Monster storm rolls on

New Orleans braces for possible onslaught

AP

■ Officials order evacation of more than 1.5 million people in south Louisiana parishes.

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Hurricane Andrew swept across the Gulf of Mexico on Monday as officials told more than 1.5 million New Orleans-area residents to flee from the possible nightmare of a dead-hit storm.

Hurricane warnings were issued Monday afternoon from Pascagoula, Miss., to Vermilion Bay, La.

"The track we have now would bring it ashore around midnight (today) near Grand Isle," said Bill Crouch of the National Weather Service in New Orleans.

The mandatory or voluntary evacuation of more than 1.5 million people in 11 south Louisiana parishes had been ordered by nightfall, said Brett Krieger, deputy assistant director of the state Office of Emergency Preparedness in Baton Rouge.

That included more than 200,000 who were ordered to leave their low-lying New Orleans homes, Krieger said.

"I guess our problem is that we're not seeing the volume of evacuation we would like to be seeing at this point," he said Monday night.

Evacuation orders went out throughout the day

Hurricane hits South Florida 'like a bomb'

■ Andrew kills at least 13, leaves Miami without power, water.

Associated Press

MIAMI — Hurricane Andrew struck southern Florida on Monday with 160-mph winds and a 12-foot tidal surge that flattened homes, uprooted trees and flung boats onto leafy streets. Then the storm blew into the Gulf of Mexico on a path toward New Orleans.

The hurricane, the most powerful to strike Florida in more than 60 years, was blamed for at least 10 deaths in the state. There also were three confirmed deaths in the Bahamas, hit by the storm on Sunday.

"It's like a bomb hit," said Joel Holstein, looking at the remains of the Florida City trailer park where he and his wife had lived.

The hurricane left 1.3 million people without electricity in Florida.

All of Dade County was put under a 7 p.m.-to-7 a.m. curfew as scattered looting was reported. President Bush authorized federal disaster assistance and flew to Florida, where he toured damaged areas and visited a shelter.

The storm was expected to reach land again sometime tonight or Wednesday morning. A hurricane warning was posted from Pascagoula, Miss., to Vermillion Bay, La.

Suburbs southwest of downtown Miami appeared to be hit worst.

Sex offenses may become the crime of the '90s. With increased awareness, even children know when a touch exceeds the boundaries of what is acceptable.

A Los Angeles mother on a recent national television talk show announced that her 5-year-old daughter dialed 911 and reported her stepfather to authorities, moments after he allegedly molested and beat her.

With recent sexual assault and harrassment trials being televised, sex is being more openly discussed in the media and the workplace.

And, unfortunately, "there is a lot of inappropriate sexual behavior going on," said Meg Branson, counselor of Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Ms. Branson said that from 1890 through the 1950s, a pyschotherapy expert denounced women who claimed they were sexually abused. "He said women had a fantasy wish to sleep with their fathers," she said. "That changed with the women's movement when we started to study sexual assault."

Residents tell tales amid rubble

By Christopher Sullivan

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Wet curtains flapped from smashed windows of a beachfront Art Deco apartment building, but Alvaro Acosta emerged smiling after spending the night on the third floor.

He and a friend took advantage of downed palms to hack a fresh coconut breakfast drink.

"Sweet," he said.

It was a reference both to the taste and to survival. Hurricane Andrew caused awesome destruction inland, but left Miami Beach — a spit of white sand and architectural splendor — largely intact.

At the Fontainebleau Hilton, one of the big, old resorts lining this barrier island, the lower lobby was under 30 inches of water after the surge hit, an employee said. But by mid-morning most of the water had been cleared out and other damage was minimal.

'The roof just fell down right on us. We stayed there and just put mattresses over ourselves and hoped that we would live.'

A skeleton staff spent a fearful night in the hotel, many with their families, after more than 1,000 guests were evacuated Sunday.

"Everybody's just glad it wasn't worse," said an employee who would identify himself only as Diego.

There was some damage on the island,

Wildfire rages

ROUND MOUNTAIN, Calif. — Gusting early morning winds blew new fury into Shasta County's 64,000-acre wildfire, spreading flames and confusion and forcing thousands of residents to flee as the shifting, unpredictable blaze leaped control lines. The 5-day-old Fountain fire broke through fire lines on at least two fronts, but authorities said thick smoke made it hard to say whether the blaze would reach hundreds of homes scattered in its path.

Campaign polls

Gov. Bill Clinton retains a lead over President Bush, but Bush has reduced the size of the gap, according to four pairs of polls taken both before and after the Republican convention. In two polls taken by the Gallup Organization for CNN and USA Today, Clinton's lead over Bush tightened from 19 percentage points before the convention to 10 points after. In the latest poll, taken Friday and Saturday with 754 registered voters, Clinton led Bush by 52 percent to 42 percent. Similarly, in two polls conducted by The Washington Post, Clinton's lead tightened from 26 percentage points before the convention to 9 percentage points after.

Greed at Alamo?

SAN ANTONIO — "I could never understand what would possibly motivate 189 men to stand up to between 1,000 and 8,000 men climbing over the walls," Frank Buschbacher says. Another question that has bedeviled Alamo historians is: Why did Santa Anna even bother with the lonely outpost instead of going for a more significant military objective? After four years of research, Buschbacher thinks both questions can be answered with one word: greed. The 'Texians,' he says, died protecting a treasure James Bowie had brought into the compound, possibly the fabled San Saba treasure, and Santa Anna attacked after finding out about it.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Early cloud cover to break up

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies in the morning becoming partly cloudy with a high in the upper 80s and southeast to south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a high in the mid-80s.

The NWS reports that although parts of eastern Texas may feel the effect of Hurricane Andrew as it comes ashore, West Texas should not see any drastic changes in the weather.

After an overnight low of 65, Monday's high reached 85, compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1936. The record low was 58 set in 1970.

STATE

Afternoon heat set off some showers and thunderstorms in the moist atmosphere over the east half of South Texas on Monday, but the National Weather Service was concerned more about Hurricane Andrew and its possible effect on Texas.

The hurricane hit the Florida coast on Monday and churned northwesterly into the Gulf of Mexico. Even if it hits Alabama or Louisiana instead of making a direct hit on Texas, the storm could spawn tornadoes and heavy rains in Texas.

The weather service said residents in the northern counties of East Texas should brace for changing weather conditions — including heavy rains, flooding and tornadoes — as the hurricane moves inland.

"Residents along the upper Texas coast should be aware of this threatening situation. You should be prepared to take necassary action to protect personal property such as homes, pets, boats and automobiles," a weather service spokesman said.

"Fill your gas tank and keep it full. Personal papers such as insurance policies, property inventories and identification should not be forgotten. Marine interests should be aware of the potentially dangerous situation and be ready to take action to secure vessels."

Partly to mostly sunny skies were prevalent over West Texas on Monday. Temperatures ranged from 81 at Dalhart to 88 at Childress, Wink and San Angelo. Winds were mostly from the south at 15 to 25 mph, with occasional gusts to 35 mph.

The storms in South Texas on Monday were scattered east of a line from the Rio Grand Valley to Austin. Temperatures reached the upper 90s in far South Texas, while the rest of the region stayed in the upper 80s and lower 90s.

NATION

Hurricane Andrew blew across southern Florida on Monday into the Gulf of Mexico, causing concern from Alabama to Texas. Heavy rain lingered in Andrew's wake, while summer snow brought chillier weather worries in Colorado.

A tornado watch was posted for parts of Florida as unstable conditions left by the hurricane persisted. Heavy rain and strong winds stretched across a wide area in the afternoon.

Unsure of Andrew's next landfall, forecasters issued a hurricane watch for hundreds of miles of coastline from Mobile, Ala., to Sabine Pass, Texas, and a more serious hurricane warning from Pascagoula, Miss., to Vermillion Bay, La.

The remains of another tropical storm pushed through northern Mexico and brought heavy rain to the southern Rockies. A flash flood watch was posted for much of Colorado. Forecasters cautioned about possible mud and rock slides.

A flash flood watch also was posted over large parts of New Mexico.

A snow advisory was posted for higher elevations in Colorado after rain changed to snow during the morning. By 1 p.m. CDT, as much as 2 inches had fallen in the San Juan Mountains. Snowplows cleared roads.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ANDREW: Hurricane strikes with 160-mph winds

(From 1A)

"There was complete devastation. It's like building blocks, and somebody comes along and steps on it all," Dade County Manager Joaquin Avino said.

Andrew smashed ashore about 25 miles south of downtown Miami before dawn, with sustained winds of 140 mph and gusts of 164 mph or more. The blasts of tropical air were strong enough to strip the paint off houses.

As weak sun broke through in late afternoon, a swath of destruction in residential subdivisions and farm communities became evident. Many buildings were leveled, others badly damaged. Downed trees, utility poles and live wires blocked streets.

On the waterfront, a forest of spindly Australian pine bordered by coconut palms at the southern tip of Key Biscayne was denuded.

In Homestead, a farm and retirement community about 25 miles southwest of Miami, "Homestead Air Force Base no longer exists," said Toni Riordan, a spokeswoman for the state Community Affairs Department.

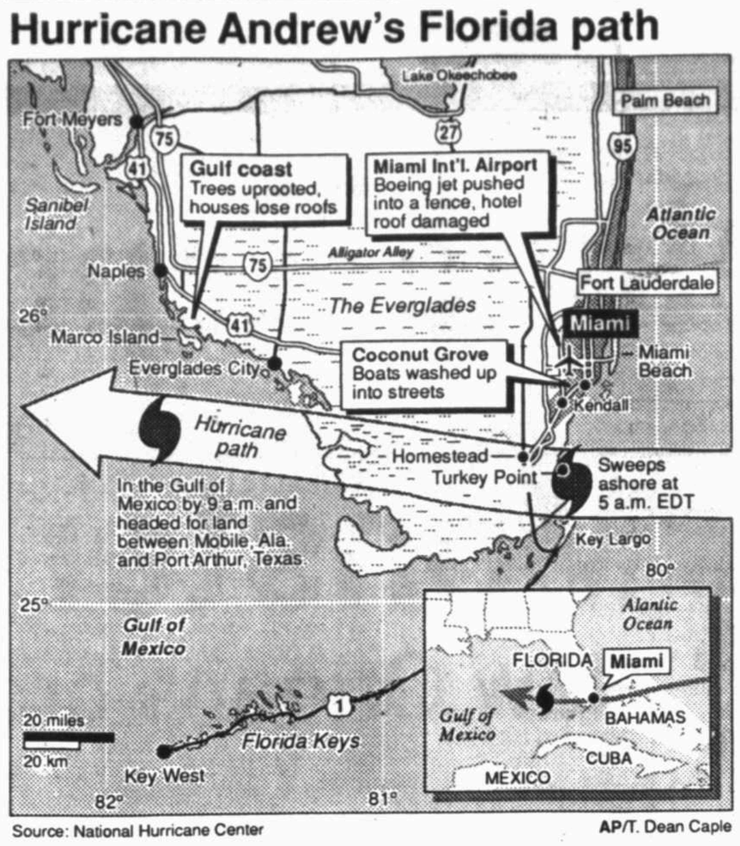

In Washington, Navy Cmdr. Mike Thurwanger said every building at Homestead was either destroyed or damaged, and two F-16 fighters were destroyed when a hangar door swung onto them. He said no casualties were reported.

There was some looting and arrests in the Homestead area, but Metro-Dade police spokesman Donald Blocker said, "There's not much left of Homestead for anybody to loot — a lot of devastation."

Kendall, an inland community near Homestead, also suffered severe damage. Luis Valdes was riding out the storm there when the storm kicked in his front door, blasting through deadbolts.

"I flew about 20 feet and held on to the railing of the stairs," Valdes said.

Hurricane Andrew's Florida path

Source: National Hurricane Center AP/T. Dean Caple

Damage was extensive in the northern half of the Florida Keys, but islands south of Marathon on Key Vaca were mostly spared. Key Largo's exclusive Ocean Reef Club was heavily damaged. Access into the Keys was restricted.

Inland areas weren't covered by a pre-storm evacuation order that covered more than 1 million people.

"Right now there are nine confirmed deaths we believe are related to the hurricane," said Metro-Dade spokesman Donald Blocker.

Miami police reported a 10th death, a man who insisted on sleeping in his truck died when a tree fell on the truck, said police spokesman Angelo Bitsis.

Fire-rescue officials reported 350 injury calls in Dade County but said they didn't know how serious they were.

There were reports of four hurricane-related deaths in the Bahamas, where the storm hit Sunday. The Nassau Tribune, a newspaper on the islands, said it had confirmed three of them. Patricia Glynton, a spokeswoman for the state-run Bahamas News Service, said authorities were still investigating.

The storm still had sustained winds up to 140 mph as it headed into the Gulf of Mexico. Forecasters posted a hurricane warning or watch for much of the southern U.S. coast from Alabama to Texas. Meteorologist Bob Rau said he expected the winds to maintain the same intensity.

New Orleans lay close to the center of Andrew's path. People there stocked up on batteries, flashlights and other emergency supplies.

At 7 p.m. CDT, Andrew's center was about 410 miles southeast of New Orleans and moving west at 18 mph.

The Category 4 hurricane was the worst to hit Miami since 1926, said forecaster Max Mayfield at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables, where the radar dishes tipped over the edge of the rooftop. Gusts hit 164 mph before breaking the measuring device.

The worst-hit areas of South Florida were sealed off, with even residents ordered to stay out. Those wishing to leave could do so only under police escort. Chiles rushed 1,500 National Guard troops to ring Miami's Coconut Grove, Homestead and other areas after reports of sporadic looting.

Getting into the damaged areas was difficult, anyway — fallen signs and poles blocked major highways.

The American Red Cross and state emergency officials sent trucks south to Miami filled with emergency supplies and drinking water. All Dade and Broward county residents were asked to boil water for fear of contamination.

The power outages affected approximately one-third of the customers of Florida Power & Light, the state's largest utility. Utility officials warned that the outages could last for weeks in some remote areas.

The company's Turkey Point nuclear power plant, brushed by Andrew's eye, was closed before the storm.

fall be clear for the storm that has raked the Bahamas and Florida, killing 13 people.

Presuming the worst, Texas emergency management teams pressed into action, taking such precautions as preparing mobile hospitals, moving aircraft from the coast, monitoring price-gouging on lumber and bottled water and coordinating with the Red Cross.

Gov. Ann Richards urged residents not to assume the hurricane would pose no threat to Texas if its center hits Louisiana as predicted.

"Don't be cute. Don't be brave. Your life is worth a whole lot more than that," Richards said.

Health officials, insurance and utility regulators and other state employees were mobilized, in some cases to preserve records but also to hit the streets with emergency crews if necessary.

Officials in Jefferson County were expected to initiate evacuations Monday night in an abundance of caution, said Tom Millwee, chief of the governor's Division of Emergency Management.

At a briefing Monday afternoon in the state's 24-hour command post, Texas Water Commission meteorologist George Bomar said the hurricane was still too far away to say it would miss Texas.

"As a matter of fact, if you lived in Corpus Christi and you looked due east and you could see over the horizon, you would be staring into the face of Andrew," Bomar said.

Unless the storm followed National Weather Service predictions and veered north early today, the central Texas coast would be in for the main blow late Wednesday, he said.

The weather service's hurricane watch area extended from Mobile, Ala., to Sabine Pass, leaving New Orleans in the middle of the most likely landfall area. Forecasters gave the Beaumont area a 16 percent chance of being hit dead-center. The likelihood dropped to 4 percent for the Brownsville area.

With the storm's cross-hairs set on New Orleans, Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards told people in New Orleans and four nearby parishes to leave Monday to avoid a crunch. Flood-control measures were taken and the state National Guard was put on alert.

In Galveston, officials opened shelters and were ready to call for an evacuation of the island's 100,000 residents, which city officials estimated would take at least 17 hours.

TALES: Survivors relate stories amid wreckage

which sits just across the pastel blue waters of Biscayne Bay from the city of Miami.

Andrew Kaiser and Chris Matthews shot before-and-after videos of Miami Beach's Ocean Drive. Their lens took in crews picking up plywood sheets wrenched from windows, a bicyclist threading his way through downed trees and debris, and eddies of sand deposited on the pavement.

They'd spent the night in a hallway after the storm punched out windows in the penthouse they occupied with four friends.

"We'd had a hurricane party before," Kaiser said. But he added that the mood quickly changed when Andrew, the guest of honor, arrived. "You could feel the building shake. You felt it in your stomach."

Matthews added: "I didn't expect to see many of these hotels without sand banks against them."

Further down the string of barrier islands, on Key Biscayne, Lorie Penneman said blowing leaves stung her face in a 19th-floor condominium that she and a companion had been advised to evacuate. The building's swaying made her "seasick," she said.

"In the thick of things I began to think, 'Was it the greatest decision to stay?'" she said. "Now that it's over I'm glad we did."

Further north, in Hollywood, Rene Savoie and Noella Parent of St. Giles, Quebec, wish they had stayed — back home.

"We were just married yesterday," Savoie said Monday, as he and his new bride honeymooned at a Red Cross shelter. "They should have left us in Montreal."

On Hollywood Beach, Mark Herndon and Brett Knesz expressed relief and thanks. Knesz's father, whom they'd gone out in the still-gusting winds to check on, had made it through the night just fine. And at the beach, the men got a bonus, scooping up fish that had been trapped in a gully by the surge.

"We got about 100 pounds," Herndon said. "Red snapper and grouper. Good eating."

STORM: New Orleans braces for possible dead-hit

(From 1A)

Monday and hotels as far away as Hattiesburg, Miss., were booked solid for the week.

Hotels and motels in Baton Rouge, the closest metropolitan area to New Orleans, reported full houses.

"We're getting a lot of cancellations from people who were coming to Baton Rouge for business but people from New Orleans and coastal Louisiana are taking their place," said Sam Petty, assistant general manager of the Crown Sterling Suites.

"We've had about 50 reservations since this morning," said Angela Alexander, reservations' manager for the Baton Rouge Hilton. "We've already sold out for Tuesday and Wednesday."

Residents in Plaquemines Parish, considered a prime target of Andrew, were advised to leave and told that typical evacuation shelters might not be safe from high water.

In St. Tammany Parish, home to New Orleans bedroom communities north of Lake Pontchartrain, Sheriff Patrick Canulette urged people living near the huge briny lake to leave Monday afternoon — to avoid an expected rush out of New Orleans.

"One of the main problems facing St. Tammany is that a large-scale evacuation of Orleans Parish and other parishes south of Lake Pontchartain would have a serve impact because many of those residents would be traveling through St. Tammany," Canulette said.

Canulette's office also said buildings often used as shelter in Slidell, Lacombe, Mandeville and Madisonville would not be open because those locations were likely to flood.

At 4 p.m., Andrew's eye was located near latitude 25.8 north, longitude 83.9 west, about 470 miles southeast of New Orleans.

Gov. Edwin Edwards told residents of New Orleans and four nearby parishes to leave now while they have time and New Orleans Mayor Sidney Barthelemy ordered evacuation of all low-lying areas. A mandatory evacuation was ordered for Grand Isle, on the coast.

The state's constitutional convention, called to rewrite Louisiana's tax code, recessed in Baton Rouge until at least Thursday afternoon. The month-long meeting convened Sunday night.

"The evacuation of the city of New Orleans has always been our worst nightmare from an emergency planning standpoint," said Capt. Ronnie Jones, a state police tional Guard commander, Edwards recommended the evacuation for Orleans, Plaquemines, St. Bernard, Terrebonne and Tangipahoa parishes. The New Orleans metropolitan area has over 1 million people.

"At this point, all we can do is monitor the storm," the governor said. "If it hits, there's a possibility it will be one of the worst in recent times."

The New Orleans metropolitan area has only two major ways out, both interstate highways, and state police estimate a total evacuation would take at least 60 hours.

"We already are likely past that window of opportunity," Jones said.

Computer studies, validated by past hurricanes, show that a storm like Andrew would bring widespread flooding throughout the New Orleans region, Jones said.

The Belle Chase Naval Air Station, which routinely serves as a hurricane evacuation center for Plaquemines Parish, was being abandoned Monday. In a news release, naval officials urged residents who typically use the base to find higher ground.

Parish residents were being asked to leave, a section at a time, to avoid congestion on highway, authorities said.

Correction

A line was inadvertently omitted and an incorrect word included in a letter from Charles F. Dougherty that appeared in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Paragraph four of Dougherty's letter should have stated, "Education is essential; however, more money has not necessarily improved the system. Why not restructure what we have, and attempt to make education a privilege, not an inalienable right. Stop wasting time and money on students who are undisciplined, disruptive and don't care about learning. If students can't or won't cope, get them out of the public schools."

Paragraph 10 of his letter should have read, "... Sell the property. (So I won't own anything that's taxable.)"

■ European leaders shift on Bosnia policy

LONDON — Two days before the start of international talks on ending the fighting in the former Yugoslav republics, European leaders appear to be backing away from a policy of partitioning Bosnia and Herzegovina along ethnic lines as an expedient way to curtail the violence, a senior Bush administration official said Monday.

The two-day conference on the Balkans, sponsored by the European Community and the United Nations, will take place in London on Wednesday and Thursday.

A shift by the Europeans on the division of Bosnia would set the stage for the United States to promote its more difficult long-haul policy of excluding Serbia from international affairs while destroying its economy through tougher sanctions.

■ Rabin pulls Palestinians' expulsion orders

JERUSALEM — In another gesture to improve the climate of the Middle East peace talks, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin revoked expulsion orders on Monday against 11 Palestinians who were accused of inciting terrorism in Israeli-occupied territories.

The action, which overturns orders issued last January by the previous, right-wing government, came a day after Rabin announced the release of 800 Arab prisoners and a loosening of some restrictions on Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"We hope it sends a signal of good will and contributes to a further improvement of the atmosphere at the negotiating table," said Gad Ben-Ari, the prime minister's spokesman.

■ Saddam stands defiant on 'no-fly' decree

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Saddam Hussein declared Monday that Iraq would be victorious against its enemies and his government rallied public support against possible allied attacks.

The defiant stance was repeated by other Iraqi officials before the expected Western ban on Iraqi flights over southern Iraq to protect rebel Shiite Muslims. President Bush was expected to make the announcement Tuesday.

The Western allies say they will shoot down Iraqi planes flying over the area. The Iraqis have called the plan a plot to divide the nations into three zones: southern Shiites; central Iraq controlled by the Sunni Muslim-dominated government, and the northern Kurdish rebels.

The ruling Baath Party's daily, Al-Thawra, said Monday that Iraq is in "a state of alertness," the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Report hits Brazil's Collor; impeachment looms

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Congress accused President Fernando Collor de Mello on Monday of running a government riddled with corruption, increasing calls for the impeachment of Brazil's first directly elected leader after decades of military rule.

The final report of a two-month corruption probe revealed the inner workings of what it termed an "industry of influence trafficking" that it said Collor should have known about.

The report was the culmination of months of suspicion and scandal since Collor's brother Pedro charged the president with corruption in a magazine interview published in May.

Brazilians see the scandal as a test of their new democracy. Traditionally, powerful Brazilians have broken the law with impunity, and ordinary citizens in Latin America's largest country wonder if this time things will be different.

"Brazil will not be the same," said Sen. Amir Lando, the report's author, as he read the entire 200-page document in a nationally televised broadcast. He called the case "a huge swamp."

Collor, who denies any wrongdoing and refuses to resign, ignored the five-hour reading of the report and presided over a ceremony at the presidential palace. His spokesman, Etevaldo Dias, called the report "a political work."

The reading was interrupted briefly when students entered Congress with a sign reading "Impeachment Now." Security guards removed them.

Share prices on the Sao Paulo stock market, Brazil's largest, were slightly up by noon. "It was like a sigh of relief," said Eduardo Levy, a former president of the exchange. "It represents optimism that the crisis is ending and Collor will leave office, either through resignation or impeachment."

Recent polls show up to 70 percent of Brazilians want Collor out, and pro-impeachment rallies are held daily across the country.

Collor began his five-year term in March 1990 promising clean government and a better economy. He now faces 20 percent monthly inflation and high unemployment.

His election came after two decades of military dictatorship and a military-chosen interim government. There is no indication the public wants the military back, despite the current scandal.

The report said Collor received at least $6.5 million from his 1989 campaign treasurer Paulo Cesar Farias, who is accused of graft, influence peddling and tax evasion.

Legal experts say he could be charged with "passive corruption" — soliciting or receiving undue benefits — and lack of decorum.

Officials tout 'Moonie' mass nuptials

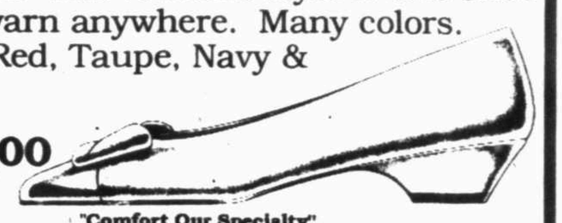

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Harry Mazei was looking around for his bride-to-be, Yogo Suemi. But he wasn't sure yet what he'd say when he found her. He speaks no Japanese, and she speaks no English.

The two, matched up by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, were joining 20,000 other couples from 131 countries in a mass wedding today at Seoul's Olympic Stadium. Another 10,000 couples will participate in the ceremony by satellite hookup.

Church officials tout today's event as the biggest international nuptials since Alexander the Great married his soldiers off to conquered Persians in 300 B.C.

SUFFER THE CHILDREN

Realizing abuse could rekindle pained memories

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

When her teen-age peers giggled and pondered what their first sexual experiences would be like, Shelley wanted to crawl into a hole.

"This is because I had already had my first sexual experience, and it was with my dad," the 19-year-old said.

Fresh-faced and perky — with her strawberry-blond hair drawn up into a ponytail — Shelley looks much too cheerful and self-assured to be uttering such a shocking revelation.

"You see this smile on my face, and I look just fine. But inside, I'm screaming," she said.

"I seem OK now because I am a survivor. I've been through some intensive therapy (in a California psychiatric hospital). It's not over yet, but I am dealing with my past. I knew all along what my dad was doing was wrong and now I am suffering for his mistakes. I heard a quote in my high school literature class that almost made my heart stop. It goes: 'For the sins of your fathers you, though guiltless, must suffer.' "

"How can I be responsible for what my father did to me when I was 6 years old? My dad says I liked what he did. I think he is a sick, sick man."

For Marilyn, a woman in her 30s, the realization that she was sexually abused as a child didn't come until adulthood.

"The memories all started coming back when I was in treatment. But I didn't know what they were. I called them my waking dreams," she said.

While in a local drug and alcohol treatment program recently, Marilyn said she began to get to the root of her problems.

"I was out of control. I felt suicidal, but I had my daughter to keep me going. My eating was out of control. I was compulsively overeating and felt like a raw edge."

And then the waking dreams started.

"While in treatment (for chemical dependency), I wouldn't be able to go to sleep. I was in a some kind of state reliving some experience. My roommate said I was whimpering like a child, trying to cover my head with a pillow and saying I was frightened of my father," she said.

Marilyn said the experience was unnerving because an image of her father keep re-occurring. "I know it was my father, but I never saw his face. And I have no actual memory of him abusing me. Part of me wonders if I made this stuff up."

While she has no memory of the abuse, counselors say she fits the profile of an adult victim of sexual abuse.

'For the sins of your fathers you, though guiltless, must suffer.'

— Horace, third book of Odes

"I know now that some things my father did were inappropriate — such as always wanting me to kiss him on the mouth, and making references to my breasts. I have come to find out that even those kinds of statements are abusive," she said.

For Katherine, the realization that she was molested in her childhood didn't begin until age 34.

"That's when all my troubles started," she said. "I had a headache which didn't go away for three solid years. Then I had sinus problems, allergies and this tight band around my head. The physical problems and sleeping too much were all coping mechanisms."

Katherine also battled the bottle, but gave up drinking when she discovered religion. "I got saved and quit drinking a month later. I also quit smoking," she said.

Unfortunately, Katherine said she traded one addiction for another.

"I became a Bibleholic, quoting and memorizing the Bible, drinking pots of coffee and trying to be the perfect wife. Then I quit drinking coffee and couldn't get out of bed."

Depression set in and then the persistent headache started. Katherine called Samaritan Counseling Center and sought help for her depression. She discovered a history of sexual abuse underlying her addictive traits.

The abuse occurred during various incidents over many years with several people, including her mother, brother, father and mother's boyfriend.

"God let my whole body fall apart to get my attention," she said. "It's easy to say pray and give it up. But not so easy to do it."

After she started taking Prozac, an antidepressant — and was able to relax and not resist the memories — Katherine said full accounts of abuse flooded her mind. "I remembered beatings and being raped. My dad was a rageholic," she said.

Now Katherine has been in recovery for four years. She and Marilyn both attend Rape Crisis' Adult Survivors of Sexual Abuse support groups.

Shelley has attended Glenwood hospital's support group for adult survivors of sex abuse.

"The important thing is do something about facing the past," Shelley said, "or else it will eat away at you every day of your life until you stop the pain with drugs, food, alcohol or sex. And those things only stop the pain for a few minutes at a time.

"It's not the greatest shame in the world to admit your parents or relatives had sex with you. You'll be in good company. Believe me."

Behaviors may betray repression

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Signs that an adult was sexually abused as a child can be subtle or alarming, according to area counselors. The following indicators have been suggested by certified social worker Sally Urias with Glenwood psychiatric hospital, and Meg Branson, counselor with Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Persons suffering repercussions of childhood sexual abuse may:

- Have an inability to form long-lasting intimate relationships.
- Have trouble controling anger and tendency to fly into rages. "The level of anger sex abuse survivors express is not the same as other people. It is greater," Ms. Urias said.
- Have repressed memories. Trouble remembering certain periods of adolescence. "There are 'lost years,' "Ms. Urias said. "For example, someone might not be able to remember anything before age 10 or 11."
- Be isolated or cut off with the family of origin (where the abuse is likely to have occurred. "They may be angry toward the parent who did not protect them as well as the perpetrator," Ms. Urias said.
- Have run away from home at an early age.
- Abuse drugs, alcohol or food.
- Have multiple personalities. "The personalities are an effort to split away from the pain and the shame," Ms. Urias said.
- Either be repulsed by — or compulsive about — sex. "They may be inhibited or promiscuous," Ms. Urias said.
- Have insomnia.
- Have physical symptoms such as headaches, lower back pain, yeast infections, TMJ or teeth grinding.
- Have ongoing depression.
- Have nightmares. Partial flashbacks.
- Have a tendency toward self destructiveness.
- Have a fear of sex.
- Have bouts of overwhelming confusion.
- Have a sense that they are dissassociated from their body.

SURVIVE: Strategies for coping can hide past

against talking about molestation is being lifted due to celebrities talking about it.

"In the past there was a taboo against talking about molestation. There wasn't a taboo against molesting," Ms. Ares said. "For many years victims have felt that they caused their abuse in some way. There was a stigma attached to it. Now celebrities and people in general are talking about it and getting honest about sexuality."

But could some people be imagining memories of abuse?

"There is always the question about whether what someone remembers is true," Ms. Branson said. "The first part of the process of recovery is to believe the memories, flashbacks and dreams. They are so scary and bizarre no one wants to believe them, especially if it involves a dad or granddad."

Some people may only remember swatches of scenes from abuse incidents, Ms. Branson said.

Sally Urias, certified social worker and social services coordinator at Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital, said partial or vague memories "are really frustrating."

"Flashes of scenes may come in dreams or something may trigger a flashback. They (victims) may want to remember everything, but they are terrified of reliving the whole thing. It's very emotional," Ms. Urias said.

Ms. Branson said one woman kept seeing flashbacks of the kitchen cabinets that were in a house she lived in as a young girl. Then as more bits and pieces of the scene were revealed to her during therapy, she remembered being raped on a kitchen table.

"The kitchen cabinets were what she was looking at while she was being assaulted," Ms. Branson said.

The counselor said that memories may appear like scenes from a movie.

Ms. Urias said memories also may reveal the meanings behind dislikes. "For example, one male adult survivor hated pillows and hated to sleep on pillows. It turned out that the perpetrator put a pillow over his head before abusing him," she said.

"I think it's God's way of breaking you in gently. You don't get the whole raw scene all at once. First you get the setup," she said.

So, why is it so common for adults in their mid-30s or older to begin to remember episodes of sexual abuse?

"We all repress things that are unbearable. For instance, there would probably be substantially less children in the world if women didn't repress the memory of the pain of childbirth," Ms. Branson said, noting the two most common types of defense mechanisms for victims are repression and disassociation.

"Some people actually remove themselves mentally from their bodies and float away. In the most severe disassociation, they split into multiple personalities, which is the most creative," she said.

The counselor said multiple personalities result when a person "allows other parts of themselves (or personalities) to perform certain functions."

She said persons experiencing multiple personalities are usually ones who have "suffered the most intense and severe kinds of physical abuse. They are the ones who have been terrorized."

While multiple personalities can be an extreme result of abuse, Mrs. Urias said most adult survivors experience "an ongoing depression — like a black cloud that gets darker all of the time. They may have feelings of hopelessness and feel that life is not worth living. They will become either repulsed by sex or become promiscuous."

'I think it's God's way of breaking you in gently. You don't get the whole raw scene all at once. First you get the setup.'

— Meg Branson, Midland Rape Crisis counselor, on adults remembering only pieces of a childhood sex abuse incident

Ms. Urias said adult survivors may turn to drugs and alcohol or overeating. "People come in here (Glenwood Hospital) to deal with drug or alcohol abuse and discover childhood sexual abuse. No one comes in here and says: 'I was sexually abused as a child.' Survivors will do whatever it takes — drugs, alcohol or food — to alleviate the pain, guilt and shame."

All area counselors agreed that the first step to recovery is "to admit that the abuse occurred."

"Then find a therapist or a group to support you in your recovery," Ms. Urias advised, noting that the statistics of sex abuse — indicating 1 in 3 American women and 1 in 6 men have most likely been abused — "are staggering."

"If everyone in Midland who was sexually abused as a child came in for help at once, the hospital (Glenwood) couldn't hold them," she said.

Nonetheless, at least four support groups for adult survivors of sex abuse and dozens of counselors and psychiatrists are available in Midland.

"Seek them out," Ms. Urias said. "Adult survivors deserve the same quality of life as everyone else."

Sibling abuse leaves long-lasting scars, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children who are chronically roughed up or picked on by their siblings may show psychological problems in young adulthood, research shows.

Two studies linked such childhood experiences to greater anxiety, lower self-esteem and more depressed mood in college students.

While some verbal and physical conflict between childhood siblings is normal, the problems can arise when the violence becomes severe, as in being threatened with a gun or knife, or when the child is constantly on the receiving end of violence or abuse and feels powerless to stop it, said Sandra Graham-Bermann.

"Kids insult each other all the time, but if there's one person in the family who's the scapegoat or the victim all the time ... that person may develop problems in young adulthood," she said.

"Children shove and push each other, they might even hit each other as a regular part of growing up. But when it's one-sided, if it goes on for years, when there's nothing the victim can do to stop it, then that child is at risk."

About a quarter of the childhood sibling relationships recalled by the primarily white, upper-middle-class sample of college students in the research were bad enough that parents should have stepped in, she said. Parents generally knew of the problem but many did not help, she said.

Graham-Bermann, an assistant professor of clinical psychology at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, recently presented the work at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

One study focused on the psychological health of 202 students at Michigan who were distributed about equally among four groups: those who recalled being victimized by a high level of conflict with a sibling, those who initiated such conflict, those who both started fights and were attacked, and those who experienced only normal levels of conflict.

"High conflict" generally meant fighting on the level of hitting, spanking or slapping or worse that exceeded what the student believed other families experienced, and that continued as a long-term pattern, Graham-Bermann said.

Conflict was found to be more common at ages 6 to 12 than at ages 13 to 18.

Psychological tests showed that for female childhood victims, the higher the level of violence, in terms of hazard and duration, the greater the anxiety, lowered self-esteem and persistent depressed mood as college students.

Male childhood victims showed only a link to lowered self-esteem.

However, the second study found that males who felt they had been highly abused by a sibling showed all three outcomes. Women showed only greater anxiety.

While the first study covered long-term physical conflict, this second study was limited to people whose experience went beyond that, into the realm of abuse. Examples included repeated pummeling with injuries, sexual abuse, or emotional abuse such as constantly being humiliated, ridiculed or shamed.

Murray Straus, co-director of the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire, said he found the overall work's results plausible.

"Some kids are literally terrorized by their siblings — and I'm not talking about occasional hits — and it is a traumatic experience," he said in a telephone interview.

Support groups offer healing for deep wounds

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

SURVIVOR — A person or thing that has outlived or outlasted misfortune, or continues to live after or in spite of an event.

'My name is Carla, and I am a survivor of sexual abuse."

"My name is Susan, and I am a survivor of rape."

"My name is Lynn, and my father raped me."

So begins another meeting of one of two Survivors of Sexual Abuse Support Groups, which meet at Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Adults, and even young women who have been raped or sexually abused at some point in their life, consider themselves survivors rather than victims.

One of the group members, who talked about her situation anonymously on a local radio talk show, said she was introduced with: "We have a victim in our studio today."

"I almost died. I felt like I had been in a car wreck or something," she said.

Another woman from the group said, "I have been to hell and back. When I was a child and my father and brother sexually assaulted me, I was a victim. Now I am dealing with all the emotions I didn't deal with then. But, I am a survivor."

The first step toward recovery for victims of sexual abuse is to believe that the dreams or memories one experiences are true.

The second step is to relive the trauma.

"It's a cathartic experience," said Meg Branson, a counselor with Midland Rape Crisis Center. "It's like cleaning or drilling out a cavity in a tooth. You've got to get the painful part out. That must take place for healing to occur. There are other schools of thought that you don't need to do that."

Adult victims of child sexual abuse who have never confronted their past are often compared to war veterans suffering Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome.

"Their own flashbacks and insomnia facilitates the process (of remembering)," Ms. Branson said. "We (counselors) go with them through it to break through denial and accept that what they are remembering is real even though the memories may destroy the illusion they have of their family."

Ms. Branson said counselors, therapists and psychiatrists must create trust with clients who have had their trust destroyed.

Support groups are often suggested for sexual abuse survivors to have others to trust and "support them in their grief."

A support group, which keeps all information divulged in the group confidential, also provides a safe place for persons to describe their experiences.

"Denial is incredible in families. Sexual abuse may have been a family secret and the family wanted to keep it that way," Ms. Branson said. "Disclosing information to a family can be done too early and oftentimes it is just not appropriate to disclose anything. A family may still deny, discount or minimize the situation. A support group can help someone make decisions about their recovery.

"Therapy can empower a survivor to become more assertive. People arrive as victims and leave survivors," she said.

Adult survivor support groups are not open to anyone but survivors. All groups operate with a code of confidentiality and what is said in the group is expected to be for group members' knowledge only. There is no charge for attending groups.

Information on area support groups follows:

■ RAPE CRISIS Center has two sex abuse survivor support groups, but enrollment is currently closed.

■ GLENWOOD HOSPITAL's Support Group for Adult Survivors of Childhood Sexual Abuse meets 6-7 p.m. Mondays at the hospital, located at 3300 South Farm to Market Road 1788 (adjacent to Highway 80, just south of the entrance to Midland International Airport).

The ongoing support group, for both men and women, deals with the negative effects of childhood sexual abuse — depression, suicidal thoughts, guilt, shame, poor self-image, addictive behaviors, inability to trust others, and problems in forming lasting and healthy relationships.

The group provides a supportive, non-judgmental environment for survivors to share experiences and feelings and to learn healthy coping skills for dealing with the traumatic effects of childhood sexual abuse.

For more information call Sally Urias, 563-1200.

■ INCEST SURVIVORS ANONYMOUS — The recently formed 12-step group meets 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at 4400 N. Big Spring St., Building E, Suite 211 of the Re/Max Building. Interested persons may call substance abuse counselor Bonnie Baker at 682-0878. The group is designed to "provide a safe place to share experience, strength and hope. Teddy bears welcome."

Statistics can mask problem's magnitude

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle editor

While statistics work very well in establishing perspective about some subjects, statistics about reported child sexual abuse can be very misleading.

It is important to remember that these numbers are only the best estimates available from information gathered about the crime, experts say.

No one knows precisely how many children are sexually assaulted each year because much abuse goes unreported.

Statistically speaking, only one in 10 cases of sexual abuse against a child is reported nationally, according to Robin Anderson, Midland Rape Crisis Center (MRCC) Board member and volunteer. However, there is no concrete evidence this is a valid statistic; unreported sexual child abuse could be even worse than that, or maybe it's not that bad.

According to an article by David Hechler, author of "The Battle and the Backlash: The Child Sexual Abuse War," national statistics are compiled from surveys of abuse reports filed with each state child protective agency and collected by national organizations. Because of inconsistencies in the way each state files reports, coupled with the fact that many surveys have incomplete responses and the inconsistencies in legal terminology from state to state, the process of gathering accurate data is further marred.

No agency even attempts to compile national statistics of criminal cases, according to Hechler. "The FBI's Uniform Crime Report provides no information on child sexual abuse. The other national measure of crime, the National Crime Survey of the Bureau of Justice Statistics, doesn't question victims under 12. Furthermore, interviews are usually conducted over the phone with adults; when they are done in homes, entire families are usually present, making reports of incest extremely unlikely," Hechler wrote.

"A lot of molestation is subtle and the courts require such direct evidence that it makes it very hard to press charges," said Meg Branson, counselor for MRCC.

Because of the difficulty in proving child sexual abuse, many parents choose not to report the abuse, particularly when a family member is the abuser, Ms. Branson added.

CELEBRITIES SPEAK OUT

Roseanne Arnold:

"I am an incest survivor. My mother abused me from the time I was an infant until I was 6 or 7 years old. She did lots of lurid things. My father molested me until I left home at age 17. He constantly put his hands all over me. He forced me to sit on his lap ... We were not allowed to lock the bathroom door."

– interview with People magazine, Oct. 7, 1991

Oprah Winfrey:

"By the time I was 14, I had been repeatedly sexually abused by different men. At 9 I was raped by a cousin who was 10 ... I was molested by other men – family, friends, relatives. Whenever I trusted someone, he abused me. Until I was 22, I carried this burden with me. I've been asked how I learned to trust a man. Really, the question is: How did I ever learn to trust anybody? "

– Cosmopolitan, June 1992

Delta Burke:

"After I was molested at age 4, I was afraid of men. In my teens, when I began winning beauty contests, the fear became even greater. Several times I was attacked and almost raped by both strangers and men I knew .. I went through an I-hate-men phase that continued until I was 30. That's when I fell in love for the first time."

IN THIS SERIES

Sunday 23 — Statistics reporting sex offenses against children are staggering. Experts offer ways to recognize symptoms of abuse and suggestions to protect children. Play therapy programs offer children an opportunity to reclaim their childhoods.

Monday 24 — Should sex offenders be incarcerated or offered treatment? Therapy, when it works, can help break the cycle of sex abuse, according to counselors. Offenders and members of Sex Addicts Anonymous agree.

Today 25 — Childhood victims of sexual abuse can become adult survivors when they begin to deal with issues of the past. Several area support groups have formed to offer a safe place for survivors to work on mental and emotional recovery.

WRITING AS THERAPY

"One summer afternoon around 1 o'clock I went to my grandparents' house to visit and my grandmother was the only one there and a guy that worked for my grandfather was there also, but I didn't know this at the time. So I talked to my grandma for a few minutes or so. So finally I went back to the backroom to watch TV for a little bit, since my parents were at work. And all of a sudden I heard a door slide shut and this guy walks to the couch where I was sitting and just started..."

Rehearsal of new endings relieves chronic nightmares

By Daniel Goleman
N.Y. Times News Service

The final end looms for Freddy Kruger, the razor-fingered terror of the "Nightmare on Elm Street" series. Researchers report a new, often highly effective and remarkably simple treatment for nightmares.

The method, a rehearsal of an alternative scenario for the bad dream, has been able to help people who suffered from dozens of nightmares a month, for longer than 30 years in some cases, with a single session of treatment.

In that session, nightmare sufferers are taught to rewrite their most terrifying dreams with soothing scripts of their choosing. They then mentally rehearse those new scripts each day on their own.

The alternative need not have a triumphant ending; it merely needs to be reassuring to the dreamer. Somehow this seemingly elementary exercise appears to put an end to the nightmares, according to a report in the May issue of The American Journal of Psychiatry by Dr. Robert Kellner and colleagues at the University of New Mexico.

In the study, 28 volunteers who had suffered from chronic nightmares an average of 19 years were treated in a single session and given instructions in how to rehearse changed versions of their nightmares. The average reduction in the frequency of nightmares after seven months was from more than four a week to about two.

For four of the volunteers who had nightmares for an average 23 years, the nightmares ceased entirely. There was no change in the volunteers during a two-month waiting period before treatment, when they were simply asked to keep diaries of their nightmares.

The results from a single session of instruction in rehearsing the revised nightmares proved as effective as six sessions of therapy involving desensitizing people to their nightmares with deep muscle relaxation, the researchers said.

"This seems to be a useful treatment," said Dr. Ernest Hartmann, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Newton-Wellesley Hospital in Boston and author of "The Nightmare" (Basic Books). "I've used it myself with children."

Studies estimate that anywhere from 5 to 15 percent of people suffer from recurrent nightmares, anxiety dreams so powerful that they awaken the dreamer. While some psychiatric medications suppress nightmares, when the medication is stopped, the nightmares usually return with renewed ferocity.

"Psychiatry hasn't really had an effective treatment for nightmares before," said Dr. Joseph Neidhardt, a psychiatrist now working in Fairbanks, Alaska, who took part in the nightmare research while at the University of New Mexico.

The instructions to the volunteers for changing nightmares were to select a recent nightmare and write it down and then to rewrite it in any way they wished. Then they were told to get very relaxed and to rehearse the new version in their minds for three consecutive days, or until the nightmare went away.

"You don't have to rehearse every new nightmare as it comes along," said Dr. Barry Krakow, a co-author of the study who is a consultant at the Sleep Disorders Center at the University of New Mexico medical school.

"Just trying one or two seems to set the process of change in motions," Krakow and Neidhardt have written a book on their method, "Conquering Bad Dreams and Nightmares: A Guide to Understanding, Interpretation and Cure," to be published by Berkeley this fall.

In a report of a later study, to be published this year in the journal Sleep, Krakow and colleagues say they found that their method reduced the frequency of nightmares by 75 percent. Krakow said that the rehearsal method had made nightmares more intense, though less frequent, in one or two of the 80 or so volunteers who have tried it.

He said a preliminary two-year followup of seven people treated in an early study found that five reported continuing to have nightmares less than once a month, and one reported them twice a week.

The standard advice is to return to the rehearsal method if frequent nightmares recur.

Those plagued by chronic nightmares usually suffer from sleep deprivation as well.

"Nightmare sufferers complain of sleeplessness as much as about the anxiety of the bad dreams themselves," Krakow said.

Other sleep disorder experts say that the rehearsal treatment might not work with everyone, particularly people for whom nightmares are a symptom of a serious psychiatric problem like post-traumatic stress disorder.

About a third of those in the nightmare rehearsal studies reported a history of childhood sexual abuse. About 20 percent seemed to attribute their nightmares to a stressful life event.

One woman, for example, started having her nightmares after she was falsely arrested, handcuffed and taken to jail.

Neidhardt sees the new findings as questioning a basic tenet of psychiatry: that recurring nightmares are always the symptom of psychiatric disturbance. He believes they may sometimes be a cause.

"We find the nightmares themselves may be causing what looks like psychiatric disturbance," Neidhardt said. "Stopping the nightmares stops the symptoms. The people in our study reported symptoms like anxiety and headaches in a range typical of psychiatric patients. But after their nightmares cleared up, so did most of the other symptoms."

U.S., Europe have duty to take action

Talks on Bosnia open Wednesday in London, but already the siren song is sounding: Bosnia is dead; the only thing left for negotiators is to bury it.

Serbia has already gobbled up the lion's share of Bosnian territory, the defeatists say; it's too late to reverse its brutal aggression. Besides, armed intervention is too complicated and risky.

Don't believe all the stories about sealed box cars and concentration camps, they add; there's not much proof. And forget about "ethnic cleansing" that is driving people from their homes. America and its allies can't right every wrong. Swallow your moral outrage and think peace.

All this is faithless and delusionary. America and Europe can still stop Serbia from redrawing the boundaries of Bosnia by naked force. And they have a moral and legal duty to prevent genocide.

Britain, host of this week's conference co-sponsored by the United Nations and the European Community, is blatantly promoting the seductive sellout. True, it will provide convoys to get food and medicine to the beleaguered Bosnians, and is even sending 1,800 troops. But that's a hypocritical cover for a policy of appeasement.

Washington would be wrong to follow London's lead. A sellout to Serbia will encourage no end of would-be strongmen to follow in the bloody footsteps of Slobodan Milosevic, Serbia's leader.

Instead, America and Europe need to show backbone by pressing for strong action in the U.N. Security Council that would:

- Tighten the embargo on Serbia, while allowing Bosnia to import arms for self-defense.
- Press for a cease-fire tied to the disarming and withdrawal of Serbian and Croatian forces. A cease-fire without withdrawal, as now contemplated, would leave Serbia and Croatia in control of almost all of Bosnia.
- Reject the easy solution of cantonment, separating Bosnia into ethnic regions. This would only legitimate Serbia's land grab and Bosnia's breakup. Instead, insist on preserving Bosnia's territorial integrity, policed under a new form of temporary U.N. trusteeship that would allow displaced Bosnians of all backgrounds to return home.
- Use force, if necessary, to stop ethnic cleansing, break up the concentration camps and free the detainees. Then establish an international tribunal to investigate and punish those who committed the killings and atrocities. That includes the leaders of Serbia, who bear ultimate responsibility.

It would be unpardonable to let Serbia keep its ill-gotten gains and to permit its leaders to go unpunished.

Government needs to get off family's back

All but sporting a Clinton-Gore button, Wednesday night NBC's Tom Brokaw invited the governor himself to rebut Republican accusations concerning his life and wife. By the sheerest coincidence, I'm certain, the workshirt-wearing governor was in Atlanta helping Jimmy Carter build houses for the poor. This fact was duly announced to viewers of the cross-country interview.

Murchison

Clinton, like Banquo's ghost on another such jarring occasion, shook his gory locks. Republican muggers had beset the Clinton family. Clearly a bunch of "right-wing extremists" has taken over the GOP.

Brokaw, who has been alternately smirking and gritting his teeth this week as Republican orators cut loose, explained that Bush and Quayle had been offered rebuttal time at the Democratic National Convention but had declined. He omitted to explain why: Namely, because the Republicans decided to stick with the tradition of not crashing somebody else's party.

The party Clinton crashed Wednesday could have been called Family Night at the Astrodome. Barbara Bush and Marylin Quayle lauded their husbands, and the Bush family staged a reunion at the rostrum. The crowd cheered like crazy.

Why? What has all this to do with the price of political eggs? Clinton suggests, not unreasonably, that Republicans don't want to talk about the economy. The economy isn't nearly as bad as Clinton pretends (the worst since Herbert Hoover, he keeps saying), but clearly the Reagan '80s, the longest job-creating period of the 20th century, are over. Loving wives and adoring grandchildren relieve candidates — momentarily — of the necessity of explaining why they increased taxes during a recession.

But family issues do have a certain — excuse the vogue word — resonance. They are more than wallpaper to hide cracks. They have a legitimate part in this campaign. America's mind and heart are demonstrably in worse shape than its bank book. Speakers didn't talk about family, responsibility, respect for law or respect for God as everyday realities in American life, they spoke of them with nostalgia — as things formerly cherished, presently absent.

There is no question of this. Half of all American marriages end in divorce, and "alternative lifestyles" (such as cohabitation and homosexual liaison) grow in popularity and acceptance. That's just the tip of the iceberg. Children, when their families break up, receive emotional wounds that never heal; wives see their standard of living plummet; many an ex-husband just walks away from his obligation to pay child support. Abortion is another facet of the problem. "A woman's right to choose" translates into a woman's right to choose herself as the foremost object of her own solicitude. We used to call this selfishness, egotism.

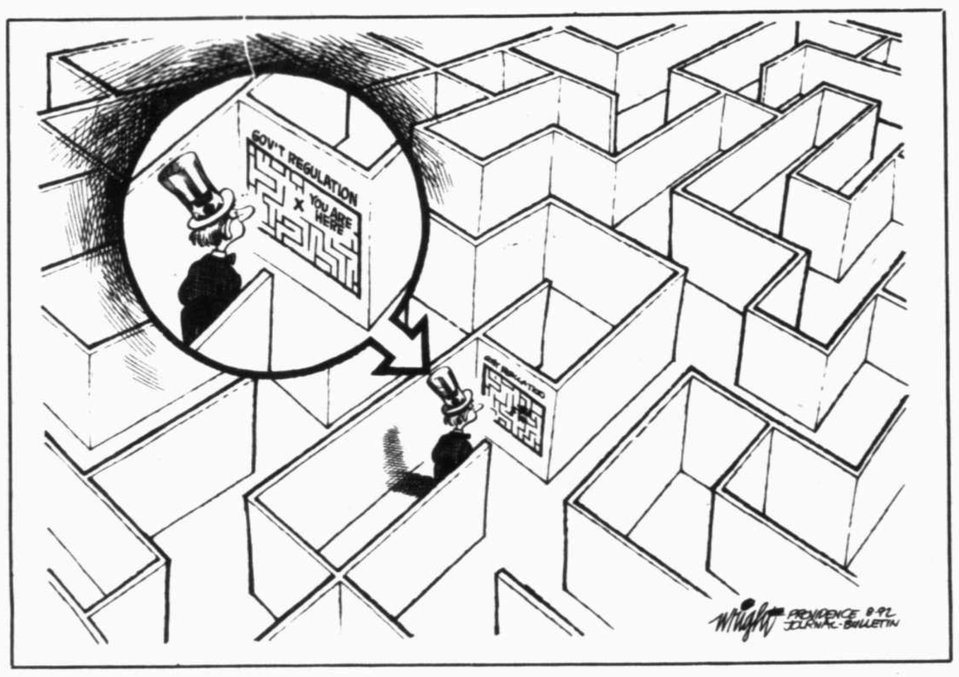

What disturbs many voters about the Clintons — and why Hillary the feminist has become an issue for many — is that they seem to encourage, as well as to practice, the same sort of me-firsting.

It's fair to ask, what is a president, any president, to do? What is government itself to do? A law to catch fugitive fathers? All right. But you still haven't gotten to the heart of the problem. Why don't fugitive fathers think it their bounden duty to pay child support, if not indeed stay married to the mother? Chiefly because modern thought regards promises and obligations as purely provisional — things you live up to so long as it's convenient. This defect of thinking would be best and most lastingly addressed by a revival of religion and religious standards of behavior and action.

Civil order doesn't depend on the thickness of the statute book; it depends on voluntary compliance — people doing the right thing because it's right, not because the civil law says do it. Here the politicians can't do much more than wring their hands.

Really the most constructive thing Republicans or Democrats could do for the family, and for what we are calling "traditional values" this season, is work to get government off the family's back and out of its hair. The sooner we quit seeing government as the answer to all social ills, the sooner we will start seeing the family as far the best context for conferring, as well as civilizing, life. Does Gov. Clinton think it matters what goes on in those homes he was helping Jimmy Carter put together? Or doesn't he?

Selection process has limits

This is to question the process of selecting a new city manager recently approved by our Midland City Council. I am not questioning Mike McGregor's ability. I have worked with him, and know that he is very capable. He has been an excellent deputy city manager, and no doubt would function well as city manager.

But in limiting applicants to employees and residents of the city of Midland, are we not limiting ourselves? A promotion-from-within-policy is admirable and does encourage people to stay with a company. However, it can also confine thinking; it can tend to restrict new ideas from being considered.

Thus, we are advertising only locally!

The job of city manager is an important one because he/she is part of every decision made by our city government, which in turn affects the life and economy of every citizen of our community. In addition, this position includes the responsibility of all city offices and employees. It is both a chief executive officer (CEO) job and a public relations one.

Why are we restricting this selection process? When we needed:

- A new police chief, we advertised nationally.
- A new city attorney, we advertised nationally.
- A new chamber of commerce president, we advertised nationally.
- A new superintendent of schools, we advertised nationally.

We need to make every effort to instill the confidence of the citizens of Midland that we are making any and all selection processes more open, and have moved away from the portrayal of making "back-room deals."

Move threatens city morale

Very appropriately, the Midland City Council is now making plans to hire a new city manager when Fred Poe retires in a few months. Yet some "influential" people are reluctant to try and find the really best available person for the job. It seems they want to take the easy way out and move Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor into the position.

I agree heartily with those council members and other citizens that think it appropriate to go statewide or even nationwide to find the very best person to run day-to-day city operations. Someone is needed who is dynamic, shows leadership abilities, has charisma, has genuine experience and will not play favorites, none of which the mayor's choice possesses to any extent. The city does not have to run full page ads in The Wall Street Journal to find that person. There are numerous trade magazines that would be appropriate in letting our needs be known. So what if it may cost a few thousand dollars? What is the cost of choosing the wrong person to run the City of Midland?

If they really have the best interest of the city in mind, the council must extend the date applications will be accepted and make an effort to seek out all possible candidates for city manager.

At the town hall meeting last week, McGregor proclaimed he has had 19 years experience in city government. I submit that McGregor has had one year's experience in 19 years.

Last spring I attended a meeting of mayorial candidates where the question was asked of why the city has so many managers? (Mayor J.D.) Faircloth's response was that they were all busy doing something, like talking to contractors or discussing zoning or other matters. Doesn't the city have department heads that are paid handsome salaries to handle those questions? When Jim Brown was city manager he was able to get by with but one assistant and one secretary. The city had more employees, the population higher, and the budget lower. Do we have to call him back to see why so many people are needed now? Let's hope not.

It seems obvious Faircloth wants someone in the city manager's office who will do exactly what he dictates. Why not poll city employees for their opinion? Morale is very low among city employees. Promoting McGregor will lower morale even further. But then, that probably is not important either.

Smoking decision has cost

Three years ago, the Midland City Council made an agreement to let smokers use less than 1 percent of the airport terminal building. They deceived us! They have now broken that agreement that was made in good faith.

Smokers are now confined to the restaurant areas. The next ordinance will ban all smoking in restaurants!

In World War II, I flew a motorless, unarmed, canvas plane over the German lines to land in enemy territory. At that time, the U.S. Government subsidized the tobacco growers and furnished the troops cigarettes at 5 cents per pack. We won the war (it was all in the newspapers), thus securing freedom of choice for all Americans.

Then along came four guys, some probably unborn at that time, and they tell me not to smoke in public.

Most smokers are unable to retaliate. Fortunately, I'm not in that position. I am director of a museum that the Confederate Air Force wants, very badly, to increase their war memorabilia by two or three times. FORGET IT!

Our group had planned a reunion in Midland within two years. FORGET IT!

I know this will not change the minds of the City Council, but this will cost the city for years to come.

Oil imports should have tax

In your Aug. 13 edition Leslie Gelb endorsed the recommendations of a "bipartisan" committee sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace which concluded that lower gasoline prices in the U.S. encourage energy inefficiency, which adds to our trade deficit and undermines our competitiveness and security, and that such inefficiency should be remedied by increasing federal gasoline taxes up to $1 per gallon.

At the risk of appearing to be an economic heretic to Gelb and his ilk, I would suggest that just possibly our crude oil imports are contributing more to our trade deficit and that our reliance upon foreign crude is undermining our security somewhat more than our energy inefficiency.

I would further suggest that a better remedy for our underpriced energy would be to tax crude oil imports at our borders barely enough to permit foreign producers the satisfaction of knowing that they are finally bearing their fair shares of our costs of maintaining our defense umbrella over them.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Let's make them walk the Republican plank

I've always considered Saddam Hussein a bull-headed, blood-thirsty bully.

Grizzard

As a matter of fact I still consider Saddam Hussein all of those things. But, to his credit, I recently found out the Iraqi president is a brilliant economist.

There I was flipping through the morning paper and I came upon a story about Iraqi's dreary post-war economy.

Said the headline: "Saddam Threatens Executions in Plan to Improve Economy"

Why hasn't George Bush thought of that?

It would work. No question about it.

First the president goes on television and speaks to the American people.

"My fellow Americans," he begins, because that's always the way presidents begin when they speak to the American people on television.

"I've tried everything I know to improve the nation's economy," he goes on.

"The only thing that is lousier than our economy is my approval ratings. So I've decided to take a drastic step.

"If my economic advisers don't come up with a solution to this mess in the next two weeks, we're going to start shooting them.

"I realize the Constitution doesn't provide for executions for numbskulls who sit on their butts all day and couldn't figure out how to make a paper route profitable, but this is 1992 and I'm out of a job myself if things don't change between now and November."

Everybody in Washington it seems to me has been sitting on his or her butt for a long time now, and nobody has done one thing to improve the economy.

But if they thought, "Hey, if I don't think of something in a hurry, it's my butt in front of a firing squad," I'd be willing to bet the farm, if it hasn't been foreclosed, we'd be out of this pickle in no time.

There are those out there saying right now, "This isn't Iraq. This isn't a dictatorship. This is America, and we just can't go out and execute people for not being able to think of a way out of a poor economy."

OK, then let people who say that come up with a solution.

President Bush hasn't been able to do it. His advisers haven't been able to do it. Congress hasn't been able to do it — which reminds me, should we also execute members of Congress who are either corrupt, stupid, ineffective, laughingstocks or all of the above?

Ask yourself, What would Saddam do?

I didn't mean any of this, of course. Of course I didn't. I'm just telling myself that.

Bush asks for billions to expand federal job-training programs

ANSONIA, Conn. (AP) — Plagued by high unemployment and a weak election-year economy, President Bush proposed a $2 billion-a-year package of new and retooled job-training programs Monday and said they could be paid for without raising taxes.

"We can get everybody engaged in high-tech jobs with this retraining approach," Bush promised at a campaign stop 71 days before the presidential election. He said the $10 billion cost over five years would be paid for by cutting spending for other, unspecified federal programs.

Bush's announcement drew swift criticism from Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, who said the president had no way to finance his proposals.

"He just got through telling us at the convention we were going to have huge tax cuts paid for by huge spending cuts in amounts to be unspecified, and now he's come out with a huge spending program," Clinton said at a news conference in Little Rock, Ark. "I think it's very difficult to take this seriously."

Clinton has proposed requiring employers to spend an amount equal to 1.5 percent of payroll for job-training and education programs for workers.

Bush unveiled his plan at a vocational training school in Union, N.J., before flying to Connecticut for a fund-raising luncheon in Middlebury and a speech to businessmen in Ansonia. The lunch raised about $100,000 for the state Republican Party, according to campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke.

Speaking in shirtsleeves at Warsaw Park in Ansonia, Bush railed against Clinton's economic proposals, which he said included the largest tax increase in history.

In a reference to the criticism he drew for breaking his no-new-taxes pledge in 1990, Bush shouted, "Once you make one mistake you don't make it again!"

Bush cut short his campaign stop in Connecticut in order to fly to Florida to inspect damage from Hurricane Andrew. Politicking up to the moment he left here, Bush shouted out to the crowd as he boarded his helicopter: "Help get a new Congress; help me clean the House!"

Shouts of "No more Bush" competed with cries of "Four more years," although the crowd appeared to have more Bush supporters than protesters.

The centerpiece of Bush's plan calls $3,000 vouchers for adults to use for retraining at trade schools or community colleges. These would go to people who had lost their jobs, been notified their jobs were being terminated, or who worked in declining industries and wanted to sharpen their skills.

Young men in work clothes at the Lincoln Technical Institute booed when Bush singled out Clinton's idea to finance job training through the new tax on employers.

"He sees job training as a tax raiser and he wants to tax workers to pay for their own training and tax small business — this is the one that's the worst — taxing small businesses around the country 1.5 percent," Bush said, speaking to about 700 students and faculty members inside a cinderblock mechanics shop.

Bush said, "There is no point in training people for jobs if your plan is going to be in the process of destroying jobs."

Bush's job-training plan would combine new and formerly proposed programs with several existing ones under an umbrella grouping to be known as the New Century Workforce.

It was the third proposal in five days by Bush that would require offsetting spending cuts in unspecified programs. In his convention speech, the president proposed across-the-board tax cuts — he didn't say how large — and a checkoff plan allowing Americans to use their tax returns to designate up to 10 percent of their taxes for reducing the national debt.

"We know the global economy is changing, and we must change with it," Bush said.

Judge delays decision on allowing cameras for Allen-Farrow case

NEW YORK (NYT) — Opponents in the Woody Allen-Mia Farrow child-custody case actually agreed on something Monday as lawyers for both sides joined forces to try to keep television cameras out of the courtroom.

In a legal argument pitting public access to information against the children's right to privacy, lawyers for Allen and Ms. Farrow argued that the case involved potentially damaging evidence that should not be disclosed. But a lawyer for the New York Broadcasters Pool, a media professional group that sought access to the proceedings, said it was already too late for that.

After an hourlong hearing in lower Manhattan, Judge Phyllis B. Gangel-Jacob of Civil Court ruled on the narrowest possible grounds, deciding that cameras and audio equipment would be forbidden at the hearing today for the filing of pretrial motions, but reserving judgment on whether they would be allowed in later proceedings.

Today's hearing is to be part of a crowded afternoon docket in civil court, and Judge Gangel-Jacob said that was the basis for her ruling. "I am concerned about all the other litigants, all of whom are here on very, very sensitive issues," she said.

Lawyers for Allen and Ms. Farrow said the proceeding was unlikely to produce substantive arguments or testimony. They also said it would probably be weeks before the actual case began to be heard.

A lawyer for Allen, Harvey I. Sladkus, said his primary objective today would be to "ask the court for certain interim relief, including visitation rights for the father."

A spokesman for Ms. Farrow, John Springer, said Ms. Farrow would attend the hearing. Allen is not expected to attend, said his spokeswoman, Leslee Dart.

Allen is seeking to wrest from Ms. Farrow, his partner of 12 years, custody of their two adopted children, Moses Amadeus Farrow, 14, and Dylan O'Sullivan Farrow, 7, and one biological child, Satchel Farrow, 4.

The New York Broadcasters Pool is a frequent representative of media organizations, primarily New York television stations, in cases involving reporting in courtrooms. In this instance its application for access was made on behalf of the Court Television Network, the cable channel that seeks gavel-to-gavel coverage of the case.

In arguing against the broadcasters pool's application, a lawyer for Ms. Farrow, Eleanor B. Alter, said: "Our position is this will have a devastating effect on all the children. It is our duty to keep what happens in this courtroom as quiet as possible."

But Floyd Abrams, the First Amendment lawyer who made the argument for Court Television, said that given the extraordinary public interest in the case and the media scrutiny it had already received, the argument that the case could be kept a secret was moot.

"Whatever you do," he said to Judge Gangel-Jacob, "the issues of this proceeding will become widely known. I take that as a given."

Indeed, since the papers were filed two weeks ago and sealed by the court, the case has become ever more public and ever more lurid, with Allen holding a news conference to confirm his love for Soon-Yi Farrow Previn, Ms. Farrow's 21-year-old adoptive daughter, and Ms. Farrow accusing Allen of sexually abusing Dylan.

City Council to consider budget, tax rate

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The city of Midland's tax rate is expected to increase slightly over last year — in part to compensate for a decrease in property values — to meet the $70 million proposed budget, officials said.

In order to generate revenues equal to the current fiscal year's $16,179,182, this year's effective tax rate would be 67.93 cents per $100 valuation. The city is proposing a 2.06 percent increase above that effective rate. The preliminary budget and tax rate is expected to be approved by the City Council today.

"It's a little more than we anticipated. We were hoping for about half that," City Manager Fred Poe said. "Some people will pay a little more, some less and some about the same amount. It depends primarily on whether a person's property (value) went up or down."

Commercial building owners will receive the largest tax decrease again this year while several residential areas look to shoulder more of the tax burden.

The average Midland property is valued at $54,220, leaving Midland property owners paying an average annual property tax of $368.32, according to Ron Stegall of the Midland Central Appraisal District.

To meet the proposed budget of $70,481,329 in planned expenditures, with about $35 million in the general fund supported in part by ad valorem tax revenues, the city has cut 20 positions from the city payroll. According to Poe, the cuts generally have been evenly distributed through several city departments.

"The streets are certainly noticeable for one," Poe said. "We've reduced sweeping considerably — now there is a lot of grass growing on the curbs, and we're facing more potholes."

Poe said the council recognizes this problem and plans to step up street-sweeping and drainage efforts this fall by issuing certificates of obligation.

According to Poe the only other change in service has been in response time.

"It's taken a little longer to look at some of these requests for service — but by-and-large I don't think people have noticed an appreciable loss of service," he said. "For example we're still running the same number of garbage pickups in residential areas as we did several years back."

The city has cut about 115 jobs since 1985.

"During the bust or recession ... the cost of living has increased three to five percent nearly every year. In order to offset the difference, we've had to cut back people. That is primarily how we've made up the difference," he said.

The city expects to generate additional revenue through an increase in franchise fees for the electric, cable and telephone companies.

Twirling star launches collegiate career

■ Starla Adams will be the feature twirler for Texas Tech's Red Raider Band.

By Ed Todd

Baton twirling.

For Starla Adams, it is an exercise in timing, self-disciplining, organizing, setting priorities and excelling.

She hardly piddles around.

For 14 of her almost 19 years, Starla has been twirling baton, body and mind with flair and purpose. She has been spinning, tossing, throwing, flinging, turning, twirling, twisting and leaping, as in cabrioles, with the precision of a ballerina, the strength of a gymnast, the timing of a metronome, and the determination of a daughter encouraged by her parents to do her best with grace, style and timeliness.

Like her 22-year-old sister, Gina, Starla has won world and national titles in the National Baton Twirling Association (NBTA), was a feature twirler at Lee High School and was a member of the National Honor Society.

"God blessed me with a wonderful talent," the blue-eyed, 5-foot-2 Starla said straightforwardly, "and I used it."

Her talent, drive and perseverance have worked in concert to designate Starla as the Number One-seeded United States twirler in the Olympic-like international twirling competition in Marseille, France, in April of 1993. She earned the berth by winning the 1992 NBTA grand national twirling solo title at Notre Dame University in July following her graduation from Lee High School. Her mentor is twirling coach Janice Jackson of Garland.

Commissioners seek construction bids for museum building

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The building of a free-standing museum for Midland County artifacts and archives became more promising Monday when the Midland County Commissioners' Court unanimously voted to seek bids for constructing the museum near the downtown Midland County Public Library.

Since the late 1950s, the Midland County Museum has been in the basement of the 1957-built library, which is undergoing a $2.5-million expansion-renovation project.

Before that, the artifacts and archives were part of the library, then in the basement of the 1930-vintage courthouse.

"We have never been in any place but a basement," said Nancy McKinley, president of the Midland Historical Society since its inception in 1954 and chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission.

The Midland County Historical Society was organized by the Friends of the Library, an all-volunteer, fund-raising library support group, which raised about half of the $2.5-million library expansion-project. The balance is coming from the county's $2-million certificates of obligation, which is also funding remodeling of the courthouse's interior and the building museum.

Commissioner Durward Wright said that between $50,000 and $75,000 is available for building the museum's pre-engineered shell of about 3,200 square feet.

"It's a very simple-type building," Wright said. The building's earth-tone color scheme is to be selected by the Commissioners' Court.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin is to advertise for bids on the museum project.

"This is a county museum," Mrs. McKinley said. "It belongs to the county — the same as the library. The historical society has had that museum as its main project," similar to the Friends of Library taking on the library as its project.

Aside from buying display cases and filing cabinets for the museum, the historical society collects archival material.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia said that she will be "happy to get a good home for that museum, so people really can have access to it. After we get it out of that basement, people will know where it is and more people be will aware of it."

County Librarian Sandra Wegner said she was "excited for

Whistle-blower case begins

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A federal court jury began hearing testimony Monday to determine what damages, if any, should be awarded to five former Greenwood Independent School District cafeteria workers for wrongful termination in violation of the Whistle Blower's Statute.

The workers prevailed in the suit against GISD in August 1990 and were awarded more than $580,000.

But a U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit later ordered a trial to re-assess damages because part of the original ruling was reversed and vacated.

The appeals court determined that a First Amendment claim was not an issue in the case but upheld judgment on a Fair Labor and Standards Act claim and liability under the Whistle Blower's Act.

As a result — because the initial award was not broken down — a jury will have to amend the amount given for damages.

Attendance figures soar

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

As Midland students flocked to their respective educational institutions Monday for another year of learning and socializing, early attendance figures appear to be headed toward record-breaking levels, school officials said.

Local public schools welcomed 19,335 students through their doors during Monday's first day, but the figure does not include Midland High students who stayed at home while their teachers attended a workshop.

"I can handle more first days like this one," said Midland High student, Lee Ambler, while walking with two Lee High School friends during lunch Monday.

Midland High's projected enrollment is 1,700, and that number, combined with Monday's total, would exceed the record first-day tally of 20,750 set last year. Officials project a high enrollment figure of 22,005 — which includes pre-school and Head-Start programs.

ADAMS: Twirler balances training, school work

(From 1B)

This week, Starla begins her studies at Texas Tech University, where she will be feature twirler for Tech's Red Raider Band. Her sister, former feature twirler at Baylor University, is feature twirler at Angelo State University.

Next summer, Starla, who already has won the Junior Miss Majorette of America and the Miss Teen-age Majorette of America titles, will be seeking the College Miss Majorette of America title.

"If I win it, wonderful," Starla said. "If I don't, I've still got to hang it up. I've got to get going (with her academic studies and planned career in optometry). I still want to twirl, though, and teach and judge. It's very, very hard to train and to think about my career."

By age 25, Starla, according to NBTA rules, will be forced into retirement from competition.

Encouraged by her mother, Gail, and influenced by her sister, Starla begin twirling at age 5. Since then, she has won 13 world championships and five national championships.

Starla, who described herself as "just a bratty little kid running all over the place," at age 5 was "was too little to know what I was doing."

Prodded by her mother and backed by her father, Gene, who is "just real laid backed" and who "wants me to do what's going to make me happy," Starla became dedicated to twirling.

Twirling well "takes a lot of gymnastics and dance," Ms. Adams said. "It takes a lot of just sheer talent. It takes a lot of stamina. It takes perseverance, a lot of muscular training. You have to have the backing of your family financially. You have to have time to practice."

In her years of twirling, Starla said that she has seen a "lot of girls, when they compete, try real hard. They do the best that they can. Sometimes they don't always do as well as they want — first place or whatever. And they get discouraged, and they quit."

And then there are those persevering souls who "never quite reach that (top) level, and they stick with it, anyway,' Starla said. "Those are the ones that give twirling such a good name."

In her pursuit of twirling, Starla "started out with a bang and went from there.

"Of course, I didn't win every time I went to a contest, but you don't have to win to win. But because I won a lot of titles, that kept me going. If I had lost a lot like some of those girls, I don't know . . .," Starla said. "You can lose it with one drop."

Twirling is not without its hazards.

"You get plenty of black eyes and jammed fingers, ripped ligaments," Starla said in twisting, leaping and handling the baton, which, ideally, is slightly longer than the length of the arm of the twirler. If it is much longer, "You are going to get in trouble, knocking teeth out."

In challenging her daughters to excel, Ms. Adams admonished them not to be a "jack of all trades and a master of none.

"'I will help you, but you are expected to do what you need to do (to excel),'" Ms. Adams said she told her children. "'And you can't get halfway upstream and decide you want to change boats. That doesn't work.'"

"I agree with her," Starla said.

While Ms. Adams acknowledged that "a lot of parents tend to push their kids in the direction they wish they had gone," she said she encourages her children to achieve excellence — their best — in their endeavors.

SCHOOL: Officials expect high enrollment

for the first day again it's a good time — as long as you've got cool teachers who don't give you any homework," Jon Wholford said. "There nothing worse than homework on the first day."

School district official Joe Cummins, executive director of planning, evaluation and testing for Midland Independent School District, called Monday an "incident free" first day.

"And I was impressed with the turnout," he said. "All grades had 95 to 97 percent of their projected enrollment in today.

"Generally, though, after Labor Day we have more students. We expect the enrollment to increase each day," he said.

Peak enrollment for the schools generally occurs between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15, as families return from extended vacations.

In kindergarten through ninth grades, attendance was evenly distributed between the grades, Cummins said, with a high figure of 3,508 among first- and second-graders.

Lee High School reported a first-day total of 1,772 students — six higher than projected.

Meanwhile, overcrowding at the three junior highs continues. On Monday, 1,082 students reported to Alamo Junior High, 1,158 attended Goddard Junior High and 983 students showed for the first day at San Jacinto Junior High.

"Again all three campuses have temporary buildings on the grounds," Cummins said. "All three main buildings were built for a peak enrollment of 900, and each really should have 800."

Construction on the fourth junior high school, Abell Junior High, should be finished in time for opening day 1993.

BIDS: Museum hopes to move out of basement

the county museum" supporters and museum visitors, who apparently are eager "to get (the museum's artifacts and archives) out of the basement."

Mrs. McKinley said that it is "imperative" that the museum be on the ground floor. "The law now requires that we be accessible by the handicapped."

Now only accessible to the public by way of two flights of stairs, the old museum "now is hardly accessible to the hale and hearty," Mrs. McKinley said.

The original museum was started in the courthouse basement in 1932 by Librarian Margerite Hester.

"The museum was her dream," Mrs. McKinley said. "And she gave her time and after-library hours in collecting and cataloging archival material.

Mrs. McKinley recounted the museum's role in society: "No man is fit to be entrusted with control of the present who is ignorant of the past," Mrs. McKinley quoted a proverb. "And no people who are indifferent to their past need hope to make their future great."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Midland police seek anonymous caller

Staff report

Midland police received an anonymous phone call Saturday that could be connected with the disappearance of a Midland girl a year ago, officials said.

Cpl. Jim White said a phone call was made by a female, who said she knew someone who worked on a rig at a country club who saw someone burying something. White said case detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson said whoever took the phone call did not want to be identified. Johnson did say the call was in reference to the disappearance of 17-year-old Elizabeth Henry on Aug. 19, 1991.

White said the caller did not say who the person was that worked on the rig or which country club she was referring to. The woman hung up the phone before identifying herself.

White said the Police Department would like for the woman to call back so they can determine if she has any concrete information in the case.

On Aug. 19, police were dispatched to 3610 Apollo Court in reference to a 911 distress call. Upon arrival, officers found no one home and no signs of a struggle.

Later that afternoon, Miss Henry's parents arrived home and found her vehicle, a dark and charcoal gray 1987 Ford Bronco, missing. The next day, the girl's vehicle was found at the Midland International Airport in long term parking lot G-1.

Officers recover lottery tickets

Three Midland men were arrested early Monday morning in connection with a theft that occurred at the Kent Kwik convenience store at 1001 S. Midkiff.

Fredrico Raeza Gomez, 17, charged with theft and attempting to elude police, and Petronile Romero Galindo, 18, charged with theft, were still in jail Monday evening. Joey Ezekiel Gonzalez, 17, had posted bail. Bond was set at $5,000 each by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

According to police reports, the Kent Kwik clerk called police at approximately 12:30 a.m. Sunday to report that three suspects had stolen approximately $900 in lottery tickets. When the police arrived, they saw a black Chevrolet Beretta leaving the store. A short chase ensued and the vehicle was stopped at Hickory and Benton streets, where the suspects were arrested.

The police recovered approximately 930 lottery tickets.

TRIAL: Whistle-blower case begins; jury hears testimony

(From 1B)

The jury, hearing the case before U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Bunton, is expected to make its decision today.

The plaintiffs in the case are Linda Hopper, Johnnie Knowlton, Cheryl Casbeer, Terry Mansell and Frances Popham.

The women filed the lawsuit in February 1990 claiming they were fired in retaliation for complaints about occasionally having to work without pay.

Jurors agreed and determined that GISD violated the so-called Whistle Blower's Statute when it terminated the women. The state law is designed to protect against retaliation public workers who report illegal activities by their employers.

The women were reportedly fired in December 1989 by Hal Porter, GISD superintendent at the time, for complaining about being made to volunteer to prepare meals for the school board on meeting nights.

School district officials denied the claim that the women were fired.

Comet explains cause of color loss in dry cleaning process

By Billie Jo Corbell

Today's fashions dictate the use of many intensely colored fabrics. Modern technology has brought great improvements in color performance. But in some cases, methods used to produce those deep, brilliant hues are not totally colorfast. Color failure may occur in any fiber or blend and with any color. When an article is immersed in solvent during dry cleaning, some of the surface colors are removed.

In some cases, two or more colors have been mixed together to produce a third color. If all the dyes are not totally colorfast, dramatic color change can occur. This is why Comet dry cleaners read every care label. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) passed a law that says all garments must have a care label attached to them. And garments must stand up to what the label says. It is the manufacturer's responsibility to see that garments have the correct labels.

This law was intended to give both the consumer and dry cleaner guidance in caring for garments. An item with "dry clean only" on the label should have colors that are fully colorfast to accepted dry cleaning procedures. Failure of color fastness under these circumstances is a violation of the care label law.

Before such a label is attached by the manufacturer, the article should be tested by a qualified laboratory — for both color fastness and for shrinkage and peeling. Unfortunately, this is not always done. Consequently, many items are dry cleaned or washed with with poor results even though care instructions were carefully followed. Under these circumstances, responsibility for failures should be considered the manufacturer's rather than the dry cleaners.

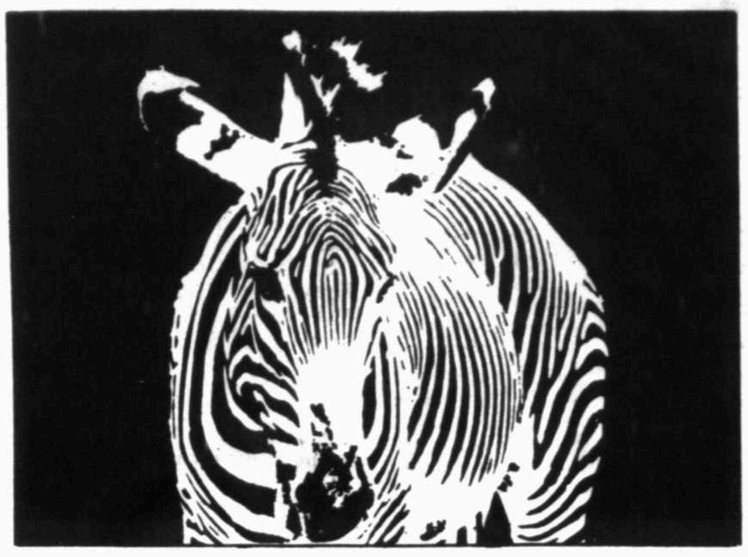

Light streaks of color loss may also show up after a care process. This is caused by the surface color cracking (rubbing) off the surface and exposing the undyed yarn. Sometimes the streaking process begins while the garment is being worn and is accentuated by the normal tumbling action of the dry cleaning or washing process. This normally happens to blue jeans.

Remember, white is a color, too. Most fabrics have a naturally off-white or yellowish cast. Many white fabrics are treated with optical brighteners, also called fluorescent whitening agents, to give them a brighter, whiter appearance. (Remember how your grandmother put bluing in the family's white wash?)

Different brighteners must be tested to see if they are unstable and inclined to lose their whitening power — that's how a "dirty" or "gray" look is produced.

Most professional dry cleaners such as Comet will work with you. If you have any questions about the possibility of items fading, discuss it with the professionals at Comet. As members of the International Fabricare Institute, they are there to help other dry cleaners and consumers alike. Comet has three locations. Stores are at 3108 W. Cuthbert; 2602 N. Midland Dr. (with one-hour service available), and 2106 N. "A" St. (package mailing and UPS available). Hours are 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Hours truly designed for working people.

For more information call 689-9723.

Why do colors sometimes fade and streak in dry cleaning? Comet Cleaners has the answer.

Delta Electronics takes pride in skilled, professional staff

Phil Cote, a Delta Electronics employee, was named an outstanding service technician in the 1991-92 nationwide Master Technician Competion held by Sharp Electronics.

Because Delta Electronics is a service organization, its owners and managers take a great deal of pride in their well trained, highly skilled technicians. One of them is Phil Cote. In a recent nationwide competition held by Sharp Electronics, Cote was rated as one of the outstanding camcorder/VCR technicians in the U.S.

Cote has been on Delta Electronics' staff for the past three years. His experience includes four years in the Air Force where he was trained on state-of-the-art video equipment. He also maintained broadcast studio quality equipment.

Delta Electronics considers it a privilege to have a technician of Cote's caliber maintaining their clients' camcorder and VCR equipment. Cote is a consummate professional, and, due to his expertise, Delta is currently factory authorized to maintain Magnavox, Philco, Sylvania, Sharp, Panasonic and Quasar camcorders. Because Delta is not a retail store but a maintenance company, consumers can be assured that every effort will be made to repair their existing equipment. The only thing Delta sells is quality service. And Delta is pleased to let their clients know that their electronic equipment will be maintained and repaired by highly skilled, talented, professionals like Phil Cote.

The company's 15 employees include a full-time customer service department. They provide the finest in professional service and support.

Efficiency is the company's byword. They use an on-line computer for quick and accurate accounting and for control of the customer's electronic equipment. Because suppliers and warranty companies are located throughout the country, Delta uses faxsimile equipment as an added tool to expedite part ordering and to process claims.

The owners of Delta Electronics are Ed Huwa and Denny Mills. They have more than 60 years combined experience in the electronics field.

Huwa, a retired Air Force senior noncomissioned officer, has vast knowledge and experience in the electronic repair business. In fact, in every nationwide competition held by Sharp Electronic Corporation from 1989 to 1992, he has been designated one of the top 10 television technicians in the country.

Mills also retired from the Air Force as a senior noncomissioned officer. His forte is management and administration. By concentrating exclusively on this area of the business, he can efficiently oversee overall operations at both Delta locations.

Delta Electronics of Midland, which has been in business for over five years, has a parent organization — 12-year-old Delta Electronics of San Angelo. From these two locations the company services a lot of happy consumers both in West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Huwa, Mills and all the folks at Delta are proud of their company and take a great deal of pride in their work. They are enthusiastic about providing professional service.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Although your family obligations lighten now, you must continue to be vigilant. Career matters will require greater time and effort in late fall. A close personal relationship could reach a turning point over the winter holidays. Keep your private thoughts to yourself early in 1993. Secrecy and good timing will help you defeat a business competitor in March. Quiet introspection helps you come to an important and overdue decision. Romance will be sweeter than ever next June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Anne Archer, actors Sean Connery and Mel Ferrer, musician Elvis Costello.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone causes your heart to skip a beat. You must figure out whether there is any future in forming ties. Be wary of whirlwind courtships; they could leave you disappointed and disillusioned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you give dishonest people plenty of rope, they are bound to betray themselves eventually. There is no need for haste. Creative writing projects are worth developing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A special visitor or trip may be part of the picture today. You could be troubled by conflicting thoughts; do not give in to impulse. Probe beneath the surface to get the facts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Leave nothing to chance today. An unreliable individual could leave you in the lurch. Find out where your money is going; unless you are careful, a trickle could turn into a flood.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone dear to you may be spending money too freely. It is time to put your foot down. Think about the future. Work schedules are subject to far-reaching alterations. Speak up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be necessary to revise your economic policies. Do not increase outgo. A longtime health concern receives new attention. Be sure to safeguard your interests. An old friend re-enters your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The indirect approach will work best today. A former employer could make an attractive job offer. However, if you are in line for a promotion, it might be better to stay put.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to let outsiders upset your family life. Treat your children in a considerate way. If a young person lacks self-confidence, offer moral support but encourage independent thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Set the stage for a new employment venture. Showcasing your special talents will win you the chance of a lifetime! Be certain to keep any promises you make to your loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make "caution" your motto today. Resist the temptation to rush a project you are handling. Sharing your expertise with a younger person helps you develop better rapport.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be sure to stay in school even if your interests unexpectedly head in a different direction. Your excellent communication skills will serve you well during the coming days.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Move forward with greater confidence. A business venture will go according to plan. Loved one is in for a pleasant surprise. Romance smiles on both singles and married couples.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are human dynamos with tremendous self-discipline. These ambitious, energetic Virgos can succeed at virtually anything they undertake. Being dependent makes them exceptionally anxious. Wise parents will give these bright children plenty of choices. Generous and fair-minded, they will have lots of friends. Although these Virgos are skillful at nursing others, they make poor patients. They view any inactivity as a form of punishment.

Opening lead: Six of ◇

Votmai Tinkinov, the Russian emigre, played with such blinding speed that he failed to see at least half the possibilities of any given hand. How unfortunate that could be is borne out by this example.

Votmai and his partner bid smoothly to a fine no-trump game. With stoppers in the unbid suits and mostly soft values, a two-no-trump rebid rather than two spades was the correct action with the South hand, and North's raise was automatic.

West's diamond lead delighted the Russian, since it guaranteed two tricks in the suit. South played low from dummy and captured East's jack with the queen. With seven fast tricks available, declarer elected to develop the club suit for the two needed to fulfill the contract. However, just in case the queen-jack of spades was doubleton, declarer first cashed the spade ace. When no honor appeared, Votmai switched to clubs.

West defended well by ducking the club to East, who won and reverted to a diamond. That cooked declarer's goose. South's last diamond stopper was forced out before the clubs were set up, and West had the club entry and enough diamonds to set the contract one trick.

Note declarer's technique in first testing spades before going after clubs. Unfortunately, by then the damage had already been done. As so often is the case, hasty play to the first trick was the cause.

Suppose Votmai had allowed East's jack of diamonds to win the first trick. No return would have done declarer any harm and, as long as East held at least one of the club honors, the contract would have been impregnable. The defenders cannot set up and run diamonds before declarer has the clubs established for nine tricks. Try it.

CINCINNATI — Arthur Miller's daughter, Rebecca, is directing a production of his play "After the Fall" in Cincinnati.

The play, she said, is about Miller's life after his marriage to Marilyn Monroe ended but doesn't have to be interpreted as autobiographical.

"It's really about betrayal," Ms. Miller said. "It examines human relationships in relation to our place in the world. . . . So many of the things that we relied on are falling apart. It's about trying to find a way of living and a reason for living."

The production opens Sept. 9 at the Ensemble Theatre of Cincinnati.

Ms. Miller, 30, said directing the play has taught her a lot about the relationship of Miller and photographer Inge Morath, her mother.

"The play was conceived about the same time I was and took shape around my parents' relationship," she said. "Understanding the play helps me understand what came before their relationship . . . and informs my life."

DETROIT — Frank Sinatra will croon Thursday for retiring Chrysler chief Lee Iacocca, his longtime friend, a newspaper reported.

Sinatra was expected to do it his way at a Las Vegas gathering of nearly 10,000 Chrysler dealers and executives, The Detroit News said Sunday.

Iacocca, 67, is to retire Dec. 31 as Chrysler Corp. chairman after 46 years in the auto industry.

Chrysler spokesman Steve Harris would neither confirm nor deny Sinatra's appearance.

"All I know is that I've been told to bring a tuxedo," said Gus Russo, chairman of the Chrysler-Plymouth dealer council. "But everybody's been hearing the rumors about Sinatra."

PALMA DE MALLORCA, Spain — Mikhail Gorbachev said ideology must take a back seat to the search for shared human values.

The former Soviet president ate lunch Sunday with King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia in this Mediterranean resort town and later talked to reporters.

"I have said goodbye clearly and emphatically to socialism within a Stalinist framework," Spain's state news agency EFE quoted Gorbachev as saying.

"One has to free oneself from ideologies," he said. "I feel more inclined to consider that there are some determined values that have a greater priority for mankind."

Gorbachev, accompanied by his wife Raisa, arrived Saturday on Mallorca, where the Spanish monarchs are spending their summer holidays. The Gorbachevs are visiting other Spanish spots as well. Their departure date from Spain has not been announced.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Aaron Tippin says his hit record "There Ain't Nothin' Wrong With the Radio" struck a chord with the public by appealing to their affection for automobiles.

The song, about a junk car, is on his "Read Between the Lines" album, which has just been certified as gold for selling 500,000 copies.

"I don't think anybody saw that thing coming except me," Tippin said in an interview published Saturday in The Tennessean. "I said, 'This song is gonna be big, because it's about a piece of somebody's life, their car.' "

State won't ask court for new November lines

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will not ask the U.S. Supreme Court to allow it to use different Senate district lines for the November election than the primaries, the state attorney general's office said Monday.

Secretary of State John Hannah, the state's chief elections officer, called that the best approach.

"I don't want to do anything now that would prevent us from having the Senate elections along with the regular elections in November," Hannah said.

A federal three-judge panel in Austin on Friday rejected an order by Hannah that a redistricting map drawn by the Legislature replace a court-ordered map used for the primary elections.

That ruling was a win for Republicans, who expect to gain new strength in the Senate under the map used in the primaries.

The state will appeal the Austin panel's ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court "to protect the integrity of the legislatively drawn plan for use in elections beyond 1992," Attorney General Dan Morales said.

He said that the state has "no expectations of receiving emergency relief to stop the use of the court's plan before the general election."

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Morales, said the state will not ask the Supreme Court to expedite a decision or to take any action before the November general election.

"If the court wants to do that, it's welcome to do that. We have no expectation that the court will do that. We're not asking the court to do that," Dusek said.

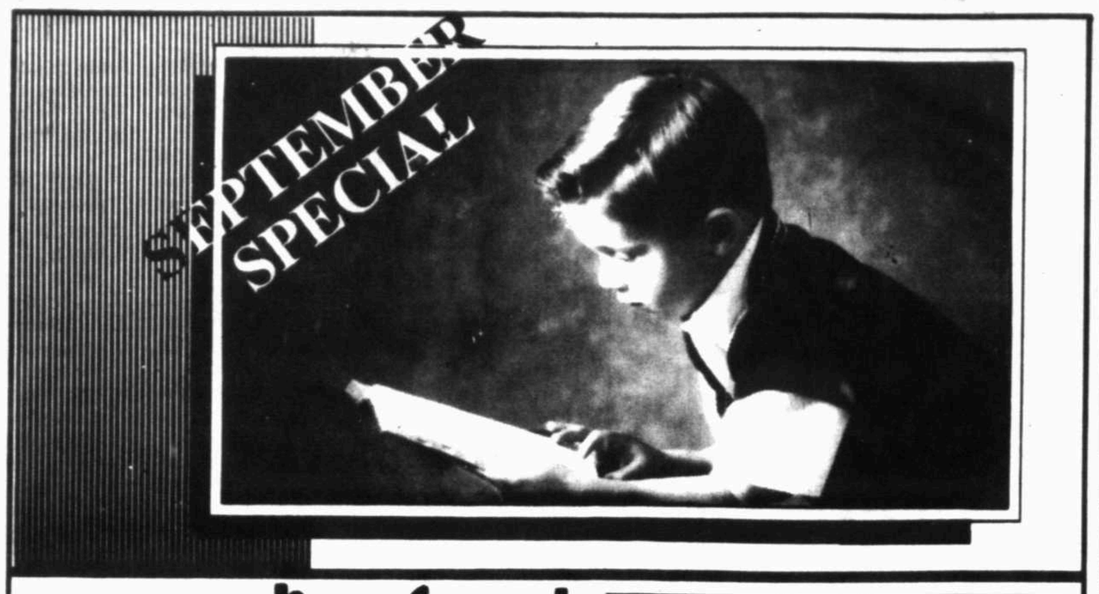

Hannah said there was a concern that, for example, "We might get a stay, and then the stay would be lifted, and we'd still be under the court-ordered plan but with no time to hold the elections."

Hannah earlier this month issued his order that the Legislature's plan be used for November.

He said he believed the law required him to take the action after the legislatively drawn map was approved by a three-judge panel in Washington under the Voting Rights Act. Hannah said the Washington panel found the Legislature's map superior in terms of minority representation.

Republicans have said the primary map is better for minorities and have criticized Gov. Richards, Hannah and Morales, who are all Democrats.

The map was drawn by U.S. District Judge James Nowlin, who had served on the Austin panel overseeing a redistricting lawsuit pushed by Republicans.

Atlanta's Ron Gant watches another pop-up as his hopes for a third consecutive 30-30 season have all but vanished.

Ron Gant's 30-30 history express in late swoon

■ A massive slump may keep Atlanta outfielder from becoming the first player to hit 30 homers and steal 30 bases in three consecutive seasons.

By Tom Saladino
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Ron Gant's hopes for a third consecutive 30-30 season have all but vanished now that his June swoon has stretched into a summer of anguish.

The Atlanta Braves outfielder entered 1992 hoping to become the first player in history to hit 30 home runs and steal 30 bases three seasons in a row. Willie Mays (1956-57) and Bobby Bonds (1977-78) are the only others to accomplish the feat in two consecutive years.

Gant appeared on target through June 7. He was batting .313 with eight home runs, 39 RBIs and 17 stolen bases.

Then his swing went sour.

In the 59 games since June 8, Gant has hit .193 (42-218) with only three homers and 21 RBI.

Overall, he's hitting .255 with 11 home runs and 60 RBI. The one plus is stolen bases; he has 29.

"I've tried everything. ... All I can do is keep trying," Gant said after the NL West-leading Braves lost 8-3 Sunday night to the St. Louis Cardinals, a game he watched from the bench.

"You don't just lose your swing and get it back right away. If it were easy I wouldn't be getting paid a lot of money," said Gant, who is earning $2.65 million this season. "And pitchers aren't stupid. That's why they're making as much as they do."

Gant hit .251 with 32 homers, 34 stolen bases and 104 RBI last season after batting .303 with 32 homers, 33 stolen bases and 86 RBI in 1990.

Soccer for girls arrives

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

High school girls soccer will become a reality this week when the Midland School Board is expected to give final approval to its 1992-93 operating budget at its meeting today.

The sport will not be University Interscholastic League-sanctioned this year, but is expected to fall under the UIL umbrella when varsity play begins in 1993-94. Instead, in its initial year, girls soccer will be played as a club sport.

"We've had quite a bit of interest in it," Midland athletic director Jack Tayrien said. "We surveyed the youngsters on the junior high and high school level, and we felt like as far as interest we've got enough to warrant a team at both high schools."

Alice Keel, a mother of a prospective player at Midland Lee, who has had an active interest in developing the sport on the high school level, said 63 girls at Lee and 25 at MHS expressed an interest in playing the sport. Keel said of the 95 total girls surveyed, only 10 said outright they would not play.

The San Angelo Central girls soccer team played club soccer in 1992 and makes the switch to a UIL-sanctioned sport this year. One combined Odessa team for both OHS and Permian begins play this season. Both Abilene High and

Ripken lands richest pact

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken got a very expensive 32nd birthday present on Monday: a $32.5 million, five-year contract that's the richest total deal in baseball history.

Ripken, a 10-time American League All-Star, will average $6.5 million a year under the contract, which in average annual value trails only the deal Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs agreed to in March, a four-year contract worth $7.1 million per season. In total money, Ripken's contract surpasses Bobby Bonilla's $29 million, five-year deal with the New York Mets.

Ripken, who is making $2.1 million in 1992 in an option year, will get a $3 million signing bonus, part at the end of this year and part next year. He gets salaries of $4.5 million in 1993, $4.8 million in 1994, $6 million in each of the 1995 and 1996 seasons and $6.2 million in 1997. The final two years are at Ripken's option.

Included in the deal is a $2 million post-playing career contract with the Orioles at a salary of $500,000 per year.

"We think Cal is a first-ballot Hall of Famer," said Orioles president Larry

Lamesa head coach Gary Yoder, right, looks on as his Tornadoes work to perfect the wishbone offense. The Tors, with a few new wrinkles in their attack, hope to improve on their 2-6-2 of 1991.

No place for meek

■ Lamesa lost its last six games in 1991 in the rugged District 2-4A, but the Golden Tornadoes' wishbone may be ready to click this year.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

LAMESA — Lubbock Estacado, Snyder, Levelland and now Plainview. Each a powerhouse on any given Friday.

Putting it mildly, District 2-4A is no place for the meek.

It is, however, the place for the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes, who have designs on joining the league's elite in 1992.

Lamesa roared out to a swift 2-0 beginning in 1991, tied its next two games, then finished with six straight losses and a 2-6-2 record.

But the wishbone attacking Tors will have 17 letter winners back to spark what second-year head coach Gary Yoder knows is a team that was on the rise down last year's stretch.

"We realize that the bottom line you're judged by comes in the form of wins and losses, but even with the record we had last year we made a good deal of improvement and turned into a pretty good football team," said Yoder, who spent two seasons as Lamesa's defensive coordinator before assuming the head post last year.

"We're excited about the season ahead. I'm not as nervous about a lot of things like I was my first year, and we feel like we've got a sound system that the coaches and the kids know pretty well now."

That system is a ground-based wishbone that will include a few new wrinkles in '92. And the Tors boast plenty of weapons in this year's backfield arsenal, making any alterations that much easier to install.

No fewer than four fullbacks will get cracks between the tackles, and at least three halfbacks have varsity experience.

"Our backfield is probably the strength of the team right now," Yoder said. "And our defensive secondary is strong because most of our backs go both ways. We don't have a lot of depth, so we don't have many one-way athletes.

"We'll double up a lot."

Quarterbacks Blaine Sheppard and Cole Adams battled it out for the starting spot a year ago, but Yoder wants them both on the field in '92 and has moved Sheppard to tight end.

Adams, who finished out last season as chief signal caller will get his competition from former junior varsity quarterback Chris Winford. And both will work at getting the ball to four-year starter Tony Brown,

Baseball commissioner placed under another gun

NEW YORK (AP) — The two league presidents Monday called a special major league meeting for Sept. 3 to discuss Fay Vincent's status, overriding the commissioner's refusal to convene the session.

American League president Bobby Brown and NL president Bill White announced the meeting, which will be held at Rosemont, Ill. The meeting was requested by several owners in each league, some of whom are trying to force Vincent to quit.

Vincent, vowing never to resign, last Thursday refused the request for a meeting, and sent owners a toughly worded letter which said he had retained Brendan V. Sullivan Jr., the Washington lawyer who defended Oliver L. North, to "respond to any inappropriate action."

A joint meeting can be called by either league president under the Major League Agreement if the commissioner fails to call one within five days of a request.

Neither Brown nor White had any comment, other than to announce the meeting. Vincent's spokesman, Rich Levin, said it was not known whether the commissioner would attend the session.

"I am pleased that the league presidents have called a meeting," said Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf, said be to one of the leaders of the anti-Vincent group. "I'm looking forward to a frank and open discussion of the problems which have necessitated the calling of the meeting."

Los Angeles Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley and Philadelphia Phillies owner Bill Giles said Sunday that a majority of clubs no longer supported the commissioner, and said they were in favor of a meeting.

Asked what the purpose of the meeting would be, one owner said: "To try to ask him to be a good guy, to try to get 20 or more clubs to politely ask him to step down."

Under the Major League Agreement, a commissioner cannot be fired and his powers cannot be diminished during his term, the reasons cited by Vincent for refusing to call the meeting.

"If he doesn't (resign), it becomes a legal battle if people want to make it one," an owner said.

LAMESA: Plainview of 5A fame is new mix in 2-4A

who rushed for nearly 700 yards last year and received all-district honors both ways.

Other halfbacks with experience are Brody Cartwright, who also anchors the defensive line at end, and Louis Addison, a 175-pounder with good speed.

Brown

Corey Kelly, whose most recent competition has come on the basketball court, may be the team's fastest runner and will get his chance in the backfield.

Garza

The fullbacks include Garland Fleming, who Yoder sees as the Tors' hardest runner. And Chad Bullard and Ramsey Medrano have varsity experience, while Ralph Uresti gives Lamesa solid depth.

Justin Claiborne, Jacob Garza and Sheppard will bring experience to the offensive line. .

And Garza, a 180-pound linebacker, joins Cartright (6-0, 175) as the only returning defensive starters besides the secondary, which returns intact and features Brown and Adams at the corners and Medrano and Addison at safety.

One of the biggest problems the Tornadoes had to deal with during Yoder's first year at the helm was when opposing defenses stacked up to stop the wishbone. It's something Lamesa is working to avert in '92.

"The wishbone will still be our primary offense, but we're looking to open it up a little bit and make people back off," Yoder said. "We're not going to become a primary throwing team, but we'll open up our formations a little and see what other teams give us.

"Really, I think this district is one of the toughest districts in the state of Texas. We could sit around and cry about it, or we can line up and deal with it.

"And I think this team can line up and be competitive in every game it plays," he said. "We're not very big once again, but we've got some good quickness and we're looking forward to a good season."

Estacado captured the District 2-4A title in '91 and reached the area round of the state playoffs before suffering a 28-21 loss to District 3-4A champion Sweetwater.

Snyder won 2-4A's other postseason berth last year, but dropped its bi-district encounter with Pampa, 31-15.

The mix gets stiffer this season as Plainview, formerly a member of District 3-5A, takes its reclassification all the way to 2-4A. Plainview stands presently as the sixth largest Class 4A school in Texas.

Tor secondary to see Randall's Barker early

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

It's no secret that the Lamesa defense will be severely tested this season from within difficult District 2-4A. But an interesting addition to the Tornadoes' pre-district slate makes the 1992 challenge an even greater one.

The Canyon Randall Vikings of District 1-4A are scheduled to pay their first visit to Lamesa, bringing one of the state's premier passers along for the game which is set for Sept. 25.

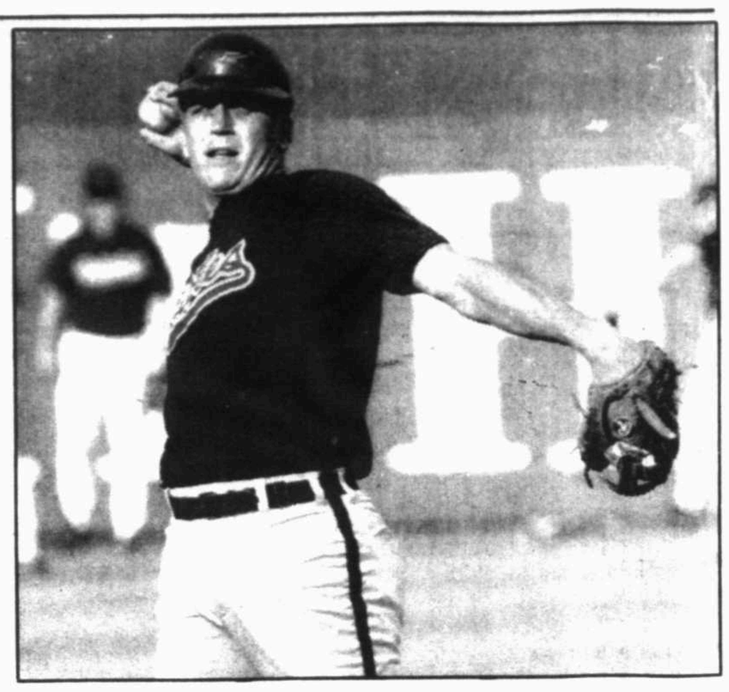

No other returning quarterback passed for more yardage at any level of Texas prep football last year than Brandon Barker, who just happens to be the nephew of Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback Brister.

Barker, at 6-1, 185 pounds, completed aerials for 2,247 yards as a junior, tying A&M Consolidated's Jeff Watson for the state lead among players expected to return this fall.

The Vikings, who were 0-10 in 1990, marched to 6-5 behind last year's passing attack, earning their first-ever postseason playoff berth.

Besides Randall, the Tornadoes' early schedule includes a pair of tough Class 3A teams in Reagan County and Littlefield, both of which made the area finals in '91.

District 3-4A members Pecos and Lake View round out the Tors' pre-district slate.

Baltimore Oriole Cal Ripken
...hauling in baseball's richest contract

RIPKEN: Struggling, but rich

(From 1C)

Lucchino. "He personifies the best of the Baltimore Orioles' organization, and we are pleased and proud that he will be performing for the Orioles' organization for many, many years to come."

"Reaching an agreement with the Orioles was a continuing objective of Cal's in this negotiation, and a truly unique and harmonious relationship between a club and player has been cemented," said Ripken's agent, Ron Shapiro.

Ripken enjoyed the best season of his career last year, but has struggled this season, leading to speculation the contract negotiations were playing a part. After finishing with a .323 batting average, 34 home runs and 114 runs batted in last year and earning most valuable player honors, he's batting just .247 this year with 10 homers and 56 RBIs.

Seniors have SMU battle scars

By Jimmy Burch
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — They have no catchy nicknames, this gang of eight fifth-year seniors who have witnessed the reconstruction of the SMU football program from the ground up.

Just a batch of battle scars, a heaping helping of pent-up frustrations and a steadfast belief in a dying dream. They came here, many of them as walk-ons, to turn a second-chance football program into a winner.

That was in 1988, when SMU merely practiced and talked of a bright future down the road. But for every Miracle on Mockingbird — which the Mustangs enjoyed with a last-second, 1989 victory against Connecticut — there has been a Decimation in College Station (65-6), an Ax Job in Austin (52-3) or a Hammer Time in Houston (95-21) to drive home the point that the Mustangs could not cut it against the best in the Southwest Conference.

In three seasons, they have suffered 24 losses in 24 league games. Home attendance has decreased each year.

This year, SMU's first wave of volunteers in the post-death-penalty era will try to change both trends against a backdrop of uncertainty. SMU President A. Kenneth Pye and the university's board of governors are studying options for the future of SMU athletics that could, in a worst-case scenario, include elimination of the football program.

Linebacker Bill Kiely, one of eight holdovers from SMU's original 15-member recruiting class in 1988, suggests it is time for him and his cohorts to alter some learned minds with some solid play on the football field.

"The word is the athletes have no say in this. To me, we have the biggest input of all," Kiely said. "If we can win and put things together, to me, there's no decision to make. This football program belongs in Division I-A.

"Anyone who's been inside our locker room knows this program has been turned around. But we need to put some numbers in the win column for some outside eyes to see that. We came here to win, and we haven't done that yet. That hurts."

It eats away at the insides of each of the eight who have been here from the get-go: Kiely. Quarterback Mike Romo. Offensive linemen Matt Wisenbacker, Trey Cowan and Uzo Okeke. Linebacker Jason Bednarz. Defensive tackle Kenny Rea. Wide receiver Jason Wolf.

Asked if the Mustangs view this season as their chance to justify the existence of SMU football, Wisenbacker said, "I think so."

"Whether we want to admit it or not, that's the case," said Wisenbacker, a fourth-year starter and one of 34 players in their final season of eligibility. "If we're ever going to get the wins, this is the year we have to do it.

"After we graduate, this team may take a couple of steps back. That's why we need to take a couple of steps forward before we leave."

Cal Ripken goes hitless

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken got the richest contract in baseball history, then went 0 for 4 with an error as the California Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-2 on Monday night.

Jim Abbott (6-12) gave up eight hits in 8⅔ innings for the Angels, whose previous trip to Baltimore in May followed a calamitous bus ride from New York in which manager Buck Rodgers and several players were injured in a frightful accident on the New Jersey Turnpike.

California has won five of six. Abbott walked three and struck out two, but was taken out after surrendering three ninth-inning singles, the last an RBI hit by Brady Anderson. Joe Grahe got the last out for his 17th save.

Tim Salmon's RBI single off Arthur Rhodes (4-4) in the third inning gave the Angels a 1-0 lead. David Segui's run-scoring fielder's choice tied it in the fourth.

California pulled away with three in the fifth. Luis Polonia walked, Junior Felix doubled and Salmon was issued an intentional walk before Chad Curtis hit a two-run single to left. After Ripken bobbled a grounder for an error, Gary DiSarcina hit a sacrifice fly.

California made it 5-1 in the sixth on a walk to Damion Easley and a triple by Luis Sojo.

Athletics 9, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Terry Steinbach keyed a five-run Oakland inning with a three-run homer and Dave Stewart won his 13th straight game against Boston.

Dave Stewart (9-8), whose streak against Boston includes three victories in the AL playoffs, last loss to the Red Sox on Aug. 19, 1988. He went 5⅓ innings, giving up three runs on four hits and three walks and snapping a three-game losing streak.

The Athletics won their third straight game, scoring all their runs in the third against John Dopson (6-6).

American League

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 4

CHICAGO — Lance Johnson, Carlton Fisk and George Bell homered to lead Chicago over struggling Toronto.

Besides losing five of their last six, the Blue Jays have been outscored 43-17 in that span.

Chicago has been on a hot streak, winning three straight, going 19-7 in its last 26 games and 15-3 at home.

Tigers 6, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Gladden, in his first game against the team he helped to two World Series titles, capped a four-run fifth inning with a two-run homer as Detroit beat Minnesota.

Gladden, who arrived in Minnesota in time for the 1987 World Series and didn't leave as a free agent until after 1991's title season, also made two leaping catches at the left-field wall.

Cecil Fielder added a 423-foot homer in the eighth inning, his 28th shot of the year but first since Aug. 16.

Yankees 9, Brewers 8

NEW YORK — Mike Stanley's RBI double capped a four-run comeback in the eighth inning and New York rallied to sting Milwaukee.

Robin Yount singled to start a three-run seventh that tied it for Milwaukee, then doubled home the go-ahead run in the eighth as the Brewers took an 8-5 lead. Yount now has 2,984 career hits.

But the Yankees bounced back in their half, tagging Doug Henry (1-2) with two outs on Danny Tartabull's two-run double, Mel Hall's RBI single and Stanley's double. Hall scored from first base on Stanley's hit into the left-field corner, tumbling home to barely beat the relay.

Larkin, Roberts spark Cincinnati

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin and Bip Roberts each homered and had three hits Monday night as the Cincinnati Reds pulled away to an 8-5 victory over slumping Philadelphia.

Larkin had a pair of RBI singles and a solo homer, and Roberts doubled twice and added a solo homer to send the Phillies to their fourth straight loss.

Larkin's two RBI singles and Roberts' run-scoring double helped the Reds open a 5-0 lead off Ben Rivera (3-3) after three innings.

Darren Daulton hit his 23rd homer for the Phillies.

Mets 4, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISO — Dwight Gooden, shaking off the circus atmosphere created by the presence of potential Giants buyer George Shinn, pitched seven strong innings and hit a two-run homer to lead New York past San Francisco.

While Gooden was hitting and pitching the Mets to victory, Shinn wandered around Candlestick Park with an entourage headed up by San Francisco mayor Frank Jordan, shaking hands with fans who cheered his every move and chanted, "George! George!" throughout the game.

SAN DIEGO — Frank Castillo recorded his first win since June 28 and Derrick May hit a three-run homer to cap a six-run third inning as Chicago won its fifth straight game.

Castillo (7-10), who had four losses and five no-decisions in his last nine starts, gave up two runs on six hits in 7⅓ innings. He walked two and struck out three. Bob Scanlan, the fourth Cubs pitcher worked one inning for his 10th save.

Vikings crush Browns; Krieg stuns Buffalo

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Rich Gannon's 52-yard Hail Mary pass to Anthony Carter wrapped up a 35-point first half and the Minnesota Vikings never let up in routing the Cleveland Browns 56-3 Monday night.

It matched the largest point total ever allowed by Cleveland in an exhibition game, and was one away from the Vikings' exhibition-game best.

The Vikings, unbeaten in three exhibitions under new coach Dennis Green, have outscored their opponents by a whopping 110-6. They scored on eight of 10 possessions Monday night, failing only when Fuad Reveiz was short on a 51-yard field goal try and when they elected to run out the clock with the ball inside the Cleveland 5 at the end of the game.

Gannon completed 12 of 14 passes for 191 yards, including TD passes to Carter on the Vikings' first and last plays of the half. Carter got behind Randy Hilliard for a 47-yard completion on Minnesota's first play, then caught a ball tipped by teammate Cris Carter as the first-half gun sounded.

NFL Exhibitions

Chiefs 35, Bills 0

KANSAS CITY — Dave Krieg enjoyed a rousing debut in his new town, passing for 160 yards and two touchdowns in two quarters as Kansas City trounced Buffalo 35-0, handing the AFC champions their first exhibition shutout in 22 years.

Krieg, the 12-year Seattle veteran signed as a free agent, showed Chiefs fans the downfield passing attack and scrambling ability that had been lacking the previous three seasons under Steve DeBerg.

The Chiefs scored on four of their first five possessions, working mostly against Buffalo reserves, and made it a second straight miserable Monday night for the Bills in Kansas City.

Last October when the Chiefs hosted their first Monday night game in eight years, the Bills suffered a 33-6 humiliation. The Bills, who haven't been shut out in the regular season since 1985, had last failed to score in an exhibition game in 1970, in a 34-0 loss to Green Bay.

Angels drop Missions, 7-1

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Hilly Hathaway continued his hot hand in the second half of Texas League play, holding San Antonio to three hits in eight innings as the Midalnd Angels inched closer to first place with a 7-1 decision here over the Missions on Monday night.

The win, sparked by Dan Rumsey's two-run home run in the first inning, moves the Angels to within two games of first-place El Paso, which lost a 10-9 affair Monday at Wichita. The Angels are in third place, one game back of San Antonio in the West with seven regular season games remaining.

Hathaway worked eight innings and moved to 7-2 with the win. Rumsey's home run was his sixth and Midland never trailed after the blast to right field.

Mark Wasinger had three RBI for Midland, including two on a bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

Analysts: Dollar drop cuts Fed's options

■ Another ease in monetary policy becomes remote, officials say.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The dollar's dramatic decline is making it increasingly difficult for the Federal Reserve Board to engineer another interest-rate reduction, even if the economy's stall persists through the election, analysts said Monday.

Before the dollar's plunge, many economists believed the central bank — pressured by the Bush administration — probably would attempt to stimulate the economy with at least one more cut in short-term interest rates.

But now, most analysts said, another ease in monetary policy is remote, barring an unexpected and sharp slump in the economy. And there's a chance, albeit a remote one, that the Fed could be forced to raise rates to support the dollar, they said.

"The door is shut tightly on any further Fed (interest-rate) easing move. ... There's no way they can ease further, given the dollar crisis," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York.

The dollar scare emerged Friday when the greenback plummeted to a post-World War II low against the German mark. On Monday, it declined further, bouncing around 1.40 marks.

"Now I'd say there's a 90 percent probability for unchanged monetary policy ... with the other 10 percent representing the chance the Fed may have to tighten," Jones said.

So far the Fed, joined by other central banks, has attempted to prop up the dollar's value through intervention — in this case the coordinated buying of dollars and selling of marks.

If intervention fails to restore order to currency markets, the Fed's only alternative would be to raise U.S. rates. Higher interest rates make dollar-denominated securities more attractive to foreign investors, increasing demand for the dollar and thus its value.

That would be bad news for President Bush who, in campaign speeches, has been pointing to low interest rates as an economic bright spot. That also would be bad news for the thousands of homeowners who had not gotten around to refinancing their mortgages and to prospective homebuyers who have not yet found a house.

Since the Federal Reserve's last easing move in early July, rates on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages have fallen from around 8½ percent to 7⅞ percent.

"Another week like last week and you could see mortgage rates go back up over 8 percent and potentially higher," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates of West Chester, Pa.

Ironically, Bush may have helped trigger the dollar scare with his campaign promise to cut taxes, and with his emphasis on the need for the United States to boost its export sales, economists said.

"The markets are getting a bit scared by the election," said economist David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm. "It's not so much fear of either Bush or (Democrat Bill) Clinton. It's vote-buying time and the markets are afraid they are going to buy votes with even bigger budget deficits. The market did not like the tax cut because it does not think we have any money to give away in the form of lower taxes."

Also Bush's strong emphasis on exports implied to some foreign investors that the administration would not mind seeing the dollar decline. A lower dollar can encourage exports by making U.S. goods cheaper on overseas markets.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Energy prices gained Monday on buying linked to concerns that Hurricane Andrew could damage refineries along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

The September-delivery contract for unleaded gasoline jumped 2.16 cents to settle at 62.73 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil analysts said prices were driven upward on concerns that Hurricane Andrew, which whalloped Miami and southern Florida Monday morning, would knock out refining capacity along the gulf coast.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October settled at $21.54 per barrel, up 46 cents.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Navajo Refining and Texacl Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 50 cents to $20.25.

Natural gas for delivery in September settled at $1.987 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.33 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in October settled at $19.04 per barrel, up 47 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply again Monday, continuing its fall through record-low territory despite attempts by central banks to boost its value.

The dollar fell to an all-time low against the German mark Monday. In New York, one dollar bought 1.4030 marks, down from the previous low of 1.4315 marks set only last Friday.

In New York, one pound cost $1.9920, up from $1.9560.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — The stock market recorded a broad loss Monday, extending its sharp decline from late last week amid continuing worries over the slumping dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 50.79 points on Friday, fell another 25.93 points to a 4½-month low of 3,228.17.

Storm cancels flights, shuts offshore rigs

Associated Press

Hurricane Andrew put much of South Florida and the Gulf Coast temporarily out of business Monday, forcing airlines to cancel flights and oil companies to shut down offshore drilling platforms.

The storm also threatened to close oil refineries that ring the Gulf of Mexico. That pushed fuel prices higher in futures trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

And American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was stopping many calls going into South Florida to ensure that outgoing calls could be completed.

Oil companies said they started evacuating maintenance workers from platforms in the gulf on Sunday and were taking the last of the workers from rigs Monday in helicopters and boats.

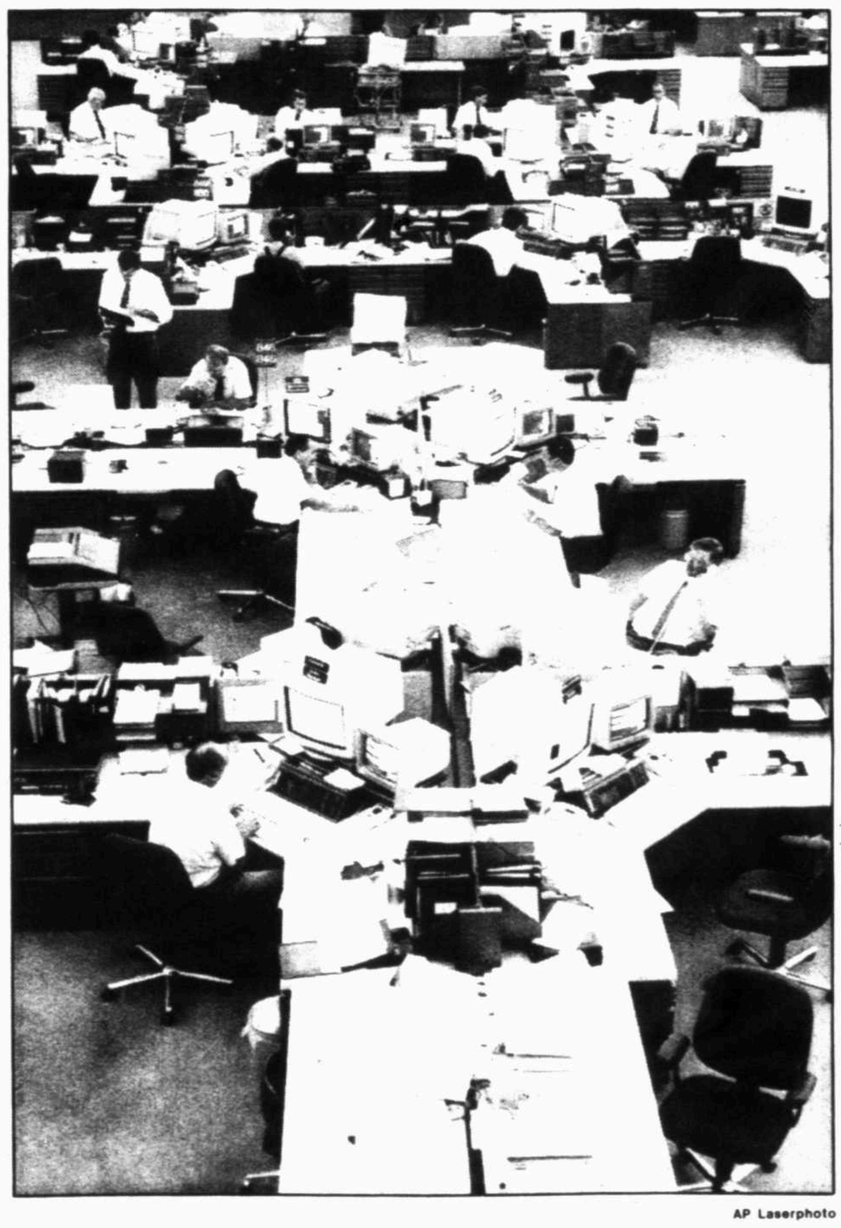

Many companies concentrated on evacuating workers from the central gulf, where the storm seemed to present the biggest threat.

Platforms are built to withstand the high winds and strong surges of hurricanes. Andrew was classified a Category 4 hurricane, the second-highest level, with top winds below 155 mph.

"A Category 5 might push the platforms to their design limits," said Larry Wall, spokesman for the Louisiana Division of the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

The last time a Category 5 hurricane blew through the gulf was 1969, when Camille devastated the Mississippi coast.

The oil rigs typically are shut down at a valve on the sea floor to prevent oil from gushing into the water.

Jury awards Boeing worker $1.16 million

By Karen West
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — A Boeing Co. worker who claims she was treated like a machine and "beaten down" by the company has been awarded $1.16 million for discrimination she suffered because of a repetitive strain injury.

"I hope this sends a message to employers to listen to their workers," Janice Goodman of Auburn said of the verdict reached last Friday in King County (Wash.) Superior Court. "I'm just overwhelmed. I still don't have my hands back, but I'm very pleased with the verdict."

Goodman, 56, worked as a microfilmer for five years at a Boeing Support Services plant in Kent. She left Boeing in 1989 and has since undergone five operations on her hands. She said she is no longer able to work with her hands.

Her job required her to place papers under a camera lens and push a button to photograph them several thousand times each day.

The repetitions, as many as 14,500 a day, according to her lawsuit, caused severe strain to her hands and arms, Goodman said.

"I was just like a machine," she said. "This was like the sweatshops in the garment district of New York."

The jury found that Boeing was not liable for the injuries caused to Goodman's hands but said Boeing did not accommodate her properly.

Goodman, who had mild arthritis when she started the job in 1984, said she was wearing a splint on her right hand by 1987 and on both hands the following year.

"This all could have been avoided if they would have gotten me off the job when I first started complaining about it," she said. "I was really beaten down."

Co-workers had testified that despite Goodman's pain, she was urged by her supervisors to work faster.

"I feel like I was an isolated case," Goodman said. "I'm not a rabble rouser or a sign carrier. I worked hard and was dedicated to The Boeing Co."

Boeing attorneys had argued that Goodman could have transferred from the job if she had followed company procedures.

Kodak to offer professional version of Photo CD

N.Y. Times News Service

Eastman Kodak Co., which is basing the future of its snapshot business on electronics, will introduce professional versions of its Photo CD system Tuesday.

The Photo CD system for amateur use, first announced in September 1990 and now available, allows pictures taken with conventional cameras to be recorded on optical compact discs in digital form. With an optical disc player, the pictures can then be displayed on television sets and computer terminals; they can also be transmitted over telephone lines.

The new professional products include compact discs that can record text and sound as well as pictures. Also to be announced is a picture exchange that is intended to allow organizations that collect and distribute photographs to be linked electronically with their clients.

The new discs can be used to record things like catalogs, to store X-ray medical images and other text, graphics and sound, as well as pictures. Kodak was also planning to announce that it had agreed with Apple Computer Inc., L.L. Bean Inc. and the Smithsonian Institution to cooperate in developing commercial applications for the system.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Not all banks allow early CD withdrawals

By Bill Doyle

Q: It was my understanding that if you are 59 or older, banks and savings and loan associations are required to allow you to withdraw money from an individual retirement account without any penalty.

Doyle

My broker agreed with me when I stated this contention, so I bought an IRA CD from him. A few days later, I discovered that if I wanted to cash the CD I would have to sell it in the secondary market, which could result in a loss for me.

Can they do this to me? Do I have any recourse, due to the fact that my broker misled me?

A: Banks and S&Ls have the option of redeeming IRA CDs for people 591/2 or older without early withdrawal penalty. But they are not required to allow such redemptions. Some don't.

For that matter, a bank or S&L can refuse to redeem any CD before its maturity date, regardless of the age of the person who owns the CD.

This comes as a surprise to many people who assume they can cash CDs before maturity and pay early-withdrawal penalties. Many banks and S&Ls go along with that. Others don't.

After all, a CD is a contract under which an individual agrees to leave money on deposit for a length of time and the bank or S&L agrees to pay a fixed rate of interest. A hard-nosed bank or S&L can insist the depositor live up to the contract.

As you learned, depositors who want to get money out of CDs that can't be redeemed can sell in the secondary market, where previously issued CDs are bought and sold in much the same way stocks are traded — often at less than face value.

You might be able to get some recourse by filing a complaint against the broker and taking your case to arbitration with the National Association of Securities Dealers.

Q: You wrote, "New regulations, which went into effect June 16, deny Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage to brokered deposits issued by banks and S&Ls that are undercapitalized," which you define as being in "bad financial shape."

Does that mean undercapitalized banks and S&Ls can no longer market CDs through brokerage firms? Or does it mean a CD purchased through a brokerage after June 16 may or may not be insured?

Does a person now have to ask his broker, "Is this CD insured or uninsured?"

A: There's no need to put that query to your broker. Undercapitalized banks and S&Ls now are prohibited from selling CDs through brokers. Adequately capitalized depository institutions cannot sell brokered CDs without first obtaining a waiver from the FDIC. Well-capitalized institutions can continue to sell brokered deposits without any such waiver.

Alan J. Kaplan, FDIC acting assistant general counsel, says the nationwide tightening up on brokered deposits resulted from the FDIC Improvement Act passed in 1991.

Q: My broker tells me that two states have "blue laws" prohibiting him from selling CDs to residents of those states. Why were such laws passed?

A: Because there have been abuses of brokered deposits. Some brokers sold high-interest CDs issued by banks and S&Ls in very shaky financial condition. When those institutions went belly up, the CD holders were made whole by the FDIC. But the cost — in hundreds of billions of dollars — will have to be paid by U.S. taxpayers.

The outright ban on brokered deposits by a couple of states did seem severe, coming as it did before passage of the FDIC Improvement Act, which contains less restrictive provisions. However, this nation is a union of 50 states, each of which has the authority to enact its own legislation.

(From 1C)

In spring training, hoping to hit above .300 again, the outfielder worked on hitting more to right field instead of pulling to left.

That worked until June.

"Then the pitchers changed the way they pitched to me and started coming inside. I kept trying to hit to right field, then I started taking too many good pitches," he said.

At the All-Star break in early July, Gant's average had dipped to .273, but he still managed to make the All-Star team.

"I don't know exactly when it started, but I started to press trying to make the All-Star team. It puts more pressure on you, and the less relaxed you are the harder it is. That was part of the problem," he said.

"I knew I should have a carefree attitude, relax more, but I just got more tense."

"He's trying too hard," said Braves manager Bobby Cox. "I've talked to him and told him to relax, but when you're going through something like that, it's tough."

Until recently, Cox had kept Gant in the starting lineup. But this month, the left fielder has sat out eight games.

Gant's gotten plenty of advice on his hitting.

"Everyone has been telling me what to do. I've probably had a thousand people giving me instructions. Most of them have never even played the game. I just don't listen to it," he said.

His teammates have offered encouragement.

David Justice was watching Gant take batting practice Sunday and reminded him, "See the ball hit the bat, Ronnie. Keep your head down and see it."

"Some people may think I'm not trying, but I'm trying my hardest out there to give my all. I don't want to be embarrassed," said Gant.

"Sometimes at night when I go to bed, I think about it."

Gant has been through hard times before. After hitting .259 with 19 homers and 19 stolen bases as a rookie second baseman in 1988, he hit only .177 in 75 games at the start of the next season.

He was demoted the low minor leagues to learn to play the outfield, but was back with the Braves by the end of the season.

"I don't think this is as bad as that," said Gant. "In the first place, we're winning. That's one plus about this whole thing. My approach is entirely different. I know I can come out of this."

SOCCER: Club play is first

(From 1C)

Abilene Cooper, the first two schools with girls teams in what is known as District 5-5A, have been playing for two years.

Keel said that recreational soccer league membership trends in Midland indicate a continued strong interest in the sport on the high school level.

"Almost 10 years ago, only one or two girls played on each co-ed team in the Midland Soccer Association's under-six year old division," she said. "Now they have eight solid under-six teams, and a total of 525 girls signed up to play soccer from the under-six to the under-19 division this spring."

Although the teams at MHS and Lee will not compete for a district title this year, school facilities and funds will be used, said Tayrien, who added the sport has been in the works for up to two years, but only last spring gained steam.

"Eventually it would have happened," said former Midland Soccer Association girls' commissioner Frank McCallum, "but Alice has really spear-headed this effort and has seen it through to its final conclusion."

According to Tayrien, when girls soccer begins on the club level in January of 1993, the teams at MHS and Lee will play other teams in the district (San Angelo, Abilene High, Cooper, Ector County), as well as teams from Lubbock.

"This is a program Jack and (MISD superintendent) Dr. (Joe) Baressi have worked hard to get," Keel said. "This will certainly increase the number of activities that kids can become involved in."

Former Odessa College golfer Lance Posey fired a 69 Monday to lead a group of 14 players who qualified for the Ben Hogan Permian Basin Open, which starts Friday at The Club at Mission Dorado.

Posey, of El Reno, Calif., topped a field of 150 non-Hogan Tour hopefuls trying to join the three-day PB Open.

Also qualifying Monday at Mission was Odessa dentist Marshall Morgan, who used a 73 to get in on the fun.

Other qualifyers included Tracy Nakazaki of Manhatten Beach, Calif., with a 70, and Kevin Savige of Albuquerque, N.M., and Steve Cain of Fort Worth, who each shot 71.

Shooting 72s were El Paso natives Paul Stankowski and Martin Chuck, while John Horne, assistant professional at Plainview Country Club, was also in at 72.

Five golfers besides Morgan had 73s and qualified, including former Mission assistant pro David Montelongo, now of Dallas. West Side Tennis Club honors Berthe

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. — Myriam Berthe, a member of the Midland College women's tennis team the past two years, will help the West Side Tennis Club start off its second 100 years when she is honored there Friday as a member of the 1992 Rolex Collegiate All-Star Team.

Berthe, a native of Dakar, Senegal, helped lead the MC women's tennis team to consecutive National Junior College Athletic Association championships in 1991 and 1992.

She will attend Pepperdine University in Los Angeles this fall on a full athletic scholarship.

At MC, Berthe led the Chaparral squad to records of 16-0 and 15-0 in team matches. As a freshman, she was 45-3 in singles and 25-2 in doubles. She won the NJCAA number one singles title and teamed with Janneke Garos to win the NJCAA number one doubles.

She also won the Rolex ITCA Small College women's singles and was the first NJCAA player to win a match in the Rolex ITCA National Collegiate Indoor Championship.

When she was a sophomore, her singles record was 22-1, losing only to an MC teammate. She won the NJCAA singles title and captured the NJCAA doubles crown with Lucie Ludvigova as her partner. They were 15-1 for the year, losing only to opponents from Midland College.

Berthe also won the 1992 women's tennis singles gold medal in the African Games, held in Cairo, Egypt.

Berthe is one of 25 collegiate players selected by Tennis magazine and the Intercollegiate Tennis Association to the Rolex Collegiate All-Star Team, which is comprised of the nation's number one women and men players at NCAA Division I, II, III, NAIA, and junior college schools.

Hamilton Square wins first Series night game

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Pitcher Matt Wolski's first-inning triple Monday night gave Hamilton Square its first run in a 5-0 victory over Lake Charles, La., in the first night game ever at the Little League World Series.

About 20,000 fans turned out to watch the first non-daylight game in the 53 years of Little League championship play. Lights were added this year to accommodate a format that gives each team more games in Williamsport.

Lake Charles shaded Wolski to right and was caught off-guard when he pulled the ball into the corner. The hit scored Matt Slaiciunas, who had walked.

Wolski himself scored in the third after reaching on a fielder's choice. He stole second, then scored on Brandon Kivler's single to center. Lake Charles' Craig Martel made an accurate throw to the plate in an attempt to nail Wolski, but pitcher Jared Gothreaux cut the ball off.

The East champions added insurance runs in the fifth on Matt O'Neill's three-run homer.

Lake Charles, the champions of the South, had two runners on with two outs in both the third and fifth. They were the Louisiana team's most serious threats.

Neither team was eliminated, as would have happened in previous years. The top two teams in the American bracket will play Thursday for a shot at Saturday's championship game.

Kevin Sullivan hit a three-run homer to cap a six-run fourth inning and Sean Burroughs struck out 12 on Monday as Long Beach (Calif.) pounded out a 10-6 victory over South Holland (Ill.) in the first game of the Little League World Series.

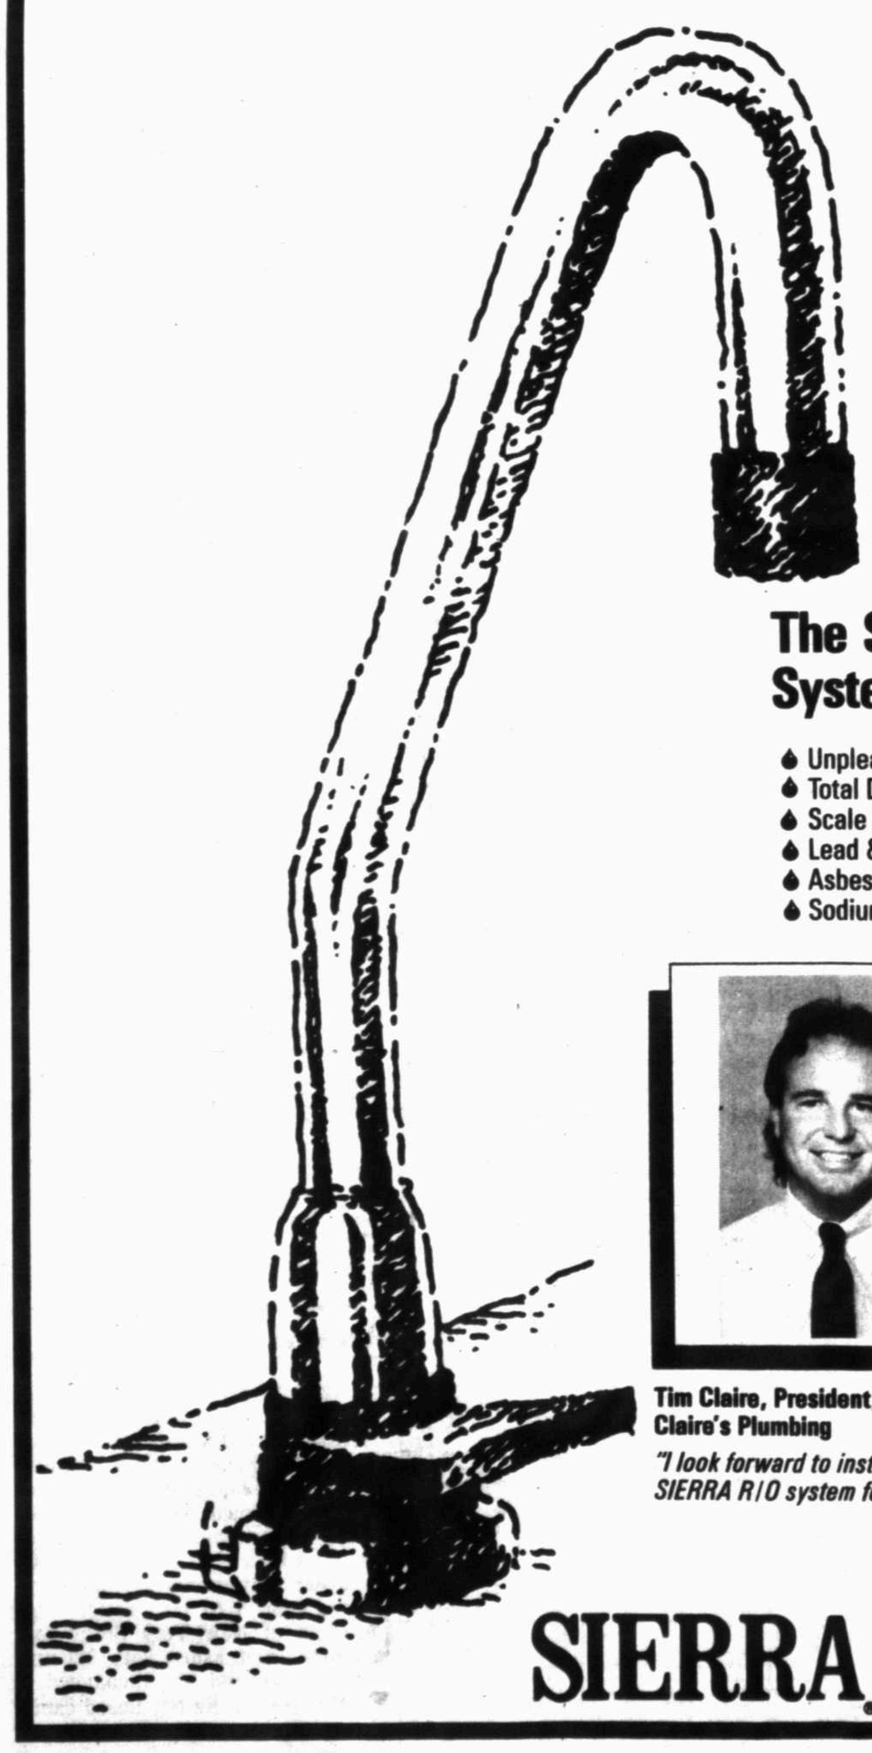

The West champions took a 7-1 lead after the big fourth-inning, but the Central champs scored five runs in the bottom of the inning to make it 7-6.

Burroughs then sealed the victory with five strikeouts over the last two innings after his team added three runs in the fifth.

"I thought they were the best baseball team we've seen," said South Holland manager David Beezhold. His team was 16-1 in state and regional play. "Traditionally, the West is the strongest team in the U.S. bracket."

Tradition also holds that the Central is the weakest. A Central region team hasn't been in the finals since 1972 and hasn't won a World Series title since 1959.

Ryan Beaver's 220-foot homer made it 1-1 in the top of the third and Sullivan's liner just cleared the wall in the fourth.

Memorable moments sprinkle Republican National Convention

BY Jerry Roberts
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Analysis

The Republicans spent the week preaching to the choir in a hall big enough to stage a world's fair.

Although the Astrodome swallowed a lot of sound, energy and excitement, there were plenty of memorable moments sprinkled through the GOP convention. Here is a look at some of the best and worst performances:

POLITICAL PLAYERS

Best: George Bush — Looking for a dome-sized home run with his big acceptance speech, the president hit only a double, but easily won Most Valuable Player honors. With his angry reaction to a report alleging political motive in Iraq policy, his pre-convention roundhouse right at Bill Clinton, televised hints of a cabinet shake-up and surprise visit to the hall — all before The Speech — Bush dominated the news cycle every day. His feisty tone and visibility in Houston finally fired up his base.

Worst: Dave Swanson — In a convention scooplet, the National Journal's daily report noted that former White House aide Swanson led a team of nine writers who drafted, polished and synchronized virtually every convention speech, excepting big-name speakers. In the process, they apparently relied on a cookie cutter core vocabulary of about 200 words. Tuesday's daytime line-up of nearly 50 speakers, all spouting one-note paeans to Bush befitting a Kim Il Sung rally, was particularly dreary.

CONSERVATIVE CHARACTERS

Best: Ronald Reagan — An authentic American legend, Reagan still defines the optimistic yet tough and sinewy style of conservatism to which all other GOPers aspire. His upbeat delivery of reflections both personal and historic on the end of the Cold War put the foreign policy issue in sharp perspective and the quip that was simultaneously self-deprecating and aimed at Clinton — "I knew Thomas Jefferson, Thomas Jefferson was a friend of mine" — got the biggest laugh of the convention.

Worst: Pat Buchanan — Buchanan's prime time diatribe was a big hit inside the hall, but sent to those outside a message that was all Reagan's was not: ornery, threatening, xenophobic and unlikely to build a majority coalition.

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Best: Treb Heining — Balloon-art by Treb, the company hired by the GOP for its spectacular finale, came through big-time on Thursday night. Oh, a few sourpuss critics in the Secret Service might carp about all that backstage smoke, fueled when confetti and balloons landed on a hot light, but the indoor pyrotechnics and five-foot balloons boinging around the hall were loads of fun.

Worst: The Adam's Mark Hotel Evacuation — The California delegation and several hundred other guests were racked out of their hotel at 1:30 a.m. Thursday when alarms were triggered by a small fifth-floor fire. As emergency vehicles were summoned, milling delegates witnessed shocking scenes: blue-haired ladies in bathrobes, face cream and curlers; Senator John Seymour strolling around in his bathing suit; the barefoot fundamentalist Lou Sheldon clad in Hawaiian print and shorty PJs; attorney general Dan Lungren blaming the press and a local woman busted for practicing old-fashioned entrepreneurial capitalism.

EMOTIONAL EPISODES

Best: Mary Fisher — After two nights of family value sermonettes, Fisher stunned the armies of moral superiority into silence, telling them that those who "tolerate ignorance and practice prejudice ... should feel shame." HIV-positive, Fisher is a mother of two and daughter of a GOP fund-raiser, Nixon-to-China credentials that suddenly opened the ears of some delegates on the subject of AIDS.

Worst: Dan Quayle — After all the hype about "re-introducing" himself to the American public, Quayle accepted his renomination with a unmemorable speech laced with a self-conscious, defiant anger that didn't ring true. Although he got off some good lines, Quayle ended up sounding more petulant than purposeful.

RISING STARS

Best: Condoleeza Rice — The brainy Stanford professor was perhaps the most impressive figure off the Republican bench. Breaking the mold of second-string speakers, she provided a clear, crisp and compelling articulation of the rationale for Bush's foreign policy. If Pete Wilson was watching, he was probably kicking himself for passing over Rice in favor of Seymour for a U.S. Senate appointment.

Worst: Newt Gingrich — The GOP House whip from Georgia is a cult hero of conservatives, but his convention speech fell flatter than the Texas prairie. Trying to borrow a page from Reagan's book, he told an anecdote about a woman of modest means who built a successful business from scratch, to illustrate the triumphs of free enterprise. Her business: maid service. Maybe you CAN get good help.

SPOTLIGHT SPEAKERS

Best: Jack Kemp — Warm-up act for the keynote address, Cabinet Secretary and former NFL star Kemp hit the ground running with a ringing introduction from fellow former quarterback Roger Staubach. Kemp delivered a principled message of economic growth and social hope, exhorting delegates to reject the politics of sleaze: "The purpose of a great party is not to defeat its opponents, but to provide superior leadership and a great cause."

Worst: Phil Gramm — As host Senator and keynoter, Gramm was positioned to emerge as the convention's star. Known for a witty and forceful style combining down-home wisdom and post-graduate intelligence, Gramm declined to use a teleprompter and ended up looking bug-eyed while serving up an uninspiring rehash.

CONVENTION CHANTS

Best: "Clean the House" — As their speakers saturated the airwaves with calls to oust the Democrat congress, delegates kept themselves pumped up with three simple words that cut to the bone of the GOP argument for change.

Worst: "Hit em again, harder, harder." — The football floor yell that incongruously accompanied Bush's surgical slices at Clinton reminded everyone of an ugly confrontation started by suspender-wearing GOP thugs who tried to shout down and intimidate Democrats having an anti-convention press conference near the Astrodome.

SPOUSAL SUPPORT

Best: Barbara Bush — With an 90 percent approval rating, the First Lady did Bush more good in seven minutes than all the pols did the rest of the week. Natural and self-assured, she reminded the nation of some reasons why they voted for Bush in the first place.

Worst: Marilyn Quayle — Wearing a chip on her shoulder, the second lady aimed holier-than-thou barbs at Hillary Clinton and slammed the door in the face of any baby boomer who ever sampled the counter-culture of the 1960s: "Most of us went to school, to church and to work." Harumph.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter's friendship is much too close for mother's comfort

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful 22-year-old daughter. She has always had many boyfriends and girlfriends until about a year ago, when she met this one girl at school. Since then, nothing has been the same.

My daughter has dropped all her other friends, and she associates only with this one girl. They are together morning, noon and night. They have all their classes together, and after school this friend comes home with her, eats dinner here, and on weekends she spends the nights here.

They never have dates, but it doesn't seem to bother them — they are so wrapped up with each other. It just doesn't seem normal to me.

Abby, I am beginning to wonder about the relationship between these two girls. I love my daughter more than my own life. What should I do? — HEARTSICK MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Let your daughter know you love her and accept her as she is. There is no more convincing proof of your love.

DEAR ABBY: I lost (or somebody stole) my wallet. Fortunately, there wasn't much money in it, but my driver's license and credit cards will have to be replaced. That will be a terrible inconvenience, but I can handle that.

What cannot be replaced is something I had cut out of your column and carried around for almost five years. It was a "confidential" to remind people who still had their mothers to thank them for all the things she taught them. Can you remember which one it was, and print it again? — FAN IN AMSTERDAM, N.Y.

DEAR FAN: It was this one:

"CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE: The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one week to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies."

DEAR MRS. S.: Probably not. But I'm sure if they thought a brain surgeon could relieve their headache, they wouldn't hesitate to call him.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.

Travelers don't heed luggage advice

By Erma Bombeck

The travel accessory of the '90s is luggage. Everyone is wearing it these days — slung casually over the shoulder, kicked along in front or dragged behind from a leash.

Bombeck

Luggage is no longer checked and relegated to the belly of the plane. It rides right up there where the air is pressurized — in overhead bins, closets and under your feet.

If you've traveled lately, you've seen everything come aboard — end tables, live lobsters, vacuum sweepers, dogs and watermelons.

When you view what is being lugged onto airplanes these days, it is obvious travelers have not heeded the first rule of any vacation: Take half of the luggage you planned and twice the money.

It is getting harder and harder for the airlines to persuade passengers to say goodbye to their luggage at the counter. In many ways it's like saying farewell to relatives just before you defect to another country. The odds of them catching up with you and ever seeing you again are slim.

The wearing-your-luggage-next-to-your-body trend has not escaped luggage manufacturers. Enter technology.

For under $500, a California-based company has a piece of luggage with an electronic beeper. (Let's hope this will lead to a voice device that will whimper, "Help me. I'm in Cleveland and I should be in London.")

Unless you have legs like an Olympic weightlifter, transporting luggage from the gate to your car has always been a problem. Robot luggage is on the horizon. Using electronic beacons, travelers will be able to guide their luggage through the terminal.

I have only two suggestions for the manufacturers. First, start making luggage you can drive. The wheels can be collapsible on your suitcase, the motor you carry in your handbag or carry-on, and the batteries and seat are attached with Velcro. You can drive it into the belly of the plane.

A second option is one I suggested a few years ago. Put all the passenger seats in the belly of the plane and enlarge the overhead racks by half a storv.

Hillary, Tipper launch counter-attack on GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Clinton and Tipper Gore fired back Monday at Republican assaults on Mrs. Clinton and painted the GOP as a party that wants to bash "other people's families" rather than solve family problems.

"They had their chance to talk about the future ... and instead they chose to make up stories and launch verbal grenades," Mrs. Clinton said in her first detailed reply to last week's attacks on her at the Republican National Convention.

She and Mrs. Gore gave a double-barreled response on Monday morning's talk shows, appearing on NBC's "Today" and "CBS This Morning" in interviews taped during the Clinton-Gore campaign's weekend bus tour of the Rust Belt. Also Monday, the two women were featured in a Cable News Network spot.

It was their first national exposure since last week's GOP convention in Houston, where President Bush's supporters focused on values and aimed much of their fire at Mrs. Clinton, a Yale-educated lawyer.

Conservative Patrick Buchanan cast Mrs. Clinton as a radical feminist who likens marriage to slavery; Marilyn Quayle got in a more subtle dig, saying liberals are disappointed "because most women do not wish to be liberated from their essential natures as women."

Mrs. Clinton told CBS that Mrs. Quayle's remark was "a bit of an insult to today's modern women, most of whom are working mothers and struggling very hard to balance their family's needs with the family's economic needs."

Told that an aide to Mrs. Quayle boasted that the vice president's wife was always home for dinner by 7 p.m., Mrs. Clinton said: "Well, I'm very, very proud for her. And I wish that every family in America could have that kind of opportunity."

At the same time, Mrs. Clinton said she didn't want to get into a "rhetorical battle" with Mrs. Quayle.

"There's no reason for us to be dividing women against women or men against women. This country needs people who want to reach beyond these boundaries and quit pointing fingers at one another," she said.

Mrs. Clinton said the Republican charges against her were "so preposterous" it was difficult to respond. She said she didn't take the attacks personally, dismissing them as typical Republican campaign tactics.

'There's no reason for us to be dividing women against women or men against women. This country needs people who want to reach beyond these boundaries and quit pointing fingers at one another.'

— Hillary Clinton

"How could you get hurt by things that aren't true?" she asked. "It's a very calculated, unfortunate kind of political tactic. ... But it doesn't affect us."

Mrs. Clinton is a former board member of the Children's Defense Fund who for years has worked in Arkansas on programs to help preschoolers and reduce infant mortality. She and Democratic nominee Bill Clinton, the Arkansas governor, have a 12-year-old daughter, Chelsea.

The Democrats' would-be second lady came to the defense of Mrs. Clinton over her writings on legal rights for children, which provided much of the fodder for the GOP attack.

"We've had children chained to radiators by their parents and starved to death. ... These children should have some legal recourse," Mrs. Gore said.

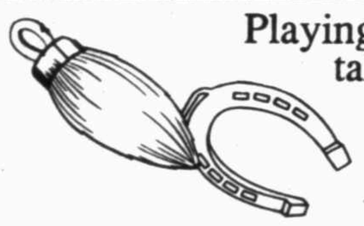

Of the Houston convention in general, Mrs. Gore said on NBC:

"It sounded like their idea of family values was bashing other people's families, quite frankly. We need to be talking about serious issues."

Mrs. Gore brushed off any meaning to the absence of herself and Mrs. Clinton from the speaking platform at last month's Democratic National Convention in New York, even though Barbara Bush and Mrs. Quayle both had prominent speaking roles in Houston.

"Well, you know, I'd rather hear from them than their husbands, anyway," Mrs. Gore said.

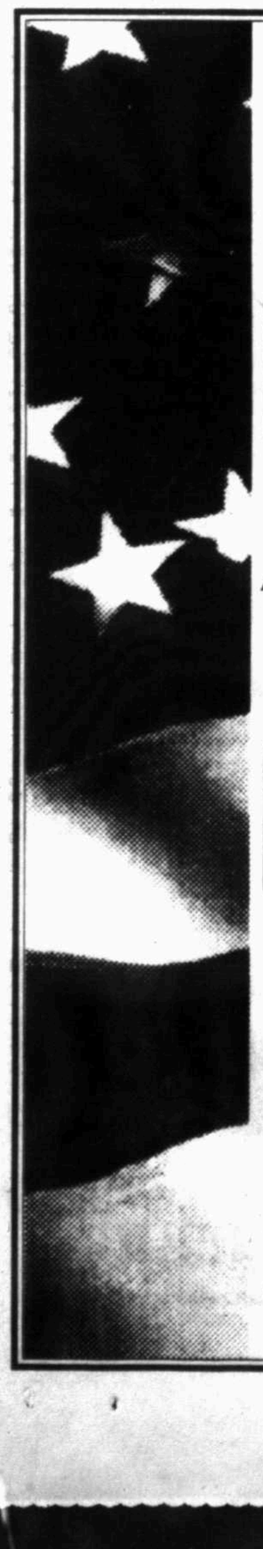

Both women spoke Sunday in Chautauqua, N.Y., backing their husbands' contention that while Republicans scold on values, they don't take action on social and economic programs that would help struggling families.
