PLO loyalists reclaim Tripoli stronghold

Relations improve

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted today as saying U.S.-Israeli relations have improved significantly, with past differences "put in the shade."

Shamir, who is scheduled to visit Washington on Nov. 27, said in an interview with the newspaper Maariv, "Our friendly relations with the United States do not lack tones of dispute from time to time."

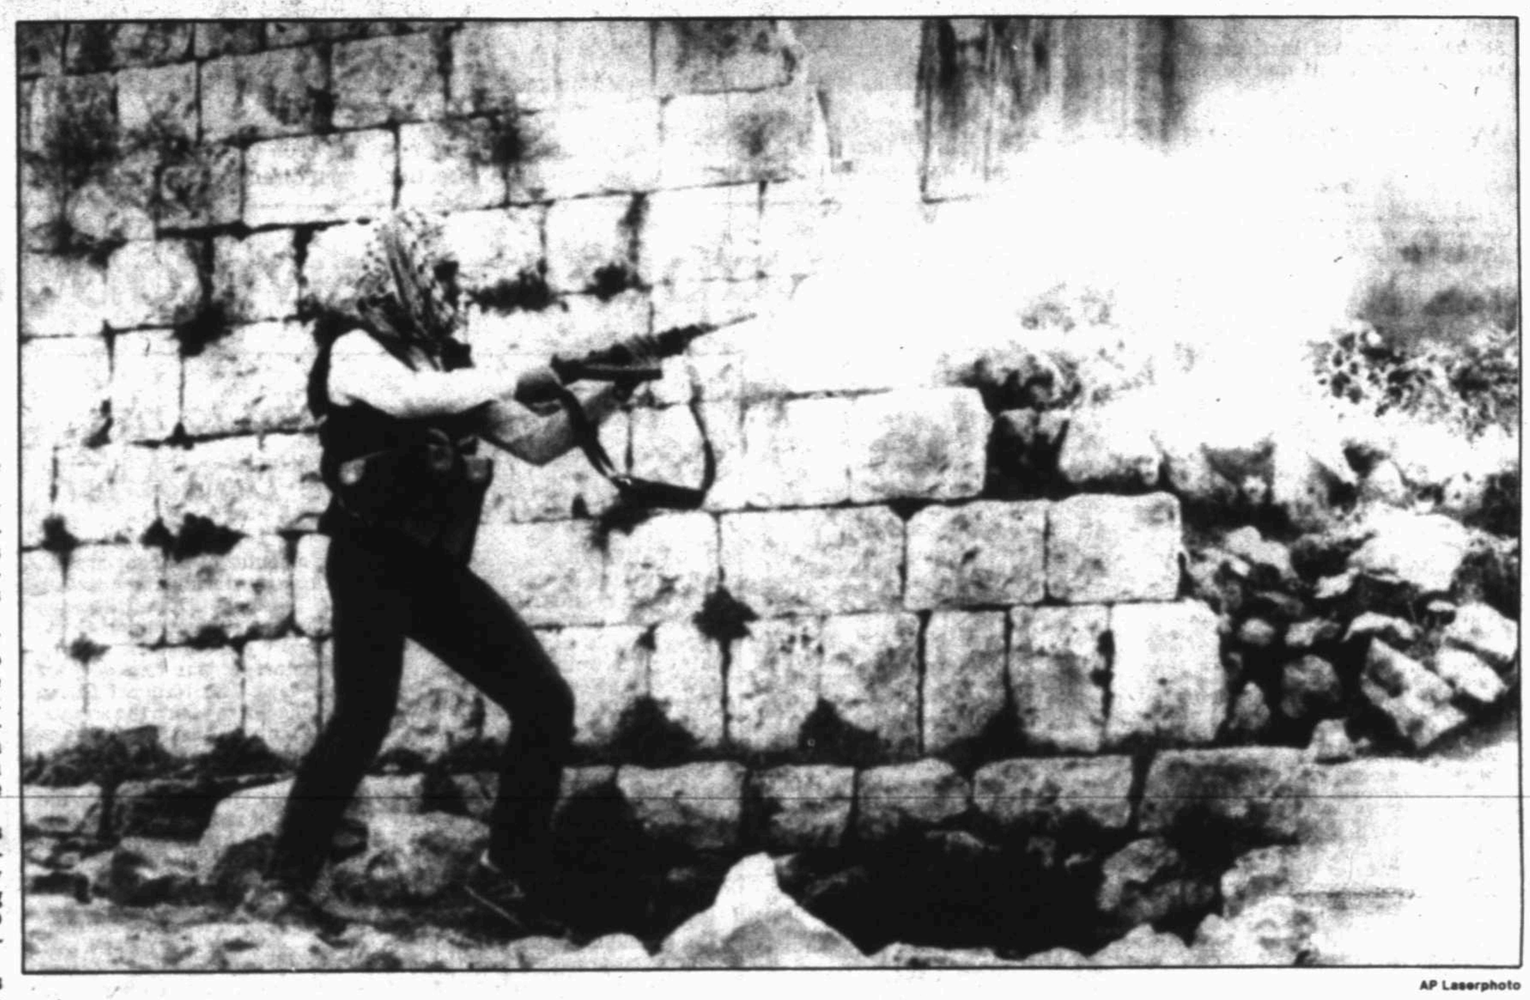

"But lately our cooperation and identity of views stand out, while the disputes have been put in the shade."

Israeli warplanes on Wednesday struck at Lebanese bases of pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists blamed for devastating truck-bombings at U.S., French and Israeli bases in Lebanon.

An Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman said the attack was to avenge the Nov. 4 bombing at the Israeli position at Tyre, but if it served to avenge the Oct. 25 bombings at U.S. and French bases in Beirut, "so much the better." French warplanes attacked other Shiite extremist bases on Thursday.

Shamir said he planned to discuss with officials in Washington the supply of sophisticated U.S. weaponry to Israel. He was quoted as saying without elaboration, "We will also discuss cooperation in various military fields."

Maarive also quoted Shamir as saying he did not want a war with Syria "even though we are certain we will win. Our diplomatic and military effort today is aimed at preventing war and deterring Syria from any such intention."

House-to-house fighting

A pro-Arafat Palestinian fighter fires his AK-47 assault rifle during a house-to-house advance into the Baddawi refugee camp.

Rebels shell outskirts

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's loyalists say they recaptured their last stronghold today with a pre-dawn counterattack on Syrian-backed rebels in the battered Baddawi refugee camp.

The counterattack by the loyalists set off a barrage of shelling by PLO rebels and Syrian forces. Shells exploded in the northern outskirts of Tripoli, the hills beyond, and the port city's east side.

As Palestine Liberation Organization officials told reporters the loyalists had recaptured 85 percent of the camp, three shells fell near Arafat's political headquarters in Tripoli, shaking the building and breaking glass.

In Beirut, French peacekeeping troops were on alert today after Shiite Moslems warned of reprisals to avenge this week's air raids by France and Israel on Shiite radicals in eastern Lebanon.

In southern Lebanon, an Israeli soldier was killed and six others wounded when a roadside bomb detonated next to a military convoy Thursday night, the Israeli command said. The attackers were not found.

A PLO loyalist said Arafat's forces opened their assault on Baddawi at 3 a.m., and the PLO chairman prayed in a mosque southeast of the camp as the fighting raged.

The loyalist, who asked not to be identified, said Arafat's troops captured 21 Syrian and rebel prisoners.

The rebels, who want to oust Arafat because they say he has abandoned the military struggle against Israel, drove into the camp Wednesday after capturing the PLO chairman's other northern Lebanon stronghold at the Nahr El-Bared refugee camp.

There have been conflicting casualty reports since the rebels began their Nov. 3 assault against the two camps. An International Red Cross official said Thursday that 350 civilians and fighters on both sides had been killed and nearly 1,400 wounded between Nov. 3 and Wednesday.

Guerrilla mutineers had vowed Thursday that if Arafat did not leave Tripoli they would bomb his hideouts "down to the earth." But Arafat said he would leave only when Tripoli's leaders tell him to go. The Red Cross reported 350 people killed and 1,360 wounded since the PLO war broke out.

In Beirut, the U.S. Marines were bringing in fresh troops today from ships offshore to replace the 1,800-man peacekeeping unit that was the target of a suicide bomb attack Oct. 23 that killed 239 Americans. The incoming 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit includes Marines who spent a week fighting on Grenada after the U.S.-led invasion of that Caribbean island.

The Voice of Lebanon radio said French troops in the multinational peacekeeping force went on alert in expectation of more counterattacks in response to the French bombing of a Shiite radical outpost Thursday.

Greyhound resuming four Midland routes

From Staff and Wire Reports

Police arrested more than 100 people in protests from Boston to San Francisco as striking Greyhound workers hurled rocks, eggs and curses at buses making their first trips in two weeks, but company officials said they were "encouraged" by passenger turnout.

At least half a dozen injuries were reported Thursday as chanting, sign-waving strikers tried to block buses from leaving depots for the first time since the Amalgamated Transit Union walkout began Nov. 2.

But no trouble is expected in the Midland station today as it resumes four of its 10 routes. Because the local station is run on a commission basis, a spokesman explained, there are no Midland union employees, strikers or temporary workers. Some local employees were laid off before the strike because of a slowdown in business, he said.

Tickets went on sale Thursday, but the spokesman said he didn't know how many passengers to expect. The station will have two Odessa runs and two east routes to Memphis daily.

Across the country, most buses carried few passengers, and ticketholders willing to board the big cruisers faced delays and abuse as protesters smashed windshields, flattened tires and ripped off mirrors in attempts to keep non-union replacement drivers off the roads.

Meanwhile, union leaders meeting in Scottsdale, Ariz., with company officials unanimously rejected a new Greyhound contract proposal late Thursday, but said the 12,700 rank-and-file members could vote on it.

However, a union source who asked not to be identified said one condition for the vote was that the company take the buses back off the road.

The company is seeking wage and benefit cuts, saying it must reduce labor costs to stay competitive with buses and even cut-rate airlines.

In response to the violence Thursday, judges and police in Atlanta, Philadelphia and San Francisco acted quickly to limit the number of pickets allowed at terminals.

"I was expecting something, but I didn't imagine anything quite like this," said passenger Sandra Morefield, boarding in Effingham, Ill., where 30 jeering pickets temporarily blocked one bus and threw eggs at two others.

Most of the arrests were in Boston, where 51 protesters were taken into custody after they blocked buses from leaving and entering the terminal, police spokesman Peter Woloschuk said. One officer suffered a broken leg, another had his thumb broken and three or four more were injured in making the arrests, he said.

Two buses had to be stopped and evacuated because of bomb threats, authorities said. In Florida, passengers on a Miami-to-Jacksonville bus were forced to get off while officials searched inside after receiving a threat. Across the country, the California Highway Patrol pulled over a bus traveling to San Diego after a caller claimed to have put a bomb on board before the vehicle left Long Beach.

In one of the most violent outbursts, 300 strikers in San Francisco hurled rocks, bottles and chunks of pavement at buses leaving the terminal, police said. The first bus, carrying five passengers, was forced to turn back after a tire was flattened and its windows broken a few blocks away. The windshield of the second bus was shattered, and police had to stop protesters from ripping off its wipers.

Mid-Cities Bank will present United front in Midland

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Mid-Cities National Bank, currently located at Midland Regional Air Terminal, will move into downtown Midland Monday and change its name to United Bank National Association, said Wayne Merritt, president.

Merritt said the new bank will be temporarily located at 511 W. Missouri, the old Energas building. The bank will be permanently located in the United Bank Building, under construction at 500 W. Illinois St.

Mid-Cities opened Aug. 1 in place of Metro Bank, which failed July 29.

"The move will put United Bank in a position to take advantage of what we see as the bottom of the economic cycle and allow us to participate in the economic upturn," Merritt said.

There will be no changes in the bank's service, Merritt said, and he expects all of the bank's present employees to make the move. He also said the bank plans to add Midland residents to its board of directors within the next 90 days. The current board consists of five members, in addition to Merritt, from the Texas Panhandle.

"It is important to us to have a great deal of the ownership in Midland. That way we will be able to respond quickly in our loan decisions," Merritt said.

United Bank will have about $25 million in assets when it opens for business Monday. It's capital is about $2.5 million.

Merritt said he anticipates losing only a few of the bank's present customers with the move.

"We have met with all of our Odessa customers and a good deal will come with us."

Dr Pepper approves firm's takeover plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Analysts in the soft-drink industry say that Dr Pepper Co.'s approval of a $512.5 million takeover offer from an investment firm should help the company survive in an increasingly competitive market.

Forstmann Little & Co. has agreed to pay stockholders $22 cash for each of 23.3 million outstanding shares of Dr Pepper in the transaction, which will allow top management of the Dallas-based soft drink manufacturer to remain in place and keep the company intact.

Officials of Forstmann Little "bring money, money, money, money" to Dr Pepper, said Jesse Meyers, whose Beverage Digest newsletter is an industry standard. "There's got to be a lot of joy in Dallas on Mockingbird Lane," location of the company's headquarters.

Meyers said Forstmann Little, established in 1978, is unlikely to interfere with operations of Dr Pepper, whose board of directors approved the takeover bid Thursday.

"They will absolutely encourage management to do the things they do well and just give them financial advice when needed," he said.

Most analysts believe the sale will help Dr Pepper gain the muscle it must have to compete. The company has been losing ground as diet and no-caffeine drinks grab an ever-increasing share of the market.

Man enjoying rewards of honesty

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

There are those unfortunate few who've gone through the foolish feelings of losing a wallet or billfold.

The hassles recalled are those of cancelling credit cards and getting a new driver's license — and then realizing with the absence of the former and a piece of paper which substitutes for the latter, trying to write a check is a worthless endeavor.

If one lost an unusually large amount of cash the situation is an even more costly circumstance.

But finding a wallet containing a large amount of cash also can be an unusual experience — especially when it's spotted on a highway.

Dale Jacobs, a meter reader for Texas Electric Service Co. "was just cruising down Loop 250 and happened to see" a wallet laying on the road about six feet off the loop at the far west entrance to Midland Park Mall last week.

He circled around, picked the wallet up and opened it.

"All I saw was a bunch of $20s," Jacobs said. "It surprised me quite a bit."

Besides the more than $400 in cash, the wallet contained a driver's license, several credit cards and receipts. Jacobs took it back to the office thinking if the man was a TESCO customer, his phone number could be tracked down.

"He got nervous," said Jacobs' boss, customer operations leader Russell Hearon. "Even if you're a real honest person, finding that kind of money tempts you. I was real proud of him."

The two took the wallet to the Department of Public Safety when their efforts to locate the owner failed. Because the driver's license had an Albuquerque, N.M., address, they figured he could be located through DPS computers.

Lt. Wesley Johnson of the license and weight division began making the calls.

A rental receipt for a storage unit in Albuquerque led to his place of employment at a Carrows restaurant there.

"I couldn't believe he was making that much money," Hearon said with a laugh.

Thinking the man may have transferred to the Carrows in Midland, Johnson gave the local restaurant a call.

In turn, the manager, who said the man in question was visiting one of the Carrows employees in Midland, made a call. A few minutes later, the wallet's owner telephoned the DPS and said he was on his way.

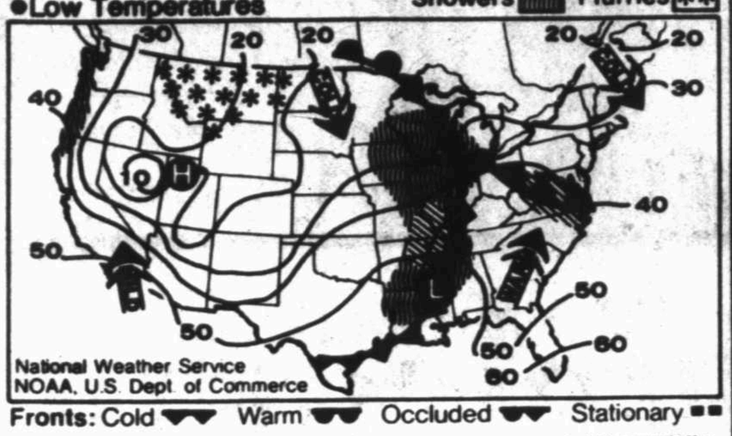

"He seemed pretty happy," Jacobs said. "He just started digging in that wallet and pulled out $50 for me."

He paused and added with a laugh, "Honesty pays."

AP Laserphoto Map

Mild to warm weather for the southern half of the nation will be marred by cold weather in the North, showers from the lower Mississippi to the upper Great Lakes and snow flurries on the northern Plains, according to the National Weather Service.

Cold weekend weather expected

The Indian summer days of the past week will disappear once the weekend rolls in. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting clouds, cold and wind through Sunday.

Lows tonight should be in the upper 30s and highs Saturday in the upper 50s. Both days are forecast to be partly cloudy. Chilly 20 to 30 mph winds are expected to come from the west to northwest.

The overnight 50-degree low was 31 degrees warmer than the record low of 19 set in 1980. Thursday's high, 76, was eight degrees below the 84 mark set just two years ago.

Reagan apprehensive about movie

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is apprehensive about how Americans will react to a powerful television movie depicting nuclear war devastation. It says it is safer to be strong militarily while pursuing arms negotiations than to disarm or freeze atomic arsenals.

The film, ABC-TV's "The Day After," for broadcast Sunday, graphically shows the horrors of nuclear war and offers no hope for survivors. Anti-nuclear groups are using the movie as a focal point for fund-raising and membership drives.

One of President Reagan's political aides called the film "potentially the most emotionally powerful thing ever shown on American television."

Speaking anonymously, the aide expressed fears it could be politically damaging to Reagan, who has been criticized on occasion as being trigger-happy, or too quick to use military force when diplomacy might suffice.

Indeed, concern about Reagan's military posture is a key ingredient of the so-called "gender gap" — the tendency among women to have generally more negative feelings toward Reagan than men do.

"I am not saying we welcome this film," said David R. Gergen, the White House director of communications.

Robert Sims, a White House spokesman on national security matters, said the administration is gearing up to emphasize its efforts to prevent nuclear war.

"Anything that is as graphic and emotionally disturbing as that film is, which is likely to be seen by 75 million Americans or something like that, is not something that you would choose to ignore," Sims said.

Yet the administration purposely is taking a low key stance toward the film and plans only to respond to questions about nuclear war, rather than initiating a debate about it. "Why should we contribute to this hype of this commercial product," one official asked, speaking privately.

Sims said the most important question is how to prevent nuclear war. "We have a policy for doing that. In the context of the public attention this film may get, I'm sure we will want to re-explain that policy."

Gergen said, "There is going to be a debate in this country (after the show is aired). We will be active participants in the debate."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz will present the administration case in an ABC-TV interview immediately after ("The Day After"). Kenneth Adelman, chief of the arms control and disarmament agency will appear earlier Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." Other administration representatives will be available to respond to inquiries from radio and television stations and will write editorial pieces for newspapers, Gergen said.

At this point there are no plans for Reagan to make a speech on the subject as a result of the TV production.

Gergen said one effect of the film, at least in the short range, will be to alienate Americans from government and nuclear weapons.

Larry Speakes, the White House deputy press secretary said, "We welcome a debate on the horrors of nuclear war."

He predicted the show will not be politically damaging for Reagan. "We have a plan for preventing nuclear war — make the United States strong and continue to have discussions with the Russians not only on reducing but eliminating nuclear arms," said Speakes.

Conservatives, such as columnist William F. Buckley Jr. and the Rev. Jerry Falwell, leader of the Moral Majority, already have denounced the film as propaganda for a nuclear freeze and disarmament.

Sims said: "Our interest is not either in criticizing the film or calling attention to it in any way but in responding to requests for our views on how nuclear war can best be prevented."

He said that people who are knowledgeable about the threat of nuclear war know that "a freeze is more likely to contribute to a situation of instability and imbalance which would be more likely to cause a war than a position of balance." The administration argues that a freeze at current levels of arms would put the United States at a disadvantage.

At Reagan's campaign headquarters, spokesman Jim Lake seemed surprised that anyone would make a connection between the film and Reagan.

"I don't see how this can be hung on Ronald Reagan," said Lake. "Everything he's done is to try to reduce the potential (of war). It's clear he doesn't want the war...this tremendous risk hanging over us."

As for possible political damage, Lake said, "We haven't spent five minutes talking about it. We're off organizing (the campaign) and not worrying about this."

Lawrence struggles to rise from ashes of 'The Day After'

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — This city took the mythical phoenix as a symbol for its rise from ashes 120 years ago, and it is shown struggling to survive again after a nuclear holocaust in the TV movie, "The Day After."

Much of the controversial ABC-TV film, to be broadcast nationally Sunday, was filmed in this northeast Kansas university town of 53,000, and Mayor David Longhurst thinks the scene is fitting.

"Lawrence history is such that it is appropriate that the movie, with its message, was made here. It is consistent with the history of the community," said Longhurst, who once proposed his city as a site for a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting.

As organizers planned a forum on nuclear weapons, partly as a result of the show's focus, Longhurst and other Lawrence residents recalled past controversies.

In 1863, during the Civil War, a group of pro-slavery marauders led by William Quantrill burned Lawrence, killing nearly 150 people.

Lawrence, lying in a river valley about 40 miles west of Kansas City, was born in 1854 during the struggle between pro-slavery and abolition forces that preceded Kansas' statehood in 1861. Quantrill's raid was the worst of several bloody attacks in what became a center for free-staters.

More recently, Lawrence has been a center of student protest, particularly during the Vietnam War. In April 1970, an arsonist torched the student union at the University of Kansas. A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed for three days. The National Guard was called in to police the streets.

Environmental and peace movements have been active in city affairs for years. An ordinance was enacted banning the transport of radioactive materials through the community. Lawrence voters participating in a voluntary opinion poll on election day last year favored a nuclear arms freeze by a 3-1 margin.

This spring, a group of Soviet athletes came to town for track and field competition in the Kansas Relays.

Soon afterward, Longhurst, a 40-year-old businessman, sent letters to President Reagan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov inviting them to Lawrence for a summit conference.

"This city has been founded on humanitarian principles," says Allan Hanson, a professor of anthropology and leader of Let Lawrence Live, a peace group organized around the film.

"The movie is one thing that kind of fell in our laps. We do see it as an opportunity to speak to the nation. But it's one more step in the general peace process that has been going on here for years."

No trouble anticipated as routes renewed

"Emotions just went up," said Howard Brown, a Greyhound driver for 16 years who expressed surprise at the violence. "Greyhound has taken our pride away."

Officers eventually allowed only six pickets at a time at the San Francisco terminal entrance and kept the others across the street.

The Greyhound offer came in response to a union proposal earlier in the day, which chief union negotiator Harry Rosenblum said reduced wage and benefit demands by $60 million.

He said the union council was unanimously opposed to the new Greyhound package, but voted 18-12 to let members vote on it.

Greyhound spokeswoman Leslie White said 97 buses with an average of 10 passengers departed in the first five hours of service Thursday.

"It is encouraging for the first day of service, especially on a day when the public may not have been certain we were going to run," she said.

Ten protesters threw themselves on the ground in front of a bus trying to leave Pennsylvania Station in Newark, N.J., said police Capt. Michael O'Connor.

In Philadelphia, where hundreds of strikers were joined by Teamsters and other unionized workers, a judge issued an injunction to keep pickets 10 feet apart after tight groups blocked buses for six hours Thursday. Forty-three people were arrested in that city.

A similar order was handed down by a judge in Atlanta, where strikers were banned from the depot and limited to two pickets at each doorway.

In Detroit, 150 strikers implored passengers to take other carriers and questioned the training of replacement drivers. "Don't take a Greyhound, the drivers don't know what they're doing," one shouted.

Greyhound, which operated 60 percent of the U.S. intercity bus service before the strike, has hired 1,300 replacement workers and an additional 1,400 union members have returned to work, said Ms. White.

The AFL-CIO called on all union members and their families to observe a boycott of Greyhound and asked its affiliated unions to "assist in every way possible" the strikers.

The strike began Nov. 2 when the Amalgamated Transit Union refused to accept wage and benefit cuts. The union claims the cuts total 20 percent, but the company claims it is asking for a 9.5 percent wage cut plus a 5 percent employee contribution to the pension plan.

The average Greyhound driver made $27,000 a year under the old contract.

United Way betters its 1983 goal by 5 percent

The 1983 Midland United Way campaign achieved 105 percent of its $1.7 million goal, according to campaign officials at a UW board of directors meeting Thursday night.

UW Executive Director Bob Cornelius said the final figure of $1.8 million also represents a 12 percent increase above the amount reached last year. Cornelius noted that 14 percent of the pledges made during last year's campaign were not renewed in 1983.

Cornelius said this means more than 380,000 "new dollars" were pledged to the 1983 campaign. He attributed that to the participation of more that 300 new corporate, individual and employee groups making first-time contributions to UW, and increased generosity from many previous supporters.

In summarizing other UW board action at Thursday night's meeting, Cornelius announced that a special grant of $7,600 has been authorized for the Big Brother-Big Sister program to allow its continuation through 1983.

Also, the board granted permission for three groups to conduct capital fund drives next year.

Casa de Amigos will be seeking $115,000 to expand its present building by 2,400 square feet; the YMCA will try to raise $1 million for construction of its proposed new full service Y on the east-side; and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women needs nearly a half-million dollars to replace the 76-year-old building that currently houses the shelter.

UW is scheduled to honor outstanding supporters of this year's drive at a Dec. 14 awards ceremony. More information can be obtained by calling UW at 682-4356.

Moscow renews walkout threat

By The Associated Press

A top Kremlin spokesman says the Soviets will pull out of Geneva arms talks if Pershing 2 missiles are deployed in Europe, but West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl says Moscow "evidently has floated new proposals" for an accord.

"With the deployment of the new Pershings in Europe, the negotiations make no more sense and will be broken off," said Leonid M. Zamyatin, a chief foreign affairs spokesman for the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee. He spoke at a news conference Thursday at the Soviet Embassy in the Netherlands.

The North Atlantic Treaty Alliance plans to deploy 464 U.S. cruise and 108 Pershing 2 missiles over the next five years to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles already aimed at western Europe.

The first shipment of cruise missiles arrived in Britain Monday. All 108 Pershing 2s are destined for West Germany, with the first to arrive next month.

In Bonn, Kohl said Thursday the Soviet Union has indicated a willingness to make new concessions at Geneva, where U.S. and Soviet delegates met for 2½ hours Thursday and agreed to meet again next Wednesday.

He said the Soviets have indicated a willingness to drop their key demand that British and French nuclear arsenals be included in the U.S.-Soviet talks.

"The Soviet Union evidently has floated new proposals at one minute to twelve," Kohl said in an interview on West German television.

Zamyatin, on a European tour aimed at drumming up opposition to the NATO deployment, said the new missiles "are the weapons for a limited nuclear war in Europe and for nothing else. In case of a conflict, it will be inevitable that our response, our retaliation, will be aimed at the Pershings and the cruises, and it will be a massive blow."

The Soviets are against any new U.S. missiles in Europe, but are most worried about the faster and more accurate Pershings.

West Texas ranchers may finally get relief

state

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ranchers hard-hit by drought moved a step closer to getting low-cost cattle feed as the Senate approved and sent to the House a bill containing a provision ordering the aid.

The House was expected to act today on the drought proposal, contained in a dairy and tobacco price support bill. The administration had been supporting the measure, but President Reagan's approval of the bill was in doubt because of recent White House concern that it is too expensive.

The drought provision would require Agriculture Secretary John R. Block to provide 83 million bushels of government-owned feed corn at reduced prices.

Approval of the provision by the Senate came after weeks of struggling between Texas congressmen and Block, who had opposed making the grain available.

The Agriculture Department had said that if applied nationwide such a relief program would be far too expensive.

Instead, the department announced it was reducing the interest rate on emergency loans to farmers and ranchers in counties declared disaster areas because of this year's drought.

However, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who had the relief feed provison attached in the Senate, said livestock growers "need something a cow can eat, not another note at the bank."

The ranching country of West Texas has been one of the areas most seriously affected by the drought, which has led ranchers there to liquidate 60 to 70 percent of their herds.

Under the legislation, Block would be required to sell the three lowest grades of government-held corn at 75 percent of the government floor price for corn.

The corn would be made available to assist ranchers and farmers in maintaining breeding herds of livestock and poultry and their offspring.

Eligible to buy the corn would be livestock growers in counties throughout the country that have suffered from drought and related disasters and been declared disaster areas by the Agriculture Department.

However, the livestock growers would be required to pay the cost of transporting the corn to their ranches and farms.

This requirment produced sharp protests at a Senate-House conference committee earlier this week. Several congressmen complained that it discriminated against livestock growers in states where little or no grain is stored and where transportation costs would thus be much higher.

"They will be prejudiced against because of where they live," said Rep. Lindsay Thomas, D-Ga. However, the conference committee rejected language calling for the government to pay for the transportation costs.

Judge postpones medical dean's contempt hearing

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state judge has postponed final arguments in a hearing concerning a contempt charge filed against a medical school dean by prosecutors investigating unexplained infant deaths.

The arguments had been set for Thursday night but Judge David Berchelmann, tied up with another trial, rescheduled them for Dec. 1.

The contempt of grand jury charge contends that Dr. Marvin Dunn, dean at the University of Texas Health Science Center, did not fully comply with a subpoena seeking all papers related to the pediatric intensive care unit at Medical Center Hospital.

A Bexar County grand jury has been investigating a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatrics unit between 1978 and early 1982.

Dunn, whose faculty staffs the hospital, took the stand during a five-hour hearing Wednesday and repeatedly denied that he "intentionally" withheld any documents from investigators.

District Attorney Sam Millsap has contended the dean purposely kept certain documents to protect the Health Science Center from civil liability in "possible future lawsuits."

Dunn's attorney, Gerald Goldstein, said Thursday that he was glad Berchelmann had reset the hearing.

"I think he realized this is not the sort of thing you want to do at night on a rush, rush basis," Goldstein said. "This is very important to the community and, of course, to Dr. Dunn."

Chief Deputy District Attorney Nick Rothe, who has been heading the baby deaths investigation, was in conference and could not be reached for comment about the postponement.

A grand jury in Kerr County has indicted vocational nurse Genene Jones on one murder charge and seven counts of injury to a child.

Prosecutors contend Ms. Jones, 33, killed a 15-month-old Kerrville girl and caused serious injuries to six other children with injections of a powerful muscle relaxant.

DHR holds up approval of orphan program

AUSTIN (AP) — At the urging of a Dallas legislator and Roman Catholic priest, a state agency has held up approval of a limited program to bring in orphans from Southeast Asia and agreed to consider opening its borders to many more.

The Rev. Justin Lucio, director of migration and refugee services for United States Catholic Charities, said Thursday, "It is time to renew our sense of goodness and the moral obligation this country was founded on. Let the children come into Texas."

Rep. Al Granoff, who visited refugee camps in Thailand this summer, said congressmen and others had assured him that federal money would be available for the orphans program "two years from now and six years from now. I certainly think we ought to believe the word of our government."

The Board of Human Resources, wary of the federal government's financial commitment to relocating orphans from refugee camps, asked its staff to check on other states that have accepted Asian orphans and report Feb. 2.

The largest number of children from camps in Thailand, Hong Kong and the Philippines are located in New York (635), California (555), Minnesota (304), Iowa (199), Illinois (195) and Oregon (185).

"Their plight is bleak, their future is bleak," said commissioner Marlin Johnston of the Department of Human Resources. "We are not without feelings for the children."

The DHR staff recommended a program, beginning with a small pilot project, that would give priority to children whose fathers are American servicemen.

Johnston said 97,000 Southeast Asian refugees live in Texas, but the state has not participated in the orphan refugee program "because of serious legal and fiscal ramifications and restrictions."

He said most of the orphans are teen-agers and unlikely to be adopted or reunited with their real parents and the addition of Asian orphans to the state foster care program "would place a significant strain on an already strained program."

Johnston said a conservative analysis of adding 10 orphans a year to the program for five years would result in an annual cost at the end of that period of $408,177.

He said the Unaccompanied Refugee Minors Program is 100 percent federally funded but that funding "has been erratic and unpredictable in the past, and frequently there is doubt that it will come at all. We literally do not know from month to month where we stand."

Board member Thomas Dunning, Dallas, said in Texas 20 percent of the children live below the poverty line "and we're only covering 5 percent. I would have guilt feelings about bringing in more."

Lucio responded that the Catholic Church "is committed to alleviating the suffering of the children in this program.

Board chairman J. Livingston Kosberg, Houston, asked Lucio if Catholic Charities would accept "fiscal responsibility" for the program. Lucio said if the government should deplete its funds, "the church would be aware of our own commitment to the children."

Hunger activist: Government shouldn't tell poor what to eat

AUSTIN (AP) — The director of a national nonprofit organization fighting hunger says in defense of food stamps that the federal government should not tell Americans what to eat.

Nancy Amidei said Thursday that, rather than setting a national standard of "what is good to eat," the government should allow food stamp shoppers to spend money on special items, such as for birthday parties.

"I don't think you or I want the federal government deciding what we have for dinner," said Ms. Amidei, executive director of the Food Research and Action Center in Washington, D.C.

More counties to get drought aid

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White announced Thursday that 11 counties have been added to those eligible for federal disaster assistance as a result of severe drought damage over the past few months.

Borden, Cochran, Cottle, Garza, Hudspeth, Kimble, King, Oldham, Runnels, Sterling and Wheeler counties have been declared disaster areas by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, White said.

The governor said in a statement eligible farmers and ranchers in the counties may receive emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

GOP upset about vote counting

Millions kick smoking habit for one day

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

Cold turkey was the dish of choice for an estimated 19.5 million tobacco users who tried to kick the habit for 24 hours during the seventh annual Great American Smokeout, but some earnest resolutions went up in, well, smoke.

Although the American Cancer Society hoped its suggestion for non-smokers to "adopt" the addicted would help them through Thursday without a puff, some smokeout boosters relied on the power of public embarrassment to discourage the habit.

In the west Georgia town of Carrollton, where smokers among the 15,000 residents had pledged to quit in a community-wide effort, Mayor Tracy Stallings drank "a lot of hot coffee and cold water" in making good on his public vow of abstinence.

"It feels good," Stallings, who has smoked three packs a day for 20 years, said after midnight. His promise to quit pleased his wife, Shirley, who said that was "all I've asked for for Christmas."

Others in Carrollton weren't as successful. All but one member of the Lions Club refrained during a club meeting, but smoke curled from car windows as the meeting ended.

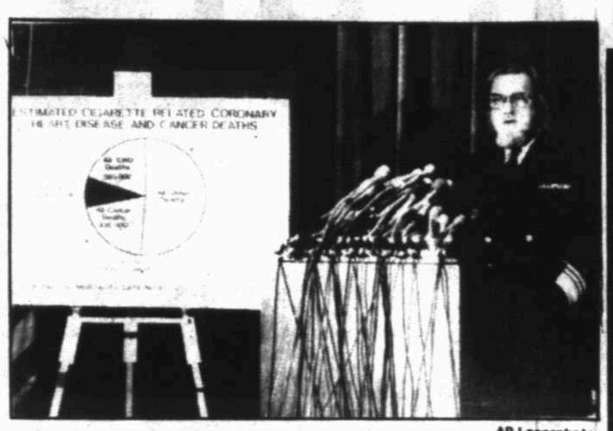

Overall, the local cancer society staff director Elaine Miller rated the effort a success.

"I found someone smoking in the Burger King, and I looked at him and he put it out. That's great," she said.

The estimated number of smokers who participated nationwide, based on the cancer society's random telephone survey of 2,132 households, was up by 500,000 from last year, when 19 million people took the pledge and 4.5 million made it through the day without lighting up.

Frozen turkeys — a reminder that cold turkey is a quick, sure way to quit — were raffled off in malls across the country. One San Diego restaurant, Cafe in the Valley, peddled turkey sandwiches for 75 cents while another, Carlos Murphy's, threw a "cold turkey happy hour."

At the Fountain Blue Dining Room in the Milwaukee suburb of Cudahy, owner Susan Sztukowski removed all ashtrays Thursday. But they were still available — to any diner willing to donate to the cancer society and face the embarrassment of having a bell rung.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, M.D., talks to reporters during a press conference on the 1983 Surgeon General's report on the Health Consequences of Smoking: Cardiovascular Disease, Thursday in Washington.

In Washington, the surgeon general released a report warning that cigarettes may prematurely kill 10 percent of the American population. But the report also said that 32.6 percent of the population smoked, sharply fewer than the 41.7 percent in 1965.

Some Marine deaths called 'accidents'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon decision to classify as "accidental" the deaths of 30 Marines killed in the suicide bombing of their Beirut barrack prompted angry criticism from the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill, complained about the deaths certificates in a letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Capt. Jay Farrar, a Marine Corps spokesman, said Thursday that 30 death certificates carried the "accidental" coding but the classification was changed to "death — non-battle" for the rest of the 239 servicemen who died in the Oct. 23 blast.

Percy recalled that President Reagan noted in his Oct. 27 speech on national television said the Marines and sailors killed in the blast "gave their lives in defense of our national security every bit as much as any man who ever died fighting a war."

"The president's noble characterization of these brave men's sacrifice is depreciated by sending the next of kin a document that apparently expresses the official view of the Department of Defense that their son or husband was killed in an accident," Percy said.

Former nun will marry inmate

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — A former nun prepared for a jailhouse wedding despite official warnings that the groom is a schizophrenic murder suspect who mesmerizes women and was married five times before.

Bonnie Rooney, 49, who was a nun for more than 30 years, and Royal Kenneth Hayes, 47, charged in a double slaying, planned to wed in a five-minute ceremony today in the Santa Cruz County Jail.

It was to be a ceremony without a kiss, followed by a wedding night in separate beds because the couple will be allowed no physical contact, jail officials said.

Besides the bride and groom, the only people who planned to attend the wedding were Hayes' defense attorney, Jon Minsloff, and Municipal Court Judge Richard McAdams.

Ms. Rooney, who went by the name "Sister Mary" as a nun, has never been married before. She met Hayes through a Catholic-sponsored visiting program for prisoners and has seen him at the jail regularly.

Hayes, who could be sent to the gas chamber if convicted in January, has been in a maximum-security cell since being arrested in March 1982 and charged with killing two San Francisco Bay area residents.

Hayes, who has been diagnosed as schizophrenic, has a captivating way with women, including two former girlfriends who admitted aiding in killings, officials said.

nation in brief

Skewer Inn waitress Connie Rogers takes a lunch order from Kathleen Stringer and her niece, Heather Stringer, 5, who were among the first patrons when the eatery reopened for business Thursday — one month after closing following a botulism outbreak. Fifteen remain hospitalized; 11 on respirators. Recovery could take a year.

Restaurant reopens after outbreak

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Customers flocked to the reopening of a restaurant where 37 people came down with botulism, although health officials haven't pinpointed the food responsible for the lethal disease.

The Skewer Inn, which was closed Oct. 17 after 37 patrons entered hospitals, reopened Thursday following extensive health inspections. Twenty-five people remain hospitalized, officials said.

Tests by the national Centers for Disease Control have linked the botulism to the inn's "patty melt" cheeseburger, which remains on the menu. But the precise source of the toxin and its place in the food distribution chain have not yet been determined, officials said.

Clash forces inmates to move

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — Some inmates involved in a violent clash between Mexican-American and black gangs at Folsom Prison had been removed from a security unit because of a court order against double-celling, officials said.

Four Mexican-American inmates were stabbed Thursday when a band of black prisoners stormed their cells with prison-made knives during breakfast, said Lt. Ted Zink, a prison spokesman. Three of the injured were in stable condition and one in good condition, he said.

Zink said several of the inmates involved in the attack had been returned to the main prison population from the Security Housing Unit on Tuesday or Wednesday.

'Masters' may serve 10 years

DETROIT (AP) — Four people charged in a federal indictment with violating civil rights of two retarded men by keeping them as slaves on a dairy farm could be sentenced to 10 years in prison if convicted, authorities said.

Ike Kozminski, 60; his wife, Margarethe, 54; their son, John, 30; and an employee, Mike J. Assam, 33; were also charged Thursday with two counts of holding the men to involuntary servitude on the Kozminski farm between 1967 and August 1983, the indictment said.

The FBI has said that Robert A. Fulmer, 57, and Louis Molitoris, 59, were forced to work 17-hour days, live without utilities or toilets and eat moldy bread and maggot-ridden poultry.

Judge approves request to end life

MIAMI (AP) — A judge has approved a parental request to withhold extraordinary measures for prolonging the life of a teen-ager left in a "vegetative state" after he was struck by lightning.

"It has been a rough decision," Circuit Judge Edmund Newbold said Wednesday in ruling in favor of Vicki and William Ismer, who went to court to force hospital officials to comply with their wishes.

Michael Ismer, 15, has been in a coma at James Archer Smith Hospital in Homestead since he was struck by lightning Aug. 12 during a sailboat outing. Florida has no law determining a parent's right to stop the revival of an unconscious child after his heart stops.

Teen indicted on murder charges

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — A teen-ager who allegedly slashed the throat of a retired shoe repairman, then wrote "helter scelter" with the victim's blood, has been ordered held without bond in the Campbell County Jail until his trial.

William Thompson 19, was indicted on murder charges Thursday in the Nov. 5 slaying of Cecil Browning, 68. Thompson surrendered to police in Bellevue after the slaying occurred and Police Chief Elmer Corbin said Thompson told authorities he was upset because his girlfriend left him.

A friend of Thompson, Paul Scarberry, said they had recently watched the television movie "Helter Skelter," which depicted similar actions by California murderer Charles Manson.

Harvard considering new admission policy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University may start admitting students without considering Scholastic Aptitude Test scores if they have satisfactory achievement test scores in five fields, a university official says.

Achievement scores indicate academic performance better than SATs and high school records, senior admissions officer David Evans said in an interview published today.

Harvard is considering letting applicants present their scores on five achievement tests without SAT results, he said.

Workers retrieve body of slain railroad worker

BLANCHARD, La. (AP) — The charred body of a Kansas City Southern railroad worker was recovered from the wreckage of a fiery train derailment Thursday.

The dead man, identified as John D. Mosely, 49, of Coushatta, was operating a KCS track maintenance machine on a spur leading to the Haughton Timber Co. pulpwood yard about 2:50 p.m. Wednesday when it was struck by a five-engine freight train, authorities said.

The five locomotives and seven freight cars derailed, and nearly 9,000 gallons of diesel fuel aboard the engines caught fire and gutted five freight cars.

The track machine was pushed back into several flatcars taking on pulpwood from the Haughton yard.

Two workers on the flatcar and four of the train's crew were injured in the collision, one of them seriously.

The cause of the accident is under investigation by local authorities and the National Transportation Safety Board, officials said.

"The engines went down the track going into the woodyard and that is what caused the derailment. But we don't know what caused the engines to go down that track," said A.D. Karr, a Kansas City Southern official in Shreveport.

The spur switch was approximately 60 yards east of the point of impact.

The KCS employees reportedly had switched the track maintenance machine onto the siding to allow the train to pass, but authorities said they did not know if the switch was defective or "if it was something premeditated."

Sgt. Richard Dunn, the hazardous materials specialist for the Caddo Parish sheriff's office, said the train was traveling at around 35 to 40 miles an hour when it collided with the cars.

"There's no way we can be sure yet, but we feel that the train was traveling at its regular clip," Dunn said.

Tommy Hicks, 47, of Karnack, Texas, a Haughton employee, was listed in serious condition with multiple broken bones at Willis-Knighton Memorial Medical Center in Shreveport, officials said.

The other five were treated at the hospital and discharged Wednesday.

The blaze scorched an area approximately 200 ft. in diameter, but firefighters were able to keep the fire from spreading to tank cars carrying natural gas, antifreeze, and pesticides.

Although some residents of nearby houses were evacuated briefly, they were allowed to return to their homes by 7 p.m.

Caddo Parish authorities said the track had been cleared by 7 a.m. and at least three freight trains had passed through the scene this morning.

The state Department of Natural Resources and the Argiculture department also sent investigators to the scene to determine the effects of chemical spilled at the site on the soil.

The yard is in a sparsely populated, remote area west of Shreveport near the Texas border.

Smoke from the blaze was visible about 40 miles away at the spot where a passenger train derailed last weekend near Marshall, Texas, killing four people.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, November 19, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Jeane Kirkpatrick, Dick Cavett, actress Jodie Foster and veteran California Angels catcher Bob Boone celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: President James Garfield and big band maestro Tommy Dorsey. Keep your options open in the months ahead and you will find new success in business and romance. Perseverance helps you beat the odds. You are able to get through to people you have not reached in the past. Family members draw closer together.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You need to make new social contacts. A May-September romance blossoms. Count on your loved ones to become enthusiastic. Be flexible when it comes to managing a family trust.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You receive money from a hobby or a suggestion you make to a friend. Take a realistic approach to home repairs. There are some things you cannot do yourself. Seek professional advice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Exercise self-control and a family dispute will solve itself. Your popularity soars when you provide a variety of delicacies for a friendly get-together. An old flame reappears. Trouble could be brewing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive emotional support when you need it most. Open new lines of communication between young and old family members. Old-fashioned values pay off in romance and friendship. Know your strengths.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you must pursue a costly hobby, try not to do it at your loved ones' expense. You discover that a child has artistic talent. Look out for false advertising.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial windfall makes this a super weekend. A debt may be cancelled. Secrets hurt a romantic relationship. Do not drag your feet in love. Make one last attempt at repairing the damage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You become more active politically. Choose your words carefully when introduced to someone with clout. You have a good idea of what is going on within your family right now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your personal magnetism overcomes all barriers now. Resist an urge to take off for parts unknown. You make the greatest progress by staying close to home. Do not rely solely on your intuition.

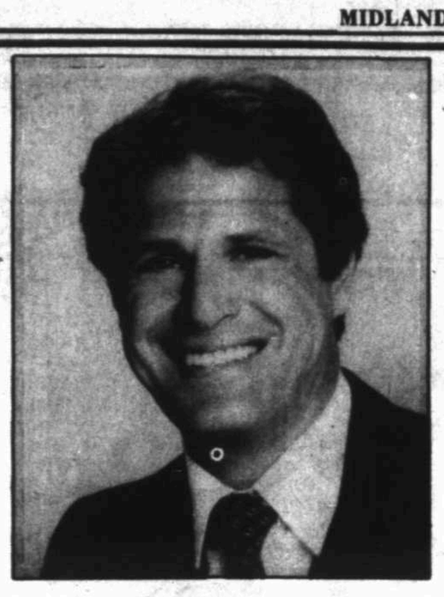

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome the arrival of a newcomer. He/she will change the direction in which things are moving at place of employment. Seize an opportunity to gain the upper hand in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone makes a valiant effort on your behalf. Show your appreciation. A new love satisfies. You have a special role to play in a family drama developing behind the scenes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel gives you an advantage you did not have previously. Do not be afraid to reveal your sentimental side. It could win you the heart of someone you have admired from afar.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Clear away those papers cluttering your desk and you will get more work done. Higher-ups are considering you for an important appointment. Postpone buying a new wardrobe.

Sheen sees JFK as hero

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Martin Sheen says he saw John F. Kennedy as a hero, but the British producers of the TV mini-series, "Kennedy," had a more detached perspective of the late president and his family.

"I played him as a hero, no question," said Sheen. "I loved him. I wanted it to be a very positive statement. The British were less into the heroic side of it. They were more into the practical history without the emotions.

"They didn't have as many pre-conceived notions about the Kennedys as we did. They were more practical."

The British, who have thoroughly examined their own royalty in scores of television productions, look at America's own "Camelot" in this seven-hour, three-part miniseries for NBC. It will be telecast Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, concluding exactly 20 years after the assassination of President Kennedy.

The series, which covers only Kennedy's election and days in the White House, also stars John Shea as the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Blair Brown as Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, E.G. Marshall as Joseph Kennedy Sr., Geraldine Fitzgerald as Rose Kennedy and Vincent Gardenia as the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover.

Sheen had previously played Robert Kennedy in the 1974 ABC special, "The Missiles of October," but he was not prepared to play the president.

"I had no desire to play Jack," he said. "The British company came to me in March with the story. Frankly, they didn't have any money and it was a five-month shooting schedule. When I read the script I was fascinated but I did not see myself in it. I didn't see anybody in it."

Sheen said he met with producer Andrew Brown and turned down the role because he didn't want to be away from home for five months. But the producer offered to alter the shooting schedule so he could have time off. "They also came up with a larger money offer when Landsburg and NBC came into the picture. Their original budget was $2.5 million and they finally did it for $10 million."

Sheen said what finally convinced him was when his wife, Janet, said, " 'You loved him. That is a good enough reason,' " Sheen said.

He also kept the family together by having his wife of 22 years play a role as artist Elaine De Kooning, who paints Kennedy's portrait after his election.

He said he and Shea decided that since they didn't physically resemble the Kennedys they would go for the spirit. "Never look back," he said, "never feel intimidated. Go for the spirit.

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

It is all very well to bid aggressively. But you had better have the technique to bring home your ambitious contracts. This hand is from the 1955 Vanderbilt Team Championship. Sitting South was our good friend, Lee Hazen.

North's jump to three spades was not forcing since he was a passed hand. It described his hand nicely. South's four spades was a distinct gamble.

West led his fourth-best diamond and, when dummy appeared, declarer was looking at a lot of potential losers, perhaps including one in trumps. He won the diamond in hand, cashed the ace of trumps and led a club towards the table's king. West rose with the ace and exited with a diamond, taken in dummy.

Obviously, a spade finesse would have been on target, but declarer was not omniscient. He cashed the table's king of clubs, ruffed a diamond in his hand and a club on the board, in the process felling the queen and establishing his jack of clubs.

Declarer returned to his hand with the king of spades and was disappointed to find that he had a trump loser. However, he soon proved that all was not lost.

He cashed his jack of clubs, discarding a heart from dummy. Then he presented East with his trump trick.

Poor East was down to nothing but hearts. He could do no better than cash the ace of hearts and set up dummy's king for the game-going trick.

At the other table Sam Stayman, sitting West, made a psychic one no trump opening bid and East bought the contract at two hearts. That went down two tricks for a gain of 520 points to Hazen's team.

The 'other' choice

The news on Loop 250's construction — as provided by the new chairman of the State Highway Commission — isn't overly encouraging: Robert Lanier says further construction on the loop is on hold until the state can find additional funding.

That's understandable. The state can't build highways without the money. All too often, the highway department's money is doled out before all the projects waiting can be funded. What that means is that the orderly growth and development of some cities — like Midland — are packed in mothballs until money is obtained.

Despite Midland's evolvement as a regional air transportation center and the other transportation services available here, the city's future still remains largely tied to the highway network. Good highway transportation benefits growth and development in Midland.

The importance of Loop 250 to Midlanders even extends beyond that level, as anyone who has lived in the Tall City for any length of time knows. For decades Midland has experienced a "boom-bust" cycle of growth that has made the future always a question mark in many respects. During the "boom" periods, Midlanders have witnessed what the preceding period of growth has done to their network of city streets and the all-important highways that connect Midland to sister city Odessa and the rest of the outside world. Frankly, we Midlanders haven't always been pleased with what we've seen.

Streets haven't been able to handle the volume of traffic, resulting in greater danger to motorists and traffic congestion that rivaled even Houston and Dallas. To say the least, the situation demands action before the next "boom," which some say isn't all that far off.

Lanier and other State Highway Commission officials say the only way the department can perform work the Midland Chamber of Commerce has requested is by obtaining additional funding by raising the state gasoline tax five cents per gallon, raising the state automobile registration fee or by implementing a tax on accessory automobile parts.

None of those alternatives is particularly appealing but, then, neither were the traffic jams and long drives to work during the last "boom."

Grenada perspective

Some of the more quotable quotations of the past week came from the lips of the president of the United States and New York's Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

President Reagan refused to comment directly on secret United States operations against the Nicaraguan government, but he did express his opinion as follows about policies of secrecy:

"I do believe in the right of a country, when it believes its interests are best served, to practice covert activity."

After the American medical students were rescued from Grenada they were invited to the White House by Mr. Reagan. He greeted them with these words:

"It is very easy for some smug know-it-all in a plush, protected quarter to say that you were in no danger. I have wondered how many of them would have changed places with you."

You can always count on Pat Moynihan to be candid and honest, as well as interesting, in his comments on the events of the day. As an early critic of the Grenada rescue operation, he was one of the first to come right out and say he was wrong. After that bomb went off in a corridor of the United States Senate, here is what the inimitable solon from the Empire State had to say:

"You can bomb the Capitol, but you cannot bomb democracy."

Another View:

Anderson's new trail

John Anderson's decision to form a new political party is puzzling.

Anderson himself concedes that his National Unity Party can't put him in the White House. What he clearly does hope it can do is get him on the ballot in 10 states, enough to qualify for $5.8 million in federal campaign funds. In itself, that's hardly a worthy public cause.

While the money obviously would enable Anderson to put his name and his ideas before the public, he's already had one such opportunity (in his 1980 race as an independent) and nothing much came of it. He received a lot of media attention but no electoral votes. The record shows that independent and third party candidates usually lose momentum the second time around.

If the 1984 race should prove to be a close match between the Republican and Democratic nominees, Anderson might draw enough popular votes away from the Democrat to assure a GOP victory. Could that possibly be what he has in mind?

True, he was a Republican until he lost out to Ronald Reagan in the 1980 race for the GOP nomination. However, since entering the '80 campaign as an independent — and to some extent even before that time — Anderson has espoused views that could pass for those of a moderate Democrat. Public opinion polls show that virtually all of his present followers are people who otherwise would support a Democratic candidate.

In some circumstances of course, a third party can serve a useful purpose without attracting a large share of the vote. The People's Party campaign in 1982 called attention to social needs that the major parties had been slow to address. Some of its ideas were later taken over by the Democrats and by liberal elements of the GOP.

So far, however, Anderson isn't blazing any new trails, or offering new ideas. Thus, a clear rationale for his party and his candidacy has yet to emerge.

CHARLEY REESE

Shadows still cover world today

Veterans Day last week was, as it should be, focused on the veterans of our wars and not on the historical event, Armistice Day, 1918, which ended World War I.

Unfortunately, we are today still living in the shadows of that war, still embroiled in the unraveling of world order which it caused.

Charley Reese

In a most real sense, World War I marked the loss of innocence. Though the people who blundered into it did not realize it, technology had already made war too costly a means of settling disputes. World War I brought the machine gun, the airplane, the tank, poison gas, and massive artillery barrages. The war killed 10 million soldiers (600,000 died in the battle of Verdun), including 116,000 Americans. Another 200,000 Americans were wounded.

World War I bankrupted Europe (Europeans still owe the United States $26 billion from World War I), wiped out whole generations, and set the stage for the Great Depression and the continuation of World War I which we call World War II. That one wiped out about 55 million people.

Our most recent dead in Beirut are a legacy of World War I. That war ended the Ottoman Empire and created the present Middle East and its disputes which are, 65 years later, still soaking the ancient soil with blood.

From out of World War I came the Bolshevik Revolution and the Soviet Union. World War I was the wound that eventually destroy the European colonial empires, the legacy of which is the turmoil today in Africa and Asia.

It was also the beginning of systematic deception of the American people by their own government. It was a banker's war, passed off as a war to save democracy. Woodrow Wilson, an arrogant elitist, allowed American bankers, principally J.P. Morgan, to get so heavily involved in lending to Britain that our neutrality became a farce and Wilson went into the war (after promising to keep us out) simply to save the financers.

One month before Wilson went to Congress to ask for a declaration of war he received the following cable from his close friend, Walter H. Page, who was in London:

"If we should go to war with Germany the greatest help we could give the Allies would be such a credit (a large credit)...Trade would be continued and enlarged until the war ends, and after the war, Europe would continue to buy food and would buy from us also an enormous supply of things to re-equip her peace industries. We should thus reap the profit of an uninterrupted, perhaps an enlarging trade over a number of years...Perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present prominent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted."

That cable was never made public until 1936

It was from World War I that the axis of American and British financial elitists was formed that until this day has often twisted our foreign policy until it is nothing more than a supply of American muscle for British brains. We alienated Latin America to back Great Britian in hanging on to the Falkland Islands but the British roundly condemned us for invading Grenada.

The events set in motion in the spring of 1914 by the assassination of an archduke and his wife in a country which no longer exists by a nationalist no one remembers continue to entrap us.

The ghastly shadows of Somme and Verdun are long indeed.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Man appeals for life of loved one

WASHINGTON — In yesterday's column, I told the tragic but poignant love story of Elizabeth and Richard Bouvia, two outcasts who tried to face the world together.

Now Elizabeth, tormented by painful paralysis, has given up the struggle. She has sued for the right to die in peace from starvation; she doesn't have the strength left in her atrophied muscles to commit suicide any other way. All she asks for, as she wastes away, are painkillers to ease the agony of her arthritis.

Jack Anderson

She won't speak to her husband, who keeps coming back to the hospital and getting turned away. Each time, he leaves a rose for her at the reception desk. In desperation, he has appealed to me to publish a message he would have preferred to deliver in private.

"Liz has to know I love her, I need her and I want to spend the rest of my life with her," Richard writes. "Mr. Anderson, I have to make her realize that she is a very bright and lovely lady ... I want her to know how much I love her and want her to live."

To avoid any false pretenses, Richard also wanted me to know that he grew up on the wrong side of town and wound up in prison. Unskilled and unemployed, he had tried to steal the money no one would let him earn.

The romance began while Richard was still in prison. Elizabeth first wrote to him, then visited him. After his release, they were married — the ex-convict and the nearly helpless cripple, two lonely people rejected by others. In a moment of frustration, he walked out on Elizabeth. But he telephoned that he was sorry, and she pleaded, "Come and get me."

Flat broke, he tried to hitchhike across the country to Riverside, Calif., where she had checked into a hospital. He became stranded in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and the hospital refused to accept his collect telephone calls. When at last he reached Riverside, Elizabeth had given up and wanted only to die.

Now Richard has entrusted me with a handwritten letter, which he fears will never reach her except through the public prints. It's scrawled on yellow stationery, with a bouquet of flowers at the bottom. The spelling is poor and the phrasing sometimes awkward. But the message is eloquent.

"Dearest Liz," the letter begins. "Sweetheart I want to say I am very sorry that I left you all by yourself in Oregon. And I want you to know that the reason I left had nothing to do with your handicap. I was a lot of pressure I felt ... and not being able to see any chance of obtaining employment in such a small town.

"I want you to know how happy I was when you contacted me and wanted me to come and get you out of the hospital .... I know you have mentioned you wanted to die at times when you have your arthritis pain, and when you get depressed. Because of all the problems with attendants and ... all the red tape and hassle you get from all the government agencies.

"But I want you to know I love you and care very much for you. And I need and want you as my wife for many years in the future. And I am seeking employment daily and I am very confident I will be employed in the near future.

"My next goal will be to get an apartment or house that will be accessible for you. Well I will start close by saying this, Liz, if you insist upon given the right to die and succeed part of me will die with you. I hope you realize I love you deerly and from the bottom of my heart, and I am praying for you daily ....

"Liz you don't realize how much you are hurting the only person who has ever cared or loved you. I am pleading with you, not to continue this. We can work it out, life isn't really all that bad .... I will send you another rose tomorrow."

The letter is signed "Your loving husband, Richard."

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: If you think economists are hard to understand, you are not alone. At a recent briefing for members of Congress, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker was tossing around such abbreviations as GNP (for Gross National Product) and M-1 (for the total amount of currency and checks in circulation). He was interrupted by a congressman who said: "In my district, people think GNP is a drug teenagers are using, and they think M-1 is a rifle used by the Army."

— Federal investigators estimate that duplicate and excess facilities at 13 aircraft maintenance depots around the country cost the taxpayers at least $100 million a year. In April 1981, a Pentagon task force was appointed to study the matter. In six months the group met nine times, agreed on a number of maintenance improvements and identified problems that needed further study. The items needing study were identical to those the task force had been appointed to study.

INSIDE REPORT:

Islam issues threat to U.S.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Secret plans are afoot to convert 600,000 Shiite Moslems in Southern Lebanon into a massive resistance force against Israeli occupation, further threatening vulnerable "peace-keeping" Marines here and presenting menacing implications for the U.S. throughout the Arab world.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The spiritual leader of Lebanon's million-plus Shiites in an interview with us — the first since Israel withdrew its forces to the Awali River — laid bare the advice he is sending his followers in Israeli-occupied territory: "Refuse the occupation, do not communicate or normalize relations with the enemy, express your refusal every minute every day."

Sheik Shams el-Din, the patriarch of Lebanon's near-majority Shiite population and head of the Supreme Shiite Council, sent a collateral warning to Washington that America is held directly responsible for Israel's continued presence in Lebanon.

"We believe that they cannot stay without American acceptance," he told us. One clear implication: The role of the Marines, welcomed here as peace-keepers, is insensibly being converted into that of adversary.

The Supreme Shiite Council should not be confused with the militantly anti-American Khomeini-Iranian strain of Shiite extremists. On the contrary, Shams el-Din is traditionally pro-American. He replaced ill-fated Shiite leader Moussa Sadr, who mysteriously disappeared and is believed to have been murdered by Libyan strongman Muammer Qaddafi.

He is not anti-Western and has never before attempted to exploit his spiritual leadership for political purposes. He is sought out by U.S. diplomats, most recently by Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew last Monday (Nov. 14).

Prospective revolt of the Shiites is one more drop of poison in the Lebanon cauldron. The poison is laced with the same irony that has polluted everything the U.S. has attempted here since the Israeli invasion, and those ironies abound:

The Marines were welcomed as peace-keepers but are now suspected of arms-length collusion with the Israelis (despite their refusal of Israeli help after the Oct. 23 Marine massacre).

The Shiites in Southern Lebanon, who never before gave Israel trouble, are now turning hostile even though they benefited from Israel's uprooting of the hated PLO.

The U.S. is seeking "reconciliation" of sectarian passions that would turn a political wasteland into a stable government, but finds it cannot be done while Israel holds the South. Yet Israel's occupation is directly blamed on the U.S.-sponsored troop withdrawal agreement written with disregard for Syria's historical power throughout Lebanon.

Shiite patriarch Shams el-Din is not trumpeting armed revolt. He is appealing for "civil resistance." He told us that despite his warnings about continued Israeli occupation he is not sure "that Americans understand." Those warnings were taken directly to the State Department last month by one of his agents, a Shiite member of the Lebanese Parliament.

Discussing government paralysis here, he said American "intimacy" with President Amin Gemayel's "ruling regime," a minority faction of Christians, contrasts sharply with American "suspicions" of all other factions in Lebanon's fragmented politics.

Within 48 hours of our talk with Shams el-Din, suspected Shiite collaborators with pro-Israeli Christian militias in the South were blown up by a car bomb. Six other members of rump Shiite militias organized by Israel in the South have been attacked. Shiite mosques are beginning to ring with calls for resistance, a message never heard in the past.

The patriarch warned that the U.S. must make it absolutely clear that the prime American obligation is to Lebanon's independence and nationalism and not to Israel. Shams el-Din is no minor player in the back lots of Beirut, the dreadfully-shattered capital of a homeland without a country.

The warning he voiced raises tough new questions for the U.S. Somewhere down the shadowy road of organized Shiite resistance lies a spectre that is clearly visible only in Iran but haunts the whole Middle East: a resurgent Islam in this moderate Arab state that, as Shams el-Din told us, "may exceed Lebanon and that no one can control."

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak write for Field Enterprises.

Queen, prince visit Gandhi memorial

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A solemn Queen Elizabeth II today placed a flower wreath at the memorial to Mahatma Gandhi, the pacifist hero who led the nationalist movement to end British rule.

The queen and husband Prince Philip, who arrived in India on Thursday for a 12-day stay, visited the Rajghat, or Gandhi memorial, on the banks of the holy Jamuna River.

Barefooted as required by religious tradition, they laid a wreath of roses and carnations on the black marble platform where Gandhi was cremated in 1948, a day after he was assassinated by a Hindu fanatic. They spent a minute in silence.

It was the queen's second visit to Rajghat, where she planted a tree in 1961.

In her toast Thursday night at a state banquet hosted by Indian President Zail Singh, the Queen said the relationship between Britain and India, which gained independence in 1947, has been "preserved as Mahatma Gandhi wished."

Today, the monarch attended a luncheon hosted by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, toured the city's historic Red Fort and visited St. Thomas' Girls' High School, the only remaining Anglican school in the city.

A spokeman for India's presidential palace said the queen will break from her itinerary to award the "Order of Merit" next Thursday to Mother Teresa at the palace.

Mother Teresa, 73, has won the Nobel Peace Prize and numerous other awards for her work with the poor and sick in Calcutta, India.

Tremor rumbles Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A strong earthquake jolted northeastern Turkey early today, injuring at least 20 people and damaging buildings in 30 communities, the state radio said.

A spokesman for the Kandilli Observatory in Istanbul said the quake measured 5.6 on the Richter scale and had its epicenter near Erzican, 550 miles east of Istanbul.

Erzincan is 71 miles southwest of Erzurum, where 1,333 people were killed in a quake Oct. 30 that registered 6.7 on the Richter scale.

The radio quoted Governor Namik Kemal Guchan as saying there were no reports of deaths in today's quake.

He said several public buildings developed wall cracks, and many people fled their homes fearing further tremors. The earthquake was followed by eight aftershocks, the observatory spokesman said.

The initial tremor was felt in Trabzon and Rize, 100 miles north on the Black Sea coast, the semi-official Anatolia news agency said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a ten-fold increase in magnitude.

Nicaragua prepares for U.S invasion

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government, warning of an "imminent" invasion by the United States or regional enemies, has spread war fever among its citizens as it oversees a massive military mobilization.

Rumors of invasion are on the lips of everyone — in the market, at the movie theatres, at work centers, at the soccer field.

Constant denials by U.S. officials both here and in Washington have failed to dispell what Nicaraguans perceive as the surging winds of war.

Restaurants, discos and pizza parlors still do good business at night. But since the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada on Oct. 25, which Sandinista junta coordinator Daniel Ortega called a "prelude" to Nicaragua, the country's war-mood has heightened.

"The United States is preparing the armies of El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala to attack Nicaragua. An invasion is imminent and it is a matter of days, or any minute," Ortega warned in a recent speech.

Radios, TV sets, the newspapers, posters and graffiti on walls blare anti-American propaganda and increasing numbers of military uniforms can be seen in public places.

In the northern part of the country, where the fighting against U.S.-backed rebels has been heavy, soldiers manning an increased number of checkpoints along the roads search vehicles thoroughly for weapons.

Nicaragua's relations have steadily worsened with the United States, which rejects the Sandinista government's Marxist orientation and provides "covert' aid to rebel exiles, including remnants of the regime of Anastasio Somoza, the late rightist ruler ousted by the Sandinistas in 1979.

The government announced a massive war mobilization after the U.S. invasion of Grenada, ordering 40,000 reservists and militiamen to report for military training.

At 36 training centers in the capital, thousands of militiamen are training at a frenetic pace. Since early November, they have been digging trenches and building air raid shelters in many neighborhoods of the capital.

Militiamen with jobs have to use their spare time to train — Monday to Friday from six to nine, Saturday afternoons, and all day Sunday.

Most government employees report to work in olive-green militia uniforms and, upon leaving work, report directly to the training centers.

Rockets vs. Rebs: Tradition at 'The Dump'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Memorial "Dump" Stadium is only 40 years old, but football playoff tradition is something the Old Lady has come up short on over the years. However, there are 12,500 title crazy football fans who say it's never too late to start a tradition.

"The Dump" has never hosted a local team in the playoffs. That all changes today at 8 p.m. when the Midland Lee Rebels host the undefeated El Paso Irvin Rockets in an area championship battle.

A sellout throng of 12,500 is expected for the shootout tonight, not much more than saw Lee down Amarillo High by a 30-3 count last Saturday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium. "The Dump" is also short on seats.

But this contest would seem to be an attraction if it was held in any back alley. Championship contests carry that flavor, regardless of where it is played.

COACH TONY Shaw's Rockets haven't stubbed a toe over 11 games this year. That unblemished record has given them the No. 10 position in the Associated Press football poll. Lee is not ranked by AP, but holds the No. 2 position in the Harris Ratings.

Irvin has scored fewer than 20 points in only one game, a 6-3 win over El Paso Coronado, a victory that insured Irvin's District 1-5A championship. Irvin got its chance to play in The Dump tonight by defeating El Paso Bel Air by a 22-20 count in the bi-district round last Friday night in the Sun Bowl.

"Irvin reminds me a lot of Abilene Cooper and we didn't fare too well against them," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "They throw the ball a lot like Cooper and have a good running game. Irvin's defense is a lot like Midland High's in that they use an eight-man front."

Junior quarterback Felix Valtierra is the key to the Rockets this year. He has passed for 1,563 yards and rushed for an additional 312. He has completed 102 passes this year and thrown only seven interceptions.

VALTIERRA LIKES to hit senior flanker Billy Kubitz and split end Chris Elliott. Kubitz has 37 receptions this season for 728 yards and four TDs. Elliott has caught 33 passes for 724 yards and five TDs. Elliott caught seven passes in the victory over Bel Air last week.

But the Rockets have other weapons also. Senior halfback Chuck Davis has rushed for 978 yards in 11 games and has scored 20 times. Junior halfback Mark Jabor has rushed for an additional 683 yards. Irvin has a very balanced attack as you would expect from an unbeaten team.

"This is the best El Paso team I've seen in quite a while," said Lee assistant Van Tom Whatley. "They have good size and do a lot of things well."

The Irvin defense is spearheaded by linebacker Bruno Tyree, a 205-pound senior, and junior Mike Urias tips the scale at 230 pounds. Offensive center Steve Buraczyk is a 220-pound junior.

Shaw admits that he has some size on his squad, but says his Rockets don't match up with Lee. "They have the biggest bunch of children I've ever seen on one football team. I think they have about a 40 to 50 pound per man weight advantage," says Shaw.

"Lee is such a physical football team. We're now running into the Little Southwest Conference and they take football seriously. Our kids will learn how to play football here. The more times we can face teams like Lee, the better off we will be in the long run. They'll teach us what it is all about."

SHAW SAYS he realizes that his team is unbeaten, but also says a little luck was involved.

"We were down 20-8 to Bel Air with three minutes left in the third quarter and behind on penetrations 5-1. Our kids decided they had to play and some good things started happening," noted Shaw.

The playoffs have given Lee a "new" look also. Fullback Isaac Garnett has been the bread and butter of the Lee attack this season, gaining 1,464 yards rushing through 11 games with 17 touchdowns. But against Amarillo High, Garnett gained only 67 yards while halfback Walter Jones exploded for 156 yards and Tyrone Thurman added an additional 88. Thurman scored twice and Jones scored on a 55-yard sprint. It was a new look for Lee.

"We didn't do anything different. Amarillo didn't give us anything inside and they were a little more vunerable outside," said Dykes.

"I still see Mr. Garnett being shoved down our throats," said Shaw. "He is a great fullback and he is going to be the one you have to stop. But if you worry too much about Garnett, those other two will kill you quick with that speed."

Since neither team has played a common opponent, there is little to gauge the performance of the two squads against each other. However, Lee appears to have a big edge defensively while the Rockets have the offensive advantage.

IRVIN HAS scored 334 points to Lee's 319 this year. But Lee has given up a meager 75 points in 11 games while Irvin has given up 143. Only once have the Rebels allowed more than 20 points to be scored against them in one game. The Rockets have allowed 20 points or better four times.

The 9-2 Rebels have four shutouts to its credit this season while Irvin has one, a 20-0 win over El Paso Ysleta.

The winner of this area battle will face the winner of the Euless Trinity-Fort Worth Trimble Tech area game, which is being played today at 7:30 p.m. at the University of Texas-Arlington stadium in Arlington.

Tonight's two winners will probably meet Saturday morning to determine next week's site and date for that regional battle. Losers tonight are eliminated from the playoffs. Currently, 32 5A teams are left in the state's championship hunt. After this weekend, 16 teams will remain.

Three players given prison term

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — When he became the first active player in major league history sent to jail on a drug charge, Willie Wilson's jaw muscles tightened into a knot that could be seen in the back of the courtroom.

When he became the second, Willie Aikens slumped slightly and began wringing his hands.

When he became the third, Jerry Martin's broad shoulders drooped. He took a deep breath and turned his head to his left and stared in the direction of an open window.

One by one Thursday morning, the three members of the 1983 Kansas City Royals stood before U.S. Magistrate J. Milton Sullivant and made baseball history. In a decision that apparently caught almost everyone by surprise, Sullivant sentenced each player to three months in prison for trying to buy cocaine.

WILSON, THE 1982 American League batting champion, and Aikens, a power-hitting first baseman, also were fined $5,000. Martin, an outfielder who was described by his attorney as being on the verge "of financial catastrophe," was fined $2,500.

Wilson, who issued a public apology last week and announced he would devote his time and money to a Royals-sponsored drug education program, reacted angrily outside the courtroom.

"They made a....example out of me," he said as he and his weeping wife, Kathy, walked to their car."

Wilson's attorney blamed the sentence on the news media.

"The judge did not sentence him because he needed a reason to sentence him, but because the courtroom was full of media," said David Russell.

Russell told a group of reporters, "You guys win. He gave you what you wanted. He didn't sentence like a judge. He abided by the media. There's no justification for what he did."

The three, in a plea agreement with prosecutors, pleaded guilty last month to a misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess cocaine. Sullivant ordered them sent to a minimum security prison in Fort Worth, Texas, to spend three months participating in its drug rehabilitation program. They will also be on two-year probation beginning with the end of their jail terms.

A FOURTH player snared in the investigation of drug trafficking in Kansas City, former All-Star pitcher Vida Blue, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possession of three grams of cocaine. He, too, was to have been sentenced Thursday, but was granted a delay until Dec. 15 for reasons which the government declined to reveal.

Twelve persons — none connected with sports — have been indicted by a grand jury in connection with the investigation and will go to trial early next year.

"The government spends millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money every year to prosecute drug dealers," the judge told each man. "If there were no seekers of illegal drugs, there would be no sellers of illegal drugs."

Sullivant also noted the professional athlete's "special place in society," and said he hoped the sentences would prove a deterrent to would-be drug users. He told Wilson, 28, that he was "a national hero" who occupied a "special place in our society." Sullivant said the three carried the responsibility of setting a good example for young people.

"There are certain obligations and responsibilities you must live up to," he said. "The court regards this as a serious offense. there is an increasing awareness of the harm coming to our society from the proliferation and use of drugs."

DOLORES NISLE, a case management specialist at the Fort Worth prison, said inmates are not locked into cells, although units containing the rooms are locked at night.

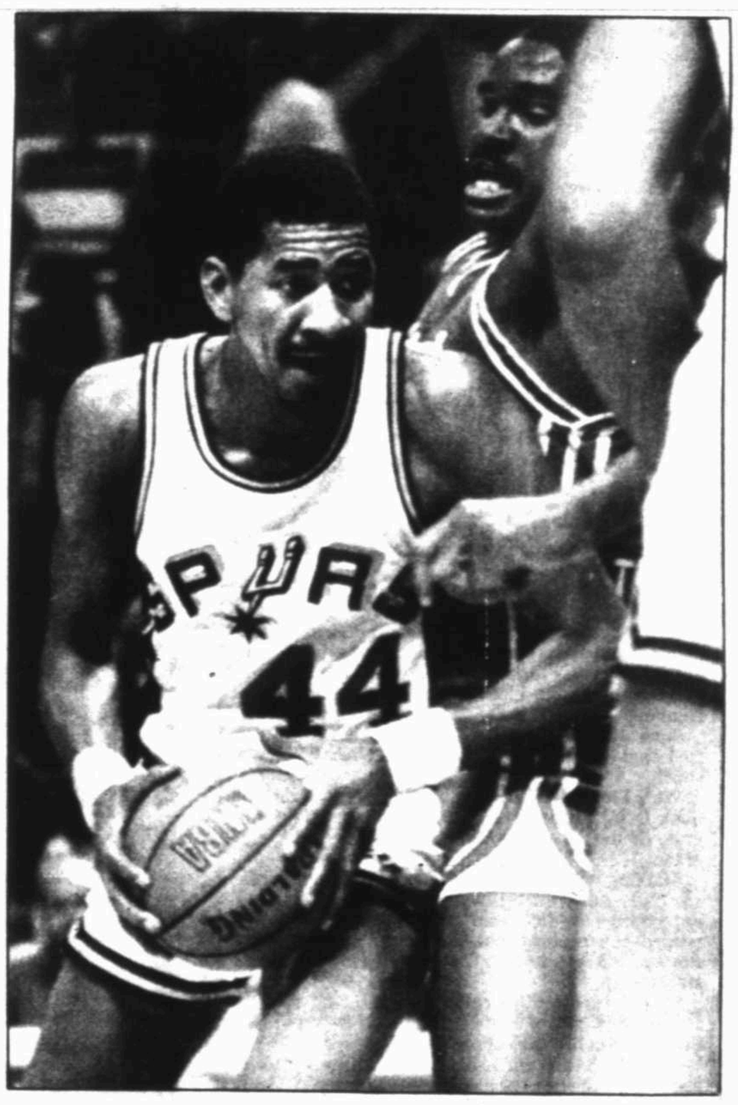

"They have access to phones, there is a library, there is an exercise yard and an auditorium for playing basketball," she said. "There is weight equipment. There is a small church."

All four players may still face disciplinary action by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who declined comment Thursday. Kuhn has said he will announce a decision by Dec. 15.

Blue, the American League Cy Young Award winner and Most Valuable Player, was released by the Royals Aug. 5 after failing to win one game all season. Martin, who spent most of this past season on the disabled list, was released by the Royals about the time of his guilty plea. The Royals announced after the sentencing Thursday that Aikens would not be with the club next year.

"We have made a decision after evaluating our club," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz. "The decision was that Willie is not a part of our plans for 1984."

Schuerholz, who described the entire drug episode as "a kick in the organizational stomach," declined to predict what acion Kuhn might take.

George Gervin (44) scored 35 points Thursday night against the Kansas City Kings, but his San Antonio Spurs lost, 129-128.

This isn't Wyoming football

I remember one of the first things I was told when I moved to Midland back in '81: "High school football is big in Texas. You haven't seen anything like it before."

Well, since I came from Wyoming, that wasn't much of a statement. It's not that they don't play or follow football up there in the mountain country, it's just there aren't very many people in the state. The Permian Basin alone probably has half Wyoming's population and nearly as many football teams.

Needless to say, the Wyoming high school football season is already finished. Since there are only 15 or so high schools in the biggest classification (roughly equivalent to Texas' 5A), there's only one playoff game to determine the state champion. Heck, 64 teams in Texas qualify in 5A.

AND THAT brings me to Midland Lee, one of the 64 — now down to 32 and soon to be 16. The Rebels have more talented football players than any team I've ever seen. They're big, fast, quick and hard-hitting.

They play a running game from the Wishbone formation with a smattering of I thrown in for good measure. They run inside and out. You stop one running back and there are a dozen others waiting to get the job done. They can score on one play or on a drive of 15 plays. And, they win.

At 9-2, the Rebels were only second best in District 4-5A this year, despite beating the best: Odessa Permian, 10-1. They met their first playoff opponent on Saturday — Amarillo High — and conquered. Tonight Lee meets its second foe: El Paso Irvin.

As it's been reported by the news media all year, the Rebels have a well-balanced offensive attack. Balanced, that is, in the sense of which way they're going to run: left, right or up the middle. There is little passing to speak of.

Isaac Garnett, the bruising bull of a fullback, leads the Rebels in rushing with a school record 1,464 yards. On those rare occasions when he's been stopped, there's Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman to contend with. And, those are just the starters. If one of those three needs a break, Coach Spike Dykes can call on Billy Gibbs, Gordon Norris, Jerry Morales, Dirk Bergoon, Randy Ellis, Puhl Webb...

THE SAME holds true at quarterback, the Rebels have good depth. Starter Jeff Motley keeps the attack running like a well oiled machine, smooth and precise. When he's not handing off the ball to his backs he either runs it himself, pitches it out or throws just enough passes — three to five — to keep the defense slightly off balance.

John Abbott, who started the first three games when Motely was down with a shoulder injury — all three victories — and Dennis Matta also see playing time in Dykes' revolving door offense. Dykes kind of sneaks them in when nobody's looking and they get the job done. On one occasion, Matta snuck into the game and on his first carry went 50 yards to set up a touchdown.

That would seem to be enough for any offense, but Lee is deeper than the spotlight positions. Take a look at the offensive line and be glad you're not trying to get through them. At 240 pounds — a miraculous gain of 20 pounds from his game program listing during regular season — Coy Stewart is deadly at guard. He and Devoe McMillen at 205, tackles Tracy Sherman, 200, and John Bick — the little guy at 180 — and center Allen Bell, 205, solidify the front wall. It's a wall that moves.

IF ANYTHING, the Rebs stop their opponent's rushing attacks even better than they move the ball themselves. They take pride in playing hard aggressive football.

Lee probably has the best one-two-three linebacking corps in the district with Reggie Ellis, Michael Johnson and Billy Cornelius. With their mobility, they allow the front line of Eddie Kittle, Nicky Tomlin (ends) Pat Stevens and David Golden (tackles) to ram through offensive blocking, leaving the ball carrier on his own. An unenvial position.

It's an impressive football team. Everyone who told me I'd never seen anything like this kind of football before was right. They do know how to play the game. Let's just hope they keep playing it for five more games. I'd hate to see the team that can stop them.

Lakers show 'Magic' against hapless Cavs

NBA Roundup

By The Associated Press

Earvin "Magic" Johnson is "all business" these days for the Los Angeles Lakers, according to his coach, and it's added up to some pretty impressive numbers for the computer-like guard.

Thursday night, it was another night at the office with 22 assists, 23 points and 9 rebounds as the Lakers routed the Cleveland Cavaliers 127-114 in the National Basketball Association.

Johnson "has been pushing the ball up quickly and hitting the open man very well," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "He's the leader on offense. He just has the ability to turn it on and rise to the occasion. That's what he is doing now.

"The thing that's different about Magic now is that he is more mature and businesslike in his play. Other than that, he's the same old Magic. He takes the responsibility on his shoulders and we want to keep the ball in his hands."

Johnson's 22 assists were one short of the Lakers' club record of 23 set by Jerry West in 1967. The performance increased his league-leading assists average to 14.9 per game.

In his last five games, Johnson has been just short of remarkable. He is averaging 20.2 points per game, on 75 per cent shooting from the floor, with 16.6 assists and 8.2 rebounds in that span.

'Hollywood' Henderson's sordid saga continues

Former football great back in rehabilitation center

By JOSEPH SANCHEZ
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LONG BEACH, Calif. — There are two sides to the latest chapter in the story of Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the sometimes controversial former professional football star.

Side 1: On the evening of Oct. 3, two teen-age girls, a 15-year-old pushing a 17-year-old in a wheelchair along Ocean Boulevard, were approached by a young man who introducted himself as Hollywood Henderson. They were impressed and accepted his invitation to go to his apartment to see his memorabilia. Two-and-a-half hours later, they returned with police, charging Henderson with holding them against their will, using a gun to force them to smoke cocaine and holding the gun to the 15-year-old's head while she performed oral copulation on him.

Side 2: On the evening of Oct. 3, Thomas Henderson was on his way home when he was solicited by two young women of the street, just outside his fashionable Long Beach apartment. He accepted their offer to "party," but when one snatched a $100 bill from the desk in his apartment, he brandished an unloaded .38-caliber handgun and ordered them out of his apartment.

The question of who is telling the truth will be determined later in a municipal court in Long Beach.

Henderson, who three years ago became the first professional athlete ever to publicly admit a drug problem, Tuesday had himself admitted to an Orange County drug rehabilitation center. His arraignment on five felony charges has been delayed until his attorney, Arnold Gold, has had time to review the charges, which could bring a 16-year prison term.

MEANWHILE, THE question of where to place the guilt in the incident is being debated in the community. Henderson's apartment is on the first floor of a 14-unit building on Ocean Boulevard, an integrated, low-crime area, less than 25 yards from the beach. His neighbor, Richard Belcher, has been tending to it in his absence.

"I was right upstairs the night this happened," he said. "I didn't hear anything — no noise, no screaming. That's why I think it was a setup.

"If you know Thomas," he said, "you know he wouldn't need a gun. He's very good-looking, very personable and you should see some of the beautiful women he dates."

Before the incident, Henderson had worked for a local construction-demolition company for a time, in association with former University of California, Los Angeles tackle Larry Agajanian, a local real estate agent.

"I haven't seen him for a few weeks because he was on a promotional tour for a movie he did with "Too Tall" Jones and a couple of other Cowboys," said Agajanian, "but from my standpoint, the story the two girls told is just not logical."

Because of their protected identity as minors, only the Long Beach Police Department can speak for the credibility of the two girls, and detective Jerry Gaddaw is firm in his support of their story.

Anybody who would suggest the girls are street brats or worse "is speaking from ignorance," he said.

THE 17-YEAR-old, said Gabban, was the victim of an automobile accident several months ago and has a "partial paralysis from the waist down." Why, he asked, would a 6-foot-3, 225-pound, 30-year-old former all-pro linebacker need a gun — even an unloaded gun — to chase the girls away?

In a luxurious Beverly Hills office building are the offices of Arnold Gold, the attorney who first met Henderson about three years ago when he was asked to represent him in a workman's compensation suit against the Miami Dolphins (Henderson's last team) and the NFL Management Council.

Gold attempted to answer that question.

"In the situation Thomas was placed in," said Gold, "you have three courses of action: One, you can let them go and lose your money; two, you can wrestle them for the money and possibly hurt somebody, and three, you can show some force like Thomas did, get your money back, and frighten them off without anybody getting hurt." Somewhere in a hospital room in a drug rehabilitation center in Orange County, Thomas Henderson is hurting.

FOR AS LONG as anyone can remember, Henderson has been addicted to attention, a compelling affliction that may have led to his dependence on drugs.

It was the flair of Henderson's play at little Langston College in Oklahoma that attracted the attention of Dallas Cowboys scouts (the Cowboys drafted him in the first round in 1975), but when he began to carry it over to the sidelines, he quickly lost favor with his coach, Tom Landry.

A media favorite who christened himself "Hollywood," Henderson first attracted national attention with his outrageous boasts at Super Bowl XII , when he declared that he, and not Denver's Tom Jackson, was the best outside linebacker in pro football. Two years later — after a much-publicized mugging for the television cameras during a Cowboys loss to Washington — Landry shipped him off to San Francisco, where he began a rapid decline that eventually led to a drug treatment center in Arizona.

It was there that Henderson acknowledged that he had a $1,000-a-day cocaine addiction, saying he'd been involved in drugs since he was 14. "I found myself past the point of doing drugs," he said then. "Drugs were doing me." A second chance at Miami failed when Henderson aggravated a neck injury he had suffered with the 49ers, and he left football on unfriendly terms, bringing the workman's compensation suit against the Dolphins and the league before beginning anew in private life.

That took him to Long Beach, where he worked for the construction company briefly before going on the promotional circuit for the movie and a book he is writing. He had only been back in town a couple of weeks when the incident occurred.

"People wonder why these athletes get into drugs, and I'm not condoning it, but it's damned understandable," Gold said. "They take a 20-year old kid out of the ghetto, stuff his pockets with hundreds of thousands of dollars, shoot him full of 'hurt no-more,' send him out to play hurt and they expect him to stay off drugs?"

Chaps suffer first defeat

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Despite two crowd pleasing shots from mid-court by Zeak Williams, Midland College suffered its first basketball defeat of the season here Thursday night in the Hutchinson Classic tournament with an 89-85 loss to Shelby State Community College of Memphis.

Ironically, Shelby State is the college that MC president Dr. Jess Parrish came from. It was one of those nights when the Chaparrals, now 5-1 on the year, couldn't capture a lead.

The Chaps trailed by as many as 11 points in the first half before closing the gap to 53-44 at the half. MC trailed by 13 points with three minutes left in the game, but a rally almost pulled this one out for MC.

Williams hit a shot beyond mid-court to end the first half and sunk another mid-court volley at the end of the game. He ended up with 12 points on the night.

Big Spring freshman Jerald Wrightsil led all Chap scorers with 20 points on a 10 of 17 effort from the field. Jackie Phinnessee hit seven of 10 from the field in his 17 point effort and Teviin Binns had 15 points with five of seven from the field.

Shelby got 22 points from Hurd as he led all scorers in the game.

The Chaparrals will face the Hutchinson Blue Dragons at 8:30 p.m. today and will go against Snow College Utah at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

Boston College falls to Liberty

BOSTON (AP) — Last week, Boston College was ranked 13th and a prime candidate for the Fiesta Bowl. Now the Eagles are ranked 18th and ticketed for the less prestigious Liberty Bowl.

Coach Jack Bicknell can't understand why anyone should be upset.

"Two bowls in a row says that our program is going in the right direction," he says. "It's funny how you ca have one bowl and everybody's excited and then you get your second bowl and everybody's saying, 'Oh, well, we should have gone somewhere else.' I have a little trouble figuring that out."

Such disappointment is an indication that fans feel that nothing is beyond his football team's reach.

With Bicknell's wide-open offense and quarterback Doug Flutie's scrambling and throwing talents, no deficit seems too large for the Eagles to erase.

Starting with the arrival of Bicknell and Flutie in 1981, continuing with a Tangerine Bowl appearance in 1982 and culminating with a 7-1 record and reports that the Fiesta Bowl wanted Boston College in 1983, the Eagles' ride has been straight up.

Last Saturday, the roller coaster cart finally started downward with a 21-10 loss at Syracuse. Still, the Eagles have come a long way.

From 1968 through 1977, they had nine winning records in 10 seasons. But the mediocrity of their schedule precluded any postseason offers. In 1978, they were 0-11.

"We were trying as hard 10 years ago as we are now," says Boston College Athletic Director Bill Flynn, who was captain of the 1938 football squad that was 6-2-1. "Things are falling into place now."

School athletic officials list many reasons for the team's rise to national prominence:

—The NCAA's decision about six years ago to limit schools to 95 football scholarships, preventing hoarding of talent by the top schools and leaving better players for teams like Boston College.

—The breakup about three years ago of the major college teams into two divisions, I-A and I-AA. That gave Boston College the recruiting advantage of being the only school within a four-hour drive of Boston that plays a major-college schedule.

—The improved schedule. In 1971, Boston College was 9-2 with victories over teams like Richmond, Villanova and Massachusetts. This year the Eagles are the only team that beat Clemson and end their regular-season against Alabama. The first three opponents next season are Alabama, North Carolina and Miami (Fla.).

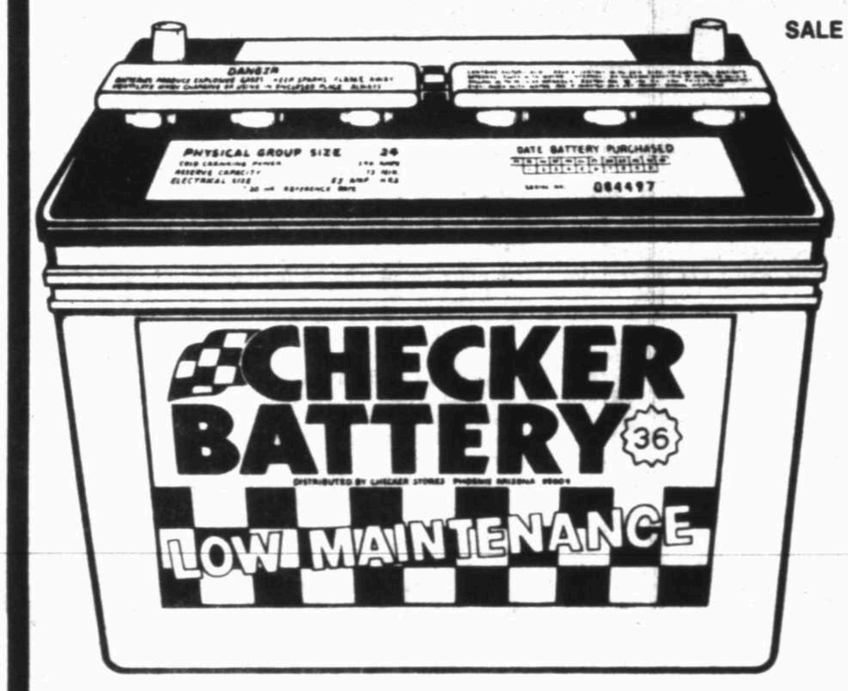

—The addition of two coaching assistants, giving Bicknell a staff of eight, when he arrived in 1981.

—The formation of the Big East basketball conference in 1979. That gave Boston College greater national recognition, enhanced by the fact that it, Virginia and North Carolina are the only three schools to reach the final 16 of the NCAA basketball tournament in each of the last three seasons.

—The fortuitous coupling of Flutie and Bicknell.

Minnesota's Dennis Maruk goes over the back of Philadelphia's Ron Sutter in a near collision on the ice Thursday night. The North Stars haven't won in Philly since 1978, but they did skate to a 5-5 tie in this National Hockey League outing.

North Stars will take tie

By The Associated Press

The Minnesota North Stars still haven't won in Philadelphia since 1978.

And after Thursday night, the North Stars aren't complaining.

Brian Bellows scored with 20 seconds left in regulation and the Minnesota goal empty to rally the North Stars into a 5-5 tie with the Flyers, who squandered a three-goal lead and held a whopping edge in shots on goal.

Philadelphia took a 5-2 lead early in the final period on a goal by Dave Poulin, and with the Flyers firing away — they finished with a 51-27 margin in shots — they seemed in good shape.

But the North Stars, who are 0-7-3 in Philadelphia's Spectrum since April 9, 1978, managed to come back.

First, Al MacAdam scored at 4:14 to pull Minnesota within 5-3. Then Brad Maxwell tallied at 15:52. And, finally, Bellows scored his second goal of the game to tie it after the North Stars had pulled goalie Gilles Meloche.

"When you are down 5-2 in this building, you aren't thinking of the score," Bellows said. "You just try to keep working and hoping."

"I think the tie showed a lot about our team," Bellows said. "I think we were a little conserative (in the overtime, when a Minnesota penalty carried over from regulation) because we didn't want to waste what we had accomplished. It would have been unfair for us to lose at that point."

The Flyers took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Tim Kerr's 20-foot drive before Bellows tied it in the second period on a power play.

Rich Sutter and Ilkka Sinisalo scored for Philadelphia 45 seconds apart later in the period. Brad Marsh also scored for the Flyers in the second period while Craig Hartsburg countered for the North Stars.

"It's the same old story," said Flyers Coach Bob McCammon. "We played 40 minutes and that's not good enough."

In other NHL games, Montreal downed Detroit 4-2; Quebec beat Hartford 4-2; Boston stopped Toronto 4-1; and Calgary defeated New Jersey 5-4.

Montreal 4, Detroit 2

Bobby Smith continued to play well for the Canadiens as he scored his ninth goal in 10 games for Montreal.

Smith, obtained in a trade with Minnesota last month, scored midway through the third period to give host Montreal a 3-1 lead. It was Smith's 12th goal overall this season.

Mario Tremblay added an insruance goal at 17:34 when he rammed a centering pass from John Chabot past Detroit goalie Greg Stefan.

John Ogrodnick, who scored the Red Wings' first goal in the first period, scored again with 12 seconds left in the game on a power play.

Quebec 4, Hartford 2

Two of the Stastny brothers teamed up in Hartford to lift the Nordiques. Peter Stastny took a pass from brother, Anton, and shot the puck past Hartford goalie Greg Millen at 4:42 of the third period to break a 2-2 tie.

Wilf Paiement scored an empty-net goal with 1:12 left in the game as the Nordiques broke a three-game losing streak.

Hartford had taken a 2-1 lead late in the second period when Risto Siltanen fired the puck from the point past Quebec goalie Dan Bouchard on a power play. Siltanen got an assist on Hartford's first goal when he shot from the point and Sylvain Turgeon tipped it home during a two-man advantage.

But the Nordiques tied it 45 seconds later on a goal by Dave Pichette, assisted by Anton Stastny.

Bruins 4, Maple Leafs 1

The game celebrated the 55th anniversary of the opening of Boston Garden, and the Bruins remained the only unbeaten and untied team in the NHL by beating Toronto.

Ray Bourque's power-play goal early in the second period broke a 1-1 tie as the Bruins went on to win their eighth game at home this season. Bourque later suffered a bruised hip and missed the third period.

Ohio State, Texas, SMU all picked for victories

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

It won't be for the Rose Bowl, but that doesn't mean there will be any letup when 10th-ranked Ohio State visits No. 8 Michigan Saturday.

"These are the games you come here to play," said Michigan center Tom Dixon. "It'll be intense, but it'll be a lot of fun. Let's face it, practice in the middle of the season isn't always very exciting. But I like preparing for these Ohio State games."

Michigan hasn't liked the outcome of late, losing three of the past four meetings.

"Beating Ohio State at any time is satisfying," said guard Stefan Humphries. "Having rhe Rose Bowl at stake, of course, adds some flavor to the game, but I don't think it will take anything away from this week. We just like to beat those guys."

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce was asked to pick the outcome, but had to demur.

"Oh, no, I can't pick a score," he said. "I'm not allowed to do that."

Bruce was told in midseason by the NCAA to stop selecting winners on his weekly TV show.

It's not illegal here. Michigan is a 2½-point favorite and the pick, with the winner going to the Sugar Bowl and the loser to the Fiesta, is ... Ohio State 17-14.

Last week's record was 38-14 for a percentage of .731. On the year, it's 325-123-6—.726. Against the spread, last week the mark was 18-8-2—.692. For the season, it's 128-116-6—.525.

Baylor at No. 2 Texas (favored by 13): A good-sized spread for a team that has struggled three weeks in a row against lesser opposition. The suspicion here is that the Longhorns are about to put it all together ... Texas 24-10.

No. 4 Illinois at Northwestern (no line): The Rose Bowl-bound Illini are ripe for a letdown, so it's a good thing they're playing Northwestern ... Illinois 35-14.

No. 6 Southern Methodist (7) at Arkansas: The Mustangs are annoyed over being snubbed by the major bowls ... SMU 24-14.

Utah at No. 9 Brigham Young (no line): The Cougars' point total has dropped in each of their past four outings. Time for a recount ... BYU 42-17.

Minnesota at No. 11 Iowa (no line): Minnesota has lost to Ohio State, Michigan and Illinois by an average score of 59-17 ... Iowa 59-17.

No. 13 Clemson (7) at South Carolina: The Tigers might have a letdown after downing North Carolina and blasting Maryland, but this is one of the better intrastate rivalries ... Clemson 28-14.

No. 14 West Virginia (8) at Syracuse: In case you hadn't noticed, the improving Orangemen are 5-5. Upset Special of the Week ... Syracuse 21-17.

Washington State at No. 15 Washington (13½): Last year, the Cougars knocked the Huskies out of the Rose Bowl. Lightning doesn't strike twice ... Washington 28-21.

Penn State at No. 17 Pitt (5): After a horrendous 0-3 start, the Nittany Lions can finish 8-4 ... Penn State 21-14.

Holy Cross vs. No. 18 Boston College (14) at Foxboro, Mass.: A warmup before the Eagles' Liberty Bowl date with Notre Dame ... Boston College 30-14.

No. 19 Missouri (17½) at Kansas: A four-game winning streak and a bowl bid probably saved Missouri Coach Warren Powers' job ... Missouri 28-14.

No. 20 Maryland (9) at North Carolina State: The Terps are fighting mad after being embarrassed by Clemson ... Maryland 35-21.

Other games:

East — Temple (3½) 24, Rutgers 17.

South — Memphis State 27, Arkansas State 17; Tennessee (6) 24, Kentucky 14; Mississippi State 27, Mississippi (3½) 14; North Carolina (14½) 34, Duke 17; Southern Mississippi 24, East Carolina 17; Southwestern Louisiana 28, Louisiana Tech 21; Virginia Tech (3½) 28, Virginia 7.

Midwest — Bowling Green 28, Kent State 7; Purdue (7) 35, Indiana 24; Oklahoma State (10½) 24, Iowa State 14; Cincinnati 20, Miami, Ohio 14; Northern Illinois 27, Ohio U. 13; Notre Dame (14½) 24, Air Force 17; Toledo 21, Central Michigan 20; Western Michigan 30, Eastern Michigan 14; Wisconsin (12½) 28, Michigan State 14.

Southwest — Houston (7½) 27, Texas Tech 17; Texas A&M (7) 34, Texas Christian 14; Texas-El Paso 24, Weber State 17.

Far West — Arizona State 31, San Jose State 14; Kansas State 34, Colorado (3) 24; Fresno State 28, Northern Arizona 14; Hawaii 33, Pacific 12; Nevada-Las Vegas 28, Long Beach State 24; New Mexico 28, San Diego State 14; New Mexico State 35, West Texas State 20; Oregon (13½) 35, Oregon State 17; UCLA (3½) 27, Southern California 21; California (5) 28, Stanford 14; Wyoming 24, Colorado State 21.

Bears block Texas title

By The Associated Press

The Texas Longhorns can earn a Cotton Bowl berth and a share of the Southwest Conference football title Saturday by defeating Baylor.

If they don't, then the Longhorns have the luxury of trying it one more time the following week against Texas A&M.

No. 2 ranked Texas is 6-0 in the SWC and 9-0 overall.

No. 6 ranked Southern Methodist, which plays Arkansas in Little Rock at 11:35 a.m. in a nationally (ABC) televised game, trails the 'Horns by a game.

Should SMU and Texas tie the 'Horns would get the bowl because they beat the Mustangs.

Meanwhile, SMU is expected to accept a Sun Bowl berth opposite Alabama after Saturday's game against the Razorbacks. It will be played on Christmas Eve.

Texas was a 13-point favorite over the Bluebonnet Bowl-bound Bears, who are expected to accept a bid for a New Year's Eve date against Oklahoma State following the game.

SMU rated a 7-point choice over the Razorbacks.

In other games, Texas A&M was a touchdown pick over Texas Christian in Fort Worth and Houston was also a touchdown choice over Texas Tech in a night game in the Astrodome.

Baylor brings the most potent offense in the SWC against the Longhorn defense, which is the best in the nation.

The Bears have not beaten Texas in Austin since 1951. There was a tie in 1957.

"Their defense is so good it shouldn't be called the Texas Longhorns," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "They should be called the Texas Scrooges. They are stingy."

Texas' defense has yielded just one touchdown in the last five games.

The 'Horns have allowed an average of only 188.3 yards pr game, best in the nation. Texas also leads the country in defending against the pass (87.2 yards) and against scoring (7.8).

Baylor has the SWC's top offense at 411.6 yards per game and quarterbacks Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke are 1-2 in passing.

"Our football team, although it's very young, is not intimidated by playing the No. 2 team in the nation in their own back yard," Teaff said. "But that's not to say we don't respect them. Like you have respect for any great person, team or champion of any kind, we have respect for the University of Texas Football team.

"It should be a great matchup with our very productive offense and their stingy defense."

Texas Coach Fred Akers said of the Bears: "They are riding high. It should be a great test. It should be a great football game."

A crowd between 70,000 and 75,000 fans are expected in the 73rd renewal of the series. Texas leads 53-15-4.

Harvard, Yale meet for 100th time

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — To Coach Carm Cozza, whose 1-8 Yale football team is having its worst season in history, this week's game against Harvard is a chance to gain some pride and a little revenge over a team that started them on their longest-ever losing streak.

But to Harvard Coach Joe Restic, whose Crimson are shooting for the Ivy League in the game Saturday, much more is involved in the 100th playing of The Game.

"This game will be remembered more than any game ever played on this continent," Restic claimed. "We're talking about 100 years of football — the color, the tradition. It'll all culminate that day."

Added Yale President A. Bartlett Giamatti, "It is probably the last great 19th Century pageant left in the country."

Yale and Harvard first met in 1875. Each team played under different rules then, and agreed to compromise for that game, which Harvard won, 4 goals to none.

Since then, World Wars and other events have interrupted the 108-year-old series. Yale has won 54 times, Harvard 37. There have been eight ties.

Despite its billing as THE GAME, the Elis' spotty performance this season may take the luster out of Saturday's contest. Until last week's upset of Princeton, Yale was riding a nine-game losing streak that began with last year's thumping by Harvard.

Harvard is tied with Penn and Dartmouth atop the league. If Harvard wins and the two schools — who play each other Saturday — tie, the Crimson will take the title alone.

But the Harvard-Yale game was meant for the unexpected.

Harvard, for example, carried a mediocre record into the 1979 game and stunned the Bulldogs with a 22-7 victory, Yale's first loss in an otherwise undefeated season.

And then there was the 29-29 deadlock in 1968, which alumni still call the Great Tie. Yale had the longest winning streak in the nation, 16 games, and with quarterback Brian Dowling and running back Calvin Hill was highly favored. Harvard also was undefeated that year and secured the tie with 16 points in 42 seconds late in the game.

Yale athletic director Frank Ryan, who says he tried not to orchestrate any activities that would distract from the game itself, has managed to raise ticket prices to $20 from their usual $10 and to squeeze almost 5,000 additional seats into the Yale Bowl.

Gulf reorganization overdue, chairman says

Proxy fight may hurt drive for energy independence

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. Chairman James E. Lee admits his firm should have reorganized under Delaware's more protective corporate laws long before Mesa Petroleum Co. moved to influence the nation's fifth-largest oil company.

Lee, in an interview with The Associated Press, also warned the outcome of Gulf's current proxy battle with Mesa Chairman T. Boone Pickens could affect America's drive for energy independence and the future of other major corporations.

A special shareholders' meeting Dec. 2 in Pittsburgh will decide whether Gulf may incorporate its holding company under Delaware laws, a move which would help prevent Pickens' group from winning one or two seats on Gulf's board of directors next spring.

Pickens leads an investors' group holding 10.8 percent of Gulf's stock worth about $800 million. He is lobbying shareholders against Gulf's bid to eliminate certain voting rights available under its incorporation in Pennsylvania.

ASKED IF GULF SHOULD have joined scores of other major firms incorporated in Delaware long before Pickens' challenge, Lee said Wednesday that, "It should have been done, I think.... I understand it's been raised by our people several times in the past."

But, Lee said, executives were afraid that dissenting shareholders could have demanded Gulf buy back their shares at higher-than-market prices and taken the firm to court for the money.

Lee said the fear was that "you'd have a lot of shares dumped on the company and it would create financial problems."

Lee, however, later said the "dissenter's rights" challenge "is probably not going to be pursued by many people."

THE EXECUTIVE SAID Pickens' plan to boost Gulf's stock values by spinning off the firm's petroleum assets into a royalty trust could have "political and economic consequences" nationwide.

Lee said royalty trusts, applied so far only at relatively small companies, would drain major integrated firms like Gulf of cash needed to replenish domestic oil and gas reserves and reduce dependence on imported fuels.

"We don't want to wrap ourselves in the flag, but it's going to take the large integrated companies with financial resources and technology and people to do the job that needs to be done," Lee said.

"We can't do the job if you're going to start breaking up the large integrated companies," he said. "There are political and economic consequences out of that kind of action."

Lee said the appeal of enhanced stock prices through royalty trusts could spill over to other major companies.

"If indeed the royalty trust is the answer to creating shareholder value in Gulf's case, then why isn't it in the case of ... any natural resource company — a coal company, a copper company, a gold company," he said.

"Why would you stop here? I think there are real connotations here. I think the other companies then have to have some concern."

MESA VICE PRESIDENT John Boros, reached by telephone in Amarillo, Texas, late Thursday, said Gulf would still have adequate exploration capital after creating a royalty trust. He deferred to Pickens for further comment on Lee's statements and said Pickens was unavailable.

With the shareholders meeting only two weeks away, Lee and other Gulf executives are telling individual and institutional shareholders that a royalty trust would hurt Gulf and create a new tax burdens on royalty trust payments.

Gulf management needs 50 percent plus one of its 165 million outstanding shares to reincorporate in Delaware.

Because a proxy not returned is a vote against management, Lee said Gulf is urging maximum participation among individuals, who hold 77 million shares.

"It's normally the individual shareholders who are lax about sending their proxies back. The individuals are going to be the key," he said. "The number of individual shareholders is larger than the number of institutional and corporate shareholders."

LEE SAID HE'S "very encouraged" by shareholder response to the company's lobbying effort and hopes to boost the number of proxies exercised beyond the 75 percent usually voted in special meetings.

"The way the interest has been piqued on this issue, the experts are telling us the vote is going to be very heavy on the number of proxies returned. They're estimating it's going to go over 80 percent," he said.

Gulf and Mesa took out full-page ads in newspapers across the country on Thursday to take their dispute directly to the shareholders.

"The Gulf Investors Group is convinced that Gulf Stock is undervalued. We are dedicated to the goal of enhancing shareholder value and oppose any action that is contrary to that goal," Pickens said in an ad in the New York Times.

"We believe that the best way to protect your investment in Gulf and maximize your future returns is to support your board's recommendation. Vote for the reorganization proposal...," Gulf said in its ad in the New York Times.

Mesa, Gulf fighting in public

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Inc. and Gulf Oil Corp. are battling over a bid to reorganize Gulf on the pages of the nation's newspapers, with both companies taking out full-page ads.

Mesa, based in Amarillo, Texas, is the largest single shareholder in Gulf. It's opposed to the company's reincoporation, which is scheduled to come up at a Dec. 2 special meeting of Gulf's board of directors.

In ads which appeared in the New York Times and the Dallas Times Herald on Thursday, T. Boone Pickens, Jr., chairman and founder of Mesa, urged Gulf shareholders not to approve the company's reorganization.

"The Gulf Investors Group is convinced that Gulf Stock is undervalued. We are dedicated to the goal of enhancing shareholder value and oppose any action that is contrary to that goal," the ad in the New York Times said.

Gulf is proposing to reorganize itself as a holding company and move from Pennsylvania to Delaware.

'What's the rush?" asked Pickens' ad in the Dallas Times Herald. "For 61 years, Gulf has been a Pennsylvania corporation. Now, suddenly, the Board proposes to establish a Delaware holding company..."

John F. Boros, a Mesa vice president and secretary-treasurer, said Mesa's ad "is going to run in all major newspapers today and tomorrow."

Gulf, meanwhile, lashed back with its own reasoning.

In a New York Times ad headlined "Gulf Oil Corporation Wants Its Shareholders to Know," the Pittsburgh-based company urged shareholders to vote for the company's reorganization.

"We believe that the best way to protect your investment in Gulf and maximize your future returns is to support your board's recommendation. Vote for the reorganization proposal...," Gulf said.

It went on to say that "a group headed by T. Boone Pickens ... is using the Special Meeting of December 2 as an indirect way to gain support for its plan to create a royalty trust.."

Pickens wants to increase the wealth of Gulf stock owners by putting hundreds of Gulf oil and gas wells into a separate entity, otherwise known as a royalty trust.

In such a trust, all production money is paid directly to shareholders after expenses are deducted.

Gulf officials are opposed to it because it would eliminate the use of production money to finance explorations or other capital spending.

"Distributions of royalty trusts, in our opinion, have done little, if anything to enhance shareholder wealth over the long term," Gulf's ad said. "For a large, integrated oil company, creating a royalty trust is like sailing in uncharted waters."

Airline ticketing practices have harmed competition, Justice says

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you book a flight through an airline's computerized reservation system, the Justice Department says you may not be getting information about the competition's bargain fares.

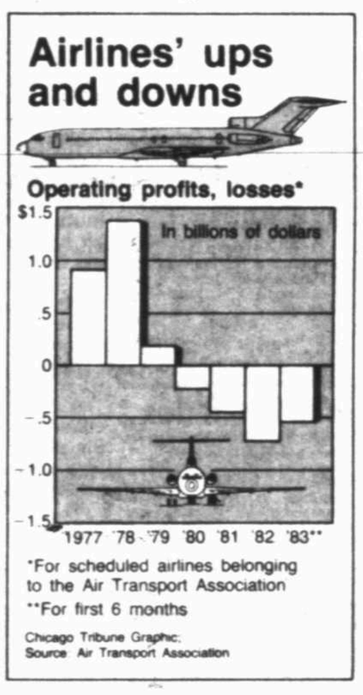

The department said Thursday a nearly two-year-old civil antitrust investigation into the systems had found some airlines excluding from their computer listings the ower fares offered by competing airlines.

The computer systems, five of which are owned by airlines, list flights by many carriers and are used by travel agents to sell tickets. More than half the nation's airline tickets are sold through use of the computer systems.

Based on its investigation, the department filed 200 pages of findings and recommendations and a foot-high stack of industry documents with the Civil Aeronautics Board, which s deciding whether to regulate such systems.

"The department has concluded that certain practices in the (computerized reservation system) industry have harmed competition, and that some government intervention is necessary in order to alter those practices ..." the antitrust division said.

The investigation began with allegations that the two major systems, SABRE marketed by American Airlines and Apollo marketed by United Air Lines, have dominated the industry and pursued anti-competitive practices in their listings.

Justice said that the American and United systems together control 70 percent of the national market in computerized reservations. But the antitrust division also said that each of the five airlines that market a system has market power in at least some geographic areas. The other airline-owned systems are Trans World Airlines' PARS, Eastern's System One, and Delta's DATAS II.

The Justice Department said it had not concluded whether to charge violations of federal antitrust acts. But it listed a series of practices and incidents which it described as behavior that would not occur if the industry were competitive.

The department said from November 1981 to February 1982, American Airlines suppressed from its computerized displays Continental Airlines' "supersaver" fares in 65 markets. "American decided not to match Continental's fares, but rather to remove them from SABRE's price-comparison display," Justice said.

The department said that in 1981 when New York Air entered the market for flights from New York's LaGuardia Airport to Detroit in competition with American, American altered SABRE's display so that New York Air flights would be buried far down in the display sequence. As a result, New York Air suffered a loss in passengers and left that market shortly thereafter, the department said.

"There is evidence that American's purpose was to punish New York Air for its entry and to intimidate New York Air so that it would not enter the LaGuardia-Chicago market in competition with American," the antitrust division said.

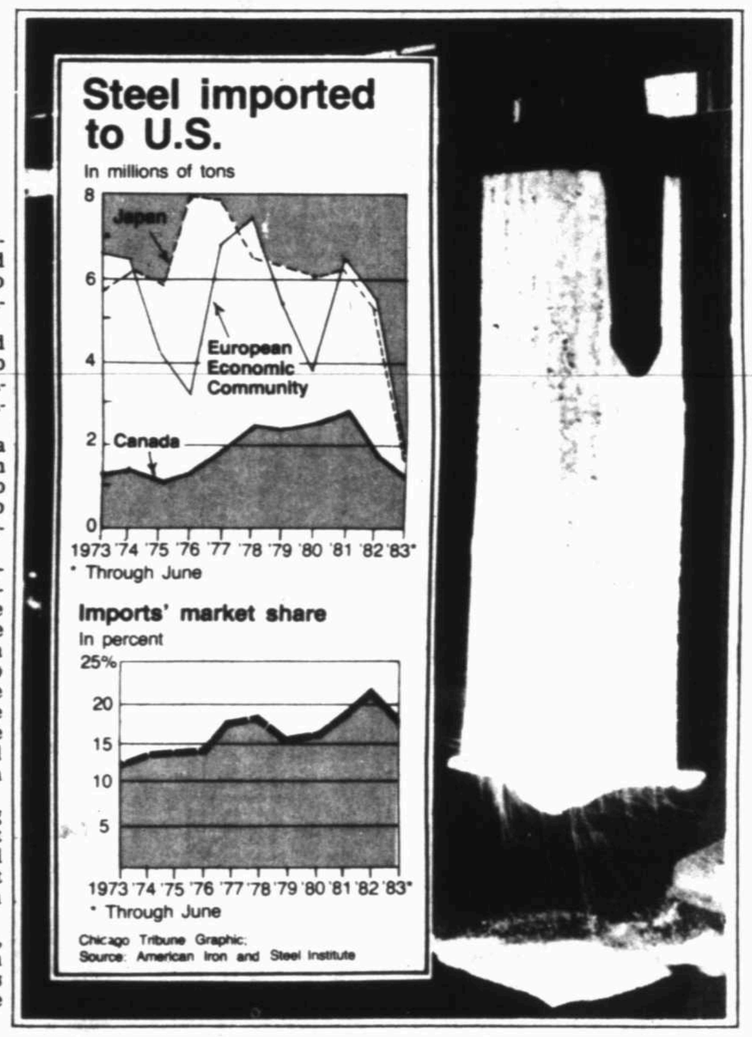

The division also said that United suppressed information in its Apollo system on specific flights by Frontier, U.S. Air and perhaps Continental.

Justice said it had found that a few carriers such as Air Florida, Pan Am and Jet America have sought to gain favorable treatment on Apollo by suggesting they would not compete intensely with United.

The Justice Department has proposed that each airline owning a reservation system be forced to provide its schedules and fares at no charge to every other reservation system and to permit every other system to issue tickets for its flights. The department also suggested that the board require every system to make the flight information for all listed airlines equally easy to call up on the computer.

The department opposed having the Civil Aeronautics Board set prices for computer listings but said it would support them if the rules it proposed don't end competition problems.

American Airlines, meanwhile, told the board it expects some form of regulation and would accept rules that would eliminate any bias in the systems.

Construction start rate declined in October

The rate of construction starts on new housing in October was 3.8 percent lower than the month before, and one banker predicts the home-building industry is settling down for "a long winter's nap."

The Commerce Department reported the latest decline on Thursday, and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said he believed housing starts were settling into a period of stability at approximately October's 1.61 million rate.

Although the October rate was lower than September's, it was 41 percent above the October 1982 level.

New construction hit its highest level in nearly five years during August and then dropped sharply in September in a decline largely attributed to a rise in interest rates.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said Thursday he expected interest rates over the next few months to be stable.

Riedy said the housing industry "is settling down for a long winter's nap. They will wait to see what rates are going to be in the spring."

The October report said starts on single-family homes fell 7.2 percent, while those for buildings with five or more units rose 3.3 percent.

In a sign of some increases ahead, the Commerce Department said permits taken out for future construction rose 3.9 percent after declining 8.8 percent in September.

Separately, the oil industry's main trade group said U.S. oil demand continued to increase in October, led by a 3.5 percent rise in gasoline consumption.

The American Petroleum Institute said overall oil consumption rose 1.5 percent in October from a year earlier, following a 0.5 percent gain in September. Consumption for the first 10 months of the year remained 2.1 percent below the 1982 level.

Oil imports were up 2.3 percent in October, mainly because of a 10.6 percent rise in shipments of refined products. Oil imports for the first 10 months of the year were 3.7 percent below the 1982 level.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—The number of new claims for state unemployment benefits rose by 16,000 in the week ended Nov. 4, to 419,000, the Labor Department said. The total was well below the 628,700 claims recorded for the comparable week last year.

—The Investment Company Institute said assets of the nation's 311 money-market mutual funds fell $61 million in the week ended Wednesday to $166.8 billion, marking the first decline in seven weeks. The seven-day average yield on the money market mutual funds rose in the week ended Wednesday to 8.56 percent from 8.52 percent the previous week, according to Donoghue's Money Fund Report.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO ALL SHAREHOLDERS OF

GULF OIL

The Board of Directors of Gulf Oil Corporation has suddenly called a special meeting of shareholders to be held December 2, 1983. They are proposing to reorganize Gulf as a holding company, moving the state of incorporation from Pennsylvania to Delaware.

While this may seem like a harmless legal technicality, in fact this move would eliminate important shareholder rights.

WHAT'S THE RUSH?

For sixty-one years, Gulf has been a Pennsylvania corporation. Now, suddenly, the Board proposes to establish a Delaware holding company in order to "have greater flexibility in such areas as financing and in formulating [Gulf's] acquisition strategies." The Board of Gulf admits in its proxy material that it has no current plans to utilize this so-called "greater flexibility." Yet it has called a special shareholders meeting rather than waiting for the annual meeting, which is only a few months away.

UNDER THE BOARD'S PROPOSAL, WE BELIEVE YOU LOSE

You lose • Gulf shareholders will lose the ability to require Gulf to submit proposed charter amendments to a shareholder vote. Currently, holders of 10% of the shares can require the submission of such shareholder proposals to a vote.

You lose • Gulf shareholders will lose the ability to call a special shareholders meeting. Currently, the holders of 20% of the shares can call a special meeting.

You lose • Gulf shareholders will lose their right of cumulative voting in the election of Gulf directors. Cumulative voting affords a substantial shareholder the power to elect a board member who would then be able to communicate with Gulf management and other directors at the Board of Directors level. Such board representation would help assure a full review of strategies which might not otherwise be considered.

You lose • If you are a Canadian shareholder of Gulf, you will be forced to treat the reincorporation as a taxable event for Canadian tax purposes—just as if you had sold your shares.

REINCORPORATION: WHO BENEFITS?

In our opinion it is the responsibility of the management of a public company to increase shareholder values. Ask yourself whether the reincorporation proposal, with its elimination of shareholder rights, will further that objective. Ask yourself whether the elimination of cumulative voting (the elimination of which the Securities and Exchange Commission Division of Corporation Finance has identified as an "anti-takeover measure") will be in your financial interest. The Reincorporation Proposal may be good for Gulf management. But is it good for you?

Members of the Gulf Investors Group have invested nearly $800 million in Gulf stock and own 17.9 million Gulf shares, representing 10.8% of the total outstanding. Our substantial financial commitment creates a common bond with all Gulf shareholders who seek to enhance the value of their investments in Gulf.

We believe the reincorporation proposal is a defensive reaction to the emergence of an independent shareholder group. Gulf's defensive posture was summed up by one of Gulf's "Wall Street strategists" as follows: "Let's just say for the moment that we're strapping on our six shooters." (October 20, 1983, The Wall Street Journal)*

If you agree with us that the purchase of a major investment in Gulf stock does not justify the hostile reaction of a hastily called special shareholder meeting that will eliminate important shareholder rights, then you must act swiftly to protect your investment.

Thank you.

On behalf of the Gulf Investors Group

Arbitration program open to owners of GM vehicles

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Owners of any General Motors vehicle with engine or transmission trouble are now able to have their local Better Business Bureau arbitrate the problem.

That's the thrust of a consent agreement reached between GM and the Federal Trade Commission in settlement of a 1980 FTC complaint charging GM with failing to notify customers about serious problems or defects.

FTC Regional Director and former Odessa lawyer Jim Moseley announced the agreement and outlined its provisions at a local news conference Thursday.

The arbitration program is available to owners of any GM cars with engine or transmission problems and allows consumers to arbitrate — free of charge — unresolved disputes with GM regardless of the age or mileage of their vehicle.

The 1980 FTC complaint listed three examples of serious problems or defects the agency claimed were costly to repair, failed in unusually large numbers and were not disclosed to consumers.

The three examples — none of which involves safety questions — are breakdowns or premature wear in the THM transmission of most GM vehicles manufactured from 1976 to date, the camshafts in certain Chevrolet engines made since 1974 and the fuel injection pumps and fuel injectors of some 500,000 Oldsmobiles with diesel engines in production since 1977.

Jim Moseley, FTC regional director

Nearly 21 million vehicles are potentially subject to those problems, which could cost GM more than $100 million to remedy. However, noted Moseley, not all of the cars will actually experience difficulties.

Mechanics or GM dealers can determine from information provided by the company if any particular car is subject to the potential defects outlined in the three examples.

Owners of vehicles with engine or transmission problems not falling into the three specific categories spelled out in the agreement are still eligible to arbitrate their claims. The only restriction is that unlike the other owners, they must still own the vehicle at the time of the arbitration hearing.

While arbitration is binding on GM, it is not binding on consumers — unless they agree to abide by its findings. In the event consumers are not satisfied with the outcome of the hearing, they are free to pursue their case in court.

Residents have designs on future of House Park

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Residents around House Park designed their park Thursday night, but the question remains as to when the funding for developing it will come from the Midland City Council.

About 25 residents gathered in the Senior Citizens Center along with George Logan, director of parks and recreation, and Monette Burke, recreation superintendent. A handout explained neighborhood parks and what facilities normally are found in such locations.

It took little more than an hour for the citizens to decide what they wanted and where it should be located. They changed their minds several times on some items, such as a sidewalk — should it be concrete or asphalt, should it encircle the park or only one area?

This was the second such meeting sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department. The first was for residents of Lindora Park at Sinclair and Lindora Way.

House Park, located at Ric, Stoneybrook and Bentwood streets, said Logan, is a higher priority than Lindora. But, those residents have volunteered to get labor and money donated for its development, he said. "The council is very open to that."

"Residents at Lindora have been told they rank behind House Park, but they're doing all they can to get it developed. They've called contractors who said they'd do some work if they got some free time. They may get it developed without the city," Logan said.

"I didn't know we could solicit contractors," said one woman. "I'll get on the phone tomorrow."

Full development of a city park costs $16,000 an acre. For the 6.4 acre House Park, that cost would be about $100,000.

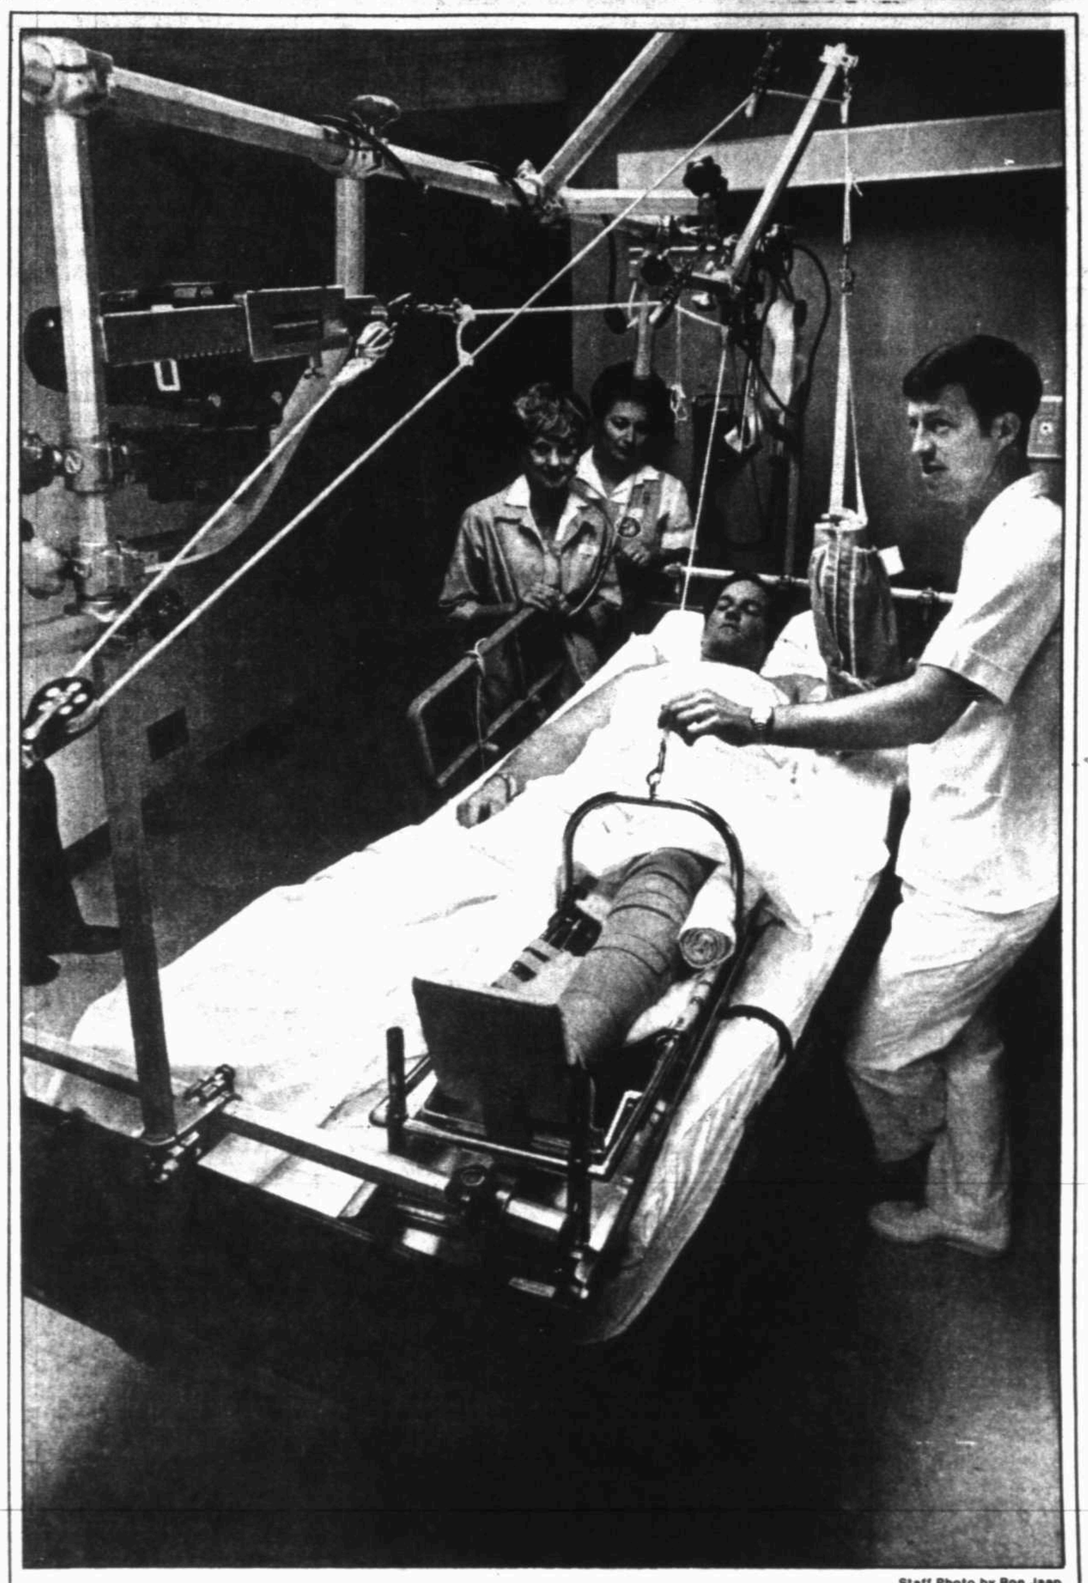

Logan pointed out to the residents that even though they are planning their park, the council hasn't allotted money for its development this fiscal year. Nor does he know when the money will be forthcoming. And when donations of time and equipment are found, that needs to be approved by the council, he said.

"They can't in good conscience bump our park and spend the money on something else," questioned another woman of the council's past actions.

"They have," murmured another woman.

Logan said Quanah Parker and Santa Rita parks were developed first because they were located in conjunction with school sites — both which opened this fall.

Ector County ranchers still look to the skies for relief

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

■ Senate approves bill containing drought-aid provision — Page 3a

ODESSA — When it rains, it pours — or else on the wings of vultures disaster soars.

It's always been that way in West Texas and Ector County, where ranchers have come to look to the skies for either success or tragedy, and 1983 has been no different.

The rains failed to come for a long while. Through September, only 3.41 inches had been recorded all year, a figure which amounted to 7.83 inches BELOW normal. The growing season of spring yielded little life-giving moisture. The terrain slowly died. Pastureland dried up. Grass wilted. In a county in which the hardier sheep are not grazed, cattle turned bony, then were herded off to market. And ranchers were in dire straits.

Then it poured — 5.74 inches since the first of October. The dusty rangeland hardened. Aesthetically, it did not look as severe.

But it has remained so, because when rains were needed the most, only barren skies met the gaze of ranchers.

"We've gotten the rains, for which we're thankful, but it's not over as far as feeding the cattle," said Ector County extension agent Jim Mazurkiewicz. "It's not dry and dusty anymore, but it's not over for the rancher."

The 30-40 ranchers in Ector County, said Mazurkiewicz, are faced with supplement-feeding throughout the winter — a costly proposal countered only by the possibility of President Reagan signing into law next week a surplus grain feed program.

"We're hoping that this corn program will go through," said Mazurkiewicz. "It would supplement ranchers in West Texas. The Texas Department of Agriculture called me last week and asked if West Texas ranchers would make use of the program. I gave him suggestions that they cube this feed to put it on the ground, which is the way ranchers here feed their cattle."

The county agent noted that the rain itself will help, but not carry ranchers out of the woods entirely.

"Some of our winter grasses and weeds are going to come out, but as far as our summer grasses, the grasses that grow in the warm weather, it's too late for them at this time," he said. "And so we don't have any of our summer grasses going over into our winter."

Mazurkiewicz, who's 28, said he's too young to remember anything about the 1950s drought, but that ranching oldtimers have told him the 1983 drought was comparable to it in its effect on cattle.

"It was very dry and dusty and there was not much forage out there for the cattle," he noted. "It's hurt (ranchers) drastically and they've reduced their numbers of cattle. They had to wean early or cull."

He added that while no Ector County rancher so far has been forced to liquidate, he was aware of several outside the county which have.

Beyond the possibility of a feed grain program being implemented, said Mazurkiewicz, Ector County ranchers' hopes are all aimed at next year.

"I'm hoping," he said, "that we get some early spring rains that will go throughout the summer so we can grow some grass and stop supplemental feeding our livestock."

Surgery patients wake up to moving experience

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Many patients who go in for orthopedic surgery at Midland Memorial Hospital may wake up to find themselves strapped in a machine that constantly moves the joint or limb that just underwent surgery.

As a result, their recuperation period is decreased, as is the amount of pain relievers they normally would require.

What began as a contraption made of bicycle chains and wheels 2½ years ago has evolved into a continuous passive motion machine run by an electric motor.

"It's brought a whole new concept to orthopedic surgery," said MMH nurse and orthopedic clinician Steve Noe.

The idea that a broken bone should be immobilized in a cast of plaster has progressed to the opinion that continuous motion will speed up the patient's progress.

The thought is popular, according to Noe, who said the demand for the eight machines at MMH keeps an average of six or seven in use per day.

Four of the machines recently were purchased for $16,200 through a donation from the MMH auxiliary.

"It was really getting tense around here," Noe said. " It is so popular all of the (orthopedic) physicians were wanting it for their patients. But we've got an adequate number now."

Used for hip, knee, shoulder and elbow replacements as well as for fractures of arms and legs, the machine, with its pulleys and ropes, is fitted on the patient's bed. The limb can be constantly flexed on one of four speeds which can be increased each minute.

"The movement itself is the important thing," Noe said. "What is occurring is the muscles are stretching and relaxing, which forces the blood to circulate."

As the blood moves through the traumatized area, healing quickens and inflammation and pain decrease.

"The movement also keeps the joints loosened up so they don't get stiff," he added.

The skin of one patient who had a bar surgically placed through a fractured bone was so swollen "his skin was shiny," Noe said. "Within a matter of 24 hours on the machine, his skin started to ripple and looked a little wavy because the swelling had gone down that much."

Because no two fractures are the same, Noe said recovery periods vary. But with the continous passive motion, patients begin and proceed through therapy at a faster rate while experiencing less pain.

Some who went through total knee replacements were discharged walking, he said.

Much of the recovery still depends on therapy and nursing care and the motivation of the patient, but "the whole program in continual passive motion is definitely a big part in the recovery."

One of the first patients to use the machine had gone through the traditional mobilization program. Before being discharged, she was forced to flex her joint to the mandatory 90-degree angle, given a narcotic and dismissed. An hour later she was back at the hospital and in great pain.

More narcotics were ordered, but by the time they reached her room, where she had been strapped into the machine, Noe said the pain was gone.

EEOC official offers insight into sexual harassment

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Sexual advances on the job can get the federal government quickly involved in private business or public affairs if those advances reek of sexual harassment and job discrimination.

"A lot of times there's going to be no reason (for sexual harassment)," Mark Stangle, investigator for the El Paso area office of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), told about 40 Midlanders Thursday night in the RepublicBank First National Midland Building.

"There's no viable reason for being sexually harassed by anyone — male or female — and believe it or not," he said, "males can be sexually harassed."

Stangle, in Midland to conduct fact-finding conferences stemming from alleged violations of civil rights on the job, offered insight into EEOC's role in investigating and resolving violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Title VII prohibits employment discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or equal pay. Except for age and equal pay-related grievances, the EEOC may become involved in work situations where there are 15 or more employees. In EEOC's case, age discrimination applies to companies employing 20 or more workers, while the equal-pay provision, "only based on sex," can apply to jobs employing as few as two workers.

In his 2¼-hour session, Stangle used sexual harassment to explain how discrimination complaints are filed and resolved by EEOC. Complaints not resolved by EEOC may get into federal court.

STANGLE CITED a hypothetical case of Mary Doe, an XYZ Corp. secretary, who claimed she was not promoted because she did not submit to her boss' wishes — "whatever that might be."

A discrimination complaint must be filed within 180 days of the date of the aggrieved act in the case of a private business. At governmental levels, the complaint must be filed with EEOC within 300 days.

If not through EEOC offices, complaints may be initiated at the Texas Employment Commission or through the Human Relations Council, he said.

Throughout the process, EEOC safeguards the person's right to seek satisfaction through federal court.

In checking out complaints, EEOC is "always looking for comparative data" — patterns, Stangle said. "We rely heavily on eyewitness accounts."

However, Stangle said in one case a "very smart" woman kept records, since she sensed her job was in jeopardy. "It was her word against his." Though "everybody starts out at 50-50" from EEOC's viewpoint, the woman in the case produced a memorandum, on the boss' letterhead stationery and in his handwriting, in which he proposed that they go out for a drink and then to a hotel. "He was dumb...(rather), he did a dumb thing," he said. "He settled quickly," and the woman got her back pay and compensation for other company benefits.

IN ANOTHER case involving a bank in an unnamed community between Midland and Lubbock, the bank president re-assigned a pregnant secretary from a front-office job to a back drive-in teller's position after the pregnancy "begin to show more and more."

The woman complained after she returned to work following her pregnancy leave but was not assigned her former position.

"This is a prima facie case of discrimination," Stangle said. "Everytime a female got pregnant, she's going to go to the back." The woman left the bank, got a job with another bank, filed the EEOC complaint and got back pay.

In a California case, a woman who won a sex discrimination suit opted for a novel compensation — a year's supply of Big Macs (hamburgers), Stangle said. Though perhaps a "ludicrous" request, the woman got her wish, he said.

MARY DOE may complain that she was denied the promotion because she "did not submit to sexual harassment" and that she was more qualified than the person — the man — who did get the promotion.

At the fact-finding conference, the aggrieved Mary Doe, her boss and the person promoted may be present. The statement by the boss "is going to be self-serving 99 and 99/100 percent of the time," Stangle said. "We know that."

At the EEOC level, the complaining party can seek compensation, such as job reinstatement, the promotion, or actual damages, such as back pay monetary values of denied company benefits.

Mary Doe's case, if she wants more, such as punitive damages, she could take her case before a federal judge.

Border cities should look to local officials for aid

EL PASO (AP) — If U.S. cities on the Mexico border want to diversify their economies, they should turn for help to local officials rather than to the federal government, a federal housing official says.

"U.S. officials at the local level have the destiny of these cities in their hands. It's not Washington. The decision of what kind of economy these cities should have rests at the local level," said Robert Duckworth, special assistant for community planning and development with the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Duckworth said that while federal officials can be "supportive" of the goals of border communities, they cannot determine which programs are needed to help the cities develop.

"Economic development, perhaps, will have to take a new path. The border may have to become more diversified," he said. "I can't tell you how to do this — it's a difficult area to resolve."

But Duckworth said local governments can begin to implement economic development programs by using money made available through the federal government's community block grant program.

Speaking Thursday at the Local and Regional Border Planning Conference, Duckworth said his agency, which co-sponsored the meeting, will provide "technical assistance" to border communities.

"But, in the long run, if these communities are to develop, the communities themselves have to come up with programs. They can be very creative," Duckworth said.

In the past five years, he said, between $300 million and $400 million in community block grant funds has gone to cities along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Because the grant program recently was changed to give state and local governments more control, Duckworth said, "they must decide the needs."

He said he hoped that as border communities develop economic programs they consider the concerns of Mexico.

"It is my hope that whatever projects are born in this time of destiny that some of them are of a binational nature," he said.

The private sector also must become involved in developing the border region, Duckworth said.

"These federal resources should attract other resources from the private sector," he said.

Mattox, lawyer disagree over definition of 'trap'

AUSTIN (AP) — A transcript of a conversation between Attorney General Jim Mattox and a partner in a law firm he allegedly threatened shows that Mattox said the firm was in a "trap."

But the two sides of the high-stakes legal battle disagree on what the trap was. Thomas McDade of the Houston firm of Fulbright and Jaworski testified Thursday he thought the trap was a reference to an alleged threat by Mattox to ruin the firm's profitable public bond business.

However, defense lawyer Roy Minton said the trap was a reference to a legal stalemate in a $1.7 billion civil lawsuit fight between the state of Texas and Mobil Oil Corp., a Fulbright and Jaworski client.

McDade took the witness stand Thursday for a rare, open court deposition. Minton asked to question McDade and Wiley Caldwell, another Fulbright and Jaworski partner, in preparation for Mattox's commercial bribery trial.

No trial date has been set.

McDade said Caldwell told him that Mattox threatened to use his official powers to cut off the firm's bond business if McDade did not withdraw a request to interrogate Mattox's sister Janice in the Mobil suit.

The conversation between Caldwell and Mattox was not recorded, McDade said. However, McDade recorded later conversations he had with Mattox and Mattox's assistants.

Reading from the transcript, McDade testified that Mattox told him, "If you want to get out of this trap I'm in and you're in" then Fulbright and Jaworski should forego the questioning of the attorney general's sister.

"We'll win the battle one way or the other," Mattox said, according to the transcript. "We ain't out of the trap yet."

Mattox than made a reference to an end of negotiations between McDade and Arthur Mitchell, a top Mattox aide.

McDade said Thursday he interpreted that as meaning an end to negotiations about "whether we're in the bond business."

EEOC investigator offers insight into sexual harassment cases

"She could sue even if EEOC finds against her," Stangle said of Mary Doe. "Our decision does not influence the federal judge at all. That federal judge is going to make his own mind up...The judge in all his infinite wisdom will make a decision."

As is the aggrieved person, the employer — the company — is apprised of his rights. And if wrongfully accused, the employer could seek legal recourse.

"If you're going in there to blow smoke, it's going to catch up with you," Stangle warned. If the complaint is frivolous, the company could go to court to recover damages.

Should EEOC decide in favor of the aggrieved party, EEOC only can request that the company take "corrective action," Stangle said.

Arbitration now option for GM vehicle owners

In addition, consumers do not have to prove that the problem is the fault of GM or the dealer. All they need prove is that they had a problem that wasn't their own fault.

Costs of the arbitration program will be borne by GM. But Moseley pointed out that there is no provision in the agreement to keep those costs from being passed on to future buyers of GM products.

Several built-in factors of the agreement are designed to ensure that the program is conducted fairly. They include the fact that local BBBs are not controlled by GM and that arbitrators will be drawn from the ranks of community volunteers who are not beholden to GM or the BBB.

Also, arbitrators are not bound by cumbersome legal procedures. Instead, they're guided by "what is a fair settlement of the dispute," according to a fact sheet distributed at Thursday's news conference.

Should a consumer feel he or she was not treated fairly during arbitration, a complaint can be filed with the FTC and the agency will conduct an investigation to determine if terms of the agreement have been violated.

The program, which is mandatory for eight years, will be conducted by more than 150 BBBs across the country. The BBBs will dispatch "circuit-riding" arbitrators to consumers who don't live near a BBB office.

Under terms of the agreement, GM is to conduct a widespread advertising campaign informing consumers about the program and will also provide dealers with posters explaining the program.

Although the agreement has been criticized for eliminating direct consumer redress from GM, Moseley said it avoided a protracted legal battle with the company that could have ended with the company winning and the consumer losing.

To inquire about or take advantage of the program, consumers are urged to contact their local BBB. "They'll take it from there," said Moseley.

Copies of the agreement are available from the FTC, Public Reference Branch, Room 130, Federal Trade Commission, 6th and Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Washington , D.C., 20580. Phone: (202) 523-3598; TTY (202) 523-3638.

Residents have designs on House Park's future

Of House Park's priority status, Logan said, "I'll do what I can to get it developed within a reasonable length of time, but I can't guarantee it will be next year or the year after that."

The first item the residents want is a fence, or a natural barrier of trees and shrubs, to keep children from running into the streets. They also asked for trees, grass with an irrigation system, berms, picnic tables with shade ramadas, trash cans, a drinking fountain, lighting and a concrete multi-use slab for basketball or volleyball.

A workout area will feature several aerobic stations. Residents also included on the wish list a playground equipment for children of all ages.

Most of the activity equipment will be located on one side of the park. The other side will be primarily open with some landscaping.

Said one woman, "We want a good, safe place for our children."

These ideas, hastily sketched in rough manner by Logan on some paper, will be given to a parks planner who will draw a professional design. Residents then will be asked to look at that draft and suggest more changes before the council implements it.

Logan said a Dallas planning firm, J.T. Dunkin & Associates, was contracted to draw the parks department master plan. That contract also provided for drawing plans for three neighborhood parks — House, Lindora and Fairmont. The last has been done by a landscape architect student at Texas Tech University — Steve Withrow of Midland.

"We'll do everything we can to get these parks developed in a timely fashion," Logan said.

Jesse Jackson brings campaign to Texas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson brought his presidential campaign to San Antonio in an attempt to forge black and Hispanic voters into a "rainbow coalition," which he hopes could lead him to the White House.

"The old minorities in coalition are the new majority," said Jackson, the eighth Democrat and first black to enter the presidential campaign.

He met briefly with City Council members Thursday night and later addressed a packed crowd at a rally sponsored by the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Jackson told the enthusiastic, and mostly black, audience that his campaign "is not about one person running for the White House."

"It's about a massive infusion into the political process of those who have been locked out," he said. "The Democratic Party cannot lock out blacks, Hispanics and women and expect to win."

Jackson staged an impromptu voter registration drive after the speech, signing up about 30 local voters, and also collected several thousand dollars for his campaign coffers.

Heart defects may be linked to crib deaths

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Defects in the heart's electrical system may cause some cases of sudden infant death syndrome, which kills about 7,000 American babies each year, two studies suggest.

"The impulse-transmitting system of the heart is not normal in some of these children," Thomas A. Marino, who conducted one of the studies at the Temple University School of Medicine in Philadelphia, said recently.

Dr. Saroja Bharati, a pathologist who conducted the other study, said defects in the heart's electrical system "may in certain persons, especially infants, be responsible for irregular heart rhythm and even sudden death."

Sudden infant death syndrome, known as SIDS or crib death, "is the leading cause of death in infants after the first week of life," said Marino, an assistant anatomy professor at Temple.

The cause of SIDS is unknown. It kills about two infants out of every 1,000 born in the United States, or about 7,000 annually. The victims usually are found dead in their cribs before they are seven months old.

The studies by Marino and Ms. Bharati, who is chief pathologist at the Deborah Heart and Lung Center in Brown's Mills, N.J., were presented at the American Heart Association's annual meeting.

They found that a certain electrical connection is located on the left side of the heart in SIDS victims more frequently than in infants who died of other causes. It normally is located on the right side.

The connection, positioned between the heart's upper and lower chambers, is a set of muscle fibers called the bundle of His, named after the scientist who discovered it in the 1800s.

When an electrical impulse moves through the heart, it first triggers pumping of the upper chambers, then moves through the connection to trigger pumping in the lower chambers.

Marino said that in the hearts of four SIDS victims he and his colleagues examined, "We found abnormalities in the connective tissue that separates the upper and lower chambers ... and through which the bundle of His penetrates.

"We speculate that those tissue abnormalities could have caused an abnormal heart rhythm, which in turn possibly could have led to death."

The hearts of eight of 15 SIDS victims examined in the second study also had the connection on the heart's left side, said Ms. Bharati.

Of eight infants who died of other causes and were examined by Ms. Bharati, only one had the connection on the left side.

"We feel that at least in some cases of SIDS the (heart's electrical) conduction system plays a role," she said. "But we need to study at least 100 hearts before we will know for sure."

Of the 19 SIDS victims examined in the two studies, only one had diseased lungs, prompting Ms. Bharati to conclude that respiratory disease "is not a factor in SIDS."

Divorce effects studied

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The effects of parental divorce on young children may be so enduring that in some cases those children enter adulthood emotionally hostage to long-past events and are psychologically incapable of leading full, happy lives in the present, according to a pioneering study of children of divorce in Northern California.

At the same time, said the study's chief author, psychologist Judith Wallerstein, these children — many from liberal, affluent families — acquire a kind of tragic wisdom ironically reaffirming traditional values that may have been rejected by their parents.

"In a profound way, they continued to see themselves as children of divorce, as if this had become a fixed identity," Wallerstein reported in an address to the American Academy of Child Psychiatry here. "Most of them shared the sense of having been deprived, the sense that life was more difficult, more hazardous and less pleasurable," she said.

"MOST OF THESE YOUNG people were eager for a monogamous, lasting marriage. Most agreed that marriages should not occur early — sometime between the ages of 27 and 30. They strongly eschewed infidelity. They stressed the importance of choosing correctly the first time. They planned a second delay after marriage to be absolutely sure before children were conceived."

Several also lashed out at their parents, condemning what they viewed as deception and irresponsibility.

"Someday I will say to my father, 'Are you proud of what you have done?' " vowed a 26-year-old man.

Another young adult advised: "Talk about everything — don't split up."

"What distinguished these children was their intense wish to avoid divorce for the sake of their own unborn children," Wallerstein said. "Their mood, as they look backward, is one of restrained sadness and unfulfilled yearning for the intact family which they sorely missed."

The fact that children of divorce today grow up in a society including many young people like themselves offered no emotional comfort or "intellectual reassurance," Wallerstein said. "On the contrary, the high incidence of divorce intensified their anxiety about the hazards of loving relationships," she said.

THE PSYCHOLOGIST PREDICTED that the trend will continue into the 1990s, and that it also will affect children of non-divorcing families.

"There's much more anxiety these days. Today, a lot of teachers report from different parts of the country that children will come into school after their parents have quarrelled and ask, 'Are my parents going to get a divorce?' " Wallerstein said.

The report reflected the early findings of an unprecedented 10-year follow-up survey of 97 children from 48 divorced families — mostly white, middle-class Northern Californians. The survey was the fourth leg of a research project that began in 1971 with psychological examinations of the children at the time of the final marital split and continued with interviews 18 months and five years after divorce.

THE DECISION TO LOOK once more at these children was prompted by the finding at the five-year mark that more than a third were moderately to severely depressed, Wallestein said. The 10-year follow-up study was launched in 1981 and is expected to be completed in 1984.

Wallerstein said the study's key findings at the 10-year mark are based on interviews with a subgroup of 40 children who were 9 or older at the time of their parents' divorce and today range in age from 19 to 27. In this group, females outnumbered males three to two.

"They had drawn sobering conclusions. Often they were moving and eloquent. Tears were not infrequently shed," Wallerstein said. "Most striking was the accessibility of memory — the vividness and sharpness of their remembered pain."

ONE YOUNG WOMAN recalled: "The hardest thing was my mother's pain. I remember the night when my dad left and how my mother sat up all night rocking and crying in the red rocking chair. I cried, too."

Said another: "I'm 19 years old, but I still wake up when I hear loud talking or yelling. And I cry."

"It may be that we have overestimated the effect of time in muting memories," Wallerstein observed.

While some claimed to have gained a measure of inner strength and others spoke of enriched relationships with brothers and sisters, Wallerstein found that a "significant minority consisting entirely of young women" appeared to be going rapidly — and perhaps permanently — down hill.

ALAMO HEIGHTS BAPTIST CHURCH is planning a special day of "Welcome" for their new pastor and wife. Rev. J.E. Meeks has been pastor of the First Church of Muleshoe, Texas for almost nine years. That Church has developed very effectively under his leadership and has enjoyed considerable spiritual growth as well as numerical growth and they now have a resident membership of 834, with 672 enrolled in Sunday School. This special day of welcome will be November 20th, 1983.

Rev. Meeks has preached revivals in Texas, California, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado and Oklahoma. He has been honored by the Pastoral section of the Church Administration Department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board for the award winning sermon: "The Way Up is Down." He is a graduate of Merkel High School, Hardin-Simmons University of Abilene and the Southwest Baptist Theological Seminary of Fort Worth.

Alamo Heights plans to welcome Rev. Meeks by having 250 present in Sunday School and 350 in the worship service. Alamo has been enjoying a steady growth both in Sunday School and the Worship service during the "interim" time the Church has been without a Pastor. There will be Special Music, with a solo entitled "Waiting" by Tracye Vaughan in the morning worship service and by the Youth Choir during the evening service. Bro. Meeks will deliver a sermon entitled "The Churchood of the Church" in the Morning and "The Love of God" in the evening.

The Church cordially invites all who will to come and be part of this special time at Alamo to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Meeks.

New mansion fits Beverly Hills image

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Add another landmark to the eclectic architectural collection that is Beverly Hills.

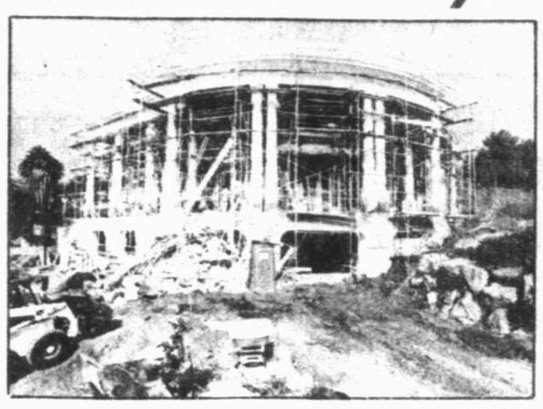

A columned mansion of classical design is rising in the verdant slopes north of Sunset Boulevard that may set a new standard for ostentation in a city that for many defines it.

Disparagingly referred to by neighborhood residents as "the Parthenon," the mansion dominates the surrounding area where houses are priced at $1 million and up.

Though there is a question whether the surrounding houses might indeed be overpriced, as is the tendency in an area considered exclusive and desirable, there is little question that they pale in comparison to the five-bedroom, seven-bath mansion.

With its 14 towering Ionic columns decorating a glaring white three-story curved facade sitting on a crest above the street, the mansion is out of scale with its neighboring buildings, but not necessarily out of character with the community.

For those who do not have to live in its shadow, the mansion presents a provocative architectural and sociological statement. It goes to the roots of the property values of Beverly Hills, where status is often associated with the size and location of one's residence; and to a lesser degree with the make of the cars parked in the driveway.

LAT Photo

A columned mansion of classical design rising in the verdant slopes north of Sunset Boulevard in Beverly Hills, Calif., that may set a new standard for ostentation in a city that, for many defines it.

One might go so far as stating that with this in mind the mansion fulfills a popular image of Beverly Hills. In its meretricious way probably it could not or would not be built anyplace else in this day and age, except perhaps, in Palm Springs, Calif., Phoenix's Biltmore Estates or in an oil-rich Arab country.

Interstingly, the mansion, designed with a flourish by Kamran Khavarani for G.N.C. Industries Inc., and being built by the company of Shalom Engineering & Construction, did not need any variances for its prominent height and complies in all respects with the city's strict zoning standards.

The facade-conscious city does have a fastidious architectural commission, but its reviews are limited to commercial ventures. There are no design standards for private homes. A city official explained:

"Beverly Hills believes very strongly that evey man's home is his castle and as long as it meets the zoning and building codes for a single-family residence a property owner can do what he or she wants. We like to think it encourages freedom of expression."

As a result, the city's residential neighborhoods contain a wide variety of architectural whims. Looking out from the crest on which the mansion stands, one can see a rambling ranch house, a modified French chateau, an overblown Cape Cod with a Georgian front door and a simple tract house. Lush landscaping helps them all.

Coffee studies differ

BOSTON (AP) — Is coffee bad for the heart? Three major surveys published today say no, but two others say maybe.

The question, which has been asked for years, arose again in June when Norwegian scientists discovered that Norwegians who drank a lot of coffee had 14 percent more cholesterol in their blood than those who did not.

Cholesterol causes hardening of the arteries, and the doctors concluded coffee could at least double the risk of heart disease.

Now, in a rebuttal to five followup studies also contained in today's New England Journal of Medicine, the Norwegians say coffee consumption's link to cholesterol in their population could result from how Norwegians drink their coffee — black and boiled.

"Not only the method of growing, roasting and brewing but also the duration and temperature of the extraction process may influence the biologic properties of the ultimate brew," said Dr. Dag S. Thelle and colleagues from the University of Tromso in Asgard, Norway.

To check the Norwegians' results, five medical teams around the world analyzed the results of large population studies. Three found no link between coffee and cholesterol. One found that coffee raises cholesterol only in young people, while the other suggested it does so only in women.

"As far as serum cholesterol goes, I know of no reason for people in the United States who consume coffee in customary amounts to be concerned," Dr. Richard B. Shekelle said in an interview.

At Rush Medical College in Chicago, Shekelle and other doctors analyzed the habits of 1,900 middle-aged men and found no relation between coffee and cholesterol.

Dr. Albert Hofman and others from Erasmus University Medical School in Rotterdam looked at data gathered from 10,532 people in The Netherlands. They also could not confirm the link.

"We have no explanation for the discrepancy between our findings and those of the Norwegian group," they wrote, "but we are hesitant to accept coffee consumption as a major determinant of cholesterol levels."

Days before, children prepare for 'The Day After'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

At Ground Zero, two dozen grade-school children are gathered around their teacher. A moment later, they turn to skeletons. Then they are gone.

That scene of instantaneous nuclear annihilation, and other graphic parts of "The Day After," worry teachers and psychologists who are warning parents to prepare for another kind of fallout — nightmares, depression and a feeling of hopelessness among children.

The movie, to be telecast at 8 p.m. EST Sunday on ABC, was previewed this week by school officials across the country. They are sending notes home to parents, consulting psychiatrists and setting aside class time Monday morning to discuss the film.

"The Day After" shows what might happen before, during and after a nuclear strike on the Kansas City, Mo., area, and carries this disclaimer: "The graphic depiction of the effects of a nuclear war may not be suitable for younger viewers."

It has become politically controversial, too. But school officials say they are more worried about the psychological shock for kids than the effect of a particular political message.

In Lynchburg, Va., home to the Moral Majority, which has come out strongly against the movie, the school system has ordered that no children be assigned the program to watch. Whether children of any age watch it, "that's a decision their parents should make," said Superintendent Joseph A. Spagnolo.

Many school officials and psychologists worry the movie will tap into anxieties children already have about nuclear war, fears of being separated from parents and the likelihood that "survivors" would die a slow, painful death by radiation poisoning.

Most psychiatrists and school officials agree that children under 12 should not see the film, and ages 13 to 17 should see it only with their parents. Young children could be left with "some very, very serious terrors" because the movie "personifies the fear of nuclear war," said JoAnne Troxel, a teacher in Bozeman, Mont.

In a letter to school principals, the board of the National Association of Independent Schools said: "To a person we found it ('The Day After') powerful, gripping, graphic and depressing." Many principals forwarded that letter to parents.

Dr. Howard H. Hiatt, dean of Harvard's Graduate School of Public Health, also found it powerful. "Be prepared for a dreadful experience," he told an assembly of advanced high school students in Boston on Wednesday. "But see it."

Cranston sure film helpful

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — Sen. Alan Cranston is betting that a frighteningly graphic television movie about the aftermath of a nuclear war will persuade voters around the country that he is the man they should elect president in 1984.

He's so sure, in fact, that the Cranston campaign committee is gearing up an advertising campaign around the movie and is sponsoring fund raising "watch-ins" around the country when "The Day After" airs on ABC next Sunday.

Cranston, who supports a bilateral nuclear freeze, told a news conference that the movie will be a boon to his 1984 election because, "the people need a president who is going to do his best to avoid a nuclear war.

"We are stressing the need in our campaign to avoid a nuclear war," Cranston said, "and this film illustrates starkly the disaster a nuclear war would be for America."

Cranston said he probably will watch the film in Washington and will make a speech at Columbia University in New York the following morning.

In its efforts to exploit the television drama about the effects of a nuclear war on the small city of Lawrence, Kan., the Cranston campaign tried to buy political advertising time around the movie.

ABC network policy has been not to sell political advertising time for the movie, however.

So far, the Cranston camp has organized meetings in at least 26 states as part of the fund-raising effort, according to the Cranston campaign deputy press secretary Kam Kuwata.

After the movie airs, Cranston's campaign will launch a $25,000 newspaper and radio advertising campaign to take advantage of the political fallout, Kuwata said.

Kuwata said there would be about 136 "watch-ins" staged at the county and congressional district level in 26 states Sunday night, inviting people to watch the movie, a videotaped Cranston "highlight film," and participate in a discussion on arms control. There will be an appeal for contributions, Kuwata said.

The Cranston effort is by far the most extensive planned by any of the Democratic presidential candidates in conjunction with the television program.

"For Peace, For Jobs, For President" will be the theme of Cranstons media blitz around the movie, a blitz Cranston hopes will reverse his recent poor showings in the polls.

Urban farmers holding their own

'Farmers live in hope, but die in frustration'

HOUSTON (AP) — Just behind the pine trees, often scant yards away from tangled traffic and huddled houses, are little pockets of rural tranquility where Harris County's vegetable farmers continue to till their soil as they have for decades.

The group appears to be holding its own in the face of unrelenting sprawl by the city of Houston.

"We've got 35 or 36 people who make their living from vegetable farming. The number has changed hardly at all in the last six years," says Don Portie, one of the county's agricultural extension agents.

He and others credit the love of a lifestyle, the agricultural tax-assessment provision, which prevents confiscatory taxation; the relatively high price of fresh produce in grocery stores, and the fact that large amounts of fruit and vegetables can be grown on relatively little land.

One of those farms, owned by Roland Hanka and his wife, is within the city limits in the northeast corner of Houston. Hanka thinks he may be the only farmer left in the city, but frets more about grass that has sprouted in his field as a result of recent rains.

"Farmers live in hope, but die in frustration," he said while tinkering with the cultivators on an old Farmall A tractor. Hundreds of dollars of herbicides were not enough to halt the grass invasion this year into the plots of purple hull peas and mustard greens on his 40-acre tract.

But he proudly directs pick-'em yourself buyers to a pristine patch covered by nearly one acre of new okra growing fiercely under the hot sun.

At 68, Hanka says he is too old to do much harvesting himself. He and his wife have been allowing people to pick their own vegetables for several years without problems. No one has ever slipped in at night.

"To steal okra or peas? It's bad enough picking this stuff in daylight," he said.

Most of Harris County's vegetable farmers sell directly to supermarkets, Portie says. A few have roadside markets.

Harris County's largest grower, Strack Farms, went a step farther a few years ago. Don and Ernest Strack opened a big produce store, selling everything from the farm's own sweet corn to bananas from South America.

But most local farms have stayed small and simple. "The majority are strictly family operations. If they hire, it is mostly high school kids in the summertime," Portie says.

Altogether, the three dozen farmers cultivate about 900 acres, the equivalent of one good-sized subdivision. Most are in the northern part of the county. They grow almost everything and have crops in the field literally year-round.

"I think it's determination," says Marvin Weinberg, manager of Farmers Market. "It's something you like to do, and you keep doing it."

Even though Rose Hill is about 35 miles from downtown Houston, the long-term future of farming there is uncertain because of urbanization. "When land begins to sell, you know something is going to happen," said Weinberg, whose Rose Hill farm now is run by his three sons.

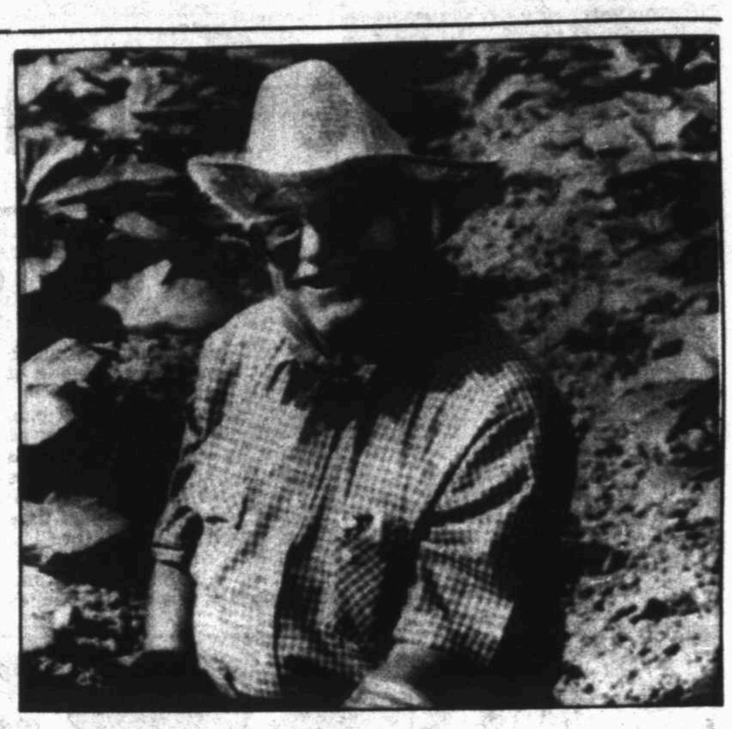

The temptation to sell proved too strong years ago for farmers along heavily developing routes. And while growers can move away from development, they can't always do it without penalty.

The Klein-Spring area of north Harris County is excellent for growing fruit and vegetables, both in terms of soil and climate. "Once you get beyond the Harris County line, you have a problem with temperature," Portie says. "You lose some of the earliness in getting to market."

Moving south is not a good alternative because of the soil. "You can't do the same thing in that heavy gumbo in Brazoria County that you can with sand," Portie says. The soil of north Harris County is sandy.

Hanka says the state law which allows farm land to be taxed on the basis of what it will produce rather than what it would sell for has been crucial.

Without it, "there wouldn't be a farmer left in Harris County."

Vendors line road mile from border

PRESIDIO (AP) — La Vuelta is a 250-foot stretch of dirt alongside a curve in the road about a mile before U.S. Highway 67 reaches the Mexican border.

Two years ago, vendors filled the dirt lot, spreading out their second-hand wares, hoping to entice Mexican shoppers on their way into this West Texas town of almost 3,000.

On a recent weekend, however, only a few trailers and pickup trucks were parked along the road. Even fewer buyers looked through the used household goods, old stereos and second-hand bicycles.

The vendors say, though, that business is better now than last year — and a few sellers who left a year ago are returning.

All across town, more established merchants have faced the same devastating effects that 18 months of peso devaluation has rendered. Business is off by more than 50 percent in many places.

But with no walls to hide behind, no employees to lay off or middlemen to act as a buffer, La Vuelta — the curve — stands as a visual reminder of hard times.

Esteban Amaro was laid off from his job with an El Paso boot-making company three years ago and started selling along La Vuelta.

Amaro was skeptical when a friend first suggested the second-hand business.

He soon found he liked talking with people and the buying trips that have taken him as far as Colorado. "I don't have to check the clock every morning," he said. "It was a good business then."

Amaro estimates 75 percent of the vendors — some from outside Presidio — have given up on the once-busy trade zone. Even with the other merchants gone, his sales are about 40 percent of what they once were.

"I don't make much money," he said. "Just enough for a living."

Nearby, Ines Cortes had his goods spread alongside an old trailer. He once had given up selling at La Vuelta, but returned four months ago.

Cortes makes only a few sales a day, but with no other jobs available, he takes what he can get.

Raul Trevino, the port director for the U.S. Customs Service stationed at the border in Presidio, likes statistics. He has agents give him hourly reports on the number of vehicles that pass from Mexico into the United States along the small international bridge over the Rio Grande.

Last year, traffic was off 75 percent from the year before. This year, travel has increased, but he estimated it still will be 50 percent less than two years ago.

The decrease contrasts sharply with the booming economy of 1981, when the Mexican peso could buy a large amount of U.S. goods.

From 1979 until February 1982, the peso was on a controlled slide, slowly decreasing against U.S. currency.

Jeff Brannon, an assistant professor of economics at the University of Texas at El Paso, criticized the Mexican government's economic policy. "They allowed the peso to become badly overvalued," he explained.

On Feb. 17, 1982, the free rate was 26.86 pesos to the dollar. By Aug. 5, 1982, the rate dropped to 49.09 pesos to the dollar, followed by another devaluation later that month to 108 pesos, Brannon said.

The rate was frozen at 70 pesos to the dollar on Sept. 1, 1982, but freed to move again on Dec. 20, 1982, when it fell to 148.5, he said.

In September, Mexico began devaluing its peso by 13 centavos a day, or 32 percent a year. At the time, the peso was valued at 149.10 to the dollar. At the devaluation rate, the peso should be worth 162.10 by Dec. 31.

Brannon said that although the peso rate remained low between December 1982 and last month, Mexican inflation has been an annual 80 percent to 100 percent a year.

Rising prices have sent a few shoppers back across the border to the United States, where merchants, in addition to Trevino, have seen slow signs of a return in business.

Agreement won't be renewed

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said today it will not renew an expired agreement on Japanese fishing off North Korea in retaliation for Japanese sanctions against North Korea after it was accused of staging a bomb attack that killed 21 people in Burma last month.

The Japanese sanctions restricted unofficial contacts with North Korea, which has no diplomatic relations with Tokyo.

The official North Korean Central News Agency said its fisheries federation will not resume negotiations for extension of the fishing agreement because of the "groundless" sanctions.

The latest agreement, considered the only formal link between the two countries, expired in July 1982.It permitted Japanese fishermen to catch 42,000 tons of fish yearly inside North Korea's 200-mile zone but outside a military boundary 50 miles off North Korean coasts in the Sea of Japan.

Church groups to picket opera

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Church groups are planning to picket the opening performance of the opera "Samson and Delilah" because it will feature full frontal nudity during an orgy scene.

"I'm not an opera goer but I know traditional opera doesn't have nudity, and we have got to try to stop it before the rot sets in," said the Rev. Bob Payne, a leader of the fundamentalist Festival of Light group.

He said leaders of eight church groups will meet this weekend to organize a protest for the opera's opening, Nov. 26 at the Melbourne Concert Hall.

Opera director Nigel Tiffitt said today he was "amazed there's any fuss" over the opera, written by French composer Saint-Saens.

"I suppose the opera is very conservative but the final scene is a bachanale — a major orgy — and what sort of orgy would it be without any nudity," he said.

Former hostage gives birth

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The sister of former President Efrain Rios Montt, who was held by kidnappers during almost four months of her pregnancy, gave birth this week to a "beautiful boy," relatives report.

Maria Elena Rios de Rivas, 37, was kidnapped June 29 near a school where she taught. She was about five months pregnant.

Antonio Rios Montt, one of her brothers, said the boy was born Tuesday night at the hospital where Mrs. Rios de Rivas has been since she was freed Oct. 26.

Mrs. Rios de Rivas was freed after a statement issued by her leftist guerrilla kidnappers was published in newspapers. She later told an interviewer she received medical attention during her captivity and anxiously awaited her first child after three miscarriages.

Efrain Rios Montt was ousted in a coup Aug. 8 by Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores. The new chief of state's sister, Celeste Aida Mejia de Velasco, was kidnapped Sept. 10 by leftist guerrillas and released the same day as Mrs. Rios de Rivas.

Few to watch 'The Day After'

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Only a few members of West Germanys's Parliament accepted an invitation to watch a showing of "The Day After," an American television film depicting the nuclear destruction of a Midwest city.

The opposition Social Democrats arranged the showing Thursday at a theater in Bonn, four days before the Bundestag, or lower house of Parliament, votes on plans to deploy U.S.-made nuclear missiles in West Germany and other NATO countries.

Grenada, U.S. figures rise

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. officers say the snipers who wounded two American soldiers have eluded capture, and they report that the number of Grenadians killed during the invasion is more than double the 21 that had been announced.

In another development, the new Grenadian government lifted a state of emergency Thursday and a White House task force met with government and business leaders to discuss ways the United States can assist the island's struggling economy.

Two members of the U.S. Army 82nd Airborne Division were wounded "very slightly" by sniper fire while manning an observation post Thursday on Green Island, a tiny islet of rocks and swamps just off Grenada's northeast coast.

They were the first U.S. casualties in 10 days, and pushed the total number of Americans wounded since the Oct. 25 invasion to 115. Eighteen U.S. troops were killed.

"No culprits were detained or found," Army spokesman Maj. Douglas Frey said. He had no other details on the attack on the observation post, one of several set up on the tiny out-islands to watch for "unfriendly" boats.

It was the first sniper attack since Nov. 9, when several men with automatic weapons opened fire from a cliff above an Army checkpoint, then apparently hid in a cave and escaped later. There were no casualties in that incident.

Meanwhile, the U.S. military changed its official Grenadian death toll from 21 to 45, and increased the count of wounded Grenadians from 280 to 337. The 42 Cuban dead reported earlier was lowered to 25. No explanation was given for the changes.

The Grenadian death toll includes 18 patients ta a mental hospital inadvertantly bombed by U.S. forces.

The Cuban government said earlier only 24 of the 42 bodies shipped to Havana were Cuban. Thirteen of the bodies were returned to Grenada and U.S. Diplomatic Mission spokesman Jim Dandridge said he presumed the other five were in Cuba or "in transit."

The bodies returned by Cuba are presumed to be Grenadians, and local funeral homes have reported burying 37 Grenadians killed by U.S. forces.

"They haven't tried to come up with the real figure because they want to keep saying that the Cubans did all the fighting. The truth is that the PRA (People's Revolutionary Army) fought hard, too," said George Louison, former agriculture minister and an associate of slain Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

The White House task force, which includes seven officials of U.S. government agencies, will report back to the White House and to people in the private sector interested in projects in Grenada.

The new Grenada government has begun meeting, according to legal adviser Tony Rushford. An initial act was to lift the state of emergency declared two weeks ago, but the government apparently retained the power to detain individuals for questioning and restrict public assembly.

But the U.S. military said such actions had been ordered by the Grenada government. The U.S. prison camp at Point Salines airstrip has been dismantled.

Frey said 46 detainees, most believed to be PRA leaders or participants in the Oct. 19 attack on civilians who had freed Bishop from house arrest, were shifted to Richmond Hill prison. They joined several other prisoners, including army commander-in-chief Gen. Hudson Austin and former Deputy Prime Minister Bernard Coard and his wife Phyllis, all leaders of the coup that toppled Bishop.

Frey said Thursday some 2,300 combat troops and 2,000 non-combat support troops remained in Grenada.

U.N. debate gets underway

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Turkish Cypriot leader of northern Cyprus says he may bar U.N. peacekeepers from the secessionist state because of international condemnation of its declaration of independence.

"It is a factor that will come to the agenda when we come to renew the mandate" of the force, Rauf Denktash told reporters Thursday night.

Denktash, president of the four-day-old Turkish Republic of Nortern Cyprus, complained that "troop-contributing countries are taking sides in such a way that we will have to ask them to withdraw their troops." He then amended his statement to say such action would be considered.

The current six-month mandate of the U.N. Force in Cyprus expires Dec. 31.

Northern Cyprus, occupied by Turkish troops since 1974, declared its independence from the rest of Cyprus on Tuesday. The move was widely condemned by other countries, and angry leaders of the Greek Cypriot majority in the southern part of the Mediterranean island requested an emergency session of the U.N. Security Council.

The council opened debate Thursday on a British-sponsored resolution condemning the independence declaration, with Greek and Cypriot representatives quickly placing the blame on Turkey. The debate resumes today.

"Turkey is solely responsible for the purported declaration of independence, which would have been impossible had Turkey not been in occupation of that part of the territory," said Cyprus Foreign Minister George Iacovou, a Greek Cypriot.

Singers Joe Williams, left, and Billy Eckstine, old friends, got together recently when both were playing different nightclubs in Washington, D.C.

American 'royalty' lives on in songs

ENTERTAINMENT

By RICHARD HARRINGTON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

They have been comfortable and familiar with royalty, these two assured men sitting so casually in the empty restaurant. It's that gray time between meals, and one busboy noisily separates the silverware while another stacks metal trays. It sounds as if Buddy Rich is loose in the pantry.

Joe Williams and Billy Eckstine, two great American singers, sit back, safely inside the history they're talking about. The grand names bring smiles, memories of close encounters, troubles shared, joys provoked.

The Duke.

Prez.

The Count and the Earl.

Lady Day.

The Vibes President.

They are America's royalty, gentle jazz giants named Ellington, Young, Basie, Hines, Holiday and Hampton. Some are gone, but the royal jewels live on in songs left behind, in countless musicians inspired and taught and encouraged.

Williams and Eckstine have both lived in Las Vegas for years. They've known each other more than 40 years, but a life in music means that paths seldom cross often enough.

Eckstine, still the sharp dresser at 69, is also still handsome as a fox. When his popularity became widespread in the late '40s with songs like "I Apologize," "My Foolish Heart" and "Fool That I Am," Time magazine dubbed him "the Sepia Sinatra." By then, Eckstine had already been a star attraction with the Earl Hines band and had led his own big band, a legendary unit that included Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Dexter Gordon, Art Blakey, Miles Davis and Sarah Vaughn.

"I came to Chicago in '38 and met Joe about '40," Eckstine says in the softly mellifluous tones that have sent so many hearts fluttering. In his silvery blue jogging suit, he looks to be in his early 50s and there is still a sensual ease to his manner.

"That's right. I heard him sing, 'Souuuuuuth of the border, down Mexico way...'" croons Williams in the Eckstine manner. Williams is a dynamic singer who came out of the Count Basie band to establish his own strong solo career. At 65, he is tall and imposing with a built-in toughness. It's not hard to understand why Cannonball Adderley used him as John Henry, the Steel Drivin' Man, in his folk-opera "Big Man."

Both singers recalled the early '40s, when jazz clubs dotted most big cities and when there was round-the-clock work for those with enough endurance.

"Every little club in Chicago had a breakfast show every morning," Williams says, sipping an afternoon coffee with an ice-water chaser. "When the sun came up, we were always performing somewhere. We'd meet at Young's Drugstore, the corner of 55th Street and Michigan. All the musicians would come there in the morning when they'd get off their gigs. They'd stop in, have a sandwich, talk to people. It was a regular hangout."

"That's right..."

"We'd have malted milk and sandwiches. Do you remember apple pie with the cheese on top?"

"Still a good memory," says Eckstine, licking his chops.

"They would take American cheese, put it on top of the apple pie and stick it under the broiler..."

"It was delicious..."

"Oh man, then you'd get a scoop of vanilla ice cream..."

There were hard times, too, particularly on the road in the '30s and '40s when some Americans still defined Duke Ellington's vanguard compositions as "jungle music."

"I always thought it was the most sophisticated asphalt jungle I ever heard," Williams says.

The worst part for many musicians was touring the South, where lodging and food for "coloreds" were often impossible to come by.

"The longest time was nine days on the road without a room in a hotel," Eckstine recalls, cigarette smoke curling around his shoulders like a gathering storm, "and it wasn't because of money. We just couldn't get rooms. We stayed in the bus, even though the guys had plenty of money in their pockets. We'd have to get our food from a grocery store, or have the white bus driver go to (a carryout) and bring food out to us. We couldn't get out of the bus."

"It was rough, but it was also some of the best schooling I ever had," Eckstine adds. "I never thought the South would be what it is today. I remember at one hotel in New Orleans, after Earl (Hines) and I wrote 'Jelly Jelly,' we went up to a radio program and had to ride up in the freight elevator. Now we headline there."

And attention is finally being paid to the impact of artists like Ellington and Basie on both black and white culture.

Olivier 'supreme' actor but also tempermental

LONDON (AP) — Sir Laurence Olivier was "the supreme man of the theater in our time," but also a man of shifting temperaments, according to entries in "Peter Hall's Diaries."

Hall, the director of Britain's National Theater, presents an insider's view of the actor as a man of varying moods.

Edited by John Goodwin, "Peter Hall's Diaries" cover the years 1972-80, beginning with Hall's decision to succeed Olivier as director of the subsidized National Theater following the actor's 10-year stint.

Hall, the founder of the Royal Shakespeare Company and the director of such Broadway hits as Harold Pinter's "Betrayal" and Peter Shaffer's long-running "Amadeus," encounters an Olivier marked by caprice.

Of the actor's indecision about playing King Lear, a role considered among the most difficult in all of Shakespeare, Hall wrote: "...he (Olivier) was going to tell me he had decided to do Lear. Now he had decided against it. The implication was that if I had been available at the weekend I would have been doing Lear with him; now it was lost forever."

As riddled with inner conflict as the monarch in Shakespeare's tragedy, Olivier is seen as torn between wanting to graciously hand over power to Hall, and not wanting to part with an artistic company he had strongly shaped.

He also must cope with the effects of dermatopolymyositis, a degenerative muscle disease that has slowed, but still not stopped Olivier. He has continued to work, and at 76 he was filming in France when Hall's diary was published in late September. Olivier would not comment on the book.

Olivier's agent in London, Laurence Evans, also would not comment on the book.

To show his ambiguous feelings, Olivier does not attend the ceremony marking the opening of the largest of the National's three theaters in October 1976 — a theater named for Olivier himself.

After being knighted in 1977 and four years after becoming director of the National, Hall comments on how distant Olivier and his wife, actress Joan Plowright, have been toward him.

City's calendar full of 'hunks'

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — There are some "cute" men in Decatur and some modest ones, too.

When Connie and Pam Hawbaker and their sister, Brenda Hawbaker Lewis, decided the local males' good looks warranted a 1984 "Decatur Hunk Calendar," two of the chosen few declined to pose.

Not so Jon Bayless, executive director of the Decatur-Macon County Economic Development Foundation.

Other "hunks" are businessmen, musicians, students, disc jockeys, a nuclear power draftsman, a firefighter and an orthodontist.

About 20 men, ranging in age from 20 to 36, were considered. Making the selections "was tough because they were all cute and they were all nice," Connie Hawbaker, 23, said recently.

The calendar is selling for $5, with part of the money going to a Christian ministry charity.

"It's not a lot of muscle or anything," said Mrs. Lewis, 26. "We have businessmen and men in three-piece suits."

One of the best-looking, apparently, is Mrs. Lewis' husband, Rick. He's on the cover.

Frequent urination normal in pregnancy

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is pregnant and she finds that she has to urinate a lot. I remember that when I was pregnant I had the same problem. Why does this happen during pregnancy? — Mrs. L.D., Washington, D.C.

Dear Mrs. D.: Frequent urination is a normal part of pregnancy. It generally is an indication that the baby is pressing on the bladder. If a woman has other symptoms, such as an itching or burning sensation while urinating, she should bring this to the attention of her physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has a nervous habit and my pediatrician says that it's a tic and that it will go away and that I should try to relax and not worry about it. I don't like to ignore anything that has to do with my child's health, and I would appreciate your opinion. — Mrs. H.V., NYC

Dear Mrs. V.: According to Dr. Peter H. Berman, professor of pediatrics at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia, tics generally are a benign and usually transient disorder. Drug therapy for the condition is available, but this is indicated only when the severity of the problem interferes with the child's ability to function.

If your pediatrician feels there is no cause for concern, I would take his advice and try to relax.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am in my mid-40s. Last spring I joined a group of men my age at a local community center where we did calisthenics and then went jogging. I thought I was doing pretty good but, when the cold weather came, I began coughing and had trouble breathing whenever I would go running. Would you have any idea what causes this and what I might be able to do about it? — Stuart

Dear Stuart: The fact that your symptoms began when the weather became cold would lead me to speculate that the two factors are related. Dr. Gerald Kerby, of the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, has noted that some people are affected in the manner you describe when they run in cold, dry weather; others also experience chest discomfort which is erroneously attributed to an impending heart attack.

The cause is often exercise-induced bronchospasm, which refers to a spasmodic contraction of air passages within the lungs. I assume, of course, that you have been given a clean bill of health by your physician.

Your physician may be able to prescribe medication that you could take before exercising and which might help you avoid the symptoms you describe. Another alternative would be to substitute swimming for the running when the weather is cold and dry.

It should really not be necessary for me to advise you that if you smoke, your very first step should be to stop.

For Bertha, Sacramento, Calif.: Eyedrops are a form of medication and may be respnsible for a variety of symptoms. For example, high blood pressure may be a consequence of the use of eyedrop preparations.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Grandparents awarded rights

Forty-two states now give grandparents the right to go to court and demand to see their grandchildren. The new laws, unheard of five years ago, result from upheavals in family patterns.

Most offenders not in prison

In 1982, seven out of 10 offenders under federal supervision were not in prison. They were in pretrial diversion programs, probation or parole supervision, or community "halfway" houses.

Horse by any other name still smells

ATLANTIC BEACH, Fla. (AP) — You can bring down the law on Fred Foreman, you can take away his pet, but don't go calling his tiny little horse a pony.

Richard Cleghorn, who owns rental property next door to Foreman's yard, went before the City Commission on Monday to complain about "that pony" — a 34-inch-tall, 175-pounder named Billy Jack.

That's no pony, said Foreman of the 4-year-old pet he had kept in the backyard for a week. It's a miniature horse — a breed dating to the 16th century.

Police spy reportedly worked for Hayden

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An undercover police officer helped provide private security for anti-war activist Tom Hayden and his wife, actress Jane Fonda, then reported to the department on their activities, according to the Los Angeles Daily News.

But police officials turned down an opportunity for the officer to do similar work during Hayden's unsuccessful campaign for the U.S. Senate in 1976, the newspaper reported Thursday. Hayden, a Democrat, is now a state assemblyman from Santa Monica.

The newspaper said the officer, Jon M. Dial, worked for Hayden and Miss Fonda during their Indochina Peace Campaign tour throughout California in 1972 and was invited by the couple to work for them during the 1976 election.

Dial worked for more than six years undercover in the seaside community of Venice, reporting to the now-defunct Public Disorder Intelligence Division on the activities of radicals and activists.

The newspaper said Dial told of his work for Hayden and Miss Fonda during a deposition he gave last year in the American Civil Liberties Union's suit alleging improper activities by the division.

Hayden could not be reached for comment Thursday, said aide Steve Rivers.

The Daily News said Hayden confirmed that Dial worked for the couple in 1972 but said he didn't recall asking him to work on the 1976 campaign. Hayden said he learned in 1978 that Dial was an undercover police officer, the newspaper said.

"When I found out he was a cop, it made perfect sense," Hayden said.

Town founded in 1886?

BEEMER, Neb. (AP) — Chamber of Commerce members were all set to plan this little town's centennial — until someone said they got the date wrong.

In September, the chamber decided to hold the observance in 1986 because that would be 100 years from 1886, the traditionally noted date for the founding of the Elkhorn River Valley town in the state's northeast corner.

But then someone told chamber member Margaret Kuncl the town was in fact staked out in 1885. Sure enough, a history book showed that A.D. Beemer himself did the work on May 4, 1885.

Provision to require contractors to guarantee Pentagon weapons

By MARCUS STERN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — In a move that could shake up the multi-billion defense industry, House and Senate conferees Wednesday agreed to require defense contractors to provide written guarantees on all weapons systems sold to the Pentagon.

The provision, which would apply to all current and future weapons programs, was the object of an 11th-hour lobbying battle involving Pentagon officials, defense contractors and warring factions within Congress.

"I was somewhat doubtful about whether it would pass," said Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., who pushed the measure in the House. "The defense lobbyists were fighting it hard and they usually get their way in defense appropriations bills." Support for the provision, authored by Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., was fueled by horror stories surrounding weapons system failures, huge cost overruns and the recent spare-parts scandle. "The fact is, this is perceived as a 'motherhood' issue and members are reticient to take the leadership in opposing it," said an aide to a Senate opponent.

In accepting the provision, which includes a national-security exemption, conferees ruled that the Pentagon could waive the warranties requirement if the cost on a particular program were deemed to be too high.

In addition, the conferees stipulated that warranties could not be required for combat damage.

While other provisions of the appropriations bill remain to be worked out and final adoption by both chambers of Congress is needed, proponents clearly viewed Wednesday's development as the last major hurdle for the warranties provision.

The defeat for the defense industry has been laid to the late start lobbyists got in opposing it.

Defense contractors and Pentagon officials, citing added costs, first began actively opposing the provision last week after it unexpectedly survived a Senate floor vote.

"A warranty in and of itself can be useful, but you have to measure the cost," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said last week. "Nothing is free and any kind of warranty that doesn't have exceptions longer than the contract itself, costs quite a bit of money."

Defense industry representatives went further, charging that a warranty requirement would disrupt the defense procurement process.

"This could slow down the acquisition process and could cause thousands of contracts now in effect and under production to have to be renegotiated," said John Loosbrock, vice president of the Aerospace Industries Association, which represent 47 aerospace firms.

"It would inhibit innovation in our weapons because everybody would want to stay with tried and true designs. And I can foresee lots of litigation over these warranties."

But Andrews and Levine discounted the dire predictions and countered that the warranties will, in fact, save billions of dollars.

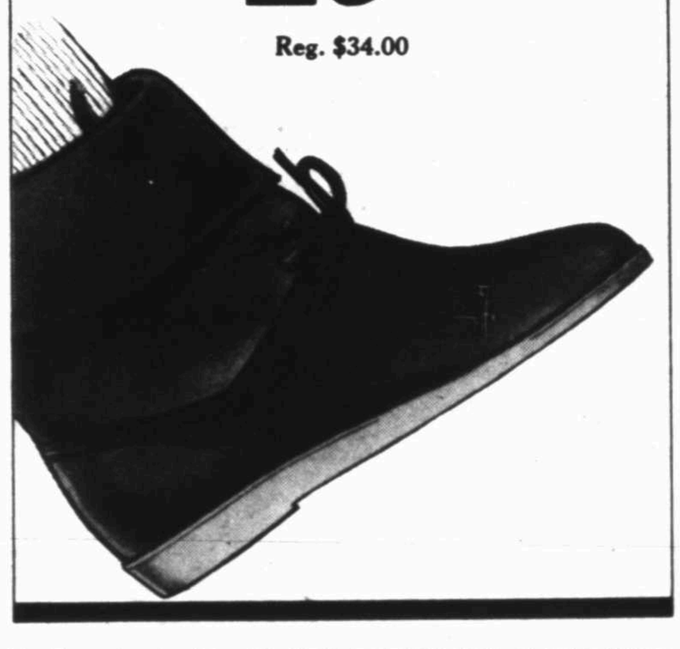

Andrews, quoting Air Force figures, said a 1982 requirement for warranties on new aircraft engines will net a 20-year savings of close to $2 billion. "These savings, according to the Air Force, are due to warranties on the durability of key engine parts," Andrews said. "They are due, in large part, to my amendment last year in the defense appropriations bill requiring any new or alternative fighter aircraft engine bought by the Air Force or Navy to have a written warranty."

Andrews, a first-term Senator and member of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, became interested in warranties last year after test-driving an M1 tank.

British model becomes new Miss World

LONDON (AP) — British fashion model Sarah-Jane Hutt started her one-year reign as the new Miss World today modestly denying she was the world's most beautiful woman — and some disgruntled competitors agreed.

"She was not the prettiest girl, we all think the judges were wrong," said unplaced Miss Barbados, Nina McIntosh-Clarke, 24.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, reported that Miss Jamaica, Catherine Levy, 21, who placed fourth, was so angry about not winning that she refused to attend the coronation ball after the televised contest Thursday night.

Miss Hutt's winner's prize was a check for 5,000 pounds, or $7,500, and a year-long contract worth 25,000 pounds, or $37,500, with the Miss World organization to promote clothes, products and the Variety Club children's charity around the world.

Colombia's Rocio Florez, a 18-year-old medical student, finished second and Brazil's Catia Pedrosa, 20, a psychology student, finished third in the contest.

The American contender, Lisa Allred, a 22-year-old model from Fort Worth, Texas, was among the top seven finalists.

The three other Miss World finalists were Miss Levy, a hotel entertainments manager; Miss Panama, 19-year-old Marissa Canalias, a computer science student; and Miss Iceland, 20-year-old Unnur Steinsson, an airline stewardess.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The case is supposedly about drug charges against automaker John Z. De Lorean, but the federal courtroom has turned into the daily Larry Flynt show. The latest act: Arrest of the magazine publisher.

Flynt, wearing only an American flag as a diaper, a combat helmet and a bulletproof vest with a Purple Heart medal, was arrested Thursday in the courthouse after he fell asleep while hand-counting $1 bills to pay his third daily $10,000 fine. He was charged with defiling the flag.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi had found the pornographic magazine publisher in contempt of court Monday for refusing to say who gave him a tape which purportedly has a government informant threatening De Lorean and his daughter if he backed out of a drug deal.

Defense lawyers say the fuzzy audio tape — which has not been authenticated — could be crucial when De Lorean is tried on a charge of conspiring to distribute $24 million in cocaine. Takasugi postponed the trial's start indefinitely after CBS News broadcast government videotapes, provided by Flynt, of De Lorean's arrest.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The nose wheel of a chartered plane carrying pop singer Lionel Richie and his band collapsed on landing at Tucson International Airport, but none of the 18 people aboard was injured, airport police said.

The plane's front end was extensively damaged and about half of a 1,200-foot runway was chewed up when the four-engine Viscount plane skidded in at 7:24 p.m. Thursday, said David Enz, chief of airport security.

Authorities said the Federal Aviation Administration would investigate why the wheel collapsed. The plane had been carrying 15 passengers and a crew of three.

After the landing, Richie and his seven-piece band traveled to the Tucson Community Center and went on stage as scheduled for their sold-out concert.

Richie has sold more than 25 million records in his 15-year singing career.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Flip Wilson has won a "palimony" suit filed by a 32-year-old dental assistant who said she and Wilson had lived together as man and wife for 18 months.

Superior Court Judge David N. Eagleson ruled Thursday that evidence presented by Kayathana Harrison of Los Angeles failed to support her argument that she was entitled to part of Wilson's property.

Miss Harrison was "hired by (Wilson) as a companion to his children for an agreed consideration which has been fully paid," Eagleson ruled.

Acting as her own attorney, Miss Harrison testified that she and Wilson were engaged to be married and that he had agreed to "share everything he owned" with her.

Stephanie Swiney

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Seven-year-old Stephanie Swiney of Lexington, N.C., who gets around with braces and crutches, has been named the 1984 National Easter Seal Child.

Stephanie will symbolize the annual fundraising drive by the National Easter Seal Society, which announced the selection at its convention Thursday in New Orleans.

Asked how she got involved with the society, Stephanie said, "When I was 2 years old I needed braces and crutches to help me walk and Easter Seals was there to help."

Stephanie was born with spina bifida, a spinal defect which resulted in paralysis of the lower limbs, hip dislocation and club feet.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, wearing a black pullover sweater, grey skirt and charcoal gray boots, spent a day in court over an advertisement for Christian Dior sportswear which contains a Jackie look-alike, model Barbara Reynolds.

Mrs. Onassis sat in the front row of the spectator section in state court Thursday and made no statements during the proceeding.

Lawyers for the 54-year-old Mrs. Onassis asked Justice Edward J. Greenfield to issue an order stating, "Thou shalt not use the likeness of Jackie Onassis for purposes of trade."

Dior lawyer Todd Sollis said the ad ran from Sept. 8 to Oct. 18, and "Christian Dior has no present intention of ever using this again."

The judge reserved a decision.

LONDON (AP) — When Rex Harrison and Rosemary Harris open on Broadway next month in George Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" they already may have won the British equivalent of a Tony Award for their work in the revival.

Miss Harris and the 75-year-old Harrison appeared in the production in London last summer. They are among 76 nominees in 19 categories announced Thursday for London's 1983 Society of West End Theater (SWET) Awards.

Best Musical nominees include two imports from the United States — "Little Shop of Horrors," currently running off-Broadway, and "Snoopy," which ran on Broadway last spring.

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Nobel laureate Czeslaw Milosz says Soviet leaders have built a society that mirrors the one depicted by George Orwell in the book "1984."

"I recently reread 1984," Milosz told an audience at Marshall University Thursday. "And I found it accurately describes the totalitarian Soviet system."

Milosz left Poland after World War II, moving to France and then the United States. In 1980, he was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature. Although he considers himself a poet, his best-known book in the United States is "The Captive Mind," which described the effect of the communist takeover in Poland.

A member of the University of California at Berkeley faculty since 1961, the poet appeared at Marshall as part of the Birke Fine Arts Symposium.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Nik Cohn, the British writer whose magazine article helped spark the hit 1977 picture "Saturday Night Fever," has been put on probation for five years on a drug charge.

Cohn, arrested after a raid on his Manhattan townhouse May 19, also was fined $5,000 Thursday by U.S. District Judge Henry Bramwell. He pleaded guilty last month to possessing small amounts of cocaine.

The article — "The Tribal Rites of the New Saturday Night" — appeared in 1976 in New York Magazine.

• • •

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Betty Williams warns that the world is probably in "the most precarious position it's ever been in."

In an address Thursday at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Ms. Williams, who with Mairead Corrigan was awarded the Nobel prize in 1977 for organizing women's peace rallies in Northern Ireland, said "If you look back in the history of mankind, he has never developed a weapon that he has not used...somebody just presses the wrong button or somebody just gets angry enough to use it."

"Mankind will and must live together before mankind destroys mankind," she said.

• • •

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Frank Sinatra is feeling better after a bout with the flu but still won't be able to keep a concert date early next month, a booking agent says.

Sinatra, 67, previously had canceled a Nov. 8 appearance in the Milwaukee Arena.

But Roberta Monda of the Edgewood Agency said Thursday that the singer now has had to call off the rescheduled show, which had been set for Dec. 9.

"Although Mr. Sinatra is feeling better, he has been advised by his doctor to spend more time recuperating," Ms. Monda said.

Promoters said ticket refunds will be made.

• • •

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If rock singer Rod Stewart continues to duck a court appointment in a case concerning his hit song "I Was Only Joking," the judge says he'll prove that he's not fooling around.

The British performer has repeatedly failed to make himself available for a deposition in a copyright suit filed against him by a songwriter, U.S. District Judge John Nixon said Thursday.

The suit had been set for trial last month.

30 Automobiles

The New Car is here.

Newly arrived: the Honda Civic CRX. And Civic CRX 1.5.

They sweep away all preconceptions. Just as the original Civic did a decade ago. With innovative aerodynamics. A two-seater design. And, for the CRX, the best gas mileage in America.*

The Civic CRX 1.5 blends performance and fuel efficiency* with an ambitious 1.5 liter 12-valve engine. It also offers an optional automatic transmission with torque converter lock-up. And both the CRX and CRX 1.5 provide torsion bar front suspension, a 5-speed manual transmission and a lockable stowage compartment behind the seats.

The 1984 Civic CRX and Civic CRX 1.5. Totally new cars from Honda. But then, that's nothing new.

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."
