TEXAS LABOR ASKS DRY LAW MODIFICATION

Violation Of 'Buried' Rule Robs Ira Merchant Of Greenbelt Golf Title

L. S. WALKER IS NEW CHAMPION DUE TO BONER

Clarendon Golfer Fights Uphill to Win But Luck Favors His Foe

CROWD DISAPPOINTED

Nip and Tuck Battle Finally Decided on 37th Hole Contest

By FRED THOMPSON
Record News Sports Editor

CLARENDON, Texas, May 21.—Ira (Country) Merchant of Clarendon late today won the championship of the sixth annual Greenbelt Golf association tournament, coming up with a great finish to stand one up at the 36th hole, but when, on that final hole, he stepped out and brushed a piece of cardboard from in front of his ball he violated article such and such of the umpty umpth section of the golf rules, and as a result L. S. (City) Walker lifted the crown from his head.

Nip and Tuck Battle

Here is the way it was:

After a nip and tuck battle with Walker, the Quanah veteran, at one time taking as high a lead as four up, Merchant slashed through gallantly on the incoming 18 to square the match at the 30th hole. He did it by sinking a 30 yard approach shot on the 29th, and shooting a three on the par five 30th. The next four they halved but Merchant came through with a brilliant par four on the 35th to go one up.

With Walker having a chance to square the match, they went into the 36th. Both had difficulty against the wind and it took Merchant three strokes to get about 25 yards from the green. He took his stance for the pitch. A half of a cigaret carton was in front of him, blowing about in the wind, so he stepped forward and gave it a knock with his club.

Walker Protests

Walker, seeing this, approached Dick Grout, tournament starter, wanting to know if the removal of the carton did not constitute a violation of the rules. Grout said it did not, as the carton came under the head of a "removable obstruction" golf rules allow the removal of these "obstructions," lawn mowers and such.

Walker seemed satisfied but some one in the crowd dug up another rule that said an "impediment" was over a club's length from the ball constituted a hazard, and shall not be removed. The "impediment" was over a club's length from Merchant's ball. Confronted with this ruling, Grout awarded Walker the hole, and the match was square.

Unsettled by the protest and facing a mental hazard for he had thought the match was over—Merchant agreed to play the 37th hole, but he was whipped from the start. He took a six to Walker's four, giving Walker the championship, one up, 37 holes.

Ruling Is Just

There was no doubt but that the ruling was just, and an accordance with the best golf rules that the United States Golf association have devised, but Walker's protest victory was anything but popular with the enthused gallery of about 300 that had watched Merchant stage a bitter up-hill fight to outpiay his opponent.

House Tosses Special Session Challenge In Refusing Recess Plea

AUSTIN, May 21. (AP)—The Texas house of representatives today refused to concur in a senate resolution to recess the regular session at noon tomorrow until June 22. The vote against the resolution was 94 nees and 45 ayes.

The action of the house in refusing to concur in the recessed session resolution was taken by many as a challenge to the governor to call a special session. The governor earlier in the day had recommended the regular session be extended for a few weeks or that the legislature recess for a suitable length of time and return to consider business left unfinished at noon tomorrow.

The senate earlier had concurred in the governor's proposal by a vote of 17 to 12. The test vote was on a motion to substitute Sterling's proposal for the plan of Senator Woodruff to Decatur to extend the session until Friday of next week.

Bills Await Vote

In his message, the governor stated failure to wind up the business at hand probably would necessitate a special session. He expressed aversion, however, to a special session, stating it would be more economical and advantageous to pending legislaiton to continue the regular session.

One of the main arguments for a recessed session was that the appropriation bills still were in free conference. Representative Sanders of Nacogdoches, chairman of the house committees, said the bills would be reported tomorrow.

The house argued more than two hours on the recessed session resolution. Sanders said his committees would have reported this afternoon had the argument on the resolution been abandoned.

Report One Today

Sanders said the appropriations committees would work tonight and report in the morning. The conferees have been hung on the house amendments cutting salaries of employes 5 and 10 per cent.

A plea that the legislature remain in session only a few more days went unheeded.

Passage of another revenue raising measure was assured when conferees on the Peddler cement tax bill announced they had reached an

Cuban Officials Differ On Reports of Armed Revolution

HAVANA, May 21. (AP)—Conflicting versions of last night's reported insurrection in Oriente province were received here today.

An official government statement issued by the department of interior confirmed early reports that there had been an armed revolt against troops at Manzanillo and Jiguani and there also was "excitement" at Holguin and Chaparra.

Flat denials of any such trouble at Manzanillo were made by Manuel Bonet, president of the Nationalist union branch there, and from Mayor Rafael Shriol.

Bonet told an Associated Press correspondent who arrived at Manzanillo by airplane this morning that a private quarrel in which two men had been killed furnished the foundation for reports that the citizenry had revolted.

MURDER TOLD IN LIBEL CASE

$200,000 Suit Brings Old-timers to Lubbock

LUBBOCK, Texas, May 21. (AP)—Events moved slowly in 99th district court today in the libel suit of Fred Spikes against J. Evetts Haley of Austin and trustees of the capital reservation lands, in which Mr. Spikes is seeking $200,000 damages for publication of statements in a book "The XIT Ranch of Texas."

Alex Street, El Paso, now a department of justice agent and a former New Mexico sheriff and cattle inspector, occupied the stand in the morning, telling of his knowledge of the shooting of two brothers of the plaintiff, the story of which caused the suit to be filed. In the afternoon the deposition of James E. Johnson, former foreman of the Bell ranch around Tucumcari was read.

Street told of the holdup of a competing saloon, The Monarch, a few days before the death of the Spikes boys, saying he recognized the voices of two men he saw in a gang outside the saloon just after it was robbed. One he identified as the voice of Henry Hawkins and the other Dick Spikes. The third man he recognized as George Cook.

Johnson denied statements of his questioners as to the purpose of a member of the posse that shot and killed the two men. His testimony was long, it taking nearly three hours to go over the several hundred questions and as many answers in direct and cross examination.

Large crowds attended the court sessions daily, many old timers of the South Plains and eastern New Mexico being here.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 21. (UP)—LaJeane von Burgen, characterized by police as the most attractive prisoner ever held at headquarters, today insisted defiantly that she was not a student bandit, but only a working girl trying to make an honest living.

LaJeane was brought back to Kansas City from Wichita with Earl Courter, alleged "professor" of a local crime school, and William Bennett of Milan, Mo.

Courter and LaJeane were named by Loyce McCormick, confessed girl bandit who said she and her chum LaJeane worked under Courter's direction.

Shouse Urges Demos To Face Prohi 'Bugaboo'

BALTIMORE, May 21. (US)—Proclaiming the Democratic party as the party of progress and liberalism, Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, in a speech tonight, declared "the bugaboo of prohibition must not induce it to remain silent."

Shouse recognized the fact that there is a division in the Democratic party on the prohibition issue but he said this "must not operate to make it afraid," adding:

"It has the opportunity to win not merely one election through a course of expediency, but by forth-rightness and straightforwardness to remain the dominant factor in American public life for 20 years to come."

FALL CONVENTION

Traffic Experts and Leaders In Cotton Trade To Gather Here

The September convention of the Southwest Shippers Advisory board will be held in Wichita Falls, according to information received Thursday from Dudley B. Foy, traffic manager of the chamber of commerce here, who attended the board's grain meeting at Amarillo.

Three Meetings Annually

The convention to he held here is known as the "cotton" meeting. More than 1,000 delegates, including cotton men, grain men, cotton compress men, exporters, brokers, and railroad men from all sections of the Southwest, will attend the meeting, it was said.

Although it is known that the meet will be held in September, the definite date will be set later by members of the executive committee. Mr. Foy, in attending the grain meeting of the board at Amarillo, officially presented the invitation for the fall meet to be held here.

Three meetings are held annually by the Southwest Shippers Advisory board. In the spring a "gulf coast" meeting is held. During the summer, just before the harvests, the grain meeting is held. In preparation for the picking of cotton, which forms a great part of fall shipping to market and storage, the cotton meeting is held to lay plans for moving the product.

Six States Participate

In addition to drawing a large number of business men engaged directly in trading in cotton and its products, the cotton meeting attracts transportation representatives, inluding railroad and steamship men, and traffic managers of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and large business concerns, and members of federal and state regulatory boards, such as the federal and state rail commissions.

Prominent business men from all sections of the nation also are attracted to the cotton meeting and address the large number of business men who attend.

The cotton meeting of the board is said to assemble the most representative group of business men of any meeting held in the Southwest. States to participate in the conventions are Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, New Mexico, Arkansas and Arizona.

They estimated the 1931 crop in 35 Panhandle counties at 40 million

Estelle Taylor Sniffs At Jack's Money Offer

LOS ANGELES, May 21. (US)—Jack Dempsey's sparring match with his wife, Estelle Taylor, for a divorce, today degenerated into shadow boxing when Miss Taylor scornfully refused to even consider a property settlement offered by the former heavyweight champion of the world.

Details of the proposed property settlement were not divulged but it was said Miss Taylor considered it as inadequate as the one reported several days ago. In the first proposal, which neither she nor Dempsey would admit discussing, Dempsey was said to have offered his wife a cash settlement of $50,000.

Four Arrested In Big Counterfeit Ring

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 21. (UP)—Four men were in jail here today in connection with the operation of what secret service agents termed a large counterfeit ring. Others were sought in Missouri and Oklahoma.

Several spurious $5 and $10 bills and 50-cent coins have been reported here this week. The bills include notes on the Kansas City and Chicago Federal Reserve banks and $10 United States treasury gold certificates.

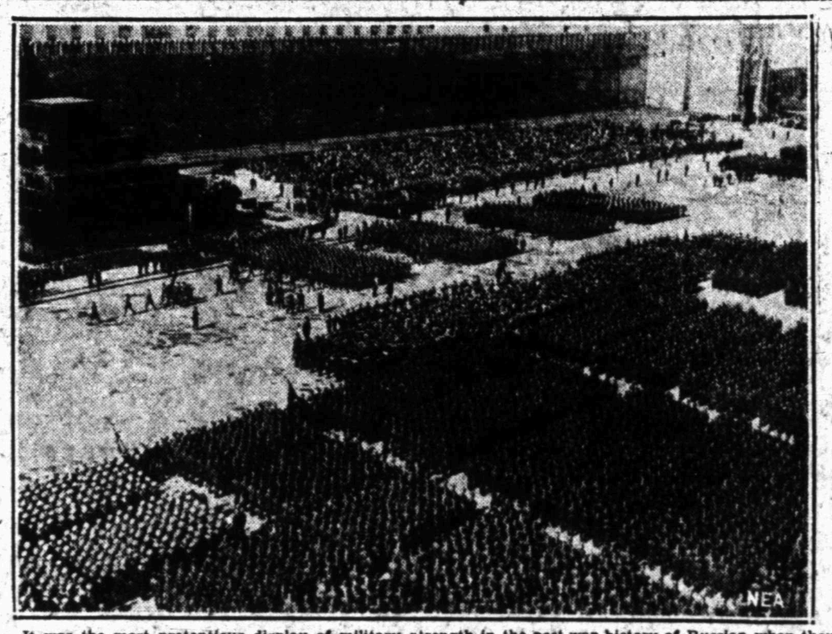

William H. Davenport, in charge of the secret service here, said more than a score of persons had been arrested in Missouri and Oklahoma and charged with counterfeiting.

In the background are shown the dense ranks of a few thousand privileged spectators, including foreign military observers and diplomats.

The Record News Staff

SEYMOUR, Texas, May 21.—Edward Geeslin of Brady was elected president of the Texas Municipal Utilities league at the closing session held of the two-day convention here Thursday. E. E. Runt, Shiner, and Sidney Hildreth, Farmersville, were chosen first and second vice presidents.

Selection of the next meeting place will be announced later when members of the executive committee hold their meeting. This committee held a brief meeting at the close of the convention and announced the re-election of Pat N. Roberts of Denton as secretary.

The morning session of the convention was devoted to talks by managers of municipally owned power plants as to operation. It was shown that every such plant in Texas is making money. Machinery and supply men were also speakers, and told how their concerns had helped in fostering municipal ownership in Texas and other states.

At noon delegates were guests of the Seymour Chamber of Commerce at a fish fry at the municipal auditorium. Weather conditions caused a change in the plans for holding the fish fry at Lake Kemp.

Mayor Walter Nelson and City Manager George Fairtrace of Wichita Falls were among the arrivals for the convention Thursday.

Members of the executive committee named Thursday are J. J. Graham, Lubbock; T. S. Mitchell, Greenville; H. A. Burger, Bryan; R. R. Kellum, Seymour; and R. M. Miller, Commerce. U. S. Faces Big Deficit As Year Nears Close

WASHINGTON, May 21. (AP)—With but six weeks remaining before the end of the fiscal year, the treasury had a deficit of $984,268,517 on May 19 and it seemed probable that extensive financing would have to be done before June 30 to meet the situation.

While no treasury official would venture an opinion, indications grew that a long term bond issue was being considered and instead of being held for announcement in the late summer might be offered the public in June.

Gangster Silent About Knife Wound's Source

NEW YORK, May 21. (US)—It was Vannie Higins' turn today. He was taken to the Polyclinic hospital with three knife wounds in his body. Like "Lega" Diamond he will recover and like "Lega" Diamond he will not talk.

Police and prosecutors began an investigation but at nightfall they had not progressed far enough to indicate that anyone will be convicted of any serious crime in connection with the stabbing. Higgins assumed the attitude that the incident was purely a personal affair and that the three knife wounds were acquired in the ordinary course of rum running.

Brother of King George Undergoes Operation

LONDON, May 21. (US)—The Duke of Connaught, King George's uncle, was tonight reported progressing satisfactorily following an operation for removal of a polypus of the nose. The duke, a brother of King Edward VII, is 81.

District Attorney Names Ousted Deputy as Dual California Killer

Wife of Suspect in Deaths of Politician and Newspaper Man to Aid Investigation

LOS ANGELES, May 21. (AP)—Chief of Detectives Joseph Taylor said tonight three persons have partially identified David Clark, former deputy district attorney, as the third man in the office of Charles Crawford, politician, when he and Herbert Spencer, former newspaperman, were shot to death late yesterday.

District Attorney Buron Fitts later issued this statement:

"David N. Clark is the man we are seeking for the murders of Crawford and Spencer. From the information I have just received, I have reasons to believe that he may have committed suicide."

Picture Identified

Chief Taylor said George Crawford, brother of the slain man, Miss Lucille Fisher and Ray J. Radke, employes in Crawford's office said pictures of Clark bore a likeness to the man who entered the office and killed the two men after a lengthy conversation.

Detectives immediately rushed to Clark's home but he could not be found. Mrs. Clark was brought to police headquarters for questioning. Simultaneously, District Attorney Fitts said he possessed positive information Clark was the killer.

The sudden turn of events that drew Clark into the investigation came after detectives had found a check marked "non-sufficient funds" which had been given to a sporting goods store by Clark in payment for a .38 caliber gun.

Gasps Name

On the heels of Taylor's statement, Rev. Gustave A. Briegleb, pastor of the church Crawford attended and who was with Crawford when he died, said he asked the dying man last night who shot him and Crawford gasped "Dave."

Clark recently resigned from the district attorney's staff. Fitts said he requested his associate's resignation. Clark became a candidate for municipal judgeship but was defeated and police said Crawford had opposed his campaign.

Mrs. Clark said she had not seen her husband since Tuesday, when he drove away, promising to return to keep a dinner engagement. On Wednesday she reported to police her husband was missing and said she feared he might have taken his life.

HAIL POUNDS AREA AGAIN

Tornado Takes Heavy Toll At Borger

Late spring hailstorms took on an almost chronic aspect for Oklahoma and Northwest Texas Thursday when Vernon, Haskell, and Oklahoma cities received severe pummelings along with hard chill showers. Despite heavy clouds, Wichita Falls escaped rain and hail but felt the general chilly weather when the temperature slipped almost 20 points to reach a minimum of 59 degrees.

The hard rain at Vernon temporarily disrupted business when store buildings were flooded. Haskell gardens were chopped by big hail storms while more than an inch of rain fell.

Dispatchers for the Fort Worth and Denver reported rains at Aspermont and Sagerton on the Valley line and Stamford came in for a hard rain. Fort Worth shivered under a cold rain whipped by a hard north wind.

Scattered rains fell along the Katy in Oklahoma, growing heavier to the north, with light showers at Altus. Loveland reported a smart pounding of hail.

The Record News received the following rain and hail reports over the area:

VERNON—Vernon business houses were flooded and the streets swamped late Thursday afternoon when more than an inch of rain,

OIL MEET CALLED

Regulation Hours Sought For Field Men In Midwest

EL PASO, May 21. (AP)—Modification of the Volstead act, a strong campaign of organization and active efforts to maintain the existing wage scale for workers were approved by the Texas State Federation of Labor at its annual convention here today.

J. W. Parks of Dallas was re-elected president, and George Slater of Galveston was re-elected executive secretary and named delegate to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Other officers follow: Henry Winkler, Houston, first vice president; Mrs. L. E. Southworth, Denison, second vice president; W. B. Arnold, San Antonio, third vice president; Charles Sepaugh, Marshall, fourth vice president; W. W. Finch, Amarillo, fifth vice president; Henry Maitre, Port Arthur, reading clerk; J. L. Hauswald, El Paso, sergeant at arms.

Dry Change Carries

With but one dissenting vote, the federation requested Texas senators and congressmen to bring about a "sane and sensible" modification of the Volstead act to allow the manufacture of "wholesome beer," and pledged the federation's support to "labors national committee for modification" of the act.

At the 1922 convention, a similar resolution was defeated after a floor fight of several hours duration.

Central labor bodies were asked to join in a thorough drive to bring businesses now operating on the open shop plan into conformity with the organized labor movement.

"There are 4,065 manufacturing plants in Texas employing 115,000 people of whom the majority are unorganized," said a report unanimously adopted. "We feel the different internationals will not be able to accomplish much without assistance from the central bodies."

Oil Conclave Urged

In line with this action, a resolution asking the federation officers to bring about a conference of oil operators and oil field workers in the Midwest to establish an eight-

Preacher Sues Texas Paper for $50,000 Libel

DALLAS, May 21. (INS)—Another libel suit involving Methodist ministers was filed in federal court here today on behalf of Rev. R. G. Smith, Sparta, Ga., pastor. It asks damages of $50,000 from Rev. E. V. Cole, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate.

The petition charges Rev. Cole with libel and sets out that editorials written in his religious publication defamed Rev. Mr. Smith.

The suit follows one filed last week by Rev. Mr. Smith against Bishop John Moore of Dallas.

659 Army Planes Cloud Chicago Skies in Air Battle Maneuvers

CHICAGO, May 21. (US)—The giant army fleet of 659 planes which paraded the sky of Chicago today were back at their bases in Dayton and Cleveland tonight poised for the morrow's flight to New York.

First places of the big concentration at Dayton are to leave there at 5 a. m. tomorrow. All are to be clear by 8:30 a. m. If all goes well, the entire armada will be in New York by 5 p. m.

The great aerial show here fascinated a half million persons in the downtown section of Chicago and perhaps as many more along the lake front from Evanston, Ill., to Gary, Ind.

For the first time, Chicago was a city beset by hostile forces as nine bombardment planes, potential carriers of annihilating explosives, veered about after the general mass parade and "attacked" the city.

City "Rescued"

They looked like the masters of any city, helplessly cowed beneath them awaiting death out of the sky, but there was an answer even to them.

That answer was provided by pursuit craft, 18 of them, which rushed to the "rescue" and routed the threatening ships.

Every kind of attack and defense maneuver was presented by the warring sky armada as the million watched from the ground, from rooftops and windows.

The massed review formation split into "pine-tree" groups that

Holdup Story Called Lie as Court Sentences Borger Ex-Postmaster

AMARILLO, Texas, May 21. (AP)—Branding as a "deliberate fabrication" the statement of Harold Rothschild, former Borger postmaster, concerning the alleged robbery of the Borger postoffice last Nov. 20, Judge James C. Wilson in federal court late today sentenced Rothschild to 14 months in Leavenworth penitentiary.

The Borger postoffice was robbed of $3,200 in currency and $566 in checks. The checks, it was brought out in the evidence, had been written by Rothschild to replace cash he had taken from postal funds. He was found guilty of embezzling the $566.

Before sentence was passed, Assistant Attorney Alex Mood asked for permission to read a statement made by Rothschild soon after the robbery. It recounted how two armed bandits came to his home late at night, and how one of them forced him to go to the postoffice and aid in the robbery while the other remained at home as guard over Rothschild's wife and a nephew. Every step of the robbery was described in detail.

"You have asked for clemency until the preparators of this robbery can be apprehended," Judge Wilson said in passing sentence. "They will never be caught and they will never face trial, for they don't exist. Your tale of the robbery is a studied, carefully worked-out story. You remember entirely too many details. It is contrary to human nature that you should remember every detail of the robbery and forget the $200 check you deposited to your personal account."

HOUSE BOOTS RECESS PLEA

Extra Session Challenge Seen in Vote

agreement to lexy a tax of 5 cents per barrel on the commodity. The senate had levied a tax of 20 cents per barrel on cement. Three house and three senate members signed the report.

The Peddler tax bill also contained a tax of 75 cents per ton on sulphur, raising the present levy of 55 cents.

Close Predicted

It was believed likely the session would end late tomorrow night and that the clock would be turned back before reaching noon to give committees a little more time to work.

Congressional redistricting appeared lost, although conferees still were hopeful an agreement would be reached that would prove suitable to both houses. The committee will have until noon tomorrow to report.

Charges that the legislature had fooled away a large portion of its time were made by Representative McCombs of Dallas. McCombs claimed a majority of the people of the state did not think the legislature was worth $10 per day; that the legislature had met only two hours per day for the first 60 days; that many bills had been voted out of committee because the members were "so sweet and loving and did not want to hurt somebody's feelings;" that the committees had been highly inadequate; that the legislature refused to work nights or Saturdays and that the proceedings had been interrupted by trivial affairs.

Bond Issue Doomed

Death of the resolution sealed the doom of the highway bond issue. It was generally believed an attempt would be made to resurrect it if the house recessed and came back June 22. It cannot be submitted in a special session.

The bill to strengthen the oil protation powers of the railroad commission, another of the administration measures, could be submitted to a special session.

The house and senate adopted free conference committee reports on the franchise tax revision bill and the revision of the confederate pension laws. Pensions will be paid widows born before 1873 and who married veterans before 1921 and to militia men of other states who have resided in Texas 10 years. Pensions would be $50 a month for married veterans and $25 for single veterans and widows.

The free conference report on a bill to establish a bureau of child welfare in the state board of control also was adopted. A bill to establish a state nautical school in cooperation with the federal government was passed. The government will furnish the ship and the school will be operated by funds obtained from popular subscription.

ROADS ASK BOOST

NEW YORK, May 21. (AP)—Presidents of the Eastern railroads, representing all lines east of the Mississippi, today voted to ask the Interstate Commerce commission to restore freight rates to a level which, in the judgement of the commission, will protect the credit of the carrier.

made flying wedges in the air, represented the greatest assemblage of planes ever seen in America.

After the long column hummed away down the lake front, 39 ships returned for the mimic warfare tactics.

The bombers staged their onslaught, were driven off by the pursuit squadron.

Attack planes swooped down next, a dozen strong, and, in action close to the ground, swept away another branch of the imaginary foe.

Then the pursuit group battled the attack ships, ending with the pursuit craft retiring in formation.

Two famous army fliers provided the big thrill of the tactics by reproducing a fight to the death, and the watchers for the first time were able to visualize the methods used in single battle combat by the aces of the last war.

Lieut. Irving Woodring, last of the "three musketeers," whose two companions were killed as the price of their daring, encountered Lieut. George Price, one of "Monk" Hunter's 95th squadron stars from Rockwell field, Calif.

High officials of the service reviewed the success of the practical tactics from the roof of the Stevens hotel with city leaders.

Officers Watch

Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, in charge of the air demonstration, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker of the sixth corps army area, and Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the army air forces, were among the observers.

After the maneuvers, the huge squadron of planes continued on to Dayton and Cleveland, bases for coming operations over eastern cities. The Chicago show was the first of the nation-wide series which will extend for more than a week.

General Fechet, remarking on the significance of the display, said:

"In all our aviation history, a flight of over 600 planes under command of one leader has never before been attempted. A test of that leadership is represented in the smallest unit of this great division. The coordination of every factor required perfect planning and timing, and the demonstration showed that there was not a second's slip-up in performance."

Butter Judging Contest To Be Held in Iowa Park

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, May 21.—A butter judging contest for members of home demonstration clubs of Wichita county will be held at the Pleasant Valley clubhouse in Iowa Park Saturday afternoon, May 23, under the direction of Miss Ethel Luise Webb, county home demonstration agent.

Each club in the county will have one or more contestants enrolled, and it was stated at a meeting of the Pleasant Valley club held at the residence of Mrs. Dave Horbour in Iowa Park Wednesday afternoon that seven members of that club had entered the contest.

Much interest has been manifested by the Pleasant Valley club members under the leadership of Mrs. C. C. Burrows, president, and Iowa Park, being centrally located, has been selected for many of the countywide meetings during the past year.

LABOR BACKS PROHI . CHANGE

Resolution Demands Wage Maintenance

hour day and a six day week in the oil fields was adopted.

Other resolutions criticized a Texas clothing manufacturing company for discontinuance of the union label; asserted that a petroleum company did not pay adequately for services rendered; advocated a raise in the salaries of the state labor commissioner, his chief deputy and his field representatives; and condemned "action of the Associated General Contractors in their efforts to reduce wages in the building trades."

Earlier in the convention a motion pledging support to the Houston Building Trades council in its fight against a $2 a day wage reduction offered by an organization of contractors was adopted by the federation.

Speakers included R. E. Roberts of Dallas, international representative of the Brootherhood of Carpenters; Charles Poe of Houston, representative of the International Machinists; William Moran of El Paso, publisher of a labor periodical; John Malone of Fort Worth, vice president of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America; John L. Coulter of Fort Worth, secretary of the Oil Workers International; and John Young of Galveston, president of the Master Stevedores Association.

Moran called attention to the fact there had been virtually no discussion of the immigration question and warned the delegates not to fall asleep simply because depression had made persons less anxious to enter the country and the federal government had been active recently in deportation work.

Two Big Building Jobs Started By Frederick Workmen

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., May 2.—Paul Hartwig and Byron Kent with a force of 10 or 12 men and two teams are now busy hauling dirt from the site of the Baptist church which task they expect to complete in a week, according to Hartwig.

The basement is to be under the entire buildinging and will extend 118 feet north and south, and 117 feet east and west, with the exception of a small jog in the southeast corner. Hartwig & Kent have the contract for doing the excavation and as soon as they complete their job, A. H. Krause, general contractor, will begin the building proper.

Only part of the old structure, which was destroyed by fire last January, which will be retained in its present form, is the 90 feet of basement wall on the north and 45 feet of the basement wall on the northwest corner. The brick of the old structure which were recently cleaned, will also be used.

The site is diagonally northeast of the federal building site, and cost of both buildings which are now in process of construction, will be between $100,000 and $200,000, probably the greatest building activity in southwest Oklahoma.

Knights of Pythias To Build Old People's Home

TEMPLE, Texas, May 21. (AP)—Members and lodges of the Texas grand lodge, Knight of Pythias, today had pledged themselves to raise $20,000 to build a home for aged members of the order or their widows. A sum of half the size was pledged two years ago at Beaumont.

Royal C. Phillips was elected grand chancellor at closing sessions of the convention yesterday. Mrs. Elise Moore of Port Arthur was elected grand chief of the Pythian sisters.

sprinkled with hail, fell within 30 minutes. The torrential downpour brought business to a temporary halt and some water damage was incurred. Light showers were reported elsewhere in the county.

HASKELL—Hail stones almost as big as hen eggs pummeled gardens in and around Haskell late Thursday. The local hailstorm accompanied a heavy rain, ranging from an inch to two inches, which fell all over the county. No damaging rain fell outside the city.

STAMFORD—About one-half inch of rain fell here this afternoon. The rain extended all over Jones county, making prospects good for better crops in this and adjoining counties.

FIVE HURT IN CARSON STORM

BORGER, Texas, May 21. (AP)—Five persons were injured, 22 oil derricks blown down and several buildings damaged early today by a small tornado which struck Skellytown, a community in the oil field 16 miles southeast of here in Carson county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Francis, their daughter, 14, and a nephew, Carl Alexander, 17, were injured by flying debris as they fled from their home to the safety of a boiler firebox nearby. The house was demolished. They were brought here to a hospital. Francis and his wife suffered broken bones and bruises but the children were less seriously hurt.

Tom Jones, farm boss on a lease in the Skellytown area, suffered minor injuries when his house was crumpled by the wind. He walked a mile through rain and hail to another house and was given aid, then was removed to White Deer for treatment.

The seaboard gasoline plant was badly damaged, stills and buildings being blown down. Three homes and two pump houses were demolished. Skellytown itself, a community of about 200 persons, was not damaged by the storm, although the rain, hail and high wind extended to Pampa and Borger.

Cavalry Division In Mimic War Campaign

EL PASO, May 21. (AP)—In the lofty Sacramento mountains of southern New Mexico, the "white" army of the first cavalry division, only division of its kind in the United States, concentrated its strength tonight, preparing for "battle" with a "brown" army drawn up at Fort Bliss near El Paso.

Beginning the annual maneuvers of the division, designed to demonstrate the place of cavalry in modern fighting, the "white" army left the fort this morning, while patrols of the "brown" army were forbidden to enter the neutral zone until "war" was officially declared. Airplane scouts and detachments of cavalry, however, dombed the vicinity of the "border" in efforts to locate the "enemy."

HELD FOR BEATING WIFE

Charges of aggravated assault were placed against a Wichita Falls man early Thursday night after police had interferred as he was beating his wife. Detectives Tom Poe and Ed McDonald were called to a home on Twelfth street by neighbors and placed the man under arrest. The woman had been severely beaten, they said.

When You
INDULGE

EVERY man, woman and child will occasionally over-indulge. But don't suffer for your indiscretions. It's folly to do so when you can so easily sweeten and settle a sour, upset stomach with a little Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Hearty eaters have long since learned the quick comfort this perfect anti-acid brings. Smokers know how it neutralizes nicotine; brings back a sweet taste; guards the breath. Women know what it does for nausea—or sick headache. And when children have over-eaten—are bilious, constipated or otherwise upset—give them a little of the same, pleasant-tasting and milky-white Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You'll be through with crude methods once you learn the perfect way. Nothing else has the same quick, gentle effect. Doctors prescribe it for sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gas, nausea, headache. It has been standard with them for over 50 years.

Insist on genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia; a less perfect product may not act the same. The name Phillips is always on bottle and wrapper.—Adv.

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID — to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. Allison's Drug Store says HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile misery or money back.—Adv.

RUSSIA REJECTS AMERICAN WHEAT REDUCTION PROPOSAL

SOVIET'S STAND PEPS UP MEET

Statement Clarifies Nation's Stand on Problem.

By TOM WILHELM

LONDON, May 21. (AP)—Russia's delegation to the world wheat conference today issued a statement rejecting the American plan for restricted acreage as suggested by Samuel R. McKelvie, and proposing instead a broad scheme upon which Russia would be inclined to enter a world agreement limiting exports.

The announcement enlivened an otherwise dull day of routine committee meetings but what its effect will be on tomorrow's open meeting of the conference was conjectural. Some delegates, although they refrained from commenting on the note, said they believed it would prolong the conference into next week.

Conference Divided

The Russian viewpoint was made pretty clear yesterday in committee session and today's statement amplified it. The immediate result of its publication was to divide the conference into two camps, at least under the surface, one supporting the quota system and the other holding out against it. The United States is in the latter.

McKelvie has made it clear that his country is definitely aligned against the quota system.

Russia wants its old position as the leading wheat exporting nation, and the Danubian states, whose production fell off during the war, support Russia. The opposition is likely to include Canada, Argentina and Australia.

The Russian statement, signed by Isidore Lubimoff, does not commit the delegation to any definite proposal, but rather places the responsibility for success or failure of the conference with the large exporting countries, including the United States.

Cooperation Necessary

"It is necessary to emphasize," the statement said, "that the establishment of a scheme based on quotas can be acceptable only if the largest wheat exporting countries will participate."

The other delegates declined to comment on the import of that paragraph.

The statement referred to Russia's willingness to accept a quota system and said, "but it must be realized that our wheat is one of the main sources for covering our liabilities in connection with our imports, and adequate credits for financing wheat which must be kept in stock in Russia must be guaranteed."

Repudiation of the McKelvie proposals was very definite.

"The chief proposal of the United States," said the statement, "is reduction of acreage. So far as our country is concerned this solution is unacceptable. In the conditions of our social system, with the extraordinary development of our industries and number of industrial workers, increased production is necessary to meet growing internal demands. At the same time it will lead also to an increased surplus to meet our export requirements."

In an outline of the position of wheat in Russia the statement said last year's crop was 29,500,000 tons of which 6,100,00 was surplus. The estimated harvest this year is 36,500,000 tons.

Laredo Grand Jury Indicts Former Banker

LAREDO, Texas, May 21. (AP)—A special grand jury in district court today returned indictments charging Jose Linares with assault to murder and Armando P. Pena, former employe of the Union State Bank and Trust company of Laredo with embezzlement.

Linares allegedly shot twice at Louis Hausman, Laredo meat packer.

The indictment against Pena was in connection with a $7,000 shortage discovered by auditors employed by officers of the bank.

French Film Actress And Husband Separate

LOS ANGELES, May 21. (AP)—The Times said today Yola D'Avril, French film actress, had admitted she and Edward Ward, music composer, had separated. They were married last Oct. 19.

The actress was quoted as saying Ward "is a grand fellow, but our temperaments clashed too much to make our married life happy." The Times said she had consulted an attorney with a view of divorce proceedings.

SEAMAN TELLS OF SCUTTLING

Mobile Owner on Trial For Sinking Ship

MOBILE, Ala., May 21. (AP)—Salvador Martinez, Spanish seaman who yesterday completed his direct testimony as a government witness in the trial of Capt. John C. Murphy, Mobile ship owner charged with conspiracy to scuttle one of his vessels in 1927, was recalled to the stand by the prosecution in federal court today.

The government cross examined Martinez on his testimony after the defense attempted to show the witness expected to receive immunity from prosecution or a light sentence by his testimony after he entered a plea of guilty to the same charge on which Murphy is being tried. Martinez, however, said he waived immunity when he went before a recent federal grand jury here which investigated the case.

Two firemen and the steward of the Rose Murphy, the vessel alleged to have been scuttled, followed Martinez on the stand today. They testified as to details of the sinking. James Stewart, fireman, said he felt the engine reversed and the vessel shook and shortly thereafter an officer called that the ship was sinking. The other two, Bennie Batiste, steward, and Arthur Hawkins, fireman, said they felt no shock and first knew something was wrong when officers gave the alarm. All testified that the engine of the ship was never turned off and that the ship was in motion up to the time she went down and was headed out to sea.

The government contends that the engine was left on purposely and the vessel headed into deep water so she would be sure to go down instead of being beached.

Frank Reeks, operator of a launch, also was a witness today. He testified to taking both Martinez and Murphy at various times to and from the steamship Northern Light, owned by Murphy, which Martinez claims he burned at Murphy's suggestion in August, 1927, before the Rose Murphy was lost. He said on one occasion when he was taking Martinez up to the ship from Mobile that Captain Murphy hailed them from the river bank at Magazine Point and called out something to Martinez.

Persons reported missing last year in New York City numbered 25,009, including 3,500 boys and 2,450 girls.

SOVIET ADMITS WORLD FLIGHT

Oklahoma's Air Project Wins Approval

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 21. (AP)—Departure of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty on their proposed race against time around the world appeared in the immediate future today as F. C. Hall, oil man backer of the flight, received word that Soviet permission to cross Russian territory had been granted.

The fliers will leave New York for the first leg of the trip, to Harbor Grace, N. F., tomorrow or the next day, if weather conditions are favorable, Hall said.

Post and Gatty today were en route to Washington on a nonstop flight from Oklahoma City, apparently ignorant of the fact that the object of their flight to the capitol already had been accomplished.

They were to seek the aid of the British ambassador in their quest for flight permission from the Soviet government.

Graduate Nurses Entertain With 'Red Cross' Luncheon

Decorations that featured the 50th anniversary of the American Red Cross made a beautiful dining room at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Thursday when members of the Graduate Nurses association were hostesses, with W. O. Beeman, chairman of the Red Cross local chapter; Miss Pearl Rorabaugh, Red Cross nutritionist; the 1931 graduating class of nurses from the General hospital and Red Cross nurses as special honor guests.

The table in the shape of a great cross had a five tiered white cake as the center with 50 red candles burning on it. Red poppies were spread in four directions from the cake making a great cross and bowls of red poppies with an enormous basket of them on the piano, were the only flowers used. The combination of brilliant red and white was pratjcularly striking.

Miss Eva Wallace presided and Mrs. Ola G. Hamlin gave the beautiful invocation. Mesdames C. Y. Tully and Walter Priddy opened the program with two exquisite vocal numbers, Mrs. Lucile Brooks Huff accompanying at the piano, "The Rosary" and "I Live and Love Thee," were both a beautiful blending of two lovely voices.

Mrs. W. E. Ryan gave a short and interesting report of the recent state convention in Fort Worth where 392 delegates were registered Speeches made at this convention showed a lack of public health nurses and showed the need of them in every locality. It was stated that the Red Cross had spent $50,000,000 in the United States in disasters in the United States, besides what was spent in the world war. It was announced that the bi-annual meeting of the national organization would be held in San Antonio next year.

Mrs. Ola G. Hamlin gave an interesting resume of Red Cross history, telling of many heroic figures that became noted in the work.

W. O. Beeman told of the work of the local Red Cross chapter and Miss Pearl Rorabaugh explained her work as Red Cross nutritionist.

Covers were laid for Medames J. R. McKinney, T. E. Roberts, Fannie Rice, Katherine M. O'Donnell, Lillian F. Stewart, T. J. Mahoney, Bonnie Jean McGuire, Fern Elizabeth Barnett, W. H. Metzner, W. E. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

"Tell me it doesn't pay to be beautiful," I heard a girl say Thursday morning, emphasizing "me" as she finished reading the story of the lawyer's plea and the jury's verdict in the Nixon-Nirdlinger trial. Then later in the day I overheard two young ladies discussing the same thing. "You can get by with anything," said one, "just so you are pretty enough." The other laughed. "That's a French gesture," she said. "You'd never hear a lawyer in America saying a woman is too beautiful to be bad."

Their argument was warm. It seemed astonishing that young girls had taken note of and remembered cases in recent years where beautiful women were pronounced not guilty and where plainer sinners had no chance for freedom from punishment. They finally decided it was simply a case of man's attraction to beauty and that the mesmerism of beauty was probably the reason justice was pictured blindfolded.

This is no age, I thought to myself, to spring the old platitude that beauty is only skin deep. There isn't a girl who does not long in her innermost heart to be beautiful—most of them just because beauty attracts the multitude. How I used to long for beauty—so that people would love me. As I grew older and knew it was useless, I learned the remedy—just grin and bear it.

The most beautiful woman I ever knew—that is the most perfect physical specimen of femininity from the crown of her head to the sole of her feet, a wonderful dancer, splendid athlete and good bridge player—that woman was the most unmoral person I have ever known. Genial and attentive to her guests, she was always a popular hostess and if she wrecked a life and broke up a home now and then, she did it with an airy gesture. But there was a worm in the heart of that rose and it ate through at the end.

History has told of Argive Helen, who "burned the topless towers of Ilium." After Menelaus carried her away from the Trojan shores, did she sit at his hearth and spin in happiness? We read of Cleopatra with her infinite variety of charm, but the beauty that put the world's fate in her hands did not save her from a lonely death. Beautiful Mary Stuart was so beloved that we are told peasants have lain awake sorrowing that she is dead—but she spent agonizing days before her slim neck was bared to the ax.

People pay for sinning and they pay in life. It may be the mind or the heart or the health or the spirit, but recompense for sin marches as remorselessly as the tragedy in an old Greek drama.

It's perfectly normal and natural to wish to be beautiful. Those who haven't beauty try to attain it and those who have it try to retain it. Magazines and newspapers would go out of business if it weren't for the advertisements of methods to perpetuate or restore the magic quality.

But there's some recompense for those of us who've had to go through life without it. It's all the same in the grave. And any way, beauty is a convention varying in ages and in countries. The hourglass figure of 25 years ago would be a mockery now. No gentleman of our land would admire flat noses hung with rings, and wooly hair. Though there's a glamour about Cleopatra and Helen of Troy and Mary, Queen of Scots, we might not even think them pretty now. Who knows but that at some time double chins may be the style in beauty. Take courage, girls.

Slot Machine Owner Fails in Recovery Suit

Orders issued several weeks ago by Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court for the destruction of 10 slot machines held by Sheriff Perry Browning remained effective Thursday after a jury had returned a verdict for the defendant before Judge W. W. Cock in in the 78th district court in the suit of Leo C. Mills against the sheriff.

Classification of the slot machines as gambling devices comprised the jury's verdict, agreeing with the decision rendered by Judge Martin earlier when the order condemning the machines to destruction was given. The suit against Sheriff Browning was brought by the plaintiff as owner of the machines, his petition fixing their value at $600. Proof that they were not gambling devices would have been required for the plaintiff to regain possession of the slot machines, it was pointed out.

Wayne Somerville, attorney for the plaintiff, filed a motion for a new trial. The state was represented by L. V. Abernathy, county attorney, and Otis E. Nelson, assistant.

Garden Expert Discusses Best Methods for Watering Flowers

'Sprinkling vs. Pouring' Finds Advantages for Each System, Mrs. Dobie Says in Article

By BERTHA M'KEE DOBIE

In a former time, when theological arguments enjoyed a favor greater than that they enjoy today, to sprinkle or to pour was a burning question, and which method was right nobody knew but the disputants.

When the question is applied to gardens, the answer is not in doubt. Sometimes it is good to sprinkle—that is, allow water to fall in drops from above—and sometimes to pour; it all depends upon what is to be watered. But never is it good to sprinkle as rain sometimes falls in a scant and niggardly way. A thorough soaking once in so often is far better for plants than a little sprinkling each evening, which is good only to cool the air. We all know this; the difficulty is that ground has a way of looking wet when in reality it is only damp on top and will be and look quite dry next day. When we have held a nozzle over a spot for five minutes we are quite ready to move on. But a rain that lasts five minutes is worthless, and so is an artificial watering. It is better not to measure a watering period by the tedium of holding a nozzle, but to rely upon some sprinkler that will send a fine shower over a bed for as long as we like, while we are off and away staking tall plants, tying up vines, pinching off withered flowers, and revenging ourselves on cutworms.

How to Water Plants

When a bed is well watered, the roots go down for water, as is proper to roots, but when it is scantily, however frequently watered, they spread themselves out near the surface, so that the hot Texas sun bakes the roots and high winds topple the plants over. Watering from above is the only practicable method for small flowers; and furthermore, it frees the foliage from dust that chokes. But this is no way at all to water a shrub. A shallow depression should be made around a shrub for a distance from the stem proportionate to the size of the plant, and the end of the hose laid in the depression and left there for several hours or better still all night, with water running a mere trickle. Young trees should be watered in the same way, but it must be remembered that the feeder roots do not lie against the trunk. Shrubs require watering shortly before they are to flower, and during all but very dry summers only then. That is, of course, established shrubs. Shrubs and trees newly put out should receive water every ten days during the hottest weather. It is usually better to water roses at the root than from above, since water on the leaves provides a medium for the growth of black spot and mildew.

An excellent book on garden culture advises that "it makes little difference in the summer whether one waters in full sunlight or at night except that water applied in the evening will be more effective because the sun has no chance to quickly evaporate it. "The statement may be true for more northern latitudes, but it certainly is not true for Texas. I have seen rosebuds that looked scalded after they had been sprinkled in full sunlight. The foliage of many plants also suffers.

Indeed, no one garden practice can do more damage than watering when the sun shines hot. The best gardeners water in late evening and at night. Early morning is also a good time.

Through most of May we usually have rain enough, but from that time on until frost closes the garden's account we must supplement the natural rainfall. We can reduce the monthly bill to a minimum by close planting, cultivation of the soil, and mulching. Gardening becomes a sport when we use our intelligence to defeat drouth. Indeed, properly regarded, even pill bugs

Creamed Codfish With Eggs

One cupful flaked, salt codfish.
Two cupfuls unseasoned medium white sauce.
Two hard-cooked eggs.
One teaspoonful minced onion.

Cover the flaked codfish with cold water, add minced onion, bring to a boil and then drain. Add to the white sauce with the hard-cooked eggs, sliced, and serve with baked potatoes or on toast. One teaspoonful of chopped green pepper may be added if desired. Serves four.

Cinnamon Honey

Add ground cinnamon to taste to a good grade of strained honey, blending the ingredients well.

April Salad

One package lemon Jell-O.
One pint boiling water.
One pimento, cut in strips.
Two hard-cooked eggs, cut.
One cup celery, finely chopped.
One-third cup olives, finely chopped.
One and a half teaspoonfuls chives, finely chopped, or one teaspoonful onion juice.
One tablespoonful vinegar.
One-fourth teaspoonful salt.
Dash of cayenne.

Dissolve Jell-O in boiling water; chill. When Jell-O is slightly thickened, fold in remaining ingredients. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves six.

Strawberry or Raspberry Fluff

Crush four cupfuls of strawberries or raspberries and add sugar to sweeten and one teaspoonful of lime juice. Add one-half cupful of diced soft marshmallows. Chill at least two hours. Just before serving add one cupful of cream whipped. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Mixed Grill

One and a half pounds round steak, ground.
One teaspoonful prepared mustard.
One small onion, minced.
Four tablespoonfuls melted butter.
One teaspoonful salt.
One-eighth teaspoonful pepper.
Six bananas.
Three tomatoes.

Combine meat, mustard, minced onion, salt and pepper. Form into flat round cakes. Peel bananas and cut washed tomatoes into halves crosswise. Brush bananas, meat cakes and tomatoes with melted butter. Sprinkle tomatoes with salt and pepper. Then arrange meat cakes, bananas and tomato halves on a broiler rack and cook about 12 minutes in the broiler oven, which has been preheated. Turn bananas once. (Bananas may be sprinkled with a little lemon juice before they are brushed with the butter.) Serves six.

Stuffed Green Pepper Salad

Three medium green peppers.
One small cream cheese.
One-fourth cupful grated American cheese.
Salt.
One-fourth cupful chopped stuffed olives.
Thin cream.
Paprika.
Lettuce and mayonnaise.

Remove the tops from the green peppers, scoop out seeds, and boil five minutes in boiling salted water; then remove and chill. Mix together the cream cheese, American cheese, and olives; moisten with cream, and season with salt and paprika to taste. Pack in peppers, chill well, then slice and serve on lettuce leaves with a garnish of mayonnaise. (This cheese mixture can be used as a spread for graham sandwiches.) Serves from six to eight.

Upside-Down Cake

One cupful sugar.
One-half cupful butter or shortening.
One and a half cupfuls flour.
One-half cupfuls milk.
One and a half teaspoonfuls baking powders.
Two whole eggs or whites of three beaten stiff.
One teaspoonful vanilla.
One cupful dark brown sugar, sliced pineapple, cherries, nuts.
One tablespoonful butter.

Cream together butter and sugar; add well beaten eggs, flour sifted with baking powder, milk and vanilla. Beat well. Melt the tablespoonful of butter in a skillet and remove from the fire. Put one cupful of dark brown sugar in the skillet and spread evenly, then place a layer of sliced pineapple in this sugar and fill centers of rings with cherries and place pecans between pineapple slices; pour the cake batter over pineapple and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes. This may be served either hot or cold with whipped cream or a plain sauce.

Waterless Cooking

The newer knowledge of food values has directed attention to the important role which the mineral salts play in the daily diet. Vegetables, for instance, are no longer cooked in a large quantity of water and drained as valuable mineral salts are poured down the sink. The best utensil on the market for preserving food values and flavors is the waterless cooker.

Waterless cookers are made in such a way that the heat from the stove is evenly diffused through the pot. This is accomplished in two ways, first by making the utensils of extra heavy metal—usually of heavy aluminum—and providing heavy tight fitting covers which hold steam inside the pot. The other type of waterless cooker which provides for the cooking of several different foods in one container, has a separate metal base which fits over the burner and diffuses the heat over the complete surface of the utensil instead of having the center withstand the full intensity of the heat. This latter type is usually provided with a cover which is locked in place and has a small steam vent with an inside rack and at least two semi-circular pans.

Since there is practically no pressure in the waterless cooker, foods require about the same time for cooking as ordinary top-stove cooking. While there appears to be no saving of time in the actual cooking period, the waterless cooker is still a time saver. With the necessity for watching eliminated, once the heat has been properly regulated, the food may be left without fear of its burning or boiling over. The housekeeper may then spend the time often spent in watching top-stove cooking doing other things.

The heat should be reduced until no steam escapes. Escaping steam means loss of water, and if allowed to continue, the food in the bottom of the cooker will eventually become dry and then burn. With good management, the waterless cooker is a great fuel saver, due to the fact that an entire meal may be cooked over one low flame.

Steam and odors of cooking are reduced to a minimum. Since it makes unnecessary the heating of the oven and is used over one burner, there is a minimum amount of heat loss. Therefore it is especially adapted to summer cookery, and its use keeps the kitchen cool and comfortable.

A result closely approximating oven roasting can be obtained in a waterless cooked if no other food is cooked at the same time and if the valve on the top of the cooker is left open so the steam can escape. If the steam is held in the cooker the meat will be braised and will more nearly resemble a pot roast.

Waterless cookers are made in several sizes but the larger sizes with several inset pans are advised even for small families as whole meals may be cooked over a single blaze.

Waterless cookers are not only practical for cooking together foods which require approximately the same time for cooking, but may be used with foods which require widely different lengths of time. When possible, the food that require the longer time for cooking should be put in the bottom of the cooker leaving the space near the top for the foods that require a shorter time for cooking.

Since there is no interchange of flavors, the possible combinations are unlimited.

Ham Dinner

One picnic ham.

New Potatoes.
Squash.

Soak whole or half of a large ham in cold water to which a little vinegar has been added for several hours; remove skin and place in the bottom of cooker and sear all sides slightly; add three cups of boiling water and place directly over a low flame and cook string beans in the top pan, seasoning with salt and pepper; place top on cooker and put cooker on base and cook one hour; open again and place potatoes on the rack over ham and squash in one of the inset pans and replace pan of beans in top of cooker. Cook for another hour.

Place ham in a baking dish and pour one-third cupful of peach sweet pickle syrup and one-third cupful ham stock over ham and brown slightly in the oven.

Army Worm Makes Rapid Inroads In Young Grain Crop

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, May 21.—According to G. R. Warren, county agent, the army worms have invaded the fields in many sections of Young county and are doing serious damage to the grain crop.

According to Warren fields three days ago which would have made 100 bushels of oats per acre are now ruined and will make very little yield. Mr. Warren is doing his very best to cope with the situation, but he believes that unless some way is found to check the ravages of the worms much of the wheat, oats, and barley will be destroyed. He has appealed to the state department for assistance and advice.

Rock Island Needs Additional Funds

WASHINGTON, May 21. (AP)—The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad today informed the Interstate Commerce commission that because of the general business depression it would be necessary for it to provide funds additional to its earnings for general expenses.

To meet this situation, the carrier asked permission to pledge as security for short term notes $15,037,000 of bonds now held in its treasury.

The road now has outstanding $2,500,000 in short term notes and said additional loans probably would be necessary before Aug. 1.

A Draft of 4,000,000
Our Hat in the Ring
The Amazing Hawks
Night Life of Cats

By EMILE GAUVREAU

While Mr. Hoover, worrying about the budget, expresses a desire to cut down army expenses and reduce the number of forts, a new wartime policy lands on the front pages like a bolt out of a clear sky. The plan calls for 4,000,000 draftees with a reserve force of 7,000,000. There are to be no exemptions. Industries would be held in line by "ironclad contracts."

All this is described as a preparedness program to insure "victory, immediate and complete." Pacifists will do much yelling about this. They will tell you that America, champion of peace, winner of Nobel prizes for peace, scorer of belligerent Europe, throws its hat in the ring for war with the abrupt insolence of the Hun or the Tartar.

England, France, Italy and Russia may regard us henceforth as a people ready to fight at the drop of the hat. But there will be more wars and the prepared nations will survive. That is the sort of civilization we are living in. Knowing what we do, let us at least train our young men so that, if they have to fight, they will not be sent in to the slaughter without knowledge of the handling of a gun. General Pershing can tell you about that.

Let us take a leaf from General Sherman's experience at Shiloh. His army caught unawares, a terrific slaughter followed. When it was all over he reported to General Grant: "We were not surprised but we were unprepared."

Some will regret that the news has been announced that we are ready. The world's aim is peace, but its eye is glued on war. That may be hypocrisy, but it is also self-preservation.

The astonishing Capt. Frank M. Hawks, who seems to thrive on besting records, flies to Berlin from London so fast that he beats a cablegram to it. His average speed is 205 miles an hour. He makes the distance—621 miles—in 2 hours 58 minutes.

America is full of doubtful heroes who are supposed to cover us with glory by their feats. But most of them turn out to be publicity seekers who avail themselves of the most arresting methods to win favor. Months, sometimes years before these "scientists" set out on their "hazardous" trips, they are photographed, interviewed, yanked before the microphone. Captain Hawks does what he does without any forewarning.

A hero in spite of himself—that's Captain Hawks, not one by self-promotion. He is today America's greatest flier.

The night life of cats is to have its curfew rung by the noise abatement commission in New York. Weekly complaints numbering as high as 50 have called attention to the nuisance of backyard yowling in the metropolis.

The trouble is, a homeless cat is outside the city ordinance which prohibits "the unnecessary or excessive meowing of cats, the barking of dogs, the squawking of parrots and the soughing of gold fish." Moreover, the time and place of the meeting of cats is most uncertain. But love, as we know, will find a way. And what is love-making without moanings and groanings?

Give any kind of tomcat a comfortable home and there will be no more public and eloquent love-making on backyard fences or in Central park or Riverside drive, for that matter.

Concerning Deadly Sins

THERE is a refreshing tang and flavor of truth in a discussion of "The Seven Deadly Sins of Today" written by Margery Lawrence for "Britannia and Eve" two months ago. Its honest frankness is revealed by the fact that two of those offensive habits are imputed specifically to women.

Recitation of the "sins" enumerated by Miss Lawrence perhaps is justified: self-advertisement, false vice, self-pity, cheap cynicism, laziness, something-for-nothing, and lack of concentration. The first and last named traits receive particularly full treatment at the author's hand.

No exception is taken to the salesman's advertisement of what he has to sell, whether it be "tangible soap or stockings, or intangible brains or beauty." But marked exception is taken to ordinary, pleasant, everyday people who have nothing to sell and nothing to advertise, but "who persistently and patiently try to advertise themselves one way or another, and chiefly in the daily press." Men are charged with as great a penchant for such self-advertisement as women, especially with regard to getting in the front row when a news event is being photographed, in order to be "taken" too.

But a more serious element in modern life is cited in the last "sin," that of restlessness. It has seemed to spread by contagion, and is amazingly prevalent. The author deplores a return to "those Edwardian evenings when mother knitted, father read the paper, and the children yawned," but she also marvels at the number of people these days who simply cannot bear their own company, or that of their nearest and dearest, for more than half an hour at a time." She continues:

"People have lost the capacity for amusing themselves; they must perpetually be amused instead. This is almost universal. Home seems now to many people to be merely a place to fill with outside people or to leave as quickly as possible. What future is there for a nation if it loses the power to enjoy the little lovely things of life, that still dwell on every doorstep? Today we rush over the doorstep so quickly that we never see what is there."

Detection of flaws and their elimination is a sure road to improved quality. The implied criticisms contained in the discussion of "modern deadly sins" are worth thoughtful consideration.

Aviation and Prosperity

AUTOMOBILE production, some economic experts contend, rules the prosperity of our country. Overproduction of cars, with a near-saturation point in the market, has had considerable to do with present depression.

But a new industry, an infant now, but destined to become a giant within the next decade, probably will rule the business cycle of our country in the near future. That industry is aviation.

We can trace the beginning of the present depression back through 1930. The previous year set an all-time record in auto production, with an output of 5,700,000 motor vehicles. In 1930 this figure was cut by more than two million!

Steel mills, in the peak of production in 1929, suddenly found their orders cut off. Rubber factories, glass manufacturers, upholsterers, lumber mills, railroads and other industries, depending to some extent on the automobile business for their orders, were in the same situation. No wonder the country suffered.

There'll come a day, aviation leaders say, when these industries will look to airplane manufacturers for huge orders. Then, they contend, the country will have two mighty factors in regulating the demand for raw materials, and steadying the rocking boat of prosperity.

Argument by Radio

IT IS interesting to note that Germany and Russia are conducting a sort of verbal war by radio these days.

It began when Soviet broadcasting stations started sending out revolutionary speeches in the German language—for the consumption, obviously, of potential Communistic converts on the German side of the border.

Now the Germans have retaliated by broadcasting, in Russian, lectures criticising conditions in Soviet Russia.

This particular squabble will probably be ironed out peaceably enough in short order. But the germs of a real international argument are there. Modern science, by facilitating international communication, seems to have provided one more source of possible friction.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, THE SCOTTISH POET—The Scottish poet, Thomas Blacklock (1721-1791) became blind at the age of 6 months, as a result of an attack of smallpox. His ability to write descriptive poetry is an extraordinary accomplishment, in view of his lack of sight. It was long maintained that he possessed a sixth sense permitting him to become aware of color by touch.

JOSEPHUS SCALIGER MEMORIZED 62,000 VERSES IN 21 DAYS—Joseph (Justus) Scaliger (1540 1609) French humanist and philologist, is described as an "ocean of knowledge" and the possessor of an extraordinary memory. When he arrived in Paris to study ancient languages under Tournebe young Scaliger, aged 19, at once became the master of his teacher. The great feat of reciting the whole Odyssey and the Iliad from memory was performed in Leyden, Holland, where he occupied a professorial chair at the university.

TED DE BONIS, PITCHER OF THE TROY EMERALDS—In June 1927 the Troy Emeralds and the Cohoes Insulars were playing in Prospect park, Troy, N. Y. De Bonis hit the first batter with the first pitched ball, walked the second batter, hit the third with the fourth pitched ball, and hit the fourth with the second pitched ball, the fourth man forcing in a run. De Bonis pitched 11 balls, without a strike being called or a batter swinging at a ball, yet a run was scored.

$20 A WEEK

by ROB EDEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Sally Blair and Ann Seymour are working in the sales department of the Davidson Insurance company, earning $20 a week and living in a cheap, unattractive apartment. Ann is engaged to Mac Tierney. Sally is disgusted with the way she must live and declares that within a year she will have an attractive apartment, good clothes, French lingerie, a fur coat, a job paying $75 a week and a millionaire husband. Ann laughs at Sally's dream.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER TWO

Sally felt very small, very insignificant the next morning when with Ann she hurried into the Davidson building. Forty-eight stories high, its sheer walls rising to terraced roofs, its slender tower pointing to the sun, it accepted the hurrying men and girls greedily, shot them up to their offices in swift elevators, and lay back eagerly waiting for more, unperturbed by the bustle within it.

Four floors were occupied by the Davidson Insurance company. The 20th, the 21st, 22nd, and the 23rd. Sally worked on the 20th. The executive offices and suite of the president with his private roof garden were on the 23rd. Sally had never been beyond her own floor. Indeed, she never had had occasion to be. She knew, as the other employes of the company knew, that the last elevator in the long row in the lobby was the private property of the owner of the building.

This morning she glanced at it curiously as she stepped into a public crowded car, and a slight flush mounted her cheeks. Her chat with Ann last night seemed so far away. Her plans. The list that was now in her purse.

All so hopeless, so distant. Like idle boasting. Last night it hadn't seemed bravado. She had seen the future clearly, had seen it rise before her as if all the obstacles had been swept aside, as if they were easy, as if she had nothing to do but to will them away with the wand of her hand.

Sally Is Doubtful

Simple, her mind had told her last night, in the little room, with Ann her gaping, incredulous audience. Perhaps Ann was right after all. That it was only a dream, a dream everybody dreamed. A dream of youth. What was it that Ann had said about dreaming something of the same thing before she had met Mac Tierney and had fallen in love with him?

She turned in the elevator and met Ann's questioning blue eyes, then turned away. She couldn't let the girl see the indecision, the fear that she felt. Not after last night, and what she had said.

"Geeting cold feet?" Ann asked in a whisper. Her lips were smiling, small, pert lips.

"No," Sally answered shortly glad that the car was finally at the 20th floor, glad she could step out into the hall away from Ann, and those blue inquisitive eyes which saw so much.

"How are you going to start your campaign?" Ann couldn't keep the giggle out of her voice. Sally winced when she heard it.

"I have my plans," She would not say more now.

She had her plans, that was true. Last night she had thought them out, when Ann was sound asleep besides her, breathing gently and dreaming of Mac. Last night they had seemed so certain as she sketched them out in her mind.

"I can furnish all manner of the proper references. I'll make a list of them if you like."

This morning—well, she didn't know. Did you always feel like this the morning after you had made some great decision? Did you feel not quite so sure of yourself, rather helpless, and much too rash?

Mame Gives a Warning

Sally walked quickly to her desk, drew off the dust cover from her typewriter, and sat down. Already there was a pile of papers in her basket. All around her were green metal desks in neat orderly rows, girls working at them, the click of typewriter keys in operation. Employes of the sales department started to work immediately on entering the office. There was no preliminary gossiping. John Warner, sales manager, was something of efficiency expert.

His door, frosted glass with his name and title printed on the opaque surface, was ahead. Sally could see it every time she looked up. Had seen it now staring at her for six months.

Always before, when it opened and the pompous middle-aged figure of Warner came into view, she had dropped her eyes, intent again on her work. She had had good advice when she had first come to work for him, and she had acted on the advice. The caution had come from Mame Smith, who sat beside her at an identical green desk.

"Steer clear of Mr. Warner, Sall, above everything. He's dynamite, and I know it. I've been working here a month now and I know. If you don't bother him, he won't bother you."

Sally had asked for more information and Mame had willingly given it.

"You notice, of course, that he only hires pretty girls? Young ones, too. And he won't have any married girls working. Didn't he ask you when he hired you how old you were, and whether you were married? Well, he asked me the same thing, and he asks all the girls the same. When his last secretary got married secretly, he found out about it some way, and promptly fired her. He's done that more than once with girls when he found out they were married.

"He may look harmless, but he isn't. Likes to step—and if you give him any encouragement, he'll ask you to go out. That's why he hired you—why there was a place open. The girl who sat at your desk before thought she'd be smart and make up to him. Well, she did, and he asked her out, and she got scared and wouldn't go, and he bounced her. Right away. No waiting around. I know that was the reason because her work was all right. Satisfactory. She cried on my shoulder when she left, but I'd already warned her so she didn't get any sympathy from me. Warner gets through quickly, when he gets through, Joyce Haller, his secretary, goes out with him all the time. She has to to keep her job.

"But he's all right unless you encourage him. Pays no attention to you. It's a good thing to remember. His wife just divorced him."

Sally Plans Her Campaign

Sally was glad of the advice. And she had followed it. She was politely cold to Warner when she met him in the halls, or saw him in the elevators, hardly lifting her lashes as she spoke to him. And he in turn had paid not the slightest attention to her. She was just one of the girls who worked for him.

Something about his stubby

Q.—Where should a corsage be worn with an evening dress?—R. F.

A.—Shoulder bouquets are popular at the present time. They are usually arranged in a long, slender line.

Q.—At what stage of impairment of vision is a child considered educationally blind?—D. T.

A.—Roughly speaking, a child with less than one-tenth vision, or with an eye condition which makes school work unsafe if conducted in the ordinary way, is educationally blind.

Q.—What day is being considered for Lindbergh day?—D. E. R.

A.—There has been a movement to designate as Lindbergh day May 21. On this date in 1927, Lindbergh reached Paris after his famous solo flight.

Q.—How many cleaning and dyeing plants are there in the United States?—C. A. T.

A.—The number of cleaning and dyeing plants in the United States is approximately 7,000. This number, of course, refers to power plants, and must not be confused with press shops, of which there are probably about 200,000. None of them does any dyeing or dry cleaning, sending it out to plants. This number is merely a vague estimate since press shops change frequently.

Q.—Who first said you can't get blood out of a rock or stone?—M. P.

A.—This is an old Persian proverb, first published in 599.

Q.—Please tell something about the life of Anne Hathaway.—I. E. K.

A.—Very little is known concerning Anne Hathaway. She lived at Shottery, a village near Stratford. Her thatched cottage still attracts thousands of pilgrims. On the settle, where it is said that she and Shakespeare courted, many young travelers now sit in conformity to the tradition that sitting thereon will insure a happy marriage. Anne is mentioned in Shakespeare's bond for license of marriage, dated Nov. 28, 1852. She is known to have remained in Stratford during the years Shakespeare lived in London. Anne Shakespeare survived her husband seven years.

Q.—Why were the Pyramids built?—J. W. N.

A.—The Pyramids are royal tombs, and according to Dr. J. H. Breasted they represent 1200 years of Egyptian history. The earliest were erected not long after 3000 B. C. and the latest a little later than 1800 B. C.

Q.—Please explain the use of the various colored altar vestments in the Episcopal church.—E. P. D.

A.—White is used on all feasts and at all seasons relating to our Lord, such as Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, etc.; to the Blessed Virgin, and to those saints who were not also martyrs; at dedication and harvest festivals; at weddings and confirmations; and generally at the burial of infants. Red is used on the feasts of martyrs, and at whitsuntide. Green is used after the Epiphany, and for the long summer season of Trinity, and on all days which are not feasts or fasts. Violet is used throughout advent, septuagesima, and Lent, and on Vigils, ember days, and rogation days. Black is used only on Good Friday, on All Souls' day, and at offices for the dead.

Q.—What is the earliest record of a surgical operation?—R. N.

A.—Garrison's history of medicine says that certain pictures engraved on the doorposts of a tomb near Memphis, Egypt, are regarded by their discoverer, W. Max Muller, as the earliest known pictures of surgical operations (2500 B. C.) and antedating these are the well-splinted fractures of the 5th dynasty (2750-2625 B. C.)

Q.—In what direction does the Niagara river flow?—E. J. H.

A.—It flows in a northerly direction from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario. Its length is 34 miles; its average width, 3500 feet.

Q.—What is Stonehenge?—E. C. D.

A.—It is a circular group of huge standing stones on the Salisbury Plain in Wiltshire, England. It is not mentioned by any of the early Roman or Saxon chroniclers. Many legends have grown up regarding the origin and significance of Stonehenge. John Aubrey (1663-97) was the first to claim that it was a temple of the Druids. This is still popularly believed, but there is no evidence to support it.

Q.—What per cent of automobile accidents occur at street and highway intersections?—L. A.

A.—About 50 per cent.

NEW ERA BEGINNING IN MERCHANDISING, SAYS KENNEDY

STORE OPENS ANNUAL SALE

Perkins-Timberlake 34 Years in Wichita Area

Standing in the midst of a store filled with customers and salespeople almost unbelievably busy, R. D. Kennedy, manager of the Perkins-Timberlake company, said in a special interview this week that merchandising has entered a new era, an era that means more work but also more sales.

"The woman who bought a $50 dress 10 years ago will buy three at $16.75 today," he said. "She has more and prettier clothes for her money.

"There is no wild, extravagant buying today like there was during boom times, but neither do we have our shelves full of expensive garments, a dangerous investment if we must carry them over. On the other hand, the customer today is clever and conservative, knowing how to get the best value for her money. The salesperson today knows that and is ready to help the customer do just that."

Buyers to the eastern markets found this year that it was possible as never before to get "more for less," Mr. Kennedy said, and were able to bring back one of the most complete stocks ever purchased by the Perkins-Timberlake stores. Colors are bright and new, and materials are fresh and crisp for the summer styles of 1931.

"Already the response to this has been extremely gratifying," Mr. Kennedy said. "Even though our anniversary sale does not start until Friday, many departments have been very busy for the past two weeks. I really believe that we are entering a period when business conditions will steadily improve. We will have to work harder, but we will get better results."

To Last Eight Days

The 34th anniversary sale of the Perkins-Timberlake stores, beginning Friday morning, will last eight days, and will take in all the associated stores at Wichita Falls, Electra, Vernon, Decatur, Bowie and Frederick, Okla.

Cooperating with the chamber of commerce project of extending the city's trade territory, the Perkins-Timberlake company has sent out advertising matter into parts of the territory as yet untouched in similar events.

Within the city, the store is working hard to make the 34th anniversary sale not only the event of the year, but one of the biggest in several years and the beginning of new prosperity.

Streetcars and buses have been chartered for two hours from 8 to 10 a. m. on Friday and Saturday mornings, the two opening days of the sale. At those times, anyone may ride to town free of charge.

New merchandise, barely introduced after its purchase in the East, will be shown in this sale, as is everything in the store, for the anniversary sale, as usual, is the one big event of the year. Quietly planning it for weeks ahead, the entire force of all the stores has been working steadily toward the date of May 22, to make of their combined efforts a real merchandising success.

The sale will open Friday morning and close the following Saturday night, May 30.

SUFFERING OF YEARS ENDED

More Grateful Words of Praise Are Won by Konjola —Read These Experiences.

After all, life teaches no more valuable lesson than that we profit by the experiences of those who know, by actual test, what Konjola can do in the relief of ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Mrs. Allene Tipton

See what Konjola meant to Mrs. Allene Tipton, 2311 Broadway, San Antonio. She says: "For five years I had indigestion and neuritis, and was about to give up in despair. Improvement began with the first bottle of Konjola. I have taken three and am greatly improved in every respect."

Mr. T. A. Wilkinson

And see what Konjola did in the stubborn case of Mr. T. A. Wilkinson, 1109 Johnson street, Amarillo, who says: "For fifteen years I endured stomach and kidney troubles. I had to get up several times every night, and I always felt tired and worn out. But since taking Konjola it is a different story. I certainly wish I had found this wonderful medicine years ago."

Mrs. Ella Mae Ivey

And how happy she found Konjola is Mrs. Ella Mae Ivey, 230 San Pedro avenue, San Antonio. She declares: "Three years ago I began suffering with my stomach. Nausea and vomiting followed meals, and I bloated frightfully. I had terrible headaches and dizzy spells. But after three weeks with Konjola I cannot say too much in praise of this medicine. I am better than in years, and have gained weight."

The files of Konjola fairly overflow with such words of endorsement. Buy Konjola in any drug store and do not accept a substitute.—Adv.

Mrs. Dobie Tells Best Methods Of Watering Gardens

turn a too tame husbandry into adventure.

The best of all provisions against drouth is proper preparation of soil in the first instance. Deep digging and the incorporation of plenty of humus (old manure or rotted leaves), which absorbs water like gelatin and holds it thriftily, are essential to dry weather gardening.

Light Cultivation

Ground should be cultivated as soon after a rain or a watering as its condition allows. Black dirt cannot be cultivated when it is soggy without gumming and clodding. The pun on hoes and hose is inevitable, and has been made many times. "Hoes versus hose," the punsters say, and always the hoes "have it." Ground in good tilth loses no moisture to weeds and little to evaporation; air enters the soil as it cannot enter a caked surface; roots strike deeply to the moisture conserved below; and the loose earth soaks up the next rain. Only the top earth should be stirred in these frequent cultivations. Much injury is done to delicate roots and many plants are actually uprooted by too vigorous an exercise of hoe or trowel. This is one instance in which superficiality is better than profundity. A light scratching of top soil is the right cultivation for small flowers, and also for roses except about twice a year, when a deep forking is desirable. After a hard rain soil packs and must be loosened. One of the reasons a light soil, more sand than clay, is preferable in gardens to a heavy soil is that it can be cultivated much sooner after a rain. On the other hand, a clay subsoil overlaid with sandy loam is ideal for retention of moisture.

The dust blanket resulting from light stirring of top soil is one form of mulch—a mulch that must be reprovided after each watering. Other mulches take the place of frequent cultivation. On walking through a woods, we observe that the ground is always moist except during a prolonged drouth. Nature's way of conserving moisture for trees and herbs is to cover the soil with fallen leaves. The leaves prevent rapid evaporation and in time become humus, the best of reservoirs. David Churchill, a frequent contributor to magazines on garden topics, after discussing mulches of various kinds, concludes: "For a dry garden of flowers we do like leaves, half decayed or even fresh fallen. Indeed, for the yard containing trees, fallen leaves provide the most convenient, the most economical, and the most satisfactory of mulches for both shrubs and small flowers. The gardener who burns his leaves in fall knows not what he does. Nature, whom, we follow, is no tidy housekeeper. In the fall leaves used as summer mulch should be incorporated with the soil. Grass clippings are used to some extent; when fresh clippings are put on, the old should be taken off, as if partly decomposed they gum into a close, sticky mass. Cottonseed hulls may be used as a light mulch and later turned under to increase fertility of the soil; a heavy mulch of cottonseed hulls is heating. Straw, being cool, makes a desirable mulch for perennials except that is is unsightly.

Peat Moss As Mulch

Of recent years peat moss has been widely used. Since it is very acid, it is the best mulch for acid-loving plants, and a light mulch of peat moss serves well to neutralize our strongly alkaline soil. If it is used around plants that require a lime soil, lime should be added.

The same caution applies with lessened force to the use of leaves. An extremely interesting experiment on the use of peat moss as a mulch is reported in the "American Rose Annual for 1931. A gentleman living in Newark, N. Y., mulched one rose bed with buckwheat hulls and another with peat moss; a third he left unmulched as a check. He made temperature records of the three beds. There was little difference between the temperature of the unmulched bed and the bed mulched with buckwheat hulls, but the temperature of the peat moss bed averaged about 10 degrees lower at midday. If further experiment confirms these findings, then peat moss is the right mulch for Texas.

The strong argument in favor of organic mulches is that they reduce the labor of cultivation. The arguments against them are that they heat with decomposition, so that most of them require discretion in use, and that they afford harborage for our arch enemies, pill bugs and snails. However, a little snarol does for these. Some plants want no mulch. Among these are German iris and cacti.

All these mulches are a dead cover keeping in moisture. However, there are more ways than one to circumvent dry weather. One is close planting, so that the foliage shades the ground from moisture-withdrawing sun. This is one basis for the close planting of roses now recommended by many growers. If roses are planted 12 inches apart one way and 16 the other, the foliage completely shades the ground. Such plants as verbena and petunia should be set just closely enough that they will cover the ground by the time really hot weather comes. The extremely close setting of zinnia plants practised by many people is not good. It prevents the growth of lateral branches, so that the plants flower for only a brief time. Eighteen inches is not too far apart to set zinnias.

A useful means of conserving both moisture and plant food on sloping ground is to make a succession of terraces three or four inches high. If the ground is mounded up when it is wet and firmly pressed together, it will remain in position through many rains.

LA FOLLETTE FEARS WINTER

Progressive Asks Vast Building Program

WASHINGTON, May 21. (AP)—A vastly expanded public works program made possible by an immediate special session of congress was seen today by Senator LaFollette as the sole hope of avoiding "the dire consequences of a third winter of unemployment for many millions of our citizens."

Speaking as chairman of the unemployment and industrial stabilization committee selected at the recent progressive conference, the Wisconsin Republican based his conclusions on a preliminary report by Dr. Isador Lubin, chairman of the conference sub-committee on unemployment.

"The federal government alone can meet the widespread distress which the report reveals," LaFollette said. "At the present rate of industrial revival the number of unemployed to be provided for during the coming winter bids fair to remain close to the 6,000,000 found by the census bureau in its enumeration of last January."

The senator said the report showed little or no evidence that the rest of 1931 would bring sufficient improvement.

"Unless the federal government spends now, the cost of healing those injuries which are likely to occur during the coming 12 months will be many times more than what may be saved by our present policy of federal economy," he asserted.

"A special session of congress should be called immediately to relieve distress among the unemployed. Unless an extra session is called there will be a delay of months before any action can be taken to expand our public works program."

Riley's Name In Jury List Drawn For Own Trial

If Barney Riley is strongly given to superstition, a potent omen of good or ill has already been cast in advance of his trial, set for next Monday, for the alleged murder of Tom Hardin last fall.

The peculiar quirk of chance in which a superstitious person would find definite portent was revealed by Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, Thursday. The defendant was among 100 jurymen summoned to provide the jury for his own trial. Not only that, the name of J. H. Anglin, the prosecutor's brother, appeared on the special venire.

Charges of murder against Riley were filed several weeks after the skeleton of Hardin, a world war veteran, was found on the banks of Red river in Cotton county, Oklahoma. Hardin had disappeared in Burkburnett about Oct. 1. A bullet, apparently from a .38 caliber pistol, had passed through the skull from temple to temple, it was reported.

MAJESTIC: "Honor Among Lovers" with Fredric March, Claudette Colbert, Monroe Owsley, Charlie Ruggles and Ginger Rogers. Kentucky Jubilee singers, Slim Summerville comedy, U. S. Navy novelty and sound news.

GEM: Jack Perrin and Starlight in "Phantom of the Desert." Chapter No. 4 of "King of the Wild." Talkartoon comedy.

"Honor Among Lovers" is only a few minutes longer than one hour, but it certainly packs more in the way of entertainment within that hour than many a two-hour feature I've seen. Maybe the complete naturalness of every character is what makes it so enjoyable.

Fredric March never did anything any better—not even in his John Barrymore take-off—than when he half-reluctantly proposes to his secretary.

The short subjects furnish at least two good spots that would be enough to eclipse the usual long feature—once in the newsreel and then in the Kentucky singers concert.

The capture of Crowley and his sweetheart, both in their teens, and the sight of that swarming, sensation-seeking crowd brings home a truth about the American people as could no Hollywood picture. When one realizes that those are actual news photographs and that those people are fighting each other to see the gangster and his moll, it suddenly dawns on him that such things happen.

As for the Kentucky singers—well, if I were rich, I'd buy those films after they've been circulated around, get me a talkie machine and give myself a 10-minute concert every night just after dinner. If there's any music that sends ecstatic shivers up and down my body and makes me want to cry, it's natural harmony from a typical black chorus.

ROTARY HEARS PRIZE ORATION

Witherspoon Gives 'My Home Town' Address

Members of the Rotary club Thursday noon heard Joe P. Witherspoon Jr. deliver the address on "My Home Town" with which last week before the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in Lubbock he won for the second time the loving cup offered for first place in the oratorical contest sponsored annually by that organization.

Young Witherspoon has one more year in which he may compete in the contest, becoming a high school senior next fall, and a third victory will make him permanent owner of the cup. He is 14 years of age.

Two vocal numbers by Mrs. Otto Lazenby, soprano, with Mrs. R. E. Shepherd playing the accompaniments, were included in the program. She sang Victor Herbert's "Gypsy Love Song" and Nevin's "Rosary."

Activities of various Rotarians at the Lubbock convention of the W. T. C. C. were reported briefly by Joe Parabee. In the absence of Linton H. Estes, president, who is ill at his home, George Gutzler, first vice president, was in charge of the meeting.

BACTERIOLOGISTS FIND QUICK WAY TO DESTROY "ATHLETE'S FOOT" GERM

Look between your toes. Is the skin thick and white and unpleasantly moist? Is it cracked? Red? Dry and scaly? Or covered with tiny blisters—a general itching condition?

Then it is high time to do something about it, for every one of these symptoms is an indication of the widespread infection called "Athlete's Foot." A form of ringworm, it has already attacked more than ten million people in America.

Apply ABSORBINE JR. to your feet twice daily, as recommended by specialists. It not only safeguards against infection, but actually kills the germs wherever it penetrates.

For after thorough tests, bacteriologists of a famous New York laboratory found that this mild, soothing, yet powerful, antiseptic is especially deadly to the tinea trichophyton germs which cause "Athlete's Foot."

It is wise to use ABSORBINE JR. after every exposure to wet surfaces—in public places—even in your own bathroom. For the tinea trichophyton parasites breed and lurk simply everywhere, and are always ready to attack. At all drug stores, $1.25. W. F. Young Inc., Springfield, Mass.

C-C Committees to Launch Drives To Increase Baseball Attendance

Efforts to revive Wichita Falls' failing interest in its baseball club, the Spudders, was commenced here Thursday, when the sports and recreations committee of the chamber of commerce agreed to launch a drive to sell tickets for games here.

A definite campaign will be started following a meeting Friday morning of two subcommittees named Thursday by Chairman Carter McGregor. Members of the committee will meet with Spudder officials to map an offensive to sell quantities of season box tickets and general admission tickets.

William E. Huff, president of the Spudders, presented figures to the sports committee, showing that attendance at games here had sharply decreased, and that similar periods in past seasons had shown far greater attendance than at present.

In addition to conducting a drive for ticket sales, the sports and recreations committee pledged its efforts to stimulate interest in the baseball club in other forms, including a speaking campaign at luncheon club meetings.

Committees named to conduct the ticket drive are composed of the following: season boxes, Lamar Fain, chairman, and Lloyd Weaver and C. H. Featherston; group sales, Dr. Everett Jones, chairman, and J. C. Barnard and Horrace Robbins. Other names will be added to the committees following the meeting of the groups Friday.

FALL RENEWS APPEAL FIGHT

Supreme Court to Act On Bribery Sentence

WASHINGTON, May 21. (AP)—With revived hope, Alebtr B. Fall has decided to renew his long contest against his conviction of accepting a bribe while secretary of the interior in the Harding cabinet.

From his home at Three Rovers, New Mexico, Fall has instructed his attorneys here to apply to the supreme court for a review of the District of Columbia court of appeals decision affirming his bribery conviction and upholding a sentence of a year's imprisonment and a $100,000 fine.

Changes Mind

Fall recently announced because of illness and advanced age he would abandon his contest against conviction of receiving a $100,000 bribe from Edward L. Doheny, wealthy oil man. Doheny was acquitted of giving the money.

Frank J. Hogan, one of Fall's counsel, in a formal statement, made known his client's reconsideration.

"Mr. Fall's attorneys strongly advised him to authorize them to seek a review by the supreme court of the judgment against him," Hogan said. "Apparently temporarily weary of his long fight, and because of the hopelessly bad state of his health, Mr. Fall first determined not to follow the advice of counsel and early this month instructed them not to ask the supreme court to review the judgment against him.

Prepare Plea

"Upon further consideration, Mr. Fall has now decided to yield to the advice of his attorneys and to the importunities of his family and friends. The latter felt that the case should not stop short of the supreme court.

"Acting upon definite instructions just received from Mr. Fall, counsel are engaged in preparing a petition to be filed with the supreme court next week. The time allowed by an order of the district court of appeals for Fall's attorneys to file petition for review expires on March 28. Mr. Falls' petition will be filed before that date."

The wife and the negro being held, said to be her step-brother, told conflicting stories of the death, it was said. Circumstances of the case will be placed before a justice of the peace Friday morning, Mr. Allen said, and an autopsy will be performed if further investigation of the negro's death warrants.

Girls Sweep List of Scholastic Honors for College Graduates

For the first time in the history of the local Junior college scholastic honors for the graduates were won by girls. Reba Jo Curd placed first as valedictorian, and Marion Proctor was awarded salutory honors. Annie Wright and Alline Mueller placed third and fourth respectively. Norman Tittle showed the highest standing among the boys. These were selected from a group of nine graduates who had made an A average during the senior year or an average of B for the two years' work.

The honors were made at the annual senior class night program at the Junior college Thursday night.

Another interesting feature of the program was the passing of the traditional golden-bladed spade which turned the first earth for the erection of the Junior college from the 1931 graduating class to the 1932 class. Randle Hanks, president of the graduating class, made the presentation; and Bill Hord, freshman president, gave the response.

The class history was read by Bob Trevathan and Ruth Bruce gave the prophecy for the class. Marion Proctor read the will.

President Hanks welcomed the group and a brief talk was made by R. O. Jonas, faculty sponsor.

Musical selections on the program included a piano solo by Ermalea Graham and a violin solo by Mathilde Donnell, with Dorothy Bennett at the piano.

The semi-annual banquet and dance of the Wichita Falls Retail Credit Grantors and the Retail Merchants associations, was held at the Wichita Falls Country club Thursday night. The affair started at 7:30 and continued until the wee small hours, with the approximately 200 guests making it a gala event.

A splendid dinner was served while Jess Smith's orchestra played several popular numbers. Following the dinner Dolores Myler, guitarist and soloist, staff artist of radio station KGKO, delighted the crowd with two numbers; Catherine Sue Ralston, blues singer, accompanied at the piano by Jewell Thompson, entertained with popular songs. Joe P. Witherspoon Jr., read the "My Home Town" essay that won him first prize at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention held recently at Lubbock. Virginia Carpenter, juvenile toe and acrobatic dancer, gave an excellent performance.

Following the artists music for dancing was played by Jess Smith's orchestra.

Several members of the Wichita Falls Retail Grantors association have made reservations at Lubbock for the Texas Retail Grantors; Texas Credit Men's; and the Retail Credit Bureaus of Texas associations, which will be held at the South Plains city, May 25, 26 and 27.

Floyd Randel, president of the Retail Grantors association, after making a short talk turned over the affairs of office to Alvah Conner, who kept the program moving with promptness and precision during the evening.

Union Revival Service To Open in Iowa Park

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, May 21.—ficials of the First Methodist and First Baptist churches of Iowa Park announce a union open air meeting which will begin Sunday June 7.

Rev. Clark H. Russell, pastor of the Methodist church, will be assisted by Rev. Marshall Masters of Honey Grove. E. L. Shackelford, student at S. M. U., will direct the singing and young people's meetings.

Rev. Mr. Russell and Rev. Mr. Masters, who were co-pastors at Honey Grove for the past two years, conducted a very successful union meeting at Honey Grove last year, and this meeting is being looked forward to with interest.

Hennessey Appointed Katy Traffic Manager

ST. LOUIS, May 21. (AP)—Promotion of Jack Hennessey Jr., executive general agent of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas lines at Houston, to passenger traffic manager, with headquarters at Dallas and St. Louis, was announced today by President W. H. Cahill.

Hennessey succeeds J. W. White, who has been named assistant to the executive vice president of the Katy lines. White's headquarters will remain in Dallas.

Barton Called Victim Of Superiority Complex

NEW YORK, May 21. (US)—Ralph Barton, the artist who ended his life Tuesday, was suffering from a superiority complex which grew so great that it held him completely under its sway and finally developed him into a semi-maniac suffering from acute depression.

This analysis was given today by Dr. Richard Horace Hoffman, the noted psychiatrist after he had studied Barton's remarkable death letter, which the artist had labeled "obit."

bushels, and the average price at from 30 to 40 cents. The yield, they said, will range from 12 to 20 bushels an acre, but the acreage has been increased considerably in many sections.

Walter Barlow, Amarillo grain man, said the new crop had been produced at a minimum cost due to the fact that the growers have bought little new machinery and have operated on a close basis. He said little farm storage was available, and that much of the crop would be marketed direct from the combine.

Truck Control Sought

The committee on motor transportation recommended that rail carriers continue to have the privilege of purchasing lines now in existence or securing permits for new ones.

They also favored legislation designating all motor vehicles operating over the highways for hire common carriers, and the placing of them under the jurisdiction of proper regulatory bodies "as to rates, rules and regulations."

Wichita Falls was a successful bidder for the September meeting, defeating Little Rock, Ark., for the honor. Beaumont placed its bid for the next spring session.

Cecil E. Munn of Enid, Okla., was elected general chairman, and Carl Giessow of New Orleans, alternate general chairman. John W. Daniel of Houston, general secretary, and Charles P. Wasson of Dallas, secretary, both were re-elected.

Committee Named

Members elected to the executive committee were Frank A. Leffingwell, Dallas, retiring general chairman; J. H. Johnston, Oklahoma City; Hugh Williams, Santa Fe, N. M.; Ed Harper, Little Rock; C. V. Terrell, chairman of the Texas Railway commission, Austin, and Francis Williams, New Orleans.

Delegates from five states attended the meeting.

The Southwestern Industrial Traffic league met this afternoon and heard committee reports. Mr. Giesson, president, was in charge of the called meeting.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pityriasis Rosea

Question—B. W. D. asks: "Will you please give me some information on pityriasis rosea, stating its causes, symptoms and duration?"

Answer—This is a diseases of the skin, caused by an inflammation which produces rose-colored and ring-shaped patches, which seem to be caused by a toxic substance irritating the nerve endings under the skin and the region affected. There is no definite period of duration, and it may continue until the cause has been overcome. I would suggest a fasting and dieting regimen, as outlined in my cleansing diet course, repeating the fast at intervals of a month until the condition has cleared up. Also use hot and cold showers to the skin and try to obtain some sunbaths directly over the parts affected, using the sunbath two or three times per week.

Cornbread

Question—J. B. asks: "Do you recommend cornbread? If so, with what other foods should it be used?"

Answer—Unrefined cornmeal is a healthful food and is placed in the starch class the same as all grain foods. When this bread is used it should be taken in combination with the non-starchy vegetables and not with meat, fish or fowl.

Trembling in Leg

Question—Mrs. Mary D. writes: "I wish you would tell me what causes my leg to shake and tremble so, from my ankle up through the leg, into my spine. When I walk around just to do a little housework, it makes me tremble all over."

Answer — Have an examination made of your lower spine to see whether or not you have a faulty position of the vertebrae. Any osteopath or chiropractor would be qualified by his training, to make such an examination and give you his opinion.

Kansas Governor Sees Great Crisis

TOPEKA, Kan., May 21. (INS)—An "unnerving crisis" caused by corruption in high places and the concentration of all wealth into a few hands was predicted by Gov. Harry Woodring of Kansas in an address before the Kansas Bankers association in convention here today.

"I tremble for the safety of my country," Governor Woodring informed the convention delegates in urging them to give all possible aid to agriculture so that the "crisis" may be stemmed.

"Every section in industry must join hands to see that the Middlewest gets a fair deal from the federal government and all industries must face conditions courageously and without foolish optimism," he said.

SPUDDERS WIN IN 10TH, 6-5, AFTER EXPORTERS TIE IN 9TH

HERB BRYANT'S RAP ENDS TILT

Lester White Goes Well Until Letdown in Ninth

By AL PARKER

Beaumont's Exporters stole the Spudders' stuff when they scored three times in the ninth inning yesterday at Athletic park, but they failed to take advantage of the tying rally and bowed to the Williams' colts, 6 to 5, when Herb Bryant smacked a long double to center field, scoring Art Scharein from first with the winning run of a game the home team commanded in all but that ninth inning.

Les White rocked along through eight nice enough innings, but weakened at the same time his support cracked in the last round and allowed the Beaumonters to tie up the old ball game. The Spudders then for the second time in three days failed to score one run needed to win after filling the bases with none out in the last half of the inning. It remained for Bryant to save the day with his crash to deep left center after Scharein had pulled a walk out of Haskell Billings, the last of three pitchers used by the foe.

The victory gave the Spudders three wins in their last four games against second and third place opposition and added further to the prestige they are storing up of late.

Hopefuls Score Early

The hopefuls lost no time in getting to Luke Hamlin, rookie speedball specialist who was hit hard and often, despite the advantage the dark and dreary day gave his smoke ball, and when the first inning was finished the home cause was riding behind a 3 to 0 lead. Garms started with a walk and Allday, who turned in a great day at bat and afield, shot the first of his four singles into right, sending Garms to third. Stanton singled to left, scoring Garms and sending Allday to second. Gullic and Badgro were retired, the latter on a stiff liner to Easterling, but the reliable Fuss kept it going with a single that netted two runs after two Exporters had juggled the ball. Easterling fumbled first to give Fuss an extra base and Stanton scored, along with Allday, when Holley failed to handle the throw in cleanly.

The three-run advantage loomed large through the first five innings as White pitched scoreless ball. The first sign of lanky Lester's wavering came when Easterling rode one over the right field fence with the bases empty in the sixth. He pitched his way out in the seventh after a single and two walks had loaded the bases with one out. He did it the hard way—by fanning Pinch Hitter Mallett and Schuble.

Bag Two More

In the meantime the Spudders had scored once in the sixth on Scharein's infield hit, Bryant's sacrifice and Garms' rap through the box, and again in the sixth on Taylor's error on Scharein, Bryant's second sacrifice, a pass to Garms and Allday's third hit of the day.

J. White doubled down the first base line to start a Beaumont run in the eighth. He advanced on Fritz' out and scored on Boroja's long fly to Fuss. Even that run appeared absolutely harmless, for White held a three-run lead as the ninth opened, and it seemed certain that rain would end festivities before the inning could be finished. But instead, it was only a rain of Beaumont hits, the first a fluke that went to Taylor when Garms fell after fielding his roller. Wise drew a walk and Goldstein, hitting for Marrow, who had stopped Wichita Falls' scoring in the seventh and eighth, popped to Scharein. Schuble socked a real double into left for one run and the two tying tallies came across when Gullic misjudged J. White's line drive in the wind and it fell safely for two bases. Florrid came on the scene at this stage and his first act was the important item of catching J. White off second with a toss to Allday. Wee Richard retired Easterling and the next three Exporters in the 10th to receive credit for his first victory of the season.

Rain Never Arrives

Both kinds of luck visited the hopefuls in the last of the ninth. A sweet break in the way of a grounder from Garms' bat that bounded into Second Baseman Holley's chin landed the first Spudder on base. Allday made his sacrificial effort so good that he beat it out, and the bases were crammed to full capacity when Stanton walked. Billings, who went to the hill when Marrow departed for a pinch hitter, took a hitch in his belt, threw a third strike past Gullic and forced Badgro into a double play, pitcher to catcher to first.

The rain that threatened from the start to the finish of the game never arrived and therein both teams might be considered fortunate, for it might have been embarrassing to either at one time or another.

ELECTRICS BOW TO BEAUTIFIERS

Malone's Pulls Leaders To Tie for Top

Harry Geyer, Malones Beauty shop mound ace, held the hard hitting Texas Electric Service company Frigidaires to four widely scattered bingles Thursday afternoon on Debus field while his mates were hammering Earl Keith from the mound in the first inning and having one big inning off Big Everett Blue to score a 4 to 1 victory.

Highfill, Gordon, Ralph Walker and Nickelson led the attack with two hits each. Shepherd collected half of the Frigidaire hits to lead the losers at the bat.

Rabbit Gordon made the greatest play of the day, and one of the greatest plays of the season, in the fifth inning by pulling a sensational shoe-string catch after a long run, rolling over three or four times and coming up with the ball. The catch was made on a line drive from Glenn Coolidge's bat, robbing the Kilowatt Terror of a sure double.

Geyer whiffed 10 of the Frigidaire batters and never issued a single free pass to first base. This game threw the Commercial league standing into a jumble with Texas Electric Service company and the Bankers tied for the top rung of the ladder and Malones Beauty shop is just a half game behind the two leaders, with only two more weeks of the first half to be played. A's Make Clean Sweep Of Detroit Series

DETROIT, May 21. (AP)—The Athletics knocked them all over the field today to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 12 to 5, and make a clean sweep of a three-game series.

The heavy hitting game, in which there were 32 safe hits for 46 bases, contrasted sharply with the pitching exhibitions by which the champions won the first two encounters. Score:

YANKS NOSE OUT INDIANS

CLEVELAND, May 21. (AP)—The Indians put up another close scrap today but again failed to scrape out a victory. They lost their 12th straight game by a 7 to 6 count to the New York Yankees, failing to win a single game of their home stand against the eastern clubs.

Babe Ruth led the Yankees to victory by hitting his fifth home run of the season, a triple and a double.

TWO BRITONS JOUST TODAY

De Forest and Eric Smith Reach Finals

WESTWARD HO, DEVON, Eng., May 21. (AP)—Two tall, lean Englishmen, John de Forest, 25, and the 22-year-old Cambridge undergraduate, Eric Smith, tomorrow will play a 36-hole match for the British amateur golf championship.

One will wear the crown Bobby Jones took to the United States last year. Both are the survivors of a tournament which saw George Voigt, the chief American hope, and the British favorites eliminated early. None reached the quarter finals.

De Forest, who polished his game in the United States last winter, taking lessons from Horton Smith and other American professionals, won two hard fought matches today. He first defeated Syd Roper, the former coal miner and Voigt's conqueror, two and one and then scored a one-hole victory over the Scotsman, William Tulloch, despite the latter's reputation as the "dour giant killer of Cathkin braes."

Smith, the young cantab, became a finalist by defeating Peter Miller, the London amateur, two and one and then eliminating the hope of Ireland, Dr. John MacCormack, by one hole.

In the Anglo-Scottish semifinal between Tulloch and De Forest the latter took a lead at the fifth and was never behind again.

The lead changed hands frequently in the Smith-MacCormack match with the young Cambridge player outsteadying his older, war torn rival to take the decision.

MANERO STAYS IN PRO TOURNAMENT

LEEDS, Eng., May 21. (AP)—Tony Manero of Elmsford, N. Y., today remained the sole survivor of a transatlantic delegation of nine which set out Tuesday in the $5,000 Leeds professional golf tournament.

Four of the American phalanx—Horton Smith and Willie Hunter of the United States, and Hector Freccebro and Tomaso Genta of the Argentine—fell in the qualifying rounds and all except Manero went out in the first and second round today. Among them was Joe Turnesa, the medalist, who was put out in the second round this afternoon by Percy Allis, the British bred Berlin professional.

Night Baseball Inspires Player, Veteran Mike Sexton Decides

CHICAGO, May 21. (AP)—Night baseball puts the player "on the stage" and inspires him to perform with more professional pride, says M. H. "Mike" Sexton, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Sexton, whose organization embraces all of "organized baseball," says that more than half of the clubs within its sphere have been equipped for night play this season, and that many of the minor circuits will be 100 per cent nocturnal as soon as summer weather sets in.

The national association is in almost entire sympathy with the movement for night baseball. As a matter of convenience, comfort and satisfaction to the patrons, Sexton says, it has proved in many places better than the daylight game.

The audiences at night include more family groups, and evening games also prove attractive to groups of fans driving into the cities from outlying towns and villages.

Regarding the belief of many that major league clubs owning minors have prohibited the latter from playing at night because it might hinder the development of recruits the majors would wish to use later in daylight, Sexton says he knows of no case where this has been done.

Every city where night baseball was played by league teams last summer reported decided increases in attendance, Sexton says, and players generally seem to be satisfied with playing conditions.

Georgia Golfers Battle On Unbroken Par Course

SEA ISLAND BEACH, Ga., May 21. (AP)—The Georgia state golf championship will be held this year on a course where par has never been broken.

It is the course of the Sea Island club here, where such eminent linksmen as Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen have tried unsuccessfully to score less than its par 72.

More than 100 sharpshooters will enter the tournament late in June and follow the fairways through forests of liveoak, over rolling dunes and across marshes and various natural hazards.

Veach Still Clouts 'Em Playing With Semi-Pros

DETROIT, May 21. (AP)—Bobby Veach, one of Detroit's baseball immortals, is still playing the game.

Veach left the Tigers and the majors several years ago and stayed out of the game for some time. Recently, however, the lure caught up with him again and he joined a Detroit semi-pro team, the Regals. In his first game with the Regals he slammed a two-base hit and followed through with a single.

Although slowed up because of his advanced age, he still uses the same free and easy swing and knocks 'em a mile.

WEIGHT AS A MEASURE OF TIRE QUALITY IS NOT INCLUDED IN TABLE FOR TWO REASONS:

1st, Because no two tires of the same brand and size weight exactly alike, and

2nd, Because quality of rubber and cotton fabric used, rather than the compounded weight after being mixed with other ingredients is the determining factor. Reclaimed or second hand rubber weighs more than new rubber. Tires containing a large percentage of second hand rubber, therefore, weigh more than those made entirely of new rubber—even though the tires are exactly alike in size—so "Weight as a standard by which to measure tire quality MEANS NOTHING."

The TRAIL BLAZER is Ward's second quality tire. We frankly admit it. But—certain manufacturers and dealers, jealous of Ward's deserved preeminence in the tire industry, are making and publishing misleading statements about Ward's tires. They give specifications which are NOT those of Ward's tires; and they then compare the prices of their second quality tires with those of our first quality tires—the famous Riversides. The table above shows accurately the manner in which TRAIL BLAZERS compare in quality and in price with other well known makes.

These other misleading advertisements (and if they are not intended to deliberately fool tire consumers, what IS their purpose?) also say that "Mail Order tires are made by some unknown manufacturer . . ." Well, Ward's tires are made by one of the largest tire companies in the world; a company that has always been famous for the fine quality of its products!

Here, therefore, is the correct story about Ward's TRAIL BLAZERS: They are every bit as good as other second quality tires (better than most, as the chart above will indicate), but they sell for less. Like all of Ward's tires, TRAIL BLAZERS are sold with an absolute guarantee of satisfactory service without limit as to time or mileage. If you do not need Riverside quality, buy Trail Blazers—and save more money!

No Montgomery Ward tire advertisement is complete without mentioning Ward's famous first quality Riversides. Riverside tires are one of the best known brands in America. They have been sold for 19 years. They, too, are made by the same large tire manufacturer mentioned above. They are the finest quality it is possible to produce. They are backed by the most liberal tire guarantee ever written. And they sell for less than any first quality nationally advertised tire on the market! These sound like sensational claims. But Montgomery Ward & Co.—one of the largest and oldest merchandising institutions in the world—now in its 60th year in business—the originators of the "Satisfaction Guaranteed or your Money Back" guarantee—stands back of every claim made in this advertisement.

PAR-SMASHING GOLF CLIMAXES SIXTH GREENBELT TOURNEY

GALLERY SEES JAM-UP MATCH

36th Hole Fluke Decides Thrilling Battle

final match with Jack Parr of Electra, the same argument came up. On the sixth hole of the back nine, according to details that became known today, Merchant landed behind a bench, one of those "removable impediments." R. S. Greene, president of the Green Belt, and P. B. Gentry, president of the local country club, who were following the match, removed the bench from Merchant's path, in violation of the rule. At the end of the match, Parr entered a protest, but there is another rule in the golf books that says a protest of that nature must be made before either golfer shoots because Parr waited until the end of the match, the protest was ruled out.

This incident did not become generally known until the second and more serious "removal impediment" protest was filed by Walker today. President Greene and President Gentry spoke of it as a "regretable incident."

Weather Unfavorable

The chief struggle was played in the usual bad weather. The morning round was played under a murky sky and the greens were soggy from rains the night before and in the afternoon a gale swept across the difficult Hillcroft golf course.

Walker's play today gave him his third Green Belt title, and brought to him a special trophy, a loving cup, that the association awards to three time champions.

All cups and trophies to winners of the various flights were awarded tonight with appropriate ceremonies.

Tourney's First Tie

The championship fight of Walker and Merchant marked the first time in the history of Green Belt that a title contest has gone as much as 36 holes. Last year in the tournament at Quanah, Frank Foxhall defeated Walker, 4 and 3, in 33 holes.

Walkes' Driving Tells

Walker was one up on Merchant at the end of the first nine in the morning round, the Quanah star's steady driving marking the margin of difference between the two. Both shot excellent golf, Walker finishing the nine with a par 38, while Merchant was one over par with a 37.

On all but two holes, Walker's great drives, averaging 225-yards each, sailed square down the middle of the fairway, while Merchant's drives were mainly in the rough. Walker started off strong, winning the first hole with a par four to Merchant's five.

The next two they both parred to halve, but Merchant squared the count on the fourth with a birdie two to Walker's par three. The next two they halved. Walker shot Birdie threes on the seventh and eighth to go two-up, but Merchant staged a rally on the ninth, making an excellent pitch to land on the green in three and sinking a four-foot putt to par the hole with a four and reduced Walker's lead to one up.

Sensational Putting

Walker played a sensational putting game on the back nine of the morning round, and at the end of the 18 holes, he was three up on Merchant. The back nine was featured by par-smashing golf. Walker didn't increase his one-up lead, until they had reached the sixth hole on the back nine.

The first hole, both shot birdie threes. Then both proceeded to par the next four. On the sixth Walker registered a par-three to Merchant's four, to go two-up, but Merchant rallied, and shot a birdie three to Walker's four on the seventh, bringing Walker's lead back to one-up.

On the eighth green, Walker's putter started functioning splendidly, and after Merchant's nine-foot putt had fallen a little short, Walker sunk a six-foot putt to win the hole, and go two up.

Walker made a 245-yard drive down the middle of the fairway from the ninth hole tee, and Merchant's drive was only a little short of Walker's. Merchant hooked to the left to about five feet from the greens, but Walker used an iron, and cleared the bunkers, laying within about 20 yards of the green. Merchant's next shot sent him into a sand trap to the right, while Walker used a niblick to pitch within 10 feet of the cup. Merchant made a splendid niblick shot out of the trap to land within two feet of the cup, and the gallery applauded roundly, but Walker proceeded to sink his 10-foot putt to par the hole and go three up on the Clarendon star.

Walker's 36-35—71 on the first 18 holes was one under par, while Merchant's 37-37—74 was two over the par figures.

Merchant Rallies

Merchant came back to the struggle in the afternoon and shot par golf on every hole going out on the first nine, to reduce Walker's lead at the end of the 27th hole to two-up. It was a most surprising recovery, and was accomplished in the face of a bitter cold gale which blew in from the north while the first nine was being played.

Entering the first afternoon nine with Walker three up, they parred the first hole, with fours, but Walker took a par four on the second to go four-up. Walker's par-four on the third, however, won the hole and Walker's lead seesawed back to three-up.

Merchant cut it to two-up, when he won the treacherous fourth hole, a deep, canyon-like affair, when he sank a six-foot putt for par three. On the fifth hole, a 470-yard pain to lesser golfers, Walker took a birdie four to go three-up. Both were on the green in three, but Merchant's putt from nine feet out fell about a foot short.

The next three holes, they halved, shooting par golf and using uncanny judgment to baffle the wind, which was getting stronger and stronger.

Wind Bad Medicine

The wind faced the players on the ninth hole. It was so strong it nearly blew both off the tee. Neither was able to drive more than about 150 yards and Walker's went into the rough to the right, to spoil his chances of winning the hole. Merchant's second shot was good for 140 yards straight down the middle. When Walker attempted to get out of the rough with an iron, he ploughed up the sand, the ball rolling only about 35 feet. Merchant then grasped a brassie and sailed the ball right on the edge of the green on his third shot. Walker made a desperate and almost successful attempt to recover, using an iron to get within five feet of the green, but when he tried to hole out from that distance, and the ball stopped about an inch of the cup, he conceded to Merchant, and they started off on the final nine with the latter only two down.

Walker Outplayed

The fact that Walker won his protest can't obliterate the fact that Merchant outplayed Walker the last nine. Even including the scores on the 10th hole, Merchant had Walker bested with a card of 43 to Walker's 44, not including the extra hole, Merchant had a 37, one over par, to Walker's 40, four over par.

Entering the last nine with Walker two up, they halved the first hole with par fours. Merchant sank his 30-yard putt on the second hole for a birdie four to reduce Walkers lead to one up and then shot a birdie three on the third to square the match at the 30th hole.

They halved the next four holes, each shooting par all the way. But Merchant won the eighth to go one up, the first time during the championship match that he assumed the lead. Coming into the blustery final hole, they haived, and the match was believed over, but Walker's protest was sustained, and the 36th hole was awarded him. When he shot a four to Merchant's six on the extra 37th, the tournament was over.

Though the championship division was the highlight of the tournament, no small interest was shown in the other divisions during the four-day meet. The finals in some of the divisions were completed Wednesday, and the remaining finalists came in this afternoon on the heels of the Walker-Merchant match.

Old Men Perform

Some of the most interesting golf in the tournament was played in the senior division, made up of golfers of 50 years of age or over. The "old men," as the fun-poking gallery called them, played good games in the first flight of the senior division Wednesday A. N. Wood of Clarendon won the championship, defeating J. T. Patman, of Clarendon by the close score of 2 and 1. Today, however, an even tighter match was played in the second division, O. T. Nicholson, of Shamrock, vice president of the Greenbelt, winning from R. C. Weatherly, veteran Clarendon golfer, 1 up, after the battle had raged merrily for 20 holes.

In the second flight, W. R. Harper, of Frederick, Okla., won the crown, defeating G. L. Boykin, Clarendon newspaper man, in the 18-hole finals early Thursday afternoon, 6 and 4. Fred Landers, another newspaper man, editor of the Estelline News, staged one upset victory after another to go into the semifinals of the third flight, and this afternoon defeated H. B. Kerbow, of Clarendon in the finals to win the championship. Landers had played very little golf since last fall and came to the Greenbelt sadly out of practice, but his patience and accuracy took him through. The second flight consolation race was also finished early. E. Zumwalt, of Frederick, Okla., won over A. Kemple, of Electra in the semifinals by default and T. A. Powers of Estelline won by the same route over T. S. Haney. Crowell, in the lower bracket of the semifinals. When Zumwalt and Powers came together in the finals Zumwalt won, 2 up. In the finals of the third flight consolation, C. Bryant, Electra defeated H. Clower, of Memphis, 1 up.

West Defeats Barkley

In the semifinals of the championship flight consolation, Thursday morning, R. V. West, of Memphis, Greenbelt champion in 1928, defeated J. D. Barkley, of Childress, 5 and 4; and Whitney Anderson of Vernon won over M. P. Gentry, of Clarendon, by default. When West, the veteran and 19-year-old Anderson, champion of the Vernon links came together in the finals, Anderson won, 1 up, after the battle had gone 19 holes. Another tribute to the brand of golf played in the lesser classifications came to light late today, when the final scores were in.

G. Crews, of Crowell, it was learned, shot the only eagle of the four-day tournament. It was in his second round match with R. S. Greene in the second flight, played last Tuesday. On the sixth hole of the back nine, Crews sunk a 13-yard mashie shot for an eagle three on the par five, 470 yard hole. Crews won the match 5 and 4.

GALE HARD ON LUBBOCK GOLF

S. J. Barnett Shoots Par For Medal Honors

LUBBOCK, Texas, May 21. (AP)—A withering, wilting wind and storm came out of the north today and spelled practical disaster to thirty-odd golfers who were at the time playing what might have been their qualifying round but before the storm S. J. Barnett of Eastland had fired a 72, perfect par, over the Lubbock County club course to take medalist honors in the seventh annual West Texas Golf association tournament.

Barnett, winner of Eastland's invitation tournament last year and runnerup in the Mineral Wells invitation tournament, a first class golfer, was one of a field of 140 golfers who played the 18-hole qualifying round today. He shot par on both nines, a 36 going out and 36 coming in, to lead a field in which a score of 82 was needed to qualify for the first flight. Since the number of 82 shooters would not fill out the full 32 players of the flight, several golfers drew for first flight honors.

J. K. Bradshaw, until recently a caddy at the Lubbock Country club, a 17-year-old student of Lubbock high school, was close upon Barnett's heels with a startling 73. Bradshaw shot a clean 35, one under par going out, and came in with a 37, one over par. His shooting was the talk of the field during the day's work and won him a place near the top in the first flight.

Barnett's card:

Out .....544 444 434—36
In .....345 444 444—36—72

While not mentioned as a pre-tournament favorite, Barnett's play classed him as among the cream of the lot and bade fair to see him through more than on preliminary match.

Other favorites who qualified today and their record are as follows: E. B. Johnson, Amarillo, 75; C. R. Pope, Abilene, 79; R. W. Quail, Post 77; Don Mitchell, Lubbock 78; Bob Peck, Wichita Falls, 77; John Pennel, Abilene, 78; Ellis Cowden, Midland, 79; V. O. Jennings, Lubbock, 81; Frank Kimbrough, Plainview, 77; Manse Merriman, Amarillo, 77; Billy Holmes, Lubbock, 76; Bob Scott, Colorado, 76, and Frank Rose of Lamesa, 79.

COLLEGE LOOP HAS BIG YEAR

Southwest Conference Ends Fine Period of Sport

FORT WORTH, May 21. (AP)—Finis has settled on one of the finest years of athletics the Southwest conference has ever seen.

The scholastic year 1930-31 has seen the championships of the various major sports well distributed with every Texas school, with the exception of Baylor and Arkansas, winning a championship, and the University of Texas being the only school to annex more than one title. It has seen the long reign of Billy Disch's Texas Longhorns in baseball and the elongated Giants from the Ozarks in basket ball halted by the Texas A. & M. Aggies and the sophmore quintet of Texas Christian.

The football season was one of the most hectic and dope-upsetting seasons ever witnessed. Although the champion T. C. U. Horned Frogs were picked to repeat, they fell before the Longhorns, who later won the title, and were trampled by the Baylor Bears.

In spite of the fury of the grid season, the most exciting race for a championship was in basket ball. From the outset it was a three-cornered battle between the Razorbacks, Horned Frogs and Mustangs. When the race narrowed down to T. C. U. and S. M. U. the Schmidtmen won the title.

Baseball suffered a slight setback as far as individual stars were concerned. From beginning the champion Longhorns, Texas Aggies, and Baylor fought for a title. With Baylor brushed out of the picture by the Longhorns and the count even, the Aggies nosed out the Dischmen in the final game of the season to annex their first conference title.

The conference track, held in the Horned Frogs' backyard, was also a sensational affair. Four records were broken and competition in all events was keen. Rice ran true to form and took first place, with A. & M. and Texas second and third.

Tennis was also sensational, but the Pennickmen, featuring Bruce Barnes, continued their reign in spite of a threat by McDiarmid of Texas Christian and Connelley of Rice.

Golf didn't create much attention, but O'Hara Watts gave S. M. U. a conference championship.

Aged Paris, Texas, Golfer Gives Tourney Two Big Upsets

DALLAS, May 21. (AP)—First and second round matches today in the first annual Lakewood Country club invitation golf tournament left one visiting golfer in the championship flight. He is J. E. Osborne, Paris, Texas, who gave the tournament a couple of big upsets today when he eliminated L. R. Robertson in the morning round 2 and 1, and then erased Gus Morland in the afternoon, 3 and 2.

Osborne's victory over Morland was the biggest tournament upset in Texas golfdom this season. The Paris golfer, who is 67 years old, played a fine game to eliminate Morland who was the outstanding tournament favorite.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, May 21. (AP)—Reactions from an opening advance in cotton today were followed by rallies and the general market closed steady, net 2 points lower to 2 points higher.

December closed at 9.83, with the general market showing rallies of about 6 to 9 points from the lowest.

Further rains were reported in the South with prospects for additional showers, and there was some bullish comment on the May weather, so far which, except for intervals of fair and warm conditions, has been considered rather too wet and cool for the crop.

These features may have brought in some buying during the early trading but they were not of sufficient importance to maintain the early advance in the face of the early declines in the stock market, and fluctuations during the middle of the day were irregular until prices rallied in the late trading.

Liverpool cables reported covering and continental buying in that market with a more cheerful tone in Manchester.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, May 21. (AP)—Cotton showed a quieter tone in today's trading here. The close was steady, the general market showing net unchanged to 2 points net down for the day.

Liverpool cables came in 1 to 3 penny points better than due and private cables stated that shorts covered and the continent bought on rains in the southern cotton belt. Manchester cabled that the cloth market was more cheerful on expectation of the raising of the India boycott.

July closed at 9.28 or 2 points net lower for the day and October closed at 9.62 or net unchanged for the day.

Market Leaders Join Rails In Sharp Recovery After Slump

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, May 21. (US)—The stock market closed higher today but not until many stocks had reached new low price levels during the session.

Railroad shares, which for the two preceding days had evidenced greater firmness, enjoyed the most substantial rally and their three consecutive days of strength finally found reflection in the industrials and utilities, which groups joined in the improvement, measuring by the averages of leading issues.

The principal influence in the rally, which might have been attributed solely to the technical conditions existing within the market and created by the long decline in quotations, was a widespread report that the railroad systems of the country had finally determined upon a definite policy of requesting higher freight rates.

A vigorous recovery was scored in various rail shares on this story, although on more deliberate consideration, or perhaps because the rally was too rapid, the rails and then the rest of the market eased off from the best levels of the day. Sizeable net advances, however, were maintained to the close.

The market displayed a seeming desire to reach relative stabilization of prices, but the bear forces were persistent in switching from stock to stock, hammering them each by turn in their endeavor to prevent a broad recovery in the entire market.

Case Threshing was forced to a new low under this selling pressure, but the stock yielded only moderately and actually closed a fraction net higher for the day.

The bears were hoping that a reduction in the $6 dividend would be voted by the directors when they met after the close of the market, although they were hardly cheered by declaration of regular dividend by International Harvester. The bears swung into Allied Chemical and in this issue they were more successful, breaking it to a new low.

Allied, however, is very close to the original objective of the most powerful bears and while no one, under prevailing circumstances, is attempting to "pick bottom" for any stock, this issue is meeting outright investment buying for the bull from best-informed people.

The stock, at higher than current prices, was described by one of the most powerful financial institutions as "cheap."

Steel common joined with the rails in providing the necessary encouragement to timid bulls. The premier steel rallied above par and closed up more than a point. American Can, in which an intensive short account has been built up, recovered more vigorously, but American Telephone & Telegraph appeared to be in continued supply although it rallied with the other leading issues.

Fox Film furnished considerable cheer to the constructive forces by displaying the first vigorous resistance to selling in weeks. It rallied almost four points from the low of the day. Liquidation has been going on in this stock for months, a good deal of the selling, of course, being accomplished as a result of the Pynchon failure. Continued firmness in the stock will be accepted as marking completion of this distress liquidation.

Before the recovery set in, many prominent issues had reached new lows. General Electric was forced under 39 on dividend talk, although the company is entrenched with many millions of cash and government securities. It has been obvious for months that only short-covering and speculative buying has come into G. E. despite its continued decline.

Dividend news of the day was of usual nature, including cut in the Louisville & Nashville dividend from $7 to $5 annual basis; Atlantic Coast Line omitted its usual extra of $1.50; General Public service omitted its 3 per cent semi-annual stock dividend; Maine Central lowered its rate from $5 to $3.

A relatively sharp decline in one of hte most prominent utility stocks listed on the curb caused some selling of stock exchange utilities.

Absence of any untoward developments from the London settlement contributed to the somewhat more aggressive buying, but the prime factor in the rally was the railroad news.

The most significant development of the railroad presidents' conference, at which application for a rate increase was determined upon, was the remark attributed to the railway spokesman that "no promise was made by the railroads to President Hoover to maintain wage scales."

Whether an increase in rail rates at this time, with shippers already distressed by prevailing conditions, would prove bullish or bearish was a much mooted question, with the great uncertainty surrounding the status of the competitive motor trucks.

Unbiased observers were fully cognizant of the fact that some sort of rally, even of substantial proportions, has been warranted, but the disposition is to regard such price improvement merely as rallies.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 21. (AP)—Shattering the season's bottom-price record, corn today dropped below 48 cents a bushel the first time in 1931. Traders were confronted both by a let-up in corn shipping demand here and by cheap corn from Missouri river terminals. Stop-loss selling followed, with bears contending that corn still was high in relation to other grains and feed stuffs.

Corn closed nervous, ⅛@1⅝c down, wheat unchanged to 1⅜c off, oats at ¼@⅛c decline to a shade advance, and provisions unchanged to 10c up.

Breaks in the corn market came chiefly after word went around that No. 2 mixed corn was offered from Missouri river cities for transfer to Chicago at the equivalent of prices quoted on May delivery contracts here. Under such circumstances, many holders of all future deliveries sold. Frost predictions for corn belt states tonight were virtually ignored. It was in vain also that bulls showed corn primary receipts were much smaller than a year ago with stocks decreasing.

Wheat weakened with corn and in sympathy with unsettled of securities. Timely rainfalls over winter wheat districts, southwestern Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado in particular, were supplemented by some drouth relief in Canada and domestic spring wheat states. Russian wheat shipments for the were heavy, 1,416,000 bushels, and United States wheat primary arrivals were also on a large scale. Oats averaged lower with other grain.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, May 21. (US)—With wheat prices on the downgrade today attention was turned to weakness at Kansas City. That market had been relatively easy the day before, but had attracted little attention. Buying appears to be restrained there by the approaching movement, and there is possibly some hedging pressure even now.

Already in the local market it is estimated that 150,000 to 200,000 bushels of new wheat has been booked for August and September shipment. Most of it is No. 2 red or No. 2 hard.

Cash corn news continued a little more favorable, but that market is little affected by anything other than the trend in wheat. Shipping sales were 64,000 bushels, and bookings were 18,000 bushels. Vessel room was chartered for 130,000 bushels of corn to Georgian bay, 250,000 bushels to Buffalo and 50,000 bushels of oats to the bay.

Although it is usual to find very definite opinions on grains even when trading drops to small proportions there are few at present. Consensus seems to be that trading markets will continue until the new crop wheat moves in volume and most of the traders are governing their positions in that way.

Opinion as to what will happen when the wheat moves is rather sharply divided. Bears look for further reactions, but those not so positive are inclined to consider price prospects good.

REFINERY MEN TOO OPTIMISTIC

Over-Production of Fuel Shown Last Week

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., May 21—Confidence by Mid-Continent refinery men that better times were ahead for the industry led to an over-production of gasoline for the week ended May 15, with a corresponding large increase in gasoline storage in the area, according to the weekly report of the National Petroleum News and Platt's Oilgram and used with their permission.

Stocks in the Mid-Continent for last week jumped from 126,197,000 gallons to 130,538,000, an increase of 4,341,000 gallons or 3.4 per cent over last week. Production for the week totaled 49,971,000 gallons, an increase of 7.4 per cent, with shipments totaling 45,630,000 gallons, a decrease of 10.3 per cent in movement for the week. Only Kansas refiners showed a curtailment in their output, while all districts except North Louisiana-Arkansas showed a decline in the amount of shipments. Kansas also was the only district in the area to show a decline in stocks for the week.

Stocks in the area were as follows, in gallons:

	Last week	Pre. week
Oklahoma	52,178,000	48,763,000
Kansas	26,585,000	27,341,000
North Central Texas	32,080,000	31,892,000
West Texas	15,212,000	13,814,000
North La.-Ark.	4,483,000	4,385,000
Totals	130,538,000	126,197,000

Crude charges to stills by refiners in the Mid-Continent showed a gain of 2.5 per cent for the week, with Kansas again being the only area to show a curtailment for the week. West Texas showed the largest gain of 18.7 per cent. Other oils processed totaled 26,524 barrels daily. Runs by refiners in the area were as follows for daily averages in barrels:

	Last week	Pre. week
Oklahoma	108,445	108,133
Kansas	56,632	58,491
North Central Texas	58,512	56,606
West Texas	46,134	38,860
North La.-Ark.	43,534	43,408
Totals	313,257	305,498

Due to the good movement of kerosene for the last three weeks, kerosene stocks in the area showed a decline of 2.1 per cent for the week, totaling 22,827,000 gallons against 23,313,000 gallons for the week before. Shipments gained .9 per cent last week, totaling 5,642,000 gallons with production of 1.7 per cent, totaling 5,156,000 gallons for the week.

Stove distillates showed a decline of .1 per cent for the week, totaling 7,547,000 gallons in stock for the week against 7,554,000 gallons for the week previous, a decline of 7,000 gallons. Production increased 15.7 per cent, totaling 1,235,000 gallons with shipments gaining 3.8 per cent to total 1,242,000 gallons.

Gas oil stocks mounted 4.5 per cent to total 55,591,000 gallons against 53,207,000 gallons for the previous week, a gain of 2,384,000 gallons in the tanks. Production has declined 13.7 per cent, to total 6,797,000 gallons with shipments off 28.9 per cent, totaling 4,413,000 gallons for the area.

Fuel stocks gained 1.6 per cent, totaling 171,813,000 gallons against 169,045,000 gallons, for the previous week, a gain of 2,768,000 gallons. Production gained 4.3 per cent, totaling 28,652,000 gallons, with shipments off .8 per cent, totaling 25,884,000 gallons.

Readers' Opinion

WRITER TELLS VALUE OF AUTO RACING

Editor The Record News: In regard to the enclosed clipping from your Home Town Talk of May 19, I just want to say the reward is easily worth the risk a man takes in racing. I don't write this to offend any one, just to take my side and speak my piece. Perhaps you might change your own views on racing.

Of course we all hate to have accidents and fatalities, especially like the one of last Sunday. But try to forget this. Enough has been said about it. I don't even suppose I should write this letter.

Of course racing is dangerous but so is football. I've seen a few fellows injured in football that are now cripples and will be for life. In fact I'd rather he dead than in their condition.

I like football, in fact I've played it—got my nose and a collar bone broke at it.

A football player gets only glory while a race driver gets glory, a living and the satisfaction of perhaps doing something for the public, not only as a provider of thrills, but just look at your own car—four wheel brakes, balloon cord tires, perhaps down draft carburetion and almost every important part of your car was at one time tested and perfected on the race track.

What would our cars be and even look like today if we had never had De Palma, Murphy Milton, Rickenbacker, Lockhart and such other men as these. I'm sure Knickenbacker is almost as proud of his racing record as he is of his war record.

Most of these fellows started on a dirt track somewhere—a track perhaps like we have here. George Barring, a friend of mine, is in California now with a little car that may have cost a thousand dollars and he is beating lots of cars costing five or six thousand. Friends of his, including myself would like to see his name in print in the home paper once in a while.

I've seen almost every race in North Texas the last five years and I've only seen two fatal accidents. Of course racing is dangerous but not nearly as dangerous as the public thinks.

I always get in the pits and work on the cars being a mechanic, so I know the inside of the game. Incidentally I expect to drive myself next year. Most all of the drivers are real sportsmen and gentlemen. They would let a rival have their last spare spark plug and then run him ragged in the race.

To me racing really is the king of sports, perhaps not here but in Abilene, for instance, auto racing rules. Its the same in California. Auto racing draws crowds equal to big league baseball and baseball on the coast isn't in it with the races and they race every week. Of course publicity does a lot of this so be kind to my game as I'd be to yours.

I like any sport but racing is under my hide like perhaps baseball is to you, so have a kind word for the race driver and a little publicity and perhaps I won't have to run all over the state all the time to see my favorite sport.

Now I did not write this for publication unless you see fit to, its just to get you told in a friendly way. I don't want to see racing killed here though its been sick since the fair quit, but maybe the papers can bring it back again.

I hope you have read this for if you have thanks. I can't write much but anyway please have a kinder word for the king of sports with me.

Yours very truly,

L. Z. MOODY.

Lesson No. 94

THIRD HAND FORCED BIDS

IN Contract Bridge third hand's response to a partner's forcing bid is different from Auction Bridge. Minimum normal expectancy is hardly sufficient for raising partner's bid. If holding a two-suiter hand, a six card major or a seven card minor with one quick trick, a take-out should be made. If the hand is trickless it should be passed.

By ROB EDEN

shortish figure, his pink face, the bald spot on the top of his head, spreading rapidly, his fat white spatulate fingers, that was repulsive to her. Her eyes inadvertently dropped to her work when he walked through the room to the far end where his salesmens' desks were.

This morning, however, Sally was waiting anxiously for his door to open, for him to walk past her desk, which was on the aisle. Mame's advice was to be discarded, not because it wasn't good, but because Sally last night in planning what Ann called her campaign had to include John Warner.

John Warner was to be the first stepping stone in her future. Ann would be shocked, if she knew, Sally thought as she looked up again at the door from her typing. That was why she hadn't told her any more.

John Warner was first, then Kent Roper, the general manager. How she was to meet him, she didn't know. That would take care of itself. Roper's offices were in the executive suite on the 23rd floor. After Roper—would come Harvey T. Davidson.

Warner Smiles at Sally

She mustn't think too far ahead, though. Just now she had to concentrate on Warner. He would be difficult, she knew. Was the first step the hardest, or the easiest? She hoped it would be because she didn't like Warner.

His door was opening. He was looking down the aisle, now he was walking quickly, with his short fast steps toward her desk. Somehow she caught his glance and she smiled, a slow, inviting smile, then dropped her eyes back to her typewriter. Her fingers were trembling as she placed them on the keys, and her vision was blurred for a moment. How silly to be so upset, how childish, when she had planned it all so carefully. When she knew what she would have to do, and had done it. Warner had seen the smile, and had smiled in return, a fatuous grin on his face, as he continued down the long aisle of desks.

"Would you take a letter for me, Miss Blair? It's rather important."

She looked up alarmed for a moment, her hands still quivering. The young man standing before her desk was smiling down at her, a sheet of paper in his fingers. When Sally thought of Peter Douglas after that, and she thought of him a lot, she always saw him as he had been that first moment. His good looking face wreathed in its smile, his brown eyes crinkled at the corners, his wavy brown hair combed back as smoothly as it would go, his face tanned from the sun, and a ridge of freckles across his nose. He seemed so care free as he stood there. He didn't belong in an office. He belonged outside, in the sun, in the wind, in the open.

Sally Meets Peter

"I'm new here, just came today, and the fellows told me I could get this letter typed. It's to a good prospect," he continued.

It was true. The salesmen were permitted to use any of the 20 typists in the office as stenographers if they needed to.

"How did you find out my name?" Sally asked, taking the sheet of paper.

"I asked," was the short reply, followed by a shorter laugh. The brown eyes twinkled, and the smile on his lips broadened. "I'm Peter Douglas."

"You want this typed?"

"Yes, when you have time. All the data is there, and the address."

"Is that all?"

"No, it isn't quite all," Douglas hesitated.

"Another letter?" Sally was nervous, she didn't know why. This young man affected her strangely. She liked the look of him, liked the infectious laugh.

"I want you to go out to dinner with me this evening."

"Rather fast, aren't you?"

"I don't think so. I can furnish all manner of the proper references. I'll make a list of them, if you like."

"What if I don't want to go?"

"Don't you?"

Mr. Warner Calls Sally

Sally considered, but only for a second. Perhaps it was Douglas' vibrant personality, perhaps it was the fact that she was lonely, certainly it was because she instinctively liked him. "I'll go."

"Meet you in the lobby after work. Five-thirty," and with that he walked away, leaving his paper behind.

The girl was a little bewildered with herself. She wasn't used to going out with men she didn't know. And she didn't know Peter Douglas. His first day in the office. . . .

She didn't have much time to think about it, however, because Joyce Haller, Warner's secretary, disturbed her. Joyce was pretty in a bold, vivid way. Hair a trifle too red, features a shade too sharp, and a perpetual upward tilt to her small crimson lips.

"Mr. Warner wants to see you, Sally."

"Yes, right away."

Peter Douglas had chased all thought of Warner from her mind. Now, they came back with a shock. Her smile, Warner's answering grin.

She rose slowly, her mind filled with disturbing thoughts. What did Warner want?

Sunset News

Special to The Record News.

SUNSET, Texas, May 21.—A number of people attended and enjoyed a song service held by the Sunset singing class last Sunday afternoon.

By employing a man to work and take care of their cemetery, the citizens of Smyrna community, two mile northeast of Sunset, have set an example which may be accepted and put into practice in other rural communities in this country in the near future. F. J. MaDoozie is the man employed to care for the Smyrna cemetery.

The Prospect singing class, five miles northeast of Sunset, will engage in a regular monthly song service next Sunday afternoon, May 24.

Mrs. Mary Weaver of Sunset, widow of the late Dr. G. D. Weaver, and C. E. Wadsworth, real estate dealer of New Orleans, were recently united in marriage. They will travel in several parts of the country during the summer and then decide where they want to make their home.

A number of people from several communities are attending the services of a Holiness revival which has been in progress in Sunset for more than three weeks. The preaching is being done by Evangelist N. W. Brooks and Rev. Clifford Andrews, and people are enjoying the song services.

Since the rain which fell here Monday night, many thousand of tomato and sweet potato plants have been transplanted from the seedbeds to the land where they will be cultivated. Many farmers and gardeners here are making an effort to grow a larger quantity of tomatoes and potatoes for the market this year than they did last year.

Some of the early vegetable crop is being consumed here now. Some gardeners are already eating fresh garden peas, Irish potatoes and other vegetables which they have grown this spring.

Shabouth Festival Observed by Jews

Ushering in the Shabouth festival which will be celebrated among the Jewish people of the nation Friday, members of the congregation of Temple Israel attended an impressive preliminary service at the temple Thursday evening, according to Rabbi S. J. Schwab.

Thursday's service will be followed by two additional celebrations, one to be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning and the other at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening, at which time the feast will close.

This occasion, or "The Feast of Weeks," occurs seven weeks after the second day of Passover which gives the celebration the name of Pentecost, meaning 50.

The temple will be decorated with green branches and flowers which symbolize the agricultural background of the festival. The day will be celebrated with appropriate services which will include the reading of the 10 commandments and the book of Ruth.

Hundreds are expected to attend the annual high school and Junior college commencement exercises at the Memorial auditorium Friday evening, when 282 students will receive diplomas from the two schools according to information given Thursday by Miss Juanita Kinsey, who is in charge of the program.

Boone will play "Liebestram" by Liszt, with Margaret Bone playing the accompaniment at the piano. Louis Bond will sing a group of solos. He will be accompanied by Mrs. A. H. Mahaffey.

Leon Deaton will give the invocation and Patrick Henry Jr., will present the foreword to the program. Bob Ford will pronounce the benediction.

The presentation of the diplomas will be made by C. H. Clark, president of the board of education.

The exercises will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

Leaders of 1931 High School Coyote Staff

MISS LOUISE KELLY

PAUL W. JONES

MISS HELEN SIMPSON

Three leaders in issuing the 1931 Coyote, Wichita Falls High school annual, are shown above. Miss Louise Kelly, member of the English faculty, was sponsor for the book and gave aid to the editorial staff. Paul W. Jones was business manager of the book, and Miss Helen Simpson editor-in-chief.

1931 Coyote Sets New Mark In Size and Contents for Wichita

Staff Turns Out Creditable Annual, and Distributes Larger Book to Increased Number of Subscribers

Publication of a book slightly larger than those of former years, its distribution in a year of acute business depression to a larger number of purchasers than heretofore recorded, and the introduction of many editorial innovations marked the 1931 Coyote, high school annual, as one of the most successful in the school's history.

The student leaders of the body were Miss Helen Simpson, editor-in-chief and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Simpson, and Paul W. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Jones. Miss Louise Kelly, teacher of English, and J. W. Williams, instructor in mathematics, were faculty sponsors, the former lending assistance to the editorial staff and Mr. Williams acting as advisor to the business management. The book contains 167 pages, an increase of about eight pages over former editions, and was sold at the same price as formerly to approximately 600 subscribers.

Bound in deeply-grained green leather, the "1931 Coyote" bears on its front cover in bronze an ancient Viking ship, its one bellied sail and the bearded master on the prow reflecting the aggressive courage embodied in the class declaration:

"As Vikings, setting out into a new decade, we hope to discover new realms of labor and life."

Memorial to Cantwell

The Viking theme has been carried through the entire book, its art pages representing the progress of an adventurous cruise, and various full-page pictures of the high school building, campus, etc., being titled in figurative Norse terms.

In the arrangement of material for the book, a full-page picture of Dr. J. W. Cantwell, late superintendent of schools, with a memorial inscription, is used to open the section given to executives of schools and of the class.

A noticeable feature is the placing of the "features" section near the front of the book, replacing the pictures of individual class members so often assigned to that portion of the annual.

Use is also made in this year's book, in the "favorites" section, of the 30 girls chosen for the beauty contest, and all of the 30 participants are pictured in a separate section devoted to that event.

Another part of the book is given to winners in a contest which was said to have been an innovation during the past year. Miss Bertha Mae Kruger and Milton Elliott were elected by a committee comprised of five representative faculty members and five students as the most representative students in the school.

According to members of the faculty, the 1931 yearbook not only was purchased by a larger representation of the student body than ever before, but has in its editorial makeup a more complete representation of all student groups than formerly. Sophomores of the high school represent an uncommonly large portion of the sales, and also occupy a large section in the book. Individual pictures of seniors, juniors, and sophomores have been run this year in double vertical tiers down the centers of pages.

Staff Members

Other members of the staff are: Bertha Mae Kruger and Milton Elliott, assistant editors; Eleanor Weller, assistant business manager; Leon Deaton and Jonnie Green Hawkins, humor; Billie Leslie Stimson and Mfldred Johnson, activities; Sadie Shain, organizations; Pauline Williams, Helen Ruth Connelly, Hal Roper and J. I. Staley, features; Frances Lea and Charles Ware, art; Dan White and Dorothy Cline, athletics; Estelle McPhail, favorites; William L. Donnell, bookkeeper; Jean Hunter, junior class; Evelyn Taylor and Rufus King, sophomore class.

Of the Coyote staff, it was stated 15 members were elected to the National Honor society for scholarship and student leadership. In the history of the high school, a member of a Coyote staff has never failed to graduate, according to the records shown. The book is dedicated to Miss Louise Lipscomb.

In commending the merit of the 1931 Coyote, faculty members recalled that it was just 21 years ago that the first Wichita Falls High school publication appeared and that this publication advocated the launching of an annual. The first periodical at the high school was the "W. F. H. S. Devil's Workshop," issued by Morris Poore and Lester Jones, father of Paul W. Jones, the 1931 Coyote business manager. Beginning Feb. 23, 1910, several copies of the paper were issued, the first publication urging the need of the annual which was launched two years later.

Megargel Senior Class Visits Wichita Plants

Forty members of the graduating class of the Megargel High school were guests of the chamber of commerce here Thursday and were conducted through several of the city's industrial plants.

J. W. Childs, principal of the Megargel High school, accompanied the class. Wilburn Page, member of the chamber of commerce staff, conducted the industrial tour, which included visits to the Ball Brothers Glass company, the Wichita Mill and Elevator company, the Lehrack-Ferguson Dairy Products company, and the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. At the Lehrack-Ferguson plant ice cream was served to the visiting students.

C-C COUNCIL MEETS TODAY

Leopold and Witherspoon On Program

The business council luncheon Friday noon at the Kemp hotel will be the next to the last before the organization adjourns for the summer, it was announced Thursday.

In view of that fact, an exceptionally attractive program has been arranged for the meeting Friday, it was said. Joseph F. Leopold, manager of the southwestern division of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce at Dallas, will be the principal speaker. Mr. Leopold, in addition to being an authority on chamber of commerce work, is said to be a speaker of exceptional ability.

A second feature of the luncheon will allow those attending to hear Joe Witherspoon, Wichita Falls High school boy, deliver the speech that won for him the "My Home Town" oratorical contest at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention last week. By virtue of the victory, the boy retained the Etheridge cup for a second year in Wichita Falls, having also won the contest at the 1930 convention.

YOUTHS JAILED

Charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor were filed by County Attorney Louis V. Abernathy against two youths from Burkburnett Thursday morning, the two defendants being lodged in jail before noon, it was announced.

Another man was jailed following the filing of a complaint charging theft over $5, the item in question being a watch. The timepiece was said to have disappeared during a squabble at a local tourist park, and was found later in possession of the defendant in a hotel room.

India imported more than 12,000 automobiles last year, most of them from the United States and Canada.

Knights of Columbus Adjourn at Dallas

DALLAS, May 21. (AP)—Texas Knights of Columbus, in the closing session today of their annual convention, passed a resolution stating their intention of joining Knights and Catholics of Mexico in honoring the fourth centennial next December of the tradition of "Our Lady of Guadalupe," revered religious miracle in Mexico.

Another resolution petitioned the national order to establish a home for aged and infirm knights.

State officers re-elected were Joseph I. Driscoll, El Paso, state deputy; William Galligan, Laredo, secretary; and Joseph J. Roberts, Tyler, treasurer; M. E. Buckey, San Antonio, Judge advocate; John Mees, San Angelo, warden; and Rev. John S. Murphy, Galveston, chairman. Delegates named to attend the national convention were H. J. Zappe, Ballinger; C. K. Walsh, Wichita Falls; and Paul J. Kilday, San Antonio.
