Boulder death

MINOT, N.D. — An 8-year-old boy playing with friends in a gravel pit died when a boulder fell on him, authorities said. Jesse Volk was trying to dig a tunnel or make a fort when the 8-ton boulder tumbled onto him Wednesday, said police Sgt. Richard McBride. Officials pushed more boulders to prevent another accident, but police received calls later that children were there.

Volcano erupts

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — A volcano erupted in northern Costa Rica, spewing lava and setting off landslides that swept away bridges to two villages. The 5,900-foot volcano, with a crater 1,600 feet in diameter, started rumbling and letting off steam and debris earlier this week after being inactive since 1983. Vilma Barboza, a volcanologist at National University, said ashes blanketed area woods, dammed up and muddied parts of the Penjamo River and uprooted trees and ruined crops and pasture.

William Smith charged with rape

William Smith

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith was charged with rape on Thursday, nearly six weeks after a 29-year-old woman reported he attacked her at the Kennedy family's seaside estate.

State Attorney David Bludworth said a warrant had been issued for Smith's arrest, and police said the 30-year-old Georgetown University medical student was expected to surrender early next week.

"I'm very confident that when this thing is resolved that I'll be able to stand by my original statement, which was that I didn't commit an offense of any kind," Smith said in Washington.

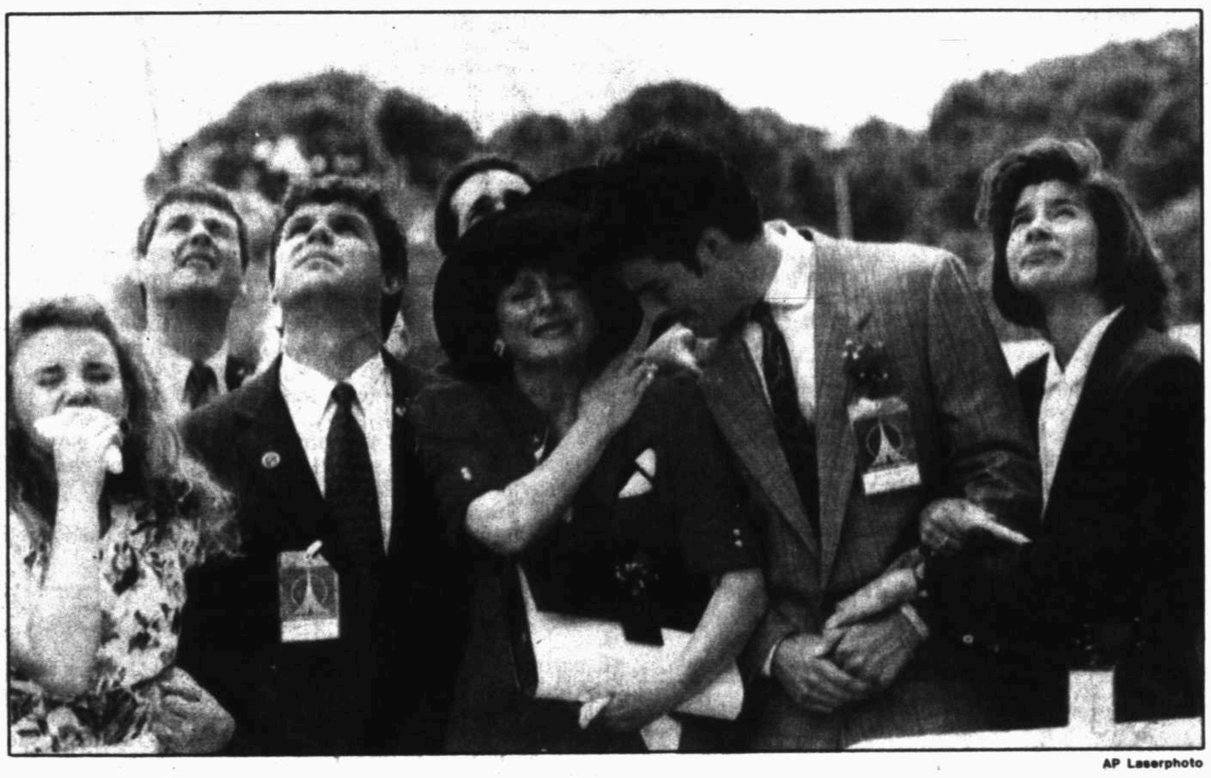

In a statement, the woman, stepdaughter of a retired Midwestern industrialst, said: "I feel a profound sense of relief and vindication."

If convicted, a defendant with no prior criminal record could face a sentence from probation to 4½ years under sentencing guidelines.

Bludworth's announcement before more than 100 reporters capped weeks of speculation and controversy in the United States and overseas. The intense interest has been driven in part by the fact that Smith was with his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and the senator's son, Rhode Island state Rep. Patrick Kennedy, the night of the incident.

Extensive news coverage of the event has itself been a topic of debate, in part over the

Iraq rejects U.N. plan

■ Baghdad's refusal to accept U.N. civilian police force could delay complete withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Thursday relayed to President Bush the "very clear rejection" by Baghdad of a U.S.-backed proposal for a U.N. civilian police force in northern Iraq.

The U.N. official also told the president a new United Nations Security Council resolution would be needed to establish such a force in the absence of Iraqi acquiescence.

The developments could complicate Bush's plans to bring remaining American troops home from the region quickly.

"Today I have received a very clear rejection from the Iraqi government. They do not want a United Nations police force," Perez de Cuellar said at a picture-taking session with Bush at the White House. "They do not want a United Nations police presence in the area."

The last American troops rolled out of southern Iraq on Wednesday. But U.S. forces remain in northern Iraq, where

The industry has undergone a number of changes in the past few years, changes that are well symbolized by Denise Bode, the guest speaker at Thursday's Energy Appreciation Luncheon, sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Ms. Bode, a native Oklahoman, attorney and Washington lobbyist, took over the presidency of the Independent Producers Association of America in January, the first woman to hold the post.

She said independent producers are special to her because, "they're out there taking chances. Who else would have hired a woman and a lobbyist for the head job at the largest organization of independents in the country?"

She told the gathering that during her first months in office, she has determined that, "domestic producers must

When Mary Brown accepts her associate of science diploma at Midland College tonight, she will be accepting more than just a rolled up certificate.

Her diploma represents two years of determination which changed the course of her life.

The academic road she has traveled has led Ms. Brown from working in a low-skilled job to aspiring for a career in law, from being an average student in high school to being named one of the top 60 junior college students in the nation by "USA Today."

Due to her academic record, Ms. Brown was named to the newspaper's All-USA Academic Team recently. While the 26-year-old's grade point average caught the eye of judges, it was noted that student essays were given heavy weight during the judging.

In Ms. Brown's essay she said the greatest impact education has had on her life is that it resulted in a change in how she perceives herself.

"Before I attended college, I never voted or listened to the news because I could not understand the issues involved," Ms.

Judge rules against ex-MMH employee

EL PASO (AP) — A former hospital employee who lost his job for photographing Jessica McClure after her rescue from an abandoned well cannot collect damages from the hospital, an appellate judge ruled.

John Brennan had sued Midland Memorial Hospital and hospital administrator Ray Branson in 238th District Court in Midland after he said he was forced to resign. He was denied damages in a summary judgment.

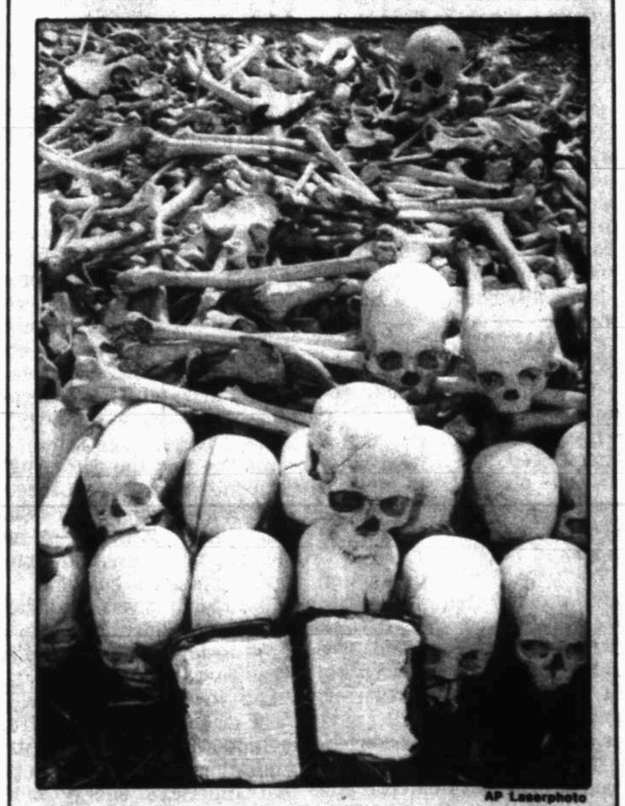

In an opinion signed by Justice Max N. Osborne, the 8th Court of Appeals here affirmed the lower court's ruling.

Brennan took his camera to work Oct. 16, 1987, when Jessica was admitted to the hospital after being rescued from a water well in which she had been trapped for 58 hours.

Her ordeal became international news and drew dozens of media representatives to Midland. Brennan snapped photos of Jessica, then 18 months old, as she was admitted to the hospital and told the district court judge he had permission from Reba McClure, Jessica's mother.

Space Mirror dedicated in tearful ceremony

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Families wept and others struggled to hold back tears. All stood proud Thursday in front of a glossy granite memorial carved with the names of the 15 astronauts who lost their lives during their quest for the unknown.

Dozens of astronauts and 123 family members, each wearing a red rose, joined 2,000 others at Kennedy Space Center to dedicate the 4-story-high wall called Space Mirror.

"It has awakened all these wonderful, and sad, 23 years of thoughts," Beth Williams, 52, said afterward, her voice breaking.

Her husband, Clifton C. Williams Jr., was killed in a training jet accident in 1967. She was pregnant at the time with their daughter, Jane Dee.

"It brings a bunch of old baggage, but it's not necessarily bad. It's a little sad, it's happy and it's proud," said Miss Williams, 22.

Grace Corrigan, mother of school teacher S. Christa McAuliffe, one of seven killed in the 1986 Challenger accident, described the memorial as "very fitting ... a beautiful tribute."

Space Mirror is the first monument to honor all those astronauts killed on the job — from Theodore C. Freeman, killed in a training jet accident in 1964, to Manley "Sonny" Carter Jr., who died last month in a commuter plane crash that also killed former U.S. Sen. John Tower.

"It is a reminder that these were pioneers who led America into space, and America is there to stay," said Vice President Dan Quayle, who heads the National Space Council.

The monument is 42½ feet high and 50 feet wide, with 93 black granite panels. Fourteen names have been carved through the 2-inch-thick panels; Carter's name will be added.

The names are illuminated from behind by mirrors reflecting the sun through the letters as the monument turns slowly on a computer-controlled pedestal. Artificial light will be used at night and on overcast days.

It creates the impression that the names are emblazoned in the heavens.

The 15 families were summoned to Space Mirror, one at a time, near the end of the hourlong ceremony. They embraced master of ceremonies Eugene Cernan, commander of the last Apollo mission, and stood quietly, holding hands, until all had gathered.

Fifteen white doves were released, and four astronauts flew training jets overhead in the missing man formation.

One of those jet pilots was supposed to have been Carter, who was on his way to give a speech for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration when he died. He was replaced by Andrew Allen, a close friend.

Carter's widow attended the ceremony with their two daughters.

"It's part of the grieving process, and I want to see some of the other families, too," said Dana Carter, 43.

The guest list read like a Who's Who in Space. On hand were Mercury astronauts Alan Shepard, M. Scott Carpenter, Walter Schirra and Donald "Deke" Slayton, and Apollo astronauts Neil Armstrong, James Irwin and Thomas Stafford.

Shepard, 67, who became the first American in space 30 years ago this week, considered the dedication "kind of a happy occasion."

"One by one, they're traumatic," he said of the accidents. "But when you reflect on them all, you know the individuals were there because they were highly qualified and wanted to be there and loved what they were doing. That's really the bottom line."

The Astronauts Memorial Foundation financed the $6.2 million Space Mirror with money generated by the sales of commemorative Challenger license plates in Florida. Half the $12.4 million from Challenger plates paid for the monument. An additional $2 million went into a trust fund to maintain Space Mirror.

The rest, and money from future sales, will be used to build a space education center near the monument.

Eric McNair, 36, brother of astronaut Ronald E. McNair, said the education center is the main reason he and the other Challenger families support Space Mirror. It's more than a memorial, he said.

Weather Summary

High expected to hit 90s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for early morning low cloudiness becoming partly cloudy, a high in the lower 90s and southeast winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Saturday is expected to have brief low cloudiness in the morning becoming partly cloudy, a high around 90 with a 20 percent chance of afternoon showers.

After an overnight low of 58, Thursday's high was 94 compared with the record high for that date of 101 in 1967. The record low for today's date was 40 set in 1981.

STATE

An upper-level disturbance continued to trigger showers in East Texas on Thursday. It was sunny in West Texas, but the rest of the state was cloudy. Low clouds lingered in the eastern Panhandle.

Forecasters expected Friday would be cloudy to partly cloudy statewide with morning fog. Widely scattered showers were expected in South Central Texas, including the Hill Country. Thunderstorms are possible in West Texas. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s with 90s in West and South Texas, including the Rio Grande Plains.

NATION

Thunderstorms grew in number, size and strength over the Gulf states Thursday, snow fell in Nevada and California and high winds blew across parts of the West.

Up to a foot of snow had fallen in the northern Sierras by morning. Up to six inches of snow was expected in northeastern Nevada during the night.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

BROWN: Law school in her future

(From 1A)

Brown wrote. "My education has provided me with a much richer understanding and appreciation of this country and the opportunities it affords. Becoming a better informed, more productive member of my community was not one of my expectations upon enrolling in Midland College, and yet it has been one of the greatest outcomes."

Ms. Brown, who has five brothers and four sisters, said she began working while in the ninth grade. "My mother was very ill, asthmatic," she said. "Once I got out of high school my paycheck supported me and my mother."

After eight years of working in jobs with little hope for advancement, Ms. Brown said, "I finally realized I had progressed as far as my high school diploma would allow."

Ms. Brown, a single parent, also was concerned with getting a job which would provide for her son, Phelan, now 4.

"I talked to Russell Price of the Job Training Partnership Act program and he convinced me to enroll in college," she said. "I expected so little of myself. I sure didn't expect I would get any A's and I had no predetermined goals."

The student credits her teachers with inspiring the spark that ignited her "love affair" with knowledge.

"The teachers were always there for me," she said. "They talked to me outside of class, were there during office hours and lab instructors were always just waiting for someone to come in and ask for help. The teachers gave me all the tools and I just had to apply myself."

Ms. Brown said the JPTA program — which provided an apartment, utilities and paid for half of her day care — also enabled her to take 18-21 hours per semester.

With her two-year business administration AS degree, Ms. Brown plans to attend the University of Texas in Austin or Paul Quinn University where she will earn a bachelors of science before attending a law school.

"Law school will just be another challenge for me," she said. "I am primarily interested in tax law and I've learned that with the right planning and preparation I can do anything."

Although her accomplishments have bolstered her self-esteem, Ms. Brown credits much of her success to the "personal attention" she received from several teachers. "The teachers brought out more potential in me than I thought I had," she said.

While Ms. Brown is quick to give credit for her successes to her instructors, some of them applauded her determination and perseverance.

Julia Flaherty, a MC history and government professor, said that in addition to her coursework, Ms. Brown tutored other students free of charge.

The student is a member of several professional organizations and she volunteers for community service projects including tending to the needs of the elderly.

Ms. Brown said that she solved the dilemma of studying with an active 4r-year-old around by making her study time a joint project. "Phelan colors while I study," she said, laughing. "Now, he keeps me on my toes and reminds me if I go a whole evening without studying."

Ms. Brown said she is looking forward to the challenge of attending a four-year university. "I will certainly miss Midland College's spirit, and the teachers' concern, but I feel like the high level of quality of education I got here will see me through and — God willing — I will get a good job."

Another bonus of all her studying, according to Ms. Brown is that she has become a bona fide bookworm and enjoys reading Shakespeare or poetry.

While the future awaits, the immediate future includes MC's commencement exercises tonight.

"Getting my diploma will be a real accomplishment for me," Ms. Brown said. "It means that for the first time in my life I started something and finished something and I did it well."

Midland College's commencement exercises will begin at 7 p.m. tonight in the Chaparral Center, located on the college campus, 3600 N. Garfield. There are 253 candidates who will receive their associate degrees. David L. Smith, executive director of the Abell-Hanger Foundation, will be the guest speaker.

SMITH: Suspect expected to surrender decision of some news organizations to name the woman who made the accusation.

Providing more fuel for that debate, Bludworth announced that he had filed misdemeanor charges against the publishers of The Globe newspaper. The Boca Raton-based supermarket tabloid was the first American paper to print the name of the woman. Bludworth charged the tabloid with violating a 1911 Florida statute that bars identifying rape victims.

In a statement read by her attorney, the woman thanked her family, friends and lawyers for supporting her and "other victims of rape whose courage has been of immense value."

"Rape needs to be reported to keep others from going through this ordeal," attorney David Roth quoted her as saying. But she added that "had I known my name would have been released, it might have dissuaded me from going through with this."

Bludworth charged Smith with one count of sexual battery, a second-degree felony, and one count of battery, a first-degree misdemeanor. Rape is classified as sexual battery in Florida.

The prosecutor also released an eight-page police affidavit that provided a detailed description of the allegations by the woman, who lives in nearby Jupiter.

The woman said Smith raped her by the pool of the Kennedy estate as she struggled to free herself from his grasp. At one point, she said, he told her, "Stop it, bitch."

Palm Beach Police Chief Joseph Terlizzese said that Smith's attorneys "intend to surrender their client to the Palm Beach Police Department early next week."

At that time, Smith will be booked, fingerprinted, have his mug shot taken and will be taken to the sheriff's department to post $10,000 bond, police said. That bond is the standard for an out-of-state resident charged with a second-degree felony.

The woman accusing Smith says he raped her after she met him at a trendy Palm Beach nightclub and drove back to the Kennedy home with him.

Bludworth said his office is still looking into "matters related to this case," which police have said could include obstruction of justice. Bludworth would not elaborate.

The affidavit said investigators tried to talk to Smith and Sen. Kennedy immediately after they began their investigation, but were told by William Barry, a Kennedy family friend, that both had returned to Washington. The police said they later learned that both were still in Palm Beach.

Barry has denied misleading police.

Sen. Kennedy's spokesman, Paul Donovan, said in a statement: "At no time that weekend was Sen. Kennedy even told that the Palm Beach police wanted to talk to him about any allegations involving a sexual attack. It was not until late Sunday afternoon when he learned of any such allegation and any such investigation. He was told the police wanted to talk to Willie about it."

"As soon as (Sen. Kennedy) learned the police wanted to talk with him about the alleged sexual attack, he arranged to meet with them and he's been cooperating fully with the investigation ever since," Donovan said.

Bludworth, admitting a departure from normal investigations during his 18-year career as a state attorney, said he took his own witness statements from some key witnesses, including the woman.

Bludworth also said he decided to file charges directly instead of taking the matter to the grand jury because "this evidence that I've reviewed met the standards for filing a case."

Bludworth said it would be inappropriate to assess the strength of the case against Smith. He added that "the presumption of innocence rests with every person and this case is no different."

Sen. Kennedy said in a statement issued in Washington, "I have great affection and respect for Willie. I have every confidence that when all the facts are known about this case, Willie will be found innocent."

The two counts against the Globe involved the printing and publishing of a rape victim's name and other identifying information. The crime is punishable by up to a 60-day jail sentence and a $500 fine. It's not clear who would serve the sentence upon conviction.

"The chilling effect of printing, publishing and broadcasting the victim's name causes many not to report this type of crime," Bludworth said.

Phil Bunton, editorial director of The Globe said, the charges raise "critical questions" about the media's constitutional right to cover events involving public figures.

Bludworth said he is still investigating the possibility of filing charges against NBC News and The New York Times, both of which also used the name, but said those cases involved "different facts and technical points" that he still wants to study.

The affidavit released by Bludworth detailed the woman's statements to police about the incident and observations by the officers.

The affidavit says Smith tackled the woman while she ran to escape and held her on the ground and pinned her with his body weight. She used her body to try to push him off her, the affidavit said.

The two investigating officers stated that when they met with the woman at the sheriff's office for the first time, she was "sitting on a couch with her legs drawn up to her chest, in a fetal position, and she would panic at any quick movement in the room."

The woman "appeared emotionally frightened, distraught and in shock, she was physically shaking," the affidavit said.

The affidavit stated that the woman described Smith's demeanor during the alleged attack as "ferocious."

The affidavit also said police gave the woman polygraph and computer voice stress analysis tests, which indicated she hadn't made deceptive statements. Those tests aren't admissible as evidence in court.

In his statement, Smith said: "I'm very tired because I've been in the hospital all night taking care of people who have real problems, so I've got some perspective. But obviously I'm very sad about the events today and I'm worried about my family and obviously my future, my friends. But ... I have a lot of confidence in the system and I think that everything will come out in the end."

Bludworth and Terlizzese said their investigations are continuing.

BODE: IPAA head urges unity

have one focused agenda. We must speak with one voice. And I don't want it to be the IPAA's voice.I want every energy organization standing with us. We must build a coalition within the industry."

She said she has been meeting frequently not only with industry groups but with congresional and Bush administration staff members. "We must work both sides of the political aisle," she stressed. "We can no longer be a one-party industry. We must work with the Republican administration as well as the Democratic Congress."

During the recent national convention in San Diego, an agenda was agreed upon, in principal, and Ms. Bode discussed it with the audience.

It included:'

- The need for price stability.
- Gas markets must be expanded.
- Long-term contracts should be encouraged.
- A level playing field must be established.
- Natural gas anti-trust restrictions should be eliminated.
- Tax penalties on production should be eliminated.

"We want to be able to form capital on our own," she said. "We shouldn't have to keep worrying about where our next dollar is coming from."

She noted that at the convention, the IPAA's forecast committee said it expected domestic production to fall nearly 3 million barrels per day by the year 2000. That means, she said, that close to 60 percent of the nation's energy demands will have to be met by imported oil.

When she assumed her new position, Ms. Bode said her goals included not only building an effective and respected lobbying team, but going "high profile" on issues important to independent producers.

As part of going "high profile," she wants the industry to "go on the offensive about environmental issues. No more will we let environmentalists go on the Hill and show pictures of one-time horror stories and blame them on the industry. I want us to be proud of our industry and what we do."

Presently, natural gas issues are dominating Ms. Bode's efforts and she noted that IPAA members produce 60 percent of the nation's natural gas, and of that 60 percent, 40 percent of the producers are small, privately held organizations. "We are a minority, and we're a target," she said.

But she told the gathering that crude oil hasn't been forgotten. Oil issues she will be discussing on Capital Hill will include an import fee, tax penalties, and potential environmental regulations.

She added, "I was not hired just to be the president of IPAA. I was hired to be a lobbyist, and that's what I want to do."

She vowed she and the IPAA "will make a concerted effort to include every energy industry organization. We will tell the public that America's energy independence depends on the American independent energy producer."

they are deployed to aid refugees fleeing Saddam Hussein's postwar crackdown on the Kurdish rebellion.

The Bush administration contends that a U.N. police force — to take over the mission from American troops — could be set up without either Baghdad's permission or further action by the United Nations.

But Perez de Cuellar challenged that view in his meeting with Bush, participants said.

"His thought on a peacekeeping force was that another resolution was necessary. ... That's something we're going to have to discuss further," said John Bolton, assistant secretary of state for international organizations.

"I don't think we can give you date" on when U.S. forces can leave northern Iraq, Bolton said.

He said continued Iraqi resistance to some mechanism for providing protection to the displaced Kurds could persuade the United States to argue for even tighter international economic sanctions against Iraq.

Allied coalition forces in Turkey and northern Iraq total about 18,229, including 10,314 Americans, the administration said on Thursday. Of these, 8,150 are in northern Iraq, including 3,286 Americans.

Bush, in joint public remarks with Perez de Cuellar, said the United States still viewed its role in protecting Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq as "limited in duration."

"We look forward to working with the U.N. to hasten the day when all these refugees can return home, free from fear," Bush said. Perez de Cuellar said the Persian Gulf conflict produced "broader agreement than ever before" among U.N. members, even though contentious issues remain.

On Wednesday, Bush told a news conference, "I would hope the U.N. could do in the north that which they're doing in the south." He underscored his intention not to get bogged down in northern Iraq.

Perez de Cuellar was asked by reporters if he wanted all U.S. troops to leave Iraq. "That is the wish of our American friends as well as the wish of the United Nations," he replied.

Interrupted Bush: "That's for sure."

"I think we have to be patient," Perez de Cuellar added.

The U.N. official said his envoy to Iraq, Marrack Goulding, reported back to him earlier Thursday on Baghdad's rejection of a U.N. peace force.

Efforts to make school food more nutritious a slow process

By John Nolan
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI — In March, a month before a certain fast-food chain with golden arches added slim burgers to its menu, students at Princeton High School outside of Cincinnati sampled low-fat patties — in the school cafeteria.

They ate them with relish.

"It tastes the same to me," freshman Daniel Clark said.

"It was juicier,' sophomore Laetitia Moore said.

The taste-test was more than an isolated assessment of adolescent palates. It was part of a nationwide campaign to make school lunches more nutritious and to win the minds, and stomachs, of the youngsters who frequent the cafeterias.

Pilot programs are under way to reduce fat and salt, to promote nutrition awareness and to offer healthier food, like fresh fruit and vegetables.

Districts are soliciting new low-fat or low-salt recipes from the public, using oven-fried rather than deep-fat-fried foods, and reducing or halting the sales of soft drinks and candy in schools.

There remains one key to making it work: "They've got to like it. If they don't like it and if they don't eat it, it's all for nought," said Phil Shanholtzer, spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The USDA is in charge of the federal school lunch program that serves 24 million children daily and works with more than 90,000 schools and institutions. The USDA provides school systems with cash reimbursements — 30 cents a meal — and about 20 percent of the food that goes on the table.

The department is midway through a three-year "Menu Modification Project," providing grants of up to $50,000 to five school systems:

— The San Bernardino, Calif., system enlists a college student in a dinosaur uniform, "Nutrasauras Rex," to teach nutrition to grade school kids.

— The Chattanooga, Tenn., system is sponsoring recipe contests among parents to find lower-fat recipes, and has involved high school students in producing a video to promote nutrition to younger students.

— The Denver system is enlisting restaurant chefs to help with taste testing and school assemblies.

— Princeton sponsors cholesterol tests for kids and works with Children's Hospital Medical Center in Cincinnati to promote cardiovascular health.

There are other USDA programs under way. Princeton is not the only district to sample slim burgers; the USDA last month tested four kinds of low-fat patties in schools in Georgia, Maryland, Minnesota, Texas, Iowa and California.

The hamburgers contained oat bran, soy protein or seaweed extract, and were about 10 percent fat by weight — half the fat of normal cafeteria burgers, or less.

Even without federal help, schools are experimenting. They're offering — or thinking about offering — frozen-slush fruit drinks; ground beef mixed with lower-fat ground turkey; and pizza with whole-wheat crust.

June Selk, food service director in Minnetonka, Minn., said her district is trying to buy lower-fat items, replacing salt with herbs and spices in some dishes, and offering students an option of not having bread buttered.

"The kids are excited about it," she said. "We use lightning bolts on our menu to depict items that are lower in fat and lower in sodium. If we should forget to put out the lightning bolts on the tray, the kids readily remind us."

But Linda Bass, Princeton's food service director, said it doesn't necessarily help to tell students that a particular food is good for them.

"If you rank their motivators, the nutrient content wouldn't be in the top two or three," she said. "The fact that it's good for them doesn't motivate them that much. It's peer pressure and what their friends are eating."

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, through its Citizens Commission on School Nutrition, has urged schools to limit lunches to 30 percent of calories derived from fat, down from an average percentage now in the upper 30s to lower 40s.

Florida makes room for rare sea turtles and tourists

By Tracy Fields
Associated Press writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The city of Fort Lauderdale, struggling to shed its image as a bawdy spring break capital, wanted to improve its famous beachfront strip.

They wanted to add a promenade for walks on the shore, put in more lights, make it safe for the families they hoped would come.

But there was a problem — the improvements threatened the lives of others using the beach.

The proposed improvements didn't please officials with the state Department of Natural Resources, because the existing lights along the strip were making life tough for green and loggerhead turtle hatchlings, which are threatened with extinction.

When things are done nature's way, the little reptiles break their shells and scramble for the ocean. They know where to go because of the light of the moon and stars on the waves; they head for the brightest horizon.

But in Fort Lauderdale, hatchlings along the strip are likely to be drawn toward the lights of businesses and batter themselves to bits on a low stone seawall. More lights wouldn't help.

A compromise was reached.

"We (agreed) not to turn on our promenade lights during the nesting season, which runs from May through October, but then during our peak tourist season we would be able to implement the lights," said beach redevelopment planner Michele Mellgren.

And last fall Congress approved $2 million to create a turtle refuge on Florida's east coast.

As Florida becomes more developed, there are fewer places for sea turtles to hatch. It's hard for people and turtles to share the sand.

"When push comes to shove it's always really the humans that end up winning in these interactions," said Karen Bjorndal, director of the Archie Carr Center for sea turtle research at the University of Florida.

Most Americans have never seen a sea turtle, seldom outside of a zoo. But they should care what becomes of the big, slow reptiles, Bjorndal said.

"If you saw the pilot throwing off pieces of the airplane, when would you begin to get nervous?" she asked. "The whole system is a very carefully co-evolved world and when we lose pieces we don't know what we're losing."

About 90 percent of the country's sea turtles are hatched in Florida, though there is some nesting in the Carolinas and Georgia. There's also a smattering in the Gulf Coast states of Louisiana, Alabama and Texas, said Barbara Schroeder, sea turtle recovery coordinator for Florida DNR.

There are only eight species of sea turtles left in the world, just four that nest in Florida. Green turtles are endangered and loggerheads are threatened, Bjorndal said.

In the Sunshine State, lights aren't the only problem.

"Beach-cleaning vehicles run over hatchlings or nests that are about to hatch," she said. "They can compact the nests, and they also can leave such deep ruts that the hatchlings get stalled out on their way to the ocean." And recreational driving on the beaches, still allowed in several places such as Daytona Beach, causes similar problems, she said.

Beach armoring, such as sea walls, frustrates the reptiles by keeping them from prime nesting spots. And egg-hungry raccoons like to live near humans, Schroeder said.

Sometimes, even the compromises don't work. In Delray Beach, more than 100 hatchlings were squashed on a road one September weekend although the city had spent thousands of dollars on special sodium lighting intended not to disorient them.

"In controlled experimental conditions, you can demonstrate that that wavelength of light is less disorienting than other types of light," said state biological administrator Alan Huff. "But in real-world applications such as Delray Beach, other problems have been uncovered." For example, some law enforcement agencies have complained the lights make it difficult to distinguish colors, which could hinder identification of cars or suspects.

Cathy Mattison heads Broward County's sea turtle relocation program. She walks the beach morning and night during nesting season, transporting eggs to safe locations and rescuing wayward hatchlings headed for the strip.

"If the ultimate goal is to help save sea turtles, the relocation program is certainly going a long way toward that," Mellgren said, noting that in the last season, 32,000 eggs were relocated.

Orphan seal pups keep center busy

The center is now caring for 96 animals — mostly elephant and harbor seal pups — which is the highest single patient load in its 16 years. To date, 130 animals have been taken in, compared to 175 to 185 per year.

"It's real hectic," said spokeswoman Denize Springer.

Last week alone, the young critters devoured 7,000 pounds of fish. To fatten them up even more, volunteers have served up such delicacies as herring and whipped cream.

"It doesn't smell very good," said Springer.

The center says more pups are being seen because it is spring breeding season and two new colonies of elephant seals have been discovered near Monterey.

The pups often get separated from their mothers while the adults forage for food, or are washed from pupping beaches by storms. Even if they are weaned, the youngsters may have trouble finding food, become weak and beach themselves.

Springer said center scientists speculate whether the high number of abandoned pups may be linked to declining productivity in the ocean food chain — a theory that is much debated by scientists.

"It's a possibility but I don't have any information to say it's happening," said David Ainley, program director for marine studies at the Pt. Reyes Bird Observatory.

But he said, "If harbor seal pups are being abandoned, then one likelihood is that mothers don't have enough nutrition to take care of them. And if young seals are coming ashore, then often, that's a sign of stress. And one factor in that stress is poor feeding."

But more won't be known until this summer, when the results of several studies indirectly looking at the problem are completed.

Gary D. Sharp, a visiting scientist at the Center for Ocean Analysis and Prediction of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Monterey, said the theory was "not particularly viable. It's a long, complicated issue. I don't think there's a simple answer to it."

Springer cautioned people not to pick up or handle beached seal pups.

Highlighters: A subtle Day-Glo threat to higher education?

By Rick Hampson
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Academics, always ready to battle over tenure decisions, government funds or the latest curriculum reform, have overlooked a threat to higher education that is found in virtually every student's book bag: the highlighter.

That, at least, is the contention of Lawrence Beyer, a Yale legal scholar who made the case against the humble yellow marker in Academic Questions, a quarterly academic journal.

Beyer argues that highlighter pens are "retarding the education of university students by distorting and cheapening the way many read." Highlighter use, he says, "encourages passive reading" and fools students "into thinking that they have progressed through these texts and assimilated them."

Even though pages of their books are covered with yellow lines, "most students who use the highlighter are not reading thoughtfully, but only scanning texts superficially," he wrote.

'Most students who use the highlighter are not reading thoughtfully, but only scanning texts superficially.'

— Lawrence Beyer, Yale legal scholar

"At best, they are uncritically ingesting some of the authors' phraseology and gaining sketchy outlines of the texts. At worst, their 'reading' consists merely of a skimming sensitivity to indicators that point out which passages are part of the skeletal gists of the texts ('In sum,' 'The main issue is,' etc.)"

Unlike students using pens or pencils, students clutching highlighters do not write an outline of what they've read, and can't make notes in the margin, Beyer claims. Pens are less likely to be misused as underliners, because their stray lines block out text, unlike the transparent highlighter's.

When he was reached this week by telephone at his New Haven apartment, Beyer was asked if his article, published last year, was really a satiric comment on the sky-is-falling tendencies in educational criticism.

He said it was not: "I AM a voice in the wilderness, but I think this is an educational issue that's worth some attention." He's also worried about the proliferation of stores, televisions and personal computers on campus.

Beyer has won few converts, however. "When I wrote the article, even my then-girlfriend thought I was just wrong," he admitted. The article was rejected by The New York Times Book Review and The New Republic, the latter sent him a form letter — with passages highlighted.

After the article appeared in Academic Questions, a conservative journal issued by the National Association of Scholars, it was dismissed as "slightly nutty" by another academic publication.

So far, the piece appears to have made no dent in highlighter use. "You have to read the book before you can highlight," observed Edward Desch of the Princeton University Store in New Jersey. He said he is a veteran of "many, many years of highlighting."

Paul Miseredino, a supplies buyer at the Yale Co-op, noted that highlighter sales are stronger than ever, and that a new version has been devised that does not show through the extra-thin paper used in legal case books and Bibles.

Would Beyer ban the highlighter? "I could imagine it on a teacher-to-teacher basis, where a teacher could say, 'No one's to use highlighters in the readings for this class, and if I see any in a spot check, there'll be a penalty."

Beyer, 32, is a New Yorker who taught at Tulane Law School for five years before going to Yale. He said he's no crusader, which disappoints some people. "They hope I'll turn out to be this colorful eccentric," he said. "but I think I have a valid point." Ballpoint, that is.

Third tornado in week kills at least 13 in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — At least 13 people were killed Thursday when the third tornado in a week hit a trading town, the latest exhibition of nature's wrath in disaster-prone Bangladesh.

The weather bureau warned that another cyclone could be brewing in the Bay of Bengal, which spawned the April 30 storm that killed more than 125,000 people.

United News of Bangladesh said about 100 people were injured in Thursday's tornado, which destroyed several mud houses and damaged many homes in the rice trading town of Sirajganj, 65 miles northwest of Dhaka.

The news agency gave a death toll of 13. It said the tornado was whipped by winds reaching up to 93 mph.

The twister was the third in as many days in Bangladesh, which is already struggling to cope with the devastation caused by the cyclone.

The first twister killed 45 people Tuesday in Tongi, an industrial suburb of Dhaka. The next day, another tornado swept through Ghorasal, a town 10 miles north of the capital, killing eight people and injuring 100.

The daily Ittefaq newspaper said houses in eight villages were flattened by Wednesday's tornado, which also toppled trees and electricity poles.

Heavy rains and 60 mph winds in Dhaka on Thursday upset relief flights for the survivors of the cyclone that savaged this poverty-stricken country, leaving 10 million people homeless along the southern and southeastern coast.

"This was the strongest wind speed of this year" in the capital, an official of the weather bureau said. Airport officials said all flights were grounded in the afternoon. Some Dhaka streets were flooded with knee-high water.

The weather bureau, in its monthly forecast, warned that the new cyclone could be formed before the end of the month by a depression over the Bay of Bengal. It gave no details and did not say whether it would strike land.

So far, about $400 million in international aid has been pledged for the survivors of the cyclone, many of them stranded on islands or on land where the water is polluted by rotting bodies of people and animals.

More than $100 million has come from Saudi Arabia. The United States has pledged $7.2 million.

In London, British Prime Minister John Major said Thursday he will try to set up a system to coordinate international relief aid following the Bangladesh cyclone.

"In the months ahead we will need to seek a better international way of coordinating when great tragedies like these are faced," he said. "I will do what I can to bring that about."

Besides more international help in cash and kind, Bangladesh has appealed for more helicopters and transportation to deliver relief.

"We have at the moment 13 helicopters, and these are going to far flung areas," Information Secretary Manzur-e-Moula told a news conference Wednesday.

"We need more helicopters," he said.

Neighboring India has given six helicopters. It also promised $500,000 and has sent 10 tons of food, clothing and sanitation equipment.

India also sent salvage divers to Chittagong, the country's second-largest city and its largest port, which the government said was put into operation Thursday.

Six merchant ships and two naval vessels that sank in the storm had blocked the port.

Pakistan has lended two helicopters. Bangladesh, which was Pakistan's eastern province, won independence in 1971.

The United States has expressed reservations about sending transport.

"Supplying helicopters is an option that we are working on urgently, but our main objective is to make the most constructive contribution that we can," Richard Boucher, a U.S. State Department deputy spokesman, said in Washington.

Bangladesh, with about 115 million people, is one of the world's poorest countries, with a per capita income of $170 a year. It is frequently struck by killer storms, cyclones and other natural disasters.

Landslide kills 21 at mine in China

BEIJING (AP) — A landslide apparently set off by mine activity killed 21 miners in southern China, an official newspaper said Friday.

It was the second mine-related disaster reported in a week. The official media disclosed Wednesday that an April 21 gas explosion at the state-run Sanjiaohe coal mine in northern China killed at least 147 miners.

Hearst News Service

JERUSALEM — Dangling the prospect of renewed Soviet-Israeli relations, Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh will visit Israel Friday with the hope of spurring a breakthrough in the stalemated Middle East peace process.

Bessmertnykh will be the highest-ranking Soviet official to visit Israel since the Soviet Union broke off relations with the Jewish state after the 1967 Middle East war.

His visit is part of a Middle East tour in which the Soviet Union will assert itself as a key player in the effort to promote peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

Bessmertnykh is following in the footsteps of U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who has made three trips to the region to promote a regional peace conference.

Baker will begin his fourth tour of the Middle East Friday and will meet with Bessmertnykh, reportedly in Egypt on Saturday, to discuss their respective progress. Baker will also make stops in Syria, Israel, Saudi Arabia and possibly other countries.

While the Soviet minister's visit to Jerusalem is viewed through the prism of the peace process, the main import of his trip for Israel is whether it will lead to the restoration of full diplomatic relations. Moscow has sent mixed signals this week about restoring relations with Israel during Bessmertnykh's visit.

However, the Soviet minister's talks in Jerusalem are viewed here as the prologue to full diplomatic ties.

"The fact of the visit itself is already a change in Soviet-Israel relations," said Hebrew University Sovietologist Galia Golan. "Even the five hours (Bessmertnykh will be in Israel) will serve symbolically to mark a tremendous step forward in Soviet-Israeli relations."

The Soviet Union was the first nation to recognize the founding of the state of Israel in 1948. But it broke off relations after Israel seized and occupied Arab lands during the 1967 war.

In the past 19 months, relations between the two nations have gradually warmed. Israel and the Soviet Union have established consular offices in each other's country, and the Soviets have permitted the emigration of tens of thousands of Soviet Jews to Israel.

But the Soviet Union has recently made it clear to Israel that full diplomatic relations will come at a price.

The Soviets have backed the idea of an international peace conference to resolve the problems between Israel and the Arabs and have linked restoration of diplomatic relations to a strong move forward by Israel in the peace process.

Israel, meanwhile, has indicated it will not accept a Soviet role in any regional peace conference without it first restoring diplomatic ties.

The Soviet Union has agreed to co-sponsor with the United States a regional Arab-Israeli peace conference.

Whether Israeli-Soviet relations are restored now will depend on the outcome of Bessmertnykh's meeting with Israeli officials Friday, said Yaacov Roi, professor of Soviet history at Tel Aviv University.

The Soviets want a return on their diplomatic investment, Roi said, and that return will be within the terms of an Arab-Israeli settlement. Ideally, the Soviets want to win a concession from Israel that will emphasize the importance of the Soviet role in the peace process.

"Anything they can get that Baker couldn't get will be the formula they need," Roi said. "Anything will do. It doesn't matter very much what it is, as long as it is one of the issues of the peace process."

Israeli officials, meanwhile, are confident that the Soviet Union will soon restore relations regardless of the outcome of the Arab-Israeli peace effort.

Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu Wednesday told reporters it was politically, scientifically and economically in the Soviets' interest to restore relations. All that is left is a question of when the Soviet Union will finally come around, he said.

The Soviet Union's position on the peace process is much like that of the Arab nations: It supports the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole Palestinian representative; it favors United Nations participation in the peace conference and enforcement of U.N. Security Council resolutions calling for Israel to withdraw from the occupied territories; and it demands that Israel stop its practice of settling Jews in those territories.

Bessmertnykh met Wednesday with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus, Syria, and plans stops in Jordan, Egypt and Lebanon as well as in Israel.

"The Soviet Union has been and is going to be a strong supporter of the Arab cause, the supporter of the rights of Palestinians," Bessmertnykh said in Damascus.

Rain greets guests at Cannes festival

CANNES, France (AP) — Pouring rain failed to deter gawkers on hand for the arrival of Robert Mitchum, Gina Lollabrigida and other stars for the official screening of "Homicide," the first film of the 44th Cannes Film Festival.

The spectators waited under colored beach umbrellas for hours outside the Palace theater for the opening night of the 12-day extravaganza.

Mitchum, Lollabrigida, Akira Kurosawa, Ben Kingsley and Donald Sutherland posed in the rain, then entered the Palace, brushed the water from their gowns and smoking jackets and heard Paul Tchernia and Geraldine Chaplin officially open the festival.

Normally sunny and hot this time of year, the Riviera and the rest of France have been submerged under clouds and rain for the past two weeks.

Earlier, director David Mamet bundled up in a jacket at a news conference to explain his violent film "Homicide," the leadoff movie in the competition.

The film, starring Joe Mantegna, follows a Jewish police detective's hunt for a drug dealer and his investigation into the murder of an elderly jeweler in Baltimore.

Mamet and 19 other directors are seeking the coveted Golden Palm award.

The festival's 24 official selections include seven films from the United States, four from France, and others from Britain, Denmark, China, Japan, Italy, Poland, and the Soviet Union.

The film bosses, movie stars, pop singers, agents and gawkers who crowded the broad promenade along the yacht-filled harbor Thursday came wrapped against the cold.

"It's like winter here," grumbled a celebrity-watcher armed with an umbrella.

But the French press predicted things would heat up with the arrival Monday of Madonna, whose provocative work, "Truth or Dare: In Bed With Madonna," will be shown out of competition.

"Let's simply say that the viewers of 'Truth or Dare' will know everything, really everything, about the singer," said the daily newspaper Le Figaro.

The U.S. entries also include "Barton Fink," by Joel and Ethan Coen, Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever" and Bill Duke's "A Rage in Harlem." Another is Irvin Winkler's "Guilty by Suspicion," starring Robert de Niro, a look at Senator Joseph McCarthy's anti-communist witchhunt in Hollywood during the 1950s.

The jury is headed by director Roman Polanski and includes Oscar-winning American actress Whoopi Goldberg and Jean-Paul Rappeneau, director of the French blockbuster "Cyrano de Bergerac," and British director Alan Parker.

20-year-old Amtrak says trains packed

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 20 years of struggle, Amtrak has grown to the point where its coaches are bursting at the seams, the president of the nation's passenger railroad said Wednesday.

Although the railroad still operates at a loss, "we are on a clear track toward being on a break-even operating basis by the end of this decade," W. Graham Claytor Jr., Amtrak's chief executive, said.

"From the throes of a dying rail passenger industry to today's record ridership and sold-out trains, the last two decades have seen dramatic improvements in the quality, reliability and marketability of rail passenger service in this country," Claytor said.

In a 20th anniversary speech at the National Press Club, Claytor said Amtrak's current problems are a result of its success.

"We are actually carrying more people than we can handle with maximum efficiency," he said, adding, "None of us is satisfied with the mechanical problems and delays that occasionally occur."

But he said the railroad is moving to correct those problems, taking delivery a year ago of 104 new, short-distance coaches and placing orders for 52 new diesel electric engines and 140 Superliner sleepers, diners, lounge cars and coaches.

He took note of the fact that in 1970, the year before Amtrak began operations, 27 privately owned railroads ran up a total of 4.9 billion passenger miles with an annual operating loss of some $450 million, or about $1.5 billion in 1990 dollars.

"Amtrak is now carrying over 22 million intercity passengers some 6.1 billion passenger miles each year — almost 25 percent more revenue passenger miles than were handled by all the railroads in the country before we started," Claytor said.

And he said Amtrak is doing that with an annual loss of $350 million.

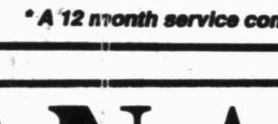

Claytor pegged that loss at just 23 percent of the private railroads' loss in 1970, after inflation is taken into account.

Between 1981 and 1990, revenue increased 114 percent while expenses grew at less than the rate of inflation, he said.

Claytor said Amtrak's improved prospects involve a change of perception and government attitude.

Twenty years ago, rail travel was looked on as "outmoded, uncomfortable and inconvenient," he said.

Uneasy ceasefire still festers in Iraq

As the 325th Airborne advanced deeper into northern Iraq early this week the troops pushed ahead of them literally hundreds of Iraqi soldiers — fragments of Saddam Hussein's broken army. Broken, but does that mean vanquished?

At home in the United States, meanwhile, the military commander who masterminded the allied victory — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf — basked in the glory of hero-worshippers in Florida.

"With your support we could not lose," the smiling general told the throngs of well-wishers, yet in Iraq the fleeing troops seemed to build to an intensity, like clouds before a storm.

Among the Iraqi troops were some wearing the black and red berets and eagle insignias of Saddam's elite Republican Guard and reports indicated they were behaving like guerrillas — packing refrigerators, televisions and other electrical items into trucks and heading for another location at which they'll again establish a base of operations.

The devastation from the weeks of bombing that marked the Persian Gulf War and the lightning strike to isolate Saddam's forces destroyed that nation's infrastructure; some observers noted, poignantly, that it looked as though Iraq had been bombed "back into the Stone Age."

There is no question that technologically the United States was far superior to Iraq in terms of carrying out a conventional war. But there also is no question that at some point the military forces now guarding the fragile ceasefire will have to be vastly diminished and the Iraqis, the Kuwaitis, the Kurds, and all the other ethnic groups in that "cradle of civilization" will have to be entrusted with resolving their own differences.

The mayor of a major city in the north part of Iraq lamented the presence of the Iraqi troops, saying, "Clean the Arabs out of Kurdistan. Give us our Kurdistan."

His words mirror the extreme factionalism that has troubled Iraq for centuries. That kind of hostility cannot be removed by a swift war or a United Nations resolution.

With Saddam Hussein still in power and hundreds of his troops still on the loose, the prospects for a lasting peace in the Middle East do not look good.

JACK ANDERSON

Waldheim's fall from grace continues

VIENNA, Austria — One of the most discredited leaders in the world, the president of Austria, speaks boldly of re-election next year, but no one is listening. He is ignored, abandoned by his own party and a reminder of what Austria does not want to be.

Anderson

There was a time when Kurt Waldheim was on top of the world. He was secretary general of the United Nations, and he parlayed that resume into the Austrian presidency in 1986. He campaigned on the slogan, "a man the world trusts."

Now he is the Pinocchio president. His lies about his war record earned him the status of "unwanted alien" in the United States. There are even charges, as yet unproven, that he was involved in Nazi war crimes.

Waldheim is a pathetic pariah, waiting in Vienna for invitations that never come to visit important countries that don't want him. Even when Waldheim gets some attention, it is embarrassing to Austrians — as when he cut a separate deal with Iraq's Saddam Hussein to gain the release of Austrian hostages last year.

It is hard to pity Waldheim. According to our sources in the United States and Austria, he brought the misery on himself. "He is not a nice man," one source said bluntly. "He's more like a head waiter, a maitre d' on the make." And Waldheim is cheap. While at the United Nations, he collected American toilet paper to send back to his relatives in Austria who liked the softer stuff. One source said there were even plans to claim the right to take with him some of the secretary general's furnishings when he left the United Nations.

"But, while the guy is a colossal scumbag, that does not mean he is a war criminal," said one critic who has extensively reviewed the World War II documentation.

For years Waldheim claimed that he was wounded on the Russian front in 1941 and left the German army then. He later was confronted with proof that he served as an intelligence officer in the Balkans with a German army unit that was involved in Nazi atrocities.

Waldheim pleaded loss of memory, prompting one American talk-show host to award him a prize from "Amnesia International."

In 1987, the U.S. Justice Department put Waldheim on its list of "unwanted aliens," concluding that he was engaged in "activities amounting to persecution" of Jews, Greeks and Yugoslavs. That scarlet letter made it impossible for him to get a visa to come to the United States. Some West European nations followed suit and shunned Waldheim too.

Waldheim has been slightly contrite. He told the Israeli newspaper Haaretz last year, "I was wrong not to tell the whole truth right at the beginning. I apologize that I did not bring up the Balkan matter. I confess that there was a mistake here." But he has remained adamant that he did nothing criminal while with that unit.

The Austrian Foreign Ministry has collected affidavits from Waldheim's contemporaries in the war who swear that he was a good guy, "an active, liberal Catholic and convinced anti-Nazi," who "voiced definitely anti-racist views and had many Jewish friends."

But Waldheim's political career is still over, whether he believes it or not. No amount of nationalism or rallying around this Austrian emperor with new clothes will persuade the people here to put him in office for another six years.

HORNS OF A DILEMMA — Democrats with some seniority in Congress have a problem — 1992 is the last year that they can retire and keep the unused money in their campaign war chests. That nest egg is worth about $250,000 each to 43 senior Democrats. This is not the best time for any incumbent Democrat to open up the field to challengers. Republicans are counting on a big victory for George Bush in 1992, and if Bush's coattails are broad enough, the election will sweep some fresh Republicans into seats now held by Democrats. But the lure of money will be more compelling to the senior Democrats than the continued dominance in Congress by their party. Most of those with big war chests will take the money and run.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Will candidates keep promises?

Now that the election is over I hope all candidates strive to keep the promises that they made to the voters in order to be elected. That is conservative action in order to hold the line on wasteful and needless spending, in the city, Midland Independent School District schools, and Midland Memorial Hospital.

In the TV Forum of May 28 on Channel 13, Hugh White pointed out that the Mayor and a group of individuals from the city and Midland Chamber of Commerce will go back to China to visit the "sister city." I challenge the Midland Reporter-Telegram to investigate how much of the taxpayers' money was expended when the group made the first trip to China and what was the result of that trip. Is this new trip justified? Has it brought any business to Midland? Who will be going to China at taxpayer expense and what will the cost be, and that is the mission?

The incumbents, John Castro and J.D. Faircloth will return to the Midland City Council. Did either ask the question of WHY for the China trip? I trust he new members of the council will be able to justify the expenditure of this money. Let us see some fiscal responsibility from De Vaughn and Davenport since the "word from City Hall" has been we may have to eliminate some jobs and services if we are not able to cut back on our expenditures.

I trust the Midland Reporter-Telegram can answer the questions posed. We the taxpayers are going to be asked for another tax increase when the city and Midland Memorial Hospital asks for the increase in our sales tax. Fiscal responsibility, bah humbug.

Parks conventioneers laud Midland hospitality

Congratulations to the citizens of Midland and the Midland Parks & Recreation Department for a job well done in hosting the Texas Recreation and Parks Society's 1991 Conference and Trade Show.

George Logan, Chuck Swallow, Mike Casey, Stewart Gerhart and the rest of the staff of the Midland Parks & Recreation Department put in countless hours of planning and labor on this project. Thanks to their hard work, several hundred parks and recreation professionals, including ourselves, were able to enjoy a top-notch conference.

We also enjoyed the beautiful and the warm friendly Midland hospitality. We hope to be able to visit your city again soon!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on May 10, 1941, Adolf Hitler's deputy, Rudolf Hess, parachuted into Scotland on what he said was a peace mission to end World War II (Hess was convicted of war crimes at the Nuremberg trials after the war and was sentenced to life in prison — he died at Spandau in 1987 at age 93, an apparent suicide).

On this date:

In 1774, Louis XVI ascended the throne of France.

In 1818, American patriot Paul Revere died in Boston.

CHARLEY REESE

We need to develop a new industrial order

Thirty times, according to the Washington Post, the Bush administration had to get help from foreign governments to get the parts needed for U.S. weapons in the Persian Gulf crisis.

Reese

That was because many of our main weapons, while made in the U.S., are made from parts produced in foreign countries. This dependence on foreign components was first brought to public attention in 1988 by the Defense Science Board, but naturally nothing was done about it.

Seems dumb not to do something about it. If the Bush administration aspires for the U.S. to be the world's bully, then the wherewithal to do the bullying had better be at hand.

This time, the Japanese and French governments didn't mind intervening with their manufacturers to get the supplies to U.S. forces on a pronto basis, but who knows whom George Bush may wish to bully in the future. Enemies and alliances shift like desert sands. Next time foreign suppliers may be flat uncooperative.

Sparrow and Sidewinder air-to-air missiles, the TOW anti-tank missile, and the Maverick missile are dependent on parts made in Japan, Thailand, and Germany. Components of the Abrams tank are likewise foreign made. All in all, about 12 major weapons are dependent on foreign electronic components.

That means, as the Persian Gulf War illustrated, you must maintain good relations with these foreign governments and their manufacturers in time of war or else we could find our forces whistling and wheezing instead of shooting and bombing.

Two solutions are obvious. Either make sure all components are manufactured in the U.S. or stockpile the heck out of them. The first suggestion is the best, since U.S. manufacturing is shrinking anyway and we need the jobs.

That, of course, would require the U.S. government to adopt some semblance of an industrial policy, and that seems to be the last thing the U.S. is inclined to do. It would help, too, if corporate owners and managers had more than a make-a-buck mentality. A smidgen of concern for the nation's welfare wouldn't hurt. They don't hesitate to move manufacturing offshore, to license U.S. technology to foreign manufacturers, or to contract with foreign suppliers. That's the way they've been trained to think. Bottom line is making money.

An even better solution would be to abandon the Bush administration's scheme to be the chief enforcer for hire of the New World Order and to mind our own business. The cost of defending the U.S. is considerably less than the cost of maintaining forces able to fight in the far corners. That doesn't seem to be in the crystal ball, however.

We should require as part of the specifications that all components of major weapons systems be manufactured in the continental U.S. If the Japanese wish to sell semiconductors to the Defense Department, then require them to open a plant in the U.S. That way, the plant would be under the control of the U.S. government. If it's in Japan, it's under the control of the Japanese government, which may or may not be cooperative.

One necessary ingredient of an industrial policy is to drop the free trade ideological blinders. Like all ideologies, free trade ideology is a lot more theory than fact. If certain industries are essential to national security or public welfare, then we need to protect them.

We should not want to find ourselves with a debilitated agriculture sector or defense industry or machine tool industry, to cite three examples. It doesn't matter whether our toys — children's or grownups' — are made here or overseas, but if we wish to remain an independent nation, then there are certain aspects of our economy which must remain under our control.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

What's wrong with Dan Quayle anyway?

As for the Democratic mayor of Cleveland, he's "scared as hell" right now. Lordamighty, at any minute That Man might become president: that golfer, that pretty boy, the pride of the Indiana National Guard. You know, Quayle. The vice president of the United States. What if Bush dies? Quick, a double scotch, and keep 'em coming!

Murchison

Quayle-sniping, long a favorite indoor sport, is all the rage again as President Bush's health becomes a matter for anxious speculation.

Let us indeed beseech heaven for the president's speedy recovery. But let us do so out of piety and Christian concern, not out of stark fear of what might happen were Dan Quayle elevated to the U.S. presidency.

I pose a question too long brushed aside in political discourse: What on God's green earth is the problem with a Quayle presidency? What's the problem with Quayle? So he's no John Kennedy, as Sen. Lloyd Bentsen pointed out. To that vapid assertion, numerous Americans would sigh: Thank heaven!

I am stone-cold serious. Worthies like the mayor of Cleveland and the world-renowned political philosopher Garry Trudeau gibe and gibber at Quayle, but what's he done? What's he left undone? We never hear exactly. To think of Quayle and his lowly estate in the opinion polls is to be reminded of the famous piece of doggerel:

"I do not love thee, Dr. Fell/The reason why I cannot tell/But this I know and know full well/I do not love thee, Dr. Fell."

No, the problem isn't Quayle. The problem, probably, is that three years ago, the media and the Democrats, chafing over their impotence during the "teflon presidency" of Ronald Reagan, decided to take out their frustrations on somebody. Quayle — handsome, younger-looking than his years, an indifferent student in college (as if that were some unique political disqualification) — seemed a likely target. The poor guy never had a chance.

"Sentence first — verdict afterwards," his accusers cried, like Lewis Carroll's Red Queen. The sentence was death by a thousand cuts of third-rate humor. In a quarter century of covering politics, I have never seen a politician savaged more mercilessly. Not even Gary Hart suffered this way. Teddy Kennedy certainly hasn't. Various Republicans want Bush next year to kick Quayle off the ticket and replace him with Gen. Colin Powell, never mind Powell's lack of elective political experience and Quayle's relative abundance of same.

The truth is, Quayle, as vice president, has behaved with dignity and decorum. Throughout the Persian Gulf crisis and war, he sold the president's policies simply and effectively. A Quayle visit to the troops in Saudi Arabia was by many accounts a great success.

The vice president gets in frequent licks for the conservative cause he has always espoused. For instance, he strongly backs the Strategic Defense Initiative, the much-ridiculed space shield. During the Iraqi war he pointed to the Patriot missile as proof "that a bullet can hit a bullet" — precisely the contention of SDI supporters.

When Saddam Hussein attacked the Kurds with helicopter gunships, the vice president, according to columnist William Safire, was alone among Bush advisers in urging that we stop the slaughter.

It's crazy to write off the vice president of the United States as the village idiot. Let us hope Bush serves out his term. But if circumstances should propel Dan Quayle into the White House, there's no reason to think he wouldn't rise to the occasion, as others before him have risen. We might bear in mind the example of a political hack, chosen not for brainpower but for political connections, who managed nonetheless to make his mark in the White House. The hack's name was, of course, Harry S Truman.

Gephardt backs fast-track request

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt said Thursday that he would support the Bush administration's request for a renewal of its "fast-track" negotiating authority, giving advocates of a free-trade agreement with Mexico a big boost.

But Gephardt said he would insist that the House be allowed to amend such a treaty through implementing language if it did not meet his standards.

"I have decided to support fast-track authorization for negotiating trade treaties based on what I might call a 'trust but verify' trade policy," he said.

Fast-track authority gives U.S. trade representatives the power to negotiate treaties that cannot be revised by Congress — only accepted or rejected within 60 days.

Gephardt, who has long been in the congressional forefront on trade issues, was considered a key swing vote on the question of whether to renew fast-track.

President Bush had said that without a renewal of the authority, the United States would not proceed to negotiate an end to tariff barriers with Mexico.

But Gephardt said that even under fast-track, the House has the procedural ability to change a treaty, through implementing legislation. That procedure was employed in 1988 when the United States negotiated a free-trade treaty with Canada, similar to the one that is being contemplated with Mexico.

■ Related story/ 1B

The majority leader, who was a Democratic presidential contender in 1988, said he is particularly concerned that a treaty with Mexico not hurt American jobs.

Gephardt said he approached his decision to renew fast track with a great deal of skepticism because "this Republican administration, like its predecessor, has been willing to pursue trade policies that cost American jobs."

But he said that the administration's pledges to retrain workers, protect stringent environmental standards and ensure Mexico is not a platform for third parties' exports were significant.

But "If the administration sends to this Congress a trade treaty that trades away American jobs or tolerates pollution of the environment or abuses workers we can or we will amend or reject it," he said.

Gephardt said the right kind of treaty could create more than 250,000 new American jobs, reduce the trade deficit by as much as $9 billion and help stem the flood of illegal workers into the United States.

Bill would tighten sprayer controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Christina Locek's life as a concert pianist and champion ice skater was ruined when she was drenched by chemicals being sprayed on a neighbor's yard, she testified Thursday before a Senate panel considering legislation to tighten controls on such pesticides.

"My health was destroyed in minutes," Ms. Locek, of River Grove, Ill., told the Senate Environment Committee's subcommittee on toxic substances.

Democratic Sens. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut and Harry Reid of Nevada are sponsors of legislation that would require lawn care companies to notify neighbors before they apply pesticides or herbicides.

"Too many of us fail to recognize that the chemicals that kill weeds and bugs are also powerful enough to threaten the environment and even human health," Lieberman said. "Are we doing enough to protect people from — or at least notify them of — these threats?"

Ms. Locek said she was nearly blinded and has had to use canes to walk since the incident, which also killed her dog and cat. She said the lawn-care company, which was not identified in her testimony, refused to tell her what chemicals it was using.

The panel, chaired by Reid, also heard from an 8-year-old boy who can't go to school for fear of pesticide exposure, a college student who sometimes lives in her car to avoid pesticide spraying near her home and a man who said his health was ruined by the interaction of a lawn care chemical with the prescription drug he was taking.

Reid said he hoped the Environmental Protection Agency would work harder to assess the health risks of lawn chemicals and tighten restrictions.

Warren E. Stickle, president of the Chemical Producers and Distributors Association, urged the senators to consider the "significant human health benefits and reduced risks for millions of Americans" stemming for use of lawn care chemicals.

"Herbicides control ragweed, thus reducing suffering from hay fever," Stickle said. "Other herbicides control dandelions and clover, and discourage bees from recreational and home and lawn areas, thus reducing bee stings. Approximately 45 to 50 people each year die of bee stings."

Stickle said the Senate bill's notification system was so extensive it would be "unworkable, uneconomical and ineffective, and would be extremely burdensome" to businesses and local governments.

Ann McClure, executive vice president of the Professional Lawn Care Association of America, said her group would support a more limited notification requirement, covering people who live adjacent to a customer's property and who submit a doctor's certificate that confirms they are sensitive to lawn-care chemicals.

Congress approves new refugee, disaster aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding to refugee and humanitarian crises around the world, Congress voted Thursday to pour an additional $556 million into the government's funds for disaster and refugee aid.

A 384-25 vote in the House sent the aid package to the Senate, which approved it on a voice vote late in the day after a flurry of concern over the need for disaster aid to U.S. farmers.

Because the Senate made several changes in the bill, the two houses must reconcile their differing versions before the measure can be sent to President Bush for his signature.

The emergency legislation was designed originally to help alleviate the suffering of 2 million or more Iraqi Kurds and others who fled their homes during a ferocious crackdown by troops loyal to President Saddam Hussein.

But it took on added urgency following the devastating cyclone that raked Bangladesh, an earthquake in Costa Rica and new awareness of continuing refugee tragedies in the Sudan, Ethiopia and Somalia.

Drunk driving efforts only worth a 'C'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States deserves only a "C average" when it comes to efforts by the states to curb drunken driving, two high safety groups said Thursday.

"While we have made major progress, much remains to be done to end this slaughter," said Micky Sadoff, national president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, or MADD.

MADD and Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety, a group backed by the insurance industry, based their comments on a survey of the 50 states co-sponsored by the two groups.

The report cards named the top states in each of 10 categories, but did not assign a letter grade to the anti-drunken driving efforts of any of the states. It did give states excellent ratings in each of the categories.

Utah achieved the best ranking, with excellents in seven of the 10 categories.

Ten other states rated among the best in four or more of the categories: California, 5; Colorado, 5; Illinois, 6; Maine, 4; Minnesota, 6; New Jersey, 6; New Mexico, 6; New York, 4; Oregon, 4; and Vermont, 4.

Eleven states weren't rated as excellent in any of the 10 categories: Alabama, Alaska, Connecticut, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Kentucky, Montana, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming.

The survey did give collective grades for all 50 states and the federal government:

—Leadership efforts by governors and the federal government, B minus.

—Statistical reporting of alcohol-involved fatalities, C.

—Enforcement of driving-while-intoxicated laws, B minus.

—Limiting tavern "happy hours" and other practices designed to encourage drinking, C minus.

—Education on the dangers of drinking and driving, B minus.

—Prevention of drinking by minors, B.

—Fees to shift the costs of drunken driving to those who drink and drive, D.

—Efforts to change attitudes toward victims, C.

—Innovative programs to deal with the problem, C.

—Legislation to toughen penalties for drunken driving and promote victims rights, B plus.

The survey said that while improvement is needed across the board, statistics appear to show that accidents involving alcohol have decreased since 1982. It based that conclusion on a nationwide decrease in single vehicle crashes at night, a category it said was closely linked to driving while drunk.

"Nationwide, these crashes have decreased by 10.9 percent over the past eight years, from 29.95 percent to 26.3 percent," the report said.

Bush starts treatment for overactive thyroid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush took a dose of radioactive iodine Thursday to begin bringing his overactive thyroid under control and doctors said his health could be fully restored within a matter of weeks.

Bush was diagnosed as having Graves' disease, a common thyroid condition that also afflicts his wife Barbara, and doctors at Bethesda Naval Center immediately prescribed the radioactive iodine.

The president sipped a small glass of the solution from a straw and then returned to the White House, declaring he felt "perfect."

"The heart is perfect ... so I'm very very lucky," said Bush, whose doctors told him the erratic heartbeat he began feeling while jogging Saturday was due to the thyroid condition. He underwent 2½ hours of tests at Bethesda Naval Hospital and later told a group of Hispanic businessmen that he had a "wonderful report" at the hospital.

Doctors said the iodine will migrate to Bush's diseased thyroid and destroy the hormone-producing cells in the gland over the next few weeks.

Dr. Kenneth Burman, an Army colonel and a thyroid expert from Walter Reed Army Medical Center, said the president's health should be "fully restored to his usual state of vigorous health very quickly."

He said by correcting the overactive thyroid, Bush's irregular heartbeat should also be corrected.

Dr. Burton Lee, the White House physician, said the president's schedule may be eased next week to help him recover.

"His schedule will be cut back," Lee said. "I don't think the man should be overly stressed." Later, the White House announced that Vice President Dan Quayle would replace Bush Monday on a trip to Chicago dealing with health programs for infants and children.

In addition, for the next week or so while the radioactive iodine is in his system, Bush should take "common sense" precautions "such as not getting near his grandchildren or hugging or kissing them," Burman said.

An estimated seven million Americans suffer thyroid problems, with about one million diagnosed as having Graves' disease. The condition is fatal if untreated, but the iodine solution treatment given to Bush has a cure rate that approaches 100 percent, experts say.

Burman said the process of establishing normal thyroid levels in the president may take from six weeks to three months. He said Bush will be closely monitored during this period, with frequent blood tests.

The iodine treatment usually leaves patients with an underactive thyroid and Burman said Bush may then have to take daily thyroid pills to maintain his appropriate level of the hormone.

Mrs. Bush was diagnosed with Graves' disease in 1989 and she, too, was treated with radioactive iodine and now takes thyroid pills.

Burman said that is was "probably just a coincidence" that both the president and the first lady developed the same thyroid condition. He said Bush's symptoms were much less severe than those of Mrs. Bush, who is being treated for an eye condition that originated with her hyperthyroidism.

Doctors said that Bush will remain on a full arsenal of medication directed at both the heart arrhythmia and the thyroid condition for a few days. The president is taking digoxin, procainamide and aspirin for his heart. He is also taking a blood-thinner, called coumadin, to lower a small risk of stroke as a result of his irregular heartbeat.

For his thyroid condition, doctors said he will take a saturated solution of iodine for about two weeks. This will block excess thyroid hormone from being spilled by the gland while the radioactive iodine is having its cell-killing effect.

At the Naval hospital on Thursday, doctors first took scans of Bush's thyroid gland, measuring the level of radiation absorbed from a weak dose of iodine given on Wednesday.

The results of this test confirmed that Bush had Graves' disease, Lee said.

Doctors immediately decided to prescribed the treatment dose of iodine, which is about 1,000 times stronger that the solution used for diagnosis.

Lee said Bush was "gratified" that his heart condition could be explained by the Graves' disease diagnosis, and that it could easily be treated.

During his visit to the hospital, Lee said Bush visited military patients who had returned to the Navy hospital from the Desert Storm operation in Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

The exact cause of Graves' disease is unknown, but some experts suspect that it is the result of the body's immune system attacking the thyroid gland. This causes secretion of an excess of hormone.

Thyroid hormone plays an important role in regulating processes in the body, including heartbeat, digestion and metabolism.

In patients with more serious cases of Graves' disease, the excess hormone can cause the eyes to bulge and provoke double vision. Burman said Mrs. Bush has this condition, but that there was no eye involvement for the president.

Extended-area service numbers lag

■ Southwestern Bell officials say they'll keep pushing 'EAS' despite lukewarm response.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Customers are not reaching out and grabbing Southwestern Bell's new Odessa-Midland long-distance service, a phone company spokeswoman said Thursday.

Linda Clements-Basham, a Midland-based Southwestern Bell public relations manager, said the company will conduct a telephone marketing campaign to draw customers to the service.

The extended-area service eliminates long-distance calls between Midland and Odessa.

Relatively few took advantage of EAS before it went on line April 1, leaving Southwestern Bell officials concerned, Ms. Basham said.

Southwestern Bell officials last August said 26 percent of residences and 30 percent of the businesses in Midland and Odessa must subscribe for the service to be profitable.

As of April 1, only 1,700 residences and 534 businesses, fewer than 3 percent of Midland and Odessa customers, had signed up for EAS, Ms. Basham said.

"We were a little surprised," she said. "We were talking about 30 to 35 percent immediately."

'We were a little surprised.'
— Linda Clements-Basham, Southwestern Bell

Although the number of subscribers has more than doubled, the figures still are surprisingly low, Ms. Basham said.

As of May 1, she said 4,050 residences and 1,150 businesses, about 4.8 percent of the customer base, was taking the service.

Ms. Basham blamed initial low subscription figures on customer hesitance to sign up until the service becomes operable.

Customers now seem to be having reservations because they will receive new telephone numbers, all of which will start with a "5," she said.

"Everybody says it's a good service and the rates are reasonable. They just don't want to change their numbers," Ms. Basham said.

Those who wait until after Wednesday to sign up will not have their new numbers listed in the 1991-92 directory, which will be a combination of Odessa and Midland numbers, she said. The communities no longer will have individual directories, she said.

Midland customers without EAS will be listed separately from those in Odessa, while all EAS subscribers in the area will be included in both cities' listings.

Ms. Basham said a three-week Southwestern Bell telephone marketing campaign for the service will begin later this month.

The company, she said, is not considering pulling the service's plug.

"We still feel like it's a good product and a good service for the community," she said. "It may take awhile to educate the public and highlight the advantages."

She said Southwestern Bell hopes to have between 30 percent and 35 percent of the customer base hooked into the service within two years.

Man given probation in shooting

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A federal judge sentenced a Midland man to three years probation Thursday in connection with a shooting last Sept. 5.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton III said he decided not to send Lonnie Joe Foster, 49, to prison because Foster is ill.

Foster, the trigger man in a shooting at a Midland post office that left two people slightly injured, pleaded guilty in March to concealing evidence from authorities. He faced up to three years in prison on misprision charges.

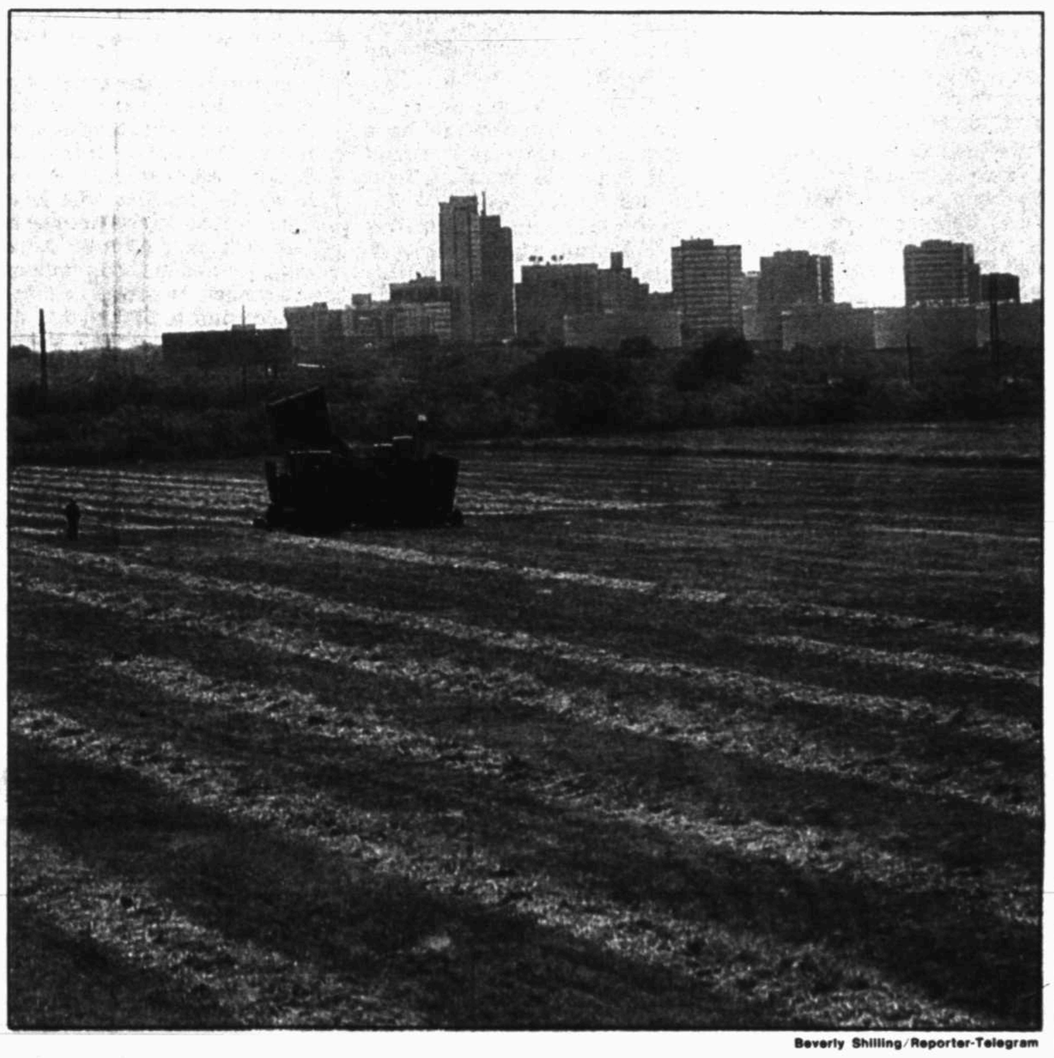

Foster admitted that he did not immediately correct claims by his wife, 39-year-old Lois Marie Foster, that she wielded the gun in the shooting at the U.S. Post Office at 10000 Sloan Field.

In return for the guilty plea, prosecutors agreed to drop more-serious charges of conspiracy, assault with a deadly weapon, and use of a firearm during a violent crime.

The shooting left two people — John Ray McGraw, 43, and Glenda Sue Willman, Mrs. Foster's 18-

New indictment against Hale adds charges

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A federal grand jury on Thursday indicted Bryan Allen Hale, the former Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital administrator, on additional child pornography and obscenity counts.

Hale, 47, was arrested April 8 at his Glenwood office for allegedly receiving child pornography in the form of a videotape entitled "Educating Valerie."

On April 11, a federal grand jury returned a two-count indictment against Hale for the alleged offense.

Receiving child pornography carries a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The new indictment also lists one count of sending obscene material through the mail, an offense which carries a maximum penalty of five years and a $250,000 fine.

On March 11, according to investigators, Hale mailed a 155-page book detailing his sexual fantasies to an undercover U.S. Customs agent in Florida.

He also arranged with the officer to purchase "Educating Valerie," investigators said. Hale supposedly made contact with the undercover agent through a computer bulletin board service, the investigators said.

The new indictment brings to five the federal counts pending against Hale, including two forfeiture counts that will allow federal officials to keep evidence seized in their investigation.

Hale, who has been replaced at Glenwood, also faces burglary charges in Odessa stemming from the theft of some documents from a Glenwood employee's home in March.

If convicted on the Ector County charges, Hale could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

MC interim session to begin May 13

Staff Report

A three-week Spring Interim Session starts Monday at Midland College, with a potential of 15 classes being offered.

Students in this intensive session will register, pay fees, purchase books and begin classes on Monday. Each course carries three-hours of college credit.

Registration starts at 8 a.m. Monday in the Student Center's multipurpose room. More than 150 current and former MC students pre-registered for courses, the first time a pre-registration has been conducted for an interim session.

"Students take interim courses to fulfill graduation requirements, to get a specific course out of the way in a hurry, or to accelerate their college progress," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

Interim students attend classes Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a lunch/study break from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Richards: Free trade pact is Texas' ticket to power

AP Laserphoto

Addressing the state Board of Education in Austin Thursday, Gov. Ann Richards said a U.S.-Mexico free-trade agreement will put Texas at the center of the "largest geographical, economic trading partnership in the world."

Michael Holmes
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Reaching a free trade deal with Mexico will help open the door to a decade of unprecedented economic opportunity in Texas, Gov. Ann Richards said Thursday.

Richards said a trade pact, combined with the state's increasing business and industrial diversification, could make Texas a global economic power.

"With the passage of the free trade agreement — which I think is going to transpire — we are going to be at the center of the largest geographical, economic trading partnership in the world. Larger than Europe. Larger than the Pacific Rim," she said.

Richards predicted that the deal would drastically change U.S.-Mexican relations as well.

"The front door to the United States is going to be the Texas border with Mexico. It is no longer going to be the back door," she said.

President Bush is seeking "fast-track" authority that would limit Congress' ability to amend any the trade agreement the administration negotiates.

Last week, Bush sought to ease concerns of organized labor that American jobs would be lost in the new trade pact with Mexico by promising to provide retraining and other protection for American workers if jobs are lost by lower trade barriers.

'The front door to the United States is going to be the Texas border with Mexico.'
— Gov. Ann Richards

"Texas is poised at the point of a true economic revolution. The opportunities for us in the next 10 years are simply extraordinary," she said.

She noted that "we now have banks making money in Texas for a change," something many other regions of the country can't brag about.

"The diversification of our economic interests is greater than any other state in the United States," Richards said, pointing to the superconducting super collider research project, the space industry and the high-tech companies in Austin and San Antonio.

The governor's assessment came in remarks she made to the State Board of Education.

"What we do in public education is well recognized as being the economic future of this state," she told the board. "All of those industries require brains. And all those brains have to be nurtured and have to be fed by the Texas public education system."

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

"We've outrun every off-Broadway show except 'The Fantasticks,'" playwright Dan Goggin said in a press conference Thursday.

Goggin, composer and lyricist for the musical comedy "Nunsense," is in town for Midland Community Theatre's opening performance tonight at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

The production, which has been translated into 10 languages, has developed a record of success since it opened off Broadway Dec. 12, 1985.

"The show has saved five theaters in the country. One had gone completely bankrupt and had closed its doors," Goggin said, adding that the theater in Nebraska ran the show for a year. He also cited the Tampa Showboat in Florida which was operating $500,000 in the red. "The show pulled them out."

"Nunsense" is a fund-raiser for MCT. Following opening night, admission will be $15 and $12 to the general public with MCT members receiving a discount. The production closes June 8.

Today's opening night gala, which is presented by MCT's auxiliary, ACT IX, begins at 6:30 p.m. Dinner, catered by Oceans Seafood, is at 7 p.m. and the show at 8 p.m. The downstairs area is almost sold out. Tickets, priced at $75, may be purchased by calling 682-4111.

The rights to produce "Nunsense," which received the 1986 Outer Critic's Circle awards for Best Musical, Best Book and Best Music, are expensive.

'Nunsense' is the story of five nuns who stage a variety show to raise money to bury their sisters who were accidentally poisoned by Sister Julia when she tried a recipe ... from 'Cooking With the BVM (Blessed Virgin Mary).'

"This is the highest royalty show we've produced at the Yucca," said Don Bachmann, MCT executive director. In the past, MCT, with ACT IX handling the gala opening night, has produced "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and "Cabaret" at the Yucca.

A Midland connection helped bring Goggin, who has personally directed 17 productions of "Nunsense," to town.

Midlander J.C. Pareti Sr. is the father of Joey Pareti, a 1969 Midland High School graduate, who handles the merchandising end of the production. Pareti Jr. previously worked for such companies as Chanel and Lancome.

Merchandising is extensive because 'Nunsense" began as a practical joke and grew into a greeting card business before it became an off-Broadway production.

"Nunsense" is the story of five nuns — the Little Sisters of Hoboken — who stage a variety show to raise money to bury their sisters who were accidentally poisoned by Sister Julia when she tried a recipe for vichyssoise from the book "Cooking With the BVM (Blessed Virgin Mary)."

Goggin has had offers for a television series and is negotiating for a motion picture production. He said he prefers to have the produc-

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Totem-pole ceremony set

Staff Report

The public is invited to a totem-pole dedication to be held at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The totem is a gift to the museum from the H. "Easy" Ezell family of Dallas in memory of Ezell's mother, former Midlander Gloria Strom Ezell.

The ceremony will be on the Lancaster grounds of the museum complex between the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum and the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Ezell and his wife will attend.

As a part of the program, the Woapalanne Indian Dancers of Boy Scout Post 225 will perform.

The pole, carved by Boy Scout leader Nat Shick, stood in the front yard of the Ezell home on Community Lane before being moved to Mrs. Ezell's family home in Big Spring. The figures on the pole are copies of Algonquin symbols topped by an owl, the symbol of Mrs. Ezell's Osage family ancestry.

Mrs. Ezell was active in Midland Community Theatre and Junior League of Midland and was well-known as an accomplished golfer when she lived here. She returned to her family's home in Big Spring in 1966 taking the pole with her. She died in 1989.

Mrs. Harvey Herd assisted with the arrangements fro the return of the pole from Big Spring to Midland, and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. moved and set the pillar, which was carved from a telephone pole.

MOSC wraps up season

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale performs "Pops a la Boston," its final set of pops concerts for the 1990-91 season, today and Saturday.

Essay winners honored

Winners in the 1991 SIFE (Students In Free Enterprise) Essay Contest were recognized at an awards luncheon at Midland College Wednesday.

Cash prizes of $100 each went to winners in three divisions and three categories.

The students and their teachers were guests for the luncheon.

In the Success 2000 category, awards went to Raylynn DeLeon, Jane Long Elementary School, Midland; Stacie Strait, Greenwood High School; and Janie M. Pierce, Midland College.

In the contest about Free Enterprise, winners were: Melissa Wood, Clearfork Elementary School, Andrews; Leslie Clardy, Agape Christian, Midland; and Hugh G. White III, Midland College. White also was the only winner in the Halt The Deficit category.

Teachers of the winning students also were recognized. They included: Joe Martin, Jane Long Elementary; Tracy Tarvim, Greenwood High School; Carolyn Clardy, Agape Christian; Kathy Sherrell, Clearfork Elementary; and Dr. Sylvia Major and Dr. Jerry Lee Jones, both of Midland College.

Business sponsors of the essay contest were the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Southwestern Bell Telephone, Texas Business Forecasts, and TU Electric.

Dr. Jerry Lee Jones and Jan Tonroy serve as faculty sponsors for the Midland College SIFE chapter.

SHOOTING: For health reasons, man given probation year-old daughter — with minor injuries from flying glass and bullet fragments.

Mrs. Foster attempted to cover up her husband's role in the shooting because he is ill with diabetes and a heart condition and she did not want him to go to prison, prosecutors said.

On April 25, Bunton sentenced Mrs. Foster to eight months in custody for concealment of evidence. Bunton applied the time Mrs. Foster had spent in jail after her arrest to her sentence, and she was released from jail May 4.

Both she and her husband have been ordered to attend parenting skills classes as a term of their probation.

Lonnie Foster told Bunton on Thursday that he was sorry that the shooting occurred, but that McGraw provoked the incident.

"He attacked us with that truck," Foster said.

According to investigators, McGraw and Ms. Willman were sitting in the cab of a mail truck at the air terminal post office around 11 p.m. when the Fosters drove up looking for McGraw.

Foster said McGraw — who was reportedly pursuing a romantic relationship with Ms. Willman — rammed his mail truck into Foster's vehicle several times before Foster shot at the van with a .22-caliber pistol.

McGraw — a contract driver for the post office — and Ms. Willman were treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital following the shooting.

Jeff Spain, Lonnie Foster's attorney, described McGraw as a convicted child molester and urged Bunton to dispense a light sentence for his client.

The Fosters turned themselves in to authorities about an hour after the shooting, investigators said. Mrs. Foster reportedly told a sheriff's department dispatcher that she had done the shooting.

EAS: Officials set to begin marketing effort

(From 1B)

Mayor Carroll Thomas, who was among a number of community leaders who pushed for the service, said the doubling of subscribers since April 1 is encouraging.

"I was hoping that by word of mouth interest would pick up in the service," Thomas said. "It may take a couple of years to get everybody on board."

EAS was made possible in April 1989, when the Public Utilities Commission approved allowing non-metropolitan areas such as Midland-Odessa to qualify for the service.

The PUC in January gave its approval for EAS to begin operating here.

Customers opting for EAS pay a flat monthly rate and can call anywhere in Midland and Odessa without paying long-distance charges for each call. Those without the service can call an EAS user toll free.

Residential service costs $5.85 monthly, which brings the total monthly service charge from $9.10 to $14.95.

It costs $13.80 for a one-party business line. Businesses with multiline hunting, whereby a call is rolled over to another line if the preceding line is busy, pay $16.30 per line.

Those with a PBX system, in which calls come to a central switchboard and then are routed to extensions, are billed an extra $21.80. Users of a hotel/motel trunk system pay $13.80.

Border patrol agent shoots, kills man at El Paso crossing

EL PASO (AP) — A man was shot and killed by a U.S. Border Patrol agent Thursday in a scuffle at a levee used by undocumented immigrants to cross illegally into the United States.

The man was taken to R.E. Thomason General Hospital, where he died shortly after arrival, said Lt. Paul Saucedo of the Crimes Against Persons division of the El Paso police department.

Neither the shooting victim nor the agent was identified.

Saucedo said it appeared the man died from a single gunshot to the chest.

Authorities gave few details, but said the Border Patrol agent was assailed before the shooting occurred shortly after 5 p.m. MDT. Walt Blackwell, assistant chief of the Border Patrol's El Paso sector, said the agent fired his service revolver twice.

"One of the Border Patrol agents was in pursuit of illegal entrants involved when he was jumped and struck," Blackwell said.

He said the agent involved was bruised on his head after being struck by a rock.

Undocumented immigrants frequently use the levee to get to El Paso and were even attempting to cross after the shooting while Border Patrol trucks and police cars were parked nearby.

Witness Vidal Castaneda, who works at a tourist bus terminal, said the shooting occurred after the man had been caught at least twice by the agent and had wrestled free.

Castaneda said the agent was driving a Border Patrol vehicle when he spotted three people trying to cross illegally into El Paso.

The agent stopped and began chasing one of the men. He caught the man and was holding him when the two others began approaching the agent. When the agent turned his head to look behind him, the apprehended man kicked the agent in the groin, Castaneda said.

The apprehended man then fled, but the agent caught him again and the two others moved in to assist once more.

"I saw them pull something out from behind them but who knows what it was," Castaneda said in Spanish.

tion made into a motion picture first.

"If they do TV first, they rarely do a movie," said Goggin, who has already written the screen play and is determined to retain script control.

"The show is so successful the way it is," Goggin said, adding that his concern with a studio production was the producers could "easily decide to really make it offensive. I think that would hurt the musical a lot."

Goggin weighs several factors when considering what's appropriate for the production and what isn't.

"We've always tried to keep it very timeless," he said, adding that was why the show generally avoided references to specific events or people in the news.

"I draw the line where the nuns draw the line," Goggin said, citing several examples of nuns approving of the show's material.

The playwright, who calls "Nunsense" "really good" as a word-of-mouth show, said Catholics, particularly nuns, are among its greatest supporters.

"They love it," said Goggin, who drew on his years in Catholic school for some of his material. "The nuns adore it. It presents them as people who are joyful and real."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Fatality

Staff Report

SEMINOLE — An El Paso woman was killed and three family members injured in a one-vehicle accident Thursday about 9.8 miles north of Seminole on U.S. Highway 62, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Angie Alhusaini, 21, was pronounced dead at 5:20 p.m. following the accident that occurred about a half an hour earlier.

Injured were the driver, Hamoud Alhusaini, 19, who was listed in good condition at Seminole Memorial Hospital; Shakhsa Alhusaini, 1, who was in serious condition with head injuries at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock; and Abdulla Alhusaini, 7, listed in good condition at Seminole Memorial Hospital.

According to DPS reports, Alhusaini, driving a 1987 Nissan pickup, was traveling south on the highway when he failed to negotiate a curve. The pickup subsequently went off the right side of the road. The driver overcorrected into the median causing the vehicle to overturn one and a half times, the report said.

'Crack' charges

Walter Lee Jones, 25, was indicted on one count of conspiracy to to possess crack with intent to distribute and one count of distribution of crack.

Terence Steward, 22, was indicted on one count of conspiracy to possess crack with intent to distribute and one count of possession of crack with intent to distribute.

The offenses each carry a maximum punishment of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Jones and Steward were arrested May 2 following a Drug Enforcement Administration and Midland Police Department investigation.

Jones is accused of selling a "rock" of crack cocaine to an undercover DEA agent on May 2. He also is accused of possession of about 35 rocks of crack and with conspiring with Steward to sell the drugs.

Investigators said Jones sold the crack from his business, a car wash on South Lee Street called J&J Details.

Agents and police officers returned to the business after the sale and found Steward there with a medicine bottle containing the 35 rocks of crack, investigators said.

Jones is being held without bond at the Midland County Central Detention Facility pending a background investigation, jail officials confirmed.

U.S. Magistrate Robert R. Sykes set bond for Steward at $30,000 Wednesday. Jail officials said Steward remained in custody Thursday evening.

Robbery

A 72-year-old woman told police Thursday she was robbed of $200 by a knife-wielding man last Friday, police said.

The woman was walking down the alley of the 100 block of Mineola Street about 10 p.m. Friday when a man approached her, threatened her with a knife and demanded money, police said. The woman complied and the suspect turned and ran.

Police said the woman did not report the incident sooner out of fear.

The suspect was described as a black male.

Arrest

A 40-year-old Odessa man remained in the Midland jail Thursday after turning himself in Wednesday for violation of a pre-trial release on a charge of conspiracy to possess and distribute heroin, jail and federal officials said.

Blas Gerrero Tavarez, who was out on bond, was arrested on a warrant issued by U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes.

Tavarez was originally arrested on the drug charges on a Drug Enforcement Agency warrant.

Indictments

Three men were indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury for conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamines.

Glen Edward Perry, 40, of Big Spring; Delbert Elgene Scroggins, 51, of Big Spring; Charles Edward Farmer, 27, of Leander, were arrested April 26 following an investigation by the Drug Enforcement Agency, officials said.

All three remained in custody Thursday.

Lawmakers defeat casino-gambling bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House voted against allowing casino gambling on Pleasure Island in Port Arthur, after a Thursday debate pitting promises of economic development against concerns about more state-sanctioned gambling.

Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, said he may try to bring the bill up again later, if he can change some votes. The measure failed, 65-73.

"I think there's still a possibility. I'm going to take a good, close look at the vote," Collazo said.

Port Arthur residents have approved casino gambling in a nonbinding referendum. Voter approval would be required under his bill for gambling to begin at Pleasure Island.

"Port Arthur wants this. It's economic development. Gaming is just a part. Let's talk about the hospitality part of it, the entertainment part of it," he said. "I think that this is a window for all of us, not just for Port Arthur, but the state of Texas."

Thousands of jobs would be created through casino gambling, Collazo said.

Rep. Fred Hill also described casino gambling as a window, but one that could allow in crime, official corruption and ever-increasing demands for expansion by gambling supporters.

"Significant problems are created when government either encourages it (gambling) or attempts to profit from it," said Hill, R-Richardson.

Bingo was legalized to help charities, but bingo now is controlled by outside operators, he said. Hill also cited pari-mutuel betting on horse racing, which was approved several years ago by lawmakers. Backers now are seeking a tax reduction for the industry.

"Each time, all they want to do is get a little bit more. Wherever casinos have been allowed they have been willing to accept any conditions to get in ... But as soon they get in, they take every advantage," he said.

Hill said even if Collazo's bill were passed, it could be successfully challenge in court on constitutional grounds.

The Texas Constitution requires the Legislature to prohibit lotteries and gift enterprises.

Collazo said an attorney general's opinion was unclear on whether a constitutional amendment would be required for casino gambling.

Judge: Workers' comp law is unconstitutional

Associated Press

EAGLE PASS — A state district judge on Thursday declared the Texas workers' compensation law unconstitutional, saying it uses "arbitrary and unreasonable" impairment standards and limits injured workers' access to the courts.

Within minutes of the ruling by Judge Rey Perez, the state's attorneys announced they will appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

"The workers' comp law will remain in effect because the state intends to appeal this case," said Assistant Attorney General Joe Pitner. The judge did not issue an injunction that would have kept the system from operating.

The Texas AFL-CIO filed the lawsuit in Maverick County on the Texas-Mexico border, where there is a large population of seasonal farm workers. The labor group contends those workers are discriminated against by the new law.

"Obviously we're very elated by the ruling. It feels like it vindicates the position we've taken all along," said Bill Whitehurst, co-counsel for the Texas AFL-CIO.

The Texas Legislature passed the business-backed workers' comp reform bill after two special sessions in 1989. Then-Gov. Bill Clements signed the measure into law.

"The court declares the entire enactment unconstitutional and void," Perez said in his ruling, which came after two weeks of trial testimony.

The judge said the parts of the law that are unconstitutional are major provisions, thus rendering the entire act unconstitutional.

The judge said the new law provides for a "mechanical application" of the American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment. Perez said the AMA guides were not intended to be used in such a manner and that the Texas Legislature never sought AMA advice on using the documents.

Among the witnesses for the plaintiffs was St. Louis-based Dr. Alan Engelberg, editor of the AMA guides, who said the state is using them inappropriately.

'In the meantime, we're going to be working to overhaul workers' compensation. There'll probably be some Band Aid approaches to workers' comp, maybe even in this (legislative) session.'

— Bill Cryer, Gov. Richards' press secretary

The judge also said "impairment" does not equal "disability." For instance, a person's physical problem may not fit an impairment definition although that person still might be disabled from work.

Perez said the law limits injured workers' access to the courts and added: "The court finds that the act was intended to discourage attorneys from representing injured workers."

Furthermore, the judge said, the workers' comp law calculates benefits differently for seasonal workers and those making low wages.

In defending the law, the state and a business group called the Texas Association of Compensation Consumers questioned doctors and lawyers who testified that the reform law is reasonable.

Shannon Ratliff, an attorney for the TACC, said after Thursday's ruling he also favors appealing directly to the Texas Supreme Court so that the matter can be resolved as soon as possible.

Ratliff said he was disappointed in the ruling and believes the law enacted by legislators should stand.

"I think these were all clearly distinctions which the Legislature was entitled to draw. This is a situation that I believe and I'm confident the Supreme Court will rectify," he said.

Gov. Ann Richards "knew when it was passed that there were problems with the law," said her press secretary, Bill Cryer.

Cryer said he expects it will be about a year before the legal appeals are completed.

"In the meantime, we're going to be working to overhaul workers' compensation," Cryer said. "There'll probably be some Band Aid approaches to workers' comp, maybe even in this session" of the Legislature.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said he wasn't surprised by the judge's ruling.

"The Workers' Compensation Act attempted to solve problems of compensation at the expense of caring employers and injured workers. This court trial has exposed this legislation as the special interest scheme that it was," Parker said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he was disappointed by the ruling. "I think it's a good bill and should be constitutional. I think the appellate court will find that also."

Opening statements in the trial were made April 22; testimony concluded last Thursday.

Senators give tentative OK to equal rights bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate on Thursday tentatively approved an equal rights bill, after the sponsor yielded to persistent colleagues who wanted to make certain that the proposal would not allow marriages between people of the same sex.

A final Senate vote is needed to send the measure to the House.

"I've always thought that this was what America was all about. We are all children of God. We are all supposed to be equal under the law and enjoy non-discriminatory treatment in all aspects of our lives," Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos said.

Barrientos, D-Austin, said his bill would prohibit discrimination on the "basis of color, race, disability, religion, sex, national origin or age during any part — or in any aspect of contractual agreement."

"It clearly states that all us — no matter what our race, religion or other personal characteristics — have equal rights under the laws of the state of Texas," he said.

The bill was designed to handle gaps in federal protection where an employer cannot refuse to hire someone on racial grounds but may fire an employee on racial grounds without liability.

Another example is that private schools must admit people of all races without racial discrimination, but may require people of one race to sit at the back of the classroom, according to a bill summary.

Under the bill, victims of discrimination could sue in state court, and they could collect full monetary relief for employment discrimination.

"We need to send a message that Texans will not abide discrimination in any form," Barrientos said.

He was asked if the bill might be interpreted to allow two people of the same sex to obtain a marriage license.

"No way. That is absolutely not my intent," Barrientos said.

Asked the same question by another senator, Barrientos replied that the bill "in relatively plain English does not say two people of the same sex will be allowed to get a marriage license."

"I have now said not once, twice, thrice. It is absolutely not my intention for this bill to do that or allow that," he said.

Finally, Barrientos yielded to yet another senator and allowed an amendment that would specifically prohibit two people of the same sex from obtaining a marriage license.

FAMILY MATTERS

Ex-husband's summer plans worry mom

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: After almost 11 years of marriage, my husband told me that he was "tired of trying" and wanted a divorce. When I tried to find out what was wrong, all he would ever really say was that he just didn't "feel what he should" for me. I talked to my pastor and he was willing to help us, but (husband) wouldn't even try. He just wanted a divorce.

May

I didn't want a divorce so I told him if he wanted a divorce then he was going to have to file. He did. The divorce went OK, but it was very hard on our three children (ages 2, 4 and 7).

He said he wasn't really ready to handle all the children right away so he hasn't seen them as much as the court allowed. The children told me almost at once that when they went over to visit there was a "girl" there most of the time. All that just confirmed my suspicions that he had a girlfriend all along. Needless to say, I wasn't happy about the situation but there wasn't anything I could do about it. The only saving grace is that he doesn't want the kids all the time.

Now the problem. "Mr. Mom" called and said that he wanted to take the kids on a trip this summer for a week in the mountains. That sounded fine to me, but I told him that I was concerned because he hasn't had any practice at all in caring for the children by himself that long. He finally told me that he could handle it because a "friend" was going along. When I pressed him, he told me that it was (girlfriend). I was so shocked that I didn't know what to say so I just mumbled something or other and hung-up.

I've talked to my pastor, my mother and several friends about it, and they all agree with me, that it's just not right to take your girlfriend on a trip with the children. I don't want them to be exposed to a sleep-in situation. Am I just being old-fashioned or do I have the right to stop him? — ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: I agree with you and the others you have spoken with in that I believe it is wrong to expose children to "sleep-over girl/boyfriends." I encourage you to discuss the situation with your ex-husband and share your feelings with him. Our preference is to be able to resolve such issues in a cooperative mode. However, I strongly believe that it is our responsibility as parents to establish appropriate religious and moral rules by our actions.

If he refuses, can you stop him? Should that situation arise, then I encourage you to seek legal advice. I believe that it is worth the effort to set a moral boundary on this issue.

DEAR FAMILY: I have a neighbor who is creating a problem for me and I don't know what to do. I love working in my yard. It's my therapy. As soon as my neighbor sees me working in the yard, she comes over and stands and talks to me. She is very nice, but I really want to work in quiet. This is when I feel closest to God and nature. Her talking just ruins my experience.

I feel guilty because I am getting mad at her and don't say anything. Now, I'm avoiding going into the yard. Can you tell me something that I could say to her so it wouldn't hurt her feelings?

I don't want to make her mad, as she is a good neighbor and a nice lady. I just want to be left alone to commune with nature in my own yard. — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Perhaps you could just show her this column and that would suffice. I hope that she doesn't feel angry or get her feelings hurt too, but you are entitled to your own special time.

DEAR FAMILY: This is just a note to tell you how much I enjoy your column. I read it every Friday first thing.

I just wanted to make a comment about your answer to "Worried" who wrote you about her husband's terrible temper. My husband used to have a temper like that when we first got married. We all lived in fear that it might erupt anytime.

One day, when he started into a rage, I just started praying right in front of him. I don't know what happened, but it must have done something to him. He stopped right in the middle and walked out. Now, when he starts to explode, he just goes for a walk.

I just wanted to share this story with you because that was almost 22 years ago. — HAPPIER

DEAR HAPPIER: Thank you for sharing your experience with us. It just shows us once again that God works in mysterious ways. I am thankful that prayer led to peace in your family.

Dolphins helping professor 'reach out and touch'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — What would you get if you crossed a dolphin and a cellular phone? A phone with a lot more channels, says University of Rochester Professor Edward Titlebaum.

Titlebaum is searching for ways to increase the number of channels available to users of sonar, radar, cellular telephones and satellites. He takes his research cues from dolphins and other animals such as bats whose sonar systems are much more sophisticated than man-made systems.

Surprise Mom with Brioche

NEW YORK (AP) — Surprise Mom with breakfast in bed on Mother's Day. Include her favorite flower, magazine — and perhaps a homemade card from the kids — on the tray.

The following recipe for Chocolate Chip Brioche can be served with a small pot of Mom's favorite coffee or tea. Dad will have to lend a hand with the preparations.

CHOCOLATE CHIP BRIOCHE
1 package active dry yeast
⅓ cup warm water (105 degrees F to 115 degrees F)
2 tablespoons sugar
3 cups all-purpose flour
6 tablespoons (¾ stick) butter
⅓ cup heavy cream
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
½ of a 6-ounce package semisweet miniature chocolate chips
1 egg, beaten

In a small bowl, dissolve yeast in warm water; stir in sugar and ¼ cup of the flour. Cover and let stand in warm place for 10 minutes or until mixture bubbles. In a small saucepan, heat butter and cream until warm, about 120 degrees F to 130 degrees F. Set aside.

In a large mixer bowl, combine 1 cup of the flour and the ½ teaspoon salt. Add yeast mixture, cream mixture and the 2 eggs. Beat at low speed until smooth, then at high speed for 3 minutes. Stir in remaining flour. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Knead in chocolate chips.

Reserve about 1-6th of the dough. Shape larger portion of dough into a smooth ball; place in a greased 8x3-inch fluted brioche mold or a round casserole. Cut a small slit in the top of the dough. Shape the reserved dough into a 2- or 3-inch cone; tuck long portion of cone into slit in top of the dough to form a "topknot." Pat dough gently to shape evenly. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk, about 1 hour.

Brush brioche with beaten egg. Bake in a preheated 350-degree F oven 40 to 45 minutes or until loaf sounds hollow when tapped with fingertips. Remove from baking dish. Cool slightly on a wire rack. Serve warm or cool completely. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Borrowed advice may help mother get her loan back

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I would have to write a letter like this, but I need someone to help me, and I thought of you.

One of my daughters and her husband borrowed $7,000 from me almost five years ago. They promised to pay me back within a year, but so far I haven't seen a dime of it.

Van Buren

This daughter and her husband both have good jobs and seem to have money for everything else. I am 77 years old, live in a senior citizens' apartment house and am doing without a lot of things I need.

I am sorry to say that I don't have any proof that I loaned them the money. I guess I should have asked them to sign a note for it, but I didn't think it was necessary.

Now what should I do? — TRUSTING MOTHER

DEAR TRUSTING: Without written evidence showing that your daughter and her husband borrowed $7,000, it will be very difficult to collect. You might try the following, suggested by a reader in an earlier column, as a solution to an identical problem:

An elderly couple had loaned their son $5,000. He promised to repay it in 90 days. They foolishly had nothing in writing. Four years passed, and not a cent did they receive, so his mother wrote him a letter asking if he could please make even a partial payment on the $7,500 he had borrowed.

Quick as a flash he wrote to say that he did not owe them $7,500 — it was only $5,000. Mission accomplished! They got it in writing.

DEAR ABBY: You frequently remind your readers to make sure their children are "buckled up" in seat belts when they get into a car. But no one mentions the fact that pets can just as easily be thrown from a vehicle and injured.

It makes me sick to see a dog loose in the back of a pickup truck or hanging out of a car window. All it would take is one quick stop or a sharp curve to send that animal flying into the street.

My dog loves to go for rides with me. He sits in the passenger seat and I buckle the seat belt around him. For smaller pets, there are carriers one can attach to the seat to provide safety for one's pet. I hope you feel this is important enough to put in your column. — LIZ IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR LIZ: It is. So, dear readers, listen to Liz. And if you're lucky enough to own a pet who adores you, the next time that dog or cat follows closely on your heels when you head for the car, remember: Pets rely on their owners to protect them, so don't let yours down. Inquire at your local pet shop about car seats for pets.

DEAR ABBY: About five or six years ago, the U.S. Postal Service developed a system to expedite mail delivery.

Unfortunately, most businesses chose to ignore the suggestions. I hereby state the suggestions that were submitted:

(1) Use no comma after the name of the city.

(2) The abbreviation for the state of Illinois shall be two letters — "IL" — not "ILL."

(3) The ZIP code should be written on the same line following the name of the state.

Abby, perhaps if you print this in your column, the public will pay some attention to it. The post office got exactly nowhere with its suggestions. — WORKING FOR THE POST OFFICE

DEAR WORKING: I'll publish your letter. That's the least I can do for the U.S. Postal Service after all it has done for me.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.C.D. IN SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ.: Whether she nags because he drinks or he drinks because she nags is not the issue. Nagging irritates only the giver. Drinking irritates the liver.

Puppet program teaches evils of drugs

By Lynn Bulmahn

WACO (AP) — There are some new developments in the War on Drugs in Mother Goose's neighborhood.

Little Red Riding Hood is fending off a wolf offering cigarettes and beer. The Three Little Pigs are learning to say no to marijuana and paint-sniffing. Little Bo Peep is now teaching her sheep it's bad to smoke cigarettes or marijuana, drink alcohol and sniff paint or other things that smell strong.

These new versions of fairy tales are part of the Junior League of Waco's program to teach first graders about the dangers of drugs. And the storytellers are puppets.

"We felt it's important to target a younger age about drugs," said project chairwoman Denise Klaras.

The average age of youngsters with alcohol abuse problems when they start drinking is 11, said Bob Hawkins, a case manager with the Heart of Texas Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

"The younger they start drinking, the more likely they are to become an alcoholic," he said.

Children in an environment where others are using drugs may be exposed to drug abuse at younger ages, he said. "A lot of times, they try to act like older kids" and experiment with drugs, Hawkins said.

The best course, he said, is to prevent the youngster from ever using drugs, alcohol or cigarettes. "It's a lot harder to work with them after they become addicted or experience it," he explained.

That's where the Junior League wants to come in.

Each Tuesday, the puppet troupe will be putting on shows in different schools.

Covered in the skits are messages warning about beer, cigarettes, marijuana, inhalants and other substances.

"We feel like it's a positive way to impact our community," Klaras said. "We tell the little ones not to get involved in drug abuse."

The skits are designed to be fun as they educate.

"We ask them what is a drug?" Klaras said. "There are good drugs and bad drugs. The medicines your doctor gives you are good drugs. But marijuana, crack and cocaine are bad drugs, and you should just say no to bad drugs."

Children are given strategies teaching them how to refuse illegal drugs, cigarettes or alcoholic beverages.

Project co-chairwoman Teresa Minor said the committee is still polishing its performance. The puppeteers have been coached by Julie Wolfe, who directed the Columbus Avenue Baptist Church puppet troupe.

"We've written all the scripts ourselves," Minor said. "We've worked from the bottom up."

Gardeners work in harmony with nature

By James E. Walters

PHOENIX (AP) — Living in harmony with nature seems to be developing as the dominant theme of gardening. The disposable era has made a 180-degree turn. The signs are everywhere.

Nurseries in this area advertise beneficial insects for sale. Praying mantis or ladybugs retail at $4.99 a container (about 1,500 baby ladybugs or 800 baby praying mantis). The nurseries also pay for the return of empty, plastic plant containers, offering 5 cents for the 1-gallon size to 50 cents for the 15-gallon.

The public television station in neighboring Tempe recently had a three-hour program devoted to native or desert-adapted plants. The focus was on color and quick shade possible from drought-resistant, low-maintenance plants.

Xeriscaping, the use of such plant material, has become a buzzword in areas facing water shortages or rationing.

The latest national magazine of the Perennial Plant Association, a trade group, features an article by horticulturist Luren Springer of Denver, who says in part:

"The key to growing perennials successfully is to choose plants that will thrive in the climate where they are planted. Native plants are making inroads into our perennial palette. Many of these tolerate heat, humidity, drought and even hail with the greatest of ease. It's time hybridizers and plants people devoted more time to selecting and developing better strains of these, instead of the newest almost-white daylily, variegated hosta or huge bearded iris."

"If we would keep these materials (grass clippings and yard compost) on our own property, we probably would cut our landfill needs in half.'

— Vic Miller
Arizona State University

Toro Manufacturing Co. of Minneapolis has been promoting a "Don't Bag It, Compost It" program. The company says 20 percent of the solid waste generated in this country comes from grass clippings and tree leaves and claims compost from a typical yard can provide up to $100 of free humus, fertilizers and soil conditioners a year.

Toro, of course, like many other manufacturers, sells lawn mowers and other equipment designed for such recycling. But it wasn't too many years ago that talk of composting brought guffaws from many college horticulture instructors. One of my years-ago professors at Arizona State University, Vic Miller, was among the dissenters, saying, "If we would keep these materials on our own property, we probably would cut our landfill needs in half."

National companies catering to gardeners also have been taking pains to tell how they are working to preserve the environment. For example, Smith & Hawken of Mill Valley, Calif., which has offered first-rate equipment for years, includes this opening declaration in its new catalog: "We plant two trees for every one we use; we use recycled paper in our offices and our catalogs, and we sell only ecological beneficial garden products."

A few years ago when my wife asked for an insectional soap at our area's largest nursery, the folks claimed they never had heard of the product. They recommended popular insecticides that kill beneficial as well as harmful insects. This spring the store featured the same soap (which relies on potassium salts to control insects from aphids to thrips).

It used to be fashionable to spray insecticides on a definite schedule ("It's March, so spray for mealybugs, aphids and spider mites."). One of my outdated books, printed in 1939, even recommends spraying pesticides to kill lacewings. Now pesticide labels often recommend spraying only when pests are noticed and urge protection of beneficials.

Dave Langston, a University of Arizona entomologist, discussed the value of beneficial insects at a recent meeting of the Valley of the Sun Men's Garden Club in Phoenix. Many in his audience grew up in the spray-pesticides-on-schedule era. From the questions, his arguments made a strong impact.

He also cautioned against relying too much on beneficials and natural controls. Sometimes, he said, things will get out of hand and pesticides will be needed. As to the value of buying beneficials, Langston said when summer temperatures hit the 100s "the ladybugs fly away to the cooler mountain regions."

Cataracts are easily surgically removed

By Dr. Henry F. Page

There is good news today for all you old timers over 60! If perchance you failed to notice, about eight out of 10 of you have developed a slowly progressive cloudiness and distortion of vision that impairs reading, recognition of faces and clarity of TV. This results from an opacity in the lens of the eye partially obstructing the stream of light flowing to the retina — an effect similar to stones interrupting the flow of a river — hence the term cataract.

Page

Cataracts can advance to the point of grossly impairing one's lifestyle and even to blindness in a few cases. The good news is that this condition can now be corrected relatively easily and painlessly.

Although various medications may have some beneficial effect, the real answer lies in surgery, which is more than 90 percent successful. Instead of requiring the patient to lie in bed for almost a week with their head held motionless by sand bags, the whole procedure now requires less than an hour while the subject remains alert and free of pain. This miraculous difference results from photoemulsification, a process that busts rocks making little ones out of big ones, thus creating "milk" which in turn is sucked out through a tiny hole.

All of you erudite opthomologists please don't shudder at this discription!

About a million of these operations are done in the U.S.A. yearly and all but 10 percent of the patients can have lens' implanted. The thick, homely glasses formerly so often seen are now passe.

Many precious months and years were wasted in the past by "waiting for the cataract to become ripe." This hopefully would obivate both the hazards and discomforts of surgery for the "poor old soul", and also the risk of suit or malicious gossip for the surgeon. Then the progressive diminution of visual stimuli to the brain created by the ever thickening stone wall resulted in confusion maturing into dementia. Then after several years with the patient becoming to sick mentally and physically to operate on, the good Lord in the form of Newnie Ellis (undertaker) would take over.

With the present state of the art, it is almost impossible to be too incapacitated for cataract removal, and the sooner the better in order to stop further cerebral deterioration. Please don't wait until its broke before you try to fix it. Once again, the old aphorism holds — an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure!

The NFL bonus draft

From 1947 through 1958

First selection in the NFL draft was a "bonus" pick, awarded to a team by random drawing. That team forfeited its last-round pick, and it was eliminated from future drawings for the bonus.

After 1958

All the NFL teams had been given one bonus pick, and the system was abandoned.

49ers take shot

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Suspended shot putter Randy Barnes signed a two-year contract as a free agent with the San Francisco 49ers, the Charleston Daily Mail reported Thursday.

The 6-foot-4, 300-pound former Texas A&M star is trying out as a defensive lineman, the newspaper said. He is reported to have signed with San Francisco on Friday.

Barnes decided to try football during his appeal of a two-year drug suspension issued by the International Amateur Athletic Federation and endorsed by The Athletic Congress, America's governing body for track.

Barnes was suspended from track for testing positive for steroids last year. He maintains his innocent, but has exhausted his appeals with TAC.

Bi-district games begin

Both openers at home

■ Midland Lee and Midland High entertain Lubbock teams when the playoffs begin at 4:30 p.m. today.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

D-Day has arrived for Midland's high school baseball teams.

Midland High and Midland Lee finally will play meaningful games today, as eighth-ranked Lee hosts Lubbock Coronado at Johnson Field and MHS entertains ninth-ranked Lubbock Monterey at Angels Stadium in the openers of the best-of-three bi-district series. Both games are set for 4:30 p.m. starts.

Today's games are a prelude to Saturday's play in Lubbock, where both competitions move for the second and possible third games of each series.

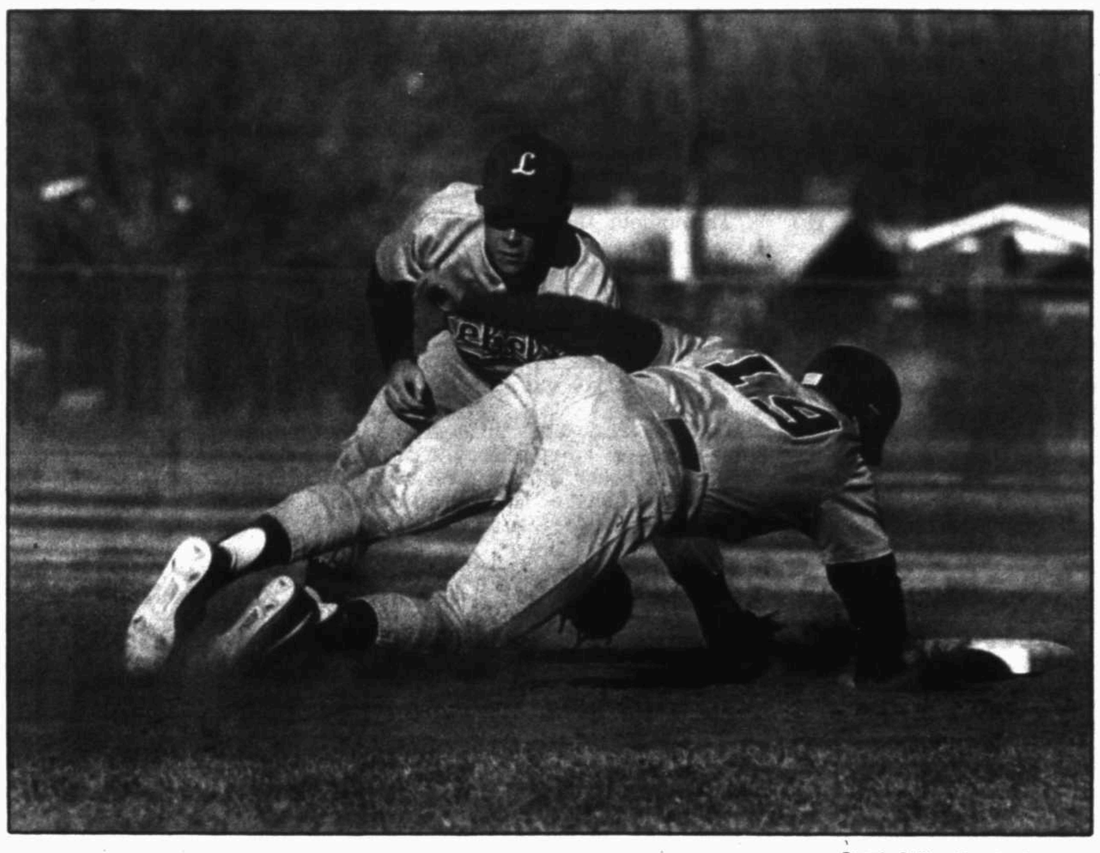

The Bulldogs (13-10) and Rebels (18-8) each have faced their foes previously this season, with MHS splitting a doubleheader against Monterey (25-6) while Lee swept a twin bill from the 17-11 Mustangs. But that was early in the season, and before the locals had to suffer through a long layoff.

The last game the District 4-5A champion Rebels played was April 27 against San Angelo in the regular-season closer. Meanwhile, MHS played its district finale April 23 against Abilene Cooper, though the 'Dogs did win a 10-8 tune-up decision over Fort Worth Southwest last Friday.

But the coaches of both teams agree, it is time to play.

Celtics motor past Pistons

Associated Press

BOSTON — The mere fact that an aging, ailing Larry Bird played was surprising. The way young, energetic Dee Brown played was stunning.

Bird's presence made Detroit's defenders pay attention and Brown's shooting and passing made them pay the price as the Boston Celtics evened their playoff series at 1-1 with a 109-103 win Thursday.

In the fourth quarter, Brown had 15 points and three of his game-high eight assists. The rookie matched his career-high of 22 points and grabbed a key defensive rebound in the final minute.

"We needed somebody to step up," Brown said. "Somebody needed to make things happen by hitting a shot from outside or making a big pass."

"You can't call Dee a rookie anymore," Boston's Reggie Lewis said. "He took it upon himself to lead us."

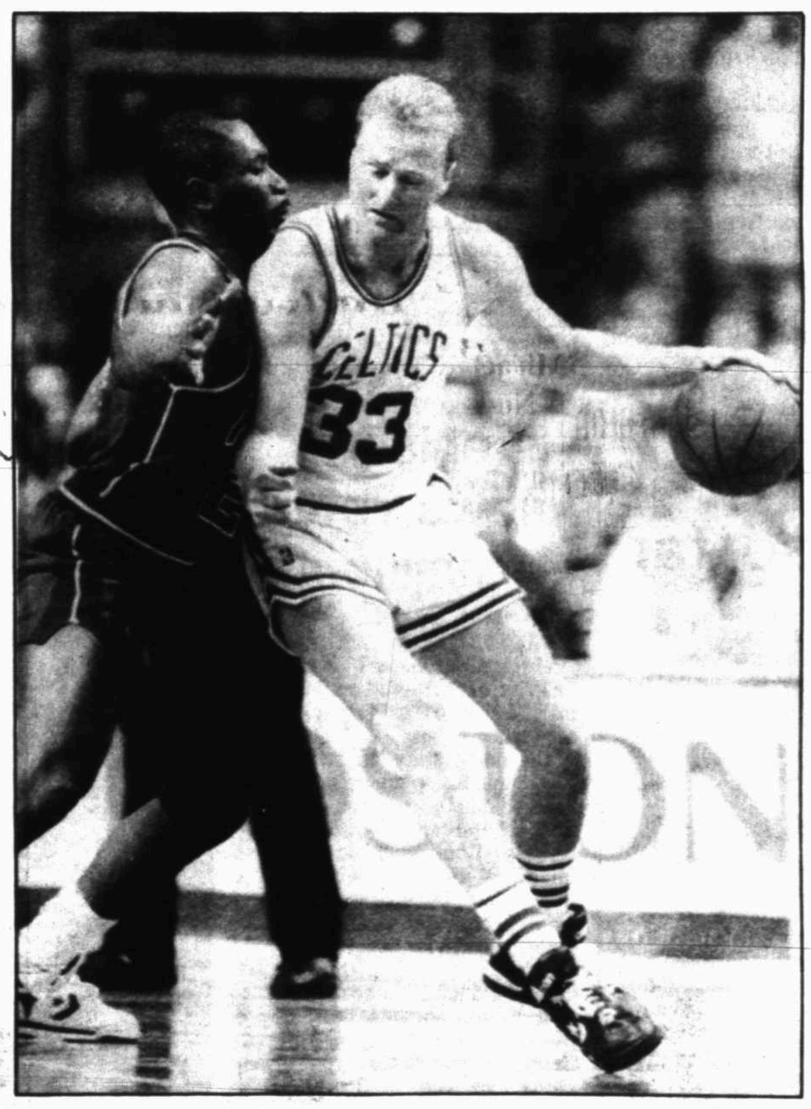

With starting point guard Brian Shaw struggling, Brown took over and gave the Celtics the big victory and a homecourt split as they head into a building where they've never won.

They are 0-8 in the Palace of Auburn Hills, where the next two games of the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals are scheduled Saturday afternoon and Monday night.

Bird's absence because of severe back spasms was obvious in Detroit's 86-75 series-opening win on Tuesday night. In Game 2, he had 16 points and eight rebounds in 42 minutes.

"It's invaluable having Larry out there, just his rebounding," Boston coach Chris Ford said. "I don't know how he does it, coming out there feel-

Penders will listen to Knicks

■ The University of Texas basketball coach says the NBA team put his name on a list.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — University of Texas men's basketball coach Tom Penders says he will listen to the New York Knicks if they want to talk to him about their coaching vacancy but says he is not pursuing the job.

Penders said he had been contacted by a friend acting as a liasion for the Knicks, who lost coach John MacLeod to the University of Notre Dame last week.

"A friend of mine who works for the Knicks called me to ask how they should go about contacting me," Penders said. "I'm on a list.

"He said, 'Would you talk to us?' I told them I would. In this profession, you don't refuse to talk to people."

Penders said he has not been asked to interview for the position and told his friend, whom he would not identify, to ask the Knicks to first contact Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds, the Houston Chronicle reported Thursday.

Penders has said if he were to leave Texas, it would most likely be to coach in the NBA.

"It doesn't mean I want to leave here," Penders said. "You're crazy if you don't talk to people. Say in three years I am serious about something like that, you don't want people to say, 'Don't even bother talking to that guy.'"

Former Los Angeles Lakers coach Pat Riley is considered the front-runner for the Knicks position.

Rookie coaches take 4-5A by storm

All too often, it seems, some pencil-pusher someplace is laying down an asterisk along the third-base side of an athletic accomplishment.

Rain-shortened no-hitters are an example of this dubious distinction, with the asterisk announcing loud and clear that the effort was not quite up to "true no-hitter" snuff.

Wyatt

But if you want to add some worthy footnotes to the Tall City's multiple immersion in the high school baseball playoffs it will take a whole lot more than one of those teeny-weeny stars.

Rain or shine, win or lose, it will take no less than some very heavy underlining and a couple of exclamation points to draw proper distinction to the accomplishments put forth by the two Tall City baseball teams and their head coaches as they head into today's high school playoffs.

Underline for historical significance the fact that the Rebels and the Bulldogs have given Midland two postseason teams in the same sport for the first time ever, as well as the first entry into the baseball playoffs by District 4-5A teams from the same city.

Then attach exclamations to the names Jesse Benavidez and Rick Wood, the modest first-year head coaches who pushed all the right buttons during their respective rookie seasons.

"Coach (Ernie) Johnson had a lot to do with these guys," said Benavidez, the Lee mentor who took over when Johnson retired last year after 29 seasons at the Rebel helm.

"I had a lot of them in JV, but the kids all knew the system pretty well. It was all put in before I got here."

Still, a Rebels' box score often reads like a list of Who's Who among the Lee student body, sometimes listing as many as 18 players that took part in a game.

Systems help. But so do gut feelings, and it was like musical chairs the way Benavidez worked his bench while orchestrating a 4-5A championship for the Rebels — Lee's first trip to the playoffs since 1985.

Wood, formerly the JV coach at MHS, does not even have 16 Bulldogs. What he inherited was a three-senior squad of "overachievers" out of which he produced the 4-5A runner-up.

The talent is there — in some cases exceptional talent — but with only one returning varsity starter, this was not a team being touted as a postseason probable. Guess who quietly made the Bulldogs gel?

"Coaching, I think, is a very overrated profession," Wood disclaims the notion. "I've seen coaches who win Coach of the Year and the next year they get fired.

"They didn't coach any differently one year to the next. It's just the way the kids perceive and receive what was said."

So MHS' 8-4 district record shows good perception?

"This year the kids performed to what I thought they could do, and more. Therefore, it's a success whether we're in the playoffs or not," said Wood, who succeeded the highly successful Tim Whalen after last season.

Well, the Bulldogs are in the playoffs. So are the Rebels.

Benavidez and Wood didn't hit, throw or field a ball all season. Neither earned a save nor produced a game-winning RBI. The players did all those things.

All Benavidez and Wood did was emerge from the shadows of some excellent head coaches and in one short season put their teams on the top of the 4-5A heap. And that bodes well for the future of baseball in this city.

Even if all they've got is a measly asterisk, baseball followers in Abilene, Odessa and San Angelo might want to make a note of this Midland feat ... as a point of reference for when it happens again.

MAY 10 91

PLAYOFFS: Johnston, Madrid to start

(From 1C)

'Dogs in a few fundamentals Thursday.

Lee mentor Jesse Benavidez also drilled his team in the basics Thursday, then retired to the dugout with the exclamation that the Rebels "might just explode" today.

"I don't think the layoff will affect us that much. It gave us time to cover a lot of little things. I don't think there's anything about baseball we haven't been over. I just hope we don't go out there and think about everything. We've just got to play on instinct," Benavidez said.

MHS and Lee will start their ace pitchers today, while Monterey and Coronado are expected to do the same. Senior Bulldog righthander James Madrid will face off against Allan Wolf of the Plainsmen.

After early season soreness in his arm, Madrid won five of his last six starts for an overall record of 6-2 and a district ERA of 0.97. Wolf has carried the load for Monterey, posting a 15-4 record and a 1.59 ERA this year.

"I think it's going to be a pitching battle. I foresee a very low-scoring game, but if we get three or four runs with James on the mound I think we ought to win," Wood said.

Jeff Johnston, Lee's senior lefthander, will get the nod today and probably pit his 12-1 record against Coronado's Wagner Wicks. Wicks owns a 7-3 record and a 3.56 ERA, while Johnston held 4-5A batters to an average of 1.09 earned runs per game this year.

"We've just got to win that first game, especially since we lost the coin toss (for the home field Saturday). I just hope it's not one of those one-run games, and if it is, I hope it comes out the same way," Benavidez said after seeing his Rebs make a habit of late-inning rallies in the regular season.

In their early March sweep of the Mustangs, the Rebels posted wins of 12-8 and 8-2. But Benavidez is not counting on past performances in the playoffs.

"Throughout the year everybody improves in some areas. Coronado has a lot of speed and some small guys that move the ball around," he said. "We have got to make sure we don't throw the ball away. That's one thing about them, they make you play the ball."

Monterey also went through some changes, as run-ins with head coach Bobby Moegle made civilians out of pitcher Junior Garza and center fielder Jason Salinas. Not coincidentally, that was about the time the Plainsmen started their run from third place to the District 3-5A title.

Also, MHS and Monterey have become familiar playoff combatants. A year ago the Bulldogs lost the opener in Midland, then swept two games from Monterey to claim the bi-district crown. Additionally, MHS handed Monterey every loss in a 24-5 record in 1990, and the 'Dogs have never been eliminated from the playoffs by the Plainsmen.

However, Wood does not overplay any talk of a brewing rivalry.

"Anybody in the state of Texas feels like it's a rivalry against them. It's just like Odessa Permian in football. When you're that good for that long, teams have no trouble getting up the play them," he said.

NOTES — While MHS has been successful against Monterey in the postseason, Lee's fortunes against the Plainsmen have been on the other end of the spectrum. According to local high school sports guru Tim McGraw, the Rebels fell to Monterey in 1983, '84 and '85, Lee's last playoff appearance. The Plainsmen also kept the Rebs from a state tournament berth in 1978, defeating Lee in the regional final.

ing as he does."

Detroit's superstar, Isiah Thomas, couldn't get out there for Game 2. He sprained his right foot when Brown landed on him late in the opener. Thomas suited up Thursday but didn't play.

"Whether he's with the team or not, we have players capable of winning in this building," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "It was a faster tempo game" than the Pistons were able to dictate in the opener.

With Bird's outside-shooting threat back, the Pistons had to guard him. That meant they couldn't double-team other players as much as they did in Game 1. When the Pistons did double-team, Brown got open outside shots and finished 7-for-11 from the field.

"Bird changes the game," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "He handles the ball well and he either scores or dishes it off."

"We were able to establish our inside game," Lewis said. "Every time they tried to double-team, we always found Dee Brown or somebody like that outside to take the shot."

"He either made the big shot or penetrated. His quickness comes into play when you're doubling or trapping," Detroit's Vinnie Johnson said.

Boston had plenty of open shots in the opener but hit only 39.4 percent of its field goal attempts. The Celtics made 48.8 percent Thursday, while Detroit connected on 40 percent.

Lewis led Boston with 23 points and Robert Parish had 19. The Pistons were paced by Joe Dumars with 29 and Mark Aguirre with 24.

The game was played in the afternoon because Boston Garden was tied up Thursday night with the fifth game of the NHL Stanley Cup semifinal between Boston and Pittsburgh and on Friday night by an ice show.

The Celtics led 50-48 at halftime and 71-70 after three quarters, then took control with a 7-0 surge that turned a 78-76 edge into an 85-76 lead with 6:47 left.

Parish hit two free throws and Bird hit a 14-foot fallaway jumper, making the score 82-76.

Brown then hit a foul shot before forcing a turnover by slapping the ball out of bounds off Dumars. On the next possession, Brown hit a 17-footer to cap the rally.

Trail Blazers 118, Jazz 116

PORTLAND, Ore. — Terry Porter scored inside with 3.6 seconds to play as the Portland Trail Blazers survived an incredible Utah rally to beat the Jazz and take a 2-0 lead in their Western Conference semifinal series.

Karl Malone scored a career playoff high 40 points, 20 in the fourth quarter, as the Jazz came from 23 points behind in the final 10½ minutes to tie the game 116-116 on his two free throws with 14.2 seconds to play.

After a timeout, Portland's Clyde Drexler threw a bounce pass inside to Porter. Utah's Mike Brown tipped it, but Porter was able to grab the ball and score the winning basket.

Jerome Kersey scored a career playoff high 34 points for Portland before fouling out with 2:05 to play.

The Jazz made 40 of 44 free throws, 35-of-38 in the second half. Malone was 20 of 22 at the foul line, 10-for-10 in the fourth quarter.

Mears has fastest lap at Indianapolis so far

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Have the speeds at Indy topped out below 230 mph? Some of the drivers vying for the pole position Saturday in the May 26 race believe they have — at least until the next rules change or technological breakthrough.

A year ago, the fastest unofficial lap at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was 228.502 mph by Al Unser Jr. on the Friday prior to the opening of qualifications.

Rick Mears has the fastest lap so far this month at 226.569.

In both cases, the drivers admitted to getting a tow on their fast laps around the 2½-mile oval from the draft of other cars.

When the drivers go out for their four-lap, 10-mile qualifying runs, they are alone.

"I don't see a 230 by yourself for a long time," said Michael Andretti, another of at least 10 drivers who appear capable of winning the top qualifying position for the 75th Indy race.

"There are just no big gains to be made at this point," said Andretti, who has been above 225 in both his primary and his backup car this week. "The cars are all trimmed out right now, and they're so developed to the current rules that there's nothing left to change but little stuff — and I mean little stuff."

Bobby Rahal, who has a 226.080 — the second fastest this week, said, "There are no big jumps now because the speed comes from making the car handle. We didn't go out to run 226. We were trying to make the car better.

"The crew got excited about it, and I got excited about it, but you can't get too worked up over these numbers, especially when you get help.

"We haven't posted a real fast time yet because I never found a friend out there," Unser said. "That's where these 226s are coming from.

"I saw the Andrettis (Michael and father Mario) out there going slow. They were looking for someone to give 'em a tow, looking for those fast laps. We're not really looking for 'em, but when you get the big numbers it kind of works to your advantage because all the other drivers up and down pit road, except the one who was in front of you, don't know if it was done by yourself.

"The main reason why you may not see any progress (in speeds) is because we're running wide open all the way around. If there is any improvement, it's going to be very, very small."

Unser, Rahal, the Andrettis and teammates Mears and Fittipaldi all are driving cars powered by the dominating Chevrolet Indy V8 engines. But the big question marks right now are the top drivers in cars using Buick power plants — Jim Crawford, Gary Bettenhausen and Kevin Cogan.

The U.S. Auto Club sanctions Indianapolis and, under USAC current rules, the Buicks are allowed 10 more inches of turbocharger boost than the Chevrolets.

Hershiser knows return is imminent

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Orel Hershiser doesn't know when he'll be back in the majors, but now he knows it's going to happen.

The uncertainty he has weathered since his shoulder injury last year all but evaporated after his first rehabilitation outing.

It lasted only five innings — 44 pitches — and came with Class A Bakersfield, but to the Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander, it was a major miracle.

"It's a very radical thing to get cut on and have major reconstruction of your shoulder and have a career-threatening injury and suddenly, a year later, you're pitching," he said. "A lot of water goes under the bridge and a lot of hard work and a lot of sweat and a lot of time goes in there."

After months of therapy, dozens of simulated games and many questions about the success of the surgery, Hershiser put his new shoulder to the test before 4,048 fans Wednesday night at cozy Sam Lynn Park.

Hershiser threw 32 strikes and 12 balls in five shutout innings against the Reno Silver Sox, allowing two hits, striking out two and walking none.

The Dodgers staked him to an 8-0 lead when he left and went on to win 9-4.

The start was the first in a 30-day rehabilitation stint for the 32-year-old pitcher, who underwent surgery last April 27.

Afterward, Hershiser fairly bubbled over with optimism, finally allowing himself to believe his comeback would be successful.

His shoulder felt fine, he said, and he had good command of his sinker and curveball.

"The ball is sinking the way it used to and the curveball is breaking the way it used to," the 1988 National League Cy Young Award winner said.

With two out in the fourth and the count 2-2, Hershiser got Reno's Dodd Johnson to swing at a curveball, the first one he had thrown.

"I was really impressed because the first curveball I threw in a game situation."

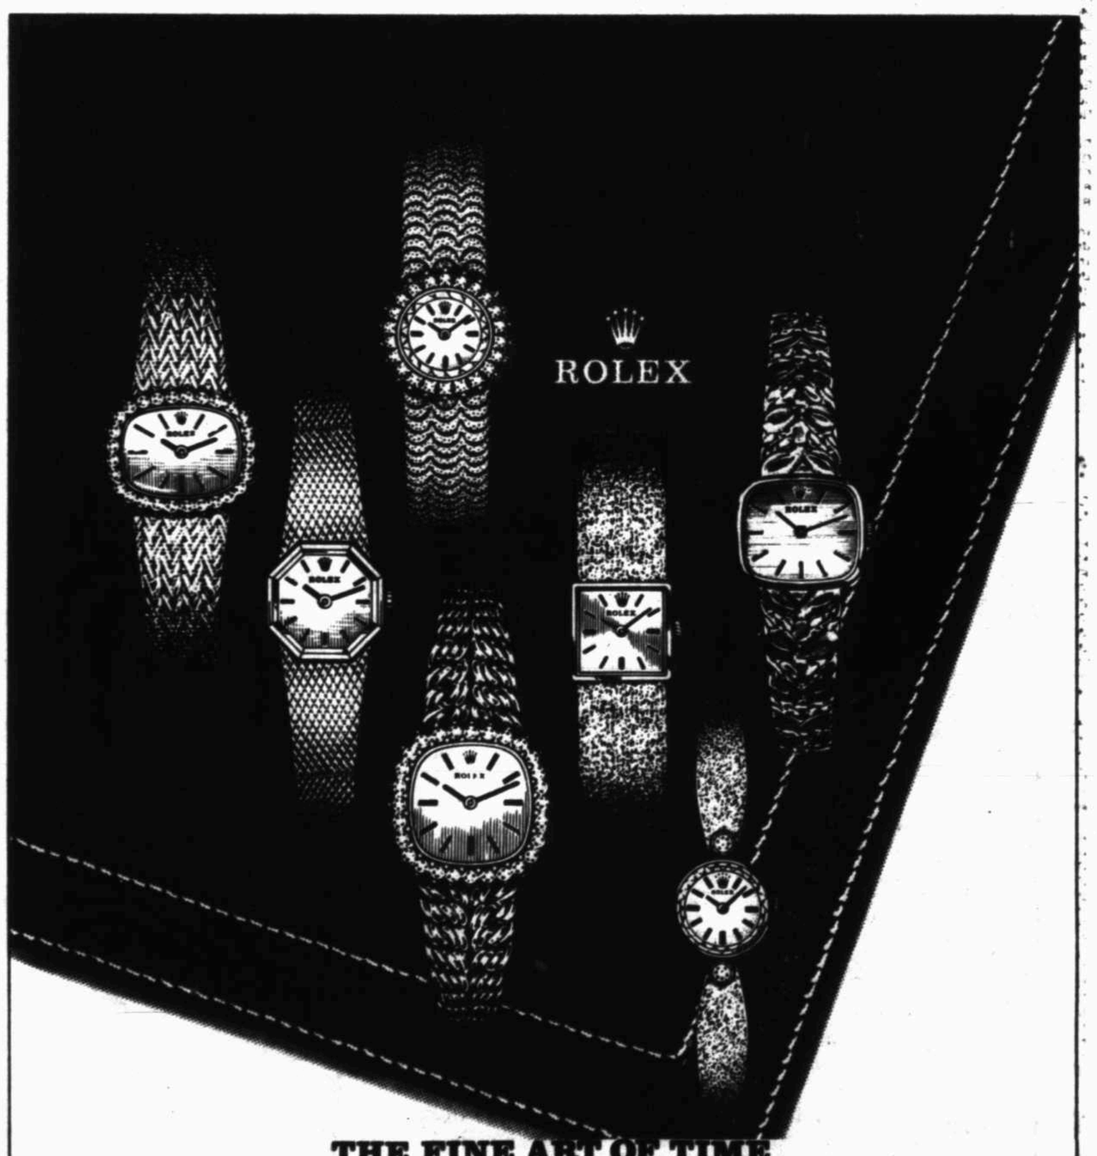

Minihan wins TAPPS net title

Staff Report

WACO — Midland Christian multiple-sport star David Minihan claimed the boys singles championship at the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools state tennis meet here recently.

Minihan, a three-point ace who helped the Mustangs to the TAPPS state basketball tournament, handily defeated Briarwood Christian's Brian Boles 6-0, 6-1 for the title.

Angels, Mission split twin bill

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Midland drew a split in a Texas League doubleheader here Thursday, as the Angels fell to San Antonio 5-1 in the opener before taking a 5-4 win in the nightcap.

In the Midland win, Kevin Davis launched a sacrifice fly to score pinch runner Ramon Sambo from third in the top of the sixth for the go-ahead run.

Both games of the doubleheader, which was scheduled after Wednesday's game was postponed because of wet grounds, were played in seven innings.

Don Mattingly misses old boss

The New York Yankees first baseman and the club owner had their arguments, some of it very public, when Steinbrenner was running the club.

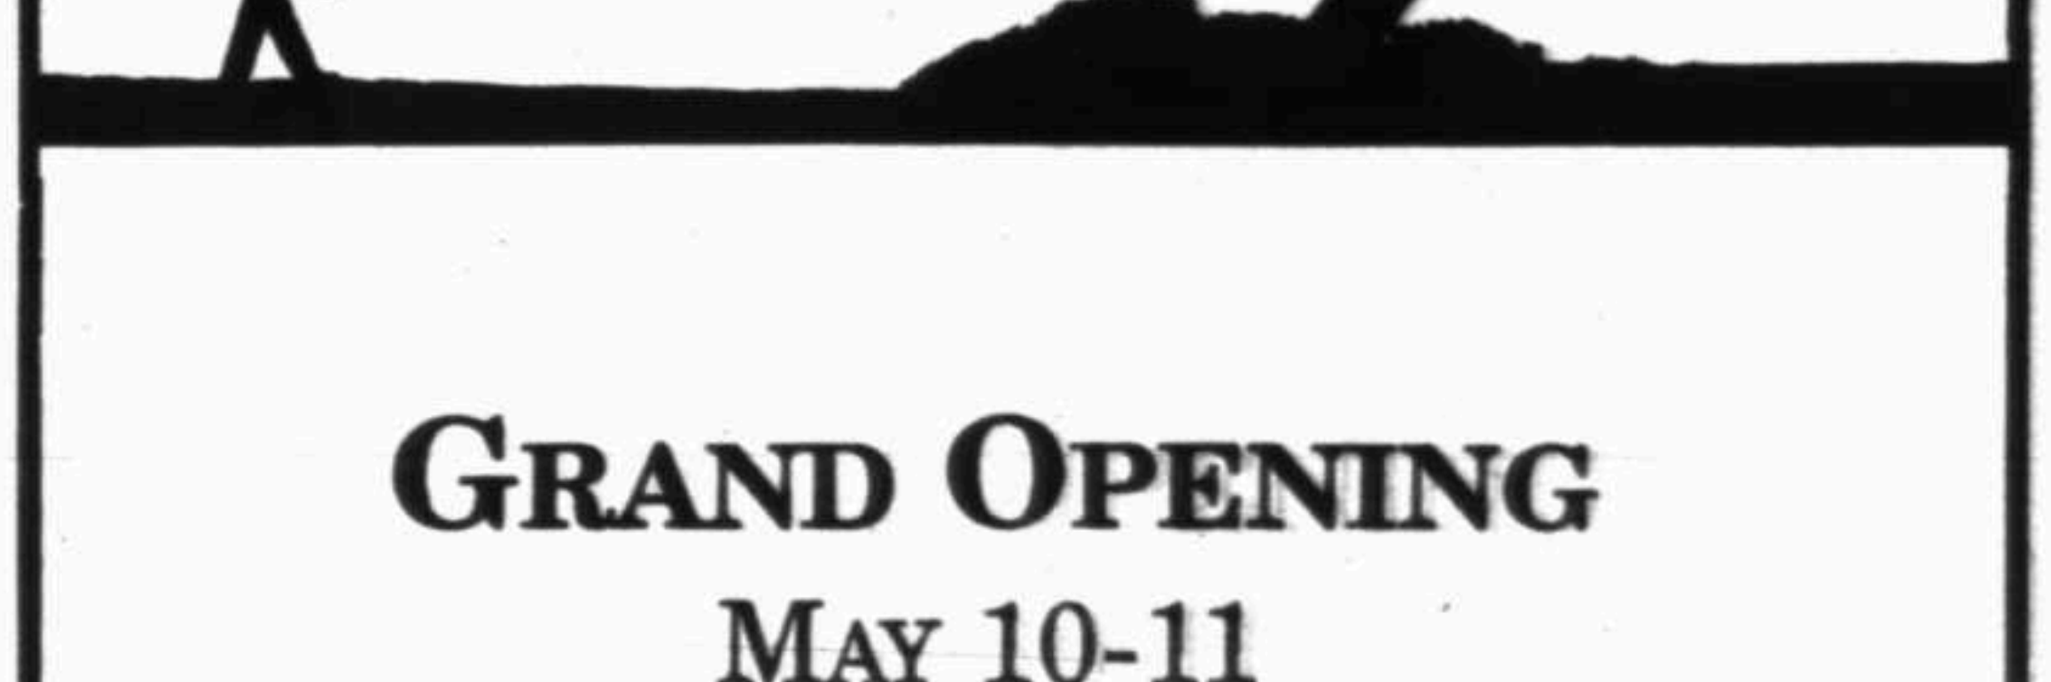

But now, with Steinbrenner banished from any active role and the Yankees stumbling through a terrible start, Mattingly says, "I miss him I really do."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The way you handle things for those depending on you — children, parents, employers, pets — reveals a lot about your basic values. Romance looks highly promising in September. Traveling in December will give you a new perspective on a business or financial affair. Keep good records; you may be asked to substantiate certain claims in January 1992. Write recommendations only for people you know well. Avoid investing in haste early next spring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Teamwork will help you accomplish much more today. Get several estimates for home repairs. Your love life improves when you devote extra time to pleasing your partner. Share confidences with mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Go ahead and enjoy a new arrangement or purchase. Those who work at home can make record profits now. A difference of opinion with loved one could lead to a showdown. Remain calm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The direct approach will work best if you are seeking financial backing. A relative offers help, but there could be strings attached. Think twice before entering into binding agreements.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Retrench and adopt a more conservative attitude toward a work project. A phone call or letter supplies the missing piece to a puzzle. Be careful not to neglect your domestic obligations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An old school mate helps you wangle an introduction to someone influential. This VIP could play a major role in your future. Put your best foot forward. You are lucky in love!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A business matter takes an unexpected turn. You profit from making a small investment. Some difficult decisions lie ahead. Count on loved ones to give you support when you need it most.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek expert advice on boosting profits. A lucrative project could be launched with the backing of a prominent person. New professional gains come if you stay on track.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your hard work and persistence begin to pay off. A promotion or raise is in the works. Affairs of the heart occupy your thoughts tonight. Be careful not to come on too strong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The spotlight is on a need for change. A newcomer begins to play a major role in your professional or personal affairs. Your spiritual needs come into sharper focus. Reassess your values.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your first impression of a member of the opposite sex could be incorrect. Proceed carefully where career and financial matters are concerned. A neighbor or friend shares good news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone who works behind the scenes could have the information you need. There are sound reasons for a delay. Adopt a conservative approach. Think twice before committing yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Call in your markers! Seek assistance from someone you have helped in the past. Entertaining at home saves money and impresses your guests. A loved one has a terrific money-making idea.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are cordial, generous and very family-oriented. Although they enjoy meeting people one-on-one, these youngsters tend to be shy in group gatherings. A tendency to procrastinate could keep these children from getting top grades in school. Although these Taureans read the newspapers to keep up on current affairs, they are not especially receptive to new ideas. Wise parents will encourage them to be more open-minded.

The two-way finesse is a strange animal. Considered in isolation, the chances of which player holds the missing key card are equal, yet circumstances might dictate which way the finesse should be taken. This hand illustrates what we mean. It was played in a duplicate event, where overtricks are crucial.

North bid the hand well. With only three-card support for partner's spades and flat distribution, North was loathe to commit to a spade contract. Two no trump was a happy compromise, and South's club rebid allowed North to show spade preference cheaply. With no more than a minimum opening bid, North had no slam ambitions.

West's diamond opening lead made the contract a virtual laydown. Since the normal play in clubs would be to take a finesse, the number of tricks declarer would collect hinged on the trump finesse, which could be taken either way. All the expert technicians made the same play. Only some of those whose dummy play was suspect did so.

At first glance it might seem that it is a pure guess which defender was dealt the queen of spades. That is true. Nevertheless, all the better players, after winning the king of diamonds at the second trick, crossed to the ace of spades and ran the jack, picking up the queen. They ended up with 12 tricks when the queen of clubs proved to be fortunately placed and the suit split 3-3.

Why did the good card players all take the right position in trumps? If the missing spades were divided 3-2, which finesse to take would be pure guesswork. But what if spades broke 4-1?

In that case the trump suit could not be brought in without loss if West held all four spades. If there was a bad break, East would have to hold the long spades. So those declarers took the finesse through East. If East covers the jack and West shows out, declarer could have returned to dummy with the king of hearts to take the marked finesse for the nine of spades.

Larry Gatlin to receive diploma 20 years after finishing school

HOUSTON — Country singer Larry Gatlin plans to pick up his diploma from the University of Houston next week, more than 20 years after he finished his studies.

Gatlin, 43, was denied graduation in 1970 because he never completed third-year Spanish for a since-reduced foreign language requirement, said Lawrence Curry, an associate dean.

In 1988, when he was named the university's outstanding alumnus of the year, Gatlin told school officials that he regretted he did not get his degree. Then-university President Richard Van Horn started the process that will result in Gatlin appearing in cap and gown on May 18 with 5,000 other graduates.

In addition to receiving his bachelor of arts degree, Gatlin will sing the alma mater and national anthem.

Gatlin, a Texas native who lives in Brentwood, Tenn., recorded such hits as "All the Gold in California" and "Broken Lady" with his brothers Steve and Rudy.

ROME — Italian film star Laura Antonelli was given a 3½-year suspended sentence and fined almost $19,000 Thursday for possession of 1¼ ounces of cocaine that police found at her home.

She had been jailed for three days after her arrest last month and then placed under house arrest April 30 at her villa in Cerveteri, 30 miles north of Rome. The court revoked the house arrest.

The charge carried a maximum sentence of eight years in prison, and prosecutors sought a four-year prison term.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Princess Diana, an accomplished but out-of-practice pianist, was persuaded by an orphaned 7-year-old girl to play "Greensleeves" Thursday.

On the last day of the British royal couple's four-day visit, Diana accompanied Olga Havlova, President Vaclav Havel's wife, to the House of Children, a cultural establishment inside medieval Hradcany castle.

Meeting with orphaned children from an experimental village where they live with adoptive parents in a rural environment, Diana listened to the children sing and dance.

"We have played for you. Now it is your turn," 7-year-old Alzbeta Stancikova told the princess through an interpreter.

Clearly flustered, Diana said, "I have not played in such a long time," but, blushing, later delivered a complicated version of the classic "Greensleeves."

The princess received "applause no virtuoso would be fussy about," the news agency CTK reported.

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. — Actor Brian Dennehy says he's working more and more in television because he thinks the motion picture industry doesn't want him.

Talent isn't enough in Hollywood, the actor maintains. He says producers want to guarantee a big box office by hiring stars such as Bruce Willis, Jack Nicholson and Sylvester Stallone for mindless action films.

"I want to make a $5 million picture about human beings talking to one another and all I hear is, 'Get out of here and go to television,' " Dennehy said during an interview to promote his new movie.

Dennehy, 50, now lives in New Mexico. His Los Angeles visit was designed to promote the movie "F-X 2: The Deadly Art of Illusion," which opens Friday.

"One of the reasons I live in Santa Fe is that if I were living here and having this conversation five times a day, I would lose my mind. I have retired from the bedlam," said Dennehy.

Until he remarried two years ago, Dennehy lived in Los Angeles and shared a house with his actor-friend Michael Talbott, who played Detective Switek on the old "Miami Vice" series.

Streaking Red Sox get by Texas

Rich Gossage walks in go-ahead run as Boston wins for eighth time in last 10 games.

Boston shortstop Luis Rivera avoids the slide of Texas Ranger Brian Downing. Rivera's throw to first completed a first-inning double play.

Associated Press

BOSTON — Rich Gossage walked Jack Clark with the bases loaded to force in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and Mike Greenwell followed with a two-run double Thursday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 8-4.

Boston, which won for the eighth time in 10 games, trailed 4-0 after three innings and 4-3 in the seventh.

Luis Rivera doubled off Scott Chiamparino to open the seventh and reliever Mike Jeffcoat (1-1) came in and threw a wild pitch. Jeffcoat walked Wade Boggs and Jody Reed singled home the tying run off Gossage.

Gossage walked Ellis Burks and Clark to give Boston a 5-4 lead. Greenwell then doubled off John Barfield and Tom Brunansky hit a sacrifice fly for a four-run lead.

Dennis Lamp (2-1) relieved Tom Bolton in the sixth and pitched 1⅓ innings for the victory. Jeff Gray pitched one inning and Jeff Reardon finished.

Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in the second inning and Julio Franco homered in the third.

Boston, which won for the fifth time in six games, scored twice in the fourth on Greenwell's triple, Carlos Quintana's single, Franco's throwing error at second and Tony Pena's RBI single.

Tigers 3, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Cecil Fielder homered and Dan Petry combined with Paul Gibson on the shutout as the Detroit Tigers beat Minnesota for their eighth victory in nine games.

American

Fielder, who led the majors with 51 homers last year, hit his fourth home run of the season with one out in the fourth after Alan Trammell walked. Fielder, who led the majors with 51 homers last season, hadn't homered since April 28 against Toronto.

Petry (1-1) pitched only 1⅓ innings last Saturday because of back spasms. He allowed six hits before Gibson relieved with two outs and the bases loaded in the seventh. Gibson struck out Kirby Puckett to end the threat and finished with one-hit relief for his third save.

Jays 2, White Sox 0

TORONTO — David Wells allowed three hits in eight innings and Joe Carter drove in both runs with a homer and a single as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Chicago White Sox.

Wells (3-3) struck out a season-high eight and walked one before Duane Ward finished with perfect relief for his ninth save in 10 opportunities.

After Sammy Sosa singled in the second, Wells retired 14 consecutive batters before Robin Ventura's single in the seventh. Ozzie Guillen singled in the eighth for Chicago's final hit.

Melido Perez (1-2) struck out 11 in 6⅔ innings, allowing both runs and six hits. The White Sox have lost six of their last eight games.

Funk takes Atlanta lead with 10-birdies

Associated Press

MARIETTA, Ga. — Fred Funk's bid for the PGA Tour's best round ever fell three shots shy, but his 10-under-par 62 Thursday secured the first-round lead in the Atlanta Classic.

He had good reason to think the 59 Al Geiberger shot in the second round of the 1977 Memphis Classic was within his grasp.

"I did think of 59," Funk said. "The way I was playing I thought I could do it."

Funk, golf coach at Maryland for eight years, birdied nine of 11 holes during one stretch while playing in a steady drizzle on the rain-soaked Atlanta Country Club course, a hilly, 7,018-yard layout.

It gave him a two-shot lead over Tom Kite, who matched Funk's 10 birdies, but also had two bogeys.

"Somebody shot 62," said Ray Floyd, 48, who had a 68. "I'm in the wrong league. Can't wait for those Seniors."

Funk said he began thinking about the record after he rolled in a 3-foot birdie putt on No. 4, his 13th hole of the round.

"I had just birdied the third hole in a row," he said.

Funk said he was thinking, "If I can birdie four of the last five holes I could do something. I just never got it close again."

It matched the lowest round on the Tour this year. Scott Simpson had a first-round 62 in the Hawaiian Open, but finished tied for 31st place.

Funk, who will be 35 next month, finished third twice in his first two years — at Chattanooga last year and at Hattiesburg in 1989.

"When the greens are this soft, you have to attack the golf course," Kite said. "I really didn't do much wrong out there today."

Kite said Funk's 62 "kind of set the tone for how you're going to play."

Perry Arthur and Mike Standly were another shot back at 65 and Japan's Ricky Kawagishi and Marco Dawson shot 66.

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Ricky Jordan homered twice, giving him three home runs and eight RBIs in two days, as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 9-6 Thursday.

Fred McGriff hit a pair of two-run homers for the Padres, giving him seven this season. He extended his hitting streak to 14 games, matching Brett Butler of the Los Angeles Dodgers for the major league high.

Terry Mulholland (4-2) allowed seven hits in eight innings and equaled his career-high with eight strikeouts. Mitch Williams finished for his seventh save.

Derek Lilliquist (0-2) gave up eight hits and seven runs in 3⅔ innings but just two runs were earned.

National

Jordan, who hit a grand slam in San Diego's 5-2 victory Wednesday night, hit leadoff homers in the second and seventh innings and added a two-run single in the five-run fourth.

Jordan's first homer was off Lilliquist and the second was off John Costello. Jordan, who has four homers, is 14-for-29 with 13 RBIs in his last eight games.

Jordan's first homer and Von Hayes' RBI double gave Philadelphia a 2-0 lead in the second.

Penguins grab series lead on Boston's ice

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Pittsburgh Penguins moved a win away from the first Stanley Cup finals berth in their 24-year history Thursday night, getting two goals and three assists from Kevin Stevens in a 7-2 rout of the Boston Bruins.

Pittsburgh used its superior speed and scoring punch to win its third consecutive game after losing the first two and can clinch the best-of-7 Wales Conference final at home Saturday night in Game 6.

Boston, appearing tired in its 18th game in 37 days, is in jeopardy of missing the finals for the second time in four seasons. It lost to Edmonton both times it reached the championship series.

After Boston's Don Sweeney scored 40 seconds into the game, the Penguins got seven of the next eight goals.

Lemieux had a goal and three assists and took over the NHL playoff scoring lead with 29 points from teammate Mark Recchi.

BUSINESS & MARKETS

Markets/8C

Prices climb

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose Thursday to their highest level since the Persian Gulf War and gasoline futures made an even bigger move up amid news of several refinery fires, but the market eased back before the close.

Crude oil pushed above $22 per barrel for the first time since Feb. 14, and unleaded gasoline futures were up by more than 2 cents a gallon, before the rally at the New York Mercantile Exchange lost some of its steam during the afternoon.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in June finished at $21.93 per barrel, up 15 cents.

Prices began moving higher late Wednesday on reports of unrelated refinery fires, and the market gained further momentum from the opening on Thursday. The refineries experiencing troubles were in Texas, Louisiana, New Jersey and Saudi Arabia, but the overall extent of any supply disruptions remained unclear.

Traders said the market may have overreacted, as futures markets often do, but the surge was still enough to lift prices past levels they had not been able to surpass for weeks.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $1.352, up .5 cent per 1,000 cubic feet.

New Chili's

DALLAS (AP) — Stockholders of Chili's Inc. changed the name of the company Thursday to Brinker International Inc., reflecting a broader identity and reputation of its chairman, entrepreneur Norman Brinker.

The approximately 240 Chili's Grill & Bar restaurants, foundation of the company, remain the same.

But the company is developing two other restaurants — Regas Grill and Romano's Macaroni Grill — and will soon expand outside of the United States, said Ron McDougall, president and chief operating officer.

Dollar mixed

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 138.23 Japanese yen from 137.88 yen on Wednesday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7045 from $1.7180 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Wednesday's late rates, included: 1.7325 German marks, up from 1.7312; 1.4629 Swiss francs, down from 1.4630; 5.8585 French francs, unchanged.

US. gasoline supply below normal levels

■ Government says recession has quenched nation's thirst for fuel.

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost a month has passed since the oil industry reported that America's gasoline supply had dipped below the mark considered to be the minimum operating level, and it hasn't bounced back yet.

But don't let that conjure up visions of motorist gas lines this summer, even though the peak driving season starts in a few weeks. The recession has eased the nation's thirst for fuel.

The government says that in normal times, the United States needs a minimum of 205 million barrels of gasoline on hand, or localized shortages can develop. The American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry trade group, has reported gasoline inventories below that level for each of the past four weeks, with the latest report on Tuesday night showing 204.3 million barrels.

Analysts see no reason to panic, however, because demand is off by about 3 percent.

"If demand were at a normal level and we were looking at that figure, then, yeah, you'd see a lot of sweating about it," said Calvin A. Kent, administrator of the Energy Information Administration, a statistical branch of the Department of Energy.

The government and the industry predict there will be plenty of fuel for the summer, though Kent said the low supply creates little margin for error.

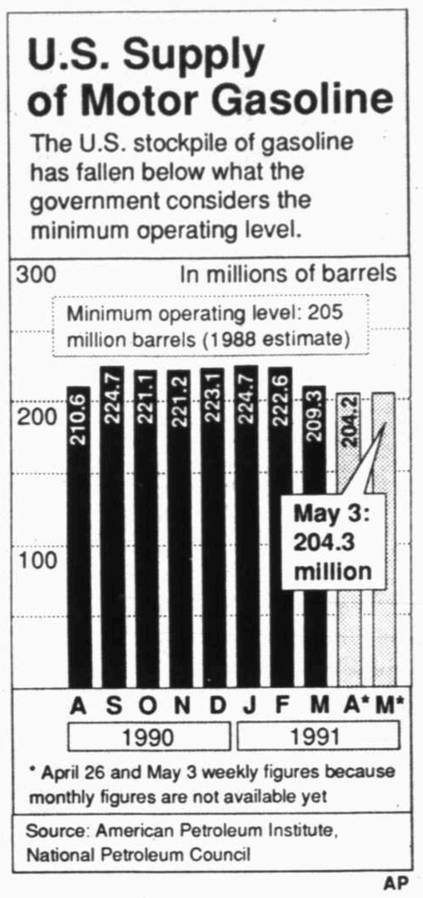

"We've been saying for about a month that things are going to get very tight," Kent said. "We should get through, but there could be problems."

It would take unexpectedly sharp cutoffs in supply or unexpectedly sharp increases in demand to create such troubles, he said.

Both domestic gasoline production and imports have been down, but for different reasons including fluctuations in oil prices caused by the Persian Gulf War, wartime demand for jet fuel, the cold winter in Europe, and refinery shutdowns.

Mike Doyle, editor of Computer Petroleum Corp., which follows fuel supplies and prices from St. Paul, Minn., said demand can't be measured directly, because oil companies won't reveal how much gasoline is pumped out of each service station.

Kent acknowledges it might be better to come up with a minimum operating level that could fluctuate and take into account more than just supply. The current level is an industry consensus devised by an advisory group to the secretary of energy.

Depositors protection ban risky, says official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forbidding protection of uninsured depositors in "too big to fail" bailouts of large banks would risk the financial equivalent of a nuclear meltdown, a senior banking regulator said Thursday.

"The only analogy I can think of is a meltdown at a nuclear reactor, like Chernobyl. It happens with such lightning speed that you cannot after the fact control it," said Federal Reserve Board member John LaWare.

LaWare, two other top regulators and a senior Treasury Department official warned against including a ban on such bailouts in comprehensive banking legislation moving through Congress.

A bill endorsed 34-1 earlier this week by the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions would, beginning in 1995, prohibit protection of deposits over the $100,000 per account insurance limit.

The regulators, appearing before the subcommittee on economic stabilization, agreed uninsured depositors should be protected only rarely. But they warned a total prohibition of too-big-to-fail rescues could, under the right circumstances, risk shattering confidence in the financial system and setting off contagious bank runs.

LaWare was joined by Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clarke and Treasury Undersecretary Robert R. Glauber.

The regulators said many large banks serve as correspondent banks, holding deposits and clearing checks for smaller institutions. Many also are major participants in the foreign exchange markets and are closely linked with financial markets.

Drop in jobless claims viewed as end to recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits declined significantly at the end of April, the government reported Thursday. Analysts saw the drop as a possible sign the worst of the recession is over.

"Good news is not the word for it. It's great news. It's confirmation of the belief that the end of the recession is not too far way," said Irwin Keilner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

The Labor Department said that for the week ending April 27, the number of people filing unemployment claims for the first time fell by 45,000, down to 455,000 from the previous week's half million mark.

"This is further evidence that the labor markets are improving," said Michael K. Evans, who heads an economic forecasting company in Washington. "It's another straw in the wind to support the view that the recession is over."

Thursday's encouraging news on jobless claims followed a report from last week showing the jobless rate falling in

Plant closing won't hurt citrus growers, spokesman says

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — The loss of one of two juice plants in the Lower Rio Grande Valley won't hurt Texas citrus growers, an industry spokesman said.

Ray Prewett, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual said he wasn't surprised at Wednesday's announcement by Sundor Brands Inc. that it will close its Texsun juice facility in Weslaco.

Only one juice plant remains in the Valley, the Texas Citrus Exchange plant in Mission.

Growers have been emphasizing the more profitable fresh fruit market since a devastating 1983 freeze cut the Texas citrus industry in half, Prewett said.

Before 1983, about 45 percent of Lower Rio Grande Valley citrus was sold to juice plants. By 1989, before another freeze slammed the industry, only about 20 percent of the Valley oranges and grapefruit were sold for juice.

Sundor said a reduction in the long-term availability of citrus in the area since the 1983 and 1989 freezes led to the Texsun closing. The company also cited a need to remain competitive and the South Texas plant's distance from key markets.

Sundor, a Procter & Gamble Co. subsidiary with headquarters in Mount Dora, Fla., purchased the plant in 1987. It got its start as a growers' cooperative more than 50 years ago, and at one point was owned by Pepsi Cola.

"I don't think this should be interpreted as a major reading that the citrus industry is in any worse shape than we thought it was," said Prewett, who is based in McAllen.

There was almost no Texas citrus marketed last year because of the damage the 1989 freeze caused to the fragile trees, and a minimal crop is expected this fall. The freeze killed thousands of trees and damaged the fruit-bearing

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Fireman's savings will mean nice nest egg

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am a 33-year-old fireman. I am married and do not have children. I am required to be in the pension plan, to which I contribute about $100 each two-week pay period. I'm also involved in a deferred compensation plans at work, to which I contribute $45 to a no-load mutual fund with growth objectives and $25 to a low-load fund (3 percent commission) growth fund each pay period. And I put $50 into Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, every two weeks.

Doyle

Not including the pension, these investments amount to about 10 percent of my gross pay. How am I doing? Should I change things around? Should I increase or decrease my investments in the deferred plans?

A. You're doing great — far better than most people in planning for retirement. By socking away as much as you're doing, you should have a very nice nest egg after you have answered your last fire call. Between your pension and your investments, your senior years are certain to be more than comfortable.

You're especially wise to take advantage of the deferred compensation plans, where your money will remain sheltered from income tax until you withdraw it. Such plans are too good to pass up, for people who can afford to contribute.

Although you don't say so, I assume you are putting the limit allowed into the deferred compensation plans. If not, increase those contributions to the maximum. As the expression goes, "Max it."

The two mutual funds you named have excellent records. By investing in stocks with past records and/or future potential of growing in value, they have produced big gains in value of the fund shares.

Surely, you are aware that growth funds have their ups and downs. As has happened in the past, there will be future times when their share values will drop. Over the long run, however, they are well suited for investors, especially those whose retirement time is some years into the future.

Also, by putting the same amount of money into each fund at fixed intervals, you are dollar cost averaging. As a result, you buy fewer shares when prices are high, more shares when prices are low, a better than average cost on all your shares — and no ulcers from trying to outguess the stock market.

Dollar cost averaging remains the most sensible investment method for most people.

Q. I'm 28 and my husband is 32. We are making monthly investments in two mutual funds — $50 in one and $25 in the other. We also have approximately $15,000 in savings and are increasing that by at least $500 monthly.

Where would you advise us to invest our savings with minimum risk? And what is your opinion of our mutual funds?

A. For young folks such as you, my advice is to continue steady investing in mutual funds. Although the risk is greater than "minimum," it is not outlandish. In order to reap high financial rewards, you have to take on some risk. Over the years ahead, you should do well as a result of periodic investment in mutual funds.

Your two funds have reasonably good investment records. But they both are "load" funds, with 8.5 percent commissions taken out every time you invest. That means only 91.5 percent of your money goes to work for you in the purchase of fund shares.

Take a look at no-load funds by sending $2 to the 100 Percent No-Load Mutual Fund Council, 1501 Broadway, Suite 312, New York, NY 10036 for a copy of that organization's directory. All the members are true no-load funds, with no commission when shares are purchased, no rear-end load in redemption fee or contingent deferred sales charge when shares are cashed and no 12b-1 plan constantly eroding the value of fund shares.

Q. My broker said, "In the long run, mutual funds with front-end loads are cheaper than both funds with back-end loads and no-load funds." I disagreed, especially in the case of no-load funds without 12b-1 plans. Who is right?

A. You are, of course. Just open the prospectus of any mutual fund and you will find the costs of investing in and holding that fund's shares on Pages 2 and 3, where the Securities and Exchange insists they appear in tabular form. Compare any number of load and no-load funds. You will win your argument.

Funds with 12b-1 plans are not true no-load funds. Fees from those plans pay "distribution costs," including commissions — also known as loads.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 13.41 points on Wednesday, rose 24.15 points to 2,955.05 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 945 up, 532 down and 547 unchanged.

Analysts said investors were growing a little more optimistic about the interest-rate outlook as the Treasury neared completion of a huge three-day offering of notes and bonds.

The first part of the auction, on Tuesday, went off sluggishly, but the pace picked up on Wednesday.

Traders seemed to be hoping for some fresh favorable news on Friday, when the government reports the producer price index of finished goods for April.

If the data provide signs that inflationary pressures are being subdued, many observers believe long-term interest rates will have further room to decline.

Among actively traded blue chips, DuPont rose 1¼ to 43⅛; Boeing ⅝ to 47¾; Schering-Plough 1¾ to 53⅜; Philip Morris ¾ to 68½, and American Express ¼ to 24½.

Wal-Mart Stores climbed 1¼ to 41¼. The company reported earnings for its fiscal first quarter ended April 30 of 27 cents a share, against 22 cents in the corresponding period last year.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

NBC's business channel allowed to buy cable rival

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's Consumer News and Business Channel sweetened its buyout offer and got the nod Thursday from a federal bankruptcy court judge in a bid to acquire its main cable television rival, Financial News Network.

The CNBC offer was worth about $154.3 million.

But the competing bidder, a partnership of Dow Jones & Co. and Westinghouse Broadcasting Corp., refused to surrender.

It called the proposed takeover anticompetitive, vowed to appeal the judge's ruling and expressed confidence its own bid would prevail.

The decision by Judge Francis G. Conrad of U.S. Bankruptcy Court marked the latest but probably not the last chapter in money-losing FNN's six-month efforts to raise cash through asset sales to repay a staggering debt load.

The Dow Jones-Westinghouse partnership and attorneys general of Illinois and Pennsylvania already have filed antitrust suits against a CNBC-FNN deal. CNBC's owner, National Broadcasting Co., plans to merge the networks.

Despite its low audience ratings, FNN inspired a fierce bidding contest between media powerhouses. The National Broadcasting Co. owns the NBC television network, Dow Jones publishes The Wall Street Journal and Westinghouse has experience in cable programming and cable ad sales.

The judge, who has been overseeing FNN's affairs since its parent filed for bankruptcy protection March 1, made his choice between the bids during a telephone conference call with the bidders and creditors Thursday morning.

CNBC raised its offer to $145 million from $140 million and promised more money if the new operation exceeds certain revenue targets over the next three years. It also agreed to assume liabilities FNN valued at $9.3 million.

The Dow-Westinghouse group stuck with its offer made Tuesday of $167.1 million, including $125 million in cash and $9.3 million in assumed liabilities. It also included $32.8 million the partnership pledged to pay if revenue targets were met through 1994.

If the targets were not met, the partnership guaranteed it would make an additional payment of no less than $10 million at the end of 1995.

On Wednesday, the investment banker Dillon Read & Co. told the court it was willing to pay $17 million to FNN at the closing for the rights to some of the revenue sharing pledge in the Dow Jones-Westinghouse offer.

That meant that the potential immediate cash value of the Dow Jones-Westinghouse bid was about $150 million, or slightly more than the immediate cash offer of $145 million from CNBC.

But FNN is obligated under a previous agreement with CNBC to pay CNBC's legal fees and a break-up penalty if it accepted a bid from anyone else. Those costs could reach $9 million, and in FNN's view would reduce the value of the Dow-Westinghouse offer.

The Dow partnership said it was disappointed by the ruling and expects that it will be reversed on appeal.

"We believe our bid was stronger" because it raised no antitrust questions, said Peter Skinner, senior vice president at Dow Jones.

The partnership already has filed an antitrust challenge to the possible selection of CNBC as the buyer of FNN, saying it would diminish competition in the delivery of business and financial news on cable TV.

"It's not over yet," said Donald Mitzner, president of Westinghouse's Group W Satellite Communications division.

NBC contends its plans to merge CNBC and FNN are not anticompetitive because the new network still would be relatively small and because other networks provide business and financial news.

FNN's parent, Financial News Network Inc., ran into serious financial problems that drove it to seek protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws on March 1.

CBS chief tells stockholders he made baseball decision

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Chairman Laurence A. Tisch is taking responsibility for the big-ticket baseball deal that helped push CBS into the red in late 1990.

"I made that decision," Tisch told stockholders Wednesday at CBS' annual meeting. "This company will survive that decision — on a profitable basis."

CBS agreed to pay $1.06 billion over four years, starting in 1990, for coverage of major league baseball, including the World Series.

Tisch

"In the long run, maybe it was a mistake, but it wasn't a disaster," said Tisch, who also is the company's president and chief executive officer.

In 1990, CBS had income of $91.5 million from continuing operations, or $3.55 a share, compared with $297.1 million, or $11.54 per share, in 1989, Tisch said.

"This decline in earnings was mainly the result of the company's reported loss of $6.81 per share in 1990's fourth quarter, which included an after-tax loss of $55 million (from) coverage of major league baseball," he said.

In addition, CBS provided for future losses of $115 million over the remaining term of the contract, he said.

"We entered the baseball contract on the premise that we would lose money," Tisch told stockholders.

While the network lost close to $100 million in the first year of the contract, its owned-and-operated stations reaped $20 million, for a net loss of $75 million to $80 million.

"Was it a mistake? Certainly. Would we do it again at this level? Absolutely not," Tisch said.

Even so, he said, CBS needed something to help it break out of its third-place standing.

Baseball is part of a $3.5 billion sports package CBS launched in 1990. The network paid $1.06 billion for four years of pro football, including the 1992 Super Bowl, and $1 billion over seven years to cover the NCAA basketball tournament.

BANKS: Total ban could set off runs on banks

(From 7C)

A failure of such a bank, particularly in a time of general economic stress, could be very dangerous, they said.

"It runs the risk of bringing down other banks, corporations, disrupting markets, bringing down investment banks along with it," LaWare said. "That's the kind of situation in which we have to be able to intervene to protect the innocent people that have nothing to do with the situation that created the collapse, but who are sucked into the maelstrom."

Rep. Peter Hoagland, D-Neb., tried to offer an amendment to the bill approved by the financial institutions panel, but he withdrew it after several subcommittee members complained it was unfair to offer large banks more protection than small banks.

Glauber said the bill, as passed by the subcommittee, is too restrictive and indicated the administration would seek an amendment when it's considered by the full banking committee next month.

Too-big-to-fail is one of the politically touchiest issues in banking reform. Voters are skeptical of such bailouts because they protect wealthy people and businesses. Small banks want either the policy eliminated or equal protection extended to all banks.

There also is the explosive question of who pays for too-big-to-fail.

The Treasury Department has proposed the FDIC fund, financed by insurance premiums from banks, continue to pay the extra cost even though it would move the decision-making authority on which banks qualify to the Treasury and Federal Reserve.

Seidman and banking lobbyists contend the FDIC should pay only if the FDIC retains the decision-making power. Otherwise, taxpayers should pay the added cost, they say.

Hoagland's amendment would have the Federal Reserve pay, but that hurts taxpayers eventually because any loss to the Federal Reserve would reduce the revenue the central bank forwards annually to the Treasury.

JOBLESS: Analysts say drop in claims 'great news'

(From 7C)

Last month, the nation's unemployment rate dropped to 6.6 percent, down from March's rate of 6.8 percent.

Some analysts dismissed April's unemployment report as a statistical fluke, but others said it might mean that the nation's economy, mired in recession since July, was bottoming out.

The jobless claims report can be extremely volatile from week to week, but Evans noted that the four-week moving average of jobless claims — which many analysts calculate themselves and consider a more reliable barometer — had fallen as well.

For the four weeks ending April 27, the average weekly jobless claims filings was 476,000, Evans said, down from the 511,000 average for the similar four-week period in March.

"If it can get down to 400,000 by the end of May, there won't be any doubters left," Evans said of those who are still skeptical the economy can pull out of the recession by midyear.

Though the number of people filing for unemployment assistance fell in the last week of April, it is still far above the level of claims for last year. For the same week in 1990, there were 361,000 new jobless claims, the Labor Department said.

Samuel Kahan, an economist at Fuji Securities, cautioned against making too much of the jobless claims report. He noted that analysts were cheered by back-to-back declines in jobless claims in mid-March, only to see those claims jump by 47,000 a week later.

"For those with short memories, we had a bit of a flip-flop in March, and then claims moved right back up. You want to hold off for two or three weeks before drawing too many conclusions," Kahan said.

branches of others. It can take four years or longer for newly planted trees to mature enough to produce marketable harvests.

Texas citrus acreage dropped from 69,000 in 1983 to about 30,000 in 1989 and about 15,000 acres today. Prewett said growers, with reduced acreage, are focusing on producing attractive fruit that can be sold fresh.

Fresh fruit usually brings at least twice as much money to the growers as fruit sold to be squeezed into juice. Even with less than half the acreage that they had in 1982, when the crop was valued at more than $100 million, Texas growers by 1988 had a crop worth about $80 million.

BankAmerica Corp. acquires Houston area bank

DALLAS (AP) — BankAmerica Corp., the nation's second-largest bank company, entered Texas Thursday with the acquisition of a small Houston area bank.

The San Francisco banking giant acquired deposits of Village Green National Bank of Jersey Village, one of four banks that failed in Texas Thursday.

The acquisition allows BankAmerica to obtain a national charter that will permit it to open branches in the state, spokeswoman Betty Riess said.

"We're eager to serve the Texas market. We're always looking at potential business opportunities," she said while declining comment on specific plans.

The Village Green bank will reopen Friday as Bank of America Texas N.A., broadening the company's 1,300-branch system to nine states.

The company has an office of its world banking group in Houston and its data processing subsidiary has facilities in Dallas and Bellaire, Ms. Riess said. BankAmerica earned $1.1 billion last year.

The Village Green bank had deposits totaling $27.7 million in 3,200 accounts. BankAmerica is paying $1.8 million to receive the deposits and $12.8 million of about $30 million in assets.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. transferred the bank's insured deposits because it was unable to quantify all its assets. Depositors who exceeded the $100,000 insurance limit will share with other creditors the FDIC proceeds from the sale of assets.

Thursday's four bank failures in Texas brought the number so far this year to 16.

The largest failure Thursday was Texas Bank and Trust of Temple, which had $48.4 million in assets. The bank's sole office will reopen Friday as a branch of the Peoples National Bank of Belton.

The Belton bank will assume about $48 million in 6,700 deposit accounts and about $38 million in assets. The FDIC is assisting the transaction with a $9.9 million advance and retention of assts with a book value of $10.4 million.

In South Texas, the First National Bank of Poth was assumed by the Bank of Floresville. The Poth bank had $19 million in 2,500 deposit accounts and assets of $19.3 million. The FDIC will advance about $8 million to the Floresville bank and retain assets with a book value of $8.4 million.

In East Texas, Chireno State Bank in Chireno was assumed by the First State Bank of Gladewater. The failed bank had assets of $12.8 million.

Albuquerque tram marks anniversary

By Pete Herrera

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It remains an engineering marvel that during 2½ decades has logged the equivalent of six trips to the moon over some of the more picturesque and precarious scenery in New Mexico.

The Sandia Peak Tramway, which its owners say is the world's largest continuous cable aerial tram at 2.7 miles, is 25 years old this month.

Since its opening on May 7, 1966, it has carried 4.5 million skiers, tourists and general sightseers from its base on the foothills of Albuquerque's eastside to the top of 10,378-foot Sandia Peak.

Along the route, passengers catch a view of some 11,000 square miles of New Mexico while gliding over terrain that includes granite rock faces eroded into spires, cliffs and pinnacles and a mixture of pine, fir and spruce forest that is home to eagles, bighorn sheep, mule deer, brown and black bears and a variety of other animal life.

Considered one of the top attractions in tourist-conscious New Mexico, the tram's two passenger cars have traveled an estimated 1,496,340 miles since 1966.

The tram is a testimonial to the enterprising efforts of Robert Nordhaus and the late Ben Abruzzo, who in 1960 became partners in the Sandia Peak Ski and Tram Company.

Along the route, passengers catch a view of some 11,000 square miles of New Mexico while gliding over terrain that includes granite rock faces eroded into spires, cliffs and pinnacles and a mixture of pine, fir and spruce forest that is home to eagles, bighorn sheep, mule deer, brown and black bears and a variety of other animal life.

Nordhaus had led development of the La Madera Ski area on the east side of the Sandia Mountains in 1937 and later teamed with Abruzzo to form the present day Sandia Peak Ski area.

During a 1955 skiing vacation to Europe and a subsequent 1960 summer trip, Nordhaus observed trams operating in Germany, Switzerland, Austria and France. He and Abruzzo decided such a tram could be built on the west face of the Sandias.

The first hurdle was financing.

"There was a great deal of skepticism, particularly among the banking community," says Nordhaus, 81, a retired Albuquerque attorney.

To finance much of the project, Abruzzo, who later became internationally known for his ballooning exploits, and Nordhaus sold shares in the tram. At $100 per share, Abruzzo and Nordhaus were able to raise more than $1 million in local capital.

The total cost of the project was a modern-day bargain at $2.1 million, including $1.5 million for the tram and $300,000 for a restaurant at the summit.

The design work was done by Bell Engineering of Lucerne, Switzerland. The company, which had built some 50 trams in Europe, also provided engineering assistance to the Albuquerque construction firm of Martin & Luther.

Key factors in the project was construction of the two towers from which the tram's cables are suspended. Tower One, located at an elevation of 7,010 feet, is 232 feet tall. Tower Two, built at an elevation of 8,750 feet and 80 feet tall, stands on the edge of a 900-foot deep canyon that separates it from the summit.

The canyon posed a major obstacle.

"We sent Bell a profile and they told us they could not build the long span that we had between Tower Two and the top. They said the stress on the upper terminal would be too much. They wanted to put intermediate towers above Tower Two, but that would have cost a fortune," Nordhaus said. "We told them the two towers was the only way to go and we finally convinced them."

A helicopter was used to transport equipment and men for the construction of Tower Two. A road was built to Tower One, with equipment transported by bulldozer.

"They had to dig down 40 feet into the granite to anchor Tower Two with steel rods," says Nordhaus. "To drill they needed a compressor, but the compressor was too heavy for the helicopter, so they piped air up from the bottom through an aluminum pipe."

Nordhaus said three million pounds of concrete were used to anchor the four 50-ton cables to the upper terminal. To stretch the cables from the base to the top, construction crews imported a winch from Mississippi that was used to haul transmission lines across the Mississippi River.

Crews also had to build scaffolds along the cable route to prevent the cables from being damaged by the terrain.

"If they had gotten scratched on the rocks, we would have been out of business. It would have taken six months to get new ones," Nordhaus said.

Since its opening, the tram has had few mishaps. Forty people were stranded overnight in the two cars when the main haul cable slipped out of slack carriers during a thunderstorm in June 1973, and 49 passengers also spent a night in the tram cars in September 1982 when severe winds forced the tram to stop.

Solar-powered railway proposed for Yosemite

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A visionary plan to solve Yosemite National Park's ever-worsening traffic problem with a solar-powered railroad system has captured the fancy of friends of Yosemite.

It may be impractical, — it would cost billions — but it's worth studying because the vehicular crush afflicting Yosemite Valley and its approaches is intolerable.

San Francisco transportation designer Christopher Swan's "Yosemite Anew" project would service Yosemite visitors via 280 miles of railroad track accessible from 10 stations.

What Swan has in mind is utilizing solar technology to power a standard gauge railroad using conventional equipment bringing visitors to Yosemite from Merced to El Portal, with branch lines to various points in the park.

Swan said the technology "has been demonstrated by Caltrans in buses, in the space shuttle and by the Soviet Union in an SST (airplane) powered by hydrogen," generated by solar sources.

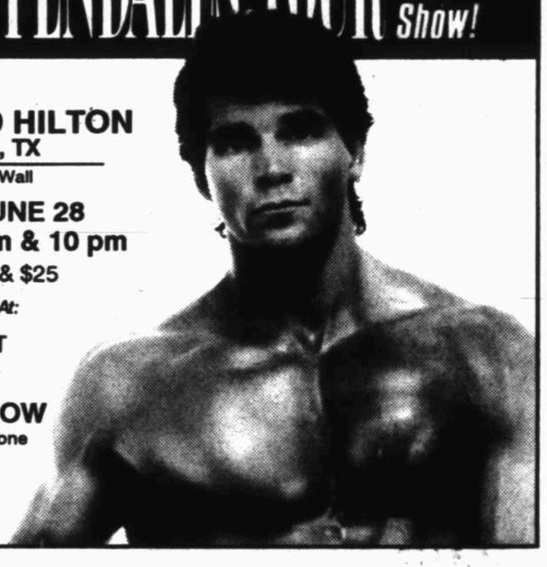

He figures that the railroad would carry about 7 million people a year to and from the park, generate revenue of $100 million a year and cost about $3.2 billion. Half buried and fully landscaped, it would replace Highway 140 from Merced to El Portal.

Most of the 3.4 million people who come to Yosemite annually visit the floor of the 7-mile-long, 1-mile-wide valley. Visitor services fill up on some summer weekends and the park entrances are shut.

"I don't know if (Swan's plan) is workable, but it's something we need to think about," said Yosemite activist Dean Malley of the Sierra Club. "If we just have quotas based on cars, we're screwing the American public and the rest of the world out of access to the park. ... We need some other way to get people into the park."

The valley was served from 1906 until 1945 by the Yosemite Valley Railroad, which ran the 70 miles from Merced to El Portal, mostly along the north bank of the Merced River. The track was torn up after the opening of all-weather Highway 140.

Man willing to gamble away Four Deuces

■ Pat Kirkwood, son of legendary Fort Worth gambler "Pappy" Kirkwood, is selling his late father's gambling den and will even flip for it, double or nothing.

By Mike Cochran

FORT WORTH (AP) — It's snake eyes for the Four Deuces.

The Jacksboro Highway gambling den, a symbol of Cowtown's brazen and bawdy past, is up for sale. Or if a buyer prefers, owner Pat Kirkwood will flip for it, double or nothing.

No kidding.

"If anyone's interested, I'll cut the cards, shoot dice or flip a coin," says Kirkwood, 62, son of the late and legendary Fort Worth gambler W.C. "Pappy" Kirkwood.

As a writer once said, Pat himself is a "younger, taller, wilder version of Pappy: deep-voiced, bearded, partial to automatic pistols, and when he laughs he breaks in to a teeth-gritting, devilish howl."

A bulls-eye, that.

"Win or lose," grins the younger Kirkwood, "it's an opportunity for someone to become a legend in his own mind."

KIRKWOOD, OBVIOUSLY a chip off the old gambling block, offered the property for sale Saturday in a classified ad in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Headlined "Double or Nothing," it said:

"Okay, high rollers, let's agree on a price and flip double or nothing for the Four Deuces at 2222 Jacksboro Highway. 3 historical acres. Flexible for fast deal! Call Pat Kirkwood..."

The property includes a Spanish Colonial-style home and an apartment complex built on a hillside overlooking U.S. 199, a wondrously wicked strip of neon known as Thunder Road.

Both buildings housed gambling operations at different times, but haven't seen a game for years. The property was tied up in estate proceedings since his father's death, but those are cleared now, Kirkwood said, and he wants to sell.

Although the white stone, castle-like main house is a bit long in the tooth, Kirkwood says the three-acre site is worth between $200,000 and $300,000.

DURING ITS champagne days in the '40s and '50s, the Four Deuces might see that much money change hands in a single night. And Kirkwood says it often did.

"Everybody in this part of the world knew the Four Deuces was a gambling joint. Including the cops."

Thanks to Pappy Kirkwood's largesse with hams, turkeys, whiskey and steaks, law enforcement officers rarely harassed the Four Deuces, Kirkwood laughs.

"The raids were mostly symbolic," he says.

Then again, the action at 2222 Jacksboro Highway was easily a cut above that of most illegal gambling dens, and not just because of the high stakes.

"The key was Pop's integrity," explains Kirkwood, a Granbury real estate analyst. "Everyone trusted him and everyone liked him. You couldn't come in the place if you were on a salary. It was Pappy's Law: 'Only people who could afford to lose.'"

Kirkwood recalls his father saying: "I don't want any wives bellyaching at me."

PAPPY'S CLIENTELE included Gene Autry, then a widely known western actor; Dick Kleberg, owner of the King Ranch; and Mrs. Amon Carter Sr., wife of the late newspaper publisher.

"Amon himself wasn't a gambler," Kirkwood recalls, "but Mrs. Carter and her lady friends came to the Four Deuces after church on Sunday to play roulette. Those are the worst odds on the board, and it was hard for them to win. So the dealers would overpay them when they did win."

Why?

"Do you think Pop wanted Mrs. Amon Carter to leave a loser?"

Once a year, Kirkwood says, the late U.S. House Speaker Sam Rayburn came to the Four Deuces, not to gamble but to drink.

"Pop would close the place and they'd drink Jack Daniels and eat steaks and talk all night. He was a house guest. So was Frank Buck, the 'bring 'em back alive' guy. He never gambled either."

AP Laserphoto

Pat Kirkwood stands outside the Spanish Colonial-style home that was once a gambling den owned by his late father, W.C. "Pappy" Kirkwood, in the mid-1940s and '50s. Kirkwood has put the three-acre site in Fort Worth, up for sale. His advertisement reads "Okay, high rollers, lets' agree on a price and flip double or nothing for the Four Deuces."

"POP NEVER charged for food or drinks and he served the finest New York strip sirloins in the world. He had them flown in from New York in wooden barrels. They were super aged prime beef and we'd cut 'em in the kitchen, two inches thick and about a foot long."

Kirkwood suggested once that such cuts seemed a mite generous.

"When you give something away," Pappy said, "it has to be the very best."

Not all of Pappy Kirkwood's friends were VIPs. He was equally comfortable with the late, great gangsters who roosted along the Jacksboro Highway during its heyday.

"Fifteen of the 17 hoodlums who died in the hoodlum wars were my breakfast companions," Kirkwood remembers. "Pop would go hunting with them and eat with them but he wouldn't let them in the club."

Pappy hired no-nonsense security guards, or yard men, to keep out the riff raff, which they did, sometimes to a fault.

A former Fort Worth fire chief showed up quite drunk one night and was denied entrance. Protesting, he pulled a knife on two guards, one of whom conked him with a bar stool.

UNKNOWN TO Pappy, they loaded the unconscious fire official in his car, shoved it down the hill and called police to report an "accident."

Pappy Kirkwood was not altogether amused.

"I think," he grumbled, "we could have handled it a little better than that."

Pat tells of the night a high roller showed up in a new 1946 Cadillac, "busted the joint" and left with Pappy owing him some $100,000, which he promised to pay the next day. The guy showed up bright and early, and a runner was sent to the bank.

"Pop won back all his money, all the cash the guy had in his pocket and all the credits he'd given him. I drove the guy down to his hotel and dropped him off, then drove his new Caddy back to the club.

SHORTLY BEFORE his death in 1983, at age 93, Pappy sat down for a rare interview with the old Fort Worth Tribune. Among his observations and revelations:

■ "I was born in Mississippi, so I guess that makes me a Mississippi gambler."

■ "I got in the oil business and made a lot of money and then went broke. Nobody would feed me but the gamblers."

■ "A professional gambler sleeps all day and prowls all night. He opens a joint and starts calling people to tell 'em he's playing."

■ "I knew I was breaking the law but ... I didn't think it was criminal, because too many good people played. It was like bootlegging ..."

■ "I knew and associated with all that bunch of thugs that ran up and down this highway. They were all outlaws, hijackers and everything else. They finally exterminated themselves by killing one another off."

PAPPY'S MOST serious brush with the law came during a raid in late 1959 on a gambling operation he and some cronies were running in nearby Arlington. He eventually paid $6,000 in fines and received a suspended four-year sentence.

"I was Pappy's friend all during that time," said former District Attorney Doug Crouch, who prosecuted the case. "He was really a fine guy."

Recalling that episode, and the two undercover agents that nailed him, Pappy said: "They caught us with the table up, going. Two stool pigeons just threw their badges on the table and pulled their guns."

Although unrelated, the arrest crippled his action at the Four Deuces, Pappy said. But it could have been worse.

"They never did lock me up. I had some whiskey in my car and we all sat outside and got drunk."

Says Pat:

"Pop was unique, and so was the Four Deuces. And I think he would have liked my double-or-nothing deal. After all, he built the joint with gambling money."

Society re-enacts Holmes' 'rebirth'

MEIRINGEN, Switzerland (AP) — A century after fictitious English sleuth Sherlock Holmes and his archenemy, Professor Moriarty, fought to the death, latter-day sleuths gathered near this Alpine town to re-enact the drama.

It was at Reichenbach Falls on May 4, 1891, that Holmes, the master of observation and reason, struggled with Moriarty, the "Napoleon of Crime," and plunged over the falls.

Last weekend, one century later, the town's youth brass band stood near the falls and solemnly performed a requiem for the beloved Victorian crime-buster who put Meiringen on the minds of generations of readers.

About 120 Dutch, American and Japanese members of the Sherlock Holmes Society ate a special lamentation meal, similar to the one novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle used to try to end the Holmes-Moriarty saga.

"Deep down in that dreadful cauldron of swirling water and seething foam will lie for all time the most dangerous criminal and the foremost champion of the law of their generation," the novelist wrote.

Holmes did not lie there for long. Following a deluge of protests from indignant readers, Conan Doyle used his writing powers to the fullest and summoned him back to life.

"Holmes is it really you?," cried Holmes' trusted companion, Dr. Watson, in the joyous re-enactment. "Can it indeed be that you are alive?"

"I am saved! I am saved!" triumphed the mock-hero, to the accompaniment of the Hallelujah Brass Band.

The re-creation of the famous scene marked the highlight in a week of festivities in Switzerland organized by the Sherlock Holmes Society, whose members spend much of their free time visiting scenes of crimes solved by the sleuth.

U.S. could have owned Greenland

■ Documents in the National Archives show that in 1946 U.S. proposed buying Greenland from Denmark or trading parts of Alaska for military sites on the Arctic island.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans might be buying much of their oil from Denmark if a plan to trade parts of Alaska for military sites in Greenland had been approved after World War II.

The proposed swap came to light in newly discovered documents in the National Archives which also showed that the United States proposed in 1946 to buy the entire Arctic island from the Danes.

Secretary of State James Byrnes said the offer "seemed to come as a shock" to Danish Foreign Minister Gustav Rasmussen, but Rasmussen "did not reject my suggestions flatly."

He said he gave Rasmussen a memo, and the Danish official agreed to study it. There is no known record of any response, but the sale was never consummated. The United States did obtain military bases in Greenland.

Byrnes made the offer to Rasmussen in New York on Dec. 14, 1946, according to a telegram from Byrnes to the U.S. Legation in Copenhagen.

After discussing other security arrangements for Greenland, the secretary of state said he told Rasmussen that perhaps an outright sale to the United States "would be the most clean-cut and satisfactory."

Discovery of the documents, which have been declassified since the early 1970s, was first reported Sunday by the Copenhagen newspaper Jyllands-Posten.

One alternative that was discussed was for the United States to trade land in the Point Barrow district of Alaska for those portions of Greenland that the United States considered of military value.

Under this plan, the Danes would have received the rights to any oil discovered in the district and would have had to sell the oil to the United States.

The richest oil strike in U.S. history was made in 1967 in the Prudhoe Bay area, 200 miles east of Point Barrow. The Point Barrow area now is part of the National Petroleum Reserve, which are oil fields reserved for national defense.

William C. Trimble, assistant chief of the State Department's division of northern European affairs, said in a memo in May 1946 that he did not think the Danes would look any more favorably on such a swap than on a sale.

Trimble suggested buying the 844,000-square mile island, more than five-sixths of which is covered with ice, for $100 million in gold.

He said only about 600 Danes resided in Greenland. In more recent years, there have been an estimated 10,000 Danes and 44,000 Inuit, or Eskimos.

Trimble said purchase of Greenland would give the United States "valuable bases from which to launch an air counteroffensive over the Arctic area in the event of attack."

The proposed purchase first cropped up in the files in November 1945, when Sen. Owen Brewster, R-Maine, said he considered it "a military necessity" and American military and naval authorities also favored it.

In April 1946, State Department official John Hickerson attended a meeting of the planning and strategy committee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and reported that "practically every member ... said that our real objective as regards to Greenland should be to acquire it by purchase from Denmark."

On June 20, 1946, Secretary of War Robert Patterson weighed in, writing to Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson that "it might be a good idea to take prompt action toward securing from Denmark (even to the extent of purchasing the entire island, if necessary) the military rights which have been outlined by the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Acheson replied that the State Department was aware of the importance of Greenland, but he didn't say anything about buying it.

Greenland was made an integral part of Denmark in 1951 after two centuries as a colony. In 1979, the island was granted home rule, but Denmark retains control of foreign and defense affairs.

The U.S. Air Force currently maintains two bases in Greenland, Thule and Sondestrom.

Workshops can help take bite out of taxes

Kiker

Farmers and ranchers can help take the bite out of high estate taxes by enrolling in one of two workshop programs scheduled in May by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Landowners have expressed concern for years about high taxes that erode their estates," says Dr. Wayne Hayenga, an extension service economist in management and an attorney.

These seminars are planned to help farmers and ranchers learn the newest methods for reducing taxable estates and passing operations to the next generation

Dates and locations for the meetings are: May 13-14, Holiday Inn South, Fort Worth; May 16-17, Radisson Hotel, 611 N. W. Loop 410, San Antonio.

Hayenga said recent tax law changes are having important impacts on farm and ranch estates. He said the best tax planning of the past may be the worst under the new law.

Each seminar will open with a discussion of estate taxes that includes deductions, expenses and tax rates. In-depth explanations will be presented on such basic estate planning devices as wills, bypass trusts, gifts, disclaimers and property titles.

Hayenga said relating estate plans to income tax savings can be of greater benefit than just a single plan.

A separate program segment will deal with treating beneficiaries fairly. This is significant when only some of the heirs want to operate a family farm, for example.

Another discussion will center on estate planning tools for agriculture and will deal with corporations, partnerships and selling part of the business to heirs.

Special estate planning tools for agriculture will be addressed during the final seminar day. These include special farm land valuation, deferred estate tax payment rules, life insurance, "flower" bonds and other property.

The estate planning process is a step toward reduced taxes, Hayenga said.

"This process should start when you plan to inherit substantial proprty, when you have an active and growing business, when there's still time to take tax-saving actions, when you have minor children, and when your children marry or divorce," he said.

For more seminar information, contact your local county extension service agent, Dr. Wayne Hayenga or Carol Sabo in Texas A&M's department of agricultural economics at (409) 845-2226.

To those people interested in horses: There will be a horse sale at the County Arena in gail, Texas, on Sunday, May 26, 1991 at 2 p.m. If you are interested in consigning horses to this sale they will accept the first 100 head consigned. Groups want food guidelines changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department put meat and dairy industry interests ahead of those of consumers in abandoning a new "pyramid" guideline to a healthy, balanced diet, a consumer advocate said recently.

"It seems that the Agriculture Department is really doing a throwback to the previous generation of listening more to the economic interests of cattlemen and dairymen than the health interests of consumers," said Ellen Haas of the national organization Public Voice.

Edward Madigan, the new secretary of agriculture, decided to abandon the pyramid graphic because it might be confusing to children as well as adults, said Sue Ann Ritchko, administrator of the department's human nutrition information service.

It was to have replaced the traditional "wheel" charts distributed to schools showing the "basic four" food groups: meats, fish and legumes; fruits and vegetables; grains; and dairy products.

The wheel gave the same space to each group, which consumer groups contend doesn't reflect nutritionists' conclusions that people need to have more grains and vegetables — and less fat — in their diets.

Sara Clarke, spokeswoman for the American Meat Association, said her organization supported new dietary guidelines announced by the government last year urging Americans to reduce fat intake.

"But we had some questions whether the pyramid is really a fair and accurate and clear portrayal of dietary guidelines," Clarke said.

There was concern the graphic "makes the dairy and meat food groups less significant than they really are," she said, adding that some industry groups "are making a lot of noise about this."

The meat association wrote to Madigan asking him to clarify USDA positions on the four food groups, Clarke said.

The pyramid would have had grains — bread, rice, pasta and cereals — occupying the largest area along its base, with recommendations of six to 11 servings daily.

On the next level is the fruit and vegetable groups. Above that were meat and dairy products, with recommendations of two-three servings daily for each group.

The pyramid was topped by fats, oils and sweets, with the advice they be used sparingly.

Haas said the pyramid design was a good nutritional tool that "reflects the consensus we eat too much meat."

She said the USDA's decision to abandon the graphic was a blatant example of bowing to industry pressure and showed the department "hasn't come out of the dark ages" of putting producer interests before those of consumers.

Yvonne Bronner of the American Dietetic Association agreed the pyramid "demonstrates exactly what we like," that people consume fewer calories from the meat and dairy group because of fat content.

But she said the industry had a valid point in arguing that the chart downgrades meat and dairy products by placing them just under fats, oils and sweets.

"We don't want people to think of food as good and bad," Bronner said.

The pyramid, she said, "doesn't show the importance of those two groups from the nutritional point of view."

Proposal for four new food groups

A nutrition watchdog group suggests changing the Agriculture Department's four food groups (meat, dairy, grains and fruits/vegetables) to eliminate foods that are excessive in fat or protein.

Grains: Bread, pasta, hot or cold cereal, corn, millet, barley; grains are rich in fiber and other complex carbohydrates. as well as protein. B vitamins and zinc

Vegetables: Provide essential nutrients, including vitamin C, beta carotene, riboflavin, iron, calcium, fiber; dark green, leafy vegetables providing such nutrients include broccoli, collards, mustard, turnip greens; those providing beta-carotene include carrots, winter squash, sweet potatoes, pumpkin

Legumes: Beans, peas, lentils; good for fiber, protein, iron calcium, zinc and B vitamins; group also includes chickpeas, baked and refried beans, soy milk, tofu, tempeh and texturized vegetable protein

Fruits: Rich in fiber, vitamin C, beta-carotene; fruits high in vitamin C include citrus fruits, melons, strawberries; choose whole fruit over fruit juices which don't contain as much healthy fiber

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocates pushed for a lifting of peanut import restrictions Wednesday and tried to make their point stick by flooding Congress with hundreds of peanut butter sandwiches.

Consumer Alert, a nonpartisan advocacy group, delivered the sandwiches to each House and Senate office to bolster its contention that bigger peanut imports are needed to alleviate domestic market shortages and bring down peanut prices.

Peanut imports have been capped at 1.7 million pounds since 1953 to ensure the efficient operation of the government's supply management peanut price support program, which gives farmers who hold government quotas the right to produce virtually all peanuts used domestically.

The U.S. International Trade Commission, an advisory group, recommended in March that President Bush permit up to 300 million pounds of peanut imports before July 31 to offset a shortage caused by last year's drought in the Southeast.

Bush has not acted on the recommendation and there has been increasing speculation in recent weeks among peanut state lawmakers that the administration has decided simply to ignore the petition.

Rains miss driest areas of state

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Turbulent weather pounded portions of the state in recent days but failed to bring appreciable moisture to Texas' driest areas.

Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said rains missed most of the dry Panhandle, South Plains, Far West and parts of Southwest and upper South Texas.

"Producers in some East Texas, Upper Coast and Rio Grande Valley areas where excessive rains have fallen for several weeks are trying to replant their flooded out crops as weather permits," said Carpenter. "Many vegetable gardens that were flooded earlier also are being replanted."

Upper level disturbances this week are unlikely to bring much rain to the dry Panhandle, South Plains or Far West Texas, says David "Rusty" Billingsley, meteorologist with the National Agricultural Weather Service at Texas A&M University.

The state's turbulent weather thus far has generally missed most peach-producing and other fruit crop areas, Carpenter said. Picking of the early peach crop began this week in the Texas Hill Country, and the harvest will continue for weeks, said Dr. John Lipe, Extension Service horticulturist headquartered in Fredericksburg. "Although some orchards had light hail, most have escaped with little damage thus far. A heavy crop is expected."

Prospects also are bright for a good peach crop in Northeast Texas despite some hail damage, said Tony Douglas, district Extension Service director.

"We are expecting a heavy peach crop in East Texas," said Scott Durham, district Extension Service director, "although severe weather could still damage some fruit."

Citrus fruit, some peaches, vegetables and crops in parts of the upper and middle Rio Grande Valley were pounded again Sunday by large hail, winds in excess of 60 miles per hour, and heavy rains, after an earlier storm last Monday that brought grapefruit-size hail to the Mission, McAllen and Pharr areas.

"The severe hail also damaged peppers, cotton and cantaloupes in the affected area," said Doyle Warren, district Extension Service director at Weslaco. He said the Sunday storm twisted and broke many of the tall Washington palms in the Mission area and unroofed buildings in a number of Starr County areas. Several tornados were reported in the Mission-Sharyland areas by the Brownsville Weather Service.

Rains of 3 to 10 inches were recorded in Bandera County late last week, said Warren Thigpen, Jr., county Extension Service agent. "Tarpley had the most — just over 10 inches. Large hail denuded oak trees and battered buildings in a narrow strip stretching from Bandera to Pipe Creek. Throughout the county, ranchers are busy trying to rebuild washed out water gaps."

Pastures and ranges have improved in areas getting rains, and most cattle are in good condition with markets still strong. But in areas skipped by rainfall, ranges are brown and providing limited grazing. "We are still having to feed everything, since the rains seem to taper off just south of San Antonio," said Laura Ormand of Pleasanton, in Atascosa County. "A few showers have fallen here in the city, but they just don't reach 20 miles southward to the ranch."

In that area of Southwest Texas, dryland milo and hay crops also need rain soon, but irrigated crops are making progress.

During the past week, district Extension Service directors reported these specific crop, livestock and weather conditions:

PANHANDLE: Irrigated wheat continues to progress but dryland fields are declining, and some are being grazed out. Native pastures are brown and providing limited grazing. Potatoes, onions and sugar beets are off to a good start.

SOUTH PLAINS: Corn planting is nearing completion, cotton is 10 percent planted and sorghum planting is just starting. Onions are doing well and dryland wheat is heading. Ranges and pastures continue to worsen.

ROLLING PLAINS: Although rains of 1 to 6 inches were recorded this past week, more will be needed for moisture to be ample for cotton planting. Most stock tanks are full but the soil profile needs filling. Late maturing wheat varieties will benefit from the rains, which were too late for early varieties. Movement of cattle also was slowed by the wet weather.

NORTH CENTRAL: Rains from 1.5 to over 2 inches were received in many counties. Wheat, corn, sorghum, ranges and pastures are in excellent to fair condition after earlier rains. Soybeans are 85 percent planted. Gardens are making good growth and peaches have a good fruit set with some early varieties showing color.

NORTHEAST: Heavy rains, gusty winds and hail damaged some crops and wet fields have delayed planting of late crops. But early plantings of corn, sorghum and soybeans are making good growth. Wheat is progressing well, but rust continues to be a problem.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture continues short to adequate with some northern counties getting about one-half inch of rain. A late freeze also hit some areas this past week. Upton County reported strong winds damaged trees, shrubs and landscape plants in several areas. Livestock are in fair condition, with some still getting supplemental feed. Lamb and kid crops are above average. Melons are showing good growth, gardens are progressing and a good peach crop is in prospect.

WEST CENTRAL: Strong winds continue to deplete topsoil moisture, and pastures and ranges are worsening. Wheat yields are being reduced by dry conditions and much of the crop is being baled or grazed out. Many stock tanks are getting low, with some already dry. Livestock generally are in good condition.

CENTRAL: Ranges, crops continue to improve after recent rains. Strong winds have damaged vegetable crops in many areas. Hail damaged some wheat fields and peaches this past week. Insect activity is increasing in cotton and grain sorghum.

EAST: Rains of up to 5 inches boosted soil moisture and delayed field operations this past week. Pasture grasses are making excellent growth. An above-average calf crop is reported. Rains have hampered vegetable growth. A heavy peach crop is in prospect.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Stock tanks are full, and ranges are in excellent condition. Soybeans are growing well and the wheat crop is heading. The peach crop continues to grow with most fruit about the size of half dollars. A good pecan crop is indicated.

SOUTHWEST: Some areas again missed rains and are too dry, but much of the Hill Country recorded good rains and some hail. The onion harvest is under way with a strong market outlook. Early peaches will begin ripening next week. Pecan crop prospects appear lighter than last spring. Harvesting of wheat and oat crops is under way.

COASTAL BEND: Corn, cotton and sorghum are developing rapidly after recent good rains. Greenbugs are reported in some grain fields. Wheat is starting to turn color with good yields indicated.

SOUTH: Crops and ranges in upper counties continue to need moisture, while many Rio Grande Valley areas have been flooded by recent rains and battered by strong winds and hail. Peppers, cotton, cantaloupes and other crops in the McAllen-Pharr area were damaged by large hail, and winds exceeding 60 miles per hour snapped Washington palm trees in the Mission area.

Bat leavings popular with gardeners

AUSTIN (AP) — Odd though it may sound, Central Texas-mined bat manure is a popular fertilizer that's a hot export to the Northwest, a local nursery owner says.

The Garden-Ville company, operator of four nurseries in Central Texas, sells the droppings through the company's stores and by mail order and ships it wholesale to Oregon and California, founder Malcolm Beck said.

The product, Beck said, is particularly popular in the Northwest — although he can't explain why. He estimates he could sell twice as much in that region, but doesn't want to expand the mining operations.

Are you seeing the most out of life?

Diabetes can cause severe eye complications, including diabetic retinopathy which renders over 5,000 diabetics blind each year.

Diabetic retinopathy does not just afflict people who have had diabetes for many years. It can appear within the first year or two after the onset of diabetes, or it can even be one of the first signs of the disease.

THE GOOD NEWS IS that early treatment of retinopathy often improves the potential for preserving sight. If you have diabetes or are at risk of developing this disease, your regular eye care should include a thorough, accurate evaluation by an ophthalmologist -- a process Southwest Retina Eye Center is offering FREE in recognition of National Sight Saving Month.

Life improves in civil war-torn Liberia

By Scott Stearns

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — The dark streets of the Liberian capital, lighted only by small cooking fires set up in bombed-out buildings, now boom with the rap music of discos, offering an evening of escape after 16 months of slaughter.

There is a cease-fire in the civil war in the partitioned West African nation founded by freed American slaves, but there is little progress in peace talks between four groups vying for power.

The city's beaches remain littered with mounds suspected to be burial sites for the hundreds slaughtered in revenge killings. At least 10,000 people, most civilians, have died since the war started on Dec. 24, 1989.

But life has improved so much that officials of the transitional government fear refugees in rebel-held areas and neighboring Sierra Leone will flood back into the devastated city.

Forklifts from the provisional city council recently carried burned-out cars to the dump while bulldozers cleared the rubble of a collapsed hotel from the street.

Generators are heard throughout the city, and the price of gasoline needed to run them has dropped from $12 per gallon to $4. It is now sold from pumps at freshly painted stations rather than the glass jars that were ubiquitous during the war.

The rebel leader who controls much of Liberia's countryside, Charles Taylor, has refused to participate in the transitional government unless he can head it.

He also is accused of sending troops into Sierra Leone in revenge for the presence of a six-nation regional peacekeeping force that was deployed in Liberia last year. It includes troops from Sierra Leone.

In December, Taylor, rival rebel leader Prince Johnson, remnants of President Samuel Doe's army and the transitional government — which is supported by the peacekeeping force — agreed to a cease-fire. Johnson's forces had earlier captured and executed Doe.

The peacekeeping force has created a buffer zone 18 miles wide to protect Monrovia, and residents are taking advantage of the limited resources in their city state to rebuild what is left.

Streetside bars and cook shops that were the city's only commerce before the cease-fire have been joined by discos, hotels, restaurants, grocery stores and retail stores. Crowds have returned to reopened markets.

Acting Commerce Minister James Holder has abolished price controls, monopolies and other regulations in an effort to rebuild the ravaged economy.

Holder has proposed a duty-free zone to discourage smuggling, and he hopes to stabilize the exchange rate when banks reopen next week. The Liberian dollar was officially equal to the U.S. dollar before the war, although it sold for much less on the black market.

In recent weeks the Liberian currency strengthened, and one U.S. dollar was trading for eight Liberian dollars. During the war one U.S. dollar fetched 13 Liberian dollars.

Generators are heard throughout the city, and the price of gasoline needed to run them has dropped from $12 per gallon to $4.

Holder's government is so short of funds it collects taxes weekly, and the minister says it cannot pay the cost of services to support the 500,000 people who live in Monrovia. Rebels control the area where the country's main exports — rubber and iron — are produced.

"Business is nervous about the lack of a clear resolution to this conflict, but Taylor cannot hold the country hostage forever," Holder said.

A steady commercial traffic has already begun between the zones controlled by the rival factions and the six-nation peacekeeping force.

Rebels, who take a percentage from transactions, allow civilians behind their lines to bring palm oil, cassava, sugar cane, kola nuts and fruit to markets on the outskirts of Monrovia. The foods are swapped for manufactured goods such as batteries, film, clothing and shoes.

The United Nations and some relief organizations are providing food aid to Monrovia. A local volunteer network has been set up to channel food aid sent in by Catholic Relief Services, the World Food Program and others.

But food prices remain high. A plate of rice and such staples as cassava greens or palm butter cost $5.

But Monrovia's residents appear to have accepted poverty and hardship, and some of those who have recently returned say they will stay no matter what.

Pianist Serkin dies

GUILFORD, Vt. (AP) — Rudolf Serkin, one of the world's great concert pianists, has died. He was 88.

Serkin, who had been under hospice care, died here Wednesday night of cancer, his publicist, Mary Lynn Fixler, said Thursday.

A lanky, bespectacled man, Serkin made his debut in 1915, at age 12, and had his last major concert in 1988.

In contrast to Vladimir Horowitz, who played with dazzling technique and Artur Rubinstein, the Romantic stylist whose gusto made his playing bracing and invigorating, Serkin had a clean attack and firmly controlled anti-sentimental approach. Many critics considered him profound.

A concert in Berlin with the Busch Chamber Orchestra in 1920 led to an association with that group, often performing Bach. Serkin became known in his early career as an admirable Bach interpreter. In 1935 he married Adolf Busch's daughter Irene. Their son Peter is a classical pianist and son John is a horn player.

In addition to his sons and wife, Serkin is survived by daughters Ursula, Elizabeth, Judith, and Marguerite.

Funeral services were not announced.

For More Information

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

S-10 BLAZER "The Mini Suburban"

CHEVROLET'S 4-DOOR S-BLAZER	VS	FORD'S EXPLORER
CHEVROLET'S WARRANTY 3 Year/50,000 Mile Bumper to Bumper	VS	FORD'S LIMITED POWERTRAIN WARRANTY

- Larger V6 4.3 liter vs. Ford's 4.0 liter
- 230 ft. lbs. torque vs. 225 ft. lbs. torque
- 2 MPG advantage with automatic transmission
- Larger fuel tank for more cruising range with automatic transmission
- S-10 has 4-wheel anti-lock brakes which are standard equipment vs. Ford's rear wheel only anti-lock brakes.
- Chevy's cargo floor is 3" longer
- Chevy's Blazer has a wider & higher rear opening area for cargo
- More maximum payload 1497 lbs. vs. Ford's 1050 lbs.
- More towing capacity 6000 lbs. vs. Ford's 5500 lbs.
- Chevy 4x4 has a standard Insta-Trac system that lets you shift in and out of 4-wheel drive without stopping or backing up vs. Ford's touch drive which requires stopping & reversing to disengage front hubs.
