too well. Hence these tears.
DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I want to ask you about widowers in general. I mean widowers whose wives have died. Are they better husbands because of having been previously married? Is a young girl foolish to marry a widower with no children if he is 10 years older than she is? Will a woman of 30 have a good chance of happiness if she marries a widower with several small children.—PUZZLED.

Answer: Widowers are a preferred risk in matrimony because they have been disciplined by going through the fires of the holy estate, and because, like Mr. Kipling's hero, they "have learned about women from her" to whom they have been united.

Whether a young girl should marry a widower 10 years older than herself or not depends altogether on how she feels toward him, whether she is in love with him or not, and upon what kind of a man he is. The fact that he has been married before does not figure in the case, unless it be as an asset. Certainly he is likely to be tenderer to her, more considerate, kinder, because he remembers looking down into a coffin and wishing that he had been a better husband than he was.

Also, the widower husband is likely to be more generous to his wife than the man who has never been married before because it does not come to him with such a shock of surprise that you can't run a house on air, and that it takes money to pay for food and rent and gas and clothes.

Likewise, the widower husband is house-broken and is more apt to be a fireside companion than the young man who thinks he can still be married and yet be a bachelor.

Marrying a widower with no children is a safe bet, but the woman who marries a widower with children takes a thousand-to-one-shot at happiness. For being a stepmother is the hardest, the most ungrateful and the most heart-breaking job that any woman ever tackles, and no woman who is not a dead game sport, and an angel to boot, is justified in risking it.

RITES TODAY FOR MATTHEWS

Services at 3 o'Clock For Air Crash Victim

Funeral services for Wilbur C. Matthews, 27, who died early Monday morning following an airplane crash Sunday, will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Grant Street Methodist church.

Rev. Roy Percival, former pastor here, assisted by Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, will officiate.

Active pallbearers will be Fred Uhrick, Dudley Rider, H. C. Hostetler, Samuel E. Latham, John P. Jones and R. Eugene Hartline. Honorary pallbearers named Tuesday are A. L. Williams, Carl O. Walkup, Earl W. Estep, Chester Bales, C. C. Hocker, Clarence D. Winters, Wayne Harris, R. E. Thompson and James H. Wyman.

Planes from both the local airports will circle over the grave during interment at Rosemont cemetery, dropping floral tributes to their recent comrade. Joe Towles will pilot the plane from the Wichita Falls Air Transport company's field, and Andy Burke, accompanied by Fred Ridenour, will fly the ship from the Municipal airport.

Mr. Matthews was fatally injured about 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon when he crashed near Staley field in an old production army plane which he had purchased at Waco and flown here recently. The plane, which was owned by Mr. Matthews jointly with H. C. Hostetler, was completely demolished.

Five Business Firms Occupy New Building

Five business concerns have moved into new quarters in the one-story brick building recently completed at Third and Indiana by John W. Hampton, 318 Hamilton building.

On the Indiana avenue front Bennet Candy company, Snider Equipment company, and the E. A. Flatt Barber shop occupy all but one store space of the 150 foot extent of the new structure. K. M. A. Transportation company and the Southern Electric Service company are located on the Third street front.

The building has a total floor space of 15,000 square feet and was completed early this month.

Real Sky Pilot

Theophilus Lee Jr., who flies the air mail route between Medford, Ore., and Seattle is a real "Sky Pilot," for he graduated from the ministry to the mail plane's cockpit. He formerly was pastor of Wesley church in San Francisco.

Deaths

JOE TURNER

The body of Joe Turner, 52, of Rule, who died Tuesday morning in a local hospital, was taken in charge by the Rule Undertaking company Tuesday afternoon.

R. S. WINGO

The body of R. S. Wingo, 82, of Aledo, Texas, who died in a local hospital at 12:30 Tuesday morning, was forwarded to Aledo for burial Tuesday afternoon by the Hines mortuary.

ALICE MARIE SMITH

Funeral services for Alice Marie Smith, 8, who died Monday morning in a local hospital, were conducted from the Merkle Undertaking company parlors at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Burial was in Rosemont cemetery.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Smith, 1803 Grant street, and is survived by her parents and two sisters.

C.-C. Jobbers to Name Executive Committee

Election of five members of the executive committee of the manufacturers and jobbers division of the chamber of commerce will feature the first 1929 meeting of that body Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, according to James W. Chatham, industrial and traffic manager.

R. E. Penick was chairman of the division and of the executive committee during 1928. A new chairman and vice chairman for the current year will be selected Wednesday, it was stated.

Mr. Chatham urged a full attendance of all members of the division in 1928, regardless of whether subscriptions to the chamber of commerce for 1929 have been paid.

Negro Miner Killed, 10 Burned in Explosion

RIVERSIDE, W. Va., Jan. 15. (AP)—One miner was killed, 10 burned and nine others escaped unharmed late today when two explosions occurred in the sands mine of the Continental Coal company here. The nine workers, who were unhurt, walked from the mine several hours after the blasts. The man killed was a negro.

No More Gas In Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in stomach and bowels, take Baalmann's Gas Tablets which are prepared especially for stomach gas and all the bad effects resulting from gas pressure.

That empty, gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach will disappear; that anxious, nervous feeling with heart palpitation will vanish, and you will again be able to take a deep breath without discomfort.

That drowsy, sleepy feeling after dinner will be replaced by a desire for entertainment. Bloating will cease. Your limbs, arms and fingers will no longer feel cold and "go to sleep" because Baalmann's Gas Tablets prevent gas from interfering with the circulation. Get the genuine, in the yellow package, at any good drug store. Price $1. Always on hand at Renfro Drug Co.—Adv.

Upton County Road Bond Election to Be Ordered

RANKIN, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—A $500,000 bond issue election, the money to be spent on highways, will be ordered by the Upton county commissioners court at the present session, it was announced today.

This issue would provide for the paving of 32 miles of the Petroleum highway and for the repairing of lateral roads. Paving of the Petroleum highway would cost about $650,000, half to be paid by the state.

Bostonian Dies While On Tour With Tunneys

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 15. (US)—Kenneth Hill, wealthy Boston society man, former actor, died of heart failure today while on a skiing party with Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney and Mrs. Cuyningham Reid.

Hill made his first hit on the stage as the villian in "Within the Law."

For Colds—

How many people you know end their colds with Bayer Aspirin! And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsilitis. No wonder millions take it for colds, neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have told you Bayer Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. Why not put it to the test?

The Real Criminals

WE AMERICANS are justly famous for a good many things. But it is probable that one of our most striking traits is the way in which we strain at gnats and swallow camels.

Consider a few assorted facts, culled from the day's news.

In a large middle western city the police begin a "drive" to enforce all traffic laws to the very hilt. Parking violators will be fined. Jaywalkers will be haled into court. The driver who crosses an intersection on a yellow light or fails to signal a turn properly does so at great peril.

Meanwhile, in that same city, a vicious racketeering combine grips such trades as the cleaners, truckers and laundries. Speakeasies flood the town with bad liquor. Half a dozen recent homicides stud the police record book with "unsolved" jotted down after each one. Robberies are very frequent. The police seem unable to keep the underworld in hand.

In another city, a few hundred miles away, a woman comes to trial for disorderly conduct after spending three months in jail—and it develops that she was arrested solely because she appeared in the street without any stockings. That city, like the first, has dark problems of crime and violence to handle.

In still another city, farther east, the police squelch a playlet put on by a college dramatic association because a couple of lines strike a tough sergeant as "suggestive"; they also forbid booksellers to retail a book which criticizes the courts and prosecutors of their state. And in that city 10 city councilmen are accused of trying to force a $60,000 bribe from a business man, and the typical American conditions of bootlegging, sporadic violence and lawlessness prevail in the underworld.

The police of these cities, presumably with the approval of the citizens, are straining at gnats and gulping down great, two-humped dromedaries. And these three cities are perfectly representative of American cities generally.

We seem to have a mania for tackling the unimportant things first. What if our homicide rates are the highest ever seen in a civilized land? What if the bootlegger and the rum runner corrupt our government and poison our citizens? What if honest business men have to pay graft to illegal combines? What if robbers and plug-uglies can bamboozle the police daily? We can at least keep pedestrians from walking across the street at the wrong time; we can at least clamp down on effervescent college lads who present a slightly Rabelaisian play; we can at least jail for three months a woman who chooses not to wear stockings.

Probably the real reason for all of this is that we are lazy. We hate to take the effort necessary to clean up our cities, suppress crime and bring criminals to justice. Instead, we go after the petty violators. Such arrests salve our conscience and help us to forget that this great nation of super-efficiency has reached new depths of inefficiency in the matter of law enforcement and civic order.

Advertising the Resources of Texas

THE RECORD NEWS has received from Anderson, Clayton company of Houston a collection of reprints of advertisements run by that company in Commerce and Finance, a business publication of New York.

The collection includes 52 advertisements illustrated with artistic drawings, the titles including such subjects as "Texas—Its Historical Background," "Texas—Its Cotton Production," "Texas—Its Petroleum," "Texas—Its Banking Resources." "Texas—Its Grain Production" and so on through the varied resources of the Lone Star state.

The advertisements form one of the most comprehensive series ever given the state and its resources. They are presented in dignified and attractive form and must certainly have given an impression of the opportunities and advantages of Texas such as has never been presented outside the state before.

Accidents and Drivers

VERY few traffic accidents are caused by defective mechanisms. Most of them are due to the driver.

This is brought out in a survey by the National Safety Council, just made public. The survey shows that only about 10 per cent of all traffic accidents can be blamed on physical and mechanical causes—including defects in the road or inclement weather. The rest are laid at the door of the motorist himself.

Automobiles have improved marvelously in the last decade or so, but the driver has remained stationary. The modern automobile is a model of mechanical perfection. It will travel as fast as anybody wants it to. It will stop quickly, if handled right. Its intricate parts seldom give way under strain.

But the driver is right where he always was. Until he learns caution, common sense and consideration for the rights of others, we will continue to have a disgracefully high list of traffic casualties.

Texas-Oklahoma Press

PUBLICITY AND NEWS

"Released for immediate use." This is something like that which is printed on thousands of sheets of publicity stuff that finds its way into every print shop. And we seldom see any of this stuff run through their columns, so we judge that about one hundred per cent of it goes into the waste basket where it ought to be. A country paper would dig its own grave if it used one-tenth of the publicity matter that it gets. The readers want local news, or news at least that has interest in it. Some people seem to have forgotten that the newspaper must necessarily be a business institution. Either that, or they assume that the management of the average paper does not know what are his own best interests.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"Well, good-bye, Auntie. You're responsible for yourself from here on."

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Race track tipsters and their lean season were being discussed by a little group of racing men in an uptown hotel.

"What," one of them asked, "becomes of all those fellows whose dope sheets are sold on news stands during the eastern racing season? Do they clean up enough to go to Havana or Tiajuana for the winter?"

"No," volunteered one of the party. "The size of their profit usually depends upon whether the crop of suckers is large or small. If it is large they clean up, and usually live up to their incomes. Few if any of them salt anything away, and spring is likely to find most of them on their uppers."

"I don't agree with you," chimed in another of the party. "These fellows generally have a pretty good knowledge of human nature. They know that the supply of suckers is eternal, and so when they fish one pool dry they just turn to another—follow their game from place to place, changing their bait as occasion demands, but using the same old familiar tactics."

"Righto," said a fourth member of the party, "and their winter field this year is the stock market. The skyrocketing of shares there in recent months has turned the eyes and thought of all 'easy money' seekers to Wall street, and the race track tipsters have been quick to see their new opportunity.

"Let me show you something," he went on, drawing a salmon-colored sheet from his pocket. "Here's proof of what I say. Look it over.

"The fellow back of this game was picking winners for suckers at the rate of five for $25—paid in advance. You'll see that he's raised his rates. His racing dope sold for 25 cents a copy; His Wall street weekly dope is offered at $1.25 a copy—$50 a year if paid in advance. And he's getting bites from many out-of-town fish, I'm told."

The circular dealt with a great opportunity for speculation in "an outstanding stock, subject to rather wide fluctuations," which "is about due for a pyrotechnical rise," for the reason that "the bulk of the issue is closely held by big corporations, the floating supply is small, and the short interest large. We recommend the purchase of this stock and will provide full information about it to our yearly subscribers only."

"But will the rubes fall for that sort of stuff?" asked the first speaker.

"Will they?" was the response. "Say, some of those fellows are still in the market for the 'counterfeit money that can't be told from the genuine.'"

The steam shovel fans have had a dull time of it in Chambers street since the new Church street subway has been covered over. Aside from the less spectacular attractions, such as the wrecking of the old brown-stone court house and the Chemical National bank, all men of mechanical genius and engineering hobbies have had nothing to look out for but the traffic.

The other morning, however, it seemed almost like old times. A tractor derrick rumbled onto the boards which still covered the subway excavation. Traffic from West Broadway was paralyzed. A goodly crowd had turned out too. The tractor derrick stopped in front of the clogged traffic and shouts of "Hold'er, whoops, attaboy, heave to," arose from the crowd.

A horse had slipped on the ice-covered pavement and was being lifted to his poorly shod hoofs by the derrick.

It was customary in the commuter's office to send all inter-department letters with a typewritten signature for the sake of clearness. The manager, however, preferred to sign his own letters.

One day, in the absence of his regular stenographer, he dictated a number of letters to a girl from another department, and as he finished dictating he remarked, "Don't put typewritten signatures on these letters."

Hearing nothing further for two days he questioned the girl.

"How about those letters?" he wanted to know.

"Oh," she replied, "I sent those out the day you dictated them."

"But," protested the manager, "I told you not to use typewritten signatures."

"I know you did," said the girl, "and I didn't put a typewritten signature on."

"But," protested the manager, "they weren't signed."

"Of course not," replied the girl, "you said you didn't want your signature typewritten, so I just sent them out without any signature."

By CHARLES K. HARRIS

Charles K. Harris is the dean of American song writers, having a thousand hits to his credit, ranging from "After the Ball Is Over" and "Break the News to Mother" down to the present-day jazz.

He is also the author of numerous short stories, and has written more than a dozen successful photoplays.

CHAS. K. HARRIS

"My favorite story," he told me, "is a story from my own experience. I was sitting in a cafe in London a few years ago. I started to light a cigar, but had no match. They never put matches on restaurant tables in England, so I crossed to the desk.

"A man standing there was about to light a cigaret. 'Hold it!' I said, and he did hold it while I lighted my cigar. I thanked him; he nodded and walked away.

"When he had gone the cashier turned to me in amazement. 'That man,' the cashier exclaimed, 'was the king of Spain!'

"'Oh, indeed?' I replied, 'The king of Spain. Well, well, well! The king of Spain, is he? I wonder if he knew that I was the king of American Song Writers?'"

Court Stops Use Of Lake Waters

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—Chicago is given "a reasonably practicable time" in which to stop its diversions of water from Lake Michigan for sewage purposes, by the United States supreme court in a decision issued today.

The court's order was given in an opinion in the big legal battle between Illinois and the sanitary district of Chicago, joined by several southern states on the one side, and Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New York on the other side.

Charles Evans Hughes, special master in the case, was directed by the court to begin immediately a study, with such hearings as he may desire, to determine how quickly and under what conditions the sanitary district shall curtail its withdrawal of water.

He is to report his recommendations back to the supreme court. The court indicated that upon these findings it will issue a final decree.

COLD CAUSES SUFFERING

ATHENS, Jan. 15. (UP)—A siege of cold weather has caused considerable suffering in west Macedonia during the last few days. Ten degrees below zero was reported from one district and snow was said to be so deep that the Grace-Yugoslav railroad lines were blocked. A mild epidemic of grippe is spreading in Greece, particularly in Athens.

In the year 1938 Radley Brainard has perfected his invention, the Vicarion, so called because it permits people to live vicariously by showing them completely events out of the past, thus far outdistancing the efforts of Complete Illusions, Inc., the company which then controls all the improvements of the motion picture.

Radley first demonstrates his device to his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman; her father mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Brainard's Aunt Relief. While he is showing them a dinner given for a movie actress who had since died, a man suffering from amnesia staggers in the studio, and though he is unable to tell who he is, he calls Phyllis by name. Brainard dubs him Van Winkle.

Brainard shows a scene of Mr. Norman's home being robbed and then the police, who have been looking in on a similar projection, arrive with the criminal, Homer, but he escapes. Besides the large machine intended for public showing, Brainard invents a small "receiving set." While looking into one of them Carol faints.

Six weeks after the first private showing the Vicarion has been installed in all the theaters of Brainard's home city, Ferdinand Mortimer and "Jerry" Ballard, heads of Complete Illusions, call on Brainard.

Six weeks after the first private showing the Vicarion has been installed in all the theaters of Brainard's home city, Ferdinand Mortimer and "Jerry" Ballard, heads of Complete Illusions, call on Brainard. He refuses to make terms with them and insists he will keep control of his invention. His secretary tells him some one has been tampering with the "bombs" which contain scenes out of the past to be used in the Vicarion.

Was she a woman—some sprite from Daphne's Grove? Or was she a Naiad, sweet genius of the forest spring? Was she human, and the magic merely in his eyes? Or was she some divinity incarnating in sportive mood, sure of men's ignorance of laws that would ever show her to their eyes?

With firm, sure step she bounded down over root and stone, down to the dell's carpet of green, and poised as had the listening bird. She waited for some sound. Her eyes darted, expectant, from covert to covert like an eager child's, begging for anticipated surprise. Then in the unchanging stillness her lovely figure subtly drooped. Had some expected companion disappointed her? Was this a trysting place? Was some lover recreant? Was this a mythical Lilith in her Eden, reliving only in race-memory? Or was she some genuine Eve who had lived before race-memory began?

Was she Aperielus Psyche in her yearning search for elusive Cupid—or was she some modern maid of yesterday or today, in some woody nook daring to be free!

And here in the sharp confines of narrow reality sat the watching man, at the very edge of her garden, yet infinitely withdrawn! A man who had mastered the trick of resurrection and broken down the wall of the past—who held, or would soon hold, a world by its ravished senses — suddenly enchained here by his own!

She cupped her hands about her lips and called—in a trilling note no fluted tone of wood-pipe ever matched. She listened, and dropped down to hide at some fancied sound of approach. She waited; then rose suddenly disconsolate. Her gaze roved slowly, then came straight out from her far realm into the here, and fixed, in pleading.

The fibers knotted in Radley Brainard's heart. Her eyes seemed to draw his soul. The very current of life turned back in him, as if his body were already bereft.

She dropped upon her knees and clasped mourning hands over her eyes. She sobbed. She stretched out her arms. To him!

The man leaped to his feet, stumbled and fell. He clutched the gauze curtain. It tore from its fastenings and came piling upon him in soft folds. He struggled to his knees and bowed there opposite the girl in the dawn—the space between them clear, like a pane of crystal, that might be of the thickness of a day—or of a thousand years!

It was the next day that Phyllis found she could remain away from Radley no longer. It was with tremulation enough that she admitted it in her secret heart. She was glad she had made no confidants concerning her unhappiness about or because of him; it would seem natural enough, now that she was able to be out again, that she should go to the scene of his activities. All the other members of her family were going.

She was ashamed of her illness—that she had been so weak as to let mere stress of emotion break her down. She told herself, as she had done since the day when she first knew that Carol was about as usual, that she had grossly exaggerated the cause of her anxieties. She shut her eyes to some of the vivid memories that shook this conclusion. She refused to think, and assured herself she had no right to try while she was still far from strong. She tried to evolve some plausible motive for going to Radley's offices other than the mere craving to be with him; but she knew it was the hope that some better understanding between them might result which was driving her. So she admitted it at last, and went.

He received her with a burst of attentions—literally a burst. She surprised him in his private office, where she found she could go because of the two secretaries there.

Not that two secretaries in an outer office were of much practical effect as chaperons. How absurd it was!

He was changed. Of course he was changed. And she had seen him the day before yesterday, too. But she expected change in him at every meeting. If any man had ever been in the crucible, it was he. What she feared was the hardening she had seen beginning in him. What she hoped was the sudden manifestation of the qualities she loved, refined!

She found him standing by his window looking down into the street. It was morning—11 o'clock; but she had come through crowds flocking in morning matinees of "The Vicarion." She had seen the papers, flaring with headlines about the new marvel of science, spread with his name. She had not read them, because she could not endure yet to know what other people were saying. She was afraid they would say what she did not want to think. That was her recognition of the coward quality in her. She looked at the great signboards, now multiplying in the streets.

THE VICARION

with an aching thrill at its all-sufficiency. The thing was a fact—it would be a fact every day. It was already a part of life—very much a part of life, apparently, if pushing throngs formed a criterion. No wonder he stood at his window looking down upon it.

Constriction

He caught her hands, he hastened to bring a chair for her; he was all eagerness about her strength; he was all gentleness, really delighted that she should come so to him, alone. It semed to have healed the breach between them. It thrilled her. It went far in a moment to quiet fears, to make forebodings seem ridiculous, to erase all memory of unhappy days when he had not been so. Excuses for him swarmed in her heart. It had been she who had been blind and callous, in the great moment of his life! Sudden happiness drowned all recollections of causes for unhappiness, because she took each one by the throat and held it deliberately under the glittering surface of this moment! Even this whimsical conception was a part of her experience.

And it seemed a huge joke when she showed her his mail. A dozen letters from women—the feature she saw first and feigned not to see, because she hated the other pose of feigned raillery. A dozen letters—yes, more!—long, square, large and small, pink, blue, gray and lavender! But his manner over them was just right—that was what made the humor of it apparent. He was not too indifferent, nor too much amused, nor subtly glowing, nor overcold. He said he supposed there would always be women who would flock after a suddenly conspicuous man, as pigeons do after one who has corn to scatter. Then he showed her that the women were not alone in their hero-hunting. There were scores of letters—already!—from men, ranging from veiled threats to open begging.

She suspected that some of them might have startled her. He told her he was thinking of letting Miss Arden answer the women. Miss Arden was the pretty one of the two secretaries. But, of course, he didn't mean that.

And all the time she was herself glowing. It was in a woman to adore fame for a man whom she already adored, at least. Seh looked at his strong, smooth shaven jaw close beside her, at the dark lashes shading his fine eye, at the tiny lines on his temple—intimately near—at the crisp, well kept hair. It was a kind of wonder, the personality of a man. The world was fond of saying that woman was the enigma; that was probably because women were afraid to surrender a strong position by admitting mystery in men! Women were shallow, transparent creatures—forever flocking after the corn! Men were the masters, after all, masters of great thought, great vision, great purpose! And any normal woman loved it so!

They had looked over some of the letters by the window. He returned them to his desk. As he left her side she looked down at the still crowded street and wondered at the isolation she had so far enjoyed frim its excitement, its words, its emotions. It was astonishing how one could be in the busy world and not of it, could pass through it and be untouched by it.

She turned and looked at Radley. He was standing beside his desk, his hand resting on the letters which he had just laid there, but he was caught in some net of thought that held him poised. He was frowning slightly. Abruptly he turned his head and seemed to listen. Then he shook himself, half involuntarily, and the movement transformed itself into a shiver running over him. Next instant he was looking back at her with a start and a shamefacedness that was nothing short of amazing.

"Why—why, what is it, Radley?" the girl asked.

He shook his shoulders again, quite consciously, as if to prove that it was an intentional gesture. Then he laughed.

"Not a thing!" he said. "I have that chilly feeling of the skin you get after not sleeping well—do you know? I fell asleep in my chair watching scenes in the studio last night—and fell out of the chair. Suppose the great, excited public knew that about me this morning."

"You must be tired out."

"I'm not. Don't I look fit?"

"You certainly do—I was just thinking how fit."

"I told you one could get bored with anything—I expect, by a month from now there will be people in the theaters going to sleep over the Battle of Lexington and the Taking of the Bastille!"

But this manner grew absent as he talked, as if the impetus of his impulse to give her his full attention had flagged. She felt the chill of his withdrawal into himself and realized that at least his assiduous activities in welcoming her had been purely voluntary.

The Indexes

He took up his telephone. "Let me talk to Van Winkle," he told the operator. "What? Van Winkle, I said!" The sudden harshness of his tone was startling. "Van! How about those indexes?" He listened, his face darkening. "Now don't tell me that again. If they were left accidentally unlabeled the operator of the condenser doesn't know he did it; if they were purposely left without marking he isn't going to tell you." He frowned over the answer coming back to him. Then, "No! How can you see them? I ran two of them last night. I found another this morning, which makes five all told. Yes—five! I'm holding three till I find out something." He stood with the phone held high, and began rocking from his heels to his toes and back again with extreme impatience. "No!" he shouted again suddenly. "Damn it man, can you do what I ask you to, or not!"

He snapped the receiver on its hook, turned and remembered Phyllis. "Oh!" he said. "I'm sorry. I am a bit wrought up. Ah—did John tell you what he and I saw in the studio last night?"

"That mill accident? It was terrible!"

"Well, if you know—why, that's what's on my nerves this morning. I'm trying to find out where it came from, and how. Your friend Van Winkle is not so helpful as he might be."

"My friend!"

"Why, isn't he?" he laughed.

Most of the buoyancy was gone again from Phyllis' heart. There was that tendency in him to snatch at any pretext to express what seemed an itching irritation toward her.

But a knock at the door interrupted any reply she might have found to make, and at Brainard's summons, Van Winkle entered.

"Oh!" Brainard greeted him, frowning expectantly.

But Van Winkle hesitated as he saw Phyllis. "Good morning," he said to her.

She smiled at him uneasily because Brainard had turned toward her with an expression in his eyes that almost frightened her. Then she forgot Van Winkle, as usual, in more important things. What was this in the man she loved, who ten minutes ago had been gentleness and consideration itself toward her—this glance of high-handed domineering that would brook no casual passing circumstance which interfered with his direct purposes? Here was no trifling irascibility; here was the man's own sense of power turned to a purpose that was little! She forgot even to think about the indignity to herself.

But Van Winkle was reporting further on the matter discussed by phone. "I was going to suggest to you, Brainard," he began, "that you have every bomb you put into the condensers' hands marked in advance so that you will know—"

"Never mind that!" Brainard interrupted. "What I want to know is why you are not making records at the machines, to see who put unlabeled bombs into the trays yesterday afternoon!"

Van Winkle straightened with quiet dignity but did not otherwise show resentment. "You realize, of course," he answered, "that this is a long job."

"It won't grow any shorter for being postponed."

"I thought perhaps you'd like—"

"And if you don't find out that way, you can make a record of every bomb as it was handled by an operator after filling. I want those indexes! And if there's any trickery going on here, we can find it out by recording the exact position of the location and time dials on the machines while the bombs were being filled, checking up with those recorded and getting the necessary details of those that were not."

"Well," returned Van Winkle, "give me a week."

"A week!"

"It will take all of that."

"It won't, if there's any intelligence used. You can figure almost to the moment what time those unlabeled bombs were filled and it won't take much ingenuity to learn which of two or three machines they came from. And I—" He broke off, as it seemed because his mind was running far beyond his words. His eyes, on Van Winkle, lost their direct gaze and looked beyond them. Then they swung round to the window and he looked out past Phyllis, without including her in the glance, and into the busy noon. "I won't wait!" he said grimly, but as if he had forgotten that any one else was with him.

"But, Mr. Brainard," said Van Winkle, "if we don't let any product go out of the place till it has been seen in the studio there isn't a chance—"

"I want to know where and when that thing happened!" cried Brainard in a sudden passion.

Van Winkle glanced at Phyllis. It was as if he asked her in words, "Does not this seem extraordinary to you?" But he nodded and shrugged toward Brainard. "All right," he answered. "And if I'm too slow, put young Welling on it. He's getting to be a shrewd hand."

He turned and went out. Phyllis remembered fleetingly that her mother had said Van Winkle had called often while she was ill. He had not come to see her since. She wondered why. She wondered what from his apparent acceptance of his own peculiar situation had taken in his mind. But in these hectic days no process in her brain seemed normal, and his little mystery had now no power to pique curiosity. She had seen him once or twice since she had begun to be out, without realizing at all that his very presence among them was a riddle unanswered. Now she did not care.

But Radley was talking—explaining. She did not know what he had said, but he had thought it necessary to explain. Then he was willing still in some degree to conciliate her.

The opening of the door again without a knock interrupted him. Van Winkle was back.

The Machine Man

"Excuse me, won't you?" he said. "But here is one of the machine men now. He has something to tell you. Come in, Jeffry."

A heavy-shouldered, somewhat bent man, his face covered with young beard, and his eyes, apparently weak, covered by shell-rimmed, colored glasses, entered behind him. He glanced about and his gaze hesitated on Phyllis an instant.

Then he looked at Brainard and waited for permission to speak.

"Well?" said Radley.

"I s'pose I ought to tell you, Mr. Brainard," the machine operator began. "A funny thing happened yesterday at my machine."

"Yes?"

"Yes. You know my condenser sets in that little alcove by the big west window. There's a lot o' light there, an' that's why I wear these glasses. Sometimes the light gets—"

"Well?" interjected Brainard.

"Well, yesterday I was workin' on duplications. I had orders to make five of every one of a list of indexes that was given to me, and I was makin' 'em. I'd fill five bombs an' set 'em up on my rack—an' then label 'em, see? Saves time that way, an' they bein' all alike—"

Brainard had leaned forward and was looking at the man with absorbed intentness. The fellow stopped.

"Eh?" he inquired. "What's the matter?"

Brainard straightened, then quietly sat down in his chair.

"Go on," he directed.

"Well, as I was sayin', I made five o' this here index I was workin' on, an' set 'em up in the rack. I turned to stamp the labels—the brass ones, you know—when I heard something that sounded like water runnin' behind me. It gave me a turn. I looked around, an' I give you my word, there was a place in the woods standin' up right where the big west window had been, there in the end of the alcove. Get me? A place in the woods, where there was a little stream comin' down a rock and a bird, red as a coal—"

But Brainard was rising from his chair, his eyes blazing. "Look here—wait!" he exclaimed. "You say—" But he stopped and glanced at Phyllis. His manner instantly took on coldness. "Say that again!" he ordered, turning to the machine man as if with a charge of guilt.

The man was smiling slightly. He sobered. "Well, maybe it was my fault, Mr. Brainard. If it was I'm awfully sorry," he apologized. "Of course, one o' the bomb-caps was loose an' the scene evaporated. An' I suppose the light was just right an' all. But, as I was—"

"But where is the index of that scene?"

What do you know about that?

Just one of those trite utterances that never do call for an answer. Something like "How are you?", "What do you say?", "What do you know about that?"

Boring? Well, they're repeated so often each day that you just naturally expect to hear them. Like advertising that doesn't change its dress occasionally. Saying the same old thing in the same old way, day after day.

But, we're planning to take the "How do you do—s?" and the "What do you say—s?" out of Wichita Falls advertising.

We've manned a service department with copy and layout experts, with commercial art at their command, to aid Times and Record News advertisers to tell their stories in a new, interesting, productive way.

One of our representatives will gladly call and further explain the wide scope of this service department and the value of this free service to advertisers and prospective advertisers.

METHODISTS TO HEAR BISHOP

Darlington to Address Meeting Tonight

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, in charge of all Methodist missionary work in Europe, of Huntington, W. Va., will address a union meeting of all Methodists in the city in the auditorium of the new Methodist church Wednesday evening, Rev. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the church, announced. The meeting will open promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Though the meeting is primarily for Methodists, the bishop's object in coming here being to discuss Methodist missionary work, members of all other congregations are cordially invited to attend the meeting, the Rev. Mr. McKenney said.

Bishop Darlington will also address the missionary institute of the Wichita district, which convenes Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the old Methodist church building. The bishop is scheduled to speak at 11 o'clock.

Bishop Darlington will be accompanied here by Dr. J. W. Perry, secretary of the home mission board of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. R. F. Bryant, missionary secretary of the North Texas conference of Dallas. Both of the latter will speak at the missionary institute Thursday morning, it was announced.

Scores of military and commercial aircraft also will participate in the air demonstration.

DELINQUENT TAXES

The total amount of delinquent city tax accounts on Nov. 1, 1928, was $127,910.56, according to the audit made by W. E. McBroom, city clerk, and announced Tuesday by George D. Fairtrace, city manager. The amount delinquent exceeds the total delinquent tax account of Nov. 1, 1927, by $30,608.71, it was stated.

FANNY BRICE IN "MY MAN"

Vitaphone Feature at Strand
The Record News Music Critic

How they do turn these popular songs out, with every change of Vitaphone another new song and sometimes two or three of them bid for popular favor. Fanny Brice has several good songs, that prove her worth as a chanteuse of a definite type.

Though posing as a "wolking girl" from the Bronx, she is typically first generation in the U. S. A. Eastside jewess, all but in: "If You Do Want the Rainbow, You Must Have the Rain," which is the catchiest song of the show, and in the keysong, "My Man," to which she does lend real pathos.

The hits from an satyrical standpoint are her "Florodora," and her "Yiddische Squaw."

Fanny is versatile. No one not possessing a sound dancing technic could have danced that parody on a nature dance "Springsong" like she did. The orchestra did some nice work there, swinging from Grieg's "Morning" to Mendelssohn's "Springsong." This dance alone is worth the price of admission.

And as a monologist, her takeoff on Mrs. Cohn with all the little Cohns at the beach can hardly be surpassed. Her face is as eloquent as her voice, portraying the trials and tribulations of a harassed mother and Mrs. Cohn peculiar racial reactions to the heart, fatigue and worry.

Bebe Daniels To Marry Ben Lyon

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15. (INS)—A sparkling diamond ring adorned the engagement finger of Bebe Daniels, film actress, today and the party of the second part is Ben Lyon, popular juvenile actor.

Although Miss Daniels has been repeatedly reported engaged to this and that person, the engagements never materialized. This one, however, appears to be made by her mother, Mrs. Phyllis Daniels, at a dinner party to be given next week.

Miss Daniels and Lyon have known each other for years, but it was not until shortly before Christmas, according to friends, that they became really interested in one another.

Neither Miss Daniels nor Lyon have been married before.

Hidalgo Election Case Is Recessed

AUSTIN, Jan. 15. (AP)—The Hidalgo election case was recessed until early next week after District Judge George Calhoun this afternoon overruled the defendant's plea of privilege as to the parties concerned.

Judge Calhoun held that the court here had jurisdiction over the parties to the suit. The defense planned to attack the court's jurisdiction of the subject matter of the case with its resumption.

Exact date for continuation of the trial was expected to be set this afternoon.

72 Pay Dry Law Fines In Kentucky Court

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 15. (AP)—Seventy-two defendants charged with selling malt syrup pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition law in federal court here today and paid fines of $25 each.

After the fines were paid managers of three chain store systems, employes of the defendants, promised that no more alleged "home brew" materials would be sold in their stores. District Attorney Sawyer A. Smith then announced that he intends to stop the sale of the materials throughout the eastern district of Kentucky and that he is "going after" the manufacturers and their agents. The companies paid fines of $500 each.

Scowling Banners Greet Boosters of Peace Pact

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (AP)—Banners criticising the Kellogg anti-war treaty borne by women who said they represented workers' organizations greeted delegates to the conference on the cause and cure of war when they left the capitol today after urging ratification of the treaty upon various senators.

The banners, waved in the faces of the delegation were inscribed: "Pacifism is the fig leaf of imperialism," and "tools of war, not of peace; the League of Nations, the world court, the Dawes plan, the Kellogg peace pact."

Two Oklahoma Towns Under Meningitis Ban

ANADARKO, Okla., Jan. 15. (UP)—Gracemont and Anadarko were declared under partial quarantine today and schools, churches and public gatherings have been forbidden by a serious epidemic of spinal meningitis. Eleven cases and seven deaths have been reported, most of them in or near Gracemont.

Knife Wounds Fatal For Brownwood Youth

BROWNWOOD, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—Clyde Keith, 21, died in a hospital here today of knife wounds received Saturday night. Robert L. Parker, 21, who had been at liberty under $1,000 bond, was rearrested and charged with murder, and his examining trial was set for Saturday.

PACKARD

The Packard System of Instant Chassis Lubrication is simplicity itself. A reservoir and gun on the dash is connected by concealed piping to accurately metering drip plugs at each oiling point. One pull of the plunger loads the gun. As it discharges automatically each bearing is lubed to clean, fresh oil, correctly measured.

The Packard Auxiliary Lubricator, illustrated at the right, prevails the splasher when the choke is pulled.

Most thoroughly and easily lubricated of all fine cars

THE Packard Eight, whether Standard, Custom or De Luxe, is protected by the most thorough, complete and convenient lubrication system found on any motor car in the world. In-built factory precision is protected — even against the possibility of your own or your chauffeur's neglect.

"Instant" lubrication—a system by which the chassis bearings may be oiled daily by one pull of a plunger from the driver's seat—has long been a feature of Packard cars.

Improved and extended to include even the new and unique Packard Shock Absorbing System, Packard chassis lubrication protects 38 bearings under the car, oils points inaccessible and frequently neglected on the ordinary chassis, prevents squeaks and rattles, eliminates wear—and insures the long life for which the Packard car is famous.

The Packard Straight Eight powerplant, with its nine-bearing crankshaft, is full force feed lubricated—each cylinder uniformly supplied, each motor bearing thoroughly fed under pressure. An auxiliary lubricator, connected with the choke, automatically conveys oil to the skirt of each piston whenever the choke is pulled out—insuring thorough cylinder lubrication during cold weather starting and warming up.

Packard lubrication, thorough and positive under all weather conditions, is simply pictured and described on a unique wall chart which we want you to see. Come in and examine it, then drive a Packard Eight yourself and oil the chassis while at the wheel. You will gain a new conception of proper motor car lubrication.

The Packard Standard Eight is priced from $2435 to $2835—the Custom Eight from $3175 to $3850—and the Eight De Luxe from $4585 to $5985—at the factory. Individual custom cars are also available to order on the De Luxe chassis.

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 15.—At the annual election of officers and directors of Seymour banks the following officers and directors were chosen:

First National—G. S. Plants, president; C. L. Caldwell, vice president; George S. Plants, cashier; H. E. Nichols, D. J. Balles and R. L. Caldwell, assistant cashiers; G. S. Plants, C. H. Mitchell, W. H. Snyder, J. E. Haggard, D. J. Balles, C. L. Caldwell, George S. Plants, directors.

Farmers National—R. E. Baskin, president; W. B. Craddock, active vice president; D. A. Holman, cashier; J. C. Gowin, assistant cashier; R. E. Baskin, W. B. Craddock, E. L. Craddock, F. L. Fancher, J. A. Britain, C. S. Whiteside, Charles Randal, directors.

First State—J. T. Lively, president; F. H. Bunkley, active vice president; B. F. Rupe, vice president; L. D. Jones, cashier; E. A. Syptak, assistant cashier; J. T. Lively, F. H. Bunkley, B. F. Rupe, R. R. Kellum, N. L. Graham, directors.

Current statements of the three Seymour banks show total resources of $1,410,805.98; loans and discounts, $1,051,047.88; deposits, $1,243,262.61.

The banks are beginning the year 1929 in better condition than a year ago, taking into consideration that their paper is more liquid and that farmers last year in spite of unfavorable weather conditions liquidated their current indebtedness, according to R. E. Baskin, president of the Farmers National bank.

HUGHES HAS PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (UP)—Special Master Charles Evans Hughes today faced the problem of working out a plan to reduce diversion of water from Lake Michigan to a legal basis and thereby restore the lake to its proper level.

DAD KNOWS

Bible, Bank Book and Hymnal Best For Youths' Shelf

CHICAGO, Jan. 15. (US)—The library of youth should include the Bible, a hymn book and a bank book, according to 40 Oak Park business men interviewed by the Rev. William Hill of the Harvard Congregational church.

"Everyone interviewed wished he was 21 again," Mr. Hill said. "They denied they were old-fogyish and deplored that modern youth scorns their advice, because, as they have found, 'dad knows'."

War Clouds Cause Americans to Flee

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15. (AP)—Isaac Lehman, representative of a New York cotton goods manufacturer, arrived here today with a report that Americans and other foreigners were fleeing Spanish Honduras in expectation of a revolution.

"The United States cruiser, Denver, is lying off the coast of Honduras now," Mr. Lehman said. "I am going to Washington to ask the state department to have neutral zones created so that American business and American lives will not suffer.

"Already merchants in Tela, La Ceiba, San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortez are feeling the threat of war. The trouble seems to lie in the fact the conservative political party is not satisfied with the liberal president who will be inaugurated Feb. 1. The United States government has recognized this executive but the conservatives claim the election was unfair."

Services Are Held For Aged Abilene Rancher

ABILENE, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—Funeral services for Missouri Reynolds (Mack) Clark, 85, Confederate veteran, ranchman and resident of Taylor county since 1878, were held here Monday.

WATSON COAL BILL OPPOSED

Leaders Clash in Senate Committee Hearing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—Federal regulation of the bituminous coal industry under a commission as proposed by the Watson bill would be "government regulation running wild," Roderick Stephens, spokesman for the National Retail Coal Merchants association, told the senate interstate commerce committee today.

Stephens, chairman of the retail coal merchants' government relations committee, opened the hearings in opposition to the measure, which would permit mergers, set prices and license operators.

"We are opposed to such a program generally in that it is paternalistic, unsound and uneconomic," said Stephens.

Stephens said the public would foot the bill of increased prices under the Watson measure.

There was a clash with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers when Stephens added:

"I doubt that congress will choose to alienate the consuming public in order to curry favors from a discredited union, which has lost its hold on its own members and forfeited the good will of the public by a policy of strikes, violence and disregard of federal authority and public welfare."

Lewis jumped to his feet, declaring:

"I challenge the truth of that vicious statement. It is a vicious untruth and I say you cannot prove it."

Stephens said he would give the committee a written statement to support his charges.

The office of J. R. Ogle is now moved to 304-5 City National bank building, and telephone changed to No. 5363.—Adv.

Alien Smuggling Ring Is Bared

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15. (US)—Destruction of a smuggling ring with a financial backing of $500,000 was declared by federal officials tonight to have been accomplished through the arrest earlier today of five men and the capture of two airplanes.

During the last four months, it was declared, at least 250 Chinese have been smuggled into southern California from Mexico by the airplanes used by the organization.

Search was on tonight for 12 other members of the ring, most of whom were said to be aviators. Aliens smuggled into this country, according to the officials paid the organization $1,000 each.

With the exception of stating that John T. Henry and John F. Smith were arrested, the federal agents declined to reveal the names of the other three prisoners or where they were captured.

STINSON HONORED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (UP)—The French government has conferred the Medaille d'Hygiene Publique on Major Julia Stimson, superintendent of the U. S. army nurse corps. The medal is being held at the state department pending legislation by congress which would permit Major Stimson, as a United States official, to accept decoration by a foreign government.

Natural Gas Belt —and— NATURAL GAS

Attracts Industries — Builds Cities!

DID YOU know that you live right in the heart of the greatest natural gas belt in the country?

Think what this means to you.

Of course it means that you enjoy at low rates the blessing of natural gas—the ideal cooking and heating fuel—for home use.

But it means more than that.

It means growing communities, with constantly increasing property values, because this great natural resource of abundant natural gas attracts industries.

Heat is the heart of industry. Industry inevitably follows fuel resources. Industry is already being attracted to the great Southwest because of its vast natural gas production.

You have other resources—but the most distinctive—the most important—is natural gas. You're "sitting on top of the world" as far as natural gas is concerned!

And Lone Star Gas Company, as one of the oldest, largest and strongest of the gas pipe line companies operating in the great Southwest natural gas belt, is always on the alert to make the rich resource of natural gas maximumly beneficial to your community—and to you.

This map, based on a map published by H. J. Struth in Natural Gas Magazine, shows in black the principal natural gas producing areas of the country. The Southwest produces three times the amount of natural gas produced by the great California natural gas belt, and practically twice as much as the widely scattered eastern natural gas fields taken as a unit. Thus, the Southwest overshadows all others in natural gas production. It is America's greatest natural gas belt—and natural gas attracts industries—builds cities.

RASKOB VIEWS LOSS AS FAIR

Al Not 'Cheated' by Bigotry Manager Says

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 15. (INS)—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, plainly indicated today he does not agree with the "thousands" of Democrats of the country that Al Smith was "cheated" out of the presidency by "bigotry and the spreading of atrocious falsehoods."

Earlier in the day Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt made it plain that the statement he made public yesterday, in which it was charged that Al Smith was "cheated" out of the presidency, was not his own personal view but rather those of some 3,000 Democratic workers throughout the country.

Just before he went into Governor Roosevelt's private office at the capitol, Raskob was asked by International News Service if he agreed with "thousands" of Democrats that Al Smith was "cheated" out of the presidency.

"I don't care to discuss that question now but I may have something to say after I see Governor Roosevelt," Raskob said.

Vatican Expects Land Settlement by Easter

ROME, Jan. 15. (UP)—The Vatican looks for final, definite agreement between the Italian government and the holy see for settlement of their long standing dispute after Easter.

Vatican prelates handling the negotiations said:

"We do not look for a final definite agreement before Easter. Progress is constantly being made but no final accord has been reached."

The agreement presumably would end the self-imposed imprisonment of the Pope in the vatican.

Don't Be Skinny

New YEAST and IRON builds weight quickly. Your own druggist guarantees results—or pay nothing

It seems incredible how fast Ironized Yeast adds pounds of good firm flesh—on women and men, children and old people. Doctors know the value of vegetable iron and yeast in building up and improving the body. Ironized Yeast is a highly concentrated form, contains all the blood building properties of vegetable iron with yeast. It will give results in half the time required by yeast and iron taken separately.

People ask—what is in Ironized Yeast that transforms sallow, lifeless, faded complexions into the fresh, smooth, lovely skin of early girlhood. Wrinkles disappear. Hollows fill out. No wonder thousands of women pour in letters to us in praise of the marvelous, youthifying effects of Ironized Yeast!

Yet the answer is simple. Vegetable iron and yeast have been used for years to vitalize the body; to make rich, healthy blood; to improve digestion and bowel action and add weight. In Ironized Yeast these two valuable elements are combined in a special formula that is much stronger than yeast and iron used separately. That's why Ironized Yeast works so quickly. Safe to take—pleasant-tasting tablets.

Go to any drug store and get a full size treatment. If after this generous trial, you are not delighted with effect, your money back immediately.—Adv.

Lubbock and Amarillo Men Buy El Paso Papers from Noted Editor

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—H. D. Slater, owner, editor and publisher of the El Paso Herald for 31 years, announced today that he had sold the Herald and the El Paso Times, to J. Lindsey Nunn of Amarillo and Dorrance D. Roderick of Lubbock.

On Feb. 1, the new owners will take over the newspapers, and Roderick will become president and publishhr of the owners' corporation. Slater will retire.

Nunn and Roderick are associated in the ownership of 16 other Texas daily and weekly newspapers, including the Lubbock Avalanche and Lubbock Journal.

No changes in personnel of the El Paso papers will be made, it was said.

Slater came to El Paso in 1890 from New York, where he had edited Public Opinion, now merged with the Literary Digest. For more than a year he engaged in railroad engineering in the Sierra madre of northern Mexico. Before the war with Spain he bought the Herald. He acquired the Times in November, 1926. During the world war he served almost two years as captain of infantry, including a year with the 90th division in France and Germany.

The Herald and Times were established in 1881 within a week of each other. The Herald has been a member of the Associated Press for 27 years and the Times more than 40 years. Slater's personal membership, dating back to 1902, is one of the oldest memberships in the Associated Press held continuously by the same person.

Grand Jury Given Case of Humble Court Clerk Held in Fraud Ring

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.(INS)—A modern Dr. Jekyl-and-Mr. Hyde, a steady court clerk by day and a beau Broadway by night, today furnished the key role in the government's investigation into the alleged million dollar "bankruptcy ring."

The alleged confession of Max Pinner, $1,500-a-year government messenger, was presented to the federal grand jury today considering evidence in connection with the disappearance of David Steinhardt, fugitive lawyer, charged with embezzlement of at least $700,000 through receivership frauds and get-rich-quick schemes.

Pinner, recovering from a suicide attempt, told the alleged "inside story" from his hospital bed to federal authorities. He is said to have explained the $100,000 in checks made out to him by Steinhardt.

U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, while declining to reveal the details of the confession at this time, indicated that Pinner's story would involve many others.

"We have material enough to keep the grand jury busy for several days," said Tuttle.

Pinner, when running court documents, appeared an insignificant clerk with perhaps more frugality than his comrades. His clothes were neatly patched and he even brought his lunch, a wrapped sandwich, to work with him.

BUSINESS MEN FIX CALENDAR

New One Urged to Simplify Accounting

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (US)—Revised calendars are being used by up-to-the-minute business houses as a means of simplifying their accounting methods, the house foreign affairs committee was told today.

Representatives of several commercial institutions appeared before the committee in support of the Porter resolution, sponsoring an international conference on calendar simplification. The revised year would have 13 months of 28 days each, with a blank day for a holiday.

W. S. Clithero, budget comptroller of Armour and company, said it was impossible for his company to determine the trend of its business and control it without comparative periodic reports from its various departments.

When it came to comparing March, with 26 or 27 working days, with February, which might have only 23 or 24 working days, the comparison could not be accurate without laborious accounting adjustments, he said. His company uses a calendar dividing the year into eight four-week periods and four five-week periods.

Seth L. Bush, a paper manufacturer of Holyoke, Mass., said accuracy in business with the present calendar is impossible.

Rabbi Abram Simon of Washington, D. C., representing the Jewish Synagogue Council of America in opposition to the resolution, said congress should pass no law interfering with the Jews' seventh day Sabbath.

Raymondville Votes Irrigation Works Bonds

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas, Jan. 15. (AP)—Bonds for a gigantic irrigation system were voted by a majority of 67 to 4 here Monday. The issue is for $7,500,000 and affects 130,000 acres in Willacy county water control and improvement district No. 1, lying about Raymondville.

Plans provide for concrete conduits. Water would be taken from the Rio Grande, and would flow by gravity through a canal 24 miles long and 80 feet wide at the bottom.

Construction is to start within a few weeks.

Halt of Importation Of Dreamy Weed Sought

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (AP)—Asserting that smokers of "Marijuana," Mexican weed, became obsessed with the idea that they were Roman gladiators, Jesse Jamests, or Knights of the Round Table, representative Spearing of Louisiana, today introduced a bill to prohibit importation of the product.

PRUETT WANTS TO TELL STORY

"One Man Crime Wave" Wishes to Go to Jury

DALLAS, Jan. 15. (AP)—As soon as he can be moved, William Pruett, 23, who was wounded when he resisted officers who were attempting to arrest him as a suspect in a "one man crime wave" here, wants to go before the Dallas county grand jury and tell the story he hopes will vindicate him of a series of crimes charged against him.

The grand jury already is questioning witnesses, and Pruett said today: "I want to go before the grand jury and tell my side of the thing. I can't be moved yet, but as soon as I can I want my cot moved over to the grand jury room." District Attorney William McCraw said the wish would be granted.

Pruett was shot through the legs after two detectives had been wounded slightly.

'Boyish Slimness' Theory Hurts Vegetable Trade

CHICAGO, Jan. 15. (AP)—The publicised theory of theatrical producers that the ideal feminine figure should have a "boyish slimness" has done "almost irreparable harm," to certain branches of the vegetable industry, E. E. Briggs, manager of the American Fruit and Vegetable Shippers' association, declared at the annual convention today.

The potato and rice market has been slammed particularly hard, he said.

Rum Running Suspect Free on $2,500 Bond

Abolition of Radio Commission Asked

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (INS)—Abolition of the federal radio commission and reversion of its duties to the radio division of the department of commerce was advocated before the house merchant marine committee today by O. H. Caldwell, a member of the commission.

Caldwell said the commission had completed most of the work contemplated by it and that, in his opinion, it was unnecessary to pass a pending bill extending its life for one year from March 15.

Report on Hibernation Of Boll Weevils Issued

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (AP)—The department of agriculture today issued a report on boll weevil hibernation indicating that about as many boll weevils hibernated this year as did last year.

Examinations this year were made at 47 points in four states involving the examination of a total of 6,767 pounds of moss. The department said that since the examinations were confined to four states "too sweeping conclusions should not be drawn as to the number of weevils entering hibernation throughout the cotton belt."

AMERICAN SHOT IN NICARAGUA

Two Natives Killed In Jungle Battle

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 15. (AP)—A sudden flaring of bandit activity in the northern jungles has resulted in the wounding of an American medical officer and the killing of two guardsmen.

Lieut. William H. Smith, medical officer, and three members of the Guardia Nacional (the American officered national guard) were wounded. It was believed that several of the outlaws had been killed.

The clash occurred in the vicinity of San Juan de Telpaneca, province of Nueva Segovia near the Honduran border. The outlaws were armed with a machine gun and bombs. One of the bombs struck Lieutenant Smith on the side of the head and a bullet also hit him. His wounds are not serious.

The jungle where the fighting occurred was so thick that the size of the bandit group could not be determined, although it was believed they numbered at least 100.

The dead guardsmen were buried near the scene of battle. The wounded were transported on the backs of mules to Apali, where there is an airplane landing field. They were brought to Managua from there by plane.

The guardia patrol was commanded by Lieut. Chester A. Davis. He was formerly a captain in the United States army and held the rank of lieutenant colonel during the world war. He resigned several years ago and about a year ago enlisted in the marine corps, later being commissioned a lieutenant in the guardia nacional.

BEWARE of Coughs that Follow FLU

They Weaken Your System and May Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and acts as a gentle laxative.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and helps check the growth of the germs.

In addition to creosote, Creomulsion contains cascara, wild cherry, syrup of white pine with tar, menthol, ipecac and licorice root, the combined effect of which is to dislodge and loosen up the phlegm, produce a cooling, soothing, healing effect on the inflamed mucous membranes and act as a gentle laxative. Creomulsion contains no narcotics, nor anything harmful. It can be safely given to children—they like its pleasant taste.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from flu and colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately.

Caution!

A hard, racking cough from flu keeps the system weak and run down—making it easy to have a relapse, or catch colds or develop something more serious. By relieving the cough, Creomulsion helps the system regain its strength. Its use should be continued several days after securing relief so as to get the most benefit possible.

CREOMULSION
FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

HISTORY repeats itself again

ON JANUARY 7, 1926, a new automobile came into existence. It was a six. It had bodies by Fisher. It sold for $825. It introduced real luxury and beauty to buyers in the low-priced field. This new car was the Pontiac Six. During its first 10 months, it more than doubled the full first year's sales of any new make of car. That is still a world's record.

But Pontiac's builders did not rest content with their early triumph. They knew that American people are constantly on the lookout for new and finer things.

So in February, 1927, they introduced the New and Finer Pontiac Six. And it was lower in price than ever, selling for $775. Then, in July, greatly increased production enabled Pontiac's builders to reduce the price again. Now Pontiac sold for $745.

Came 1928, and with it a still finer Pontiac. Even then the price remained only $745. And after six months, during which this car became one of the best sellers in the automotive field, more improvements were announced. Last July, Pontiac was made faster, more powerful than ever and more attractive in style.

This brief history is significant. It recalls Pontiac's origin and the introduction of true motoring luxury into the low-priced field. It relates how Pontiac's progress has matched strides with the increasing demand for luxury among those hundreds of thousands who form its market.

But most important of all, it gives you an idea of something that is coming. Automobile history is repeating itself again. Soon Oakland will present a brand new Pontiac Six, an even greater advancement over other low-priced cars available today than the original Pontiac represented in 1926. Watch for the

'PA' STRIBLING SIGNS FOR WILLIE TO FIGHT JACK SHARKEY

MIAMI BEACH MILL ASSURED

Georgian to Receive 20 Per Cent; Foe Gets $100,000

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 15. (AP)—Final official details assuring the Stribling-Sharkey heavyweight boxing bout here Feb. 27 were completed today with Jack Dempsey, acting for the Madison Square Garden corporation, and W. L. Stribling Sr., father of one of the principals signing the contract.

The contract gives the Georgia pugilist 20 per cent of the gross gate receipts but no guarantee. The Garden corporation takes an option on Stribling for his succeeding fight.

Would Fight for Nothing

Inasmuch as Jack Sharkey, the ex-gob from Boston signed through his manager last week, with $100,000 as his stipulation, the fight is considered a certainty for this resort city.

Stribling Sr., said "we are elated to get anything for the fight. We would fight Sharkey for nothing. I know my boy will go on to the title."

To Seat 30,000

Dempsey, in the role of successor to his friend, the late George L. Rickard, will confer with John Levy, Garden corporation seating expert, who will supervise the erection of stands to handle a crowd of approximately 30,000 spectators The arena will be around the Rickard Kennel club oval, near the beach.

Another task Dempsey was called upon to handle was the tentative selection of training camps for the fighters whose contracts call for them to begin work here Feb. 1.

Texas Electrics and the high school Coyotes maintained their tie for the leadship in the City basket ball league by winning last night on the junior college floor. The Kilowats defeated the Hub, 31 to 25 in the clothiers' opening contest in the first game and the Pack disposed of Featherston-Hawkins-Vague quintet, 33 to 21.

Hub got out in front and led for the first quarter, but Ganter and his Kilowat teammates then started ringing baskets with regularity. Gantner shot seven field goals and two free tosses to be high scorer with 16 points. Sisk led the Hub scoring with five baskets from play and a free toss for 11 points.

Deems, Queen and Hennessey were among other players who had stellar parts in the game.

The Coyotes got off to an early lead and paced by the all-around play of Curtis at forward were never threatened by F-H-V after the first quarter. Curtis negotiated eight field goals and looped four free throws for 20 points to be high scorer of the night, and also played a superb floor game.

J. Janeway paced F-H-V in scoring. Anderson and Hodgkiss played their usual good game at guard for the Coyotes while Beck was a star for the losers. Lineups:

Famous Golf Shots of 1928

A Story in One Stroke

By PAUL R. MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

With one stroke of his trusty putter little Abe Espinosa, Chicago's golfing matador, convinced his critics last summer that he had finally mastered his nervousness under fire—a condition that had cost him several championships.

It was during the Chicago district golf championship over the heavily trapped Idlewild Country club course that Espinosa made a treacherous 25-foot putt that not only gave him the title, but demonstrated his gameness.

Frank Walsh, curly headed professional from Appleton, Wis., had completed his play in the 72 hole tournament with a total of 284 strokes, which looked low enough to win.

But Abe started a tardy assault on par in his final homeward nine, and when he reached the final tee he needed a par four to tie and a birdie to win. His tee shot split the fairway for 240 yards and his second landed an inch off the carpet —25 feet from the pin.

"I understand I have to make this to win?" Abe asked his caddy, who replied in the affirmative.

"He can't do it," whispered Walsh.

Abe, who had been troubled by the tricky green all during the tournament, carefully surveyed his lie and the green, which had a treacherous undulation about the pin. To play safe was a certain tie; to play for one putt would either be good or ruin his chances. He putted for the back of the pin. The pellet followed on a parabola and nestled into the cup. Abe was the champion.

"Some shot, some gameness," congratulated Walsh as he walked away.

Jack Joins Other Ex-Titleholders In Discovering 'Next Champion'

Corbett, Jeffries, Even Tunney "Found" Successors to Throne, Though None of The Chosen Delivered

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Jack Dempsey was quoted not long ago as saying that he has the next heavyweight champion of the world under cover, though he wouldn't divulge the party's name.

The old Manassa man mauler displays some of the instincts of a natural born heavyweight manager when he says his heavyweight is the next heavyweight champion of the world. That is the first crack you make when you acquire a heavyweight.

In fact a man who has a heavyweight and doesn't say he is the next heavyweight champion of the world is considered non-union There is only one non-union manager of heavyweights in the business. He is Arthur Yende, who used to be matchmaker Jess McMahon's assistant at Madison Square garden.

Mr. Yende was for a spell manager of Quentin Romero-Rojas, of Chile. Mr. Yende, for some strange reason, would never claim that Quentin Romero-Rojas was the next heavyweight champion of the world. On the contrary, Mr. Yende was once overheard saying, in so many words:

"I do not think Quentin Romero-Rojas will be the next heavyweight champion of the world."

This statement was duly reported to the association of managers of the next heavyweight champion of the world, and Mr. Yende was ruled off for heresy. Nevertheless, he was probably right. Quentin Romero-Rojas will not be the next heavyweight champion of the world, nor yet the next after the next.

They're All Champs

Within the 12 months just passed, I have personally been informed by no less than 1,543½ managers that they have the next heavyweight champion of the world, but unlike the Manassa man mauler they have been pleased to furnish me with the guy's name.

I wish Jack Dempsey would lay me a little 6 to 5 that I can't guess his man in, say, two trys. One to warm up on. I wonder if he would bet me that his next heavyweight champion of the world isn't redheaded, and not hustle him to a hair dyer's before the judges can pass on the wager?

And I think Jack Dempsey is wrong. His under-cover man is not the next heavyweight champion of the world. He hasn't got quite enough, as the baseball managers say of a pitcher who just muffs the big show. Anyway, the Dempsey man is too far away in the matter of experience to make the title in time to be the next champion.

Of course Jack Dempsey may be talking about himself. In that event, I am wrong. In that event, Jack Dempsey may have the next champion of the world. But I am assuming that he has reference to some aspiring youth whose promise has taken the Dempsey eye, or whose praises have been sounded in the Dempsey ear.

Gene's Little Joke

Nearly all the ex-heavyweight champions try to dig up a new champion. Even James J. Tunney, formerly called Gene, left us laughing as he said good-bye when he nominated as his possible successor, one Harold Mays, of New Jersey Harold had been one of James J. Tunney's spar-mates.

I am not certain that old John L Sullivan attempted to find a youthful frame to fit his old overcoat, but John's successor, James J. Corbett made a noble effort when he appeared on the scene with one Tom Cowler, of England.

Now Thomas was a prodigious hitter with his right hand—so much so that the ubiquitious Doctor Kearns kept Dempsey away from him—but Thomas couldn't absorb 'em. I think James J. Corbett's large heart busted the night little Jack Dillon, the giant killer, reached up over in Brooklyn and tagged Thomas on the old potato for a winning score.

James J. Jeffries made at least one effort to shove a young heavyweight forward. His next champion of the world was a chap out in Los Angeles whose name escapes me at the moment, but whatever it was, the young man didn't get far. He at no time reflected any of old Jeff's prowess.

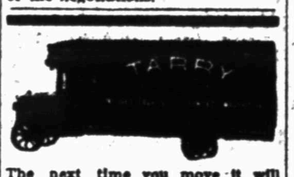

Tommy Has a Couple

Tommy Burns is around right now with a couple of heavyweights. One of them, Jack Humbeck, he imported from Belgian. Jack is mainly a catcher, however. Tommy's other prospect is Vigo Doman, a former amateur from Los Angeles, who might knock over the Woolworth building if he hit it. But from what I saw of Vijo, he would have difficulty hitting the Woolworth building if it stepped aside about an inch.

A tremendous bitter is Vigo, but that's all, unless Tommy has been able to teach him something.

I don't believe that Jess Willard, the Pottawatomie pounder, ever troubled himself about finding the next heavyweight champion, but Dempsey has had the bug for some time. He was greatly interested in Armand Emanuel, the young Hebrew from San Francisco, and tried to get a contract on him.

Emanuel's father, who acts as his manager, was willing enough to let Dempsey become manager of the boy if Dempsey would be manager in fact, and not just in name. But at that time Dempsey's other interests prevented, and so nothing came of the negotiations.

American-British Polo Tourney Off

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (UP)—There will be no British-American military polo tournament this year, the Army Central Polo association announced today.

The British war office has advised the military attache of the American embassy in London that its army council is forced to decline an invitation to send a polo team to the United States in 1929.

The army council, it was said "realizes the many advantages that accrue from these friendly contests," but feels that "it would be quite impossible to spare the services of the officers who would be needed for a representative team for the length of time that would be involved."

A series of championship polo matches between army teams representing England and the United States was started in 1923 by Gen. John J. Pershing and General the Earl of Cavan. Since 1925 no maches have been played, but the army central polo committee at Washington, in making its announcement, expressed the hope that the series might be resumed in the near future.

INFIELDERS TO CHANGE JOBS

Shortstops Play Third and Base and Vice Versa

By BRIAN BELL

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. (AP)—Half a dozen major league infielders will waste many steps next summer looking for their gloves from force of habit. They will walk to a spot dedicated as a deposit place for a shortstop's mitt when they should go to the third base glove reservation or the other way around.

In baseball spring training camps, now only a few weeks away, men who long have been stars under the big top of baseball will be rookies again for they will have to learn a new position.

Must Learn New Jobs

The shortstops who must learn to play third and the third basemen, who will be called on to master shortstopping, will have no time to loaf when the clarion call to baseball arms is sounded next month.

The New York Yankees plan to move Mark Koenig from short to third. Washington may reverse the process with Ossie Bluege going from third to short. The Pirates will have Pie Traynor replace Wright at short if a likely third baseman is uncovered and Dave Bancroft may go to third for Brooklyn, leaving Wright in undisputed possession of short.

Harris May Play Third

Manager Stanley Harris, star second sacker for Washington, may have to play third for Detroit, for he has a great second sacker in Gehringer. The Cleveland Indians apparently are committed to a policy of transferring Joey Sewell from shortstop to third base.

Connie Mack has a chance to sign three players permanently in almost any spot he chooses. Jimmie Fox, a catcher; Ossie Orwoll, a pitcher, and Jimmy Dykes, an infield jack of all trades, are the individuals. Anyone, or all of the trio, can play any position not nailed down.

Pin League Lead At Stake Tonight

Continental and Panhandle Clash in City Loop

First place in the City Bowling league will be at stake tonight in the three-cornered fight for that place when Continental and Panhandle, two of the leaders, meet on alleys 5 and 6. While those oil concerns are rolling to stay in the lead the Hub and Montgomery Clothiers play on alleys 1 and 2, with the First National bank and Wichita Falls Window Glass bowlers completing the night's play on alleys 3 and 4.

Spudder alleys, the third member of the leading trio, meet Parfet-Martlew tied for second place, on alleys 1 and 2 tomorrow night. Other games tomorrow night are Texas company vs. Elks, alleys 3 and 4, and Cinderella vs. Texas Electric, alleys 5 and 6.

Play starts at 7:30 o'clock.

Tex's Poker Face Masked Regret As He Said Goodbye at Henrietta

Rickard First Became Interested in Prize Fighting Over Talk of Corbett, but Sails for Klondike

By JACK LAWRENCE
(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Some time in 1914 or early in 1915 I was standing on the deck of the Olympic and saw a British naval officer take leave of his wife. That was a short time before the great ship went trooping, not seen here until after the war. The naval officer was a commander and an attache of the British embassy in Washington. We have seen few more gallant figures in uniform than his. But he had that steady, immovable poker face that refused to register emotion. It is a characteristic you will recognize and remember if you have met many British naval men. The manner probably started with Nelson, who, even in his most ardent moments with Lady Hamilton, when his fleet sailed into the Mediterranean, found outward manifestation of his great love almost impossible.

I happened to know that the British naval officer sailing on the Olympic that day was going on a perilous mission. His wife knew it, too. I knew that it was so perilous a mission that he probably never would return.

They probably knew that they were saying farewell for the last time.

That is the thought that was probably in both of their minds.

While others all around them were weeping and wailing, they, who were never to see each other again in this life and were pretty well aware of it, shook hands and parted. His deep lined, handsome face, set with sultry blue eyes, showed no trace of emotion. All the emotion that must have been welling up within him was quelled and quenched under the amazing command he had over his feelings. Five months later he was officially reported as lost in a British submarine in the Baltic sea.

I have never looked upon the stoic, imperturbable face of Tex Rickard that I did not think of that British naval officer who went through that outwardly emotionless farewell with his wife on the deck of the Olympic in 1915.

Suppressed Emotions Fatal

Many years before, Tex Rickard's graven, sun-baked features must have registered just as little emotion when he went up and down the streets of Henrietta, Clay county, Texas, saying farewell to friends he was never to see again. The face that had never known anything but hardship, worry and untimely responsibility, was as set and unreadable then as it was when New Yorkers looked upon it for the last time in a $15,000 casket in Madison Square garden a few days ago. It was the same inscrutable face that baffled and mystified those who thought they were his closest friends. Behind it probably lurked a multitude of suppressed emotions which, scientists say, are certain to bring early death.

One of this country's most famous doctors said to me a day or two ago:

"If Rickard could have laughed or wept occasionally he probably would be alive today."

But Tex Rickard could neither laugh nor weep. If he laughed it was a forced stage laugh, and as for tears, he couldn't even summon up the crocodile variety. He probably felt things, but he kept them bolted far down within him, which was probably bad for his liver, his kidneys, his heart and his appendix.

In the last 18 months of his life, when little Maxine Texas Rickard, his daughter, tried to win a smile from the sphynx of sport she found that she was up against a tough assignment. She managed to break his stony countenance into something resembling a smile, but it was a smile wreathed in ghostly melancholy. It was as though he smiled through thoughts of two other daughters by two other wives who had all passed on into the sod.

Tex Rickard was going to Alaska. He was going to the Klondike in search of gold, in search of quick riches that could be earned legitimately and honorably.

Excited Over Klondike

"I've been excited and worked up over other ventures since then," Tex once said to me. "But nothing ever got me so thoroughly steamed up as the prospect of going after that Klondike gold. I think it actually gave me a fever because I remember I was pretty sick for a couple of days after leaving Henrietta. I guess it was the gold fever. I've still got it. You never get it out of your blood. I think that if I heard of a gold rush tomorrow I'd be the first to join it.

"I began to prepare for the trip as early as January, 1895. The papers were filled with stories of the Klondike and big strikes, of men going up the Yukon penniless and coming out with fabulous fortunes in gold. It was the big news story of the day. The front pages carried the latest news from Alaska in roaring headlines. And I devoured every line of it that I could lay my hands on. And the more I read the more my imagination worked. I think I started the long trek into the Northwest with the idea that all a guy had to do was stick his shovel into the frozen earth and turn over a bucket of nuggets. What a pipe dream that was! The gold was there, all right, but it took a good man to get it. But I didn't find that out until later.

"I was going to the Klondike, dig myself a fortune in nuggets and gold dust and then I would return to Texas, buy the biggest ranch in the state and populate it with ten thousand longhorns. It was a fine idea, but it never worked out."

Rickard thought he ought to have a partner—a buddy—on an adventure of this sort, and he hunted up one down there in Texas and seems to have made a somewhat unfortunate selection. He sold his idea to a lad named Willie Stack. Another chap named Collins was to have gone along with them, but at the last minute decided to get cold feet in Texas rather than frozen toes in Alaska. On the morning the start was to be made Collins could not be found.

Tex's Partner Quit

But Rickard's high pressure enthusiasm completely overwhelmed Willie Stack, who had more imagination than physical equipment for an expedition of this kind. He was rather an anaemic young man who had spent much of his time along the Mexican border where the hot suns had thinned his blood. He was a bad entry for the great Yukon handicap. He took one look at the ice-glazed trail leading up to the Chilkoot pass and resigned. He wanted heat more than he wanted gold.

The two young prospectors were to fit out for their long perilous hike into the Klondike at Juneau, which was the great "shoving off" point. But before striking Juneau they dropped off in San Francisco to see the sights. In fact it was from this port that they boarded one of those old stern-wheelers for Juneau. They discovered that among the population of the city there were just two topics of conversation.

One was the fabulous fortunes to be dug out of the snow-clad hills of the Klondike and their other was James J. Corbett, a San Francisco boy who had won the heavyweight championship of the world a couple of years before from John L. Sullivan.

Long afterward Tex Rickard said:

"I guess that was the first time I ever gave a thought to prize fighting. Those San Francisco folks were talking about the Sullivan-Corbett fight as though it had taken place the day before. That's all you heard in the 'Frisco saloons at that time—Corbett and the Klondike. I suddenly got a great desire to see this wonderful champion, the man who had licked John L. We even delayed our start for Juneau a couple of days because I insisted we ought to have a look at the great man. Corbett was in 'Frisco at the time but we could never seem to catch up with him. We wandered from one saloon to another but never a glimpse of James J. Corbett did we get. We finally got disgusted and set sail for Juneau. Little did I think at that time what a part the great city of San Francisco was to play in my later life."

HALL TO FACE RILEY TONIGHT

Middles Headline Star Boxing Card Here

Alex Ross, the eminent sports entrepreneur of Wichita Falls, offers his prize boxing card tonight at his gymnasium at 821 Indiana avenue. The professor is proud of his fistic talent lined up for tonight's show and well he may be. The card, "on paper," looks like a wow.

It will be headlined by Cyclone Hall, the aggressive, k. o. punching middleweight from Childress, and Sam Riley, the clever fellow from Altus, Okla. Both men have made pleasing showings in previous appearances here and their 10-round mill tonight is eagerly awaited by fistic enthusiasts.

Six Bouts, 38 Rounds

Five other bouts, comprising a total of 38 rounds, complete the extraordinary fistic offering of Impresario Alec. The eight-round semi-windup, regarded with almost as great interest as the main event, will bring together Battling Sturdivant, the Wichita Falls lightweight who has won several recent victories here, and Windy Woody of Abilene. Woody is held as a sturdy puncher and clever boxer around Abilene and looms as a tough adversary for Sturdivant.

There is a six-round mill, also between lighties, that should provide lots of action. It is between Howard Scott, the popular Electra youth and Kid Murdock of Sulphur, Okla. These boys have boxed here before and always provide fast bouts.

Card Starts at 8:15

Completing the program will be a six-round go between Bill Vance of Fort Worth and Jack Robinson of Quanah, middleweights; four rounds, with Adolph Fourpin of Wichita Falls facing Thomas Garland of Burburnett, middleweights; four rounds, Curly Robertson and Young Sturdivant, both of Wichita Falls, paperweights, and a battle royal, opening the show at 8:15 o'clock.

The winner of the Hall-Riley mill will face the survivor of another bout to be staged soon by Ross, in which foremost middleweights of the southwest will be the principals

Rich or Poor Man's Gout

While many people consider that gout is only a rich man's disease, it really isn't as important how much money one has in the bank as how much poison he has in his body. Gout is usually preceded by many years of disorders of the digestive, urinary or nervous systems. A severe attack of gout may appear without any previous local symptoms. The patient may retire feeling quite well, but be awakened in the early morning by an excruciating pain in some of the small joints of the body, usually in the ball of the great toe. This intense pain is accompanied by shivering and followed by a fever which may rise to 102 or 103 degrees Fahrenheit.

The pain of a gouty attack is intensely agonizing, and feels as though the joints were being screwed in a vice. The affected joint swells rapidly and assumes a reddish hue. The skin is hot, tense and has a shiny surface. After a few hours the pain lessens, the patient perspires gently and falls into a refreshing sleep. The pain returns in all its severity every night during the continuance of the attack, which may last for nine or ten days. Then the symptoms of tenderness in the joint disappear. The skin will pit upon being pressed and sometimes scales.

After the attack is over the patient may feel unusually well, but there is a saying that ones gouty, always gouty. This is true unless the proper dietetic measures are used to clear the system of the uric acid poisons. When the disease is not cured by dietetic measures it becomes chronic, and the first attack is always followed by recurrent attacks, each more severe than the previous.

A deposit of chalk stones or "tophi" forms around the affected joints, and may even be ulcerated out through the skin. These tophi consist principally of bi-urate of soda. At first soft, they become more dense and cause a stiffening and knotting of joints. The hands and feet are most commonly affected. Usually these tophi can be felt on the ears, and are one of the diagnostic indications of gout.

Since this disease seems to be especially caused by the retention of uric acid and other purin bodies, which are combined with sodium and deposited in the tissues in order to free the blood as much as possible of the excess of prina, the proper treatment is to eliminate all food for a time except large quantities of distilled water to which some of the acid fruit juices has been added. In this way no additional uric acid will be taken into the system, and the body will be able to dissolve that which has been deposited in the tissues and excreted through the kidneys and pores of the skin.

Sometimes the gouty area becomes more sensitive during the first few days of the fast while the toxins are being dissolved, but this disappears in the course of time and one will actually observe the tophi becoming smaller as the fast progresses. In severe cases it is sometimes necessary to repeat a 10-day fast, such as I have described, at intervals of about a month apart.

Between the fasting periods the diet should be especially rich in foods containing large quantities of sodium and potassium. Here is a list of some of the sodium foods:

Swiss chard, spinach, strawberries, pumpkin, asparagus, carrots, dandelions, lettuce, whits of egg and dried figs.

The foods rich in potassium are: Lettuce, kale, tomatoes, celery, cucumbers, cress, turnips, egg plant, lemons and currents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sweating Feet

Question—G. W. asks: "Does excessive perspiration of the feet necessarily indicate ill health? Am a 19-year-old boy. And what else would cause a pimply face besides wrong eating?"

Answer—If you will take at least one sponge or shower bath daily, you will find that it will cut down excessive sweating of your feet, as all of the other pores of the body will be stimulated to do their proper work. A pimply face is caused both from wrong eating and through intestinal poisoning which comes from constipation or from kinks in the colon which encourage the retention of poisonous fecal matter.

Bananas

Question—E. L. J. asks: "Will you give the right way of combining bananas with other foods?"

Answer—Bananas should be used as a starchy food and so combine well with the non-starchy vegetables. The best way to use bananas is baked. Then use two or three as the principal part of a meal, adding any of the cooked and raw greens.

Diphtheria

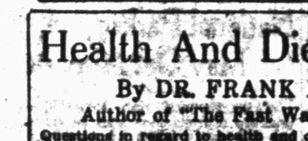

Question—D. M. writes: "I would like to have your opinion on treatment they are giving for diphtheria."

Answer—There are many treatments for diphtheria, some based upon the theory that the disease can be prevented or arrested through the use of antitoxin. The method I advocate is for the patient to stop eating at once at the first symptoms of a sore throat, go to bed and induce a copious sweat, using frequent sponge baths and no gargles. This "grandmother" method has been highly successful, and seems to be the only treatment necessary in the majority of cases.

REFINERS TO MEET MARCH 12

Roy B. Jones, President, To Make Report

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Jan. 15. —Plans for the annual meeting of the Western Petroleum Refiners association which will be held March 12, at Jefferson hotel, in St. Louis, Mo., are now being tackled by the officers and committees.

The entire proceedings will take up one full day, being given over to a discussion of industrial problems and the election of officers for 1929, and a report by the president and the first meeting of the newly elected board of directors. Present officers are:

Roy B. Jones, Wichita Falls, president; E. W. Goebel, Kansas City, Mo., vice president; M. J. Grogran, Shreveport, La., vice president; George D. Locke, Chicago, vice president; Howard Bennette, Tulsa, managing director; Arthur V. Bourque, Tulsa, secretary; H. K. Davis, Tulsa, economist; E. H. Ritter, Tulsa, statistician; Fayette B. Dow, Washington, D. C., counsel.

Skelly Test In Maud Blows In

TULSA, Jan. 15.—Skelly Oil company No. 1 Lingerfelt, in the southwest of the northwest of the northeast of 18-8-5, in the Maud area of the Greater Seminole field, standardized at 4,125 feet and while drilling the plugs out, it blew in making 810 barrels in five and a half hours. It flowed 2,122 barrels ending Monday morning. Misener sand was topped at 4,130 feet and drilled to 4,131 feet.

Burke-Greis Oil company and Red Bank Oil company No. 1 Mayes in the southeast of the northeast of the northeast of 1-9-5, in the Earlsboro pool, produced 825 barrels in 24 hours and the last three nours it flowed 507 barrels. It was shot with 40 quarts last Friday. The Wilcox sand was encountered from 4,395 to 4,414 feet and it produced 435 barrels natural.

The Greater Seminole area showed an increase of 2,866 barrels Sunday, but a loss of 2,258 barrels Monday. Sunday's gauge was 286,138 barrels from 1,322 wells and Monday's gauge was 283,881 barrels from 1,323 wells. The Maud field made almost a high mark Monday, having produced 27,303 barrels from 30 wells. The high mark of the field was on Jan. 2, when the field made 27,777 barrels.

The comparative output report follows:

Pools—	Mon.	Sun.
Little River	92,896	94,748
Bowlegs	44,051	44,953
Earlsboro	69,104	70,266

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. (AP)—Yesterday's advances were followed by reactions in the cotton market today under realising or liquidation by recent buyers, who appeared to be disappointed over the rather indifferent showing of Liverpool and the failure of the report on boll weevil hibernation to promote more buying. March contracts sold off from 30.41 to 20.18 and closed at 20.20. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 12 to 26 points.

The opening was unchanged to 7 points lower in response to disappointing cables from the bullish standpoint and a disposition to take profits on long cotton after the advance of yesterday. The initial offerings were readily absorbed by trade or commission house buying and covering which sent active months 4 to 8 points above yesterday's closing quotations. This bulge met increased offerings above the 20-cent level for July contracts and after selling at 20.07 for that position, prices turned easier under realizing combined with some southern and local selling. Buying meanwhile tapered off, and while there were bulges from time to time prices worked gradually lower during the afternoon. The lowest prices of the day were reached on late trading when January sold at 20.14 and July at 19.82 or about 12 to 19 points net lower on the old crop months. New crop positions were relatively easy with old October contracts selling off to 19.43, while the new October declined to 19.32 or 20 points net lower. At the close there was a difference of 12 points between the old and new contracts, compared with a difference of 21 points at the close of the previous day. There were reiterated reports of a firm spot basis in the South which were without much apparent effect on the market. Private cables said that Continental, Japanese and Chinese buying had been supplied by realizing in Liverpool. Export today 16,564, making 5,232,271 so far this season. Port receipts 34,869. U. S. port stocks 2,285,782.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15. (AP)—A slight early improvement met realising and liquidation in the cotton market today and March contracts eased off from 19.78 to 19.53 and closed at 19.56 compared with 19.73, yesterday's closing figure. A bearish construction placed on information contained in the July boll weevil report issued in late trading added to the weakness. The general market closed steady at net declines of 13 to 17 points.

The market opened steady in response to higher Liverpool cables than due. First trades showed gains of 2 points and after easing off slightly after the start the market met good support in the form of trade buying and shorts covering probably induced by a reported good spot demand and large Liverpool spot sales. March rallied to 19.78 and May 19.82, or 5 to 6 points above yesterday's close.

Later the market showed a tendency to ease off due to uncertainty over what the weevil report would show.

There was some realizing suffient to carry March off to 19.67 and May 19.70, or 11 to 12 points from the highs and 4 points under the previous close. After a slight rally around noon the market weakened again under selling prompted by a bearish view of the weevil report and before the offerings were absorbed March sold off to 19.53 and May 19.58, or 24 to 26 points down from the highs. The market rallied a few points right at the end and finished unchanged to 3 to 4 points above the lows with May closing at 19.61, or 15 points net down.

Stock Market Price Average Goes Down Under Professional Selling

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. (US)—Stock prices gave way to the extent of several points on the average today. A combination of unfavorable and unsettling factors induced considerable liquidation and encouraged professional selling. Money rose to nine per cent as a result of the mid-month demands and desire of banks to meet their federal reserve requirements. Failure of the market to respond to buying also discouraged many large operators who reported heavy selling has come on every bulge in prices.

Wild gyrations in Fuel of Canada shares recalled to many nervous traders the Canadian Marconi episode although there is little resemblance between the two situations. The bitter fight between Rockefeller and Col. Stewart involving control of Standard Oil Company of Indiana was interpreted by some as suggesting a possible contest which might embroil the entire oil industry.

Int. Combustion Features

Before the heaviest selling broke out, International Combustion had featured the market by rising to a record high price. This stock is declared to be the particular favorite of Durant. The ex-automobile magnate and present stock market operator is understood to regard Combustion's prospects as highly favorable. Combustion's New Jersey plant, the largest step yet undertaken by the company to prove the merit and economic value of its fuel-saving devices, is nearing completion and its successful operation will probably be celebrated marketwise.

Durant is reported to have taken tremendous profit in his International Nickel venture and placed a substantial portion of the proceeds in International Combustion. Nickel yielded over a point on selling which persisted despite circulation of reports that a "sensational strike" had occurred in its Mond mine in Canada. Allied Chemical and Wright, features on the upside Monday, lost all of their gain, Wright being sold on announcement of only the regularly dividend. Directors contemplate more favorable action, however. Various stocks receded below their previous "resistance" points, touching off many stop-loss orders.

Stores Stock Watched

City Stores stock is understood to have won the attention of prominent interests. The company operates one of the largest department store chains in the country, with a progressive management which is contemplating additional expansion. Initial step in this enlargement program will be attempt to acquire all outstanding stock of Lit Brothers leading Philadelphia department store.

Consolidated Gas yielded with the main body of stocks, despite report that it plans a stock offering with "rights" to shareholders. Gas is also understood to be contemplating a new and much more attractive offer to minority holders of Brooklyn Edison shares. Rubber prices met profit-taking. It is understood that leading British banking interests are anxious to list on the New York stock exchange the shares of prominent British rubber companies, chiefly.

While Anaconda, Kennecott and other coppers were reacting, Chile maintained its price in response to buying which is stated to be traced to the larger enterprises. American Sugar reacted over two points although estimates were made that the company may show over $10 a share for the 1928 year. Efforts of American Sugar producers to have a heavier tariff placed on Cuban sugar imparted irregularity to the entire group, although some companies, Great Western, went to a new high. Central Aguirre and South Porto Rican sugar companies may be benefited by a higher tariff wall. U. S. Steel lost several points and other steels were not helped by revival of merger reports. The motor shares continued under pressure. Their weakness has been one of the most disappointing features of the 1929 market to date.

Woman Held In Petrified Body Hoax Sentenced

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 15. (INS)—Mrs. Allice Sawyer, wealthy Long Beach apartment manager, today was sentenced by Federal Judge M. J. Henning to serve 18 months in the woman's national institute at Alderson, W. Va., and pay a $1,000 fine for swindling in a "petrified body" hoax.

Mrs. Sawyer was convicted of procuring $25,000 from John Hintz, aged locomotive engineer of Meridian, Miss., in a weird plot involving the sale of the supposedly petrified body of her deceased son.

A frail woman suffering tuberculosis, Mrs. Sawyer appealed for probation. This was denied. Notice of appeal was then filed.

The court said that Mrs. Sawyer could be treated in the institute, a government sanitarium established through the efforts of Judge Henning when he was assistant secretary of labor.

Texan Protests Against Louisiana Freight Rates

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15. (AP)—W. N. Blanton, general manager of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, representing 67 Texas counties, testified at an interstate commerce commission hearing today that freight rates established through the Louisiana Public Service commission are discriminatory to his territory.

Edgar Moulton, assistant general manager of the New Orleans joint traffic bureau, testifying for Louisiana, attempted to show that the interstate rates discriminate against New Orleans in favor of Galveston, Houston, Port Arthur, Beaumont and Orange.

Lumberman Faces Charges of Fraud

PERRY, Okla., Jan. 15. (UP)—Elmer Rudy, manager of the Rounds and Porter Lumber company at Morrison, Okla., was charged with appropriating company funds for personal use by the Noble county grand jury, it was learned today.

Rudy was released today on $5,000 bond, and arraignment was announced for January 21.

The indictment against Rudy was made on two counts. He is alleged to have taken $588.65 on Nov. 15, 1926, and $559.75 on Dec. 5, 1926.

FARM SCHOOL PLANS GIVEN

Weeks Tells Realtors Of Valley Program

Definite plans for the establishment of a school of poultry raising and intensive farming were begun at a meeting of Iowa Park citizens which he addressed Monday night, Charles Weeks, California small farm colonizer, stated in his address before the members of the Real Estate board Tuesday noon.

Aside from teaching agriculture, dairying, poultry raising and fruit growing, Mr. Weeks stated that the proposed institution would be designed to teach a finer type of living, through emphasis upon the benefits of relaxation and reading, and increased attention to home development. The speaker stated his opinion that $100,000 would be required to establish the school and that he had found here the setting for such an institution.

Development of the entire Wichita valley for intensive farming of small tracts was urged by Mr. Weeks.

J. A. Kemp made a brief talk endorsing the Weeks plan, and asking the support of the local realtors in its development.

Mrs. Mamie Dale and C. H. Clark of Iowa Park also spoke briefly in behalf of the farm colonization program.

Swimming Hole In Stewart Wrangle

Carstens, owner of a single share of Standard of Indiana stock which he admitted he bought "so I could oppose Stewart," charged that employees of the plant here—many of whom own company stock—had been ordered to sign their proxies to Stewart.

Other spokesmen of the company, however, denied the charge. One of them told the United Press that "no coercion whatever" had been brought to bear on them. Carstens countered by asserting the men were "afraid of their jobs." In turn, other spokesmen of the company said they liked the Stewart regime, "and that's all there is to it."

Carstens' appointment as postmaster expires next month, and reappointment has been held up. He told the United Press that Congressman Ed M. Erwin of Illinois had told him Standard Oil officials here had complained against his continued opposition. A civil service examination has been ordered as a consequence.

"I'll take that examination," Carstens said, "and while I haven't any idea I'll win, they'll get a run for their money."

Behind the postmaster's fight to regain a license to operate his dance pavilion lies a counter legal action he has started against the donated pavilion which led to his being put out of business. He has attacked construction of the swimming pool on the grounds the grant of land on which it was erected did not contemplate such use.

The case has gone through the supreme court of the state, and has been ordered retired. It was cast out of a lower court when the city filed a demurrer, which was sustained.

Memphis Man Dies While Out Hunting

Special to The Record-News

MEMPHIS, Texas, Jan. 15.—J. W. Blanton, 63, pioneer citizen of Hall county, was found dead by two of his sons today about noon. The trio were out about seven miles from Memphis hunting. The body was brought to town and inquest held, and the cause of his death was pronounced as heart trouble.

Mr. Blanton had lived in Hall county about 20 years. He was one of the largest fruit growers in this section of the Panhandle.

He is survived by his wife and four children, Archie Blanton of Childress, Arthur Blanton of Vernon, Mrs. Bagwell of Electra and Mrs. Harvey Kingrey, Tampico, Mexico.

Wichita Falls Shriners Welcome Imperial Potentate of Order Today

Final arrangements for the entertainment of Frank C. Jones, imperial potentate of the A. A. O. N. M. S., who will pay his annual visit to Maskat temple Wednesday, were completed by Shrine officials Tuesday.

The potentate and a delegation of Wichita Falls Shriners, who met him in Amarillo Tuesday, are scheduled to arrive in Wichita Falls Wednesday morning at 11:45 o'clock in the private railway car of S. A. Covington, general superintendent of the Fort Worth and Denver lines.

The local delegation which left Monday night to escort Mr. Jones to Wichita Falls consists of J. M. Williams, Ed Peterson, Albert Ellis and Eli Morgan.

All uniform bodies of Maskat temple are to form in line at 11:30 at Eighth street and Scott avenue and march to the train to meet Mr. Jones and escort him to his hotel.

A dance from 9 until 12 will be given in the honor of Mr. Jones and his wife in the Maskat auditorium Wednesday night.

Mrs. Jones will arrive here from Houston Wednesday afternoon and will be entertained with a tea given in her honor by the Shriners' wives.

Wichita-Archer Baptist Association Approves School of Budgeting Plan

An associational school of budgeting, for the benefit of the Wichita-Archer Baptist association will be conducted in the First Baptist church at Iowa Park during the week beginning Jan. 28, according to plans completed at a meeting of the Workers Conference of the association in Burkburnett Tuesday.

The organization of the school was planned after the afternoon of the all day session had been spent in a discussion of budgeting problems. Rev. W. W. Rivers of the Electra church addressed the conference on "Getting a Budget in Every Church in the Association," and Mrs. Homer McGregor of Wichita Falls talked of the "Budget and the Woman's Missionary Union."

The conference opened at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning with devotionals led by Rev. Miles B. Haynes. About 30 members from Wichita Falls attended the meeting. The association represents 21 churches in the two counties. Rev. J. R. Rounds delivered the morning's sermon, taking "The Great Commission" as his text. After luncheon the board meeting and the woman's conference were held.

The conference voted in favor of the school of budgeting, to be held every evening of the week beginning Monday, Jan. 28.

KGKO Program

8:00 to 8:30—Maurice Wray, blues singer.
8:30 to 9:30—Tesco Male Quartet.
9:30 to 10:00—Colored community singers.

$70,000 Damage Suit Goes to Jury Today

Testimony for the plaintiff in the suit of Vernie Cheatwood against the Independent Torpedo company, asking $70,000 for alleged permanent injuries suffered through the explosion of a nitroglycerine bomb was completed before Judge W. W. Cook in the 78th district court Tuesday afternoon.

After the judge overruled a defense motion for an instructed verdict, evidence for the defendant, offered to show that the accident was not due to negligence on the part of the company, was introduced. The case is expected to go to the jury early Wednesday.

By his original petition, Mr. Cheatwood, formerly a tool dresser, asked $50,000 damages. An amendment to the petition, offered later, brought the sum to $70,000.

Electra Lions To Give Program Today

Members of the Electra Lions club will present the program at the regular weekly meeting of the local club Wednesday noon at the Y. W. C. A. rooms.

According to a letter received by Dr. R. H. Graham, local Lions club president, from G. R. Davidson, president of the Electra organization, a large delegation of Lions from that city will be present at the luncheon Wednesday.

Are You Run Down, Weak, Nervous?

To have plenty of firm flesh and the ability to do a big day's work and feel "like a two-year old" at night, you must eat three good meals a day, relish your food and properly digest it. If you can't eat, can't sleep, can't work, just take a teaspoonful of Tanlac before meals.

Mr. Joseph A. Culver, of 812 S. Main St., Muskogee, Okla., says: "I was a nervous wreck and forced myself to work and eat. I felt like quitting work before the day was up. On taking Tanlac, my appetite picked up so I could eat anything, soon slept well and gained 10 lbs."

Tanlac is wonderful for indigestion and constipation—gas, pains, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest your food, and gain strength and weight. It contains no mineral drugs; it is made of roots, barks and herbs, nature's own medicines for the sick. The cost is less than 2 cents a dose. Get a bottle from your druggist. Your money back if it doesn't help.
