Santa's Plane Is Ready For Trip

Glistening in the first rays of the morning sun, like some mammoth silver-tipped bird, "The Spirit of Christmas," a huge, tri-motored plane, Wednesday will turn its nose south and the long flight from the land of the frozen wastes at the North Pole will be underway.

At the controls of the huge air liner Santa Claus himself will be seated, a smile of contentment wrinkling the corners of his mouth as he visualizes to himself the joy his visit will bring to the millions and millions of kiddies throughout the world. Just a week from the time of his departure the merry old gentleman will land "The Spirit of Christmas" on the field of the Lubbock airport for a brief stay in this city with youngsters who will be gathered from all parts of the South Plains.

Only a few hours yet remain in which to complete packing of the large ship with hundreds of pounds

Congress Hears Message From President

HOOVER URGES MEASURES TO AID PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Poised for immediate action, Congress today received from President Hoover recommendation that unemployment and drought relief legislation be given priority.

The annual Presidential message was read in the House, and the membership listening attentively to the administration's program for prompt relief and disposal of unfinished business, including the controversial Muscle Shoals bill.

Authority to make increased temporary advances for Federal road aid was asked by the President, together with a request for $150,000,000 to expedite construction and provide work.

Expenditure Noted "Such action," the President said, "will imply an expenditure of over $500,000,000 during the next twelve months."

Republicans and Democrats, already pledged to a bi-partisan emergency relief program by their leaders, vied with one another in putting forward measures to carry it into effect.

Senator Glenn, Republican, Illinois, introduced a measure to create immediately a $150,000,000 emergency fund to be used to accelerate the construction of public works and a surplus of $100,000,000, heretofore authorized by Congress.

No figure was mentioned in connection with drought relief, but Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the Democratic leader, has prepared a bill, bearing Republican support, which calls for a $50,000,000 loan fund.

Deficit Is Foreseen The Chief Executive foresaw a deficit of $180,000,000 for the current fiscal year and a surplus of only $30,000,000 next year, even with discontinuance of the one percent tax reduction on 1929 incomes.

"I can not emphasize too strongly the absolute necessity to defer such plans for increasing the government expenditures," he wrote.

"Rigid economy," he said, "is necessary, he said, if an increase in taxes is to be avoided."

He praised the London Naval treaty and said that during the past year our relations with foreign countries have been maintained upon a high basis of cordiality and good-will."

Pilot's Death Results In Invention To Save Billion Dollars Each Year In Plane Operation; Hawks To Test

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP)—Out of the death of an airplane pilot in 1928 has come a device which its inventor claims will eliminate carbon monoxide fumes from gasoline engine bills and save more than $1,000,000,000 annually in the nation's fuel bills.

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson, chief engineer for Thomas A. Edison from 1909 to 1918 and originator of the "Klaxon" and the Acousticon, demonstrated the invention yesterday before Captain Frank M. Hawk's flying speed king, and others.

Called "Moto-Vita" The instrument, known as the "Moto-Vita," was developed primarily to increase the efficiency and flight range of airplanes at the expense of the accidental death of Dr. Hutchinson's son, Harold, an airplane pilot. It employs the principle of catalysis to prevent the waste of fuel through improper carburetion and imperfect combustion.

The "Moto-Vita," as exhibited by the inventor, weighs about a pound and a half and can be produced at a normal cost. It consists of a thermo-couple bridge of platinum and nickel wires so attached to the motor that the gases constantly pass over it, recording automatically the percentage of unburned gases escaping and enabling the driver to increase the quantity of air in the fuel mixture.

DAVIS OK'D BY SENATE

WETS TO OPEN EARLY ATTACK ON DRY LAW

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—The House of Representatives today opened an aggressive campaign for modification or repeal, starting at this session, but with the next Congress principally in mind. In that group, which meets next year, the wets are confident they will have superior strength.

The proposition of modification or repeal, however, contained the wide alternative, which has made difficult in the past the forming of a strong wet coalition. The variety of methods proposed in the new bills reflected anew some of the differences existing in the minds of the wet and moist members.

Representative McLeod, Republican, Michigan, was author of a new proposal for amending the constitution to legalize the manufacture of liquor for "use in homes and places of abode." He also sought a national referendum on the Eighteenth amendment.

This was the objective of the resolution offered by Representative Andrew, Republican, Massachusetts, who proposed allowing the states seven years for ratification by conventions.

Federal legalization of four percent beer and ten per cent wines and cider was advocated by Representative

NYE LOSES IN ATTEMPT TO DENY OATH

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Senator Reed of Pennsylvania gained his seat in the Senate today over a protest from the Campaign Funds Investigating committee.

A motion by Chairman Nye of the investigating committee to deny the oath to Davis was rejected by 58 to 27.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania had objected to Nye's request that Davis step aside and insisted that "the rights of the Senator-elect and of the State be observed." Nye then presented the resolution to deny the oath to Davis.

Reed countered by insisting that the resolution lie over a day but Vice-President Curtis upheld Nye. The roll call followed.

Nye submitted a special report which said it was "quite apparent from information before the committee that the total advance of $600,000 was expended in support of the Brown-Davis ticket. Francis Shunk Brown was the gubernatorial candidate and was defeated by Clifford Pinchot for the nomination.

The report noted the "right in the Republic primary campaign in Pennsylvania was in the main a battle between candidates for governor," and said money raised for the Brown-Davis campaign committee "was without a doubt principally available because of the gubernatorial fight."

The combined expenditures of Mr. Davis and the four Brown-Davis committees was placed at $368,962, but the committee said it had learned within the last few days that further sums were spent, bringing the total to above $600,000. Davis was said to have spent only $10,807 personally in the primary.

The Nye committee intends soon to report on expenditures in behalf of Senatorial candidates in those states where the successful candidate is just beginning service. The states are New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky, Kansas and Wyoming.

LUBBOCK COUNTY WOMEN BLAST 'HARD TIMES' TALK WITH BIG PROFITS FROM GARDENING AND CANNING, AGENT SAYS

Even though some pessimists persist in talking hard times, Lubbock county farm women are providing against just such conditions and they are seeing to it that the farm family will get plenty to eat, according to a report issued this morning by Miss Stockton, Lubbock county home demonstration agent.

Mrs. E. R. Slater, of the Union community, is the outstanding Lubbock county gardener for the year, according to Miss Stockton. Mrs. Slater has cleared more than $400 on her garden and has a pantry which, after all expenses have been subtracted, is worth $548.02. She has canned 1,507 quarts of food, 1,377 of which were canned from her one acre garden, a half of which is irrigated. Included in the list are 266 quarts leafy vegetables, 116 quarts tomatoes, 497 quarts other vegetables, 169 quarts pickles and relishes, 176 quarts preserves and jellies. In addition Mrs. Slater has cured 250 pounds of meat and expects to cure more. She has salted 88 quarts of meat and 180 quarts of fruit.

Profits from this one garden are equal to those derived from 65 acres of cotton land. This would not include cost of producing cotton but just what it would bring on the market at present prices.

Another Does Well Mrs. M. T. Askew, of the Wolf-Bath community, also has made quite an enviable record from a one-quarter acre garden, a total of 2,865 pounds of vegetables being taken from it. A profit of $232.25

Visiting YWCA Secretaries Are Introduced By Two Clubs At Tech College

Guests At Reception Hear Of Tagore And Gandhi In Talk Given By Visitor

Eighty guests attended a reception in the home management house on the Texas Technological college campus Monday evening, which was given by members of the Young Women's Christian association in honor of Misses Winifred Wyal and Fern Babcock.

Miss Wyal, who is a national executive of the Y. W. C. A. and Miss Babcock, secretary in the Southwest region, are visiting on the campus in the interest of their work.

Guests were met at the door by Miss Geraldine Clewell, president of the college Y. W. C. A., Miss Orena McClellan, president of the Young Women's Christian association, and by Miss Jo Wilder, Y. secretary, who presented them to the guests of honor.

Tells of Indians
Miss Wyal, who spent several months recently traveling in India, told the girls of the life and work of Mahatma Gandhi and described the home and character of the poet and artist, Tagore.

A talk on industrial groups which are held each summer in Houston under her sponsorship, was made by Miss Babcock and Miss Wilder gave a reading.

An informal half-hour of conversation followed the talks and the guests were served light refreshments.

This evening, between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock, members of the Las Leales club will give a reception honoring new members in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Adcock at 2601 19th street.

Views Are Different
English and American students have widely different views on many subjects, including their manner of dress, political interests and standards of living, Miss Wyal told a Journal reporter Monday.

The executive has studied college life in England and on the Continent and declares that, while American students are more care-free and attractive in dress than those abroad, they are not so interested in a study of the affairs of their country as are the English scholars.

She believes that English students are more interested in the political affairs of their country than Americans are and that American young women are much more interested in dress.

Have Sense of Value
Many English girls wear little hose almost exclusively to classes and are likely to wear cotton prints, although the English girl has a better sense of color value than her American sister, Miss Wyal said.

Their clothing is more likely to be suited to the occasion, she believes. "I think a Y. W. C. A. is necessary on a college campus," she declared. "One of the chief purposes of such an organization as I see it is to stimulate thought among the girls."

The secretaries attempt to make thinking a popular indoor sport and try to create activities which enlarge the student's horizon," she continued.

Mrs. J. B. Jackson Has Party for Son

On Entertaining In The Chateau

Two of LeLong's models for wear while being entertained in the country.

BY LUCIEN LE LONG
Special Cable to Central Press PARIS

IF CHATEAU life in France is not so important as it was in the eighteenth century, it is at least as its role to play in modern life. Modified somewhat, both by the introduction of modern comfort and by the greater ease of travel, it still retains something of the character of life in older times. There is still that mixture of fashionable life and the pleasures of the country, the real country existence, entirely different from the artificial pastimes of watering places.

Shooting, fishing, especially the fishing of those specimen morsels called carps, which are a sort of crayfish, wild duck shooting, long walks in woods or fields, these are the preoccupations of the hostess and her guests during the daytime. This sort of life adds luster to eyes fatigued by city existence, and freshness to a tired complexion, and puts everyone in a good humor for the entertainments of the evening, which are really elegant.

One must have participated at the dinners given at Valliere, at Vermeil, or at Bois-Boudran, to understand how elegant chateau life can be in France, and how well it compares with the well known hospitality of such English houses as Blenheim.

The invitation is usually for eight days, and includes besides car and chauffeur, considerable baggage and the indispensable personal maid. Every woman will take with her at least four sports costumes, as many afternoon frocks, and five or six evening gowns, without counting the numerous blouses, sweaters, extra jackets and coats, both heavy and light, which will be needed, according to the weather. Also the fashionable woman is never separated from her furs, and she will take her own rug, which at tea-time, if the room be chilly, she will throw over her feet as she lies on a chaise-longue. It will be a great source of joy to the richer chancellis, and she never travels without it. These old-fashioned cordials to their welcome than modern residences, soon give the guest a feeling of being at home. Letters are distributed, for example, and gathered for the mail at fixed hours.

The program for the next day is always arranged at tea-time, so that each one may know what is planned, and be ready for it. The guests leave the house about nine in the morning, for shooting or fishing. The hostess are ready in the courtyard, while a hostess of all sorts attend those who have decided to try the river. The young and pretty women who carry fishing rods are dressed in charming costumes of two tones of wool jersey, caps of the same on their heads, and high-laced boots with heavy soles on their feet. Those who accompany the "guns" wear tweeds of the color of the soil, or if it is wet, a raincoat closely fitted at the neck, with a felt hat that has a brim that can be turned up or down.

Tea, which brings every one together in the library, offers a curious mélange of costumes. Those who have been out do not trouble to change, those who have not left the house are in afternoon frocks. Here is no special rule for this hour. But in the evening the story is different. In the passages, on the stairs, valets and maids run about, and women appear in splendid toilettes, while the men are in dinner jackets. The dinner, in the great dining room, is served on plates, and the light of hundreds of candles, which, with the tapestries on the walls, give the room an old-world air that is delightful.

For these dinners, magnificent gowns and gorgeous jewels are authorized. Nothing is considered too good for these autumnal reunions, though the chateleine herself usually wears something quite simple, in order to give value to the gowns of her guests. She wears the fewest possible jewels, and toilettes that keep an air of distinguished simplicity.

It is not at all uncommon for a dressmaker to receive an order from one of these chateaux for a gown to be delivered in forty-eight hours. This is when royalty is expected, and the couturier from Paris is unhesitatingly summoned when there is a head-dress of importance, or the favorite forms of entertainment.

EXPANSION OF GREAT LAKES FLYING SEEN AS NEXT MOVE IN U. S. AVIATION; TRANSPORTATION RIVALRY IN CLOUDS

Over the Great Lakes, airplane companies now are rivals for trade. A Detroit bound plane is taking off from downtown Cleveland (center). Map shows operating lines and proposed routes. The machine used (below) is an amphibian.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Rivalry for transportation preference on the shores and waters of the historic Great Lakes has been intensified in the air. Announcement has just been made by the Thompson aeronautical company that it will extend its operations across Lake Michigan to Milwaukee. This expansion, intended for next spring, will bring the Thompson people into direct competition with the Kohler aviation corporation, which now carries passengers, express and mail across the lake to Grand Rapids and Detroit.

PLAN TERRACING SCHOOL MULESHOE, Dec. 2.—Bailey county farmers living in this section of the county will attend a terracing school here December 11, Fred Reynolds, county agent, announces. Texas A. and M. officials and others will attend and aid in the demonstration of machinery for terracing land.

HICKS IS RETURNED MULESHOE, Dec. 2.—(Special)—Rev. W. B. Hicks, who recently completed three years as pastor of the Muleshoe M. E. church, will serve the church for the fourth year. He was returned on recommendation of Bishop H. A. Boaz.

It has been persistently rumored that the Thompson company contemplated operating between Milwaukee and Chicago, and from Cleveland to Buffalo and New York with all routes over water. The company officials, however have not given strength to these reports. While competition among overland airplane companies for business of Great Lakes cities has been active overwater routes have been exclusive. The Milwaukee-Muskegon-Grand Rapids air link is important in fast transportation between the eastern seaboard and the northwest. At Milwaukee there are both rail and air connections to St. Paul, Minneapolis and the Pacific Northwest. Grand Rapids ties in with Eastern trunk lines. The Thompson Co. was first on the Great Lakes with airplanes, establishing its Detroit-Cleveland route in May, 1929. Amphibians have been used. The company uses Cyclone-powered Keystone Loening flying from downtown Detroit to Cleveland in 55 minutes. The Kohler company established its Lake Michigan route in September, 1929. It uses Keystone Loening amphibians, also owned with Wright cyclones. At both Milwaukee and Grand Rapids planes pull up within a few hundred feet of connecting trains.

AVIATRIX FOUND SAFE ON ISLAND

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrice, for whom widespread search was made after she failed to arrive in Miami, Fla., Friday on a flight from Havana, today told of being forced down on a remote link in the Bahamas island chain by adverse weather, which she said tossed her far off her projected course. She said compass failure and gasoline shortage also were contributing causes to her descent on Andros Island Friday. Andros Island is approximately 125 miles south by east of Miami and search was not made in that vicinity because aviators, recalling a 30-mile east wind Friday, had expressed belief that her re-conditioned plane would be blown westward.

CHAPTER XXXIV

In the excited circle of Princeton players, Terry alone kept his head. Here was the psychological moment, score six to three. A drop-kick would tie it up, a touchdown win the game. He looked up at the low, menacing dark clouds. No scoring after the rain started.

"Well, let's go. Signals!"

Place kick formation! Dan Hart left his position at tackle and Warwick replaced him in the line. Terry dropped to the ground on one knee, both hands extended for the ball.

Before Sonny passed it, Terry got up and turned to Hart. "Not back far enough," he said. "Kick to the right. Stiff wind, you know. Now make it good!"

Dan Hart poised himself for the kick. Terry dropped to one knee, Sonny braced to make the long accurate pass, and the Yale line prepared for the charge.

Down came the rain. Dark, heavy clouds opened up. A few big drops splattered on Terry's hands, on his leather helmet and padded shoulders.

"Ah, here comes the rain!" gloated Red.

It swept the field in sheets, as if the heavens suddenly emptied of water. Down it came, straight and heavy, chilling players to the bone; but Terry kept his head up. He was going to pull the unexpected play just the same.

Eleven men on the Yale team prepared for a kick. What else could be used at this point? The rain reassured them. Also, Terry was too careful in getting Dan Hart in the right position for any tricks.

The ball sped back into the poised, waiting hands of Terry Malone. Yale forwards rushed through, so did the ends and backfield men. Running wide of charging Yale men, he averted toward the goal, with Dan Hart spilling a tackler, but two others came at Terry. He stopped, dodging one and the other Yale man missed his knees. Red Thomas, either accidently or on purpose, feigned to take out a Yale man but crashed against Terry, stopped him dead. A second later Terry was hit from all sides and slammed on the ground, ten yards from the goal line.

Terry was severely jolted by the tackle and his left arm pounded in agony. He was winded, bruised, but more than that, a sense of futility settled over him when he heard Red's trumpeting voice. "Sorry I crashed into you, Terry. But we've got another first down. Ten yards to take it over."

The rain came down in torrents, drenching the huddled group of Princeton players waiting for the signal.

Terry called for Red to take it through the strong side tackle, through Dan Hart.

The players leaped back into formation, the ball twisted toward Red Thomas, a wet ball and clammy now. Red tucked the slimy pigskin under his arm and with shoulders low and legs high, came tearing through a hole opened by Hart. He made five yards.

"Goah, that guy is all knees," said the Yale full-back, who made the tackle. "Nothing but knees. You get him you fellows in the line. I'm sick of having those knees in my face."

With five yards to go, Terry had to think fast. Rain slowed up the field and yet he made it an absolute rule not to send plays at the center of the line at that point. When a team as strong as Yale is fighting to hold ground, most of its strength is almost sure to be massed in the center of the line. Why handicap his team by hammering at the strongest point and using a play expected by your opponents?

He planned to use any play that would gain. But the rain worried him and the field was suddenly slippery. Red, king of mudholes was his best bet. But the Yale line, settled down to a mud battle, stopped all the Tiger backs until Yale had possession of the ball.

Yale did the only thing they could; punted out of danger. Princeton, playing for a break, punted back. Both teams engaging in a punting duel and waited for a fumble.

The play was not spectacular. Mud, the great leveler, had stopped all that. It was push and hammer and push and hammer, with the two elevens cursing and panting between each other's twenty yard line. Water-logged, cove-plastered players floundered around midfield.

"Like the day we played Groton," said Bud to his twin, "Remember?"

"That was a beautiful summer day compared to this," replied his brother, caked and matted with mud. "This is terrible. I've got mud in my ears and my eyes—oh, what a rotten way to spend an afternoon. And for what?"

"You got a nice big Y on a nice big blue sweater, Frank, something to show your grandchildren. Been playing a great game, today, my dear brother."

"Oh, I usually go well against these small time colleges," grinned his brother, thumbing his nose. "That will hold you for awhile."

As usual, Bud caught his brother off balance on the next play and Terry hit the line right between the guard and Bud's brother, skidded on the mud for seven yards and a rare first down. He got up and gave Bud a belt on the shoulder.

"That's the stuff, Bud. Keep going."

The game was reduced to a battle royal in the mud and rain. It was give and take. No dirty football here; each man had to do his job. No thrilling runs now. The football field was a checker board. A player moved; he was covered.

But Princeton, the underdog, still hammered, fierce, hard, determined, at the Yale line that held like a rock. After three and a half periods of play, Chuck Drake, the doughty Yale leader, dropped on the muddy field, gasping for breath, his body too tired to move. Time was called. A substitute splashed across the field and the Yale captain, reluctant to quit, was called off the field.

"So long, Chuck," cried Dan Hart, slapping his shoulder. "Had a very nice time and you must come to my party some time. Write when you get work."

The Yale captain looked back, grinned. "You win, Dan."

"I don't know," replied Hart. "I'd love to be going to the showers myself." He stared at the broad, retreating back. "He's the toughest baby I've ever met. Glad I don't have to play against that guy again."

The cheering died down, with little patches of sound breaking out here and there in the monotony of rain. Up in the Princeton stands, a shrill, feminine voice yelled over and over, "Come in outa the rain, you saps. You'll get you feet wet!"

With the ball at midfield, Terry tried of punting and followed the suggestion of Bud Gordon.

"Put it through me, Terry," he cried in the huddle. "I'm pushing that brother of mine all over the lot."

Leaping into position, Bud remarked to his twin, "Wonder if Aunt Fanny and Cousin Herbert brought their rubbers and rain-coats—"

Bud crashed into his brother, tumbled him in the mud. Red Thomas slipped and stumbled through for a fifteen yard gain. It was too much for the Yale twin.

Raging against the wet field, filled by his goal-getting brother, Frank lifted his mud-soaked body, scrambled toward Bud. He pushed a muddy fist in his face.

A virile young man, Bud instinctively hit back, swinging away with both fists. Unable to tell one from the other in mud-soaked tops, the referee banished both from the game. As Bud went scowling toward the Princeton sidelines, his brother pursued him. "Tell Aunt Fanny to take that," he cried hitting Bud on the jaw, "and here's one for Cousin Herbert." Again officials separated the fighting twins and substitutes replaced them. Other players were sent in. Dick Ruane, refreshed and excited, relieved the Yale quarter-back.

Here was Terry's break. On the next play, he ordered a kick, directed at Dick Ruane. Of course he fumbled and his confidence was killed. ### REVIEW OF FOREIGN NEWS OF WEEK

(By The Associated Press)

The tribunals of the French revolution, where laborers condemned the hated aristocrats and the designation "citizen" was the only assurance of safety, are paralleled in the land of the Soviets.

One of the strangest cases in history began last week in Moscow. Eight engineers, technicians and officials of the new regime charged with conspiring to overthrow the proletarian dictatorship, went on trial for their lives.

Four judges, dressed informally and even with soft shirts, lolled on the bench and smoked cigarettes.

Movie Cameras Gird

High-powered electric lights illuminated the famous old ballroom of the "House of Columns" as motion picture cameras ground and still cameras clicked. The prisoners told their stories over a microphone that the testimony might go all over the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Outside, thousands paraded or stamped in the snow, demanding execution of the engineers.

The eight men, it was generally agreed, talked their lives away. They confessed to all charges and admitted that their acts were heinous. They apparently invited death sentences and made no defense whatever.

Charges Brought Out

As the charges put it, the eight men conspired with anti-Communists in other countries and with certain French and British interests to bring about overthrow of the Soviet government. The French and British general staffs were mentioned, as were Raymond Poincaré and Aristide Briand of France, Sir Henri Deterding and "Colonel Lawrence" of England. The plot was said to involve intervention by Polish and Rumanian forces, aided by white Russian emigrants. After the French had protested at the mention of Poincaré the court ruled that no more testimony involving other nations would be heard in open court.

When the French and British parliaments convened this fall it was the general assumption that the respective governments would have plenty of stiff battles to endure their cold winter days. They have had them.

Andre Tardieu's French government, in fact, went through three votes of confidence in two days. He won the first one, based on a public works program, by 78 votes, but the next day his enemies opened up on the subject of recent bank failures.

The young Premier surprised the oppositionists by taking the offensive away from them and asking for a vote of confidence. He got it, but by only 14 votes—the smallest he has ever received. He demanded another immediately, and this time 291 oppositionists abstained. Had their votes been counted Tardieu would have had a majority of 38.

Enemies Are Gaining

His enemies are slowly gaining and there are predictions that Tardieu will resign. Most of the

URGE PAYMENT TO SOLDIERS

TEXAS VETS ASK FOR AID OF SOLONS ON SERVICE MONEY

(By The Associated Press)

BAIRD, Dec. 2.—Resolutions asking Texas Congressional representatives to support a bill for immediate payment of adjusted compensation service certificates for veterans of the World War were adopted here last night by 100 veterans of Callahan and adjoining counties.

R. C. Winters, Abilene, past state commander, explained that the compensation certificate was not a bonus, but was a debt due to soldiers in the same manner as the $1,600,000,000 paid to railroads after the war and the $2,000,000,000 paid contractors while soldiers rewards through the compensation certificates were due in twenty years.

BARBERS UNION, ATTENTION!

CHICAGO, Dec. 2. (AP)—On the straightaway the going was pretty well, but it was rather difficult to turn the corners. Myron Turnquist, 18, explained as they took him to a hospital, suffering from half a dozen cuts, inflicted when he attempted to shave himself with a butcher knife.

TEXAS TECH 12TH IN JUDGING SHOW

Reports received here late Monday by officials of Texas Tech reveal that the senior livestock judging team of the college placed twelfth among 22 teams of the United States and Canada in contests at the International Livestock show at Chicago.

The Tech team was led in individual honors by Colonel Sparkman who placed twenty-second in a field of 115 men.

The contest was won by Oklahoma A and M who received a bronze bull trophy which is to become property of the institution winning it three consecutive years. Kansas State college was second, Kentucky university third, Iowa State fourth and Nebraska fifth.

Texas A and M college finished behind the other Texas representatives, ranking fourteenth. Texas Tech placed sixth in hogs and eighth in cattle judging. The team now is en route to Lubbock.

Tech Does Well

A comparison of the ranking of the stock judging teams of Texas Technological college, Lubbock and Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college teams at the International Livestock show at Chicago, shows the South Plains school was ahead of the down state school in all classes.

Rankings of the teams in the several contests show:

Contest	Tech	A & M
Judging	12th	14th
Hogs	6th	19th
Cattle	8th	17th
Horses	14th	12th
Sheep	22nd	14th

Legion Lays Plans For More Members

Plans for the annual membership drive of the Allen Brothers post, American Legion, will be laid at a meeting of the committee appointed for that purpose, tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the local American Legion hall.

Members of the committee, which is headed by Tom Carter, follow: Tom Baber, Glen Burson, J. B. Jones, J. O. Grisham, J. C. Dunkin, W. G. Doss, C. M. Goff, L. A. Howard and Hamp Spiller.

VERDICT IS SUICIDE

FORT WORTH, Dec. 2. (AP)—A verdict of suicide was returned by a coroner here after the death of Mrs. J. W. Castles, 42, found dying in a department store. She had gone to the store to meet her husband, who was looking for work. A bottle bearing a poison label was found near the chair in which she was seated.

criticism revolves about the recent failure of the Oustric bank, connections with which have caused one of Tardieu's ministers and two under secretaries to resign. The Premier himself has not been splattered, but the fight is telling against his assailants.

In England the MacDonald labor government also has pulled through a number of questions of confidence, bolstered up by the liberals, but this group is restless and apparently only conferences having world-wide or empire ramifications have kept the laborites in thus far.

Election Is Feared

When the Five Power Naval parity was on the oppositionists were reluctant to turn the government out, as they were with the imperial conference recently concluded and the round table meeting on India now in session. In addition, all parties fear a general election at this time. Their campaign funds are low, and no one is any too confident of solving the country's economic problems by a magic formula.

All Europe was stricken last week by storms. Rivers rose and flooded fields and cities in Belgium, France, England, Wales, Ireland and Germany, while storms visited Switzerland and Austria. Suffering was acute in Belgium, where thousands of peasants were driven from their homes, and in Paris the river Seine rose, flooding great sections of lowlands.

MISSISSIPPI BECOMES PACK HORSE FOR FREIGHT AS HUGE BARGES HAUL LARGER TONNAGE; GOVERNMENT'S COMMERCE ON OLD MAN RIVER SHOWING BIG INCREASE

NEW ORLEANS, (AP)—Tanned by flood control measures, the mighty Mississippi is being trained rapidly by Uncle Sam to serve as a patient pack horse for commerce.

Through the Inland Waterways corporation and its chief, Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, the federal government is proving that the Mississippi properly managed can be the same economical common carrier as in its younger days.

No longer is General Ashburn's problem to get business for his barges. It is rather to select the kind of business that will pay the government the best return on its investment of $15,000,000 of public capital.

The recent investment of $3,500,000 of private funds in a barge line to operate between New Orleans and Cincinnati is considered by river men here as evidence that Uncle Sam has proved his case.

Summer shoaling in the upper river still is a problem, but the last Rivers and Harbors act of Congress provided funds with which to solve that difficulty.

The rapid rise of Mississippi-Warrior tonnage, which reached a peak in June, collapsed in July and August, due to the drought, which reduced water in the upper river to a point where navigation was almost at a standstill.

During June there came downstream to New Orleans 63,577 tons of freight, compared with 29,425 tons last year—a gain of more than 110 per cent.

Going upstream the gain for the same comparative months was not so great—44,891 tons compared to 42,477—a total of about 106,000 tons.

This compares with a May movement both ways of 96,900 tons and an April movement totaling 68,000 tons.

The bigger part of the downstream movement is grain, while most of the up-movement is sugar, both bulk commodities which lend themselves to cheap handling.

The movement of the Warrior section, operating between Mobile, Birmingham, Ala., and New Orleans, is chiefly coal and steel into New Orleans and sugar and canned goods out of New Orleans.

Off-river points, under the present ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission, benefit from the water-haul saving in proportion to their distance from the water terminal.

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Vaughn Today

Following her death here Sunday at her home, 1907 Avenue F, funeral services are being conducted this afternoon for Mrs. Luther Vaughn, 36, at Bynum-Morgan funeral chapel. Burial will be at Calvary.

Rev. C. J. McCarty, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, is officiating.

Mrs. Vaughn is survived by three sons, David, James and Raymond; four daughters, Leola, Minnie Joe, Mildred and Helen Vaughn, and a brother, Willie Jumper, of Lufkin.

Mexican Sentenced For Carrying 'Gat'

Charged with unlawfully carrying a pistol, Lauro Gonzales, Mexican, was convicted in Lubbock county court Monday and sentenced to thirty days in the county jail.

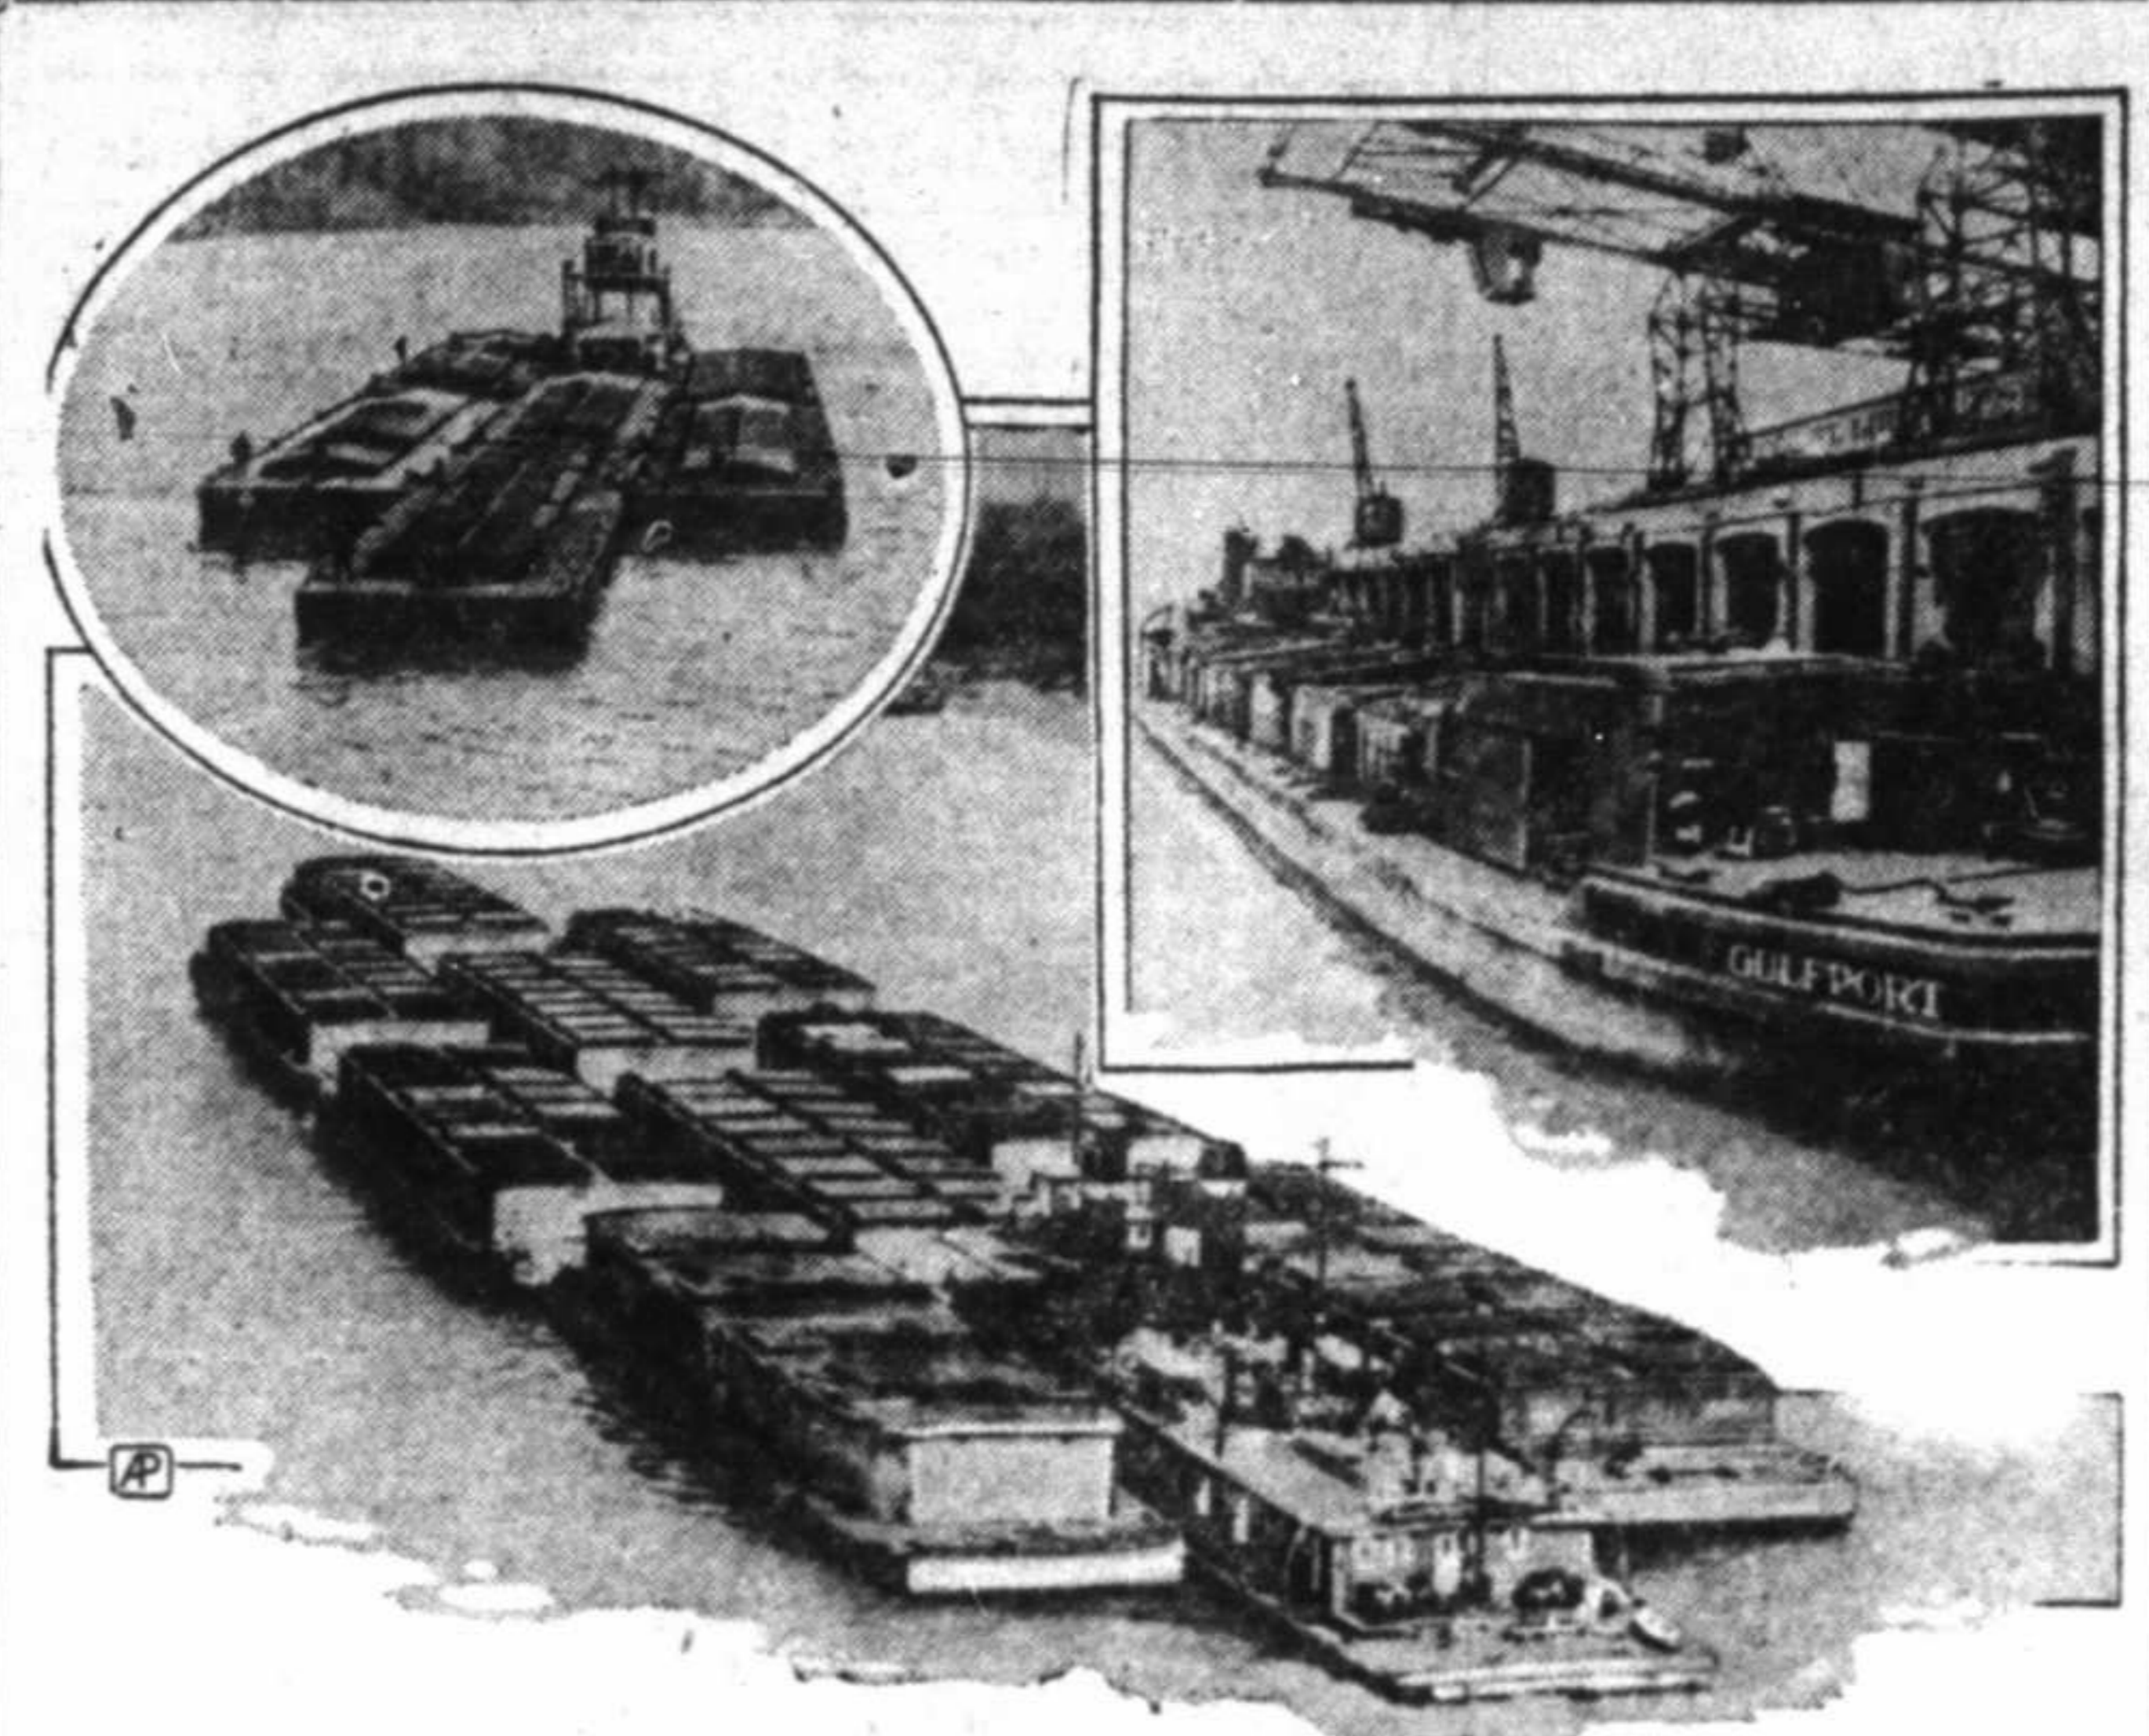

The Mexican was tried before Judge Robert H. Bean.

After charges of forgery had been filed against him in justice court at Slaton, J. B. Mancey was lodged in the county jail here late yesterday. County officers indicated that Mancey had forged several checks.

ROAD IS PRIZE

AUSTIN, Dec. 2. (AP)—A road leading north from Four Corners was held up by the State Highway commission today as a prize in a race between Stinnett and Borger. After hearing petitions from delegations from Stinnett and Borger that the road be routed through their cities, the Commission said yesterday it would be laid through the town which first raised its share of the cost. Originally the road was designated from Four Corners to Stinnett.

Sixty-three-year-old Dr. Thomas W. F. Gann, the explorer and archaeologist of London, was married recently to Miss Mary Wheeler, aged 27.

The government's freight business on the Mississippi is showing a big increase. Here is shown a towboat hauling nine barges near Memphis, and another (upper left) towing barges loaded with steel near Mobile, Ala. Loading barge at St. Louis also is shown (upper right).

PASSION PLAYERS DIVIDE $500,000 AS PROFITS MADE IN DRAMA SEASON; TOTAL OF 1,156 PERSONS ARE BENEFITTED

OBERAMMERGAU, Dec. 2. (AP)—With gross receipts of about $1,250,000, this year's Passion Play showed net profits of about $500,000. This sum has been divided among 1,156 persons.

Leading actors in the play drew about $250 each, and other helpers smaller sums, ranging down to $10 or $15 for each of the 300 youngsters with "walking on" parts. The play had 102 speaking parts.

The remuneration covered 79 performances and months of rehearsal; the musical part alone was rehearsed about 300 times prior to the first performance.

Old Jacob Rutz, Anton Lung's father-in-law, was the patriarch of the play. He has never missed a part in it since he was a child in 1850.
