Traffickers arrested in record-setting bust

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities who acknowledge they were outgunned in the past by drug traffickers have arrested more than 120 people and seized $1 billion in drugs in what they are calling the nation's largest marijuana-smuggling crackdown.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officials estimated Thursday the arrests and seizures effectively stopped the flow of about a third of the controlled substances used in the United States.

"This will put them out of operation temporarily. We hope ultimately it will mean an elimination of them," said Vernon D. Meyer, southeast regional director for the DEA.

Federal officials said they had rounded up 122 of an estimated 155 "high level managers" named in indictments stemming from the investigation dubbed "Operation Grouper." More suspects were being sought today.

Federal grand juries in Florida, Louisiana and Georgia returned indictments Thursday charging defendants with one or more counts of possession with intent to distribute a controlled substance, conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute a controlled substance and participating in a continuing criminal enterprise.

DEA Administrator Peter Bensinger said in Washington the 22-month probe resulted in the seizure of 1.2 million pounds of marijuana, 831 pounds of cocaine, 3 million doses of methamphetamine, 30 ocean-going ships used to smuggle drugs, two airplanes and $1 million in cash.

He placed the value of the drugs at more than $1 billion and said the crackdown dismantled 14 drug rings responsible for $22 billion in retail drug sales annually.

He said "Operation Grouper" was "the single largest enforcement activity ever domestically against the marijuana trade."

Three defendants, Jose Fernandez, 36, of Vero Beach, Fla.; Reuben Perez, 37, of Miami; and Paul Hinderling, were being held on $20 million bond or more, Bensinger said. Hinderling's address was not immediately known.

"Operation Grouper" began in Panama City, in the Florida Panhandle, and spread to other points, Meyer said.

Bensinger said nine DEA agents gained the confidence of drug smugglers by posing as drug off-loaders, providing smugglers with sophisticated electronics equipment wired to the Coast Guard and "safe" storage areas in the Bahamas and the United States.

Sloan appraisals to include commercial

City commissioners met in a brief emergency meeting at 5 p.m. Thursday in City Hall, voting to extend the current appraisal contract with Troy Sloan Tax Services to include commercial property appraisal and assigning ballot numbers to the individual wards in preparation for the coming April city elections.

Dwain Walker, city-school tax assessor-collector, updated city fathers on the current tax appraisal program and to cite his reasons for the extension of the Sloan appraisal contract during the 15-minute meeting.

Walker said originally the city-school appraisal staff had intended to appraise all city property. However, he said appraiser Charles Buzzard left the city-school tax office in January to work in the Wheeler County Appraisal District.

The tax assessor-collector said Sloan had informed him he had the staff and the time to do commercial as well as rural appraisals, leaving the two remaining city-school appraisers to complete the residential appraisals.

Walker said the city-school tax office would not be spending any more money than was originally allotted for the appraisals. It would be transferring what was budgeted for Buzzard's salary to Troy Sloan.

The tax assessor-collector said he estimated the fee for Sloan's services to be about $12,000.

Walker said the tax appraisals would not be completed by April 1 deadline, but should be finished within 30 days of that date.

"I don't believe it will affect the January 1982 appraisals," he said.

Commissioners showed some interest in reinstating an ad hoc committee originally formed to assist in the consolidation of the city and school tax offices during Thursday's meeting.

If reestablished, the committee — originally composed of Dr. Robert Lyle of the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees, City Commissioner O. M. Prigmore and local businessman Ed Myatt — would aid in keeping both governing bodies (the city commission and school board) informed on the status of the combined tax office.

City Secretary Pat Eads said in final action, commissioners assigned ballot numbers to each of the four wards within the city, placed the ballots with the packets to be bound and turned over to each ward's election officials.

MX hearings slated in Texas, N.M.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force will hold public hearings next month in seven cities on alternative proposals to locate the MX missile system in West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

The Texas-New Mexico hearings will follow a series to be held March 30 through April 9 in Nevada and Utah, the area identified by the Air Force as its preferred location for the massive mobile missile system.

The hearings were scheduled to collect public comment on the draft environmental impact statement the Air Force released in December.

The first is scheduled April 13 in Santa Fe, N.M., followed by hearings in Austin, Texas, April 14-15; Lubbock, Texas, April 16; Amarillo, Texas, April 20; Dalhart, Texas, April 21; Clovis, N.M., April 22; and Roswell, N.M., April 23.

The Air Force has scheduled afternoon and evening sessions in each city on the same day, except in Austin where an evening hearing is scheduled April 14 followed by an afternoon session the next day.

The exact time and locations for the hearings will be announced at a later date.

Six of the eight possible choices outlined in the draft environmental impact statement would locate the entire system of 200 missiles and 4,600 shelters in Utah and Nevada.

The seventh alternative would place the entire system in eastern New Mexico and West Texas, with support bases at Clovis and Dalhart. Under the eighth choice, half of the system would be in Utah-Nevada while the other half would be located in eastern New Mexico with its base at Clovis.

Texas congressmen and officials have predicted it will be highly unlikely for the missiles to be located in the state, in large part because of land costs.

Hijackers won't free hostages till prisoners arrive in Libya

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The leader of a trio of hijackers warned today that none of the more than 100 hostages aboard a Pakistani jetliner seized 12 days ago would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government began assembling the political prisoners it agreed to free Thursday after the heavily armed hijackers threatened to kill three Americans among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, has agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

Pakistani officials said the latest demands by the hijackers were "not a problem," but that the timing of the release was still unsettled.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan March 2 and flown to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage, a Pakistani diplomat, while it was in Kabul.

A Pakistani spokesman in Islamabad today denied his government had agreed to pay $50,000 to the hijackers and said, "We have received no demands for money."

Pakistan's ambassador to Syria, Maj. Gen. Saifur Khan, had said Thursday his government agreed to pay the ransom.

The hijackers apparently were annoyed by the presence of their relatives at the airport. Diplomatic sources said the father of one hijacker and the brother of another visited the control tower Thursday night.

"We are struggling for a cause and an ideology. Don't send our family again and again to blackmail us," the chief hijacker said in the radio transmission monitored by reporters.

The hijackers belong to a group calling itself "Al Zulfikar," apparently named after former Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto who was hanged in April 1979 after being overthrown by President Mohammed Zia-ul-Haq.

The hijacker also insisted that relatives of the three hijackers be allowed to return to Pakistan without interference. He demanded that the government pay their air fares.

A possible sticking point was identification of six political activists on the hijackers' list of 55 to be freed. Pakistani authorities said they were not held in Pakistan jails.

Western diplomatic sources said there were "strong indications" the hijackers wanted the hostages flown to Libya along with themselves and the freed prisoners from Pakistan. But Syrian and Pakistani officials opposed that because the crew of the plane was exhausted from the ordeal, the sources said.

Zia had given Syrian President Hafez Assad carte blanche to free the hostages. But veteran observers doubted Assad would use force because the hijackers are disciples of Bhutto, who sent arms and men to aid Syria in the 1973 war against Israel. Zia led the military coup that overthrew Bhutto in 1976, and he was executed two years later.

"All the passengers are in good spirits despite their long ordeal," said Khan. But Syrian officials reported earlier that they were in poor shape physically and psychologically.

"When they eventually come off that plane, they will certainly be a miserable and smelly lot," said an official of the Pakistani airline.

An American diplomatic observer at the airport said one of the three Americans had his guitar along and was playing it to try to keep up everyone's spirits.

The three Americans are Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, a lawyer who was on a foreign vacation with his wife; businessman Craig Richard Clymore of Wake Forest, Calif.; and Lawrence C. Mangum of New York City, who reportedly lives in Spain. Mrs. Hubbell was released in Kabul last weekend. Two Pakistanis living in the United also are among the hostages.

The hijackers in threatening to kill the Americans accused them of being CIA agents, the charge European and Third World terrorists usually make against Americans that they kidnap or kill.

"We have no idea how they could have come up with the deduction that they're CIA agents," said a U.S. Embassy official in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital.

Hostages cheer as hijack terms accepted

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The hostages cheered and in the jetliner that had been their crowded home for 11 days the lights came on for the first time after Pakistan's ruling generals capitulated to the three hijackers.

"They certainly have a lot to cheer about, and not just because the threat of violent death doesn't hang over them any longer," said an official of the Pakistani airline.

"When they come off that plane, they'll certainly be a miserable smelly lot. They have been wearing the same clothes for 11 days and we doubt they have been able to wash properly."

He said his company has been supplying the plane with 40 packets of paper tissues every day but did not send any shaving cream, cologne or other toiletries.

More than 100 passengers and crew members have been held prisoner aboard the Pakistan International Airlines plane since three young foes of Pakistan's military government seized control of the airliner on March 1. On Thursday, after the hijackers threatened to kill the three American men among them, the Pakistani government agreed to exchange 55 political prisoners for the hostages and let the hijackers go to Libya.

Despite the obvious hardships of their protracted confinement, the passengers and crew "maintained remarkably high spirits," said Maj. Gen. Saifur Khan, the Pakistani ambassador to Syria, who negotiated with the hijackers through Syrian intermediaries.

One of the Americans aboard had his guitar along and helped keep up morale by playing and singing, a U.S. Embassy official reported.

He said the amateur musician, who was not identified, kept strumming and singing Thursday despite the approach of the execution deadline their captors set for him and the other two Americans. But Pakistani and Syrian officials said they did not know whether the hijackers had told the Americans they were singled out for execution.

The American hostages are Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, a lawyer; businessman Craig Richard Clymore of Wake Forest, Calif.; and Lawrence Clifton Mangum of New York City, who reportedly lives in Spain.

"As far as food goes, we provided them with everything they asked for, even though most the Pakistanis aboard had a distinct preference for chicken curry meal after meal," the airline official said.

He said confinement must have whetted the appetites of some since every day they asked for and got 10 to 20 more boxed meals than there were people aboard.

As the hijack drama unfolded on an auxiliary runway and in the control tower, the airport's normal business continued without interruption. The crowds of travelers arriving and departing were increased by curious Damascenes.

"We are happy everything has been agreed without anybody getting hurt here in Syria," said a merchant who brought his wife and two teen-age daughters out to see what was happening.

Draft for six months' service suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstituting a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

The board, which includes reserve and active-duty senior officers as well as civilian officials, functions by law as an adviser to the secretary of defense.

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstituted.

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and have voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

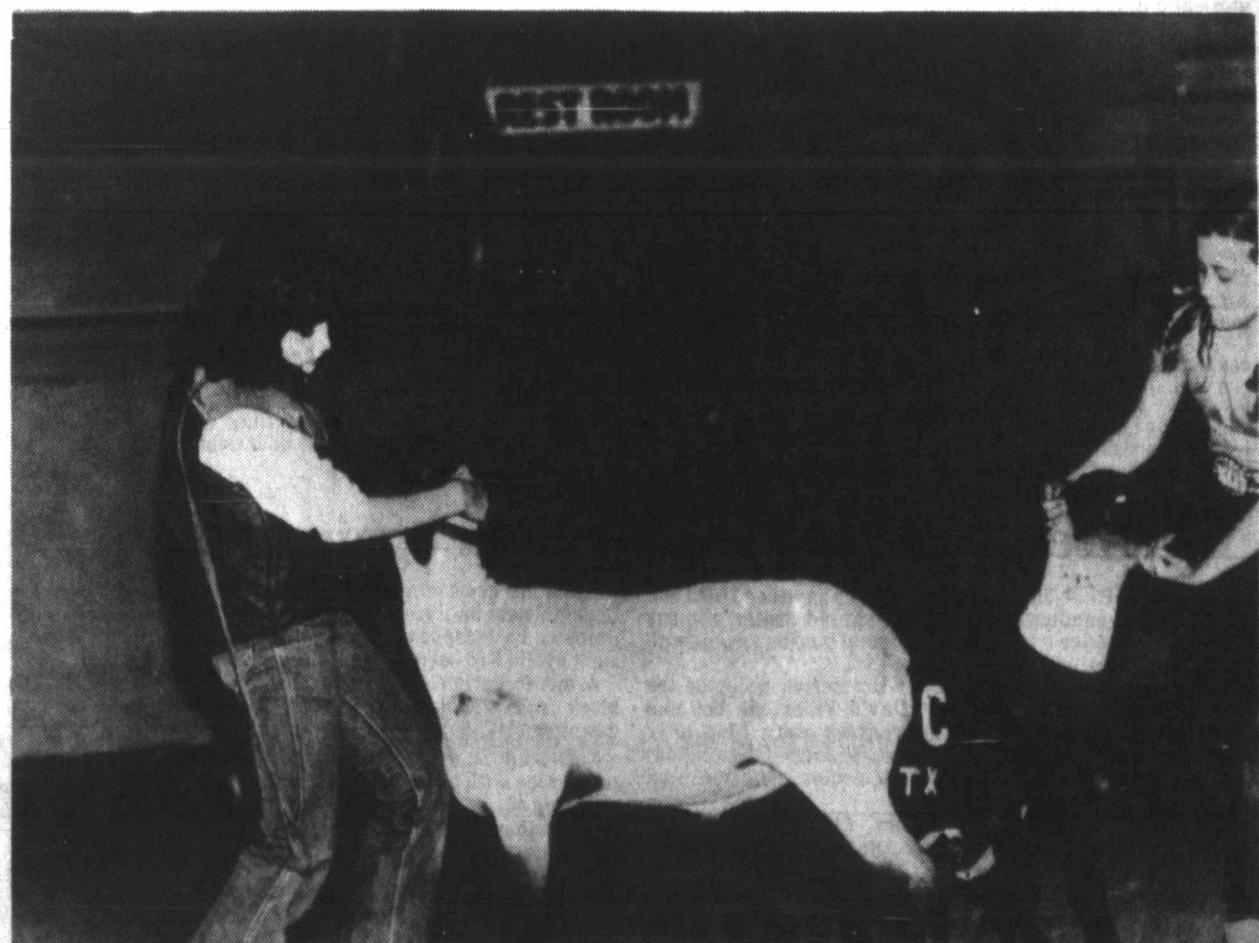

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer" to many of the problems.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress" — would be required to serve six months on active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

At the end of the orientation phase, the youth would be offered a choice among three options: remain on active duty in the service of his choice if openings existed, join a reserve unit or go into the Individual Ready Reserve of the Army or Marine Corps, which have had the most trouble filling this mobilization manpower pool.

Million could lose jobless aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says President Reagan's proposed budget cuts and other changes in unemployment compensation could cost more than 1 million people part or all of benefits they otherwise would get.

Meanwhile, representatives of organized labor told a House public assistance subcommittee Thursday that the Reagan administration's approach is a negative response to joblessness.

"Benefit increases are needed, not decreases," said Bert Seidman of the AFL-CIO.

Lawrence E. Weatherford, deputy assistant secretary of labor, told the subcommittee that the most important of the changes, including a reduction in extended unemployment benefits, would deny benefits to 35,000 servicemen who refused to reenlist and 570,000 others.

Aides said later that an additional 485,000 could lose some or all benefits because of other provisions in Reagan's plan.

Also in testimony before the House Ways and Means subcommittee, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan outlined proposed budget cuts that would save $1.5 billion in extended unemployment assistance in fiscal 1982.

Currently, people who exhaust their regular 26-week period of government unemployment compensation insurance may get an additional 13 weeks of unemployment checks if the percentage of people on those rolls reaches 4.5 percent of the national workforce. Reagan wants to eliminate the 4.5 percent trigger.

He has also proposed a requirement that workers take almost any available job or lose benefits after 13 weeks. Under the present system, eligibility is not affected if recipients turn down jobs paying less than their previous job.

"The proposals of the administration represent a negative response to the second highest unemployment levels since the Depression," Seidman said.

"The administration's proposals for unemployment insurance cutbacks must be evaluated on the basis of their impact on the nation's workforce, not simply by the cost savings that may be achieved," he added.

Ken Morris of the United Auto Workers union said the administration's proposals "are ill-advised and not consistent with the needs of our fellow citizens who must depend upon these programs."

Man serves short prison term, now charged with violent deaths

DALLAS (AP) — In 1965, Isaac Blassingale Jr. received the longest sentence in Dallas history — 199 years — for robbing and assaulting a woman cashier in a liquor store.

The jury deliberated 20 minutes, and one juror recalls the panel wanted to send a message to prison and parole officers that they "did not want him on the streets of Dallas."

But Blassingale was paroled in 1976, after serving little more than one-twentieth of that sentence. Since then, he has been arrested, charged and indicted for four violent crimes and convicted of driving while intoxicated.

Officials with the Board of Pardons and Parole say when Blassingale was convicted in 1965, parole laws required the board to review all inmates for parole when they served either one-third of their sentences or 15 years.

The law since has been changed to make inmates eligible for parole when they have served one-third of their sentences or 20 years.

Blassingale was reviewed before the 15-year mark, a parole board spokeswoman said, because he was a model prisoner and had earned trusty status. Trustees earn double credit for time served.

His parole was denied in October 1975, but a year later, it was granted.

The board would not be affected by the dramatic sentence, she said, because "we don't know what the jurors are thinking when they set a sentence. We don't even know whether it was set by a judge or jury."

She noted that the district attorney's office that prosecuted Blassingale did not file an objection to the parole.

Despite the legality of Blassingale's liberation, jurors who sent him to prison expressed dismay that he had been freed.

"I didn't feel he would be paroled in my lifetime, and right now I'm 61," said Mrs. J.C. Akin. "I thought they would keep him for his life sentence, since we gave him 199 years. We thought at the time it would be a message to the parole board."

"They'll put him away again, but I guess they'll let him out again. I think he needs to be put away permanently."

Another juror, who asked that his name not be used because he feared retribution, expressed a similar opinion.

"I was pretty bitter at him at the time," he said. "If he's in trouble again, he should still be in there. That's the way I look at it."

Mrs. Akin recalled she favored the extraordinary sentence "because of the brutality he displayed" during the robbery.

Christina Elaine Swindell, the liquor store cashier, testified at the trial that Blassingale and an accomplice entered the store and Blassingale grabbed her by the throat, hurled her to the floor and dragged her to a back storeroom. She said Blassingale held her down, one knee on her throat and the other in her mouth, and threatened to kick her teeth in.

The pair allegedly took more than $200 in the robbery. The accomplice, Henry William Walker Jr., pleaded guilty and received a 15-year sentence.

The assistant district attorney who prosecuted Blassingale, Charlie Caperton, now is a defense attorney and he recalled thinking the defendant "was a danger to society and the only way on earth to protect society was to keep him away forever."

The latest incident, for which the 42-year-old man was indicted this week, was the Jan. 31 rape of a 14-year-old girl.

The teen-ager said she was roller skating near her home when a man she identified as Blassingale forced her at gunpoint to get in his car. She said he took her to his home and raped her.

The rape was the second of which Blassingale has been accused. In November 1977, he was charged with attempted aggravated rape and aggravated assault when a wallet containing his identification was found in the victim's apartment. Those charges were dropped after the victim failed to pick him out of a lineup.

Last July, Blassingale was charged with attempted murder but the charge was dropped when the victim signed an affidavit declining to prosecute the case.

A November 1978 burglary of a habitation charge was dismissed after the victim decided not to prosecute.

In December 1979, Blassingale was convicted for driving while intoxicated, a violation of his parole terms. But Ronnie Anderson, his parole officer, said he did not feel the conviction "warranted a parole violation."

The 199-year sentence was the third prison sentence Blassingale received. In 1960, he was given six years for robbery and in 1963, he was sentenced to three years for burglary.

Anderson still maintains Blassingale is reporting to him regularly and seems to be adapting well to parole.

"How did they ever let a person like him loose?" asked the mother of the 14-year-old rape victim. "I have known him for about 15 years and a person like him don't need freedom and don't deserve it. He is evil. He is the devil straight from the pits of hell. If they knew half of the trouble I know he has been in, they would never have turned him loose."

"He should have been locked up and the key thrown away," she said.

Nicaraguan officers get suspended terms

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has given two top Nicaraguan Air Force officers suspended prison sentences and fines of a total of $150,000 on charges of attempting to smuggle helicopters from Texas to Nicaragua.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions set the suspended prison terms and fines Thursday for Modesto Rojas-Berrios, director general and second in command of the Nicaraguan Air Services, and Sidney Muller-Schroeder, director of maintenance for the air services. Nicaraguan Air Services is the name by which the air force of the Central American country is known.

A U.S. Justice Department spokesman says an investigation by U.S. Customs agents into other possible helicopter smuggling is continuing.

Sessions sentenced Rojas-Berrios to one year in prison and a $50,000 fine and sentenced Muller-Schroeder to two years in prison and a $100,000 fine. He then suspended both prison terms and placed the men on unsupervised probation for five years.

Both men had pleaded no contest to the charges last month.

The two officers and four other men, including John King Daily, a Panama national guard commander, were arrested by customs agent Jan. 18 as they were preparing to fly two Bell UH-1B "Huey" helicopters from a heliport at Bulverde, just north of San Antonio, to Monterrey, Mexico.

Charges were later dropped against the other four men.

Defense lawyers Jack Paul Leon and Sam Bayless said the two Nicaraguans were unable to pay the fines at this time, but were expecting money soon from their government. Sessions gave them 30 days to pay the fines or go to prison and continued them on bond with the understanding they would not leave the country.

State gasoline tax should be 11 cents

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It would take an 11-cent per gallon gasoline tax to cover the increasing costs of building and fixing Texas highways during the next biennium, according to a state energy panel staff report.

Texas' gasoline tax is five cents a gallon, the lowest in the nation. Three-fourths of the money is spent on highways, one-fourth on public schools.

The problem is inflation: motorists are buying more efficient cars in order to skirt the rising gas prices. Less gas used means less gas tax collected. Meanwhile, the cost of highway construction is rising.

In the 1982-83 biennium, the difference between the motor fuels tax and the amount needed for highways will be $950 million, according to Ted Taylor, director of the policy analysis division for the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council.

That difference — which will top $1.3 billion in 1984-85 — has to be made up from the state's general revenues.

At the request of Speaker Bill Clayton, Taylor on Thursday reported to TENRAC on the effects of raising the gas tax.

Taylor's charts showed that a one-cent increase would give the state an additional $70 million a year for road building and maintenance — barely a dent in the $950 million drain on general revenues.

The council, chaired by Gov. Bill Clements, took no action on the gasoline tax. Clements said he, Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have talked about the tax and the wisdom of raising it. Clayton and Hobby are on TENRAC, but were presiding over their respective houses when Taylor made his report.

Taylor had no recommendation on whether the tax should be raised. He offered a system which would tie the tax to inflation factors, raising it as prices jump.

Clayton has said raising the gasoline tax could become a major issue before the regular legislative session ends June 1.

House passes nuclear waste disposal bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein says some hospitals have drums of low-level radioactive trash in their hallways, but the House has acted to solve the problem.

House members passed a bill Thursday, 139-1, authorizing permanent waste disposal sites in Texas for low-level nuclear wastes and imposing a number of safeguards.

Bernstein told the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council on Thursday that hospitals, industrial firms and medical research laboratories have virtually no way to dispose of their radioactive trash.

There are only three permanent disposal sites in the nation — in South Carolina, Washington and Nevada — and Bernstein said they are virtually useless to Texas.

He said South Carolina will not accept Texas waste. Washington insists on a $5 million bond against possible damage, and Nevada requires "unbearably expensive" inspections.

"In addition, Texas' only licensed storage and processing firm, Nuclear Sources and Services Inc., has announced it will not accept any more radioactive waste after April 1.

"We will not have a single company accepting low-level waste. Many of our hospitals and universities have waste drums accumulating in their hallways," Bernstein said.

He said there was a possibility, however, that NSSI might change its mind and continue receiving waste materials for storage and processing.

The bill passed by the House permits the creation of permanent disposal sites on state-owned land.

Judge imposes limits during jury selection

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Lawyers in the court fight over custody of Price Daniel Jr.'s two youngest sons will have to get the judge's permission before they can ask prospective jurors certain questions about the death of the former Texas House Speaker.

Visiting judge Sam Emison Jr. of Houston also put attorneys under orders not to talk to reporters about certain evidence in the case, which progressed through an entire day of jury selection Thursday without seating one juror.

Vickie Daniel, 33, charged with murder in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her estranged husband, is fighting to retain custody of the two boys — Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1. Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph of Richardson, filed suit to take the boys from their mother.

During Thursday's proceedings, Emison said attorneys must get his approval before asking prospective jurors about the circumstances of Daniel's death or the prominence of the Daniel family locally.

Price Daniel Sr. is a former governor, state supreme court justice and U.S. Senator from Texas.

The limitations were imposed so "people don't blurt out inadmissible evidence," said Zeke Zbranek, an attorney for Mrs. Murph.

"That would be like throwing a skunk into the jury box and then instructing the jurors not to smell the stink."

Eleven people charged

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Police in two states have arrested 11 people named in sealed indictments returned by a Gregg County grand jury in connection with oil thefts from the huge East Texas Oil Field, the sheriff said.

Gregg County Sheriff Bobby Weaver said Texas authorities have made eight arrests and three people were arrested in Oklahoma.

In all, 16 people were named in two sealed indictments returned Monday by the grand jurors, charging the defendants with engaging in organized crime and conspiring to commit theft over $10,000.

Mrs. Daniel's lawyers had sought postpone the trial until Monday because lead attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes is temporarily out-of-state on another case. Emison denied the request.

Eighteen of the 99 Liberty County residents called as prospective jurors were excused after undergoing questioning by Zbranek and Andrew Lannie, an attorney for Mrs. Daniel. Emison struck 12 other prospective jurors after they said they said they did not believe they could be impartial.

He also denied motions by Mrs. Daniel's lawyers that the suit be dismissed, that jurors be questioned individually in the judge's chambers and that Mrs. Murph be required to pay Mrs. Daniel's legal fees if Mrs. Daniel wins the suit.

Emison told attorneys for both sides not to discuss certain aspects of the case after lawyers for Mrs. Murph claimed some information contained in sealed depositions was being leaked to reporters.

Mrs. Daniel invoked her Fifth Amendment privilege six times during a preliminary hearing in the custody suit last month.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Are people serious?

Cut away the political rhetoric and parliamentary folderol that follows in the wake of President Reagan's budgetary recommendations and you get down to something said by Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson.

He said: "Our parents taught us to live within our means; so must our nation."

This is the word that has been spread by Ronald Reagan ever since he started running for president. And that is the underlying theme that came through vividly in the president's message to Congress.

There are certain irrevocable laws of the universe. One is that if you sit under an apple tree long enough, you will see apples fall to the ground; they never fall up. Another is that if an individual, an organization or a nation lives beyond its means long enough the day will come when bankruptcy will kill as surely as a speeding bullet.

People in this country have been living beyond their means; the country has been living beyond its means.

People have been encouraged to live beyond their means. They have been told by politicians that everyone is entitled to so much, regardless of their own, private resources. What these politicians have said is that if Joe Doe doesn't make a number of dollars a year then his neighbor, John Smith, by law, has to make up the deficit for Joe. And to make sure that John does this, laws are passed with a built-in guarantee. And to make it more palatable for everyone, it is done with such finesse that few people notice until the hour is late and the debt killing.

Now, Mr. Reagan is calling for a showdown. He wants to wean people, towns, cities from the public trough. He wants, eventually, to balance the national budget that for years has known nothing but red figures that caused more dollars to be printed that caused another jump in the rate of inflation. He wants to get the loafers and the chiselers off the backs of honest and hardworking Americans who are suffocating under a blanket of governmental oppression. He wants to get government out of the way of free enterprise so that it can go to work

Changing silly ideas

One sometimes wonders just what to make of the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

There have been times when he seemed to be verging on downright sensibleness. When he talks about the importance of giving black young people experience in real jobs, when he pushes black youngsters to get an education and break the pattern of dependence on white people, when he urges increasing black ownership of businesses, he often sounds downright refreshing and frank.

When he mumbles through a lot of tired clichés, as he did in criticizing Reagan's proposed economic programs, he sounds like — well, like a tired old political hack mumbling some tired old clichés.

Jackson says the Reagan program is a "slap in the face to the poor." Ho hum. He goes on to say that "corporate greed" is to blame for most of the nation's problems. That gets a big yawn.

It seems to us that a couple of things have happened to Jackson. The first is that he's becoming increasingly politically ambitious. That's usually the prelude to the end of honesty and frankness, and and do the job that it has done in the past, providing jobs for those who want to work, making it possible for people to pay their bills and save enough money for retirement instead of depending on the government for everything from food stamps to the attempted building of Soul Cities.

President Reagan's plan is not perfect. Already, it is being shot at and picked at by those who don't want their own ox gored. The objections come, by and large, from people who have grown up, sometimes grown rich, at the expense of somebody else.

Objections will come not only from individuals but from officials of cities and towns such as those that reside within the boundaries of Gray County. They know how tough it is to get a new water and sewer plant. They like the money that builds recreation centers and parks and housing. Money from Washington takes away much of the pain of governing. Build a new armory and take the credit. Have a rec center turned down and blame it on the bureaucracy. And all along the way, add on millions of dollars for handling.

What Reagan is suggesting is not going to be easy. Before this nation walks on sturdy legs again, almost everyone will have had to sacrifice. Few patients ever came off a sick bed to enter and win a that-day race. The problem is knowing that it can't be done today, but it can be done tomorrow, if the patient is willing to do what is necessary. Many an individual has come from the near-tragic consequences of a heart attack not only to walk but run and do all those other things that were done prior to the attack. Nations, too. And so can this one.

It is obvious from the results of the last election that the voters are saying, at least, that they want something done and now.

Reagan is saying, ok, here's what let's do. And he presented his plan.

Now, in the days ahead, it will become more obvious whether the vote last fall was for real ... or whether it was the mere rubbing of a presumed magic lantern, hoping that what was said at the polls would bring joy and hallelujahs to all but forfeiture and loss of privilege to none.

the beginning of demagoguery.

The second unfortunate circumstance surrounding Jackson is that he's positioned himself in such a manner that people don't want to criticize him, possibly out of fear of being called racists, perhaps from a reluctance to cross swords with a sharp-tongued and formidable adversary.

That's too bad, because when nobody says you're talking nonsense and indulging in emotion knee-jerking rather than analysis, the temptation is to go right on talking nonsense. Silly assertions ought to be challenged, if only to keep the asserter on his toes. Even intelligent analysis can benefit from challenges to refine and improve it. But Jesse Jackson doesn't get challenged very often these days, and he's getting away with a lot of silly assertions.

That's unfortunate, because he's an extremely bright and capable man who, at one time, showed a lot of promise, a potential for providing constructive leadership. It's a matter of regret that he sounds increasingly often like a tired old pol fighting yesterday's battles.

Cut in taxes should be immediate

The income tax is not a tax on the "haves" but on those who are trying to get.

The money that creates new jobs comes from people who have something to save after their living expenses are paid.

A balanced federal budget doesn't necessarily mean a sound economy for, if the budget is balanced at too high a level, the private sector dries up.

These are the three fundamentals that measure the propriety of President Reagan's tax-cutting and budget-cutting proposals. The case for lifting the

By Robert J. Wagman
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Members of the Democratic National Committee met here recently for the first time since their party's debacle at the polls last November. There was much swapping of horror stories as is common at reunions of survivors of a common disaster.

The meeting signaled the start of the Democratic Party's search for new leadership and new ideas. It is beginning to appear that this search will be long and difficult.

At the heart of the problem is a disagreement among Democrats as to what exactly happened on Election Day.

Some party chiefs refuse to concede that a majority of the voters turned their backs on the themes that have united Democrats for nearly 50 years. Instead, they blame the party's losses on Jimmy Carter and John White, the former president's hand-picked DNC chairman. These Democrats say that the party needs only to return to its traditional values to regain momentum for the 1982 and 1984 elections.

Others in the party attribute the Republican victories to the disenchantment of many voters with those same traditional Democratic values. These Democrats agree that their party must redefine itself for the 1980s but disagree on what its new identity should be.

Initially, the biggest decision facing the party is who will lead its rebuilding. Several factions are fighting for control behind the scenes.

Some Democratic leaders want former Vice President Walter Mondale to be at the center of power; others support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Some say that the leadership should come from the still-Democratic House, which would mean a big role for House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass.

Still others say that Washington's Democratic establishment has been thoroughly discredited and should be replaced by an entirely new power structure of Democratic leaders from outside the nation's capital.

The top order of business at the Washington meeting was the election as party chairman of Charles Manatt, a California lawyer who had served as national finance chairman and as chairman of the California Democratic Party. Manatt fought hard for the post and won almost unanimous approval through the time-honored political strategy of offering his opponents important party jobs in exchange for their support.

Manatt plans to take a leaf from the book written by Bill Brock, who headed the Republican National Committee during the comeback years of 1977 to 1980.

The new chairman says that his first responsibility will be to rebuild the party's tattered organizational structure. He gives high priority to recruiting professionals who will remain independent of any candidate.

Another of Manatt's early tasks will be launching a major fund-raising program that will rely on direct-mail solicitations.

The Republicans have raised millions of dollars in small contributions through direct-mail appeals, while the Democrats have traditionally relied on large sums from a relatively small number of contributors. Manatt especially wants to solicit donations from younger, moderately affluent voters who might give annual amounts in the $500 range.

Manatt also realizes that the party must begin a serious reappraisal of its philosophy. But events at the Washington meeting illustrated how hard it would be for the party to turn even slightly away from its traditional liberalism.

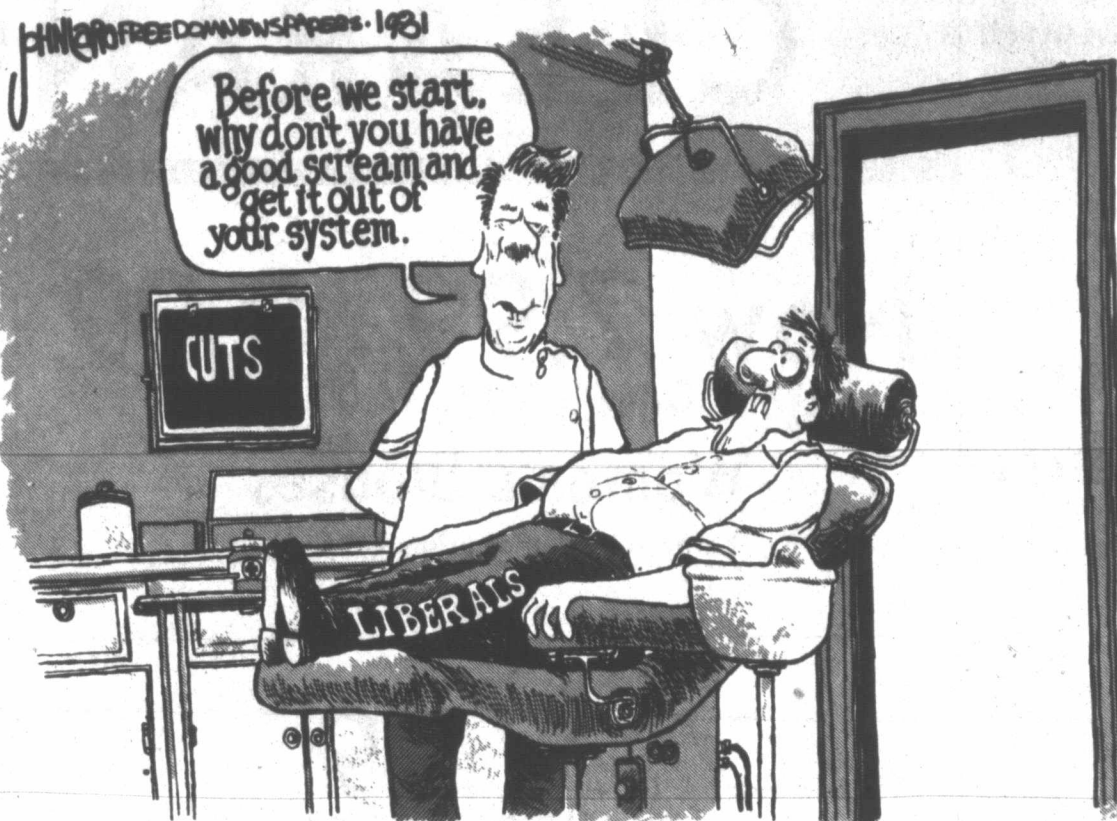

Above all, party leaders wanted to present to the nation a picture of a party unified and beginning to rebuild. But they were prevented from doing so by a series of bitter regional and racial battles.

For example, many blacks have called upon the party to aggressively fight President Reagan's economic proposals, which they view as anti-black. Manatt, however, does not want to involve the party in major national issues while it is preoccupied with the nuts and bolts of rebuilding.

So, the blacks sought to increase their strength on the DNC at the same time that organized labor was seeking to boost its strength at the expense of two black seats. A walkout was narrowly averted when Manatt agreed to maintain black representation at the existing level.

All of this points up the difficulty of rebuilding a party that is bitterly divided over what it should be, what it should do and what it should stand for — especially at a time when the rival party is becoming more united and more certain of its identity with each passing day.

Court calendar clogged

by Paul Harvey

Do you know that some of the weekend cowboys who get thrown off the mechanical bull at the corner tavern are suing the tavern?

Did you hear that a woman mud-wrestler in Chattanooga, Tennessee, is suing a nightclub owner because, she alleges, somebody "put rocks in her mud"? She says she was thus bruised $50,000 worth.

A major reason the wheels of justice are grinding so slowly these days is the proliferation of silly, selfish suits.

Court calendars are clogged with cupidity.

Jamie Friedman of Cambridge, Massachusetts, sued the beauty parlor because her blonde hair turned green.

She says she could not wear a wig while it grew out because "friends said it looked unnatural." She was awarded $27,969.

Carter's legacy to Democrats

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - An incongruous mood of euphoria pervaded the meeting of the Democratic National Committee when its members gathered here recently for the first time since the 1980 election.

Although the party sustained devastating losses in last year's elections, the most notable of those defeats — in the race for the presidency — apparently had the effect of lifting an intolerable burden carried for years by activists and loyalists from all factions of the party.

That burden as former President Jimmy Carter, a man who used (and abused) the party to satisfy his own political requirements but did virtually nothing to enhance its status or to advance the careers of fellow Democrats.

Just as the Soviet Union seeks to obliterate the memory of disgraced and discredited former leaders by pretending they never existed, Carter was almost totally ignored in the speeches made by various party leaders during the DNC meeting and seldom mentioned in the informal conversations that are a crucial part of any political gathering.

But Carter's legacy to the Democrats was readily apparent, especially in the audited financial statement encompassing the four years of his White House tenure that was presented to those who now must rebuild the party.

Because it agreed to assume the outstanding post-campaign debts of various contenders for the party's presidential nomination in 1980 and 1972, the DNC has not been solvent for more than a decade.

The party's total liabilities amounted to $9.3 million in the late 1960s but gradually were whittled down and stood at $3.8 million when Carter was elected in 1976. With a modicum of assistance from him, that debt could have been readily eliminated in the late 1970s.

Instead, the DNC still owes $1.2 million, has failed to avail itself of the opportunity to develop a broad financial base and was forced to raise and spend almost $3.4 million to help

Harry Friedman of Nashville, Tennessee, protested that there was a cockroach in his iced tea. The court awarded him a thousand dollars.

In these cases, of course, the defendant rarely pays. Usually some insurance company has to pay. Thus we all pay — in higher insurance premiums.

Gerald Heller of Tulsa, Oklahoma, takes all kinds of chances on the ski slopes. But he is suing a ski company which owns a restaurant in which he cut his finger on the toilet paper dispenser. He wants $600,000.

Are ambulance-chasing lawyers responsible for initiating most such damage suits — figuring to cut themselves in on the settlement? I can't prove that.

However, in Columbia, South Carolina, a mother backed the family car over her son's leg.

Son Timmy, age seven, is suing his own mother for "reckless, wanton and careless driving."

The boy is suing his mother for $60,000.

That sounds like some lawyer's idea of a way the family can get money from the insurance company.

And damage settlements are tax-free!

Comic Henny Youngman slipped on an icy street and is suing New York City for $5 million.

Actor Dustin Hoffman sued a hotel because he got a shock from a defective electric light switch.

Robert Giles of Buffalo got $52,000 because he says while he was a convict on the Attica, New York, prison farm — he was "attacked by a dairy cow."

The only hope for reforms that will correct misuse of our court system is for the system to be threatened with suffocation. We're getting there.

A widow is suing the National Weather Service for $2.2 million because, she alleges, an erroneous weather forecast sent her fisherman husband off into a storm at sea in which he drowned.

Japan has few lawyers, few lawsuits.

In Japan, by tradition, most disputes are resolved without litigation.

Also ... in Japan the sue-er can be countersued.

That tends to discourage the longshot gamblers who sue because they have nothing to lose.

In Japan if they lose they pay.

Who's in charge of making sure water safe?

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Regulations everywhere, more than you'd ever think: regulations everywhere, so water you can drink.

In one way or another, nearly every federal department, all of the states and most local governments have rules, policy, planners and projects affecting the nation's most precious liquid asset — water.

"Everybody is in charge (of water). It's kind of like the weather, everybody is in charge, and nobody is," said Russell Langford, associate chief hydrologist for the U.S. Geological Survey.

"It is totally confusing," added Gerald Seinwill, acting director of the Water Resources Council, the agency with the task of trying to bring order to water policy.

Water quality is one major focus of all the work. Simply finding water and getting it to people and places which need it is another. And different agencies often are responsible for each function.

Water management historically has been primarily state or local matters, but the federal government is taking a bigger part, both as a project builder and as a regulator of water use and quality.

Perhaps the biggest of the federal offices involved in water matters is the Army Corps of Engineers with its flood control, power, transportation and other projects across the country, and a civil works budget proposal of more than $3 billion for the coming year.

With a 1979 budget of more than half a billion dollars, including $399 million for construction projects, the Bureau of Reclamation also is a force to be reckoned with.

Primarily active in 17 dry Western states, the bureau started out in the 1920s to help restore dried out farmland. Over the years it has grown to include water power projects, recreational uses of water, flood control, municipal water systems and environmental enhancement.

Under the new name "Water and Power Resources Service," the agency recently issued a study of its work: It covers 1,462 pages.

The Agriculture Department's Forest Service and Soil Conservation Service are active in the small watershed program, setting up flood control projects on watersheds that aren't big enough for the Corps of Engineers: that is, 250,000 acres or less.

Both also work closely with the Environmental Protection Agency in battling water pollution.

Arkansas bill will prevent water export

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The House has sent Gov. Frank White a bill aimed at preventing western states from getting Arkansas' water.

The bill by Sen. Wayne Dowd of Texas would prevent large shipments of water from being exported to other states. But it would allow the governor to export water if he declares an emergency.

The bill was well-received in the House, which has been concerned about shipping water out of state since Texas Gov. Bill Clements said last month that he believed Arkansas would give surplus water to Texas. Clements also said Gov. Frank White was agreeable to the idea.

The EPA has been most visible in fighting what it calls "point source," pollution, that is, pollution originating at one place such as a factory or sewage plant.

But there is also "non-point source" pollution, and here EPA turned to the Soil Conservation Service for help. Most of this type of pollution is soil and fertilizer washing off farm fields so the agencies work together to try and correct the problem.

EPA wants to keep soil and fertilizer out of the water, SCS wants to keep the soil and fertilizer down on the farm, so they are really both seeking the same result, just for different reasons, explained SCS spokesman Hubert W. Kelley Jr.

Interior Secretary James G. Watt said recently that the Reagan administration is committed to developing the nation's water resources, but cannot afford to propose any new projects right now.

Increasing authority for states and decreasing authority for the federal government also may be in the cards.

"There is, even among water people in Washington, a realization that water allocation and management is basically a state responsibility," said Seinwill.

Joseph Tofani, head of the Water Resources Congress, a private, non-profit organization that describes itself as working for wise use and development of water, says: "We've got too many regulations. Quite a few could be handled better by the states, each state has its own problems."

Seinwill said he hopes the states will do a better job in the future than they did in the past in maintaining water quality.

"They didn't in the 1940s and 1950s and the federal government stepped in, but we are all a whole lot smarter now than we were then," he said.

Even Tofani concedes that some federal involvement is necessary, to help settle disputes over water supplies that cross state lines, for example.

JOHNSON-OLSEN-PHILAYA

Musicians at Zion Lutheran

Johnson-Olsen-Philaya, a Christian performance group featuring over 12 different musical instruments will be giving a concert at the Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, on Sunday, March 15, at 7:30 p.m.

Guitar, mandolin, dulcimer, auto harp, electric guitar, pedal-steel, bass guitar and banjo are just some of the instruments used in the uplifting, variety-filled three-man Christ centered performance.

The group consists of three Minnesotans, Kurt Johnson, Jimi Olsen, and Luther Philaya who give the group its name.

Centered out of the Twin Cities, Johnson-Olsen-Philaya features scripture-based original songs and music as well as the familiar tunes and old-time favorites. Variety is the highlight of the performance and no two tunes sound alike.

For an occasion filled with inspiration and entertainment for the entire family, the public is invited to the Johnson-Olsen-Philaya concert.

Missionary at Bethel Assembly of God

Rev. David Cave, a newly approved Assemblies of God missionary to Mexico, will be the guest speaker for a missions rally. Sunday, March 15 at 9:45 and 11 a.m. at the Bethel Assembly of God.

In their first term of service, Rev. Cave and his wife, Nancy, will be working with the International Correspondence Institute (ICI) program of the Assemblies of God.

ICI is a correspondence Bible school and service agency, its purposes are to evangelize, teach, and train people by extension methods.

The Caves will promote the use of ICI materials in Mexico. ICI offers all levels of evangelism and Christian education courses, and a primary purpose of the school is to take the Word of God to people where they are.

"Often newly literate people are flooded with reading materials containing harmful teachings. Our purpose is to combat such influenced by giving them the truth of the Bible to live by."

Mr. and Mrs. Cave have previously worked in Mexico on a temporary assignment with the Assemblies of God Mobilization and Placement Service. They have also been involved in evangelism in the United States. The Caves served as associate pastors at the Real Life Assembly of God in Salem, Ohio.

The public is invited to attend the Sunday morning services at Bethel Assembly of God.

Rape class scheduled at United Methodist

A class on the myths, mysteries, and prevention of rape will be presented by Mrs. Doris Akers of Follett, lecturer for the Amarillo Rape Crisis Center, on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Akers has served as vice-chairperson of the Panhandle Regional Planning Committee A-95 Review Board, is coordinator of Christian Social Involvement of the Northwest Texas Conference of United Methodist Women, has attended numerous seminars, including the United Nations International Year of the Child in New York City. She has had training at the Methodist Board of Global Ministries offices in New York City and numerous Schools of Missions in several states.

Mrs. Akers is the second of five speakers to present a series of classes open to the public and sponsored by the United Methodist Women.

A babysitter will be provided in the Church Education Building.

The remaining series will include Family Relationships with John Picco of Amarillo on March 23. Picco is the Information Specialist, Operation Drug Alert. Amarillo Mental Health and Retardation Center.

Assertiveness training will be presented by Jane Kerr, WTSU Director, March 30.

Creative Single Living will be presented by Charlotte McClure WTSU counsellor, on April 6.

Highland Baptist sets brotherhood speaker

Highland Baptist Church, 1301 N. Banks, Men's Brotherhood will hear a talk, Monday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. by C.C. Kelly of White Deer. The Palo Duro Baptist Association Men's Brotherhood Director.

Kelly has been a leader in Texas State Baptist Men's activities for several years. He is an active layman from the First Baptist Church in White Deer.

Frank Parrish, director of the Highland Baptist Men's Brotherhood noted the group has accepted responsibility for the rehabilitation and refurbishing of the Highland Baptist Cabin, at the Pan Fork Baptist Encampment.

The Rev. John D. Davey, pastor, announced the appointment of a new Director of Youth Activities for the church. Frank and Sue Parrish will coordinate all youth programs, assisting Davey in this ministry.

Davey also released the names of fourteen members, who have been elected to serve on the "Celebration '81" committee responsible for planning a week long church celebration on Oct. 4 - 10, in recognition of three facets in the history of the congregation: the 30th anniversary of the organization of the church, the 25th anniversary of the ground-breaking for the present facility, and the anticipated "note-burning" Oct. 1.

Pastor Davey's sermon topics, Sunday March 15, will be "Rise Up, O Men of God," at 10:55 a.m. and "What Are You Waiting For?" at 7 p.m.

Renewal at St. Paul United

St. Paul United Methodist Church will have a Spiritual Life Renewal, March 15 - 18 with the Rev. Jesse Dea preaching in all services.

Rev. Dea is pastor of Follett United Methodist Church of Follett. Dee Phelps from Higgins will lead the singing and bring the special music Sunday morning and evening.

Rev. David Black of Miami will lead the singing and bring special music Monday evening.

Sunday services are at 11 a.m. and at 7 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday services are at 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Full Gospel Businessmen

The Full Gospel Businessmen will meet Saturday, March 14, at 6:30 p.m. in the Optimist Club, 601 E. Craven.

The guest speaker will be Hugo Reimen from Borger. The Lord ministered faith to Reimen and his unit on the front lines of the battle front in World War II.

Eddie and Tonya Burton will be sharing in music.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

AFTER THE PARTY IS OVER

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear, will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

©Coleman Adv. Ser.

Have you ever felt like this little girl after a big, exciting day at the Fair, or a party? You know how you feel — excited, exhausted; but you feel good, too. Sometimes you just want to lie down and think about it. But like the little one in this picture you, also, are too tired to remove your party hat or your shoes.

Sometimes it is delightful just to lie down and think of something good and wonderful and happy. It is good just to be still and sort of day-dream about what has happened.

There are other times in our lives when we need to achieve a sense of quietness and think of God. The Psalmist says, "Commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still." Psalm 4:4. God says in Psalms 46:10 "Be still and know that I am God."

We invite you to attend church and sense the still, quiet holiness that is God's presence in the midst of the congregation.

Dear Abby

Jewelry safer in bank vault

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My mother is an invalid, close to 80. She has live-in help to look after her, and she changes help very often. With so many strangers coming and going, a problem has come up.

Several years ago, when Mother first became ill, we agreed that I would place her jewelry (which is very valuable) in a bank vault. Now she wants me to bring all her jewelry home.

I told her that I would be glad to take out special pieces for her to wear on special occasions, but this doesn't seem to please her. She wants all her jewelry at home.

I am so afraid it will be stolen. It's her jewelry, Abby. What to do?

WORRIED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: One of the most controversial issues people must deal with is, "How much can one properly do for somebody else's 'own good'?"

Your reluctance to let your mother keep her valuable jewelry at home is understandable, and very wise indeed. It may be her jewelry, but you are her daughter and responsible for her welfare.

Bring all the jewelry home for Mother to see and handle, and then return it to the bank for permanent safekeeping. Continue to reassure your mother that it's much safer there. And keep reassuring her. And reassuring her.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and have a big problem. My mom and dad fight at night, and last night they had a big one. There was loud yelling and I woke up scared and sick. I started to cry and my dad came into my room and gave me a glass of water. I asked him why they had to argue all the time, and he said, "Your mother is not well."

Abby, they act like children. My mom puts my dad down, and I don't like to listen to it. Please print this to let them

Senior citizens active in musical pursuits

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — "Those who think Grandma and Grandpa are too old for any activities other than baking cookies or babysitting grandkids had better take another look," says Gene Wenner, president of the American Music Conference.

There's a good chance they're busy organizing an orchestra, strumming guitars in a community band, or learning to play a Brahms' piano sonata, he points out.

"Increasing numbers of American senior citizens are participating in music as a way to stay emotionally, physically and socially active," says Wenner.

The AMC, a non-profit education and research association, reports that throughout America this trend is involving older adults in musical activities that range from founding and conducting community bands to learning to play instruments in classes devoted especially to their age group.

Keeping pace with seniors' desire to make music, programs and classes for beginners, and those with previous musical training, are popping up around the United States.

In Lexington, Ky., through the Area-Wide Music Programs of the Council on Aging of the University of Kentucky, approximately 100 older adults take advantage of free, weekly lessons on the guitar, autoharp, dulcimer or recorder. These students, most of them in their 70s, can also attend classes on jazz ensemble, orchestra and chorus.

On the other side of the country, the over-55 crowd has been lining up for piano classes at El Camino, Calif., College since 1979. Those meeting the age requirement and lucky enough to get into the popular program, are "very loyal" about attending classes, says instructor Leslie Black.

Poisonings due to curiosity

COLLEGE STATION — The theme for National Poison Prevention Week, March 15 - 21, is "Children Act Fast... So Do Poisons!"

"An overwhelming percentage of accidental poisonings happen to children under the age of five," said Dr. Gary Nelson, safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "Much of this is due to the natural curiosity of youngsters and the tendency to put things into their mouths."

Safety packaging and childproof containers have compiled an excellent record of success in the prevention of child poisonings, Nelson said. Safety packaging has helped reduce the number of certain product poisonings by 56 percent since its introduction in 1972.

"Care should be taken, however, not to rely on safety packaging completely," he said. "Since childproof containers must be reasonably easy for adults to open, some children will be able to open them as well. Thus, it's important to keep medications and other poisons, even if they are in safety type containers, out of reach of children."

Nelson suggests these practices in addition to safety packaging to prevent poisoning accidents:

—Keep all household products and medicines out of reach of children. Lock these items up when not in use.

—Never let toxic products out of your sight when children are near, even if you must carry them with you to answer the phone or the doorbell.

—Store medicines separately from other household products.

—Keep toxic substances in their original containers.

—Leave original labels on all products, and read labels before use.

—Always have a light on when giving or taking medicines.

—Avoid taking medicines in front of children since youngsters tend to imitate grownups. And never refer to medicine as "candy."

—Clean out the medicine cabinet periodically and dispose of unneeded medicines when the illness for which they were prescribed is over.

—Finally, use safety packaging properly by closing the container securely after every use.

HONEY PEACHES

Another easy-to-make and delicious recipe from my sister Phyllis.

1/4 cup honey

2 cups sliced peeled fresh peaches (4 or 5 medium)

Into a container turn the honey; gently fold in a few peach slices at a time to coat. Chill, covered, for 2 to 3 hours. Honey and peaches will make their own sauce. Serve with heavy cream (plain or whipped). Makes 4 servings.

Soviet grain import expected to be record

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New figures described by the Agriculture Department as "minor changes" show the Soviet Union is expected to import a record 35 million metric tons of grain this year. That would be 500,000 metric tons more than the 34.5 million U.S. exports had been predicting since last December and 5 million metric tons more than the Soviets imported last year.

The figures, released Wednesday, are for the international marketing year that will end on June 30. A partial embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union has been in effect since Jan. 4, 1980, imposed by President Carter in response to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

The order exempted 8 million metric tons of corn and wheat annually which had been specified by a 1975 U.S.-Soviet agreement. But the embargo prevented the shipment of about 17 million metric tons of grain which the Soviets had been expected to buy last year and, according to many authorities, were likely to purchase again in 1980-81.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Although President Reagan spoke against the embargo during his campaign last fall and has been under strong pressure from farm groups to lift it, no such action appears imminent.

The latest analysis by the Agriculture Department's task force on Soviet grain said the increase in import estimates was due mainly to "large recent purchases of wheat flour from Western Europe."

So far in 1980-81, the Soviets are believed to have imported or arranged shipments for about 32 million metric tons of grain, the report said.

"Additional purchases for shipment during the balance of the marketing year are expected, particularly from the Southern Hemisphere coarse grain suppliers," particularly Argentina, it said.

In a related report, the department said U.S. corn and soybean exports have lagged this winter, contributing to weaker prices than had been expected.

Corn exports were shaved by 50 million bushels to a new estimate of about 2.55 billion bushels in the marketing year that began last Oct. 1. Farm prices now are expected to average $3.15 to $3.40 a bushel this season, down 10 cents from the outlook a month ago. Even so, that would be up sharply from last year's average of $2.52 a bushel.

"The reduction (in exports) reflects continued favorable crop prospects in Southern Hemisphere countries, primarily Argentina, and points to increased exportable supplies in those countries during the last half of the U.S. marketing year," the report said.

Projected soybean exports were reduced by 15 million bushels from last month to about 85 million bushels in 1980-81. Estimated farm prices of soybeans were reduced 10 cents to an average of $7.65 a bushel, still higher than last season's average of $6.28.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says smokers in Poland are experiencing a cigarette shortage, partly because the nation's tobacco industry can't afford paper to make them.

A report Wednesday by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the shortage "is particularly acute in Silesia and on the Baltic coast."

Poland's output this year is expected to total 87.5 billion cigarettes, compared with an expected demand for 95 billion, the report said. Through February, production was 2.4 billion cigarettes less than last year's pace. "The Polish tobacco industry attributes the decline to a lack of materials and fewer working hours," the report said. "Because of a severe shortage of foreign exchange, the tobacco industry has been unable to import cigarette paper, packing materials and filters."

and aluminum foil have been substituted, but that has caused "a decline in productivity and product quality," the report said. "The Polish tobacco industry does not plan to introduce any new products this year, and only small amounts of cigarettes will be imported, mostly from Albania."

Pilot cleared in marijuana case

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has cleared a North Texas crop-duster whose airplane and landing strip were used in a marijuana-smuggling operation.

Douglas Sinor has been sentenced to six years in prison after authorities confiscated 2,490 pounds of marijuana unloaded on his property.

The appeals court ruled this week the evidence was not sufficient for a conviction. The conviction was thrown out and the court ordered an acquittal.

The U.S. Customs Service, with the approval of a federal judge, put a tracking device on an airplane suspected of hauling marijuana from Mexico. On Oct. 2, 1976, the device alerted authorities that the plane had taken off.

A Customs plane followed, and agent Gerald Weatherman said he saw two airplanes land 25 miles into Mexico. The planes then headed back north, landing on Sinor's strip in Denton County.

As authorities secretly watched, a van met the planes. Department of Public Safety troopers stopped the vehicle. Three men, not including Sinor, were arrested.

A search of the van turned up 1,242 bricks (2,490) pounds of marijuana. The airplanes, one owned by Sinor, had marijuana on board.

Sinor was implicated after police processed a roll of film taken from one of the arrested men. The photos showed Sinor and one of the men. They were standing by his airplane.

The pictures led to Sinor's arrest.

Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Carl Dally said the photos and the fact that Sinor owned the plane and the airstrip were not sufficient for conviction.

"While the evidence may strongly suggest that the appellant is guilty of the offense charged," the circumstantial evidence was not conclusive enough for a conviction, Dally's opinion said.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

March 14, 1981

This should be a more active year for you socially than you have experienced for quite some time. If you happen to be unattached, this may be especially true.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have excellent leadership qualities today because you know how to manage others without making them feel they are being directed. Romance, travel, finances, luck and possible pitfalls are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your concern for those you love will be strong today. You'll be anxious to help make things easier for them. Do so without admonishing them simultaneously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You tend to reflect the attitudes of persons you're with today, so make it a point to be with cheery types. You'll be assured of a pleasant day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sometimes, in order to get what we want, we must first cast a little bread upon the waters. A thoughtful gift to the right person could smooth your path today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If companions do something worthy today, by all means acknowledge their accomplishments with a few kind remarks. Compliments mean a lot.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's often been said that, when one is lucky materially one is usually not lucky in love. What may occur for you today should dispel this theory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today's happenings may offer you the opening you've been looking for to draw closer to someone you are fond of, but whom you've been unable to truly reach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Situations others may find a bit intimidating won't prove difficult for you today. You have the ability to make the hard look easy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You don't need to be doing special things today or to be around certain types of people in order to enjoy yourself. Where you go, the sunshine follows.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something could occur today to give you the opportunity to change things for one you love. By all means, make this a top priority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your secret for success today is to bend a little extra in order to show others how cooperative you really are. A right example is magic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Doing good work is reward in itself, but today jobs which you perform well may carry extra bonuses. Take pride in your tasks.

Henry Winkler reflects on Fonz

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There is a tendency these days to look down on sitcoms as the dregs of artistic creativity. Sure they get high ratings and make lots of money, but when it comes to culture, they are nowhere.

On the other hand, there is one sitcom star whose costume has been enshrined in Washington, D.C.'s Smithsonian Institution; whose example for good is followed by millions of impressionable youngsters; who has used the sitcom as a springboard to producing first-rate TV films.

That star is Henry Winkler, known to the world as "The Fonz," the star of ABC's long-running "Happy Days." Now, however, he is equally proficient as a producer and he is proud of a film he did for the network's series of after-school specials, called "Run, Don't Walk."

Winkler has his own production company, Fair Dinkum. (The name comes from Australian slang; he heard it when he toured that continent and liked its sound.) His production company is no mere tax shelter or toy, as it is with so many stars. With him, it is a very active organization.

"It's not an in-name-only affair," Winkler says. "It's not just a company they give actors to keep them happy. I want my company, and my participation in that company, to be fruitful and important. I really work at it."

But, of course, he is still the Fonz, still part of "Happy Days." He is committed to the show for one more season after this one, and he is in no hurry to end the Winkler-Fonz association.

"I believe," he says, "that Fonz is a character whose impact is good and whose memory will be around for a long time."

He is proud of the character he has created in the Fonz. He realizes that, in the United States, the adulation has peaked, but he feels it's evolved into something even better than high-decibel worship.

"It's turned into a love," he says. He is perhaps proudest of the positive contributions the Fonz (and, necessarily, himself) has made to our society. For example, in one show some time ago, the Fonz got a library card and expressed amazement at how easy it was, that just anybody could go in and get one.

"Later," he says, "the American Library Association told me that in the weeks after that episode was aired, applications for library cards went up 500 per cent."

He is also proud that the Fonz jacket is now displayed in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

And he is proud that the Fonz (and, necessarily, himself) is loved by people from all social strata. When he and his wife go to New York, he says, they walk home from the theater to their hotel at night and everybody — "from 42nd St. winos to ladies in ermine furs" — stops to say hello.

"We were walking along once," Winkler says, "and a tough-looking gang came over to us. These were the kind of guys who would bite your nose off. And one of them said, 'Hey, you The Fonz?' I said yes, and I introduced my wife. And we had a very nice visit."

He has had to learn, through those years of galloping adulation, how to handle himself. "A gaggle of girls, all screaming at a certain decibel," he says, "will cause me to faint." He did learn how to handle that, by sort of sliding down and then getting back up again when the gaggle had hushed.

He learned, he says, that when surrounded by screaming, clawing fans, he could extricate himself by talking softly, in the character of the Fonz, and convincing them that he needed to get through.

"So they will part and let you through," he says. "But if they're crazy, and then you start acting crazy, too, it's big trouble."

Back Roads

BACK ROADS is "It Happened One Night" revisited, with two of life's losers on the lam instead of Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable. The new travelers are a dauntless hooker, Sally Field, and a failed boxer, Tommy Lee Jones. The stars' combined charm enliven what might have been an unrewarding journey through the byways of the Old South.

Sally Field is terrific as the prostitute from Mobile who is seeking, though not too energetically, a better life for herself. Jones complements her in fine style, displaying a heretofore hidden knack for comedy. Martin Ritt knows how to direct his actors to best advantage (e.g., "Norma Rae"), and John Alonzo's photography captures the beauty as well as the sleaziness of the Southern back roads. Rated R, perhaps for the raunchy dialogue and the nature of Miss Field's profession.

OSCAR FRONTRUNNER. Catherine Deneuve and Gerard Depardieu are shown during a segment of United Artists' upcoming release, The Last Metro. The ever-beautiful Deneuve plays the role of Marion Steiner, a film actress who enlists the aid of Bernard Granger (Depardieu) to maintain the prestigious Nonmarte Theater in wartime Paris as her husband, a Jew, hides to avoid capture by the Nazi invaders.

Network sports chief has news background

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here's something daring and new: a network sports chief who is steeped in news tradition. He's talking about creating an investigative sports journalism team for his network.

Can a journalist be a TV sports guy? I thought network television's idea of a sports reporting was to hire an ex-jock who could say, "Some kinda quarterback!" I thought the guy who hired him, the network sports chief, had to be a fellow in gold jewelry walked around shrieking, "Give me visual!"

But, no. CBS Sports has brought into its employ one Van Gordon Sauter, a man whose resume includes employment as war correspondent for the Detroit Free Press and as CBS' Paris bureau chief. Last week, he made these comments before the National Television Academy:

"We are ... getting out of the trashsports business as quickly as we can work off contracts."

Okay, what gives? This CBS Sports, old and weary and lagging far behind its competitors in sports coverage, both in terms of what it covers and how, clearly needed a change. It was the only network without regular coverage of college sports. It was the only network without baseball. Its "Sports Spectacular" was neither spectacular nor often concerned with sports. Its NFL coverage, while featuring some good broadcasters, lacked innovation and spark.

Last summer, sports chief Frank Smith was removed from his post. But instead of trying for the quick fix by hiring a production-hot-shot to run things, CBS looked for an architect who could redesign the entire sports division.

In Sauter, they have a man of keen mind and proven organizational skills. In 2½ years as general manager of CBS' station here, KNXT, Sauter transformed a moribund news operation into one of the market's leaders. At CBS Sports, which he joined last summer, Sauter has already begun to make a difference.

One of the first things he did was ax "CBS Sports Spectacular," which had become an embarrassment next to ABC's "Wide World of Sports" and NBC's "SportsWorld." In its place, starting in April, will be a sports anthology series hosted by Brent Musberger.

And, in a major victory for CBS Sports, Sauter announced this week an agreement with the NCAA that will bring the college basketball championship tournament to CBS for three years, beginning in 1982.

Leslie-Anne Down calls acting 'quite an easy job'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Being an actress is quite an easy job," said the glamorous Leslie-Anne Down. "It's certainly easier than what most people do and a lot easier than working in a factory."

In her latest film, "Sphinx," Ms. Down has it anything but easy. Playing a young Egyptologist, she stumbles upon a black-market ring in Cairo, becomes a target for murder and gets attacked by bats.

"It's an adventure film and I do get chased through tombs and pyramids, but come through it all," she disclosed, smiling. "I liked the part because it wasn't like anything I'd done before and it wasn't one-dimensional."

"Although I read about 40 scripts last year, I only did one movie in that time," said the 25-year-old British actress. "so you can imagine what the quality of most of them are like."

Although she has made dozens of films, Ms. Down received most of her recognition in this country when she appeared on television in "Upstairs, Downstairs" as the lovely Miss Georgina.

Pampa clashes with El Paso Eastwood in regional tourney

Pampa's basketball team makes its first regional showing in four years, taking on El Paso Eastwood at 8:30 p.m. tonight in Midland's Chapparral Center.

The game will be aired on KPDN (1340) radio in Pampa.

Midland High and Fort Worth Dunbar meet at 6:30 p.m. tonight in the opening game of the Class 5A regional tournament.

The two winners meet at 2 p.m. Saturday for the right to represent Region 1 in next week's state tournament in Austin.

The Harvesters, 23-11 overall, rallied from 15 points back to defeat Plainview, 53-52, Tuesday night in bi-district action.

Pampa, which won state titles in 1953, 1954, 1958 and 1959, is expected to start Damon Fleming at center, Charles Nelson and Terry Faggins at forwards; Mike Nelson and Kirt Crouch at guards. Charles Nelson, a 6-3 junior, is Pampa's leading scorer, averaging 14.7 ppg. Brother Mike Nelson, a 6-2 sophomore, is hitting 13.4 ppg.

Eastwood, which has been in the regional tournament six times since 1974, nipped El Paso Burges, 31-30, in its bi-district game Tuesday.

The Troopers (34-4) are led by 6-5 center Rick Clark, who is averaging 13 points per game. Clark, who is also Eastwood's tallest starter, pulls down nine rebounds per game.

"Eastwood will be tough to beat," Pampa coach Garland Nichols said. "I think they were state champions a couple of years ago, so they know how to win. Eastwood is a pressing club. They don't have a lot of height, but they're strong and they can rebound."

Midland comes into tonight's other regional semi-final game with a 32-3 record. Dunbar, a state runnerup twice in the last five years, is 29-4.

Lefors hosts track meet

Lefors is hosting a seven-team track meet in both boys' and girls' divisions Saturday.

Field events start at 8:45 a.m. followed by the running events at 10 a.m.

Teams entered include Higgins, Texline, Groom, McLean, Booker and Lefors.

Lefors coach Jim Allen said helpers should be at the track by 8 a.m. tomorrow.

Navratilova advances into quarterfinals at Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The only mistake Martina Navratilova made in her second-round Avon Championships of Dallas match was to bounce a stray forehand shot off a line judge in her first game of the evening.

After that, she took just 41 minutes to dispose of fellow Czechoslovakia native Katerina Skronska in straight sets and move into the quarterfinals of this stop on the women's pro tennis tour.

"My errors were few and far between tonight," the former Dallas resident said after her 6-2, 6-0 victory. "I'm really feeling the ball well on my racket. I feel like I can do anything with it."

"I don't think anybody here is playing as confidently as I am this week," added Navratilova, the tournament's top seed.

Fourth-seeded Billie Jean King, 37, also posted a win Thursday in second-round action, beating 35-year-old Virginia Wade, 6-4, 6-3, breaking service four times and using a wide variety of lobs and passing shots for the win.

"Virginia had a little trouble readying at the net, but we were pretty useful for 35 and 37. It felt good to run around out there," said King.

"I felt the first game (which went to deuce 10 times) was really vital," she added. "It was a very close match."

SPORTS

Reinhardt takes Classic lead

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Alexandra Reinhardt came into the LPGA Sun City Classic with a new swing and a "nervous" feeling about her game.

When she came off the course Thursday, nothing much had changed — except for her name appearing atop the leader board.

Reinhardt, who has never won a tournament on the women's professional tour, shot a 6-under-par 67 to take a 2-stroke lead in the $100,000 event entering Friday's second round.

"I bogeyed the first hole," she said. "I hit my drive behind a tree and I thought 'Oh boy, another one of those days.'"

That was the closest her game came to falling apart, as the 27-year-old former New Mexico State Women's Amateur champion then went out and birdied seven holes to grab a 2-stroke lead over Patty Hayes and Kathy Young.

"I still feel shaky," Reinhardt said. "I had made some adjustments because of a bad hand."

"I think some of my putts were lucky. There were a few I pushed."

Reinhardt's 6-under round equaled the tournament record she and defending champion Jan Stephenson set last year.

Hayes was happy to get off the 6,279-yard par 73 Hillcrest Golf Course in Sun City West despite a sixth-place finish in last week's Arizona Copper Classic in Tucson.

Hayes and many of the golfers teeing off late had to battle gusty winds through the closing holes.

Hayes, at 3-under through 15 holes, had to sink a 6-foot putt on the 396-yard par-4 16th after using driver-driver and a sand wedge to the green.

Young, who credits an overall "improving game" to her performance Thursday, sandwiched five birdies between a bogey for her 69.

In a group at 70 — three strokes behind the leader — were Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Alice Miller, Chris Johnson, Clifford Ann Creed and Ayako Okamoto. Janet Alex, Bonnie Lauer, Deanie Brown, Nancy Rubin and Barbara Moxxesswere at 2-under-par 71.

Mavs not throwing in the towel

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Their record is only 12-61, but Dallas Coach Dick Motta likes the way the expansion Mavericks are finishing their first National Basketball Association season.

"I'm happy we're on an upbeat," said Motta after the Mavericks trimmed the Golden State Warriors 120-118 Thursday night. "This team has had a thousand opportunities to just play-out the rest of the season, but we're going to finish strong."

"I don't know how many games we're gonna win, but this will make our preparation for next fall much easier. And it will make our players' vacation a lot nicer."

Tom LaGarde converted a missed shot by teammate Jim Spanarkel into a three-point play with three seconds left to give Dallas its second straight victory and nullify a 45-point outburst by the Warriors' Purvis Short.

In other NBA games, the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Denver Nuggets 131-113. The Indiana Pacers edged the Washington Bullets 114-107 and the Los Angeles Lakers beat the San Diego Clippers 122-116.

Short hit 18 of 30 field goal attempts, including a pair of three-pointers, and made all seven of his foul shots in the highest scoring game of his career, but fouled out with 7:26 to play.

Golden State outscored Dallas 14-2 in 2:50 to take a 117-113 lead with 1:53 but was unable to hang on.

"Dallas just keeps coming after you," said Warriors Coach Al Attles. "They improve each time out. They must have our number because they've beaten us twice."

Spanarkel led the Mavericks with 26 points. Bill Robinson scored 22 and Brad Davis contributed 18 points and 14 assists.

Bucks 131, Nuggets 113
Mickey Johnson scored 12 of his 22 points in a 42-point third quarter as the Bucks dealt Denver its third straight loss. The Nuggets led 59-54 at halftime before being outscored 42-19 in the decisive third period.

Milwaukee outrebounded Denver 67-53 and shut down the Nuggets' running game.

"When you play bad defense you get outrun, and we were just awful on defense," said Nuggets Coach Doug Moe. "When the other team scores every time down the floor, you can't run because there are no rebounds. We can't outrun anybody if we don't play defense."

Pacers 114, Bullets 107
Washington fell 2½ games behind Chicago in their race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth as the Pacers pulled away with an 8-2 burst early in the fourth quarter. George McGinnis, back in the starting lineup because of an injury to Mike Bantom, led Indiana with 24 points.

Mize, Carter make hall of fame

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The only man ever to pitch consecutive no-hitters in the major leagues, Johnny Vander Meer, went virtually unnoticed as he leaned against the fence and watched the Cincinnati Reds whip through a brisk baseball workout.

He was no stranger, however, to an elderly Tampa resident.

"They're picking some forgotten old-timers for the Hall of Fame over at the airport hotel," said the man. "What are your chances, Johnny?"

Vander Meer frowned through his thick-lensed spectacles and grunted. "As far as I'm concerned, there'll never be a Hall of Fame until Ernie Lombardi is in it. There's a guy who ought to be in there. One of the best all-around catchers who ever lived."

In Lombardi's case, it looks grim.

The big, lumbering guy they called "Schnozz" because he had a monumental nose, probably will never make it.

Although he could knock the twine off a baseball, cut down baserunners with bullets from any base out of a squat position, "Schnozz" is one of those tragic guys who fickle fame leaves stranded at the post.

Lady Justice's scales were balanced belatedly in the case of "Big Cat" Johnny Mize and a pioneer of the Negro Leagues, Andrew (Rube) Foster, who were elected by the Veterans' Committee.

"I'd already given up," confessed Mize, the slugging first baseman whose career covered 15 seasons with the Cardinals, Giants, and Yankees. Foster, a throwback to the turn of the century, died in 1930, but his spirit lives every time a black man swings a bat or throws a strike. Rube helped open the gates.

Mize waited an agonizing 28 years. Poor Rube never got a chance to see Jackie Robinson break the colorline with the Dodgers.

Vander Meer does not regard himself as a Hall of Fame candidate, although in 1938 he pitched his consecutive no-hitters against the Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers, a record which many compare to DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak in 1941 and Lou Gehrig's "Iron Man" performance of playing in 2,130 straight games.

"Actually, I pitched 282-3 hitless innings," Vander Meer said. "I pitched the last seven innings hitless ball in a game before the Boston game and 32-3 after no-hitting Brooklyn."

"My stats (119 victories, 121 defeats) probably don't qualify me. But you can't say that about Lombardi. He was one of the best."

Lattany runs out of Walker's shadow

DETROIT (AP) — Overlooked in all the publicity centered around Herschel Walker, the University of Georgia's All-America football sensation and track standout, has been the performance of his teammate, Mel Lattany.

But Lattany, a member of the honorary 1980 U.S. Olympic Team and ranked fifth in the world in the 100-meter dash — behind indoor record holder Stanley Floyd, Olympic champion Allan Wells of Scotland, two-time Pan American Games champion Silvio Leonard of Cuba and James Sanford, rated No. 1 in 1979 — has been overshadowing Walker in the sprints, if not in fanfare, this year.

Going into the trials of tonight's NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at Joe Louis Arena, the fun-loving Lattany, a senior from Brunswick, Ga., had run two of the fastest sprint times of the year (6.09 seconds and 6.10) among the entrants in the 60-yard dash.

The fastest clocking (6.06) belonged to University of Houston sophomore Carl Lewis. But the trials and the quarterfinals of the 60 were to be held at the same time as the final of the long jump, in which Lewis is the defending champion.

With Lewis likely out of the 60, the experienced Lattany, the Southeastern Conference champion, was considered the favorite among a strong field that included Walker, fellow Olympian James Butler of Oklahoma State, SEC runnerup Calvin Smith of Alabama, Herkie Walls of Texas, freshman Rod Richardson of Texas A&M (who has run 6.09), 1980 NCAA runnerup Jerome Deal of Texas-El Paso, and LaMont

King of Arizona State.

The 60-yard dash semifinals and final will be held Saturday, along with the semifinals and final in the 60-yard high hurdles and nine other finals. Today's first final was the 35-pound weight throw, at Eastern Michigan University, with six finals scheduled tonight.

Texas-El Paso, with virtually the same team that won last year's championship with a record 76 points, is an overwhelming favorite to capture its sixth title in eight years.

The Miners, also winners of eight consecutive Western Athletic Conference Championships, were led by Tanzania's Suleiman Nyambui, winner of the mile and two-mile races each of the past two years, and Jamaica's Bert Cameron, who tied for first with Tennessee's Anthony Blair in the 440 in 1980.

Lamar Cardinals take revenge against Missouri, 71-67

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Back in December, the Missouri Tigers thrashed the Lamar Cardinals in the "Show Me Classic."

Thursday night, it was the Cardinals' turn to show the Tigers.

Getting revenge for a 92-70 rout in the holiday tournament, the Cardinals upset the Tigers 71-67 in the NCAA basketball tournament and headed for a second-round game of the Midwest playoffs Saturday.

"We wanted the game real bad," said Lamar Coach Pat Foster. "I think we had an advantage coming into the game with Missouri having beaten us as bad as they did the first time."

With center B.B. Davis of the Southland Conference champions in foul trouble, the Cardinals played at a deliberate pace most of the game. And it paid off.

"We had to get deliberate," said Foster. "We didn't feel we could run with Missouri. The first time we tried to run with them, they blew us out."

A 25-point performance by Mike Olliver led the Cardinals, who pulled off their second upset in as many years in the NCAA playoffs. Last season, they knocked off Pac-10 winner Oregon State in an early round. The Cardinals advanced to the second round Saturday against No. 4 Louisiana State.

In Thursday night's other Midwest game at Austin, Tex., 20th-ranked Arkansas held off upset-minded Mercer 73-67. Darrell Walker came off the bench to score 19 points for the Razorbacks, who advanced to a meeting Saturday with Louisville.

Atrocious free-throw shooting by the Razorbacks helped keep the 13-point underdog Bears in the game. Arkansas hit only 19-of-40 free throw attempts and Walker could hit just 3-for-13. But the Razorbacks just had too much depth for the Bears, who finished third in the Trans America Athletic Conference but won the postseason tournament.

In other tournament play, Linton Townes led James Madison on a nine-point run midway in the second half, and the Dukes held on to beat Georgetown 61-55 in the first round of the East Regionals at Providence, R.I. The victory sent the Dukes into a Saturday game with seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

Danny Ainge scored 21 points and Brigham Young University solved Princeton's deliberate offense in the second half to beat the Tigers 60-51 in the other first-round East game. The 16th-ranked Cougars will face 10th-ranked UCLA Saturday.

"It's not as big a surprise as some thing," said James Madison Coach Lou Campanelli of the upset. "I know a lot of people will pick up their newspapers tomorrow morning and be pretty surprised, but we thought all along that we could beat Georgetown."

"This is the best victory ever for our basketball program. To have the opportunity to compete against Notre Dame Saturday on television will be a tremendous thrill."

Tony Costner's 14 second-half points, including two free throws with three seconds left, rallied St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania to a 59-57 victory over Creighton in NCAA Midwest Regionals.

Costner finished with 18 points and John Smith added 20 for the Hawks in the game at the University of Dayton Arena. Kevin McKenna had 18 points for Creighton and George Morrow added 17.

St. Joseph's, the East Coast Conference champion, moved into Saturday's second round game against DePaul.

"Tony in a quiet way has had as productive a season as any freshman out there," said St. Joseph's Coach Jym Lynman of Costner. "We have come from behind to win several games and the big fellow has played an important part in all of them."

Albert King scored 25 points to lead Maryland to a come-from-behind 81-69 victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga in the night's second game. The Terps, of the Atlantic Coast Conference, will meet No. 9 Indiana Saturday.

Held in check most of the way, Rolando Blackman put Kansas State ahead to stay with 2:19 remaining as the Wildcats rallied for a 64-60 victory over the University of San Francisco in the West Regionals at Los Angeles. Randy Reed led the Wildcats with 24 points.

The Wildcats moved into Saturday's second round against second-ranked Oregon State.

"I never got loose during the whole game," said Blackman, who finished with just eight points. "In fact, I never even got into the game. My last four points were just a matter of being at the right place at the right time."

Kansas State Coach Jack Hartman, whose team trailed by as many as 12 points early in the second half, praised the Dons of the West Coast Athletic Conference, calling them "a very fine and talented team."

"I feel very good to have won," said Hartman.

Astros edge Blue jays, 3-2

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Danny Heep doubled to center to drive in two runs in the sixth inning Thursday as the Houston Astros came from behind to defeat the Toronto Blue Jays, 3-2, in the opening spring game for both teams.

Heep's drive off loser Joe McLaughlin followed a walk to Scott Louck and a single by Tom Wiedenbauer.

Don Sutton, the former Los Angeles Dodger who signed a $2.85 to $3.15 million free agent with the Astros last winter, started for Houston, allowing two runs on four hits and striking out three and walking two in three innings.

Holy Cross nips Southern Miss

By The Associated Press

Holy Cross, Alabama, Temple and Connecticut began their march toward the National Invitation Tournament title the hard way — posting first-round victories on the road.

Reserve forward Dave Mulquin took a pass from Ed Thurman and sank a 10-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer Thursday night as Holy Cross nipped Southern Mississippi 56-54. In another close game, Alabama reeled off the first six points of the overtime period and defeated St. John's 73-69.

Guard Keith Parham scored 25 points to lead Temple to a 90-82 decision over Clemson. Bob Dulin's 16 points led five Connecticut players in double figures as the Huskies topped South Florida 65-55.

In other first-round games Thursday night, Michigan beat Duquesne 74-58. Purdue topped Rhode Island 84-58 and Duke defeated North Carolina A&T 79-69.

Those winners join Georgia, Toledo, Minnesota, South Alabama, Texas-El Paso and Dayton in the second round. The remaining spots will be filled tonight with the final three first-round games: Marquette, 20-10, at Syracuse, 18-11; Penn, 20-7, at West Virginia, 20-8, and Pan American, 18-10, at Tulsa, 21-7.

Southern Mississippi's Eddie Jiles had tied the score at 54-54 with a free throw with 23 seconds left before Thurman set up Mulquin's game-winning shot for Holy Cross.

"I was thinking, 'Get loose, throw it up soft,'" said Mulquin, who was carried off the court on the shoulders of his Holy Cross teammates after his clutch basket.

Holy Cross, 20-9, will face the Marquette-Syracuse winner in the second round.

Wayne McKay's basket for St. John's with 52 seconds left sent the game into overtime, but baskets by Mike Davis and Ken Johnson and two free throws by Eddie Adams at the start of the extra period put Alabama in command.

David Russell of St. John's led all scorers with 25 points but was held to just six after halftime. Eddie Phillips had 17 points for Alabama, 18-10, which next plays Duke.

"Once we got into the overtime I insisted that we wait for good shots," said Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson. "I told our kids to be patient, run our offense and let them foul us — and that's what happened."

Temple, 20-7, turned back two second-half rallies to beat Clemson despite 34 points by the Tigers' Larry Nance. Temple moves into a second-round match against the winner of tonight's Penn.-West Virginia first-round game.

Connecticut, 20-8, went without scoring for eight minutes of the second half but still had enough to beat South Florida and advance to a second-round game against Minnesota.

Mike McGee, the Big Ten Conference's all-time leading scorer, posted 20 of his game-high 26 points in the second half as Michigan beat Duquesne.

"McGee does the best job of anyone I've seen in leaving the defensive end to get downcourt," said Duquesne Coach Mike Rice. "You can't let him get behind you because if he gets free, he has no hesitation about shooting."

Purdue outscored Rhode Island 19-0 from the foul line in the first half to take a 32-22 lead, stretched that advantage to 17 points shortly after intermission and coasted past the Rams. Keith Edmonson scored 27 points. Drake Morris 20 and Russell Cross 15 for the Boilermakers, 18-10, who will face Dayton in the second round.

In 1927 the New York Yankees, known as "Murderers Row," had a team batting average of .307 and an all-time record slugging percentage of .489.

MIAMI (AP) — Home cooking makes a difference, said Ray Floyd.

"It's like a homecourt advantage in basketball," the veteran Floyd said after posting a 6-under-par 66 that gave him a share of the first-round lead in the $250,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

"You can sleep in your own bed, eat home cooking, have a lot of good people out there rooting for you," said Floyd, whose home is only a few miles away from the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club where Floyd beat Jack Nicklaus for this title a year ago.

"There's got to be something to it," Floyd said. "I was born and raised in North Carolina and I won all the tournaments in that state before I moved down here."

Floyd, who counts the Masters and PGA among his 12 Tour titles, shared the first-round lead with Australian David Graham, like Floyd a former PGA champion, and Dr. Gil Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist.

Keith Fergus was alone at 67.

The group at 68 was headed by Lanny Wadkins, who scored two eagles on the front nine in the warm, sunny weather. Also at that figure were Tom Weiskopf, Hale Irwin, Fuzzy Zoeller, Leonard Thompson, David Edwards, Bob Murphy and Dan Pohl.

Tom Kite shot a 69 and kept alive his chances of obtaining one of the biggest prizes in the history of the game. Kite won last week's Inverrary Classic. A special prize of $500,000 has been established for any player able to sweep Inverrary. Doral and next week's Tournament Players Championship, with $250,000 to a man winning two of them in a row or $100,000 to the winner of the first and third.

South African Gary Player opened his 25th American campaign with a 70. Seve Ballesteros of Spain, the current Masters champ, matched par 72 despite a triple bogey-7 from the water on the 18th.

Nicklaus, a playoff loser in this event a year ago and a runner-up last year, could do no better than a 74 that left him far back in the pack and facing the need for improvement Friday if he is to qualify for the final two rounds.

"The course is in too good shape to shoot 74," Nicklaus said. "I hit the ball reasonably well and the putting wasn't that bad. I just didn't make anything."

Bruce Lietzke, winner of the Bob Hope and San Diego events earlier this year, shot a 73 that stopped his streak of rounds at par or better at 22.

Floyd played his back nine in 32 and said he had a "good, solid round. I'm proud of it."

"Coming back, defending, you often don't do as well as you'd like. This was a good start."

Morgan bolted into a share of the top spot with a string of three birdies beginning on the 13th, where he holed a 45-foot sand shot. He dropped putts in the 8-10 foot range on the next two, completing the three holes in eight strokes with two putts.

Southern wins

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Jackie Jackson scored 32 points and grabbed 13 rebounds Thursday to lead Southern University to a 66-55 victory over Wayland Baptist College in the quarterfinals of the Southwest Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Region IV basketball tournament.

Southern fell behind by as many as eight points in the first half, but Jackson hit three jump shots to tie the score 16-16 with 6:10 left in the first half.

The Lady Jags managed a 28-25 halftime lead and the Flying Queens never got closer in the rest of the game.

Pampa gymnasts win local meet

Kim Kaddatz, Christa West and Kristal Mills of the Dust Devils won all-around honors in a Class IV local meet last weekend at Gymnastics of Pampa.

Miss Kaddatz, competing in the 12-14 division, won both the beam and floor exercises. Others placing for the Dust Devils were Serina Clinkingbeard, second, and DeAnn Ingram, third.

Miss Mills won the beam and floor exercises in the 9-11 age group. Teammates who placed were Tracy Medley, seventh; Dori Kidwell, third and Suzy Wheeler, fifth.

Miss West won the bars, beam and floor exercises in the 7-8 division.

Other teams competing in the local meet were O-Jays of Amarillo, T-N-T and Dee's Dance.
