Second autopsy indicates Lozano beaten

ODESSA — Larry Lozano, a 27-year-old Mexican-American prisoner who died in the Ector County jail Jan. 22, was beaten to death while in the custody of law enforcement officers, according to jail sources and a medical examiner.

The final report of an autopsy conducted by Dr. Frederick Bornstein, El Paso County medical examiner, concluded that Lozano's extensive injuries — which Bornstein says included 92 separate bruises, showed evidence of choking and revealed distortions of the face and forehead — were "incompatible" with Sheriff Elton Faught's contention that Lozano committed suicide in the padded cell in which jail authorities had isolated him.

"It is my opinion that the man died from extensive blunt trauma, such as beating, hitting, kicking, as well as possible small wounds with sharp instruments," Bornstein said.

He was asked by Lozano's family to perform an autopsy after the Ector County medical examiner conducted an autopsy but did not release her findings.

"Therefore, I consider the mode of death homicide," Bornstein's report says.

The Ector County medical examiner, Dr. Krishnakumari Challapalli, cooperated with Bornstein in his autopsy, providing him with slides and tissue samples from her examination.

Dr. Challapalli declined to support or disclaim Bornstein's autopsy. She said she would withhold her own conclusions until a later date.

The Times Herald learned that a witness told state investigators that officers involved with the case gathered with Sheriff Faught and attorney Bill Barnes seven days after Lozano's death in a conference room on the second floor of the Ector County Courthouse to discuss the probability of a federal investigation and "to get their stories straight."

Faught has maintained that Lozano, who had a history of mental distress, became violent in his padded cell three hours after he had been injected with two tranquilizers at a local hospital.

Lozano repeatedly rammed his head into a "shatterproff" window in his cell, Faught said, then grappled with eight officers before dying, handcuffed, on the floor in front of the cell.

None of the officers beat Lozano at any time during the incident, Faught said, "not once."

Bornstein's autopsy report notes that "92 separate hematomas (small, blood-filled swellings) were found distributed all over the skin, none of them older than a week, most of them very recent."

Asked to explain how Lozano might have received the number of bruises cited in Bornstein's report, Faught said, "I don't know and none of the officers know."

A witness in the Ector County jail at the time of the incident has told the Times Herald that on the day of Lozano's death he saw "six or seven deputies, one in civilian clothes," remove their badges, hats and belts and enter Lozano's cell.

Later, the witness said, he heard "the shuffling of feet and mixed voices combined with dull thuds, like someone hitting someone with either their hand, foot, or something."

Three persons also told the Times Herald that in the days before his death Lozano had been harassed and isolated by Ector County jailers and deputies.

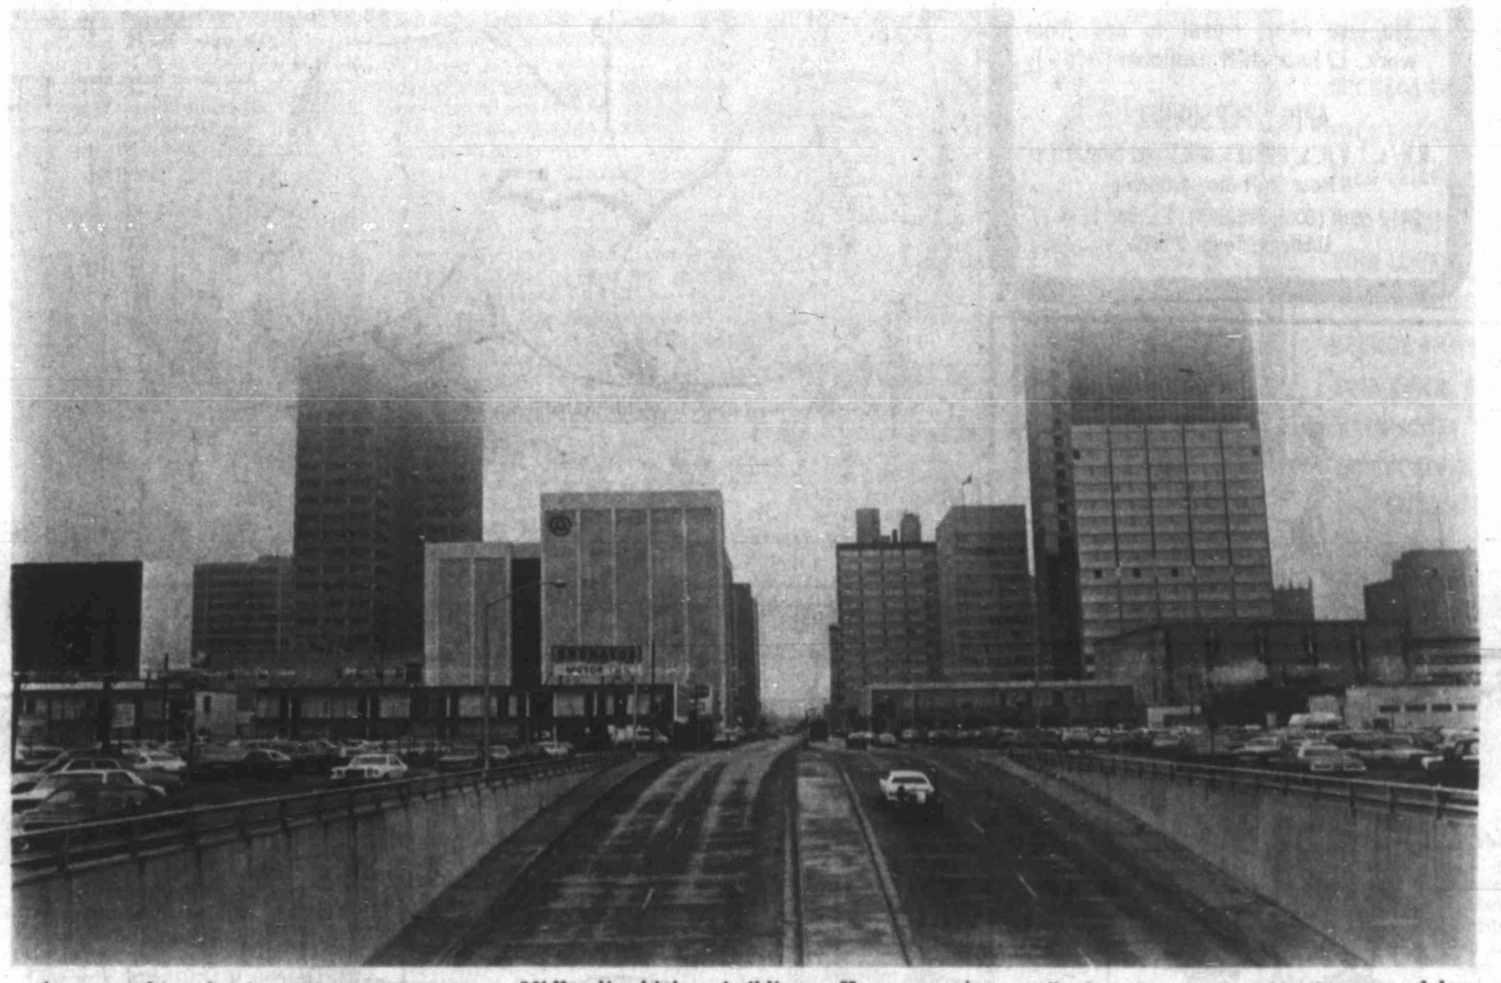

The three witnesses said that two days before his death Lozano had been confined to a padded cell covered "with water, paper and human waste" from a backed-up commode. Two of the witnesses said they saw a deputy dump one of Lozano's meals through a hole in his door. The meal, they said, dropped to the floor of the filthy cell.

Lozano was arrested Jan. 10 after he drove his car off the road and hit a fence post west of Odessa. Lozano became billigerent and fought with two deputies who arrived at the scene to investigate the accident, according to Sheriff Faught.

Two additional deputies were required to bring Lozano in, Faught said, and the prisoner was repeatedly belligerent and fought with the officers again at the booking desk. Faught said Lozano was beaten in that scuffle, "but so were two of my deputies."

According to the three witnesses, Lozano suffered dizzy spells after he was jailed but recovered in the next 10

An unusual two-day fog makes the Tall City seem a little shorter today as a soupy mist enfolds the upper stories of downtown Midland's higher buildings. However, air traffic at Midland Regional Air Terminal resumed to a degree today after being halted until almost noon Tuesday because of low visibility. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Snow and rain still possible

Although the Texas Department of Public Safety had not issued a second travelers' advisory as of 1 p.m. today, the weatherman said there is a chance of light rain mixed with snow tonight in Midland, which could lead to poor road conditions in this area.

The National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal said a traveler's advisory was issued for early this morning. The DPS reported this morning that there was ice on bridges and overpasses and that there was "some fog" in the Permian Basin area.

Aviation Director Wilson Banks said today that some flights at the terminal had been cancelled due to poor weather conditions either here or elsewhere.

In the rest of the forecast, the weatherman predicted the low temperature tonight should drop to the upper 20s. Skies should be cloudy Thursday with a slight chance of freezing drizzle. The high temperature that day is expected to reach the upper 30s.

The probability of measurable precipitation is 50 percent tonight and less than 20 percent Thursday.

Even though a drizzle fell over the Midland area Tuesday, the National Weather Service at the terminal recorded only a trace of precipitation. However, Texas Electric Service Co. in Odessa reported this morning .05 inch of rainfall at its Spraberry switching station in southern Midland County.

Tuesday's high temperature was 46 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 28 degrees, the weather service said.

Fog hung over all area towns this morning, according to reports. Temperatures were in the upper 20s or lower 30s.

Andrews awaiting new tack for its patriots

ANDREWS — If Guy Wood's ploy works, the ominous warning "Free Enterprise: Endangered Species" will never be more than a threat.

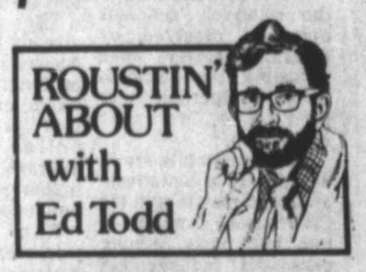

But he does have his problems.

Wood, as most folks in Andrews know, is doing his level best to peak free-enterprise awareness.

Sometime last year, Wood, who's a distributive education teacher here, entrepreneur Dave Foreman and some other equally die-hardish free enterprise advocates got together and had altered the patriotic billboard message at the roadway gateways to their fair city.

The highly-visible message was changed from "Andrews Loves God, Country and Supports our Government" to "Andrews Loves God, Country and Supports Free Enterprise."

Then, Wood and his industrious students put together a city-wide slogan contest to further promote the cause. The winning words, authored by working woman Sue Crawford, were "Open Your Eyes To Free Enterprise." Her award was a $100

U.S. savings bond.

And the new slogan was to be lettered on a marquee and then printed on 10,000 lapel buttons.

But all that has changed somewhat radically.

For one thing, Wood and his bunch opted for another slogan to spread widely: "Energize With Free Enterprise."

That particular one-liner was produced in a school-wide slogan contest by cosmetology teacher Charlene Jackson. Andrews High School senior Joel Gilliland wrote the runner-up slogan: "Socialist Lies or Free Enterprise."

And it was the "Energize-With-Free-Enterprise" slogan that preempted the "Eyes" slogan and got printed — supposedly — on 10,000 1½-by-1-inch lapel pins.

On behalf of Wood and bunch, B&B Advertising Specialties of Andrews phoned in to New Jersey an order for 10,000 of the red-white-and-blue pins. The cost was around $300.

Only the pins didn't come in in time for the Jan. 26 Andrews County Chamber of Commerce banquet. Somehow, the shipment got lost in the mail.

Wood is hoping, however, that the pins will show up.

Foreman, perhaps Andrews' No. 1 free-enteprise advocate, arranged to bring in an ex-military pilot, Maj. Steve Ritchie, who is credited with shooting five Russian MiG jet fighters out of the sky.

He'll be speaking on "Free Enterprise: America's Critical Choice" at three assemblies Thursday in the Andrews schools.

Wood, of course, will show him the way.

Ritchie of Denver, Colo., will speak at 9:25 a.m. and again at 10:15 a.m. at the high school. Then at 1 p.m., he'll speak at Middle School.

Northeast beginning to dig out

By The Associated Press

The Northeast was trying to dig out from under mountains of snow and clean up flooded areas today, but life was still far from normal for millions of people as transportation and business remained snarled.

Federal troops were moving into Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, declared federal emergency areas by President Carter in the wake of the snowstorm which swept from Maryland and Delaware, up the coast through New Hampshire and into Vermont on Monday and Tuesday, bringing more than 2 feet of snow and hurricane-force wind to some areas.

The toll of storm-related deaths throughout the area was near 50. Thousands were homeless because of flooding; commuter rail and bus service was sporadic; roads barely passable.

All businesses in Massachusetts, where a power blackout in Boston and some looting added to the trouble caused by the snow, were closed on orders of the governor. Nonemergency traffic was banned on all state highways from Boston, 40 miles west to Worcester. Anyone walking or driving on a state highway faced arrest for trespass.

Motorists found to be on the road in Connecticut for nonemergency reasons during the morning were ticketed by state and local police; 80 persons in Bridgeport alone were cited.

Further filings noted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — San Antonio District Court Judge Franklin Spears will not get a free ride in his 1978 campaign for the State Supreme Court, as first filing reports indicated.

Ballot applications and filing fees received in Tuesday's mail produced a Democratic opponent for State Supreme Court, Place 1 — District Court Judge O'Neal Bacon, 57, of Newton.

The winner will succeed Associate Justice Price Daniel Sr. who did not seek re-election, because there is no Republican contender for the post.

Another mailed application received Tuesday put William Lorenzo Powers Jr., Dallas, in the five-candidate Democratic race for the 6th Congressional District where Rep. Olin Teague, D-Texas, is retiring.

Republicans have their own primary race for the 6th District with Carl Krohn of Bryan and Wes Mowery, Fort Worth.

State Republican Headquarters said there were no statewide late filings received in Tuesday's mail.

The Raza Unida Party announced that it would have two statewide candidates and one Congressional candidate on its May 6 primary ballots.

"There will be primaries in some 20 cities, with their own local candidates. The Raza Unida candidates will emphasize issues that are community oriented," said Maria Elena Martinez, state chairwoman of the Raza Unida Party.

The Raza Unida candidates include Luis A. Diaz DeLeon, Austin, for U.S. Senator; Mario Compean, San Antonio, for governor, and Agustin Mata, San Antonio, for Congressional District 23.

Only those filing for multicounty districts filed in Austin. Those from single county districts file in their home counties.

In the 1st Senatorial district, where Sen. A. M. Aikin, D-Paris, dean of the Senate, is not seeking re-election, there were four candidates filed at Democratic headquarters. They are Charles McFatridge, Mount Pleasant; George Preston, Paris; Joe M. Joiner, Sherman, and Ed Howard, Bowie County.

In the 28th District, where Sen. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, is running for Congress, the candidates are Morris Turner, Lubbock; E.L. Short, Tahoka; Delwin Jones, Lubbock, and Jesse T. George, Lubbock.

The only Republican listed as filing for state Senate from multi-county districts was Jim Wallace, San Antonio.

In the state representative races involving multi-county districts, there will be at least 14 contests in the Democratic primary and 15 Democratic-Republican contests in November. In addition three Raza Unida candidates have filed for state representative.

The contested state representative races from multi-county districts include:

District 5 — Democrats Wesley Yawn, Silsbee; Bruce Reed, Kirbyville; Clyde Bolen, Beaumont, Charles H. Newson, Kountze and

Former policemen found guilty by federal jury

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal court jury found three former Houston policemen guilty today on two counts of violating the civil rights of a Mexican-American who drowned while in their custody.

One of the counts is punishable by life in prison, the other by one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Terry W. Denson, 27; Stephen Orlando, 22, and Joseph Janish, 22, were convicted of violating the civil rights of Jose Campos Torres, 23, a laborer, former serviceman and self-proclaimed expert in karate.

Denson and Orlando found innocent on two other felony counts and Janish found innocent on one of those counts. He was not charged with the other count.

The first count of which the trio was convicted charged the three officers were guilty of a conspiracy that resulted in the death of Torres and a misdemeanor civil rights violation.

Mrs. Joe Torres, mother of the dead man, said, "This verdict is better than just letting them go. It won't bring my son back, but maybe it will mean that some other son won't be hurt."

Brian McDonald, chief prosecuting attorney, said it will be up to the judge to decide the punishment for the officers and "we will make no decision."

McDonald added, "We are pleased with the verdict."

The jury had deliberated about 7½ hours over a two-day period before returning the verdict.

About an hour before the verdict was returned, the jury asked U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling for a legal definition of "conspiracy resulting in death."

Sterling told the jury that such conspiracy "actually is a partnership for a criminal act. The evidence much show that all involved have come to a mutual understanding to commit such an act."

Carter promises to streamline civil service, cut bureaucratic red tape

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is considering a package of proposals that would make it easier to replace inefficient bureaucrats, top aides say.

In his recent State of the Union address the president said he will make civil service "reform" a top priority with Congress this year. He said he needs a more efficient civil service system to make the government work better.

Among the options reportedly under review is a streamlining of the process by which federal workers can appeal firings or demotions for months and years, through one bureaucratic layer after another.

This time-consuming appeals process is blamed by federal managers for the fact that only 226 federal employees of a work force of 2.8 million were fired for inefficiency in the most recent 12 months.

Any final package may make concessions to politically powerful federal labor unions, who want concessions including power to bargain over pay. But there is room for compromise because the unions also are disenchanted with the cumbersome appeals process.

The recommendations now said to be under review, if Carter proposes them and Congress approves, would:

—Convert the highest-ranking 9,000 bureaucrats to a new "Senior Executive Service," with corporate-style salary bonuses for outstanding performers and instant demotions or transfers for poor ones.

—Force middle-level managers to earn their pay raises rather then getting them almost automatically as they now do.

—Effectively scale down future pay raises for blue-collar workers and those white-collar clerical and secretarial workers who now receive higher pay than their counterparts in the private sector.

—Limit the preference which military pensioners and able bodied veterans now get in hiring for federal jobs, while keeping preference for Vietnam veterans and disabled vets.

—Give consideration to the relatively generous pensions received by federal employees when adjusting their pay to levels comparable with private sector employees.

These proposals are in addition to a tentatively approved plan to split the Civil Service Commission into two parts, putting personnel management functions inside the president's office and creating a new independent panel designed to hear grievances and to root out such forbidden practices as political patronage hiring.

The president is tentatively scheduled to unveil his final package of proposals this month.

Carter faces a difficult political problem. The federal workforce is highly unionized and its lobby in Congress has been frequently successful in the past. Veterans groups, also a strong force in Congress, oppose any dilution of the World War II-era hiring benefits which they still enjoy.

Civil Service Commission Vice Chairman Jule Sugarman said in an interview that the key to the package is the streamlining of the appeals process, which can typically take 18 months to resolve a disputed firing, demotion or pay freeze.

"We want to give the employee a fair shake, but at the same time managers shouldn't be overturned arbitrarily," he said.

Employees now can pursue appeals through three levels in the commission and then into federal court. Two-thirds of all reversals are for technical errors rather than on the merits of the cases, commission figures show. Often the errors are minor. In one case the commission ordered reinstatement of a postal worker who was fired for shooting a co-worker in the stomach. The commission said the gunman's boss had fouled up the paperwork by jointly signing the dismissal letter, while the rules required that one boss propose the firing and another approve it.

One proposal would prohibit managers from being reversed for minor procedural errors, Sugarman said. Another would encourage the use of voluntary, binding arbitration in place of the lengthier, more formal appeals process. Creation of a new Merit Review Board would cut the levels of administrative appeal from three to one.

Presidential aides say the proposal they are most confident of getting approved is one to provide more flexibility in top leadership jobs.

For the top 9,000 "super-grade" civil service executives, who earn up to $47,500 a year, a new Senior Executive Service is suggested. These highly paid executives now enjoy all the same job security as the lowliest file clerk — a fact which administration officials say makes it difficult for them to remove incompetent or insubordinate executives.

Under the proposal these top managers could be removed from their job at the pleasure of the head of their agency, if their performance is judged to be inadequate. They would not be fired, but would be demoted to middle management levels where the present job protections would still apply.

They also would be allowed to earn one-time bonus payments of up to 20 percent of their annual pay, plus some added pension benefits, if they are judged to have turned in superior performances. At present, top-salaried executives have virtually no financial incentive to put out more than a minimum effort because their pay is frozen and their job tenure is virtually ironclad.

A potentially controversial set of proposals would bring major changes in the federal pay structure under which blue-collar workers and many clerical and technical workers earn more than their counterparts in private businesses.

The administration already has tried without success to find a member of Congress to sponsor a bill to end a legal quirk that gives federal blue-collar workers an average of 8 percent higher pay than private employees.

For white-collar workers, it is being proposed that clerks, secretaries, stenographers, keypunch operators and other clerical and technical employees bepaid under a pay scale separate from that of professionals and managers.

The clerical-technical pay scale might also be modified according to region, ending a system in which 80 percent of such federal workers outside Washington are paid more than locally prevailing rates.

Automatic step-ups in pay would continue every year or so for lower-paid employees, but under one proposal would be ended for higher-salaried middle managers and professionals. They would be able to get raises only on the basis of their past performance.

Another pay proposal would begin a three-to five-year program to compare federal fringe benefits with those in private employment. At present, federal pay scales are raised each year to keep pace with pay in the private sector. But the system compares only pay, and not such increasingly important and expensive fringe benefits as pensions, sick leave, holidays, vacations and paid insurance programs.

It is possible that such a comparison would find federal fringe benefits more generous than those in private employment, as did a recent Civil Service Commission study. This would tend to put downward pressure on federal pay. But union leaders frequently point to some private fringe benefits exceeding those for federal workers. The trick is to find a way of measuring and comparing the many different forms of benefits.

One set of proposals sure to draw bitter political opposition would terminate most of the pro-veteran bias that was enacted near the end of World War II, in 1944. Critics say veterans preference has outlived its usefulness and because 98 percent of veterans are male, keeps better-qualified women out of federal jobs.

The proposals would retain preference in hiring for disabled veterans or those recently discharged. But they would terminate hiring preference for military pensioners and those whose military service ended years ago. These would have to compete for federal jobs on a equal footing with others.

Veterans groups, who have many friends in Congress, are opposed to any dilution of the preferences given to their members in federal hiring and retention.

Jumbo jet becomes hotel in snowed-in JFK airport

The Los Angeles Times

For two days now, passengers have been reclining in seats aboard an American Airlines jumbo jet, with stewardesses bringing them martinis, steak, chicken and crepes and showing them a movie from time to time.

But the plane has not gone anywhere. It has been sitting on the ground at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport, as howling winds and drifting snow have prevented its take-off. To provide shelter for its stranded passengers, American has turned its aircraft into an instant hotel — at a cost to the airline of $3,000 a day.

Scenes like this are being repeated in record numbers around the country these days.

Besides inconveniencing passengers, this winter's storms have dealt a blow to many of the nation's airlines just as they were getting back on their feet after years of desultory earnings or, in some cases, huge losses.

Fast-moving storms have forced airports in the East to close time and again. Flights have been canceled or diverted.

Weather-related costs for January — the worst month on record for carriers such as United, American and Trans World — were just being added up when this week's storm shut down operations again in New York, Washington, Boston, Hartford, Syracuse, Rochester and Philadelphia.

Although a total figure is not available, industry officials estimate the fierce winter has cost the major airlines tens of millions of dollars in lost revenue and soaring costs.

The full impact may never be known. At Eastern Air Lines in Miami, financial vice president Wayne Yeoman estimated that Eastern lost $1.5 million in revenue Monday, when one-third of its system was closed down. But Yeoman added that costs such as maintenance not performed and low load factors on resumed flights are not easily determined.

"We know the storms have cost us several million dollars," a spokesman said, "but we don't know yet whether that amount is two, five, or ten million dollars."

Last month United canceled a record 3,764 flights, 7.7 percent of its total scheduled departures. During January, 1976 — which until recently had been considered severe — the carrier canceled less than half that number.

These spiraling costs are hitting the airlines at the time when they have been making money, primarily as a result of rising demand.

At American Airlines in New York, for example, traffic grew 9.9 percent last month, even though more flights were canceled than in any previous month in the airline's history (nearly 1,500 flights compared with about 250 the year before).

"Without the storms, traffic probably would have been up even a few percentage points higher," Donald Lloyd-Jones, senior vice president for operations said.

Lloyd-Jones said the largest penalty airlines suffer when flights do not depart comes from lost revenue. But airlines also must foot the bill for displaced passengers.

A Los Angeles couple recently cost Delta a night's stay in a motel and two meals, at a total cost of about $50, and yet they never flew on Delta. Through a quirk of canceled planes and closed airports, Delta wound up putting them on flights of other airlines twice on a round trip to Burlington, Vt., from Chicago — at a cost of nearly $400 in revenue.

After a flight is canceled, a ripple effect can leave planes and crews in the wrong cities at the wrong times. The airlines have to fly empty planes to get the scheduled service back to normal. And if a backup plane needed at New York's LaGuardia Airport ends up in Memphis for the night because weather holds up its departure, that LaGuardia flight gets canceled the following day.

Other costs include fuel, because every mile flown costs more when there are massive diversions: plowing the airport, de-icing aircraft and paying overtime to everyone from harried reservations agents to exhausted operations crews.

But costs are only part of the problem. Monday, after Connecticut Gov. Ella T. Grasso banned all but essential vehicles in Hartford, the manager of a big American reservation facility there won an exemption. He hurriedly called the city's radio and TV stations and perusaded them to broadcast that American employees would be allowed to drive to work. Once there, the emergency crew munched on hamburgers made by a local sales representative.

United canceled about 15 percent of all its flights Monday but an operations executive said this storm would end up costing the carrier less than the massive Midwestern blizzard of Jan. 26.

The reason, he explained, is better weather forecasting. "We had five hours advance warning," he said, "which allowed us to cancel early. That saved astronomical costs of hotel rooms for passengers who make it only halfway."

Monday United had to call off more than one-fifth of its operations. "It can take us 12 to 14 hours to get back to normal after a field is open," the executive said. "Access roads are impassable, food service is limited and ground equipment does not function properly. It's a lot of headaches." At closed airports, United was using only skeleton crews, many of whom were working 30 to 35 hours straight.

By contrast, Los Angeles-based Western and Continental are enjoying relatively mild winters, although they have had their problems, too.

Heavy West Coast rains have created delays but a Western spokesman said those are less costly than flights that never take off.

Continental had to cancel 14 Chicago-bound flights during the blizzard that closed O'Hare Airport, and both airlines have encountered unusually strong winds of up to 100 m.p.h. on their Hawaii routes.

But the carriers have reported excellent January results: Western's traffic increased by 13 percent and Continental announced Monday that, in part due to plentiful snow for skiers in the Rockies, its business grew by 17.5 percent.

Park displays ore carrier

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — You can dream of being a Great Lakes pilot while exploring the 550-foot ore carrier Valley Camp from bow to stern at a growing historical park near the Soo Locks here.

The Valley Camp spent 50 years on the Lakes, carrying a total of 16 million tons of cargo and steaming more than three million miles.

Now she is berthed at a spacious waterfront park operated by Le Sault de Sainte Marie Historical Site, Inc. The nonprofit organization bought the ship for $10,000 — less than its value as scrap, according to general manager Thomas Manse.

"We're trying to recover and restore the Soo's historic past and Valley Camp is a monument to Great Lakes shipping," he said.

Greenwood Lions induct members

The induction of three new members into the Greenwood Lions Club Monday night highlighted its regular meeting held in the Greenwood Baptist Church.

It also was announced that three additional men have been approved for membership.

A Lions International film, "We Care and I Serve," was shown.

President Leroy Ledford announced that the club's meetings in the future will be held on the first and third Monday nights of each months.

Chairman Roy Graham said that plans for the club-sponsored Farmers Auction to be held on April 1 have been completed. Consignment information may be obtained from any member of the club. The auction could become a regular monthly event. Members of the Midland Leo Club will be in charge of concessions.

In other action, Pittman and Graham were named first and second vice presidents, respectively.

Chris King is the club secretary.

Strong withdraws from race

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Hesitant to get in, Jack Strong of Longview is now out of the railroad commission race. He said he wants no part of what he feels will be a political circus.

Strong withdrew Tuesday, less than 24 hours after he had reluctantly paid his $1,500 filing fee — a fee he may write off as a contribution to the Texas Democratic Party.

The former state senator told a news conference the entry of Jerry Sadler and Jake Johnson into the race threatens to give it a "circus-like atmosphere."

Also, Strong said, the candidacy of Republican James W. Lacy of Midland will stretch what appeared to be a three-month campaign into nine months.

Under these cirumstances, Strong said, "the cost is too high."

He said he would vote for John Poerner, who is seeking election to the commission after being appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to fill Jim Langdon's unexpired term.

Strong said he had agreed to run at the urging of "some longtime personal friends." He said he made 75 telephone calls in two days and received firm pledges of more than $200,000 and tentative pledges of an additional $100,000.

"The opportunity to serve the state in this capacity was certainly worth the toil of a three-month campaign, the loss of privacy which is inherent in politics and the necessity of setting aside my personal business interests," Strong said.

He added, however, that the filing by Sadler and Johnson "forbodes a circus-like atmosphere where sensationalism and personal charges and counter-charges will overshadow and honest appraisal of the individual qualifications of the candidates."

Sadler, former railroad commissioner and land commissioner, and Johnson, a former House member from San Antonio, are enemies, primarily as a result of an incident several years ago when Sadler choked Johnson.

The incident occurred as Johnson tried to look at some sunken treasure that Sadler had taken charge of after divers recovered it.

Papers show Flood engineered agricultural aid for Bahamas

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newly released State Department documents show that Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., engineered a $10-million agricultural aid package for the Bahamas over the objections of foreign-aid officials in the early 1970s.

A department official says Flood's principal assistant at the time, Stephen Elko, then pressed vigorously but unsuccessfully to put control of the project in the hands of a group formed by a friend of Flood, Nassau lawyer F. Nigel Bowe. One State Department memo concluded that Bowe intended to make money on the deal.

"The genesis of this proposal was a stay that Congressman Flood had made in the Bahamas a few months ago," said another memo dated Dec. 9, 1971 by congressional liaison officer Jean Lewis. "He became very ill and received very good care; to show his gratitude he promised to help the Bahamas attain any goal they desired."

Elko has since been convicted of taking kickbacks, and allegedly is accusing Flood of doing the same, which Flood denies.

Flood is under federal investigation in a separate matter that was being handled in part by David Marston when he was fired as U.S. attorney in Phildelphia.

Bowe said in a telephone interview Tuesday that Flood did not benefit personally from the Bahamian aid deal. Flood's Washington office said Flood was snowbound at home and unavailable for comment.

The project was nicknamed the "Bahamian Red Meat Project" in State Department correspondence, because the original idea was to promote cattle grazing on the thinly populated island of Andros in the Bahamas. The emphasis now is on goats, sheep and crops, although some cattle are still being raised.

The department on Tuesday voluntarily released an inchthick packet of internal memoranda and copies of letters dealing with the project.

They show that the idea originated with Flood and Bowe, and probably never would have gotten off the ground except for pressure from Flood and two other high-ranking members of the House.

Flood, himself a high-ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, enlisted the aid of Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., and Rep. W.R. Poage, D-Tex. Passman then headed the subcommittee with jurisdiction over foreign-aid money.

Pair charged in rape case

A Midland man and woman were released on bond Tuesday afternoon from Midland City Jail after being charged with the Jan. 14 rape of a child.

Peace Justice John Biggs set bond at $5,000 for Katherine Gail Clark, 21, and at $10,000 for Charles Ray Smith, 48.

According to police, the 14-year-old girl was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital. Hospital personnel reported the girl's case to child welfare, who contacted police Jan. 20.

Investigation of the case was completed Monday, and warrants were issued for the arrest of Ms. Clark and Smith, police said.

Second Lozano autopsy reported

days. During that period it was discovered that Lozano had been a patient in the Austin State Hospital after suffering a nervous breakdown.

Although he was interviewed by an official from the state Mental Health and Mental Retardation Agency and a local doctor, Lozano was not removed from the jail, despite a state law that requires prisoners with histories of mental distress to be jailed no more than 24 hours.

"I wanted him out," Faught said. "The man didn't have any business in this jail. He should have been put in a hospital."

"He didn't give us any trouble, and we took no special precautions — never gave us a bit of trouble," Faught said.

It was on the complaint of fellow prisoners, Faught said, that Lozano was moved to a padded cell. The prisoners, whom the sheriff declined to name, said Lozano had threatened them.

However, two persons familiar with his cell block said the complaint voiced by prisoners in Lozano's block was that he showered while wearing his pants — a practice common in jails.

Efforts to reach Sheriff Faught for comment today proved futile. However, a sheriff's deputy did say that Faught was "somewhere" in the Ector County Courthouse, but he didn't know where.

Faught reportedly planned today to release a statement pertaining to disclosures made in the second autopsy. However, a spokesman in Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee's office said that was not true.

At noon, two Odessa officials involved in the case— Lumpee and District Attorney John Green — were in a closed conference in Green's office. Neither could be reached for comment.

Green last week said he would present evidence in the case to a coroner's jury next Tuesday. He said Lumpee requested the hearing.

Dr. Bornstein said today, "In spite of what everybody says in the newspaper and on the radio, I have not made any statement. I have given my results to the family's lawyer, and he has requested that I not make a statement.

"The only statement I have issued was six or eight days ago when I said I counted 92 bruises on the body."

The Lozano incident follows a series of state and federal prosecutions in Texas involving the deaths of Mexican-Americans while in the custody of law enforcement officials.

Last Sept. 29, Castroville Police Chief Frank Hayes was convicted by a federal court jury in Waco, Tex., of violating the civil rights of Morales and was sentenced to life in prison.

In December Justice Department officials ordered a federal investigation into the death of Rodriguez, the Dallas youth who was shot to death by Dallas police officer Darrell Cain as the boy sat handcuffed in Cain's squad car.

Baby born on turnpike

DALLAS (AP) — Some day when baby Dedre Shawn Denham is old enough, she'll realize it's not WHERE you were born that counts.

In Dedre's case, that would be just short of the McCormick Street exit on the Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike sometime shortly after 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Thanks to a couple of guys named Mike Chambers and Frank Valerio, Deborah Sue Denham and daughter Dedre — all six pounds of her — are resting comfortably at Parkland Hospital.

In a job where routine is synonymous with emergency, it came as no surprise to the Dallas paramedics when a call came for help during the height of the rush hour as Dallas motorists were cussing their way over icy streets. It was the second winter storm of the season and it had hit unexpectedly, snarling traffic and creating general havoc on streets and highways.

"Her pains were about a minute apart," said Chambers, a paramedic pro of five years. "I didn't think we'd make it to the hospital but we started out anyway."

Chambers should have been a prophet. After long minutes fighting icy roads and irate motorists, it became obvious the hospital would be getting two patients instead of one.

Man killed, two injured in accident

BIG SPRING — A Garciasville man died and two Big Spring residents received minor injuries in a three-vehicle accident about 14 miles southeast of Big Spring on U.S. Highway 87 Tuesday night.

Peace Justice Ervin Wooten of Garden City pronounced 21-year-old Jose Manuel Navarro dead at the scene. The body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring.

According to the Department of Public Safety, a truck-tractor driven by Ramiro Delosantos of Donna was southbound on U.S. 87. The second vehicle, driven by Navarro, was northbound on U.S. 87, and the third vehicle, driven by Herbert H. Taylor of Big Spring, also was southbound on U.S. 87.

Taylor and Martha E. Taylor were treated at Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring and released.

Speaker slated for meeting

Ted Brian, pastor's assistant at First Baptist Church, will speak on "Researching in the Emerald Isle" at the Midland Genealogical Society meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room at Commercial Bank and Trust.

Plans for the annual spring workshop April 22, featuring Milo Howard, director of Alabama State Archives, will be discussed during the meeting Thursday.

UMW demands proposal edited before approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — As coal supplies for electrical utilities run short in the Midwest, the United Mine Workers' bargaining council is demanding a more precise explanation of the proposed settlement that could end their longest strike ever.

The 39-member council of district and national union officials decided Tuesday it would not vote on the settlement until it could review more than the contract summary presented to it.

UMW President Arnold Miller said that after seven hours of discussion, the council decided to wait until "all the language is edited and put in final form."

He said UMW officials, industry representatives and federal mediators would meet within a few days. "We agreed on principles, but we haven't got the specific language," Miller said.

Drafting the contract provisions could take several days. If it is approved by the council then — which cannot be assumed — a ratification election by union members could take another 10 days. And if miners approve the contract, another two weeks would be required to begin moving coal to customers.

The strike, in its 65th day today, has cut coal production in half, and electrical output has been reduced in several states where stockpiles have fallen sharply.

Carter protests new Israeli settlements

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a clash with Israel, has sharply criticized new settlements in occupied Arab territory — settlements Egypt says must be dismantled if there is to be peace.

While Egyptian President Anwar Sadat lobbied on Capitol Hill for American weapons, the State Department issued a chronology of the January messages from President Carter to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, calling the settlements illegal and an obstacle to negotiations.

Underscoring the urgency, one was sent directly by Carter from Air Force One on Jan. 6 as he wound up a 7-nation overseas trip. He also wrote a letter to Begin on Jan. 10 and sent a brief message to him on Jan. 27 after militant Orthodox Jews announced plans to expand an archaeological site at Shiloh, a Biblical era city.

Sadat had demanded the dismantling of the score of settlements in Sinai and accused Israel of violating Arab sovereignty. "The government is leading the unholy march of the lawbreakers," he said in a speech Monday.

As relations with Washington grow strained, Israeli officials have persistently denied ever promising Carter there would be no new settlements on the land captured from the Arabs in the Six-Day War of 1967.

The chronology was issued Tuesday after newspaper columnist Joseph Kraft claimed the administration had "raised no great protest" about new settlements. It said Carter had sent "a strong reply" to Begin the day after U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis was informed of the plans.

"It's incorrect to say the United States did not react strongly and immediately," White House spokesman Jody Powell told reporters.

Sadat plannd a busy day as he wound up his visit here. He scheduled meetings with Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

In an unabashed arms appeal to members of Congress, Sadat said, "I shall raise hell" if they are not approved.

DEAR ABBY

Chiropodist, salesman pick bone with Old Shoe Dog

DEAR ABBY: OLD SHOE DOG's letter certainly steamed me. I sold fine shoes to both men and women for over 50 years, and I always removed the customer's shoes. (Shoe dog says, "Doctors don't undress their patients, so why should we remove shoes?" What an idiotic comparison. There is nothing degrading about undressing a foot.)

Shoe dog complains, "Most people don't even know what size shoe they wear!" Why should they? A competent shoe salesman routinely measures the customer's foot, then gives him (or her) the size that fits. Besides, shoe sizes change according to one's weight. (If you've gained or lost 20 pounds, you can't wear the same size dress or suit you wore before your weight changed. The same is true of your shoes.)

I don't know where OLD SHOE DOG sold shoes, but he never could have made it in MY store.—SHOE DOG (RETIRED)

DEAR DOG: You weren't the only one who had a bone to pick with OLD SHOE DOG. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a practicing chiropodist with a few thousand words for OLD SHOE DOG:

It's shoe dogs like him who are responsible for all those corns, bunions and ingrown toenails we foot doctors see in our offices every day.

Some shoe clerks sell shoes they know will cripple the customer just to make a sale. And some shoe manufacturers should be jailed for manufacturing shoes (especially for women) that not only torture the feet, but cause chronic back problems. Those pointed-toed shoes and five-inch heels so popular in the '50s ruined the feet of millions of women.

Lately I've had MEN come in with serious foot and back complaints caused by the platform shoes they've been wearing. Sometimes I think the whole world has gone mad.

Withhold my nane, please, I'm not quite ready to retire.—PUZZLED PODIATRIST

DEAR PODIATRIST: I am well acquainted with the pointed-toed shoe of the '50s. I fought that battle after putting my foot in it!

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I shouldn't complain, because my fiance says he loves me a lot and I know he never even looks at another girl, but here's my problem:

Every deer hunting season, he says he'll see me after the season is over. He is so crazy about hunting, he goes every minute he has off from work. Abby, everyone says I'm a fool to wait for him to come to see me when he feels like it. I think if he really cared for me he'd see me on weekends during the deer season, don't you?

Next season, should I tell him he can either find time for me or he can find someone else?—SECOND CHOICE

DEAR SECOND: If you're sure the only kind of deer your fiance is interested in is the four-legged kind, you're lucky. Don't challenge him to find another "dear" unless you want to go hunting for a new boyfriend.

Community service award to be presented

The winner of the 1978 Lucy Mashburn Memorial Award for Community Service, given by the Midland Altrusa Club, Inc., Will be named at the fourth annual dinner honoring the club's Woman of the Year slated to be held beginning at 7 p.m. Friday in Midland Country Club.

Sgt. Greg Robinson of the Midland Police Department will speak on narcotics.

The winner will be selected from six nominees. They include Betty Simpson King, Texas Press Women, District 2; Mrs. Robert A. Hobbs, Women of the Church of the First Presbyterian Church; Mrs. Bob P. Young, Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. John P. Butler, Midland Society of University Women; Nellie M. Hughes, Midland Rebekah Lodge No. 91 and Mrs. E. A. Culbertson, Midland Association of Retired Citizens.

The award is made in honor of the late Mrs. Lucy Mashburn, a past president of the Midland Altrusa Club and mother of Jim Mashburn, former district attorney for Midland.

The dinner meeting is open to the public and reservations can be made with Mrs. Robert Cain Jr., Mrs. J. P. H. McMullan Jr. or Mary Alice Tidwell. Miss Tidwell is president of the local Altrusa club, while Mrs. McMullan is community service committe chairman.

Previous recipients of the award were Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Jack Samples and Mrs. Joe (Clara) Mims.

Wives slate couples' party

The Lawyers Wives Club of Midland will have a couples' valentine party beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Woodside.

Theme of the party will be "Margarita Fiesta."

All members and their spouses are requested to make reservationa through Mrs. Joe Meroney at 683-7689 if not previously contacted.

Miss Fernandez, Hutson wed in Fort Worth rites

FORT WORTH—Lizetta Fernandez and Lawrence Carl Hutson Saturday were united in marriage in a candlelight ceremony performed in Calvary Evangelistic Temple here.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Osler Carl Hutson of 1003 W. Pine St., Midland, and Elmo Fernandez of Baton Route, La.

Music was presented by Faith Hankins of West Columbia, Rev. Wood, and Mrs. Max Wood of Midland, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of metallic grey Quiana which featured accordian pleats flowing from a deep-rounded yolk, forming a soft, tent look. The mandarin collar, with flower of same fabric, and full, long sleeves were enhanced with self-ruffling.

The bride carried a bouquet of long-stemmed pink roses accented with baby's breath and pink streamers. Her hair was adorned with a single pink rose and baby's breath.

Mrs. Lawrence Carl Hutson

The bride is attending John Robert Powers School of Modeling in Dallas. The bridegroom is attending The University of Texas at Arlington, where he is majoring in geology and land management and is a member of the school's tennis team.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Thurs., Feb. 9)

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Annoying little situations that arise during the day could test your patience but the evening is very smooth-running. Don't argue with mate or loved one and spoil an upcoming occasion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Avoid any altercations with good friends or you run the risk of severing valuable connections. Plan future amusements wisely and cleverly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use poise in handling civic matters during daytime or you get into big trouble. Don't argue over a credit affair, but do your best to handle it properly.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) This is not a good time to get involved in a new project. People you meet would not be right for you now, but social encounters at a later date are fine.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Follow through with work you have planned and gain the right benefits from it now. Come to a better understanding with fellow workers. Be careful you don't overwork and damage health.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what is expected of you by others and try to cooperate more. Reach better accord with associates. Show you possess wisdom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Tackle work enthusiastically and show your finest abilities. Take time to rest and build up lagging energies. Don't push yourself so hard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take part in recreations that please you most. Do little favors for those you like and gain their goodwill.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not bring up any controversial subjects at home that could cause arguments. Get rid of worn-out appliances and replace them with new.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go to the right sources for the information you need to get ahead faster in life. Join with good friends for a good time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your monetary affairs can be worrisome during the day but handle them cleverly and all is fine. A talented businessperson can give you fine advice. Take some new matter under advisement.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get rid of that feeling of discontent by getting into productive pursuits and make headway. Find the right social outlets that will give you pleasure. Advance more quickly that way, too.

Miss Wegman recites vows in Galveston

Mrs. Jess M. Hamilton Jr.

GALVESTON — Cynthia Kay Wegman, daughter of Mrs. Laverne Barr of 4422 W. Storey St., Midland, became the bride of Dr. Jess M. Hamilton Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jess M. Hamilton of Kansas City, Mo., at 1 p.m. Saturday in Moody United Methodist Church.

After a trip to New Orleans, La., the couple will reside in Galveston. She is a dental hygienist in Austin and he is an oral surgeon resident at John Sealy Hospital.

Mary Long of Clear Lake City was the matron of honor, and Roger Hurd of New Orleans was best man. The ushers were Tim Wegman of Austin and David Mulherin of Galveston.

The reception was held in the Mulherin residence.

Midlanders to attend YHT state convention

Three members of the Midland chapter of the state association of Young Homemakers of Texas and their advisor will be among the more than 750 persons expected to attend the 16th annual state meeting of the group Friday and Saturday in Austin. The Sheraton-Crest Inn will be convention headquarters.

Attending from Midland will be June Holt, Mrs. Kathy Herzog, Nancy Peterson and Darlene Hicks. Mrs. Hicks is chapter advisor and Miss Peterson is attending Texas Tech University and will do student teaching at Midland High School beginning in the fall.

Young Homemakers of Texas is an association of young adults ranging from 18 to 35 years of age who are interested in improving their homemaking knowledge and skills. "YHT Today: Living, Learning, Loving" is the convention theme.

"The Family As a Sane Asylum" will be Dr. Charles A. Smith's topic at the Friday morning session. He is the director of the Child Development Center at Texas Tech.

Dr. Robert Lindberg, assistant professor of educational psychology at The University of Texas at San Antonio, will speak Saturday morning. "The Homemaker is a Person, Too!" will be his topic on self-esteem and the young homemaker.

Meeting participants Friday night will take part in a beauty awareness program, "New Year—New You" by Donna Adams of Austin.

An awards luncheon will be held at Friday noon at Austin's Municipal Auditorium Exhibit Hall. An outstanding chapter and outstanding new chapter award are presented each year to chapters judged to have contributed the most toward the growth of individual members and the community.

In addition, a State Little Sister Award is given to a Future Homemaker of America who has been outstanding as a member of her family, school, church and community. At this luncheon, honorary members also will be named.

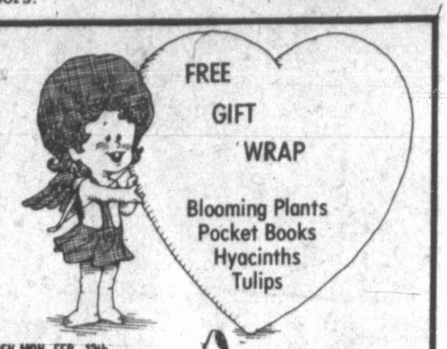

During the Saturday morning session, YHT delegates will elect a new state president to succeed Kay Hallman of Sweetwater. The annual meeting will conclude with the installation of officers.

Jewish scholar authors book on intermarriage

By JOHN DART
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — When a Christian and Jew marry, the problem of holidays is sometimes solved by observing both Easter and Passover, Christmas and Hanukah.

Or, in one novel approach, the parents of half a dozen children raised the first, third and fifth as Christians, and the second, fourth and sixth as Jews.

The latter example, not necessarily recommended, was cited by Jewish scholar Samuel Sandmel, of Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, in a recently published book, "When a Jew and Christian Marry" (Fortress).

Personally against intermarriage between Jew and non-Jew, Sandmel nevertheless said he felt the need to write a "calm" and factual book on the pitfalls and possible pleasures in light of the common estimate that one-third of the marriages by Jews are mixed.

Sandmel, in Los Angeles for several talks, also noted a survey of Los Angeles Jews, published by the Los Angeles Times last week, showing that 54 percent agreed with the statement: "It is all right for Jews to marry non-Jews."

It is true, Sandmel conceded, that for those who have all but abandoned Christianity and Judaism there can be "no conflict of loyalties where there are no loyalties." Yet, he adds, unsuspected loyalties sometimes crop up among "nonreligious" people.

Sandmel advises that a Christian and Jew should not wed "unless each is purged of all possibility of uttering a reproach of the other's religious background when the inevitable tiff or passing quarrel arises."

Sandmel has unusually good qualifications to deal with such sensitive questions. The first rabbi to earn a doctorate in New Testament studies (Yale, 1949), Sandmel is an authority on early Jewish-Christian relations. His "Judaism and Christian Beginnings" (Oxford University Press) will be published this spring.

He spoke at the Catholic Religious Education Congress a year ago, addressed a clergy institute Tuesday and a Fuller Theological Seminary gathering Thursday, and lectured on early Christianity recently at a suburban Tarzana Jewish temple.

Sandmel believes there are quite legitimate reasons for most rabbis and priests to resist officiating at a mixed marriage. At the same time, the Reform rabbi said he is not of unwavering traditional religious bent when it comes to practical advice.

"I subscribe to the view that religious traditions exist to serve people," he wrote in the foreword to his book, "not people to serve religious traditions."

Sandmel is skeptical about the validity of conversion classes for the prospective bride or groom into the church or Judaism.

But if that is the course taken, sometimes because one set of parents is adamant, he notes that for the Jew the usual step for reception into the church would be baptism. The Christian entering the temple will find that requirements vary:

"Among traditional Jews, male circumcision is part of the process; for women converts to Orthodox or Conservative Judaism, a ritual bath (which Jews never call baptism!) is a requirement," he said. "Reform rabbis usually do not require male circumcision or the ritual bath."

If the conversion was not heartfelt, however, Sandmel cautions, "I have known grooms and brides for whom the sham of the wedding was the regrettable but chief recollection of it."

Sandmel argues that raising children with neutral attitudes toward religion, in effect, preconditions them toward no religion at all when they mature.

Some mixed marriage partners pick a Unitarian-Universalist church or a liberal brand of Quakerism. While expressing personal admiration for both fellowships, Sandmel suggested that they meet "some of the intellectual demands of intelligent people, but not the emotional yearnings innate in most human beings."

Sandmel dealt more with the religious problems that can arise in a Jewish-Christian marriage than with social situations, although he described Jewish sensitivities about anti-Semitism and Israel that a Christian should know about.

a 54-page section in the middle of Sandmel's paperback book contains a succinct primer on Judaism and Christianity — so readable and informative that some people have told Sandmel it should be reprinted separately for broader use.

Sandmel says that knowledge why Christians and Jews, even religiously inactive ones, think the way they do is valuable for husbands and wives of the two backgrounds. If an understanding attitude is reached by both, the couple can be "enriched" by the wealth of cultural traditions in the two faiths, in his view.

If the partners come to a kind of inner security, Sandmel said they are not apt to worry about whether (for a Jew) listening to Handel's "Messiah" is the same as taking communion in a church service or (for a Christian) enjoying Leonard Bernstein's "Jeremiah Symphony" is equivalent to a tacit profession of Judaism.

"Thank you, Pat Walker, for giving me a new life!"

70¾ lbs. and 84¾ inches later, Barbara Alarcon says:

"I used to think some people were fat, others skinny and that you couldn't change what you were. Pat Walker's has proved me so wrong and am I glad. People used to tell me I had large bones, but as it turned out, underneath the fat was a small frame. Thank you, Pat Walker for giving me a new life. Other people think more highly of me now, and as for me, I have a self-confidence I've never had."

Deb Carter trimmed down to size 3 the sensible way — at Pat Walker's

Deb Carter says she never had a weight problem until two years ago, when she gradually started gaining weight. After all the fad diets and exercises she tried ended in failure, she decided to get professional help at Pat Walker's.

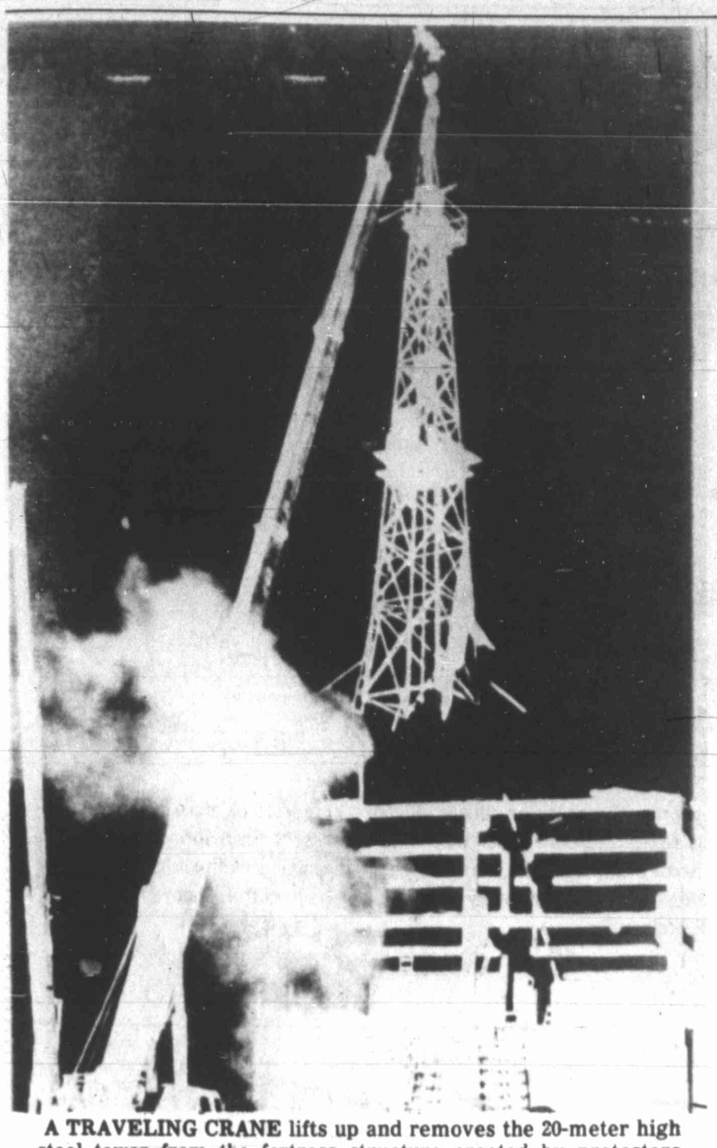

The counseling and support Deb received from the Pat Walker staff helped her revise her eating habits. Passive exercise on the Pat Walker unit was simple but effective.

As a result, Deb has lost 32-¼ inches and 28 pounds — and now wears size 3 clothes! She urges others to join the Pat Walker program and see how easy it is to lose weight.

Somalia gets French-built arms

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
The Washington Post

LUSAKA, Zambia — In a further escalation of the arms buildup in the war-torn Horn of Africa, Somalia has begun receiving French-built tanks from a third country, believed to be Saudi Arabia, according to western diplomatic sources.

It is the first report of heavy western military equipment reaching the Indian Ocean country, which is locked in a struggle with neighboring Ethiopia for control of Ethiopia's Ogaden region. Ethiopia is being helped by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Somalia lays claim to Ogaden on ethnic and historical grounds and has been supporting Somali insurgents who have seized virtually all of it and some additional Ethiopian land as well.

The Soviet Union, having first provided Somalia with upwards of $1 billion worth of weapons, has recently poured almost the same amount into Ethiopia. When Moscow began assisting Ethiopia, Somalia ousted the Soviet military mission there.

The result has been a massive concentration of arms unlike anything this continent has seen before south of the Sahara. The issue now is what the western powers intend to do abou tit, particularly if the government of President Mohammud Siad Barre is threatened by the Ethiopian counteroffensive now getting under way.

Western sources reported that about 60 AMX tanks recently arrived in Somalia but did not say from which country the French-built equipment had come.

(In Paris, a government spokesman denied that France had sent any arms to Somalia so far but suggested the tanks might have come from a third country, Washington Post correspondent Ronald Koven reported. Unlike the United States, France places no restrictions on the transfer of arms sold to one country to other nations.)

Observers here and in Paris believed the tanks may have been sent to Somalia by Saudi Arabia which is known to have purchased AMX tanks some years ago. Saudi Arabia, which is known to be seriously concerned about the big Soviet arms buildup in Ethiopia, has become a close ally of Somalia recently.

The United States has so far refused to allow the Saudis to pass on any of the considerable American arms in its arsenal to Somalia.

As the Ethiopians mount their counteroffensive, however, there are signs of growing concern in many western capitals about a possible direct Ethiopian attack against Somalia.

The first U.S. response to such an eventuality is expected to be encouragement to Saudi Arabia, Eghpy, the Sudan and even Iran to take a more active direct role in defense of Somalia. This could include the shipment of their older Soviet arms to Somalia with an American pledge to reimburse them later with American weapons.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt recently told two U.S. congressmen that he had already sent $30 million dollars in military assistance to Somalia and pledged an armored brigade to its defense, should Ethiopia attack.

Iran, like Egypt, has older Soviet arms that could be given to Somalia, whose soldiers and officers have been trained almost exclusively on Soviet equipment.

France, like the United States and Britain, has been in somewhat of a quandary over what policy to adopt toward the Ethiopian-Somali conflict. So far the western powers have taken a hands-off stance even as the Soviets steadily increased their role.

Syrian troops pound Lebanese barracks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops pounded a Lebanese Army barracks from all sides with rocket, mortar and tank fire today as Syrian and Lebanese troops clashed for the second straight day on the eastern flank of Beirut.

The fighting raged around a predominantly Christian garrison of the Lebanese army at the Fayadiyeh Barracks, three miles east of the city. Witnesses reported shells also fell near the presidential palace in the hilltop suburb of Baabda, two miles farther east.

President Elias Sarkis called in officials of the Lebanese Defense Ministry and commanders of the Arab League peacekeeping force to try to stop the fighting, the Christians' Voice of Lebanon radio station reported.

One source said the Syrian government was sending a delegation of four senior officers to help stop the fighting.

Syrian reinforcements were rushed to the barracks area, abandoning checkpoints in other parts of the city. Syrian soldiers in full battle dress were seen crawling or running up the rocky hills alongside the roads leading to the barracks.

Ambulances raced along the Beirut-Damascus highway to the battleground. Steel-helmeted Syrian troops in battle dress closed the highway and all other eastern approaches to Beirut to civil traffic.

Dayan confirms aid to Ethiopia

By DIAL TORGERSON

The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israeli officials, frankly stunned by Moshe Dayan's confirmation of this country's Ethiopian connection, grudgingly verified Tuesday a few details of Israel's military shipments to Ethiopia.

A government spokesman admitted privately that the foreign minister's comments in Zurich caught them by surprise. The fact that Israel was giving aid to Ethiopia has been widely known, but never previously verified.

Dayan told a television interviewer in Switzerland Monday that Israel was supplying Ethiopia with military aid, but that there were "no Israeli planes, no soldiers, and no military involvement" in the African nation.

It was reported that Israel had supplied Ethiopia with ammunition, sleeping bags, belts and first aid equipment. U.S. government sources were reported Sunday in Washington as saying Israel was supplying Ethiopia with cluster bombs, napalm and aircraft-fired missiles, but there was no confirmation here of these details.

Part of the reticence of Israeli officials about discussing aid to Ethiopia stems from the odd company with which such an effort associates Israel. Russia and Cuba are also aiding Ethiopia, and it is reported that Libya is assisting as well.

Asked why Israel would be siding with Communist forces in aiding the Marxist Ethiopian regime, the Foreign Office quoted Dayan's Zurich comments:

"We wish the friendship of the Ethiopians because of Ethiopian control of waterways which tankers carrying fuel use in traveling to Israel. We want to keep friendly relations with those who control the coast of the Red Sea."

Opponents gaining strength

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Conservative political leaders opposed to President Anastasio Somoza claim that his refusal to resign is driving his opponents into the ranks of the Marxist Sandinista guerrillas.

"Many of my countrymen now believe the only way out of this crisis is the barrel of a gun," said Eduardo Chamorro Coronel, political secretary for the Conservative Party, the only legal opposition to Somoza's National Liberal Party.

"The longer Somoza stays in office, the stronger the Sandinista National Liberation Front gets. If we don't get a solution soon, we may have a civil war when Somoza does leave office, Liberals and Conservatives fighting together against the Sandinistas."

The Sandinistas have been trying to overthrow the Somoza dynasty for a decade.

The nationwide strike that began Jan. 23 after the assassination of anti-Somoza publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro ended Monday. The strike by both businessmen and workers began as a demand to know who was behind the assassination. But it turned into a demand for Somoza's resignation that included a boycott by 63 percent of the nation's voters of municipal elections Sunday.

"Private enterprise and workers united in saying 'no more Somoza,'" said Chamorro in an interview. "He has no political base, but we could strike for years without result."

Griffin Bell visits Big Spring to hunt

BIG SPRING — U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell, mildly ruffled by efforts to get him removed from office, journeyed to Big Spring last weekend for quail hunting and rest.

For Bell, that was most usual. For the past several years, he seasonally has come to this country to hunt blue quail with his friend and host, R. H. Weaver of Big Spring.

Just last weekend, Bell noted a newspaper's wire-service story that said he was "unavailable for comment" on the ousting try by Republican National Party Chairman Bill Brock, who charged Bell has transformed the Department of Justice into a "political clearinghouse."

"I am indeed unavailable for comment," commented Bell. "Let's go quail hunting."

So they did.

Weaver, a Big Spring attorney, said he didn't bother to tell the Big Spring news media of Bell's visit. It's so routine, and, besides, Bell is looking for some solace.

". . . The man (Bell) comes here to get away from it all," Weaver said.

Unlike previous visits, Bell was accompanied this time by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Weaver said Bell hunts bobwhite quail in his home state of Georgia, but he "likes our . . . blue quail," Weaver said.

Apparently, the only "insiders" to know of Bell's visit here were Weaver and family, Mr. and Mrs. Rich Anderson of Borden County, Dorothy Garrett, and Howard County Clerk Mdrgaret Ray. The latter issued Bell a hunting license. And the former threw a dinner party Saturday night for Bell.

Weaver said he and Bell have been fast friends for years, but that Bell "never did me any favors."

Formerly, Bell was a judge of the U.S. Fifth Court of Civil Appeals in New Orleans, La.

Carter unveils aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today unveiled a new, $1.2-billion program designed to provide aid to college students from middle-income families beset by the high cost of tuition.

The new aid would include grants of $250 to students from families with incomes between $15,000 and $25,000, and subsidized loans for students from families with gross income up to $47,000.

The program is an attempt to undercut a push in Congress for a tax credit to parents of all college students, a plan the administration opposes.

Carter and Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced the program at the White House today.

They said the administration will seek an extra $1 billion for the $2.1-billion Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program, which now provides aid to 2.2 million college students primarily from low income families.

The new aid would allow 3.1 million more students to get the grants, including those with family incomes up to $25,000. The average grant for students in families with incomes between $8,000 and $16,000 also would be raised by $200 to $1,050.

Texas farmers have message

WASHINGTON (AP) — The message Texas farmers are presenting to the House Agriculture Committee promises nothing short of agrarian disaster unless emergency legislation is enacted to beef up crop prices.

"I want to know what happened," Fuvanna farmer Glenn Toombs said Tuesday.

"My family wants to know what happened. My loan people want to know what has happened and my creditors want to know. The farmers in my area can't help but feel we are being misled, mistreated and misinformed by our policy makers, all the while we are slowly, but surely, going broke."

Toombs was joined by 32 others Tuesday, including congressmen, bankers and farm implement dealers, in asking the committee to rewrite or amend the 1977 Farm Bill they say will bankrupt the agriculture community and "take the rest of America down with it."

More than 100 persons are expected to testify through Valentine's Day. The hearings were prompted by the nationwide farm strike.

"To preserve the family farm, we feel we must have a fair price with a reasonable amount of profit on our investment," said Floydada farmer Adrian Helms.

"To achieve this, we must have stable prices over an extended period of time and production control," he added.

"The soil is our way of life. I ask that you help us preserve it, not only for me, but for my sons, daughters and America."

Tahoka farmer Cleve Littlepage was one of several who presented the committee with documents he said showed the rapid increase in farmers' production costs.

Students on list

ABILENE — Two Midland students and one area town student were named to the McMurry College Dean's List for the 1977 fall semester.

Teresa Joan Callaway and Sarah Scott Hardwick, both of Midland, and Paula kay Criswell of Hobbs, N.M., were listed on the honor roll this past semester.

To gualify, students must receive a 3.5 or better grade point average on a 4.0 grade scale while enrolled in at least 12 semester hours.

Teachers elected

AUSTIN — Martin Mogford and James S. Leeper, both of Midland, recently were elected to serve on the Board of Directors of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association, a statewide professional education association.

Mogford is a teacher at Alamo Junior High School in Midland, and Leeper is a teacher at Midland High School. The two will attend a state board meeting Monday to Feb. 16 in Fort Worth. The annual association convention is scheduled immediately following the board meeting also in Fort Worth with approximately 1,000 teachers planning to come.

Sluggish sales of '78 cars build unease among workers

DETROIT (AP) — Al Castano, 43, a forklift operator for Chrysler Corp. and father of four, has joined the auto executives and government economists who are nervously watching the sluggish pace of new car sales this year.

Castano and 1,000 co-workers were laid off Jan. 9 from Chrysler's stamping plant in suburban Sterling Heights. So were some 3,000 Wisconsin workers for American Motors Corp.

The layoffs are a symptom of trouble for the industry this year — a flatness in 1978-model car sales that caught most industry executives by surprise.

The slumping sales have created huge inventories of unsold cars for Chrysler and AMC. General Motors is having some troubles too, mostly with intermediate cars. Only Ford Motor Co. seems to be matching last year's high rate of sales.

Those laid off represent a tiny fraction of the giant automotive work force in the United States, and nobody is predicting widespread layoffs of auto workers this year. In addition, generous layoff benefits are warding off a serious financial crunch for those who are out of work.

But the slump has generated nervousness — and a burst of heavy mid-winter advertising and dealer sales contests for the models hurting the most.

In sharp contrast to the General Motors Corp. forecast of all-time record sales on 1978 cars, the first quarter of the new model year saw domestic sales fall 9 percent from the same period a year earlier. Auto inventories by Jan. 31 were a record 1.8 million cars.

How serious is the downturn?

"There will be no wholesale layoffs or cutbacks," declared one auto company analyst. "There's no reason for them on the horizon."

The president of the United Auto Workers union, Douglas Fraser, told a union meeting last week that the automakers' bullish forecasts, "regrettably, are not going to come to pass."

Most analysts see only a modest decline in auto sales in 1978. Most predictions call for a 1-to 3-percent drop — a scenario painted as much as a year ago by some Wall Street experts on grounds that the time was right for such a decline.

Wall Street observers of Detroit talk about three-year cycles of prosperity. The auto industry had been in a comeback since November 1974, the low point of a slump blamed on the previous year's Arab oil embargo.

Domestic and import sales in 1977 were 11.2 million cars, the second best ever. Thus, the reasoning goes, the car market is saturated, and consumers are shifting their priorities.

The U.S. Commerce Department in January forecast a 1 percent drop in 1978 auto sales.

For cash-thin Chrysler and AMC, after a weak 1977, the effects have been felt in layoffs and production cutbacks.

Three concrete pillboxes guard the entrance to the white two-story stucco building. Wary police sentinels with bulletproof vests and steel helmets check identities before allowing strangers to enter.

In front, signs along Cabildo Avenue caution motorists not to make sudden stops; sentries may open fire with automatic weapons.

Argentina is in a virtual state of war against the far left. Violence began here in the 1960s, with the birth of several guerrilla groups seeking to build a socialist society atop the ashes of the revolving-door governments that had failed to bring stability.

The military has been in charge of the country after toppling President Isabel Peron in a coup in March 1976. The armed forces now claim the far-left is on the defensive, its ranks nearly decimated by vigorous anti-guerrilla operations.

In 1976, 1,480 persons were reported killed in political violence, about half of them suspected leftists. The rest were security men, businessmen, politicians and those who happened to be in the wrong place when bombs exploded or shooting broke out. In 1977, 677 died in political violence.

Federal police, run by the Ministry of the Interior, control security in Buenos Aires, the capital of some 8 million people. Figures are secret, but it is reliably reported the force numbers about 30,000 — 4,500 more than in New York City, which is of comparable size.

But in New York, four policemen were killed in the line of duty in 1977, compared with 36 policemen in Buenos Aires.

Patrol methods in the cities also differ. To save money, New York is sending some police cars out with a single officer. Never fewer than three policemen ride in a Buenos Aires patrol car, often four.

Consider car 131. Officer Pasqual Papaleo, 27, is the driver. Raul Rodriguez, 28, is the car commander and Hector Gelso, 39, a non-commissioned officer, is in the back seat as "gunner." He accompanies Rodriguez outside the car to cover him in case of attack.

In addition to the patrolmen's handguns, the car is equipped with combat helmets, two 12 gauge shotguns and a 9mm submachine gun.

At least one patrol car in each of the city's 48 precincts has a small computer terminal near the dashboard. It broadcasts a continuous signal so headquarters can electronically track the car on a television display map. There is also an emergency button to signal for help.

But the main function is to give instant access to the police computer bank. A patrol car can learn in seconds if a suspicious vehicle is on the stolen list. Likewise, the name of a suspicious person can be entered. The computer immediately tells whether the person is wanted for a crime or is a suspected guerrilla.

Because of their preoccupation with terrorists, routine duties such as chasing traffic violators fall by the wayside. On the other hand, officials report that because of the warfare with terrorists, the use of handguns has dropped in crimes such as burglary and robbery.

They say everyone knows if a policeman sees someone with a gun, he might shoot first and ask questions later.

'Stupid control'

It undoubtedly is very cold in Vermont right now, but many of the warm-hearted residents of that New England state apparently are imbued with an abundance of common sense.

This certainly is the impression gained by reading an editorial, "Stupid Control," appearing in the Jan. 24 issue of the Caledonian-Record of St. Johnsbury, Vt., 45 miles from the Canadian border.

A copy of the editorial was sent to The Reporter-Telegram by John McClaughry, an editorial writer of Concord, Vt. The editorial reads as follows:

"Suppose the Federal government passed a law fixing the price of pulpwood at $20 a cord at the roadside. At the same time the Federal government guaranteed pulp haulers enough payment to pay off their investment in trucks, regardless of how much pulp they actually hauled. And suppose, too, that the remaining pulpwood stumpage in the state was located far from town roads, so that it had to be skidded long distances to the pickup point. What would happen?

"Well, leaving aside the probable riot and sacking of the U.S. Capitol, it is pretty clear what would happen. Very little pulpwood would be cut. There would be a serious pulpwood shortage. Pulpwood hauling charges would sharply increase, since the haulers would be allowed to earn a fixed income even if they made only half as many runs as before.

"Suppose, to confront this shortage, the government then made a deal to import Canadian pulpwood at $40 a cord roadside. The mill price would shoot up. Consumers of paper would pay much more. American dollars would be exported to Canada in payment while American loggers and woodlot owners starved.

"This ridiculous state of affairs is exactly what American natural gas producers now face. Their wellhead price has been controlled by the Federal government since 1954. It is now $1.45 per thousand cubic feet (MCF) for gas shipped in interstate commerce. The unregulated intrastate price is about $2 MCF. And the results are just what one would expect.

"Gas producers will not drill ever-more expensive wells if they are allowed to earn only $1.45 MCF for it, 55 cents below the free market intrastate price. Thus there is a government-created shortage of natural gas.

"Meanwhile, consumers are paying far higher per unit pipeline charges because the pipelines are authorized to charge enough to amortize their investments, regardless of whether the pipeline is running full or half empty.

"And to cope with the shortage of American natural gas at $1.45 MCF, the same government that caused the shortage has made contracts to import natural gas from Canada at $2.16, from Mexico at $2.50, from Algeria at $3.37 and from Indonesia at an incredible $3.59!

"Now Vermonters do not consume any American produced natural gas directly so deregulation would have little or no effect on us. But we cannot see how any member of our Congressional delegation can lend his support to this political system for controlling gas prices, when the results are shortages to American consumers followed by sharply increased natural gas imports at ever-higher prices.

"The House-Senate conference committee on energy, which is deadlocked on this issue, should do all Americans a favor by ending the stupid and costly system of Federal price controls on new natural gas. We hope that Senator Leahy and Congressman Jeffords, who have consistently and inexplicably been on the wrong side of this issue, will wake up to the economic facts of life.

"We hope they will urge their colleagues on the conference committee to immediately end price controls on new gas."

This is one of the best and clearest presentations on the "stupid control" of natural gas prices that we have seen.

The next time members of the Midland-based Permian Basin Petroleum Association go to Washington, it wouldn't be a bad idea to invite some "common sense" Vermonters to join them there.

And thank you, John McClaughry, for your thoughtfulness in forwarding copy of the editorial and for your written comment: "Good luck with deregulation."

Sense of unease exists in Kremlin these days

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service

Virgil Pinkley

The Soviet economic machine, the world's second largest, is slowing down steadily. A point has now been reached where key targets set for 1978 are the lowest in many years.

For the Kremlin, 1977 was a difficult and disappointing year. Despite this fact there was no apparent slowdown on Soviet military spending for all types of weapons and military forces.

A speech was made recently in the Kremlin saying that general efficiency must be improved sharply and that there is an urgent need to conserve energy and steel.

Already Soviet housewives have been told that there will be less meat in the shops in 1978. Consumer goods such as cameras, carpets, refrigerators and automobiles will be in exceptionally short supply.

The Russians had previously had very few of these household comforts or aids because such a large percentage of the work force is engaged in military production and such vast sums of the national gross product goes into ever larger and more powerful armies, a fledgling but growing air force, and what has now become probably the first or second strongest navy in the world with heavy emphasis on nuclear submarines.

In an effort to ease the situation some of the Russian leaders actually have agreed to less rigid central planning and permitting some regional autonomy.

No one seems to know exactly what the health of the Soviet dictator, Leonid Brezhnev, is. He has been absent from many important meetings of the Supreme Soviets. At this moment there is little doubt that he is firmly in command and is, as Nikita Khrushchev used to say, "The most equal among equals."

His front row aisle seat on the Supreme Soviet dais has been left vacant a number of times recently. Nevertheless, he continues to be highly praised by Soviet speakers and is given extensive coverage by the official Soviet-owned and directed newspapers and radio and TV stations.

On Dec. 14, Soviet newspapers announced that Brezhnev had given "a big, important speech" at a Communist Party Central Committee session held on Dec. 13. But the text of the speech has not been released.

The Soviet defense budget has been officially announced at 17.2 billion rubles (approximately $24 million) for the second year in a row. But all Western observers with any knowledge about Russia put the actual figure many, many times higher. There are all kinds of hidden funds in the Russian budget for military expenditures. Also, the tools of war are produced by cheap labor using materials on which there is no profit.

Worker productivity was far below target last year and hit a low of post-World War II percentages of 3.3. For the first 11 months of 1976, the actual productivity was listed officially as 4.2, although the minimum target was 4.8 percent. When the latest 5-year plan was projected two years ago the production growth figure was set up at 6 percent.

In a recent review of urgent needs in the Soviet Union, these were listed in Moscow:

—Increased construction and use of railroads, which have received special censure for their failure to meet announced goals.

— The urgent need for new buildings and plants. Nikolai Baibakov, chief of the National Planning Agency, told the Supreme Soviet, "We cannot tolerate any further loss of time in building plants." His agency sets targets for the entire nation from butter and buttonhooks to bricks.

— The grain crop has been disappointing and was estimated officially on Dec. 14 at 195.5 million tons, which means less fodder for cattle and poultry. Fish catches have decreased too.

— The Soviets are more than ever dependent on small private plots of farming land, which produced as much as one-third of the entire food supply. In the past these were not permitted. The peasants were forced to join cooperatives, which offered few if any of the incentives which do exist at least on a limited scale for the small private plots.

In mid-December, Pravda, the government's official organ, sharply criticized the production of steel, nonferrous metals, timber, paper, building materials, coal and consumer industries for heavily substandard performance in the first 11 months of 1977.

One of the reasons Russian food production falls frequently is that peasants are taken off the land and put into the factories to build more tanks, more artillery pieces, more airplanes, more ships and submarines, more missiles and more atomic bombs.

So, in effect, when we send or sell vast quantities of grain to Russia we are only enabling the Soviets to increase their military production. We have, of course, sold grain at less than world prices to Red Russia and in some instances this grain has been resold to other Communist countries at less than world prices to keep them subservient to the Kremlin.

Human rights inspire Haitians

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — In the tradition of Franklin D. Roosevelt's Four Freedoms, President Carter has staked his personal prestige on making two words — human rights — ring out around the world. He has declared that human rights are an integral part of his policies both at home and abroad.

He made a point of raising the human rights issue in each country he visited on his recent foreign tour.

He directed the National Security Council to develop new human rights initiatives. Several have already been submitted to him for his approval. His national security adviser, Zbigniew Brezezinski, suggested to the Cabinet that human rights should replace anti-communism as "the glue that holds our foreign policy together."

Carter's moral posturing on human rights has drawn scoffs from the sophisticates who inhabit the Persian rugged Georgetown drawing rooms. But in the repressive shadows of the world, where yearnings for freedom are savagely dealt with, people are taking heart from the president's stand.

The fear-ridden, poverty-stricken island of Haiti is an example of this. For two decades, this unhappy country has been shackled at the feet of the ruling Duvalier family — first the voodoo-superstitious "Papa Doc" and then, after his death, his son "Baby Doc." Words of dissent are spoken there in fearful whispers.

Eighteen months ago, a young Haitian reporter, Gasner Raymond, had the daring to investigate the plight of some striking factory workers. He was murdered, and the results of an official inquest were never revealed.

But today, soft winds of courage are blowing quietly among a handful of intrepid journalists seeking to exercise freedom of the press. They dare now to write of the indifference of the luxury-loving Duvalier palace guard to the grinding poverty of the Haitian masses. Emboldened by Carter, these newsmen also speak openly of human rights and individual dignity. For they sense that the United States is on their side.

But if they can now speak the unspeakable, they still pay a price for the privilege. A Baptist preacher and publisher, Luc Neree, ventured to expose violent abuses perpetrated in Haiti's rural areas by the notorious police force known as the Volunteers in National Security, an offshoot of the dread "Ton Macoutes."

On the day the articles appeared in his weekly news sheet, Neree was summoned by Haiti's Interior Minister Aurelien Jeanty and warned the government would tolerate no more "subversive editorials." Five days later, on Dec. 13, the Haitian journalist was brutally beaten unconscious by VNS thugs.

Competent sources inside Haiti report the savage beating was ordered by aides close to President-for-life Jean-Claude Duvalier. But there is no evidence that "Baby Doc" himself gave the original order.

Recovering in a Port-au-Prince hospital from head surgery, Neree has not been intimidated. His proudest possession is a personal letter from President Carter. The Haitian publisher wrote to the new American president shortly after his election about the flagrant suppression of human rights under the Duvalier regime. Carter responded with a letter pledging support and, as a fellow Baptist, offering to preach at Neree's church, should he ever visit Haiti.

Nor has the vengeance visited on Neree stilled the other voices of protest. Neree's son halted publication of the paper to protest his father's beating. But Haiti's only other independent journal took up the fight.

Editor Dieudonne Fardin assailed the attack on Neree and launched an eloquent examination of human rights violations in the country. He predicted the day would arrive when "all the Haitians will realize that liberty, democracy and the respect of human-rights is a question of human dignity and not just a luxury for super-industrialized countries."

Fardin was aware of the personal danger he has incurred. "I know that I put my life at stake," he declared openly. "I can only rely on the laws of my country (which are theoretically sound) and on national and international opinion."

The ugly Neree episode already has drawn fire from the Carter administration. The U.S. Embassy firmly told the Duvalier regime that the incident had "grave implications for U.S.-Haitian relations."

The U.S. presence on the island, embassy officials told our associate Hal Bernton, is intended solely to help Haiti's suffering masses by administering a $20 million aid program. Without the U.S. aid and other relief operations, the poverty gripping the peasantry would be far more cruel. The cash dollar-value of the combined programs amounts to nearly 10 percent of Haiti's annual Gross National Product.

With illiteracy, corruption and apathy prevalent at every level, the Haitian government is "drowning under more technical assistance than it can actually absorb," according to one Haitian official. But U.S. officials are trying to work closely with a new cadre of well-educated, young and idealistic Haitian technocrats in the hope of building a better government for the future.

The Old Guard has allied itself with Papa Doc's widow, entrenched behind power and wealth. But the pressure from Carter has been felt by Duvalier who is beginning to believe that the regime must liberalize itself if it is to survive the winds of change.

INSIDE REPORT:

Can the United States have its own Mideast policy?

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's failure to win Saudi Arabia's consent to delay the promised U.S. sale of 60 F-15 aircraft confronts him with his clearest test to this question: can the U.S. have its own Mideast policy, or only one tied to Israel?

The answer to that question may well decide the future of the vital U.S.-Saudi connection. At issue is whether Saudi Arabia will continue to underwrite U.S. domestic oil needs over the bitter opposition of Venezuela, Iran and other oil-rich members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) lobbying for higher prices. Changes in Saudi oil production and pricing, moreover, could wedge Western Europe and Japan away from the U.S., undermining political unity of the industrialized democracies.

As provided by Sen. Frank Church, soon-to-be chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the answer to this crucial question is a clear no. Indeed, Church's letter protesting the sale to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — signed by at least nine other Senators — was couched with generous overstatement in terms of how Israel views the sale, but not in terms of U.S. interests.

"Church wrote his letter like a Senator from Israel," one of Church's colleagues (by no stretch of imagination anti-Israel) told us. Church's letter was so devoid of sensitivity for the U.S. interest that Sen. Jacob Javits, long one of Israel's chief congressional defenders, did not sign it.

Instead, Javits wrote a letter of his own to Vance, along with Sen. Howard Baker, the Republican leader, and two other Senators. They asked for a delay in the sale until a committee study is finished. That study is expected to go beyond Saudi Arabia to the implications of U.S. arms sales throughout the Mideast.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, a lifelong leader of the American Jewish community who cannot be faulted on friendship for Israel, signed neither letter, but privately informed one Senator that he agreed with the Javits, not the Church, approach.

In a clumsy attempt to finesse the political dilemma of either delivering on his pledge to sell Saudi Arabia the planes — or surrendering to Church and Israel — President Carter so far has struck out.

During his stop in Riyadh a month ago, Mr. Carter renewed his pledge — then, after reading Church's Jan. 23 letter, had second thoughts. He ordered Ambassador John West to seek Saudi agreement to delay the sale (which can be blocked by Congress during a 30-day period following its submission to Capitol Hill).

The predictable failure of West's mission threw the White House and the National Security Council (NSC) into a tailspin. A new NSC study was ordered, which meant postponing submission of the F-15 deal, with or without Saudi agreement, beyond the Feb. 1 date originally planned.

These delays are feeding pro-Israeli propaganda, which is now warning about an Israeli "pre-emptive" air attack on Saudi F-15 bases if war again threatens between Israel and the Arabs.

That warning is contained in a 10-page attack on the sale by the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), brilliantly reasoned from Israel's vantage point. AIPAC concedes that Israel itself is now acquiring 25 F-15's from the U.S. and has asked for 25 more, but claims Israel's need "is more acute than that of Saudi Arabia."

Yet, last March, before becoming foreign minister, Moshe Dayan was quoted as publicly stating that Israel has "more planes than Italy or Germany or France and a little less than England."

The political reaction in Saudi Arabia to Jimmy Carter's equivocation in the face of Israel's displeasure was predictable. It began with a private letter to Mr. Carter by the Saudi ambassador politely asking that the pledge (first made by the Ford administration) be carried out.

But the Saudi government would not be human if, in the face of a dishonored pledge it continued to resist oil price hikes demanded by other OPEC countries or continued high-rate oil production just to satisfy President Carter.

Worse, the Saudis could succumb to OPEC pressure to sell crude oil in a "basket of currencies," costing the dollar its pre-eminent currency position. That would mean a price break for strong currencies (the West German mark and the Japanese yen). Such a damaging policy switch for Western unity will be pressed at the next OPEC meeting in June.

But underlying these surface hazards is the spectacle of the U.S. superpower once again squirming in public over an arms sale in the Middle East clearly tailored to its own interests. This spectacle reflects an increasingly dim image of the U.S. — not only to Saudi Arabia but around the whole world.

Take doctor's advice on making a play

Opening lead — ♣ Q

Our actor friend took the king of clubs, drew trumps and tried a diamond to the ace and another diamond for a finesse with the jack. He took no bows for this play since he lost a diamond to the queen and three spade tricks later on.

"You must not ignore your brunette when you are interested in a blonde," the psychiatrist told him. "Work with the queen of spades before you make a play for the queen of diamonds."

EARLY SPADE PLAY

After taking the king of clubs, South should draw two trumps, take the ace of clubs and ruff a club. Then he enters dummy with a trump and leads a spade to finesse with the nine.

The defenders take three spades but must then lead diamonds since a club or spade return would let declarer ruff in dummy and discard a diamond from his hand.

If West leads the first diamond, South gets a free finesse. If East leads the first diamond, South plays low and West's queen is trapped under dummy's ace-nine. Even if West has the ten of diamonds to force out dummy's ace, declarer can then try a finesse with the jack of diamonds.

ANSWER: Pass. Don't scream until you're in trouble. Let your partner play the hand at 1 NT undoubled. Time enough to think about a rescue if one opponent doubles and the other opponent passes the double.

Translation plays role

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now the critics of the Panama Canal treaty say they're worried that it may gain — or lose — something in the translation.

What they're really looking for is any argument they can find against the pact in the Senate. Still, they may have a point, since translating is a tricky business.

President Carter discovered that in Warsaw, when his remarks became somewhat more colorful than intended because of a faulty translation from English to Polish.

When he spoke of Polish desires for the future, it came out as "your lusts for the future."

It would hardly do to have a treaty recording U.S. lust for the canal, although the point could be argued, given the ardor of the opposition.

Translations between English and Spanish are not quite so difficult, but it turns out that there is room for argument over interpretation of the words in the treaty.

"We must contend not only with conflicting interpretations of the English text, but also the Spanish meaning of every word in the documents," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who opposes ratification. He has proposed an amendment to declare the English language text binding in case of any dispute.

State Department translators and negotiators have spent about 400 hours studying the English and Spanish language of the treaties, and they say there are no substantive differences.

But translation is an imprecise science, and there is a treaty provision for consultation or mediation in case of disputes over the meaning of the words.

That is a problem in the negotiation of any treaty involving different languages. As one of the final phases of treaty negotiations, the diplomats call in their language experts to check the words in translation and try to make sure there are no significant differences in what they mean.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., claims there are not only ambiguities but errors in the canal treaty translations.

He argues that "errors in translation were very likely — at least in many instances — deliberate" so that Panama could claim the best of the bargain while U.S. negotiators could get their handiwork approved by the Senate.

His complaint, and Hatch's amendment, are based on a study of the English-Spanish texts by Sylvia Costellanos, research director for a conservative group that calls itself the Senate Steering Committee.

According to her analysis, the treaty translations could lead to questions about the U.S. role as manager of the canal, about the control of traffic and about future payments to Panama.

She contends that the treaty language does not give the United States clear authority to control canal traffic, even though it grants a U.S. right "to provide for the orderly transit of ships ..."

"In the Spanish text, this function is expressed as the right to provide for the 'fluid transit' of vessels," she writes.

Midland College sponsors art field trip to Houston

Midlanders are invited to go on a field trip, sponsored by the Midland College art department, Feb. 23 to Houston to see an exhibit of Cezanne, "The Father of Modern Art," paintings.

Stan Jacobs said the group will leave by plane at 7:15 a.m. at the Midland Regional Air Terminal and return at 10:25 p.m. the same day. The cost is $72 per person for air travel and for bus transportaton while in Houston. Students under 21 years of age will be charged $59 each.

"Anyone who is interested in going with us should contact a member of the Midland College art department faculty not later than Thursday in order to book reservations," Jacobs said. Persons may call 684-7851 or visit the art labs in the north wing of the administration building.

During the one-day tour, the group will see the Cezanne show at the Houston Museum of Fine Arts, visit the Contemporary Art Museum and Galleries and the Galleria Shopping Center.

"This is a rare opportunity to see an unprecedented collection by one of the finest artists in the world. Not since the Fauve show in Fort Worth last year, or the King Tut exhibit, has there been a chance to see some of the world's masterpieces in the Southwest. It is entirely possible that such an extensive exhibit of Cezanne's work might never again be assembled," Jacobs said.

30-year reunion planned

The class is trying to update their records. Persons are asked to call one of the class officers if they know the address of a class member who has moved during the past 10 years.

Officers were elected to head the 30-year reunion. They are Martin Meissner, president, Francine Weaver, vice president, and Goss Yeager, treasurer.

Other class officers include Dorothy Roderick Strickland, Carolyn Schaeffer Leaverton, Darlene Livingston Jones, Carolyn Claiborne Dickerson, Billie Protho Mabee and Pat Benedict Anderson, all corresponding secretaries and telephone coordinators; Pat Pryor Allday, registration chairman; Sarah Link Grimes, head of class yearbook, and Jim Fitzgerald and Frank Merritt, both in charge of investigating meeting places.

The next class meeting will be held Feb. 28 in the Midland Room of The Midland National Bank. The members will discuss having a joint reunion with the Midland High senior classes of 1948 and 1950. All members of the three classes are invited to attend.

New newsprint price increases to cost publishers millions

NEW YORK (AP) — The move to higher newsprint prices is spreading, but analysts say the recent rises may be the last ones until 1979.

"Costs are still going up, right across the board," said Clifford Bowles, vice president for finance for Great Lakes Paper Co., which last week boosted its quote for standard grade newsprint to the new industry measure of $320 per ton.

The increases, which were expected and which are effective April 1, have been announced by companies producing more than 50 percent of the newsprint used in North America, including five of the top six producers, according to an industry analyst.

Frederic Coffman of the New York-based brokerage house of White, Weld & Co. said 10.2 million tons of newsprint were consumed in the United States last year, 63 percent of which came from Canada. The balance was produced domestically.

"Certainly all the major (newspaper) chains have been anticipating this," he said. "I don't think it's coming as any major surprise."

Edward Dunleavy, analyst with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York, said he felt the "small, modest" $15 to $20 per ton hike was, in fact, "a little late in coming."

Dunleavy said he had expected the increase at the beginning of January, and added that it was "not at all onerous or out of line." He said he believed the rise was budgeted for by newspapers, whose profitability he described as "at an all-time high."

Coffman said he expected nearly all newsprint producers to align in charging the $320 price by or shortly after April 1. "The Canadian producers are the price leaders" he said.

As for future increases, Dunleavy said, "It seems right now that this should be the only one for this year."

The new $320 price also has been announced by Abitibi-Price Co., the top producer; Macmillan Bloedel Ltd.; Consolidated-Bathrust Ltd.; Bowater Southern Paper Corp.; a division of Kimberly-Clark Corp.; Boise Cascade Corp.; Crown Zellerbach Corp. and British Columbia Forest Products Ltd.

International Paper Co., the second-leading newsprint producer, has not announced an increase and won't comment on the prospects. But analyst Coffman said he expected the firm to announce one before April 1.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Times, who said the paper used 365,000 tons of newsprint in 1977, or about 1,000 tons per day, said "most newspapers expected a newsprint increase before this time. It had almost become a tradition."

He said the combination of increased labor costs and the cost of raw materials, including newsprint, would quite likely drive up the paper's newsstand price of 15 cents this year.

"It's just part of the inflationary spiral, unfortunately," he said, adding that the possible hike would be "very minimal."

He said that the fact that the newspaper's parent company, Times-Mirror Co., owns an Oregon-based firm that produces newsprint in no way lessened the impact of the newsprint cost hike, because the Times is "a separate profit center."

A spokesman for the New York Times, who asked not to be identified, said the newspaper currently uses about 280,000 tons of newsprint a year. He said the newsprint-price increase would cost the Times $4.2 million more per year.

"It sure doesn't help," he said, but added, "We had estimated in our budget procedure that there would probably be an increase this year.

California volunteers to watch for earthquakes

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Los Angeles Times

MENLO PARK, Calif. — The U.S. Geological Survey intends to establish a California network of unpaid volunteers who would closely watch their surroundings for signs of an impending earthquake and report them to scientists.

The volunteers, who would be recruited from the ranks of college students, Girl Scouts, retired persons and others, would be on the alert for such precursory phenomena as unusual animal behavior, changes in the level of well water and deformations of the earth's crust.

The same observers would also act as a conduit to transmit information from the scientific community to the general public about the hazards of earthquakes and the precautions that should be taken in the event of an impending tremor.

China has employed large numbers of volunteers for about 10 years to look for the signs of developing earthquakes. Amateur earthquake-watching brigades were credited with contributing significantly to the prediction of the huge earthquake that struck the Haicheng area in 1975. As a result, there was a limited loss of life then.

The differences between Chinese and American societies are too great, however, to allow a straightforward adaptation of the Chinese system, geological survey officials said.

But there are more than 500 miles of active seismic faults in California, one scientist noted, and the scientific community does not have the personnel, the equipment, or the money to watch each of those miles for signs that the ground below may be about to rupture.

The volunteer plan was unveiled during a two-day workshop, ending Friday, at the Geological Survey's center here. The workshop reflected the growing confidence of earth scientists that most earthquakes are preceded by warning signs.

If these signs can be detected, then the mechanism of earthquakes might become better understood and accurate predictions about the time, place, magnitude and probability of a tremor might then be issued.

Dr. Peter Ward, chief of the Geological Survey's earthquake prediction office, told the workshop that scientists now believe the signs of a small magnitude-four earthquake probably develop from several hours to days before the event. The precursors of a magnitude-six earthquake probably extend months before the tremor itself and a magnitude-eight event may be presaged by anomalous events anywhere from 50 to 80 years ahead.

During the workshop, scientists met with representatives from a broad spectrum of organizations ranging from the California State University and colleges to the Girl Scouts of America, and how they might participate in a monitoring program.

Concerned that they might be inundated with inconsequential information, Ward and other geological survey officials repeatedly emphasized their intent to embark upon a volunteer program in small steps.

"We are talking at most about a few hundred people over the next couple of years," Ward said, "not thousands and not tens of thousands of people."

In any event, he said, no volunteers would be sought until such time as scientists decided what kinds of data should be collected and established procedures for forwarding that information to scientists.

Besides unusual animal behavior and deformation of the earth's crust, scientists might find useful such precursory phenomena as variations in the electrical and magnetic properties of subterranean rocks and fluctuations in the levels of well water and its chemical composition.

To detect some of those, the volunteers might have to be provided with equipment. But it is not clear whether the government would do that or the volunteers would be asked to build their own detection devices.

Concert pair among nicest

Proving all over again that some of the nicest musical evenings can be provided by up-and-coming, but still relatively unknown, young artists were two programs presented in the Permian Basin in recent days.

Midland Community Concerts Association presented the New York Vocal Arts Ensemble in a program Saturday night in Midland High School auditorium, and a week earlier, Odessa Civic Concert Association had presented young American baritone Lenus Carlson in recital in Bonham Junior High auditorium.

The Saturday night concert here, presented by four vocalists with piano accompaniment, was diverse, ranging from works by Schubert and Beethoven to those by Scott Joplin and Stephen Foster. It was rich and melodic and performers' voices were well-matched to weave a musical fabric of considerable texture and elegance.

The concert started with a group of holy songs by Franz Schubert which may have appeared a bit heavy as a program-opener. Nevertheless, the works were beautifully delineated by the singers. A group of Scottish folk songs arranged by Beethoven followed, and they were pleasant, particularly "Faithful Johnny" "Charlie Is My Darling."

Ballads and popular American songs of yesteryear were splendidly sung by the ensemble. These included three songs by Stephen Foster, "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," "Eula Lee" and "Home Folks." A segment of the program titled The Romantic Americans offered works by such composers of the 18th and early 19th centuries as T. Frank Allen, Will S. Hays, Septimus Winner, Henry Clay Work and Scott Joplin (represented with a vocal "Rag Time Dance"). A group of Russian cabaret songs, soulful and introspective, closed the concert impressively. The ensemble's encores included "Crossing the Sierra," Scott Joplin's "Pineapple Rag" and a deeply-moving "Nellie Gray" that undoubtedly brought tears to many eyes.

Lenus Carlson, recitalist on the Odessa Civic Concert Association series, has many fans in this area as a result of his work in recent seasons at the Santa Fe Opera and from other operatic and concert appearances in the Southwest. He is now a member of the Metropolitan Opera roster and there seems little doubt he is on the verge of a major career.

In his recital in Odessa, Carlson offered splendid works by Handel, including the famous "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" from "Semele."

He also offered two engaging works from Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte" and "Magic Flute," and then really hit his stride with a finely-wrought group of songs by Richard Strauss, and that rousing old warhorse, the Toreador Song from Bizet's "Carmen." (Warhorse it may be, but Carlson gave the Toreador Song lots of pizzazz.)

The second segment of the baritone's program was devoted to ballads, folk songs and songs by American composers Charles Ives and Aaron Copland. The program closed with Billy Bigelow's Soliloquy from the musical "Carousel." As encores, Carlson delighted his audience with a rousing and splendid "Ol' Man River" from "Show Boat," and a song titled "Thundering, Wondering."

Carlson's accompanist was his wife Linda Jones. She works with him regularly as accompanist, and provides excellent support. She obviously is a fine, talented musician in her own right.

MCT musical captures flamboyance of circus

The circus has come to town with all its flamboyance, color and tinsel grandeur, and it most certainly should pack 'em in under the "big top" for the next several weeks — in this case, the big top being Theatre Centre.

A review

Friday to initiate Midland Community Theatre's 1978 season.

It's no blockbuster of a show, this rather fragile play-with-music, but it has "heart" and a lot of appeal. It isn't another "Hello, Dolly" or "South Pacific," or even an "Annie Get Your Gun" or "Anything Goes." Still, it provides excellent entertainment of its own special kind, and manages to leave the viewer with a good feeling at show's end, and that's a laudable accomplishment.

Laudable, too, is the cast of actors, singers and dancers who work hard and well in their roles as carny folk and succeed in making the show effective and believable. And they're backed by an excellent pit orchestra which handles the sometime-difficult musical score with deference and precision.

There aren't many big numbers in "Carnival, but what there are, are well done. These include "Direct From Vienna," which opens the show; the Carnival Ballet and the "Cirque de Paris," which may well be the best number in the show, providing as it does good dancing as well as singing.

Many of the small numbers are excellent, including "Mira," sung by the orphan Lili; "Sword, Rose and Cape," done by Marco the Magnificent and circus roustabouts; "I've Got to Find A Reason," sung by Paul, the puppeteer; "Yum Ticky," sung by Lili and the puppets; "Her Face," sung by Paul; "Magic, Magic," sung by Lili, Marco and the Incomparable Rosalie, and "She's My Love," sung by Paul. And the show's theme song, "Love Makes the World Go Round" is especially nice.

Several comic numbers in the show are quite entertaining, among them the witty "Always, Always You," sung by Marco and his jealous partner-in-magic, Rosalie, and "Humming," done by Rosalie and circus owner Schlegel. The circus' "Bluebird Girls," who look as though they might have stepped right out of a cabaret in Hamburg's a fetching Reeperbahn, have song-and-dance number titled "Tanz Mit Mir."

"Carnival," based on the movie "Lili" which in turn was based on a story by Paul Gallico, revolves around an orphan girl, Lili, who wanders into the tawdry circus world of make-believe and falls hopelessly under its spell. She is wooed by two circus performers, the smooth-talking magician, Marco the Magnificent, and the embittered cripple, Paul the puppeteer. She becomes a pawn in a fierce rivalry for her affection.

Adding to the merriment are Rosalie, Marco's jealous partner in the magic act; Schlegel, the owner of the sleazy circus, and a pack of the most lovable puppets you can imagine — Reynardo the Fox, Marguerite, Carrot Top and the walrus, Horrible Harry.

Sharon Hyde is excellent as the wide-eyed waif, Lili, and Richard Montez makes a splendid Marco. Bob Welborn, who has probably the best voice in the show, is quite good as the bitter Paul, who can talk gently only through his puppets.

Also worthy of note in their respective characterizations are Jody Youngblood as Jacquot, the puppeteer's assistant, who also is featured in the excellent "Cirque de Paris" number; Armand Baldinelli as Dr. Glass from Zurich, and Susie Hitchcock, Jan Swinehart, Janis Johnson and Carol Chidlaw as the "Bluebird Girls." Supporting players and singing and dancing ensembles carry out their tasks well.

"Carnival" was designed and directed by MCT executive director Art Cole; with musical direction by Robert LaFontaine. Choreography was by Cherry Jones and Randy Bonifay was technical director. Joe Hathaway is stage managing. The engaging puppets were created by Kelly Drape

Costumes for "Carnival" are colorful and appropriately circus-y, so obviously replacements were received in time for Friday's opening, after the original consignment to MCT from a Denver costume firm was stolen a week ago.

Following the initial performances Friday and Saturday nights, "Carnival" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. today and Thursday, at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and at 2:30 p.m. next Sunday. Additional performances will be on Feb.15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 24 and 25. Seat reservations? Telephone the box office, 682-2544.

Barbara didn't miss Harry

By DICK MAURICE
Copley News Service

And, of course, there was a whole contingent of brass from ABC there, including ABC top-top honcho ROONE ARLEDGE. In fact, there were so many people there it's just possible Barbara didn't miss her five-days-a-week parner on ABC's "Evening News," HARRY REASONER. Yes, Harry somehow missed the event.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Chocolate rich in saturated fat

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does chocolate have much cholesterol? I like it, but I'm trying to cut down on cholesterol.—Joe D.

Dear Joe: Chocolate doesn't have any cholesterol at all. However, it does have a lot of something else you should be careful about if you are on a low-cholesterol diet—saturated fat. So go easy on chocolate bars while you are cutting down. And watch hot chocolates, too.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why are eyes apt to be affected by diabetes? My sister, in her forties, has diabetes and has been having eye troubles for almost a year now. She is terrified of going blind. Isn't there anything she can so?—Estelle M.

Dear Estelle: What happens is that the blood vessels in the back of the eye sometimes weaken and pouch out when a person has diabetes, and this can cause small hemorrhages which cloud the clear gel in the eye and impair vision. There is also a chance that extra blood vessels will form and lead to further hemorrages.

There are ways, however, to treat this condition. One method, called diabetic retinopathy (the retina being the important layer of the eye), uses the laser beam to seal up weak points in the blood vessels very accurately and delicately. There is also an operation that can remove the clouded gel from the eye and replace it with a clear fluid.

The best method, of course, is preventive action. That is why it is so important for someone like your sister to have her eyes examined at least once a year—if necessary, more often. When a person has had diabetes as long as she has, this is especially true.

To R. L. of Flint, Mich.: The recipe for bran muffins I gave on TV that serves 8 is:

1 cup unprocessed bran
¾ cup whole wheat flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. soda
½ tsp. salt
1 egg, slightly beaten
¾ cup buttermilk or ½ cup buttermilk and ¼ cup yogurt
2 tbsp. molasses
2 tbsp. honey
2 tbsp. oil
½ cup raisins

(1). Blend first five ingredients together and set aside.

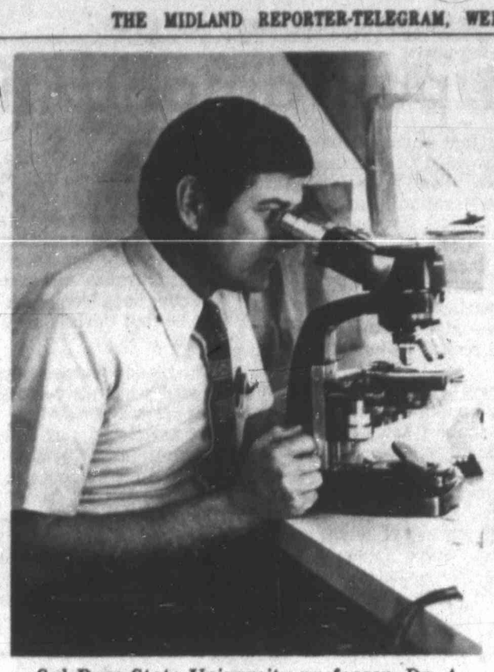

(2). Mix all other ingredients except raisins in large bowl until well blended.

(3). Stir in dry ingredients and raisins. Mix well.

The bran muffins are not only tasty but, I hope, will help your constipation.

Sul Ross State University professor, Dr. A. Michael Powell, recently was selected to serve on the National Science Foundation review panel. He is a systematic botanist.

Sul Ross biology professor named

ALPINE — Dr. A. Michael Powell, professor of biology at Sul Ross State University, is one of two Texans recently appointed to serve on the National Science Foundation review panel.

The panel reviews all systematic biology research proposals seeking foundation grants.

Powell was among nine scientists appointed to the panel last December for a two-year term. The other Texan chosen for the panel is Dr. Guy Bush, professor of zoology at The University of Texas at Austin.

Powell said the panel will review an average of 100 grant proposals each quarter, meeting in Washington, D.C., every four months to present their reviews and recommendations before the foundation.

In addition, Powell said, "We will be able to direct research into areas that have a higher priority and thus demand attention first before other areas are investigated."

In his 14 years of teaching at the university, Powell has been the recipient of seven consecutive foundation grants, totaling more than $150,000. He recently completed work on a foundation grant dealing with taxonomic studies of plants. He has published more than 50 papers in leading scientific journals.

Powell presently is working on a $33,700 foundation grant program which will attempt to outline the biosystematic elationships of more than 100 species of the shrub, Brichellia.

Women advised to prepare before TV show, then relax

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

The average active person has a good chance to get on television these days, when there is much emphasis on talk shows.

In small towns the Chamber of Commerce, women's clubs and panel groups all get a chance at the tube. Housewives and career girls are especially thrilled at the prospect.

Some good advice in coping with one's first appearance on video is offered to its members by the American Society of Interior Designers, and the tips can apply to everyone.

For example, relax. The host and producer want you to make a good impression and will help make you look good. They will encourage you to say something interesting for their audience. In being informal, however, don't be flip or breezy.

Know what you want to say. Be ready with your opening line. Think of yourself as the host and take the lead, if you can.

If you have a point to make, don't be afraid to make it or rephrase it. Equip yourself with some interesting remarks, before you make your appearance. If you are boring and there's a more interesting guest handy, you may be cut short.

But don't rehearse your remarks until they are so pat they sound canned. And don't hog the mike, the decorating group advises.

Spend some time watching yourself in the mirror or in a home movie to observe any idiosyncrasies. Do you do strange things with your mouth — biting the corner of your lip, for example? Do you roll your eyes upward when you are asked a question? Try to improve such facial habits.

Look confident, on the upbeat, but don't spend too much time looking at the monitor. Look at the camera occasionally and casually so the audience knows you are talking to them. You will notice the host assumes that stance.

As for grooming, it is better to wear medium to soft colors. You should avoid wearing sparkling and highly polished jewelry that jingles, and don't fidget with it. Avoid sharply contrasting patterns and colors in clothes and don't try out a new hairdo for the first time. In fact, be sure your hair is neatly arranged so you are not constantly brushing it from your eyes — a mannerism annoying to the viewing audience.

Women should not wear heavy makeup; men should cover a heavy beard with pancake makeup and a little powder might be used on a bald head.

Be comfortable and relaxed but don't slouch, throw your arms over the back of a chair, or cross and recross your legs.

There are about 45 companies listed in the American Society for Training and Development that offer coaching services, the interior design society advises its members. But if you don't want to spend the time and money, you might watch talk show guests and copy from the best.

"THINKING" with ODOM
PHILIPPIANS 4:8

Make no mistake about it: religious division is contrary to the spirit of the New Testament. In John 17 our Blessed Lord prayed for unity among His disciples. And whereas he was not concerned about the division which might exist in the world, He was concerned about the unity that must exist among His own disciples. Yet when we take cognizance of the concern for unity by the Lord, it should behoove each of us who profess to be His followers to have the same concern. But are we?

God, through the Holy Spirit, revealed to the world (saints and sinners alike) the fact that the first century church of Christ had her problems. When we read the First Corinthian letter we take note that nearly every chapter deals with some sort of digression from God's pattern for right living. The matter of immorality, division, corruption of worship, problems attached to the marriage relationships, false teaching relative to the resurrection of the dead, just to name a few, are covered in that book. God revealed in Acts 5 the fate of a couple who was striken dead because of their lying. We could go on persuing this line, but let this suffice to make the point that the body of Christ has never been free from internal problems. And yet God did not choose to sweep such corruption, as it were, under the rug so that His enemies might be left ignorant of such internal depravity.

The Bible tells us that division is sinful. God is not the "author of confusion," says the apostle Paul, and that is exactly what religious division is. It sends out one man to affirm something which calls for another man to deny, and both making the claim that they speak "as the oracles of God." When the unbeliving world sees all of these various denominations and all these religious bodies claim to belong to God by His authority, they determine, and rightly so if denominationalism represents Him, that the God of the Bible is a "fickled God."

Neighbour, your Bible declares that there is but "one body" (Ephesians 4:4). We contend that Christ purchased but one church, built but one church, ordained but one church. Are you a member of it? Read our article next week and let us see about it.

Valentine Coronation Dance set Saturday

The fourth annual Park Center Young Men's Christian Association Valentine Coronation Dance will be Saturday at the Midland County Exhibit Building on U.S. Highway 80 at 8:30 p.m.

The admission is $4 per person if bought in advance and $5 at the dance. Tickets are now on sale at Park Center YMCA.

Puffins may make comeback

EASTERN EGG ROCK, Maine (AP) — The sighting here last summer of the scarce puffin "provides real encouragement that puffins may some day recolonize this former breeding site," reports Dr. Stephen Kress of Cornell University.

Kress is working under a grant supplied by the National Audubon Society to reintroduce puffins to this Muscongus Bay area. Puffins have not bred on Eastern Egg Rock since 1895 when the original population was erased due to excessive hunting.

Kress' latest progress report outlined the return of a puffin which had been transplanted from large colonies in Newfoundland to Eastern Egg Rock in 1975.

Red hot Pack breezes by Odessa

By PAUL DOMOWITCH
R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA — You've really got to feel for Odessa High basketball coach Curt Chatham. I'm mean, the poor guy is asking for very little out of life. Right now, his biggest ambition is to be able to look somebody straight in the eye and say, "Well, ya' win some and ya' lose some."

Now that's not asking for the world, is it? No, but the world might be a lot easier to get, because his ball club is having a heck of a time just trying to win ONE, let alone SOME.

They lost again here Tuesday night, falling to red hot Midland High, 79-69, in a game that wasn't that close. And it kept the Bronchos perfect record in tact: they haven't won a district game all year. As a matter of fact, they didn't win one last year either. Or the year before that. They say hoola hoops were the big fad when these poor guys last defeated a 5-4A opponent.

While Odessa keeps losing, Midland keeps winning. Their victory here Tuesday upped their second half district record to 5-0 and set the stage for Friday's big showdown with equally unbeaten Abilene Cooper in Abilene.

COACH DON Humphrey took the leash of his Bulldogs and let them run free against the Bronchos, and they responded with some pretty fair run and gun basketball. Four Midland players hit in double figures, including Kiffy Hickey and Milt Sanders, who led the winners with 17 points apiece. Charles Johnson hit for 14 more and Walter Bryson added 10.

Odessa peanut guards, 5-foot-6 Danny Ray Wright and 5-8 Lorenzo Pineda led all scorers with 24 points each, but most of their buckets came too late to do the Bronchos any good. Pineda couldn't miss in the final quarter, pocketing 14 points, mainly on shots in the 25 foot to one mile range.

Odessa tried to defense the Pack with a 1-2-2 zone right from the beginning, but cannons wouldn't have worked against them Tuesday. Led by Sanders and the the growing boy of the club, Johnson, Midland jumped out to a 21-point first half lead and never looked back. The Bronchos finally managed to make it respectable with a late surge against the Bulldog subs in the final quarter.

Johnson, the youngster who started the season at 6-2 and has since grown two more inches since then, collected 10 of his 12 points in the first half when Midland put the game out of reach.

His frontcourt mate Sanders gave his teammates a scare when he fell to the floor hard after being hit in mid-air by Odessa's Larry Jones with 7:46 still left in the second quarter. But he was up moments later and proceeded to prove that he was anything but hurt by canning two quick baskets.

Midland came out running in the third quarter, rolled up a 64-44 lead, and than sat back and let the reserves get some playing time.

Midland swept both preliminary games, as the MHS sophomores toppled Odessa, 68-44, and the junior varsity got by the Baby Bronchos, 51-46. Anthony Carroll was high for the Bulldog sophomores with 20 points, while Joel Gotcher and Darren Matlock paced the JV's with 19 and 13 points respectively.

Rebs stay right in thick of things

By BOB DILLON

Dave Stueckler and the Robert E. Lee Rebels were hot as a pistol.

Stueckler poured in 22 points and the Rebels shot a sizzling 65.2 percent from the floor Tuesday night to gun down the Odessa Permian Panthers, 63-43, in a District 5-4A basketball game in the Lee Gymnasium.

The Rebels, still in the running for the second half title in the torrid 5-4A race, connected on 28 of 43 shots from the floor to bring their loop mark to 4-1 to trail Midland and Abilene Cooper by one game. The Rebs and Abilene High share second place in the standings going into a showdown Friday night in the Lee Gym while both Midland and Cooper sport 5-0 league records.

The Cougars beat Big Spring, 57-42 and the Bulldogs had an easy time with Odessa, winning, 78-68, in Odessa. Abilene took care of San Angelo, 61-55, to also stay in the second half chase, but the Warbirds have no worries since they won the first half crown with a 7-0 mark.

STUECKLER HIT 11 of 13 shots from the floor to spark the Rebel attack which looked sharp throughout the game.

Lee played super defense and never did go into its patented full-court press during the game. The Rebels led 28-20 at the half, but you could almost feel that Coach Paul Stueckler's well-coached outfit was going to blow Mojo out of the tub and it did in the second half, outscoring the Black Cats, 35-23.

Permian had its problems, especially in the second and third periods when it could only muster seven points in each quarter. Lee scored 36 points in the two middle periods to the Panthers' 14 and that was the difference.

THE PANTHERS only managed to hit a percentage of 24.1 for the game, hitting 17 of 41 shots. Permian did hit 75 percent at the free throw line, connecting on nine of 12 charity shots.

Besides Lee's sizzling 65.2 percent from the floor, the Tall City outfit hit 64 percent at the free throw line, hitting seven of 11 free tosses.

Stueckler was backed up by Mike Oestmann and Nate Goudeau with 11 and 10 points while Ernest Merritt was right behind with eight points.

Oestmann played well on defense along with Mike Richard and Joe Garner. The 6-5 Oestmann blocked five Permian shot attempts and rebounded well as did Merritt.

The victory gives Lee a 21-9 season record while Permian is now 13-16 and 1-4 in league play going into its game with San Angelo Friday night.

IN THE junior varsity game, Permian took a 63-50 win over Greg Wright's Lee JVs with Brad Kerley and Rex Fields paving the way with 21 and 10 points, respectively.

Lee's attack was led by Ken Van Hoozer and David Keys with 15 and 11 points. There was no sophomore game.

The Rebels will be facing an Abilene High outfit which will be looking for its 30th win of the season as James Boynton's Eagles bring a 29-4 seaaon record it into the game.

Smokin' Joe gets offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Former world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier has been offered $250,000 to come out of retirement and fight Scott LeDoux sometime in April, a Madison Square Garden official said Tuesday night.

Cougars, Eagles nab 5-4A cage victories

Abilene Cooper and Abilene took District 5-4A basketball victories Tuesday to set up two showdown battles with Midland and Midland Lee on Friday night.

Cooper kept pace with Midland High by beating Big Spring, 57-41 while Abilene, first half champion, took a 61-55 win over the San Angelo Central Bobcats.

Cooper and Midland sport 5-0 marks in the second half of the race and meet head-on Friday night in Abilene while Lee and Abilene, both 4-1, tangle in the Tall City in the other shootout.

Sophomore Terry Orr tallied 20 points to give Cooper its 27th victory in 31 games while Abilene got a pair of 20-point performances from David Little and Cisco Smith as the Eagles were chalking up victory No. 29 of the year.

Big Spring's attack was led by Mark Poss who had 13 points. Besides Orr's 20 points, another sophomore, Woody Martin, chipped in with 16 points.

Leonard Lambert and Lorenzo Payne led the Bobcats with 17 and 10 points. Central and Big Spring both own 1-4 loop records. The Bobcats are now 13-13 on the year and Steers stand 7-24.

Brooks signs with Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Burnt orange was expected to be branded on the top Texas schoolboy football talent today as the Texas Longhorns ride the momentum of their Southwest Conference championship year.

By late Tuesday, the Longhorns had received verbal commitments from such highly sought stars as Donnie Little of Dickinson, a slippery quarterback, runningback Brad Beck of Perryton, and center Mike Babb of Euless Trinity.

Quarterback Charles "Booger" Brooks of Andrews was on Texas' list along with lineman Joe Shearin of Dallas Wilson.

Also in the Dallas area, Highland Park tackle Robert Mullins, end Wayne Johnson of Richardson, and tackles Mike Robbins and Dan Lovett of Richarson Pearce gave the green light to Texas.

Highland Park defensive tackle Richard Neely, an allstater, told Southern Methodist Coach Ron Meyer he wanted to be a Mustang.

Ice and snow in the northern half of Texas should hamper the nine SWC coaches as they criss-cross the state.

The SWC signing date is a week ahead of the national letter and the coaches have to do it all over again Wednesday Feb. 15.

Smith named booster prexy

Ann Smith was named to succeed Gene Girmes as president of the Midland Cubs Booster Club while Mike Bradford, Blaine Schrag, Vera Powers and Bill Garay were named directors at the season's first meeting in the Coors Hospitality Room Tuesday night.

Midland Cubs' General Manager Bill Rigney, Jr., in explaining plans for the annual Chamber of Commerce weekend in Scottsdale, Ariz., said, "Everyone had such a good time last year, that we've extended the weekend an extra day.

"The group will leave Terminal at 5:40 p.m. Thursday March 16 and arrive back at Terminal 5:30 p.m. Sunday, March 19."

The group will be quartered at the Valley Ho motel in downtown Scottsdale and is scheduled to see the Chicago Cubs vs. Milwaukee Friday and Chicago against Oakland Saturday.

One of the trips highlights will be a Saturday night reception in which Midlanders will have an opportunity to meet the Midland Cubs and ex-Midland Cubs now with the big club.

Price for the trip is $260, double occupancy, per person and $336 for singles.

Abe asks for clowns and he gets them

HOUSTON (AP) — It was "Clown Night" when the Rice Owls entertained the 12th ranked Texas Longhorns in a Southwest Conference basketball game Tuesday night and there was a circus atmosphere at times in the stands and on the court.

Rice Coach Mike Schuler picked up a pair of technicals for fussing with the referees and Texas pulled off a 10-point play.

The fans came into Audry Court wearing floppy shoes, noses that looked like ripe tomatoes, fright wigs and plastic hats.

But it didn't really change the predicted outcome of the game. The conference-leading Longhorns, fueled by Jim Krivacs' 36 points and four other Texas players in double figures, took the Owls, 102-86.

The idea for "Clown Night" began when Texas Coach Abe Lemons suggested after the first Rice-UT game when Schuler ran in 99 substitutions that all Rice needed was clowns to make it a circus.

"I was in the war with the Japs and Germans," he said. "After all, a few clowns aren't going to bother me."

The Owls bothered him a bit, though, after trailing by 17 at half, 50-33.

Rice outscored the Longhorns 23-6 the first nine minutes of the second half and tied the game at 56-56 on a jumper by Alan Reynolds with 11:15 to play.

"I saw us going down the drain," Lemons said. "Somebody pulled the cork. We stood around like we were in line for a movie."

Shortly afterwards Texas made 10 points without Rice having the ball.

Longhorn Tyrone Branyan drove for a layup and was bumped to the ground by Alan Miller. Referee Joe Shoshid said the foul was deliberate and worth two free throws. Schuler approached Shoshid for a ruling. Shoshid called successive technicals on Schuler, each a bench technical worth two more frew throws. The Longhorns throw the ball in and scored again to complete the 10-point effort.

Schuler said he only wanted a ruling from Shoshid. The Rice coach said he did not curse.

"I'm still waiting for one," he said afterwards.

"I said 'Why?' and got a technical. If I had cursed the man, he could have thrown me out. I'll go to my grave with those two technicals knowing I was right."

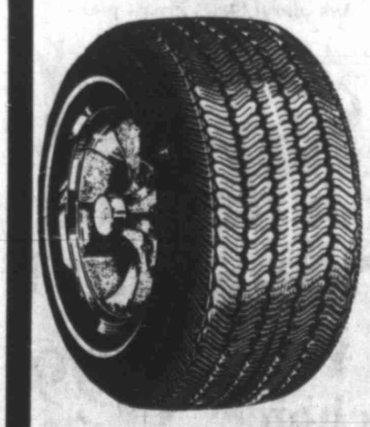

Races set for Saturday

The West Texas Running Club will hold its sixth annual Cotton Patch Runs this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

There will be two races again this year, one eight miles in distance and the other three miles. There will be five divisions in the longer race, including high school, open, 30-39, 40-49 and 50 and over. The three mile run will include seven divisions, including 15 and under, high school, open, 30-39, 40 and over, ladies (25 and over) and girls (24 and under).

Both races will begin at the corner of Ballard St. and Bynum Lane, near Cub Stadium, and all participants may register at the fieldhouse in Cub Stadium prior to the race. Entry fee will be $2 for non-club members and $1 for club members.

BLT is one big meal

By The Associated Press

The Creighton Bluejays got a bad case of indigestion when a "BLT" was shoved down their throats at the Milwaukee Arena.

"BLT," in this case, was not a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich but a giant-sized helping of "Butch Lee Time" — an expression former Marquette Coach Al McGuire coined for the Warriors guard who feasted on the Bluejay Plate Special Tuesday night.

Lee collected 30 points in the third-ranked Warriors' 82-57 joyride over Creighton, helping Marquette improve its record to 18-2.

"We tried any number of players and defenses on Lee and we couldn't even slow him down," marvelled Bluejays Coach Tom Apke after Lee had pulled within a point of his career-high performance.

"I'm not sure that the only player who could stop Butch Lee one-on-one isn't Butch Lee himself, by getting in foul trouble or losing his concentration or something like that," said Apke.

"We had it down to eight with a chance to cut it to six, and then — to quote an old friend (McGuire) — it was 'BLT.'"

BUT IT had been BLT virtually from the start. Lee and Jerome Whitehead scored two baskets each to give the Warriors an 8- 2 lead before Creighton pulled even. Lee added eight points in a 12-point run that gave Marquette a 20-8 lead that was challenged only slightly.

The Bluejays alternated defenses in the first half, which ended with Marquette ahead 34- 24. But Apke kept his charges in man-to-man coverage after intermission and that played right into Lee's hands.

"I can handle the ball good and I'm quick," said Lee. "I can create a lot more situations against a man-to-man. Those situations are not there against a zone.

"Then, when you're able to do those things, you get warmed up and the adrenalin gets going. Then everything starts going for you."

Meanwhile, there wasn't much happening for Creighton.

"We felt that by playing man-for-man in the second half we wouldn't shut them down completely but we'd move better offensively," said Apke. "But that's a two-edged sword. If I had it to do over again, I'd play more zone."

But Apke doesn't have it do do over, and he didn't sound overly upset about that.

"Marquette is an awesome team," he said. "If (top-ranked) Kentucky is any better than that, I'm just glad we don't play them."

IF IT was any consolation to Coach Apke, Rick Apke led 12-7 Creighton with 17 points. Eight of those points pulled the Bluejays within 48-40 early in the second half.

Elsewhere, No. 9 Louisville hammered Tulane 115-86; 11thranked DePaul downed Duquesne 83-58; No. 12 Texas toppled Rice 102-86 and No. 18 Syracuse lost 97-83 in an exhibition game against Athletes in Action.

Ricky Gallon and Darrell Griffith each scored 22 points to carry the Cardinals past outmanned Tulane in a Metro-7 conference clash.

"Let's face it, Louisville is a better ball club," admitted Green Wave Coach Roy Danforth. "Once we get way behind a club like that, we can't catch up."

TULANE WAS way behind by halftime, when the Cardinals led 47-33 and cruised to their 15th victory in 18 games to improve their conference conference slate to 6-1. The Green Wave, topped by Mark Fletcher's 22 points, staggered to 3- 18 and 0-9 in conference play.

William Dise came off the bench to score 22 points and lift 19-2 DePaul over Duquesne. Gary Garland managed 14 points for Duquesne, which committed 27 turnovers and sagged to 8-11 as a result.

Forward Tim Hall scored 24 points, center Ralph Drollinger added 21 and Brad Hoffman collected 13 assists as Athletes in Action surprised Syracuse. Marty Byrnes scored 34 points for the Orangemen.

Meanwhile, Bradley beat Butler 98-82 behind 27 points by Roger Phegley and John Lowenhaupt scored 21 points to carry William & Mary past Navy 70-52.

The only thing missing here is Judy Collins singing "Send In the Clown." University of Texas basketball coach Abe Lemons pays little attention Tuesday night, as several Rice University students parade around in clown get-ups. After Texas' first SWC game with Rice last month, in which Rice coach Mike Schuler made 99 substitutions, Lemon commented that all they needed were clowns to make a circus of the game. So, clowns he got. (AP Laserphoto)

Greenwood cagers blast Sterling, 50-34

Greenwood, Crane and Rankin took area basketball wins Tuesday night while Reagan County took it on the chin, losing to Wall, 43-42.

Greenwood's boys posted a 50-34 victory over Sterling City with Swafford and Evans paving the way with 17 and 13 points. The Rangers stand 27-4 on the year and 4-1 in district play.

Rankin's Red Devils defeated Clint, 61-47 with Parker ripping the cords for 29 points. Munoz was high for the Lions with 24 points. Rankin is 15-9 on the year and 3-1 in league warfare.

The Rankin girls also won, beating Clint, 56-51 with Plagens netting 30 points for the winners who are 20-6 and 4-3 in district play.

Wall's Hawks nipped the Reagan County Owls, 43-42 with Whittley scoring 12 points. High for the Owls was Garber with 10 points.

Crane took a 74-66 victory over the Jal, N.M. Panthers in non-district play with Fort and Jones leading the way with 17 and 19 points for the Golden Cranes who stand 21-5 on the year.

Tech topples Mustangs

By The Associated Press

Kent Williams, who delivered the killing blow, asked the question of the hour: "Why is it we always beat SMU by two points?"

Williams drilled a 20-foot jump shot with 21 seconds to play Tuesday night to carry Texas Tech to a 64-62 Southwest Conference basketball victory over the snakebit Mustangs, who lost to the Red Raiders by two points earlier this year.

Also, Tech defeated SMU by one and two points respectively last year.

Tech cemented its third position with a 9-3 record while fourth place Houston faded to 7-5.

SMU is now 5-6 in the vital fifth position with Baylor closing fast at 4-7. Spots below fifth place in the final regular season SWC standiings must go on the road in the first round of the post-season tournament.

"We have a rabbit's foot when it comes to SMU, no doubt about that," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers" there's no difference between the two teams except we get the breaks."

Myers added "I'm happy we are playing well. I'm not saying our victory was all luck. But SMU did an excellent job of keeping the ball away from Mike Russell."

Russell, the third leading scorer in the SWC averaging 18.9 points per game, only got six points against SMU's tight zone. He never took a shot in the first half.

Cager eyeing Moscow

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Dean Uthoff, the leading rebounder in college basketball, has Moscow on his travel itinerary — for the 1980 Summer Olympics.

"I've been thinking about it for a long time," said Uthoff. "Winning a gold medal is really something special. You can't buy a gold medal."

Uthoff led the Big Eight in rebounding a year ago as a freshman. Already he's equalled last year's total of 311 rebounds — an average of 14.8 a game — with five regularseason games and at least one conference playoff game remaining.

He is the only Big Eight player to score more than 300 points and grab more than 300 rebounds in one season.

"Dean hasn't reached his potential yet," said Iowa State Coach Lynn Nance. "He can be as good as he wants to be."

At 6-feet-11 and 247 pounds, it takes more than one defender to keep Uthoff off the boards. He admits to thinking ahead to a pro career.

"That's a long way off, but it's in the back of my mind," said Uthoff. "If I can play basketball and make a little income, it would be well worth it. Just getting a college scholarship is well worth it to me."

He is sixth on Iowa State's all-time list of rebounders and should be third by the end of the season. At that rate, Uthoff would overhaul the school record of 1,025 by Don Smith (now known as Abdul Aziz) toward the end of his junior year.

But national records probably are out of Uthoff's reach "simply because nowadays people don't miss so many shots and there aren't as many rebounds around," said Jim Wright, who keeps the National Collegiate Athletic Association statistics.

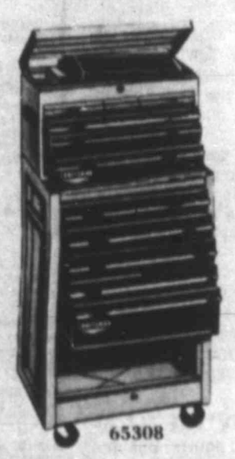

The one-season record average is a phenomenal 25.6 rebounds by Charlie Slack of Marshall, set in 1955. During that same era, Tom Gola of LaSalle set the four-year career mark of 2,201 in 1952-55.

Uthoff's closest competitors this year are Henry Taylor (14.5) of Pan American and Ken Williams (14.4) of North Texas State.

"I don't worry about them. I just try to do by best in every game," said Uthoff, who has worked with weighs to improve his strength and stamina.

Lady scribe's plea: 'Open up'

By BETTY CUNIBERTI
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The issue of equal access to athletes — better known as "women in locker rooms" — is a serious one. It is coming out of the equipment closet (where one women sportswriter was left to wait an hour for an interview) and into the courtroom.

Reporter Melissa Ludtke and her employer, Time Inc.'s Sport Illustrated magazine, are suing the New York Yankees, the City of New York and Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for sex discrimination after she was barred from the Yankee dressing room during the playoffs while the male writers were allowed in.

The facts are these:

—Sportswriting is a profession of men and women covering events in which men and women participate.

—Hasty and open access to direct conversation with athletes following an event is important to doing a complete job of coverage.

—The "separate but equal" setup employed by most teams, in which the woman is left outside the doors while someone tries to fetch players to come outside for interviews, is not satisfactory.

IT DOES not work because the other reporters, usually all male and anywhere from five to 200 in number, have gone inside and monopolized the attention of the key players. Waiting for the players to finish their interviews, shower and blow-dry their hair is a proposition that will carry you long past most newspaper deadlines.

I covered the Oakland Raiders football team for one season for another newspaper and never talked to quarterback Ken Stabler after a game. After the 1977 Maryland-Duke football game, I did not talk to any Maryland player. After the recent Rams-Vikings NFL playoff game in Los Angeles, I was able to interview several Minnesota players in their locker room, while Rams officials were unable to produce either of the two players I requested outside the locker room, where they stationed me.

IN THE cases of the Raiders and Maryland, public relations people were cooperative and concerned (often this is not the case), but even their efforts failed because it is simply a system with so many flaws that it cannot be depended upon throughout a season.

The prevailing stance involving player's privacy and propriety is empty rhetoric; there are solutions that satisfy both these conditions. Men regularly cover women's events and have little or no problem obtaining postgame interviews. It is the refusal of men's teams to accept the living fact of the woman reporter and change their postgame operation that is causing everyone problems.

I don't view this as a locker-room issue, but as an equal-access issue. Men's teams must accept the fact that even though we were never in this business before (small wonder!), women are in the sportswriting profession now, and will be in increasing numbers in the future. Whatever postgame interview setup teams wish to enact must be such that women can be included. And not in some separate fashion.

IF AN organization feels it is beyond the boundaries of taste to have women in the dressing rooms, it should close the locker rooms and conduct all interviews in another location. This is the method presently used by the Maryland basketball team, and many others, including women's teams. Men writers generally do not like it, but the compromises imposed on their access are not nearly comparable to the almost total ban that has been shoved on women and kept sportswriting an almost entirely male endeavor.

This is a compromise that I feel men writers should and will accept, for the good of the profession. No other segment of the news business conducts interviews with subjects in the nude; surely sportswriting can survive similarly.

If a team decides that the only way to accomodate the press is to open its dressing room, then women must be admitted. Players who desire privacy can leave their uniform on an extra few minutes, or dress under a robe or towel. I had access to the University of San Francisco basketball locker room for an entire season in which the Dons won 29 games and did not resort to the option of undressing under robes or towels. The Golden State Warriors, the New Jersey Nets, the New York Rangers, New Orleans Jazz, the Vikings and several other professional teams have opened their clubhouses to women without incident. Their good sense is ignored by the other teams, who insist such a situation would be disastrous.

The other solution that has been suggested to me is that I and others like me do something else for a living. But if there is one thing I learned from the people I meet outside locker rooms, it is how to be stubborn.

Cavaliers give Jazz the freeze

By The Associated Press

The Cleveland Cavaliers had a little suprise for the New Orleans Jazz, but Mother Nature and the Chicago Bulls had an even bigger one waiting for the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Cavaliers had the unenvieable task of trying to take a little fire out of the red-hot Jazz, who had won 10 straight. They did even better — they took the steam out of the Jazz, literally.

The game was played in the Richfield Coliseum where a combination of zero-degree temperatures outside and a court set over the Coliseum ice created a frigid effect. The end result was that it was so cold that players for both teams were provided with hot water bottles to keep their hands warm.

The bottles seemed to work wonders for Cleveland and one little used guard, Terry Furlow.

"I'm glad they had them (hot water bottles), because without them maybe this wouldn't have happened," Furlow said after scoring a career-high 22 points in leading Cleveland to a 122-99 victory.

Philadelphia wasn't as lucky as the Cavaliers. Not only did they have the cold weather to brave, but a hectic bus trip from Philadelphia to Washington for a plane ride to Chicago for the game.

The 76ers did not arrive at the court until game time and the start of the contest was delayed 75 minutes.

Despite the trip, Philadelphia held a 13-point lead in the third quarter only to see Chicago reel off a 16-6 spurt and eventually go on to score a 108-106 victory over the 76ers.

"I'm very proud of our team after all the adversity on what must have seemed a harrowing experience," Cunningham said.

Bulls 108, 76ers 106

Artis Gilmore scored six points in the fourth quarter before fouling out with less than two minutes to play, and Chicago hung on to defeat Philadelphia.

Philadelphia had its threegame winning streak stopped as the Bulls defeated the 76ers for the third time this season.

Lakers 132, Braves 105

Lou Hudson and Adrian Dantley combined for 53 points to lead Los Angeles as the Lakers handed Buffalo its ninth consecutive loss — the team's longest losing streak since they dropped the final 11 games of the 1972-73 season.

Hudson and Dantley each had 10 points in the opening quarter as the Lakers jumped to a 37-19 lead and never looked back.

Celtics 92, Pacers 89

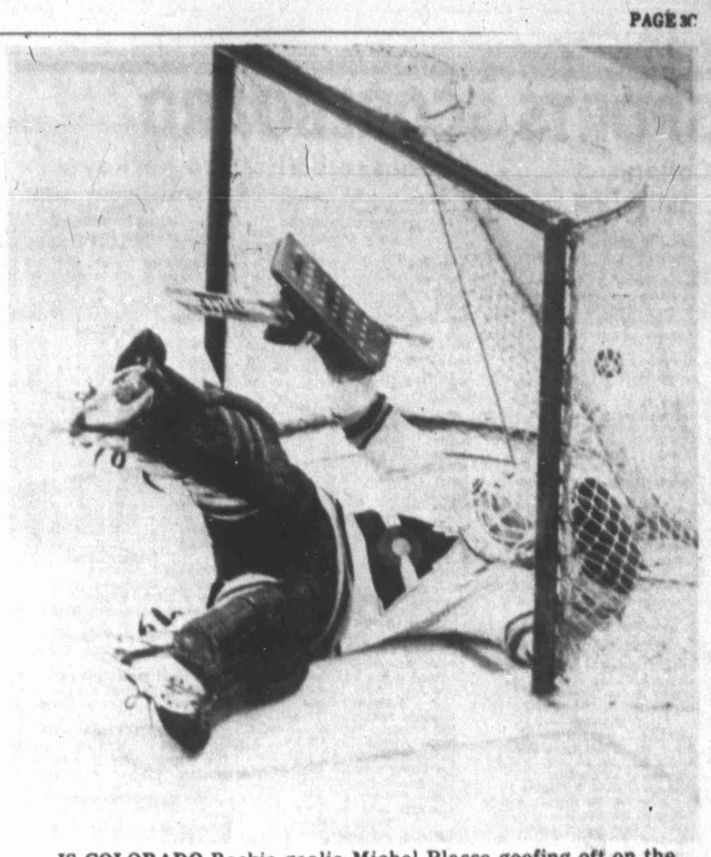

Sidney Wicks and Dave Cowens each sank two free throws in the final minute as Boston won its fourth straight game — the team's longest winnning streak this season.

The Pacers, who trailed by 16 with 4:06 left in the third quarter, rallied to tie it at 88 on Ron Behagen's layup with 1:07 left in the game. Wicks made two free throws with 44 seconds left and Behagen went to the free throw line three seconds later, but missed his second shot to give Boston a 90-89 advantage.

Warriors 105, Bullets 102

Rookie Rickey Green hit a field goal with 14 seconds to play to break a 102-102 tie as Golden State defeated Washington.

The Warriors had taken a 100-96 lead with a little more than two minutes to play on a pair of free throws by Sonny Parker and another on a technical foul made by Rick Barry.

Allen hires 4

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New Rams Coach George Allen has hired four of his Washington Redskin assistants and will retain two coaches who served under Chuck Knox in Los Angeles.

Allen, named last week to succeed Knox as head man of the Rams, said Tuesday that LaVern Torgeson, Paul Lanham, Charlie Waller and Bill Hickman will move from Washington to Los Angeles.

Ray Malavasi and Jack Faulkner will be kept on the Rams' staff.

Hope Classic could be a mudder's delight

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Defending champion Rik Massengale and the other PGA golfers scheduled to begin the $250,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic today may have a lot of use for their slickers and umbrellas before play wraps up.

Rain has fallen almost without letup at this desert resort area since last Sunday and it — plus gusty winds — is expected to continue through the coming weekend. The Desert Classic, the only 90-hole tournament on the PGA trail, is scheduled to finish Sunday.

Massengale is considered the man to beat in the tournament, but six other Desert Classic winners,including Arnold Palmer, are entered in the event.

The pros are teamed with a trio of amateurs for the first four rounds, playing a different one of the tournament's four courses each day. The 18-hole finale is at Bermuda Dunes, with only the pros vying for the $45,000 winner's purse.

Palmer is a five-time winner of the Desert Classic, with other champions on hand including Billy Casper, who won in 1965 and 1969; Hubert Green, winner Sunday of the Hawaiian Open and champion here in 1974; Bob Rosburg, 1972; Tom Nieporte, 1967, and Doug Sanders, 1966.

The final two rounds of the tournament on Saturday and Sunday will be nationally televised by NBC.

Play will be at Eldorado, Indian Wells and La Quinta country clubs in addition to Bermuda Dunes.

Tom Watson, winner of two of the five PGA events already held this year, ranks as one of the favorites in the Desert Classic. He's currently atop the 1978 PGA money list with earnings of $93,956. Green's victory in Hawaii boosted him into second on the earnings ladder with $62,800.

Jay Haas, who captured his first PGA tournament victory at the Andy Williams-San Diego Open, and Bill Kratzert could provide surprises in the Desert Classic. The 25-year-old Kratzert, 10th on the money list last year, played very well in Hawaii before losing to Green on the second hole of a suddendeath playoff.

Massengale, who finished second to Johnny Miller here in 1976, was extremely sharp in the Desert Classic last year, finishing with a 23-under-par total of 337 for five days of the tournament.

Since its inauguration, the Hope tournament has earned more than $6 million in net proceeds for the Eisenhower Medical Center and other charities in this Southern California desert area.

Player collapses

QUEBEC (AP) — Daniel Richard, the 17-year-old member of the Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League who collapsed and died during a practice Monday, suffered a form of heart attack, team doctor Michel Dupont said Tuesday.

Dupont said Richard suffered from a "very rare" congenital condition which can bring about the shrinking of an artery from the heart.

He said death could have occurred at any time, "even sitting in a chair."

The doctor said medical examinations routinely conducted by hockey teams would not reveal such a condition.

Net officials hot at Vitas

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Officials of the just-completed World Championship Tennis tournament here says they will ask the Men's Professional Tennis Council to fine and suspend Vitas Gerulaitis for his deplorable conduct during the event.

Lou Einwick, chairman of the tournament, said, "We're going after him for aggravated behavior, which is a major offense."

Under the complaint, the council could fine Gerulaitis as much as $10,000 and suspend him for as much of a year.

The 23-year-old resident of Kings Point, N.Y., who captured the singles title with a 63, 6-4 victory over John Newcombe, spent much of his time berating and insulting officials, players and fans, both on and off the court.

"There was a lot of emotion involved in this thing," Einwick said Monday. "People were extremely riled up. The next thing somebody could have done is to have jumped out of the stands and gone after Gerulaitis."

Einwick was referring to an incident that occurred in the doubles final, in which Gerulaitis and Sandy Mayer asked for and received the removal of a linesman who made a controversial call.

When the linesman was replaced, five other linesmen walked off in protest, touching off an uproar among the nearly 10,000 spectators. Order finally was restored and play continued without further incident.

"We don't expect Gerulaitis to be fined $10,000 or be suspended for a year," said Tournament Director Waller Horsley, the target of much of the Gerulaitis abuse.

Sports in brief

TENNIS

ST. LOUIS — Second-seeded Eddie Dibbs overpowered Spain's Jose Higueras but fifth-seeded Raul Ramirez was forced to default during first round action in the $175,000 St. Louis Classic, a World Championship Tennis tour event.

Dibbs smashed Higueras 6-0, 6-3 while Ramirez, who last week won the Mexican Open, came up second best against an ailing back and tour newcomer Chris Lewis of New Zealand 7-6, 6-0.

In other first-round matches, Poland's Wojtek Fibak toppled Peru's Hans Gildemeister 6-3, 6-1 and Sandy Mayer bested Chile's Jaime Fillol 7-6, 6-1, 6-2.

SEATTLE — Renee Richards defeated Pam Teeguarden 6-2, 7-6 for her second straight victory in the $100,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

In other action, third-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands beat Caroline Stoll 6-4, 6-2 and JoAnne Russell downed Nona Cuerrant 6-1, 6-1 in first-round matches.

Fifth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia advanced to the quarter-finals with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Nancy Richey.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Top-seeded Harold Solomon breezed through an opening round match in the $75,000 Springfield International Tennis Classic as he posted a 6-1, 6-4 victory over Sweden's Douglas Palm.

There were no suprises during the second day of competition with sixth-seeded Marty Riessen ousting Jiri Granat of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 4-6, 7-6; Roger Taylor of Britain beat Ismail El Shafei of Egypt 6-3, 7-5 and Ross Cass of Australia eliminated Pat DuPre 6-4, 7-6, 6-1.

WEATHER ROUNDUP

For the second straight day snow and accompanying snarled travel arrangements cut into the sports schedule in the Northeast.

The storm, which had ended by afternoon, also wiped out three pro events because teams were unable to travel. The Portland Trail Blazers were unable to get into New York and the New Jersey Nets were unable to leave for San Antonio for their National Basketball Association games. The Minnesota at New York Islanders National Hockey League game also was postponed when the North Stars could not make airplane connections.

HOCKEY

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Racers, losing on the ice and at the box office, replaced Coach Ron Ingram and named veteran right winger Bill Goldsworthy as interim coach of the World Hockey Association team.

Ingram, who will remain with the Racers as general manager, said there had been "tremendous pressure" on team owner Nelson Skalbania but the decision to step down as coach was his alone.

Goldsworthy will continue as a player. Right winger Rosaire Paiement, sidelined with an eye injury, was named assistant coach.

COLLEGE

FINDLAY, Ohio — The Hoosier-Buckeye Conference has taken Wilmington College off a two-year probation for excessive financial aid to its athletes, James Houdeshell of Findlay College, the league president, announced.

Houdeshell said the probation was lifted because discrepancies in Wilmington's financial aid report were clarified, no official intent to violate the league's code were found and the school promised to prevent a recurrence of the problems.

The decision becomes effective immediately, Houdeshell said.

GENERAL

CHICAGO — Eddie Banks, father of Hall of Fame baseball player Ernie Banks, died Tuesday in Dallas, the Chicago Cubs office announced. He was 63.

QUEBEC — Daniel Richard, the 17-year-old member of the Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League who collapsed and died during a practice Monday, suffered a form of heart attack, team doctor Michel Dupont said.

Dupont said Richard suffered from a "very rare" congenital condition which can bring about the shrinking of an artery from the heart. He said death could have occurred at any time, "even sitting in a chair."

The doctor said medical examinations routinely conducted by hockey teams would not reveal such a condition.

HORSE RACING

NEW ORLEANS — Drop the Pigeon, $5, took the lead in the stretch and posted a 1¼-length victory over Famed Princess in the $20,000 Mardi Gras Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

Solomon shows versatility

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Harold Solomon has earned a reputation of being one of the world's better clay-court tennis players. Unfortunatley for Sweden's Mike Palm, Solomon also plays well indoors.

"People tend to associate me with clay," the Silver Springs, Md. native said after beating Palm 6-1, 6-4 in an opening round match in the Springfield Tennis Classic Tuesday.

"But with clay I can't control the ball as well as on a fast court," the top-seeded Solomon said.

Solomon was in total control in the opening set as he capitalized on almost every mistake by Palm.

"The first set was too easy," Solomon said. "Palm gave away points."

"The second set was nearly a turnaround," he said. "I gave away points I shouldn't have. I can't afford to make the same mistakes against Bernie Mitton (Solomon's opponent in the second round).

There were no suprises during the second day of competition with sixth-seeded Marty Riessen ousting Jiri Granat of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 4-6, 7-6. Riessen won the third-set tiebreaker 11-9 but was extended to match point twice by the unseeded Granat.

In other first round matches, 36-year-old Roger Taylor of Britain beat Ismail El Shafei of Egypt 6-3, 7-5; Ross Cass of Australia went to three sets to eliminate Pat DuPre of La Jolla, Calif., 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 and Alvaro Filll of Chile outlasted Joel Bailey of New York 7-6, 67, 6-0.

Newcombe is making comeback

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John Newcombe is setting his sights on a return to Wimbledon's prestigious center court.

The 6-foot-3 Australian, whose comeback bid began last week at Richmond, Va., Tuesday night overpowered Italy's seventh-seeded Carrado Barazzutti 6-2, 6-2.

Newcombe, unseeded in the 32-player World Championship Tennis event, broke through against Barazzutti in the fifth and eighth games of the opening set.

He exchanged service breaks in the second and third games of the next set, then won the fifth game with an ace and registered two subsequent breaks with volleys.

"If I keep playing as well as I am and keep my enthusiasm, I'll be building up for Wimbledon," said Newcombe, a threetime titleholder of the English tourney.

"I can't imagine coming back and playing farther," he noted, however. "There's just too much involved in it. If I wasn't married and didn't have three children, I'd think about it. I've got other things I want to do in life."

While Newcombe was reliving moments of past glory, fellow Australian Ken Rosewall, 43, was jarred rudely into the present by falling 6-3, 6-4 to fourth-seeded Dick Stockton.

"I guess when you play Rosewall they might as well fly the Australian flag," quipped Stockton of the pro-Rosewall crowd sentiments. "I didn't want it to go three sets, because then it would probably have gotten completely out of hand."

The Public Be Damned

Union lobbyists are warning U.S. Senators that S. 1883 is the "key" bill for 1978—far more important than legislation to combat the energy shortage, unemployment, or inflation.

The Public Be Damned

All too often, that seems to be the attitude of Big Labor. When they're determined to have their way in Congress, the wishes and needs of individual citizens don't mean a thing.

What will happen if S. 1883 becomes law?

Union organizers will have a massive array of new legal weapons with which to blackmail employers into signing compulsory unionism contracts.

Hundreds of thousands more workers will be forced to join or support unions against their will.

And union treasuries will swell with millions more dollars in forced union dues—funds that will be used to increase Big Labor's already enormous political power.

Most Americans strongly oppose the sort of forced unionism that S. 1883 would promote, as national surveys by respected polling organizations such as Gallup and Roper have clearly shown.

That's why union lobbyists try to disguise the real purpose of S. 1883 behind the phony title of "labor law reform." That's why they demand that the Senate push the bill through quickly as its first order of business in 1978.

They know that in order to become law, S. 1883 must be sneaked through Congress before the American people can be called to action.

Just over a year ago, in an attempt to lull the public into complacency, Big Labor hypocritically promised to set aside its own special interests in favor of America's broad national needs. A United Auto Workers spokesman told the New York Times:

"This is the moment of truth in our ability to deal effectively with unemployment and inflation. The other things can wait. Carter ought not to go too fast on any parochial stuff like Right to Work or reform of the labor laws."

But even as they made their misleading promises, union professionals were privately drafting a bill—S. 1883—to grant themselves vast new compulsory unionism powers.

With the backing of the Carter Administration, they slid it through the House of Representatives last October, disguised as a minor procedural measure. And they've cleared it for action on the Senate floor by early February.

But since October, the tide has begun to turn. The National Right to Work Committee and its supporters have launched a campaign to reveal the true intent of the phony labor "reform" bill.

As public protest builds against the union power grab, Big Labor officials are turning to threats and arm-twisting in an attempt to insure S. 1883's passage in the Senate.

Union lobbyists are warning U.S. Senators that S. 1883 is the "key" bill for 1978—far more important than legislation to combat the energy shortage, unemployment, or inflation.

Pass the "reform" bill as a first order of business, union officials are threatening Senators, or join the enemies list of those to be hit at election time.

The union bosses' steamroller must be stopped. Our elected representatives must not allow the greedy demands of a few Big Labor bosses to come before the wishes and needs of the majority of Americans.

And in spite of the awesome political clout of the Big Unions, S. 1883 can and will be stopped—if freedom-loving Americans contact their Senators and make their voices heard.

Please join with us in protesting not only this vicious bill, but the disgraceful way it is being railroaded through Congress.

To: Reed Larson, President

I agree that America's workers ought to be free to join unions if they want to, but that no one should be forced into doing so. Enclosed is my check for $_____ to help the National Right to Work Committee fight to preserve this freedom. Let me know what I can do to help.

Market posts gain

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 10.23 in Tuesday's trading, was up another 1.90 to 780.75 by noontime today.

In addition, they noted favorable earnings or dividend news in the last few days from such companies as General Motors, Sears Roebuck and Boeing.

Marshall Field was actively traded, down 1⅞ at 31⅞. The company announced plans for a Houston department store, possibly strengthening its case against Carter Hawley Hale Stores' plans to try to acquire Marshall Field.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .18 at 50.26. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added .34 to 124.00.

By DAVID LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — It's the most permanent floating clip joint in the West.

What began as a simple idea a year ago for Steve Ksieski has blossomed into what may be the biggest thing of its kind in the nation — mobile dog grooming.

Every day 10 of his vans leave a parking lot here for homes of pet owners — to brush, launder, dry and clip. The animals, mostly dogs, need only trot to the curb, where a van awaits them equipped with everything but a fireplug.

In air-conditioned comfort, with FM music soothing their spirits, the dogs receive the same treatment as if their owners had driven them to a parlor.

"But the difference is that the pet is in his accustomed environment," Ksieski expounded. "He can look out the door and see his home. He isn't exposed to other animals and possible diseases. And his owner isn't a nervous wreck from taking him in the car."

He got to thinking: With chicken to go and pizza to go and women to go, why not groomers to go? Some of the pet parlors have one or two vehicles, but nothing was being done on a grand scale.

Thus was born Mr. Groomer. With its 16 employees, the company now makes 1,500 house calls a month.

The destinations range from humble apartments to the not-so-humble dwellings of Eva Gabor and Andy Griffith.

"Usually it's dogs, but we once did a couple of guinea pigs whose owner wanted them to have a bath," Ksieski said. "And sometimes cat owners call us. For the cats we trim the nails, give a medicated shampoo and cut the coat if it is needed."

Upon arriving at a home, according to groomer Cindy Shelton, the first step is to hook up electricity via an extension cord from the van to the house. This is needed for the blower.

WTCC opposed to Panama treaty

ABILENE — The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has voiced strong opposition toward possible ratification of the Panama Canal Treaties pending before the Senate.

Joe A. Kloesel of Midland, chairman of the WTCC National Affairs Committee, said "the chamber's executive committee, at its regular quarterly meeting held at Odessa, adopted the position firmly believing that proposed ratification would not be in the best interest of the United States."

In a resolution the WTCC called attention to the fact that the Panama Canal has provided and continues to provide a significant service to the United States, Panama and countries throughout the world. The canal, since its completion, has been vital to the security and economy of the United States.

The chamber pointed out that a valid concern regarding ratification is the question of Panama's ability to properly manage and maintain the canal.

The WTCC resolution questions the contentions of some treaty proponents that giving up the canal would promote great improvements in goodwill towards the United States.

VIP wives plan oil museum visit

ODESSA — Wives of the regents and administrators of The University of Texas system Friday will tour the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in Midland.

Mrs. V. R. Cardozier, wife of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin president, is handling arrangements for the tour and luncheon for the wives, who are in visiting this area during a meeting of the UT system's Board of Regents Thursday and Friday at UTPB.

Wives of the regents include Mrs. Allan Shivers, Mrs. Dan C. Williams, Mrs. James E. Bauerle, Mrs. Edward Clark, Mrs. Sterling H. Fly, Mrs. Jess Hay and Mrs. Walter Sterling.

Among the administration wives are Mrs. E. D. Walker, wife of the UT system president; Mrs. Charles LeMaistre, wife of the UT system chancellor; Mrs. Wendell H. Nedderman, wife of the UT-Arlington president; Mrs. Arleigh B. Templeton, wife of the UT-El Paso president; Mrs. James W. Wagener, wife of the UT-San Antonio acting president; Mrs. Charles C. Sprague, wife of the Dallas Health Science Center president; Mrs. William C. Levin, wife of the president of the UT medical branch in Galveston; Mrs. R. Lee Clark, wife of the president of the UT system cancer center in Houston, and Mrs. Cardozier.

State hit by pollution

By PIET BENNETT

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — In 1975, George LeMunyon lost his first herd of dairy cows to chemical contamination. Using money from the court settlement, he bought a second. Last March, that herd too was found to be contaminated and had to be destroyed.

LeMunyon is the first Michigan farmer to be hit twice by the wave of chemical contaminants that has troubled Michigan for four years. He fears he won't be the last.

"If we don't watch out, I'm afraid we're going to be poisoned in this country real bad. There's something radically wrong," he says.

Michigan wrestled with pollution from chemical plants for more than a decade, but it wasn't until 1973 that public apprehensions became widespread. That year, the fire retardant PBB — polybrominated biphenyl — was inadvertently mixed into livestock feed.

The state still is smarting from the repercussions. The contamination cost citizens and corporations at least $60 million and led to an abortive movement to recall Gov. William Milliken. More than 600 farms were quarantined and nearly 30,000 cattle had to be destroyed and buried in a sandy pit along with hundreds of thousands of chickens and tons of butter, eggs and milk tainted with PBB.

Human health costs still are unknown. Scientists studying 1,100 Michigan residents, mostly farm dwellers, said in a preliminary report that the chemical seems to attack the body's disease-fighting system. One farmer told a public hearing that his 4-year-old son had a liver and spleen enlarged from PBB. A state-sponsored study of 105 persons, however, was inconclusive.

There is no sign that the problem is going away. In the last several months PBB appeared on five widely separated farms never exposed before. LeMunyon's second herd was contaminated by PCP — pentachlorophenol — a wood preservative.

Howard Tanner, head of the Department of Natural Resources, wrote in a November newsletter that toxic materials and hazardous wastes "will be with us forever." Tanner cited six recent chemical threats by name and warned, "There will be more."

Michigan has 116 chemical plants and a history of pollution. But William Turney, environmental protection chief for Tanner's department, contends: "Any state with urban, industrial areas has problems of this kind. Whether they've found them, I don't know."

Officials at the federal Environmental Protection Agency tend to agree. But not until December, when the EPA asked chemical plants to provide information on products and pollution hazards, did the agency devise ways of assessing the amount and kind of such pollution in each state.

After the PBB outbreak, Michigan passed laws requiring tests of all cattle heading for slaughter and lowering the permitted level of PBB in feed. Of the first 7,400 cattle checked under the new program, 139 had to be destroyed because of excess PBB.

To many farmers, state action seemed too little and too late. A group called the PBB action committee began a drive to recall Gov. Milliken. While it couldn't come close to the required 665,225 signatures, it focused attention on the politics of the problem.

PBB also has jammed the courts. Settling about 700 claims cost the two major firms involved in the 1973 leakage nearly $40 million. More than 100 suits await trial.

Intern program starts

ODESSA — Seven Midland students attending The University of Texas of the Permian Basin recently have begun a 16-week interm program at Bowie Elementary School in Midland and Odessa public schools.

The university operates teaching centers at the schools which have student teachers. Dr. Robert Gerry, professor of pedagogical studies, said one of the main advantages of operating these teaching centers is "student teachers, through the center, begin to see other aspects of how the school operates other than in one's own classroom. Thus, they receive a more accurate picture of how a school operates."

Most universities are not operated this way, Dr. Peter Ienatsch, professor of pedagogical studies, said.

"Usually courses are taught in the universities, and then students go to the schools to do their student teaching. Very often they are spread out over many schools," he said.

Toll-free calls now available

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced that business owners and other taxpayers in Midland County can now telephone his Odessa Field Office without charge for assistance with tax questions.

The new toll-free number for Midland County taxpayers is 563-3611, the comptroller announced.

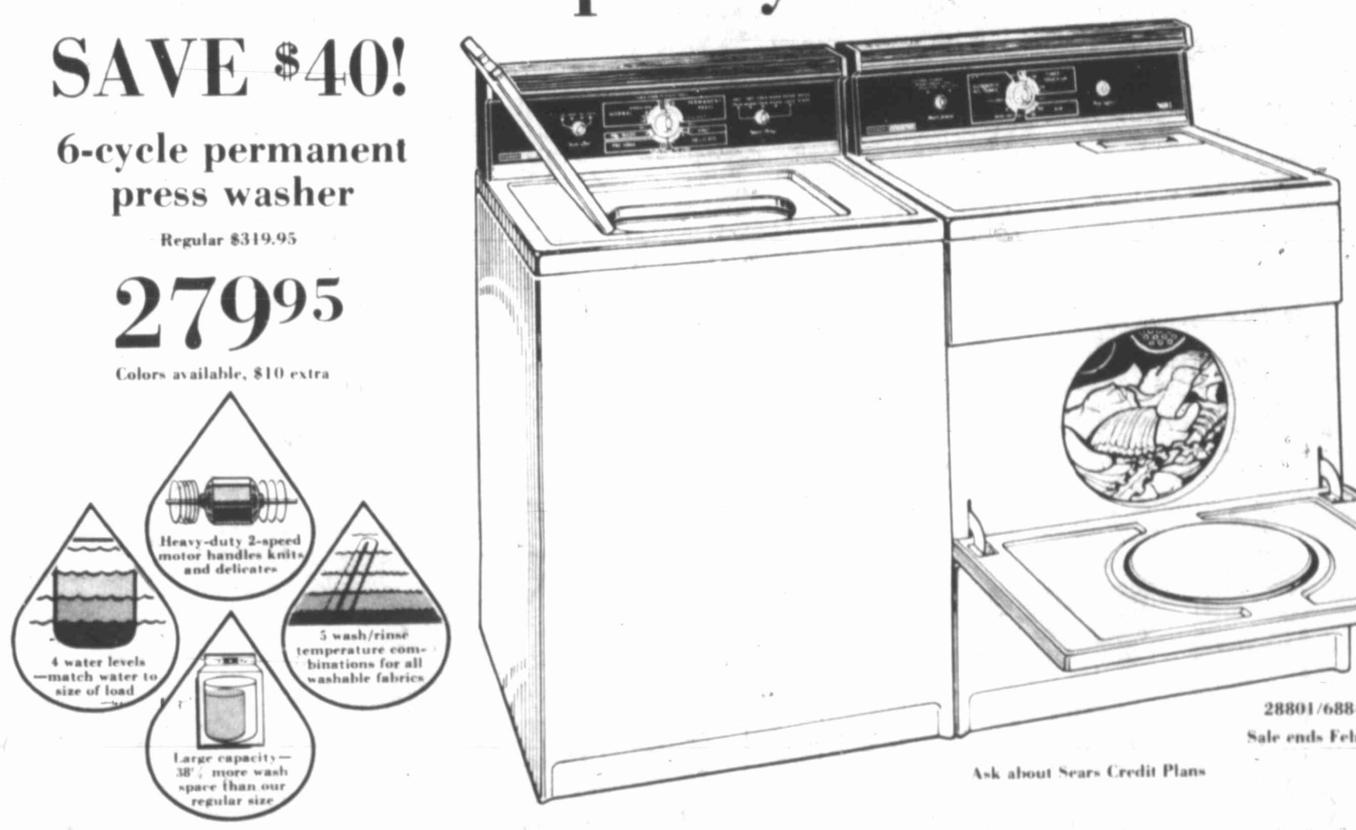

In the past, if a Midland County taxpayer needed to telephone the Odessa Field Office about a tax problem or to get a question answered, the taxpayer got stuck with the long distance telephone charge, Bullock said.

As a result, he said, many taxpayers are reluctant to contact the field office if they have problems or questions.

Ghost story helps restaurant prosper

By JULES LOH

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP)—There is a decided chill in the room. Yes, the place is definitely haunted. A haunted restaurant.

"Most of the people who ask to see the room know a girl was murdered there," said Luis Villacorta, the restaurant's manager, "but most of them don't know the details."

The room was once an up-stairs bedroom in a lovely old home built in 1749. The house remains the sturdy nucleus of a restaurant called the Wedgwood Inn, the storied bedroom now used for private dinner parties.

Yes, murder most foul was done there, and the details are more chilling than the eerie draft.

In the early spring of 1833, a recent immigrant named Antoine LeBlanc took a job with the Samuel Sayre family as a field hand, the only trade he knew.

But, as Antoine later explained through an interpreter, he resented Sayre treating him like a damn field hand. So on a chilly Sunday morning in May he enticed Samuel Sayre and his wife, Sarah, to the stable, took up a shovel, bashed in their heads and hid their bodies in a manure pile.

Next, he went up to the bedroom and similarly dispatched their sleeping servant girl, Phebe, and made off with the silverware.

A possee caught Antoine and the jury took 20 minutes to decide his fate. The date of the hanging was set, the scaffold built, and 12,000 people crowded the village green for the big event.

One of them was a professor from Princeton who, with the court's permission, stood by to try out a new invention called a battery. He wanted to see whether he could jolt Antoine back to life, hoping to advance science with sort of a reverse electrocution.

Dr. Canfield's job, by order of the court in pronouncing sentence, was to cut up Antoine into little pieces. He did as directed, and Antoine was finally laid to rest in a small box.

Well, not all of Antoine. Somebody else had gotten permission to skin him, and that was done. His hide was tanned and wallets offered later as momentoes of the occasion.

A half century later, when Morristown had grown into a fashionable country place for the rich and the cultured, a civic-minded citizen named A.W. Cutler made a hit at a YMCA fundraiser by exhibiting, along-side a goblet that had been Napoleon's and a necklace that had been Josephine's, one authentic Antoine LeBlanc wallet.

Cyprus protests report on rights

By JOHN M. GOSHKO
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Cyprus government has protested to the State Department that a still-secret official U.S. report on human rights in Cyprus is slanted in favor of Turkey and softpedals charges that Turkish troops are harassing Greek Cypriots.

The report is among those prepared by the State Department on 105 countries under a law requiring the administration to inform Congress annually on the human-rights situations in nations receiving U.S. military, economic or development aid.

Administration officials expect that when the reports are made public, probably within the next few days, they will provoke a storm of anger and protest from many of the countries involved.

Reinforcing this expectation of impending controversy was Cyprus's action in having its ambassador here lodge a strong protest with the department even before the reports are published.

Department sources acknowledged that the protest was made this past week after officials of the Greek-dominated government on the island saw a copy of the report. The sources also said they could not comment on the protest until Congress releases the report.

However, a copy of the report obtained by The Washington Post shows the department concluding that there was little evidence to support charges of human-rights violations by Turkish forces on Cyprus during 1977.

In 1974, after years of strife between the island's Greek majority and Turkish minority, Turkish forces invaded Cyprus and occupied roughly 40 percent of its territory. Since then, between 150,000 and 200,000 Greek Cypriots have abandoned the Turkish-controlled area, charging that they were persecuted or forcibly evicted.

Congress, with an eye on America's sizable Greek-descended population, imposed an embargo on U.S. military aid to Turkey. It acted despite the objections of the State Department, which has contended that the embargo seriously impedes U.S. relations with Turkey and weakens Western defenses on NATO's southern flank.

In protesting the human-rights report, the Cyprus government is understood to suspect the State Department of moving gingerly around Turkish sensibilities and trying to avoid a situation that could harden Congress's determination to keep the embargo in effect.

These charges are denied by State Department sources, who say the report represents a factual assessment of the situation based on the available evidence collected by U.S. diplomats.

The report notes that both sides have charged each other with frequent human-rights violations in the past, particularly during 1974. However, in assessing the situation during the past year, it finds no evidence of torture by either side and says that charges of "murder, rape and inhuman treatment," while still made by both sides, are inconclusive in terms of proof.

SAN ANTONIO — Marvin L. Longabaugh, a student at Midland High School in Midland, has been selected as one of 50 semi-finalists for the 1978 Piper Scholars Awards.

Since 1963, the Minnie Stevens Piper Foundation has awarded four-year scholarships to outstanding seniors in Texas high schools to the college or university of their choice in the state. This year more than $125,000 in awards will be given out to the finalists.

AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN—The Texas Water Commission has set a hearing for 10 a.m. March 30 before a hearing examiner on the application of W. T. Averitt III for a permit to maintain two reservoirs and to use water from them for irrigation in Ector County.

The reservoirs, known as Reservoirs Nos. 2 and 3, are located on Monahans Draw, a part of the Colorado River system.

The appliction seeks to impound up to 28 and 43 acre-feet in each, respectively, and to dirvert up to 1,485 acre-feet of water annually from Reservoir No. 3 to irrigate 495 acres out of a 960-acre tract.

The hearing will be in the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building.

Circus sees changes

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

VENICE, Fla. (AP) — Remember the story of the two guys who joined the circus and got a job sweeping out the elephant cages.

The work was onerous and odiferous and they griped all the time.

"Hey," said the boss roustabout, "if you guys hate doing this so much, why don't you quit."

Gunther Gebel-Williams, the world's greatest animal trainer with the Greatest Show on Earth, cleans out all the animal cages himself for his menagerie of lions, tigers, leopards, panthers, horses and elephants, so they'll get used to having him around. Not only that, but he also gives the

These are some of the things a columnist learns walking around the winter headquarters here of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus with owner Irving Feld and his son Kenneth.

"You know how you can tell the difference between a circus elephant and a zoo elephant?" Irv asked with considerable pride. "Look at their feet. Zoo elephants never have those white shiny toe nails." Almost on cue, Sally and Congo, two of the show's more ponderous pachyderms, did a little, or rather a big twinkle-toe two step to show of their recent pedicures.

Gunther, bare to the waist, was in the big cat cage alternately poking with a pole garnished with a sirloin steak and petting a young lion named Oscar, while an assortment of tigers, leopards and cougars watched from high stools like guests on a TV talk show.

"Circus people never stop rehearsing," said Kenneth Feld, who roams the world looking for new talent. "Gunther is working out a new act that will combine tigers and elephants and camels for the first time." The one he's got now is pretty sensational, like the first act finale where he rides in on the back of an elephant while holding a tiger on a leash."

Outside the cage, a midget was helping trim the fat from steaks piled high on a long table. Irving revealed that it costs $4,000 a year to keep a lion or a tiger in butcher bills alone. Each eats 25 pounds of meat a day, with the fat trimmed clean, alternating between two weeks of horse meat and two weeks of beef, with a dozen eggs every Sunday to keep their pelts looking gorgeous.

"Tigers and leopards may be an endangered species in Asia, but they aren't around here," said Irving. "They breed like mad in captivity and you can't give one away. Zoos don't want any more. That's why Russian and Bulgarian circuses go in for trained bears. They're a lot cheaper to feed than the big cats."

With aerialists swinging overhead and jugglers tossing Indian clubs about, Irving led the way through a profusion of animal cages, property trunks marked "Lou Jacobs" and "Duane Thorpe" and racks of costumes gittering with rhinestones and real ostrich feathers out to the hoofed animal compound where over the weekend two baby camels had been born.

"Both females, very rare," Kenneth said. "Strange thing. We haven't had a female camel born in the show for years and years and now we get two in three days. I'm going to name them Egypt and Tel Aviv after the peace initiative."

The Red Unit, one of the two shows touring 80 cities under the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey name, was getting ready for the big "move out," going through its final rehersals before loading its 300 performers, 200 animals and thousands of tons of props, scenery and costumes onto 38 railroad cars for a 49-week tour. Since the big top folded its tent forever in 1956 in Pittsburgh, the circus has played indoors in auditoriums and armories. New York's Madison Square Garden, with an 11-week run at Eastertide, remains the big time for the big show, as it has going back 108 years to when the old original Garden was built to house the original Ringling Brothers extravaganza.

The brothers, Otto, John, Charles, Alfred and Al, look down from vintage and invaluable circus posters adorning Irving Feld's office at winter quarters, which has a big picture window looking out on the rehersal ring. Irving doesn't have to look at John Ringling's old grandfather clock in the corner, the one with the clown face, to tell what time it is. He looks out the window, and if the high wire acts are up there, he knows it's time for lunch, and if the acrobats are on it's dinnertime. The dog acts come on at breakfast.

Just as there is a chronology to the daily circus routine, so too is there a geography of where the talent comes from.

"We get our acts from almost every country except Russia," Irvin explained. "They won't give them extended visas, but we have 80 to 90 performers from the other Eastern bloc countries, who are allowed out on two-year visas that can be renewed and usually are. In general, the flying acts come from South and Central America, the acrobats from Eastern Europe and the wild animal acts from Germany and Switzerland."

Irving Feld, a circus buff who broke into show business booking rock 'n' roll artists into auditoriums and field houses in the 1950s, gets dozen of letters every day from kids, like himself, wanting to run away and join the circus. His son Kenneth started out selling programs.

"God forbid, if we took any of these kids, 6 and 7 years old, we'd get arrested for encouraging runaways," Irv said. "I write to them and tell them they can join our Clown College when they turn 17 if they're still interested. I began the college 10 years ago, because when I took over the circus, we were down to 11 clowns, and six of them were in their 70s and 80s. It was a dying art. Now these kids who wrote to me then when they were 7 years old are being heard from again so I'll have to make good on my promise. That's show biz."

Lee speech group wins at Amarillo

AMARILLO—Lee High School speech and drama students won their fifth consecutive sweepstakes or overall award at the Amarillo Tascosa High School Ivitational Forensic Tournament Friday and Saturday.

Special awards were given to Jill Hawley as outstanding individual speaker and Craig Stanford as outstanding interpreter.

In addition, since this tournament was a Texas Forensic Association qualifying contest, Lee High added seven students to its list of those who will compete in the state tournament. So far, Lee High has 30 entries for the state contest.

Among the finalists and winners at the speech tournament were:

— POETRY READING: Vicki Ballew, finalist.

—HUMOROUS INTERPRETATION: Craig Stanford, second place.

Popularity of smoke detectors could mean higher prices, maker believes

DALLAS (AP) — The popularity of those small, smokesniffing objects hanging in millions of American homes may soon make it tougher to find one — at bargain prices anyway.

Wilbur Ogden, inventor of the first battery-powered smoke detector, said competition has slashed the price on the little lifesavers to the point where profit margins are at a minimum for producers and retailers.

"There are companies with smoke alerts on the market now for $20 that are offering $5 rebates but some of them are hurting," he said. "They used the rebate as a gimmick thinking only about 20 percent of their customers would file for the refund. As it turned out, the percentage has been closer to 80."

By late this year, he said, the price of smoke alarms should slip to a permanent low for the less exotic models — about $15.

The inventor predicted some of the smaller maufacturers will go broke or switch to more profitable products.

But the demand will still be there.

"Americans realize the value of smoke detectors to both their homes and lives, and they're going to continue buying them," he said. "We have three different models now and there will be more in the future."

One Fyrnetics detector offers a radio control unit that sounds an additional alarm in another part of the home. It can receive signals from the first unit up to 200 feet away.

EXXON TENNESSEE TOWBOAT and barges wait on Ohio River for clearance of ice-bound Markland lock and dam near Cincinatti. After delivering 180,000 barrels of fuel to terminals as far north as Pittsburgh, the tow was returning to Exxon's Baton Rouge, La., refinery for loading. Despite recent blizzard conditions and delayed traffic on Ohio River, the company reports its inventories of heating fuels in Midwest — as well as Northwest — are normal.

Shortage of natural gas will hit California hard

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Within three years 12 million Southern Californians might begin to feel the effect of the worst, and most personal, energy crisis so far — the shortage of natural gas.

A true crisis can be averted if government leaders make reasoned decision soon, within the next six months or so.

But if they do not, and if the gas crisis comes, it would affect Californians in the very basic elements of their lives: their jobs; how they cook their food; whether their homes are warm; if they are to wash their bodies with hot water or cold.

Southern California is the most natural gas-dependent society in the world. The region has lived, and its economy has thrived, off this plentiful, cheap and clean source of fuel.

Natural gas is quiet and always on tap. It is invisible. You never see it except when you burn it up. Gas heats 92 percent of the homes and apartments, cooks the food in 76 percent of all residences and warms the water in 95 percent of the households.

But we have been using it up and have not done anything about it until it was almost too late. New supplies are becoming available but they are costly, involved in environmental controversy and embroiled in a quagmire of political dispute or indecision.

Many of these new supplies are to be imported from foreign countries. A federal government that is still smarting from the Arab oil embargo of 1973 finds itself reluctant to approve major imports of another critical energy source.

It is not a question of when the gas shortage will come. It is here. Southern California's natural gas supplies from traditional sources in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico have declined precipitously since the early 1970s.

Southern California Gas Co., which serves the region (directly to users in most of it and by wholesaling gas to the San Diego area), will receive 15 percent less gas from these sources this year than last.

At the moment, there is no other ready supply to make up the deficit. Nor is there likely to be next year, when the supply is bound to decline even further. The following year: in 1980? Maybe.

In effect, gas has been rationed in California and the nation as a whole since 1973 under a "curtailment" program instituted by the old Federal Power Commission (now the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission). This form of rationing — a forced sharing of the shortage — so far has hit only the biggest customers in business and industry and they have developed other fuel sources, mostly oil.

The major struggle by the gas industry and government now is to arrest this decline so that the shortage will not begin to affect the millions of small industrial, commercial and residential customers who always have had a firm supply of gas and cannot switch to another fuel without a costly and time-consuming conversion.

The decisions now facing government are complex and difficult ones involving longterm commitments and heavy investments of both money and political capital.

For example, state and federal regulators are being forced to make decisions on importation of liquefied natural gas (LNG) from places such as Algeria and Indonesia sooner than they would like to. If they were more certain of the prospects of other, more traditional supplies — such as increased domestic production if gas prices were deregulated — they would have more time in which to make those decisions.

But there are few such certainties other than the fact that what we have now is getting less and less with each passing day. Nor will the completion of a project like the $10-$15 billion Alcan pipeline make things suddenly all right again, as in the old days when they sunk a new well in the Permian Basin in Texas and let the gas flow at 10 cents a thousand cubic feet as if it would flow forever.

An expert in planning the strategy of future gas supplies, Robert Solomon of the California Energy Commission, is not nearly the doomsayer some gas company officials are. Still, he foresees no easy answers and said California is entering a new era of "permanent uncertainty."

Solomon explained it this way: "Are we (he said, echoing a reporter's question) in a transition period? Yeah. But I don't think things will smooth out. The period we are transitioning into is going to become permanent uncertainty and a lot of juggling of 6 or 8 or 10 different options to try to maintain some equilibrium."

Right now, at least six different types of gas supply programs are awaiting critical decisions in Washington, D.C., or Sacramento. All vitally affect California.

The major decisions will come from the White House, Congress and the new Department of Energy with its Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) and the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA), which oversees imports of energy. In California, the immediate question is whether to allow construction of a marine terminal at Pt. Conception to handle LNG coming in by ship from Indonesia and southern Alaska.

Environmental laws continue to bog down U.S. energy projects

TULSA, Okla. — U.S. energy projects are bogging down in a mire of environmental laws and regulations — some even before they receive boardroom approval.

In its Feb. 6 issue, the Oil & Gas Journal cites scores of major projects either slowed or shelved in the face of increasingly complicated and costly environmental rules.

Costs of some projects have tripled while companies waited for permits or environmental rulings. In the mid-1970s the American Petroleum Institute conducted a survey showing the industry paid more than $2 billion a year to comply with environmental regulations.

The figure is almost certainly higher than that now.

Industry's troubles are complicated by conflicting local, state and federal authorities, as well as opposition from the courts and citizens groups.

"At issue is the very real prospect that our government will soon be procedurally incapable, if it's not already so, of allowing needed future energy projects to go forward," said an executive of a major pipeline project.

Biggest problems for industry are the regulations being generated under the Clean Air Act and its amendments and the National Environmental Policy Act.

One such regulation is the offset rule of the Environmental Protection Agency. It requires that enough existing pollution be cleaned up in areas not meeting federal air-quality standards to offset pollution introduced by new industry — or even to improve air quality.

And there is more to come. EPA is drafting rules to enforce three other pieces of environmental legislation dating back to 1974 and 1976.

Already, more than a dozen refinery-construction projects scheduled for the U.S. East Coast have been blocked by local or state actions based on environmental grounds.

Tex-Flor well finals

Texas Crude Oil Co. and Florida Gas Corp. No. 5-9 Normam is another new well in the Tex Flor (Wolfcamp) field of Gaines County.

Operators reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 201 barrels of 30.5-gravity oil, no water, through perforations from 9,040 to 9,140 feet after 1,500 gallons of acid.

Location is 20 miles northeast of Seminole and 780 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 9, block C-45, psl survey.

Schleicher gets offset

T. C. Meador of Eldorado No. 2-22 T. C. Meador is a new project one location southeast of the discovery well of the one-well Cody Bell, Southwest (Wolfcamp gas) field of Schleicher County.

It is 7½ miles northwest of Eldorado and will be drilled to 5,400 feet.

3 Wildcats announced

Neil R. Morgan of Dallas announced plans to re-enter a pair of temporarily abandoned wildcats in Kent County.

The projects, staked by JRS Exploration Co. are No. 1 Roy K. Furr and No. 2 Roy K. Furr.

No. 1, 1,882 feet from north and 869 feet from east lines of section 48, block 4, H&GN survey, will be deepened to 1,588 feet.

No. 2 is 1,320 feet from south and 2,500 feet from west lines of sectiom 48, block 4, H&GN survey. It will be deepened to 1,542 feet.

NEW TEST

Davis Oil Co. of Houston No. 1 Bilby Wallace will be drilled as a 5,000-foot wildcat in Kent County, five miles southeast of Clairemont and ½ mile southeast of the Wallace Ranch (Noodle Creek) field.

Site is 990 feet from and east lines of L. Y. Trout survey No. 9.

Pearson-Sibert Oil Co. of Texas No. 1 Bodine is a new wildcat in Mitchell County, two miles north of Colorado City.

The 4,200-foot operation is 2,173 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 21, block 26, T&P survey. There is no nearby production.

WARD RE-ENTRY

Exxon Corp. will re-enter its No. 1 Troy N. Eiland, former Devonian producer in the Howe multipay field of Ward County and attempt completion in the Pennsylvanian.

CROCKETT TEST

C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., of Midland spotted location for a 1,600-foot test in the east side of the Onlaw (Queen gas) field of Crockett County.

It is No. 2-65-E Halff, 660 feet from north and 2,130 feet from east lines of section 65, block 1, I&GN survey and eight miles south of Iraan.

PUCKETT TESTS

Phillips Petroleum Co. and Chevron USA, Inc., each have staked locations for a test in the Puckett, East (Strawn) field of Pecos County.

Phillips No. 1-P Mitchell is to be drilled to 11,700 feet one mile southwest of the Strawn discovery in the multipay field.

Location is 890 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 27, block 100, EL&RR survey. It also is 35 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

GAS WELLS

A covey of five gas wells have been completed by Wood, McShane & Thams of Monahans to extend the Block A-34 (Yates) field from 1½ to two miles north in Gaines County.

No. 1 Elam was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 2,745,700 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 3,037 to 3,081 feet. The pay was acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 30,000 gallons.

No. 1 Mayo was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 621,600 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 3,026 to 3,072 feet after 1,000 gallons of acid and 30,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Wood, McShane & Thams No. 1-A Mayo was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 2,675,400 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 3,028 to 3,073 feet.

The operator's No. 1-B Mayo was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 652,100 cubic feet of dry gas per day after a 1,000-gallon acid treatment and a 30,000-gallon fracture treatment.

The No. 1 Simpson, 660 feet from north and west lines of section 23, block A-22, psl survey, was finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 621,700 cubic feet of gas per day.

Production was through perforations from 3,054 to 3,097 feet after 1,000 gallons of acid and 30,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

REEVES WELL

WTG Exploration, Inc., of Midland No. 1-32 Hill is a new well in the Reaves, North (3,200) area of Reeves County, 10 miles south of Orla.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 2.8 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 3,011 to 3,051 feet after 750 gallons of acid and 5,000 gallons of fracture solution. There was no condensate produced with the gas.

The well extends the field three miles west. The well also is 2¼ miles east of the Marsh, South (Delaware) gas field.

KIMBLE TESTS

Cominco America, Inc., of Midland spotted locations for six gas wildcats in Kimble County.

No. 1-B Rieck, a 4,200-foot operation, is 2⅜ miles northeast of the Hendrick-Kimble (Canyon gas) field and 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 8, TCRR survey, abstract 1567.

No. 1 Charles Simon, a 3,000-foot wildcat, is three miles northwest of the Bolt, West (Strawn gas) field and 1,193 feet from north and west lines of section 41, block 4, TW&NG survey and 5½ miles northeast of Roosevelt.

Comimco No. 1 Smith will be drilled as a 3,300-foot wildcat 3⅝ miles northeast of the Bass (Strawn gas) field and three miles north of Roosevelt.

CROCKETT WILDCAT

William Perlman of Houston will drill No. 2-A Lillian M. Hudspeth Memorial Hospital as a 10,000-foot gas wildcat in Crockett County, 14 miles southeast of Ozona.

It is 1,268 feet from south and 933 feet from west lines of section 3, block H, GC&SF survey and ⅝ mile southeast of Strawn gas production in the Angus field.

Explorer sites staked

Supron Energy Corp. of Dallas will drill No. 1 Conoco-Federal as a 6,600-foot test 13 miles northeast of Dexter.

It is 990 feet from west and 1,980 feet from south lines of section 8-11s-27e and 1½ miles northwest of the Coyote (Queen) field and seven miles west of the Chisum (Devonian) field.

QUEEN TEST

McLellan Oil Corp. of Roswell, N. M., No. 2 Koorpac is to be dug as a 3,100-foot Queen sand wildcat in Chaves County in an area of depleted Queen sand wells.

Location is 990 feet from south and 330 feet from east lines of section 13-15s-30 and 27 miles southeast of Hagerman.

DRY HOLES

CROCKETT — Gulf Oil Corp. No. 4 Parker Ranch Co., Ltd-State, in the Bouscaren (Strawn) field, 1,088 feet from south and 7,160 feet from east lines of section 52, block HH, GC&SF survey, eight miles north of Iraan, td 7,890 feet.

DAWSON — Reserve Oil Co., Inc. No. 2 Coseka Middleton, wildcat, 660 feet from north and 500 feet from east lines of tract 26, Munger Sub. League 4, Taylor csl survey 8½-miles west of Lamesa, td 22,461 feet.

MENARD — Northern Natural Gas Co. No. 1-34 Whitehead, wildcat, 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 24, Clay Tipton survey, 10 miles north of Menard, td 2,885 feet.

PECOS — Monsanto Co. No. 1 Atkinson-Bunger, wildcat, 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 22, block 136, T&STL survey, 25 miles southeast of Fort Stockton, td 22,379 feet, preparing to plug and abandoned.

RUNNELS — E. B. Fletcher No. 3-C Memry Hunter, in the Deike field, 1,400 feet from southwest and 2,600 feet from northwest lines of George Berry survey, Abstract A-25, two miles southeast of Wingate, td 4,670 feet.

SUTTON — NMH Operators No. 1 Elmer Wilson, wildcat, 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 25, block 5, TW&NG survey, 20 miles east of Sonora, td 4,407 feet.

Spy plane may be cause of loud booms

PORT LAVACA, Texas (AP) — Two powerful booms that rocked four Texas coastal counties last week may have been caused by a supersonic SR-71 spy plane slipping — not so silently — through the upper atmosphere, say Air Force officials.

The mysterious blasts, which authorities said shook buildings and rattled windows, occurred about noon last Friday.

Almost simultaneously, residents in Matagorda, Victoria, Goliad and Calhoun counties called police, news services and neighbors to find out what happened. One startled fisherman called it a "hellacious big noise."

An Air Force spokesman at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin said Tuesday night the Strategic Air Command reconnaissance plane, which travels three times the speed of sound at more than 85,000 feet, was on a training mission in the area at the time of the booms.

A spokesman at a nearby U.S. Coast Guard station said no aircraft appeared on the station's radar screens when the booms were heard. But the SR71 is armed with electronic "spoofing" gadgetry capable of wiping its image off radar screens.

The craft, a successor to the U-2 spy plane, was apparently not based at a Texas naval station or Air Force base. The nearest SR-71s are based in California, the spokesman said.

Port Lavaca Mayor K.A. Wallis said Monday it had been five or six years since the area was last rocked by a sonic boom.

Residents of the coastal area had remained mystified about what caused the booms and not everyone was convinced Tuesday it was a sonic boom.

Bob James, chief meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Victoria, said he believed the sounds were sonic booms but couldn't explain how the noise managed to trigger alarm over a fourcounty area at what appeared to be the precise same moment.

Court allows state to authorize amputation

By BILL RAWLINS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state Court of Appeals says it has given the state authority to cut off the gangrenous feet of a 72-year-old woman because she refused to choose between amputation and death.

"This is not a 'right to die' case," Judge Henry Todd wrote in a ruling issued Tuesday by the three-judge appeals panel. "If the patient would assume and exercise her rightful control over her own destiny by stating that she prefers death to the loss of her feet, her wish would be respected."

Mary Northern, 72, was reported in fair condition at General Hospital three weeks after she was taken by police from the partly burned home where she lived alone. Her feet were frostbitten and gangrene set in. Without amputation, doctors say, she has only a 10 percent chance to live.

Todd visited Miss Northern at her hospital bedside on Jan. 28 and noted then, "The patient wants to live and keep her dead feet, too, and refuses to consider the impossibility of such a desire."

The 22-page Court of Appeals opinion allows the state to authorize amputation when doctors believe it necessary to save her life, even though they agree she has only a 50 percent chance of surviving the surgery.

Miss Northern's lawyers declined to comment on a possible appeal. Justice William Harbison of the state Supreme Court refused in January to step in and delay the operation. Miss Northern's lawyers still could ask the state Supreme Court to review the case.

The opinion, supported by Presiding Judge James Parrott, was accompanied by a separate, concurring opinion by Judge Frank Drowota, who wrote, "Though Miss Northern's case, is to me, undoubtedly close to the constitutional limits of the state's power over an individual, it is within those limits."

Attorney Carol McCoy, representing Miss Northern, challenged the constitutionality of the state law allowing persons over 60 years of age to be placed in protective custody by the state Department of Human Services.

Supreme Court says Roloff's rights not violated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today ruled that homes for troubled youth operated by radio evangelist Lester Roloff are subject to state regulation.

Without writing a new opinion, the supreme court agreed with the Austin Court of Civil Appeals that state regulation does not violate Roloff's constitutional right of free exercise of religion.

Roloff had been denied a jury trial by an Austin district judge who found that there was no fact issue regarding the constitutional question that warranted submission to a jury.

In its Oct. 5, 1977, opinion, the appeals court stated:

"Even though appellant Roloff and other witnesses for the appellant earnestly and vehemently assert that such a conflict exists and further, that the facts of such conflict should be put to a jury, we hold that the testimony is nothing more than a bald conclusion entirely unsupported by any factual evidence from which a jury could draw a differing conclusion."

Roloff had steadfastly refused to obtain licenses as required by the state Child Care Licensing Act.

He also refused to allow inspectors for the State Department of Human Resources — formerly the welfare department — to enter his Rebekah Home for Girls, Lighthouse Home for Boys and Anchor Home for Boys, all in South Texas.

The appeals court said that the provisions of the licensing act "do not in any way conflict with appellant's beliefs nor do they restrict the exercise of those beliefs in any way."

One of Roloff's 16 points on appeal to the Supreme Court was that the homes fell under an exemption for therapeutic camps and institutions, saying that "almost every child sent to these homes, by parent or court, suffers a spiritual sickness that God alone can heal."

His lawyers maintained that the court could not know for sure whether there was a conflict with Roloff's freedom of religion unless a jury made such a finding.

"To tell a party that their beliefs do not conflict with a given statute as a matter of law over the party's objection to the contrary robs the party of the very essence of their beliefs and substitutes a plastic form of decreed belief in its place," Roloff's appeal said.

It said that Roloff's freedom to believe as he wished remained unviolated but his freedom "to act in society is not inviolate and is subject to reasonable requirements by a state (or the United States) for the protection of the society which extends the right of religious freedom."

Capitol Hill makes nuclear pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate and House agree almost unanimously that the United States should try to limit the spread of atomic weapons by putting tighter controls on nuclear exports.

By an 88-3 vote Tuesday, the Senate approved a non-proliferation bill similar in practically all major areas to a measure adopted on a 411-0 vote in the House last year.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, floor manager of the Senate legislation, said he foresees little difficulty in reaching an agreement on a single version when Senate and House negotiators meet in conference. The bill has been on Capitol Hill for more than two years.

Califano backs plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's welfare plan provides for more jobs and more sweeping changes than a key congressman's proposal, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. says.

The secretary of health, education and welfare, pushing for the administration's plan, told a Senate finance subcommittee Tuesday that Carter's proposal would create some 1.4 million jobs.

A proposal by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, would create some 500,000 jobs, Califano said.

Carter also would start a new program of cash benefits, while Ullman wants to retain existing programs such as food stamps, Supplemental Security Income and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

"Americans are not satisfied with the current hodge-podge of welfare programs," Califano said. "They want change and they want systematic change."

Califano also said a computer search in 24 states and the District of Columbia has uncovered 13,584 persons receiving federal welfare benefits in more than one jurisdiction.

Poisoned lemon feared work of terrorist group

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A lemon injected with mercury has been found in Belgium and police say they fear it might have been poisoned by the same people who contaminated oranges in several other European countries last week.

The lemon was found Tuesday in Heverlee, near the university town of Louvain. Police said it was brought to them by a woman and was found to contain mercury after it was analyzed.

Police said they did not know what country the lemon came from.

Oranges injected with mercury have been found in West Germany, Holland and Sweden. Authorities said they were imported either from Spain or Israel but that they did not know where the fruit was contaminated.

Six children in Holland were hospitalized after eating contaminated oranges but all were released after treatment.

A group calling itself the "Arab Revolutionary Army, Palestinian Commando," claimed responsibility for poisoning the oranges in letters to the Dutch and West German governments. But the Palestine Liberation Organization said there was no such group and that the PLO was not involved.

The letters claimed the oranges were poisoned to damage the Israeli economy. Oranges are Israel's biggest agricultural product for export.

Dutch officials said they doubted the claim because some of the tainted fruit was from Spain.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration Tuesday formally urged Congress to pass the Humphrey-Hawkins "full employment" bill, but top officials conceded they don't know yet how to achieve the measure's goal of trimming the jobless rate to 4 percent by 1983 without exacerbating inflation.

Testifying before a House Education and Labor subcommittee, Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, assured panel members Carter "fully supports" the new bill as a "broad and flexible instrument" for policy-making.

However, Schultze said that, while the White House hopes to make "significant progress" in reducing unemployment over the next few years, "we do not yet have answers to all the problems" concerning joblessness among the hard-to-employ.

"I cannot, therefore, assure you that we will be able to achieve a 4 percent unemployment rate by 1983 without risking more inflation," he told the subcommittee. He termed it "unlikely" the goal could be reached without starting special programs for the hard-to-employ.

Schultze made his remarks in a final round of testimony before the subcommittee begins formal drafting of the measure Wednesday morning. House leaders hope to send the bill to the floor by March 1.

Subcommittee Republicans are planning to offer a series of amendments aimed at stiffening the bill's goals for reducing the inflation rate by setting a specific 3 percent wage-price target for 1983. However, their bid is expected to be defeated.

Schultze's testimony in support of the bill marked something of a turnabout. Before he joined the administration 13 months ago, Schultze had been the first private economist to come out publicly against an earlier version of the measure. His criticisms dealt it a severe setback.

Since then, however, the council chairman has persuaded sponsors of the measure to dilute the bill substantially from its earlier format. The new version does little more than set broad targets for unemployment and require the president to report on what he is doing to meet them.

In his testimony Tuesday, Schultze conceded that, "Given the present structure of labor markets, it is unlikely that a 4 percent unemployment rate could be achieved through aggregate demand policies alone without at the same time causing increased inflation."

And Marshall told the panel that, if the administration does nothing to propose "structural" programs to aid the hard-core unemployed, the most it could do by 1983 without worsening the inflation rate would be to reduce the jobless rate to 4.75 percent from the current 6.3 percent.

Schultze insisted on one hand that "this does not mean that a 4 percent unemployment rate by 1983 is unachievable ....It merely means that we cannot rely solely on monetary and fiscal measures to get there." It was then, however, that he admitted, "we do not yet have answers" on how to go about it.

Schultze repeatedly disputed GOP suggestions that trying to reach the 4 percent goal would exacerbate inflation, saying at one point, "I can assure you that the administration would not endorse this bill if it threatened to aggravate our inflationary problem."

At the same time, however, he warned it would be "dangerous" to try to establish a specific goal for inflation, as Republicans are seeking, because "there is no single number that is appropriate. Anything you set, except zero, we would want to do better."

LaNell Brunson Vaughan, 33, of U.S. Route 3 was listed in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning following a traffic accident Tuesday afternoon.

According to police, the accident occurred at the intersection of Interstate Highway 20 south service road and County Road 1210 South.

A vehicle driven by Leland Leroy Taylor of Route 3, was westbound on the service road, as was the vehicle driven by Mrs. Vaughan, when the two collided.

Commissioner's action to reduce gas rates

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has refused to rehear Southern Union Gas Company's protest of commission action denying a natural gas rate increase in several Midland-area cities.

The commission's action should reduce rates on the next billing period for residential and commercial users in Monahans, Wink, Barstow, Pecos and Pyote. Gas costs will decrease 2.5 percent, pending a final appeal which the gas supplier may or may not make within 30 days.

In addition, the commission has ordered refunds to go to users for overcharges paid on natural gas since June 25, 1976. That is the date Southern Union initiated increased gas rates, which were protested by the cities and recently overtuned by the commission.

Under RRC rules, a gas company may begin charging increased rates when it files notice with the commission, but the supplier must set aside money for refunds if the commission decides the increases are not warranted, as it did in this case.

Repayment will be calculated by classes of customers—residential and commercial—and will be refunded through a five cent per mcf (thousand cubic feet) credit on future bills.

For example, if under the new rates a consumer uses 10 mcf of gas in a month for a cost of $20, the resulting 50 cent credit will reduce his bill to $19.50.
