'Organization' of Peace Is Next Step, French Minister Says

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 27. (UP)—The world's most advanced effort to "make war more difficult" was made today when the representatives of 15 powers signed their names to two pieces of parchment—one bearing a declaration written in English, the other written in French.

With the signing today of the Briand-Kellogg treaty to outlaw war, the plenipotentiaries next turned to what Aristide Briand characterized as the "work of tomorrow"—the necessary organization of today's proclamation.

"Peace is proclaimed," the French foreign minister told the 14 delegates gathered in the Salon des Ambassadeurs at the Quai d'Orsay "but it still remains necessary to organize it."

Most of the men who affixed their names to the treaty went immediately to their hotels in Paris, passing through the gardens where a reception was in progress and attempting to find their way past a crowd of more than 5,000 persons gathered outside the palace in hopes of seeing the signers.

Signers Given Banquet

American Secretary Kellogg and American Ambassador Herrick were immediately recognized as they left the Salon des Ambassadeurs (known as the cloak room) after the ceremony.

Public enthusiasm was high pitched today and cheers of "Vive l' Amerique" greeted the United States representatives.

One hundred and seventy guests of the government, including the signers of the treaty, members of various diplomatic corps, and visiting dignitaries, attended a banquet in the salons at the Quai d'Orsay tonight. It was an official affair and the most brilliant staged since the World war.

Crowds began arriving around the Quai d'Orsay this morning, long before the treaty was scheduled to be signed.

Police were on hand to prevent any concentration around the foreign office or on the sidewalks. The crowds were orderly and spent most of the time discussing the flags of 15 powers which were fluttering from the roof of the government offices.

Crowd Cheers Kellogg

Secretary Kellogg and Ambassador Herrick, accompanied by Mrs. Kellogg, arrived half an hour early. The crowd cheered and the American secretary was obliged to stand, until the demonstration ended.

M. Briand spent half an hour dosing his private office before the ceremony started. M. Poincare was the busiest of French officials.

At 3:08 o'clock M. Briand walked

Swims Canal

Richard Halliburton, travel writer, completed last Saturday a grueling swim across the Panama canal, from the Atlantic entrance at Cristobal to the Pacific at Balboa, a distance of 50 miles. His way was fraught with alligators, from which, however, he was protected by a marksman who paddled alongside the swimmer in a boat. The swim required slightly more than five days.

PEACE EFFORTS ARE PRAISED

Cal Congratulates Head Of French Nation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (UP)—President Coolidge today congratulated President Doumergue, of France, upon the successful conclusion of the anti-war treaty negotiations, which resulted today in the signing of the treaty in Paris.

Mr. Coolidge's message said:

"It gives me great pleasure and satisfaction to extend to you and through you to the representatives of the nations assembled in Paris, my cordial congratulations on the successful outcome of the negotiations inaugurated by France and the United States for a treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy and pledging the signatories to seek only by peaceful means the settlement of differences which may arise between them.

"The treaty had its inception in the proposal submitted last year by the government of France to the government of the United States. The idea of Monsieur Briand has been made world-wide. I am confident that the simple provisions of this treaty will be accepted by all nations because I am sure there is everywhere a will for peace."

Briand Responds

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 27. (UP) President Coolidge today received a reply from President Doumergue of France to a message of felicitation which the American executive had sent earlier in the day on the signing of the Briand-Kellogg treaty.

"I sincerely thank your excellency," the reply said, "for your kindly sending me, and through me the representatives of the nations assembled in Paris, a message which evinces the great importance you so rightly attach to the solemn signing of the general compact renouncing war as an instrument of national policy."

LIGHT VOTE IS PREDICTED IN BOND ELECTION

Issue Solely to Retire Outstanding Debt Of $250,000

FIVE VOTING PLACES

Polls Will Open at 8 o'Clock and Close At 7 P. M.

A light vote was predicted on the eve of the city election on the $250,000 bond issue. The polls will open at 8 o'clock, Tuesday morning and close at 7 o'clock.

There are five voting places, the Alamo school, the court house, the South Side Baptist church annex, the central police station and the Buchanan street fire station.

The issue solely to retire debt, and under the law can be used for no other purpose than the purpose set fourth in the election call.

The final explamation of the need for the election was made Tuesday night by city officials and by citizens working on the election.

Suit has been threatened against the city for past due bills. If the bond issue passes, these may be paid. Otherwise the city may be forced to make a special and direct tax levy to pay the bills in a lump sum of spreading the debt over a period of years as the bond issue will do. The issue also will reduce the interest on a considerable portion of the debt for which there are now outstanding warrants at 6 per cent to 4½ per cent. All of the money is for old debts, none of this year and some as old as 1922.

Use of Money

Specifically, the funds are to be applied against the following debts if the bonds are voted:

Street improvement and barn site	$ 80,894.49
Fire equipment	6,922.72
Cemetery and park	27,362.06
Auditorium completion	125,319.72
Total	$250,000.00

It was emphasized that the bonds will tend to lower the cost of paying the debts already incurred as they present a cheaper form of payment than is possible if payment is forced through courts or the higher rate of interest carried by warrants continues.

The good credit of the city also is at stake.

Voters who wish to know where they may vote may determine by

Dainty Miss Leads Road Bandit Pair In Hold-ups

"Hello, Folks," Greets Smiling Girl Robber as Trio Gathers Loot in San Antonio Daylight Banditry

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 27. (AP)—Led by a smiling, pretty and fashionably dressed girl, who directed their activities and searched the victims, two bandits in a series of daring robberies today secured $37.50 in cash, a valuable watch and a pair of ear rings.

The bandits first appeared near the city, where they forced a car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hendricks and Miss Myrtle Cash and a man named Caldwell, from Catarina, Texas, into the ditch beside the road.

The girl bandit greeted her victims with a pleasant "hello folks, we won't disturb you long." A man, about 25, leaped from the bandit car to the running board of Hendricks' machine, and covered the occupants with a pistol.

While police and deputy sheriffs were scouring roads for them, the bandits appeared in Denver boulevard and held up M. Sotter.

This time the man who stepped from the car brandished two guns and kept them trained upon the victim while the girl, still laughing, ransacked his pockets to the tune of much chatter, Sotter said.

An hour later the trio held up a negro and negress as they drove on the Lavernia road two miles from the city limits.

Oil Magnate Named With Petroleum Company in Suit For $10,417,448

Edward L. Doheny Involved in Action Brought by Stockholders in Naval Oil Lease

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27. (UP)—Suit for $10,417,448.12 was filed today against Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, as an outgrowth of the famous elk Hills naval oil reserve lease.

The suit was filed by attorneys representing Frank H. Kunkel, a stockholder in the company "and all other stockholders."

The suit was brought to recover money lost by the company in the transaction, according to the attorneys.

Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick allowed the company actual moneys expended on the leases, but the action was reversed in both the federal circuit and supreme courts on appeals.

Alleged fraud and conspiracy on the part of Doheny and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, figured prominently in the case.

Doheny was named as owner of more than one-half the common stock of the company until some time in the year 1925; and as president until Dec. 7, 1923, when he became chairman of the board of directors. It was asserted that "at all times he dominated and controlled" the Pan-American.

FINAL BATTLE IN DEMO FEUD SET FOR SEPT. 4

Local Party Factions To Settle Differences At County Meet

SCURRY ISSUES CALL

New Committeemen Will Assume Their Duties Saturday

The final battle for control of the party's political machinery in Wichita county for the ensuing two year period is expected to be staged between regular Democrats and party bolters at a called meeting of the Democratic county executive committee at the courthouse on Sept. 4 at 2:30 p. m.

Formal call for the meeting was issued Monday by Edgar Scurry, chairman-elect of the committee. Judge Scurry and the new committeemen go into office Sept. 1, after the outgoing committee has canvassed and announced the official returns from the run-off primary of Saturday. The first meeting will not be held until Tuesday, however.

Since the nomination of Al Smith by the Democratic party became conclusive several months ago an organized group of professed Democrats, calling themselves Constitutional Democrats, have declared in favor of the election of Herbert Hoover, nominee of the Republican party, for president. Between this element of bolters and the stand-pat Democrats in Wichita county a feud took form in preconvention days.

Actions, predictions and aspirations of the constitutionals went unwatched by the regular Democrats until it was found that the bolters were well organized and in near control of the first county convention in May. At that time two slates of delegates to the state convention in Beaumont were selected. The delegation of regulars was recognized by the convention over the protests of the constitutional wing.

Second Primary

At the second county convention, held Aug. 4, it was found that the Constitutional or Herbert Hoover Democrats were in control. They were allowed a free hand in the naming of delegates to the state

Country Doctor Who Aided at 6744 Births To Be Guest of His 'Children'

BUNKER, Mo., Aug. 27. (UP)—The "children" of Dr. J. B. Gordon, known as "Doc" by everyone in this community, are coming back to Bunker Tuesday for a three-day homecoming in honor of the country doctor.

Doc's "children" are those he has attended at birth in the 56 years he has practiced here. Everyone of the 726 inhabitants of this village was busy today, making final preparations for the celebration that would honor the 77-year-old doctor who has ministered to their physical welfare.

All but Doc worked on the preparations. He was too busy—another baby, a girl, was born here this morning, and the latest arrival brought his list of persons attended at birth to 6,744.

Doc is one of the oldest fellows still plying their clinical thermometers back in the sticks—he's a practitioner of an obsolesent trade that is crying for recruits as the young doctors, fresh from the medical schools, cling to the cities.

About 400 of the 6,744 that he ushered into this world are expected to be at the opening events of the homecoming Tuesday and many more will join the homecomers before the celebration is over Thursday. Doc will be there to greet his "children," and at informal programs will give his reminiscences of early days.

Akron Councilman Defies Gangsters' Threat After Attempt to Burn Home

AKRON, Ohio, Aug. 27. (AP)—Councilman Kyle Ross, who aroused enmity of gangsters here by a personal investigation of vice conditions, stuck by his guns tonight despite two attempts to assassinate him and destroy his home.

Ross said he would continue even to the extent of tracking down and prosecuting those responsible for the attacks upon him.

Ross was awakened last night by the sound of creeping along his cellar stairs. He went to investigate. A bullet whizzed past him and lodged in the wall. Another shot was fired at the councilman, also missing. When Ross returned to the house he found the basement in flames. The walls had been drenched with gasoline.

A previous attempt on Ross' life was made Friday night when some one opened the pet cocks of a gas heater in the house and threw the master switch that cut off all electric current, apparently to cause an explosion. A neighbor smelled gas, with which the house had become filled.

Four men were taken before a prosecutor for questioning, but were released.

HUGE DEFICIT IN TREASURY

Slump Is First Since World War

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—A treasury deficit of $94,279,346 for this fiscal year is estimated in the annual report of Director Lord of the budget.

It is the first time since the war the government's estimates have definitely forecast a deficit in their annual reports and they base their contention on an increase in prospective government expenditures, due to increased activities of bureaus during the fiscal year 1929 and to a prospective decrease in revenue.

This switch in estimates has converted the estimated surplus of $252,540,283, figured upon when the 1929 budget was first fixed into the deficit. The deficit estimate was arrived at by calculations made in June.

In estimating the cost of operating the government for the year on Dec. 5, 1927, the bureau placed the total of probable expenditures at $3,556,957,031. The estimate made on June 30, however, set probable expenditures at $3,801,780,922 and the probable receipts at $3,707,501,576.

The June 30 estimate of probable revenues was $101,995,738 less than that made last December. Customs receipts in the last estimate were placed at $587,000,000, a decrease of $15,000,000 over the December estimate while the internal revenue receipts were set at $2,690,000,000, a decrease of $115,545,000. The collections from miscellaneous taxes in the last estimate were set at $530,501,576, an increase of $28,549,262 over the previous estimate.

Tourists in Texas Spend $10,000,000

DALLAS, Texas, Aug 27. (INS)—Eastern tourists who pass through Texas along the route of the Broadway of America highway, en route to the Pacific coast and intermediate points are a source of great revenue to Texas, it is pointed out by Henry W. Stanley of El Paso, general manager of the Broadway of America association.

Approximately $10,000,000 will be spent in Texas during 1928 and the early months of 1929, by these passing tourists, Stanley declared during a visit here in behalf of his organization.

Stanley stated that the Broadway of America association has planned a most ambitious advertising campaign and the directors of the organization hope to see the number of out of state automobiles passing through Texas doubled by next year.

BETTER COLOR IN HER FACE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Built Her Up

Espanola, Wash.—"My husband saw your advertisement for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and wanted me to try it as I was in a tired run-down condition. I am a farmer's wife and you can judge what work I do. Since taking the Vegetable Compound I feel more spry and vigorous and my husband says I have more color in my face and look better. I recommend it to any one who needs a good tonic."—Mrs. Rose Lowery, Espanola, Washington.

Man's Intellectual Activity Began With 'Yes' and 'No' Professor Says

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (INS)—In the distinction between yes and no, began the intellectual activity of mankind, according to Professor Tenny L. Davis, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Intellectual activity originated "in the perception of that which the logicians call the 'law of contradiction,' namely that a given proposition is true or it is not true, that a given object is or it not X," the professor declared in a remarkable analysis for the American Chemical society of a letter written by Roger Bacon, the thirteenth century wizard.

Bacon's letter described "the marvelous powder of art and nature and the nullity of magic." It contained, according to Professor Davis, the earliest known description of black powder in a European language and is said to have been written to some high dignitary of the church to defend its author against the charge that he was guilty of the practice of magic.

Bacon, who delved into the sciences, was in constant danger of execution for in that day of the Dark Ages, most unusual accomplishments were attributed to the occult and their perpetrators likely to get in trouble with the ignorant authorities.

HIGH ALTITUDE FALLS IN TEST

Army Air Corps Proves Falls Not Fatal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (AP)—The army air corps, after a number of experiments, declares it has disproved the theory long held by scientists and others that a person falling from a great altitude either would be rendered unconscious or would travel at such a terrific speed as to be killed before reaching earth.

A definite statement is made by the experimental department of the corps that a man falling from any altitude with a parachute pack attached never attains a velocity greater than 118 miles an hour and does not lose consciousness.

Experiments disclosed that a dummy the size and weight of a 180-pound man attains that velocity within 11 seconds and after falling 1,200 feet in quiet air. From then on down no increase in speed is attained.

July Peak Month In Kansas City District

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 27. (AP)—Record-breaking marketings of wheat in the southwest, with seasonally heavy output of manufactures and minerals and a larger distributive trade than customary for the "low" time of the year, made July the peak month for 1928 so far for business and banking in the tenth Federal Reserve bank, said the monthly report of the Kansas City Federal Reserve bank issued tonight.

The aggregate of transactions the month, said the report, exceeded that for July last year and for seven months of 1928 exceeded that for last year.

Camp Fire Girls To Hold Council

Camp Fire Girls of the Wichita Falls district will hold their summer council fire Tuesday evening at the Bungalow Tourist park at the end of the Burburnett bridge The council fire will be in charge of Mrs. R. E. Davis and Mrs. Maude Bartholomew and will be centered around the legends of the stars and the fire.

A group of girls will come from the Geraldine School district, near Holliday, to be initiated into the magic circle. Ranks will be awarded to girls who have passed their woodgather and firemaker's rank. There will be leather honors awarded for the above ranks to girls who have completed their requirements for the summer honor, to those who have completed as many as 15 hours of service to the community, some surprise awards that will be kept a dark secret until the Council Fire will also be made. It is not the custom to award honor beads at the district fires as they are awarded at each group ceremonial but due to the fact that so many of the school groups do not get to have regular ceremonials during the summer the executive has decided to award beads at the council fire Tuesday. Many new songs that have never been sung will be used.

After the council fire all Torchbearers and Woodgatherers will remain at the park overnight as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Boyle, who have charge of the Tourist park. Mr. and Mrs. Boyle are the parents of one of the girls.

All parents, executive board members, and friends are invited to attend the council fire as it will be a little different from any before held here. It will start promptly at 8 o'clock and all girls are to be at the park either in service uniform, white middy and dark skirt, or their ceremonial gowns, at 7:30.

Tariff Declared to Be Outstanding Issue

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (UP)—The tariff has become an outstanding issue in the campaign, the Republican national committee said in a statement today.

"Everywhere throughout the country," the committee said in a formal statement, "in agricultural as well as industrial circles, there is the keenest apprehension as to the consequences that would follow election of the Democratic candidates pledged to low tariff policy as distinguished from the Republican protective principle under which industry and workers both have profited."

PILOTS DARED TO ENTER RACE

Southern Cross Fliers Receive Challenge

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 27. (UP)—Pilots of the monoplane Southern Cross on its flight from California to Australia were challenged today to a race across the Tasman sea from here to New Zealand.

Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and Charles T. P. Ulm, the transpacific aviators, were invited to compete against two other pilots who would be in separate planes, by Lars Brundah, representative of the Dornier flying boats, which, it is rumored, will start a passenger service between here and New Zealand with 15-passenger planes in the near future.

The proposed opponents in the over water race, a distance of approximately 1,200 miles, were Lieutenant Parer, who recently flew here from England and Lieutenant Burlington, who would pilot a plane similar to the Spirit of St. Louis in which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh crossed the Atlantic.

It was considered likely sporting clubs would furnish a big prize in event the challenge is accepted.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—A fight over increased steel freight rates included in the Texas railroads' proposal to adopt for Texas intrastate traffic the recently prescribed southwest interstate rates, was continued today before the state railroad commission.

H. B. Cummins, of the Texas tariff bureau, Dallas, representing the railroads, introduced exhibits contrasting the rates proposed by the Texas Steel company of Fort Worth and the interstate rates sought by the railroads, showing the company is seeking a scale that would range only about 25 to 47 per cent of the interstate scale.

Attempt to Disarm Chinese Causes Fight

CHEFOO, China, Aug. 27. (AP)—Fighting broke out here today when authorities attempted to disarm 200 soldiers whose loyalty was under suspicion. There were more than 100 casualties, mostly among the dissident troops. The remainder of the band escaped to the countryside to swell the numbers of disbanded soldiers who have adopted banditry as a means of livelihood.

Fawn Is Most Recent Addition to Muny Zoo

A baby deer, which might correctly spelled dear, is now sojourning in the Wichita Falls municipal zoo in Scotland park, it was learned Monday.

The fawn was captured in south Texas and brought to Wichita Falls where it was given to the zoo by Henry M. Harris, 1825 Lucille street. A special permit had to be obtained from the state game warden to transport the animal here.

Its wobbly little legs carry the animal around the park enclosure in a manner that attracted the attention of many sightseers Monday. It belongs to the red deer family.

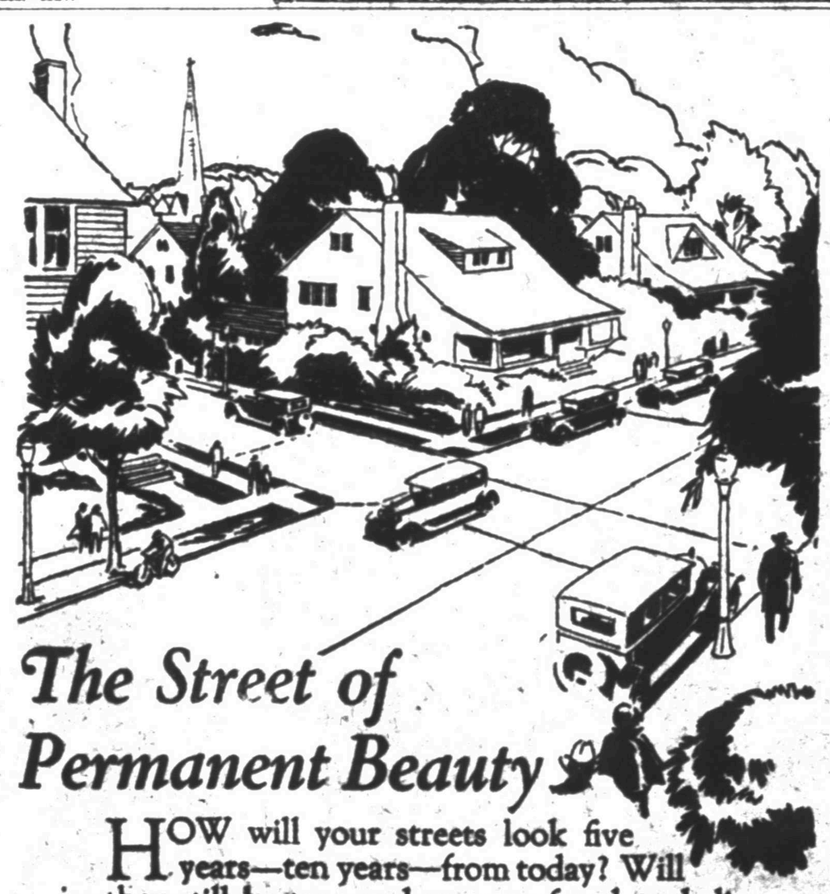

SUIT DISMISSED
CINCINNATI, Aug. 27. (AP)—An amended bill of complaint in the suit for an accounting of the estate of the late Edward W. Scripps, newspaper publisher, filed by Josephine S. Scripps of Miramar, Calif., was dismissed in federal court here today. The suit involved approximately $10,000,000 which it was contended was due Mrs. Scripps under an alleged agreement between her husband, the late James G. Scripps, and his father, Edward Scripps.

'TAINTED' SECTS ANGER POPE

Religious Orders Make Money, Report Reveals

BOLOGNA, Italy, Aug. 27. (UP)—According to the newspaper Resto del Carrino, the pope has ordered activities of certain religious orders outside the spiritual field investigated and has been displeased with the reports received.

The findings were submitted to the pope personally, according to the newspaper, after an examination involving orders conducting farms, running industrial plants, print shops, hotels and newspapers.

The crude forms of commercialism employed displeased the pope, the newspaper reported, and he viewed such activities as injuring the prestige of orders devoted solely to the spiritual welfare of the people.

As a result, it was reported, the pope cancelled a loan of 50,000,000 lire which had been approved by Cardinal Laurenti.

Pain in Right Side

May Mean Dangerous Congestion of Bile Ducts—How to Correct It

Pain, uneasiness and a sense of fullness on the right side, just underneath the lower ribs, is frequently a sign of trouble in the liver and bile ducts. Headaches, nausea, biliousness and constipation point to the same thing. If neglected, may mean gall stones.

Good health demands an active liver and a free flow of bile. You can safely rouse a sluggish liver and bring about a normal flow of bile by taking Bi-a-lin, a marvelous prescription of a noted doctor. Cleanses the liver and gall bladder of thick, sour bile and purifies the intestinal tract. Quickly ends constipation and insures regular bowel action. Contains no harmful drugs or narcotics. Easy and safe to take.

Get Bi-a-lin today and TRY it. Money back if you don't think it helps you. Ask for it at any good drug store.

Youth Needs Gaiety and Should Not Be Kept Too Much at Home, Says Dix

Why an Only Daughter Should Not Sacrifice Herself to Her Parents —A Man's Whole Duty to His Mother-in-Law—The Problem of a Jealous Wife.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 24, and an only child. My parents want me to stay at home with them all the time and bear them company. They will not let me go anywhere, or have any dates with young men. They open my letters and suppress them if they don't want me to have them. I have always obeyed them, but for the last year or two something within me has rebelled at the idea of sitting down with old people while life is slipping by. My home life is as dull as dishwater, as my parents don't even carry on a conversation with each other. We just sit around and say nothing.

Two of my best friends are leaving soon for business college. I have thought of going to work, but there is nothing available. What would you suggest?

—A LONELY GIRL.

Answer—My suggestion is that you go off with your friends, take a business course and get a job away from home. Probably your parents will object strenuously to that, but insist upon doing it until they give in, for it is your only salvation.

You are 24 now. Your youth is slipping by. In a very few more years your chances of marriage will all be gone, and you will be too old to learn a way of making a living for yourself. In many schools they will not take a pupil who is over 30.

It is a bad thing for the young to live too much with the old, for age is, in a sense, "catching." If you have to adapt your ways to old ways; if you have to hear old thoughts and old ideas expressed continually, and have old habits thrust upon you, you will become old before your time. You will harden into an old mold and really be an old maid while you are still a girl in years. What you need is youthful contact, the gayety and the light-heartedness of youth. You need to play around with boys and girls instead of spending your time sitting up with your parents.

Of course, it is nothing but selfishness and jealousy that makes your parents deprive you of all the natural pleasures of your time of life, and keep you a virtual prisoner at home. They are dull and bored, and you bring a certain freshness and vivacity into their lives. They get a kick out of your society, and they do not realize that you get none out of theirs; and that you are not interested in hearing their oft-told tales, or all the details of their symptoms.

As you are an only child, no doubt they have concentrated their affections on you. You are the whole meaning of life to them, and they cannot even bear to think how lonely and desolate their house would be if you were away even for an hour.

If the tragedy of parenthood that it loves in a way that children never love, and that fathers and mothers can never be to their children what their children are to them. Each generation pays its debt to the next, but that is life. They have had theirs. They have had freedom. They have had love and romance and marriage. They have felt a child's arms about their necks, and they should not stand in the way of your having the happiness they have known. They should not sacrifice you to themselves. Youth should be served.

And, of course, it is jealousy that makes them drive away all of your beauty. A mother once said to me: "Talk about jealousy! No girl who sees her rival take her sweetheart from her, no wife who sees a younger and prettier woman stealing her husband away from her, suffers one thousandth part of the agony that tears a mother's heart when she sees the child she has borne, whose every breath she has watched, and who is the whole world to her, love some man better than she does her."

Many mothers have this morbid jealousy. So have many fathers. That is why they drive eligible young men away from their daughters, and try to keep their girls shut up at home with only themselves for dreary company.

That is what your parents are doing, and you are right to rebel against it. It is cruel of them to sacrifice you to themselves.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—My mother-in-law is one of those domineering women who insist on running everything about them. I object to living in the same apartment with her, but I am glad to support her elsewhere. She lives in the same town and spends her days with my wife, only going to her own place at night, but because I do not want her to live with us, my wife considers me a brute and thinks that I treat her very cruelly. Do I?

Answer—Your wife is not only unreasonable but ungrateful. When you provide for her mother you have done your full duty to her, and your wife should show a better appreciation of your generosity. When a man marries he does not assume the obligation of supporting his in-laws, and I often think that there is no finer illustration of the inherent nobility of humanity than the fact that half the men you know are taking care of their wives' parents.

The old father or mother was poor and helpless and dependent, and the man shouldered the burden of his or her support, without even realizing that it was a fine and heroic thing to do. For very often the addition of another mouth to feed and another back to clothe, means more work and more self-sacrifice, and often it means having to put up with the whims and crotchets of the old.

It has always seemed to me that wives did not sufficiently appreciate the kindness and generosity of their husbands in supporting their parents, and that any woman whose husband had saved her old father or mother from going to the poor house could not do enough for him to show her gratitude.

Women howl to high heaven when they have to live with their mothers-in-law. Why can't they see that a man may find it just as unpleasant to live with his mother-in-law? Why can't they see that a man may object to having all of his little ways interfered with and find it just as unpleasant to live with a constant flow of advice as a woman does?

And why can't women understand that a man may like to have his home to himself, and want to live with his wife in that solitude of two that is the ideal of connubial bliss, without any third party sitting around?

Perhaps it is because women, in their hearts, believe that they have a right to monopolise the home and fill it with their own people if they want to, and that a mere husband has no rights at all except to pay the bills.

DOROTHY DIX.

OH, THESE WOMEN ! ! !

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A lady in New York who owns a beautiful country estate, has a house party every summer for two weeks. Her guests are children between the ages of 3 and 6, who belong to poor homes. Little folks who never would see the country but for this woman.

She hires a couple of nurses to look after them, and during the two weeks she devotes her time to the entertainment of her guests. There are parties for the birthdays of the little folks who celebrate during their stay at the country place. The guests usually number about a dozen.

Some of the children go there three years in succession and others go only once. They are chosen with the help of a social worker who knows the homes from which the children are invited, and knows which ones are most in need of the two weeks.

A woman in Omaha and one in Chicago send automobiles to the orphanages during the hottest summer weather to take the children out for early morning drives.

I know a lady who keeps four Catholic orphanages in the Middle West supplied with wholesome candy. She has done this for many years.

A lady who is so young you would think she would be spending her time dancing, dressing and flirting, has been buying and taking care of beautiful flowering plants which she bought for the large children's play room in an orphanage near Omaha.

The influence of those pretty flowers on the children is greater than most people would think. Then the young girls who are about to become mothers and who are cared for there until after their confinement, and whose babies are looked after too, find great comfort and beauty in that room full of blossoming plants.

The girl belongs to a wealthy Chicago family. She refuses to let the public know what she is doing.

There are any number of wealthy women in Evanston, Ill., who give their time and money to the cradle, where babies are taken in and no questions asked. If they are babies that's enough. No girl who comes there is made to tell her history or the name of the baby's father. The fact that she is in trouble and needs help is enough.

One woman keeps a layette shop in the basement of the cradle where the loveliest of baby things are for sale. Wealthy women adopting children buy, and the money helps to keep the institution going.

Girls' Class Holds Session Monday

Splendid reports from officers and committee chairmen of the First Methodist church Wesley Girls' Sunday school class, featured the business session of the monthly meeting held Monday morning at the home of Mrs. M. D. Rowe.

Of special interest was the welfare report given by the chairman, Mrs. J. B. McKinley, showing much work done by that department during the summer, and the treasurer's report showing progress made on the church building fund pledge made by the class.

During the social session, games were played and new members introduced. Mrs. Homer Bennett entertained with an Italian dialect reading and responded to an encore with original poems. The meeting was opened with a song led by Mrs. Rowe, with Mrs. J. E. O'Brien at the piano, and Mrs. Edgar Holiman gave the devotionals. Mrs. F. L. Mercer, president, presided during the business session.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Sam Acton and her section to Mesdames O. K. Connor, H. C. Hammond, A. B. Duncan, R. M. Morrow, C. K. Mosby, H. C. Cheshire, O'Neil Taylor, R. C. The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—New York abounds in queer specimens. In the small towns of the world humanity is reduced to a dead level of normality, but to New York, perhaps more than to any other city in the world, come flocking the unusual and strange ones who seem to be either more or less than merely human.

One such I shall remember all my life. He had advertised through a private agency for someone to help him edit some manuscripts in the evenings. At that time I was anxious to get a part time job, so I went to see him. The address was an old house on Forty-ninth street, just off Sixth avenue. The landlady answered the bell and directed me up to the second floor. I walked down a dark hallway and knocked dubiously at a door from beneath which a light was showing. At the cheery invitation which followed I made bold to open the door. The room was a tiny box of a place. A bed filled most of it. There was a chair, a table strewn with papers, and a gas range on a packing box near the door. The gas was burning and my man was busy making coffee. Under the range was a collection of cans, paper and scraps of food. The place was insufferably hot, and untidy.

The religious prophet, for so he turned out to be, was an elderly man with shrewd face and kindly eyes. After the ritual of coffee we got down to work. He had written a book, "The Guidare" he called it, which was to bear the message of a new religion. Together we read over the galley proofs and I suggested such changes as I thought best. Every night for two weeks I spent with the prophet and in that time I learned to like him and to respect his intelligence.

He was an old time mechanical engineer. He told me frankly that he had evolved this religion as the supreme expression of his ego and that he found in it the satisfaction he had never found in anything else. He had organized his religion on a truly epic scale and there was much that was good in it. The whole thing showed the mechanical ingenuity of a man with an engineer's training. He had the human race divided into positive, neutral and negative; and everything else, virtues, relationships, values, foods and sins were based on the same system. It was a religion of power that fused the physical and spiritual into one great impulse toward life. He had worked out an ingenious graph showing the progress of humanity from the beginning of existence. According to him we are still in the savage era basing our activities on carnivorous instincts and before humanity can progress further it will be necessary to break out of the savage trend in a new direction and learn at first like children or beings entering a new existence. His whole intricate theory was based on a statement which he called the "harmonic presumption." This he would not reveal to me. But he claimed that it was equal in scientific importance to Newton's laws of gravity. He promised to send me a copy of the book when it was printed but I have never heard of him since. I shall always, however, carry a picture of him bending over a gas range in a cluttered-up little box of a room and talking with keen smiling face about ideas and conceptions that were so amazing and startling as to seem like gigantic visions of insanity. Paranoia the psychologists would doubtless call it, but I respected his vision and was humbled before his enthusiasm. It has always seemed to me that the "prophet" had ideas far in advance of anything I have ever seen, visions so cast that his own mind was like a tiny confused stranger in the vistas that he traveled.

BEAUTY AND USEFULNESS

A lily is a beauteous thing,
Of which a thousand muses sing.
A lowly turnip can't compare
In looks, with lilies sweet and fair.
Yet man would not be called discreet,
If lilies he should try to eat.
While turnips boiled are excellent
At bringing man a "full content."

Oh, through my mind the harsh truth rings;
We cannot live on pretty things!
And be our stomachs lacking food,
A lily does not look so good.
Then turn your praise from lilies fair,
And let the turnip have its share.

The Kingdom Within Us

THE WORLD has been spinning rather rapidly the last few months. Herbert Hoover has predicted the approaching abolition of poverty. Edward A. Filene has announced that we need never again have a business slump. The Westinghouse people are preparing to broadcast movies by radio. Henry Ford feels that the universal six-hour working day is not far off. Forty million people have listened to a presidential campaign speech, a German company is about to start transatlantic airship service and the American people are buying new automobiles at the rate of 200,000 or more a month.

All in all, it becomes obvious that we are moving pretty fast, the times are times in which, as the psalmist said, the young men are dreaming dreams and the old men are seeing visions. We are finding new horizons opening before us, and it isn't to be wondered at if we sometimes feel that the greatest era in human history is about to dawn.

Yet it is quite possible that we are a bit too optimistic.

"The Kingdom of Heaven is within you" is a very old piece of advice. It means, obviously, that externals are unimportant; that the real starting place for all reform, all advances, all happiness, lies in our own hearts. We are, for all our crassness, stupidity and acquisitiveness, essentially spiritual beings, and we must seek a spiritual satisfaction.

Now it may be that the device of this machine age will bring us this internal release. Automobiles, labor-saving devices, short working days, radios, abundant money and all the rest may free us from the cares of this world and enable us to find, within ourselves, the pathway to the Kingdom that was envisioned so long ago in Judea. But, on the other hand, they may not. They may make us more earthbound than ever.

What earthly good is added leisure if we use it only to race about more heatedly than before? If radio movies serve only to bring the five-minute kisses of Greta Garbo and John Gilbert into every living room, they will be a doubtful boon. Happiness and peace do not depend on gasoline and electricity, and there were men who managed to lead rich lives before the invention of the steam engine.

There are boundless possibilities in this new age, to be sure. It is within our power to free ourselves as our forefathers never dreamed. But we must adopt a new set of values—or, rather, we must get back to one of the oldest sets of values on earth. We must realize that the world, with all that is in it, is only a stage setting for a great internal conflict. We must find our Kingdom within ourselves.

A Boy's Imagination

A CHESAPEAKE BAY farmer sent his boy to town with a basket of eggs the other day. The lad did not return that night; next day he was found, paddling about on a plank, away down the bay.

"A tall, dark man," he said, had seized him, robbed him of his eggs and put him adrift on the plank. The neighborhood was aroused. Police and deputy sheriffs got busy. For a day or so there was a hectic, if unsuccessful, manhunt.

Then some one thought to question the boy further. And at last he admitted that he himself had sold the eggs for a dollar, had spent the money on movies and ice cream, and then had fabricated the story about the robbery to avoid a spanking.

We don't know just what the moral of this little tale is, unless it is that a small boy with a good imagination can make a lot of trouble.

About Playing Cards

THE WORLD'S IDEAS about people who play cards have changed since 1858 when the card player was a pariah, according to Philip Curtiss, writing in Harper's Magazine.

"In 1858 if I had refused to play cards," he writes, "books would have been written about me and distributed to school libraries; leading bankers would have offered me junior clerkships, and my wife would have had me photographed with my hand on her shoulder.

"In 1928 if I do not play cards I am a prig, a highbrow, a grouch, affected or unsocial. In other words, the man who doesn't play cards today is one step lower than the man who doesn't drink."

The Cannibal Mosquitoes

MRS. CHARLES B. WILLIAMS, who lives in Flushing, L. I., is going to try to rid her neighborhood of mosquitoes by a new method. She is getting from a French scientist a breed of cannibal mosquitoes, which eat other mosquitoes instead of going around biting human beings.

There's an idea that we really like. To obliterate mosquitoes is a praiseworthy idea under any circumstances; but to do it by turning more mosquitoes loose on them, so that the little pests will have to endure the very thing which they have been inflicting on the rest of us—well, it's just simply dandy, that's all.

COTTON PICKING UNDER WAY

Tuesday Sherman received her first bale of the 1928 cotton crop. And shortly after the arrival of the first bale, the second bale was marketed. According to reports coming in from the rural districts, cotton picking will be general over the county within the next few days, and there will be employment for many pickers.

The cotton crop costs a great deal of money, but it is money that perhaps is more evenly distributed among the people than any other crop the Texas farmer makes, and from now on until Christmas this money will be circulated and everybody will get some of it.

GOOD WATER SUPPLY URGED

Lest we forget, we want to urge the citizenship of Quanah not to lose sight of their water problem. An adequate supply of water means a supply sufficient for every man, woman and child to take a bath at least once on every day in the year—no matter how dry the weather may be—and to enable those who care for vegetation about their homes to have at all times plenty of water on hand for sprinkling purposes. In addition to these necessities there should be enough water to supply our railroads and industries.

Now such supply may be secured but to get it an effort must be made. Have we got energy enough to make it?

TOONERVILLE FOLKS — Fontaine Fox

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

Four years before the story opens, Maxwell Martenet has disappeared, and because of his colorless existence, utterly different than that of his dead father, the scientist, Winthrop Gaston Martenet, every one believes he has died. Ernest Mallingham, calling on Maxwell's widow, Julia Martenet, accuses her of knowing something of her husband's death. He mentions Valhalla Notch, the retreat of Old Winthrop, where he carried on many of his strange experiments, and she promises to tell him all. Hannan Martenet, son of Maxwell Martenet, lately arriving in New York from the tropics, finds he is being trailed by a young woman. He visits Curry, his family lawyer, who gives him a letter from his grandfather, which he is to read and then destroy. The letter warns Hannan not to open "the iron door until the clock has stopped," and ends with a drawing of a man his grandfather calls dangerous. As Hannan finishes reading there is a knock and the original of the drawing stands before him. Peters, the stranger, gives Hannan a letter from his father. Just as Peters leaves Hannan notices it is dated two years after his father's supposed death. He runs after Peters. The chase leads to a house, where Hannan is overpowered by Peters' servant, who after a short absence from the room returns to give Peters Hannans' watch, collar buttons and such things as could not be destroyed by avid. At Valhalla Notch, John, the watchman, is startled by the sight of footprints on the floor and by a knock at the gate. Replying to the knock, John admits a young lady, who calls herself Miss Lane, and says she has lost her way. She notices the footprints and tells John Hannan Martenet has disappeared. As John and the girl stand in the hallway beside an iron door, above which a clock ticks on, the door opens, a face appears for a moment, and the door closes again. Miss Lane faints. Next day Curry arrives with Mrs. Martenet just as John is leaving to get a doctor for Miss Lane. Among Curry's party is Peters.

When the Clouds Broke

Contrary to John Brock's prediction, the rain ceased toward evening. Rivulets of gold slashed the black masses that hung over the mountain range. The peaks, capturing the colors of the setting sun and winding them about their brows as if they were radiant scarfs, formed a brilliant tiara about the little hollow that was Valhalla Notch.

"Look," said Mr. Curry, pointing with his wooden cigar as he stepped out of the house with Julia Martenet, "it's been snowing up there."

"Imagine it snowing in August!" Julia exclaimed, stepping gingerly over the wet ground out of regard for her dainty slippers. "Isn't it glorious!"

The spectacle held their eyes. Even Mr. Curry stood entranced, though his thoughts were fixed on a mysterious iron door. The mountain range was like a far-flung, flaming plume spread out over the snowy crags and peaks. Wisps of clouds, orange, heliotrope and old rose, wound like joyous banners around snowy pinnacles that flashed a myriad crystal-clear tints in the waning sunlight.

"Wonderful!" Julia flung out her lovely arms. "Those peaks seem so close I could almost reach out my hands and touch them. Distances are deceptive, though, aren't they?"

"Yes, like a good many other things."

He gave her a puzzled glance. Her enthusiasm seemed a little forced. Her eyes, of the palest blue he had ever seen, were shadowed. Her gestures were partly made up of nervous starts and fits. Mr. Curry had wondered about her for some time.

"That's Mount Adams." He pointed to a peak that reared its proud head high above the others. "The natives call it 'Old Blighty.' When the sun sinks a little lower you can see a strong resemblance to a man's face—that is, if you look hard and use a little imagination."

They walked about, for a wind was springing up, and it was too chilly to remain still. A perpendicular slab of rock a little distance from the house attracted Julia's attention.

"What's that?"

"Let's read the inscription," said Mr. Curry. "'Site of the original Billings cabin.' Did you ever hear the story, Mrs. Martenet?"

"No," a little listlessly, "I don't think I ever did."

"Well, it seems Old Blighty went on a rampage once. It happened about 60 years ago. The cabin that stood on this spot at that time was occupied by a trapper named Billings and his family. At the time there were two families living in the house, 10 or 12 persons in all. About 1 o'clock on a certain day, while the two families were eating their midday meal, a terrific roar was suddenly heard. The occupants sprang up from the table just in time to see an avalanche of rocks, stand, snow and ice tumbling down the side of Old Blighty, heading straight for the cabin."

Julia shivered. "How dreadful!"

"They had only a few moments to decide what to do," Mr. Curry went on, "and they decided to run for their lives. You can see what their chances were."

With his wooden cigar Mr. Curry indicated the hills rising steeply on all sides, forming a tiny hollow, barely half a mile in either direction, at the bottom.

"They were caught like mice in a trap. As you see, there are only two narrow openings. The men thought there was a chance of escape in the opposite direction from where the slide was coming. With the smaller children in their arms, the grown members of the two families started running for their lives. But Old Blighty fooled them. Only two escaped. The others——"

He paused as a shudder shook the slight figure at his side.

"Old Blighty was in an ironic mood that day," he went on after a moment. "Through a freak of nature or a whim of the elements, the avalanche parted just before it struck the cabin. The little structure was scarcely touched. If the two families had remained inside, it is probable all would have escaped. The cabin remained standing for years afterward."

Julia turned away from the slab and looked up at Old Blighty. She wound her flimsy wrap more tightly about her shoulders.

The clouds were melting together in oblong formations, forming black streamers as a background for the scarlet afterglow. Shadows for the creeping athwart the little hollow. The wind, moody and chill, blew with a stronger sweep. Gradually the clouds took on a heavy, scowling look.

"I can almost see the face now," said Julia, regarding the curious mold of the peak that towered high and threatening above the diminutive valley.

"You could see it even more clearly if Old Blighty would thaw the snow out of his whiskers," Mr. Curry suggested.

"But I can see his face quite plainly," Julia insisted. "The longer I look at him the more lifelike he becomes. He looks positively fierce, just as if he were planning something wicked."

Mr. Curry scanned the darkening range. "I believe we are going to have more rain. Yes, Old Blighty does look as if he were up to some sort of devilry. I believe dinner must be ready, Mrs. Martenet. Shall we go in?"

Julia cast another glance at the scowling visage of Old Blighty, which was throwing an ever lengthening shadow over the valley. "Yes," her voice shook a little—"let's go in."

After dinner, served faultlessly by Mrs. Martenet's servants, Mr. Curry yielded to a strong attraction and, leaving the other guests assembled around an immense log fire in the drawing room, turned toward the library. In the hall he almost ran into the lanky figure of the caretaker, John, with so many strange people about, looked somewhat helpless and out of place.

"How is Miss Lane?" asked Curry.

"Just about the same, Doc Speck tells me. Mrs. Martenet's maid is looking after her. The doc thinks he'd better stick around till morning."

"It may be a good idea. Has Miss Lane said anything?"

"Kate—that's the maid—tells me she's raving off and on."

"Raving, eh? About anything in particular?"

"Yes, sir. She talks a lot about the face and the iron door, but mostly about the face. Now and then she says something about a letter and a taxicab. I don't get that part a-tall."

"Nor I," said Mr. Curry thoughtfully. "Well, the sooner she comes out of it, the sooner we shall know what—what we shall know. Haven't seen any more footprints—eh, John?"

"No, sir—nor I don't expect to see any more—not that kind, anyhow."

"Why not, John?"

"Just because," said the caretaker mysteriously, then stood listening to the rising whine of the wind outside the house. "Guess we're in for some more rain. Never saw so much rain as there's been the last month, sir. I don't like the looks of it."

"It makes things rather dreary, doesn't it?"

"It isn't that, sir. Did you happen to take a look at Old Blighty about sundown?"

"Now, John," and Mr. Curry chuckled reassuringly. "Don't start imagining things. You will have me thinking you imagined the face you tell me you saw last night."

"Miss Lane saw it, too," declared John doggedly.

"So she did," admitted Mr. Curry with a frown.

He left the uneasy caretaker and walked into the library, where a heap of oak logs was crackling lustily in the fireplace. Seeing the room was unoccupied, he stepped into the short hall at one side and ginaced up at Old Winthrop's clock. It was ticking as unconcernedly as if nothing had ever disturbed its serene rhythm.

In a baffled way he gazed down the hall. The face? Shaking his head, he advanced and brought up against the iron door. It had opened last night, for the first time, so far as he knew, in seven years. It had opened from the inside. John had told him. Who had opened it and what—

A little shudder shook Mr. Curry as he stood contemplating the forbidden door. It was not locked, for it had been Old Winthrop's opinion that no lock ever made could keep out a person determined to get in. Instead there was a system of bolts which, though it could be mastered by any one with a little patience and ingenuity, was sufficient to stop casual prowlers. Moreover, the seal of Old Winthrop's injunction was on the door, and for the Martenets that was enough. It was enough for Mr. Curry, too, a trust sacred and inviolable. Old Winthrop had been his friend, and that meant even more than official obligations.

Yet he was worried. He did not like the things John had told him about—the mysterious lady visitor, the footprints on the floor, the opening of the iron door, the glimpse of a face. A chain of perplexing events seemed to be closing in around Old Winthrop's secret, jeopardizing the bulwarks behind which the dead man had sheltered. Mr. Curry felt it his plain duty to do something, yet what could he do?

He pondered the question as he stood in the short hall, illuminated only by a small electric light in the ceiling. Though otherwise a man of hard sense, the iron door was but just a door to him. Something of his dead friend's unfathomable personality seemed to adhere to it, giving it an aspect that was mystical and bewildering. Some one dwelt behind that formidable portal. He had long suspected it, and last night's happenings confirmed this belief. Who?

His wondering gaze was still fixed on the door. What would he discover if it should suddenly swing open? What would he see if, yielding to a temptation that was growing stronger every moment, he should dislodge the bolts and pull the door open?

He shook his head as if to dismiss a tantalizing thought. Old Winthrop had been his friend. Friendship, even more than the ethics of his official position, demanded that he keep hands off. It would be a sort of sacrilege to pry behind the barrier. Old Winthrop's secret must be kept inviolate—until the clock should cease running, at any rate. After that—

The thread of his thoughts snapped. From his clock like fell the wooden cigar. His brain whirled, then seemed to stand suddenly still. A great overwhelming chill shook his body. Out of eyes that grew wider and wider he stared in stupefaction at the iron door.

A tap sounded sharply. Then another—a third—a fourth—a fifth. A pause that was like a stretch of eternity, and then another series of taps this time coming closer together.

A long, choking groan broke from Mr. Curry's lips. Some one was hammering on the door—hammering from the inside!

"Lord!"

He staggered back, mopped his clammy forehead. It sounded so wildly uncanny, this steady tapping on a door that guarded a dead man's secret. He stared at it with an expression of superstitious dread while his knees knocked together. Who could it be? Why—?

A footfall sounded behind him, but he did not turn. Some one else had entered the little hall that led up to the iron door, but he was aware of nothing but the tapping. Footfalls coming from behind fell meaningly on his ears.

Then, of a sudden, the hall went dark. A pair of arms closed tightly, shockingly about him. An overwhelming force was bearing him down. He was grasping for breath. He was growing weaker. Now he was sinking. It was like being sucked into the depths of a mighty undertow. Darkness was all around, but the tapping clanged like thunder in his ears.

Hungarian Persecutions in Slav Reign of Terror Come to Light

Chambers of Torture Hold Victims Prisoners of Nationalists; Appeals to Government Futile

LONDON, Aug. 27. (US)—Details of terrorism and organized oppression aimed at Hungarian residents of Czecho-Slovakia are reaching London, and are causing a sensation in the press here.

It is stated that persecutions comparable only to the Spanish inquisition are being practiced daily in Czecho-Slovakia, and particularly in the city of Kasse. These acts of terrorism include the throwing into prison of peaceable Hungarians, where they are kept for months without trial, or without even the preferring of charges against them.

Appeal to Parliament

The situation came to a semi-climax a few days ago when M. Jules Kocnar, a representative of the Hungarian minority, placed the matter before the Czech parliament. He called the attention of the members of the parliament particularly to the fate of a compatriot named Josef Magyar.

According to Kocnor's statement, Magyar, an official of Kasse, was arrested by three Bohemian policemen in March, 1927. At the police station he was questioned by his captors, and when his answers did not prove satisfactory his shoes were taken off and the bare soles of his feet were beaten with rubber truncheons.

Kocnor affirmed before the parliament that his compatriot was afterwards tied to an upright pole which was then revolved at such a high speed that the blood flowed from Magyar's mouth and nostrils. In such condition, the nerve-wracked and broken Hungarian was then induced to sign a statement which had been prepared beforehand.

Press Restricted

The Hungarian parliamentarian demanded that the government issue a statement in the matter, but none was forthcoming. Later when the local Hungarian newspaper, the Magyar-Hirlap, printed a report of the parliamentary session, the edition was suppressed and the journal was required to publish later editions with a blank space where the parliamentary report had appeared.

A Hungarian, now residing in London, was interviewed by representatives of the Daily Mail, and made the following comment:

"There is a veritable reign of terror in the Kasse district. The Czechs are endeavoring to stir up trouble with the object of demonstrating to their own nationals and the world at large that there is a widespread conspiracy against them in these stolen provinces.

"They are not hesitating to employ agents-provocateurs, and the flimsiest of pretexts is enough to secure the arrest and imprisonment of a Hungarian, whether he or she is a native of the province or a visitor from Hungary. If it should be a visitor, and it should be established that he is a member of a Hungarian athletic club or even a village club, he is certain to be sentenced to a long term of imprisonment.

"In the Kasse police station, there is a chamber of horrors, and no one of Hungarian blood is safe from brutal treatment."

U. S. TO BUILD NEW EMBASSIES

New Buildings Planned In Several Capitals

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (US)—Far reaching steps on the part of the United States to secure adequate offices and housing facilities for diplomats abroad are revealed in the report of Representative Stephen G. Porter, to the foreign service buildings commission.

Representative Porter has just returned from France where he negotiated for the purchase of a site in Paris on the Place de la Concorde where the government will build a $2,500,000 building to house the ambassador and all American activities in the French capital.

This is in line, Porter stated, with the plan of the United States to house all government offices in the principal cities abroad in a central building in keeping with the dignity and prestige of the American government.

Congress has already appropriated $10,000,000 to be spent for this purpose during the next five years.

Until the present, many of our diplomatic representatives in foreign countries have been forced to live and work in rented buildings not at all a credit to their position or to the United States. Often they paid for housing out of their own salaries and in many places in the tropics were forced to live under unhealthy conditions.

Colonial Style

All of the buildings to be constructed are of the southern colonial type of architecture. This style was chosen for the reason that it is distinctly American. The exception, however, is the new embassy at Paris, which is to be constructed in the style of the famous French architect, Ange-Jacques Gabriel, who planned the other buildings on the square.

Representative Porter, reported the purchase of an embassy site at Tokio, and a new residence for the American minister at Tirana, Albania, where living conditions are extremely difficult.

The consul, and his staff at Calcutta will live in a new building overlooking one of the city's largest parks, while new sites have been purchased at Managua, Nicaragua, and Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

A fine new American building at Shanghai is to be constructed on the water front to replace the older one which has been condemned as unsafe. Plans are also under way for the erection of new buildings at Yokahama, Penang, Straits Settlement, Ottawa, Matanzas, Rio de Janeiro, and Nagasaki.

"Within a short time, every one of the 5,000 men who handle Uncle Sam's 600 business agencies abroad will be housed in a building, of which he may be proud," declared Porter.

Egyptian Girls Won't Give Up Their Stockings

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27. (US)—Egyptian women do a lot of things that the "modern woman" does not but they don't go barefooted.

That was the emphatic assertion here today of Mme. Mahmoud Sabry Pasha, wife of the special representative of the king of Egypt. Mme. Mahmoud Pasha, accompanied by her husband and children, are on a tour of the United States.

"Egyptian women smoke the water pipe and cigarets, they drive their own cars, some of them bob their hair—but they do not go without stockings—not yet!"

The visiting foreign matron, who is strikingly beautiful, was the first woman in Egypt to doff the veil, which had been worn for centuries by her sex. Her mother was the first to initiate her.

Government Provides Park for Nature Lovers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (UP)—Forest parks with "all modern improvements" may appeal to certain classes of tourists, but to keep for the true nature lovers a tract of untouched wilderness, the interior department has set aside a vast area in Mount Rainier national park in Washington, it announced today.

This region will only be reached on foot or horseback. No roads will be permitted. No hotels will be built. Only the camp made by the individual vacationist will be allowed.

Insanity Tests Sought For Prohibition Agents

DALLAS, Aug. 27. (AP)—The first game of the playoff between the Houston Buffaloes and Wichita Falls Spudders for the Texas league 1928 championship will be played at Wichita Falls, September 12, officials of the teams agreed in a conference with President J. Doak Roberts of the league here today.

The series will be for a maximum of five games, the first club winning three being declared the victor.

J. Alvin Gardner represented the Spudders and Fred Ankenman the Buffs in today's conference. Gardner called the turn of a coin and elected to start play at his home park.

Sunday Game Likely

The first two games will be played at Wichita Falls, September 12 and 13. Friday, September 14, will be an off day to insure a Sunday contest, barring a sweep for either club. The battle will be renewed in Houston, Saturday, September 15. If fourth and fifth games are necessary, they will be played at the Buffs' park Sunday and Monday.

In the event of a tie game or a rain out, the schedule will be set back and the game will be played the following day in the city where it was originally scheduled.

Houston won the first half of the split season. Through Monday's play, the Spudders had a seven-game lead for the second half, practically enough to cinch the race. Monday afternoon, Wichita Falls needed only to win nine of its 15 remaining games to win, even though the Buffs made a clean sweep the balance of the season.

Buffs Oppose Seven Games

A proposal to make the series four games out of seven was fought down by Ankenman. It was agreeable to Gardner, who also was willing to play one contest in Dallas.

A uniform scale of prices was adopted, to be effective in both cities. Box seats will sell for $1.35, reserved grand stand $1, bleachers 75 cents, children's grand stand 50 cents and children's bleachers 35 cents.

Doak to Name Umps

Umpires for the series will be appointed by President Roberts from the present league staff.

This will be first time since winners of the Texas league and Southern association began staging the Dixie series that it has been necessary to stage a playoff between first and second half winners to determine the Texas loop winner.

One playoff for the leadership of the second half was held in 1925 between the Cats and Steers when the two teams ended the season in a second half tie. Fort Worth won the playoff, making them champions for both halves and for the year.

Kala Pasha And Kopecky Ready

Rough and Ready Grapplers Headline Show Tonight

Kala Pasha vs. Joe Kopecky, wrestling, best two out of three falls, New York commission rules.

K. O. Shorty vs. Howard Scott, boxing exhibition, six rounds, no-decision.

Olin Hearn vs. Johnny Owens, boxing exhibition, four rounds, no-decision.

That's the card scheduled by Promotor Alex B. Ross for Tuesday evening's entertainment at Spudder park with the Kala Pasha-Kopecky wrestling match as the feature.

The scheduled meeting of Kala Pasha and Joe Kopecky recalls their last engagement in Wichita Falls two years ago when Kala Pasha came off best in a gruelling match. Kopecky is out for revenge and with both artists known to be none too gentle while working on the mat a torrid match is a certainty.

The boxing engagement scheduled between K. O. Shorty and Howard Scott will be another revenge affair. Two weeks ago Scott lost a sensational scrap to Shorty when the latter scored a knockdown after Scott had shaded him in the first five rounds. Scott hopes to finish off his diminutive opponent in this return scrap.

Olin Hearn, the "fighting printer," and Johnny Owens are no strangers to the local followers of fistiana. Owens has appeared more frequently on recent cards but boxing fans remember Hearn's prowess in other battles he has fought on athletic programs here.

Amateur Golf Pairings Made

WEST NEWTON, Mass., Aug. 27. (UP)—One hundred and fifty-six golfers will tee off at Brae Burn in the national amateur championship Sept. 10, according to an announcement by the United States Golf association, making public the pairings for the qualifying round.

Bobby Jones, defending champion, has been paired with David Ogilvie Jr., of Cleveland. Other prominent contenders will go out as follows:

Maurice McCarthy Jr., with Lee Chase of Buffalo; Francis Ouimet with Harold Weber, of Inverness; Max Marston with T. A. Torrance, Scottish amateur; Don Moe with Dr. William Tweddell, British Walker cup team captain; Harrison Johnston with W. K. Hope, Great Britain; Jesse Guilford with Charles H. Black Jr., Atlanta; Frank Dolp with Edward B. Murphy, Charles River; George Voight with Don Stein, Seattle; Chick Evans with John Dawson, Chicago; Jess Sweetser with William J. Platt, White Marsh Valley; Roland Mackenzie with Bradford F. Oxnard, Meiacomet; Watts Gunn with J. A. Sullivan, Canada; George von Elm with Fred Wright Jr., Albemarle.

In addition to the members of the British Walker cup team, six Canadians are entered in the American championship.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

TOP O' THE MORNIN'. It's great to win, and it's with justifiable pride that all Wichita Falls and the good fans in this surrounding community view our Spudders. It's not many ball clubs that accomplish such a feat as the Wichita Falls team achieved. Third in the first half of the race, the Spudders "came back," like the stout-hearted, starry athletes they are, and now are near the cinching of the second half title. Such a feat could not have been turned by other than a magnificent club, which not only showed great individual baseball, but worked in complete harmony and accord. It is indeed with equanimity that enthusiasts here of the irrational pastime await the playoff with the Buffs. For has not our team been tried and tested in the acid fire? And did it not meet that test?

I'll say it did.

While the Spudders near the clinching of second half honors, fandom here also is greatly interested in the major league races. The courageous battle of the Athletics to overhaul the Yankees has inspired the admiration of fans throughout the country. An Athletic pennant victory would be vastly popular and is not improbable. Indeed, with the Yankees tottering along and with some of their main reliances incapacitated, the fast-stepping Mackmen have an excellent chance to come through.

◆ ◆ ◆

TONY LAZZERI may not play again this year, the crack keystoner being out with an injured shoulder. Herb Pennock has been unable to work for a few days and the slender southpaw Waite Hoyt seem to be the only Yank hill dependables. Koenig's work at shortstop has been indifferent. Robertson has failed to play good ball at third base and Jumping Joe Dugan, despite his trick knee, seems to be vastly needed at the hot corner.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE NATIONAL league race contines to be an open affair. After dropping three straight to the Giants and temporarily relinquishing the lead, the Red Birds hopped back into first place with a renewal of hard hitting. The Giants faltered in play with the Reds and Pirates. Both those western teams and also the Cubs, still must be figured as flag contenders in a five-club race, though the Cards, Giants and Pirates seem to possess the greater potential strength.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

HOUSTON, Aug. 27.—Word has been received here from the St. Louis Cardinals that Grover Alexander, Jim Bottomley and Frank Frisch will play with the Buffs in the series with Wichita Falls for the Texas league championship. "Winning the Texas league title is more important than the Cards getting into the world series," Sam Breadon, St. Louis club head, said.

WICHITA FALLS, Aug. 27.—Desirous of trying out his young players for 1929, J. Alvin Gardner has announced that members of the Abilene West Texas league club will finish the season in the Texas league and will represent the Spudders in the playoff against Houston. Grover Alexander probably will oppose Chick Galeria in the first game of the Texas league playoff.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 27—Kid Puncho, a stranded ham-and-egg fighter from the United States, was given $1,000 by Gene Tunney to return home. Tunney greeted Puncho with great pleasure. "I always am delighted to see fighters I knew when I was a struggling young boxer myself," Tunney said. He dined with Kid Puncho at the exclusive Savoy hotel, breaking an appointment with George Bernard Shaw.

Matchmaker, Not Boxer, Usually At Fault for Unsatisfactory Go

Failure of Fighters of Same Style to Make Interesting Mill Should Not Result in Fine or Suspension

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyr't., 1928, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Jack McVey, the New York middleweight, and Jock Malone, the St. Paul veteran, were posturing about Chicago recently, when the referee decided they weren't trying to fight and abated the proceedings, calling it no contest.

Everyone thought the Illinois boxing commission would suspend the sour scientists, but the commission refused to do so, taking the stand that just because McVey and Malone couldn't make their respective fistic styles collaborate successfully in a battle, was no sign they were stalling.

I am astonished to find a boxing commission displaying so much common sense. I move you, Mr. Chairman, that the Illinois commissioners be awarded a leather plaque or something, to commemorate this amazing display of sagacity.

Anyone with a brain in their head knows that McVey and Malone must have been doing their very best, because there is no reason why they shouldn't. Malone is about washed up. McVey is comparatively a youngster, still trying to get somewhere. There probably wasn't eight dollars bet on the fight, so what motive could they have for stalling?

What I say is that 99 out of 100 of these unsatisfactory expositions of the sour science, the matchmaker should be suspended for making the matches in the first place. A matchmaker who doesn't know the boxers that, pitted against each other, are bound to produce punk fights, should not be making matches. He should be driving a truck.

Jack McVey against a certain type of boxer allays puts up a good exhibition. Against another type, he is a nuisance. The same thing is true of Jock Malone. The same thing is true of every sour scientist in the country. I know of no fighter who can always put up a good fight against any opponent they pick for him.

Boxers Are Not to Blame

I never blame the sour scientists for bad showings. I blame the matchmakers. I can't understand some of the matches offered the pugilistic proletariat between boxers who are almost certain to put up bad fights.

The boxers can't help it, because their boxing styles simply cannot be co-ordinated in lively battle. For every sour scientist in the United States, I can name a man who would get them both thrown out of the ring. And on the other hand, for every sour scientist in the country I can name a man who would delight the clients with him.

Mister Gene Tunney, who later became heavyweight champion of the world, and M. Jacques Renault, the noble Canuck, were once chucked out of a Philadelphia ring and their efforts officially labeled "no contest." It was a positively terrible exposition of the sour science. And yet they were both indubitably trying their best. Mister Tunney blamed Renault and Renault blamed Mister Tunney, but neither was to blame. It was their styles. They were too much alike.

I always thought that the worst match Mister Tunney could possibly have made for himself as champion would have been with Tommy Loughran, whose style is so like that of Mister Tunney that they both might have been chucked out of the ring, even while contesting the world heavyweight championship. It might have been that bad.

To make a decent showing, Mister Tunney had to have a man who carried the battle to him. Tommy Loughran is the same way. You put Loughran against a certain type of boxer, and all Loughran's extensive knowledge of the sour science can't make a fight of it. I doubt if Loughran ever stalled as much as a round in his life, but you couldn't make the observers of some of his bouts believe it. Against a fellow who comes at him, he is a lilly.

Grabbing Off the Dough

Since we have the sour science legalized in many spots, with boxing commissions, and all that sort of thing, I often hear of instances of gross injustices practiced by the officials against the boxers.

A boxing commissioner, or the representative of a boxing commission, may be an eminent barber, or chiropodist, with about as much knowledge of the sour science as a 5-year-old child, but that doesn't prevent him from sitting at a ringside and owlishly proclaiming a bout no contest, and ordering the boxers thrown from the ring, and their money held up.

It may be a bout between sour scientists of established reputation, who were never before accused of stalling, and who may be doing their level best, but are lily matched in point of style. Thta makes no difference to the barber or the chiropodist. The bout doesn't suit him, so out they go.

Also he sees deliberate fouls committed by sour scientists who may never have fouled or been fouled before, and for that he grabs their money. I believe it is called "fining" them. What it really is, my friends, is picking their pockets. It is larceny.

An Example of Injustice

I saw a bout one night in a large city not so far from New York that has always stuck in my memory because of the rank injustice committed by a boxing commission in connection with it.

The commission passed a beezark as an opponent for a pretty well known fighter, though the newsboys in the street could have told the commissioners that the beezark couldn't hold up his hands against that sort of competition.

The poor fellow was knocked down in the first round, and the referee counted him out. A boxing commissioner sat at the ringside, but made no effort to halt the count. Immediately afterwards, however, he grabbed the beezark's money on the ground that the man had taken a dive—which is to say, had gone down without being hurt.

I never could understand how the commissioner knew it. He doesn't know much of anything else. And he was one of those who passed the beezark, and the beezark was counted out. If the commissioner knew the beezark was diving, why didn't he halt the count from his ringside chair?

The thing didn't figure to be a contest from the start, to be sure, but when that boxing commission permitted the beezark to enter the ring, the commission forfeited any right to judge the merit of the bout, because it didn't have sense enough to judge the merit of the match.

If the commission didn't know in advance it was a bad match, then it should have nailed the matchmaker, fined him the total profit on the show, and chased him out of the state for imposing on it. It is inconceivable that any matchmaker who knows what time it is, doesn't know in a general way the ability of the different boxers, though you wouldn't think so from some of the matches.

Tuero Banned On Charge Of Indifferent Work

WACO, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—Houston hopped Tuero's slow balls here today and defeated Waco 14 to 4. An error paved the way for the first trio of Houston runs in the second inning and thereafter Tuero slowed up.

On a charge of indifferent work for the afternoon, President Turner suspended Tuero without pay for an indefinite period.

Paul Johson starred at bat with two home runs, a double and single. He drove in all of Waco's runs. The score:

SPUDDER FUND STILL GROWING

Hope to Reach Goal By Time Team Returns

Contributions to the Spudder Pennant fund are needed and needed badly, it was learned Monday.

With the boys playing big league baseball, winning a 13-inning game by a 2 to 1 score as they did Monday, leading the league by a margin which makes it impossible for them to lose out in the second half, and bringing honor and publicity to the city in large proportions, the biggest of the Spudder boosters have stepped right out and done their share. They also have expressed hopes that the rest of the boys, those who may not have so much money, but who have same good spirit, will chip in their bit to show appreciation.

The Spudders will soon be home, and everything is being done to put the fund at the $7,500 goal, in the shortest possible time. In case the Spudders fail to win the banner, the fund will be returned to the donors.

Subscriptions may be made to Horrace Robbins, chairman of the committee, to The Record News, The Times, the chamber of commerce, to any member of the committee, or to W. E. Huff, treasurer at 711 Scott avenue.

STEEN SHADES ESTRADA, 2-1

Turgeon, Fitzgerald And Jenkins Other Stars

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 27. George Stanton, first basemen of the Wichita Falls Spudders, will be out of the game for about a week as a result of an injury sustained in today's game. Stanton stretched a ligament in a knee in the 13th inning when he was sliding into third base.

The attending physician expressed the opinion that George will not be able to play for a week, but that the injury is not serious.

Kallina or Roetz will play first base until Stanton returns to the game.

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 27.—The battling Spudders stepped out today and displayed their very best baseball. Which was of necessity. For the fast-traveling Sports and Oscar Estrada fought the men of Galloway in an extra-inning contest that went 13 rounds before Wichita Falls gained the decision, 2 to 1. It was the opener of a three-day series here.

Stanton opened the thirteenth by walking. Lapan hit sharply to center, but Stanton was thrown out at third on a superb peg by Watwood to Holman. Cvengros ran for Lapan. Steengrafe sacrificed, Estrada to Whelan. Benton singled to left, scoring Cvengros.

The game was a corking chucking duel between Milt Steengrafe and Oscar Estrada, the southpaw. Honors were about even, Steengrafe yielding eight hits and Estrada giving up seven.

Spuds Field Errorlessly

Both clubs fielded fast, but the Spudders were superior in defensive play. They fielded errorlessly and Fitzgerald and Jenkins roamed the outfield in great exhibitions of sensational gardening. Fitzgerald had nine putouts and Jenkins six. The Spudder infield also fielded brilliantly to help Milt win.

Benton and Turgeon had almost identical days. Each was at bat six times and made two hits, and both accepted a putout and four assists. One of Turgeon's hits went for two bases. Benton also tallied a run in addition to driving Cvengros home in the thirteenth, so he helped account for both tallies. Turgeon drove in the first run.

Whelan and Woehrs, with two blows apiece, were the Sport leaders on the attack.

Galloways Score First

The Spudders were first to score, tallying in the opening inning. Benton led off with a single to left and scored on Turgeon's double against the left field wall.

Shreveport tied it in the fourth. Whelan doubled to center. Whelan went to third while Stanton and Steengrafe were retiring Watwood. Fitzgerald pulled down Woehr's drive after a hard run, Whelan scoring.

Customs Inspector Ruffles Singer

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (UP)—The European plumage of Marion Talley, Kansas City song bird, was was rudely ruffled today a customs inspector who went through her 12 pieces of luggage with the diligence of a small boy who had dropped his circus ticket in a haymow.

Apparently acting on a tip that the opera star was bringing an excess of articles from abroad, an inspector whom Miss Talley remembered only as No. 172 pried wooden boxes open and broke the lids on cardboard packages in his search.

Little attention was paid to a pile of declared purchases laid out by the singer's mother, Mrs. Helen Talley, and her sister, Florence, soon after the liner Belgenland docked. Eventually the inspector sighted paisley shawl with a declared value of $25.

Mrs. Talley said it had been purchased in London as a hand made article. The inspector had it appraised while an antagonistic atmosphere developed. It was appraised as a machine made shawl, value $25. The inspector assessed the singer's goods at $7.80 duty above the $300 allowance for the three.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Protein Combinations

Protein is not digested at all in the human mouth any more than with a dog or other carnivorous animal. It is advisable to masticate meat well because the taste is agreeable and the digestive juices of the stomach are thereby stimulated.

As protein food enters the stomach it begins to mix with the gastric juices, which is especially prepared by nature to take care of this class of food only. Starches cannot be digested in the stomach, and if used at the same meal, only interfere with the digestion of the meat, fish, or other protein. The starches, such as beans and bread, will absorb a good deal of the stomach juices, which only render them sour. Often not enough gastric juice is left to properly convert the meat into peptones, which is the only form through which it can be assimilated.

Some foods, such as navy beans, are such bad mixtures of starch and protein in themselves that excess fermentation always sets up in the stomach when they are eaten. Those with strong digestive power will be able to withstand the effects of such mixtures for a number of years, but there is bound to be a reaction in time, with finally serious results.

If the non-starchy vegetables are used with the meat, this does not interfere with its digestion. So a good plan is to use the cooked and raw greens with a meat meal, and to avoid all other foods such as bread, potatoes, rice, macaroni, spaghetti and all of the starchy foods made from flour products. The harm that often comes from eating meat is caused by indiscriminate combinations with other foods, such as the starches which I have just mentioned.

The average person will do well to use about one-quarter of a pound of meat each day, preferably at the noon or evening meal. The combinations used with the meat should be just as simple as possible, consisting principally of such greens as spinach, asparagus, string beans, lettuce, celery, etc., with the possible addition of a small amount of dried sugar fruit.

It is advisable to use only one protein at a meal. For instance, if meat is used, cheese should not be used at the same meal. The following specimen meals will show you what I mean by good protein combinations:

No. 1—Roast mutton, cooked spinach, raw celery.

No. 2—Salisbury steak, cooked asparagus, grated raw carrots.

No. 3—Broiled fish, combination salad of lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers.

No. 4—Dish of cottage cheese, baked egg plant, cooked parsnips, sliced cucumbers.

All vegetables need a certain amount of starch for their growth, so we are forced to use the starch contained in them or our diet would be very meager, consisting only of protein foods, such as meat, egg, fish, fowl, etc. Non-starchy vegetables contain only a small amount of protein, but are rich in all of the organic salts and vitamins, which are so necessary to the different cells of the body in all of the tissues, from the muscular to the bony ones.

If a second helping of any food is ever desired, it is a good plan to double up on the greens rather than use an added amount of the heavier foods. Their digestion is really quite simple and does not interfere with any other foods eaten.

Many people eat too many of the heartier foods, and would do well to take for luncheon a meal composed of a combination of these vegetables. There are many ways in which you can use the non-starchy vegetables, but I will give you a "blanket" rule, as follows:

"One or more non-starchy vegetables, either cooked or raw, may be used with either one starch or one protein, or with any one other article of food, such as milk, toast or fruit."

Questions and Answers

Question—Mrs. O. B. writes: "Kindly state the cause of redness of the nose on a woman of 35 who has never tasted liquors of any kind."

Answer—A red nose comes from some kind of intoxication, and as you say you do not use liquors, the redness of your nose must come from auto-intoxication or self-poisoning principally from intestinal toxins.

Question—T. J. D. asks: "Where can I buy brown rice? Also, how much acidolphilus milk should a person take where gastritis is present? Can one take tomatoes?"

Answer—Brown rice can be purchased in any health food store—just ask for unpolished rice. I usually recommend a sweet milk diet for gastritis, but different kinds of sour milk may sometimes be used with benefit. With either the sweet or sour milk the patient should take about three quarts daily, using a glassful every hour. Tomatoes are a healthful food, but must be used in careful combination with other foods.

Question—R. J. K. asks: "What would you recommend for a person on whom destructive thoughts have gotten such a hold that she broods continually? The family doctor says there is nothing organically wrong, but she is becoming a total wreck physically and mentally."

Answer—She should have a thorough examination made to find out the condition of her alimentary canal. It will no doubt be found that the abdominal organs are prolapsed low in the pelvis. Nothing will produce nervousness in a woman and lead to neurasthenia and insanity as quickly as congestion in the pelvic organs, and prolapsus is one of the commonest causes of such a condition.

New Invisible Ray Penetrates Through Fog

LONDON, Aug. 27. (US)—An invisible ray for penetrating fog will be part of the equipment of the two German liners recently launched and also of the new mammoth vessel under construction for the White Star line, according to information obtained here today.

This invisible ray is likely to play a most important part in securing greater safety at sea, for it would increase by 20 times the distance over which the human eye could see. It is equally efficient by day and night, and has the additional advantage of retaining its power in fog.

The device is a British invention, and works somewhat similarly to television. The image "picked out" by the ray would be recorded on the ship's bridge on a sort of mirror.

'BEER' STATES WORRY HOOVER

Hoover's Position on Dry Laws Is Clouded

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (UP)—Preparations for the big eastern presidential battle will be discussed between Herbert Hoover and his Republican advisors here this week. The fight for the eastern states from the Potomac north is regarded as the most vital phase of the campaign now.

Hoover returned from the West feeling he would have few serious worries there. One of his intimates today said only four states in that region were in doubt—Arizona, Montana, Missouri and Wisconsin. Some would add New Mexico and Nevada to the uncertain list.

The Republican board of strategy is worrying now about the eastern bear states. Some of Hoover's eastern advisors are trying to find a wet spot in his acceptance speech. Newspaper correspondents who accompanied Hoover and who have discussed prohibition with him a number of times came back differing as to whether he meant to wring the subject of prohibition completely dry in his speech or whether it was left damp.

Situation Gloomy

National Secretary Work is going to New York within a few days to work on the situation there. In spite of his telegram approving the selection of E. E. Mischold as New York state chairman things are not so satisfactory. The Republican organization is in the hands of those who were anti-Hoover in the pre-convention campaign. Mischold, having been closely linked with the power industry in the waterpower fights of Governor Smith became a target for Smith in New York state. Hoover's silence about the power industry's propaganda, and the failure to say whether he was for government ownership of the proposed Boulder dam power plant, give Smith talking points.

Hoover expects to deliver a Labor day address but whether it will be simply a radio talk from here or a set speech before a large audience in some eastern city seems undetermined.

Secret Bank Carriers Finish Moving Billions to New Quarters in Safety

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (UP)—The task of transferring more than $3,000,000,000 in cash and securities through the streets of New York was completed today by the Chase National bank in moving to its new 38 story building from its former home five blocks away.

So quietly and unobtrusively was the operation handled during the past three weeks that millions of people in the financial district were unaware that a vast fortune in gold, currency, stock and bond certificates was being carted through the streets.

The entire task of transportation took place in the daylight hours without the slightest mishap and without any interruption to traffic.

Eighteen bullet-proof vault cars completed the transfer. Each was manouvered with military precision from a central control. Altogether 30 truckloads of cash and securities were transported and housed in the new vaults.

Each car carried five guards and a driver, armed with machine guns capable of firing 23 45-caliber steel-nosed bullets a second. Each man also carried a supply of tear gas bombs.

Special policemen from two lower New York precincts were hidden at strategic points along the five-block route armed with sawed-off shotguns.

Two Lumber Concerns Form New Company

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 72. (AP)—Negotiations between the Finkbine-Guild Lumber company and the Great Southern Lumber company have resulted in the organization of a new company known as the Southern Redwood company, which has taken over all the property of the former concern, Col. W. H. Sullivan of Bogalusa, general manager of the Great Southern company, announced today.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE — (384) Our Presidents

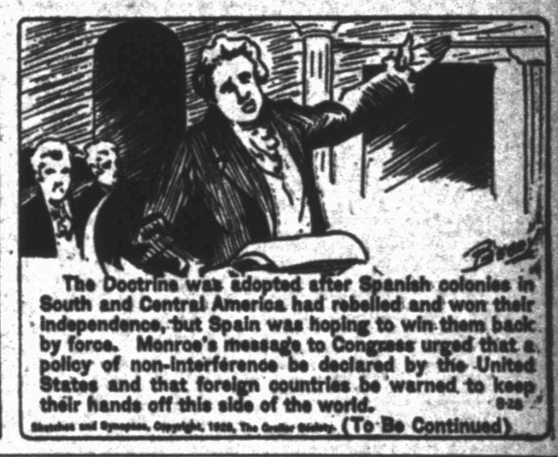

Two great events of Monroe's two terms were the promulgation of the Monroe Doctrine, which still remains a political issue today, and the building of the Erie Canal from the Hudson river at Albany to Lake Erie. The canal was begun in 1817 and finished in 1825. The canal boats were drawn by horses, but very heavy loads could be carried on the barges.

Soon after the canal was built the rate on freight by way of the canal was less than a cent a pound. Before the rate had been about $120 a ton.

The Monroe Doctrine forbade further colonization of the western hemisphere or interference in South and Central America by European powers.

The Doctrine was adopted after Spanish colonies in South and Central America had rebelled and won their independence, but Spain was hoping to win them back by force. Monroe's message to Congress urged that a policy of non-interference be declared by the United States and that foreign countries be warned to keep their hands off this side of the world.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By TONY LAZZERI

Anthony Michael Lazzeri is one of the most famous baseball players today. Tony was born in San Francisco twenty-four years ago. Six years ago he emerged from the Frisco for to join the Salt Lake City team. After being sold, farmed and recalled by Salt Lake, Peoria and Lincoln he was given a permanent berth with the New York Yankees.

TONY LAZZERI

Last year, on the 20th of May, Tony made one of the most spectacular plays in baseball history. He cracked a four-bagger with all the bases populated and made a trio of home runs. All in one contest.

"To appreciate my favorite story" this bir sock-and-run man told me, "you must picture the setting.

"It is far out on the ocean. The elements are in the throes of a terrific storm. The waves are mountainous. There is a sudden crash and the rolling steamer splits in half, then sinks slowly.

"The morning sun rises on a silent, placid sea. There is nothing on the mirror-like surface which tells of last night's tragedy with the exception of a large piece of broken beam. To the beam clinz two survivors.

"The first shades his eyes with the palm of his hand and scans the horizon. Suddenly he exclaims:

"'Ouy, Abie! A sail! A sail!'

"'Phooey,' replied Abie, 'what good vill it do us—we ain't got no samples!'

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (AP)—The cotton market was quiet today and fluctuations were irregular within a range of about 20 points. After selling off to 18.51 early December rallied to 18.73 and closed at 18.62, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 10 to 16 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 8 to 13 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables. Some buying was reported on over Sunday rain reports from the eastern belt and bullish private crop advices but the demand was limited and the failure of these features to create a more general interest, seemed to be a disappointment to holders of contracts. Realizing or liquidation increased soon after the opening and there appeared to be some selling for southern accounts, under which the decline extended to 18.67 for October and 18.45 for January or about 16 to 22 points net lower.

Offerings then tapered off and the market steadied up later on reports that the trade had been a moderate buyer on the early decline, and a renewal of covering or some local buying on unfavorable crop reports and the prospect for showers more or less generally over the South. The early losses were generally recovered with October selling up to 18.87 and January up to 18.66, but the buying failed to broaden and part of the improvement was lost in the late trading.

Private cables said the Liverpool market had been influenced by continental selling and hedging but that the demand for cotton cloth was well sustained with a fair business pending.

Exports today 6,848 bales, making 216,893 so far this season. Port receipts 16,286. U. S. port stocks 457,587.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27. (AP)—Dullness again characterized trading in the cotton market today and the trend of values was slightly downward although sentiment was not particularly pronounced on the bear side. There was very little disposition to enter upon new commitments in advance of the many private crop reports expected during the week and the Labor day holidays beginning Saturday.

December contracts, after declining 20 points to 18.10, rallied to 18.28, but eased off and closed at 18.17, or 13 points lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net losses of 12 to 19 points.

Liverpool cables were lower than due and the local market opened easier in sympathy. First trades showed losses of 12 to 16 points but early offerings were light, prices rallying 6 points from the lows immediately after the call. The dry weather map, however, induced a renewal of liquidation or selling and prices eased off again aided materially by the lack of sustaining support. October eventually traded at 18.04 and December 18.10, or 20 to 21 points under Saturday's close.

For the remainder of the morning the market fluctuated narrowly and within the early range until around mid-session prospects for showers in the eastern belt where moisture was considered favorable to weevil depredations, and reports of increasing damage by the pests in various sections of the prompted early sellers to rebuy and shorts to cover. Before the demand was supplied prices had rallied almost to the early highs. October reaching 18.21 and December 18.28 or 17 to 18 points above the lowest and to within 2 to 4 points of the previous close.

The bulge attracted realizing and in the final trading prices eased off 11 to 15 points. October closing at 18.06, or 19 points down from the day.

Calling of $40,000,000 Loan Sends Money Rate Soaring; Market Tight

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (US)—Stocks closed lower when the banks called $40,000,000 loans and money went to 8 per cent today. Calling of loans started again after the market had jumped further into new high record territory in the early hours and influenced increased profit-taking and some short selling. There was good support evidenced throughout, however, and while Montgomery Ward, Greene Cananea and other recent sensational leaders closed about 4 points lower, Steel common, Can, General Motors and other standard industrials were held close to Saturday's final price. Missouri Pacific received the best demand in a generally irregular rail market. Coppers, with the exception of Greene Cananea, remained extremely dull while the oils held to fractional price range.

Early Money Test

The money test started earlier in the week than expected and at the moment the money powers apparently have a slight edge on the bull leaders. The calling of loans was reputedly for out-of-town banks and corporations preparing for month-end disbursements. Further tightness is looked for tomorrow and then some easing for a day or two before actual dividend and interest checks go out. As these checks go through the banks Saturday and early next week there is likely to be further fluctuations in money rates. Thereafter the bull leaders hope for a week or so of let up in the money strain before the crucial period is met with on account of the huge money turnover scheduled for the middle of the month. Even an 8 per cent rate did not stop their bullish utterances, today, although it did influence less aggressiveness in their operations.

Auto Sales Good

Some support in General Motors and other automobile shares was influenced by favorable reports from the trade which were to the effect that sales of leading companies are holding up better than most officials expected. Buick, Cadillac, Ford, Graham-Paige, Chrysler and Dodge were the companies mentioned as enjoying larger production this month-end and it was stated that their output was entirely governed by actual sales throughout the country. Briggs body was prominent for awhile with renewed talk of merger but it was learned that the company most mentioned as seeking control is not interested in Briggs in any way and does not plan to be.

Schulte Stocks Strong

The Schulte stocks continued among those to enjoy good demand in the early strength. Park and Tilford's opening strength was effected in part by special advice that pointed out that the improvement in earnings of 150 per cent, as compared with a year ago, as reported last week, was due to the measures adopted by the Schulte management. Operations this month, it was stated, showed even higher rate of gain. Electric Auto Lite was another specialty to enjoy prominence for awhile with rumor of an increase in dividend being planned. McKeesport Tin also was held firm as estimate was made that earnings this year would run over $8 a share. The Missouri Pacific recapitalization on which most buying is based is expected toward the end of the year.

GRAIN REVIEW

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (US)—Strength at Winnipeg on indications of unsettled weather gave a firm tone to wheat futures in the local market today and prices were higher at the close. Trade was of moderate volume and the range was narrow.

Buying by leading local longs pushed corn prices higher with the September increasing its premium over the deferred futures. Oats and rye were uneven in a quiet trade.

At the close wheat prices were ⅜ to 1c higher, corn ⅜ to 2½c up, oats ¼c higher to ⅛c lower, and rye ⅛c lower to ⅜c higher.

The wheat market continued a trading affair. There was enough buying on foreign strength to register slight advances. From then on the offerings increased when prices moved up and whenever they dropped back there was enough short covering to keep the surplus out of the pit and hold the market to a narrow range.

Liverpool made up for some of its weakness Saturday by closing 1⅜ to 2c higher. There was a fair demand for the futures at Winnipeg, said to be based on the indications of unsettled weather with local frosts in the prairie provinces.

The cash wheat market was steady in prices with the trading basis unchanged and firm. Elevator interests and millers were responsible for a fair demand and country offerings continued moderate. Local shipping sales totaled 16,000 bushels and there were 10,000 bushels booked to arrive.

Late reports Saturday that the leading local longs were disposing of their stocks of corn at excellent premiums gave buoyancy to the September, which increased its premium over the deferred corn futures 2⅛c.

Trade was just moderate and the lightness of the offerings was responsible for the advance more than any great volume of buying. Commission house demand was only fair and selling was scattered all session.

Weather conditions over the belt were generally favorable.

The demand for spot corn continued active and there were local shipping sales of 71,000 bushels. The basis was unchanged to 1½c lower and prices ruled 1 to 1½c off.

Noted Architect Takes New Wife

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 27. (AP)—Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally known architect, has embarked upon new ventures in marriage and architecture. Simultaneously with the announcement of his marriage yesterday to Olga Ivanova, at the Rancho Santa Fe hotel, Wright declared it was his intention, at the age of 59 to resume his profession in an effort to add to the distinction he already has won in the field of architecture.

His friends believe his stormy marital troubles involving his former wife, Miriam Noel Wright, are at an end with his espousal to the mother of his 2-year-old daughter.

Statutory charges preferred against Wright by his first wife are set for hearing here on August 30. These charges allege that the year's limitation of the Wisconsin divorce law had not expired and the former Mrs. Wright charged the architect and Olga Lazovich with unlawful co-habitation. The divorce limitation expired yesterday, and Wright's marriage, it is expected, will result in the quashing of these charges.

Big Oil Operators of Southwest Are Taking Lead in Airplane Building

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 27. (INS)—Fully a score of oil operators throughout the oil fields of the Southwest are engaging in the manufacture of airplanes.

Perhaps it is because the industry suggests adventure and promises big profits that the operators have been attracted into some of the leading posts in the airplane manufacturing business. For the average oil man is progressive and as a sportsman, the love for adventure presented by one of the country's newest industries is undoubtedly attractive to them.

Nevertheless, regardless of the reasons why, the airplane manufacturing industry is a strong magnet for the oil producers. Most every oil operator and producer is interested in it, either directly as an executive in one of the companies or indirectly as it will form a new market for their products.

Leaders in Industry

One of the most prominent men in the industry is W. M. Moore, Wichita, Kan. He is president of the Swallow Airplane company, the oldest manufacturer of commercial planes in the United States. Moore is reputed to be one of the biggest owners of airplane securities in the United States. He is known to be a heavy holder of stock in the Travel Air company.

Then there is W. R. Ritchey, Moore's partner in the oil business in the firm of Ritchey & Moore. Although an associate of Moore's in the oil business office, he is his competitor in the airplane industry as president of the Swift Aircraft corporation.

Deering J. Marshall, who was a shoe clerk in 1916, traded a Ford car for an oil lease and made a million dollars, is vice president of the Red Bird Aircraft company. Marshall, however, like the others is still actively engaged in the oil business.

One of Kansas' best known oil producers, Harry H. Patton, president of the Cassoday Oil corporation is engaged in the manufacture of airplane motors. His factory is in Wichita where he manufactures the Quick, a nine-cylinder air-cooled radial motor.

G. A. Stearns of the Stearns-Streeter company, a concern that has done more to develop western Kansas oil resources than any other operator, is a director of the Travel Air Manufacturing company, one of the three largest manufacturers of commercial airplanes in the world.

W. G. Skelly of the Skelly Oil company, Tulsa, Okla., is building the Spartan. The Oklahoma Republican national committeeman is said to have a fine plant there.

The Phillips Petroleum company at Bartlesville, Okla., contributes regularly to competitions calculated to advance commercial aviation, and is reported to be considering engagement in the manufacture of aircraft.

Show Their Interest

This long list of prominent oil producers, each of them already millionaires from their oil developments stabilizes the belief that oil men are perhaps more vitally interested in the development of the commercial aviation than any other business group in the United States.

Only recently the Tide-Water Oil company donated all of the oil for Commander Richard Byrd's flight into the Antarctic waste lands. Perhaps this was for an advertising medium usage. Nevertheless, there are indications from it that oil companies are not ignoring this future market for their products.

Besides that more and more of their executives are entering this manufacturing field. It may be but a short time until consolidations in the industry can be effected. For example, take the interests of W. M. Moore in the Swallow Airplane company as its president, and those of his oil partner W. R. Ritchey as president of the Swift Aircraft company as a point where consolidation might begin.

Pecos County Claims World's Largest Well Producing 130,000 Barrels Daily

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Aug. 27.—Uncle Sam can look with proud eyes upon his nations greatest producer, Gulf Production company's No. 13 Yates, in Pecos county, Texas, which came in Monday flowing at the rate of 125,575.64 barrels daily on an official proration gauge. The well is 1,700 feet north and 9,490 feet east of the southwest corner of Runnels county school land A-2, 169. The big pay was topped at 1133 feet and drilled to 1,280 feet, total depth.

NATIONS SIGN PEACE TREATY

Fifteen Nations Sign Pact At Paris

to his place at the head of the horseshoe table, around which had assembled representatives of Germany the United States, Great Britain, and the British dominions not members of the League of Nations, Belgium, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, India, Italy, Japan, Poland and Czechoslovakia. The Rt. Hon. Lord Cushendun represented Great Britain and India, making 14 delegates present in the lavishly decorated cloakroom.

Amid silence broken only by the buzz and click of motion picture and movietone machines, the French foreign minister began to speak his speech of welcome, the only address of the program, was broadcast throughout Europe and to the American continent.

"I am fully conscious that silence best befits such a solemn occasion," said M. Briand. "I would prefer for each delegate simply to arise and affix his signature to the greatest collective deed born of peace, but I would fail France if I did not express this nation's pride in receiving the signers. I extend a cordial welcome.

"Undoubtedly, you all join me in grateful impulse to one of our great colleagues who has not hesitated to come himself and attach his name and the name of the great country he represents. Sitting in the very hall where the illustrious Woodrow Wilson had brought his high conscience to work for peace, Secretary Kellogg can look with just pride on the progress made since we began to examine a means of carrying out this diplomatic undertaking.

"It was his clear vision that showed him what can be expected of governments.

Praises Germany

"What more exalted lesson could be offered the civilized world than the sight of an assembly wherein Germany of her own free will steps in and takes a seat among the signers—her former adversaries.

"It is a striking opportunity for France to receive the German foreign minister with the same warm welcome as his colleagues. I am particularly glad to pay homage to the courage of Herr Stresemann, who, for three years has not hesitated to assume full responsibility and to cooperate in maintaining peace.

"Today's event marks a new date in the history of mankind. The most essential feature of this pact is that the honor of nations is behind unreserved renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy. War, once considered a divine right, becomes judicially deviod of its legitimacy, which was its most serious danger.

"Peace is proclaimed. To organize it is our work for tomorrow."

Secretary Kellogg and Herr Stresemann, German-foreign minister, warmly congratulated M. Briand upon his speech, which was received without applause.

First to Sign Pact

At exactly 3:45 p. m., M. Briand turned to Stresemann, the first signer and bowed. Visibly moved, the German minister proceeded to the central table and, with shaking hand, picked up the massive golden pen presented to Secretary Kellogg for the ceremony.

He signed his name to both copies of the treaty; the name of the German republic's representative leading the list of delegates assembled to banish military conflict.

For two minutes only the scratching of the pen broke the silence. Then Stresemann bowed and walked back to his place at the table amid applause.

Secretary Kellogg followed Stresemann to the center table. He was nervous, as he lifted the huge pen and dipped its point in an antiqued inkstand which was used by Fedrennes, foreign minister for the court of Louis XVI, when he wrote the document recognizing the republic of the 13 colonies.

The American secretary was applauded enthusiastically.

Other Nations Sign

Then, the other plenipotentiaries signed the two parchments. The dignified, white haired Paul Hymans for Belgium; the austere Cushendun for Great Britain and again for India; the dark, vigorous Mackenzie-King for Canada; the slender Cosgrave for Ireland; the calm, diplomatic Uchida for Japan; and so on until Edouard Benes, Czechoslovakian minister, placed his name at the end of the list.

At 3:55 p. m. the delegates rose, bowed to M. Poincare who sat nearby and passed from the salon.

OFFICIAL SUES FOR $125,000

Defeated Candidate Asks Huge Sum for Libel

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 27. (AP)—State Treasurer C. Eugene Stephens today filed a $125,000 libel suit against Secretary of State Charles U. Becker and others in connection with an open letter written by G. B. Harlan of Pilot Grove.

Harlan, William A. McAtee of Springfield, state oil inspector, and the Globe Democrat Publishing company of St. Louis also were named as defendants in the suit.

The suit asked for $25,000 actual and $100,000 punitive damages. Stephens alleged that as a result of the publication of the letter he was defeated for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. He was defeated overwhelmingly in the recent primary by Becker.

"I thank him for the compliment in filing the suit against me," was Secretary Becker's only comment.

It was pointed out that the suit cannot apply to the Globe Democrat for it must be filed in the city where the newspaper is published.

New Deep Sand Starts Real Boom In Kansas

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 27.—The importance of the new deep sand discovery at Valley Center, north of Wichita, in Sedgwick county of the Marland Production company, Gypsy Oil company and Bu-Vi-Bar Petroleum company in their No. 1 Wright, in the center of the east line of the northeast of the southeast of 12-26-1w, has given Kansas a real oil boom.

The Wright well continues to average around 1700 barrels a day from a sand at 3365 to 3367 feet, which is variously termed Siliceous lime, Wilcox sand and Simpson sand. So far the geologists have not agreed on it.

Later Pryor tendered his resignation, which was accepted by the commissioners.

The commissioners also contracted for 1,000 bushels of oats, to be delivered to the county during the year at a price of 57 cents. The contract went to the Farmers Elevator company of Iowa Park.

Bids were let by the commissioners on purchase of two trucks, construction and completion of a bridge and graveling of a county road. McFall Brothers were awarded contract for a one and one-quarter ton Graham Brothers truck on their bid of $1,360 with an allowance of $60 for the present truck. The new truck will be used in precinct No. 3.

County Auditor E. P. Walsh was ordered to advertise for bids on a four cylinder coupe for use by the county engineer and monthly reports were received from Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk, and Frank Morgan, constable.

Appointment of John W. Saye as deputy constable was approved by the commissioners upon application of Mr. Morgan.

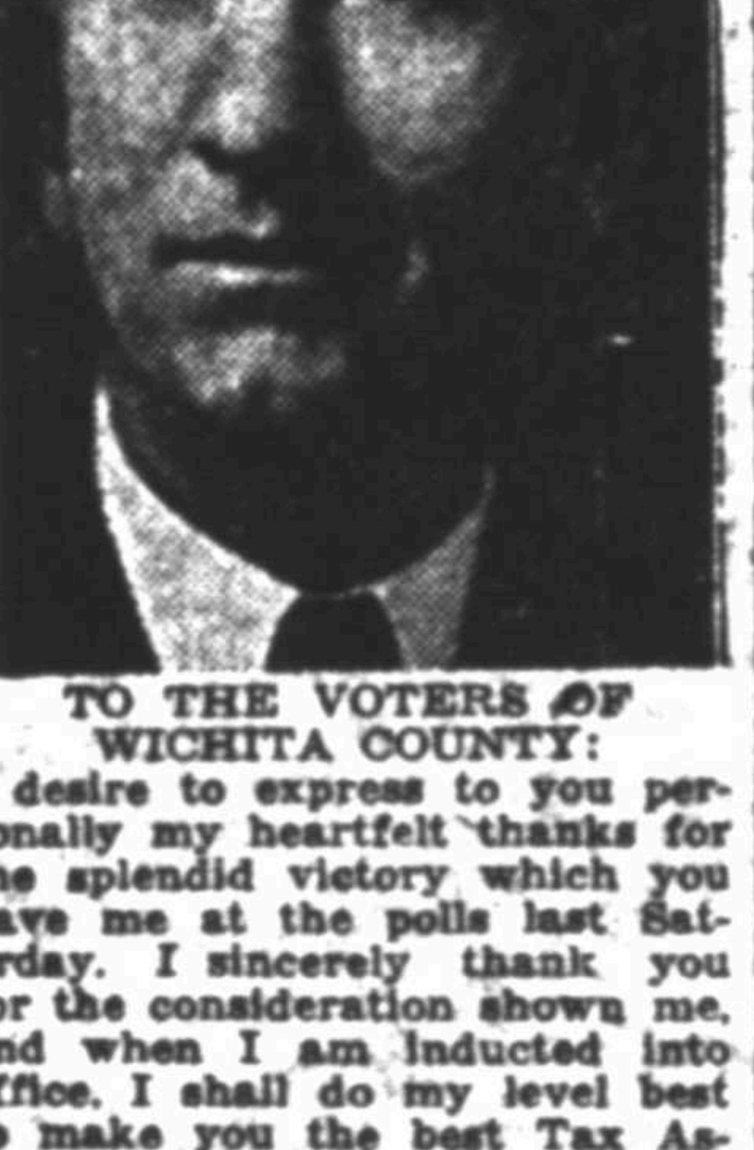

Before adjournament early Monday afternoon, the commissioners also authorized the use of 12 election boxes by the city during the bond issue Tuesday.

Monday, Sept. 3, being a holiday, the court voted to meet again Sept. 4, after the court had approved creation of six new voting boxes in Wichita county, all in Wichita Falls. The redistricting of precincts will become effective in 1929.

Whiskey Bottles and Wooden Indians Latest Craze of Antique Collectors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (UP)—Whiskey bottles and wooden cigar store Indians are now the much sought for prizes of antique collectors, Smithsonian institution officials revealed today.

The institution has started a collection of old whiskey bottles for display in the ceramics division.

Wooden Indians are more difficult to secure and the Smithsonian is looking for a good specimen to place with the spinning wheels, hand looms and other objects of early American life.

Regardless of politics and the prohibition problem, the institution believes whiskey bottles soon will become real antiques. Some already bring fancy prices—from $5 to $100 and up for rare specimens.

The oldest whiskey bottle in the Smithsonian collection is of the 1806 variety and the youngest scarcely has the glue dry on the label.

Junk yards and old attics are being searched for bottles that held the amber liquid of pre-war days. In some cases collectors are going to former saloon owners and finding out how they disposed of their old bottles when the Volstead law became effective.

Some of the bottles, which made their way into Canada and Mexico after the 18th amendment, are returning empty to bring high prices from enthusiastic collectors.

The wooden Indian presents a more difficult problem for the collector. Out of the thousands, which dotted every city, village and hamlet in the gay '90s, only a few are left today. The Smithsonian has none.

What became of the bold wooden warriors with upraised tomahawk and the slim Indian maidens with their offerings of wooden cigars, no one seems to know.

One Smithsonian official ventured the opinion that most of the wooden figures had been chopped up for kindling.

The wooden Indian is typically American. It first came into being to indicate tobacco shops around 1867. The first tobacco shop figure was that of a young colored boy. This soon changed to the figure of an Indian as the Indian and tobacco were closely related.

Twenty years ago, wooden Indians were still common but they started to pass from existence about the same time as the spotted coach dog, the watering trough and the iron pickaninny hitching post.

BLAST HURTS SAFE CRACKER

Thief's Bomb Explodes Causing Huge Fire

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 27. (UP)—A safe-cracker's charge exploded prematurely here tonight, hurled the cracksman through a wall, and started a fire which caused damage estimated at $100,000.

The cracksman, burned and mangled by the blast, was found in an alley, and amid tons of debris. He was taken to a hospital and questioned in an effort to determine how stock in the Traugott clothing store became saturated with gasoline.

A wall between the Traugott store, in which the blast occurred, and a sporting goods store was blown out by the blast and practically all of the sporting goods store stock was destroyed by fire. Plate glass from the two stores was blown across the street to the state house lawn.

After the fire was extinguished firemen began a search of the ruins on the theory that the safe-cracker might have been accompanied and his companions buried in the debris or hurled into the basement and drowned by the water poured onto the flames.

Water Permit Granted To Maverick County

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—Over protest of lower Rio Grande Valley water control and improvement interests, the state board of water engineers granted a permit to the Maverick County Water Improvement District No. 1 to divert 1,500 cubic feet a second from the Rio Grande to generate hydro-electric power on the gravity system down a huge 32 mile ditch, originally planned for only irrigation.

The power will be used in irrigation development of the winter garden section of the valley. A maximum of 10,000 horsepower can be realized.

FRITZ RITES TO BE WEDNESDAY

Burial in Custer City After Service Here

Funeral services for Russell E. Fritz, 26, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Rhome late Sunday night will be held at the residence of L. W. Fritz, 1403 Grant street, Wednesday afternoon. Time of the services had not been definitely set Monday. Following the services here the body will be taken to Custer City, Okla., former home of Mr. Fritz, for burial. Rev. S. A. Barnes pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church will officiate at the local services.

Mr. Fritz, an employe of the Fritz Motor company, came to Wichita Falls about two months ago from San Pedro, Calif.

The injuries which proved fatal to Mr. Fritz were received when the automobile in which he and a party of friends were returning to Wichita Falls from Dallas overturned.

Mrs. Marguerite Steger, 1514 Tilden street, suffered a fractured rib and minor injuries. Miss Marjorie Waite of San Pedro and J. G. Kilgore Jr. of Wichita Falls escaped with minor bruises. Mrs. Steger returned to Wichita Falls Monday afternoon and was taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. C. C. McDonald of 1213 Fillmore street.

Mr. Fritz's father, F. O. Fritz of San Pedro, is expected to reach Wichita Falls at 2 o'clock Thursday morning.

Survivors are his parents, four brothers, L. W. Fritz, D. L. Fritz and F. W. R. Fritz, all of Wichita Falls, and Clifford O. Fritz of San Pedro, and three sisters, Mrs. B. F. Flickenger of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, Mrs. Lena McGlynn of San Pedro and Mrs. F. I. Kelso of Wichita Falls.

convention to be held at Dallas next month.

Following the county convention, however, leaders of the regular faction predicted that the delegation selected by the convention would not be seated by the state executive committee and that a delegation of the stand-pat element would be recognized and seated.

The first move with the end in view of selecting a delegation from Wichita county which would favor support of the party nominee, it was predicted, would be in the county executive committee, where a number of precinct chairmen are said to have openly declared their support of Hoover. The regular Democrats, who elected Judge Scurry chairman of the committee, have indicated that an effort will be made to exclude from the committee those precinct chairmen known to favor Hoover.

An effort to accomplish this prior to the last county convention fell short when a number of the committeemen were absent. The regulars have declared that they will control the new committee, however.

Scurry's Call

Judge Scurry's call to the members of the committee for a meeting next week follows:

To the members of the Democratic executive committee, Wichita county, greeting:

You are hereby notified there will be a called meeting of the committee at the courthouse in Wichita Falls, Texas, on Sept. 4, at 2:30 p. m., for the purpose of perfecting an organization of the Democrats of Wichita county, having in view the success of all Democratic nominees of the party from the top to the bottom of the ticket. It is hoped that committeemen from each and every precinct will be present at this most important meeting as political business that will affect the party vitally will come up and be acted upon. Don't fail to be present.

Respectfully,
Edgar Scurry,
Chairman-elect of the county Democratic executive committee.

The news reel at a theater always has held more than usual interest for this column, and this week the interest is greater than ever.

Scenes from the Times Square subway disaster in New York are shown in the news reel at the Strand theater. This is just about as fast work in film news work as we have seen for a long time.

The first China Night at the Olympic was an unqualified success. The house was crowded and while a few folks took their dishes and didn't say "thank you," the vast majority expressed pleasure and appreciation that does the old heart good to hear.

The idea in China Night is that each woman entering the theater is given one piece of a 50-piece china set. Everyone received the same kind of a piece Monday night, a nine-inch dinner plate. Next time, it will be another piece of the set. This will continue until all 50 pieces of the set have been given away. Friday night is the next China Night at the Olympic.

John Gilbert is due in town Saturday at the Majestic theater in "Four Walls." We don't know much about four walls, never having served time (joke). We do know that John Gilbert has a great many admirers, and that they will welcome this chance to see him again.

The latest gossip is that Warner brothers are to buy First National. That's too bad, if true. And we will believe it only when we see it. Those Warner "boys" seem to love to get their pictures in the papers, and also their names. They don't seem to understand that what the public is interested in is the show and the actors. The public doesn't give a whoop who the producers are or for the fact that Warners are making Vitaphone pictures or that Fox is making movietones or Paramount is making pictures with sound. The bunk and bull about what some "boys," 40 to 60 years old are doing to make money for themselves and the number of millions "rumored" to be involved, don't amuse the public.

Man Being Held For Collecting On 'Stolen' Car

The smoothest purloiner of automobiles was in the city jail Monday after two weeks of investigation by police unfolded into a story of "eating a cake and having it, too."

Two weeks ago city police noticed an automobile, shorn of license plates, stored in a garage here. Suspicion brought investigation.

The man arrested Monday purchased the automobile in Kansas City several months ago, police said. The car was insured. The owner, who moved to Wichita Falls, reported that his car had been stolen. After a fruitless search the insurance firm paid off.

The man who first bought the car now faces charges of swindling after the automobile was found on his premises. Purchase of the automobile was traced through the factory branch in Kansas City with whom police are in touch.

Service Company Named New Radio Set Dealers

Appointment of the Texas Electric Service company as authorized dealer for the Stewart-Warner electric radio sets has been made by company officials. These sets are being displayed in the sales room of the Texas Electric Service company, and the public is invited to see them.

The new Stewart-Warner set is a compact receiver with the speaker either mounted on top of the set, separate, or installed in cabinets. Provision is made for a long or short aerial or for use of the electric light wires in the home as the aerial. Also, provision is made for an easily applied arrangement for playing phonograph records over the radio without additional wiring.

Should the city auditorium be given free of charge to national political speakers making addresses solely in favor of Herbert Hoover and Al Smith?

City Manager George D. Fairtrace will have this problem to consider when he returns to his desk from an engineers' meeting in Cleburne, as the city council at its Monday night meeting decided it was within his province to decide.

The proposition was presented by Mayor J. W. Akin at the request of citizens. Councilman A. W. King said he believed it was something within the realm of the city manager. One councilman suggested that political speakers should pay $1,000 for use of the auditorium.

An ordinance regulating the handling of carbide in the city was passed on second reading.

A petition for relief from water and for grading of an alley between Denver and Baylor avenues between Seventh and Eighth streets was presented to the council.

The meeting adjourned early and was one of the shortest in many months.
