BODIES OF LOST FLIERS FOUND

Defeated Texan Appeals To Kellogg In Election Contest

MEXICANS CAST 10,000 VOTES, SAYS HARDIN

Candidate Alleges Garner Won Congressional Seat By Outside Votes

PETITION IS FILED

Mexicans Given Alcoholic Drinks, Says Plea To Kellogg

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—Sid Hardin, superintendent of schools at Mission, defeated for the congressional nomination in the 15th district by the veteran John Gardner, ranking house Democrat at the July 28 Democratic primary has appealed to Secretary of State Kellogg to investigate the illegal voting of 10,000 Mexicans, it became known here today.

"The deciding factor was that of approximately 10,000 citizens of Mexico voting in our election," Mr. Hardin wrote to Secretary Kellogg, according to a letter made public by T. K. Erwin, former state representative, his chief counsel.

"As a candidate in that primary against Hon. John N. Garner I have filed a petition in the 38th district court of Texas at Uvalde, contesting the nomination of Congressman Garner.

"My purpose in writing you is to direct your attention to the fact that citizens of Mexico are voting illegally in elections in the United States and no doubt doing so without the knowledge of the Mexican officials."

He also asked that Secretary Kellogg use his influence to have returned to Texas jurisdiction such Mexican citizens as had voted illegally.

Claims Majority

In a letter to Frederick R. Lehlback, chairman of the congressional investigation committee, as made public by Mr. Irwin, Mr. Hardin asserted "I received a majority of the legitimate votes of the district but was defrauded of the nomination."

He demanded the committee "investigate and prosecute those responsible for the deplorable conditions existing in this congressional district."

Among the allegations which Mr. Hardin asked to be investigated were these:

"While there were less than 27,000 votes cast in said district, there were approximately 10,000 votes cast by persons who were not residents of the precincts or the county or the state of Texas or of the United States, but were in truth and in fact citizens of the republic of Mexico

Lake Michigan Dragged For Body of Youth

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. (AP)—Lake Michigan was dragged today for the body of Fred Rummler, sophomore at Cornell university, who was drowned yesterday when he attempted to swim to shore for help when the cat boat in which he was riding capsized.

Three other members of the party were saved by the coast guard, after they had clung to the sides of the overturned craft throughout the night.

Evidence Continues Paul Mitchell Trial

FORT DAVIS, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—State's witnesses giving circumstantial evidence against Paul Mitchell, 27, on trial for the slaying of Pat Murphy at Iraan, Texas, last September, were subjected to stern cross examination today.

Mitchell and his brother Dave were indicted after Murphy's body, the skull crushed, was found at the bottom of the Pecos river, Sept. 30, a heavy stone tied to the body.

Hambone's Meditations

Look Close—They'll Fool You!

Here's the first protograph that Herbert C. Hoover and Alfred E. Smith ever had taken together—and it was snapped at Glen Rock, Pa., just the other day. Sure the man on the left is Herbert C. Hoover and on the right is Alfred E. Smith—such are really their names, but neither of them is a presidential candidate. In honor of these two citizens, whose names oddly coincide with those of the candidates—even to the middle initials—the 300 residents of that village stages a big parade.

Handsome Male Model Announces He's Father of Famed 'Eugenics Baby'

By CORINNE RICH

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (US)—The self-styled father of New York's famous "eugenics baby" came to light in a big spectacular way today, declaring that he never did believe in eugenics babies anyhow.

Capt. Marc Michailovitch Medvedeff he is—former officer in the Russian navy, actor, wrestler, model for sculptors, physical culturist, 26 years old and very handsome.

To him, he says, the baby born to Mrs. Grace Mailhouse Burnham last January owes its paternity. He knows it is his baby because he recognized Mrs. Burnham's picture in the paper.

When Mrs. Burnham, a widow of apparent means and culture, announced the arrival of her baby, she would not give the name of the father but said she wanted the finest child possible to lavish her love on. She was denounced and commended from every corner of the country and the case stayed first page stuff for days.

Captain Medvedeff burst into the limelight today by saying that his connection with the Burnham baby would come out in court during the progress of his divorce suit filed against Sifera Kantrovitch Medvedeff.

And so the dark-eyed captain had his day with reporters and photographers. In the office of his lawyer, they grabbed him, and

ORIENT SALE IS PROTESTED

Sweetwater Interests File Intervention Plea

SWEETWATER, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—Possible legal action by owners of 35 shares of stock in the road loomed today after the sale of the Orient railway in West Texas to the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe system was approved by the Interstate Commerce commission.

R. C. Crane, representing Sweetwater stock owners in the original Orient system, said he had advised the I. C. C. of the forwarding of a petition of intervention, asking that rights of owners be protected, that their stock be purchased for fair value and that the commission issue no order until the plea was considered. A message was received by Crane from Charles D. Mahaffie, director of the Interstate Commerce commission, saying the order had been issued Saturday.

What course would be taken Orient owners here have not decided, and although they regard the sale as for the best interest of the road and West Texas, they want payment for their stock.

Terms of the sale offer no protection to these stockholders and we believe the commission is going beyond its bounds of authority in approving the sale of the entire system, when the action was brought in behalf of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad company and cannot, therefore, justly hold for the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway company, the Texas corporation," Crane said.

Petitioners are the heirs of men who in the early days of West Texas conceived plans for the Orient road and started the railroad.

Seattle Man Indicted In Houston Murder

HOUSTON, Aug. 29. (AP)—Frank Joe Foltin, who told Seattle police he had killed a man in Houston and later repudiated that statement, today was indicted for murder by the grand jury.

Syracuse Crowds Cheer Smith On His First Invasion of G.O.P. Lairs

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 29. (UP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith invaded strong Republican territory for the first time since he accepted the Democratic nomination for president when he arrived here tonight to become the principal figure at the New York state fair Thursday.

The governor and Mrs. Smith, however, received a regular Democratic welcome from a crowd of several hundred. The governor's route to his hotel was lined with cheering throngs.

Tonight Governor Smith attended the annual "farm dinner" given by Jerome D. Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse Post-Standard. It was seventh of these dinners at which Smith has been present and he was surrounded at the table largely by Republican farm leaders.

Smith made the visit as governor of New York rather than as a candidate for the office of president of the United States. There was, however, an atmosphere of presidential politics in the eager attention he received on all sides.

Thursday morning the governor again will delve into state politics when he attends the state Democratic committee meeting.

At Utica, Governor Smith posed for photographers. There was a call from the crowd for Mrs. Smith and she was given an enthusiastic ovation when she appeared.

Governor Smith will visit the fair grounds Thursday. If the weather is good he plans to address the crowd there, but declined to speak if it is rainy or damp because of the danger of injuring his throat.

During the ride from New York, Governor Smith rejected a proposal of one reporter that he take a few days for a trip to Wisconsin's lake region.

"Who do you know out there?" was the reply.

The governor plans to devote his attention to state affairs in Albany next week, he indicated.

League to Begin Law Codification in 1929

GENEVA, Aug. 29. (UP)—After four years of minute preparation the League of Nations expects in 1929 to begin at last the actual modification of international law.

Under the system of "progressive codification" which the league has adopted, this will be accomplished by a series of international conferences that will launch an international treaty on each subject that is found ripe for codification.

Wheat Crop Forecast At 610,000,000 Bushels

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—More than 610,000,000 bushels of winter wheat will be produced in the United States next year, the agricultural department predicted today. This will provide an exportable surplus, the department said.

Approximately 46,522,000 acres will be sown, it was estimated.

CROWDS ARRIVE TO HEAR 'JOE'S' NOTIFICATION

Vice Presidential Candidate Formally to Accept Task Tonight

BOWERS MAKES TALK

Hot Springs Adopts Gay Holiday Attire For Event

By RALPH H. TURNER

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 29. (UP)—"Our Joe," as the citizens of Arkansas proudly acclaim the Democratic candidate for vice president, has his great day Thursday and from every neck of the state the hosts are gathering to pay him honor in the greatest celebration Arkansas has ever held.

The occasion is the formal notification of Senator Joe T. Robinson,

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 29 (AP)—Senator Robinson's speech in Dallas next Monday, will be broadcast over a special Texas hookup of stations, according to a message received from the national Democratic executive committee in New York today. Arrangements for the broadcasting are being made by Jed C. Adams, national committeeman. The stations in the hookup will be: WBAP, Fort Worth; KRLD, Dallas; KPRC, Houston, WCAI, San Antonio.

of his nomination for vice president, and the senator's speech of acceptance, but to Arkansas, it is more than a political event—it is a great state wide fellowship gathering, a demonstration of good will toward the man who began as a small town lawyer, became a representative in the national congress, governor of the state, then running mate for Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Listen to Charles Ewel, a man of 70 or more, an admirer of Robinson since he first held political office. Ewel drove in from the Ozark hills today to attend the party and announced as follows:

"I've got 17 children and ten of them are going to vote for Joe Robinson. There's no doubt about how they'd vote anyway but if any of them didn't vote for Joe, I'd disinherit them. The other seven aren't old enough to vote."

Ceremony at Hotel

Ceremonies of notification and acceptance will be held in a beautiful natural setting typical of this country. The front veranda of the Hotel Arlington, spacious resort headquarters, has been extended to form the speaker's stand. In front of the hotel and below the speaker's stand are the rows of improvised seats but beyond them rises a mountain side which makes a natural

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 29. (AP)—Governor Paulen was forced today to cancel a trip to Parsons for a "Reed day" celebration in honor of Clyde M. Reed, Republican gubernatorial candidate. Bad weather caused the cancellation.

WHAT A LIFE

Man Proposes Death As Penalty For Drinking

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 29. (UP) A proposal that violation of the prohibition law be made an act of treason punishable by death before a firing squad of the United States army will be submitted for the $25,000 Will C. Durant prise by George J. Beaumont, of St. Louis.

All real and personal property of persons so executed would be confiscated and turned over to charity under Beaumont's plan.

SLAYER OF SON IS ARRAIGNED

State Attorneys to Ask Death Penalty

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. (US)—Shunned by his wife and daughter, and still under the cloud of bootleg booze, Arthur Falk, northwest park commissioner, was arraigned today on a charge of killing his son Eldred.

On the plea of his attorney, his case was postponed until Sept. 5, the day after the coroner's inquest. The state did not object.

Assistant State's Attorneys Emmet Byrne and Harold Levy, aces of the state's attorney's "hanging staff" have been assigned to the case.

In their statement to Judge Immen Hansen today, they declared that even though the act had been committed while the rum cloud held over him, the demand for his life would be made of the jury.

Falk is in a state of collapse. It hurts him when his wife and daughter refuse to see him, and yet he realizes he has no right to expect anything else.

Mrs. Falk was reported to have said that he had been a good husband up until the last year, when he took to drink. She added:

"The memory of our boy lying dead at his feet is still too clear for me to see him," she said.

Ratification of Rail Pact to Be Asked Sept. 2

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (INS)—The next step in the wage fight between Western railroads and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors will be taken in Chicago on Sept. 2, when the agreement reached here yesterday between the warring groups before the United States board of meditation is submitted to the organization for ratification, it was learned today.

MISSOURIANS ENDORSE DEMO FARM PLANK

Farmers' Organization Of 20,000 Members Berate Republicans

ONE VOTE DISSENTS

Candidates Not Mentioned In Body's Platform Pronouncement

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 29. (UP)—Making no mention of Governor Alfred E. Smith or Herbert Hoover, the Missouri Farmers association, whose membership includes 20,000 farmers, today voted a tacit endorsement on the Democratic platform pronouncement on the farm problem.

Although the resolution created warm discussion in the committee meeting, at which William Hirth, chairman of the committee and re-elected president of the association, is said to have favored the endorsement of Smith by name, only one delegate opposed the resolution in the conference session.

Rev. C. B. Angel, of Warsaw, Mo., protested the resolution should in no way endorse any candidate who was opposed to the eighteenth amendment. His remarks brought some applause and Hirth hastened to explain.

"We are concerned here with the farm question," he said, in declaring that he knew many delegates held personal views on the wet and dry question.

G. O. P. Aired

The resolution said:

"The farm leaders were treated with contempt at the recent Republican national convention in Kansas City and that Governor Lowden, an able and fearless friend of agriculture, was hopelessly beaten and furthermore everybody knows the Republican platform promises for farm relief are a lot of glittering generalities whose only purpose is to alleviate the farmer's wrath through the use of soft words.

"Farm leaders were welcomed cordially by the Democrats at Houston and the platform adopted there gives an unequivocal pledge that if the Democratic party is entrusted with power it will enact legislation that will make the tariff effective for agriculture and that will assess the loss sustained in marketing surplus farm commodities against those who receive the benefit and these pledges constitute the very heart of the McNary-Haugben bill."

Decentralized Prison System Is Protested

BRENHAM, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—Further protest against a decentralized prison had been registered here today.

The protest was made at a regional meeting of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce by R. E. Scott, of the Fort Bend county committee. Mr. Scott told chamber members he favored the removal of prisons in Fort Bend county to other sections of the state and asked members to aid him in his attempts to influence the legislature so it will order a centralized system at some other point.

BODIES OF TWO OF SEVEN LOST RECOVERED

Bay Dragged for Other Victims of Washington Plane Crash

MERRILL SHIP FOUND

Thick Underbrush Halts Rescuers in Search For Bodies

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Aug. 29. (UP)—Bodies of two victims of the disaster which overtook a Ford tri-motored passenger monoplane in its flight from Victoria, B. C., to Seattle last Saturday, were recovered from Discovery bay today.

The bodies were those of Floyd D. Severel, East Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Alexander M. Scott of London. Five other men, including two pilots, were aboard the plane and coast guardsmen were continuing dragging operations in the search for the bodies.

Identification of Severel was made through papers in his clothing. Mrs. Scott was the only woman on the plane.

The cause of the disaster has not been determined. The search progressed steadily for four days before fragments of the plane were found in Discovery bay. Dragging for the bodies was started as soon as it was established that the plane had crashed at that place.

A. M. Scott, London, former Liberal M. P.; Pilot Walker, Seattle; Relief Pilot L. Carson, Victoria; Dr. D. B. Holden, Victoria, and Thomas E. Lake, Far Eastern manager for the Union Oil company, San Francisco.

Mrs. Scott was the former Miss Jessie Hutchinson, daughter of Dr. John Hutchison, at one time rector of Glasgow, Scotland, high school. Her husband, as well as being Liberal coalition whip during his parliament service, had been war time secretary to Winston Churchill and had held other high political offices.

Severel was not on the original passenger list but it was announced Tuesday from Vancouver that he had bought a ticket and boarded the plane at the last moment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (AP)—The Curtiss Falcon biplane in which Mazel M. Merrill and Edwin Ronne disappeared Monday night while on a flight from Buffalo to Curtiss field, N. Y., was found wrecked late today atop a thickly wooded hill near Port Jervis, N. Y.

The wreckage was located by J. Nelson Kelly, a Fairchild pilot and one of the scores of aviators who participated in a systematic search for the missing fliers.

Jones and his party, he reported, struck the edge of the thick underbrush near the scene of the wreck at 5:15 tonight, and an hour later, cutting their way with axes and plunging against almost impenetrable bushes, they had progressed but a mile and a half.

No one else, Jones said, had been able to get any nearer the wreck than that.

Becoming lost, they abandoned search, to be resumed tomorrow.

Twelve Missing After River Boat Overturns

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 30. (Thursday)—(AP)—Twelve men and two women, the crew of the steamer Aliquippa, a Jones and Laughlin Steel corporation towboat, were reported missing early this morning when the boat overturned in the Ohio river near the steel company works at Aliquippa.

The steamer was used in the Pittsburgh to Memphis service of the steel corporation in hauling steel to the southern city. The towboat held the record for speed between this city and Memphis.

Three Communists Hurt In Clash With Police

BERLIN, Aug. 29. (UP)—Three communists were injured and a score arrested after police and communists clashed following a demonstration against the construction of a new German battle cruiser, recently approved by the cabinet.

Pro Candidate Accepts Nomination, Withdraws, And Joins Hoover Squad

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—James A. Edgerton accepted the nomination as vice president on the prohibition ticket tonight, made a technical withdrawal and came out in support of Herbert Hoover, the Republican party nominee.

Edgerton urged prohibition forces to unite under the Hoover-Curtis standard in order not to split the "forces of righteousness."

"The prohibition party that has made so many sacrifices in the past is now ready to make this last supreme sacrifice," he said, "but let it be understood that while we support Herbert Hoover, we support him not as a partisan, but as a man, because he stands for the 18th amendment in its integrity; because he favors strengthening and not weakening the Volstead law; because he is pledged to the enforcement of the law, and by his whole life he has shown that his heart is in humanitarian causes."

Edgerton explained he originally supported the Democratic party and never before had been allied with the party which nominated him as their vice presidential candidate.

"When my own party was betrayed I came to your convention," he said. "It is no light matter to sever the party ties of a life-time; yet bigger than party is country and bigger than both is the Kingdom of God and His righteousness."

Edgerton suggested the prohibition party withdraw its electoral tickets in the states where a close battle between Hoover and Smith might be expected so there should be no division of the dry forces.

He declared the platforms of the two major parties do not differ.

"The language of the two platforms on prohibition and farm relief is almost identical—general sympathy and nothing specific," he said. "Whatever issue had been raised was by the candidates."

Before making his acceptance speech at the studio of WRC, he was formally notified of his nomination at his home in Fort Lyon, Va., a short distance from Washington.

CABE STILL ON JUVENILE POST

Maintains County Judge Without Authority

J. T. Cabe, county juvenile officer since January, 1927, continued to occupy his office in the courthouse Wednesday afternoon, despite the fact that he had received a letter from E. W. Nicholson, county judge, advising him that his services as county juvenile officer were no longer desired.

Mr. Cabe maintained that the county judge had no authority to dispense with his services without first consulting a board composed of school superintendents in the county. Judge Nicholson said that the right to dispose of hire a man as juvenile officer was vested solely in the county judge.

Judge Nicholson declared that Mr. Cabe was released from the position because he had failed properly to discharge the duties of his office. There were no indications Wednesday as to who would succeed Mr. Cabe in the event he is definitely ousted from office.

Model Is Father Of 'Eugenics Baby'

down on the street his exit from the building created as much excitement as if he had been the Prince of Wales. Moreover, Mme. Medvedeff, a heavy-faced, 300-pound woman, was there to hang onto his arm threateningly while the cameras snapped.

"Believe in eugenics babies? I should say not," said this perfect specimen of manhood. "I don't think it's any way to propagate the race. There ought to be love between the parents."

"I did not love Mrs. Burnham. She did not love me. I saw her only twice and she paid me $150. But it was not the money that interested me. I was just sort of passing by. I did not realize that Mrs. Burnham was the woman I knew until I saw her picture in the paper; but I recognized her from that. I certainly did not become the father of her baby by intent."

Medvedeff's story, told without hesitancy, is as astounding a human document, if true, as ever you'd wish to read. The incident, as a matter of fact, was a closed chapter in the gay captain's colorful life, and meant nothing to him in the long run.

Invites Blood Tests

"But I am willing to swear that the Burnham child is mine," he declared. "I will submit to blood tests to prove my paternity, and I am sure the little girl will never be ashamed of her father. I come from a good Russian family."

Then he told about his connection with the Burnham baby, whose mother calls her Vera, which name comes from "Veritas," meaning truth.

He had been posing for a sculptress, the wife of one of New York's wealthiest and most socially prominent men, according to the captain's story. She introduced him to another artist who had a "pupil" who wanted a "model." Then he met the "pupil" whom he knew as "Annie." "Annie," it seems, was Mrs. Burnham. Neither of the artists, Medvedeff believes, knew "Annie's" plans. Later, he was supposed to return to Russia, but did not have the money.

The story of little Vera's birth last January spread over the country like wildfire. It was followed by interviews with prominent persons in many walks of life. Preachers condemned the widow-mother. "Liberals" commended her courage.

Causes Discussion

The idea of a woman's daring to have a child out of wedlock just because she wanted it was so controversial as to cause discussion wherever social topics were brought up.

Mrs. Burnham herself shrank from the publicity which she apparently did not know her extraordinary announcement would bring her. She made herself and the baby incommunicado to the press and everybody else. Her home was besieged by reporters and photographers. She moved away and has since kept her whereabouts a secret. There is one report, however, that she denied Medvedeff is the father of her child.

She is a daughter of Dr. Max Mailhouse, wealthy physician of New Haven, Conn., and the widow of Lee S. Burnham, son of Isaac W. Burnham of Louisville, Ky., wealthy retired philanthropist.

Medvedeff is a strikingly handsome man. His physique is powerful but built in perfect proportions, and his dark, rather heavy features are faultless.

He claims to have been born in Odessa in 1902, the son of a well-known lawyer, and to have been well educated.

Crowds Arrive For Notification

amphitheatre of the setting and provides a space for an overflow of spectators. Space has been provided for 25,000 spectators.

After a band concert from 6 to 8 p. m., John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, will call the meeting to order. There will be an invocation, then an address of welcome by Governor Parnell, of Arkansas, and 8:30 the broadcasting chain will go into play for the main events, the notification address by Claud G. Bowers and Senator Robinson's speech of acceptance.

Notables to Arrive

Raskob, Bowers, Mrs. John A. Warner, daughter of Governor Smith, Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, and other national figures will arrive in Hot Springs in the morning.

For the people of Arkansas this is the greatest state-wide political, social and gala event they ever have celebrated. The governor has formally declared a state holiday and the people intend to celebrate it as such.

The vanguard arrived today on paved roads and mountain trail, by railroad, by automobile and various models of horse-drawn vehicles. They were greeted by a city in carnival attire, its main street festooned with flags and banners and pictures of Governor Smith and Senator Robinson that ranged in sizes all the way from coat lapel proportions to pieces of art work 20 feet square that adorned the facade of the Arlington hotel.

The rows of bath houses for which this resort is famous, were almost springly in their decoration, and finally the ubiquitous line "Our Joe, the next vice president," greeted the eye wherever it roamed.

Special Trains

Politicians, resort visitors, business men from Little Rock, folks from the Ozark hills—all were here or were coming for the big event. Many cities were sending special trains with their contingents and it was estimated that from Little Rock alone between one and two thousand automobiles would bear that city's visitors.

Senator Robinson spent the day receiving old friends and making new ones. His speech has been completed for several days and he said there would be no last minute alterations.

Cisco Makes Plans

CISCO, Aug. 29.—Committees of Cisco business men, are hard at work perfecting plans for the visit of Senator Joe Robinson who will speak here Tuesday, September 4. The occasion will be the only speaking date the running mate of Gov. Al Smith will make in West Texas, and will be the first time that a vice presidential candidate has ever spoken in West Texas. Robinson will make only one other speech in the state. Fully 15,000 people are expected to hear Robinson here. The Cisco stadium will be the scene of the speaking. Seating capacity for 15,000 will be available. Loud speakers will be installed, and the huge stadium will be well lighted for the speaking which will be held at night.

Col. R. Q. Lee, who has just won the Democratic nomination for congressman from the Seventeenth district, will be master of ceremonies and will introduce the speakers. Governor Moody has been invited to welcome the distinguished senator on behalf of the state of Texas. Congressman Thomas L. Blanton will welcome Robinson to this district. Mayor J. M. Williamson of Cisco will welcome the visitors to the city. Judge Eugene Lankford, old time friend and school mate of Robinson, will introduce the vice presidential candidate to the audience.

Word has been received from the Democratic national headquarters of New York that Robinson's Cisco address will be one of the most important of his entire itinerary. The headquarters has arranged for a national broadcasting hookup to take the senator's speech to the entire country, broadcasting through WBAP at Fort Worth. This will be the second speech of Robinson's itinerary.

A royal welcome to the West will be extended Robinson here. Following a parade in the afternoon, he will be escorted to Lake Cisco to view the world's largest hollow type concrete dam, and to take a dip in the largest inland bathing beach in existence.

The principal speaking is scheduled to begin at 8 p. m. at the Lobo stadium.

Judge Lankford is chairman of the executive committee in charge of arrangements and other committees have been appointed to look after all details of properly staging the rally. Cisco is centrally located in West Texas with paved highways leading to all centers, and for this reason was selected as the location for Robinson's West Texas appearance.

Born of War, Kingdom Now Faces Crash

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Writer

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Stefan Raditch, grim old Croatian, succumbed the other day to the bullets of a political enemy, and as a result a romantic drama of post-war politics in Europe approaches a climax. At stake is the future of Jugoslavia, Balkan state, which won aggrandisement out of the world strife.

Disintegration threatens the Serb-Croat-Slovene union because of bitter Croat grievances against the state's Serbian majority. Italy is deeply involved in these grievances. The passing of Raditch is fuel in the fire. Raditch was the Croats' most beloved leader.

A Tangle of Ambitions

Interwoven in the drama are many diverse threads of influence and ambition. They are worth untangling because when a fire breaks out in the Balkans there is no telling where it will stop.

The Serbs, the Croats, and the Slovenes represent in the south of Europe the great Slav race, which in the north comprises the Russians, the Poles, and the Czechs.

In the middle ages the Serbs had a great empire. This fell under assaults by Turks and Austrians.

The Croats for about 200 years, beginning in A. D. 910, had a separate kingdom. Then they and the Slovenes also came under Austrian domination, and later were shifted to the tender mercies of the Hungarians.

Before the world war, Serbia existed as a much-diminished separate kingdom and Croatia and Slovenia were part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Croatia had a separate local parliament.

The War's Aftermath

When the great war ended, Croats, Serbs and Slovenes came together. The idea of the Croats was to have some sort of federated state. But they were overborne and the big new state of Jugoslavia was formed.

For ten years there has been dissatisfaction. It centers in Belgrade, the capital of the majority, and in Zagreb, formerly known as Agram, the chief city of Croatia.

Zagreb is a splendidly built, thoroughly modern metropolis of 100,000 people. Belgrade is slattern, slovenly. The citizen of Zagreb looks on Belgrade with contempt.

The Croats and Slovenes complain the Serbs seek to centralize all power in Belgrade; that taxes are collected and money spent for the aggrandizement of what was once Serbia to the detriment of the other portions of the triune kingdom.

Divided on Religion

Religion, too, plays a big part. Old Serbia in the main is Orthodox like Russia. Croatia, in the main, is Roman Catholic.

The Zagreb business man is a better one than his rival of Belgrade. The Croatian farmer is a more up-to-date agriculturist than the Serbian.

In the national parliament the Croatian farmer's party, a solid block of over 80 members, had been led by Raditch. So active was he that at one time he was jailed on a charge of treason to the state.

While Stefan lay on his bed of pain, after being shot down in the Belgrade parliament by a fellow deputy, he gave orders that his partisans should quit the Belgrade body and treat it as a rump assembly. A Croatian parliament was set up in Zagreb.

His Vision

Raditch's vision was of two, perhaps three south Slav states, independent of each other, but federated under a common king, Alexander. The federation would deal only with foreign affairs, and war-making. Old Stefan's chief aide, M. Predavetz, gave point to this vision by saying:

"Serbia and Croatia are different worlds. Our forefathers were wiser than we because they did not build a common state with the Serbians, in spite of 1,000 years of neighborliness. This common state is impossible for the future."

If it were merely a matter of interior politics, the Serbs might try force on the Croats. But there is a big black cloud to the west, and its name is Italy.

Italian and Jugoslav ambitions constantly clash. Italy would like to make an Italian lake of the Adriatic, but Jugoslavia has the long Dalmatian sea coast.

For her own protection Jugoslavia wanted to control the politics of the little state of Albania, but Mussolini beat her to it.

There might have been war long ago, but for the fact the Jugoslav army lacks heavy artillery, and the further fact that the Croats and the Slovenes are disaffected.

Recently, the Nettuno treaties have been broached. These would grant Italy certain rights on the Dalmatian coast of Jugoslavia. The Croats fear this would be the beginning of the swallowing up of Jugoslavia by Italy. But the Serb majority has assented to the treaties. Thus came about another sharp civil clash.

Tuf Nut Factory To Open Tuesday

The Wichita Falls plant of the Tuf Nut Garment Manufacturing company will open Tuesday with 40 people employed, it was announced Wednesday night by P. E. McLain, manager of the plant.

Because of the necessity of training the workers on the machines, it was decided to open the plant with 20 to 25 machines operating and gradually put on more workers until the full 150 machines are in operation.

Tuesday was chosen as the opening day due to the fact that Saturday, the first of the month, is a half day; Sunday is always a holiday, Monday is Labor Day, and the business life of the nation for September really starts Tuesday, it was explained.

Plans for a formal opening will not be considered at this time, Mr. McLain said, as full energies now will be centered on teaching the operators their machines and at the same time turning out a quality product.

No definite time was set for the plant to be in full operation, the time the machine operators consume in learning their jobs will be the determining factor.

State Official Holds Vote for Dog Legal

AUSTIN, Aug. 29. (UP)—Wichita county election officers who are reported to have discarded as "mutilated" a ballot that was voted for "My Dog Fido," were wrong, according to a compilation of election law decisions made by First Assistant Attorney General Galloway Calhoun. The rules that a mutilated ballot must give effect to the voters' intent in this case to scratch both candidates for a local office.

Mexicans Voted In Election, Claim

and that these Mexicans were imported, at a very great expense, and permitted to vote and their illegal votes were cast for the Hon. John N. Garner.

"That the uneducated and ignorant Mexicans, who could neither read nor write, were taught to vote for the first name on the list and in furtherance of a conspiracy to elect the Hon. John N. Garner, his name was placed first on the ballot, not by drawing for places as required by law, but was arbitrarily placed first on the ballot by the so-called political ring.

"One of the methods used in preparing the Mexicans for the casting of their illegal ballots was that of feasting them by the thousands at 'goat barbecues' where they were served large quantities of intoxicating liquors in violation of the federal prohibition laws and as a result of these 'goat barbecues' and liquor parties, the uneducated and ignorant foreigners were voted in blocks."

$100,000 Spent, Charge

Mr. Hardin alleged that more than $100,000 was spent in behalf of Mr. Garner's candidacy. He cited the returns from Duvall, Starr, Zapata, Webb and Brooks counties, all along or near the international border, and asserted he had statements from many citizens in numbers greater than the votes counted for him that he had been their choice in the primary voting.

In Duval county Mr. Garner got 1183 votes to none for Hardin.

"I have the statements of at least 100 reputable citizens who voted for me in the above county and will so testify, under oath," said Mr. Hardin's letter.

In his home county of Hildalgo, lost by 753 to 4,029 for Mr. Garner, Mr. Hardin alleged he received more than 753 votes in two precincts of the 22 in the county.

Mr. Garner, a veteran of the lower house of congress, has been acclaimed as probably the next minority leader.

The contest filed by Hardin has been set for hearing at the September term of court.

Local Legionnaires Honored at Texarkana

Two Wichita Falls legionnaries were honored with election by the American Legion of the department of Texas which is meeting in joint convention at Texarkana with the Arkansas legionnaires, according to word received here late Wednesday night.

R. J. Claypool was chosen delegate to the national convention which will be held in San Antonio this fall.

J. E. Friberg was elected assistant district commander for the 13th district. Among the others from this city who attended were O. T. Ailes and Roy Daniels.

Rufe Scott of Paris was unanimously elected commander to succeed Walton D. Hood. Port Arthur was selected as the next meeting place.

Mrs. Chauncey Ill

Mrs. W. B. Chauncey, wife of W. B. Chauncey, local real estate man and president of the Wichita Falls school board, is ill at the Hargrave-Walker hospital.

Mrs. Chauncey has been ill for several weeks and is in a very serious condition, according to attendants at the hospital.

Lights at Zoo

Animals at the Wichita Falls Municipal zoo saw night turned into day in Scotland park Wednesday night for the first time as the new park lighting system was working for the first time.

The old lights were rearranged and a number of new lights were added so that the present lights at the park give adequate illumination under all conditions, according to park officials.

Liquor Hearings

E. G. Adams and Mrs. Viola Adams were given hearing Wednesday on charges of possession of whisky and beer filed against them Sunday by J. A. Lantz, United States commissioner.

The case against Mrs. Adams was dismissed while Adams was held under $500 bond.

Complaint was made by R. A. Gooch, city marshal of Necona, and E. W. Suttles, deputy constable of Belcherville.

Practice Halted

Volley ball practice for the East Side church team will be discontinued until after a revival meeting, according to Bill Hoehn, director of the team.

M. G. Burk of Dallas, traveling freight agent of the Illinois Central lines, visited the Katy offices yesterday.

Preferential Rate Of Interest is Opposed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (AP)—The federal reserve board today announced it would oppose any attempt to provide a preferential rate of interest or rediscount rate on loans secured by government bonds, as against loans secured by other collateral.

Pair Held in Deaths Caused by Poison Brew

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Aug. 29. (AP)—Mrs. Katherine Weiss and Samuel Weiss, her brother-in-law were held by police tonight without bond on the theory that they conspired the death of the woman's husband by putting poison in home brew beer from which two other also died.

CHAIR DOESN'T PREVENT CRIME

New Warden Airs Views On Punishment

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 29. (AP)—Capital punishment does not prevent crime, in the opinion of E. F. Harrell, newly appointed warden of the Texas state penitentiary. Extreme penalty should be inflicted only in extreme cases and never on circumstantial evidence, he said he believed, in discussing prison affairs today.

The electric chair is the most humane manner of executing criminals, the warden said, and the sheriff of a county in which a person is given the death penalty should throw the switch instead of one man being compelled by law to do all the executing.

Mr. Harrell said he favored centralizing the penitentiary system for the reason that it would be more economical and would afford better opportunity to prevent escapes. Concerning a location for a centralized penitentiary, the Warden said, with a vein of humor that it should "be set way out in the middle of the plains of West Texas so the prisoners could never get out of sight when they escape."

Under the present system, he said, all prisoners first are brought to Huntsville, registered, fingerprinted and given physical examination; "then we ship them out to different farms, all of which costs a good deal even in transportation."

Starts Reforms

Mr. Harrell, who assumed charge of penitentiary affairs less than two months ago, has instigated many reforms. One of these was stopping of "trusty" convicts from walking the streets of Huntsville at night. This met with approval of citizens here.

"Kindness is 80 per cent in handling prisoners," he said. "I never whip a man. When a prisoner violates the rules he is either punished by being placed in solitary confinement or is required to do hard work. One cannot curse and abuse a convict and get along with him. I do not permit it."

Captain Harrell, who is 39, has been a peace officer for 16 years, starting in Carroll county, Mississippi, in 1912. Later he was policeman and eventually chief of police at Paris, Texas. Nearly two years ago he joined the Texas rangers and was appointed warden of the penitentiary on July 9, 1928.

Federal Cotton Men Continue Texas Tour

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—C. L. Finch, supervisor of enforcement of the United States cotton standard act, and H. H. Clarke, attorney in the office of the solicitor of the department of agriculture, continued a tour of Texas cotton districts today after a two-day conference in Dallas. Finch denied that purported violations of the act brought him to Dallas, but asserted he was making an investigation of possible evasions of the law in interstate and foreign trade.

You Save by Having Your Clothes Cleaned Regularly

In the Summer you wear soft, fragile garments that are easily ruined by the fallen deposits left by perspiration and by the sharp, dust particles which become embedded in the meshes of such materials and cause holes often charged to moths.

By having your Summer apparel dry cleaned regularly, you insure your garments against such damage. The salts are dissolved before they can do harm if the garment is not worn too long before being cleaned. And all dust particles are removed without injury to the material.

What you spend for dry cleaning is actually saved because it protects your clothes against deterioration and keeps them fresh and attractive, prolonging their life and usefulness.

You can send your finest apparel here with complete confidence that it will be carefully cleaned by expert workmen who understand the science of modern dry cleaning. A telephone call brings our service to your door. Why not phone us today?

Horseman Defies Death in Travels

But Roaring Autos Offer Worst Danger

GAITHERSBURG, Md., Aug. 29. (UP)—A man who has lived for days at a time on the flesh of monkeys, snakes and lizards, has traveled nearly 9,500 miles on horseback since he left Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina, on April 23, 1925, rode into this quiet little hamlet unheralded late today en route to Washington and New York.

Aime Felix Tschiffely, Argentine horseman, archeologist, and lover of the out-of-doors and his creole horse Mancha, have packed three years full of daring adventure and dangerous enterprise such as few men experience in a lifetime.

Mancha and his rider, with another horse which Tschiffely was forced to leave behind at St. Louis, have scaled the snow-capped Andes, fought their way through Southern Panama, escaped capture by revolutionists in Nicaragua and dodged bandits in Mexico.

New Perils

Yet, today, when interviewed by the United Press correspondent the rider gave no evidence of, his experiences. Nor are the dangers over. A new peril lurks on every foot of the broad boulevards of the United States, growing more menacing with every mile that carries these two intrepid adventurers nearer to New York.

Motorized travel has made the highways of this country unsafe for horses. Already Tschiffely has found this out. A reckless motorist only last week drove his automobile into Mancha just as the pair were leaving Cumberland, Md., and the possibilities of similar accidents have become a constant source of concern to the rider.

"If I find traffic hazards prove too great for safety after I leave Washington for New York I shall either employ a motorist to act as a rear guard or will place Mancha on a truck for the final dangerous stages of our journey through the dense traffic of New Jersey," Tschiffely said today.

Frisky Colt

"Mancha is 19 years old and is still as frisky as a colt, will leap across the road at the sight of a water hole or register a neigh of protest at any lady's gown whose colors offend the aesthetic sense," Tschiffely said.

Finding stables for Mancha along the route in the United States is another of Tschiffely's major problems.

Tschiffely's chief disappointment since reaching the United States was to find no cowboys in Texas.

"I only saw four cowboys like the cowboys of the movies shown in Argentina cinemas and two of those I discovered later came from New York City shows and had never herded cattle in their lives he said.

Tschiffely plans to remain two or three weeks in Washington.

'It Can't Be Done,' Says Texas' Only Mexican War Vet of Peace Plan

STERLING CITY, Texas, Aug. 29. (UP)—R. A. Howard, 98, Texas' only surviving Mexican war veteran, sits in his straight-back chair here, with a Bible agape in his hands, opened at the Book of Revelations. Though still interested in th eaffairs of men, he takes very little interest in the efforts being made to outlaw war. In fact, he thinks it can't be done.

Running away from home in Baltimore, Md., to fight under General Scott from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, he met on the battlefield another brother who also had left home to go to the mysterious west and its opportunities and to take part in the Mexican war. Hr. Howard enlisted as a drummer boy but became a man of fighting rank after a few days service. The mules pulling the cannon were killed and his vigorous body supplied the strength vacated by the death of one of the animals.

During the Mexican war days he became ill of yellow fever but a Mexican girl cured him by rubbing his body with butter and placing him before a fire.

After the Mexican war was over, he returned to Maryland but a prosaic life had no appeal to this fiery youth and he headed West again, traveling over 17 states.

When the Civil war erupted, he was in the grocery business in New Orleans, but prices got high as people had no money, his bills were uncollectable and he was forced to quit. Though sympathetic with the South, his health was too feeble to admit his joining the colors.

Later, Howard came to Texas, entered the furniture business in Mason, was elected and served several terms as a county official. When many of his friends came to Sterling at the close of the last century, his spirit of pioneering carried him to the virgin territory, and he built the first house in this ranch town of 700 people.

Mr. Howard subsists entirely on a raw vegetable diet. In spite of his advanced age and the fact that even years ago he was unable to see, his vision has now been restored and he is able to read from the Bible. It has been only during the past year that he has been unable to walk down town and talk with the ranchmen on the streets. The residents of the town call to see him often, as he is now the town's oldest celebrity, Uncle Robert Kellis having died recently at the age of 100.

CITY ASKS FOR BIDS ON BONDS

Buyers To Be Asked to Submit Bids Oct. 8

Bids on the $250,000 bonds voted by Wichita Falls Tuesday probably will be received at the October 8 meeting of the city council, it was learned at the city auditorium Wednesday.

It was said that this date probably will be suggested to the council at its next meeting, Monday, Sept. 10.

Complete information is to be sent out by the city to bond houses over the country that they may be in a position to know the financial condition of the city. This is a usual procedure as bond houses will not bid on issues without having the financial statement of the city.

Gangsters' Threats Force Chicago Judges to Flee Homes for Safety

Magistrate Who Defied "Hoodlums" Leaves "Bloody Twentieth" to Protect Wife and Children

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. (US)—Chicago gangsters and political "hoodlums" are today virtually forcing judges and witnesses in the present special political crime and corruption grand jury investigations to seek refuge outside of their homes. Judge Samuel Heller, who refused to be dominated by political outlaws was reported to be ready to move his family from his home in the "bloody twentieth" to protect his wife and two children.

The judge revealed today that the threat had been noised about west side poolrooms that he would be "taken for a ride" and his home bombed because of his failure to extend emergency aid to men arrested for political terrorism.

Continuation of the special crime and corruption grand jury investigations was asked by special prosecutor Frank J. Loesch today. Failure of Homer Gaplin, county Republican chairman, to appear before the grand jury yesterday as he had promised is said to have been a strong contributing cause for the prosecutor's request.

It is Loesch's belief that a new jury should be impanelled to inquire into the expenditure of the city funds for political purposes and contributions by operators of gambling and vice dives to campaign funds.

The prosecutor admitted that the killing of "Diamond Joe" Esposito and the bombing of the home of State Senator Charles S. Deneen and Judge Swanson have been abandoned by the present grand jury as impenetrable mysteries.

"We are now going over the evidence obtained from the payrolls of Corporation Counsel Ettelson," he stated. "We have not decided to go over other city payrolls, as that will depend on whether the evidence already obtained is sufficient to bring about the conviction of certain public office holders on charges of graft."

Cow Horn To Be Signal for KGKO

A cow horn will be used as the call of radio station KGKO, National Security Life Insurance company broadcasting station, which is being installed in the Perkins-Snider building here.

Anyone who has a cowhorn which they would like to have act as the representative of the Wichita Falls station are requested to send it to M. J. Gillam, in care of The Record News-Times.

Cow horns, which are sent in will be tried out on the opening night of the station.

Walls To Be Poured On Kiwanis' Wading Pool

Side walls of the Kiwanis club wading pool, in Scotland park, will be poured Thursday, according to announcements made Wednesday.

The pool is being given careful attention, it was said, and the cement will be allowed to set well before more work it attempted on it.

It is expected that the pool will not be open for several weeks as lines have to be run and considerable other work must be done before it is completed.

Funeral Service Held For Russell E. Fritz

Funeral for Russell E. Fritz, 36, who was killed in an automobile accident Sunday night near Rhome, Texas, were held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home of his brother, L. W. Fritz, of 1403 Grant street, with Dr. S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church, officiating.

The body will be forwarded to Custer City, Okla., by the Merkle Undertaking company, where funeral services will also be held at 3 o'clock Thursday.

Pallbearers were Karl Totzke, F. L. McClure, J. W. Zimmer, J. J. Pistocco, Dick Burns and E. Smith.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 29. (UP)—Monte Munn, pugilist and member of the Nebraska legislature, was appointed vice chairman in charge of organizing Hoover-Curtis clubs in Nebraska by S. D. McKelvie, chairman of the club work in Nebraska, today.

Munn will have charge of the Hoover-Curtis headquarters at the Lindell hotel here, McKelvie said.

Greenville Boy Meets Success in Hollywood

GREENVILLE, Texas, Aug. 29. (UP)—John Boles, handsome young Texan, of this city, is making a name for himself in Hollywood. Texas has furnished many feminine stars for the screen, but she hasn't given the film capital many leading men.

Boles went to Hollywood after having appeared successfully in several musical comedies in New York and was given the lead opposite Gloria Swanson in "The Loves of Sonya."

Now he has been signed up for a long-term contract with Universal, according to an announcement made by President Carl Laemmle.

The young Texan is considered one of the most talented and promising juveniles in Hollywood. Since he left the stage to enter the movies his speaking voice will stand him in good stead now that the "talkies" have taken the foreground in motion pictures.

Look for this Warranty at your local dealer's service station.

THIS announcement, issued simultaneously in all parts of the country on August 16, met with an instant response from car owners and tire merchants alike.

No man who reads this will have failed to see similar announcements in the windows of tire stores—copies of the warranty displayed on dealer's walls—newspaper advertisements by individual manufacturers and by dealers confirming the policy.

For it is the voice of the industry, representing the producers of over 95% of the tires made in America.

It is the acceptance of full responsibility for the merit of their product by manufacturers who have learned that real quality means more to their customers than definite mileage guarantees.

Years ago these standard manufacturers discontinued the outworn practice of guaranteeing a definite number of miles in order to sell their tires.

As a selling inducement the so-called "mileage guarantee" was inevitably pushed beyond all reasonable bounds. It resulted in unjustified allowances to the unscrupulous driver who abused his tires and misrepresented his mileage, thus penalizing the careful driver who took care of his tires and was honest in his claims.

With its passing, all tire users felt the benefit at once in lower tire costs. Today you pay less for tires than ever before in history. Few, if any commodities, show so steady a reduction in prices.

The art of tire building has improved as well, until the casing and tube you buy today can be counted on to carry you more miles than was thought possible even so short a time as five years ago.

The unlimited guarantee of quality is the natural outcome; the warranty against defect for the life of the tire is a final expression of the manufacturer's confidence in his product—

—a guarantee broader in its protection to the individual yet fairer in its operation to all than anything ever offered to the car-owning public.

Mighty Few Mothers Want Old Maids Hanging 'Around the House TheseDays

A Foolish Mother Who Would Have Youth Forego Life in Order to Avoid Its Hardships. Why Nobody Pities the Poor, Old Bachelor. Danger of Making Confidences to One's Friends.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 20, my fiance is 22, and we expect to be married soon. We both have good jobs and are saving to pay for a house that we are buying together. We would be happy except that my mother croaks disaster at us all the time. She tells me that I am young and carefree and don't know when I am well off, and that I should stay single for 10 years more. She says that my sweetheart and I will not always love each other as we do now. That we will have sickness and trouble; that children will come; that we may lose our home and our jobs, etc.

Mother doesn't object to the young man I am going to marry. She knows he is fine, but she is just afraid for me to marry lest I might not be happy. What can I do to change her point of view, for we want her to be happy with us? PALS.

Answer:

Laugh at her. Tell her that you are going to be as good a wife as she is, so you know your husband will never get tired of you, and tell her that the older you grow the more you appreciate what a good mother she has been to you. All she wants is just to be jollied along a little. She really doesn't mean a word of what she says, and if she thought that you were going to be scared off matrimony by her warnings, she would execute a neat flipflop and become a press agent for it.

Mighty few mothers want any old maids around the premises. Generally they are more anxious to get their daughters married than the girls are to marry themselves. They seem to think it is sort of a reflection on themselves for their girls to be passed over. Listen-in on any conversation of mothers and you will hear them bragging about their married daughters, but never a word about the ones who have stayed single.

Why mothers should make a cult of melancholy, I don't know, but a lot of them do. When they sit down to reminisce they put on the soft pedal and recall all the tear-compelling incidents that they can remember. They simply gloat over funerals and disasters; over disappointments and work, worry and anxiety. And when they talk to their children about the future they do nothing but hang red lanterns along the road. Their talk is all of the hardships, the rocky stretches, the steep climbs, the precipices, the calamities and sudden death that are waiting at every hairpin turn.

If it wasn't for the incurable optimism of youth that shuts its ears to mother's croaking, no boy or girl would ever have the courage to make a move.

Yet mother seldom regrets her life, and she doesn't wish that she had played safe and hadn't married and had kept her little earnings to herself, and had had her neat little apartment without bothering with a husband and children, for she knows that she has had a full life and it was worth all she paid for it.

She has worked hard, but she has had the joy of knowing she was of service in the world. She has made sacrifices, but it was for those she loved better than herself. She has borne children in agony, but she has had the thrill of a little head upon her breast. She has known poverty and anxiety and sickness, but it has made her sister to all the world. And if the luster of love ha sdimmed, she was once bathed in ineffable glory.

So go along, my dear, and marry your man. Don't be afraid of life. When it comes, you will have the courage to meet it. And don't listen to mother's warnings. Because others have failed in marriage is no reason for your doing so. Take your chance.

Furthermore, mother will be all right, once you are married, and thinks she made the match.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Why do you write so much about women making themselves attractive to men, when we all know that there are any number of men who would give their eyeteeth—if they have any left—to get married, and yet have not the faintest idea of how to go about it. Perhaps there are women who have no attraction for men. Certainly there are men who have no attraction for women, and nobody writes to the paper about it. AN OLD BACHELOR.

Answer:

It has been said that the reason the Bible is full of words of consolation to widows, while no syllable of consolation is offered to widowers, is because the widowers can console themselves any time they desire. It is on that principle I proffer more advice to women on how to make themselves attractive to men than I do to men on how to make themselves attractive to women. For in the love chase man is the pursuer and woman the pursued. Man can openly seek his mate, while a woman has to do it by stealth.

If a man wants to get married, all he has to do is to give the women in his vicinity the once over, decide which one he prefers and then start out to get her. He can go to see her. He can take her to places of amusement. He can ingratiate himself by making her presents and, in a word, he can sell himself in matrimony by telling her of his love, and how good and kind he would be to her, and what a pretty home he can give her.

And if the first woman he approaches turns him down, he can try a second, and a third, and a fourth until one says "yes." There is no reflection on him for having failed in the first instance. Moreover, all of the ladies he has courted are pleased and flattered with his attentions, and gloat over having been asked to marry him.

But it is far otherwise with a woman. She may want to marry. She may know just exactly the man she would like for a husband and be perfectly certain that she could make him happy as his wife, but she can't go and tell him so. She has to wait for him to notice her first. And if she makes any overtures to him, she scares him to death and he flees from her. Furthermore, if she tries a second venture when the first lead pans out, she gets the name of a man-chaser, and that is fatal.

Compare the number of old bachelors and old maids, of widowers and widows you know, and you will see how much easier it is for a man to marry than it is for a woman. Yet men, as a class, are neither better-looking, nor more intelligent nor are they more liberally endowed with IT than women. So one is led to the inevitable conclusion that women are less choosey than men, and that when a man doesn't marry it is not because he lacked attractions enough to get him a wife, but because he didn't want one.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I became acquainted with a young chap to whom I was much attracted, and I did a very unwise thing. I disclosed to him my long-cherished secret. Things have changed and I find myself regretting my confidence. I fear he will reveal to others what I told him, and I do not want my private affairs discussed. How can I let him know that I wish him to forget what I told him and how will I konw whether or not I am the laughing stock of his friends? I wouldn't like to write him a letter. L. L.

Answer:

Better let the matter rest in the hopes that he will forget it if you do not bring it to his mind again.

A philosopher once said: "Treat every friend as if he might some day be your enemy." This is prudent counsel, and we are wise if we never put into the hands of any one a weapon that they can use against us if they become angry with us, or are piqued at something we do, or in case the exigencies of life turn them into an opponent instead of an ally.

The temptation to talk too much, to tell our own secrets and our family secrets, is one to which most of us yield now and then in some confidential hour when we find a sympathetic listener, but is a mistake for which we pay dearly, and many a one of us has wished that we had bitten our tongue out before it had let us betray things that should never have been told.

Of coure, when the scandal gets bruited about, some tidbit of gossip is passed from mouth to mouth, we blame the faithless friend who disclosed the thing we had told in confidence, but why should we expect others to keep our secrets when we could not keep them ourselves?

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Recently my husband had an affair with another woman. He said he loved her very dearly and wanted me to divorce him. However, we have two small children and I did not want to break up my family, and besides I worship him. So after infinite misery on all sides, he agreed to give her up and devote his time to his family. Now my trouble is this: I know that he has business calls at night that he is bound to answer, and a meeting of his lodge every Monday, but whenever he sets foot out of the house I go almost insane. If he is gone for 10 minutes, I tell myself that he has been telephoning this woman. While he is at work I am sick with misery for fear he is seeing her. He wants me to go away for the summer with the babies. Shall I go? I know I will be tortured with jealousy every minute of the time. Is there any way to regain faith in my husband?

—BROKEN-HEARTED WIFE.

Answer—If you smash a vase you can never make it whole again, no matter how artfully you patch together the pieces, and it is the same way with faith in those we love. Once let it be destroyed and we never really trust them again. We are always filled with suspicions.

But if you give way to your jealousy as you are doing, you will truly go crazy. Moreover, you are taking the surest way to drive him away from you because no human being can stand being watched and questioned, and having to furnish an alibi for every minute of the time he is away from home. And no woman is more uncomfortable to live with than a jealous one.

I should advise you to go away for the summer as your husband wants you to do. Perhaps when you are away from him you will be able to get a better grip on yourself and see things more normally, and perhaps when you and the children are away your husband will find that his home means more to him than the other woman.

Of course, you take the chance of his going back to the other woman, but he will do that anyway if you continue to nag him.

—DOROTHY DIX.

CHIC CHERIE

Latest Fashions

Cherie and Dina and the appropriate male background are going to see the races today. This dress of Dina's—does Cherie think it the proper sort of thing to wear? And what is she going to wear herself? Cherie thinks that nothing could be smarter than a tan and brown plaid tweed made to look like a suit, especially when worn with a brown felt hat. And particularly when the jacket has a double lapel on one side only. Cherie herself—meditating in a negligee of ecru lace and periwinkle chiffon—doesn't know what she will wear. Only one item she's sure of. She'll wear Ambrose, the Gilded Turtle, in her pocket—it's about time he started functioning as a genuine mascot.

Ambrose went along, but perhaps his heart wasn't in his work. Certainly no more glittering mascot ever was raised from humble to high estate (you can't even see his shell for the gilding) but the result of his activities is that Ernest and Edwin are trying to find carfare home. Cherie's suit is a new fall costume of grey-green tweed with a silk blouse, tweed trimmed. Dina's suit has a skirt and coat of brown tweed with a silk blouse trimmed with blobs of ruffling. Both suits have full length coats which shows that their owners are optimistic about how smart they will be along in November. Their hats are felt and are both notable for unusual brim effects and ribbon trimming.

Camp Fire Girls Hold Out-of-Door Program Tuesday

A large crowd attended the first out-of-door ceremonial held for some time, of the Wichita Falls district Camp Fire Girls at the Bungalow Tourist park at the end of the Burkburnett brige Tuesday evening. The theme for the program was "Indian Legends and Star Lore."

At the call of Wohelo three torches flared equidistant in the semicircle against the blackness of the sloping hillside. Chanting softly as they came "We come, we come to our council fire, with measured tread and slow," three long lines of girls in beautiful ceremonial gowns or white middies and dark skirts filed into view led by three torch bearers, each bearing a flaming fagot. The girls in the ceremonials forming the inner circle and the ones in service uniforms, the outer. The fire was lighted by the three torch bearers, each one representing one part of the three-fold camp fire watchword. Work by Therressa Kaufman of Tami-a-lewa, Health by Viola Thomas of Tami-a-lewa and Love by Charlotte Kepnedy of Alahi. Instead of the usual ritual the girls gave original interpretations of Wo-he-lo and the hand sign the fire a song, "The Chant Round the Camp Fire Group," was sung and a welcome to new members into magic circle was given. Anita Clark responded for the new girls, explaining what the ideals and purposes of Camp Fire meant to her. Greetings from Miss McIlheran were given by Mrs. Davis, who also gave stars and symbols.

Other numbers included: Poem, "Song to Pleiades," from Pawnee tongue, Anita Clark; legend, "The Great Bear," Nadine Loofburrow; song, "Stars of the Summer Night," quartette; song, "Friendly Voices," group; legend, "Fire Bringing" from The Basket Woman, Clarice Clark; poem, "Song of the Stars," from Algonquin tongue, Margaret Ossenback, and song, "Omaha Tribal Prayer," group.

About 450 honor beads were awarded. Leather awards as follows: Summer honors to Nadine Loofburrow, Margaret Davis, Francis Hyland, Mrs. J. F. Hyland, Evelyn Van Emden, Amy Louise Meredith, Mary Theresa Boyle and Mrs. R. E. Davis. Ranks were awarded to Wood Gatherers Lois Fisk and Helen Gardner. Fire Makers to Nadine Loofburrow, Margaret Davis, Mary Theresa Boyle, Clarice Clark and Ethel Tasker.

As a token of appreciation from the city and the park department, letters of appreciation and recommendation for the splendid work done with the children in the parks were presented to Nadine Loofburrow, Ethel Tasker, Frances Hyland, Charlotte Kennedy, and Margaret Davis, who have helped regularly each week the entire summer. There are many other Camp Fire girls who have attended and assisted Mrs. R. E. Davis and Mrs. Bartholomew but these girls have been the regular leaders.

In recognition of their work local headquarters presented these girls each with a personal gift. To Ethel Tasker and Nadine Loofburrow were given Indian Navajo bracelets. It is the ambition of all Camp Fire girls of Wichita Falls to win one of the bracelets and of this group of five girls these two only had not previously won them. Charlotte Kennedy was presented a torch bearers' pin, Margaret Davis a brown leather sheepskin for decorating her ceremonial gown, and to Frances Hyland an archery target of white, black, orange and blue.

Mrs. Davis presented the letters and Mrs. Bartholomew the presents.

Mystic Fire, song, by special picked group.

Pine Trees Sigh, song by entire group.

Now Our Camp Fire Burneth Low, song, group.

Mammy Moon, concluded with Lay Me to Sleep.

A special feature of the program was the initiation of the splendid group of 15 girls from the Geraldine school district near Holliday. Mrs. Tom Harrington, guardian of the group brought them over. They visited the local headquarters and also had a trip to the new zoo before time for the council fire. They sat in the circle completing the ring of some 80 girls.

Among the 150 guests present were visitors from Grand Rapids, Mich.; Okmulgee, Okla.; Tascosa, Texas; Clifton, Texas; Kansas City, Kan.; Fort Worth, Texas; Honey Grove, Texas; El Paso, Hedley, Thurma, Okla.; Plainview, Texas; San Antonio; Pueblo, Colo.; Dallas, Texas; Los Angeles, Calif.; Pecan Gap, Texas; Clinton, Okla.; Midland, Texas; Denver, Colo.; and Lima, Ohio.

Miss Emma Frances McFall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McFall, 1208 Burnett street, was selected by Mayor J. W. Akin to represent the city of Wichita Falls as Princess Wichita Falls, at the Graham fair, which starts Sept. 19, according to an announcement Wednesday.

The request for a young lady to represent the city at the fair, was made by the chamber of commerce.

Merchants Plan Window Contest

Initial plans for the merchants' window contest for fall style week, were made Wednesday at a luncheon at the Wichita club. Harry G. Walker was elected permanent chairman for the fall 1928 display window contest. Classifications, methods of judging, etc. were discussed. It was decided to obtain an out-of-town judge for the contest and the following committee was appointed to select the judge: Harry G. Walker, M. M. Toole, B. S. McCleary, T. A. Bradley and J. Marion Smith. Nineteen classifications were voted on as follows: Children's wear, women's ready-to-wear, millinery, women's shoes, men's clothing, men's shoes, men's hats, men's furnishings, boys' wear, furniture, hardware and electrical goods, jewelry, drugs, groceries and provisions, piece goods, best show cards, automobiles, tires and auto accessories, insurance, banks, building and loans, real estate, radio and musical instruments. The Wichita Daily Times and Record News will give medals for the best windows in above classifications. The unveiling of the windows will take place on Monday evening, Sept. 24.

The following were present at the luncheon:

Miss Mary Clark, Georgianna Shoppe; Mrs. Augusta South, the Parisian; Mrs. James Lomax, Elwyn, Inc.; Harry G. Walker, the Hub Clothiers; George W. Burch and R. Tackett, Williams department store; B. FRENCH STRONG FOR AL SMITH

Voters Would Give Al Easy Victory

PARIS, Aug. 29. (UP)—France is strong for Governor Alfred E. Smith.

It is generally admitted here that this nation would give the Democratic nominee for president of the United States an easy victory over his Republican opponent.

Belgium, where the work of Herbert Hoover in the war relief is best known, probably would have another verdict.

When prohibition was voted in the United States, France lost her second best foreign client. True, South America has opened up a vast new market and Germany is buying again but it was only artifically, through limiting production, that France prevented a fatal fall in prices when America and Russia quit buying her wines.

The French have made one mistake about Governor Smith, however. Editorial comment within the last few days has drawn attraction to the political situation in the United States and aroused, perhaps, more interest than usual; but the press has been of the opinion that a Democratic victory would mean the immediate reopening of the liquor market.

Repeal Seen

The general idea is that the Volstead act would be repealed at once and that boats could be loaded openly again at Bordeaux, Havre and Marseilles with kegs, bottles and barrels en route to American ports.

The "Gaulois" a Parisian daily owned by M. Coty, the perfumer, expresses the general opinion of France:

"Undoubtedly, the accomplishments of the Republican party, such as the conclusion of the Briand-Kellogg anti-war pact, the settlement of war debts, and Coolidge's efforts toward disarmament will play an important part in the war for Coolidge's chair," the paper comments.

"But don't be bamboozled: the real problem at stake is—'to drink or not to drink'."

WILD GOOSE Attacks Woman Who Asks $10,000 Damages in Suit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (AP)—One of the oddest suits in the history of the District of Columbia supreme court was filed today by Mrs. Amelia Facteau against John R. Ragland, in which Mrs. Facteau alleges she was attacked by a goose of "a mischievous, vicious, excitable, and violent disposition and propensity," owned by Ragland.

Mrs. Facteau claimed she was damaged to the extent of $10,000 when the goose attacked her while she was quietly returning from church on a recent Sunday morning.

Peace Pact Not Sacred, Says Paper

ROME, Aug. 29. (UP)—Commenting editorially on the Briand-Kellogg outlawry of war treaty, the Osservatore Romano said today that skeptics and cynics may characterize the pact as a platonic declaration of principles but the fact is that the day such a declaration is accepted by mankind certainly will be a fecund day in human history.

The editorial calls attention to the words of Pope Benedict V, who said, "The moral force of law should replace the material force of arms."

It continues: "We regret that Secretary Kellogg was silent in regard to God as king of peace, whereas Pope Benedict's document was dedicated to God, whose help is indispensable if men do not want to build on sand."

The editorial points out that the signing might have been sacred, but with the absence of God it was only a solemn diplomatic function.

Cooke County Fair Holds Formal Opening

GAINESVILLE, Texas, Aug. 29. (UP)—The Cooke county fair formally opened its doors this morning for what promises to be one of the most instructive and entertaining expositions ever offered the people of Cooke and neighboring counties.

The fair will run through Labor day, Sept. 3, offering five days of entertainment of every variety. Officials are expecting an attendance of 25,000 during the five days.

The exhibits were thrown open to the public this morning when the judging began.

G. O. P. LEADER BOLTS PARTY

Senator Blaine Declares for Smith

BURLINGTON, Wis., Aug. 29. (UP)—United States Senator John J. Blaine, Republican who some months ago said "a good Democrat like Smith is to be preferred to a poor Republican," today was on record in support of Governor Smith for president.

Blaine announced that "his friends would vote for Al Smith" in an address sponsoring the candidacy of Senator Robert M. Lafollette for reelection.

"These are times when partisanship must not blind us," the senator said. "We must condemn Republican silence on the scandals of the Harding administration as an accessory after the fact."

The Republican senator also condemned the methods of the federal prohibition department, charging it was corrupted by crime and bribery. He denounced what he called "snoopers and spies who shoot down innocent men with dum-dum bullets."

Nine States Represented At Littlefield Revival

Special to The Record News.

LITTLEFIELD, Aug. 29.—The camp meeting which has been going on for the past 10 days on the campus of Littlefield college closed Sunday night. Rev. R. F. Nine different states were represented in the congregations; with over 50 counties in Texas and four in Arkansas. The crowds were large at every meeting and very much interest was manifested.

South American Nations Anxious to Sign Pact

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 29. (UP)—Several South American countries are eager to sign the Kellogg-Briand treaty, President Coolidge was notified today by Secretary of State Kellogg.

Washington representatives of the powers have signified to Secretary Kellogg that their governments favor the pact to outlaw war as an instrument of national policy and would be pleased to adhere to its provisions.

Tennessee Man Held For Embezzlement

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 29. (UP)—Clarence E. Strawn, 25, auditor of the Reade House hotel, Chattanooga, Tenn., today blamed horse races, hospitals, and doctor bills for his embezzlement of $3,500 from his employers. Strawn was arrested Monday after he had signed his correct name to a telegram here, after registering at a hotel as James H. Johnson, Memphis, Tenn. He disappeared last Wednesday.

Turks Try to Check Spread of Fatal Fever

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 29. (UP)—Authorities were making preparations today to prevent the spread of the epidemic of dengue across the Graeco-Turkish frontier.

G. O. P. Enlists Vitamines In Hoover Publicity

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—Never before in the history of these United States, has the humble vitamine played any but the strictest non-partisan role in a presidential campaign.

But vitamines have been enlisted by the Republican party to further the cause and advance the campaign of Herbert Hoover.

A leaflet written by Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, chief of the women's publicity staff, Republican campaign headquarters here, will be circulated by the hundreds of thousands among women voters through Republican women's clubs over the country.

One of the things it says is that the first person, man or woman, to popularize the vitally important vitamine, dietetically speaking, was Herbert Hoover.

Idaho Demo Stresses Modification Plank

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho, Aug. 29. (AP)—George Donert, today elected temporary chairman of the Democratic state convention meeting here, said the "country has had nine years of nullification of the prohibition law and was prepared for sensible modification." Donert hurled the prohibition question into the convention in his keynote address.

Smith's Son Given Post in Voter's League

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (AP)—Arthur Williams Smith, son of the Democratic presidential nominee, today was appointed a vice chairman of the men's division of the Smith-Robinson first voters' league.

Guide me in Thy truth, and teach me; for Thou art the God of my salvation; on Thee do I walk all the day.—Ps. xxv, 5.

Read not the times. Read the eternities. Conventionalities are at length as bad as impurity. Even the facts of science may dust the mind by their dryness unless they are, in a sense, of fresh morning, or rather, rendered fertile by the dews of fresh and living truth.—Thoreau.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

THE LITTLE OLD LADY MUSES ON CITY LIFE

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Cities do queer things to people," mused the little old lady from up state who was visiting in New York. "It was a constant source of interest to me to see the motley assortment that crowded city life brings together. People who would never meet in smaller communities sit side by side, elbows touching, in the common crush."

The little old lady was sitting with her friend in one of the white-tiled restaurants that draw patronage from the sidewalks of New York. It was almost midnight. She gazed about with eager interest.

"Just see that grandmotherly woman over there, in the old-fashioned bonnet with the ties, and her silver-rimmed spectacles," the visitor continued, "and then right next to her that big truck driver. Imagine seeing that anywhere else!"

"But," ventured her city host, "where else in all the world would you find a dear old-fashioned lady dining alone at midnight?" They both laughed.

"It is a hodge-podge, this city of ours," her host confessed, "and even I find myself wondering at curious inconsistencies. Only today I stood absorbed in front of a bookstore window display in the financial district. The whole window was devoted to two books and surely stranger bedfellows never shared a common birth. They were 'What Shakespeare Means to Me' and 'Up From the City Streets: The Life of Al Smith.'"

Where Daddy Obtained the Candy

At each stand they paused, impelled mostly by curiosity, often by amusement. No, it was not Coney Island, but its little brother, Long Beach. Here they paused, then, to see the man who could guess your weight within three pounds. If he failed you won a prize—your choice of course.

Gaudily colored swagger sticks, assorted dolls, and the usual array of so-called "prizes" blantantly tempted the potential sucker. The man had guessed wrong three times out of five now, and the crowd was growing. A woman accompanied by her small daughter managed to find a place near the display of prizes. The small girl casually glanced at each group until her eyes became focused on one particular section. Then she looked up at her mother, and quite loudly and distinctly confided:

"Oh, gee, Mom, now I know where Daddy got his candy."

Her Ermine Coat Crushes Her Pride

She was very dignified indeed. Tall, stately and very, very condescending, she entered the church and gave the impression she was conferring a great favor on the rest of the congregation by appearing there. Also she was beautifully dressed in the latest, as far as the congregation knew anyway, Paris style. The crowing glory was a wonderful ermine coat.

She entered just as the services were about to begin and sailed up the aisle to a front seat without, apparently, noticing the rest of the worshipers.

Then she took off the beautiful ermine coat and her dignity suffered a most severe shock.

Every one of the dozens of little ermine tails was carefully concealed in a little cotton bag and held moth-balls.

FULFILLMENT

Deep in your mind are desires fresh and new,
You can fulfill these; it's all up to you;
Maybe the road to fulfillment is rough;
Still, you can get there by trying enough.

Nothing worth having can come to us free.
Life isn't like that for you or for me;
Parts of our lives that are really worthwhile,
Come from an effort, a pain, and a trial.

—John Self Elliott.

That Weakest Excuse

SOMEBODY ought to collect statistics some day to find out whether more human suffering is not caused by boneheadedness than by cussedness.

When someone makes a costly blunder, we're apt to excuse him by saying that "it was a mistake of the head and not of the heart." We seem to feel that if a man "means well," as we say, he can be forgiven almost anything.

But it sometimes seems that nearly all of our troubles come from just these mistakes of the head. Incompetence, not malice or dishonesty, is the great foe of happiness.

Here's an example.

The late Lord Asquith's war diary was printed recently. It gives a number of inside views of the conduct of the world war. And nowhere on earth is there quite such an example of the price people sometimes have to pay for these easily forgiven "mistakes of the head."

Asquith tells how Sir Winston Churchill, then a prominent cabinet member, was all absorbed, at the beginning of 1915, in a plan for a great attack on the Dardanelles. Admiral Fisher, Britain's famous old sea-dog, opposed the plan violently; but Churchill was enthusiastic and carried the day. The allies were to bombard and reduce the Turkish forts, send troops up the straits, capture Constantinople—it was all very nicely planned.

The world doesn't need to be reminded what happened. Of all the battlefileds of the war, Gallipoli was the most tragic. Thousands upon thousands of young Australians died there; and after some months the British ministry was obliged to admit that it was all a ghastly mistake. Troops and warships were called off, and the Dardanelles remained unmolested for the rest of the war.

The attack on the Dardanelles was ordered by men who had the best intentions in the world. But they lacked the wisdom of such men as Admiral Fisher, who was shrewd and war-wise enough to see that the venture would be worse than useless. As leaders, they simply did not measure up to their jobs; and some 50,000 Australians, therefore, had to die.

That's the way things usually work out. It isn't lack of good intentions, but lack of knowledge, ability and foresight, that causes most of our trouble. Never forgive anyone on the grounds that "he meant well." That is the weakest of all possible excuses.

Doctor Gordon's Babies at Homecoming

DR. J. B. GORDON'S babies are to honor the doctor with a homecoming at Bunker, Missouri, this week.

The doctor is 77 years old and during the 56 years of his practice at Bunker he has officiated at the births of 6,774 babies. About 400 of them are expected at the homecoming. Bunker is a village of about 700 inhabitants but Doctor Gordon's practice extended for miles around. The night was never too dark or stormy for the doctor to hear the call of suffering. He won the confidence of his patients and his courage and cheer were as good as his medicine.

The country doctor is rapidly disappearing. The young men who come from the medical colleges go to the cities, the clinics and the hospitals. There are none to take the place of the Doctor Gordons. Good roads and the automobile have made it possible for the country patients to reach the city doctors and the city clinics and hospitals. They also make it possible for the city physician to reach the country patient in time of emergency quicker than the old time doctor could drive out in his buggy.

The city doctor can keep in closer touch with the latest developments of medical science. But we doubt whether he can ever know human nature as well as the country doctor who officiated at the birth of infants, doctored them for croup and measles and was the medical adviser of them and their families through their lives.

A Boy Scout Explorer

IT'S our guess that one of the most interesting members of that daring band who will penetrate the desolate Antarctic with Commander Byrd will be Paul Siple, 19, the Erie, Pa., Boy Scout, who was chosen from among millions of Boy Scouts for that honor.

There is something about the idea of a Boy Scout going to the South Pole with a band of hardy adventurers that challenges the imagination and fires the spirit of youth. His course is certain to be followed with avid interest by millions of boys, their fathers and their mothers.

And we admire the Spartan spirit displayed by Paul's mother, Mrs. Clyde A. Siple, when she learned her boy had been given the honor of making the dangerous trip.

"If the good Lord permitted Paul to be selected, the Lord will permit him to return to me," Mrs. Siple told reporters.

That's a mother who's worthy of her adventurous son.

CLOVER VALUABLE FERTILIZER

Nitrogen is the most expensive fertilizer there is, but a crop of sweet clover when plowed under will add without cost a good supply of nitrogen taken from the air. Sweet clover forage is also high in protein, which is an expensive element in livestock feeds. A second season's growth of a biennial sweet clover may be grazed as pasture from early spring until the plants are too weedy to be palatable, which is usually about the end of July. There is no other plant that will furnish as much grazing as a stand of sweet clover in its second season. This crop will grow almost anywhere, provided there is sufficient lime in the soil and enough rainfall.

CHILDRESS LOWERS TAXES

Taxes and death, say the wise, we cannot escape.

The county and city of Childress both set tax rates in the past week.

Both entered into the task with determination to reduce the rate, found some obstacles, but came out with lower figures than for last year, but a special highway levy will boost the total over last year's mark for taxpayers.

Any community or governmental organization will find taxes a problem. Most modern public officials are sold upon the idea that taxes should be no more of a burden than necessary—and yet how much is necessary? No two citizens would answer the question just alike.

—Childress (Texas) Post.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS — Fontaine Fox

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

An Interruption

Mallingham had not been quite candid with Horace Peters when he said he wanted to be alone and think. His expression after the other man had left him hinted strongly that the time for reflection was past and that the hour for action had struck. There was no trace of fret and anxiety in his cold gray eyes, but no sign of hesitation. He was all alertness and suspenseful watching. A new chapter in the hidden drama of Ernest Mallingham was about to unfold.

He remained seated for a time after Peters had left him, smoking one after another of the very thin and elongated cigarets which were made especially for him. From time to time he glanced at his watch. Once he stepped to the door and looked out in the hall. Save for the noisy carnival of the tempest, everything was quiet. Since it was now well past midnight, it was probable that everybody had retired. There was only one person Mallingham was in doubt about, and that was John Breck, the caretaker. Possibly, however, he had found Curry by this time, or else he had abandoned the search. In either event Mallingham felt he had nothing to fear from such a simple-minded fellow.

Now he opened his traveling bag and, pressing a little spring at the bottom, brought a hidden recess into view. From this he took a small but very efficient pistol, examined the mechanism with an expert eye, and slipped it into his pocket. Next he put on a pair of gloves of a very thin and flexible material, then darkened his room and stepped out in the hall. Horace Peters occupied the third room from his own, and for a moment he stood at the door and listened. The heavy silence satisfied him that the little man was sleeping.

Making scarcely a sound, he went to the stairs and began to descend. Midway down he stopped and listened. The rain was coming down in a deluge, producing an incessant din and clamor on the roof. Though heavily constructed, the house shook and groaned in the gale. There were no sounds of movements about the building however, and Mallingham continued on his way. He entered the library, illuminated only by a few dying embers in the fireplace, and stole softly toward the door in the rear.

In a moment he was inside the little hall, with the door closed behind him. He breathed somewhat more easily now. It would have been awkward if he should have met any one on his way down. He touched a switch and a light flashed up in the ceiling, illuminating the full length and width of the small corridor. The first thing that caught his eye was the clock over the iron door. He looked up at it with a faintly triumphant expression, as if it were a thing that no longer mystified him.

"Thirteen minutes to 3," he mumbled. "I'm a little early."

He took another cigaret from his case. The clock continued to hold his gaze as he touched a match to the tip.

"This ought to make Old Winthrop turn over in his grave," was the thought that amused him while he waited.

"Ernest!"

He swung round sharply as the voice spoke. In his preoccupation he had not noticed that the hall door had opened with scarcely a sound, but the voice that had just spoken had been a startled one.

"You, Julia?" His voice was a little harsh, and the gaze he fixed on her was disapproving. "Why aren't you sleeping?"

"What are you doing here?" she countered.

A subterfuge was on Mallingham's lips, but he held it back. He had no patience with evasions. Now that she had found him there, he might as well face the issue.

"Wait and you will see," he calmly told her.

Her pale-blue eyes were full of alarm. The slight figure shivered within her Japanese dressing-gown. Her mouth—which Mallingham had always thought a trifle too pronounced for perfect symmetry—quivered a little at the corners.

"You—you aren't going to—open the iron door?"

"Why not?"

"You mustn't," Julia was a picture of agitated loveliness. "You know what will happen."

"I don't, and neither do you."

"No, but we have reason to think it will be something—something terrible, Ernest. I thought you promised—"

"I promised to do nothing reckless. I am living up to that promise." For a moment he gazed steadily at the clock above the iron door. "You know I didn't come out here to admire the scenery. It was agreed that we should do a little quiet investigating. I don't intend to delay any longer. I don't quite like the appearance of things, Julia. I'm going to act tonight. It may be too late tomorrow. It will be perfectly safe. I know what I am doing."

She drew in her breath sharply. Her pale-blue eyes were wide with dread. "I'm afraid, Ernest," she said hoarsely. "I feel there will be terrible consequences if you touch that door. Please—please don't! Where is Mr. Peters?"

"In bed. He is useful in many ways, but I don't need assistance tonight. I meant to go ahead on my own, without disturbing either of you. Now that you are here, however, you might as well remain. You may see something interesting."

"I'm terribly frightened, Ernest." She placed her white, slim hand on his sleeve. "I'm frightened for your sake. Please, Ernest—"

Impatiently, Mallingham shook off her hand. "None of that!" he said sharply. "Either pull yourself together, or else leave me alone. Why didn't you stay in bed?"

"Because I couldn't sleep. So many things came to my mind. I was thinking about Hannan. You haven't told me what happened to him."

"Because I don't know. How many times must I tell you that? Anyway what is Hannan to you?"

"Oh, I know, but— Well, I shan't ask any more questions. I only wish you wouldn't do this thing tonight. Why not wait until tomorrow? Oh, Ernest—" She flung out her hands beseechingly.

Mallingham pushed her roughly aside. "Keep still or get out. You are hysterical. Better run along now."

"No, I shall stay here with you." Of a sudden her voice sounded very faint and meek. "Whatever happens to you will happen to me also. I shall stay, but I promise not to argue any more. Only I'm afraid—afraid—"

Mallingham's mood changed. From his impressive height he smiled down upon her. "Brace up," he said gently. "The trouble with you is that you have Old Winthrop and his infernal contraptions on the brain. He has hypnotized you with his mysterious hocus-pocus. Just remember that he is dead, and that dead men can't harm anybody."

She smiled faintly, but the smile dimmed as she glanced up at the clock. "Yes, he is dead, but he lives in that clock. It's been running ever since he died, and nobody knows what makes it. Can't you see, Ernest? Old Winthrop's deeds live after him—and that's what makes me afraid. There's something supernatural, something uncanny—"

"Nonsense!" Mallingham chuckled reassuringly. "It's all natural enough. As for this old clock, you needn't be afraid of it any longer. In exactly seven minutes it is going to stop—forever."

She gasped. Her eyes, staring up at him, grew dazed. She stood rigidly still, not even breathing.

"And we have a shrewd suspicion—haven't we—that the door may be safely entered as soon as the clock stops," said Mallingham, regarding her stupefaction with amusement. "Old Winthrop's curse will have no effect after that. His ghost will be laid for good."

"Yes, but—" The word would scarcely come. "What's going to stop the clock?"

"Something very simple. An ordinary alarm clock is going to stop it, the kind that may be bought for 98 cents."

She shook herself weakly. "You are going to stop Old Winthrop's clock with an—an ordinary alarm clock. You are joking."

"Not at all. An ordinary alarm clock will do the trick, aided and abetted by a length of wire, a fuse, a dry cell and a quantity of explosive material. It's going to happen in exactly five minutes."

She stood staring at him out of big, stupefied eyes. "I don't seem to understand. It sounds so ridiculous."

"All great truths sound ridiculous in the beginning. As you know, I have been thinking a lot in recent weeks, trying to unravel Old Winthrop's secret. I've had a theory for some time, and I'm practically certain it's the correct one. Where do you suppose I went after dinner this evening?"

"How should I know? You came back drenched to the skin."

"Well, for once I didn't mind a drenching. I discovered several things. Among others, I found an old shack a little distance up in the hills. It was packed to the roof with explosives. It seems that some years ago there was a project on foot to drill a tunnel through Old Blighty. The project was abandoned, but a part of the explosives were never carted away. They came in very handy for me. I returned to the house and managed to sneak away a few articles while nobody was looking. Among them was the old alarm clock. I went back up the hill and arranged for a little explosion to come off at precisely 3 o'clock. We haven't long to wait."

Julia rubbed her temples. "I don't seem to understand a thing. Why at 3 o'clock?"

"No particular reason. Two-forty-five or 3:15 would have done as well. I merely wanted it to come off at a time when everybody would be asleep and I could take advantage of the explosion without fear of interruption."

She drew a long breath. "But why did you want an explosion at all?"

"Because the explosion is going to stop Old Winthrop's clock."

"An explosion up in the hills?"

"Precisely," my dear. The thing that has kept Old Winthrop's clock running all this time extends way up in the hills. But I shan't try to explain any more. That overworked little brain of yours has had enough for one night. Besides, we have only one more minute to wait."

The Explosion

Julia fixed a shrinking glance on the clock. Her exquisitely molded face was very white. She leaned against the wall of the narrow corridor, one hand fumbling at her throat. Now and then she looked at Mallingham as if seeking strength against the morbid dread that was shaking her body. He was smiling faintly, a smile of subdued satisfaction. A furtive light softened the cold grayness of his eyes. What he had told her was bewildering, stupefying. Her brain was all giddy whirls when she tried to understand. Only one thing she knew. Within a minute the clock would stop. Old Winthrop's hand, reaching out from the grave, would be powerless. The curse would be lifted from the iron door. It must be so, for Mallingham expected it to happen.

The clock began to strike. She shivered violently. The melodious beats fell like hammer blows on quivering nerves. One—two—three. She had closed her eyes as if to shut out a dread vision, but now she opened them again. How cool Mallingham looked, how sure of himself and his ability to frustrate Old Winthrop's will!

"The alarm clock may be a minute or two behind," he lightly remarked, but she noticed his hand trembled over so lightly as he lighted a fresh cigaret.

The suspense grew to be a torture. She felt she must say something to shatter the terrible stillness, broken only by the ticking of the clock and the remote sounds of the storm.

"Will it be a very violent explosion?"

"Oh, no. I doubt if we shall even hear it. It ought to come any moment now." His eyes were on the clock, as if expecting each tick to be the last. "If I'm not mistaken——"

His shoulders jerked up. Julia clutched his arm convulsively.

A roar came, quick, resilient, like a volume of sound leaping into the air and spending its force in an explosive crack.

"Louder than I expected," Mallingham muttered tensely. Julia clung to him, watching his face that was blanched by a terrific tension. Rigidly, breathlessly, he watched the clock, staring at it through contracted lids, as if it were an indicator of fate.

Another roar came, sharper, longer, more far-reaching than the other. The earth seemed to heave gently, then settle back. A tinkling sound came from shivering window panes. Julia dug her fingers into Mallingham's arms. His face was gray and showed a terrible strain. There was a surprised, baffled look as well.

"Another," he muttered. "I can't understand. Something——"

A monstrous thunder burst on their ears. It rose like a million rockets crashing in unison, swelled into a far flung earth-rending roar, broke into a thousand scattered bombilations and spent itself in a series of rolling rumbles. For a moment the house seemed to rise, shudder, writhe like a colossal monster suddenly awakened from sleep.

A door banged overhead. There came the sharp tinkle of broken glass.

"Lord!" Mallingham exclaimed in a thick voice. "Sounded like the earth cracking. The whole store of explosives must have blown up. A miscalculation——"

Loud shouts drowned his words. Again he looked up at the clock. The lines of his face slackened. His limp lips formed a sickly smile of bafflement.

"It didn't stop the clock. I made a mistake. Listen!" He laughed unnaturally. "The damned thing is still ticking—serenading Old Winthrop's ghost!"

It is now estimated that enough liquor 'll be confiscated at th' Hoosier end o' th' new Indianny-Kentucky bridge o'er th' Ohio t' pay for it in ten days. "Yes, I've won three times lately," said Mrs. Ike Lark, when a guest admired her centerpiece.

Aviation May Become 2-Edged Sword Of War and Peace, Says Air Minister

By HENRY T. RUSSELL

LONDON, Aug. 29. (UP)—Aviation may become a double-edged sword unless some restriction can be put on its power of destruction, and some stimulus given to its uses for peace, a United Press correspondent was told by Britain's secretary for air, Sir Samuel Hoare.

The statement was made during a conversation in Sir Samuel's office at the air ministry, in Whitehall, when the minister was induced to reveal some of the details of his private life and some of his opinions on the future of aviation.

The head of one of the greatest air forces in the world spoke enthusiastically of the progress of aviation. If, only, he explained, the civilizing powers of the airplane could outstrip its destructive uses, aviation will become a greater instrument of peace and not of war.

"But," Sir Samuel said, "aviation today has reached a stage at which it becomes comparable to a two-edged sword. One of the blades is a symbol of the airplane as a formidable weapon of destruction in time of war. The other is a friendly blade, which by slicing the time and distances which separate the various nations of the world, links their peoples together."

Thus, Sir Samuel explained, modern progress in aviation has brought great advantages, but equally great if not a greater disadvantage. Among the advantages he pointed out were an improvement of intercourse among the peoples of the world which was being brought about by international air passenger traffic and increasingly rapid postal services over tremendous distances.

But, he added, one cannot overlook the disadvantages. They included the fact that nowadays frightful destruction could in a very short time be hurled upon the capitals of Europe.

Sir Samuel expressed the opinion that the time has come when the league of nations should use its influence in the forthcoming disarmament conference for restricting the number of machines that are capable of wreaking such havoc.

"As a matter of fact," the minister said, "the matter has been under consideration for some time, but I believe those interested have found certain difficulties on account of the huge scope of the proposed measures."

"I believe," he continued, "that air disarmaments should begin along the simplest lines. It seems to me that the first thing to do would be to restrict the number of machines whose range would be great enough to make these attacks.

"Such a reduction of armaments would have to be accomplished stage by stage. It would only add a difficult complication to try to include civil machines in the reductions to be effected. The problem is gradually to reduce the power of air destruction and to encourage intercourse among nations by increasing commercial airways."

Sir Samuel is well acquainted with the details of both civil and military aviation. He has made numerous flights in air machines in both peace and war times. During the war, he served at the front in France and Italy. He started as a second lieutenant and emerged from his experiences with the rank of colonel.

"The first time I ever went up in an airplane was during the war when, like many of my brother officers, I inspected the lines from the air," explained the minister.

Sir Samuel said his interest in aviation really dated from 1922, when he became air minister, since then, he has flown many thousands of miles, his trips included the first flight to India ever undertaken by a cabinet minister. Sir Samuel's wife, Lady Maud, accompanied him on this now famous flight, thus earning the distinction of being the first woman to fly to India.

Chicago To Be Air Center of Nation

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. (US)—The first step toward making Chicago the air center of the United States will be taken Sept. 8 with the establishment in the Palmer House of a consolidated union ticket office.

This announcement was made today by Thomas Wolfe, Jr., president of the Chicago Air Traffic association. Contracts for this office were signed today.

The depot will be known as the air travel bureau and consolidated ticket office, and will have all the conveniences of a modern station. Bus service will be provided to carry passengers to and from the flying fields.

Air traffic association members include the National Air Transport Inc., Northwest Airways, Inc., Embry-Riddle company, Robertson Aircraft corporation and the Boeing Air Transport, Inc. The total daily mileage of these companies is 15,210 miles.

Bremen Passenger Busy Learning to Fly Plane

BERLIN, Aug. 29. (UP)—Baron Gunther von Huenfeld, backer and passenger of the Bremen's transatlantic flight, is busy learning to fly an airplane, according to reports reaching here. It was said the baron intends to obtain a pilot's license in preparation for another transatlantic flight on which he would act as pilot.

WAR LEADERS DOUBT PACT

Pershing Only One to Laud Peace Treaty

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—While diplomats sing praises for the anti-war treaty signed in Paris Monday, men trained in the art of warfare—officers of the army and navy—look on it with doubt.

Most of them regard it as a mere scrap of paper and do not hesitate to say so—privately.

Gen. John J. Pershing, among the army officers, made the only public utterance of sympathy to the treaty.

"I consider the treaty that was signed yesterday in Paris for the elemination of war as a national policy among the signatory nations as the most important step ever taken toward world peace," he said.

But the opinions of the younger officers—the men who will direct the armies and the batle fleets if another war comes—differ.

"It is all right now," said a major attached to the general staff, "but the generations to come are going to worry about getting out of it. I for one believe that we will have wars in the future and that a treaty will not stop them."

Will Disregard Pact

"If the time comes for another war," an officer, who wore the black braid of the general staff, said, "the signatory nations will march across the treaty like the Germans marched across Belgium."

"Kellogg made mistakes in his Nicaraguan and Mexican policies," a cavalry major said, "and then conceived the idea of the anti-war treaty to make people forget his errors and permit him to leave office in glory instead of disgrace."

"The treaty means nothing," another major declared. "England signed it with one hand and signed a secret pact with France with the other. Who was that pact aimed at? Not Germany or any of the European powers, but at the United States."

Many Officers Cynical

"The anti-war treaty is nothing new," a lieutenant commander said. "European nations have lived under similar understandings since the beginning of civilization and the agreements were broken whenever it suited their purposes."

"President Coolidge, himself, divorced the treaty from the navy building program," another naval officer contended. "If the president did not have enough faith in the power of an anti-war treaty," why should the men who will have to do the fighting if a war comes?"

HOW TO DO IT

Tunney Won Bride by Concentration, Says Noted Lion

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (UP)—A tenth of the people run the world, Col. C. C. Walsh, banker, told the Dallas Lions club at a recent meeting. This 10 per cent maintain their leadership by developing use and control of the faculties and facilities of the sub-conscious mind. Tunney's success in the ring and in love, Colonel Walsh attributed to an early determination to accomplish a purpose and then concentrating on its accomplishment.

Carewe Denies Rumor Of Duel With Del Rio

PARIS, Aug. 29. (INS)—Edwin Carewe, the American motion picture director, and Jaime Martines del Rio, former husband of the Mexican film star, Dolores del Rio, joined tonight in denying reports that they were about to engage in a duel with rapiers.

"It is the most absurd thing I've ever heard," said Carewe when informed of the reports. "Senor Del Rio and myself are the best of friends, and there are no grounds whatever for such ridiculous reports.

"The suggestion is ridiculous," asserted Del Rio when asked if it were true that he had challenged Carewe to a duel. "I've never said any such thing."

ISLAND STILL SEEKS FREEDOM

Filipino Leaders Plan to Educate Masses

Editor's Note: Following is the first of three stories which the United Press will carry bringing out salient points in a present-day evaluation of conditions and prospects in the Philippine Islands. The articles are especially timely in view of action in Washington and Manila which has introduced new factors in the perennial question of Philippine independence.

By RANDALL GOULD
United Press Staff Correspondent

MANILA, Aug. 29. (UP)—The possibility that the Philippines have after four centuries of turbulent history, finally "gone American" is uppermost in the minds of many political observers here.

With cooperation the present watchword in Manila and with storms of other days apparently cleared away, it has been suggested that Filipino independence is a dead issue. Such a suggestion, coming at a time when this important group of the eastern archipelago still represents every stage of civilization from savagery to high culture, must be tempered with a clear understanding of local and political and civil conditions.

Not Easily Labeled

These political leaders, these laborers, these cigar makers and plantation owners cannot easily be put into a single bracket labeled pro or con. The question of independence has been pushed toward the background but these men and women whose progenitors revolted against Spanish oppression have not laid aside all thoughts of independent government.

First, it must be understood that not all of the tribes have the least interest in governmental affairs.

On the other hand the highly civilized types which are the political leaders and representatives of the islands have adopted a new policy.

The truth appears to be that Filipino leaders of the stamp of the astute Osmena and the more fiery Manuel Quezon are acquiring a broad practical basis for their independence campaign. They want to educate their own people toward expectation of independence. At the same time they want to lay the ground-work for a situation where independence can come at the wish of the American public.

During the last few months the problem has been given a breathing spell but it has not decreased in importance.

Senator Sergio Osmena recently summed up the situation with this statement:

"I believe the next three years will be a period of harmony and understanding. Guided by the spirit of mutual respect and tolerance but firm in defense of our ideals we shall be able to better serve the interests of our people, thereby furthering their freedom.

"Within our future status as a sovereign people, our friendship with America will be of incalculable value."

Child Marvel, 6, Develops Genius Without Injuring Health

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (US)—In proof of her theory that a precocious child may develop native ability without injury to health, Dr. Winifred Sackville Stoner whose own daughter was the marvel of educators, today announced the discovery of a new child genius.

At the age of six, Lorraine Jaillet of No. 393 Central Park West, speaks and writes in French, English and Spanish, writes and directs her own dramas; composes poetry, paints and conducts all her correspondence on a typewriter. And despite her unceasing activity, Lorraine has been pronounced by 20 physicians as near physically perfect as a child may be.

Doctor Stoner discovered the child through her work as president of the League for Fostering Genius. Lorraine comes daily to "Mother Stoner" to "play" and in the course of her recreation has developed a mentality which led a committee of the league to pronounce her as obsessed of the "genius spark."

Texan Named Among Alaska Flight Heroes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—Distinguished flying crosses have been awarded to seven airmen who participated in the army's flight from New York to Alaska in 1920, the war department announced.

They are: Capt. St. Clair Street, stationed at Wright field, Dayton, Ohio; Lieut. Clifford C. Nutt, Brooks field, Texas, Lieut. Clarence E. Crumrine, Wright field, Dayton; Erik H. Nelson, formerly a first lieutenant, Seattle, Wash.; Ross C. Kirkpatrick, formerly a first lieutenant, Los Angeles; James D. Long, formerly sergeant, Billings, Mont.; Sergeant Joseph E. English, Langley field, Va.

Rains Kills Japanese Trees at Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (US)—Nearly 300 of the 467 Japanese cherry trees bordering Haine Point whose exquisite beauties at blossom time attracts untold thousands to the nation's capital will never bloom again, agriculture department specialists reported today.

The trees, because of torrential rainfalls have been killed because of too much water, it was stated.

Labor Head Praises Al Smith in Speech

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 29. (UP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a speech before the state federation here, praised Gov. Alfred E. Smith's stand on labor laws.

"You have been fortunate indeed in these late years," Green told the delegates, "in having as governor one who was in full sympathy with your social justice program and who assisted in securing much of this legislation."

SPUDDERS HOME TODAY AFTER WINNING 8 STRAIGHT ON ROAD

CHAMPS SWEEP SPORTS SERIES

Shores Easy Victor, 10-2 In Shreveport Final

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 29.—The crippled, but triumphant Spudders headed homeward tonight, a long and highly successful road trek concluded, and the cinching of the second half title a matter of only a few days. The Spudders trounced the Sports today, sweeping the three-game series, and winning their eighth straight contest.

On this jaunt of 13 days, the champions played 15 games, won 11 and lost four. They divided the first three series, splitting two with San Antonio, four with Waco and two with Houston. The last game was won at Houston, which marked the start of this new winning streak. Beaumont dropped four straight and then the Spudders came to this town to halt the fast-traveling Sports in the three games.

Spuds Increase Lead

By winning oday while the Buffs were rained out with the Exporters, the Spudders gained another half game and increased their lead to eight games.

The Spudders and Sports boarded the same train tonight for Wichita Falls, to play there Thursday and Friday.

Galloway's men hammered five pitchers for 12 hits to win easily today behind the effective chucking of Bill Shores. The score was 10 to 2.

Jenkins and Roetz, playing first base in place of the injured Buck Stanton, each banged three hits, two of the rookie's blows going for doubles. Jenkins also maced a two-bagger.

Turgeon Hits Homer

Pete Turgeon continued the hard hitting and brilliant fielding that has marked his play since the rise of the Spudders. He whaled a home run, his 18th of the season, and ninth of this road trip. Every Spudder except Shores got a hit.

The Spudders scored a run in the second, two in the fifth and seven in the sixth. Roetz singled and doubled in the sixth.

Shores kept the Sports' nine hits scattered and won as he pleased.

Fowler Sees Squires Eat Clams And Says He's Pug, Not Grappler

So Johnny Becomes Fighter, and Gene and Jack Curley Are Displeased at Runyon's Heavyweight Rating

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyr't., 1928, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The man who sent this fellow to me, collect, said he might be a wrestler," explained the good M. Jacques Curley, to Gene Fowler, the pride of Fire island. Armand Curley had rowed out to Fireland in a state of great perturbation to seek Mr. Fowler's advice.

"Somehow the guy don't look to me like a wrestler," he said to Mr. Fowler. "I brought him out here to see if you could identify him. I'd hate to impose on the public by showing them a wrestler who isn't a wrestler. It would hurt business. Please diagnose this man, Gene."

"We'll watch him eat, and then I'll be able to tell more about him," said Mr. Fowler, thoughtfully and Bass John Squires was placed in front of a barge load of clams dug between chapters by Mr. Fowler, while Mr. Fowler watched him keenly. At the 1,018th clam Mr. Fowler rose excitedly:

"Why, he's a heavyweight fighter!" he said. "He looks just like another Jack Dempsey on a clam. Let us fight somebody."

Gene Writes Damon

So now it must be quite clear to you how Mr. Gene Fowler became associated with the good M. Jacques Armand Curley in the management of Bass John Squires, the heavyweight champion of South Africa, and how Mr. Fowler gave over a morning that he might have devoted to chapter V of his novel in the composition of a letter to me, as follows, to wit:

Dear sir:

In your recent rating I should say berating—of the current heavyweights, you quote some rather long odds on the young and old bruisers who now are standing in subway formation for a rush at the vacant throne. In the second division of your list you have placed Johnny Squires, South Africa, in the niche comparable to that occupied in baseball circles by the Phillies.

Mr. Squires you say and then print, is 400 to 1 in that list. When my sagacious colleague, M. Jacques Curley, and I read your form chart we shouted simultaneously:

"Aha! Runyon is the man who struck Billy Patterson!"

We appointed a committee of one to write you our resentment. To decide which one should storm you, we played a round of croquet on M. Curley's baronial acres at Great Necque. Two used wrestlers were employed to assail you and your judgment. The loser now is writing you to say that after you see Mr. Squires in action against Young Stribling at the garden's opening heavyweight tournament, you will be stricken by writer's cramp trying to retract your opinion and your long odds.

When Johnny Squires met Johnny Risko at Detroit a couple of months ago the wise boys were saying it would end in one round. That Risko, the big time-to-retire-man, would loop a left and knock Squires back to the Veidt, the Krall and the Kopf and the Zulu hut of the Transvaal. For, asked the sharps, how can a man travel 11,000 miles, have no time to train, step off a boat and then remain vertical against the toughest, roughest lad in the racket?

Johnny Gets Surprise

And, anyway, even if Squires had defeated such a star performer as George Cook twice, he was up against something else again in Risko. Then what happened, Mr. District Attorney? Squires went 10 rounds. Risko failed to put a mark on him. Squires opened a cut over Risko's eye in the last round. He had Risko's lips puffy. He jarred the gutta percha citizen with jolts to head and body. Jack Dempsey, the referee and actor, gave the decision to Risko. There was nothing wrong with that decision, but it was a close one. A very close one.

What did the sharps say? Some of them, like Harry Bullion, expressed their frank surprise and admitted that Squires was a very good man. But some others explained it this way:

"Risko had an off night."

Now that off night stuff is possible, but it is not a very good alibi. Until now M. Curley and myself have claimed no alibi for Squires, because we feel that he proved his worth in stepping off ship, getting little training and then going the distance with colors flying. And even now we are loath to reveal that Squires stripped a knuckle from his left hand in the seventh round and thereafter had to depend mostly on a right.

Has Fighting Requisites

Squires has youth, speed; weighs 186 pounds, can take care of himself at all times. He now is rounding into top form. He has the experience of the Risko battle and an insight into what is regarded as tough competition. When he meets Stribling, he is going to make you cut down that 400 to 1 estimate draped on him and you'll have to use a mowing machine on your odds.

Even if you did strike Billy Patterson—and there is no doubt but thou art the man—you are known as a game guy, one who can listen to Billy Lahiff talk about golf and watch Wild Bill Lyons fight imaginary armies with his sword cane. You will be the very first to knock at M. Curley's portcullis at Great Necque and ask timidly:

"Can I play croquet with you boys?"

And I warn you in advance, you will be asked:

"You may do so if you printed that letter I wrote you during the shank of August."

And if you show clippings to prove you printed it, you will be most welcome. But bring your own sandwiches, as the wrestlers eat up everything we let lay around loose at M. Curley's manse.

Remember, Wellington licked Napoleon, and it wasn't Napoleon Dorval, either.

Yours in pity rather than malice,
Gene Fowler.
The pride of Fire island.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

TWO SPUDDER cripples returned home yesterday, a day ahead of their team mates, who are back in their own bailiwick this p. m. Brick Eldred acted as nurse for George Stanton, and Stanton nursed Eldred, and by ministering to the ills of the other they managed to reach Wichita Falls from Shreveport without sending an ambulance for them. Stanton was immediately bundled off to the Clinic hospital, where a thorough examination of his injured knee was made. As revealed at Shreveport, after he was hurt Monday night, Buck is suffering from a pulled ligament in his left knee. There is no fracture, praise be. Definite knowledge of the extent of Buck's injury, that is, how long he will be out of uniform, is to be gained from a 24-hour observation of the knee at Clinic hospital.

◆ ◆ ◆

There is a possibility that Stanton will be unable to participate in the playoff with the Buffs. These knee injuries are about the most serious a ballplayer can sustain, and are the hardest to cure. Stanton won't be permitted to play until the injured member is absolutely o. k. again, and that may preclude his pastiming any more this season. That's a mighty tough break for the boy and the Spudders, but if it has to be, it's better for the youngster to stay out of regalia until next year, rather than run the chance of permanent disability.

◆ ◆ ◆

ELDRED STILL is suffering from an injury to his hip, sustained several weeks ago. While Brick is able to play if badly needed and doubtless will be ready for the playoff, he is slowed up and Boss Jeems Galloway is giving him a rest in the hope that he will be at his best within a few days. Doc Smith, who sustained a couple of fractured ribs in Tuesday's game, was unable to accompany Buck and Brick yesterday, as he was suffering from the shock of plunging into a dugout. Eldred, however, brought word that Doc should be able to play within a week or 10 days.

◆ ◆ ◆

SOMEONE, somewhere, spoke out of turn, and a Fort Worth paper yesterday carried a news story to the effect that Stanton and Tom Jenkins have been sold to the St. Louis Browns. It isn't any secret that Phil Ball, president, and L. C. McEvoy, vice president of the Browns, were here a couple weeks ago, during the last Fort Worth series to be exact, and that they discussed buying the pair with J. Alvin Gardner. Other major league clubs also have made overtures for Tom and Buck. But neither has been sold yet, and the story in the Fort Worth paper was entirely without basis, President Gardner said yesterday.

◆ ◆ ◆

TICKETS FOR the playoff games here, September 12 and 13, have been ordered and will be received in about a week, Secretary Guy Airey said yesterday. Except for holders of boxes for the season there will be no reservation of tickets for the playoff. Holders of season boxes may make reservations for the playoff at Spudder headquarters, and they are entitled to six extra seats. The sale of box and reserved seats will be at the Miller and the Renfro Drug stores. Wichita Falls fans desirous of procuring reserved seats for the Spudders' double-header at Fort Worth Monday may obtain them by notifying Airey before Sunday. Guy will be at the Texan hotel at Fort Worth and Wichita Falls fans may secure their tickets from him at that hostelry at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

COCHRAN THIRD IN GOLF MEET

Tom's 151 at Fort Worth 3 Strokes Behind Medal

FORT WORTH, Aug. 29. (AP)—Bob Scott of Colorado captured medalist honors in the tenth annual River Crest invitation and second annual Southwestern Golf association combined tournament with a score of 148 over the 36 holes of qualifying play, which closed today. He was hard pressed by M. L. (Happy) Massingill of River Crest, who scored a 149. Massingill, defending champion, turned in the lowest score over the 18 holes with a 70, three under par.

Tommy Cochran, Wichita Falls, one time champion of Texas, was third with a 151. Cochrane was first to complete the 36 holes of qualifying play and his 151 appeared high until Scott came in with a 71 on his second holes. Scott scored a 77 on the first 18.

Walker Cup Golf Play Opens Today

Bobby Jones Leads United States Defense

CHICAGO GOLF CLUB, Aug. 29. (AP)—Another international war of the golf links is at hand. Opposing camps are pitched tonight on the rain drenched links of the Chicago Golf club. The battle will be the fifth renewal of the Walker cup between British and Americans.

As first competition will be in foursomes, Captain Bobby Jones paired off his golfing soldiery as they will play and tried out the game unusual to Americans, in which two golfers play one ball, with alternate strokes. They did very well, but even Jones and Chick Evans were not as good as they hope to be.

Captain Tweddell of Britain also sent his men afield in final skirmish, but no complete records of the marksmanship were returned.

As arranged tonight, Von Elm and Sweetser will tee off against T. P. Perkins, British champion, and Tweddel, 1927 titleholder. The Americans will alternate in striking their ball from the tee, as will the Britons and then the players will take turn about at swatting the ball until it is holed out.

In the second match, Jones and Evans will pit their strength against Major C. O. Hezlet and W. L. Hope. In the third contest Jimmie Johnston and Francis Ouimet will cross cleeks with Eustace Storey and T. A. Torrance. And in the fourth skirmish, Roland MacKenzie and Watts Gunn will measure up with John Beck and Dr. A. R. MacCallum.

Dallas Truck Driver Probably Fatally Hurt

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—The victim of Dallas' most unusual accident during the year, S. M. Hart, 28, was in a hospital suffering from probably fatal injuries received today when a truck in which he was riding failed to clear a railroad overhead bridge.

The vehicle, too high to pass under the crossing, crashed. Hart, who was seated in the back, was crushed beneath the truck body when it struck the bridge.

Arctic Rescue Ship Joined by Aviator

BERGEN, Norway, Aug. 29. (UP)—The Russian icebreaker Krassin, searching for explorers and rescuers lost in the fatal Italia expedition, proceeded to Kings Bay today where the Russian aviator Chukhnowsky joined the vessel. The icebreaker will continue to Franz Josefland, where a base will be established.

Camp Fire Girls Net Meet Starts

The first round eliminations of the Camp Fire Girls' tennis tournament were held Wednesday afternoon at Bellevue park, under the direction of Mrs. R. E. Davis.

The winner of the singles matches will receive a silver loving cup given by Julian Bobo.

One match remains in the first round eliminations. It is scheduled between Nadin eLoofburrow and Edith McClure and will be played Thursday afternoon.

The most exciting encounter of the evening was won by Evelyn Van Emden from Lois Sisk in the third set. Other matches which were played Wednesday are as follows:

Thelma Bridges defeated Clarice Clark.

Amy Louise Meredith defeated Louise Van Emden.

Lois Corbin defeated Lee Ellen Bordman.

Coyote Gridders Leave For Craterville Camp

Led by Coach Bud McCallum and Captain Harvey Black, 35 candidates for the Wichita Falls high school football team left Wednesday morning for Craterville Park, Okla., on a 10-day pre-season training camp.

The Coyotes are scheduled to leave Craterville, September 8, and to go immediately into practice games for the coming conference season.

Gardner Denies Sale of Players

No Deal Consummated For Jenkins and Stanton

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—Official denial of reports that Tom Jenkins, outfielder, and Buck Stanton, first baseman, of the Wichita Falls team of the Texas league had been sold to the St. Louis Browns was made today by J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Wichita Falls club.

Replying to a telegram of inquiry from The Associated Press, Mr. Gardner said:

"Your message received. Have not sold players, Jenkins or Stanton. Please make denial. It is true am trying to sell them to major club, but deal not consummated yet.

(Signed): "J. Alvin Gardner."

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Department of entomology which blooms down in Washington is up against what Tunney would call a cul-de-sac.

Which is French for a blind alley.

A Long Island lady who is tired of slapping her stockings has imported a stable of cannibal mosquitoes from the home factory in Africa.

There is an embargo on all kinds of cannibals during the fruit and berry season. Entomology is the human study of insects.

Quite too often entomology is mutual. While you are looking at an insect through a microscope he takes a sudden detour and does some fancy needlework on your neck.

The Long Island lady says the cannibal skeeters will chew the ears off the ordinary mosquito and will not attack human beings except in times of national stress and peril.

She wants to turn the cannibals loose on the Atlantic seaboard. But she doesn't guarantee to keep 'em off the Lincoln highway.

Dr. Preston of the health squad refuses to allow the cannibals to take out their first citizenship papers.

Every winged leopard of the swamps is imbued with the desire to take the national census first hand. He requires no assistance and one sharp dot on the line makes his contract legal.

But good old Doc Preston is holding out for a better offer. He wants to know what happens after the cannibals Fletcherize the native skeeters. What do they eat next?

Even if they are vegeterians they are liable to mistake a citizen for a carrot.

Suppose they kill off all the ordinary chilled steel skeeters? Will the unrequited pangs of suburban hunger drive them to feast on the open-faced commuter?

The standardized brand of mosquito is no household pet. He has thrived and prospered until he is the Nordic of the insect world.

The Long Island lady is trying to make the situation better by making it worse.

Any full grown marsh eagle can stand on his hind legs and look through a keyhole. They are big, fat and actually build nests like crows. But suppose we are attacked by a flotilla of international humming birds with revolving beaks that can drill through the foundations of the federal reserve bank in Cleveland and kill a cashier in Detroit?

We are with Doc Preston. We will stick to our old porch playmates rather than be forced to have our mosquito netting made by the Bethlehem Steel corporation.

Palestine Beats San Angelo, 8-3

Pals Capture Opener Of Class D Title Series

PALESTINE, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—The Palestine Pals lambasted the offerings of Clements to all corners of the lot, defeating the San Angelo Snappers 8 to 3 in the first game for the class D championship of Texas here today.

Betts kept 10 San Angelo hits well scattered. Comeaux, second baseman for the Snappers, led the West Texas club in hitting. Coor, with a single, double and triple out of four times at bat, starred for the Pals. Score:

Vernon Prep Grid Squad Starts Work

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Aug. 29.—The curtain rose Monday afternoon on the Vernon Lion football season when equipment was issued to 35 aspirants. Coaches W. C. Weir and J. B. Liles immediately sent the candidates through a comparatively brisk workout.

The first session revealed little in experienced men. It did indicate that the backfield for this year's team, unless unforseen material is found later, will be the lightest in the history of Vernon football. The Lion secondary defense will average considerably less than 150 pounds.

Nurmi May Head Tour Of U. S. Staged by Pyle

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (UP)—A report was circulated in track and field circles here today that Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish distance runner, would head an American invasion of Finnish athletes this winter under the direction of Charles C. Pyle, professional promoter.

In the group would be Willie Ritola, winner of the Olympics 5,000-meter race; Harry Larva, winner of the 1,500 meter race and Toiva Looukola, winner of the steeplechase.

It was said that El Quafi, French Algerian, who won the marathon, also would join the group.

Cuba Will Adhere To Briand-Kellogg Treaty

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 29. (UP)—Cuba will adhere to the Briand-Kellogg peace treaty, the state department announced today. State department officials indicated their belief that the remaining Latin-American republics would follow Cuba's example.

STANFORD GRID ELEVEN STRONG

'Pop Warner Says Team Best in His Career

By CARLE H. BENNETT

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—United Press Staff Correspondent Football on the Pacific coast will be dominated this fall by Stanford university.

Stanford holds the mythical championship of the nation as a result of its victory over Pittsburgh in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena New Year's day and has materials for a stronger team this season.

The Cardinals have undoubtedly taken a commanding position in arranging their schedule. Supremacy of the coast cannot be determined until after Stanford has met Idaho, University of Southern California, Washington and California. With the single exception of Oregon State these competitions are the outstanding teams of the region.

Down on the "farm," as the Stanford campus is known, 18 members of last year's team are assembling, although conference rules forbid actual practice before Sept. 15. They talk mostly of the contest with Army in New York, Dec. 1.

Hoffman Optimistic

"Biff" Hoffman, captain-elect, has been listening to the merry tinkle of a cash register in his restaurant and soda fountain in Palo Alto, adjoining the campus, all summer, and it is the meeting place of the returning football players.

"I expect we will go through the season undefeated," Hoffman predicted. "I don't think there will be a team in the conference strong enough to beat us."

The veteran of 33 years of campaigning on the gridiron, Glenn "Pop" Warner, admits that he has the best team since he started coaching and he has a reputation of never being overly optimistic.

"While I have had teams of 11 better men I have never had more good material," Warner said. "We will have to carry a large varsity squad this fall which means that the coaching staff will necessarily be distributed and hence our prospects are not much better than in the past two or three years. However we will have an abundance of reserve material which will help considerably."

Loses Seven Lettermen

Stanford has lost seven lettermen but only one, Curtis Freeman, at tackle, has caused a noticeable weakness.

Warner is going to use what he calls the "B" formation this year. Hoffman, the fullback, will call signals in a huddle and the quarterback will run interference, carry the ball and act as a secondary fullback.

Herb Fleishhacker and Chub Valling are the leading candidates for quarterback. The halfbacks will probably be Frank Wilton, who can pass, kick or run; Bob Sims, a slippery man through the line, or Ralph Frentrup.

The probable line is Walt Heinecke at center, Seraphim Post and Don Robeski as guards, Roland Sobiman and Ted Klabau as tackles and the old combination of Harder and Johnny Preston on the ends.

Mickey Walker Talk of Gotham

'Bulldog' Now Viewed As Light Heavy Contender

By ED FRAYNE

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (US)—Successively the welterweight and middleweight titleholder "Mickey" Walker now stands on the threshold of still another world boxing championship.

The toy bulldog, now grown to Newfoundland proportions, was the talk of the town today. His knockout of Armand Emanuel, who outweighed him by 12 pounds at San Francisco on Monday night was the most startling upset the fight game his produced this year.

In his last ring appearance at Madison Square garden in this city Emanuel extended Tommy Loughran as Tommy had never been extended before or since. Six thousand spectators unanimously denounced the referee, the judges, the boxing commission and the Democratic and Republican parties when Loughran was declared the winner.

Walker's complete mastery of Emanuel was nothing less than astounding.

So impressive was Walker's showing that even Tex Rickard reluctantly admitted that he would be glad to use Mickey against either Jack Delaney or Tommy Loughran. To understand what a tribute this was, it must be recalled that Rickard and Jack Kearns, who manages Walker, have not spoken for two years. Rather than fight for Madison Square garden, Kearns has kept Walker out of New York.

"It sure surprised me," was Rickard's comment. "I thought Emanuel would outbox him sure. I'd be glad to use Walker against either Delaney or Loughran."

Pal Silvers Outfights Veteran Jack Britton

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (UP)—Pal Silvers, Brooklyn welterweight, defeated Jack Britton, former welterweight champion, in a 10-round bout at the Queensboro stadium tonight before 6,000 fans. Silvers weighed 151¼, Britton 149¼.

Britton was too busy most of the bout warding off his opponent's blows to land effectively himself. He rallied in the eighth and ninth rounds, but was so tired he clinched frequently in the 10th.

Roads in Scotland Park To Be Wider

The roads through Scotland park, which have not been able to accomodate the traffic, will be widened at once, it was learned at the park department offices Wednesday. Actual widening will be started Thursday and completed in a few days.

Recently, a portion of the road past the animal cages was blocked off as it was found impossible to take care of traffic in that part of the park without danger to the pedestrians.

The new roads will make it possible to drive through the park with ease at any time and at the same time serve all parts of the park, it was said.

Hagen Paces Farrell In 'Title' Golf Play, 1 Up

DETROIT, Aug. 29. (AP)—The veteran, Walter Hagen, holder of the British open golf championship, defeated Johnny Farrell, youthful American open champion, 1 up at the Western Golf and Country club today in the first of their 36 hole "world championship" series.

Their other matches are scheduled to be played in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

BOLT KILLS FARMER

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Arthritis Deformans

In this disease a pain of the joints is the first symptom. It may be either an acute or chronic form. In the acute type there is some fever, and the joints are swollen and sore to touch. The finger joints are most often affected, the spine next, and the knees third, although any joint in the body may be attacked.

The joints become swollen because of a thickening of the capsule of the joint and the surrounding tissues. Gradually there is a bony enlargement producing great deformity. This is accompanied by an atrophying and wasting of the muscles. Extreme cases are pitiful as the patient becomes helpless, with his legs and arms drawn up and fixed, unable to walk. This disease occurs most frequently between the ages of 25 and 50, although it may occur in children and the extremely aged.

Arthritis is considered a secondary infection to some other part, possibly the sinuses, nasal passages, pyorrhea, bronchitis, gonorrhea, prostatitis, inflammation of the middle ear, tonsillitis, pelvic diseases, and infections of the intestinal and bile tracts. Meat is not the cause of this disorder as many people suppose.

Arthritis patients seem to be unable to handle the ordinary amount of carbohydrate foods. The toxins in the blood stream seem to originate from the fermentation of the sugars and starches in the intestinal tract. Many patients suffer severe pains after using these in their diet. Lactic acid from sour milk and fermenting cabbage also seems to contribute to the soreness.

As the body endeavors to protect the joints against the acid of the blood, it throws out a secretion around the joint which solidifies into the bone. This inflammation and deposit produce an enlargement of the joints, forcing them out of shape and causing a deformity. This is sometimes so severe as to throw the joint entirely out of its normal position.

Arthritis deformans is usually considered incurable, but I have seen some remarkable cures in this disease, even in advanced cases, where the patient had the stamina to closely adhere to the dieting regime for a long period of time. Quick results cannot be expected because of the bony changes that are taking place. First, the original focal infections must be cleared up by fasting and local treatments. Then the extreme virulent toxins present in the patient's body must be eliminated, and lastly, the bone must be given an opportunity to completely heal.

With this disorder it is advisable for the patient to remain reasonably quiet so that there will be no greater irritation of the joints. The patient must be kept constantly warm during the processes of cure. It is of the utmost importance that the diet be regulated to avoid all fermentation in the intestinal tract.

Questions and Answers

Question—R. G. writes: "For some time I have been troubled with a swelling at the corner of my left eye. When I press at the side or under it there is a discharge which seems to come from a pinpoint of an opening in my lower lid just as though there was a hair out. I have very little pain from it, but I would like if you could tell me what to do, as I am afraid it might cause some disease of the bone of my cheek or nose."

Answer—It would be wise for you to consult an oculist and have him give his opinion the cause of your trouble. If the treatment which he suggests does not help you, write me again, giving me his diagnosis, and I will make whatever suggestions I think best.

Question—Mrs. Jerry H. writes: "Have been reading your health articles and listening in on your radio talks and am very much interested. Will you please give a list of non-starchy vegetables?"

Answer—Practically all vegetables are non-starchy except potatoes and Hubbard squash. Here is a list of those I consider best to use, both raw and cooked: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, summer squash, cucumber, egg plant, beet tops, turnip tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, pumpkin, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant, mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, alligator pear, and ripe olives.

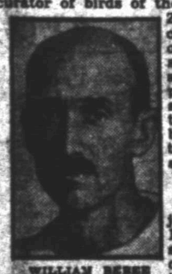

Question—Mrs. A. G. S. writes: "Please advise me what to do with a child that holds its breath till it is black in the face and lifeless. What causes this condition?"

Answer—When a child cries so hard that it holds its breath for a long period of time it is usually because it suffers from periodic attacks of indigestion due to wrong feeding. He is frantic to tell you about it, and probably loses his temper because he cannot properly express himself. The shock from the application of a cold towel over the body is a good cure for this habit.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By WILLIAM BEEBE

WILLIAM BEEBE

The Hon. William Beebe is the director of the Haitian expedition, curator of birds of the New York Zoological Society, director of tropical research and all-around explorer. Besides all of this, Mr. Beebe has written more than a dozen books.

"A favorite joke with me" Mr. Beebe said "is any one I happen to know which none of my friends have heard. The following joke is my favorite now, but will not be after I have told it to you, because then every one will know it:

"A man who lived in a small, unlighted village spent an evening with a neighbor in joyful, alcoholic celebration, and late that night, with difficulty, found his way to his own home.

"The next morning the son of his host of the night before knocked at the door.

"'Please, sir,' the boy said, 'here is your lantern—may we have our parrot back?'"

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE — (386) OUR PRESIDENTS

Fiery-tempered Andrew Jackson, beloved by friends and feared by enemies, was one of the most colorful characters ever elected to the presidency of the United States. He had felt the lash of the Revolution, seeing his brother die of disease during the war, and later his mother, while she was nursing the sick upon the Charleston prison vessels.

An orphan at 16, penniless, he began to study law at Salisbury, North Carolina. At 21 he was named prosecutor of the western district of North Carolina.

When 29, Tennessee elected him representative in Congress. Here, strange to say, he was a fierce opponent of President Washington.

Jackson was a man of violent temper and carried to his death a wound received in a duel with a man named Charles Dickinson. But Hon. Thomas H. Benton writes of visiting him as Jackson sat in the twilight before a fireplace, a lamb and a child in his lap. The child had cried because the lamb was out in the cold and had begged him to bring it in. (To Be Continued)

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (AP)—Early advances were followed by declines in the cotton market today with December contracts selling off from 19.17 to 18.75 and closing at the lowest. The general market closed easy at net declines of 9 to 17 points.

The opening was very steady at an advance of 13 to 20 points and the active months sold 23 to 27 points net higher during the early trading on covering and buying promoted by bullish crop advices, apprehensions that further showers in the South would stimulate boll weevil activities, and unfavorable private weekly reviews of crop progress.

October contracts sold up to 19.26 and March to 19.14, with all positions selling well above the recent level, but the advance was checked by realizing at these figures, and the market weakened after the publication of the weekly report of the weather bureau. This report, evidently, was less bullish than expected, and the market acted as if there had been considerable buying recently in anticipation that the weekly review would furnish a basis for profit taking. Offerings increased and the market worked gradually lower during the afternoon.

There were little spurts of covering which caused more or less irregularity, but the bulges met increased offerings with the market becoming more active and weaker late in the afternoon. The bulk of the selling was attributed to realizing for liquidation, but there was a little more southern selling here in the last half hour which probably encouraged some selling by local or Wall street interests. October broke to 18.90 and March to 18.72 and closing prices were the lowest of the day.

Port receipts today 25,537. U. S. port stocks 479,251. Exports 24,277, making 245,509 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 29. (AP)—An early advance of about $1.50 a bale was followed by reactions in the cotton market today and although prices fluctuated frequently rather heavy liquidation was encountered in final trading on fears of large private crop forecasts. December contracts which had traded up to 18.69, or 26 points net up, eased off to 18.32 and closed at 18.34, compared with 18.43 at yesterday's close. The general market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 13 points.

The market opened higher in sympathy with bullish Liverpool cables. The English market came in 2 to 3 penny points higher than due and private cables attributed the firmness there to continental buying, trade calling and shorts covering. First trades here showed gains of 11 to 15 points and before the initial demand was supplied October contracts reached 18.62 and the general market showed advances of 23 to 28 points. Several reports of crop deterioration added to the firmness.

When the weekly weather and crop summary was issued traders at first construed it as mildly bearish although the report as a whole was mixed. Early buyers sold and before the offerings were absorbed October reacted to 18.38 and December 18.45, or 24 points down from the highs but still 1 to 3 points over the previous close. Continued unfavorable crop reports carried values up 12 points from the lows but after mid-session fears of large private estimates and bearish crop condition averages brought out liquidation which carried prices off to new lows for the day at 18.25 for October and 18.32 for December or 37 points under the early highs and 9 to 11 points below yesterday's close. There was a minor rally at the end and October closed at 18.27 and March 18.48, or 6 and 12 points, respectively, lower for the day.

Radio Scores Sensational Gain In Irregular Session of Stock Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (US)—Stocks closed irregular after another strong session today. Volume of trading approached closer to the 4,000,000-share level with the tape more than 20 minutes late at times as bull leaders forced shorts covering in Radio, Montgomery Ward and others and new buying of other favorites came in from out in the country. Radio scored the most sensational gain for the day. Steel slumped after reaching new high ground in active trading but Can, General Motors, and other standard industrials held part of their gains to the close. Railroads remained somewhat irregular in the face of the very favorable earnings reports for July. Smelting and Anaconda enjoyed the best demand in the copper group as others held to fractional price range. Gold Dust and Loose Wiles featured the specialties.

Money Rates Holds

The official call money rate was held at 7½ per cent throughout but its effect was nullified as several loans were made outside of regular channels at 7 per cent. There was feeling on the floor that the money tightness over the month-end might not prove as drastic as has been generally expected. It was recalled that the powerful interests influenced sufficient outside funds only a week or so ago to put the call rate down to 4 per cent. It was out also that a very prominent banker recently forecast a 6 to 6½ per cent call level. However, the banks have to adjust with the reserve tomorrow afternoon and any easing of funds outside of regular banking channels would likely to have but momentary effect.

Motors Under Pressure

Some General Motors covering was influenced by the report that directors were planning a special meeting for stock dividend action which was scoffed at in quarters usually most familiar with Motors' affairs. Chrysler and other motor shares continued under pressure although the Chrysler group were rumored to be building up a technical position that would enable another whirl in the stock. Paramount and Famous were helped by the publicity given the "talking movie" by the Paris treaty signing. Warner held back although important announcement was forecast for the next fortnight. Park & Tilford and other Schulte shares were held strong on expectation of development within the next fortnight that will indicate further increase in earnings.

Armour Active

New York Central responded further to the report of plan for electrification of the New York state lines. St. Paul preferred turned active as interests recently responsible for fireworks in several industrials turned their attention thereto. There was widespread bullish talk on National Cash Register but the stock met quite heavy profit taking and was held to fractional gain. The forecasts as to Cash Register remained one of the talk concerning Radio some months ago. Armour "A" was active and higher early in the day as one of the largest firms sent out list of stocks for "careful speculation" in which Armour "A" was the only one mentioned in the $10 to $25 class.

Grain

GRAIN REVIEW

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. (US)—Grains failed to hold the advances made Tuesday and ruled weak and lower throughout the session today. There was not much fresh news that was applicable to either the buying or selling side and the easiness was attributed to a weakened condition of the markets following the previous day's short covering.

At the close wheat was 1¼c to 1½c lower, corn was 1⅛c to 1½c down, oats were ⅛c to ⅛c off, and rye was 1⅜c to 1½c lower.

Wheat lacked the buying power necessary to sustain prices at the levels of the previous day's close, for there was naturally considerable profit taking in the early trading. However, when the market sold off fair buying developed, although it failed to follow the bulges.

The sharp upturn in corn which had caused short covering in all the pits Tuesday also lacked hte support of good buying and prices eased off from a firm opening. Trade was only moderate and as in wheat the market showed a rather nervous tone and was very susceptible to either buying or selling.

With the exception of Nebraska, all of the corn states advised of favorable crop conditions. Crop reports from Nebraska were again pessimistic.

The leading holders of cash corn again claimed considerable corn sold, but no details of the transactions were given out to the trade.

In the cash market wheat was unchanged to 3c higher with the basis unchanged and firm. Demand was fairly active. Local shipping sales totaled 6,000 bushels and there was a total of 65,000 bushels sold to go to store.

The demand for cash corn was of moderate proportions with the basis 1½c to 3c lower, while prices were steady. Local sales totaled 48,000 bushels.

Drilling Resumed on North Vernon Co. Well

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Aug. 29.—Drilling has been resumed on the North Vernon Oil company's No. 1 Lutz, a test located about four miles northwest of Vernon. The test was shut down recently after reaching the contract depth of 2500 feet. Officials of the company put the matter of drilling deeper up to the people of the city, and money for drilling deeper was raised by public subscription. It is planned to drill the test to the 3,500 foot level.

Local Markets Unchanged As Cotton Closes Steady

All local markets were unchanged Wednesday with cotton closing steady at 18 cents following only slight variations in the central markets during the day.

STOCK-A-DAY

SPANG, CHALFANT & CO., INC.

Five Year Record

Spang, Chalfant & Company, Inc., which was formed in Pennsylvania in 1899, was recapitalized in 1928, acquiring in the process the entire business and assets of the Standard Seamless Tube Co., and 100,000 shares of the total of 375,625 shares of the common stock of the Oil Well Supply company.

The corporation manufactures welded and seamless tubing. It has plants at Etna and Ambridge, Pa., with a combined capacity of 600,000 tons a year. It has sales offices in New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis and Dallas, Tulsa, Fort Worth and Los Angeles.

Net income of the combined companies in 1927 amounted to $2,559,963, or the equivalent of $21.79 a share on the preferred stock, and $2.47 a share on the common. This compared with $4,660,130 in 1926.

Funded debt consists of $10,000,000 in gold bonds due in 1928. Capital stock outstanding includes $11,750,000 in 6 per cent cumulative preferred of $100 par, and 750,000 shares of no par common. In 1928 provision is made for an annual sinking fund which will gradually retire the preferred stock, which has equal voting rights with the common.

As of January 1, 1928, a pro-forma balance sheet giving effect to the acquisition of the assets and assumption of the liabilities of the Standard Seamless Tube company, and other adjustments, showed total current assets of $8,730,000; current liabilities of $1,861,672, and net working capital of $6,868,328. Book value of the stock amounted to $11.59 a share.

This Boy Goes With Byrd

(By NEA Service)

Erie Pa., Aug. 29.—Paul A Siple, Erie Boy Scout, is going to "the bottom of the world" with Commander Richard E. Byrd's South pole expedition and faces two years in the desolate and frozen wastes of the Antarctic, with a band of hardy adventurers, but the least worried about it are his father and mother here.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Siple and confidence supreme is theirs.

"My only instructions to my son will be to take with him the Boy Scout manual and an American flag, place them as far south as he possibly can and then come back to me and report," says the father.

"If the good Lord permitted Paul to be selected for this expedition, the good Lord will permit him to return to me," says his mother. "I have the utmost confidence in Commander Byrd and I know that he will take care of my boy."

And Paul's comment is, "I'm going to play a man's part."

Breaks News to Parents

Clyde Siple, the father, was working at his job in the shops of the General Electric company here when Paul bounded in, excitedly, with the news that he had been selected from among the nation's Boy Scouts to accompany Commander Byrd's expedition.

"Dad," he almost shouted, "I'm going to the South pole with Commander Byrd. They've chosen me to represent the Boy Scouts."

The elder Siple wiped his grimy hand with a rag and extended it to Paul.

"Put her there, son," he said, quietly.

And then Paul hurried home to break the news to his mother. Mrs. Siple looked at her tall, handsome son for a moment and then she flung both arms around him and kissed him, smiling happily through a flood of tears.

"Yes," said Mrs. Siple, after the excitement had quieted and the neighbors began to come in and offer their congratulations to Paul, "I have the utmost confidence in Commander Byrd. Really, our whole family feels like explorers. Night after night we have pored over the maps of the trip and read the books of Commander Byrd's previous polar expeditions until we feel as though we were all making the trip."

"Thrilled to Death"

Paul, himself, is thrilled over the prospects of the Antartic trip—and what red-blooded American boy of 19 wouldn't be? He knows Commander Byrd personally because he and five other Boy Scouts met him when they went to New York recently to be personally examined as to their fitness for the trip. It was from the six, representing Boy Scouts in all parts of the United States, that the final selection was made.

"Of course, I'm thrilled to death," Paul said. "I knew that I had one chance in six to get the trip, but the other five boys were all very good, and it must have been a hard job to make the selection.

"Commander Byrd is a prince of a fellow and I'm willing to follow him anywhere he leads. I am prepared to take a man's part in the expedition and I am certain the Boy Scouts of America will be proud that one of their number has been granted the opportunity to follow the American flag to the South pole."

Since joining the Boy Scouts nine years ago, Paul has taken a leading part in everything. If he had to wear all his scout medals and awards he would not have room on his blouse for them, because he has won more than 60. He is also a sea scout and an honor mate in that organization, which stood him in good stead when he was being considered for the polar trip.

Paul's troop is No. 24 of the Park Presbyterian church.

Praised by Leader

"He is the most conscientious and dependable Boy Scout I have ever worked with," says Harry E. Frayer, Erie's chief scout executive and the man who entered young Siple in the Byrd contest. "He is not only interested in making a fine record for himself, but in seeing that other scouts do so, too. In all the scout tests, he has made the highest possible grades. He has a great ambition to be a scout executive."

The tall, heavy set, good natured and unassuming boy has a magnetic personality and affableness that is expressed in the Spokesman, year book of Central High school, of 1926:

"Here is a fellow who is so good natured and fun loving that one can't help liking him. We know that he will gather a wealth of friends wherever he may go, with his winning smile and kind ways. Every one of his associates feel him to be a trustworthy friend."

Production in New Jones Co. Well Increases to 1800 Barrels Daily

ABILENE, Texas, Aug. 29.—Production of the Snowden and McWeeny No. 1 Bickley, in southwest Jones county, steadily increased during Wednesday. During four hours immediately after noon the production of the well gauged 300 barrels. Operators who estimated the well as a 1,500 barrel a day producer, early Wednesday morning when it made its first flow of 50 barrels in an hour, have changed their predictions and now rate it as 1,800 barrels or better. Oil from this well tests between 39 and 40 degrees gravity, and is the same as that produced in the Noodle Creek and Tiner pools. The new strike is four miles north of Noodle Creek.

More interest and activity was manifested here Wednesday in the lease trading on stuff in the vicinity of the Bickley well, than has been shown since the first discovery of oil in Jones county. Almost two years ago, by Phillips Petroleum company in their No. 1 Joe Winter.

White Wings Work At Night to Avoid Heat

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—City street laborers have been put on night shifts to escape intensive heat, city officials announced today. The system also has the advantage of being less hindrance to traffic.

Mrs. Chaplin's Funeral Service To Be Private

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 29. (UP)—Private funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Mrs. Hannah Chaplin, 61, mother of Charles and Sydney Chaplin, of screen fame. She died shortly after noon in a Glendale hospital.

An acre of good fishing will yield more food in a week than an acre of the best land will yield in a year.

Nine Mexican Rebels Slain by Federals

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 29. (AP)—Nine rebels were killed and three captured when federal troops routed a band of 60 insurgents at Pinal ranch in the state of Zacatecas Sunday night, say dispatches received here.

NEWS of the FIELD

The Panhandle Refining company is drilling at 500 feet on its No. 1 McKelvey test located in the S. Hughson survey, abstract 256, near Bryson in Jack county.

RESETTING CASING

The Gulf Production company is resetting pipe on top of the sand at 1392 feet in its No. 3 Mayter located in section 2409, T. E. L. survey, southeast of Megargel in Archer county.

FLEW INTO TOWN

L. P. (Pink) Hammand, operator who has been spending some time at his ranch near Wagon Mound, N. M., returned via airplane Monday.

STUMP ET AL, LOCHRIDGE

E. J. Stump and associates, putting down a test on the Lochridge farm, south of Iowa Park in Wichita county, are drilling at 1420 feet.

KRUGER-TUBEVILLE

In the northwest corner of section 176, McKinney-Williams survey, abstract 314, Archer county, the Sam Kruger and associates No. 1 is drilling at 1,000 feet.

PANHANDLE-MENARD CO.

Later reports from the Panhandle Refining company's No. 1 Eckard test, on the W. W. Silk Geological syndicate 12,000-acre tract near the town of Menard in the county of that name, are that the true sand was encountered at 3,001 feet and penetrated three feet when the well showed considerable oil and a little gas. At present there are 600 feet of cavings in the hole. This is being cleaned out and six-inch casing will be run to the sand.

NORTH OF OMOHUNDRO

The Underwood drilling company No. 1 Pace in the Scott survey, north of the Omohundro producers in southwest Wichita county, is drilling at 1,600 feet.

WAYNE HAMMOND-BURNSIDE

Hammon and other No. 1 Burnside in southwest corner of J. M. Sharp survey, abstract 262, Wichita county is drilling at a depth of 1,800 feet.

South Kansas Well Gets Attention

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 29.—The most exciting well in the southern part of Kansas is the Gypsy Oil company, Marland Production company and Bu-Vi-Bar Petroleum corporation No. 1 Wright, in the southeast of the northeast of the southeast of 12-26-1 west, eight miles north of Wichita in Sedgewick county.

The gusher was 18 days old Sunday and during that time the well has produced 30,580 barrels of 42.8 gravity oil. It is estimated that the well has produced $50,762.80 worth of oil. It is flowing natural and the pay only scratched.

The highest production mark was 1,728 barrels. The 24 hours ending Tuesday morning, the well produced 1,692 barrels. There has been very little drop in the well's production.

More than a million and a half dollars has been paid the farmers for leases and royalties since the well came in. A large block was made up by Hartman and Skaer and Max Reynolds. A location has been made on the Nelson Froman farm, in the southwest quarter of 35-25-1 east.

The fence was removed from around the well Sunday and the crowds, equaling those that came to the ElDorado and the Augusta fields when they were opened up, were allowed to see the big producer.

Police Chief Warns Against Hopping Rides

A large number of complaints have reached police headquarters recently of boys who "hop" automobiles in the residential section of town and ride for a few blocks on the running boards of these cars, according to Chief of Police Frank Burns.

In asking that parents instruct their children to desist from such practices Chief Burns pointed out the danger to the children from these "stolen" rides.

"It is the main aim of the traffic department to prevent automobile mishaps," Chief Burns declared, "and this cannot be done unless we have co-operation from everybody. If parents will instruct their children to quit "hopping" the automobiles as they pause at stop signs, they will help us prevent many accidents among children."

Coleman Co. Test Fills With High Grade Oil

COLEMAN, Aug. 29.—Drilling slowly ahead, the Roth & Faurot No. 1 J. T. Nixon, 330 feet from the north and east lines of section 50, Burnet county school lands No. 703, had today filled 2,950 feet with high gravity oil and operators were expected to start swabbing and pumping the test within the week.

In the Overall pool, Continental, Cheney, Midwest, Atlantic and Humble No. 7 Overall had topped the Caddo lime below 2,500 feet and will likely test that formation 200 or more feet before abandoning the test.

Guests Rescued From Burning Waco Hotel

WACO, Texas, Aug. 29. (AP)—Guests clad only in night clothing fled from a hotel here today when smoke from fire in a basement barber shop filled their rooms.

Firemen put out the blaze without damage to the hotel.

Heat Victim in Hospital

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—Harry Smith, 65, was in a serious condition in a hospital here today as the result of being overcome by heat yesterday. George Hartford, 45, who was stricken while operating a lawn mower, was slightly improved.

HOOVER PLANS FEW SPEECHES

Candidate to Make Only Four Addresses

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. (US)—Refusing to be dragooned into any ballyhoo campaigning, Herbert Hoover today decided to limit himself to four major speeches.

Hoover's plan became known in his first meeting with newspapermen since his return from the long western tour. He seemed fully rested and in amiable spirits.

One of the four major speeches to which Hoover has limited himself will be in New York City, about Oct. 15. One will be in New England, probably at Boston, and it is quite likely that his principal mid-western speech will be in Chicago.

His first speech will be between Sept. 10 and 15, the place to be decided. He will make no address on Labor Day but will set forth fully his views upon labor and labor legislation in one of the four addresses.

Mr. Hoover will begin his trip to California, to vote, between Oct. 1 and Oct. 30 and he may make some brief informal speeches from the rear end of his special train. Whether he will invade the border states on that tour or go northward through Missouri and Montana, considered doubtful states, is also a decision yet to be made.

Mrs. Mary Schlemeyer Dies at Electra Home

ELECTRA, Texas, Aug. 29.—Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Schlemeyer, 46, who died here early Wednesday morning following a series of heart attacks, will be held from the First Methodist church here Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be at the Electra cemetery.

The funeral services will be conducted by Rev. R. N. Huckabee of Paducah, who read the wedding ceremony for Mr. and Mrs. Schlemeyer about 12 years ago. He will be assisted by Rev. H. E. Anderson of this city. Electra Rebekah lodge No. 150, of which Mrs. Schlemeyer was a member, will be in charge of the burial services.

In addition to her husband, Otto Schlemeyer, she is survived by a daughter, Mary; one sister, Miss Allie Honaker of Electra; three brothers, S. B. Honaker of Vernon, Mart Honaker of Electra and Will Honaker of Wichita Falls. She came of a prominent pioneer family. Her father, A. A. Honaker, who died a few months ago at Vernon, settled in the Sunshine Hill community near Electra about 40 years ago.

Police Have Name Of Suspect in Shooting

DALLAS, Aug. 29. (AP)—Although police have the name of a man believed to have shot and killed C. E. James, 38, special deputy constable, Monday night on the grounds of a country club, the suspect was still at large today.

Before James died shortly after the shooting, he whispered the name of the supposed slayer to officers.

Well, you might know that Hans Smith is back in town. Smittie had a vacation somewhere and did something, but he didn't put out a word about it. The opinion of this column is that he went off by himself and rested and thought over things which Wichita Falls folks would enjoy this season.

◆ ◆ ◆

The first result is seen in his announcement that Labor day is to be ushered in with a midnight matinee to start at 11:45 o'clock Sunday night. Smittie explained that the 11:45 show will be entirely different to the 9:45 show. "At 9:45," sez he, "we will present for the last time, 'The Lights of New York.' At 11:45," he continued, "we will open with Paramount's second production with sound. It is named 'The Sawdust Paradise.'"

◆ ◆ ◆

"Will you let the folks who come for the 9:45 show stay for the 11:45 show?" we asked.

"No," sez Smittie emphatically.

"Why?" sez we, questioningly. "Why not be big hearted?"

"We're in business," he confided. "Furthermore," he added, as a shrewd afterthough, "we will clear the house after the 9:45 show is over. We also will look under each and every seat in the house to be sure that none of those little runts, like Larry Dailey, the sport editor, or Ham, the reporter, try to hide on us."

And, that's that.

The shows should do a big business Sunday and Monday. It's a double holiday to begin with. In the second place, there are a lot of good attractions in town. Then, too, the usual Monday night opposition provided by the city council meeting will be missing as the council is taking its first night off this year.

Three Start Off On Attempt to Swim English Channel

LONDON, Aug. 29. (US)—Under a cloudy sky and with strong southwest winds blowing, a young girl and two men, representing three different nations, were attempting to swim the English channel tonight.

The girl is Fraulein Anni Maynell of Germany, who entered the water at Cape Gris Nez at 6:45 this evening and was followed by Alexander Wilhelm Bauer of Holland, at 8 o'clock.

Pouilley of France, the third swimmer, took to the water at midnight.

All of the swimmers are headed for Dover and each is accompanied by a fishing vessel.

The German girl, whose life ambition is to swim the channel, declared that she will lower the record set by Gertrude Ederle, which so far no one has been able to equal.

Convict's Strange Story of Horned Frog Brings Luxuries for Inmates

HOUSTON, Aug. 29. (UP)—The horned toad that slept for 30 odd years in a cornerstone of the courthouse at Eastland brought fame to his town and wealth to his owners.

Another that lived only in the imagination of a convict at Blue Ridge prison farm brought comforts and spending money to the man and his fellow prisoners and hoaxed New York, city of wise ones.

The story came today from a convict who is recovering in a hospital here from burns received in a fire at the farm July 28.

Spending money was low at the farm about the time the Eastland reptile crawled into fame's spotlight. One night Rex Beach, a convict, who later escaped and is still at liberty, came in with a toad caught in the fields.

He turned it over to a newspaperman, who was serving two years for forgery, and the toad, accompanied by a weird letter, went to the New York Times.

Years ago, so the story to the Times ran, a white man prospected the mountains and wastelands of Old Mexico. There he met an Indian maid, the Belle of the Tarahumaras. They were married. Two children were born, Beach, the teller of the story, and a girl who was adored by her brother.

Another thing the bronzed half-breed loved was the Esconido Secreto (the hidden secret) a horned toad of great age which had lived with the family for generations.

The Tarahumaras, noted for their longevity and their endurance, give credit to the horned toad for both these characteristics.

Champions of the tribe were members of the family of the half-breed. Escondido Secreto was the reason for this. When the squaw who loved the prospector died, she bequeathed to her half-breed son her dearest possession.

"Never part from him," she said. "You are a white man, but you have the spirit of the Tarahumaras."

There came a villain. He saw the half-breed's beautiful sister. The two loved—but were not married after the manner of the Tarahumaras. And so, one day, the half-breed started across the mountains seeking a white man. In his frayed shirt was Escondido Secreto.

On the plains of Texas he overtook the white man. A knife flashed, a man lay dead. Soon the half-breed went to the prison farm for life.

The rules forbade pets and Escondido Secreto was sent to the New York Times. Letters from New York women came in great numbers to the half-breed. Money there was and now there was no lack of small comforts in the prison barracks. One woman asked the prison commission that the convict be allowed to keep the toad.

The commission investigated and the hoax was revealed. But the convicts had their pockets full of spending money.
