Pitch prepared for medical center

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

A group of medical and Chamber of Commerce leaders is preparing to tell the Texas Tech University School of Medicine why it should build its regional medical center in Midland, rather than Odessa or Big Spring.

The medical school last week mailed to the three cities a list of things it will consider in selecting a site for the regional academic health center to be built in the Permian Basin. The center will be a satellite to the medical school.

The proposal to the medical school will be put together by a special Chamber of Commerce committee composed of doctors and community leaders, headed by K. M. Jastrow.

Dr. William M. Hibbits, president of the Midland County Medical Society, Saturday said several Midland physicians were surprised at the requirements listed for the regional center.

Among those requirements, listed in the site considerations, are six acres of land immediately adjoining the hospital which can be committed as a teaching hospital, building space with at least 35,000 square feet in the initial phase for the center and parking for 250 cars. Also listed is a requirement for access to a "hospital consortium" with a minimum of 500 beds.

Resources listed as essential for support of the teaching program include the adjoining hospital's willingness to maintain a residency program. That requirement would include paying residents, with current payment levels ranging from $11,000 to $13,000 a year per resident.

Hibbitts said none of the cities in the Permian Basin can meet all of the requirments listed, so it will be necessary for the cities to negotiate with the medical school.

"I think we're in a better negotiating situation than anyone else," Hibbits said.

On Tuesday night, representatives from the medical school will speak to the Midland County Medical Society, and give the doctors more details about what the medical school wants from the community, he said.

Hibbitts said Midland has much to offer the medical school: "We have a virtually new hospital facility, to begin with. I think land next to the hospital is being offered. We have a great deal of support from various members of the community. We have quite a number of excellent physicians who would be qualified to help in the teaching of students."

Midland Memorial Hospital trustees chairman Mickey Cappadonna said getting the regional center would be "a permanent solution to getting doctors" for the area, since young doctors would tend to stay and live near where they trained.

He said Texas Tech officials in an earlier visit to Midland were quite impressed with the number of doctors with board certification in medical specialties. "That's the type of doctors that make the better teachers," he said.

Dr. William P. Trotter, Midland Memorial trustee, agreed that the number of specialties available in the Midland medical community will be a strong plus for Midland.

Also, he said, the passage of the hospital bond issue in September is the city's "main suit" in the competition for the regional center.

Non-medical factors that might be considered, Trotter said, include the education level of Midlanders, the quality of schools and Midland's being a "better place to raise families."

Still a further plus for Midland is its

Air crash shrouded in secrecy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two Israeli nationals were in serious condition and another was in good condition Saturday after they were injured in a plane crash in southeast New Mexico that claimed the life of a fourth.

Three of the four Israeli nationals injured in the crash Friday were on classified assignment and working for a Dallas-based electronics firm.

They were aboard a small private aircraft that crashed near Carlsbad, N.M., while en route from Dallas to El Paso on a holiday outing.

Preston Kirk, a spokesman for E-Systems Inc., identified the victim as Osnat Rosenholtz, 22, wife of Gabriel Rosenholtz, 28, of Dallas, one of the survivors. Also surviving are the pilot, Yohanon Lavanon, 44, of Greenville, Texas, and David Kirren, 27, also of Dallas.

Rosenholtz and Lavanon were transferred to the burn unit at Bernalillo County Medical Center in Albuquerque, where they were listed in serious condition. Kirren remained at Guadalupe Medical Center in Carlsbad. He was listed in good condition.

"We're not sure who the plane belonged to," said Kirk. "All the papers in the aircraft were burned up."

Kirk said an Israeli official from New York, Maj. Joseph Ravkaie, had flown to Albuquerque to claim the body and ship it home. Ravkaie was unavailable for comment.

Thomas, declined to discuss employment details. However, he described Rosenholtz and Kirren as "customer representatives" who serve as liaison between the Israeli government and E-Systems at the firm's suburban Greenville plant. Lavanon has been employed by E-Systems about four years, Thomas said.

E-Systems designed a radar system that monitors Arab and Israeli troop and vehicle movements in the Sinai Desert. However, Thomas said, "They weren't working in connection with the project, I don't believe. They were probably off on a weekend flight, on a holiday."

Another Midland lives in shadow of skyscrapers

By JIM STEINBERG

For many Midland residents, it matters little that the dollar value on building permits may meet or break last year's record-breaking $59 million.

Nor does it matter along those seldom-traveled, unpaved streets whether or not the city's Public Works Division is behind on needed water taps for new developments where the selling prices for new homes reach above the $50,000 level.

Some residents live close enough to the downtown skyline to monitor its daily increasing grandeur from their property, which would qualify as substandard by any yardstick.

One such resident, who first consented to the use of her name and then asked that it not be used to save family embarrassment, saw off to work in the cotton fields Saturday her two grandchildren — ages 10 and 11 — and her husband. She spent the day as usual tending an invalid relative she has taken care of for years. The woman is 60.

Her residence is not large. It houses two sets of grandchildren — eight in all. The roof and even part of the siding visibly need repairs.

"I just got done paying $1,500 for materials to get the place fixed up this far. It will be a while 'till I get more saved to do some more," she said.

A 20-member commission, appointed by Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., has begun to explore avenues for fund raising to help elderly and handicapped persons in a housing rehabilitation program.

That program would have been carried out under a $220,000 grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development had not the city's Community Development funds been cancelled on Sept. 20.

The commission came as a step to partially fulfill pledges made when the Midland City Council voted 4 to 2 not to accept a rental assistance plan required by HUD as a condition of its Community Development funds.

It has been estimated that the commission will have to tap between $150,000 to $200,000 from the private sector to replace those federal funds which would have gone to the Midland Housing Authority.

Because of restrictions in the Texas Constitution, no money from the city government can be allocated to the housing authority for use in the program.

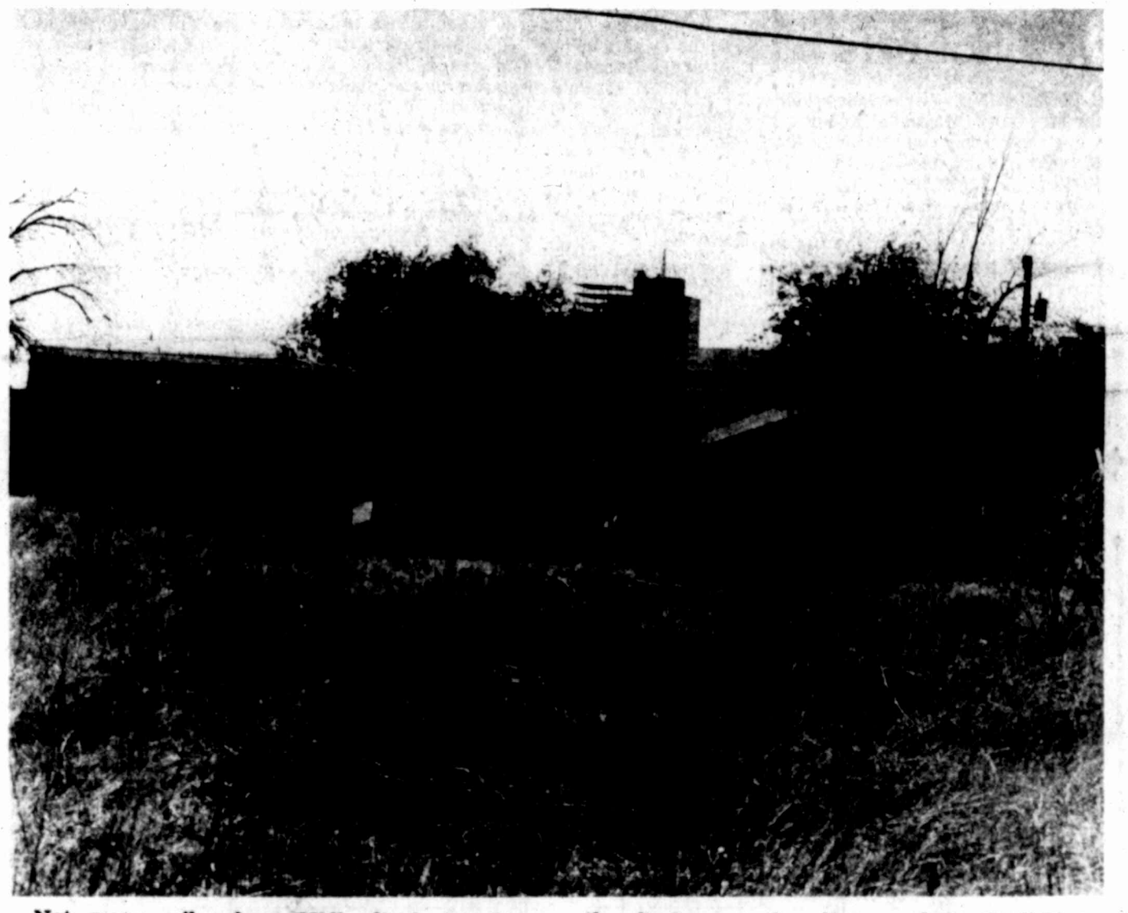

The money required is equal to approximately one-quarter of the city's United Way Campaign drive. How difficult it will be to raise these funds and how much doing so will pull away from other charitable causes are questions the commission will face in the near future.

Regardless, however, of the source — federal or private — aid in this area is still needed in Midland.

Other challenges face the city, also. Most revolve at one point or another around the hard economics of needed

Syria turns down Sadat invitation

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat on Saturday invited Egypt's Arab neighbors, Israel, the United States and the Soviet Union to Cairo to prepare for a return to the Geneva Mideast peace conference. The call was promptly accepted by Israel and rejected by Syria.

Sadat said later he would negotiate "with the Israelis alone" if the other Arab countries refused to send representatives to Cairo.

Following up on his dramatic visit to Israel a week ago, Sadat told the Egyptian parliament in a major address: "Cairo is ready, starting from Saturday next, God willing, to receive all the parties of the (Mideast) conflict."

In an emotional, 80-minute speech punctuated by table thumping and bursts of applause, Sadat also declared he was "proud" of his visit to Jerusalem, blasted the Russians and assailed Arab critics of his Israeli mission last weekend.

A spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin in Jerusalem said as soon as Israel receives a formal invitation "the Cabinet will decide who to authorize

Article displeases Midlanders

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

No matter how hard or how many times they try, it seems as if Easterners will never be able to understand West Texas, or Midland, to be exact.

Edna Ferber spent two weeks in Dallas before writing "Giant," a book about oil and Texans, and some Texans don't think she treated them right. Town and Country magazine did a story on Midland a few years ago, but Midlanders did not think it showed the whole town.

Just a month ago another fancy New York publication zeroed in on Midland and some of its leading citizens. And most of those featured in the seven-page color spread in W, a semi-weekly product of Fairchild Publications, still are doing a slow burn.

While many refuse to comment, and others ask not be be quoted or identified, the consensus seems to be that they were misrepresented by writer Hillary Johnson. And that they and their city were wrongly put in a bad light.

And they are quick to point out that no one invited Hillary Johnson to visit Midland.

As it turns out, the seed for the article, entitled "Inside Midland, Texas," was planted by New York fashion designer Bill Blass.

Blass, after his second trip to Midland (last August) in three years, spoke glowingly of the Tall City and its residents to John B. Fairchild, publisher of W.

A few days later a writer for W contacted Blass to inquire more about Midland. Shortly afterward, Hillary Johnson arrived in Midland and went to work.

Interestingly, W's masthead boasts an impressive list of correspondents in several foreign and American cities, among them, Dallas, where one Hazel Mosely is identified.

But the writer assigned to discover Midland, Ms. Johnson, is from New York.

"I think it is a very unusual city," Blass said last week in a telephone interview. He said the attractiveness of the city and the hospitality of the people stayed in his mind.

"I am one of the few American designers who travel around, and people ask me if I have visited any unusual towns, and I think Midland is one," he explained. "I think it is a fascinating town."

But, his reaction to the article differed from those in Midland. "I thought Midland came off very nice. You must understand that W is a fashion paper" and not like a news magazine.

Midland bank executive Harry Clark's view of the article differs from that of Bill Blass. "The article was slanted toward sensationalism, or near sensationalism to attract reader appeal," he said. "It contained remarks and statements that had reader interest in mind rather than to create a portrayal of Midland."

That "sensationalism" included statements that "no one would be caught riding Western style in this town." Or, there is the sentence that reads in part, "Midland, according to its reigning and aspiring oil sheiks, is the last frontier town in the West, the final bastion of free enterprise left to those Americans who are deadly serious about making big money."

The writer has depicted the people as having "second—and third—homes in Palm Beach, New York, Aspen, places like that. But their favorite watering hold is Rui Doso" (note the wrong spelling). According to Ms. Johnson, "During holidays, like July Fourth, the place becomes a small-scale Midland when the entire

Something odd was in the air.

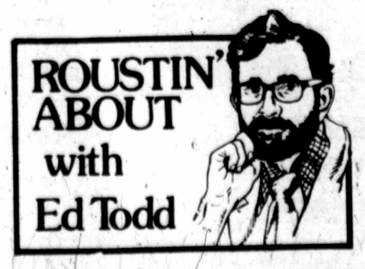

And flying buffs Leonard H. Busby and Earl Frederickson were eager to give up their leisure time at the country club to check out that contraption.

It swiftly flew overhead, and the two buffs zeroed in on the machine, plunged into their sleek sedan, and barrelled out to the airport to better see what they had seen.

It looked like a wing pulled by a prop. And that's what it was: an experimental delta wing job.

Stephen Ansley landed his aircraft, taxied it onto the aircraft parking area at Midland Air Park, shut it down, and climbed out.

Busby and Frederickson did the same thing with their motorcar. They were obviously excited about "that thing."

"We were following that thing for 30 minutes trying to see what it is," said Frederickson. He still wasn't exactly sure, but he certainly would find out.

So would Busby.

"It's unbelievable," said Busby after he had given the gray flying machine the once-over. "It's not an

Deputy leaves to launch campaign in home state

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Saying the political arena offered a larger challenge, Deputy Attorney General Peter F. Flaherty announced Saturday that he was resigning to run for governor of his home state of Pennsylvania.

The announcement was not surprising, since the former mayor of Pittsburgh had done little to refute recent reports that he was anxious to make the Pennsylvania race.

In a phone interivew, Flaherty said he had told Attorney General Griffin B. Bell of his intentions last Monday and had received both Bell's and President Carter's release from his obligation to serve the administration for four years.

"If it wasn't for the governor's race being a bigger challenge, I would stay," Flaherty said. He said he expected to leave the Justice Department by mid-December.

Flaherty dismissed speculation that he was leaving because of unhappiness over his role at Justice. The traditional duties of the deputy have been split so he shared them with close Bell associate, Michael J. Egan.

"I like the job even though it had been divided," he said. "You do have to like to be an administrator to be the deputy. It doesn't have a lot of the excitement of some of the other positions in the Department."

Flaherty, who was an early supporter of President Carter, said he began to seriously consider the governor's race earlier this month after his hand-picked candidate won the election to be mayor of Pittsburgh. Another factor, he said, was a poll which showed him leading the other Democratic gubernatorial contenders.

Bell said in a statement Saturday that Flaherty had been "an able deputy," and that he understood "the pull of home state ties." Bell also lauded Flaherty's "unusual talents" in reorganization.

When Flaherty resigns he will leave behind his responsibility to review the continuing investigation into the financial activities of former budget director Bert Lance.

Stereo, camera equipment taken

Approximately $925 worth of stereo and camera equipment was taken between 11:30 a.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday from the Bruce Bell residence in the 2200 block of South Lamesa Road, Bell told police Saturday.

Police said entry was gained by breaking a window. Taken were a stereo, speakers, a 35mm camera and two lenses and a flash attachment, and a baby's gold ring, Bell said. Also taken was a shotgun.

RIFLE TAKEN

Reese Allen Summerlin of the 3400 block of Thomas Street told police Saturday that a rifle was missing from his residence.

According to Summerlin, he last saw the rifle approximately two months ago. He told officers he did not know when it was taken.

Estimated value of the rifle is $275.

Abortion task force disbands, memo says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Carter administration task force on alternatives to abortion has disbanded the group after concluding that the only real alternatives are "suicide, motherhood and, some would add, madness."

In a memorandum sent to HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., Connie J. Downey said her panel didn't have the direction, scope, authority or money necessary to attack the underlying problems of unwanted pregnancies.

Califano, who like President Carter personally opposes abortion, has pledged to come up with alternatives. He received the memo several weeks ago but apparently has not responded.

Califano's department attempted to keep the memo from the public.

Ms. Downey, acting director of special project planning at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, confirmed she had written the paper when she was asked about it.

But she said it was intended as "an internal working paper with no substantive proposals or program suggestions intended for the public."

Eileen Shanahan, assistant secretary for public affairs and Califano's spokeswoman, denied a reporter's request for the memo. She said through a spokesman that it was "an internal document."

The Associated Press obtained a copy from other sources while awaiting the outcome of a formal request for the material under the Freedom of Information Act.

The abortion issue has provoked an emotional disagreement in recent months both within the Carter administration and in Congress, where the House and Senate have been deadlocked for several months on the question of federal financing of abortions for poor women.

Panel schedules action on route

Midland County commissioners are scheduled to act on a proposal for a north loop around Midland and a north route to Odessa when they meet at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the courthouse.

The Midland and Odessa city councils and the Ector County commissioners all have approved the proposal by the Texas Highway Department for the routes, but approval of the Midland County Commissioners Court is needed for the plan to be enacted.

Also Monday, the commissioners are to discuss indigent care for the Midland Hospital District with hospital Trustee Frank Cowden Jr.

In other business, the commissioners are scheduled to examine the financial statement of Midland County for the year ending Dec. 31 and consider a proposal of Main Lafrentz and Co.

Black vote key to GOP prospects in Deep South

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The growing black vote in the Deep South presents Southern Republicans with an opportunity and a dilemma. How they deal with the situation may well determine whether the party finally can end Democratic dominance of the region's politics.

The Republicans were the growth party in the South until 1976, when a Georgian won the Democratic presidential nomination. Jimmy Carter's coattails in that election proved too much of an obstacle for such Southern Republican officeholders as Sen. Bill Brock of Tennessee to overcome.

Brock lost his Senate seat and now is Republican national chairman, a job he is using as a forum to exhort the GOP to broaden its base and particularly to open its doors to blacks and other minority groups.

"In the last election, we ran into a pretty heavy bump in our growth curve," Brock told reporters at the Southern Republican Conference held recently on the edge of a Walt Disney land of dreams in Orlando, Fla.

Brock sees the party bouncing back in the South, particularly in the local races Republicans must win if they are to build the base necessary to implant the two-party system into the region.

The chairman had a message for both reporters and delegates at the conference: "We've got to have blacks in this party. We can't survive without that constituency."

But someone pointed out to Brock that there weren't more than a handful of blacks among the nearly 700 delegates from 13 states, ranging from Virginia to the north and Oklahoma to the west.

"No, not many," he replied, a bit wistfully. "And that's illustrative of the problem of how far down we've been. I think you'll find they're coming to the polls and that's where we need them."

Brock and other GOP officials can cite the elections, including the fight for mayor of Jackson, Miss., in which the Republican candidate picked up a large block of black votes in a losing cause. Successful Republican candidates for mayor of Charlotte, N.C., and the top administrative post in Jefferson County, Ky., each drew 25 per cent of the black vote.

But it was clear that Brock and other national Republican figures were disturbed by the scarcity of blacks among the ranks of Southern party officials.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, addressed the conference and later said, "I wish I'd seen more black faces and Hispanics."

The Republican state chairmen in Alabama and Mississippi, two states with large black populations that are becoming an increasingly significant factor in elections, said they are trying valiantly to attract blacks. But they said they have had only limited success so far.

Charles Pickering, GOP chairman in Mississippi, recently spoke at the state convention of the NAACP, the first Republican official to do so.

"I invited them to participate in the Republican Party," he said.

In an interview, he echoed themes sounded by nearly all the speakers at the conference, including former Govs. Ronald Reagan of California and John B. Connally of Texas, two men who drew the warmest receptions from the delegates.

Like Reagan, Connally and others, Pickering said Republicans have failed "to articulate how our philosophy would benefit the average person. How we would give you a better job, better standard of living, more take-home pay."

But Pickering and other Southern conservatives describe that philosophy as a strict adherence to free enterprise and minimal activity by the federal government, positions that haven't succeeded in attracting too many adherents among the poor.

"I don't have any delusions that we're going to get a big percentage of the black vote," added the Mississippi chairman.

William Harris, the GOP chairman in Alabama, responded to a question about his efforts to attract blacks by saying, "We're making valiant efforts. I can't say we've been successful, so far."

It was Connally who may have given the conference its most graphic example of how the delegates' conservative philosophy works against their efforts in his address, he asked, "How many of you are sick of welfare?"

Nearly every hand was thrust into the air.

"All right, said Connaly, "but you just lost about 70 percent of the country.

Sadat-Begin meeting hardly first

By LARRY THORSON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The meeting between Arab and Jew was "marvelous," Yeruham Cohen declared — not Anwar Sadat's with Menahem Begin, but his own encounter with Egyptian leader Gamal Abdel Nasser in the Negev desert 29 years earlier.

It was November 1948, and the infant Jewish state was on the offensive against the Arab armies. Nasser, later the president of Egypt, was a major whose troops were surrounded in the Faluja Pocket.

Cohen was the Israeli captain sent to negotiate an end to the bloodshed.

"We had been trying to kill each other for months," Cohen said in an interview. "I remember at one of the meetings I asked him: 'Aren't you afraid you're in a trap?'"

"He looked at me and said, 'We can trust you.'"

Cohen paused. "It's like Sadat coming to Jerusalem."

Relations betwen Israel and Egypt are dominated by a 29year history of warfare and distrust, but the memorable visit by Sadat, Nasser's successor as president of Egypt, was not the first friendly encounter between Israeli and Egyptian leaders.

Cohen had 20 meetings with Nasser between 1948 and 1951. First to gain the Egyptians' withdrawal from the Faluja Pocket, then in the Israel-Egypt mixed commission working out the truce technicalities after the war.

At one Cohen-arranged meeting in 1948, a number of future Mideast leaders were gathered in one room: Yigal Allon, who became Israel's deputy prime minister and foreign minister; Yitzhak Rabin, ambassador to the United States and prime minister, and Nasser, who in 1952 helped overthrow the Egyptian monarchy and became president in 1954.

Cohen, a longtime friend of Allon, was working in the Foreign Ministry and was ambassador to Liberia.

Trying to bring some substance to the friendship, Cohen arranged for Nasser and other Egyptians to visit a kibbutz. "We told the kibbutzniks that the visitors were Turkish officers," Cohen remembered with a chuckle.

Cohen said the many talks with Nasser delved into the problems of Egypt under King Farouk, the poverty of the people, the British military presence in Egypt.

"I think I convinced him the war was not between our two nations but it was the British encouraging them to attack us," Cohen said.

Nasser and other Egyptians were interested in the details of the Jewish fight against the British in Palestine, and how Israel managed to win world public opinion.

"Some claim the seeds of Nasser's revolution were planted in our conversations," Cohen said. "...I liked Nasser very much as a person, but he was a disaster as leader of Egypt."

Eccentric celebrations draw thousands

By The Associated Press

Pig intestines and parachutists lured thousands of Americans to offbeat festivals at opposite ends of the nation Saturday.

In South Carolina, more than 23,000 gathered at the 12th annual Chitlin Strut to eat the Southern fried specialty and hear hog calls from such hardy throats as that of Sen. Strom Thurmond.

In Washington state, a smaller crowd braved early-morning rain to attend the second annual Cooper Caper, where aerial jumpers helped commemorate the exploits of skyjecker D.B. Cooper, who leapt into the area six years ago with a bagful of $20 bills.

At Salley, a town of 601 in central South Carolina, brisk breezes wafted the smell of five tons of chitlins over the area, but Fire Chief P.G. Sharpe insisted: "The odor's not as bad as some have made it out to be."

Visitors seemed more inclined to agree with another resident, who said, "If you can think of anything that smells so bad that it would take about a week for it to wear away, then it's that bad."

The odor and temperatures in the 40s did not deter the crowd, which stood in line for a $3 plate of slaw, hash, rice and chitlins — the small intestines of pigs, turned inside out, scraped, boiled, battered and deep fried. Sharpe said they taste "similar to fried pork rinds." Chicken and pork were also available.

Town officials dreamed up the strut in 1966 as a way of raising money. Since then, the festival has brought in $75,000.

Activities began in the morning with a parade, which featured Jack West, known as King of the Strut for his fancy stepping in the dance contest, as grand marshal.

Politicians were busy circulating their literature, shaking hands and otherwise socializing at what has become a traditional campaign day for political hopefuls in the state.

In Ariel, a Washington community of 250 in the woods about 60 miles north of Portland, Ore., Germaine Tricola, who runs the general store and tavern, served buffalo stew from a huge pot she prepared to feed fans of the legendary skyjacker.

The stew — $1 a bowl and refills free — included 35 pounds of buffalo meat, plus "tomatoes, carrots, turnips — everything but the kitchen sink," Mrs. Tricola said.

"We won't use the sink because we need it for other things."

Mrs. Tricola said 400 to 500 persons signed her guest book at last year's festival, but she was expecting a larger crowd this year.

Ansley just had to appreciate all the commotion his craft was creating. When fellow pilots gather about your plane to look and to make "hangar talk," well, you have a right to be proud of your bird . . . however odd it may appear.

"It's a little different. It's hard to miss," said Ansley. He flew into Midland from Denver, Colo., the day before to visit his sister, Charlene, and his brother-in-law, geologist John Kullman, and family over the long Thanksgiving weekend.

Flying with Ansley in his hand-crafted four-place Dyke Delta were his girl friend, Pat Willoughby, and her two children, Mike, 5, and Chris, 10.

The plane was about six years in the making.

"I wired it, plumbed it, welded it," said Ansley, who's a 29-year-old psychologist who specializes in medical hypnosis in Denver and Los Angeles. He commutes between the two cities by commercial jet liners.

Ansley's flair for flying and building aircraft is rooted in model airplane building and flying.

"I started building model airplanes when I was 8, started flying in national competition when I was 12, and didn't win anything when I was 16, so I quit." Should have won, though, he said.

Ansley's people-carrying plane had its beginning in 1971, when his father, Edward Ansley, bought plans for the craft for $125 from designer John Dyke of Fairborn, Ohio. The next year, Stephen "Steve" Ansley picked up his private pilot's license. His father died the following year.

Ansley delved into the project his father had begun, and untold time and $10,000 to $12,000 later, he, by happenstance, got the craft airborne. That was up at Denver in mid-June of this year.

"It was an accident," Ansley said. "I was taxi testing (the airplane) . . . . I hit a bump, the airplane bounced into the air, got crooked, and I had to go."

Since then, Ansley has logged more than 66 hours in the plane. It's not finished yet; he's got some cosmetic work to do on the plane.

The craft looks like one massive wing that's got a smooth hump in the middle. That's the cockpit.

"Every part of it has lifting surface," the moustached Ansley said of his craft.

The plane, powered by an 180-horsepower Lycoming engine, cruises around 165 or 170 mph and has an top speed in excess of 200. This 22-foot wingspan aircraft weighs 1,200 empty and 1,900 gross.

Ansley likes the way it flies. And he took ol' Roustin' About up for a spin to see it fly and he, too, liked the way it flies. He did. He also liked the way Ansely flew it.

The plane's not aerobatic, although it's "stressed for it," Ansley said.

He put the plane through a few climbs, gentle dives, steep banks and did a figure 8 or two. He made a low run over the airport in excess of 200 mph.

It's a running doozie.

But it doesn't quit flying until the airspeed drops to 70 or 80 mph.

"It doesn't have any stall," Ansley said. "It just quits flying at 70 or 80 and just sinks."

In its economy cruise, the plane will burn about 7½ gallons of fuel per hour. Ansley fitted the plane with a retractable tricycle gear for less drag and more speed. The framework is metal aircraft tubing. The skin is fiberglass; the control surfaces are fabric.

Like the other 10 Delta Dykes flying around the country, Ansley's version has fold-up wings. It can be hangared in the garage at home. And Ansley plans to do just that as soon as he gets the nose gear rigged for towing the aircraft.

Ansley feels secure in the aircraft. Like all good pilots, he knows both the aircraft's and his limitations. But unlike most pilots, he thoroughly knows his airplane from the prop spinner to the rudder's trailing edge and from wingtip to wingtip.

"I know everything that's in it," Ansley said matter-of-factly. "'I know everything about it."

Later on, he plans to build a more conventional type of airplane. He had rather build his own flying machine rather than buy a ready-made one. Perhaps that's the creator in him. He has faith in his workmanship.

"I've been to the (airplane) factories," he said, "and I know how they put some of them together."

In work and in flying, Ansley is a confident fellow.

"In medical hypnosis, we're the best people in the country," Ansley said. "There just isn't any competition there for us. But it cuts into airplane-building time."

Israel accepts, Syria rejects Sadat invitation to represent it at the Cairo talks."

In Damascus, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam said it was impossible for Syria to attend a Cairo meeting "because the road to peace is not through the Knesset." The reference was to Sadat's speech last Sunday before the Israeli parliament, which Syria bitterly denounced as treachery.

The United States issued a cautious statement saying a Cairo preparatory conference "could be helpful and we are consulting with the other parties."

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said in New York that he, too, was conferring with others who were invited. There was no immediate response from Jordan or Lebanon, the other Arab states bordering Israel, or from Moscow.

"Whoever comes here, I shall be starting the conference with him," Sadat told NBC News Correspondent John Palmer in an interview in the Suez Canal city of Ismailia after his speech. "If only the Israelis come I will start the conference."

The Egyptian leader emphasized in the interview that he was "not after a separarate settlement" with Israel and any agreement worked out in Cairo or Geneva would be submitted to an Arab summit conference.

Sadat said he decided to go to Israel after two months of efforts by President Carter to get the Arabs and Israelis to agree on a joint working paper for Geneva proved fruitless. He said that by going he had breached "psychological barriers" to a peace conference. Sadat said he was now summoning the participants to Cairo "so that we do not go to the Geneva conference and discuss matters for years, but...settle them within months."

The Egyptian said he was sending acting Foreign Minister Butros B. Ghali to contact U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, the superpowers and "all the confrontation states including Israel."

IRA raiders seize store

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Eight masked raiders who seized a grocery story during a robbery attempt and took nine persons hostage surrendered early Sunday after a 12-hour siege by police and soldiers, authorities reported.

The robbers, who identified themseves as members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, had freed three of their captives earlier. Police said the remaining hostages — five men and a woman — were released unharmed as the gunmen gave up.

During the siege that began shortly after noon Saturday, the bandits agreed to consider a Roman Catholic bishop's plea to surrender and asked that food be delivered to the budilding.

Police had been alerted by a store employee who escaped as the robbers barged into the store. One member of the gang was tackled by police and caught as he tried to flee. Officers said his pockets were stuffed with cash and he was carrying two guns.

geographical location, he said. Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, Midland Memorial and the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring all will be used by the medical school, whichever city is designated as the regional center, Trotter said. "The Lord has put us in the middle" of the area, he said.

Jastrow said the job of the Chamber of Commerce committee will be to tell the medical school "what our plus factors are."

"The fact that for other businesses, we are the center of the Permian Basin and we have always been strong supporters of any project that we take on" are among those factors, he said. "I don't want to compete with Odessa or Big Spring. I just want to tell them about Midland."

Midland Memorial Administrator Wayne Ulrich called the requirements for the regional center "rather an extensive shopping list" and said the response to the proposal has not been determined yet.

"We're going to have to carefully weigh each and every need of the medical school in light of existing resources and how we can best develop the resources to meet the stated needs of the proposed teaching facility," Ulrich said.

'Qualified' acceptance told

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Black nationalist leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa announced qualified acceptance Saturday of Prime Minister Ian Smith's plan to negotiate a peace settlement with moderate black leaders.

Muzorewa, president of the African National Council, said he would hold preliminary talks with Smith next week to determine whether the prime minister "is genuine in his offer" to negotiate a settlement based on universal suffrage.

The leaders of Rhodesia's two other moderate black nationalist movements also gave qualified support to Smith's proposal — the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole's breakaway faction of Muzorewa's council and Jeremiah Chirau's Zimbabwe United People's Organization.

Impartial observers believe the three movements together have the support of more than four-fifths of Rhodesia's 6.4 million blacks.

Smith's proposal, announced Thursday, has been rejected by the most powerful guerrilla group, the Patriotic Front, which has said it will continue fighting to topple Smith's white minority government.

Fair weather to continue

Those who remember last fall and winter may have trouble remembering that it's almost December and Christmas wreaths are up in the stores — but the weatherman says this fall is not as unseasonally warm as last year was unseasonally cold.

Fair weather is expected to continue through Monday with the high today dipping into the middle 60s but rising to the low 70s on Monday. Tonight's low should be in the upper 30s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds are expected to be northwesterly at 10 to 20 mph today and tonight.

Saturday's high was 81 degrees and the low was 39 degrees.

Mild temperatures were reported Saturday night in Andrews, Lamesa, Stanton, Rankin, Big Spring and Crane.

community engages in party-hopping."

While the city appeared to the writer as "a dreary succession of telephone poles, take-out food stands and tract housing," that is not how Clark sees it. The main story, he said, is how people have taken a piece of land where the surface is not attractive and, using the wealth under the land, have created a style of life that is very attractive.

"Certainly there is a certain amount of beauty to the desert," he said.

"We have had to create our own style of life here with our ingenuity, our own creativity and our own work," he added. "I'm not going to say we don't have a good style of life here. We do, but we have created it through what we have under the ground."

Clark noted the work Midlanders have done with the symphony and ballet. But, the W writer viewed the cultural aspects of Midland in a different light.

She wrote, "...there is the community theater and symphony, both of which natives claim to love dearly and support lavishly. But, face it, they're both amateur operations. And the only movies available to this high-income crowd seem to be a succession of Clint Eastwood Westerns at the drive-in just outside town."

One Midland woman, who preferred not to be identified, viewed the comments about the cultural endeavors as "not good." She explained that "a good sum of money" has been spent to bring a string quartet to the area, and the people also are proud of the community theater, citing the fact the group has represented the United States abroad.

While the article dealt with the social life among Midland's wealthy, that was not what the Midlanders hoped would be featured. The feeling voiced by several is that while many Midlanders may be wealthy and have a glamorous social life, they try to give back more to the community than most communities give to the people. "Generous people have gotten out and worked hard here," one woman said.

Several Midland residents spent time showing the W writer around Midland and explaining it, but "they thought they were helping the community in trying to direct her," one woman explained. Instead, they feel now, Ms. Johnson turned around the statements made by Midlanders she interviewed.

One Midland woman, when asked her reaction, refused to comment but added, "They were not my statements. They were derogatory."

Bob Landreth explained further. "I did not say what she quoted me as saying. A 2½ hour talk over a two-day period was consolidated into one or two paragraphs. It just didn't flow together the way I had expressed it."

He sees the article as playing up the rich aspect of Midland. "Millionaires rise and fall with the sun," Ms. Johnson wrote.

"The article does not really reflect what goes on in Midland," Landreth said. "Yes, there are wealthy people and they don't have anything to be ashamed of."

Speaking of his own job and financial position, the independent oil producer explained that money is not the ultimate goal for him, which he said the W article stresses about most Midlanders. "If the money is there and the business is there, fine. But, I enjoy the work and probably would work for less money."

This "everyone gets rich quick" picture Ms. Johnson painted of Midland is not favorable to the city, said Grant Billingsley, then with the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "There are a lot of people here who don't live like that. It really is not the way people live across the board in the community."

Despite the views that Midlanders felt the city was misrepresented and they were misquoted, Landreth added another view as to why the article is disliked.

"We really don't want people in Washington, D. C. to know what the (oil) business is really like because of the political issues," he explained.

The Midlanders' reactions to the W story were perhaps best summed up by Harry Clark. "They missed the point," he said.

Cold air grips parts of nation

By The Associated Press

Bitter cold gripped most of the Midwest, Northeast and Southeast on Saturday, with freezing rains threatening to make driving extra hazardous for Thanksgiving Day weekend travelers in many Northern states.

Record and near-record low temperatures were recorded for the date in Minnesota and Iowa.

The National Weather Service forecast snow for the Great Lakes and Northeast.

The nation's lowest temperature early Saturday was 20 below zero at International Falls, Minn. Minneapolis-St. Paul reported a record-breaking 16-below, lowest since 7-below set in 1898. Chicago had a reading of 3-above late Friday night, almost nudging below the 1898-set record of 2-above. Record lows for the date were also set in north and eastern Iowa, with Dubuque reporting the coldest reading of 17-below.

The weather service said three major factors contributed to the subzero temperatures — fresh snow on the ground, extremely cold temperatures in the upper atmosphere and clear skies.

"This combination will make it cold any time in November," a spokesman for the weather service said.

Temperatures moderated somewhat during the day Saturday in the Midwest with readings into the teens and 20s.

Crisp, cold air prevailed over the entire Southeast Saturday, with a warming trend expected to move in Sunday, with another cold front behind it. Temperatures in higher elevations of north Georgia, east Tennessee and western North Carolina and South Carolina dropped to about 20 during the night. Atlanta reported a low of 27.

Snow from the Great Lakes region to the Northeast and the Appalachians was forecast for Saturday night and Sunday. Accumulations of two to four inches were forecast to fall in western Massachusetts.

Student dies in auto accident

ABILENE — A Permian High School student died Saturday from injuries received in a one-car accident.

James Edward Rachel, 17, was pronounced dead shortly after being brought to Hendrix Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

According to a police spokesman, the car in which Rachel was riding apparently failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over. Rachel was thrown part-way out of the car, a police spokesman said, and had to be extricated by a rescue unit.

There were three other persons in the car, but none was hospitalized, police said.

Streets are an easy target for complaint. But potholes on the road are not a sign of road crew indifference. That would be easy to correct. Unfortunately all too many of Midland's streets and roads — some 150 miles worth — are older than their designed life of 20 years. And many roads built for residential use of approximately 400 cars per day, are experiencing traffic counts of 17,000 cars per day.

In January the city will accept bids on $3 million worth of general obligation bonds for street improvements. But more will probably be needed for the Public Works Department to complete its task, city officials say.

And those additional funds will only come by approval in a future bond election.

Another likely candidate for a bond election will be in the area of park improvements. Equipment at many Midland parks is antiquated, and indications are user demands of existing facilities will go up. To keep up with population shifts, Parks and Recreation officials forsee the need for a neighborhood park in northwest Midland. Bond elections will be necessary to provide many of these facilities as well.

Area builders have noted a 60 to 90 day backlog in the ability of the city to deliver water and sewer taps at construction projects.

And city officials note the difficulty they have in hiring and keeping personnel to do the difficult and somewhat unpleasant work involved.

It would seem the only way to command some pull in a labor-short economy would be to pay a wage high enough to reduce turnover.

But doing this would mean a greater tax burden for Midlanders, and that's something local politicians may be afraid to ask the taxpayers to accept for many years to come.

Experts on arthritis will speak Thursday

ODESSA — Two members of the West Texas Chapter Medical Committee of the Arthritis Foundation will speak at a public forum at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Bonham Elementary School in Odessa.

The forum is sponsored by the Odessa branch of the West Texas chapter.

Speakers will be Dr. Wm. A. Riley of Big Spring, a physician specializing in rheumatology, and Dr. Ken Scholz of Lubbock, an orthopedist who is recognized for joint replacement. They will be assisted by Bill Grist, a physical therapist of Highland Hospital in Lubbock.

The forum is open at no charge to the public, but will be geared to business and industry in the Permian Basin, said Sam Gipson, president of the Odessa branch.

"Since there are more then 35,000 sufferers from arthritis in the Odessa-Midland area, we feel that most companies would like to be represented at this public forum. We have extended an invitation for employers to come and bring their employees," Gipson said.

Viet church issues human rights appeal

Agence France Presse

PARIS — The Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam has issued an appeal for human rights in Vietnam including freedom of worship, in a document released here Friday.

A monk slipped out of the country by sea recently with the document and the tape recording of the last words of a Buddhist priest who burned himself to death along with 11 other priests and priestesses on Nov. 2, 1975, in Can Tho province, to protest against restrictions being imposed on worshippers there.

The document which reached Paris along with copies of protest letters to Vietnamese authorities was brought out of the country by the Venerable Thich Man Giac, a member of the Unified Buddhist Church's central executive council.

The document is a resolution adopted by the central council last June 9 requesting the release of religious and political prisoners from reeducation camps, steps to end "corruption" among officials and that the proclaimed policy of religious toleration be put into effect.

Texans lead in Swiss team play

ATLANTA (AP) — A team of four Florida men leads 30 surviving teams after Friday's qualifying in the Reisinger Open Team Championship at the 1977 fall North American tournament of the American Contract Bridge League.

A team of four Houston players is leading in the simultaneous North American Swiss team race.

Larry Griffey, Loren Axtell and Leon Smith, all of Jacksonville, Fla., and Bruce Ohmann of Ormand Beach, Fla., earned a 38.5 score in qualifications Friday, two points better than their nearest competitors.

Trailing the Floridians is a six-man team made up of Bill Root, Boca Raton, Fla.; Richard Pavlicek, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Ron Rubin, Maplewood, N.J.; Mike Becker, New York City, and Kit Woolsey and Steve Robinson, both of Arlington, Va.

The 30 teams — from a starting field of 60 — were to be trimmed to 11 today in qualifications for Sunday's championship play.

John and Virginia Zilic, Thomas Peters and Donald Olson, all of Houston, lead the North American Open Swiss Team qualifiers with 7.25 points won in eight matches Friday.

Ken Chatzinoff, Cinnaminson, N.J.; Jack McArthur, Lansdale, Pa.; Lewis Klein, Elkins Park, Pa., and Irving Rasmussen, St. Paul, Minn., were second with 7 points.

Fewer than 20 of the original 158 teams in this category were expected to survive Saturday's play for the championship round today.

Millie Gluckman, New Hyde Park, N.Y., and Valerie Thorpe, Hillsborough, Calif., were second at 393.

Winners of the Eastern States Men's Pair title were Bill Wisdom, Spencer, N.Y., and Randy Joyce, Raleigh, N.C. with 384. Second were Mike Labeau, Newport News, Va., and Brick Houck, Raleigh, at 380.

Strike can win, says Coloradoan

WASHINGTON (AP) — American farmers can unite to wage a successful nationwide strike next month despite their tradition of independence, a Colorado leader of the strike effort says.

Derral Schroeder, a grain and livestock farmer from Campo, Colo., said farmers will quit selling commodities on Dec. 14 and continue their strike until prices rise.

"We own these products, we finance them, we grow them on our own land, but we don't have the right to price them," Schroeder complained Friday in a telephone interview.

Earlier in the week, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said he sympathized with the goals of the proposed strike, but he predicted it would fail as have other efforts to organize farmers.

Asked about Bergland's remarks, Schroeder commented: "I don't think he's been out to talk to many farmers."

On Friday, thousands of farmers, many driving tractors, protested low farm prices during a demonstration in Plains, Ga., President Carter's home town.

Schroeder said farmers are demanding prices on a free market for wheat and other commodities at levels that represent 100 percent of parity. Parity refers to a balance between farm prices and costs as measured by a base period shortly after the turn of the century.

Last month, farmers received $2.26 a bushel for wheat, 45 percent of the full parity indicator of $5.02 a bushel. The plummeting prices follow three successive years of bumper harvests.

Cyclone warning went unheeded

By BARRY SHLACHTER

MACHILIPATNAM, India (AP) — The people of Divi Taluk were toiling at the rice harvest two weeks ago when they heard that a cyclone had battered villages 500 miles down the coast and claimed 495 lives.

They took no precautions that Saturday, Nov. 12, or four days later when the first in a series of radio bulletins warned of another violent storm picking up strength and making its way across the Bay of Bengal to the southeast coast of India.

Skies darkened on the morning of Nov. 19 and rain began to fall. But some farmers still went out to their paddies with crude wood-handled sickles to bring in what this year was a particularly plentiful crop.

The storm hit Divi Taluk, a subdistrict, at 7:30 p.m. Families huddled against the walls of their huts as the 95 mph winds carried away their roofs of thatched palm fronds.

"The cyclone made a loud whistling sound and my six children were too frightened to cry," said Mindu Somiah, a gaunt, grizzled member of India's Harijan community, the former "untouchable" caste, like many other inhabitants of the fertile, lowland between the Bay of Bengal and the sacred River Krishna, 1,000 miles southeast of New Delhi.

After several hours of wind, a battery of brutal tidal waves, 18 to 20 feet high, swept up entire villages and flooded milions of acres, at least temporarily enlarging the Bay of Bengal and drowning thousands.

Officials of Andhra Pradesh state said 12,000 persons are dead or missing, making it India's worst weather calamity since the October, 1971, Orissa cyclone killed 10,000 about 750 miles up the coast.

Other sources predicted the death toll would rise as high as 50,000 once communications with remote areas are restored and all the victims found.

In Divi Taluk, which bore the brunt of the tidal wave, dozens of hamlets and villages were totally submerged or were reduced to barren marshland.

From a helicopter hovering over the area, the only visible signs of past habitation were circles in the soft mud on narrow strips of ground above water, where round huts had once stood.

No longer is there a distinct line where the Bay of Bengal ends and Divi Taluk begins. A murkey, shallow sea covers half-harvested crops.

Still floating in it are clusters of cattle carcasses and the bloated and sunblackened bodies of farmers who only a week earlier had worked the paddies.

With several days' advance notice, why hadn't an evacuation of threatened areas been attempted? Those who had heard the radio warnings had felt confident they could weather the storm.

"We had cyclones before," explained one survivor. "we did not expect tidal waves so strong."

The storm left a stark trail of destruction from the coast to towns 50 miles inland.

At the hamlet of Komali, 60 miles down the coast from Divi Taluk, 110 men, women and children who took shelter in a brick church perished when the building collapsed. Many were "untouchables" who had converted to Christianity to escape discrimination from high-caste Hindus.

"Even God failed," said a Komali resident. "The dead have at least been given rest but what about the living?"

In some areas, survivors have been overwhelmed by the sheer physical task of removing bodies.

For six days, about 2,500 persons in a village north of Divi Taluk lived among the rotting corpses of 1,500 relatives and neighbors.

The disposal of the 45,000 cattle carcasses and 7,891 human bodies discovered so far is posing an enormous health hazard in the region.

The collection of bodies as well as basic relief measures was proving to be an extremely difficult task because dozens of villages were still cut off by flood waters.

Until the army arrived with flat-bottomed boats on Friday, the only supplies received by many marooned villagers were dropped from eight air force helicopters.

Health officials have not been able to reach these remote areas and reports said an outbreak of cholera was already beginning to take its toll. No figures were available.

"The havoc is over, the damage is done," said one state official. "Now the reconstruction begins." The state government was paying villages 150 rupees (about $17) for each hut damaged. Some three million persons were reported homeless.

But for untouchable farmer Mindu Somiuh, 50, things will never be the same. Fairly well off by Indian rural standards, he owned a roomy hut, four head of cattle and a half-acre paddy field.

In an interview at a refugee camp, he said his whole village was flattened by the storm.

Bishop College given $500,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bishop College in Dallas has received a $500,000 donation to endow a faculty position in social sciences from St. Paul Baptist Church, a black Los Angeles congregation with fewer than 500 active members.

The Rev. John L. Branham, who graduated from the college in 1937, said the donation "was money we started saving 21 years ago."

Branham, the church's pastor for 35 years, noted that the $500,000 gift was not the first such donation by his congregation to the school. It recently gave $35,000 as part of a total $100,000 pledge to be fulfilled by 1985.

Philadelphia, Baltimore dock strikes end sighted

NEW YORK (AP) — Longshoremen and shippers in Philadelphia and Baltimore have reached tentative agreement on guaranteed income provisions for dock workers, thereby raising hopes that an end to the two-month strike of 39 ports from Maine to Texas is near.

At the same time, Thomas W. "Teddy" Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, directed locals to vote Tuesday on the new contracts.

Philadelphia ILA locals represent 5,000 dock workers and Baltimore locals have 4,000 longshoremen.

The union had been pressing for guaranteed annual income plans to protect dock workers against job losses due to automation.

Tentative master contracts had already been reached but local issues in many ports were delaying voting that would end the walkout.

The 50,000 members of the ILA employed in the deep-sea ports along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts struck Oct. 1 after their contract expired. The walkout halted nearly all cargo that was being moved in the self-contained, van-size boxes that reduce the need for manual labor. Dock workers in most ports made exceptions for military supplies and perishables.

The strike has cost tens of thousands of jobs in other industries and has added $1.3 billion to the nation's balance of payments deficit.

The general strike launched Wednesday in Baltimore with the blessing of Gleason, who hoped to end "employer dillydallying," idled 4,000 longshoremen and cost the Maryland economy some $5 million a day.

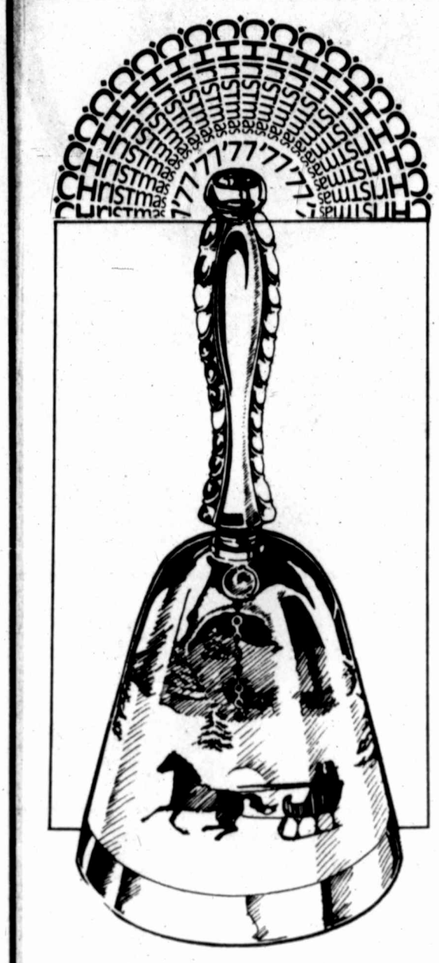

Even greater economic impact was felt here in the nation's biggest port where 70 percent of the general cargo now moves in containers that lay trapped aboard idle ships and deserted piers.

Along the Gulf, Houston estimated its strike losses as totaling $11 million.

Besides job and guaranteed income assurances, the proposed three-year contracts provide for wage increases of 80 cents per hour annually, with the first raise dated back to last June 1. This, in effect, provides a four-month bonus of more than $500 for each of the union members.

The prior base wage of $8 hourly would increase to $10.40 by Oct. 1, 1979. Employer contributions to pension and welfare benefits would increase by 91 cents to a new rate of $3.75 per man-hour of work.

Meanwhile, the Maritime Commission counted 97 ships that were idle Friday because of the strike, including six U.S. flag cargo vessels laid up in European ports and 40 foreign freighters trapped in American waters. But that count did not reflect the situation in Baltimore, where the commission listed only six vessels strikebound.

Fire hero can't shake nightmare

Like other survivors of the Beverly Hills Supper Club holocaust, Bailey says he can't shake the nightmare of the May 28 blaze that killed 164 persons.

"Dark places remind me of the Cabaret Room ... the smoke ... the moaning ... when I was grabbing arms and pulling people from a pile," he said in an interview.

"Living with my family has helped. If I lived by myself, I'd hear the voices. The sounds still bother me," said the 19-year-old Bailey, a freshman at Northern Kentucky University who is studying to become a doctor.

"Symbols often come up that remind me of the fire. Once I caught a mouse in a mousetrap. That triggered some bad memories. Another time, I was driving home in the dark and thought I saw a body by the road.

"I have a lot of morbid thoughts, but I'm trying to forget them," said Bailey, a 5-foot-8 native of Texas.

When the fire broke out, Bailey interrupted a comedy team act by jumping on stage and pointing out exits. Within minutes, deadly smoke filled the crowded party room where more than 1,300 persons waited to hear singer John Davidson.

It was the worst nightclub fire in the United States since the Coconut Grove blaze in Boston, which claimed 491 lives on Nov. 28, 1942.

Owners of the nightclub already face damage suits totaling more than $1.5 billion. An investigation by the State of Kentucky contends the Cabaret Room, where Davidson was appearing, was overcrowded by 800 persons.

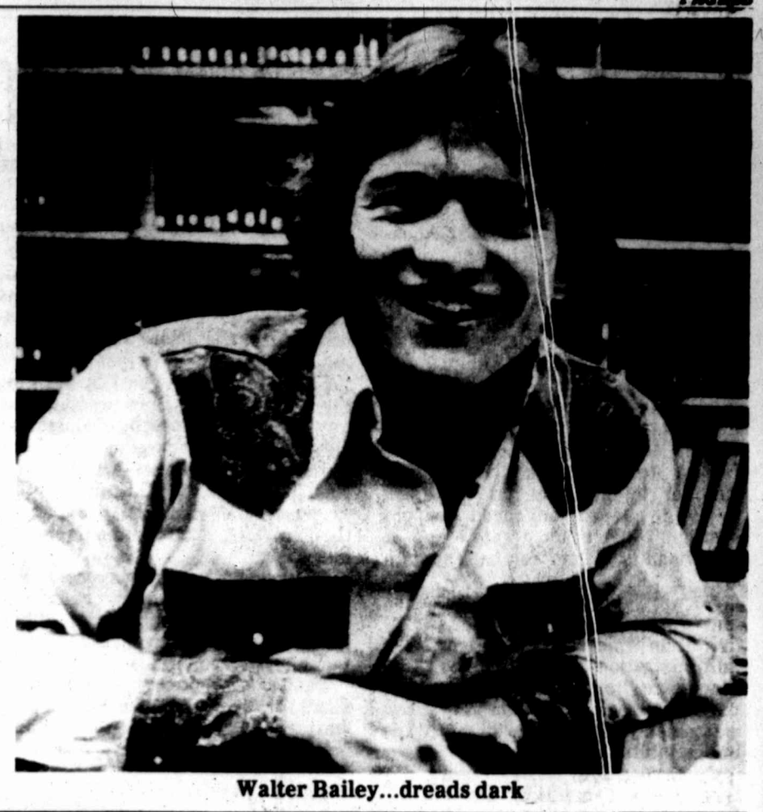

Since the fire, Bailey has received more than 150 letters, including commendations from President Carter, Henry (The Fonz) Winkler and the state of Oklahoma. But they did little to quell his welled-up emotions. Finally, his anguish grew into rage.

"One night I threw a fit and cried all night," said Bailey, who lives with his divorced mother and three younger brothers.

He has refused to draw out of a trust fund set up by wellwishers for his education.

"I'm broke right now, but I don't think I need it," he said. "I think I'll need it worse in four years when I hopefully enter medical school."

He works a part-time job two nights a week to make ends meet. The job was provided by a Cincinnati hotel manager, Jeff Ruby, who survived the fire.

Sadat trip producing rethinking in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — In the wake of Egypt's peace offensive, Israel is looking at its map in a new light and re-examining what it can relinquish for peace.

Even some hardliners in Prime Minister Menahem Begin's cabinet are talking of a need for "new ideas" about the Palestinians and the place where 700,000 of them live — the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

This rethinking by men in power appears to be the greatest acheivement of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt in smashing 30 years of hostile Arab tradition by visiting Israel last weekend.

Analysis

Sadat took anotner step on Saturday by proposing a meeting to start next Saturday in Cairo to prepare for a Middle East peace conference. He invited Israel, the United States, the Soviet Union, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, and the Arab confrontation states, meaning those bordering on Israel.

So far Israeli policy has not changed. Officials say that if a change is forthcoming, it can only happen gradually as the dialogue continues between Israel and Egypt.

But attitudes appear to be softening. "We are nearing the hour of decision," Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said last Wednesday.

"The question is," Dayan said, "what will be the alternative proposals to the present situation? For then we shall have to decide whether to stick to or to change this or that formula."

These formulas mostly concern four chunks of territory which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East war and which the Arabs demand that it return in full. The four areas, likely to be major topics in any peace conference, are:

—The Sinai peninsula, 21,000 square miles of sand dunes and rocky mountains that Israel says it needs to give it "strategic depth" against an Egyptian attack. Dayan used to say he would forsake a chance for peace if it meant giving back Sharm el Sheik, the southernmost point which controls shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba. Now he says he's not sure.

—The Golan Heights, from which Syria once harassed Israeli farmers in the valley below. Its capture in 1967 not only drove the Syrians back but gave Israel Mount Hermon, "the eyes and ears" of Israel's northern front. The Begin government has indicated a willingness to make small changes in the Golan Heights ceasefire line in exchange for peace, but Syria wants all 500 square miles returnede

—The Gaza Strip, the narrow finger jutting into Israel from the south which Jerusalem says must be kept to protect population centers and to keep the hotly nationalistic 400,000 Palestinians there in check.

—The West Bank, by far the most troublesome of the areas, where the Palestine Liberation Organization says it wants its own state and where President Carter envisions a Palestinian homeland. Israel says the two concepts are equal and unacceptable.

Begin holds the West Bank to be part of the land God promised the Jews. Dayan has prsuaded Begin not to annex the 2,270-square-mile area for now, and the official position is that the area can never be turned over to foreign sovereignty.

Uzi Benziman, a political specialist for the independent newspaper Haaretz, said he detected a shift in attitude among some cabinet members in private talks after the Sadat visit.

He quoted one hardline Begin follower as saying: "There is a clear majority in the government that would opt for peace if the question was raised: territories or peace."

China ousting Canadian newspaperman

Agence France-Presse

PEKING — Ross Munro, correspondent here of the Toronto Globe and Mail, has been told by the government to leave China — the first time a foreign journalist has been ordered to do so since the Cultural Revolution a decade ago.

Since the arrests a year ago of the Communist Party radical leaders known in the Chinese press as the "gang of four," Munro has been officially criticized by the Chinese authorities for his reporting, which they have called inaccurate and speculative.

Munro told fellow newsmen here Saturday he had been informed his residence permit would not be renewed when it expired on Dec. 23.

He learned of the move, he said, from his editor who relayed to him the contents of a letter sent to the paper by the second secreatry of the Chinese embassy in Ottawa.

The letter said Munro's visa would not be renewed "due to obvious reasons."

The embassy gave no further explanation of the measure but said Peking agreed to the paper's previous request to have another journalist, John Fraser, replace Munro, whose assignment in Peking was officially due to end anyway on Jan. 15.

Munro said the refusal to renew his visa had been confirmed by the Chinese Foerign Ministry's information department but he had been unable to obtain further details. He was told the matter was "strictly" between the Globe and Mail and the Chinese embassy in Ottawa.

He told colleagues here that the "obvious reason" referred to as the cause of what he considered his expulsion from the country was a series of articles he wrote last month about human rights in China.

While he was writing the articles, Munro said, he had been summoned to the Foreign Ministry's information department on Sept. 15 and an official there had read a toughly worded official criticism of him.

The Chinese statement had said:

"Ever since the smashing of the gang of four, you have consistently in your reports made willful speculations and fabrications about the domestic situation in our country in complete disregard of the facts. What is more you went as far as maliciously slandering Chairman Mao and the Central Committee (of the Chinese Communist Party headed by Chairman Hua (Kuo-feng). We think that in doing so you have abused your status as a resident correspondent in Peking and have incurred the great indignation of the Chinese people."

"We find this to be intolerable," the statement concluded.

Munro, 36, who has been a journalist in China since June 1975, said he was "genuinely surprised" by the move since he "did not expect that the Chinese government would demonstrate so clearly that reporters here are under restrictions regarding what they write.

Congress struggles with arms restraint policy

By HAROLD LOGAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Almost six months after President Carter announced his policy to curtail the flow of American weapons abroad the bureaucracy is still struggling over how to (a) define it and (b) execute it.

As one high-ranking official quipped, putting the president's policy into effect is like "trying to turn around a supertanker."

Last May 19 the president said the United States would not be "the first supplier to introduce into a region newly developed, advanced weapons systems which could create a new or significantly higher combat capability."

Notwithstanding the 5 1-2 months and three single-spaced pages of definition which have accrued to the administration's arms policy there appears to be no satisfactory was to determine what is "an advanced weapons system" or a "higher combat capability."

Carter's policy "has made a difference in semantics, but no difference in practice," said Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., one of the harshest congressional critics of Carter's performance on his arms pledges. "Since May 19, I've seen no evidence of any restraint in arms sales."

Eagleton has at least a point. Whatever the administration has done since Carter announced his arms policy on May 19, it has not allowed the stampede of American weapons headed abroad.

Last month, the Library of Congress' Congressional Research Service reported that in the first four months after Carter enunciated the policy, the administration transmitted to Congress 45 arms sales notifications, involving 18 countries and more than $4.1 billion in arms.

In fact, fiscal year 1977 — over which Carter presided for eight months -- will reverse a two-year downward trend in total U.S. arms sales. Sales reached a peak of $10.6 billion in 1974, and declined to $8.7 billion in 1976.

The figure for 1977, calculated on the same basis as previous years' totals, is estimated at $9.9 billion, an increase of 13 percent over 1976. A recent change in accounting procedures will raise the 1977 figure to $11.3 billion, the highest total in history.

While congressional sources concede the accounting change is justifiable, they note it will dilute the impact of the centerpiece of Carter's policy, a pledge to reduce 1978 sales below the 1977 figure.

The change "gives them a higher figure to play around with in 1978," said one source.

Administration officials insist it will take 12 to 18 months for the effects of Carter's policy to show themselves. Most of the deals that will be concluded during that time, they say, will have deep roots that stretch back through years of discussions by previous administrations with purchasing nations.

"It's fair to say that it is a slow process, turning it around," said Ed Feingold, deputy director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. "These things have long tails, and relations between the U.S. and many of these states are affected by arms sales ... It's really too early to know."

Lucy Wilson Benson, under secretary of state for security assistance and chairman of the interagency arms export control board, pointed out three requests Carter has turned down as evidence the administration is serious about controlling arms sales.

They include a request by Iran for the F-181, a fighter not produced for any U.S. forces, one by Pakistan to purchase A-7 attack planes, and one by Israel to co-produce with Ecuador Kfir jets, fitted with U.S. engines — a proposal that would have expanded the world's arms manufacturing base.

Critics point to Carter's recent decision to sell seven airborne radar and battle control systems to Iran for $1.2 billion as a move that makes a mockery of the policy.

The system, known as AWACS, seems to be an example of what Carter said he was trying to avoid. It is the most advanced weapon of its kind in the world, and is being introduced to a region where nothing remotely like it exists now.

"AWACS does great violence to the president's May 19 statement," said Eagleton.

As the AWACS dispute suggests, what the arms control policy is really all about is the Middle East.

In his May 19 statement, Carter specifically exempted the NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand and Japan from the centerpiece of the policy, a pledge that the dollar volume of arms sales in fiscal 1977 would constitute a ceiling for arms sales in 1978, the fiscal year which began Oct. 1.

The ceiling applies to the arms sold to other nations last year. According to the most recent Defense Department figures, which include $8.7 billion of the estimated $9.9 billion of 1977 sales, just over $1.0 billion went to NATO and the three allies. Of the rest, $5.9 billion, or 76.6 per cent, went to Israel, Iran or Saudi Arabia.

A recent study by an independent research organization found that between 1974 and 1976, fully 65 percent of U.S. arms sold abroad went to one of those three nations.

"What we do with those three countries is everything," said ACDA Deputy Director Richard Wilcox.

Requests by the Middle Eastern governments for new shipments of arms during the current year are expected to test the mettle of Carter's commitment to reducing arms sales before the grace period the administration wants has expired.

Iran has asked for 160 F-16 fighters to complement the 140 F-16s it is currently receiving. Saudi Arabia has asked for F-15 jets to replace its aging fighter force. The battle over AWACS has left Congress with decidedly negative feelings about future sales to the Arabs, but officials say there are compelling reasons for approving at least the Saudi sale.

The most difficult testing ground for the new arms policy is Israel. Although Carter vowed on May 19 to "honor our historic responsibilities to assure the security" of Israel, it is not one of the nations exempted from the ceiling.

Israel's "approach, out of some understandable desperation, is to keep upping the ante," said Priscilla Clapp, a top aide to Leslie Gelb, head of the State Department's politico-military affairs bureau, which serves as Under secretary Benson's staff.

Clapp said Israel is seeking a commitment from the administration for a continued flow of arms for 10 years or so into the future. The Washington Post reported last week that Israeli Defense Minister Ezir Weizman is expected to come to Washington with an arms shopping list described by one official as "staggering."

The Middle East aside, officials point to two built-in obstacles to the success of any policy that seeks to limit arms sales.

One is the impact of arms sales on the domestic economy. The arms business is Big Business; most of those $9.9 billion of sales last year represent money in someone's paycheck, or profits for some corporation.

When Carter canceled the B-1 bomber program, Rockwell International said the decision cost 25,000 jobs. When supporters of the McDonnell-Douglas-Northrop F-18 argued unsuccessfully for its purchase by the Navy, they said as many as 70,000 jobs were at stake.

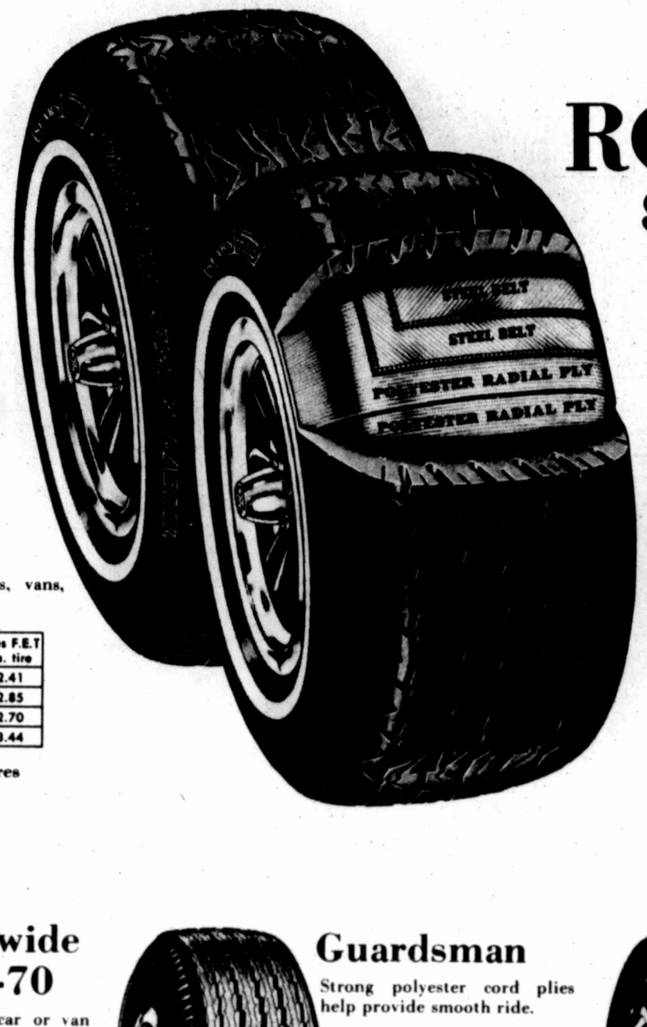

Domestic economic considerations "in particular instances, are taken into account," said Clapp. "It wouldn't be fair not to."

On the other hand, she said, there is a backlog of $31.8 billion in orders not yet delivered that can help cushion the blow of a slowdown in sales.

The other obstacle is the group of nations outside the United States who can fill any gap in the worldwide flow of weapons that Carter's policy might create.

The United States now sells about 50 percent of the world's arms, said Benson. "It's fair to say that we could contemplate, with some equanimity, the loss of some sales to another country," she said.

Prof defends detective stories

EDITOR'S NOTE—It's something akin to Tiffany's selling rhinestones or Seattle Slew pulling a hansom cab. George Grella, well-versed college teacher of literature — ancient and modern — says detective stories are among the best.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — On the door near the end of the hall is a sign: SAM SPADE, HARD-BOILED DICK.

Inside hangs a trench coat and a black and white Humphrey Bogart poster, his chilling stare directed at the bare radiator across the small room. From such settings unfold so many great detective stories ..."I was sitting in my office, nursing a hangover, when through the door waltzed ..."

Our tousled hero here, however, is not Sam Spade, super sleuth, but George Grella, aficionado of the detective novel par excellence. Also doctor of philosophy, teacher of literature, Son of Italy, would-be shortstop.

Alas, instead of the expected sloop-brimmed fedora and sagging gray suit, he is festooned in a collision of green plaids covering an "Italia" T-shirt and a corduroy jacket bearing "Italian Power" and "Dodgers" buttons on opposite lapels. The desk drawer that should conceal a .38 and a bottle of booze — as vital to the American private eye novel as the curvaceous blonde — holds instead a fielder's mitt and a bottle of neat's foot oil. Where wanted posters should be are photos of King Kong, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the poet John Crowe Ransom. What should be bare walls, save for the peeling paint, are shelves of books spilling to the chairs and floor.

In this incongruous hideaway at the University of Rochester, George Grella conducts his love affair with literature, ancient and modern. He talks of authors and characters as if they were old friends. But it is to the chillers, thrillers and killers of popular writing that he devotes special attention, in lectures and essays now being expanded into a book. And of his favorite characters — the hardboiled detectives of American fiction — he speaks almost with empathy.

"The detective in these hardboiled novels is not one of those gentlemen who comes down from London and solves the crime, and his hobbies are foreign languages and playing the harpsichord. He's an underpaid, suffering sort of person, tough and sensitive and honorable. It's not so much that he dishes out violence. It's that he suffers violence. He's a stoic sufferer. He's tough enough to take it.

"He's also tough in a moral way. Tough seems to mean that he's initiated into the sinfulness of his society, into the falseness and deception in it. And the wisecrack indicates a lot of things, the quick wit of the detective, his intelligence, his imperviousness to the kinds of things that the phony society shows him. I'm a great believer in wisecracks and good lines myself."

This sounds more like academic drivel than the whodunit excitement associated with drugstore pulp, but Grella says it's the stuff that makes the mystery novel such an enduring American diversion.

"It's a quest more than the penetration of a puzzle. There's almost no puzzle to these things. What we are about are the chracters and scenes, because they are usually so well done. This quest is really more for some truth. It's a romance. The mystery itself gets pushed aside. The detective is really not interested in clues, fingerprints, because he knows the police can do that better than he can. What he's really interested in is character. He knows people."

If Grella has a quest of his own — and he would wince at the suggestion — it's to recognize in popular fiction that which is good.

"I wish I could tell you the test for great literature. Raymond Chandler, Ross MacDonald, Dashiell Hammett (all creators of hard-boiled detectives) — I think those novels are definitely mainstream literature."

English writers borrowed the detective structure and applied it to the manners of their country, where class distinctions were more pronounced, he says. The English murder mystery, which Grella calls the formal detective story, usually has as its villain a cad who doesn't belong to the aristocratic set into which he intrudes under some guise. When his crime is exposed and he is carted off by the constable, it is the triumph of society — usually expressed as a small group enjoying a leisurely weekend at a country mansion — over the outcast.

When the detective story was taken up again in America earlier this century, the pronounced class distinctions were missing, Grella says, although social class as a theme pops up now and again, notably today in television's Columbo. There the hero is an unmannered guy with a shabby raincoat whose crooks always seem to be rich.

Newspapers sought for insulating homes

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a surging demand for yesterday's newspaper, to wrap the house in.

Or, to put it in the words of executive of what is sometimes called the waste paper industry, "there has been a dramatic demand for news in the past few months."

News to this executive is not the news that is printed on the paper, but the paper on which the news is printed. The paper stock, in other words.

The home insulation industry wants it, the very newspaper you are reading, to be recycled as insulation, and they are willing to pay premium prices for it, about 50 per cent more than last year's figures.

Wholesalers in some areas are selling to newsprint consumption mills at $65 to $70 a ton, and sometimes more, with the buyer paying the freight, according to "Official Board Markets," sometimes called "The Yellow Sheet" of the industry. Those are the latest prices quoted for what is called No. 1 News in the Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit markets.

In California, prices are about $37 to $42; in the Southeast, $55 to $60 and in the Northeast, from $23, the Boston low, to $50, the Philadelphia high.

Why so high in the Midwest? That's where the insulation makers are situated.

While these are not the quotations your Boy Scout or Girl Scout troop can expect, industry officials say that generally speaking such local collectors, who then sell to wholesalers, are also earning 50 per cent more than they did a year ago; in some instances up to $50 a ton.

The actual price received in community paper drives depends not only on the needs of the local dealer but also on quality.

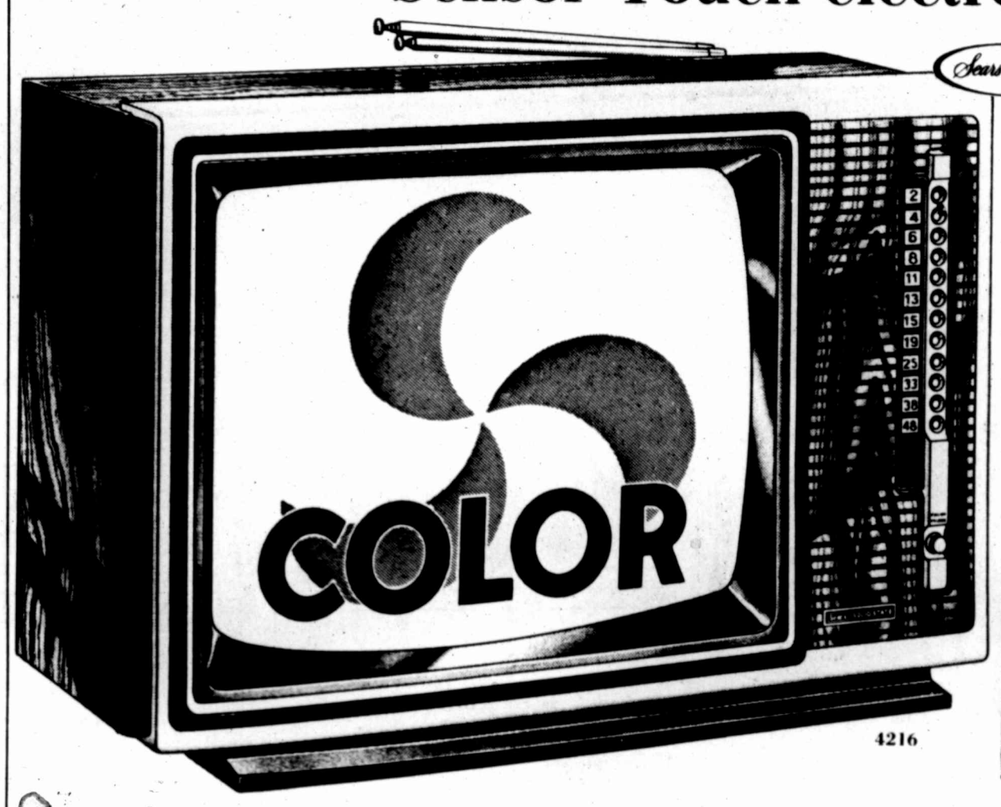

No. 1 News means used or unused newspapers, stacked and tied or baled, with no contaminants. As a spokesman for the National Association of Recycling Industries put it: "No magazines, dirt or wire." Just pure newsprint.

Robert Kilburg, president of ohe Paper Stock Institue of America, explains "The unprecedented demand is due to the pressure now being placed on news supplies by the insulation industry to meet homeowner needs."

Millions of Americans, he noted, are insulating their homes to minimize fuel costs.

Drawbridge operator George Jackson gazes out window of his tower on the Eastport Bridge.

Bridge keeper's thankless task includes verbal abuse, gunshots

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Poor George Jackson. He is guilty of nothing more than trying to be helpful, and look what he gets.

In the course of the year he has been cursed at, hollered at and shot at with a gun. One man tried to scale a wall and punch him out. Just the other day somebody smashed his window with a well-aimed can of beer.

George Jackson is the operator of the busiest drawbridge in America.

It is the drawbridge that spans Spa Creek, between Annapolis and the village of Eastport, and if it is not the busiest drawbridge in America — there seems to be no way to check; not even Guinness keeps such records — it at least is locally reputed to be. And if the frustration taken out on George Jackson is a gauge, it surely must be high on the list.

"They cuss me about equally, the people in the cars and the people in the boats," George Jackson said. "I guess folks just don't like to be kept waiting."

One yachtsman, George Jackson recalled with some bewilderment, took the trouble to dock his boat, come ashore and walk halfway across the bridge to demand to know why he had been made to wait unduly long for the bridge to open, time he might have spent getting to wherever he was in such a hurry to get to.

Most of the horde that pass through the Spa Creek bridge aren't really in a hurry to get anywhere except down the Severn River and into Chesapeake Bay for a day of sailing, and back again at nightfall.

Spa Creek is an inviting harbor. From the blockhouse where George Jackson sits at his controls, listening to people swear blood oaths against him, he looks down upon a forest of masts. Boatyards and marinas abound.

Further, the dockside restaurants and antique charm of Annapolis lure motorists as well as sailors, so the traffic on both water and land is always heavy.

In the fall and early winter the waters of the Chesapeake turn gin clear, tempting dedicated yachtsmen long after the peak summer sailing seaon. Even at this time of year the bridge operator is kept busy.

"Nothing like in the summertime, though," George Jackson said.

"In the summer we sometimes have to post a schedule, open the bridge for a half hour at a time and close it for a half hour. Otherwise I wait until 15 or 20 boats gather and let them all go through at once. I never have to wait long for 15 or 20 boats."

According to the operator's log, the bridge averages about 1,300 openings during July. That figures out to once every 34 minutes, but George Jackson said it's more like every 10 or 15 minutes during the daylight hours and on busy weekends.

"It's often enough that nobody is happy. I can't open it fast enough to suit the boats or close it fast enough to suit the cars."

George Jackson said one impatient skipper knocked the mast off his boat trying to get through before the bridge was fully open. As for motorists, they have broken through the wooden barriers dozens of times. One motorcyclist leapt the chasm of the slowly rising bridge.

George Jackson is 34, has sandy hair, blue eyes and, fortunately, an even-tempered and cheerful outlook.

Energy sessions slated

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional energy conferees are ready to get down to hard bargaining in hopes of finally producing a compromise national energy bill which President Carter, the House and the Senate can all support.

With conferees facing decisions this week on some of the biggest differences between the two houses, nearly all participants are acknowledging that some key concessions must be made to get a bill.

Generally, the price of winning Senate approval for Carter's proposed new energy taxes appears to be higher prices and more production incentives for oil and natural gas than either the president or the House wanted.

Principal negotiators say they are optimistic a compromise can be framed between the sharply different House and Senate bills.

Conference committees working on both tax and non-tax aspects of the legislation go back to work Monday after a 10-day Thanksgiving recess, a time during which conference leaders discussed possible areas of compromise with administration energy officials.

While some lawmakers say they doubt that Congress can finish the work this year, Democratic leaders are determined to present Carter with a national energy bill this year.

"Our whole psychology is that there will be a bill this year. Putting it over — or even parts of it — until next year would be absolutely contrary to the strategy that has evolved on the part of the leadership," said Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, the top House energy conferee.

Carter's program, passed nearly intact by the House, would make scarce fuels like oil and natural gas more expensive through a series of new taxes and federal regulation, while providing incentives for energy conservation.

The Senate rejected the main elements of Carter's plan, voting instead for more than $40 billion in tax breaks — many for business — to encourage energy production and conservation.

Outlines of a compromise could come into sharper focus about mid-week when conferees tackle natural gas pricing. The House passed the president's plan to continue price control on natural gas but to lift the price ceiling from $1.46 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75. The House bill also would extend regulation to now unregulated gas produced and sold within the same state.

One possible compromise is continued price controls but at levels higher than wanted by the administration — possibly in the vicinity of $2 per thousand cubic feet.

The real fight may come over the Carter-House proposal to extend the controls to the unregulated intrastate markets — a plan strongly opposed by senators from oil-and gas-producing states.

Congressional sources say that if an overall compromise is to succeed, it must satisfy Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the top Senate negotiator, as well as group of House liberals backing the Carter program.

Long has insisted that a portion of the president's proposed tax on crude oil — sometimes called the centerpiece of the administration's energy plan — be returned to producers as exploration incentives.

The group of House liberals, represented on the conference committee by Reps. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., and Philip Sharp, D-Ind., are against new tax breaks to producers.

They have threatened to rebel and withhold their support from any energy bill that they feel overly rewards industry.

Moffett has urged Carter not to "give too much away to Russell Long" just to get a bill through Congress. Moffett and Ashley had strong criticism last week for Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger when he hinted at a news conference that the administration might support higher prices for oil and natural gas as part of a compromise.

Both congressmen acknowledged that there will possibly be compromises made along the lines suggested by Schlesinger. But they said they felt it was too early for the administration to be showing its hand.

Most congressional observers seem to agree that Long holds most of the cards, but he has been tight-lipped about what kind of compromise he would support. But he has said all along that he'll back Carter's proposed crude oil tax as long as the legislation contains enough production incentives for industry.

Air, spirit put sailors to sea

EDITOR'S NOTE — Around the world in 80 days? Not for circumnavigators. They take years. The fun isn't in getting there, it's the stops along the way. And for these modern-day Magellans, about the only thing that's free is the air that fills their sails — and the spirit that put them to sea.

By SID MOODY

THE WEST INDIES (AP) — Probably at no time since Magellan showed the way have so many sailors been at sea demonstrating that the Flat Earth Society is misguided.

These are the circumnavigators, private people in their own boats in search of adventure or in flight from landlocked tedium.

Their modes of transit are as various as their motives. An all but unsinkable 14-foot creation bobbing into Recife, Brazil, with its solo skipper on the leg from Cape Town. Vast, skyscraping ketches — the goldplaters — with deep freezes, saunas and enough electronics to go into orbit. Family boats. Leaky boats. Boats daring Cape Horn. Boats — most of them — going the easy way, east to west with the tropical trades.

"I don't think there is a typivcal circumnavigator," said Dan Leahy recently on the Caribbean island of Bequia having almost completed a four-year circuit with his wife, Chris, aboard their 60-doot yawl, Mareda.

In the 1890s Joshua Slocum opened up the world to yachting by sailing around it alone. What was a feat has become almost a fad.

Circumnavigators in recent years have included Bernard Moitessier, a Frenchman, on the last lap of a singlehanded around-the-world race when he decided the hell with it and kept on going around Africa, finally coming ashore in Tahiti.

Robin Graham probably is the youngest soloist, having set off from California at 16 and finishing at 20 — married and with a contract from National Geographic.

Then there was the boatload of Kiwis from New Zealand who after seven rollicking years had only made it to South Africa. Where they really wanted to be, they decided, was back in their favorite bar in the world — in Colombia. They reversed course 6,500 miles across the Atlantic to celebrate Christmas there.

Magellan only proved what many scientists had long posited. A scientist named Eratosthenes in Alexandria declared in the third century B.C. that not only was the world round but that its circumference was 25,000 miles, almost the actual figure.

Magellan, of course, didn't finish his historic trip although he did recross his course from an earlier voyage. He was killed in the Philippines by unfriendly natives, a peril Slocum prepared for by spreading tacks on his deck before he slept.

Juan Sebastian del Cano completed Magellan's expedition, arriving back in Spain on what he calculated was a Sunday. But he heard no church bells. It was Monday. Del Cano had discovered the international date line, an horological necessity that puts circumnavigators a day out of step, at the very least, with the rest of us.

Since there are no toll booths on the high seas it is impossible to determine how many yachtsmen are trailing in Magellan's wake. But flags of the world's nations, including landlocked Switzerland, are commonplace in popular stopoffs like Tahiti or the Caribbean.

Some circumnavigators sink from sight, literally, victims of storms, reefs or pirates.

There are other but more ubiquitous hazards. Boredom, for one. The Leahys — she was a Wall Street stock analyst, he a clothing importer before they decided to cash in and check out — have a four-shelf bookcase in their cabin lined three deep with paperbacks. Often the first question a circumnavigator asks on stepping ashore is not "Where's the shower?" but "Got any paperbacks to swap?"

For most circumnavigators the enemy is routine. Guarding against sail chafe. Deciding which cans to open for dinner, providing the labels haven't come off. Keeping the sextant clean. Trying to remember where you stowed what.

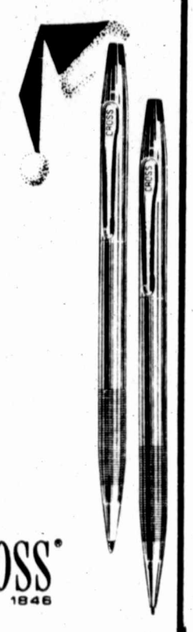

Those moored to a permanent paycheck may wonder how these wanderers can afford it. Generally, living is cheaper at sea than on land. The wind, notes Dan Leahy, is free. There are no property taxes, no phones or cars to support, no school bills, no plumbers' bills. By necessity, circumnavigators become jacks of all trades.

Arlo Nish, a onetime fisherman, sold his share in a contracting business, rented his home in San Leandro, Calif., took his three kids out of school and has been at sea almost two years aboard his 65-foot ketch Sonic. His wife, Marty, became the school teacher.

But mouths still have to be fed. In St. Thomas, Marty shopped at an American supermarket for the first time in almost two years. She rang up a bill of $3,000.

When his coffers run low, Leo, a French Canadian who has been at sea more than a decade, makes port and heads for the nearest hotel. Leo can teach both diving and dancing.

Time comes to define quality of French, American bubbly

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Champagne gives brilliance to the eyes without flushing the face," said the Marquise de Pompadour, mistress of Louis XV. But the phrase "American champagne" will flush the face of any vintner of Epernay. He'll tell you there's no such thing and launch into a lesson about "the real thing."

By MORT ROSENBLUM

EPERNAY, France (AP) — If it's not from the chalky hills of Champagne where Dom Perignon himself lies buried in a church nave — it's not the real thing, vintners here insist, and they want the world to know it.

Around here, "California champagne" is fightin' words.

"I do not mean to speak ill of U.S. domestic wines," says Christian Pol Roger, a fourthgeneration bubble baron, "but it is time to call a chicken a chicken, and a pheasant a pheasant."

Champagne is a small district east of Paris and, by international agreement, only bubbly wine from a snakeshaped tract of 75,000 acres can bear its name. But the United States was excluded from the agreement because it took place during Prohibition.

"It's theft, pure and simple," snorts Etienne Lanson, a maker of fine champagne in nearby Reims. "We don't make Cadillacs or whisky — why must Americans call their sparkling wine champagne?"

The Champagne Producers Association has been fighting to get that point across. It is particularly difficult in the United States where the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco allows winemakers to call champagne anything which has the same characteristics as the real thing.

"Alas, we have no recourse," says Joseph Dargent, association spokesman. "All we can do is try to educate the world that there is a difference."

So far, it has been an uphill fight. Last year France exported 4 million bottles of champagne to the United States; sales of domestic sparkling wine — three to four times cheaper — were about 90 million bottles.

Visitor-research project gains Texas State Chamber's approval

W. H. "Bill" Collyns of Midland, left, president of the Texas State Chamber of Commerce, views a design submitted by Rod Baughn of San Marcos for a proposed desert visitor facility and research complex to be built in West Texas.

AUSTIN — Directors of the Texas State Chamber of Commerce, meeting here recently, gave official endorsement to a project to construct a major visitor-research complex in the Alpine, Marfa, Fort Davis, Fort Stockton area.

The facility, which is expected to attract several hundred thousand visitors to West Texas annually, is proposed by the Alpine-based Chihuahuan Desert Research Institute, which has been working on the project for several years in connection with its program of desert research.

W. H. "Bill" Collyns of Midland, president of the Texas State Chamber, said the group went on record in support of the project because of its enormous potential to provide educational and esthetic enrichment to the citizens of the state as well as to generate a positive ecnomic impact on West Texas.

The concept for the proposed complex being developed by the CDRI is similar to that of the far-famed Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum near Tucson, Ariz. Neither a museum nor a zoo, the facility will offer visitors a day-long adventure into the desert through a series of displays, multi-media shows and extraordinary animal habitat exhibits — all within a 40-acre complex located on 640 acres of land. A CDRI site committee presently is evaluating several possible locations.

A preliminary design concept for the desert facility was unveiled before project officials in Midland last month by designer Rod Baughn, president of Environmental Concepts of San Marcos. The Baughn plan features a park where visitors will be able to make an unobtrusive entrance into the world of desert animals, observing them in their natural habitat through viewing points arranged in underground tunnels and in surface enclosures constructed to resemble the animals' natural surroundings.

The desert facility will include, in addition to animal displays, an arboretum of native plants, together with various geological, meteorological and anthropological exhibits, all designed to immerse the visitor in the full richness of the desert experience.

The project is being funded by contributions and grants from private foundations, organizations, business firms and individuals from all over the state.

In endorsing the CDRI facility, the State Chamber pointed out that this unique attraction, with its entertaining and informative exhibits featuring the natural history and ecology of the desert region of Texas, will engender in visitors from all over the world an appreciation of the beauty and heritage of one of our state's most important and spectacular natural resources.

CIA documents spur anti-nuclear effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ralph Nader organization, citing newly obtained CIA documents on an alleged nuclear accident in the Soviet Union, says U.S. nuclear plant construction should be stopped until safety can be studied further.

The Critical Mass Energy Project made public Friday a series of documents dealing with the incident, which occurred in the southern Ural Mountains in 1958.

The group said the documents lend new credence to earlier unsubstantiated accounts of the incident, which reportedly killed scores of people and exposed thousands to radiation.

Robert Pollock, the project director, said the documents should "force this nation to pause and reflect on decisions being made today to accelerate the expansion of nuclear power in this country."

He said Congress should impose a moratorium on nuclear plant construction in the United States until study has determined that this country's nuclear power program is safe. A bill calling for such a moratorium is pending in Congress.

The CIA released the documents as a result of a suit the group brought under the Freedom of Information Act.

Pollock said it was "incredible that the U.S. government decided to suppress information about accidents that related to nuclear power systems in other countries for over 20 years".

The CIA released only 14 of 29 documents the Nader group had sought. The other 15 and portions of the released 14 were withheld for national security reasons.

In the documents, CIA informants painted a grim picture of the apparent accident at Kyshtym, a rural town on the Asian side of the Ural Mountains not far the industrial center of Chelyabinsk. Apparently, however, none witnessed the incident first-hand.

The document say an apparent nuclear explosion killed scores of Kyshtym townspeople and turned a 60-square-mile area into a "vast nothing."

The documents did not make it clear whether the incident involved a nuclear power plant or a nuclear waste storage site. Also unanswered was the question of whether the blast involved a military or civilian complex.

A CIA document written last March about the Kyshtym incident said:

"About 100 kilometers from Sverdlovsk (about 100 miles north of Kyshtym), we crossed a strange, uninhabited and unfarmed area. Highway signs along the way warned drivers not to stop for the next 20 to 30 kilometers because of radiation.

"The land was empty. There were no villages, no towns, no people, no cultivated land; only the chimneys of destroyed houses remained."

The Nader group said the Soviet Union had concentrated a number of nuclear reactors in the region, adding that the CIA first learned of the incident in a teletype report received May 23, 1958.

Happiness is serving

Millions of Americans, quite naturally, are happy for many and varied reasons during the Thanksgiving season, but, as always, the happiest are the ones who are doing something good for others.

One of the happiest groups surely must have been the sponsors of the Thanksgiving-fest held early last week at Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish Center, where Thanksgiving meals were provided for more than 1,000 persons who otherwise would have missed out on the traditional turkey dinner.

This is a marvelous project, indeed, one which makes the Tall City stand even taller.

And in addition to the meals served at the Center, more than 200 meals were delivered throughout the community to persons unable to attend because of age, illness or other handicaps.

The Eastside Lions Club, Midland College, Lady of Guadalupe Church, Casa de Amigos and a number of individuals furnished buses, vans and cars to transport persons to and from the feast and to deliver meals.

Congratulations certainly are in order for all those persons and groups who had a hand in planning, arranging and staging this tremendous undertaking. It brought a lot of happiness to a lot of people, including all those who were involved in the project.

Other such events undoubtedly were staged over the nation, spreading happiness at this season of Thanksgiving.

There is one person in Chicago, Ill., who is bound to have been exceptionally happy inside for a project all his own.

He is Matt Deletioglu, a Chicago North Side restaurant owner, who served more than 600 needy persons free turkey dinners in his cafe.

"I'm one happy Turk today," he said after all of his guests had been fed. "The cost to me was about $4,000, but that I don't think about. It's the happiness I feel inside for doing something for someone and making a lot of friends. I used to be a lonely man on holidays. No more."

It was the second annual free Thanksgiving dinner given by the native of Turkey, who became a United States citizen last year. He has no family himself.

The sign painted on his restaurant window invited the homeless, poor, elderly and otherwise needy persons who had no other place to go, to eat a free turkey dinner as his guest.

It's wonderful that here in Midland and in cities and towns across the land there are those persons and groups who can and do share generously with others on this great and meaningful strictly American observance of Thanksgiving.

Peccins would do it

R.L. "Bob" Vickery, writing in a recent issue of The Salem, Mo., News, of which he is publisher, recalled the hullabaloo caused a few years ago by the thousands of birds hovering near the Missouri state capitol at Jefferson City.

"Now," he wrote, "the squirrels are causing trouble across from the White House in Washington.

And despite the interest of the building's present occupant in peanuts, it seems that those nuts are a poor lure in efforts to capture the animals to move them elsewhere. Problems. Problems."

We might suggest that some of the tasty, large, soft-shelled West Texas pecans, preferably some produced in Midland County, be used if the White House folks really are interested in luring the fat, smart squirrels. The West Texas pecans undoubtedly are the favorable delicacy for which the D.C. squirrels have been waiting.

Showing the shah

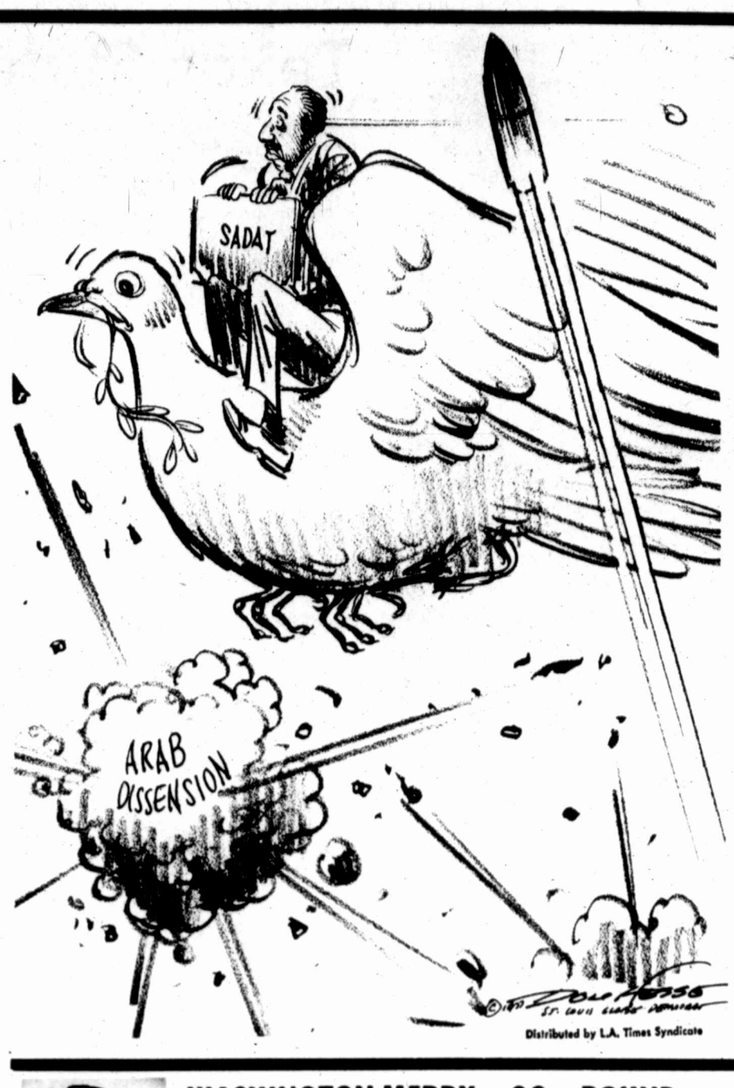

It is hoped that the Shah of Iran got the message in Washington.

Tear gas and all, his visit showed what Americans are willing to put up with for the sake of freedom of expression.

The Washington police had one assignment — to protect demonstrators from each other and to guarantee the personal safety of the shah and his party.

We can regret the incidents which occurred, but Americans need not apologize for giving the shah's opponents a chance to stage their demonstration.

INSIDE REPORT:

Sadat back home in Cairo: little praise

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGION — President Anwar Sadat's glorious reception back in Cairo last Monday conclusively proved that he had read the Egyptian mood correctly, but the real test has not yet come: how much Menahem Begin finally will give Sadat in return for his courageous visit.

Before arriving in Jerusalem last week, Sadat was quietly laying plans to appear in triumph before his parliament at the earliest possible moment to reveal to his own citizens what had led him to Jerusalem in one of history's most celebrated peace missions. When he actually got back to Cairo, he set the date for Saturday, Nov. 26, the sixth day after his return.

That's because Sadat came home Monday with little more than the echo of emotional words of praise and the memory of thousands of tear-stained Israeli faces that paid him homage. Beyond the flags and the tributes, Prime Minister Begin apparently offered little of substance. He carefully balanced Sadat's demand for the return of Arab territory ("our land is sacred") with exactly the same words to explain Israel's decision not to return to the 1967 borders. "May I say," Begin told Sadat, "our land is sacred."

Just before the visit to Jerusalem, Mideast experts here feared that unless Sadat made quick, substantive gains from his journey he would face not only escalation of anti-Sadat emotions throughout the militant Arab world; he also would be courting disaster at home. Economic grievances, particularly the inflation of food prices and monstrous unemployment among young college graduates, are ready-made for political exploitation against Sadat.

But Sadat gained elbow room by emphasizing, in his talks with Begin, problems of all Arab nations with grievances against Israel. That underemphasized both Egypt and a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace. This approach made possible the euphoric welcome to Sadat in Cairo.

More important were breaks in the ranks of Arab states that had been keeping discreet silence. Jordan, now politically tied to Syria more closely than ever before, broke its silence with a modest pat on Sadat's back for daring to go to Israel despite anti-Sadat fury in Damascus.

Sadat's success so far is maintaining an image of great popularity at home and limiting anti-Sadat damage in the Arab world could disappear overnight if he has to acknowledge to his parliament that Israel gave him nothing in return. That risk, and the reasons for Sadat taking it in the decisions which led him to Jerusalem, puzzle both American officials and Arab diplomats here.

The complete answer may not be known for many months. But the prevailing view is that Sadat had just about given up on the Carter administration's efforts to extract real concessions from Prime Minister Begin. He was, in short, at the end of his patience. Nor was Sadat, the Egyptian patriot who ordered Russian military advisers out of his country in 1972, pleased at the new prominence given Moscow's re-entry into the Middle East in the Oct. 1 U.S.-Soviet joint statement.

This go-it-alone mood of frustration and worry led Sadat to make his bold declaration of independence at his farewell Jerusalem press conference on Monday.

Pointing to his "strained relations" with Moscow, Sadat said he worried that anti-Egyptian Soviet conduct "could be adopted in Geneva" where the Russians are co-chairmen with the U.S. "Whenever we, the (Arab and Israeli) parties concerned, reach an agreement, no one, big power or small power, can prevent us from fulfilling it inasmuch as we have agreed to it."

Carter administration officials say this simply underlined Sadat's persistent skepticism of returning to a Geneva conference not carefully prepared in advance. But they may be underestimating Sadat. Kept completely in the dark every step of Sadat's course to Jerusalem, the Carter administration has demonstrated a conspicuous ignorance about the president of Egypt.

Thus, the harsher view of Sadat's apparent declaration of independence may be the correct one: without disowning a reconvened Geneva conference, Sadat's trip to Jerusalem declared Egypt's independence not only from his Arab partners, but from his American friends. In Cairo's view, the U.S. has repeatedly proved its inability to deliver on promises to Egypt when Israel stands in the way.

To gain from this declaration of independence, however, Sadat must sooner or later be able to show his country why his journey to Jerusalem was undertaken. In short, he must show how it will help Egypt — plus Syria, Jordan and Lebanon — find the elusive peace he has promised, and that takes some help from Mr. Begin.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Aftermath of the shah's visit

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It has been 10 days since the shah of Iran concluded his spectacular Washington visit. He left behind a battleground of litter that cost $20,000 to clean and military requests that will cost nearly $8 million to fill.

He also left behind two quiet investigations — one by the Justice Department, the other by a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee. The shah's supporters were flown by the planeloads into Washington where they were furnished hotel accommodations and pocket money. The investigators want to know whether the mysterious benefactors violated federal law by failing to register as foreign agents.

It night be more instructive, however, if the investigators could determine the source of the shah's remarkable influence in Washington. No other sovereign customer has wangled so much military equipment out of the United States. Now he has asked the Pentagon to bolster his military forces with additional jet fighters, radar planes, military transport planes and patrol boats.

All this has antagonized neighboring Saudi Arabia, whose oil has become essential to the well-being of all Americans. Yet Washington invariably has favored the shah over the more indispensable, more reliable Saudis. What is all the more amazing, he has succeeded without the backstage backing of an ethnic pressure group such as supports Israel or an "Iran Lobby" such as promotes Nationalist China.

Under Democrats and Republicans alike, the White House has pampered the shah, the Pentagon has attended to his wants and the State Department has been devoted to him. As for the Central Intelligence Agency, it has positively adored him.

We have conducted an investigation, for example, of the strange relationship between the shah end ex-CIA chief Richard Helms. It began in Switzerland where the shah and Helms attended LeRosey preparatory school. The shah was then a weak, whining prince bullied by a cruel, domineering father; Helms was a thin-blooded, elegant-mannered son of aristocrats.

During World War II, the elder shah demonstrated an unfortunate preference for the Nazis. The allies duly deposed him and deposited his 21-year-old son on the throne. Helms, meanwhile, became a top official of the CIA, which in 1953 arranged a coup against Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossedegh and saved the young shah's throne.

The handsome Helms belonged to the sophisticated, old-school crowd which ran the CIA. He became the CIA director about the time that a colleague, Joseph Farland, became U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan. Farland was short and solid, with a deep voice, greying hair and a square jaw. He dressed precisely and projected the image of the FBI agent he once was.

At Islamabad, Farland met almost daily with Gen. Yahya Khan, then the military dictator. Through him, Farland helped Henry Kissinger through the bamboo curtain and provided a cover for Kissinger's secret, historic visit to Peking.

After Yahya's government collapsed, Farland was assigned as a reward to be ambassador to Iran. He had scarcely settled down at his new post when Helms suddenly found himself in need of a refuge from prying Senate investigators. It isn't everyone who will accept a CIA chief as an ambassador. But the shah was glad to welcome his former schoolmate and CIA benefactor.

Witnesses have told us that Farland was "greatly amazed" and "grief-stricken" at being removed and replaced by Helms. His abrupt departure was so "emotional," according to our sources, that he was moved to tears.

Once installed in Iran, Helms behaved as if he were representing the shah, rather than the American people. The U.S. embassy in Tehran began functioning virtually as a branch office of the Iranian government.

In 1973, for example, the shah was preparing for a trip to the United States. He hinted to Helms that he did not wish to be dogged by demonstrators wearing masks and waving signs. Helms dutifully fired off a classified cable to the State Department relaying the shah's suggestion "that we tidy up as much as possible anti-Shah elements in U.S."

Helms also asked the State Department to determine whether an anti-shah newspaper in Washington could be closed down. The department's lawyers researched the question and determined that the publisher, Nasser Afshar, was an American citizen protected by the First Amendment.

The lawyers advised Helms, however, that the mailing of the newspaper to the embassy could be stopped if the recipients wrote "refuse to accept" on the envelopes. Embassy sources report that Helms, consulting no one, made the unilateral decision that none of his employees should read the offending newspaper. Thereafter all copies were returned unopened, each identically stamped: "Refused by addressee. Return to sender."

The shah regulated in other ways what Helms' employees could read about the shah. In 1975-76, for example, the CIA's classified background reports one repression in Iran became increasingly critical. Suddenly, their distribution to embassy officials who had been reading them regularly was cut off.

In our July 11, 1975, column, we cited an unflattering CIA psychological profile of the shah, portraying him as a brilliant but dangerous megalomaniac. Helms "exploded." when he read the column, according to sources who were present. Thereafter he would not allow the column to be circulated among the staff.

Helms finally resigned as ambassador to Iran on Jan. 31, 1977. He told colleagues at the embassy that he was leaving "to make some money." He returned to Washington to take his lumps for lying to the Senate earlier about the CIA's involvement in Chilean politics.

Last month, he quietly opened a "consulting" firm in Washington.

NICK THIMMESCH

Houston meet: an aberration of democratic process

WASHINGTON — The federally funded National Women's Conference was no place for a man. Nor for any poor soul who yearns for fairness in this vale of tears or for democratic procedures.

Rather, it is a classic case of a militant minority imposing its will on the majority — the American public, in this instance — and making it pay money for the experience.

It isn't so important that the Houston delegates rubber-stamped an action plan for ERA, abortion-on-demand, lesbian rights and government-controlled child-care centers. It is important that these highly debatable questions were endorsed under the rigged auspices of the federal government at a cost of more than $5 million to taxpayers.

While it is doubtful that the Houston proclamations truly represent the national will at this time, that argument can be put aside for a more important matter: Namely, the need for taxpayers to raise hell with those gigolo congressmen who fund this kind of authoritarianism.

As one who once served on a presidential commission, I know how single-minded staffers devise "action plans," arrange for witnesses sympathetic to those plans to appear before the hapless commission and try to ram through their viewpoint.

It doesn't always work, but it evidently did in this episode. Militant feminists bamboozled Presidents Ford and Carter, and Congress as well, to back "women's rights" (motherhood and the Flag are now obsolete shibboleths), though their real purpose was to win government blessings for controversial, partisan and minority views.

In July, 1976, eight months before the first state conference on women was held, a national commission published the manual that yet-to-be-elected delegates were to follow — or else. It was titled "To Form a More Perfect Union" and included arguments for virtually all the controversial issues ultimately rubber-stamped in Houston.

In early 1977, President Carter, probably to salve an old political enemy, appointed Bella Abzug to head the commission running the Houston show. That act was a green light for militants across the land to stampede the state conferences, using muscle tactics to reduce so-called traditional women to minimal or no-representation status on state delegations.

The militants used dirty tricks that would have made Watergate villains blush. In Florida they cut off nominations of traditionalist women. In Michigan they used questionable floor maneuvers to do the same. In Kansas militant bosses of the conference shut the doors to a crowd of opponents, claiming erroneously that their presence would violate fire ordinances.

In North Carolina women voted for delegates on a Saturday, afternoon only to be informed by militants late that night that the election would have to be held again because one name was missing from the ballot. By then many traditionalist women had either left or were leaving for home to be with their families the next day — Father's Day. Naturally, in the election rerun, the militants won it all.

Just as revolutionaries use the shock of political theater to intimidate moderate sorts, so militant feminists did in Hawaii and California to show and frighten off "nice" ladies. In Honolulu feminists staged a program in which women in leotards performed simulated lesbian sexual acts in a pay toilet. At the California conference dildoes, vibrators, mini-abortion kits and books on the joys of masturbation were exhibited to attendees — all to show how women could become sexually independent of men. Well, if Bella Abzug wants to use her own plentiful supply of money to pay for this exhibitionism that's all right. But why should taxpayers be stuck for it?

To make sure the rubber stamp couldn't be vanquished, Abzug and her fellow commission members, including Jean O'Leary, co-chief of the National Gay Task Force, were careful in their mandated selection of 400 at-large delegates to pick an overwhelming majority sharing their views. For tokenism they also chose a black, Dr. Mildred Jefferson, chairman of the National Right-to-Life Committee and a distinguished professor of medicine.

Finally, in the best sharp-politics fashion, the militants trotted out the wives of Presidents Johnson, Ford and Carter — an unwitting array of dupes — to bless their conference, Middle America style.

Here's some scolding for the press. Why did editors send mostly feminists to cover Houston when the editorial requirement surely called for the dispatch of some H.L. Mencken types? Sending feminist journalists to Houston only padded the cheering section, and most of the coverage showed it.

No matter. I don't care whether ERA is ratified or not. The issue here is whether federal money should be used to support a partisan cause.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Surprised GOP brass agree Clements a serious governor candidate

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican gubernatorial primaries in Texas usually have the same aura of excitement and intense public interest as intercollegiate soccer matches — i.e., there's just not much of either, except among the rather limited group of insiders who follow such activities.

It doesn't require any great analysis to explain why, either. Nomination in the Democratic primary has been tantamount to election for over a century in this state, and the pattern shows no great direction of change.

Of course, Republicans have become somewhat more respectable — being one is no longer equivalent to moral turpitude, even though in some areas there is a lingering suspicion that members of the GOP may eat their young.

That's why among political observers, the announcement by Dallas oil well drilling contractor, former deputy defense secretary, and staunch Republican William P. "Bill" Clements Jr., that he will seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination came as something of a minor bombshell.

It's been no secret for months that former state representative and GOP chairman Ray Hutchison of Dallas, would be making his announcement (expected around the end of this month) for the GOP's spot opposing the winner of the Democratic primary.

Hutchison, well liked and respected by his colleagues in the House, likely would prove a good campaigner, a good speaker, but ultimately, a good loser against whichever Democrat is nominated — for such is the nature of politics in the Lone Star State.

So what's prompting Clements — who is, after all, hardly a household name in Texas — to make the race?

Clements says — with undoubted sincerity — that he feels the current administration hasn't fought hard enough to protect the oil and gas industry, which makes up such an important segment of the state's economy.

Republican Party officials, however, appeared as surprised as most other folks by Clement's decision.

Is Clements a serious candidate? Yes, indeed, they agree.

Is he a threat to Ray Hutchison? Or would he be a threat to the Democratic nominee. Well, that's another matter, they say.

Clements, they feel, is most closely connected with the "powers that were" in the state GOP in the 1960s — and he will have to build up his recognition with the party rank and file, and with many of the party leaders, as well as with Texas voters in general.

But the same observers feel Clements also will have access to considerable amounts of money. And he's a millionaire in his own right, although Clements has indicated he expects to spend only a nominal amount of his own funds in his planned multi-million dollar campaign.

Moreover, Clements has contacts with the GOP stalwarts who were in Washington during the Nixon and Ford years, while he was serving in the Department of Defense.

Those include such familiar names as former CIA head and United Nations Ambassador George Bush, and Ambassador Anne Armstrong — who are believed to have encouraged Clements to make the race.

Another asset Clements has is in the person of his wife, the former Rita Bass, who served for several years as GOP national committeewoman.

Meanwhile, GOP circles are wondering if Henry "Hank" Grover of Houston will get into the race as well.

Grover last ran in 1972, but was a factor in the 1974 race up to the filing deadline, they say, and the same thing might result if he "jumps out of the weeds," as one phrased it.

But whatever happens, chances are that Clements and Hutchison (and perhaps Grover) will concentrate most of their Public punches at incumbent Dolph Briscoe — even though GOP primaries tend to end up in bitter name-calling matches which make it even harder for the GOP to mount an assault on long-held Democratic strongholds.

But Clements intends to try — even though the odds are long, long, long against him.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Reform costing still more

By ROBERT H. WILLIAMS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Reform, if you'll pardon the expression, in Congress has come around to its usual end — costing the taxpayers more. In 1976, the House made allowances for members interchangeable, so that if, for instance, you didn't need all your travel cash you could use it for stationery or "constituent communications," the new code phrase for incumbent re-election gimmicks like newsletters and videotapes and such.

It's all gotten so complex that some members have gone out and hired accountants to keep their allowances straight. Do you believe that? Then believe this: the accountants have been put on the members' payrolls. Want proof? Ask ledgerman Joe Stanley Huckaby, a Tennessean, who has collected $4,249 from Reps. John Rousselot of California, $3,000 from Robin Beard of Tennessee, $3,000 from Trent Lott of Mississippi, $1,472 from Don Young of Alaska and $869 from Eldon Rudd of Arizona. These are all Republicans.

The Clean Water Act has been mucked up beyond belief, the ecocrowd will be quick to tell you, by what one lobbyist called the Senate's "gutless cave-in' to the House in a last-minute flurry of compromises in which federal water projects were exempted from permit requirements, industries were given exemptions from some cleanup deadlines, a Great Lakes phosphate ban was dropped and other horror stories. But wait! How does this jibe with a saccharine (if you'll pardon that expression, too) letter from Jim Banks, lawyer for the Natural Resources Defense Council, thanking Ed Muskie and Jennings Randolph for their "unyielding support of a strong Clean Water Act ... The conference agreement retains the basic strength of the act despite enormous pressure exerted by industry..." Etcetera. Ed's press secretary was the one who distributed the letter to reporters.

Enough of that. You all read in the super-expensive National Journal about Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr.'s press secretary resigning because Sen. Lowell P. was using staffers to move the furniture of the senator's bride. Now, for the first time in print, you are reading the story of a former press secretary who said "What the hell am I doing?" one day when he found himself, again, mowing the lawn of who? Sen. Robert C. Byrd? Well.

That was history. This is gossip. You know how sometimes you're chattering along with the jukebox playing and then suddenly it stops and you string out a whole phrase for God and everybody to hear? Yeah, well it happened to Jody Powell over at the One Step Down one recent night, with a couple of unidentified fellow sippers at the bar, and his wafting words went like this: " ... Those are the people who are really hurting us. We've just got to get control of that operation ..." Naturally, that's when the music started again.

That was gossip. This is lunacy. Do you know where the energy war is being fought and lost? Right over in the Old Executive Office Building, next door to the White House. The heating system can't be adjusted properly, so when the heat is on, the radiators work overtime. And there, recently sat an aide to Himself, suffering from the heat while his window air conditioners tried, at full blast but in vain, to cool the room.

And here comes yet another terribly bright idea from the terribly bright Joan Mondale, AKA Mrs. Veep. She's apparently run out of bandages to roll, and is trying to become a heavy in the art world, and wants kiddies all over the country to send Uncle Sam their stories, artwork, poetry, photographs and baloney like that. See, she says, "The administration intends to offer active leadership in promoting the arts," and "There is no question that when the arts are combined with other subjects in a general curriculum, the arts improve the perceptions, attitudes, understandings and motivations of children."

"On the other hand, it could solve our fuel shortage-"

POSITIVE THINKING

How to handle your own mistakes

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

The young man slumped in my office chair. "What's the use?" he said dejectedly. "I'm a flop. Once I had lots of hopes and plans, but that's a laugh now. Everything has gone haywire for me. I've flubbed everything by my stupid mistakes. Nobody will ever believe in me any more."

So ran his defeatism. He fell silent, then sighed, "And that isn't the worst of it, I guess I've lost faith in myself."

At 29 he had been dropped from a good firm for making a serious mistake in a responsibility assigned him.

"Why did I do it?" He cried in miserable futility. "I had the chance of a lifetime with that outfit. I've blown the best opportunity I will ever have. Why did I do such a stupid thing? What's the matter with me?"

"Better fall back on the old philosophy," I reminded him, "and, 'Don't cry over spilt milk.'"

Who doesn't make mistakes? But the greatest error of all is to let any mistake destroy your faith in yourself. The only sensible course is to study and analyze why you made the mistake. Learn all you can from it, then forget it and go ahead. Figure on doing better next time.

It is very important in life to learn how to make fewer mistakes. For example, I told this young man about that day years ago when a rookie batter just up from the minor leagues, made three extra-base hits off the great pitcher, Christy Mathewson. The young player was elated; he had all but knocked the old master from the box. As he strode triumphantly to the clubhouse after tha game, a verteran player fell into step alongside him. "Did you carefully notice what balls Christy threw you?" he asked.

"Oh, no," flippantly replied the youngster. "I paid no attention. I just hit 'em."

"Well," replied the other, "you can be sure Christy will remember. He made a mistake in the pitches he gave you today, but he won't make that same mistake again. He'll remember, and he won't let today's bad time get him down, either."

According to the story, that batter never again got an extra-base hit off Mathewson. The famed pitcher carefully analyzed his mistakes and learned profitable lessons from them. Perhaps his technique for dealing with mistakes helped build his amazing career.

I made another suggestion to this young man who, because he had made a mistake and lost a good opportunity, was so deeply discouraged. I told him that years ago I was a newspaper reporter for an outstanding editor, my old friend, the late Grove Patterson of the Toledo Blade. Mr. Patterson's editorials were human and kindly and wise. I happened to have one of them on my desk and read it to this dejected young man.

The editorial is called "Water Under the Bridge," and here are a few lines from it. "A boy, a long time ago, leaned against the railing of a bridge and watched the current of the river below. A log, a bit of driftwood, a chip floated past. Again the surface of the river was smooth. But always, as it had for a hundred, perhaps a thousand, perhaps a million years, the water slipped by, under the bridge. Sometimes the current went more swiftly, and again quite slowly. But always the river flowed on, under the bridge.

"Watching the river that day the boy made a discovery. It was not the discovery of a material thing, something he might put his hand upon. He could not even see it. He had discovered an idea. Quite suddenly, and yet quietly, he knew that everything in his life would some day pass under the bridge and be gone, like water. And the boy came to like those words, 'under the bridge.'

"And he didn't worry unduly about the mistakes after that, and he certainly didn't let them get him down — because it was water under the bridge."

When I finished reading that sensible piece the young man sat silently, lost in deep thought. Finally, he pulled himself erect. "O.K." he said, and there was a new tone in his voice. "I get the idea — one mistake or a dozen mistakes can't lick me. I'll get it back — my faith in myself."

I am glad to report that he successfully wove that mistake into the pattern of a successful life.

Why Neiman-Marcus came to capital

WASHINGTON — Neiman-Marcus, the Texas-based department store which has a reputation of catering to oil and cattle millionaires, has just opened in Washington, D.C.

This is no accident according to Feinbaum, a friend of many years.

"Mr. Neiman and Mr. Marcus know where the money is these days."

"But the people who work for the government in Washington just don't appear to be the types that Neiman-Marcus would cater to."

"Neiman and Marcus weren't thinking about government employees when they decided to open here. They were thinking about all the people who work around the government. Washington dispenses $450 billion a year. There are a lot of guys in this town who work for a piece of that pie."

"Such as?"

"Lawyers, for one. There are enough lawyers in Washington to support 10 Neiman-Marcuses — or I should say lawyers' wives.

"Then there are lobbyists. They're always looking for something different to buy a friend in the House or the Senate. I read somewhere that Neiman and Marcus are pushing a jogging suit lined with ermine for 10 grand. You give somebody an ermine jogging suit and he'll never forget you."

"I'd love one for myself," I admitted.

"Then you have all the foreign embassies in this town. I hear South Korea opened up 100 charge accounts before the store was even built.

"And don't forget the wives of doctors. They'll go to Neiman-Marcus at the drop of a fur hat."

"I forgot the doctors' wives," I said.

"This town is also loaded with real estate moguls who construct the buildings the government keeps ordering to house all the new departments that keep cropping up.

"These real estate moguls work long hours and their wives get very unhappy sitting around doing nothing. Some of them are mad at their husbands for spending so much time away from home. But now the wives can get even by going to Neiman-Marcus and buying out the place."

"Only Neiman and Marcus would have thought of the wives of real-estate moguls," I said.

"And let's not forget the girlfriends in this town. As you know political power is one of the greatest aphrodisiacs. But no one can live by sex alone. A nice piece of jewelry can really keep a Washington romance from going stale."

"Neiman-Marcus should use that in their ads."

"And finally, you have to remember that every head of state eventually comes to Washington. They can't go back to their countries empty-handed. One visit to the Washington Neiman-Marcus by the King of Saudi Arabia is equal to an entire Christmas season in Dallas."

"You forgot the wives of the military-industrial complex," I said.

"Now you're talking about megabucks," Feinbaum said. "They make Texas oil money look like rotten potatoes."

"Well, I guess Neiman and Marcus knew what they were doing when they opened a branch in the nation's capital."

"You can bet your sweet life on that. When you have a city responsible for $450 billion, some of it has to rub off on the lingerie department of a fancy specialty store."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Apology asked

To The Editor:

Somewhere in Thursday's paper, between the ads, pictures of advertisers' front doors, ads, advertising inserts, ads, a major article advising Midlanders on how to prevent sledding accidents when their children open gifts containing their brand new sleds, ads, full-color advertising supplements, and ads, I found a news story of some interest. It seems that a major federal agency has stopped using the U.S. Postal Service because of 1,400 missing or destroyed letters.

I now apologize to the U.S. Postal Service for the comments I expressed to my wife upon reading of this disgrace; I was deceived by the Newsday News Service and The Reporter-Telegram. Reading further in the story, I found that what the Postal Service lost was ONE PARCEL containing 1,400 questionnaires.

May I have an apology from The The Reporter-Telegram? You may act as your conscience dictates regarding the U.S. Postal Service and Newsday.

Point clarified

To The Editor:

I read with interest your recent editorial comments on the Tuition Tax Credit Act introduced by Senator Moynihan and myself.

There is, however, one extremely significant point brought up in your editorial that should be clarified. As drafted, our proposal allows a credit to be taken for tuition paid solely to tax-exempt private elementary and secondary schools (501(c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code — not all private elementary and secondary schools. As you may be aware, these tax exempt schools must not only be non-profit, but also comply with strict federal non-discriminatory policies as well. In fact, current Internal Revenue Service procedures require these schools to:

1 — Operate all their programs and facilities in a racially non-discriminatory manner;

2 — Make their racially non-discriminatory policy known to all segments of the general community served by the school; and

3 — Offer all scholarships and loans on a racially non-discriminatory basis.

It is our understanding that the IRS currently is actively enforcing this policy with regard to these institutions.

I thought it might be of interest to you that Senator Moynihan and I share your strong concerns over possible racial abuse and drafted our bill accordingly. If I can provide any further information, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Letter disgusting

To The Editor:

The letter sent by the Beal family to George Bush was disgusting, to say the least. The letter was interesting, but not positive nor good. Their form of low-key blackmail is hostile and repulsive to any clear-thinking person. If George Bush has any sense, he will return the checks and the letter with a two-word reply: Cram it.

Validity of surveys coming under attack

By DANIEL S. GREENBERG
Special to The Washington Post

Seven out of 10 Americans think this or that.

How do we know?

It was reported in a "scientific survey."

On the basis of surveys, political postures are taken, the stock market fluctuates and government policies are formulated.

But is the present-day survey boom — businesses and government agencies commission them by the thousands — really providing a picture of reality? Is faith warranted in the use of methods that, increasingly, are called on by politics, government and business to difine what it is that people think, do and plan to do? Surveys routinely peer into attitudes on presidential performance, abortion, religious devotion, work satisfaction, child-raising practices, housing requirements. And, in all cases, it is a tiny sampling, often a few hundred, rarely more than a few thousand, who are relied upon to provide a portrait of the millions. Can we trust these surveys and their presumptions of scientific exactitude?

The answer, according to a disturbing preliminary study to be published next month by the American Statistical Association (ASA), is that a high proportion of survey research sponsored by federal, state and local governments may be so poorly designed and shoddily executed that the results don't merit trust — let alone conversion into policy.

The ASA study, financed by the National Science Foundation, which regularly supports a good deal of university-based survey research, was a pilot effort aimed at evaluating the design and execution of a representative sampling of surveys — 26 by federal agencies and 10 by state and local governments and other organizations. At issue was not the validity of survey techniques; rather, the ASA was looking into the manner in which survey organizations actually apply these techniques. To enlist the cooperation of the sponsors and the contractors that did the surveying for them, anonymity was guaranteed — which turned out to be fortunate for the survey buyers and performers.

Written in prim, nonaccusatory prose by Barbara Bailar of the Bureau of the Census and C. Michael Lanphier of York University, Toronto, the study concluded that 15 of the 26 federal and 7 of the 10 nonfederal surveys were so poorly planned and conducted that, as the authors politely put it, they "did not meet their objectives."

In one of their few critical observations about their findings, the authors stated, "One would hope that survey results bearing on controversial subjects of public policy would include enough evidence to support reported findings, including estimates of uncertainty. This is not generally the case."

The bulk of the surveys they studied flunked on the critical matter of sample design, i.e., the selection of the few respondents who are supposed to represent the mass. A quarter of the federal surveys were found to include "inferences in the final report that could not have been substantiated by the survey results ..." They were also faulted for "no verification of interviewing," which means that no one checked on the authenticity of the returns brought back by the low-paid canvassers that do the actual surveying.

The authors found that when response rates were low among the carefully selected target samples, some surveyors built up the numbers by interviewing "substitutes" of their own selection — an unthinkable contamination of the surveying technique. They concluded, too, that "problems in sampling were pervasive among the 36 surveys, were of profound importance and — worse yet — were unrecognized."

The survey of surveys, which did not include the specialized field of election polling, was originally inspired by a little-known bright spot on the surveying scene: In increasing numbers, survey takers are getting doors slammed in their faces, so often, in fact, that they are getting worried about their ability to function. The ASA attributes these rebuffs to "resentment against government or against business ... dislike of an invasion of privacy ... fear that responses may go into some 'data bank' of personal data ... awareness that some surveys — or some responses — might be used to the respondents' detriment."

All these fears being legitimate, though not applicable to all surveys, it is encouraging to encounter this evidence of good sense among the American people. What would be even cheerier would be to see the press, politics and government applying some skepticism toward a lot of tacky work that too often wins acceptance because it looks "scientific."

Beatle's bird 'won't talk'

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — He was the girl Paul McCartney almost married.

She was loved, hated, envied and admired — all at the same time.

Teen-age girls in mini skirts held all-night vigils outside her house, and chased her down the streets of London screaming. "We love Paul. We love Paul."

It was 1966 and Jane Asher was a Beatle's bird.

Jane Asher, the daughter of a British surgeon and a professional actress since the age of 5, had the unlikely fortune to fall in love with Paul McCartney at the height of Beatlemania. She went through it all — the drugs, the groupies, the hysteria, the meditation trips to India — apparently unscarred.

"She was just 17, you know what I mean ..." Jane Asher was the shy, soft-spoken young English school girl who had been McCartney's companion for over four fab years. But somewhere between the Magical Mystery Tour and Yellow Submarine, the romance ended.

She still won't talk about it.

"I never talk to anyone," Asher said in a telephone interview last week from Twyford, Hampshire, where she is appearing in a new play by C.P. Taylor called "Ophelia."

"I never do interviews. You've really caught me off guard."

Asher is touring England with the Oxford Playhouse Co. and has been active in British theater for the past few years. She is 30, and lives in London with political cartoonist Gerald Scarfe. They have one child, a 3 1-2 year-old daughter named Kate.

"I've been with Gerald six or seven years," she says softly.

Was the break up with McCartney horrible? "Oh no," Asher says quickly, "It wasn't horrible. Everybody has boyfriends they break up with." Yes, but not everybody had a Beatle.

Shop schedules holiday show

The Shop of the Southwest inside Midland's Museum of the Southwest is planning "A Santa Fe Christmas."

It actually will be a Santa Fe "pre-Christmas" event, an event featuring the work of a number of fine craftspeople and artisans from Santa Fe and environs, and elsewhere.

The display of contemporary crafts will open in the museum's Turner Memorial Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Thursday. The show and sale will continue through Dec. 6 during regular museum hours daily.

To be featured in the display here are weavings by Anna Burgess and Nancy and Januz Kozilowski, handblown glass by Charlie Miner, animal boxes by Steve Madsen, fiber baskets by Marge Bardacke, handmade contemporary quilts by Bill and Patty Statham, banners and kites by Ramsey Rose and whimsical ceramic figures by Glen La Fontaine. Handcrafted jewelry and pottery, unusual Christmas ornaments and original toys will also be shown.

Anne Burton of Atlanta has been signed to dance the role of the Sugarplum Fairy in Permian Civic Ballet's annual production of "The Nutcracker." Miss Burton replaces Joyce Cuoco as featured guest artist in the Dec. 8 performance here.

Guest in 'Nutcracker' role

Anne Burton of Atlanta, who danced the Sugarplum Fairy in Permian Civic Ballet's 1974 production of "The Nutcracker," will be in the role here again this season.

Permian Civic's annual presentation of the beloved and colorful Christmas ballet is scheduled for 8 p.m. Dec. 8 in Lee High School auditorium. Season tickets for the festive performance and for PCB's annual "Spring Gala" next March are now on sale. In addition, single admissions for "The Nutcracker" may be purchased in the auditorium lobby on performance evening.

The petite Miss Burton, who has been prima ballerina with the Atlanta Ballet in addition to filling guest engagements with many of the nation's regional and municipal ballet companies, will replace Joyce Cuoco as the featured artist in this year's "Nutcracker" performance. Miss Cuoco, a featured dancer in Germany's famous Stuttgart Ballet, was forced to cancel her appearance with the Permian Civic Ballet company because of contractual commitments to the Stuttgart company.

Miss Burton began ballet studies at age 6 in her native Atlanta, and at age 14 danced her first Sugarplum Fairy with the Atlanta Ballet. At 16, Miss Burton went to New York to study with George Balanchine and subsequently joined the New York City Ballet. As a company member from 1961 to 1963, she went on the company's first tour of the Soviet Union and Europe. She danced in the world premiere production of Balanchine's "Midsummer Night's Dream" in 1962.

Miss Burton enrolled in the University of Utah in 1964 and ultimately received her B.A. degree. During this time she also danced as a soloist in the Utah Ballet, now known as "Ballet West."

Miss Burton's major roles include, in addition to the Sugarplum Fairy, Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet," Swanhilda in "Coppelia," Odette in "Swan Lake," Aurora in the full-length "Sleeping Beauty" and the title role in "Giselle." She has performed principal roles "Le Corsaire" and "Les Sylphides." In Balanchine's "Serenade" and "Symphony in C," and In 1976, she was invited to join Ballet International performs in ternational in London for such famous pas de deux a 52-week engagement as works as "Spring soloist, an invitation Waters," "Don Quixote," which she declined.

PPH to trace heroine's story in performances of 'The Lark'

ODESSA — One of the most fascinating heroines in history, Joan of Arc, the simple maid of Orleans who freed her beloved France of the English invaders and suffered a martyr's death as her reward, is the subject of Permian Playhouse's next production.

"The Lark," French playwright Jean Anouilh's dramatic retelling of The Maid's story, opens at the Playhouse Friday night, with five additional presentations scheduled through Dec. 10. The theater box office, 362-2329, is now accepting seat reservations for all performances. Permian Playhouse is located at 310 W. 42nd St., adjacent to the Ector County Coliseum grounds.

With all the excitement of a courtroom drama, Anouilh's version of the oft-told tale of Joan of Arc begins with her trial for heresy, with the action consisting of flashbacks to high points of her short but triumphant career — from the time she first hears her "voices," wins the support of a local nobleman and ultimately gains the confidence of the uncrowned Dauphin, on through her military victories to ultimate betrayal and her capture by the enemy.

At her trial, the terrified maiden is surrounded by men who have come, they think, to "burn a dirty peasant witch" but find themselves overwhelmed with a sense of confronting an exalted human being. The high-placed churchmen and military leaders at the trial become acutely aware they are involved in an event that will be recorded in history, and that they must try to justify themselves and their actions.

"The Lark" has been described as a "distinguished contribution to theatre that is spellbinding because of its flashing wit, emotional impact and its power to make you think and feel."

Patrice Zap of Andrews has the central role of the courageous "lark" who hovered over battlefields to speed her beloved France to victory. Other pivotal players in the large cast include Charlie Guy as her priestly prosecutor at the trial who struggles for compromise between his faith and his devotion to the maiden; Ocie Robinson as Warwick, the cynical Englishman determined to see that this teenager who has inspired her nation to resistance is quickly executed; Oscar Russell as the implacable inquisitor; James Cunningham as the weak and diffident Dauphin, and Bill Staples as the sympatheic Brother Lavendu.

"The Lark" is staged and directed by C. L. Holloway, managing director of the Permian Playhouse, Odessa's community theater. Sets have been designed by technical director Cathleen McNulty and the 15th Century costumes for the show have been designed by Jane Ann Crum, PPH assistant director.

Broadcast of 20-week opera series will begin

NEW YORK — The new season of Metropolitan Opera radio broadcasts begins Saturday with a presentation of Giuseppe Verdi's famous "Rigoletto."

This will mark the 38th season for the matinee broadcasts to be presented under the sponsorship of Texaco Inc., making it the longest continuous commercial underwriting of the same program by the same company in the history of radio.

The 20-week Texaco-Metropolitan Opera broadcast season will continue weekly through next April 15, concluding with the popular double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci."

Peter Allen will be back before the microphone in the broadcast booth at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York's Lincoln Center co narrate opera plots for the radio audience throughout the United States and Canada.

The new broadcast season will offer two operas never presented on radio by the Metropolitan Opera, Massenet's "Thais" and Donizetti's "La Favorita." In addition, such standard favorites as Puccini's "Madama Butterfly," will be aired.

Confab stresses arts' importance

By WILLIAM GLOVER

HARRIMAN, N.Y. (AP) — Just like the moon, the stars and the robins that sing, America's performing arts belong to everyone, according to a highlevel panel of experts.

But unlike nature's delights, symphony, opera, dance and drama are rarely free.

That puzzlement — and how best to solve it — was one of many knotty topics keenly debated at a recent American Assembly forum on the future of professional artistic enterprise.

The AA is a Columbia University agency that periodically poses broad public concerns for discussion. The university's hilltop campus in Harriman, N.Y., was the apt locale for this first-ever confab to bring together ranking representatives from all branches of the culture community.

"You could call this the beginning of an arts constitution," one participant said of the final conference statement.

With its recommendations "designed to protect and encourage the health of the performing arts and reassure the American people as to the future of these important resources," came a warning:

"At this period in American history and in the growth of public appetites, the economic stability of nonprofit groups is subject to disruption or even disarray."

Pinpointing one of the conference's touchiest, recurrent concerns — that the arts are a minority interest — the declaration said:

"The arts are an integral part of the life of every human being and should constitute an essential part of his education at all levels ...

"While each of the performing arts may appeal to a particular segment of the citizenry, taken together they appeal to a broad spectrum of the populace."

Participants in the assembly included Mary Ann Tighe, arts adviser in Vice President Mondale's office, and the two previous chairmen of the National Endowment for the Arts, Roger L. Stevens and Nancy Hanks.

Advice for President Carter — who plans a White House arts forum next year — was by inference only.

The conference's summary declared "the most important mission of the artist and the performing arts institution is the creation and presentation of works of highly professional quality." Their wide dissemination and accessibility were rated of secondary priority.

A sharply critical attitude was taken about the quality of education in the arts and special programs for young people. "Funding," the report stressed "of arts in education is primarily the responsibility of the field of education."

To keep the arts dynamic, the conference urged "development and use of new materials and techniques ... accompanied by recognition of the importance of contemporary infusions into the repertory of the performance arts.

"Young persons with evident artistic talent should be provided with categorical support from all appropriate funding sources."

Special evening scheduled

LUBBOCK — "An Evening of Percussion and Dance" is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Texas Tech University Center theater.

The event is being jointly sponsored by the Texas Tech dance division, Lubbock Civic Ballet and the Tech Percussion Ensemble.

A varied program of dance will be presented, with music from such diverse composers as Antonin Dvorak and Jelly Roll Morton. Four choreographers will be represented with works: Diana Moore, Mannie Rowe, Kristina Gintautiene and Luke Kahlich.

Lions planning 'mini mall'

LAMESA — For the third year, the Lamesa Lions Club will sponsor its popular pre-Christmas "Mini Mall."

The art and crafts exhibition will be held Friday, Saturday and next Sunday in the Dawson County Community Building, located on South Houston Avenue. The show and sale will offer paintings in various media, wood and metal crafts, macrame and crochet pieces.

The show will open at 9 a.m. Friday, continuing until 9 p.m. On Saturday, hours will again be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., while Sunday hours are to be 1:30 to 6 p.m. The public is invited to come browse and buy.

Indian exhibit designed to complement paintings

The show will be on view for an extended period on the second floor of the museum's Turner Memorial Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The new exhibition is a complementary adjunct to another current display at the museum, a show of important paintings of the American West by some of the leading Western artists of the 19th and 20th centuries. The show presents noteworthy canvases by such noted painters as E. I. Couse, Sheldon Parsons, E. L. Blumenschein, Karl Bodmer, Hermann Herzog, Henry Arhur Elkins, Gaspard Latoix, Bert Phillips, Frederic Remington, William R. Leigh and Albert Bierstadt.

The paintings are on loan from the vast Anschutz Collection of Denver.

Guided tours of the Indian show upstairs and the Western paintings downstairs will be given Midland school students by Museum of the Southwest docents in coming weeks.

The Indian show presents the story of the Southwestern American Indian through a series of display cases devoted to such facets of Indian life as tools, basket making, weaving, pottery making and jewelry making.

The dual exhibitions are open to the public without charge from 2 to 5 p.m. each Sunday, and between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. each weekday.

Expert team studies digestive diseases

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — A small medical road show is touring the country to mobilize an intensified attack against "DD" — digestive diseases.

Some 18 million Americans by current estimate are afflicted with diseases of the gastrointestinal tract — from the esophagus through the stomach, liver, pancreas, gallbladder, intestines and rectum.

They suffer from heartburn and stomach ache, disorders of the liver and pancreas, gallstones, chronic constipation, irritable bowel, miserable ileitis and colitis, polyps and hemorrhoids — and about 175,000 cancers annually.

Digestive diseases are the leading reason people land in hospitals, and the second reason, after cardiovascular diseases, why people go to doctors.

They are second only to respiratory diseases in cause of disability and days lost from work, and they are the third leading case of death in country, after heart diseases and cancer, says the National Commission on Digestive Diseases. The economic cost is put at $17 billion a year.

Such figures underlie a sense of urgency within the commission, established by Congress in October 1976 and charged with coming back in two years with a comprehensive, long-range program for reducing the toll in suffering, death and economic loss from DD.

As one way of fulfilling its mission, the 26-member commission chaired by Dr. Eugene D. Jacobson, associate dean of the University of Cincinnati School of Medicine, is conducting a series of public hearings in major cities.

The commission includes research scientists, medical educators, allied health professionals and representatives of the public. It began its series of hearings in New York and Newark, N.J., in October and is scheduled to continue through Chicago, West Palm Beach, Fla., Seattle, Los Angeles, Houston, Washington, D.C., Denver and, tentatively, Atlanta and Boston by June 5.

The digestive system performs wonders in turning food and drink into simple chemical nutrients that keep body cells alive and healthy.

The liver is a biochemical factory carrying out some 5,000 reactions and delivering bile to the gallbladder. The pancreas produces digestive enzymes and insulin to regulate blood sugar. The stomach makes acids and pepsin for digestion. Nutrients enter the bloodstream from the small intestine. The large intestine or colon solidifies wastes for excretion.

As with any complex machinery, things can go wrong.

Food can be tainted with poisons, or cause allergies. Some industrial poisons, like lead, can damage the liver.

Some people upset their system with too many antacids or laxatives — concern over constipation, some physicians say over-concern, has Americans spending $500 million a year on laxatives.

Some drugs inciuding tranquilizers may temporarily upset the digestive system, says Dr. Paul Sherlock, professor of medicine at Cornell University Medical School. Aspirin and products containing aspirin — there are more than 300 on the market — "cause most of the gastritis (stomach inflammation) that we see," he adds. Taking food along with aspirin can lessen that hazard.

The specialists point to alcohol as probably the greatest single harmful influence in DD. Alcohol can cause gastritis, cirrhosis of the liver, inflammation of and interference with the pancreas. Smoking plus alcohol is called a major cause of cancer of the esophagus.

Excessive coffee may cause diarrhea or gastritis, they say. Emotions can affect the digestive system, including the large intestine.

"Unrelieved tension and hostility can affect the stomach," says Dr. Thomas P. Almy, professor of medicine at Dartmouth Medical School. "But we cannot relate this clearly to the causation of ulcers. Diet, drugs and alcohol may play roles."

Farther down from the site of ulcers, "irritable colon is the most common complaint I see," said Dr. Sherlock. "It's a disorder of civilization. It is suggested it has a lot to do with stress and strain."

County pecan show opens Monday

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Many Midland area cotton producers have completed that harvest of their 1977 crop which is the earliest this has occurred in a number of years. An early matured crop and an almost uninterrupted harvest season with no weather problems were the reasons for the early harvest. Dry soil conditions are hindering soil preperation activivites. Many acres of cropland are in a condition to seriously erode from wind unless moisture conditions improve.

Many entries have been received for the first annual Midland County Pecan Show which begins Monday with the processing and judging of all entries. Committee members have worked hard to make this first show a success and indications are that it will be. Samples from all entries will be weighed, shelled and calculations of kernal percentage determined then judged by Dr. Michael Kilby, Area Extension Horticulturist, El Paso and W.M. (Dub) Day, Jr., county Extension agent, Rankin.

All entries will then be displayed in the lobby of the Midlsand National Bank all day Tuesday. The public is cordially invited to drop by to see the exhibit. Committee members will staff the exhibit during the day and free pecan recipes will be available.

A Pecan Production Seminar will be held Tuesday evening beginning at 7:00 in the Community Room, Midland Naional Bank. Dr. Kilby, Dr. Kenneth Lindsay, area extension agronomist, and James Lee, county extension entomologist, Big Spring, will discuss pecan prodution in the West Texas area. All interested persons are invited to attend.

The hickory shuckworm is one of the major insects attacking the pecan in the Midland area. The shuckworm frequently attacks nuts on pecan trees from early spring through late fall. Damage caused by the hickory shuckworm larvae feeding on pecans is of two types: (1) early nut drop in late spring, mid summer and (2) shuck mining in late summer and early fall.

Mining in the shucks results in a slower maturity of nuts and pecan kernals do not develop properly. Mining in the shucks causes the shucks to stick to the nuts therby increasing harvesting difficulties. The hickory shuckworm overwinters as a full-grown larvae in pecan shucks on the trees or on the ground surface.

Orchard sanitation—removal and destruction of residual shucks from trees and on the ground surface—would greatly aid in reducing the number of shuchworms that may overwinter successfully in the trees and infest pecan nuts the next season. Now is the time to start reoving and destroying residual pecan shucks on trees in the orchard.

If the shucks are not removed, shuckworm larvae will overwinter in them, pupate early next spring then emerge as adult moths which will mate and start laying eggs on young nuts and leaves.

If you longed for more shade trees in your yard during the hot summer just over, now is the time to start taking some action. Most folks think of spring as the proper tree planting time, but fal planting offers distinct advantages. The root systems of fall-planted trees develop and become well established before top growth starts in the spring.

However, use only container-grown or balled-and-burlapped trees for fall planting. Bare-rooted trees are still not completely dormant and should not be planted until late December, January and February. Choose trees that are well adapted to the area. It is generally best to shy clear of the so-called "fast growing trees" as most of these are brittle and short-lived or have some other characteristics that make them less than desirable for landscape planting.

MP-1151, "Trees for Texas Landscapes", available at the County Extension Office, lists the trees adapted for each region of the state. Copies may be had by calling 682-9481, Ext. 164.

Senior citizens' 'Happening' set

Senior citizens and Midland College students will gather together at a "Winter Happening" from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center.

Entertainment at the happenimg will be provided by a Seminole senior citizens band and by elderly citizens from Midland and Odessa, demonstrating old-time popular dancing styles.

McCamey citizens are planning to show how to do liquid embroidery art, and the Rankin Fan Club is going to set up a doll house display.

A kissing booth and a "Hug a Granny or Grand Dad" booth will be operating during the event. Students will be able to compete in arm wrestling and jalapeno pepper eating contests, or they can throw a sponge at a faculty member or bid for someone at the slave auction.

"We had a senior citizens' get-together at Midland College last spring, and both the older people and the students seemed to enjoy it, so we decided to really let them have a good time together," Jan Reed, director of senior services at the college, said.

She and Dr. Jim Cook, director of student activities helped plan the event..

The happening is open to the public. Information and display booths about some of the academic and vocational programs offered at the college will be set up for area high school students.

Woman to face charges

SEATTLE (AP) — A reported member of the radical Weather Underground will be returned to Seattle from Houston to face charges in a 1970 bombing attempt, the FBI said Thursday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney J. Ronald Sim said a federal warrant still is outstanding for Judy Bissell, 33, charged with attempting to destroy government property.

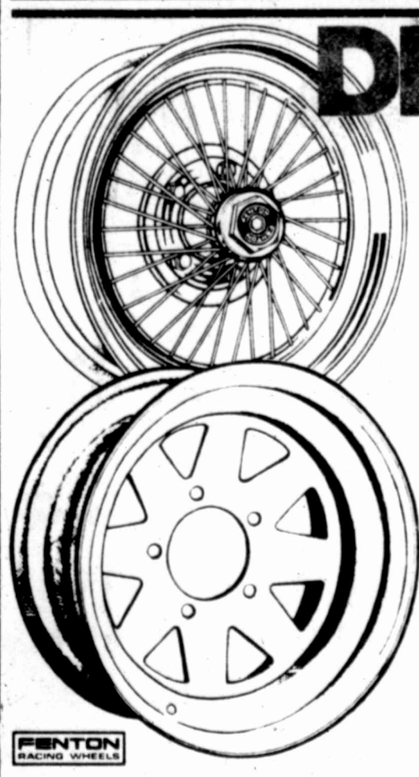

Mrs. Bissell was arrested Saturday in Houston by federal agents investigating a purported plot by the Weather Underground to assassinate public figures.

Sim said once any possible charges in other jurisdictions are cleared, federal authorities will seek her return to Seattle.

Mrs. Bissell and her husband, Silas Trim Bissell, were indicted here in connection with a bomb placed under the steps of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps building on the University of Washington campus.

'Bribe your way,' says traveler

NEW YORK (AP) — Because "every border guard and every cop in Mexico is corrupt," be prepared to bribe your way out of any tight situation, says world traveler Abbie Hoffman.

One can also make a little spare change by loading up on portable color television sets, car stereos and cassette tapes and selling them at four times their cost while south of the border.

Hoffman, a fugitive since 1974 on federal drug selling charges and the travel editor of Crawdaddy magazine, offers these time-saving and money-making tips in the magazine's January issue.

Of the "valuable equipment that you can easily unload for three or four times" what you pay, Hoffman suggests, "Color TVs are the easiest item to sell off, but car stereos are also in hot demand."

"You can sell a tape with music for $5 or trade it for a night's lodging or a good meal. I've traded 20 tapes for a kilo of grass," the one-time Yippie leader declares.

On crossing the border, he writes, "every border guard and every cop in Mexico is corrupt . . . With the right attitude and the correct bribe you can walk away from the tightest jam.

"Most drug busts of Americans are made because someone cut into someone else's business, or the people busted had no respect for local sensitivities, which frown of flagrant behavior in public.

"A man and a woman travelling together should say that they're married," Hoffman writes.

Navy's first woman pilot quits

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The Navy's first woman pilot says her decision to resign had less to do with being pregnant than it did with having a career limited by being kept out of combat roles.

"I could have taken maternity leave, but there were other factors besides pregnancy that were making me reconsider a Navy career," said Barbara Allen Rainey.

She won her Navy wings in 1974, then qualified to fly jets. But she said she spent the next three years watching her chances of promotion diminish.

So Mrs. Rainey, 29, resigned her lieutenant's commission in California earlier this month and joined her husband, Navy Lt. John Rainey, a flight instructor at Whiting Field near Pensacola. She expects their child in February.

"If all things had been equal, it would have been a much harder decision," she said. "I might have taken leave and gone back on active duty if I had felt the opportunity for career advancement was there."

It isn't likely to be there soon for women pilots, she said.

"Because of the limitations by law — Code 10 Article 60-15 that says women can't serve in combat roles — Navy flying isn't a viable career for women. It is too limited," she said.

Mrs. Rainey, who said she'll try to keep her hand in by flying with a reserve unit, said that while on duty she often found herself watching male pilots in her squadron fly on missions that should have been hers but for her sex.

"Flying the mail to a ship, for instance, meant you had to be assigned to the ship, and a pilot assigned to a ship is a combat role, so I couldn't do it.

"When I got out I had between 1,100 and 1,200 hours in the air and most of the men who had graduated at the same time I did had 1,500 to 1,600 hours. I was falling behind because of the limitations."

PURCHASE & SALE AGREEMENT

Mr. Buyer: Once you have found the right house and agreed on a price, you and the seller will sign a contract, obligating him to sell and you to purchase at that price provided a mortgage can be obtained. Generally you will make a deposit, usually placed in escrow and later applied toward the down payment.

The contract usually is a preprinted form, subject to amendments and additions. Thus, any verbal promises made during the bargaining should be written into the contract.

Usually, the contract will specify a time limit within which the purchaser must obtain a mortgage. It should specify that in the event such a commitment is not secured the seller must return the deposit or, if he wishes, extend the time.

The contract should specify which fixtures, appliances and items like carpeting or window air-conditioners are included in the sale and which do not go with the house.

The contract should establish a settlement date. It also is advisable to state, if the seller is unable to vacate by that date, a specific rent to be paid the buyer. You may want to consult your lawyer before signing anything.

Nigerian waters beset by pirates

Agence France-Presse

LONDON — Pirates operating off the Nigerian coast were well organized and informed, possibly by "someone in authority," the secretary general of the International Transport Workers' Federation, Harold Lewis, said here last week.

The ITWF sent telegrams to unions in 30 countries urging them to support a boycott of Nigerian ports until the threat of pirate activity was removed.

The federation's action followed reports that a danish ship, the Lindinger Ivory, was boarded in Lagos harbor last Monday, its captain killed and thrown overboard and 14 crew members wounded by pirates, who then plundered the ship.

"There is a suggestion of collusion between the pirates and someone in authority," Lewis told newsmen.

"When they have boarded ships they know exactly what cargo is being carried and how it has been stored. They are operating in well organized gangs with detailed information," he added.

Ringing the bell

With BOB TIEUEL

To Revive the Black Experience: Speaking before the 62 annual meeting of the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History in Washington, D.C., Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett said: "We live in a sick society. The avaricious greed of the early pioneers was joined in struggle by those seeking special privilege and favors in the founding conventions of the young nation, in which the supporters of materialistic values won the day against those of humanistic values." Dr. Goodlett is president of the National Newspaper Publishers Association.

"Even today, all the judicial, legislative and executive machinations have not permanently freed blacks from the status of second-class citizens. The truth is that all of the landmark political victories, the Supreme Court judicial victories, and the legislative victories, have disturbed very little the relationship between the white masters and the black slaves who endured two and a half centuries of hell, as well as between the white majority and the present day blacks who inhabit the core cities of America 114 years after Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation."

Goodlett continued: "Can a Black America be saved? Who will save Black America? Yes, Black America can be saved, but only Black America can and must save itself! Little help can be expected from any other quarter." He called on black schools, the black family, the black church, the black press, black sororities and fraternities, black financial institutions, and black political leaders to join in a concerted, dedicated effort to save black America.

"The question also comes, can a nation so rich, so powerful as the United States of America end racism? The answer is yes. The second question is: Will the nation end racism? The answer is no—not unless the institutions (political, social and economic) are changed to move toward a democratic society concerned with the use of government as an instrument to do for the people that which they themselves cannot do alone.

Goodlett intimated that public ownership of public utilities, transportation and other mass industries may come sooner than we think if the needs of the great mass of poor people are not met. He concluded that we must mount an eternal struggle against all forms of social, political and economic tyranny.

Bellringer Writes—

"Dear Bob:

I have been a bellringer for a number of years and look forward to reading your column regularly in several of the newspapers and periodicals that I subscribe to...Perhaps one of the greatest needs of black people in West Texas is decent housing. There are federal funds available for a variety of projects that would go a long way towards helping the situation.

Black churches, local civic and social clubs, fraternal groups should organize committees to aid in helping provide adequate housing for colored people in many of our communities. Oftentimes local city government and even county units are reluctant to sponsor housing for black and poor folks. We ought to know that by now, we have got to get off our do nothings and get the job done for ourselves."

Signed: Mrs. T.M., Lamesa, Texas.

Dear Mrs. T.M. Thanks for you kind letter. You are right. We know a number of black churches and organizations that are sponsoring low-cost housing projects throughout the Southwest. Information along this line may be obtained from writing HUD, Washington, D.C.

Representatives from the Black Chamber of Commerce of Dallas, one of the largest organizations of its kind in the Southwest and the mayor of Boley, Okla., along with representatives of the Boley Chamber of Commerce have been invited to attend the 10th annual Black History Conference and Forum to be held in Hobbs, N.M., Feb. 11-12, 1978. The mayor is Sam Wilcotts, who will speak from the conference theme: Reshaping Public Policy for the Survival of Our Communities."

Recent great quotes: "According to government statistics, there were 1.1 million black students alone enrolled in colleges and universities in 1976. Nonetheless the days of going to college, just for the sake of doing it, are done and gone. Today's students must have specific goals, aims and programs firmly set, to succeed." End of quote from Joe Black, former baseball great and vice president, The Greyhound Corporation.

Plans have been announced for the publication of a new periodical that will serve the needs of the Hobbs Black Community. The publication has the endorsement of a number of black leaders, including the NAACP. Until later, be a good neighbor. Remember they come in all colors.

Trucker recalls thirties

ST. LOUIS (AP) — C.J. Long remembers those scrabbly Depression days of the 1930s when truckers put candles on the dashboard to keep ice off the windshield and fought with cattle for the right-of-way.

They were a breed unto themselves, those cloth-capped men who Steinbeck described with admiration in the "Grapes of Wrath." But most of them are gone now, and Long, who recently retired after more than 40 years driving the highways and byways of Missouri, Tennessee, and Arkansas, laments their passing.

"Drivers today are different than the drivers of yesterday," he said. "They have their CBs, their six or seven hour runs, regular paychecks, paid vacations, and sick leave. But they don't know the excitement of the unexpected we enjoyed."

The unexpected included washed-out roads, dangerously slick mud approaches to river ferries, cotton and lumber wagons that plodded through the dark without lights, and, not infrequently, cattle that huddled at night on the warm asphalt.

"There were no heaters in trucks in the 1930s," the 65- year-old Long said. "We kept our feet warm by putting a lantern under a blanket and wrapping the blanket around our legs. You got all dirty and sooty, but at least you kept warm."

Those grey Depression winters, Long remembers them well. He remembers being snowbound, and the time near Poplar Bluff, Mo., when he burned his spare tire to keep from freezing, and the fog banks near Wilson, Ark., where he taped orange candy wrappers over his headlights to help cut through the haze.

There weren't any motels in those days, no fast-food outlets, no air-conditioned cabs to rest a road-weary body after a long haul. Long, and men like him, slept sitting, if they slept at all.

A usual day might start in St. Louis, Long reminisced. From there he might drive to Memphis or to Stuttgart, Ark. to pick up 140 sacks of rice and then head back to St. Louis to unload it a bag at a time at different grocery stores. And when it was unloaded, it was usually time to start over again.

Long sometimes worked with a driver-helper. A run from St. Louis to Little Rock and back put eight dollars into their pockets. His first year he made $1,000.

Since then, he's driven through a revolution in the trucking industry. When he started in the '30s, his cab cost $700, the trailer $800. The modern cab lists for about $35,000 and weighs six tons. Long's 1½- ton cab would have looked like a toy in comparison.

Welfare on Congress' agenda

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Congress is coming back to town this week to finish action if it can on two big bills that President Carter wants passed — energy and Social Security — and to start action on a third:

The president's plan for restructuring the welfare system.

A special House welfare subcommittee is scheduled to begin making decisions Tuesday on the controversial welfare bill. Its chairman, Rep. James C. Corman, D-Calif., says perhaps optimistically that it can complete its work by Christmas.

The bill the subcommittee approves will then be sent to the three standing committees of the House from whom the subcommittee members have been drawn: Ways and Means, Agriculture and Education and Labor, each of which has jurisdiction over some part of existing "welfare" law.

According to plan, these standing committees will mark up their parts of the legislation next year and send it all to the floor as one bill. If it survives there, it will go to the Senate. But the welfare plan's chances of even House passage are uncertain; key House members have already announced that they oppose several of its most important provisions.

Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., for example, a member of the Corman subcommittee, is strongly opposed to Carter's plan to eliminate food stamps, and put the $5.6 billion that step would save into a new and expanded system of welfare or straight cash assistance.

Foley is also chairman of the Agriculture Committee, which last summer overhauled the program that helps 17.1 million Americans buy food, and extended it for four more years. The changes his committee made doesn't even take effect until next summer.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., another subcommittee member, said when congressional hearings began back in mid-September that the Carter plan is "totally unworkable."

Ullman's view is important because he also chairs the House Ways and Means Committee.

Ullman is concerned abut the precedent of a guaranteed annual income, especially for the new groups that Carter proposes to make eligible: childless couples, some families with an unemployed father in the home, single persons who are not aged, blind or disabled, and families of the "working poor" who ahve very low wage jobs.

"Thirty-two million Americans will be getting checks from the government, and half that will get them for the first time," he said, "not on a real basis of the kind of jobs they have but on the number of people in their family."

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., co-author with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., of the full employment bill that Carter recently endorsed, is the acknowledged expert on the part of the plan expected to create 1.4 million public service minimum wage jobs for welfare recipients who can't find any other kind of work.

A spokesman said Hawkins has reservations about that, including the assumption built into Carter's plan that only 1.4 million such jobs will be needed because unemployment will be below 5.6 per cent, and the plan to attach them to minimum wage salaries.

In some ways, the problems the Carter plan faces in the welfare subcommittee are similar to those that killed the last major administration attempt to overhaul the welfare system.

That was President Nixon's Family Assistance Plan, introduced in 1971 as the top priority of his administration.

It was similar to Carter's plan in that it set up a guaranteed annual income and included work requirements. But its different components faced so much opposition from all parts of the political spectrum that a sharply divided Senate, unable to agree on how to change it, killed the whole thing in 1972.

Corman seemed optimistic earlier this month that his subcommittee would approve the key elements of the $30.7 billion plan by Dec. 22. Other key subcommittee members weren't so sure, however.

There appears to be considerable interest at this early stage in a more gradual approach to reform suggested by Richard P. Nathan, a Brookings Institution researcher who worked on Nixon's Family Assistance Plan.

"In my view the welfare mess has been overstated," Nathan told the subcommittee. " ...Our social programs are much more logical than many people realize. They have grown tremendously. It is hard to be poor in this country now."

Nathan suggested a less ambitious overhaul than Carter asked for, an "incremental approach to welfare reform would be easier for the Congress to work with and better for the nation."

An aide to Foley, who asked not to be identified, said, "I think in a broad sense he agrees with Nathan ...that a comprehensive approach without a clear idea of what some of the ramifications of the program could be is just nothing we should be jumping into. Maybe the best idea would be to make some changes ...rather than to try to do any full overhaul ..."

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., said he is " ...kind of concerned about what appears to be a negative view on the part of the subcommittee about the whole welfare reform package."

Conable said the subcommittee can approve a bill by Dec. 22 "if they can give it their undivided attention." But he noted that the conference on the energy program is still going on and added, "for something on which the political payoff is likely to be nothing but controversy, they're not as likely to make time."

Mortage regulation change recommended

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Center for Community Change, a group representing low -and moderate-income neighborhood interests, has recommended that regulation of the mortgage banking industry be moved from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to an independent agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

In a newly issued report called "Opportunities for Abuse: Private Profits, Public Losses and the Morgage Banking Industry," the group says stiffer regulation of the industry is needed to reduce what it says are questionable lending practices in inner cities. These practices have led to high foreclosure rates and "facilitated the destruction of neighborhoods scarred by abandoned homes," said researchers for the center, which is based here.

Mortgage companies, which now originate three out of every four FHAand VA-backed mortgages, go virtually unregulated by the states, the study pointed out. Regulation at the federal level is carried out ineffectively by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, a fact HUD Secretary Patricia Harris acknowledged last summer when a Nader organization report focused on the problem, the center said.

The researchers said there is a fundamental conflict of interest within HUD when it comes to regulating mortgage bankers. The agency is committed to maximizing loan volume to encourage housing production and lower interest rates but is also charged with ensuring high underwriting standards.

That, says the housing group, is like depending on General Motors to set its own safety and environmental standards. Some mortgage companies are only too willing to make unsound loans to low-income persons who are poor candidates because the lenders lose nothing if the government-backed loans go into default, the researchers said.

At present the only HUD qualification for establishing a mortgage company to deal in FHA-VA loans is that the firm have $100,000 in capital funds. If the regulatory burden were shifted to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees savings and loan associations, other criteria for setting up a firm would need to be established, the center said.

There should be automatic review of each licensee every four years, as well as the imposition of sanctions or punitive measures if companies did not comply with certain standards, the housing group said.

Standards should call for avoidance of foreclosure wherever possible, maintenance of adequate loan servicing staffs and refusal to cooperate with realtors involved in racial steering or blockbusting.

The center said that because it realizes Congressional action on such a proposal would be a long time coming, it supports strengthening HUD's mortgage review board as an interim measure. Such a board should open its proceedings to the public, the group said.

Lab closings may point to retreat in research

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Bethlehem Steel Co., Aluminum Co. of America, Zenith Radio Corp. and Du Pont Co. are four giants of American industry who in the last year have closed down at least one of their major research laboratories.

The four closings are, many observers fear, symptoms of a trend away from basic research in American industry, away from the long-range scientific study that has led to the sorts of breakthroughs for which U.S. technology is noted.

Du Pont's Old Hickory, Tenn., laboratory is a classic example. It was at Old Hickory that Du Pont did the kind of research that produced synthetic fibers like Dacron, Lycra and Orlon. From these fibers, and others like them, has sprung a synthetic textile industry generating thousands of jobs for American workers and billions of dollars in trade with the rest of the world.

The closing down of Old Hickory is a part of the Du Pont decision to trim more than $50 million this year from what it will spend on exploratory research, a sum that exceeds what the National Science Foundation spends every year for chemistry in the nation's universities.

"Du Pont's decision is symptomatic of a trend that's cutting through most of American industry," says Dr. Kent Wilson of the National Science Foundation. "What's even more troublesome, there are no signs that this trend is bottoming out. It could go on for five years or more."

The NSF estimates that private industry will spend $12.4 billion this year on research and development, which would be about $1 billion more than it spent in 1971. But Inflation over the last six years accounts for more than $2 billion, so industry is really doing less this year than it did in 1971. The most important figures are employment statistics. In 1975, private industry employed 43,000 fewer scientists than it did in 1970. This year's figures are expected to be worse.

The United States is still the world leader in research, spending an estimated $29 billion a year (by industry, government and universities) and doing as much as 40 per cent of the world's research. But no longer does the United States dominate the way it did 10 years ago when it sponsored more than 60 per cent of the world's research. Indeed, its leadership role is today being challenged by Japan and West Germany.

Nowhere is that challenge more striking than in patent statistics. In 1973, the U.S. Patent Office granted fewer patents to Americans that in 1963 but issued twice as many patents to foreigners as it did 10 years before. The Patent Office has handed out between 60,000 and 70,000 patents a year for the last three years, a third of them to foreigners. Most of the increase has come from scientists in Japan and Germany seeking U.S. patent rights and protection.

Not everybody in American industry is cutting back on research. Bell Telephone Laboratories, IBM, General Electric, Honeywell and Burroughs are all spending more on research than they did last year. They're also members of the computer industry, which relies on high technology to grow.

"We see an even bigger growth in our research in the next five years than we've had in the last five," says Leonard Swern, technical director of Sperry Rand Corp., whose research spending this year will be $290 million. "Our new opportunities are growing so fast there's just no way we can cut back on research and development."

Many companies insist their research spending has not turned down but neither has it spiraled upward to meet the rising costs of inflation. Other companies are using research money once devoted to developing new products to finance improvements in old ones — projects that will yield a quick return in the marketplace.

"You ask them what they're doing with their research money," is the way it's put by White House science adviser Frank Press, "and they say well we're taking our soap powder and turning it into a liquid ...Don't laugh, that's what they're doing."

So concerned is Press about the downward trend in research through most of American industry that the White House has begun a study to find out the reasons for it. The National Science Foundation has undertaken a similar study and for the first time is considering a change in its policy that would allow the NSF to finance more industry research.

"We've always put requirements on industry that were above and beyond what we asked of universities," the NSF's Kent Wilson said, "but the way things are going today we may have to relax those requirements somewhat."

The Peugeot 604 gives you the engineering of a Mercedes-Benz, the handling of a BMW, the elegance of a Jaguar, and a level of comfort superior to all of them.

Like its illustrious competition, the Peugeot 604 has a responsive six-cylinder engine (ours is a V-6), fully independent suspension, power assisted steering (ours is rack and pinion), four-wheel power disc brakes, air conditioning, power windows, distinguished styling, and meticulous attention to detail.

But unlike all of them, the Peugeot 604 has been engineered for a superior level of comfort. With oversized shock absorbers patented by Peugeot. With large coil springs and long vertical wheel travel to keep the car from practically ever bottoming out. With a "floating" differential and a steel torque tube enclosing the drive shaft to reduce noise and vibration — a major source of passenger fatigue. And with seats that are actually tuned to the suspension system.

But comfort isn't the only thing separating the 604 from its competition. There's also the price, which starts at around $11,000 P.O.E.* And that may be its most comforting feature of all.

Campbell's 4 TDs, 222 yards pace Steers

By HERSCHEL N. NISSENSON

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The statistics said it was the best game of a brilliant career, but Earl Campbell wasn't so sure.

"This is the way I would like for it to have ended," the Southwest Conference's all-time rushing leader said Saturday after stampeding for a career-high 222 yards and scoring four times as No. 1-ranked Texas trounced Texas A&M 57-28 and edged within one game of college football's national championship.

"I don't know if this was my best game," he continued. "I try not to judge those things. In one more game, I'll let you know."

Campbell will wind up his career against 5th-ranked Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, a trip the Longhorns earned by winning the SWC championship.

CAMPBELL, WHO carried 27 times, took over the national rushing and scoring leads by tallying on runs of four, six and 23 yards after grabbing a 60- yard bomb from Randy McEachern for the first Texas touchdown.

His six-yard TD run capped an 80-yard drive to start the third quarter on which he carried five consecutive times for all the yardage to give Texas a 40-14 bulge. And his last touchdown came after the Aggies had rallied to within 40-28 and had a record Kyle Field crowd of 57,443 screaming for more.

"In the third quarter, if we could have stopped them one more time...," said A&M quarterback David Walker. "Then Earl Campbell went on his way."

"We didn't run those plays just after the half for Earl," said Coach Fred Akers. "Those were part of the formation. I knew he needed 160 yards to catch the national rushing leader and with nine minutes to go I checked and found out he was over 220.

"I called him over and told him he wasn't going back in and he said, 'Fine.'"

McEACHERN, Texas' Cinderella quarterback, tied a school record by throwing four scoring passes, three of them coming as the high-powered Longhorns exploded for five touchdowns in a 14-minute stretch of the first half to take a 33-7 lead.

The convincing victory, which clinched the Southwest Conference title, completed an 11-0 regular season for the rags-to-riches Longhorns, who were unranked at the start of the year, and sent them into the Cotton Bowl against fifth-ranked Notre Dame, as college football's only unbeaten team.

Campbell's outburst pushed his 11-game total to 1,744 yards, passing Oklahoma State's Terry Miller, who ended his season last week with 1,680. In addition, Louisiana State's Charles Alexander went into Saturday night's game against Wyoming with 1,455.

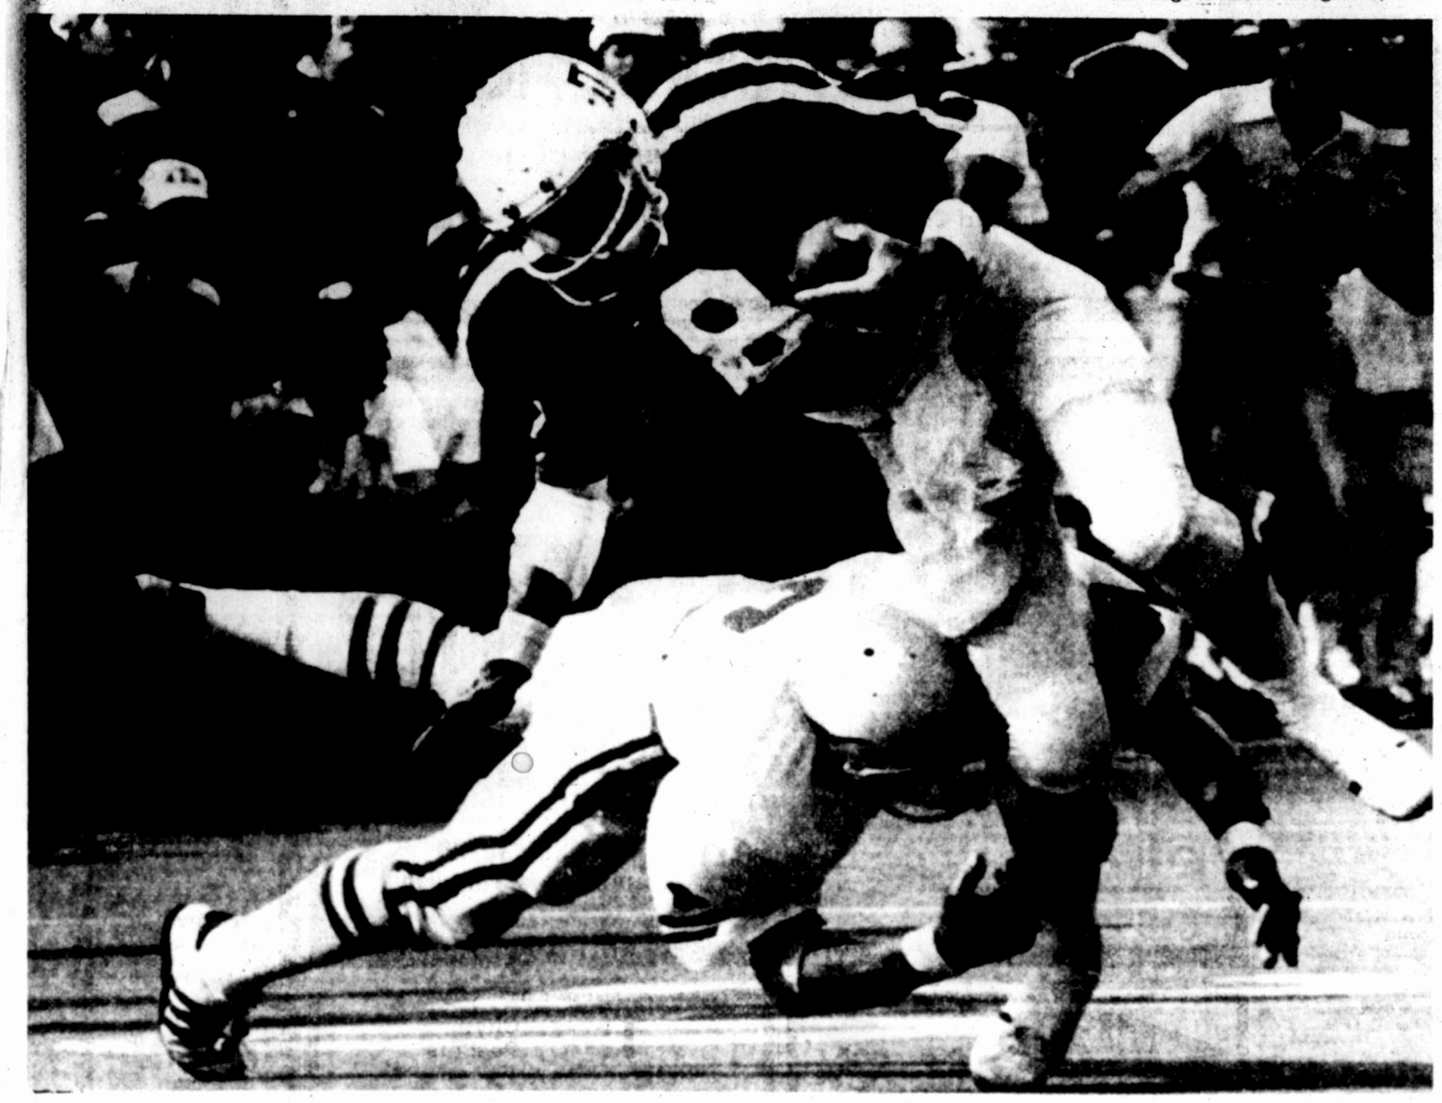

THE FOUR touchdowns boosted Campbell's point total to 114, six more than Darrell Lipford of Western Carolina, whose season is over.

After spotting 12th-ranked Texas A&M an early 7-0 lead when Curtis Dickey's seven-yard run capped a 70-yard drive following the opening kickoff, Texas roared back late in the first period on the 60- yard heave from McEachern to Campbell and the fouryard plunge by Campbell 2:10 later that made it 14-7.

McEachern, a junior who spent last season on the injury list as a spotter in the broadcast booth, came off the bench and led Texas to an upset over arch-rival Oklahoma in the fourth game of the season when two other quarterbacks were injured.

He fired a 43-yard pass to Johnny

Jeff tops Lee for cage title

Midland Lee's gallant band of Rebels were betrayed at the free throw line in the closing moments of the Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament finals Saturday night by a stubborn ball that just wouldn't go through the hoop.

The tall giants from San Antonio Jefferson took the Tall City title, 74-72, when all-tournament member Joe Mendez connected on two icing free throws with one second left to break a 70-all deadlock. Just before that Lee had missed four of five charity tosses, and hit on only three of nine free throws in the final period of play.

Still, the defending champion Rebels carried the tournament favorites to the wire before falling. The Rebels overcame a 22-15 deficit in the first quarter with a 32 point bombardment in the second period on 10 of 13 shots from the field for a 47-44 edge at halftime.

JAMES IVY, the tourney's most valuable player, scored 16 points from his 6-foot-7 frame to pace the attack, but Jefferson got back in the lead in the third period on eight straight points by Darryl Hemphill. Mendez and Wendell Hern, the other all-tourney choice from Jeff, each added 12 points to the winning cause.

All-tournament selection Mike Oestman poured in 18 points along with Nate Goudeau while David Stueckler added 16 markers, but the free throws wouldn't fall in the closing moments, or the upset would be in the pocket of the 4-1 Rebels.

MIDLAND HIGH'S Bulldogs, who lost to Jeff 90-74 earlier in the day, won third place honors with a 52-41 victory over El Paso Burges as Bill Fredrickson and Roy Lee Jefferson each scored in double figures with 12 and 11 points. Jefferson and Kiffy Hickey made the all-tournament team for Midland High.

Longhorns defied odds and experts

BY PAUL DOMOWITCH
R-T Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — They were a team picked to finish no better than fifth in their conference, but these guys, with their rookie coach, and third string quarterback, showed them.

The Texas Longhorns proved once and for all here Saturday that sport has no prepared script. It's as unpredictable as the weather.

No one expected the Horns to win the Southwest Conference title this year. Three months ago, they were hardly given any consideration. Tech, with Rodney Allison at the helm, could win it all, the experts said.

Or how about Houston with Danny Davis or A&M with that Mack truck, George Woodward in the backfield?

BUT TEXAS? Cut out the jokes. Their glory days are behind them.

Well, the joke is on the experts, because with their 57-28 victory over A&M Saturday, the Horns won the SWC title, and now have a date with destiny.

The team that nobody gave a prayer of a chance earlier this fall is one victory away from doing it all. The national championship is their's for the taking, if they want it.

The scene was one of bedlam and joy after the victory, as players suddenly became children again, while the UT band played the Eyes of Texas.

WIN OR lose on Jan. 2, this day, this victory and this season has been etched forever in UT history.

It was a day that saw Longhorn running back Earl Campbell win the NCAA rushing title and all but put a lock on the Heisman Trophy as he rushed for 222 yards and scored three touchdowns.

It was a day that saw little Randy McFachern, a nonentity on this team when the season began, bask in much deserved glory as he threw a record four touchdown passes.

Perhaps this victory and the chance now to play for the national title means a little more to a Randy McEachern than a Earl Campbell.

For Campbell, a promising pro career and a million dollar contract are right around the corner.

He will always look back with fondness on the 1977 season, but there will be other days like this for him.

For McEachern and teammate Morgan Copeland, those opportunities are slowing coming to a close. There is no pro career waiting for either one of them. There is only today. And the memories it will leave.

Copeland, Texas' 6-0, 205-pound linebacker from Midland, hopes to go to law school next year and not the NFL. But his thoughts weren't of next year in the jubiliant Longhorn locker room Saturday.

"Believing that we could accomplish all that we have was probably a far-fetched idea three months ago," he said with a smile.

"But after we beat Oklahoma, I felt we could beat anybody.

"We'll be playing for the national championship on Jan. 2 and that is

Panthers claw hapless Lamar

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

ABILENE — Greg Lambert made a timely comeback Saturday for Odessa Permian's Panthers.

The 175-pound junior started in the place of Barry Babcock who didn't even suit up as Mojo stormed to a 35-7 victory over the Arlington Lamar Vikings in a Class AAAA regional football playoff battle in P.E. Shotwell Stadium.

Babcock had been hospitalized during the week with a severe case of the flu, so Lambert's return was timely as he sparked a big 21-point explosion in the third period to break open a 7-7 deadlock.

The victory moves Permian into the quarterfinals against Lubbock Monterey, 36-25 winners over El Paso Bel Air Thursday night and the game will be in W.T. Barrett Stadium in Odessa next Saturday at 2 p.m.

PERMIAN HAD plenty of trouble with the Vikings' strong Veer attack in the first half and found itself behind, 7-0 late in the second period before finally coming to life.

Lamar took the opening kickoff and drove from its own 23 to the Panther 40 where John Fry got off a six-yard punt for the Vikings into a 35 mile-per-hour breeze.

On the very first play from scrimmage, Lambert took a quick pitch from quarterback Vic Vines and almost broke into the open, but was hit hard after a four-yard gain around his right end and fumbled with Chris Kinnear recovering for the District 8-4A champions.

With the ball at the Mojo 38, Lamar failed to cash in on the break, thanks to some great defense by Permian's Brian Vickers and Raymond Stanley.

On a fourth and four situation at the Permian 34 quarterback Jack Godfrey fired a pass towards end Tommy Howell, but Permian's Alan Swann intercepted the ball.

THE PANTHERS moved from their own 18 to the Lamar 43 where on a fake punt, Swann gained one yard which was two yards short of the first down.

In the second period, the Vikings got within field goal range, but Doug Evans missed on a 39-yard attempt.

Mojo coughed up the ball again moments later with Vines fumbling at the Panther 24 and in three plays the Vikings scored. Mike Ferguson gained six yards and fullback Kerry Tecklenburg broke for 13 to set up the score. Tecklenburg scored from the four and Evans toed the extra point for a 7-0 lead with 7:44 left in the first half.

Permian drove 65 yards in nine plays into the brisk wind late in the quarter to pull even. Lambert's 25-yard run to the Viking four along with

UH routs Rice as Blackwell goes over 1,000 yards

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Alois Blackwell scored twice and went over 1,000 yards for the season and quarterback Delrick Brown passed for three touchdowns and ran for another Saturday as the Cougars almost nonchalantly defeated hapless Rice 51-21.

The loss closed out a disappointing season for the Owls, who won their season opener and then lost 10 in a row for the longest losing streak in the school's history.

Houston, which improved its record to 6-4, struck quickly in the first quarter when Brown hit Don Bass on a 54-yard touchdown bomb and Blackwell ran one yard for a touchdown over a 2:12 span of the first quarter.

THE SAME scoring combinations worked in the second quarter to give Houston a 28-0 halftime lead. Brown hit Bass for a three-yard touchdown pass and Blackwell struck from seven yards out to continue the rout late in the period.

Blackwell, who entered the game as the No. 4 rusher in the Southwest Conference ran 142 yards on 20 carries in the game and now has a career total of 1,009 yards with one game remaining against the Texas Aggies.

Rice freshman quarterback Randy Hertel kept the Owls from being shut out with a 41- yard touchdown pass to David Houser late in the third quarter for a 42-7 deficit. But Houston countered with 56 seconds left in the quarter on a 10-yard run by Randy Love.

RICE PUT together a minirally in the fourth quarter on touchdown runs of four and one yard by Earl Cooper, the last coming after time had expired in the game.

In the final drive, Hertel became the SWC passing champion with 21 completions on 52 attempts for 207 yards.

Brown, who has become an effective quarterback since replacing injured Danny Davis in the second game of the season, completed only four of seven passes in the game for 80 yards but three were for touchdowns.

Brown's first pass of the gaoe was his 54-yard TD strike to Bass. Bass got behind Rice defender Carlton Derrett and then caught the ball and scored easily as Derrett fell down.

On the third play following the next kickoff, Hertel suffered the first of five interceptions when Houston's Gerald Cook returned Hertel's pass 19 yards to the Rice 19. Blackwell scored from the one, four plays later, for a 14-0 lead and the massacre was underway.

Houston substitutes played most of the fourth quarter including freshman quarterback Darrell Shepard who completed a 59-yard pass to Mark Jermstad that set up Love's 10-yard touchdown run.

Holy Cross surprises BC's Eagles, 35-20

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Holy Cross, sparked by sophomores Peter Colombo and Brian Doherty and a fired up defense, shocked Boston College 35-20 Saturday in a stunning football upset of a 33-year Jesuit football rivalry.

The host Crusaders, who had won only one of 10 previous starts this year, ignored the odds as five-touchdown underdogs in knocking off BC, generally recognized as New England's top college power.

Federation blocks Soviet proposal

ROME (AP) —The International Gymnastics Federation rejected Friday night a Sovietsponsored proposal to suspend South Africa from membership because of its policy of racial discrimination.

The proposal had been submitted by the Soviets jointly with Romania, Bulgaria and East Germany.

The Federation also set 1978 for the next World Gymnastics Championships. Another edition of the Championships will be held the following year as a prelude toward the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Blair sparks Baylor over TCU

By RICK SCOTT

WACO, Texas (AP) — Running back Gary Blair scored two touchdowns and a stingy Baylor defense capitalized on Texas Christian errors Saturday as the Bears routed the hapless Horned Frogs 48-9 in a Southwest Conference football game.

The game was the season finale for both teams and raised Baylor to a 5-6 overall record, including 3-5 in SWC play.TCU, under first year coach F.A. Dry ended 2-9 and 1-7.

The Bears rolled up a 17-3 halftime advantage with a bruising ground attack that covered 175 yards. Blair gained 114 of those before intermission on eight carries.

Blair scored Baylor's first touchdown on a one-yard run that was set up by his 66-yard burst down the middle.

Robert Bledsoe kicked a 40yard field goal on the Bears' next possession.

Baylor, with 1:54 left in the half, took the ensuing kickoff and marched 65 yards before Greg Hawthorne ran in from the 11 with 19 seconds left.

Bledsoe added a career-long 48-yard field goal and Blair tapped a scoring drive following a TCU fumble with a one-yard touchdown run.

Baylor subs took over and TCU got its only touchdown on a 20-yard pass from Steve Bayuk to Audie Woods.

The 48 point total was the highest scored this year by Baylor and was the highest Bear total since 1954.

West Texas clinches MVC grid title, 28-9

CANYON, Texas (AP) — West Texas State fullback Bo Robinson rushed for 181 yards and two touchdowns as the Buffaloes clinched the Missouri Valley Conference title with a 28-9 victory over Southern Illinois Saturday.

Robinson scored on the first play of the game when he skirted the right end and dashed 80 yards for a touchdown. The 205-pound junior, who is among the nation's top 10 rushers with an average of 127.2 yards per game, scored again in the second quarter on a twoyard run.

Grambling downs Southern U.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Grambling quarterback Doug Williams threw for three touchdowns and Robert Woods returned punts 62 yards and 45 yards for scores as Grambling romped over Southern University 55-20 in a regionally televised battle of Southwestern Athletic Conference rivals Saturday.

Vols sock Vandy, 42-7

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Quarterback Jimmy Streater ran for three touchdowns and passed for a fourth to give Tennessee a 42-7 college football victory Saturday over Vanderbilt, putting the Commodores in the basement of the Southeastern Conference.

The lanky, 165-pound sophomore put the Vols out of range at 28-0 at the half Saturday with scoring runs of one and nine yards and a 51-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Moore, all in the second quarter.

The game ended what has been a dismal season for Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors and Vanderbilt's Fred Pancoast.

The Volunteers finished with a 4-7 record with Vanderbilt their only victim in six SEC encounters. The Commodores were winless in six SEC games and 2-9 for the season.

Tennessee's defense prevented Anderbilt from ever getting its air attack going. Until he left the game with an injury midway in the third quarter, Commodores' quarterback Mike Wright, the SEC's leading passer, connected on only five throws for 43 yards in 12 attempts.

CSU squeezes by Utah State

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Freshman halfback Larry Jones rushed for 177 yards on a school-record 41 carries as Colorado State, staying on the ground because of fierce winds, squeezed out a 13-10 non-conference college football victory over Utah State in the season finale for both teams Saturday.

CSU, deprived of a Fiesta Bowl berth because of Arizona State's victory over Arizona Friday night, finished the season at 9-2-1, only the third time in history that a Ram team has won nine games in a season. Utah State wound up at 4-7.

The elusive Jones, who set the record for carries early in the fourth quarter and sat out the remainder of the contest, scored the Rams' only touchdown on an 8-yard run in the second quarter. Tom Drake added field goals of 31 and 44 yards, capping long drives.

CSU quarterback Dan Graham completed just three passes as the Rams were unable to negotiate winds which gusted between 50 and 80 miles per hour during the course of the game.

Cadets spook Middies' hex

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Leamon Hall and Greg King each cracked one yard for touchdowns and Mike Castelli kicked a 21-yard field goal in the first half Saturday as Army held on to beat Navy 17-14 for the first time in five years.

A pair of pass interceptions by linebacker John Hilliard set up Army's 10-0 lead in the 78th renewal of this service football classic, and helped the Cadets wrap up their first winning season since 1972.

Navy narrowed the gap to 10-7 in the second quarter on an 18-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Bob Leszczynski to wingback John Kurowski.

But the Middies trailed 17-7 at halftime after King's scoring dive with 1:09 left.

In the third period, the Middies moved 29 yards for a touchdown after a 26-yard punt return by Mike Gelpin. The drive took seven plays, with Joe Gattuso Jr., who scored three TDs in last year's Navy victory, going over from the two.

The Middies twice threatened to pull the game out in the second half, once late in the third period when they reached the Army 23 only to have Leszczynski fumble the ball away on an option play, and again with 1:07 left in the game when Gattuso's halfback pass from the Army 9 fell incomplete in the end zone on a fourth-down play.

On that last Navy drive, Leszczynski completed a 17-yard pass on fourth-and-six to split end Phil McConkey for a first down at the Army 44.

Leszczynski then threw one pass incomplete, overthrew McConkey who was open at the Army five, failed on a screen pass, then again on fourth down connected with McConkey for 27 yards and a first down at the Cadets' 17 with 1:36 remaining.

Leszczynski's first two passes on the next series fell incomplete, but Gattuso ripped through the middle for eight yards to the Army nine. That brought up a fourth-and-two with 1:07 to play.

Navy Coach George Welsh, who lost his first game to Army after four straight triumphs, disdained an attempt for a game-tying field goal and had Gattuso throw the futile final halfback pass.

The Cadets took over and ran out the clock as the corps stormed onto the field to celebrate a victory over Navy for the first time since 1972. In those four losses, the Middies had outscored Army 138-16.

Army took a 7-0 lead in the first quarter after each team had missed a field goal attempt in this second half of a nationally televised college football doubleheader. Penn State beat Pitt 15-13 in the opener.

Hilliard set the first Army scoring drive in motion by intercepting a Navy pass and returning it 19 yards to the Middies' 15. King, who ran for a total of 91 yards, ripped 13 to the two. On third down, Hall dove over from the one and Castelli converted for a 8-0 lead.

Army boosted its lead to 10-0 in the second quarter after Hilliard's second interception at the Navy 44. The Cadets, with King and Jim Merriken alternating on 10 running plays, moved to a first down at the Navy 10.

Irish down Rebs, 111-62

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame's Don Williams and Kelly Tripucka combined for 32 points Saturday to spark the fourth-rated Irish to a 111-62 drubbing of Mississippi.

The Irish, with five players in double figures, matched a balanced offense against a frail Ole Miss defense.

"We got pounded to death, but we let ourselves get pounded," said Mississippi Coach Bob Weltlich. "Any time you let your opponent score 111 points, you've got to consider your defensive effort poor."

The Rebels led only once, 4-2, with 18:27 to go in the half.

Penn State turns back Panthers' bid for tie

PITTSBURGH (AP) — With no overcoat, numb feet and snow in his hair, Joe Paterno climbed back atop the Eastern football mountain Saturday.

"I've been coming to Pitt Stadium for 28 years, and this one could be the sweetest," the Penn State coach said after his team beat Pitt 15-13 Saturday in a frantic finish on a frozen field.

Although the wind-chill factor fell to zero and snow swept the field, Paterno patrolled the sideline wearing only a brown suit and no hat for the entire game, stretched out by numerous national television timeouts as players and fans shivered.

With 12 seconds left, Pitt's Matt Cavanaugh threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Gordon Jones, only to have fullback Elliott Walker fail in his bid for a tying conversion run.

"This was as exciting as the Orange Bowl game we played against Kansas," said Paterno, whose ninth-ranked team climbed to 10-1 and regained the Eastern football dominance it lost to Pitt last season.

Paterno referred to the 1969 Orange Bowl, which Penn State won 15-14 in the last seconds after getting a second try at a two-point conversion because the losers had 12 defenders on the field.

Penn State, which waited in vain last weekend for an Orange Bowl bid, will get no second chance this season. The Nittany Lions settled for the Fiesta Bowl.

After the victory here, Paterno flatly dismissed the notion that he was "bitter" at Pitt for allegedly waging a campaign to convince the Orange Bowl committee that Penn State would lose here.

Pitt did say openly that it hoped the Orange Bowl would take the winner of this game.

"I don't like the use of the word bitter," Paterno told reporters. "You newspapers and the public created that. The squads had respect for each other. I have no bitterness toward anybody."

Tenth-ranked Pitt ended its season at 8-2-1 under new Coach Jackie Sherrill.

"I guess we kept everybody in their seats, didn't we?" said Sherrill.

"I would have preferred to play them on a dry field, but that's no excuse. I don't think the snow was a factor in the outcome of the game."

"Too many good things have happened to me at Pitt," said Cavanaugh, who helped the Panthers to the national title last season.

"I'm not going to let a loss take it away," Cavanaugh added after his last game at Pitt Stadium.

Olympian Rose repels late challenge to win

HOUSTON (AP) — British Olympian Nick Rose fought off a late challenge by Craig Virgin Saturday to win the 1977 Men's AAU Natonal Cross Country championships.

Roee, representing the Mason-Dixon Athletic Club, finished with a course record time of 30:14.3 over the 6 14-mile race along Houston's Buffalo Bayou.

Virgin, representing Athletics West, was clocked at 30:22.8.

The Colorado Track Club, which placed four runners among the top 25, was the team leader with a cumulative 158:04 clocking. The Knoxville Track Club was second in the team competition with a time of 158:31.

Rose, the NCAA cross country champion in 1974, led most of the way before Virgin, an Olympian, took a slight lead late in the race.

After he had taken the lead in the homestretch, Virgin began to run down a gully and Rose, a former Western Kentucky athlete, spurted to the lead again and Virgin was never again in contention.

Gregg Meyer of the Athletic Attic Track Club of New Jersey was third with at time of 30:34.4 followed by Thom Hunt of the Jamul Toads with 30:51.9 and Randy Melancon of the New York Athletic Club with a 30:53.6 clocking.

The Greater Boston Track Club finished third in the team competition with a 158:33 followed by the Chicago Track Club with 159:08 and the Santa Monica Track Club with a 159:54.

The temperature was 75 degrees and the wind 15 miles per hour during the race.

Bill Rodgers, two-time New York City Marathon champion and one of the favorites, had the flu and did not participate.

BYU buries UTEP, 68-19

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Brigham Young spotted TexasEl Paso a 13-7 first quarter edge Saturday, then roared back to record a 68-19 Western Athletic Conference victory.

BYU quarterback Mark Wilson completed 13 of 29 for a pair of touchdowns as the Cougars lived up to their ranking as the nation's top passing team.

The one-sided contest took the luster off UTEP's Ducky Elliott rushing performance. Elliott rambled for 202 yards on 32 carries and became the first Miner player in 29 years to pass the 1,000 yard season mark.

The Cougars proved adept at turning Miner mistakes into touchdowns. Two Miner passes were intercepted and run back for touchdowns, and BYU picked off a stray fumble and ran it back 92 yards for another score.

BYU lost a couple of statistical contests as they were outrushed and outpassed by UTEP.

BYU improved its overall mark to 9-2 and 6-1 in WAC play.

UTEP dropped to 1-10 on the season and 0-7 in the conference.

The defeat gave Georgia its first losing season in 14 years under Coach Vince Dooley, with both teams having entered the game played in cold, 30-degree weather with 5-5 records.

Tech, taking advantage of a brisk 15-mile-per-hour at its back, enjoyed excellent field position to take an early lead on a 35-yard field goal by Johnny Smith and a one-yard touchdown run by Gary Hardie.

Bullets triumph

LANDOVER, Md. (AP)—Phil Chenier came off the bench to score 15 points in the fourth quarter Saturday night, sparking the Washington Bullets to a 93-91 National Basketball Association victory over the slumping Houston Rockets.

Chenier, an All Star last season who has been relegated to a reserve role, scored a seasonhigh 20 points, sinking six of 11 shots and adding eight of nine free throws.

Elvin Hayes led the Bullets with 24 points and Bob Dandridge contributed 16.

Arkansas takes win

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Marvin Delph scored 20 points and Ron Brewer added 17 points to lead seventh-ranked Arkansas to a 65-47 college basketball victory over Southwest Missouri State in the season opener for both teams.

The Razorbacks led 29-25 at halftime and quickly built a 3925 lead in the first five minutes of the second half.

Brewer fueled the early second half rally with a jump shot, a free throw and a steal which led to two free throws by Sidney Moncrief who had ten points in 12 rebounds.

Jimmie Dull had 18 points for the Southwest Missouri State Bears and reserve Stan Wilkins scored 10 points.

The Razorbacks hit 44 per cent of their shots against an aggressive 1-3-1 zone defense but maintained a 52-27 rebound advantage.

Gators tame Hurricane

MIAMI (AP) — Terry LeCount threw one scoring pass and set up another Florida touchdown Saturday night as Florida overpowered the University of Miami 31-14.

Florida trailed 7-3 in the first period when LeCount hurled a 16-yard pass that Tony Stephens one-handed at the goal-line to make it 10-7.

LeCount was the key to that 64-yard drive, once hitting Derrick Gaffney with a 23-yard pass and later keeping the drive alive by scrambling nine yards for a first down at the Miami 26.

In the third quarter, Miami's defense toughened and stopped two Florida threats on fourth down attempts at the 19 and 16yard lines.

But then LeCount directed the Gators on a scoring drive of 76 yards — 47 of them when Miami cornerman Gene Coleman was called for interference on LeCount's pass to Lewis Gilbert. LeCount picked up 15 yards on four keepers then pitched to Tony Green for an 8yard scoring run and a decisive 17-7 Florida lead.

Berj Yepremian kicked a 50yard field goal in the first quarter for Florida's first points, but later when Yepremian tried a 54-yard kick the snap sailed past him giving Miami the ball on Florida's 37. Miami launched a six-play scoring drive and Chris Hobbs went the final 11 yards, breaking outside on a draw play.

Florida widened its lead to 24-7 in the final quarter when defensive end Michael DuPree grabbed a blocked field goal attempt and ran 64 yards to score. Then Earl Carr ran two yards for another insurance touchdown with 1:02 left in the game.

A final Miami drive ended with Jody Myers' 17-yard touchdown pass to Steve Alvers wth 34 seconds remaining.

Florida now has a 6-3-1 record while the loss gave Miami a 3-7 mark.

Knicks' McAdoo paces against Golden State

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob McAdoo scored 23 points and five other New York players had 12 or more points as the Knicks beat the Golden State Warriors 112-106 in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

Phil Smith led Golden State, which has lost eight consecutive road games, with 21 points and Rick Barry had 20.

Golden State fell behind by as many as 15 points in the first period and starting center Clifford Ray was ejected from the game midway through the first quarter when he incurred two technical fouls within six seconds. His replacement, Robert Parish, scored 12 points in the second period and sparked the Warriors to a 17-2 surge that gave them a 45-38 lead.

The Warriors led 53-52 at the half and were ahead 74-73 before the Knicks scored eight straight points, capped by a layup by Jim Cleamons, in the final 1:40 of the third quarter and took an 81-74 lead into the final period.

Parish, who scored 18 points, fouled out with 7:50 to go in the game and the Warriors were forced to go the rest of the way without a center.

Cleamons and Spencer Haywood each had 18 points for the Knicks, Jim McMillian scored 16, Earl Monroe added 15 and Butch Beard 12.

LSU routs Wyoming

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Tailback Charles Alexander rambled for three touchdowns and 231 yards to lead Louisiana State to a 66-7 romp over errorridden Wyoming in a intersectional football game Saturday night.

Sun Bowl-bound LSU, 8-3, capitalized on five mistakes by the Cowboys in the first half for scores, including three that led to a 17-0 lead in the first seven minutes.

Alexander, second nationally in rushing, with an average of 153.3 yards a game, totaled over 100 yards for the ninth time this season. He scored on runs of three, one and two yards, giving him a school record 17 touchdowns in the season.

Sophomore quarterback Steve Ensminger threw touchdown passes of 54 and 17 yards as LSU completed its best regular season since 1973.

LSU's opening scores came after a Wyoming fumble on the opening kickoff, a pass interception, and a bad center snap. Wyoming, now 4-6-1, never recovered.

Alexander set school and SEC records with 43 carries. It was his second-best performance by an LSU running back. His total was only six yards shy of the mark he set earlier this season against Oregon.

Wyoming's only score came on a 39-yard run by Myron Hardeman in the first quarter. Hardeman finished the night with 120 yards on eight carries to set a school and Western Athletic Conference season record of 1,165 yards.

Cavs stall Pistons

DETROIT (AP) — Guards Walt Frazier and Austin Carr led a balanced scoring attack that carried the red-hot Cleveland Cavaliers to a 105-87 National Basketball Association victory over the sagging Detroit Pistons Saturday night.

Frazier scored 18 points and Carr 16, while five other Cavaliers reached double figures. The victory was the third straight for Cleveland and its 10th in its last 12 game, keeping the Cavs atop the Central Division.

Evangelista wins by kayo to keep title

Coopman, his eye and mouth bleeding, fell to the canvas and was counted out. He tried to get up, but collapsed onto the mat again. The time of the knockout was 2:31.

Graziano rallies S. Carolina

Graziano scored six of his game-high 21 points in the last six minutes after sitting out about five minutes in foul trouble.

The opening game of the season for both teams was ragged throughout. Minnesota shot just 38 percent from the floor, and South Carolina was only slightly more accurate at 40 percent.

The Gamecocks had a 47-40 lead with 11:26 to playwhen Graziano went to the bench. The Golden Gophers closed to 49-48 with 6:'0 to play.

Graziano re-entered the game and scored two quick points. After freshman Rich Wejnert hit two free throws, Graziano scored to stretch South Carolina's lead to 55-48 with 4:27 to play. It was not close after that.

Tar Heels whip Oregon State, 94-63

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Mike O'Koren tossed in 21 points, including 15 in the first half, and Phil Ford added 20 as the top-ranked Tar Heels rolled to a 94-63 seasonopening win Saturday night over Oregon State.

The Beavers threatened only once, opening a 3-point lead late in the first half. But the Tar Heels scored 18 consecutive points for a 44-29 halftime lead.

Forward Ricky Lee led Oregon State with 17 points before he fouled out with 8:07 left in the game. Lee went out with Oregon State down by 20, and when Ford converted two shots from Lee's foul, the Tar Heels went up 71-49.

Rich Yonakor had 12 points for the Tar Heels, as did Tom Zaliagiris. Alonzo Campbell added 10 points for Oregon State.

Cincinnati breezes by Akron Zips, 91-81

CINCINNATI (AP) — Forward Pat Cummings scored 23 points to pace ninth-ranked Cincinnati to a 91-81 victory over Akron in a college basketball season opener for both teams Saturday night.

The victory was Cincinnati's 61st consecutive home court victory — the longest current major college streak in the nation.

Akron jumped off to an early lead as Chuck Boons scored eight points but Cincinnati tied the score at 16 and went on to lead 49-39 at the half.

West Texas State defeats Panhandle

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The West Texas State Buffaloes opened their basketball season with a 69-38 victory over Panhandle State in a non-conference battle in Amarillo Saturday night.

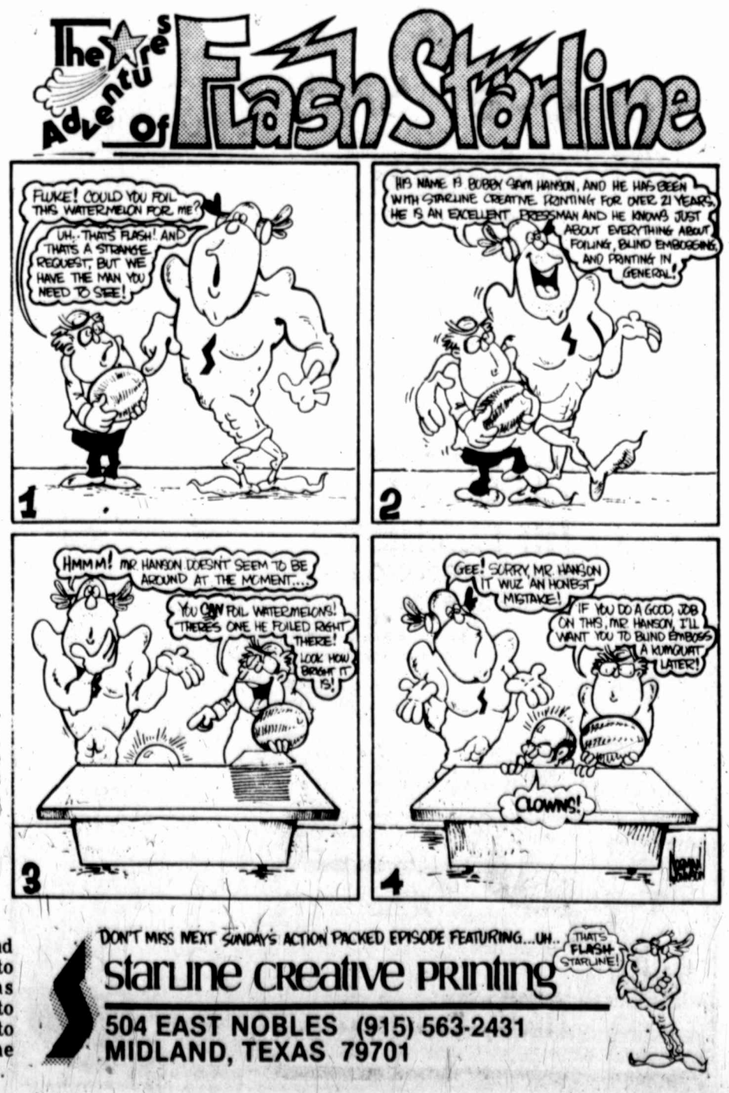

West Texas, coming off an 18-12 season last year, started two freshmen, Carl Johnson and Tony Ellis, who responded with a total of 17 points. But All Missouri Valley Conference guard Maurice Cheeks with 23 points and center Reed Addison with 20 points and 14 rebounds decided the final outcome of the game.

San Antonio downs Bucks

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Veteran Louie Dampier helped San Antonio out of the gate fast Saturday night and the Spurs cleaned up on Milwaukee, 129-107 in a National Basketball Association contest.

Dampier poured in 16 firsthalf ptints as San Antonio stopped Miwaukee's win streak at three.

Larry Kenon chipped in 26 points and pulled down 12 rebounds for the Spurs.

Supremacy rode on two-pointer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Penn State linebacker Ron Hostetler said he and tackle Matt Millen dug in with confidence as they awaited a two-point conversion try by the University of Pittsburgh Saturday on a snow-covered field.

"I looked at Matt, and he looked at me," Hostetler said.

"Matt even gave me a smile, and I smiled at him. The pressure was on them. They had to score."

PITT DIDN'T score, and it lost 15-13 in the nationally televised battle for Eastern football supremacy.

Pitt was denied on its twopoint try when fullback Elliott Walker powered off his left side and was turned back by Millen shy of the goal line, which was obliterated by the snow.

"It was close, but the officials said we didn't make it," said Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill. "So we didn't make it."

Hostetler was voted the game's outstanding player after making two key interceptions in the end zone.

In the first quarter, Pitt drove to the Penn State 1-yard line but it was pushed back to the nine by a penalty and a 3- yard loss before Hostetler made his first end zone steal of a Matt Cavanaugh pass.

Late in the fourth quarter, Pitt drove to the Penn State 8- yard line before Hostetler made his second interception.

"I JUGGLED it a little bit, it seemed like an eternity," said the 6-foot-1, 214-pounder, who had a nonviolent Mennonite upbringing in central Pennsylvania.

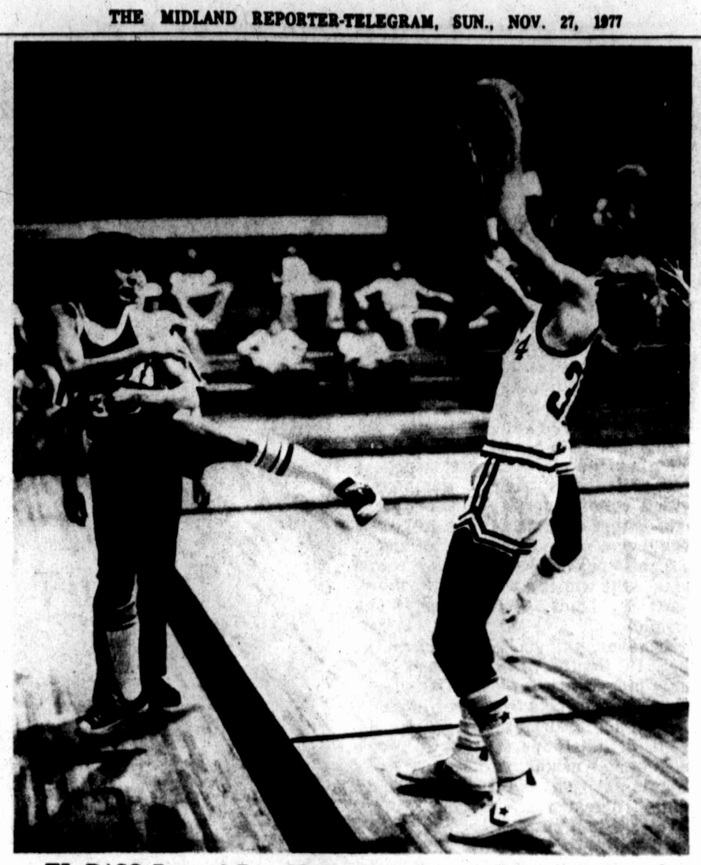

Cavanaugh, who fractured his left arm in Pitt's nationally televised opener with Notre Dame, also lost a fumble Saturday that set up a Penn State field goal.

"I'm personally upset with the way I played," said Cavanaugh.

"It's hard, but the year's been successful. I'm just going to try to forget about it."

Cavanaugh noted that Hostetler's first quarter interception was pivotal because a touchdown then would have given Pitt a 14-3 lead.

"That turned the game around, and I put them in it," Cavanaugh said.

NMMI bumps off WTC to win Wool tourney

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Underdog New Mexico Military Institute won its own Wool Bowl basketball tournament Saturday by defeating defending champion Western Texas 89-78.

The hot hand of tournament Most Valuable Player Jerome Mobley, who tossed in 34 points in the championship game, carried NMMI to the victory. Mobley had led NMMI to the title game with a 20-point performance in NMMI's 66-58 semifinal win over Ranger, Texas, Junior College Friday.

NMMI got off to a fast start in the championship tilt, and held a 15-point bulge throughout most of the contest. It led 58-43 at the half.

Western, led by Julio Gallardo's 26 points, managed to cut the margin to nine points with 1:30 left in the game, but NMMI turned on the steam and won going away.

Consolation action for fifth place saw Oklahoma City Southwest defeat Wayland, Texas, Baptist College junior varsity 78-61, while the game for seventh place went to New Mexico Junior College, which downed Navajo Community College 101-85.

Oppressed Army shucks yoke of Navy tyranny

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Army quarterback Leamon Hall had difficulty finding words to describe how he felt about the Cadets' first win over Navy in five years.

Hall, who guided Army to a 17-14 win over the Midshipmen Saturday, thought about going back to West Point in disgrace if Army had lost their classic battle.

"The game is just a game. But it's built up by everybody else. Going back to West Point and those cold, grey skies is just not conducive to good thinking. It just means the whole rest of the year."

TALKING ABOUT the previous four games when the Army was drubbed by Navy, Hall said, "That's all obliterated now."

Mike Castelli, Army's place kicker who booted a 21-yard field goal in the second period to put the Cadets ahead 10-0, saw the game from a very personal point of view.

"This is the last game I'll ever play," said the six-foot 210-pound senior. "And to go out with a winning season and beating Navy is just a great feeling."

Navy quarterback Bob Leszczynski, who threw an interception that led to an Army touchdown and another that set up an Army field goal, thought about the biting cold and the swirling wind.

"BOTH OF the interceptions were poorly thrown balls." he said. "I just couldn't get loose out there today. I was doing everything to stay warm.

"You never could say you had the wind factor out there. One moment it was with you and then it was swirling around," he said. The 25-milean-hour wind blew throughout the game and gusted to 33.

Holtz calls OU best in nation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Univrsity of Arkansas football Coach Lou Holtz says Oklahoma — the Razorbacks' Orange Bowl opponent — is "probably the best football team in the country."

Holtz, whose sixth-ranked Razorbacks wrapped up a 10-1 season with a 17-14 Thanksgiving victory over Texas Tech, watched Oklahoma finish its regular season 10-1 with a 38-7 triumph over Nebraska on Friday.

Third-ranked Oklahoma lost to Texas 13-6 on Oct. 8. Arkansas lost to Texas 13-9 the following week.

"Texas is a great football team, but Oklahoma has improved tremendously," Holtz said.

HE WATCHED the Nebraska-Oklahoma game knowing the Razorbacks would play the winner Jan. 2 in Miami.

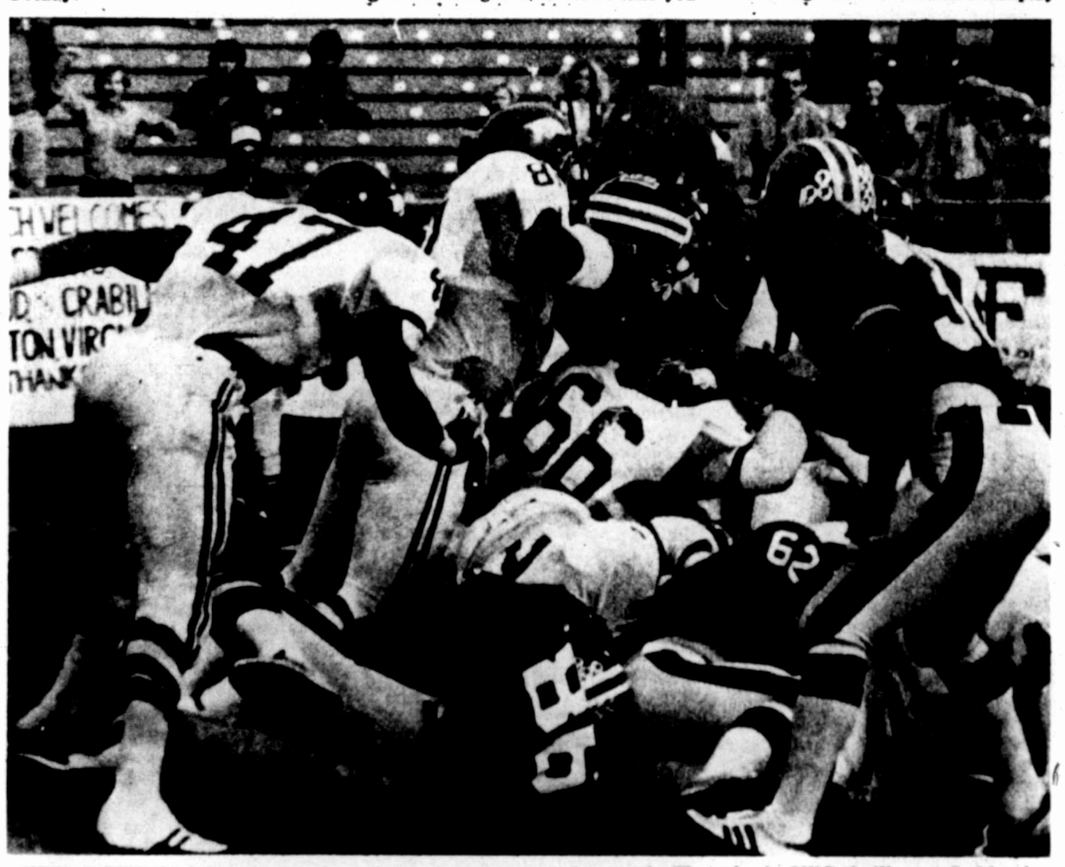

"If you want to look for something good in the game, it didn't take you long to determine which team you had to play," Holtz said. "My wife sat there watching it. She said, 'Boy, are they good.' When you go to the Orange Bowl you don't expect to play Our Sisters of the Poor with a 2-9 record.

"We sure didn't expect to play somebody as good as what Oklahoma appears," he said. "I know a lot of people in the state expect them to blow us out of the stadium, but I assure you one thing, it will be a great football game and Arkansas will play extremely well."

Holtz described the Sooners as "awesome."

"THEIR OFFENSE is super. Their defense is underrated. They have tremendous speed and tremendous quickness.

"Right now, Oklahoma is a better football team than we are by a pretty good margin. But, we plan on being a lot better for the bowl game than what we've been thus far.

Permian downs Lamar

runs of nine and 11 by Vines, keyed the drive.

BRIAN VICKERS picked off a Lamar pass just before halftime at the Panther 22 to turn the Vikings away. Godfrey had hit split end Tommy Ruderer with a 17-yard pass to Permian's 40 on the previous play.

Permian struck quickly, like they have been doing in the first two playoff games, going 66 yards in three plays following the kickoff to start the second half.

Lambert broke for 17 yards and then Mojo pulled the flea-flicker pass with Lambert pitching back to Vines, who in turn hit Vickers with a 47-yard strike to the Lamar one. Vines banged over and Orosco's PAT made it 14-7 with 11:15 left in the third period over the stunned Vikings.

Lamar took the kickoff and fumbled on the first play with Byron Taylor recovering at the Viking 20. A 15-yard penalty momentarily stopped Mojo, but Vines hit Huey Chancellor with a 29-yard pass and two plays later, Vines dialed wingback John Murey's number for a 10-yard TD pass. Orosco's kick made it 21-7 with 9:33 left in the third period.

THE JITTERY Vikings took the kickoff and fumbled again, this time with Permian's Vickers recovering at the Lamar 34. A pass interference call on Lamar at the Viking 18 gave Permian a first down and then Vines scampered 18 yards for the score to make it 27-7 with 7:18 left in the period. Orosco tacked on the PAT to make it 28-7.

Orosco barely missed on a 37-yard field goal attempt late in the third period, but the Panthers added another TD in the final quarter, just for good measure.

Brian Harris, Mojo linebacker, picked off a Lamar pass at the Viking 36 and in six plays, the Panthers scored. Lambert had runs of nine, seven and four and then fullback Mark Graves changed over from the one for the TD. Orosco's PAT a made it 35-7 with 4:02 left in the game.

Lamar drove from its own 39 to the Permian 25 against Mojo subs before time ran out.

WHILE MOJO was without Babcock, who is the team's leading scorer and rusher, Lamar was also without the services of stellar tailback Tom Kidd who suffered a broken cheek bone in the Arlington Heights game. He too, was on the sidelines during the game.

Lamar winds up with a 9-3 record while Permian takes a 12-0-0 mark into the Monterey game against the Plainsmen who stand 11-0-1 on the year.

Permian gave up 11 first downs in the first half, but only four in the second half as its rugged defense again stood out. The Panthers lost defensive end David Clyburn in the second period when he suffered a knee injury on a sweep by the Vikings.

Lambert and Vines led Permian's rushing attack with 66 and 58 yards while Teckineburg picked up 85 yards for the Vikings. Vines hit four of six passes for 99 yards.

Vines wound up scoring three touchdowns and passed for another for a total offense of 157 yards, by far his best single performance of the season for the Panthers.

something I've dreamed of doing ever since I was a little kid."

"It's the ultimate."

He went on, "The two things I had always hoped I might someday do in football was play for Texas and then one day play for the national championship."

Copeland has gotten his wish.

McEachern's success story this season and his part in the Longhorns' title-chase goes beyond belief.

Some day it's going to make a great movie.

He was a lowly third-string quarterback when the season began. Then came the Oklahoma game. Early in the first half, Texas' two top signal callers, Mark McBath and Jon Aune, went down with knee injuries. McEachern got the call and the rest is history.

"It's phenomenal what Randy has done," Copeland said with deep respect for his teammate. "He was third string, which meant he didn't even get a chance to work out at all with the first two units.

"Most guys in his position wouldn't have even kept at it and wouldn't have been prepared to come in and take over. But Randy was. He waited and he got his chance, and he deserves a lot of the credit for us being where we are now."

Westminster wins with conversion

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa. (AP) — A two-point conversion by Dave Hassen clinched Westminster's 14-13 football vicotry over West Virginia's Concord College in the NAIA Division 2 semifinals Friday.

Westminster, the defending division champion, was trailing Concord 13-8 until junior quarterback Steve Kraus completed a 14-yard scoring pass to senior tight end John Wilkie with 9:11 left in the game. Kraus then threw to Hassen for the winning conversion.

In the first period, Concord's Lawrence Hamilton picked up a Westminster punt blocked by Harry Evanoff. Hamilton returned the ball 40 yards for a touchdown. The extra point attempt by Terry Hughes failed.

Westminster, 10-0, meets California Lutheran at Thousand Oaks, Calif., Dec. 3 for the division championship.

Three minutes later, McEachern flipped a nine-yard scoring pass to Alfred Jackson and six minutes after that, Jackson made a leaping grab of a 12-yard pass between two defenders in the end zone to make it 33-7.

Texas A&M, 7-3 with one regularseason game remaining, and headed for the Bluebonnet Bowl against Southern California, had to be content with becoming the first team to score more than one touchdown against Texas on the ground this season.

Cowboys seek missing spark against Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's another backs-up-aginst-thewall duel Sunday in the intense rivalry between the Dallas Cowboys and the Washington Redskins, and the outcome could further tighten the close National Football Conference East race.

The division-leading Cowboys won their first eight games and appeared to have had a virtual lock on the title but they lost their last two games to teams that needed victories to remain in the playoff sweepstakes. In Washington, 6-4, thez meet a other one, especially with the thrashing taken by St. Louis on Thanksgiving.

"We need something to get us going again," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said last week. "If we go up there and beat Washington in its back yard, it'll give us a big psychological lift."

If Dallas defeats the Redskins, they just about have the title wrapped up, with a twogame lead and Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver remaining.

However, win or lose, the Redskins still have a chance for a wild-card slot although it will take a lot of "ifs" should a loss be incurred.

A victory over the Cowboys would have Dallas still in the East lead, 8-3, followed by St. Louis and Washington, both 7-4, with the Cardinals and Redskins to meet in two weeks, a game that both teams must win to remain in the wild-card race.

The Redskins' victory, combined with a victory over St. Louis and one over either Buffalo or Los Angeles would give Washington the wild card.

If the Redskins lose to Dallas, they could still win the wild card if they beat St. Louis, Buffalo and Los Angeles.

However, still to be considered is the NFC Central in which Minnesota and Chicago, also a winner Thursday, can take two spots from the National Conference for the playoffs.

"It definitely puts us in a good position," Washington defensive end Dennis Johnson said after watching Miami defeat the Cardinals 55-14. "We're a half game behind now and our destiny is in our hands.

"We just got to go ahead and do it now. We're not even thinking that we could win three out of four. We're just got to take care of our business on Sunday."

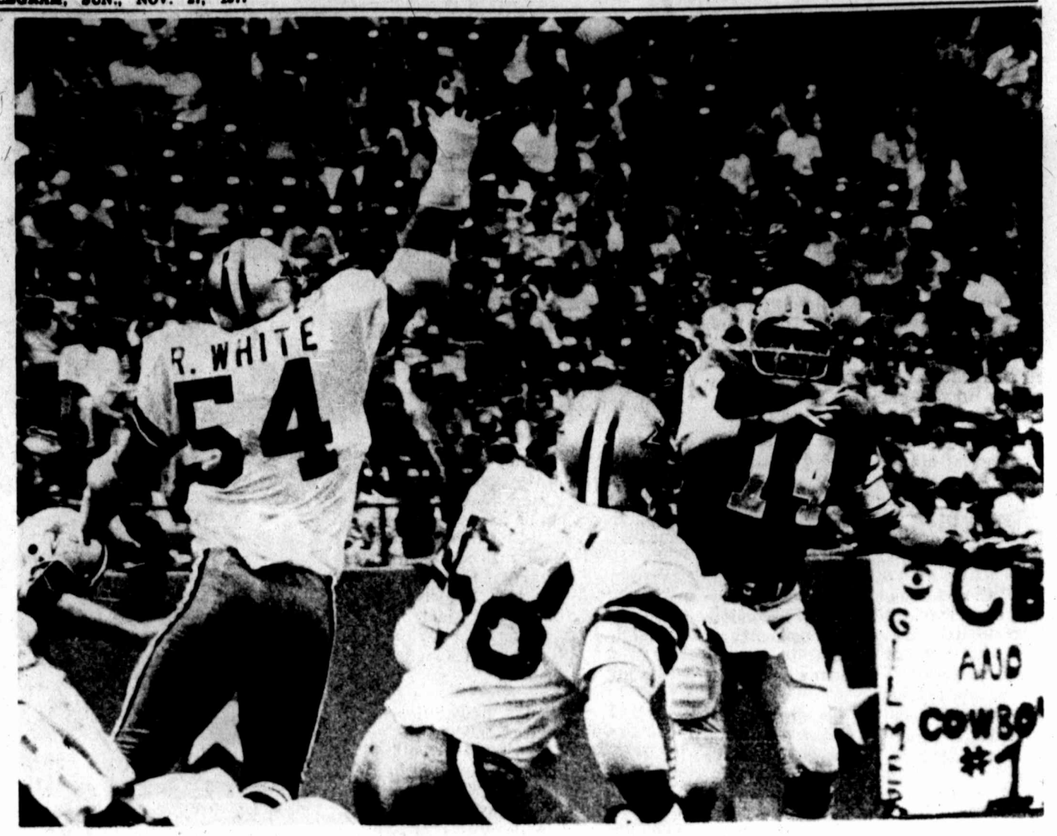

The Redskins will go against the Cowboys without the services of safety Jake Scott, who broke two ribs a week ago. Eddie Brown will replace Scott. Also listed as doubtfuls are linebacker Chris Hanburger, the defensive signal caller, and defensive tackle Bill Brundige.

The Cowboys' rookie running back Tony Dorsett bruised his knee in practice on Wednesday and was listed as doubtful. However, he said, "If the healing process continues, I'll play."

The Cowboys dominate the latest NFC statistical lists, ranking second in total offense9 They boast the leading scorer in kicker Efren Herrera, the No. 1 receiver in Drew Pearson the No. 2 passer in Roger Staubach and an offense that burned the Redskins for 34 points and 435 yards of total offense when the teams last met, Oct. 16, with Dallas taking a 3416 victory.

When it comes to shakin' a wicked hip, Dallas Cowboys' cheerleader Janice Garner could give hip-swinging halfback Tony Dorsett a few pointers. (Staff photo).

Dodgers up ducat prices

In making the announcement Friday, the team said box seats would remain at $4.50 and general admission would also stay the same, at $2 for adults and $1 for children.

If snow's slow, don't forget there's Stowe

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times

STOWE, Vt. — If the West's snow drought goes into Act II this winter, keep Stowe in mind.

Not only is Stowe closer to home, the jet lag is a lot shorter.

Besides, as the home of the famous Trapp family singers, the hills of Stowe are alive with the sound of music. It was about the Trapps, you will recall, that the award-winning musical was written.

Julie Andrews played Baroness Maria von Trapp. Now the Baroness has cast aside her title to play the role of innkeeper at the popular Trapp Family Lodge in Stowe.

The 55-room inn is as Old World as a peasant blouse and a pair of lederhosen. Window boxes overflow with flowers. Smoke drifts from the chimney. There is the look of a Salzburg chalet on a Vermont hillside.

During summertime, guests ride, hike, play golf and tennis. When snows fall, the skier appears on the scene, downhill acrobats as well as those dedicated to the cross-country marathon.

Skiers at the Trapp Family Lodge have access to 60 miles of cross-country trails, many of them hand-cut by Johannes von Trapp, the Baroness' son and a forester by profession.

GUESTS COME to the Trapp Family Lodge by the carload and busload. Because of the movie, the lodge is a curiosity; someone is forever inquiring for Julie Andrews. Instead, they run headlong into the real baroness, whose husband died in 1947. He is buried with two of the couple's children on a nearby hillside.

The setting is startlingly reminiscent of Salzburg. Rolling hills break away to the storybook village of Stowe, which is just a yodel away.

The baroness' guests lounge in her living room. Potted plants fill an alcove. Other planters hang from the dining room ceiling.

With only 55 rooms available, the lodge is almost always filled. Tariffs run $23-$32 single and $27-$40 (per person) double, including breakfast and dinner. Added to the bill is a 15 per cent service charge for avoiding the nuisance of tipping.

While the lodge is colorful, it is not Stowe's most elegant inn. That distinction is claimed without argument by the fine, European-style Topnotch at Stowe with its floor-to-ceiling picture windows, its carved entry doors, antiques and possibly the snuggest bar in all New England.

THERE IS no lobby. Only a relaxful living room with bowls of fresh apples and a fireplace. And instead of a front desk, guests register in a library. It is crammed with books. Additionally, each room has its own library, and no two rooms are alike.

Dozens of Old World touches grace the lodge. It employs a concierge. The chef is European. so is the maitre d' who reigns over the princely dining room.

The philosophy is simply this: "To run a small, intimate inn (76 rooms) the way the Europeans do it — with casual, informal elegance and great attention to every detail."

The Topnotch at Stowe is one of only four New England inns honored with a four-star rating. It was earned. Beds are turned down at night. Imported chocolates are placed on the pillows. Ice is delivered to guest rooms in the afternoon (no fussing for it over the telephone). And precisely at 4 p.m., in the true English tradition, tea and pastries are served in the spacious living room.

AT THE Topnotch at Stowe, attention is given to every whim with a grace and a politeness that is refreshing in an era of quick service and slapdash innkeeping.

Besides superb rooms, the Topnotch has a couple of town houses plus a chalet with three bedrooms and two baths. Rates start at $45 a day single and $55 double; suites begin at $85 and the chalet is up for bid at $130. It will sleep seven guests.

Winter at the Topnotch involves skiing, sledding, snow-shoeing, tobogganning and ice skating on the inn's own lighted pond. For reservations, write to the Topnotch at Stowe, Mt. Mansfield Road, Stowe, Vt. 05672.

It is only a five-minute drive uphill to the Lodge at Smuggler's Notch, where skiers gather in wintertime and summer's guests swim, play golf, tennis and croquet or else take to the hills on day-long picnic hikes.

Rates start at $28 a day for room, breakfast and dinner.

Down a country lane, others sign in at the Stowehof, with the prettiest innkeeper this side of Hawaii, which is precisely where Moanikeala Bartholomew hails from. a former Hawaiian airline employe, she reigned as Miss Hawaii in 1959.

Now she reigns over a 23-room inn with its cozy lounge and ancient Victrola. Lovers snuggle in a small nook beside the fireplace and clocks from around the world chime in unison.

Stowehof is set on 30 acres of gardens: Deer appear in winter and goats come to graze on the sod roof in summer. When snow falls, hot buttered rum is served by a log fire along with a bubbling cheese samovar.

STOWE BOASTS dozens of other inns and lodges. Green Mountain Inn with its 61 rooms (rates from $32 daily with breakfast and dinner) is filled with old-fashioned goodness. Its proprietor insists the "best food in Vermont" comes from its kitchens. For the window shopper and the browser, Green Mountain Inn is situated conveniently in downtown Stowe.

Similar warmth is bestowed by Ten Acres Lodge, a rambling old New England inn, circa 1840. Its rooms are spotless. Its four-stool bar is a delight. Rates: $20-$32 per person per day, breakfast and dinner included.

When winter is heavy upon the land, Stowe's visitors crowd the Swisspot, a village restaurant with a dozen kinds of hamburgers. The St. Moritz is served with sour cream and soy sauce. The Davos comes with tartar sauce and onions.

Bear claims battle was won in trenches

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's 48-21 football victory over Auburn Saturday "was won up front in the trenches," Coach Bear Bryant said in the victors dressing room.

"I think our lines dominated — the offense in the second half and the defense all day."

Coach Doug Barfield, whose Auburn Tigers finished 5-6 in his second season, said: "Let's congratulate Alabama for their victory and wish them well in the Sugar Bowl" against Ohio State Jan. 2.

"They played well. We didn't play that poorly, but we made some errors starting the second half and that let them have a couple of quick ones," Barfield added.

Bryant said the Crimson Tide defense "did well with the exception of two or three plays that gave them cheap touchdowns. Auburn did well. They have some talented people who made us look bad at times."

Bryant also said that Auburn's kicking game was better than Alabama's.

Ozzie Newsome, an Alabama receiver, set a Southeastern Conference record for a career. In his four years, he has caught 102 passes for 2,070 yards, an average of 20.29 a s 19.95 yards per catch by Andy Hamilton of Louisiana State, 1969-71.

Rosewall advances to finals at Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Ken Rosewall of Australia and Billie Jean King of the United States won their semifinal matches Saturday in the $125,000 Gunze World Tennis at Tokyo's Aoyama Gakuen University gymnasium.

The veteran Rosewall easily beat fellow Australian John Newcombe 6-3, 6-3 in the men's singles and King, six-time Wimbledon singles champion, whipped Rosie Casals, another American, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2 in the women's singles.

Rosewall moves into the finals to play Romania's Ilie Natase for the men's singles title. King meets Czechoslovakian Martina Navratilova, who now plays out of Dallas, Texas, in the final Sunday.

Each winner gets $20,000.

Turnbull, Goolagong to clash in finals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Wendy Turnbull battles Evonne Goolagong in Sunday's title match in the $75,000 women's tennis classic after both scored decisive semifinal victories against the tournament's top seeds.

Turnbull, celebrating her birthday at center court, defeated Sue Barker 7-5, 6-3 and then Cawley needed just 43 minutes to whip Betty Stove 6-1, 6-2.

Turnbull said she would leave her 25th birthday party early Saturday night to prepare for the title match.

"I have never defeated Evonne but then I had never beaten Sue before, either," Turnbull said.

Barker was hampered by a recurrence of a hamstring injury in the eighth game of the first set. She had first injured her left leg during an international tournament in Sydney last week.

Goolagong was surprised at her easy victory over Stove.

"I didn't expect to win last week in Sydney and I'm just as surprised to be in the finals this time," she said.

Austrian leads way in skiing

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Austria's five-time Alpine World Cup holder Annemarie Moser-Proell Saturday topped 51 competitors of 10 countries as she won the first downhill ski race of the season on the Mt. Gamskogel track.

Mrs. Moser-Proell's winning time was 1 minute, 40.27 seconds in the race, part of the World Series competition.

The freckle-faced Austrian woman, who returned to competitive skiing last season after dropping one year to probe be a homemaker, was more than one second faster than her closest opponent, Marie Theres Nadig of Switzerland.

USC 'goat' saves game, bowl trip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Jordan may have gone from goat to hero in the minds of many Southern California followers, but not as far as he was concerned.

"I was unhappy about missing those extra points but I wouldn't have felt responsible had we lost the game," said Jordan, who nailed a 38-yard field goal with time running out to give Southern Cal a 29-27 victory over arch-rival UCLA Friday night. "I knew my job was to kick a field goal and I did it."

The boot was the final chapter in what ranks as one of the finest of the 47 USC-UCLA football games to date. The Bruins had rallied from a 26-10 deficit to go ahead by one point with 2:51 left, only to see the Trojans triumph with just two seconds to play.

BY WINNING, USC earned a berth in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl New Year's Eve against either Texas or Texas A&M. More significantly, the decision means that Washington will represent the Pacific-8 Conference in the Rose Bowl against Michigan Jan. 2.

And UCLA, which could have won a Rose Bowl berth by beating the Trojans, is through for the season.

Jordan, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound junior from San Francisco, missed his only two conversion attempts of the game, his first failures of the season in that department. He was perfect in 23 attempts before Friday night.

"I JUST pushed those extra points, they were identical," said Jordan. "I have no idea what happened.

"I wasn't nervous, it happened so fast I didn't have time to be nervous," he said of his game-winning kick. "I knew there was a good chance that I'd have to kick a field goal; I had plenty of time to prepare for it."

Rob Hertel, who directed the Trojans from their 27-yard line to the UCLA 20 as time ran out, had what he called "the best game of my life." Hertel connected on 15 of 24 passes for 254 yards and three touchdowns.

"This was pretty much our Rose Bowl" said Hertel, who set USC single-season records with 16 touchdown passes, 1,899 yards — and 18 interceptions — through the air this fall. "There's been a lot of things said about us all year but we stayed together tonight.

"This is the biggest thrill of my life."

THE BRUINS grabbed an early 10-0 lead on a 52-yard field goal by Frank Corral and a 1-yard plunge by Theotis Brown in the first quarter, but an interception by USC's Ricky Odom at the Southern Cal 29-yard line late in the opening period got the Trojans going.

USC moved into position for a 25-yard field goal by Jordan early in the second quarter as the Trojans proceded to score on five consecutive possessions.

Hertel fired scoring strikes of 20 yards to William Gay and 40 yards to Kevin Williams, and hit Gay with a two-point conversion following the second TD, making it 17-10 at halftime.

The Hertel-Williams combination clicked again early in the third quarter, this time for 27 yards, and Jordan hit a 36- yard field goal moments later, giving the Trojans their 16- point lead and, it appeared, the game.

BUT THE Bruins had different ideas. Sophomore Rick Bashore, playing only 20 days after suffering a broken rib and a collapsed lung in a game at Oregon, fired a 32-yard scoring pass to James Owens to get UCLA back into contention with 5:03 remaining in the third quarter.

Corral kicked a 20-yard field goal in the opening minutes of the final period, making it 26- 20. Shortly later, the Bruins took possession at their 20-yard line following a 55-yard punt by USC's Marty King.

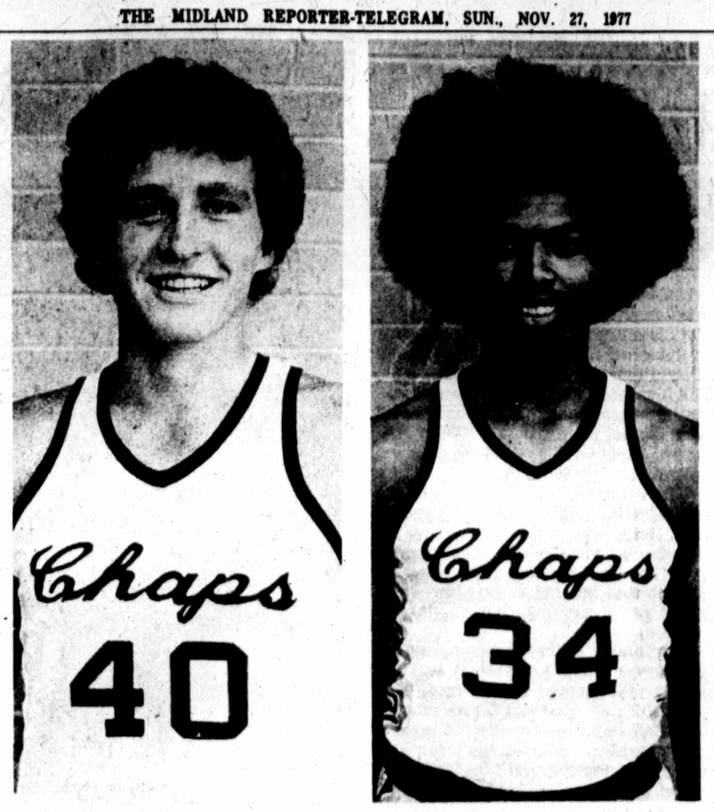

Bashore then engineered a time-consuming 80-yard, 16-play march which temporarily gave UCLA the lead and, just as temporarily, thoughts of Pasadena.

The go-ahead score came on a 2-yard pass from Bashore to Don Peder son in a fourth-down situation.

"THE LESSON Learned is that the Trojans don't die easily," said USC Coach John Robinson. "A lot of people had us considered dead, but the Trojans kept coming back. It was an absolutely great football game — for both teams.

"We're looking forward to going to Houston and playing in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl," he added. "I'm thankful for the invitation, and I'm sure Washington is thankful too."

"You have to give USC the credit,' said disappointed UCLA Coach Terry Donahue. "They came back with very little time remaining. They drove and scored. They did just a tremendous job.

Chaps face FPC in WJCC opener

Midland College swings into its long and trying Western Junior College Conference basketball schedule at 8 p.m. Monday against Frank Phillips College of Borger in the MC Physical Education building.

The Chaps take a 5-4 record into the WJCC inaugural after suffering a 90-71 defeat at Henderson Junior College and a 105-94 loss at Tyler Junior College last week.

"We just haven't gotten consistent with our offense or our defense," Coach Jerry Stone said. In both games, the Chaps fell behind and couldn't catch up.

ALTHOUGH THE Chaps finished second in the WJCC race last year and reached the Region V finals at Abilene, they have their work cut out for them this year. Scouting reports indicate every team in the WJCC is as strong as last year and most seem stronger.

MC's progress has been hampered by youth, only four returnees, and injuries and illness.

One of the brightest spots so far has been 5-9 Cullen Mayfield. The take-charge guard who l ed Dallas South Oak Cliff to the state AAAA championship last year and was named the outstanding player in the state, has been everything Stone has hoped.

"CULLEN IS a leader, one of the quickest players I have ever seen, and makes the big plays—the steals, the assists or the goals—when we need them," Stone said.

Ron Jones, the deadly outside shooter, is back and has taken his team captain's job seriously. His defense has improved and the Stillwater, Okla., sophomore is making the inside plays when needed.

Six-six Ricky Hudgins and 6-7 Clifford Taylor were known quantities the Chaps were depending upon inside, but 6-7 Luis Alvarado, a slender freshman from El Paso, has been a bonus find, scoring in double figures, displaying defensive quickness and shooting well from outside.

ALVIN MAYES, the fourth veteran from Tulsa, was a questionmark going into the season because of knee surgery, but he is still one of the top defensive hands on the team.

Henry White, Chicago Simeon High, is another freshman who has performed ably for Stone.

If the Chaps have a strength over last year which may pay off in the long WJCC race, it's what appears to be a deeper bench.

Although Mike Mitchell has departed to coach Southern Idaho, Western Texas under former UTEP star Nolan Richardson figures once again to be the team to beat in the race this year.

OTHER STRONG challengers figure to be Amarillo, Howard, Odessa, and New Mexico Military Institute.

After Monday's opener, the Chaps travel to NMMI Thursday and return to MC Dec. 5 to play Amarillo before closing out pre-Christmas play at Howard in Big Spring Dec. 8.

The Midland YMCA gymnastic team will perform at halftime Monday...Admission to MC games is $2 for adults and $1 for students...Season tickets for individuals and families are still on sale, according to Athletic Director Delnor Poss. They are $16 for an adult, $8 for a student and $32 for an entire family.

'63 rerun for Huskies

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Huskies experienced a moment of deja vu Friday night when they learned no one could tamper with their ticket to the Rose Bowl.

They were in the same position as in 1963, another Rose Bowl year.

The 1963 Huskies lost their first three games, then came back to win all but one conference game. The loss was to UCLA.

This year's version of the Huskies dropped three of their first four and then came back to win all but one conference game. The loss was to UCLA.

In both years, the fate of the Huskies' Rose Bowl dreams hinged on the outcome of the USC-UCLA game.

BACK IN 1963, the Huskies needed a UCLA victory to clinch the Rose Bowl berth. This year they needed a USC victory, and that's exactly what they got as the Trojans downed the Bruins 29-27 Friday on a 38- yard field goal by Frank Jordan with two seconds left in the game.

"It was like coming off the field after a big win," said Washington coach Don James as pandemonium erupted in his living room where coaches, friends and reporters gathered to watch the game.

"I've dreamed about going to the Rose Bowl since I was in high school. It's been the longest week of the year, waiting," said Mike Jackson, the Huskies standout linebacker who watched the game in his parent's home in Pasco.

"It's unbelievable. I'm sooooo happy," said sophomore tailback Joe Steele.

IF UCLA had won Friday's game, the Bruins would have faced the Michigan Wolverines Jan. 2 in Pasadena, with Washington up against either Texas or Texas A&M in the Bluebonnet Bowl. USC's victory means the Trojans instead will be heading to Houston for the New Year's Eve game.

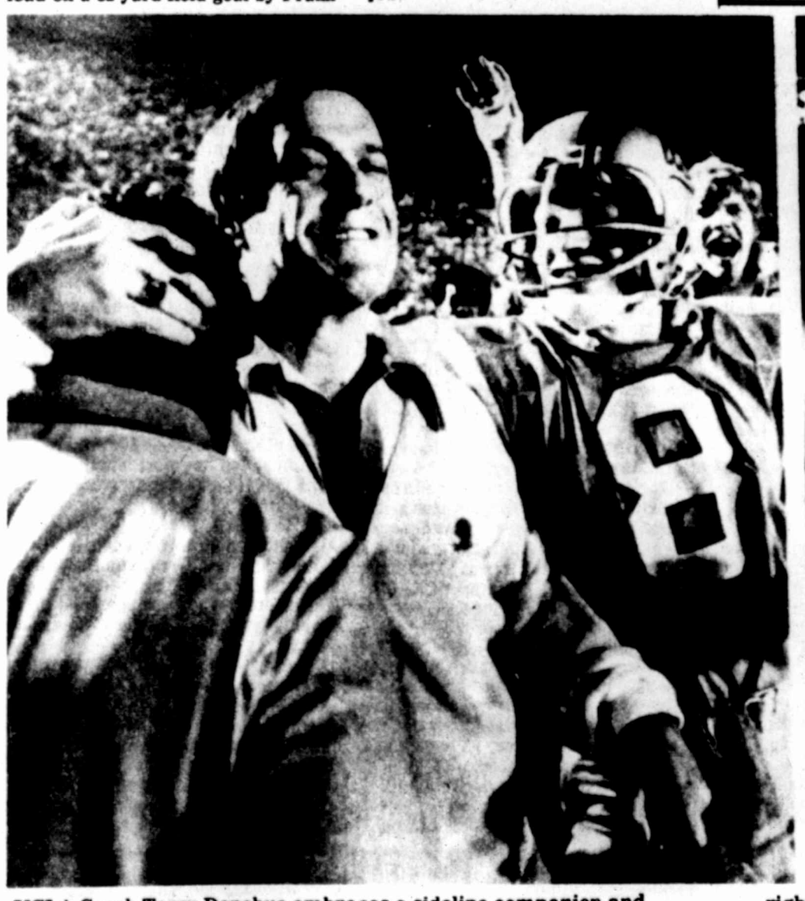

"I was starting to think about Texas, and going to the Houston Astrodome," James said.

"I tell you it's a dream come true. I tell you, that field goal kicker, I could kiss him right now," said Dick Sesniak, Washington's offensive coordinator.

This time the Huskies will face Michigan in the Pasadena classic. In 1963 they lost to Illinois 17-7.

"WE KNOW we're going to face a tough team (Michigan) and we'll just have to prepare well," Jackson said.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said of the Huskies, "I haven't had a chance to see them on film. I will say I saw them play Minnesota and they lost that game.

UCLA Coach Terry Donohue embraces a sideline companion and is all smiles as Bruins score their last touchdown to take a one-point lead in the final three minutes at Los Angeles Friday. On right, Donohue has just shaken Coach John Robinson's hand after Trojans won on a field goal in last two seconds. (AP Laserphoto).

Terry's talk is prophetic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA Coach Terry Donahue said he didn't realize just how prophetic his intermission pep talk to his team would be.

"At the half," Donahue said following the Bruins' 29-27 loss to Southern Cal Friday night, "we told our kids we'd fight to the bitter end.

"And I'll be darned if we didn't."

Donahue was in good spirits considering he'd just watched his Bruins lose their chance to play in the Rose Bowl. Washington won the Pacific-8 championship and Jan. 2 date against Michigan by virtue of the USC victory.

"Our football team has had great character all season and tonight was no exception," Donahue said. "It was a tremendous, tremendous contest to witness, to be part of and to coach in.

"It was a classic USC-UCLA game."

Frank Jordan's 38-yard field goal with two seconds remaining gave USC the victory, erasing a 2-yard Rick Bashore to Don Pederson touchdown pass that helped give UCLA a 27-26 lead some three minutes earlier.

"I was optimistic all the way," Donahue said. "I thought we'd be in the Rose Bowl until Jordan made that final kick. They had no timeouts left, what a credit to USC."

Bashore, a sophomore playing his first game since suffering a broken rib and collapsed lung Nov. 5, directed the Bruins from a 26-10 deficit late in the third quarter to their shortlived lead near the finish.

"I'm sore but I'm okay," said Bashore, "All I can say is we played our hearts out."

Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, whose Trojans earned a trip to Houston's Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl at the same time they were knocking UCLA out of the Rose Bowl, said he was pleased Jordan had the chance to win the game.

Ski competition tough grind

AP Sports Writer

She was a somewhat unusual sight in the first-class lounge at Kennedy Airport's international departure terminal. Sitting among the tie-and-vested businessmen and fur-coat set was tiny Abbi Fisher in a T-shirt and blue jeans. Her hair was pulled back in a helter-skelter ponytail and her hands and fingernails were stained by the outdoors.

Abbi, one of the brightest young stars on the U.S. Ski Team, was waiting for a jet to take her to Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany, site of this hear's World Alpine Championships — skiing's own Olympics.

Tomboy that she is, the 20- year-old Fisher was showing some of her teammates — Lindy Cochran and Christin Cooper among them — pictures of a log cabin she built with her own hands near her folks' home in South Conway, N.H.

"I began the first of May, cutting logs three or four hours a day," she said. "I dragged them myself, notched them and used some mud near the property to chink the cabin."

Abbi, barely 100 pounds and not much over 5 feet tall, managed to build the 10-by-12-foot structure by herself. Her father, a high school English teacher, helped only in cutting the windows and door.

"Next summer," she said, "I'll begin splitting shingles for the roof."

THE REGULAR World Cup tour begins in France in early December, and World Alpine Championships will be held at Garmisch-Partenkirchen Jan. 29-Feb 5.

The U.S. Ski Team was to have practiced at the Bavarian Alps resort for two weeks, "but they came back after a week because the snow was so good and then the tourists descended on the place. It was a German holiday," said Joan Chase, projects coordinator for the team.

By the way, everyone came back healthy from training.

FRANZ Klammer, Austria's amazing downhill specialist, has said he will retire from amateur skiing after the World Championships and join the pro ranks, so all eyes will be on him at Garmisch-Partenkirchen this winter.

Just before the World Championships, two downhills will be run at Kitzbuhel, Austria, site of one of the world's most famous downhill races — the Hahnenkamm — and Klammer's home territory. If the weather is good and no young Austrian rockets from obscurity to beat him, Klammer may repeat what was one of the most exciting moments of the 1976 Winter Olympics — his gold medal in the downhill.

One thing is puzzling, though. Klammer has had about as much success at slalom racing recently as Joe Namath has had at the 100-yard dash. And the pros don't run downhills, only the head-to-head slalom races.

Oh well, if it's money Klammer is worried about, he must realize his endorsement, once a pro, will be worth as much or more in Europe as Broadway Joe's is worth over here.

THE TWO southern German villages of Garmisch and Partenkirchen, site of this year's World Alpine Championships Jan. 29-Feb. 5, were first opened to the general public in 1889, when the railroad arrived. Now the area, at the base of the Zugspitz glacier on a 9,721- foot peak of the same name, has about 30 miles of ski trails and employs 80 ski school instructors.

But this resort, about 60 miles southwest of Munich, is far more than just a ski area. Richard Strauss, the composer, made this historically-rich area his home, and it was in Garmisch-Partenkirchen that he wrote "Rosenkavalier" and "Electra," two of his most famous works.

SOME OF the U.S. Ski Team's downhill racers trained during the off-season on newly-invented machine that simulates the leg action of a 3-minute downhill race.

The machine, invented by Peter Schwarz of Idaho Falls, Idaho, is a platform — with footholds similar to water skis — mounted atop a piston.

Ali may meet Ken Norton in Superdome

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Muhammad Ali fighting Ken Norton in the Louisiana Superdome?

It's a possibility, says Superdome manager Denzil Skinner.

Promoter Don King, who has staged the champ's fights in places such as Zaire, the Philippines and Malaysia, was in town Friday to discuss a dome fight.

But it apparently would cost something like $14 million.

Skinner says that "the package looks feasible ...there is a chance."

Oilers rely on big play to keep AFC hopes alive

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's big-play offense will be out to knock off the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday and keep the Oilers in the middle of the tangled chase for first place in the American Football Conference's Central Division.

The Oilers, 5-5, must beat the Chiefs in order to keep up with Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati for a chance at a spot in the National Football League playoffs. A loss to the Chiefs or a loss in any of their remaining games would greatly hurt the chances of the Oilers vaulting into the playoffs.

The big-play offense is triggered by quarterback Dan Pastorini, who completed 21 of 36 passes last week in a victory over Seattle, and is highlighted by the running of speedster Billy "White Shoes" Johnson.

In order to contain the Oilers, the Chiefs must shut down Pastorini's passing to the likes of Ken Burrough and they must keep Johnson's wild end zone celebrations at the end of his touchdown runs to an absolute minimum — say, zero.

JOHNSON HAD an 87-yard punt return for a touchdown called back last week because of a clipping penalty. He dropped to second in punt returns in the NFL standings but it doesn't appear to bother Johnson.

"I've been getting real good blocking and teams have been challenging our special teams. If they keep doing that I think we'll continue to get good returns," Johnson said.

Oiler Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips isn't letting Kansas City's 2-8 record lull the Oilers into a deep sleep for Sunday's contest at the Astrodome.

"This isn't an easy game. They're capable of beating us just like we're capable of beating them," Phillips said.

In Sunday's other National Football League action it's Minnesota at Green Bay, Baltimore at Denver, Los Angeles at Cleveland, Atlanta at Tampa Bay, the New York Giants at Cincinnati, Philadelphia at New England, Pittsburgh at the New York Jets, Kansas City at Houston, New Orleans at San Francisco and San Diego at Seattle. On Monday night it's Buffalo at Oakland.

The Redskins are 6-4 and have been virtually counted out of the playoffs — except by themselves. "So what makes this different from last year? We're 6-4, just like last year. We have to win all four," said Washington defensive tackle Bill Brundige, recalling the '76 season. The Redskins did just that a year ago, winning their final four games including the season finale, 27-14 over the Cowboys, to slip into the playoffs. They slipped right out, though, losing 35-20 to Minnesota in the opening round.

Both teams have been having their troubles of late. Although Washington has won the past two games, they have been far from impressive, barely squeezing past underdog opposition (17-14 over Philadelphia and 10-9 last Monday night over Green Bay). Dallas,which won its first eight games, has since lost to St. Louis 24-17 and Pittsburgh 28-13.

WITH ITS resounding victory over the Cardinals, built on Griese's six touchdown passes, Miami moved within 1½ games of first-place Baltimore in the American Conference East.. The Colts are rated slender underdogs to the Broncos, who are trying to maintain a one-game lead over the Oakland Raiders in the AFC West. The American Conference's Central Division is still the league's most scrambled with Cleveland and Pittsburgh tied for first at 6-4 and Houston and Cincinnati one game behind the Browns and Steelers.

The Bears, by beating Detroit 31-14 last Thursday, severely damaged the Lions' chances of making the playoffs and enhanced their own by pulling within one-half game of firstplace Minnesota in the NFC Central. In the NFC West, Los Angeles has opened a two-game lead over the Atlanta Falcons.

Ballesteros shoots 73, still leads

TOKYO (AP) — Young Severiano Ballesteros of Spain shot a one-over-par 73 Saturday and still managed to take a threeshot lead going into the final round of the $250,000 international golf tournament here.

The 20-year-old Spaniard, who had previous rounds of 68 and 70, has a total score of 211, five-under-par on the 6,986yard, par-72 Phoenix Country Club course.

A total of 60 pros teed off in wet weather on the pine tree dotted layout. Defending champion Graham Marsh of Australia, Americans Hubert Green, Rik Massengale, Miller Barber and Jerry McGee and Japanese pro Shinsaku Maeda shared second place with totals of 214.

Ray Floyd gains tie for lead

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Former Masters champion Ray Floyd fired a 3-under-par 69, the best card Saturday, to climb into a three-way tie for second with Iowa's Bob Bender and Australian Ted Ball after the third round of the $165,000 Champion of Champions golf tournament.

The two Americans, with three-round totals of 5-under-par 211, were only two shots behind the co-leaders, Jack Newton and Bob Shearer, Australia's two internationally recognized stars.

Floyd, who shot earlier rounds of 72 and 70, battled the 6,830-yard Victoria Golf Club layout under dreadful conditions.

In near-100 degree heat, made worse by fiery winds, Floyd carded three birdies as well as an eagle at the 485-yard eighth hole.

At one stage Floyd, Benda, Newton and Shearer were all five-under par for the championship but the two Australians drew ahead with birdies at the final holes.

Floyd has never won a tournament outside the United States.

"I'm playing well enough to win this one and the course suits me," he said. "It's a thinking man's golf course and under pressure on the last day I feel I can do the right thing."

Floyd is not happy with his putting, however.

"I seem to be hitting them right but they just don't go in — like on the 18th when a 12footer hung on the lip," he said.

Deer season gets off to encouraging start

BY TIM LEIFESTE

Reports from hunters, deer processing plants, landowners and Parks and Wildlife Department biologists indicate most everyone is pleased with the deer season so far.

The deer are moving, the weather continues to be relatively mild and most of the animals harvested thus far are in fairly good condition with certain exceptions.

Deer taken near or along river bottomland are fat and healthy due to the good acorn crop in West and Central Texas. However, biologists say this acorn crop fell early this year and is now in short supply.

ON THE other hand, deer harvested from more overly grazed mesquite-savannah flats are of lesser body weight and could be in for some more trouble when and if we get into a hard winter situation.

As you might expect, most of the animals harvested so far are buck deer and will normally be in better condition this time of the year than does.

Does have been reported to be in fair to poor condition due to their diminished ability to successfully compete for food with the rest of the herd.

This is one of the reasons P&WD biologists have been recommending hunters who have access to doe permits utilitze these early in the season while the animals are still in relatively good condition.

SOME RANCHERS in West Texas have taken this advice to heart and have required their hunters to take a doe deer before allowing them to shoot a buck.

Antler development this year has been good and big racks have been reported on several harvested deer. A 26-pointer was taken near Big Lake and a 16-pointer was downed by a 14-year-old from Sweetwater. A 25-pointer was taken off the Rocker B ranch during the first weekend. This is the first time the public has been allowed to hunt on this big ranch for quite some time and it is expected to produce some whoppers.

Striped bass return to No. 1 at Spence

Striped bass moved back into their No. 1 position at Lake E.V. Spence, according to reports from fishermen during the week. Nearly every string included some striped bass, most in the medium range but with a couple going 11 and 16 pounds.

White bass were the second most popular fish with a few black bass and yellow and channel catfish thrown in.

Horney and Herman Mason, Midland, took six stripers going to six pounds and a three-pound channel cat. Curt Denny, Midland, landed 13 white bass and two black bass while Jack Allbright, Odessa, took five stripers going to 16 pounds.

FROM IKE Pate at Sportsman's Lodge on Oak Creek Lake, "If there is a season of the year when it's possible to predict in advance what the fish will do, it's the fall. The often-changing weather keeps the barometer on the move and this is when the fish are most active.

" Normally the day before a cold front arrives offers the best fishing," says Ike.

Richard McGill, Odessa, had a field day with the bass, releasing all of the fish, but within a period of about four hours caught 30 fish from 1 ½ to 6 ½ pounds.

Right now the warm water area is shaping up to be a prime fishing spot. Some claim this is one spot where you can hook on to most anything any time you put bait in the water.

MR. AND Mrs. J.E. Denny, Midland, caught 14 crappie at Lake Colorado City . The crappie and bass have been biting real good out at the Fisharama while crappie and bass were active at Louie's Lakeside Lodge.

The state park drew 1,026 over last weekend.

Delos Nabors, Midland, managed to land two black bass over six pounds while fishing Treasure Lake in Cuba. Nabors reported plastic worms did the trick. Nabors was among the first 100 American fishermen to fish Treasure Lake in some 20 years.

Sun Devils need good rest after 23-6 win over Arizona

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — "We need a rest," said Arizona State University Coach Frank Kush after his Sun Devils stopped Arizona 23-7 in the final Western Athletic Conference football game for the two teams.

ASU will get a rest, but only a short one, as they now must begin to prepare for Penn State, their opponent in the Dec. 25 Fiesta Bowl. The Sun Devils ooved into the post-season contest with their victory over downstate rival Arizona Friday night.

ASU scored three touchdowns and a safety and the Wildcats countered with one TD before things began to bog down.

THE SUN Devils defense, which held off a battling Arizona offense, was credited with the only two points scored in the second half. That came when Arizona quarterback Marc Lunsford was tackled in the end zone with 2:47 left to play.

Safety John Harris, who was named most valuable player in the regionally televised contest, led the way by returning a punt 55 yards for a touchdown, intercepting three Lunsford passes and falling on one fumble.

"Harris has played very well in the last four games," said Kush. "He has been the key to our defensive success."

Receiver John Jefferson took the offensive player honors as he caught six passes for 88 yards. He was the key to the second half offense that failed to score, but managed to eat up valuable time.

"JEFFERSON CAN get open regardless of the coverage used," Kush said. "He gets better the more he plays."

Arizona failed to get its usual output from kicker Lee Pistor, the WAC's record-setting scorer. Pistor booted a conference mark 119th extra point, but missed three field goals.

ASU quarterback Dennis Sproul opened the scoring with a 46-yard pass play to wingback Chris DeFrance. Then Harris returned the punt for a second TD a short time later. The final score came when Mike Harris ran 31 yards to the end zone.

Intrastate gas market still relatively stable

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Natural gas reserves in the lower 48 states have declined more than 36 percent since 1967.

An American Gas Association (AGA) analysis, however, indicates the decrease has been almost entirely attributable to decreases in the interstate market.

The intrastate market meanwhile has remained relatively stable.

The analysis made use of lower 48 reserves and production data compiled by the AGA and interstate market reserves and production data from the Federal Power Commission.

Natural gas proved reserves in the lower 48 states peaked at 289.3 trillion cubic feet in 1967, with 198.1 trillion cubic feet committed to interstate markets and the remaining 91.2 trillion to intrastate.

By the end of 1976, however, proved reserves had dropped to 184.1 trillion cubic feet, with the interstate market claiming 98.3 trillion as opposed to 85.8 trillion for the intrastate market.

Such trends indicate lower 48 proved natural gas reserves have declined 105.2 trillion cubic feet since 1967, with 99.8 trillion cubic feet of the loss being from the interstate market and only 5.4 trillion from the interstate market.

The AGA said that since specific data for the intrastate market are not readily available that market was assumed to be the represented by the difference between lower 48 reserves and production as reported by the AGA and interstate reserves and production as reported by the FPC.

"While this assumption is only an approximation in view of definitional differences between AGA data and FPC data, particularly for reserves, it is felt that the trends indicated by such an analysis are valid," the AGA report said.

"The decrease in lower 48 reserves from 1967, the peak year, to the present is almost entirely attributable the decrease in the interstate market. Intrastate reserves have remained relatively stable."

The AGA said a similar pattern is observed for production, which peaked for both the lower 48 and the interstate market in 1972.

Of the 22.6 trillion cubic feet produced in 1972, 14.2 trillion was committed to interstate sales, 8.4 trillion to intrastate. Of the 19.3 trillion produced in 1976, 11.4 trillion was interstate, 7.9 trillion intrastate.

This represents a production decline in the of 3.3 trillion cubic feet, of which 2.8 trillion was traced to the interstate market compared with only 500 billion intrastate.

The AGA said another interesting insight into the declining reserves and production picture can be made by comparing the reserves-production ratios for the two markets.

In 1963, the interstate reserves were sufficient to meet the then existing demand for 20.1 years. The intrastate ratio was 16.9.

Interstate ratios remained higher than intrastate until 1972, when intrastate moved ahead, 10.4 to 10.3.

Last year the interstate ratio was 8.6 compared with 10.9 for intrastate.

"During the 1960s, when gas prices were essentially the same in both the interstate and intrastate markets, the reserves-production ratios for these markets exhibited similar declining trends," the AGA said.

"Indeed, the reserves-production ratio for the interstate market was consistently higher, an indicator of a somewhat stronger production and marketing position."

This situation, the AGA said, has changed dramatically in recent years, a period in which interstate prices have been considerably lower than intrastate prices.

"Under this environment, the reserves-production ratio for the intrastate market has held its own while that for the interstate market has continued to decline, and since 1972 has slipped even lower lthan that of the intrastate market," the report said.

Applications granted

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Securities Board has granted an application by BTA Oil Producers of Midland to sell $4,650,000 in securities in Texas.

The application was one of nine, totaling $24,876,875, granted by the board in the past week, Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham reported.

The board received 12 applications to sell a total of $18,177,050, the commissioner said.

University Lands lease sale scheduled Dec. 7

The Board for Lease of University Lands will hold its 67th public auction Dec. 7 in Midland in the Midland Hilton.

Last April, the sale was held in Midland, marking the first time in its history for it to be held outside of Austin.

The April sale, the 66th, was the third most successful in the 52-year history of University Lands auction, with bidders paying $13,326,500 for mineral leases on University Lands.

The only two sales to top the Midland event were in 1953 and in 1956. The 1953 offerings brought in $16,238,000, and the 1956 sale netted $16,274,500.

The list of leases that will be offered in the Dec. 7 sale shows that approximately 116,600 acres will be up for lease.

The April sale included 147,000 acres of which 143,391 were sold for an average price per acre of $92.94.

University Lands will get a royalty of one-fith of the gross production of oil and one-fifth of the gross production of gas on each lease that is sold.

The annual delay rentals for the leases sold at the 67th auction will be based on a sliding scale.

Leases with bonus prices of up to 10.99 will require a $1 per acre rental at the end of the first and second years, with a $2 rental required at the end of the third and four years, and subsequent years.

The scale graduates to a rental price of $10 per acre at the end of the first and second years and $20 at the end of the third and fourth and subsequent years for leases on which $500 or more is paid in bonuses per acre.

The rental on producing leases will be $2 per acre beginning at the end of the year in which production is established, amd if the royalties paid to and received in the General Land Office from a lease during the preceding year equals or exceeds the amount of the $2 per acre annual rental payment, no annual rental will be due.

The board will consider only cash bids and the cash offered must be paid on the day of the sale.

The acreage to be offered is in 15 West Texas counties, with the bulk of it in Crockett County. That area accounts for 56,233 of the total acreage to be offered for lease.

The Crockett acreage is in 170 tracts.

The board will offer 18,224 acres in Pecos County in 57 tracts.

More than 9,000 acres will be offered for lease in 27 Reagan County tracts, while approximately 6,700 acres will be up for lease in 16 Upton County tracts.

The board will offer approximately 6,500 acres in Andrews County in 18 tracts, and 4,500 acres in 14 Culberson County tracts.

Other counties in which oil and gas leases will be put up for sale are Crane, Ector, Gaines, Martin, Ward, Loving, Winkler, Schleicher and Irion.

Some of the tracts straddle county lines.

The auction will begin officially at 10 a.m. Dec. 7.

Oil yield reported

AUSTIN — Reported and estimated unreported production of Texas crude oil totaled 89,436,893 barrels in September, the Railroad Commission of Texas' Oil and Gas Givision reports.

The preliminary figure compares with final compilations of Aug. 1977 production of 92,382,738 barrels and September 1978 production of 94,122,022 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,981,229 barrels daily in September, down from 2,980,088 barrels daily in August.

The September allowable was 108,792,824 barrels.

The preliminary September summary indicated Texas oil production was 17.79 percent under the allowable for that month.

Mexico now working on expropriate bills

By VERNAN TURNER

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican Senate began work Friday on legislation which would give the government petroleum company the right to use or expropriate any land it needs for exploitinq the nation's petroleum resources.

The legislation, sent to the Senate Thursday by President Jose Lopee Porcillo, was seen as a move to facilitate construction of an 821-mile pipeline which is scheduled to deliver natural gas to the United States by next year.

Lopez Portillo said the objective of the legislation, which requires a constitutional amendment, is to eliminate delays in petroleum development for Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the national oil monopoly.

The government estimates probable oil and gas reserves at 120 billion barrels and proven reserves at 17 billion. Geologists say the country is sitting on a sea of untapped oil.

The legislation would give the secretary of Patrimony and Industrial Development the power to grant PEMEX land rights and to set the ameunt of indomnation to be paid landowners.

The Legislation sets up a procedue for PEMEX to get immediate access to private or public land, but if there are objections by the landowners, a hearing would be held.

The legisiation declares the petroleum industry "the priority public utility over any other user of the surface or subsoil of the national lands."

Lopez Portillo told the senate the reform was needed to accelerate petroleum development and to avoid delays caused by landowners who might block process by demanding excessive land settlements. He said PEMEX had lost time and money in the past by modifying its pipeline routes because of disputes over land rights.

PEMEX is seeking financing for the pipeline from the U.S. Export-Import Bank and international lending agencies.

The gas would be delivered to U.S. customers by a consorcrium including Texas Eastern, Transcontinental, Gas Pipeline Corp., Florida Gas Co., Southern Natural Resources Co., El Paso Natural Gas Co., and Tenneco, Inc.

Delivery of the gas is expected to begin next year, eventually reaching a capacity of 2.7 billion cubic feet a day by 1980.

The deal is seen as a means of easing U.S. winter energy shortages and helping the Mexican government day off its $20.3 billion foreign debt.

Mexico expects to earn approximately $2 billion a year from the sale of gas from the pipeline.

H. S. Field appointed

HOUSTON — Harold S. Field has been appointed manager of processing and gathering for the Houston-based Oil and Gas Division of Cabot Corp.

He is responsible for developing and evaluating new ventures in the gas processing and gathering field as well as for management of the existing facilities.

Cabot operates gas gathering systems in West Texas, the Texas Panhandle, West Virginia and Oklahoma.

The company also has exploration and production offices in West Texas, New Mexico, the Gulf Coast area, the Mid-Continent area and the Appalachian area.

Christmas dance set

The Permian Basin Landmen's Association will hold its annual Christmas dance Dec. 17 in the Midland Country Club.

The dance is in lieu of the association's December meeting.

A breakfast will be served at 11:45 p.m. Cost for the annual affair is $20 per couple.

Larry R. Snyder, PBLA president, said only members whose dues are paid for the ensuing year are eligible to attend the dance.

Members are invited to bring out-of-town guests to the dance, Snyder said.

Energy legislation compromise could come in various forms

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — There will have to be some compromises if any energy legislation is to be passed by Congress this year. The question, then, is what the compromises will be.

For example, the House voted to continue general legislation of the wellhead price of natural gas and to extend the control of intrastate sales. But the Senate voted to deregulate the price of new supplies. Obviously, something has to give or there will be no gas bill at all.

A possible compromise is this: the final bill would bring intrastate gas under federal jurisdiction, but there would also be a provision for phasing out price controls over a specified period of time.

Prices are likely to be part of the bargaining, too. The administration's plan called for an initial price ceiling of $1.75 per thousand cubic feel for new gas sales. But those who contend more incentive is needed for producers aren't willing to settle for $1.75. Instead, they have been suggesting a price of at least $2.

In the final bargaining, the initial price of $1.75 may be raised very little, if any, if a plan for gradual elimination of control is adopted.

In such a compromise, the administration and its supporters on Capitol Hill could claim they acted to prevent price dodging while at the same time allowing prices to rise gradually to provide incentive to find new supplies.

Proponents of deregulation would probably be willing to accept the $1.75 in exchange for the plan to phase out control entirely.

The inclusion of intrastate gas sales under federal control could be counted as a victory by the administration and could be acceptable to producer states on the grounds that this jurisdiction would end with the eventual lifting of federal price regulations.

Obviously, neither side would be very happy with such a compromise. But it at least would achieve part of what each group wants. And would avoid a deadlock in which nothing would be done.

President Carter has said he would veto any bill containing a bill that would contain outright deregulation of any gas bill. But he has not closed the door on a phased out approach.

In fact, last week energy secretary James Schlesinger implied the administration might accept the plan for gradual deregulation. But, he said, there is "no grounds for retreat" in the administration's demand that intrastate gas sales be dropped under federal controls. Schlesinger also made it clear that the White House is willing to bargain on the initial price lift of $1.75. That is, it would accept a higher ceiling if necessary to give some legislation a compromise. Just how high would depend on what bargains are struck on other issues which are involved on energy legislation.

The crude oil equalization tax proposal is another area in which there will be considerable bargaining.

The administration is insistent on the price. But the Senate balks, saying it would not go for such a tax unless some of the funds are earmarked for further energy supply development.

The administration does not want any of the tax funds to go to conventional oil and gas development, because it knows consumers, labor and other groups will claim this is a give-away to the petroleum industry.

A possible compromise would set aside some funds for long-range energy projects, such as coal gasification or oil from shale, but will provide little or nothing for conventional oil and gas production.

Instead of getting any of the tax funds, domestic oil producers probably will be offered a plan for slow removal of oil price controls. One suggestion calls for an exemption or a reduction of price controls at a rate of 1.5 per cent a month.

This would mean that in a little more than five and a half years controls would be phased out completely.

Consumer groups and others who have been opposing the crude oil equalization tax on the grounds that it would boost costs to consumers may tone down their objections if the final plan provides a considerable portion of the oil tax revenue to pay fuel bills for the poor.

The domestic petroleum industry, which has contended that the tax would drain away money that is needed for new energy resource development, would be mollified somewhat by a phasing out of price regulations.

White cites commitments

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former Secretary of State Mark White says he has commitments of more than $500,000 for his campaign for attorney general.

He made the comment on "State Capitol Dateline," an interview program broadcast over the weekend by the Wendell Mayes radio stations.

White said he thought his chances were "very good" and "I'm very pleased with where we are today in the campaign."

He continued his criticism of his opponent, former House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., saying Daniel was trying to trade on the name of his father, former Gov. Price Daniel, and had shown no leadership.

White said he was pleased with the "response we've had in areas that traditionally don't raise money for statewide candidates."

Scientist's views clash on Rev. Sun Myung Moon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists who attended an international conference sponsored by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon say their colleagues who refused to attend are either ignorant about Moon's church or jealous of his success. Scientists who didn't come called the conference a fraud, a publicity stunt and a waste of time.

"All of this condemnation, practically, is by people who don't understand and have been misled by propoganda," said Nobel laureate Sir John Eccles, 74, chairman of the three-day International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences which opened Friday.

Eccles, distinguished professor of biophysiology at State University of New York in Buffalo, is one of six Nobel laureates among the 500 scientists and scholars from 52 nations at the convention.

Dozens of other scientists turned down invitations to the conference, the sixth since 1968. The theme is "The Search for Absolute Values in a Changing World."

Moon said in a keynote address that both science and religion try to find "the cause" of the universe. He told delegates, "Feel free to express your beliefs fully."

Moon's Unification Church said the conference is costing $500,000. The church has been widely criticized for allegedly exerting harmful influence on young people and sometimes keeping them in the church against their will.

Its status as a church has been the subject of several tax disputes, and Moon's personal wealth has been attacked.

Hitler letter on sale

Agence France-Presse

MARBURG, West Germany — A letter from Hitler rehabilitating a German general wrongfully accused of being a homosexual will be on sale at an auction of manuscripts auctioned here Nov. 30.

Hitler wrote to Gen. Von Fritsch, who reorganized the German army, on March 30, 1938, after he had been found innocent of homosexuality by a military court.

"I can imagine how much those reproaches must have weighed on you," Hitler wrote. "Be assured that such an idea made me suffer ceaselessly, too."

The letter will be offered for a minimum price of 8,000 marks ($3,470). Gen. Von Fritsch, who was accused by conspirators, died in the fighting for Warsaw on Sept. 22, 1939.

Golden Driller, oil hall of fame drive gets under way in Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. — The International Petroleum Exposition has started a fund drive to "save the Golden Driller statue that stands in front of the exposition building" and to build a petroleum hall of fame.

Frances Brandenburg, president of The Golden Driller, Petroleum Hall of Fame and Scholarship Fund, Inc., plans to repair the driller and establish a petroleum hall of fame and set up scholarships in the diciplines of energy, communications, medical and the arts.

The scholarships will be offered to qualifying students from anywhere in the United States who wish to attend an Oklahoma school of higher education.

The proposed hall of fame would house oil, gas and allied industry memorabilia, antiques or modern equipment of the oil patch, books, files and photographs as may be donated or purchased.

It also is proposed that the hall of fame will contain video and audio tapes of the men and women who have contributed to and developed the oil and gas industry.

Facilities to view and listen to these tapes will be provided so future generations may learn what the oil industry was and is, and how it helped develop the nation, Brandenburg said.

The Golden Driller was built and donated to the Tulsa Fair Authority by Mid-Continent Supply Co. The present statue was installed at the site for the 1966 International Petroleum Exposition and has become a Tulsa landmark.

The 45,000 pound statue has been ravaged by weather, attacked by vandals, assaulted by souvenir seekers and even ridiculed by art critics.

Attending a recent press conference at which time the save the driller and hall of fame programs were announced were John Elsner, manager of Tulsa Expo Square, owner of the statue; Ken Boone of the Ken Boone Co. in Dallas; Chuck Tomlins of the University of Tulsa Art Department; L. C. Stith, president of Tuloma, Inc.,; Richard G. Wilbins, American Laminating Co., and John Sieler, Oil Capital Chamber of Commerce.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strike in the nation's coal fields appears certain Dec. 6 following a break-off in contract negotiations with no plans to resume bargaining.

"It is now rather certain there is going to be a work stoppage," United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller said Friday as he left the negotiations in a downtown hotel. He has predicted "a long and bitter strike."

Federal mediators were in touch with union and industry officials and are expected to try to get them back to the bargaining table next week.

But both sides in the dispute are now reconciled to a strike even though the deadline is still more than a week away. It would take 10 days just for the union to get a contract ratified by the rank-and-file, and there is little hope of extending the present agreement, which expires at 12:01 a.m. Dec. 6.

A strike by the union's 130,000 miners, who produce about half the nation's coal, has been widely anticipated by utilities and other major coal users. They have accumulated large stockpiles, so a walkout isn't expected to cause serious problems for the economy unless it lasts until spring.

However, the heavy coal producing states of Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky can be expected to feel the effects sooner as the mines shut down, resulting in millions of dollars in lost wages. Two major coal-hauling railroads already have announced layoffs.

Officials of both the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry's bargaining arm, accused each other of breaking off the negotiations.

Miller said the association refused to bargain in good faith on key economic issues. The association denied it and accused Miller of planning to break off talks even before the meeting started.

UMW-organized mines now account only for about 50 percent of total U.S. coal production compared with 70 percent in 1974. The decline has been due in part to bitter internal union strife and wildcat strikes over the past three years and the UMW's failure to organize the new mines in the West.

Miller said the industry has proposed a reduced medical program through company insurance plans, a no-strike clause with penalties that would reduce miners' wages and "elimination of some of the vital gains won in the 1974 contract." He did not elaborate.

Alaskan entry wins teen title

DALLAS (AP) — The youngest semi-finalist in the Miss Teenage America pageant walked away with the top honor in Dallas Friday night.

Leslie Owen Griffiths, the 15-year-old representative of Anchorage, Alaska, was presented a gold and enamel medallion to symbolize her status as the pageant's choice for top teenager in the nation.

The blue-eyed, red-haired Miss Griffiths and the three 17-year-old alternates were selected from a group of eight semi-finalists who came to Dallas hoping to win the coveted title during the nationally-televised competition.

First alternate was Ramona Lynn Easter, a military dependent from Ansbach, Germany. Tamera Kay Nerby, representing Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., was named second alternate, and Miss Oak Ridge, Tenn., Jill Karen Hahn, was named third runner-up.

Miss Griffiths is a native of Texas and said she still considers it her home. She moved to Anchorage with her family when her father was transferred as a petroleum engineer.

In addition to her title, Miss Teenage America receives a $15,000 scholarship, a guaranteed $5,000 in personal appearance fees, $1,000 for personal expenses, a wardrobe, encyclopedias, cosmetics and a life insurance policy.

Miss Griffiths said she plans to use her scholarship to study music or drama at North Texas State University in Denton, Texas.

For her competition in the individual accomplishment category, Miss Griffiths performed a piano solo of excerpts from "Toccata" by Aram Khachaturian.

Miss Easter is the daughter of the bandmaster for the U.S. Army All-Paratrooper Band stationed in Ansbach, Germany. For her talent competition, the green-eyed brunette read two poems she wrote, accompanied by a tape of an original piano composition.

Tamera Kay Nerby has been performing theatrically since the sixth grade. For her competition in the individual accomplishment category, she sang "What Kind of Fool Am I?"

Jill Karen Hahn, who entered the competition as one of 3,500 candidates-at-large, performed an original pantomime in the talent competition.

Scholarships of $6,000 for Miss Easter, $4,000 for Miss Nerby and $2,000 for Miss Hahn were presented to the alternates and each girl also receives encyclopedias and a life insurance policy.

Sherrie Deanna Gong of Palo Alto, Miss Teenage San Jose, Calif., was honored as Miss Teenage Friendship and Anne Jansen, Miss Teenage Little Rock, Ark., was honored as Miss Teenage Leadership.

For the first time in the pageant's 17-year history male teens shared the spotlight with the female contestants. Nine young men, selected by national youth organizations, were recognized by the traditionally all-female pageant.

They were each awarded $1,000 scholarships during a special salute to male teen achievers.

Eight cheerleaders from Houston's Sharpstown High School were honored as the nation's top cheerleaders. The school will get $1,000 from the sponsoring National Cheerleaders Association.

Bible-totin' women to face judge this week after 6-year-old's death from malnutrition

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 6-year-old boy who died of malnutrition was one of six children who apparently were fed little more than salt water in what police say may have been part of a religious rite to ward off demons.

Daniel Bush weighed only 35 pounds, 20 to 25 pounds underweight, said the physician who performed the autopsy on the boy Friday.

"Really, he looked like a kite, all skin and bone," said Dr. Josefino Aguilar. "He was very much undernourished."

The youngster's mother, Trula Bush, 35, and Willa Mayes, 40, appeared at a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court Saturday, both carrying Bibles. Judge Patrick J. Barton continued the case until Wednesday after Mrs. Mayes dropped to her knees and spread her arms out toward him. Mrs. Bush told the judge the woman was receiving a "spiritual reply."

The women were returned to jail, where Mrs. Bush was held on three counts of neglect and involuntary manslaughter and Mrs. Mayes on three neglect charges. Bond for each was set at $15,000.

The other five children, a brother and sister of the dead boy and three of Mrs. Mayes' grandchildren, were hospitalized Friday, all suffering malnutrition.

William Bush, 8, and Katherine Bush, 7, were listed in critical condition.

Billy Williams, 8; Michael Collier, 7, and Sabrina Collier, 5, were reported in good condition.

Authorities said the women and children lived in the basement of a small, one-story frame home.

Authorities said both women were members of St. Jude Temple of Spiritual Truth, housed in a structure they described as an old home, partially boarded up with paper facsimilies of stained glass in some of the windows.

Neighbors said two men also lived in the house and one "wore a woman's wig part of the time."

Police detective Joseph Lackey said Daniel probably had been fed the salt solution for at least a month before his mother called an ambulance early Friday, reporting her son "didn't look too good."

Lackey said when the other children were taken to the hospital one saw a nurse with a yellow name tag clipped to her uniform and hid in fear under hosital bedclothes.

Asked what frightened him, he said, "Mother told us that anyone who wore yellow was full of demons," Lackey related.

When Daniel was pronounced dead, Mrs. Bush protested, "Dan isn't dead. He's pulled this before. All you have to do is put him in a room by himself and he'll come out of it," the detective said.

Mrs. Bush contended her son was alive when the ambulance arrived about 3 a.m. and accused hospital physicians of killing him. She said she knew they were responsible "because Jesus told me so," authorities said.

The autopsy showed the boy had received no solid food for at least a day, Aguilar said.

A hospital spokesman also said the autopsy disclosed the "highest concentration of salt in the bloodstream we've ever seen."

Beef prices hit 18-month peak

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retail beef prices in October rose to their highest level in 18 months, and further increases may be on the way.

The Agriculture Department said Friday that retail cuts of choice-grade beef sold last month for an average of almost $1.42 a pound. That is an allcomposite price used to compare meat prices changes.

In September, the retail price of beef was slightly less than $1.39 a pound. According to department records, the $1.42 in October was the most since beef was at that level in May 1976.

Tentative figures also show that beef prices have continued to edge up in November.

Pork prices, however, were down in October as hog slaughter picked up seasonally from September. An outlook for more pork and broiler chicken is expected to help temper beef price gains in the coming months.

But red meat production is down from a year ago. Beef output by slaughter plants in Ocober was down 5 percent, and pork was down 3 percent. Veal, lamb and mutton production also declined from a year ago.

The new report said the farm value of beef sold in stores last month was 84.4 cents a pound, up from 80.2 cents in September, reflecting higher cattle prices.

That is not what producers get for live cattle, since it takes about 2.3 pounds of live steer to make a pound of beef. But it does translate to what the farmer gets as his share of what consumers pay for beef.

The "marketing spread" for beef, or what middlemen get for processing and merchandising it, was 57.1 cents a pound last month, down from 58.7 in September.

Officials said the retail price of pork averaged about $1.27 a pound, down from almost $1.31 in September.

Pork's farm value was 72.7 cents a pound, down a penny from 73.7 in September. The middlemen's share dropped to 54.2 cents from 57.1 cents.

The report said that the market price of choice-grade steers at major markets last month averaged $41.60 per 100 pounds, up from $39.73 in September. However, hogs dropped to $40.83 per 100 pounds from $41.40 in September.

Soviet dissident calls for human rights action

ROME (AP) — Emigre Soviet dissident Valentin Turchin said Saturday the future of dissent in the Soviet Union hinges in part on the West's commitment to human rights at the Belgrade conference on the Helsinki Accords.

Turchin, former president of the Soviet section of Amnesty International, also predicted in an interview that if the Western nations become complacent on human rights in the Soviet Union, the Russians will mount a "harsh crackdown" on activists.

He said the Belgrade conference, now reviewing compliance with human rights and other provisions of the 1975 Helsinki Accords, should secure the release of Russians jailed for monitoring human rights violations in the Soviet Union.

"The release of these people must be a precondition for further discussions at Belgrade," Turchin said. He have the interview before testifying at the second International Sakharov Hearings on human rights violations in the Soviet bloc.

The four-day hearing is modeled on a mock public trial with witnesses presenting testimony to the tribunal named after Andrei Sakharov, the Soviet dissident who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize two years ago.

Sakharov, in a filmed message smuggled from the Soviet Union to the hearing, urged that its findings be sent to the Belgrade conference.

Among patrons of the mock trial are author Saul Bellow and scientist Edward Teller of the United States, French playwright Eugene Ionesco and German novelist Gunther Grass.

The Helsinki Accords, signed by 35 nations in 1975, call for freer movement of people and ideas between East and West, tacitly recognizing the post World War II boundaries of the Eastern bloc nations.

Sophia, family flee kidnappers

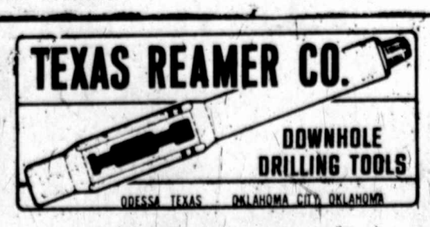

Agence France-Presse

PARIS — Italian film star Sophia Loren and her husband, movie producer Carlo Ponti, decided to leave Italy and live in France after two kidnapping attempts near Rome, Ponti has revealed in an interview with the French daily L'Aurore.

The first attempt, Ponti said, took place on March 12, 1975, when a car drew across the road near his Marino villa, forcing his vehicle to stop. Three armed and hooded men tried to attack him but were driven off by his bodyguards riding a car behind.

The second attempt took place a few months later while he and Sophia Loren were vacationing in Switzerland. Unknown criminals tried to break into his villa but were driven off by the men charged with defending the premises. One of Ponti's Alsatian dogs was killed.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A federal judge has ordered the Anchorage Daily Times to continue publishing the Anchorage Daily News under the first joint publication agreement approved under the Newspaper Preservation Act.

The Times had announced its intention to terminate the agreement Nov. 30, contending a lawsuit against it by the News had made the pact unworkable. The Times also alleged the News had refused to pay $312,000 it owed the Times.

Katherine Fanning, editor and publisher of the News, hailed Friday's decision to require continuation of the agreement, which she said would allow the state's only morning daily newspaper to continue publishing.

Robert Atwood, editor and publisher of the Times, said, "I don't know what I can expect that the lawyers are studying the document and figuring out what we do next." He added that "appeal is one of the options that's open to us."

The News filed a lawsuit against the Times last spring, seeking $16.5 million and claiming mismanagement of the agreement by the Times, which handles non-editorial chores for both papers. While the papers maintain separate editorial staffs, the Times handles circulation, advertising and publication.

The News had said that it would be forced to cease publication if the Times terminated the agreement.

U.S. District Judge James Fitzgerald, in issuing the injunction, said it would take effect upon the posting of a $40,000 bond by te News. He also said the News must pay future bills due the Times or challenge them through the arbitration procedure specified in the publication agreement. He said that if the News refused to pay a bill approved by the arbitrator he would vacate his injunction.

Mrs. Fanning said, "I'm just very grateful. Naturally I'm very happy. The whole staff of the News is very happy. That's really about all I can say."

She added, "I feel that we can continue to work with the Times despite some of the things that were said in the hearing. I'm aware they were trying to make a legal point and I'm willing to forget about things that were said in court and proceed to work together."

Fitzgerald said in his decision that he agreed with the News' claim that allowing the termination of the agreement would cause "irreparable harm" to the News. He said the News could sue for damages, but even if the termination proved to be wrongful it would be hard to re-establish the paper.

The Times also had sought the termination of the agreement on the grounds that the News had failed to buy electronic editing equipment compatible with the Times' newsroom.

The Times said the $312,000 owed by the News was the difference between the cost of producing and distributing the paper and the money the News earns. The Times says it currently costs $20,000 more a month to put the News out than the paper makes.

Steps to overhaul 'key rate' initiated

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Board of Insurance members and staff are taking the first steps towards overhauling the "key rate" method of calculating fire insurance premiums used in Texas, but final action in the process is more than a year away.

The SBI has received the results of a study on revising the system, as was mandated by the 1975 Legislature, and will implement the changes at the time of the next legislative session (1979).

Board actuary Jack Jones reports that a lack of funds and personnel to implement the proposed rates before then is the reason for the delay.

A "key rate" represents the various deficiencies in fire protection within a city, and is calculated through a complex point system, which rates the waterworks systems (including hydrants, water pressure, etc.), fire department (men and equipment, whether full time or volunteer, etc.), building codes and structural conditions, and fire prevention and alarm systems.

Larger cities have complained the system discriminates against them — prompting lawmakers to order the study.

The SBI hired a consultant to study the effects of the proposed changes on 25 Texas cities, both small and large, and an advisory committee began revising rate schedules in July 1976.

The board has asked the advisory committee to carry out some further refinement of the revisions, and to report back with any additional recommendations, before the changes are implemented.

The State Finance Commission will meet in Austin Wednesday (Nov. 30), to take up a number of matters concerning the Department of Banking, Savings and Loan Department and Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner — the three agencies which fall under the commission's jurisdiction.

In addition, the Banking Section, Consumer Credit Section and Savings and Loan Section of the commission will meet to deal with various items relating specifically to the individual agencies those sections are charged with regulating.

Returning to the SBI for a moment: the board has issued an official order rejecting the requested change in the worker's compensation experience rating plan and in the worker's compensation base rate-making rules which would use only paid losses rather than both paid and reserved losses "as provided for under present rules."

The change has been under study since it was first made in November 1975.

The SBI also has received a letter from the attorney general's anti-trust division saying that it appears that there is nothing in the new Texas MAP proposal for products liability that would be, "per se," a violation of anti-trust laws.

That market assistance program was set up to assist manufacturers and others who are having problems in getting coverage for products liability, by bringing them together with carriers who can provide the coverage.

The MAP group functions as a broker, rather than a pool, locating coverage for those who need it, rather than actually underwriting the risk.

While saying there appears to be no problem, the letter urged the department to keep a close eye on the work of the program, having a representative attend each MAP committee meeting, and keeping careful records to prevent any question of anti-trust violations from arising.

Overall, the letter concludes, the purposes of the program are not objectionable.

Attorney General John Hill has ruled that a list of new businesses is available from the Texas Employment Commission under the Open Records Act, and must be disclosed.

Hill made the ruling at the request of the TEC.

Traditional slowdown may provide breather

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The traditional winter slowdown in the construction industry may provide a welcome breather from the boom that has strained supplies of building materials such as copper pipes and insulation.

Although shortages of materials are not unusual in the highly cyclical industry, analysts say the sharp pace of the construction recovery has aggravated lags in supply and demand.

"This time around, I think the shortages have been the most pronounced since the second World War," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Homebuilders.

Insulation and drywall have been put on allocation programs by some manufacturers who are unable to keep up with contractors' demands. In addition, prices of such items as lumber, bricks and plaster have increased sharply.

So far Sumichrast knows of no projects that have been canceled for lack of building supplies, but backlogs are common.

With producers of insulation and drywall already running their operations on double and triple shifts, the slowdown in construction activity this winter should provide a brief catch-up period that will ease some problems.

Manufacturers of drywall and fiber insulation had to shut down some operations when construction demand fell off sharply a few years ago, said Sumichrast, and they may be reluctant to fund permanent expansions now.

But a number of plants have moved in to fill the insulation gap by producing cellulose insulation, which requires a much lower initial investment to get manufacturing started.

Not all demand for such products comes from those in new building, of course. Koach notes that home remodeling and insulation projects have seen a dramatic upswing this past year.

But the longer-range projections for new building clearly indicate demand should remain high for the next several years.

According to a survey of more than 1,000 consulting engineering firms, construction of all types is expected to expand by more than 12 percent as measured by dollar volume next year although the total number of projects will increase only slightly, an industry magazine, Consulting Engineering, reported this past week.

In the housing industry alone, the Association of Homebuilders estimates that new housing this year will reach 1.97 million units and slow only slightly to 1.8 million units next year. By contrast, new housing construction was going up at an annual rate of only 900,000 units in the spring of 1975, before the latest upswing inthe housing cycle.

In other business developments this past week:

—Consumer prices continued to rise at a moderate rate in October, the government reported. The Labor Department's consumer price index showed prices increasing at an annual rate of 3.6 percent in October. Food prices, which make up roughly one quarter of the price index, rose only 0.1 percent in October, the same as the previous month.

Economists said steep declines in wholesale farm prices over the summer were largely responsible for easing of consumer price rises. Consumer prices have increased at an annual rate of 3.8 percent in the last three months. In the first three months of the year, prices rose at an annual rate of 10 percent.

—A proposal to aid the domestic steel industry, due to go to Presient Carter next week, reportedly will aim at reducing foreign imports from about 20 percent to 12 percent to 14 percent. The plan, drafted by a special interagency tax force, would include minimum prices for 40 to 60 categories of imported steel to make domestic products more competitive. Also included would be a program for cheap loans and revisions of some tax and trade regulations to aid domestic producers, according to plans outlined to members of the Congressional Steel Caucus.

—Stockholders of Kennecott Copper Corp. filed suit against the company in an effort to stop its takeover bid of Carborundum Co. Kennecott, in a widely followed merger proposal, offered to buy stock of the abrasives manufacturer at $66 a share, almost twice what it had traded for early this year on the New York Stock Exchange. The suit, brought on behalf of the Frederick Danziger family in New York, charges that the merger price was too high and "an unlawful waste of Kennecott's assets." A spokesman for the company says the stockholders didn't have enough information to make a proper judgment.

—Gulf Oil Corp. was fined $36,000 after pleading guilty to giving illegal trips to an Internal Revenue Service auditor who supervised an audit of the company's 1959-1964 returns. Gulf did not admit any bribery in its plea but the case was seen as significant by some government sources because it marked one of the first times a major U.S. corporation acknowledged that gifts to public officials are illegal even when no favors are expected.

Critic has new post with Post

Discussions are under way with the Post's two other critics, Martin Gottfried and Frances Herridge, to "see if it's possible for them to stay," Wood said.

Barnes attended Oxford University and was a freelance dance and drama critic for several British publications before joining the Times, initially as a contributor in 1963, then as its dance reviewer, and finally as both drama and dance critic.

by Bill Beattie

Discouragement is perhaps the immediate reaction of most of us to sudden and shocking news. What happens to us after the first shock is extremely important. Some will become cynical, some despondent, and some will rush around with no real purpose or plan. But, some will quietly think things through and consider the issues. They will recover their courage and do as quickly as possible everything that should be done.

It might be well for all of us to remember the prayer of Oliver J. Hart: "Give me the fortitude to endure the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things that should be changed, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Physical courage will make men brave in one way, and moral courage will make men brave in another. Both types of courage are important and have their place; but to constitute a great man, both are necessary.

"Courage," observed Samuel Johnson, "is the greatest of all the virtues." And, when asked why, he answered, "Because if you haven't courage, you may not have an opportunity to use any of the others."

It takes courage to carry responsibility. It takes courage to make decisions. It also takes courage to accept criticism from those who won't share the risk, the weight, or the worry in the performance. A great deal of talent is lost in this world for the want of a little courage.

Business, economic, social and world conditions have grown very puzzling in their complexity to many of us. Although changes have been vast, we can remain absolutely sure of one thing — that there is no substitute for the world-old commonplace qualities of truth, justice, courage, thrift, industry, common sense, and genuine sympathy for the feelings of others. Things will not be so puzzling to us when the majority of us make these qualities more commonplace today.

To see what is right and not to do it, is want of COURAGE.
— Confucius

Pygmy whale dies at Galveston

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — A rare pygmy sperm whale found on a Galveston beach Thanksgiving Day died late Friday night at Sea-Arama Marine World, an employe said Saturday.

Details concerning the death of the whale were not immediately available. The employe said the whale died not long after midnight.

Dubbed "Pilgrim" by Robby Reddy, the teenager who found him, the whale had been pumped full of vitamins and antibiotics and was suspended in a tank at the marine amusement park.

Curator Ken Beggs had said the question of the mammal's survival had been touch-and-go. Earlier, Beggs said "If it makes it for the next two or three days, its chances for survival will be increase considerably."

"Pilgrim" was rushed to the marine park after Reddy called officials there to tell of his discovery.

"We gave him cortisone and we now have him suspended in the water with his head above water so it will not have to make any efforts," Beggs said.

He said that when whales wash ashore, it generally means they are so weak they can't hold themselves above water to breathe.

Pygmy sperm whales are rarely seen in the Gulf of Mexico, Beggs said.

"As far as we know there are no pygmy sperm whales in captivity," Beggs said. He said that species weighs up to 1,200 pounds, although "Pilgrim" weighed in at 1,000 pounds.

"They are uncommon," Beggs said. "This one looks just like a miniature Moby Dick, with the big head and the big eye."

He said little is known about the species because they are not large enough to interest whalers.

Utah's high court rules death penalty law legal

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the state's death penalty law, 10 months after the much-publicized execution of Gary Gilmore by a state firing squad.

The court at the same time Friday unanimously affirmed the first-degree murder convictions of two men sentenced to die for the 1974 torture-slayings of three persons during a robbery in Ogden.

Justice D. Frank Wilkins wrote the majority opinions which upheld the death penalty and the convictions of Dale S. Pierre of New York and William Andrews of Dallas, Texas. Both are on death row at Utah State Prison.

Defense attorneys had appealed their convictions on procedural and constitutional grounds. Robert Van Sciver, attorney for Pierre, said Friday he would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wilkins, who had cast a dissenting vote when the court refused to hear the Gilmore case, wrote that whatever the justices' personal views on capital punishment, the court could not support the defendants' claim that the death penalty is unconstitutional.

Gilmore, who asked to be executed, was shot to death last Jan. 17, the first time the death penalty was carried out in the United States in a decade.

Pierre and Andrews, airmen stationed at nearby Hill Air Force Base, were convicted of murder in the deaths of three persons during a robbery at the Hi Fi Shop. The victims — Stanley Walker, Michelle Ansley and Carol Naisbitt — were tied up, made to lie on the floor, forced to drink liquid drain cleaner and shot execution-style in the store.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Hospital much safer

Dear Dr. Solomon: Two of my friends have had their babies at home, and they both urge me to do the same (I'm five months pregnant). I mentioned this to my gynecologist but, of course, being a gynecologist, he's all for hospitals—the bigger, the better. So I thought maybe I should ask you what you think.—Maggie G.

Dear Maggie: I'm afraid I agree with your doctor about the hospital being a better place to have your baby. I know it is perfectly natural for many young women to prefer the familiar surroundings of home to the more forbidding atmosphere that a hospital can sometimes present. And it's true that many deliveries are uneventful and could take place at home quite safely.

There is always, however, the possibility of some sudden complication that might endanger the health or even the life of the mother or the child. Advocates of home delivery say that only low-risk pregnant women should go in for it and that arrangement should be made in advance for transportation to a hospital in case of an unforseen emergency.

The trouble is that getting to the hospital is going to take precious time when every minute may count—even if you live right next door. Also, there is no way of anyone being sure about just which mother is going to have trouble and which one isn't. A recent British study showed that both "high-risk" and "low-risk" mothers had about the same number and kinds of complications at delivery and immediately afterwards. So medical crystal balls can be just as clouded as any other kind.

Unexpected bleeding, prolonged labor due to an unusual position of the baby and injury to the birth canal are some of the mother's risks which require instant attention with the staff and facilities available in the hospital.

Of course, the safety of the baby is of prime concern as well. To give a good example: it may be necessary to monitor a baby's heart beat before and during labor. This can be done through electronic leads fixed to the scalp of the fetus and connected to a monitoring unit. There is even a new technique that allows the mother to walk around while her unborn baby's pulse is transmitted to the monitoring unit through a tiny gadget not much bigger than a pack of cigarettes that is pinned to her gown.

Dr. Michael Newton, professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Univeristy of Chicago, has what seems to be the best solution to bridging the gap between home and hospital: make the hospital more home-like. The husband, he says, should be allowed to stay with the mother during labor and delivery, and the baby should have immediate and close contact with the mother. In addition, the hospital stay should be as short as possible.

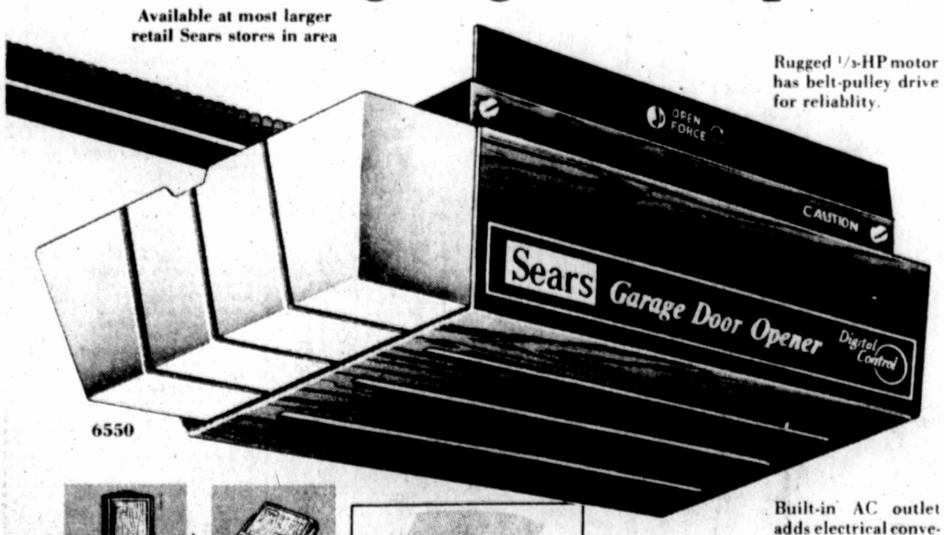

Dr. Newton notes that some hospitals are providing separate facilities for low-risk and high-risk mothers. In the low-risk area, full use is made of nurse mid-wives. If an unexpected complication develops, the mother can be moved swiftlyto an adjacent high-risk suite for fetal monitoring and any other procedure that may be necessary.

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Skinny image not so heavy anymore

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

Fat hasn't exactly become a feminist issue, but as women resist being judged solely on appearance, there have come some changes in thinking. Along with easier styles of dress there has come less attention to a fashion industry that touts the slogan, "You can never be too thin or too rich."

For the last several months, I've noticed clothing advertisements in The New York Times that are unusual. The difference, at first, isn't noticeable.

The styles are current, the fabrics lush. The total effect is impressive. Finally, you realize the model is not exactly obese, but her proportions are more generous than we usually see on the fashion pages.

This is the emergence of a new twist in the clothing industry which began with the sale campaign for pantyhose which promoted the notion that "big is beautiful."

It isn't only on the fashion pages I've encountered the backlash against abnormal weight ideals.

Airline stewardesses have objected in court to weight limits which though very stylish, are practically impossible to maintain.

While women's centers and feminist universities usually offer group sessions and classes for weight loss, they are now also beginning to offer courses that encourage women to like and accept their bodies. Beauty, they are learning, comes in many shapes.

The co-op medical advice book, "Our Bodies Our Selves" promotes a healthy weight level as one step toward total health. Yet they add, "... we feel tremendous pressure from our society to stay 'thin and beautiful' and to diet, if need be, to maintain these thin standards.

Such standards usually have little to do with our physical and emotional well-being, so we often find ourselves trying to look attractive at the expense of our overall health."

Fat hasn't exactly become a feminist issue, but as women resist being judged solely on appearance, there have come some changes in thinking. Along with easier styles of dress there has come less attention to a fashion industry that touts the slogan, "You can never be too thin or too rich."

The weight-loss industry, with all of its offshoots, is one of those little recognized yet massive segments of our economy. About 10 years ago, The New York Times reported that a one-day spot-check of Washington, D.C., revealed on that one day over $1 million was spent on reducing pills, candies and gums alone.

A casual browse through the Yellow Pages of any metropolitan telephone book will show a tremendous number of health spas, reducing salons, gyms, hypnosis clinics for weight loss, equipment suppliers, clubs and special food plans, as well as physicians specializing in problems of corpulence.

A survey of women's magazines and best-seller lists will prove that nothing sells as well as a new weight-loss gimmick.

Why? Perhaps it's our national neurosis over obesity. Maybe there really are that many heavy people looking for a cure. It is said that one-third of the U.S. population is overweight. Some sources claim that 75 million Americans are fat. But what, exactly, is obesity?

Like most Americans, I'm concerned about my weight and its relationship to my health.

So I checked my ideal weight on an insurance company chart. This particular chart gave a 35-pound span considered normal for my height. The correct range depended on bone structure.

Only a visit to consult a physical education professor at a local college told me that my bone structure was average. My weight, then, was a little on the low side for my height. Yet that night at dinner I mentioned that I'd like to lose five pounds. My teenager looked me over and agreed that I "ought to go on a diet."

If fashion advertisements mean anything, a backlash against excessive slimness is with us. Hopefully, this time, it will lead to a reasonable assessment ... a striving for balance between good health and current perceptions of beauty.

The silk satin skirt of back gathered fullness fell from an Empire waistline and swept to a chapel train. Scattered appliques of Alencon lace floated down the skirt to become a wider border. DEAR ABBY

Sterilization causes, not prevents, trouble

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm 25, have been divorced for five years and have two children, ages 6 and 4. I wasn't married when my second child was born. That's when I had my tubes tied. (I figured two children were enough for me, married or single.)

Then I met Ray and it was love at first sight for both of us. Ray is perfect for me in every way. He's 33, divorced and has never had any children, but he's crazy about kids. He's just like a father to my children and they adore him. Abby, I've never known such a kind and understanding man.

Ray and I have set our wedding date, and the closer it gets the more chicken I get because I never told him that I had my tubes tied. He keeps talking about the "kids" we will have one day, and I just can't tell him I can't have any more. I am so afraid that if he knows the truth it might change the way he feels about me, and I love him so much I don't want to lose him.

Would it be terribly dishonest if I were to keep this from him?—CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Yes. If it will make a difference in his feelings for you, you're better off knowing now. Tell him. If he's as kind and understanding as you say he is, he'll marry you anyway.

DEAR ABBY: While talking to my husband one evening, I asked him if he had ever had an affair before we were married. He laughed and said he was taking the Fifth Amendment on that one.

We talked some more and he finally said, "If I were to tell you I had, then you'd want to know with whom and when, and then things would never be the same between us."

He is very proud of the fact that he never lies. I then said that I knew that he had had an affair with a certain person and I just wanted him to admit it. He made no comment and the conversation ended. (I don't really know, but I have strong suspicions.)

Now I am wondering why he "took the Fifth." Isn't that an admission of guilt? If he was not guilty, all he had to do was say so.

Would you say he is acting like a guilty man or one who is innocent?—SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I would not presume to judge him guilty or innocent. However, he appears to be very intelligent. And if you're wise, you'll not bring it up again.

HOW MORE THOUGHTFUL CAN YOU BE THAN GIVE THEIR FAVORITE AGAIN!

HAVE IT MADE LIKE NEW-THAT'S HOW.

Women model tacky clothes

A "Tacky Fashion Show" with models wearing clothes purchased at a succession of grab-bag sales, was presented at a meeting of the Tall City Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Proceeds from the sales were contributed to the scholarship fund of the chapter.

Featured speaker for the meeting was Doris Howbert, city councilwoman, who explained the procedure used to formulate the city budget. She stressed the care taken by council members to insure the wisest use of tax dollars.

Mrs. Howbert pointed out that council members take seriously their responsibilities as elected representatives of Midland and welcome citizen input. She urged the public to attend council meetings and reminded the group that unless their wishes are expressed, the council has no way of knowing about them.

The chapter meets on the second Monday night of each month. Employed women are welcome to attend any meeting.

AT WIT'S END

Her place in car goes complete cycle

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was standing on the curb the other day when my husband yelled from behind the wheel of the car "Get in!"

I yelled back, "Where do you want me to sit?

He retorted, "Your usual place."

I had to stand there and smile. That was a ridiculous thing to say to a woman who has changed seats in a car every time the gears shift.

When we dated, I sat so close to the driver, he looked like he was driving alone. The longer we dated, the more I gravitated toward the passenger side.

After we were married, I was all the way over to the door . . . with the exception of when my mother-in-law rode with us and I was relegated to the back seat.

After the first two children were born, I sat with my body draped over the back seat so I could lurch and swat. When a third child came along, I sacrificed my front window seat and sat between the other two in the back to (a) accommodate everyone with a window seat and (b) to keep them from killing one another.

After car pools became a way of life, I slid over to the driver's spot behind the steering wheel, a position I held with my knees locked.

2 remained there until the children began to drive. Then I moved back to the passenger side where I sat constricted in fear with my brake foot on an imaginary brake and both hands on the door handle.

When th children left and we began to see grown-ups once again, I was relageted to the back seat with the other woman where it was assumed we would have more to talk about than the man I married.

Some women tell me it isnmt'over yet. There's the period when you get grandchildren and they ride up front and you sit in tne back with the porta-potty and the playpen, and when your daughter gets older, you end up in the back seat with her again.

"Are you going to stand there all day or are you going to get into the car?" yelled my husband impatiently.

I crawled over the dog (who insists on sitting by the window where he can hang his tongue out of the no-draft) and squeezed in close to my husband. "We've gone complete cycle," I whispered.

He hadn't the foggiest notion what I was talking about.

Pamela Pointer of Hampton, Va., was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Cindy Heard of Garland, sister of the bridegroom, Cindy Tinslar Davis of Laredo and Margaret Barnett Jordan of San Antonio.

Joseph F. Kopec of Hewitt was his brother's best man. The groomsmen were Robert Baker of Wylie, Phillip Cooper of Dallas and Jim Rowen of Waco. The ushers were James McDonald Frizell of Houston, brother of the bride, Guy Olney of Hampton, Ed Kinkeade of Irving and Paul Wells of San Antonio.

The bride' parents presented her in marriage. She wore a designer gown of candlelight satin with a flared skirt flowing to a chapel train. The sheer bodice and sleeves of re-embroidered Alencon lace were enhanced with bridal pearls. Her formal length mantilla veil of imported illusion fell from a Camelot cap of lace and pearls and was edged with the imported lace and pearls. She carried an arrangement of white Cymbidium orchids, roses, stephanotis and baby's breath atop a white Bible. Her jewelry was diamond earrings, a gift from the bridegroom.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents in Ranchland Hill Country Club. Mrs. W. L. Tinslar and Mrs. R. T. Davis had the bridesmaids' luncheon in La Bodega Restaurant.

We all scream for ice cream

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Ice cream — homemade, dished up at the neighborhood ice cream parlor or fetched from the supermarket's frozen food section — holds its place as one of America's favorite sweets.

It can be the simplest of all desserts and snacks or the fanciest. Because it is so versatile, it's always challenging to come up with interesting variations.

Here is a quickie way to get homemade flavor without the hassle: begin with a quart of the best, richest french vanilla ice cream you can buy. Let it sit out to soften, just till it can be stirred easily.

While that's happening wash and chop up about two cups of fresh fruit. Peaches are especially nice — or any kind of berries. You won't need to add sugar. The sweetness of the ice cream will carry this and it will taste more like the real, fresh thing if it's not oversweetened.

Puree half of the fruit in blender with the ice cream. Stir in the other cup of chopped fruit and whatever juice has accumulated with it.

Spoon the fruit and cream mixture into a freezer tray or pack it into a pretty mold and freeze until firm.

When you serve it, if you don't tell, probably no one will guess that you didn't slave over the crank of an ice cream freezer.

And now an idea for when you really do want to start from scratch.

PISTACHIO ICE CREAM

2 cups light cream
4 egg yolks
Three-fourths cup sugar
Pinch salt
1 tbsp. unflavored gelatin
One-fourth cup cold water
2 cups cream, whipped
One-half tsp. pistachio flavoring
One-fourth tsp. almond flavoring
One-half cup pistachio nuts, ground fine

Scald the cream. Mix the slightly beaten egg yolks with the sugar and salt. Add the cream gradually and cook in double boiler until mixture coats a spoon.

Cool in a pan of ice water until it begins to thicken.

Fold in the whipped cream and flavor with pistachio and almond flavorings. Add the nuts and pour into three refrigerator trays.

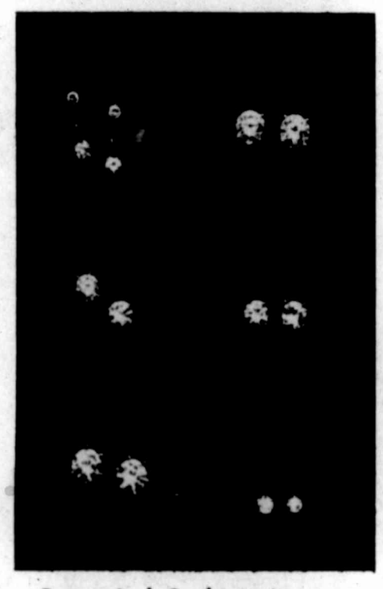

After an hour and a half, remove and beat well and return to freezer. If you wish to mold, pack into a one-and-one-half-quart mold and freeze at least two and one-half hours. Serves eight.

WINE DRINKER

Wine tasting more fun if shared with group

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

If you enjoy wine and want to learn more about it without going bankrupt, try forming your own wine-tasting group. Not only can all the members share the cost of education, but you can have fun in the process.

It does not require a laboratory environment, attitudes of reverence or crystal stemware. All you really need are up to 14 people, the urge to try new wines, a nose that works properly and some background literature so you know what to expect when you start smelling and tasting.

The reason for limiting the size of your group is that one bottle can be divided nicely among 14 people without pulling out a measuring cup.

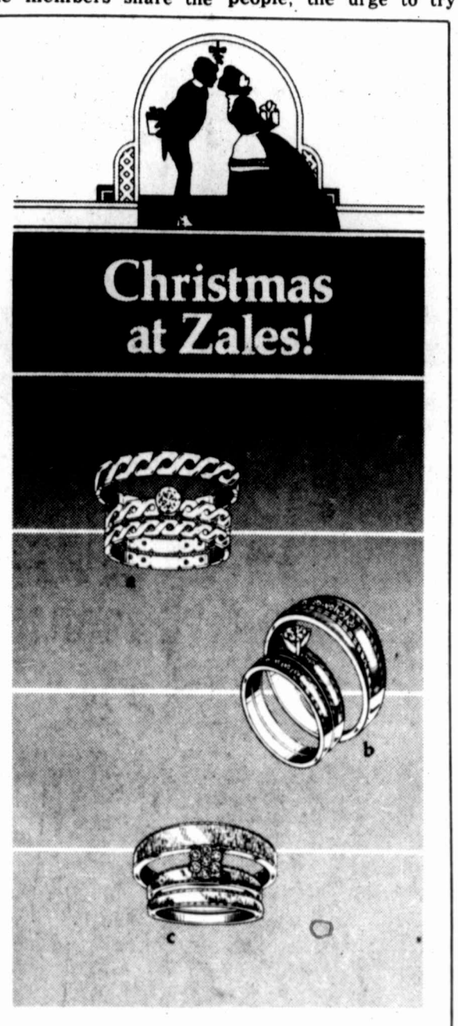

Of course, if you have a big house and enough seating, you can increase that in multiples of 14.

One group I know of in California meets once a month at a different house. The host provides the bread and cheese, plus post-tasting munchies and a jug wine or two (in half-gallons or gallons) for keeping the party going. They taste at least six wines at each session and often as many as 12. In one year, they tasted more than 120 different wines. By sharing the costs, each person paid just 10 percent of what would have been paid to sample the wines as as individual.

The best format is to taste one specific category or style of wine each month, such as: cabernet sauvignon from California; beaujolais from France; moselle from Germany; barbaresco or chianti classico from Italy; cheap white wines under $4 a half-gallon; California chardonnay over $7, etc.

To insure that the wines are tasted for their qualities and not their labels, it is best to taste "blind." One person pumchases the wines. He also takes the foil off the bottle necks and puts each bottle in a brown paper bag before leaving for the tasting. Once there, another person puts numbers on the bags for identification and another opens the wine.

By tasting blind, you can pick up both the similarities and differences of the wines you are tasting. For example, you could be tasting California cabernet sauvignon blind. Among your 10 or 12 wines, you would find a unifying quality from the grape. The differences would come from the vineyard, the vintage and what the wine maker did in the blending and aging processes.

Should Pepsi generation dress like Geritol set?

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. You agreed with a parent who wrote to you that police are especially tough on young people with long hair and clothing that is offbeat.

If that's true perhaps the mother should encourage her daughter to dress in a more acceptable manner and keep her hair well groomed. Girls and young ladies can do more toward changing the dress habits of our younger male population by simply refusing to associate with them until they dress as clean-cut gentlemen should.

If young ladies don't try to raise the standards of their male associates, the latter will definitely lower the female standards.

If that mother thinks that police officers pick on them because of their appearance, all they have to do is clean it up.

A. The original discussion, as I recall, was that there seems to be a tendency in some parts of the country for the police to bear down harder on young people whose traffic or other performance may deviate no more than do the activities of older people.

Today's writer apparently thinks that how youngsters looked during our youth was the way they should dress and comb their hair now.

Others don't agree. They sometimes even feel envious about the appearance, attitudes, conversations and relationships of the current younger generation.

Which side are you on?

Q. Our 5-year-old sneaks my underpants and wears them under his own every chance he gets. He has even worn them to school. He says they feel good.

We are wondering at what age we need to get concerned about homosexual tendencies. Is 5 years old too young to worry about them?

A. You and other members of your family have your own clothing, books, records and other possessions. Your 5-year-old son has his. Each person should respect the privacy of what belongs to others. Some we can share, of course, like the food we eat, but not those possessions that belong personally to each family member.

Placing your clothing in the same context as other belongings may help give your youngster the idea that what's yours is yours and what's his is his.

You don't wear his clothing or help yourself to his toys, nor should he borrow yours.

How about trying that approach?

Special care needed when cleaning silk

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Take care ... this is the year of the silkworm.

Silk is the fashion fabric of the year, its use going beyond scarves and ties to dresses, blouses and suits — men's as well as women's.

But the thread of the silkworm, first cultivated by the ancient Chinese and long admired for its special look and feel, needs special cleaning and handling care.

"On the plus side, silk is very elastic and wrinkle resistant, and doesn't soil easily," advises Patricia Andersen of the International Fabricare Institute (IFI), the association of professional launderers and drycleaners. "On the minus side, the weaves can be prone to chafing or even splitting, especially when wet."

Even perspiration, Ms. Andersen says, can weaken the fabric enough to damage the surface fibers and give the material a dull, worn look.

"This will happen anywhere the fabric has been flexed repeatedly," she added.

Moisture also can cause bleeding of some silk dyes and can disrupt fabric finishes enough to cause wrinkles or water spots, she noted.

"Professional drycleaners have equipment and techniques to restore silk fabric, but there's only so much they can do," said Charles R. Riggott, IFI executive vice president.

Most silks aren't washed because of silk's aversion to water, and even drycleaning techniques have to be adapted to suit the fragile fabric.

Care at home is needed as well. Spills must be blotted from the fabric with a towel, because rubbing the fabric when wet will damage the silk fibers.

Cholesterol theory: is it big, fat lie?

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

The egg came first in being blamed for high cholesterol levels. Then came meats, butter, cream, fats of all kinds.

But it's not the egg, nor any of those other foods, that builds cholesterol levels to the point of heart disease, says Dr. Richard A. Passwater, biochemist and author of a new book, "Supernutrition for Healthy Hearts."

"The American public has had 30 years of brainwashing about the cholesterol theory," said Passwater.

"Only in 1974 was the actual cause of heart disease, this nation's leading cause of premature death, determined.

"A little more than a year later, the studies pinpointing the cause were confirmed. Many will be surprised to learn that dietary cholesterol was not found to be the culprit."

Passwater said it is now believed that the cholesterol found in the arteries at the site of the deposits that cause heart disease is an end product of the cellular deterioration that produced the narrowed arteries.

The studies were made by Dr. Earl P. Benditt of the University of Washington School of Medicine, said the author.

Dietary cholesterols are not the culprits and polyunsaturated fats are not the cures, said Passwater

"No matter how carefully you follow the low-cholesterol diets, no matter how many eggs or pats of butter or glasses of milk you drop from your diet, you still have a 50 per cent chance of dying prematurely from a heart attack."

His book outlines what he terms a "total protection plan" and which he lists alphabetically. A stands for antioxidant nutrients, specifically vitamins E and C; B stands for lowered blood pressure; C stands for reduced cigarette smoking; D stands for a diet that is balanced instead of restrictive; E stands for exercise; and F stands for fun, "instead of frustration," he said.

Becoming frustrated can become more harmful than any of the other variables, said Passwater.

"Consider the man who wants a steak, but he's worried about cholesterol, so he works himself into a tizzy. His blood pressure goes up, he gets tense, adrenalin pours out of his body and consumes the vitamin C. That's not good. It does far more harm than the steak would have done."

Passwater says that man can't get rid of frustrations, but that he can learn to live with frustrating situations. "Balance it all out by adding happy situations, fun things, to life," he said. "Don't just sit and simmer about frustrations."

Passwater said that people can "psyche themselves" out of wanting harmful foods, such as sugar and salt.

"I will say it's hard to avoid sugar," he said. "At least 90 per cent of our processed foods contain sugar, and more than 60 per cent of the foods we eat are processed.

"Don't believe you can escape the evils of sugar by substituting brown sugar or honey. They may contain a few more nutrients but they're still concentrated calories. Sugar goes through the digestive system and into the bloodstream like an explosion, and the pancreas has to put out a surge of insulin to cope with it."

On the subject of exercise, Passwater said that jogging is beneficial to some, that calisthenics are good and swimming is great, but that walking is the best exercise of all.

"I don't mean ambling along, I don't mean brisk walking, I mean just happy, steady walking. It's the same with jogging. It should be done with pleasure, not with grim determination.

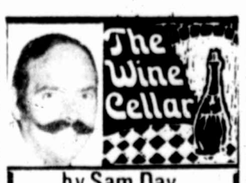

"One jogger will go out, and as he jogs he's thinking, 'It's cold. The traffic's bad. People are staring at me. Dogs are chasing me.' That jogger isn't benefiting a bit by the exercise.

"But another jogger can think, 'Wow, what a great day. Smell that fresh air. Look at those pretty girls out jogging. Hey, this is great.' He is benefiting by two things: fun instead of frustration and exercise."

Passwater said one question has been puzzling doctors and scientists who have monitored cholesterol levels. "For years they have wondered why it was that 80 per cent of the heart attack victims have normal cholesterol levels.

"I think my book gives the answer.

"Diseased arteries are caused by high blood pressure, cigarette smoking, too many calories in the diet, not enough exercise of the right type and too much frustration."

The trend in wine these days is toward the softer wines, the sweeter and less alcoholic wines. One wine that fits this category is Reynac's Pineau des Charentes. This favorite of the Cognac region in France is made by adding young Cognac Brandy to freshly pressed native grapes. The result is a nutlike bouquet and a sweet, smooth taste. Serve it well chilled or on the rocks and you are in for a treat. It is also good for dessert when you pour a little over cantaloupe.

From soft wine to blended whiskey, IMPERIAL LIQOURS 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256 has what you need for holiday entertaining. You can choose from an outstanding collection of fine wines, one of the largest selections of imported beers in town, and a full spectrum of liquors and party goods. Look for the friendly moustache in the drive-up window. Hours: 10-9 Mon.-Sat.

WINE WISDOM:
Pineau des Charentes is a great aperitif.

If you're considering a Jaguar XJ6L, drive a Peugeot 604.

Like the Jaguar XJ6L, the Peugeot 604 SL has classic styling (ours is by Pininfarina), standard air conditioning, AM/FM stereo, power windows, fully reclining seats, genuine leather seats, and an electric sunroof—most all as standard equipment.

The Peugeot 604 has also been engineered for a superior level of comfort. With oversized shock absorbers, large coil springs, a floating differential, and seats that are actually tuned to the supension system.

But comfort isn't the only thing that sets the 604 apart from the Jaguar. There's also the price. Which starts at about $11,000.* And which may be its most comforting feature of all.

Develop an eye for colors a new way

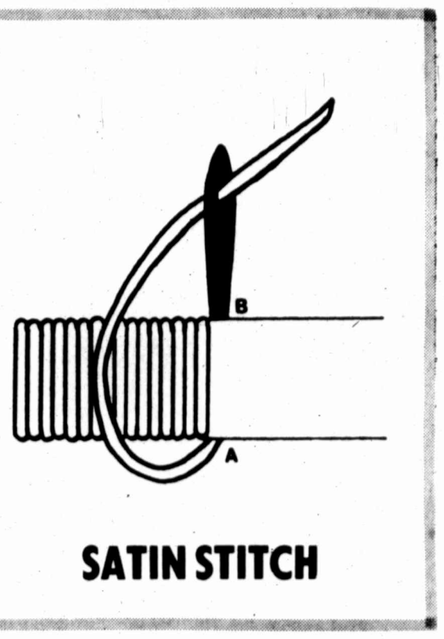

By ERICA WILSON

At my annual summer seminar on Nantucket I have a favorite bargello pillow that I pass around to my students. It's done in the most subtle shades of sage green, pink, muted orange and white, and I always get a roomful of gasps when I reveal my inspiration for the project: a food photograph I found in a French magazine—of a plate of ham, green beans, carrots and potatoes.

I'm living proof that sources for color ideas can come from anywhere—a candy wrapper, subway graffiti, even the cars ahead of you in a traffic jam. All you have to do is develop an "eye" for colors—disassociating them from the objects they're a part of. You must look at the world in a whole new light—like an impressionist painter.

The first thing to keep in mind when you're choosing your own colors is to consider your background fabric as an integral part of your color scheme and your colors in relationship co one another. If you're a relative beginner to crewel or embroidery, it might be best for you to start on a natural colored background so that you have total freedom in Your color choices. If you're doing needlepoint, try off-white wool.

Once you branch out into different backgrounds, keep in mind that when you're working on a dark background, the lightest colors will be the ones that stand out the most, like the negative of a photograph. A dark background also tends to "swallow up" the design, making it look smaller. In crewel, particularly, the simpler the stitch, the more intense the color will be. A close-textured stitch breaks up the light and generally makes the color darker. When you're working an open, lacy-textured stitch, it will naturally blend more into the background, and the color will become more muted.

SATIN STITCH

The stitch that gives the effect of color closest to that of the skein itself is the satin stitch, shown in the accompanying diagram. As you can see, the threads remain clear and radiant because they're laid down with flat, straight stitches with nothing to interfere with them.

The tent stitch—the traditional stitch for needlepoint—gives a rich, velvety effect that is a little darker than the original color in the skein. Turkey work— —that tufted stitch with cut pile like a rug—works out at least two shades darker than that of the original skein. That's why it's a qood idea with any stitch you're going to use to give it a trial run on a practice piece of linen or canvas.

Kitchen shortcuts help efficiency

Copley News Service

If we could just buy that miracle machine that does everything in the kitchen, if we could only afford an oven that cooks in minutes instead of hours, we think we might be a great deal more efficient in the kitchen.

Not so, says Donna Goldfein, a time-management consultant and efficiency expert.

We would be much more efficient if we would store away half or three-fourths of the appliances and other gadgets that now clutter up our kitchen, Goldfein said.

She thinks that there is nothing to equal the old-fashioned mixer that has been around for 30 years and probably will last another 30.

In spite of her back-to-basics approach, Goldfein seems something of a wonder woman. She is a wife, mother of three, career woman, consultant, author and lecturer, and she said she finds time for everything by establishing priorities.

"There's no particular secret to efficiency," she said.

"Understand your priorities and don't try to be perfect. The perfect person doesn't progress because nothing needs to get done, everything is tidily put away in boxes.

"The homemaker today must learn to do a balancing act that wasn't needed by grandmother, because time was hers. Today's woman is expected to do so much more, so many more things.

"The 'pride and polish' of yesterday have been replaced by other things more important to the moment. Get to the basics of the things that really matter to you."

Goldfein said she decided long ago the kitchen floor was an enemy who demanded too much time instead of a friend who would allow her to enjoy life. "I just don't bother about wax anymore, and it's a wonderful relief," she said.

Daily dusting and vacuuming, fiddling with little unimportant details, are other enemies, she said. "Make your beds and tidy up your kitchen and somehow the whole house seems clean," she said.

As to efficiency in the kitchen, Goldfein outlined four "simple steps:" planning, purchasing, preparation, presentation.

"Paper and pencil are your first good friends," she said.

"Write everything down, not just for the day, but for the week. Buy staples by the month. Plan your kitchen to work for you.

"Why clutter up a drawer with six knives when you always reach for one special friend? Why clutter up the counter space with appliances rarely used? Store them away: clear, clean and condense, those are key words."

Cole facing difficulty

SEATTLE (AP) — Life has been difficult for Craig Cole ever since another chap by the same name toted $70,000 in a paper bag into a car dealership and bought a Stutz Blackhawk VI.

"Things have been irretrievably altered as a result of the publicity," says Cole, who works for the state Human Rights Commission.

"I mean, really. My wife and mother no longer speak to me, news reporters and creditors call day and night, and so do my friends. All because my name is Craig Cole — but not the Craig Cole who bought the fancy car and owns exotic dance studios."

"I drive a Gremlin with a dent in the side," grumbled the other Cole.

Medical board has its first woman leader

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Dr. Edithe Levit, 50, has become the first female president and director of the National Board of Medical Examiners.

The Philadelphia-based organization came into being in 1915, she said, because there were no established national standards and tests for physicians in the United States.

Today, nearly 80 percent of all medical students in the United Statea take the National Board tests—a three-part series of examinations.

The board has a fulltime staff of 130 doctors, educators and professionals who coordinate the design and construction of scores of medical tests for various areas of specialization and sub-specialization.

With an operating budget of $6 million a year, the board is a monprofit orgamization funded primarily from testing and service fees, the physician said.

Santa Claus has luncheon date with children of Midland

Santa Claus is coming to town Dec. 10 to ride in the annual Christmas parade. He will then eat with the children of Midland at a party in the American Legion Hall immediately after the parade.

The event will feature visits with Santa Claus, Mrs. Santa Claus, Frosty the Snowman, Monster, furry monsters and Santa's elves. Entertainment, favors, food and special prizes will make it a special treat for the youngsters. Parents are welcome to bring cameras to the party.

There will be reserved seating for the three servings of lunch. The first serving will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. the second from 12:30 to 1:15 and the third from 1:30 to 2:15. Children must be accompanied by an adult who will also need a ticket to attend.

Tickets are priced at $2 each and may be purchased from any AAUW member of the Midland branch of the American Association of University Women, sponsor of the lunch, or by dialing 684-4179, 694-0340 or 694-0258. Since tickets will be honored for the designated time only, they should be purchased for a specified serving time. Exchanges for an alternate time can be made up until the day of the event, provided seating is available.

The Midland branch of AAUW is hosting the party to benefit the group's educational fund. The proceeds will be used entirely for local scholarships, UTPB scholarships, national fellowships, creative writing awards and other educational areas.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Transform an old top to turtleneck dickey

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

If it is something old and you turn it into something new, then it doesn't cost anything and I like that. Judith Long, Omaha, Neb., has a terrific "no cost" idea:

"Since I am one of those persons who hates to throw anything away, I tried something the other day — and it worked! I thought your readers might like it.

"A couple of turtleneck knit tops had so many snags I could no longer wear them. The layered look with dickeys is quite popular now, so I cut a pattern from newspaper and made turtleneck dickeys.

"I cut around the turtleneck in back, leaving plenty for hem, then cut the front two inches wider on each side of the neckline and about six or eight inches down the front. After hemming the edges, the dickey was done. I had enough material left to make matching headbands. I probably didn't explain very well, but if you understand, you can rewrite for me."

You did just fine, Judith, and thank you for a neat, fashionable idea. Turtleneck dickeys are selling in the stores for $8 and up, so think what you saved!

My mother has a rule of thumb for discarding old clothes. If you didn't wear it last year, you won't wear it this year, so out it goes. Good policy, Mom, for keeping your closet neat, but sometimes you lose a good thing that way.

Tweed jackets, for example.

Tweed is in — and old tweed is even "inner." We jazzed up my husband's old (but good) Harris tweed sport coat by adding suede elbow patches. New jackets are being shown with these patches, but why buy new when old will do?

Right, Mom?

Try on the jacket, position the patches over the elbows, having the arm bent slightly. Pin in place, pinning through the holes punched in the edges of the patch.

Place sleeve over a sleeve board. Be sure lining is smooth and in place under the patch. Be sure fabric is not bunched up.

There is a curve (ease) to the elbow of the jacket, so don't flatten that out. Make the patch curve with it.

Stitch patch to sleeve by hand using buttonhole twist to match or contrast with patch.

Two don'ts: don't twist the patch out of place as you stitch. Don't stitch through the sleeve board.

QUICK STITCH: Looking for the perfect scissors for handwork, trimming suede seams, cutting punchwork? The new stainless-steel, plastic-handled, four-inch to five-inch embroidery shears are just the thing. I'm going to buy a second pair so I will have one near my handwork and one on my sewing table.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Wear several shawls at once. It's a cool weather layering trick, says Becky Culp, area clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Judy Carter: White House's ERA champion

By MARGUERITE SULLIVAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The setting was the Calhoun, Ga., Women's Club, not too long ago, and its speaker was to be a hometown girl — Judy Carter, daughter-in-law of the President, daughter of the area's state senator and granddaughter of the club's longtime past president.

Yet Judy Carter was a nervous wreck.

That was not because she was going to give a speech. She had won numerous awards from her high school debating club, had gained great poise from her teen-age years as a beauty queen and had chalked up thousands of miles before hundreds of audiences campaigning for her father-in-law.

Judy was nervous because of her topic. It was the Equal Rights Amendment.

She talked about the widows and the divorcees who would be helped by the proposed amendment, and by the time she left, Judy had made a favorable impression.

> "The greatest fear I've found about the amendment is that it will change things a lot. But ERA won't affect a woman's life that much at all, unless her husband dies or she gets a divorce. If either happen now, a woman finds she has all the responsibilities her husband had, but few of the legal rights."
> Judy Carter

The club voted to contribute $75 — the most it ever will give — to the ERA cause, and the club president publicly endorsed the controversial amendment.

For Calhoun, that really was something.

The tall, 27-year-old Judy who is married to the President's eldest son, Jack, in fact has become the White House's strategist and troubleshooter for ERA ratification.

So far, 35 of the required 38 states have approved the amendment, whose ratification deadline runs out March 22, 1979.

And if the Calhoun Women's Club situation could be repeated around the country with local speakers talking about how the amendment would affect the women in their community, Judy is convinced that the beleaguered amendment will be ratified.

But so far, she said, there "has been a total lack of communication and a total lack of organization" on the part of those supporting the amendment.

The opposition, however, has been successful in blocking ratification in state legislatures (only one state — Indiana — for instance, ratified it last year), Judy said, "because they have been organized and directed." Yet they are a very small minority, she added.

"The greatest fear I've found about the amendment is that it will change things a lot," Judy said.

"But ERA won't affect a woman's life that much at all, unless her husband dies or she gets a divorce.

"If either happens now," Judy continued, "a woman finds she has all the responsibilities her husband had, but few of the legal rights."

In Georgia, for instance, the man owns the house, "so if a husband deserts his wife, she will find she lives in a house that someone else owns," Judy said.

Although she did sporadic campaigning for the amendment last winter, Carter has been the spearhead for the first family's ERA efforts since the summer.

CONSUMER FOOD NEWS

COLLEGE STATION—Fruits and pork offer several good values to Texas grocery market shoppers this week, according to Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

FRESH FRUITS—Most economical choices are grapefruit, oranges, tangelos, tangerines, cranberries, apples, grapes, bananas and pears.

PORK—Good values include butt-end roasts, quarterloin cut into chops and rib-eyed roasts.

POULTRY—Fryers on "special" are likely, since they had a "back seat" to turkeys recently. Egg prices are slightly higher, but Grade A, large-size eggs are generally the best value.

BEEF—Fewer "specials" is a trend, so check for economy buys carefully. Consider chuck roasts and steaks, ground beef and beef liver.

CONSUMER WATCHWORDS— For baking and cooking economy, use dry milk or evaporated milk mixed with water—either will work in any recipe calling for milk.

lan holiday decor

heme, color scheme

COLLEGE STATION—Let a new theme d color scheme creae citement or serenity at me for the holiday ason.

Holidays provide an exllent opportunity for nerous use of accent lors and decortaons—and this year's col- choices are "anything es," suggests Glenda oore, a housing and ome furnishings ecialist.

OLIDAY THEME

Selecting a holiday heme first can help set he color scheme, she ays. A decorating theme ight be religious, coun- ry, modern, or an "old- ashioned" Christmas.

Miss Moore is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M Univeristy System.

Spending a lot of money on new decorations is not necessary to create this year's holiday look, either, the specialist says.

New ideas and color combinations can start with adapting decorations already on hand.

"On-hand" items can become fabric or ribbon bows, or tinsel made from popcorn or colored paper rings to carry out an "old-fashioned" theme.

For an effective country look, glue fabric scraps onto plain styrofoam balls, include a velvet ribbon at the top, and hang it on the tree with a bobbypin—or mount them around the house with thread and thumbtacks.

COLOR SCHEME

In choosing a holiday color scheme, first consider the existing background colors of walls, carpets and upholstery. Also, take the style of furnishings into consideration.

Then select one or two harmonizing or contrasting colors for "holiday colors," which do not have to be tradional red and green.

Color choices are limited only by the imagination, Miss Moore says.

Consider using red, white and gold—or green, blue and silver.

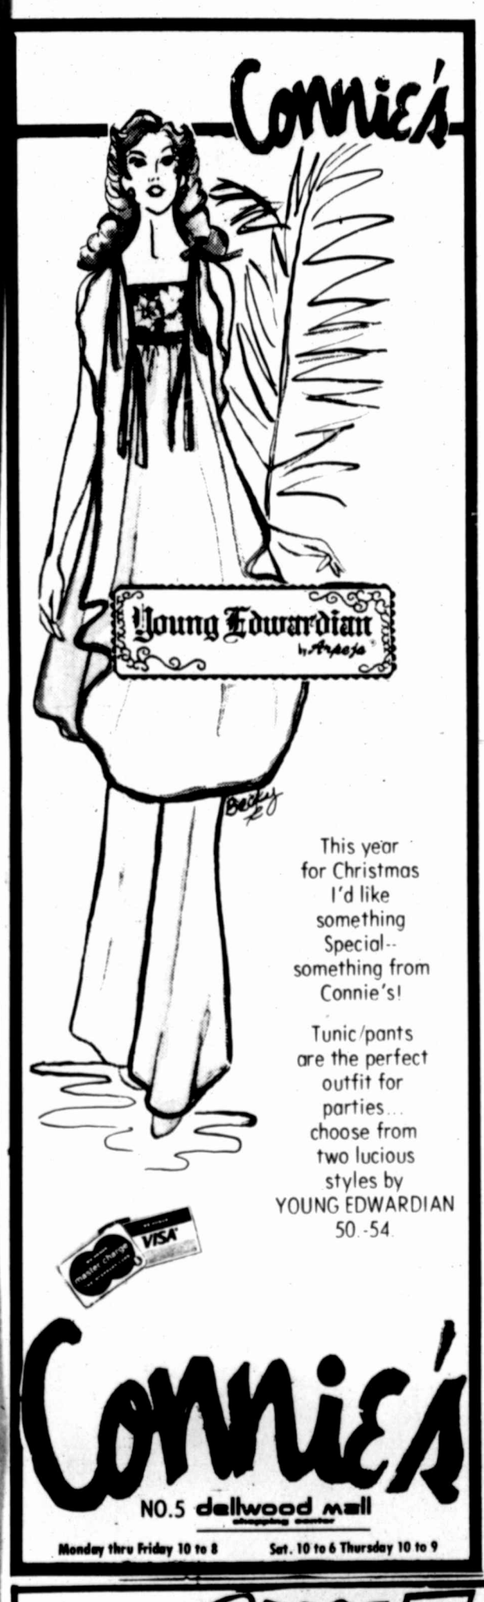

Perhaps purple, lime and green might be this year's selection. Or pink, white and gold—or green, orange and browns—or even burgandy, red and gold might look best.

In considering on-hand items with color in mind, remember that greenery usually fits into most color schemes. Using either red or green as the base color also allows for the use of more lights and ornaments from last year's supply.

In fact, lighting and accents give a color scheme added excite ment or serenity.

Use colored paper over lighted valances, or try lighted was brackets or corners for example.

Good swim wear season is predicted

By LUCRETIA STFIGER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — More women's swimsuits probably will be sold next spring than ever before. That's the prediction of several swimsuit manufacturers who point to changing lifestyles as the cause.

"Health activities are up, women have more leisure time and are taking more vacations," said a spokesman for DeWeese Designs at the firm's Los Angeles showroom.

"Women are spending more money at resorts, which means more suits, and there is more disposable personal income available for traveling.

"Those factors have to be present for a good swimsuit season.

"A woman can wear last year's swimsuit as well as anything for backyard swimming."

Another favorable factor for the swim wear industry this year, the manufacturers say, comes with the advancing age of the "war babies," those born right after World War II. As this group of young persons, now in their late 20s and early 30s, become more affluent, older and interested in looking good, they tend to spend more for swim wear.

In 1960, a woman spent an average $22 for her swimsuit. In 1978, she will spend an extra $10 for an average price of $32.

Although part of this increase is due to inflation — clothing is up in cost the least compared to other commodities, the manufacturers say — it also is due to increasing costs of raw materials and labor.

Five principles of good nutrition are outlined

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

At a time of affluence and abundant food supplies, there is a rapidly growing movement toward vegetarianism, parcicularly among young adults.

Dr. U.D. Register, chairman of the department of nutrition of Loma Linda University, said:

"There are a number of reasons for this trend to vegetarianism which vary as to the type of diet adopted, adherence to it and other characteristics of lifestyle. A common objective appears to be that of promoting health and a sense of well-being."

However, he said, many individuals turn to vegetarian diets for personal reasons and without adequate information on food values and nutritional principles.

"The use of Zen macrobiotic diets is a well-known example of problems that potentially may develop when the diet is improperly selected," he said.

"The Zen macrobiotic regimen basically consists of 10 diets, ranging from the lowest level, diet minus three, which includes fruits, vegetables and some animal products in addition to cereals, to the highest level, made up entirely of cereals.

"She was 5 feet, 6 inches and weighed 68 pounds. Her elbows were larger than her arms, her knees were larger than her legs. She looked like someone from Dachau."

He said there is a vast difference between people who are vegetarians by choice and those who have no alternative because of economics and available food supplies. "Both groups can benefit from the assurance that their diets can be adequate and healthful."

Register said reports have been published of nutritional diseases prevalent in underprivileged areas of the world.

"These generally show that the diseases are due, not to a vegetarian diet as such, but, to a gross shortage of food or to a diet consisting largely of such foods as refined cornmeal, cassava root, tapioca or white rice, with practically no milk, eggs, leafy vegetables, legumes or fruits."

He listed five principles of good nutrition: a wide variety of foods, unrefined foods, an amount to maintain ideal weight, proper times of eating and a good breakfast.

By "proper times" he meant meals spaced so that a light supper can be enjoyed instead of a heavy dinner, which is responsible, in part, for overloading the coronaries with thickened blood which can lead to heart attacks, since "the majority of heart attacks occur between 11 p.m. and morning."

"As long as man has enough to eat and has a well-balanced diet of unrefined foods, he will receive all the proteins, carbohydrates and calories needed," he said.

By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) — To Carla LaMonte, de la Renta is "Oscar" and Blass is "Bill." She has climbed to the top of one of the most slippery heaps in the world to earn $100 an hour as a fashion model.

But all is not soft swirling fabrics, gentle background music, wealth and fame - for this long-limbed daughter of a Holyoke, Mass., factory worker is realistic: it could all end tomorrow, she says.

"At first I just wanted to make a living. Then I wanted to be one of the top 10 models. Then I wanted to be one of the top five. But once you're on top, what's next?

"Down. So I can't turn down a job — I always think it might be the last."

She work virtually 365 days a year, often for as long as 16 hours a day. No matter what havoc it will wreak on her personal plans, Carla almost never turns down a job.

"If I find out I've been left out of a show I call my agents and ask why. They say, 'because you're too busy,' and I say, 'but did they want me?'"

So most of the time Carla LaMonte runs from job to job — dashing for subways, flagging taxicabs. Her thick brunette hair askew, she cluteches bulky tote bags filled with the paraphernalia of her trade — spare stockings and shoes, makeup and bobby pins, and an enourmous, hour-by-hour appointment calendar.

Carla has been modeling for 10 years, but her age is a mystery. She won't tell because, she says, each designer has a different notion of who Carla LaMonte is: Blass sees her a a sophisticated woman in her 30s; Clovis thinks of her as 25ish. Carla LaMonte intends to keep working for both.

The work is no picnic. One recent Monday, Carla rose at 6:30 a.m. to set her hair before embarking on a series of seven fashion shows scattered around the city that begain at 8 a.m. and ended after 10 p.m. Sunday's schedule was much the same, and Tuesday's.

Carla changed clothes at least 40 times, zipped at least 40 zippers, changed hairstyles nearly as often in not many more minutes.

She whipped herself into elegant, glowing beauty in tiny overheated dressing rooms where as many as 16 other models zipped and pinned and brushed and, now and then, bruised one another with bony elbows in the frenzy of changing.

Of course, the money is fabulous.

"That's not true," Carla objects. "It sounds great, but I don't get paid until they send the money to my agent. I must lose $3,000 a year from designers who go out of business without paying me.

You can't get a secure grip at the top of modeling's slippery heap, Carla says. Turn down a Sunday show, and the designer may not call you when he has a Wednesday show; dare to settle into a "look," and when fashions change, you no longer complement them. Ger too heavy, or stay too thin — you've got trouble.

"And now, in the United States, blondes are in," Carla says. "Of course, if there's one bruentte in a show, it's likely to be me.

"But that doesn't mean it'll always be that way."

Wedding attendants all in the family

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—When Sue Oswald became Mrs. Ray Oewandowsky recently, her brother, Charles, was designated as best man, and his wife, Joan, as matron of honor.

Their six children also wanted to get into the act, however, so jobs were found for all of them.

Theresa, 15, was the bridesmaid; Julie, 13, did a reading; Charles, 11, served as altar boy; Bonnie, 7, was put in charge of the rice; Jennifer, 6, was flower girl, and John, 5, was ring bearer.
