Reagan seeks backing on guerrilla aid

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is enlisting conservative leaders of Washington's national defense establishment to help sell Congress on his request for $14 million for guerrillas battling Nicaragua's leftist government.

Hoping to demonstrate bipartisan support for the controversial plan, Reagan was meeting today with James R. Schlesinger, defense secretary in the Ford administration; Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser in the Carter White House; and Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who served four years as Reagan's ambassador to the United Nations.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes described the three as supporters of Reagan's proposal.

Henry A. Kissinger, secretary of state in the Nixon and Ford administrations, was sending Reagan a letter endorsing the initiative, Speakes said. He said Kissinger "will be there in spirit."

The meeting, one day after Reagan returned to the White House from a 10-day California vacation, is the president's first salvo in twin battles with Capitol Hill on Central America and a politically risky budget plan that would kill 17 popular domestic programs and limit Social Security benefit increases.

The budget plan is scheduled to come to the floor of the Senate on April 22; the Nicaraguan proposal will come up for a vote a day later.

On both issues, the administration admits it lacks enough votes to win now, but says Reagan will make a major push to rally support.

The White House also is expected to decide this week whether to change plans calling for Reagan to visit a cemetery next month to honor German soldiers killed in the "Battle of the Bulge" in 1944.

Faced with angry criticism from veterans and Jewish groups, the administration is considering whether to alter his itinerary, perhaps adding a "balancing event" such as a stop at a synagogue or Nazi concentration camp.

Missing woman's identity released

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire this morning identified a 27-year-old woman, missing since about 9:30 p.m. Friday, who is suspected as being the victim of foul play.

Sheriff's Lt. Mark Donaldson released a photograph of Lois Ann Lloyd, 2519 Judy, an oil-field worker, whose burned out car was found about 5 a.m. Saturday about two miles west of West Loop 250 on an Interstate-20 service road in Midland County.

After the fire was extinguished, Midland County sheriff's deputies examined the car and found fragments of a skull, brain matter and hair, along with a quantity of blood.

Around noon Saturday, an oil-field worker found similar body parts and a pool of blood near a pump jack on a Shell Oil Co. lease about half a mile east of FM 866 in far west Ector County, between I-20 and West University.

Donaldson said this morning body parts and other evidence gathered by investigating officers had been sent to the DPS crime lab for testing and results may be available this afternoon, which may determine if Ms. Lloyd had been killed.

He said hair samples found at both scenes match the color of that of the missing woman.

Donaldson also said jewelry found near the pump jack has been positively identified as belonging to Ms. Lloyd.

Tax deadline fast approaching

But 'freedom' still two weeks away

By JIM LUTHER AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — This is Tax Day 1985 — the deadline for most Americans to file their federal income tax returns. But for the average person, Tax Freedom Day is still two weeks away.

While as many as 10 million couples and individuals were putting the finishing touches on their returns, the private Tax Foundation was disclosing that most people will have to work until April 30 to pay their federal, state and local taxes. That is one day longer than last year.

If all the taxes paid by businesses and individuals were divided equally among the work force, the foundation said, each person would have to work 2 hours and 38 minutes every 8-hour day to pay a share. That's one minute longer than in 1984 but five minutes less than in 1980, before the biggest tax cut in history was approved by the federal government.

The Internal Revenue Service was working overtime today to process some of the millions of returns that have piled up because of bugs in a $103 million computer. Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. insists most of the problems have been solved and that people who file their returns on time will get their refunds by June 1. A delay beyond that date means the IRS has to pay interest at an annual rate of 13 percent.

About 101 million couples and individuals are expected to file returns this year and 80 percent of them will get refunds averaging more than $800.

Through April 5, about 60 million returns had been received. Another 35 million are expected by April 19. More than 3.5 million people will ask for and receive automatic four-month filing delays, although they'll have to estimate and pay their tax by tonight. Some will win a delay until June 17 by being out of the country today. And other returns will struggle in later in the year.

Elsewhere on Tax Day: — The IRS ordered its walk-in offices and nationwide "hot line" telephone service to remain open until 6:30 p.m. local time to accommodate last-minute filers.

— H&R Block's 8,000 offices were helping hundreds of thousands of people complete their returns, at prices starting at $12. The company, which prepares close to 10 percent of all federal returns, says more and more people are delaying the inevitable.

"It has something to do with the economy," guessed Harry Buckley, a vice president at Block's Kansas City, Mo., headquarters. "When the economy is bad, people file earlier because 80 percent get refunds and they want to get their money. But with the economy picking up over the last few years, they're filing later."

— Savings institutions expected a land-office business from last-minute filers looking to cut their taxes by investing in an Individual Retirement Account.

— People in New England and in New York (except New York City) and the counties of Suffolk, Westchester, Rockland and Nassau were thankful that today was Patriots Day. That is a legal holiday in Massachusetts, where their returns are filed, giving them until midnight Tuesday to file.

— Advocates of overhauling the tax system made their points. At the Capitol, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, filed a wheelbarrow with annual reports of corporations that pay no federal tax. A coalition of labor and consumer groups was circulating petitions at post offices calling for higher taxes on corporations.

— Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman was plugging for the Reagan administration's goal of tax overhaul. Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who have attracted wide interest in their own plan of lower rates and fewer deductions, scheduled a New York City rally to cap a week of lobbying for the measure.

Missing tonight's deadline can result in a penalty of 5 percent of the tax due per month. Failure to pay taxes owed can bring another penalty of 0.5 percent a month plus interest. And mailing a frivolous return — one that doesn't contain the information necessary to process it — could mean a $500 penalty.

The IRS insists it will listen to reasonable excuses, but being bored is not one of them. Commissioner Egger tells of a woman who said she simply wasn't in the mood to file but that the IRS shouldn't get concerned. She would make up for it by filing twice next year.

Mattox begins probe of Lucas' confessions

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says his office is investigating the possibility that some confessions made by self-proclaimed serial killer Henry Lee Lucas may be bogus.

The statement by Mattox came after a copyright report in Sunday's Dallas Times Herald and an investigative report by WFAA-TV of Dallas detailing Lucas' whereabouts during his reported crime spree.

In addition to the investigation by the Texas attorney general's office, a grand jury at Waco investigating two local killings and the Texas Rangers' handling of Lucas will hear testimony from Lucas Wednesday.

Despite the Dallas Times Herald report that Lucas was in several cases thousands of miles away from the scenes of crimes he confessed to, law enforcement authorities in some states said Sunday they stood by their acceptance of the confessions because they had additional evidence to implicate the one-eyed drifter.

"We looked at several of the cases where he confessed, and it is our belief that of the cases we looked at, we didn't think that the confession was sufficient for conviction," Mattox told The Dallas Morning News.

Death penalty could have been avoided

DALLAS (AP) — Self-proclaimed serial killer Henry Lee Lucas could have avoided the death penalty if he had been willing to plead guilty to one more murder, two of his defense lawyers say.

The Dallas Times Herald today reported that Lucas was told if he would "clear up" another unsolved Williamson County case the district attorney would try Lucas for murder instead of capital murder in the "Orange Socks" case.

Lucas refused and was tried and convicted and sentenced to death in the slaying of a woman known only as "Orange Socks." The woman's partially nude body was found beside Interstate 35 Halloween night in 1979.

Defense lawyers Parker McCollough and Don Higgenbotham said Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh offered to try Lucas on murder only if he would "clear up" the disappearance of Karen Cervenkova, 19.

The girl had been last seen at a convenience store after attending a night class at Round Rock High School June 2, 1982.

When he was first questioned about the Cervenkova case, lawyers said, he told several different stories. He said he had taken to her to California and killed her, that he and Otis Toole, his former traveling partner, had killed her near Round Rock and that he had driven her to Laredo and killed her.

Finally, Lucas recanted all of the statements and refused to plead guilty.

without transportation, would have had to travel thousands of miles in short time periods to carry out the more than 210 murders with which he has been credited.

Lucas may have made up his crim-

"I know Henry did it, and he'll give it to me eventually," Williamson County Sheriff Jim Bou-twell said at the time.

A few months after the "Orange Socks" trial, the girl's body was found dead in her car, which had gone off a road near Taylor and plunged into a small creek.

High water had concealed the car, but it was spotted by fishermen when the creek receded.

The headlights and the cruise control switch were still on. There was no evidence of foul play, officers said.

It was then that authorities learned the young woman suffered from epilepsy. It was believed she suffered a seizure while driving and lost control of the car.

inal confessions and merely played out a hoax to embarrass authorities and stay off death row, the newspaper reported.

Lucas was transferred to the McLennan County Jail at Waco late Friday, a sheriff's dispatcher, who declined to be named, said.

District Attorney Vic Feazell told the Waco Tribune-Herald that the Texas Rangers' handling of the Lucas investigation is being questioned by the grand jury, which began hearing testimony on Thursday on two local killings to which Lucas has confessed.

Both Mattox and Feazell signed the warrant application that brought Lucas to Waco.

The grand jury heard eight hours of testimony Thursday from five people, including Dallas Times Herald reporter Hugh Aynesworth, one of the two authors of the newspaper's story, the Waco newspaper reported.

Records showed in some cases cited by the Times Herald that on the exact days of some murders, Lucas was in other states.

The drifter told the newspaper his confessions were a hoax "to show law enforcement doesn't do its job."

"I'm going to show 'em. They think I'm stupid, but before all this is over, everyone will know who's really stupid," he said in an interview with the newspaper.

Patterson alive and well in Selma

Playing with his father's dog tags is Roger Patterson Jr., son of the former American soldier the Nicaraguan government claims was slain in fighting with guerrillas. Patterson says this is the only set of dog tags he ever was issued.

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Former army corporal Roger Patterson's telephone has been ringing constantly since a man identified as Patterson was reported killed in Nicaragua, fighting for the anti-Sandinista cause.

Patterson, 22, was watching television Saturday night when he saw a news report that the Sandinista government was claiming that a rebel killed in jungle fighting March 25 wore U.S. Army dog tags identifying him as Roger Patterson. The dog tags had the serial number 419-96-7523 and said Patterson was a Baptist with type O blood.

"I looked at it and said, 'I wonder if they are talking about me,'" Patterson said Sunday night. "I'm a Baptist and my blood type is O positive. I cooled out until the police called me and said reporters were trying to get in touch with me," Patterson said.

In Washington, the Pentagon confirmed that tag number was assigned to Patterson, a Selma resident who joined the Army in July 1979 and was discharged last November.

Since Saturday, life at his small brick house has been hectic, with crowds of reporters and telephone calls from all over the country.

"I'm just a poor black American who's disabled and trying to live off my disability check," Patterson said Sunday night.

"I never thought anything like this would happen to me ever in the whole world," Patterson said.

Despite all the phone calls, Patterson hasn't received the one he hoped to get from the federal government, explaining how the Nicaraguan government got his dog tags.

"I never lost a set of dog tags. I've got the ones I was issued," he said, clutching the tags.

Patterson said the closest he ever got to Nicaragua was a three-month

Nicaragua insists American killed

By JUAN MALTES

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The leftist government insists an American was killed last month while fighting alongside rebels in Nicaragua and says he carried dog tags belonging to Roger Patterson.

But Roger Patterson of Selma, Ala., who has the same U.S. Army identification number as the one on the dog tags, says he has never been to Nicaragua and still has his dog tags.

Nicaraguan officials refused Sunday to clarify the mystery after Patterson, 22, who served in the U.S. Army in Honduras in secret operations near the Nicaraguan border in 1983, was located in Selma.

"We already stated in our communique yesterday our position that Patterson died in combat and was buried in the jungle," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Angela Saballos said in a telephone interview.

Ms. Saballos said: "If the Patterson family had been interested in seeing it (the body), we would have made all efforts to look for it in the jungle, since we do not know exactly where he was buried."

Asked to explain the discrepancy, she replied, "There has to be an explanation of why there are two (sets of) identification of Patterson," but refused to say who could provide the explanation or give details.

Other officials at the Defense Ministry and other government offices, and the U.S. Embassy spokeswoman in Managua could not be reached Sunday.

The Defense Ministry first announced in a communique Saturday that a Roger Patterson, with U.S. Army dog tag identification number 419-96-7523, was killed March 25 fighting with rebels against government troops in the village of Bocana de Tawa.

Bocana de Tawa, in North Zelaya province, is located 175 miles northeast of Managua and 75 miles from the Honduran border. The communique said 10 rebels were also killed in the battle.

But the communique did not give a physical description, age or hometown of the man alleged to be Patterson. It said he was buried in the area, but gave no details.

On Sunday, the Sandinista newspaper published a photograph purporting to show the man's dog tag. The name of Roger Patterson, the identification number, Baptist religion and O positive blood-type appeared clearly printed on it.

The dog tag was not shown to the rest of the press and its authenticity could not otherwise be independently verified.

In Selma, Patterson said he had served with the U.S. Army for more than five years since age 17, and was in Honduras for three months in late 1983 as a motor transport operator helping build an airstrip for C-130 planes to land on. But he denied he had ever been to Nicaragua.

"I don't know how any of this happened," Patterson said in a telephone interview.

he was 17 and spent five years in the service before being discharged on Nov. 23, 1984. Patterson said he began having mental problems while in Honduras and, when he arrived at his next assignment in West Germany, he was diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic.

dinner also will give the fund a major push, fund officials said.

"If you can get as a principal speaker the president, it certainly helps," said Ms. Rautbord, who lives in Chicago.

One point of possible controversy could be the group's use of the Monday afternoon briefing at the Old Executive Office Building as a boost to the fund-raising effort.

Linda Hedden, a spokeswoman for the fund, and Michael Schoor, a fund attorney, said the group was asking no specific amount for the briefing and was permitting some people to attend who were not contributing any money.

Fla. police department revealed no evidence the Lucas and Toole knew each other before February 1979.

Authorities in Maryland and Pennsylvania tracked his whereabouts from Aug. 22, 1975, about the time he was released from Michigan prison for the slaying of his mother, until December 1977. They concluded that it was "unlikely" he had left that area for an extended period of time, the Times Herald said.

In El Paso, a police detective said authorities have a "fairly strong" strong case against Lucas in an upcoming murder trial.

Lucas was indicted in October 1984 on charges of murdering an El Paso grandmother, Librada Apodaca, on May 27, 1983. On June 6, he was arrested in Stoneburg, Texas, and charged with the murder of Kate Rich.

Detective Lt. John Lanahan, head of the El Paso Police Department's Crimes Against Persons division, said Lucas led officers to Ms. Apodaca's home.

"There's a fairly strong case against him," Lanahan said.

El Paso District Attorney Steve Simmons declined to comment on particulars of the indictment, on the grounds that it might cause a relocation of the trial.

"I think we may be trying him toward the end of the year," Simmons said.

Lucas knew too much about killings in Louisiana's St. Tammany Parish to have made up the details, Chief Deputy Wallace Laird says.

"On our particular situations I don't think he could have had all that information just by making it up," Laird said. "I think he could be playing games with the people in Texas, but that remains to be seen."

Details in Lucas' statements convinced him that the drifter was telling the truth about the St. Tammany Parish killings, Laird said. And he said he didn't think anybody gave Lucas the information.

Louisiana authorities have said Lucas is linked to at least a dozen killings.

Reagan to help launch Nicaraguan Refugee Fund

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With President Reagan as kickoff speaker, a new organization begins a drive today to raise $2 million to $5 million for Nicaraguan refugees living in Honduras and Costa Rica.

Tonight, Reagan is scheduled to address a $250-a-plate fund-raising dinner sponsored by the Nicaraguan Refugee Fund, which says it will ship medical supplies, food, tools and clothing to an estimated 75,000 refugees, but provide no help to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

Before Reagan's speech, some dinner participants were invited to attend a briefing on Nicaragua by National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane and Vice President George Bush.

One co-chairman of the dinner, Donna "Sugar" Rautbord, said the Nicaraguan Refugee Fund was asking $5,000 a couple from those wanting to attend the briefing, but administration and other fund officials later denied there was a charge to attend the briefing.

Administration and fund officials said the project was strictly humanitarian and was not intended to provide even indirect aid to Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, who often live among the refugees.

"Nothing for the fighters, nothing for the Contras," said Alvaro Rizo Castellon, one of the group's founders and a diplomat under the government of ousted Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza Debayle. "Just for the refugees who are in need of food, medicine and shelter. Just humanitarian."

Reagan is currently seeking $14 million in new aid for the rebels, who have received about $80 million from the CIA since 1981 for their battle to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista government. Congressional votes on whether to release the $14 million are expected within the next week.

"We made it clear there can't be any hand-in-glove relationship," said one administration official who has dealt with the fund and who spoke only on condition he not be identified. He said White House involvement was largely related to logistics connected to the president's speech.

But he added that the White House welcomes the fund-raising effort and increased public awareness it could bring to the plight of refugees who have fled Nicaragua.

"We don't think (the Nicaraguan refugees) have received the attention they deserve," said Otto Reich, the State Department's coordinator of public diplomacy on Latin America. "We're very happy that people are drawing attention to them and improving their situation. By taking an evening out of the president's time, we're showing that we're behind the effort."

But some fund officials described the administration as playing a larger role in organization of the group.

"The White House has been deeply involved in this," said Louis "Woody" Jenkins, one of the fund's three directors and a Louisiana state legislator who already directs a program for helping Nicaraguan refugees. "It wouldn't be happening but for the White House."

Several participants pointed to a National Security Council briefing held after the presidential inauguration in January as an event that brought a number of interested people together to begin working on the dinner. Reagan's appearance at the dinner also will give the fund a major push, fund officials said.

"If you can get as a principal speaker the president, it certainly helps," said Ms. Rautbord, who lives in Chicago.

LUCAS

Lucas told the newspaper he has killed only three people: his mother, in 1960, and in 1962, Becky Powell in Denton, Texas, and Kate Rich, in Ringgold, Texas, the Times Herald reported. He was convicted of all three crimes.

"I only got three. But they're (law enforcement officials) goin' wild every time I tell 'em about some more."

Evidence suggests that authorities, particularly the Homicide Task Force headed by Texas Rangers, had information that would have exonerated Lucas from many of the murders but failed to pursue it, the Times Herald reported.

In some cases, by refusing to accept documents such as prison and work records, authorities actually amended information to conform to the confessions, which have led to at least 10 murder convictions for Lucas, the newspaper said.

Reports that authorities ignored evidence were "ludicrous" and that Lucas from the beginning has provided both unreliable and reliable information, all of which were made known to police agencies involved, Col. Jim Adams, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, parent agency of the Texas Rangers, said.

"It was widely reported that a number of murders claimed by him could not be substantiated although about 200 cases have been reported cleared by local investigating agencies who attributed those cases to Lucas, and or (Otis) Toole," Adams said.

"Keep in mind that the California attorney general's office investigated some 30 cases," Adams said, and have reported clearing 15.

Spokesman Larry Todd of the DPS said Sunday the agency would be eager to check on the Lucas case.

"It's going to be real easy to open the books and look at the specifics, and we're eager to do that," Todd said.

Resigning Houston fire chief sought

HOUSTON (AP) — City officials over the weekend were trying to find Houston Fire Chief Robert L. Swartout, who resigned from his job and quickly disappeared.

"It is hard to believe that anyone in a high supervisory position would just walk off the job with no notice and then be unavailable to discuss his concerns," said Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who called the chief's resignation "bizarre."

Swartout, after only 3½ months in office, gave Mrs. Whitmire a resignation letter — effective immediately — about 4:30 p.m. Friday, the mayor said.

She said Swartout's letter cited

"personal reasons" and his "inability to build the department" as the reasons for his resignation.

City officials tried to find the fire chief for an explanation of the surprise move, but they did not know his whereabouts, Mrs. Whitmire said.

The mayor's attempts to contact Swartout at his Houston apartment and his family's home in Seattle were unsuccessful, Joanne Adams, a spokeswoman for the mayor, said Sunday.

And Fire Department employees who went to Swartout's Houston apartment said the former chief was not there.

She said Swartout's letter cited

WOMAN

She was last seen at her home in the company of an individual described as being about five feet seven to five feet eight inches tall, who was wearing a baseball-type cap.

Donaldson said investigating officers have been trying to locate the individual to question about the woman's whereabouts.

The young woman was also seen later at the Palomino Club on South Crane Highway, Donaldson said.

Investigators also talked to co-workers, Donaldson said, and they had not seen the woman since about mid-afternoon Friday.

Donaldson said a ground search for a possible body from which the body parts being tested came has been suspended.

Helicopter and ground search units, he said, combed the entire area between FM 896 and Loop 250 in Midland Saturday and Sunday without success.

AUSTIN group from the abortion committee.

"After the kickbacks, parties in the believe that business will said Bill P. Greater Dallas.

The House today related bills, said Rep. L. would restrict three months.

Also this a 1986-87 still will look at a day" presi House will of fee hike bill will hear a tax."

Abortion hearing set

AUSTIN (AP) — An anti-abortion group promises to "blow the lid off the abortion industry" at a House committee meeting today.

"After this shocking testimony of kickbacks, abuse and other irregularities in the abortion industry, we believe that the need to regulate this business will be clearly established," said Bill Price, president of the Greater Dallas Right to Life Committee.

The House State Affairs Committee today looks at 11 abortion-related bills, highlighted by Rockdale Rep. L.B. Kubiak's measure that would restrict abortions in the final three months of pregnancy.

Also this week, work continues on a 1986-87 state budget, the Senate will look at setting up a "super Tuesday" presidential primary, the House will decide on a $120 million fee hike bill and a House committee will hear about a proposed "sick tax."

The abortion hearing could be among the most emotional of the session. Price's group has given all lawmakers a copy of the film "Silent Screams" which he said shows how a fetus suffers during an abortion.

Pro-choice groups have countered. Last week, all legislators were sent a coat hanger aimed at reminding them of the dangers of illegal abortions.

Price said the anti-abortion testimony will be keynoted by someone "who was a high-profile personality in the pro-choice movement" and owned one of the largest abortion clinics in the state.

"We are bringing in several witnesses who will give sworn testimony that will blow the lid off the abortion industry," said Price.

Also today, the House Appropriations Committee reconvenes for a final vote on its proposed $36 billion, two-year state budget. Committee members wrapped up work on the bill last week, but the final vote sending the bill to the full House had to wait until the budget is printed.

Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said no changes would be made before the final vote.

"It's closed," he said. The Senate Finance Committee continued work Sunday on its version of the budget.

To balance the House version, lawmakers must approve a $120 million package of fee hikes, including a $2 increase in the cost of a four-year drivers license. That bill, sponsored by Rudd, is expected to hit the House floor this week, lawmakers said.

The House Public Health Committee today will talk about the proposed "sick tax," a 1 percent levy on hospital profits. The money would be used to pay for health care for the poor.

"The sick tax has a full head of steam," said Jim Farnworth, president of the Texas Hospital Association, which opposes the plan. "A close vote is expected."

The full Senate votes today on Duncannonville Sen. Chet Edwards' presidential primary bill, which would give Texas a March primary that would coincide with "super Tuesday" voting in other states.

STATE IN BRIEF

Authorities puzzled by rash of bombings

FORT WORTH (AP) — One person was killed in a series of weekend bombings that has left authorities with few clues, no suspect and no apparent motive.

Three of the five bombings were in residential areas. Lt. Ralph G. Carpenter, a fire department arson investigator, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the three residential bombings are not thought to be connected, and department spokesman Charlie McCafferty said authorities do not know whether any of the bombings are related.

John Stanley Moran, 38, a convenience store manager, died after what authorities suspect was a pipe bomb went off in his truck at about 6 a.m. Saturday in Hurst.

He was found lying beside the truck at a closed restaurant in Hurst. Rescuers doused his flaming clothes with a fire extinguisher and rushed Moran to John Peter Smith Hospital, where he died.

Boy still unidentified

DENISON (AP) — Authorities say they are still searching for the family of a boy who was pulled from the waters of Lake Texoma.

If the family can be found, it will save the boy from a pauper's grave and possibly end someone's desperate search for their missing child, authorities say.

Texas Ranger Charles Fleming said the boy's body was recovered from the lake last week. Authorities at first thought he might be a missing Oklahoma boy, said Grayson County Sheriff Jack Driscoll.

"Now it's back to square one," said Driscoll.

Five killed in car accident

DALHART (AP) — Five members of two Colorado families were killed in a head-on car collision in the Texas Panhandle and four others were hospitalized with serious injuries, the Texas Department of Public Safety says.

The accident occurred early Sunday afternoon nine miles southeast of Dalhart on U.S. Highway 87, according to DPS spokesman Wayne Beighle.

Three of the four injured were taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. All were in critical condition with severe injuries late Sunday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

A fourth injured boy was taken to Coon Memorial Hospital in Dalhart where he was listed in stable condition, according to a hospital spokeswoman there.

The accident occurred around 1:15 p.m., Beighle said.

According to DPS troopers at the scene, a 1977 Oldsmobile Cutlass traveling northbound on U.S. Highway 385 passed one vehicle and then slammed head-on into a 1977 Chevrolet Camaro pulling a small trailer.

White's top aide to resign

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim Turner, top aide to Gov. Mark White and the governor's chief liaison with the Texas Legislature, will resign at the end of the current legislative session.

The Dallas Morning News said today Turner will return to his East Texas law practice. He has held the post here for six months.

Turner said Sunday he was leaving to return to his hometown law practice in Crockett because his only law partner was leaving.

"I'm pretty much forced to go back," Turner said.

Turner said he hopes to remain until late June so he could advise White as the governor acts on bills sent him by the Legislature, which is scheduled to adjourn May 28.

Houston hotel gutted

HOUSTON (AP) — A downtown Houston hotel that housed presidents and powerbrokers for 56 years was reduced to rubble and dust in 30 seconds.

"It's just a pile of trash now," said Houston Fire Lt. J.P. Morgan, looking over the site where the Lamar Hotel once stood. "That was something to see."

Thousands of spectators cheered Sunday morning as 600 pounds of strategically-placed dynamite blasted the 16-story hotel and a 22-story adjacent office building.

Just before 8 a.m., the explosives were detonated in a 7½-second blast that shook windows and showered dust over several blocks of the city's downtown area.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Curb a tendency to act on impulse. Talk things over with partner and allies before plowing ahead. A dream could become reality where romance or wealth is concerned. A change in lifestyle has positive results. Start sharing your ideas with family members; with their help, you can reach new heights! Self-improvement projects pay off handsomely. A love relationship deepens. CELEBRITY BIRTHDAYS: Composer-conductor Henry Mancini, Edie Adams, actor Peter Ustinov, Denmark's Queen Margrethe II, Montreal Expos' pitcher Dick Grapethin, singer Dusty Springfield, Los Angeles Lakers' premier center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Bobby Vinton, author Kingsley Amis, newscaster Ike Pappas, aviator Wilbur Wright.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone who works behind the scenes will play a key role in a business or financial success. Postpone starting new projects. A period of meditation will help you unravel a tricky personal problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Luck plays a role in solving a financial problem. Enter contests. Take a long-range view when planning for the future. A parent or other relative needs more TLC. Be affectionate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Develop good work habits and productivity soars. You need to pay more attention to domestic matters if hoping to avoid a confrontation. Afternoon or early evening is the best time for romance!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reschedule appointments to accommodate a deserving associate. He/she will do you a huge favor in the near future. A sudden flash of intuition puts you in the driver's seat at work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Member of opposite sex may not respect your desire for privacy. Stand up for your rights. Make certain all legal papers are in good order. Serious talk of marriage delights singles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New developments could affect your career or financial plans. Your creative and artistic ventures will pay off handsomely if marketed correctly. Spending the evening with a good friend boosts your spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep the lines of communication open today or a misunderstanding could develop. A family member's needs could cause a last minute change in plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow the suggestions of someone close to you and you make new financial gains! A stepped-up interest in faraway places and academic pursuits is likely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A conservative approach will impress an older person or authority figure. Your loved ones' demands make you stronger. A family member may question your lifestyle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to buy things on impulse. Your popularity with member of opposite sex reaches new heights. You are able to resolve long-standing differences with mate or partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent day for do-it-yourself types. Get to the root of an office dispute and work will go better. Teamwork boosts profits dramatically. A lasting romantic relationship is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A legal matter is settled out of court. Avoid discussing controversial subjects at a business lunch. You are more likely to land a contract or client if you sit back and listen.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10 ♥AQJ6 ♦J7 ♣QJ972
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—With a near opening bid and two spade honors, you are certainly worth a move toward game. However, you don't want to bid no trump with one suit unstopped. On this sequence, the odds heavily favor North having a six-card suit, so we suggest you raise to three spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠94 ♥AQJ4 ♦A107 ♣AK105
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—You do not have the right shape for a jump to three no trump — that bid is reserved for hands with a 4-3-3-3 pattern, otherwise there is too great a risk of missing slam in one of your suits. Therefore, all you can do for the moment is make a temporizing bid of two clubs, to see how the auction will develop.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ1054 ♥K93 ♦Q65 ♣74
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have found a fit, so there is no reason to introduce your spades — partner could have doubled had he wanted to hear you bid spades. It is simply a question of whether or not your hand is too strong for a raise to two hearts. Since both of your queens are of doubtful value, a raise to two hearts should suffice for the moment.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10765 ♥K842 ♦952 ♣74
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♥
Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—While partner's jump to two spades is not forcing, it does promise a very good hand. You have four-card support, a king and a ruffing value. A raise to three spades is the least you can do under the circumstances.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ983 ♥AJ752 ♦A ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Partner has shown a sub-minimum two-over-one response with long diamonds. Since the chances of his having three cards in hearts are slight, don't waste your time rebidding that suit. Any attempt by you to improve the contract at a higher level is fraught with danger. Pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ76 ♥832 ♦AQ75 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 1 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You certainly intend raising partner's suit — it is simply a question of to what level. Two spades would be a gross underbid, and four spades is a bit of a stretch, even opposite a vulnerable overcall. An invitational jump to three spades fits the bill perfectly.

Fifth heart recipient losing blood

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jack C. Burcham, the world's fifth and oldest artificial heart patient, bled through the night and had to have approximately 21 pints of blood replaced, but one of his doctors said today the problem was not considered life-threatening.

The retired railroad engineer remained in critical condition one day after the implant, but Dr. Allan M. Lansing, chairman of Humana Heart Institute International, said he personally considered Burcham's condition to be satisfactory.

Burcham, 62, of Le Roy, Ill., received the Jarvik-7 heart in a six-hour, difficult operation Sunday at Humana Hospital Audubon. Dr. William C. DeVries, who implanted the heart, said the mechanical pump was "a tight fit."

The doctors were inserting a fourth drainage tube in Burcham's chest this morning, after which "I would hope he would show some improvement," Lansing said at a morning news conference.

Burcham's other signs remained good, although his kidney function was being watched carefully, Lansing said. The kidney function appeared good, but kidneys are susceptible to damage from multiple blood transfusions, Lansing said.

Lansing stressed that the bleeding, which he attributed to the strain on stitches inside Burcham's chest, would not necessarily trigger a second operation, provided the fourth drainage tube prevents blood from accumulating in Burcham's tissues. If accumulation occurs, however, a second operation would be necessary, Lansing said. He did not indicate how long doctors would wait to make that decision.

The world's first recipient of a permanent man-made heart, Seattle-area dentist Barney Clark, was 61 when DeVries implanted a Jarvik-7 on Dec. 2, 1982, in Utah during a 7½-hour operation. He lived 112 days before dying of multiple organ failure and circulatory collapse.

Humana's first two implant patients — William C. Schroeder, 53, and Murray P. Haydon, 58 — remain under DeVries' care.

The world's fourth recipient, a 53-year-old Swede, was in stable condition at a Stockholm hospital. He was given a Jarvik-7 on April 7 in the first implant outside the United States.

Scandinavian media say the patient is Leif Stenberg, who had been nicknamed "Stockholm's Godfather" in the press. Stenberg was accused of tax evasion and other crimes after an investigation in 1976.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Actor Ken Kercheval, who as Cliff Barnes on "Dallas" sometimes turns to the bottle after being bested by J.R. Ewing, told a group of high school students at an anti-drug seminar that he is an alcoholic.

Kercheval, who said he was a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, told the group that Saturday was the first time he had publicly revealed his drinking problem.

"I thought today would be a good day," said Kercheval, 40.

His revelation was met with applause by the students. The Indiana native made the announcement while standing at the lectern at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis and shuffling his speech notes nervously.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cambodian refugee Haing S. Ngor, who won the Academy Award as best supporting actor in "The Killing Fields," says the film fell short of depicting the atrocities perpetrated by the Khmer Rouge on his homeland.

"The Killing Fields" is very, very true but not true enough. There was even more suffering, even more death," Ngor said Saturday at a University of Southern California forum on "Indochina 10 Years After the Fall of Saigon."

Ngor played Dith Pran, assistant to New York Times reporter Sydney Schanberg in covering the covert U.S. war in Cambodia and the takeover by the communist Khmer Rouge in April 1975.

Both Ngor and Pran were imprisoned and tortured by the communists, but finally fled Cambodia. Ngor, a physician in his homeland, works at an employment agency in Los Angeles while awaiting accreditation to practice medicine in this country.

LONDON (AP) — Charlton Heston says he'd love to work with producer David Lean, actor Robert DeNiro and actress Meryl Streep.

Heston, 60, who won an Oscar for "Ben Hur," also said he hopes to do one more "Macbeth" and another "Antony and Cleopatra" — but won't talk about his next film project.

"As for my best film, I haven't made it yet — but I'm not through," he told several hundred movie buffs at a National Film Theater lecture audience Sunday.

Heston is now in his London stage debut as Captain Queeg in "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," which he also directs.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., known for his wit on the banquet circuit, was jovially lampooned in a fund-raising roast for Nebraska Easter Seals.

Former Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan said the farther Zorinsky gets from Nebraska, "the more he knows about agriculture," adding that many turkey farmers "consider him one of the flock."

Zorinsky, in rebuttal at the $50-a-plate banquet Saturday night, looked at the politicians and businessmen on the roasting panel and said, "Here are seven tax statements for auditing that I know of."

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bill Cummings, an amateur boxing coach who guided Columbus fighter Jerry Page to the 1964 Olympic gold medal in the 130-pound class, died Saturday. He was 50.

Cummings suffered an apparent heart attack while exercising, police said.

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Actress Noelle Gordon, known to a generation of British soap opera fans as the beloved hotel owner Meg Richardson in "Crossroads," died Sunday of cancer. She was 61.

The actress, who played the manager of a mythical hotel in the English Midlands for 18 years, was told she had cancer in November 1983.

Grim statistics

This will come as small consolation to anyone whose household has been ripped off lately, but a U.S. crime survey report insists that residence burglaries and larcenies have dropped to their lowest level in 12 years.

The decrease in these offenses, the statisticians say, contributes to an all-over decline in crime of 4.5 percent in 1984 from the previous year.

One likely reason for the shrinkage in household robberies, according to the National Crime Survey, sponsored by the Justice Department, is stepped-up citizen involvement in crime prevention as manifested in such efforts as volunteer neighborhood patrols.

Unhappily, however, vigilance by citizens has made no dent in the rates of violent crime and automobile theft which last year remained almost unchanged from 1983. There was in fact a 25 percent increase in the incidence of rape over the 12-month period.

Unlike the periodic FBI summaries which rely on actual police statistics, the National Crime Survey is based on direct interviews and samplings much like the pre-election polls. As a result it covers unreported crimes as well as those from the police records.

But no matter what agency or individual keeps the statistics or whatever procedure is followed, they add up to a startling fact of life in the United States in the 1980s.

Mondale's isolation

Walter Mondale continues to live in the past. Five months after a majority of voters in 49 states turned thumbs down on what he said and did during the campaign, the Democratic presidential candidate is still defending his conduct.

He says he was right to criticize the economic policies of the Reagan administration, policies which received a resounding vote of confidence from the American people. He says he was right to accept the endorsement of organized labor. And he has not backtracked on his call for tax increases.

Mondale has every right, of course, to insist he was right in all of these instances, but his insistence suggests that voters in every state except Minnesota were wrong in the last election. What the people suggested at the polls was that they were tired of decades of taxing and spending. They approved what the Reagan administration had been doing in its first term, and came out emphatically for a second.

The attitude of the defeated candidate smacks of a form of political arrogance. If arrogance seems too strong a word, surely it must be admitted that he is isolated from the will of the American voters. His isolationism is clearly evident in his own Democratic Party, many members of which have been critical of his campaign.

Two prominent critics are none other than former President Jimmy Carter and the Democratic Party's new national chairman, Paul Kirk. Both have taken a dim view of Mondale's gathering of endorsements from labor unions and the AFL-CIO, and his consistent courting of other special interest groups.

Mondale can keep on defending his campaign as much as he wishes and dreaming of his party's orientation during the days of Franklin Roosevelt. The voters of the United States have rendered a vastly different verdict.

Acid rain hits West

Two new factors, one scientific and one political, have been added to the pressure on the federal government to do more to curb acid rain. On the scientific front, the World Resources Institute has released research showing increasing acidity in lakes and streams in the Rocky Mountains. Heretofore, the effects of acid precipitation — caused by airborne pollutants, mainly sulfur dioxide — have been noticeable mostly in the northeastern United States and Canada, where aquatic life and forests are dying.

The political factor that should alert Washington is the growing concern among Western state officials over sulfur dioxide emissions from copper smelters in New Mexico, Arizona and from south of the Arizona border in Mexico, where one plant is nearly complete and another is being expanded.

Despite strong objections from Phelps Dodge Corp., the owner of the smelter in Douglas, Ariz., the Environmental Protection Agency and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt have even offered to close that smelter, the single largest manufacturing source of sulfur dioxide in the United States, in exchange for an agreement by Mexico to put pollution controls on the two plants.

Ironically, the pollution threat from Mexico now puts the United States in the same vulnerable position as Canada, which has so far been unable to get much U.S. action to control Midwest air pollution, thought to be a major cause of acid rain in Canada. All of this indicates that acid rain is not a regional problem but a national and international one that demands national action on the part of the Reagan administration.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 15, the 105th day of 1985. There are 260 days left in the year. Income tax returns are due today.

Today's highlight in history: In the early morning hours of April 15, 1912, the British luxury ocean liner Titanic sank in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland, less than three hours after striking an iceberg. About 1,500 of the more than 2,200 people aboard died in the disaster.

On this date:

In 1850, the city of San Francisco was incorporated.

In 1865, at 7:22 a.m., President Abraham Lincoln died, several hours after he was mortally wounded at Ford's Theater in Washington by John Wilkes Booth.

Andrew Johnson was sworn in as the nation's 17th president.

In 1920, a robbery at the Slater and Merrill Shoe Company in South Braintree, Mass., resulted in the deaths of a paymaster and guard. Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were subsequently convicted of the murders, and executed.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was buried at the Roosevelt family home in Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1969, Cuban leader Fidel Castro arrived in Washington to begin a goodwill tour of the United States.

Thought for today: "Man is not the sum of what he has, but the totality of what he does not have, of what he might have." — Jean-Paul Sartre (1905-1980).

Synfuels' squandering continues

WASHINGTON — The federal government may be rough on everyday taxpayers, but it can't seem to do enough for some of the nation's wealthiest corporations. Not only do they pay little or no taxes on their enormous earnings, but these corporate panhandlers line up with their diamond-studded tin cups extended for government grants — and get them.

Our associate Corky Johnson has checked the tax status of several companies that have been given or are negotiating multi-million-dollar grants by the federal government. One of the companies is Synfuels Corp. in the hope that they'll develop energy alternatives to imported oil.

So far, not an erg of energy has been produced by these companies, but Synfuels keeps lading out the taxpayers' money.

As the corporate recipients are quick to point out, it's all perfectly legal. In fact, company executives would be derelict in their duty to stockholders if they failed to take every subsidy and tax advantage they can get. But it does lead to some bizarre situations. For example:

General Electric: President Reagan's old employer was recently suspended from defense contracts following indictment for fraud. But Synfuels has no qualms about GE. It's part of a consortium that has received $120 million in funding for a coal-gasification plant in California. A GE subsidiary, Ladd Petroleum, has been promised up to $100 million for still another synthetic-fuel plant in California. A GE project in Detroit will seek Synfuels funds later this year, and has asked the Energy Department for $270 million.

Yet in 1981-1983 GE paid not a dime in federal income tax on its combined profits of $6.5 billion. In fact, the company got $283 million in tax rebates during that period. A GE spokesman said the company did pay $185 million in income taxes for 1984.

Texaco: This oil giant, which paid no federal taxes from 1981 to 1983, is a partner with GE in the coal-gasification project.

Dow Chemical: Synfuels has guaranteed this company $620 million in price supports for the fuel it's trying to develop in Louisiana. During 1981-1983, Dow made $776 million in profits, but got $223 million in tax refunds, for a "negative tax rate" of 28 percent.

Tenneco: Although the General Accounting Office concluded that the huge Great Plains gasification plant in North Dakota can get along without further federal help, Synfuels won't hear of it, insisting on $790 million in subsidies. Tenneco owns 30 percent of the plant. The company will also share in $2.2 billion worth of federal loan- and price-guarantees to produce oil from Colorado coal shale.

Yet Tenneco, an energy and defense conglomerate, had profits of $2.6 billion in 1981-1983, and collected $189 million in tax benefits during that period.

Other winners in the Synfuels' sweepstakes have paid income taxes, but the average is far below the usual corporate tax rate. Signal Corp., for example, which has been promised $365 million to make fuel from peat bogs, paid just 6.5 percent in taxes on 1981-1983 profits of $697 million. And both American Natural Resources and Pacific Lighting Co., which are partners with Tenneco in the Great Plains plant that shouldn't be getting Synfuels aid, paid taxes at low rates on multi-million-dollar profits.

Teddy's considering 'uphill' run

WASHINGTON — Supporters close to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are putting out the word that he is so turned off by today's Senate that he would not hesitate to sacrifice 26 years' seniority for an uphill presidential try in 1988.

"Ted feels the caliber of the senators, regardless of ideology, has dropped," an associate told us. "He doesn't think there's much he can learn there anymore." If the Democrats fail to regain control of the Senate in 1986, according to these insiders, Kennedy will be even more inclined to leave.

A footnote: The fact that Dr. Larry Horowitz is staying on as his administrative assistant instead of returning full-time to the practice of medicine means he expects Kennedy probably will run for president. Horowitz is slated to manage any Kennedy-for-president operation, a prospect which discourages professional politicians who back the senator.

'FLASH' TO NAKASONE

Four days before Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone appealed to the Japanese people to "buy American," he received a diplomatic "flash" from Japan's new ambassador in Washington relaying a private warning direct from the White House.

Nobuo Matsunaga, the newly arrived envoy, attended a small dinner party April 2 hosted by U.S. officials. He was warned by White House lobbyist M.B. Oglesby that if Tokyo did not act resolutely, Congress would not act President Reagan protectionist legislation he might not be able to stop. Only hours later, Matsunaga sent his "flash" to the Foreign Office.

Senior officials from both the White House and State Department attended the dinner party. The importance of U.S.-Japanese trade tensions in American domestic politics is attested to by the invitation to Ed Rollins, chief White House political aide (who accepted but, at the last minute was but unable to attend).

IACOCCA IRKED

Doubts were raised whether Lee Iacocca can switch from automaking to politics when he blew up in private over public criticism by California's Rep. Robert Matsui of the Chrysler chief's speech to a closed-door session of Democratic politicians in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

That speech, Iacocca's debut in Democratic politics, was so hard on Japan that fellow Democrats expressed their consternation to Matsui, who is of Japanese extraction. It was then that Matsui publicly called Iacocca's remarks "racist."

Iacocca, unaccustomed to such criticism, blew up in private. He later calmed down enough to send a letter to Matsui that the congressman's staff described as "shot of an apology" but "conciliatory in tone." Nevertheless, Democratic congressmen believe the auto titan will have to learn to stand the heat if he plans to cook in the political kitchen.

Reps. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and Mike Synar, D-Okla., have introduced legislation that would eliminate Synfuels — a move that is becoming something of a tradition on Capitol Hill. Last year's attempt ended in a compromise that cut $5.4 billion from the Synfuels budget, leaving $8 billion for the corporation to play with.

This year's bill has some powerful support in Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee. But it also has some powerful opposition, led by Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, who continues to have faith in synthetic-fuel development.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Ten years after the fall of Saigon, relations between Vietnam and the United States are still frigid. In fact, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., found the chill to be literal when he visited Hanoi recently to seek Vietnamese cooperation in confirming the fate of 2,800 American servicemen still listed as missing in Indochina.

The room where the U.S. delegation met for talks with Vietnamese officials was freezing cold, and the situation wasn't helped any by the heated rhetoric of the Hanoi officials. The discussions got nowhere.

Even by Washington standards, security was astonishingly tight at the Washington Hilton Hotel during a recent reception for visiting Turkish Prime Minister Urgut Ozal. Plainclothes and uniformed guards were out in force, explosive-sniffing dogs patrolled the premises and a side street was blocked off throughout the event. Turkish officials have been frequent targets of Armenian terrorists in recent years, and the Washington Hilton, of course, is where President Reagan was shot exactly four years and one week before the Turkish reception.

CHARLEY REESE

Positive punditry has punch!

In the interest of positive thinking, I have some proposals for solutions to some of America's problems.

I believe we can solve the crime problem with only two pieces of federal legislation. One would require all citizens, 18 and over, to carry a loaded firearm at all times. The other would repeal all laws against homicide.

Charley Reese

Following the logic of those who want to legalize drugs, it is obvious that laws and law enforcement have failed to prevent murder, so we will legalize it. Because there are a great many more good people than bad people, in a relatively short time there will be only good people left. Without a prohibition against murder, most American police departments could clean up their cities in three days.

For the problem of overcrowded prisons, see above.

In order to stop the proliferation of legislation, I propose that we require legislators to donate two pints of blood for each bill they file. This should result in more well-thought-out legislation.

To prevent lengthy Congressional sessions, let us move the nation's capital to Fargo, N.D., and require that Congress convene on Oct. 1 with no breaks or recesses. I suspect that by the second or third blizzard, the lawmakers would wrap up their business.

Litigation, as you know, has become one of the nation's major industries. To lighten the dockets, I propose legislation which would require the plaintiff's attorney to pay the legal and court costs of the defendant if the defendant wins. If attorneys gamble on big fees for winners, I don't see why they can't also gamble on big losses if they lose.

To reduce medical malpractice, we simply adopt the pre-Castro Cuban model. A Cuban friend of mine who is a doctor explained the system this way: "If you made an honest mistake, the patient or his family would usually forgive you. If you were grossly negligent, they wouldn't sue you, but they might kill you."

For inflation, I have the perfect solution. We reverse index the salaries of congressmen, senators, the president, vice president, and the members of the Federal Reserve. On an annual basis, their salaries would be reduced by the rate of inflation. Six percent inflation would mean a 6 percent reduction in their pay.

To end poverty, I have a peach of a solution. Each poor person and his or her dependents would be assigned to a liberal with whom they would live. That way, liberals could provide compassion on a first-hand basis. Liberals could even exercise some choice. If they were especially concerned about illegitimate children, then they could have an unwed mother and her children move in with them. If they were concerned about illegal aliens, they could have some of those. And so on. Taking the Mondale vote as a base definition, it is obvious that liberals outnumber poor people and so there will be plenty to go around.

What about lenient judges? Well, to solve the problem of probation-happy judges (in case any criminals survive my first proposal), I propose that judges agree in writing to make good any damage done by a person they place on probation. If the probationer kills, rapes or molests a child, then the judge forfeits his life. If the probationer steals, then the judge must reimburse the victim out of his own funds. People who have custody of animals must be held responsible if they choose to turn the animals loose.

As for the problem of Soviet-American relations, I propose there shouldn't be any — relations, that is. We break diplomatic relations with this outlaw, criminal empire and have no trade, no talks, no credits, and no Soviet citizens inside the United States. Ditto for Soviet satellites. If the Soviets have something they want to say to us, they can write it in big letters and put it on the roof so our satellites can see it.

To clean up the environment, we simply require owners and top management of firms to drink a glass of whatever they do not properly dispose of. If the substance is harmless, case closed; if it's toxic, case also closed.

Move over, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale. Here comes the power of positive punditry.

Urgent work begun on plan to save crippled satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Flight officials and astronauts on the ground worked urgently today to develop a plan to enable the crew of Discovery to revive a dead $80 million satellite with a few cents worth of plastic.

The plastic, shaped into an improvised tool, would be welded by a spacewalking astronaut or, more likely, by the shuttle's mechanical arm.

A proposal to have a spacewalker reach out and grab a lever on the Syncom satellite was ruled out as being too dangerous because he possibly could be crushed against the side of the 8-ton payload, NASA officials said.

Safety is the prime consideration in the rescue planning, Syncom, although weightless and spinning slowly, retains the inertia of its huge mass and carries four tons of fuel. Officials want to be certain neither endangers the spaceship or crewman.

Lights burned around the clock in offices and spacecraft simulator buildings at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, where a decision was expected later today on whether and how best to salvage the satellite.

First of all, Discovery's crew must determine if Syncom can be brought back to life. They will do that Tuesday when commander Karol Bobko and Donald Williams are to guide Discovery close to Syncom to inspect the satellite with high-powered binoculars and the zoom lens of a television camera.

When the Navy communications satellite was released Saturday from the shuttle's cargo bay, its electrical systems did not switch on, apparently because a four-inch "trigger" lever did not spring out from the side of the payload.

Mission Control officials believe the lever is partially extended and that it might be snagged and extended. If it is still locked down, it would be impossible to snare.

Ground crews have rigged a tool, resembling a flyswatter, out of equipment like that stored in the shuttle as one possibility for grabbing the lever, said flight director Randy Stone.

The device consists of a four-foot extendable rod used by the commander and pilot to reach remote switches in the cockpit, a plastic cover from a flight data book rolled into a cone, and, on the end of the cone, another plastic cover with three square holes cut in it.

If this plan is agreed on, the tool would be fastened to the end of the shuttle's 50-foot arm by spacewalking astronauts David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman on Tuesday. The next day, astronaut Margaret Rhea Sedon, guiding the arm remotely from inside the cabin, would brush the "flyswatter" against the side of the slowly-rotating satellite and try to snag the lever in one of the holes, pulling it free.

With the satellite spinning at the rate of 2 revolutions per minute, it would be like grabbing the brass ring from a merry-go-round.

"As simple and gross a solution as that may sound like, it is probably one of the most intelligent ones we've come up with," said Stone.

Officials said the plastic covers cost only a few pennies.

In a Houston simulator early today, astronauts Sally Ride and Mary Cleave each successfully used the tool to latch onto a lever on a Syncom mockup. Other astronauts were practicing spacewalk procedures in a huge water tank.

Stone said an option with lower priority is to have one of the astronauts use the tool while he is attached to the end of the arm.

Officials rejected one idea that would have had an astronaut on the arm reach out and release the lever with his hand.

"When you add the fact that you've got a person within two feet of something that can getcha, it drives the risk up," said Stone.

NATION IN BRIEF

New ordinance restricts smoking in public places

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Workers here going to their jobs today after a weekend away were faced with a new ordinance restricting smoking in public places.

"The only bad things that have been heard are from the smokers," said Gina Pollack, personnel director for Princess Cruises.

The law took effect Saturday at all businesses with five or more employees, and bans smoking in restrooms, elevators and nurses stations.

It requires at least two-thirds of every worker cafeteria, lunch room and lounge be designated a no-smoking area. Only private offices, restaurants, bars and hotel areas where food is served are exempt.

Fruit flies to be released

MIAMI (AP) — About 240 million sterile, male Mediterranean fruit flies will be released beginning next week in hopes they will outbreed their fertile rivals and gradually eliminate the citrus fruit pest.

The sterile medflies, imported from Hawaii, will be dyed in fluorescent colors to make them distinguishable in traps from their harmful cousins and released weekly in swarms of 30 million, agriculture officials said.

Officials said they planned to spray the pesticide malathion today in an infected area of Dade County, near Miami, in preparation for the release.

Meanwhile, across the state, near Tampa, workers are preparing to burn all 840,000 trees in an 18-acre nursery where the citrus canker plant disease was confirmed Friday.

Both medflies and canker pose grave threats to a Florida citrus industry already reeling from devastating winter freezes the past two years.

Counterfeit goods seized

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A two-week sweep by U.S. Customs agents has netted about $1.5 million worth of counterfeit goods, including nearly 100,000 fake Cabbage Patch Kid dolls treated with a flammable insecticide, officials said.

The goods, imported by San Jose-based W & L Co., were found in storage lockers and on docks in Oakland and San Francisco, agents said Friday.

In addition to the Cabbage Patch dolls, officials said they seized nearly 40,000 phony Gremlin dolls, 130 phony Rolex watches, 24 cartons of robot toys, 17 cartons of ET masks, and other assorted dolls and games, said Customs agent Roland Klink.

Six alleged illegal aliens working in the importer's San Jose warehouse were arrested and turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Klink said.

Rebel leader attacked

CHICAGO (AP) — The leader of the largest rebel army trying to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government says the protesters who splashed him with red paint at a Northwestern University appearance were "1980s leftovers."

"Certainly they were not students. Most were in their 30s and 40s," said

Adolfo Calero, president of the 16,000-member Nicaraguan Democratic Force.

He was not injured when a few of about 175 chanting protesters stormed the stage in suburban Evanston on Saturday night and splashed paint on him and his escorts. He then left the hall without addressing the audience.

Legislature passes bill

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — After 13½ hours of wrangling, the Kansas Legislature has given Gov. John Carlin a bill he sought to end the state's century-old ban on saloons and legalize liquor by the drink.

The liquor resolution cleared the Senate by a two-vote, 29-10 margin, and it got a three-vote, 87-37 edge in the House on Saturday night.

If passed, the November 1986 referendum would legalize public bars only in counties that pass the measure, and would restrict liquor sales to places deriving at least 30 percent of their profits from food sales.

CHICAGO (AP) — An attorney for Cathleen Crowell Webb says there is a new development that could help prove that Mrs. Webb was telling the truth when she recanted the 1979 testimony that sent Gary Dotson to jail on a rape charge.

"I believe it will be significant," said Mrs. Webb's attorney, John McLario, refusing to disclose the nature of the development.

He said it should have a bearing on whether Dotson, 28, is released from prison, where he has served six years of a 25- to 50-year rape sentence.

Mrs. Webb and the lawyer will discuss the matter at a news conference today in Menomonee Falls, Wis., he said in a telephone interview Sunday from his office there.

WMAQ-TV in Chicago reported late Sunday that Mrs. Webb, her husband, David, and McLario entered the office of a polygraph expert Saturday and left 4½ hours later.

The report said the results of a lie detector test taken by Mrs. Webb, 23, constituted the new development. The station said Dotson's attorney, Warren Lupel, implied that McLario had briefed him on the test results.

Reached by telephone at his Evanston home late Sunday, Lupel refused to confirm or deny the report, or describe the development, except to say, "I believe that it's going to be a positive statement for Gary."

Dotson's first week of freedom in six years ended Thursday when Circuit Judge Richard L. Samuels refused to reverse the conviction based on Mrs. Webb's changed statement. Dotson had been free on bail pending the hearing.

Testimony in 1979 from Mrs. Webb, then a teen-ager, had led Samuels to impose the sentence on Dotson after his conviction on rape and aggravated kidnapping charges.

Mrs. Webb, who now lives in New Hampshire, testified she made up the rape story because she feared she might be pregnant by a boyfriend.

Dotson's relatives, meanwhile, said they plan to send petitions with at least 5,000 signatures urging Dotson's release to Gov. James Thompson and the Illinois Prisoner Review Board.

Family members on Sunday visited Dotson at the Dixon Correctional Center.

Lupel said Dotson, who had not been told of the new development,

"sounded pretty good" during a telephone call.

"He said he called me as he was on his way to see the warden and request that he be taken out of the segregation unit and put in with the rest of the prison population," Lupel said, "which to me is an indication that he's feeling better."

Dotson was transferred Friday from the maximum security prison at Joliet and put in isolation Friday at medium-security Dixon.

GAME RULES:

- 1) The Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Trivia game is based on skill in answering 10 Trivia questions each week. There will be 14 weekly Trivia Games beginning Monday March 18th and ending Saturday June 22nd 1985. A total of $2,800.00 will be awarded to first place winners over the 14 weeks. Additionally, 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded weekly.
- 2) Questions for each weekly Trivia Game will be broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio at least 4 times per day on the half-hour Monday through Friday, between the hours of 6:00 AM and 6:00 P.M. Each question will be read at least two times during the week. The entire set of ten (10) questions each week will have been broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio by 6:00 PM Thursday.
- 3) Questions for each week's game will be numbered from 1 (one) to 10 (ten). The answer to each numbered question must be PRINTED or TYPED on the correspondingly numbered answer line in the official Midland Reporter-Telegram AM 1510 KMND Radio Trivia Game entry form for that week. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimiles of the entire official entry form also will be acceptable, but machine duplicated copies are prohibited.
- 4) Contestants may submit multiple entry forms each week. However, each entry form must be mailed postage paid to the designated address in a separate envelope with the number of the weekly game marked in the lower left hand corner of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week and be received at the contest address by 2:00 PM of the following Tuesday to be eligible for the weekly drawing.
- 5) The $200.00 first prize will be awarded to the entrant with all 10 questions answered correctly each week. In the case of more than one entrant with all 10 answers correct, a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded to the next 2 entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again, in the case of more than one entrant with all 10 correct answers, drawings will be held to determine the 2nd and 3rd prize winners. In the case of no entrants with all 10 correct answers, the prizes will be awarded to those with the most correct answers respectively.
- 6) Correct answers to each weekly Trivia Game Questions will be broadcast twice on AM 1510 KMND Radio Saturday morning between 6:00 AM and Noon. Trivia Game questions and answers will also be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Sunday. Weekly winners will be announced by both AM 1510 KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Wednesday.
- 7) It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the Trivia Game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.
- 8) All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and AM 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize, and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won the cash or prize. If a winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prize.
- 9) NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. Only entries bearing the correct postage and cancelled by the U.S. Postal service or entries hand delivered to the contest address by 8 a.m. Saturday will be accepted.
- 10) Judges' decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of the game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor broadcasting and members of their immediate families are ineligible.
- 11) The Grand prize, a 4 night cruise on the Mississippi River on the Delta Queen or Mississippi Queen departing and returning to New Orleans including round trip air travel to New Orleans. The winner will be chosen in a drawing at the conclusion of the 14 week trivia game. All weekly 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the grand prize drawing.

Border forecasts

New Mexico: Fair through Tuesday. Breezy Tuesday afternoon. Warmer with high Tuesday ranging from the upper 80s near the north central border to the upper 90s extreme south. Low tonight 50s north central mountains to the low 50s southeast.

Conditions forecast for 7 a.m. Tuesday

'Spring fever' conditions forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may suffer from a bout of spring fever Tuesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects tonight's fair skies with a low in the middle 50s to become sunny and warmer Tuesday with a high near 90.

Tonight's southerly winds at five to 15 mph will increase Tuesday at less than 20 mph.

Sunday's high of 82 was 13 degrees below the record set in 1935. This morning's low was 29 degrees above the 1933 record of 27.

STATE

Clear skies and unseasonably warm temperatures are forecast for all of Texas today and Tuesday.

The National Weather Service says Texas' weather is being dominated by a large area of high pressure, keeping skies clear, temperatures warm and humidities low.

Highs today and Tuesday will be in the 80s and 90s statewide, with highs ranging upward into the upper 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s at dawn Tuesday.

It was clear statewide at dawn except in the Lower Rio Grande Valley where some light patchy fog was reported.

Winds were light and variable and expected to stay that way through Tuesday, forecasters said.

NATION

Rain was scattered across the eastern half of the nation today and high winds lashed parts of the Atlantic Coast while fair skies prevailed across much of the West.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the central Gulf Coast states and through the Tennessee and lower Mississippi valleys.

Rain spread along the mid-Atlantic Coast, across southern Maine and through portions of the Great Lakes region and lower Ohio Valley.

Dense fog covered western portions of the Great Lakes region early today and patchy dense fog prompted a travelers' advisory in east central Louisiana.

Fair skies prevailed from the Plains across the Rockies to the central and southern Pacific Coast.

Early-morning temperatures reached only into the 30s in northern New England and the upper Great Lakes, but were into the 70s across south Florida, the desert Southwest and parts of central and southern California.

Langer spoils 'helluva' story for Curtis

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — "It would have been a helluva story, wouldn't it?" Curtis Strange said. "We can all dream about it."

But his hopes of the greatest comeback in Masters history turned into a puzzling nightmare Sunday in the waters of the 13th and 15th holes, and Bernhard Langer became the first West German to win any of golf's four major championships.

While Strange's bid to rebound from an opening round of 80 fell apart, it was "a dream come true," for Langer, who surged from four strokes back with nine holes to play. He claimed his first American title and became only the third foreign player to don the green jacket that goes to the Masters champion.

He won it with a 4-under-par 68 in steadily building pressure under gloomy skies that sprinkled an occasional drizzle. He won by two shots with a 282 total, 6-under-par on the Augusta National Golf Club course.

He won it by playing the last nine in 33.

But in the final analysis, he won it on the two back-nine par-5s, the 13th and 15th, both reachable in two, both prime birdie targets, but both guarded by water.

Langer made birdie on both holes; two-putting on each occasion.

And Strange made bogey-6 on each, hitting into Rae's Creek with his second shot on the 13th and lashing a 4-iron into the pond in front of the 15th green.

"I never considered laying up on either hole," Strange said. "I didn't have that far to go."

Strange, the leading money-winner on the PGA Tour this season, said the two strokes he played from the little stream trickling along a rocky ravine on the 13th "was not my downfall."

That distinction he saved for the 15th.

He looked up in amazement, disbelief clearly written on his face, when his second shot there splashed into the pond and handed Langer the lead for the first time.

"I flushed a 4-iron, and I was downwind, downhill ... I just don't understand. I'd do it all over again the same way."

There was a little pause.

"I guess the miracle of '85 didn't happen."

But it did.

It happened for Langer.

He charged through the opening provided by Strange's misfortunes and joined South African Gary Player and the current British Open champion, Seve Ballesteros as the only foreign players to win the tournament that ranks with the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA as golf's Big Four titles.

Strange, the winner of two Tour events already this season, finished with a 71 and was tied for second at 284 with Ballesteros and third-round leader Ray Floyd.

Ballesteros shot 70 and Floyd matched par-72.

Jay Haas, once Strange's roommate at Wake Forest, was next at 67-285.

Jack Nicklaus, vainly seeking an expansion of his record collection of 17 major professional titles, was tied at 286 with Craig Stadler, Bruce Lietzke and Gary Hallberg.

Hallberg, who has taken to wearing an Indiana Jones type fedora hat, managed a 70 despite a ball in the water and a double bogey on the par-3 12th. Stadler, a former winner here, and Lietzke, a cross-handed putter, also had 70s.

Nicklaus, the only five-time Masters winner, shot a 69 that, he said, "could have been a 64, 65, even lower, easy as a wink."

But his move was too little, too late and, effectively, came to an end when he 3-putted for par on the 15th.

Tom Watson, the outstanding player in golf over the last decade, and 45-year-old Lee Trevino, the current PGA champion, simply couldn't make anything happen. Each had a closing round of par 72.

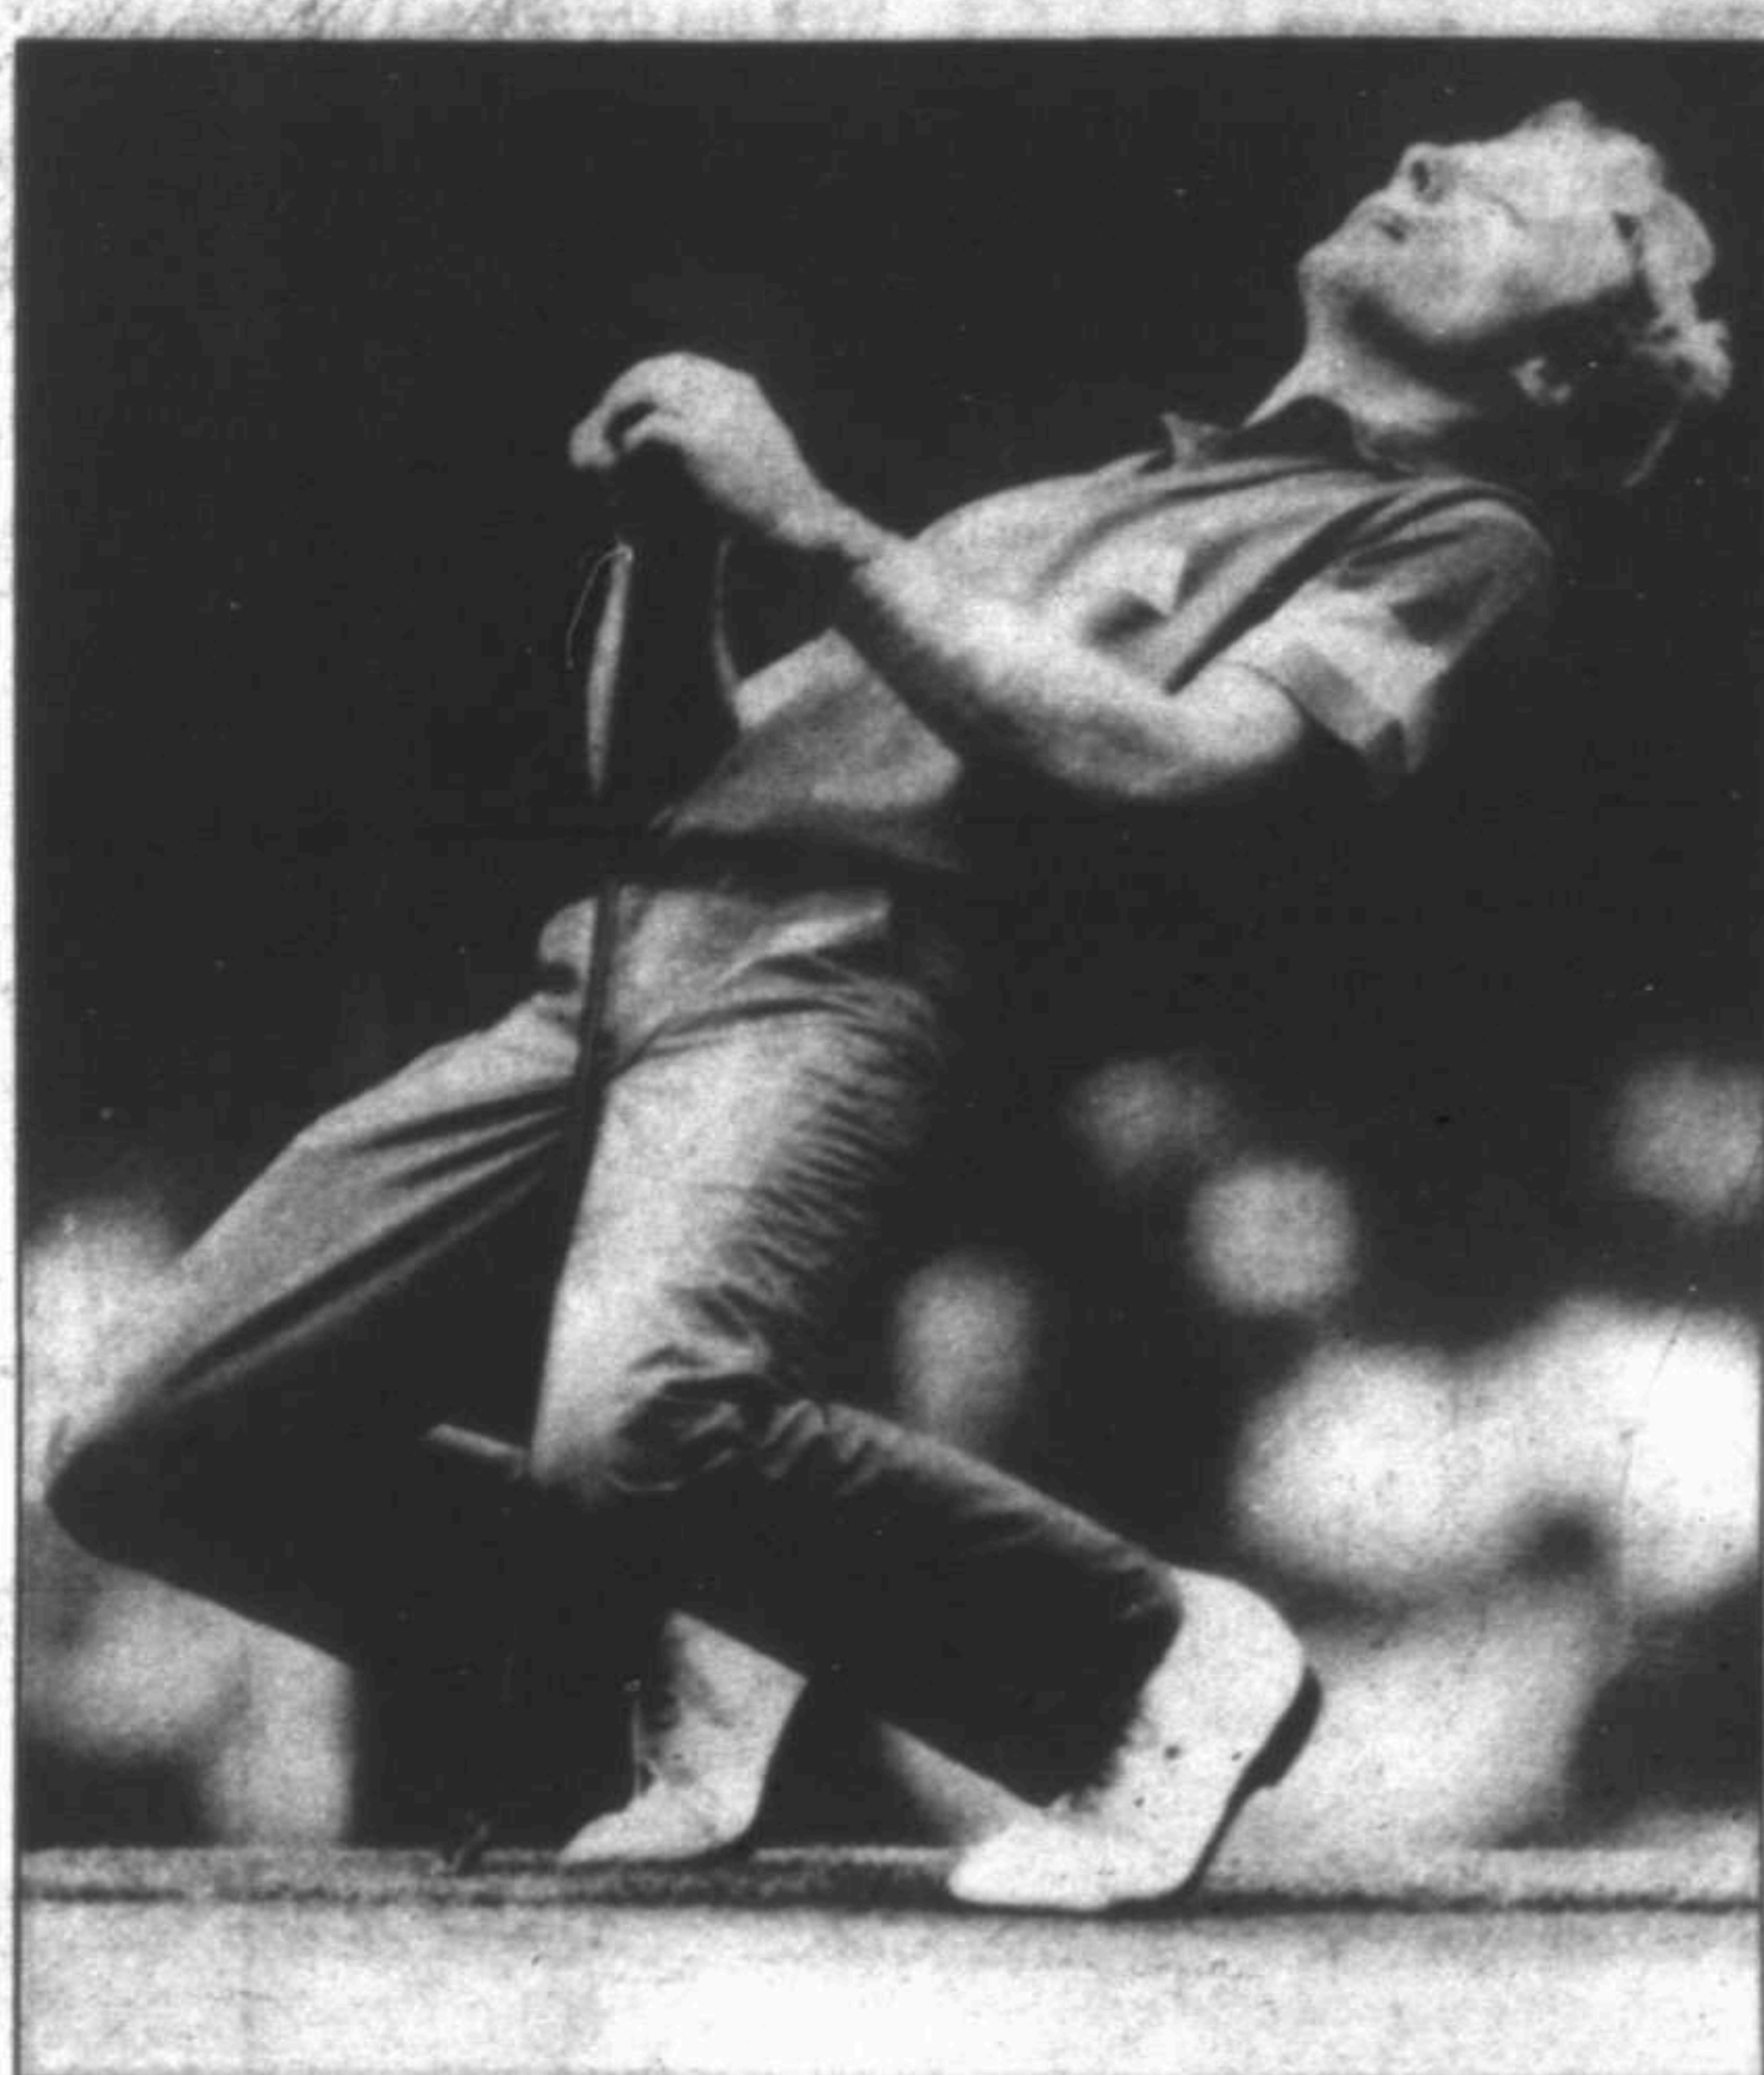

Ben Crenshaw's year as the Masters champion, which began on an emotional high, ended on a struggling 79. His 302 total was 20 shots off the winner's pace.

Langer chased Bill Rogers to the British Open title in 1981 and tied for second with Tom Watson in that event last year. He also won four national championships last season — the French, Dutch, Irish and Spanish Opens — led the European Order of Merit and more than $80,000 in a brief swing around the American tour.

Married to an American woman, he now is a full-fledged member of the U.S. PGA Tour but will split his playing time between this country and Europe.

Strange, whose wife was expecting their second child during Masters week but gave birth 10 days prematurely, was attempting to complete the biggest comeback in Masters history.

After opening the tournament with an 80, he made plane reservations home to Virginia, anticipating he would fail to qualify for the final two rounds.

'Honest, we're not the Cubs'

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

No sooner had the home debut of the Midland Angels turned into an embarrassing 9-1 rout at the hands of the Beaumont Gators (Padres), than everyone involved began to put disclaimers next to it.

"We are not the Cubs," became the catch-all phrase around the locker room.

After Sunday's error-filled debacle, Midland baseball fans might welcome the return of the team that finished 42 games below .500 the past two seasons in the Tall City.

But wait. These guys are serious. "We just have to keep playing hard and get into a winning habit," Reggie Montgomery said. "Once we start to yell and get into that habit, we'll get on a roll."

"I HOPE people don't judge us by today," starting leftfielder Greg Key said. "Ever since I've been playing baseball, I've had nothing but success, personal and team-wise. The same is true for most of these guys. We've all been winners, and we will be here, too. This 1-5 is probably the worst start I've ever had in baseball."

"I don't want the fans to think we are the Cubs — we're not. We play much more aggressive baseball than the Cubs. We're not ready to push the panic button."

Key's point is well taken. Eleven of the 22-man roster that opened the season for Midland played on Class A Redwood's California League regular season championship club. Redwood opened the year with a balzing 1-5 start.

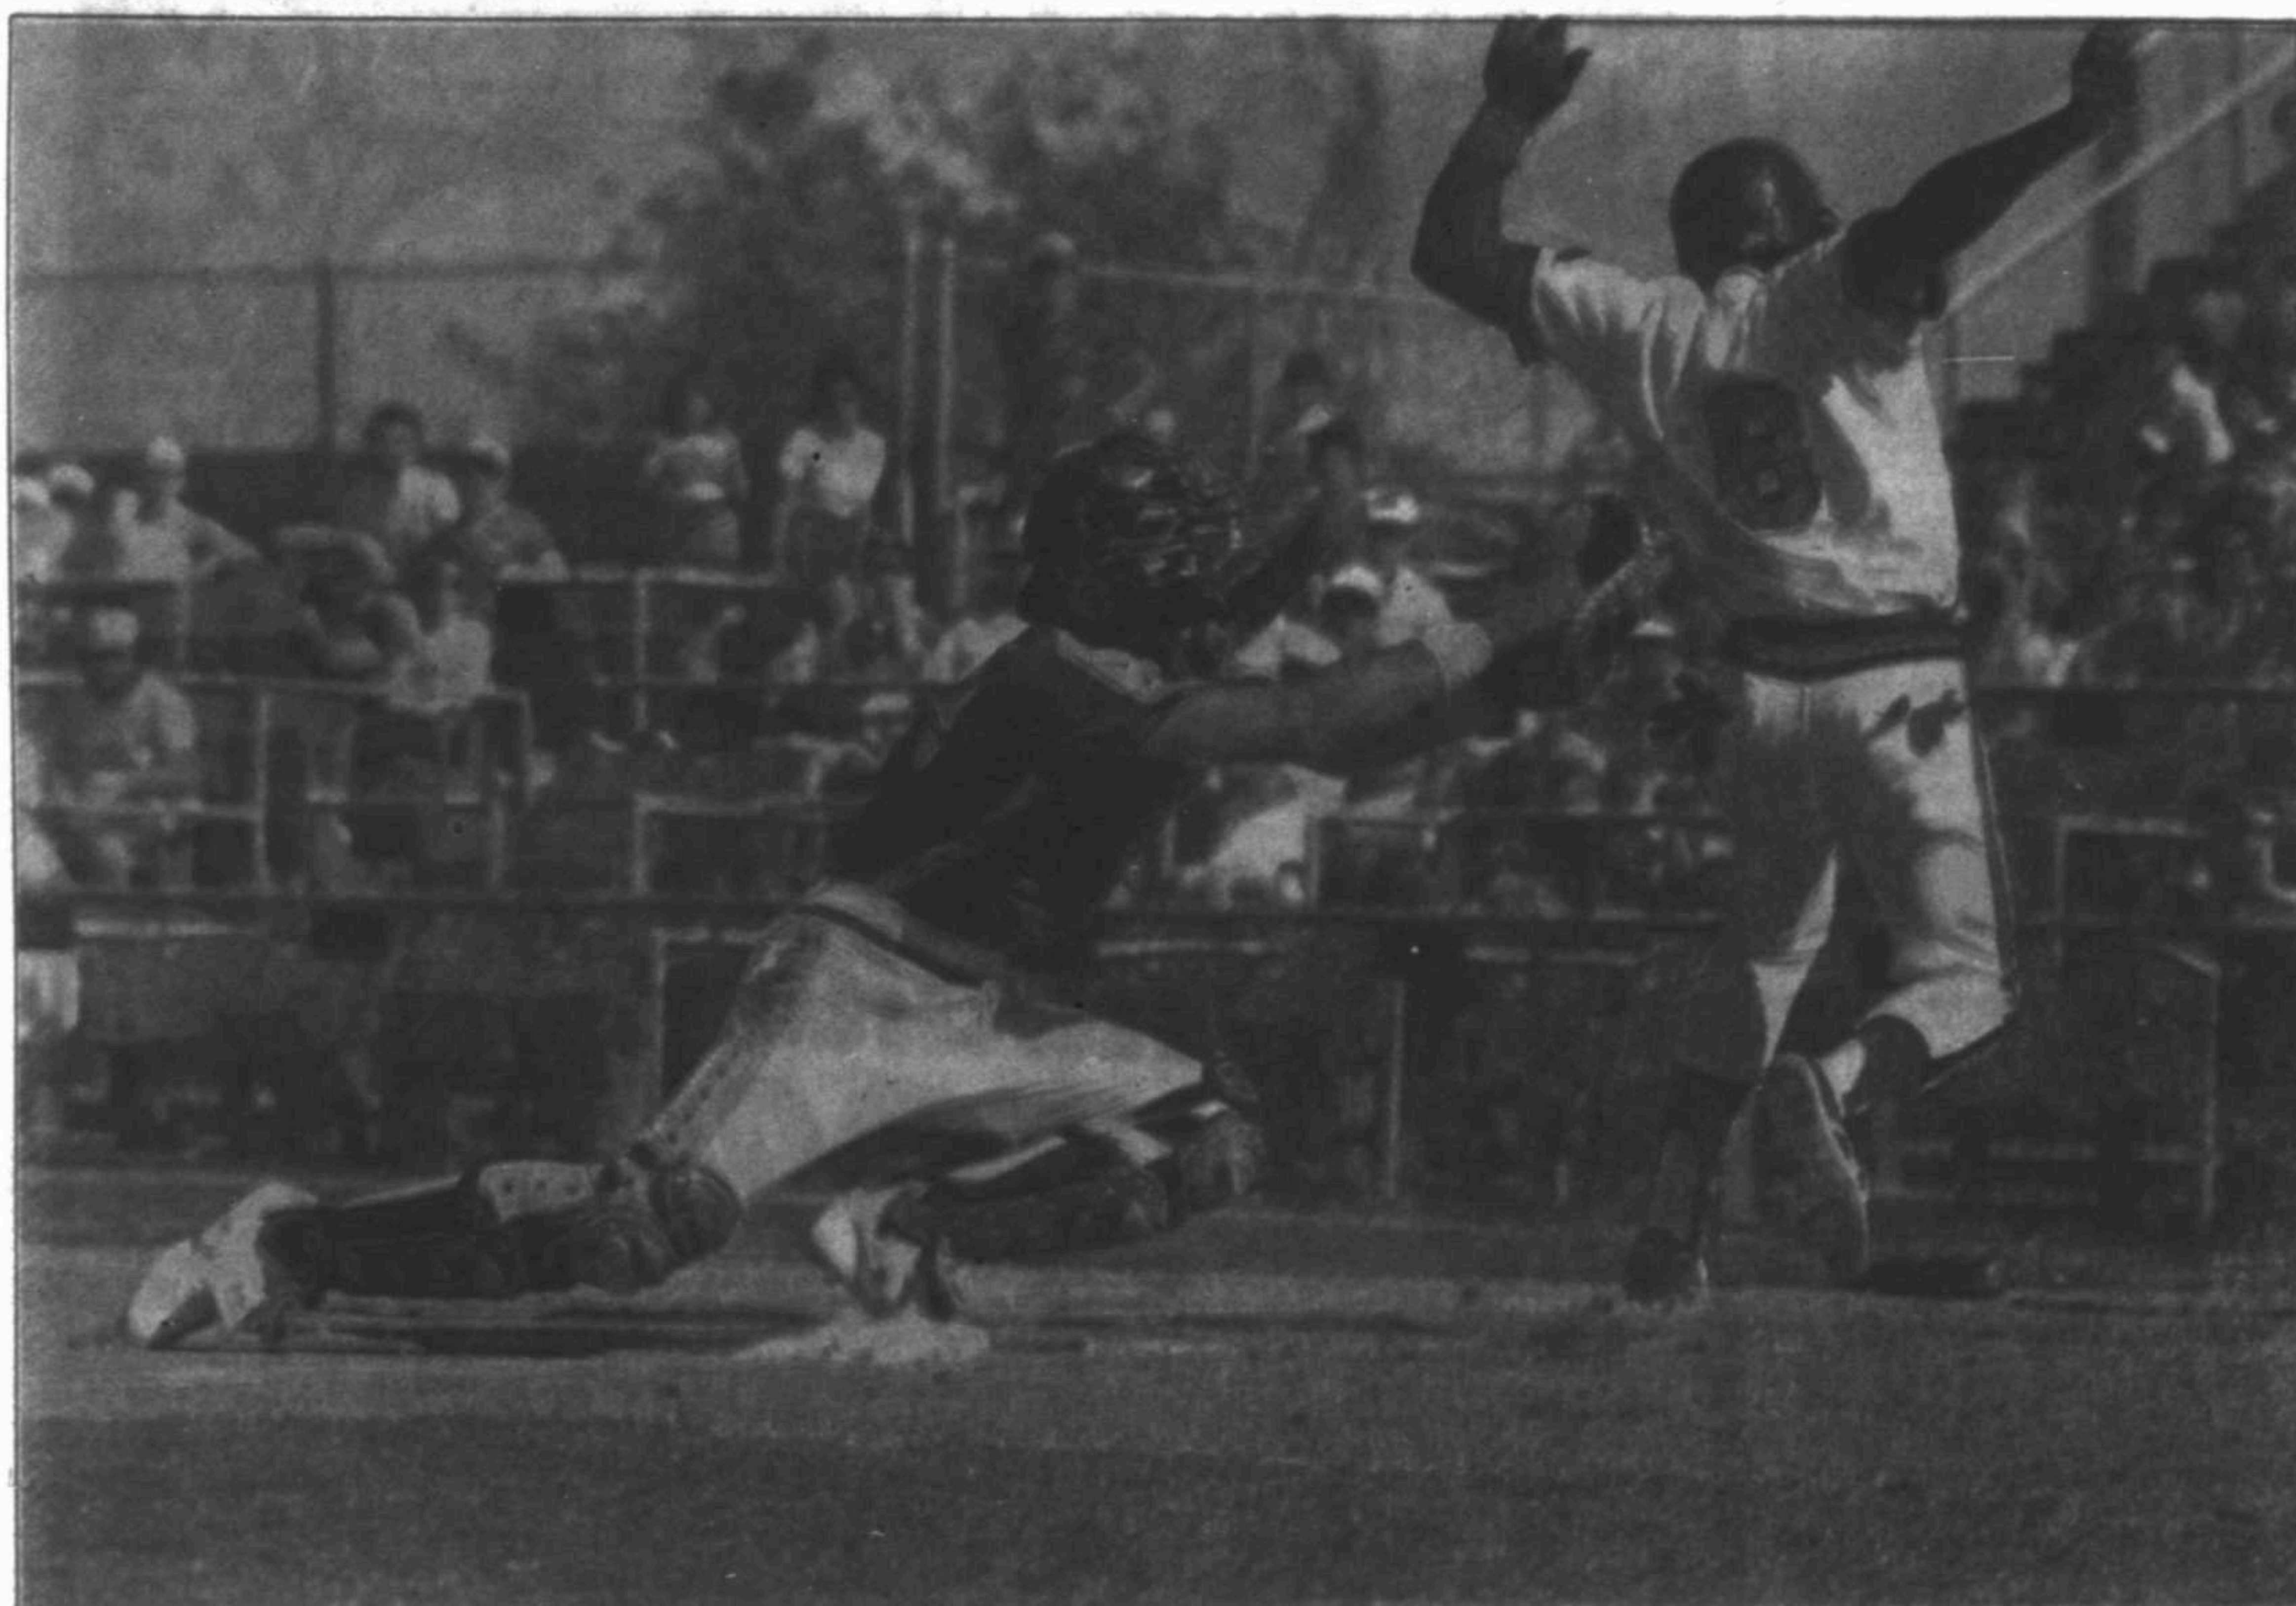

Three others played for Waterbury, runners-up in the Class AA Eastern League playoffs. One player played on the NCAA champion Cal State Fullerton team. Five played in the winter league Arizona Instructional champion team. Two played with Salt Lake (Seattle), winners of the North Division in the second half of the Pacific Coast League race.

These guys are proven winners. The idea of gelling as a team also seemed important to Sunday's starter and loser Don Timberlake. Timberlake was a member of the Redwood club last season and won nine straight decisions in the middle of the summer.

"We started the same way last year, but we just started believing in ourselves and we turned it around. We've got a lot of the same guys here, so we know what we have to do."

All these guys come from winning atmospheres, manager Joe Maddon said. "Some have played on championship teams for each of their three or four years with the Angel organization. I'm not overly concerned, yet. But I am gonna go yell at 'em."

All those thumbs spoil Angels' home debut

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

You might say the Midland Angels just couldn't get a handle on things Sunday in their Texas League home opener, a 9-1 loss to the Beaumont Gators as 1,515 sun-soaked fans gasped in dismay.

The Cubs, er Angels, made seven errors in the loss, their fifth in six games this young season. Five of the boobos came in the first two innings when the defending West division champions took a 5-0 lead. By the fourth inning it was 8-0 and folks who weren't starting rumors were beginning to wonder how things stood at the Masters.

One was suggested, direly, "The Cubs and Angels both took spring training in Mesa, do you suppose our Angels got on the wrong bus and wound up in Pittsfield?"

OF COURSE, that's all humbug. No one on last year's team made a play any better than shortstop Juan Cruz who ranged to the far side of second in the sixth to throw out swift Ricky Coleman, not even Shawon Dunston.

And, really, once the team that arrived in Midland from El Paso at 6 a.m. Sunday morning got the errors out of its system, it was a 1-1 game over the final four innings.

Manager Joe Maddon, whose infinite patience showed through in the way he handled the media with a "hey, don't panic" calm, said Sunday's game was a little bit like a road game. "We checked into the motel at 6 a.m. I got a couple of hours sleep on the bus and a couple of more after we got here.

"Now, we've got 10 days at home and I think that will be a big help in getting us squared away. I understand this bunch started a 1-5 at Redwood last year, too. So I'm not con-

Suehr, Pittsburgh ring a bell

If the residence hadn't been listed as Pittsburgh, Pa., the name Scott Suehr wouldn't have meant a thing, but on the chance that someone had misspelled a name, the young Midland Angels' pitcher was asked about it.

"The name is not 'Sewer,' it's 'Seer' and, yes, Gus Suhr was a great uncle or something way back. He dropped the 'e' in there somewhere."

Gus Suhr was a fine defensive first baseman for the Pittsburgh Pirates back in the days of the Waner boys, Cy Blanton, Arky Vaughan, Pie Traynor...the 1930s. At one time Gus held the National League record for most consecutive games. No one really made that much of a big deal out of it in those days, not because playing in close to 900 games wasn't an achievement, but because of that guy with the Yankees over in the other league. His string made everything else pale in comparison...and still does.

Suehr, as it turned out, was the Angel wearing the halo on the pitching rubber Sunday, a day marked by the anguish of a 9-1 defeat in what was to signal the beginning of a "new tradition." Okay, it took Dallas

Green a while to get his new tradition going in Chicago, so be patient a day or two.

"We are a strikeout pitching staff," said Suehr, who attended William Carey College in Hattiesburg, Miss., "Out in El Paso, we walked a lot of people and I think it was partly because of that mound. It never seemed to be the same when you came down with your lead foot. This is a good mound here and I think you'll see a difference between the strikeouts and walks."

Suehr backed up his words with an eight up, eight down relief chore...

LAST YEAR Manager Bobby Tolan had a good experienced team at Beaumont, but the Pat Caseys, James Steels, and Mark Gillaspies are gone. Now Tolan seems to have a good young team.

Outfielder Shane Mack was a first rounder out of UCLA and shortstop Gary Green was the No. 2 draft choice last spring out of Oklahoma State. Outfielder Ricky Coleman hit .351 at Reno last year and Midland players know all about him.

Any suspicion that the departure of the seasoned veterans might make the Gators easier pickings doesn't appear likely.

NOTING that the Chicago Cubs shuffled second baseman Dan Rohn, shortstop Dave Owen, catcher Bill Hayes and outfielder Billy Hatcher, all former Midland Cubs, back to AAA Des Moines, another former Midland Cub, Joe Carter, said, "I told them to keep their heads up. Just because the Cubs don't want them, that doesn't mean nobody does. Dallas (Green) won't be content until all the young players who were there before he came from Philadelphia are weeded out."

"They'll be competitive for the next two or three years, but after that they'll start to get older. Right now, there isn't any power hitting in the minor league system, and you'll see that in Des Moines. I'm glad I'm out."

Carter and Mel Hall were traded last summer to Cleveland in the Rick Sutcliffe deal that produced a divisional title for Chicago.

Carter and Hall both figure prominently in the Indians' plans. "Dallas Green said none of us were capable of playing the big leagues," recalls Carter. "They said I couldn't hit a fast ball, but I went 3-for-3 the first time we played them this spring and I hit two fastballs off the wall."

Bobby Bonds predicts a 40 homer season for Joe, who hit 13 last year in just 244 at bats and Manager Pat Corrales said, "He's my left fielder. I knew last year that Joe was going to be a regular, but I didn't know how long it would take. I knew he'd adjusted when he got six rbis off Ron Guidry in one game..."

SHAWON Dunston isn't the only ex-Midland Cub shortstop involved in controversy this spring. Dunston, at Midland last year, was named to replace veteran Larry Bowa, a move that resulted in some heated dialogue between coach Don Zimmer and Bowa. Across town, Manager Tony LaRussa will play Ozzie Guillen at shortstop for the White Sox over former Midland infielder Scott Fletcher. "Guillen can't match Fletcher in overall ability," says catcher Carlton Fisk, coming to Fletcher's support. "Guillen's throwing arm is a little below the kind of throwing strength it takes to be a major league shortstop..."

Flying Tigers, Mariners keep records unblemished

Just like last year, the Detroit Tigers and Seattle Mariners are off to sizzling starts. And although only one of them sizzled throughout the 1984 season, neither is surprised with their rapid getaway.

Detroit, 5-0 after Sunday's 5-1 victory over Kansas City, and Seattle, 6-0 for the first time ever following a similar 5-1 triumph over Minnesota, are the only unbeaten teams in the American League.

"We already have confidence," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said. "We are the world champions. I heard all the preseason talk about how all the other teams were better.

Toronto was supposed to be a lock. We'll just try to mind our own business and stay in the league."

"Being 6-0 doesn't surprise me," said Seattle's Spike Owen, who singled home the first of five seventh-inning runs. "We have a good team with a great pitching staff." The Mariners started fast last season with a 6-1 mark but slipped to a 74-88 finish and a tie for fifth in the AL West.

The Tigers, who won their first nine games last year en route to a 35-5 start and a 104-58 regular season, own first place in the AL East by themselves after Baltimore and Boston suffered their first setbacks, the Oriole Bradley greeted Rick Lysander with 'pping a homer, two doubles and a single, and Doyle Alexander allowed three hits in 6 2-3 innings before getting one-hit relief from Jim Aker. Alexander yielded a two-run homer in the first inning to Eddie Murray and a solo shot in the seventh by Wayne Gross.

The Blue Jays, who have lost 40 of 54 games at Memorial Stadium, rapped out 12 hits against Mike Boddicker and Sammy Stewart, including an RBI double and a run-scoring single by Willie Upshaw in the fifth inning and Mulliniks' two-run homer in the seventh.

White Sox 11, Red Sox 6
Carlton Fisk, who missed the first three games with a hip pointer, drove in four runs with a single and homer and Chicago rode a seven-run fourth inning to prevent Boston from what would have been its first 5-0 start since 1946. The White Sox bombed relievers Steve Crawford and Mike Trujillo for 13 hits and 11 runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Fisk drove in a run with a single in the third inning and belted a three-run homer over the screen high atop the left-field wall to cap the big fourth. Rudy Law had three hits and two RBIs in a 15-hit attack as Chicago rallied from a 5-1 second-inning deficit.

"It was my first day against live pitching in 10 days," Fisk said. "The hip doesn't bother me much catching, but it hurts to swing."

Brewers 8, Rangers 1
Paul Molitor went 4-for-4 and Paul Householder hit a three-run homer while Moose Haas scattered six hits, including Toby Harrah's eighth-inning homer, as Milwaukee won its fourth in a row after an opening loss. The winless Rangers dropped their fifth in a row.

Milwaukee scored twice in the first inning on Ben Oglivie's grounder and Doug Loman's single. The Brewers made it 4-0 with two unearned runs in the second on RBI singles by Ed Romero and Ted Simmons. Householder homered in the fifth for a 7-0 lead.

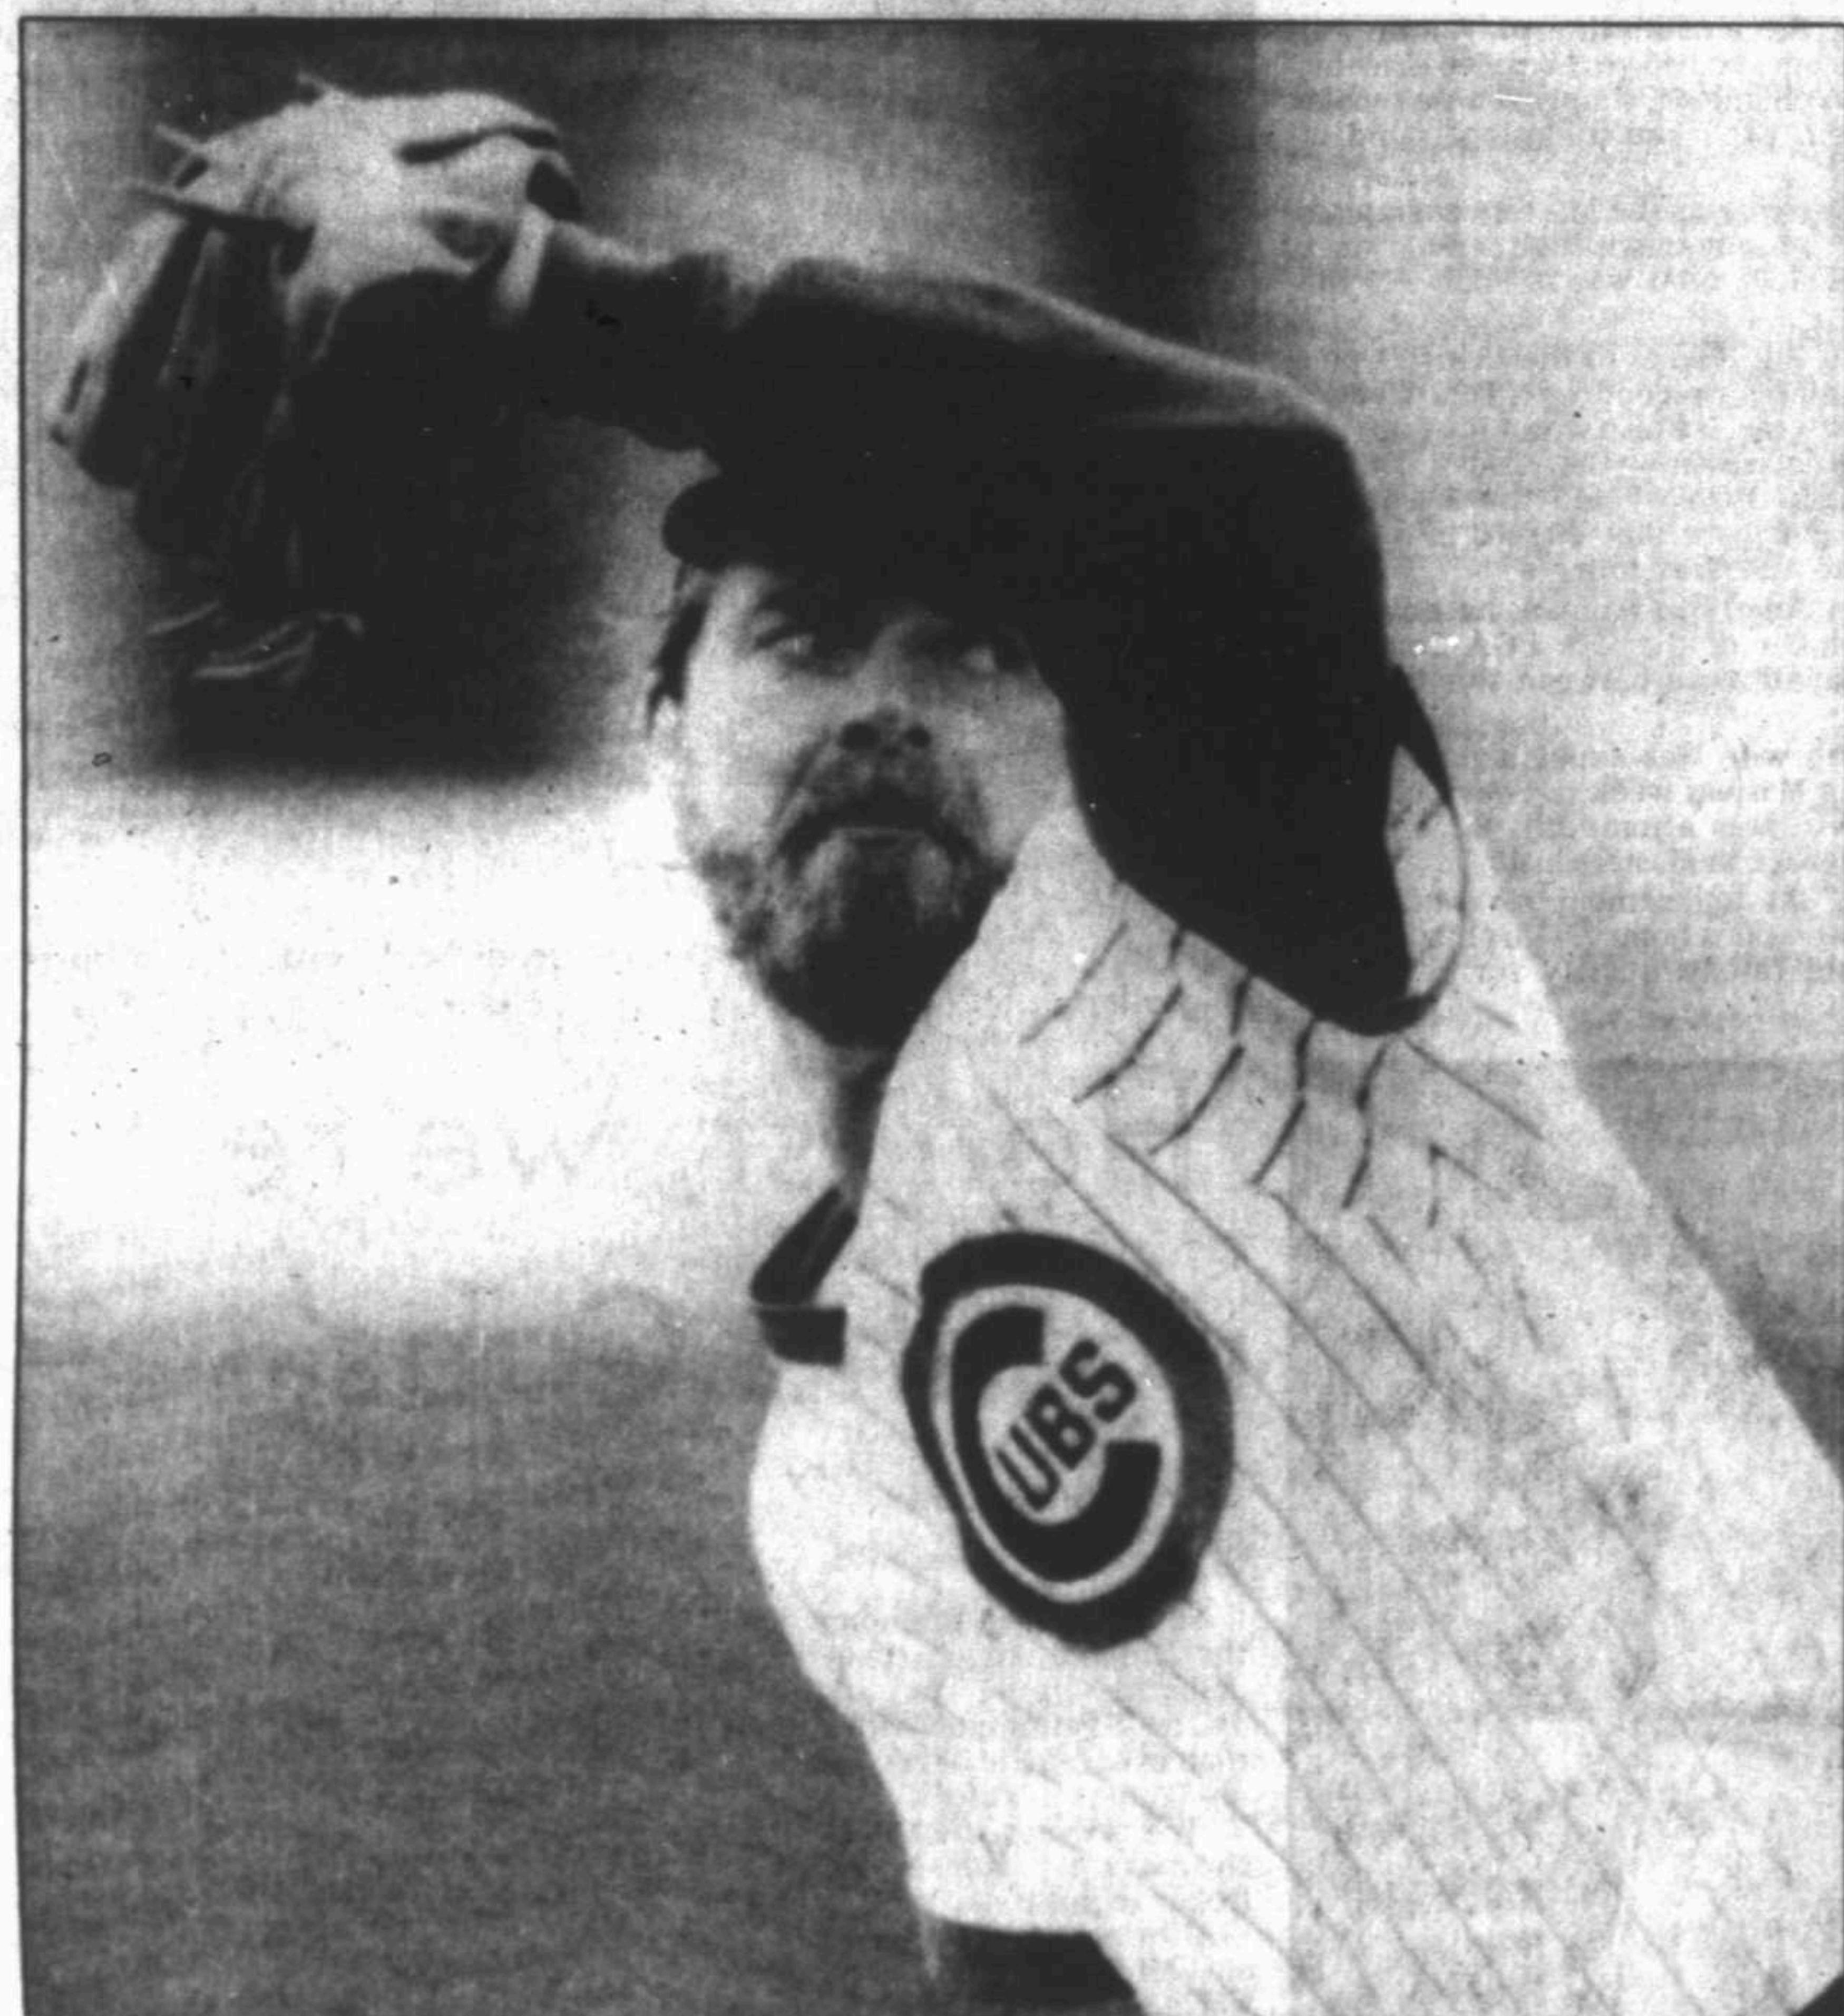

Yankees 2, Indians 1
Phil Niekro and Dave Righetti combined on a six-hitter and Henry Cotto's double ignited a two-run eighth inning. Niekro, the 46-year-old knuckleballer, yielded five hits in 7 2-3 innings while striking out nine for the 28th victory of his 22-year major-league career, tying him for 19th place on the all-time victory list.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the third on Julio Franco's double and Mel Hall's single. Neal Heaton blanked New York on four singles until Cotto's leadoff double in the eighth. Tom Waddell came on and Willie Randolph sacrificed Cotto to third and reached first safely when first baseman Pat Tabler threw late to third. Bobby Meacham singled Cotto home, and Randolph taking Don Mattingly hit into a double play.

Athletics 8, Angels 1
Mike Davis drove in four runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly, giving him 12 RBIs in six games. Chris Codiroli pitched three-hit ball through seven innings before leaving because of a slightly stiff neck. Davis' second-inning homer off Mike Witt was the second of the season for the Oakland outfielder, who drove in 10 runs in the three-game series.

"I had all the confidence in the world last year. It just didn't do me any good," said Davis, who hit only 230 in 1984. "No matter how hard I tried, things didn't get better. It sure feels good to get started this way. I believe in me, that I can go out there and do the things they pay me to do."

Ryan, 38, wins again

Nolan six-hits Phillies

Associated Press

At age 38, Nolan Ryan is still amazing.

"He's throwing as hard or harder than last year," marveled Philadelphia's Von Hayes after Ryan sparked again Sunday with a six-hitter as the Houston Astros beat the Phillies 5-3.

And, while he continues strike out batters by the bucketful — he fanned nine to raise his all-time, major-league-leading total to 3,877 — what's even more dazzling is his dwindling bases on balls total.

Ryan, long considered a hard thrower who had control troubles, walked just one Philadelphia batter. In his 1985 debut last Tuesday, he held Los Angeles to three hits over seven innings and did not walk anyone.

"Overall, I was pleased," said Ryan, now 24 in his 18th big league season.

Meanwhile, 41-year-old Steve Carlton, No. 2 on the all-time strikeout list, continued to struggle and lasted only five innings at the Astrodome.

Carlton, 0-2, struck out two — he now has fanned 3,877 in his career — but was tagged for five runs on nine hits. He walked home two runs in the second inning and uncorked two wild pitches in the fifth, allowing another run to score.

The game marked the first time Ryan has beaten Carlton in five decisions. Ryan said, as he has maintained since he and Carlton began flip-flopping for the strikeout lead last year, that he does not pay particular attention to that duel.

"I've never really gotten into the strikeout aspect of it," he said. "I'm more concerned about winning than with how many I strike out."

One of those who wasn't in a mood to talk about Ryan's performance was Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia. Schmidt went 0-for-4 and is hitless in 11 at-bats this season.

National League

"Come back in one hour," Schmidt said when asked about Ryan.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Rick Sutcliffe fired a four-hitter in winning his 16th straight regular-season game over two seasons. Chicago, meanwhile, managed only two hits — but they were home runs by Jody Davis and Gary Matthews and were enough to win.

Davis homered in the second inning to break a 1-1 tie at Wrigley Field. Matthews belted a two-run shot in the sixth.

Both home runs came off David Palmer, 0-1, who went seven innings before Bert Roberge finished up. It marked the second straight game in which Davis and Matthews homered.

Mets 4, Reds 0

Dwight Gooden pitched a four-hitter and struck out 10 in helping New York remain the only undefeated team in the NL. The Mets are 5-0, all at home, and are off to the best start in their history.

Gary Carter homered to lead off the sixth inning, breaking a scoreless tie. The home run was the third of the season for the newly acquired catcher. All three have been solo shots, and each provided the margin of victory.

Jay Tibbs, a teammate with Gooden at the Mets' Class A Lynchburg team in 1983, took the loss. The 20-year-old Gooden, now 1-0, and the 23-year-old Tibbs, 0-2, are the two youngest pitchers in the NL.

Braves 3, Padres 1

Dale Murphy, the two-time Most Valuable Player in the NL, continued his torrid start in 1985. Murphy lined a two-run homer — the fourth straight game in which he has homered — to give host Atlanta a 3-0 lead against LaMar Hoyt. In five games this season, Murphy is batting .500 with 10 RBIs to go along with his four home runs.

Braves starter Rick Mahler gave up one run on six hits before leaving with one out in the ninth inning. Reliever Terry Forster walked one batter to put San Diego runners at first and third, which brought on Bruce Sutter, who got the final two outs for his second save.

The game's last out came on a grounder to second baseman Glenn Hubbard, who flipped to first base for his 12th assist of the game. The 12 assists in a game tied the major-league record for second basemen, accomplished four times, the last by Chicago's Ryne Sandberg in 1983.

Cardinals 10, Pirates 4
In Pittsburgh, Joaquin Andujar pitched seven strong innings and delivered a two-run single to help St. Louis win its first game.

Giants 8, Dodgers 4

Jeff Leonard started a five-run uprising in the sixth inning with a line-drive single that caromed off Los Angeles starter Jerry Reuss, and Chris Brown provided the big blow in the inning with a two-run double off reliever Tom Niedenfuer.

Leonard's single hit Reuss in the right forearm and then glanced off his jaw. Reuss stayed in the game, but walked Bob Brenly and David Green. Niedenfuer then yielded Brown's double that put San Francisco ahead 3-1.

Pinch hitter Chili Davis followed with a two-run single and Dan Gladden added an RBI single.

Rob Deer later hit a two-run homer for the visiting Giants. Deer has five hits in his major-league career, four of them home runs. Deer has gotten three of those hits against the Dodgers — all homers.

the first inning on a series of walks, a force out and an error. In the fifth inning Arkansas added five more runs when the Travelers batted around and took advantage of two Tulsa errors and two walks.

All four batters walked by Tulsa pitchers scored.

Arkansas starter John Martin had a no-hitter through five innings, but lost in on a leadoff single in the top of the sixth by Mike Jirschele. Tulsa starter Dwayne Henry was the losing pitcher.

Texas League

Reggie Williams had a homer for San Antonio and Glen Braggs slugged two home runs for El Paso.

The winning pitcher was Adrian Meager, 1-0. The loser was Dan Burns, 0-1.

The Arkansas Travelers took advantage of errors by the Tulsa Drillers to take a 7-1 victory in the first game of their doubleheader.

Islanders, Bruins, Sabres stay alive

Associated Press

The New York Islanders, Boston Bruins and Buffalo Sabres staved off first-round elimination in the National Hockey League playoffs Sunday night, while Winnipeg defeated Calgary to close out that series 3-1.

Doug Small and Laurie Boschman scored short-handed goals in the second period to lift Winnipeg to a 5-3 victory over the Calgary Flames, giving the Jets their first-ever triumph in an NHL playoff series.

The victory, before an Olympic Saddledome crowd of 16,883, gave Winnipeg the best-of-five Smythe Division semifinal 3-1.

The Jets, who had lost their previous three playoff series since entering the league in 1979, will play Edmonton in the division final, starting Thursday in Edmonton.

Winnipeg, playing without center Dale Hawerchuk and No. 1 goaltender Brian Hayward, erupted for four straight goals in the second period to take a 5-1 lead.

Bryan Trottier scored off a face-off with 68 seconds remaining and goalie Billy Smith stopped

Bobby Carpenter with 30 seconds to go on a penalty shot, giving the Islanders a 6-4 comeback victory over the Washington Capitals. That fifth and deciding game will be Tuesday night at Landover, Md., where the Capitals won a pair at the beginning of the series.

New York trailed 4-2 after two periods, but tied it with goals by Patrick Flatley and Mike Bossy before Trottier beat Doug Jarvis on a face-off and shot the puck between the legs of goaltender Al Jensen.

With 30 seconds remaining, the Islanders, who have been in the Stanley Cup finals five straight years, were penalized by referee Andy Van Hellemond for intentionally moving the net off its moorings.

But Smith stopped Carpenter's 15-foot wrist shot, and Bossy scored into an empty net with only 16 seconds remaining.

Ken Linseman had three goals and two assists in the last two periods as Boston erased a 4-1 deficit to overtake the Montreal Canadiens 7-6 and force their series to a fifth game Tuesday night in Montreal.

Linseman topped off the amazing comeback with the winning goal at 13:12 of the third period. His second goal of the second period had tied the game 6-6.

Linseman also had two assists in the second stanza to tie the NHL playoff record of four points in a period shared by five other players.

Dave Andreychuk scored three goals in the third period to lift Buffalo to a 7-4 victory over the Quebec Nordiques, tying that series 2-2 and setting up a fifth game Tuesday at Quebec, where the Sabres haven't won in their last 11 games.

Craig Ramsay, Phil Housley, Gil Perreault and Ric Sella also scored for the Sabres, while Michel Goulet scored twice and Paul Gillis and Brent Ashton added single tallies for the Nordiques.

Dr. Strack scores MCC act

From Staff Reports

The Midland Country Club reported a hole-in-one Sunday on the 175-yard, par three, eighth hole.

Dr. Dean Strack used a six-iron to record the ace. It was witnessed by Mike Locker, Alex Locker, Walt Locker, Leslie Locker, Laura Locker and Tara Baumgardner.

HONEST

And yell Maddon did. He termed the teams' performance embarrassing — which it was, to the players and the Angel organization. Maddon wasn't ready to offer as excuses the team's arrival at 6 a.m. Sunday from a late game in El Paso Saturday, or the fact that they hadn't been able to settle into their apartments before the game, or that the Angels are coming off a short 14-day spring training period.

SO WHAT is wrong with these guys?

"We've had to come from behind in nearly every game we've played, that begins to wear on people after a while," Maddon said. "Our pitchers have just not gotten the job done. And we've left so many people in scoring position with less than two outs in the past few days it is ridiculous. It's just a slump situation which we'll have to rectify soon."

Once the team comes out of its slump, Maddon feels the fans in Midland will be more than eager to show their appreciation.

"Despite what happened out on the field, the fans were great," Maddon said. "They're going to see a better brand of baseball than they've Promises, promises.

So far, the Angels are nothing more than that. But give them a chance. Let's see where they are when they head for San Antonio on the 24th. It can't get a whole lot worse.

cerned yet...we've got a long way to go."

Also the organization's batting coach Rick Down and Joe Coleman, the pitching coach, are in Midland to check out the players. One of Coleman's first projects will be Don Timberlake, a 15-game winner at Redwood last year, who failed to last through the third.

"He's not right. You can see it from the side. He's not throwing the way he should," said Maddon. "So after he came out, he threw about 30 pitches in the bullpen and we worked on what he was doing."

ONE of the day's bright spots was the crowd. "I thought it was great," said Maddon.

It showed up ready to cheer something, anything, and finally got the opportunity when Doug Davis, a catcher out of North Carolina State, whistled a low drive over the fence in dead left to open the fifth. Angel fans really got into it when Mark McLemore doubled down the line. Greg Key was hit by a pitch and Devon White singled to center. McLemore, however, didn't stop at third and became the first out, gunned down standing up at the plate. The promising rally then withered on the vine.

Even with errorless support, Midland might have trouble beating Candy Sierra, who went seven innings in eight-hit, one-walk style, a long way to go for this early in the year. Sierra was 11-4 with a 3.72 earned-run-average at Reno last year, starting 16 games and completing seven. As they say, he knows how to pitch.

Midland used four pitchers, and Scott Suehr was the most impressive, retiring eight in a row in his 2 2/3 innings and striking out three in the process.

Very encouraging, opined Maddon, who pointed out that Suehr is coming off arm trouble in spring training. "He has pitched three times and has thrown well each time, although he had some control trouble in one of his El Paso outings."

In tonight's 7 p.m. game, Beaumont Manager Bobby Tolan will throw Ed Vosburg, the former University of Arizona ace who was in the Texas League last, 13-11, and Ken Angulo will go for Midland.

AWAY HALOS—The Angel Stadium scoreboard was a no-show for the opener, knocked out of action by a lightning strike Friday night. Juan Cruz and Tito Nanni already grand stand fan clubs. It's "Crrr-uuuuuu" as in "Booooo" Powell and the "Tee-Toe, Tee-Toe" chant ought to be worth a few hits for the Angel acquired in a trade with the Mariners organization. At 480, McLemore is swinging the hottest bat. Shane Mack, No. 1 draft choice out of UCLA, last June, and shortstop Gary Green, the No. 2 pick out of Oklahoma State, are two of the Gators most promising players. The Angels faced many of the Gators at Reno, California League last year.

The Calamity Creek Boondoggle is located on the Woodward Ranch, 16 miles south of Alpine and about five miles off of Texas Highway 118.

Wes Hambach of Alpine faces an eggs-acting task with this attempted catch in the Boondoggle egg toss contest.

Skip Rhodes, a minerals geologist from Alpine, cooks up chili for those attending the Boondoggle.

Boondoggle

Calamity Creek's annual Boondoggle was held earlier this month at the Woodward Ranch near Alpine. Events included a horseshoe tourney, a chili cook-off, lemon rolls and a cow-chip throwing contest. Among the musical performers were Cody Hubach and Alvin Crow from Austin, Longview's Dennis Ross and the Axberg Brothers, The Moon Pie Daince from El Paso, Odessa's Wayne Sterling and Lubbock's Ron Riley, Mike Pritchard and Jesse "Guitar" Taylor. Portions of proceeds from gate fees, an auction and the chili cookoff went to the local chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which provides services for 48 counties in West Texas.

Jim Rister, of Abilene, plays a tune for some new-found friends he met at the Boondoggle.

DEATHS

Stanley A. Lewis

Stanley A. Lewis, 66, of Big Spring died Saturday in a local hospital following a sudden illness. Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Eleventh Street and Birdwell Lane Church of Christ with Elbert Garrison and Al Jolly officiating. Burial will follow in Trinity Memorial Park at Big Spring.

He was born June 22, 1915 in Snyder to Gabe and Martha Lewis. He was reared in Ira and married Lena Mae Lewis Dec. 7, 1970 in Stanton. He had lived in West Texas all of his life and worked in the oil fields for over 40 years. He had worked on the first discovery well in the Sprayberry Field in the Permian Basin. He also had farmed for several years. The couple moved to Stanton in 1950 and lived there until 1955 where they owned and operated a grocery store in the Valley View Community. He served as County Commissioner there. They moved to Big Spring in 1955 and he worked as a pumpjack for A.K. Guthrie for 21 years and continued to work until his death. He was a member of the Eleventh Street and Birdwell Lane Church of Christ. He had been active in the Democratic Party.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Ronnie D. Lewis of Midland and Jerry R. Lewis of Garland; one daughter, Martha Womack of Odessa; two brothers, Buster Lewis of Lorraine and Roy Lewis of Mangum, Okla.; eight grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Pallbearers are Eldon Massingill, Rip Lewis, Irving Jarratt, Wayne

McCoug, Gary Plew, Butch Burchett, J.L. Farris, Red Womack and Charlie Kelly.

Pat L. Blewett

Services for Pat L. Blewett of Odessa are pending at Ellis Funeral Home. He died Sunday at a Midland hospital.

Alpha Lynn Tillman

Services for Alpha Lynn Tillman will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. He will be assisted by the Rev. Bob Herod of Princeton. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Mrs. Tillman died Sunday at a Midland hospital.

She was born Jan. 13, 1898 in Coryell County. After graduating from high school, she received a teaching degree and taught school in Denton from 1917-26. From 1926-44, she was affiliated with the Texas Extension Service and moved to Midland in 1939. Ten years later she became a teacher with the Midland Independent School District, where she taught until 1958.

She was married to William Roy Tillman who preceded her in death. The couple farmed north of Midland County for several years. She was a member of Bellview Baptist Church.

Survivors include two daughters, Myrtle Tillman Johnson of Odessa and Ann Tillman Debnam of Lamesa; one sister, Avis L. Smith of Ozona, Ark.; four grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

Houston hotel falls to progress

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — A downtown Houston hotel that housed presidents and powerbrokers for 56 years was reduced to rubble and dust in 30 seconds.

"It's just a pile of trash now," said Houston Fire Lt. J.P. Morgan, looking over the site where the Lamar Hotel once stood. "That was something to see."

Thousands of spectators cheered Sunday morning as 600 pounds of strategically-placed dynamite blasted the 16-story hotel and a 22-story adjacent office building.

Just before 8 a.m., the explosives were detonated in a 7 1/2-second blast that shook windows and showered dust over several blocks of the city's downtown area.

"If you ever have been near a B-52 strike, you know what it's like," said Floyd Holloway of Houston, who stood behind police barricades photographing the event.

"All in all, I'm absolutely delighted," said Jim Redyke, whose Tulsa-based demolition company has conducted about 200 similar operations and has been preparing for the Houston blast since late January. "I'm very pleased with the results."

"It never gets routine," he added. "My adrenalin is so pumped up."

A spectator was hurt when he was cut by flying glass as about a dozen windows broke in an office building directly across Main Street from the Lamar Hotel, according to police Lt. R.E. Headley.

Thousands of spectators armed with cameras or videotape recorders, began flocking into downtown just after dawn. Hundreds of others perched atop skyscrapers which surround the razed buildings.

A police officer using the loud-speaker in his patrol car counted down the final seconds until an official of Gerald Hines Interests, which plans to develop the site later, pushed the detonating button.

The only reaction at first came from a few pigeons roused from the doomed structure, then the walls buckled, the ground trembled and the shock waves caused plate glass windows in nearby buildings to waver. The walls then caved in, sending a dark brown cloud of dust bursting in all directions like a huge snowball. After three months of preparation, it was over in about 30 seconds.

About 15 minutes after the blast, the dust began clearing and cleanup crews already were sweeping up debris. The cleanup was expected to take about two months.

The 56-year-old Lamar, built by Houston financier Jesse Jones, at one time was the meeting place for the city's power structure. Former President Lyndon Johnson had a room at the Lamar and its Suite 8-F was legendary in political history as Texas' version of a "smoke-filled room."

The 22-story C&I Building in downtown Houston falls Sunday as 600 pounds of explosives detonated. After the rubble is cleared, the area will be used as a parking lot.

LULAC says Texas Guard shouldn't have participated

EL PASO (AP) — Texas Gov. Mark White should not have allowed Texas National Guard troops to participate in the just completed military maneuvers in Honduras, the director of the League of United Latin American Citizens says.

Johnny Mata told a district LULAC convention here that White should have followed the lead of other governors by refusing to have Texas troops participate in the Big Pine III military maneuvers in Honduras.

Mata claims that by accompanying the troops to Honduras, White has endorsed U.S. military involvement in Central America.

"Some states, such as California, decided not to send their National Guard," he said. "I think the governor could have done the same thing. We (LULAC) strongly oppose the governor's stand.

"The U.S. should stop and look at the conditions which are causing the rebellions in Central America, before they send more troops," said Mata, of Houston.

"The people are rebelling because of dire economic conditions," Mata said. "They need economic relief, not military interference."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, also was a guest speaker at the convention for El Paso area LULAC members, said Saturday the sending of the Texas National Guard was not solely White's decision.

"It was a federally mandated order," Hobby said.

Mata disagreed, saying White had the authority to keep the Texas National Guard out of Central America.

Youth's sexual assault trial to be held in San Angelo

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The aggravated sexual assault trial of a 17-year-old Odessa youth, accused of the Sept. 30 rape of a 21-year-old Midland woman in her Medical Center Hospital bed, will be held in San Angelo, probably in June.

Odessa's 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater this morning granted the motion of Reginald Timothy McNeill's attorney, G. David Smith, for the venue change without hearing from a number of witnesses called by state and defense attorneys, including news media representatives from Odessa and Midland.

Ater's action came after Smith cited a legal precedent, which stated prosecutors must challenge the credibility of persons signing affidavits for the defense calling for a change of venue because of excessive publicity.

Smith contended the state's affidavits failed to challenge the credibility of affidavits he submitted with his change of venue motion five days prior to McNeill's March 27 pre-trial hearing.

Smith further contended that, as a matter of law, since the state had failed to challenge, he was entitled to have the trial transferred to another location. "Opposing facts are not sufficient" to prevent a change of venue, he said, referring to state affidavits.

McNeill, who was a part time MCH employee, is alleged to have entered the woman's hospital room after she had been partially sedated and sexually assaulted her.

During the March pretrial hearing, Smith sought to have statements admitting his guilt to investigating officers barred as trial evidence because, he contended, the statements were not made voluntarily. Ater overruled Smith's motion, holding no coercion was involved during the interrogation of McNeill.

McNeill has been free on bond pending trial.

Odessa City Council to begin series of 'town hall meetings'

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Odessa City Council tonight will hold the first of a series of four town hall-type meetings to give residents a chance to air complaints and make suggestions concerning various city services and operations.

A newspaper advertisement appearing over the weekend stated the purpose of the town hall meetings will be to acquire citizen input to help council members better plan the annual budget process and plan for Odessa's future.

The ad contained a questionnaire which those planning to attend the meetings are asked to fill out and either turn in at the Odessa City Hall or bring to the meeting they plan to attend.

The questionnaire seeks opinions as to the quality of public services, such as police, fire and trash collection, street conditions and water quality and, generally, the quality of life in Odessa.

Today's meeting is set for 7 p.m. at the Ector Junior High School cafeteria, South Crane Ave. and West Clements. Tuesday's meeting, also at 7 p.m., will be at the Floyd Gwin Auditorium, West 10th Street and West County Road.

Next Monday and Tuesday nights the meetings will be held at Nimitz Junior High School cafeteria, Parkway and Maple, and the Sherwood Community Center, East 49th Street and Everglade, respectively.

Tax forms, bills, calculator among items missing in weekend burglary

From Staff Reports

Tax forms, monthly bills and a calculator were among items taken in weekend burglaries in Midland, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Andrew C. Stewart III, 25, of 1314 E. Jay St. told police that his personal tax forms, a tax book, a calculator, his monthly bills, a radar detector and attaché case were among items taken in the burglary of his unlocked car.

He said the car was parked at curbside in front of his house when his car was burglarized.

Anselmo Carrasco, 34, of 1713 Morgan Way reported that a nine-inch portable television set was taken in the burglary of his unlocked car.

And E.L. Smith, 57, reported to the Midland County Sheriff's Office that a television set valued at $500 was taken in the burglary of his residence southeast of Midland some time earlier this month.

With Gabbi, Big Spring makes music

By CAROL BALDWIN

BIG SPRING (AP) — Twenty years ago Marianna Gabbi was told that conducting an orchestra was a job best left to a man. Today people are telling Ms. Gabbi that she is doing that job very well.

Ms. Gabbi is director of the symphonies here and at Las Cruces, N.M., where she lives. She also travels extensively as a guest conductor.

Before she became a conductor, she was twice discouraged by professors and peers. Few women conduct symphony orchestras, and Ms. Gabbi took the advice to heart and put her dream of conducting an orchestra aside.

As a teenager she studied at the Settlement School of Music and at the Philadelphia Musical Academy. She is a native Philadelphian.

In school, "I had the opportunity to conduct several rehearsals. The people in the orchestra thought I was gifted, and I felt it was wonderful to mold this music in one's own way."

But that was the late 1940s. The idea of a woman conducting an orchestra "wasn't popular," Ms.

Gabbi said. "Everyone discouraged me. They said 'Women don't conduct.'"

She began concentrating on the violin. Her studies took her to the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris. There, she again had the opportunity to direct an orchestra.

Her professor "was appeasing me," she says now with a smile. She found that the musicians "didn't like it. Especially the women. So I gave it up for the second time."

She returned to the United States in 1970. The Dallas Independent School District "called and asked if I could conduct an orchestra." She needed the job and seized the opportunity.

It was while living there that she completed her master's degree in conducting at Southern Methodist University and her doctorate from North Texas State University.

Ms. Gabbi enrolled in a conducting class in graduate school. She was the only woman in a class of 41.

"I'm getting out of this class," she told her professor, Anshel Brusilow. But he insisted she remain. Within a year she became his assistant and was teaching undergraduate students in conducting.

She had proven herself in school but was still afraid of rejection from the audience and her peers. She remembers conducting an orchestra at North Texas State.

"I had to be pushed to the podium," she said. But this time, members of the symphony offered nothing but support. "It was a far cry from what I had experienced before," she said.

Today, "No one seems to think about the fact that I'm a woman ... Gender doesn't affect you at all."

Sam Woodward, a Big Spring Symphony Association board member, met Ms. Gabbi in Mississippi two years ago and asked her to conduct the local symphony.

"We took a liking to each other immediately," Ms. Gabbi said.

One may think that Big Spring is an unlikely place for a symphony orchestra. Located among cotton fields and dusty ranch land, one might assume the city's tastes run more to country music than classical.

Marianna Gabbi

But Ms. Gabbi believes a local symphony "is a great idea. I think (it) has a good chance of surviving very well."

Beaumont citizens pitch in on lost investments

BEAUMONT (AP) — Bumper stickers and donations seem to be helping, but one Beaumont citizen says he's come up with a sure-fire way to help recover some of the $20 million investment the city lost.

"Bingo makes money, and people love it," W.L. Pate Jr. said. "There would be no problem filling the Civic Center" with players.

Beaumont lost $20 million, one-fifth of its total annual budget, when ESM Government Securities collapsed six weeks ago. The southeast Texas community was one of several cities that lost money invested with the Florida firm.

Pate told the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal bingo could be the answer because other community groups regularly pack their meeting halls with dedicated bingo fans. In just a few nights, he said, "Bingo for Beaumont" could raise thousands of dollars for the city. Another group of citizens already are trying a more poetically-titled approach to the city's financial woes — "Kitty for the City."

Former Beaumont Mayor Maury Meyers launched the donation drive last month. The group's goal is to raise $2.3 million that Beaumont officials hope to borrow against next year's budget.

"The success of this project will be measured by the natural support that comes from the community," Meyers said. "I'm not going to barnstorm for people to do more than they should."

So far, Meyers told the Houston Chronicle, the kitty has attracted more than $11,000 in contributions, some from as far away as California and others from nearby communities such as Sour Lake and Port Arthur.

The regional distributor for Armstrong Floors in San Antonio wrote Meyers to ask if the "kitty" was legitimate. When told it was, he told Meyers he would join the cause and offered 10 cents for every square yard of Armstrong floor coverings, carpet and vinyl sold in Beaumont in April and May.

Meyers said national news reporters have told him Beaumont "is the only city" among several across the country that lost money in the collapse "to do something to help itself."

"People are darn proud to do something for themselves," he said. Business owners, following the lead of Market Basket stores, have offered to donate a percentage of their sales to the kitty.

InterFirst Bank is selling bumper stickers with the proud slogan, "We Believe in You Beaumont."

The giving spirit caught on in the Beaumont Health Department, where many employees have pledged a full day's pay to the kitty and have organized a fund-raising garage sale for April 20.

"We're the kind of people who pull together as a family during times of need," Mary Rush, assistant to the health director, said.

Mayor Bill Neild said the citizens' morale is impressive. "The people 'feel like the council is working hard as they can to get back the money, and I've not had anyone have anything negative to say," Neild said.

John Lisotta, owner of a storage warehouse business in Beaumont, said he loves his hometown and wants to do his part to help.

"I went down and paid $5,000 in advance on next year's taxes," he said. "If everybody paid some of next year's taxes, we'd have the money we need."

Proper nutrition, exercise important for elderly

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Joan and Bob, both 65, live in a posh Beverly Hills, Calif., home where a butler-cook prepares sensible, nutritious meals for the couple and their dinner guests according to the guidelines established by Joan. She is a knowledgeable, nutritionally conscious eater and tries to reduce use of fats, sodium and calories in their diet.

Joan and her husband are in excellent health. They not only watch their weight and know how to manage their diet, but exercise daily by playing tennis, taking long walks or swimming. The prognosis for a healthful, long life?

Emil La Beau, 65, a retired chemist living in Laguna Hills, Calif., has lived alone for several years. A cardiovascular problem some years back turned him on to exercise as a lifestyle activity. He now jogs daily, avoids fats, sodium, sugar and cholesterol, eats no desserts and cooks his own casseroles to help control his diet. When he eats out, the menu includes fish.

Senior Exxie Jones, a native of Kentucky who loved fried chicken and pot roast and gravy, discovered she had high cholesterol and triglyceride levels along with being overweight. Now she walks two miles, rides a stationary bicycle for 30 minutes and takes an aerobic class every weekday. She's feeling much better now, calls up a friend to join her for dinner and is living a good life.

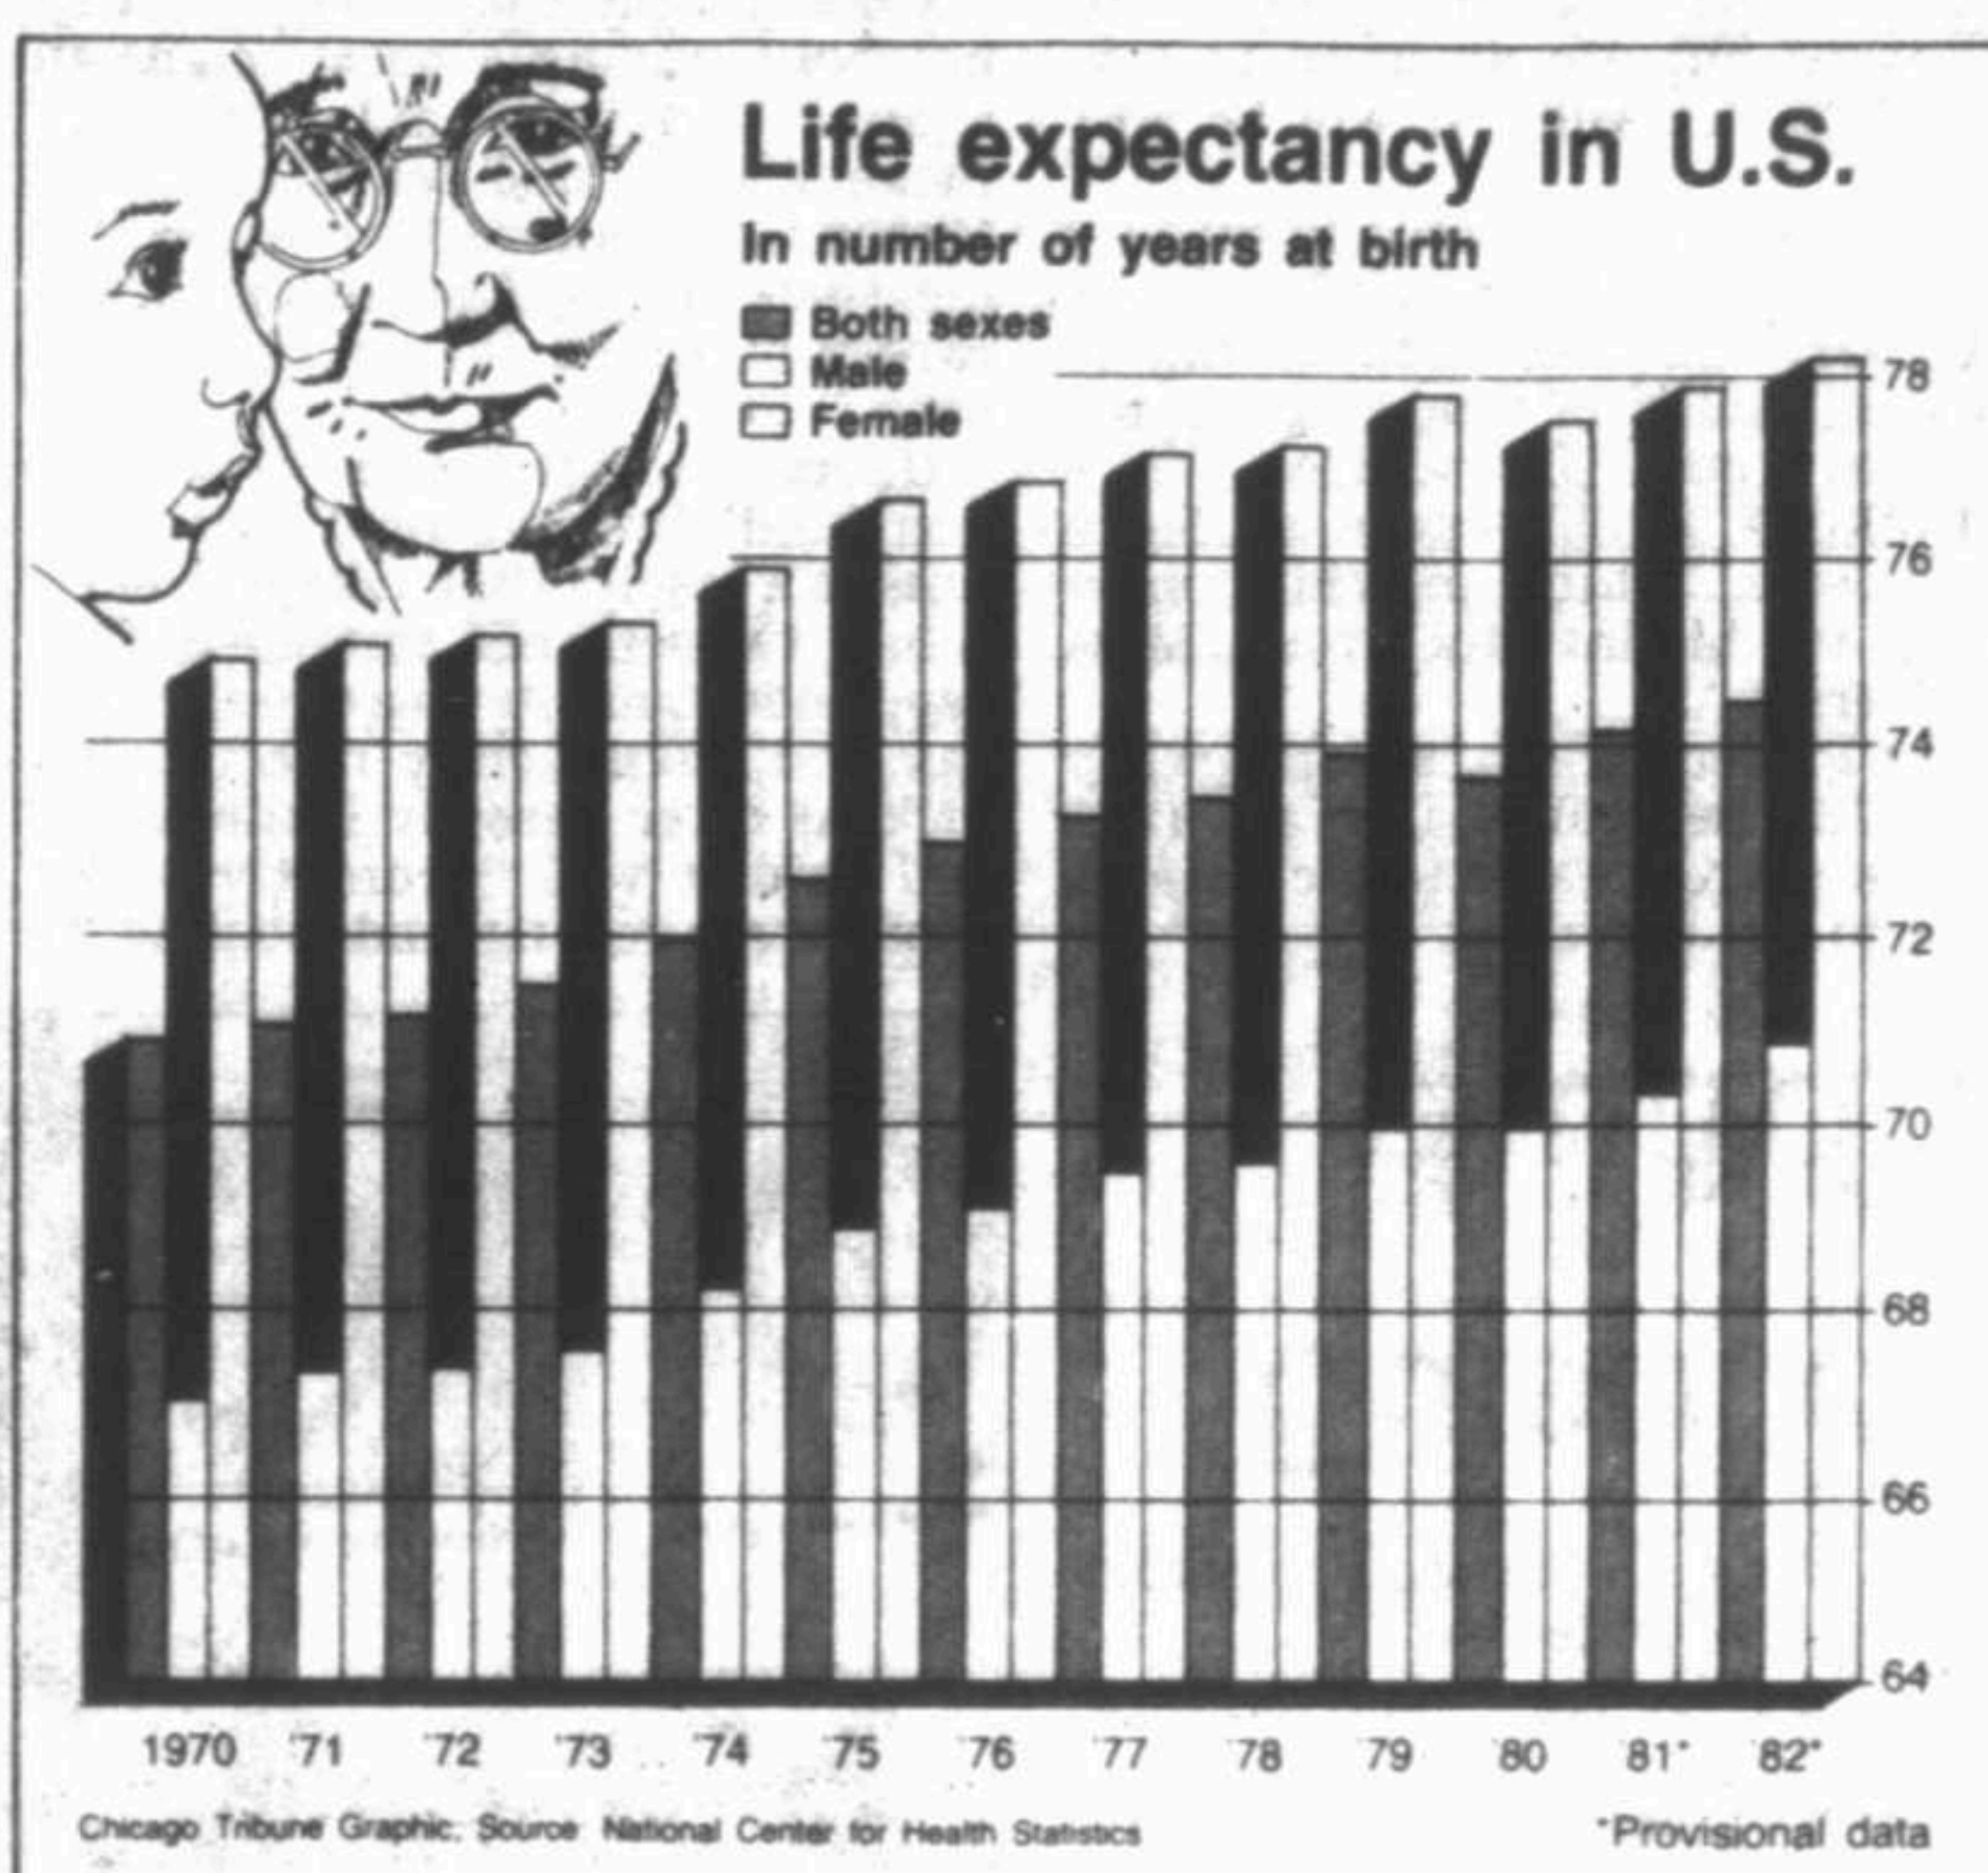

BUT JOAN, BOB, Emil and Exxie are rarities among the 20 million-plus seniors living in the United States.

The nutrition picture of the elderly is, at best, precarious, as far as existing programs and health status go.

From a practical point of view, length of life of human societies is basically determined by diet and climate, prevention and treatment of infections, level of sanitation and level of housing, according to Dr. Jerry Meduski, assistant professor of neurology at the University of Southern California School of Medicine.

There are 20 million persons older than 65 living in the United States, give or take 3 million to 4 million, making up 11 percent of the total population. It is expected that by the year 2030 the elderly population will double, with the population of persons older than 75 growing at the fastest rate. The challenges facing the nation and each individual in maintaining high health status are enormous. The question is, are the challenges being met?

Although improved health care and nutrition education systems in the past 10 years have staved off the horrendous effects of the chronic killer diseases among middle- and old-age groups, nutritional surveys measuring the dietary intakes of nutrients of the elderly have suggested that nutritional deficiencies exist in at least 50 percent of the elderly population living independently, with the homeless and those on low or fixed income at greatest risk.

So far, several population studies have found that intakes of certain vitamins, protein and calories fall well below the Recommended Dietary Allowances, but it is not clear how the findings correlate to disease or death rates.

THE FOUR LEADING causes of death in the United States are diseases of the heart (363 per 100,000 population), cancer (150), cerebral vascular lesions (106) and accidents (50). The elderly are at greatest risk for arteriosclerotic heart disease, and cancer occurs most frequently in the 60-to 65-year-old age group. The elderly are also at highest risk of accidents.

While nutrition is believed to be a factor in at least some of the age-related disorders and may help in the treatment of these disorders, how nutrition might modulate the aging process is yet unknown.

There are several major changes in the body that come with age, which reduce the ability of the organ system to function effectively. According to Meduski, there is a decrease in function of the multi-component systems (basal metabolic rate, blood pressure, water and others); cardiovascular systems (cardiac output and total peripheral resistance); respiratory system (maximum breathing rate); urinary system; nervous system; and muscle strength.

These physical malfunctions lead to loss of teeth, lack of coordination, physical weakness and disability, vision problems, immobility and digestion discomfort. There is a loss of sense of taste and smell. Anorexia and decreased metabolic efficiency are also involved, according to Dr. Harold H. Sandstead, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Center on Aging at Tufts University in Massachusetts.

On a social level, living alone, failure to adapt to a new environment, income loss and susceptibility to food fads often occur. "Psychological malfunctions may cause depression, anxiety and a sense of isolation."

A SEDENTARY LIFESTYLE contributes to obesity, which can lead to increased risks of chronic illnesses, such as diabetes, high blood pressure and heart disease," Sandstead said.

So far, survey data show that many elderly individuals in the United States are eating poorly, although much of the data is incomplete. Relatively little has been done to determine what the acceptable nutritional norm for the elderly is, much less assess it, according to Jean Mayer, Ph.D., president of Tufts University, one of the few scientific institutions studying data to determine the nutrition requirements for older individuals.

"Data we do have on the elderly is based on much younger people," said Mayer.

Mayer says requirements for the elderly for some nutrients may be the same as for the younger adults while higher for other nutrients because of the inability of the body to absorb nutrients, an occurrence inherent in the aging process.

"It is likely that some requirements go down because of slower metabolism. It is possible that some go up because of malabsorption. It's likely some nutrient requirements will stay the same. That's what our research is all about," said Mayer.

Meduski says science is still building new theories. "Aging as the area of study is now ready for valid experimental approaches, and the results of these will help to elucidate basic aspects of the process. Research work in the field of aging will require the achievements of pharmaceutical sciences, regulatory biochemistry and the nutritional sciences," he said.

Netherland's art works shown

A one-woman showing of recent drawings and paintings by Patricia Metts Netherland are on display during banking hours in April at RepublicBank First National Midland. Included in the exhibit are pastel drawings of native Indians and abstract oil paintings.

Mrs. Netherland's works have been in one-woman shows at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin and Odessa College. She earned a masters degree from UTPB and has won awards in area shows since 1969.

Mrs. Netherland and her husband Robert are co-owners of "Talk It Over" Counseling Service in Midland.

Dickerson runner-up in contest

Courtnee Dickerson, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Dickerson of Midland, was first runner-up in the Tiny Miss Easter Bunny pageant March 30 in McCamey.

The contest, for children 2-5 years of age, was sponsored by the "87" Club, the sophomore class. Funds raised will help finance their senior class trip to Hawaii.

Ranger couple snowed in six months each year

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Back-country rangers Marilyn Muse and Jim Harper are snowed in for six months a year at 8,900-foot Tuolumne Meadows, sharing the wilderness with Sierra hares, coyotes, pine martens and other wildlife — although bears and deer are holed up in lower elevations — and an occasional cross-country skier.

"It's a dream come true," said Muse, 33, who uses her maiden name although she and Harper have been married for 6½ years. They have spent three winters in Tuolumne Meadows.

"For us this is the next thing to heaven," Harper agreed. "We have to work together. It can be stressful. It's a situation that could make or break a marriage. Being in this winter wilderness has reinforced ours."

The couple live alone from Nov. 1 through May 1 in the spectacular snowy winter wonderland amid towering Sierra Nevada peaks, some rising higher than 13,000 feet, and pristine Alpine Valleys.

Husband and wife park rangers Marilyn Muse and Jim Harper are isolated from the world for six months each year in Yosemite National Park, but they say their job is "the next thing to heaven." They are shown above skiing to their home at the 8,900-foot-high Tuolumne Meadows after a day of checking park grounds.

"All signs of civilization are covered with deep snow except tops of less than a dozen national park buildings. We're seeing this high country as it looked to the first explorers and pioneers coming across the Sierra," Harper, 32, said. As there are no plowed roads, and snowmobiles or other snow vehicles are banned, the only way in and out is by skis or snowshoes — 15 miles over 9,945-foot Tioga Pass from Lee Vining to the east, 25 miles over the mountains from Yosemite Valley to the west. The trip takes about two days.

Home is a two-room cabin with a wood stove, a telephone and an electric oven for cooking as long as they have power, which is often disrupted when fierce winter storms down the lines.

After a hearty breakfast, they set out on skis at 9 every morning and remain away until 5 p.m. on a patrol that covers an average of 10 miles.

They first visit the Tuolumne Meadows ski hut a mile away to see if anyone is there and in need of help. The hut, stocked with wood, has eight beds, free on a first-come, first-served basis.

"Only cross-country skiers with the best of skills can make it," Harper explained. "It's a tough go up and over the mountains. They almost always arrive exhausted, blistered and wet. Sometimes they get caught in storms. Sometimes we run search-and-rescue missions to find them. We're in touch around the clock with Yosemite Valley by phone or radio."

DEAR ABBY

Smoking ruins health, lives

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: I recently received a letter signed "Bitter and Heartbroken in Arizona," who stated that she and her husband went to a family reunion in the Midwest last Thanksgiving — against their better judgment: (a) They didn't have adequate clothing for a cold climate; (b) Her husband was a heavy smoker — which their relatives considered "an unpardonable sin."

After they arrived, her husband was told that he could not smoke in the house, so he was forced to go outdoors to smoke. Subsequently he developed pneumonia and died.

"Bitter" wrote: "I agree, non-smokers have rights, but if the relatives didn't permit smoking in the house, they could have provided a reasonably warm sheltered area for smokers. I personally feel that these self-righteous, anti-smoking crusaders killed my husband just as surely as if they had put a bullet through his heart!"

Well, "Bitter's" letter lit the fuses of several thousand readers. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: That wife has my deepest sympathy. My husband was also a heavy smoker who developed pneumonia. He survived, but promptly went from a productive professional to a helpless invalid. He is now on oxygen 24 hours a day. I, too, "lost" my husband although he's still alive. — EVELYN IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: As a physician may I point out that exposure to cold air is NOT a known cause of pneumonia, whereas chronic cigarette smoking is. It is a fact that cigarette smoking is associated with chronic bronchitis, emphysema, cancer, heart disease, strokes, fetal abnormalities and ulcers.

Furthermore, smokers are more susceptible to infections and respiratory ailments than non-smokers, and their ability to fight infections is greatly reduced. — WALTER PINSKER, M.D., BAY SHORE, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: "Bitter" blames her relatives for "killing" her husband. In truth, he killed himself! Anyone who craves a smoke so desperately that he would stand in the cold without adequate protective clothing gives a new meaning to the phrase "I'm dying for a cigarette." — ED S. IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sorry that lady's husband died, but she is wrong to blame her relatives. They were only trying to protect themselves. She was lucky he died of pneumonia. He probably would have died of lung cancer anyway. It's a terrible way to die. I know because my daddy died that way. — JOSHUA (AGE 10)

DEAR ABBY: When our son was 18 months old he was hospitalized with a respiratory infection. At that time we learned he had a life-threatening allergy to cigarette smoke. My husband was a chain smoker. I begged him to quit. He said he "enjoyed" it too much to give it up — but he promised not to smoke around the baby. Well, soon he was smoking around the baby (even in a closed car), so I gave him an ultimatum — us or cigarettes. He chose us.

I know he still smokes because I can smell it on him — but at least he doesn't smoke when he's near our child. — ANOTHER ANTI-SMOKING CRUSADER

The Economic Report of the President, now being distributed in bound form, anticipated the developing furor and, fearful of a retreat from free trade, describes what it calls the myths of protectionism.The most misleading of protectionism's claims, it contends, is that import restrictions save jobs at home. It is a hard one to contest too, because it is true that some jobs are saved. But more, it says, are lost.Restrictions, the White House economists contend, "have little or no effect on total employment, although they do distort the distribution of employment among sectors."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Symptoms of anemia not always detectable without medical examDear Dr. Solomon: When I went to my doctor for a routine medical examination, he told me that I was anemic. Wouldn't a person have some idea that she was anemic — for example, a feeling of weakness or tiredness or something like that? — Mrs. E.D. Wilkes-Barre, Penna.Dear Mrs. D.: It is not uncommon for a person undergoing a routine medical examination to learn that he or she is mildly anemic. In fact, a sedentary person may even be severely anemic and not have any symptoms.Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm going to give you a change of pace by asking you a simple question. When would you recommend as the best time of the day for a couple to have sexual relations? — Dom, Brooklyn, N.Y.Dear Dom: If I told you that the best time of day for sexual intercourse was 3:23 a.m. would you set your alarm to wake up at the appropriate time? The point is that there is no "best" time for everyone; the time will vary for different couples and will vary likely very even for the same couple from one time to another.Dear Dr. Solomon: I read about a whole list of things that were supposed to show a woman's chances of getting breast cancer, but everything was all jumbled together. All of the risks could not be equally important, and I would like to know which are the most important. — Ms. B.T., Cleveland, Ohio.Dear Ms. T.: According to Drs. Hugh A. Hatfield and Troy H. Guthrie, Jr., of the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, a family history ofbreast cancer is the most important risk factor.
An early onset of menstruation and a late menopause also increase the risk of breast cancer.Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is recovering from a heart attack, and he is also getting over a depression that followed his heart attack. Does everyone who has a heart attack become depressed? My husband is being treated by our family doctor, whom we have known for 23 years.
Should he have seen a psychiatrist? — Mrs. K.V., Greensboro, N.C.Dear Mrs. V.: Dr. Thomas P. Hackett, Chief of psychiatry at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, says that patients who survive a heart attack are almost always depressed, and the depression lasts for about two to three months.
However, this does not mean that the patient has to be treated by a psychiatrist. In fact, Dr. Hackett says, only about 15 percent of these patients may require a referral to a psychiatrist.The fact that your husband is getting over his depression while being treated by your family physician indicates that he probably falls within the 85 percent of patients who do not need such a referral after a heart attack.For Adam, Durham, N.C.: An individual's sensitivity to the ultraviolet light of tanning booths may be enhanced by various prescription drugs. These include tranquilizers, diuretics and even oral contraceptives.Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown

Should American industry impose tariffs to protect itself from imports?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Why not impose tariffs to protect American industry from imports? Aren't they worthwhile if they can save American jobs?
Such questions are being asked today by people who ordinarily espouse free trade, but who today are at a loss about how to resolve the growing American trade deficit.That deficit is the consequence of one irrefutable fact: Americans buy more foreign goods than they sell to foreigners.Less clear are the reasons why. At least three are involved:
1. Foreign restrictions on American goods.
2. The inability of American companies to compete in price and quality, no matter the reason — the high value of the dollar, high American wages and benefits, foreign government subsidization of export goods.The hunger that Americans seem to have for foreign-made products.
Whatever the reasons, Americans are spending more than $100 billion a year more on foreign goods than foreigners are spending on American goods. Involved are products such as shoes, textiles, automobiles and electronics.All are important industries. All have suffered job losses. All claim to one extent or another that they are faced with obstacles beyond their control.So why not protect them?
The Economic Report of the President, now being distributed in bound form, anticipated the developing furor and, fearful of a retreat from free trade, describes what it calls the myths of protectionism.The most misleading of protectionism's claims,
it contends, is that import restrictions save jobs at home. It is a hard one to contest too, because it is true that some jobs are saved. But more, it says, are lost.Restrictions, the White House economists contend, "have little or no effect on total employment, although they do distort the distribution of employment among sectors."

Jobs saved in one industry, they say, are lost to another because of the generally lowered level of economic activity.Moreover, they say, the annual costs to consumers of each job saved in protected sectors are as high as $250,000 for some sectors.A second myth, they argue, is that protection can provide a breathing period for an industry to modernize and become more competitive.Not so, the White House economists say.

"Although protection may increase resources for improving competitiveness, it also reduces pressure for adjustment," they write, adding:
"Once protection is granted it is common for productivity and unit costs to deteriorate even further relative to other industries."In fact, they say, protection of domestic industries might even enable foreign producers to charge higher prices for their restricted exports.
It happened in steel during the 1970s. It happened with cars in the '80s.They decline to accept the contention that certain industries are basic and must be saved, stating that "the hallmark of a dynamic economy is that basic industries can change."They recognize that national security considerations exist in some industries, but they believe that restraints are a poor way to handle the job, arguing that they are "particularly inefficient."Whether such certainty can be maintained against what appears to be an intensification of protectionist thinking cannot be foretold, because too many variables are involved.It would not be the first time, for example, that myth overcame fact in a political battle.John Cunniff is business analyst for the Associated Press.

Q. My stepdaughter bought several stocks eight months ago. She told the broker to have the certificates registered in her name and delivered to her. All the certificates arrived by mail, except one.Since then, we have been in touch with the broker, his home office, the company and its transfer agent. We have spent at least $50 on phone calls. Now, they want her to send $40.50 for a surety bond to cover the "lost" certificate. She didn't lose it. She never received it. Is this the correct procedure?A. Absolutely not! There's no reason in the world your stepdaughter should have to pay for the surety bond. Brokerage firms have blanket surety bonds to cover situations such as this.Most brokerage firms have certificates for securities worth less than $100,000 sent by first class mail. Above that amount, certificates go by registered mail.When a stock or bond certificate doesn't reach the person to whom it is mailed, it stands to reason that the sender should be notified. The sender then fills out an affidavit of mailing. The person to whom the certificate was mailed fills out an affidavit of nonreceipt. A replacement certificate is issued to the person who never received it, without cost to that person.Q. I have been unable to sell a Virginia Railway Co. bond, because the broker says that bond must have a "legal opinion." This is a bearer bond with interest coupons, which I cut off and redeem every six months without any problems. Where can I get a legal opinion for this bond?A. You can't, because none exists. You don't need a legal opinion to sell that bond.sale. Unlike a registered bond, a bearer bond does not have the owner's name printed on it.The easy way to prove your ownership is to produce the confirmation statement you received from the brokerage firm through which you bought that bond.Q. Two months ago, I asked a big brokerage firm to transfer some stocks for me. I made it clear the stocks were to be registered in my name and the certificates sent to me. To date, they have not arrived.I contacted the transfer agent for one of the stocks and was told the brokerage firm has ordered that the stocks be transferred to the brokerage's name. What can I do about this?A. Of all the gripes about brokerage firms that come to this column, complaints such as yours — about slow delivery or no delivery of certificates — rank high on the list.It's possible that your broker or someone handling the paperwork in the brokerage firm's back office made an unintentional error.Give the brokerage firm that benefit of a doubt. Then, demand that the stocks be "ordered out" — the certificates be registered as you instructed and delivered to you. If necessary, do some desk-pounding.If the certificates aren't delivered to you within a week or so, contact the Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 Fifth Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549.Also, double-check to find out if you have any dividends coming. While the stocks were in the brokerage's name, dividends went to that firm and should have been credited to your account.
Assuming you want that dividend money, order your broker to have a check sent to you.Bill Doyle is a syndicated columnist for King

A Catholic priest leads a group of people in prayer in front of Sao Paulo's Heart Institute where President-elect Tancredo Neves recovers from his seventh surgery in a month.

Brazil's president-elect in very grave condition

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — President-elect Tancredo Neves, clinging to life with the help of a respirator and a kidney machine, was in extremely grave condition today. A spokesman said his situation was "almost irreversible."

"We have reached a point where we believe more in a miracle than in the actual improvement of the president's body," press spokesman Antonio Brito said.

He said doctors had been unable to control a new outbreak of infection and that as a result, Neves again had a fever and rapid heartbeat, and that the level of bacteria in his blood was abnormally high.

Neves was rushed to the Clinical Hospital in Sao Paulo just hours before he was to be sworn in on March 15 as Brazil's first civilian president since 1964.

Since then he has had seven operations, mostly for intestinal problems. The surgery failed to cure him.

Neves remained on an artificial respirator and an artificial kidney machine.

People throughout this South American nation continued to pray for his recovery, and hundreds maintained a vigil Sunday outside the hospital.

Some well-wishers pressed religious statues and medals into Brito's hands and asked the spokesman to deliver them to Neves.

A special Roman Catholic Mass was said Sunday for Neves in the hospital that was attended by his brothers Jose, 71, and Antonio Augusto, 78.

Peres wants to send adviser to Egypt

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres ordered a poll of his feuding Cabinet today over his proposal to send a close adviser to Egypt for talks, a senior government official said.

The poll of the 25 ministers was ordered when right-wingers on the Cabinet's 10-member defense committee blocked Peres' plans to send minister-without-portfolio Ezer Weizman to Cairo.

The defense committee split 5-5 on whether Weizman should make the trip, which under committee rules meant the visit was not authorized.

It was the second time in two days that rightists blocked approval and created a political crisis that threatened the future of the coalition government.

"The poll is going on right now," said Yossi Ahimeir, political adviser to Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Peres and Shamir head the rival blocs in the coalition government formed last September.

Ahimeir said Shamir initially objected to Peres' demand for a telephone poll of the full Cabinet. But Ahimeir said Shamir eventually agreed to accept the decision of the majority of the full Cabinet on whether Weizman should go ahead with the visit.

Weizman was scheduled to leave for Cairo later today.

Regardless of the outcome, political commentators said the rift over the Weizman trip had ruptured the working relationship between Peres and Shamir.

There has been a growing rift between Peres' Labor Party and Shamir's right-wing Likud Bloc on both domestic and foreign affairs. This has lent support to predictions that their "national unity government" could fall apart before its four-year term expires in 1988.

Police Minister Haim Bar-Lev, a member of the Labor Party, said "it would be absurd" if Israel retracted its acceptance of the Egyptian invitation. "It would, in my view, cause great danger to Israel and the government," he told reporters after the defense committee's vote.

Finance Minister Yitzhak Mordechai, a member of the Likud, told models that the issue was "a serious matter because Peres believes his standing as the prime minister is involved."

The current troubles in the unwieldy Cabinet center on who charts Israel's foreign policy: the dovish prime minister or his hawkish political rival, the foreign minister.

Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, a member of Shamir's Likud Bloc, said: "There is a basic issue and that is that foreign policy is entrusted to the foreign minister."

Levy also told reporters that Shamir opposed Weizman's trip to Egypt because it coincided with a Middle East tour by U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy. The American envoy arrived in Israel today after a brief stop in neighboring Jordan to discuss prospects for a peace dialogue between Israeli and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

On Sunday, Shamir's supporters won a narrow Cabinet majority and blocked approval for Weizman to make the trip to Cairo. Weizman, Peres' closest adviser in the Cabinet on Arab affairs, had been invited by Egyptian Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Ali.

Peres was quoted by the radio and state television as telling his aides that he will resign if Weizman is forbidden to go.

Shamir's opposition was seen as an attempt to reassert his authority in a government increasingly dominated by Peres. Shamir, whose popularity has been slipping in the polls, also faces challenges to his leadership from within his own party.

The Maariv newspaper quoted unidentified Egyptian diplomats as saying they were stunned by the argument and considered it a setback in efforts to revive the Middle East peace process.

"It is hard for us to understand how the government can reject hands that are outstretched for peace," the paper quoted one diplomat as saying.

Shamir had earlier given his approval for Weizman to make a private trip, but changed his mind when the journey took on the air of a diplomatic mission.

Weizman is a former defense minister in former Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Likud government who played a leading role in negotiating the 1979 peace treaty with Egypt.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Demolition of shantytown begins with no problems

CROSSROADS, South Africa (AP) — Demolition of this shantytown where 100,000 blacks live began peacefully today, with none of the signs of unrest that exploded earlier this year into rioting in which at least 18 died.

Thousands watched as the first shacks were torn down, and the only visible sign of opposition was a single stone from a slingshot.

Last February, mobs battled police in Crossroads, protesting what they believed were plans to forcibly remove them the site 12 miles east of Cape Town to Khayelitsha, a new black township being built by the government.

Earlier this month, leaders of about half the squatters in Crossroads accepted a revised government offer that would allow blacks who moved to the new township to legally stay for at least 18 months in the Cape Town area, where there are jobs, instead of having to return to tribal homelands.

Rebel may be offered job

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The military ruler said today that the leader of a rebellion in Sudan's south may be offered a post in a caretaker Cabinet, and said he hopes to improve relations with the Soviet Union, Libya and Ethiopia.

Gen. Abdul-Rahman M.H. Swaredah, who overthrew President Gaafar Nimeiri on April 6, told reporters he wanted to meet with John Garang, commander of the Sudan People's Liberation Army.

Swaredah did not say whether Garang had agreed to such a meeting. Garang has denied previous reports that the new leadership had sent him messages proposing an end to insurgent action by the rebel group, which began in 1983. Garang also has demanded a return to civilian rule within a week.

"It is in our plans to meet with him and talk to him to see what his plans are as far as the south is concerned," Swaredah said of Garang. "As far as a seat in the coming Cabinet, this has been considered, and I understand a seat has been reserved for his party."

Authorities to debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — As poor countries' debts near the trillion-dollar mark, the top financial authorities of the non-communist world will debate this week how to keep the debtor nations from falling further and further behind in their payments.

The four biggest debtors — Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Venezuela — owed U.S. banks $69.4 billion as of last September, according to figures from the Federal Reserve System. Their total debt is about $275 billion.

They have made progress since 1982, at least in their relations with foreign creditors, but it has come at the price of lowering their modest living standards at home.

Smaller debtors are worse off. One investment banker, Christine A. Binkert, senior vice president of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., said Friday that Peru, Bolivia and Nicaragua were far off practical purposes in default at the end of 1984.

Reagan urged to visit camp

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A former prosecutor at the Nuremberg war crimes trials today urged President Reagan to visit the site of a World War II concentration camp when he visits West Germany next month.

Robert M. W. Kempner, who now lives in Frankfurt, urged Reagan to "honor (Holocaust) victims by visiting Dachau, Bergen-Belsen or a similar place" during his upcoming trip.

Reagan ruled out a visit to a Nazi concentration camp site, saying on March 21 that instead of "reawakening the memories" of the war, he wanted to commemorate the post-war friendship between the United States and West Germany.

In recent days, both West German and U.S. Jewish leaders have expressed outrage at Reagan's plan to visit the German military cemetery in Bitburg, and urged him to visit a concentration camp instead.

U.S. seaman rescued

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Rescue teams used powerful winches and steel cable today to pull a U.S. Navy seaman out of the crater of Mount Vesuvius, where he had been trapped overnight.

The sailor had scrambled down the jagged slope of the dormant volcano Sunday afternoon to help a fellow sailor who had fallen to his death on a ledge 350 feet below.

Lt. Cmdr. Skip Calvert, spokesman for the U.S. Naval support facilities at Naples, identified the rescued sailor as Seaman Brett Jacobs of Kansas City, Kan., assigned to the frigate USS Edward McDonnell.

Calvert said Jacobs had descended into the volcano to help his colleague, but found him dead and tried to climb back up the slope, which proved too steep.

The identity of the dead man was being withheld pending notification of the next of kin, Calvert said.

Pandas starve to death

PEKING (AP) — Fifty-five giant pandas have starved to death in southwest China since 1983 because of a bamboo famine, and prospects for the endangered species are worse this year because of heavy snow, the government said today.

The latest toll includes four pandas found dead since January and two that died despite emergency treatment, the official press agency Xinhua said.

It quoted the vice minister of forestry, Dong Zhongyong, as blaming the deaths on "starvation and diseases related to malnutrition" despite a massive rescue effort.

The crisis began in 1983 when the arrow bamboo, the pandas' favorite food, began to wither because of a rare flowering cycle.

Xinhua said nearly half the 2.3 million acres of arrow bamboo forests have died and the rest are expected to die in the next few years, aggravating the threat to China's estimated 1,000 giant pandas.

Shiite claims coercion

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A 16-year-old Shiite Moslem captured by Israeli soldiers says he was coerced into trying to drive a suicide car bomb into an Israeli convoy in south Lebanon, and had no religious motives.

Mohammed Berrou, in a news conference with Israeli reporters broadcast on Israel Radio, said Sunday he was forced to accept the mission to get his father out of trouble.

Israeli authorities said the youth was captured with a Mercedes laden with 880 pounds of explosives during a raid Feb. 23 on the village of Sir al-Gharbiyyeh northeast of the port city of Tyre.

Berrou told Israeli reporters his father, a policeman, had been in a traffic accident which injured the daughter of a prominent figure in Amal, the major Shiite militia.
