Focus is on Gorbachev

Soviet president arrives; aid issue remains

■ Soviet president will not leave London 'empty-handed,' Secretary of State James A. Baker III says.

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev joined the leaders of the world's richest powers at their London summit Tuesday and promptly got a pledge from U.S. officials that he would not leave town "empty-handed."

The Big Seven — the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan — marked the midpoint of their talks at historic Lancaster House by backing a new universal register for arms transfers, by agreeing to leave sanctions against Iraq in place until it complies with remaining United Nations demands, and by supporting Bush's revived Middle East peace efforts.

Their joint declaration, with its tour of world hot spots, reflected a newfound confidence in the aftermath of the American-led victory over Iraq in the Persian Gulf war.

But the focus remained on Gorbachev, who will lunch today with President Bush — possibly fixing a Moscow summit date — in advance of his direct plea for help later in the day before the Group of Seven.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III told reporters "there is no chance that (Gorbachev) will leave here empty-handed." He asked them to look back a few years "and consider whether or not the president of the Soviet Union would be attending a (Western) economic summit."

"You would probably have concluded, no chance. And here he is, and he is coming, and he will not leave empty-handed," Baker said. "There will be any number of things, I think, that the countries here will agree should be done."

Gorbachev stepped off his white official Ilyushin-62M jet to a low-key welcome just before night fell on London. He walked down a red carpet at Heathrow Airport and departed for the Soviet ambassador's residence without commenting to waiting reporters. At the time of his arrival, just about everyone else of high official rank in London was at Buckingham Palace dining on

WEDNESDAY NEWS WATCH

Well blowout

CARLSBAD, N.M. — A natural gas well that blew out was contained Tuesday by Texas valve crews working to cap the well. Eddy County Sheriff Jack Childress said the next step in getting the well capped would be to flare it — release gas from the well and burn it off. Initially, the burn was scheduled for late Tuesday afternoon but it was postponed until 6:30 a.m. today. About a dozen well experts from various Midland oilfield-related companies have been working to cap the well.

Meteors on show

FORT DAVIS — Clouds obscured the view of many people hoping to see last week's solar eclipse, but conditions should be right next month for gazing eastward at a meteor shower. In August, Earth will move into the dust path of the Swift Tuttle Comet, giving stargazers an opportunity to watch the show staged by the Perseid meteor shower./6B

Frank Rizzo dies

PHILADELPHIA — Frank L. Rizzo, the brash cop-turned-mayor, collapsed and died Tuesday while working to recapture his old City Hall job. He was 70. Rizzo, a Democratic mayor for two terms who was the surprise winner of last spring's Republican mayoral primary, died at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital, doctors said. Rizzo collapsed at lunchtime in the washroom of his downtown campaign headquarters, where long-time friend Tony Zecca found him. Rizzo was taken by ambulance to the hospital, where doctors were unable to revive him.

Miss '92 Texas

SAN ANTONIO — Miss Las Colinas Margaret Johnson was crowned Miss 1992 Texas Monday night in a new pageant created by the GuyRex organization, known for shepherding a string of beauty queens to national titles. The event was held at Municipal Auditorium in San Antonio. Miss Sun City Christine Friedel was first runner-up, while Miss Fort Worth Katie Young was second runner-up. Miss Young also took contestants' choice honors.

Panel vote postpones hearings on Gates

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate Intelligence Committee on Tuesday delayed confirmation hearings on the nomination of Robert M. Gates to be director of central intelligence until mid-September, a serious but not necessarily fatal setback for Gates.

The committee said the postponement was needed for it to investigate allegations that Gates, President Bush's deputy national security adviser, knew more than he has acknowledged about the Iran-Contra affair when he served as deputy CIA director in 1986.

The extra time also gives the committee a chance to examine other potentially troublesome issues that have surfaced in recent days.

The delay may prove costly to Gates because it exposes him to two more months of questions and the potential for new disclosures while he waints until September to

Craddick: Richards' call falls short

AUSTIN — Republican Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland likes the plan by state Democratic leaders to cut and consolidate Texas government, but he believes it just doesn't go far enough.

Craddick, head of the Republican Caucus in the House, said Tuesday that the speech by Gov. Ann Richards at the opening of a special session Monday "sounded good."

United Way sets $2.753 million target

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The United Way of Midland, which funds "hearts-type" agencies through the generosity of the Midland citizenry, is seeking to raise $2.753 million in its 1991-92 campaign to help the homeless, the hungry, the illiterate, the helpless, the victimized, the young and the elderly.

"We believe that the folks here who have been blessed with the ability to give money will do that," K. Michael "Mike" Conaway, United Way campaign chairman, said Tuesday. "That's the kind of folks that live in Midland, Texas."

He announced the 1991-1992 campaign goal at the Confederate Air Force (CAF) headquarters at Midland International Airport.

And Midlanders' compassion for their neighbors in need will "lead folks to give the amounts of money that are appropriate for them and their circumstances," said the 43-year-old Conaway, who is senior vice president for Texas Commerce Bank in Midland.

Trustees appoint Kelly to new MISD slot

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland High School Principal Jimmie Kelly — who was the target of some complaints from parents and teachers over several issues last year — was appointed to a new administrative position Tuesday night.

Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees voted 5-2 to appoint Kelly director of compliance and administrative services, a newly created position. Adela Marmolejo and James Fuller voted against the change. There was no discussion from board members before or after the vote.

However, Kelly's appointment was voted on individually while a host of other persons recommended for appointment were voted on in a group.

The vote also followed an hour and 45 minutes of private deliberation by board members in executive session.

"I did not vote against Jimmie Kelly and his qualifications," said school board trustee James Fuller. "I am personally not convinced we are not creating a job to accomodate — either directly or indirectly — critics of Jimmie Kelly which would extradite him from Midland High School."

Fuller said he thought the administrative position was created "relative to Kelly's alleged inability to work with parents, teachers and morale of the school (based on criticism from members of the MHS community).

"I feel very strongly, that it's interesting

New murder mystery grabs summer headlines in Italy

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press writer

ROME — The story has all the ingredients of an Agathia Christie mystery, except no Italian version of Hercule Poirot has so far stepped forth to solve it.

An attractive countess savagely murdered, with no apparent motive, in her fortress-like villa in a suburb that makes Italians think of TV's "Dallas"; the family's Philippine domestic servants and English nanny under relentless police interrogation; Rome's noble set emerging from their summer hideaways to be close to the family.

Torre

Will it be just another "giallo d'estate" (summer mystery) that captures headlines during the vacation doldrums and goes unsolved, or will Italian investigators make a breakthrough this time?

Last summer it was the August killing of Simonetta Cesaroni that piqued interest. The case is still readily recalled by Italians as the Mystery of Via Poma, the small street where the 21-year-old secretary was stabbed 29 times with a paper cutter.

Male ex-Shell worker files sexual harassment lawsuit

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A male, formerly employed by Shell Oil Co., filed a lawsuit against the company in Midland's U.S. District Court Tuesday, claiming he was sexually harassed by another male employee.

Richard A. Giddens of Odessa claims that Jack Tucci, his supervisor at Odessa's Shell complex, "sexually assaulted (him) . . . in the presence of other employees and obscenely touched (him)," acccording to the filing.

The alleged incident occurred on or about Feb. 3, the lawsuit states. According to the lawsuit, it followed an incident in October of 1989 in which Tucci intentionally sprayed Giddens with chlorine gas.

Giddens' attorney, Melissa Hirsch of Odessa, said Shell officials fired Tucci shortly after the alleged Feb. 3 incident. However, she said, "they were aware of this man's behavior for a considerable

SUMMIT: Gorbachev promptly gets U.S. pledge

(From 1A)

the finest English delicacies with Queen Elizabeth II.

Before the royal banquet, the Western leaders had digested a 23-page letter from Gorbachev spelling out a reform path for the tottering Soviet economy.

"There is a critical shortage of food, children's items and medicines," the letter said. "The financial and credit system is in disarray, the state budget deficit is growing, export trade and currency earnings have gone down. ... We still face the risk of further recession. The ensuing hardships ... may prove too heavy a burden fraught with major social conflicts and pose a threat to democratic transformations."

Prospects for sending Gorbachev home with pledges of large-scale economic aid were nil. But Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis of Italy said a debate continued among the seven leaders "over timing and levels of assistance."

The summiteers planned to urge Gorbachev to sharply curtail military spending, which consumes more than a quarter of Soviet wealth compared to about 6 percent in the United States and about 3 percent among others in the group.

U.S. officials said privately that the aid question is tied, if indirectly, to the all-but-completed arms treaty between Washington and Moscow that would cut their strategic nuclear arsenals by about a third.

The only remaining hang-up, they said, lies in a planned new class of Soviet missiles that exceeds, by a small fraction, a 21 percent increase in the "throw weight" limit for new systems already agreed upon by the two powers.

They speculated that Gorbachev may find it difficult to give ground in London on this issue, which is at once both highly technical and politically potent. Bush, on the other hand, is eager to present Senate conservatives with a "clean negotiating record" that carries no possible sign that he had caved in to final Kremlin demands in order to meet his own political timetable for the Moscow summit.

Added Baker: "This (is) not a case of saving one issue so that the two presidents could close this (treaty) out in London. That's not the case. ... This is a very serious treaty. It deals with the strategic balance for the next 15 or 20 years, and we are determined to get it right."

Despite assurances of support, not all the summiteers were sure that Gorbachev had struck the right note in the run-up to the London conclave.

For example, they noted, in the critical agriculture sector, Gorbachev suggested that Soviet farmers should be able "to decide on their own whether they want to continue working on a profitable collective or state farm, or to go private and work their plot of land."

As Baker observed: "Collectivized agriculture is not the firmest basis for arriving at a market economy."

The political declaration reflected the growing importance of the Group of Seven in the post-Cold War era. It touched on a wide range of global issues. The group, launched 17 years ago as an informal economic deliberating body, today acts, in effect, as a board of directors setting much of the world's political and economic agenda.

"There is more meat in this political declaration than is perhaps usual," said Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd of Britain.

The declaration:

■ Asked Israel to suspend construction of new settlements in the occupied West Bank in return for an Arab suspension of their 43-year economic boycott of Israel, to improve the chances for peace in the Middle East.

■ Urged renewed Western investment in South Africa while calling on the South African government to follow up on its recent "positive" reforms with "the de facto elimination of apartheid."

■ Called on the United Nations to intervene again whenever dangerous flash points require action by the international community to curb "violent oppression" by a rogue government.

■ Vowed to maintain sanctions against Iraq until the Iraqi people "can live without fear of intimidation, reprssion or attack." And in another swipe at President Saddam Hussein, they said Iraqis should have the opportunity to elect a new leadership "openly and democratically."

The declaration made no specific reference to the ongoing dispute over Iraq's nuclear program.

KELLY: 5-2 vote follows private deliberations

(From 1A)

that this particular job opening came about at this time," he said. "If there had already been an opening it wouldn't appear that we are accomodating creating a position for Jimmie Kelly.

"In the eyes of the community it would appear that this is exactly what we are doing. It's too coincidental for want of a better term. We moved on this when just at a time when there is an expressed urgency from Midland High School constituents."

Kelly, 44, was appointed principal of MHS in 1985. He had served as principal at San Jacinto Junior High School from 1982-1985 and as assistant principal at Lee High School 1979-82.

Board trustees recently approved a controversial seven-period day for MHS, following a heated open forum between parents, Kelly and MHS staff.

The most recent outcry from parents involved an incident at the high school's May 30 commencement. Parents of some MHS graduates complained that Kelly allegedly disrupted the salutatorian's speech to discipline students doing "the wave." Other MHS parents supported Kelly's actions.

Kelly's new directorship is a combination of several positions, according to Tom Holland, MISD executive director of human resource services.

"The position was created from several positions not filled from people retiring or resigning," Holland said. "The positions were reorganized into the director of compliance and administrative services."

Holland said the position was posted in recent weeks and deadline to apply was July 1.

Holland said the annual process of teachers and principals applying to change positions has been conducted and some prospects have been interviewed for secondary principal positions. Now prospects will be interviewed for the MHS position specifically, Holland said.

"I suspect we will have an announcement in a few weeks, by the July 31 board meeting," he said.

Concerning Kelly's new position, MISD spokesperson Ted Miller said, "This position will help us maximize external funding. We haven't had anyone working full time to do this."

Miller said Kelly will also head up preparing schools for accreditation reviews.

Kelly was out of town and unavailable for comment.

UW: Campaign to have WWII theme

(From 1A)

ple to respond to those needs, which "they always have in this community and, we believe, always will," Conaway said.

"Midland has a fine heritage of United Way giving, and we believe it will be continued this year."

In achieving its goal, the United Way has adopted a World War II motif and the theme "Allied for Victory — The United Way" to help develop interest in the campaign.

The campaign will be similar to a World War II war-bond drive, Conaway said.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the United States' entry into World War II.

The United Way drive is a "campaign for the hearts, minds and lives of our community," Conaway said. "With your help, talent, resources and compassion, we are going to win this war in Midland."

In carrying out the campaign's "Allied for Victory" theme, Conaway is playing the role of General Dwight David Eisenhower, who was supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces in Europe in World War II.

Conaway is commander-in-chief of United Way's allied forces to bring in the $2.753 million.

Max Holman, United Way board president and retired West Texas Division manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, is adopting the mannerisms and the characteristic "props" — the hat, the spectacles, and the cigarette with cigarette-holder — of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"As FDR said," Holman said in mimicking FDR's deliberate, aristocratic style, 'I hate war. Eleanor hates war, and even Fala hates war.'"

Fala was the president's dog.

"But as much as we hate war," said Holman, "we are going to declare war on apathy and on human suffering and see that we are victorious here in Midland" and that "the people of Midland are the winners through the United Way."

Midland, said Holman, is a town that has a "real heart for people and for looking out for our own.

"There is just a special spirit here to see that Midland fares well and that we take care of our own people," he said. "And, to me, the United Way is the best way to do that."

The ongoing goal of the United Way is "to increase the organized capacity of Midlanders to take care of Midlanders," said Conaway.

"The folks that have the needs are worthy of it and are worthy of the support in having those needs met because everyone makes up a piece of the fabric of this community. That fabric is stronger and strengthened, as we meet the needs that are there," said Conaway.

The United Way provides funds for 17 Midland agencies, which serve 35,000 Midlanders. Midland has a population of approximately 100,000 people.

Those agencies include the American Red Cross, Big Brothers-Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services Inc., Family Services of Midland and Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, Freewill Foster Home, Midland Need to Read Inc., Midland-Lee Youth Centers Inc., Midland Rape Crisis Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP), Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scout Council, Petro-Plains Camp Fire Inc., The Salvation Army, and select YMCA programs.

The 1991-92 goal of $2.753 million is slightly higher than last year's goal of $2.5 million, which was exceeded. About $2.72 million was raised last year.

The 1991-92 "Allied for Victory" campaign will begin on July 30 with a pilot kickoff luncheon. The general campaign kickoff will be held on Sept. 25 in the Midland Center. Campaign-report luncheons are scheduled for Oct. 10, Oct. 17, and Oct. 24 at Midland Centennial Plaza. The campaign's finale will be Nov. 7.

United Way campaigns typically have raised "more money each year than they raised the previous year," Conaway said. "We certainly hope to do that."

MYSTERY: No Hercule Poirot has stepped forth

(From 1A)

But the primary suspect, a 58-year-old janitor, has long been released from jail for lack of evidence and the case remains unsolved.

This year's drama centers on 42-year-old Countess Alberica Filo della Torre, first battered in the head with her own wooden clog the morning of July 10, then strangled while her children, aged 7 and 9, played in another room.

From the bustling, working-class neighborhood of Via Poma, attention has shifted this summer to Olgiata, an American-looking Rome suburb where the countess and her builder husband lived behind high walls and special security gates.

With robbery apparently not the motive — some jewels were missing but the countess' gold Rolex was left on her wrist — and the husband having an apparently ironclad alibi, the press has been twisting and turning with new suspicions and theories.

One day it's a "grudge" theory and suspicions fall on a former Philippine servant said to have been fired by the countess. The next day it's an "ungrateful" young neighbor said to be an ex-drug addict who was helped by the countess but who may have tried to extort money from her. Both theories were denied by the principals.

"By now we know everything about the life of Alberica Filo della Torre: where she bought her clothes and what kind of wife she was, how many parties she gave every week and who attended them," wrote the Milan newspaper Corriere Della Sera.

"We know everything, except who killed her."

At her funeral Tuesday, attended by leading members of Roman nobility, the priest condemned the "lack of genorosity" in the media coverage.

"It's nothing but a symptom of a violent society without any values," said Monsignor Angelo Celani.

LAWSUIT: Male claims sexual harassment on job

amount of time and allowed it to continue."

Tucci, reached at his home Tuesday night, would not comment on the lawsuit.

Ms. Hirsch, meanwhile, said Giddens left Shell about three months ago because he was emotionally distraught.

He is suing Shell and Tucci for medical expenses arising from "severe emotional distress," the lawsuit states. He also is seeking $350,000 for past and future emotional distress and $1 million in exemplary damages.

Giddens' wife, Tracy, and his son, Richard A. Giddens Jr., are co-plaintiffs in the lawsuit and are seeking $100,000 each for "loss of consortium." They claim their relationships with the elder Giddens have been damaged because of Tucci's actions.

Giddens maintains that Shell was negligent in hiring and retaining Tucci. Tucci, according to the lawsuit, is guilty of "assault and battery" against Giddens.

Giddens, whose phone number is unlisted, could not be reached for comment Tuesday evening. Shell offices in Odessa were closed for the evening.

Ms. Hirsch said sexual harassment lawsuits filed by men are rather unusual, but she added that the law makes no distinction between male and female victims of such harassment.

"The law provides that you cannot have a work place that is basically intolerable because of any type of harassment, regardless of sex," she said.

CALL: Craddick seeks more cuts, consolidating forth on cutting and consolidating, I don't think there's any reason to be considering any type of tax bill in this session of the Legislature."

(From 1A)

Ms. Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis are pushing for legislation that would streamline state government, based on audits conducted by Comptroller John Sharp.

The state leaders, all Democrats, have been working since before the regular session began in January to reorganize government, cut costs, eliminate duplication and improve efficiency. Bullock first proposed the idea for a complete audit of all state agencies in his campaign last fall.

The audits, known as the Texas Performance Review, took more than four months to complete and make about 975 recommendations that would save or raise $5.2 billion.

Before the audits, state officials were estimating a shortfall of anywhere from $4.5 billion to $6 billion or more to provide state services at current levels.

Once legislators deal with the Sharp proposals, they will set appropriations for the 1992-93 biennium. The need for new tax measures will depend on the amount of spending that legislators budget and on how much of the Sharp plan they put into law.

Craddick predicted the House would approve the "vast majority" of Sharp proposals. But opposition to the changes is coming from those who will be affected by the cuts, and some legislators predict the potential savings will be reduced by more than $1 billion.

Ms. Richards, Bullock and Lewis favor a state lottery to raise new revenue, but Craddick said he opposes a lottery because his district is against it.

Craddick said his idea is to get the Sharp plan implemented and "see where we are." Then, he said, additional cuts should be made.

Cuts can be made without harming the services the state provides, he said.

In her speech Monday, Ms. Richards said "the issues before us are neither Democratic nor Republican. They are challenges for Texas, and opportunities for the Texans in this room to create a government that works as hard as the taxpayers who pay our salaries."

Craddick agreed that "getting spending in line is not a partisan issue, and we will be more than glad to look at the Sharp proposals. And, I hope they are in the same mode to look at the things we 've laid out."

The Republican Caucus has proposed shutting down non-essential state services one day a month, cutting state jobs by 10 percent, reducing the number of state holidays from 15 to 10, contracting for private prisons and dropping requirements that school districts provide pre-kindergarten programs.

Republicans also have turned to some theatrics to make their point.

Earlier this month, state Republican Party chairman Fred Meyer of Dallas stood in front of a coffin on the steps of the state Capitol and said Ms. Richards should drive the final nail into the state income-tax coffin by pledging never to sign such a tax bill.

On Tuesday, Craddick and other Republican Caucus members held a news conference to display a huge pledge card they had signed demanding an end to the possibility of an income tax. They asked Ms. Richards to take the pledge, saying they would back up her veto of an income tax.

Finally, Republicans are calling for a Boston tea party-style tax revolt on July 22 on the Capitol grounds and are asking people to bring tea bags to the rally and to mail them to the governor's office and to legislators.

Democrats have responded by saying that Ms. Richards has never supported an income tax. Ms. Richards said in her speech Monday that, thanks to Democrats Bullock, Lewis and Sharp, there is no possibility an income tax will be approved this session.

Some newspaper editorials also have criticized the actions by Republicans as political theater and cheap rhetoric.

Bill Cryer, Ms. Richards' press secretary, called the actions "ridiculous, partisan game-playing." He also pointed out that budget requests by board appointees of former Republican Gov. Bill Clements would have put the state $13 billion in the hole rather than $4.5 billion.

But Craddick said Republicans have gotten great response to the idea for a Texas Tea Party and already have received a lot of letters and tea bags.

"People are tired of taxes and they want a change in the direction of what is going on," he said.

Meanwhile, Craddick is scheduled to present a legislative update at today's Midland Chamber of Commerce membership luncheon set for 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Hilton.

Gorbachev seeks summit help at Soviet 'turning point'

LONDON (AP) — After months of buildup, Mikhail Gorbachev meets Western leaders Wednesday seeking their hearts and help at a "turning point" in his efforts to reform the Soviet economy.

Gorbachev has long sought a meeting with the world's wealthy democracies, sending a letter to the Paris summit in 1989 and dominating from a distance the discussion at Houston in 1990.

This year, he won an invitation, albeit at the conclusion of the official summit. And Gorbachev has put on an impressive effort to cast this meeting in do-or-die terms for his reforms.

In the Soviet Union, he said in a letter to the summit leaders, "there is a critical shortage of food, children items and medicine. The financial and credit system is in disarray, the state budget deficit is growing, export trade and currency earnings have gone down."

Increased investments and advice from the West, and money for creation of a ruble stabilization fund, would help accelerate his economic reforms, Gorbachev said.

Lest anyone miss his seriousness, he said, "I am pinning high hopes on the upcoming meeting in London."

"There is every reason to believe that it may mark a turning point in the efforts to bring about the Soviet Union's organic incorporation into the world economy."

Gorbachev also may discuss a strategic arms deal with President Bush and try to schedule a U.S.-Soviet summit to sign it later this summer. But the emphasis at the Group of Seven summit — even before Gorbachev's arrival — was on the question of what to do to help his economic reforms.

The leaders, who saw Gorbachev's letter last week, were prepared to respond with what British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd on Tuesday called "a message of encouragement for reform."

But that might not be enough for Gorbachev, who was arriving Tuesday night for a series of one-on-seven meetings Wednesday and one-on-one sessions Wednesday and Thursday.

"There is no chance he will go home empty handed," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III. He said the Western leaders were committed to helping the Soviet Union integrate into the world economy, increase energy production and improve its distribution system.

Gorbachev was not asking for, and would not receive, "cash grants," said Baker.

The Soviet leader has set no figure for the level of aid he wants from the West, but did refer to problems repaying the $65 billion Soviet foreign debt. And he called for an international fund to stabilize the ruble and hasten efforts to trade it freely on the world market. Soviet aides estimate that $10 billion to $12 billion would be needed for such a fund.

Gorbachev, in his letter and a 40-page supplement, detailed the collapse of the Soviet economy.

GATES: Confirmation hearings delayed until September

(From 1A)

make a formal, sworn response before the committee.

For Gates, a further loss of momentum toward confirmation raises the possibility that his support in the Senate will wither and that he will face the same fate he suffered more than four years ago when he withdrew his nomination for the same post amid unanswered questions about his role in the then-unfolding Iran-Contra affair.

The postponement was an embarrassment for Bush, who has severely criticized the committee for foot-dragging and lobbied its members to confirm Gates quickly.

Senior administration officials acknowledged that the White House and crucial Republican lawmakers had been split on how wise it was to push for early hearings and that Tuesday's decision by the committee leaves them divided about what strategy to pursue now.

"There are many explanations about what the delay means," said a senior administration official involved in the process, "but certainly it's not a positive development or the best scenario for Gates. There are those who believe that it's over except for the fat lady singing, that we've given in to these guys. There are others who say that we just have to let the committee work for another few weeks and then press forward again. The only strategy we have forged for now is to wait."

In announcing the delay after a closed-door meeting of the committee this afternoon, the committee chairman, Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., said the decision was made with the concurrence of Bush and Gates.

"The committee's scheduling decision should in no way imply a negative attitude toward the nomination," Boren said, "but simply reflects the committee's responsibility to the Senate and the American people to be as thorough as possible."

The announcement came just four days after Bush demanded "fair play" for Gates, arguing at a news conference in Kennebunkport, Maine, that a delay in the confirmation hearings was improper because it allowed time for rumors and innuendo.

Bush's criticism of the committee, particularly his accusation that its members should not "panic and run like a covey of quail" when confronted with new allegations, were in sharp contrast to laudatory remarks he made about the committee on May 14 when he announced Gates's nomination.

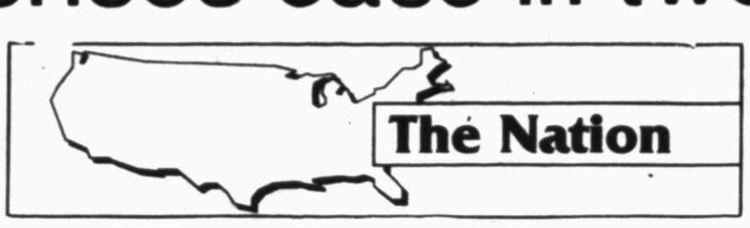
Budget crises ease in two states



Associated Press

Budget deadlocks showed signs of breaking Tuesday in Maine and California, while bitter negotiations continued in three other states that have been operating without budgets since the fiscal year started July 1.

Economic woes, meanwhile, caused problems even in states with budgets in place. A welfare office in Georgia asked for volunteers Tuesday to fill in for furloughed state workers, while Michigan announced a four-day furlough next month for its state employees — from the governor on down.

In Maine, the Legislature Tuesday passed a $3.2 million two-year budget in a major step toward ending a stalemate that has idled most government agencies.

Republican Gov. John R. McKernan indicated he would sign the budget if lawmakers in the Democratic-controlled Legislature overhauled Maine's workers' compensation system.

"Obviously, I'm not going to sign the budget until I have seen that language," McKernan said.

Workers' compensation also has held up a budget in California, but Tuesday a compromise on the issue cleared a key Democratic Senate committee. Republican Gov. Pete Wilson supports the compromise.

Budget talks continued in Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Illinois. In Illinois, the state employees' union filed a lawsuit seeking to force the state to pay thousands of government workers.

In Georgia, a welfare office asked for volunteers to fill in for furloughed state workers.

Georgia's Legislature approved a budget in March, but since then, the state's economy has remained more sluggish than expected. Gov. Zell Miller was forced to find ways to cut spending by up to $400 million.

His response includes a freeze on hiring, travel and new programs, plus the furlough program, which requires each of the state's 100,000 employees to take off one day each month without pay. The furloughs began in some offices Tuesday.

At a welfare office in Clayton County, just south of Atlanta, the call went out for volunteers to help with backlogs. The furloughs have not yet begun there.

"We've had a couple of phone calls this morning," said Cathy Ratti, an administrator. "Some folks are interested."

The office, normally staffed by 130 workers, will lose 10 to 12 employees a day during the next two weeks while administrators juggle schedules to fit a month's worth of furloughs into two weeks' time.

The off days will cause a paperwork jam that will slow applications for food stamps, Medicaid and other services, Ms. Ratti said.

Joyce Goldberg, a state Department of Human Resources spokeswoman, said the agency had no count of how many workers were furloughed statewide Tuesday. She said the most serious impact will be felt in the department's 24-hour hospitals and mental health centers.

In Michigan, the state announced that 34,592 workers — including Gov. John Engler — would be furloughed for four days next month to save the state $13 million.

Elsewhere, progress toward balancing ailing budgets was fitful at best.

In Connecticut, third-party Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. scheduled a televised speech to take his case to the people. Weicker is trying to impose an income tax over the vehement objections of the state's Legislature.

In Maine, the Republican Senate minority followed the lead of their House counterparts and agreed to a Democratic budget compromise Tuesday afternoon.

In Illinois, the state council of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees filed a federal lawsuit in an effort to force the General Assembly to break its 15-day budget deadlock.

Lawyer says Swaggart is a jealous liar

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Televangelist Jimmy Swaggart is a jealous liar who spread rumors to destroy a rival preacher's growing ministry, the rival's lawyer charged Tuesday.

In response, Swaggart's lawyer, Phillip Wittmann, tried to portray evangelist Marvin Gorman as a long-time womanizer who sued Swaggart for $90 million in damages because his ministry was in financial trouble.

Gorman, 58, filed the defamation lawsuit in 1987, claiming Swaggart and others conspired to destroy his New Orleans-based television ministry in 1986 by falsely accusing him of adulterous affairs. The accusations, Gorman claimed, led to his ministry's bankruptcy.

Train derailment spills weed killer

Herbicide from tank car threatens to pollute California's largest reservoir

DUNSMUIR, Calif. (AP) — Thousands of gallons of weed killer that had spilled from a derailed tanker car drifted toward the state's largest reservoir Tuesday, prompting a warning to boaters and fishermen.

The spill, at least 13 miles long, was expected to reach the Sacramento River arm of Lake Shasta late Tuesday. Since Sunday night, the spill has killed thousands of fish and sickened scores of people.

Boaters and fishermen were advised to avoid the arm of the reservoir, and business leaders said the spill threatened the area's summer tourist and sport fishing industries.

"We are world famous for our fishing on the arms of the rivers that feed Shasta," said Michael Arnold of the Chamber of Commerce for Shasta County. "Nothing this devastating has ever occurred."

Officials said the spill didn't appear to pose an immediate threat to the state's drinking water.

"We think the dilution factor is pretty strong by the time it gets to us," said Karen Arntzen of the Contra Costa Water District in the San Francisco Bay area.

Scientists are unsure what effect the spill will have on the drought-shrunken reservoir, with a water level just 55 percent of normal, said Alan Matthews, a state Fish and Game Department biologist.

"We have experts from all over the United States working on the problem of how toxic the substance is and what the effects of dilution will be on toxicity," he said.

Matthews said the weed killer could kill vegetation and disturb the food chain.

The weed killer, containing toxic metam sodium, flowed into the Sacramento River when seven cars and a locomotive from a 97-car freight train derailed late Sunday. A tanker carrying 19,500 gallons crashed into the river.

Campgrounds in the rugged, mountainous area about 50 miles south of the Oregon border and a 60-mile stretch of the river were closed to the public.

Hundreds of people were urged to leave their homes Monday. Most were allowed back Tuesday morning.

County health officials said about 100 people were treated for skin and eye irritation or respiratory problems.

Court upholds dial-a-porn law

NEW YORK (AP) — Callers to dial-a-porn services soon may be unable to get through to the sultry voice at the other end of the line, now that a federal appeals court agreed to make access to the sex messages more difficult.

A law requiring customers to request access in writing was upheld Monday by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here, overturning a lower court's opinion and clearing the way for enforcement nationwide.

The ruling could be fatal for the dial-a-porn industry because customers are unlikely to go through the trouble of writing to request the service, said William Bennett Turner, a San Francisco lawyer representing several providers of sexually explicit material.

"It's largely an impulse purchase kind of situation," Turner said Tuesday. "This could be the death knell of it."

The law would limit access to the live and taped sex lines.

Strauss against large Soviet aid

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Robert S. Strauss, the ambassador-designate to Moscow, said Tuesday that he was opposed to providing the Soviet Union with a large-scale aid program, arguing at his Senate confirmation hearing that the Soviet government remained too unwieldly to digest large amounts of assistance.

At a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing marked by joviality and soft questioning, the former Democratic Party chairman gave a skeptical assessment of the prospects for a smooth Soviet transition to democracy and capitalist development. He stressed that American business executives were justifiably cautious about investing in the Soviet Union.

"The economy is in free fall," Strauss said. "The bureaucracy is in decay. There is disillusionment among the people." Under such circumstances, "pouring money in there without something stronger in place would be like pouring it down a well."

Menudo festival depicts diversity

One of the bonuses of modern society has been the emphasis it has placed on the roots from which our diverse society grew. In a state such as Texas where the culture was shaped by far-flung societies, the result today is a smattering of colorful and interesting festivals that touch lifestyles — as well as eras — in many different points on the globe.

A fine example was the Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff and Family Festival held last weekend at the Midland County Exhibit Building. The 15,000 to 16,000 people who enjoyed the festival had the opportunity to eat good foods derived from the Mexican culture, listen to Mexican music and watch caballeros performing rodeo skills. It was good fun, but fun with a subtle message — the role of the Hispanic through the ages in this land.

That role is important and should not be overlooked or forgotten. It was underscored by the presence of Green Beret Master Sgt. Roy Benavidez of El Campo, who led the festival parade Saturday at the request of the sponsoring Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and later told those attending the festival, "I think it's important to serve as a role model to today's youth, who are the leaders of tomorrow. They need to know how we all served proudly, stuck together and have shown our patriotic colors."

His words were inspiring and should help to stimulate pride in young people attending the festival.

The role of the Hispanic in our society should be a matter of pride and it's through events such as the Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff and Family Festival that young people can come to understand the role their people have played in our society and to underscore the reasons they have to be proud.

The diversity that such events show in our society is one of the strengths of this nation. We are people from widely different backgrounds. But we are a nation of cultures that blend together to form the great American culture.

Add to that the great good that will come from the scholarships and other projects funded by the Hispanic Chamber from income derived from the event and you get another of Midland's community-positive programs worthy of support!

ANOTHER VIEW

Change the voice for changing world

Nothing comes harder to any federal agency than contemplating a reduction in staff. An advisory panel of the U.S. Information Agency thus earns full marks for sensibly suggesting phasing out Radio Free Europe broadcasts to Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

And it finds that another USIA venture, TV Marti, is "not cost-effective." That warrants another bravo.

Overseas broadcasts unquestionably helped hasten the collapse of Communism in Eastern Europe. For four decades, Radio Free Europe provided captive peoples with news their own rulers tried zealously to conceal. But with the spread of democracy and press freedom, the Munich-based station has lost its main mission.

This does not apply to Radio Free Europe's Baltic service, or to a sister station, Radio Liberty, which broadcasts to the Soviet Union in 12 languages.

The advisory commission favors retaining this programming. And it would phase out news broadcasts to Romania and Bulgaria only as circumstances permit. These are prudent distinctions that take account of the uneven ferment in a transformed Communist world.

The Munich stations have been managed independently, supplementing the global programming of the Voice of America, whose broadcasts in 44 languages reach 100 million regular listeners. The Voice's blend of news, music and language instruction remains a vital national asset.

One past success has been Radio Marti, which since 1985 has provided solid news reports to Cuba. But now its radio broadcasts are jammed, Fidel Castro's reprisal for the recent establishment of TV Marti, a Florida-based operation that never made much sense.

To avoid illegal interference with Cuban TV signals, TV Marti now aimlessly transmits programs from 3:30 a.m. to 6 a.m. This wastes $16 million annually on programs nobody watches. As the advisory panel notes, the station, by provoking jamming, has actually cut the flow of information to Cuba. Terminating this experiment would help the Voice, at a modest loss of face.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 17, the 198th day of 1991. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 17, 1898, during the Spanish-American War, Spain surrendered to the United States at Santiago, Cuba.

On this date:

In 1821, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1917, the British royal family adopted the name Windsor.

In 1938, aviator Douglas Corrigan took off from New York with the stated intention of going to California, but ended up the next day in Ireland, earning himself the nickname "Wrong Way Corrigan."

In 1945, President Truman, Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill began meeting at Potsdam in the final Allied summit of World War II.

Customs inspector oversteps bounds

WASHINGTON — The Mexican ambassador to the United States, Gustavo Petricioli, has lodged a steaming complaint with the State Department, because, by his own account, he was stopped at Dulles Airport outside Washington and told by a U.S. Customs worker that he had no right to be in the country.

The verbal fisticuffs between the ambassador and the Customs inspector took place on June 25 as Petricioli was standing in a line of passengers waiting to board a plane to Frankfurt. He had already checked his bags and passed through security when a Customs inspector took him out of line and "in a brusque and aggressive manner, and loud voice, asked the ambassador to show him his passport," according to the account the Mexican Embassy gave the State Department.

The report, obtained by our associate Dean Boyd, says the Customs inspector looked at the diplomatic passport, told Petricioli he did not have the necessary visa and "had no right to be in the United States."

It went downhill from there. Petricioli said he was the Mexican ambassador and showed State Department diplomatic credentials which say, in diplomatic terms, that nobody had better mess with the bearer. The Customs inspector seemed unimpressed and demanded to know how much money Petricioli was carrying out of the country. Petricioli dug in his heels and refused to answer, so the inspector threatened to search him. Then the ambassador demanded to speak to the inspector's boss because he wanted the incident reported all the way to the top — to Carol Hallett, the head of the U.S. Customs Service. According to the Mexican account, "The agent indicated that he did not know of any Ms. Hallett."

When the inspector refused to give his name, Petricioli made a mental note of his badge number. Then the inspector wisely let the ruffled diplomat get on his plane before it took off without him. The Mexican Embassy later wrote that the ambassador was "insulted" and "mistreated" and "placed in an embarrassing situation which was humiliating and violated the spirit of the Vienna Convention of Diplomatic Relations."

The Mexican Embassy won't let the incident die and has demanded an investigation. An embassy spokesman told us Petricioli has received expressions of regret from the State Department and Hallett, and assurances that the U.S. government will get to the bottom of the incident.

But Customs isn't showing much remorse. A spokesman for the agency said their investigation showed that the incident at Dulles was "entirely appropriate" and "routine." Asked about the specific allegations in the complaint, the Customs spokesman said, "We found them not to be true."

William Green, the head Customs official at Dulles Airport, told us that Petricioli may not have heard the announcement that some passengers leaving the country could be subject to random searches. The point is to target people who may be leaving with wads of money.

Green said that witnesses who were questioned said his inspector acted "professionally." The witnesses he cited were another Customs employee and some flight attendants. And Green admitted that they may not have seen the whole imbroglio. Apparently, none of the passengers in line with Petricioli were questioned.

The Mexican Embassy told us that it didn't want to talk about the Customs investigation until the State Department had issued its formal response. But, given the current chummy negotiations on free trade and friendship between the United States and Mexico, the ambassador had a right to expect better treatment.

Gorbachev could solve woes without help

WASHINGTON — Not since the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk in 1918 — when Lenin granted independence to Georgia, the Ukraine and the Baltic states, and groveled before Germany — has a Soviet leader inflicted such humiliation on his nation.

Safire

Mikhail Gorbachev protests that he is not "going on his knees to beg" for money at the economic confabulation this week in London. On the contrary; he will rattle his tin cup standing up, even menacingly, warning that chaos and war will break out if the West does not help Beggar, thy neighbor.

The Great Panhandler will combine his dire threat of nuclear anarchy with delicious incentives: give us the investment capital that will permit us to convert our armaments factories to plowshare production — just as you want. Give us the grain and consumer goods to prevent riots in the streets as we permit prices to rise in a free economy — just as you want.

Germany, France and Italy, fearful of an invasion of hungry immigrants, will urge the U.S. and Japan to underwrite the salvation of communism with a capitalist face. President Bush will be sorely tempted to take the middle way: a little money at first, not a lot, and with strings attached to be nice to separatist republics, and to encourage glasnost.

Bush shows signs of having given up asking if he should help the Soviet leader maintain power; he seems to be negotiating only how much and when and under what conditions. If he allows himself to be drawn down this path of gradual superpower blackmail, this summer's summits will be his Yalta.

The underlying assumption of government-to-government investment and government handout is wrong. That is their statist way of doing business; it is not our way. If we are to help them at all, we must first await their realization that the only way to attract capital is to offer incentive, and the only way to put food on the table is to adopt the profit motive.

The way for Moscow to prevent runaway inflation when it ends subsidies and price controls is not to promote a black market for Western-contributed consumer goods, but to lower the "ruble overhang" by selling property to the people who now hold the unconvertible currency.

The way for Moscow to finance the conversion of war plants to consumer-goods factories is not to beg for loan guarantees; it is to stop wasting assets making tanks and planes and paying a huge standing army, and to stop subsidizing Cuba at the rate of $4.5 billion a year.

The immediate cause of the collapse of the Soviet economy is the crushing cost of the Red army. Now 30 percent of all Soviet production goes for arms; U.S. expenditure is 6 percent, everyone else less than 3 percent.

The reason for such huge spending was to build and police an internal and external empire; apparently that has been set aside. The only excuse Red army and KGB generals still put forward is to defend the motherland against a hostile world.

That excuse, never true, is now an obvious absurdity. What nation or alliance would want to invade or defeat the Soviet Union? Who would want to buy such a headache? The Warsaw Pact has dissolved and Napoleon's route lies open; NATO's response is to break up and go home.

But if I demobilize the Red army, Gorbachev says, not only do I lose my power base, but I will have an army of unemployed. If I bring home troops from Germany, where will they live?

Answer: Use the money saved on war production on home production.

Hollywood at fault for L.A. police problems

The commission report from Los Angeles concerning its police department indicates that the organization was rife with brutality and lawlessness. It spelled out the LAPD excesses in shocking detail and called for the resignation of Daryl F. Gates who, up until recently, was the city's pillar of law and order.

Buchwald

What happened is anybody's guess. Mine is that the blame for most of the problem lies with the movie and television industries. They were producing so many feature films and TV dramas using L.A. Police Department personnel, that no one was paying any attention to what the regular police were doing out in the streets.

Whenever the movie studios needed police for a film, the most convenient organization to sign up was the LAPD. It was also the cheapest because the studios didn't have to go out of town on location for SWAT teams.

It reached the point that the more police shows Hollywood made, the more the LAPD was tied up. Gates had a larger number of men at Warner Brothers than he did at Watts. The police chief cooperated with the studios because he wanted his department to have a good image around the world. He succeeded in his mission until rank amateurs started taking home videos of his men without his permission.

When the home videos got much higher ratings than the fictional shows made at the studios, Gates was devastated. He couldn't understand why people would rather watch bad cops filmed by amateurs than good cops who were directed by top professionals. He even thought about having video cameras banned in L.A., or at least having the home videos rated X if they made his cops look bad.

The L.A. police, as portrayed by Disney Productions, was Gates' idea. You never saw cops use racial epithets or handcuff someone and then beat him up.

This was not only because Gates wouldn't permit it — neither would a sponsor.

There's no doubt that if members of the LAPD behaved as well on the streets as they did on the screen, the commission would have given the department a "10" for police performance. If Gates made a mistake, and no one said that he did, he assigned all his best behaved men to the movies — and all the dunderheads to go out and fight crime. The good guys never got to fight the bad guys, because they were too busy driving police cars for Paramount Pictures.

There is a belief that because the good police were given all the cushy jobs at Universal Studios, the dunderheads became jealous and took it out on the suspects they arrested. Those in the know were not surprised when the dunderheads got mad and beat up people for no good reason.

Some of his supporters say that Gates is getting a bad rap. When you receive a call from Columbia Pictures for 100 motorcycle policemen, no self-respecting police chief is just going to sit on his hands and do nothing.

The only reason that the police chief should be censored is if he knew what was going on. Common sense indicates that he did not. Gates was so tied up supplying police chases for Clint Eastwood there was no way for him to know that his men were using their baseball bats to exceed their authority.

The big question is, can Hollywood survive the latest LAPD flap? People believe it can. For every bad cop in the barrel, there is an Angie Dickinson doing her job anonymously and selflessly.

Gates and the L.A. Police Department wish they had a lot more like her.

Cholera spreads in Mexico

The World

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Twenty people have cholera symptoms in a rural region in the states of Hidalgo and Veracruz near the Gulf of Mexico, a federal health official said Tuesday.

A Mexico City newspaper reported that two farmers suffering from diarrhea and vomiting, which are cholera symptoms, died recently in the towns of Huejutla, Hidalgo and Aguacate, Veracruz.

Fearing the spread of what could be cholera, federal authorities Sunday quarantined the two towns which lie about six miles apart.

Epidemiologists are expected to determine by Thursday whether the illness is cholera, which has been confirmed recently in two other Mexican states.

Eduardo Arivizu Marin, a spokesman for Department of Health, denied that anyone died in either town from cholera. Arivizu said medical personnel in the area believe Huejutla and Aguacate may be suffering from an "outbreak of diarrhea."

Most of the people infected are poor farmers and artisans, said Veracruz Gov. Dante Delgado Rannauro.

More than 2,000 people have died in South America in a cholera epidemic that began in Peru in late January and spread rapidly through that country and into Colombia, Ecuador, Brazil and Chile.

In the past month, 37 people contracted cholera in rural towns in the states of Mexico and Hidalgo, said Arivizu. He added that no one died in the earlier outbreaks.

Local authorities were first alerted to the possibility of cholera in the region late last week when a family of four suffering from diarrhea, fever and dehydration were taken from Aguacate to the city of Poza Rica for treatment, said Ignacio Oropeza, spokesman for Gov. Delgado Rannauro.

Medical examinations showed that the family had cholera-like symptoms. Over the weekend, state authorities discovered 16 similar cases in Aguacate and Huejutla. The patients were also taken to Poza Rica.

Aguacate is town of roughly 220 people sometimes called Little Aguacate to avoid confusion with the city of Aguacate located 70 miles to the north.

Both towns lie in the Huasteca region, the original home of the Olmeca Indians.

Oropeza said that more than 30 medical personnel were sent to the region over the weekend to conduct further tests and instruct residents on basic hygiene. Purified drinking water and portable sewage retainers have been brought to the town, Oropeza said.

Cholera in Mexico was first reported on June 22.

Shiite: U.S. delays hostage release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An influential Shiite Muslim leader said Tuesday that the United States is delaying the release of its hostages in Lebanon by failing to pressure Israel to free Arab captives.

Abbas Musawi, whose fundamentalist group Hezbollah is believed to be the umbrella group for those holding hostages in Lebanon, said the six missing Americans could be freed once Israel releases Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners.

His remarks again raised the issue of a possible prisoner swap, under which Israel would release the 300-400 Arabs in exchange for freedom for seven of its servicemen missing since 1982 and the 13 Western hostages.

"This thing will not cost the Americans anything except a measure of pressure on Israel," Musawi said in a recorded interview with the Voice of the People radio station, run by the Lebanese Communist Party.

Musawi, elected leader of Hezbollah in May, said Washington was delaying the release of its hostages "to fulfill political ends." He did not elaborate.

Although Musawi spoke only of the U.S. hostages, in previous statements he said all Western hostages in Lebanon would be included in the deal.

Missing in Lebanon are six Americans, four Britons, two Germans and an Italian. The longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped in Beirut on March 16, 1985.

Dan Naveh, a spokesman for Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens, said in Jerusalem that negotiations over a prisoner swap cannot begin until Hezbollah allows the Red Cross access to the Israeli soldiers.

It is not known how many of the Israelis are still alive, but Musawi has said his group holds two.

The kidnappers also have demanded the release of Hezbollah cleric Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid, who was kidnapped by Israeli commandos.

Israel has agreed to free Obeid and the other Arab detainees, provided the seven servicemen missing in Lebanon are included in the swap.

In other comment, Musawi said he will give Beirut a list of Hezbollah militiamen willing to join the Lebanese army or police.

The government plans to disarm Hezbollah and a group of Iranian Revolutionary Guards in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley in September, as part of its plan to end Lebanon's 16-year-old war.

Baker: Peace hurdles remain

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Tuesday "there are plenty of hurdles" still in the way of Mideast peace talks despite Syria's unconditional acceptance of President Bush's formula.

Baker, preparing for another burst of diplomacy in the region, said, "We are at a point where direct bilateral negotiations may indeed be possible. But obviously it depends on what the reaction of other governments is."

His remarks, at a news conference held at the edge of the seven-nation economic summit, appeared directed at Israel, which is holding fast to its objections to any United Nations participation in peace talks with the Arabs.

Baker said Syria had not dropped its demand for a U.N. role. But Bush had proposed to President Hafez Assad that a U.N. observer be present only as "a silent partner," and Baker said the Syrian leader's response "is not conditioned."

Training his sights on Israel to give way, Baker said negotiation with the Arabs "is something that Israel has wanted for a very, very long time." He said he wanted "to discuss in depth with the Israeli leadership the situation as I see it."

Baker flies to Damascus on Thursday to see, he said, if Assad had "interpretations" of Bush's formula that were not evident in his response to the President.

He will hold talks also in Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia before a climactic visit to Jerusalem on Sunday to see Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and other Israeli leaders.

"It's fair to say we have the possibility of seeing direct bilateral negotiations between Israel and some of its Arab neighbors," Baker said.

The Bush formula calls for Israel to yield territory in exchange for Arab acceptance. The president has not attempted to delineate how much of the lands it captured in the 1967 Mideast war Israel should relinquish, but Syria is demanding the return of the strategically located Golan Heights.

Thirteen die in W. Java bus crash

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A bus slammed into a market in West Java, killing at least 13 people and injuring 10 others, police said Tuesday.

The bus slammed into the Parean Market in Indramayu early Sunday, said Maj. Edi Kusumawijaya, deputy police chief in the town 131 miles east of Jakarta.

Kusumawijaya said 10 people died instantly, and three died later in a hospital.

The bus driver fled the scene of the accident but was arrested later, he said.

Croatia seeks monitor team

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia Tuesday demanded that a European Community team monitoring a cease-fire in Slovenia also be sent to Croatia, the scene of ongoing ethnic violence.

A Croatian policeman was killed in a mortar attack Tuesday and two members of a foreign TV crew, including an American, came under fire and were slightly injured while driving in the Croatian countryside.

Yugoslavia's eight-member presidency had scheduled another meeting Tuesday to discuss the Yugoslav crisis, but the meeting collapsed when several republics refused to attend.

The pro-Western republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared independence June 25, capping a long quarrel with Serbia, the largest republic, over the future of the Yugoslav federation. Fighting broke out, mainly in Slovenia, leaving more than 60 dead.

Leaders of the seven leading industrialized nations, meeting in London, called on all parties in the crisis to abide by a European Community-brokered truce in the fighting, which was reached July 8.

The first 20 EC observers arrived Monday in Zagreb, Croatia's capital.

MISD trustees don't act on food policy

■ Board debates questions of nutrition, revenue and whether junk food should be available in school vending machines.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Should students in Midland public schools be allowed to buy carbonated drinks, candy and other "junk foods" from school cafeteria vending machines?

Should principals and student activity funds be allowed to profit from vending machine revenues or should the school district take a stand and ban junk foods and soda pops from the schools?

Is it a question of revenue or nutrition?

School board trustess debated these questions for several hours before tabling any action on school policy involving "nutrition and competitive foods."

Patricia Grillos, a registered dietician and director of food services for the school district, supports requiring vending machines to carry only sandwiches, soups, salads and fruit juices.

"Kids like soda pop. I like soda pop. But child nutrition is worthy of our study," said Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

Baressi noted that "more than a quarter of a million dollars was generated from soft drink sales" in the junior high, freshman and high schools.

"Soft drink sales generated about $90,000 for Lee High School and more than $78,000 for Midland High School," Baressi said. "I feel a need to have a nutrition policy. But there is a wide difference of opinion on this. It endangers the principals' revenues."

Baressi said that no matter what the school district chooses to enforce in the high school cafeterias, the high schools still have open campus policies.

Ricardo Torres, director of secondary education for the district, designed a policy he hoped would be a compromise between the principals and food service personnel.

"Schools must be strong advocates of nutrition," Torres said. "I see kids eating all kinds of stuff. But the campuses are having the wherewithal to support budgets below state average (with the vending machines). The dilemma is one of being an advocate of good nutrition or principals having (financial) resources.

"Students have an aversion to eating cafeteria fare because it's cafeteria food," Torres said.

"It's not the food, it's standing in line that students don't like," Ms. Grillos argued. She said that lunch periods were too short for the number of students who needed to move through the lines.

"Eliminating the junk food will not eliminate the problem," said Ken Marks, MISD board president. "Students can go to the youth centers and get a soda pop or candy."

Board trustee James Fuller said discipline problems would increase if soft drinks were banned.

"You mean kids will be bringing in contraband (their own soft drinks)," Torres said.

"At present we are sacrificing nutrition of our children for funds," Ms. Grillos said.

"The bottom line is revenue and who is going to get it — the principals or the food service," said teacher Val Butler.

Ms. Butler questioned the food services profiting from the sale of pizza from Midland restaurant

'91 candidates didn't spend most in decade

■ Records show that former Mayor Thane Akins spent the most of any other municipal candidate in the past 10 years.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Individual spending in this year's Midland City Council races did not top that of some candidates who ran for municipal office here during the past decade, city records show.

However, one candidate this year spent more than any other single-member district candidate since 1985, the first year of single-member representation.

Former Mayor Thane Akins had the highest campaign spending since 1981. In his 1984 mayoral bid, Akins spent $41,629, including $9,000 in repaid loans, and received $41,752 in contributions, with $10,000 of that in loans.

Like other candidates' final expense reports, Akins' report did not include loans paid off after the last reporting period for an election. Expenditure and contribution totals include loans listed as received or paid.

Akins' opponent in 1984, Frank Lasater, spent $35,616 and received $35,616 in contributions, including $24,812 in loans.

The 1986 race for mayor ranked second highest in spending during the past 10 years.

Mayor Carroll Thomas that year spent $38,184 and received $43,325, while opponent Steve Davidson spent $24,368 and received $17,065.

Candidates running for the City Council have spent more than $20,000 in some contested races and almost nothing in others.

Katie Heck spent $22,856, including $6,070 to repay loans, in her 1985 at-large race, while she received $24,499 in contributions, including $14,000 in loans.

Hugh White III, who lost to John Castro and J.D. Faircloth in this year's at-large race, received and spent only $125.

District 1 Councilmen James Devenport this year spent more on his candidacy than any other single-member district council candidate. Devenport spent $15,763, including $5,000 to repay loans, while his contributions totaled $19,285.

At-large Councilman John Castro was the closest to Devenport in spending and contributions this year, spending $3,109 and receiving $4,223.

District 2 candidate Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche, defeated by the Rev. Michael De Vaughn, spent $2,669 while receiving $3,007. De Vaughn's expenditures totaled $1,046, while his contributions were $1,567.

At-large candidate J.D. Faircloth spent only $432 and received $1,850.

Faircloth's spending during the 1989 at-large election was $13,217, while he received $13,417, including $637 in loans. Castro that year spent $4,869 on his campaign, while he received $5,156.

Most council candidates in the 1990, 1989, 1985 and 1981 races spent or received between $2,000 and $8,000 during their campaigns, while some spent or received less than $1,000.

In 1984, Bart Hotchkiss spent $16,474, including $7,200 to repay loans, and received $18,674, during his candidacy for Place 5 on the council.

The highest spender of the 1988 election was Bob Monaghan, who spent all of the $2,150 he received. Kelly Fish spent only $216, while opponent Hugh White III neither spent nor received anything.

JP issues jewelry heist warrant

Staff Report

An arrest warrant has been issued for the man believed to have threatened employees with a submachine gun during a June 29 robbery at Sam L. Majors Jewelers in Midland.

Midland Justice of the Peace Robert Pine issued an aggravated robbery warrant late Monday for 22-year-old Alfredo Martinez of San Antonio, Midland Police Department Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson said.

Pine issued the warrant after witnesses identified Martinez from mug shots as the man who threatened them with an Uzi-type submachine gun during the mid-afternoon robbery of the store, located at 18 Oak Ridge Square.

Monday's warrant was the third one issued in connection with the heist, which netted the robbers an undisclosed amount of designer watches and other merchandise.

San Antonio authorities arrested Raymond Garcia Jr., 20, last Friday on an aggravated robbery warrant in connection with the incident. He is being held at the Midland County jail in lieu of $200,000 bond.

A warrant also has been issued for a 21-year-old Samuel Delarosa of San Antonio.

Local police traced the suspects to San Antonio based on a description of the getaway vehicle, a 1985 red BMW registered in that city. Johnson said MPD officers and San Antonio police have been cooperating in an attempt to track down the suspects.

Bunton gives lighter sentences

■ Judge changes men's sentences for drug conviction after appeals court ruled they did not deserve the maximum.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

In accordance with an appeals court mandate, a federal judge in Midland imposed a lighter punishment Tuesday on two men originally given the maximum sentence for an Odessa marijuana offense.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced the men, Hector Garcia and Jose Acosta, to 12 months and 21 months in prison, respectively. He had originally sentenced them to four years apiece last year.

Undercover agents arrested the men, along with four other people, in March 1990 after discovering 300 pounds of marijuana hidden in a tanker truck that the men helped transport from Alpine to Odessa.

Garcia and Acosta, both 26, pleaded guilty in July 1990 in connection with the bust to using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

Bunton sentenced them in August 1990 to four years apiece, the maximum allowed.

But their attorney, Richard Alvarado, maintained that Bunton misapplied federal sentencing guidelines in his clients' cases. Alvarado appealed Bunton's decision to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which overturned the sentence May 7.

The appeals court ruled that Garcia and Acosta did not stipulate to certain facts that would have allowed the maximum sentence in the case, court records show.

Acosta, of Gardendale, who has already served 16 months of his sentence, will remain in custody for another five months. After that, he will be required to serve one year of supervised release and pay the balance of a $1,000 fine.

Bunton ordered that Garcia, who also has served 16 months, be released from custody immediately. Garcia, of Odessa, will have to serve eight months of supervised release and pay the balance of a $500 fine.

Of the other four people arrested in the case, only one — 24-year-old Jose Valenzuela — is in prison. Valenzuela, also sentenced last August, is serving five years for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Charges against another person arrested were dismissed, and two others facing charges in the case jumped bail and are being sought by authorities.

In other action Tuesday in Midland's U.S. District Court, seven people pleaded guilty before Judge Bunton.

■ Three men entered pleas in connection with their arrest in April on charges of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine. Glenn Edward Perry, 31, of Big Spring and Charles Edward Farmer, 27, of Leander, each pleaded guilty to one count of using a firearm during a drug transaction. They face a minimum sentence of five years in prison. Delbert Elgene Scroggins, 51, of Big Spring, pleaded guilty to using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction. He faces up to four years in prison.

Drug Enforcement Administration undercover agents arrested the three on April 26 at Midland's Plaza Inn, 4108 N. Big Spring St., after the men allegedly attempted to purchase chemicals used for making methamphetamine, or speed.

Midland's tax rebate check increases over July 1990

■ City's rebate totaled $603,251.60, an increase of 4 percent from last year.

Staff Report

Tax rebate checks from the State Comptroller's office continue to reflect a healthier local economy.

The city of Midland's July check is for $603,251.60, up more than 4 percent from July 1990, Comptroller John Sharp's office reported. Year-to-date rebates to the city are up even further, standing at $5.14 million through July, almost 7.9 percent ahead of last year's receipts.

Checks received by government entities this month are based on May sales reported by businesses during June.

County tax receipts also were higher this month, compared to a year earlier, standing at $376,637.42, up 10.7 percent from last July. Cumulative totals for fiscal 1991 show the county receiving $3.14 million, up 17.6 percent from year-earlier levels.

In Ector County, Odessa's rebate check this month was for $496,183.70, up 2.8 percent from last July. The check brings the city's total to $4.54 million for the year, up 6.8 percent from 1990.

Goldsmith's receipts jumped more than 78 percent over the previous year, to $1,529.43, bring the year-to-date total to $18,191.02, more than double last year.

The comptroller's check to the new Ector County Hospital District this month is for $697,239.95, bring the total for the year to $3.3 million.

Statewide, rebates were up 16.6 percent to 960 cities, totaling nearly $88 million in July. Year-to-date checks to cities have totaled $705 million this year, more than 12 percent ahead of fiscal 1990.

County receipts have risen even more, totaling $78.2 million so far this year, more than 20 percent ahead of last year's level.

The state's six largest cities — Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin and El Paso — received more than 42 percent of the $98 million disbursed by the comptroller this month. The cities comprise just more than 29 percent of the state population.

The top six payments and year-to-date totals are:

- Houston, almost $14 million, totaling $116.8 million;
- Dallas, $8.6 million and $70.8 million;
- San Antonio, $5.3 million and $40.4 million;
- Austin, $4.2 million and $31.1 million;
- Fort Worth, $2.7 million and $23.1 million; and
- El Paso, $2.3 million and 18 million.

DEATHS

Judge denies bond for 2 suspects in marijuana case

Staff Report

A federal magistrate in Midland on Tuesday denied bond for two of the four men arrested last week for allegedly attempting to buy 106 pounds of marijuana from undercover agents in Odessa.

Judge Robert R. Sykes ordered that 46-year-old Juan Dios Barberis of Miami and 33-year-old Rojerio Segura Gonzales of Odessa be held at the Midland County jail pending their trial.

Sykes said Barberis failed to qualify for bond because he was free on bail for drug offenses in Miami and Mississippi when he was arrested in Odessa. Gonzales, meanwhile, was ineligible for bond because he was on parole at the time of his arrest, Sykes said.

Sykes set 10 percent personal appearance bonds for the other two men arrested in the case.

Frank Miguel Saldarriaga, 36, of Miami, remained in jail in lieu of $200,000 bond Tuesday night; 41-year-old Jesus Jose Maraz of Odessa was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond.

According to reports, the men met with undercover Department of Public Safety investigators July 8 in Odessa and agreed to purchase 106 pounds of marijuana for $50,000.

Baskin home from hospital

Staff Report

Judge Pat M. Baskin, who presides over Midland's 142nd District Court, is resting comfortably at home following his return last week from coronary bypass surgery at Houston's Methodist Hospital, the judge's secretary confirmed Tuesday.

Baskin, who was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital June 23 complaining of back pain, underwent successful bypass surgery in Houston a week later.

Bonnie Rister, the judge's secretary, said Baskin may be back on the bench as early as September.

3 family members die in accident

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A car rolled over four times Tuesday, killing three members of a Fort Worth family and critically injuring two others, authorities said.

The driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel about 10 a.m. on Interstate 45 about 5 miles south of Huntsville, Trooper Terry Vogler said.

Eyewitnesses told officers the car ran onto the median and swerved back onto the highway before becoming airborne and flipping four times.

The dead were identified as James Wagner, 42; his son, Christopher, 18; and daughter, Holly, 14.

Wagner and his wife, Cathy, 37, were the only occupants wearing seat belts in the family sedan when Wagner apparently went to sleep at the wheel, Vogler said.

Wagner was pinned in the wreckage by the roof which caved in on impact. Christopher, Holly and 10-year-old Shannon Wagner were ejected along a 50-yard stretch of the east side ditch during the series of rolls, investigators said.

Santa Anna's vest remains mystery

By M.C. Moewe
N.Y. Times News Service

'The vest was adorned with row upon row of pure gold buttons of magnificent design.'
— Samuel Townsend

The mystery began 155 years ago when Joel Robison, out looking for prisoners after the Battle of San Jacinto, gave a captured Mexican a ride on his horse.

The Mexican, who was dressed as a peasant, turned out to be Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, commander of the Mexican forces. In gratitude for Robison's gesture of kindness, Santa Anna gave the soldier an intricately designed braided vest. And Robison took the vest home with him to Round Top.

Or so some say.

"The vest was adorned with row upon row of pure gold buttons of magnificent design," said Robison's nephew, Samuel Townsend, in a 1929 interview.

A 1902 book, "Fayette County: Her History and Her People," by F. Lotto, recounts the tale. Joel Robison's son Neal, who was Fayette County's tax collector for 32 years, told the author about a tradition that developed. "It became the fad of the young people in those days to get married in Santa Anna's vest," F. Lotto wrote.

Alas, the tradition has long since ended. And persistent efforts this month failed to find anyone who had seen the vest — or even a photograph of it.

"I think it did exist," said Kathy Carter, the curator at Fayette Heritage Museum and Archives in La Grange. "I can't imagine row upon row of gold buttons, though."

In a letter dated Aug. 5, 1881, about Santa Anna's capture, Robison did not mention the vest. But almost any Fayette County elder can recount the wedding tradition. Each groom, it is said, would take one gold button from the vest as a souvenir.

"No doubt, then there beat truer hearts behind it then when Santa Anna wore it," F. Lotto wrote. "This vest was lost in lending it to the young people."

Two chronicles of Fayette County say that the Hon. Richard V. Cook, a prominent citizen and attorney of the Colorado County town of Columbus, wore the vest when he married Martha Logue on June 30, 1874. But a newspaper article about the wedding doesn't mention the vest.

La Grange resident Flo Rowley, 82, is convinced that Joel Robison, her great-grandfather, had the vest. She heard the story every time his name was brought up in front of her grandmother, who was married to Neal.

"It had solid gold buttons the size of silver dollars," she said.

Donald Kloster, a military history curator at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, said he has an exhaustive list of Santa Anna's possessions. But he has never heard of the vest.

"From my knowledge, it wouldn't have had all that many buttons. Facts tend to be enlarged upon," Kloster said.

Georgia Tubbs, 66, who was born and lives just a few miles from where Joel Robison had his home, said everyone in her generation knew about the vest.

"Each time they had a speech on the Fourth of July, it was mentioned. It's just that nobody knew what happened to it," she said.

No one went looking for it until the Texas Sesquicentennial in 1986, when Frances Harris, who had moved to Round Top a decade earlier, took an interest. "We have so few mementos here that I thought it would be nice if we could have it to display," she said.

Many in the city were convinced that a Chappell Hill man, who once ran an antique shop in Round Top, had the vest and that it would soon be going on display at the San Jacinto Monument Museum.

"We're just waiting for the right time to get it back," Mayor Dave Nagel said this past Fourth of July.

But San Jacinto Museum curator J.C. Martin said he has never heard of the vest. And the Chappell Hill man, John Shaw, pointed out that history recorded the vest long gone before he visited Round Top for the first time in 1967.

"I don't know where that idea came from," Shaw said. "I don't even remember seeing it, and I have a pretty good memory."

A 1936 account, "An Early History of Fayette County," by Leonie Rummel Weyand and Houston Wade, says the vest was last seen at West Point, about 30 miles from Round Top. It didn't say when, but it did say all the buttons but one were gone.

"Yeah, I've heard about the vest," said Pat Bush of West Point, a cattle rancher and local historian. "I've heard it was once kept in West Point. Sometimes I think it's just a legend."

In Fayette County, that is a bold statement. And the outsider senses it is time to stop raising questions about the vest's existence.

"Oh no, there's no doubt about that — not in my mind," Rowley said. "I don't think my grandmother would have talked as much about it over that long period of time if it had not existed.t"

Trustees tabled any action on the school district's food policy.

In other action trustees approved the following appointments, Charles Winget, San Jacinto Junior High School assistant principal; Brune Torres, migrant counselor and parent trainer (a federally funded position); and Sam Manning, social studies department chairman.

Mary Burrichter, Harriett Stelling and C. Louise Lesser were appointed as elementary school guidance counselors.

School board trustees also approved the Aug. 10 joint constitutional/County Education District election and amendments to the reinvestment zone tax abatement policy.

Man begins shooting in judge's office

KENEDY (AP) — A gunman opened fire Tuesday afternoon in the office of a city judge, wounding the judge's secretary and killing a man who had been visiting her, authorities said.

A Kenedy policeman also was wounded later, said Felix Casanova, a communications officer with the Karnes County Sheriff's Department.

The gunman, armed with a revolver, fled the judge's office, located next to the courthouse, and holed up in a nearby house, Casanova said.

He was captured several hours later by law officers who had surrounded the house, said a sheriff's dispatcher who declined to give his name.

The identity of the gunman was not immediately released.

The shootings occurred about 4 p.m. when the man went to the office of judge Lucille Matthews, who was not there, Casanova said. Ms. Matthews also is a peace justice.

The gunman shot the secretary, who was taken to a San Antonio hospital for treatment, the dispatcher said.

Dead at the scene was a relative of the secretary's.

Controversial PBS program won't be aired

Staff Report

ODESSA — Phil Speegle, president of Odessa College, determined this week that the controversial film, "Tongues Untied," a television documentary profiling black homosexuals, will not be aired on KOCV-TV Saturday as originally scheduled.

Speegle, who overruled the earlier decision by KOCV officials to show the program, said he had heard it was demeaning to blacks. "I don't want to encourage that in the community," he said.

The show had been set to air at 11 p.m. Saturday, KOCV-TV is the Public Broadcasting Service station operated by Odessa College.

Many of the 350 public television stations nationwide have also refused to air the piece.

PRISON: Bunton changes sentences

(From 1B)

Sentencing for the men has been scheduled for Sept. 4.

■ Apolinar Carrasco Franco, 45, address unavailable, pleaded guilty to one count of distributing more than 500 grams of cocaine.

According to investigators, Franco negotiated on Feb. 21 to purchase three kilograms of cocaine for $66,000 from undercover agents in Odessa. He faces from five to 40 years in prison and his sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 4.

■ Charles Edward Curry, age and address unavailable, pleaded guilty to credit card fraud. He admitted that in 1986, he used a VISA charge card issued in another person's name in a series of transactions totaling more than $1,000.

According to investigators, Curry used the names of professors at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa — where he worked as a mail clerk — to obtain many credit cards, which he used without paying the resulting bills.

He faces up to five years in prison and his sentencing is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 6.

■ Jeffory Scott Cloyd, 36, a medical student at the University of North Texas, pleaded guilty to concealing a felony from authorities, which carries a maximum punishment of three years in prison.

According to investigators, Cloyd failed to inform authorities that on Sept. 1, 1989, he used a false social security number to obtain an American Express charge card.

His sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 4.

■ Saturino Aguirre-Ledezma, 29, of Chihuahua, Mexico, pleaded guilty to possession of a counterfeit alien registration receipt card.

A U.S. Border Patrol agent arrested Ledezma on June 19 in Ector County after Ledezma showed him the card during a routine bus stop check, investigators said.

Ledezma, who is scheduled to be sentenced Sept. 4, faces up to five years in prison.

Proposed budget $1 billion short

AUSTIN (AP) — Budget-writing senators Tuesday started work on a spending plan that would reorganize state government, depends on passage of a lottery and revision of the business franchise tax, but still falls $1 billion short.

The $58.2 billion two-year budget includes many of the recommendations from an audit of state government by Comptroller John Sharp, but goes further in some areas, officials said.

"The Sharp report is not the 11th commandment," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said. "It is the blueprint for the future and we welcome additions to it."

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said his proposed budget "funds essential items." He declined to say how lawmakers would make up the extra $1 billion to balance the measure.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House budget writing committee, said his budget proposal would fall about $2.4 billion below what is needed to continue the current level of services.

That measure would not include about $1 billion in public education monies that lawmakers earlier promised to help fund court-ordered school finance reforms, he said.

As the budget battle heated up on the second day of the special session, higher education officials scrambled to defend themselves. State leaders, including Gov. Ann Richards and Sharp, have criticized higher education representatives, saying they have wrongly raised the specter of faculty and staff layoffs in order to churn up opposition.

Richards and Sharp, however, say the budget proposals would actually increase higher education funding.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, told a packed crowd of college and university officials, "Higher ed has not done a good job defending itself."

Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas system, defended his position that Sharp's proposals would cut higher education by $622 million.

Montford seemed more sympathetic toward higher education.

"Higher education is probably one of the main things going for us right now, so I am fairly reluctant from my vantage point to do a major scale back," he said.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, whose district includes the University of Texas at Austin, said he would fight plans to either double tuition or raise it by 60 percent.

Montford's budget also contained several controversial cuts and agency mergers.

Under the proposal, the budgets of most agencies led by statewide elected officials, such as the General Land Office, would be reduced by 10 percent.

"It's going to cause some real pain, but I think Garry (Land Commissioner Garry Mauro) is committed to doing his part," said Saralee Tiede, a spokeswoman for the Land Office.

The proposal also would transfer or consolidate 56 agencies. It would eliminate funding for the Public Utility Commission and transfer its regulatory functions to the Texas Railroad Commission.

In addition, the plan would consolidate the Texas Education Agency, which supervises public schools, and the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, which oversees public colleges and universities.

Another part of the plan would consolidate major environmental departments into one agency.

Suspect in secretary's abduction wanted college grades changed

CENTERVILLE (AP) — A convicted murderer accused of kidnapping a college admissions secretary in an attempt to get his grades changed remained in jail on $50,000 bond Tuesday on a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

Arthur Lee Dunbar, 26, was charged with sexually assaulting a woman who was abducted Monday from Lee College in Baytown, about 25 miles east of Houston, said Leon County Sheriff Royce Wilson.

The 52-year-old woman's abductor took her to Centerville, about 140 miles north of Baytown, where she was sexually assaulted but managed to escape and call her family, authorities said.

Dunbar was paroled in 1989 after serving four years of a 15-year prison sentence he received after being convicted of killing a 2-year-old boy in Dallas, Baytown police Sgt. Gene Parker said.

The kidnapping incident began Monday afternoon when a man came to the admissions office, asking that someone call a security guard because he had locked his keys in the trunk of his car, said Baytown police Sgt. Martha Treloar.

Officers said the secretary went down the hall and did not return.

"She called about 30 minutes after she was gone and told her coworkers that she was sick and that her husband had picked her up," Treloar said. "And she's not married. So, they went back and checked her desk and found her purse was still there and they called the police."

"Apparently all he was wanting was his grades to be changed," Treloar said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will spread good cheer and win favorable publicity by standing up for your beliefs. Others share your respect for traditional values. Those involved in politics will gain new ground beginning in October. A financial triumph is featured in December. Your exceptional staying power makes you a strong leader in business. Other members of your profession admire your survival skills. Romance could take a backseat to career concerns early in 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian Phyllis Diller, actor Donald Sutherland, actresses Lucie Arnaz and Diahann Carroll.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected events will affect many of your activities today. A sharp contrast captures your attention. You work to correct an unfair situation. Avoid scattering your energies too widely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance may be volatile now. Speaking from the heart will strengthen your relationship. This is no time for hedging or subterfuge. Protect your health by guarding against overindulgence. Take a daily walk.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fortunately, you are emotionally prepared to take the next major career step. A very productive day lies ahead. Teamwork will boost profits appreciably. Romance may be somewhat rocky now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money-making ideas cannot wait. Move on them aggressively before time slips away. Travel will provide even more benefits if you postpone it until later in the month. Seek favors from friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family ties give you important support in good or not-so-good times. Break away from old routines, shedding those outdated methods that have slowed you down. New job opportunities open up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Guard against being overly critical of your partners and associates today. You are entering a period of pivotal change; be ready to make the most of any unusual opportunities that come your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A partnership and family life will be affected by today's events. It may take a jolt to show you what is best for a close relationship. Your prospects for happy romance are excellent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your sense of humor wins you valuable points today. Strengthen family ties by doing those small but important things. There is new emphasis on making friends; you can never have too many!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If joint financial matters seem unclear, be careful not to sign anything. A vibrant new professional relationship is featured today. You may be offered a job that involves moving to another city.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A community project or political campaign gets under way today; you should welcome the action. Plant the seeds for future success by widening your circle of social and business contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Even if a relationship does not seem especially exciting, you are glad that it is stable. Save money instead of spending every dollar you make. Strike a better balance between work and play.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although you long to visit faraway places, it is important to stay close to home now. You could find lasting happiness with someone you meet at a social event. Get more exercise.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are quick-witted, assertive and sociable. They enjoy playing with other youngsters but will probably try to boss them around. Concerned parents will teach these impressionable Cancerians the importance of sharing and taking turns. Once they reach adolescence, they will show a great interest in the opposite sex. They are in love with love, flitting from one romance to the next.

DONE IN BY THE ODDS

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ Q 9 5 4 ♡ Void ◇ 9 8 4 2 ♣ A Q 10 8 5
WEST ♠ 6 3 2 ♡ A 7 6 3 2 ◇ 5 ♣ 9 4 3 2		EAST ♠ J 8 7 ♡ K 9 5 ◇ K Q J 10 6 ♣ J 6
	SOUTH ♠ A K 10 ♡ Q J 10 8 4 ◇ A 7 3 ♣ K 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	2 ◇
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇

If you look at all four hands, you could be excused for thinking that a 3-year-old could make nine tricks at three no trump. Unfortunately, sitting South was one of the most accomplished players we know, and he had no trouble in going down. We appreciate his candor in reporting this hand.

North-South were playing a 15-17 range for their no-trump openings, so South judged that his hand, because of the five-card major and good intermediates, was a whit too good for that option. East's overcall was adventurous, and the final contract was quite reasonable.

West led a diamond and declarer saw no point in holding up. It might seem routine to go ahead and cash four spades and five clubs for an overtrick, and many players we know would do just that. However, South was concerned about how the club suit was distributed, and elected first to find out more about the hand.

Declarer cashed four spade tricks, on the last of which both defenders discarded a high heart. South now knew that East had started with five diamonds, three spades and at least two, possibly more, hearts. Thus, 10 of East's cards were known, and only about six of West's could be inferred. Not only was it possible that East was short in clubs, but even if East held three clubs, the chance of West having the jack was 50-50.

Eminently well reasoned. Unfortunately, when declarer continued by leading to the king of clubs and finessing the ten, East scored the jack, four diamonds and the defenders took two hearts for a three-trick set.

A not uncommon case. The operation was a success. Unfortunately, the patient died.

Gay Talese changes publishers because of conflict of interest

NEW YORK — Best-selling author Gay Talese has quit Doubleday and taken his new book to Alfred A. Knopf because he was uncomfortable about being published by a company where his wife worked.

"I saw the situation as a conflict of interest," Talese said.

Talese

"My wife, Nan, would have been sitting in on meetings where they would have been discussing how many books to print, the jacket and so on. It would have been awkward for her and for me."

Nan Talese is a senior vice president of Doubleday, where she has worked since 1988.

Her husband had been working on "Unto the Sons," an account of his family's migration from southern Italy to the United States, since 1983. He said he chose not to deal with the conflict until he completed the 700-page manuscript this year because he thought the negotiations would be a distraction.

He has signed a three-book contract with Knopf, negotiated by his agent Lynn Nesbitt.

The president of Knopf, Sonny Mehta, said after he was approached by Nesbitt, he read "Unto the Sons." He called it "quite wonderful ... the book that Gay was born to write."

PHOENIX — A lawyer for former child television star Danny Bonaduce says he's trying to negotiating a plea bargain for his client, who is charged with robbing and attacking a transvestite prostitute.

Bonaduce had been scheduled to go on trial Monday, but Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Joseph Howe postponed the case until Aug. 12. He also set a hearing for Friday to consider a possible change of plea.

Defense lawyer Richard Gierloff said Bonaduce is eager to reach an agreement because publicity has already cost him his job. He was fired last month as a disc jockey at Phoenix radio station KKFR.

Bonaduce, 31, is a former cast member of the 1970s television series "The Partridge Family." He is charged with assault, robbery and fleeing police on March 31.

A Philadelphia newspaper reported Tuesday that Bonaduce plans to start a new career as a stand-up comedian.

"I know absolutely nothing about doing stand-up, but that's never stopped me before," Bonaduce told The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Bonaduce said he expects to be the opening act Sept. 12 for fellow "Partridge Family" alumnus David Cassidy at the Valley Forge Music Fair in Valley Forge, Pa. A spokeswoman for the music fair said discussions were taking place with Cassidy, but there was no date or contract.

PARIS — France honored jazz trumpet maestro Miles Davis on Tuesday with one of its highest cultural honors: a knight in the Legion of Honor.

Davis

Culture Minister Jack Lang presided at the ceremony, attended by several top French jazz musicians and members of Davis' band, which is on a European tour.

Lang described Davis as "the Picasso of jazz," and said he had inspired "three or four generations" of great musicians.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Gov. Mike Sullivan, labeled the "Jerk of the Week" by a Denver radio personality for a comment he didn't make, has jokingly responded that the appellation just might help his political career.

Sullivan, a popular Democrat, learned this week that he had been designated "Jerk of the Week" by KOA radio in May for supposedly referring to Coloradans as "greenies."

The term, drawn from the color of Colorado's license plates, is sometimes used by Wyoming residents who complain that too many Colorado residents head north to use Wyoming's campgrounds and fishing spots.

Sullivan said he never uses the term.

But that didn't stop him from thanking George Weber, host of KOA's "The Flip Side," for the award.

"Had I known of this honor at the time, I might have celebrated by inviting all three of my friends for dinner," the governor wrote tongue-in-cheek.

He added, "If word gets out around these parts about the reason for my joining your jerk list, you may have extended my political longevity in Wyoming for some substantial time. I am grateful for that."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Rubber-faced Jim Varney is shooting another "Ernest" movie in Nashville but has his sights set on other characters.

Varney said he'd like to play a vampire in the film version of Anne Rice's "The Vampire Chronicles."

"Ernest Scared Stupid" will feature Varney as the ever-meddling rube Ernest battling a neighborhood troll with help from a group of children. Eartha Kitt plays a soothsayer.

Stargazers should get good view of meteors

FORT DAVIS (AP) — Clouds obscured the view of many people hoping to see last week's solar eclipse, but conditions should be right next month for gazing eastward at a meteor shower.

In August, Earth will move into the dust path of the Swift Tuttle Comet, giving stargazers an opportunity to watch the show staged by the Perseid meteor shower.

The event will be much more subtle than the solar eclipse, which drew thousands to Mexico, and can only be seen with dark skies. Because of the Earth's orbit around the sun, viewers should have a front seat for the Persied show, said Mark Wetzel, public information specialist at the University of Texas McDonald Observatory.

"The reason it's the biggest (meteor shower of the year) is because of the volume of debris the Earth is moving into. Meteor showers are related to comets that have made periodic visits around the sun," Wetzel said Monday.

"As comets orbit around the sun, their surfaces, which are ice and rock, boil off as gas and dust, and that's what we see (in the meteor shower). That's the tail of the comet."

Wetzel said the material that boils off the comet follows the same path of the comet.

According to the August edition of Sky and Telescope magazine, a week of moonlight-free sky next month will provide the best conditions in several years for observing the meteor showers. The magazine said the last good year was 1988.

The Perseid meteor shower is named after the point in space from which it seems to radiate. The dust from the Swift Tuttle Comet can be seen against the background of constellation Persius, so the showers are called the Persied meteor showers.

Wetzel said that during the meteor shower, some 40 to 100 meteors per hour may be seen.

"Particles viewers are going to see are usually about the size of a grain of sand that is moving about 300 miles a second and is vaporized by the Earth's atmosphere," he said.

The best time to view the shower is between midnight and 3 a.m. Aug. 12 and 13. At that point the Earth will have turned in the direction that it is orbiting the sun.

"So we would be sitting on the front seat of an orbiting Earth. At that point you would be able to see the meteor shower coming directly at you," Wetzel said.

McDonald's Observatory, where skies are considered the darkest for any professional observatory, will host one of its regular star parties on Aug. 13. The meteor shower will be the main attraction.

Agency collects money from Soviets

■ San Antonio collection agency wrestles the $7,000 Soviet airline owed a Texas oil company.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — San Antonio collections agents may have smelled money, but it took them 11 months of pestering Soviet officials to finally wrangle payment of a $7,000 fuel bill out of the Kremlin for a Texas oil company.

"We weren't about to give up. We were determined to make the Soviet Union pay this bill, one way or the other," said Milo Mims, spokesman for Abbott, Abrey & Beck, a commercial collections agency. "Our client is very important to us, and this became kind of a project with us."

The Texas oil company tried for nine months to collect the $7,000 on its own, after a Aeroflot Soviet Airlines jet refueled its tanks at the company's facilities at Anchorage International Airport in October 1989.

But the oil company, which declined to be identified although it confirmed the collection agency's efforts, was forced to turn to Abbott, Abrey and Beck when the Soviets stonewalled on paying the bill.

After numerous calls to Aeroflot in New York, Mims said the collection agency was told that the Kremlin had to authorize payment of the bill.

"That's where we started to get the big runaround. But we couldn't communicate because we don't have anyone who speaks Russian. We had wires going back and forth, between Aeroflot in New York and the Air Ministry in Moscow," Mims said Tuesday.

Aeroflot finally wrote a check in June for the $7,000 out of its operating budget, Mims said.

At the same time, the Bank of the Soviet Union in Moscow, wired the funds to the collection agency's bank via international banking channels.

"Aeroflot personnel bowed to our pressure and broke the rules to get us off their backs after their pleas to Moscow had apparently fallen on deaf ears, so we got the check and the international wire transfer at the same time," said Don Lane, general manager of the collections agency.

"Obviously, the left hand didn't know what the right had was doing and we got paid twice. We returned the check, but I'm proud to say that we are the only collection agency, as far as I know, to ever collect the same bill twice from the Soviet Union,'" Lane said in a statement Friday announcing payment of the bill.

Lane said officials in Moscow had put off paying the bill because of cash-flow problems.

"We knew the Soviets were in a cash crunch and had heard horror stories about how they weren't paying anybody," Lane said.

Soviet officials at the embassy in Washington and at Aeroflot in New York refused to comment.

Economic experts and business officials estimate the Soviets are $6 billion to $8 billion in arrears on their current bills.

Mims said it usually takes his company 90 days to collect on a commercial account, as long as it's not in litigation.

"We smelled money here, and ultimately, we were correct," Mims said. "Ultimately, it paid off. Our client was very surprised and pleased that we were able to collect. They had given up on it."

Hall to expand

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Representatives of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, ready for next week's enshrinement, are also planning an enlargement to the home of football's greats.

"There are definite plans for expansion," said Don Smith, a vice president at the Hall of Fame. "We're going to run out of space, we need to do something, and we're going to do something."

The Hall of Fame has not set a timetable for construction, but it will include knocking down some walls and adding a new wing. At the moment, the Hall of Fame includes four connected buildings.

The Hall of Fame will enshrine the Class of '91 a week from Saturday. Earl Campbell, Tex Schramm, John Hannah, Stan Jones and Jan Stenerud will swell the ranks of inductees to 160.

Tests on Alzado

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyle Alzado, former All-Pro defensive end who has been battling inoperable brain cancer, underwent tests Tuesday after being hospitalized for possible dehydration, his agent said.

Alzado, a 14-year NFL player with Denver, Cleveland and the Los Angeles Raiders, was admitted to an undisclosed hospital Sunday after two days in which he could not hold down food or liquids, said agent Greg Campbell.

Angels disarm Captains, 10-9

■ Adding to Tuesday's excitement at Angels Stadium is the announcement that famed left-hander Fernando Valenzuela is scheduled to pitch for Midland this Friday.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Angels' 10-9 victory over the red-hot Shreveport Captains Tuesday night at Angels Stadium should have been enough good news for one day, but Midland Texas League fans also learned that Fernando Valenzuela will pitch Friday.

Valenzuela, trying to work his way back to the California Angels, has had Midland fans on their collective toes while waiting on a decision when he would take to the mound.

He will pitch at 7 p.m. Friday against the West Division leading Captains, who showed Tuesday that they have some heavy timber waiting for Valenzuela.

"Valenzuela will pitch Friday and we urge the fans to get their tickets early and arrive early for that game," M-Angel general manager Monty Hoppel said. "We are expecting a big crowd."

Meanwhile, the Angels were doing just fine on the field

Johnson drills Pokes

Birthday boy enthused by initial team workout

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Coach Jimmy Johnson celebrated his 48th birthday Tuesday doing the thing he loves best: sending his Dallas Cowboys through two hard practices in near 100-degree conditions in full pads.

"It was a great first workout," Johnson said. "It was hot and there was a lot of enthusiasm. You didn't see a lot of lollygagging around. Everybody worked."

Few players knew it was Johnson's birthday as the Cowboys began their first official fall drill at St. Edward's University.

Offensive tackle Nate Newton shouted at Johnson: "Happy birthday, coach. That's all I can give you."

But later, the players gave Johnson a birthday present — they doused his immaculate hairdo with a big bucket of water.

Johnson admitted the opening of practice was the biggest birthday gift of all.

"This is the best time of year for me," Johnson said. "I'll celebrate tonight by going to staff meetings. That will be my party."

The Cowboys, who drew more than 100,000 fans to practices last year in their first season at St. Edward's, were besieged by another large crowd despite the heat index which made a rapid climb to 100.

Hawkers sold parking places and cold beverages nearby in a scene not unlike the circus coming to town.

"Great receptions, just a great reception," said Johnson, the NFL's 1990 coach of the year after turning the Cowboys around from a one-victory season to a 7-9 record.

One of the presents Johnson had for his players was his "middle drill," which involves a running back hurtling himself into tacklers.

"Anybody who knows me knows my adrenalin starts pumping when we have a little contact," Johnson said. "It helps a player get ready both mentally and physically for the season."

Rookie Curvin Richards, a fourth-round pick from Pittsburgh, was the star of the drill, breaking tackles and getting Johnson's praise.

"He was as impressive as any new player we had out there," Johnson said. "He looked like Emmitt Smith out there breaking tackles. He's going to be a quality player. He was a steal."

Smith, the NFL rookie of the year in 1990, got a personal present from Johnson — no middle drill.

"We know the talent of Emmitt Smith," Johnson said. "We won't let him get into the middle drill. He'll get plenty of action starting in preseason."

Not even the absence of six unsigned veterans, linemen Dean Hamel, Danny Noonan, Daniel Stubbs, fullback Alonzo Highsmith, linebacker Jack Del Rio, and offensive lineman John Gesek could dampen Johnson's birthday.

Veteran tight end Steve Folsom didn't report and is no longer a member of the team. Folsom only played in one game last year and didn't catch a pass.

"Steve Folsom didn't report and we're not going to try to sign him," Johnson said.

"We have all the rookies signed here and that makes me feel great," Johnson said. "We're working on getting the veterans here but they are getting behind."

The busy Johnson felt so good he even allowed himself to be distracted long enough to sign autographs.

"Hey, Mr. Johnson, you're my hero," a boy shouted from behind a chain fence.

"I can't turn that down," Johnson said before breaking away to deliver his birthday autograph.

DiMaggio's streak halted at 56 thanks to Keltner

Associated Press

Keltner

MILWAUKEE — Ken Keltner never tires of talking about that summer night 50 years ago in Cleveland when he helped end the streak by which all others are measured.

Even more than his seven All-Star game appearances and one World Series championship, the former Cleveland Indians third baseman will be remembered most for the two back-handed defensive plays July 17, 1941, that helped end Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak.

"When we started that game and the streak is on, I'm just hoping and praying I get the ball hit to me so I can make the plays," recalled Keltner, now 74 and in retirement in his native Milwaukee.

"That's all. And it just happened that way. Somebody had to make the plays. I'm glad he hit them at me. If I don't make those plays they are base hits."

And if DiMaggio got a hit, his streak would have continued. After going 0-for-3 against Cleveland that night, DiMaggio started a new streak of 16

Woosnam, Norman want slice of British pie

■ Welshman, Australian optimistic about Open chances despite recent defeats.

Associated Press

SOUTHPORT, England — Despite defeats in their last warmup tournaments, Greg Norman and Ian Woosnam are optimistic heading into the British Open.

Woosnam won the Monte Carlo Open two weeks ago, but finished 10th in last week's Scottish Open. However, he wasn't that disappointed because coming into the British Open with a two-tournament winning streak would have meant extra pressure on the 5-foot-4 Welshman.

"Can you imagine what it would be like if I came in here going for three in a row this year?" he said. "I didn't want that. ... I'm more relaxed now than I was last year and I'm playing well. I'm very confident."

Norman, in the worst slump of his career, blew the Western Open in his last start. The Australian lost a five-shot lead with eight holes to play and finished second, but said he still exceeded his expectations in the tournament.

"I entered the Western at the 11th hour, just to play, hit some balls, get some competition," said Norman, who was playing his first tournament since withdrawing from the U.S. Open because of a hip problem.

"Instead of just playing, I got myself in position to win. That's much more than I expected. Sure, I stubbed my toe, fell all over myself coming in. But I played very well for 63 holes."

Despite his year-long victory drought, a bout with burnout and occasional sniping from the international press, Norman remains one of the leading contenders at the British Open, which begins Thursday at Royal Birkdale.

"I've just gone through a bad run," Norman said. "I really feel that it's bottomed out, that I'm on the upswing now.

"I'm not writing myself off just because a lot of other people are. I got a big boost in confidence from the Western. I'll come back. I still have confidence it will happen. I have a very good feeling about this week."

Dodger slide continues in Philly

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Terry Mulholland won his third straight start and Wes Chamberlain drove in three runs with a two-run home run and a single as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Los Angeles 3-1 Tuesday night, the Dodgers' sixth straight loss.

NL

Pirates 6, Astros 4

PITTSBURGH — Gary Varsho's two-run pinch homer broke a sixth-inning tie and Jose Gonzalez hit his first homer as a Pirate, hiking Pittsburgh's winning streak to seven games.

The Pirates have won 14 of their last 18 to withstand New York's recent 10-game winning streak and maintain their lead in the National League East.

Padres 4, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Tony Fernandez doubled home three runs to highlight a four-run seventh inning that carried San Diego past Montreal.

The loss was Montreal's first in six starts since the All-Star break.

Mets 6, Giants 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Magadan, who had four singles in five at-bats, and Gregg Jefferies each drove in two runs as New York defeated San Francisco.

Dwight Gooden (9-6), who gave up eight hits in seven-plus innings, lost his shutout when Kevin Mitchell hit the first pitch of the sixth inning into the left-field bleachers.

Braves 8, Cubs 5

ATLANTA — Ron Gant singled in the go-ahead run in a three-run seventh inning as Atlanta snapped the Cubs' four-game winning streak.

The rally started when left fielder George Bell dropped Jeff Treadway's fly for a two-base error. Terry Pendleton beat out an infield single, sending pinch-runner Mark Lemke to third.

Cardinals 8, Reds 7

CINCINNATI — Ozzie Smith singled home two runs in the ninth off Cincinnati's Rob Dibble, the reliever's first blown save in 24 chances.

Mid City gains District 3 finals

Staff Report

Midland Mid City is now in position to sit back and watch its challengers punish each other after a 13-2 win over Midland North Central in the Little League District 3 tournament at Bluebird Park Tuesday night.

North Central drops into the loser's bracket, leaving only Mid City as the only unbeaten team in the tournament and advances to Friday's 7 p.m. finals.

Jason Rogers hurled a five-hitter for Mid City and also homered along with Eric Eschberger. Mid City had 13 hits.

El Paso eliminated Odessa Salinas 14-3 in the loser's bracket as Derrick Ortiz pitched the win and Heath Moody tossed a two-hitter for Odessa Jim Parker to eliminate Big Spring International, 6-1. Jim Parker and El Paso meet at 7 p.m. today with the winner going against North Central Thursday.

Junior League

Midland National beat Odessa Salinas 7-4 in the loser's bracket to gain a berth in today's 5 p.m. championship finals against unbeaten Midland American at Redfern Field. Ryan Elder was the winner in relief. If Midland National wins at 5 p.m., another game will follow.

Big League

El Paso ripped Coahoma by a 16-0 score in a run-rule five inning game. Joe Hodges was the winner and Rob Melendez had three hits in four bat trips for El Paso.

At press time, Lamesa was pulling a shocker over Midland, leading 8-0 in the top of the seventh inning. Midland did have the bases loaded in the seventh.

games.

"He was the greatest player I ever saw in my life," Keltner said. "I didn't play against everybody, a lot of them were before I came and after I left. But I played 13 years and he was the greatest. That's all I got to say."

But with a crowd of 67,468 at Municipal Stadium, DiMaggio's luck ran out.

Keltner made his plays in the first and seventh innings, DiMaggio grounded into a bad-hop double play in the eighth and also walked.

"The plays were almost identical," Keltner said. "The first time he was up I played him deep because he never bunted. I played him close to the line because if he hits one down the line, it's a double.

"I made two back-handed plays and when I wound up I was in foul territory after back-handing these two balls. The first one I had to straighten up in foul territory and throw him out by an eyelash. The second one the same thing, backhand down the line and I threw him out by an eyelash."

DiMaggio hit another hard shot in the eighth that shortstop Lou Boudreau somehow turned into a double play.

"It took a bad hop before he caught it. He caught it on his right ear," Keltner recalled. "He turned it to second to first for a double play.

"It just wasn't Joe's night. He hit the ball hard enough all the time to get base hits but they just weren't there."

Keltner's backhanded stabs earned him more than baseball immortality, it earned a police escort from the lockerroom to his car after the game.

"My wife and I walked out of the stadium in Cleveland and I got a policeman in front of me, a policeman behind me and one on each side of me all the way to the parking lot," he said.

"They just made sure there wasn't going to be anybody getting hurt. Joe had a lot of friends in Cleveland. You never know what's going to happen."

Even though Al Smith and Jim Bagby, the Indians pitchers that night, were also responsible for halting the streak, Keltner has gotten most of the credit.

And the legend has grown as so many in baseball do.

"At the time it happened I didn't believe it would be this way. At the time it happened it just wasn't that spectacular."

Tigers get by Rangers again in ninth inning

Associated Press

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers won their second straight game in the ninth inning, beating the Texas Rangers 6-5 Tuesday night on pinch-hitter Dave Bergman's sacrifice fly.

AL

Detroit led 4-0 but Texas took the lead with a run in the sixth and four in the seventh.

Rob Deer tied the score 5-5 in the eighth with a two-out homer. It was the 18th homer for Deer, who had been an 0-for-18 slump since the All-Star break.

Mariners 5, Yankees 0

SEATTLE — Brian Holman pitched a six-hitter and stretched his scoreless streak to 17 innings Seattle beat New York.

Holman (9-9) recorded his third shutout and fifth complete game of the season. After giving up consecutive singles to Don Mattingly and Mel Hall in with two outs in the ninth, Holman preserved the shutout by getting Matt Nokes on a popout to shortstop.

Red Sox 2, Chisox 0

CHICAGO — Greg Harris allowed two hits in seven innings and won for the fourth time in five starts as Boston beat Chicago.

Carlos Quintana homered in the fifth inning and Mo Vaughn hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth as Boston won for just the second time in seven games.

Brewers 4, Twins 3

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor tied the score with a ninth-inning double and Daryl Hamilton followed with a game-winning single.

Brian Harper's two-run homer off Dan Plesac gave Minnesota a 3-2 lead in the top of the inning, but Rick Aguilera blew his eighth save in 32 chances as Minnesota lost for only the second time in six games.

Royals 2, Blue Jays 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Catcher Greg Myers allowed the tying run on a passed ball in the ninth inning and his wild throw scored the winning run in the 10th.

Stus mounts 279-pin Cobra lead

Associated Press

ST. CHARLES, Mo. — Gene Stus, who overcame two heart bypass operations before joining the senior bowling tour this year, won six straight games Tuesday night and pulled away to a 279-pin lead in the $70,000 AMF Cobra Bowling Classic at Webers' St. Charles Lanes.

Stus, the hottest bowler on the senior tour since retiring as a quality control supervisor for General Motors, started the night round 150 pins ahead of second-place Bob Perry. Stus picked 180 bonus pins (30 per win) for the six wins by bowling games of 261, 227, 204, 265, 245 and 212.

John Hricsina, the defending champion, is second with a 5,582 score. Only 12 games remain Wednesday before the field is cut to the top five for the live ESPN telecast Thursday night.

Sullivan signs on with Sul Ross

Staff Report

ALPINE — Midland Lee centerfielder David Sullivan has signed a letter of intent to play baseball for the Sul Ross State University Lobos.

Lobo coach Robert Virden said, "We are happy to sign David to play with us. We have a young and developing team and will be looking to our new players for help. David's speed should be an asset to the team."

In addition to being the starting centerfielder for the Rebels' district championship team, Sullivan was also a starter in the defensive secondary for Lee's Regional qualifying football team.

He is the son of Midland's Nick and Bonnie Sullivan.

Stallings qualifies for National Junior Olympics in two events

Staff Report

STANTON — Jeremy Stallings of Stanton recently qualified for the TAC National Junior Olympics to be held July 24-28 at the University of North Carolina.

Stallings qualified at the TAC Region 12 meet at the University of Texas-Arlington on July 12-13 that included participants from all over the state of Texas.

The top three finishers in the 15 Regional meets qualified for the national meet at UNC.

Stallings, 16, competing in the Young Men age division, finished first in the 800 meters with a 1:57.4 and thrid in the 1500 meter run with a 4:08.4.

This is just another highlight in an already brillant career for Stallings, who will be a junior this fall at Stanton. Last spring, Stallings won the Class 2A state championships in both the 800 and 1600 events in Austin as a sophomore.

ANGELS: Midland still in first-place tie with Missions

(From 1C)

during all the hoopla over Valenzuela this week. The Angels busted out 14 hits and came from behind twice to derail the Captains, who came roaring into Angel Stadium with four consecutive victories over El Paso.

The victory kept the Angels tied with San Antonio for first place in the second half West race.

Surprisingly, the Angels did most of the damage with the lower part of the order as positions 7-8-9 combined for seven hits and eight RBIs.

Walt McConnell, who had three RBIs from the No. 7 position, produced a two-run single off the glove of Shreveport second baseman John Patterson in the four-run sixth to tie the game at 10-10, and No. 8 hitter Damion Easley followed with the game winner with another run scoring single.

"I just hit the ball hard and it got through," McConnell said of his big hit. "Damion also came up with a good hit and that's the way it's been going for us lately. Coming from behind is due to battling and everyone giving one-hundred percent."

The Angels also had a big four-run inning in the second with No. 9 hitter Mick Billmeyer getting two of his three RBIs with a key double.

Shreveport got six of its nine runs with the long ball. Juan Guerrero hit two solo homers and now has 17 for the year. Dan Lewis had a three-run shot in the fifth and Adell Davenport had a solo blast in the fourth.

Midland reliever Rafael Montalvo (2-1) pitched three innings to pick up the win while Shreveport reliever Kevin Meier (8-5) took the loss, getting touched by the four-run sixth of the Angels.

Shreveport is now 36-13 on the road and 0-1 against Midland. Wichita, with a 7-3 mark, is the only other club with a winning record against Shreveport.

Kevin Flora's 42-game errorless streak ended Tuesday with two errors. He went through 230 chances without an error on the streak.

ANGEL DUST: Regular ticket prices ($3 adult, $2 child, senior citizens and military) will be in effect for the Valenzuela game Friday, but Hoppel urges fans to get them early. Tickets are on sale from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily at Angel Stadium and during games next to the Angels souvenir stand. All tickets will be general admission. All box seats are sold out. Hoppel plans to add some seating down the right field line, but hasn't decided if a portion of the warning track in the outfield will be roped off for admission. The gates will open at 5 p.m. Friday.

LeMond's position grows more powerful as PDM withdraws

Associated Press

ST. HERBLAIN, France — Their numbers reduced by fever, Dutch cyclist Erik Breukink and his PDM team withdrew Tuesday from the Tour de France, leaving leader Greg LeMond in a powerful position entering the Pyrenees Mountains.

Breukink pulled out before the start of the 11th stage with a bacterial infection that dropped him from second to third.

OPEN: Norman a contender despite lengthy win drought

(From 1C)

So does Woosnam.

"I played well in Scotland," he said. "Good, solid, steady golf. Nothing wrong with the way I played. I've played well for several weeks now, but lately my putting has not been that good. Sometimes that happens. Sometimes they just didn't go in.

"It's just a matter of patience. It's a matter of whether it's your week or not. If the putts go in, it's your week. If they don't go in, it's not your week. It's that simple."

Prices rebound

Oil prices rebounded from Monday's losses on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Tuesday, West Texas Intermediate for August delivery rise 18 cents to close at $21.65.

The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Texaco Trading and Transportation to raise their posted price 25 cents to $20.50.

Southmark ruling

DALLAS — Southmark Corp. will appeal an Arizona federal court's $49.5 million summary judgment against a wholly owned subsidiary, the company said Tuesday.

The court on Monday approved Phoenician Commercial Properties Inc. and Crescent Lending Corp.'s $49.5 million claim plus accrued interest against Southmark Life Group, Southmark said.

Phoenician and Crescent are both wholly owned subsidiary of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association.

Braniff routes

DALLAS — Braniff International Airlines Inc., after two weeks of service, said Monday it would cancel one route and start serving two new ones.

Braniff on Aug. 1 will begin flying Newark, N.J.-Orlando, Fla. and Dallas-Fort Worth-Fort Lauderdale, Fla. routes.

The airline on that date will suspend its Dallas-Fort Worth-Los Angeles route. Braniff chief executive Gregory Dix said the company has had problems getting its service components in place in Los Angeles.

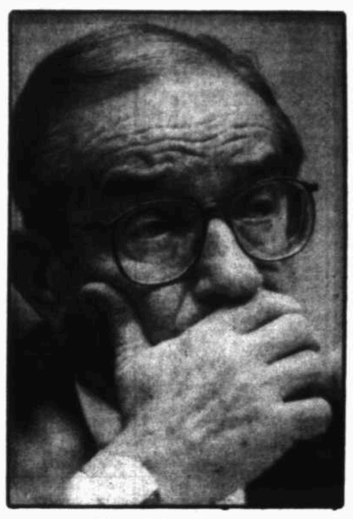
Fed chief upbeat on U.S. economy



Alan Greenspan

■ Alan Greenspan appears before House Banking Committee's Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy to testify, as required by law every six months.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan, named last week to another four-year term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, on Tuesday gave Congress one of the most optimistic assessments of the economy he has offered in years.

He proclaimed the recession over, reported "promising signs of a slowing in inflation," predicted "marked progress on the deficit" and said he expected the debt of individuals and companies to flatten out after the surge in the 1980s.

"At this stage," Greenspan told a House subcommittee, "we are well on the path of actually achieving the type of goals which we've set out to achieve: a solid economic recovery with the unemployment rate moving down to its lowest sustainable, long-term rate, with growth at or close to its maximum long-term sustainable pace, with inflation wholly under control."

Typical of Greenspan, who talks publicly about the economy with the precision of the Oracle at Delphi, not all of his news was glowing. At one point, for example, he said that "convincing evidence of a dynamic expansion is still rather limited," and that "we must remain alert to the chance that the recovery could be muted or could even falter."

He also characterized the Fed's current policy as "a posture of watchful waiting," presumably meaning that changes in interest rates are not in the offing soon. The Fed has not touched the rates it controls since it last cut them in April.

But by and large, Greenspan, the government's most important economic policy maker, has rarely been so upbeat, and he looks fit and healthy. He was hospitalized overnight last weekend after he suffered dizzy spells, but his staff said he was released after tests proved normal.

Greenspan appeared before the House Banking Committee's Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy to testify, as required by law every six months, about the state of the economy and the outlook for monetary policy. His economic forecasts contained no surprises.

He said that he and other Fed officials expected the gross national product to rise between three-quarters of a percent and 1 percent this year, inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index to rise 3¼ percent to 3¾ percent and the civilian unemployment rate in the fourth quarter to be

Money center banks must consolidate to compete

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

A decade ago, the big "money center" banks like Citicorp, Chase Manhattan, Chemical and Manufacturers Hanover were all things to all people.

They dominated America's financial centers of New York, Chicago and San Francisco and were an integral part of the nation's monetary system. They loosened up on credit when Washington gave the nod, and they pulled on the reins when the policy makers signaled it was time to tighten.

■ News Analysis

They also catered to an array of customers from multinational corporations and Third World nations to small businesses and passbook savers.

Growth was their religion, and they pursued it with self-confidence, even arrogance.

But the proposed merger of Chemical Bank and Manufacturers Hanover, announced on Monday, is the latest evidence that the troubled giants of banking are moving to find a new and narrower role amid stiffening competition and changing rules.

Today, burdened by losses on loans to developing countries and in real estate, the industry's traditional leaders are engaged in a humbling consolidation.

America's financial centers are so dispersed that the money-center label is fading from the banking jargon.

Now, banking's stars are rising from places like Charlotte, N.C., the home of NCNB, the former North Carolina National Bank, and Banc One of Columbus.

America's largest banks must quickly cut costs to raise profits if they are to efficiently compete in the lucrative frontier of national consumer banking.

Bankers and analysts say nationwide retail banking, which will depend on coast-to-coast advertising and brand recognition and low-cost products, is an area where the big New York banks can flourish. Their size and background should be an advantage in foreign-exchange dealing, credit-card loans, and bundling home mortgages into securities and selling them to investors.

Still, national banking will be a tough challenge.

Bank merger brings flood of queries

■ Law says that deposits insured before the merger will continue to be covered until six months later.

By Louis Uchitelle
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Now that Chemical Bank and Manufacturers Hanover have decided to merge, they are beginning to deal with the issues that concern consumers, such as what interest rate to charge on bank credit cards (Chemical's are lower) and how much will a customer have to keep on deposit to have a no-fee checking account ("Manny Hanny's" $1,500 minimum or Chemical's $3,000.)

"We don't have any idea yet how we'll answer these questions," said Alan M. Silberstein, Chemical's executive vice president for consumer banking.

Such issues will not be settled until the banks officially merge early next year, the banks said. But just 24 hours after the merger announcement, customers calling hot lines Tuesday were getting a few answers.

Bank spokesmen sometimes referred to a question-and-answer sheet put together in anticipation of the biggest consumer concerns.

One answer was for the depositor who kept, say, $70,000 at Chemical and $60,000 at Manufacturers. The total once the banks merge — $130,000 — will exceed the $100,000 maximum amount covered by federal deposit insurance.

Neither Manufacturers Hanover nor Chemical wants the $30,000 excess to migrate to another bank, so they explained how deposit insurance could be preserved.

"We are telling people to put the money in different family names," said Judy Walsh, a Manufacturers spokeswoman.

Under present law, a husband can have $100,000 insured in his name, his wife another $100,000 in her name and jointly they can keep on deposit still another $100,000 that is also insured.

But these changes need not be made immediately; the law says that deposits insured before the merger will continue to be covered until six months after the merger is completed, or at least until mid-1992.

The really difficult issues arise from the natural tendency of neighboring banks to try to steal each other's customers by offering better deals.

Yvonne Tighe has sold ANTIQUES ETC., 15 Plaza Shopping Center, to Dan Haller, who had been a dealer in the store for five years.

Haller said customers will see very little changed at the store, home to 36 dealers. "Yvonne did such a nice job setting the store up, and we've been so successful covering the Permian Basin, I don't see much reason to change things." He did say they plan a special event for this fall when the Confederate Air Force opens its facilities.

The Midland-Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor (MOHRE) now has available a list of apartments that offer discounts and short-term leases as well as those who don't offer discounts.

Mary Larsson, executive director of MOHRE, says the list is of interest to retirees who want to rent an apartment temporarily while they purchase a home or for "Winter Texans" who come to the area on a semi-permanent basis.

President-elect Jim Butler of Odessa noted that, of the apartment owners and managers responding, 15 percent were interested in offering discounts to seniors.

MOHRE also offers listings of local retirement centers and campgrounds and RV parks.

MOHRE is celebrating its fourth anniversary.

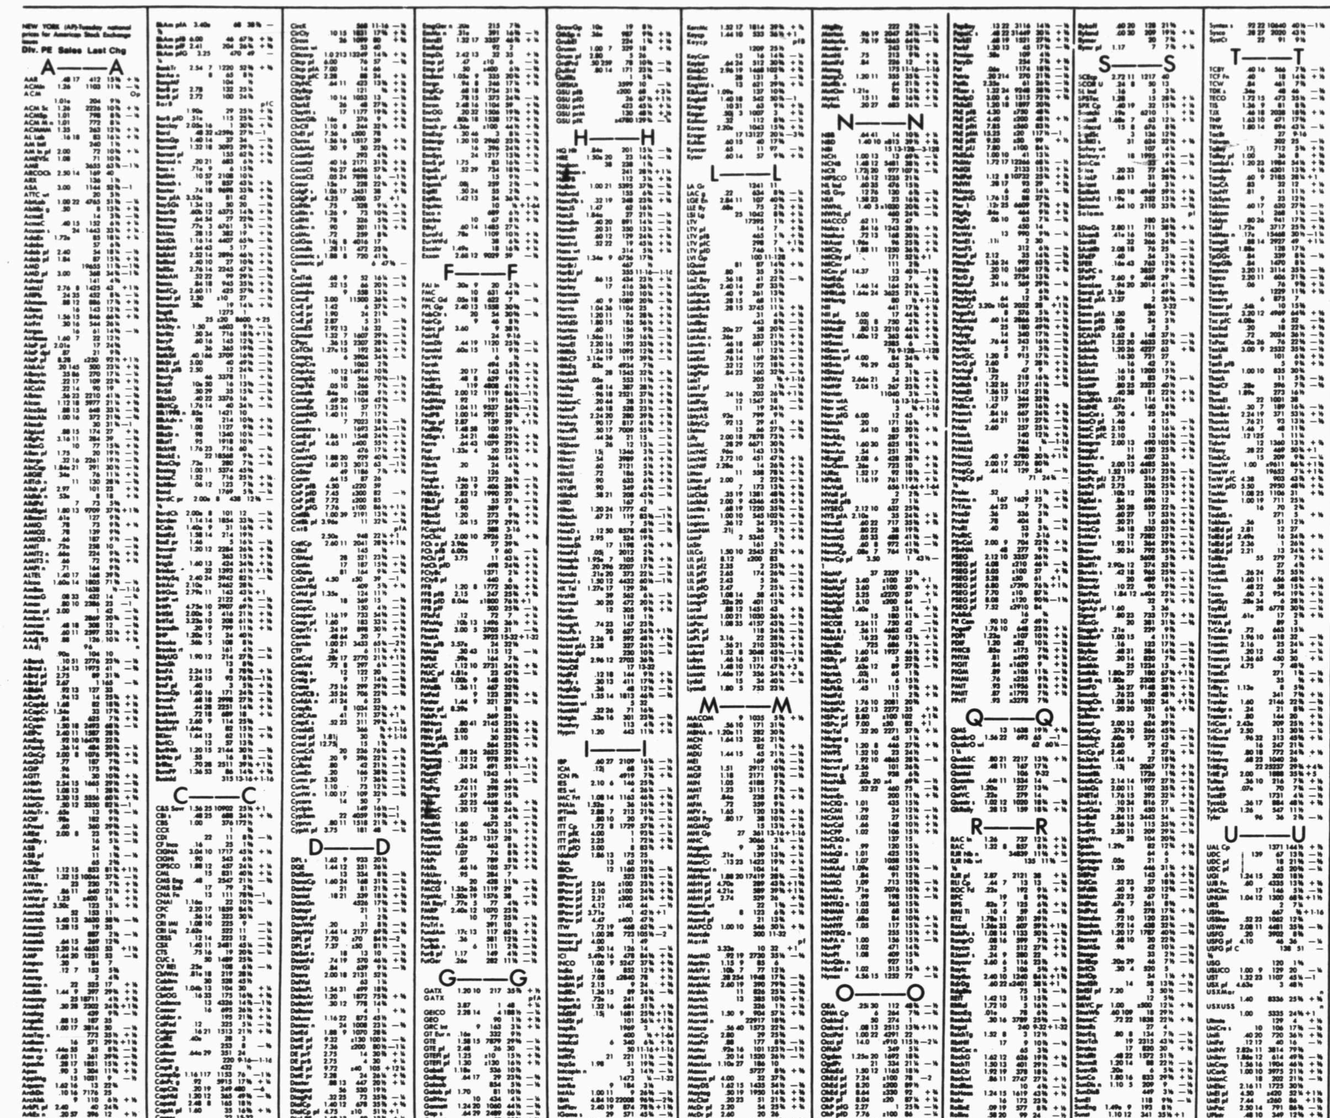
NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE



ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market see-sawed today but showed little change by early afternoon, as traders got no big surprises from Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's testimony to Congress.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 0.22 point at 2,990.83 as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues led decliners by about 8 to 7, with 793 up, 691 down and 533 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board came to 127.62 million shares.

The market moved up sharply following the opening bell, but then backed off when Greenspan began his testimony before Congress. The Fed chairman told lawmakers that central bank policy makers have stopped nudging interest rates lower for now, because they don't want inflation to heat up.

Also weighing on the market was a fresh load of second-quarter corporate earnings reports, which can account for sharp fluctuations in the market averages.

Bank stocks had enjoyed healthy gains in Monday's session following the merger agreement between Chemical Banking Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp.

Wells Fargo & Co. reported earnings of 21 cents per share for the second quarter, down from $4.40 per share a year ago, driving shares of the San Francisco-based bank down 3⅜ to 73½.

Chemical Bank was down ¾ at 25⅞, while Manufacturers Hanover was down ½ at 28⅜.

Commodity exchange to trade in government permits to pollute

By Peter Passell
N.Y. Times News Service

Chicago Board of Trade votes Tuesday to create a private market for rights to emit sulfur dioxide.

Ever searching for new ways to make markets and money, commodity exchanges have broadened their horizons from familiar products like soybeans and wheat to concepts like Eurodollar futures contracts that only a business school graduate could love.

Now the nation's largest commodity mart has gone a step further, approving trading in government permits to pollute.

The Chicago Board of Trade voted Tuesday to create a private market for rights to emit sulfur dioxide. The rights are to be issued to electric utilities by the Environmental Protection Agency as part of Washington's strategy to reduce acid rain.

Besides providing a service to the electric power industry, such a market would allow trading by individuals, letting them stake investment money on a rise or fall in the value of pollution rights, much as they now speculate on stocks and bonds.

Such a market was made possible by the Clean Air Act of 1990. In a departure from traditional regulatory practices, Congress gave polluters the right to meet sulfur emissions standards by buying and selling allowances that the EPA will allot to individual plants.

While federal officials are unwilling to comment on the Board of Trade initiative before they examine the details, there is every reason to believe the Bush administration will hail the board's action.

Free-market proponents say they think the new market will make it cheaper and easier for utilities to do their part in reducing acid rain.

"We are anxious to establish a bona fide private market," said William G. Rosenberg, an assistant administrator at the EPA. Initially, no government approval is required for the trading.

Many environmental analysts say, moreover, that the new market could serve as a model for least-cost controls on other pollutants — notably the smog-producing chemicals that bedevil most American cities.

And it could presage a far more ambitious effort to limit emissions of gases that are widely thought to be warming the earth's atmosphere.

The Clean Air Act limits total emissions of sulfur dioxide gas from 110 power plants in 1995. Five years later, a much more stringent limit will force the industry to reduce emissions to less than half of the 1991 level.

Dan Dudek, an economist at the Environmental Defense Fund who helped to draft the rules, argues that by allowing polluters to trade their emissions allowances, individual utilities in different markets with different types of power plants will not be locked into a single cleanup strategy.

One company may find that it pays to install smokestack scrubbers on aging coal-fired boilers, bringing its emissions below the requirements, and then sell the surplus allowances.

Another may leave untouched a heavy sulfur polluter that is otherwise efficient, and will buy allowances to cover the excess emissions.

Still another may subsidize customers' purchases of energy-efficient appliances and lighting equipment, thereby cutting electricity demand and permitting it to shut down its offending boilers.

But Richard Sandor, an executive managing director of Kidder, Peabody & Co., notes that the freedom to buy and sell allowances will not yield the maximum possible benefits unless utilities have an easy way to exchange them at a price that reflects the lowest possible cost of removing sulfur from the air.

That is where the Chicago Board of Trade's initiative fits in.

Under the plan, the exchange will begin trading "cash forward" contracts in 1993 — simple agreements to deliver allowances after they are issued in 1995. It will also ask the Commodity Futures Trading Commission for permission to establish a continuing "futures" market, permitting anyone to gamble on emissions rights in standardized 25-ton allotments up to three years in advance.

A utility might, for example, buy 100 contracts due in 1997, thereby nailing down the right to spew an extra 2,500 tons of sulfur dioxide that year.

The seller might be another utility that is planning to close down an old coal plant in 1997. Or it might be a mutual fund run by a brokerage house, whose manager thinks the price of allowances will fall, and is prepared to risk clients' money on the bet.

Sandor estimates that contracts will initially trade at about $400 a ton and will fluctuate with factors ranging from the demand for electricity to the state of scrubber technology.

Mitchell plans horizontal drilling tests

DECATUR (AP) — Houston oilman George Mitchell, returning to the fields that built Mitchell Energy and Development Co., said Tuesday new drilling techniques are barely feasible at current prices.

But Mitchell will push forward with a horizontal well in the Fort Worth Basin near Decatur, the first such well in North Texas.

The well will be drilled into the Barnett Shale, a source formation 7,300 feet below ground.

"If we don't get $3.50 at the Barnett, it's not successful," Mitchell said. "It's too tight, too low productivity and very expensive to do."

Spot prices for natural gas have dipped below $1.50 in recent weeks, during the time of year when demand is typically leanest.

But Mitchell Energy is getting $3 per thousand cubic feet on many of its North Texas wells now through lease arrangements that expire in 1997.

The Woodlands-based company will be joined in the well experiment by the Gas Research Institute, a Chicago-based industry organization interested in the Barnett formation's response to the horizontal technique.

The company and research group should reach a final agreement on the well within a month, and drilling will begin before the end of summer, said Don Covey, Mitchell's exploration and production chief.

"We need to know now instead of 10 years from now whether horizontal is the way to go or not," Covey said.

Even though the well will extend 2,000 feet horizontally, the test is whether it will yield as much gas as one drilled vertically with a common fracture technique that boosts the area into which gas flows before being pumped away.

"The question I've got on the horizontal is whether you're going to really connect up as much well," Covey said.

Oryx Energy Co. also plans a horizontal well in North Texas.

ECONOMY: Fed chief appears before House subcommittee

(From 5C)

6¾ percent to 7 percent. The Bush administration's most recent forecast, released Monday, is within those ranges.

For next year, the Fed is slightly less optimistic than the administration, projecting a GNP rise of 2¼ percent to 3 percent, compared with the administration's prediction of 3.6 percent.

Nonetheless, Greenspan's forecast and the tone of his comments could hardly have been sweeter music to a president gearing up for a run for re-election in 1992.

He also put in a good word for Bush's grasp of economic matters. "He's very knowledgeable about these issues," the chairman said. "A lot of times you think you're giving him new information, and he's heard it 10 times before, and he often knows a good deal more about certain issues than you do."

Although Greenspan and top administration officials have occasionally been at odds over the chairman's refusal to allow interest rates to fall as fast or as far as the other officials want, Greenspan has never made bones about being a partisan Republican.

He confirmed last week's reports that Fed policy makers had voted early this month to maintain growth of the money supply, as measured by M-2, at between 2½ and 6½ percent next year. M-2 consists primarily of checking, savings and money-market accounts and small certificates of deposit.

In answer to a question, Greenspan suggested that the ideal long-term growth rate of M-2 would be about 4 percent a year. That would accommodate economic growth of about 3 percent and inflation of about 1 percent.

In theory, growth in the money supply should equal the rates of economic growth and inflation, but that is not always the case over short periods of time.

An inflation rate in the neighborhood of 1 percent is necessary, Greenspan said, because the quality of products in the United States improves each year. One reason the West overestimated the strength of the economy in the Soviet Union for years, he added, was that American economists did not take account of the fact that the quality of Soviet products did not improve the way American products did, and thus Soviet inflation was more serious.

COMPETE: Troubled banks move to find narrower role

(From 5C)

■ News Analysis

Congress is soon expected to drop the last restrictions on interstate banking, meaning that strong banks will be able to freely set up nationwide branch systems, largely by purchasing smaller banks and troubled savings and loans.

Building those national networks will be costly and the acquisitive banks will have to raise funds. Profits — the steady stream of earnings, in market parlance — attract investors.

So until the big banks can reduce their costs and improve profits, they will be handicapped in efforts to build large networks because the powerful regional banks have made greater strides at wringing such efficiencies and delivering low-cost banking services.

"The money-center banks are now trying to heal themselves, so they can be up and running to compete with the rest of us," said John B. McCoy, Banc One's chairman.

There is a certain irony in the fact that the money-center banks now find themselves handicapped in the emerging national competition.

In the early 1980s, state governments in New England and the Southeast formed regional pacts to allow their banks to cross state lines but keep the big New York banks at bay, fearful that the money-center titans would overwhelm local institutions.

"The protectionist legislation was intended to bottle up the New York money-center banks in New York, and it certainly did that effectively," said Robert Litan, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution.

"But it also had the unintended effect of forcing the big banks to look elsewhere and up the ante on everything from Third World debt to bad real estate loans."

The proposed merger of the Chemical Banking Corp. and the Manufacturers Hanover Corp., the biggest combination in the history of American banking, is intended to trim $650 million a year.

DEAR ABBY

Man lets lust in heart get almost out of hand

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful husband. "George" and I have been married for 16 years. Last summer George was going through a mid-life crisis and began shutting me out and spending most of his time at work.

Van Buren

A young woman — 10 years his junior, married and temporarily separated from her husband — began buying George lunch, complaining that she was unhappy at home, her husband was a poor lover, etc. She started praising my husband and feeding his ego.

Then one day she told him that her car was in the shop and she needed a ride home, so he drove her home and she invited him in "to talk." She asked George to kiss her. He did, and before he knew it, they were in bed. In the middle of the act, George said he realized that he was in the wrong place with the wrong woman, so he got out of bed, took a shower and came home to me. (This was his version.) He confessed, begged for my forgiveness and we prayed together. He said it was the worst sexual experience he ever had — he didn't even complete the act.

George went to confession and told the priest everything. The priest said that technically George did not commit adultery because he did not complete the physical act. Is this true? I want to believe him. — GEORGE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Adultery, in traditional Catholic theology, does not depend on the completion of the physical act. (" ... anyone who looks at a woman lustfully has already committed adultery with her in his heart." Matthew 5:28.)

George's "mid-life crisis" is a cry for help, and his lapse of faithfulness is a symptom of an ailing marriage. But since he has been a faithful husband for 16 years, you should be less concerned about the biblical definition of adultery, and more concerned about the state of your marriage. You could both benefit from counseling.

Forgive him, unconditionally, and he will remain in the right place with the right woman, and your next 16 years should be even more wonderful than your first.

DEAR ABBY: After reading a couple of articles in your column about funny wedding nights and foldout couches, I'd like to tell you about our honeymoon — more than 45 years ago. After World War II we were married in Connecticut and drove to California with our best man. Three on a honeymoon! We decided on this because my husband, Dick, and his best friend, Walter (their real names), were both still stationed at Hamilton Air Force Base in San Rafael, Calif.

We never had any reservations and rooms were hard to get, so we all slept in the same room every night, and they dragged in a cot for our best man. We got a lot of funny looks, but we knew everything was on the up and up, so we just laughed.

Poor Walter sat through a lot of lousy double features in an effort to give the newlyweds some time alone together.

To this day, we still laugh about our off-the-wall honeymoon. — ANN SNOW, NAPERVILLE, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who was upset because her husband's friend didn't know how to use a fork properly reminded me of the following: Anton Chekhov, the great Russian writer, once said: "A well-mannered person is not one who knows which fork to use first, but one who doesn't notice when others use the wrong one." — A STARS AND STRIPES FAN

Frozen yogurt pops 'hot' new taste treat

By Linda Anderson

OK, I admit it. While strolling past the supermarket's frozen food section, I allowed my child to talk me into buying some frozen yogurt bars that I had not originally planned to buy. I realize succumbing to this kind of pressure is something parents usually resist doing, but the way I figure it is: if the kid wants me to buy her something that I might enjoy myself, why not?

Anderson

So we bought a box of Daily's Chillers yogurt freezer pops in various berry flavors (The other kinds were chocolate frozen yogurt bars and fruit-flavored ditto.) to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Our box contained six strawberry frozen pops, six raspberry and four strawberry-banana.

Price for a 32-ounce box containing 16 frozen yogurt pops was $2.29, or roughly 15 cents each.

Label advertising claims the pops are "99 percent fat free!" and contain "No cholesterol!" and "Only 60 calories." (I supposed that means each.)

On the back of the box, label advertising really gets into its message: "Daily's CHILLERS...just freeze them and you have 16 delicious frozen yogurt pops. Our CHILLERS are made with real yogurt, and are a treat for young and old. Serve a CHILLER as a snack or dessert any time of year."

Then the advertising uses its big guns: "Help Save the Penguin!" That's right, some manufacturers are sponsoring projects to help save endangered species, and this appears to be one of them. The box has a picture of a penguin on it and has this quote attributed to the penguin: "I am a Humboldt Penguin in danger of becoming extinct. My home is being destroyed. My food supply, fish, is caught by fishermen before I can eat. Without a place to live and food to eat, I won't be around much longer. I need your help. DAILY'S sponsors my survival plan, organized by the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums (A.A.Z.P.A). The more delicious CHILLERS you eat, the better chance I have to survive. Thanks for your help."

And that is what is called advertising by guilt.

It's a good thing for the Humboldt Penguin that the young taste-tester absolutely l-o-v-e-d Chillers. Although she did get generous at one point and let me have a taste of one of her raspberry Chillers, she mostly ate all 16 of the frozen yogurt pops herself.

Now everytime we go into the supermarket, she asks — no, make that pleads — for me to buy boxes of Chillers in the other two flavors for her to try. She may save the penguins all by herself.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Linda Anderson is a Reporter-Telegram staff writer.
