SNYDER DEPUTY VICTIM SHOOTING

Thousand Killed and Injured in Revolt at Buenos Aires

GOVERNMENT SURRENDERS AND MILITARY FORCES TAKE CHARGE CAPITAL ARGENTINE REPUBLIC

By NELSON J. RILEY

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 6. (AP)—The military overthrew the government of Hipolito Irigoyen tonight and assumed control after bloodshed in the streets of the capital. Unofficial reports said 1,000 persons had been killed and injured.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 6. (AP)—The government surrendered tonight to two columns of revolutionary troops and civilians, but police opened fire against the revolutionaries when they reached the front of the newspaper, La Epoca, organ of the retired President Irogoyen, and the soldiers answered with machine guns.

A number of persons were injured, and it was said the fire came in part from the government house.

Shortly after the white flag had gone up over the government house another was raised on police headquarters.

Then the public swarmed into the government building, tearing down Irigoyen's portraits and burning them on the Plaza de Mayo. Others ransacked various offices in the building, including that of the minister of the interior.

Newspaper Plant Burned

After the shooting in front of La Epoca, which began when a force of mounted police loyal to the government attempted to surround a contingent of revolutionaries in motor trucks, the populace took possession of the Epoca plant and burned it.

Firemen refused to extinguish the flames.

The troops soon dispersed the band of police.

The public was in panic in all streets of the disturbed region, but the troops maintained order.

Sporadic shooting affrays were reported in several sections, however.

Announcement of the government's fall was made by the sirens on top of newspaper plants and by the explosion of bombs.

Most of the inhabitants except

DEATH TOLL BELIEVED FINAL TOTAL OF 5,000

Refugees Pouring Into Santo Domingo as Relief Begins

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The smoke of unnumbered funeral pyres hung over the white man's most ancient city in the Americas today as the bodies of the victims of last Monday's hurricane, now estimated at more than 4,000, were consigned to the flames.

The estimate of dead, made by Dr. Antonio Calderon, in charge of the sanitary service, is admitted to be conservative, and it is feared the final total will be at least 5,000. That is about one-eighth of the entire population of the city. Five thousand more, many of them expected to die, are seriously injured.

Property loss is set at from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Hour by hour the horror grows as refugees continue to drift in from outlying towns, bringing with them tales of new destruction and death, and additional bodies are found in the city's streets as workers clear away the debris.

Crowds 'Boo' N. Y. Gangster Herded Aboard Freighter

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 6. (US)—The redoubtable Jack "Legs" Diamond is tonight on the high seas bound for American shores. A crowd of several hundred booed and jeered the New York gangster when he went up the gangplank of the freighter Hanover, which steamed out for Philadelphia at 4 p. m.

Refused by all shipping lines operating passenger vessels, Diamond this morning motored from Bremen in the company of two detectives. Police very politely lunched with him, saw him aboard the freighter and one is even accompanying him as far as Luxhaven to make sure he is safely off German hands.

OKLAHOMAN KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 6. (UP)—J. O. Porterfield, 40, Oklahoma City, was killed tonight in an automobile accident here in which his companion, D. G. Gore, was seriously injured.

W. E. Debel, driver of the car which collided with the one driven by Porterfield, was not held when witnesses told Night Police Chief Clarence Hurt the accident was unavoidable.

FIND BODY AT SEALY, TEXAS

Believed That of Ben Titworth of Idaho

SEALY, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP) — A man believed to be Ben Titworth from Lava Hot Spring, Idaho, was found murdered near his car three miles south of Sealy on the road to Houston today.

Robbery was believed to have been the motive for the killing as his clothes were stripped of all valuables.

He was shot once in the temple and his body was dragged about 60 feet and hidden in the woods.

The body was found by a passerby who was attracted to the scene by Titworth's car parked on the side of the road with no one near it.

From papers found in the baggage in the car it was indicated that Titworth was a convict guard. The credentials indicated that he had been connected with several penitentiaries, mostly in the western part of the United States.

Titworth was last seen when he passed through here late Friday. His car bore California license No. 28-1808.

FORMER SECRETARY OF WEATHERFORD C. OF C. FOUND DYING SATURDAY

WEATHERFORD, Texas, Sept. 6. (UP)—John Charles Cope, 35, former secretary of the Weatherford Chamber of Commerce, was found dying on a vacant lot with a bottle of poison at his side today. He died about an hour later in a local hospital. Friends said he had been worrying over poor health.

Cope formerly lived in Abilene. He is survived by his wife and one child.

WICHITANS ANDREE'S CLOSE KIN

The above photos, borrowed by The Times from Wichita Falls relatives of Capt. Salomon August Andree, famous Swedish explorer whose body was recently discovered near the north pole, represent a period of nearly a century and a territory on both sides of the Atlantic and reaching far into the arctic.

Included in the treasured collection of the local Andree family is one photograph of the explorer himself as a 14-year-old boy—a picture which is believed to be the only one of the young engineer—scientist—explorer in existence in America.

John Andree, deceased uncle of the explorer, who was a resident of Wichita Falls for 32 years, is shown in the top left view. In the center is young Salomon August himself, 14 years old, several years before he saw his first balloon ascension. At the top right is seen Mrs. Mary Andree Friberg, aunt of the explorer, who came to Wichita Falls in 1886 and lived here until the time of her death a few years ago.

Tales of Ill-Fated Captain Andree Awaited Eagerly by Six Relatives of Wichita Falls

Relics of Andree Expedition Form Dramatic Picture

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 6. (AP)—Wrapping up of the relics of the Andree expedition, found on White island, was begun today so the treasurer would be ready to carry aboard the Swedish warship Svenskund when it arrived here.

Some of the relics suggested a dramatic picture of the explorers' wanderings in the deserts of ice. One is a ball of rolled-up thread with fishhooks made from pins attached at intervals. The spring balance scale carried by the party was almost in good enough condition for use.

In a camera a roll of film was found. This was removed and packed separately. Packed among the instruments was a dish containing scraps of food. One of the two sledges found was empty. On the other, which had been drawn up from the shore, was a canvas boat in which most of the objects mentioned in the foregoing were found.

BABY DEAD RESULT OF ZEAL TO ENFORCE LAW

HAZARD, Ky., Sept. 6. (UP)—A 27-month-old baby was shot and killed by Fire Chief B. E. Hill today in his zeal to enforce speed laws.

Hill, doing extra duty as a traffic policeman, fired on the automobile of Charles Maggard, of Hazard, to "scare the occupants and make them slow down," he told police.

The shot penetrated the rear of the car and killed Maggard's child.

Bitter feeling over the affair has been aroused and threats to lynch the prisoner have resulted in authorities taking precautions against mob action.

Hill is held in the Perry county jail.

WHILE the people of Europe and America join in paying tribute to Capt. Salomon August Andree, ill-fated Swedish explorer, who lost his life in attempting to reach the north pole by balloon, and while his body is returned to its native land, six Wichitans, first cousins of the explorer, scan the newspapers eagerly and compare the meager information in the dispatches with their own family history and the photographs with their own treasured family photos.

For six of Andree's 10 American cousins live in or near Wichita Falls, and a seventh has only recently moved from this city to make her home in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In a priceless family album owned by C. A. Andree, who lives on the Friberg road, was found a picture of the explorer at the age of 14—a photograph believed to be the only one in existence on this side of the Atlantic. At other Wichita Falls homes were photographs of Andree's parents, grandparents, sister, cousins and interesting records of the ancient Swedish family.

In 1856, when the future explorer was a tiny baby, the Andree family, living at Grenna, Swede, split its ways, and four of the brothers and sisters came to the United States, leaving behind them one brother, A. J. Andree, a Grenna minister, and his family. Little Salomon August was the eldest child in the minister's family.

One of the America-bound brothers, August, settled in Chicago and lived there until his death a few years ago, leaving no descendants. The others went first to Illinois, where a sister, Mrs. Hannah Johnson, died, leaving four children. The youngest child, now Mrs. J. B. Dollard of Wichita Falls, was taken by Mr. and Mrs. John Friberg, her uncle and aunt. Mrs. Friberg was a sister to the Andree brothers and Mrs. Johnson had come to America with them.

Wichita Falls Pioneers

In 1886, Mr. and Mrs. Friberg and their family came to Wichita Falls and settled in what is now called the Friberg community. In 1895,

Hero of Everyone Except Employers 'Quick on Trigger'

OMAHA, Sept. 6. (UP)—John Miller was the hero of every one in town except his employers.

Last week Miller, a taxi driver, shot and instantly killed Aaron Smith, negro ex-convict who enticed him to a vacant house and attempted to hold him up. He received congratulations from Mayor Metcalfe and members of the police force for his bravery. Newspapers carried glowing editorials.

But the following day Miller was notified that he had been discharged by the taxi company.

"He shot Smith as Smith reached for a gun in his hip pocket," explained the cab company manager. "The next man might be reaching for a handkerchief. We can't take chances with a man who is too quick on the trigger."

SCURRY COUNTY OFFICER SHOT WHILE ACTING AS PEACEMAKER . ASSAULT TO MURDER CHARGED

SNYDER, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP)—Acting as peacemaker between two other men culminated today in the shooting and wounding of O. S. Wills, 56, of Fluvanna, deputy sheriff of Scurry county.

The shooting occurred at noon, on the square here. Wills told officers afterward that a man for whom he had been acting as a go-between in a dispute with another man, called him to his automobile and began shooting at him.

Wills struck at the gun and the first shot went wild, but the second struck him in the left shoulder. He jumped to the running board of the car and grappled with his assailant, holding the man until Sheriff F. M. Brownfield arrived.

Frank Greer, 30, farmer, living five miles south of Fluvanna, was arrested and charged with assault to murder. He later was released under $3,000 bond. His wife and mother were in the automobile with him at the time of the shooting.

Wills was taken to a hospital, but late today attendants reported his condition was not serious.

Rickenbacker to Get Medal Award After 13 Years

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (US)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, greatest of American war fliers, is finally to receive his belated Congressional Medal of Honor after almost 13 years during which he has modestly stood aside to honor others.

The presentation is to be staged sometime in October. Captain Rickenbacker is to fly into Washington with as many of his old fighting companions as can be brought together. They will stunt and engage in mimic warfare over Bolling field and then land.

President Hoover will be at the field to greet the flier when he leaves the plane and after he has been given every military courtesy the coveted Congressional Medal of Honor will be hung about his neck.

DALLAS MAN KILLED RESULT ARGUMENT OVER SALE BOLOGNA SAUSAGE

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 6. (UP) — One man was killed and two were wounded here tonight in an argument over payment for a small quantity of bologna sausage.

William Lynn Apperson, 40, was found dead at a street intersection when officers reached the scene.

Sam Palazzollo, proprietor of the small grocery store where the shooting affray occurred, received a flesh wound in the arm. T. W. Nubisch, who was seated in his car near the scene, was cut by shattered glass.

Police reported Joe Palazzollo, son of the groceryman, as saying that he did the shooting in defense of his father. Joe told detectives that Apperson drew a knife on his father after refusing to pay for the meat ordered.

FRENCH FLIERS TIRED AND ASK TIME FOR REST

Engagements for Saturday Night and Sunday Canceled

TO WASHINGTON SUNDAY FOR OFFICIAL WELCOME

Have Flown More Than 7,000 Miles During Last Six Days

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, tired and bedraggled, but $25,000 richer than when they took off from Long Island last Thursday on their flight to Dallas, Texas, to qualify for the Easterwood prize, returned to New York today.

They asked for only one thing on their arrival at Valley Stream after a 6½ hour flight from Louisville today, and that was rest and a chance to sleep.

Accordingly, all engagements for tonight and tomorrow were canceled and they retired to their suite in a Park avenue hotel, where they said they would stay until tomorrow afternoon when they leave for Washington to receive a welcome from President Hoover.

Visit Military Academy

Tired as they were, they swung their transoceanic Question Mark north up the Hudson when they reached the statute of liberty, in New York harbor, this afternoon and paid a flying visit to the military academy at West Point.

Swooping low over the parade ground there they unloosed a cloud of small American flags which fluttered down to the green field as the

BROOKHART WILL LEAD FIGHT AGAINST MEYER

WATERLOO, Iowa, Sept. 6. (UP)—Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Republican, of Iowa, announced today that he will lead a fight in the senate against the confirmation of Eugene Meyer of New York, who yesterday was appointed governor of the federal reserve board.

"I feel it my duty to oppose his confirmation, and I feel confident that I will have considerable support in such a move," he said.

Brookhart believes the new appointee to be an enemy of cooperative farm enterprises, and stated this as the cause of his opposition to the appointment.

Girl Thrusts Arm Under Train Ending Insane Urge to Kill

SALINAS, Calif., Sept. 6. (UP)—Tortured by an uncontrollable urge to commit murder with her right arm, Miss Alta Fickle, 20, pretty daughter of a Visalia rancher, deliberately removed the arm and was recovering in a hospital here tonight. "I am happy now," she said.

She purposely thrust her arm under the wheels of a freight train. The limb was removed at the joint.

Hospital attendants said the girl seemed rational.

"All my life I have had to combat a wild desire to use that arm to kill," she said. "Yesterday, it became almost uncontrolable. I was walking by the tracks and heard a freight train coming.

"On an impulse, a way to end my torture occurred to me. I lay beside the track and placed my arm in the path of the train.

"I am very happy now.

"The urge came often. Each time, it was more violent; each time, less provocation was necessary. In calmer moments, I went almost mad with shame and fear.

"Yesterday, I determined to end it that way, and an opportunity presented itself. Without a moment's hesitation, I took it. As the train roared by, and I felt the wheels biting into my arm, everything went black.

"I woke up here."

Famed of Long Ago Join Ranks Seeking Pensions in Old Age

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (US)—Pathetic instances of once prosperous persons applying for old age pensions were described today by the association for old age security, at the end of the first week of the new law. Among those who were aided in filling out their applications were:

An artist whose paintings are exhibited in a leading museum; a once eminent consulting engineer; three actresses; the modiste who designed Mrs. Taft's inaugural ball gown; a merchant who lost $100,000 when fashion banned ostrich plumes; a prima ballerina who danced for royalty and several former brokers.

UNION CARD IDENTIFIES BODY OF MAN FOUND DEAD OF HEART FAILURE

MARSHALL, Texas, Sept. 6. (UP)—The body of the man found on the outskirts of Marshall was identified Saturday as that of U. H. Long, 65, of Buffalo, N. Y. The identification was made by officials of the moulders union, to which Long belonged. A union card was found in the pockets of his clothing. A coroner's verdict said Long died of heart failure. The body will be buried here.

FRIENDS OF JUDGE BELIEVE NEW YORK JURIST WAS SLAIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (UP)—Associates of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater who dropped from sight just a month ago, said today they were convinced that the missing jurist was slain.

Crater had some $5,000 in his pockets when he was last seen in New York the night of Aug. 6. His friends believe he was murdered for that money and his body concealed.

The police, however, are represented as putting little credence in this theory, and are centering their investigation around reports that Carter was seen near New Rochelle, N. Y., a short distance from this city, on Aug. 29, and at Rouse's Point, near the Canadian border, only two days ago.

Examination of Crater's accounts by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle revealed no irregularities and every other inquiry, so far as is known, shows no basis for rumors that Crater disappeared to avoid being called as a witness in the investigation of judicial scandals. The missing jurist was a close friend of George F. Ewald, who is accused of having purchased his position as city magistrate.

FRENCH AVIATORS REST AFTER TRIP

red plane swooped and dipped its wings in salute. The Question Mark then was turned toward Curtiss field, where its epic flight from Paris to New York ended last Tuesday night.

Committee of Welcome

The mayor's committee of welcome awaited them there, and after seeing their plane safely housed, the two fliers climbed into an automobile and were driven back to the city.

Also at the left field to greet them was Marcel Douret, one of France's greatest fliers, who recently performed with an international team in the air races in Chicago. He rode back to town with them.

During the last six days the two Frenchmen have flown over 7,000 miles, 4,000 of it over the ocean. On their trip to Dallas, which was broken on the way back by an overnight stop at Louisville, they flew approximately 3,200 miles.

Washington Plans Welcome

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—Aviators, representatives of the president, the army, the navy, the commerce and state department, the French embassy, the army band and spectators will combine tomorrow to welcome Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte to Washington.

The French Paris-to-New York fliers are due to arrive at Bolling field at 5 p. m. As they near Washington, six army, three navy and three marine corps planes will meet and escort them to the field.

Easterwood Coming Home

PARIS, Sept. 6. (AP)—Col. William Easterwood of Dallas, who arrived from London by air today, called upon Madame Dieudonne Coste and presented her and Madame Maurice Bellonte with huge bouquets of roses.

He announced he was sailing with the wives of the French transatlantic aviators on Sept. 10. As soon as he arrives in New York he will arrange a ceremony at which Captain Coste will be presented with a $25,000 check for his flight from New York to Dallas in continuation of the Paris-New York flight.

hurricane. All available houses, churches, and hospitals, are filled with the wounded, 400 being billeted in San Rafael hospital alone.

An unestimated number of women and newborn children were killed in the maternity hospital. The building was roofed with zinc, sheets of which were ripped away by the 160 mile an hour wind and carried through the air, mowing down like a giant scythe those who crossed their path. Fifty bodies in the hospital were decapitated.

The city is still without light or power, and, worst of all, the water supply plant is so badly damaged it will be days before it can be repaired. With the city filled with dead and debris, the question of a pure water supply becomes hourly more pressing.

A squadron of six Cuban airplanes bearing physicians and medical supplies, landed here this morning, and this afternoon the all-America cable ship, All America, arrived with a large supply of medicine and foodstuffs, and several doctors and nurses.

Their arrival brought new hope to the little body of local officials and physicians who have worked without rest for hours, their bodies a living barricade against the after runner of the storm disease.

Several persons today won their way across the river Ozama from Villa Duarte, spanning the swollen current on a cable as the bridge was torn away by the storm.

Roads Impassable

They reported 300 dead in the district of El Algibe, and 167 bodies already recovered in Villa Francisca.

Parties now have penetrated an area of 15 miles on every side of Santo Domingo and report all desolation. Roads, little more than trails in normal times, now are almost impassable and the injured in outlying sections have little hope of receiving medical and surgical attention for days.

The storm not only virtually destroyed the city, but also ruined that upon which the country depends for existence—great stores of coffee, cacao and fruits, which had been prepared for exportation.

Only 400 houses of the original 14,000 still stand in the city, among them the tower of the old cathedral which, between its walls four centuries old, held safe against the storm the purported tomb of Columbus.

Six of Explorer's Ten American Relatives Live in Wichita Falls

John Andree, brother of Mrs. Friberg, followed his sister's family and brought his own wife and children to live here. Mrs. Friberg and Mr. Andree, uncle and aunt to the boy who was later to lead the Polar expedition, were thus pioneer residents of this section and were well-known throughout this part of Texas up to the time of their death, both of them having died within the past few years.

The matter of keeping in touch with the portion of the family still left in Sweden was left to August Andree of Chicago, and he kept the Texas relatives informed until his death, also forwarding numerous photographs to them. His own death, however, occurred just before Captain Andree came into the limelight by organizing his Polar expedition, and there are no letters telling of the young man's departure from Sweden.

John Andree, then living here, was interested in keeping up with his nephew at that time, according to his children. He would read newspaper accounts and talk of his brother's family, saying, "The boy was always like that—fearless and of an exploring nature."

Young Salomon August, in fact, had visited the Philadelphia centennial celebration in 1876, and as a tow-headed Swedish youngster, already a qualified engineer, had taken a great interest in the balloon ascensions and had attempted to raise the $75 necessary to make such ascension. Only $50 could be secured, however, and the young engineer returned to his native land a much disappointed lad.

Twenty Years Later

It was almost 20 years before he realized his keenest ambition—to become the owner of a balloon, which he used almost exclusively for scientific purposes, testing weather phenomena and temperature variations. It was exactly 20 years after his visit to America that he startled the world by announcing his intention of flying over the North Pole in his balloon.

One year was spent in preparation, and on June 4, 1896, the small crew cut the anchor rope. This first attempt was doomed at the start, however, and the group was forced to return to Sweden. A year later, on July 11, 1897, at 2:30 p. m., a cheer went up from the thousands of Andree's fellow countrymen who had assembled to see the take-off, and the balloon disappeared toward the North, never to be seen again.

In the meantime, the Texas Andrees had read newspaper accounts of his activities and had attempted to communicate with the boy's parents. No word ever came. Within a short time, the Grenna minister died, not knowing what fate had befallen his son, and the relatives here, seeing the death notice in the Swedish paper to which they subscribed regularly, cut out the clipping. In that clipping was listed as one of the survivors of the minister—"a son, Salomon August." Today, a tiny corner of the clipping is all that has survived the years, but the memory of the children of Mr. Andree and Mrs. Friberg supplies the remainder.

Mrs. Friberg, known by everybody in Wichita Falls as "Grandmother Friberg," died 13 years ago, leaving John Andree as the last survivor of the little group of brothers and sisters who had crossed the Atlantic from their Swedish home so many years before. Mr. Andree lived until 1922. By that time, the children of Mr. Andree and Mrs. Friberg had naturally lost interest in their Swedish cousins and had almost forgotten the explorer.

All From Grenna

A few days ago, one of the Andree family noticed a biography of Captain Andree, brought to light by the recent prominence given the discovery of his body in the Arctic. "Salomon August Andree was born in Grenna, Sweden, on Oct. 18, 1854," read the article. Grenna was the little Swedish town from which the entire family had come, leaving the one brother, and his eldest child, born in 1854, was named Salomon August! There were no other Andrees in Grenna, and Salomon and August were both common family names. Immediately the search for photographs and clippings began.

Mrs. Mollie Glenn, 1922 Eighth street; A. J. Andree, 2013 Ninth street; and C. A. Andree, who lives near the Friberg church, are the children of John Andree. E. V. Friberg, 802 Denver; Mrs. Annie Anderson, formerly of this city but now of Colorado Springs; and Mrs. Gus Byman, 1702 Burnett, are the son and daughters of Mrs. Mary Friberg. Mrs. J. B. Dollard, 1213 Taylor, and her brothers, Richard and Hilmer Johnson of Nebraska, and Theodore A. of Washington, D. C., are the children who survived Mrs. Hannah Johnson, the sister who died in Illinois many years ago.

Mrs. Glenn, the Andree brothers, Mr. Friberg, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Byman, Mrs. Dollard and the Johnson brothers are therefore the only living American relatives of the explorer. All except Mrs. Anderson and the Johnson brothers live in Wichita Falls, and Mrs. Anderson is a former Wichitan.

Other attempts will be made by the local residents to get in touch with their Swedish cousins, they said in an interview Saturday. It is believed that the explorer had seven brothers and sisters and they hope to find some of them. It also is possible that the Andree diary, as yet kept secret, may reveal something of the remainder of the family.

Ice-Locked Shores of North Bar Fliers Seeking Remains of Heroic Explorers Perishing 83 Years Ago

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 6. (US)—Hope of an airplane flight which might locate the remains of the Sir John Franklin north pole expedition have been abandoned for the year.

Maj. L. T. Burwash, famous northern explorer, and his aviator companion, Pilot W. E. Gilbert, have decided that the season now is too far advanced to attempt the flight, according to reports reaching here from Fort Hearne, ancient far-north trading post of the Hudson Bay company.

The two men hoped to discover the remains of the Franklin expedition which set out many years before that of Andree. Franklin and 129 members of his party, seeking the northwest passage, perished 83 years ago on King Williams land which never has been explored in the summer season.

Three weeks ago Burwash and Gilbert in a giant, radio-equipped seaplane, left Fort McMurray in Northern Canada with the idea of reaching the distant shores before they became ice-locked.

They got only as far as Fort Hearne, however, and were land bound there waiting for gas. Before it arrived, the explorers decided it was too late for the attempt.

STRIKE IN SPAIN MAY CAUSE POSTPONEMENT OF VACATION BY KING

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Sept. 6. (AP)—King Alfonso's plans for a vacation in this part time summer capital may be postponed because of the general strike effective throughout Spain today.

The first hours of the strike passed without violence but crowds of dissatisfied workers, mingled with some members of the opposition political groups, gathered in the streets in a seemingly ugly mood. Strong forces of police reserves and civil guards were stationed at strategic points ready to act if needed.

The authorities hoped to avert trouble but admitted there was a possibility of an outbreak. Premier Berenguer arrived here today and possibly will take personal charge if the situation grows critical.

Publication of newspapers ceased. Trams and taxis stopped running. Most of the industrial plants closed when their employes walked out for a 24-hour strike.

The strike was ordered last night as a workers' protest against the shooting and killing Thursday of a fish market porter named Lasheras in a clash between strikers and civil guards.

POLICE WIN NATIONAL RIFLE MEET OVER FOES OF ARMY AND NAVY

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 6. (UP)—Five policemen from the Seattle, Wash., force, proved themselves superior pistol shots to the army, navy, marines and their fraternal officers by winning the National Rifle association pistol team match here today.

Firing from a range of 25 to 50 yards, the Seattle blue coats broke targets in slow, timed and rapid fire stages that gave them a total of 1,302 points out of a possible 1,500. Each of the five men composing the team, J. J. Hoag, S. J. Jorgenson, E. A. Dunn, Daniel Twohig, and William Reynolds, were allowed five shots in each stage.

Whereabouts President Unknown

The whereabouts of Hipolito Irigoyen, who last night retired in favor of Dr. Enrique V. Martinez, vice president, was unknown tonight, but it was rumored he had gone aboard the cruiser Garibaldi.

Likewise, no one knew where the members of the cabinet were.

Following the occupation of government house by the public several army officers joined the crowd. One addressed the throng and said the new government would be civil, not military. He was given a great ovation.

Two columns of troops, one from the north and the other from the west, forced the cabinet to put up a white flag.

Cadets from the San Martin Military college began the northern march on foot, being joined at El Palomar by part of the School of Military Communications.

Ranks Are Swelled

Continuing, they took all police posts in their path and were joined by 400 policemen. Armed volunteers numbering 3,000 swelled their ranks as they marched along.

Near El Palomar the marchers met the first regiment of infantry, which earlier in the day had been drawn up in battle line, but later had returned to barracks. After a consultation the first infantry joined the revolutionists, and the human tide swept on by foot and auto.

The western drive on the capital was started from Linters by the first artillery, in full war equipment, including field guns, and accompanied by the eighth cavalry. These marchers were joined at Caballito by the third infantry and all proceeded slowly toward the capital.

Police along the line were disarmed and the northern and western forces finally came together on the Avenida de Mayo and started a parade toward government house, headed by the San Martin cadets, while watching crowds cheered.

The cabinet capitulated before this advancing array and handed over the power by acceding to Gen. Jose Evaristo Uriburu's demand to resign.

The troops at Campo Mayo, numbering about 8,000, on which the revolutionists had depended to join them early today, failed to get into the match.

One plane from El Palomar, engaged in a flight over Campo Mayo, fell and its two occupants were burned to death.

NEW YORK LEGION FOR REPEAL 18TH AMENDMENT VOTE WAS 370 TO 166

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 6. (UP)—A resolution favoring repeal of the 18th amendment was adopted today at the final session of the New York state convention of the American Legion. The vote for repeal was 370, against 166 for non-repeal. Sixteen voters declined to commit themselves.

BELIEVE CLUE TO FATE ITALIA'S CREW IS FOUND

BERLIN, Sept. 6. (UP)—Belief that a clue to the fate of the polar dirigible Italia's missing men might have been found was reported today by Ulstein correspondent at Tromsoe.

The correspondent said an arctic trapper, returning from an island east of Spitzbergen, found a small scientific instrument described as a tube eight or nine centimeters long with a glass attached.

Experts at Tromsoe believed it might have belonged to the Italia expedition. One party from the Italia was rescued but another was blown away over the ice with the dirigible's balloon.

AFGHAN TRIBESMEN CREATE NEW WAR MENACE IN INDIA

SIMLA, India, Sept. 6. (AP)—While India digested the demands of Mahatma Gandhi for peace in India and the probable consequences of their rejection by Viceroy Lord Irwin, serious menace was renewed again today on the northwest frontier where Afghan tribesmen were gathering in the Piewar area for a probable renewal of warfare.

Secession Right Asked

The Mahatma put a definite conclusion to considerations of termination of civil resistance by congress volunteers with his demands for a complete national government in India responsible only to India, with the right of secession from the British empire when desired. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar, Indian moderates, today published the contents of the correspondence between the "holy one" and the viceroy. With their publication vanished the last hope for an end to the salt raids, strikes and other forms of disobedience to the government.

The congress leader asked not only for absolute self rule but for control of defenses and of the economic phases of such a government and the right of appeal from British claims to an independent tribunal, as well as the release of political prisoners. In the severe fighting of the last few days between British troops and hostile raiders in Peshawar an official announcement revealed that seven native recruits and three militiamen had been killed at Kharlachi, 10 miles southwest of Parachinar.

British Loss Severe

There was other fighting at various points along the frontier in which the British and native forces beat off their enemy with shrapnel and rifle fire, inflicting heavy casualties the extent of which could not be learned, although the British losses were the most severe in many days.

The tribesmen, driven back across the border, reoccupied their former positions, where resumption of fighting was awaited.

DEAN AND KAUFMANN TO REPORT TO CARDS

HOUSTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—Pitcher (Dizzy) Dean has been sold to the St. Louis Cardinals for an unannounced cash sum, President Fred Ankenman of the Houston Texas league club announced Saturday. It was understood the Cards paid Houston $10,000 in cash for the young recruit right-hander. No players were involved.

The official recall of Pitcher Tony Kaufmann also was announced, and both Dean and Kaufmann will leave to join the Cardinals Sunday, closing day of the Texas league season. Dean was signed by Houston last spring from the San Antonio sandlots, and was farmed by the Buffs to the St. Joseph Western league club.

Recently recalled to Houston by the Buffs, Dean has continued to win consistently. Kaufmann was with the Bisons on option from the Cards.

The addition of Dean and Kaufmann to the Cardinal pitching staff at this time, with St. Louis still very much in the National league pennant race, may bolster the club in a stretch drive.

Ankenman left for St. Louis where he has several deals designed to give the Buffs more strength for 1931.

AMATEURS QUALIFY IN P. G. A. COMPETITION

HARLINGEN, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP)—Qualifying rounds of match play for amateurs only were completed Saturday in the Texas Professional Golfers' association tournament here, the field including many of South and Central Texas' choicest amateur golfers.

Coming up to expectations, Jimmy Morgan and T. Lawrence of San Antonio and Hill Cocke of Harlingen, winners of the three first places in the medal play with professionals Friday, in the qualifying round Saturday entered the first flight for play Sunday.

Morgan, with a 75 for the difficult par 70 course, won medalist honors, while Cocke was second with 76.

Dick Turner, McAllen, one of the favorites, turned in a 77.

Others favored for Sunday were J. M. George, Brownsville; Mac Burnett, San Antonio; R. M. Kleberg, Corpus Christi; J. I. George, Brownsville; and S. L. McDowell.

Semi-finals and finals will be played Monday.

FREED ON BOND AFTER MURDER CHARGE FILED

LUBBOCK, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP)—John L. Fisher was released on $2,000 bond today after he had been charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Waller Glover, 19, of Lamb county.

Fisher told officers he shot at the feet of prowlers who awakened him at his filling station at Shallow Water, 12 miles from Lubbock last night. He said he did not know he had killed anyone until officers came to investigate the shooting.

James Jackson Truett and Troy Hawkins, companions of Glover, had taken the slain youth's body to Littlefield. Glover was shot through his heart.

Milk and Ice Fund Closed With Record Of More Than $1,500

A $25 check from John Hirschi Saturday brought The Times and Record News Milk and Ice fund to $1,510.30, the highest total ever secured in one summer, and past the goal of $1,500 which had been set.

The campaign began a little over three months ago, and has drawn donations from several hundred Wichitans, ranging from $1 to $100 in size. It is closed today until next summer.

The entire amount subscribed has been spent, or will be spent, for milk and ice, none of it going for advertising, collecting, distribution or profit in any way. Lester Jones, of the Wichita State bank, has acted as treasurer and solicitor, and Mrs. Effie McHam, Family relief secretary, has distributed the milk and ice tickets to the families she judged most deserving.

Utility Connections of Members And Revision of Auditor Duties Issues Assured for Legislature

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—Two issues the legislature is definitely assured of having to deal with in January are:

1. Public avowal of members' utilities connections and retainers.

2. Revision of duties and powers of the state auditor to avoid conflict with elected constitutional officers.

The house of representatives last year got dissatisfied with the criticisms that many of its members were employed by utilities or other industries affected by legislative action. It answered the criticisms by ordering to be made public the retainers and affiliations of every member. Practically all members answered, readily and willingly.

Senate Refuses

The senate refused, by a narrow vote, to take similar action.

Demand is to be made again early in the new session for members of both houses to write such a public record. The question has been prominent in campaigns this year, and some of the members of both houses see as the best answer the prompt, full and public avowal of such relations as they may have. There is little prospect the house will fail to take the action, though the course of the senate will remain unknown until the showdown comes.

Practice during the first year, with several beneficial results already attained, has shown there will be friction and controversy in the dealings of the state auditor's department with other departments, until its authority and duties are more sharply defined. Some account seems necessary to be taken of the ultimate responsibility of constitutional officers to the people who elect them. It has been an open question whether the auditor, created by the legislature, can have much effect with his suggestions for reorganizing, energizing and overhauling departments of constitutional officers, under the present operating system.

Equivalent to Civil Service

If the work of this department is to be coercive, then it may be claimed to be equally capable of forcing an elective officer to invite cooperation of the department as to force him to follow its gratuitous suggestions.

Present trend indicates that work of the auditor in various departments may be postulated on the invitation and voluntary cooperation of the department head.

The work of the auditor's department has been hailed by Gov. Dan Moody as a substantial equivalent of the efficiency gain promised by establishing a state civil service system. The auditor's department will have a record for its first year abundantly justifying its existence, it is clear.

Possible changes in the law will depend on the attitude of legislators toward the department, and conversely upon the extent of opposition to the new agency among and the lobbying influence of departmental agencies and officers who may not have been enthusiastic over its activity.

ARCHER COUNTY SEEKS HEARING ON ROAD ROUTE

Permission to Build West Extension of Highway No. 25 Asked

LOAN TO COMMISSION FOR PROJECT OFFERED

Declare Plans Would Provide Short Cut From Electra

An application for a hearing before the state highway commission Sept. 15 and 16 has been filed at Austin asking that Archer county be authorized to begin the construction of grades and bridges on highway No. 25 from Archer City by way of Mankins to connect with pavement which extends south from Electra to the Wichita county line, according to information given Saturday by H. V. Pearston, Archer county judge.

Archer county, Judge Pearston said, has advised that it is willing to lend the highway commission the state's portion of the cost of the work if funds are not otherwise available.

The request to the commission urges that the application be granted both because of an urgent need for the road and as a means of relieving unemployment. The construction work, Judge Pearston said, would provide work for a large number of farmers who have been hard hit by the drouth.

Routing Difficulties

Should the hearing be granted, it is said, a delegation of Archer county citizens probably will appear before the commission to urge the approval of the application.

The filing of the application reopened a matter about which difficulties already have arisen concerning the routing of the highway. When bonds were voted for the project, it was specifically provided that the road should extend almost due west from Archer City to tie in with a county road northeast from Megargel, and then extend almost due north through Mankins to the Wichita county line, connecting there with the pavement which crosses Wichita county from the Red river almost due south through Electra.

Legality Questioned

The state highway department, it was said, once rejected the routing desired by the county, and favored a roadway extending west from Archer City for three miles to cross the river and then almost by airline northwestward to Mankins. That routing is several miles shorter than the one favored by the county, but would serve a much more sparsely settled area, it was added.

Whether the bond money could legally be expended for work on any routing other than that for which it was specifically voted may become a question for the courts to decide, it was declared.

The construction of the road, Judge Pearston said, would provide a short cut for traffic between Electra and Archer City. Highway No. 25 extends east of Archer City through Windthorst, Antelope and Jacksboro to Mineral Wells.

Mother and Young Daughter Hike to Quanah 'For Fun'

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, Sept. 6.—The championship of "lady hikers" of Hardeman county goes to Mrs. A. G. Jameson and her young daughter, Miss Clotile Jameson. They left Chillicothe at 7:19 a. m. and arrived in Quanah at the clinic steps at 12:45, making the walk in five hours and nine minutes, a little tired and sunburned. Fifteen minutes were allowed for stopping at two filling stations for cold drinks or rather "refueling."

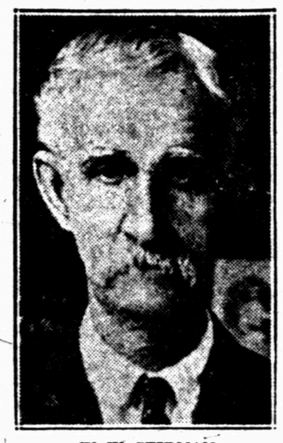

The hike was made "for fun" and for a test of strength. They received on the way 25 different offers from passing motorists to ride into town, however, all were refused. Mrs. Jameson was operated on in the Quanah hospital July 8. This undoubtedly shows that she has regained all and more of her former strength back.

Rural Route Carrier Retired After Great Record for Service

W. W. STIRMAN

W. W. Stirman, 74, dean of the county's rural mail carriers, is in retirement at his home after 23 years of service as a rural mail carrier here. He lives at 1314 Fourteenth street.

It frankly is a reluctant retirement for Mr. Stirman, who still is strong and hardy, but it is one forced upon him by civil service regulations which do not allow exceptions.

He could have retired with his pension 10 years ago upon reaching his 64th birthday anniversary, but the rules of the service allow an extension of 10 years to the worker desirous and capable of continuing on duty. Mr. Stirman chose to remain for the very last delivery allowed him, which he made on Saturday, Aug. 16. His retirement became effective Sept. 1.

Mr. Stirman completed his service with the record of never having lost a day from duty because of illness or because the roads were bad. Once only has he been off duty except during the vacation allowed, and that was for three days during the illness and death of a son.

Observes Changes

Few have had better opportunity to observe the changes that have occurred than Mr. Stirman. Perhaps the most striking change, he relates, has been in road building. It hasn't been so many years, he declares, when the words that, "the mail must go on" might mean serious menace to the health and sometimes even to the life of the rural carrier. Good roads and good bridges have solved that problem for Wichita county.

Mr. Stirman has carried only two routes since his connection with the department here, No. 4 and No. 2. Route No. 4 follows the south bank of the Wichita river toward Petrolia, swings across the river and along the north bank back to Wichita Falls.

For a much longer period, however, and up to the end of the service he carried No. 2, which follows the Thornberry road, swings across to the main Burkburnett highway back to Wichita Falls. The route is about 32 miles long.

Deliveries Delayed

It was while carrying route No. 4, Mr. Stirman relates, that he experienced the greatest hardships. When rains fell, the roads were so muddy that it frequently was late in the night before his deliveries were completed. On occasions when the river was high, he has left his horse and buggy, strapped his mail upon his back, swam the river and borrowed another conveyance to complete his day's work.

Friends estimate conservatively that Mr. Stirman's drives as a carrier would have encircled the earth five or six times. He has averaged between 275 and 300 deliveries a year, at an average distance of around 20 miles per delivery.

He has been a resident of Wichita Falls and vicinity more than 40 years. Before entering service as a rural carrier he was a farmer. His plans for the future are uncertain except that he intends to remain in Wichita Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Stirman celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last March. They have eight children who are Mrs. W. S. Owensby, Mrs. O. S. Deaton and Mrs. Ed Roberts of Wichita Falls; Mrs. A. A. Douglass and Mrs. M. L. McKay of Fort Worth; E. C. Stirman of Wichita Falls; and T. E. Stirman of Chickasha, Okla.

She had been confined to her home for several years by ill health. Heart disease complicated by ailments of old age brought about her death.

FEDERAL AGENTS CLAIM SOURCE OF NARCOTICS FOUND

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 6. (UP)—Federal authorities announced today the breaking up of an extensive drug combine said to have been the source of most of the illicit morphine in eastern Oklahoma.

Dr. G. W. Stewart, 73, prominent physician, and nine other persons were arrested by city police and federal narcotic agents.

Stewart was freed in $2,000 bond after waiving preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner R. M. Mountcastle on a charge of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic act.

Federal agents testified Stewart sold morphine to customers for $1 a grain.

A large quantity of the drug, empty bottles, needles and instruments for administering the drug were seized in raids on two city apartments. A trap door in one apartment arranged with grooves to allow agents to slide bottles into the basement when suspecting detection. Out of town customers supplied by contacts on unused byways near the city, agents said.

Operatives described the manner of peddling was the cleverest ever found in Oklahoma and that investigators had been busy on the case since a year ago February.

The group was believed by veteran agents to be a remnant of Redcloud Fleetwood's vast drug ring which formerly served the entire Southwest. Fleetwood now is serving a term for his part in the operation.

Judge Martin Paroles Boy Charged With Robbing Lad of 15 Cents Here Two Children Taken From Parents

Three unusual cases involving juvenile and dependency matters were tried before Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court Saturday morning.

In the first instance a 16-year-old Wichita Falls boy was charged with hijacking a smaller lad of 15 cents while the latter was on his way home from a miniature golf course where he had earned the money working as a caddy.

The victim in the case testified that he permitted the defendant to take the money out of his pocket because he was afraid of the older boy and his two companions. Judge Martin paroled the boy to his mother with the warning that his next offense of any kind would mean confinement in the state school.

In the second case a Wichita Falls grandmother was deprived by the court of her 7-year-old daughter after officers had testified that they had found her drunk on several occasions. The child was turned over to the Children's Aid Society of West Texas.

An interpreter was necessary in the third case in which two Mexican families were seeking custody of a 2-month-old infant. Testimony showed that the parents of the baby had turned it over to neighbors when 22 days old because they could not take care of it. The 18-year-old mother said she had two older children, one three years and one 18 months of age.

The foster parents are farmers near Iowa Park. The actual parents were seeking to obtain custody of the child, although they admitted they were living in a barn and had no work except cotton picking.

Judge Martin ordered the child left with the foster parents until such time as the parents could show that they could provide a home for the baby and properly care for it.

Dr. O. L. Powers to Begin His 14th Year of Service Today As Pastor at First Baptist

Dr. O. L. Powers will begin his 14th year as pastor of the First Baptist church Sunday and will talk on "The Everlasting Gospel" for the morning service and on "Nonconformity" in the evening.

Doctor Powers took up the pastorate of the local church with an attendance of 791 and under his leadership it has grown to a membership of 2,686 the total of which represents 2,258 active members and 428 nonresident members.

During his services here Doctor Powers has received 4,094 new members into the church. In the meantime hosts have gone from this city to other cities and there become members of Baptist churches, many becoming outstanding in church life. Young people have been trained and fitted for special religious work, a large number of young men are now Baptist preachers or are in training for the ministry.

The church organization is thoroughly modern in every respect as to the various departments of church activity. The staff of workers is trained for their particular tasks and they lead in the local program that calls for the enlistment of all ages. Whether in its local work or in its worldwide missionary program the church is one of the most outstanding in this section of the country.

The ministry of Dr. Powers has extended far beyond this city, leaders pointed out. The large number of revivals conducted in other churches, cities and states, his activity in conducting campaigns for Baptist interests, his counsel on various boards of Texas and the Southern Baptist convention all have served to create for him and the local church an unique place in Baptist affairs.

Preacher Without Pulpit Following Row Over Salary

CLEVELAND, Sept. 6. (AP)—A temporary injunction will keep the Rev. Roy E. DePriest from the pulpit of St. John's Episcopal church, one of Cleveland's oldest houses of worship, for the next two Sundays.

Attorneys for the vestry obtained the injunction last night as the result of differences between the rector and the vestry over a proposed salary cut.

Rev. DePriest, vestry attorneys said, walked out of a meeting July 24 when it was proposed that his salary be reduced from $3,600 to $2,400 annually along with other decreases in the church budget.

The rector submitted a verbal resignation at that time, the vestry contends.

Rev. DePriest denied that he had resigned, but said he left the meeting in "righteous indignation" when the salary decrease was proposed "after all the hard work I have done for the church."

He said the vestry acted contrary to Canonical procedure, but announced there would be no services pending a hearing on the injunction Sept. 15.

INTEREST CONTINUES TO MOUNT IN GRANT METHODIST REVIVAL

The services now going on at the Grant Street Methodist church are attracting increasingly large congregations and the interest is growing daily.

The pastor of the church, Rev. C. W. Thomas, is being assisted in the revival services by Rev. Harry S. Allen, one of the general evangelists of the Southern Methodist church.

Evangelist Allen has held revivals throughout the South and West and thousands have been converted under his ministry.

He is preaching plain, gospel messages that are finding their way to the hearts and consciences of the people.

A number of conversions already have resulted and many others are expected to be converted and unite with the church before the services come to a close.

Quite a number have applied for admission into the church on profession of faith during the past week. A large class will be received on the closing Sunday of the revival.

Saturday night the evangelist will speak on the subject, "The Unpardonable Sin." This subject never fails to attract a large crowd and the church is expected to be filled to capacity at the evening service. An invitation is extended the public to attend all the services of the meeting.

BRATVAAG'S CREW IS GIVEN SHARE FROM SALE ANDREE STORY

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 6. (UP)—The Svalbard institution was understood today to have satisfied the claims of members of the Bratvaag's crew by placing part of the money obtained by sale of the story of the Andree expedition at their disposal.

The measure was interpreted here as intended to appease the Norwegian public demands that the fishermen who participated in finding the long lost arctic expedition be permitted to share in the profits.

POLICE DECIDE WOMAN'S KIDNAPING STORY 'HOAX'

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 6. (AP)—Police here have decided there was nothing to a story of being kidnaped and robbed told them yesterday by a woman giving her name as Mrs. Nathan Kerner of Detroit.

Authorities decided the woman had not been kidnaped when they found her automobile late yesterday along a lonely road, near the Dunes highway near here. A $1,000 sable wrap, a wedding ring and $35 which the woman had said were taken from her, were found in the automobile.

PLAN CONFERENCE FRIENDS STERLING GALVESTON SUNDAY

Hope to Iron Out Controversial Issues Before Convention

PLAN TO UNITE PARTY AND END FACTIONALISM

Meeting Expected to Discuss Proposed Platform For Campaign

HOUSTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—Ross S. Sterling of Houston, Democratic nominee for the governorship, will confer with his friends and advisors tomorrow at Galveston prior to the opening of his party's state convention there Tuesday. Much of the work of the convention, the holding of caucuses and the like, will be completed Monday.

Tomorrow's discussions will be highly informal and the hour and place for them have not been set, Mr. Sterling said. He hopes to iron out any possible controversial issues before the start of the convention.

Hopes to Unite Party

The publisher had but one statement to make, and that was that he believed the convention would "reunite the party and do away with the factionalism that has been harming it."

That belief seemed to be held generally by Sterling forces here. While nothing official had been obtained, it was believed certain among observers that one chance for disharmony would lie in the state highway bond issue proposal which Mr. Sterling espoused during the campaign. Some of those close to him, it has been learned, have suggested the inclusion of a bond issue plank in the platform to be adopted, but it was not known whether later conferences had or would result in the Sterling forces not insisting on the point. One thing seemed reasonably certain, that if such a plank were had it would follow the lines of the candidate's stated thought on the matter all along, that he merely recommends the plan to the electorate, without any desire to seek to force its adoption.

Dry Plank Mentioned

One other plank, it has been revealed, will be devoted to a demand for the enforcement of prohibition. If original plans are followed, however, it will be brief. In connection with the dry issue, the Texas Woman's Democratic association will meet in Galveston Monday, hoping, according to its leaders, to be able to exert a great deal of influence in the platform making.

Concerning the personnel of the convention it has been learned from an authoritative source that Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman, leader in the Key West Texas territory for Sterling during the campaign will be favored for temporary chairman and keynoter. Several names have been mentioned in connection with the permanent chairmanship, that of Murphy Townsend of Dallas, North Texas Sterling chairman, most frequently.

Republicans Hopeful

DALLAS, Sept. 6. (AP)—Dissatisfaction within the ranks of the Democratic party with Ross S. Sterling's nomination for governor indicates that Dr. George Butte, Republican nominee, has a fine chance to be elected in November, R. B. Creager of Brownsville, Republican national committeeman, said here today.

Creager was en route to San Angelo, where the state Republican convention will meet Tuesday. The executive committee will meet Monday.

He expressed confidence the state convention would adopt a platform plank expressing opposition to the proposed state-wide bond issue. He said complete revision of the existing Texas election laws would be advocated.

"Personally I would like to see the primary abolished and a return to the convention system of nominating candidates," Creager said.

San Angelo Prepared

SAN ANGELO, Sept. 6. — When the Republicans of Texas meet here next week Mayor A. A. Glover of San Angelo will welcome them and R. B. Creager, national committeeman, will give the response.

The convention is to open formally at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning but a grand Republican ball will be held Monday night on a local hotel roof garden. The convention sessions will last through Wednesday.

The San Angelo Municipal auditorium has been reserved for the business sessions which open Sept. 9. C. O. Harris, George Fay and P. C. Beard, West Texas G. O. P. leaders, Doss Berry, Board of City Development manager and E. C. Tootham of Dallas are in charge of arrangements.

WESTERN AUTO EXCHANGE NEW USED CAR DEALER

Mr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. McClure have been in the automobile business in Wichita Falls for the past 15 years.

Beauty Parlor Is Dynamited After Bargain Wave Cut

CHICAGO, Sept. 6. (INS) — War-like hostilities among Chicago beauty shops assumed ominous proportions today when the second bomb in 24 hours wrecked the front of the Betty Beauty shop on Cicero avenue.

The explosion, caused by a black powder bomb, shattered the establishment's interior and equipment, causing a damage estimated at $1,000. The shop's proprietor admitted having cut prices on permanent waves.

Witnesses said the explosive was tossed from an automobile occupied by two men and a woman.

COMPLETE SURVEY UPPER MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HELD

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6. (UP)—Secretary of War Hurley and his official party completed their survey of the upper Mississippi river today and conferred with officials and business men here concerning the needs of the drouth-lowered stream below this point.

Shortly before his boat, The General Allen, arrived here Hurley let it be known he had ordered an investigation of reports that private contractors doing river work for the government were reducing wages below the scale which obtained when their contracts were awarded. He also made public instructions to Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers, directing him not to lower the pay of government employes on the river.

Early in the afternoon Hurley entered his personal plane at Parks airport and took off for Tulsa, where he is to address an American Legion convention. The secretary plans to return here Monday and to continue his inspection tour.

"What I've seen here has convinced me that the barge lines are certainly putting commerce back upon the river," Hurley said.

Hurley's investigation of labor conditions on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers was impelled by reports that certain contractors had lowered their wage scales from 45 to 25 cents per hour, even though their contracts were awarded on the basis of the higher wage. He appointed Lieut. Col. George R. Spaulding, division engineer for the upper Mississippi, Ohio and Missouri rivers, to conduct the inquiry.

HIGHWAY PROJECTS COSTING $200,000 WILL BE AWARDED

AUSTIN, Sept. 6. (AP)—Improvement of 22.3 miles of state highways in Bowie, Carson and Cottle counties was announced today by the state highway department. The estimated cost of the three projects is $200,000 and brings the total of the contracts scheduled to be awarded by the highway commission Sept. 15 and 16 to $1,726,000.

The Bowie county project calls for the construction of highway 8 of 8.3 miles of double bituminous paving on a gravel base course with limestone binder from one mile south of the Texas and Pacific railroad crossing at New Boston to highway one at Corley. The estimated cost is $80,000.

The Carson county work consists of the construction of drainage structures and grading of 9.9 miles of highway 75 from near Conway to the Potter county line at a cost of $20,000.

In Cottle county, 4.1 miles of concrete paving will be constructed on highway 28 from Paducah, northeast. The contract also calls for the erection of 1,430 feet of wire mesh guard fence at dangerous points. The estimate for this work is $100,000.

Previous to today, the highway department announced road and bridge projects in other counties estimated to cost $1,526,000.

MEXICO MOVES TO NATIONALIZE ALL PROTESTANT LANDS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 6. (AP)—Newspapers said this evening the government had filed a petition in the sixth district court to nationalize all property of the Methodist Episcopal church in Mexico.

It was understood this is the first step toward nationalization of the property of all Protestant churches in Mexico, a movement to put them on the same footing as the Catholic church, the property of which is considered as owned by the nation.

The press announcement added that 14 buildings in Mexico City alone owned by the Methodist church will become national property if the government's petition is granted.

WORLD WHEAT CROP SHOWS INCREASE NEAR 3 PER CENT

Reports of 26 Countries Included in Survey

EUROPEAN FEED GRAINS DECREASE 16 PER CENT

Mill Stocks of Cotton 7.5 Per Cent Off Last Year's Record

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—A world wheat crop of 2,337,139,000 bushels, an increase of almost three per cent over last year, was forecast today by the department of agriculture on the basis of reports from 26 countries.

Reports from 19 countries indicated a world rye crop of 814,436,000 bushels or about 2 per cent less than last year's production.

European production of feed grains—corn, barley and oats— was reported to total 29,788,000 short tons, as compared with 35,572,000 short tons last year, or a decrease over 16 per cent.

Rumanian Crop Unknown

The feed grain survey did not include specific figures on the Rumanian crop, which are not available. The latter is estimated at about two-thirds of its total production for last year, which would mean a decrease in European production of more than 18 per cent.

The European corn crop was given as 2,356,000 short tons for 1930 as compared with 2,968,000 short tons last year; oats 14,524,000 short tons this year as against 18,315,000 last year; and barley 12,906,000 short tons for 1930 as compared with 14,269,000 for 1929.

World mill consumption of cotton of all growths was set at 25,209,000 running bales for the year ended July 31, 1930, as compared with 25,882,000 bales for the previous corresponding year, a decrease of 2.6 per cent.

Total mill consumption of American cotton for the season 1929-30 was given as 13,023,000 running bales against 15,076,000 bales the previous season, a decrease of 13.6 per cent. Consumption of American cotton in the United States during the 1929-30 season was reported as 14.3 per cent below the previous season.

Cotton Decrease 7.5 Per Cent

World mill stocks of all growths of cotton on July 31, last, was reported to total 4,498,000 running bales as compared with 4,863,000 running bales on the same date in 1929, a decrease of 7.5 per cent. World mill stocks of American cotton were given as 1,985,000 running bales this year against 2,129,000 bales on July 31, 1929, a decrease of 6.8 per cent.

Stocks of American cotton in United States mills on July 31, this year, were set at 1,048,000 running bales, as compared with 932,000 bales last year.

A preliminary estimate of wool shorn in the United States this year placed the total at 328,000,000 pounds, or 5 per cent more than in 1929. Present indications were said to point to a world wool clip, exclusive of Russia, not greatly different from that of last year, although a small reduction is expected in the Australian clip.

DRIVERS WARNED NOT TO CROSS FIRE HOSE

A reminder that it is a violation of law to drive across a fire hose was given Saturday by Frank Burns, chief of police, after nine drivers had been cited to appear in police court on charges of that nature late Friday.

Several of the defendants, the chief said, declared that they did not know they were violating the law.

Further Hearings Community Chest Scheduled Monday

Protests from several of the participating organizations in the Wichita Falls Community Chest were heard Saturday by the budget, endorsement and campaign committee, and a few were postponed until Monday morning at 10 o'clock, when the committee will meet again.

No action has been taken on any of the protests, the tentative budget as proposed last Wednesday standing until a final action is taken by the committee. The tentative total was $75,000, as voted in Wednesday's meeting, and the appropriations for the Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and Y. W. C. A. suffered drastic cuts, while that of the Family Relief society was almost doubled.

Following the definite announcement of the budget by the committee, the campaign will begin, under the direction of the American City bureau. Linden E. Brooks, representative of the bureau, is already in the city and is jointly directing the work with President J. F. O'Donohoe and Mrs. J. O. Bentley, executive secretary, at the new chest campaign headquarters, 815 Scott.

Both Mr. Brooks and Mrs. Bentley may be reached at the new headquarters during office hours. The phone number is 2-0727.

CHARGE GOVERNOR LONG SIX OTHERS WITH CONSPIRACY

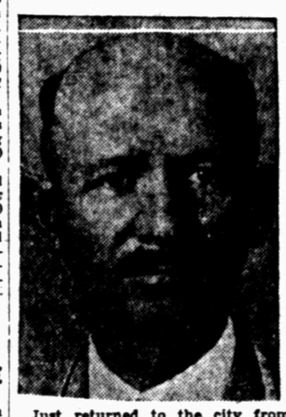

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 6. (UP)—Charges of conspiracy to kidnap were filed against Gov. Huey P. Long and six other men here today.

The charges resulted from the alleged abduction of Samuel Irby and James Terrell during a secret state highway investigation at Shreveport last night.

Others named in the charges filed in United States district court were Dave McConnell, brother-in-law of Governor Long, and five members of the state bureau of criminal identification.

The charges were filed in the form of a writ of habeas corpus which orders the defendants to appear before the court Sept. 8.

The "abduction," it is charged, was concocted by "Governor Long, McConnell, and John E. Fleury, district attorney in Jefferson parish."

High Blood Pressure and Stomach Troubles

Gallstone and gall-bladder sufferers have had early warning through some slight derangement of the stomach. Many of the very worst cases of high blood pressure are due to liver troubles and intestinal toxemia.

Fatal heart failure is often heart block, caused by intestinal and stomach poison.

Muco-colitis has its early history of catarrhal stomach, and nearly all cases of rectal troubles are accompanied by constipation and intestinal diseases. Many great scientists believe that cancer is caused by an intestinal ferment.

The low blood pressure of tuberculosis and catarrhal conditions has an early history of hyperacidity and so on through a long list of diseases.

The Health Service Doctors are affiliated with three large health institutes of the East and the Southeast, at Newark, N. J., Atlanta, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala., which insures everyone who calls on them the latest method for relief of deep-seated chronic conditions.

They offer every modern facility for the treatment of stomach and intestinal troubles, disease of the blood, nerves, rheumatism, diabetes, high or low blood pressure, diseases of the rectum and special diseases of men and women.

Wasserman blood tests are only $3. Consultation is free. The Health Service Institute is permanently located in Wichita Falls. Office hours daily 9 to 5; Wednesday and Saturday evenings 7 to 8; Sundays 10 to 12 only.

FORMER KLAN HEAD TO BE CHARGED AS DOPE RING LEADER

GARY, Ind., Sept. 6. (INS)—Ralph B. Bradford, political power in Lake county, Indiana, and leader in the Ku Klux Klan when it was functioning, was to surrender late today to answer charges of using the mails for transportation of narcotics.

Bradford charges the allegations are the result of a political frame-up.

Robert Moore and Harry Long, attorneys for Bradford, said they had arranged for Bradford to surrender before a United States commissioner. The attorneys wanted a promise of an immediate trial.

Government agents allege that Bradford is head of a narcotic distributing syndicate whose ramifications are nation-wide. For months they state, he and several men at New Orleans had been under surveillance.

The agents allege that they traced a package of dope from New Orleans to Bradford's office. The package was received yesterday, they said, and was accepted by Miss Martha Machacek, Bradford's secretary who was arrested at the time. She was released under $500 bail but later re-arrested and held incommunicado.

By employing a food supervisor members of two sororities and a fraternity at Kansas State Agricultural college ate for 46.1 cents a day each.

GIRL PLUNGES TO HER DEATH AS FRIEND DEPARTS FOR PARIS

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (US)—As Beatrice Turrell went joyously to the French liner de Grasse today prepared to sail for Paris, a heart-broken young woman she had left behind, plunged to her death from a Times Square hotel.

The victim of the tragic suicide was Gwendolyn N. Ballard, an attractive young woman who had given her address as the Prospect apartment, Milwaukee. She leaped from a room she had shared with Miss Turrell since September 4 on the ninth floor of the Hotel Knickerbocker.

The force of her leap carried her 25 feet from the hotel. She plunged through the roof of a small workshop.

Miss Ballard left a note saying she loved Beatrice too much to go on without her.

GRAFT OF MILLION PER DAY CHARGED FILM PRODUCERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (US)—Charges were made today that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America collect $1,000,000 a day from the moving picture industry unjustly and without accounting for its expenditures.

The charges were made by Ivan Abramson, independent producer, who is suing the organization for $1,300,000, and Nathan D. Periman, his attorney. They contend that the Producers and Distributors corporation by controlling 90 per cent of production, distribution and exhibition facilities have forced huge losses on independent picture makers. Abramson declared that the Graphic Film corporation, which he controls, lost more than $400,000.

Periman said that the corporation was exercising a government function if it levied five per cent taxes. He said he would ask to be shown how the company paid its own income taxes.

Virtually all the important motion picture companies are members of the general organization, Abramson contended that Loew and other members of it grossly inflated the value of their stocks.

POLICE SEEK MAN AFTER WOMAN LOSES PURSE HERE

Police were seeking a man Saturday night who disappeared with a purse containing $15 and a $10 check belonging to Mrs. J. O. Cowart, wife of an attorney here, after she had dropped it at Seventh and Indiana while stepping out of her car.

Mrs. Cowart did not discover her loss immediately, but others said they had noticed the man pick up the purse and go to a department store. He was trailed there, but while Mrs. Cowart and others were looking through the store, police were informed, he drove away in an automobile.

Police said that they had been supplied with the license number of the car.

SECOND PARLEY ON DROUTH SITUATION PLANNED BY HYDE

Conference Proposed as Conditions Become More Acute

REPORTS SHOW SERIOUS PLIGHT THROUGHOUT U. S.

State Chairmen Will Be Called to Tell of Relief Means

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Secretary of Agriculture Hyde is contemplating another conference of state representatives to consider drouth conditions.

The proposed conference, for which no date has been set, would consider all phases of the problem which has become more acute since governors of affected states met with President Hoover in early August.

Hyde is chairman of the national drouth committee. His present plan is to summon chairmen of state committees to Washington, probably this month. Calling the conference was delayed until reports could be had from the 120,000 questionnaires circulated by the department to individuals in mid-August.

40,000 Replies

About 40,000 replies have been received so far. They show serious drouth conditions must be dealt with this autumn and during the winter in more than a score of states. The lower Mississippi and the Ohio valleys have suffered the greatest loss. Arkansas possesses less than 30 per cent of its normal feed supplies. Other states in the acute area are short 50 per cent of the hay and grain normally produced there.

State chairmen will be asked to inform Hyde of the creation of relief agencies. By the time the chairmen reach Washington, which should be some time this month, it is expected agricultural credit corporations will have been established in all drouth areas. These corporations, privately owned, will be go-betweens with the borrowing farmer on one hand and the funds of federal intermediate credit banks on the other. Organization of the corporations will be by private subscription to their capital stock. These subscriptions will be the responsibility of local communities. There are no federal funds for emergency relief.

Charity Aid Anticipated

Farmers unable to provide collateral indorsed notes must depend upon the Red Cross or local charity for relief, according to President Hoover's program.

So far there has been no national distribution of Red Cross funds. Chairman John Barton Payne allocated $5,000,000 from the national Red Cross treasury last month and the sum still is intact, the United Press was informed. But federal and state officials familiar with drouth conditions predict charity funds will have to be disbursed this winter.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS URGED TO BE VIGILANT UNTIL STORM IS OVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (US) — Lighthouse keepers along the Florida keys and the Gulf of Mexico were warned today by the commerce department to exercise extraordinary vigilance until the West Indian hurricane blows over.

While the storm is known to have lost much of its force, there is considerable danger of sudden squalls menacing small shipping.

Some of the most important lighthouses in the country are situated in the Florida straits and along the Gulf coast. The storms of the past few years have done nearly $200,000 worth of damage to these lighthouses.

COLUMBIA SYSTEM TO BROADCAST CEREMONIES WHITE HOUSE MONDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting system today announced it would broadcast the ceremonies at the White House Monday when President Hoover receives Coste and Bellonte and that a broadcast in Europe was to be attempted by the British Broadcasting corporation.

Colonel Lindbergh, Rear Admiral Byrd and Maj. Eddie Rickenbacker, war time ace, are expected to speak in the broadcast.

WICHITA FALLS POLO TEAM ENTERS TOURNEY

EL RENO, Okla., Sept. 6. (UP)—Seven of the leading polo teams in the Southwest will start play Sunday in the fourth annual polo tournament at Fort Reno.

Entries have been received from Norman, Fort Sill, Tulsa, Fort Reno, and Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Crowell, Texas. The Fort Sill team, that is making a bid for the national title, is one of the pre-tournament favorites.

Tulsa and Fort Worth will be represented by recently organized teams. The Oklahoma university polo ists will be here from Norman.

Maj. Henry Weeks, commandant at Fort Reno, will be in charge of the tournament.

Action Not Surprise

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 6. (AP)—Bishop Horace M. DuBose, of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, said tonight that the filing by the Mexican government of a petition seeking to nationalize all property of the Methodist Episcopal church in Mexico was not unexpected.

He explained that the Methodist church in Mexico was being organized as a national church, and it was expected, when the move was planned, the government of Mexico would "nationalize," or assume ownership of the church property.

The Methodist churches in the United States will continue their missionary work in Mexico, Bishop DuBose said, but the congregations already established there will form a Mexican conference, and no longer will be a missionary enterprise.

ABE MARTIN ON GOSSIP

"They Say"

"We're too credulous, too quick to believe, an' too easily taken in," declared Hon. Ex-Editur Cale Fluhart, in a recent luncheon club speech. "We're all too busy to investigate, to use our heads, to do our own thinkin'. We all go too much by hearsay, an' newspaper headlines. We don't do enough readin' down the columns. Right now ther's all sorts o' gossipin' about 'the times,' an' the gossips have got this man or that man, or this business institution, or that business institution, on the eve of a collapse. The tongue waggin' about 'the times' has resulted in all sorts of sensational gossip. Really I think we're gettin' adjusted to the little business reaction the same as we git used to a cold snap. Never ask a business man how business is. In all the long, glorious history o' this nation business wuz never good enough to suit a business man. Ther's been so much said about crime in Chicago that we imagine we kin hear the rattle o' machine guns ever' time the city is mentioned. We're surprised when we meet some one from Chicago. We expect to see 'em bandaged up, an' we wonder how they ever got out o' town through the hail o' bullets. We've almost come to the point where we believe the farmers are starvin'. We pass a farm an' wonder if the whole family hain't huddled on the livin' room floor cryin' fer help, strainin', in their weakened condition, to attract the attention o' some passin' motorist. Prob'ly the agriculturist hain't doin' anything big in the way o' makin' money, but he kin go out in the orchard an' knock off a hen, or go in the barn an' get a hat full o' eggs, or go in his garden an' spade up some potatoes, or grab off some tomatoes. The farmer, if he's enterprisin', kin live on 'milk an' honey', fer anyone kin raise bees. Some o' the greatest minds in the country, an' ex-president among 'em, are today directin' all ther talents to debunkin' the nation in regard to 'the times.' People don't seem to want to hear sweet, pleasant things. They're off o' optimists. Ther's too much gossip in' an' knockin'. So few people seem to like to hear about some one doin' well. If we tell somebuddy that Joe Kite is a fine, clean feller an' makin' money they'll walk out on you, but if you intimate that he's on the verge of failin', an' that his wife has gone to her folks fer good, they'll git interested in a second."

MICHIGAN VOTERS CHOOSE NOMINEES ON NEXT TUESDAY

Principal Interest Centers in Republican Race for Senator

SENATOR COUZENS HAS FIGHT FOR RENOMINATION

Opposed by Former Governor Who Claims to Be 'Regular'

DETROIT, Sept. 6. (AP)—Contests for the Republican nominations for 10 major offices and for two Democratic congressional nominations will be decided by the voters of Michigan in the state-wide primary next Tuesday. The Republican nomination in each race is regarded as practically equivalent to election.

The campaigns have been devoid of general issues, except in the race for United States Senator where Senator James Couzens' opponent, Chase S. Osborn, former governor, has dwelt on "party regularity," and in a few congressional districts where the prohibition question has been raised.

Couzens has accepted the brand of "independent and irregular" and neither he nor Osborn has discussed the wet-dry issue. Osborn was described by the Michigan anti-saloon league as a "staunch prohibitionist," but he was not specifically endorsed. Couzens' position is that the prohibition amendment is a mistake but that he will support enforcement so long as it is in effect.

Contest for Governor

The contest for the Republican nomination for governor, while a three-cornered one, has been, in effect, a renewal of the ancient feud between Alex J. Groesbeck, three times governor, and the incumbent, Fred W. Green, who beat him four years ago and now is retiring at the end of his second term. Groesbeck is running for the office, and Green has given his support to Wilber M. Bruckner, attorney general of the state.

The third candidate in this race is Judge Edward J. Jeffries of Detroit, a Democrat until this year when he declined the gubernatorial nomination of that party.

The Democratic candidates for senator and governor have no opposition in their own party. They are, respectively, Thomas A. E. Weadock and William A. Comstock, both of Detroit.

The prohibition issue has received the most attention in the sixth district, where Grant M. Hudson is running for renomination with a strong endorsement from the anti-saloon league. He has three opponents, State Senator Seymour H. Person; Mrs. Maud Slocum Moross and Robert H. Cook. The sixth district is the largest in population and voting strength in the United States, and incorporating several large cities and part of Detroit. Its population is estimated at 1,300,000.

GOLF TOURNAMENT DALLAS NEXT YEAR AT STEVENS PARK

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP)—The 1931 tournament of the Texas Public Golf association will be held in Dallas. The Stevens park course of that city was chosen as the site for next year's event at a banquet and business meeting of the association tonight.

The name of the golf body was changed from the Texas Municipal Golf association to the Texas Public Golf association. The change in the name becomes effective with the 1931 tournament.

John R. Noble of Dallas, present vice president, was promoted to the office of president for 1931. He held the same position in 1929 when the event was staged at Waco. Noble succeeds Joe Frazer of Fort Worth.

Francis McGonagill of Dallas was chosen as secretary treasurer to succeed Rube Barry of Fort Worth. McGonagill also was named as one of the six vice presidents. Heretofore, there have been only five vice presidents but the sixth was added at Saturday night's meeting. Five were chosen with the sixth to be selected from Waco by President Noble. The others named in addition to McGonagill were M. G. Boone, Wichita Falls; Leonard Harding, Fort Worth; Jack Dold, Houston, and Dale Hilton, San Antonio.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 6. (UP)—Condemning the 18th amendment as a law that "would put Jesus in jail for a year and a day," T. B. Bradley, El Paso, supported a resolution condemning the dry law at the convention of the Texas State Spiritualist association here Saturday afternoon.

The resolution was voted down. In a poll among the delegates, 33 admitted they had drunk liquor since arriving in the border city, while 21 affirmed they had not touched intoxicants.

C. L. Sharp, pastor of the Light of Truth church, Fort Worth, was elected president, and A. Cerin, Taylor, vice president of the association.

PRIMARY ON TUESDAY ENDS BITTER CAMPAIGN

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 6. (UP)—Primary election campaign involving charges of excessive expenditures and attacks on propriety of the state's Anti-Saloon league's endorsements, drew toward a close in Colorado tonight. The election will be held next Tuesday.

Five aspirants for the two senatorial nominations have made the contests the most bitter in recent political history of the state.

WORLD POLITICAL HEADS IN GENEVA FOR LEAGUE PARLEY

GENEVA, Sept. 6. (AP)—Geneva hummed with discussion of international questions tonight as political leaders began arriving for the league of nations council, beginning Monday, and the annual league assembly session, which convenes Wednesday.

Premier Briand's European union plan, the British administration of Palestine, and German agitation for treaty revision, were the most discussed topics.

The Briand project will be debated Monday afternoon when the French minister reports on his survey of possibilities. The consensus here seemed to be that in view of reservations by several governments the European union scheme will be given to a special commission for another year's study.

KILLS STEPDAUGHTER AND HIMSELF RESULT WORRY OVER TROUBLES

PIGGOTT, Ark., Sept. 6. (AP)—Worry over financial troubles and the plight of a son suffering with a broken back was assigned tonight as the reason for Hood Hitt, 54, wealthy operator of a modern farm near here, killing his stepdaughter and then shooting himself to death.

The double tragedy was witnessed only by a 2-year-old nephew of the slain woman, Alice Gertrude McCormick, 33. The child was sitting on an ironing board at which Miss McCormick was working when Hitt walked in and without warning fired a shotgun charge into the body of the woman.

He then reloaded the gun and fired it at his head. He died about three hours later.

Members of the family said Hitt had never had a serious quarrel with the stepdaughter. They believed worry over financial reverses, over his son's condition, and over the fact that Hitt soon was to submit to a serious operation, temporarily unbalanced him.

MOVE TO RAISE FUNDS TO FINISH STONE MOUNTAIN

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 6. (AP)—The Constitution says $2,500,000 will be sought in every section of the United States for renewal of work on the Confederate memorial on Stone mountain with Gutzon Borglum, the original sculptor in charge.

The memorial under plans to be made public tomorrow at a mass meeting here at which Borglum will be the chief speaker, would be twice the size of the original memorial conceived by Borglum in the size of the figures of Confederate principals.

A memorial park to be established in connection with the memorial is not included in the $2,500,000 estimated cost, the paper said. The actual cost of the park is said to be small in comparison with the memorial proper.

Borglum's plans, the Constitution reveals, is for completion of the greater memorial within five years.

Transportation specialists watching the French army maneuvers were forced to find horses to haul the army kitchens along with the troops after the motor trucks had failed. The specialists said it was too early to draw definite conclusions, but admitted that the motor service had shown great weakness. They said some of the new motor units consumed so much gasoline that they were able to carry little beside their own fuel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (UP)—Mother Jones, 100-year-old veteran of countless labor battles, has torn up her will and given all her savings to the cause of labor, it was learned today.

Holds Record for Speed in Drinking Two Quarts Beer

PARIS, Sept. 6. (UP)—Another world record has gone down, that of "speed-in-drinkin'-two-quarts-of-beer."

Formerly held by Jack Frost, who claimed Harvard as his alma mater, it is now possessed by John MacGrath, of Oklahoma City. Frost had drained the two-quart glass in 17 seconds flat, but MacGrath, before witnesses, quaffed his half-gallon in 12 1-5 seconds, which promises to stand for some time.

These championships take place in an American bar of Paris, patronized by thirsty tourists. The two-quart glass stands permanently on the bar to tempt the thirsty. The only rule is that if you drain the glass you do not pay for your beer. If you stop with any beer left in the glass, you pay.

He said he sank $700 in the river and then his companion, who escaped, had the remainder of the money with him. The name of the other bandit was known to officers.

FINANCE WIZARDS MOST POWERFUL PROHIBITION FOES

OXFORD, Ohio, Sept. 6. (UP)—A little group of multimillionaires is the most "powerful obstacle to building up sentiment for enforcement of prohibition laws," Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, told the Ohio Methodist Episcopal church conference here last night.

Cherrington also accused the unnamed group of "financial wizards" with fostering the idea of having income tax burden removed from great corporations and placed upon industrial workers.

"Other anti-social forces have been augmented by a half dozen multimillionaires," Cherrington said, "interested from another point of view, thus tending to submerge the liquor issue in the larger issue as to whether a small obligarchy, controlling vast business interests, may dictate political action to the federal government.

"Evidence uncovered by the senate lobby investigation committee, and the testimony of 25 leaders in that investigation, demonstrates beyond a doubt that the 18th amendment and the prohibition law are making marvelous headway in actually decreasing the manufacture, sale and consumption of beverage alcohol. This fact is responsible for the tremendous propaganda efforts of this small group of financial wizards."

The second indictment charges embezzlement of $18,000 from the same association.

GROUPS SEARCH FOR DRY AGENT

Ray Sutton Disappears on August 28

RATON, N. M., Sept. 6. (AP)—One hundred men, divided into several groups were sent out of Raton this morning by Federal Prohibition Director Charles Stearns to search the mountains for Prohibition Agent Ray Sutton, who disappeared Aug. 28.

As the belief spread that Sutton may have been killed by bootleggers, feeling became more tense in Raton and business men left their work to join the search, while many friends of Sutton in Clayton left their business to come to Raton.

The search, halted yesterday evening by a heavy rain, was renewed this morning and Mr. Stearns went to Trinidad at noon to meet the pilot of a Colorado national guard plane which is being sent to help.

Trinidad will be the base of operations for the plane, and Stearns took with him a guide who will accompany the national guard pilot in his flight over the Colfax county mountains.

The weather was cloudy at Raton today and there was some doubt whether the plane would be able to accomplish very much today. Because of poor visibility.

Shortly before he disappeared Sutton told friends here he had located three stills in Dawson county and was about ready to raid them.

COUNTY TEACHERS HEAR ADDRESSES CLOSING INSTITUTE

IOWA PARK, Texas, Sept. 6.—Addresses by outstanding education officials brought to a close Saturday the annual Wichita county institute held at the W. F. George High school in a two day session.

Music was furnished by the Triangle band under the direction of Karl Goetze, and invocation was pronounced by J. P. Speedman of the Cashion school.

In an open discussion of the coming Wichita County fair, to be held at Iowa Park, H. V. Williams, Clara school superintendent, urged all schools of the county to have booths and displays during the event. Schools are to be given three classifications, those having one to three teachers, those having four to seven, and those having eight or more teachers.

Dr. H. L. Pritchett, head of the sociology department of S. M. U., Dallas, made an analytical address during the morning on "Dreams and Their Effect on Child Life." At a luncheon served at the First Baptist church by the Iowa Park P. T. A., Dr. J. W. Cantwell, of Wichita Falls talked on the subject, "Character Building as a Part of the National Program This Year."

During the luncheon, Burl Bryant, retiring county superintendent, was given a desk set and watch chain and fob as gifts from the institute. Presentations were made by Supt. D. W. Bradford of the Iowa Park school and Miss Opal Langer of the City View school.

About 125 teachers of the county attended the meeting.

WILDCAT COMPLETIONS IN COOKE AND YOUNG FEATURE WEEK

Much Drilling Likely to Follow Bringing In of 250-Barrel Well By Lloyd Company in New Section

By JIMMIE MAXWELL

Development of the different pools throughout the district during the week resulted in the completion of a pair of wildcats, one in the extreme southeast portion of Cooke county, and the other one and a half miles northwest of the McKanna-Texas producer on the Jefferys farm in Young county. New locations were staked out, the greater number being in the shallow areas in the territory south of Olney, and in the pool north of Newcastle. Dry holes also featured the week's happenings.

TATUMS FIELD GETS TWO NEW OIL PRODUCERS

Franklin and Trevlyn Find Good Sands During Week

1,000-BARRELER ADDED TO CEMENT DISTRICT

Deepening of Magnolia Test Increases Crude Yield

ARDMORE, Okla., Sept. 6.—Two new producers were added to the Tatums district in Carter county during the past week. Only one new location was staked in the area, and a large number of tests are shut down on account of shortage of water.

Wirt Franklin Petroleum corporation No. 2 E. R. Spigner in the northwest corner of 24-1s-3w, was swabbed in and made 553 barrels of oil in its first 12-hour gauge. Production is coming from sand found between 2144 and total depth at 2285 feet.

Trevlyn Oil company's No. 3 Mitchell in the northeast of the southwest of the southeast of 24-1s-3w, swabbed 1397 barrels of oil during its initial 24-hour gauge from sand at 2212-2365 feet. It is shut in for the 16-day proration period, after which it will be allowed to produce only 100 barrels of oil daily. Total depth is 2410 feet.

Wirt Franklin has staked location for No. 4 Mitchell in the northeast of the southeast of the southeast of 24-1s-3w, on the southeast edge of the extension. His Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Mitchell, all new producers in the southeast quarter of 24-1s-3w, are on proration. The No. 2 Mitchell, most recent completion, flowed 1,070 barrels of oil during initial 24-hour gauge. Franklin is building a standard front for No. 2 James Hooks, SW-NW-NE section 24-1s-3w, producer, and has resumed drilling after cementing surface casing at 44 feet in No. 3 James Hooks, in the southeast of the northwest of the northeast of 24-1s-3w.

Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 2 E. W. Spigner, SE-NE-NW section 24-1s-3w, is cementing nine-inch casing at 2035 feet with total depth at 2045 feet. No. 8 Ethel Gill in the southeast corner of the northeast of 23-1s-3w, has casing cemented at 2261 feet with total depth at 2271 feeet.

Other Magnolia operations including more than a dozen locations, drilling wells and wells cemented on the sand, are shut down for water.

Trevlyn Oil company's No. 3 Spigner in the southeast of the southwest of the northwest of 24-1s-3w, has casing cemented at 2325 feet on oil sand just topped at that depth and is shut down waiting for cement to harden.

M. G. R. Oil company is skidding derrick to location for No. 1 W. E. Mitchell in the northwest of the southeast of the southeast of 24-1s-3w.

Amos Drilling company's No. 1 Hooks, in the southeast of the southwest of the southeast of 13-1s-3w, is drilling below 2000 feet.

C. L. Anderson's No. 4 Eaves in the northeast corner of the southwest of 24-1s-3w, is drilling below 2150 feet. No. 5 Eaves, in the northwest of the northeast of the southwest of 24-1s-3w, is a rig. No. 6 Eaves in the northeast of the northwest of the southwest of 24-1s-3w, is a location.

Vernon, Hale & Hudson are building derrick for No. 1 Son-Kine in the northwest of the southwest of the southwest of 19-1s-2w, about a quarter of a mile southeast of production.

Carter Oil company's No. 1 Joe Franklin in the northeast of the northwest of the northeast of 24-1s-3w, on the northeast edge of the feld, has casing cemented after logging broken oil sand at 2063 feet. Total depth is 2243 feet.

Gant & Garvin's No. 1 Meeks in the southwest corner of 19-1s-2w, a fourth of a mile southeast of production in the extension area, topped oil sand at 2233 feet, and after drilling more than 100 feet in, have cemented the casing and are shut down for cement to harden. This test, when completed, will extend production in the field and cause the drilling of several new wells.

The Cement field in Caddo county is drawing considerable interest again with the completion of a new 1,000-barrel well and the finding of a new pay at a greater depth.

Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 8, Caddo-Rowe in the southeast of the southwest of the northeast of 36-6n-10w, is flowing around 1,000 barrels of oil daily from a series of sands found between 3163 and 3360 feet. The well was first brought in and was swabbing around 50 barrels of oil daily with total depth at 3328 feet but was later deepened to present total depth for the increase in production.

Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company and Ramsey Petroleum corporation's No. 6 Bert Lackey in the northeast of the northwest of the northwest of 11-5n-9w, is cementing casing at 4857 feet on top of broken sand showing oil and gas drilled through at 4971 feet. Total depth is 5000 feet. The deep 4000-foot sand was entirely missed in this test. Operators believe that it will probably be completed as a gasser. No. 2 Mildred Surbeck in the southeast of the southwest of the southwest of 2-5n-9w, was bailed in and had started flowing from sand at 3923-70 feet. However, no gauge was available.

Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 9 F. A. Niles in the northeast corner of the northwest of 36-6n-10w, had completed drilling plugs and was preparing to bail in. It had casing cemented at 2723 feet after a series of sands showing oil was logged between that depth and total depth at 3500 feet.

The same operator is rigging up cleanout tools at No. 8 Lindsey in the northeast of the northwest of the southeast of 36-6n-10w. A series of oil sands was logged in this test between 2127 and 3366 feet. No. 9 Lindsey in the northwest of the northeast of the southeast of 36-6n-10w, new producer, swabbed 368 barrels of oil in a late 24-hour gauge.

NEW OIL FIELD INDICATED FOR ECTOR COUNTY

Southern Crude Company Brings in Promising Wildcat

WELL IN PECOS MAY PROVIDE EXTENSION

Royalty Buying Stimulated By Showings in Basin Area

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Sept. 6.—The apparent definite opening of a new oil pool by Southern Crude Oil Purchasing company's No. 1 Cowden, northern Ector county wildcat, which made its first flow Thursday morning, an estimated 35 to 40 barrels in 12 to 15 minutes at a total depth of 4,171 feet in lime and green shale, was the outstanding oil development this week in the West Texas Permian basin.

Of secondary interest was a quarter-mile east extension of the Taylor-Link field in Pecos county, an indicated east extension of deep production in Howard county and continued gains by wells in Reagan county that produce from depths ranging from 8220 to 8923 feet.

Southern Crude's strike in north Ector was hailed as one of the most important in the Permian basin this year and stimulated royalty buying, in which San Angelo-ans figured heavily, few, if any leases, being available. No. 1 Cowden bailed a small amount of free oil from showings at 4062-65 and 4075-80 feet in lime, the top of which was picked up by the operators at 4020 feet, 970 feet below sea level. Oil began rising 100 feet hourly early Wednesday when an increase was obtained at 4130-35 feet. There was another increase at 4148-51 feet, with the best increase at 4161-67 feet, gas rising there from an estimated 200,000 to around 1,000,000 cubic feet.

The well sprayed for about 10 minutes early Thursday morning, then slopped over several times before it made its first head about 10:30 o'clock. No storage was available but drilling continued from 4171 feet. The oil tested 29.8 gravity, corrected. This is about the same gravity as the oil in Deep Rock and others' producers in Andrews county 21 miles to the northwest. At 4171 feet Southern Crude's No. 1 Cowden had not reached the Andrews pay horizon. Next nearest production is in the Penn pool in southeastern Ector county, near Judkins, just south of the T. & P. railroad. Location is 2310 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the west line of section 26, block 43, township one north, T. & P. Ry. Co. survey, on a Southern Crude block of six sections out of the ranch of J. M. Cowden & Son of Midland.

Well Gets Pay

In the Penn pool, Cosden's No. 5-B University in section 2, block 35, had pay from 3565 to 3668 feet, drilled to 3672 feet and flowed 155 barrels of oil in 24 hours. The well may not be shot until proration requirements are slackened. Production by Skelly-Amerada's No. 1-C University, in section 2, block 35, was more than doubled by shooting with 240 quarts from 3450 to 3560 feet, the well flowing 255 barrels the first 86 hours, four hours of which time it was on a 40-64-inch choke on account of storage. Before the shot the well flowed 65 barrels in 16 hours.

Humble's No. 1 Jones, in the southwest corner of section 6, block 44, topped the pay at 3530 feet and in drilling to 3590 feet produced 60 barrels of oil by heads. It is an east offset to Texas-Cosden's No. 8 Connell and a diagonal northeast offset to Gulf's No. 2-B Connell, both producers in the mile west extension of the field. Humble, Penn and Atlantic made two field locations: No. 11 Kioh, 1320 feet from the west line and 330 feet from the south line of section 7, block 44, township 3 south, T. & P. Co. survey, and No. 11 York, 1320 feet from the west line and 330 feet from the north line of section 16, block 44, township 3 south, T. & P. Ry. Co. survey.

The quarter-mile east extension of the Taylor-Link pool in Pecos county was effected by G. A. Henshaw Jr., Inc., No. 1 University, in the southwest of the northeast of the southeast of section 16, block 32. It topped pay sand at 1660 feet, drilled in six feet and was estimated by the operators to be good for 100 barrels daily. In the Toberg shalow pool just northwest of the Yates field, Cardinal's No. 5-E Toberg was completed at 475 feet for 75 to 100 barrels daily. Petren and others' No. 1 Pure-Jackson in section 28, block 3, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey, in the Pecos valley area, was completed at 1610 feet for five barrels of oil and 1,500,000 cubic feet of gas.

Among closely watched Pecos county wildcats, Pure's No. 1 Harrison had drilled to 1650 feet in anhydrite after shutting off water with 10-inch casing set at 1432 feet. Humble's No. 1 Kokernot was fishing for a 10-inch bit at 3780 feet in lime and anhydrite. Humble's No. 1-B Thompson was running 12¼-inch casing at 1283 feet in sand, after getting 600 feet of fresh water at 1280-83 feet. Magnolia No. 2 Hoover in Crockett county topped the salt at 864 feet, 1658 feet above sea level, and had drilled past 930 feet.

After being shut down for almost a month, Fuhrman Petroleum corporation's No. 1 W. T. Ford, highest test structurally yet drilled in Andrews county, resumed at 4068 feet in lime and had reached 4145 feet, unchanged. The horizon from which Deep Rock and others' wells six miles to the north producer had not been reached and the hole was loaded with mud and water to prevent blowing out of gas which gauged slightly over 26,000,000 cubic feet and sprayed some oil. Maer & Staniforth's No. 1 Meadors & Johnson, another Andrews county wildcat, had drilled to 4100 feet in anhydrite and red shale.

Extension Indicated

Indicating an east extension of deep production in Howard county, Magnolia No. 1 Kelly-Chalk, in the northeast of the northwest of section 124, block 29, W. & N. W. Ry. Co. survey, was shut down early in the week at 2,990 feet with the hole full of oil. The deep pay was topped at 2885. Casing probably will be run. The well was completed in 1927 feet in the 1200-foot horizon for 16 barrels daily.

Atlantic-Penn's No. 1-B Bennett, new Ward county producer, in section 16, block 124, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey, re-ran tubing after the packer failed to hold. It was flowing 45 to 50 barrels of oil daily from a total depth of 2,607 feet. Gulf's No. 4 Hutchins, in section 3, block F, G. M. M. B. & A. survey, Ward county, produced 60 barrels of oil daily while cleaning out a bridge, with the total depth 2760.

Three of seven of the world's deepest producers, in Reagan county, established new production peaks during the week. The discovery deep well, Group No. 1 Oil corporation's (Texon) No. 1-B University, which for some time has been declining gradually, staged a comeback, averaging 2,746.78 barrels daily, or 17 barrels daily more than during the week before. Big Lake's No. 3-G University, 8923 feet deep, set a new peak of 164 barrels, averaging 153.85 barrels daily for the week. Big Lake's No. 2-C University flowed a daily average of 2,421.57 barrels during the week and established a new mark of 2505 barrels. A new high mark of 1,186 barrels was reached by Big Lake's No. 1-8 University, which averaged 1,162.71 barrels daily for the week at a total depth of 8868 feet. Big Lake's No. 4-C University, a producer, prepared to deepen with rotary from 8220 feet, and Texon's No. 4-B University was scheduled to spud during the week.

Phillips Petroleum company's No. 1 Whitten, interesting wildcat in Schleicher county, was pulling casing to plug back farther in order to shoot a horizon from 4912-25 feet, which produced oil by heads for several days in August, 1929, before casing was run. Indian Territory company's No. 1 O'Harrow in Schleicher county had drilled to 4910 feet in black shale. Phillips' No. 1-A Golden in southern Tom Green county, near Christoval, encountered a hole full of water at 3374 feet and had drilled past 3406 feet.

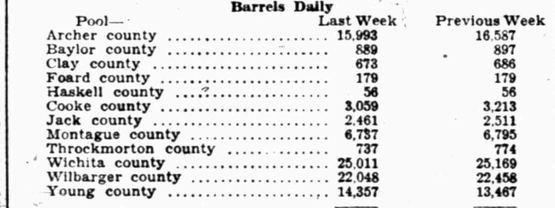

Carrying with it the possibility of an extension of Irion county's shallow, high gravity, sweet oil production three locations to the south, J. E. Bristow and associates' No. 1 Nutt was scheduled to reach the pay horizon late in the week. It drilled ahead from 1260 feet after underreaming 6(-inch casing to that depth, shutting off two water strata. Straughn & Texannati's No. 1 Tankersley, in section 4, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey, was scheduled to spud Friday. Williams & Williams' No. 1 Noelke, 3½ miles southwest of production, was underreaming 10-inch casing below 1000 feet. It will be drilled to 3250 feet, unless production is obtained shallower.

Six Irion producers are providing shipment of about 25 carloads of oil weekly from Fox Spur on the Santa Fe to the San Angelo Refining company. Thirty-five cars are on the loadin[illegible] all the time.

Pipe Line Runs of District Drop 211 Barrels Per Day During Week

LACK OF WATER HITS STEPHENS OIL OPERATIONS

Little New Work Started During Week in Oklahoma

CASING CEMENTED IN COCKBURN WELL

Sikes Abandons Location in Area Southwest of Duncan

DUNCAN, Okla., Sept. 6.—Stephens county oil operations continue to be slowed down by lack of water. Little new work can be started in the county until a general rain fills creeks and ponds.

Barney Cockburn and associates have cemented surface casing on the No. 2 Funk estate, in the center of the SW SE of 19-1n-8w, just north of production at Oil City.

Crane and Rankin are shut down at 1050 feet, out of water, on the No. 1 Adkins, in the NE NE SE of 14-1n-9w, half a mile north of the Oil City field.

Louis Sikes has temporarily abandoned location for the No. 3 H. A. Furst, in the SE SE NW of 16-1s-8w, five miles southwest of Duncan, and skidded derrick one location south for the No. 2 William Blake, in the NE NE SW of 16-1s-8w. He is rigged up but cannot drill until there is rain.

Sikes lost a string of tubing in the role and has a difficult fishing job on the No. 2 Furst, in the SE SE NW of 16-1s-8w, which pumped 110 barrels in 15 hours from a new sand.

Well Shut Down

W. O. Smythe and associates are shut down at 3163 feet on the No. 1 Alice Frederick, in the northeast corner of 31-2n-8w, wildcat, 12 miles northwest of Duncan. Contract depth is 3300 feet.

The Magnolia Petroleum company is rigging to pump its No. 7 R. E. Ferris, in the NW SW NE of 23-2s-6w, in the Woolsey area southeast of Duncan. The well is estimated good for less than 10 barrels daily from sand at 1804-53 feet.

Mother Hopeful Daughter Living Gone Two Years

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (UP)—Admissions made by Charles Edward Pope, who is held in $25,000 bail in the kidnaping of Grace Budd, renewed Mrs. Delia Budd's hope today that her daughter might still be alive.

Mrs. Budd said conversations with Mrs. Pope, on whose information Pope was arrested, strengthened her belief.

"She told me I would get my Gracie back," Mrs. Budd said.

"I had never quite given up hope, in spite of all the false clues. She said he told her he had put Gracie in a boarding school."

The kidnaping of 12-year-old Grace two years ago by a man who had made the acquaintance of the family as Frank Howard, Long Island farmer, created a nation-wide sensation. The fact that no real clue ever was found left the mother a faint hope which has lasted two years.

Pope admitted to police that he once took a girl from Brooklyn to Buffalo.

This girl was found to be 12-year-old Ethel Prokesher, whom he secured from her parents by telling them he planned to educate her. The girl's mother followed them to Buffalo four days later and took Ethel home.

Police said this fact, coupled with their knowledge that Pope was once an inmate in an insane asylum, indicated to them he might have placed Grace in a boarding school, as Mrs. Pope said.

FOUR EXECUTED AS RESULT OF PLOT ON LIFE OF MUSSOLINI

TRIEST, Italy, Sept. 6. (AP)—Four men whose sin was terrorism against the Fascist regime in Italy and a plot to kill Premier Mussolini paid with their lives today.

The four were led out at dawn, strapped in chairs and put before a firing squad. The firing squad was composed of blackshirt or Fascist militiamen.

It was the third occasion in which capital punishment in this form has been inflicted in Italy since 1860 and brought a total of six thus executed. The executions were under the law passed in November, 1928, which provided a special tribunal for trial of offenses against the security of the state and set the death penalty by shooting for those making attempts against the lives of the king, other royalty, or the head of the government, that is, Mussolini.

All executed in this manner have been shot the morning succeeding sentence.

The four men executed today were members of a group of 18 tried on charges of 13 murders, 31 attempted murders, bombings, burning of schools and asylums, spreading of subversive literature and supplying military secrets to Jugoslavia.

The quartet went to a glittering end. The 50th battalion of black shirts and judges of the special tribunal arrived at the military parade ground of Bassovizza at 5 o'clock. There were 600 Fascisti lined up on three sides of the special firing squad, which was composed of 56 blackshirts in four squads. This was the scene when the command to fire was given at 5:43 a. m.

At midnight the four condemned signed requests for clemency to be transmitted to the king but the commander of the army corps at Triest refused to forward them.

SPUDDERS SEND SEVEN PLAYERS TO BROWNS AND BREWERS

THE LOOKOUT

BY AL PARKER

If the season had not been split:

Teams—	G.	W.	L.	Pct.	Bh'd
Wichita Falls	151	95	56	.629	...
Houston	152	87	65	.572	8½
Shreveport	149	85	64	.571	9
Fort Worth	151	82	69	.544	13
Beaumont	150	68	82	.435	26½
Waco	147	66	81	.449	27
San Antonio	151	60	91	.397	35
Dallas	149	57	92	.385	37

Including games of Sept. 5.

At least at two points over the Texas league map, Saturday and Sunday games are going to be played for all their worth. With only two games to go Shreveport and Houston through Friday were divided by only one-half game in the scrap for third place money. The third place winners will receive no fortune, but the position means a hundred bucks or so to each player, and that amount is well worth putting in a couple of hard days' work to win. The Sports can beat the Buffs by sweeping their two games, only in case the Indians are successful in one of their two games at Houston. The Buffs can cinch third place by taking two straight from the San Antonio club. The Indians, incidentally, ripped off their seventh straight win Friday prior to the Houston series.

The full season standing shows the Spudders Saturday were eight and one-half games in front of their nearest rivals. If the season had not been split, they probably would hold a longer lead, for some of the competing clubs would not have made the strengthening moves that put them into the race in the last half. However, there is no good reason to cry over the split season at this late date. Wichita Falls has seen more than one season when the split race looked mighty good. Spudder clubs have profited considerably from split seasons of the past, so none of us hereabouts have any kick coming now that some other team reaps the benefit.

The first 1,000 cash customers at Athletic park Sunday for the final game of the series will be presented with photographs of the Spudder club, it was announced Saturday by Secretary Guy Airey. Last Wednesday when the pictures were first given out, 1,000 were left over and these are to be given Sunday, "first come, first served," according to Airey.

The playoff series starting Wednesday at Athletic park is by far the most interesting Wichita Falls has ever participated in. The previous two playoffs have been with Houston and Dallas, and neither lacked for interest. But Fort Worth ever since the Spudders came into being in 1920, has been Wichita Falls' natural rival. It is the one Texas league series that will draw the attention of all of West Texas. In the immediate vicinity of Wichita Falls the Spudders of course, are favorites, but in all of West Texas one can find just about as many rabid supporters of one club as the other. The series should draw far more customers from outside Wichita Falls than any other post-season series played here, and that includes the Dixie series classic of 1927.

It seems that Fort Worth has been established all of a sudden as a heavy favorite to win the playoff. All in the face of tradition that is founded on the failure of all second half champions in past playoff series. Personally, we can't see how any club can rank as a favorite over another in a five-game series. Any two clubs going into such a series are bound to be pretty good or they couldn't have won their half championships. And a five-game series, to our way of thinking, is just about 85 per cent luck. Five games lack much of being a true test. A couple of unlucky breaks might easily cost the better team the decision. One pitcher has been known to win a playoff series single-handed. For instance there was Bill Hallahan of 1928 and Vic Frasier of 1919. Who knows whether the Spudders or Panthers will have that pitcher in the forthcoming series?

We maintain that the Spudders have just as good a chance to find that one pitcher as the Panthers. He might as well be Wiltse, Steengrafe or Caldwell, as Stoner, Whitworth or McCabe. Neither the Spudders nor the Panthers have a pitcher who has been particularly effective against the other club. A check of the records probably will show that nearly every one of the regulars of both staffs has done little better than break even in the inter-club warfare. That's another thing that makes this series more interesting than usual.

In a batting way both the Spudders and Panthers have well balanced lineups. Neither club has a real weakling in its batting order. In one respect, though, the Spudders have a decided edge. The Fort Worth lineup does not boast the distance hitters that are contained in the Spudder batting order. It is doubtful if any Texas league batting order ever boasted the sheer power that is the Spudders'. From leadoff man through the catcher, every one of the Spudders, with the possible exception of Euller, might be classed as a slugger. If you can't picture Levey as a slugger, take a peak at his record of extra bases. Outside the Spudder lineup, there are not many better ones in the entire league. Our James is liable to thump one for two, three or four bases at any minute. In the Panther lineup there are three men, who reasonably can be expected to hit no longer than one base, and Bonowitz and Cox are the only real home run hitters in the lineup.

REAGAN JUNIORS START GRID PRACTICE MONDAY

Coach A. D. Beck will begin his football practice at Reagan Junior High school Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, it was announced Saturday.

Five of last year's letter men are expected to return, with J. Z. Powell as the new captain. Coach Beck has just returned from A. & M. college at College Station, where he attended the coaching school taught by Matty Bell.

Three Infielders And Catcher Sold To St. Louis Club

Crouch, Levey, Storti and Burns Are Named in Major League Deal

The outright sale of seven Spudder players to the St. Louis Browns and Milwaukee Brewers was announced Saturday by President William E. Huff and Secretary Guy Airey.

The four who graduate to the American league club are Jack Burns, first baseman; Lin Storti, second baseman; Jim Levey, shortstop and Jack Crouch, catcher. Jack Kloza, outfielder; Hal Wiltse, pitcher, and Walter Euller, third baseman, make up the trio sold to the American association club.

The deals become effective only after Wichita Falls has finished the Texas league playoff series, and if winners in that, the Dixie series, according to the announcement. If both series are played the seven men are not likely to report to their new clubs until next spring. However, if Wichita Falls loses in the playoff, Levey, Burns, Storti and Crouch may be called to join the Browns for the remainder of the American league season.

Deal Expected

Graduation of the trio of Spudder infielders has been taken for granted hereabouts since the middle of the season when they established themselves as major league prospects of the highest order. Crouch, too, undoubtedly earned a promotion to highest company long before the Texas league race was finished.

Probably the only unexpected angle to the two deals was the transfer of Wiltse to the Brewers, rather than to the parent St. Louis club. The blond southpaw owns the league's outstanding record among the left-handers. Kloza's splendid hitting and his all around improvement since the start of the season stamped him as a brilliant prospect, too, and Euller ranks high among the league's infielders because of his consistently valuable work in all departments.

Infield Trio

The climb of the infield trio to the top of the baseball profession reads almost like a Horatio Alger story. The three were assembled from widely scattered points of the U. S. A. last year, Storti from the far West, Burns from the East and Levey from the Pacific coast, and shoved together in the Tulsa (Western league) infield. Burns had been acquired from the Browns from an Eastern league club after his first season in professional ball. Storti had had just a little more than a year, having spent the major portion of 1928 at Abilene in the West Texas league, a class D circuit. Levey went to Tulsa with practically no professional experience, after having been discharged from the U. S. Marine corps.

These three, along with Euller at third base, paced the Tulsa club to a Western league pennant. They monopolized practically all of the league leaderships, both offensive and defensive, that were open to them.

Infield Moved Intact

Last winter the Tulsa infield was transferred intact to Wichita Falls to take the place of the thoroughly efficient quartet of the year before. Fans shook their heads and wondered what would happen to the Spudders with a "Western league infield." Dopesters over the league could see the Spudders as no stronger than a second division club, mainly because of the untried infield.

Before the race was half run, however, the quartet had been established as one of the finest infields in the history of the league. Individually and collectively it has left little to be desired in any department of play. Probably its crowning achievement, considered as a whole, was the record established when seven double plays were made in a nine-inning game against Waco. The final averages probably will show each of the four the double-play leader at his position, a feat that is particularly noteworthy on Euller's part in view of his enforced absence from the game for almost a month.

Crouch Climbs Fast

Crouch's climb also has been rapid. The Spudder catcher served as an understudy to the veteran Pete Lapan through 1929, but took over the first string job this spring and has developed into the ranking catcher of the league. He was obtained by the Spudders from a Western association team at the close of the 1928 season. He had led the class C loop in batting, but it was in this department that he seemed weakest in his first Texas season. It has been quite different this year, however, and he has been one of the team's strongest offensive men.

Of the trio going to Milwaukee Wiltse is the only one to serve more than one season with the Spudders. He came from the Browns in the winter of 1928 and has turned in two highly successful campaigns for the Spudder cause. Kloza was drafted from Montgomery in the Southeastern league last winter.

Means New Faces

The passing of these seven players means that the Spudders will be completely rebuilt for the 1931 season. The chance of the return of any is remote, since the Browns in the manipulation of their extensive string of clubs have followed the policy of returning few players to lower leagues. They are usually cut loose if they do not make good after their ascensions to higher class company.

On a recent visit here Bill Killefer, manager, and L. C. McEvoy, vice president, of the Browns, expressed the opinion that all four players named in the St. Louis deal would be regulars in the Browns' lineup next season.

Both the Wichita Falls and Milwaukee clubs are subsidiaries in the Browns' extensive "farm system."

Motorcycle Record

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 6. (AP)—Jim Davis of Columbus, Ohio, broke his own world record for the five-mile motorcycle race by winning that event, opener of the 1930 national championship, at the New York State fair Saturday. His time was 3:41:68 as compared to 3:47:42 made on the same track last year.

Cats and Spudders Both Battle Tradition in Playoff

KEY MEN IN PANTHERS' DEFENSIVE SCHEME

Lil Stoner and Dick Whitworth

When the Fort Worth Panthers open their bid for the Texas league championship in the play-off series with the Spudders here next Wednesday, the brunt of stopping Wichita Falls' array of heavy clouters is expected to fall upon the broad shoulders of Lil Stoner and Dick Whitworth, a brace of veteran right-handers.

It was the pitching of Whitworth and Stoner almost alone that carried the Cats through to the second half championship. One or the other of the duo was on the mound nearly every day during the drive through South Texas that left the Spudders, Buffs and Sports in the wake of the Panthers. It is generally expected that this duo will start the two games here.

Stoner is a colorful veteran of Fort Worth's pennant wars, having figured substantially in a Panther pennant a half-dozen years ago before he graduated to the majors. He came to the Cats late last year from Detroit, was sold to Pittsburgh and returned to Fort Worth this spring.

Whitworth came to Fort Worth in a player deal with Houston two years ago. He is enjoying by far his best season in the Texas league.

Berkeley Bell, Youthful Texan, Beats Borotra in Singles Event

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 6. (AP)—They did not "seed" out Berkeley Bell. They tossed him into the thick of the fight without benefit of "seeding," and Saturday afternoon in one of the greatest first-round matches ever seen in a national tennis championship tournament, the dynamic Texan proved it was all a mistake by beating the great Jean Borotra of France, 3-6, 6-2, 12-10, 7-5.

The slender, 22-year-old kid from Austin was not considered good enough by the tournament committee to be included on the list of Americans selected for favorable positions in the draw, but he played Saturday like nobody's business to blast out of the tournament a player who still ranks among the greatest under the sun.

Bell left no doubt in the mind of the enthusiastic gallery of 7,000 as to why he was ranked ninth among the players of the nation last year and how he was able to force Henri Cochet to five sets at Wimbledon this summer.

Borotra, treated shabbily by fate in drawing the dangerous Bell for an opening opponent while other favorites faced comparative push-overs, battled with all the strength in his slender, graceful frame and all the courage of his justly famous fighting heart, but Bell had 10 years more of youth on his side of the net and he prevailed.

The downfall of the great Frenchman in the very first round of the 49th annual singles championship cost the tournament one of its greatest drawing cards and probably meant that Borotra never will achieve his ambition of winning the American title, the one great national crown which has eluded his racquet.

Outside of the elimination of Borotra, the No. 1 seeded player among the foreign contestants, the day provided few surprises.

Big Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines, Bryan Grant and Clifford Sutter came through with first-round victories.

SARAH PLAFREY AGAIN GIRLS' NET CHAMPION

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6. (AP)—Miss Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, Mass., Saturday won the girls' national lawn tennis championship for the third straight year, defeating Helen Marlowe of Los Angeles, Calif., 10-8, 5-7, 6-1. It was the second straight year that the California girl was runnerup to the champion.

It was the first time during the 13 years of the tourney that a junior has won the girls' title three times.

The match, played on the grass courts of the Philadelphia Cricket club, was the longest and one of the hardest fought finals seen in the girls' competition.

FLOYDADA FOOTBALL PROSPECTS ARE ROSY

FLOYDADA, Texas. Sept. 6.—Training season for the Floydada High school football squad started Monday when 30 aspirants for the squad reported. Workouts are being held twice daily at the high school grounds.

Equipment has been issued to 42 men and by the time school opens Monday it is expected that the number will exceed 50. The first game of the season has been arranged with the Plainview aggregation. The game will be staged at night on the new field of Wayland college which is equipped with powerful electric flood lights.

The Floydada Whirlwinds will meet Tahoka at the South Plains fair at Lubbock on Oct. 1 and Spur will be played here on Oct. 19.

Of the three games already carded none will be considered conference games and will not count in the percentage to determine the winner of the district. District No. 2 has been subdivided and Lockney, Floydada, Paducah and Roaring Springs are in division No. 2. Floydada football fans are expecting one of the fastest teams in the school's history.

Panthers Hammer Out 10-2 Victory For Series Lead

Whitworth and Stoner Tough, While Cats Pound White and Koob

The Fort Worth Cats jumped on White and Koob for 13 hits while the Spudders were making five errors to win the third game of the final series here by a score of 10 to 2 Saturday.

The last regular game of the season will be played at Athletic park, starting at 3 o'clock.

Whitworth and Stoner held the Spudders practically helpless. The Wichita Falls batsmen got two hits off the former, one a double by Fitzgerald. Four hits were garnered from the offerings of Lil Stoner. Burns' home run in the eighth after Kloza had singled accounted for the only Spudder tallies.

Three of the Wichita Falls reserves saw duty in the last innings. Bradbury relieved Crouch behind the plate while Geygan went in at third. Euller going to short and Levey retiring from the contest. Orr batted for Koob in the ninth and went out on a long drive to left.

Cox Leads Attack

Cox found the Spudders' pitching to his liking and led the attack of the invaders. His home run in the second inning after Gribble had walked and Fowler singled accounted for the first three Feline tallies. He also hit a double and two singles out of five trips to the plate. The Fort Worth slugger scored three times and drove in two other runs during the game.

Mallon hammered out three singles on his first three times at bat, but was an easy out on the next three trips.

Whitworth as usual helped to win his own game by driving in two runs with a single in the second inning. He took second on Kloza's fumble and scored on Mallon's drive to left field.

Too Many Errors

Stoner was wild when he first went to the box and was not as effective as his predecessor. He fanned Storti, first man up in the sixth, but followed the strikeout with nine straight balls and walked three men during the inning. The Spudders failed to take advantage of the opportunity and were retired without scoring.

In the field the Spudders found it hard to hang on to the ball and loose playing accounted for several of the Fort Worth counters.

The Cats on the other hand were on their toes and fast work in the field robbed the local players of several apparently sure hits.

Record Entry Is Anticipated for Speedboat Meet

Outboard Club Here Sponsors Big Race Event Sunday Lake Wichita

A starting field of at least 25 speedy boats is anticipated Sunday for the outboard meeting at Lake Wichita sponsored by the Wichita Falls Outboard Motor club, it was announced Saturday by Ralph Harvey Jr., secretary. Three events, class B, C, and free-for-all, over the two and one-half mile course immediately south of the board walk in Lakeside park constitute the program, and a list of substantial cash and merchandise awards will be at stake. Each event will consist of three heats.

The prospective starting field, according to Harvey, includes eight boats from Dallas, as many each from Wichita Falls and Electra, four from Oklahoma City, two from Waco and possibly several from Houston.

Outboard motor races have become one of America's most interesting sports and the Wichita Falls club by promoting meets here has made hundreds of fans and quite a few enthusiastic drivers.

Ticket Sale for Two Games Here To Start Monday

Complete Sellouts Anticipated for Both Clashes At Athletic Park

Forty ball players, 20 Spudders and as many Fort Worth Panthers go into battle Wednesday at Athletic park in the opening game of a three-out-of-five series that is to decide the 1930 championship and determine the identity of the Texas league's representative in the Dixie series next week.

All 40 players will be battling tradition in this forthcoming series that is stirring West Texas fans to a greater degree than any baseball event in years. The 20 representing Wichita Falls will be battling to live down the fact that no Wichita Falls club has ever won a league playoff series, though two Spudder teams of the past have had the chance.

The tradition that the Panthers must fight in the titular warfare is one that covers more territory—no second half champion, regardless of the city it represented, has

A play-by-play broadcast of the two playoff games scheduled for Wichita Falls was announced Saturday by Darrold Kahn, manager of radio station KGKO. Only the Wednesday and Thursday games will be broadcast by KGKO, because those played in Fort Worth will be broadcast by both WBAP and KTAT.

Speeches by J. Alvin Gardner, Frank Snyder, Carl Williams and a number of the players also will be included on the radio program.

won a Texas league championship. Always, the first half winners have conquered the champs of the last half.

Sale Opens Monday

So, one or the other of the traditions must go down in the five-game series, along with the Panthers or the Spudders. Sharing interest hereabouts with the outcome of the series is the expected scramble for tickets to the two games here Wednesday and Thursday, each starting at 3:30 o'clock.

The ticket sale will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning at Athletic park. For this one day only seats for the two games will be sold and the limit will be six for each game to each purchaser. Tuesday the ducats that are left from Monday's sale will be placed on sale at Renfro's Drug store No. 1 and will be available for single games or for both.

The scale of price this year is the same that has prevailed in play-off series of the past, 25 cents above above the regular Texas league league schedule for all classes of tickets. Box seats are $1.50, reserved $1.25, grandstand $1 and bleachers, 75 cents.

The only reservations being made, according to Secretary Guy Airey, are out of town mail orders and season box holders. The former are being filled when accompanied by postoffice money order and the box holders are given the option of buying their customary seats.

Two Idle Days

After Sunday's game the Panthers and the Spudders have two days of rest before going into the big series. Carl Williams, Wichita Falls skipper, declared Saturday he had not decided on the program his men will follow these days, but will be given a complete rest Monday and put through a light batting and fielding drill Tuesday as the final conditioner.

Hal Wiltse's injured ankle was the source of much concern among Spudder fans Saturday, following the ace southpaw's forced withdrawal from Friday's tilt with the Panthers. It is believed that he will be fit and ready to go no later than the opening game Wednesday, though he is nursing the ankle carefully and will continue to do so until the danger period has passed.

Both the Spudders and the Panthers are basing their playoff hopes on the strong arms of three pitchers and neither club can afford to lose any of its mound mainstays. Wichita Falls undoubtedly pins its hopes on Wiltse, Milt Steengrafe and Earl Caldwell, while the Fort Worth burden rests with Dick Whitworth, Lil Stoner and Dick McCabe, all right-handers.

Fort Worth Tickets

Temporary box seats have been installed at Athletic park to care for several hundred additional fans, and it is believed that 10,000 fans can be cared for comfortably at the two games here. Secretary Airey reports that the heaviest demand from out of town fans in the history of the club, not even excluding the 1927 Dixie series, already is noticeable. Choice seats undoubtedly will be at a premium a few hours after the public sale opens and complete sell-outs for both games are anticipated.

Fort Worth also is preparing for record crowds for the games there. After the opening games here, the clubs move to Fort Worth Saturday for completion of the series. The third game is scheduled for Saturday and the fourth and fifth Sunday and Monday, if they are needed to decide the issue.

A special train will bring several hundred fans from Fort Worth to Wichita Falls for Wednesday's and Thursday's skirmishes, according to announcement from Fort Worth, and while no special train is to be operated out of Wichita Falls, it is a certainty that this city will be well represented at Panther Park.

The Spudder club has reserved 1,000 seats for Wichita Falls fans at Fort Worth games and reservations are now being taken for these at baseball headquarters in the Harvey-Snider building. Reservations for the Fort Worth tickets can be made either in person or by phone.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, Sept. 6. (AP)—Stella Walsh, brilliant American girl sprinter, made a splendid showing Saturday in the opening of the women's Olympiad. A crowd of 20,000 saw the opening events among the representatives of 17 nations.

Miss Walsh easily won her preliminary heats in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes in addition to qualifying in the 60 meters dash.

INDIANS' WALLOPING FIRST SACKER SURE OF TEXAS LOOP BATTING CROWN FOR SEASON

As the Texas league season nears its end, Sam Leslie, San Antonio, has regained the batting lead and is now practically certain to finish on top, though it is impossible for him to participate in 100 games, usually accepted as necessary to rank as the loop leader. Leslie's average of .405 is 26 points higher than that of Big Oscar Eckhardt, Beaumont, who with .379 shows the way for playing through regulars. Gene Rye, Waco, is a close challenger. For the first time, Irving Burns, Wichita Falls, has taken the lead in base hits. A new league record will be set this year for number of players making 200 or more safeties. The league leaders: Runs, Kloza, Wichita Falls, 139. Fitzgerald, Wichita Falls ,133, Levey, Wichita Falls, 131; hits, I. Burns, Wichita Falls, 211, Eckhardt, Beaumont, 209, Bonowitz, Fort Worth, 204; doubles, Eckhardt, Beaumont, 51, Storti, Wichita Falls, and Fitzgerald, Wichita Falls, 49, I. Burns, Wichita Falls, 47; triples, Joe Moore, San Antonio, 18, Tavener, Fort Worth, 14, Mishkin, Houston, and Shiver, Beaumont, 13; home runs, Bettencourt, Wichita Falls, 42, Willingham, Dallas, 36, Storti, Wichita Falls, 30; stolen bases, Hunt, Houston, 53, Holley, Beaumont, 33, Piet, Waco, 30; runs batted in, Bettencourt, Wichita Falls, 143, Kloza, Wichita Falls, 125, I. Burns, Wichita Falls, 120.

Dean, Houston, leads the pitching averages though McCabe, Fort Worth, now has the honor for season veterans. Thurman, Waco, has pitched the most games, 49. Tauscher, Dallas, the most innings, 248 to McCabe's 245. Harris, Waco, has worked the most complete games, 24 to 22 for Wiltse, Wichita Falls. The strikeout leaders are Stout, Houston, 152, and Rose, Houston, 130. McCabe has gone to the front in games won with 20 to 19 each for Wiltse, Wichita Falls, and Steengrafe, Wichita Falls.

Pitchers winning or losing a game, batters hitting .200 or better and club batting through games of Wednesday and the Wichita Falls-Fort Worth day game of Thursday follow:

FT. WORTH AND DALLAS GOLFERS DOMINATE PLAY

FORT WORTH, Sept. 6. (AP)—Francis McGonagill of Dallas paced the field through the first 36 holes in the seventh annual tournament of the Texas Municipal Golf association at Worth Hills Saturday. He posted a score of 152 for his two rounds and set a limit of 167 for the championship flight.

Due to the hot pace set by McGonagill, only 23 public course players of the state were able to gain the championship division. All of the positions with the exception of one, which was taken by G. C. Graves, coach at Sul Ross college, Alpine, went to Fort Worth and Dallas entrants. Dallas led with 13.

Dallas also furnished the second place entry in Howard Guldahl, who finished just one stroke behind McGonagill with 153.

Two strokes back of Guldahl came William Robinson of Dallas with 155. Max Clark and Leonard Harding led the Fort Worthian with 156, a position which was divided with Joe White of Dallas.

Athletics' Star Left-Hander Wins Third Game in Four Days

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6. (AP)—Lefty Grove, southpaw pitcher of the Athletics, today turned in his 25th triumph of the season when the world's champions defeated Boston, 3 to 1 in 10 innings. Grove went into the box in the eighth, struck out three and didn't permit a hit. It was the left-handers third victory in the sweep of four games over the Red Sox. Score:

GEHRIG GRABS HONORS

CHICAGO, Sept. 6. (AP)—Catching Al Simmons in the midst of his worst batting slump of the season, Lou Gehrig boosted his margin to 13 points during the 20th week of the American league batting championship struggle.

Unofficial averages, including games of Wednesday, revealed that the Athletic outfielder collected but three hits in his last 24 times at bat for a grand average of .381 while Gehrig hammered out eight in 23 attempts for a season's mark of .394. The slump cut Simmons' average 14 points. Gehrig's fell two points.

So effective was the pitching during the same period that only four of the leading 10 hitters registered gains. Among them was Urban Hodapp, Cleveland second baseman, who supplanted Gehrig as the leader in hits with a grand sum of 198 and stretched his lead in doubles with a total of 42. Hodapp ranked fifth in batting with a .357 average.

Other batting leaders were Cochrane, Philadelphia, .361; Ruth, New York, .360; E. Rice, Washington, .355; Cronin, Washington, .354; Manush, Washington, .351; Morgan, Cleveland, .350; Reynolds, Chicago, .350.

Gehrig retained his leaderships with his hits for a total of 372 bases and his 150 runs batted in. Ruth clung to his lead in most runs scored with 135 and in home runs with his 44; Combs of the Yankees had the greatest collection of triples, while McManus of the Tigers still led in stolen bases with 19, one more than a week ago.

"Lefty" Grove ascended to the pitching leadership mathematically during the 20th week when he captured two more for a total of 23 victories against five defeats. Other leaders were Wesley Ferrell of Cleveland, who won two more on his big string for a total of 24 against nine losses, and George Earnshaw of the Athletics who had a record of 20 and 10. Earnshaw also led the league in strikeouts with a total of 163.

Washington went into a tie with the Yankees for first place in the team batting race during the week. The Yanks slumped four points to a .305 while the Senators held ground. The Athletics retained their two point margin over the Senators in team fielding with a .975 average.

COYOTES END TWO WEEKS OF EARLY TRAINING WITH MANY PROMISING MEN UNCOVERED

By JACK ALLEN

Pre-season training of the Wichita Falls High school football squad came to an end Saturday noon when Coach Barry Holton dismissed the squad after two weeks of intensive training at the high school building. Upwards of 30 experienced men were invited to the camp and all but two or three answered the first call.

After the two weeks of incessant grind the entire squad has rounded into form and should be ready to continue the practice after the beginning of school. Although the pre-season drill was mostly on fundamentals, several prospective stars were uncovered and likely contenders for positions were numerous. The group of Coyote gridders made the high school building and the campus their home for two weeks and not only worked on the field but studied the brawn and brain game from the blackboard in skull sessions.

Only one incident bobbed up to mar an otherwise successful training camp. Seven boys strayed from the camp without orders and were suspended for several days. Although these seven were valuable assets to the team Coach Holton enforced the rules with an iron hand and no criticism is forthcoming. The guilty ones failed to receive the benefit of the week's practice which they missed, but will put in extra hours on the field when the practice begins in earnest.

First Game Sept. 20

With the first game only two weeks away there is plenty of work to be done in the Coyote camp. On Sept. 20 the Pack bumps up against the fighting team of Polytechnic High of Fort Worth. Coach Bradshaw's eleven captured city honors last year and the Red and Black machine will find an able opponent facing them when they take the field Saturday week.

Coaches Holton and Morris have worked diligently during the pre-season drill and many prospective gridders have been uncovered. The majority of the coaches' time was occupied by the work with the line. Only one veteran returns to grace the ranks of the line this season. Chick Holden, hefty tackle, returns to play his third season with the Pack. Chick is a punter of no mean ability and ranks with the best linemen in the district. The main problem of the coaching staff has been to develop a forward wall that will open holes for the backs and hold back the thrusts of the enemy. A line of uncertain ability has been thrown together and is fast ironing out the rough spots, but time and the showing under fire will prove the mettle of the boys in the trenches.

Trio of Ends

With Raymond Allen, Malcolm Mauldin and Joe Howell on the end positions, the opposing backs will have no set-up on the end runs. Greenwood and Richards are capable reserves. Kelley and Daniels, along with Holden, are looking promising at tackle, but there is plenty of room for improvement. Sepkovitch and Goodman look like the best at guards, but Reynolds, Hudgens and Keyes are barking at the heels of the favored ones, the latter especially looking like a serious contender. "Loopy" King is the one and only serious bidder for the pivot berth. Willard Wilkins and Jack Gentry are reserves for the pivot hole, but their showing will not equal that of King.

Everyone is optimistic over the showing of the ball toting department of the Coyote aggregation. All of the aspirants were members of the spring training squad and experience is not lacking in that department. Although none of the candidates for berths was a letter man last fall, the majority were second stringers and many saw action in every game last year. The ball luggers are expected to deliver in grand fashion during the scrap for district honors. Bennett Withrow at quarter, Smith and Ray at halves and Holton or White at full are the quartet that should see lots of service in the first few games. If these five do not deliver the goods Dan Cox, Orion Paneway, Hamlin Rugeley or Bob Daugherty will be ready to fill a regular's shoes whenever necessary.

Student Backing

Preparations for student backing will get under way this week with the starting of school. An enormous band of 125 pieces is the chief method of producing pep at every game. Leo M. Underwood, high school band leader for the past three years, is assembling his instruments and will have most of the number in time for the first game. Plans for an enormous pep squad are being worked out by Miss Olinger, sponsor for the last five years, and a record number of the uniformed lassies is expected at the first turnout.

Coach Holton refused to be optimistic about the chances of the Pack in the district scrap. "We'll have to improve considerably if we expect to drub Lubbock on the fourth of October in our first conference game," says the head man of the Coyote team in discussing the future games. The first three games, including the first conference game, will be played on the home field.

Gallant Fox Sets All-Time Record For Cash Winning

Great Three-Year-Old Goes Over Top With $30,000 Victory

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—Rising to financial heights heretofore unknown to American turf, William Woodward's Gallant Fox, the 3-year-old champion, Saturday won the 38th running of the Lawrence realization to climax a brilliant career.

In a sensational 3-year-old campaign, the Fox has amassed a grand total of $317,865, the last $26,610 of which was earned Saturday in his victorious jaunt around the Belmont park oval. In annexing the money winning title, the great son of Sir Gallahad III passed the former record of $313,639 held by the Rancocas stable's Zev, financial sensation of 1923.

It was only by a margin of a nose that the Fox managed to beat out James Butler's Questionnaire over the mile and five furlongs but it was a wealthy margin for the colt that has won every important 3-year-old stake, with the exception of the Travers, and in addition has accounted for the Saratoga cup.

Nelson Shatters Par to Trounce Tommy in Final

Wichitan's Rally Shortlived After Being Six Down At Turn

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 6. (AP)—Youth triumphed in the final flight of the Southwest Amateur Golf association tourney Saturday and the championship was captured by Byron Nelson of Fort Worth, who won his 36-hole match with Tommy Cochran of Wichita Falls in an all-Texas windup, 7 and 6.

Jack Summers, Muskogee, won the consolation title from Joe Bailey, Dallas, 2 up; Dorset Carter, Oklahoma City, defeated J. M. Tedford, Oklahoma City, 9 and 8, for the class A trophy, and Roy Maxwell, Oklahoma City, beat C. E. Duffner, Oklahoma City, in the class B final on the 38th green.

Nelson, who won the last Glen Garden Golf and Country club invitation tournament at Fort Worth and holds the club championship there, was six up at the end of the first 18 holes Saturday.

Starting the afternoon round, Cochran cut Nelson's lead to three up on the 25th and gave promise of breaking the 19-year-old youngster down. Nelson retalied with a birdie on the next hole and was two under par when the match ended.

Cochran had set a fast pace with his irons during the tournament and was an equal favorite. His irons joined his woods in forsaking him Saturday and that, added to several tough breaks, put him too far down in the morning round to recover.

MICKEY COHEN SIGNS TO MEET CANZONERI

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 6. (INS)—Mickey Cohen, Denver lightweight and most promising aspirant to the title held by "Kid" Berg, Saturday was signed to meet Tony Canzoneri in a 10-round bout to be staged here Sept. 19.

It was announced that the winner of the Cohen-Glick fight would be matched with Berg for the crown.

Dixie Series Ticket To Memphis $39.95

Price Includes Railroad Fare, Lower Berth and Ticket for Two Baseball Games; Plans Complete if Spudders Win Race

Arrangements have been completed for the operation of a Dixie series special train to Memphis, Tenn., if the Spudders win the playoff with Fort Worth, according to the announcement Saturday of Dudley B. Foy, assistant manager of the chamber of commerce, which will sponsor the special.

Consisting of nine steel coaches, the train will include the finest equipment obtainable, Mr. Foy said. He will begin receiving reservations, of which 125 will be required, after noon Monday.

The train wil be routed over the Fort Worth and Denver from Wichita Falls to Fort Worth and from there over the Texas and Pacific and the Missouri Pacific to Memphis. Members of the Spudder baseball club will be on the special, it was announced.

Schedule of Costs

The schedule of costs ranges from $38.40 for an upper berth for the round trip to $71.20 for a drawing room.

The special, Mr. Foy said, will be made up of a baggage car, one standard 16-section Pullman, one combination drawing room and compartment car, five 12-section drawing room cars and a diner.

The following schedule of costs by Mr. Foy includes railroad and Pullman fare and one ticket for each of two games at Memphis:

Upper berth, $38.40; lower berth, $39.95; compartment (two passengers $134.40; drawing room (two persons) $142.40.

Hotel Not Included

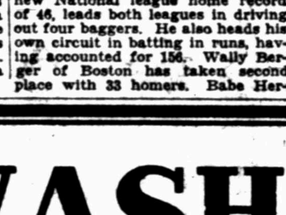

The amounts do not include hotel costs, although reservations may be made through the chamber of commerce. Headquarters at Memphis will be at the Peabody hotel and rates range upward from $3.50 for single and $5.50 for double rooms.

Should a third game be played in Memphis, tickets will be $2 additional Mr. Foy said.

The special will leave Wichita Falls at 5:30 p. m. the day before the first game in Memphis and will arrive there at 8:30 a. m. the following day.

Lady Broadcast Wins

CHICAGO, Sept. 6. (UP)—Lady Broadcast, 4-year-old filly owned by Rodgers Caldwell, won the $25,000 added Lincoln handicap at the Lincoln fields race track Saturday. The Northway stable's Lucky Play was second and H. P. Headley's Pigeon Hole was third. The winner's time for the mile and a quarter was 2:03 3-5, a record for the distance. Lady Broadcast paid $10.74 for a $2 ticket in the straight mutuels.

TERRY TOPS LEAGUE

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—With only a few days more than three weeks to go, Bill Terry of New York continues to lead the National league race by a wide margin with every prospect of holding the top place until the end. Continuing his steady pace, Terry has held his batting average well above .400 while his nearest rivals are some distance below that level.

The semi-official averages released today, which include Wednesday's games, credit Terry with a mark of .410, two points above his average of the week before and 21 points ahead of Chuck Klein of Philadelphia and Babe Herman of Brooklyn, who are tied for second place at .389. The runners-up each have gained one point in the past week.

Riggs Stephenson of Chicago continues to hold fourth place among those players who qualify as regulars with a mark of .384. He is followed by O'Doul, Philadelphia, .380; Lindstrom, New York, .386; P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .363; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .364; Watkins, St. Louis .363; and Cuyler, Chicago, .361.

In addition to leading the league's batters, Terry has made more base hits than any other National leaguer. He now has a total of 223 safe blows. Klein, runner-up in nearly every department, is second with 214. The young Philadelphia slugger leads the league in two base hitting with 50 doubles, is second in hits, in runs with 131, and in runs batted in with 142. Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler of Chicago tops the scorers with 135 runs, which his league leading total of 32 stolen bases has aided in producing. He also is runner-up to Adam Comorosky of Pittsburgh in hitting triples with 15 against the Pirate clouter's 23.

Hack Wilson of Chicago, with his new National league home record of 46, leads both leagues in driving out four baggers. He also heads his own circuit in batting in runs, having accounted for 156. Wally Berger of Boston has taken second place with 33 homers. Babe Herman holds two second places with 45 doubles and 17 stolen bases.

Pitching honors remain in the capable hands of Pat Malone of the Cubs, who has won 17 games and lost seven for a .708 average, the best mark of any regular hurler. Fred Fitzsimmons of New York has a .700 mark gained from 14 victories and six defeats. Three pitchers who work with less regularity, Mitchell of New York, Teachout of Chicago and Heving of New York, have higher averages.

Expect Big Entry List for Annual Tee Competition

Country Club to Be Host This Year in City Wide Contest

Qualifying rounds in the citywide golf tournament will be played at the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 13 and 14, it has been announced by President Luke McCrory of the country club.

The country club will be host to the titular tourney this year as the affair was staged on the Weeks park links in 1929.

An entry list of at least 140 players is expected, according to Bill Strachan, country club pro, who with Phil Hesler, Muny pro, will officiate. The entry fee will be $1.50. Trophies will be awarded in all flights.

There will be as many flights as the entry list justifies with a consolation for each regular flight.

Match play will start the week-end following the qualifying round and will continue each week-end, the definite schedule of play to be announced later.

Municipal club golfers who enter the tournament will have the privilege of practicing on the country club course Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 10-12.

U. S. Team Decisively Wins First Polo Tilt

MEADOW BROOK, N. Y., Sept. 6. (UP)—America's polo supremacy was ably upheld Saturday by the new "Big Four" that defeated the British team in the first game of the international challenge series, 10 to 5. There were 40,000 spectators.

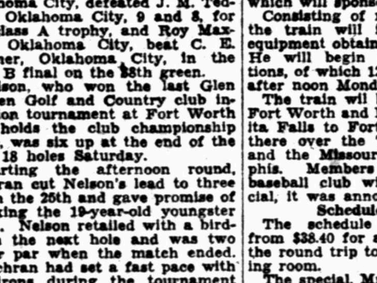

Tommy Hitchcock, Earle Hopping, Eric Pedley and Winston Guest, riding like demons and hitting with rare accuracy, dominated the play and left the hard fighting British side little chance to score.

As so often happens, but seldom in polo, it was a youngster, who barely made the American team, who proved the star of a day of brilliant polo.

"Young" Hopping, as they call the boyish stock broker whose selection caused the defense committee so many sleepless nights, proved a worthy member of a great team. It was his capable "feeding" which enabled Pedley to score five goals and keep the United States always out in front. In addition Hopping scored three goals himself, twice with brillian backhanders from difficult angles.

For the British, Capt. "Pat" Roark at No. 3 played splendidly, especially in view of the fact that he was pitted against Tommy Hitchcock.

The latter, captain of the American side, did not shine as brightly as Meadow Brook's crowds have come to expect, but in the closing chukkers his superior horsemanship stood out.

Americans Use Few Lead Pencils And Typewriters

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. (UP)—If there's any doubt about America being a nation of literates, the census bureau can produce convincing statistics to dispel it.

Returns from its census of manufacturers, just completed, show 842,780,160 wooden pencils were manufactured last year, or an average of about seven apiece for every man, woman and child in the country.

In addition American factories produced 23,103,936 mechanical pencils, 248,284,160 steel and brass pen points, 13,922,064 fountain pens and some 588,769 typewriters, the census disclosed.

The bureau valued the pencils at $27,692,112, the pen and fountain pen output at $33,923,444, and typewriters at $31,368,939. Its check showed manufacturers shipped $16,224,724 worth of carbon paper and inked ribbons.

TIMES' DAILY MARKETS

LITTLE CHANGE IN PRICE FOR COTTON MARKET IS QUIET

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—Cotton was quiet today with prices responding to small orders either way. An early advance on covering and some trade buying was followed by reactions under southern selling and week-end liquidation which was accompanied by talk of an easier technical position following recent advances. New December after advancing to 11.50 at the start, sold off to 11.43 and closed at 11.47.

The general market closed barely steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 5 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables. A private report placing the condition of the crop at 54.7 and the indicated yield at 14,500,000 bales compared with an indication of 14,600,000 a month ago, may have accounted for some of the local selling.

The new October sold down from 11.44 to 11.25 and March to 11.68 but prices then steadied and there were rallies later on.

Liverpool cables said there had been some continental buying and trade calling in that market as well as covering and reported that more encouraging news was reaching Manchester from China with a fair business pending. The amount of cotton on shipboard at U. S. ports awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 115,000 bales compared with 67,000 last year.

New Orleans Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 6. (AP)—Pre-bureau conditions dominated the cotton market today and although prices opened slightly higher in sympathy with good cables and ruled steady in the early trading they weakened in the second hour owing to active liquidation by recent buyers owing to fears that the government crop estimate may now prove as low as the average of the private authorities indicated.

After gaining 3 points in the early trading prices declined 13 to 14 points later and the close was steady showing net losses for the day of 9 to 15 points. The tropical storm appeared to have dissipated and was no longer a market influence.

A private authority made the condition average 55.7 per cent of normal and the indicated yield 14,500,000 bales.

Liverpool came in 3 to 4 points better than due and first trades here showed gains of 1 to 2 points. The market ruled steady after the start on a little short covering, October trading up to 11.40 and December to 11.56, or 3 points above the previous close.

Later the market eased off owing to liquidation by recent buyers in advance of the government report and prices made new lows near the end at 11.27 for October and 11.44 for December, or 13 to 14 points below the early highs. The close was at or near the lows, showing net losses on the more active months of 9 to 10 points.

Port receipts 37,154, for season 94,477, last season 673,546, exports 18,706, for season 455,523, last season 385,610, port stock 1,987,319, last year 739,987. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 65,861; last year 55,113. Spot sales at southern markets 43,521. Last year 39,906.

CURB SHARES GAIN SATURDAY TRADING WITH OILS HIGHER

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—Curb shares today continued the advance begun yesterday.

Trading, while sluggish compared to last year's standards, was the busiest for a Saturday session since Aug. 9. Transactions aggregated 285,500 shares.

Activity centered in the popular trading issues among the utilities.

The oils made substantial improvement, probably reflecting firmer wholesale gasoline prices. International Petroleum was one of the more active members of the group, rising about a point. Cosden, Imperial and Gulf mounted 1 to 1⅜, and Humble sold up 3⅜. Cities Service was active, but closed only ⅛ of a point higher.

Electric Bond & Share was a strong spot, rising about 2 points to a new high for the movement above 84.

Industrials and specialties were largely neglected. TAmerican Austin, recently admitted to trading on this market, dropped from 6⅝ to 3⅛, then rallied to close at 6.

A strong spot in the investment trusts was United States and Overseas, which sold up more than 2 points in active trading for this normally quiet issue.

PRICE FOR WHEAT SWEPT UPWARD BY ARGENTINE UNREST

CHICAGO, Sept. 6. (AP)—Disturbing political news from Argentina, together with word that trading in grain futures at Buenos Aires had been suspended, swept Chicago wheat prices upward today. Denials from Buenos Aires that trading on the wheat exchange had been suspended did not reach Chicago until after trading had ended for the day.

News of unrest in the South American Republic came with the market here subsiding under selling pressure and the reaction towards higher levels found wheat in a badly oversold condition. In the short space of 45 minutes prices had advanced almost 4c a bushel from the day's extreme low. Not all of the gain was held, but the professional sellers were much less confident and their nerve badly shaken. Corn was affected by the turn in wheat, but met more opposition on the rally, and final price changes were minor.

Wheat closed nervous and unsettled at 1⅛@1⅞c net higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unsteady, from ⅛c lower to ⅜c higher. Oats finished unchanged to ⅜c up, and provisions ranged from unchanged to 3c advanced.

Wheat opened firm here despite weakness at Liverpool, but later eased off with Winnipeg, especially when reports came in from the seaboard that export business in North American wheat overnight was slow. Scattered selling was forcing the market downgrade when reports came that trading in futures had been suspended in Argentina. This was quickly followed by reports of revolution and wheat prices immediately wheeled about and started higher. The upward movement was a veritable stampede, with traders striving mightily to buy wheat. This rush swept aside all opposition and the December delivery which had sold early at 88⅝c a bushel jumped to 93c, or 3⅜c a bushel over yesterday's finish.

Oats and rye followed the trend of wheat and corn, with buying of oats noticed. Prices averaged higher.

Provisions were quieter and held around steady.

Closing indemnities: Wheat, September (offers) 86⅛c; December 88⅝@89c, 97; March 93c, 98⅛c; May 95⅝c, $1.01@½c. Corn September 96¼c, 98½c; December 90⅛@⅜c, 96⅛@¼c; March 92⅝c, 97⅜@98c; May 94⅛c, $1.00.

UPWARD SWING IN STOCK MARKET TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—The stock market took another upward flip today, rallying one to five points in a two-hour turnover that exceeded the volume of some recent full time sessions. Sales of 1,400,000 shares represented the largest Saturday business in a full month.

Selecting U. S. Steel as the vehicle for the climb, the encouraged bulls started a demonstration that lifted the market through the August high to beat levels since late in July. The advance, coupled with yesterday's, more than eliminated the week's earlier losses. Short covering was the important factor in the rally, but there was no mistaking the better tone, particularly in the Steel and Copper shares.

U. S. Steel soared to 173⅝, the best price in three months, and closed only ⅛ under the top for a net gain of 2½ points. Bethlehem, Republic, Vanadium and Gulf States rose in sympathy as bears covered. The strength of the Coppers netted advances of one to three in Cerro de Pasco, Inspiration, Anaconda and Kennecott.

Oils remained largely dormant, but with this exception the market was definitely committed to the upside.

Political troubles in Argentina were reflected in a slump in the peso. The German mark sagged to a new 1930 low and other leading European exchanges continued easy.

With Peace or War in Balance All Eyes in Europe Now Turn To League Assembly and Briand

By FRANK H. SIMONDS
Daily Times Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The annual assembly of the League of Nations, which holds its first important session on Sept. 8, is beyond question the most interesting since 1926, the year of the admission of Germany. A more exact parallel, however, may be found perhaps in the assembly of 1924, the first in which the prime ministers of Britain and France were present.

Nineteen twenty-four was the year which saw the beginning of that period of pacifications and adjustment which lasted with certain hesitations until the opening of the present year, when the second conference at The Hague finally disposed of the Young plan and with it of the problem of reparations. Consequent upon this settlement, too, was the evacuation of the Rhineland in June, which for all practical purposes wound up the post-war era.

When MacDonald and Herriot met in Geneva in 1924 Europe was still under the shadow of the occupation of the Ruhr and paralyzed by the long protracted duel between France and Britain, which had ended in general European disaster. At this meeting of the league the bases were laid for the whole process of reconciliation which has now terminated. Then, Europe, on the edge of complete ruin, changed both the courses and the crews of the various ships of state.

Today the situation, if less acute, is hardly less disturbing. The London naval conference, whatever its result in respect to Anglo-American relations; certainly resulted in the exacerbation of Franco-Italian feelings. Since that time there have been a long series of incidents, which have resulted in the creation of two armed camps on either side of the Alps from Savoy to Nice.

Nor is the situation entirely different on the Rhine. The French troops have retired behind the frontier which separated France from the Germans from 1815 until 1871 and was restored at the Paris peace conference. But this liberation of occupied Germany, far from promoting peace, has resulted in an explosion of German demands for a revision of the peace treaties, a revision affecting not merely the Polish frontier but also the Belgian.

Inevitably this German demand has aroused anxiety all over Europe and particularly in Paris and Warsaw. Briand's long campaign for European cooperation, which in its latest phase is somewhat gradiloquently described as a plan for a United States of Europe, has been sidetracked everywhere, but most disastrously in his home country, and Europe is talking not about federation but of feuds which extend from Wilna to Lake Prespa.

Will the assembly of the League of Nations arrest this obvious disintegration of European solidarity, this unmistakable drift toward a pre-war atmosphere and even toward pre-war combinations? This is the question which is being asked with a good deal of interest all over the old continent.

But the real explanation of the absence of any dominating optimism must be disclosed in the fact that at Geneva Briand will be deprived of any powerful British aid or support for his great project. Britain does not advocate European federation for the simple reason that it cannot participate in such a union because of its dominions, and cannot stay out without compromising its European situation. And Briand, unsupported by MacDonald and now bitterly opposed at home by powerful factions, indeed, by Poincare himself, is not likely to get far.

In an effort to counterbalance the unfortunate effect of its attitude in the matter of European union, Britain is likely to make its play upon the proposal for "all-in" arbitration. But although France is perfectly willing to go as far or even farther than Britain in the matter of agreeing to submit all disputes to court decision, she is not likely to regard this as a substitute for the Briand proposal which envisages mutual guarantees of existing frontiers.

The possibility that Geneva will do much to allay present European malaise is thus rather slight. The league remains fatally handicapped by the fact that the real peril to European peace is outside its control. The demand of certain states, the losers of the war, for a revision of peace treaties and of existing frontiers, the determination of other states, the victors, to retain their present limits at all costs, automatically closes the door to league-action.

On the other hand it is manifest that European statesmanship cannot permit the present disquieting drift to continue indefinitely without confessing bankruptcy and courting catastrophe. Sooner or later if cooperation is not achieved in some fairly definite fashion division into rival alliances such as existed before 1914 is inescapable. The states dissatisified with the existing order and those content are bound to fuse in opposing camps, (in fact the satisfied powers have already joined in a series of alliances) and then a new war will be a daily possibility.

Today there are about 125,000,000 French, Poles, Czechs, Jugoslavs, Rumanians and Belgians, who are satisfied with their present frontiers but feel that they must guard them because of the expressed purpose of the almost equal number of Germans, Hungarians, Bulgarians, Lithuanians and even Italians, who demand revision as an antecedent condition to assured order and complete adjustment. So far the defeated powers, having been forcibly disarmed and in Germany's case also occupied by foreign armies, have been unable to combine or even to act separately, and without an ally Italy has been powerless.

But Europe is getting back to normal. Germany is now free and nothing can prevent the Germans and their associates of the war from joining the Italians, if they choose, to form a new system of alliances gravely challenging to France and perhaps surpassing it in man-power, if Russia is brought into the combination. And it is no secret that Italy has made suggestions at Berlin and that certain Germans have reproached their government for turning a cold shoulder to Fascist invitation.

At Geneva, then, Europe will appear manifestly at the crossroads. Of course it would be inexact to assert that any decisive turn will be taken at this assembly, or, indeed during the present year. On the other hand it is at least true that the unmistakable drift of Europe toward the old order or perhaps more exactly the old anarchy has already created alarm amongst most thoughtful observers.

Europe wants peace. All peoples are as one in this fundamental desire. But peace for a vast collection of millions means a peace of justice attainable only by the revision of the decisions of Paris. Yet such revision means war for other millions and as the years pass each group is becoming more and more insistent upon its own views.

If, too, you go below the surface in Paris, London, Brussels, Berlin or Warsaw, you will find more real anxiety than at any moment since the eve of the occupation of the Ruhr. Locarno, the Kellog pact, even the league itself, all have proved illusions insofar as it was expected or hoped that they would supply a solid guarantee of order and tranquility.

In this atmosphere the assembly meets again with the whole world watching closely. And, once more Briand seems bound to be the outstanding figure, as he has been in so many great sessions before. But today Briand stands alone. His great associates of Locarno have vanished. Stresemann is dead and Austen Chamberlain has been repudiated by his fellow-countrymen. Moreover the Breton's home front is unmistakably crumbling. Thus it may turn out that he is fighting, his final battle. Indeed, the episode of Cannes may be repeated and with his proposals of European cooperation still incomplete he may go out as he did in 1922, when Poincare upset the Briand ministry and cleared the road for the Ruhr.

STATE OFFICIAL MAKING INQUIRY INTO FIRES HERE

A number of fires which have occurred here recently will be investigated before he completes his work in Wichita Falls, according to the announcement here Saturday of James Byrne of Austin, deputy fire marshal.

The fact that there has been an increase throughout the state in the number of fires recently, he declared further, has caused his department to make thoroughgoing inquiries into any fires about which there are suspicious circumstances. Several such fires have occurred here recently, Mr. Byrne said.

Investigations made during the latter part of the week resulted in the filing by Mr. Byrne of complaints charging J. R. Criswell and Joe M. Ross with arson in connection with the alleged burning of the Ross home on Pennsylvania avenue several weeks ago.

PARTY ROBBED $130,000 IN GEMS

Returning Home From Evansville, Ill., Theater

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 6. (AP)—The Jason F. Whitneys and a party of four en route to their home in Evanston after attending a theater were robbed of jewelry valued at $130,000 early today by four young robbers, two of whom wore handkerchief masks. Whitney is president of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese company.

One of the members of the party was James A. Hewett, of Manchester, England, a house guest of the Whitneys.

The party had attended the theater in Chicago and were dropping one of the guests, Mrs. Gladys S. Mehan, at her home when the Whitney car was crowded to the curb.

Rings, bracelets and necklaces were stripped from their wearers quickly at the point of revolvers. The robbery was executed so quickly that the bandits' car had disappeared into the darkness toward Chicago before the alarm could be spread.

Personal Loss $125,000

Mrs. Whitney reported her personal loss was $125,000, including a ring valued at $50,000.

Besides the ring, 15 carats in size, Mrs. Whitney lost five bracelets and a necklace. One of the other women was allowed to keep her necklace, comparatively modest in value.

The bandits also demanded the keys of the Whitney car, which they carried off with them to prevent immediate pursuit. The Evanston police were notified by telephone and flashed word of the robbery to Chicago. A radio alarm sent 15 squad cars to Sheridan road in an effort to intercept the bandits.

Besides the Whitneys, Mrs. Mehan and Hewett, the party included Mr. and Mrs. Oliver A. Blackburn. Mr. Blackburn is secretary of the Kraft-Phenix corporation.

After the theater, the party had stopped at a restaurant where, police believe, the dazzling gems were observed by the four men who a few minutes later stole them.

'HOT TIPS' FAIL TO SOLVE PUZZLE MISSING JUSTICE

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (INS)—After investigation of several "hot tips," authorities said today they were as much baffled as ever concerning the strange disappearance of Justice Joseph F. Crater of the supreme court. However, Police Commissioner Mulrooney said information he had received indicated the jurist was alive as late as Wednesday.

Mulrooney said there was nothing to confirm belief that the judge was dead "from any cause."

Reports that Justice Crater had been found in a lonely cabin in Canada were declared false by police.

That the justice might have ridden in an automobile near Port Chester, N. Y., 10 days ago as reported by a man who said he gave the missing judge a ride was declared plausible by investigators. Another report was from a woman who said she saw the jurist on Wednesday near the Canadian border.

SOUL STIRRING MUSIC AND OLD FASHIONED SHOUTING

Editor The Times: Do you know that a genuine old fashioned revival of religion is going on out at the Grant Street Methodist church? I was out there last night and heard a wonderful sermon preached by Rev. Harry S. Allen, late of Macon, Ga., one of the general evangelists of the church. There were altar conversions and some real soul-stirring music and I actually heard some shouting.

The people of this young congregation hold group prayer meetings from 7:30 to 8 p. m. each evening and the regular service begins at 8. If even all the Methodist people of the city knew what they are missing the new Grant street church would not hold the crowds.

BRECKENRIDGE STUDENT OF UNIVERSITY ARRESTED CHARGED WITH FORGERY

AUSTIN, Sept. 6. (AP)—Arrested at a bank teller's window, John C. Alexander of Breckenridge, University of Texas student, was charged with forgery on three counts today.

Alexander was charged with attempting to cash a check for $25 which bore the forged endorsement of William F. Folts, president of the Austin National bank. The teller called Mr. Folts, who denied making the endorsement.

The check was drawn on the First National bank of San Antonio in favor of Robert B. Andrews and signed with the name Charles F. Andrews.

The other two charges were based upon the alleged cashing of checks on March 15 and Aug. 21 both bearing the forged signature of W. D. Hornaday, director of publicity at the university. Alexander was held in county jail.

This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other mild ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the largest selling laxative in drugstores everywhere.

THE MESSAGE MUST GO THROUGH a Surgeon who operates on many Telephones each Day

A telephone in trouble! Then watch for Jimmy Jackson, with his little gray car and his black instrument case.

When Jimmy's car stops at a doorway, and Jimmy comes swinging up the walk, casting keen eyes at the telephone wire, maybe noting an insulator that should be replaced, a spot where insulation is worn—well, troubles are at an end!

For Jimmy's specialty is "operating" on sick telephones.

Let others test and diagnose, make records of this and that. It's Jimmy's job to delve down into the insides of a telephone with pliers and screwdriver—find what is wrong—and make it right.

"When did you first notice this trouble?" he'll ask a housewife. "This morning some time? Hm-m-m!"

Deftly he removes the receiver, makes a preliminary test of the line.

Then from his black case he takes a brush, neatly cleans accumulated dust from the coils and wires that fill the box. Skillfully, he tests connections, tightens loose nuts, measures "contacts" with a thin gauge, adjusts them with expert fingers.

Out comes his test telephone, and Jimmy "taps on" to the wires of the bell box. Intently he listens, makes a change here, another there, speaks a few low words to someone on the testboard at the telephone office.

"I think I've found your trouble right there," he'll say at last, rising and winding up the cord of his test set.

But that, to Jimmy, doesn't mean that his job is done!

He gives the telephone a thorough examination: Taps the receiver to be sure it is in "healthy" condition—notes a broken mouthpiece and replaces it—looks carefully at cords and wiring—goes outside to put up a new insulator, to see that the line is clear and in good condition.

When at last he packs his instrument case and goes back down the walk to his car, he leaves a healthy telephone behind.

Thus Jimmy makes his way courteously into factory and corner store, into mansion and cottage, apartment and tenement—clings to icy poles in freezing winter blasts—clears a line down an alley under blazing summer sun.

And all because there are telephones in trouble—telephones that must be put back quickly to the work of serving the voices of business, of pleasure, of anxiety and despair, which minute by minute pulse through the vast web of wires.

One of an army of outside repairmen is he. Day by day they patrol the telephone lines in cities, towns and hamlets everywhere, to the end that, at any time, you may talk to almost anyone, nearly anywhere. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

MISS RATHKE BECOMES BRIDE THURSDAY EVE

A pretty wedding marked with simplicity was solemnized Thursday evening when Miss Flora Rathke became the bride of John L. Shehan at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rathke.

The bride and bridegroom entered from the left through a doorway prettily festooned with sweet peas and the marriage ritual was read by the Rev. C. M. Beyer before an improvised altar banked with ferns.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Dora Rathke, and Mr. Shehan was attended by C. Henry Rathke.

Tall pink tapers tied with tulle cast a suffused glow over the scene, and the bride's chosen colors, pink and green, were noted in the dainty refreshment course served to the immediate family and a few intimate friends of the bride and groom.

The bride was lovely in a tete de negre model of chiffon velvet and carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley, while the groom was attired in a dark business suit.

Mrs. Pearl Davis Spends Vacation With Musicians

Mrs. Pearl Calhoun Davis has returned to Wichita Falls from an interesting vacation spent in California, where she was the house guest of her first voice teacher, Madame Anna Chauchon, European opera singer, now retired and living with her daughter. Mrs. Davis has her voice studio at the Kemp kort apartments and is choir director of the First Methodist church, the choir having been left under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr., during Mrs. Davis' absence.

In Hollywood Mrs. Davis was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kellogg, who number among their pupils some of the most renowned motion picture stars, chief among whom are John Boles, Conrad Nagel, Charlotta King and Laura La Plant. Mrs. Davis had the privilege of hearing Miss King, who is preparing for the operatic stage, in many of her lessons. She also heard John Boles, whom she described as "a tireless student who came for a lesson each day."

"Another interesting pupil of the studio," Mrs. Davis said, "is Will Rogers Jr., a tall lad of 18 years, in every respect much like his famous father. His voice is a good baritone. He shows a decided preference for cowboy songs and has great talent for singing them.

"Mr. Kellogg told me of an interesting incident which occurred while he was on tour with the De Resgke singers and Will Rogers. He was looking through some songs sent by the publishers for his selection and chanced upon one of Oscar Fox's cowboy songs. Oscar Fox, of course, is the famous Texas song writer, formerly of the University of Texas and now well known for his songs of the western range. Will Rogers passed as Mr. Kellogg was humming the tune of the cowboy song and stopped to listen. 'Come into the smoker,' Will said, 'and I'll sing you verses of that song you'll never see in print.' This he did, singing dozens of them, followed by many other cowboy songs known only to the cowboy."

Mrs. Davis described her enjoyment of the Hollywood bowl, where she listened to symphony concerts under the stars on several nights. While listening there, she said, her mind drifted back to the wonderful possibilities of the small canyons west of Wichita Falls, which with little effort could be made into an artistic center for the musical and dramatic life of this city, by using one of the natural amphitheaters here for presentations similar to those in Hollywood's famous bowl.

Mrs. Davis announced that her first work of importance during the winter season would be the presentation of Gounod's "Gallia," a motet for soprano solo, chorus, orchestra and organ. She will spend a great part of the coming weeks in preparation for the presentation of the composition.

MRS. M'ADA HOSTESS TO BLUEBONNET CLUB

Mrs. R. W. McAda was hostess to members of the Bluebonnet 42 club Friday afternoon when Mrs. W. O. McAda was awarded the favor for high score. Mrs. M. L. Winblood was low. Guest favors went to Mesdames C. J. Milliron, Charles Myers and Miss Fannie Rice.

A lovely ice course was served to Mesdames McAda, Winblood, Milliron, Myers, W. D. Talley, L. J. Raley, J. W. Addis, O. Gray, B. F. Campbell, J. J. Allen, R. W. McAda, and Misses Fannie Rice and Juanita McAda. The club will meet with Mrs. L. J. Raley next Friday afternoon.

Joe H. Stumpp will open a class of piano and violin at his studio, Park hotel, Iowa Park, Texas, Sept. 8. Mr. Stumpp is a well known musician of this section, having been director of the orchestra and organist at the Olympic and Majestic theaters in Wichita Falls. Phone 73, Iowa Park, Texas, for enrollment.—Adv.

DIARIES OF ANDREE NOT TO BE COMMERCIALIZED

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 6. (AP)—There is a growing opinion among members of the Swedish press that the diaries of Salomon August Andree are not to be the object of any deal.

The president of the Swedish Publishers association said today: "The idea that we should permit news agencies and newspapers to overbid each other for them is absurd. On the other hand the finders should have some reward, which Sweden can easily afford. But this reward must not necessarily be in proportion to the vast sum said to be already on deposit with the foreign office."

The Associated Press was asked by Swedish officials about the proper disposition of the Andree diary and advised that a document of such world-wide interest should be made available for simultaneous use by the press throughout the world without commercial consideration. At least one other American news agency made the same recommendation.

The Story of Sue

© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

Julia Gerard stood in the window, a slender pink linen figure whose dark eyes were laughing ironically, although she managed to curve her lips into a smile that would deceive Jack. Corrinne's more knowing eyes saw the quiver in her lips and the angry way that her hand grasped the pink linen bag.

"An old maid? Just what do you mean, Mrs. Becker?" Julia's throaty, husky voice caught Corrinne's last words and held them.

"Oh, I'm sorry, Mrs. Gerard." Corrinne answered lightly, nonchalantly pouring another glass of iced lemonade and offering it to the young woman, who shook her head in refusal. "If you don't want it, I'll drink it. You asked me what I meant, didn't you? I was just telling Jack of the success you've had in your character role. Not every woman can pretend she is a widow and get away with it. You have to know how. But you did. No one would think that you were Julia Jones, spinster, at all."

Corrinne could see the woman's face quivering in rage. She fully expected that the long tan fingers would make a play for her throat next, but Julia subsided suddenly.

"And why are you so interested in all of this?"

"I always share jokes with my friends." Corrinne rose and leisurely stretched her arms. "I must run along."

Jack's laughter interrupted her. "This is good! The only thing I objected to about you, Julia, was that you had had a husband in the offing some time or other. Now that he's gone, I can forget him."

"Of all the . . . ." Corrinne choked down the words that she wanted to say. So this scheming female was putting one over on her, Corrinne Becker? Not if she knew it, she decided! She would get even!

Julia's eyes, openly triumphant, a little mocking, very sure of themselves, met Corrinne's contemptuous stare.

"I was married so very young I've never had to resort to such experiments," Corrinne heard her voice murmuring. "It sounds so fascinating. Tell us what prompted it."

"I invented a husband as a protection barrier to save me from the men I didn't want to be nice to. You know how it is. And this worked a little. But I'm supposed to be playing bridge."

"Oh, no, you're not. We're going for a sail," Jack declared.

"Tonight perhaps," Julia promised. "I have bridge, then a dinner engagement and after that . . . ."

Corrinne caught the prophecy in Julia's voice. There was nothing of the spinster about the woman, anyhow. Since she so evidently was in search of a husband why didn't she grab off one, Corrinne pondered, as she left the veranda.

Julia's voice came drifting to her. "Isn't she an amusing child? Of course I am a widow . . . but someone has invented a spiteful tale and I thought I might as well let it go. I hate to compete with gossip. But you needn't mind that, Jack. It was so long ago . . . ."

Corrinne shook her firm white fists. "Oh, doesn't he? Just you wait, Miss Julia Jones . . . I'll win out yet! In fact, I have an idea this minute!"

NEXT: Corrinne's scheme.

Double Brim Felts and Soliels Share Favor With Beretta in Millinery Mode

By ELEANOR CRANSTON

There used to be a joke something like this—"How is the king?" "Oh, he is able to sit up and laugh at Queen Mary's hat." But we are afraid to laugh at it any more because the way hats are perched up on the head this year is perilously near to the Queen Mary type and we may yet have to search the attic for the hat pins our ancestors used years ago to hold their headgear in place.

The most forceful thing we can say about millinery fashion this year is that it looks like a very busy season for the hair dressers for which the hats worn back off the face as they are, nothing less than perfectly marcelled hair will answer. However, most of the styles take a half-way position so while one side of the head is very much revealed the other side is apt to be covered and even draped to meet the very coat collar. And they are becoming—and they are picturesque—which is the main thing Paris is asking of any fashion this season.

Details of Millinery

Now to deal with millinery in a more detailed way, we will divide them according to "Suitability." It would be hard to find a more perfect type of suit hat than the beretta in its new styling—with short back, shallow crown and softening loops or drapes designed to show the outline of the coiffure. They may be of velvet or felt, while some of the very smartest effects are berettas made of the fabric to match the ensemble—than which nothing has yet been achieved to more completely meet the correct idea of ensemble or to attain such complete chic.

The new fashion tendencies in dresses affect millinery in a way which creates an elaborated appearance—shallow crowns and bandeaux effects combined with brims are seen in great variety—and here is where the double brimmed felt finds its opportunity to soften a line that might be too severe to be flattering.

Many Hats Are Trimmed

While you never have expected to see the day when hats would be trimmed as of yore—it has arrived—and little feathers, velvet choux, imitations of paradise, ostrich tips and very rich ornaments are placed in smartest manner on even so nonchalant a hat as the beret, while nearly every hat with pretension to dressiness is somehow "trimmed."

If you are wearing a fur coat this year and there is no reason why one shouldn't (either from the standpoint of slenderness of figure or slenderness of purse) by all means wear a fur beretta to match. You may have it as sleek as you please—turban-like or plain beret with an ornament in the way of fur buttons or balls—or a twist or bow of grosgrain ribbon to accent the color of your furs.

In taking up the part color plays in millinery, we are taking up the part color plays in 1930 fashion—for the color ensemble idea is so generally accepted that to wear a black frock means to wear a black hat—to wear a green ensemble means to wear either a green hat or a hat in which green is the accented theme and so on through the whole color range which has been adequately met by milliners.

Of materials choose from felts, soliels, chamois, velvets and fabrics, but let your good taste and sense of fitnes guide you in wearing the one best suited to the occasion.

"Elegance" IS THE KEYNOTE OF THE FALL MODE

The Cowl Neckline so "everywhere" in the dress mode . . . sport, street, afternoon . . . was created by Vionnet and introduced first by Jane Cowl. It reaches a popularity peak this season. No wonder, it is so soft, so youthful, so flattering.

We interpret the Cowl neckline in a black Canton dress with white satin-faced scalloped Eton and neckline 29.75

Tunics and Peplums of fall 1930 frocks were borrowed from the wardrobe of the picturesque Russian peasant.

Noble Lady (red) Canton frock with long straight tunic has flat black fur bow and buttons 39.75

A charming dress is this one with black Canton skirt and pink wool lace peplum blouse 49.75

The Gold Studded Frock is a perfect "jewel" for your fall wardrobe. Lucile Paray started this thing of studding fabrics with gold and we are all copying.

Black crepe gold studded frock with Cowl neckline 19.75

Fur Trimmed Coats . . . fitted, flaring, belted coats, with fur bands . . . were copied by Paris from the resplendent uniform of the Cossack. Fur bands on sleeves full at the elbow and tight at wrist are very Russian!

Black coat with caracul collar, cuffs and banding which runs down front opening and on around flaring bottom 125.00

Accessories must be simple with such an elaborate mode. But simple does not mean plain, just now it means simple elegance!

It is a matter of comment, even among our own personnel, that the most wearable and interesting clothes in a decade of fashion selling have the most reasonable prices in that length of time.

We invite you to enjoy our windows. They are simply elegant now and will be all this gala Fashion Week.

P.B.M.Co. DEPARTMENT STORE

"Smart Fashions for the Limited Budget"

This Year of Grace in Fashions Revives Styles of "Dressed-Up Periods" in Coats, Dresses and Suits—Gretchen Thomsen

By GRETCHEN THOMSEN

Just imagine that the store which selects your fashions for you has invited you to make a trip to New York with their buyer or stylist and to visit the fashion establishments where the new fall garments are designed and created for you and hundreds of other smart American women. In fancy, see yourself going from place to place—to dressmakers, coat, ensemble and millinery houses, seeing the mannikins parade in the fall creations. The designers, who have spent weeks in Paris at openings of famous houses and who have brought home models to be either copied exactly or adapted to suit American tastes and figures, are proudly superintending the display and explaining with great enthusiasm why this model or that, is bound to be the greatest success—or telling over and over again that this is a season of suitability.

Parade of Styles

Now you are seated in the show room of a dressmaker (since you are very much interested in dresses at the very beginning of autumn). The procession begins—one, two, three, four—you catch only a glimpse of something startlingly different the models seem to appear in such rapid succession. You are dazzled at first and your only impression is "Beautiful, beautiful." Then you think, "How slender and graceful—it just isn't human for anyone to be so divinely slender. They are all slender—exactly the same—and they are all tall and graceful and they all have the daintiest feminine curves!" You start to puzzle it out, and at last the light breaks. It is the dresses themselves, not the mannikins—it is the way the hips are draped and fitted and then gently start to flare at the knees that gives that illusion of heavenly slimness. It is the way the bodices seem to be patterned after some artist's model. It is the scarfs, or the clever trimming on the sleeves, or the panels that give that swaying, willowy grace.

Now you are beginning to observe details. You are recovering from the daze of seeing so much in so short a time and you note with interest that dress after dress is touched (you can hardly say trimmed) with fur. Little tabs on the corner of jabot or scarf—fur buttons, bows or band outlining the neck—and how it does flatter the face. What a subtle way to introduce a little white on black—that ermine band on the black satin dress. Then all at once the thought seizes you, "Are all the dresses black?" Black satin—black canton crepe—black and white mixtures—black with a gold metal fleck—dozens of black dresses—it's frightfully smart but . . . ah! at last the colors you have heard so much about—and you are being told that brown will lead but it will be hard to find anything more gloriously rich and autumn-like than the wine shades.

What's What in Coats

"Show the line, please, girls." You are now in a fashionable coat house and because it is your first visit since the fall opening you are to be shown the complete line of coats for all occasions.

"Swathed in fur," you whisper. Yes, madame, this is a year of fur trimmings. Fine fur is easy to get this year and you are going to be as luxurious as you desire. But don't for a moment think it is just "heaped on" fur—because it is the way your fur is applied that makes your "coat-smartness." There's always a trick up fashion's sleeve—and this year you will find a good many tricks on fashion's sleeve—usually in the way of fur. You see the silhouette isn't greatly changed except that bloused backs and bolero effects seem to have crowded out most of the capes—but you will see that the fur is manipulated very differently—the collars are higher than ever—there are novel borders and sleeve effects. You notice that the coats have the same slender effects as dresses and you wonder (audibly) how winter coats can look so sleek and still be warm. "It is in the weave," you are told, "as well as the way the coats are designed. The large collars and the semi-fitted lines that flare at the hems have a trick of making the waist and hip appear very small. They are also about three inches longer than last year."

A pause to allow you to gasp at the models stepping forth in coats as different from the ones you have just seen, as day from night. They are sturdy looking camel's hair, tweeds, boucles, heavy surfaced and when they are not black and white mixtures or brown tints they are frankly colorful. "It is a question of suitability for the occasion," you are told. "Suitability"—are you never going to hear the last of that word? No, my dear, not this year. You will hear it when you buy your coats (not coat), your dresses of silks or satins or velvets for afternoon, your dresses of tweed or wool crepe, simply tailored for street or sports. You will hear it when you choose a knitted weave ensemble for your daughter to wear on the campus and when you choose her lapin or muskrat coat for the games—for you will probably also be shown a coat of caracul or Persian lamb which is "suitable" for the evening.

On Suits and Ensembles

But before we get too deeply into furs, we will peep into a showing of suits and ensembles.

"Dressy suits, first, girls." Mercy, are suits going to suit the occasion? "It all depends upon where you want to wear it," you are advised. "Why, I want to wear it for all daytime occasions," you exclaim. "Then madame, I'd select a seven-eighths length jacket with fur collar and cuffs and dress to match. Of course, if you wish a suit for the morning and one for the afternoon, then do not hesitate upon choosing a tweed with hip length or longer jacket for the activities of the day and a broadcloth or suede cloth with fur border as well as fur collars and cuffs—they are so chic and elegant for the smart tea or bridge, especially for the fall and early winter.

Your day is over—you are tired but thrilled—you have seen so much you are bewildered and you are undoubtedly grateful to wake up and realize that after all you do not need to choose your fall fashions from such a vast array. You are feeling thankful for your good reliable fashion store right here in your own home town, whose daily experience in sifting out the "suitable" styles makes it possible for you to choose at your leisure and comfort, from well selected fashions that are sure to be right.

A coat this fall is only as smart as its silhouette and there are two types to choose from—the moulded gently flaring silhouette and the type with bloused back. The flare is modified—hemline three inches longer than last year—furs applied more generously than ever.

Styles in Dress Silhouettes

Throughout all the various types of dress silhouette and detail one feature manifests itself—the smooth hip line. The tunic, bolero, draped neckline and leg-o'-mutton sleeve are the outstanding new features—daytime frocks favor pleats, while formal gowns adhere to flare treatment. The accepted length for daytime is the middle of the calf of the leg, while late afternoon and evening gowns swirl gracefully around the feet. Canton crepe is the favorite of silks for afternoon, with satin, velvet and metal embroidered crepe following. Travel tweed and lightweight woolens win for tailored and sports types of frocks.

Ensembles divide themselves into two classes—the dressy type, of smooth velvety fabric, richly fur trimmed, with blouse of metal cloth or satin . . . and the sports or tailored type of tweed and sturdy woolens—the jacket very long—in some cases to the very hem of the skirt, and trimmed with the sports type of fur.

ST. LOUIS GAMBLER HELD FOR RANSOM RETURNS TO HOME AFTER SEVEN DAYS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6. (AP)—John T. Soy, elderly St. Louis gambler, kidnaped a week ago, returned to his home here today where he is suffering from high blood pressure. He refused to make a statement and his physicians would not permit questioning.

Yesterday was the seventh day the gambler had been held for ransom. He was taken prisoner on the McKinley bridge by five men a week ago last night.

It was reported $50,000 had been asked by the kidnapers for Soy's release, but a report that five of his friends had raised the amount could not be verified.

City detectives guarding Soy's home intercepted three $20,000 checks sent by Soy to friends to cover the raising of the ransom fund. Police and the gambler's friends believed he had been held by a Chicago gang.

CHARGES REORGANIZED DEMOCRATC PARTY IN CONTROL OF OLD RING

M'ALLEN, Texas, Sept. 6. (AP)—Charges that the reorganized Democratic party in Hidalgo county is influenced by the old county ring were made at a rally of the Good Government league here last night.

"There is no reorganized Democratic party in Hidalgo county," Judge D. F. Strickland of Mission told the county-wide gathering.

George C. Clough of Hosuton, attorney for the league, said the ring had cost the county more than $6,000,000 and that the tax rate can be reduced $1 on each $100 valuation if the proper men are put in office.

Santiago Guzman, editor of the league's Mexican newspaper, made an address and B. D. Kimbrough of McAllen gave a financial report showing the league had expended $17,900 of $20,800 collected in three years and would need $15,000 to continue its campaign. Contributions totaling $8,000 were made at the close of the meeting.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

1930 Big Hop

The big hop opens on Sept. 15. National honors will be awarded to members who enlist new members in camp Fire. Pretty honors have been designed for those Camp Fire Girls who win new members, new guardians, or help organize new groups. Fall is the new year in Camp Fire. As the members come back from vacations and begin on the new work it is only natural that their zeal should be expressed by the invitation to others to join the happy throng.

Big Hop Rally

On Sept. 20 all Camp Fire Girls and their guests will enjoy a typical camp fire frolic in the open.

All girls will meet at Boone's park at 10 o'clock where a sing-song and general rally will begin the day's program. Members of each group will then cook their own meal over a camp fire. At 2 o'clock or earlier, the games and contests will begin. Fire building, water boiling, nature study and track meet events will be included among the contests.

Camp Fire Girls, be sure to mark a circle around Sept. 20 and be thinking of some prospective new members whom you will invite to the big hop rally!

Guardians' Meeting

The Guardian association meeting was held at local headquarters on Tuesday morning at 9:30. Plans were made for the big hop rally on Sept. 20. Discussion was held on plans for guardian training course to be held in October, closing with a citywide council fire.

The executive board of the local council met at headquarters on Wednesday. The following members of the Oawakiya group of Alamo school prepared the luncheon; Dorthea Whitehead, Catherine Uttz, Margaret Hutchison, and Alpha Lee Gambill. Margaret baked fresh rolls, made paddies for peas and cooked candied yams. Alpha Lee and Catherine baked a delicious chocolate cake. Dorthea Whitehead prepared the slaw and fruit salad. Members of the council were impressed with ability and spirit of these splendid girls who are "learning by doing" in Camp Fire.

Of especial interest at the business meeting were the reports of the summer activities and discussion of finances.

Those attending were: Mesdames T. H. Lawson, chairman; R. E. Davis, Dr. R. H. Graham, Frank W. Michaux; Messrs. Edwin Bebb, W. A. Franklin and Mary McIlheran.

The hostesses served chilled marshmallow pudding and orange ade to the girls.

Wenonah

Wenonah group attended the Tuesday morning firemakers class held at the headquarters instead of the regular meeting which was to have been held on Monday. The girls discussed plans for the continuation of the group this winter.

Tuesday afternoon the Oawakiya group met at local headquarters and worked on smoke prints of leaves. Margaret Hutchison, Dorthea Whitehead, Ina Jo Ogle, Catherine Uttz, Alpha Lee Gambell were ready to take wood gatherer's rank Saturday afternoon before committee of awards. All but Ina Jo Ogle were present at the Tuesday meeting.

It is the plan of this group of girls to have at least one service project each month. The girls at the meeting were Edith McClure, Francis Hyland, Charlotte Kennedy, Mrs. F. W. Michaux, Margaret Davis, Margaret Taylor, and Mrs. Wayne Sommerville.

The next meeting which will be a theater party on Wednesday afternoon will be in charge of Eleanor Weiler.

The group discussed the problem of getting a guardian in the place of Mrs. Crowell, who has resigned. They plan to continue this winter as an independent group. They also discussed the prospect of finding a suitable club house.

HURLEY ORDERS WAGE LEVEL MAINTAINED FOR ENGINEERING LABORERS

ABOARD ARMY ENGINEERS Mibsissippi River Boat General Allen, Near St. Louis, Sept. 6. (AP)—Maintenance of the present level of wages for laborers on army engineering projects for the remainder of the fiscal year was ordered today by Secretary of War Hurley.

Simultaneously the war secretary directed Col. George R. Spaulding, division engineer in charge of the upper Mississippi, Ohio and Missouri rivers projects, to investigate charges that contractors were cutting wages on contract work let before the present deflation set in.

These two decisions were made by Secretary Hurley before landing at St. Louis to compite the first lap of his inspection trip down the Mississippi.

MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS COOPERATE IN STYLE SHOW PLAN

Manufacturers and dealers are cooperating in preparation for the national home furnishings style show, which is to be held in every city in the United States, Sept. 26 to Oct. 4, according to E. F. Riley, member of the Wichita Falls committee on arrangements.

"The citizens of this city," Mr. Riley said, "are going to have an opportunity to see the last word in furniture and home demonstration when this style show opens here.

"Never before has there been such an excellent selection of furnishings to choose from. The manufacturers have had their designers put forth every effort to create the most beautiful and the most useful furniture patterns. These pieces will be on the dealers' floors at the opening of the style show. They will be correctly and attractively displayed in groups and in room arrangements."

Mr. Riley pointed out that the furniture dealers of Wichita Falls are cooperating with this national movement for the purpose of bringing to this city the latest furniture styles and also suggestions to the home makers as to how best to arrange their furniture and what accessories will be most appropriate to use with it.

"Women are becoming as conscious of changes in furniture styles," Mr. Riley said, "as they are of changes in fashion styles and they are anxious to have their homes up to date as their wardrobes. The purpose of this style show is to give them a dramatic picture of the best and newest in furnishings.

"Another valuable service this show is rendering to the women and men of our community is offering them expert advice on their particular home furnishings problems. The salesmen in the retail furniture stores of this city have had the opportunity to take a special training course in home furnishing and decoration and their knowledge is at the disposal of anyone who cares to consult them. There will be persons in attendance during all the days of the show, and for all time following, who will be able to answer questions on home furnishings."

Bootlegger Sued For Taxes Jailed As Rum Ring Head

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—Charles J. Steinberg, who is being sued by the government for $1,892,278.98 income tax on his profits in bootlegging in 1921, was under arrest today as the head of a rum running fleet which operated with the aid of three secret radio stations.

The government charges that a fleet of rum ships and fast motor boats, which kept in touch with each other through code messages sent from the unlicensed radio stations, have brought liquor valued in millions of dollars into New York within the past few months.

No Apparent Landslide Under Way Which Would Win Control of Lower House of Congress for Democrats

By MARK SULLIVAN
Political Correspondent Wichita Daily Times and New York Herald Tribune
(Copyright, 1930, by New York Herald Tribune)

The principal question in this campaign is whether the Democrats will win control of the house of representatives. That means, whether the Democrats in the November election will win 24 seats (at least) away from the Republicans. (The present house, not counting vacancies, is 270 Republican, 165 Democratic.)

SULLIVAN

To win 54 seats is the Democratic objective. That way of putting it is in the main correct. Some Democratic leaders would prefer not to win 54 seats and not to win control of the house. In their lesser wish they are perfectly sincere and are thinking of the good of the party as they see it.

Their wishes for not winning quite so much as a majority of the house are two. In the first place they fear what their party in the house might do if it should have a majority. They think it might "run wild." They think it might do things which would alienate a part of the public—and might thereby impair, instead of further, the chance of the Democrats winning the presidential election of 1932. The Democrats, if they should win a majority, would have responsibility—and some of the Democratic leaders are apprehensive about what their rank and file might do if it had the power and the responsibility that goes with majority.

In the same spirit this group of Democratic leaders think their party would be much better off if they should win, not a majority of the house, but a number just short of a majority. In that happy result the Democrats would be in the best possible position to harass the Republicans. The Republicans would have the majority—and would thereby be responsible before the country. But the Democrats would be so near a majority as to be able to harass the Republicans in carrying out their responsibility.

The Democrats, if they had, say, within 20 of a majority, would be able to find among the Republicans about 10 who would be insurgent Republicans. With 10 such the Democrats could overcome a Republican majority of 20. The situation would then be in the house the same as it is in the senate. It would be a nominal Republican majority, having responsibility before the country because it seems to have a majority—but an actual majority composed of Democrats and insurgent Republicans—an actual majority which would make it difficult for the nominal Republican majority to carry on. The result would be, in the eyes of the country, Republican inability to carry out a legislative program and apparent ineptness of Republican leadership.

That is the real, and from a political standpoint the quite legitimate hope of many Democratic leaders. That is the outcome of the coming election which these leaders feel, would make the Republicans seem most ineffective and which, therefore, would most facilitate Democratic advantage in the presidential election of 1932. (It is the presidential election of 1932 that is, quite naturally, the ultimate objective of the Democrats.)

The Democrats, however, cannot go into this year's campaign with any definite and restrained number of seats as their objective. They must conduct the campaign so as to win the largest possible number of seats, so as to win every possible seat. The shrewdest Democratic leaders may hope their total winnings will be less than a majority—but they must so conduct the campaign as to try to take every possible trick.

Consequently we must look upon the Democratic objective as being to win a majority of the house for the sake of the omen it would be, the expectation it would set up for the 1932 presidential campaign. And it is the 1932 presidential campaign that is the true and final objective.

According to precedent for a long time, the winning, by the Democrats of a majority of the house in November would be followed by their winning the presidency in 1932. The theory is that the election of a majority of the house is the beginning of a new tide and that the new tide at its height elects a president.

This deduction from precedent may be stated thus: Whenever, in the middle of a presidential term (as the present year) the party out of power wins a majority of the house of representatives it follows, in the ensuing presidential year (in the present case 1932) that the party out of power elects its candidate for president and becomes the party in power.

The precedents, to take those of the last 40 years, begin with 1894. In that year the Democrats were in power with Cleveland in the White House; the Republicans won the 1894 congressional elections—and in 1896 won the presidential election with McKinley.

The next example of this set of conditions arose in 1910. In 1910 the Republicans were in power with Taft in the White House. In 1910 the Democrats won a majority of the house—and in 1912 they elected their presidential candidate, Woodrow Wilson.

The third and most recent example occurred in 1918. In 1918 the Democrats were in power with Wilson in the White House. In that year the Republicans won control of the house—and two years later, in 1920, they won the presidency with Harding and have held it ever since. In short all the precedents arising during 40 years point the same way.

In all those precedents the first step in the election of a president consisted of electing a majority of the house two years in advance.

The particular one of these precedents which the Democrats this year look back to is the 1910 one. They cite what they regard as an ominous parallel between the 1910 situation and the present 1930 one.

The parallel does go some distance—but falls immensely short of going the whole distance. In 1910 the Republicans had Taft in the White House and had control of the house by a majority of 219 to 172. Up to this point the parallel is good. In 1910 the Republicans had just completed a tariff revision, here again the parallel is good. In the 1910 congressional elections the Democrats won control of the house by 228 to 162—and this is the part of the parallel which the Democrats hope to accomplish this year. The remaining part of the parallel, which they will hope to accomplish in 1932 (assuming they accomplish control of the house this November), would be the election of their candidate for president.

This is the parallel as the Democrats see it and talk about it. But there are defects to the parallel, defects so many and striking as to make it useless for purposes of prediction.

The first defect is that there was in life in 1910 a man named Theodore Roosevelt. Because Roosevelt was living, because he had two years before retired from the presidency, because he was by far the most popular man the Republican party or any party and because his followers wanted him back in the presidency—for those reasons mainly the Taft administration was unpopular. The Taft administration, in short, was bound to be unpopular. Taft never had a chance. The mere existence of Theodore Roosevelt deprived him of a chance. Taft might have been the best president the country has ever had—but under the conditions of 1910 a large part of the country would not have thought so. The fact that Roosevelt lived, created a motive for hundreds of Roosevelt leaders in the Republican party and for millions of voters among the people to think and to say that the Taft administration was, as it would be expressed today, "all wet."

The second defect in the parallel from which the Democrats build their hopes this year is that the tariff of 1910 was very unpopular. It is true the Democrats say the present tariff is unpopular. The extent to which the present tariff may be unpopular is a subject of dispute. The Democrats say it is; but Republican leaders as well as independent observers with good sources of information say it is not acutely unpopular. In any event all that need be asserted here is that the tariff this year is certainly not as acutely unpopular as was the tariff in 1910.

One reason for the greater unpopularity of the 1910 tariff was that there were large groups of Republican leaders and large masses of Republican voters who instinctively wanted to make the tariff of 1910 unpopular. They wanted Roosevelt back in the White House—and subconsciously they felt that one way of getting him back was to regard the tariff as unpopular and to decry Taft as unpopular because he had signed and approved the tariff. It is a fact that Taft not only signed the tariff bill of his administration—but in a rather inept way took personal responsibility for it and praised it.

The next defect in the parallel upon which some Democrats this year ardently erect their hopes is that the Republican house, in 1910, was unpopular. It was unpopular because of its leader and its spokesman and its symbol—"Uncle Joe" Cannon. "Cannonism," and the Cannon rules, were as live as a political topic as the tariff itself. Cannon and the Cannon "czarship" over the house of representatives was odious to a larger number of persons than the Taft administration was.

This year nobody thinks of the Republican house as unpopular and nobody thinks of Speaker Longworth as an issue in the campaign.

The final defect in the parallel between 1910 and 1930 comes back again to Roosevelt. Roosevelt wanted the Republican nomination, tried to take it away from Taft, failed, and upon failing, set up a third party, the Progressives. It was that division of the Republicans that enabled the Democrats to win in 1912. It cannot be said with positiveness that the Democrats would not have won anyhow; but certainly it was the division of the Republicans that made their winning easy.

To turn to the present campaign as it stands upon its own bottom, the fact is that at this moment there is no Democratic landslide under way. There is no landslide of any sort. There is no nation-wide tide under way. There is no one outstanding national issue.

This campaign does not have the form of a nation-wide campaign like a presidential one. This campaign consists of the aggregate of 435 local campaigns in 435 separate congressional districts. (Not as many as 435, for in perhaps a hundred districts, some Democratic, some Republican, there is no contest, or substantially none).

This year's campaign is essentially an aggregate of local and individual campaigns. The principal issue in one congressional district may be the sitting member's vote on the war veterans' pensions. The principal issue in the adjoining district may be the sitting member's vote on the tariff—not, as a rule, on the tariff as a whole, but on a specific item in the tariff in which the district happens to be interested. The issue in another neighboring district may be prohibition, due to the fact that a local candidate may have taken up one side or the other of prohibition and pushed it to the front. If a Republican candidate for Congress happens to lose in Massachusetts it will be, generally speaking, for a different reason from that which causes a Republican candidate to lose in Kentucky or Missouri.

The diffused character of the campaign is illustrated as much by prohibition as by any other issue. In district after district both candidates are dry; in a considerable number of districts both are wet. In only a comparatively small number of districts do we find one candidate wet and the other dry.

The net of which is that the present campaign for control of the house is not really that kind of campaign at all. It is the aggregate of more than 300 local campaigns, with the outcome to be determined by local issues, local conditions and local personalities. The net resultant of these 300 or so local campaigns—if anybody can guess it—will determine whether the next house will be Republican or Democratic.

We all know that the Republicans will lose some seats. They are literally bound to lose some—because some of the seats they now hold came to them as the result of abnormal conditions. The present house was elected in 1928, the same year as the presidential campaign between Mr. Hoover and Governor Smith. In that campaign, due to the presidential aspect of it, certain congressional district in states like Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and elsewhere went Republican which has never, or practically never, gone Republican before. They are districts naturally Democratic and they will swing back to the Democrats this year as surely as states like Virginia have already swung back to their traditional Democratic anchorage.

It is certain the Republicans will lose some seats for this reason. And it is impossible to find among the Democratic seats any considerable number that the Democrats seem certainly destined to lose for any reason whatever. In short, the net resultant of this year's getting back to normal in politics is certain to cost Republicans a net loss of anywhere from 15 to 30 seats. But there are no conditions in sight from which anyone can justly deduce that the Republicans will lose the 54 seats which would cost them their majority. There are no such conditions in sight at this time. It may be there is a greater quantity of underlying political discontent due to the state of business than is apparent on the surface. Some shrewd observers, however, believe that the Democrats have hurt themselves by the long campaign of publicity emanating from Democratic headquarters which has emphasized depression and tried to associate the Republican president with blame for it.

CITY VIEW STUDENTS TO ENROLL MONDAY MORNING

Attractions for Wichita County Fair Increased

IOWA PARK, Texas, Sept. 6.—Will Burnett, director of the rodeo attractions at the Wichita County fair held at Iowa Park last year, will again head this department. Mr. Burnett has just returned from Fort Worth where he went to get in personal touch with some of the star rodeo performers of the Southwest. He states that he has also augmented his herd of wild steers and secured some of the "buckingest" broncs on which a saddle was ever girted.

Fair ground attractions will be moved westward this year, bringing the exhibit hall, livestock show, agricultural display, carnival, rodeo and entertainment platform into a more compact area. The lighting effect will be improved, the thoroughfares oiled and a systematic parking space arranged.

Some Women Think Marriage Is a Game of Solitaire By Kathleen Norris

MRS. NORRIS

Many years ago we all used to play a simple little card game called euchre.

When you had an especially strong hand in euchre—a hand was composed of only five cards, so you often did have such a hand, you said to your partner, "Give me your best card and I'll play this alone."

This was a dashing thing to do, and profited you greatly, but I have forgotten how it was scored. Only the old phrase comes back to me occasionally, "Give me your best card, partner, and I'll play this alone."

Certain wives have an idea that marriage is like euchre; you take your partner's best card, or cards, and play it alone.

You take the thrill of engagement and wedding, the delight of the new dignity and name and establishment, you take the adoration and the income, the new leisure, the new pleasures—and you play the game of marriage alone.

Some girls go into matrimony placidly and completely satisfied with themselves; it never occurs to them that adaptations and adjustments will be expected of them. And alas, although almost all men enter marriage with some consideration of the financial side, and some consideration of the physical side, most of them feel no consideration of the spiritual side at all.

Spiritually doesn't mean singing hymns on Sunday evenings and having the clergyman to dinner once a month. It doesn't mean blue-nosed dreariness and sanctimoniousness. It only means developing the finer, the higher sides of our natures; appreciating, perhaps, that we may have unsuspected depths of selfishness, jealousy, smallness, fear, in ourselves—depths that should be plumbed and aired and levelled and exposed to the healthy sunshine.

One great difficulty is that courtship is a time of such flattery, such insidious, delicious self-deception, that regular, commonplace, everyday life becomes flat and disappointing, after it. Marriage begins in a hot-house atmosphere; the first hint of disagreement or criticism dissolves the bride in tears, and sends the groom white-faced and despairing from the house. Both boy and girl have been over-dosed with the most potent drug in the world, with sweet, intoxicating passion, and they awaken to common everyday duties and to the simple, pleasant routine of living dazedly, their pride, their love, suffering a hundred hourly jars that we older husbands and wives have long forgotten.

When a young wife writes me a long story of her disillusionment and discouragement, two words always stand out across the pages like stars in the summer night sky, "I—me. I—I—I. Me—me—me." He used to love her absurdities about money, he used to kiss her dishevelled hair, he used to spoil her and cuddle her, even when she knew herself that she was being unreasonable about his mother, or when she kept him waiting, or when she was extravagant.

And now he gets so moody, and so cross! And he has no right to be one way for the first few months of marriage, and then suddenly to be so different!

Meanwhile, the man writes his side of it. She always knew he liked good food, she always knew that there were times, in his business, when he had to stay downtown three—five nights in succession. She agreed to the buying of the home that meant sacrifices. And now, by heck, she wants to go on just as she always has, running bills, and letting the house get dirty and dusty, and expecting her father to get her out of everything.

Which only means that both husband and wife have in effect said to each other: "Give me your best card, partner, and I'll play it alone!"

Marriage, and everything else in the world that is living, is not a static, established institution, like Nelson's statue or the Grand Central station. It ought to be a time of continual change, a time of tremendous growth. Even after the golden wedding party a man and woman don't know each other completely—any human relationship is full of surprises, full of possibilities.

The play-it-alone wife announces in the very beginning that she doesn't like her husband's friends, and won't entertain them. She doesn't want to move away from mama's neighborhood. She never liked bridge, and doesn't see why she should learn it. She doesn't want children, for various reasons, one of which is that if you ever want a divorce children complicate mattery terribly.

Tom praised her for the coldham-Saratoga-chip dinners of honeymoon days, and he can eat them now—or leave them. Tom always knew that she hated to get up for breakfast, mornings. Tom White can come home evenings, business or no business, or she, Rose, will go out to dinner and movies with her old crowd.

Instead of expanding, developing herself into graciousness and capability, instead of finding in the new estate new opportunities for charm and usefulness, this pathetic, limited creature keeps tightening herself more and more into the straitjacket of her own limitations. She thinks she is triumphing, that Tom White is going to find out that nobody can boss her. What she really is doing is destroying her own life completely. For the old pleasures don't fit the new life any more than the rompers and ringlets she was wearing 20 years ago fit her today.

Our only hope of happiness as wives lies not in inflexibility, but change; not in pride, but humbleness. Change and humility, in both husband and wife, would remake the world. If girls could grasp this, if mothers could instill it into their sons' souls!

If you are lazy, train yourself to be capable and energetic. If you are shy and unsocial, make yourself be interested and gracious. If you are jealous, develop your own attractiveness so that you need not be afraid. If you are a poor cook, buy a cook-book and get to work.

Don't sit back complacently telling your friends that you're like that—you can't change. Keep your mouth shut and do change.

To me, studying my own group, as middle-age advances, the only pitiable ones, the only ones who are really unhappy, are the ones who are set, like iron that was once living and molten, and that is now hard and cold, who are unwilling to yield easily, happily, to the pressure of events and circumstances about them, who never could stand this, never liked that, won't do the other, always have to have things as they were."

Years ago, in English novels, there used to be a romantic type of heroine who made much of her own stupidity.

"Oh, yes," this Jill, or Audrey, or Lady Di would exclaim, with a toss of her proud head, "We Marjoribanks are like that! We fight, and we get into rages, we're all as hot-tempered as the devil. But we can't lie, and we do play the game!"

The moment a young husband, or a young wife, begins to feel a sort of indulgent admiration for his own faults, that minutes dooms that marriage. And to fail in marriage is like flunking in college; you may live it down, but you would have learned more, grown more, developed more, the other way. A successful wife, at 40, is a happier and wiser woman than an unsuccessful one, even though the latter is the one who has successfully demonstrated that nobody can use her for a doormat and that when she wants a thing she always gets it.

After all, even her husband is less important, to a woman, than her own soul. Perhaps his mother spoiled him, perhaps he is weak where other women are concerned, unreasonable about the distribution of the income, perhaps he never faces his own soul seriously, and asks himself if he is living up to his obligations, if he is giving this woman who is living her life out beside him a fair deal.

But what of it? That ought to affect her as little as do the morals of the grocer, or the conductor who takes the trolley past the corner every 20 minutes. Her business is her own soul. She doesn't know—none of us knows—what changes and surprises life has in store. She doesn't know for what great work life is preparing her. Perhaps she is going to need a strong soul some day, going to need reserves of patience and endurance.

Early difficulties, bitter lessons, are the price of happiness, of greatness. There is no other school.

And a woman plays hookey when she says: "You give me the name and the spoiling and the income and the home, partner, and I'll play it alone!"

Certain wives have an idea that marriage is like euchre; you take your partner's best card, or cards, and play it alone . . .

MRS. NORRIS SAYS:

Marriage ought to be a time of continual change, a time of tremendous growth. Even after the golden wedding party a man and woman don't know each other completely—any human relationship is full of surprises, full of possibilities.

Our only hope of happiness as wives lies not in inflexibility, but change; not in pride, but humbleness.

GINNING RATES IN OKLAHOMA SAME AS CHARGED LAST YEAR

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 6. (UP)—Cotton ginners will charge the same ginning rate for the current season as was charged the last two seasons, a corporation commission order issued today revealed.

The rate on the west side of the state is 37½ cents per hundred pounds for bollies or snapped cotton and 30 cents per hundred for picked cotton. The rate on the east side is 42½ cents and 35 cents. Ginners in the central part of the state can charge either rate. Bagging and ties in all zones are $1.45 a bale.

These are the same rates as was fixed two seasons ago. No rate was fixed last season as the commission's right to fix rates was before the federal courts, but ginners charged this rate.

The commission has granted 13 permits to cooperative ginners to build and operate gins. These permits have been held in abeyance pending a recent court decision holding the commission had authority to grant them.

Gins to be erected are at Geary, Hydro, Cordell, Custer City, Clinton, Hammon, Greenfield, Taylor's Corner in Tillman county, Hinton, Mountain Park, Yukon, Lookeba and Alfalfa.

CHILLICOTHE WOMAN QUITS EXPRESS COMPANY AFTER TWELVE YEARS AS AGENT

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, Sept. 6.—Mrs. A. G. Jameson, who has served as agent for the express company here for the past 12 years has resigned effective at once. She is succeeded by Mr. Hill who has been acting as relief agent for several weeks while Mrs. Jameson was confined in a Quanah sanitarium.

Mrs. Jameson does not plan to leave Chillicothe at this time, but will devote the greater part of her time as a correspondent for Texas state newspapers and to short-story writing. This is a field of literature she has fondly cherished for the past three years.

JACK DIAMOND RELUCTANT PASSENGER ON FREIGHTER RETURNING TO U. S. PORT

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 6. (INS)—Jack "Legs" Diamond, a reluctant passenger aboard the North German Lloyd steamer Hanover, sailed from this port at 4 p. m. today, homeward bound.

The Hannover, a freight vessel, is due at Philadelphia on Sept. 23.

Diamond was taken aboard the Hannover an hour before the vessel sailed, by police officers who had accompanied him here from Bremen.

TOWNS FAVOR ROUTE OF SANTA FE SOUGHT BY MEMPHIS CHAMBER

MEMPHIS, Texas, Sept. 6.—A very keen interest is being manifested by the towns along the proposed route of the new Santa Fe line from Canadian through Memphis to Sweetwater, which is being sought by the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, and the cities are joining Memphis in its effort to revive interest in a projected extension that was once looked upon with interest by the officials of the Santa Fe.

It is pointed out by its promoters that the proposed line would not run parallel with any other railroad in this section, and would be a direct line from Sweetwater to the coast. The proposed line would penetrate many miles of virgin territory, and would be a very profitable outlay for the company.

HALL COUNTY RED CROSS WILL AID DESTITUTE

MEMPHIS, Texas, Sept. 6.—A call meeting of the Hall county chapter of the Red Cross was held Wednesday, the call being issued by the Rev. E. T. Miller, chairman of the county organization. The object of the meeting was in the nature of a conference to ascertain the exact conditions as they exist over the county and to take such steps as are deemed necessary to alleviate the situation.

Another meeting is scheduled for next Monday, at which time a reorganization of the Hall county American Red Cross chapter will be effected, and it is hoped that the organization will be strengthened sufficiently to enable the organization to extend relief wherever necessary, in so far as possible.

MEMBER PIONEER FAMILY ARRESTED IN LIQUOR RAID

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Sept. 6.—A member of one of Stephens county's most prominent pioneer families was free on a $750 bond Friday, following his arrest late Thursday at his farm four miles southeast of here, where county and city officers found two gallons of whisky and two barrels partly filled with mash.

Sheriff Walker Sayle and his deputies, Roy McCharen and J. W. Morrow and city policeman, Jim Smith, comprised the raiding party, according to Deputy McCharen.

Still paraphernalia was also found on the farm, McCharan said.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Hereby perceive ye the love of God, because He laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—I John 3:16.

To escape from evil, we must be made as far as possible like God.—Plato.

"DROUGHT" OR "DROUTH"

Mr. Hoover calls it "drought" notes the Daily Oklahoman, while most newspapers make it "drouth." Webster gives the former spelling the preference and it is undoubtedly more correct, etymologically. But it isn't the word that Americans in general use. It is pronounced to rhyme with shout and about. The other word is so generally used as to make it correct enough.

The main question, as the Oklahoman points out, is not how to spell it or pronounce it, but what are we going to do about it.

DOVES AND THE LAW

It is unlawful for a hunter to shoot from an automobile, or to shoot from, on or across a public road.

It is unlawful for him to hunt on posted land. It is unlawful for him to hunt on land not posted unless he has the owner's permission.

If no doves were killed in this section this week in violation of these laws, there would be precious few dove feathers for the trash man to haul away. We venture the guess that for every dove killed in compliance with all the laws, there were 10 killed in violation thereof.

That is liable to happen when law makers fail to take custom and human nature into account in their law making.

THE LOCAL RELIEF COMMITTEE

The relief program adopted Thursday by the chamber of commerce directors is admirable in two ways. In the first place, it goes right to the heart of the situation. In the second place, it offers help in its wisest form, that of helping folks to help themselves. The aid to be provided will be not in the form of alms but in a form that maintains the beneficiary's self-respect and courage, and that should prove more effective, in the long run, than any other method.

Every citizen who is able to do so should assist in perfecting the financial arrangements which are necessary to the consummation of the program. The amount involved is sufficient if efficiently administered, but it is a modest sum when one looks at what it is expected to accomplish. It is so modest that there must be no thought of trying to get along with anything less.

It has become apparent, as Mr. Kell pointed out, that federal aid, if it is forthcoming in any measure at all, will not reach the individual who is most sorely in need of assistance. This section has the means to fight its own way out of its difficulties and the program as approved offers those means along the right lines.

THE GALVESTON CONVENTION

The political significance of the approaching Democratic convention at Galveston has to do with 1932 rather than with 1930. For at that convention a new state Democratic committee and a new state chairman will be chosen to form the party's machinery for 1932. There will be little for that committee to do this year, for the election of Sterling is a foregone conclusion, with no prospect that the Republicans can make a real contest out of it. But there are reasons for believing that 1932 will provide some contests, both within the party and between the parties, in Texas. It is the obvious duty of the convention to build up the sort of organization that can handle the party's affairs fairly and aggressively.

Another duty that confronts the convention is that of giving some force to the constructive movements which have been started in Texas' affairs but which have been obscured by the personalities of the recent campaign. Reorganization of the state departments and bureaus, the working out of the taxation problem, the development of a broader and sounder educational program, better provision for the state's wards—these are just a few of the many matters that are going to call for statesmanlike attention in the next year or two. The convention should commit the party, for whatever that may be worth, to a constructive, forward-looking program of legislative action.

THE WAY TO COMBAT COMMUNISM

We hear more of Communism, in times like these, than in normal times, and any discussion of it is apt to run into talk of ways of combatting it. The approved method in this country seems to be by the use of force—arrest, deportation, suppression. There are a good many Americans, including a number who are firmly opposed to everything that Communism represents, who have doubted the efficacy and the wisdom of the use of force in dealing with it. It has remained for Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler to point out, in a recent speech, what seems to us to be a better way.

The key to this better way is in the hands of the wealthy men of this and other countries, Dr. Butler declared. By using their wealth for the betterment of the many, he said, they offer a more effective check to Communism than could be offered by the use of force.

"There is need of a change of heart and a change of point of view on the part of those individuals who are able to achieve and do achieve marked success in accumulation of wealth," he said, "probably the multimillionaire of today and the directors of large corporate organizations, as much as any other single force, hold the future of liberalism in their hands. Each time that service is subordinated to gain, Communism is offered a helping hand."

The example of Carnegie and Rockefeller in spreading their private gains for the betterment and use of the many, was held up by Dr. Butler as offering the best weapon against red radicalism.

"The ideal society" he added, "is not the carefully graded republic of Plato, or the Communist state of Marx and Lenin. It is the free association of men under the Bill of Rights, but acting each with high intelligence, with moral purpose, and all socially minded."

To oppose Communism with violence is to fight it with the weapon that it uses best. To oppose it in the way that Dr. Butler outlines is to use against it a weapon it has no means of evading.

A GRUDGE-FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

The announcement that Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill has entered the senatorial contest in Illinois as a bone-dry candidate means that the already interesting contest is to become still more interesting.

It is the first instance since women got the vote and the right to hold office, of a grudge-fight between two members of that sex for important office. Mrs. O'Neill and Mrs. McCormick have had a peeve on each other for quite a while. Nobody seems to know just how it all began. In January, 1929, Mrs. O'Neill issued a statement in which she referred to Mrs. McCormick as high-handed and dictatorial. Then, when Mrs. McCormick resigned as Republican national committee-woman from Illinois, Mrs. O'Neill sought the place, only to be defeated; and there is little doubt that Mrs. McCormick helped to bring about her defeat.

Mrs. O'Neill has been active in W. C. T. U. work for many years. She is a "down-stater," which is a way of saying she isn't a Chicagoan.

The Washington correspondent of the New York World, writing of Mrs. O'Neill's candidacy before it was announced, predicted that her entry would virtually assure the election of J. Ham Lewis, the Democratic nominee for the senate, because Mrs. O'Neill and Mrs. McCormick would divide the women's vote and the bone-dry vote sufficiently to give the bewhiskered Democrat a plurality. It can hardly be doubted that the O'Neill candidacy improves Lewis' chances. At any rate it means that the Illinois contest, already scheduled to be one of the most colorful on this year's card, will become still more peppy.

Prophet or Partisan?

By GLENN FRANK
President of University of Wisconsin and Former Editor of the Century Magazine
(Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

I do not know a more discouraging experience, as a writer, than to struggle for clarity and, apparently, to miss it.

A time or two in late months I have discussed in these essays the role of the preacher and of the church in politics.

The gist of my contention in this matter is that the preacher should be a fearless prophet always but a fanatic partisan never.

I thought I made sun-clear the distinction I saw between the prohpet and the partisan, but I have before me a letter from a reader of this column saying, "I cannot reconcile with what I have come to think as your point of view your protests against the political activities of the church. Certainly you do not want to join those frightened reactionaries who want the preacher to stick to what they call 'the simple gospel' because in so doing he will not gum their game."

I do not.

The preacher who confines his preaching to delightfully and harmlessly abstract moralizings has gone renegade to his responsibility as a prophet of God and goodness.

Any preacher worthy of his board and keep will flash his sword in the facts of his day.

He will be specific enough to let the laziest pewholder know that the spiritual passion and moral judgment he preaches is not a discarnate ghost flying a mile high over the rough-and-tumble world in which men are living and making their living, but a living power and point of view that is pointless unless translated into terms of men's daily lives and enterprises.

My skeptical questioning of church activity in some political fields has been based upon two points, viz:

First, that the preacher has no business to play the game of partisan politics.

The preacher who applies realistically the ethical outlook of Jesus to contemporary problems is bound alternately to delight and to disgust the partisan adherents of all parties and of all economic classes. The prophet is notoriously a man who gets kicked by both sides.

Second, that the church has no business to ape the dogmatism and Machiavellianism of partisan politics in the way it fosters reforms.

When the church sets out to correct an evil, like the abuse of alcoholic liquors, it should be just as concerned over the ultimate moral effects of its reform policies, like prohibition, as it was over the moral effects of the evil it sought to correct.

If there is one outstanding danger that the church faces in its social and political activities, it is the danger of not bringing as insistent moral valuation to the policies it fights for as it brings to the policies it fights against.

The unpardonable sin of the church is that it sometimes becomes partisan when it means to be prophetic.

Dispensable

One thing that nears abomination,
That makes life seem to scorn and flout us,
Is to get back from our vacation,
And see how well they've done without us.

And in this office, as in practically every other, there's at least one member of the well known Aleck family who pretends not to know you've even been away.

This Vacation Business

One is supposed to return from vacation refreshed in mind, body and spirit, equipped to hit the old job harder than ever, eager, even agog, to get back to work. But it doesn't work out that way. We were not agog to get back to work. The fact is our agogging is not what it used to be, under any circumstances. We must be getting old.

That theory of the vacation business is all wet. The employe is worth less to his employer during the week or so immediately after his vacation than at any other time. His engine has gotten cold and he has to get it warmed up again before it will hit on more than one cylinder.

We have in mind a remedy for this condition and we are going to submit it to the boss just as soon as we get around to it. The reason that a vacation plays such havoc with one's facilities is that it comes but once a year. One's system doesn't have a fair chance to get adjusted to it. With just one vacation a year, a worker puts in the first half of it getting accustomed to the fact that he doesn't have to work, and the second half bracing himself for the inexorably approaching hour when he will have to go back on the job. If he takes a trip, he spends half of the time speeding madly away from his job and then has to turn around and rush just as madly back to it.

The remedy we have in mind is a very simple one. It is to allow employes to have, say, four vacations per year instead of just one. With just one vacation, one wears one's self out trying to have a good time. With four vacations he could have more practice, could learn to adjust himself more readily.

There are objections that might be offered to this plan, of course. But it has equally obvious advantages. We are so sure of the feasibility of it that we are ready to volunteer to have it tried out on ourself. Ordinarily we are rather selfish. But in this particular instance we would be willing to make the sacrifice and subject ourself to the test.

Vacation Ramblings

One thing that we noticed on our vacation travels hither and thither was that the smaller the town, the more lavish the use of face paint by the damsels. In the average little town, the town, for example, that is so small that it has only five or six midget golf courses, there seems to be a complete lack of subtlety in the application of cosmetics. In a city, a woman usually makes up in such a way that you are aware of the rouge without really noticing it. It is manifest without flaunting itself. But in smaller places the idea seems to be to use so much of it on so much of the face that there can't be any doubt about it.

One thing the automobile has done is to make it easier, when wayfaring, to find which way to go. In the horse and buggy days when you paused by the wayside to ask for route directions, you could expect to have to listen for 10 minutes and then not find out correctly. Nowadays you get your information quickly, tersely and, in the main, accurately. At an rate you do not have to listen to the story of your informant's life.

We are glad that Texas has not paved out its highways as some states have, to skirt or miss the towns along the route. You might make more time if you could speed around a town instead of proceeding with enforced deliberation right through its business district, but we hope the Texas highway system never comes to that. There is a lack of friendliness and courtesy about that method. We like the Texas way best and not even a first-class bawling-out by a small-town cop who spotted us ignoring a stop marker, could change our view of it.

More Ramblings

Down at Abilene we visited a swimming pool where this sign was displayed: "If she is your wife, pet her at home; if she isn't your wife, let her alone."

It struck us that nothing could be fairer than that.

At the same pool there was a sign announcing that anyone who appeared in a "scant" bathing suit would be barred from the pool. There was no definition of the word "scant" and we started to ask the manager for one, but refrained. Two girls who were disporting themselves in the water had on scantier suits than any we had observed at home where they aren't exactly addicted to over-dressing. The suits reminded us of those problems in high school mathematics where something approached zero as a limit without ever quite reaching it. But they came pretty close to zero, at that.

It also reminded us, conversely, of a vitriolic discourse we heard a few decades ago, about women who went out on the beach at Galveston wearing bathing suits that exposed their ankles to the public gaze. It may be hard to believe that there ever was a time when folks concerned themselves about ankles, but it's a fact.

Now that they've perfected an electric light that can be turned on or off with a breath, somebody might undertake to apply the same principle to opening Pullman windows.

At the Golf Tournament

Drives that go straight and sweet and clean,
Iron shots that head right for the green,
Pitch shots that land close to the pin,
And putts that roll so nicely in,
Balls that their owners' touch obey,
Remind me so much of the way I don't play.

It looks to us as if the fact that France has expelled Hearst ought to give somebody at Washington an idea.

Pop was smoking in his private chair and ma sed, Willyum, do you think its wrong to deceeve a child of 6 munths, I meen do you think it mite add an underhand element to the babys own little caracter?

Meening my sister Gladdises baby, and pop sed, You havent been telling my grandson ghoast stories, I hope?

Dont be rediculis, ma sed. What I meen is, he seems to of taken a fancy not to sleep unless he is being carried or wheeled from one place to another. Perhaps it indicates that he will be a good traveller when he grows up, because you know most peeple cant sleep at all on trains and boats and such places. Anyway, I had him out for an airing in the square today, and I sat down on a bentch and jiggled his carriage to give him the mistaken impression that he was still in continuous motion, and the thawt occured to me that perhaps I shouldent deceeve him like that. How can we tell what suttle influences can werk on a babys little caracter? she sed.

Well, as long as you dident imitate locomotive wissles and call out Fare please, perhaps it wasent serious, pop sed, and ma sed, anyway, that reminds me, I receeved a reel compliment from a reel artist.

Do you meen a man that does oil paintings, or just a water color man? pop sed, and ma sed, I cant say about that, Im sure. I dident inquire that personly into his private life. He was on the next bentch making sketches with a ordnerry crayon. He had on a flowing tie and one of those big black hats, so Im sure he was a genuine artist, ma sed.

Thats not enough, pop sed. He should of had at least one toe sticking out of his shoe, he sed, and ma sed, He was quite a good looking chap, as a matter of fact. Anyway, there I was on the next bentch jiggling the baby carriage, and suddenly I realized that this artist was looking at me intently, but still partly in an artistic spirit, and when he cawt my eye he sed, Pardon my staring, madam, but you make a perfect picture there with that baby. Your profile is reely classic. Its a perfeck mother and child composition, he sed. Would you mind if I did a little sketch of you? he sed. Now that was quite an uncalled for compliment, coming from a reel artist, and I dident wunt to axually forbid him, so I sed, Not at all, and he made a sketch of me and it was quite good, at least as a sketch if not as a resemblants, ma sed.

Did he give it to you? pop sed.

Yes he did, ma sed. Or at least he sold it to me for a dollar, an artist must make a living the same as common peeple, she sed.

Yee gods, such chivalry is reely touching, pop sed. And he got behind the sporting page and dident come out till ma went and got the sketch for him to look at, looking like a lady on a bentch but not any particular lady, especially ma.

Health and Diet Advice

Learning to Like Good Food

Young children, and those who are grown up, sometimes dislike carrots, parsnips, milk, cabbage, spinach or other perfectly good wholesome foods, and can not be persuaded to eat them. In fact, the more these disliked foods are placed before these individuals, the stronger becomes the dislike. If our sense of taste is for our protection, why do we sometimes like foods that are bad for us, and dislike foods that are good for us?

Although at first glance there may seem to be no reason for this dislike, there undoubtedly is. At birth we have not much appreciation of flavors. After a few hours or minutes of teasing the baby, by rubbing milk on its mouth, it acquires a taste for milk—sweet milk. Try and feed the baby sour milk and see what a howl he makes!

During the course of the next few weeks an infant may develop a liking for a few other things like water, orange juice or scraped apple. Each new flavor requires a period of getting acquainted. This process continues throughout life, and unless a new flavor reminds us of one that we already like, we are very cautious about using it. This is a wise provision of nature to guard us against the poisonous foods. We taste a thing cautiously and if it does not harm us, we will be curious to try it again until finally we acquire a liking for its flavor.

In this way, many people and races acquire appetites for a food that seems queer to us if we do not enjoy its flavor or appearance. One man's tidbit becomes another man's emetic.

It is a wise policy to explain to a child that the vitamins in foods will make him grow big and strong, and that he will be able to beat other boys in games, or to sometimes drive an automobile or an aeroplane. It is a very poor policy to say, "If you don't eat your dish of spinach you can't have any ice cream." Scolding is worse than useless. While it gives the scolder a feeling of superiority, it leaves the scoldee more obstinate than ever.

In training a child, it is far more valuable to bring out the instinctive desire to excel than to say, "This is good for you," or "That is bad for you."

A boy may be indifferent to a shower of facts about health, but suppose he wants to win a mile race at the school track meet? He is willing to go into training, and will simply gulp down the facts about health. Teach him to brag about the amount of vegetables he can eat. Give him helpings that are obviously too small and let him ask for more rather than force large helpings upon him.

It is a good policy to make favorable suggestions about food when talking to someone at the table so that the child can overhear, as, "Lindberg drinks lots of milk and that makes him a strong man."

Many of our dislikes for food are associated with the memory of some sickness of the stomach. I have noted severe cases of dislike for cabbage that originated with vomiting a meal that contained cabbage. It is sometimes hard to trace the origin of a dislike, but this can usually be done if one really studies the problem impartially.

One can usually overcome a dislike by mixing a small amount of the unpleasant food with a very large amount of the good food. This can sometimes be done unknown to the person affected, and in this way the dislike will be gradually overcome. A person who dislikes many foods only makes life unpleasant for himself.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sleeplessness

Question—Mrs. J. K. writes: "I have trouble in getting to sleep at night. Will you please tell me the cause of this? Also, I have a dizzy feeling in my head upon arising."

Answer—Insomnia is generally produced by overeating at the evening meal, or using foods which make stomach gas. This would also cause billiousness, with the resultant dizzy spells which you experience each morning.

Plums

Question—M. W. asks: "Are plums all right in combination with other foods?"

Answer—Plums are a good acid fruit but should be used by themselves. In season they make a good noonday luncheon.

Legs Swell During Fast

Question—H. L. writes: "Please tell me why orange juice makes my feet and legs swell and pain me so. I am much overweight, and took the orange juice for four or five days and lost 10 pounds, but had to stop on account of this swelling and pain."

Answer—The orange juice fast is given to patients who have swollen hands and feet. You can rest assured that if you had continued your fast the swelling would have disappeared. The "crisis" period frequently arises on the third to fifth day of the fast, and often various symptoms are produced by the stirring up of the toxins in the blood stream, some of them being swellings or pain in those parts of the body where there have been large deposits of impurities. Try the fast again, and keep on fasting until you pass this crisis period.

IN NEW YORK

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—Listening to the chatter of the assembled society writers for the major New York newspapers on the porch of the Manor, one learns that this is the dullest summer social season within the memory of the oldest gossip scribbler.

The very rich society folk are not spending money.

They're not even paying their bills. But that's nothing new. The town's tradesmen will tell you that people who live in cut glass houses and sail yachts with a crew of 12 are the hardest to collect from. Only the other morning the gent who sells me my morning paper confided that a matron whose picture appears in the swankiest periodicals hasn't paid her subscription in two years. The sum involved is a very trivial one.

Nor, for one reason or another, do the tradesmen seem to consider the possibility of rebelling; for one reason or another, the wealthy must never be boldly confronted.

You'll hear that, from a social viewpoint, the Meadowbrook tennis tournament this year was a large bust. Not that it makes any difference in anyone's life, the famous racquet stars are accustomed to being dined and feted when they come down the island on a midsummer tennis junket.

But this year there was little or no revelry.

And the hound-and-hare hunt, or whatever it was, happened to be all but ruined by the fact that the market caved in again on a certain Saturday morning, thus spoiling the entire day of the gents who seem to carry ticker machines in their pockets.

Still and all, to the columnistic lyro, there is a fete day, holiday glamour about the fol-de-rols of the idle rich. To be sure, I am allowed little more than a seat on the sidelines. But when on a sunny morning the slim and lovely debutantes are parading about the Beach club esplanade in their fetching pajama costumes and their colorful capes and costumes, a certain musical comedy atmosphere pervades the scene—at least for a young man who has come to enjoy the artificial Broadway scene.

Or, upon the occasion of the Meadowbrook tourney, which the society writers described as a flop, I found myself infinitely more interested in the flashes of color and beauty gathered upon the awning-adorned porch of the club building.

Just at my left, so I was told, was the plump and pretty Doris Duke, who has been titled the "richest girl in the world."

Only a few years ago, or so it seemed, I was writing tales of the richest baby in America. At that time, if my memory serves me, the baby Doris was worth a hundred millions, or thereabouts, from the tobacco fortune.

They'll tell you hereabouts that Mlle. Duke, whose coming out will be a society event of the coming winter, has had her fortune well handled for her, so that it now may be doubled, for all I know.

At any rate, she was perhaps the most quietly and simply dressed person in the crowd. All about her, at tables or on tiptoes were attractive young women who are known to be buffing their way through society. And all of them seeming to be garbed far more extravagantly.

What is more, Miss Duke has been reared to have a directing mind of her own, to say nothing of a careful educational background. She spent last year studying at the Sorbonne in Paris and, so say those who seem to know, may one day have an active part in handling her own millions.

On the other hand, it's hard to swallow a sense of pity for the hundreds here who play the game on "no pair." The rackets into which they are drawn in order to get a few quick dollars are as many as those to be found in Chicago—only played more politically. A fashionable artist I had known in New York told me, for instance, of some 100 junior leaguers who get 30 per cent for helping him land orders among their more moneyed sisters.

THE LITTLE LADY

By Edgar A. Guest

The little lady tripped along
With posies in her hand.
The endless talk of right and wrong
She didn't understand;
The endless talk of fault and blame
Disturbed her not at all.
With flowers the little lady came
To pay a friendly call.

She did not care what people said
Of drink and shame and sin.
A little child was sick a-bed
And she went smiling in.
A woman, pale and drawn and gray
Had none for her to care,
And so she tripped across the way
And carried flowers there.

The little lady heard them say:
"The fault is all their own!
They squandered all their gold away!
They're reaping what they've sown!
'Tis punishment from God they bear!"
But still she tripped along.
"I know much more," said she, "of care
Than what is right or wrong.

"The proud, the haughty and the wise
Talk much of shame and sin.
I only know a baby cries
And I go running in.
I do not understand just why
Are misery, want and care.
I know that lonely people sigh,
And I go calling there."

WASHINGTON.—The downfall of President Augusto Leguia, dictator of Peru and Uncle Sam's best boy friend in South America, is strictly in accord with the old political adage that prosperity absorbs all criticism and that the less prosperity the more criticism.

That goes in any country and the stronger the factions are which oppose the administration the farther it goes in effecting a change of government.

In the United States, which has been going through a protracted period of depression, there is a real chance that the Democratic party will obtain control of one or both houses of congress in the November elections. In any event there will be more Democrats in both the senate and the house.

It's Tough on Hoover

Instead of giving the Hoover administration a vote of confidence and a grip on congress the voters are virtually certain to make things harder for it by strengthening anti-administration coalitions. If Hoover himself were running for re-election this year he would find some rough going and as it is he probably is glad that things are done differently here from the way they are in Peru. Few presidents have had to bear up under such a period of harsh criticism during their first year or two in office, and a great deal of it has been due to the depression which gripped the United States, along with Peru and many other countries.

Anti-government agitation is reported to be on the increase in two or three other Latin-American countries, encouraged by unsatisfactory economic conditions, although there is as yet no information here which indicates the likely success of any movement such as upset Leguia.

Peru exports cotton, wool, oil and sugar, and the prices of all these commodities have lately been lowered in the general world depression of values. Exports and imports have gone into serious declines. It seems too far-fetched to connect the passage of our Grundy tariff act with a revolution in Peru, but it may be pointed out that the new rates on imports into the United States struck the rest of the world at an especially bad time and led many countries to consider themselves likely to be just so much worse off.

When the slump came, Leguia was up to his neck in a costly program of development and expansion. He had established himself as boss of Peru and laid a system of heavy taxes on the country to pay for the rebuilding and modernization of Lima, the development of the port of Callao, expensive road-building and school programs and other ambitious improvements. The 1929 budget of nearly $70,000,000 was the largest in the history of Peru and a considerably larger one was passed for 1930.

Leguia had also run his country into considerable debt. The external debt had risen from $73,000,000 in 1928 to $91,000,000 in 1929.

The dictator had also encountered a bad snag in his inability to float the remaining $15,000,000 of a $100,000,000 national loan project at a time when the money was needed, partly because of the unfavorable status of the bond market in New York. Some of the public works in Leguia's program had to be suspended for lack of money, although money was borrowed wherever it could be picked up.

Value of Money Fell

Attempts to stabilize the currency failed to keep it at par and just prior to the revolt the Peruvian sol, a new gold coin created early this year with an official value of 40 cents, had dropped to below 26 cents.

The state department has received no word indicating that the new regime in Peru will be less friendly to the United States than the Leguia dictatorship. No administration could be more so, however. Leguia rooted for this government at every turn and accompanied his manifestations of good will with many large concessions and contracts to large American corporations.

Twenty Years Ago Today

From Files Wichita Times

September 7, 1910

The enrollment on the first day of school this year shows an increase of about 200 over the first day last year. On last Monday 1,221 pupils enrolled in the public schools of Wichita Falls. Of this number 1,139 were whites and 85 were negroes.

In the high school 272 pupils are enrolled, making this one of the largest high schools in the state.

IOWA PARK POSTAL RECEIPTS UP 14 PER CENT

IOWA PARK, Sept. 6.—C. C. Burrows, Iowa Park postmaster, states that the postal receipts for the months, June, July and August exceed by 14 per cent the receipts for the same period last year. Mr. Burrows states that the greatest monthly receipts were in the month of August, and that he considers this a good indication that "hard times" have not hit Iowa Park as hard as some might suppose.

Beware of Trifles, Says Londoner

LONDON.—Trifling little incidents in our every-day life are the cause of more momentous occasions than are the larger affairs, according to J. A. R. Cairns, famous London police magistrate. "Nearly all the hurt and heartbreak of life comes out of trifles—little personal differences and disputes that at first annoy and divide us," he says. And of these trifles, vanity and pride cause the most uproars, he believes.

RECORD NUMBER STUDENTS START CLASSROOM TREK MONDAY

ADMITTANCE SIX YEAR OLDS ADDS TO ENROLLMENT

Increase of 1,000 Pupils Expected When New Term Starts

MANY IMPROVEMENTS ARE MADE DURING VACATION

Familiar Surroundings Changed by Building Program of $100,000

Three hundred teachers will return to their schoolrooms in 17 Wichita Falls schools Monday morning to welcome the largest enrollment in the history of the city, according to school officials.

The addition of 929 6-year-olds to the scholastic census this year, and the action of the school board in also admitting those who will be 6 in September or October will bring an increase of practically 1,000, to the total enrollment in the city, which has for the past several years approximated 10,000.

The only loss anticipated is in the junior college, where a raise in tuition has been made and athletics have been suspended for the year. Even there, the enrollment should stand approximately the same as last year, according to Dean S. H. Rider.

Building Program

During the summer, $100,000 has been spent in renovating, improving and adding to eight of the schools, and the students in those districts will go back to find their familiar surroundings changed in several respects.

A six-room unit was added at Huey school, and four-room units at Fannin, Barwise, Alamo, Benjamin Franklin and Washington schools. A cafeteria was built at Washington and a cafeteria-auditorium at Benjamin Franklin.

The actual construction work total $76,085 and the heating and plumbing $11,562.80. Wiring and electrical fixtures totaled $555.75, and architect's fees were $3,510. Added to this was the renovation at Reagan Junior High, amounting to $3,360.85, and bringing the total to $95,065.47.

The amount left out of the $100,000, or nearly $5,000 was spent in cafeteria equipment for the new cafeterias and new laboratory equipment at Reagan Junior High.

School Boundaries

Students in the first six grades will attend one of the 13 ward schools, while seventh and eighth graders will be enrolled at one of the two junior high schools. Those in the ninth, tenth and eleventh and those in the first two years of college will be enrolled at the junior college building.

Negroes, no matter what their grades, will attend the Booker T. Washington school, and Mexicans in the first four grades will attend Benito Juarez. Junior high students living west of Brook will attend Zundelowitz junior high, and those living east of Brook Reagan Junior High. Other boundaries follow:

Crockett school territory is bounded on the south by a line made by Cumberland avenue, Kenesaw avenue, and Avenue L, as far east as Taylor street. The western boundary goes north on Taylor street as far as Avenue C to Tenth street and then to Grant street, and north on Grant to the Wichita river, which is the northern boundary.

Sam Houston is bounded on the north by Cumberland avenue, Kenesaw avenue and Avenue L, and on the east by Taylor street.

Alamo is bounded on the west by a line running north on Taylor, west on Avenue C and Tenth to Grant, and north on Grant to the river. It is bounded on the south by a line running along Avenue G and the alley beween Avenue G and avenue F, and on the east by Brook avenue.

Benjamin Franklin is bounded on the west by Taylor street, on the north by Avenue G, and the alley between Avenue G and Avenue F and on the east by Brook avenue.

Carrigan is bounded on the west by Brook avenue, the north by the railroad tracks and on the east by Fern avenue, the water plant, Cannon park and Scott street.

San Jacinto is bounded on the south by Eighth street and on the west by a line which runs north on Brook, west on Trueheart, north on Denver, west on Fifth to the river. It is bounded on the east by Ohio avenue and on the north by the Wichita river.

Fannin is bounded on the south by the Wichita river and on the west by Hamilton street.

Huey is bounded on the south by the Wichita river and on the east by Hamilton street.

Travis and Bowie schools are bounded on the west and south by the railroad tracks. The division lines between the territories of these two schools could not be learned at the office of the board of education Saturday.

HE'S ONLY GONE TO SCHOOL

Out the door and down to the street,
With a pause to wave the hand;
And a pair of small, uncertain feet
Carry a youngster off to greet
The peaks of wonderland.

Stand at the door and dry yours tears,
Accept life's iron rule:
And laugh at yourself for foolish fears,
And look ahead to the coming years—

Boy, 15, to Give First Sermon at Memphis Church

MEMPHIS, Texas, Sept. 6.—According to an announcement from the Rev. H. A. Shaw, pastor of the First Christian church of this city, B. F. Shepherd Jr., 15-year-old son of Mrs. B. F. Shepherd of this city, will deliver his first sermon Sunday evening at the First Christian church. The young man has recently dedicated his life to the Christian service and will enter the Texas Christian university as a ministerial student upon the completion of his high school work in the local school.

He is already a speaker of note, having entered all the important finals in debate in last year's school events. All will enjoy his message in this special service Sunday evening."

ARTIST WILL MARRY DEBUTANTE MODEL FOR 'FISHER BODIES' GIRL

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. (AP)—The engagement of McClelland Barclay, widely known illustrator, to his debutante model, Miss Helene Marie C. Haskin, has been announced.

Miss Haskin is the original of the Fisher bodies girl, whose slim beauty has illuminated the advertising pages of magazines and enhanced the artistic reputation of Mr. Barclay.

Before she met the artist and consented to pose for him, Miss Haskin was launched on a stage career, making her debut in "Ripples" last season. She is 19.

Barclay was previously married to Nan McClelland Barclay, his cousin, a Washington society girl. They were married in 1916 and divorced in January, 1930.

Miss Haskin, who is a graduate of St. Agnes Episcopal school, is a member of a distinguished Virginia family. Her mother, Mrs. Helen Coghill South Haskin, is a writer.

Airplanes, Ladies and Politics

By WILL ROGERS

Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I "Contact" from hither to thither. I sure did hate missing that big Air Show in Chicago. I think that is becoming to be the one great show we will have. Just think how it will grow in importance, when everybody really goes traveling by air, and its coming all the time. They have some 32 passenger ships out here between Los Angeles and Frisco and they are full all the time.

There is really something to see at one of those shows. You take Automobile shows and all you have to do is to go in the show rooms in every town and you see the same thing you can at a show, and they have them so perfected that about all that ever shows up new at a show is some new gangled Cigar lighter, or odd shape door knobs. But at an air show there is hundreds of entirely different models than you had ever seen before. Then to see fellows like Al Williams, the great Ex Naval Flyer (who they all say is one of the best in the world) and Jimmy Doolittle who can fly and land blind, only by using instruments and all the dozens of others. Now its a real show.

You know I was reading the other day about the big Military air show they had held in England the other day, and they had a battle between an invading army of them, with the other side protecting the City, and with the speed and the altitude that the Bombing planes can make now, they found that it was almost impossible to keep them away. That is if they didn't know they was coming. They say there has to be some way of detecting when they are coming so they can go up and be ready for em. As it is now by the time they leave the ground and get to an altitude of 18 to 20 thousand feet why they have already dropped their bombs and gone. They have Bombers now that travel 175 miles an hour.

While we were up at Lake Tahoe in the heart of the Sierra Nevada Mountains we would see the mail planes sometimes going over the mountains. They had to get a high altitude to make it, and there is not much chance of landing if the old Put Put goes bluey, and they do that both ways in the night too. I tell you when you get an air mail letter from away out here, you just ought to stop and think what a chance a half dozen fine young men have taken with their lives to get you that letter there one, two or three days earlier. Gosh thats a risky old game over these mountains at night.

Well lets see what other shows we had lately. Out our way for the last few weeks Aimee and Ma McPherson have just about run the spotlight ragged. We cant find out if Aimee really did swing on Ma or not. Then to make the argument better why the "Face histing" entered into it. Ma said Aimee had her face re-upholstered, Aimee said she dident. Ma said that her (Ma's) nose was broken, Aimee said she broke it putting it in the Churchs business, and in the meantime the Congregation never lost its faith. It was with em, nose or no nose, face or two faced, it dident matter. They went down to her beach House at Malibu, (by the way theres where all the Pajama Actorless cavort). Well it seems that Aimee had a beach House, and the Choir would go there and sing to her. Nobody sang to Ma but she never did stop denouncing. So us poor readers have just been about run ragged trying to keep up with so many different developments. It seems that our various assortment of Clergymen, and Clergywomen, wont give one of the ordinary paying congregation a chance to make the front page. Bishop Cannon no more slows up, or re-marries or does something, than Aimee and Ma are ready for a go, and speaking of Ma's why I havent commuened with you since Ma Ferguson was defeated for the nomination, and of course the election, for it was on the Democratic side, and Texas has about been cured of its last election's short sightedness. Democrats are coming back in the fold so fast and praying for forgiveness that it looks like a bargain sale.

Something to see at these air shows.

This fellow Sterling that beat Ma is a fine fellow. It took a good man to beat Ma. Got to give her and old Jim credit they come back mighty strong, and the large vote she received certainly showed that old Texas thinks a lot of the old Gal yet. There has been an awful lot of people defeated this year in the primary. Everybody was running that could get some cards printed. It was a great year for the printers.

We got an awful good man bet in Oklahoma for the Senate nomination, Wrightsman. But he was up against another case of too much opposition. It was our old time Senator Gore, the first blind man, (physically) to sit in the Senate. He lost out away back during one of those early Republican landslides. There is going to be a lot of changes in Washington when the boys gather after the next election. Democrats are going to make some big gains for the people are sore at Hoover because they had to go back to work and couldent just make a living by buying a stock and selling it to the other fellow at a raise. Then him not giving em rain, has hurt him. Then the people will get all excited around November over wets and drys, and the law will stay like it is, and the thirsts will be quenched as usual, then the "Hooey" will die out till 32. Then we will have the same thing over again. Oh, hum!

John McCormack, the world's greatest tenor, in his screen debut, "Song o' My Heart," now showing at the Majestic through Tuesday.

Betty Compson in "Czar of Broadway," with John Wray and Wilbur Mack, featured at the State theater through Wednesday.

Scene from "Lawful Larceny," featuring Bebe Daniels and Lowell Sherman, starting at the Majestic Wednesday for three days' showing.

The four Marx brothers, those funny fellows of "The Cocoanuts," at the Strand through Thursday in their latest, "Animal Crackers."

John McCormack in Screen Debut 'Song o' My Heart' Majestic Feature Bebe Daniels Picture Wednesday

Never before has a picture received such universal praise from the critics as John McCormack's first appearance on the audible screen in "Song O' My Heart." Each song adds cheer and furnishes entertainment beyond compare. Some of his songs are old favorites, unforgettable ballads which most of us have heard him sing on his concert tours. But there are a number of new lyrics, a few operatic arias heard in a concert sequence which will appeal because of McCormack's superb, soulful rendition.

Following McCormack's own desire, the picture was made in Ireland and much of the Irish wit and humor appears in this production.

McCormack's characterization as a saddened lover is so humanly enacted, one almost feels that he is living the role with this favorite tenor of all the world. But credit must be given to lovely Maureen O'Sullivan, late movie find, for her engaging role as Eileen, daughter of his former sweetheart, which role is brilliantly handled by Alice Joyce. John Garrick, J. M. Kerrigan, Tommy Clifford, Farrell Macdonald and rest do justice to their parts.

To complete the program, one of those delightful entertaining screen songs is presented, "The Prisoner's Song." Also Charlie Chase is seen in his newest comedy "Fast Work" which causes many laughs. The Majestic talking news contains some very interesting timely subjects.

"Lawful Larceny"

In her picture coming to the Majestic, Bebe Daniels is seen in an entirely different role from anything she has attempted in the past. She takes the part of a wife who sets out to recover her husband from another woman. Her performance is intensely human and convincing. She is supported by a cast of former stage favorites, including Olive Tell, Lowell Sherman, Purnell Pratt and Kenneth Thomson. There is not a dull moment in the picture which tells an entertaining story of a cycle of victims. The husband is victimized by a siren; the siren is victimized by a clever, lovable, but unscrupulous man, admirably portrayed by Lowell Sherman. How he and the siren are finally out-maneuvered by Miss Daniels, as the wife, makes a climax as unusual as it is worth seeing.

"Holiday"

Many have asked the question, "What is the holiday time of life?" The answer will be found in the screen version of Philip Barry's famous play, "Holiday," coming to the Majestic next Saturday. This picture created much comment on Broadway and will no doubt do the same thing in Wichita Falls. It is sensational in its treatment of modern youth. The dramatic moments are finely relieved throughout the action by delicious comedy, while the dialog, compact and witty, leaves little to be desired. The picture owes much of its magnetic quality to the artistic portrayals of the featured players in the cast. In congenial roles are Ann Harding, Mary Astor, Everett Horton, Robert Ames and Hedda Hooper, stage artist of supreme merit.

Another one of those funny Our Gang comedies will be presented with this program as well as a popular screen song.

'Czar of Broadway' Showing at 'State' Fast Moving Play

Amid the rat-tat-tat of machine guns, the screaming of police sirens and the screeching of patrolmen's whistles the "Czar of Broadway" Opens Sunday at the State theater to run through Wednesday.

It is a fast moving story of the underworld, depicting the plots and counter plots of the underworld politicians in a thrilling manner. The story approaches the subject of the underworld from an entirely new angle.

John Wray, who plays the principal role of Mort Bradley, gives a magnificent performance. He is a new personality to picture fans. He has a splendid reputation for crook parts on the New York stage. Betty Compson, who has appeared in numerous crook plays during her career, gives her best performance to date as Connie Colton in "Czar of Broadway." King Baggot makes his return to the screen in this Universal picture and gives an excellent characterization as Dane Harper. Others in the cast include John Harron, Wilbur Mack, Claude Allister and Edmund Breese.

An interesting romance is interwoven into the underworld theme, and John Harron as Jay Grant, the reporter, and Betty Compson as Connie Colton, form an exceptionally romantic team.

The picture as a whole is one of the most exciting tales of the metropolitan underworld that has been shown.

CHILLICOTHE GINS TURN OUT 128 BALES OF COTTON

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, Sept. 6.—One hundred and twenty-eight bales of 1930 cotton have been ginned here to date. The Farmers Cooperative, Turner & Randel, and the West Texas gin are those running at the present. The J. Y. Hughes gin will start operating as soon as more cotton is opened. The Panhandle Compress and Warehouse has received 54 bales of local cotton and two cars from Elmer, Okla., and two from Odell.

The Chillicothe Cotton Oil company is also beginning its season's run. Although the yield will be much less than was the case last year, it is thought the grade will be superior. Most of the cotton which has been ginned has proved this to be a fact. The yield this year will fall short by at least 4,000 bales due to the lack of rain.

School opens soon. Why not rent your bedroom or apartment to teachers or students? A small want ad in The Times and Record News may bring results.—Adv.

FEDERAL CLASSER OPENS OFFICE AT CHILLICOTHE

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, Sept. 6.—Working for the Texas Cotton Cooperative association, Earl M. Morris, formerly of Houston, arrived in the city this week and opened the Texas Cotton Cooperative association's sub office here, located at the Panhandle Compress company. Morris is working directly under the Vernon office which is a branch of the association. He is an excellent cotton classer, having been engaged in the cotton business for 18 years. He is a federal licensed classer, and is paying about two and one-half cents more for cotton which he classes than local cotton buyers are paying on the streets.

Special Student Night on Fridays Majestic Feature

For the past few months the Majestic has been offering as an added attraction for those attending the last performance of the regular feature an additional picture. There is no additional admission for this added attraction, it being the desire of the management to bring back to its patrons pictures they missed seeing during their regular run or some picture they desired to see over. This policy has proven very popular and more requests are being received now than ever before. The attraction for next Friday night will be Maurice Chevalier in "The Big Pond."

Now that school has started and the students will be seeking entertainment on Friday night, after devoting much time to study, it is the plan of the Majestic management to make Friday night a real students' night. Much of the frivolity that will be locked up during school days will be given a chance to release itself and everyone given an opportunity to join in the fun.

Many novel stunts are being planned and as soon as they are worked out, announcement will be made.

MEMPHIS INCREASES FIREMEN'S INSURANCE

MEMPHIS, Texas, Sept. 6.—The city council of Memphis in its regular monthly meeting this week, allowed $1,000 additional insurance to each of the 25 volunteer firemen of Memphis, to be paid their beneficiaries in case of death of a fireman while on duty, which brings the total amount up to $2,000. For several years the council has been carrying a blanket insurance policy covering 25 local firemen.

Norma Shearer Gem Sunday in 'The Divorcee'

Perhaps the only 100 per cent stage supporting cast assembled for a motion picture appears with Norma Shearer in "The Divorcee," at the Gem Sunday for three days.

Chester Morris, one of the most popular figures on the Broadway stage before coming into pictures, plays opposite the star.

Robert Montgomery, who plays the role of the lover, was brought from the stage, where he was a favorite juvenile, to make his movie debut in "So This Is College" and recently played opposite Miss Shearer in "Their Own Desire." Conrad Nagel, while identified with the screen for some time, has an extensive stage background, this experience equipping him for his brilliant talkie career.

Zelda Sears, who plays the part of the householder, is one of the stage's best-known playwrights and actresses, having written such plays as "The Clinging Vine" and "Undertow." Tyler Brooke is noted as a stage comedian and Florence Eldridge, Mary Doran, Helene Millard, George Irving, Helen Johnson and Robert Elliott all are well-known to theater audiences.

Miss Shearer, contrary to general belief because of her splendid reading of dialog lines, never was on the stage, having gone directly into motion pictures after finishing her education in schools of Montreal, Canada.

School opens soon. Why not rent your bedroom or apartment to teachers or students? A small want ad in The Times and Record News may bring results.—Adv.

Four Marx Brothers Featured At Strand in 'Animal Crackers'; 'Common Clay' Coming on Friday

"Hitch your cart to a star," is a wellworn slogan for success. The Four Marx Brothers, however, soared to the heavenly sector of the theatrical horizon, in the wake and dust of a runaway mule team.

That is one of incidents in their record climb to success as comedians, and a particular chapter written in Marshall, Texas, at a time when the young Marxes and their mother had a musical act, playing classical numbers from Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart.

In the midst of one of their performances in Marshall a great commotion arose outside the theater as a span of mules decided to go elsewhere in a great hurry.

The audience, which apparently had been somewhat bored, immediately deserted their seats to watch the excitement. When the runaway had been stopped, they rturned to see the rest of the show.

But the music-loving Marxes were so peeved because the audience had deserted Mozart for mules that they began making wise cracks at its expense.

Instead of resenting such remarks, the Texans laughed, and the act, which had been rather tame until that time, became a hit. The Marxes took the hint and revamped their act forthwith, deserting Schubert for slapstick forever after.

The irresistible Marx Brothers' laugh formulas are being passed out in a second all-talking feature for them, "Animal Crackers," from their recent stage success, and the screen headliner at the Strand through Thursday.

"Common Clay"

A girl of "common clay" who becomes the plaything of forces too strong for her and whose efforts toward rehabilitation and happiness only entangle her more deeply in the web of fate—such is the grippingly dramatic theme of "Common Clay," sensational vehicle featuring Constance Bennett and Lew Ayres which comes to the Strand next Friday.

Miss Bennett gives one of the finest performances within recent memory. The picture opens with her as a "hostess" in a speakeasy; not inherently vicious, but a girl who loves pleasure and gaiety and dancing, and who has taken the easiest way to secure these.

Lew Ayres, the youngster who achieved instant fame with his performance in "All Quiet on the Western Front," is noteworthy opposite Miss Bennett and Tully Marshall gives another clever portrayal of the girl's lawyer. Matty Kemp as Ayres' pal, Beryl Mercer as Miss Bennett's mother, Hale Hamilton as the opposing attorney, are excellent.

Infallible?

BOSTON.—Dr. Walter Franklin Prince has just published an article dealing with an experiment conducted some time ago testing the unreliability of witnesses. In a scene set especially for the test, witnesses were asked to write down their account of what happened and what was heard. Every one of the 20 witnesses' accounts differed.

What'da Leg Do?

EVANSTON, Ill.—Police on Evanston's bathing beaches are pure of mind. Because Mrs. Albert Strohmeyer, 40, was stretching a bare arm and shoulder out of a curtained automobile parked at a peach here, she was arrested and fined $5. Mrs. Strohmeyer said she was wearing a raincoat at the time.

POLICE RADIO TO AID INTERNATIONAL ANTI-CRIME WORK

By NEA Service

LONDON.—An international network of police radio stations for the interchange of news relating to crimes and criminals is being established in England, France and Canada.

In Great Britain, for example, three main wireless stations are to be maintained—the key station to be located at Scotland Yard, London, and the other two to be established at Birmingham and Glasgow or Edinburgh.

This plan of tracking the movements of criminals has met with approval while a more elaborate and costly scheme—involving an expenditure of $14,500,000—was defeated.

This chain of detective radio stations, employing a secret code, is to extend into Canada. The Ontario provincial police has already put into operation a network of radio stations interlinking district police stations throughout Ontario with departmental police headquarters in Toronto.

Communication is by secret code and the wave-length employed will not be divulged except by provincial police officers. A radio operator will be maintained in each police station district.

As if to join hands with England and Canada, although acting independently, France is using a short-wave station at Eiffel tower, Paris, as the nerve center for an extensive police radio service. Receiving stations, tuned to the proverbially fast-traveling bad news, will be established throughout France and at boundary and seaport towns.

The whole scheme is intended to act as a hurry-up agent exchanging information relating to crimes and distributing news about the movements of criminals.

Germany Leads

Germany leads Europe in the total number of radio receivers in use, but Denmark has the largest number per capita. There are more than 2,936,000 sets in Germany.

Seek School Sets

Under supervision of the state department of education, a movement is under way in Florida to secure radio receiving sets for all schools in the state.

CECIL AND SALLY TALK DAILY WITH 15,000,000 FANS

(By NEA Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—It is estimated that "Cecil and Sally" have a daily audience of 15,000,000 radio fans. Yet the two actors never appear personally before a radio microphone!

This popular radio program is a disc release. It has become so popular that it keeps Johnny Patrick and Helen Troy busy making records.

You've probably heard these two youthful air characters—Cecil, the average young boy with changing voice, the disdain of all things sentimental, his bashfulness hidden by a self-erected curtain of scorn. And Sally, the giggling, lisping flapper, who is "dumb like a fox" and who is constantly putting things over on Cecil.

There's a lot of fun in these recorded programs which are taken by more than 50 stations throughout the country. The couple are typical young folk, ready to emerge from their shell of adolescence into the world of reality, and there's a Cecil and Sally in every city block.

Johnny Meets Helen

The act was originated by Johnny Patrick, who is 23. Johnny traveled quite a lot with his family in his early days until he was made an orphan. His wanderings finally took him to the switchboard of a small San Francisco radio station, where he met Helen Troy.

The two passed banter between one another and one day Johnny decided they ought to get paid for their wise cracks. So Johnny and Helen, as "Cecil and Sally," took the air, finally winding up as one of the main features of the now extinct American Broadcasting company network on the Pacific coast.

When that organization was disbanded, the couple thought of electrical transcriptions and since then they have been making records by the hundreds.

No Proposals Wanted

Helen, off the air, confesses to the domestic flair. She lives close to her family, loves housework and babies, dogs and other pets. She is the older of the pair, being 24.

WISECRACKERS OF RADIO WORLD

Record makers "Cecil and Sally"—Johnny Patrick and Helen Troy.

Helen gets a proposal at least once a week by mail from radio admirers, and she refuses every one of them by a personal reply.

Johnny compiles the skits which Helen and he go through. In his bachelor apartment on top of a hill near Golden Gate park here, he sits with his typewriter near a large window and puts his ideas on paper. Then he calls Helen and the two spend a lot of time rehearsing the lines. Then it is reproduced on records.

Cecil and Sally records have been distributed all over the United States and Canada and even one station in the Hawaiian Islands is using them.

BETWEEN the WAVELENGTHS

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

Amos and Andy are not quite as old as some writers would have us believe.

Instead of being 41 and 50, the two blackface funny men of the radio have 10 years to go before they reach those ages. Their birth certificates bear out this statement.

Freeman Gosden, who is Amos, was born at Richmond, Va., May 5, 1899, and is now 31, while Charles J. Correll, Andy to listeners, started life Feb. 3, 1890, and is 40.

A few facts from behind the microphone:

Gayety rather than seriousness is the prevailing mood in the chain broadcast studios when artists and announcers are at work. The spirit even prevades the business offices.

David Ross, in keeping with his poetic atmosphere as a CBS announcer, dotes on Barrymore collars and flowing ties.

Ted Husing, whether the listener suspects it or not, sets the pace in men's fashions at CBS. Any new idea in dress generally finds him about the first to introduce it. He particularly is partial to sports attire.

An alarm clock that runs only when laid on its face is the battered instrument used by the Landt Trio and White in their program, on the 8:15, via NBC. It once was painted blue.

Radio has changed many things, even the way a house party is conducted. Once the center of attraction at these gatherings was the piano or organ, with the guests crowding around and singing to the delight of others who liked to hug the wall. Now the radio set gets the attention. Nine times out of ten it's the medium that furnishes a big share of the entertainment, particularly in the tempo of the dance.

RADIO OFFICIAL SEEKS SERVICE DEVELOPMENT

WASHINGTON. (AP)—Development of the service rendered radio listeners by the radio division of the department of commerce is the object of a country-wide trip to be undertaken soon by Arthur Batchellor, traveling supervisor.

Batchellor, formerly supervisor of radio at New York, will confer with station owners and listeners to ascertain how the department's service can be improved. It is planned to make similar inspection trips every year.

Radio Comfort

Because broadcasting in the air-tight Washington studios of CBS caused senators and other legislative heads to perspire, that chain has installed a refrigerating plant which will keep the senators cool while they get "hot" before the microphone.

Police Stations

Five countries are now using radio in fighting crime. The United States, Germany, England, France and Canada have radio stations used by police to broadcast crime information to automobile cruisers.

GREAT FUTURE IS SEEN FOR DRAMAS OVER RADIO MIKE

By NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Five years from now radio will be employing the best known writers in America. That's the belief of Berk Boyce, head of NBC's continuity department.

The primary reason why these writers are not employed by radio now is that of money, which prohibits paying an author what he is worth. But this obstacle will be removed by then, Boyce believes, and the radio audience will be richer thereby.

"Remember, radio drama as a legitimate entertainment is only about two and a half years old," Boyce says. "Before that it was just cute sounds coming out of a box. Give us time.

"After all, the movies were about 15 years old before they started getting famous authors to write for motion pictures."

Clark Disagrees

Don Clark, head of CBS's continuity department, has an altogether different view. He doesn't think that famous authors will ever get the call to write radio dramas. And here's his reason:

"Why aren't there well known names in radio drama? Because the people who write especially for radio write radio dramas much better than anyone else.

"The others have to change their styles completely to cope with the air drama. They have to take too much time to acquire a radio point of view.

"Playwrights are too subtle to make good dramatists for us. They are accustomed to writing with their eyes, possibly because plays are put over partly by pantomime. Radio must be written with one's ears, so to speak.

EXPLANATION OF LAST SUNDAY'S CARTOON—The Kaabah, Holiest Object on Earth: The Kaabah, the holy of holiest of the Mohammedan world, is an object of greater veneration to a Mussulman than any other shrine is to any great religion on earth. The Haj, or pilgrimage, to the Kaabah is the most compelling factor in the religous life of the Mohammedan. Our western minds cannot conceive of the extent of the privations and rigors, sometimes self-imposed, which the pilgrim will willingly brave in order to achieve the Haj. In the course of almost 2,000 years the pilgrimage has cost more lives than the late world war. Pierre Granier Carried 550 Pounds on His Head: The "porteurs" of the Halles Centrales of Paris are a picturesque lot, conspicuous for great size and strength. Competitions in their line of endeavor are an annual event with these huskies. Pierre Granier carried off the honors in 1923 by carrying 550 pounds on his head. Puzzo, the Disappearing Lake: At Lepgrighano, about 30 miles from Rome, tourists are shown a lake which disappears and reappears at regular intervals. The Italian ministry of the interior has named it Lake Puzzo. It is fed by subterranean springs with an intensity varying with the seasons. The Last Heath Hen: A century ago the heath hen abounded in the wilds of New England, but wholesale killing by the white man caused its extermination in 1870. Since that time a few of these birds have survived on Martha's vineyard, an island within the state of Massachusetts. Despite the efforts of the state department of conservation, and various bird clubs, to save the species, it has gradually decreased. This is the first time in the history of ornithology that a species has been photographed and studied in its normal environment down to the very last individual.

TIMES BOOK REVIEW AND LITERARY LANTERN

Men who bolted with "the colonel"; men who stuck with Taft—these will read the most in the letters Archie Butt wrote to his Aunt Clara down in Augusta, Ga.

Major Butt was military aide to Roosevelt and Taft when they were presidents.

With an eye to posterity he wrote almost daily letters, describing in detail the life in which he had a busy part. Those he wrote while under Taft have been published in "Taft and Roosevelt—The Intimate Letters of Archie Butt."

Born a Democrat, Butt became a "Roosevelt man," and so he stayed to the end. But he learned to like the genial, stubborn man who followed, and when he saw the two drifting apart he tried, in whatever ways are open to an aide, to stop them.

Just what sent Roosevelt and Taft down separate ways—if there was any certain thing—Butt never knew for certain.

Roosevelt once told him that one incident which built up the coolness was that he had been dragged into the steel case. Butt pleased that the president had never seen the papers. Roosevelt replied that it made the "blunder" more inexcusable.

But in the main Butt blames C. D. Norton, Taft's secretary, for the rift, and here the editors are careful to explain that the story has another side.

The letters end abruptly, just as open hostilities began between the two men, for Butt perished on the Titanic.

And so they are all gone now . . . the Rough Rider . . . Big Bill . . . and Archie Butt, who loved them both.

Ears to Tweak

Norman Douglas got around to "Mother India" a little later than most of us, but as soon as he did he looked about for ears to tweak in return. He found them and proceeds to the tweaking in "Goodbye to Western Culture."

The book is a series of related fragments—footnotes, Douglas calls them—setting up the virtues of the East against the vices of the West.

Giants of Other Days

Emil Ludwig has been among the giants again.

"Three Titans" are Michael Angelo, Rembrandt and Beethoven, and he sets down their lives without comparisons—but one cannot avoid them.

Michael Angelo's life was spent in a richer setting, more colorful than either of the others, but all knew sadness.

From 14 to 90 he lived under patrons (including nine popes), but his superior talents lost him many friends, and jealousies and bickerings made him withdraw into himself, solitary and unhappy.

Rembrandt, no child prodigy, chose painting as a profession and made a good deal of money at it, too. When he died friendless and in poverty he had lived his life out, painted the pictures that were in him.

But Beethoven was the most hapless of all, his life one of tragic frustration. He could not hear his own music, had no social graces and was denied the companionships he so desperately needed. He died in poverty, and the London Philharmonic society paid for his funeral.

"Tiger, tiger . . ."

Maurice DeKobra is a Frenchman, a newspaper man and a world traveler and all three are reflected in his engaging book on India, "The Perfumed Tigers."

DeKobra traveled 9,000 miles into the far corners of that great, turbulent peninsula, visited and watched, talked a little and heard a lot.

He makes no effort at deep political discussion, finds praise for both British and Indians, and manages to be both witty and informative.

One woman's record of the Russian revolution is set down in "Twice Born in Russia" under the pseudonym of Natalia Petrova. The author, once a noblewoman, now is the wife of a newspaper correspondent.

The author's family is of the old nobility, dates back to the first czars. Her early family life is a picture of the gulf between peasant and noble.

Then came the revolution and many times only her bright wit and chance saved her life. Months she went in rags, lived on crusts, sheltered in hovels.

But the American relief commission helped her with a job, she got to Moscow and after precarious months parted from her husband and married a foreigner, whose nationality she took at once.

THE BOOK SURVEY

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer

Arthur Train, who did the nation something of a service by inventing the law firm of Tutt and Tutt, evidently believes, with Mr. Bumble, that "the law is a ass."

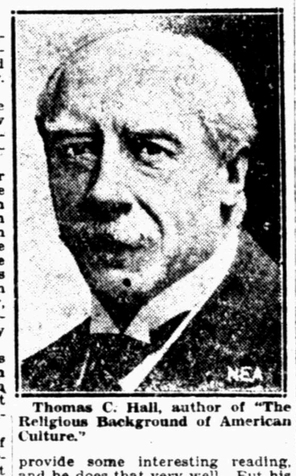

Furthermore, he seems to believe that the administration of the law lies largely in the hands of nincompoops, windbags, plain dumbbells and downright rascals.

When an intelligent lawyer reaches those two convictions he can do one of two things. He can go out and hang himself, or he can day-dream of a fairer world in which benevolent, incredibly wise attorneys use the tricks of the trade to bring to their suffering clients a measure of justice. Mr. Train chose the latter course, fortunately, and brought Ephraim Tutt into being—to the intense delight of many thousands of readers.

The firm of Charles Scribner's Sons has collected some two dozen of Mr. Train's tales of Mr. Tutt in book form, and are offering a fat volume, "The Adventures of Ephraim Tutt," at $2.50 the copy.

Probably you have read some of these stories in the Saturday Evening Post. If you have, you'll want the book without any advice from me; and if you haven't I can only urge you to get the book as soon as possible. For Mr. Tutt is in a class by himself. He is quite impossible, thoroughly lovable and extremely entertaining.

Mr. Train's main idea in writing these stories undoubtedly was to provide some interesting reading, and he does that very well. But his book, also, is a rather penetrating commentary on American jurisprudence. It constitutes a criticism of our methods of getting justice that is fairly devastating. You chuckle as you read these stories, but after you get through you begin to wonder . . .

Thomas C. Hall, author of "The Religious Background of American Culture."

Influence of Wyclif on American Culture

"The Religious Background of American Culture," by Thomas Cuming Hall, is a scholarly, well-documented attack on the current belief that most of our popular customs, beliefs and social mannerisms trace back to English Puritanism. Mr. Hall—who seems to have put an incredible amount of research into his book—believes that Puritanism had very little influence on the shaping of the nation, and he makes his book convincing.

The attitude that we loosely call Puritanical, he says, does not derive from Puritanism at all. Instead its roots go much farther back—all the way to the little-understood Lollard movement, that swept England before the continental reformation. Wyclif, he says, and not Luther or Calvin, was the man who guided Anglo-Saxon Protestantism into the channels that it occupies today. It was that lowly class called "dissenters" that set the tone for the American commonwealth.

The distrust of religious ceremony, the hatred of such diversions as the theater and the social game of cards, the antagonism to ritual and elaborate church organization—these things, says Professor Hall, date back to Lollardism. Wyclif's brand of Protestantism proved much more influential in this country than Luther's and the old New England "Puritans" were not, in any sense of the word, Calvinists, though that name is often given them.

Professor Halls book is well handled and represents, I think, historical writing at its best. It is published by Little, Brown & Co. at $3.

Enough Adventure to Satisfy Anybody

One of the finest tales of pure adventure I have seen this year is "Water and Gold," by Lewis Stanton Palen.

Mr. Palen sets down the reminiscences of Charles Hedlund, now a sedate master-mechanic in New Jersey but formerly a two-fisted sailor, gold hunter, soldier, rover and all-around adventure hunter. The result is a story that will probably prove to be one of the last of its kind; for the world, unfortunately, does not offer the opportunities for irresponsible gallivanting that it offered when Hedlund was young. People do not get shanghaied onto windjammers any more; neither do they have undeveloped continents to bat around in, or minor wars arranged especially for their benefit, or golden rivers where any lucky prospector can become a millionaire for a little trouble.

Those chances were still open when Hedlund left his native Scandinavia, and he made the most of them. I can't remember half of his adventures; let it suffice to say that he started out as a chimney sweep, became a sailor, prospected for gold in the interior of Africa, fought the blacks in a blood-thirsty uprising served in the Boer war, supported himself by killing lions and peddling their skins, became a policeman, ran a gold mine, dug for diamonds—well, isn't that almost enough?

"Water and Gold," is published by E. P. Dutton and company, and costs $3. It's a swell book.

"The Well of Loneliness"

Covici, Friede, Inc., is bringing out a new edition of Radclyffe Hall's famous "Well of Loneliness" at $2 a copy, which will make it available to those countless suburban matrons who have been whispering about it for the last eight months or so.

This novel about abnormal love has been reviewed so many times that little comment is needed. Let it be repeated that it is a serious study of the abnormal, handled with supreme good taste and developed with profound insight and sympathy. Why the self-chosen guardians of our morals tried to suppress it is hard to understand I can find nothing offensive in it.

By the same token—don't buy it if you're just looking for a cheap thrill. You'll be dreadfully disappointed.

For Fond Parents

Baby is cute when he shakes his rattle, but it's no sign he's smart. It may be accidental.

So finds Dr. Charlotte Buhler, a leading child psychologist in "The First Year of Life," a work which parents with a scientific leaning may find interesting.

Dr. Buhler has catalogued and interpreted the physical and mental activities of the child's first year.

Sixty-nine children of various ages were watched by observers working in eight-hour shifts, and in no way experimenting with or disturbing the child.

Among other things, they found no child crying or laughing with tears during the first month.

The book contains a group of simple tests to rate a child's monthly development.

THE LITERARY LANTERN

The Literary Lantern burns weekly in the Sunday Times and is intended to throw light on writing around and about the South. Communications for this column should be addressed to the Editor of the Literary Lantern.

What wonderful children's books the publishers are tantalizing us with this fall! If the young readers and listeners had their way they perhaps would be so captivated by bright covers and jolly pictures that they would persuade us to buy helter-skelter, without thought for a balanced ration. Children themselves are usually easy to please, though if left unguided, their taste in books is apt to be like their taste in wallpaper, inclined to the cabbage-rose school. But a little discrimination is not hard to instill and, without making himself obnoxious, the grown-up can direct, suggest, and select in this matter of reading. But first he must know not only what is good—since nearly everything in a modern junior book catalog is worth the reading—but also be able to pick out a selected list of the best. For unless the young reader is exceptional and omnivorous, he cannot read everything on this fall's list.

It seems to this reviewer that there are three kinds of juveniles which no young person should miss—folk tales and rhymes; tested classics such as "Alice in Wonderland" and "Gulliver's Travels;" and descriptions and tales of everyday objects, machines, and activities of this modern world, among the latter being books like the "Rootabaga" series of Carl Sandburg. In this latter class there are increasing numbers of titles, for writers, educators, and parents are seeing more and more that the youthful find should be made aware of the imaginative appeal of its surroundings—that the child should people his city streets with something as real and vivid as the woodland fairies of older and quainter days. Of course nothing takes the place of such creations as Mother Goose with her old-fashioned Hot Cross buns, windmills, and chimney-sweep. But every child, to repeat, should in addition to that type of tale, experience something of the romance that can be woven about his everyday life. And we welcome modern stories, nonsense rhymes, and poetry which utilize colloquial American language and homely objects to stimulate the youthful imagination.

No Southern Peers

We wish that we knew of a southern writer whose works could be quoted by way of illustration here. But most of our southern children's books are cast in conventional mould and are inferior, for instance, to Carl Sandburg's "Potato Face" (Harcourt, Brace) which creates the rambledanglers with "stop bells on their back feet and go bells on their front feet" and an answer of "Okeh" to every question. This volume of pure clowning is intended for adults as well as for children. "Charlie Chaplin' Parade" by Michael Gold (Harcourt, Brace, $1.50) is another example of the modern imaginative treatment of present-day matters, and it is evidently intended for any one of moving picture age. But we can testify that this gorgeous imaginative jab has been enjoyed by children 4 years old who have never seen the inimitable comedian. The pictures by O. Soglow bring him to life, flapping feet, bagging trousers and all. Joe Adams' adventures with Charlie begin with climbing the tallest skyscraper to get a permit from the mayor for a parade and end with a free-for-all display at Coney Island, featuring taxi-drivers, fire engines, and a magic saxophone.

Two books about modern machinery must be mentioned in passing, "How the Derrick Works," pictures and text by Wilfred Jones (Macmillan, $2), and "Playing Airplane," by J. F. McNamara, illustrated by Frank Dobias (Macmillan, $2.50). From the first a boy may learn all about the intricate parts of the derrick and also, in the pictures, catch something of the power and beauty of machinery at work and in the making. The airplane book is just what the boy under 10 has been longing for. It tells how to make a plane out of a box, a barrel, and a few sticks and nails, and then describes for the young pilot the make-believe adventures which may be his.

New Mother Goose

Lest anyone should confuse our enthusiasm for these new books with disloyalty to the old, let us recommend here a new edition of that best one of all, "Mother Goose" (Cupples and Leon Co., $1.25). Beautifully illustrated in line and color by Edna Cooke and attractively bound, it contains in its 360 pages all the familiar Mother Goose jingles.

Sometimes romantic memories of our own childhood favorites bias our judgment, especially in the matter of poetry, but the charm of "Robin Redbreast and Other Verses," by William Allingham (Macmillan, $1), is as fresh today as it was when Kate Greenway made the illustrations for the first edition. Though most of the poems are as good, only one, "The Fairies," is familiarly quoted in anthologies and school readers. It begins:

Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushing glen,
We daren't go a-hunting
For fear of little men—

The quaint old volume, formerly so well known, was recently found, on a forgotten shelf in the library of congress. The credit for resurrecting and re-issuing it is due to Miss Edna Turpin of Chase City, Va., who has written many stories for children and knows what they will like.

To get on with juveniles by southerners, here is "The Little Wise Chicken That Knew It All," by Kenneth Graham Duffield of Tennessee, published in a series of "Wee Books" (Henry Altemus, 50c)—a cunning story, delightfully illustrated. These tiny books with pictures that tell the tale have been popular with the littlest ones since the first English Peter Rabbit books of Beatrix Potter. And that reminds us that our favorite of her series, "The Tailor of Gloucester" (Frederick Warne, 75c) is sometimes neglected, and it ought not to be.

Eskimo Stories

Alice Alison Lide and Margaret Alison Johansen were born and raised in Richmond, Ala., but somehow they learned all about arctic life. One could almost believe they were born Eskimo natives, after reading "Ood-le-uk, the Wanderer" (Little, Brown, $2.00). This stirring and beautifully written adventure tale has decorative and beautiful pictures by Raymond Sufkin. It is the August choice of the Junior Book of the Month club—for boys and girls from 11 years on.

Another story of the arctic, this time for younger children, is "Little Tooktoo, the Story of Santa Claus' Youngest Reindeer" (Morrow, $2.00). The author is Marie Ahnighito Peary, daughter of Rear Admiral Peary, made famous as "The Snow Baby" (Ahnighito, in the language of the Eskimos) by the book which her mother wrote about her babyhood adventures in the arctic. We may claim Marie Peary as a southerner, perhaps, from her residence in Washington, D. C. Her "Little Tooktoo" is delightfully fanciful. The illustrations by Kurt Wiese are spirited and at the same time true and accurate animal studies.

Southern children, especially, should know some of the folk tales of Africa. We recommend "The Folk Tales of a Savage" by a native West African, Lobagola (Knopf, $2.00). These stories were heard around the fires in Africa when the writer was a child. He reproduces them here in English with all their pithy wit and humor. Like most African folk-tales, they are all about animals and these dramatis personae are made real by the imaginative drawings of Erick Berry.

The folk-tales of South America have been used by Charles Finger of Arkansas in such narratives as "Tales From Silver Lands." One of these, "The Hungry Old Witch," has been chosen by Mary Gould Davis for inclusion in "A Baker's Dozen" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.00). The thirteen stories by different writers have been chosen for the particular qualities which make them good for story telling, notably their beauty of language. The list of authors includes Carl Sandburg, Laurence Housman, Arthur Ryder, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Louis Untermeyer and Frank Stockton. They are all worth memorizing, and really their phrasing should be repeated exactly when they are retold during the story hour. Rightly recited they should cultivate an appreciation of the beauty of the spoken word with any audience of junior boys and girls.

Time
(A child's fancy)
By John Richard Moreland

I think time is a restless boy
Who gives his mother little joy.

They live within the great town clock
Just back of us and keep a flock

Of cooing pigeons. All day long
I hear Time's mother sing her song.

"Tick-tock, tick-tock," when noon is bright,
"Tick-tock, tick-tock," all through the night.

I think Time's naughty overmuch
And knows the slipper's stinging touch.

For regular, as hours run,
I hear Time's mother spank her son.

I count the licks, one, two, three four,
And sometimes six, eight, ten, or more.

I think time is a restless boy
Who gives his mother little joy!

—ELIZABETH LAY GREEN.

National Nurse Plan

NEW YORK.—The American Nurses association, having about 85,000 members, has arranged a scale of charges which will enable hundreds of middle-income families to afford a nurse during sickness. An average charge is to be made of $1.50 for the first hour of a nurse's time and 50 cents for each additional hour.

THE ALARMING SPREAD OF POETRY—By P. G. Wodehouse

Recently I had occasion to visit on business, the nature of which does not come within the scope of this article, my old friend Dodd of the firm of Winchley, Dodd and Co. It was a perfect day, and as I was not pressed for time, I thought it would be pleasant to stroll part of the way, smoking thoughtfully. Entering a cigar store I addressed the youth behind the counter. He was a dreamy-eyed young man, and as I entered he was scribbling something on his shirt cuff with a stub of pencil. I could hear him muttering something about "light" and "bright."

"I want a mild cigar," he said.

He bustled about among his boxes, all eagerness and efficiency.

"A mild cigar? About what price? Ah, here you are. You'll find this nice. I hear each day somebody say this brand's the best by far. All other smokes are simply jokes compared with this cigar."

I thought little of the incident until I reached the office building where my friend works. A child of tender years was standing in the elevator, gazing heavenward in a rapt sort of way and chewing a fountain pen. I addressed him.

"Take me to Winchley, Dodd and Co. They are on the second floor."

"Step right inside and up we go. The elevator isn't slow. In fifteen seconds, sir, or so, you'll rap upon their door."

I obeyed the child's instructions, and entering the office accosted the office boy. He had long hair and was dictating something to the stenographer. I caught the words "breath" and "death."

"Who is it that you wish to see? Be candid and confide in me."

I said I wished to see Mr. Dodd.

"Mr. Dodd? Why, that's odd. There's his room, but he's not in it. He's gone out. Not a doubt! He'll be back in half a minute."

And then I perceived, with that clarity which comes from actual personal observation, how universal the once sporadic disease of poetry had become in our midst.

To the thinking man there are few things more disturbing than the realization that we are becoming a nation of minor poets. In the good old days poets were for the most part confined to garrets, which they left only for the purpose of being ejected from the offices of the magazines and papers to which they attempted to sell their wares. Nobody ever thought of reading a book of poems unless accompanied by a guarantee from the publisher that the author had been dead at least a hundred years. Poetry, like wine, certain brands of cheese, public buildings, and Babe Ruth, was rightly considered to improve with age; and no connoisseur would have dreamed of filling himself with raw, indigestible verse, warm from the maker's.

Today all this is changed. Many a young man, who, had he been born earlier, would have sustained life on a crust of bread, is now discussing the choice between Pommery Brut and Moet et Chandon Sec in the best restaurants of France—all at the expense of a great American foundation. Naturally this is having a marked effect on the life of the community. Our children grow to adolescence with the feeling that they can become poets instead of working. Many an embryo bill clerk has been ruined by the heady knowledge that poems may lead to an endowment. All over the country promising young plasterers and rising young motormen are throwing up steady jobs in order to devote themselves to the new profession.

On a sunny afternoon down in Washington Square, New York, one's progress is positively impeded by the swarms of young poets brought out by warm weather. It is a heart-wringing sight to see those unfortunate youths, who ought to be sitting happily at desks writing, "Dear sir: Your favor of the tenth inst. duly received and contents noted. In reply we beg to state . . ." wandering about with their fingers in their hair and their features distorted with the agony of composition, as they try to find rhymes to "cosmic" and "symbolism."

Until modern times there was just one thing, which, like a salient fortress in the midst of an enemy's advancing forces, acted as a barrier to the youth of the country. When one's son came to one and said, "Father, I shall not be able to fulfill your dearest wish and start work in the fertilizer department—I have decided to become a poet," although one could no longer frighten him from his purpose by talking of garrets and starvation, there was still one weapon left. "What about the rhymes, Willie?" you replied, and the eager light died out of the boy's face, as he perceived the catch in what he had taken for a good thing. You pressed your advantage. "Think of having to spend your life making one line rhyme with another! Think of the bleak future, when you have used up 'moon' and 'June,' 'love' and 'dove,' 'May' and 'gay!' Think of the moment when you have ended the last line but one of your poems with 'window' or 'warmth' and have to buckle to, trying to make the thing couple up in accordance with the rules! What then, Willie?"

In the good old days poets were for the most part confined to garrets.

Next day a new hand had signed on in the fertilizer department.

But now all that has changed. Rhymes are no longer necessary. If Longfellow had been writing today and was getting a dollar a line, he would revise "The Village Blacksmith" so that instead of this $4.00 worth—

Under the spreading chestnut-tree
The village smithy stands.
The smith a brawny man is he
With large and sinewy hands—

he could stretch it to $14.00 in this fashion—

In life I was a village smith,
I worked all day
But
I retained the delicacy of my complexion
Because
I worked in the shade of the chestnut-tree
Instead of in the sun
Like Nicholas Blodgett, the expressman,
I was large and strong
Because
I went in for physical culture
And deep breathing
And all those stunts.
I had the biggest biceps in town.

Who can say where this thing will end? Verse like this is within the reach of all. A sleeping nation has wakened to the realization that verse is something anybody can write. Only the other day I myself was stricken with the disease. I happened to be writing to my landlord what is technically known as a "strong letter" about the state of the roof, dwelling on its imperfections and hinting at the probable danger of allowing it to continue in its present state. I had not got half-way through it when I perceived that I was letting good stuff go to waste. I tore up the letter and sent the following to a magazine:

Passer by,
I died of acute rheumatism,
Universally respected.
(No flowers, by request.)
Wasn't it rotten luck?
Everybody loved me,
But the landlord would not fix the roof,
And the rain came in and made the house
Damp,
And that finished me.
I tied myself in knots and Expired.
Everyone has forgotten me
Except
Ed Judkins, the drug-store man.
I owed him fifty cents.

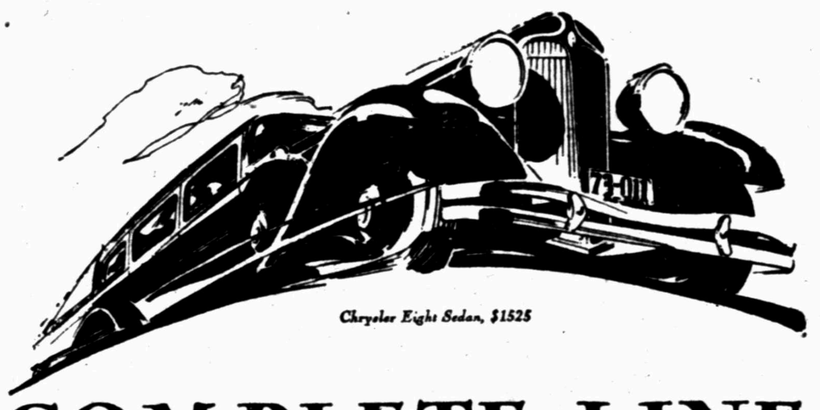

A child can do it. And, what is worse, nearly every child is doing it. Things have reached such a pitch that our little ones take to poetry as soon as they write a legible hand. Something must be done shortly if the nation is to be saved from this menace. But what? Probably the only hope lies in the fact that poets never buy other poets' stuff. When once we have all become poets, the sale of verse will be limited to the few copies which individual poets will buy to give to their friends.

"A mild cigar? About what price? Ah, here you are, you'll find this nice."

HOTEL MAN

He Longed For a Home

TWENTY-FIVE years is a long time to be heart, bone, and fibre part of a business, and then at the end of it feel frustration.

That however was the case with Charles Brennon, superintendent, proprietor, manager, and general-manager of the Hotel Savoy, the first-rate hotel of a city of considerably over two hundred thousand inhabitants.

Brennon had personally built up his hotel to its important proportions, dividing it successfully into two sections: The Annex, or family wing, and then the hotel proper, which invited the patronage of transients and those who were availing themselves of the town's famous curative waters, which were renowned for their medicinal qualities.

And so it happened that The Savoy catered to three distinct groups. Families. Commercial men and women. Rheumatic patients.

One might have thought that such variety of patronage would have lent interest and even glamour to Brennon's role of hotel man, and in a way it did, yet this same fact in itself was a factor in the ultimate sense of frustration that time and again, as he grew older and more deeply entrenched in his work, swept and depressed him.

What struck most painfully into the sense of loneliness which was more and more oppressing him in his daily life among the crowd, was the fact that of all the hundreds who daily milled in and out of his hostelry; lived there; entertained there; dined there; wined there, he alone seemed the homeless one. He alone, among all the coming and going, seemed to be the one who was neither coming nor going. Even the families in the Annex were usually there on a temporary basis; awaiting the completion of a new home; pending a marriage; taking a year off between changes of permanent address.

In fact, it was the families in the Annex that contributed most of all to the growing unrest that was Brennon's. The unit of these little groups was so snug. Even sitting around with them of an evening in the lobby and then seeing them troop off together to their rooms, their suites, their apartments, gave him that cold alien sense he was more than ever beginning to dread. Husbands and wives trailing off together. Brothers and sisters bantering their way up to bed. Pairs of people sharing the intimacies of family life; of domestic life. Then, in the commercial and transient wings, men and women on their way to homes. Men and women eager for mail from homes, anxious to get back to domestic groups; awaited at some remote point by eager loved ones.

Then Brennon himself, doomed, as he was beginning to put it, to the impersonal detached existence of the hotel. When Brennon went to his rooms nights, there was the paraphernalia of hotel. Bed turned town by impersonal chambermaid hands. Night light turned on by those same employed hands. Carafe of hotel water. Bowl of hotel flowers. Cold. Impersonal. And all under the same roof. Families waiting to tuck themselves into homes. Transients eager to return to homes.

TWENTY-FIVE years of hotel life had made something of a self-pitier out of Brennon. He felt sorry over the cold detached quality of his existence. He felt left out. Left over. Chilled.

Happy groups and couples sharing the intimacies of family life, trooping off to their rooms, gave Brennon that cold, alien sense that he was beginning to dread.

But it was not until after twenty-five years of it that consciously he began to set about doing something about it. Well-off in worldly goods by now, content within his own mind that he had proved himself capable of success, thought of retirement now began to grip him. Retirement and, at fifty-three, a suddenly flourishing hope and ambition for marriage.

Into a life peculiarly unremarkable where women were concerned, this new phase entered, taking him by storm. In his success and maturity, Brennon wanted marriage and domesticity; domesticity as far removed as possible from the lobby, the grill-room, or the thoroughfare.

These elements might have entered more surely into his reckoning except for the fact that at fifty-three, Brennon fell in love; fell in love to such an extent that, had the widow Smeade stipulated that they live their lives out atop an omnibus, Brennon would have consented. Fortunately, however, the desires of the widow Smeade were simple, intelligent ones that fitted in nicely with his scheme. A hotel dweller herself, for fourteen years past, it was with a certain relief that she fell in with the plans of Brennon to divorce themselves as fast as possible from the more noisome unprivate existence of the public hostelry.

The Savoy was offered for sale, and brought a price far handsomer than Brennon had anticipated.

AT fifty-four, feeling younger than he had in twenty years, married to a lovely, well-preserved woman of his passionate choice, he was in the blessed position of giving expression to the desires that had so long rankled him.

The Brennons chose a house on one of the private, restricted, residential streets of the town, furnished it to the Queen's and their own tastes, created a garden about it, stocked their garage with cars, their top floor with servants; their cellar with wines, and set about the delightful business of making their house a home in every sense of the word.

And the new Mrs. Brennon had a knack. Under her firm and authentic touch, the home took on life, so to speak. In all his previous frustrated dreams, Brennon admitted to himself, he had never quite succeeded in visualizing the kind of perfection this woman brought to the creating of a home.

Privacy, lovely furnishings, small personal touches of flowers in bowls arranged by her; color schemes worked out according to her knowledge of his taste; the bed folded back by her loving hands because she knew the way he liked his pillows piled. Sentimental, if you will, but where his new happiness was concerned, Brennon was unashamedly that.

It was not until after five years of their cloudless marriage that Brennon and his wife took their first trip out into the world which flowed about this home. They went to a city some four hundred miles removed from theirs, there to enjoy the theatres and concerts of the larger metropolis.

IT was while they were at the Grand Hotel there and enjoying what they were pleased to call their second honeymoon, that the opportunity to purchase the hostelry at an absurdly low price literally fell into Brennon's lap.

At first the idea was preposterous and both he and his wife turned willing backs upon the entire idea. But strangely, in the case of both of them, the idea simply would not be downed. After all, the new Mrs. Brennon had lived fourteen years in the light and glamour of hotel life and there was something about it—something about it—

As for Brennon, he was the old racehorse pawing the turf. Time and time again he turned his face away, only to scent back again, hypnotized.

The inevitable happened. For seven years Brennon and his wife have occupied a six-room suite in their hotel, The Grand. During that time the institution has more than tripled its patronage and its success redounds to the credit of Brennon.

Meanwhile, he and his wife promise themselves, with optimism, that one of these days they will turn their backs on the shallowness of hotel life, and really create themselves a home.

MANY ARE SIGNING COTTON CONTRACTS WITH ASSOCIATION

About 150 cotton growers in Wichita county are reported to have signed association contracts for cooperative marketing of their cotton. Exact figures are not available at this time.

In addition to those who have signed, a number of farmers have obtained copies of the association contract and are studying them before signing.

Three meetings have been held, at Wichita Falls, Electra and Kemp City. About 125 attended the meeting at Kemp City, which was held last Tuesday night.

Olney Expecting Large Attendance For School Year

OLNEY, Texas, Sept. 6.—With the largest enrollment in the history of Olney's schools expected, plans were practically completed for the opening exercises Monday morning.

According to Supt. Bruce Shulkey, 83 6-year-old students are not expected to tax the capacity of the north and south ward schools. "We are fortunate to have plenty of room," he said, "but fear that the future will bring crowded conditions.

Eight new teachers have been employed to fill vacancies. Mr. J. O. Dodson of Greenville has been elected principal of the senior high school. Mrs. Dodson will teach mathematics and Miss Willie Couch of Oklaunion, will teach science and history in the same school. In the south ward school Mr. True Lovelace is principal, and Miss Mavis Warren, Dublin; Miss Edith Hudson, Fort Worth, and Miss Gene Russell, Graham, are new in the system.

In north ward, where Miss Edna Wood is principal, two new teachers have been employed. They are Miss Jessamine Thornton, Mabank, and Miss Elizabeth Corley, Denton.

"Package" Butcher

NEW YORK.—A new era has come in the butcher business. A modern butcher shop recently opened at 77th street and Broadway, has thick carpets on the floor and comfortable chairs. The meats are not displayed from hooks. They are neatly wrapped in transparent paper, graded and weighed, and put in showy cases. Steaks, chops, roasts and other cuts are fixed in this manner.

BIG INCREASE IN ALFALFA ACREAGE IN PROSPECT HERE

About 200 Acres Additional To Be Seeded This Fall

LARGEST PLANTING IN HISTORY OF COUNTY

Both Irrigated and Dry Land Tracts Are to Be Included

Alfalfa planting in Wichita county this fall will be increased by about 200 acres over the present acreage, County Agent G. C. McGown announces. He has about completed arrangements for 12 additional plats, of varying size, in this crop.

Tracts to be seeded are those of Kemp & Kempner, J. M. Isbell, J. H. Martin, R. P. Freeman, G. A. Remington, T. B. Smock, C. R. Hartsook, J. S. Downing, C. E. Birk, C. I. Francis, B. H. Preston and J. D. Ashton. The last two are in the Burkburnett district, all the others being on irrigated land.

These additional plantings will give Wichita county a larger acreage in alfalfa than ever before. Besides those mentioned, J. M. McFall, J. S. Bridwell and others already have considerable acreage in alfalfa.

Hints for the Rabbit-Breeder

By WM. L. SMITH, Director of Publicity of the North Texas Rabbit Breeders Association

For Meat-Fur-Pleasure

The average rabbit breeder thinks nothing of paying from $25 to $100 for a fine breeding doe and $10 to $20 for stud service of an extra fine buck, but ask him to donate $10 to a national publicity fund for promoting the sale of rabbit meat, and he can't hear you. In this respect he is a great deal like some of the breeders of fancy poultry. They too, have been complaining for a number of years, about the decreased demand for their product, but when it comes to the matter of loosening the purse strings for a donation to a national poultry campaign, most of them are just a little bit "scotchy" and seem to be under the impression, that since the forthcoming of the "shekels" is not general, they see no reason why they should put some money in the pot.

I have just gone over the article in over a year's issues of one of the largest rabbit magazines, and find that what appears to me the most valuable item of interest—the sale of rabbit meat—has been sadly neglected and very little constructive matter has been printed. In the majority of the articles appearing in the magazines, fur seems to be the general subject of discussion. According to my view it is less than 50 per cent of the real value of the animal. It is true that millions of skins are annually imported into this country, practically duty free, because the demand is greater than the American breeder can supply. Rabbit breeders are complaining that such a condition exists, yet they are doing practically nothing to increase the demand for the sale of rabbit meat, which naturally would bring a greater supply of skins.

There is only one way to create an interest in rabbit meat and that is by national publicity. "Long Island Ducklings." "Philadelphia Squabs." "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits" were all made popular through national publicity. Of course some of these had a far greater investment at stake than the rabbit industry, yet it was a difficult matter to get sufficient funds together for a publicity campaign.

The promoters of the "hatchery chicks" campaign had set their goal for millions but did not come within gun shot of the desired amount, but what they did get was well spent and an increased demand resulted throughout the country.

Rabbit breeders of course have not anywhere near the capital invested in their industry and therefore the chances for a quick national publicity campaign to promote the sale of rabbit meat is out of the question, so other methods must be employed to acquaint the public with the fine quality of rabbit meat.

There is "more than one way to kill a cat" and we believe that "local cooperation" will be the best method in the end. The national organization should take a hand in forming these local cooperative units. A general national policy should be formed and followed by every unit.

For instance a certain day in the month could be set all over the nation for a "rabbit demonstration" day at one of the best local butcher shops of a district. At these demonstration days samples of nicely prepared rabbit meat would be passed out to the customers with printed bulletins and recipes. The breeders belonging to one of these local units could donate the rabbit for this day and also quote a very low price to the butcher so he would push the sale of rabbit meat. We believe after this had been done several times (at very little cost to the breeder), the people would become interested and ask for rabbit meat as often as chicken.

Another suggestion would be to cut up the rabbit in several pieces, so the customers could buy a small quantity for a trial. The bulletin and recipes should be furnished through local units at cost by the national organization. One of the greatest prejudices against eating rabbit meat is that for hundreds of years rabbits have been raised as pets and the thought of killing a pet and eating it is abhorent to most people. This prejudice is one of the greatest obstacles that the rabbit breeder must overcome before "rabbit meat" will become popular. Therefore the local units should endeavor to have their local papers print articles on this subject and show by text and illustrations that the "meat rabbit" of today is not a pet but a domestic animal raised solely for its meat, with fur as a side issue. A proper trade name should be given to rabbit meat the same as pork, beef, mutton or veal has been given to the meat of the cow, pig, sheep or calf. This would take a lot of the prejudice away and "make the meat taste better."

Fried Rabbit.—Make a batter, using the following for each rabbit: One egg, one-half teaspoon salt, beat the egg, add the milk and salt and stir into flour to form a smooth batter. Wipe the rabbit clean with a damp cloth and cut into pieces of the right size for serving. Dip each piece of rabbit into this batter and be sure that it is thoroughly covered. In an iron skillet heat well flavored fat until it is hot enough to set the batter quickly. Brown the pieces of rabbit evenly, then reduce the heat and cook at a lower temperature for 25 or 30 minutes or until tender. Serve on a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Gravy to serve with this rabbit may be prepared as follows: With each two tablespoons of fat in which the rabbit was cooked, blend one and a half tablespoons flour and one cup milk. Cook until thickened. Add one tablespoon finely chopped parsley, one-fourth teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. The above recipe is a tested one and recommended by the United States department of agriculture.

MUCH POISON USED IN EFFORT TO BEAT COTTON LEAF WORM

With cotton leaf worms continuing to threaten the crop in this section, poisoning with calcium arsenate is the order of the day on most of the cotton farms. The worms, which first appeared in the irrigated district, are now showing up on other cotton, their propagation being favored by the cloudy weather and the humidity.

About 90,000 pounds of calcium arsenate has been sold here for use in dusting or spraying and it is possible that an additional supply will be necessary.

EXPERIMENT FARM TESTS PROGRESS IN SPITE OF WEATHER

IOWA PARK, Texas, Sept. 6.—Report of Texas substation No. 16, for August, 1930, by superintendent of station, Earl J. Wilson.

Weather as affecting station crops and work:

August has been extremely dry and hot, the average mean temperature being 85.6 degrees, or 1.9 above the normal. The maximum temperature was 107, recorded both on Aug. 15 and 19, and on 18 days of the month it was 100 degrees or above. The rainfall was very low being 1.31 inches or below normal .93 inches. Fair weather prevailed 27 days of the 31, there was but one cloudy day and three partly cloudy days. The wind movement aggregated 2,997 miles which was slightly above normal.

The mean maximum humidity was but 45.7 per cent as compared to 61.6 for the four-year average for this station. The accumulated precipitation since Jan. 1 is 19.36 inches which is below the normal for this region.

Crops under the dry farm conditions have been cut short by the extended drouth and those even under irrigation in some instances have been affected adversely. Most cotton has fruited well and insect damage has probably been less on account of the hot and dry conditions. The weather prevailing has made outside work more easily accomplished, but an excessive amount of time has been given to irrigation.

Practically all cotton on the farm continues to fruit more heavily than is normally the case and without serious infestation of insects, although, dusting has been resorted to once for retarding damage from the leaf worms. The fertilizer test on cotton shows promise with heavy fruiting, though as a rule the plants have not grown rankly.

The Delfos field cotton is now opening well and promises a good yield, although having been stunted slightly before irrigation was applied. Although this variety possesses the bad characteristics of a small boll, the yields in tests have been among the best; partly attributed to the deep-lobed leaves which permit the penetration of the sun easily and thus hold down the development of insects that cause the dropping of the squares and bolls.

One of the large boll strains of Greer cotton planted with delinted seeds vs. fuzzy and spaced to various degrees is making a splendid growth of frame and heavy set of fruit at the present time.

Of six varieties of soy beans in the field tests, one only possesses particular merit, since the hot conditions and root rot disease have made the stand very irregular. The government soy bean to date has apparently been unaware of adverse conditions, but thus far it has not put on any pods, although it is blooming profusely and will likely set fruit well with cooler weather.

Four varieties of lima beans are being grown in plat tests with little in yields during midsummer. Fruit is setting fairly well on some of the varieties at this time, and particularly so on the pole limas. This variety, in fact, shows a heavy forage growth and tolerance for the hot, dry conditions that have prevailed, and it holds some promise as soil builder or hay crop, except for the high cost of seed.

Sesbania, a rather new crop, several strains of which are native to Texas, is being tried again as a promising crop for soil building. A growth of 54 inches has been made in 47 days from seed and an examination of the roots show it to possess exceedingly large and numerous nitrogen gathering nodules.

There were 175 visitors recorded during the month, which maintains the average attendance for this period of the year very well. The larged part of the visitors resulted from a tour of the valley conducted in cooperation by the county agent, G. C. McGown, and culminating at the station with a field day.

The substation held open house Friday, the twenty-second, for county agents and their former friends, and others accompanying the party on the tour of the Wichita valley. Approximately 75 visitors were present from this and the surrounding counties. A splendid lunch was provided by the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce and the Wichita irrigation district and served under the commodious pavilion of the substation. Following the main feed watermelons were served from the station crop. A program consisting of timely talks on agriculture and the station work was given, apparently to the satisfaction of all. Following the program a tour of the farm was made and examination of the plats brought the visit to a close. The visitors were apparently pleased with their trip and the verdant condition of the valley contrasted with the parched conditions outside of the irrigated area here was a revelation to those, at least, who had not seen the results in the valley heretofore.

DEEP TILLAGE TO BE GIVEN TRIAL ON SEVERAL TRACTS

The deep tillage method in use for the past two years on the Birk farm and the Bullington-Donohoe-Dunaway orchard will be adopted this fall on a number of other farms in this section.

Among those who have arranged for tillage service are J. S. Bridwell, C. I. Francis, G. A. Remington, Carl Williamson and E. C. Knox.

The tilling will be done with equipment from the Birk farm on a per-acre basis, the charge varying with the nature of the soil.

HEAVY PLANTING OF TURNIPS UNDER WAY BY DITCH FARMERS

The lowly turnip, which last season proved to be an excellent money crop in the valley, is being heavily planted this fall. In view of generally drouthy conditions elsewhere, it is believed there will be a good demand for this vegetable this fall.

Turnips are now being planted on tracts from which truck and other crops have been harvested.
