Khomeini Defied By Women

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — More than 8,000 women, defiantly wearing Western clothes and with their heads uncovered, marched through a snowstorm in central Tehran today demanding that Iran's revolution not reduce their freedom.

After gathering at Tehran University, the women, mainly college and high school students, headed down Shah Reza

Avenue chanting, "No Chadur!" and "At The Dawn Of Freedom We Have No Freedom!"

As they marched toward the home of Ayatollah Mahmud Taleghani, Tehran's senior religious leader, the women were harrassed by groups of young men and one small gathering of women wearing chadurs, the black, head-to-toe traditional Islamic covering worn by women in Iran.

The chadur was adopted by thousands of women during the revolution as a mark of solidarity with the revolt of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini against the rule of the shah. But once the revolution triumphed many women cast it aside in favor of Western dress.

The marchers chose International Women's Day to underline their fears that Khomeini's plans for an Islamic republic will again reduce them to second-class citizens under rigid Islamic laws, despite the role they played in the revolution.

As evidence they point to the abolition of the family protection law which gave them equality with men in such matters as property rights and divorce, Khomeini's warning that they should be modestly dressed when going to work and the abolition of co-education throughout the school system.

Meanwhile, Deputy Prime Minister Amir Entezam denied that the provisional government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan has any plans to resign in the face of criticism from Khomeini and other groups.

On Wednesday, Khomeini attacked suggestions by Bazargan's government that Iranians should have the chance to set up a Western-style democracy instead of an Islamic republic.

"You are weak, sir. You are weak, and as long as you are weak, you are under the influence of the strong ones," Khomeini said in a speech to theological students and religious leaders at his residence in Qom, 75 miles southwest of Tehran.

RUSH FOR CARTER — Two Egyptian men rush toward the car carrying President Carter and President Sadat into Cairo from the airport today, despite frantic efforts by security forces to restrain the enthusiastic crowd. Sadat Raises New Doubts About Pact

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Carter, beginning a pilgrimage for peace in the Mideast, received today both a warm welcome and a grim reminder that tough issues still stand in the way of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Tens of thousands of enthusiastic Egyptians lined the street as Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat stood in an open car while traveling from Cairo airport to the former royal palace where Carter will stay.

But at the palace Sadat issued a strong new call for "national rights" and "freedom" for Palestinians.

Even before Carter's arrival, Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said his country had counter-proposals to the compromise suggestions put forth by Carter, and said Egypt would continue to insist on a timetable for setting up an autonomous Palestinian authority in the Israeli-occpied West Bank.

Khalil, in a news conference today, denied reports that the United States might take over Israeli air bases in the Sinai as part of a peace treaty.

"No, no, no," Khalil said. "I assure you there has never been any discussion of American bases in Egypt."

The reports had previously been denied at the White House.

In Israel, meanwhile, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said a peace treaty can be signed "in a few weeks time" provided some unspecified "still outstanding issues" are resolved.

Begin, speaking at an airport news conference on his return from the United States, called on his countrymen to welcome Carter warmly when he arrives in Tel Aviv Saturday night.

"This has been a good week for Israel," Begin said.

Carter said he still seeks a "comprehensive" peace that would include other Arab nations and "relflect the legitimate needs of all who have suffered in more than 30 years of conflict," a reference to the Palestinians.

Sadat kissed Carter on both cheeks as the American leader got off Air Force One at Cairo airport. Then the two presidents waved to the throngs who lined their route to the palace in the suburb of Kubeh.

As the motorcade passed, about 300 doves were released and flew into the sky. Onlookers cheered, jumped up and down and waved handkerchiefs. The eight-mile drive took 55 minutes.

At times the crowd was so enthusiastic that police had to restrain people who rushed toward the car carrrying the leaders.

At the palace, both leaders appeared on a balcony to speak. Sadat praised Carter warmly, calling him "My dear friend and brother."

"Never before has an American president been so firm in his devotion to peace," said Sadat, speaking in English.

But Sadat also said "We are determined to enable our Palestinian brothers to realize their national rights and regain their freedom. In the days ahead we will be working together to make these cherished hopes a living reality"

Ammo, Cash Found On Suspect's Body

The mysterious gunshot death of murder defendant John Thomas Carter in the Crosby County Jail became even more puzzling this morning with the disclosure that live ammunition and cash were found hidden in his clothing.

Authorities revealed at a news conference this morning that the articles were discovered on Carter's body Wednesday several hours after he was found in his cell along with a .22-caliber pistol.

And preliminary autopsy results on Carter, accused of the Oct. 2, 1978, slayings of an elderly Lorenzo couple, showed the 34-year-old man had consumed the drugs, Librium and Valium, shortly before his death. Both drugs act as tranquilizers.

Jury selection in Carter's trial for the murder of Valton Vernoid Gandy and his wife, Cora, both of Lorenzo, was in its third day when the defendant was found shot to death Wednesday morning.

When asked whether he thought the new discovery pointed toward a possible planned break-out by Carter, former Lubbock District Attorney Alton Griffin, hired as special prosecutor in the case, said, "We are not speculating...any speculating you'll have to do yourself."

Officials at the morning news conference, including Griffin, Crosby County Sheriff Fred Owen and Texas Ranger Sgt. Bud Newberry, said it still was not known how or when Carter got the pistol, ammunition, cash or drugs while under supposedly tight security during his stays at the Lubbock and Crosby county jails.

Carter was arrested Oct. 21, 1978, and subsequently indicted on two counts of capital murder in the deaths of Gandy, 73, and his 68-year-old wife. Paula Bruce, 57, of Lorenzo was arrested Oct. 30, 1978, and indicted on two counts of capital murder in connection with the Gandy deaths.

Mrs. Bruce remained in the Lubbock County Jail today, the future of her trial still uncertain following the discovery of her co-defendant's body by a Crosby County sheriff's deputy.

Department of Public Safety trooper Norman Luker said today that 26 unspent .22-caliber bullets were found wrapped in tin foil and hidden in a makeshift pouch in Carter's underpants when the body was taken to Lubbock's St. Mary's Hospital and undressed in preparation for an autopsy.

The pouch, appearing to have been stitched by hand, was attached to the waistband of the underwear.

Lubbock County Jail administrator Gary McGrew, angered this morning upon reading in The Avalanche-Journal that an unnamed source said Carter may have had the gun when he left the Lubbock jail, admitted today that the defendant's underpants were not taken off during a search here. Carter was moved from the Lubbock County Jail to Crosbyton Sunday.

Griffin said $113 cash was found inside one of Carter's socks when the body was undressed at St. Mary's. McGrew said the defendant's socks also were not removed during the search here Sunday.

Owen said when Carter arrived at the Crosby County jail for the beginning of jury selection in the trial Monday, "He was searched, but not strip searched. His underpants were not taken off."

Griffin said autopsy results show Carter died of a gunshot wound to the right temple. He added that analysis of the man's urine showed traces of Librium and Valium, but not an "excessive" amount. No drugs were found inside the defendant's locked cell.

It also was learned this morning that two Texas road maps were found in a ma-

City Funds In 'Solid' Condition

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The city's financial condition was "solid" for the fiscal year ending on Sept. 30, Lubbock City council members were told this morning, but councilwoman Carolyn Jordan expressed doubts that would be the case next year.

Larry Anderson, representing the firm of Mason, Nickels & Warner, told council members there was a fund balance in the city's general fund of $4.8 million at the end of the fiscal year, up from $4.69 million the previous year.

Revenues for general governmental functions were $26.3 million last year, a 9.3 percent increase over 1977.

"The overall general fund is in very solid, stable position," Anderson said.

The city took in a half-million dollars more than expected during the year, Anderson said, enabling the establishment of reserve funds in various areas.

Anderson said transfers from other funds into the general fund were only $2 million, $1.8 million less than expected.

Electric revenues increased $1.3 million during the year, although Anderson said the increase did not match those of two prior years.

The water revenue fund had "probably the best year of any fund," Anderson said, with a $1.6 million increase in revenues. The major factor in the additional revenue was increased water usage and water rate increases.

The additional revenue allowed the purchase of new facilities in the amount of $2.1 million and the establishment of a

Visa Crackdown Facing Colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell announced a crackdown today on visa policies which allowed aliens to enter the United States under a phony student status.

The action, which could involve prosecution of some college officials, follows revelations that an estimated 42,000 foreign students admitted into the United States on student visas are no longer enrolled at the schools they are supposed to be attending.

Bell said the Immigration and Naturalization Service, an arm of the Justice Department, is initiating steps which include warnings to the colleges that further violations could result in withdrawal of their authority to enroll foreign students under INS regulations.

In question is the practice of issuing blank I-20 forms, the forms that certify a prospective foreign student has been accepted for enrollment.

Some colleges have been accused of sending out recruiters armed with blank I-20s pre-signed by school officials. The prospective student can then obtain a visa to enter the United States.

"The INS is considering ways to control issuance of the forms, including a plan that would require schools to send a completed form to the State Department before issuance of the visa, rather than giving the forms to students as is the current practice," Justice Department spokesman Terrence B. Adamson said.

Adamson said the INS is "presenting to U.S. attorneys for possible prosecution information that schools may have engaged in fraudulent practices," such as issuing blank, pre-signed acceptance forms.

There are more than 244,000 foreign students properly enrolled in U.S. colleges and universities, the Justice Department says. More than 50,000 of these are Iranians, the largest group from any nation.

The controversy over alien students was touched off by a violent demonstration Jan. 2 by a crowd apparently made up of anti-shah Iranian students outside the Beverly Hills, Calif., mansion of the Shah of Iran's mother and sister.

Bell said at that time he would seek to deport any Iranian student who took part in violent protests and any other foreign students who violated terms of their visas by no longer attending classes.

Few Tickets Available For Game

"We're a little tired, but everybody else is smiling," said Texas Tech University ticket manager Carol Baker this morning after the last ticket for tonight's Tech-Indiana basketball game had been sold.

The contest, in Lubbock Coliseum, is the first round of the 42nd annual National Invitation Tournament, with the winner advancing another step toward New York City's Madison Square Garden later this month.

Although all the tickets have been sold, Mrs. Baker said another 500 floor seats — the least advantageous seats on court level — will go on sale at the gate tonight. They will be available at 7 p.m., although gates for present ticket holders will open at 6 p.m.

"We're thrilled about the sales," said Mrs. Baker. Tech had to print tickets Monday and did not get to put them on sale until Tuesday morning. More than 5,000 went through the ticket windows that first day.

Red Raider basketball coach Gerald Myers had said prior to start of sales that the game was a test for Tech if it will be able to show NIT officials and basketball observers across the nation "that the Southwest Conference is making the basketball progress that we say it is.

"We have to make a good showing — both on the court and in the stands."

Winner of tonight's game will play the winner of the Alcorn State-Mississippi State game, being played tonight. That second-round game will be played next Monday.

Wholesale Price Surge Led By Food, Gasoline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices jumped sharply in February for the second straight month to pace a 1 percent increase in wholesale prices, the Labor Department reported today.

The wholesale price rises were not quite as steep as those recorded in January, but they were high enough to guarantee consumers a further boost in retail prices in coming months.

Wholesale price increases for beef and veal slowed from January, from 13.3 percent to 4.7 percent in February. But vegetables, pork, sugar, fruit and fish showed sharper boosts last month.

Hefty price rises also were recorded for shoes, tires, gasoline and alcoholic beverages.

The latest rise in wholesale prices, involving goods at the stage just before they reach store shelves, compared with a 1.3 percent jump in January, the sharpest one-month increase in four years.

The latest report gave the Carter administration another setback in its efforts to control inflation, which is running above 9 percent a year.

Last year, there was only one month — April — in which wholesale prices rose as much as 1 percent or more. The latest rise in wholesale prices translates into a 12.7 percent annual increase.

Food prices in February jumped 1.6 percent, equal to an annual rate of more than 21 percent. In January, food prices at wholesale rose 1.8 percent.

Foreshadowing sharply rising prices in the future, the Labor Department said prices at the beginning stages of the wholesale process, called the crude level, jumped 3.3 percent in February. That was the largest monthly gain since May 1975.

Prices for crude foods — prices farmers receive before the food is processed — leaped 3.8 percent last month after a 2.8 percent rise in January.

The report confirmed findings released by the administration Wednesday that farm prices have been rising at an annual clip of 40 percent since November.

In response to the sharp rise in farm prices, which the government concedes will continue for a while, President Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred E. Kahn, said Wednesday that officials are considering ways of slowing price hikes at the farm level.

The Labor Department said wholesale prices for roasted coffee, processed poultry and passenger cars declined in February. The increase for cars was 0.7 percent, compared with a 2.1 percent advance in January.

Prices for household furniture also rose much less than in January, while luggage and small leather goods posted declines after substantial increases earlier.

Violence Shadows Local Clubs

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A night on the town — meeting new friends while drinking and dancing to loud music — is entertaining and relaxing to many. But in 1978, it meant death for 15 persons in the city. One man was fatally stabbed Jan. 28 while at a club south of the city.

The senselessness of most fights at clubs, some resulting in murder, is reflected in the causes of the altercations, which range from quarrels over a girl to spilled beer or a pool game.

Lubbock County sheriff's Deputy Dean Bohannon said that when he was a Vernon policeman several years ago, he worked a shooting at a club where two men were arguing over the difference in the meaning of biography and autobiography. That incident resulted in one man losing a leg.

Local officers don't blame any one party or thing for the high percentage of violent crimes at nightclubs, but say the booze consumption and loud music may breed trouble. The age of the patrons also is said to be a factor.

"It's got a lot to do with the lowering of the drinking age," police Lt. Billy Knox said, adding that clubs with a middle-aged clientele seem to have less trouble. Capt. Wayne Love adds, "Eighteen is too young to be responsible under the influence of liquor."

Thirteen-year veteran bartender Virginia Washington, asked if she thought clubbing was dangerous, said, "If you asked me that six years ago, I definitely would have said no. Now, yeah, there's some risk, especially at night. I never have any trouble in the daytime."

Miss Washington presently works at a Fourth Street club where on May 26, 1978, Abdon Rangel Jr., 26, was shot to death while arguing with a 17-year-old patron.

The city to date has recorded three homicides for the year, none of which occurred at clubs. But, last year, Lubbock had 32 murders, with 15 — nearly half the total — taking place at nightspots.

But club violence is not confined to the city limits. The county also has had

USDA Increases Emphasis On Nutrition Research

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department is increasing its emphasis on human nutrition research and looking for ways to educate Americans about nutrition.

The department has a new Human Nutrition Center to administer nutrition research by the department, national food consumption surveys and a food data bank to evaluate diets.

Special emphasis was placed on nutrition activities this week in honor of National Nutrition Week, March 4-10.

Officials and six scientists are working to develop guides by which consumers can choose nutritious foods.

Assistant secretaries Carol Tucker Foreman and Rupert Cutler are leading a search for dietary guidelines together with Food and Drug Administration commissioner Donald Kennedy and Donald Frederickson, National Institutes of Health director.

Mrs. Foreman has been a force behind efforts to increase department focus on human nutrition. Specifics are handled by Mark Hegsted, the former Harvard University nutrition professor who is new director of the nutrition center.

Hegsted worked on dietary goals published in 1977 by the former Senate Select Nutrition Committee chaired by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

The goals told Americans to eat less in general and eat less saturated fat, cholesterol, salt and sugar. They recommended more fruits, vegetables and grain.

Hegsted said, "In the past we've recommended eating more of everything that contained nutrients we need. But now we've got to translate dietary goals into food patterns that will assure us thatnwe get essential nutrients."

Conceding that federal discussion of "food patterns" might be seen as leading to a government edict of food choices, Hegsted said people do not want to be told what to eat, but government officials have a responsibility to let people know what they ought to eat.

Irate commodity groups have feared that national dietary goals would be based on incomplete scientific evidence and would cause Americans to cut back on sugars and food with fats, causing problems due to a change in food consumption.

Hegsted predicted there would be no major shift in food consumption patterns. For one thing, many Americans already have reduced sugar and fat in their diets, he said.

The former professor said "moderation" was the single word of advice he would give Americans about their eating habits.

"When you figure we get an average of 40 percent of our energy from fat and 30 percent from sugar, that doesn't leave much room for foods containing nutrients we need," he said.

Americans have doubled sugar consumption since 1960 and have deficiencies in iron, folic acid, vitamin B6 and zinc in their diets, he said.

Nutrition is important, but not the only factor involved in human health problems, from coronary disease and cancer to diabetes and hypertension, he said.

"We can't prove the link exists because some chronic health problems such as heart disease take 20 to 30 years to develop in people," Hegsted said, "It's impossible to control diets of humans that long."

The Human Nutrition Center oversees evaluation of the role of minerals such as copper, cadmium, nickel and zinc that appear as traces in diets, at a Grand Forks, N.D. laboratory.

It has placed high priority on research of nutrition for the elderly, infants and children.

Aging research will be directed from a planned laboratory at Tufts University. Research on children will be handled at a Houston center in cooperation with the Baylor College of Medicine and Texas Children's Hospital.

Two other major nutrition research centers under Hegsted's direction include a Hyattsville, Md. institute researching food consumption, dietary levels and nutrition education and a Beltsville, Md. institute, which focuses on proteins, vitamins and other nutrients.

Secretary Bob Bergland said research "does little good unless it is translated into to realistic application. The obvious step is to provide people with the information gathered by research and to motivate them to apply it."

Current education projects reach low-income homemakers with food and nutrition information. A new program provides states with funds to develop nutrition education in connection with school lunch programs.

A pilot research project will develop a mass media campaign to encourage children to improve eating habits.

General Says MX Missile Vital To U.S.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — An Air Force General says the proposed MX missile system, being considered for deployment in some areas of New Mexico, is essential to keeping America's missile defense program strong.

"It's to the country's advantage and very very critical that we bring in the MX," said Gen. Alton D. Slay, head of the Air Force Systems Command.

He said without the program, "the land-based leg of our missile program will become weaker into the 1980s." He said the Soviet Union is gaining on American missile strength because of improve targeting capabilities.

The MX missile program would involve construction of a number of missile silos over a wide area. Missiles would be shuttled between the silos in a sort of "shell game" tactic designed to confuse enemies.

Areas in New Mexico under consider for the project include the eastern plains, White Sands Missile Range and the ower Rio Grande Valley. Other states in which missile silos may be located are Texas, Arizona, Colorado and Oklahoma.

Slay, speaking at a news conference, said he expects a final decision on the MX project to be made by the Defense Department in April or May. One estimate has placed cost of the program at $27 billion.

Tentative plans call for construction of about 200 nuclear-tipped MX missiles, which would be shifted around to about 4,000 silos.

Pet Cemetery Seeks Permit

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — The Bubbling Well pet cemetery has asked for county permission to bury the cremated remains of pet owners next to their animals.

J. Calvin Harberts, cemetery president, said Tuesday more and more owners are expressing a desire to be buried with their pets.

"It's a phenomenon we weren't prepared for," Harberts said in explaining why he asked the county Planning Commission for a use permit. "For the people we're talking about, their dogs and cats are generally their families.

"They have no children. Once in a while we find people with children, but the children have let them down. The dogs and cats haven't."

He said Bubbling Well has received a dozen applications from persons wanting to be buried next to their pets on a hillside overlooking the picturesque Napa Valley.

Harberts said the cemetery covers 23 acres and there are 2,500 pets buried there. Most, he said, are dogs and cats but there are also pythons, roosters and parrots.

The Planning Commission will conduct a public hearing before deciding on whether to grant Bubbling Well the permit to bury the remains of humans at its cemetery.

Journalism Parley Speakers Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker and State Department spokesman Hodding Carter will be among the speakers this weekend at a journalism conference here.

Baker, frequently mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate, will address the Society of Professional Journalists Saturday night.

The conference is being dedicated to the memories of three newsmen killed in the line of duty — NBC correspondent Don Harris and cameraman Bob Brown, who died in Guyana, and Joe Alex Morris, the Los Angeles Times correspondent killed in Tehran, Iran.

Job's Perquisites Make Solons Tough To Beat

By JOHN G. HUBBELL

Ringing a doorbell in quest of a vote in Virginia's Tenth Congressional District last summer, Republican challenger Frank R. Wolf was invited in to explain his views. Asked at the same time to please bring in the morning mail, Wolf was dismayed to find himself delivering a piece of franked mail from his opponent, the Democratic incumbent Rep. Joseph L. Fisher.

It was the sixth "newsletter" or questionnaire in the past 18 months that Fisher had sent to every voter in the district. Mailings like these would have cost Wolf more than $90,000. But the congressman simply charged them off to the Treasury as "official business" and won re-election in November with 54 percent of the vote.

Last year taxpayers shelled out nearly $50 million for postage alone (up from just $6.5 million in fiscal 1966) for representatives and senators. And the mailing frank was only one of numerous taxpayer-supplied tools that incumbents used to perpetuate themselves in office. "The advantages of incumbency have become overwhelming," says Fred Wertheimer, vice president of the public-interest lobbying group, Common Cause. "In effect, congressional seats are owned by incumbents until they decide to give them up."

The record bears this out. Last year, of the 377 House members running for re-election, 358 — or 95 percent — won. In 1976 the figure was 97 percent. Even in 1974, the year of Watergate, a vastly unpopular presidential pardon and a deepening recession — a year when almost everyone forecast a historic house-cleaning in Washington — 90 percent of those incumbents who sought re-election were successful.

During his two-year term, a House member is given more than $1.1 million to spend. (Senators, with statewide constituencies, have proportionately more.) In theory, these large budgets are to enable members of Congress to cope with greater workloads and the growing federal bureaucracy — but much of this money is spent to keep the lawmakers in office. As Sen. Edward Zorinsky (D-Neb.) declared after less than a month on Capitol Hill, "The whole system seems geared to re-election."

Of all the incumbent's political tools, none is more vital than the frank, which enables him to saturate his district or state with postage-free mailings. In 1973 Common Cause went into federal court to charge misuse and to seek an injunction against Congressional mass mailings. While the suit still drags on because of lawyers' delaying actions, revealing depositions have been obtained from Congressional staffers.

For example, Lee MacGregor testified that in 1973 Sen. Jacob Javis (R-N.Y.) hired him for the staff of the Senate Small Business Committee. Javits was up for re-election in 1974, and MacGregor was a direct-mail expert. After being hired, the new federal employe presented Javits with an elaborate plan involving the use of franked mail designed to win the senator the "kind of identification that can be translated into a vote at the polls on election day."

MacGregor's plan was to avoid generalized, shotgun-type statewide mailings and to concentrate on special-interest groups: farmers-20,000 agriculture bulletins to farm areas; parents of school-children-150,000 letters describing Javits's efforts on behalf of school-bus safety; Republican leaders-22,000 letters throughout the state; and so on. MacGregor advised that occasionally he would recommend that the Senator co-sponsor bills "just so we can do a mailing" — for example, a resolution for a National Law Enforcement Officers Week so several thousand New York police chiefs could be told he had done so. In all, the plan called for some 700,000 pieces of election-oriented mail, toned to allow for franking as legitimate official business. And Javits, said MacGregor, approved it.

Another direct-mail expert, Joyce Baker, testified that she was on the federal payroll as a direct-mail consultant for a number of Republican senators. She said that the 1972 campaign of Sen. John Tower (R-Texas) opened in June with a franked personal letter welcoming new residents to Texas. Before election day, over 800,000 franked letters had been sent to more than 30 special interest groups.

The courts aghast at the embarrassment being caused by press reports of the depositions, decreed that senators involved were henceforth to be identified by a number code and not by name. Thus, direct-mail specialist Robert Jones showed how he had designed direct-mail campaigns for "Senator 12," "Senator 82" and "Senator 64."

To review such mass mailings, the House in late 1973 established a bipartisan Mailing Standards Commission. But this reform proved purely cosmetic. The commission routinely approve newsletters that are, says Common Cause, "indistinguishable from campaign literature." One that Rep. Herbert E. Harris II (D-Va.) mailed to every voter in his district is typical. The front page contains a large photograph of Harris and two columns of text wherein the pronoun "I" appears repeatedly. The reverse side is headlined "Harris Votes to Fight Inflation and Reduce Unemployment" — by "Federal Tax Cuts," "Increased Social Security Benefits," "Extended Aid to the Unemployed," and so on.

The franking law allows congratulatory messages to citizens who achieve distinction. And the commission has ruled that simply registering to vote is "both a personal and public distinction"! It is equally a distinction to graduate from high school, marry, have a baby, celebrate a 25th wedding anniversary. Indeed, get your name in the paper for virtually anything less than a dishonorable reason and your congressman is entitled — at public expense — to send you a clipping about yourself in a printed folder emblazoned, "I read something about you..." so long as his photograph does not appear on the folder.

In the early 1960s, a House member was entitled to a staff of nine. Today, he is authorized to have up to 18 and a payroll of $288,000. Senate staffs vary, depending on state population, but some senators have more than 75 staffers in their offices or hired to work on their various committees and subcommittees.

According to a suit filed in Washington, D.C., Sen. Howard Cannon (D-Nev.) dispatched his chief legislative aide to Nevada as a campaign coordinator in 1976. (The suit was dismissed on a legal technicality, but an appeal is pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals.) The Washington Post reported that members of Cannon's staff also acted as finance coordinator, precinct analyst, advance men and fund raisers in his successful re-election drive.

In 1977 a Senate Rules Committee analysis said that staffers may "engage in a senator's re-election campaign" as long as the staff member's Senate duties are not affected-a matters which, of course, the senator himself determines. Also, it was decided that two staff members should be allowed to solicit and receive funds on a senator's behalf.

At the Congressional recording studios. Representatives and senators turn out at minimal cost regular radio and TV shows, billed as special news reports for the folks back home. The average challenger would go broke in commercial studios trying to match this kind of visibility. Photographers are always on duty at the Capitol to snap and develop pictures of lawmakers meeting with Girl Scouts, campaign contributors and other constituents — and the taxpayer foots the bill.

Incumbents have myriad ways to demonstrate their power and influence. Members of Congress up for re-election can often schedule committee hearing back home, where local media will provide free publicity. The Washington Post reports that during the 93rd Congress, Senate committees held 190 days of hearings outside Washington — but frequently not where the subjects under discussion were of greatest concern. Instead, 163 days of these hearing were in the home states of Senators who were committee members.

Last fall, veteran Florida Congressman Claude Pepper faced a tough re-election challenge from a bright young Cuban-American. So Pepper, chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, promptly scheduled hearings on "Needs of the Hispanic Elderly" — in Miami, where there is a huge Hispanic community. Extensive publicity followed and, not surprisingly, the 78-year-old Pepper was re-elected.

Allies in the executive branch can aid a campaign with well-timed federal handouts. One week before the last election, Joseph Duffey, head of the National Endowment for the Humanities, flew into Indiana's Third Congressional District to announce grants totaling $425,000 to two local colleges. At his side as he made the announcement was Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.) — chairman of the House subcommittee with jurisdiction over Duffey's agency.

But such remains to be done. Strict laws should be passed governing use of the frank, the telephone and computer-personalized mailings, and effective methods should be devised to police such use.

Taxpayer-financed newsletters should be abolished. Congressmen who want to send them should get the money from their political supporters, not from the rest of us.

Many congressmen insist that the real key to making Congress truly representative is to limit service to 12 years, just as we limit presidential service to 8 years. Explains Rep. William Frenzel (R-Minn.), "The most effective congressman's is not someone who is sent to Washington at an early age and stays on to make a lifetime career of it. There are plenty of public-spirited citizens around who would gladly set aside a dozen years for service. And that, I believe is what the Founding Fathers had in mind."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Upper Crust Gets Dough

YOU MIGHT THINK that in this era of equal rights and cost-of-everything consciousness, there would be more pressure on the people's representatives to rectify inequality and require the government to give all citizens the same financial breaks.

You might think that. But that's not what's happening in a specialized corner of the market dealing in federal certificates.

Essentially six-month loans by private (well-heeled) citizens to the government, certificates technically are open to anyone. It's just that in actuality only the reasonably affluent can afford to participate.

NO ONE WITH a bit left over from household income and outgo or a modest tax refund need apply to the Treasury, since the minimum denomination is $10,000.

Now as high finance goes, that's not a lot of money. But it does rule out millions of small savers, those who can manage at most a couple of thousand dollars in a conventional bank account.

The difference is in the interest. The federal certificates pay roughly twice the current going rates of commercial banks.

Since the upper limit on these is fixed by law, the government with one hand is holding down the rate of return for the great body of small savers while with the other dishing out premium rates to a relative few with cash to spare.

Treasury is considering possibilities of opening up the certificate market to small savers through gradually lowering denominations to a $2,000 minimum and extending maturity periods.

Furthermore, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., this week noted the likelihood of action in Congress. Proxmire, who chairs the Senate Banking Committee, favors lowering the minimum in a single step to $1,000.

Savings interest rates might be permitted to rise to keep the private institutions competitive but that would present another dilemma since higher interest would inevitably translate into higher mortgage rates.

Problems in opening up the federal certificate market to more of the citizenry exist, of course. But they cannot excuse continuing an inequitable program in which a few are more equal than many others in financial dealings with our government of all the people.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Facts Is Facts

AS THE REPORTER who handled the bulk of the pre-election publicity on creation of the Lubbock County Hospital District in 1967, I probably can't settle a current argument but I can tell it like it was.

Members of the Lubbock County Commissioners Court and the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza County Medical Society got into a heated discussion on the subject the other day.

County Judge Rod Shaw and Commissioner Alton Brazell, the only two members of the Court who were serving in 1967, contended that the voters were sold on the idea that the primary purpose of the hospital district would be to build a teaching hospital for a hoped-for Texas Tech School of Medicine.

Some of the Medical Society folks argued with equal certainty that the main sales pitch in the pre-election publicity was that a charity hospital would be built to serve the medically indigent.

Judge Shaw and Commissioner Brazell are correct.

IT MAY NOT BE very smart of me to rush into the middle of this argument, but facts is facts is facts.

I have no way of knowing what was in the mind of any individual voter in 1967, but it is indisputable fact that the whole tenor of the pre-election "public education" campaign was pitched around the teaching hospital concept.

In fact, in the first of five articles discussing the proposed hospital district I quoted from a Chicago consulting firm's recommendations which "emphasized the district should not build its own hospital if the medical school is not established here."

"In this 'undesirable eventuality,' it (the consulting firm) concluded, the district could decline to sell its bonds, then cut taxes and merely contract with private hospitals for the care of (indigent) patients," the story added.

A BROCHURE entitled "The Importance of a Lubbock County Hospital District" was distributed to voters and it, too, emphasized that the district would be an investment aimed at securing a medical school.

From that brochure:

"One might logically ask, what is in it for me? What will the citizens of Lubbock County receive from this development?

"First of all, when the medical school is established on campus as a part of Texas Tech, it will strengthen the college and contribute significantly to its becoming a true multi-purpose university of the first class.

"It will add prestige to our area and produce opportunities for attracting other medically oriented facilities throughout the area. It will aid in attracting other business and industry to the area.

"The citizens of Lubbock County will receive a $10 million-plus installation (it turned out to be $50 million)...Staffing of the facility alone will add more than 230 new jobs to the economic strength of the area..."

After pausing to say "the hospital district would have the authority and responsibility to plan and develop a countywide health care program," the brochure turned back to its main theme: "Expenditures for the hospital district will result in a tenfold return to the local economy."

TRYING TO CONVINCE voters they should levy a tax on themselves to create the hospital district, the proponents bore down heavily on projections that a 40-cent tax per $100 valuation would be adequate until 1980.

As it turned out, the tax soon was raised to the 75-cent limit but, then, the economic benefits turned out to be far greater than had been projected, too.

Proponents pointed out that a part of the hospital district's tax would save county tax money already being spent on medical care for the indigents and other health programs.

He added: "We need a big vote to show we have strong community support for a medical school...The hospital district is needed even if we don't get a medical school...Whatever you do for a living, new payrolls will benefit you..."

It was on those arguments that the hospital district was created and a medical school was secured.

Holmes Alexander:

Old Tricks Can't Lick This Fix

WASHINGTON—The U.S. has been in many a fix since 1776, but not many historians would say a worse one than now. This is not to preach defeatism, but to rally an informed and endangered people.

Valley Forge was a crisis in besiegement where desertion was a problem. British invasion was improbable as the chain of forts extended from the Great Lakes to the western mountains.

But in 1814, the capital city fell, a traditional prelude to national collapse, but the enemy lacked ground forces.

In the spring of 1861, at the first battle of Manassas, the Confederates routed the federal army but did not try to take the city from sheer fatigue.

TODAY HAVING repeated the historic Roman mistake of relying on foreign allies, the U.S. is in a desperate condition, as every official except possibly the President knows, and only the rise of a heroic leader or a death-before-dishonor spirit in the people is going to keep us in tact and invulnerable.

Though I treat gossip and amateur diagnosis with skeptical disrespect, there are signs that Jimmy Carter is far out of his depth in the Presidency.

He has lost Iran as shamefully as Johnson-Nixon-Ford lost Vietnam, after Kennedy had shown the white feather in Cuba. Carter's behavior with Vice Premier Teng was ludicrous if not craven.

He will and he won't defend Taiwan, depending on the last group of reporters he addresses or the last advisor he hears.

HE HAD preached human rights like Woodrow Wilson, preached his personal messiahship for world order, and we must now think of Carter as subject to the same egomania that befell so many Presidents.

Jimmy Carter has, whether accidentally or systematically, degraded Israel until this one solid, beligerent dominion of the American Empire is brought to heel as a submissive colony.

Carter still has over 80 percent of the polled population saying "Yah" for SALT, meaning they prefer peace, a negotiated strategic disarmament to an all-out war.

But the experts, chiefly Sen. Scoop Jackson and his staff, who have studied the treaty's fine print, are very apt to demand amendments which the Soviet Union will not accept, or are in a mood to junk SALT entirely in favor of full preparedness and essential supremacy.

To me, by far the most alarming sign of national disintegration is the sending of Defense Sec. Brown, third man in the cabinet, and a physical scientist by training, as an arms merchant to mechanically-ignorant, oil-rich Saudi Arabia, along with anti-Israel Arabia, as well as North Yemen and Sudan.

The idea of sending him on such a mission is another admission of confusion on the part of the President.

Just recently the Evans-Novak column carried an inside the White House piece in which two freshmen Senators of the minority party read the riot act to the Commander-in-Chief, notably Armstrong of Colorado and Cohen of Maine.

They told him the great U.S. has become a paper tiger to the world. They fear that Soviet Russia is poised to beat us at every turn—in NATO, at sea, at the exchange of nuclear missiles.

The worst of it was that Carter behaved as if he were hearing it all for the first time. And the suspicion is that we have a President who is mazed and dazed at the job before him.

Sylvia Porter:

Your Castle, A Hassle But Worth Every Cent

HAVE YOU ever tried to catch a bus that already has passed your bus stop—and found that even though you run as fast as you can, you fall farther and farther behind?

If so, you recognize the profile of today's housing market to countless numbers of Americans who are yearning to buy their first home.

Every time you get ready to buy, prices take another giant leap upward. Despite your regular salary hikes.

The impact of steep inflation—plus an ever bigger tax bite resulting from the fact that your pay increases push you into higher and higher tax brackets—leaves you standing still. And without your dream house.

What to do?

TAKE THE plunge. Buy a house while you are still young, and buy a dwelling you can barely afford.

If you don't have enough cash for the down payment, borrow from your relatives, on your life insurance, cash in your U.S. Savings bonds, sell the second car, get another job, and save, save, save.

Though you may want to wait until interest rates decline, any savings you achieve from lower interest rates probably will be more than offset by higher housing prices.

This is the blunt, unqualified advice of two leading housing experts, Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Assn. of Home Builders, and Ronald G. Shafer, former housing reporter for the Wall Street Journal who is now an editor with its Washington bureau.

IN THEIR forthcoming book, "The Complete Book of Home Buying, A Consumer's Guide to Today's Inflationary Housing Market," (April, Dow Jones, $11.95), Sumichrast and Shafer make a compelling case for joining the home buying spree, despite its dizzying pace.

Average new home prices will be pushed to an awesome $78,000 by the early 1980s and possibly to $90,000 by the mid-1980s, they forecast.

The combination of inflation and exploding numbers of eager buyers will send prices for existing homes to unheard-of peaks, too.

Drawing on the substantial resources of both the NAHB and Wall Street Journal reporters the nation over, the authors have compiled a comprehensive, yet lively, guide to:

The financial and tax advantages of home ownership; how to get a toehold in the market; what makes a good investment; how to trade up; which improvements add value to your home; and the pros and cons of buying condominiums as well as old vs. new or delapidated houses.

THERE ARE few befuddling "howevers," or "on the other hand" dodges. For instance, the authors told my associate, Brooke Shearer, to counsel you, as a first-time buyer to:

* Buy a house you can scarcely afford, even though a small, old converted condo or townhouse may be the cheapest available housing.

"If you think you can afford a $40,000 house," they argue, "chances are that you could, if you really stretched it out, afford a $50,000 house."

Initially your housing costs may eat up a larger than normal share of your income, but the share will shrink quickly as inflation, if nothing else, pushes up your earnings.

* Buy off season—in the November-December period or after a heavy snow, when no one is on the roads, or during the hot months of July and August when most people are on vacation.

* Look for homes located outside metro areas where land is cheaper.

* Try to beat the crowds and get a house more cheaply by learning all you can as early as possible about homes or new subdivisions coming on the market.

* FIND OUT now what your company's policy is on helping you to move, buy and sell houses.

Because it's difficult these days to lure many valued employes into moving, some firms pay closing costs, others actually buy (and sell) homes themselves, and still others will pay the difference between an executive's higher new mortgage and his old one.

* Make an offer on a house you want even though it may seem low. You cannot with certainty predict a seller's reaction. Your bid may be the only one he receives, or other offers he gets may fall through and yours may be the only bid left.

* Remember: "The only way to buy is to buy."

James J. Kilpatrick:

A BB By A CC Is A No-No...

WASHINGTON—Most of the state governors were in Washington last week—a number of state legislators, too—and most of the talk has been about the BB amendment and its several ramifications.

By the BB amendment, of course, is meant the movement to submit an amendment to the Constitution that would require the federal government to operate on a balanced budget.

The ramifications involve the possibility of a constitutional convention to draft such an amendment. Most of the speculation focuses upon the prospect that Congress may forestall a convention by proposing a resolution of its own.

My own guess, for what it may be worth, is that little will result from these several streams but a veritable Niagara of oratory.

TWENTY-EIGHT states reportedly have adopted resolutions under Article V, applying to Congress to call a constitutional convention; the magic number is 34.

But many of the petitions are conditional—they ask for a convention only if Congress fails to act—and others are defective in other ways.

The aggrieved states ask the Supreme Court for relief. The Court orders a convention held and creates the machinery itself.

Delegates are elected, the convention meets, and eventually the convention submits half a dozen proposed amendments to the states—balanced budget, abortion, busing, pornography, prayer in public schools, and limited terms for members of the House and Senate.

THE WHOLE country would be up to its collar bones in constitutional law. It all sounds pretty far-fetched to me, and this is not to put anything past the judges.

If judges can compel New Jersey to raise taxes, if judges can turn themselves into school superintendents, if judges can reapportion state legislatures and make a President give up his papers, well, then, judges could fashion a whole constitutional convention.

But don't hold your breath till it happens.

Hearings will be held this month on some of the 20 or 30 different resolutions that already have been introduced.

MOST OF these resolutions are so clumsily drafted that a James Madison, reading them, would weep tears of dismay. The worst of the lot, sad to say, bears the aegis of my favorite economist, Milton Friedman of Chicago.

He would write into the Constitution a wordy provision that if inflation in a given year exceeds 3 percent, "the permissible percentage increase in total outlays shall be reduced by one-fourth of the excess of inflation over 3 percent," and so on.

This is not constitutional language, this is statutory language, and it has no place in the supreme law of the land.

SEN. BOB DOLE, R-Kan., for example, would fix a ceiling of 18 percent of the GNP. Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., proposes 20 percent. The actual figure for last year was 22 percent.

The best of the sorry lot are the brief resolutions sponsored in the Senate by Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and in the House by Delbert Latta and Chalmers Wylie, both of Ohio.

Their drafts at least have a constitutional ring to them.

They would say flatly that Congress shall assure that in any fiscal year, the government's total outlays must not exceed total receipts; their proposals would permit Congress to suspend the requirement by a two-thirds or three-fourths vote.

MY GUESS is that we will have hearings, and we will have talk, and that ultimately procrastination will prove the better part of valor.

The polls indicate that Americans overwhelmingly want to curb federal spending. If the states' pressure succeeds in achieving statutory restraints, wonderful!

But if the end is constitutional amendment, let us make haste in boots of lead.

DR. LAMB

Educate Reflexes

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am an 83-year-old woman and in good health except for constipation, which I've had most of my life. I take Metamucil for bulk and about one-fourth teaspoon of Senokot. Also, I take mineral oil for lubrication and that seems to help.

I drink lots of water, get exercise and drive my own car. I only weigh 82 pounds and I'm 4 feet 11 inches tall. What is the best time for me to take medicine like I'm taking? Should I take mineral oil at bedtime on an empty stomach? Also, I take Metamucil and the Senokot in a glass of milk. Should this be taken at bedtime too? Kindly get me straight.

DEAR READER — I'm sorry to hear that you're taking so many things for your bowel function. Sometimes it's very difficult to reverse such a pattern, particularly if it is a long-standing habit of many years as seems to be your case.

The bowel usually functions normally in most people if it's not abused.

Unfortunately, many people do abuse the colon by using harsh laxatives, eating the wrong foods and developing habits that don't permit the colon to establish its own rhythm and natural function.

Senokot is a chemical laxative. I am sending you the Health Letter number 12-8, Laxatives, Enemas and Suppositories, to give you more information on these products. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Chemical laxatives stimulate the colon to contract and it is wrong to take these all the time.

Mineral oil has a lot of drawbacks and I think the best choice here would be to stop it entirely. People who use mineral oil sometimes make it difficult for their own small intestine to absorb important vitamins and minerals. Besides that, part of the mineral oil is absorbed and is treated as a foreign body inside the organs. Then, of course, it has the unpleasant social problem of sometimes leaking through the rectum. I'm afraid I just can't recommend mineral oil.

The Metamucil, of course, provides bulk. Often that is what a person needs and, hopefully, most people will get it from natural food products. The best ones are the cereal fibers which you can get from whole grain cereals that provide bran.

A proper diet that includes a sufficient amount of bulk, and adequate amount of liguids and an exercise program and proper bowel training to a long way toward solving the problems of chronic constipation.

How do you train the bowel? You eat a good breakfast that includes an adequate amount of bran and at least two large glasses of fluids and then go to the bathroom. You make the trip to the bathroom daily, whether or not there is any elimination. You may need to use an enema every three days or so until the reflex action is established. In the course of time, by following this ritual, you can educate the natural reflexes that occur in your body and solve your problem.

You can take your Metamucil any time of the day or even twice a day, if you wish, or you can use foods that contain bulk for breakfast and other meals as well. I would surely like to see you get off the chemical laxative habit and the mineral oil.

DES Test Results Encouraging

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A synthetic drug that raised the fear of cancer among millions of women may be less dangerous than previously believed, a Boston pathologist says.

Only four cancers of the genital tract were found among a total of 3,339 daughters of women who took the synthetic estrogen DES — diethylstilbestrol — during the 1940s and 1950s to prevent miscarriage, Dr. Stanley Robboy of Massachusetts General Hospital said earlier this week.

"The results are very encouraging, but no one knows what will happen when these women grow older," said Robboy, who heads a study begun two years ago.

As the women under study grow older, Robboy said, researchers plan to study their ability to conceive and have children. The children will also be studied, he said.

Robboy reported his findings to a meeting of the International Academy of Pathology. His study, financed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is being published in the March issue of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

A 1971 study based in Boston discovered a link between the synthetic hormone and cancer in the daughters of women who took it. Another study at the University of Chicago found that there was a higher incidence of breast cancer among DES mothers.

Researchers also found that the drug affected males. A Baylor University researcher found that between 20 percent and 25 percent of the sons of women who took DES suffered urogenital tract problems, testicular abnormalities, infertility or low sperm count.

The drug, involved in controversy and lawsuits against drug companies, was administered to between 500,000 and 3 million women before it was banned in 1972 by the Food and Drug Administration.

The latest study found that the DES threat might affect between 1 in 1,000 and 1 in 10,000 daughters of women who took the drug, said Robboy, an associate professor at Harvard University.

By reviewing their mothers' medical records, Robboy said 1,275 women were identified for study purposes. Among those, he said, no cancers were found.

Study Shows Possible Mutagens

HOUSTON (AP) — A genetics researcher from the University of Vermont says a type of white blood cells may tell scientists which chemicals and other environmental agents are likely to trigger hereditary changes and cancer in humans.

Dr. Richard Albertini described his three years of research on the quick and inexpensive testing procedure in a lecture at the M.D. Anderson Hospital.

In Albertini's procedure, white blood cells called lymphocytes are isolated and tested for cell mutations that could signal hereditary changes or cancer.

Previous testing was conducted on laboratory animals over long periods and at considerable cost. The Albertini procedure uses human blood cells rather than bacteria to indicate possible hereditary changes or cancer.

Albertini believes the procedure, in addition to detecting environmental carcinogens or mutagens, could help prevent excessive use of chemotherapy in treating cancer and other diseases.

"While these drugs are very valuable, the trend is to use more and more of them," Alertini said. "At some point we are going to have to consider what the genetic risks are to the individual and the next generation."

Auto Buyers Eye Economy

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
United Press International Writer

The promise of ascending gasoline prices and the threat of rationing has some motorists trading in their gas-guzzlers, while others dismiss the problem as fictitious. Most Americans, however, are waiting to see if the dire predictions prove true.

President Carter, prompted by world pressure on U.S. oil consumption and the Iranian oil shutoff, has drafted a series of contingency gasoline conservation measures ranging from weekend closure of service stations to rationing.

To underline the legislation, there were predictions of 4-to 10-cent rises in the cost of auto fuel and warnings of possible spot gas shortages this summer.

Car dealers across the country say customers are now asking more questions about mile-per-gallon ratings for all vehicles, but they differ on the impact the predicted fuel crunch has had on auto buyers.

"A lot of new car buyers are looking for economy cars. They are concerned about being able to buy gasoline, whether it'll be available and not the price of the car," said Bill Whitehead of Roberts Lincoln-Mercury of Knoxville, Tenn.

"People come in and say, 'I want something that will give me better gas mileage.' This has brought about a whole new element in buying these cars," said Elliott Hersh of Lee Klinger Volkswagen in Chicago.

But the talk about fuel efficiency rarely translates into action for buyers of luxury cars. "Purchasers of large cars don't have to worry about it," John Kleindienst of Manhattan Ford observed.

From Atlanta to Los Angeles, Cadillac and Lincoln dealers report no significant dip in sales. Some even report a record year. But they are quick to point out that mileage ratings for large cars also have improved.

"The people who are scared, just aren't Cadillac buyers anyway. And people who know Cedillacs know we're not getting six and seven miles a gallon like we used to," said Gene Young of Rodgers Cadillac in Knoxville.

Business may be bustling for new large cars, but used car dealers tell a slightly different tale of gasoline-gobbling vehicles starting to glut lots and smaller used cars commanding better prices.

"We're having a lot of people coming in with big cars looking to trade them in for smaller ones," said Milt Bass, owner of Midwest Toyota in Chicago. He said the trade-ins range from four-wheel drive vehicles to Oldsmobiles.

Small car dealers across the country said fuel efficiency-minded buyers started arriving around the first of the year and the influx has gained momentum since the federal gasoline conservation plans were announced.

"Our stocks have been limited for the past 90 days. About 40 percent are people who would be buying a car anyway, but the other 60 percent are in because of gasoline prices and supply," Lee Stang of Mountain State Volkswagen in Denver said.

Dealerships that handle the full range of vehicles from subcompacts to luxury models also report a shift in attention.

"A couple of models we couldn't move all last year, like Pintos and Fiestas, we sold them all in the last three weeks. And I haven't heard a sarcastic remark about a Pinto in weeks," said Mark Hart of Dave Markley Ford in Dallas.

But doubts about the severity and the reality of the gasoline crunch linger.

Cal Worthington, who claims to sell more automobiles from his Los Angeles new and used car lots than any dealer in the world, said the trend has been noticeable, but most people have a wait-and-see attitude.

"The public simply thinks that all these alarms about running out of gasoline are poppycock," Worthington said. "People come in and tell us that the shortage is being manufactured to jack up prices."

FTC Head Praises Auto Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission Wednesday switched from criticism of the auto industry to praise for automakers' test programs designed to resolve consumer complaints.

FTC head Michael Pertschuk commended Chrysler Corp. as it announced a test program in Nassau County, N.Y., to resolve warranty disputes.

"Chrysler's program will operate under FTC guidelines, which we anticipate will ensure fair, fast and impartial decisions, while avoiding the need for expensive legal proceedings," Pertschuk said.

He said Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. have programs that are similar but not under the FTC guidelines.

"These, too, are a step in the right direction," said Pertschuk. "In addition, we anticipate seeing automotive importers follow the lead of domestic producers in the dispute resolution area."

The FTC, under Pertschuk's leadership, has taken several major steps against automakers. A major pending case accuses Ford of failing to tell consumers about manufacturing defects it knew about.

The auto industry actions and Pertschuk's statement may be an effort at peace between the activist agency and the industry over the subject of consumer dissatisfaction with car defects.

The six-month Chrysler test program includes allowing an independent panel to hear disputes under a 40-day deadline to resolve them.

Pertschuk said too many disputes over new car defects, warranty service and "lemons" have gone unresolved and consumers have either taken the loss or had to file an expensive and time-consuming lawsuit.

"Both of these situations represent a waste of consumer and public resources. Chrysler's program is designed to bring these disputes to a quick conclusion under FTC rules that give consumers an opportunity to air their grievances to an independent panel," he said.

Pertschuk said the FTC staff would work with Chrysler officials to monitor the program's progress. "I also hope that we will be able to learn from Chrysler how the (FTC) guidelines can be improved to make these programs more attractive to businesses, yet still fair to consumers," he said.

Chrysler Asks Suppliers To Cut Prices

DETROIT (AP) — Financially troubled Chrysler Corp. is asking its suppliers to cut prices and is exploring financial help from the state, according to published reports Wednesday.

The Detroit Free Press said supplier sources report the No. 3 automaker has appealed to some firms for a 2 percent cutback while other companies were asked for a 1 percent reduction.

In another story from Lansing, the Detroit News said Chrysler executives, including Chairman John Riccardo, had met with state Budget Director Gerald Miller to discuss how the state could help.

Chrysler refused to comment on the reports.

Despite a profit in the fourth quarter, Chrysler last year lost $204.6 million, its second-worst year ever. Also last year, the U.S. Economic Development Administration rejected $290 million in loan guarantees for the company.

Several companies were said to be cool to Chrysler's request, others indicated they might shave prices on larger orders and still others said they were uncertain what to do. But no outright rejections were reported.

In Lansing, Robert Kleine, head of the state Revenue and Tax Analysis Department, was quoted as saying, "We really don't have a lot of options, but federal government assistance is the one we like best."

Kleine said federal safety, pollution and fuel requirements that Chrysler says will force expenditures of $7.5 billion by the middle of the next decade were "responsible to a great degree for its difficulties. It's not just a matter of Chrysler losing money on auto sales."

Journalism Students Sue Hospital District

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock County Hospital District was sued Wednesday by three Texas Tech University student journalists who claim the district's board of managers has "flagrantly and openly disregarded" state laws on public meetings and public records.

The plaintiffs, members of the staff of The University Daily, Tech's student newspaper, are seeking an injunction to prevent future occurrences of the alleged violations.

Most of the reported violations, dating back to 1975, involve inadequate posting of agendas for board meetings.

The suit said the board has met at least 13 times without "filing an agenda within the specified time span." By law, an agenda must be posted at least 72 hours before the board convenes for a regular or special session. However, the suit contends the hospital board has convened upon as little as 20 hours' public notice.

Most of the other allegations concern times when the board reportedly convened in closed sessions without first citing provisions of the Open Meetings Law allowing it to do so.

The plaintiffs said the hospital district also has refused to turn over tapes of meetings they have requested to hear.

One passage of the seven-page complaint questions the board's 1977 hiring of Gerald Bosworth as executive director of the district and the district-owned Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The plaintiffs said they "can find no record of a public vote in an open meeting having ever been held in regards to the hiring of Mr. Bosworth, all in flagrant violation of the spirit and letter of the Open Meetings Law."

Unless the board is enjoined from future violations, the plaintiffs said they "will continue to have inadequate notice of meetings, although specific notice is required by state law, and plaintiffs will continue to be denied access to information."

The plaintiffs are Gary Skrehart, editor of The University Daily; Janet Warren, news editor; and Tod Robberson, reporter.

School Segregation Still Exists Despite Decision

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

It has been a quarter-century since a decision in Washington, D.C., shook the nation's schools — or was meant to shake them.

The Supreme Court of the United States ruled, in "Brown v. Board of Education," that racial segregation in public education is unconstitutional.

So what happened during the first 25 years since the decision? And where does the matter stand now?

Some things happened, but not enough to rub out segregation. The nation's schools, most anyway, aren't desegregated and so critics say the schools have failed to give all children the constitutional right inherent in the court's decision.

One of those critics is the "National Task Force on Desegregation Strategies" which, in a position statement marking the 25th anniversary, argues that:

1. There is still no clear national commitment toward the fulfillment of the principle of desegregation.

2. There is "no progress" in the study group, headed by Francis Keppel, former U.S. Commissioner of Education and Director of Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies.

It is co-sponsored by the Education Commission of the States, the Council of Chief State School Officers, and the National Association of State Boards of Education. It is funded by the Ford Foundation, the National Institute of Education and the U.S. Office of Education.

The first public statement from the group "represents the combined views of members on the need for further action to promote school desegregation in equal educational opportunity," Keppel said.

"School desegregation is right for America," the position statement starts. It continues:

"But being right has not been enough to bring it about. Candor compels us to note a seemingly intractible reality: racial bias is still pervasive. Its effects stem from a myriad of causes, most of which are institutional.

"Government policies and practices which result in school segregation still exist.

"Deliberate public policy ceated school segregation and deliberate public policy will be required to eliminate it."

Analysis

The Task Force said "important progress" has been made in the South and Southwest. On the other hand, it said:

—"Segregation of black children is at a standstill in the Midwest and is increasing in the Northeast."

—"Across the nation, segregation is increasing for Hispanic children."

—"During the past decade, no significant progress has been made in lessening the intense residential and school segregation which exists within the nation's largest cities. Desegregation gains in some large cities, however, prove that it can be done."

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 established a federal policy for ending segregation in the schools. But according to the Task Force:

"The years since 1964 have been marked by deliberate attempts to undermine that policy. The Congress has restricted federal administrative enforcement of desegregation by passing measures designed to limit the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's ability to enforce the Civil Rights Act.

"The Supreme Court has stepped back from its leadership role. In part, this retreat is due to the perception that desegregation is too costly. Much of the cost, however, stems from resistance to desegregation, than from desegregation itself."

Progress toward desegration, according to the Task Force, will come only when state officials adopt these twin goals:

1. Reduce racial isolation.

2. Achieve equal educational opportunity.

Steps recommended at the state level:

—Pass laws establishing a state policy of equal educational opportunity.

—Write state board of education rules or regulations establishing compliance and enforcement procedures.

—Set guidelines to aid districts in creating integrated schools.

Cocaine, Pot Pose Severe Problems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heroin no longer poses the most severe drug problem for the United States, say government experts, but high-grade Colombian cocaine and marijuana have moved right in to take its place.

Peter Bensinger, head of the Drug Enforcement Agency, and Mathea Falco, assistant Secretary of State for narcotics, this week pointed to a dramatic decrease in purity of the heroin sold on the streets, plus record-high prices, as evidence of a substantial drop in availability of the addictive drug.

The purity of street-level heroin was 6.6 percent in March 1976, Bensinger said, but only 3.5 percent in 1978 — a 47 percent decrease. Meanwhile, the price per miligram of pure heroin has risen from $1.26 in March 1976 to $2.19 in the most recent reporting period, or a 74 percent increase.

"This reported national retail price and purity is the lowest since 1971," he told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on narcotics.

"These two criteria are the traditional means of measuring drug availability and are clear indications of significantly reduced supplies of heroin for American drug abusers," Ms. Falco said.

Besides a drop in the number of heroin addicts in the United States, the witnesses said the lack of potency in the available heroin means fewer people are dying or being injured from overdose.

Mexico, which in 1975 was the source of nearly 90 percent of heroin entering the United States, now accounts for only 56 percent. Bensinger attributed the drop to Mexico's opium poppy eradication program.

Miss Falco said, however, the State Department is concerned that efforts to stop the flow of heroin from Pakistan and Afghanistan, the largest opium production areas in the world, may suffer as a result of political unrest in those countries.

As the heroin use has dropped, the use and availabiity of cocaine has grown, the experts said.

Miss Falco estimated that 70 percent of the cocaine in the United States come from or through Colombia. Bensinger said most of the Colombian cocaine is manufactured from coca grown in Peru and Bolivia, and enforcement efforts are hampered by Colombia's "wide open borders."

Colombia also has replaced Mexico as the main source of marijuana coming into the United States.

DEA estimates 60 to 70 percent of the imported marijuana comes from Colombia, Bensinger said. The Mexican share of the marijuana market has dropped from 90 percent five years ago to about 30 percent now, he said, primarily because of the government's use of the dangerous herbicide paraquat to curtail production.

"Consequently, there is less marijuana available and 'untainted' marijuana from other countries, such as Jamacia and Colombia, became more in demand," Bensinger said.

"Marijuana remains along with cocaine the severe drug problem in the United States," Bensinger said.

Figures Indicate Education Gap Narrowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The education gap between blacks and whites is narrowing, with black students enrolling in college more than they did a decade ago, according to new Census Bureau figures.

The government survey also found that black students are dropping out of high school less and making a significant improvement in keeping up with the proper grade for their age.

"We are improving, but the gap is still there," said Carol Gibson, director of education for the National Urban League in New York.

She said that while blacks now are enrolling in college in about the same proportion as whites, many are merely going to local two-year colleges and not getting full four-year training and diplomas.

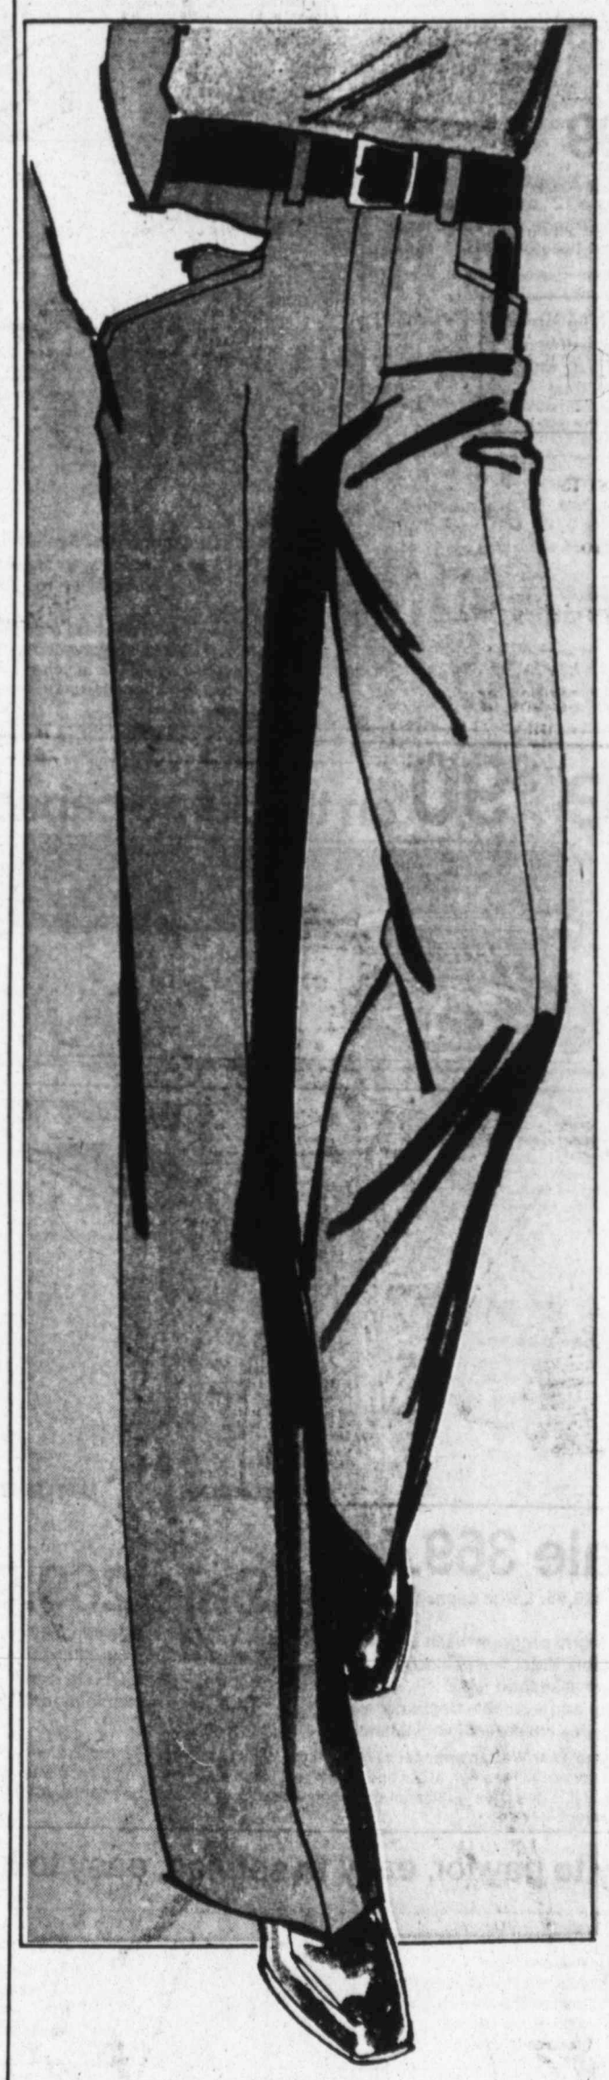

The government study found that blacks now make up 11 percent of the college population, which is just under their 13 percent overall proportion in the population.

The number of blacks who dropped out of high school decreased from 35 percent in 1967 to 25 percent in 1977, the Census Bureau said. The dropout rate for whites was 14 percent in 1977.

The study also found that 18 percent of all black students aged 16 and 17 were at least two years behind their proper grade in 1967. Ten years later, that figure had dropped to 10 percent. It was 3 percent for whites.

U.S. Businesses Ignore Energy-Saving Measures

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

How has American business responded to the soaring costs of energy and the threats of shortages in the years ahead?

Very poorly, asserts an Atlanta-based energy management expert whose rapidly growing consulting business has given him an unusual overview of how a broad spectrum of U.S. companies is dealing internally with the energy problem.

American businessmen are largely ignoring the substantial cost savings they can make in mounting energy bills by adopting energy-conservation programs, according to E. Milton Bevington, president of Servidyne Inc. What's more, he adds, they are leaving themselves ill-prepared for the inevitable shortages that he believes lie ahead.

Despite the shock of the Arab oil embargo five years ago and the successive jolts of soaring prices and short supplies that followed, most companies have failed to focus on the importance of adopting a comprehensive energy-conservation program, he says. At the same time, however, some of them have gone in the opposite direction and thrown money at the problem in wasteful amounts.

"Companies have been besieged by hundreds of salesmen, all of them offering a way of cutting energy costs by 25 percent," Bevington told us. "The joke going around is that all you have to do is find four such systems and all your energy problems are solved."

But he gets serious when he talks of how most businesses have failed to come to grips with the energy question and of the mistakes that have been made. "Some companies have purchased computers to turn off their lights," he noted. "That's like using a pile-driver to crack a walnut." Others, he said, have ignored the problem altogether.

"The responses have ranged from those few companies — certainly less than 5 percent — which have instituted a planned program of rational energy management, to a group in the middle which has bought some equipment and let it go at that, to a considerable group of companies which has done nothing at all," Bevington said.

"This is amazing," he added, "when you realize that not only can immediate dollar savings be realized at very low cost, but that proper measures taken now can prepare a company for possible energy shortages — with their accompanying major production losses — in the future."

Bevington, who holds a chemical engineering degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an M.B.A. from the Harvard Graduate School of Business and was executive vice president of the Trane Co. before starting his own company, likes to stress the point that initial savings can be achieved at virtually no cost. The money thus saved, he says, can then be invested in new equipment and modifications to produce even greater savings.

"Invariably," he contends, "savings to from 10 to 15 percent can be realized immediately by making existing air-conditioning and heating equipment do a better job." This involves such mundane things as fine-tuning the system, including cleaning the coils, changing filters and making sure that heat exchanges and towers are clean."

"Isn't this done routinely?" he was asked.

"The owners of the buildings think it is, but it usually isn't" was his response.

"The interesting thing about working your way into an energy-management program in a step-by-step way is that the savings you make in the beginning can pay for the outlays you make further on," he added. "It becomes a self-liquidating process."

There are a number of reasons, Bevington believes, why most companies haven't dealt realistically with energy management. First, he says, it's not a top-management function in most businesses. "It sort of falls between the chairs and nothing gets done."

Also, he notes, "it's made to order for a 'show' solution — that is, somebody can write a memo or buy an expensive piece of equipment and thereby 'solve' the problem."

Finally, he adds, despite such sobering news as the recent oil-price increase, "there are frequent stories about big oil finds, solar energy and other possible developments that have a lulling effect on people — which encourage a feeling that perhaps there really isn't an energy problem."

Aside from the fact that Bevington strongly contends that there will be an energy shortage by the early 1980's, he sees the savings right now as more than enough justification for adopting sound energy-management measures.

"It just makes good sense to cut energy costs and thereby contribute to a more profitable operation," he contends. "Energy costs are so high today that one of the best investments any manager can make is in energy conservation. And a great deal of that investment, especially at the front end, results in a high rate of return. We've seen rates of return as high as 40, 50 and 60 percent."

'No-Name' Products Sell Well

By KRISTIN GOFF
Associated Press Writer

At Harry Hoffman's Liquors in Denver, what you see is what you get.

Plain white labels identify the products simply as bourbon, scotch, gin or vodka. The liquor is 80 proof and labels meet government standards on bottling information. But no manufacturer claims the product and there are no ways to prejudge taste.

Do customers care? At savings of about 40 percent off of name-brand labels, many apparently don't.

"Business is going phenomenally well. We sell it as fast as we get it," says Rick Bugdanowitz, president of Hoffman's. Since July, he estimates he has sold about 120,000 bottles of no-name liquor in his store, many to repeat customers.

While others in the industry have doubts that no-name liquor can break the traditional brand loyalty of most customers in that industry, it has already made substantial inroads in the supermarket industry. About 120 chains with thousands of stores across the country have begun marketing low-priced, no-name products.

The products, usually in cans and boxes with plain white labels, go by a variety of names, including generic, no-names and no-frills products.

But in general they offer lower-priced and lower-quality items for customers who want them. Tissues, for instance, are usually white and don't pop out of the box. Peas may be of uneven color and size.

Taste is a matter of judgment, and says Naaman Siegle, an economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "there is no nutritional difference," in the lower-grade products that usually are used in generic products. While national or store brand goods are often USDA graded A or B, generics are more frequently graded C.

Still, Siegle estimates savings on certain items can be up to 40 percent, and on average the cost of no-names is about 15 percent less than that of a store's own brand and 25 percent less than national brands.

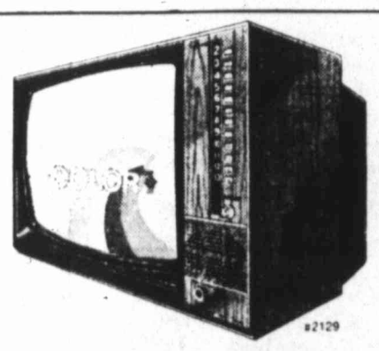

While the idea of selling peas, in plain white cans, labeled "Peas," may seem simple enough, in practice the trend toward generics has created a stir in the industry.

Some grocers, for instance, worry that sales of generics at lower prices might hurt sales of their own house brands. Others argue that generics will go the way of trading stamps, modified bingo-games and other techniques markets have used in the past to lure customers.

"I suspect it is more of a promotional gimmick than a major change in marketing," says George Quint, an analyst at Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. He notes, for instance, that most stores carrying generics stock a limited number of 25 to 30 items out of 8,000 to 11,000 items typical for a large store.

Thrift Institutions Concerned

NEW YORK (AP) — At almost any other time, the savings and loan associations would have been gladdened by the cascade of money that spilled into their vaults in January. But now they're uncertain.

The mixed mood demonstrates again how unpredictable is this aspect of finance, in which the deposits of small savers are aggregated to provide loans to homebuyers. S&Ls are the biggest mortgage lenders.

In January, despite a drop in the national savings rate to only 4.6 percent of takehome pay, the S&Ls attracted an avalanche of $4.4 billion in net savings, that is, after deducting for withdrawals.

Since these so-called thrift institutions exist almost solely by lending out at higher interest rates the funds deposited in savings accounts, you're justified in asking what it takes to make them smile.

The answer: A better spread; the ability to earn more on loans than they must pay on savings. Increasingly, S&L managers are concerned about their ability to do so. They're beginning to feel boxed in.

As a result, loan commitments fell 4 percent at the very time deposits poured into their vaults like coal chuted into a bin. Fewer loans were offered, and may-be fewer were sought by customers as well.

The irony of this is that the situation emanates in part from an instrument designed to save the S&Ls, the six-month savings certificate, which carries an interest rate close to 10 percent.

Analysis

Understandably, depositors like the device, even though the interest is guaranteed for only half a year, finding it far more desirable than the usual 5.25 percent offered on conventional passbook savings.

The savings certificates, approved last year by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and first offered in June, are designed to keep money from flowing out of thrift institutions at times of generally high interest.

Before this, you see, the thrifts were unable to chase rising interest rates in the same manner, for example, as commercial banks. The law limited interest paid so as to keep mortgage lending rates low too.

But this created the problem of disintermediation, in which depositors withdrew their funds and invested them in the money markets directly, without going through an intermediary, such as the thrift institution.

Without money to lend, the S&Ls were just about out of business, and so too was the housing industry. Federal regulators decided, therefore, to permit them to pay higher interest rates for limited times.

Now the S&Ls have lots of cash, but they've got the old problem too. With mortgage rates also around 10 percent, they find themselves without a spread. Besides, borrowers are becoming reluctant to borrow.

Another complication has developed. While the high-paying certificates were designed to attract new money, that hasn't always been the case. Instead, money is often withdrawn from low-yield passbook accounts.

The certificates, which pay a quarter percent more than six-month Treasury bills, are therefore falling into some disfavor among the thrifts. And if Treasury bill rates rise, the situation is worsened.

Should that occur, some thrifts have indicated they'll drop out of the race. Why persist, when the payout cannot be reclaimed through higher mortgage rates, which in many states are limited by law.

Dilemma: How do you withdraw from the competition without running into the old bugaboo of disintermediation? Won't depositors simply withdraw their funds and seek higher rates elswhere? That's the rub.

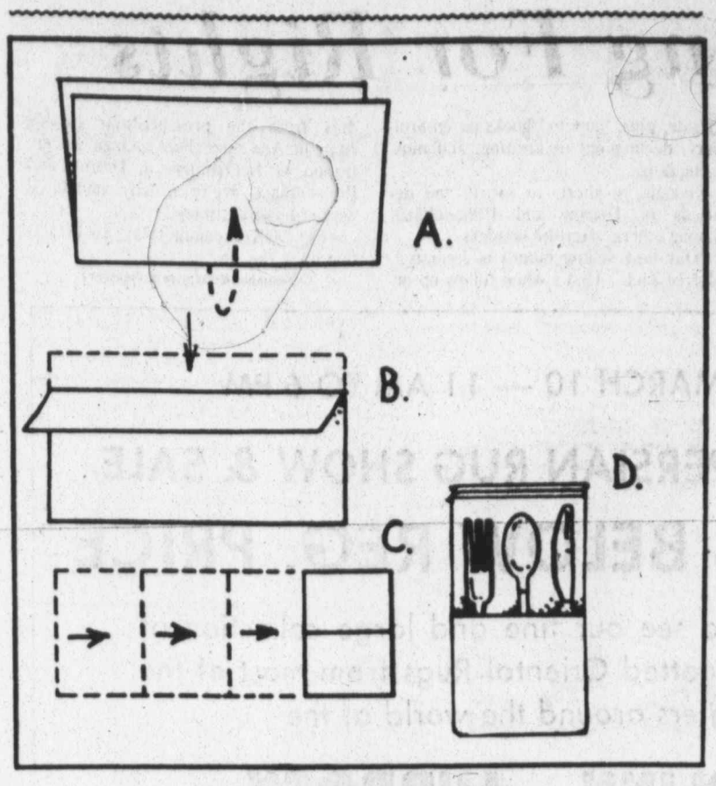

Some S&Ls,therefore, sit with lots of cash and little, it seems, to lend. Instead of financing homes, they are simply reinvesting the money at still higher returns in their big brothers, the commercial banks.

Archeologists Rescue Ancient Artifacts

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Archeologists say they have outraced the bulldozers, rescuing two million artifacts from the ancient city of Kaminaljuyu before it is swallowed up by Guatamala City's rapid expansion.

"New homes are springing up everywhere" in the Central American city, "and we knew that if we delayed just a few more years, it would be too late," said Pennsylvania State University archeologist Joseph Michels last week.

Folded Napkins Make 'Pockets' For Silver

By SHARI LEWIS

If you're like me, you'll probably want to turn every napkin you handle into this little "pocket" for the silverware, whether you're having a party or not! (Incidentally, this is a great way to deal with the silverware for buffets and picnics, too.)

Fold your paper or cloth napkin in half, with the opening at the top. Bring down just the top layer of that open part, so that single edge meets the fold at the bottom. Turn the whole napkin face down. Starting at the left, fold your napkin over four times, rolling it toward the right. Turn face up, and there's your pocket. Just tuck your silverware in place.

Fort Carson Tagged 'Best-Liked' Base

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of military families shows the best-liked Army base is Fort Carson, Colo., while Fort Hood, Texas, is least popular, according to a military publication.

The Times Magazine, an independent, military-oriented publication, said its finding was based on a questionnaire in which some 1,000 persons listed their favorite and least favorite installations.

Among other bases with most-popular ratings were the Naval Education and Training Center at Newport, R.I., and Hickman Air Force Base, Hawaii. Among other bases depicted as least popular were Minot Air Force Base, N.D., and Camp Lejeune, N.C.

EATING LESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families in four of America's major cities apparently find that cutting down on their food bills is the best way to cope with inflation. According to a recent survey of families in New York City, Detroit, Atlanta and San Francisco, the food bill cutback was the most popular method being used.

'Lefthanders' Quietly Campaigning For Rights

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Jancy (not Nancy) Campbell and her father, Dean, a distributor in Topeka, Kan., are putting on the screws.

Nicely but counterclockwise. And with help.

The executive director and founder of Lefthanders International —and their 4,000 national members — are quietly campaigning for their rights.

Actually, though, Miss Campbell had hers to begin with.

"Both my parents are left-handed, but all four children are right-handed," she confessed during a phone conversation. "But they taught us things left-handed so it was like growing up in a left-hander's world."

In other words, she saw extremes the world at larger never notices: TV controls on the right instead of the middle of the set; the telephone cord uncoiling from the left so only a right-hander can take messages without serious entanglement; untenable corkscrews, etc., etc.

"Finally, in January, 1975, my father started this organization to promote the good life of left-handedness," she said. "We're informative, though not militant. We work with school systems and manufacturers to show them what left-handers need and that there's a market for it."

Left-armed school chairs, for example. A high school in Texas, for one, didn't have any until a member of Miss Campbell's organization wrote and asked for some. "Then the school agreed to order 10 percent of their writing desks with the arm on the left side," she said happily.

With luck, the students seated there write like the others simply by slanting the paper to the right instead of curling and crimping their left hands —providing the teachers have learned that's often all it takes. If not, Lefthanders International hopes to set them right. "And after we accomplish that, we'll tackle school coaches about left-handed ball gloves and golf clubs..."

And manufacturers of power saws and overseers of assembly lines where lefthanders are unwelcome. After all, she asks, why should an estimated 10 to 25 percent of the population ("brain researchers' figures") be thwarted simply because their motor capabilities took up residence on the right instead of the left side of the brain?

Which is all left-handness is, the folks in Old Salem notwithstanding.

They said it was witchery and merited a short, hot stay at the stake.

Today it has become a profitable condition for 20 or so of the nation's shopkeepers.

New York's The Left Hand, 10 years old, claims to be the country's first store listing entirely to the left. It was modeled on one in London and does such a healthy mail order business that "We don't advertise," says product manager Gray McKee.

"People hear about us by word of mouth or free publicity and orders pour in. Mostly from housewives because they're the ones with time to leaf through the catalog." (Yours for $1.00 he added.)

First, Housewife scans the 300 items in the catalog, then quickly cuts back to the scissors: 30 varieties designed for hair, nails, cloth, the bodies of chickens and paper dolls, and all made with the cutting blade on top so the cutter can see how he's cutting. "Scissors outsell everything else two to one," McKee says.

Next, Housewife circles kitchen utensils: the metal spatula angled so a right-hander comes up with air no matter what; the counterclockwise corkscrew that will drive that right-hander to drink because he can't get it to work; the soup ladle with the spout on the right, and measuring aids tht read from right to left, like the rulers and left-handed address books do.

As for the rest of the merchandise, the range is unbounded. There are democratic playing cards numbered in all four corners so everyone can use them and lefthanders can see the ace --bottom left -- with contorting.

And watches with the stem on the other side, plus "how to" books on embroidery, needlepoint or knitting, and mustache mugs...

Enough, in short, to satisfy the denizens of Detroit and Philadelphia, among others, after the holidays.

"Our best selling month is January," McKee said. "That's when follow-up orders from the pre-Christmas catalog come in. And since there's a high concentration of left-handers in Detroit and Philadelphia, we're usually inundated with orders from there."

Apodaca Says Public Addicted

EL PASO (UPI) — Former New Mexico Gov. Jerry Apodaca says Americans have failed to grasp the value of energy resources and the need to use them efficiently.

"We've become addicted to unlimited energy supplies at cheap prices and we can't kick the habit," Apodaca said in remarks delivered at a fourstate energy symposium.

The former governor, speaking as president of the National Issues Council, said there were two important concepts about energy that the public and private sector has failed to grasp.

"The first is that the efficient use of energy saves money and resources for everyone and the future," he said. "The second concept is the awareness that decisions for priorities and energy must be jointly understood and made by the producer as well as the consumer."

Apodaca said the nation has "fallen flat on its face" in efforts to conserve energy.

"We have no choice in the long run but to conserve and set priorities on energy use," he said "The longer we delay, the more likely we are to reach the point where our whole economic system is in jeopardy."

The conference in El Paso was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, the West Texas Council of Governments and the BDM Corporation.

Woman Finds Old Coupon

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Mary Rarey of Columbus said her family always has clipped coupons from newspapers to save on their food bills and the savings have paid off.

And she intends to use a coupon clipped from a 1956 newspaper which she recently found stuck in an old magazine.

That coupon entitled the bearer to five White Castle hamburgers for 25 cents. The fast-food chain's hamburgers 23 years ago sold for 12 cents. Now they sell for 22 cents each.

White Castle officials said they will honor the Mrs. Rarey's coupon, even though it long since has expired.

Admiral Tells Panel Skipper Responsible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard's commandant says the skipper of the ill-fated cutter Cuyahoga was "lulled by the good weather and good visibility" the night the craft collided with an Argentine freighter in the Chesapeake Bay. Eleven men died in the October crash.

Adm. John B. Hayes told a House panel Tuesday that "it is quite clear where the responsibility for this casualty lies ... command was the crucial element."

Useless Laws Being Dumped

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Residents and visitors of New Jersey, you can rest easy now — you won't be breaking the law aymore by riding your horse faster than 4 mph across a sidewalk.

And you won't have to stick to the three minutes allowed to unload passengers from your car in front of a church.

Gov. Brendan Byrne has a plan to repeal 138 useless laws and sent a list of "archaic, unnecessary, duplicative or inconsistent" measures to the Legislature for repeal on Monday.

In a letter to the Assembly speaker and Senate president, the governor asked the Legislature "help New Jersey start on and stick to a 'legislative and regulatory diet.'"

Provided Byrne's proposals are approved, you no longer will be breaking the law if you:

—Hitch your horse to a public lamp post or fire hydrant;

—Drive a horse-drawn sleigh on a highway without a sufficient number of sleigh bells on the harness to warn others of your approach;

—Race horses on a highway;

—Refrain from stopping your car and remain stationary if a horse is passing you in the opposite direction on a highway;

—Overtake and pass a trolley car;

—Follow a trolley car at a distance of less than 10 feet, and

Business Associations Shed Low-Key Image

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — For years business trade associations in the United States were organized mainly to have fun.

This was particularly true in the Prohibition era. Businessmen welcomed the annual or semi-annual meeting of their trade associations as a chance to get away for a wet and high old time they wouldn't consider at home.

The trade associations did a little lobbying in Washington and state capitals, gathered some statistics and made some effort to disseminate technical information. But in contrast to the in-depth and hard-sell programs of the professional associations of physicians, lawyers and scientists, the the business trade associations were very low key.

No more.

The modern business trade association is dynamic, sophisticated and staffed by thoroughly skilled professionals, says the New York management consulting firm, Main, Jackson & Garfield, Inc., in the current edition of its house organ "Management Practice."

The number of qualified professional trade association executives is growing rapidly. James Low, president of the American Society of Association Executives, said its membership is growing by 10 percent a year and now stands at 6,000, many of them working for business associations.

The modern business association seeks recognition from the news media and from local, national and even foreign governments, Low said.

The metamorphosis of the associations from "semi-marching and chowder societies" to vigorous, sophisticated bodies was forced by the rapid rise of local and government regulation of business, said William E. Smith of Smith, Bucklin & Associates, a Chicago management consulting firm that specializes in serving trade associations.

"In an age when companies literally can be legislated and regulated out of business, the trade association has become the first line of defense," Smith said. "The old politically passive trade association no longer makes sense."

Another dramatic change in trade associations is greater specialization and concentration. Main, Jackson & Garfield noted that the National Association of Manufacturers, "whose members account for 75 percent of the country's industrial output, used to scatter its shots, but now the NAM concentrates its efforts almost totally on federal legislative issues and interaction with government agencies."

It moved its headquarters from New York to Washington a few years ago to further that aim.

Another significant trend is bigger budgets and bigger staffs for the more effective trade associations. In ten years, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association doubled both its budget and its working force, for example.

The Textile Manufacturers Institute followed the NAM's example and moved to Washington in order to concentrate on doing battle with the regulators. The Edison Electric Institute and the American Association of Advertising Agencies felt constrained to set up large Washington offices.

Economist Peter Drucker said the metamorphosis of the business trade associations has progressed to where they can be called "a third sector of the economy," because many of them ae neither strictly private nor strictly public.

Soviet Women Honored With Long Weekend Off

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

International Women's Day, as it's called, is hardly noted outside socialist countries but it's a big deal in the Soviet Union.

It started 69 years ago when the International Conference of Socialist Women stiffly proclaimed a "day of solidarity of working women in the struggle for political and social equality."

Since then, Women's Day has softened into a nice, gushy, sentimental holiday akin to Mother's Day in the United States.

Mothers, wives, and girl friends get gifts, flowers and a long weekend off. Husbands usually pitch in with the housework.

The press exalts that the Soviet revolution "marked the beginning of a genuine social and spiritual emancipation of women." It also takes the opportunity to berate the United States for failing to pass the Equal Rights Amendment.

The Soviet attitude toward women is a curious blend of rigid equality — particularly in the job market — and the male chauvinist attitude that women aren't to be taken too seriously.

For example, the Soviet Union launched the world's first and only female cosmonaut, Valentina Tereshkova, in 1963. Yet at a recent press conference of top space officials there was much giggling when a reporter asked whether women could work alongside males in space stations.

Yes, quipped an official, "We have kitchens on board."

In the Soviet work force, women account for almost 52 percent of workers. They make up more than 70 percent of the unskilled work force.

Women also fill some 70 percent of doctor and teacher jobs — low paying in the Soviet Union.

Because of the shortage of men since World War II, women perform many jobs that seem harsh to Western eyes. Husky women with straw brooms are a fixture on Soviet streets, and in winter they chop ice off the sidewalks and haul snow. They swarm around building sites, laying bricks, hauling lumber ,and welding pipes.

Special laws for female workers keep them out of most underground jobs and in theory spare them from having to lift anything heavier than 33 pounds. In practice women carry their weight alongside males.

The Soviet press frequently stresses that women share equal power and notes that about a third of members in the national parliament are female. But in the Communist Party Central Committee, an important decision-making body, only eight of the 287 members are women. And there has never been a woman member of the powerful, 13-member Politburo.

For the average housewife, life is a daily grind. And while a large percentage of women work outside the home, most still find themselves tied to housework, too — with few conveniences of Western housewives such as dishwashers, disposals and other kitchen gadgets.

Day-to-day shopping chores mean endless queues for basic food plus, battles with shortages and deficits.

Still, Soviet society is attempting to make life more tolerable.

There are never enough child care centers, but the government keeps building new ones. Pregnant women get two months paid leave before and after giving birth and partial pay for a year with guarantees of being rehired at their old job.

That encourages women to have more children — and reverse an alarming dip in the national birth rate.

Chinese Develop Male Contraceptive

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese scientists have developed a safe, highly effective male oral contraceptive derived from the cotton plant, the official Hsinhua news agency reported.

It said trial use by more than 10,000 men "gave an effective (contraception) rate of up to 99.89 percent." Half those tested had used the substance — called gossypol — more than two years and some for as long as four years, it reported.

"Generally, the contraceptive is taken for a two-month period," the report said, "with a daily dose of 20 milligrams. The sperm survival rate declines and the sperm become fewer and fewer until all die.

"At this stage, a maintenance dose is used which is 150 to 220 milligrams a month, generally taken twice a week. The health of the men taking the contraceptive was not affected. When the contraceptive is not taken for two to three months, the sperm condition returns to normal."

But it said "some men who take the contraceptive in some areas have low blood potassium. Chinese medical workers are conducting further research to improve the medicine."

The agency said tests began on animals in 1971 and on humans in 1972.

Diet Product Makers Agree To Pay Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of the diet product, P.V.M., has agreed to pay a $75,000 civil fine to settle a false advertising case, the Federal Trade Commission says.

FTC attorney Arthur B. Patrizio said Tuesday that ads run from December 1977 to May 1978 made it appear the product caused weight loss. "Instead, it was the diet, which limits calories, that caused the weight loss," he said. The fine is against J.B. Williams Company, Inc., and its ad agency, Parkson Advertising Agency, Inc. The firm did not acknowledge any wrongdoing in settling the case.

Schlesinger Mentions Dipping Into Oil Reserve

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Strategic Petroleum Reserve has thus far stored only 76 million barrels of crude oil but already there's talk in Washington about pumping it out and using it.

However, project manager Donald Mazur of New Orleans said Wednesday he knows of no decision by President Carter to start taking crude out of the underground caverns in the fall.

If the oil should be needed, he added, it will be available on demand.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told reporters in Washington Tuesday there was a "lively possibility" the government might dip into its reserve by fall to bolster supplies of winter heating oil.

But Mazur said "There is no decision I know of to tap the reserve."

Actually, if demand came suddenly there would be a 45-day delay. It would take that long to install extraction pumps, on a crash basis, that could put 200,000 barrels a day into the pipelines.

"The system wasn't designed for immediate withdrawal," said William Parker Jr., deputy project manager. "Our emphasis was in getting it into the ground."

The reserve of crude oil is in big caverns scoured out within mountain-size underground salt domes along the Gulf Coast in Louisiana and Texas.

The eventual capacity of the reserve, conceived in 1975 as an insurance policy against another major energy crisis, was planned at 1 billion barrels. But in his 1980 budget, President Carter lowered the projected capacity to 750 million barrels.

Three storage sites are in operation — at Bryan Mound, near Freeport, at Hackberry, La., which is near Lake Charles, and at Bayou Choctaw, near Baton Rouge.

All have connections to major pipelines which feed refineries, mainly in Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma but some as far north as Chicago.

Normal construction plans call for pump-out capability to be completed before late September or early October. At that time, the system's "drawdown" capacity would be 1 million barrels a day.

Drawdown power would be increased to 3.5 million barrels a day a year later. A barrel, the common unit of oil measurement, is 42 gallons.

The reserve is far short of its goal of 500 million barrels in storage by the end of 1982 and the loss of Iranian crude has made the market so tight the reserve has difficulty finding oil to pour in the caverns.

"The program is not dead, but it is limping a bit," said Parker. "We can't get enough oil right now. We have only 15 million barrels on contract for the next three months, when we could pump in 30 million."

Indictments Handed Down

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Attorney A.J. "Tony" Canales says the 84-count oil-pricing fraud indictment returned against two oil companies and five of their officers is just "the tip of the iceberg."

The indictment handed down Wednesday charged them with participating in a federal crude oil pricing violation scheme that allegedly brought some $3.8 million in excess profits.

"These cases will be going on long after I'm gone from this office," Canales said. "This is just the beginning."

Charged with conspiring to sell lower priced "old" oil as higher priced "new" oil were Uni Oil Inc. of Houston; Uni president, Thomas M. "Mick" Hajecate; Uni secretary-treasurer and director, Thomas H. "Tom" Hajecate; Uni vice presidents, Charles R. Akin and James E. Fisher; Ball Marketing Enterprise of Lafayette, La.; and Charles Goss, a Ball marketing agent.

U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue set bonds of $200,000 apiece for the officials and said they would be released on personal recognizance.

Canales said more indictments can be expected.

The indictment alleges the conspiracy involved the acquisition of "old" oil, selling at about $5 a barrel, then certifying it as "new" oil that sells for more than $12 a barrel under the federal pricing regulations established in 1973.

A federal grand jury has spent about eight months investigating reports that more than 200,000 barrels of "old" oil have been sold as "new" oil, costing consumers millions of dollars by the time the oil reached service stations.

In a related matter Wednesday, Albert B. Alkek — a millionaire Victoria oilman — pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of knowing about the pricing scheme but failing to report it to authorities.

Under a plea-bargaining agreement, Alkek received a three-year suspended sentence and U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor ordered him to pay the government $3.24 million, cooperate fully with the federal investigators, testify at trial if needed and, if necessary, take a lie detector test.

The House subcommittee on energy and power in Washington, D.C., has been working with Canales, the Justice Department, and the Department of Energy in the investigation.

A subcommittee spokesman said Alkek's plea bargain raises "several questions and we will be looking into it."

New Rules Allow Natural Gas To Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and natural gas industry officials say the adoption of new regulations on natural gas sales mean up to 1 trillion cubic feet of additional gas should start flowing into the U.S. market.

The larger amount of natural gas would replace nearly half a million barrels of oil a day.

The regulations were adopted and made effective by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on March 1 but the action was not announced publicly until Wednesday.

Gas producers had been waiting for the regulations since last November, when President Carter signed a new law eliminating a split-regulation system.

The old system had discouraged some interstate gas sales and caused producers to keep that gas within the boundaries of the producing states where it could be sold for higher prices.

While the law solved the problem legally, producers still held back the gas while waiting for the regulatory commission to adopt final regulations that would govern sales contracts.

Meanwhile, the revolution in Iran shut down that nation's oil production, reducing imported U.S. oil supplies an estimated 500,000 barrels a day.

The held-back natural gas, equivalent to some 472,000 barrels of oil a day, could almost replace the loss, and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger urged the gas industry and regulatory commission to get it moving.

The regulations finally announced Wednesday cover natural gas previously available for sale only within producing states and therefore exempt from federal price ceilings.

The regulations, based on the November law, provide the mechanisms for bringing all new gas under federal price ceilings until 1985, by which time all natural gas price controls are to be eliminated.

"From all indications, I think we're going to see a lot of gas move now," said J. Curtis Moffatt, aide to regulatory commission chairman Charles B. Curtis.

George H. Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, a trade organization of pipeline and distribution companies, also said in an interview that the new regulations "will be one of the main vehicles for getting some of that extra gas that's available into the market to replace foreign oil."

Lawrence said the gas should start flowing "within a matter of months."

President Carter has proposed tougher mandatory fuel-saving measures — weekend service station closings, building heating-cooling limits, and restrictions of advertising lighting — as "standby" programs that could be used if fuel-switching and voluntary conservation don't save enough oil.

Reunion For Beatles Denied

HARRISON

Harrison, commenting at a wide-ranging, tea-and-crumpets news conference called Wednesday to promote his latest album, "George Harrison," said the last he heard of a possible reunion of the famous British group "was some guy in San Francisco who had some project of getting John (Lennon), Paul (McCartney), George and Ringo (Starr) together.

"All I could say to that was 'Look, that was then.' This guy is on a trip about the Beatles. He's built up this big fantasy about how the Beatles are the only thing that can save the world.

"And that is complete rubbish," said Harrison, 36.

He said that although the breakup of the group in 1970 had its rough spots, "Everybody's cool now. We could all hang out together and have a great time, but the only thing that would spoil it would be all of you," he said, smiling at about 40 journalists.

Hermione Gingold Misses Show

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the first time in her long show-business career, the show didn't go on for Hermione Gingold.

Miss Gingold sat out a performance of the local run of "Side by Side by Sondheim," after she tripped and fell on a damp railroad platform at Kansas City's Union Station on Monday. Miss Gingold suffered a dislocated right shoulder and fractured right kneecap in the fall.

She recalled from her hospital bed: "I once went on in 'A Little Night Music' in New York with a broken wrist, after I fell in a pothole chasing a cab. I was playing an old woman in a wheelchair, and the audience thought the sling was part of the act."

Good Old Days

ARTHUR, Ill. (AP) — To celebrate their 25th anniversary in business, restaurant owners D.C. and Pauline Moses rolled prices back to the 1954 level.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Coffee was a dime, hamburgers a quarter and complete dinners were 90 cents.

"I don't have any idea how many people we served, but I'm sure we lost a lot of money," said Mrs. Moses Tuesday night. "We didn't advertise it. We worked it out so that our regular customers would be able to take advantage of it. That was the idea. Just a novelty idea and a way of saying thanks to our customers."

The meals included meat loaf, sausage, beef and noodles, weiners and sauerkraut, or chicken salad, plus mashed potatoes and gravy, a choice of three vegetables, eight salads, hot rolls and drinks.

Today, the price of one of those meals is $2.60.

"Yeah, it was busy," said Mrs. Moses. "But, I've been 'tireder.' This was a very pleasant day."

Carter Opponents Drop Senate Treaty Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative opponents of President Carter's China policies today withdrew a proposal that would have given the Senate a role along with the president in terminating defense treaties such as the U.S.-Taiwan treaty.

At the urging of Senate leaders, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind-Va., pulled back an amendment and thus separated the issue of Senate powers over treaty-making from the floor debate over the future security of Taiwan.

Byrd's amendment could have severely jeopardized Carter's policy of shifting formal U.S. relations from Taiwan to mainland China.

In exchange for withdrawing the amendment, Byrd won a pledge that it would be considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and submitted to a Senate vote within 90 days.

The treaty was intended to insure Taiwan of a U.S. response in case of an attack by China. As required by the treaty, Carter gave a year's notice of termination effective at the end of 1979.

Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, senior Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, disagreed with Byrd's contention that the resolution would not apply to Taiwan.

"This is not another sense (of the Senate) resolution that gives some pious hope and expectation of what we may or may not wish to do," Javits said. "This is the real McCoy."

Senate Democrats say they have the votes to avert a major congressional setback for the administration on the issue of security guarantees for Taiwan.

The Senate was expected to vote late today on a proposed amendment that declares any move by China against Taiwan would be a threat "to the security of the United States."

Senate Democratic Whip Allen Cranston said Wednesday he believes the proposal will fail. But if it passed, Cranston said Carter would be forced to veto a bill authorizing him to go ahead with his China policy.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on the Far East, said defeats handed opponents of Carter's China policy on other issues Wednesday signal similar failure on the security question.

"I think we can hold off major efforts to change the bill," he said.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted the House would approve by the end of the day a China bill acceptable to the president. Conservative Republicans made only cursory attempts to amend the bill, which says any Chinese attempt to seize Taiwan by force would be "of grave concern to the United States."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright said that, because the congressional debate over China has resulted in a break in U.S.-Taiwan trade relations, the Taiwan government is urging quick approval of the China bill.

He said the Taiwanese are anxious for Carter to sign a bill even if it does not include tough security guarantees.

In the Senate,the Taiwan security wording stirred deep concern among State Department officials Wednesday.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee and Sen. Charles Percy, D-Ill., in an unsuccessful attempt to persuade them that the strong security language would be damaging to U.S. interest.

Percy is the author of wording that would replace a milder version approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Baker said he supports the Percy proposal.

The weaker approach says a threat against Taiwan would be of "grave concern" to the United States.

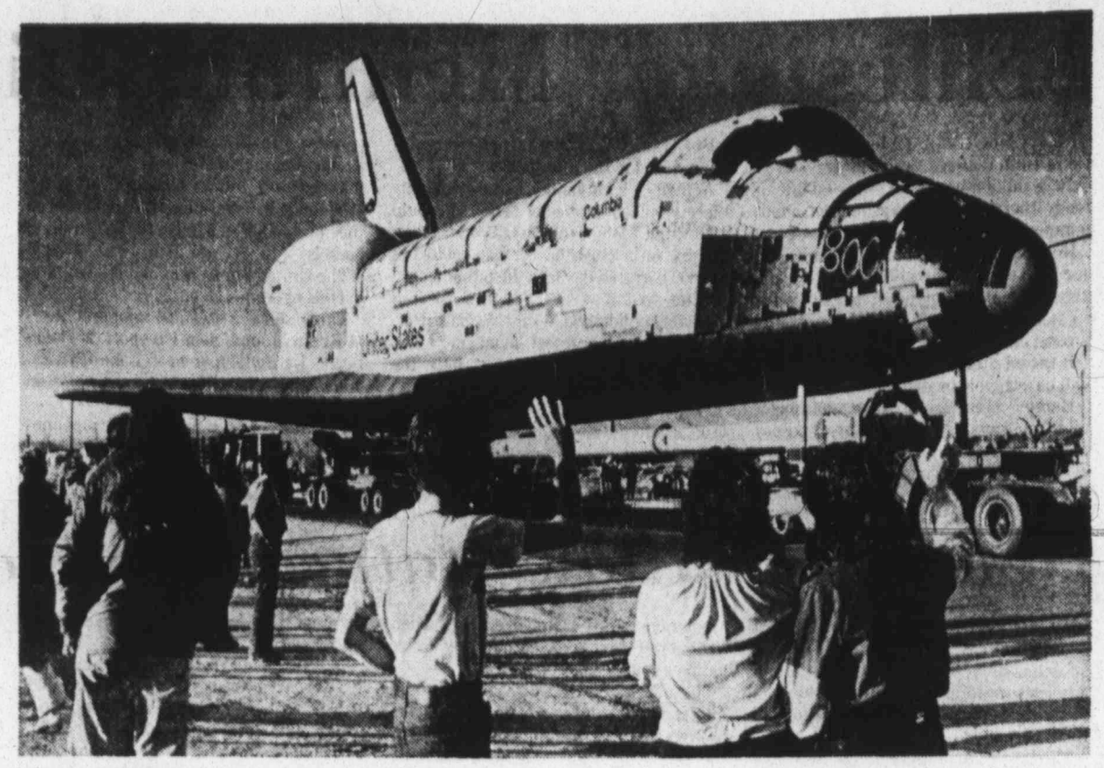

Carter has said no security provision is necessary, but indicated he would reluctantly sign a China bill which includes the weaker committee version.

The administration fears that a tough Taiwan security bill would jeopardize the new era of friendly relations with Peking.

In votes Wednesday, the Senate defeated moves which would effectively require U.S. recognition of the existence of a government on Taiwan.

Carter's policy calls for creation of a private American Institute to replace the U.S. Embassy in Taiwan.

Lubbock's Economy Growing Rapidly

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's economy is alive and growing at an "ever-accelerating pace," even faster than the national economy.

That was the opinion spelled out to the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors today in a report by James D. Eppler, chairman of the chamber's research committee.

In a booklet entitled "The Lubbock Economic Indicators, a Ten-Year Statistical Profile," Eppler says total employment has increased more than 34 percent and that average hourly earnings for workers in Lubbock have risen by 40 to 50 percent since 1972. The report covers two five-year periods, from 1968-1972 and 1972-1977. It was compiled by the Lubbock Economics Council and the chamber's research committee.

"Along with the influx of people into the Lubbock area during this five-year period (between 1972 and 1977) has come strong increases in communication and transportation activity," Eppler says in the introduction, citing increased long distance calls and steady growth in airline passengers as examples.

Eppler says building permits soared in the spring of 1977 when Texas Instruments moved its entire Consumer Products Division to Lubbock. Increases in retail sales, which have jumped from about $94 million in 1973 to $195 million in 1977, are another indicator of a strong Lubbock economy, Eppler says.

The board also adopted a resolution calling on the U.S. Congress to use fiscal restraint in balancing the nation's budget but did not favor calling for a constitutional convention to maintain a balanced budget. The resolution was passed on a recommendation by the chamber's committee on governmental affairs.

Bob Dunbar, chairman of the committee, also received board approval to budget $1,000 to subscribe to the services of a computer-based company in Austin which monitors legislation as it moves through various committees in the state legislature.

Dunbar said the committee has been looking into various ways to monitor legislation which affects the Lubbock area and its business interests. He said a terminal will be set up at chamber headquarters and operators may call upon the computer to monitor a bill's life cycle through the legislature.

Dunbar also received board approval of a plan to invite area legislators to a biweekly brunch with his committee in an effort to keep closer contact between state government and area businessmen.

The board also heard a report from representatives of this year's Southwest Junior Livestock Show, which will be held March 11-14 at the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds. Coordinator Roy Swiddey said more than 2,000 animals from a 29-county area have been entered in the show. He added only five or six local chapters of 4-H and Future Farmers of America have not entered animals in the show.

Burial will follow in Odessa Cemetery under the direction of Easterling Funeral Home.

Mrs. Rogers was found dead of a gunshot wound in the chest about 11:17 a.m. (MST) Monday in a mobile home in Tucson, Ariz. A coroner's investigation indicates the death was a suicide.

She was born in Tucson and had lived in Odessa.

Survivors include her husband, Fred; a son, Wayne Douglas of Andrews; two sisters, Bonnie Lou Perry and Barbara Ann Perry, both of Abilene; two brothers, Harry Sam Perry and Raymond Lee Perry Jr., both of Tucson, Ariz.; her father, Raymond Lee Perry of Tucson; and her grandmother, Blanche Johnston of Odessa.

Helen Simpson

Services for Helen Simpson, 69, of 4932 47th St. are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Simpson died at 5:07 a.m. Thursday in Community Hospital.

She was married to Loys Simpson in November 1962 in Levelland. She had been a resident of Lubbock since 1942, moving here from O'Donnell.

Survivors include her husband; one son, J.R. Davis of Portales, N.M.; one daughter, Hazel Richards of Lubbock;two brothers, Bill Duck of Konawa, Okla.; Jim Duck of Maysville, Okla.; eight grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

Otis N. Stewart

Services for Otis N. Stewart, 79, of 3101 Bates St. will at 11 a.m. Friday in Southside Baptist Church with the Rev. Glen Price, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home.

Stewart died at 7:10 p.m. Tuesday in Methodist Hospital after a short illness.

He moved to Lubbock from Lyndon in 1935. Stewart was a deacon of Southside Baptist Church.

He married Rosey Kirkland on Aug. 18, 1918, in Atlanta.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Otis of Lubbock; three daughters, Marie Hogan of Lubbock, Laverne Chappell of Phoenix, Ariz., and Claria Wigham of Idalou; two sisters, Olean Smith of Shallowater and Thelma Penney of Lubbock; 13 grandchildren; and 12 great-grandchildren.

Grandsons will serve as pallbearers and church deacons will serve as honorary pallbearers.

Mrs. T.P. Tritz

Services for Gloria J. Tritz, 38, of Reese AFB Village are pending with Pape Funeral Home at Clinton, Iowa.

Mrs. Tritz was dead at 8:40 p.m. Tuesday on arrival at Reese Air Force Base Hospital after suffering an apparent heart attack. Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack is conducting an inquest.

Mrs. Tritz had lived much of her life at Clinton, where she married Thomas P. Tritz on July 16, 1970. She was a member of Beta Sigma Pi Sorority and had lived at Reese Village since 1975.

Survivors include her husband, Tech. Sgt. Thomas P. Tritz; her father, Donald Hurlburt of Clinton, Iowa; and a sister, Marilyn Hurlburt, also of Clinton.

Space Shuttle Being Prepared For Two-Day Trip To Florida

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia that will eventually make 100 roundtrips into space lumbered from its hangar before dawn today for a snail-paced ride over 38 miles of dusty Mojave Desert roads.

The 157,000-pound shuttle — designed to leave Earth like a rocket and glide back home like an airplane — crept along at 5 mph to the Dryden Flight Research Center at Edwards Air Force Base near Los Angeles. There, the Columbia will be mounted atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet for a two-day flight to its launch site at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The two-day flight, which will include stopovers in El Paso and San Antonio, and Elgin Air Force Base, Fla., is to begin Friday.

Mounted on a gigantic 90-wheel trailer, the Columbia dwarfed its escort of more than a dozen vehicles, including police cars, a fire engine and a small bus filled with security personnel, when it emerged from its hangar at Rockwell International's assembly plant.

The shuttle, America's first reusable spaceship, is capable of hauling 65,000 pounds of cargo and seven people into space. It is designed for at least 100 trips into space and back.

The Columbia's maiden flight, already postponed several times, is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 9, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says.

The 122-foot ship, with a tail fin towering five stories high, is a hybrid — part rocket, part airplane and part spacecraft.

The shuttle missions will include putting satellites into space for research, weather forecasting, communications and military reconnaissance. Eventually the shuttle fleet may ferry people and parts for building solar satellites, space factories, moon bases and habitats for colonies far from Earth.

The first 28 operational flights starting in 1981 are booked solid by government agencies, industry and others who want to put payloads in Earth orbit.

Columbia's predecessor, the Enterprise, made a highly publicized trip to Dryden more than a year ago. However, the Enterprise was a test version of the shuttle and won't be going into space, NASA said.

Columbia is the first of four shuttle vehicles approved by Congress. The others will be the Challenger, Discovery and Atlantis.

Together, they form the foundation on which NASA is building its space program for the coming decades.

Cuevas' Lawyer Receives Funds

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. William P. Clements today signed an emergency $32,000 appropriation for the court-appointed lawyer defending Ignacio Cuevas, enabling jury selection in the capital murder retrial of the prison inmate to resume in Houston.

On Tuesday, District Judge Miron A. Love recessed jury selection until March 12 because defense lawyer Will Gray said he had not been paid and would not continue. Nine jurors had been chosen in the four weeks of questioning.

Gray told Love that he would file motions asking that the trial be postponed and that the state be required to pay him legal fees in advance or provide sufficient collateral to ensure he would be paid.

Cuevas was being retried for the 1974 shooting death of a hostage prison librarian killed during an escape attempt by three inmates at the Walls Unit at Huntsville. The other two convicts and another hostage died during the 11-day siege.

Cuevas was convicted and sentenced to die in 1975 but last December the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the verdict.

Obit Briefs

Services for Garland H. Givens, 87, of 3610 31st St. will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Sunset Church of Christ. Burial will be in City of Lubbock Cemetery under direction of Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home. Givens died Wednesday.

Bush Criticizes Motive Of Separate Primaries

AUSTIN (UPI) — Saying the motive is to keep conservative Democrats in office, Republican presidential hopeful George Bush has criticized a plan to separate Texas' presidential primary from the primary for state offices.

Bush, who has taken initial steps to become a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination and is expected to face former Gov. John Connally in the Texas primary, also accused the plan's backers of political gerrymandering and going against their constituents' wishes.

In a letter Wednesday to Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, sponsor of the bill that received Senate committee approval last week, Bush said the impetus behind Ogg's bill is to help conservative Democrats keep their offices.

Ogg's bill would establish a presidential primary in March, and move the primaries for state offices to July and August, allowing Texans to vote in the presidential primary of one party and the state primary of another.

Some conservative Democrats have expressed concern that if all the elections were held on the same date, conservatives would desert them to vote in the GOP presidential primary.

"I do not believe any member of the Legislature owns his office, and I just don't believe it's right for these incumbents to try to use the legislative powers of the state of Texas to preserve their hold on public office and to change the ground rules just because the Republicans are certain to have an active presidential primary," Bush said in his letter to Ogg.

He also objected to provisions allowing conservatives to vote in the GOP presidential race in March, then return to the Democratic primary for state offices in July.

Judge Reviews Burnett Tape

BEAUMONT (AP) — Capital murder defendant Linda May Burnett says it was "exciting and fun" to plot the deaths of five people, but a state judge wants to listen to more of her tape recorded statements before deciding if a jury can consider them.

The jury was locked in a motel room Wednesday as Gist began reviewing the tape recordings, which were prepared by Mrs. Burnett's defense lawyers and subpoenaed by prosecutors.

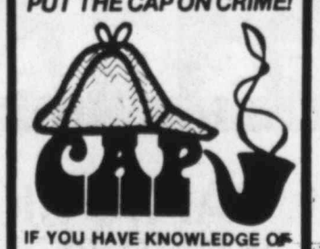

Gist, who has already ruled the recordings were legally obtained, planned to listen to additional tapes today before ruling on their admissibility.

Mrs. Burnett said on the tapes reviewed Wednesday that the thrill of plotting the slayings was better than "washing dishes and making beds and listening to Leo (her husband) raise hell."

Her husband listened stoically as the tapes were played over the courtroom loudspeaker system over objections by defense attorneys that this created a "carnival" atmosphere.

Mrs. Burnett and Joe Dugas are charged with capital murder in the slaying of Dugas' former in-laws at a Southeast Texas farmhouse last July.

Male Prostitute Says Gacy Used Alias

CHICAGO (UPI) — A former male prostitute says John Wayne Gacy, suspected of the homosexual murders of more than 27 young men and boys, used the alias "Jack Henley" — similar to the name of a principal figure in the 1973 Houston mass murders case.

The Chicago Sun-Times Wednesday reported it had been contacted by Samuel Lynn Rohrbach, who said he had sex with Gacy last year in the headquarters of the suburban Norwood Township Democratic Party, where Gacy did volunteer work.

Rohrbach said Gacy used the alias "Jack Henley." A principal figure in the Houston mass murder case was Elmer Wayne Henley, who was convicted of six murders and implicated in 21 others in the much publicized 1973 case. Prosecutors said Henley procured young men for an older homosexual, Dean Arnold Corll, and helped to kill them.

Gacy, after his arrest in December, reportedly told police a man named "Jack" had committed some of the murders. Police also have disclosed a letter Gacy wrote to his mother saying in part "I should have gotten rid of Jack."

Rohrbach said he decided to contact the newspaper after earning at least three other young men had stated publicly they were survivors of violent sexual encounters with Gacy.

He said Gacy picked him up on a street corner and drove him to the Norwood Park Democratic Party headquarters.

"He didn't act angry or violent, but the pain was tremendous," Rohrbach said. "I wasn't enjoying it an hinted for him to stop. He didn't want to take my hints, so finally I just asked him to stop.

"He said that he shouldn't have to pay the full price. He pulled out a badge and a pair of handcuffs and told me he was some kind of law enforcement official and that this building had something to do with juvenie detention."

Rohrbach said Gacy finally agreed to pay him half of the $20 they had agreed upon.

"I asked him what his name was. He said, 'Jack Henley," and gave me a phone number. He said we should meet at midnight the next night. I showed up about an hour and a half late. I don't know whether he had been there.

"I never tried calling back again. Maybe it's a good thing I didn't show up on time."

Iran Reveals Plan For Drastic Cut In Oil Output

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran plans to cut by half the amount of oil produced under the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and to seek the highest price possible, the new revolutionary government said today.

The announcement came one day after Mexico — which supplies about 2 percent of the crude oil used daily in the United States — said it "almost certainly" will boost prices.

The United state's southern neighbor also cautioned on Wednesday that it can't assist U.S. airlines, some so hard-pressed they have canceled hundreds of flights. "We manufacture jet fuel ... but we only make enough for our national consumption," said a spokesman for Pemex, Mexico's state-run oil monopoly.

In Tehran, Hasan Nazih, head of the National Iranian Oil Co., said, "Our production policy will be dictated only by Iran's national interests."

He said the new target will be 3 million barrels daily, compared to 6 million under the shah, who fled Iran Jan. 16. Nazih said current production is about 2 million barrels a day.

Nazih said Iran will remain a "militant member" of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and whenever possible sell above the price set by the organization.

"In our view, oil prices set and announced by OPEC are regarded as floor prices and whenever possible we shall sell oil at prices higher than OPEC prices," he said.

The OPEC price is now $13.35 a barrel. But many oil states already are selling above this level and on Monday Iran resumed oil sales with a shipment to Japan at a reported $20 a barrel.

U.S. airlines on Wednesday sought fare increases to offset soaring fuel costs. American Airlines asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to increase all its fares 4 percent as of May 15, while United Airlines sought a 1.2 percent boost.

United, along with Trans World and Delta airlines, has been forced in recent days to curtail hundreds of flights because of spot fuel shortages. Continental Airlines reduced Los Angeles-Denver service.

The worsening oil crunch was detailed Wednesday in a congressional study that predicted world oil prices would rise 7 percent above previous increases announced by oil-exporting nations. The extra boost, the report said, was due to Iran's prolonged production shutdown.

The General Accounting Office preliminary study said the loss of Iranian oil could raise unemployment by 200,000 people through 1980 and increase the U.S. inflation rate by more than 1 percent during the same period.

In a move that could help relieve the oil pinch, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission announced on Wednesday adoption of final rules that should start "surplus" natural gas flowing to market, some to replace imported crude, "within a matter of months."

Government and industry officials estimate about 1 trillion cubic feet of gas can be brought to market, providing energy equivalent to 472,000 barrels of oil.

But this news came as:

—Gulf Oil Corp. became the latest in a string of U.S. companies to limit gasoline sales to retailers. It said that despite gasoline sales running 20 percent ahead of a year ago, it will limit its customers to the amount of gas they bought in March 1978.

—Texaco, which supplies fuel to most major airlines and has had the most problems with supply lately, said it would limit fuel sales to airlines in March to 80 percent of what they had ordered or 80 percent of what they got last year, whichever was least.

Mexico, seen as an increasingly important oil exporter by U.S. officials, will boost prices when members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Nations do so at the end of March, the Pemex spokesman said.

The Mexican increase, he said, will reflect "increases in world prices." He did not speculate as to exactly how high the boost could be.

Mexico traditionally follows OPEC pricing decisions, although it is not a member of the cartel. OPEC is scheduled to raise its crude oil price 3.9 percent April 1 from its current $13.35 a barrel. But it may decide at a special meeting in Geneva March 26 to enlarge that increase because of supply problems caused by the Iranian revolution.

Hanoi Says Chinese Troops Pulling Out

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam announced today that the Chinese were withdrawing troops from some areas of Vietnam "very slowly and in very small numbers" but also had staged new attacks and occupied more land in other parts of the frontier region.

In the first official admission from Vietnam that some form of pullout was occurring, Hanoi Radio accused the Chinese of looting property and burning homes in their "retreat."

The broadcast also said Chinese artillery fired hundreds of shells Wednesday into the capital of Lang Son province.

In response to a Peking report that Chinese troops "love the Vietnamese people," the official broadcast replied: "Instead of loving our people, they love our chickens, ducks, clothes and other property."

Reliable sources in Bangkok said there were "definite signs" of a cautious Chinese witherawal. These analysts said some infantry and armored units had pulled out of the Long Son area, perhaps the most contested in the nearly three-week-old frontier war. It was not known in Bangkok whether any Chinese units actually had returned to China.

But the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Peking that the first Chinese troops had arrived back home, and that other units will follow shortly to facilitate the start of negotiations between China and Vietnam on possession of islands in the South China Sea. The islands were not named, but presumably oil is believed to be in the surrounding seabeds.

Kyodo, the Japanese news agency, reported from Peking that Chinese sources there estimated the withdrawal would take two more weeks because "pulling out is more difficult militarily than advancing." The sources said the Vietnamese were expected to make small-scale attacks on the departing units but were not capable of a major attack.

The Chinese invaded Vietnam on Feb. 17 after months of clashes between Vietnamese and Chinese border forces and the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia Dec. 25 which drove a Communist government allied with Peking from Phnom Penh.

The Chinese said their aim was to "punish" their southern Communist neighbor for border provocations and to teach them a lesson. Peking announced Monday it was withdrawing its troops after achieving its goals. On Wednesday, Vietnam said the Chinese had been defeated and would be allowed to pull out peacefully. But Hanoi said the Chinese would be "duly punished" if they renewed the fighting.

The latest battle report from Hanoi said fighting was continuing around Lang Son, 80 miles northeast of Hanoi, which the Chinese were reported to have captured, and the Chinese were still shelling Cao Bang, 70 miles northwest of Lang Son and 20 miles from the border. Hanoi also said the invaders were still digging trenches and attacking civilians in other areas.

The official Vietnam News Agency said a Hanoi correspondent for Japan's Communist Party newspaper Akahata was killed by Chinese snipers Wednesday in Lang Son, and that two Vietnamese escorts were wounded.

It said 35-year-old Isao Takano was shot in the head while taking pictures of the ruined city by Chinese snipers who "still infested the southern side" of the Ky Ung River, which crosses the town from east to west.

WOMEN DEMAND FREEDOM — Thousands of women stage a parade in Tehran today protesting demands of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that they return to the traditional Moslem style of dress, which is an ankle-length veil or chadur. One Revolutionary To Help Another

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The black-bearded vigilante with the red neck scarf waved his flashlight to halt the taxi, then he unslung his rifle.

"Out," he said, curtly.

It was in the early hours of Wednesday when Tehran's normally seething streets are virtually deserted.

A line of barrels pulled across the street encouraged us to stop. So did the glint of other weapons in doorways along the street. The taxi was thoroughly searched in silence, except for the cab driver protesting his innocence of everything.

"You," said the bearded one, "You American?"

"No," I replied. "I'm Irish."

A puzzled look puckered his features.

"You French?" he asked.

In decades of reporting I had never before heard an Irish brogue mistaken for a French accent.

"No," I said. "I'm Irish."

"Ah," he said, "you Breetish, no?"

"No," I said, "I Irish, not British." Someone whispered in his ear. He turned to me.

"You fight the Breetish, yes?"

"All the time," I agreed.

"We help you," the bearded one said. "You just ask us, we'll fight with you."

We climbed back into the taxi. We drove away to a six-shot salute from our military guides.

Sadat Speech Dampens Mideast Peace Hopes

cussions. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said both leaders had aides present in their talks, but he said he had no information on how the talks were progressing.

The Palestinian question has been the single biggest hurdle to concluding an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, and Sadat's words underscored the difficulty of resolving it.

Earlier in the day, just hours before Carter's arrival, Kahlil said he wanted an immediate meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to discuss Egyptian "counter-proposals" to the U.S. compromise plan.

Khalil said Egypt would continue to insist on a timetable for setting up a Palestinian authority. The Israelis have consistently opposed a timetable.

Khalil's remarks, although not entirely unexpected, were the first public statement by Egyptian authorities that the U.S. proposals, approved by the Israeli cabinet, were not totally satisfactory to the Egyptians.

Nevertheless, officials here were optimistic that the trip would result in a settlement of generation-old differences between the two neighbors. A cartoon in the leading newspaper here showed Air Force One with an angel of peace clinging to its tail.

After trying to convince President Sadat to settle remaining differences with Israel, Carter will shuttle to Jerusalem on Saturday. There, he will try to convince Prime Minister Begin to sit down with Sadat and sign a treaty between the two nations.

The pact would end three decades of hostility.

Signs of optimism abounded. Sadat's cabinet studied U.S. suggestions for the treaty. Egyptian officials called Carter's visit "the final sprint to peace." And Begin said, "I am hopeful." While U.S. officials said too many details remain for Carter to complete a treaty for signing, they did not rule out initialing one.

Nonetheless, Carter told about 40 members of Congress who met with him at the White House shortly before he left that he was not sure of success. "He said he had no deal," said Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill.

"The president spoke plainly of the risk to himself — and to the country," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

In an interview on the eve of Carter's departure, Republican presidential candidate John Connally said Carter might lose his ability to govern if he fails.

Bullets, Money Found On Body

nila folder — allowed in the cell to hold some of Carter's personal property. Crosby County Attorney Bill Marley said notes by Carter were found in the folder and some concerned "whiskey" and "money."

Marley said one of the notations was blocked in ink and stated "Don't tell lawyers."

Ralls Justice of the Peace Jim Scott Travis said today he would not make a ruling in the death until final results were received from the autopsy. Travis, who pronounced Carter dead at the scene, said it still had not been determined how long the man had been dead when the discovery was made.

The body was found by Crosby County jailer Rayburn Fitts Wednesday morning when he arrived with Carter's breakfast. The body was slumped across the bunk of his small downstairs cell at the jail, which is being remodeled to meet Texas Jail Standards Commission health and security deadlines. A .22-caliber pistol was found on the cell floor, between the inmate's legs.

Jury selection in Carter's trial was to have entered its third day Wednesday. However, after learning of Carter's death, 72nd District Court Judge Denzil Bevers dimissed the jury panel in the case. Two area women had been empaneled out of the 12 prospective jurors questioned.

The findings and length of time of the Rangers' investigation may prompt a change of venue in the trial of Mrs. Bruce. Her attorney, Bill Lee of Ralls, said he and co-counsel Floyd Holder of Lubbock will decide within a week whether to seek a trial change for their client, who is to be tried in Crosbyton and housed in the same jail in which Carter died.

Services for Carter will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church at Lorenzo with the pastor, the Rev. Bill Lacy, officiating.

Burial will be in Lorenzo Cemetery under direction of Carter-Adams Funeral Home of Ralls.

Born in Boswell, Okla., Carter moved to Lorenzo as a child and attended school there.

Survivors include his mother, Bonnie McKinney of Lorenzo; a son, John Thomas Carter II of Texas City; a daughter, Laura Lynn Carter of Texas City; a brother, James David Carter, stationed with the U.S. Air Force at Dyess AFB in Abilene; and a grandmother, Mrs. Annie B. Lacer of Texas City.

Pallbearers will be Jerry Jenkins, Mark Gilbreath, Dennis Allen, Tommy Herrington, Max Joiner and Tommy Fondren.

City's Financial Outlook Bright

All but two city funds reported an increase in retained earnings, Anderson reported.

However, Mrs. Jordan noted the budget does not reflect the decrease in property taxes passed by the City Council for the current fiscal year or the use of $1 million in revenue sharing for operating expenses.

She said she was concerned news of the financial report would indicate "we're in a better position than I think we are."

"You're reporting on history, not the future," she said, and predicted Anderson would not be able to use the word "solid" to describe the city's financial condition next year.

Responding to questions about the $4.8 million fund balance in the general fund, city financial director Sterling Miller said "I don't know of any business or city that doesn't operate without some excess."

Anderson explained the city needed that large amount to meet its monthly obligations of approximately $2.5 million because many sources of revenue, such as property taxes, are not available when the year begins.

That fund balance would not be regarded as an excess unless it was more than $7.5 million, Anderson said.

Also at the meeting council members approved a recommendation by the Civic Center's Board and Civic Lubbock, Inc., to construct two women's dressing rooms in the Municipal Coliseum.

Civic Lubbock will pay up to $15,000 of the estimated $85,000 cost of construction.

This afternoon, council members were scheduled to meet with Lubbock County commissioners to discuss their participation in the South Plains Association of Governments.

Unemployment Rate Lowest In Nebraska

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nebraska had the lowest average unemployment rate among the states last year, while Alaska had the highest, according to new government figures.

The Labor Department said Tuesday that Nebraska had a 2.9 percent unemployment rate while Alaska's was 11.2 percent.

Port Funds Approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House today endorsed continuation of state efforts to build an offshore port for jumbo oil tankers by passing a $2.4 million appropriation for the Deepwater Port Authority.

A 114-18 vote returned the bill (SB128) to the Senate for action on changes made by the House.

Senate approval of the House revisions would place the bill on Gov. Bill Clements' desk for signature into law or veto.

Clements told a news conference shortly afterwards that he had not made up his mind on the bill.

"The question of who will operate the port has not yet been decided and this is one point that has to be clarified..."

Clements said he had no objection to the state owning the superport or financing it with revenue bonds, but he thought it should be operated by private industry.

Club Patrons Face Threat Of Violence

three killings this year. In one of them, Juan Luis Garcia, 19, of 1014 E. 28th St., was fatally stabbed about 11 p.m. on Jan. 28 while on a dancing date at a club 3½ miles south of Lubbock off U.S. 87. He died several hours later on the operating table.

Deputies were told by the victim's girlfriend that it was her ex-boyfriend and his girlfriend's father who jumped Garcia. She said it all started when her present and former boyfriends began pushing each other on the dance floor.

Gaylon Rice, manager of one of Lubbock's most popular discos, said fights are caused by "anything from flipping a cigarette accidentally to talking to a girl who is someone else's girlfriend...people get a little intoxicated and lose their common sense."

Miss Washington said, "nine out of 10 of them are over a pool game. That, plus drinking."

Police reports show that in the city's second bar killing last year on Feb. 15, Raymond Booker, 34, was gunned down over a dice game at a Zenith Avenue "joint" (where a bar lacks a liquor license and/or stays open past the 2 a.m. drinking curfew). Andres Ortega Jr., 43, reportedly was arguing over a pool game at a North University Avenue bar March 5, 1978, when he was shot and killed.

Jealousy appears to be the prime factor in some of the 1978 homicides, as these cases show:

—Feb. 5, in the city's first murder of the year, a 37-year-old woman was killed by her common-law husband when he caught her with another man at an Avenue H nightspot.

—Feb. 20, a 25-year-old man was fatally shot at an East Broadway bar while dancing with the suspect's girl. Four days later, another man was murdered at the same club when he got into an argument with another man.

—April 2, a 28-year-old Lubbock man was killed about 3:30 a.m. during an argument at an Oak Avenue "joint." The trouble reportedly broke out when the victim asked the suspect's female companion to dance.

Ownership of a coat was the apparent subject of debate Sept. 21, 1978, at a Magnolia Avenue "joint." The incident ended in a shooting that claimed the lives of a Lubbock man and his 52-year-old father.

Johnny Garcia, 27, was pronounced dead at the scene of the 8:40 p.m. shooting, and his father, Felipe, died several days later at a Lubbock hospital from wounds sustained in the incident.

"A person is taking a chance in getting involved in something they are not really a part of," Sheriff's Capt. J.B. Douglas said about visiting bars. "Or getting shot by a stray bullet."

However, deputies and police say the risk can be limited by selecting drinking establishments on the basis of location and the type of people who frequent them. They say if a patron sees trouble brewing, he should get as far away from it as possible or go somewhere else.

One who is drinking should realize what power the liquor may have over him — or anyone he may get into a disagreement with — and should avoid displays of bravery, lawmen advise. It could result in death or serious injury, they say. Being killed over something as unimportant as spilled beer is nothing for relatives to be proud of.

Douglas said the sheriff's department does not have as great a problem with crimes at clubs since the city legalized liquor by the drink in 1972, paving the way for drinking establishments to move into the city. The captain and Deputy Alton Hobbs said that on weekends they used to move from club to club investigating assaults, robberies, rapes and killings.

Some thugs go to clubs looking for customers who have been addled by liquor and rob them when they leave the bar, Douglas and Hobbs said.

"Women going to clubs are safe if they go and leave as a group," Douglas said. Hobbs added, "When one (woman) leaves by herself, that's when you read about a rape the next morning."

Liquor by the drink in Lubbock was authorized April 13, 1972. The number of homicides the two previous years were 13 and 20, respectively, but jumped to 31 in 1972.

Of those 31 slayings, five occurred at nightclubs, making the clubs the third most common place to be murdered that year. Street killings topped the list, followed by at-home murders.

The following year, 1973, the number of homicides in the city dropped to 19, but seven of those were at nightspots — which topped the list. There were six murders at private residences that year.

From 1974 to 1977, clubs were the second most frequent place to be killed in the city, numbering respectively 6, 12, 6 and 11. Last year, nightclubs again were at the top, ahead of killings at homes and on the streets.

Statistics don't show what percentage of past homicides not occurring at clubs were still a result of some altercation earlier at a bar.

Love, who heads the police detective division, said he does not know whether the evolvement of nightclubs has raised Lubbock's overall crime rate, but "I think it's increased tremendously in murder and violent assaults."

The danger involved may depend on how the club is managed, Knox said. Bouncers, men employed at clubs to help keep the peace and throw out troublemakers, sometimes are responsible for trouble themselves, several policemen said.

Joe Clayton Dodson, 21, of 3424 Frankford Ave., No. 10 was critically injured in an early December shooting at a club near his home. Dodson was shot in the head after he reportedly exchanged words with a club guard outside the nightspot. The club employee claimed Dodson drew a knife.

Police reports show investigating officers could not find a knife.

Dodson was left partially paralyzed. The club guard was indicted for attempted murder.

"I do think a lot of it has to do with the help," Miss Washington said. It's also her opinion that club management often does not step in fast enough when trouble erupts. "A lot of bartenders will wait until a fight is really heated before they get into it."

Rice said that on a crowded night at his club there are at least 300 customers, and when trouble breaks out he calls police "when I can't control the situation anymore."

Club employees very likely are badly outnumbered when a crowd gets riled. Rice said there are only a small number of employees working even on a busy night. Chuck Vaughan, manager of a Fourth Street club frequented by Texas Tech students, said a busy night there nets about 400 to 500 patrons, compared to 8 to 10 persons working at the club.

Ann Mapes, owner of a North University bar, said seldom is there trouble at her place. "We're fortunate," she said of her customers, adding that only one man has been shot at the small nightspot. "The man that got shot came in about three hours later and apologized for it happening here," she said.

Corporate Reports Make Companies Well Known

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Bigger and heavier than ever, they are now or soon will be weighing down the postman's bag, millions upon millions of them, many in full color. It is corporate annual report time.

Every shareholder gets one, and when you consider that just one company, American Telephone & Telegraph, has about three million of them, you get an inkling of the volume.

A study by one of the leading producers of annual reports, Corpcom Services, shows that annual report distribution for a middle-size company is likely to include twice as many copies for non-shareholders.

Those other copies go to analysts, investment clubs, students, colleges, libraries and any other individual or group that shows the barest interest. Most companies consider them good promotional tools.

But they pay the price for getting their companies known. Corpcom's 1974 survey of the 1,300 largest concerns showed the top third spent about 65 cents a copy, those in the middle $1, and the smallest $1.43.

The large companies obviously have the benefit of volume in lowering their price per copy, but prices for all companies have soared in the past few years, in some instances by an estimated 25 percent a year.

Nevertheless, company opposition to the reports is probably less than it used to be. In the 1960s, for example, many companies complained that the reports were a nuisance, mainly beause they often were unread.

They changed their minds, however, as the consumer movement gained momentum and as government regulation became a bigger force to contend with. It became more important, they felt, to get their story told.

As a consequence, annual reports today are generally better designed and written. William Dunk, president of Corpcom, which produces or consults on more than 50 reports, says the goal now is to deliver a message rather than just disclose what is required.

At least two messages can be discerned in this year's reports: As you might expect, the dangers of inflation and the difficulties of accurately reporting its impact; and "wasteful" federal regulations.

Of the latter, Dunk says "it's coming from everywhere." More companies than ever, he maintains, are becoming corporate advocates, proclaiming the merits of the private sector vs. Washington.

The messages, often under the chief executive's signature, account in part for the length of this year's reports. Of those studied so far by Corpcom, 75 percent are longer, by between 11 percent and 38 percent.

But there are also other reasons for length. Corporate profits were good last year, and annual report budgets probably were relaxed. But an even more significant explanation lies in the greater detail required.

Accounting for that detail is the "segments standard" of the Financial Accounting Standards Board, which in effect states that you must divide your company into segments and then discuss the segments.

This year's reports differ also in their more extensive discussions of the markets. Rather than reviewing the company in isolation, report writers seek to convey the company's relative strength in that market.

A subtle change of perception accounts for the change. "They're focusing on the portfolio manager rather than the analyst," said Dunk. "They feel he has more whack; that he's the decision-maker."

It is year to year variations such as these that permit academics, among others, to assess some broad-gauge changes in the corporate psyche. Concern for environment one year, inflation worries in another.

When environmental concerns rose to the forefront of corporate-community problems a few years back the chairman of a major company was pictured standing up to his ankles on the factory's lush green lawn.

This year, among other things, the reports tell us that companies are up to their necks in inflation and government regulations, and that perhaps more so than ever before they want that message understood.

Child Welfare Programs Victimize Young

By DEAN REYNOLDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Terri is an alert, warm, engaging 8-year-old who is beginning to show signs of learning difficulties and aggressiveness. Little wonder. She is entering her third school and fourth foster home in four years.

She has not seen her own parents in that time, and no one is making plans to ensure she has a permanent family.

Terri's case is one of oany cited in a new 284-page report released by the Children's Defense Fund. It said children who are removed from their families and placed in foster homes or institutions are victimized by the system created to help them.

"What we have found is a national disgrace," said CDF director Marian Wright Edelman, "a pattern of institutional abuse and neglect of our most vulnerable children that cannot wait one more day for correction."

State and federal welfare officials are largely to blame, the report said. Many administrators could not correctly state the age or race of the children in their care. But many administrators are overworked as well.

"The Carter administration and Congress must take the leadership right now to enact child welfare reforms, which would not only help children, but through a small investment in preventive and adoption services begin to correct inefficient government spending," Mrs. Edelman said.

The CDF report said there are half a million children who grow up never knowing the security of a home.

"Our child welfare programs fail these children, make a mockery of professed belief in the family, and waste taxpayers' money," Mrs. Edelman said.

CDF calls itself a national nonprofit advocacy group intent on improving the lives of children.

Co-authors Jane Knitzer and Mary Lee Allen said their research showed children without regular homes are in "double jeopardy because they are not only often out of touch with their families but they are ignored by state and local officials as well."

The report proposed legislation to wipe out fiscal incentives that keep children in foster homes or institutions, and increase funding for adoption services.

A survey of child welfare and probation offices in 140 counties plus research of out-of-state placement policies, analysis of federal legislation, regulations, funding patterns and program administration yielded these findings:

—Thousands of children are haphazardly and inappropriately placed, and some are even sent to other states and left without community or familial ties of any kind.

—Welfare officials could not give the length of time in care for 53 percent, the age of 49 percent or the race of 54 percent of the children for whom they were responsible.

First Lady Expected To Attend Fetes

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter is expected to travel to New York, Connecticut and Florida in the next few weeks.

The White House announced Tuesday that Mrs. Carter would appear March 26 at the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention in Orlando, Fla., and accept a Distinguished National Service Award from the Jewish Theological Seminary March 29 in New York City. She is scheduled to weld her initials into the keel plate of a Trident missile submarine April 7 in Groton, Conn.

Advertisers Must Also Please Fathers, Children

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Advertisers who proceed on the assumption that Mom dictates the family's purchases at the supermarket may be deluding themselves, says a New York advertising agency.

Neve Savage of Cadwell Davis Savage in New York says this conclusion is based on a rather small sample in a few northeastern supermarkets but the interviews were in depth and Savage believes the trends noted are significant.

It was discovered that in these days of two-income families, when Dad and the older children do a lot of the shopping, Mom's brand preferences get shunted aside rather rudely in favor of other brands in many purchases.

This does not apply so much to staple foods, nor to such things as headache remedies, deodorants and diapers. On these, whoever goes to the supermarket is likely to follow Mom's list or usual buying preference.

Nevertheless, advertisers who direct most of their advertising to the "housewife" may be talking to the wrong person in selling a large number of products, Savage said.

The study covered 43 categories and showed that, overall, Mother's brand preference is ignored if Dad or one of the kids does the shopping.

The things on which Mother's preference is most likely to be flouted are: beer 90 percent of the time, frozen dinners 81 percent of the time, soap and toothbrushes 73 percent, shampoo 70 percent, mouthwash and hand lotions 67 percent, frozen vegetables 67 percent and soft drinks 66 percent.

Savage labeled these "high interest" products, that is products that are consumed or used immediately and which are kept constantly in the public eye by advertising. Headache remedies are high interest but they "also depend on a high level of trust," Savage said, "so Mom's trusted product is not usually questioned."

Curiously, the survey found that price plays very little role in the deviation by Dad or the teen-age shopper from Mother's brands. The answers indicated all members of the family are about equally price conscious.

Nor were the switches from Mother's brands mere happenstance. "Those asked gave specific reasons for buying different brands," Savage said. "Somebody's advertising was paying off."

Husbands are more likely than the teen-age kids to choose their own brands, the survey indicated. Daughters are more likely than their fathers to follow Mother's preferences, but they still chose different brands 47 percent of the time.

Other recent surveys have shown that Mother now does only about 35 percent of the family shopping alone. Forty percent of married men apparently do much of the shopping either alone or in company with their wives. One survey said 24 percent of all married men do a substantial part of the cooking and the older children cook as well as do other chores.

Supermarket shoppers these days include men who are the heads of one-parent families, single men doing their own shopping, the older children of women alone, and retired couples sharing the shopping.

So, Savage concluded, the advertiser must realize that the traditional homemaker makes only about one-third of the brand decisions.

WHEELS FOR HANDICAPPED — Citizens for Improved Transportation, Inc., (CFIT) added a new dimension of transportation for the handicapped in Lubbock last week when they put a renovated '73 Ford van into use on scheduled routes in the city. Funds for the van were donated by the Lubbock County Easter Seal Society. The van features a wheelchair lift, raised roof, lockdowns for the wheelchairs and seat belts for the wheelchair riders. Hance Legislation Would End Busing

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance is co-sponsoring legislation to stop federal judges from forcing school districts to bus children for racial desegregation purposes.

"It will be an uphill fight. We face tough opposition," the Lubbock Democrat, who represents the 19th Congressional District, told The Avalanche-Journal Wednesday.

"But if we work hard, I think we have a chance. The trick will be getting the bill out of committee," Hance said during the interview.

The bill is House Resolution 556, introduced by Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga. Hance is among 15 co-sponsors of the legislation.

The bill is aimed at "eliminating federal court jurisdiction over forced school attendance." It would provide that "no court of the United States shall have the jurisdiction to make any decision, or issue any order, which would have the effect of requiring any individual to attend any particular school."

"This bill basically would remove the courts' authority to order busing" as a means of desegregating schools, Hance said.

The legislation has been referred by the House Judiciary Committee to a subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and administration of justice.

"I can't say it will be easy. The bill faces problems in the judiciary committee," Hance acknowledged. "That committee has not moved in the direction" of holding hearings on anti-busing legislation so that such proposals can be sent to the House floor, the freshman Congressman said.

Critics of the McDonald bill contend it may be unconstitutional. But Hance, an attorney, disagrees. "I think there are good arguments that it is" indeed constitutional, he said.

Dan Seale, president of the local chapter of the National Association for Neighborhood Schools, lauds Hance for supporting the McDonald bill.

"I think we can work very well with Congressman Hance," Seale said. The association earlier had asked Hance to back "a constitutional amendment to prohibit forced school busing...We hope this is to be one of your first priorities."

Hance said he prefers the McDonald bill over a constitutional amendment. For one thing, he explained, the McDonald bill would be a "faster approach," because a constitutional amendment would have to be ratified by the states.

"Also, if you can solve a problem without amending the Constitution, I think you're better off. I prefer to try to solve problems within the legislative process. If you amend the Constitution every time a problem comes up, you could eventually change your whole form of government," Hance said.

Hance said both his children have been bused under school desegregation plans — one in Austin, when Hance was serving as a state senator, and the other in

CFIT Provides Wheels For Elderly, Ailing

By CARRIE LINE CURTIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For most Lubbock residents, getting around in the city is relatively easy. They just get in their private vehicles and drive to their destinations, or take the public bus service.

However, for the elderly and handicapped, transportation is a different matter. Many elderly and handicapped persons cannot drive their own cars or ride the public buses because of their physical limitations.

That is the reason Citizens For Improved Transportation, Inc., became a reality and was organized in April, 1976. Citizens For Improved Transportation, Inc., (CFIT) became a chartered, non-profit agency May 11, 1977, and began operations in November, 1977.

The goal of CFIT is a coordinated effort in transportation for the elderly and the handicapped in Lubbock. According to the Area Office on Aging, there are more than 17,000 persons in Lubbock over the age of 60, and a federal study estimated that 10 percent of Lubbock's population is handicapped.

According to Jane M. Taylor, CFIT executive director, the organization began with a study to discover areas where transportation of the elderly and handicapped was most needed. The study showed that various agencies crossed paths in their transportation of the elderly and handicapped, often making pickups in the same vicinity in the same time period.

In response to the study, CFIT obtained lists of names, addresses and data on time of use and destinations from various agencies. Mrs. Taylor said that it is understood that the routes do not accommodate all of those in need of transportation at any given time.

CFIT currently operates a 30-passenger bus, two 12-passenger vans, a 15-passenger van, and a '73 Ford van, as well as scheduling the City Handicapped Bus.

CFIT has contracts with seven local agencies to provide transportation for the elderly and handicapped. These include the Alcoholic Recovery Center, Walker House, Lubbock Area Extended Rehabilitation Service, Texas Tech Center on Aging, Freedom Hall, the City of Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department, and wheelchair-bound Medicaid recipients. CFIT runs four routes in the morning and four in the afternoon to provide transportation for the elderly and handicapped. CFIT also has a limited demand response system for such persons needing transportation.

In January, CFIT ran a total of 2,429 one-way trips, serving 2,454 passengers, according to Mrs. Taylor. She added that the potential for growth was unlimited in serving the transportation needs of the elderly and handicapped, but money, or the lack of it, is hindering the organization's growth.

Mrs. Taylor said that federal grants for transportation of the elderly and handicapped are available, but the organization must have local matching funds before even applying for the federal grants.

The CFIT executive director added that numerous local civic organizations and several local businessmen have already aided the group by donating money, arranging for special equipment, or giving discounts on work performed on the organization's equipment.

Mrs. Taylor said the organization also could use unpaid volunteers to work in its office, assisting the staff personnel.

Brief Defends Lubbock's At-Large Voting Method

The at-large method of electing Lubbock City Council members has helped, not hurt, minority residents — and allegations to the contrary are "ludicrous."

So say city attorneys, who Wednesday filed a 70-page brief asking U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward to deny a challenge to the system by black and Mexican-American plaintiffs.

"The present system is fair, is just, is right, and is constitutional, and should be continued as the system of election for the City of Lubbock," lawyers Jim Brewster and Travis Shelton said in their post-trial brief.

The document is a rebuttal to a brief filed last month by plaintiffs in the class-action suit. The suit asks Woodward to scrap at-large elections in favor of a single-member district system.

During two and a half weeks of testimony before Woodward, plaintiffs attempted to show that the at-large method — which means citywide elections with no residency restrictions — has diluted the voting strength of minorities. The result, the suit contends, has been racial discrimination and segregation.

City officials deny the allegations. And they say that judging from the plaintiffs' post-trial brief, it would appear the plaintiffs and defendants "attended entirely separate trials."

"Has the at-large system in the City of Lubbock performed to the interest of the minorities? By the way of goods, services and facilities actually delivered, it most assuredly has," city attorneys said.

The plaintiffs "claim initially, through witness after witness, that the city never provided the minority areas anything. Yet (the city's exhibits) overwhelmingly belie that contention," they said.

Detailing the distribution of parks and recreation facilities in the city, and citing health and other services provided to minorities, the city's post-trial brief said the "inference of neglect becomes ludicrous."

What the city may be guilty of, the brief said, "is perhaps a failure of the city to communicate to its citizens that which it has accomplished, rather than a failure in accomplishment itself."

The brief notes it is true that a racial minority has yet to win election to the city council. But that fact alone, city attorneys argue, is not evidence that the present system is discriminatory — or that a single-member district system, by which certain seats on the council would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city, would be an improvement.

"To show dilution of their voting, they (minorities) must show more than a mere disparity between the percent of minority residents and the percent of minority representation and must affirmatively demonstrate that the minority group has less opportunity to participate in the political process," the city's brief says.

"Obviously, this has not been demonstrated."

Minorities have run for city offices, garnering campaign dollars and votes from predominantly white areas, the city lawyers said. They may have lost for "a variety of reasons" — not solely because of

Human Relations Panel Blasts Possible Home Siding Rip-Off

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Human Relations Commission members Wednesday night vehemently condemned what they termed a siding company "rip-off" that may be causing many north and east Lubbock residents unwittingly to mortgage their homes to finance aluminum siding.

A Fort Worth company apparently is selling siding that costs more than the houses are worth and is including in the contract a mortgage provision in case of non-payment, HRC director Luciano Perez told the commission.

Perez, who declined to name the firm, said the company is offering the siding at what seems to be fair price but that ends up costing up to $10,000.

"The people are signing contracts and then finding out that the fine print says they have mortgaged their home for pay ment," Perez said. "The people do not know what they are signing, and the commission has the responsibility to tell the community."

The Better Business Bureau is looking into the practice and is seeking complaints from people who feel they have been taken advantage of, Perez added.

He said he also is preparing public service announcements in Spanish to inform residents of the practice and to advise them to seek legal counsel before signing any contracts.

"It could be that there's nothing illegal about it (the siding contracts)," Perez said. "But at this point I think the best we can do is tell people not to mortgage their homes."

Commission members also decided to include in the April HRC newsletter, which is sent to minority businesses and media, an explanation of the siding practice.

Perez said he learned of the practice from the Urban Renewal Agency, which encountered it in houses marked for demolition.

In other business, the meeting which the commission has been trying for some time to set up with City Council to discuss the functions of HRC agains has been put off because of the continuation of the redistricting suit.

A decision in that suit ha. not yet been reached, according to Perez, and because HRC'S function between council and HRC may take place.

MARRIAGE POPULAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young Americans continue to have favorable attitudes toward marriage, says the American Council of Life Insurance. A recent survey of young people between 14 and 25 years old found 76 percent expressing a positive view toward marriage.

Kites Denote Approach Of Springtime

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Kites and kids and Spring all go together and this year is no exception.

Neither the origin nor the inventor of kites is known, however according to history, it seems that the first kites were made and used in China. The highest form of development occurred in the Far East. Chinese kites were often built large enough to bear a man aloft and were used militarily as observation posts. Surprisingly there is no evidence that these kites were used for pleasure.

Kite-making spread from China about 1,500 years ago to neighboring countries such as Malaya, Polynesia, Asia, Arabia, and eventually to England and Europe.

According to "Kites — An Historical Survey," by Clive Hart, kites have been used for fishing, pulling horseless carriages across land and boats across water, carrying men in wars, life-saving at sea and innumerable other things. Of kites, he also says, "Their most important role was as the prototype of the airplane wing. The kite may, in fact, be regarded as a tethered glider."

Eventually kites arrived in West Texas and were built by their owners for reasons of pleasure.

As a general rule, "butcher paper" was used by early West Texans to construct their kites. With homemade sticks and "bought" string, kite-making involved the whole family. And with a "tail" added from a "ragbag," the kite was ready to fly — if West Texas winds obliged (which they usually did).

According to local hobby shops, kites are still popular today. But few people purchase materials to make kites from "scratch," except for a few students who are assigned to make kites as projects. The stores report some purchases of balsa wood and colored tissue paper for this purpose.

One shop manager said the most popular, as well as most expensive, kites this year are the "sea serpent" and "wind dragon" which have 25 foot tails. Less expensive kites include "skylinks" and "tetra."

Perhaps most popular among the young crowd this year are kites sporting Mickey Mouse and bird motifs — prices ranging from 99 cents upward to $5.98. Kites are going like "proverbial hot cakes," said the hobby shop owner, but he admitted, "they always do in Spring."

So when West Texas breezes blow, you're sure to see kids and kites silhouetted against a blue Spring sky.

Home Insulation Can Mean Tax Credit For Consumers

VALLEY FORGE, PA. — Under the new National Energy Act, recently signed by President Carter, consumers can save two different ways by insulating — on their income tax and through lower home heating costs.

One of the provisions in the energy package permits an income tax credit of up to $300 for expenditures on energy conserving products such as insulation. The amount of the credit equals 15 percent of the first $2,000 invested.

Energy-conservation groups and consumers alike have applauded the income tax credit as a major step forward in the nation's fight for energy independence. However, there has arisen some confusion as to the scope of the credit.

According to George Hoffmann, vice president of the Insulation Group of CertainTeed Corporation, one of the largest manufacturers of fiber glass insulation, the tax credit is actually a very broad measure. "In addition to insulation, other items which qualify for the credit are caulking, weather-stripping, storm or thermal doors and windows, modified flue openings, automatic furnace ignition systems and clock thermostats," Hoffmann explains.

"The National Energy Act tax credit is available to owners of condominiums and cooperatives, as well as owners of single family dwellings," continues Hoffmann, "as long as the unit is the principal place of residence. Vacation homes are excluded."

In addition, Hoffmann explains that the tax credit is not limited to purchases made during the 1978 tax year. Rather, it extends to qualifying items purchased and installed between April 20, 1977 and Decemer 31, 1985 in homes already energy efficient due to improved construction standards.

For those who would like to take advantage of the tax credit, but are unsure how much insulatin they need, Hoffmann has this advise: "In all areas of the country, CertainTeed recommends a minimum of six inches of fiber glass insulation in the attic; in the colder northern and northeast regions, twelve inches or more is desirable."

If you wish more information on this subject, just write to the CertainTeed Home Institution at P.O.Box 860, Valley Forge, PA. 19482.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a silent husband. He suddenly quit talking to me and he won't tell me why.

The first time he clammed up we were married only six months. All of a sudden he wasn't speaking to me, and no amount of begging on my part could make him tell me what I had done wrong. He wouldn't look at me or talk to me for three whole days. Then, all of a sudden, he started talking to me just like nothing had happened. I found out four years later that he stopped talking that first time because I used his car and didn't fill up the gas tank!

I could write a book on the different times he clammed up. The record was 13 days, and I still don't know the reason for that one. We have three children, the youngest is 5, so I'm trying to see it through, but it is rough.

What is the matter with a man who acts this way?

Silent Treatment

Dear Treatment: I don't know, but if I were you I would try to find out. He could be immature, sick, or just plain ugly. Your husband sounds as though he has a lot of words stored up which may need to be unloaded in a doctor's office. I recommend counseling. If he won't go, go alone, and learn how to communicate with your silent partner.

DEAR ABBY: If a person wants to be hypnotized to lose weight, quit smoking, eliminate pain during childbirth, surgery or dental work or for any other legitimate reason, where does he find an honest, qualified hypnotist?

I don't want one who hypnotizes people for fun or entertainment. I want a hypnotist with the best credentials who meet the highest professional standards.

Interest In Ohio

Dear Interested: Write to the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis, 2400 East Devon Ave., Suite 212, Des Plains, Ill., 60018. They recommend only the most highly qualified hypnotists.

DEAR ABBY: The lady signed Trapped, who discovered that her husband had been unfaithful after 25 years, could have been written by my mother, only she and Dad have been married only 19 years.

About three months ago she caught Dad in a situation like that. She says there will be no divorce, but she has locked him out of their bedroom. Now Dad sleeps with my litle brother.

He has begged Mom to give him another chance, but she won't. I am the eldest (16), but I am old enough to know that any woman trapped because she can't forgive, has trapped herself.

Sorry For Dad

Dear Sorry: You may be young, but you are very wise.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I discovered quite by accident that one of my children has an entirely different blood type than mine. I made some inquiries and have been informed that it is not possible for me to be this boy's father. Obviously my wife has not been faithful to me.

After more than 12 years of a fairly happy marriage, I am at a loss as to what I should do.

Should I confront my wife with this and demand that she tell me the whole story? Or since there is nothing I can do about it now, should I keep my mouth shut and try to live with this very disturbing knowledge?

Shocked And Undecided

Dear Shocked: You have been misinformed. It IS possible for a child to have an entirely different blood type than the father. So unless you have more conclusive evidence to support your suspicions, the word from here is cool it, Dad.

PREVENT ROOF LEAKS

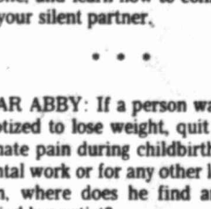

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (UPI) — Television antennas can cause leaks if they are not properly anchored to the roof. A consumer guide to roofing says an antenna that is directly anchored to a vent without guy wires can vibrate enough to loosen the roof caulking and cause leaks at the flashing, the metal that joins skylights, chimneys, vents and other protrusions to the roof.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Playing at three no trump South was faced with a choice of finesses for his fulfilling trick. He made his contract by spurning both.

Since his hand was weighted with aces and kings, South elected to open two no trump—it was a stronger hand than the point count suggested. North showed his five-card major suit, but was content when South denied three-card support by rebidding no trump.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and South was perfectly satisfied with his contract. He could count eight tricks in top cards, and the ninth would appear if East had either the king of diamonds or the ace of hearts—there were sufficient entries to dummy to test both possibilities—or if the spades split no worse than 4-2. A glance at the diagram, however, shows that all of these chances were doomed to failure. Yet South made his contract without resorting to double-dummy play, and there was nothing the defenders could do to thwart him.

Declarer won the opening lead in his hand perforce, then cashed the remaining high spade. Next came four rounds of clubs, ending in dummy. The stage was set for a throw-in.

With the safe exit cards removed from the West hand, declarer continued with the queen of spades and another. On these two tricks he discarded two diamonds from his hand. West won the fourth spade but he did not enjoy his position. To delay the inevitable, he cashed his last spade, but declarer was still safe—he could afford to let go a heart.

This hand is a graphic illustration of winning technique. First you discover that you can make your contract with the help of one of two finesses—a 75 percent chance. Then you look around to see whether there is any way you can avoid taking a finesse.

On this hand, once neither defender was void in a black suit and West was proven to hold the long spades, declarer increased his chances from 75 percent to 100 percent—a good deal any time.

Couples Favor Traditions

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

The tradition of "shivaree" or harassment of newlyweds has thankfully died.

But the bridal shower is alive and well and serves a very practical purpose — the provisioning of a new home.

Bridal showers have not changed much over the years and remain essentially the same. Those planning a bridal shower usually say, "Oh, dear, can't we think of something else to do, except play those silly games?"

Usually, however, no one can think of anything different and "add a word" in a variety of guises or recipes for the bride-to-be are still favorite activities of bridal parties.

Refreshments, too, are unsurprisingly similar, with finger sandwiches still in vogue. After all, everyone knows the familiar pastel cake (decorated with calorie loaded icing) will follow. Naturally, punch is always accompanying fare.

Certainly the soon-to-be-couple finds the bridal shower highly desirable — homes are not established inexpensively these days. Besides, can't the four toasters (five received) be exchanged for other things?

Do away with the traditional bridal shower?

Prospective bridegrooms today generally reiterate that having a formal bachelor's party hadn't even occurred to them, so perhaps the tradition is not so popular today.

But if the traditional bachelor's party has almost died, then informal gatherings hosted by friends has not.

One male said that recently when he and some friends were planning such a gathering, the suggestion to feature something ribald was quickly voted down.

"So, I rather expected the party to be strictly 'a drag' and it was. We played a little poker, had a few beers, someone told a lewd joke or two (though no one knew very many), but I guess it was pretty boring.

"After lingering as long as we could, the party closed down about 4 a.m."

Did the party-pooper plan to disdain the "bachelor" when he got married?

"It's a tradition, I guess, I don't know why we still have them. I've been to so many of these parties — I can't count how many — and they're all alike. I'd like mine to be the same though."

CHEESEY IDEAS

For small chunks of Cheddar, Swiss, Colby, Monterey Jack and Muenster which may even be a bit hard and dry, pop them in the food processor and shred them. If you have two or more cups, they'll go alone or as a combination in a fondue to serve with chunks of bread, fruit or vegetables. That's an idea for Sunday night supper.

Weight Watchers Choose Yogurt Over More Expensive Diet Foods

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Cooking with yogurt is a good way to save calories and cash.

One quart of homemade plain yogurt prepared from fresh milk costs about half as much as the same amount of store-bought. Buying the milk in half gallons or gallons increases the savings still more.

Some of the most innovative ideas for making and using yogurt are in Anne Lanigan's "The Yogurt Gourmet" (Quick Fox $5.95 paper).

You'd expect a person with access to the latest equipment and gadgetry to scorn makeshift systems. Not Lanigan.

In a telephone interview, she said she uses a double-walled plastic ice bucket to make yogurt in bulk for cheesemaking and cooking. She fills the inner container with the inoculated milk and the outer one with hot water, pops the lid on and wraps the bucket in bubble plastic to help retain the heat long enough for the yogurt to set.

Many retail stores use bubble plastic as packing material for glass and other fragile objects. A terrycloth towel makes a good substitute.

The ice bucket method is among several off-beat systems Lanigan worked out with such commonplace household items as a heating pad, an oldfashioned hot water bottle or an insulated picnic hamper.

Many of her recipes call for drained yogurt, thick yogurt, yogurt cheese or yogurt cream. They are made by draining plain yogurt from 10 minutes to a few hours to thicken it. The whey that drips out is a tart, nutritious liquid that can be served as a beverage or used in soups or in place of water or milk in breadmaking.

Lanigan's calorie-saving recipes include mock hollandaise sauce, substituting yogurt for butter; tomato sherbet; curried chicken breasts with skinned, boned chicken; chicken with butterfly-shaped pasta; frozen apricot yogurt, using only three tablespoons of sugar or honey to three cups of yogurt, plus the natural sweetness of dried apricots; and dried fruit yogurt, the cut-up fruit steeped overnight or longer in plain yogurt in the refrigerator. As the fruit soaks up the whey, the yogurt thickens.

Pureed in a blender or food processor, dried fruit yogurt makes a deliciously tangy dessert sauce without adding sweeteners such as sugar or honey.

Lanigan keeps yogurt from curdling in heated sauces (except mock hollandaise) by thickening them with either flour or cornstarch. Her yogurt bechamel, or white sauce has a refreshing acidity that tastes especially good with poached or broiled fish.

One minor flaw: her yogurtmaking directions suggest heating milk for culturing to 195 degrees and cooling it to 110 degrees before adding the starter; 180 degrees is sufficient if the milk is held at that temperature or higher for two minutes before it is cooled, and starter can be added when the temperature drops to 120 degrees if you first stir a few spoonfuls of the milk into the room-temperature starter, then stir the thinned-out mixture into the remaining milk.

Doctor Discusses Health Hazards

Emphasizing health and nutrition during National Nutrition Week, which ends Saturday, Dr. Laurence M. Hursh, a consultant to the National Dairy Council, discusses health habits.

Are there seven good health habits your doctor wishes you had? According to the American Medical Association, there are. And to promote this fact, AMA ran an advertisement in the Wall Street Journal, listing the seven habits. In case you missed the publicity this ad generated, here are the seven habits:

Three meals a day at regular times and no snacking. Don't skip breakfast — it'll just get you in trouble later on in the day when you're apt to eat more than you should.

The other six "good habits" were listed as moderate exercise, adequate sleep, no smoking, immunization, moderate weight, and alcohol in moderation.

Dr. Hursh questions only the rigidness of three meals a day and no snacking. For there may be many people whose schedule would permit them to eat more frequent but smaller meals each day — or to indulge in nutritious snacks that would otherwise be part of regular meals. In other words, if people choose their foods wisely and keep their weight ideal, he is not concerned if they do it outside the "three-meals-a-day" pattern.

Woman Reportedly Raped After Accepting Ride

A 21-year-old Lubbock woman said she was knocked unconscious and raped Wednesday afternoon after she accepted a ride from a man as she was walking home.

The woman said she was in the 1000-block of E. 28th Street about 2:30 p.m. when the suspect, a young, thin Mexican-American, drove up in a brown van and offered her a ride.

The woman said the driver passed by her house and began tearing at her blouse. She said she lost consciousness when he began hitting her and that when she came to, she was in a stupor and walking into her apartment.

The woman told police she felt she had been raped while she was unconscious. She was taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital.

In a reported assault about 6 p.m. Wednesday, two 70-year-old Lubbock men said they were beaten by three assailants.

Grady Kirkpatrick of 1709 29th St. and O.A. Webb of 3124 22nd St. said they were in Webb's residence when they heard noise outside, and went out to find three men operating a cement mixer.

Kirkpatrick, a building contractor, reportedly told one of the men that it was too late to be working, bringing the reply, "This job has too many chiefs."

Reports indicate Kirkpatrick and Webb began walking back into the house when one of the suspects knocked the contractor to the ground and began striking him and Webb with a broom stick. Neither man was seriously injured, according to police.

A 21-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 3 a.m. today after he allegedly smart-mouthed a policeman and struck the officer in the arm.

Officer Ronald Logan reported that he saw the suspect acting suspiciously at an apartment complex in the 2200-block of Fifth Street. The policeman said after he drove up in the apartment parking lot, the man came up and said, "What the — is your problem."

Logan said when he announced he was a policeman, the man told him he just wanted to see if the officer would watch him because there had been a lot of rapes in the area. The man then reportedly had some nasty criticism about "all police, the mayor and the chief of police."

Reports show that when asked to show some identification, the man replied, "I don't have to show you —."

The man allegedly added, "If you want some ID, you'll have to get it," then struck Logan in the arm. The officer said he grabbed the man by the neck, wrestled him to the ground and took him to the county jail.

A 19-year-old man was booked at county jail for evading and resisting arrest Wednesday night after he allegedly ran from a policeman who tried to stop him for a traffic violation in the 1000-block of E. 28th Street.

In one of several recent break-ins, Eugene Alexander Silasi told police he lost $1,732 in property, including a television set, guns and jewelry, when he was victimized by house burglars Wednesday afternoon.

Reports show $883 in guns were stolen from the 3714 46th St. home of F.L. McGuire Tuesday or Wednesday. McGuire said he found the house ransacked and the guns missing when he returned home about 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Bandits and vandals focused their attention on cars around the city, breaking into and damaging several vehicles in different locations.

Two Lubbock men, Enrique Cisneros of 1509 46th St. and Genovedo Esqueda of 201 N. Ave. O, said vandals had broken into their cars while they were parked at a club at 1708 4th St. Cisneros said the burglars broke out a window and took a tape deck, while Esqueda reported a broken window on his car. Police said the estimated damage for the two vehicles is about $260.

Jackie Becknal also reported a car burglary. He told police someone entered the car, which was parked at his 4809 29th St. residence, and removed about $250 worth of tapes.

Carrol Rock Sanders of 4906 44th St. told police some tapes had been taken from his car. He valued the missing tapes at about $120.

Vandals broke out nearly 20 windows in three houses belonging to Dickey Lumber Co., James Dickey reported Tuesday. He said the houses, at 502 42nd St., 504 42nd St., and 4108 Ave. D., suffered about $500 in damages.

Burglars made off with more than $1,000 in appliances from a vacant southwest Lubbock residence Monday night.

Builder Ted R. Ratcliffe reported that a $910 microwave oven and $220 dishwasher were removed from the recently built home by intruders who pried the back door of the house. The burglars apparently drove a vehicle into the garage of the home, according to police, and loaded the appliances onto the vehicle.

Phil J. Ojibway told officers more than $1,000 in firearms were stolen from his 2303 61st St. home. Ojibway said three shotguns and a rifle were taken but there were no signs of forced entry to the residence.

Burglars broke a panel in the back door of 2013 E. 47th St. Monday afternoon and took a $600 electric guitar, according to resident J.B. Roper.

Rufner Arrested At Davis Trial

FORT WORTH (UPI) — While testimony centers on the multimillion-dollar Kendavis Industries in the T. Cullen and Priscilla Davis divorce trial, one of Mrs. Davis' alleged former lovers has been arrested on a Tarrant County sheriff's warrant.

W.T. Rufner, one of the most colorful figures involved in the recent trials of the Fort Worth millionaire, Wednesday showed up at Davis' divorce trial and was promptly hauled off by sheriff's deputies who said Rufner was $8,000 behind on child support payments.

Rufner was taken into custody amid tightened courtroom security because of a death threat receivedby Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla, but his arrest had nothing to do with the new security measures.

Rufner had attended previous days of the divorce session but was missed by the deputies.

Tarrant County Sheriff Lon Evans said, however, he had not been concerned about Rufner continuing to elude officers because "we knew he'd be back."

Three years ago, Davis was charged in the shooting death of Mrs. Davis' daughter at the mansion built by Davis but occupied solely by his wife since the divorce proceedings began in 1974.

During the trial, in which Davis was acquitted, Rufner testified he once had been among Mrs. Davis' lovers and a photograph of Rufner was introduced as evidence showing him wearing only a strategically placed sock and standing next to Mrs. Davis.

At another trial that finished earlier this year, one involving a list of persons Davis allegedly wanted killed, Rufner was supposed to have been on the list. That trial ended in a hung jury.

As well as being directly involved in the trials, Rufner also became a favorite of the news media by providing colorful quotes on the persons involved and drinking with whomever was inclined to listen to him.

Before the divorce case testimony Wednesday, which involved more discussion of Davis' multimillion-dollar Kendavis Industries, persons attending the session had their pockets and handbags searched for weapons.

The FBI in Dallas indicated they had received death threats naming Tarrant County district attorney Tim Curry, Mrs. Davis, her lawyers and their families.

The threats were part of an anonymous letter Mrs. Davis received at her Fort Worth mansion.

The FBI said it was investigating the case but had no immediate leads or suspects.

Consultants May Stay On Part-Time Basis

Lubbock County Hospital District officials said Wednesday they probably no longer need Hyatt Medical Management Services Inc. on a full-time basis, but may call on the consultants part-time.

Jack Strong, chairman of the district's board of managers, made that statement after the board met for two hours in closed session to consider renewal of its contract with the California-based management firm.

Hyatt was chosen in April 1977, to help run the district's Health Sciences Center Hospital. The two-year contract, which expires next month, cost the district $305,000.

Extending the contract reportedly would cost the district about $200,000 a year.

"We've asked them to come back to us with part-time cost figures. We don't feel we need them full-time, as we have the past two years," Strong said.

He said the district may want to keep Hyatt only "on retainer, so we can call on them from time to time," to advise hospital officials on such areas as personnel recruiting and patient billing.

The hospital board will meet March 16 to continue consideration of Hyatt.

Engineer To Discuss Energy Shortage

Howard H. Hinson, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texas Pacific Oil Company Inc., will discuss the energy shortage at the Engineers Week dinner at 7 p.m. today at the Hillcrest Country Club in Lubbock.

The dinner is open to the public. Tickets are $9 each and may be obtained by calling David M. Hansen, (806) 742-4228.

Hinson is a graduate of Lubbock High School and holds the bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University. He has been presented both the Distinguished Engineer and the Distinguished Alumnus awards at Texas Tech.

He is a member of the board of directors of the American Petroleum Institute and a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Society of Petroleum Engineers, Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association and Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Hinson began his career with the U.S. Bureau of Mines at Amarillo but joined Continental Oil Company in 1948. When he took early retirement in 1966, he was president and senior director for 22 CONOCO subsidiaries.

He was employed as consultant by Joseph E. Seagram & Sons in 1971 to evaluate their exploration activities. He was appointed president and chief executive officer of Texas Pacific Oil Company Inc., a wholly owned Seagram subsidiary, in 1972. Five years later he was named chairman of the board.

Hinson's topic for the address is "Why the Energy Shortage?" Engineers Week is a national event. The banquet is sponsored by the South Plains Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

Regional Offices Opened To Handle Complaints

For people who've had a problem with airline service that's none too quickly solved, the Civil Aeronautics Board has good news.

They've recently consolidated the Bureau of Enforcement and Office of the Consumer Advocate into a new Bureau of Consumer Protection, with seven regional offices around the country.

Consumer complaints, which formerly were sent to Washington, will now be handled on a regional level.

"Usually passengers and shippers can resolve their problems with the airlines," said George Meyers of the CAB's Fort Worth office, "but where they run into snags, we can assist them."

Primary objective of the BCP is to aid passengers and shippers who have had trouble arranging flights or trouble on the flights themselves.

When difficulties are not covered by regulations, BCP may propose new rules or modifications of existing ones.

Meyers said he and his assistant have received more than 300 written and telephoned complaints and general inquiries since Jan. 1.

Dancing Invigorates Students

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Before they are called on to exercise their minds, boys and girls at Hardwick Elementary exercise their muscles — first by jogging around the campus, then by dancing disco in the school's "Song and Sweat Shop."

"Dancing is fun. It wakes you up before you have to go to class," said fourth-grader Darin Goen, one of about 25 volunteers for the 7:45 a.m. routine at Hardwick, 1420 Chicago Ave.

The "Early Morning Awakening" sessions — during which students boogie to such disco hits as "Macho Man" and "Le Freak" — are sponsored by teacher Sandra Carter as part of National Physical Education and Sport Week, March 1-7.

"The kids enjoy getting up early and doing something fun and active. This really gets them in gear for the day ahead," Mrs. Carter, who has been teaching 13 years, half of them at Hardwick, said.

Mrs. Carter opens the half-hour pre-class sessions by taking students on a 10-minute run. Then they meet in the Hardwick music-physical education room, nicknamed the "Song and Sweat Shop," for what officially are called "aerobics and rhythmic activities."

The teacher plays a tape of disco songs and leads the children through routines that include jumping jacks, pushups, running in place, bends, twists and honest-to-goodness disco moves.

Today the volunteers will get some professional advice from dance instructor Karla Parks, who conducts "Disco Minutes" for a local television station. She has accepted an invitation from Mrs. Carter to demonstrate disco steps for the children this afternoon.

"You get to jog," said 5th-grader Amy Damron, who added that the running will help prepare her for track competition. "And you get to dance."

Remarked classmate Raychelle Darty, who stands five feet tall and weighs all of 98 pounds: "I feel I'm a little overweight for my age and need the exercise."

X-Rated Film To Be Edited

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Debby the non-cheerleader will be spending even less time in uniform, with hopes that will appease the indignant Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders.

To comply with a federal court order obtained by attorneys for the cheerleaders, the sex movie "Debbie Does Dallas" will be edited to eliminate the impression that the heroine is a member of the squad, such as shots of her in, in partially in, uniform, a spokesman for the Pussycat theater chain said Wednesday.

A change in advertising and elimination of a 90-second segment will satisfy the main intent of the order issued Tuesday by U.S. District Court Judge Lawrence Lydick, said attorney Robert McDaniel.

"My clients will continue to show the film," he said, "but won't show the uniform on Debbie."

The judge issued the order, agreeing the movie infringes on the cheerleaders' name and damages their image.

"The defendants have appropriated that name and are using it for profit," Lydick said in his ruling.

Carrier Bans Cigars, Pipes

CHICAGO (UPI) — American Airlines will no longer permit the smoking of cigars and pipes aboard its planes, but cigarettes still are allowed.

William P. Shannon, a vice president of American, said the ban, effective immediately, was adopted as the most practical way of complying with a recent Civil Aeronautics Board dcision that orders all airlines to immediately restrict the use of cigars and pipes in flight.

"We regret having to impose the ban," he said Wednesday, "but the stringent new rules on cigar and pipe smoking would have impossible to administer without creating confusion and possible delays at boarding gates and inside our planes."

American will continue to make special smoking sections available.

Emmy Winner To Speak

Attorney and journalist Fred F. Graham, legal correspondent for CBS News, will discuss "Censorship" Tuesday at Texas Tech University.

Graham, who received three Emmy awards for his coverage of Watergate and the Agnew resignation, will speak at 8:15 p.m. in the University Center Theatre. His lecture is sponsored by University Center Cultural Events.

Tickets, at $2 for Tech students and $3 for others, are available at the UC Ticket Booth.

Graham reports on the Supreme Court, the Justice Department, the FBI and activities in the legal field. The Little Rock, Ark., native began his journalism career in 1957 as a reporter for the Nashville Tennessean newspaper. He later was press secretary to a Tennessee gubernatorial candidate. Graham received his law degree from Vanderbilt in 1959 and practiced law in Nashville from 1960 to 1963.

He was chief counsel of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Amendments, a special assistant to the secretary of labor from 1963 to 1965 and also deputy chief counsel of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

Graham became a correspondent for The New York Times in 1965, covering the Supreme Court. He joined CBS News in 1972. Graham is a trustee of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press.

French author Guy de Maupassant, who died in 1893, wrote about 300 short stories.

France To Suggest Starting Date For Monetary System

PARIS (AP) — France will suggest to its Common Market partners that the new European Monetary System (EMS), aimed at smoothing out fluctuations in their currencies, should start operation next week, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing announced Wednesday.

The EMS system will cover all the Common Market nations except Britain, which refused to go along with an agreement reached in Brussels over the past several days.

The system aims at a closer link between the currencies to avoid wide exchange rate swings that affect trade. It should also should offer some shield against dollar variations.

The system had been scheduled to start Jan. 1, but France delayed it by demanding the Common Market dismantle a farm price support system it claimed was affecting French exports. Agreement to phase it out over two years was reached in Brussels by eight of the nations, but Britain, failing to obtain deletion of language implying farm price rises, refused to sign.

Giscard d'Estaing was quoted by spokesman Pierre Hunt as saying that because of the agreement on farm subsidies, France was liffting its reservations on the EMS.

Reading a cabinet statement, Hunt said France "like its seven partners, finds the position taken by the British delegation on the problem of fixing farm prices to be unacceptable."

The statement said that as a result of the Brussels decision, French farm prices would be increased and the level of subsidies that adversely affect French farm exports would be "substantially diminished."

It added that the subsidies on pork would be "practically eliminated."

In the past week, French pig farmers have blockaded the borders against pigmeat imports. They have held up trucks for days and in one incident, sprayed 60 tons of imported pork with fuel oil. They suspended the blockades Tuesday in anticipation of the Brussels decisions.

Common Market leaders are holding a two-day summit meeting here next Monday and Tuesday. It is expected to give the formal go-ahead to the scheme and iron out any remaining problems among the eight participants in the EMS — West Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Italy, Ireland and Denmark.

Sharp Food Price Hikes Reported In Britain

LONDON (UPI) — The price of food in Britain has more than doubled in the last five years, and that's official.

Food prices, have risen by 115.6 percent since the beginig of 1974, Prices undersecretary Robert MacLennan told parliament recently.

MacLennan blamed membership of the Common Market for 10 percent of the increase, but sidestepped questions to forecast price increases over the next 12 months.

The price of foodstuffs tended to vary with the weather and this year's hard winter has resulted in a steep increase in the price of vegetables, he said.

"Seasonal foods vary very much from year to year. a large part of this figure has been due to the quite exceptional rise in the price of vegetables," he said.

HEW Seeks Annual Flu Shot Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's science adviser and a group of medical experts disagree over whether the government should again become involved in flu shots for the elderly.

The Department of Health, Eduucation and Welfare wants a locally-administered annual flu shot program, with emphasis on people in high-risk groups.

"It goes without saying that everyone in the high-risk group should be reached, and no one not in the high-risk group should be denied access to immunization," Frank Press, director of the White House Office of Science and Technology, told scientists this week.

However, Press questioned "to what extent should the government seek to organize and to direct services on its own?" He said flu policy should consider public concern about "how much the federal government should intrude in the institutions, in the lives of people."

Several dozen medical experts and others attending the meeting, however, endorsed the HEW policy. They said the risks of serious disease or death from flu "increase significantly beyond age 45."

HEW distributed 3.5 million doses of flu vaccine to state and local health agencies last fall, but HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said only 800,000 people were vaccinated.

"The legacy of the swine flu program is a continuing obstacle to effective immunization," he said, referring to the 1976 immunization of more than 40 million Americans against an epidemic that never occurred.

Deputy Mayor Aids Police

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York City Deputy Mayor Philip Toia was leaving his office Monday when a mounted police officer galloped up to him, handed him the reins to his horse and ordered, "Hold these!"

The cop, his gun drawn, then ran into the Prudential Savings Bank in the building where a young man had just held up a teller.

"The first thing I did was to turn the horse around to put him between me and the bank," Toia said later.

A few seconds later, the unidentified policeman emerged and ran down the stairs of the nearest subway station where, witnesses said, the robber had fled.

Firms Charged With Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three out of five of the nation's largest corporations were the objects of enforcement actions in 1975 and 1976 for allegedly violating federal laws, a government-backed study shows.

Nearly half of the largest firms were charged with "serious" or "moderate" violations, sociologist Marshall Clinard said in testimony prepared for presentation today at a House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on crime.

He did not specify the difference between a "serious" crime and a "moderate" one.

Clinard, a professor at the University of Wisconsin, undertook his research with a grant from the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. Final results are due May 31.

The subcommittee on crime is in the midst of a long-term review of white collar crime and also is reviewing possible changes in LEAA.

Clinard said he found it unlikely that a corporate executive convicted of a federal crime would be forced to spend time in prison. Even when these executives are incarcerated, he said, they generally receive light sentences.

The 582 unidentified corporations he surveyed were mostly manufacturing concerns. Banking, insurance, transportation, communication and utilities companies were excluded, according to Clinard's prepared statement.

He said his survey revealed these statistics:

—A total of 1,554 actions were initiated against the companies with 350 different firms being involved in at least one case.

—Some 32.3 percent of the violations were for breaking manufacturing laws, 28.3 percent were environmental, 17 percent were labor related, 9.8 percent concerned unfair trade, 7.9 percent were administrative and 3.7 percent were financial.

—No sanctions were imposed on 115 (37 percent) corporations while 367 (63 percent) had at least one enforcement action against them.

—Monetary penalties of $5,000 or less were imposed in 275 cases and penalties ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 in 38 cases. Sanctions costing more than $50,000 were recorded in 26 cases.

Clinard said he identified a moderately strong tendency for larger corporations to be faced with smaller monetary penalties.

Corporate executives were given criminal sanctions for failing to carry out legal responsibilities in less than 1 percent of the cases initiated, he said.

Of the 61 executives convicted of various actions, about 64 percent were found guilty of federal antitrust violations, 20 percent of Securities and Exchange Commission violations involving illegal payments and 8 percent of violating pure food and drug laws, he said.

Nineteen percent were placed on probation, 10 percent were given suspended sentences and 8 percent went to jail. The rest received fines only.

The companies in Clinard's survey consisted of 477 manufacturing firms, 18 wholesale operations, 66 retail outlets and 21 service-related businesses. Their 1975 annual sales ranged from $300 million to more than $45 billion with an average sales volume of $1.7 billion for the parent firms.

Data used in the survey covered all enforcement actions initiated or imposed by 25 federal agencies during 1975 and 1976.

Panicky Calls Follow Decision Striking Down Alimony Laws

By United Press International

The Supreme Court's ruling striking down alimony laws that discriminate against ex-husbands prompted a flurry of panicky calls to some divorce lawyers, but attorneys say it likely will not result in many ex-wives financing their spouses.

Attorney John L. Capell III of Montgomery, Ala., who successfully appealed to the high court to overturn his state's alimony law, said his office received more than 300 telephone calls the day after the ruling, mostly from men wanting a similar way out of divorce settlements.

"One judge told me the only thing to do was lock the court and throw away the key," Capell said. "Literally thousands and thousands of cases are affected."

Alabama, however, was one of only about a dozen states that still enforced antiquated laws granting alimony exclusively to women. Judges in many more states take the modern view — legitimatized by the Supreme Court's Monday ruling — that treats both sexes equally under the law.

For instance, California in the last five years has switched from "divorce" to "marriage dissolution" proceedings, providing a "no fault" breakup with neither spouse even allowed to claim whose conduct was responsible for the split.

"Irreconcilable differences" are sufficient to end a marriage in California. The judge then splits the parting couple's property down the middle and decides who should pay alimony — called "spousal support" — and-or child support.

In many instances, California women have been ordered to pay what amounts to alimony.

Most lawyers, however, expect the now-official view on alimony will not cause a significant shift in the payment pattern, mainly because men still dominate the nation's work force and higher-paying jobs.

"There's going to be a lot of fuss and feathers, but in reality it's not going to make much difference as a practical matter. Men should not be jumping for joy," said Manhattan attorney Eleanor Alter. New York was among the states still limiting alimony payments only to ex-wives.

Washington attorney John Karr noted Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia divorce courts have treated men and women equally for years, but men pay women in the vast majority of cases.

"It's always been the case of the breadwinner giving support," Karr said. "A lot of it has to do with where the kids go."

Said Boston attorney Melvin Morris: "I've never handled a divorce case where a man has gotten alimony. I think the ruling is a step in the right direction and follows the pattern with what's going on in the country with equal rights."

The head of Rhode Island's family court system said judges have been willing to order wives to pay alimony, but the situation never presented itself.

"Seldom in Rhode Island does a woman have more assets than a man," said Judge Edward P. Gallogly.

Attorney Bill Srstka in Pierre, S.D. — a state that recently allowed men to collect alimony — said "I think more and more men will qualify as time goes on because more women are going into the work force."

Marvin To Take Witness Stand

LOE ANGELES (UPI) — Lee Marvin said the trial of the suit brought by his former mistress will hear the tale of their six-year affair "from a different perspective" when he gets to speak his piece on his own terms today.

The actor, who testified earlier in the eight-week-old trial when he was called for questioning by Michelle Marvin's attorney, was scheduled to take the witness stand today in his own behalf for the first time, after conclusion of testimony by Louis Goldman, his chief family attorney.

Marvin told reporters his testimony, expected to take several days, would go into aspects of his 1964-1970 affair with the former singer that did not come up during her testimony or his previous appearance, when he was questioned by her attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

Asked whether he had any "surprises" in store, Marvin said his testimony would "include areas we haven't gone into before."

"I think the court is going to hear about this from a different perspective," Marvin said, "and the cross examination by Mitchelson should be interesting."

The trial was in recess Wednesday to give Mitchelson a day to recover from bronchitis. Mitchelson suffered a coughing spasm in court Tuesday and was taken to a hospital in an ambulance with an oxygen mask over his face. He was examined and released within a few hours.

Newton Promises To Testify

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, saying he will be acquitted of murder because "people are now prepared to hear the truth," promises to testify at his trial against his attorney's advice.

Prosecutors planned to bring more witnesses today before Superior Court Judge Carl Anderson and the jury of nine women and three men.

The prosecution presented testimony Wednesday from one witness, a former prostitute, and said it plans to wrap up its case by Friday.

Newton, accused of killing a 17-year-old prostitute on an Oakland streetcorner, said at a news conference the charge was "strictly a fabrication."

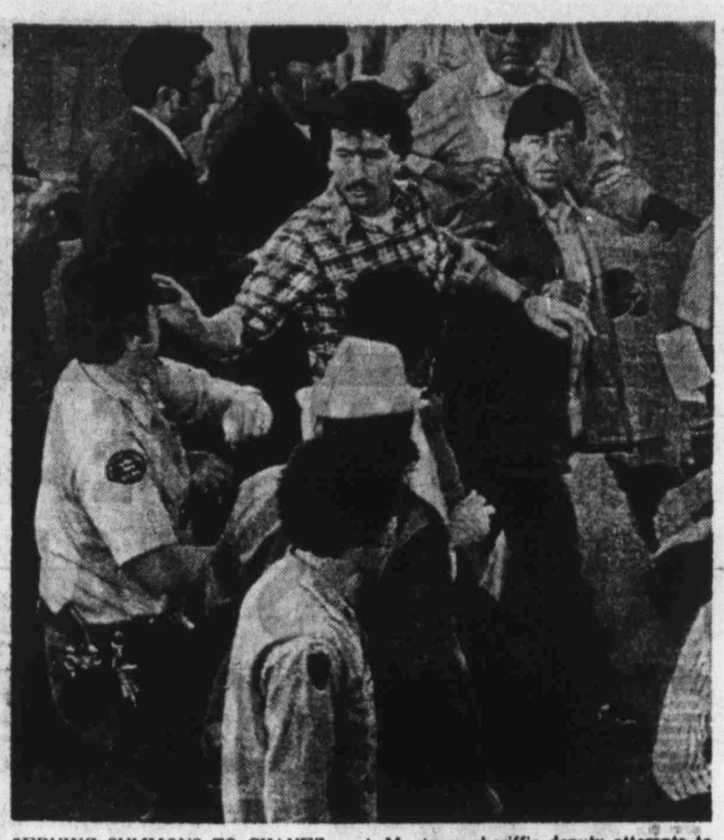

The co-founder of the Panthers said he wanted to testify because, "It's high time the truth come out. A conspiracy started against me 12 years ago is continuing."

"It's a horrible thing that happened to the young woman," Newton, 36, said. "I'm not responsible for it. The state is responsible for prostitution on that street and for making the victims testify against me."

Wednesday's witness, Michelle Jenkins, 20, identified Newton as the man who shot her friend to death on Aug. 6, 1974. She said that Oakland prostitute Kathleen Smith, 17, got into an argument with Newton and told him, "I'll let no little punk stop me from taking care of my business."

Miss Jenkins testified, "She put up a fight and there was a few words, and after that he stopped, pulled a handkerchief out of his pocket and there was a gun after that."

Miss Jenkins, who said she quit prostitution in 1977, now works for a trucking company.

Farm Workers Union Says Boycott 'Option'

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez led more than 4,000 supporters on a march through this Central Valley community and hinted that his union may call a national lettuce boycott as part of a seven-week strike against vegetable growers.

Asked Wednesday about the possibility of a national lettuce boycott, Chavez said, "When the time comes, we will."

However, Marc Grossman, a Chavez aide, later called the threatened boycott "an option."

"We have not declared one," Grossman said. "It's a possiblity at some point, but we don't have anything in the works right now."

In an effort to force a settlement, Chavez said, the UFW will escalate its national boycott of Chiquita bananas, which are marketed by United Brands Inc. of New York, the parent company of one of the largest California growers being struck.

The lettuce strike against 11 major growers in California and Arizona has almost halted harvesting of 40 percent of the nation's winter lettuce crop. About 4,200 UFW members walked off the job Jan. 19, seeking a one-year 40 percent increase in their base wage of $3.70 an hour, plus substantial boosts in piece rate pay and fringe benefits.

The biggest impact has been in the Imperial Valley, where nearly $10 million in lettuce has rotted in the fields.

Columnist Identifies Ape-Like Species

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. — Scientists should cease their unseemly squabbling over the origins of Australopithecus Afarensis, the small-brained creature with the ape-like jaw now alleged to be the missing link.

I identified the species as soon as I saw the picture of that skull grinning out at me from the daily newspapers.

Mulligan's Stew

That is Slobbus Americanus. I'd know him anywhere.

The type is also known as Homo Thictus from the impermeability of his tiny head. I've seen that same simian face peering over jukeboxes, pinball machines and through the windshields of snowmobiles.

Only last week I saw him dumping a case of empty beer bottles along the roadside near here from a moving car. Sure enough, there was that same slack jaw, the same minuscule-brained, ape-like head leering out at me from the window next to the driver's seat.

You've seen him yourself lots of times: shoving his way to the head of the cinema line, pushing into the subway car before the emerging passengers alight, gunning his speedboat down a narrow channel and swamping other boats with a beer can in hand, ripping up the silence of a Sunday morning with his chain saw, smoking in the non-smoking section, being loud and obnoxious in the parlor car, in the ship's lounge, in sports arenas everywhere. This primitive predator with the prognothian profile that, by comparison, would make Peking man look like an Oxford don is also frequently sighted uprooting mail boxes and scrawling lewd doggerel on the doors of public conviences.

Anthropologists Donald Johanson of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History and Tim White of the University of California at Berkeley, who recently unveiled his reconstructed toothy cranium from fossil bones collected in Ethiopia and Tanzania, regard him as a previously unrecognized human ancestor who lived three million to four million years ago. They named him Australopithicus Afarensis, after the Afar region of East Africa where dem bones were collected and yielded 13 individual skeletons.

Challenging this, Kenya anthropologist Richard Leaky contends that mankind is much older than four million years and there is no clear evidence of a fossil form that can be labeled as our earlier forefather. Dem bones, in other words, don't add up to great grandfather in the nth degree, although all parties concerned seem to look upon Africa as his oldest stamping ground.

The fossil presence of Slobbus Americanus on the dark continent can easily be explained. He probably got drummed out of the Peace Corps for molesting an underage native girl or kicked off a passing ocean liner for excessive drinking and intolerable shipboard behavior or left behind in the transit lounge at the airport amid a litter of empty duty free bottles.

In all probability, he free-loaded his way to Ethiopia on some sort of student grant or with a stolen credit card since the species is known to have a permanently atrophied wallet hand. At least he has never been sighted picking up a check.

The Afar creatures now hailed as man's oldest ancestors are described as scavangers and gatherers who walked erect even though they were twice as old as the oldest known tools. Again, there is no contradiction here.

Slobbus Americanus has rarely been associated with even the most primitive tools, certainly not the broom or the wheel barrel. However in bygone eras he was depicted leaning on a W.P.A. shovel and in later stages of development has shown a predilection for the chain saw and the power mower.

In England, this common ancestor to us all is known as Yobbus Brittanicus. He is most often sighted on Saturdays after soccer matches ripping up British Rail coaches and subway cars with the same demented gain that characterizes the anthropoid features of his American cousin. Bent out of shape by the truncheons of the Bobbies, his fossil remains are often found on the terraces, the bleacher sections of English and Scottish football stadiums.

Down Under, where the stronger beers more rapidly rot the brain cells but have a preservative effect on the fossil remains, the species is known both as the Great Australian Git and the Abominable Antipodean. A brash beer-swilling bully and braggart with a high raunch content, this specimen of homo quondam erectus often visits native watering holes as early as 10 a.m. and departs with a characteristic lurch long after dark. Vaguely carnivorous when coaxed away from the grape and the grain, the Aussie version of Australopithecus — pronounced to rhyme with thick cuss — can survive for weeks on end on meat pies and sausage rolls.

He has often been observed carrying a surfboard en route to frightening sharks away from Bondi and Manley beaches. Sharks are believed to flash some sort of electronic signal to each other at his approach.

All three variants of homo foedus (horrible), the American, British and Australian, are notorious scavangers and litterers, desolating the environment they pass through, offending whatever more advanced species they meet. The artifacts linking them however tenuously to homo sapiens and civilization as we know it are a chain of rusting beer can and broken spirits bottles, making the sub-species anthropology's only recyclable missing link.

Palecanthropologists say the primitive jaws and protruding teeth of the fossils recently put on display at the Pittsburgh symposium indicate the species has not diverged far from the apes.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, March 8, the 67th day of 1979 with 298 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. was born March 8, 1841.

On this day in history:

In 1894, New York became the first state to pass a law requiring dogs to be licensed.

In 1917, strikes and riots in St. Petersburg marked the start of the Russian Bolshevik Revolution.

In 1961, the U.S. nuclear submarine Patrick Henry arrived in Holy Loch, Scotland, from Charleston, S.C., the first American sub to use the Scottish naval base.

About 600,000 babies are born to American teen-agers yearly, according to the National Foundation-March of Dimes, which says one in 10 of the babies has low birthweight.

In 1977, the U.S. House of Representatives approved, with some modifications, a tax stimulus program proposed by President Carter.

A thought for the day:

FAA Orders Removal Of Lithium Batteries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday it has ordered pilots to remove all lithium sulfur dioxide batteries from their planes because the batteries, used mainly to power emergency raido transmitters, may explode or cause other hazards.

"We estimate that about a third or more than 180,000 aircraft in this country have lithium sulfur dioxide batteries, and that 95 percent of these batteries are used for emergency location transmitters," an FAA spokesman said.

Pilots were given 30 days from March 28 to remove the batteries, but were advised to act "as soon as possible." The spokesman said batteries should be buried after they are removed.

Emergency location transmitters that use lithium sulfur dioxide batteries must be totally removed from all aircraft, the spokesman said. He said pilots will be allowed to fly without the transmitters for 180 days starting March 28.

The automatic emergency transmitters, designed to lead searchers to a plane after a crash, have been required by act of Congress in all U.S. private, commercial and commuter planes since 1974. The law was passed after House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs disappeared in a 1972 crash in Alaska and his plane was never found.

Scheduled airliners are not required to carry the locators, but many do.

About two-thirds of such transmitters use alkaline or magnesium batteries that pose no problem, the FAA spokesman said. The FAA's order listed model numbers for six brands of transmitters containing lithium sulfur dioxide batteries, he said, and a seventh brand will be identified in a supplementary directive.

"In a recent six-month period there have been six explosions of lithium sulfur dioxide batteries, one of which tore a four-inch hole in the fuselage of a general aviation plane," the spokesman said.

He said there also have been spontaneous fires and two cases of disabling corrosion caused by sulfur dioxide gas that leaked from batteries and combined with moisture to form sulfurous acid — less corrosive that sulfuric acid, but strong enough to destroy an autopilot and eat through a set of control cables.

"There have been no deaths, injuries or accidents as a result any of these incidents," the spokesman said.

Canadian Caviar Not Selling Well

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — While some Canadians are buying imported caviar for $80 a pound, others are selling domestic caviar to Japan for $5.50 a kilogram.

The small yellow eggs of freshwater whitefish, of which more than 4.1 metric tons were harvested in Canada last year, has the same texture as classic sturgeon roe but a slightly different flavor.

It doesn't sell well in Canada.

Buyers Really Pay For 'Freebies'

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Add the freebie to the endangered species list.

"It's being squeezed to death," said Robert W. Johnson of Purdue University's Krannert graduate school of management.

"The notion that one receives something for nothing is a paradox, anyway, charity excepted. That there is no such thing as a free lunch is a truism.

"An oil and grease job used to get you a vacuumed car and washed windows, but no more. Service station operators can no longer afford it."

The same applies to road maps and free air for tires.

"If the consumer gets a matchbook 'free,' he is paying for it indirectly in some other way," Johnson said. "Whether the businessman counts its as advertising or not, it is still an item that must be accounted for in his profit-and-loss statement."

American consumers want service, and invariably will get it, Johnson said.

He cited "the new discount store with its pipe racks full of self-service clothing."

"Patrons soon want an alterations department," he said. "Then clerks appear, and a floorwalker, followed by carpeting, acoustic ceiling and indirect lighting."

"Some hotels provide shower cape, sewing kits, ice, coffee, stationery, ash trays," said Lee M. Kreul of Purdue's department of restaurant, hotel and institutional managment. "It is all charged to advertising. But is it free? Is it a cost of doing business which is offset by charges to the customer in some other way?"

Popcorn and peanuts in some taverns and restaurants are "free," Kreul said, but really are "designed to make one thirsty so more drinks will be purchased."

"If customers have the feeling they are getting something for nothing, they are pleased," Kreul said. "Airline tours provide carry-on bags, folders for visas and passports, baggage stickers, other little mementos, 'for free.' There is little doubt, however, that the cost is included in the package tour price."

Sylvia C. Howell of the department of consumer sciences and retailing, said some stores still offer special services free in the hopes increased traffic will offset the cost.

"There are free cooking schools, and free lessons on painting or wallpapering," she said. "These are to encourage people to buy appliances or merchandise.

"But the buyer is actually subsidizing these promotional efforts. Department store profits today are as low as 3 percent. That doesn't leave much room for free services."

THE WHITE HOUSE

Senator's Hearing Aid Draws Suspicion From Carter Aide

By FRANK CORMIER

CAIRO (AP) — Before the world knew President Carter would be flying here this week, Carter had what he supposed was a private telephone conversation with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Was the call as private as Carter imagined?

The question arose because White House reporters got first word of the conversation, on Sunday, from a presidential visitor, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill. In fact, some reporters got the definite impression that Percy was present when the call was made.

Informed about this, White House press secretary Jody Powell was incredulous. He insisted Percy could not have have been privy to the conversation because he was not with Carter in the Oval Office at the time.

"Maybe that's a more sophisticated device than we thought," Powell said.

Pair Killed

The weekend visit to Washington by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, which proved to be the prelude to Carter's dramatic travels, pointed up the unpredictable side effects of official diplomatic visits.

Two young men approaching from an intersecting street ignored a police barricade and swung onto the blocked road. Cruisers took off in pursuit.

The chase continued into the District of Columbia, at speeds up to 90 miles an hour. It ended when the fleeing car spun out of control into a tree.

The two young men were killed.

Observe Protocol

It's an open secret that Carter and Begin are not great admirers of each other. But during the Israeli leader's Washington visit, both remembered to smile for the cameras, embrace at least once and shake hands as often as possible.

Begin, an old-school European, even remembered in the high emotions of last Sunday's final scheduled meeting to observe one of the niceties of protocol.

As the two men walked to Begin's waiting limousine behind the Oval Office, the prime minister found himself at Carter's right.

Book Left Behind

If it's any consolation, the book was placed under the Holy Bible.

Carter Confides

Before a glimmer of hope arose in the Middle East, and following unsettling developments in lots of other places, Carter last week confided to a group of small business representatives:

"I can tell you accurately that the longer I am here in the White House as president, the more I cherish my years as a small-business man."

Unwanted Results

Even routine motorcades can have unwanted results. During one such in Mexico City last month, Carter's limousine broke down and he had to move to a "spare" — an empty vehicle that tags along near the end of all presidential processions, just in case it's needed.

On a subsequent routine drive around Washington, the "spare" lost a costly wheel cover, but you can rest assured no one stopped to retrieve it.

Voyager 1 Heads For Saturn

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — It's on to Saturn for Voyager 1, but the spacecraft may be hard pressed to duplicate the spectacular, if sometimes puzzling, photo essay of mighty Jupiter and its moons.

The latest color pictures of Jupiter, meanwhile, showed delicate swirls of soft colors — mingling shades of orange, tan and blue — in the clouds masking the gas and liquid planet.

Voyager 1, sailing deeper into space, was searching today for still-undiscovered moons. So far, scientists have accounted for 13 moons around the planet.

The ship faces a 20-month journey to Saturn, arriving late next year. Jupiter, meanwhile, will have another visitor in July when Voyager 2 sails by for a close look before moving on to Saturn.

"It doesn't look like much," he conceded. "But after all, Amalthea has never been seen before as anything more than a point of light, and not many people have even seen that."

Voyager also revealed for the first time details of three of Jupiter's four largest moons.

Ganymede and Callisto, about the size of the planet Mercury, are frozen worlds that appear to be about 50 percent ice and water.

Callisto, examined by Voyager Tuesday, is peppered with bright spots that are craters 12 to 30 miles wide, said planetary geologist Larry Soderblom.

Ganymede's surface also includes brilliant white craters, although fewer than on Callisto.

Soderblom said Ganymede, largest of Jupiter's moons, is blanketed by a spiderweb of bright lines that "are potentially related to some sort of fracture patterns (like earthquake faults) in the crust."

Electronic News Seen In Study

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Picture yourself at home. You'd like to know the outcome of the home team's game last night. Or what the week's bargains are at the local supermarket.

Press a few buttons on your home computer and you have the information you need — on a television screen, or printed out on a piece of paper.

By the mid-1990's that may be the way many Americans get their news, and newspapers that fail to provide home video "information" service by then could find themselves fighting for survival, according to a recent study by the Arthur D. Little consulting firm.

"Electronic information systems won't be a serious threat to conventional news publishing for the next decade," the firm said, "but by the mid-1990's their inroads into the home could substantially impact the news industry."

On the other hand, media firms "able to break away from their traditional roles as newspaper or magazine publishers and become broad-based 'information providers' will find important additional channels for marketing their news and information services," said Donald Sparrow, director of the study.

The $600,000 study was underwritten by a group of major newspaper publishers, broadcasting companies, newsprint producers and electronics manufacturers.

"While there are many barriers to the process of spreading the use of electronic media," Sparrow said, "there are powerful forces at work which favor the acceptance of these media."

However, Sparrow said the electronic-media field is still in its early stage so that "publishers as well as broadcasters, transmission companies and electronics manufacturers still are very much able to influence the direction the new media will take and how they can participate in its growth."

Sparrow arrived at his conclusions by plotting technological advances that might effect the business when three major types of electronic media would hit the mass market.

Those systems ranged from calling up "hard" news on a television screen to a total home information center where a person could — by pressing a few buttons — order food from the local grocery store, make dinner reservations or travel plans.

Arthur D. Little currently is working with an experimental "city" near Osaka, Japan, where 300 residents are hooked up to such a complete home information center, according to Alma Triner, a public relations spokeswoman for the firm.

The system allows its users to request television reruns, order groceries, pay bills automatically and ask for emergency assistance.

In addition, information of any kind transmitted on a television screen can be printed on a piece of paper, Ms. Triner said.

"We don't think the newspaper will become obsolete," said Ms. Triner. "It's going to remain on the scene for as long as anyone can foresee.

"But there undoubtedly will be an evolution of the home information system. We certainly see it going that way now with video recorders, kids playing ping pong on TV and discount stores selling big projection screens for TV.

"As the move goes on, people will see additional things they want from home information centers," she said.

Pentagon Projects Unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Death rays," used by generations of science fiction warriors to zap each other, are moving closer to being real-life battlefield weapons, says a new Defense Department report.

The report, filed by a Pentagon research agency to support its request for more money, provides these other glimpses into weapons development:

—Work is proceeding on "spy in the sky" satellites that could gather intelligence, track potential targets with pinpoint accuracy whatever the weather and defend themselves with energy beams.

—Researchers are developing a gun using electricity rather than explosives to fire projectiles at hypersonic — or faster than supersonic — speeds and a weapon designed to wipe out tank squadrons massed behind enemy lines.

What few details are given on any of the programs are largely couched in language that only superficially resembles English. But the report, prepared by the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency and relesed by a House Armed Services subcommittee, does provide a look at the kinds of weapons Uncle Sam hopes to one day have in his arsenal.

The report says the United States is far ahead of its potential adversaries in computer technology.

This ability to store massive amounts of information and computing functions on small silicon chips gives the United States "the option for pulling significantly ahead of our adversaries in capabilities for surveillance, target acquisition and homing guidance," the report says.

When it comes to lasers and charged particle beams, however, "It is not as clear that we have a unique technology base," the report says.

The report says substantial progress has been made in demonstrating a high-efficiency chemical laser — the possible precursor of a "death ray." Testing is expected to be completed this year, it adds.

These advancements "combine to form a credible basis" that such other components of a "death ray" as a fuel supply system and generator can be built within necessary weight limitations.

As for the electronically-fired gun, the report says only that it would use electromotive force "to propel ammunition without explosives to hypersonic velocities."

The new anti-tank weapon, called an assault breaker, would use advanced radar — the report calls it a "processor intensive target acquisition radar" — to identify company-sized targets behind enemy lines. A missile carrying several individually-targeted warheads then would be launched and guided over the target area by radar. At that point, "terminally guided submunitions can automatically engage and destroy armored targets."

The report says the Pentagon is asking for $462 million, $84.6 million more than this year, for continued research and development of the exotic weapons.

Space surveillance research again would get the biggest chunk, $71.7 million compared to $67.7 million this year, with spending for space defense is targeted at $50.9 million.

The assault breaker project and research on charged particle beams is budgeted at $64 million — up from $31.4 million this fiscal year.

Fireplace Trend Means More Jobs For Sweeps

By BARBARA S. MOFFET

WASHINGTON — Wanted: Agile man or woman who likes to get dirty, isn't afraid of heights, and doesn't mind frequent encounters with birds, squirrels, and raccoons. Flair for clothes helpful.

Finding someone to fit that description might have been difficult a few years ago, but today there apparently are lots of candidates out there. They call themselves chimney sweeps.

Tiptoeing in increasing numbers over the rooftops, they clean the oft-neglected chimneys of America. Many go to work in top hat and tails, the traditional garb of the chimney sweep.

Sweeps say demand for their services is up — probably because of rising heating fuel costs, reports the National Geographic Society. Fireplaces are being lit often to supplement central heating, and some people have abandoned furances altogether in favor of coal or wood-burning stoves.

Membership in the Chimney Sweep Guild, a national group formed about two years ago, has gone through the roof; since last April it has more than doubled. But despite the boom, the guild says Americans aren't as chimney conscious as they should be.

"There is a whole new generation of people who grew up with central heating and don't know how to care for their chimneys," said Linda Bliss of the guild.

According to the guild, a chimney should be cleaned after every four to seven cords of wood burned, depending on whether a fireplace or stove is used, and the type and age of the wood. The less seasoned the wood, the more likely are chimney fires.

Government officials agree that a dirty chimney is a hazard.

"Chimneys definitely need to be cleaned," said Richard Katz of the U.S. Fire Administration. "If a fireplace is being used continually, the chimney should be inspected at the beginning of each season."

The danger occurs as creosote, a gummy, highly flammable substance, builds up on the chimney lining. This layer can catch fire, causing flames to shoot out of the chimney or sparks to shower the roof.

Chimney sweeps often attack chimneys in pairs, one on the roof and the other working from the fireplace below. After the rooftop sweep loosens the soot and creosote with a stiff wire brush, the sweep below removes the damper and cleans with an assortment of brushes. A high-powered vacuum runs continuously, sucking out soot and ash.

Besides furry creatures that love chimneys for homes and white carpeting that draws soot like a magnet, the sweep's big headaches are dampers.

"Some of them just weren't designed to come out, and that makes a chimney hard to clean," said Susan Fine, 32, who started a chimney sweeping company in Maryland with her husband, Ernest, a year ago.

"The first time I went on the roof I was terrified," she said. "But now I love it."

One of the high points of her career so far was cleaning a big walk-in fireplace chimney built in 1729. "I don't think it had ever been cleaned," she said. "It really became a labor of love."

One of the low points was a confrontation with two raccoons that had snuggled up in a chimney she was hired to clean. After they were smoked out, the raccoons plopped down on the top of the chimney and wouldn't budge.

"We tried to nudge them with rods, threw tennis balls at them and everything," Mrs. Fine recalled. She finally had to give up and return later after the raccoons left.

Rarely does today's sweep get into the chimney, in the style of the unfortunate sweeps of 19th-century Europe. Many do adopt the formal dress of Dickensian England, where sweeps were often young impoverished social outcasts who wore undertakers' hand-me-downs.

"The tradition is that if a sweep goes on the roof without his hat, there's no guarantee he'll come down," Mrs. Fine said.

Chimpanzee Signals For Dead Infant

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — When they took Washoe's child from her to try to save it, the mother chimpanzee — taught to speak via sign language — cried, "My baby, my baby."

On Tuesday, when she was told her baby, Sequoyah, was dead, Washoe "just kind of looked up at a blank space in her cage and did not sign back," said Oklahoma University researcher Dr. Roger Fouts.

Minutes before, Fouts said, she appeared very depressed and "kept asking for her baby." He says there is a possibility Washoe comprehends the tragedy.

The year-old chimp had health problems from birth. At first, Washoe refused to feed him and the university's primate institute sent out an urgent appeal for mother's milk. The response was overwhelming, but then they gave Washoe some beer to calm her and her motherly instincts took hold.

U.S. Natural Market For Mexican Gas, Oil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United States is still the natural market for Mexico's oil exports, Mexico's ambassador to the United States says.

The envoy, Hugo B. Margain, also told a news conference this week that Mexico will have to reassess its production limits on oil constantly. Current plans call for a production ceiling of 2.25 million barrels a day to be reached in 1980, and maintained there for several years.

President Jose Lopez Portillo has said production will be limited to about 2.5 million barrels a day through 1984 to avoid huge influxes of inflationary petrodollars.

The surplus gas from any oil production will one of the biggest questions, Margain said, because as oil production goes up more natural gas will be available for use.

He added, however, if oil production limits are adhered to then all the gas will be used in Mexico.

Margain recalled that just six years ago Mexico was a net importer of oil. But then production boomed in the large Reforma oil fields in the Yucatan and Mexico quickly shifted to self-sufficency and became a net exporter of oil.

Mexico is exporting about 530,000 barrels of oil a day, and eighty percent goes to the United States. Total daily production now equals 1.5 million barrels a day, according to statistics from PEMEX, Mexico's national oil monopoly.

The ambassador said Mexico's vast oil deposits have changed its position from one of "relative weakness to one of sufficient strength to influence international relatons."

Some government estimates put them at 37 billion barrels. Industry experts, however, say the total reserves could exceed 200 billion barrels. Saudi Arabia's known reserves are 150 billion barrels.

"The change in the international position of our country comes at a time when it is vital for energy, when energy is scarce both in the world and because of the decline in production in the United States, which is constantly increasing its imports," Margain said.

U.S. Cigarettes Going Abroad

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — American-made Viceroy, Kool and Kent cigarettes soon will be sold in China.

Plans to sell the cigarettes to China were announced Tuesday by Roy E. Barrell, vice president of the Louisville-based international division of Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.

"We are pleased to have the opportunity to sell our brands in this new market environment with such vast potential," Barrell said.

B&W's parent company, B.A.T. Industries, has reached agreement to sell English and German cigarettes in China, according to Barrell.

Barrell declined to specify how many cigarettes will be sold to Chiga under the initial agreement, but called the order "significant."

Prostitutes Pleased With Parliament Vote

LONDON (UPI) — An unusual group of women voters visited the House of Commons to press their case, but to the relief of their clients they refrained from threats to contribute to the debate.

The ladies, more familiar with the streets outside than the public gallery, applauded when a bill to liberalize prostitution passed its first reading by 134 to 50 despite vigorous opposition from a Protestant clergyman.

The bill is unlikely to get any farther and become law because so many others are ahead of it.

But the result must have delighted not only the prostitutes in the gallery but also their highly placed clients.

The campaigning prostitutes had threatened to name some of their important customers if the bill was defeated. But immediately after the vote, a spokeswoman said there was now "no need" to tell all.

"We are absolutely delighted," said Mrs. Selma James of the English Collective of Prostitutes.

Many psychiatrists accept that "prostitutes are the oldest therapists in the world and they are practitioners of professional therapy — they help people deprived of sex to sort out their problems," Labor member Maureen Colquhoun, sponsor of the bill, told Parliament.

Her measure seeks to abolish prison terms for soliciting and establish a comprehensive law to cover all street offenses — everything from hookers to street traders and drunks.

"It is only the peculiar sexual hypocrisy of the British that would single out prostitution or soliciting as an offense," she said.

She said only the young, the old or the socially inadequate prostitutes get caught, and charged the rule branding an apartment with two women selling sex for money a brothel was forcing the world's oldest profession into the clutches of organized crime.

The most vociferous opposition came from the Rev. Ian Paisley, an Ulster Protestant clergyman, who called the bill "a scheme to undermine all the laws at the very heart of the moral fabric of our society."

Laughter rippled through the gallery when he said the measure would be seen as "a green light for many people." But he retreated with dignity, saying he was ignorant of the colors of prostitution.

Japanese Firms Report Earnings

TOKYO (AP) — Most of 74 major Japanese companies with at least 500 million yen, about $2.5 million, in capital did well in the business year ended last October, registering total sales of 4.726 trillion yen, about $23.63 billion, up 8.3 percent over the preceeding year, the National Tax Administration Agency said Wednesday.

The agency, basing its findings on corporate tax returns, said the taxable profits totaled 210 billion yen, about $1.05 billion, up 15 percent over the previous business year, and taxes 72.1 billion yen, about $360.5 million, a 12 percent annual gain.

The report indicated a marked recovery of Japanese business since the middle of 1978, officials said.

The 74 companies are in 14 categories including industrial, financial and service industries.

Those in 10 categories, including autos and other transportation machinery producers, construction firms, ceramic and cement manufacturers benefited especially from brisk public works projects, the agency said. They showed gains in both sales and taxable profits over the previous business year.

Those in the remaining four categories showed a drop in taxable profits despite registering increased sales, due to declining exports and higher operating costs.

Sony Corp. topped the list of high earners for the fourth year in a row, according to the agency, although it reported a 20 percent drop in taxable profits due to smaller export profit margins resulting from the yen's appreciation and poor domestic sales of its television sets and other products.

In contrast, auto makers Isuzu Motors Ltd. and Toyo Kogyo Co., the maker of Mazda cars, showed conspicuous sales and profit gains.

CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED — Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., right, and Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., were in Washington Wednesday for a news conference announcing that Ronald Reagan is making another bid for the White House. Administration Rejects Elections Involvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is ruling out any U.S. involvement in next month's Rhodesian elections despite congressional demands that neutral observers be sent to judge the balloting's fairness.

Sens. George McGovern, D-S.D., and S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., have asked that fact finders be sent to Rhodesia to help President Carter decide whether standards Congress set for lifting economic sanctions against Rhodesia have been met.

The provision, knwon as the Case-Javits amendment, calls for ending the sanctions if Rhodesia holds free, fair and open elections to install a black-majority government.

At a meeting Wednesday of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said lifting the sanctions for any reason would falsely raise expectations that the United States eventually will rescue the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Young said that would be "a cruel hoax."

Richard Moose, the assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said the April elections are widely regarded as "inherently illegal and unrepresentative."

Sending observers might undermine American standing and prestige and "could seriously damage our ability to work with all the parties for a lasting solution of the Rhodesian conflict," Moose said.

He said the United States cannot support the Salisbury government's efforts to effectively exclude such groups as The Patriotic Front from participating in the election.

Nor, he said, can the United States support Patriotic Front demands for arrangements to ensure it a dominant political position.

"We must continue to hold out the prospect, dim though it might sometime seem, of a political solution that can provide a rational alternative to the violence and suffering," Moose said.

He said the United States believes the key to avoiding a long and bloody struggle between blacks and whites in Rhodesia is the holding of impartially supervised open elections under U.N. auspices.

Both Hayakawa and McGovern contended that sending a fact-finding team is a sensible course. McGovern said he believes Congress is likely to lift sanctions without a strong showing that the elections were unfair.

"Just because a bank inspector looks for embezzlement, that doesn't mean he is endorsing crime," McGovern said.

Policy Undersecretary Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stanley R. Resor, a former Army Secretary, is stepping down from his new post as undersecretary of policy for the Defense Department, Pentagon sources say.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Resor abruptly submitted his resignation, apparently because he felt he "had not been able to get a grip on the new job."

Resor was named last year to the Pentagon's third-ranking position, which was created in a departmental reorganization. It had been vacant for more than a year before his appointment.

Republicans Catch Presidential Fever

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential fever is breaking out all over the Republican Party.

There is still a year to go before the New Hampshire primary, but nearly every week brings another flurry of announcements: new candidacies, new "exploratory committees," new polls.

Ronald Reagan is a step closer to entering the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination. Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. plans to announce his candidacy Monday.

Tennessee Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. is giving folks in Kansas a look at him, Rep. Philip Crane is raising money and George Bush is building his campaign organization.

Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, campaign director of Reagan's unsuccessful bid for the 1976 GOP nomination, announced Wednesday the formation of an "exploratory effort" on behalf of the former California governor.

The Reagan explorers include three people who served in former President Gerald R. Ford's cabinet: William E. Simon, who was Treasury secretary; Caspar Weinberger, who headed the Health, Education and Welfare Department, and Earl L. Butz, the former Agriculture Department secretary.

Laxalt cited the group as former Ford supporters who now are backing Reagan.

Reagan is regarded as the early frontrunner and his committee has little to explore except any remaining uncharted pockets of campaign funds.

While Reagan, who authorized formation of the committee, said in a letter that he won't make a final decision until later this year, none of his supporters or rivals has any doubt he will become a candidate, probably in September.

Meanwhile, Baker is taking time out from his duties as Senate minority leader to give a speech at the University of Kansas and let Midwest Republicans get a closer look at him.

Baker often runs third in public opinion polls behind Reagan and Ford. But one national survey released early this week showed former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who entered the race in January, in third place.

Baker professed to be undisturbed. "He has a lot of appeal," the senator said of the former Democrat.

Weicker set up an exploratory committee months ago and will go home to Connecticut Monday to announce his candidacy.

Weicker, who first gained attention as a member of the Senate Watergate committee, hopes to convince Republicans that he is the party's best hope to attract independent votes. Weicker concedes he may be more popular among independents than among Republicans.

George Bush, the former CIA director and Republican Party chairman, who's been practicing law in Texas, has attracted James Baker, a Houston lawyer who was Ford's campaign manager in 1976, to run his campaign. Bush is preparing the enter the race in early May.

And Rich Williamson, who is running Crane's campaign, says the conservative congressman from Illinois has raised nearly $1.5 million.

Crane announced his candidacy last August, getting the jump on everybody. Williamson said his candidate now has a list of 51,000 contributors. He said he expects the big GOP field to shake down after the first few primaries and "after Illinois, it's going to be Crane and Baker or Bush and, maybe, Reagan, hanging on."

Opponents Maintain Ratification Invalid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The original time limit for ratifying the proposed Equal Rights Amendment expires two weeks from today and opponents argue that the ERA will expire with it in at least 30 states.

"My argument is that they (the 30 states) relied on the time limit as one of the terms on which they ratified," says Professor Jules Gerard of Washington University Law School in St. Louis. He maintains that a deadline extension voted by Congress "invalidates the ratification" votes in the 30 states.

That argument, which is rejected by the Justice Department and women's rights organizations, is being pressed in state legislatures and is expected to be argued in at least one court.

Ellen Malcolm, press officer for the National Women's Political Caucus, said the caucus was not worried about the outcome since "the Supreme Court has ruled that Congress has the authority to settle such disputes."

The ERA, which would prohibit discrimination based on sex, has been ratified by 35 state legislatures, although those of Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee subsequently voted to withdraw their approval.

Files of the Federal Register show that all but five of the 35 legislatures which originally voted for the proposed amendment specified in one way or another that the measure would become part of the Constitution if ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states by March 22, 1979.

In submitting ERA to the states in 1972, Congress said it would "be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution of the United States when ratified by three-fourths of the legislatures of the several states within seven years from the date of its submission by Congress."

Last year, Congress extended the deadline to June 30, 1982.

Twenty-five of the ratifying legislatures repeated the full text of the original congressional resolution, including the time limit for ratification, in their ratification resolutions. Five other legislatures did not repeat the text of Congress' resolution, but did state on their own that the amendment would become part of the Constitution if ratified within seven years.

Carter's Plan In Trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's plan to eliminate $600 million in Social Security benefits appears to be in serious trouble in Congress after losing a test vote on a key committee.

By a 12-4 margin, the House Ways and Means Committee on Wednesday defeated a Republican motion to restore the president's proposed elimination of the $250 death benefit.

The committee then voted to include funds for that and other benefits opposed by Carter in its spending recommendations to the House Budget Committee.

The committee's Democratic leaders, although not directly opposing the president's proposals, argued there was not enough time to consider the cuts for fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1.

The leaders promised, however, to study the president's plan as part of an overall Social Security review they said will begin later this year. That review could lead to changes in fiscal 1981, they said.

Carter has recommended eliminating the death benefit, phasing out students' Social Security benefits, ending minimum payment levels and making several other changes.

Woman Requests Burial Alongside Pet Poodle

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Mrs. M.W. Nelson thought so much of her pet poodle, Zak, who died two years ago, that she wants to be buried in the pet cemetery next to him.

"I am sure a lot of people think I am crazy," said Mrs. Nelson, a widow from Ormond Beach, "but I am one of those people who don't care who thinks what as long as it doesn't hurt anybody."

Twice a week, "unless I am sick or out of town," she makes the 160-mile round trip from Ormond Beach to the Pet Memorial Gardens in Jacksonville to visit her poodle's manicured grave.

Mrs. Nelson reserved a second plot at the same cemetery for another poodle, Reggie, acquired since the death of Zak.

Mrs. Nelson has a daughter in Virginia and a son in Pennsylvania. She said both know of her burial plans and have promised to abide by her wishes.

But to make sure there is no misunderstanding, Mrs. Nelson is making out a will that states that if her preference is not followed, any money she leaves will go to animal welfare agencies instead of to her natural heirs.

School Winners To Participate In County Bee

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Winners of 56 spelling bees in Lubbock County schools will participate in this year's county spelling bee Saturday at 9 a.m. in Evans Junior High School auditorium.

James V. Baker, consultant for language arts for the Lubbock Independent School District, is bee director and Sharon Harris will serve as pronouncer.

Judges will include Wayne Dickey, school district consultant an Anita Smither, teacher at Hunt Elementary School.

This year's audience hosts will be Andy Turner, a teacher at Bayless Elementary School, and Joe Williams, a teacher at Overton Elementary School. Lucy Gutierrez, a teacher at Harwell Elementary, and Pat Russel, a teacher at Mahon Elementary, will act as stage hosts.

Recording judge for the competition will be Drew Jackson, principal at Overton Elementary. Drew Foster, consultant for language arts of the Lubbock schools, will be dictionary judge.

As recording judge, Jackson will record each word as it is spelled. If there are any questions regarding the spelling of a word, the recording will be played back. Any such questions from the audience should be directed to one of the audience hosts, officials said. Any protests must be made before the speller in question completes his turn.

The National Spelling Bee contest rules will be used. These guidelines are stated in the back of the "Words of Champions" practice booklet issed by the National Spelling Bee.

The winner of the county bee will advance to regional competition March 31. The Lubbock Regional Spelling Bee will begin at 1 p.m. in Moody Auditorium on the Lubbock Christian College campus. About 20 county spelling bee winners will be entered in that contest. The winner of the regional meet will receive an expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., and a chance to compete in the National Spelling Bee, June 4-8.

Court Says Robbery Suspect Incompetent

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 27-year-old man who, a psychiatrist testified, "thinks he's Dracula," Wednesday was declared incompetent to stand trial for aggravated robbery in the 237th District Court.

Both the defense attorney and prosecutor requested the incompetency finding for defendant Buddy Johnson, 27, after hearing testimony by Dr. Alvin Cronson, a psychiatrist, and Dr. Richard Lee Wall, a psychologist, both of whom had examined him.

Dr. Cronson said Johnson has delusions about being Dracula, the horror story vampire, and is not able to function in society.

Dr. Wall said the defendant is retarded emotionally and intellectually and has the emotional maturity of a 6-year-old.

Both men said he has an IQ of about 60.

Johnson was arrested with two other men in June 1977 in Amarillo and charged with aggravated robbery in holdups in Lubbock and Amarillo.

Dr. Cronson testified Johnson would do anything others told him to do. It was noted during the trial that the other men, who have since pleaded guilty, waited in the car while Johnson, armed with a pistol, entered the convenience stores and demanded money.

He was sent to Rusk State Hospital, certified competent to stand trial and convicted of aggravated robbery in Amarillo in April 1978. He was given a five-year sentence in November and sent here to stand trial for three convenience store robberies that occurred in May 1977.

Defense attorney Floyd Holder introduced evidence Wednesday that Johnson shows artificial improvement in a controlled environment and with medication but relapses when taken out of an institution.

At the time they decided to try him as competent, Amarillo authorities did not know Johnson had spent most of life in state schools in Austin, Abilene, Lubbock and Mexia, Holder said during the trial.

He added that Johnson met the other men after getting lost at an Arlington recreation park while on a Mexia State School outing.

Since last November, Johnson has been in Lubbock County Jail, where other inmates have complained that he behaves bizarrely and sometimes howls like a wolf at night.

Holder speculated after the hearing that Johnson, whose four front teeth are missing, believes he is Dracula because children called him that because of his teeth.

Howell said after the hearing that Johnson will be sent back to Rusk State Hospital.

City Brief Defends Vote Method

The brief also noted that "in 1975, voters of the City of Lubbock were presented with an opportunity to change the present at-large system of election of the city council members.

"The results of that election showed that the Mexican-Americans opposed the change, but that it was supported by the blacks."

The brief added:

"The best test of the at-large system in the City of Lubbock is not by its judgment against some ideal but mythical possibility of perfection, but by a judgment of that which it has in fact accomplished for the minorities and whether any other city under any other different system of government has done any better."

The at-large system "offers all credible candidates unlimited access to that opportunity for success and public service," the brief said.

Hance Bill

Lubbock. The Lubbock Independent School District's current court-ordered desegregation plan requires busing about 2,500 of the city's 30,500 students.

The Lubbock case is on appeal, with the U.S. Justice Department seeking a much broader plan.

Court-ordered busing is "certainly not the end of the world," Hance said. However, he said he opposes busing as a tool for integration because:

—It's costly in terms of money and fuel, especially in light of the nation's energy shortage.

—Recent studies conclude that "busing does not improve the quality of education" for children.

Seale said he has heard that Rep. Ronald Mottle, D-Ohio, will reintroduce his anti-busing constitutional amendment. Like McDonald's bill, the Mottl proposal last year was bottled up in the judiciary committee, which is "stacked with liberals," Seale said.

Mottl almost got his amendment out of committee last year by getting more than 200 congressmen to sign a discharge petition.

"Things look excellent this session for something to happen" on anti-busing legislation, Seale said.

He said the Lubbock anti-busing chapter will meet March 15 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Federal Savings & Loan Association branch office, 2220 34th St., to discuss legislative strategy.

Fire Officials Probe Midafternoon Blaze

A fire that erupted about 2:41 p.m. Wednesday at Ralph's Cooking, 1201 Oak St., and caused more than a $1000 worth of damage to the structure is under investigation.

The blaze is believed to have started in a sleeping area of the establishment. It also caused $100 to $1000 damage to the building's contents.

Eighteen firemen were dispatched in six units to the building owned by C.G. Sherrod of 1312 49th St. The fire was extinguished in less than 10 minutes.

WHY BUY OR LEASE PURCHASE?
Lock in todays prices! The single family home has been and will be the best investment you can make for your family! History will show an 8%-12% increase per year on single family homes in the correct locations in Lubbock. Compare todays prices with 1960, 1970, 1979. Had you purchased a home in 1960 you would have paid $10 per sq. ft.. In 1970, $20 per sq. ft.. In 1978 $28 per sq. ft.. YOU CAN STILL BUY MORE HOUSE FOR THE MONEY IN LUBBOCK THAN ANY OTHER AREA IN THE SOUTHWEST!
ALL OUR HOMES ARE FULL ENERGY SAVING HOMES! CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT OR COME BY.

THAT'S THE BEST EPA ESTIMATED GASOLINE MILEAGE

This year, Datsun's 210 Hatchback with optional 5-speed got a superlative 35 MPG* in the Environmental Protection Agency estimated gasoline ratings. And that's better than any 1979 gasoline car tested. So come on down and see for yourself how we are driven to improve your economy by stretching your mileage.

Standard equipment: ●Split fold-down rear seat to carry passengers and cargo in equal comfort ●Fully reclining bucket seats ●Cut-pile carpeting ●Walk-in seat back release (slides forward to allow easy access to rear) ●Electric rear window defroster ●Side window defogger ●And many other standard features!

STOP HIGH DRIVING COSTS WITH A 210

*1979 EPA estimate for comparisons Optional 5-speed. Your mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, condition of your car and optional equipment.

New 210 Hatchback $4961.

 Does not include license, taxes, destination charges and title fees.

The City has made an environmental review record for the projects which documents the environmental review of the projects. This record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request.
The City will undertake the projects described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development under Title I of the Housing and Comunity Development Act of 1974. The City is certifying to HUD that the City and Mayor Dirk West, in his official capacity as Mayor, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making, and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the City may use the Block Grant funds and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other officer of the City approved by HUD; or (b) that the City's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to HUD at 2001 Bryan Tower, Fourth Floor, Dallas, Texas 75201. Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objection received after April 4, 1979, will be considered by HUD.

Invaders Near Uganda Capital

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Invading Tanzanian soldiers and Ugandan exiles moved to within 50 miles of the Ugandan capital of Kampala today without meeting resistance from President Idi Amin's troops, Western diplomats said.

"There is no fighting now because the Tanzanians are moving up and nobody is shooting at them," a Nairobi diplomat said. "We don't know how far they've gone but, if they keep it up, they could be within artillery range of Kampala in a day or two."

Nairobi diplomats said two days ago the invaders apparently began to move beyond Lukaya, on the road north to Kampala, after shelling the town for several days.

Diplomats in Kampala said the city of 400,000 was quiet, with factories, schools and government ministries operating normally. Asked about reports Tanzanian forces advanced within 12 miles of Kampala, a diplomat said, "I don't believe it. If it were true, there would be some nervousness here, and there isn't any."

There were no official Tanzanian statements on the war and Uganda government radio, monitored in Nairobi, broadcast African pop tunes instead of news. Reporters seeking a coherent account of the conflict sifted through wildly conflicting data from Ugandan exiles, diplomats, travelers from Uganda and Ugandan residents reached by telephone.

And there was no sign of Amin's promised counterattack, although diplomats said daily arms flights from Libya were continuing in an attempt to build up the dispirited Ugandan military. Unconfirmed reports said the shipments included about a dozen MiG and Mirage jets and tanks and artillery.

Since Uganda started the war four months ago, Tanzania has claimed to have destroyed a major part of Amin's MiG strike force. Observers also believe at least a third of Uganda's 20,000-man armed forces have refused to fight.

Anti-Amin exiles, claiming they were expanding the war to include waterborne forces, said they have set up bases on the Sese Islands in Lake Victoria to harass the weapons-supply flights supporting Amin.

Diplomats and well informed independent observers said the invaders approaching Kampala overland included 3,000 exiles and a larger number of Tanzanian regulars, perhaps 7,000 men in all.

Amin was believed to have about an equal number of troops prepared to defend the city, plus an estimated 1,400 Libyan and Palestinian soldiers.

With most of southwest Uganda reported in the hands of his enemies, Amin said a counterattack was in the offing and called on his troops to fight to the last man.

Diplomats say Amin's hard-pressed army is receiving a crucial infusion from Libya of tanks, fighter planes, heavy artillery and infantry weapons. These sources said 1,400 Libyan troops also had been flown to Uganda, but both Libya and Amin denied this.

"The next week or so should show whether the military balance has shifted in favor of Uganda," said one foreign observer.

Worst Flooding Ends In New England

A-J News Services

Flooding is expected to continue in Illinois, but the National Weather Service says the worst is over for inundated towns in New Hampshire and Vermont.

Weather bureau forecaster T.J. Solomon said the ice-choked Connecticut River was receding slowly at Stratford and North Stratford, N.H., where waters rose almost seven feet above flood level Wednesday, forcing more than 100 families from their homes. They remained evacuated this morning.

There were no reports of injuries.

The Connecticut River's banks were expected to crest this afternoon in Hartford, rising six feet above flood levels.

Some lowland flooding was predicted for the Housatonic River at Farmington, Conn., and the Nashua at East Pepperell, Mass., where waters were expected to rise three feet above flood level this morning.

New Hampshire civil defense officials said Wednesday's flooding, fed by melting snow and rain, loosed huge ice floes that jammed sections of the Connecticut River.

The worst damage occurred in Swanton, Vt., where a municipal hydroelectric plant was pummeled by the waters of the Missiisquoi River. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

Temperatures are expected to remain warm today, but area residents can expect lower temperatures tonight as a cold front creeps toward the South Plains.

Southwesterly winds of 15 to 25 mph were forecast to kick up a little dust today, although the National Weather Service has predicted no full-fledged dust storms this week. Winds will shift tonight, becoming northerly at 15 to 20 mph.

Wind warnings were in effect for area lakes today.

Tonight's forecast calls for a low tonight in the mid-30s. The cold front which moved into the Panhandle this morning is expected to reach Lubbock around midnight, according to the National Weather Service.

The mercury is not expected to climb beyond the upper 50s on Friday, but skies are expected to remain relatively clear and no rain is included in the forecast for Lubbock and vicinity. Residents can expect about 11 hours of sunshine today and about 10 hours Friday.

The extended forecast for the South Plains calls for fair skies and cooler temperatures Saturday and Sunday, becoming partly cloudy with a slow warming trend early next week. Highs are expected to reach the 50s Saturday, warming to highs in the 60s Monday. Lows through the weekend should fall in the 30s.

In Illinois, the Army Corps of Engineers, responding to a request by Gov. James R. Thompson, said it will raise levees at five points along the Rock River, the state's worst potential flood site.

At Wilmington, Ill., about 50 persons were evacuated Wednesday as a precaution when the Kankakee River began to rise.

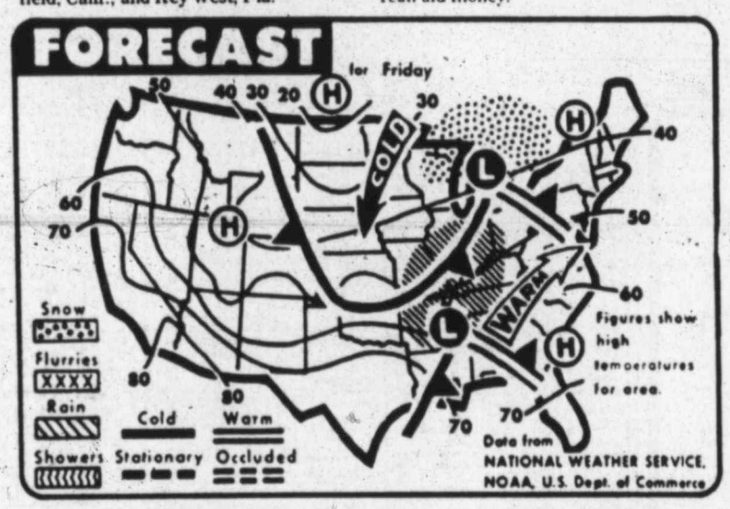

Ice floes caused some damage along the swollen Du Page River in Will County. Steve Kendall, Shorewood village administrator, said chunks of ice "as big as cars" were being carried by the river, knocking down utility poles and causing power outages at homes along the river's banks.

Elsewhere around the nation, a cold front pushed southward through Arkansas this morning, dropping temperatures in the northern part of the state into the low 30s, while readings held in the 50s south of the front.

Light snow fell in eastern Missouri, northern Minnesota and upper Michigan, while freezing drizzle fell over portions of central Illinois and southern Wisconsin. A travelers advisory was in effect for central South Dakota for freezing rain.

Skies were mostly clear from California through much of Texas, with temperatures in the 60s in Southern California. Temperatures were below freezing across Wisconsin, the upper and middle Mississippi Valley and into the eastern half of the northern and central Plains.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 4 in Warroad, Minn., to 63 in San Diego and Bakersfield, Calif., and Key West, Fla.

Passman Jury Selection Drags

MONROE, La. (AP) — Former congressman Otto Passman looks fatigued. The key witness against him is impatient and has left town. There is still no jury in Passman's trial on charges stemming from the Korean rice scandal.

Passman, who became the single most powerful congressman in foreign aid matters during his 30 years as representative for Louisiana's 5th district, is accused of conspiracy, bribery, accepting illegal gratuities and income tax evasion.

Jury selection for the trial in Passman's hometown began Monday. Attorneys for both sides expressed hope the 12 jurors and 6 alternates would be chosen by this evening. Court officials refused to say whether any jurors have been chosen.

U.S. District Judge Earl Veron has called prospective jurors one by one into his offices to be questioned in secret session. Lawyers for both sides, Passman, and a court stenographer have been included in the interviews.

"I don't recall any trial in which it has taken this long to get a jury," said Emmett Wych, chief marshall for the U.S. Western District of Louisiana.

The 78-year-old Passman, suffering from heart trouble and brain disease, is visibly tired as he pushes through the crowds of reporters which cluster around him each day.

Meanwhile, South Korean businessman Tongsun Park, the chief government witness, said he was bored with the tedious process of seating a jury and headed for the airport. He reportedly planned to spend the weekend in Washington.

Park, who had kept to his motel for the most part, told reporters earlier, "I have better things to do."

The March 1978 indictment against Passman named Park as an unindicted co-conspirator. Park was granted immunity for testifying against the man whom he calls a personal friend.

The indictment says Passman took $213,000 from Park to influence the South Korean government to keep Park on as sole agent for U.S. rice sales to South Korean — sales financed with Korean aid money.

The alleged conspiracy was said in the indictment to have been from 1972 to 1975. During that period, the indictment said, Park made $8 million in rice sales commissions.

Park said in the interview that the figure was closer to $9 million but that legal fees and confiscation of his U.S. assets by the Internal Revenue Service had cost him $10 million.

Passman has repeatedly denied that he has taken any money from Park.

"This whole thing is unfortunate," said Park. "I came to do a job. I will tell the truth. It is nothing personal."

Challenges To Jurors Expected

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Attorneys for both sides were expected to begin using challenges today to remove jurors tentatively seated earlier in the week in the first-degree murder trial of Gene Leroy Hart.

After three full days of jury selection Wednesday, nine women and three men had been tentatively seated. That means court officials could find no reason they should not serve as jurors.

Another 15 Mayes County residents have been interviewed and dismissed, most because they said they already hold a strong opinion concerning Hart's guilt or innocence.

Hart, 35, is charged with three counts of first-degree murder in the June 13, 1977 slayings of three Girl Scouts at Camp Scott near Locust Grove.

Chief defense counsel Garvin Isaacs and prosecutor S.M. Fallis Jr. may remove up to nine jurors apiece. Each side will have two challenges in the seating of two alternate jurors.

District Judge William Whistler said he will hold a Saturday session if necessary to have 14 panelists ready to hear testimony Monday.

Isaacs, who characterizes himself as a country lawyer "a little abrupt in my approach and a little rough around the edges," continued to find himself in conflict with Whistler Wednesday.

Isaacs at one point accused Whistler of "bending over backwards to show everyone he will not be prejudiced in favor of another Indian on trial for his life."

Hart is Cherokee. Whistler has Cherokee, Sac and Fox heritage.

He told one prospective juror Hart may remain silent to protect "loved ones" with whom Hart lived during five years as a fugitive from the Mayes County jail here.

Hart was serving sentences totaling 305 years on rape, robbery and kidnapping convictions when he escaped from the jail in September 1973 during post conviction relief hearings. He was charged 10 days after the slayings and was captured April 6, 1978 at a shack 50 miles from the Girl Scout camp.

Cuban Troops Arrive In South Yemen

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — North Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh held unannounced talks with President Hafez Assad today about his nation's two-week war with Marxist South Yemen in the face of military buildups reported on both sides of the border.

Saleh left for Amman, Jordan following his meeting with the Syrian president. There was no immediate reports on the discussions which came after the apparent collapse of the Syrian-Iraqi mediated ceasefire.

In Kuwait, the newspaper As Siyassah said 2,700 Cuban troops and 150 Soviet advisers were flown from Ethiopia to South Yemen in the past three days to bolster its defenses in anticipation of a possible U.S.-aided attack by North Yemen.

U.S. officials have estimated there were 800 to 1,000 Soviet advisers and 500 to 700 Cubans already in South Yemen.

Wednesday, North Yemen rejected a summit with Marxist South Yemen to settle their border war and both sides have ignored appeals of Arab mediators for a troop disengagement.

The U.S. carrier Constellation steamed from its Subic Bay base in the Philippines today toward the Arabian Sea in a strong diplomatic show against any Soviet involvement in the war.

The Carter administration offered Wednesday to send F-15 fighter planes to Saudi Arabia to possibly take over air defense duties, which could free Saudi aircraft to take part in the fighting. The Saudis support North Yemen.

Saleh, the North Yemeni president, who was accompanied by Foreign Minister Abdullah al Asnag and other government officials, flew in from Baghdad, Iraq, the Syrian news agency said. The visit was not previously announced.

Syria and Iraq mediated a cease-fire between the Yemens last Saturday but reports from the region still indicate continued clashes between the two countries.

In Kuwait, the newspaper As Siyassah alleged 2,700 Cuban troops and 150 Soviet advisers were flown from Ethiopia to South Yemen in the past three days in anticipation of a possible U.S.-aided attack by North Yemen.

Another Kuwaiti newspaper, Al Anba, said South Yemeni Foreign Minister Mohammed Saleh Mutih has hinted at the possible use of Cuban and Soviet forces by his country.

"We will not hesitate to recruit troops and military experts from Cuba, Ethiopia or any other state if we were exposed to a foreign aggression," Mutih was quoted as telling a recent meeting of Arab foreign ministers in Kuwait.

In rejecting a summit with South Yemen, Asnag told the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Qabas, "My country rejects such a summit before the withdrawal of Aden's (South Yemen) troops from North Yemen."

Podgorny's Long Career Reportedly Nears End

MOSCOW (UPI) — The long public career of Nikolai Podgorny has come to a quiet end.

For the first time in 25 years, Podgorny was not among the 1,500 persons elected Sunday to the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament. There was no public announcement he had left the rubber-stamp body.

President of the Soviet Union for 12 years, the 75-year-old Podgorny has apperently relinquished his last small hold on public power — a deputy's position in the Supreme Soviet.

But the election results released Wednesday indicated Podgorny's final move from deputy to pensioner was complete.

There has never been a public explanation for Podgorny's fall from power, which wes even more abrupt than the ouster of former Premier Nikita Khrushchev 13 years earlier.

Podgorny's political fortunes began to decline in May 1977 when he was abruptly stripped of the Soviet presidency and his seats in the Politburo and Central Committee.

Observers have speculated that his downfall was attributed to his age, the fact that he was viewed as being close to Khrushchev, or some internal party dispute with Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Podgorny was the No. 3 man, behind only Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin, in the troika that emerged after Khrushchev's ouster in 1964.

In 1960, after spending most of his career in the Soviet food processing industry and in regional Communist Party politics, he was elected to full membership on the Politburo.

Podgorny accompanied Khrushchev to the United States and later became one of his favorite diplomats, going on missions to France, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Turkey and Vietnam.

Yet despite his closeness to Khrushchev, he joined the majority that voted him out of power in 1964 and took charge of personnel in the newly emerging hierarchy.

Although Podgorny's health failed during the critical battle for Kremlin power, he was able to hold on for 12 more years in the largely ceremonial post of president, to which he was named on the retirement of Anastas Mikoyan in 1965.

Dutch Police Capture Van Gogh Slasher

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Amsterdam artist who slashed a van Gogh self portrait 11 months ago tried to deface the Dutch master's "Potato Eaters" Wednesday but did only superficial damage.

Police said Mathijs van Rem, 33, who has a history of mental illness, walked into the Van Gogh State Museum, pulled out his front-door key and made a stab at the painting of a group of peasants sitting around a table eating potatoes.

Guards pulled him away. Officials said he made a superficial cut a few inches long in the upper left corner of the painting, and the museum's restorers believe it can be repaired without difficulty.

Lawyers Claim Contamination Intentional

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee attorneys agreed with the attorneys for the family of former Kerr-McGee nuclear worker Karen Silkwood Wednesday that urine samples taken before her death were contaminated.

However, the Kerr-McGee attorneys alleged testimony will show Miss Silkwood contaminated the samples herself to heighten allegations of negligence at a Kerr-McGee nuclear facility where she worked.

The action came in the first day of opening arguments in the $11.5 million dollar nuclear contamination lawsuit brought by Miss Silkwood's family against Kerr-McGee.

Kerr-McGee attorney Bill Paul argued that Miss Silkwood had the "motive and the means" to slip radioactive plutonium out of the plant.

He said testimony will show she had to pass five self-monitoring devices when leaving the plant and it would have been "almost impossible for her to accidently carry out any of the material."

Paul also argued that because of the late hours she worked it would have been simple for her to "intentionally take plutonium from the plant." He said testimony would show as a nuclear worker's union activist her anger at plant officials prompted her to slip out the material and cause her own contamination.

Gerry Spence, lead attorney for Miss Silkwood's family, opened the proceedings by telling the six men and two women jury the case "ultimately may be about the future survival of the American people."

Isaacs, of Oklahoma City, said one of the women could have overheard a disparaging remark a prosecutor was reported to have whispered in court about Isaacs. But the woman told Whistler at the close of the session Wednesday she had heard nothing.

Casino Stock Leads Mart's Upward Ways

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward in moderate trading today with gambling stocks as the standouts for the second consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had been up by nearly 2 points in the early going, gave ground later on. The Dow index was up .34 at 834.63 by noon. Overall, gainers outnumbered losers by a 7-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market took in stride news of a 1 percent rise in the producer price index in February. The report, released before the market opened, indicates steep increases ahead in consumer prices. Analysts said that report was anticipated.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said that disruptions in oil supplies mean that the department's forecast of a $9 billion improvement in the U.S. trade deficit this year will have to be revised.

Meanwhile, President Carter embarked on his Middle East peace mission. That trip had given the market a lift on Wednesday when the Dow industrial rose more than 7 points but that strength did not carry over early today.

Big Board volume was a moderate 11.96 million shares in the first two hours of trading, down from 13.04 million the previous day.

Golden Nugget which added 3⅜ points on Wednesday added another 2¾ climbing to 26⅝ by midday on the American Stock Exchange. The company plans to open a hotel-casino in Atlantic City. Resorts Internatonal Class A stock, which opened the first Atlantic City casino, rose ¾ to 51⅛ as the second most active Amex stock.

On the NYSE casino stocks were also actively traded. Del E. Webb rose 1⅜ to 21⅜. Trading included a 218,000-share bloc at 20¼. Ramada Inn rose ⅜ to 11; Caesars World added ⅞ to 54⅜ and Bally rose ½ to 61½.

Pay Boost Urged By Teachers

AUSTIN (UPI) — Thousands of Texas schoolteachers are having a difficult time making ends meet and desperately need a total 16 percent pay hike over the next two years, a New Braunfels teacher with a $9,100 annual income has testified.

Juan Espinoza said his salary is insufficient to support his family and literally thousands of his fellow teachers are experiencing the same financial difficulties.

And the president of the 126,000-member Texas State Teachers' Association told the Senate Education Committee that low pay is forcing some teachers out of the classrooms and into administration — or out of education entirely.

Espinoza told the committee, which heard testimony Wednesday on three school finance bills, he only brings home $526 a month to support his wife and three sons.

He was one of 200 TSTA members who jammed the Senate chamber and crowded the gallery in support of a bill by Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland.

The bill would give teachers a 9.8 percent salary increase in 1980 and a 5.2 percent raise in 1981. The salary improvements would cost $425 million of the $1.445 billion two-year school finance bill Snelson is proposing.

The bill would increase a beginning bachelor's degree teacher salary from the present $8,540 per year to $10,000, and move a master's degree teacher from the present $9,110 to $10,630.

(Starting salary for teachers in the Lubbock public school system is $9,240, for a 10-month work period.)

ZBA Approves Variance For Bowling Alley

The Zoning Board of Adjustment this morning opted to weigh the advice of business experience more heavily than a city regulation, and approved the requested variance for construction of a bowling center in the 5200-block of 69th Street in Lubbock.

Armed with national statistics, spokesmen for the Brunswick Corp., an international bowling center operator, told the ZBA that the planned 220 parking spaces for the proposed center were sufficient despite their being well below the city minimum of 365 spaces.

Brunswick has examined the nationwide use of its centers and estimates four to five people per bowling lane, Lubbock attorney Harold Pigg, who represented the corporation, said.

The proposed Lubbock center will contain 40 lanes, meaning maximum parking for 200 customers' cars, "which we think is unrealistic," Pigg said.

Addressing this point further, James Chauncy, Brunswick western regional manager, said: "The great majority of our leagues — 80 to 90 percent — are mixed leagues, and this means husbands and wives or boyfriends and girlfriends who are coming in one car. Even at the height of the shift change (from one league to the next), there are usually still parking places."

The existing city regulation specifies 9.5 parking spaces for each bowling lane. Lubbock zoning administrator Jerrel Northcutt said he was uncertain of the regulation's origins and admitted that it was well in excess of the recommended parking ratio set by the bowling industry.

To protect against the possible encroachment of bowlers onto adjoining property, the ZBA approved the variance conditional upon Brunswick's erecting fences and barricades along the bowling center property lines.

Jury Returns Indictments

EL PASO (UPI) — A federal grand jury investigating organized crime linked to six states Wednesday handed down indictments against a topless lounge manager and two men arrested in the shooting death of an El Paso attorney.

Officials said Steven Michael Fueston, a management consultant to the Lamplighter Lounge West in El Paso, was indicted on five counts of cocaine conspiracy and two other men — previously arrested in the shooting death of El Paso attorney Lee Chagra — were indicted on charges of interstate transportation of stolen property.

The topless lounge purportedly is a "hangout" for Bandidos Motorcycle Club members, who have been the subject of a law enforcement crackdown and have been linked in wide-ranging grand jury investigations into organized crime in six states, authorities said.

Fueston, a former Washington state resident, had testified before a federal grand jury in Seattle looking into similar violations.

The Seattle grand jury reportedly was to solicit testimony from Seattle night life figure Frank Colacurcio whose income tax affairs are also under investigation.

Colacurcio has acknowledged he knows Fueston, but both men have said they have no business relationship.

Fueston, former manager of the Steppin Wolfe Tavern in Everett, last week delivered seven boxes of records from the Lamplighter to the Seattle grand jury.

Wallace and White, police said, have been linked to Carl Lynn, 44, and Alice Marie Guerra, 27, both arrested in January in connection with a Drug Enforcement Administration search that netted large amounts of marijuana.

Navy Applies Expertise To Battle Alcoholism

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Navy, having discovered the answer to the old sea chanty's puzzle, "What do you do with a drunken sailor?" is applying its expertise at the Naval Regional Medical Center here, now THE place for prominent people to battle the bottle.

Last spring, the modern, white four-story hospital treated Betty Ford, who later disclosed she was kicking a drug dependency as well as an alcohol problem.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., checked out last week after a month's stay.

Now, the center's fourth-floor alcohol unit has a new celebrity patient: President Carter's brother Billy, who admitted himself Tuesday evening.

The tab is steep — $266 a day for civilians — and it's difficult to be accepted if you're not in the military: the richest and most famous civilians must obtain special dispensation from the secretary of defense.

Once you're admitted, you're in the Navy for all practical purposes. Writing in her autobiography, Mrs. Ford recalls 6 a.m. reveilles, cleaning details and scratchy woolen blankets.

By all accounts, the program is a tough one, including counseling by ex-alcoholics, physical exercise, lectures and even psychodramas.

Medical experts say it is one of the best of its kind. It reportedly has a 76 percent cure rate, a figure that rises to 89 percent for patients over 35.

The program's history was detailed by Capt. Joseph Pursch, head of the alcohol unit, in a 1976 article for the "Journal of Studies on Alcohol."

"Among seafaring men, the custom of drinking is probably as old as the sailing tradition itself," Pursch wrote.

But, he added, until relatively recently, "The age-old question, 'what do you do with a drunken sailor?' was answered by the administrative fiat, 'you let him go down the tubes,' which meant that he would be expelled into the civilian world."

The Navy's first efforts to help, rather than abandon, its chronic drinkers began in 1965. A retired alcoholic commander and a Navy medical officer, Capt. J.J. Zuska., founded an Alcoholics Anonymous unit for naval personnel in Long Beach — Drydock Group One.

Two years later, a more comprehensive pilot alcohol treatment program was initiated. But it remained what Pursch described as "essentially a bootleg operation ... like a whisky still in a dry county" until it moved into the new naval hospital in 1974.

Today, the alcohol rehabilitaton service has 73 beds. At any given time, an average of 55 to 58 patients are in various stages of the six-to eight-week program.

For the first two weeks, the patient is confined to the hospital except for occasional trips to local A.A. meetings. He is withdrawn as quickly as possible from all drugs, except for vitamins and Antabuse, a medication that makes him sick if he drinks alcohol.

"From then on, when he gets anxious or depressed, we prescribe people instead of pills," Pursch wrote.

Within three days, the patient begins therapy sessions with a group of seven or eight others, supervised by one of eight or nine naval officers who are recovered alcoholics.

Well-known patients are not segregated. Mrs. Ford wrote that her group included a 20-year-old sailor who'd been drinking since age 8, a young officer and a clergyman.

Another fixture described by Pursch are weekly psychodrama sessions in which patients, spouses and staff members enact common problems of alcoholics, such as difficulties with authority and how to avoid returning to alcohol outside the hospital.

Attention also is given to improving patients' general physical condition through jogging, swimming, volleyball or basketball.

Fetal Monitoring Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A health task force is recommending electronic monitoring of a baby's birth for high-risk patients while discounting critics' suggestions that the popular technique be limited in normal deliveries.

Critics have charged that routine use of the procedures is unwarranted and drives up health care costs.

The government-sponsored study group said Wednesday that while there is no evidence electronic fetal monitoring reduces mortality or sickness in low-risk babies and mothers, the option should be left open to parents and doctors to choose it even when it may be of little value.

The technique involves keeping tabs by a variety of electronic means on labor and delivery so doctors can intervene if problems arise. This intervention can involve such things as inducing labor, repositioning the mother to lessen pressure on the baby or surgically removing the infant through Caesarean section.

Common monitoring methods involve an external device using ultrasonic waves to monitor fetal heart rate and uterine contractions, attaching electrodes to the baby's head to follow heart rate and putting a tube into the uterus to use in checking contractions and taking blood samples from the baby's scalp to check oxygen levels.

Experts estimate that about 60 percent of all U.S. births are monitored electronically. Many doctors are enthusiastic about the practice, which they consider necessary. Use of the technique has risen steadily since the late 1960s.

The task force report was one of three presented at a conference sponsored by the National Institutes of Health in an attempt to develop a consensus on medical questions for use as informal guidelines for doctors and patients.

The task force on monitoring fetal distress during labor prepared a preliminary report earlier which said current evidence was inconclusive and did not support routine use of electronic monitoring in all patients.

After much debate during two days of testimony, the panel's final conclusions and recommendations deleted direct references to restricting electronic monitoring.

Critics of the electronic monitoring procedure say it poses the risk of pelvic infection to mothers and a risk of hemmorage and infection to newborns. Those critical of the techniques also say there is an additional risk of death because of the higher number of Caesareans.

Dr. Frederick Zuspan of Ohio State University Medical College, task force chairman, said the panel did not weaken its recommendations, but simply broadened them to allow freedom of choice for doctors and patients.

"We did not want to close the door by saying someone shouldn't use electronic fetal monitoring," Zuspan said.

The other task forces dealt with prenatal testing and monitoring for potential diseases, congenital defects and determining the maturity of a fetus.

Using sound wave machines to check the fetus during pregnancy appears to be useful and safe, and was recommended for checking size and maturation.

In later pregnancy, the practice of amniocentesis can be used with ultrasound machines to check the baby and help doctors prevent premature deliveries, one report said.

Amniocentesis involves analyzing fluid drawn from the womb with a needle to look for signs of genetic defects and other problems.

The third task force said amniocentesis was an accepted practice and should be advised for any pregnant woman more than 35, the age at which the chance of birth defects starts increasing.

The report also listed other situations in which pregnant women should be offered the option of amniocentesis, including a history of abnormal children or genetic diseases.

Odd Breathing During Sleep May Contribute To Diseases

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers have found that healthy men often stop breathing for several seconds at a time when they sleep — a discovery they say may help explain why men have more heart attacks and die younger than women.

Two-thirds of the men who took part in a study breathed irregularly or had periods of lower-than-normal oxygen in their blood while they slept.

Although the significance of the finding is open to speculation, the doctors said irregular breathing during sleep may prove to be an underlying contributor to other diseases that are more common among men than women.

A report on the research, conducted at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Gainesville, Fla,. was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors monitored the breathing of 30 normal, healthy men and 19 women while they slept.

Twenty of the men had 264 episodes of abnormal beathing or low oxygen levels, while three of the women had a total of nine such incidents. Of these, 12 men and all three women had apnea, or periods during which they stopped breathing for 10 seconds or longer.

"This paper shows that things happen to the breathing pattern at night that can't be predicted by the way people act during the day," Dr. James Wynne, one of the researchers, said in an interview.

"It's predominantly something that happens in males, and the fatter you are and the older you are, the more likely it is to happen," he said.

The consequences of irregular breathing still are not clear, Wynne added.

"It is potentially dangerous, because we know that when your oxygen gets low, your heart may beat irregularly," he said. "There is the possibility that low oxygen could make you have a heart attack at night. We suggest that this might be a reason why males have more heart attacks."

Dr. A. Jay Brock, another researcher, said an earlier study showed that more deaths occur at 6 a.m. than at any other hour.

"This is exactly when you get the peak of your rapid eye movement sleep and would be when you would expect the most (oxygen) desaturation and periodic breathing," Brock said.

"My speculation is that this may be one of the reasons why females outlive males," he said.

The doctors said the female hormone progesterone, a respiratory stimulant, may help prevent irregular breathing in women.

The researchers are conducting another study to see if there is a link between irregular breathing during sleep and heart pain.

Colorado Officials Locate Another Radioactive Site

DENVER (AP) — Colorado health officials have located another radioactive dump here in their efforts to trace the buried remains of Denver's once-thriving radium industry, but the latest discovery dates back only to the 1950s.

The other 21 contaminated dumps that have been found in Colorado by the state Department of Health are leftovers of a radium industry that faded in the late 1920s and was forgotten until recently.

The radioactive material still buried at those sites includes low-grade radium discarded by the mills, health officials have said.

But the contamination at the site discovered Wednesday apparently comes from uranium, an element that is much less radioactive than radium, said Jim Montgomery, the Health Department's section chief for radiation control.

The latest discovery came as equipment malfunctions prevented federal Department of Energy employees from starting a series of flyovers of the Denver area in a helicopter equipped with sensitive radiation detectors.

Meanwhile, spurred by the discovery of higher than normal radiation levels in Colorado and Chicago, Environmental Protection Agency officials in New York were checking the possibility that contaminated sites exist there.

A ledger found in a vacant house where the radiation was detected Wednesday indicates that the uranium was used in the 1950s, when there was little interest in radium and its dangers were well known, said Montgomery. The house is not near any of the other sites, he added.

Nineteen other dumps have been found in an industrial district west of downtown Denver, where radium was once extracted from uranium ore. Dumps also were found in Boulder and Grand Junction.

Although no immediate public health hazard exists, most — if not all — of the Colorado sites will have to be cleaned up, state health have said. Montgomery has estimated that the decontamination of the known Denver sites will take one year and cost from $1 million to $2 million.

RESETTLEMENT PLANNED

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — About 2,500 persons from two central Java villages, in which more than 180 persons died after a volcano spewed out poisonous gas, will be moved soon to south Sumatra, a government spokesman said Wednesday. The deaths occurred last month when Sinila Crater erupted.

Most Cancer Funding Spent On Treatment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most of the money spent on cancer research is directed toward finding elusive cures rather than toward ways to pevent people from getting the disease in the first place.

The reason, says one outspoken critic, is the presence of a "cancer lobby" composed of the private American Cancer Society, the federal National Cancer Institute and a large body of private researchers, cancer centers and drug companies with an interest in treating patients rather than in preventing onset of the disease.

Tobacco, for instance, accounts for 20 percent of cancer deaths but only 0.1 percent of the NCI's $936 million budget, said Dr. Samuel Epstein, a University of Illinois professor of occupational and environmental medicine.

Environmental causes are at the root of up to 90 percent of cancers, he said, but only about 10 percent of NCI funds go to study ways of keeping cancer-causing agents out of food, water and air.

Epstein and other cancer experts testified Wednesday before Sen. Edward Kennedy's health subcommittee.

"We have a cancer treatment lobby, but not a cancer prevention lobby," Epstein said.

"There is abundant evidence that 10 years after the national cancer program began (it actually started in 1971), there has been a failure to increase survival rates" and failure to work toward prevention, due to political and economic pressures," he said.

"You gentlemen have been misled for a decade.... We have evidence we know now how to prevent cancer. If you prevent it, you don't have to treat it."

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., suggested that Epstein would take money away from research that might benefit people now suffering from cancer.

"It's an agonizing dilemma," Epstein agreed, but said he was talking about "balance, not abandonment" of treatment research.

"The pressures not to increase NCI resources on cancer prevention at the expense of other programs are complex and come from powerful and well-focused constituencies," he charged.

"These include the 'cancer lobby', particularly outside clinical research scientists, cancer centers, the American Cancer Society, the outside basic science community, the National Institutes of Health establishment" and others, he said.

Epstein said the cancer society declined to support major environmental and anticancer legislation and that many of its leaders are also key figures in banks, investment firms and drug companies who "tend to be conservative and mistrustful, if not hostile, to 'big government' and federal regulations."

Tech Basketballers Begin Second Season Tonight

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Last time Bobby Knight was in Lubbock Coliseum, the crowd was seated on the floor below him, the only picks in evidence were the ones used to dislodge bits of barbeque from the molars, and the audience politely applauded some of his jokes.

That was a couple of years ago when he spoke at the annual Red Raider Club banquet.

But, tonight, Knight will be back, but in a much more serious atmosphere. It's the opening round of the 42nd annual National Invitation Tournament, as Indiana's Hoosiers take on Texas Tech.

Tipoff is at 7:30 p.m., and a capacity crowd is now in the forecast. Chances are good for that sellout, too, as only a limited number of tickets remained after the Tech athletic ticket office closed Wednesday. The remaining tickets will be on sale this morning, and a few could be available tonight at the gate.

It's Tech's first trip to the prestigious NIT, and Indiana is bouncing back to the postseason arena after winning the NCAA championship in '76. And in both instances, the teams had to win late games to get this far.

Tech's 63-62 overtime win over Texas A&M in the quarter-finals of he Southwest Conference tournament evidently turned the trick for the Raiders. And the Hoosiers had to win — and did — over Illinois last Saturday to earn a trip.

That win for the Hoosiers was their 18th against 12 defeats, and Tech comes in with a 19-10 record, the last loss coming to Arkansas in the SWC semifinals.

Records, however, don't bother Raider coach Gerald Myers as much as the size and talent level of the visitors. He knows personally of one Indianan, 6-5 Mike Woodson, the team's leading scorer (21.2 points) who was on a U.S. team which Myers helped coach on a trip to Russia last summer.

In addition to Woodson, there's the overall Hoosier size Myers' Raiders will be facing.

Indiana's set lineup has 6-5 Randy Wittman, 6-9 Landon Turner, 6-5 Butch Carter, and 6-9 Ray Tolbert.

"We'll have some mismatches," admitted Myers. "And these guys can move, too. They don't just stand around under the goal.

"I imagine we'll try to use Ben Hill (6-6) on Woodson, but even that way, we will give away some size."

To help fight that size deficit, Myers could come with 6-9 Ralph McPherson with 6-8 Ralph Brewster inside, along with 6-5 Kent Williams and 6-2 Geoff Huston outside.

If McPherson doesn't trot out on the court for the opening tip, it will be 6-5 Jeff Taylor.

"But, they're a great team," said Myers of the Hoosiers. "They play great defense, and they just don't make many mistakes. You're going to have to beat them; they won't beat themselves.

"They're going to work the ball, get the percentage shots off their passing game. They'll put the ball up, but they can be very disciplined also. And, being a big team, they're a solid rebounding team.

"They're just so sound in every phase of the game."

But, Woodson is the one the Hoosiers will be looking to — and the Raiders will be watching also. "They set picks for him, trying to get him open. He's a great shooter."

Woodson hit 48 in that 72-60 win over Illinois at Champaign, a game in which the Hoosiers hit 56 percent from the floor.

But, the Hoosiers, following Knight's defensive scheme, has allowed but 61.5 points a game this season.

"We've been up and down," observed Knight, prior to Wednesday's workout in the coliseum. "We lose our first two (including a 54-49 loss to the Aggies in a tournament in Alaska), won six in a row."

And, lately, they have been on the upswing, winning four of the last five, dropping only a 55-48 verdict — on the road — to Purdue, which is also playing in the NIT.

Tech is averaging more offensively but also allowing more on defense. But, with a late rush in the bucket department, Huston has joined Williams and Brewster as two-digit scoring. Williams leads at 12.6, Brewster is hitting 11.5, and Huston is averaging 10.7.

Huston, the lone senior in the Raiders' starting unit, has been the most consistent player this year, Myers said. It was Huston who put in the winning bucket to beat the Aggies last week.

Jerry Tarkanian Makes A Point

Tark Questions NCAA Evidence

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS , Nev. — (AP — Hear ye, hear ye, the case against Jerry Tarkanian is now in session.

Is "Tark the Shark" a cheater? How strong is the NCAA evidence against him? and if he does cheat, does the punishment fit the cirme?

You be the judge.

Tarkanian was suspended in 1977 from coaching the University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team for two years, one of the worst punishments against a coach in NCAA history. Investigators say the severe penalty stemmed from Tarkanian's pattern of past violations at Long Beach State and, more importantly, an alleged effort to interfere with the NCAA probe.

A Nevada judge found that the NCAA violated Tarkanian's due process, overturning the suspension and allowing him back on the sidelines. An appeal is schedule to be heard in Nevada Supreme Court in December.

The Asociated Press has gained possession of confidential documents and information pertaining to the cases against Long Beach and UNLV. This story will discuss the most significant charges against Tarkanian and his responses.

Long Beach went on NCAA probation for three years for violations alleged committed by the football and basketball programs. Half the charges against the basketball progam involved fraudulent ACT (American College Testing) scores, enabling athletes Ernie Douse, Glenn McDonald and Roscoe Pondexter to enroll at Long Beach.

The evidence submitted by the NCAA is a comparison of the players' high school work and their ACT scores and, in McDonald's case, a misspelling of McDonald's first name. Whoever took that exam spelled it 'GLEN' but McDonald spells it "GLENN.' In another section of the exam, the name was misspelled again, but this time a second 'N' in a different color ink was apparently added.

According to investigators, Douse finished in the top 10 percent of his freshman class in the verbal ACT exam. However, Douse later signed an affidavit in Tarkanian's behalf that was barely in English.

When Tarkanian was given the Douse affidavit, he said: "Ernie was never very bright. I don't believe he took the exam." Tarkanian also said he told Pondexter that no one would believe he took his exam.

Butr did Tarkanian arrange for someone else to take those exams?

"No, I'm an educator. I can't mess around with that stuff," he said. "But I realize a lot of blacks back then didn't take their exams. The ACT

ACC Fares Well So Far

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Atlantic Coast Conference likes to think it's the best basketball league in the country...and you can't dispute the claim by Wednesday night's National Invitation Tournament results.

The ACC was a perfect 3-for-3 — by an incredibly slim total of four points — as the 42nd annual NIT got under way with a half-dozen first-round games.

Maryland was the ACC's "big" winner, defeating Rhode Island 67-65 at College Park, Md....but it took the Terrapins three overtimes to do it. Meanwhile, at Lexington, Ky., Clemson nipped Kentucky, the 1978 national champion, 68-67 in just one overtime while Virginia needed only the regulation 40 minutes to dispose of Northeast Louisiana 79-78 at Charlottesville, Va.

Elsewhere, Ohio State trounced St. Joseph's, Pa., 80-66 at Columbus, Ohio, Nevada-Reno outlasted Oregon State 62-61 at Corvallis, Ore., and Old Dominion shaded Wagner 83-81 at Norfolk, Va.

Tonight's remaining six opening-round contests find Central Michigan (19-8) at 16th-ranked Purdue (23-7), Holy Cross (17-10) at Dayton (18-9), Indiana (18-12) at Texas Tech (19-10), St. Bonaventure (19-8) at Alabama (19-10), Alcorn State (27-0) at Mississippi State (19-8) and Texas A &M (22-8) at New Mexico (19-9).

Wednesday's NIT results also set up two second-round games — Ohio State (18-10) vs. Maryland (19-10) and Old Dominion (22-6) vs. Clemson (19-9). Virginia (19-9) will meet tonight's St. Bonaventure-Alabama winner while Nevado-Reno goes against the Texas A&M-New Mexico survivor.

Kentucky's Wildcats, who missed a chance to defend their NCAA laurels when they were beaten in the finals of the Southeastern Conference tourney by Tennessee, dropped out of the NIT when Clemson's Billy Williams sank two free throws with 12 seconds to go.

Clemson used a delay game to kill the last 10 minutes of the first half.

"The delay game was good to us," said Coach Bill Foster. "I know it's not popular in the state of Kentucky, but it's pretty damn popular in South Carolina.

"We were in foul trouble early. We'd rather run. We didn't talk about holding it before the game. It was a pretty good ballgame, a great win for us and our program."

Both Foster and Kentucky's Joe B. Hall rapped the Southwest Conference officiating team of Joe Thomas and Jim Harvey. Foster called them "Homer and Jethro," referring to a pair of country music comedians.

Hall claimed the officials "destroyed the ballgame. They missed several goaltending calls. Macy would go down to one end and get chopped and he'd go to the other end and get called for handchecking.

"I would have to say it was the most confusing game I have ever coached in or had a team play in. Our players did not know how to play. One official, in particular, was so bad he should seriously consider taking up another sport."

Maryland's Albert King, who sat out the first 27 minutes with a foot injury, scored all four points in the third overtime to give the Terrapins their marathon triumph over Rhode Island. Larry Gibson led the winners with 17 points and King added 15. Jimmy Wright had 20 for Rhode Island, whose ace, Sly Williams, sat out almost 10 minutes and scored only 12 points before fouling out with 13 seconds left in regulation time.

Virginia turned back Northeast Louisiana on Jeff Lamp's baseline jumper with seven seconds left. It came just 10 seconds after Calvin Natt, who finished with 38 points, had given the losers their only lead of the second half. Natt hit all 10 second-half shots — he was 15-of-18 overall — and scored 28 points after the intermission. Lamp scored 10 of his 20 points in the last six minutes.

"I tipped the ball on the play to Lamp," moaned Natt. "I'll think about it the rest of my life. Another inch and it would have been over."

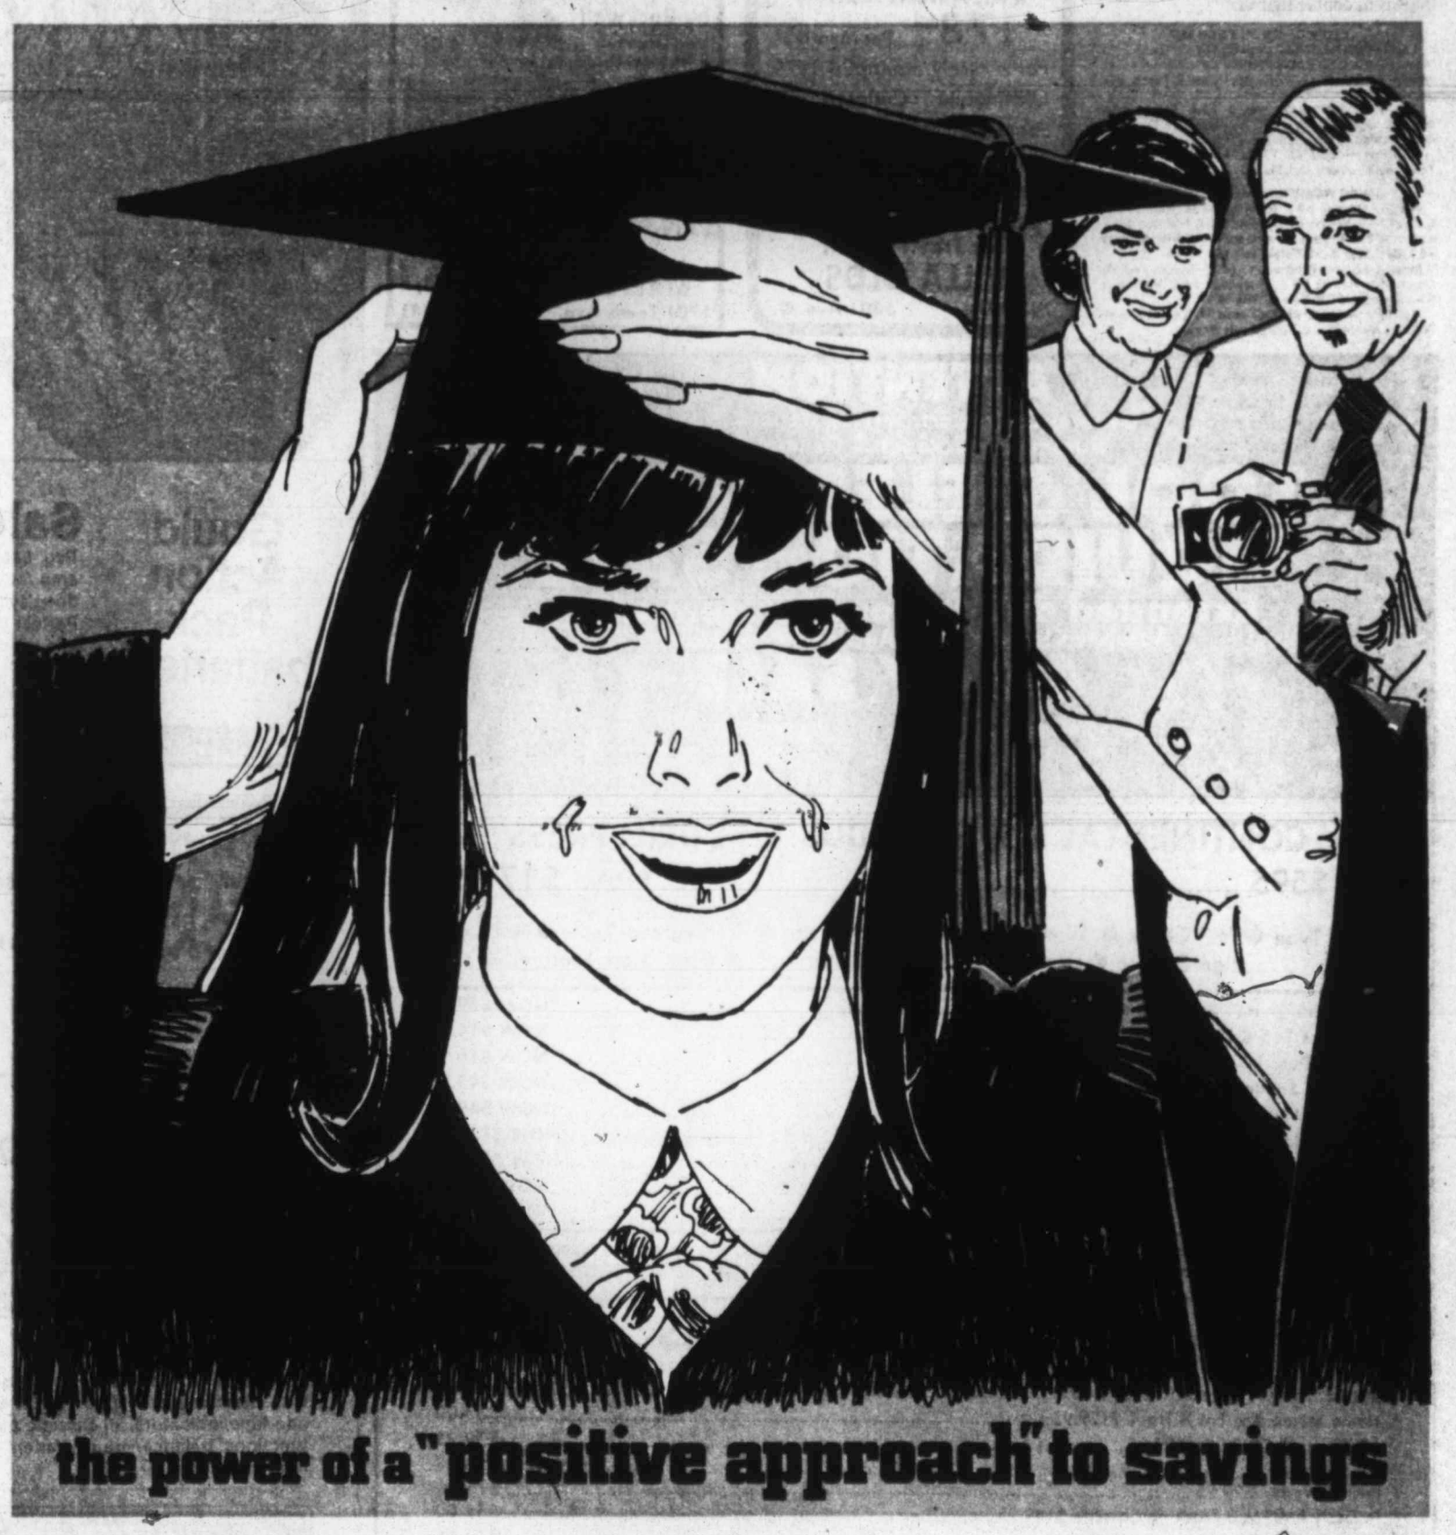

Kelvin Ransey scored 18 points, Herb Williams added 16 and Mike Cline had 14 on 6-of-7 shooting as Ohio State overwhelmed St. Joe's. Norman Black's 21 points topped the losers. St. Joseph's remained within range until Ohio State uncorked a 15-5 burst and opened a 54-36 lead with 8:25 remaining.

"That kid Cline was knocking down those shots," said St. Joseph's Coach Jim Lynam. "The scouting report said he was a good shooter — but not that frequently."

Mike Gray made a jump shot with seven seconds left and then added a free throw to give the 11½-point underdog Wolf Pack its victory over Oregon State. Gray led all scorers with 27 points while Steve Johnson paced Oregon State with 22.

Old Dominion freshman Ronnie McAdoo grabbed a rebound and dropped in a layup with three seconds left to lift the Monarchs over Wagner. McAdoo had 21 points for ODU, two behind teammate Tommy Branch and Wagner's Howard Thompkins.

Estacado's Robert Humphrey Signs Letter

Matador Plans Hawaiian Hiatus

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Scene I: Robert Humphrey takes a bite of pineapple.

Scene II: Robert Humphrey munches on a stalk of sugar cane.

Scene III: Robert Humphrey attends a luau.

No, Robert Humphrey is not dreaming about staring in a Hawaiian movie. He's just simply making a list of things he plans to do upon reaching the islands next year.

You see. Humphrey signed a national letter of intent to play college football with New Mexico State University. Guess where the Aggies play a game next season?

"I have to admit that going to Hawaii next year played a part in making my decision," said the former Estacado wingback. "I've always wanted to go there (Hawaii), and I can't wait to get there."

Besides New Mexico State, Humphrey received scholarship offers from North Texas State and Emporia State in Kansas. Now three scholarships may not seem like very much, but it's not bad when taking into consideration that Humphrey's entire high school football playing career covered only one season.

"I broke my leg playing football in the eighth grade," recalled the 6-0 Matador senior. "I was kind of hesitant to return because I thought my leg wasn't completely healed."

Thus, Humphrey turned his attention to track. He likes to run the sprint relay, the 220-yard dash and the 100-yard dash. It was during the city track meet last year that Estacado football coach Louis Kelley started trying to convince Humphrey to give football a second chance.

"He (coach Kelley) was impressed with my speed," said Humphrey, who has been clocked at 4.4 in the 40-yard dash. "I went home and discussed it with my parents. As I talked about it more and more, the spirit I had for football in the eighth grade grew and grew. Finally, I was hooked."

Last season, Humphrey caught 10 passes for 300 yards. He scored two touchdowns through the air and two rushing.

"I really feel that track has given me an advantage against defenses," said the 160-pounder. "That advantage is getting off the line of scrimmage faster than they can react."

Humphrey's two favorite pass routes are the flat and up and a deep curl.

"The New Mexico State coaches told me that the Aggies are a passing team," said the Matador wingback. "I'm a little nervous when my number is called in the huddle. But I sure would like to get my hands on the ball more."

So, does that mean that Humphrey is confident about breaking into the starting lineup?

"Let me say, I'd like to get my hands on the ball more when I get a chance to play," smiled Humphrey. "I'll be playing behind Jeff Evans this year. I don't think I have much of a chance of being involved in very much action since he was an All-American last year."

Isn't 160-pounds a little light weight for playing football?

"I'm going to try and gain about 20 more pounds," said the Matador senior. "However, I don't want to g too much weight because it will hamper my speed."

So, until Humphrey is able to gain weight and able to break into the starting lineup, the 6-0 senior will bide his time lying on the sunny beaches near Honolulu trying to bide the time as best as possible.

A's Sale Nearing?

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — This could be the day Charlie Finley finally sells his Oakland A's baseball club.

Finley has been trying to unload the team for two years now, but every time he had a buyer all set, his lease with the Oakland Coliseum negated the deal.

Now, it is possible he will reach an agreement — today or before the weekend — with a group of Los Angeles and Bay Area businessmen who are interested in keeping the team in Oakland.

Previously, every buyer Finley had wanted to move the franchise to another city — namely Denever and New Orleans — but Finley's 20-year lease with the Coliseum stopped the sales.

Finley has nine years remaining on his obligation with the Coliseum.

Now, he apparently has a group interested in buying the team and keeping it in Oakland. Los Angeles attorney Neil Papiano, who represented Finley during his court fight with Commission Bowie Kuhn over the aborted sales of Vida Blue, Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers, heads the group trying to buy the team.

"We are talking and have been for some period of time," said Papiano "Nothing is set as yet, but we are still talking, and I think it's a hopeful sign."

Papiano's group includes movie theater magnate Gene Nederlander; Karl Eller, president of Combined Communications; Robert Shetterley, president of the Clorox company, and Cornell Maier, a Kaiser executive. It reportedly has offered Finley $10 million for the ballclub.

Finley refused to comment about the possible sale, except to say he is talking with the Papiano group and "maybe something will happen."

"If I have to operate the club, I will," said Finley. "There is no gun to my head to sell the team, but I would like to if I can reach an agreement."

Wayland Whips Foe

TULSA , Okla. (Special) — Jill Rankin scored 36 points to lead the Wayland Baptist College Flying Queens to an easy 91-38 win over McNeese State during an opening-round game of the Southwest Region AIAW basketball tournament Wednesday afternoon.

The Queens, now 21-8 for the year, will now meet LSU today at 3 p.m. in the second round. LSU advanced by thrashing Texas Tech 84-56 earlier Wednesday.

Miss Rankin, an all-America from Phillips, hit 17 shots from the floor and a pair of free throws to help the Queens to the victory.

Valerie Goodwin also added 18 points she and Miss Rankin were the only Queens in double figures.

Wayland had absolutely no trouble with McNeese, jumping out to a 49-11 halftime lead. The Queens added 42 more points in the second half, while McNeese scored only 27.

Ailene Guidry was the top scorer for McNeese with 15 points.

In an another game, Lisa Brewer poured in 22 points to lead LSU to its easy win over Texas Tech and end the Raiders' season with a 14-19 mark, the first losing record in the school's history.

Lubbock One-Hits Tascosa

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The only thing the Lubbock High Westerners didn't win during a nondistrict baseball game with Amarillo Tascosa Wednesday was an argument in the fourth inning.

Lubbock High dominated all the other categories of the game to record a 14-0 victory on a one-hitter.

The Westerners put the game out of reach in the bottom of the third with 9 runs. Six of those scores came with two outs.

"I told the team before the game that we've been playing like light bulbs," said LHS coach Bart Hernandez. "We've been off and on, off and on. It was time for us to get consistent. I'm pleased with the way they played."

Centerfielder Larry Walker and shortstop Noel Jaime ignited the Westerner rally in the third. Jaime, who scored 3 runs in the game, and Walker, who supplied four hits, both singled.

With two out, Thomas Romero scored pinch runner David Garcia and then first baseman Paul Mendoza gave Romero time to get back into his catching gear with a double. When Romero crossed the plate, Lubbock High had a 7-0 lead.

But the big blow was still yet to come. Designated hitter David Rush calmly stepped to the plate and got all of a fast ball. Rush's shot left center traveled an estimated 360 feet. Scoring in front of Rush was Mendoza.

"I think not keeping Jaime and Walker off the bases was a factor," said Tascosa coach Stan Moore. "They also did a better job of hitting and fielding the ball."

The Westerners outhit the Rebels 16-1. Winning pither Sammy Chavez struck out eight. Rebel Andy Juett prevented a no-hitter with an infield hit in the fourth inning.

However, any hope of a Tascosa rally was quickly wiped out as pinch hitter Eddie Delgado hit into a double play.

"I was pleased the way we played," said Hernandez. "We started sluggish, but things turned out well."

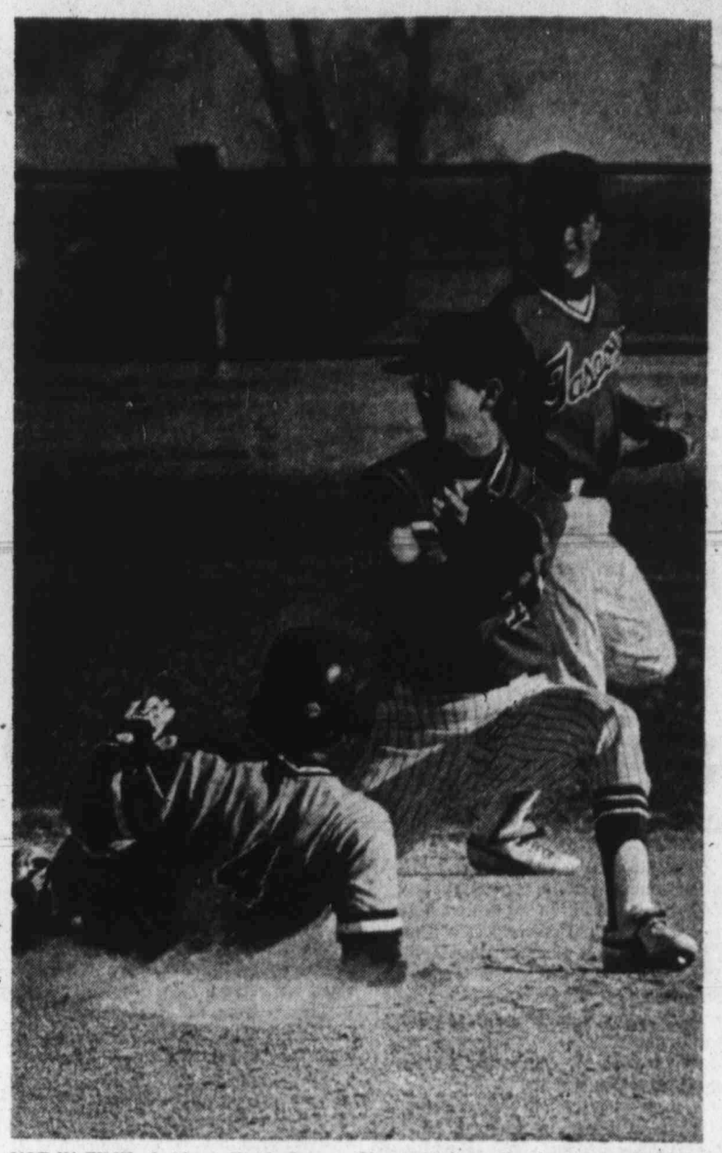

Oh, the argument: The Westerners lost that in the bottom of the fourth by putting Rudy Robles in the lineup without informing the umpire. Robles was going to pinch hit for Mendoza.

"Oh yeah," said a smiling Hernandez. "In our big inning (the third), Rudy was penciled into the lineup. We checked him in during the third inning with the umpire. I don't know what happened in the fourth."

In today's only prep game, Estacado will play at Lubbock Christian at 4 p.m.

Duke Star Sidelined For Sunday

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University basketball coach Bill Foster said Wednesday he doubts that starting forward Kenny Dennard will play in Sunday's NCAA East Regional game because of a severely sprained ankle.

Foster said Dennard sprained his right ankle Tuesday night while working out at Cameron Indoor Stadium. He was admitted to Duke University Medical Center Wednesday for treatment.

Foster said that if Dennard cannot play Sunday, freshman Vince Taylor will start in his place. Dennard has started every game for Duke this season and has aaveraged 6.4 points and 4.2 rebounds. Taylor is averaging 3.8 points and one rebound.

Raider Foe Picked Hero

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Woodson, who scored 48 points in a victory that strengthened Indiana's credentials for the National Invitational Tournament, has been named Big Ten basketball Player of the Week.

The junior forward from Indianapolis scored 48 points in a 72-60 victory over Illinois on Saturday, two days after he hit for 20 in a 55-48 loss at Purdue. He is the first player to score more than 40 points in a conference game since 1976 and his 48 points are the third highest for a game in school history.

Earlier in the week, Woodson was named to The Associated Press' All-Big Ten first team.

Indiana was 9-4 in its last 13 conference games, was 10-8 for the Big Ten season and was chosen for the NIT.

"He has just done a fantastic job for us," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "His performance was the most incredible offensive show I've ever seen in this conference."

Woodsonhas 1,712 points in his college career and is 28 behind Kent Benson, the second leading scorer in Indiana history.

Size Bothers LHS Coach

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

While leaning against a door in the hallway at Lubbock High School, baseball coach Bart Hernandez motioned towards the window to prove a point.

Catching Hernandez' attention were centerfielder Larry Walker and shortstop Noel Jaime. The two Westerner baseball players crossed 19th Street en route to the field house. Walker and Jaime then followed the path of a residential sidewalk. Even standing side by side, the two Lubbock High baseballers had room to spare within the sidwalk's bounds.

"You see?" asked Hernandez. "I'm not exaggerating. We don't have any monsters on this team. Larry and Noel are our leading hitters. You can see that Larry is only about 5-8 and Jaime about 5-6.

I don't think they weigh more than 150 pounds."

Jaime's .571 average leads Walker by 71 points. Jaime also has slapped three triples.

"Jaime is our leadoff hitter," said Hernandez. "Though he has shown some power, I don't plan on moving him down in the batting order. I want Jaime to bat as many times as possible in a game."

According to Hernandez, pitcher Andy Vasquez has also been impressive in the early going, winning twice without a loss.

"He's just about the only pitcher that's been able to throw strikes consistently," said the Westerner baseball coach. "Andy is a sneaky pitcher. He'll throw you in tight to get you a little off balance and then slip a pitch by you."

But Hernandez doesn't want the the compliments out of hand. The Westerners need to correct some problems before they can be a contender in the 4-AAAA race.

"We have the talent," said Hernandez. "How that talent develops is the problem."

And the question marks?

Regarding defense, the LHS coach has a simple solution.

"I figure hitting 1,000 ground balls a day will solve things," laughed Hernandez.

The coach feels that patience is the key to both the pitching woes as well as deciding on a third baseman and leftfielder.

Hernandez wants to talk about his battery.

"Thomas Romero has taken over at catcher and has been hitting the ball consistently," said Hernandez. "He's also been playing good defense, and is just a sophomore.

"Since taking over the catching duties in the second game of the season, Romero has five hits in eight times at bat."

Anything else coach?

"Only that it's hard to tell our pitchers from the catcher," said Hernandez. "All are squatty. Or let's just say that our team is built low to the ground."

Odd Pair Selected By Hall's Vet Group

Warren Giles

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

It will be an odd couple — Hack Wilson and Warren Giles — accompanying Willie Mays into baseball's Hall of Fame next August but both were giants in their own way.

One was an awesome slugger who had a drinking problem that tortured his life and the other was a model of Middle America as a person and executive. The Veterans Committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America, which elected Wilson and Giles to the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine Wednesday, could have searched for 100 years and not come up with two more different personalities.

Their common bond, however, was that both made contributions to baseball the Veterans Committee concluded deserved to be immortalized.

Most of baseball's supposedly "unbreakable records" from the distant past have been surpassed. But, in 1930, the 5-foot-6, 200-pound, mixed-up man named Lewis "Hack" Wilson batted .356, and set a National League record of 56 homers and a major league mark of 190 RBI while playing for the Chicago Cubs. The records still stand. No National Leaguer before or since has hit more than 54 homers and the closest anyone has come to Wilson's RBI mark was 184 by Lou Gehrig in 1931.

His drinking problem, which often affected his play and also led to numerous off-the-field personal problems and barroom brawls, accounts for an uneven career performance. He hit .345 with 159 RBI the year before his great season and .261 with 61 RBI the following year. Wilson started his career with the Giants in 1923 and ended it with the Dodgers in 1934. He had a career batting average of .307 and 244 home runs.

Wilson's problems continued after his retirement from baseball and he died penniless in 1948.

Giles was a deceptive man — a little, cherubic chap who laughed easily and stood for everything baseball is supposed to stand for in terms of integrity anb patriotism. And yet the man who served as National League president for 18 years beginning in 1951, was a firm executive who knew what he wanted to achieve in the best interests of the game he loved.

He achieved both his goals. He strengthened the authority of National League umpires, which had been eroded by desperado managers like Leo Durocher, Frank Frisch, Charlie Dressen and Casey Stengel, and he helped to make the National League competitive in All-Star games.

"Warren Giles did more for the umpires than anyone else in the history of the game," said former NL umpire Jocko Conlan, when he was inducted into the Hall of Fame. "He was the best friend the umpires ever had."

"Giles made a tremendous contribution to baseball over 50 years," said Stan Musial, a member of the Veterans Committee. "I'll never forget how instrumental he was in getting National Leaguers keyed up for All-Star games. He always gave us a pep talk in the locker room before the games."

Giles, who died last Feb. 7 at the age of 82, began his baseball career in Moline, Ill., after serving as a lieutenant and mortar platoon leader in World War I. He got his first job with Moline, moved on to St. Joseph in the St. Louis Cardinals' chain, then to Rochester and finally to the Reds. In 1939, three years after Giles took over the Reds, they won their first pennant since the 1919 Black Sox scandal.

Wilson and Giles will be formally inducted into the shrine in Cooperstown, N.Y., Aug. 5, along with Mays, for 22 years a star with the New York and San Francisco Giants and New York Mets, who was elected by a full vote of the BBWA last January.

Duke Star's Dad Very Devoted

Joe Gminski, Father Of Duke Star

By GARY SEASE

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Joe Gminski's dream of watching his son crack a home-run out of Yankee Stadium never materialized, but he feels pretty good about Mike's success as Duke's potent 6-11 starting center.

"I think I've done a pretty good job on my part," said the 44-year-old Gminski, whose fanatical devotion to his son's athletic career is legend. "I helped to get him this far."

His son, a 19-year-old junior, will be making his second appearance in the NCAA playoffs this weekend. Last year, Duke's Cinderella team advanced to NCAA finals where the Blue Devils were defeated by Kentucky.

But basketball to Joe Gminski is inconsequential.

"I wouldn't walk across the street to see a basketball game unless Mike's playing," said the 6-4 Gminski, who played for Connecticut only because of an athletic scholarship. "I only have one interest in life and that's Mike Gminski."

Gminski, who has tutored his son since Mike was two years old, quit his sales job, packed his belongings and moved his wife, Chris, from their home in Monroe, Conn., to a small apartment in Durham to watch "the fruits of my labor." He now delivers newspapers, plays golf and cheers for Mike at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Once Mike's collegiate career is finished, Gminski plans to leave Durham.

Earlier in the season, he wrote a letter to the local newspaper critical of Duke Coach Bill Foster after the Blue Devils, then ranked No. 1, lost to Ohio State and St. John's in the Holiday Festival Tournament at New York. He refuses to comment now on the letter, but he indicated that it temporarily chilled the relationship between himself and his son.

St. John's battles 13th-ranked Temple on Friday at Raleigh for the right to meet the second-seeded and sixth-ranked Blue Devils on Sunday. Iona and Penn are paired on Friday and the winner of that matchup meets the NCAA tournament's top seed in the East, third-ranked North Carolina.

Gminski used baseball to keep his son interested in athletics, and he envisioned a major league career for Mike. But as his son grew, Gminski watched regretfully as Mike's strike zone got out of hand.

"He was the one who chose basketball," Gminski said. "I just trained him to be an athlete."

One room of Gminski's apartment is decorated with trophies, cover photographs from magazines and, in the center of one wall, Mike's high school jersey, which was retired.

"This is from last year alone," said Gminski, pulling down several scrapbooks of newspaper clippings and photographs extolling his son's ability.

"Mike played his high school days in a suburban league and some people questioned whether he was really that good," Gminski said. "When it came time to pick a college, he narrowed it to the ACC. He said he wanted to play in the toughest conference there is."

Gminski said he is surprised at the enthusiasm for basketball in North Carolina.

"They've got basketball on the brain," he said.

Gminski said the close relationship between himself and his son is fading as Mike builds his own life at Duke.

Mike is Gminski's only child.

Another WTT Team Out

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Golden Gaters is the sole member of World Team Tennis today following the demise of the Phoenix Racquets.

Citing the reduction of the WTT to two teams earlier this year and frustration in rebuilding the league, owner Jerry Simmons said Wednesday he was suspending operations.

"After four extremely successful years, the Phoenix Racquets have suspended operations indefinitely. It's no longer economically feasible to continue," said Simmons.

WTT was noted for its mixed double play and efforts to have crowds cheering the players as the matches progressed.

Gaters owner David Peterson said that although their would be no 1979 season, his team will will continue operations in the hopes of making a revival in 1980.

Peterson said the Gaters will now concentrate on promoting various tournaments around the country, on radio and TV productions, and on finding new owners.

"The Golden Gaters are not folding nor are we suspending operations," said General Manager Robert Horowitz. "We are faced with an unusual situation of having a strong franchise without a league in which to play."

Simmons said it is economically impossible to continue operations of the Racquets.

Besides Phoenix and San Francisco, the WTT had unofficially granted a franchise to a Los Angeles group for a third team.

The Racquets had played four years in Phoenix, averaging 7,000 attendance per match, the highest in the league.

"The Racquets' management, staff, players and I shall always remember the great support provided by fans and businesses alike. If future developments in the tennis community indicate that World Team Tennis is feasible, then we will consider bringing WTT back to Phoenix again," Simmons said.

Racquets General Manager Dave Harrah said the team office would remain open long enough to conclude any pending business.

League problems started last October when eight of 10 teams failed to post a letter of credit. Attempts to sign long-term owners were unsuccessful even though a shortened seven-week season was announced in January.

Joseph Heitzler, WTT president, said he had extreme difficulties in finding qualified franchise owners to field teams in 1979.

Alluding to the financial problems that owners underwent at the close of the 1978 season when the league lost many of its teams, Heitzler said, "The WTT approached 1979 with the hopes of attracting top caliber franchise owners who could meet the stringent profile our marketing consultant firm felt was necessary to keep the league healthy. Hopefully, as we begin to build for 1980, we'll be able to once again produce this different and exciting brand of tennis."

EHS Trackers Have Potential

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Percy Hines is a man who likes to talk about "potential."

"We really have the potential (to have a fine track team)," the Estacado cinder coach pointed out. And, "the potential is there, too," he said when asked about the chances of yet another Matador sprint relay teams heading to the state meet in a couple of months.

No doubt, Hines is right. And it really doesn't take a track expert to figure out why.

So far, the Matadors have entered one track meet. And so far, they stand 1-0 in competition against other Class AAA teams, winning their division at the Lubbock Invitational meet last Saturday.

"It was a pleasant surprise," said Hines, who will carry the Matadors to the West Texas Relays in Odessa this weekend. "I told them before the meet to go out and do their best and not worry about their times.

"We're more interested right now in getting better from week to week than we are about winning."

One of those cagers that turned in top performances for Hines were high jumper Craig Harris. He placed third after jumping 6-0. Also, Dewey Turner, the Texas-bound tight end, set a new school record with a toss of 54-6½ in the shot put.

"Those were a couple of pleasant surprises," said Hines. "Both of them (Harris and Dewey) both have the potential to become top individuals."

There he goes again.

Although Turner is certainly a potential state performer in the shot, Hines said the 6-5, 225-pound senior is having some trouble in the discus. "It's not one of his better events," said Hines, "but he is really concentrating hard on it."

In winning at the Lubbock meet, the Matadors took first places in the shot, 440 relay (Todd Parsons, Robin GAtewood, Kenneth Henderson and Robert Humphrey), 100 (Humphrey) and 220 (Gatewood).

The Matadors' mile-relay team — a unit Hines also feels may also come on strong as the season progresses — finished third in 3:36.6 Rival Dunbar was about four steps in front of the Matadors at 3:36.2.

When most people think of the Matadors, the first thing that pops into their heads, usually, is power in the sprints. And this year should be no different, Hines said.

"Of course," agreed Hines. "That should be our strength again. But we lost some very good sprinters off last years' team (Michael Sims and Kenzie Burrell). They'll be hard to replace."

xam was a reading test and it was anti-black."

The NCAA never connected Tarkanian with tampering, alleging that his assistant, Ivan Duncah, arranged for stand-ins to take the tests.

Duncan is also connected, by cancelled checks and ticket receipts, with providing free round trip air fare for several players, including Ed Ratleff, George Gervin, Douse and others.

Tarkanian acknowledges Duncan's role in the free transportation and also admits knowledge that the players weren't walking. He says he is responsible for the actions of his assistants but doesn't sound particularly remorseful. As a matter of fact, Tarkanian heleped get Duncan a junior college coaching job in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The only serious allegations linked to Tarkanian is that he promised Eugene Short, a high school All-American, that his family would be moved to Long Beach and that a job would be found for his mother.

Tarkanian denies the charge and says the Shorts did too, adding that the source on that allegation was Eugene's high school coach. "I only met him once," Tarkanian said. "Do you really think I would tell him something like that, especially since Eugene's brother, Purvis, was a sophomore in high school? Does it make any sense that I would tell the coach I was going to take away his star player?

"Long Beach blew my mind; it tore my heart out," Tarkanian said. "It hurt me more because the charges were so ridiculous. Las Vegas, of course, was more serious because they tried to take my job away."

"If I kept my mouth shut and thanked them for hitting me over the head with a club 10 times, they wouldn't have come after me. But fighting them just made them madder and madder.

Tarkanian says his problems stem from a column he wrote, criticizing the NCAA's punishment of Centenary College. "I wrote that the charges were Mickey Mouse. It was the biggest mistake I ever made."

The Las Vegas charges provide less of a direct link to Tarkanian, which the NCAA attributes to "Tark the Shark" learning from his mistakes and insulating himself better, the NCAA is also skeptical about the affidavits Tarkanian has produced from players which alleged conflict with their previous testimony to the investigators.

The NCAA says it nevver punishes anybody unless it has proof, but one coach feels otherwise in the Tarkanian situation: "If you know Al Capone is killing people, you get him on income tax evasion."

Most of the big charges against UNLV are directed against Tarkanian's predecessor, John Bayer. The most sserious allegations against Tarkanian are that he arranged for instructor Harevey Mumford to provide prospective student-athlete David Vaughn a "B" grade in a course without attending class and that he pressured ex-player Jeep Kelley to change his testimony to the NCAA.

Mumford's attorney, Charles Thompson, said Mumford might have said to NCAA investigator Hale McMenamin that he gave Vaughn a grade he didn't deserve. "Harvey was made because Vaughn was a friend and he stiffed Harvey on a $400 loan. But the evidence is what counts."

Thompson points out that the lowest grade anybody in the course got was a 'C', and that he has affidavits from several students stating that Vaughn did attend class and did do a term paper, and that Mumford took a lie-detector test.

Did Jerry Tarkanian or any member of his staff ever ask you to give Vaughn a certain grade in the class?

Answer: No.

Evaluation: No deception indicated.

Did Jerry Tarkanian or any member of his staff ever ask you not to require Vaughn to attend class or do class work?

Answer: No.

The NCAA investigators never interviewed anybody except Mumford, yet the Infractions Committee found Tarkanian and Mumford guilty of the charge, stating in its Confidential Report: "The Committee believes Mumford did, in fact, provide this information to the NCAA and is now attempting to remove himself from the case."

"That decision was reckless and intellectually dishonest," said Thompson.

The charge of interfering with testimony strikes at the heart of the NCAA's investigative process. Without subpoena power, the NCAA must rely on the cooperation of players and coaches in reporting violations. The NCAA says Tarkanian coerced Kelley, its key witness, to change his testimony, prompting the severe two-year suspension.

This charge comes exclusively from telephone conversations Kelley and his aunt, Frances Parker, had with David Berst, the NCAA's director of enforcement, from March 5 to Dec. 10, 1976. The AP has possession of Berst's memorandum of those phone calls.

According to an NCAA official, "Kelley is the key."

Kelley was found in Las Vegas, where he was working as a security guard in a hotel — a job lined up by Tarkanian. Kelley was made available by Lois Tarkanian, so it is reasonable to conclude that his answers would not hurt the Tarkanians, nor would he want to jeopardize his Las Vegas job and lifestyle.

Kelley — considered "flaky" by both sides in this case — denied testimony he allegedly gave to Berst in May of 1975. He also has a different recollection of his phone conversations with Berst in 1976.

Thus, the evidence in the NCAA's harassment case comes down to a key witness who, at best, is unreliable and, at worst, is now hostile to the NCAA.

NCAA confidential documents report that Kelley told Berst that Tarkanian was pressuring him and that Kelley was scared and didn't want any harm to come to his family.

Kelley admits talking to his aunt and Berst numerous times during this period but does not clearly explain why he was so willing to talk to the NCAA if he wasn't providing information against Tarkanian. He said his conversations with Berst were general and at the urging of his aunt, whom, he said, hated Tarkanian because Kelley had flunked out of UNLV.

Kelley said that some of the things he was telling his aunt were misinterpreted and then relayed to Berst and taken as fact.

Phone records show that Kelley initiated 27 phone calls to Tarkanian over the same general period. "If I was being harassed and if I were frightened, would I be doing that?" he asked.

Tarkanian admits to contacting Kelley and asking him to sign some statements. He said he would often contact people for the university because of his rapport with black athletes, who would not return phone calls to UNLV investigators.

He also admits offering to arrange for Kelley to get a tryout with a California summer league, where he might be scouted by the Los Angeles Lakers, and arranging for Kelley to enter the University of Hawaii. "I would do that for all my players," he said.

The NCAA, contending all of Tarkanian's contacting and arranging came because Kelley was freely talking to Berst, found against Tarkanian on the interference charge.

"The (Infractions) Committee believes the information reported to the NCAA during this period by Kelley and Mrs. Parker clearly supports the finding that pressures were applied and various inducements were offered and provided in order to insure Kelley's assistance in protecting the interests of the university and Tarkanian in this case."

Tarkanian does not claim to be a saint but can't understand why he's been singled out.

"Maybe it's because we won too quickly and they assumed we were doing terrible things," he said. "We do so little cheating, it's incredible. They tried hard as hell for a long time to find cars and apartments here, but they never did. I wonder how many other schools can withstand that kind of scrutiny."

Several coaches interviewed by The Associated Press came to the same conclusion: They were certain that Tarkanian has broken some NCAA rules but were also convinced that the charges didn't amount to very much. All the coaches said many schools were worse violators, and Kentucky, UCLA and USC — in that order — were listed by several as the worst offenders.

"Other schools make Tark's activities at Long Beach and Las Vegas look like Cinderella," one of the coaches said. "I think the NCAA is angry because they feel he tricked them at Long Beach and got out before the charges came down."

Tarkanian was one of several coaches who told of their ordeals during the Congressional investigations and hearings of the NCAA last year. The Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations concluded that the NCAA has abused its power and recommended various procedural and policy changes.

"...The NCAA enforcement branch is not equally fair and just," Tarkanian said in his testimony. "This...can cause horrendous effects upoq the lives of the individuals involved.

"Why have I had to suffer what I have suffered over the last six years at the hands of the NCAA? I honestly don't know."

Tarkanian can certainly be faulted for not stressing education, for breaking some of the NCAA's rules and looking the other way on the violations committed by assistants and others close to his program.

But the evidence against Tarkanian, after two of the most exhaustive investigations in NCAA history, would probably not convict him in any court in the land. And even if all of it were true, Tarkanian would still be more honest than some other coaches, who have remained free of any NCAA penalties.

True or not, the NCAA punishment does not fit the crime; yet Tarkanian carries the reputation of a criminal.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons, a former president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, has a down-home way of putting Tarkanian's travails into perspective:

"Reminds me of the guy drivin' down the road doin' 60 and everybody is passin' him goin' 80. A cop stops the guy and he says, 'Why me?' And the cop says, 'Cause you're easier to catch.'"

Actor Recalls Prison Experience

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The make-believe world in which most actors live is inevitably shattered when they work in prison films on location behind bars with hundreds of convicts.

Paul Muni, Jimmy Cagney, Edward G. Robinson, Burt Lancaster and other stars never forgot their experiences with life's losers in the big house.

And so it is with Peter Strauss, who spent a month at Folsom, California's maximum security facility for hardened criminals, starring in "The Jericho Mile," a two-hour ABC-TV movie to be aired March 18.

"I came out of Folsom traumatized," said the actor. "We finished the film in October but I still hear the shouts and clang of the doors, I can still feel the cold in my bones and smell the concrete.

"I'll never forget what I saw and heard and experienced in there. But it was rewarding, too, because I saw a side of human nature I'd never be exposed to in any other way.

"While I was there I never felt threatened, although I worked with hundreds of cons every day, including celebrity prisoners, ax murderers and slashers who got a lot of publicity before they were sent up."

Strauss, who burst to national prominence three years ago in the role of Rudy Jordache in the "Rich Man, Poor Man" miniseries, purposely chose a prison film to break away from his clean-cut young U.S. senator role.

He followed "Rich Man, Poor Man" with the title role in "Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy." He felt he needed a vehicle that would convince producers he could play a variety of roles.

In "The Jericho Mile" he portrays a convict who shuts himself off from the rest of the prison populace to run aound the prison track almost all day every day until he is running close to a four-minute mile.

The story deals with the con's attempts to enter the Olympic tryouts.

In order to play the role, Strauss devoted three months to running 10-12 miles a day building his endurance. He had been a jogger anyhow and that helped.

When he walked into the prison yard with director Michael Mann for the first time the cons were spoiling to see a hotshot Hollywood actor fall on his backside.

"They had seen 'Rich Man, Poor Man,'" Strauss said. "They knew who I was and I knew I had to prove myself to them. Without the cons' support and cooperation we just couldn't have made the picture.

"That first day they sensed my fear and they had fun with it. They know anyone who walks into the prison yard the first time is frightened. They intimidate you to establish their own macho dominance.

"If you want to get along with them and win their respect, you lower your eyes to let them know they win the intimidation game. Then you've still got to prove yourself.

"ABC had just finished building the running track and I was there to try it out. I wore track shorts and spikes and got a few derisive whistles from the cons. It was humiliating.

"Michael told me to run one easy lap around the track. As I did, the cons began to collect, standing around to watch. When I stopped, they were all staring at me and I knew it was my personal test.

"So I went back on the track and ran as fast as I could for a half-mile. Nobody ever ran that distance with more motivation than I did. I wish I'd had a stopwatch on me. I'll bet I set a new world record.

"When I came off the track, the cons knew I wouldn't be using a double for the running scenes. First one con congratulated me and then the others moved in to shake my hand and tell me they never saw anybody run so fast.

"They all appreciated the fact that I could run and from that moment on Michael and I knew we could make the film there.

"During the course of the picture I learned prison dialect, stances and gestures. The cons knew I was trying to represent them accurately. They began calling me 'Hollywood' and 'Senator' because of the Jordache role.

"Their acceptance was important for another reason. I could walk around anyplace and be perfectly safe because the prison populace protected me better than all the guards possibly could. The word went out and the crazies left me alone. Maybe they put away some of the really bad ones but I can't be sure."

'Strangers' Termed Oddly Flat

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — "Strangers" theoretically should be good. It has first-rate acting talent — Bruce "Coming Home" Dern, back here after 20 years in Hollywood, and the very gifted Lois Nettleton.

The play, set in 1927 and 1948, concerns the gentle courtship and turbulent marriage, careers and divorce of Nobel-winning novelist Sinclair Lewis and famed columnist-commentator Dorothy Thompson.

Okay, a good cast, a potentially powerful drama. Now, the bad news.

"Strangers," which premiered earlier thus week, is disappointing, oddly flat despite some very funny lines, predictable, offers few insights and ends with a cliche uttered by Miss T. (Nettleton) about Lewis:

"America will never be the same without him — and neither will I."

Oh, mercy, and it started so well, with Dern, as the author of "Elmer Gantry" and other classics, popping from the bathroom of her Berlin apartment after a party to propose marriage.

He's undaunted that his divorce from his first wife still awaits and his new love is freshly divorced from a womanzing Hungarian poet.

Amused by this tall, red-haired gawky surprise (and his gift for mimicking anyone handy), she rejects his offer and dismisses his cries of ardor thusly: "I don't inspire passion — I relieve it."

Of course, she can quote from his novels. He, of course, can reveal his vulnerability by softly saying, "Woman, I don't want to be quoted. I want to be loved." In fact, he does say this.

And after an amusing visit to a Berlin cabaret, where he cases the joint and mockingly declares, "This is Sodom," they fly off to Vienna, Moscow and married life in short order.

Oh, sure, she's warned him she may be no good, that she's arrogant and vicious, loves mingling with the famous and even is bisexual on occasion, proving it discreetly with a lady friend in Act Two.

It doesn't bother him. Things settle down to a study of what happens when a fiercely ambitious, beautiful, moderately famous news service reporter falls in love with a famous, ugly, insecure novelist.

If you think he takes to drink, fears loss of talent and resents her, think she becomes more famous, more than guilty and that both parties fight and make up a lot, you're no stranger to "Strangers."

There are a few scenes that shine, but it's hard to sit still when he tells her that "my drinking is a sickness. The difference is, you can cure it if you swear you're never leave me."

'Golden Pond' Called Wonderful Story

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — "On Golden Pond," which opened on Broadway Feb. 28, is a funny, wonderful play about love, about-growing up and growing old.

Mostly it's the story of an old man and a boy; an old man who finds a new reason for living in teaching the boy to fish, to read, to be young.

The theme is not new, but the play — apart from a slow opening and a somewhat contrived ending — is most enjoyable, and deserves both audiences and prizes.

"On Golden Pond," playing at the New Apollo Theater — the old 42nd Street Apollo movie house retransformed into a legit theater at a cost of $350,000 with a new entrance on 43rd Street — is author Ernest Thompon's first Broadway play. It won't be his last.

This production, marking Thompson's professional playwrighting debut, was first seen last fall at the Off Broadway Hudson Guild Theater. It has been moved to Broadway with only one cast change, coproduced by Greer Garson and Arthur Cantor.

The story, is of Norman Thayer, a retired teacher, and his wife spending their 48th straight summer at their cottage in Maine. His approaching 80th birthday depresses him, as does his failing memory, and he has lost his zest for his beloved fishing. Even the lake is dying, from pollution.

Into his life comes a 13-year-old boy, street-wise but ignorant, the son of the latest boyfriend of the Thayer's 42-year-old, once-divorced daughter Chelsea.

Thayer learns to love the boy, and in the process to love his daughter as well. He had wanted a boy and Chelsea knew and resented it all her life.

At the end, Thayer and his wife are left alone with their own love for each other, looking forward to the future.

The characters are well drawn, and the dialogue excellent. Old man Thayer (Tom Aldredge) has a wicked sense of humor and of the ridiculous, though his perpetual jokes about death are turning sour on him, and is inclined to play games with people. His wife Ethel (Frances Sternhagen) looks after him, and spends her time battling the blackflies, the mosquitoes, moths, spiders and daddy longlegs, while watching the loons on the lake bring up their chicks and reliving her girlhood at camp nearby.

Both performances are simply great. Ronn Carroll adds a neatly observed characterization of a Down East mailman, with a wonderful accent and a high-pitched giggle.

Director Craig Anderson, apart from being unable or unwilling to get the opening and final scenes changed, has guided his actors into a well-paced, well-orchestrated production which almost anyone can enjoy.

UPI's Gay Pauley reports from Off Off Broadway:

Head Of Radiation Study Team Defends Inconclusive Findings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a Carter administration study team this week defended his group's conclusion that the scientific evidence is inconclusive on the possible dangers of repeated small doses of man-made radiation.

F. Peter Libassi, general counsel of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said the group found no evidence that would warrant reducing the current standards for radiation exposure.

But Libassi said the group could not find solid evidence that the current standards were adequate, either.

"We have concluded that the studies that claim we are overestimating or underestimating the risk are inconclusive at this time," Libassi told a Senate subcommittee. He said the task force recommended more research on the question and establishing a national data bank for workers in the nuclear industry.

Libassi was responding to criticism from two radiation specialists, who told the subcommittee that the task force report did not go far enough in stressing the possible dangers.

Dr. Karl Z. Morgan of Georgia Tech and Dr. Irwin D. Bross of Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y., said the risk, although small, was probably higher than was assumed based on studies of persons receiving high doses.

But Morgan and Bross disagreed on the extent of the danger, with Bross taking the more extreme position. They were among five scientists who testified.

The scientists have been asked to evaluate an 800-page draft report on radiation released last week by President Carter's Interagency Task Force on Ionizing Radiation.

The other three panel members said Morgan and Bross may be exaggerating the low-level radiation threat.

But one of them, Dr. Edward P. Radford of the University of Pittsburgh, head of a National Academy of Sciences study on the question, said he felt unnecessary medical X-rays may be increasing some forms of cancer.

The White House task force called for reducing human exposure to radiation, particularly X-rays, since several studies have suggested it could cause cancer or genetic defects.

Medical X-rays account for 45 percent of the total annual radiation exposure of Americans, the report said, the highest source outside of the natural background radiation, which accounts for 50 percent.

The White House report noted several recent studies, including one by Bross, that suggested an increased risk at low levels. But it said the studies were too small 'to provide an unequivocal answer."

Morgan, a leading figure in radiation health, praised the task force report for its thoroughness. But he added: "There is abundant evidence that low-level human exposure poses a cancer risk that may be as great or greater (per dose of radiation) than at high levels, and that is not stressed in the report."

He criticized the study for focusing only on fatal cancers.

"We should be concerned also with the women who have to lose a breast or persons having to live the rest of their lives without a thyroid," he said.

Student Celebrates Winning Bet

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — When Smith College sophomore Mary Dickinson won a $2,500 bet that she could forego alcohol for a year, she celebrated with a midnight gulp of peppermint schnapps.

Then the real celebration began.

Her small party in her dormitory room spread spontaneously from dorm to dorm as hundreds of "Smithies," some in nightgowns, cavorted across campus at 1 a.m. Tuesday.

Women drank and danced on the quadrangle. They sent music blaring across the quad from stereo speakers in dorm windows.

"It was crazy. It was incredible. It was just terrific," said Miss Dickinson, an economics and history major from Brainerd, N.Y.

The ruckus awoke Jill Ker Conway, president of the 2,200-student college, and the revelers — recalling that Miss Conway had missed the traditional Christmas caroling last year — serenaded her with "Silent Night."

The bet required Miss Dickinson to go without booze for one year — her mother's way of showing her how to get along socially as a non-drinker.

"It was a really good experience," the daughter said. "I don't feel like I need to have a drink to function socially."

She said the toughest challenge came last summer in Washington, D.C., where she worked as an intern in the office of Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y.

However, the end of the year-long bet "was one hell of an excuse for a party," she said with a laugh.

Miss Dickinson, who has had a year to think about how she'll spend the $2,500 she won from her mother, says the money will go toward a trip to Antigua later this month.

CBers have a stake in negotiations which will be going on at the World Administrative Radio Conference in Geneva this fall. Two-way radio is a prime target of the less-developed countries.

At this writing, many of the countries of Africa, Latin America and Asia are meeting in a series of conferences to present a unified front when the WARC convenes. The sessions are planned for over a three-month period. The LDCs are very unhappy about proposals to be made by the Federal Communications Commission.

The United States wants access to the satellite spectrum space on a first-come, first-served basis. The LDCs feel it should be established on a reservation basis so that they can have access when they are able to utilize the service.

They are also opposed to the idea that there should be separate frequency allocations for fixed satellites, which are used primarily for business communications such as transmitting data, financial information, currency clearances, and so forth. The U.S. proposal would specify that the orbiting satellites be used for broadcasting and educational purposes.

The LDCs argue that this approach to the frequency allocation problem protects American interests, and those of major companies like RCA, AT&T, Western Union, et al., and deprives the LDCs of frequency space when the technology becomes available to them.

You are wondering how this may affect the CBer who tools down highway 75 and wants to establish the location of the nearest motel. In the broader sense of citizens band radio, it relates to uses which this column has dwelt upon many times: saving lives, emergencies, educational purposes and the like.

Timothy Logue coordinated a research paper done for the Academy of Educational Development, a non-profit organization committed to worldwide planning of communications for constructive purposes.

The paper, one of several documents presented to the FCC, was a study of the world information order in the communications field.

"The Third World recognizes the importance of communications to its structure, and its eventual development," Logue explains. "It understandably is trying to preserve a position that will be available to it when it is ready to make use of the facilities that are going to be available.

"The educational values alone are enormous and they don't want to have to fight to gain that position after all the fully-developed nations have everything nailed down."

Logue is now an assistant researcher at the East-West Communications Institute in Hawaii. There are 40 countries involved in this institution, which is supported by UNESCO, as well as AID, an arm of the U.S. State Department. The aim is to develop a greater understanding of communications between the Asian nations who are participating and the United States.

These developments will be extended in our next column, when an interview with Dr. Jock Gunter, of the Academy of Educational Development, in Washington, D.C., reveals the dimensions of two-way radio as it is now and as it will be.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean, wheat and corn futures were mixed in uneventful dealings Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

A government report, set for release after the close, was expected to show a sharp drop in anticipated year-end supplies of soybeans because of an increase in anticipated exports, analysts said.

The increase was expected because Brazil's soybean crop, U.S. farmers' main competition on world soybean markets, has been damaged by drought.

Nearby soybean futures fell slightly as more distant months, including those that will be affected by next fall's soybean harvest, rose as traders executed "spread" positions against old-crop months.

Man Says Neutralizer Removes Herbicide

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

"Corn and sorghum farmers who use triazine herbicides can now have the freedom to choose alternate crops without the problem of triazine residuals," Dennis Owens of Lubbock told a press conference Wednesday at the South Park Inn.

Owens, a graduate of Texas Tech University, has developed a triazine neutralizer called Notox which he claims will remove the harmful triazine residues within 72 hours after application, leaving virtually no trace of itself.

"The advantage of the product," Owens said, "is that the farmer is able to switch to a different crop in a short period of time. If a corn acreage is hailed out, for example, the farmer could replant something else within three days with the use of Notox."

In addition, Owens said the Notox actually helps maintain the ecological balance of the soil.

"After three days," he pointed out, "the soil is the same as it was before triazine was applied. It is called Notox because there is no toxicity in the soil after application."

Owens said a test kit was developed in conjunction with the triazine neutralizer that allows a grower to determine the triazine level of the field within two hours, a test that normally takes up to three weeks.

"The treatment is usually applied at a rate of one pound per acre," Owens said, "and costs the farmer about $9.75 per acre."

The product, which has been in the development stages for the past three years, has been tested in Dimmitt, Seminole, Hereford and Clovis. It is being marketed by Texas Pride, Inc.

Tech Livestock Contest Offers Chance To Judge

A chance to sharpen knowledge about livestock will be offered students, faculty and businessmen and producers at the All-University Livestock Judging contest on March 10 in the Livestock Arena at Texas Tech.

The contest, sponsored by Texas Tech's departments of Animal Science and Agricultural Education, is open to anyone wishing to judge.

Actual judging will begin at 9 a.m., but entrants need to arrive early for registration. There is no entry fee.

Dr. Herman Purdy, world-renowned livestock judge and professor emeritus at Pennsylvania State University, will judge the contest and discuss the livestock industry at a free lunch.

Student entrants will be divided into those who have previously judged on livestock teams and those who have never team judged. Students may enter as teams of four or as individuals.

The faculty division will include university professors, extension agents and vocational agriculture teachers from the area.

Classes of sheep, swine and beef cattle will be rated on the basis of conformation, and two horse classes will be judged, one on conformation and one on performance.

"Theme of the contest is 'eye-sharpener,'" said Dr. James C. Heird, contest coordinator. "The object is two-fold: to illustrate to those who have not been around livestock for a while the new trends in meat-type animals and performance in horses and to allow those who work with livestock regularly to sharpen their ability to discern quality animals."

For further information contact either Heird, Dr. Robert C. Albin, chairman of the Animal Science Department (742-2825) or Dr. Jerry D. Stockton, chairman of the Agricultural Education Department (742-2816).

Soybean Price, Market Strong

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bright outlook for exports and higher prices could cause soybean plantings to exceed corn plantings for the first time in history, says Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

The soybean "market is bright" and exports and prices are strong, he told the National Press Club Wednesday. No plan is in the works, as it is for wheat and feed grains, to require soybean producers to set-aside part of their land to qualify for price supports.

Bergland said that because of the bright outlook soybean producers are expected to increase plantings this year by 4 million to 6 million acres over 1978.

If 6 million acres are added, he said, the boost in soybeans could mainly come at the expenses of fewer 1979 corn acres.

Later in the day, the Agriculture Department issued a new "supply and demand" report that showed soybean exports now are expected to be a record of about 785 million bushels, up 10 million from a Feb. 9 estimate.

Investigators Seek Cause Of Fire

CRYSTAL CITY (AP) — Bright orange flames and thick clouds of billowing black smoke reminded J.B. Delgado of scenes from old war movies.

"Flames leaped up high in the air and drums of the stuff were thrown all over ... the black smoke began covering everything," Delgado, 18, recalled of the explosion and fire at a chemical warehouse here early Wednesday morning.

"It got kind of scary, so I left," he added.

So did about 6,000 other residents of this Southwest Texas farming community awakened by the continuous ring of a fire alarm bell, sounded to warn them of approaching clouds of toxic smoke.

Follow-Up

The smoke poured from the Riverside Chemical Co. Warehouse Distribution Center, about a mile south of the city, when fire broke erupted about 5 a.m.

The warehouse stored pesticides, fertilizers and other agricultural chemicals.

Federal, state, local and company investigators are still searching for the cause of the fire. There were no injuries reported.

"It seems the fire started in the office area, then spread to the warehouse section, igniting cans of chemicals," said Douglas Kelly, chairman of the board at Riverside Chemical Co. in Memphis, Tenn.

"This big blast woke us up and we could see fire way up in the sky," said Lupe Jiminez, who lives in a mobile home about a quarter mile from the warehouse.

"About 7 a.m., an ambulance came by and the people told us to get out. We grabbed our kids and headed out to LaPryor (a town about 19 miles north)," said Jiminez.

The approximately 6,000 evacuated residents were permitted to return home early Wednesday afternoon.

Justice of the Peace Ron Carr said the fire alarm was sounded by 6 a.m. He said he manned the telephones at the Zavala County Sheriff's Department where he answered about 150 calls in an hour and a half. Inquiring residents were told to evacuate as a precaution.

Law enforcement officers closed roads south of town in the area of the burning warehouse. Residents fled on U.S. 83, creating a bumper-to-bumper traffic jam.

Units of the Crystal City Volunteer Fire Department, using equipment borrowed from nearby Carrizo Springs, battled the blaze for about eight hours before bringing it under control.

A chemical spray was used to fight the flames.

Warehouse manager Nelson Brunnemann said the building contained relatively small quantities of chemicals but would not be specific. He would give no estimate of damage from the fire.

"I believe this whole thing has been blown out of proportion. There was a potential hazard to firemen, but there was only a slim hazard to the community," said Brunnemann.

Zavala County Judge Jose Angel Gutierrez said a thorough investigation would be made.

"All we really know is that extremely toxic chemicals are stored there," he said Wednesday afternoon. "You can be sure we want to find out how it happened and to insure it won't happen again."

Winds Keep Workers From Capping Leak

MORGAN CITY, La. (UPI) — High winds and choppy seas have delayed arrival of emergency equipment needed to shut down a steady natural gas leak on an offshore drilling rig that burst into a ball of flame with 35 persons aboard earlier this week.

Three men were killed in Monday's fire and five others are missing and presumed dead. Coast Guard crews suspended their search for the missing men Wednesday.

"We went out 25 to 30 miles from the rig and there were just no sightings or evidence of anything," said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Baeten. "We called off our search."

Twenty-seven crewmen escaped serious injury by climbing into a saucer-shaped rescue capsule minutes after the blaze erupted. The fire burned for two days, but extinguished itself Tuesday when a surge of water swept across the natural gas line feeding the flames.

Even after the flames died, a steady stream of natural gas continued to escape and Red Adair's oil firefighting crew from Houston was called in to cap the leak.

Adair's workers cleared rubble from the charred steel rig 45 miles off the Louisiana coast, but could do little more Wednesday. Winds gusting to more than 20 knots delayed arrival of the equipment they needed to close the leak.

Another rig was being moved to the site to drill a relief well at an angle to the ruptured gas line. A heavy mud-like compound then will be pumped into the relief well to stop the flow of gas.

Officials said the extra rig could be in position Friday if the weather calmed.

A spokesman for Placid Oil Co., the well owner, said reports earlier this week that four bodies had been recovered were incorrect.

James King of Placid's Houma, La., office said the body of rig crewmen Jeff Stultz of Columbia, Miss., had not been recovered from the Gulf of Mexico Monday. He said Stultz still was listed as missing.

"There were only two bodies taken from the water and one on the platform," King said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the erroneous body count was a misunderstanding. He said searchers reported finding a wallet, but officials on shore misunderstood them to say they recovered a body.

The body recovered Tuesday from the platform after the well stopped burning was identified as James Bergeron of St. Martinville, La.

Other than Stultz, those still missing were Steven Alwell and Adrion Curtis Jr., both of Deville, La., Kenneth Muncey of Bossier City, La., and Bill Johnson of Houma, La.

Rev. Glass Censured By Church Board

LUFKIN (AP) — Pentecostal minister Charles E. Glass of Sherman has been censured by his governoring board but will remain as pastor of his church in Sherman "with stipulations."

The board of Presbyters of the Texas District of the United Pentecostal Church, however, would not spell out the allegations against Glass nor the "stipulations" when it emerged Wednesday morning from a marathon hearing.

The board had begun hearing testimony Tuesday on charges that Glass' conduct was unbecoming to a minister.

District Superintendent E.L. Holley released a statement approved by the board saying it was the same statement was read to Glass at the conclusion of the hearing.

"I was exonerated," the embattled Glass told reporters. "I feel very good. I'm a minister with full credentials in the United Pentecostal Church.

"I've got great people there. They have not found me guilty. I think everything is going to be great in Sherman.

"I was happy these people have been allowed to air their problems."

Holley told reporters he was "personally content" with the board's decision "because it's corrective in nature."

Glass will remain pastor of the Sherman church "under the stipulation of this hearing," Holley said.

Asked whether the Texas district board would "keep an eye on Glass" Holley said, "Rev. Glass will keep an eye toward the Texas district."

Holley would not specify any changes expected in the Sherman church and said he was "in no position to provide a rebuttal" to Glass' statements that he had been exonerated.

Six to eight witnesses testified against Glass, Holley said. Glass called 10 to 12 witnesses, most of them members of his church.

Home Opposed By Neighbors

McHENRY, Ill. (AP) — It seemed the perfect neighborhood for them: Towering elms along quiet streets. Transportation, shopping, banking, medical care, churches and recreation nearby.

So the McHenry County Association for the Retarded bought a vacant lot in the neighborhood. The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development agreed to loan money to build a one-story brick home with 11 bedrooms, one for each of the 11 moderately retarded people to live there. The association said the group home wouldn't detract from the neighborhood. There would be full-time supervision.

All seemed perfect — until the neighbors found out.

The association requested a zoning variance so non-related persons could live on the residential property. Neighbors hired an attorney and protested to the city zoning board, which will vote on the request Friday.

"We have no lack of compassion for the cause," says Bea Newkirk, one of the 67 neighbors who signed a petition opposing the home. "It's just that we just want to keep the neighborhood the way it is. We object to changing the character of the neighborhood."

Mrs. Newkirk refused to be more specific about her fears, but David Mack of the HUD office in Chicago said the typical objections to group homes are fears that the retarded persons are "perverted people. They have these false impressions about retarded people. The neighbors are afraid their children will be molested."

Max Addison of the National Association for Retarded Citizens noted that the problems in McHenry are not untypical. He says there are 165,000 retarded persons living in institutions and with relatives nationwide who could live in community homes, if space could be found. But efforts to build homes have met resistance nationwide.

Mack said that in Illinois, HUD funding for such homes has been available since 1974, but no projects have gotten beyond the planning stage, mostly because of problems similar to those in McHenry.

"The biggest problems," said Addison, "are zoning requirements and the misguided belief that a retarded person is a sick, dangerous person."

But, he added, moving retarded persons out of institutions "is a trend that won't be stopped. In the past, these people were just stashed into a corner. They never had a future. They weren't expected to contribute to society. That's all changing now."

Opposition to the McHenry project was organized at a meeting of neighbors, but one neighbor who wasn't invited was Kathy Alvary. She lives about a block from the proposed home and she and her husband have a daughter with learning disabilites who lives in New York.

"My neighbors know I've represented this community on the special education board and would speak out in favor of a group home. But they didn't want to hear the positive side," she said.

Mrs. Alvary testified before the zoning board in February, urging approval of the variance.

"I've been neighbors with the people for many years and I'm very disappointed. I'll never feel the same again about my immediate community," she added.

"I'm pretty sure we'll lose, both at the zoning board and the city council," said Robert Lambourn, executive director of the association for the retarded.

Lambourn described the neighborhood, which includes the country club, as one of the best in this city of 10,100. "Sure, we'd have an easier time in a less desirable neighborhood," he said, "but who says retarded persons can't live in the best environment?"

Joseph Condon, attorney for the neighbors, said his clients feel "the area is the most stable and long-standing single-family neighborhood in the city, and are only interested in maintaining that status." He added that his clients would oppose "any commercial facility in the neighborhood, whether it be a Lions Club Hall, hardware store or doctor's office."

"I've had the sense that some people suspect my clients have a 19th century mentality toward the developmentally disabled," Condon said. "This is not true, in fact many of my clients have been financial contributors to the cause of the developmentally disabled."

Lambourn said, "The communities in McHenry County have always been wonderful about supporting our programs. But everything we have so far is ... away from the neighborhoods where people live."

Lambourn's association, private and non-profit, runs programs for the mentally retarded including vocational rehabilitation, day care for children and adults and a community living facility for 20 mildly retarded persons on the outskirts of nearby Woodstock.

The group home would be for persons more retarded than those living at Woodstock. No residential facility for moderately retarded adults exists in the county — a gap the group home would fill.

Dr. Robert H. Bruininks of the University of Minnesota, who recently completed a study on facilities for the retarded, said the theory is that such group homes can help them to "grow and learn." But he said a wide range of services must be available nearby.

Lambourn said 109 retarded adults in the county would qualify to live in the group home. Bill Pierce's son, Robbie, 23, is one.

"My wife and I have given him as good a home as possible," said Pierce, who does not live in the neighborhood of the proposed home. "But we realize that at our age we have few years left, and Robbie will have to have a new home.

"We've been to the state institutions in Dixon and Lincoln and we know we'd never let him live in a place like that. When he was born a mongoloid child, the doctor told us to put him in an institution and forget him. We thank God we never did that. We don't want him going there after we're gone."

Said Mrs. Newkirk: "Our objection has grown out of proportion. We don't hate the mentally retarded. We're not against motherhood or apple pie. We just want to keep our neighborhood the way it is."

THE PERFECT PLOT — Robert Lamborum, executive director of the McHenry County Association for the Retarded, stands on a vacant lot in McHenry, Ill., recently bought by the association. The plot of land was to be used for the construction of a home for eleven moderately retarded people. The project had received a loan from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development and all seemed perfect — until the neighbors found out. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S., U.S.S.R. Begin Eye Disease Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have begun an eye disease research program that includes using laser beams to treat glaucoma and evaluating new contact lenses for cataract sufferers.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which announced the agreement this week, said the cooperative program on vision research and scientific exchange is a continuation of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. health agreement signed in 1977.

The new program will give vision research the same priority in the collaborative program as research into cancer, heart disease, artificial hearts, schizophrenia, influenza and other ailments.

"This new collaboration ... comes at a time when experts are estimating that the number of blind people worldwide, now estimated at 40 million, could double by the end of this century," said HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

Dr. Carl Kupfer, director of the U.S. National Eye Institute, will coordinate the program along with Dr. Michail M. Krasnov, director of the All-Union Scientific Research Institute of Eye Diseases of the Soviet Ministry of Health.

Eye institute spokesman Julian Morris said one of the priorities of the program is conducting trials using laser light beams to treat glaucoma, a condition of increased pressure within the eyeball.

Krasnov has developed a technique using a new kind of fast-pulse laser that can punch small holes in the eye for drainage without creating scar tissue.

National Eye Institute scientists have one of the lasers and are anxious to work with Krasnov on the technique, Morris said.

The Soviets also are testing new kinds of long-wearing contact lenses for people who have had the natural lenses in the eye removed because of cataracts. Using new materials, some of the contact lenses can be worn longer than conventional ones without taking them out, Morris said.

'Bionic Woman' Star Sued For Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Michael Brandon has filed for divorce from Lindsay Wagner, star of the former television series "The Bionic Woman."

Brandon seeks a share of the community property held by the couple during the marriage, which included residuals from the television series, several cars and residential properties in North Hollywood, Fullerton, Calif., and Sun Valley, Idaho.

Brandon, 33, filed the petition Monday in Superior Court to end his marriage to Miss Wagner, 29. The couple were wed in December 1976 and separated last July.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll find several excellent ways to economize which will help your budget immensely. Remember, however, to ear-mark a little for relaxation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be restless and need a social outlet, but that doesn't mean everybody else does too. Consider other people's feelings before making plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Whatever you do tomorrow, don't betray a confidence. This would do more to hurt your image than you can imagine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's fun to be out with the crowd exchanging stories, but don't take part in any catty or gossipy discussions. The seeds you plant will germinate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be bursting with pride tomorrow over an accomplishment. Unfortunately, there are always those who can't do anything themselves who'll want to pierce your bubble.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your words carry a lot of weight tomorrow. You'll have to be extra careful not to unintentionally hurt someone's feelings. The wound would be deep.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you may be looking to find a good co-worker tomorrow don't get involved with one who gave you trouble before. History repeats itself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone has good advice for you tomorrow, and you should follow it. However, don't reveal your game plan. It would dilute your chances for success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your hoped-for goals are within reach, but you mustn't let someone else distract you and destroy your momentum. Keep plugging no matter what is said.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If there is a spoilsport in the group tomorrow, the best thing you can do is to totally ignore this person and continue to do things as planned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll probably come up with a doozie of an idea today to help alleviate a major domestic problem, but wait until you can afford it to do your celebrating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An extremely active day — one which you should thoroughly enjoy — is in the offing. In your zeal to have a good time, don't forget a promise you made.

The luxury car choice for '79
That's Cadillac!

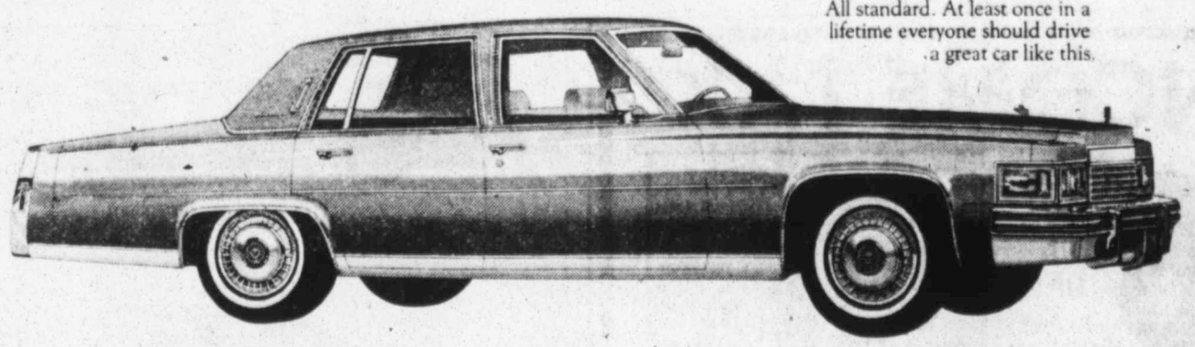

The classic Seville by Cadillac

This is the American car that redefined luxury. For 1979, Seville stands among the world's great cars. A car that shares its body and suspension system with no other. With almost every luxury standard Seville is the most significant luxury car introduced this decade.

The new breed of Eldorado

Coupe deVille, Sedan deVille, and Fleetwood Brougham (shown)

Superbly refined luxury automobiles designed for today. With a refined suspension for a superb Cadillac ride. And new touches like seat belt chimes that courteously urge you to buckle up. Also standard—a digital display AM/FM stereo radio with signal-seeking, scanning and electronic tuning features. Dome light with dual spot map lamps. And more. To please the most discerning car owner.

Europe Retains Trains Of Old

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Passenger trains that run on time and take you where you want to go went out of style in the USA long ago, but on the continent of Europe and the British Isles, they are very much in vogue, and in use.

Europeans take convenient and comfortable train travel for granted, as we do driving our cars in this country. To Americans visiting Europe, though, even the names of express trains are something of an adventure.

"Le Mistral," named for the north wind in France, goes from Paris to Nice daily in first class comfort; from Basle, Switzerland to Budapest, Hungary, one can take the "Wiener Waltzer " (Viennese waltz); "Puerta del Sol" runs from Paris to Madrid; "Chopin" from Moscow to Vienna and a train called "Rheingold" runs all the way from London, through Amsterdam to Milan along the Rhein River in Germany.

Trains that cross international borders are the most fascinating, particularly those with destinations behind the Iron Curtain, and particularly in second class.

Though the compartments tend to be more crowded (they seat eight versus six in first class, and they are less plush) the mix of humanity travelling together makes the relative discomfort worthwhile.

Travelling into the night, past international borders is certain to be intriguing, especially in five languages.

Not that the relative calm of first class with its haute cuisine dining cars and urbane travellers doesn't have its advantages, too...

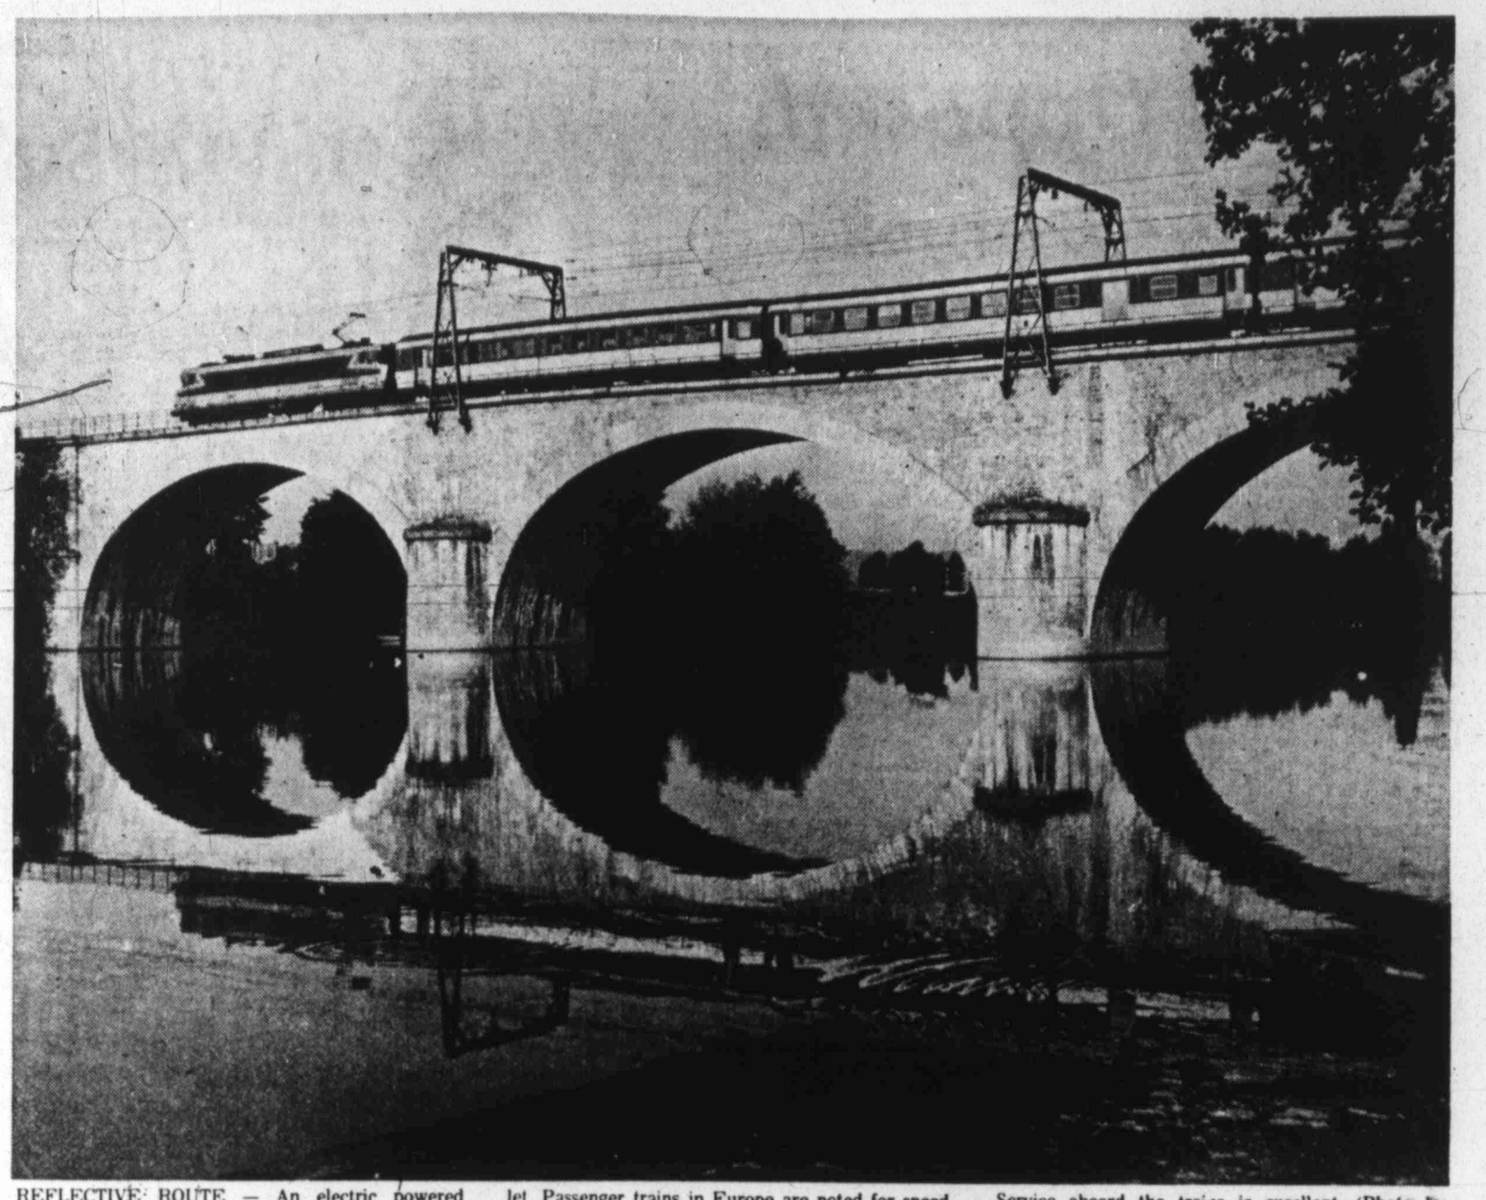

All but a few smaller railroads in Europe are nationalized, and though they reportedly show a profit about as often as AMTRAK, the service they provide is excellent.

From wherever you are, to wherever you could want to go in Europe, you can probably find a train leaving the same day.

Cook's tables for France, for example, comprise nearly 100 pages, and West Ger-

Norway Offers Bargain Ticket

Come celebrate with us and see spectacular Norway! is the invitation extended by Norwegian State Railways, celebrating its 125th anniversary this year. In honor of this event, a special anniversary ticket has been developed.

The ticket costs approximately $30 (150 Norwegian kroner) and is valid for one trip in second class on any of Norway's rail routes. There are unlimited stop overs. The only restrictions are that it is not valid on Fridays, Sundays and major holidays and that the trip must be completed in seven days. The ticket can be bought in any rail station in Norway.

Savings can be substantial on long routes. For example, a trip from Stavanger in the fjord area to Bodo above the Arctic Circle, via Oslo and Trondheim, is a saving of approximately $60 with the special ticket.

THE 'BEST OF SHOW' JUST GOT BETTER.

Obviously, we're biased. But as great as last year's Pontiac line-up was, we think this one's even better. For '79, Pontiac's got new diversity, new color, new excitement. One of the most luxurious Bonnevilles ever. A new breed of Firebird. Plus five other Pontiac lines. Including our road success, Grand Am.

Governor To Help In Launching Of 1979 State Railroad Season

TEXAS SPECIAL — A glimpse into railroading's golden days of glory awaits passengers on the Texas State Railroad. The narrowest state park in Texas winds for 25 miles between Rusk and Palestine. (Staff Photo by Ted J. Simon)

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements and other elected officials, including members of the State Legislature, will join festivities in Rusk March 16 for the opening the Texas State Railroad's 1979 season.

This is the third year for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's most unusual park, which offers a scenic 50-mile round trip by steam locomotive from Rusk to Palestine through some of the state's most beautiful woodlands of pine and dogwood.

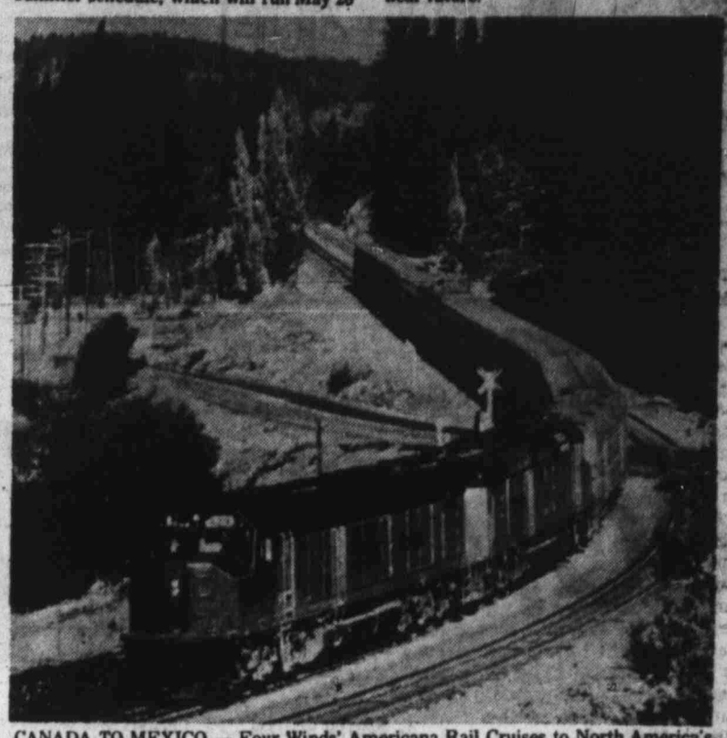

The railroad's spring schedule begins for the public on March 17 and will continue through May 20 with one round trip each morning and afternoon on Saturdays and Sundays only.

This spring schedule offers an extra bonus by coinciding with festivities of the annual Dogwood Festival on three weekends — March 24-25, March 31-April 1, and April 7-8.

On each of the festive weekends, a local hotel will have open house and continuous historical film and slide showings. There will be conducted tours of historic churches and stately homes, dramatic performances, concerts and a variety of other activities.

For further information about Dogwood Fesitival events, write Texas Dogwood Trails, Inc., P.O. Box 516, Palestine, Texas 75801. To make reservations for the steam train, which are recommended, write Texas State Railroad, P.O. Box 39, Rusk, Texas 75785 or phone (214) 683-2561.

Round trip adult fare will be $5.75 and one-way $3; for children three through 12, round-trip $3.25 and one-way $1.75. These fares will remain the same for the summer schedule, which will run May 26 through Sept. 3. Details of the expanded summer timetable will be available in the near future.

CANADA TO MEXICO — Four Winds' Americana Rail Cruises to North America's best-loved attractions feature comfortable sleeping car accommodations aboard famous "name" trains. The rail cruises feature a group tour guide, baggage handling on and off the train, and most meals.

Tours Firm To Conduct Mexican Rail Journey

A fully escorted rail trip across Mexico will be conducted by Sanborn, the well known tour operator. Highlighting the rail adventure will be the magnificent vistas of Copper Canyon. The trip from Presidio or El Paso to Chihuahua is by bus.

Following a day of sightseeing and accommodations at Hotel Victoria in Chihuahua, passengers board the train for a trip past farm land and orchards before starting the climb into the spectacular Sierra Madre.

The 8-day tour — $365 single, $313 double — includes all transportation in Mexico, baggage handling tips at hotels and depots, all accommodations, tour escort, and sightseeing in Chihuahua, Copper Canyon, Los Mochis and the little Pacific seaport of Topolobampo.

Passenger Trains Used In Europe

By comparison, the entire AMTRAK schedule listed by Cook takes only five pages.

For all the mystery surrounding the famed Orient Express," trains in Europe are safe, not to mention comfortable in either class.

Crossing borders, challenging as it may sound, is actually as easy as presenting a passport and ticke, and negotiating train stations, even in a foreign language, is equally facile.

The rail lines bend over backward to accomodate North American tourists. The Eurail Pass is available for unlimited first or second class travel for periods of one week, one month and three months.

HOOFING IT — An excursion train on the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad encounters some bovine obstructions on its route between Antonito, Colo., and Chama, N.M. Spectacular mountain scenery is afforded passengers aboard the train. The trip is made on an 1880 narrow-guage steam locomotive. (Photo by Colorado Division of Development)

The 1979 Buicks. After all, life is to enjoy.

We have a certain goal at Buick. It is, very simply, to bring you cars that are better. And, if you go along with that sort of thinking, then you'll probably be interested in the results this year. The 1979 Buicks. Innovative? Yes, indeed. With the luxury, prestige and elegance that Buick has always been known for. But then, go ahead. Look around. Once you see these Buicks for yourself, we think you'll have to agree. There really is nothing quite like a Buick.

NBC Cancels Four New Shows; Program Executive Departs

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC is dropping four of the new series it introduced with much fanfare this winter — the cancellation of "Little Women" is official and the demise of "Turnabout," "Brothers and Sisters" and "Sweepstakes" reportedly will follow.

The move follows the departsre of Paul Klein as the network's top programer, and more executive changes are expected soon.

The industry rumor experts are split on NBC chief Fred Silverman's status. One group believes he has until 1980 to bring NBC's rating position up, while another group insists that Edgar Griffiths, head of parent company RCA, wants results from the 1979 fall season — or else.

The reason for the NBC turmoil lies in the ratings — NBC trails leader ABC and second place CBS for the season to date, and again in the weekly Nielsen ratings for the week ending March 4.

The "second season" programs NBC hopes to salvage include the super expensive "Supertrain," admittedly rushed in production and now reportedly being fed extensive creative vitamin shots, and "Hello, Larry," with engaging McLean Stevenson.

Program watchers may note that Bernard Hughes' television movie characterization of the detective Father Brown has been cancelled from its March 19 premiere.

STRIKE CONTINUES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The public school teachers' strike entered its second dav today, with no new bargaining talks between negotiators for the school board and the teachers union in sight. Schools opened as usual, despite the strike by the Washington Teachers Union in defiance of a temporary restraining order. Substitute teachers and volunteers took the places of regular teachers on the picket lines.

English Ad Wins Award

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A British public service commercial about the drunken driver won sweepstakes honors as the world's best television commercial of 1978 in the 19th annual International Broadcasting Awards competition sponsored by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

It was the second straight year that a British commercial won the television competition, which drew 4,000 entries from 50 nations.

Choreographer Opens Season On Broadway

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Choreographer Maurice Bejart, willing to turn his boundless imagination and reach to the outrageous and the avant garde, opened a three-week season of his Ballet of the 20th Century at Broadway's Minskoff Theater Tuesday.

The program included the premiere of a ballet for 55-year-old Jean Babilee, and Fokine's famous "Le Spectre de la Rose" updated by Bejart — one might say the petals have been shredded from it — for New York's favorite modern dancer, Judith Jamison.

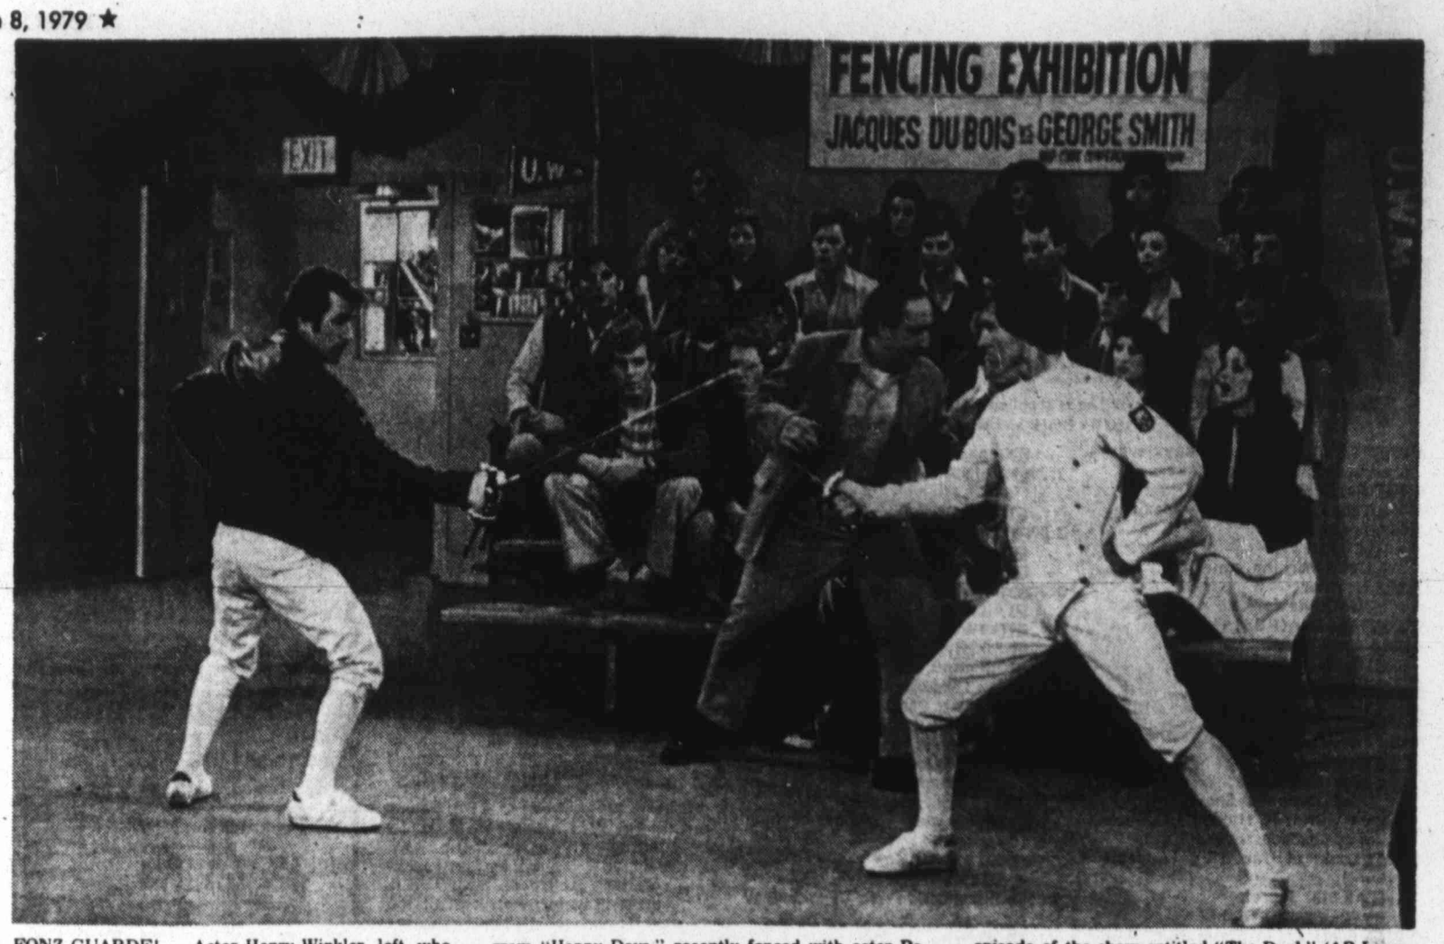

The evening ended with "Bolero," with Jorge Donn as soloist and a female chorus, from Bejart's original casting. This was the audience favorite, with the soloist moving his arms and body sinuously atop a red table and the large chorus pounding feet and swaying hips all around.

The ballet Bejart has choreographed for Babilee is "Life," a brief work with an open-sided cage made of pipes and a ballerina as the muse of dance. Babilee has great strength in his arms and he moved the cage and swung from it with beauty of form.

Bejart's "Le Spectre" really doesn't work. Miss Jamison comes in from a night out and sees a rose on her floor. Patrice Touron comes in, in a Dracula cape. They strip to leotards and dance, sometimes sensually. At the end, she — not he — jumps out the window.

The program began with a side of Bejart not previously seen here, a delightful, autobiographical, funny "Gaite Parisienne." This bears even less relation to the scenario of Massine's well-known "Gaite Parisienne" than "Spectre" does to its original.

IF YOU THINK WE MOVED OUR TAIL BEFORE, YOU SHOULD SEE US NOW.

We've always had to work a little harder and do things a bit better. We grew up competing with giants. We've never had the time to be complacent. And we sure can't afford to be now.

The airline industry is in a state of turmoil. There are more discounts, more people flying. And deregulation is here. We had a choice to make. Get tough or get out.

So we're working even harder to do the things that make your flight something more than a bus ride. We offer free stereo. We serve only premium brand liquor. We work harder at being on time and getting your baggage to you. And our Super Saver discount fares are as low as they come.

These are the tangibles. We're working on some intangibles, too. Like a winning attitude. Our people feel that we can succeed in any market at any time. So they work a little harder to be friendly, to be courteous, to be helpful. A lot of airlines say that. But if you compare Continental to some other airline, we're confident that you'll feel the difference. If you don't, we're in big trouble.

If you want your next flight to be extra special, see your travel agent, company travel department or Continental Airlines.

The Proud Bird with the Golden Tail.
