$37 Million Judgment Hits Kodak

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastman Kodak Co. must pay $37.6 million in damages for monopolizing various amateur photographic markets since 1969, a federal court jury decided Wednesday.

The jury awarded damages to a Kodak competitor, Berkey Photos Inc., after nearly five days of deliberations in U.S. District Court.

Alvin Stein, a lawyer for Berkey, said the actual total award would amount to more than $112 million because federal antitrust laws provide for an automatic tripling of damages.

Three-Week Trial

The action followed a three-week trial before Judge Marvin Frankel to determine the size of the award. The same jury established Kodak's liability at an earlier trial, which took six months.

Berkey based its case on Kodak innovations, primarily in still cameras and movie cameras, film, color print paper and photo-finishing.

The innovations included Sylvania Co.'s Magicube flash and General Electric's improved Flipflash system, both of which Kodak helped develop, and Kodak's XL movie camera and the 110 Pocket Instamatic.

Berkey contended that Kodak violated antitrust laws by entering into secret agreements with Sylvania and GE and also by failing to disclose in advance that the new products were to be introduced to the market.

Monopolize Markets

As a result, Berkey claimed, Kodak was able to monopolize markets and make competitors dependent on it for new film, color print paper and necessary processing equipment and chemicals.

"This has been an absolutely historic case. Never before has a private litigation so effectively invoked and enforced antitrust laws," Stein said.

Kodak issued a statement saying the company "views the award as unwarranted because the company continues to believe that the court applied an incorrect standard of law in the case."

Intend To Appeal

"We believe as strongly as ever that Kodak's introduction of new and innovative products has not violated the law. We intend to appeal both the liability and damage findings of the jury."

The largest award Berkey received from the jury was compensatory damages for loss of sales on cameras after Kodak introduced its new 110 Pocket Instamatic camera in 1972. For that claim Berkey received $15.25 million.

TIME FOR THE SPRIN(G)KLERS—Spring has finally burst upon the South Plains, and it's once again time to water those parched, yellowed yards. But some people, like C. Jimenez, have a lot of yard to water. Jimenez checks to make sure all the sprinklers are working on a stretch of Texas Tech campus Wednesday. A forecast for clouds today increases rain chances for Lubbock and the South Plains, but even if showers do fall the odds are against a deluge. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

First U.N. Peace Unit Arrives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The first unit of a 4,000-man U.N. peacekeeping force moved into southern Lebanon Wednesday. Israeli troops were reported generally observing the two-day-old cease-fire.

Israel television reported the Israeli invasion force would be withdrawn from Lebanon "within the next few days." It gave no source for the report and there was no immediate official confirmation.

Yasser Arafat's mainstream guerrilla group, Al Fatah, has orders to honor the cease-fire declared Tuesday by Israel, The Associated Press learned. But the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine led by Dr. George Habash, part of the Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, vowed to demolish the truce.

Iranian Troops Enter

About 100 Iranian troops crossed into southern Lebanon from their posts in the Golan Heights buffer zone in Syria and began inspecting military positions. French officials said a reconnaissance party of 16 officers arrived here from Cyprus as vanguard of a 600-man force and will take up station today.

Similar 600-man contingents of Norwegians and Nepalese also are scheduled to move into the area.

The Iranians camped in the burned out village of Ghandouriyye near the Litani River after being held up by Christian Lebanese militiamen who vigorously oppose the entry of U.N. forces into their territory. Maj. Sa'ad Hadad, leader of the Christian force, said the U.N. troops would not be able to prevent the Palestinian guerrillas from returning once the Israelis withdraw.

Christians Fighting

The Christians have been fighting, with Israel's support, against the Palestinians and leftist Moslem Lebanese since the 1975-76 civil war.

Similar criticism came from some Israeli leaders, including Shimon Peres, chief of the Labor Party opposition, and Amnon Rubinstein, a member of Parliament for the Democratic Movement for Change, a partner in Israel's ruling Likud coalition. Rubinstein said he had "very strong doubts" the peacekeepers would be able to curb the guerrillas.

In Washington, President Carter concluded his talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on the Mideast situation, saying "peace still seems far away." Carter emphasized that Israel must agree to withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan River and other fronts as part of a settlement.

Security Challenged

Begin said in reply that Israel's security is under constant challenge and the PLO is committed to destruction of the Jewish state. Carter described the two days of talks as "detailed and frank."

Israeli forces control about 500 square miles of Lebanon north of the border to the Litani River, except for an area around the port city of Tyre which they have said they will not take.

Despite guerrilla claims of widespread violations, on-the-spot reports indicated the Israelis generally held their fire for the first time since crossing into Lebanon March 15 in a thrust precipitated by a Palestinian guerrilla raid in Israel in which 35 Israelis died.

Israel has said the purpose of the attack was to to clear the border area of guerrillas and insure it would not be

I-27 Extension Pushed

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FOR REASONS of commerce and national defense, I-27 should be extended not just from Amarillo to Lubbock but through to South Texas, a congressional panel has been told.

Such a highway finally would give Lubbock and points north good access to San Antonio, Houston and Gulf Coast ports and a new gateway to Mexico, city and county officials testified before the Senate Transportation Subcommittee.

"This route would connect Interstates 40, 20, 10, 35 and 37 and would serve to complete a most comprehensive network of interstate highways that would adequately serve all parts of this state," Bill Rusk, traffic manager for the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, said.

"We are one of those major medium-sized cities that desperately needs the interstate connections," he said.

Rusk, Lubbock County Commissioner Alton Brazell and City of Lubbock engineer Willie Watson were among a 40-member delegation from several Southern and Midwestern states testifying before the subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, this week in Washington.

Bentsen's panel is charged with assembling a bill that probably will set the direction of highway construction, improvement and safety and mass transit programs for the remainder of the century.

The nation's interstate highway system originally was laid out in the late 1940s, Brazell explained Wednesday. Of the 50,000-mile package proposed at that time, he said, Congress approved construction of a 41,000-mile system — and in so doing, deleted a project planned for Lubbock.

"Since then, there have been tremendous shifts in population and traffic patterns, as more people moved to the Sunbelt. As a result, there are now large gaps in the system that need to be filled," Brazell said.

Perhaps the biggest gap, local officials argue, is in the Lubbock area. The nearest north-south interstates are I-35 (from Laredo through Dallas-Fort Worth) to the east and I-25 (Las Cruces, N.M. through Albuquerque, N.M.) to the west.

Closest Interstates

The closest east-west interstates are I-40 (through Amarillo) to the north and I-20 (running southeast from Dallas-Fort Worth through Big Spring to El Paso) to the soth. Below I-20 is I-10, making an arc from Houston, San Antonio and El Paso.

Consequently, said Rusk, Lubbock is in the center of a huge rectangle (600 miles by 250 miles) that is unserved by an interstate highway.

Brazell noted that Congress has been frugal in authorizing more interstates. An exception, he said, was in the early 1970s when 1,500 miles — including the 120-mile stretch of I-27 from Amarillo to Lubbock — was approved. I-27 still is under construction.

In 1973, Brazell said, Congress asked the Department of Transportation to study 11 proposed interstate projects, including the extention of I-27 south from Lubbock. The department recommended against those projects.

"That's the background behind the testimony that was presented this week. Officials of the cities and states interested in those 11 projects and other highway improvements got together to ask that these proposals be funded in the next highway bill," Brazell said.

"We really want an interstate, and we

Hickox Blasts GOP Congress Opponents

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE REPUBLICAN race for the 19th Congressional seat heated up Wednesday when candidate Joe Hickox lambasted both his GOP opponents as being "vulnerable" to attack from Democrats.

Hickox, who retired from the Air Force to run for Congress, said Jim Reese's "record as mayor of Odessa is wide open for a frontal attack by the Democrats," and questioned why Reese was not campaigning on his mayoral accomplishments.

"He is highly vulnerable in that respect because, apparently, he is not too proud of that record," Hickox said at a Wednesday press conference.

He noted he found no reference in Reese's campaign literature "to his list of accomplishments as mayor."

Demo Chances Foreseen

Noting Republicans must look past the May 6 primary to the November general election, Hickox asked, "Could the Democrats attack his (Reese's) vocal position of getting the government out of our pockets when his record shows just the opposite while mayor?

"Could the Democrats accurately accuse him of being a party to adding another layer of bureaucracy while mayor, and now he complains about the many federal bureaucracies?

"I'm really curious as to why a former public official does not stress his achievements while in office during a time when he is seeking higher office," Hickox said.

"The Democrats defeated him before and they surely know how to do it again," Hickox observed and suggested the Democrats might want Reese to win for that reason.

Links Bush To Oil

As for opponent George Bush, Hickox said the Midland oilman is "closely tied to the oil industry and it can be charged that he would only represent the oil industry."

Both Bush and Reese are at a disadvantage in Lubbock, Hickox said, because "Lubbock Republicans or Democrats would not take lightly losing the representation (in Congress) to the southern part of the district.

"When all the facts are analyzed," Hickox said, "I am the least vulnerable to any attacks by the Democrats. I am not associated with any special interest groups. I seek office for the benefit of all."

Hickox said his comments were "not an attack on my opponents" but were intended to point out the differences among the three candidates.

Apparently he was prompted to offer his observations on the race following an

U.S. Trade Deficit Soars To Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States' trade deficit totaled $20.2 billion in 1977, more than double the previous record, the Commerce Department announced Wednesday.

The growing trade deficit, much of which is blamed on U.S. dependence on imported oil, has been a key factor in the declining value of the dollar on international money markets.

The trade imbalance for 1977 compared with a deficit of $1.4 billion in 1976. The largest previous deficit on record was $9.9 billion in 1972.

Clouds Hike Rain Hopes

SPRING ON the South Plains played a typical trick of the season on area residents Wednesday, luring them outside in near record temperatures and then harassing them with brisk, sometimes dusty winds.

On top of that, forecasters late Wednesday night were not ruling out the possibility that some area residents might still get a dousing from the season's first showers.

Throughout Wednesday afternoon, some portions of West, North and North Central Texas did receive Spring's first rains, but most of the activity was light, weathermen said.

Today on the South Plains won't be generally different from Wednesday, except for a more pronounced cloud cover this afternoon and a slight chance of showers later tonight.

Warm, bright skies caught many Lubbockites outdoors Wednesday, and most

Coal Pact Briefings End

By The Associated Press

UNITED MINE Workers leaders finished briefing members on a new contract proposal at local meetings Wednesday, giving them at least two days to think it over before voting on whether to end their 107-day coal strike.

The union's top leaders were maintaining a low profile, relying on the local meetings, rather than their own salesmanship, to sell the contract.

The proposal was hammered out last week in Washington by negotiators for the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The 160,000 striking miners vote on it Friday.

Three weeks ago, the top union leadership spent $40,000 on a television and radio campaign to sell another contract proposal — which the miners then voted down.

Many rank and file miners said at the time that they resented such use of union money, and for this proposal, UMW president Arnold Miller said there would be no similar advertising campaign.

Miller's leadership itself, which some miners have called inept, has become a major issue in the strike.

At the local meetings, held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, miners were more receptive to this contract than to the previous proposal.

But many predicted a close vote, saying they were still dissatisfied with provisions dealing with health and pension benefits.

The contract would replace UMW health coverage, which has been administered by independent funds which are broke, with company-arranged plans administered by insurance firms.

For the first time, miners would have to pay up to $200 a year for health care that had been free.

The contract also fails to equalize pensions received by two classes of miners — those who retired before and since Jan. 1, 1976. In some cases, older miners get half the pensions of younger retirees.

Still, many miners say the proposal is an improvement over the rejected contract. That would have required miners to pay up to $700 in health care costs, would have left an even wider gap between older and younger pensioners, and would have allowed companies to discipline leaders of wildcat strikes.

In Washington, a small group of miners from UMW District 6 in Ohio accused Miller of failing to distribute millions of dollars the mine workers have received from sympathetic unions during the strike.

"Arnold Miller thinks that if we are denied the benefit of these donations, we will be more likely to vote for his con-

Carter Says Mideast Peace 'Far Away'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter ended talks Wednesday with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and somberly announced that "peace still seems far away" in the Middle East.

Carter urged Begin to count on U.S. support and come to terms with the Arabs. "This opportunity must not be allowed to slip into the cycle of hatred and violence," the president said.

Bright sunshine on the White House lawn could not hide the strains as Carter called anew for Israel to commit itself to a pullback on the West Bank of the Jordan River, in the Sinai and on the Golan Heights.

Later, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, acknowledged the grim situation, telling reporters that "appearances were not misleading."

The United States plans to issue a formal statement on the talks this morning. Administration officials said the peace process had become "static," but denied there was a crisis.

"I can't say we've reduced the differences at this point," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said after a separate session with Begin.

"We have differences of views," Vance said of the U.S. and Israeli approaches to peace negotiations.

"In bidding goodbye to Begin, Carter said the 1967 U.N. Security Council resolution calling for Israeli withdrawal "must apply to all fronts if peace negotiations are to succeed."

On this point, the administration is in sharp conflict with Begin. He has offered to negotiate the West Bank's future but is not committing Israel to a pullback.

Almost plaintively, Begin reminded Carter that Israel's offer to grant civil self-rule to "our Palestinian Arab neighbors" on the West Bank and in Ghaza was lauded by the United States only a few months ago as a constructive, far-reaching and notable contribution to negotiations with Egypt.

Looking wan, the 64-year-old Israeli leader said it was his duty "to remind public opinion in the United States" that his country is alone in the world in being marked for destruction. Obviously referring to the Palestine Liberation Organization, and its "abominable acts," Begin said the lives of Israelis are threatened daily and that the country is faced with an alignment of Arab states armed by the Soviet Union and the West.

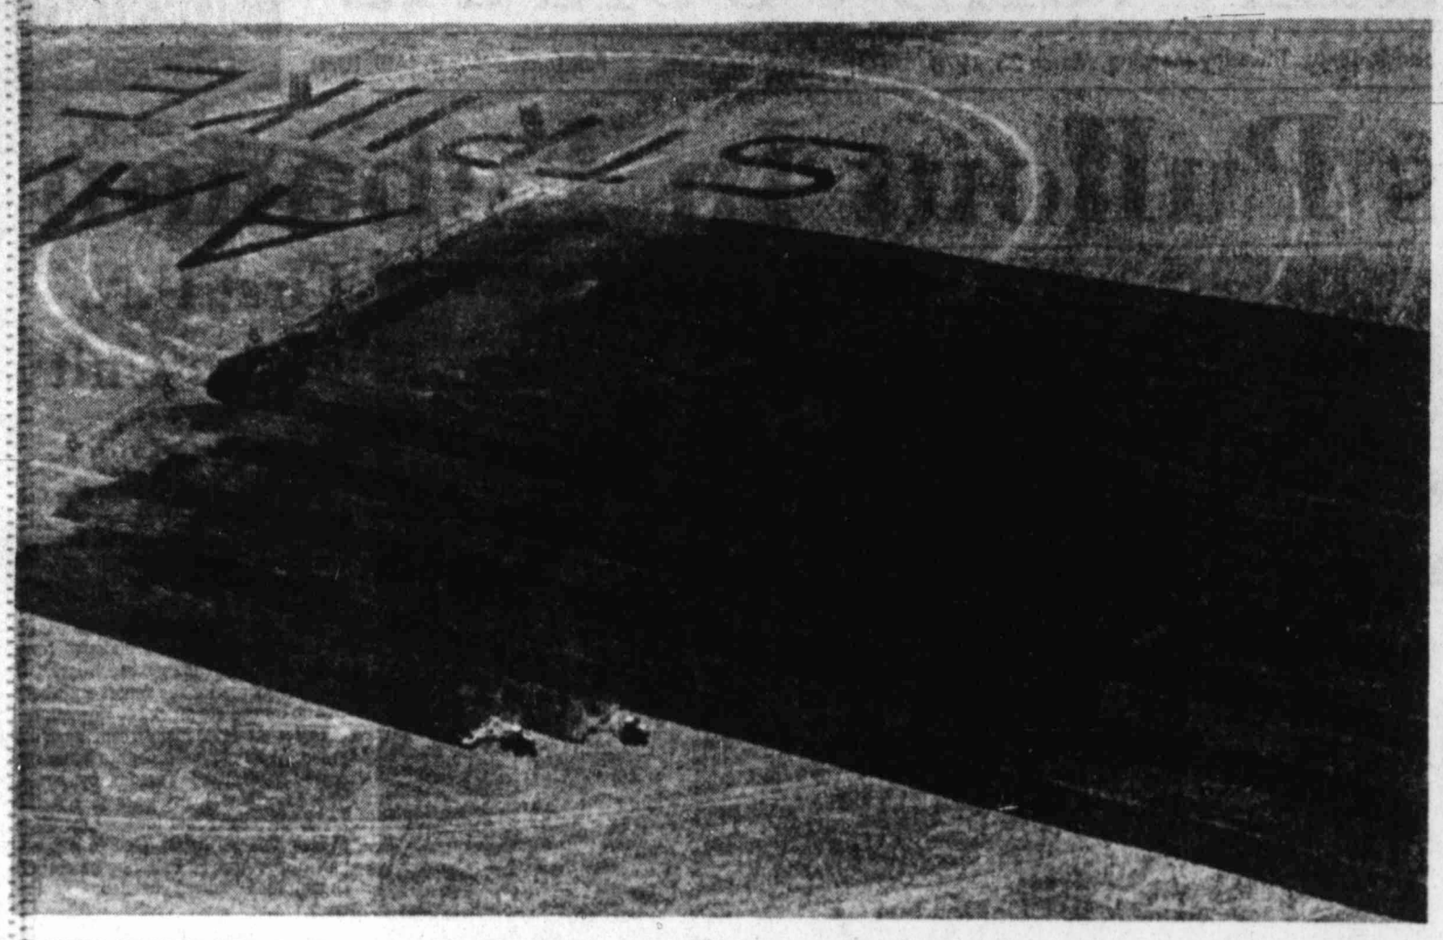

The last remark seemed to represent an appeal to Congress and the public to oppose Carter's proposed sale of 50 F-5E jet fighters to Egypt and 60 F-15 fighter bombers to Saudi Arabia.

Carter, lobbying for his arms "package," which includes 90 planes for Israel, summoned key House and Senate members to the White House to explain his position.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas emerged from the meeting and said there is no legal way that the White

Kansas Wheat 'Plowdown' Supports Ag Strike

PLOWING UP THEIR WHEAT — Two southwest Kansas farmers plow up winter wheat on the Jim Dimitt farm Wednesday as wheat growers in the area launched a plowdown effort to show their support for the nationwide farm strike. The two first carved out AAM (American Agriculture Movement) Strike before destroying 130 acres of wheat. (AP Laserphoto)

JOHNSON, Kan. (AP) — Terry Dimitt opened the throttle on his tractor and began plowing up part of his father's wheat crop Wednesday, kicking up dust that farm strike leaders hope will be seen back in Washington.

The 25-year-old Stanton County farmer was among an undetermined number of southwest Kansas farmers who began plowing up their wheat as a demonstration of support for the nationwide strike for higher prices.

The plowdown in the nation's largest wheat-producing state was aimed at President Carter, who is expected to receive soon farm legislation from Congress that would raise price supports.

"We're doing this to show the president and our administration that we mean what we say," said Walter McClure of nearby Hugoton, "that our strike effort that we started back in December is not empty words, we're going to do what it takes to get a price for our crop."

The action also was intended to attract the attention of the press. Newsmen were escorted to the field two miles north of Johnson where Dimitt and a neighbor plowed up 130 acres of wheat. And neighboring farmer Bill Wilkerson carved the word "parity" into his wheat field at the request of a photographer.

The Kansas farmers also hoped the plowdown activity would convince farmers in the South and East of their seriousness toward the strike. Kansas' winter wheat crop was planted last fall, months before the strike began.

"We have received a lot of flack," McClure said. "They say, you had your wheat planted, now you're coming along striking. Well, we told them we was going to plow down our wheat when it come time and we're doing it."

In Stanton County, the hotbed of strike activity in Kansas, 65 farmers signed up for the plowdown and strike leader Martie Floyd predicted many others would join them. Floyd estimated they would destroy 35-40 percent of their crop, some all at once and others plowing up 5 percent a week.

But Floyd and other American Agriculture leaders said there was no way to estimate how much wheat would be destroyed by farmers in 22 southwest counties who began the plowdown Wednesday.

"We don't know the real participation in southwest Kansas," McClure said.

"In American Agriculture, we've always had each individual act as he sees fit. This is our stand now until we see the acres plowed. Each individual's on his own. There's no anomosity toward anyone who doesn't participate."

"But," farmer Gene Shore added, "we don't want to see them crying come fall when there are low prices again."

The Senate passed amendments to the farm law Tuesday that would increase subsidies and price support loans on grains and cotton as the result of strong impetus from wheat states and Southern senators. The amendments were forwarded to the House.

"It looks as though Congress is cooperating with us real well," McClure said. "But the administration has been real reluctant to do anything to support the American farmer."

Roy Nada, 16, died after running up to a passerby and telling him he had been sniffing the toxic chemical similar to paint. The Harris County medical examiner's office was investigating.

Identities Sought In Slayings

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities said they were closing in Wednesday on the identities of a couple suspected of shooting two young Army wives to death and abducting a 9-month-old infant.

The baby apparently was abducted when his mother and aunt were shot to death in northeastern Bexar County late Monday. The baby was found unharmed late Tuesday.

The child was the son of Mrs. Andrea Millican, 21, one of the victims. The other victim was identified as Mrs. Mary Ann Venus, 25, Mrs. Millican's sister.

Both women were the wives of soldiers stationed overseas.

Bexar County Sheriff's Lt. Alfred Carreon said investigators were waiting Wednesday for a photograph to arrive from law enforcement officials in Oregon.

The photograph was lifted from a driver's license which was used to establish identification for opening a checking account at the Mercantile State Bank in San Antonio.

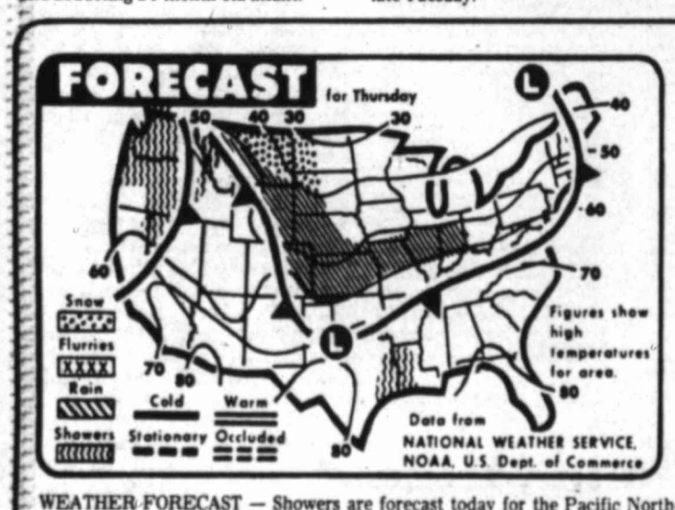

Mrs. Millican had complained Monday to the sheriff's department that she had received a hot check for nearly $3,000 when she sold her car over the weekend. The car she sold was found at the scene of the slayings.

Carreon said Wednesday that officers believe the suspected couple has already left the San Antonio area.

Investigators believe that Mrs. Millican and her sister may have spotted Mrs. Millican's automobile and followed it, in Mrs. Venus' car, to complain about the bad check.

Carreon speculated that the suspects shot the two sisters to eliminate witnesses to a crime spree officers believe has covered several states.

Emergency Farm Loan Sessions Set

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — The Farmer's Home Administration in Plainview will host two meetings to outline methods of applying for emergency loans to offset crop losses due to harsh weather during 1977. The sessions will be held today and Friday at 3 p.m. in a meeting room at Hale County State Bank.

Karson L. Bivins, county supervisor for FHA, said loans for farmers and ranchers will be extended to those suffering losses due to hail storms on April 20, May 8, 19, 20 and Aug. 23, 1977, and unseasonably hot and dry winds June 15 through July 31, 1977.

Applications for assistance will be accepted by the FHA until March 16, 1979, Bivins said. Inquiries and questions concerning the application procedures should be held for the two meetings, Bivins said.

The loans may be used for production costs or to replace, repair or make payments on equipment or real estate and for disaster purposes. Other loans beyond actual loss can be made for annual operating expenses or to make major adjustments in the farming or livestock operations.

The loans will bear interest rates at three percent for actual loss and are scheduled for repayment as rapidly as feasible consistent with the applicant's ability to repay. Loans beyond actual losses have various maturities, depending on the purpose of the loan, and may bear an interest rate as high as eight percent.

To be eligible for an emergency loan, an applicant must have suffered at least a 20 percent loss in production from these disasters and be unable to secure credit from other sources to meet his needs, Bivins said.

Championship Steer Cited At Plainview

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Lonnie Howard, a 13-year-old Abernathy 4-H member, had the grand champion steer at the 43rd annual Plainview Stock Show . A seventh-grade student, Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Howard.

The steer showmanship award went to Debby Oswalt of the Abernathy FFA.

The animals, as well as other show livestock, were to be sold at auction in the Hale County Agricultural Center.

Winners in lamb competition were Dan Henley, Abernathy FFA, fine wool; Kirk Wilson, Plainview FFA, fine wool cross; Gregg Forbes, Plainview FFA, Southdown-Shropshire; and Kendra Burnett, Cotton Center 4-H, medium wool.

The showmanship trophy for the sheep competition went to Brett Cypert, Plainview 4-H.

Houston Councilmen Turn Down Petition

HOUSTON (UPI) — The City Council Wednesday unanimously rejected a 50,000-signature petition demanding the deannexation of the Clear Lake City area added to the city last year.

City Attorney Bob Collie had told the council the petition had no force in law and that the city's annexation of Clear Lake City 25 miles southeast of downtown was legal and unchallengable.

Opponents of the annexation promised to take the matter to court. Several council members said that is where the dispute belongs.

Four Seeking Positions On Frenship School Board

WOLFFORTH (Special)—Four persons will be vying for two positions on the Frenship Independent School District board.

The election is set April 1.

Candidates include incumbents Don Bell, 40, and Oly Ray Hitt, 48. Both men are farmers.

Chuck Lewis, 40, an estimator for Lydick Roofing, and Jose I. Rosales, 40, owner of Rosales Welding Shop, also are seeking the posts.

Farm Equipment Display Planned

Farm equipment will be on display March 30-April 1 at the first South Plains Farm Show at the Memorial Civic Center.

Sponsored by the Southwest Hardware and Implement Association, the event will include exhibitors from across the country, a public forum on the economic plight of farmers, a fashion show and a tractor pulling contest.

Promoters say the millions of dollars worth of machinery is the largest such exhibition ever held on the South Plains.

AN EDITORIAL:

Social Security At The Polls?

CONGRESS DOES appear to have an ear to the ground, if not to the upcoming election.

With some members frankly admitting "we went wrong," momentum is building in Washington for a sharp reduction in Social Security taxes for the individual and business community.

While the whole Social Security program is subject for concern and debate, the "bite" put on wage earners and their employers has brought swift and impressive messages to both House and Senate.

AS A RESULT, and because of further study of the funding problem, the Joint Economic Committee of Congress this week said that lawmakers should seriously consider a $33 billion cut in Social Security levies.

The cut would be divided equally between individual taxpayers and corporations.

Should Congress decide to partially undo what it did with the Social Security program last fall, then the fate of President Carter's proposed $25 billion income tax reduction program also would be in serious doubt.

IT WAS BECAUSE of the SS tax boost and the President's income tax "relief" that millions found themselves in the middle.

Furthermore, the new SS increase would come on the heels of an already built-in boost in the system, and by the mid-1980s would be taking a bite out of take-home pay—as well as corporate treasuries—which most persons regard as "horrendous."

It's unknown exactly how the proposed reduction would affect each individual. But the committee added considerable weight to the growing argument that Congress should repeal all or part of the legislation enacted only in December. At that time, Social Security payroll taxes were increased some $227 billion.

THE IDEA was to keep the retirement system financially solvent for the next 10 years. But the increase was "one of the worst things Congress did," according to Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., a member of the economic panel.

Lawmakers fear that mounting taxpayer resentment over the size of the increase will manifest itself adversely at the polls. But the problem is more involved than that.

If the Social Security tax is indeed whittled back, then the money—especially for the disability and Medicare portions of the system—must come from somewhere. Obviously, from income taxes or borrowing.

The real solution is one which Congress and President Carter—who opposes cutting back on the increase—keep ignoring. And that is to cut federal spending, get inflation under control and start running the government as a business instead of a giant giveaway.

AN EDITORIAL:

It Hurts Worst In The Middle

PRESIDENT CARTER has come forward with his own $1.46 billion plan for relieving the financial strain on low- and middle-income families that want to send their children to college.

Carter's is a better plan than those now pending in Congress inasmuch as it would deliver federal assistance to those who need it most, but it would not subsidize students from the highest-income families, as would the other proposals.

THE LOS Angeles Times reports that in the past 10 years alone, the cost of going to college has risen 77 per cent, and now averages $2,500 a year for tuition, room and board at public institutions.

Private school charges average $4,800 a year for lodging, books and fees, The Times said, adding that "the more prestigious campuses charge $7,000 or more a year.

The affluent have no difficulty meeting such expenditures, and the poor receive most of the present scholarships, grants and loans.

It is the middle-income families that receive the least, and the President's plan would benefit them significantly for the first time.

AT PRESENT, only students from families whose income is below $16,000 a year are eligible for scholarships. Under Carter's Middle-Income College Assistance Act, more than 2 million students from families in the $16,000 to $25,000 category for the first time would be eligible for $250-a-year scholarship grants.

Even the $25,000 ceiling appears too low and arbitrary. It does not take into consideration either the number of children whom a family might want to send to college or other financial obligations.

Perhaps a scale that would reflect criteria other than just gross income might be in order. Nevertheless, Carter's plan is still the best one in the hopper.

THE OTHER plans before Congress call for a direct tax credit to the parents of college students, regardless of their income. Thus, a family with an income of $250,000 a year would receive exactly the same tax benefit as one earning $25,000.

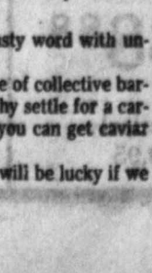

Mr. Carter's assumption that a family with an income of $25,000 is affluent, and able to finance the college education without assistance, is simply unrealistic.

A higher, case-by-case limit is in order. With that change, the President's proposal actually could deliver more benefits, and more equality, to more deserving families.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Who Wants A Carrot When There's Caviar?

PRESIDENT CARTER isn't the only one eyeballing the troubles in the coal mines. A lot of labor leaders are watching it ve-e-e-ery closely.

So are taxpayers around the country. Whether they heat their homes with coal, gas, electricity or dollar bills, they're beginning to get that old familiar feeling that, no matter how the strike comes out, more money will come out of their pockets.

They're right.

The White-House-wheedled settlement is going to fire up more than furnaces; it's going to heat up prices for years to come.

Any time a union squeezes a 37-percent wage increase out of management, you can expect other unions to notice it. Several are already wagging their tails over upcoming contracts.

FOR OPENERS, there are 500,000 railroad employes who've been working without a contract for almost three months. Any chance they'll listen to administration pleas for "restraint at the bargaining table" is now buried deeper than unmined coal in West Virginia.

That means transportation costs will go up. And what that means is that we'll be paying more for any products shipped by rail.

The postal workers are thinking big, too. Their turn comes up in July, and already the four unions covering 600,000 mail employes have been kicking around the word "strike."

Meanwhile, the President has backed off from his opposition to more federal subsidies for the U.S. Postal Service, clearing the path for a billion-dollar ballout through 1981. Translate THAT into tax dollars.

NEXT YEAR IS when things get really bad. Up to the bargaining table will come the electrical, rubber and automobile workers. Not to mention the teamsters.

And if you think the coal miners can wreck the national machinery, wait till you see what the teamsters can do with an army of unhappy truckers.

What the handwriting on the picket signs seems to be telling us is that the recent years of comparatively peaceful labor settlements are over and from now on, union by union, workers are going to hang in there until they get what they want. Even if they have to have Jimmy Carter get it for them.

And you can count on it, it's going to be as close to what the miners got as walkouts can make it.

SO EVERYTHING'S going to cost more: coal, electricity, automobiles, tires, produce—you name it, the wage-spiral domino game will cover it.

The whole wage-increase-fringe-benefit package is getting out of control, and Carter realizes this as well as any consumer. Which could be why he wants to try something drastic with the federal payroll.

What he has in mind is to gear earnings (revolutionary thought) to efficiency. With annual bonuses of up to 20 percent for executives with good performance records. (You want to bet everybody will get the bonuses?)

Not only that, he wants to make it easier to fire any bureaucrat, high or low, who's caught goofing off on the job. (This, unfortunately, does not include Congressmen, who don't need any union to get them a pay raise; they have their own little automatic escalator.)

YOU CAN IMAGINE how Carter's suggestions went over with the powerful federal-employee unions who protect the rights of 58 percent of government paper-clip pushers.

They say it "reduces the scope of collective bargaining." What they mean is, why settle for a carrot at the end of a stick when you can get caviar at the end of a strike?

And that's why the rest of us will be lucky if we can afford hamburger.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

EVANS

WASHINGTON—The Carter administration's disarray on SALT was revealed over the past three weeks with a backstage interchange between Pentagon brass and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), beginning in angry disagreement and ending in bureaucratic concealment.

Triggering the episode was ACDA's attempt to reassure Congress that Soviet compliance with the strategic arms agreement (SALT II) being negotiated in Geneva could be verified—a key issue in the coming fight for Senate ratification.

When ACDA claimed the Joint Chiefs of Staff agreed with this dubious assurance, the balloon went up at the Pentagon. Usually tame generals and admirals were so outraged they even put it in writing.

This reflects tension behind the scenes as President Carter continues to promise a new SALT agreement. While not yet ready to go public with their misgivings, the uniformed military are unwilling to blindly rubber-stamp the treaty being negotiated by ACDA director Paul Warnke.

Events of the last few weeks, hinting at deception and subterfuge, could be a foretaste of internal disputes if and when a new treaty is actually signed.

VERIFICATION IS a peculiarly sensitive aspect of SALT. While arms control experts know a verifiable treaty is not necessarily a good treaty, it is one element of the hideously complicated arms control puzzle that anybody—including U.S. senators—can grasp.

On Feb. 23, ACDA's paper on SALT II verification was submitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. As revealed in unclassified paragraphs released to the press, verification is far more reliable than experts believe (or than the unreleased classified paragraphs show).

"Areas of uncertainty...are not such as to permit the Soviets to produce an unanticipated threat to U.S. interests."

WHAT'S MORE, the covering letter signed by Warnke asserted the paper was "approved" by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. That was news to the astonished chiefs when they read about it in the Washington Post of Feb. 25.

Although the military leaders generally get along by going along, this was too much. Gen. Bernard Rogers, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Adm. James Holloway, Chief of Naval Operations, were incensed by Warnke's misrepresentation.

The result was a Feb. 28 letter to ACDA deputy director Spurgeon Keeny from Vice Adm. Patrick Hannifin, director of the joint staff. Even when bracketed by bureaucratic rhetoric, the meaning is clear:

"The Joint Chiefs of Staff have not agreed to the (verification) statement." Hannifin said the National Security Council (NSC) staff was so informed Feb. 22. "However, we understand that ACDA was not aware of this informaiton" when it sent the letter to Congress Feb. 23, the letter continued.

That softening phrase looks suspiciously like bureaucratic hedging. But the letter concludes on a tough note that "we would appreciate your setting the record straight" with the Foreign Relations Committee.

THERE IS REASON to believe ACDA had no intention of complying with this request and planned to forget about the letter. But in the habitual way of Washington, Hannifin's letter leaked right up to Capitol Hill.

Some 10 days later it reached Rep. Robin Beard of Tennessee, a conservative Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee. On March 8, Beard wrote the President protesting that "Congress cannot be isolated from hearing dissenting opinions."

Since the matter could no longer be quietly forgotten, it was necessary to give Congress the idea there are "no dissenting opinions." The role fell to the member of the joint chiefs most faithful to administration policy:

Gen. David Jones, Air Force Chief of Staff and acting chairman of the chiefs in the absence of traveling Gen. George Brown.

On March 9, two full weeks after Warnke's letter, Jones wrote Secretary of Defense Harold Brown explaining it all: the military helped prepare the report, but the joint chiefs "believe it prudent to withhold final judgment on the overall verifiability of any SALT II agreement until all provisions of the treaty are known."

Replying to our question, an ACDA spokesman said Vance's reading of the general's words complied with the original Pentagon request for "setting the record straight" on Warnke's misrepresentation. In short, ACDA plans to neither admit nor concede anything.

But there are still men at the Pentagon, including some four-star officers, who want no part of Warnke's siren song of assured verification. National security bureaucrats may congratulate themselves about smoothing over the disagreements, but most likely they were only postponing a showdown. The backstage disarray revealed now could erupt into open battle in the months ahead.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Best Yet To Come

DISTINGUISHED anthropologist Dr. Mary D. Leakey, widow of distinguished anthropologist Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey, has done it again.

Anthropology is, of course, the study of man—the puzzle of where we came from and how we evolved. Paleontology is the study of fossils.

And brilliant Mrs. Leakey, a British citizen, found a series of fossilized footprints about 3.25 million years old at the bottom of a Laetoli, Tanzania, water hole.

Laetoli is 30 miles from famous Olduvai Gorge where this remarkable lady unearthed a fossil of the genus Homo—the true man—the oldest hominid with human characteristics.

THE FOSSIL consisted of the teeth and jaw bones. The astounding Radio-Carbon 14 method, used to establish age and universally accepted, confirmed Mrs. Leakey's finding.

It proved that human beings of the true genus Homo actually were on our earth 3.25 million years—a full two million years earlier than Asia's famous Peking man.

It changed all previous knowledge of how long we have been here and revolutionized all accepted ideas of man's antiquity. Also, Mrs. Leakey's finding showed again that the Africa Plains were the crib of mankind.

Her finding was not the ape-like Australopithecus, a relatively intelligent "near man" that inhabited the African Plains in complex societies and even used stone tools. She made a positive break-through.

MRS. LEAKEY would tell you that much has happened to our earth's surface in the 3.25 million years, but little has happened to us. We grew no wings so that we could fly, no web feet so that we could swim, no claws so that we could fight.

Looking much as we do today, we still just stood around eating, sleeping, hunting for food and reproducing. And we died like flies when the weather turned bad.

Countless centuries were behind us before we even systematically communicated with each other in writing—a little novelty the Chinese were tinkering with about 10,000 years ago.

Mrs. Leakey says that in our earliest days our lives were tragically short. The Stone Age man's life span was 20 years. Today the U.S. Census Bureau reports that in the United States the average man is 69 and for women 77.

BY 1980—only two years from now—some baby will be Chinese No. 1,000,000,000. By 25 years from now, barring accidents, half the world's population will be Chinese.

The United States reached the peak of its birthrate in 1947. Today it is barely increasing. In 1926 only two billion people lived in the entire world. But the human race has doubled its population in the last 50 years.

Brilliant Mrs. Leakey told the National Geographic Society in Washington that, if the present trend continues, the world's population by the end of this century will be six billion and exceed eight billion 50 years from now.

She is convinced that the most dynamic phase in man's population growth is yet to come.

JAY HARRIS:

And Safe At Any?

HOW FAST is too fast? And under what conditions?

Does a motorist have a right—there's that word again—to use radar detectors, fuzz busters, if you please, to circumvent the speed limit in Texas?

Does speed materially contribute to the increase in traffic deaths? Or is it more travel? Carelessness? Weather conditions?

Col. Wilson E. Speir, director of the Department of Public Safety has some answers to all of those questions. Some people won't like them.

In brief, if the DPS chief had his way, the speed limit would be strictly enforced at 55 miles-an-hour. Under all conditions. No, a motorist couldn't use a "fuzz buster." And, yes, speed does add to the death toll.

THOSE ARE just a few of the observations Col. Speir made this week as he took note of the worst traffic death toll in the state's history for the past year.

A total of 3,698 persons died on Texas highways and streets last year, surpassing by six the previous high set in 1973, which was the last year of the 70-mph speed limit.

"Speed over the limit, or speed too fast for conditions" is the most prevalent contributing factor in fatal accidents, Col. Speir says.

"Speed is a pervasive problem and it is one which continues to worsen," the DPS director says, in noting that the death toll in 1977 represents a 14 percent increase from the 3,230 deaths in 1976.

That means 668 more persons perished last year than in the heavily traveled Bicentennial year. There were 504,001 motor vehicle accidents the past year compared to 470,203 in 1976. And the injuries soared to 105,300 from 96,348.

THOSE ARE pretty sobering figures. And the adjective here is also worth attention..

The use of alcohol figures in an alarming number of fatal mishaps, in cities and in rural areas. But, it is speed which most often is the killer, Col. Speir emphasizes.

As a result, the Texas traffic watchdog has some changes he would like to see made. One is to strictly enforce the 55-mph limit. He would do this by two drastic means.

He would outlaw use of the radar detector, a step which he says some states have already taken. And he would expand the present force of 1,494 state troopers by another 1,500 people. Lastly, he would institute a mandatory 90-day license suspension for persons convicted of drunken driving.

THOSE ARE pretty sweeping remedies. But, Col. Speir thinks it is time for strong medicine.

"Today," he says, "some 79 percent of all motorists are drivng over 55. On the rural interstate highways, the percentage exceeding 55 is even higher.

"This lack of discipline on the part of drivers alarms me considerably, because the evidence demonstrates that substantial numbers of lives could be saved with only a moderate reduction in the overall speed we see today."

Col. Speir says in 1973, when the 70-mph limit was in effect, the average speed on Texas highways was 63.5 mph. It fell in 1974 during the energy crisis, but started edging upwards, hitting 58.2-mph in 1976 and an even 60-mph last year.

The DPS chief says use of his men in controlling speed can help cut the death toll, but if they place too much emphasis on this phase then other, equally serious violations are neglected.

NOT ALL AGREE with the 55-mph speed limit, obviously.

And for the guy who "makes it" there and back, safely, either using his CB "seeing eye" or one of those "fuzz busters," then he can argue it's too slow. The fact so many disregard it says something in itself.

Too, the 55-mph curb has come under renewed criticism from truckers. "On a cross-country trip, it costs a trucker about $160 more to go at 55-mph than it would to go at a top speed of 65-mph," it is argued. Truckers say the driver is not saving fuel and is spending too much time on the road.

In Texas, and especially out here in the "wide open spaces," sentiment for raising the speed limit to 60-mph is fairly heavy. The problem, of course, is if the average Joe or Jane now goes five miles or more over the limit, will the same be so under a 60-mph curb? The answer is obvious.

IT WAS SOMEWHAT ironic, but about the same time Col. Speir was speaking out on Texas traffic deaths, and the truckers were voicing their feelings, the U.S. Transportation Dept. had something to say.

The Transportation Dept. plans a five-year safety plan aimed at reducing deaths and injuries. Under the program, safety rules will zero in on four areas that accounted for about 20,000 of the 46,876 highway fatalities in the U.S. last year.

This will involve protecting vehicle occupants in side impact collisions, extending existing safety standards to cover light trucks and vans, reducing pedestrian fatalities and improving braking requirements.

That's all well and good. But, although he didn't direct himself to the report, Col. Speir's comments about Texas drivers did point up one thing—the real culprit is the person behind the wheel.

What, one may ask has this to do with me? The answer is maybe everything. Fifty-one of Texas' record traffic victims died inside Lubbock's city limits last year. Another four have perished thus far this year. The area's highways added substantially to the tragedy. Think about that today when you crawl behind the wheel.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THE DOG HAD an inflammed eye. Its owner washed that eye every night. But the inflammation persisted.

Finally, the vet told the owner to mix a few drops of perfume with water and dab same nightly behind the tail, leaving the eye completely untreated.

It means dogs, too develop psychosomatic ailments to get attention. So says an animal specialist.

For a while there back in 10th-Century China, the coins were shaped according to what they'd buy: An egg-shaped coin bought eggs, one shaped roughly like the human body bought clothing, so on.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Dentures Cause Council Stir

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Country and Western songwriter's dentures caused some stir at a recent Oklahoma City Council meeting.

Songwriter Charlie Huff and his attorney, former Rep. Ed Edmondson, appeared before the council to appeal for compensation for a beating Huff allegedly had sustained.

Edmondson asked the council to award the 65-year-old singer $3,729 for dental work needed after Huff allegedly was hit in the face by a shovel swung by a city maintenance worker.

A city worker accused in the beating says Huff attacked him at a street barricade near Huff's home after swearing at a street crew and shouting racial slurs.

The council has agreed to allow Huff to take a lie detector test and to ask members of the water line crew to submit to similar tests.

Queen's Kin To Leave Army

LONDON (AP) — Capt. Mark Phillips, son-in-law of Queen Elizabeth II, ends his army career Thursday and will become a country squire.

CAPT. PHILLIPS

"Although Capt. Phillips officially finishes on March 30, his last working day will be tomorrow," said a spokesman for the Ministry of Defense, where Phillips works in the Army Training Directorate.

Phillips, 29, husband of Princess Anne, announced his intention to leave the Army last December to farm Gatcombe Park, a 12,000-acre estate in Gloucestershire bought by the queen for her daughter.

Phillips, a graduate of Sandhurst, the British equivalent of West Point, was commissioned in 1969 and served in the Queen's Dragoon Guards in West Germany.

Royalty To Rodent To Ruin

How about royalty to rodents to rubble?

Two years ago, a highly polished 1972 Cadillac transported Queen Elizabeth during a visit here. It gathered dust until recently, when it caught Mayor Edward Koch's eye when he was looking for an alternative to his cramped Chrysler. The limousine was refurbished at a cost of $3,000.

But Koch never rode in it because when he asked for approval to switch cars, the people turned their thumbs down.

"The Caddy awaits the return of the Queen of England," Koch declared as the limo went back to the garage.

And now, mice have moved in, and have chewed up the cushions. An exterminator was summoned.

Flammable exterminating fluid accidentally was ignited and set the car afire. Firemen were called to put out the blaze, but not before the rear was heavily damaged.

Liquor Licenses Limited

ARLINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Selectmen in this Boston suburb now may grant liquor licenses to not more than five restaurants.

But, because of a catch in the law that says only restaurants seating more than 99 persons qualify to sell booze, the selectmen won't be flooded with license requests.

It seems that only one restaurant, Jimmy's Steer House, seats 100 or more folks.

And owner Jimmy Victor says that although business is good without liquor, he will apply for a license.

"Ninety percent of the people who come in here want a drink with their dinner," Victor said. "I've seen them wait in line for a table, sit down and order a martini with their steak. When we tell them Arlington is dry, they just get up and walk out."

Bike Ride Issue Decided

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The 74-year-old man says he went for a bicycle ride nearly 55 years ago. The 75-year-old woman says he interrupted his ride, and her 54-year-old daughter now knows who her father is.

In October 1923, the man was on a training round on his bicycle on the roads across turnip fields in southern Skane, Sweden. A woman working in the fields told a court this week the man got off his bike and that he is the father of her now-54-year-old daughter.

The court ruled after blood tests that he was the father, despite his denial.

$300 Offered For Stolen Dog

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — A $300 reward was offered Wednesday for the return of Jocliff Sungod of Delphi, an 8-inch tall shih-tzu dog stolen from its exercise cage at the Shreveport Kennel Club's all-breed dog show.

The dog was valued at $1,000 and described as very friendly by its owner, Dale Levaque of Dallas. It disappeared Tuesday from the cage at Hirsch Memorial Coliseum on the state fair grounds after it placed fourth in the competition.

Two dogs were stolen at the same show last year — a Yorkshire terrier and another shih-tzu.

Judge Rules In Verse

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Harvey Smith believes in poetic justice.

He recently added a metered footnote to a ponderous, 42-page ruling that the complicated rent control laws in Fort Lee were invalid. One of them indicated the difficulty he had in wading through the laws:

"Accounting procedures make facts hard to find

Figures are extrapolated, projected, refined

Depreciation doubled, depletion straight-lined

They boggle the books and juggle the mind."

Burger Claims Support

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — U.S. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says that trial judges may agree with him that three-fourths of all U.S. trial lawyers accept cases beyond their ability.

BURGER

In a hand-written letter to Superior Court Judge Anthony E. Grillo of Hamden, Conn., Burger wrote: "I have numerous letters from experienced trial judges fixing 75 percent as the correct figure."

Last Feb. 12, Burger told the American Bar Association meeting in New Orleans that half of the nation's trial lawyers are incompetent for some of the cases they handle.

Grillo wrote Burger shortly after that comment asking for the source of the chief justice's statistics. After receiving Burger's letter, Grillo said: "To claim that 50 to 75 percent of lawyers trying cases are not qualified ... is preposterous."

Pet Rock Burial Offered

NORTH LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Did your pet rock finally die? Looking for something appropriate to do for it?

North Las Vegas Mayor Ray H. Daines says send it to Dave Morby, the director of Library, Parks and Recreation. The mayor, saying it was all in fun, issued a proclamation urging all residents to send Morby their pet rocks for use in a traffic median near City Hall.

The proclamation noted that while the country once was "seized by a craze" for pet rocks, "it appears that people are no longer willing or able to provide proper care for, or love and protect their pet rocks.

"Whereas, Mr. Morby, out of the goodness of his heart, has taken on the responsibility of providing for these unfortunate, helpless creatures;

Whales Lose Beatle

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney said Tuesday he loves whales but has no plans to join fellow ex-Beatles for a Los Angeles benefit concert to save the sea mammals from extinction.

"I think whales are great," the 35-year-old McCartney explained during a windswept cruise down the Thames River to launch his latest album.

"But all this talk of the Beatles getting together again for a benefit is simply not true. I've already said I'll do something for the whales because I believe in the cause, but I don't see any chance of a Beatles reunion show."

McCartney said all the ex-Beatles — himself, Ringo Starr, George Harrison and John Lennon — have been approached individually to perform on behalf of the whales.

Howard Brandy, publicist for the planned Los Angeles benefit sponsored by Harrison, said Harrison was trying to persuade the other ex-Beatles to participate, not necessarily together, in the show called "Project Interspeak" some time in May.

The idea of a Beatles reunion has been floated several times since the Liverpool foursome split up acrimoniously seven years ago. The quartet's individual careers and lingering feuds have prevented it, despite multi-million-dollar offers from promoters.

"This whole thing is just another rumor," McCartney said aboard a Thames riverboat loaded with reporters and photographers. "Some guy called me last night and said this idea had been floated. But the whole thing's just a bushfire.

"I'm happy to do a concert for the whales. I think they shouldn't be hunted to extinction. But frankly I just can't see a Beatles reunion in it.

"I haven't spoken to George for several months. He certainly hasn't called me on this whales thing. If I can, I'll be happy to help him out, but this reunion stuff really is a non-starter."

Starr and Harrison got together for a Bangladesh benefit in 1971 and there have been various permutations of ex-Beatles getting together for album work. But there has never been a total reunion — and none of the ex-Beatles seems too keen on the idea despite the pleas of fans and promoters.

The only known get-together of all four members of what was the hottest rock band in history was about two years ago when they and their wives met in New York for a rap session.

"We're not even in the same place musically any more," McCartney explained.

"We've all gone in different directions since we split up and there's no way we're just going to walk on stage one day and make fools of ourselves — even for a lot of money."

"The idea of a reunion sounds nice," he added, "but apart from anything else, it really isn't practical right now."

Sweep Maintains Image

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — "Eli Stokes" wears a top hat and tails on the job to maintain the the Mary Poppins image of the chimney sweep as a happy-go-lucky, romantic character.

Stokes, the nom de broom of Harry Elder, recently went into business as a "master chimney sweep," becoming one of the first in Indianapolis but part of a growing fraternity throughout the nation.

What makes him a "master" at his part-time job?

"No precedent," said the 27-year-old Elder, who became a sweep two months ago after thinking about it for two years. "There's no one else that can do it any better."

But he claimed his equipment "really makes me a master of it," compared with the usual method of throwing bricks, burlap bags or other objects down a chimney.

His tools include a vacuum device especially made for chimney sweeping, which he said keeps all the soot out of the house while he works.

What about all the dirt he personally encounters?

"I've got a shower."

Marines' Chief Of Personnel Opposes Combat For Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The personnel chief of the Marines, saying "I certainly don't contemplate women carrying a rifle and charging up a hill ...," told a Senate subcommittee Wednesday he was opposed to sending women into combat.

The view of Lt. Gen. Robert L. Nichols, deputy chief of staff for manpower for the Marines, was echoed by his Navy counterpart. But the Army and Air Force personnel bosses said the head of each service should have the option.

Vice Admiral James D. Watkins, chief of Naval personnel, said "We have a long way to go and a lot to learn about women in combat. I don't think it's necessary. I don't think it's philosophically sound."

The chiefs' personal opinions were sought by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., during a meeting of a Senate manpower and personnel subcommittee he heads.

Lt. Gen. DeWitt C. Smith Jr., the Army's personnel chief, and Lt. Gen. B. L. Davis, personnel chief of the Air Force, said the individual service chiefs should have authority to decide where women should be assigned.

But Smith added that before a service chief assigned women to combat posts, "we need to know the will of the people" as expressed through Congress.

Although he suggested that service chiefs should have the freedom to put women in jobs exposed to combat, Smith added that, "I do not think women should be there."

Maj. Regina Long, who works in the Army personnel chief's office and was invited by Nunn to give her personal views, said she agreed with Smith.

She said if she had the choice, "I'd choose not to go into combat" because women are not as "physically capable" as men.

Asked if her fellow women officers agreed with her view, she said, "I think most of them would agree with me."

Nunn, who is skeptical about the effectiveness of the all-volunteer armed services, asked the chiefs to submit suggestions about alternatives to an all-volunteer force. Watkins testified the Navy is not exploring any alternatives now, and said it's too early to do so.

Smith said the Army is not officially looking at alternatives, but that he had asked that an informal study be made "at a low level in my own framework."

Nunn said the Pentagon should be looking at the question because "if the initiative doesn't come from the military, it's not going to come from anywhere."

The personnel chiefs said a study of alternatives would be a major, costly project. But they agreed to submit "idea papers" about the possibility of filling vacancies in the reserves and active duty medical posts through a system of mandatory service.

First Lady's Interest May Assist Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter's interest in D.C. General Hospital might help it get a face lift.

Mrs. Carter toured the public hospital Tuesday and asked for a specific list of things that needed to be done, her press secretary, Mary Hoyt, said Wednesday.

The hospital has lost its accreditation, but will be reviewed next week for regaining it.

In a speech last month, Mrs. Carter said the hospital suffered from an interior so dreary it would contribute to making people ill.

After her speech, a fabric company offered to supply the material for new curtains, and the local Jaycees volunteered to help paint, according to Natalie Spingarn, a member of the commission that runs the hospital.

Gilbert Hahn, chairman of the commission, said that as Mrs. Carter walked through the corridors, patients and nurses and other employees rushed to meet her.

He said that the emergency room was "in the raw" when she saw it and that she heard a patient yell loudly at a nurse. "She just went by without seeming to be upset," Hahn said. "I was upset because she was there."

Hahn said that before any of the offers of help are accepted, the hospital will devise a coordinated plan of how to redo the interior. Mrs. Carter's precise role is unknown.

"Mrs. Carter's interest is in having an excellent public hospital in the district," Mrs. Hoyt said.

The tour took the first lady through the maternity clinic, the emergency room, the recovery room and a surgical unit, Mrs. Hoyt said. No reporters were permitted to accompany her.

Afterward, she was briefed by several members of the hospital staff.

Mrs. Spingarn aroused the first lady's interest in the hospital by writing her a letter a couple months ago, suggesting the hospital would be a good place to focus her efforts to help cities.

Rosalynn Lunches With Joan, Muriel

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter went to Capitol Hill Wednesday and had lunch with Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., and Joan Mondale, wife of the vice president.

"It was just three good friends enjoying lunch," said Betty South, the senator's press secretary. No special topics were discussed, she added. The three women dined in Vice President Walter Mondale's office.

Davis Name Removed From Castro Ballot

A-J Correspondent

DIMMITT — The 7th Court of Civil Appeals Wednesday ordered Castro County District Attorney Jimmy Davis's name removed from the May 6 Democratic primary ballot.

Reversing a ruling by the 64th District Court here, the appellate court ruled that Davis had not fulfilled the six-month county residency requirement before the Feb. 6 filing deadline as specified in Article 1.05 of the Texas Election Code.

The appellate court's decision was a victory for Davis's opponent Keith Lemons, who had filed a civil suit earlier this month seeking to remove Davis's name from the ballot.

Lemons, a native of Hart and now a senior in the Baylor University Law School, had asked the 64th District Court to enjoin Castro County Democratic chairman Oscar Wylie from placing Davis's name on the ballot.

After 64th District Judge John T. Boyd of Plainview had disqualified himself in the case, Judge George Miller of Floydada ruled March 9 that the district court had no jurisdiion in the matter.

Lemons appealed Judge Miller's decision and a three-judge state appellate court heard arguments Monday, the same day that the county Democratic executive committee approved both Davis's and Lemons's names for the ballot.

Davis has been the county district attorney here since Nov. 7, when the Castro County Commissioners Court appointed him to succeed the late Robert Buntyn, who died in office in September.

Davis was an assistant criminal district attorney in Lubbock County three years before he was appointed to the Castro County post. He moved from Lubbock to Dimmitt upon his appointment and later filed for election.

"I was disappointed with the ruling," Davis said Wednesday. "I haven't received the full opinion in the mail yet but I plan to review it very carefully when I do."

Adair Called To Well Blaze

BLOOMFIELD, N.M. (UPI) — Firefighters from Red Adair's Houston company were called to help extinguish a natural gas well fire burning out of control Wednesday on federal land west of Navajo Dam.

"It's away from all populated areas," said Gil Escuerdo of the Bureau of Land Management, which administers the land. "They're just waiting for Mr. Adair to come in."

The fire broke out Tuesday at a new gas well being drilled by the American Oil Co. on land leased by the BLM to the El Paso Natural Gas Co., said BLM State Director Arthur Zimmerman.

Escuerdo said the area was being cleared of equipment and nearby trees, but "there is no apparent danger to property" because the area, about 10 miles west of the dam, is isolated.

Uruguay was discovered in 1516 by Juan Diaz de Solis, a Spaniard, but the Portugues were the first to settle the country when they founded Colonia in 1680.

April 26 Deadline Set For Second Treaty Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders and Panama Canal treaty foes agreed Wednesday on an April 26 deadline for a vote on the second pact, but some senators said the showdown could come one to two weeks earlier.

The agreement broke a stalemate that had existed for several days, and assured anxious senators that they will be able to take their full 10-day Easter recess, beginning Friday.

Meanwhile, the Senate thwarted an effort by Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., to cripple the treaty by striking out a provision concerning the building of a future sea-level canal.

On votes of 56 to 35 and 52 to 42, it rejected Allen's attempt to nullify Panamanian rights in the provision while retaining those of the United States.

The sea-level canal provision, added to the pact at the Carter administration's demand, says the United States would need Panama's consent to build a new canal anywhere else and at the same time bars Panama from negotiating a canal deal with any third country.

Some treaty foes, including Allen, object to this arrangement because it makes a U.S. option subject to approval by another government.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, floor leader for the treaty proponents, argued Wednesday that the United States "actually is giving away little or nothing" because studies show Panama is the only feasible route for a sea-level canal to replace the existing one.

The Senate later rejected two other amendments. It voted down 76 to 15 a proposal for the United States to lease military bases for up to 200 years, and rejected 62 to 26 another to prohibit expropriation of U.S. property by Panama.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., negotiated the timetable for a final vote after renewing a threat to cut the Easter recess in half to continue working on the treaty.

In a compromise arrangement that he admitted might be unprecedented, Byrd named himself, Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a treaty opponent, as a "committee of three" to meet on April 5 to decide on a date and time for the final vote, with April 26 as the last possble date.

The threat by Byrd to cut the recess in half had met protests from some senators who complained they had already made plans for spending the recess in their home states.

It also distressed treaty opponents, who fell two votes short of blocking ratification of the first treaty last week, and intend to use the recess for a last-ditch effort to defeat the second one.

That effort involves a massive, five-state public relations blitz aimed at six senators who voted for the first pact but stressed that they were not committed to support the second one.

Reliability Rating For Autos Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should rate the reliability and durability of new cars just as it now rates them for gasoline mileage, the head of the Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday.

"If the consumer knows not only the (price), but the average repair cost for a car, he's going to have another important factor to take into account in deciding whether to buy that car," Michael Pertschuk, chairman of the FTC, told a Senate panel.

"The only widely known piece of hard information" now available to consumers on all new cars is the gasoline mileage ratings provided by the Environmental Protection Agency, he said. Pertschuk called this program "generally successful in informing the public about a crucial variable in the purchase decision.

"Shouldn't other basic information concerning equally important matters — reliability, durability — also be made available?" he asked.

Such a system to rate the new car models would not only help buyers, but "would provide a powerful stimulus to manufacturers to design and build better cars," he said.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which has focused on vehicle defects, could test a system for determining automobile reliability and durability, Pertschuk said.

Pertschuk also said the FTC found in a survey that nearly 30 percent of new vehicle owners have to return their cars for repairs which are covered by warranty. Only 7 percent of owners of all other products have to return those products for repairs covered by warranty, he told the Senate commerce subcommittee on consumers.

The survey also found that 25 percent of those who had warranty problems with motor vehicles were dissatisfied with the final result, compared to only 8 percent who were dissatisfied with the warranty repairs made on all other products.

"The consumer may make many trips back and forth to the dealer without a repair of a single recurrent problem," Pertschuk said.

One reason for this is friction between dealers and manufacturers over who is responsible for warranty repairs, he said, adding: "Warranties are of little use if auto manufacturers do not perform as they have promised."

He recommended that consumers be allowed to sue to make a company buy back a "lemon," a car with constant repair problems. He said consumers ought to be allowed to keep and use the car until the dispute is resolved, which is not permitted now.

And such court cases may last several years.

Callaghan Arrives For Easter Weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister James Callaghan arrived here Wednesday on a visit that will include talks with President Carter and an Easter weekend reunion with family members living here.

In Carter's meeting Thursday with Callaghan, officials said, likely topics will be the declining value of the dollar, the status of U.S. arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union and the situation in Rhodesia.

Callaghan's son-in-law is Peter Jay, the British ambassador in Washington and father of three grandchildren of the prime minister. Callaghan plans to spend several days with the family before returning to London.

LEGAL NOTICE

General Telephone Company of the Southwest has filed tariffs with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to implement the Federal Communications Commission's telephone equipment registration program (FCC Docket 19528). The tariffs have an effective date of April 15, 1978. The proposed changes will reduce rates for extension telephones and 25 foot long cords; will restructure one-time charges for service connection, moves and changes, increasing some and reducing others; and will offer reduced monthly rates for one-party business and residence customers who provide their own primary telephone instrument. The proposed changes in rates, with some increasing and others decreasing, will reduce General's gross revenues from its Texas operations by $2,565.00.

Easter Visitors To Rome Ignore Terrorism

ROME (AP) — Despite a wave of terrorism climaxed by the kidnapping of former Premier Aldo Moro, thousands of tourists are flocking to Rome for Easter week, pivotal feast of the Christian calendar.

Travel agents reported not a single cancellation by visitors, mainly from the United States and Europe, who have booked solid for Holy Week and the next few weeks Rome's 50,000 hotel rooms and 25,000 extra beds in convents and other religious houses.

There are, however, constant reminders for jet-setter and pilgrim alike that this is a nation which has declared a state of emergency — where last week in broad daylight in a Rome street gunmen from the extreme leftist Red Brigades kidnapped one of the country's most respected political figures, killing his five bodyguards.

Tour buses were being delayed by roadblocks, but sightseers were also benefitting from a sharp drop in crime since police launched a massive dragnet last Thursday for the Moro kidnappers.

Police statistics show that in the past six days general crime, including robberies, car thefts and assaults, dropped by 60-70 percent compared with the same days last year.

There have been 96 arrests since Thursday in this city of 3.2 million persons, a third less than last year's figure.

"We arrived by plane Sunday and found heavy police measures," tourist Louis Freedman, from White Plains, N.Y., said Wednesday.

Freedman and his wife said they checked with the Italian mission at the U.N. headquarters in New York before leaving and were assured they should go ahead with travel plans.

Their bus, packed with other American tourists, has been checked regularly, but speedily, at police road blocks thrown up around the Italian capital.

Freedman approves of the measures.

"We have seen that finally the Italian government is doing something aimed at eradicating those Red Brigade terrorists," he said. "We are sorry for Mr. Moro, such a respected and cultured man."

Less happy was Spanish clerk Maria Trinidad Quintas, among a busload of tourists who trimmed to two hours a planned one-day trip to Florence after, she said, being delayed for nearly three hours at a Rome highway toll.

"Police were carefully checking every truck, bus and car queuing at the gate," said Miss Quintas, of Madrid.

Denmark's biggest charter travel firm, Tjaereborg, which has 600 persons booked for Rome tours over Easter, received only one query after news broke of the kidnapping. One man wanted to know if restaurant service was available.

He had heard of a strike, which lasted only a day, by Italian labor unions protesting the kidnapping.

"Danes have become accustomed to an unruly world," commented Tjaereborg director J.C. Jansen.

Last year tourism earned Italy a record $3.6 billion and the government anticipates 1978 will be even better.

The international chapter of the 15,000-member American Society of Travel Agents thinks official hopes are well-founded, not least because of better exchange rates for the dollar than in other European countries, which have revalued currencies more sharply.

Joseph Hallisey Jr., a Dearborn, Mich. travel agent and an ASTA director, says too that people have simply become accustomed to disruption.

"We haven't seen people get uptight about the government situation," said Hallisey. "Travel transcends these things. People have learned that disruption is part of coping with modern life."

Brief Delay Granted In Trial Of Italian Terrorist Members

TURIN, Italy (AP) — The trial of 15 members of the Red Brigades terrorist organization was postponed Wednesay for seven days after the court rejected a request by defense lawyers that could have delayed the proceedings for months.

The court denied a petition by 12 of the 20 court-appointed defense attorneys asking for an immediate halt to the trial pending a decision by Italy's Constitutional Court on demands by defendants to act as their own defense lawyers.

"They are not seeking self-defense but they want to avoid being tried as they have repeatedly said they do not consider themselves defendants," said presiding Judge Guido Barbaro after more than three hours of consultations behind closed doors.

The defendants, members of Italy's most feared urban guerrilla group, boasted in court Monday that their terrorist comrades had kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro in Rome.

The defendants are charged with organizing an armed band to overthrow the state.

Italian police and soldiers kept up the hunt for the 61-year-old Moro and the gunmen who killed his five bodyguards in a street ambush in Rome six days ago.

Police reported that Brunilde Pertramer, an alleged member of the Red Brigades, was arrested in the northern Italian town of Novara Wednesday in connection with the killing of a police officer in Turin two weeks ago. She also is one of 16 persons police want in connection with Moro's kidnapping.

The government decreed new law enforcement measures Tuesday, including mandatory life terms for killer-kidnappers, in a bid to stem terrorism.

Sources at the Turin trial speculated that some defense lawyers could resign when the trial resumes. In that case, other defense lawyers would be appointed by the court, probably leading to a further postponement.

"They feel above laws," said the prosecutor Luigi Moschella during Wednesday's hearing. "They feel at war against present laws and the Italian state. They are not in another state, they are not privileged defendants. Self-defense is not the problem at stake," Moschella said. "They are simply trying to invalidate the trial."

Giscard Seeks Support

PARIS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing called on the defeated Communist-Socialist opposition Wednesday to join him in creating "a long springtime for France."

Giscard d'Estaing, in a television address to the nation, said he plans to broaden his support in the newly-elected parliament with economic and social policies designed to draw leftist endorsement and produce a "reasonable cohabitation."

But he stopped short of promising to name leftists to the new government, saying "swiping" members of other parties is both "undignified and inefficient."

"But there are choices of people that can symbolize an opening," he added in his first comment on the elections.

Political aides to the president have said he will name a new government composed largely of technocrats to underline his determination to solve the unemployment and inflation that generated support for leftist electoral promises.

The center-right coalition backing Giscard d'Estaing won a 291-200 majority in the National Assembly in Sunday's runoff vote. The advantage is 30 seats down from his margin in the last assembly but still comfortable.

"In politics, Frenchmen regret the excessive division of the country," Giscard d'Estaing said in what he called "the message" sent up by voters. "Well, let's call a halt to it."

"What is regrettable is the state of relations between the majority and the opposition," he continued. "I indicate it is time to devise what I will call a reasonable cohabitation."

The English poet Sir John Davies composed 26 acrostic "Humns to Astrea," (Queen Elizabeth) in 1599. Each one contained the words Elisabetha Regina as the initial letters of its lines.

Mexican Gas Pipeline Completion Seen In '79

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Mexican engineers said Wednesday their goverment plans to have in operation early next year the 821-mile natural gas pipeline that eventually could be linked with American interstate lines.

Clemente Beltran and Gregario Flores Montelongo of Petroleos Mexicanos, the government energy company, submitted a progress report on the $1 billion project at Interpipe '78, an international technology conference.

An immediate objective, they said, is nationwide conversion to natural gas to release 147,000 barrels of fuel oil a day for export.

"We also have the alternative of supplying surplus natural gas to the United States in case an agreement can be reached," they said.

Six U.S. interstate firms reached a tentative agreement last August to purchase natural gas from Pemex, but the U.S. government has objected to the proposed price of $2.60 a thousand cubic feet compared with $2.16 now being paid for Canadian gas.

John F. O'Leary, deputy energy secretary, told the conference Tuesday he is confident the problem eventually can be resolved.

The initial $504 million phase of the project involves construction from the states of Chiapas and Tabasco in southeastern Mexico to San Fernando, about 80 miles south of Brownsville, with a branch from San Fernando to an existing line linking Monterrey with Reynosa. The initial capacity would be one billion cubic feet a day.

A second phase, involving a branch line from San Fernando to Reynosa and the addition of 18compressor stations, would cost $496 milion and boost the ultimate capacity to 2.1 billion cubic feet a day.

Beltran andFlores said the project will permit new industrial zones to be built along the route and permit existing nonprofitable gas fields to be tied into the national gas system.

They said 160 access roads to the right of way have been built and that 65 percent of the right of way already has been cleared.

The 45 contractors participating in the project, they said, now are employing about 15,000 workers and will have 21,000 during full construction.

Beltran and Flores said the first shipment of 48-inch pipe for the line was not received until Dec. 22 but "we have set our goal for start-up operations during the early part of 1979."

The pipe is being acquired from Japan, France, Germany, Italy, and Mexico.

Easter Gasoline 'Adequate'

HOUSTON (AP) — A survey indicates Texas motorists over the Easter weekend will have little trouble finding adequate gasoline supplies.

The American Automobile Association survey also indicates gasoline prices will be a bit lower than during the Christmas holidays.

Only about one-third of the state's service stations are expected to be closed Easter Sunday, compared with nearly two-thirds on Christmas Day. None of the 191 stations participating in the Easter survey indicated plans to be closed on Friday or Saturday.

The average price for full-service regular grade gasoline now is 60.7 cents a gallon, compared with 61 cents during the Christmas holidays. The average for full-service unleaded is 63.9 cents compared with 63.6 cents and the average for premium is 65.6 cents compared with 65.4 cents in December.

The Three A said motorists now can save an average of 6 cents a gallon on regular gasoline, 5.5 cents on unleaded, and 4.8 cents a gallon on premium by using self-service facilities.

The highest average price reported in the survey was 69.8 cents a gallon for full-service premium grade gasoline in Fort Stockton. The lowest price was 49.9 cents for self-service regular in Wichita Falls.

For full-service, the averages ranged from 56.4 cents at Brownwood to 66.1 cents at Ozona for regular, from 61.9 cents at Brownwood to the 69.8 cents at Fort Stockton for premium, and from 59 cents at Gainesville to 67.9 cents at Fort Stockton for unleaded.

For self-service, the ranges were from the 49.9 cents at Wichita Falls to 59.1 cents at Fort Stockton for regular, from 55.8 cents at Huntsville to 63.2 cents at El Paso for premium.

Economics Student Designs Nuclear Weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Harvard University economics student testified Wednesday that in three months, using unclassified material, he figured out how to design a nuclear weapon capable of destroying the U.S. Capitol.

Dimitri A. Rotow of Arlington, Va., who said he is on leave from Harvard, did not build the weapon. He said he turned all copies of his drawings and research papers over to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee before testifying.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of a nuclear proliferation subcommittee, said the panel had asked the Department of Energy to decide whether the information in Rotow's manuscript should be classified.

Rotow said he did his research at the Library of Congress, using publications anyone can purchase from the Commerce Department's National Technical Information Service.

Peter Urbach, deputy director of the information service, said sale of the publications would be halted pending the Department of Energy's decision regarding their classification.

Rotow said he began the research because he was interested in the subject and thought it might lead to a series of magazine articles or a book.

"I came to realize later that it would be an error to publish it," he told the committee. He said he saw a danger that "people would read it and go out and steal uranium" to make a nuclear weapon.

Rotow said he decided at the outset to design a bomb with an explosive force of one-tenth of a kiloton, or the equivalent of about 100 tons of TNT. He said this would produce "the kind of yield you would want to, say, annihilate the Capitol during the State of the Union address or knock down the World Trade Center in New York."

Theodore B. Taylor, a Princeton University professor formerly engaged in nuclear weapons design at the Los Alamos Nuclear Laboratory, called Rotow's manuscript "the most extensive and detailed exposition that I have seen outside the classified literature."

Rotow told the committee he formerly was a physics student, but found he did not have enough aptitude for it and turned to economics.

"If I could produce a document such as that, what could someone who was trained as a nuclear engineer do?" he asked.

Glenn said Rotow's manuscript "obviously has a very high level of credibility."

Donald Kerr, acting assistant secretary for defense programs in the Department of Energy, told the committee that a few designs for nuclear weapons are submitted to the department each year by private individuals.

"We do everything we can to discourage those who submit such designs from continuing their approach," he said.

Mideast Jet Sale Decision Affirmed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter intends to "hang tough" on his controversial decision to sell warplanes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia as well as Israel, administration officials said Wednesday.

In the midst of his tense summit meeting with Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Carter arranged to meet Wednesday afternoon with members of the House International Relations and Senate Foreign Relations committees to discuss plans for the $4.8 billion jet sale package deals.

"The package will remain a package," one official said. "The president is going to hang tough."

It appeared significant that he arranged the White House briefings on the warplane transaction just as his two days of "very serious and candid" talks with Begin were coming to a close — and a day before Begin was to leave Washington.

In an appearance before the House panel Tuesday, Begin spoke out against Carter's plan to sell 60 sophisticated F15 jet fighters to Saudi Arabia and 50 less advanced F5Es to Egypt along with 15 F15s and 75 F16s to Israel.

But administration officials have said Carter means to stick to his all-or-nothing approach — meaning that if Congress exercises its prerogative to block the Arab sales, he will withdraw the proposed Israeli sale as well.

Pro-Israeli congressmen have expressed their opposition to lumping military shipments to Israel in the same deal with the Arab states.

Aides said Carter hoped Wednesday's meetings with congressional foreign policy leaders would help establish favorable prospects for the warplane package before Congress begins its Easter recess.

As plans now stand, the administration will inform Congress formally of its intention to sell the planes in early April after the Senate completes action on the Panama Canal treaties.

Congress will have 30 days to adopt a joint resolution disapproving any or all of the sales. Otherwise, they go through.

Disaster Aid Increase Gets House Okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved an extra $300 million for federal disaster relief assistance Wednesday because of problems brought on by the severe winter weather.

The proposal also must be approved by the Senate.

Congress previously allotted $150 million for disaster assistance during fiscal 1978, but more money was needed because of extraordinary events like the Johnstown, Pa., and Kansas City, Mo., floods.

Those floods alone led to a federal outlay of $180 million, which was $30 million more than had been appropriated for the whole year.

In addition, disaster declarations in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and California have resulted in the government's spending another $180 million.

The House Appropriations Committee's report on the legislation said that the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration has already delayed reimbursing $150 million to other agencies for expenses they incurred in providing disaster and emergency assistance.

The additional funding would take care of these problems.

A presidential disaster or emergency declaration makes a variety of federal assistance available to an area.

These services include temporary housing, temporary mortgage or rental payment assistance, legal services, clearance of debris, repair or replacement of roads, public utilities and emergency protective measures for preserving life and property.

THE GREATEST DRAMA: CHAPTER FIVE

Rome Crucifies 'King' Amid Taunts And Tears

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the fourth act of a five-act drama of Easter, the dialogue drawn from Scripture quotations, a few indirect, with bits on Joseph of Arimathea's call on Pilate taken from ancient non-canonical accounts.)

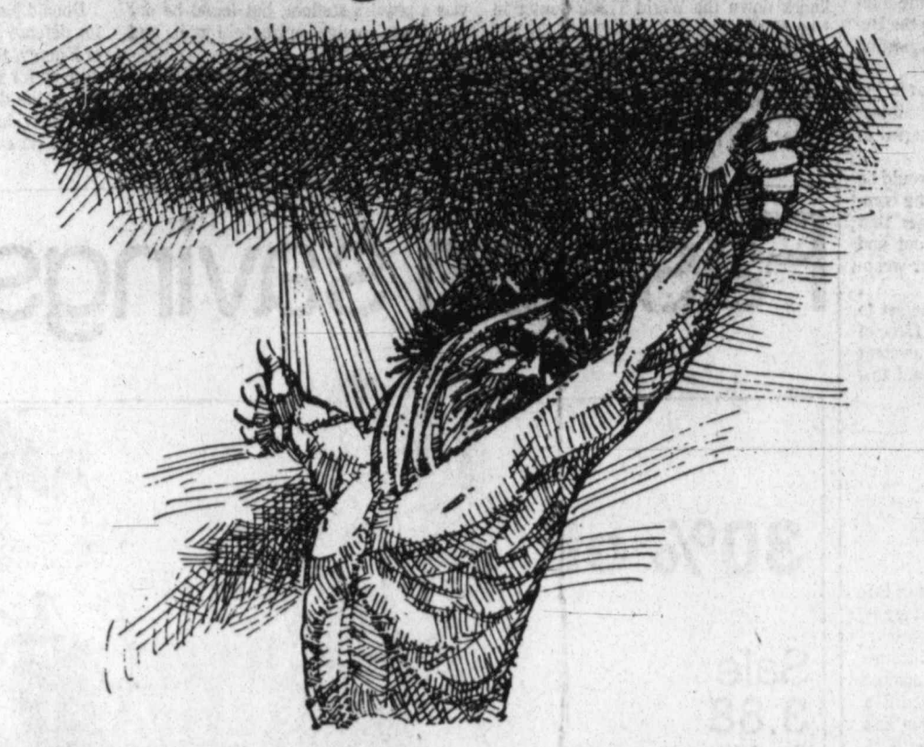

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Act IV; Scene 1: Sunup, Nisan 14, 30 A. D., Place: The official chambers of the Roman governor Pontius Pilate at the Castle of Antonia, adjoining a military barrackr and facing a walled, flagstone-paved courtyard, where a group of priests and attendants of the adjacent Temple wait in the gateway.

A bruised, disheveled Jesus, flanked by two Roman legionnaires, stands before Pilate, who sleepily adjusts his toga and settles himself in his long chair with extended leg rest.

Stage announcer: "It was early morning, says John 18:28, with the packed city of Jerusalem barely stirring, preparing the morning meal. Historian Josephus of that time says more than two million pilgrims crowded the city for Passover, many camping outside its walls.

"Hardly any of them were aware of Jesus's midnight arrest. It had been managed stealthily by officials because, as Luke 22:2 says, 'they feared the people.' Only a few functionaries of the Temple, its Sadducean administration appointed by Pilate and retaining office at his pleasure, were present at the hastily arranged, covert trial at dawn."

Pilate, goadingly: "Are you the King of the Jews?" He lounges back in the chair, rubbing his chin. "Your own nation and the chief priests have handed you over to me; what have you done?"

Jesus: "My kingship is not of this world; if my kingship were of this world, my servants would fight."

Pilate: "So you are a king?"

Jesus: "You say that I am a king. For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth. Every one who is of the truth hears my voice."

Pilate, yawning: "What is truth?" He gets to his feet and slapping his vitus stick at his side, steps outside to face the group rounded up by his Temple subordinates to give a show of public instigation.

Pilate: "I find no crime in him." He winks at his military adjutant.

Ranking Sadducean priest: "We found this man perverting our nation and forbidding us to give tribute to Caesar and saying that he himself is Christ a king."

Another priest: "He stirs up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, from Galilee even to this place."

Pilate, arching his brows: "You have a custom that I should release one man for you at the Passover. Whom do you want me to release to you, Barabbas or Jesus called the Christ?"

Several priests: "Not this man!" "Barabbas!" They nudge other Temple employees, urging them to echo that choice. "Barabbas!" "Barabbas!"

Stage announcer: "Scripture notes that Barabbas was an imprisoned insurrectionist, accused of murder and pillage. But as Mark 15:11 points out, 'The chief priests stirred up the crowd' to free him and condemn Jesus. They 'persuaded' the others, John's gospel notes. It was an officially manipulated affair, with ancient non-canonical accounts specifying Pilate's behind-the-scenes planning with Temple collaborators."

Pilate, folding his arms: "Then what shall I do with the man whom you call King of the Jews?"

Priests and associates: "Crucify him!" "If you release this man, you are not Caesar's friend." "Every one who makes himself a king sets himself against Caesar."

Pilate purses his lips, nods cynically and strides back into his chamber. He looks distastefully at Jesus: "Where are you from?" Jesus remains silent.

Pilate, to his adjutant: "Scourge him."

Two soldiers lead Jesus to the adjoining barracks, where a lounging cohort of troopers watches as Jesus is stripped, bent over a short post and tied there. A soldier lays on with a multi-thonged whip tipped with bone.

Jesus's body writhes with each of the 39 strokes and welts; cuts and blood cover his back and arms. The soldier unties him and jerks him to his feet. He totters but stays erect, quivering in shock.

A husky sergeant grabs a reddish sagam, a military cape, drapes it on Jesus's shoulders like a royal robe and taunts: "Hail, King of the Jews!"

The lounging troopers guffaw. One thrusts a scepter-like reed in Jesus's hand and another rushes outside and comes back twisting thorn branches into a circle and jams it on Jesus's head as a crown.

The soldiers, kneeling: "The King of the Jews!" Others join in the raillery, bowing and yelling. "Hail, the King!" "The Jew King!"

A soldier spits in Jesus' face. Several others imitate the act, leaning close to hit the target. One yanks the reed from Jesus's hand, and beats his cheeks with it. Another strikes with his fist. Jesus staggers backward but keeps on his feet.

'Crucify him!' 'If you release this man, you are not Caesar's friend. Every one who makes himself a king sets himself against Caesar.'

The soldiers, chuckling, lead him back to Pilate, who has now taken his seat on a portable judgment chair moved into the courtyard. He gazes at the battered Jesus and turns to the assembled group. "Here is the man. Here is your king."

Priests: "Away with him." "Crucify him."

Pilate, derisively: "Shall I crucify your king?"

Priests: "We have no king but Caesar." "Crucify him."

Pilate shrugs, turns to a centurion at his side and points his vitus staff at Jesus: "To be crucified."

He signals an aide who hands him a charcoal pen and placard. He writes on it the crime of treason: "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." He hands it to the centurion, who hangs it about Jesus's neck.

A priest: "Do not write 'The King of the Jews,' but 'This man said, I am King of the Jews.'"

Pilate: "What I have written I have written."

Scene 2: On a skull-shaped hill, with upright posts on it, littered with bones, swarming insects and darting rodents, outside the city walls. It is the third hour (9 a.m.). Faint sounds of the city, just starting to pulse with life, and the flare of Temple trumpets, come from the distance.

A squad of soldiers, led by the centurion, prod three prisoners to the summit. Two carry heavy crossbeams on their backs, while that of the third, a weak, badly mauled Jesus, is borne by a dark-skinned African. They drop the crossbeams thumpingly to the ground.

The troopers strip the prisoners to their loincloths, fling each of them down, stretch their arms out on the beams and nail them there with spikes through the wrists. The prisoners whimper and moan.

With rope pulleys, the soldiers lift the beams with the dangling bodies to the top of the uprights, where they drop into notches with a thud. Shrieks come from the two bandits on either side of Jesus. His own face pales and contorts with agony at the jolt.

The soldiers set the victims' bodies astride pegs and with their knees bent outward, spike their feet below. A scattering of people look on, some Temple priests, passersby from crossroads below, some women followers of Jesus, including his wailing mother, and the stricken apostle John.

Some priests, self-defensively, staring up at Jesus: "Aha! You who would destroy the Temple and build it in three days, save yourself."

Stage announcer: "Luke 23:35 specifies that the people stood by, watching, but the rulers scoffed at him.'"

Jesus, gasping, the pull of muscles constricting his rib cage and lungs: "I thirst."

A soldier sops a sponge in some sour wine, sticks it on the tip of his javelin and thrusts it up against Jesus' lips. He turns his head.

Jesus pushes himself upward by his feet to gulp air, then sags again, his eyes shifting over the tormentors. He sobs: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

The soldiers occupy themselves dividing the victims' possessions, several of them grabbing for Jesus's seamless tunic. One, holding on: "Let us not tear it, but cast lots for it to see whose it shall be."

One takes off his helmet and after each puts his rock into it, shakes it above his head until all but one stone bounces out. Its owner gets the robe, whistling in delight, running fingers admiringly over the woven fabric.

A bandit, shaken by intermittent convulsions on his cross beside Jesus, looks fiercely at him, raving, "Are you not the Christ?...."

The other bandit, moaning: "Do you not fear God, since you are under the same sentence of condemnation? And we justly...but this man has done nothing wrong." He looks beseechingly at Jesus. "Jesus, remember me when you come into your kingly power."

Jesus, in a strained but steady voice: "Truly, I say to you, today you will be with me in paradise."

They hang silently a while, their bodies writhing with cramps and spasms, insects swarming about their faces. A sudden burst of lightning streaks the sky. Thunder cracks and a blast of wind fills the air with dust and debris.

Jesus presses upward, gulping air, and cries loudly into the tumult above: "E'loi, E'loi, lama sabach-tha ni?" "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

The soldiers have scrambled to their feet, weapons in hand. The wind dies down, but an abnormal darkness deepens over the scene. Rain begins, getting harder and thicker. Another clap of thunder overhead.

'Truly, I say unto you, today you will be with me in paradise.'

Stage announcer: "The strange darkness lasted from the sixth to the ninth hour, from noon to 3 p.m."

Jesus: "It is finished." The earth heaves, and the rending growl of an earthquake splits a fissure in the hill that tears along the ground toward the city.

Jesus, putting his last remnants of strength into a victorious shout: "Father! Into thy hands I commit my spirit!" His chin drops and his body sags limp and motionless.

The centurion, staring up in awe: "Certainly this man was innocent. Truly this was a son of God!"

The sun comes out and somewhere a bird sings. The soldiers use broadswords to break the legs of the two thieves and one drives a javelin into Jesus' side from which watery blood spills. They gather their gear and retreat hastily down the hill.

Stage announcer: "Luke 23:48 notes that the common Jewish people who had seen 'what had taken place, returned home beating their breasts' in sorrow.'"

Scene 3: A short time later, Pilate's praetorium. A solemn, determined man, Joseph of Arimathea, of obvious prestige, and Nicodemus, a scholarly looking rabbi, are admitted by a Roman aide.

Joseph, confronting Pilate: "Might we take away the body of Jesus for burial?"

Pilate, eyeing them suspiciously, beckons the centurion, asking: "Is he already dead?"

Centurion: "He is dead."

Pilate to the visitors: "You are granted the body."

They leave. A soldier enters from the courtyard and lays a message before Pilate. He sighs and accompanies the soldier outside, where some Temple underlings wait at the gate.

Priest: "Sir, we remember how that imposter said, 'After three days I will rise again.' Therefore order the sepulchre to be made secure until the third day, lest his disciples go and steal him away ... "

Pilate, to the centurion: "You have a guard of soldiers; go, make it secure as you can."

TOMORROW: Triumph.

Bomb Blasts In Denver Kill Man, One Misfires

BLAST DEBRIS — Police and firemen stand in a Denver street littered with debris from one of two explosions near the downtown area early Wednesday. White sheets in the street cover pieces of the body of a man who police say either found the bomb or was setting it in front of the VFW post. (AP Laserphoto)

DENVER (AP) — Two of three bombs planted a few blocks from the Denver Civic Center exploded with powerful force early Wednesday, and police said a man was ripped apart after he either found or set one of the bombs.

The dismembered body of the unidentified man was found in the street in front of the VFW Post No. 1 building, where the second bomb exploded, ripping out a wall and shattering windows.

Police Chief Art Dill said there was no explanation for the blasts. "The only thing we can conclude is that we are dealing with a disturbed individual."

He said the dead man "was either an individual who had found the device or had set the device."

The first explosion occurred in a three-story parking structure just after midnight. It ripped a 3-by 5-foot hole in a wall. Thirteen minutes later, the second blast roared against the brick wall of the VFW building.

One policeman searching through the debris near the building found a third bomb, consisting of 10 sticks of dynamite, in the newspaper vending machine.

A sharpshooter pumped five shots into the machine in an unsuccessful attempt to detonate it. Police then removed the bomb and noted that it had a timing device attached.

"It was a live bomb which for some reason or another, didn't function at the time it was supposed to," said Capt. Robert Shaughnessy, head of the police bomb squad. "It obviously was placed there to get the police officers and firemen after they gathered."

Police searched the Denver City Hall and state Capitol, less than 10 blocks from the blasts, as well as Denver General Hospital and buildings on the campus of Metropolitan State College. No other bombs were found.

Dill said the police department didn't get a telephone warning prior to the blast. During the hours after the explosions police reported receiving several false bomb threats.

After daylight a search of the two blast sites continued and the FBI and agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms worked with police and firemen in picking up scraps of evidence.

There was no immediate damage estimate.

Wire, Flags Among Items Targeted By Thieves

Burglars, thieves and youthful miscreants kept Lubbock police occupied Wednesday, as officers investigated reports of everything from stolen rolls of wire to the theft of all the flags on a local golf course.

Wilson Swinner, of the Treasure Island Golf Center, 501 Frankford Ave., said someone walked through the links late Tuesday or early Wednesday, making off with $444 worth of flags and poles.

Twenty rolls of 10-gauge wire reportedly were stolen from a firm in the 5200-block of Brownfield Highway Tuesday or Wednesday, according to Dwight Thomas of Wolfforth. Thomas estimated the value of the stolen wire at $670.

With warm-weather recreation on a lot of local minds, Lubbock bike thieves apparently perceived a ready market Thursday as several persons reported stolen cycles.

David E. Ehler of 2632 74th Place said he had lost a $75 bicycle to thieves, while James H. Martin of 2224 26th St. said he lost a pair of bikes—valued at $100—to thieves on Wednesday.

Others reporting stolen bicycles Wednesday were Janet Owens of 3114 31st St., Robert Cargile of 2309 35th St., Josephine E. Lovato of 2316 35th St., and Susan Casey of 2709 62nd St.

L. J. Prien of 2723 61st St. said he suspects youngsters were responsible for breaking out his front storm door and a garage door window pane sometime this week. Prien said he found marbles near the damaged glass and believed the marbles had been "shot" through the door and window pane.

Hubcap thieves were at it once again Thursday.

Donald E. Whitten of 3901 19th St. said someone got his CB radio and his hubcaps Wednesday, a loss he estimated at $640.

Walter Jackson of Dimmitt said his $200 wire wheels were stolen sometime Tuesday while his vehicle was parked in the Methodist Hospital lot.

David Polley of Route 4 said his hubcaps, worth $230, were taken from his car while he was attending a performance at the Civic Center a week ago.

Purse snatchers victimized Edwena Furry of 2310 Date Ave. Wednesday while she stood at a bus stop at E. 23rd Street and Cedar Avenue. The victim said two black men, in their late teens or early 20s, grabbed her purse and ran. Though the pocketbook was recovered by police later, much of the cash and jewelry had been removed, reports indicated. The victim estimated her loss at $360.

Clyde L. Bradshaw of 4312 45th St. said a purse containing money had been taken from his residence Tuesday or Wednesday. The loss was set at $150.

Burglars apparently entered Debra Jones' car Tuesday or Wednesday while it was parked at her 1315 E. 15th St. residence, then made off with a tape player, watch and two rings, all valued at $590.

A burglar may have worked up an appetite while breaking into Martha Fain's 3308 1st St. residence in the past few days. The victim said the intruder had taken two television sets, a clock, a section of carpet and two steaks from the refrigerator.

A 17-year-old Lubbock man was bemoaning the loss of $400 worth of firearms Wednesday after a stranger gained access to his home on the pretense of using the phone.

According to David Joseph Heinen, after he let the man inside his 30th Street house early today, the suspect went into a bedroom and said he wanted the two shotguns and two rifles to pull a robbery in order to get a friend out of jail.

After the man shut and locked the bedroom door, he reportedly scooped up the guns and made a quick exit through a window.

Heinen said he pried open the locked door and called police.

Again, numerous Lubbockites were complaining of recent house and vehicle break-ins.

Pedro Gaitan of 909-A 40th St. said whoever kicked in his front door Tuesday made off with his television set and stereo.

However, no evidence of forced entry was found at the 4213 42nd St. residence of William Pickett Jr. Tuesday after someone reportedly stole his stereo, CB radio and $140 worth of records.

According to Terry Robinson of 2721 Baylor St., a burglar pried some boards covering a door Tuesday night and got away with tools and auto parts from his garage.

LOVINGTON (Special) — Clarence Ronnie McCoy remains in jailed here in lieu of $50,000 bond. Charged with voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife, McCoy was arrested March 10 in Imperial County, Calif.

McCoy was arraigned on the charges last Thursday.

The body of Mrs. Donna McCoy was found March 20, 1977, in a shallow grave 20 miles west of Hobbs.

On Nov. 5, 1976, the couple's 18-month-old baby girl had been found abandoned in a shopping cart at an Odessa supermarket, touching off the search for the child's mother.

Tower Testifies In Park Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, testified for 90 minutes behind closed doors with the Senate Ethics Committee Wednesday about his relationship with Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

"Obviously, in hindsight, you'd like to pick your friends more carefully," Tower said when he emerged.

Tower told reporters he was "only one of several former and present senators" who have been asked to provide information to the committee stemming from their association with the millionaire rice dealer, who is accused of buying influence.

Asked if Park had ever used his name in reports to the Korean CIA, Tower replied:

"He may have. I don't have any documentation to verify that, but based on my knowledge of intelligence operations, agents will often pad their reports to gain favor with their superiors and give the impression to their superiors that they were doing much more than they were actually doing."

The committee did not ask him about any such KCIA reports, Tower said.

The Texas senator disqualified himself last month from sitting on the Ethics Committee because of what he termed prior "social association" with Park.

"Based on the committee's inquiries to me today, it is clear the committee is more interested in establishing patterns and practices of Korean nationals and did not view my acquaintances with such persons as suspect in nature," he said.

Tower said he had attended "a maximum of six possible events" hosted by Park over a 10-year period from 1965 to 1975. Tower said he was "one of the honored guests" at one of the functions. Tower also said he had turned down Park invitations "a minimum of seven times."

"At these type functions you always talk about the great friendships between the two great countries," Tower, a member of the Armed Forces Committee, said when asked if U.S. aid to Korea was ever mentioned at the parties.

He added quickly that his association with Park had no effect on his votes on foreign aid legislation pertaining to Korea.

"There has been no wrongdoing alleged," he said. "There has never been a charge or allegation by the committee or anyone else."

Twoer also said he had never "knowingly" accepted any campaign contributions from Park or any other Korean.

"I wouldn't knowingly accept a contribution from any foreign national," he added.

The senator, who is seeking re-election this year, also noted that there had been "much unjustified speculation and conjecture during the past few weeks about my reasons for disqualifying myself from the committee's initial review into the Korean matter. My sole concern from the beginning has been to preserve the credibility and integrity of the committee and its work."

"Once it was known with certainty Mr. Park was, in fact, returning to the United States to appear before the cognizant congressional committees, it was incumbent upon me to step aside temporarily," Tower continued.

"There have been some who have read something more sinister into my action. However, my decision amounted to a matter of principle, nothing more."

Tower said his records indicate that during the 1965-75 period, seven office appointments were scheduled for Park, "during at least three of which he was accompanied by other Koreans."

Tower also said former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo had been scheduled for two office appointments, and sent Tower five invitations to social functions which the senator attended.

The Korean Embassy sent 18 additional invitations to his office which had been "regretted," he added.

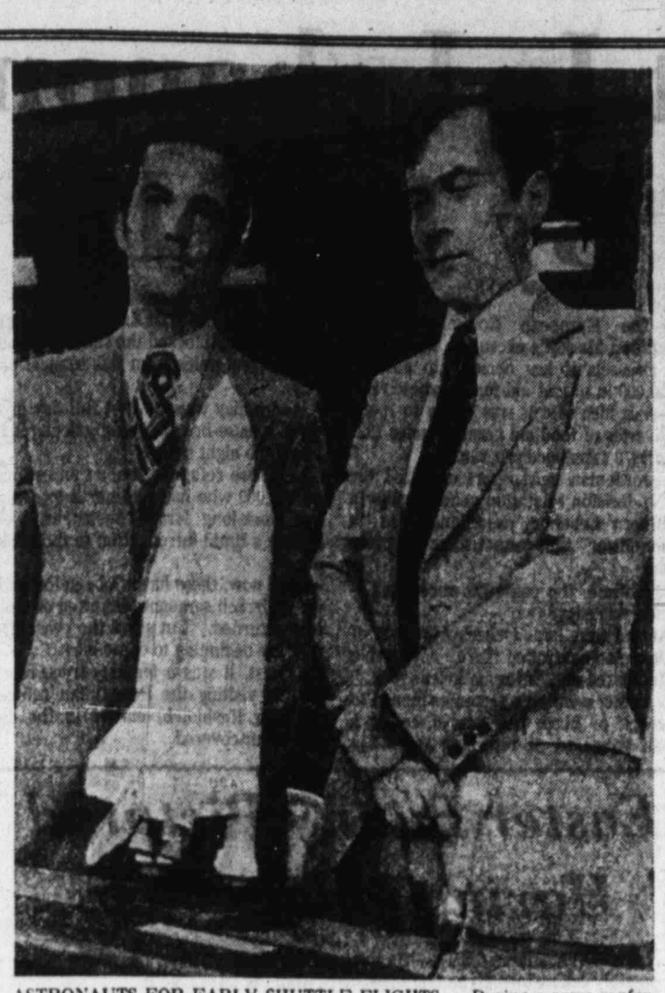

Tower said he took one trip to Korea, but that his itinerary was planned by the U.S. embassy and the U.S. military while there.

"I might point out that four of the times that I had contact with Mr. Park and the Korean ambassador were immediately prior to this trip."

The 1967 trip was made under the auspices of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, Tower said.

In 1978, the sale of crops and livestock from Colorado farms and ranches is expected to contribute as much as $4.7 billion to the state's economy, say economist at Colorado State University.

ASTRONAUTS FOR EARLY SHUTTLE FLIGHTS — During a news conference Wednesday, Robert L. Crippen, 40, at left, and John W. Young, 47, stand behind a model of the shuttle for which they were chosen as the prime flight crew for the first orbital flight test, scheduled for launch in spring of 1979. Crippen will be the pilot, and Young was chosen as commander for the flight. (AP Laserphoto)

Astronauts Eager For Shuttle Flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle astronauts John W. Young, a veteran of four space flights, and Robert L. Crippen, a space rookie, agreed Wednesday they won't join any speculation as to the exact date of the first flight of the shuttle next year.

Although a March 1979 liftoff has been tentatively set for the first scheduled flight of America's next space effort, no exact date has been set and there has been speculation the first flight may be delayed.

"The astronauts are planning to be ready for a March liftoff," said Young, who will become the first U.S. astronaut to make five space flights.

"There are three books that thick (about two inches) that have to come off at the same time for this vehicle to launch. There are people more qualified than me to say if we'll go in March. That's somebody else's worry. We plan to be ready."

Young, one of 12 men who have walked on the moon, and Crippen, who will enter space for the first time after 12 years of serving in backup roles, were selected last week as the prime flight crew for the first orbital test flight of the space shuttle orbiter.

"It's too early to get excited now," said Young, who spent more than 20 hours on the moon's surface on Apollo 16. "It's a year away and there's a lot of work to be done."

The feeling was a little different for Crippen.

"I noticed in the advance release that they called John the veteran and me the rookie," Crippen said. "Well, it took me 12 years to become a rookie. I heard John say he's not excited yet but I can't help it. I'm very excited right now."

Young, 47, however, is plenty excited about what the space shuttle program means to the future of space flight.

"This is an absolutely revolutionary flying machine," Young said of the orbiter space craft, which will be the first U.S. space craft to land on a runway like conventional planes.

"It's going to do things for space flight that will change the world. It's going to do things for aviation that will change aviation in ways that even those that are involved in it can't imagine.

"So it will be a very exciting mission for all of us. There are no bad missions on space flights."

Young and Crippen will make the first of six scheduled orbital flights, each with increasing complexity, to test the nation's first reuseable spacecraft. The first four flights will land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Young flew on Gemini 3, the first space craft to change its orbital path; on Gemini 10; on Apollo 10, which made the first orbit of the moon and on Apollo 16, the next to last moon landing in which Young and astronaut Charles M. Duke Jr. spent 20 hours, 15 minutes on the moon's surface.

Crippen was a member of the Air Force's Manned Orbiting Laboratory Program (MOL) and became an astronaut in 1969 when the MOL program was disbanded.

Soviet Corn Purchase Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An additional 500,000 metric tons of U.S. corn has been sold to the Soviet Union for delivery this year under a long-term purchase agreement between the two countries, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

The sale, like others earlier, was reported to the department by private exporting companies. No prices or other details were disclosed.

The new sales boosted to about 12.6 million tons the amount of grain the Soviets have bought for delivery through Sept. 30, the end of the second year of the long-term agreement. The pact calls for Russia to buy a minimum of six million tons of corn and about the minimum quantity was bought in the first year.

Department officials said the new sale represents about 19.7 million bushels of corn. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn.

Sales to date for this year include about 3.5 million tons of wheat and 9.1 million tons of corn. That is equal to about 129 million bushels of wheat and 358 million bushels of corn.

Pullout In Lebanon Hinted By Israelis

used to launch such forays into Israel in the future.

The Israeli military command said Palestinian guerrillas kept up sporadic fire Wednesday. Bursts of small arms fire from Tyre was directed at Israeli troops and half a dozen Katyusha rockets crashed into northeastern Israel during the day, causing no casualties.

A Fatah commander in Tyre said he had orders to honor the truce and another Fatah leader said his forces would not fire unless fired upon. Guerrilla sources said Arafat was pressuring leaders of the more radical factions to honor the cease-fire and make it unanimous among all guerrilla groups.

Guerrillas Moving

Reporters said they saw about 100 armed Palestinians in Tyre, a fraction of their former force. But motorized guerrillas were seen moving toward Tyre to reinforce the position.

The anti-guerrilla Voice of Lebanon radio said Saudi Arabia had joined Syria in efforts to press the guerrillas to observe the truce.

"I have found in my talks with Abu Ammar (Arafat) that the Palestinians will show flexibility to help Lebanon ensure an Israeli withdrawal from South Lebanon," said Ali el Shaer, Saudi Arabia's ambassador to Lebanon, speaking to reporters after a meeting with Foreign Minister Fuad Butros.

Artillery Halted

In Nabitieh, a Palestinian-controlled town three miles north of the Litani River, residents said they had not come under Israeli artillery fire since the cease-fire was declared. The Palestinian military command here claimed Nabitieh came under fire overnight.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim hopes to get 2,000 more troops from Austria, Sweden and other countries to complete the 4,000-man forces authorized by the Security Council. The United Nations has called on Israel to withdraw immediately, but Israel has said it will not do so until it can be assured the Palestinians will not return.

In other Mideast developments Wednesday:

Arabs Waiting

—The Arab group of 20 U.N. members said it is waiting to see if the cease-fire is effective before pursuing further U.N. action. "If the measures taken are not satisfactory, they will seek recourse to the Security Council," said a spokesman for the Lebanese mission.

—British Foreign Secretary David Owen said in London he was unable to defend Israel's attack in Lebanon. "But it would be idle to pretend that the Israeli government and people were not very cruelly provoked," he told Parliament in response to questions.

—The West German government announced it will provide aircraft to fly some of the U.N. troops to Lebanon, but did not indicate the nationality of the troops, how many or when they would be transported.

—The European Commission, the Common Market's executive, announced in Brussels it has decided to allocate $120,000 in urgent aid for Lebanese refugees. It also said it was trying to speed deliveries of food aid granted under 1977 and 1978 assistance programs.

—Jordanian newspapers criticized the U.N. decision to station peacekeepers in southern Lebanon, describing it as "a tranquilizer" that cannot solve the problem.

Meantime, the cease-fire mood in Lebanon was edgy.

A soldier wearing a yarmulka pinned to a shock of black hair was directing a small vanguard of returning south Lebanese refugees past an earthen mound that partially blocked the road to Bazourieh, several miles from this biblical port city.

Wednesday was the first full day of an uneasy cease-fire unilaterally declared by Israel the night before.

Lebanese refugees, among an estimated 200,000 who had fled north to escape the week-long Israeli onslaught, were getting a timid introduction to the invaders.

Until now, there haven't been too many," an Israeli sergeant remarked of those who returned. "But since the cease-fire, they are beginning to come back."

At best, it was a tenuous truce as reporters visiting the Palestinian refugee camp at Rashidieh, earlier in the day quickly discovered.

Easter Bunny Pictured Having Magic Paws

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — He lives on East Bunny Street, has magic paws, possibly yellow toenails and he's anywhere from 2 to 20 years old.

That may sound like a strange all points bulletin, but really it's how some imaginative, 4-year-old nursery school students in the Maine capital describe their favorite spring visitor — the Easter Bunny.

"I saw in him in the bank," said John Daggett of the Capitol Area Regional Vocational Center nursery school. "You know who he was? Danny Nichols in a costume."

John said the real Easter Bunny lives a long way away and comes in the night when kids are sleeping.

"He has long ears, a fluffy tail, round eyes, has claws on his feet," said Sally Massey. "He knocks on the door, then comes in by himself in the middle of the night. He's 16."

"He's white, red nose, white feet, he hops and has yellow eyes. He lives in a cage. He eats carrots and I think he's 2," said Lisa Lamonthe. "He has yellow toes and yellow toenails, too," she said.

Michael Bilodeau said the Easter Bunny "lives in a shop and makes candy in it too ... He's coming after birthdays, my birthday."

Jared Todd said the Easter Bunny is 5 years old and leaves candy, which he gets "inside his magic paw," at everyone's house.

The rabbit is pink, between 15 and 20 years old, hops and has a basket, said Aaron Osborne. "He lives on East Bunny Street. That's all for Easter. I know a lot about Christmas!" Aaron said.

Delegation Pushes Extension Of I-27

feel that the needs of this area warrant a full-fledged interstate. But, in light of the costs involved, we're willing to settle for something less," he said.

The delegation, which Brazell said represented Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Nebraska and Georgia, asked Bentsen's subcommittee to authorize the 11 projects as "priority primary highways," the county commissioner explained.

As such, the proposed routes would not be built to full interstate standards but "would be upgraded to four-lane highways offering free-flow, non-stop traffic," Brazell said.

In urban areas, the new highways would take the shape of freeways, he said. But in rural areas, they would resemble more conventional highways — without having overpasses at every intersection, as interstates require.

"It is to be expected that freeway standards would be necessary for those portions of the routes through urban areas, but would not be necessary through rural areas," banker Gene Edwards, president-elect of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce and spokesman for the delegation, told the subcommittee.

Another aspect of the delegation's proposal is that it would have the federal government pay 90 percent of the highway construction, instead of the existing 70 percent. State governments pay the remainder.

Area Towns Included

Lubbock's project would involve extending I-27, using the existing U.S. 87, south through Tahoka, Lamesa, Big Spring, San Angelo to Eden; and, using existing U.S. 83, from Eden to Junction. At Junction, the new route would link into I-10.

Thus, I-27 would connect three interstates — I-40 at Amarillo, I-20 at Big Spring and I-10 at Junction. I-10 already runs into I-35 (to Laredo) and I-37 (to Corpus Christi).

"One of the most compelling reasons for the proposed highway would be its contribution to the nation's security and defense," Rusk said in remarks prepared for the subcommittee.

Extenstion of I-27, noted Edwards, would provide:

—An an improved link between "huge military complexes at San Antonio and Denver, Colo."

—The "only high-standard north-south route in a 600-mile area bounded by I-25 and I-35."

—A new connector between five different interstates — 40, 20, 10, 35 and 37.

—A "new direct link between the rich agricultural, cattle and mineral resource area of West Texas and the Texas Gulf ports."

No Cost Estimates

The delegation did not have any cost estimates on the project. But Brazell said it "should not be too expensive" because part of the proposed route — U.S. 87 from Lubbock to Lamesa — already has four lanes and necessary overpasses in such areas as Tahoka.

Rusk also told the subcommittee that a four-lane divided highway from Dallas through Lubbock and into New Mexico is "desperately needed." That route recently has been designated State Highway 114 but state construction funds are in doubt.

State Highway 114 comes into Lubbock as U.S. 62 and U.S. 82 (the Idalou Highway). It is a four-lane route from Lubbock to Guthrie, but two-lane on to Dallas. Local officials want that state highway upgraded to an interstate.

"Especially for commercial traffic, we need to link up with the Gulf Coast and the Dallas-Fort Worth maarket," Brazell said.

Rusk said the proposed I-27 extension would provide the "most direct route from the northern tip of Texas to the southernmost area of the state."

And he said it would give Lubbock and the South Plains, "one of the largest and most productive agricultural areas of the state," a corridor to get their products to various markets and ports.

Other major projects requested by the delegation included routes from Brunswick, Ga., to Kansas City, Mo.; Kansas City to Chicago; Amarillo to Las Cruces; Kansas City to Baton Rouge; and Wichita, Kansas to Tucumcari, N.M.

In all the 11 projects total about 5,000 miles. The delegation asked that 12,000 miles of "priority primary highway" be authorized to give opportunity for inclusion of other proposals.

Congress is expected to consider a Highway and Public Transportation Improvement Act before the September deadline for fiscal 1979 apportionments.

Opponents Blasted By Hickox

Avalanche-Journal story in which Reese said Bush's and Hickox' speeches "sound like they were taken out of my campaign material two years ago."

Hickox said Reese "would like for you to believe that all of his ideas and positions on the issues are original," and said Reese is "resentful of the competition" in the race.

"In the case of Mr. Reese, the people in the 19th District should never let cleverness be confused with wisdom."

Hickox also responded to a comment Reese made when opening his campaign headquarters on March 4 that "we need someone up there rattling the cage, and I'm a pretty good cage rattler."

"Hardly the image of an effective congressman," Hickox observed. "We must elect an effective and competent person who can open doors with a positive attitude of cooperation with all members of the House," he said.

"We do not need a person who runs up and down the halls of Congress rattling cages and irritating and antagonizing everybody."

Hickox also took Reese to task for his recurring observation "that he needs to change only 5 percent of the votes from 1976 and that makes him the most electable candidate."

"Totally Misleading"

"That is totally misleading," Hickox charged.

He noted that a check of the voters list indicates "a large percentage of voters have moved away, especially in Lubbock County," since the 1976 election.

Hickox attributed the good showing Reese made against George Mahon in 1976 to the fact that "thousands voted against Mr. Mahon for being in Washington too long" and had no other choice but Jim Reese.

"Well, the people now have a choice and in my analysis of this current election I'm the only Republican candidate for Congress that stands an excellent chance of defeating any Democrat opponent in November," Hickox said.

The major difference between him and his opponents, Hickox said, "is one of achievement. How did each of us get where we are today?" he asked.

"All my life I had to work, fight and climb uphill all the way. Many young men had money to go to college and avoid going to war," he said.

War Roles Questioned

Hickox questioned where Jim Reese was during the Korean War and where George Bush was during the Vietnam War, although he said "I am not making light of their service in the military.

"I just want to point out that when our country was at war, I chose to fight."

Hickox also said the candidates differed in "how each of us plan to try to help solve our nation's problems. Clearly we need to establish our priorities as a nation and summon the will to achieve our goals."

In another reference to Reese, he said problems aren't solved "by rattling cages, but by careful thought and analysis."

Asked which Republican candidate was the most conservative, Hickox said he was and added "Reese talks as a conservative, but is not a conservative."

Hickox also questioned the importance of the National Congressional Council which Reese co-chairs and often mentions. Hickox said his knowledge of the council was that it was "losers from 1976 who go to Washington once in a while to talk to Congressmen" and pick up information which would help them get elected.

The time would be better spent, Hickox said, talking to the residents of the district about their aspirations and desires."

Hickox mentioned his income tax return is being audited by the Internal Revenue Service and pledged to make the tax information public when the audit is completed.

Area Clouds Due To Hike Rain Chances were probably willing to endure the day's 85-degree high, only one mark off the date's record of 86 set in 1935.

Forecasters said mercury readings should rise into the middle 70s today and Friday, dropping to a low in the upper 30s tonight with the approach of a cold front that could trigger more showers.

Weathermen said the surface low pressure system and attached cold front in the Oklahoma Panhandle late Wednesday would gradually shift southeastward allowing cooler air to push into the region, increasing the chance for showers and clouds.

Through the weekend though, warm daytime temperatures are expected, with only a chance of showers on Sunday.

Wednesday heavy showers in the Rolling Plains area of Texas were accompanied by hail as large as ping pong balls in the first severe storm for spring. Hail was also noted in Baylor County, but damage was not severe.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted for many counties of North Texas as scattered thunderstorms developed due to daytime heating Wednesday. Rainfall, however was light, and there were no reports of significant turbulence.

Midland, Odessa, Wichita Falls, Childress, Del Rio and Wink shared an 89-degree high temperature, the nation's high reading Wednesday.

Good Friday Flag Lowering Banned

BOSTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled Wednesday that New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson may not lower state and federal flags on Good Friday unless the governor declares that it is a secular act.

Thomson issued a declaration last Tuesday that said the flags would be lowered to commemorate the death of Jesus Christ because "we appreciate the moral grandeur and strength of Christianity as the bulwark against the forces of destructive ideologies."

U.S. District Judge Walter Skinner ruled Wednesday the declaration must be withdrawn in the same manner it was made — at a press conference. And he said the flags may not be lowered unless the governor issues a new declaration placing the action in a secular rather than a religious context.

Skinner said Thomson's first declaration "clearly promotes the Christian religion."

Thomson said he plans to appeal Skinner's decision. The governor said Tuesday he was willing to take the issue to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Skinner was asked by five New Hampshire clergymen and the New Hampshire Civil Liberties Union to issue an injunction to prevent Thomson from lowering the flags.

Carter Ends Begin Talks

House could force Congress to deal with all the Mideast arms sales in one package. But he said Carter presented some "impelling logic" that Saudi Arabia would turn elsewhere if the U.S. deal is blocked.

Rep. Steven Solarz, D-N.Y., estimated the chances were at least 50-50 that F-15s for Saudi Arabia would be defeated. And Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., said he did not find Carter making "a very persuasive case."

A majority of the Senate Foreign Relations and House International Relations Committees have asked Carter to postpone the sales. Congress will have 30 days to veto the deals once they are submitted following next week's Easter recess.

Begin had breakfast with a group of senators at Blair House, the presidential guest quarters, and was quoted by Republican Clifford Case of New Jersey as being prepared to end Israel's military occupation of southern Lebanon.

State Trooper Ban For Aliens Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aliens have no constitutional right to be state troopers, a divided Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

Voting 6-3, the justices said states legally may prohibit aliens from holding state police jobs. The court's ruling came in a test case from New York, but most states have similar bans.

"The right to govern is reserved to citizens," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for the court.

Burger's opinion relied heavily on a Supreme Court decision upholding laws prohibiting any of the nearly 5 million aliens residing in the United States from holding "important non-elective executive, legislative and judicial positions."

While the court's ruling dealt only with state troopers, the constitutional rationale used appears to apply to county and city police officers as well.

"Police officers in the ranks do not formulate policy, but they are clothed with authority to exercise an almost infinite variety of discretionary powers," the court said.

"Police officers very clearly fall within the category of important non-elective ... officers who participate directly in the execution of broad public policy," Burger's opinion said.

While state troopers in one sense do participate in the execution of public policy, the dissenters said, "firefighters execute the public policy that fires should be extinguished, and sanitation workers execute the public policy that streets should be kept clean."

The same argument could be made for all state employees, and past court decisions have barred such blanket exclusions of aliens, they said.

For almost a century, aliens living in the United States have officially enjoyed most of the rights of citizens.

Supreme Court rulings in recent years have dealt harshly with state attempts to differentiate between citizens and aliens. Burger noted, however, that aliens do not have the right to vote or the right to seek elective office.

In other decisions Wednesday, the court ruled that:

— Judges do not prejudice jurors by giving the traditional warning that they should not infer guilt from a criminal defendant's failure to testify.

The vote was 6-2, with Marshall and Stevens charging that in some instances such warnings to jurors are "like telling them not to think of a white bear."

— Indians who face tribal punishment for a certain offense may be criminally prosecuted by the federal government for the same incident.

The Constitution's protection against double jeopardy — standing trial twice for the same crime — does not come into play, the court said, because an Indian tribe and the federal government are two separate sovereignties.

tract this Friday," said Ed MacLeod, a miner from Bellaire, Ohio.

"He is using this money as part of his plot to deny us a few votes in this election," said MacLeod, who spoke to reporters outside the UMW building.

A UMW spokesman, Paul Fortney, said the money the union has received is being distributed, but he didn't know how much had been released by top UMW officials.

The UMW has received $1 million from the steelworkers union, $2 million from the autoworkers, $1 million from the Communications Workers of America, and an estimated $500,000 from other unions.

At St. Charles, Va., on Tuesday, a brick-throwing incident led to a declaration of illegal assembly and dispersal of a crowd of about 50.

Japanese Warned Of Tidal Waves

TOKYO (AP) — A warning of possible tidal waves was issued early today for a good part of Japan's Pacific coast following two reports of earthquakes in the Pacific Ocean in less than 25 hours.

The central meteorological agency said the warning was for the Pacific coastal areas of the northernmost main island of Hokkaido, and the northern and central parts of Honshu, covering about 750 miles of coastline.

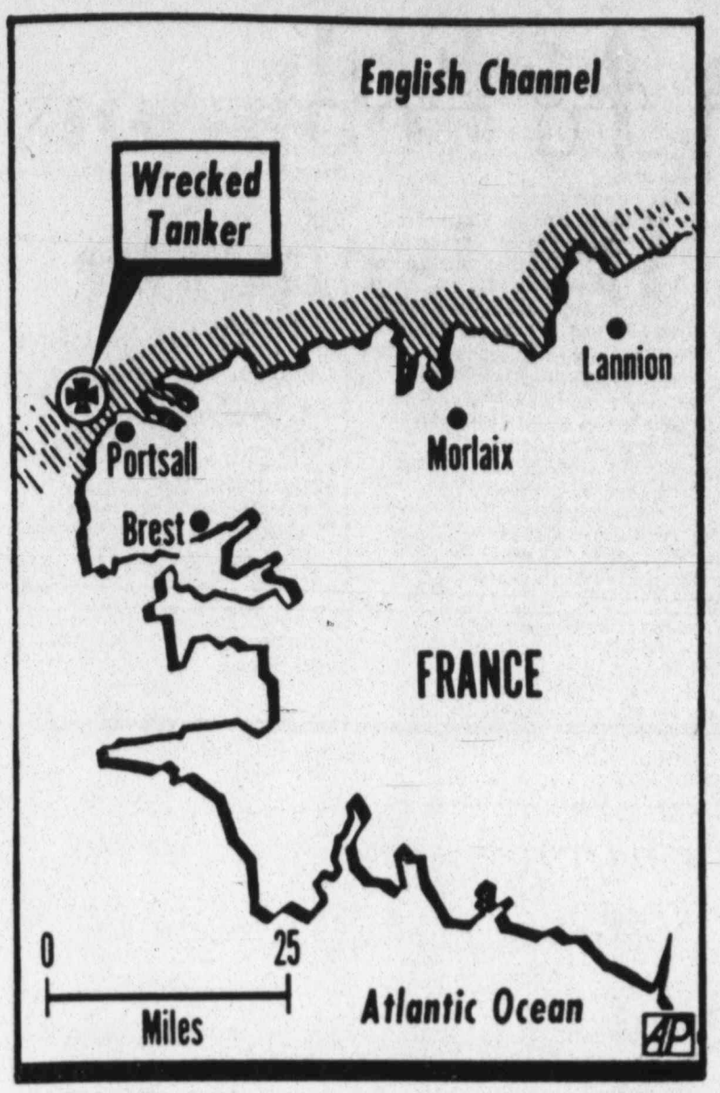

The warning was issued minutes after the latest of the two quakes occurred this morning in the Pacific in the general area of the first quake.

The Wednesday quake measured 6.8 on the Richter scale and the latest quake 7 — or twice as strong — the agency said.

Bird Sanctuary In Oil's Path

OIL SPILL — The shaded area locates the present position of oil spilled from the wrecked tanker Amoco Cadiz, Wednesday, off the coast of France. BREST, France (AP) — Oil from the wrecked American supertanker Amoco Cadiz reached a major island bird sanctuary 70 miles northeast of here Wednesday, menacing 25,000 penguins, gulls and rare birds.

Oil slicks washed the shores of the Sept Iles — Seven Islands — sanctuary where the birdlife is only now building up again after 80 percent was wiped out by oil spilling across the English Channel from the Torrey Canyon disaster 11 years ago.

A Navy spokesman at this French Atlantic port said the vessel, already causing the world's worst recorded oil spill, will dump its remaining cargo into the sea in peak tides by next weekend if predicted bad weather continues.

"The situation is desperate," said an Amoco official, who did not want to be identified.

Officially, attempts continued to set up an operation to pump out the 13 million to 18 million gallons still in the vessel's 15 tanks, all now open to the sea.

But there was an air of quiet desperation among officials here.

Since running aground on rocks a mile off Portsall harbor last Thursday night, the Amoco Cadiz has spilled at least 44 million gallons, with pollution now extending about 70 miles along the north Brittany shore.

The spill outstrips by at least 15 million gallons the Torrey Canyon pollution.

The French cabinet opened a $1 million credit as a preliminary indemnity to aid thousands of fishermen and others along the polluted coastline. The government said more funds would be decided on as damage assessment continued.

Storms continued to delay attempts to prepare for pumping. Experts have said even if the weather eased, it would take at least five days to start pumping.

Salvage specialists here admitted privately there seemed little or no hope of keeping the rest of the ship's 58 million gallon cargo from spilling.

No accurate estimate of the pollution damage has yet been made. Ecological experts from the United States and major European nations were meeting here to survey the situation.

Enviromentalists said it was already clear that shellfish, oyster and seaweed resources will be badly damaged.

They cannot yet say, however, how long it may take for stocks to recover.

Attempts to block two inlets where oysters famous throughout France are farmed have failed to hold back the oil, although some farmers managed to clear their beds ahead of the oil.

A survey of hotels along the affected coast showed few cancellations for Easter or summer vacations.

Curiosity about the wreck is so great that police have moved in reinforcements to keep out sightseeers where cleanup work is in progress.

Tourist officials said sightseers crammed the region after previous spills. They added that many regular tourists are from nearby areas and will not change their vacation habits.

The Navy spokesman, Cmdr. Francois Gillot, said the open sea pollution had disappeared through wave action and chemical spraying by 25 French and British boats.

Along the coast, a shipment of 35 special American floating pumps were helping clean harbors.

The system of weight used mainly for weighing precious metals such as silver and gold, known as troy weight, derives its name from the city of Troyes, on the Seine River in France.

Lengthy Prison Hostage Ordeal Ends

ST. JEROME, Quebec (AP) — The longest prison hostage drama in Canadian history ended Wednesday when three inmates who had been holding six persons in the basement of the provincial penitentiary here for two weeks surrendered to police.

The three convicts emerged from the four-story building looking relaxed and smiling. They were searched quickly and then put into a waiting van which took them to Montreal, 28 miles south.

The hostages, five prison guards and an assistant prison director, came out of the building soon after the convicts gave up. Eight prisoners who remained in the basement during the two weeks but did not take part in the incident were reported to be unharmed.

The three convicts had demanded safe passage to a country with no extradition treaty with Canada, $100,000 dollars and the transfer of several French-speaking prisoners outside the province to prisons in Quebec. None of the demands were agreed to during negotiations, officials said.

Lawyer Robert La Haye and police Capt. Michel Lavallee, two of the men most deeply involved in the negotiations with the prisoners, refused to reveal details of the negotiated settlement. La Haye said the prisoners would not receive immunity from prosecution.

Earlier Wednesday, the convicts had released two other prisoners not involved in the incident.

Two of the hostage-takers — Edgar Roussel and Roland Simard — are convicted murderers, and the third, Lucien Jacques, was serving time for robbery. Roussel had escaped from prison twice and had been involved in two other incidents where hostages were taken.

The hostage-taking began March 8 after an aborted escape attempt by the three prisoners.

U.S.-Soviet Relations Seen At Ebb

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet-American relations appear to have reached their lowest point in more than a year and many analysts feel the worst is yet to come unless both sides show new flexibility.

On issues ranging from the Horn of Africa to the neutron bomb, Soviets and Americans have clashed, and each side has publicly announced it is waiting for the other to change its stand.

Since each country wants it known that it will not give in to pressure from the other, analysts predict continuing tension that can only complicate other major issues between the countries, including human rights and the SALT talks.

The latest sign of tension was President Carter's speech last Friday at Wake Forest University, in which he called for a strong defense program and bluntly told the Soviet Union to exercise military restraint.

The Soviet news agency Tass responded with unaccustomed speed, branding the speech "alarming" and a sign that Carter was moving from a policy of detente to one of "threats and a build-up of tension."

Yet the Soviet Union, according to U.S. reports, is continuing its own arms buildup. The Pentagon has noted the deployment of new Soviet land-based missiles capable of hitting the United States and an increase in conventional weaponry.

U.S.-Soviet negotiations on a new SALT pact, which the Soviets call the "centerpiece of detente," remain delayed by essentially the same issues as a year ago. These include the development of new missiles, the counting of missiles in each country's arsenal and the capabilities of the Soviet backfire bomber.

Last year SALT appeared to be the major U.S.-Soviet issue, but the arms talks are now only a part of a much more complicated U.S.-Soviet faceoff.

Americans were angered by the appearance of Soviet advisers and Cuban troops in Ethiopia, even though they were invited by Ethiopia to repel an invasion by neighboring Somalia.

To Americans, the incident recalls the use of Cuban troops to back up the Marxist government in Angola and raises the prospect of the appearance of Cubans elsewhere in Africa, particularly in the south.

In his Wake Forest speech, Carter said that if the Soviets fail to show restraint in new arms programs and "the projection of Soviet proxy forces into other lands and continents," U.S. support for social, scientific and economic ties with Moscow may wane.

If the Soviets should call the American bluff by leaving Communist forces in Ethiopia and continuing an arms buildup, the United States may have to take retaliatory action to back up Carter's threat.

Similarly, the Soviets demand an end to plans for the proposed U.S. neutron bomb, which Soviet newspapers call the most dangerous development in the arms race since the hydrogen bomb.

The Soviets have publicly promised that if the bomb is deployed, the Kremlin will be forced to take "answering measures," presumably referring to production of their own neutron bomb.

In the field of human rights, the United States has made the upcoming trial of Anatoly Shcharansky, a 30-year-old Soviet dissident, a focal point of U.S.-Soviet relations.

The U.S. threatens retaliation in trade relations, SALT negotiations or other arenas if Shcharansky is tried and severely punished. Here, too, action by one superpower could force retaliatory moves by the other.

There are other tense areas as well.

In the Middle East the Soviets firmly oppose Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's negotiating initiatives with Israel. Washington supports the talks.

In southern Africa, the Soviet Union is accusing the United States and Britain of supporting — or even plotting — the compromise agreement that Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority regime has made for a gradual turnover of power to blacks.

The Soviets support an immediate transfer of power and support black guerrilla groups outside Rhodesia that hope to destroy Smith's government by force.

With all these side issues, some third-country diplomats here doubt that any early SALT agreement can be reached.

Only if Washington and Moscow are prepared to retreat on some other issues, the analysts believe, can major issues of strategic arms and human rights be settled.

DEATH SCENE — The twisted, still-smoldering wreckage of a bus and car in which 30 to 40 persons died, lies alongside a Mexican highway. The bus collided with another bus and a car, Tuesday night, some 48 miles southeast of Yuma, Ariz. Wreckage in the foreground is the front of the bus in the background, and some of the remains of the car are near the man standing at left. (AP Laserphoto)

Mexico Bus Crash Kills Dozens

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Two passenger buses on Mexico's Highway 2 collided head on and burned, enveloping a small car in the flaming wreckage, and as many as 30 persons were killed, authorities said.

Scores more were injured in the Tuesday night wreck. Exact figures were unavailable because bodies ripped apart by the impact were still being assembled and identified at the site, 23 miles east of the border town of San Luis.

The San Diego Tribune quoted Carlos Quiros, commandant of the Mexican Red Cross in San Luis, as saying, "We have 30 bodies. Forty-six bodies were pulled from the wreckage."

San Luis police said many of the victims burned to death in the fire that erupted after the crash.

"There was so much wreckage it was unreal," said Loren Liftiak, a reporter for the Yuma Sun, who reached the scene today. "One bus was a double-decker. Its front was bent at a 75-degree angle. The buses were just twisted hulks. All the windows were popped out from the fire or impact. There weren't really any big pieces of glass left."

The Tribune said five Mexican nationals living in Los Angeles were among the dead. The only U.S. citizens known to be involved were treated at a Yuma hospital and released. An English couple, David and Fiona Rookaid of Middlesex, also were treated in Yuma.

Liftiak said that police at the scene told him it appeared that one bus was trying to pass a car when it smashed head on into an oncoming bus.

"The little car was sandwiched between them and just ripped apart," Liftiak said.

There was no indication how many persons were in the car.

Liftiak said the Santa Elina funeral home told him there were 20 confirmed dead and the count would probably rise after the bus debris was cleared and parts of bodies assembled.

Tony Romero, a Mexican immigration official, also said there were 20 confirmed dead and the toll undoubtedly would go higher.

He said the double-decker bus was from Tijuana, and the other from Guadalajara.

U.S. Customs agents at the San Luis Port of Entry said Mexican authorities told them that the accident occurred about 8 p.m. Tuesday and involved two buses carrying 81 persons.

Fourteen of the injured were taken to Yuma Regional Medical Center. A nursing supervisor, who asked that her name not be used, said four adults and one child were admitted with burns, one burn victim was airlifted to a Tucson hospital and four others were to be airlifted to a Phoenix hospital.

Hospital authorities here said John Russell, who said he was from Connecticut, and Kurt West, who gave his state as Oregon, left after being treated.

They were the first U.S. residents reported involved in the wreck. It was not known in which vehicle they were riding.

Anti-Poverty Agency Directorship Changes

EDINBURG (AP) — A troubled South Texas anti-poverty agency has as its new acting director a man who was to have been fired in an economy move by his predecessor.

Luis Ramirez, a former deputy director, was chosen to replace acting director Frank Castellanos. In taking the post recently Castellanos had said he would lead an austerity drive that would include firing Ramirez and another top official.

Board members of the Associated City County Economic Development Corp. announced the change after an executive session late Tuesday.

SIGNATURE VALIDATED

HOUSTON (UPI) — Lawyers defending the 1968 will of socialite Joan Robinson Hill Wednesday were unable to shake a handwriting expert from her finding that Mrs. Hills signature on the document is not authentic. Lucille Lacey testified she had examined 2,000 signatures by Mrs. Hill before reaching her conclusion. The will left Mrs. Hill's estate to her father, oilman Ash Robinson, rather than her husband or son.

Convicted Slayer Wins New Trial

AUSTIN (AP) — An ex-Amarillo policeman sentenced to death in the slaying of a former legislator's 16-year-old daughter won the right to a new trial Wednesday.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed Jimmy Paul Vanderbilt's conviction and said he should have been allowed to present evidence on whether his oral confession was voluntary.

Vanderbilt was convicted in the April 1, 1975, fatal shooting of Katina Moyer, daughter of former Rep. Hudson Moyer, D-Amarillo. Miss Moyer was abducted at gunpoint from an Amarillo high school, taken outside the city limits and shot in the head.

Vanderbilt, then an Amarillo police officer, was arrested 10 days later as he left the city police academy.

The defendant claimed prosecutors told the jury they tried to extract a written confession from Vanderbilt by offering not to ask for the death penalty in the case.

The state said the agreement was withdrawn and Vanderbilt made an oral confession, which was used as evidence.

Vanderbilt said he later signed a written confession, which was not used as evidence, but which said the state would not ask for the death penalty.

The criminal appeals court found "reversible error," because "a defendant is allowed the opportunity to present evidence to the jury on the issue of the voluntariness of the confession which the state has introduced at the trial against him."

In another case, the court said an indictment charging robbery against a Hunt County man was not specific enough. The court reversed the conviction of Joe Ben Canady, who was sentenced to 45 years in prison.

The indictment against Canady said "corporeal personal property" was taken from Pauline Taylor.

"We find the property description in the instant indictment so deficient as to be no description and hold the indictment fundamentally defective," the appeals court said.

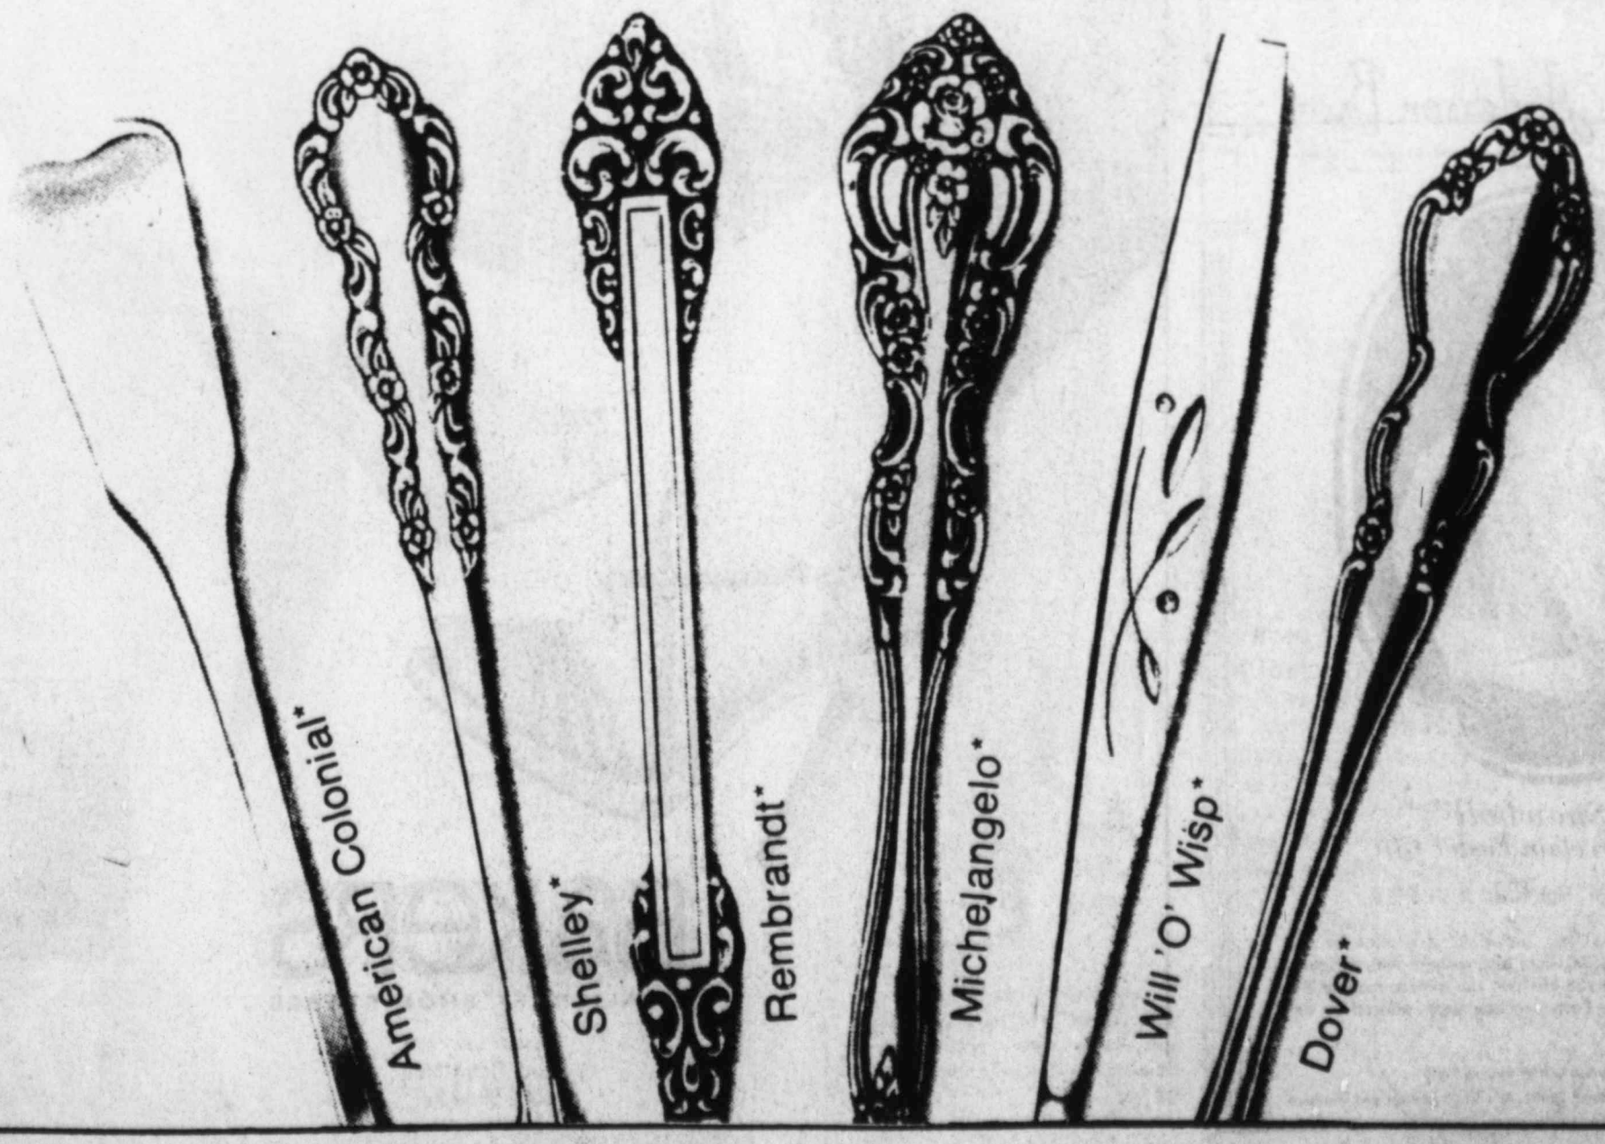

In a dissenting opinion, Judges Jim Vollers and Leon Douglas said the phrase "corporeal personal property" was sufficient.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

On rainy days when my children get bored with "nothing to do," they love to play with homemade play dough.

I have a recipe that I like much better than the salt-based play dough as it makes a smoother finished product. I would like to share this recipe with other mothers:

Stir together in a pan, two cups of baking soda and one cup of corn starch. Add one and one-fourth cups of cold water. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until it reaches the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Empty the mixture onto a plate and cover with a damp cloth. When cool, place on a flat surface that has been dusted with corn starch.

Knead until smooth and pliable.

Place the clay on waxed paper and roll out to one-fourth inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutters.

To make colored clay, add food coloring to the water before cooking.

For bright colors, allow molded pieces to harden and dry. Then paint with water colors or poster paints. Clear nail polish or a coat of clear shellac preserves the colors.

Our whole family enjoys making funny gifts from this homemade clay and at Christmas we all have fun making tree ornaments and other decorations.

Just slip a piece of wire into the top of the ornaments so they can be hung on the tree. -Dee S.

Mothers, this is a fantabulous recipe to clip and save for future reference.

The long, hot summer vacation is just around the corner and the kiddies will be desperate for entertainment.

So give this a try. The kiddies will love you for taking the time to make the clay for them. -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Please, please help me.

Someone told me I should dust my furniture. I've looked in every story in town and can't find furniture dust.

Where can I get it? -Bob Sutton

Bob, I'm sure you already have it -for free.

Just give your furniture a good looking over and I'm sure you will find it... Oh, our English language! -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Some time ago I read of the lady who used artificial snakes to keep birds out of her garden and bushes.

I know this works as I tried it on a bush. I laid several on top of the branches near the berries. It fooled the birds.

Another trick I found to work. When little plants are just coming through the soil, especially corn, take strips of old nylon stockings or pantyhose and lay them in a twisted fashion between the rows, about two or three feet apart.

They look amazingly like snakes and the birds promptly lose their taste for the tender greens. -Mrs. Francis Campbell

DEAR HELOISE:

I always read and use ideas from your column so would like to share a hint of mine.

Our grandchildren always look forward to a big sack of popcorn balls from grandma.

They are impossible to buy but easy to make if you butter the inside of a dinner cup, dip the cup in the coated popcorn, press lightly, give a sharp twist to the popcorn and you have a uniform ball in a second.

I put these in plastic sandwich bags, drop them in the freezer and they are ready for when my grandchildren come to visit. -Mrs. A.G.

BY OSWALD JACOBY AND ALAN SONTAG

North had a mighty good hand and felt that he was fully strong enough to double a second time after East had raised one diamond to two.

This repeated double led to a jump to three spades by South. Not that a king and a jack is much of a hand, but rather that his five spades and four hearts looked like money from home.

North should really have signed off at four spades. It was most unlikely that South would hold the king of spades and an ace and even if he did the slam would probably depend on a finesse.

The cue bid didn't excite South. He simply went to four spades and was happy when North passed.

Not that he didn't make an overtrick. There were any number of ways to play the hand and as long as South didn't try the club finesse and did draw trumps fairly early in life, he could ruff two diamonds and just lose to the two red aces.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Whenever I visit my sister's house, I come away depressed. Her only child is a 14-year-old boy. He is constantly on top of her, playfully poking and touching her backside or circling her waist with his hands. When she is seated he rushes to sit beside her and lays his head in her lap.

He hangs around whenever she entertains women friends — loves to be in on adult conversations, sometimes adding things on his own, as if he were one of the group.

My sister obviously sees nothing wrong in his behavior and her husband never says anything.

Maybe I'm crazy, but this does not look like a normal relationship to me. What can I do? — Fear For The Future

Dear F.F.T.F.: If you are asking me whether or not you should talk to your sister or her husband, the answer is no. Parental myopia is rarely cured by a close relative.

If the boy is as feminine and motherhung as it sounds, the child's teacher must see signs of this behavior at school. Perhaps you could quietly ask her to suggest counseling for the boy. Please make the attempt. That poor kid needs help.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have always had a good relationship. We are the parents of two lovely young children. No problems till last year when Art got himself a CB for his car. He was like a kid with a new toy — completely wrapped up in it. Next thing I knew he was invited to a get-together. (They call it an "eyeball.") Just a bunch of guys with a common interest is the way Art put it.

These "eyeball" parties turned out to be weekly events at which they traded dirty literature with instructions on how to turn it into CB lingo.

Last week I got into my car and followed Art to his weekly "meeting." I waited outside for about 20 minutes and then walked in and introduced myself. There were several women present. My husband was so embarrassed he would like to have died on the spot. We left together shortly after.

Now Art is mad at me for tailing him and humiliating him in front of his CB buddies. I say he has no right going anyplace he would be ashamed to be seen. Things have not been too cozy at our house lately. Any suggestions? — Over And Out

Dear O and O: You owe each other an apology. You should not have trailed Art and he should not have gone to that dive — more than once. I hope this settles it. Now kiss and make up already.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 11 years old and this is my first time to write to you. My mother punishes me when I tell a lie, but nobody punishes her when she tells one. Like when she does not want to talk on the phone she makes me tell whoever is calling that she is not home.

Is this lying? Mom says it is exaggerating. Who is right? — Mollie

Dear Mollie: Anything that is not the truth is a lie. Ask your mom if you can ask people who call when she is busy to please call back. Offer to take the caller's name and number and then be sure to get it right, honey.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I remember a few years ago you wrote something in your column, and I remember my mother chuckling about it. You said "old stretchmarks never die, but just fade away." OK, here I am with stretchmarks after my first pregancy. How long before they "fade away"? And what causes them anyway? One would think they would disappear as soon as one lost the weight that caused them. — M.V.

I'm afraid there's no reason to reword that old refrain. What you have to understand about stretchmarks is that they are not necessarily caused by fatness, although that certainly is a prime cause. The stretching is just that, and it can result from the bulging of pregnancy. The marks are truly linear breaks in skin tissue (not merely folds, as some may think).

They are usually an unsightly blue at first, a nice flesh pinkish hue, and finally, if you're fortunate, a nice flesh color hardly distinguishable from surrounding skin. Color fades in six months to a year but faint scars remains.

Unfortunately, some stretchmarks don't always fade so gracefully. Some, alas, may never "fade away". Depends on the amount of break in underlying skin tissue.

Creams and lotions won't help one bit except for those that mask the marks. The process may be speeded up by good exercise that can improve skin tone generally.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told there is a medicine one takes orally to rid oneself of thickened nails. Is there such a thing, and what is it? Is it effective? — N.G.

I believe the medicine you refer to is griseofulvin (not a trade name). It is an oral anti-fungus medicine. If the nails are infected with fungus, the medicine is often effective. There can be many undesired reactions from its use, so a person taking it must have continuing supervision. Nails thicken with age normally. If there is no infection, there is no medicine to reduce the thickening.

If you are having nail troubles, I suggest you read my booklet on nails (finger and toe) for some possible avenues to investigate beyond fungus. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My 7-year-old grandson started out a few months ago with what the doctor thought was flu. Since then he has had a temperature of from 101 to 101.8 every day when he is up and active. He was on antibiotics, but that was stopped because it didn't reduce it. He has developed lymph nodes in his groin, which are getting larger. Also, he has smaller ones in the neck on both sides. To see him play he seems a healthy child.

He has had extensive blood tests, and all reports have been negative. I've been told that some children just run higher temperatures than others. We are very worried. Can you suggest anything? — T.H.

Temperature may go up normally with increased activity, but not as high as this. What concerns me are the nodes. It is impossible to make any suggestions except that a biopsy of one of the nodes be done. This will define the nature of the node enlargement — whether an infection, a lymph node disorder, or leukemia.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that the sight and smell of food actually starts stomach juices flowing? If so, how? — A.H.

This is correct, but add taste to that list of stimulants. The vagus nerve transmits these stimuli to the stomach to begin the process of digestion. In fact, vagotomy (severing of the vagus nerve) is sometimes used to limit gastric secretions for persons with stubborn gastric (stomach) ulcer. This is done only in selected cases.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had burning of the mouth and lips. The doctor says I have high blood sugar and has placed me on a diabetic diet. Would high sugar cause thse symptoms? — M.S.

There are several possible causes. Diabetes is one of them. Follow the diet carefully. When you get your sugar level down, you should notice considerable improvement.

Julianne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Raines, went through 61 rounds of competition before eliminating Sam Gladdon, a fourth grader at Moss Elementary.

Nuclear Weapons Acquisition By Japan Forecast

By ROGER GALE
Pacific News Service

TOKYO — Much of the world awaits Japan's threatened military resurgence in the same way people look forward to fires: with a mixture of fear and fascination. But the real danger probably is not a putsch by a small clique of militarists. Instead it is the government's commitment to developing an independent nuclear energy program which as a by-product could soon produce hundreds of plutonium bombs a year.

Two U.S. government reports recently made public conclude that there is a genuine chance of Japan acquiring nuclear weapons in the 1980s.

U.S. Navy and Air Force intelligence officials are quoted in one of the reports as seeing a "strong chance that Japan's leaders will conclude that they must have nuclear weapons if they are to achieve their nation's objectives in the developing Asian power balance."

A second report made for the Pentagon by the Stanford Research Institute concludes that one option might be for the United States to provide "active cooperation and assistance ... to prevent Japan from moving away from the U.S."

The Japanese government itself emphatically denied any intention to build nuclear weapons. Foreign Minister Sunai Sonoda reiterated only weeks ago that the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty prohibits Japan from acquiring nuclear weapons. Other influential policy analysts are even more emphatic in their opposition to any nuclear development.

"We're vulnerable and we know it," argues Makoto Momoi, a prominent professor at the National Defense College in Tokyo. "Acquiring nuclear weapons only increases Japan's chances of being obliterated. Without weapons of that sort, Japan need not be a target for anyone else's either."

If Momoi and even the foreign minister seem uncommonly adamant in their opposition to Japanese development of nuclear weapons, the fears of future H-bomb arsenals may seem all the more puzzling. But Marvin Duke, the defense attache in the U.S. Embassy, says that the reason for their anti-nuclear hard line is that they must counter a strong inclination among many of Japan's top military men toward nuclear weapons as an image builder for a nation no longer secure that the U.S. will always come to its rescue.

Regardless of her leaders' intentions, Japan already is quite capable of building crude heavy nuclear weapons on short notice — perhaps in six months. Building an armada of sophisticated, compact and reliable weapons could take up to 10 years.

Besides official U.S. military analyses, a new report issued by the Ford Foundation estimates that by 1985 Japan could build about 300 plutonium bombs a year from the spent fuel accumulated in its light water reactors — all built with American and British assistance.

By 1990 the Ministry of International Trade and Industry projects that 60,000 megawatts of electricity will be generated in nuclear plants. If those projections are met, Japan could build as many as 1,000 bombs a year.

Japan now has capacity to produce 7,994 megawatts of electricity through nuclear reactors, the second-largest capacity in the world. Plans for new reactors have been delayed by local opposition groups, but the government and utilities still are intent on making nuclear energy the single largest source of power in Japan by the year 2000.

The irony in the American suspicion over Japan's nuclear intentions lies in the fact that the United States has supplied most of the essential technology. The U.S. sold Japan 13 of its 14 operating power reactors plus another 13 now under construction. The U.S. also has sold Japan a number of weapons systems designed, among other things, to deliver nuclear weapons that could be used to hit enemy submarines, to mine harbors and channels or to knock out coastal bases in either the USSR or China.

Estimates of how much it would cost Japan to build a nuclear force depend on many factors. Excluding research and development, Ryukichi Imai of the Japan Atomic Power Co. says it could be done for about $4 billion a year over 10 years. The government already spends well over $1 billion a year on nuclear R and D. The 1,000 megawatt reactors now being built, each of which carries a $1 billion price tag, are not ideal for producing bomb-grade plutonium but at normal output they can manufacture about 200 kilograms of plutonium a year, enough for about 20 bombs.

Scenarios abound about what Japan could gain or risk by acquiring nuclear arms. Whether Japan ever takes action will depend on how much credibility the U.S. retains in Japanes eyes — and on what Taiwan and South Korea achieve in their campaigns to develop nuclear capability.

It also depends on what the people of Japan say about their country's military policy. A Japanese Defense Agency official says bluntly, "we have to hope people don't find out what is going on." He says that not because there are secret doings — there is no evidence that any clandestine bomb research or development is being conducted — but because a sense of growing insecurity in policy-making circles could be catching and lead to an alarmist response.

Economic Power Japan Buys Military Hardware

By JOHN MARKOFF
Pacific News Service

Japan, now the world's third most powerful economic power, is again on the threshold of becoming a major military power.

Already, according to one U.S. Army specialist on Asia, Col. Wilfred Ebel, the Japanese Army "commands more firepower than did the Imperial Army of World War II."

The Japanese National Defense Council's recent decision to buy $4.57 billion in arms from the United States will establish the Japanese Self Defense Forces as one of the largest military powers in the Pacific.

Prodded by American policy makers who are anxious to scale down expensive U.S. military outposts in Asia, Japan will spend $7.9 billion on defense this year. The amount gives Japan the second largest military budget in Asia — and the tenth-largest and fastest-growing military budget in the world.

Military spending in Japan has increased 1,200 percent since 1961 and 400 percent since 1970. It is still increasing by about 15 percent each year, even though the money is not spent on such "big ticket" items as bombers, aircraft carriers or nuclear weapons.

American congressional and business leaders often argue that Japan's giant economic strides have been made under the protection of the U.S. "nuclear umbrella" and want Japan to carry more of the burden for the Western military alliance in Asia.

Admiral Noel Gaylor, the commander in chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific from 1972 to 1976, called the Japanese-American defense alliance "a complementary security relationship in which each partner contributes that which it best can to the common security of Northeast Asia." Gaylor pressed for expanded Japanese participation in anti-submarine warfare and air defense.

The new multi-billion-dollar purchase of 123 McDonnell-Douglas F-15 fighter bombers and 43 Lockheed P-3C Orion anti-submarine warfare planes from the U.S., will allow the Japanese to project offensive military power deeper into the Asian continent and for the first time to contest the influence of the growing Soviet Navy in the Pacific. Since plans now call for building most of the planes in Japan, the sales agreement will also help fuel the growing Japanese defense industry.

U.S. troop strength in Asia and the Western Pacific now stands at 134,000, down from 466,000 in 1970. The Japanese Self-Defense Agency is projecting that there will be no U.S. ground forces in the region by the 1980s.

Even now the Japanese Ground Self-Defense Forces (army) can field 12 infantry divisions and one mechanized division, an army of more than 150,000 men. However, defense experts note that the Japanese army is heavily over-officered. With 23,700 officers, 74,700 non-commissioned officers and only 56,000 lower-ranking personnel, there is potential for rapid expansion as strategy changes.

Rearmament of Japan began during the Korean War at the insistence of the United States, Col. Ebel wrote in a recent issue of NATIONAL DEFENSE, thereby ending any possibility that Japan might have become "an unarmed neutral Switzerland of the Pacific."

As early as the start of the Cold War, U.S. military commanders noted in the PENTAGON PAPERS that the "orientation of Japan toward the West is the keystone to U.S. policy in the Far East."

In the event of a new Korean War, Japanese military forces are deployed so that they will be able to defend U.S. bases in Japan and Okinawa. Japanese forces will also have the responsibility of controlling the waters around the Korean Peninsula, particularly the strategic Tsushima Straits, where the Japanese have already set up a submarine monitoring net to keep track of Soviet submarines that regularly pass between Korea and Japan on their way into the Pacific.

American military planners view Japan as an anti-submarine barrier to the Soviet Navy, which has its major Pacific home ports along the rim of the Sea of Japan.

The Soviet naval presence in the Pacific has grown dramatically and is known to concern both American military leaders and the Japanese, who believe that their ocean approaches, vital for economic survival, may be threatened by the Soviet Navy.

Yet renewed plans by the Japanese Defense Agency to purchase the Lockheed P-30 Orion anti-submarine warfare plane is certain to reignite the public furor that shook the Japanese government to its foundation in 1976 in the wake of the Lockheed payoff scandal.

The F-15, the second plane in the proposed arms deal, will add powerful offensive capability to the Japanese Air Self-Defense Force (air force). The F-15 is a multi-purpose fighter-bomber, which has just begun to enter the U.S. Air Force inventory. The new plane, designed for both air superiority and bombing missions, would easily allow the Japanese air force to reach targets in Korea, China and Russia.

Dawson Road Work Bids Being Sought

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Bids will be taken by the Department of Highways and Public Transportation April 20 on projects in Baylor and Dawson counties.

In Baylor County, an estimated $253,828.20 in grading, structures, base and paving work will be performed on 3.897 miles of FM 2180, from Texas 114 at 4.5 miles southeast of Seymour, east to the junction of FM 1790.

The project will take an estimated 100 working days. Project engineer is Arnold W. Oliver, Graham.

Similar work will be carried out in Dawson County on 5.398 miles of FM 2052, from FM 829, three miles south of U.S. 180, northeast to Texas 349.

Famed Aerialist Karl Wallenda Falls To Death From High Wire

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Karl Wallenda, who cheated death for more than half a century on the high wire, was killed Wednesday when he fell during a promotional appearance for a circus in which he was performing with his granddaughter.

Wallenda, 73, consistently refused to give up performing, despite accidents through the years which killed four members of his family and left his son paralyzed from the waist down.

"I feel better up there than I do down here. It is my whole life," he once said.

Wallenda, who first walked the wire in 1920, always vowed that the Great Wallendas would go on and his nephew repeated that vow on Wednesday. "The act will continue, even without Karl," said Gunther Wallenda at his home in Sarasota, Fla.

Gunther himself retired after two members of the troupe were killed and three others, including Wallenda, were injured when their famed seven-member pyramid collapsed in an appearance in Detroit on Jan 30, 1962.

Wednesday's accident occurred while Wallenda was walking, through strong winds, on a wire stretched 10 stories high between the towers of a beachfront hotel in a promotion for the Pan American circus.

Wallenda fell an estimated 120 feet to the driveway of the Condado Holiday Inn Hotel before hundreds of spectators. He died in San Juan's Presbyterian Hospital at 9:20 a.m. CST, soon after the fall.

"The people who work with Wallenda in the act ran around in a panic, screaming 'Oh my God, oh my God,'" said Gary Williams, a newspaper photographer. "Everybody was hysterical. People were fainting, collapsing on the ground."

Another witness, Victor Abboud, an accountant from Montreal, said: "I saw him go down on his knees on the wire and I thought he was kneeling to rest. But then I saw he was shaking. The winds blew him off and he went all the way down, head first."

Williams said that Wallenda, balancing pole in hand, was leaning into the wind as he inched his way across the wire. "His balance pole was going up and down. One of the people who work with him in the act was watching from the roof. He yelled: 'Sit down, sit down.' But he missed the wire and went down."

James B. Harrington, the manager of the Pan American circus, was asked if Wallenda were worried about the wind. "No, he thought it was fine," said Harrington. "He tested and installed the wire himself."

In Sarasota, where Wallenda lived and where circuses and their stars spend the winter, there were expressions of grief.

"As a high-wire walker there was none better," said Emmett Kelly, the sad-faced clown who was one of Wallenda's closest friends. "He shouldn't have left the country to walk the wire. Maybe I shouldn't be critical. But I think he should have left this to younger people. Maybe he shouldn't have been walking the wire at his age."

Wallenda's niece, Sandy Wallenda, said: "I guess that's where he would have wanted to go. He would never have been happy (not performing). He would have kept walking all his life. He couldn't stop."

Wallenda, who was born in Germany and came to the United States in the 1920s, was performing nightly in San Juan on a 50-foot-high wire with his granddaughter, Rietta.

His best-known — and most dangerous — act was the three-level pyramid. The bottom level consisted of four men, linked, two each, by shoulder bars. Two more men stood on the shoulder bars and a woman stood on a chair balanced on a pole supported by those on the second level.

"We had close calls many times, but never any serious injury until the pyramid," Wallenda's brother, Herman, once said.

The 1962 accident killed Wallenda's nephew, Dieter Schepp, and Richard Faughnan, the son of Wallenda's first wife's brother. Wallenda's adopted son, Mario, then 22, was paralyzed. Wallenda saved himself by hanging by his legs from the wire; he also caught his niece, Christiana Schepp, 17. Wallenda was hospitalized with pelvic injuries and Christiana suffered a brain concussion.

Schepp was making his first appearance with the act; it was his missed step that caused the pyramid to fall. Wallenda had brought Dieter and Christiana and their mother from East Germany. "I do not feel guilty," he said, "but they are on my conscience. I got them to America and promised them a good life. I taught the boy and girl. I told them there was nothing to fear."

In April 1963, Wallenda's sister-in-law Yetta Grotofent who was appearing in a separate pole-balancing act in Omaha, died when she tumbled backward and fell.

The pyramid act was performed only once more after the Detroit accident — in Fort Worth in November 1963 — after which Wallenda removed it from his troupe's repertoire, fulfilling a promise to his wife Helen. Mrs. Wallenda was with her husband in San Juan, but was not performing. She retired from the act in 1957; Herman Wallenda retired in 1963.

Although the formal name of their troupe was the Great Wallendas, they were frequently referred to as the Flying Wallendas, a name which annoyed Wallenda who pointed out that flying is done by trapeze artists.

The family tradition of performing goes back to 18th century Austria-Hungary, where the great-grandfather of Karl Wallenda led a group of itinerant street tumblers and jugglers. Karl's father was a catcher in a flying act.

In 1972, shortly after his son-in-law, Richard Guzman, 29, was killed in a fall in Wheeling, W. Va., Wallenda said: "Our life is show business. Without show business we don't survive and we have to exist." Wallenda, then 67, was back on the wire less than 24 hours after he watched Guzman fall.

Photographer Gives Account Of Plunge

(EDITORS NOTE: Gary Williams, a photographer for El Nuevo Dia, a San Juan newspaper, was at the scene when Karl Wallenda fell 10 stories to his death Wednesday during a promotional appearance for a circus. Wallenda was walking a wire stretched between two hotels when he fell. This is Williams' account of what happened.)

By GARY WILLIAMS
For The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — I had gone to the beach with my wife and the kids and just barely made it to the hotel before he (Wallenda) stepped onto the wire.

I got up to the top floor just as he was taking his first step. He was walking toward me from the hotel annex on the other side of the street.

He started out pretty well and moved along the wire very gracefully. The wind started to pick up a bit and he handled it very well. Then he started leaning into the wind.

It was really windy out there. He was leaning forward at about a 45 degree angle into the wind, which was blowing at him from where I was standing.

He started to lose it when he was more than halfway across. The balance pole started going up and down, up and down, like a see-saw. People on the ledge where I was started yelling at him, "Sit down, sit down."

He started down very easily. But he was leaning forward at this 45 degree angle and I didn't see how he could do it.

He grabbed the wire with his right hand as he was sitting briefly on the wire. Only his rear end and his hand were on the wire. His feet were in mid air.

And then he fell. He just couldn't hold it.

He tumbled a bit as he fell. He was holding the pole in his left hand and about halfway down he grabbed the pole with his other hand. He just held onto the pole as if it could do him some good.

He hit a taxi or something. I didn't see him hit. The ledge or something cut off my vision about 10 feet from the ground.

Fort Worth Stage Hand Recalls Near Tragedy

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Aerialist Karl Wallenda plummeted to his death Thursday in Puerto Rico, but a stagehand here remembers tragedy almost struck 14 years earlier at the Flying Wallendas comeback performance.

In 1963, the troupe was practicing at Will Rogers Coliseum in Fort Worth for its first appearance since the seven-man pyramid had fatally collapsed 18 months before in Detroit.

The Wallendas were in the air when the lights went out, and Joe Goodwin, now at Tarrant County Convention Center, was working backstage.

Goodwin said an electrician changing switchboards caused the short blackout.

"Well, they hollered," he said. "The Wallendas were upset quite a bit, which I can understand. It shook them up real good."

Wallenda Tradition Continues

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Karl Wallenda's nephew — who now calls himself the last of the performing Wallendas — was on the high wire Wednesday three hours after learning his 73-year-old uncle had fallen to his death.

"I'm a Wallenda and Wallendas will always come through," said Estephan Wallenda, 28, moments before performing on the cables of an aerial tramway at the Oakland Zoo.

Karl Wallenda died Wednesday when he fell 120 feet from a wire stretched between the towers of a hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Estephan Wallenda walked about 1,200 feet on a cable about 75 feet above the ground at the Jungle Lift Tramway at the zoo — a stunt he has performed daily this week as a promotional stunt.

He also has walked the cables of the Oakland-San Francisco Bay Bridge.

"This my life, this is my world, this is what I've been trained to do," said Wallenda, a resident of Concord, Calif.

His father, Herman, retired from the high wire in 1963, the year after the family's famous pyramid act led to a fall in Detroit that left two Wallendas dead and a third paralyzed.

Estephan Wallenda said his three small children were learning high wire acrobatics on a backyard rigging strung three feet above the ground.

"I've got to keep going," Wallenda said. "We've been entertainers in this family for 200 years."

PAINTING REJECTED — Famed artist Gardner Cox of Boston stands next to a portrait of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Wednesday, rejected on grounds it is not dynamic enough. Kissinger Portrait Rejected As 'Not Dynamic Enough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has rejected a portrait of former Secretary Henry Kissinger on grounds it is not dynamic enough. It said another portraitist will be commissioned.

The rejected painting was done by the famed Gardner Cox of Boston. He said he was told Kissinger and his wife didn't like the portrait which was to have hung in the department's elegant seventh-floor reception rooms.

"It was beautifully painted, but did not seem to capture the dynamism of Dr. Kissinger," said Clement Conger, the department's curator of furnishings and pictures.

Cox, one of the country's leading portraitists, did portraits of former Secretaries of State Dean Rusk and the late Dean Acheson.

Another department official said the portrait of Kissinger, with his hand outstretched, "made him look something like a dwarf" and "looked more like a rogues gallery thing ... it didn't capture any of the radiance."

Kissinger himself declined to comment.

The portrait, which if accepted would have earned Cox $12,000 and expenses, has been returned to the artist and is for sale.

Cox, who will have his expenses reimbursed, said the State Department rejection was "cordial" and had "no bitterness."

Cox said he had been offered the opportunity to spend more time on the project, but that his schedule didn't permit it. And, of course, he liked the portrait the way it was or he wouldn't have painted it that way, Cox said.

Throughout history, many public figures — among them Winston Churchill and Lyndon B. Johnson — have been displeased with portraits of them done for official purposes. So have many wealthy persons who have commissioned their own.

"You know how sometimes you do not like a photograph of yourself," Conger said. "Nothing against the photographer. I almost never like any of myself. It's the same way with oil portraits."

Cox agreed:

He said he was not upset by the rejection. "It happens now and then, but not very often to me."

Energy Conferees Agree On Compromise Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-Senate energy conferees agreed Wednesday to back a compromise on President Carter's energy plan that would lift price controls from natural gas in 1985, but they differed on some details.

Breaking a stalemate that has existed since before Christmas, Senate conferees, on a 10-7 vote, formally approved a compromise to decontrol newly discovered natural gas after Jan. 1, 1985.

House conferees, in turn, agreed to accept the basic approach of the Senate proposal but voted 13-12 to submit a counter-offer. The House proposal calls for deregulation by July 1, 1985.

Besides lifting price controls later, the House plan would allow the president or Congress to reimpose price lids immediately if necessary and make smaller quantities of gas available for deregulation.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., leader of the Senate conferees, said the Senate proposal "does resolve the major issues and move our negotiations off dead-center."

The Senate conferees' inability to agree among themselves earlier on deregulation was the main reason that Carter's energy bill has been stalled for several months.

However, House conferees refused to fully endorse the Senate proposal as Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., called the plan "seriously flawed by several fundamental inconsistencies."

Dingell said the Senate bill would allow either the president or Congress to reimpose price controls after deregulation but only after waiting six months.

The congressional conference committee working on Carter's energy legislation met publicly Wednesday for the first time since Dec. 22 when a previous attempt to reach a gas-pricing compromise collapsed.

After the back-to-back votes, the conference committee recessed until after the 10-day congressional Easter recess. Conference leaders said the remaining differences between the two sides would be ironed out when the panel returns.

Even if conferees do reach a final agreement on natural gas pricing — and leaders say that is now likely — the negotiators still must agree on Carter's proposed crude oil tax, which faces heavy Senate opposition.

Originally, the House passed Carter's plan to keep price controls on natural gas at higher-than-present levels while the Senate voted for deregulation after two years. Natural gas flowing in interstate price lines is now regulated at $1.48 per thousand cubic feet.

Both the House and Senate compromise proposals would raise this level immediately to about $1.88, extend price controls to the now unregulated markets in gas producing states for the duration of the controls and permit a steady increase in gas prices between now and 1985.

Carter has endorsed the concept of phased deregulation contained in both House and Senate comrpomise proposals.

Jackson said the Senate proposal would cost consumers between $15.6 billion and $17.1 billion more than the original administration plan. The House plan would have produced similar increases as the administration bill.

Leaders on both sides of the conference said they expected the ultimate compromise would lie somewhere between the two versions.

"There must be give and take," said Rep. Harley Staggers, R-W.Va., leader of the House conferees.

Both House and Senate proposals were attacked by conservatives as not going far enough for full deregulation and by liberals as being too generous to gas producers.

Youth Makes Good Suicide Threat

MIAMI (AP) — "It's not like you see on TV," a policeman tried to convince Donald Cooney. "You don't die instantly. You suffer."

Apparently unconvinced, the 22-year-old Cooney crouched in a telephone booth, placed a pistol to his head and pulled the trigger.

Cooney died early Wednesday, 16 hours after the shooting.

He had called his girl friend, Lori Salias, from the booth on a busy street in North Miami Beach Tuesday afternoon. Police traced the call and went to a bar across the street.

Cooney, chain-smoking, told police negotiators by phone that he was despondent because no one had visited him after a recent back operation.

Police negotiators tried to soothe Cooney, and Miss Salias told him that she loved him and begged him to drop the gun. But after 90 minutes Cooney brought the discussion to an end.

"You can't convince my family I'm worth anything .... There's nothing you can do for me," he said.

Then he fired.

Cancer Victim, Husband Die

NORTON SHORES, Mich. (AP) — Lyman Briggs shot his cancer-stricken wife to death, then gave her one final embrace and killed himself, police said. He left a note that read: "I would rather spend an eternity in hell than see Molly live a life of hell."

"I don't want to call this a murder case. He obviously loved her a lot," said Police Chief Charles Curtis.

Curtis said Briggs, 66, and his 58-year-old wife each had a single .32-caliber bullet wound in the right temple.

The couple's only child, Tyler, 24, apparently found the bodies Tuesday afternoon when he returned from work, according to Jerry Cook, a neighbor.

"They were beautiful people. But she was very, very sick," Mrs. Cook said Wednesday. The neighbor said Mrs. Briggs suffered from bone cancer after having a mastectomy five or six years ago.

For more than a year, Mrs. Briggs underwent massive chemotherapy, Mrs. Cook said. "But they never complained. Everybody loved them.

"He must have just snapped under it all," she said.

The son told police everything seemed normal when he left for work Tuesday morning. He said his father loved his mother deeply and had watched her suffer for years.

Mrs. Cook said Briggs retired from his factory job in this western Michigan city near Muskegon last year to care for his wife but was required to work one week every three months to maintain her insurance coverage.

"We were their neighbors for 15 years," Mrs. Cook said. "They were the best in the world. And they're not in hell."

Good Friday Rite Set At Childress

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Plans for a community Good Friday worship service have been announced here.

Sponsored by the Childress Ministerial Alliance, the service is set for noon Friday in the First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Frank Ferrell, president of the alliance, said that the guest speaker for the observance will be Dr. James R. Carroll, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Amarillo.

"Dr. Carroll is well known to Childress residents, as he was guest speaker for Good Friday services here five years ago," the Rev. Mr. Ferrell said. "He is a widely traveled author and speaker."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I am comfortably retired, with no concern for leaving an estate. Still, I do not favor annuities (as you seem to) because I do not believe that anyone gives you something for nothing.

A. I have frequently mentioned annuities as income sources for elderly folk who are not concerned with leaving an estate. And, I do not think that they represent a reasonable choice, if the investor is old enough to get a good income. "Good" in this case could be considered to be 3, 4 or 5 percentage points more than the same amount of money could produce from high grade bonds or insured savings accounts which preserve capital.

Many readers disagree, pointing out that if you choose the "lifetime" annuity program (in order to receive the highest current benefits) the insurance compnay will wind up with practically all the money if you should live only a year or two after handing over your money to acquire the annuity contract. (Of course, the insurance company winds up the "loser" if you, the annuitant, should live to 120.)

But these are futile arguments. What I want to stress most — in an attempt to "set you straight" — is that there is no "something-for-nothing" aspect to any form of life insurance or annuity or, for that matter, to any legitimate financial contract. Fate may reward the company, or the insured, out of all proportion to the money involved. But that's what insurance is all about.

If your retirement is going to be soured by the fear that the insurance company (or the religious, charitable, or educational institution selling the annuity) may get all your money after you've collected only three monthly benefit checks — avoid annuities.

But if your retirement pleasures are going to be enhanced by the thought you will never run out of money — consider a lifetime annuity.

Q. I receive a good return from a preferred stock fund sponsored by a group of reputable brokers. But now I'm worried because I noticed that the securities "have not been approved or disapproved by the SEC."

A. Stop fretting. Securities never are "approved or disapproved." That's not the SEC's job.

Q. I pay about $4,000 in income taxes on $20,000 income — or 20 percent. Should I switch all my investments to tax-exempt bonds?

A. I would estimate that you could benefit from some tax exempts. You can't make such a determination by applying a tax percentage to your entire income since all your income — from the first dollar earned — is not subject to income taxes. I think you should first determine how much of your income is taxed in the 30-35 percent bracket and then switch sufficient funds to tax exempts to stop your tax at that level.

Q. I have $25,000 in savings at about 5 percent. I'm 67 and a table I've seen says I have a life expectancy of 13 years. How much could I draw from this $25,000 for the next 13 years?

A. According to withdrawal tables, money earning 5 percent a year can stand an annual withdrawal of 10 percent ($2,500 in your case) and last 14 years. But don't come complaining to me in 1993 if you're still drawing breath but no income.

Q. We are retired with a total of $85,000 in banks at 5 1/4 percent. How much should we put into certificates for higher income?

A. I don't know anything about your budget or lifestyle, but I can't understand why at least $75,000 of your money isn't earning 7 3/4 percent - thus boosting your income by close to $1,900 a year.

Help From IRS 'No Defense'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A taxpayer telephoning the Internal Revenue Service for help in making out his return has about one chance in 10 of getting the wrong information, a General Accounting Office survey suggests.

And the IRS warns taxpayers that they act at their own risk when they rely on information from one of its employees. If the information is wrong, the fact that it was obtained from the service is no defense against penalties or interest charges.

But the IRS' taxpayer assistance performance has improved enough in two years to earn it a B-plus grade from the GAO and a commendation from the chairman of a once-critical congressional subcommittee.

Last year, the GAO said, a taxpayer asking the IRS for help had about one chance in four of getting the wrong answer.

The GAO, Congress' investigating and auditing agency, checked on the IRS' toll-free telephone information service at the request of a House government operations subcommittee. It made 873 telephone calls, ostensibly from taxpayers, to 20 IRS information stations across the country, asking 14 questions related to recent changes in tax law.

Victor L. Lowe, director of the GAO general government division, told the subcommittee that overall 87 percent of IRS responses were correct, but that accuracy varied greatly from question to question.

A query about the deductibility of moving expenses apparently gave the IRS the most trouble, receiving correct answers only 59 percent of the time. One about alimony was answered correctly every time. Ten of the 14 questions were answered correctly from 80 to 100 percent of the time.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman, recalled that a 1976 study of the revenue service's taxpayer assistance program had found about 25 percent of the answers given to be incorrect. He asked Lowe to give IRS a scholastic grade for that year and the present.

Lowe said the IRS should get B-plus this year, up from C-minus on the earlier showing. He also gave it an A for improvement effort. Rosenthal concurred and told IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz his agency was to be commended, but not to let up on seeking further improvement.

Kurtz testified that taxpayers themselves are making fewer errors, especially those who use the simple 1040A form. The error rate on this kind of return so far this year is 4.3 percent compared with 11.3 percent last year, he said.

The best way to simplify the tax return would be to simplify the tax code itself, Kurtz testified. But the IRS keeps trying to make the return form easier to use, he said, as it did with some changes this year. The reading level of the instructions, he said, have been reduced from about the comprehension expected of a high school senior or college freshman to that of a 10th or 11th grade pupil.

For the first time, he said, the IRS is surveying taxpayers to find out what parts of the return form or instructions give them trouble and to solicit suggestions for improvement.

Lowe said the GAO also is studying the tax forms and instructions to find ways of simplifying them, and is using seven writing and graphic design specialists in the work.

Big Spring Man Sentenced

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Raul Garza, 22, of Big Spring has pleaded guilty to a grand jury indictment for the murder of 23-year-old Dimas Garcia, also of Big Spring.

Dist. Judge Ralph Caton sentenced Garza to 15 years in the state penitentiary.

Garcia's body was found Sept. 16, 1977, under a sheet of galvanized tin in Glasscock County, five days after he was reported missing from Big Spring.

An anonymous telephone tip led police officers to the body.

Loop Frontage Road Closing Scheduled

Beginning Friday, the south frontage road overpass on Loop 289 at Interstate 27 will be closed due to construction on the overpasses of the Loop 289 frontage roads over Interstate 27.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation said traffic will be routed south on I-27 to Jarvis Street for the crossing. The local department office added that there will be times during the construction that traffic on the main lanes of the interstate will be routed over the frontage roads at the intersection of the interstate and the loop.

Dollar Slips On Sluggish Europe Marts

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in light, uneventful trading Wednesday as Europe's money markets began winding down for the long Easter weekend.

The price of gold staged what was described as a technical recovery. It was up just over $3 in London and $2.50 in Zurich.

One Frankfurt dealer said the money market was "very dead" and that it seemed many participants had already left for their Easter vacations.

There was, however, a brief flurry of activity late in the day over a rumor that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had been assassinated. The rumor, later denied in Cairo, caused the dollar to dip slightly.

The world's foreign exchanges are extremely sensitive to political news and even rumors can cause millions of dollars to change hands.

Paris—4.6625 French francs, down from 4.6675.

London—It took $1.8980 to buy a British pound late Wednesday, compared to $1.8968 late Tuesday.

Gold closed in London at $180.75 an ounce, up $3.15 from Tuesday's close of $177.60. In Zurich gold closed at $180.125 up $2.50 from $177.620 Tuesday.

Sundown Math Teams Take Top Meet Honors

LEVELLAND (Special) — Sundown High School won two first-place team trophies at the recent Mathematics Conference and Contest sponsored by the South Plains College math and engineering department.

Sundown and Smyer High School tied for the first-place team trophy in the contest's upper division, grades 10-12, and Sundown won the freshman division outright. Class B schools competing were Wellman, Whitharral, Whiteface, Sundown, Spade, Smyer, Southland, Meadow and Silverton.

Whiteface High was runner-up in the upper division, while Smyer was runner-up in the freshman division, according to Robet Pearce, chairman of SPC's math and engineering department and meet director.

SPC scholarships were awarded to Smyer High School seniors Dora Cavazos and Kyle Osborne, who tied for first-place in individual competition in the senior division. Second place in the senior division went to Raymond Drachenberg of Smyer, and third place went to Terri Clements of Sundown.

Team trophies were awarded to Virgie Osborne, superintendent of schools in Smyer, and Dewane Fryar, math coordinator at Sundown High School.

Ex-Tech Cager Loses Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Tech basketball star Greg Lowery — who claimed that playing hurt cost him a lucrative professional career — lost a $783,000 suit Wednesday against the Tech coach, team physician and trainer.

The Supreme Court agreed with lower courts that Lowery, a consensus 1972 all-Southwest Conference selection, waited too long to sue.

Lowery filed suit in 1976, alleging that he developed chronic tendinitis and new bone formations in the pelvis and ankle as a result of "negligent conduct" by Coach Gerald Myers, trainer Jim Juvenal and Dr. Wallace Hess.

Lowery said he hurt his ankle in preseason workouts in 1971 and pulled a groin muscle during a game in early 1972. He said Hess and Juvenal treated him and that Juvenal gave him repeated injections of novocaine although he knew that continued play might result in additional injury.

He said he began experiencing pain in 1974.

In other cases, the Supreme Court:

— Affirmed the demotion of a Carrollton Fire Department lieutenant to private because he failed to investigate a late-night call from a woman who reported an animal flopping around in the wall of her house. The demotion reduced Rodney Keeling's monthly salary by $180 to $1,028.

— Rejected Harris County's attack on a 1978 law requiring local governments to extend unemployment compensation benefits to all employees. Exceptions include elected officials — judges, members of legislative bodies and temporary workers hired during major catastrophes.

— Ruled that Westchester Fire Insurance Co. must pay workers compensation death benefits to the family of Frank Wendeborn, a Haskell County drive-in grocery manager who was shot accidentally with his shotgun. Westchester presented medical testimony that Wendeborn was intoxicated but six witnesses for Mrs. Wendeborn said they had seen Wendeborn in the hour before his death and believed he was not drunk.

— Ruled that Harris County need not pay damages for the loss of Alvin Hein's eye which was destroyed when a pistol held by a fellow road employee discharged. The Supreme Court agreed with a lower court that the county was not liable because the accident occurred during a break when Hein and the other employees were not on county business.

FLIGHT DELAYS SEEN

CLEVELAND (AP) — Airline officials say passengers using Cleveland Hopkins International Airport can expect delays in flights during two months of runway repairs scheduled to begin April 3. The airport's longest runway, 9,000-feet, will be closed for resurfacing and lighting repairs, requiring aircraft to use a 6,400-foot runway.

Mahon, Burleson To Speak Here

Mahon and Burleson, both Democrats of bordering West Texas districts, are retiring at the end of their terms after serving collectively 76 years in Congress.

Among the other speakers for the event are J. Fred Bucy, president of Texas Instruments Inc. of Dallas; Lloyd Unsell, executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America; Bill Stewart, executive director of the Texas Air Control Board; and Harvey Davis, executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The original Liberty bell, then called the Province bell, was cast in London to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

BAREFOOT IN THE PARK — Spring may have been only days old, but Wednesday was as good a day as any for a romp in sunny, warm Wagner Park for 5-year-old Pody Morgan. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Morgan of Athens, Pody tried out the park swings while friends tried to remember exactly how it was they always made sand castles last summer. Barefoot, in shorts and outdoors, Wednesday might as well have been summer for Pody. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Penitentiary Terms Assessed In Murder, Theft Convictions

Two murder defendants and a man who, with a companion, reportedly led West Texas lawmen on a high-speed, cross-country chase, were assessed penitentiary terms here Wednesday.

Pleading guilty in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th Dist. Court to 1977 murders were Rufus Arthur Walker Jr. and Ralph Aicidic Hernandez.

Shaver assessed each a seven-year prison term on the recommendation of the Criminal District Attorney's office.

Receiving six years in prison after pleading guilty to felony theft was James Simms.

Simms was one of two men charged with stealing a tractor-trailer rig from the T.I.M.E.-DC yard at 2604 Texas Ave. on Aug. 25, 1977.

The defendant and a companion were arrested near Abilene after the huge vehicle crashed at a reported 68 mph into a roadblock formed by two other rigs. The suspects reportedly received only minor injuries from the impact.

Walker, 23, of 1000 E. 28th St., No. 123, pleaded guilty to murdering Willie Lawrence White, 25, May 6, 1977.

White was shot to death during an argument inside a small, two-room cafe-poolroom known as Robert's Cafe at the Trammell Terrace Apartments. As the argument erupted, White, according to the defendant, pushed a table against him.

The defendant said he then pulled a .22-caliber pistol and shot the victim.

Hernandez, 18, of 1117 40th St., admitted murdering his brother-in-law, Manuel R. Garcia, 25, of 907-A 40th St. Sept. 23, 1977.

Garcia reportedly was shot to death inside his car, parked in front of his residence, about 3:30 a.m.

Another man in the car with Garcia was wounded in the incident. He was treated and released at a local hospital.

Accounts indicated Hernandez and Garcia had been together earlier during the night and had argued.

Simms, 20 at the time of the incident and reportedly from Shreveport, La., was the passenger in the truck stolen sometime after midnight.

The vehicle reportedly ran police and citizens of two counties off the road before being halted by the blockade.

A Colorado City officer said he had to leap onto the hood of his squad car to avoid being hit by the rig as it sped along I-20.

A chase ensued, with the rig reportedly negotiating a law enforcement roadblock near Sweetwater before encountering the successful Taylor County blockade about 6 a.m.

The co-defendant in the case is still awaiting trial.

The pleas were among 27 taken in Shaver's court Wednesday, and were the only three cases in which prison time was meted out.

LBJ School Students Appointed Interns

AUSTIN (AP) — Four prospective May graduates of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs are among the first group of 250 in the nation who will participate in a new federal intern program set up last August by President Carter.

The students are John Hall of Washington, Texas; Lee Solsberry of Houston; Kenneth Apfel of Watertown, Mass.; and Mary Stack of Milford, Conn.

Bonnie Fisher of Austin is one of 55 alternates.

The interns will work full time for two years in "developmental management" positions in a wide variety of federal agencies. After two years, they will be eligible for regular civil service appointments without further competition.

3-Qt. Oblong Baking Dish Baker in a Basket

We put PYREX® ware in a basket so you could put it on your table. PYREX ware is now not only practical in the preparation of foods — it'll go straight from freezer to oven — but pretty for serving, too. We put two of your favorite PYREX ware items — the 2-qt. utility casserole and the 3-qt. oblong baking dish — in decorative baskets that will complement your dining table on any occasion and protect the table surface as well. You also have the choice of buying the baskets separately for any number of uses. Because of the solid bottom construction, they make attractive servers for hot breads and rolls, fresh fruit, dessert serving trays . . . a multitude of uses, completely up to you. Or, you can pick one out to dress up the PYREX ware casserole or baking dish you already own. Baker in a Basket — PYREX ware in decorative and useful baskets — is pretty practical, isn't it?

Cronkite To Play Host For CBS Birthday Show

CO-HOSTS ON CBS HALF CENTURY OF HISTORY — The latest of network self-given birthday parties will be a nine and one-half hour CBS television show, to be aired in segments from March 26 to April 1. Co-hosts for the half century of CBS history will be Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore, each almost as much a symbol of CBS as the omnipresent eye. (AP Laserphoto)

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — And that's the way it was — a half-century of CBS history conducted by the unlikely duo of Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore.

The latest of the self-given network birthday parties will appear in nine and a half hours from March 26 through April 1 via CBS television. An ode by Norman Corwin scored by Leonard Bernstein, reminiscences of Edward R. Murrow's "Person to Person," reflections by network founding father William S. Paley, plus appearances by all CBS stars that are alive and kicking — these are part of the week-long celebration.

So what's Walter Cronkite doing as host of a hyped-up entertainment show?

"There were some discussions about my appearance within CBS News and the network itself," he admitted by telephone from New York. "But I never had any doubts about the propriety of my appearing on the show. After all, I've spent most of my adult life in CBS, so it was only fitting that I would appear."

"Any regrets? None whatsoever. My part of the show was handled with dignity. I do not song and dance — not that I'm not qualified to do so, mind you."

To co-anchor the marathon show, Cronkite had to fly to Hollywood from his New York base on four weekends, catching a late flight on Friday evenings. He returned on Sunday night or Monday morning, missing the CBS Evening News on one occasion because of an eastern storm.

"Working with Mary Tyler Moore was great fun," he said. "She is such a delight. I wasn't with the others very much, though I did have a brief scene with Telly Savalas and Jean Stapleton."

Walter Cronkite is as much a symbol of CBS as the omnipresent Eye, and he indicated he will remain with the network at least until he reaches the retirement age in four years. His counterpart on ABC, Harry Reasoner, has remarked that he has tired of his role because it affords him so little to do.

"If I only presented the news, I would be restless, too," Cronkite commented. "But I perform another function as well. I am truly managing editor of the Evening News.

"Frankly, I don't particularly care about the anchor-man part of the job. Oh, the money's nice, but the work itself is not very satisfying. What I do enjoy is functioning through the day — deciding what to cover, what news should be treated, and how to say it.

"As far as callings go, I can't think of a higher one than being a managing editor, whether it is in print or broadcasting.

"There has been a recent tendency to downgrade the anchorman — or anchorperson. That's all right. If I were doing as little as the others apparently are, I might agree with that."

Cronkite views the mandatory CBS retirement at 65 "with no regret nor terrible concern; I have a great backlog of things I want to do, some serious, some frivolous."

He added that he had seen his longtime colleague Eric Sevareid only briefly since his recent retirement, "but I have the feeling that he was never happier."

Broadway producer Alexander H. Cohen put together "CBS: On the Air" with a flair that may top the NBC 50th anniversary and ABC's 25th. The Sunday night opening will offer an astounding 122 stars of the CBS past and present.

ACID CAR LEAKS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Pinhole leaks developed Wednesday in a railroad tank car loaded with 25,000 gallons of hydrochloric acid, but fire officials said the leaks posed no danger. The tanker sprang a large leak Tuesday night, releasing a cloud of fumes that forced the evacuation of 25 workers from a railroad yard.

Channel 5 Slates Address By Begin

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in the United States to deliver his views, will address the National Press Club today in Washington.

Begin's address will be broadcast over Public Television and will be carried by KTXT-TV, Channel 5, Lubbock, beginning at noon.

Jailed Mayor Wins Election To New Term In Office

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Mayor Edward Marzeski, who was jailed last week on charges of arson and second-degree murder, was elected to a second two-year term against a write-in candidate Tuesday.

Marzeski was charged in connection with a New Year's Eve fire in which a 73-year-old man died.

Two Herkimer men have been charged with Marzeski, a Democrat who also serves as a councilman on the Richfield Town Board.

Marzeski is also a former Richfield town supervisor and served many years as village clerk.

His closest competitor Tuesday was Harold Congdon, who served a term as mayor in the 1950s. Marzeski received 245 votes, Congdon 52.

Persons interviewed outside the polling places said they would treat Marzeski as innocent until proven guilty. They also noted that he would have to resign if convicted.

National Lampoon To Make Picture Debut

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There have been movies based on books and movies based on plays. There have been movies taken from articles in newspapers and magazines. But now we have a movie based on a parody of a high school yearbook.

MATHESON

It's called "National Lampoon's Animal House," and to tell you how it happened I have to go back more than a quarter of a century, back to somewhere around 1950.

I was working in New York then and a friend of mine called me one day and said he'd like me to do a story about a new idea he and some of his associates had. He explained it to me and I thought it was intriguing so I wrote the story — maybe the first story ever written about The Diner's Club, the pioneer in the credit card field.

That friend was Matty Simmons and he and his creation made him rich and famous and he stayed with The Diner's Club for many years. He quit in 1967.

He started a company called 21st Century Communications, which got into publishing, and started out with a success called Weight Watchers Magazine. In 1970 they began helping a group of Harvard undergraduates put out parodies of national publications. They parodied Playboy and Life, and when they started in on Time, Harvard and Simmons' companies became partners.

Together, they began publishing National Lampoon, which is, Simmons says, the biggest-selling adult humor magazine. Together, the Harvard group and Simmons and his team have gotten into records and theatrical shows. And the next step, which Simmons & Co. have just taken — a motion picture.

"Why movies?" Simmons answers the question partly facetiously — "it's Universal's monkey" — and partly there were certain limitations to the high school setting. The time frame they chose was 1962 — "pre-Vietnam, pre-drugs, pre-protest."

And Matheson believes the film is a complete change for him and is excited about its coming release.

"I think this is an important movie," the actor says. "And not only because it's fun, maybe the most fun of any film in a long while, but because it's a reflection of its time. And a reflection of our time, too. Today, for the first time for happiness. For the most part, we're free of worries today and ready for fun."

He says he grew up worried. He's 30 now, and during the Vietman War era he was in a Marine reserve unit. They were getting close to calling his unit up for active duty. He says he came home from a meeting one night and resolved that if the unit were called up he would go to Canada.

"And I would have," he says.

He's been acting around town since he was 13. He was a regular for a season on Virginian and for a season on Bonanza and last year on Quest "which was a good pilot, but it disintegrated when it got on the air."

Along the way, he's done seven or eight other pilots, including an early version of The Hardy Boys, in which he teamed with Jan Michael Vincent, but it never made it.

He thinks that "National Lampoon's Animal House," a wild and slapsticky comedy, could change his whole career. The only thing about it that bothered him was the director, Landis.

"He's a wonderful director," says Matheson. "But he's only 27. And after all these years of being the youngest kid on the set, it's a strange feeling to be older than the director."

Simmons classifies the film as "the kind of slapstick comedy that hasn't been seen since the old Marx Brothers movies."

And we sure could use some of that.

Bankers Honored For Long Service

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Marvin Carlile, president of the First National Bank of Tulia, and Orlin Stark of the First National Bank at Quitaque, have been honored for 50 years of employment in the banking business at a luncheon and reception at the First National Bank in Amarillo.

Carlile has been president of the Tulia bank for 39 years, beginning his career as a bookkeeper for a bank in Peacock in 1923.

During his tenure as the chief executive officer of the Tulia bank, total bank assets have grown from $600,000 to more than $50 million.

Stark, the dean of area bankers, began working at the Quitaque bank in 1918.

Kennedy Expected To Succeed Eastland As Panel Chaiman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy is now in line to enter a select group of Senate elders, the ranks of committee chairmen, as successor to the arch-conservative southerner who was one of President John F. Kennedy's principal congressional antagonists in the early 1960's.

Sen. James O. Eastland's decision to retire after 35 years in the Senate will open up the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, a post the Mississippi Democrat held for a record 22 years.

Eastland was 52 when he became chairman of the Judiciary Committee in 1956. Dwight D. Eisenhower was president. None of the current nine Supreme Court justices were members of the high court.

When Kennedy becomes chairman of the panel next January, he will be 47. A southern Democrat is president and Senate rules have been changed to dilute the power of committee chairmen.

If setting a new longevity record is in Kennedy's mind, he has a good chance for it. But many observers still believe the youngest of the Kennedy brothers still harbors ambitions for the White House.

Unlike his brothers, John and Robert, Edward Kennedy has taken a serious interest in being a senator and has long been a full-fledged member of the club, the insiders who respect the rules and traditions of the institution and use them to wield power.

In recent years, Eastland seemed to rule by benign neglect, rarely taking as active a role as he did when civil rights was a major issue. He rarely acted as floor manager for bills and usually deferred to the wishes of other committee members in bring to a vote measures they supported.

For example, Eastland permitted a committee vote, which went against him, on a bill to break up the major oil companies. He did the same on a proposed constitutional amendment to permit direct election of the president.

However, Kennedy recently took the lead in bypassing the committee and putting directly on the Senate calendar a proposed constitutional amendment to give full congressional representation to the District of Columbia. The unusual action was taken to avoid the likelihood the measure would have been bottled up by Eastland.

A leader of southern segregationists, Eastland was in the forefront of battles against the Kennedy administration's efforts to enact civil rights legislation.

YMCA Report Expected Friday

The YMCA is having its first membership report luncheon Friday at noon in the organization's newly completed addition at 24th Street and Avenue P.

Mike Brown, "Big Boss" for this year's membership campaign, reports that 36 percent of the group's membership goal has been reached since the kick-off luncheon.

The luncheon program will center around the "Y's Ways to Fitness" and "Fitness Testing Procedure."

Man Killed By Blaze In Mobile Home

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A mobile home fire early Wednesday, first presumed to have burned harmlessly, killed Ramon Veliz, 49, of Big Spring. .

The body of Veliz was discovered inside the door of the trailer at approximately 5:20 a.m., 15 minutes after the fire was extinguished, by A.R. Darden, a utilities company employe, and W.C. Garver, owner of the trailer house.

The body was found huddled near the closed door of the mobile home.

According to Mrs. Garver, who lives with her husband about 30 yards from the site, an explosion occurred. She looked outside to see the trailer house burning.

The Howard County Sheriff's Office was notified at 4:20 a.m. and the Sand Springs fire truck arrived at the scene at approximately 4:33 a.m.

Mrs. Garver told deputies that Veliz had purchased the trailer from her husband and was making payments on it. He used the trailer one or two nights a week week, she said.

The Garvers did not know he was in the trailer until the body was found.

Justice of the Peace Bob West, who prounounced Veliz dead at the scene, has not ruled on the cause of death and has requested an autopsy at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Skeptical Citizens Back Carter Tax Program

By LOUIS HARRIS

Despite forecasts by key congressional leaders that President Carter's proposed tax program will have a hard time passing the House and Senate, it meets with a substantial 55-16 percent approval by the American people. However, only a relatively narrow 46-35 percent plurality feels that the Carter tax package, if it is enacted into law, will make the tax system fairer than it is now.

According to a recent Harris Survey of 1,510 adults nationwide, the public is firmly in favor of the main provisions of the President's program. Topping the list of reforms that meet with public favor are the much-debated provisions for a sharp cutback in expense-account living:

—By 75-15 percent, a majority favors "e-liminating deductions for business entertainment, such as buying tickets to shows and sporting events for customers."

—By 72-16 percent, another sizable majority also favors "cutting down on business expense accounts, by letting people take only half the amount spent on a business lunch off as a business expense." Mr. Carter's call for an end to the writing off of the "three martini lunch" as a business expense clearly meets with overwhelming public approval. The strong protests of those who make their livelihood in the restaurant and entertainment businesses simply have not had any major impact on public opinion.

—By 68-16 percent, a majority also favors "eliminating deductions of the extra cost for first-class travel as a business expense."

Also high on the list of publicly supported tax reforms are these measures:

—By 75-10 percent, a majority would favor "eliminating the excise tax on telephone calls."

—By 60-18 percent, a majority backs "elimination of the practice of allowing American businesses to defer paying taxes on profits earned abroad which are reinvested abroad."

—By 59-17 percent, a majority would also favor "restricting sharply the amount a person can take off in federal taxes from investments in tax shelters."

The two measures most likely to become law in 1978 meet with lower levels of public support:

—By 60-12 percent, with a high 28 percent still undecided, a majority favors "cutting individual federal income taxes by $17 billion."

—In addition, by 56-19 percent, a majority favors "replacing the $750 personal exemption on the federal income tax with a $240 credit to each taxpayer against the tax owed, which would reduce the taxes paid by people with incomes under $20,000."

Two other specific measures, dealing with corporate tax relief, receive plurality but not majority support:

—By 38-25 percent Americans favor "reducing the general corporate income tax rate from 48 to 44 percent by 1980."

—By a closer 32-25 percent they favor "giving business corporations a permanent investment tax credit of 10 percent."

The one part of the Carter tax program that meets with public rejection is a proposed change in the rules for deductions which people who use the long form on their tax returns have been taking for many years:

—By 55-21 percent, a majority of the public opposes "eliminating deductions individual taxpayers can make from their federal income taxes of all state and local sales taxes, gasoline taxes, and taxes on personal property, but not taxes on residences or buildings individuals own."

When the American people add up all the provisions of the President's tax package, a 55-16 percent majority favors the program. Moreover, most of the specific measures meet with approval. Yet, such are the ways in which the legislative process works that the most informed observers do not give the Carter tax package a good chance of being enacted this year — except for the tax-cut provisions.

SYMPATHIZES WITH WOMEN — Sociologist Marlaine E. Lockheed is shown at Educational Testing Service headquarters in Princeton, N.J. Miss Lockheed, who heads a study of sex stereotypes, says girls have a hard time assuming leadership roles, partly because there are few women to serve as models and partly because society treats such females as deviants. Girls' Leadership Difficulties Cited

By CAROLE FELDMAN

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Girls have a hard time assuming leadership roles, in part because there are few women leaders to model themselves after and society treats such females as deviants, researchers at the Educational Testing Service report.

And when women are given leadership responsibility, they are not given the same respect as men and are subject to more extensive criticism, said Marlaine E. Lockheed, a sociologist heading a sex stereotype study.

"It's based on an erroneous preception of a larger society," Miss Lockheed said in an interview. "Kids believe women don't work. A lot of the work is getting the kids more in touch with reality."

Miss Lockheed said the stereotypes are reinforced in the educational materials used in elementary schools. She and other researchers are working with fourth and fifth grade teachers in a New Jersey school district to develop educational materials that eliminate these stereotypes, she said.

In classroom discussions, boys' ideas traditionally are given greater weight than girls, Miss Lockheed said, adding that teachers seldom assign girls to classroom leadership jobs.

"We need to reverse these sex stereotypes," she said, urging increased interaction between boys and girls in elementary schools.

In one of the experiments, 50 girls were trained to build an electronic circuit and then video-taped to prove to them that they had the ability to do the work.

They were able to teach female classmates and adults without problems, but when they were told to teach a boy they became anxious, the study found.

"We are asking them to accept a behavior that the majority of society considers deviant," Miss Lockheed said. "It is not a legitimized activity; it is something that is questioned."

The Educational Testing Service, better known for such testing services including the high school Scholastic Achievement Test, is the largest educational research center in the United States, said spokesman John Smith. In 1976-1977, it spent more than $6.7 million on research.

The sex equality program, funded by the federal Women's Educational Equity Act Program, seeks to improve interaction between girls and boys both in the classroom and at home, Miss Lockheed said.

Teachers are given educational materials, including lesson plans for fourth and fifth graders and video-tapes, designed to counteract the sex role stereotypes.

To develop skills to work effectively in mixed sex situations as adults, boys should work with leadership-oriented girls in elementary schools, the study found. But, according to Miss Lockheed, girls do better in a single sex atmosphere.

One way to minimize classroom stereotypes, she said, would be for girls to work initially in a single sex environment and be given the opportunity to develop skills at all levels before facing male competition in an elementary school classroom.

Court Sets Aside Bail Denial Order

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday set aside a Lubbock district court order denying bail to Victor Briones, convicted last fall of robbery and sentenced to 13 years in prison. The court sent the case back for a new bail ruling.

Dist. Judge. Thomas L. Clinton had denied Briones' bail request, pending appeal of his October, 1977, conviction and sentence.

Briones was sent to the state penitentiary. His lawyers contended the defendant was illegally denied his liberty, pending appeal of his case.

Their contention centered on apparent conflicts in two parts of the Code of Criminal Procedures, and one of the attorneys said today he believes the Criminal Appeals Court's ruling is the first case interpreting the two conflicting sections.

Briones' robbery case in Lubbock was unusual because the man he was convicted of robbing, Max Stone, has not been seen or heard from by acquaintances since Dec. 30, 1976, and his family and investigators presume he is dead.

Stone, 42, a former medical technologist, was last seen by acquaintances about 11 p.m. that night — a couple of hours before Briones and another man apparently accompanied him from a Lubbock bar.

Briones was found drunk inside Stone's car about 4:30 a.m. Dec. 31.

The second man, Felix Ybarra, testified at Briones' trial that he had seen Briones beat Stone with his fists and plunge a knife into the purported victim's ribcage.

Ybarra said Briones took a wallet and gold watch from Stone, and that the defendant also disposed of the body.

It never was found, however.

Ybarra pleaded guilty to aggravated robbery in connection with the case and received a 10-year probated sentence in a plea bargaining arrangement struck with the state in return for his testimony.

One of the two sections of the Criminal Code involved in the bail case allows release on bail during appeal, except where punishment exceeds 15 years' confinement.

The other, however, says a defendant sentenced to 10 years or more shall be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections, pending appeal or unless released on bail.

The appeals court said the statues "do appear to be in conflict as to cases where punishment is over 10 years and not over 15 years" — as in Briones' case, with a 13-year prison term.

The court concluded, however, that the latter provision appears to relate to the "manner of delivery for confinement" when a person is not released on bail, and sent the case back to the trial court for a determination "consistent with this opinion."

SUBURBAN G.I.
If roosters, horses, chickens, and comfortable, pleasant country living is your family's choice, We have a 2260 SQ. FT. 3 BR and den, 2 bath, two car garage. Home situated on nearly two acres that is charming. Can be bought with NO DOWN payment to a veteran. (30 adjacent acres can be leased) Be warned this property has mature trees that rustle so nicely in the evening breeze.

TWO STORY
Home for $41,000.00! You read right! Very nice 3-2-2 home with central heat, evap. air, sprinkler system, storm windows. 1703 SQ. FT. Bayless, Atkins & Monterey schools.

NIPPISH for a POOL?
But it will be nice come spring — HEATED, too. Vaulted den-living, lifetime roof, very nice fireplace and most important of all — Junior has only a 1 1/2 blk to Hardwick elem. school. Ole Dad probably never had it so good. $45,000.00

THE Best of two worlds. Somebody finally did it. The economy and carefree lifestyle of manufactured housing — plus the quality, security and financing of site-built construction. New single family residential constructions at a fantastic $21.51 per square foot. Three bedrooms, giant closets, two full baths, den, dining area, beautiful galley kitchen and breakfast bar, enormous living room and utility rom, champagne carpet plus a gold carpeted master bedroom, separate dressing room and bath. A great energy package including storm windows and storm doors throughout. Beautiful exposed aggregate walkways and front porch. All this on a nicely situated lot adjacent to one of Lubbock's most impressive developments, within minutes of TI, Tech, the Medical School and Reese. Plus — Free initiation fee in one of Lubbock's finest home owner corporation's private swimming pool and recreational facilities. And would you believe — no down payment — for veterans with financing by Lubbock National Bank. Irwin Realtors, 792-6373.

U.S. Urged To Take Lead Role

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia urged the United States to take the lead role in the British-American search for "genuine" black majority rule in Rhodesia.

"Without in any way meaning to minimize the role the British government must play, unless the American government takes the front seat in this whole episode we may not find the correct solution," Kaunda told a news conference Wednesday in the presence of Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Young is in Zambia for a meeting of the U.N. Council for Namibia, the nationalist name for South-West Africa. He visited President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania on Tuesday.

In Salisbury, Prime Minister Ian Smith said there will be a Marxist takeover in Rhodesia unless the "free world' recognizes the internal agreement for black majority rule he signed March 3 with three moderate black leaders.

Kaunda said he feels Britain, of which Rhodesia technically is still a colony, will back the internal agreement.

A transition government led by a council composed of Smith and the three black moderates, which Young said will get no help from the United States, took over in Rhodesia on Tuesday.

The internal settlement envisages majority rule by the end of the year in Rhodesia, where blacks outnumber whites by more than 20 to 1. It is rejected by the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, which has fought the Smith regime for five years from bases in Zambia and Mozambique.

The Anglo-American plan, ignored by Smith, proposed that guerrilla leaders Josha Nkomo and Robert Mugabe participate in any settlement leading to majority rule and provided for a British commissioner to head an interim Rhodesian government.

"I'm sure I don't have to tell you of the Communists' march down Africa," Smith told visiting American businessmen in Salisbury, referring to the Soviet-Cuban presence in Angola, Mozambique and Ethiopia. "I think that the one thing that might help us is that the free world now believes that the Russians might come further down into this part of the world, and if the free world sits back and allows that it would be a tragedy because this is a little part of Africa which has always been associated with the free world."

Kaunda said the situation in Rhodesia will worsen unless "America acts decisively ... " and that "if you don't solve the problem on the basis of the Anglo-American proposals you are lost."

Young said the U.S. State Department was uncertain at first about the internal agreement because "we did not want to condemn any search for peace.

"I think in the days that followed President Carter made very clear that we consider this internal settlement far short of standards we call for in the Anglo-American plan and far short of majority rule," Young said. "We will continue working ... for a settlement that does provide genuine majority rule and bring an end to the fighting."

Young said the United States believes the internal settlement "does not represent all the parties concerned and it will not put an end to the fighting."

Kuanda said he was looking forward to President Carter's trip to Africa later this month and he hopes Carter "will listen to the voice of sanity."

In related developments:

—In Salisbury, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of the black moderates who signed the agreement, said Wednesday he feels most of the guerrillas will accept the settlement and lay down their arms.

"These people massively belong to us and want a settlement so that they can come home," Sithole said. He said one of the first tasks of the transition government will be to try to organize a ceasefire in the guerrilla war. He said there would be "no recriminations" against guerrillas willing to take advantage of a proposed amnesty.

Pinkie's Annual "Spring Wine Festival"

If you could ask one person to select wines for you, Don Errol McCown would be a good choice. Don Errol is the head wine buyer for Pinkie's and a nationally recognized authority on fine wines. He's the man chiefly responsible for the excellent selection of wines at Pinkie's. Months ago, he began contacting wine importers and wineries in this country, and the winemakers of Europe. He had just one objective: to gather up the best to be found.

You can judge for yourself how well he succeeded, for the results of his efforts are available now at Pinkie's during the annual Spring Wine Festival. A festival of extraordinary wines at prices you expect to pay for the ordinary.

Final Four Coaches Survey NCAA Chances

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The four coaches whose teams will battle for the national basketball championship at week's end teamed up Wednesday on a conference telephone call, but Arkansas' Eddie Sutton fell victim to a faulty connection and Kentucky's Joe Hall hoped that was a good omen.

"If this is any indication, he'll start strong and fade in the second half," joked Hall, as Sutton's voice faded away.

In a wide-ranging question and answer session, Hall, Sutton, Duke's Bill Foster and Notre Dame's Digger Phelps congratulated one another on reaching the finals, side-stepped requests for a prediction, and vowed their teams were not looking ahead to the finals.

Hall conceded one point: that his Wildcats have great muscle on the boards, but lack speed. That could cause problems Saturday against the Razorbacks, he said.

"Quickness has been a problem for us," Hall said. "We usually make a substitution when we need more quickness, but that doesn't always work."

Hall said he expects Arkansas to use a zone defense, perhaps like the 2-3 zone Michigan State used to keep Kentucky in check during their Mideast final game.

"I don't know if he (Sutton) has that type of zone in his repertoire, but if he does, I hope he doesn't use it," said Hall.

A recurring theme of the interviews centered on tournament experience and the fact that Kentucky is making its fourth post-season appearance and second trip to the National Collegiate Athletic Association final four.

Sutton disputed a theory that Kentucky should, therefore, have an edge against the Razorbacks.

"We've earned the repect of everyone we've played," Sutton said. "We're not the type of team that overpowers people. The biggest problem we're faced with is defensive board play. They (the Wildcats) are so big and strong and physical, but we play very well off the ball. When you get to this point, there are only four teams left and they're all good teams. There are some outstanding teams at home right now."

Hall said he knew little about Arkansas, except that Ron Brewers, Sidney Moncrief and Marvin Delph, Sutton's 6-foot-4 "triplets," are deadly shooters with great quickness.

Hall said Sutton also substitutes sparingly, but added he did not know if that was an accurate indication of bench strength.

"The problems they've had with the press have come when they've had a big lead. Any team will let down with a big lead," he said.

UCLA and Cal State-Fullerton pressed Arkansas effectively in the West Regional because of their speed, Hall said.

"I'm not sure we could press with speed," he said, "but if we play our best basketball, we can win the NCAA. I truly believe that."

Don Henry
. . .And Wisecracks, Also

IN BETWEEN JOKES, Abe Lemons has time to coach good basketball. It's exhibited by the admonition he gave to one of his teams at Oklahoma City University several years back.

Seems Lemons' OCUers were hooked up in a close one. They had the ball out of bounds and a 1-point lead. "Listen," he told his troops during a timeout, "just hold onto the ball for six seconds and we've got it made. Just six seconds."

"Dang, coach," one of the players said, in disgust, "if I'd wanted to play that kind of slowdown basketball, I'd of gone to Oklahoma State."

Abe has gotten a lot of mileage out of his jokes and his down-home comments about his coaching. He tells how he likes his teams to shoot, to play their individual game, and at the same time, he downplays his teams' abilities to play defense.

Some coaches who have played his teams say that his defense is the best part of his game, that he works on defense, that his teams play as good a brand of zone defense as any in these parts.

And nowadays, these parts are playing better defense, and offense, and shooting better and hitting more and gaining more respect.

TAKE SUNDAY NIGHT, when the Longhorns blistered Rutgers by 20 points to gain the NIT finals. Abe pointed to the way his team was shooting, but in fact, one of the keys was the defensive and offensive stationing of his center, Gary Goodner. Abe instructed Goodner to play Rutgers star James Bailey man-for-man, then play offensively farther from the goal, drawing Bailey away from the goal.

The strategy worked, Bailey, averaging about 23 a game, got 14, and the Longhorns won. But, Abe forgot to tell about that coaching change when he was popping funnies abut his team and the price of eggs in New York.

Then, Tuesday night, when the Longhorns ran NC State into the Madison Square Garden hardwood, they did it with conditioning, five guys playing racehorse basketball for almost 40 minutes. And the result was an NIT championship trophy, the first ever for a Southwest Conference team.

And while Abe was smoking his cigar and talking folksy, his players were letting the truth loose: The SWC is now playing better basketball.

ALMOST A CONTINENT away, another conference coach was saying the same thing four days earlier. And when Eddie Sutton faced a room filled with sports writers from across the nation (following his West Regional championship) and asserted, "We're the fastest improving conference in the nation," no one giggled.

A few seasons ago, his remark would not have been so politely received. And with justification.

Between Arkansas and Texas, there are seven playoff victories this month. Toss in Houston's loss to Notre Dame, and it still doesn't resemble the usual SWC post-season ledger.

True, Texas' wins came in the independent NIT, but fact that UH finished second in the same event a year ago and the Longhorns completely dominated it this time has to be a plus for the football-dominated league and greatly enhance SWC teams' regards Back East in the years to come.

NOW, AS ARKANSAS prepares for the Final Four, the conference's chances of an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament next year are greatly improved, too.

The SWC this year can finish no worse than .500 in six playoff games—even should Arkansas lose both games at St. Louis. And combined with a 1-4 record for the past four years, the percentage would be—again at worst—.364, not up there with the Atlantic Coast or Big ten but probably good enough to climb up among the top 16 conferences in the nation which will be invited automatically to the NCAA.

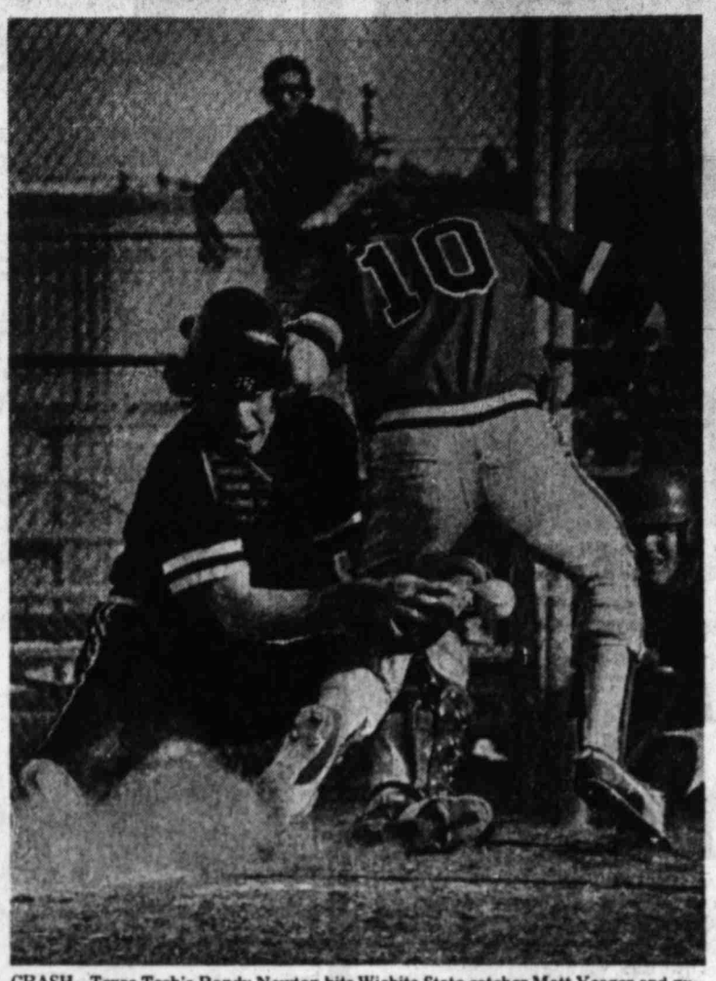

This time last year, that was not a great possibility.

In the late '40s, SWC teams stood in the national spotlight. Six times, from 1941-50, SWC had teams (UT, Arkansas and Baylor) to finish fourth or better. Never on top, but as high as second. But, since that golden era, only SMU in 1956, made that high.

Fact that Arkansas made it this time is not to even hint that the league can, every year, count on the same success. Arkansas loses three starters, all difficult to replace.

But, Goodner is Texas' only starter loss, and the Longhorns should be well up the national ladder next season. And having a team—or teams—which folks in other parts of the country remember is another plus.

It's a challenge to the entire league to try to build upon this year's successes. A one-shot year will do little more than bring the head-nods and I-told-you-sos. But, right now, they're remembering the teams—and the jokes.

Raiders Claim Second Sweep

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Texas Tech had it tough and then easy Wednesday afternoon, as it swept its second straight doubleheader from Wichita State by counts of 7-6 and 8-5.

In the opener, the Raiders first bounced back from a 4-1 deficit and then had to rely on John Keller's RBI-double in the bottom of the seventh inning of the seven-inning contest to win it.

But Tech jumped ahead quickly in the second game with five first-inning runs and held an 8-2 lead after four frames before holding off a Wichita State rally in the seventh to capture the win.

The victories up Tech's season record to 15-12, and the Raiders are 5-4 in Southwest Conference action going into this weekend's three-game series with SMU in Lubbock. WSU is now 7-9-1 for the year.

In the first game Wednesday, Tech went into the seventh inning with a 6-5 lead and appeared to be out of danger when the first two Wichita State batters went out.

However, catcher Matt Yeager—who was 4-4 in the game—drove a long hit to right field that bounced off Keller's outstretched glove and over the fence for a home run that tied the game at six.

But the Raiders came back in their half of the seventh. Larry Selby led off by reaching base when first baseman Larry Groves bobbled a low throw from shortstop Mike Davis. He was sacrificed to second and came home on Keller's double to the base of the fence in left-center field.

Larry Groves had given the visitors a 1-0 lead with a first-inning RBI-single, but the Raiders tied it in their half of the first on Selby's run-scoring single.

The Shockers then added two more runs in the second frame and another in the third to take a 4-1 advantage.

A triple to the 380-foot barrier in left-center field by Yeager and a long home run in the same direction by Tim Tolin accounted for the second-inning runs, and Yeager drove in the Shockers' fourth

Wayland Opens National Meet

LOS ANGELES (Special)—Wayland Baptist's Flying Queens will open play in the AIAW National Tournament tonight when they battle Maryland at 9 (CST) in a semifinal game at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion. UCLA will battle Montclair (N.J.) State in the other semifinal contest at 11 p.m. (CST).

Tonight's winners will play for the national title Saturday at 10 p.m. (CST), while the third-place game will take place at 7:45.

The Queens, 33-3 and ranked second in the nation, won the Central Satellite Tournament last weekend in Denton by defeating Ohio State and North Carolina State.

Maryland, 26-3, won the South Satellite Tournament with a championship-game win over Southern Connecticut.

Wayland has a 16-game winning streak intact.

Two of the finest players in the history of women's collegiate basketball, Ann Meyers and Carol Blazejowski, will probably be matched against each other in tonight's second semifinal game.

Miss Meyers has earned all-America honors three times at UCLA while Miss Blazejowski, twice an all-American at Montclair State, is the all-time leading scorer in women's collegiate basketball.

A pair of small colleges, Delta State of Mississippi and Immaculata, Pa., have dominated the AIAW championship over the first six years of its competition.

Immaculata won the first three championships from 1972-74 and Delta State captured the last three titles. Until last year, when Louisiana State finished second and Tennessee third, no large college had ever finished among the top three teams. WBC is the only team in this year's field to finish as high as third.

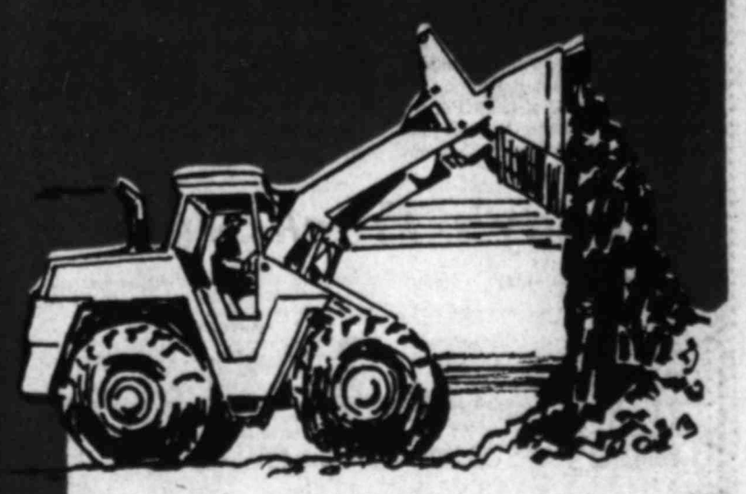

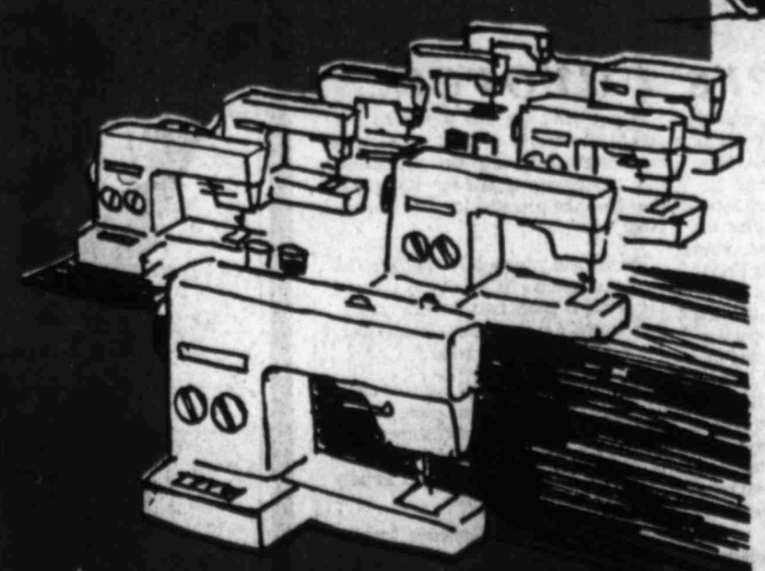

The Bruins, who will host the event at Pauley Pavilion, bring a 25-3 record into tonight's game, along with a 13-game winning skein this season and a 30-game winning streak at Pauley Pavilion.

Montclair State, which handed Wayland Baptist its second loss of the season by a 72-67 count in the Old Dominion Tournament, is 24-6.

Chaps Face UT-El Paso In H-SU Meet Opener

ABILENE (Special) — The past two years, Lubbock Christian College has finished second in the Citrus Tournament during the spring break. But this year Pan American uninvited the Chaparrals.

So today, LCC turns its attention to the Hardin-Simmons University Invitational Tournament here and seeks revenge for a third of its 1978 setbacks in the opening outings.

UT-El Paso provides the first opposition at 12:30 today and the Miners whipped LCC three of four meetings in El Paso earlier this year.

But Oscar Acosta, the only LCC roundsman to post a win in that series, will start today.

Then at 3:30 p.m. today the Chaps will take on Coe College, with John Ross due to pitch.

Friday's schedule calls for games against Kearney State at 10:30 and with Dick Battle due to throw and come back at 3:30 p.m. against Kearney State. Satruday's 12:30 p.m. tilt against host Hardin-Simmons will conclude the meet for the Chaparrals, who will return home Monday and Tuesday for a four-game series with Kearney State.

Richard Nixon, who missed a start due to the flu last weekend, is due to start against ACU and Gary Swann will get the nod against the Cowboys.

Coach Larry Hays is worried about his catching situation, as Battle, Bobby Doe, Charles Casiano and Archie Crim are all slated to don the tools of ignorance during play here, but Doe, the most versatile of the Chaps, will also play short.

LCC's hospital list is still lengthy, with Glenn Wilken (ss), Richard Bowles (rf) and Mark Morgan (c) still out, although Bowles may be available for spot duty this week.

Plus, Kenny Toney's shoulder is still hampering him and Hays is worried. "He's such an effective low-ball pitcher that we need him against good team and I wish he were healthy.

The Chaps, currently 15-9 and on a 12-game winning streak which is the third-longest in the school's history, will go with Mickey Crump and Dan Sanders in long relief and Bob McNicol and Randy Vinson in short relief.

UTEP enters tournament play at 11-6, but has dropped five of 8 games since the Miners last met the Chaps.

Gas Capital Relays Scheduled In Jal

While the majority of Texas schools will take the weekend off from track competition, Jal will play host to one of Eastern New Mexico's largest events today.

Preliminaries for the Gas Capital Relays, which includes both girls' and boys' competition, is at 2:30 p.m. The running events finals are set to start at 6 p.m.

Included in the field of 13 are Portales the Class AAA runnerup last year—and Lovington, the AAA state champions. Lovington is also the defending Gas Capital Relays champion.

Gruver will also host a meet today starting at 9:30 a.m. The meet is exclusively comprised of teams from the northern Panhandle.

Gruver Relays will also have two divisions, boys and girls.

Tennessee Swimmers Favored

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tennessee figures as the favorite in the 55th annual NCAA Division I Swimming and Diving Championships, which begin today at the Belmont Plaza pool.

Coach Ray Bussard's Volunteers have swimmers seeded among the top five in all but four events and have two top-seeded relay teams. Among the top performers for Tennessee are Bob Sells, Marc Foreman, Tim Boyd and Tom White.

The three-day meet runs through Saturday. Qualifying will be held during the day with final events at night. Five events will be decided tonight, six Friday night and seven Saturday night.

Southern California has one the last four NCAA championships, but the Trojans' domination is expected to end this year.

Southern Cal's string began in 1974, the last time the championships were held at Belmont Plaza. The Trojans were picked to finish second behind Indiana that year, but a third-place finish in the final relay enabled them to score enough points to nip the Hoosiers 339-338.

"That feat will be tough to duplicate," said Southern Cal Coach Peter Daland this week. "It would take two or three major breakthroughs like the kind we had in 1974 to gain the necessary momentum.

"I just don't see that happening this year," continued Daland, who has coached the Trojans to nine national titles. "Tennessee is just too strong and they have the potential to score in every event.'

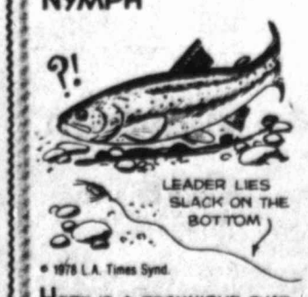

The nucleus of the 1977 Southern Cal team that won the NCAA title by a record 184 points is gone. Lost through graduation are NCAA champions John Naber, Joe Bottom and Rod Strachan.

"It seems like too many points to make up," said Daland. "We are going to have to have outstanding performances from Scott Findorff, Bruce Furniss and Kirt Fredericks. They'll have to do awfully well in order for us to win.

"Right now, I see Tennessee winning by about 50 points with us in a dogfight with UCLA, Alabama and Auburn for second," added Daland. "We have a lot of one and two-event swimmers and no knockout punch like last year. We'll be spread awfully thin."

"DEAD-FISHING" A NYMPH

HERE IS A TECHNIQUE THAT SOME EXPERTS SAY "SMACKS OF BAIT FISHING."

CAST YOUR ARTIFICIAL NYMPH INTO A "FISHY" POOL AND LET IT LIE MOTIONLESS ON THE BOTTOM--IT'S THE SAME AS STILL-FISHING A BAITED HOOK. NYMPH SHOULD BE A SIZE 12 OR SMALLER AND VERY SHARP SO A TROUT HOOKS HIMSELF AS HE SWIMS OFF WITH NYMPH AND SLACK LINE TIGHTENS. THIS REQUIRES PATIENCE!

Local Tracksters Improve Marks

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Even without a raincoat, local high school tracksters did some flashing last week.

And in the 100, Kenzie Burrell became the city's first sprinter to dip under the 10 second mark, jogging to a 9.9. In the process, Burrell overtook last week's leader, Walter Alsbrooks of Dunbar for the lead.

Jerry Issacs of Dunbar left his mark on this week's city's top six by winning the 100 at Snyder with a 10-flat (adjusted from a 10.95 in the 100 meters). The time moved the Panther into second place with Estacado's Robert Humphrey, who also improved his previous best 10.3.

Other events where times were bettered included the 330 hurdles (Billy Pendleton of Estacado from 40.9 to 40.7), 440 dash (Greg Iseral of Monterey from 50.7 to 50.5) and mile relay (Estacado from 3:30.4 to 3:28.2).

Times were not bettered in either the mile, where Curtis Conaway's 4:23.9 still stands on top, and the half mile, where Dave Yates of Monterey remains the best at 2:01.4.

Phillip Buescher of Christ the King took over the top spot in the shot from Dunbar's Billy Don Hardaway after heaving the ball 50-8.

Hardaway, who also fell to second in the discus behind Estacado's Freddie Ivory (161-1), did not compete last week.

Ivory, a recent Eastern New Mexico University football recruit, became the only trackster in the city to take sole possession of first place in two events. The 190-pounder leads the discus along with the long jump.

The Estacado senior improved his previous best in the long jump by more than three feet by jumping 22-6½. The leap came on his last attempt at the Hereford Relays.

Estacado coach Percy Hines said he believes Ivory is capable of a 23-foot jump before the season is finished.

Chuck Perry of Monterey still holds the lead in the high jump by seven inches. Perry's 6-7 leaped ranked eighth in the state last week.

Motorcycle Races Scheduled Tonight

Motorcycle racing returns to the Civic Center arena tonight for the second in a series of three indoor championship events.

Last month's race drew more than 60 entries, including that of ranking national champion Randy Carthel of Amarillo, whose feature win put him in the pro division lead for the series.

Tonight's race meet will be the first half of a back-to-back lineup which finds the bikers moving on to Amarillo's Civic Center arena to conclude the series.

The double-header nature of the series should attract an even larger field of riders, according to promoter Don Halpain. "Carthel will be back, of course, and we're also looking for some Dallas and possibly Oklahoma City and Tulsa entries this time," he said.

Events are scheduled in two divisions, professional and sportsman (amateur), and will see competition for several different engine sizes.

Pros will race in two classes, 125cc and 250cc, while the sportsman division will have racing in 50, 80, 100, 125 and heavyweight classes. All events are contested over a one-tenth-mile paved oval.

A minibike soccer game pitting any riders who feel up to it will be an intermission feature.

Racing will get underway at 8 p.m., and admission is $4 for adults and $2 for those of school age.

Tech Sweeps Shockers In Twin Bill 7-6, 8-5

Tech, however, tied the game in the bottom of the third when third baseman Rusty Laughlin led off with a double. Mike Farmer singled, and centerfielder Randy Newton grounded a single to right field to drive in Laughlin. One out later, first baseman Craig Noonan slammed a ground-rule double to left field to score Farmer and Newton.

The hosts assumed a temporary lead when Newton singled to open the bottom of the fifth and later scored on a balk by WSU pitcher Terry Hayes, but the Shockers again tied the contest in the sixth when third baseman Bob Bomerito's single drove home Tolin.

Tech regained the lead in the bottom of the sixth when Newton—who was also 4-4 in the opening game—drove in Johnny Vestal with yet another single.

In the second game, Farmer, Noonan, shortstop Brooks Wallace and Keller each had RBI-hits in the five-run first inning, while Noonan scored when WSU rightfielder Bruce Alexander bobbled Wallace's hit.

In the second, Farmer doubled, moved to third base on a passed ball—one of seven by Yeager in the two games—and scored on Newton's sacrifice fly to center.

The visitors scored twice in the top of the fourth frame, but the Raiders nullified the effect of those when Newton slammed a two-run inside-the-park home run in the bottom half of the inning.

Newton's line drive to right center took a high hop over the head of WSU centerfielder Keith Jones and went all the way to the fence. Farmer scored ahead of Newton.

Tech starting pitcher Kenny Cogdell, in his first pitching appearance of the season, allowed just one hit—a fourth-inning double by Groves—until he tired in the seventh.

After two walks and a fielder's choice, Davis drove a two-out, three-run homer over the left-field barrier to narrow Tech's lead to 8-5.

Marsh Seeks Heritage Crown, Masters Entry

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Australian Graham Marsh, perhaps the best of golf's globe-trotters, needs a successful defense of his title in the $225,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic this week to gain entry to the Masters.

For reasons no one seems to understand, Marsh was omitted from the list of foreign invitees to the annual spring classic at Augusta, Ga., despite a gaudy international record.

"I don't understand it. All I know is that I haven't received an invitation," said Marsh who, since the last Masters, won the important Chunichi Crowns in Japan, the prestigious World Match Play near London and the Lancome Trophy outside Paris.

"It's ironic," said Marsh, who won rookie-of-the year honors last season as a 33-year-old first-year player with one American victory and more than $100,000 in winnings. "The only reason I came to the United States tour was to increase my chances of playing in the majors (the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA).

"As a foreign player not competing in America, I could play only in the British Open and the Masters. I thought by coming here, I could add the U.S. Open and the PGA to my schedule. But instead of increasing the number of majors I can play in it seems I've reduced them."

His only chance of gaining entry to the Masters now appears to be a victory as the defending title-holder in this invitational event that gets started today, or as a winner of next week's Greensboro Open.

Chief among them are the current holders of the world's Big Four titles, Hubert Green (U.S. Open), Lanny Wadkins (PGA) and Tom Watson (British Open and Masters.)

SUNNY SUNFLOWER SAYS:
"We're Number 2!"
"In 1960 Sunflowers ranked 4th in the world among sources of vegetable oils, following soybean, peanut, and cottonseed, with a production of 1,665,000 metric tons of oil. But, in 1977, Sunflower Oil moved into an undisputed claim on 2nd Place in the world with an estimated production of 5,750,000 metric tons of healthy, edible vegetable oil!"

Golfers Retain Second Place

CORPUS CHRISTI (Special)—Texas Tech, trailing Texas Wesleyan, maintained second place Wednesday after 36 holes of the Gulfstream Intercollegiate golf tournament.

Texas Wesleyan teamed for a 294 to lead the tourney with a 585 total. Tech was only one stroke back at 586, after firing a team score of 299 Wednesday. University of Arkansas, leader after Tuesday's round, fell back to third at 303-589, reversing positions with Texas Wesleyan.

Dennis Northington paced the Raiders with a 69, and he now stands third in the medalist chase. Also for Tech, John Francois St. Germain fired a 72, followed by Mel Callender with 81, Kent Wood with 82, Greg Jones with 77, and Scooter Parks with 81.

Play continues today at the Padre Island Country Club.

High Point Rips ENMU Fem Cagers

FLORENCE, S.C. (Special)—High Point, N.C., zipped away to an early lead and ruined Eastern New Mexico University women's hopes for the national AIAW college division championship.

High Point's 104-65 victory dropped ENMU into the consolation bracket of the 16-team tournament. ENMU will play Arkansas-Monticello today at 3 p.m. CST in the consolation bracket.

High Point moved out to a 51-36 lead at halftime and steadily pulled away. Six North Carolinians scored in double figures, paced by Marie Riley's 19 points and Ethyl White's 16.

Donna Read tossed in 22 of ENMU's points. Margie Martinez and Miss Worley had 10 more for the New Mexico team.

The win brought High Point's record to 27-8, and ENMU women fell to 17-7.

Former Rangers Boost Atlanta Past Texas 7-0

By The Associated Press

A trio of ex-Texas Rangers helped the Atlanta Braves to a 7-0 exhibition baseball victory over their former club Wednesday.

Tommy Boggs allowed one hit in five innings, slugger Jeff Burroughs homered and outfielder Eddie Miller had two hits and stolen a base. Rob Belloir and Dale Murphy also homered while Boggs and three relievers held the Rangers to three hits.

Meanwhile, Steve Busby's comeback received a setback. Kansas City's one-time pitching ace, trying to make it back from serious shoulder surgery, was clipped for nine hits and three runs in four innings as the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Royals 8-0.

Gene Tenace homered twice, and Dave Winfield also connected to power the San Diego Padres to a 4-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. The victory was the fourth straight for the Padres and second in a row since Roger Craig replaced Alvin Dark as San Diego's manager.

Chicago's Ken Kravec, who had pitched 10 scoreless innings this spring allowing only two hits, cruised into the fourth inning with a 4-0 lead against Philadelphia when the Phillies erupted for five runs and went on to defeat the White Sox 10-5.

Baltimore and Los Angeles committed six errors apiece and the Orioles edged the Dodgers 9-8 with a four-run rally in the bottom of the 11th inning. The winning run came home when LA third baseman Lee Lacy made two errors on the same play.

Jack Clark's two-run homer with two out in the top of the ninth gave the San Francisco Giants a 7-6 victory over the California Angels, and the Seattle Mariners pounded out 23 hits and clobbered the Oakland A's 19-4.

Dave Goltz hurled eight strong innings as the Minnesota Twins downed the Houston Astros 5-1 and Butch Wynegar's tie-breaking two-run single in the seventh inning helped another squad of Twins edge the Montreal Expos 5-4.

In night games, Mark Fidrych allowed three hits in six innings and notched his fourth exhibition victory as the Detroit Tigers trounced the Toronto Blue Jays 8-0 and Bobby Valentine's two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth gave the New York Mets a 2-1 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds. Tom Seaver hurled six scoreless innings for the Reds, yielding two hits and striking out six.

Baylor Gores North Texas In Twin Bill

By The Associated Press

Baylor rode the power hitting of Fritz Connally, Burl Coker and Shane Nolen and the pitching of John Perlman Wednesday to sweep a nonconference college baseball double-header over winless North Texas State, 19-11 and 11-1.

Connally and Coker drilled homers to spark the first-game slugfest, while Perlman, 3-1, twirled a one-hitter in the second game.

Baylor raised its record to 13-6-2, while North Texas dropped to 0-24.

Sam Houston 10-7, TCU 7-8

Jack Lindsey laced a two-run double as night fell to give Texas Christian a darkness-shortened 8-7 victory over Sam Houston State and a split of a nonconference college baseball double-header. Sam Houston won the first game 10-7 in 11 innings.

Lindsey's double came in the bottom of the fifth off reliever Randy Gilbreath. Sam Houston reliever Johnny Foley, the winning pitcher in the first game, was the loser in the second contest.

USC 8, Texas A&M 5, Minnesota 5, Texas A&M 4

Southern California's Dave Engle hit for the cycle Wednesday to spark the Trojans to a 8-5 victory over Texas A&M in the nightcap of a three-team nonconference college baseball twinbill. The Aggies lost the first game 5-4 to Minnesota.

Engle's cycle of a single, double, triple and homer included a two-run homer in the eighth inning. He scored four runs and knocked in four.

Ernie Mauritson, 3-0, got the victory for the Trojans, now 16-4, while Perry Swanson, 2-1, absorbed the loss for the Aggies.

Houston-Lamar, cancelled

A scheduled college baseball doubleheader between the University of Houston and Lamar University was cancelled when the umpires failed to appear.

So instead of two games, the Cougars and Lamar engaged in an intersquad scrimmage.

Impact Of Corruption Series Still Debated

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It is one year since the publication of a 23-part newspaper series on alleged corruption in Arizona and its impact in the courts and legislature is still a subject of debate.

The articles were the work of Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc., which organized a six-month study of Arizona crime and politics by 40 journalists. The IRE said the team project, headed by Bob Greene of Newsday, was an effort to follow up the work of Don Bolles, an Arizona Republic reporter murdered by a car bomb in 1976.

Politicians, Underworld Linked

r While some of the copyright series focused on 20-year-old associations of prominent politicians with underworld figures, other parts targeted drug traffic.

"The IRE story mentioned as a major drug trafficker Arden Lee Smith," said U.S. Attorney Mike Hawkins. "He was convicted about one month ago by our office for his involvement in a sophisticated heroin operation."

Smith was sentenced last month to 15 years in prison for conspiracy to distribute heroin and cocaine. Hawkins said Smith had been under investigation before the newspaper articles, but added: "The IRE series helped focus our attention on it (the case)." Other people who were mentioned in the series in connection with narcotics and later were convicted or pleaded guilty to drug charges in federal court included Ernesto Tercero and Gary and Stephen Breen, the UmS. attorney said.

Convicted Of Possession

Tercero was convicted earlier in March of possession with intent to distribute marijuana; Gary Breen pleaded guilty last June to conspiracy to distribute marijuana and his brother Stephen pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

"One of the criticisms of the IRE stories is that they were wholly inaccurate," Hawkins said. "If subsequent convictions are any judge of accuracy, it would be my judgment that the series on narcotics was very accurate."

In other areas, Hawkins said: "We've noticed more jury interest in white-collar cases. When we first started doing white-collar cases, it was hard to convince jurors that this was something more than a business deal that went sour."

"Nothing's Come Of It"

Vernon Hoy, chief of the state Department of Public Safety, was less enthusiastic about the series, which appeared in whole or part in a number of newspapers. "Nothing's come of it," Hoy said. "Apparently Bob Greene and his people were talking to the same people that we were. Some of it was good information but you need a lot more than that to make a case."

Overall, Hoy said, "I'm greatly disappointed. I don't think it's had that much of an impact at all. People discounted it, and it hasn't resulted in any budgetary increases for law enforcement — certainly not for my agency."

Maricopa County Attorney Charles Hyder of Phoenix disagreed. "IRE made the people aware that Phoenix has big-time crime problems and in order to address them, you need adequate support," Hyder said.

"My budget is up about 58 percent," the prosecutor added. "In 1976-77 it was about $3 million. We're up over $5 million."

Better Cooperation

Hyder also said there is better cooperation among law-enforcement agencies. "We're getting comments all over the place that the whole operation has changed," he said. "It's professional now. It has integrity. There's trust and cooperation."

The Arizona House established a task force on crime, headed by former U.S. Attorney William Smitherman, and attention has been focused on a wide range of issues involving potential criminal activity.

Bills have been introduced to remove securities regulation from the Arizona Corporation Commision, which has come under investigation by the FBI as well as state authorities. Other measures would outlaw child pornography and prostitution.

Rep. John Hays, R-Yarnell, who said he joined the Legislature after becoming frustrated as a member of his county planning and zoning commission, has introduced several bills to tighten real-estate laws and define conflict of interest.

"They (IRE) did a healthy service in pointing out and getting more attention than I could," Hays said.

Don Devereaux, director of the Maricopa County Organizing Project, also said the IRE effort had an impact. Devereaux's group led a month-long strike of a ranch owned by Goldmar Inc., which is partly owned by Robert Goldwater, brother of U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater. One segment of the IRE series focused on working conditions for illegal aliens on the ranch.

"The IRE series had a lot to do with the formation of MCOP in the first place," Devereaux said. "I suspect that the attention that Goldmar has received, beginning with the IRE series, has made them a little more sensitive."

Goldmar and the oganizing project reached an agreevent in November, providing a $2.65 hourly wage and improved conditions for the aliens.

"There's no question that MCOP would not have happened without the IRE series," said Devereaux. "It gave us the kind of credibilty nationwide to get us the contributions we needed."

Lawsuits charging libel in the series are still pending.

Peter Licavoli Jr., son of a reputed Mafia chieftain, asked for $17 million in damages from the IRE and several newspapers. He later dropped the Elyria Chronicle-Telegram of Ohio as a defendant but said he would pursue the case against the others.

Libel Suit Dropped

Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the National Basketball Association Phoenix Suns, dropped his $500,000 libel suit against IRE in January, saying the two sides reached an understanding. "I do not dispute the facts in the article," Colangelo said, and Greene responded that IRE never intended to infer that Colangelo was involved in gambling.

Alfred Gay, a southern-Arizona pilot described in published accounts of the IRE series as "the mystery man of the Arizona drug corridor," is pursuing a $60 million libel suit against 23 news organizations and the IRE.

American Wife Dodges British Cabinet Limelight

LONDON (UPI) — Deborah Owen from New York has just finished a full year dodging the limelight that shines continually upon her husband, Britain's foreign secretary.

"I am actually a very private person," said Mrs. David Owen in an interview.

But her wall of privacy hides an extraordinary woman who straddles two cultures, British and American, and who wears more hats than a milliner's model.

Debbie Owen, 35, a slim and striking daughter of New York publisher Kyrill Schabert, a founder of Pantheon Books, plays a full if unobtrusive part in her husband's diplomatic life. One of her two young sons has leukemia. She runs a spectacular house with part-time help and "no labor-saving devices at all."

Besides this, she is Deborah Owen, Ltd. — a one-woman literary agency which is a fulltime career on its own.

The other day Mrs. Owen opened her front door onto a room which is a far cry from the lavish official foreign secretary's residence near Buckingham Palace — which the Owens do not use.

It was littered with toys belonging to Tristan, 7, and Gareth, 5. Amid its unrestored clutter were tables that looked as if they came from a tea-and-chips cafe in the warehouse and working class East End where the house is located. They did.

"That's the period of this house I love best — when two old ladies ran it as a cafe," Mrs. Owen said. "I have one of these tables in the kitchen."

Then she led the way into a narrow-beamed living room whose glass wall opened onto a breathtaking view of the River Thames. The river all but lapped the windowsill and bulky barges seemed to be tethered to her wall-to-wall window seat.

"The house dates from 1720," Mrs. Owen said. It may have been a sea captain's house, then a ropemaker's home and then the cafe. Now it somehow sums up all of Debbie Owen's worlds.

"It's an American house in that most of the furniture is my grandfather's," she said.

"But it's also an English house in that the fridge is tiny, the stove is tiny, we haven't got a washing machine, we haven't any gadgets at all."

Owen spent six years making the derelict four-story building habitable, doing much of the work himself. Recently they bought the ground floor of the adjoining house, and a barnsized stripped-pine door now opens onto Debbie's office.

From this booklined headquarters of Deborah Owen, Ltd. — it has room for her baby grand piano and another spectacular view — she sells the works of some 30 authors around the world.

"It's a full-time job," she said. "But the hours are not quite as orthodox as they were before David became foreign secretary.

"Working from home is a wonderful thing for me. I'm not dashing off in the morning, so I can give a lot more time to the children. And when they come home from school I'm here.

"What happens is that you work quite late at night, probably more than I ever did before. David has to work at night, because otherwise he would just never catch up.

"And, therefore, one's private life of friends, and having people to dinner, goes out the window, and you are either doing an official function or staying home working. There doesn't seem to be any in-between at all."

Mrs. Owen faced other and more difficult adjustments when her husband was catapulted into the spotlight a year ago as Britain's youngest foreign secretary since Anthony Eden.

"I had, I'm sure, a very hard adaptation of having to lose David's attention," Mrs. Owen said. "That was a difficult thing in the beginning.

"But then I began to see that he, too, was losing me a bit. I think a job like that creates a great deal of loneliness. So that I was not the only one experiencing a new kind of loneliness. He, too, was. So that has made it all rather more acceptable."

Having a foot in two cultures still creates anomalies for Debbie Owen.

She campaigns door-to-door for her husband in elections, but, as an American, cannot vote for him.

She has all the trappings of international diplomacy — trips to Brussels, a morning with Mrs. Anwar Sadat, monthly parties at her home for the wives of foreign diplomats. But more important is "the foundation of our life" which the Owens have been careful not to change.

"We live in the same place," she said. "I've continued with my work. The children's life is much of a sameness. But a lot of extras have been added" with Owen's job.

"There are terrific moments of pinching yourself and saying, 'This is just not possible. I couldn't be standing in this room with all these magnificent people.'

"And yet, not for one moment have I ever thought to myself, 'This is a lot better than the life I had.'"

Debbie Owen found her adjustment to the English way of life a hard one. It is not fully complete even now.

"I miss the extremes of American communication," she said. "The laughter, the anger, the way people get terribly involved in one thing and then suddenly you're off on something else.

"This feeling of commitment, of wanting to be effective in life — I think this is here, but in a different way, a much less dramatic way."

Deborah Schabert, who worked for publishers in Paris and New York, met David Owen by chance at a Manhattan cocktail party. She had vowed never to marry a doctor or a politician "because they would be so completely immersed in their own professions" and ruled out Englishmen "because I considered them humorless and very stuffy." Owen was a doctor, a politician and an Englishman.

Eight months later he proposed in a transatlantic telephone call.

"He claims I replied, 'Sure,'" Debbie said. "I would like to think my sense of poetry would be stronger than that, but he may well be right."

They named their first son after the Tristan-Isolde romance — Debbie is an unabashed romantic.

"I must say if I were in America I'm not sure I would have had the courage," she said. "But here I thought they wouldn't nickname him Trist, or Chris."

Tristan has had leukemia for four years. Drugs keep his condition stable and "there are only a few things that one has to be extremely careful about," Mrs. Owen said.

Nine years of marriage to a fast-rising politician have not made her a political wife. She still professes "ignorance and innocence" about politics.

"Particularly in my life, when I am juggling so many things, I only really get snippets of what is happening," she said. But political attacks based on her nationality bring an "outraged reaction."

"What has come out again and again is that I am the driving force behind the man, and longing for him to become prime minister," she said. "Again they see me as being a tough American woman, simply because I'm American. They don't know me."

Social issues rather than purely political ones engage her day.

"I believe very strongly," she said, "that people should be interested in their community, that what lies outside their front door is extremely important."

Thus she somehow makes time to work with newly released prisoners in "halfway" houses. But there is just no time for serious piano study — "I miss it dreadfully," she said — partly because of that beautiful house.

That day her living room roof was leaking, the basement was flooded, and an extra-high tide on the river had all but demolished an outside catwalk. These are Debbie Owen's problems.

"So many people say to me, 'You musn't bother David now with such things,' because, of course, he has so much on his mind," she said.

"And I do agre can cope with the bills and that sort of thing for a while. After all, it won't be forever."

Silverton Honors Fireman Of Year

He is an Emergency Medical Technician and makes many of the ambulance calls. He also teaches EMT and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

OFFICE COMEBACK FAILS

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Richard Wilson, chairman of the Pine Ridge Tribal Council during the 1973 siege at the Wounded Knee battle site, has been defeated in his attempt to regain the office. Election officials said unofficial returns gave the tribal chairmanship to Elijah Whirlwind Horse, a Bureau of Indian Affairs worker, by a margin of 1,500 to 1,030.

Chilly, Fresh-Air Classroom Used For Subarctic Studies

WOLCOTT, Vt. (AP) — In this school, the mercury often dips to 40 below in the classroom.

Students may be tracking a fox, slipping through a subarctic wilderness to study mating habits of the raven or simply learning to survive in a hostile climate.

Those who spend a semester at the Center for Northern Studies in northern Vermont find the routine takes them far beyond the textbooks of more conventional programs.

Young, a biology teacher, heads the northern studies program at Middlebury College and is a veteran of several polar research missions.

He describes the subarctic as a band around the hemisphere that dips south at various points.

"In Wolcott, the subarctic is further south than elsewhere in the world except Manchuria, China," he says.

Students majoring in northern studies spend the first semester of their junior year at the center. The program is limited to about 14 students.

The semester begins with a two-week field trip to Labrador. Then the students return to Wolcott to study forest life and evolution of the northern environment.

Young says Middlebury's northern studies program is unique because it provides the basis for an undergraduate major. Northen studies majors specialize in biology, geography or geology, Young says.

Students at the center rent houses in Wolcott. Fees for the semester are about $2,000, similar to what it costs for a semester on campus. Living expenses are not included.

Five teachers lecture at the center's one small building and direct individual projects, such as following animal tracks to learn a creature's habits and studying ravens' return to Vermont after years of absence.

The center has about 200 acres belonging to Young and his family, and nearby landowners generally allow students to roam freely for research.

The center, founded by Young in 1971, landed a research project in 1973 for the U.S. Interior Department that involved studying large areas of Alaska for possible preservation as a national park.

Young, who works with several other scientists, says he continually is involved in such projects.

Cloud-Seeding Project Given U.S. Funds

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Federal funds totaling $685,500 have been received by the Department of Water Resources for a series of cloud-seeding experiments this summer in the High Plains Cooperative Program (HIPLEX) east of the Permian Basin.

The federal funds will be supplemented by $100,000 in state funds appropriated by the 1977 legislature.

The HIPLEX program is a cooperative effort between the State of Texas and the Bureau of Reclamation of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Taking part in weather modification experiments this summer will be Texas A &M, Texas Tech, Meteorology Research Inc., and the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which has sponsored an independent cloud-seeding program for increasing rainfall in the Big Spring-Snyder area since 1971.

Big Spring will be headquarters for the field program, which is scheduled for June and July, DWR reports.

Latin American Citizen League To Set Up Monitor Task Force

The League of United Latin American Citizens is establishing five-member task forces within 20 geographical regions of Texas aimed at improving the system of justice for Mexican-American citizens of the state.

Pete Garza, director of District 1, said the task forces "came about because of the so-called murders" of Mexican-Americans while in the custody of police.

A resolution adopted by the state executive board says Mexican-Americans have been "subjected to large scale abuse and exploitation while in the custody of law enforcement officials and/or agencies."

In addition, the resolution decries the lack of Mexican-Americans in the "administrative departmental levels of law enforcement agencies in the State of Texas, causing a strain in police-Chicano community relations."

To change these conditions, the task forces will work with bar associations and with district judges "urging reform of the Grand Jury system.

"The task force will urge District Judges to begin appointing Mexican-Americans, Blacks and women as Grand Jury commissioners, while also encouraging the appointment of such minority group members to the position of grand jurors," the resolution says.

In addition, the league recommended the passage of a "state Civil Rights Law" which would allow "stiff prison sentences when it is established that law enforcement officials have ... deprived another citizen of his civil rights under color of law."

The league urged U.S. Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower to support the nomination of Mexican-Americans to federal judgeships.

In response to the deaths of Mexican-Americans while in police custody, the league recommended citizen advisory committees be established to work with the police and sheriff's offices and provide "continuing input towards the improvement of law enforcement departments; psychological testing and screening of police applicants for bias or prejudice against minority groups; ethnic studies courses for police cadets; and the adoption of affirmative action programs "which will result in increase opportunities for Mexican-Americans in the areas of recruitment, hiring and promotion" within law enforcement.

Garza said the task forces will monitor how minorities are treated by police and investigate any allegations of abuse.

"We don't want to interfere with any police action," Garza said. "We just want to make sure justice is carried out."

He speculated instances of police brutality might decrease if officers knew their actions were being monitored.

Garza said the league is "very dissatisfied with the way people have been selected for juries" in that they feel Mexican-Americans have been excluded.

He said the task forces would attempt to find out if some racial groups are given preferential treatment in being called for juries.

Ogallala Aquifer Studies Proposed

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Members of the Texas Water Development Board have authorized the Department of Water Resources to propose a contract with the U.S. Geological Survey to conduct studies on the Ogallala Aquifer for the USGS.

Engineer C.R. Baskin told the WDB the studies would be for "refinement" of existing knowledge of the aquifer, and 'are not intended to duplicate prior studies — a fear expressed by some board members.

An "intensive amount of field work" would be required in the studies, Baskin said.

Baskin reported that the USGS is planning a series of studies of major regional aquifer systems under a $5,000,000 appropriation made to it last year. Those studies are to include the Ogallala.

He said the Department of Water Resources thinks that the USGS, because of limitations on personnel, would be willing to contract with DWR for the work — to cost an estimated $700,000 — and said USGS has indicated interest.

Portions of the study would be subcontracted to "one or more of the High Plains underground water conservation districts" involved in managing the Ogallala, and some work might be sub-contracted to Texas Tech University or other schools in the area, Baskin said.

Optimism Greets Farm Bill Action

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Emergency farm legislation passed by the Senate Tuesday has no chance of being enacted into law in its present form, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee said Wednesday.

But Rep. George Mahon of Lubbock also said the one-year interim bill was never intended to be a final version, only a vehicle from the Senate "to get something moving."

Elbert Harp, executive director of the Lubbock-based Grain Sorghum Producers Association, observed, however, that sentiment is strong in the Congress.

"I wouldn't be surprised if the final bill is close to the Talmadge-McGovern measure, with part of the flexible parity aspect," he said.

The Senate's legislation faces a strong compromise effort from House members of a conference committee appointed Wednesday afternoon.

Other High Plains observers reacted to the Senate's solution to current farm difficulties with a mixture of skepticism, confusion, and "it's still not enough."

All agree, however, that the House-Senate conference committee has its work cut out for it, regardless of what compromise is finally decided upon.

"A good deal of work will have to be done in the conference to iron out the problems the Senate has created," said Donald Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Inc. in Lubbock. He added that until a final compromise version has been approved by the committee, the impact on cotton cannot be assessed.

Several questions are raised in the Senate bill, Johnson said, particularly the "incompatibility" of different portions of the measure, which actually is a combination of two individual bills introduced by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., plus an amendment by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

"How would this be administered?" asked Johnson. "Would farmers benefit both from the flexible parity and be paid to take acreage out of production?"

The speed with which the legislation has been pushed through the Senate also is a concern, he noted.

"Without debating the components, I think it is obvious they did not take the opportunity to iron out the problems or consider them properly," said the PCG executive.

"It bothers me that they haven't done something quicker," remarked Mel Cherry of Lorenzo, Crosby County farmer and a supporter of the American Agriculture movement. "But I'm pleased that they are doing something now."

Cherry said he did not believe a delay in the passage of a final version sometime in April would hurt farmers in South Texas who already have planted their crops.

"I don't see any great problems to any producer yet," he said. He said farmers still could go back and plow up a portion of their acreage in order to qualify for program participation without adding too much to their costs per acre.

A cotton loan rate of 50 cents per pound still would be too low for High Plains producers, commented Bobbie Ritchie of Wolfforth. He said that for the average type cotton produced each year across the region, the government support would be around 44 to 45 cents per pound.

The 50-cent loan for the fiber crop is part of the McGovern amendment.

"If we don't get something (a higher loan) through to show these bankers, a lot of these fellows are going to be hurt," said Ritchie.

Even so, he added, "if we don't get some rain, I think the good Lord is going to take care of this acreage reduction.

"I've been working out in the field, and it looks like I'm going to have to cut back my plantings because of poor soil moisture," he explained.

Mahon said it was "unfortunate" that the legislation had not been considered earlier. He added, however, that he did not believe the Carter administration has adequately considered the options open to it to help the farmer.

"Under existing law, the Department of Agriculture, through the Commodity Credit Corp., has wide legislative authority to take action designed to improve the present situation," he pointed out.

Although CCC loan rates could be raised administratively by the government agency for wheat, feed grains and soybeans, the cotton loan is fixed by law to one of two formulas and may not be adjusted by executive decision.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wildly erratic price movements in the final moments of trading produced a mixed close in the soybean complex on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday, but grain futures held their good-sized gains.

"It's a treacherous market. There's no sensibility behind it," one soybean trader commented after those futures plummeted to steady levels, then surged about 10 cents within a couple of minutes.

Prices in the soybean pit finished 11½ cents higher to 4¼ cents lower. Wheat contracts ended about 3 cents higher and corn futures ranged from 1¾ to 4 cents above the previous close.

At the beginning of the day, speculators bought contracts in response to Senate approval of emergency farm legislation.

Analysts, however, described a mixed reaction to the farm relief package, which would raise price supports and income guarantees for grains and other commodities.

Although they felt the package had little chance of approval in its present version, they said there was growing concern that Congress would enact some form of legislation to boost grain prices.

Farmers sold limited amounts of grain in cash markets, which lessened hedge selling in the pits by cash grain dealers.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was moderate to active on Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was good.

Chicago Mart Sees New Highs

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures held a daily limit gain of 150 points across the board Wednesday and ended with buyers over sellers on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Nearby April was carried to a new high since 1974 at $53.52 per hundredweight. Volume was a meager 2,908 contracts and traders estimated 20,000 cars or more wanted at the limit.

All contracts except distant April set new highs for the season on short covering and other buying sparked by Tuesday's pig crop report from the USDA. Traders also noted strength in cash cattle and the eight-cent per pound advance in beef recently.

Wholesale beef was up one-half cent at 78 to 79 cents per pound, highest since October 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up $1.75 per hundredweight with the top at $53.25. Omaha's top was $51.50.

Hog futures held the 150-point limit. Volume dwindled to 97 exchanges with an excess of 10,000 cars wanted at the limit.

The advance was in response to the bullish USDA report Tuesday which noted that only 1 percent more hogs were on hand March 1 than a year ago and that the decline in breeding hogs also was only 1 percent, far less than expected.

Strength in cash hogs and a turnaround in cash hams were constructive.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 4 1/4 cents at 73 3/4 to 77 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points, a week's high. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $1.50 with the top of $48.40 per hundredweight in Sioux City.

The major markets expect 23,000 head to arrive today. Wednesday's kill was estimated at 277,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures were locked up the 200-point limit from the opening bell with buyers over sellers across the board at the finish. Sales were held to a tiny 140 contracts with at least 5,000 cars bid at the limit.

The bullish pig crop report was the primary influence, easily offsetting out-of-town storings of 4.2 million pounds and heavy hog runs. Cash bellies climbed seven cents from Tuesday on the pig report. Traders also noted higher cash hogs.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up six cents at 73 to 79 cents per pound, f.o.b. river, highest since June 1976.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE HOUSE VOTED WEDNESDAY to negotiate a compromise with the Senate on a complex, multibillion dollar emergency bill to raise farm supports 20 to 30 percent and offer farmers new subsidies for cutting back surplus production.

Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., of the House Agriculture Committee warned, however, that with the House set to begin a 10-day recess Wednesday night, there was no chance for final passage of new legislation until the recess ends in early April.

The conference committee met briefly Wednesday, but only long enough to agree it could not get down to serious business until April 3 because not enough members will be on hand during the Easter recess to make binding decisions.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, meeting with the conferees, told Senate Agriculture Committee chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., "Yes sir, we'll be ready" to report by April 3 on whether the administration accepts or rejects all individual sections of the bill.

BERGLAND ALSO NOTIFIED THE LAWMAKERS the administration intends to announce some new farm aid steps of its own next week. He gave no details, but he had said earlier a paid land retirement program was under study.

Talmadge urged conference members to begin work Thursday and seek to have an agreement ready for immediate House and Senate votes April 3. Farmers already have begun planting in some areas and there "will be chaos and confusion in rural areas" until Congress sets final rules for this year's crops, he said.

But when Talmadge and Foley polled their colleagues, they found many could not be present next week because of previously arranged engagements. Foley said it would be "an exercise in futility" to hold meetings with too few members to take binding votes.

Foley won House approval, 332-63, of a motion to name members to a House-Senate conference committee to compromise on the emergency farm bill which the Senate adopted Tuesday under pressure from a farm strike movement.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS WERE BEATEN, 224-167, in an attempt to instruct House members of the conference panel to insist on retaining a controversial "flexible parity" program in whatever final compromise emerges.

The striker-backed flexible parity plan, sponsored by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., was one of three major sections of an emergency farm bill that passed the Senate. It would allow individual farmers of some crops to determine their own individual price support target rates in 1978 by deciding how much of their land to leave idle.

Dole's program was written into the farm bill on the Senate floor Tuesday as a companion to the land retirement plan by Talmadge. The Talmadge plan would pay farmers $4.2 billion to hold up to 46 million acres of grain, cotton and soybean acreage out of production this year in a move to get prices up by reducing surplus production.

THE WHITE HOUSE COUNCIL on Wage and Price Stability, meanwhile, charged in an unusually strong statement that the bill — in the form in which it passed the Senate — would "be one of the most inflationary actions of the federal government in recent years."

"If the bill is enacted into law, there would be a major risk of returning the country to double digit food price inflation," the council said.

In its public statement, the council said the overall measure would add 2 to 5 percent to food prices it already expects to increase by 8 percent.

Eastern Area Leads U.S. In Suicides

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The proud and stubborn Yankees of northern New England have the highest suicide rate in the nation because of the same personality traits that have earned them a place in American folklore, mental health experts say.

And they say the slow-melting snows of early spring again are bringing suicides in the region to a peak.

In 1977, the nation's estimated suicide rate was about 12.5 deaths per 100,000. In Vermont, the rate was 21.4; in New Hampshire 19.3; and in Maine 17.6, according to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. No other region has so high a rate.

"It's the old Yankee value system that makes this part of the country the most difficult in which to prevent suicides," said Andy Loman of the Mental Health Center in Bangor, Maine.

The typical New Englander in the country north of Boston is pictured as frugal and obstinate. While these idiosyncrasies may make Yankees good businessmen, it also makes them uncooperative patients, doctors say.

"It's the Yankee version of the 'stiff upper lip'. They try to keep it all in, try to be strong; hide their feelings until they do something drastic — like kill themselves," said Dr. Stephen Soreff, director of emergency psychiatry at Portland's Maine Medical Center.

"They feel that to get help for their depression or mental problems is not only wrong, but a symbol of weakness," Soreff said. "The admission of needing help is against the Yankee mentality and people are dying because of it."

Dr. Elizabeth Forsberg, a Vermont psychiatrist, said old people are more likely to choose suicide over professional help.

"Their insistence at trying to solve their own problems is frequently mixed with a deep feeling that they are no longer useful to society. And this combination, all too often leads them to suicide," she said.

The experts agree that winter depression traditionally peaks as spring starts. The long cold is about over. People are sick of the dirty snow. Holiday and fuel bills are coming in. Property taxes are due.

Blood Pressure Clinic Slated

A free cardio-vascular testing clinic will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday at the YMCA at 1601 24th St.

The clinic is open to both members and non-members of the YMCA.

Blood pressure screening, trunk and leg flexibility, pulse at rest and after exercise, lung capacity, body fat percentage and counseling on health problems and exercise will be offered.

Cardio-vascular risk profiles and American Heart Association materials will be given to participants.

Both Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip are descended from Queen Victoria, and they are actually third cousins.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors' bills, which outpaced the rate of inflation by 80 percent since 1950, are likely to continue their rapid rise unless steps are taken to produce consumer resistance, a new government study said Wednesday.

The study said the jump results partly from earlier practices by the medical profession to reduce competition and has occurred despite a recent increase in the number of doctors.

"The median income of self-employed physicians — $63,000 in 1976 — is higher and has risen faster than that of any other major occupational or professional group for which historical income data are available," the study said.

The study said physician fees rose 9.3 percent last year and have risen 80 percent faster than other prices in the economy since 1950.

The three chief causes of spiraling fees, it said, are lack of competitive pressures, extensive health insurance coverage that prevents market forces from restraining health fees, and insurance reimbursement practices "which allow the physician to determine the fee and level of reinsured reimbursement."

It said the medical profession successfully restricted the number of new doctors during much of this century through its control of medical education. That kind of anticompetitive practice has ceased, the report said.

Insurance coverage, both from private insurers and the government, currently extends to 80 percent of the population, the report said. It said this coverage has "exempted physicians' fees from the usually restraining effect of market forces.

The extensive insurance coverage also blunts consumer resistance to the use of high cost medical services, the report said. Unless major insurers alter their reimbursement practices in some way to encourage consumer resistance to rising medical costs, "there is little reason to predict that physicians' fee inflation will not continue to outpace price increases in the over-all economy."

The study, prepared by the Carter administration's Council on Wage and Price Stability, did not make specific recommendations but appeared designed to provide support for administration proposals currently before Congress to contain increases in medical costs.

The highest earnings among physicians are for pathologists and radiologists, whose average earnings were estimated at more than $100,000 in 1975, the study said.

It said physicians' income apparently bears little relation to the number of doctors in an area, the demand for services or geographical location.

"One possible explanation for this is that physicians have a target level of income," it said, and when demand for their services is insufficient to achieve that income level, they raise their fees in order to achieve it.

While fees increased in recent years, so has the number of physicians, rising from 139 per 100,000 of population in 1960 to 177 in 1975. The ratio is expected to increase to 222 per 100,000 population by 1985.

The report found that rates of return on investment in medical training are far in excess of rates of return for educational training in other fields.

National Hospital Standards Set; Five-Year Deadline Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government set the first national hospital standards Wednesday but built into them a margin of flexibility for small and rural hospitals.

The standards, which go into effect Friday and give local areas five years to bring themselves into line, represent a significant retreat from "mandatory" rules that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposed last September.

Asked at a news conference what impact the guidelines will have, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said he expected they would have some but couldn't predict what it would be.

When the rules were proposed last year, HEW officials said the so-called national health planning guidelines would eliminate one of every 10 general hospital beds in the country by 1984.

The guidelines also set numerical standards representing what the government considers an adequate level of hospital care in the United States.

Congress required the department to issue the guidelines to improve hospital quality and acess.

The HEW rules say there should be fewer than four general hospital beds per 1,000 population in a community and that the average bed should be occupied at least 80 percent of the time.

There are now about 4.4 beds per 1,000 nationwide and a 75 percent occupancy rate.

Health planners have found that many communities across the country have built more hospital beds than are needed and that maintaining empty beds is almost as expensive as serving beds occupied by the sick.

What makes the final standards different from the original proposal is that HEW has left room for local health planning agencies to adjust the standards to their own needs.

The new guidelines give the federal government few weapons to use in trying to convince local agencies to toe the line drawn by the federal government and no authority to close hospitals or eliminate beds.

The original proposal made public in September touched off a storm of controversy in several states and in Congress. HEW received 55,000 letters commenting on the proposal, the vast majority of them in opposition to the strict standards set down by HEW.

Califano ordered reconsideration of the issue and in January proposed a revised set of guidelines, easing some numerical standards and permitting local communities more flexibility in deciding which provisions they should meet.

The guidelines also set quantitative standards to insure that specialized care is given only in hospitals that perform such procedures regularly.

Metropolitan hospitals, for instance, would be required to deliver at least 1,500 babies a year in order to maintain an obstetrical . . service. Small, unsophisticated obstetrical units not equipped to deal with problem deliveries or seriously ill newborns would be exempt.

The minimum of 1,500 deliveries is 500 lower than the current minimum suggested by the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology "to maintain a consistently high standard" of care.

Numerous studies by medical specialists' groups have demonstrated that when doctors and hospitals perform specialized procedures often enough to maintain their proficiency the number of complications and fatalities declines.

Other minimums set by the guidelines would affect hospitals that provide open-heart surgery, radiation therapy to cancer patients, pediatric services, newborn intensive care, cardiac catheterizations and diagnostic procedures using computed, graphic (CAT) scanners, which are highly sophisticated and very expensive X-ray machines.

Among the British Crown jewels are the two largest cut diamonds in the world, both of which came from a single one-and-a-half pound diamond, says National Geographic.

Stock Prices Drop Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices recorded a moderate loss Wednesday in selling attributed to disappointment over the market's sharp downturn the day before.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 11 points on Tuesday for its largest loss in 2½ months, slumped another 5.28 to 757.54.

Losers outstripped gainers by about a 3-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .16 to 49.89.

Analysts said some light early selling might have been prompted by unsubstantiated rumors that President Anwar Sadat of Egypt had been assassinated. By mid-day sources in Cairo and the Egyptian embassy in Washington had denied the rumors.

Several Wall Streeters said the reports had not gained much credence in the investment community even before they were denied. The market's decline was gradual throughout the morning, and trading was light by recent standards.

New York (AP) —Wednsday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
