Witcher of Lubbock, Governor Ferguson's appointee as district attorney of the 72nd judicial district, was confirmed Thursday by the senate in call session of the 39th legislature on resubmission by the governor, and Senator W. H. Bledsoe of Lubbock, who opposed his confirmation almost came to blows in the anteroom of the governor's office Thursday. R. E. Franklow, one of the governor's secretaries and several men in the office, prevented action, Franklow said. The exchange of words was heated.

Bledsoe said that he permitted the confirmation of Witcher with the understanding that Witcher would resign immediately thereafter, and told the Associated Press that he would ask for reconsideration of Witcher's confirmation Friday.

Witcher issued a statement saying: "My confirmation by the senate was no surprise to me, particularly in the view of the fact that Senator Bledsoe, who had filed protests with the committee had no charges of any character to file against me, and so stated before the confirmation committee. At my request the committee had an open hearing, and the senator personally had nothing to say against me.

"I had tendered my resignation some time ago, as I did not anticipate any fight would be made against me and when I found there would be I withdrew my resignation. My record as a prosecutor is something I am proud of, and I invited the closest analysis of all my acts.

"Senator Bledsoe agreed to withdraw his objections without prejudice to me in any manner in the senate chamber and if any statement was made by him tending to prejudice me it was wholly incorrect, and without my knowledge or consent."

CAGE ASSERTS HE'S NOT TOOL

Jim Ferguson Holds No 'Strings' On Him He Notifies Senate

AUSTIN, Sept. 30. (AP)—Denial that James E. Ferguson or any other person dominates him was made in the answer to charges filed against his confirmation Thursday by John Cage, highway commissioner and appointee of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson when his answer was submitted to the senate of the 39th legislature. It will be printed in the senate journal.

Cage, whose confirmation has been postponed along with Hal Moseley's, chairman of the commission, has sought re-consideration and having failed has been notified by the governor that she will consider his office, and offices of other unconfirmed appointees.

Both Moseley and Cage were hastily summoned in conference with the governor and former governor today. John Bickett Jr., son of John Bickett of San Antonio, third commissioner, also conferred with the governor.

In his answer Mr. Cage reviews each allegation of the unsigned charges against his confirmation as filed by Senator Wood of Granger with the governor's nominations committee. SOLONS RENIG ON QUIZ INTO PRIMARY COST

Texas Senate Votes Down Previous Plan For Election Probe

AUSTIN, Sept. 30. (AP)—The senate of the 39th legislature in call session Thursday reversed itself and voted not to investigate campaign expenditures and contributions, during the recent democratic campaign. Senator R. A. Stuart of Fort Worth made a motion to reconsider the Murphy resolution appointing a committee of senators and appropriating $15,000 to inquire into the state press, contributions and expenditures of the candidates and activities of organizations and interests in the recent campaigns. This carried by a vote of 18 to 10.

Efforts were made by Senator I. D. Fairchild of Angelina to resubmit the resolution to committee on privileges and elections, but Senator Charles Murphy of Houston, demanded that the resolution be voted on at once and it was killed by a vote of 16 against 12 for.

Shift Since Yesterday

The vote showed a shift in the forces since yesterday, which Senator Murphy attributed on the floor to the fact that the nominee for governor of the democratic party was absent from Austin Wednesday and is here today. "Yeas, Bailey, Berkeley, Davis, Fairchild, Carl C. Hardin, Holbrook, Murphy, Parnell, Pollard, Russek, Strong and Ward.

"Noes" Bowers, Flody, Roy J. Hardin, Lewis, Miller, Moore, Parr, Real, Reid, Smith, Stuart, Triplett, Westbrook, Witt, Wood and Woodard.

Those absent and not voting: Bledsoe, Price, and Wirtz.

"The responsibility of whether this resolution is carried, is placed on the fact that our party nominee for governor was out of town Wednesday and is present today, "Senator Murphy charged before the final vote was taken. Senator Stuart said that the investigation would mean the expenditure of $15,000 with no good to come from the investigation. "It would be a waste of money," the senator charged.

Murphy Insistent

Murphy said that the people of Texas are entitled to know what influence was brought on the recent election in Texas through the influence of the W. C. T. U. and the anti-saloon league and the oil interests of the state. He declared that the people approved an investigation into from where the money came. Murphy said that it was strange that a change had come in the senate within such a short time on the question and that the people were entitled to know why the change was made.

When the effort was made to resubmit the resolution to a committee Senator Murphy said that it was up to the senate now either kill or sustain the investigation.

How They Voted

The vote Wednesday on the Murphy resolution was "yeas". Bailey, Berkeley, Bledsoe, Bowers, Davis, Fairchild, Floyd, Hardin of Erath, Holbrook, Miller, Murphy, Parnell, Parr, Pollard, Price, Reid, Strong, Stuart, Triplett, Ward, Wirtz.

Sewer and Street Improvement Funds Also Given Endorsement

All three of the improvement bond issues for the City of Wichita Falls were carried by a majority of two to one yesterday in an election that polled the largest vote ever registered here in such an election. The proposal of a bond issue for $500,000 for the purpose of building a new city auditorium and office building was the principal issue in the election and more opposition was registered to this issue than either of the other proposals, however it carried by almost a two to one majority. Additional funds for sewer improvements in the sum of $100,000 carried by more than a two to one majority as did the street improvement issue of $150,000.

Biggest Bond Vote

The largest vote ever registered here in a property owners election at any previous time was a bond election last year when approximately 500 votes were cast on $575,000 bond issue which was carried by a handsome majority. In 1920 the city voted on a $1,500,000 improvement bond issue in which there were only about three hundred votes cast, and which carried by a large majority.

The election yesterday created more interest than usual, and late in the evening a very heavy vote came, many of them registering within the last few minutes of time.

Mayor Gratified

Mayor R. E. Shepherd and the city council have expressed themselves as being highly gratified at the vote shown in the election, and the officials of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, who worked for the new auditorium proposal, are jubilant at the reality of having a suitable building in which to entertain conventions and civic greetings.

MERRY LOCKE, pretty and gay as her name, is the kind of girl who has no ambition beyond a good time and plenty of beaux. At 20 she fails in her business course because she won't study. To the disappointment of MOMS, her mother, she takes a job in LILLIE DALE'S beauty shop at a tiny wage.

At that time she is having the first real love affair of her life—with TONY GAINES, a young lawyer, who wants to marry her. Their engagement ends when Tony finds out that Merry lets other men take her out and make love to her. Later a letter comes from him, but it is lost in the house before Merry has a chance to read it. Then she hears that he has gone to Montana to live.

Her sister, CASSIE, marries her rich employer, MORLEY KAUFMAN, but is not happy with him despite her soft, easy life. Through Cassie, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a bachelor. They become engaged. But when Merry gets tangled up in the divorce case of LESTER PURCELL and his wife, Bill marries another girl.

Lillie Dale and a MR. HEFFLINGER come to board with Moms. A year afterward Moms and Mr. Heffinger marry. JINNY, the youngest sister, elopes with DERRICK JONES, and home no longer seems like home to Merry.

She hears that Tony Gaines is going to marry a girl in Montana, and tries not to care. After a long succession of suitors who do not attract her, Merry drifts into an engagement with GEORGE LEEF.

One spring, while she is helping with the housecleaning, she unearths Tony's lost love letter to her. Cassie lightly confesses that she hid it long ago because she wanted Merry to marry Bill Erskine instead of Tony, and Merry tells her she has ruined her life for her. That night she gives up her job at the beauty shop, and decides to go back to business school and make something of herself. Tony is becoming famous as a criminal lawyer. The day he wins his biggest case, his mother dies, and Merry knows that he will come home for the funeral. She decides to go, in order to catch a glimpse of him and the girl he has married. That night Lester Purcell comes to see her, and tells her she ought to become a model for the clothing company he works for. "You know just how to jolly the men along, and show 'em a good time," he says, and for the first time Merry sees herself as men see her—a good pal on a party, but not the kind of girl they want to marry!

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER LXII

Merry felt exactly as if she had had a bath in sticky, muddy water and never would be clean again.

What Les had said to her had left a smirch on her, somehow. The smirch that is on all women who are not wholly good—half-way girls. Girls that are not exactly bad, and certainly not good.

"A good sport" he had called her, the kind of a girl who goes out with a man and shows him a good time. The kind of girl whose kisses are easy and cheap.

"And yet the worst thing I've ever done in my life is to take a few drinks and let a few men make love to me," she said to herself, slowly undressing before the bedroom mirror.

It had not seemed wrong to her at the time. It had seemed harmless enough and thrilling, perhaps, to smoke a cigaret, to empty a glass of gin-gingerale, to let Bill Erskine or Cabby Marsh or Derrick or George Leet kiss her.

And now, as she looked back on it, she could see how much those things had all sullied her—dirtied her, cheapened her and made her common.

And yet, didn't all girls "pet" these days? That was what the woman's pages of the papers said. So did the women's magazines. So did the moving pictures.

Still, something was wrong somewhere, Merry knew. Had she been too easy? Too good natured? Too ready to "Let"?

For only two men ever had wanted to marry her, pretty as she was. George Leet—poor old George, who was lucky to get anybody to marry him!"—and Tony Gaines.

Tony Gaines! Merry's breath caught at the thought of him. The thought that she would see him again, on Wednesday, after all these years!

Thinking about him, Merry put out the light, got into bed, and dropped off to sleep.

The next morning Lillie came with a Ford truck to take away her trunks and her few bits of furniture. She was going to share a flat with Trudie Aiken, the girl who had taken Merry's old job.

"I hate to see her go, in a way," Moms said regretfully, as she watched Lillie walk down the street, when the truck had departed. She had liked Lillie, with her slang, her cheerfulness and her startling clothes. Lillie was always good company.

"I suppose I may as well rent her room right away," Moms added with a sigh. "I need the money. But I do hate the thought of having another stranger in the house."

But, after all, she did not have to rent Lillie's old room.

Merry went down to the drug store late in the afternoon for some glove cleaner. When she came back there were four trunks standing in the front hall.

The second she laid eyes on them she knew that they belonged to Cassie.

They were elegant and expensive wardrobe trunks with Cassie's initials painted on them in Harding blue—Cassie's favorite color.

A bag beaded with rosebuds on a Harding blue background lay on the hall table and from the kitchen came the sound of Cassie's voice, raised in anger and complaint.

She was talking so fast that Merry could not make out what she was saying. But Mom's reply came clearly enough.

"Well, I don't know where I'll put you, Cassie," she said. "Jinny's going to bring the twins over here for a week while Derrick's away on a fishing trip. She just called up and said she'd be over after supper."

Merry opened the door and went into the kitchen.

Cassie was perched on one corner of the table, looking like anything but a neglected and ill-treated wife.

What she did look like was a spoiled child. Her underlip was thrust out in a pout, and her green eyes smouldered. One foot, in its silver-buckled, hand-made slipper, beat the floor in a swift tattoo.

Her black satin tube of a dress was the kind that simply cannot be bought for less than a hundred and fifty dollars. Her tiny satin turban was a work of art.

Everything about her, right down to the tips of her manicured fingers spelled m-o-n-e-y, and lots of it.

"Hello, Merry," she said sulkily, "do you want a room-mate? I've come home, again."

Merry nodded good naturedly. "Why, of course, I'd love to have you, Cassie," she answered without any hesitation.

"It will be only for a week," Moms explained. "Jinny's going to bring the twins over for a week, while Derrick's out of town. When she goes, Cassie can have her old room, the one Lillie just moved out of."

While she was speaking the screen door banged, and there came a rush of feet in the hall.

The door flew open and Jinny with the twins, came in. She opened her leaf-brown eyes wide and made a comical face at the sight of Cassie.

"Hello, Bright Eyes! Left your old man again?" she asked blithely. Jinny rushed in where angels wouldn't have thought of treading.

Cassie nodded.

"I just don't get you," Jinny told her with a firm shake of her red head. "Do you pack up and leave him every time you have a fuss with him?"

With great dignity Cassie got down from her corner of the table. "That's my affair," she said grandly.

Jinny tittered. "Well, all I've got to say is that if you do, you're an awful dumb bell," she declared. "Derrick and I get sore at each other about once a week. Throw dishes, an' everything. But that's the end of it! We kiss and make up and feel fine! But this silly business of rushing out of the house, bag and baggage, every few weeks is beyond me."

Cassie only blinked at her like a tiger-cat getting ready to spring. She opened her thin scarlet lips, then suddenly snapped them shut, and sailed out of the room.

The three women in the kitchen could hear her going lightly up the stairs.

"Jinny, I wouldn't talk to Cassie like that if I were you," Moms began. But Jinny cut her short.

"Oh, fish!" said Jinny, who had never outgrown slang, "somebody's got to talk to her! I'll bet, if the truth were known, it's her fault whenever she rows with Morley Kaufman and walks out on him! In my opinion, anybody who lives

FRISCO LINES SEEK TAX CUT

Suit Filed At Frederick To Upset Tax Levy Made In County

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 30. Suit filed by the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway company in district court here Wednesday attacks the validity of the county tax levy, and, if successful will cut the tax levy 50 per cent.

The railway company contends that a county levy of 2.49 mills for highway purposes is illegal. It alleges that the 4 mills current expense levy is illegal inasmuch as it will produce more revenue than county estimates call for. A 1.52 mill levy for county special fund is attacked in toto the company claiming that it is illegal as the county estimate does not show any money to be raised for a county special fund. These three items together make 4.09 mills which the railway company is seeking to have stricken from the county's total levy of 8 mills.

The railway company's petition also attacks the levy made by the county excise board for the town of Davidson, claiming that the 31.4 mills levy is 7.44 mills too much.

The suit has been brought against the county assessor, J. E. Hines, and County Treasurer Bessie Edwards, under provisions of an initiative bill passed by Oklahoma voters in the August 3 election.

An attorney for the tax department of the Katy railroad was in Frederick Wednesday and in commenting upon this suit of the Frisco said that the railroads of the state had been investigating county levies which have recently been announced, and that it was probable other counties in the state would find themselves defendants in similar suits.

THE PETTER

In the same house with Cassie ought to be paid for doing it." She slung a twin under each arm and walked out into the backyard with them, warbling "Bobby Shattoe" to them as she went.

Merry ran upstairs.

In her little bedroom Cassie was unpacking a suitcase.

"I won't touch the trunks until I get settled in my own room, after Jinny's gone," she said, looking up from a pile of lacy underclothing.

"I don't imagine you'll stay very long, do you?" Merry asked innocently. "Morley'll probably be over here tonight, to make up with you and take you home. He always does come for you, you know."

Cassie only made a slight upward movement with her eyes, as if to say, "Heaven alone knows!"

"But even if he comes crawling to me on his knees, I won't go back with him this time!" she snapped out, "not unless he fires that Miss Wilberforce! And he'll never do that! He's just mad about her. He can hardly wait to get down to the office mornings!"

"Oh, no, he's not crazy about her, Cassie," Merry tried to sooth her. "But if I'm going to start working for him in six months, why should he fire her and break in another girl for that short time?"

Cassie shrugged her shoulders under the gleaming black satin that covered them.

"I'm not going to argue the question with you or with him or with anyone else!" Her voice was like a whip. "He'll get rid of her —or he'll never get me back! I'll sue him for every nickel he has, too!"

Her sister studied her face. Cassie was just as hard and determined and wilful as she had been years ago, when she had hidden Tony Gaines' letter because it suited her plans to hide it.

Tuesday came and went and Morley did not come to the house. He did not even telephone.

By Wednesday a troubled little frown began to show on Cassie's forehead.

She came down to breakfast in a peach-colored kimono, trimmed with bands of Harding blue. Above her face was drawn and rather yellow.

"Nothing but coffee, please," she said shortly to Moms, as if she were giving her order to a waitress.

She shivered at the sight of the twins inhaling their oatmeal.

"I'll thank you not to make faces at my children!" Jinny told her loftily. "Just because you married a man with a few smackers, don't think you're Lady Clara Vere de Vere! You used to eat in the kitchen, yourself, not so long ago, and I guess a little oatmeal on my kids' faces isn't going to give you sea-sickness!"

Cassie's narrow nostrils quivered. "Don't be vulgar, Jinny," she begged. "At least, try not to be! And please keep the twins out of my things. They spilled a whole bottle of perfume on my bed yesterday. I'll slap them if they don't keep out of my room."

"Just try it!" warned Jinny, threateningly.

The old battle that had raged between them for years, was on again.

Merry listened to them without really hearing what they were saying.

Her eyes were on the cuckoo clock above the old golden-oak sideboard. Nine o'clock. In five hours she would see Tony Gaines again, for the first time in eight long years!

She wondered if he would be changed, by his success and his celebrity. Or would he be the same old Tony, with the winning smile and the deep eyes that looked right through you? He had done so much and become so well known during those eight years.

"And I've just stood still," Merry said to herself as she began to dress herself at one o'clock. "I'm right back where I started from, eight years ago."

Almost twenty-nine she was, and had nothing to show for it. Nothing but an older look in he reyes, and a wilful droop to her mouth that betrayed he rinner dissatisfaction.

"I'm just dying to see what kind of a girl Tony Gaines married," she said to Moms as they started down Chester street together.

She pictured Katherine Bannerman to herself as a sober sensible woman who wore low-heeled shoes and corsets and no rouge. A good woman. The kind of woman who would help a man climb the ladder of success.

"But I'll bet he doesn't care any more for her than he once did for me," she told herself defiantly, as she and Moms boarded a Pike street car.

A man was coming down the broad stairs. Merry saw that it was Tony Gaines—Merry tried to look away,, but—. In tomorrow's instalment of "The Petter."

How does Merry feel after her meeting with Les Purcell? Why do Cassie and Jinny return to their mother's home? Read Chapter XLII of "The Petter" tommorrw.

For their production of "Across the Pacific," starring Monte Blue and directed by Roy Del Ruth, Warner Bros. reproduced a large section of the city of Manila and two miles of tropical shore line.

With this achievement the actual landscaping and altering of the surface of the earth itself, predicted some years ago by a movie seer, has come to pass. "Across the Pacific" is a melodramatic spectacle dealing in epic proportions with the two-year insurrection incited and led by Aguinaldo in the Philippine Islands which followed the Spanish-American war.

That being twenty-three years ago, Manila and other historical places concerned in the picture have been so modernized that they were not suitable for use in the picture. Consequently these places were reconstructed in California at enormous expense, from photographs and drawings made at the time and carefully collected by the Warner research department over a period of some months.

The two miles of shore line, the largest set ever constructed in the history of moving pictures, had to be planted along its entire length with cocoanut palms, banana plants and other tropical plants. On this is seen the tents of a regiment and 500 veterans of the Spanish-American and Great wars as American troops.

The supporting cast includes Myrna Loy, Jane Winton, Charles Stevens, Tom Wilson, Walter McGrail, Herbert Pryor, Ed Kennedy, Theodore Lorch and Sojin. "Across the Pacific" comes to the Grand theatre today for a 3-day run.

WESTERN WHIRLWIND SHOWS AT MISSION

The Western Whirlwind, Tom Tyler, is playing today at the Mission Theatre in his newest F. O. B. picture, "Out of the West." Tom is seen to advantage in the type of role that has brought him a tremendous fan following and made him one of the most promising players on the screen. The part demands some very clever riding, the most spectacular being a daring "pony express" from his horse to one of the racing team. Aside from the thrilling equestrian stunts, the picture contains some rich humor and a delightful romance. Frankie Darro and "Sitting Bull" are much in evidence and add immeasurably to the entertainment value of the story.

BERT KING IS CLUB SPEAKER

Rotary Hears Address On Constitution and Crime In America

Speaking on the "Constitution of the United States," Bert King, prominent local attorney told Rotarians in part, that the greatest crimes in the United States are committed against the majority by the minority. "That's what this constitution is for, adopted by men who drew it up under the greatest pressure ever known in America. The constitution arose out of human experience and should be the moral code of people so far as God is concerned," the speaker said.

Guests were introduced and Bud McCallum, coach of the high school football team, spoke a few words asking the co-operation of the club for the team this season.

A. E. Myles, president of the club, announced that a letter has been received from Floyd Ard which contained information that the local artist has played before Emil Saur, Europe's foremost pianist, who has consented to take young Ard for instruction at his studio in Dresden, Germany.

J. S. Pitman was in charge of the program and played the accompaniment for a quartet composed of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Underwood, Miss Tillie Mae Shaefer and Alva Willgus, who gave a group of old time songs. Mr. Willgus also led in a sing-song.

The meeting was opened with the invocation by Dr. N. F. Grafton and singing of America by the ensemble.

Fresh OIL

Every 500 MILES

Means

LONG LIFE
for Your Motor

Every manufacturer of automobiles stresses the need for frequent changing of the motor oil in the crank case.

Even the best oil suffers from "Crankcase dilution", and should be periodically replaced with fresh oil. Experience has shown that draining and flushing the crank case and refilling it with high-grade motor oil of the right consistency, every 500 miles, pays handsome dividends in better motor performance, fewer repair bills and part replacements, and longer service life for the motor.

There is a Humble Dealer near you. Let him drain and refill your crank case with Humble Motor Oil, regularly —every 500 miles.

No Vibration In Unique Star Motor

A unique idea demonstrating the vibrationless ease of a Star motor car engine has been carried out in the window of the Parmenter Motor company on Scott avenue where a motor is placed in operation while suspended from the ceiling by four small wires.

The machine is started and speeded up to a lively rate, while it hangs motionless without braces and only the sensitive wires for support.

The circulation system is demonstrated in all its efficiency by the pump which forces a stream of water 12 feet high while the motor is running at a moderate rate. After running without a stop for 12 hours the motor was found to be practically as cool as when it started.

TAXES IN OTHER STATES

GASOLINE tax levied for road purposes is an issue that is uppermost in Texas and many other states where road building is not a straggling industry. Advocates of a high gasoline tax or rather a high gallonage tax, are fond of pointing to California and telling what the Californians are doing in the road building lines by means of this tax.

Hatcher Thomas, a Texan who has studied gasoline taxation in Texas and elsewhere, says California charges a $3 registration fee and a 2c gasoline tax. Registration fees are distributed as follows: Fifty per cent to county road funds and fifty per cent to state department of public work for state roads.

As for the California gasoline tax, it is devided as follows: Fifty per cent to counties in proportion to the number of vehicles in the state for construction and maintenance of roads, bridges and culverts and fifty per cent to the state highway maintenance fund. Lenn Small is governor of Illinois. He put over an immense bond issue for road purposes. Hatcher Thomas says that Illinois, with no tax at all, is paying the interest and retiring $160,000,000 worth of road bonds and makes this comment, "Their roads are the envy of the nation."

Speaking of Arkansas, a small state, he says Arkansas has a 4c gasoline tax, 10c oil tax, a 12 1-2c horsepower tax and a 55c per hundred pound gross weight tax with a minimum fee of $15. Speaking of road conditions in Arkansas, this expert on gasoline taxation says, "a drive over their roads will make you wonder what became of their money." Therefore, it is easy to see that a gasoline tax is not always a remedy or a means of building and maintaining a model set of highways."

Speaking for the member of the Dallas Auto club, which is one of the largest in the country, its secretary says: "A gasoline tax properly applied with the funds used entirely for maintenance and construction and used in conjunction with an absolute minimum registration fee comes nearest to being a fair legislation than we have yet arrived at. If such a plan were adopted in Texas we would have an approximate sum of $3,000,000 from registration fees and from a 3c gasoline tax, we would derive $15,000,000, making a total of $18,000,000 for road construction and maintenance. If such a fund was carefully and conservatively used, we would soon boast of as good roads as some of our eastern states."

Road building and road maintenance is one of the paramount issues in Texas and will be throughout the coming years. An administration which handles approximately $20,000,000 every year for road purposes, will have problems to solve all the time. It will be a huge sum of money to disburse for building purposes and only expert and highly qualified men of the highest integrity should be intrusted with the state highway department and its program.

Speaking of the attitude of the hundreds of members of the Dallas Auto club, its secretary goes on record as follows: "We feel that the automobile is now contributing through its one-fourth of the present gasoline tax, its fair share and we believe that the other luxuries of our present-day civilization are more able to stand a direct tax for the additional school money than is the automobile. Some people will state that the automobile is not a necessity and we will say that neither, strictly speaking, is the telephone, natural gas and a myrid of other subjects which are today called necessities. Strictly speaking, there are only the following necessities: air, food, drink, shelter and means of protection from beast. Literally speaking, however, the automobile is a necessity and is used every day for the promotion of commerce and the building up of our state."

There are upwards of a million motor vehicles in Texas, and this warning is sounded by the spokesman of a great body of motor vehicle owners in one of the great cities of the commonwealth.

"Unless the great body of motorists in Texas stand firm in their determination not to allow such pernicious legislation, the forces active in its promotion will succeed at an opportune moment in passing same, and every succeeding term of legislature will in all probability see others seeking to gain money for their purposes through a special tax on the automobile. It is necessary, therefore, that each and every motorist use all influence possible to secure an overwhelming defeat of the proposed four-cent gasoline tax."

There are two sides to every question or issue. There are two sides to the gasoline tax proposal. Just now the motorists of the state, or rather their spokesmen are presenting their side to the public. As for the motorists as a foreword, they say they do not wish to retard or impede the progress of education in Texas, but they do not agree and cannot agree that the automobile is the means of taxation for the promotion of schools, eleemosynary institutions or state sanitariums.

PRICE AS A PROPHET

COLONEL THEODORE H. PRICE, in Commerce and Finance, says the world's consumption of American cotton, exclusive of linters, was 14,000,000 bales last season compared with 13,250,000 bales in 1924 and 1925. He predicts an increase of 15,000,000 bales this season would not be at all unlikely. Speaking of the carry-over he says: "True, there were brought forward from last season almost 6,000,000 bales, but this carry-over contained an unusual amount of low grade and poor staple. It may have to be drawn upon quite liberally and in eleven months from now the invisible and visible supply might easily be below normal."

Yes, but eleven months from now the bulk of the crop of 1926 will not be in the hands of the producers. Speaking of the demands for reduced acreage, the colonel goes on record as follows:

"The threat of an important reduction in the supply of good grade and staple would at once arouse the spinner. Speculation in cotton, so long dormant, would be attracted. It is by no means improbable that the 1926 and 1927 crop will sell at a good advance over the last one."

After scanning the entire industrial world the editor of the New York Trade paper says, all signs point to an increased cotton consumption in this country and Canada. Furthermore, he says, France, Belgium and Italy are straightening out their financial troubles and the importation of a prime necessity like cotton, will become less onerous.

He predicts that Russia will be in the market for cotton and that the Germans, the Austrians and the Poles will be large buyers. If the world's consumption of American cotton last year went beyond 14,000,000 bales, then the world's consumption of cotton this year should take the entire crop of 1926.

HE SPEAKS FOR MORGAN

THOMAS W. L'MONT speaks for the house of Morgan. LaMont reviewed a book dealing with the war period in American finance from 1908 to 1925. In his review he suggests war debt cancellation or reduction as a wise foreign policy. LaMont of the house of Morgan declares in his review that American and Americans are not popular in Europe. To win popularity for American and Americans, he asks:

"Are we going to be able to collect several hundred millions of dollars every year for the next 62 years from the taxpayers of Europe without arousing trade antagonisms and other animosities far more costly for us than a further writing down of the debts would prove? Not lightly may we hold the privilege of having become the creditor of all the world."

Is LaMont of the house of Morgan in favor of the cancellation of all the private loans made by American banks and bankers to Europe and Europeans since the close of the World war? If not, why not?

JOHN JOSEPH ON EASY STREET

JOHN JOSEPH TUNNEY is on Easy street. He received a purse of $200,000 after his twelve round contest. He has been made a reserve lieutenant of the marines and he was granted the freedom of the city of New York by a mayor who was born in Greenwich village.

John Joseph is a product of New York City. He was born in Greenwich village and the village has been his home ever since. He called it his home while he was carrying a musket with the Fighting Marines who made history in the bloodiest battles in France and Flanders.

John Joseph was a fighting man in the world war. He enlisted. He did not wait for the draft. Over there they told him to carry a musket and he carried it without a murmur. He did not have a soft job while the fighting was on.

In his leisure moments he whipped all the soldier prize fighters that was stacked against him. Now, financially speaking, he is on easy street, the pride of the sea fighters of America and the handiest man with his fists in the fistiuff world.

Telling About It

BLUE STEEL

BY OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

"Out!" Morgan's voice was curt and incisive. "And get this straight, Limpy: You don't know nothin', an aint told me a thing, savvy?"

"I getcha."

Halfway down the stairs Flash slackened his pace. He lighted a cigarette and strolled languidly into Wink's saloon. There for a moment or two he lounged against the bar and conversed idly with Mr. Sullivan. He looked at his watch and then at the big clock on the wall.

"The old biscuit is right, Wink—fifteen minutes till one."

"Yup. Twelve-forty-five is right."

"Guess I'll hit the hay. A decent feller like I ought to be snoozin' at a quarter till one."

Having impressed upon Mr. Sullivan that he was among those present in the Fourth Precinct at fifteen minutes before one o'clock in the morning, Flash Morgan slouched into the street. Once there, the insouciance dropped from him like a mask. His feet spurned the pavement, and he ony stopped running when he reached the garage where he had left the shiny little automobile which was his proudest possession.

Fortunately the hour was late and such policemen as he may have passed were indifferent to his fracture of the speed-laws. Certainly he traversed the distance between Wink Sullivan's saloon and the vicinity of the Neighborhood Trust in a trifle less than no time at all. He parked two blocks away, took his bearings and walked swiftly toward the scene of the proposed robbery.

The sedate Fifth slumbered contentedly—modest homes nestling coolly behind velvety lawns and peeping out through stately trees. Corner arcs spluttered importantly and shed little light. Two blocks away was the street-intersection which marked the community shopping center of the Fifth Precinct—a half-dozen grocery stores, two meat-markets, four drug-stores, a cigar-store, a barber-shop, a dry-cleaning establishment, a moving-picture theatre — other places of business; and small and unimposing, the very substantial Neighborhood Trust company.

The scene was quite tranquil and innocent—no suggestion here of lithe and evil young men, of nitroglycerin, of chloroform for the watchman, of blue-steel revolvers and strange and effective burglar tools. The Fifth slept happily behind its bulwark of unimpeachable respectability, all unmindful of Blood Moreno and of Flash Morgan's Greyhounds. As Flash moved catlike toward the little bank building, his professional eye lighted with approval. This indeed was a place to tempt the cracksmen; it was, in fact, almost a crime to leave it untapped. Even a noonday holdup would be easy here. Flash Morgan was rather partial to picturesque holdups; it was fascinating to read the newspapers the day after: "Daring robbers ... point of pistol ..., in bold defiance of the police ..."

Flash was not quite certain what he intended to do, except that it was his plan to visit punishment mind that he would prevent the upon Blood Moreno for this insurrection. Also, it was vaguely in his robbery if he was in time; but his paramout thought was that he would show the gang once and for all that Flash Morgan ruled, and that his edicts were not to be disobeyed.

He flattened himself against a wall. Shadowy forms moved writhlike out of the doorway of the Neighborhood Trust; one of them carried a satchel. Flash knew that he was too late; yet despite his bitter fury against Blood Moreno, he could not help but applaud the expedition with which the job had been pulled.

They passed him one by one, never noticing him in the shadow where he crouched motionless. As they turned down the alley, a big figure bulked before him, and even in the darkness Flash Morgan recognized Moreno.

Morgan moved. His hand jammed against Moreno's ribs, and there was something in the hand. Blood knew the feel of an automatic. He stopped.

In very low tone and with words which were entirely unmistakable, Flash Morgan expressed his personal opinion of Moreno; and as he spoke, there came into the brain of Mr. Moreno a hunch that he was in a rather precarious position. The next second that hunch became a certainty.

Blood was not lacking courage. Now there came to reinforce that courage the desperation of the cornered rat. M. Moreno thought quickly — and acted almost as quickly.

It was rather unfortunate for M. Moreno that he was not quick enough. His Pile-driving blow never landed. The automatic spoke, and M. Moreno's fist stopped in midair, then sank slowly as M. Moreno crumpled to the sidewalk. A big figure a half-block away heard the shot, saw a shadow fall and lie motionless—saw another shadow disappear in the Stygian gloom of the alley—heard the roar of a motor.

The big figure reached the body with unbelievable speed for a man so large. In one hand he held a regulation police revolver, in the other a flashlight. He inspected—then straightened.

"Blood Moreno—I thought so." Then a sorrowful frown creased the forehead of Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden. "I thought that was Flash Morgan runnin' away—I know the lad's stride—Doggone him for this, anyway!"

He shrilled his whistle. A startled patrolman answered. There was a hurried telephone call to the precinct station; two plainclothes men sped to the scene in a little roadster. The investigation disclosed many things, things which caused Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden to shake his head sorrowfully.

Even in death the feud between Blood Moreno and Flash Morgan continued; for all of the glaring evidence found by the police lieutenant indicated beyond possibility of contradiction that the robbery had been negotiated by Flash Morgan in person. Mr. Moreno had done this in a very efficient and thoughtful manner; it was quite evident his intention to rob his chieftain of no scintilla of the glory accruing to such a magnificent escapade as this. Also—proving in some measure that Mr. Moreno's calculations were not entirely wrong—it happened that Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden put the incriminating evidence in his pocket and determined to think things over.

The story caught the morning papers just before press time and therefore received little space. But with the evening dailies, the case was different. Here was a story unusually savory, and it came at a time when there was a dearth of good news. Besides, none of the three evening papers was overly fond of the police department; and now——

Well, the ultra-respectable Fifth Precinct had been violated. Nor was that all; murder had been committed upon its very door-step. Children on their way to school the next morning shuddered deliciously over the dark red stain on the sidewalk—the stain which the grocery-store porter had been careful not to erase. Housewives, engaged to their matutinal marketing, turned shuddering eyes at the spot—X—where the body was found, and at the interior of the rifled bank. This was the Fifth's formal introduction to crime, and the Fifth luxuriated in its fear. Bank robbed — man murdered. What would the police do about it?

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

Neighbors Are Responsible For Most of Woman's Extravagance, For Many An Unsuitable Marriage and Many a Misfit Job—Yet, Why Try to Please Neighbors When They Criticize Anyway?

Perhaps the woman that women envy more than any other woman who ever lived is Eve, because Eve had no neighbors.

There was nobody across the street or next door to keep an eye on her comings in and goings out. Nobody to count how many fig leaves she had hung up on the line of a Monday morning and note whether they were genuine or imitation. Nobody to keep tab on how many times the Serpent dropped in for a little chat about pipping when Adam wasn't around. Nobody she had to keep up with. Nobody she had to wear herself out making a splurge before.

Lucky Eve, with nobody to please but herself, with no dread of "what will they say?" hanging over her head! What a pity she spilled the beans and nitroduced neighbors and trouble into the world!

For it is the fear of their neighbors that is the beginning of trouble with women and makes them do a thousand foolish things that they would not otherwise do.

It was the neighbors that kept women for years and years eating the bitter bread of dependence instead of feasting on cake of their own making.

They were strong and healthy, and full of energy. Tehy had brains in their heads and skill in their fingers. They simply longed to get out in the world and earn their own living, instead of hanging on to some relative who did not want to be burdened with them.

But they were afraid of what the neighbors would say if they went to work, and so they endured the humiliation of parasitism. They lived in houses where they knew themselves unwelcome. They wore the cast-off clothes of others and toiled like slaves, without wages, in sister's or brother's or cousin's kitchens or nurseries.

And it is fear of what the neighbors will say that still keeps thousands of girls out of domestic labor that they would love, and in which they could command big salaries, and makes of them incompetent and ill-paid stenographers and clerks. There are girls who are born cooks, who have a genius for cooking that would make them rich and famouse if they would follow their natural bent. There are other girls who adore a kitchen and who hate an office, but they turn their backs upon their predestined careers because of what their neighbors might think.

It is the neighbors who drive multitudes of girls into unsuitable marriages. Marriage doesn't appeal to every woman. There are many women who would really prefer to be old maids, and to whom their own independence and their own little ways are dearer than any husband will ever be. Sometimes Mr. Right does not come along, and a girl finds no man among those she knows who either comes up to her ideal or fires her fancy.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

RIGHT CANNOT LOSE

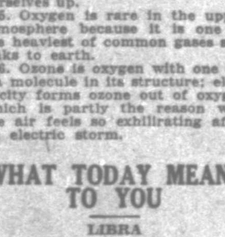

Do right to those who do you wrong,
And to the curt be kind.
For all that matters all along
Is your own heart and mind.
If rude another seems to be,
Then rudeness meet with courtesy.

And even in some large affair,
Whatever foes oppress,
The strongest armor one can wear
Is simple quietness,
A steel they cannot penetrate
With all the weapons of debate.

The jealous mind is never just,
The angry never wise,
With calmness meet the angry thrust
Until the anger dies.
You never lose with peace within,
And, if you lose not, who can win?

The gentle are the masters of
The world, and not the strong,
For, when they hate you, you can love,
Do right when they do wrong.
Though foes assault, though friends accuse,
Wrong cannot win, right cannot lose.

SEEING THINGS

A noted psychologist was called on to demonstrate to some skeptical students that hypnotism is a fancy. He hypnotized a student into believing that she had gold combs in her hair, silver shoes on her feet, a green dress when hers was really blue, and that she was followed by a little black dog, and various other delusions. Presently he brought her out of the hypnotic state and one by one he removed the imaginary pets and ornaments with which he had hypnotically endowed her. But he forgot one of them. Some years later he met this student again, and she complained of being followed everywhere by a little black dog.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to Thursday's questions:

1. Air presses equally in all directions.

2. Air pressure is just the same no matter whether a roof is over your head or not.

3. The air pressure is greater (though not noticeably) at the bottom of a mine.

4. Nitrogen in the air is the source from which nitrates and nitrites, necessary to sustain life, are drawn; also it helps to dilute the oxygen; if we breathed pure oxygen we would rapidly consume all our energy; as burning is only oxidation, we would, literally burn ourselves up.

5. Oxygen is rare in the upper atmosphere because it is one of the heaviest of common gases and sinks to earth.

6. Ozone is oxygen with one extra molecule in its structure; electricity forms ozone out of oxygen which is partly the reason why the air feels so exhilirating after an electric storm.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

LIBRA

Today's planetary aspects are, more or less, adverse, although there are one or two brief periods, just at about noon and, again, at about sunset, when they assume a favorable hue. Under such conditions, it would be politic to engage only in work that is customary and obligatory, and not seek "any fresh fields or pastures new." The prevailing influences indicate a morbid sense of self-dissatisfaction, and such a spirit, as long as it prevails, is inimical to success in any line of new endeavor. After the day's work is done, some mild form of recreation should be sought, whereby self-centred thoughts can be eliminated.

Children born today are, during infancy, destined to suffer more than is usual from the ailments that are usually associated with the period of babyhood. None of these will, however, be organic, and they will all raedily yield to ordinary methods of treatment. They will not develop normally until after adolescence, they will be peevish and unsatisfied, and will show a strong tendency to be always "crying for the moon." As they "grow up," these temperamental blemishes will disappear, although they will never attain the stage of unalloyed contentment. They will be studious and possess retentive memories, but will never have buoyancy of spirit.

If today is your birthday, you possess a magnetic personality, a happy disposition, and are faithful, as well as amiable. Although you love ease and luxury, you are very adaptable, and can accomodate yourself to any and all conditions. You do not take life very seriously, and any emotions you may possess are more transitory than lasting. Your ideals are high, but, if they cannot in the ordinary course of affairs, be attained, you, rather than work to reach them, are satisfied with something less. No one has ever had reason to question either your kindness of generosity. You, however are more disposed to live in "today" then give much thought to "tomorrow." Music and art both make a strong appeal to you, although you are neither a musician nor an artist. The success of your home life depends very much on the matter in which you choose, or have chosen, your mate. If done suddenly, and without giving yourselft time to test your feelings, much happiness may result.

MRS. HORNSBY QUEEN

"I'M THE GINK"

I'm the gink who sends picture post cards. I never visit anywhere but that I deluge my friends and even casual acquaintances with cards. I draw a cross by some room on the card which bears a picture of the finest hotel where I stop. The fact that it isn't really my room doesn't worry me one bit. I write little things like "Having a fine time. Wish you were here." Of course my one and only idea is to let folks know that I am traveling. I send them cards.

Back To God's Country.

Soon after the Civil war ended a former trooper of Morgan's cavalry moved from his home in the bluegrass region to California. He was a gentleman of genial habits and a natural orator. It was almost inevitable, therefore, that sooner or later he should enter politics. He announced as a candidate for the legislature on the democratic ticket. He made a spirited campaign, but when the primary returns were in, of three candidates the ex-Confederate had finished third.

He called a meeting of his friends and made a speech. It was short but complete.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I'm going to quit this cussed country. I'm going back to Kentucky—the only fit place for a southern white gentleman to live—where the niggers make your crop for you and the sheriff sells it."

FAIR POSTPONED

Cottle County Fete Postponed On Account of Rains

PADUCAH, Sept. 30.—The Cottle County Fair which was to have been held here today, has been postponed on account of the weather. It has rained here intermittenly for the last four days and nights, and the roads are almost impassable. Both cotton and feed crops are being damaged by the continued wet spell.

Unless pickers can be secured before long the loss will be considerable.

Slim Love Hurls Dallas To Dixie Championship

Miller Belts Homer With Runner On Base In First, Drives Over Victory In Eighth, 3 to 2

HEINEMAN PARK, NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30. (AP) Dallas won the baseball championship of the south here today chiefly because of stellar batting by "Hack" Miller, who drove in enough runs to enable the Texans to gain a 3 to 2 decision over New Orleans in the sixth decision game of the Dixie series. Miller turned in one of the best performances of a career studded with brilliant exhibitions.

The Southern association pennant winners outhit the Texas league title holders, but "Slim" Love kept his hits scattered better than Joe Martina, who hurled for the Pelicans.

Hack Started It.

Miller's circuit clout over the left field fence with two out and Morse on second in the first inning was the only four bagger the home run champions of the Lone Star circuit hit during the series. Brainard sent Gross to third in the Dallas half of the eighth after obtaining a single. With two out again, Miller went to bat and drove Brainard home with a single, his third safe blow of the tussle.

The Bird's made their greatest threat in the third stanza. Dowie opened that frame with a single. Love walked Martina, the next batter. Dowie took Hendrick's roller and tossed the ball to Tate who caught Martina at third. Vick ended the inning by hoisting to Morse.

Rally Falls Short.

The Southern leaguer's rally in the ninth fell one run short of tying the count. Tucker and Whaley opened that frame with singles. Deal sacrificed and Tucker scored on Ewoldt's fly to Brainard. Dowie then went out on a weak pop up to Riley.

The Pelicans won the first two games of the series. The Steers then took four in a row with the exception of a tie contest played in Dallas.

Approximately 6,000 fans saw today's game.

COLLETT DETHRONED

HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 30, (AP)—Glenna Collett today entered the valley of conquered champions in her third round defense of the women's national golf crown.

Instead of Miss Collett and Miss Cummings facing each other in the semi-finals tomorrow as they did a year ago, Miss Wilson will meet Mrs. Stetson in a semi-final round that is new to both of them.

YANKS ODDS-ON FAVORITES

Odds are quoted at 6 to 5 in favor of the Yankees. A Broad street firm announces the placing of one wager of $12,000 to $10,000 that New York takes the series and one of $1,000 against $12,000 that the Yankees take four games in a row. Prices of 14 to 10 that St. Louis does not win four straight and 3 to 1 that the Cardinals do not win the first two games have been offered.

Men Are Only Men While Women Are Football Players In S. Dakota

CAVOUR, S. D., Sept. 30.(AP) This town, situated in the "great open spaces" of South Dakota, has been revealed as the place where men are only men and the women are the football players.

With the smallest and lightest group of male football talent in years Cavour high school has turned to the girls to sustain interest in the gridiron sport.

Two girls' football teams have been organized and will play preliminaries to the six contests scheduled for the boys. The coach admits he expects the girls to draw the crowds.

The girls make their first start Friday when Cavour plays Lake Preston.

Lion Eleven In Fair Condition

Practice Knocked Out By Rain—Vernon Invades Memphis

Incessant rain has halted all outdoor football practice this week but will not prevent the Lions from invading the Memphis stronghold today, according to Coach E. A. Baggett. The Vernon mentor and his charges leave for Memphis by train early this morning regardless of the rain.

Injuries Improved.

Aside from the lack of practice, Baggett's squad is in good condition. Injuries which hampered the work of the squad during early season practice have practically healed, and the coach should be able to display his full strength against the Memphis gridsters.

Hutto, 210-pound line candidate and fastest man in Baggett's aggregation, is rounding into shape after being out several days with an injured shoulder, and should see action in today's game. Parker, regular string center and Baggett's lone hope for the pivot position, is in good condition again after sustaining an injured back last week. And numerous weak ankles reported last week are in good shape now.

Baggett Not Sure.

Baggett's club will enter the game with a genuine respect for the Memphis squad, remembering the hard battle which the class B eleven staged on the local field last season. The Lion mentor admits that his club will meet strong competition, and says he will not be surprised if they come out of the contest second best.

Childress Faces Tough Schedule

But Bobcats Are Fortunate Hard Games Come Late

Childress high school Bobcats face a rather hard schedule this year but the most dreaded games come at the end of the season when they will have gained considerable experience and had more real training of the kind that Coach Odus Mitchell hands out to them. Two games have already been played, a pre-season, non-league game with Amarillo, the Sandstorms winning by a bare 6 to 0 margin, and the defeat of Matador by Childress t othe tune of 41 to 0.

The following is the schedule of the Bobcats for the coming season: Friday, October 1, Hollis, at Hollis; Friday, October 8, open; Friday, October 15, Quanah at Childress; Friday, October 22, Paducah, probably at Childress; Friday, October 29, open; Friday, November 5, Wellington at Wellington; Thursday, November 11, Armistice day, Shamrock at Childress; Friday, November 19, Memphis at Childress. The date of November 25, has been left open but will likely be Clarendon at Childress unless the Bobcats have been undefeated to that date and the State Interscholastic League sets the games from that time on.

HISTORY WILL REPEAT

That's Way Dope Stacks Up For Game Between Sewanee-Aggies.

COLLEGE STATION, Sept. 30. Judging by the Friday contest with Trinity, this year's contest between Texas A. and M. and Sewanee at Dallas on October 9, at Fair park stadium will probably be a repetition of past history. Against Sewanee's dazzling overhead attack, Bible and Rothgeb will pit a defense, while the Aggies will rely on gaining a touchdown and holding it. Sewanee has demonstrated in two earlier trips that its offensive is brought forward more rapidly than the Aggie coaches elect to push theirs, although no more games are played. At least not this year since the Tigers will have met one military school and the Tennessee Teachers when they arrive in Texas.

INDIANS TAKE WAR PATH ON ENEMY'S SOIL

Real Redskin Territory To Be Invaded Saturday By Tribe

Ludgate's Junior College Indians are going on the war-path into sure 'nuff Indian country across the Red river this week. The Maroon and Gold warriors will board a bus at 11 o'clock this morning for Cordell, where tomorrow they will cross arms with the gridders of Oklahoma Christian college, a junior college team of much merit in Sooner football circles. This will be the local team's first trip into enemy soil and, on account of the heavy opposition, will give a good line on the possible strength of the Maroon eleven this year.

16 Braves In War Party.

Arrangements have been made to carry 16 men with the coach, the trip to be made by a chartered bus as an experiment against the high cost of railroad fare. The trains have made going too rough to depend on private and complementary car transportation in such a trip.

Picking the ones to go proved a hard job for the Indian mentor, for the limit that it was possible to carry forces several to stay at home who really deserve to go. Some of these will be given their chances on other trips if they continue to show their stuff. Several men playing before will be found at home on account of breaking training rules or not sufficient fight in practice under the difficulties of the week, for Ludgate believes in making the honor of being on the team a serious business.

The Roster.

Ludgate announced last night the following as the ones to make the Cordell trip: backfield, Stephenson, McAninch, Harvey, Keller, McConnell, Rosser and Dixon; ends Thomas, Scoppin and Bland; tackles, Gilchrist and Burks; guards, Ricks and Trevathan; centers and utility line-men, Patterson and Boyd.

LONGHORNS AT MANHATTAN

Varsity Gridders Tackle Kansas Aggies Saturday Afternoon

AUSTIN, Sept. 30. (AP)—Coach Doc Stewart and 26 Texas University Longhorns left Thursday for Manhattan, Kansas, where Saturday the Longhorn eleven takes on the Kansas Aggies.

Probable starting line-up of the Steers: ends, Slover and Higgins; tackles, Gooch and Moore; guards, Wray and Tignor; center, McCullough; quarterback, Allen; halves, Captain Saxon and Stallter; fullback, Rufus King.

Coyote Pups Open League Schedule At Archer City

Wichita Falls Juniors All Set for Invasion Of Wildcats' Home Territory This Afternoon

Archer City will see the opening of the Junior interscholastic league or Class B schedule Friday afternoon with Wichita Falls Junior High School as the visiting team. Coaches Golden and Wilson, of Wichita Falls and Archer City respectively, in a conference this morning decided on the location. Wichita Falls could have had the game here but for the conflict with the Coyote-Cameron Aggie contest here at the same time.

Coaches Golden and Lewis will carry their squad in automobiles, leaving here at one o'clock in the afternoon, in time to give the boys a rest before the game, which is to take place at 3:45.

In anticipation of the hard battle expected, junior high coaches have been driving their men through much hard practice, with scrimmage Thursday on the eve of the game. A number of men looked especially good in scrimmage yesterday, especially Beach in the role of a plunger and Carter as signal barker.

Archer City, with victories over Iowa Park and Electra to its credit, should give the youthful Coyote Cubs a hard battle in which the younger and greener Wichita Falls eleven will count itself happy if it is able to keep the score down to moderate proportions.

Stan Harris Favors Yankees For Title

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.(AP)—Stanley Harris, who won a world series championship with his Washington American league team in his first year as manager, does not think Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals can duplicate his feat.

"The Yankees for mine," he said Thursday in discussing the approaching series. "I look for them to be superior to the Cardinals in hitting strength and also believe they will show in Waite Hoyt the best pitcher of the championship games.

"Furthermore, I believe their familiarity with both playing fields will give the Yankees a considerable advantage. A club unusued to the field in Yankee stadium can find a pack of trouble there."

Olney Tangles With Bellevue

OLNEY, Sept. 30.—Olney's first scheduled game of the University of Texas Interscholastic league will be played here Friday between the Cubs and the Bellevue high school gridders.

The Cubs are looking good after their first game of the season last Friday against the Coyote Pups, whom they defeated by a 21 to 0 score.

FROSH DRILL PORKERS

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 30. (AP)—The freshman football squad, drilled in "Ole Miss" plays furnished opposition today for the varsity Razorbacks who are to play their first conference game of the season Saturday with Mississippi University.

Coyotes Tackle Cameron On Spud Grid Today

HOME GUARD BESET WITH MINOR HURTS

Line Okeh, But McCallum's Backfield Not So Good

Football fans will have the chance to see a hard-fought football game this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when the Wichita Falls High School Coyotes meet the Junior college eleven from Cameron Agricultural College on the Spudder Park gridiron. The Oklahomans have always had a team good enough for Junior college competition and would be expected to give the Coyotes the test of their lives if the Red and Black were in the best playing mettle.

Line prospects for the Coyotes are much better than heretofore, says Coach Bud McCallum, the hard attention given the forward wall during the past two weeks having brought its results in smoother performance. With Sisk and Dobson, veterans from last year back in their old posts in the line, things are stacking up much better than at first. Pete Powell, kid brother of last year's indomitable Ed, is showing up so well that he will very likely earn a regular place on the first wall. Pinney's shoulder injury is such, however, that he will not be able to get into the fray today.

Allred Ready To Go

Mac's troubles, it seems, are just beginning, for, as soon as the line was whipped into shape somewhat, the backfield that gave so much promise literally fell to pieces. Allred is the only man among the first two groups really ready to go, according to McCallum. Mills is toting an injury that will handicap him much, if he can get into the game at all. Mitchell, on whom much was counted for his experience, has not rounded into form and has been out sick all week. Perk Ray, with a bunged up chest, and Francis, with his ankle injured at the beginning of the season still in bandages, both are far from in shape but both will have to carry the burden of part of the game today. McKinney is carrying a hip injury that will be practically certain to keep him out today and Dickey has been out of practice two days on account of injuries. Lynch, half, the running flash who burned up the track around enemy ends in the first game and was heralded as the best broken field runner in the Red and Black uniform in years, has been nursing a twisted knee from the first and cannot play yet for possibly several weeks.

Rayzor On Deck Again

There will be barely enough men able to go among first and second string backs to put out a backfield and third stringers will probably have to be given a taste of battle. Rayzor, who has been out with injuries since the first week of practice, is ready to go again to help Francis run the quarter position. Aside from him substitute material will be scarce.

The opening line-up will contain several new faces for starters. Last night Bud announced as his probable line-up this afternoon Rayzor at quarter, Allred at left half, Fly at right half, and Perk Ray at fullback.

In the line rearrangements have changed things considerably. Pete Powell has been going so well lately that he will be given a start in preference to Hunky Ray. Tank Horton, letter man and good punter from last year, who at first was ent expected out at all on account of a knee twisted out of line last year has had his injured peg patched up until he may may get back into the line-up. Captain Dobson will have to do much of the kicking in the new line. The opening forward wall will be as follows: Sisk, right end; Dobson, right tackle; Powell, right guard; Hobbs, center; Downing, left guard; Holstein, left tackle, Neal, left end.

Officiating at the game will be J. B. McClain as referee, with other officials yet to be picked. The game will be called at 3:30, according to Mac's announcement yesterday.

Gorman Slams Monkey-Man In Boisterous Bout

Mantell Tries to Tag It On Referee, So Loses By Flank Attack

BY BLONDY CROSS.

The nation's idol got gypped again.

Or, at least, the deciding fall that gave victory to his adversary came in a more or less unorthodox manner and, for a certainty, quite prematurely.

The popular Jack Gorman, after conceding the first fall in 24 minutes under pressure of a torturing double toe hold, climbed back into the Eleventh and Ohio arena ring Thursday night and copped the two ensuing falls to beat the great Dutch Mantell, Amarillo's famous argument that Darwin's theory is puredee gospel, in a riotous melee that at times involved fistic action by the referee and at another stage centered a bit of farcical tumbling outside of the ring with a minion of the law as one of the actors.

Jap Here Next.

Gorman grabbed the verdict. And regardless of how, when, why or where, more power to him! The San Angelo meteor by virtue of his victory will be awarded next week's match with Matty Matsuda, world's welter king, an event that is to serve as the veteran Jap's final appearance on the canvas professionally.

Gorman deserves the award, for he waged a game and heady fight all the way, scrapping from behind to capture the victor's laurels when at many points of the battle he appeared on the brink of disaster and apparently a sure loser.

Mantell's yen for arguing with and talking back to the referee, however, in the last analysis defeated him. Gorman balanced accounts on the return after the first fall in 12 minutes with a body scissors by the simple process of diving in and extricating the Dutchman from a tangle of arms and legs when Mantell and Referee Joe Kopecky had gone together in a furious impromptu mix-up, and applying the hold plus a combination head and arm-lock.

Flank Attack Wins.

Mantell had become infuriated at the third man earlier because Kopecky upon ordering breaks from the ropes forcefully made good his demands. The two wrestlers had come to their feet when Dutch suddenly became imbued with the idea of going after Kopecky. His move was a poor one. Can't throw two men in the same ring at the same time. Gorman enacted a flank attack and won the fall.

The third fall went very much the same route of the second. Kopecky ordered a break. Mantell hesitated a bit too long, so the referee dragged him from under the ropes by brute strength. Dutch hooked an arm under a leg and hung on momentarily, whereupon Gorman broke from his position, also, under the hempen and tackled his foe from behind, catching him off guard, and pinning him prone. The time was 14 minutes. The end came too fast for many ringsiders to realize off the bat just what had happened. In reality, the two men should have been taken to the center of the ring standing up. That is the ruling of all break-aways. No standing break had been made, although it's to be admitted Mantell was stubbornly flopping around with Kopesky. Gorman saw the turn of events, jumped to his feet and charged in. It was a sneak fall, unorthodox on the break-away. Jack, however, can not be censured for taking advantage of the opportunity. Dutch would have done the same. But that does not make the fall orthodox.

Kopecky defeated Eddie Pope in straight falls as an introductory match. He won the first fall in 46 minutes with a body slam and took the second in two minutes in like manner.

SLAYER ESCAPES

Officers Have No Trace of Negro Who Slew Wife.

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 30. No trace has been found of Charles Wilson, negro, who Monday is said by his 6-year-old son, to have beaten his mother to death on the R. H. Wages farm, southeast of Frederick, has been found.

Efforts to reconstruct the crime were futile as the incessant rains had obliterated all tracks and other signs from the premises.

The negro slayer has had a two-day start on the officers and officials believe there is little chance to catch him, as it is understood, he is not known in the county, being an itinerant cotton picker.

British-U. S. Rum Control Treaty Is Now In Effect.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.(AP) A new rum smuggling agreement with Great Britain negotiated at the time of Assistant Secretary Andrews' visit to London last summer has been declared effective as of September 29.

While the text of the agreement is held in confidence, it is known that it provides for administrative co-operation between British and American authorities in the prevention of illicit liquor trade between British and American territories.

RIVAL CORPS STACK ALIKE

Neither Cards Nor Yanks Seem To Boast Slab Advantage

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.(AP)—There will be no advantage in numbers when St. Louis and New York pitchers are counted in the world's series. Each club has nine in condition. St. Louis has a total of ten, but an injured hand will prevent Johnson's participation.

Pitchers with impressive records are found in each camp.

Herb Pennock of the Yankees has won the most games, 21. Flint Rhem is one behind. Pennock, however, has lost 11 games and has a percentage of .656. Rhem, with seven defeats, is rated .741.

Gerland Braxton, with six victories and one defeat, leads both clubs in percentage figures with .857. In spite of this excellent profit on paper he is not expected to start a game in the series, although he may do some finishing. The leading pitcher of the Cards in terms of games won and lost is Jess Haines, whose 13 victories against 4 defeats entitles him to a percentage of .765. Haines, too, bears other names mentioned were frequently than his in discussions of starting pitchers.

Reinhart 10 to 5.

Arthur Reinhart, who will almost certainly fire his left handed shoots at the Yankees in a game or more, has won twice the number of games lost, the figures being 10 to 5.

Walter Reuther during his term of service with Washington and New York turned in 14 victories while being charged with 8 defeats. Urban Shocker, former star St. Louis Brown, who has pitched against the Cardinals with success in city series games has won 19 games while losing 11. Willie Sherdel, counted on to perform mighty deeds for Hornsby's crew, has compiled a record of 15 games won and 12 lost.

Bob Shawkey, who has carried his red undershirt into four previous world's series, is above the .600 mark with 8 games on the right side of the ledger and 5 in the red ink.

Jones Barely Under Wire.

Vic Keene, former Cub, won 19 games while losing eight for St. Louis and Waite Hoyt, veteran of three world's series, won 15 and lost 13.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, only Cardinal pitcher to have been under fire in a world's series, has a season's record of 12 games won and 10 lost, but the first part of his work was in the uniform of the Cubs.

Sam Jones, who has had the novelty of world's series worn off by appearances in three, barely slipped under the wire over the .500 mark with a record of nine victories against eight defeats.

Herman Bell, winning five and losing the same number; Allen Sothorn with three victories and the same number of defeats and Hallahan, who won two and lost three, complete the Cardinal staff.

Two Yankee pitchers finished under .500. Miles Thomas won five and lost six, while Walter Beall turned in three victories and suffered four defeats.

POISON TRIAL AT HILLSBORO

Father Charged In Death of Stepson; Was After $10,000 Estate

HILLSBORO, Sept. 30. (AP)—Two insurance men testified Thursday in the trial of S. W. Dees, charged with murder in connection with the alleged poisoning of his stepson, Perry Dees, last March. The insurance men from Whitney told of Dees, efforts to obtain insurance.

One of the witnesses testified that he solicited Dees for insurance but when Dees asked for insurance on his two boys he told him his company did not insure anybody under ten years old. The other witness testified that a policy written on Perry Dees for his company was NOT accepted by the company.

Paul Caruth, Meridian insurance man, testified that his company—The Southwestern Life—wrote the $10,000 life insurance policy on Perry Dees. Guy Menn, banker of Whitney said his bank handled the $10,000 insurance check and placed it to the credit of Mrs. Dovie Love on March 19, and that the money was checked out on March 25.

Claude Scrugg, Whitney undertaker, testified to taking charge of the body and having it embalmed, then carrying it twelve miles from Cameron, where it was buried, and also to accompanying the party of officials that exhumed the body five months later.

Dr. W. I. Ariedge, attending physician and Mrs. Ruby Lee, neighbor of the Dees family told of the boy's death and the symptoms attending his demise. Dr. Aledge had been of the opinion that death was due to meningitis and influenze. The boy had died of convulsions.

Examination of witnesses is expected to be concluded on Friday. The state is asking the death penalty, but is resting its case upon circumstantial evidence. Dees pleaded not guilty.

Dr. W. T. Gooch, Baylor university chemist, on the stand testified he analyzed the boy's stomach after the body was exhumed and found sufficient strychnine to cause death.

FRENCH RETURN UMBRELLAS

As a result of the Prince of Wales' visit to Paris, umbrellas are becoming more popular again. In the days when French dandies wore elegant raiment the umbrella was extremely popular as part of a man's equipment, but they fell into comparative disuse during the war. The Prince carries an umbrella in fair or stormy weather as a rule and the many photographs showing him with one are responsible for the revival of the vogue.

ENGLAND RECOVERS LENS.

England is again taking its leadership in production of optical lenses. From 1848 to 1880 England led the world in the manufacture of the eyesight aids, but lost supremacy to Germany and France by the time of the World war. Due to the war, however, research was again instituted and today England has taken its place as a leader in the field again. Now nine tons of optical glass are being produced each month, or enough to supply its needs even for the finest lenses.

BABIES "SNAPPED" MOST

DISPUTE OVER OIL PAINTING

Dallas Man Claims He's Owner of Picture Held By State

AUSTIN, Sept. 30. (AP)—A picture, with Stephen F. Austin, "Father of Texas," the central figure occasioned Thursday in the house of the 39th legislature, here in special session, the authorizing of an investigating committee of three.

James D. Shields of Dallas claims that the large oil painting which hangs in the hall of representatives belongs to him, and asks the state pay $1,000 for it, or return it. The house committee to be appointed by Speaker Lee Satterwhite, will inquire into the validity of the Dallas man's claim.

The picture, painted by H. A. McArdle, represents the interior of Austin's cabin at San Felipe de Austin in 1824, and is called "Settlement of Austin's Colony."

Austin is shown reaching for his rifle, as a wounded scout points to the smoke of cabins, set fire by Indians. On the floor of the cabin is drawn a crude outline of a piece of land. Austin was about to issue a deed for, when his attention was distracted. Austin's negro cook, Simon, his face registering fear, looks in the scene from a window.

DELEGATIONS VOTE THANKS

Amarillo Realtors Praise Hospitable Spirit Of Wichita Falls

"We thank you and certainly enjoyed our stay," said members of the Amarillo delegation last night as they left for home.

"We lost the convention for 1927 but then we have lost things before and we will be in there fighting in 1927 for the next meeting.

"We had a number of reasons for sending such a big delegation to Wichita Falls. In the first place Amarillo is a realtor's town and members of the local board wanted to attend the convention. Secondly we wanted to get the 1927 convention. Last but not least, we wanted to return in a small way the many courtesies and evidences of close co-operation that we have received from Wichita Falls.

"We have enjoyed every minute of our stay and especially the trip over Wichita Falls. We feel that we have learned many things that will help us in building a city.

"We will be back with a real crowd at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention and you can get ready for us."

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.(AP)—The cotton market while fairly active today experienced a very erratic course of prices although the general trend was downward. During the first part of the morning prices eased off 20 to 30 points from the previous close owing to Liverpool proving much lower than due and to less rains than expected shown by the map. Later in the morning the presence of an extensive low pressure in the northwest threatening more rain probably followed by cold weather and evidences that the holding movement was making headway in the interior started a rally which extended well into the afternoon, carrying prices up 19 to 20 points from the lows of the morning. Most of this recovery was lost in the late trading on realizing and the close showed net losses for the day of 23 to 26 points.

The Liverpool market came in much lower than due and first trades here showed losses of 18 to 21 points. There was a slight rally after the opening but prices soon weakened again and October finally sold down to 14.13, December to 14.32 and January to 14.35, or 20 to 30 points below the close of yesterday. These were the low points of the day.

The market rallied near noon and the recovery persisted well into the afternoon, October finally trading up to 14.33, December to 14.52 and January to 14.57, or 15 to 20 points up from the lows. Fully 15 to 17 points of this recovery was lost in the final trading and the close was within a few points of the lows.

Exports for the day totaled 44,566 bales.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.(AP)—While reports that foreign spinners planned to buy cotton for shipments extending over several years helped rallies from an opening decline in the cotton market today, prices eased off again in later trading. After selling off to 14.34 early, December rallied to 14.55 compared with 14.45 at the close yesterday but lost most of the improvement, closing at 14.46. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 20 to 21 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 5 to 10 points under overnight selling orders which seemed to come largely from the south, combined with local selling inspired by relatively easy late cables from Liverpool and a more favorable reading of the early weather news. Prices worked off to 14.37 for October and 14.39 for January or about 21 to 23 points net lower in early trading, but hedge selling became active than earlier in the week. After initial offerings had been absorbed prices steadied on covering.

Reports that European spinners were sending inquiries here which suggested a disposition to buy cotton for shipments extending over the next four or five years at present prices, appeared to stimulate the covering movement and some trade buying also was reported on the mid-day rallies. Near months were relatively steady, October selling up to 14.55, or within three points of yesterday's closing figure, the advance being accompanied by rumors that spot interests were buying October and December against sales of later months, in appreshension of another low grade crop.

Forecast of another heavy rains in Oklahoma making the sixth wet day in succession, no doubt contributed to the recovery of some 15 or 24 points from the lowest, bringing up to 14.52 for January, the market met increased offerings which included realizing or liquidation by early buyers, with a renewal of southern hedge selling.

One private report published today made the condition of the crop 59.0 while another placed it at 60.1 with an indicated yield of 15,295,000 bales.

Exports today 44,566, making 1,907,825 so far this season. Port receipts 88,-638. U. S. port stocks 1,384,079 bales.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.(AP)—Speculators for the advance gained control of the price movement in today's stock market after bear traders had failed to unsettle the general list by selling stocks on the marking up of the call money rate of 6 per cent, the highest figure of the year. Operators for the rise felt convinced that the high rate on day to day loans was only temporary, due largely to the shifting of funds incidental to the payment of $360,000,000 in third quarter dividend and interest payments and that there was nothing to justify an increase in the New York federal reserve re-discount rate, which was announced as unchanged at 4 per cent at the market closed.

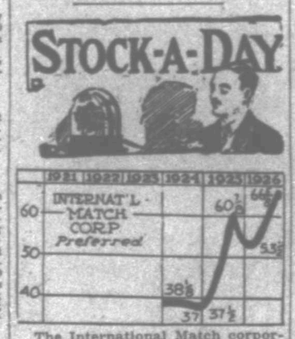

The sinking spell which followed the posting of the higher carrying charge on call loans was only temporary. Within half an hour, vigorous bullish demonstrations were under way in half a dozen issues, culminating in a broad buying movement just before the close when the best price of the day were recorded in many issues. Final quotations disclosed a long list of net gains ranging from one to 8¾ points interspersed with a small number of one to three point declines.

While buying of professional traders furnished the main impetus for the advance the strength of the market in the face of the uncertainty over credit conditions attracted increased public interest as evident from the small buying orders which came pouring over the brokerage wires during the late afternoon. In banking circles the coming month is expected to furnish definite indications of the next major price trend of the market which explains the fierce struggle for control between opposing speculative forces.

Most of the standard industrials showed substantial gains on the day. U. S. Steel common closed nearly three points higher at 150 on total sales of nearly 100,000 shares. General Motors recorded a similar gain at 161¼. Baldwin crossed 123 for a net gain of 1¾.

One of the outstanding individual features of the session was the heavy buying of Famous Players, which advanced two points to 259 on reports that the company is negotiating for control of Brother Brothers pictures, the A stock of which showed a net gain of 2½ points. Commercial Solvents B continued its sensational advance by soaring nearly nine points to a new record high at 237⅛.

Coppers had a temporary sinking spell in response to another drop in silver prices. Establishment of the highest price in over 15 years by Tobin Pacific at 109 was one of the few features of the railroad list which closed generally higher. A better demand was noted for New York Central, "Nickel Plate," and Southern Pacific.

CHICAGO MARKET REVIEW.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.(AP)—Except during belated month-end liquidation just at the last, wheat showed an advance in price most of the time today. New export sales of North American wheat totaled more than 1,000,000 bushels, and Prince was also buying future deliveries. Closing quotations on wheat, however, were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1½c lower, the latter for September contracts, with corn ¼ to 1¼c down, oats at ⅛c decline to ¼c advance and provisions varying from 12c off to 30@12c up.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. The country sold more than 150,000 bushels of old corn to arrive here, and eastern demand was slow. More corn in elevatorsw as posted as out of condition.

Hog cholera reports were responsible for an upturn in the provision market.

RAILROAD SUIT

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.(AP) The bond holders defense committee of the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul railway announced today that an appeal would be made from the decision of Federal Judge Wilkinson in Chicago denying leave to file an intervention petition and ordering the railroad sold at auction November 22.

FOUR ARE BURIED.

New Electra Cemetery Has Only Four Graves.

ELECTRA, Sept. 30.—Only four burials have been made in the new cemetery, which was purchased by the city for a consideration of $.-250 from Brandon and McDavid. This new burial ground is located on the east side of the Electra-Frederick highway, across the road from the present cemetery, and is a portion of the E. M. Friend estate, just at the edge of the city limits. The first burial was made August 26, and the last one, September 17, when baby Mary Tom Cobb was buried.

The cemetery was divided into plots in June of this year, with 130 lots or one-third of the entire grounds being plotted off. This came about since the old cemetery has practically every lot sold. The name of the cemetery has not been changed, but is just known as an annex to the old one.

FLOOD WARNINGS.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 30. (AP)—Flood warnings issued today by the local weather bureau caused residents in the Arkansas and Poteau river valleys to begin moving their livestock and farming equipment to higher ground.

CONFLICT SETTLED.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 30. (AP) The conflict in the senate between members of the majority and the minority over the question of credentials of members of both groups who won seats in the recent congressional elections has been settled.

Proud Of The Contribution We Have Made

We are proud, both of the contribution we have made to Wichita Falls' growth by the hundreds of homes we have built, and of the happiness we have brought to each family by providing a home for it.

We're ready to add much more to the basis for our pride.

AIMEE'S TRIAL GOES ON HAIR

Evangelist Displays Tresses As Point In Evidence of Her Defense

HALL OF JUSTICE, LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30. (AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson took down her mass of bronze colored hair in the courtroom here today and demonstrated that no part of it was false.

The demonstration was made voluntarily after Deputy District Attorney E. J. Dennison had questioned Miss Emma Schaeffer, Mrs. McPherson's secretary, as to whether the evangelist wore switches.

A point had been raised just prior to the demonstration as to what kind of hair net Mrs. McPherson was accustomed to wear, whether for dress or service and whether it was made of human hair or silk.

The significance of this line of questioning was lost when Dennison took another track.

Miss Schaeffer had been called in the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and others, on a charge of criminal conspiracy growing out of the kidnaping story Mrs. McPherson told when she re-appeared after 35 days disappearance.

Miss Schaeffer, who was the first person to report Mrs. McPherson missing last May 23, testified she met Mrs. Loraine I. Wiesman-Sielaff, principal accuser of the evangelist, on numerous trips to Angelus temple this summer.

Miss Schaeffer then told of the trip to the beach with Mrs. McPherson from which the evangelist did not return for 35 days and then with a story of having been kidnaped and held for ransom.

Mrs. McPherson wore a green bathing suit, the secretary said.

Miss Schaeffer said Mrs. McPherson sat on the beach for a time preparing a sermon on "light and darkness."

Miss Schaeffer said that while Mrs. McPherson was in the ocean for her first dip, she had watched her closely and that later she went to a telephone to talk to Mrs. Kennedy at the evangelist's request.

When she returned, Mrs. McPherson was still in the water. After the evangelist had been swimming about for some time, Miss Schaeffer said, she suddenly missed her about 3:15 or possibly 3:30 in the afternoon.

The secretary said she looked for life guards, but could not see any. Then she went to the bath house to find one. Returning to the hotel where Mrs. McPherson had changed her clothing, she told the manager that Mrs. McPherson was missing.

Previously, she said, at the bath room and on the beach she had not mentioned the evangelist's name. Miss Schaeffer then called Mrs. Kennedy in Los Angeles and told her: "mister is drowned." She could not remember what Mrs. Kennedy said in reply. She then gathered up Mrs. McPherson's clothing at the hotel. Her wrist watch, she said, was not among the things.

SARTIN BACKS GASOLINE TAX

County Judge Gets Vote of Endorsement At 'Judge's' Meet

Judge B. D. Sartin returned yesterday from Tyler where he attended the state convention of county judges and county commissioners this week. Judge Sartin was one of the principal speakers at the convention, and it was largely through the address he made that the organization went on record as favoring the recent bill passed by the state legislature providing for a three-cent tax on gasoline.

Judge Sartin explained the true nature of the bill, and the effects it will have on county road maintenance. There are about seventeen million dollars collected in gasoline tax, three-fourths of which go to the highway department and one-fourth to schools. This increased amount of funds to the highway department will release an additional sum of money to counties for individual road maintenance.

If the bill becomes law it will mean an additional sum of approximately $123,600 per year to Wichita county for road work. Of this sum the city of Wichita Falls alone would derive between eighty and ninety thousand dollars.

This item alone would mean a great deal in the improvement of cross roads and other highways not designated as state highways, Judge Sartin explained, and will do more real good to the country than any other method that could be employed.

Judge Sartin and Commissioner M. A. Bundy, who also attended the convention, were both placed on the legislative committee and they will confer with the legislature in getting legislation agreeable to the organization of county judges and commissioners.

Scholastic Scoops

Football yells led by the organized pep squad of the high school were a feature of the program given in the regular chapel exercises at the Junior college buildings Thursday morning. Joe Barnhart, Mabel Drinkard, and Cliftine Butler, together with some 20 members of the regular pep squad led in familiar yells and started the first pep meeting of the year.

Hal Worth, director of the pageant at the Texas-Oklahoma fair, made a short talk to the students, explaining the nature of the pageant to be given Saturday night.

Tom McCarty gave a vocal solo, accompanied by Ira L. Cain, Jr. Announcements regarding the senior rings and schedule for club meetings were made.

* * * *

Girl Reserves of the Fannin school met Thursday afternoon after school for one of the most interesting programs of the year. The meeting opened with Girl Reserve songs led by Maxine Tipton, song leader for the club, after which the candle lighting songs and ceremony were presented. Mrs. L. H. Shattuck, member of the Girl Reserve committee of the Y. W. C. A. board, gave a short talk.

Miss Price, the advisor for the club, led the devotional, telling the story of the Holy Grail.

In the business session, election of officers was completed, Miss Willo Hulsey being elected vice-president, and Rudell Seal the corresponding secretary. It was voted to hold meetings twice a month instead of weekly.

Cabinet members of the club are: Maurine Ward, president; Willo Hulsey, vice-president, Rudell Seal, secretary; Kathryn Blackwell, treasurer; Katherine Bell, social chairman; Ima Mae Johnson, membership chairman; Mildred Anderson, program chairman; Eula Mae McKeen, service chairman; Maxine Tipton, song leader; Frances Robinson, reporter; Elvilie Adams, bulletin reporter; Mrs. L. H. Shattuck, committee-advisor, and Miss Price-teacher-advisor. Others present besides cabinet members were: Misses Mary Dee Gatewood, Elsie Gate Wood, Myrtle Ward, Cloris McKnight, Theresa Smith, Alta Mae Humphries, Lethe McKinley, Rosa Lee Blackwell, Jewell Helm, Alma Harris, Beatrice Friberg, Rose Holtzel, and Dorris Smith, Girl Reserve secretary.

* * * *

A schedule for the meeting time of the many organizations in the high school and Junior college has been worked out by a committee of teachers of both college and high school. The schedule, the making out of which was a herculean task, according to committee made by those on the committee, provides for regular meeting times for each organization in the school and avoids as many conflicts as are possible. Recommendations were also made by the committee regarding the observance of the schedule. It is advised that all interested clip the schedule and save it for future reference or that it be secured in some way:

Monday.

Curlee Named Head Of State Realtors; Beaumont Wins 1927 Convention

Local Real Estate Man Elected President At Closing Session, Richardson Selected As Secretary-Treasurer of Organization

W. S. Curlee of Wichita Falls was named president of the Texas Association of Real Estate boards Thursday in the annual election of officers held at the Kemp Hotel at the close of the program yesterday morning. The entire ticket submitted by the nominating committee, with Mr. Curlee president, was chosen as follows: W. A. Thomas of Dallas, first vice president; other vice presidents, H. C. Thorman of San Antonio; W. H. Bryson of Amarillo; E. E. Stucky of Port Arthur. P. S. Richardson of Wichita Falls was elected secretary-treasurer. Three directors for three years each were elected as follows: J. L. Compers of Weslaco; Moore of Corpus Christi, and R. E. Jordan of Houston.

CURLEE

In a hotly contested vote for the 1927 convention, Beaumont won easily over her rival, Amarillo, but the vote was made unanimous, and Amarillo is asking for the 1928 convention.

On the morning program, Frank Kell, director of the United States Chamber of Commerce and prominent business leader of the city, made a short talk to the realtors and welcomed them to Wichita Falls and invited them to return here at some future date when the town will have grown into a city.

Able Men.

"Your profession in Texas has been handled by men and women of vision," Mr. Kell said. "Stephen F. Austin was the first real estate man of Texas. He did not think of self, but of the public good," and he mentioned how Austin tried to bring in people who wished to settle and make homes, real colonists.

"Texas is in the mind of the world and in the public eye. You should think out sound principles to carry out its development in the highest degree in this country. I believe there is more to do than heretofore, more probabilities of developing than ever before. We need real estate men who will bring us citizens, and we need those who will help them carry out their contracts in buying homes, encourage them and hold them."

J. Wilkie Talbert of this city spoke on "Building and Loan Associations, Their Relation to Real Estate." W. W. McAllister of San Antonio spoke on the "Organization and Operation of a Building and Loan Association." Walter R. Welch of Fort Worth talked on "Thrift."

Three Rules.

"There are three cardinal rules for thrift: practice, self denial, spend less than you make; and invest the difference," Mr. Welch declared. "Every man must have a reason why he should save. Theodore Roosevelt said, 'Extravagance rots character.' Any fool can waste but it takes a man to save."

G. A. McGregor of Dallas spoke on "Loans," telling how loans are handled by Building and Loan Associations and benefits that can be derived by realtors in co-operating with these associations.

The report of the resolutions committee was read and unanimously adopted. The state board endorsed the action of the national association to increase the dues; the movement now in progress to advertise Texas nationally and internationally was endorsed; the addresses given at the convention are to be made into booklet form and a copy prepared for each member; resolutions of regret were adopted on the death of Mrs. R. E. Sherman of El Paso, wife of a well-known realtor, and on the death of Robert Jemison, whose son is a prominent realtor.

A s-e-p-a-r-a-t-e resolution was adopted later in the morning when it was voted to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to construct a railroad from Waco to Beaumont and Port Arthur, known as a Waco-Beaumont and Sabine railroad.

$7,936,665 IN NEW BUILDING

Construction Expenditures For First Nine Months At High Figure

Special Service At Temple Israel Friday Evening

Announcement is made of the services to be held at Temple Israel Friday evening, October 1, at 8 o'clock when Rabbi Samuel Phillips will speak on the subject based on the death of Moses given in the last chapter of Deuteronomy, "And no one knows the grave of Moses until this day."

On Saturday morning all synagogues will observe the reading of the Pentateuch beginning the reading with the first chapter of Genesis. It takes a year to complete the Pentateuch. Every week a chapter is read until complete on the Feast of the Lord on Friday, September 30, Rabbi Phillips said.

Children of the Sabbath school are to bring all kinds of fruits to the altar Saturday morning and the fruit will be given to the Day Nursery afterwards, it was said.

Talks Wednesday Night

Rabbi Phillips talked Wednesday night on "Doing More Good Than We Ought to" at the Temple in his Shemini Azereth sermon.

"There are two ways of giving charity—there are two ways of giving all good deeds. 'How are you?' and 'good-bye'—we say these words mechanically, freezingly and coldly; we can say them in such a way as to fill with joy the hearts we greet. Some persons never break a single commandment, but still fall short of real goodness. They are content to keep their path straight and neatly graveled and free from weeds. Others would do more and border it with flowers" he said.

"Each life may be made splendid by simplest means. A little thoughtfulness, a little sympathy, a little love, this is all that is needed. Let us not search for great opportunities of transforming our lives for we shall miss the familiar ones that are within our grasp."

NEW CASES FILED

Four new cases were filed in District Court yesterday as follows:

Longhart Supply Company vs. C. V. Whitehead, debt.

Maggie Jane Miller vs. Edward E. Miller, divorce.

American National Bank vs. Favorite Oil Company, garnishment.

Louis W. Burton vs. C. E. Burton, divorce.
