

Legislature penned in to prison changes

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) Backed into a corner by a federal judge who doesn't like the way Texas crams its criminals into prisons, the 1981 Legislature decided to build more cells and release more inmates.

It adds up to almost a half billion dollars over the next two years, including funds to build a prison, find land for two more, and set up halfway house for parolees.

Despite the big dollars and big plans, one critic of the Texas Department of Corrections says it's all "basically a token response to the Ruiz order."

The Ruiz order is the ruling handed down by U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler, who said the TDC is violating the constitutional rights of the 30,000 prisoners. The prisons are too crowded, too big and too understaffed, Justice said.

"I think he'll see it as some response, but only a token response," prisoners' lobbyist Charles Sullivan speculated on Justice's reaction to the legislative action.

The 67th Legislature approved $148 million for construction. That includes $47.5 million for a prison on land recently bought by the state in Grimes County. Also approved was $28 million for land for two additional prisons.

"We're going to have prisons coming out of our ears," said Sullivan, director of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants.

Selection of those sites could largely be determined by the results of the state's appeal of Justice's order. He doesn't want large rural prisons, such as the penitentiaries Texas has built for years. Justice wants prisons located close to major cities so the inmates won't be so isolated from their families.

A rider in the appropriations bill changes the way Texas will buy land for prisons.

Texas Topics

ons. The Prison Approval Board system was abolished. Under that system, a board — made up of the governor, land commissioner and chairman of the Board of Corrections — had to approve all site purchases.

Under the new system, the Board of Corrections can buy land once it gets an appraisal from the land commissioners.

Other efforts to ease prison crowding include plans for additions to several existing units.

The expansion plans started early in the session when Clements won approval of an emergency appropriation of $35 million for metal dormitories to be built at existing prisons in East Texas. The dorms will house about 2,880 inmates.

The cornerstone of the effort to reduce the number of prisoners in the ever-growing TDC is a halfway house program backed by Clements.

"The governor has provided more leadership in the field of community corrections than the Legislature," said Sullivan, who favors community-based facilities over maximum security prisons.

The appropriations bill says 4,000 inmates per year should go into halfway houses.

Clements favored the halfway house plan rather than TDC Director W.J. Estelle's idea to send inmates home on work furloughs. The Estelle idea did not make it through the Legislature.

The House and Senate approved changes in the Board of Pardons and Paroles, giving the governor more control by allowing him to select the chairman and vice chairman of the three-member board.

In addition, the Legislature took away the independence of the six parole commissioners by making them employees of the board. This probably will cost Paul Mansmann and Helen Copitka their jobs. They had the highest percentage of parole recommendations and were the most vocal in criticizing the board.

Despite all the efforts, the future of Texas prisons could be decided by the federal appellate courts which will review Justice's ruling.

Misrepresentation cost Texas a park

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements today charged that "misrepresentations by El Paso area real estate speculators and political shenanigans by a few state senators cost Texans the best park proposal they ever had."

Clements made the charges in a prepared statement released in response to questions about the state's unsuccessful attempts to acquire the Robert O. Anerson Ranch in West Texas through a land trade agreement.

Anderson announced last week that he had decided not to go through with the proposed land trade of 190,000 acres of his ranch in the Big Bend area for an equal amount of University of Texas land in Hudspeth County near El Paso.

The Anderson ranch was to have been acquired for conversion to a wilderness park.

"It is terribly unfortunate that innuendoes by the press and a handful of legislators impugned the motives of Bob Anderson, who was trying to do something for the state," Clements said.

Clements said that news reports quoting land speculators "were inflammatory and implied the state was coming out on the short end of the trade. Actually, the state would have retained mineral rights to both tracts and acquired a magnificent park property," he said.

"The land speculators, following the pattern of the Florida land boom of the 1920s, misrepresented value of the desert land they were promoting in an incongruous comparison of its worth with the Anderson ranch," Clements said.

Clements also charged that Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, tried to make "political hay" out of the situation, and that Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, Senate sponsor of the resolution supporting the land swap, was undecided on the issue.

"The end result, obviously, is that a gross disservice has been done to the State of Texas and to future generations of Texans," Clements said. "Under the circumstances, I certainly don't blame Bob Anderson for bowing out, and I don't intend to ask him to reconsider."

Panel focuses on proper parking for cars, books

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Books and cars, which have relatively little in common, turned out to be major concerns Monday for Midland County commissioners.

Their interest, though, was in a building to house the books and in parking spaces to lodge cars in a downtown area that's growing skyward about as quickly as it is spreading out.

The commissioners' attention on the squeeze on parking came in a downtown Midland parking study made by Houston consultants Walter P. Moore & Associates and presented by Midland Chamber of Commerce leaders Joe Kloesel and Fred Tyler.

The what-to-do-about-the-library proposition was pursued by John Deats, head librarian of the Midland County Library.

Both projects were projected as costly but needed measures.

The proposed three-story library would cost $4 million or so if construction costs for the proposed 80,000-square-foot building is held at $50 a square foot. Furniture and equipment at $7 a square foot would add a half million dollars to the price. A contemplated fourth-story on the library would increase cost about 25 percent.

Deats' presentation was based on a 38-page report submitted by Hoyt Galvin & Associates, library consultants, of Charlotte, N.C.

A MAJOR consideration of the proposal was hinged on plans for Eagle Plaza, a proposed downtown high-rise office center to be built by The First National Bank of Midland. The bank's proposed site for the new library is between two envisioned 40-story bank office towers in a downtown area which includes the library at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

"The Midland County Library is an excellent institution, giving good service and these services are in demand and fully utilized by the highly educated residents," the Hoyt Galvin report said.

The existing 130,000-book library is a 27,000-square-foot structure built in 1958 and apparently not designed for the stress of expansion.

The proposed library would triple the present library's capacity.

"We're much more happy with this plan (new library) than the expansion," said Deats, who also noted that "a lot of libraries find out too late that they have underbuilt."

"When are you going to start building?" teased Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

Deats had no answer on that or from whence the money to build the $4 million-plus library would come from.

But Davis, who said he reviewed

Pair indicted on murder charges

Two men remained jailed this morning under bonds totaling $400,000 in connection with the shooting deaths last week of two persons at a westside Midland residence.

Charged with capital murder are 22-year-old Milton Clyde Keith of 1603 N. Edwards St. and 21-year-old Ollie Glen Kemp of 1306 E. Walnut Lane.

Keith and Kemp were indicted by a special session of the grand jury Monday.

Keith was arrested at his home about 12:15 p.m. Friday on a bond forfeiture charge stemming from an unrelated case, according to police. Kemp was arrested 11 hours later in front of a residence at Stonewall Street and Indiana Avenue.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond of $100,000 on each of two charges accusing the men of shooting 26-year-old Charles Cole and 18-year-old Tracy Endres to death in a house at 507 Spraberry Drive May 31 or June 1.

They had been shot in the head with a large caliber weapon and had been dead 12 to 14 hours before their bodies were discovered by friends about 1 p.m. June 1. The Endres woman graduated from Midland High School May 29.

Police this morning said they were continuing their investigation into the case and further details would be released at a later date.

Probe supports complaint against MISD

By LOREN BERGER
Staff Writer

A three-month federal investigation into the hiring practices of the Midland Independent School District has resulted in findings which give support to a complaint filed in early February which alleges the school district is discriminating against blacks, said Gil Herrera, supervisor for the U.S. Department of Education's Civil Rights Division in Dallas.

"After looking at preliminary findings, there are possible indicators that there has been a pattern of minority erosion in hiring," Herrera told The Reporter-Telegram today.

"Tentative indicators point to a problem, although the results are not conclusive."

The complaint, which was filed by an unidentified local group, cites several allegations against the school district concerning minority hiring procedures that span a period of 13 years.

Those allegations include a decline of black staff members in the school district from 1968 (the date of a federal desegregation order) to the present, and a failure of the school district to recruit and employ black teachers with the same diligence as white teachers.

Stated also in the complaint are charges black teachers have been unfairly dismissed and demoted since 1968 and have been discriminatorily assigned to non-academic areas. The complaint also questions whether the minority student body has been adversely affected due to hiring procedures.

Herrera said the Office of Civil Rights is considering sending an investigator to meet with school officials this week to "discuss the situation and see how they might want to come into compliance. We will attempt to reach some understanding with the district before we make any final conclusions," he added. "At this point, we are two to three weeks away from announcing anything conclusive."

Investigation into the complaint was hindered during the past two months due to inadequate data originally compiled after an investigator from the Office of Civil Rights met with school officials in late March, according to Herrera.

School Superintendent Dr. James Malley declined comment concerning the latest development on the situation this morning. Earlier, Personnel Director Leslie R. Hinds refused to confirm or deny reports that only one out of 135 teachers hired last year was black.

Commissioners discuss library

The Hoyt Galvin report on Sunday, indicated he was ready to take some sort of action.

"I already have a motion written out," he said with exuberance, but proposed nothing further. However, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders cryptically implied that financing may be in the offing: "We're hoping somebody else (other than the county) will pay for that. We're not mentioning any names," Ahders said.

"I personally like everything here (concerning the proposed new library)," the judge said, "and I haven't heard any disension."

None of the commissioners mentioned financing, such as bond issue, for the proposed library. But two months ago, First National Bank President Charles Fraser indicated that the bank would help with the financing of the library but would not underwrite the entire cost.

Too, indications were that the bank would pay handsomely for the present library site, which would be part of Eagle Plaza.

"Midland residents are affluent, highly educated and oil-industry oriented," the report said. "Employment levels are among the highest in the nation."

THE DOWNTOWN parking problem has concerned the Midland Chamber of Commerce in recent years.

Kloesel, who heads up the chamber's task force on downtown parking, noted that downtown parking spaces in "area bordered by Louisiana, Carrizo, Front, and Weatherford totaled 11,147. The need in 1990, when the downtown area is projected to have 5 million square feet of office space, will be 22,400, Kloesel said. At present, downtown office space totals 3.9 million square feet, Kloesel said.

"They (the Houston consultants) are recommending that the city take some steps immediately, modifying traffic codes, set new traffic controls."

The report also recommended that Wall and Illinois avenues be converted to one-way westbound streets, and that Texas and Missouri avenues be one-way eastbound streets. The report proposed that Marinfeld Street be converted to a one-way south bound street, and Big Spring Street strictly for northbound traffic.

Kloesel cited the need for more high-rise parking garages. He said that eight-story garages would be the "most economical" and would accommodate 1,000 cars. Leasing cost would be about $80 per space per month.

The report also recommended more parking meters and higher-price per-hour spaces. Meters around the Midland County Courthouse would be coded for 50 cents per hour, while other meters in the central downtown area would be keyed for 25 cents per hour.

"We have some penny meters here now that are unheard of in other cities," said Tyler, the chamber's executive vice president.

In other business, the commissioners:

-Listened to District Attorney Vern Martin and DA Investigator Jim Atwater talk about need for a replacement car for Atwater. The sedan he now drives has 89,000-plus miles on it and is costing money for repairs. Commissioners opted against dipping into the 1961 budget for a new car: "Drive carefully," Commissioner Charlie Welch told Atwater.

-Considered a request from Fred Koonce to create a position for another constable. Koonce said he was constable here in the mid-1960s.

"If the population keeps increasing like they tell me," Koonce said, "it's going to be 300,000. This is the kind of information I get." He didn't put a date on the 300,000 population figure.

The commissioners didn't seem receptive to Koonce's request. Anyway, Judge Ahders said that Constable Tom McGinnis is doing "a good job."

"We feel that he's doing such a good job, we don't need anybody else," Ahders said. "But we sure invite you to run (for office) at the next opportunity." That will be in 1984.

-Considered creating a position of election administrator for Midland County. The job, if implemented, would pay no more than the county clerk's 1961 salary of $28,000. But the problem seemed to be courthouse office space for the administrator and not funds to operate the office. "Where do we put them?" asked Commissioner Durward Wright. "In the men's room or the women's room at this point?"

THE HOYT GALVIN report further said that "when the population of Midland reaches 100,000, the need for branch libraries should be studied."

That time may not be so far off. "The city is growing rapidly," the report said. "The current (U.S. Census Bureau estimated) population of 76,400 in the city is conservatively projected to increase to 131,000 by the year of 2000."

Bess having problems swallowing

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman was still experiencing problems swallowing today, and doctors for the 96-year-old widow of President Harry S. Truman continued to feed her intravenously.

Mrs. Truman has been able to eat some soft foods, longtime family physician Wallace Graham said. He said she felt "particularly good."

Monday because she had her hair done.

"I told her she looked pretty and asked if she would like to dance. Her response was laughter," Graham said.

Mrs. Truman has been hospitalized since breaking a hip in a fall at her Independence, Mo., home May 6.

Free Sundays

Some 400,000 workers from all over southern Poland gathered in the town of Piekary on May 31 to "thank the Lord for work-free Sundays" — the theme of this year's Pilgrimage to the Miraculous Figure of Our Lady in Piekary. It was the first such pilgrimage since the independent trade union Solidarity began its campaign for Sunday to be a day of rest. This photo — just received by mail from a Polish newsagency — shows the pilgrims marching into the town.

Area temperatures expected to remain near century mark

The mercury will remain near the century mark at least through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for temperatures near 100 degrees following tonight's low, which should be in the low 70s. Winds tonight will be out of the southwest at 15-20 mph. The weatherman is predicting Wednesday's winds to be out of the east at 15-25 mph and gusty.

Monday's high was a hot 101 degrees, nearing the 1964 record of 104 degrees. Today's record low was set in 1955 at 55 degrees.

A scorcher was on tap today for Texas with temperatures expected to hover around or slightly above the 100-degree mark over most of the state.

Forecasts called for clear skies and hot temperatures statewide. Highs were to be around 100 over all of the state except along the coast and in portions of Southeast Texas where readings were to be in the 80s and 90s. There was no mention of rain in the forecasts.

A few clouds were reported over southern and southeastern sections of the state with clear skies reported elsewhere.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and low 80s.

MMH gets OK

AUSTIN — Midland Memorial Hospital has received authorization from the Texas Health Facilities Commission to provide CT whole body scanning.

Hospital officials plan to provide the service through the conversion of their Pfizer 200 CT head scanner.

Robbery complaints head list of criminal activity

Two robbery complaints topped the list of criminal activity reported to city police during the past 24 hours.

A clerk at the Rodeway Inn, 3801 W. Wall Ave., told officers four men entered the motel Monday, and while one man engaged the clerk in conversation, one of the other men entered an office and took $450 in cash.

In the second robbery complaint, 37-year-old James Aubrey Markham Jr. of Irving said three men he had seen earlier Monday stripped him of his clothes, tied him up and made off with $32 in cash and his pants and boots. The robbery took place early this morning in an abandoned house at 206 W. Louisiana Ave., according to Markham.

In burglary complaints, A.C. Clark of 101 Tanforan Ave. told police five pistols and rifles worth a total of $2,005 were taken from his residence after someone entered it through an unlocked patio door.

Jimmy Allbee of Tucson, Ariz., said a $400 watch, $30 in cash and a knife valued at $5 were missing from his room at the Affordable Inn, 3838 W. Wall Ave.

And a CB radio worth $200, along with clothing valued at $130, were reported stolen from a vehicle at the Best Western Motel on Interstate 20 near the Rankin Highway.

Polish Central Committee meets

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Central Committee of Poland's Communist Party met today under Kremen's pressure to curb "counter-revolution." The Czechoslovak press said political opposition in Poland was "identical" to the ferment that led to the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

However, the independent union Solidarity and the government reached an agreement that could avert a regional strike Thursday and buy another four weeks of labor peace, sources said. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa met other union officials in the port of Gdansk to discuss the situation.

The Central Committee was addressed by the party's general secretary, Stanislaw Kania. Details of his speech were not immediately known. The purpose of the session was to discuss the July party congress that will accept, modify or reject the sweeping reforms proposed by Solidarity leaders and the party's rank and file since the strike wave last summer.

Officials said a letter from the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee urged its Polish counterpart to take a tougher stand against reformers and dissidents. The Kremlin wants a reversal of the political and social liberalization that has made such headway in Poland since the nationwide labor unrest last summer, the officials said.

The Slovak Communist Party paper, Pravda, said "the advance of counterrevolutionary forces" in Poland was "identical with the advance and destructive activities of counter-revolutionary forces in Czechoslovakia in 1968."

It said recent developments in Poland were similar to the pre-intervention period in Czechoslovakia in 1968 on a number of counts, including "attacks" against the Communist Party, the economy and the legal order, as well as praise of private enterprise.

The Soviet trade union newspaper

Trud said the strike threatened for Thursday in northwest Poland was like "aiming a pistol" at the "vital interests" of Polish workers.

It accused Solidarity of usurping trade union duties and trying to "further aggravate the situation and dismantle the socialist system in Poland."

Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces recently held spring maneuvers in and around Poland, and there have been unconfirmed reports that new exercises might begin soon either as a pretext for intervention or to pressure the government to curb Solidarity, the first union free of Communist Party control in the Soviet bloc.

A Solidarity spokesman, who announced the accord that could avert the regional strike Thursday, said all strikes would be postponed until July 3, apparently to give the government time to conclude its probe of the beatings of three unionists in the northwestern city of Bydgoszcz in March.

Sources at the union's headquarters said the "matter has been settled," but would not give details.

The Polish news agency PAP said Krzysztof Gotowski, the No. 2 leader of the independent union in Bydgoszcz, had issued a joint appeal with a leading parliamentary deputy for suspension of the strike threat.

The government's chief labor troubleshooter, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, warned earlier that the patience of the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact allies was wearing thin.

Solidarity called the strike to pressure the government to issue a report on its investigation into the police beating of three local union leaders in Bydgoszcz on March 19. It would be the first strike in nearly three months.

The Catholic episcopate asked the union's leaders to avoid any action that would jeopardize Polish independence and threaten Solidarity's "huge achievements."

Reagan, Portillo stressing trust, cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, publicly submerging any differences, are stressing trust and neighborly cooperation in their talks at Camp David and the White House.

Devoting extraordinary personal attention to his guest, Reagan spent more than 3 1/2 hours Monday in discussions with Lopez Portillo, took him horseback riding and capped the day with a candlelight dinner on the terrace overlooking Reagan's pool at his mountaintop retreat in western Maryland.

"While we deal with you as a representative of a great nation, we can't help but think of you as brothers," Reagan said in a toast following the roast sirloin dinner.

He pledged that "any action we take will be consistent with the principles of sovereignty, good neighborliness and hospitality."

Lopez Portillo, who issued a stiff rebuke to then-President Carter in a toast at a 1979 state luncheon in Mexico, took the occasion Monday night to tell Reagan: "We wish to know and understand each other, but most important we trust each other."

He said there was "no tension and much understanding" between the two nations.

The two leaders met over breakfast at Camp David for nearly an hour. Then, at midmorning, they flew by helicopter through the rain to the White House, accompanied by Vice President George Bush, and resumed their talks in the Cabinet Room before attending a formal luncheon. Any agreements they make will be announced afterward.

Leaving their wives at home, Reagan and Lopez Portillo arrived here Monday morning with an entourage that filled five helicopters.

Wearing dark blue jackets bearing the presidential seal and the flags of the United States and Mexico, the two leaders and 12 aides ate lunch on a terrace outside Reagan's lodge overlooking a meadow and discussed his plan to spur economic development in the Caribbean basin. An interpreter sat between them.

A senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on the condition that he not be identified, glossed over the discussion of the two leaders' divergent policies toward the turmoil in Central America.

The U.S. official said the subject was broached, but "each side just described its own view of the situation as opposed to coming to any agreement or any more than a declaration of each side's point of view."

While the Reagan administration has provided military aid and advisers to the civilian-military junta in El Salvador to counter what it says is Cuban-led aggression, Mexico opposes that aid and has called for a political solution.

Rather than dwelling on their differences over El Salvador, the administration official said the presidents talked at length about how to help the Caribbean develop economically, with Lopez Portillo offering to act as a "communicator" with the other nations in the region.

The official quoted Reagan as saying he believed economic development was of "crucial importance for the future stability of the hemisphere."

The official said Reagan wanted to use the economic development plan to "prove that our way of freedom — economic and political freedom — can be an example for the rest of the world."

Vacation Bible School now under way for Methodists

Vacation Bible School is under way this week at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, for children from 2 1/2 years old to those who have completed sixth grade. Activities start at 9 a.m. and end at 11:30 a.m. Last day will be Friday.

Theme for this year's program is "Jesus — Your Word Lives in Me." It will introduce children to the beatitudes Jesus found in his sermon on the mount.

Children will have fellowship, playtime activities and refreshments.

Children who haven't enrolled still may participate by showing up at 9 a.m., according to a church spokesman.

Thousands attend program

ATLANTA (AP) — Thousands of running, squirming children poured into city recreation centers for the opening of "Safe Summer '81" — a multimillion-dollar program aimed at protecting youngsters from whomever has slain 28 young blacks.

The recreation program, which got under way Monday at 61 sites, was conceived during the winter as officials sought ways to keep children under close supervision once schools close for the summer.

All but five of the 28 young blacks found slain in the Atlanta area since July 1979 have been 17 or younger. A special police task force has been investigating, but no one has been charged in any of the cases.

Police are continuing their surveillance of a 23-year-old black man questioned for 12 hours last week in connection with the slayings, but authorities say they do not have sufficient evidence to make an arrest "at this time." His house is being watched by both police and journalists.

Allen Ludden dead at 63

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Allen Ludden, longtime host of the popular television game show "Password," died early today after a long battle with cancer, a family spokesman said.

Ludden, 63, died at Good Samaritan

at the city's Thomasville recreation center. Mayor Maynard Jackson told 210 children, "You need to keep an eye out for each other."

The program, which will cost about $4 million, is being financed in part by about $800,000 in federal grants and about $300,000 in donations and proceeds from a spring concert, said Richard Montellh, coordinator for the city program. The remaining money comes from city funds normally budgeted for summer recreation.

Jackson and Montellh both estimated about 10,000 children attended the first day, and Jackson predicted that, by the end of the week, 47,000 would be enrolled in publicly and privately operated programs.

City officials have touted the tight supervision that will be exercised at the centers. Special T-shirts were ordered for the children to enhance security, and news reporters were allowed into the centers only if they first obtained special permits.

The shirts had not arrived by Monday afternoon.

"It's going to take a couple of weeks to work all the kinks out," said Parks and Recreation Commissioner Geri Elder, adding that the shirts will be distributed "after we get an accurate enrollment count."

The children will take part in volleyball, softball, basketball, swimming, dancing and arts and crafts.

Jackson said the program will continue through the summer even if the case is cracked, and another is planned for next year.

Similar programs in Fulton and DeKalb counties are scheduled to get under way after the counties' schools close Wednesday. Atlanta is situated almost entirely within Fulton County, and DeKalb is a suburban county lying east of the city.

Meanwhile, Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton met behind closed doors Monday with top police officials investigating the killings.

Afterwards, he said "an arrest is not imminent. We're looking toward discovering the truth, whatever it might be. At this point the evidence has not been shored up enough to where we can make an arrest."

The 23-year-old man, whose north-west Atlanta home has been staked out by police and journalists for the past five days, came to police attention on May 22 when, according to police sources, he was stopped on a bridge over the Chattahoochee River in the early morning hours.

U.N. must not be editor

It came as a surprise and shock to a lot of people to learn that the United Nations has given $432,000 over the past two years to 15 foreign newspapers to print U.N. promotional propaganda on aid to the Third World. This cast the United Nations in the role of an editor, capable with the help of cash of slanting the news and dictating what kind of information should be published for the public.

It was even more surprising and shocking to note that U.N. officials did not immediately denounce this sort of editorial arrogance, or at least say they were sorry and that it would not happen again.

On the contrary, no less a spokesman than the secretary general himself, Kurt Waldheim, condoned the so-called subsidies. He said the newspaper supplements paid for with U.N. cash would "help to foster a better understanding of the vital objectives of the new international economic order."

Another U.N. official, Yasushi Akashi, Under Secretary General for Public Information, also condoned payments to newspapers for printing promotional material not so labeled. He went so far as to regret that American and British newspapers turned down the offer. This speaks well for these nations' attitude toward a free and independent press.

This story does not have a happy ending yet, but it came closer to it as the U.S. alternate representative for special political affairs, Charles M. Lichtenstein, rose on the side of the opposition. He said it was "obviously inappropriate to expend a dollar of U.N. funds for this purpose."

The U.N. was careful to point out that the funds in question did not come from regular contributions from member states but were donated by a Japanese businessman who has given money to the world body in the past.

Mr. Lichtenstein said he thought the U.N.'s action was wrong regardless of where the money came from: "We feel that it is probably inappropriate for the U.N. to lend its name to this sort of promotion, whatever the source of the funds."

American officials have expressed the hope that the U.N. will not become a conduit through which private funds can be used for pressuring newspapers into printing stories favorable to the U.N. They expressed hope that Secretary Waldheim could be so persuaded.

Let us hope so, for the free press is too much of a treasure to be tarnished by promotional cash. The United Nations should not be an editor, or even an associate editor, of any of the world's newspapers.

INSIDE REPORT:

Tass dispatch renews fears of Soviet invasion of Poland

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The White House on June 3 secretly revived its around-the-clock Poland-watching operations, making the move after a Soviet news dispatch a day earlier renewed fears that the Kremlin might intervene against the Polish democratic movement.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, on June 2 reported an anti-democratization meeting in Katowice by hard-line Communist Party members. What made U.S. officials sit up and take notice was the reference by Tass to "subversive activity of the counter-revolutionary forces in the country." "Unlike us," commented a Reagan policymaker, "the Russians do not use their rhetoric lightly." The fear at the White House: If Moscow labels the emerging Polish system as "counter-revolutionary," it has no alternative but to intervene — perhaps militarily. Until the Tass dispatch, U.S. analysts had counted on the 30-day mourning period for Cardinal Wyszynski to keep the lid on in Poland.

NIXON'S REVENGE

Talk in Washington about the Washington Post-Pulitzer Prize scandal has almost stopped, but it is still very much on the mind of the Post's arch enemy: Richard M. Nixon.

In hopeful tones, Nixon asks visitors from Washington to reassure him that there is still lots of commotion there about the Janet Cooke affair. Nixon feels the scandal somehow vindicates him by undermining the newspaper whose investigative reporting led to his fall. A footnote: Nixon is far more active politically than is shown to the public. He regularly invites groups of six or eight to dinner at his Manhattan apartment, with both the guest list and the table talk highly political. Prominent Republicans in Washington are on the receiving end of a stream of scrawled Nixon notes, offering congratulations and advice.

BUSH'S MODEL

One reason George Bush is getting on so well as vice president is the private advice given him by his Democratic predecessor, Walter F. Mondale: If you disagree with the president or even want to give him advice, "it's better to do that in private."

According to Bush, that's what Mondale told him when he sought him out for advice. Bush quotes Mondale, who got along with his chief better than any vice president in recent memory, as saying: Tell him (the president) what you think, but then don't make some crusade if everything doesn't go exactly the way you want."

Bush exercises discretion even beyond Mondale's model. He agrees to very few interviews, stipulating in advance he will not discuss personalities, not disclose anything that went on behind closed doors and not give any information on a background or off-the-record basis.

AMENDING AWACS

High-ranking Pentagon officials now admit that the Senate will never endorse the deal sending AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia unless a new agreement is renegotiated that reassures Israel by substantially increasing U.S. control over the weapons — a most difficult task.

The blame for this state of affairs is placed by Defense Department officials on Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He rushed through agreement on the AWACS deal before Reagan administration officials were in place at the State and Defense Departments. That reinforces strong feeling among these officials that President Reagan should have fired Jones, a Carter administration holdover.

"The restraints on Saudi use of the radar planes that might have been negotiated in the first place," one Pentagon official told us, "now look like surrender to pressure from the Israeli lobby." Consequently, original optimism that the AWACS deal could be coaxed through the Senate has all but vanished.

GLENN FOR PRESIDENT

The Democratic Party establishment, previously thought solid for former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, is showing increased interest in Sen. John Glenn of Ohio as presidential nominee in 1984.

Robert S. Strauss, a constant backroom participant in Washington and a major Democratic tastemaker, has been quietly passing the word that Glenn looks good to him and might be what the party needs in 1984. With speculation high that Ronald Reagan will not seek re-election, serious Democratic politicians do not regard the 1984 nomination as a throw-away.

Ex-astronaut Glenn is no favorite of the party's liberals and is several cuts below average on the speaker's platform. But Strauss and other party leaders believe he has the moderate image that could lead middle-class Americans back into the Democratic Party.

CHARLEY REESE

King of the whopper-tellers can't fool typical Americans

One of my favorite comedians is Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, minister of petroleum and mineral resources for Saudi Arabia. He is one of the best whopper-tellers in the business.

Yamani spoke to the Foreign Policy Association in New York not long ago and he spread it so thick, they must have issued hip boots at the door to protect the trousers of his audience.

"The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia look upon the U.S. as an important friend and essential ally, for whom they have the greatest respect and admiration," he said.

The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia, those who are aware that there is such a place as the United States, look upon it as a bastion of Western imperialism. Yamani must think the only source of information we have is his speeches.

The big lie he has been peddling is that Saudi Arabia, out of the goodness of its heart, increased its oil production in order to create a glut on the market and keep the price down. Anybody who believes that deserves a free trip to Mecca.

Saudi Arabia has raised the price of its oil from $12 a barrel to $32 a barrel. It has raised or lowered its production solely for the reason of maintaining an optimum cash flow into its coffers. When Iraq and Iran went to war and blew up each other's oil facilities, their Arab brothers scrambled to grab their customers. That is the main reason for the increase in Saudi production, plain old greed.

Charley Reese

What created the oil glut was a sizeable drop in Western consumption and an increase in the production of non-Arab oil. Yamani has not explained why our good friends in Saudi Arabia have strenuously opposed our desire to fill the U.S. strategic petroleum reserves.

He said in his speech that the Saudis believe it is in the interest of the United States and the West that peace and stability reign in the region. He did not explain why, if that is so, Saudi Arabia has tried so hard to sabotage the Camp David peace treaty, the first and only step toward peace and stability in the Middle East in 30 years.

Yamani's at his funniest, however, when he talks about the economic favors Saudi Arabia has done for the United States.

"Saudi Arabian oil, through the vast profits it brings to the oil companies that handle it, has had a salutary effect on the American balance of trade," he said. Can you believe he said that with a straight face? Saudi oil may have had a salutary effect on oil company profits all right, but the U.S. balance of trade is in bad shape and mainly because of the massive transfer of capital from American pockets into Arab robes.

But, don't worry. Saudi Arabia has saved our dollar by investing its capital in our country, he claims. Sorry, Sheikh, we aren't that stupid. What Saudi Arabia has done is contribute to our inflation by (1) hiking the cost of energy and (2) using those excessive profits to bid up the prices of real estate and other assets in the U.S. Furthermore, the Saudis have used the threat of withdrawing their deposits in U.S. banks as a political weapon. They have also demanded that we pay them interest on the money they deposit for the purchase of weapons.

Actually, to put it diplomatically, the Saudis are a bunch of blackmailing camel thieves who despise Americans for being such fools as to believe the nonsense Yamani peddles every time he steps ashore. One of these days he's going to discover that the members of the New York Foreign Policy Association are not typical of the American people. Typical Americans are a lot less gullible and forgiving of arrogance.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 9, the 160th day of 1981. There are 205 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 9 in 68 A.D., the Roman Emperor Nero committed suicide.

On this date:

In 1940, Norway's army surrendered to the Nazis in World War II.

In 1964, the former head of Congo's secessionist Katanga Province, Moïse Tshombe, was named premier of the Congo.

In 1967, Gamal Abdel Nasser resigned as president of Egypt after his country was defeated in the war with Israel.

In 1971, the United States and Japan announced final agreement on terms for the return of Okinawa to Japan.

Five years ago: Former Postmaster General James Farley, a key figure in the Franklin Roosevelt administration, died.

One year ago: President Jimmy Carter's visit to riot-scarred sections of Miami was marred by angry crowds hurling rocks and bottles.

Lebanese cease-fire short-lived

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An attempt by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to mediate between the warring Syrians and Lebanese Christians produced another cease-fire, but the Christians immediately accused the Syrians of breaking it.

The Christian radio station, the Voice of Lebanon, said Syrian troops opened up with artillery, rockets and tank cannon on the besieged Christian city of Zahle, in east central Lebanon, just before the cease-fire was announced Monday.

Lebanese police in Beirut said they had no confirmation of the renewed shelling after a two-day lull in the Christian-Syrian fighting, which has spawned an Israeli-Syrian missile crisis that threatens to start a new Arab-Israeli war. There have been dozens of cease-fires, most of them very brief, in the 10 weeks since the Syrians began attacking the Christians in Zahle.

At least 644 Lebanese have been reported killed in the fighting in Zahle and Beirut. Syria has not announced its casualties.

The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and the secretary-general of the Arab League met for the past three days with the foreign minister of Syria and leaders of Lebanese Christian and Moslem factions in the mountain resort of Beiteddin, 19 miles southeast of Beirut, in an attempt to work out a comprehensive peace agreement for Lebanon.

A communique said "all parties involved have pledged to abide by a cease-fire on Lebanon's entire territory." But it indicated there was no agreement on arrangements to end the fighting that has erupted periodically in Lebanon since the 1975-76 civil war.

The communique said the three foreign ministers — Prince Saud al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria and Sheik Sabah al-Sabah of Kuwait — would meet in Saudi Arabia on June 23 to prepare for another conference on July 4 with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, a Christian, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem.

Informed sources said Syria's insistence that the Christians renounce Israeli support blocked a comprehensive truce. The sources said the Christian leaders agreed only to acknowledge "a unity of destiny between Lebanon and the rest of the Arab world," without specific reference to Israel.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been trying for the past month to ease the Syrian-Israeli standoff over Syrian missiles in eastern Lebanon, left Paris on Monday to resume his shuttle between capitals in the Middle East. His itinerary was not announced, but Arab reports said he was going first to Saudi Arabia.

U. S. bracing for Mideast tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is bracing for what officials say may be an ominous escalation of tensions in the Middle East following Israel's destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor with American-made jet fighters.

Administration officials and congressional leaders condemned the attack and voiced fears Monday that it might generate anti-American anger in the Arab world, sabotage ongoing U.S. peace initiatives and even produce a cutoff of American arms sales to Israel.

The State Department said Sunday's raid could accelerate existing tensions in the region. Despite Israeli claims that the French-built reactor posed a "mortal danger" to Israel, available evidence suggests that American-made equipment was used by Israel in "possible violation" of U.S. law, the department said.

U.S. military equipment supplied to foreign countries can be used only for defensive purposes, and the administration is preparing a report for Congress on whether Israel violated that provision.

After a briefing by Deputy Secretary of State William Clark, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told reporters that if Israel were in violation of the statute, "there would be a prohibition for a period of time on selling more arms to them."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the State Department expects to complete the report in two or three days. "There are still a lot of unanswered questions. As far as what action we should take, that is still yet to be defined," Glenn said.

Earlier, Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the Israeli raid "an offensive act, not a defensive act," which "may destroy" the Camp David peace process.

Administration officials said the attack could complicate special envoy Philip Habib's attempts to defuse tensions between Israel and Syria.

Habib left Paris on Monday for the Middle East to resume his peacemaking effort after a 12-day pause. His destination was not announced.

Beyond the Habib mission, officials wondered where the seemingly endless spiraling of tensions in the Middle East would end. By flying 600 miles deep into hostile Arab territory, one official noted, the Israelis added a new military dimension to their decades-long conflict.

The administration adamantly insisted it had no prior knowledge of the Israeli attack. But Pressler, echoing a sentiment heard around the State Department, said the Arab world undoubtedly perceives otherwise.

Given American intelligence capabilities, Pressler said, the Arabs probably "look upon this as though we're almost silent collaborators."

Judge makes his injunction permanent; EDS funds held

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert O. Porter says former President Jimmy Carter overstepped his constitutional authority when he ordered $20 million in frozen Iranian assets transferred to a New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Porter made permanent a temporary injunction he granted in February 1980 at the request of Electronic Data Systems, halting the transfer of $20 million in Iranian funds frozen by Carter Nov. 14, 1979.

The money is being held under court order in New York's Midland Bank while the Iranian government appeals Porter's May 9, 1980, award of $20 million to EDS in a breach-of-contract suit that involved Iran's failure to pay for a data processing system.

About 450 claims have been filed by U.S. companies against Iran since the American Embassy was seized in November 1979.

The money is part of $4 billion that was to have transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York July 19. An international claims commission was to have settled any claims against the Iranian government.

Carter ordered all claims against Iran suspended and ordered companies to file claims with the international commission.

The agreement signed January 19 in Algiers ending the 444-day-long crisis called for a tribunal of Americans, Iranians and neutral third parties.

The three American and three Iranian arbitrators announced their choices in a communique after three weeks of closed-door meetings in the Peace Palace.

Administration considers restoring business tax write-offs

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, apparently worried about retaining business support for its tax package, is considering the possible restoration of some business tax write-offs dropped from the president's original proposal.

Business spokesmen said Monday that a key change the administration is discussing would increase in 1985 and 1986 the amount a company could deduct in the early years for depreciation of assets.

A Treasury Department spokesman confirmed it was under discussion.

The business community was caught by surprise last week when the administration announced a revised tax package that reduced the tax breaks originally proposed for business. The revision was a compromise that the Republican administration forged with conservative Democrats in an effort to reduce the projected budget deficit.

"They need our support for the entire package" of business and individual tax cuts, said Richard Rahn, vice president and chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

"I think the discussions are going in the right direction," he said of the talks on depreciation schedules.

"I think it would be a very desirable move," said Theodore F. Brophy, chairman of General Telephone & Electronics Corp. "I think it would be an appropriate approach."

Brophy is chairman of the taxation task force of the prestigious Business Roundtable.

The original Reagan proposal called for permitting first-year depreciation of double what the figure would be if calculated by the "straight-line" method, which allocates equal shares of the original cost to each year of the life of an asset. Some assets already may be depreciated that way.

But under the new Reagan plan, the first-year recovery limit would be 150 percent of the straight-line figure for all assets, except for low-income residential housing, which would be 200 percent. It would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

Under the proposal being discussed, according to Brophy and Rahn, the first-year recovery limit would increase to 175 percent in 1985 and 200 percent in 1986. All such accelerated depreciation methods call for less than the straight-line figure in the final years of depreciation.

Treasury Department spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed that the proposal was under discussion.

Rahn said administration officials have made "no firm promises" to incorporate the proposal into the final package. He said he expected a decision possibly as early as Wednesday.

Administration officials have said the revisions in the plan for accelerated depreciation schedules were made to save more than $15 billion between now and 1984. Write-offs in the original plan were estimated to cost the Treasury $66.6 billion on between 1981 and 1984.

Some officials have expressed concern that under the original plan, President Reagan would have been unable to keep his pledge of eliminating budget deficits within three years.

The biggest change in the revised tax program for business was in the write-off period for buildings. The original "10-5-3" plan provided for tax write-offs of investments in structures over 10 to 18 years, and in equipment over either five or three years. The depreciation allowances were based on a sharply accelerated schedule that would have been phased in over five years, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The revised plan sets a 15-year write-off for all structures, creates a new 10-year write-off schedule for certain utility properties and provides special treatment for low-income rental housing. It would go into effect immediately.

Women's groups applaud decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's groups are applauding a Supreme Court decision that gives female workers a new right to seek wages equal to those of their male counterparts, but legal experts say many key questions remain open.

The high court, on a 5-4 vote, ruled Monday that women can use the sweeping provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to file wage-discrimination lawsuits without proving that they perform the same jobs as men who get paid more.

"The decision is an enormous victory for those fighting to end sex discrimination in employment," said Judith Lichtman, executive director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

Added Karen Nussbaum, executive director of Working Women, "For the first time, the 43 million women who work have hope that their jobs may be evaluated on an equal basis with men's."

ist, who also requested anonymity, noted that the decision will force many employers to settle women's wage-discrimination cases.

In the past, he said, many lower federal courts simply dismissed women's wage-discrimination suits based on the 1964 civil rights law.

"There are people who are going to prevail through settlements. Some companies won't want to litigate this stuff," the specialist added.

Monday's case involved matrons at the Washington County jail in Hillsboro, Ore. They claimed they were paid less even though they performed many of the same functions as male guards.

In other action Monday, the Supreme Court — Refused a request to review immediately a challenge to the agreement that led to the release of the American hostages from Iran.

However, lawyers for a Los Angeles-based engineering firm said Monday that they still plan to file a separate appeal challenging the agreement by Wednesday morning.

—Removed a key provision from the list of items that must be displayed on the front of an installment credit contract.

On a 5-4 vote, justices said a provision noting that returned insurance premiums will go back to an auto dealer, rather than the car buyer, can be placed on the reverse side.

Genius fugitive captured in shootout at hotel lobby

NEW YORK (AP) — A genius fugitive who frustrated authorities with masterful disguises and taunting notes for 18 months — winning a spot on the FBI's most-wanted list — has been captured after a shootout in the lobby of a seedy Manhattan hotel.

Ronald Williams, 38, was shot Monday by one of seven FBI agents who had stalked out the Hotel George Washington. He was reported in fair condition at Bellevue Hospital with wounds to the head, chest and arm.

Officials who have been chasing Williams called his capture "a wonderful thing."

Williams was serving a life term in the West Virginia Penitentiary at Moundsville for killing a police officer when he escaped in November 1979.

He also is wanted in Arizona for a murder last March and has been linked to crimes in Colorado and Pennsylvania, authorities say.

FBI Agent John Dalseg, who headed the stake-out team, said agents "had information" that Williams was going to be in the area. An FBI agent was posing as the desk clerk when Williams walked into the hotel shortly after noon.

Dalseg said Williams chatted with the "clerk" but became suspicious and pulled out a .38-caliber pistol.

Dalseg said the agent moved from behind the desk and pilled out his gun, shouting: "FBI! Drop the weapon!"

"Drop dead! Drop yours!" Williams reportedly replied as he pulled the trigger of his gun. But Williams' gun misfired, and another agent shot Williams, Dalseg said.

Dalseg said a 9mm handgun was found in a paper bag Williams was carrying.

Williams, who has spent half his life in prisons but has managed to escape from them at least five times, had a long record of arrests for armed robbery, kidnapping and arson when he was convicted of the 1975 murder of Police Sgt. David Lilly in Beckley, W.Va.

A coal miner's son who is said to have an IQ of 145, Williams took a Dale Carnegie course on "how to win friends and influence people" and studied the gold and silver market while at Moundsville.

Two years into his term, Williams escaped while being treated at a hospital but was caught a short time later. On Nov. 7, 1979, he and 14 other prisoners broke out of Moundsville. Officials said Williams probably was carrying between $5,000 and $6,000 made on the prison's black market.

Off-duty state trooper Philip Kesner was slain when the escapees commandeered his car as he drove past the prison. A prisoner was also slain.

Only Williams remained at large, relishing his freedom by mocking the authorities who could not capture him. He even signed his name in postcards to friends still imprisoned at Moundsville, saying, "Wish you were here."

Wise to Williams' clever disguises, squads of state and city police surrounded the Charleston, W.Va., bus station in April, saying they had word that the fugitive would be arriving dressed as a woman. But the woman they searched turned out to be a woman.

Williams was put on the most-wanted list in April after the FBI said fingerprints found at the scene of a Scottsdale, Ariz., slaying proved to be his.

Arizona police said John Bunchek, 74, was killed March 12 when he surprised a burglar in his Scottsdale home.

In West Virginia, authorities breathed a collective sigh of relief at the news of Williams' capture.

"Many, many citizens of the United States can sleep safe tonight," said state Corrections Commissioner Joseph McCoy. "He's a very, very dangerous young man. As long as he was on the loose, he created a very serious public danger."

McCoy called the capture "a wonderful thing."

Moundsville Warden Donald Bor-denkircher said he hopes Williams isn't sent back to his facility.

"A federal prison is much more conducive to the malevolent behavior pattern of a guy like him," he said.

Money market fund bilked electronically

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Brazilians, apparently using sophisticated wire codes to tap into the Federal Reserve System, are alleged to have stolen $1.55 million in what is believed to be the first electronic heist from a money-market mutual fund.

Although there have been cases of clever thieves using electronics to steal even larger amounts from banks, the reported theft from the First Variable Rate Fund for Government Income Inc. of Washington provides evidence that other financial institutions are vulnerable to such bilkings.

Donn B. Parker, a consultant on computer crime, said Monday that workers in positions of trust are finding themselves in a new electronic environment lacking audit controls equal to the sophistication of the equipment.

"We are talking about very rapid movement — without audit — of large amounts of money," said Parker, whose California-based SRI Inc. is now doing research work for the Justice Department.

Billions of dollars are moved around the country through the Federal Reserve System every day, using electronic codes.

The alleged theft from First Variable was discovered in a normal end-of-the-month accounting review last Tuesday, 28 days after the bogus transaction is said to have occurred.

It was revealed last Friday when First Variable went to federal courts in New York and Arlington, Va., in an effort to recover the money, most of it now believed to be in a Swiss bank account.

The fund filed a three-count civil suit in Alexandria alleging conspiracy and fraud against a former employee and her reputed boyfriend. It obtained a temporary restraining order in New York freezing any bank accounts held by the pair at two Swiss banks which have branch offices in New York. Hearings have been scheduled in both courts June 12.

The suit alleges that Vera Lucia Campos, a First Variable employee whose duties permitted her to monitor transactions and prepare customer statements, transferred the money in a single transaction on May 5 to the account of Andre L. Prestes at Virginia National Bank.

Prestes, who had invested $2,500 in the fund with directions that interest be paid through Virginia National, then withdrew $50,000 from his bank account a few days after the transfer, the court papers allege.

He and Ms. Campos, both described as Brazilian nationals "with a close personal relationship," then disappeared and the money was allegedly moved to the Swiss Bank Corp. and the Union Bank of Switzerland, according to the suit.

By using the proper codes, an authorized person can wire the Federal Reserve and direct the nation's central bank to deduct money from one account and credit the funds to another account at another bank.

In the case of First Variable Rate Fund, it was not disclosed whether Ms. Campos gained access to the actual wire transfer codes or simply knew how to compose in proper form the internal directions needed by other fund employees to make such a transfer.

What is clear is that once the transfer was made, Ms. Campos was in a position "to falsify the reconciliation statements to assure the unauthorized transaction would not be promptly detected," according to the suit.

FBI spokesman Bob Golden said Monday that the bureau is investigating the matter. "We have no idea," Golden said when asked where Ms. Campos and Prestes might be now.

"Our current belief is that the money is in Switzerland and we have already taken appropriate steps to freeze the money and recover it," said Wayne Bardsley, First Variable's secretary and general counsel. He explained that the fund had obtained a temporary restraining order from the court in New York freezing any assets held by the pair in the two Swiss banks.

Bardsley said the fund, with roughly $788 million in assets and about 70,000 shareholders will not be hurt since it carries fidelity insurance, as required by law, to protect itself against such schemes.

California governor will serve on jury

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Stamenko Rodojlic's trial started as a common enough malicious mischief case in a small, out-of-the-way courtroom. Then the governor of California walked in.

With a crowd of reporters, aides and security men watching, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was selected Monday to serve on a five-woman, seven-man jury that will decide if Rodojlic punctured two tires on his brother-in-law's van and made a threatening telephone call.

It was the first time in memory that a California governor had been selected to serve on a jury while in office.

Brown, who paved the way for his selection by signing a bill several years ago that wiped out a long list of occupational exemptions for jury duty, said it would be "interesting and important to sit on a trial where the laws are enforced."

Rodojlic, a Yugoslavian immigrant, said it didn't bother him in the least to have the governor as one of his jurors. "I know I done nothing wrong," he said.

But the brother-in-law, Michael Radovanovich, found the whole thing embarrassing.

"Anyone other than the governor to listen to some junk like that," he said during a break in the misdemeanor trial. "It's ridiculous. I am a little bit embarrassed because it's family, but

Census bureau predicts slow-growing population

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. population will grow more slowly during the next 20 years, with additional elderly people and fewer teens, Acting Census Director Daniel B. Levine predicted today.

Levine's comments came in remarks prepared for delivery to the Demographic Outlook Conference in Ithaca, N.Y.

During the last 10 years, he said, the nation's population grew 11.4 percent.

This was the second-slowest growth rate in the nation's history, he noted. The slowest growth rate occurred during the Depression years.

"We expect even lower rates of growth not only in this decade — less than 10 percent — but also for the balance of the century. We see less than 7 percent growth in the 1990s," Levine said.

The growth of non-metropolitan areas and the increasing age of the nation's population were cited by Levine as major findings of the recent census.

For the first time in 150 years, he said, non-metropolitan areas grew faster than cities and suburbs.

This means that many people are realizing their desire to live in smaller communities, but it also spells problems.

For the small towns it means more pressure for products and services, while for the older cities, the tax base is eroded.

The increasing average age of the population, now over 30, is a result of a decline in fer-

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Hopeful writer should stop wishing

DEAR ABBY: Everybody starts out by saying they have a problem, and that's the way I am starting out, but don't throw this away yet because I get better as I go along. (Ha ha!) I am a married man with three kids, 9, 12 and 13. I always wanted to be a writer, but I can't seem to break into the field. I bet I sent 100 short stories to different magazines, but I never heard back from nobody. A person would like to be told what is wrong with their stuff, wouldn't you think? You must know a lot of big shots in the publishing business, Abby. Can't you put in a good word for me? I don't expect you to say I am any good unless you see some of my stuff, so I am sending you 26 stories I've wrote.

If you are too busy to write and tell me what you think of them, you can call me up. I'm sending you my phone number, and if the line is busy, keep calling because my kids are on the phone a lot. In the meantime, have you got any suggestions? — LOVE: 5 TO WRITE

DEAR ABBY: Please don't send me anything because my lawyer advises against reading unpublished material. And in the meantime, don't help your kids with their English.

DEAR ABBY: On a recent trip to Scotland, I stayed with my 73-year-old maiden cousin who made our trip most enjoyable with her humor and gracious hospitality.

One morning she said, "Where's the newspaper? I want to see who quit smoking."

Amazed at this, I asked, "Do they publish the names of people who quit smoking in the Scottish newspaper?"

"Aye," she said. "In the obituary column." — FRANK GALLAGHER, KENT, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: I have been very happily married for several years to a wonderful divorced woman with two fine children. I am 25 and she is 40. She is a first-class woman, but my marriage has created a major problem in my life.

My parents, who live in another state, have refused to acknowledge my marriage. They are respected civic and church leaders in their community, but they rejected my wife without even meeting her. My father called me a heathen, and my mother asked me never to mention my wife or stepchildren to any family members in my letters home. So far I have honored my mother's request because I love my parents.

My parents still consider me single. It is becoming increasingly difficult for me to not mention my wife and stepchildren in my letters home. Should I continue this policy, or is there an alternative? — HURTING IN TEXAS

DEAR HURTING: The alternative is to assume a more manly posture and tell your parents that if they refuse to acknowledge your wife and stepchildren, they can forget you. The choice is yours.

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Tar is tough to remove

DEAR HELOISE: My father took my son to the beach and my son accidentally brushed up against a block of wood that had tar on it. Of course he had on his good tan jeans.

I've tried what seems like a million and one things on the tar marks, but just can't seem to get the tar out.

I don't know what to do next. I hope you can help me. — Joanmarie Lukac Hopefully you haven't set the stain. The best thing I've found to remove tar is a pre-wash spray that's oil based. It'll take a little elbow grease but the stain will eventually come out.

I think one of our main problems with stain removal is giving up too easily. Sometimes we think if we're using a prewash spray a few squirts, then into the washing machine, will work magic.

That's not true in every case. Sometimes it takes a little (or a lot) of rubbing first. Just always remember to treat the stain as soon as you discover it, and most assuredly BEFORE you wash it.

Don't let that garment sit in the bottom of your clothes hamper until washday. Get to it immediately!

Good luck on those jeans! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: When shopping recently at a local supermarket, I became aware, for the first time, that we are paying for the packaging on our fresh fruits and vegetables.

Picking up a package of bell peppers, I noticed one was rotten. Wanting only one anyway, I asked the clerk if I could have just one.

He opened the package and, would you believe, put the lone pepper into a smaller tray, wrapped it and THEN proceeded to weigh and price it.

I complained and asked to have it weighed separately. The difference was only three cents, but when you consider this happens every time you purchase an item, it can add up.

Pre-packaging is a way of life and perhaps more convenient for some, but I personally would rather have the opportunity to buy my fresh produce a piece at a time.

It's our option, but I just want to make shoppers more aware of what their money is going for, and it's for sure things aren't getting any cheaper. — Ruth

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: Here is a tip for parents of toddlers who like to play with Mom's pots and pans.

Just be careful of anything that they may be able to wedge a finger, arm or head in.

It took the firemen a half hour to cut and pry my 16-month-old son from a saucepan that he managed to pull down over his head. — Mrs. Cindy Cooper

GETTING IT RIGHT

Dear Heloise: I have a suggestion for those who don't see well.

Get a card of small safety pins and put one in the center front of each garment.

Put one on pants, gowns, pajamas, skirts, even bras, as not only does it let you know which is the front but whether or not the garment is right side out.

Sure saves a lot of aggravation when getting dressed. — Shan Durkin

Helps those little tykes tell the front from the back too — only, for safety sake, use a button or thread. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: If your children or hubby should be inattentive and not listening properly, the quickest way for mothers to get their attention is to sit down and look relaxed!

It'll get their attention every time! — Wilma M. Despain

Big Apple appeals to tourists

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City must be doing something right. The year 1980 was the second-best year in the history of the Big Apple's visitor industry and the fifth year of the resurgence of tourism.

Some 17 million visitors spent $2.2 billion in New York during 1980. And the hotel-occupancy average for the year was 78.4 percent, according to the New York Convention & Visitor Bureau.

Meters save

DETROIT (AP) — Flow meters are used to save valuable resources such as water. In industry, water is used to cool electronic equipment. By measuring the water, the meter will prevent the use of too much, says Lars O. Rosaen, president of Universal Filters here.

"A $20 flow meter, made with plastic and weighing just one and a half pounds, could save 200,000 gallons of water in one year," he said.

Although overall visitor statistics were slightly off from 1979, increases were registered in the fields of convention business, convention spending and the number of overseas visitors.

In 1980, 921 conventions and 4.4 million convention delegates spent $814.7 million. Overseas visitors to the city increased to 2.6 million in 1980, compared to 2.1 million in 1979.

President Reagan's daughter Patti Davis, with "M*A*S*H" star Mike Farrell, discusses nuclear power during a news conference.

Patti, the President 'agree to disagree'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patti Davis and her father, President Reagan, have "agreed to disagree" about nuclear energy, but Miss Davis says her decision to speak at an anti-nuclear program Sunday "is not something he's happy with."

The actress and singer, speaking at a news conference Monday, said she will address a fund-raising benefit in Los Angeles.

Her immediate concern, Miss Davis said, is Pacific Gas and Electric Co.'s attempt to secure a temporary test license for two nuclear power plants, one in Diablo Canyon and one near San Luis Obispo.

"I feel I'm speaking out as an American citizen who sees something happening in this country that frightens me," Miss Davis said.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Ruth Bell Graham says if she'd known what her life as Mrs. Billy Graham would be like, "I would have been scared to death."

Life with Graham has meant marriage to a frequently absent husband whose life revolves, not around home, but around worldwide evangelical ministry, she says. It also has meant surrendering privacy to tourists and the media, she says.

"They're both very strong personalities with strong opinions," Jeanie Ford said of her sister and brother-in-law. Mrs. Ford is the wife of Leighton Ford, vice president of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, based in Minneapolis.

"Often," Mrs. Ford said, "if you find two great people together, there's competitiveness. But she is so in love with him, I think she'd rather see him get the attention."

Mrs. Graham raised five children, has 15 grandchildren and runs her own ministry, which includes visits to Michigan's Jackson State Prison to visit inmates.

"I might not have gone into fulltime evangelism if it hadn't been for her," Graham said of his wife, whom he married in 1943. He said he listened to her when she told him in 1949 that evangelism was his calling.

"It's not been an easy life for Ruth...to have your privacy intruded upon constantly, to answer the phone hundreds of times a week, to be interviewed and photographed, which she dreads."

But he says when he enters the rough-hewn front door at their mountaintop Montreat, N.C., home, "it's a honeymoon all over again."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Henry Fonda will "continue his recuperation for awhile anyway" after being released from a hospital where he underwent diagnostic heart surgery, the actor's publicist, Ray Strickland, says.

Fonda was discharged from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in satisfactory condition, a hospital spokesman said Monday.

Fonda, who had a heart pacemaker implanted in 1974, was admitted May 4 and celebrated his 76th birthday in the hospital May 15.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Doctors may have to operate again on Ann Odre, the Buffalo resident who was shot in St. Peter's Square at the same time as Pope John Paul II, her attending physician says.

Dr. Joseph Kunz said Monday at Buffalo General Hospital the 58-year-old widow has an infection, caused by a bullet wound, in the upper left part of the abdomen. Doctors will decide within a week whether further surgery is required, Kunz said.

Mrs. Odre, now in fair and stable condition, underwent two operations in Rome and returned to Buffalo last week.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Autotransfusions reduce cost and complications

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine is waiting to be called for a heart operation. Mandrell Sisters take Music City News honors

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Barbara Mandrell and her sisters, who won or shared a host of awards, turned the 15th Music City News Cover Awards into a family bonanza.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are deaths from cancer of the pancreas increasing? It seems to me I hear about more and more people who have died from this. I'd also like to know if anyone has been able to pinpoint the cause of the disease. — Cheryl

The cause of the disease is still not established. However, a study by Drs. Ruey S. Lin an Irving I. Kessler, of the University of Maryland School of Medicine, reveal some statistical data that may be of interest.

The winners, picked by readers of the Music City News, a Nashville-based music publication, were announced at the Grand Ole Opry House during a syndicated television special.

George Jones, a country music legend who has battled back from alcoholism, was voted male vocalist of the year and his throbbing song, "He Stopped Loving Her Today," was picked single record of the year.

Heavy attendance expected at MC summer short courses

Among the summer recreational activities in Midland, short courses at Midland College appeal to many people.

As one student put it, "Taking a short course is a terrific way to spend the long summer evenings. I love learning something new, and it's even better when I can do it in surroundings like those at MC."

Eleanor Maxey, Midland College Community Services secretary, pointed out that heavy attendance in the summer short course session is nothing new.

"We have hundreds of students in summer classes who have been taking short courses since the program was initiated in 1969," she said. "But the most rewarding thing to me is the older students. So many of them hesitate even to set foot on campus, but once they join us — they keep coming back. Many have advanced to regular MC credit courses."

Of the five short courses scheduled to begin at the college next week, four will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. and the fifth from 7 to 10 p.m. The latter course, "Camera, An Eye On Tomorrow," is taught by H.A. Tuck. Tuck explained that the course requires three hours per evening to allow students adequate time to ask questions and receive detailed explanations. "There's a lot of visual and mechanical explaining required in the course," Tuck stated, "This is not simply a textbook course in photography."

Designed for beginning photographers, Camera, An Eye on Tomorrow deals with various types of cameras, lenses, films, accessories and the operation and function of each. Course also covers black and white and color darkroom operations.

Tuck explains how to shoot portraits, landscapes and action photos using available light as well as artificial light.

Students participate in on-campus field trips during class hours and are offered instructor critiques of their individual work.

Classes are limited to 20 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday for three weeks, beginning June 16. The course fee is $27.

A three-week course in Powder Puff Mechanics, taught by Ernest Beck, is open to women of all ages and also is suited for boys in their teens.

This is a basic course explaining the rudiments of a car's operation. It helps uncover the mystery of "what's under the hood."

Students learn necessary maintenance requirements, minor repair work and which parts of a car need to be serviced by a professional mechanic.

Classes are limited to 24 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $15.

Jody Hawkins' popular beginning course in Cake Decorating is available to new students who would like to learn the secrets of "icing with frills."

Well-known in Midland for her spectacular cakes, Mrs. Hawkins shares her knowledge with students at MC several times each semester.

Those who succumb to the art and have a taste for learning more may proceed into an advanced course offered later in the year.

Cake Decorating I is limited to 25 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $15.

And for those ladies who would like to learn to pound out a letter or perhaps even a short story on an electric typewriter, but feel they need more practice with the machine, Maxine Jarnagin holds a three-week course in Typing Brush-Up.

"This course is for those who are familiar with typing techniques, but are not especially fast or accurate," Mrs. Jarnagin noted. "We'll have typing drills during each class meeting, and students will learn a great deal about the operation of electric typewriters."

Classes are limited to 20 students and meet 7-9 p.m. each evening. First class is Tuesday, June 16. Second class meets Thursday, June 18. After the first week, classes meet each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, ending July 7. The course fee is $25.

Dan McAngus answers all your questions about the stock market, and touches on points you've perhaps never thought of in his three-week course, Introduction to the Stock Market.

McAngus, a well-known figure on the local stock market scene, leads his students through the ins-and-outs of buying, selling and speculation. He explains how to read the financial page in the newspaper, what quotations mean and how to read them, what a broker can and cannot do, how to select securities and how the stock exchanges work.

Classes meet Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $18.

Because four of the five courses offered can accept only a limited number of students, pre-registration should be completed as soon as possible. This may be done in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building. Hours for this are 7 a.m.-noon and 12:30-5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Baptists open three days of talks

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaders of the Southern Baptist Church opened a three-day convention today amid a dispute over how the Bible should be viewed.

Convention-goers found their credentials scrutinized to prevent double or unqualified registrations and other violations discovered in past meetings of the nation's largest Protestant body.

With up to 10,000 "messengers" expected, registration secretary Lee Porter said credentials were being "more closely checked" to insure "integrity of the registration and voting process."

Rousing hymns, prayers and Scripture readings resounded through the Los Angeles Convention Center during preliminary devotions Monday as corridors bustled with religious displays. Sales of alcoholic beverages were halted at restaurrants and snack bars in the center to accommodate the mostly teetotaling members of the church.

What was described as a "watershed convention" for the Baptists pitted a newly risen, strongly conservative bloc against moderates long in charge of denominational institutions.

Conservatives charge doctrinal laxity and say the literalist view of the Bible as being totally without error should be required. Moderates call this a smokescreen for a power grab, saying Baptists always have emphasized authority of the Bible.

Dorothy Elliott Sample of Flint, Mich., elected Monday as president of the Southern Baptist Woman's Missionary Union, voiced hope that "the living Word will unite us in this time of stress."

She told a news conference that Southern Baptists always have believed strongly in the authority of the Bible, and she pleaded for keeping the convention's "main focus" on evangelistic mission.

Five projects filed in RRC District 8

One wildcat and four field tests have been filed in the District 8 counties of Howard, Andrews, Pecos and Sterling.

HOWARD COUNTY
Hinkle Exploration of Midland has scheduled a 7,900-foot wildcat in Howard County, 17 miles north of Big Springs.

Designated the No. 1 Simpson, the location is 990 feet from the south line and 1,900 feet from the west line of section 45, block 31, T-3-N of the Texas & Pacific Railroad Co. survey.

The site is one location northeast of the 7,830-foot Desana Smith, abandoned Jan. 22, 1963.

ANDREWS COUNTY
Maralo Inc. of Midland has amended the No. 2 Humble King to include the Ellenburger in the Deep Rock multipay field of Andrews County, five miles west of Andrews.

The project will test the Deep Rock (Devonian) field at 9,900 feet and the Deep Rock (Ellenburger) field at 12,400 feet.

The location is 600 feet from the south line and 1,900 feet from the east line of section 11, block A-46 of the Public School Lands survey.

Cities Service of Midland will plug back to test the Deep Rock (Devonian) field at 10,200 feet and Deep Rock (Pennsylvanian) field at 9,356 feet its

No. 3 King-B.
Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 1,993.2 feet from the west line of section 22, block A-46 of the Public School Lands survey and is six miles west of Andrews. Contract depth is 12,320 feet.

PECOS COUNTY
ARCO Oil & Gas of Midland will drill the No. 6 Cordz as a test to the

ENERGY OIL & GAS

Payton field of Pecos County, four miles south of Grandfalls.
The 2,100-foot field test, is located 4,850 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the west line of section 101, block 8 of the H&GN survey and 1 1/2 miles north of a current producer in the same field.

STERLING COUNTY
HNG Oil Company of Midland will drill the No. 2 McEntire 34 as a 8,000-foot field test in the Crede, East (Cisco upper) field of Sterling County, 10 northwest of Sterling City.

The location is 1,320 feet from the north line and 960 feet from the east line of section 34, block 23 of the H&TC survey and 3,000 feet southwest of the same company's abandoned well, Nov. 23, 1960.

Miners at New River Coal Corp.'s Stanaford Mine Workers voted to accept a new contract and went to work at midnight Sunday.

Discoveries finalized in Yoakum, Borden

Discoveries were finalized in Yoakum and Borden counties of the Texas Railroad Commission District 8-A.

YOAKUM COUNTY
Petro-Lewis Corp. of Levelland No. 1-A Bowen, et al, has been completed as a Wolfcamp oil discovery, 7/8-mile northeast of the Janice (San Andres) field and 13 miles northwest of Denver City.

Potentialized to pump 282 barrels of 37.6 gravity oil, plus 24 barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 907 to 1, production was gained through perforations at 8,904 to 8,937 feet which had been acidized with 37,000 gallons.

Drilled to 11,300 feet, 5 1/2 inch casing was set at 11,285 feet. Location is 1,900 feet from the south line and 600 feet from the east line of section 663, block D of the J.H. Gibson survey.

BORDEN COUNTY
Triton Oil & Gas Corp. of Dallas has completed its No. 1 Wolf as a Canyon sand oil discovery, one location north of the depleted Reinecke, South (lower Clearfork) field and three miles north of Vincent.

Producing from perforations at 7,328 to 7,328 3/4 feet acidized with 920 gallons, the well is potentialized to pump 146 barrels of 40.7 gravity oil plus 88 barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 548 to 1.

Drilled to 8,750 feet, 5 1/2 inch casing was set at 8,493 feet. The operator has requested field designation of Wolf (Canyon sand). Location is 600 feet from the south and east lines of section 41, block 25 of the H&TC survey.

LYNN COUNTY
Newman Brothers Drilling Co. of San Antonio will drill the No. 1 Godard, an 11,000-foot wildcat in Lynn County, one location east of its No. 1 Beatrice Neill, wildcat and two miles northwest of O'Donnell.
Location is 1,900 feet from the north and 600 feet from the west lines of section 50, block 8 of the EL&RR survey, abstract 929.

Runnels County gains discovery

Runnels County gained a discovery and a conformer; locations were scheduled for a wildcat and five conformers.

Vision Inc. of Midland completed as a Fry oil discovery its No. 1 S.D. Faubion, 1,500 feet southwest of Fry gas and 5/8-mile southeast of lower Fry oil in the Crews, South multipay field, three miles south of Crews in Runnels County.

Potentialized to flow 58 barrels of 44 gravity oil per day with a gas-oil ratio of 724 to 1, production was through a 12/64 inch choke from Fry perforations at 3,623 to 3,629 which had been washed with 500 gallons of mud and acidized with 2,200 gallons and fractured with 7,750 gallons and 6,000 pounds.

Drilled to 4,480 feet, it is plugged back to 4,415 feet, where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.
Location is 3,281 feet from the north line and 467 feet from the east line of Antonio Losoya No. 515 survey, abstract 345.

The Big Ed (lower Capps, Jennings, Caddo, Gardner and Palo Pinto) field gained its eighth Gardner lime producer and a 5/8-mile east-southeast extension to that pay with the completion of Trojan Oil Production & Services Inc. of Irving No. 1 Byron Orand, three miles southwest of Ballinger.

Potentialized to pump 27 barrels of 42 gravity oil plus 33 barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 556 to 1, production was gained through perforations at 4,136 to 4,144 feet which had been acidized with 250 gallons.

Scheduled as a wildcat, it was drilled to 4,800 feet with a 4 1/2 inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 467 feet from the south-east and 2,500 feet from the southwest lines of the Johann Hill No. 419 survey.

Thomas-Powell Royalty Inc. of Fort Worth will drill conformers to the openers of the two-well Brown Sugar (upper Gray and Jennings sand oil) field, 4.7 miles west of Goldsboro.

Both projects are scheduled to 4,800 feet.

The No. 1 Willis is a 5/8-mile north outpost to the firm's No 1 McAdams, upper Gray opener and lone producer from that pay, 500 feet from the south and 1,700 feet from the west lines of the W.G. Denton No. 435 (which shows to be in Taylor County on some maps).

The No. 2 Landers is a 3/4-mile north and slightly west outpost to its No. 1 Lewis, Jennings sand opener and lone producer from that pay, 467 feet from the north line and 2,350 feet from the east line of the W.A. Tremper No. 439 survey.

James K. Anderson Inc. of Dallas will attempt to re-open King sand production in the depleted Nora (Gardner sand, Goen lime and King sand) field with the scheduling of his No. 1 Cooper, a 2,400-foot test, one mile north of the original opener and 2 1/2 miles southeast of Winters.

Location is 467 feet from the north and 600 feet from the east lines of the Elisha Mather No. 535, or 4,436 feet from the north and 6,955 feet from the west lines of the survey. (The project is a twin to or a re-entry of an old oil producer which was drilled to a 4,416 feet and produced at 2,342 feet.)

Midstates Oil Co. of Arlington re-submitted applications to drill three conformers to the Dog Bend gas opener and lone producer from that pay in the Midstates multipay field, eight miles east of Ballinger.

All projects, originally scheduled in April 1980 are contracted to 4,200 feet.

The No. 3 J.M. Clayton, 1 3/8 miles southwest of the opener and lone producer, is 467 feet from the north and 2,385 feet from the west lines of Mrs. R. Boatright No. 1 survey.

The No. 2 Lena Clayton, 1 1/8 miles southwest is 467 feet from the south and 2,625 feet from the east lines of the J.W. Robinson No. 2 survey.

The No. 2 Lena Clayton "B", 2,107 feet southeast is 467 feet from the south and 3,900 feet from the east line of the A.A. Millican No. 200 survey.

Scattered picketing reported in three states

By The Associated Press
Picketing by striking mine-construction workers spread today, closing mines in West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio and keeping thousands of union miners from reporting for a second day of work after settlement of the 72-day United Mine Workers strike.

In West Virginia, a spokesman for District 17 — the union's largest with about 24,000 members — said about 65 percent of his district's mines were shut down by the picketing construction workers.

"It probably will be an off-and-on type situation," said Cecil Roberts, District 17 vice president. "I doubt if all the mines are shut down in the district. I would say roughly two-thirds are down."

The strike by UMW miners ended Saturday after ratification of a new contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The 11,000 UMW construction workers, who build mines and coal processing plants, have not reached an agreement in their separate negotiations with contractors.

In West Virginia's UMW District 31, four major Consolidation Coal Co. mines, employing more than 1,700 people, were reported closed by construction pickets. However, just a county away, another large Consol mine, with nearly 700 employees, was reported working.

In Virginia, pickets were reported in Wise and Russell counties, closing four mines and a preparation plant, although two of those picketing incidents apparently were not related to the construction workers strike.

Virginia state police Capt. W.S. Hicklin said Flat Gap Mining Co. and Elkins Energy Co. in Wise Co. were closed by miners protesting their employers' refusal to sign the contract ratified over the weekend by the UMW.

Hicklin said about 40 pickets were at the same site Monday, and one coal truck was struck by a rock and a number of jack rocks — nails welded together so that one point always faces upward — were thrown in the road. No arrests were reported.

In western Pennsylvania, construction pickets idled miners at Jones & Laughlin Steel's Nemacolin mine, 400 workers at Duquesne Light's Warwick mine and 200 employees of the Shannopin Coal Co. mine, all in Greene County.

In UMW District 6, covering Ohio and West Virginia's Northern Panhandle, construction local president Stan Hopkins said his members would not picket unless there was a major breakdown in negotiations with the Association of Bituminous Contractors.

District 7-C reports activities

A discovery was finalized in Terrell County and conformers in Crockett, Schleicher and Sutton. Also, three wildcats were slated in Schleicher and a wildcat and an outpost in Crockett.

TERRELL COUNTY
Jackson Exploration Inc. of Dallas has completed the No. 1 Ruth White "C", an unidentified Permian gas discovery, 17/8 miles northwest of the Mesa Grande (Leonard gas) field and 15 miles southeast of Sheffield.

Potentialized for a calculated absolute open flow of 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day, production was gained through perforations at 4,820 to 4,850 feet acidized with 2,500 gallons.

Drilled to 7,966 feet with 5 1/2 inch casing set on bottom, it is plugged back to 7,901 feet.

Location is 600 feet from the north line and 2,300 feet from the east line of the J.J. Bankston No. 7, abstract 1629.

SCHLEICHER COUNTY
McBay Oil & Gas Inc. of Crockett will drill three 6,800-foot wildcats and also attempt to re-open the depleted Butler (Strawn oil and Canyon oil and gas) field of Schleicher County, 13 miles east of Christoval.

All of the projects are in section 77, block H of the GH&RR survey.
The No. 1 Brandenberger, 1,500 feet south and slightly east of the depleted field, is 2,410 feet from the south and 1,700 feet from the east lines of the section. Ground elevation is 2,438 feet.

The No. 2 Brandenberger, one location to the east, is 2,140 feet from the south and 500 feet from the east lines of the section. Ground elevation is 2,432 feet.

The No. 3 Brandenberger, one location to the west, is 2,140 feet from the south and 2,150 feet from the west lines of the section. Ground elevation is 2,432 feet.

The University 54 (Canyon gas and Ellenburger oil and gas) field gained its ninth Canyon gas producer and a location south extension to that pay with the completion of Transcontinental Oil Corp. of San Angelo No. 1 University 54-16, 20.4 miles northwest of Eldorado in Schleicher County.

Potentialized for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,240,000 cubic feet of gas per day, production was gained through perforations at 7,303 to 7,321 feet acidized with 2,000 gallons and fractured with 50,700 gallons and 35,000 pounds of sand.

Location is 600 feet from the north and west lines of section 16, block 54 of the University Lands survey.

CROCKETT COUNTY
Exxon Corp. will drill the No. 1 Henderson Trust "F", a 10,150-foot wildcat in Crockett County, 1 1/8 miles southwest of the firm's 10,502-foot No. 1 Henderson Trust "B", abandoned May 27, 1960, in Crockett County, 13.5 miles southwest of Ozona.
Location is 950 feet from the south and 1,500 feet from the east lines of section 30, block ST of the TCCR survey.

Harrison Interests Ltd. of Houston will drill the No. 18 John W. Henderson III "F", as a 1 3/4 miles east outpost to the Ozona, Southwest (Strawn gas) field in Crockett County as a Canyon sand gas test, in the Ozona multipay field, 16 miles southwest of Ozona.

Location is 1,500 feet from the north and 2,173 feet from the west lines of section 4, block M of the GC&SF survey.
Contract depth is 10,600 feet.

The Todd (Strawn, Grayburg and San Andres) field gained its current third Strawn oil producer and a 3/4-mile west and slightly south extension to that pay with the completion of Southland Royalty Co. of Midland No. 1 Todd "M", 20 miles northwest of Ozona.

Potentialized for a calculated absolute open flow of 221 barrels of 38.2 gravity oil per day with no water with a gas-oil ratio of 307.7 to 1, production was gained through a 10/64 inch choke from perforations at 6,362 to 6,396 feet acidized with 50 gallons.

Location is 600 feet from the north and 1,880 feet from the east lines of section 6, block WX of the GC&SF survey.

SUTTON COUNTY
The Phyllis-Sonora (lower Canyon) field of Sutton County gained its fourth producer and 1/2 mile east extension with the completion of Florida Gas Exploration of Midland No. 1 Florence 32, seven miles northeast of Sonora, for a calculated absolute open flow of 7,500,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Production was through perforations at 5,635 to 5,760 feet acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 80,000 gallons and 210,000 pounds of sand.

Location is 600 feet from the south and west lines of section 32, block 9 of the TW&NG survey.

J.Cleo Thompson of Dallas has completed the No. 5 Mayer "A", 15 1/2 miles northwest of Sonora in Sutton County, as a Canyon gas producer, surrounded by that pay in the Sutton County portion of the Sawyer multipay field.

Potentialized for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,900,000 cubic feet of gas per day, production was gained through perforations at 6,644 to 7,168 feet which had been fractured with 48,000 gallons and 159,000 pounds of sand.

Drilled as a wildcat at 8,011 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,010 feet it is plugged back to 7,997 feet.
Location is 1,218 feet from the north line and 3,422 feet from the west line of the McMullen Co. School Land No. 5 survey.

Stonewall projects set

Calhoun-Ellison Oil Co. of Aspermont, will drill the No. 1 Ida Denison as a 1,500-foot southwest stepout to the concurrent four-well Bend conglomerate area of the Pumphrey multipay field of Stonewall County, three miles west of Old Glory.

Location is 467 feet from the north and 660 feet from the west lines of section 16, block B of the AB&M survey.
Contract depth is 6,150 feet.

The Desana corp. will drill the No. 14-147 Flat Top as a 3/8-mile southwest stepout to the seven-well Flat Top (lower Swastika) field of Stonewall County, six miles south of Old Glory.

Location is 330 feet from the south and east lines of section 147, block 1 of the BBB&C survey.
Contract depth is 3,750 feet.

Energy official seeks changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards today proposed changes in his department's regulations that would make it easier for utilities and industries to continue to burn oil and natural gas rather than alternative fuels.

Edwards also said he expected an adequate supply of gasoline, at stable prices, for travelers this summer.

The regulatory changes Edwards proposed would modify rules involving the Fuel Use Act of 1978, which prohibits the use of natural gas or oil in new power plants and large industrial boilers unless the department grants an exemption.

Edwards explained that the major change would eliminate a large amount of paperwork and allow industries to gain exemptions by certifying themselves qualified for them.

"Firms seeking exemptions to burn oil or gas may qualify simply by certifying that they meet the statutory criteria for exemptions and submitting very limited supporting information," he said.

This would not significantly increase the amount of oil and gas burned, Edwards said, because the marketplace dictates the use of coal as a more economical fuel.

"They can choose any fuel that they want to, but the marketplace will dictate," he said.

The secretary said the proposed regulatory changes will reduce from 11 to two the number of forms used under the Fuel Use Act regulations. "This will reduce the private sector's reporting burden by almost 2,000 man-hours annually," he said.

Edwards said the act was passed at a time when it was thought there was a lot less natural gas available than is now believed to be the case.

"There's going to be more gas than anybody believed was out there," he said.

Viet protesters say their protest won't end

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Angry Vietnam veterans, anticipating eviction from a hospital where they have been staging a sit-in and hunger strike, say their protest won't end when they are driven from their "Veterans Village."

They vowed Monday to continue the hunger strike at a nearby church, and they said they will go to Washington because President Reagan did not answer their plea to meet with them here.

"If they come with armed guards and evict us, we will go to St. John's Church, take two to three weeks to organize a national protest and march on Washington," said Bill Rigole, who says he has not eaten solid food in 15 days.

Although federal officials have not ordered an eviction from the Wadsworth Veterans Administration Medical Center, they have said a decision will be made soon on whether and when to remove the 12 hunger strikers and their two dozen or so supporters.

Six protesters who have occupied the hospital lobby since May 20 said they will passively resist eviction and allow themselves to be arrested. Other protesters said they will leave on their own when the order is given.

The protesters want officials to investigate treatment of Vietnam veterans and conduct more studies into the effects of the defoliant Agent Orange, which was used in Vietnam.

Rebels ordained as monks

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Three rebels pardoned for their role in an abortive April 1 coup against Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda were ordained as Buddhist monks today.

But the leader of the failed coup, who fled the country, has let it be known he intends to "take time to travel" before returning home, although he too has been pardoned.

The three new monks are former city Gov. Chaowas Sudlpa, army Lt. Col Palthoon Nakkarat and Col. Choopong Mattawapan.

They told reporters they would stay in a Buddhist monastery temporarily to devote themselves to religious teachings and abstain from worldly affairs.

Thailand's King Bhumipol Adulyadej signed an amnesty last month for 52 coup participants who turned themselves in after Prem's forces crushed their 56-hour rebellion on April 3.

World leaders react to Israel attack

By MARGARET GORDY, Associated Press Writer

Arab governments called it an "act of terrorism." Israel called it "self-defense." Other world leaders deplored the Israeli air raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor as an unnecessary escalation of tensions in the Middle East.

Iran, which has been at war with Iraq for nine months along the Persian Gulf, condemned the attack on its enemy.

"Our irreconcilable opposition to the Iraqi regime and our decisive and gallant war against the (Iraqi) aggressor does not deter (our) Moslem nation to strongly denounce the Israeli air raid," Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said.

Warplanes identified at the time as Iranian attacked the same reactor site — but caused little damage — within days of the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war last September. An unconfirmed report said the planes were actually Israeli.

The Israeli attack Sunday was "one of the most painful blows ever dealt the Arab world," the United Arab Emirates newspaper Al Wahda said today. The paper contended that it was "unthinkable that Washington could have no connection with the Israeli raid."

In Washington, the Reagan administration said it had no prior knowledge of the attack, which was condemned by U.S. officials.

The Soviet news agency Tass labeled the State Department's condemnation "hypocritical," claiming the Israelis never would have attacked Iraq "without Washington's sanction."

Israel claimed its U.S.-built warplanes destroyed the reactor outside Baghdad in a surprise raid because the Iraqis planned to use the reactor to make nuclear weapons for use against the Jewish state.

The Iraqi Revolutionary Command Council issued a statement in Baghdad saying the Israeli attack was aimed at maintaining the technological gap between the Arab state and Israel.

Chedli Klibi, leader of the 21-nation Arab League, scheduled an urgent meeting in Baghdad within the next two days to unite bloc's squabbling members against the "arrogant challenge" by Israel.

United Nations Secretary-General

Kurt Waldheim, visiting Japan, said today the U.N. Security Council would grant Iraq's request for a meeting on the issue "within the next few days."

In Paris, French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson summoned Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne for a 30-minute meeting today. France, which built the Iraqi reactor, announced earlier that one of the 150 French technicians working on the facility had died in the attack.

Italy, which had 50 technicians on the site, expressed concern today that the attack set a precedent for similar assaults worldwide on innocent people working abroad.

"The plant, like others that were furnished to Iraq, was for peaceful purposes," an Italian government statement said today. It noted the plant conformed with the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, including inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The attack has rallied Arab nations that had split over radical Iraq's invasion of Iran last September.

Iraq's conservative neighbor Kuwait deplored the raid as "another proof of the acts of terrorism practiced by Israel in the region." There were similar denunciations from Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

Even Syria, Iraq's longtime political rival in the region, said Israel's "criminal action ... proves what Syria has been warning the Arabs about" and justifies its confrontation with Israel in Lebanon.

Israel has been shelling Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon and backing Christian Lebanese militia against Syrian troops in the east. On April 28, Israel downed two Syrian helicopters in eastern Lebanon. Syria responded by deploying Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles in the area, and Israel has threatened to attack them if they are not withdrawn.

Reagan administration officials said the Israeli raid had undercut U.S. envoy Philip Habib's efforts to mediate a solution to the missile crisis, increasing the chance of war in the Middle East.

"The United States government condemns the reported Israeli air strike ... the unprecedented character of which cannot but seriously add to the already tense situation in the area," State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said in Washington.

Governor threatens to delay sales tax payment

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson is threatening to hold up payment of more than $21.6 million in sales tax revenues to the financially troubled Regional Transportation Authority until he is assured suburban bus lines will receive their fair share.

In another development, Illinois Supreme Court on Monday stayed an order issued by Circuit Judge Arthur L. Dunne requiring the RTA to keep buses and trains running in the six-county area, even if it has to increase fares.

The court scheduled oral arguments for Thursday on the RTA's appeal of Dunne's order.

The governor said he wants assurances from RTA Chairman Lewis W. Hill before the sales-tax funds are released June 8 that all the money won't go to the city of Chicago.

The RTA ordinarily provides subsidies to mass transit in the Chicago area, but stopped them when it ran out of money recently. Four suburban bus lines have shut down as a result.

But Hill said delivery of the tax receipts is "a matter of procedure" Thompson cannot delay.

Thompson's threat to withhold the tax revenue could jeopardize the Chicago Transit Authority, which needs the money to meet next week's payroll.

About 46,000 riders remained without bus service Monday because of the shutdowns by four suburban bus lines.

To add to the Chicago area's transit woes, an undetermined number of drivers for Checker Taxi Co. and Yellow Cab walked off the job in a strike for a new contract early Monday.

A spokesman for the union representing the drivers said 85 percent of the city's cab drivers were on strike, but company officials said 70 percent of the drivers remained on the job.

Also on Monday, suburban members of the RTA board said they had asked business leaders to loan the penniless RTA $3 million to keep commuter railroads running.

A letter sent to business leaders said the money would be used to support the commuter railroads, which carry 275,000 riders each day and may start suspending service later this week. Several of the associations contacted are still considering the request, although two have turned it down.

Meetings of the RTA board are scheduled for today and Wednesday to discuss proposed fare hikes that were reintroduced by board member D. Daniel Baldino of suburban Evanston.

The board Monday rejected a proposal that would have given suburban members greater control over the distribution of funds among the CTA and suburban carriers.

State Rep. Ted E. Leverenz of River Grove called for Hill's resignation, charging he has mismanaged the transit system.

"I'm tired of everybody pointing a finger at the General Assembly. Lay the blame where it belongs. Hill is the guy that caused the problem," Leverenz said.

In Springfield, Republican senators said they had presented to Senate President Philip J. Rock a GOP rescue proposal calling for a 95-cent CTA fare, a 40-cent transfer fee and a goal that fares eventually meet 60 percent of CTA operating expenses.

Fares currently are 80 cents and transfers are 10 cents.

Striking writers contend settlement talk premature

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With two key issues yet to be resolved, negotiators for the striking Writers Guild are warning against undue optimism that a settlement is near in the nine-week strike against major motion picture and television producers.

Negotiations were to resume today, and the Producers' Negotiating Committee may make offers on compensation for pay television and minimum compensation for scripts, said Shannon Boyd, a spokeswoman for the Writers Guild of America.

"We are pleased with the spirit in which the negotiations have resumed," Miss Boyd said. "There is genuine bargaining on both sides of the table and a very constructive atmosphere."

She added that while the writers were optimistic, she said it was "premature" to predict the strike would be over by a certain date "because we have yet to see management's offer on two key issues."

The writers met through the weekend with management negotiators, but recessed Monday so the producers could meet with the Directors Guild of America.

A major issue in the walkout, which began April 11, is setting a fee to be paid for original pay television shows and for video cassettes and video discs. The writers have asked for 4.5 percent of the sales after producers recoup certain costs. The producers offered 1.5 percent after a pay television show has played 10 days within a year, and the same percent after 100,000 cassette or disc units have been sold.

'Spider-Man' pleads guilty

CHICAGO (AP) — Offering an apology for "any inconvenience" he caused, the self-styled "Spider-Man" who climbed the 110-story Sears Tower on Memorial Day has pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct and was fined $35.

Circuit Judge Raymond C. Sodini levied the fine on Dan Goodwin, 25, after he pleaded guilty Monday to disorderly conduct.

After the hearing, the Las Vegas stuntman who became the first to scale the world's tallest building held a brief news conference in which he apologized for "any inconvenience I may have caused the City of Chicago or Sears, Roebuck and Co."

Asked if he was planning any other stunts, Goodwin only grinned and replied, "You'll see."

He said he still has the "Amazing Spider-Man" costume he wore during the climb.

Goodwin said he spent $4,000 on equipment for the Sears climb, but added that the publicity has not brought offers for stunt work, acting, or endorsements.

James Hackett, 31, of Chicago, who allegedly helped Goodwin start his seven-hour climb by holding a ladder up to the first floor, pleaded not guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct, which was dismissed.

Suddenly potent Cubs batter Dodgers again

Sports Editor

That shell-shocked, glassy-eyed band of players in the tattered uniforms seen slipping out Midland's back door late Monday night was the same proud and haughty San Antonio Dodgers, who arrived in the Tall City last week, riding tall in the Texas League West Division saddle.

The Dodgers still held first place after the seven game series, but departed wondering what hit them here, where they expected to find the usual mild-mannered Midland Cubs meekly waiting to accept their customary whipping.

MONDAY'S 15-7 blistering gave Midland the series with the Dodgers 4-3 and stretched their winning streak to three straight, longest of the season as they left for a twilight 12-game swing through Amarillo and El Paso. But it wasn't so much that Midland won its second series of the season, but how they won it.

Midland swept the last three 12-11, 12-5 and 15-7, pounding out 42 hits in the process and scoring in 15 of the last 18 innings against Dodger pitching that once boasted strings of 19 and 16 shutout innings against the fangless Bruins.

"We're not looking back at the past, only ahead," said Manager George Enright, who is 4-2 since taking over the Cubs. "The 12-11 game was the turning point," he added. That was the game Midland trailed 9-4 going into the sixth and rallied two in in extra innings.

MIDLAND BATTERED Charlie Jones, 4-4, and Rusty McDonald for 18 hits as Jack Upton hit his sixth home run in the first, a two-run job, and his seventh, a leadoff solo homer in the eighth. Mel Hall applied the coup de grace with a three-run homer in the five-run eighth. Mel's ball cleared the double-deck eye aid in center, only the second time that has been achieved this season, and marked his third homer in two nights.

Shortstop Dave Owen drilled four singles for three rbi and Randy LaVigne, experiencing an authoritative bat revival, and Fritz Connally each collected two doubles.

THE CUBS had 20 Cubs Stadium home runs going into this series and hit 10 during the seven-game run, nine in the last three games.

So what has turned the Cubs into vicious predators? "I don't know," said Upton, "But I know Buddy's being in the dugout has every one thinking. He's a good influence and he's sharp."

Buddy is Buddy Bradford, Chicago's roving batting coach, who has remained in uniform and stayed in the dugout the last two nights, during the 42-hit carnage. Usually, Buddy showers and watches from the stands after pregame drills.

"But this worked so well, I think I'll stay in the dugout all the time when I'm with the club now," Buddy says. "I did last year when George was managing and we got into a hot streak. Perhaps, they see me and it reminds them of something they should be doing. Or I can tell them if I see something."

LEFTHANDER Craig Lefferts gave up fewer runs in losing the opener of the series, 6-1, but the former University of Arizona pitcher was in control most of the night. He gave up eight hits, but didn't issue a walk in pitching his fourth complete game and squaring his record at 6-6.

Greg Brock hit a three-run homer to climax a four-run fourth, giving the Dodgers a momentary tie at six, but after that Lefferts gave up only two hits, one a solo homer to open the eighth to Leo Hernandez. It was Leo's third homer in the series and the circuit blows raised the Dodgers' Cubs Stadium total 18 this season.

Of course, the key to the Cubs' revival will be this road trip. Midland is 4-20 on the road and the Cubs need to put together something respectable with which to return home with to start the second half race June 22.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Javier Fierro has been sidelined a few games by a foot injury... Alvin Dark, on special assignment for the Chicago Cubs, will accompany the team to Amarillo for another look at Randy Clark tonight then head for Des Moines to view the Iowa Oaks... When the Cubs jumped on Orel Hershiser for six runs Sunday for a 12-5 win, it was the first earned runs off the San Antonio relief ace since May 2. He had gone 18 innings without giving up a run and had an ERA of 0.58...

Rose near another record Just a couple of swings from NL hit mark

By The Associated Press

Pete Rose is about to crash the record book again — this time with what is perhaps his most prestigious mark of all. A day or so from now, he will eclipse Stan Musial's National League record for hits.

In 22 glorious seasons, Stan Musial, coiled in a batting stance that looked like a spring ready to snap, rattled 3,630 hits around National League ball parks. Pete Rose, in his 19th season, is a just couple of swings away from No. 3,631.

ROLL THAT number over your tongue ever so gently. Three thousand hits is an achievement all by itself. Six hundred thirty one extra means better than three more 200-hit seasons. Or, as Musial breaks it down, 3,631 hits is 18 seasons worth of tattooing about 202 hits a year. That is a model of consistency that borders on awesome.

As a tribute to Rose's remarkable achievement, Howken Industries of Cincinnati has commissioned sculptor Ken Bradford to create a likeness of Rose at the plate. There are 500 copies, scaled to one-sixth life size and, autographed by both Rose and Bradford, they carry a price tag of $1,575. That comes to about 43 cents per hit, a bargain in anybody's league.

BUT A sculpture of Rose at the plate, swinging a bat, just doesn't capture him properly for the keeper of this corner. A hundred years from now, no matter how many hits this remarkable player finally accumulates, the memory of Pete Rose will have him flying through the air, heading for a base with both legs flying, about to return to earth, face first.

Pete Rose is a belly-whop slide looking for some place to land. He gets his uniforms dirty. He is a throwback to another time, another age in baseball when players approached this game with zest and enthusiasm, hell bent for leather. John McGraw would have loved Pete Rose and his style.

THE IRONY of Rose breaking the Musial record is that Stan the Man's last two career hits came on the final day of the 1963 season with the St. Louis Cardinals playing a so-what game against the Cincinnati Reds. Musial whizzed one past the left side of the Cincinnati second baseman and another zipped past his right side. Stationed at second for the Reds that day was a crew-cut rookie who was the best first-year player in the National League that season.

"If I had any range then," Pete Rose is fond of saying, "I'd only need 72 hits this season."

What Rose doesn't say is that in that game, he had three hits. Musial has the box score to prove it. ROSE FINISHED his first year with 170 hits and managed just 139 in his second season. Since then, though, he's had only six seasons in which he failed to crack 200 hits, and in two of those seasons, he missed by just two hits. He has led the league in hits four times and tied for the league lead two other times. His top hit production came in 1973 when he drilled 230 of them.

That was the same year that Rose nearly started a riot during the NL playoffs when he went to war with New York Mets shortstop Bud Harrelson. Rose had come barreling into second base, intent on breaking up a double play and prepared to drive Harrelson, who was covering the bag, into left field if it became necessary.

THE COLLISION and subsequent words turned into a full scale brawl and some New Yorkers with long memories still boo Rose over the affair. That's a mistake. Pete was just playing the game his way — tough. Collisions are part of his game plan.

The night before the 1970 All Star Game at Cincinnati, Rose hosted Cleveland catcher Ray Fosse for dinner. The next night, with Fosse blocking home plate and Rose carrying the winning run, Pete crashed into the catcher, knee first. The National League won the game and Fosse suffered a separated shoulder and was never quite the same player.

TEN YEARS later, in the NL playoffs, Rose came barreling around third base again, carrying Philadelphia's winning run in Game Four. Waiting at the plate was Houston catcher Bruce Bochy. The ball and Rose arrived at about the same moment, a bad development for Bochy who, like Fosse a decade earlier, was bowled over in the interest of a winning run.

That's baseball Pete Rose style — a belly-whop slide and 3,631 base hits.

Homeruns fuel El Paso's romp over Amarillo

By The Associated Press

Doug Loman had a three-run homer and Bob Skube had a two-run homer as the El Paso Diablos blasted the Amarillo Gold Sox, 12-0, in a Texas League baseball game Monday night.

Loman's three-run homer and a two-run double by Stan Davis highlighted an eight-run outburst by the Diablos in the seventh inning. Earlier, Skube's homer helped El Paso score four runs in the fourth inning.

RICK KRANTZ, 2-6, who gave up only three hits, was the winning pitcher. Troy Dixon, 3-6, was the loser.

Jim Rothford's sacrifice fly in the fourth inning drove home Tom O'Malley with the winning run as the Shreveport Captains beat Arkansas, 1-0, in the first game of a double-header.

Scott Garrelts, 3-8, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Jim Gott, 3-3.

Shreveport jumped out to a 9-1 lead after 4½ innings, but had to withstand a strong comeback by the Travelers to take the 9-8 victory in the nightcap.

THE WINNING pitcher was Mark Dempsey, 7-0. Tagged with the loss was Kevin Hagen, 3-3.

Rusty Tillman's homer helped the Jackson Mets take a 2-1 victory in the first game of their doubleheader with the Tulsa Drillers.

John Semprini, 7-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was charged to Kevin Richards, 1-1.

Jackson took the nightcap, 6-0, giving them a sweep of the double-header and a sweep of the series from the Drillers, who have now lost 14 straight in Jackson.

Nicklaus hitting ball better but scores high

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, defending U.S. Open golf champion, said Monday he's hitting the ball better than he was last year at this time and he can't account for why his scores are not lower.

Nicklaus played the first round on a new course he designed near here as one of his final warmups for the Open, which starts June 18 at the Marion course in Pennsylvania.

NICKLAUS SHOT a 272 at Baltusrol in Springfield, N.J., to win the 1980 Open. "I'm hitting the ball better than I was last year at this time," Nicklaus told a news conference at the Hills of Lakeway course, 25 miles southwest of here. "I'm very confident in the way I'm playing. I'm very confident I will be able to score. I can't understand why I haven't put on any lower scores."

Nicklaus shot a 281 over the weekend in the Atlanta Golf Classic, finishing four strokes behind Tom Watson, who won a playoff.

HE SAID he has played Marion only twice — in 1960 when he won the world amateur championship and in 1971, when he lost the Open to Lee Trevino in an 18-hole playoff. At Marion, he said, "You've got to use your head a little bit."

"I don't see any reason why I shouldn't have a good Open," he added. Nicklaus, hitting a shot for photographers, used a four iron into the wind to drive the green — eight to 10 feet from the pin — on the 175-yard No. 7 hole at Lakeway, a hole he described as "spectacular."

TO HIT the green a ball must carry over a creek and a 15-foot waterfall immediately in front of the green. "I've never done (designed) anything like No. 7 before," he said.

Nicklaus suggested moving the tee closer to the hole so it would not be too difficult for club members who will play the course in the Central Texas hill country. He played the 6,866-yard, par-72 course with club professional Buckley Ayers, a former Auburn golfer in the late 1960s.

"I feel like a Volkswagen playing with Jack Nicklaus, and he's the Rolls-Royce," said Ayers. HURST CREEK is one of the main features of the course, and 10 holes must be played across water.

Arizona State's Ricky Nelson dives into home as Oklahoma State pitcher, Mitch Coplan waits for the ball. Nelson's run tied the score 2-2 in the bottom of the first inning as the two teams battled for the NCAA Championship during the College World Series finals Monday night in Omaha, Nebraska.

Big bats carry Devils Dukes' strong pitching helps clinch CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State's tournament tradition and big bats carried the No. 1 Sun Devils into the NCAA College World Series baseball championship game but the left arm of reliever Kevin Dukes reached out to grab the trophy.

Dukes picked up his second tournament victory in holding hot-hitting Oklahoma State to just two hits through 8-2-3 innings as ASU captured its fifth collegiate baseball title 7-4 Monday night in Rosenblatt Stadium.

A CROWD of 13,239 saw Dukes end OSU's first-inning rally, yield a run without giving up a hit in the third and another single run in the ninth on a double by Glenn Edwards. He also picked two runners off first base. "Arizona State is an excellent team with Dukes," said Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward, whose team chased ASU starter Kendall Carter after facing just the first four batters in the two-run first inning.

"We created some early momentum but Dukes took it away. He has major league stuff with great placement of his pitches," said Ward.

The third-ranked Cowboys had touched Dukes for the only hits he has given up in his four tournament appearances. OSU knocked the senior stand-out out of the game in Friday night's winners bracket final with four singles in one inning.

"THEY DIDN'T hit him hard then," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "He was tired. He'd gone 6 1-3 innings earlier but I had no doubt he'd do the job tonight."

While Dukes was handcuffing the Cowboys, Arizona State was chipping away at a parade of OSU pitchers. Mike Sodders hit a sacrifice fly and a wild pitch scored two runs in the first to match Oklahoma State at 2-2.

The 55-13 Sun Devils then added two more in the third to go ahead for the first time in the game. Stan Holmes doubled home one run to improve his CWS record RBI total to 17. Holmes then scored on a Mike McCain double.

THE COWBOYS tried to put a stop to ASU's scoring by bringing in first-round major league draft pick Darren Dilks in the sixth. Dilks struck out three in two scoreless innings but was forced out of the game on a ruling question when Ward pinch hit for him in the top of the eighth.

"By getting Dilks out of there, it accomplished two things," said Brock. "It gave us a little more time for Dukes to rest up and I think it gave us another run."

The Devils picked up an insurance run in the eighth when Kevin Romine singled, went to second on a grounder, stole third and scored on a throwing error.

THE VICTORY was the fifth title for Arizona State but the second for Brock.

NBA teams jockey for spot Name players change uniforms before draft

By The Associated Press

Elvin Hayes had a wish fulfilled, the Kansas City Kings cut their losses and the Atlanta Hawks and Chicago Bulls played musical chairs in eleven-hour wheeling and dealing prior to Monday night's National Basketball Association trading deadline.

HAYES, WHO helped the Washington Bullets to an NBA championship in 1978, is returning to Houston, the city he loves and the place where he skyrocketed to stardom almost two decades ago. In return, for the 13-year veteran, the Bullets get two second-round draft choices, one in today's draft collegiate basketball draft and the other in 1983.

"It's a move that will work itself out for both teams," said the 35-year-old Hayes in a telephone interview from his home Columbia, Md. home. "It's a tremendous move for the Bullets. They are rebuilding ... and need the draft choices.

"THE ROCKETS got to the finals last year, and they just need one player to get over the threshold. I don't see why I can't be that player ... I was for the Bullets," Hayes added.

The Kings unloaded All-Pro guard Otis Birdsong and forward Scott Wedman — two players who already had signed free-agent contracts — for forward Cliff Robinson and a No. 1 draft pick. Birdsong and Wedman had signed "offer sheets" with the Cleveland Cavaliers that would have assured them contracts in excess of $700,000. Under the NBA's right of refusal the Kings had 15 days to match Cleveland's offers or else lose Birdsong and Wedman without compensation.

RATHER THAN be left with nothing, the Kings compromised. They matched Cleveland's offer for Birdsong and then dealt last season's sixth-leading scorer in the league and a second-round choice in today's college draft (the 44th overall) to the New Jersey Nets for the 6-foot-9½ Cliff Robinson.

In Wedman's case, Kansas City agreed to accept the Cavaliers' No. 1 draft selection (No. 17 overall) as payment for Wedman and pledged not to exercise their right of first refusal in his signing. The Kings, who also own the No. 7 pick overall, also gave Cleveland a second-round draft (the No. 36 pick overall) in the draft.

The Nets later sent the second-round draft pick they received from the Kings to Washington to complete a deal conducted last winter.

Birdsong, 25, is a four-year veteran. He is an outstanding long-range shooter who was an all-NBA second team selection this season. Robinson, 21, averaged 19.5 points per game for the Nets last season, his second in the NBA.

Leon Spinks plans to keep Holmes dancing

DETROIT (AP) — Leon Spinks figures he has to keep Larry Holmes from boxing if he's going to take away Holmes' World Boxing Council heavy-weight title.

"He's a boxer, I'm a puncher," Spinks said Monday. "He's going to be dancing and I'm going to keep him from dancing."

AT A NEWS conference in Detroit promoting Friday night's bout at Joe Louis Arena, Spinks said he would cling to Holmes "like a T-shirt" to neutralize the 31-year-old champion's five-inch reach advantage.

The 6-foot-1½, 205-pound Spinks was making his first pre-fight public appearance after training for weeks in seclusion at a ski resort near Cadillac in the northwest portion of Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

Asked how many rounds the scheduled 15-round fight would last, the 27-year-old Spinks said, "I'm not going nowhere. If he's not going nowhere then I guess it'll go the distance.

SPINKS, WHO won Olympic gold in 1976, stripped Muhammad Ali of his heavyweight boxing crown in February 1978 at Las Vegas. But Ali reclaimed the title the following September at New Orleans.

"I think I'm a better man this time. I'm going to shoot my best shot at it," Spinks said.

He said Friday's fight is not his "last chance" for the title and that he would try for the title again if he didn't win. "I don't look like Ken Norton, do I?" Spinks said, grinning broadly.

SPINKS' WBC title was given to Norton in 1978 when Spinks did not fight Norton within the required time. Norton, 36, lost the WBC heavyweight championship to Holmes in 1978 and retired in 1979. After coming out of retirement last year, he was knocked out by Gerry Cooney in the first round of a non-title bout in New York last month.

Rose moves hit closer to record

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa collected three hits and drove in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros 4-3, but the spotlight was on Pete Rose who moved a hit closer to breaking Stan Musial's all-time National League hit record of 3,630. The fans appreciated Bowa's contribution in the Phillies' third straight triumph Monday night, but the cheers resounded when Rose came to the plate in the only NL game of the night.

Rose picked up a single in the third inning, his only hit in three at-bats. It left him four short of passing Musial's career record.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a single by Dick Davis, Garry Maddox' double, and Bowa's two-run single.

In the fourth, Jose Cruz hit his 10th home run of the season to make it 2-1. The Phillies came back in the bottom of the inning for two more runs and a 4-1 lead.

Davis singled, reached second when Maddox was safe on an error, and scored on a Bowa single.

American miler has no advantage

Los Angeles Times
As an athlete, Steve Scott got one lousy break in life. He was born in America.

Now, if you're a basketball player, a baseball or football player or even a golfer or a bowler, this is a tremendous advantage. But Steve Scott is a miler.

He is, as it happens, America's best miler today, maybe ever. But this is like being the best little street cleaner in Milwaukee. This, and a quarter, entitles you to a cup of coffee, as the old thigh-slapper goes.

IF STEVE were Russian, he'd probably be a colonel in the Red Army now. He'd be the only one in his block to have his own apartment and car. If he were Finnish, he'd be appointed senior officer in the police system and get a resort cottage by the sea. At least, that's what that country did for Lasse Viren when he won his gold medals at Munich and Montreal. If Steve were French, he'd probably have his own training facility. If he were Jamaican, they'd build a statue to him as they did Don Quixote when he won the 2:00 at Montreal.

Since he is American, Steve Scott waits in line at the local hamburger palace even as you and I. When he set out training one morning in Orange County, he got stopped and kicked out of an orange grove by a security cop because it was "private property." When he tried to identify himself, the cop shrugged "I don't care if you're Paavo Nurmi." Which is interesting, because Nurmi's Finnish, too.

IT'S AN American disgrace. We're hosting the Olympic Games in 1984, and the concentration is on securing the best venues, the fastest tracks, the most attractive stands, the most outstanding pageantry. But we're going to show up with a team that'll look as if it's been training in a cellar in Duluth, or pulled from a shipwreck. The Games may look like the Christians vs. the lions again.

What does it profit America if it comes up with every technological marvel in the world, if it dazzles five continents with good old American know-how — and then puts on the track a bunch of 30-second sprinters, milers who have to train between night watchmen's tours, long jumpers who get coaching from books and magazine articles, and decathletes who have to throw disci (cq) into nets on rooftops.

REMEMBER VINCE Matthews, who won the 400 at Munich? He used to have to scale a locked fence outside a high school playground and chip the ice off the starting blocks in New York to get ready for his gold medal. Tom Hintnaus, our top pole vaulter currently, told a trackwriters' lunch the other day he has to work out on an uneven junior college runway down into a pit which has the soft consistency of a flophouse bed. Tom went to France recently where all the French vaulters were congregated in one place, surrounded by the finest of equipment, biochemists, physiologists, coaches and even psychiatrists. Hintnaus doesn't even have a guy to help him raise or lower the height. And you can recognize him right away on the highway near where he trains. He'll be the one carrying his poles along the road.

Evelyn Ashford, whose record of 10.97 in the hundred would have won the Moscow by .09, has to train herself at UCLA only when her wifely duties permit. Olga Korbut may have been a lieutenant in the Russian Army, but America's top athlete gets her mail addressed to "occupant."

Steve Scott, on form, would have finished second in Moscow's metric mile last year. At least, he has beaten Jurgen Straub, who did finish second, often enough. Presumably, he'll at least get to go to the next Olympics. Now out of college, and subsisting on the meager income from a clothing apparel tie-up, Steve may not be all that keen. You can be sure Communist Germany's Jurgen Straub knows where his next month's rent is coming from.

IT IS SAID an Olympic Games is "war without bullets." A bit strong, perhaps, but tribal pride is very evidently at stake. If American industry is falling all over itself to identify with the wholesome Olympic ideal, to provide the finest facilities, the deepest water and the grandest spectacle, if capitalism wants to put its best foot forward, shouldn't it recognize that America's ultimate Olympic showcase is its youth? There's no sense in having the biggest flag if, for the second straight Olympics, it never gets to be run up the pole. Why have the finest orchestra if they never get to play your anthem? And, just remember this, if the conditions are really crummy, it might be a break for our athletes. God knows they're more used to it.

Legislature penned in to prison changes

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) Backed into a corner by a federal judge who doesn't like the way Texas crams its criminals into prisons, the 1981 Legislature decided to build more cells and release more inmates.

It adds up to almost a half billion dollars over the next two years, including funds to build a prison, find land for two more, and set up halfway house for parolees.

Despite the big dollars and big plans, one critic of the Texas Department of Corrections says it's all "basically a token response to the Ruiz order."

The Ruiz order is the ruling handed down by U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler, who said the TDC is violating the constitutional rights of the 30,000 prisoners. The prisons are too crowded, too big and too understaffed, Justice said.

"I think he'll see it as some response, but only a token response," prisoners' lobbyist Charles Sullivan speculated on Justice's reaction to the legislative action.

The 67th Legislature approved $148 million for construction. That includes $47.5 million for a prison on land recently bought by the state in Grimes County. Also approved was $28 million for land for two additional prisons.

"We're going to have prisons coming out of our ears," said Sullivan, director of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants.

Selection of those sites could largely be determined by the results of the state's appeal of Justice's order. He doesn't want large rural prisons, such as the penitentiaries Texas has built for years. Justice wants prisons located close to major cities so the inmates won't be so isolated from their families.

A rider in the appropriations bill changes the way Texas will buy land for prisons.

Texas Topics

ons. The Prison Approval Board system was abolished. Under that system, a board — made up of the governor, land commissioner and chairman of the Board of Corrections — had to approve all site purchases.

Under the new system, the Board of Corrections can buy land once it gets an appraisal from the land commissioners.

Other efforts to ease prison crowding include plans for additions to several existing units.

The expansion plans started early in the session when Clements won approval of an emergency appropriation of $35 million for metal dormitories to be built at existing prisons in East Texas. The dorms will house about 2,880 inmates.

The cornerstone of the effort to reduce the number of prisoners in the ever-growing TDC is a halfway house program backed by Clements.

"The governor has provided more leadership in the field of community corrections than the Legislature," said Sullivan, who favors community-based facilities over maximum security prisons.

The appropriations bill says 4,000 inmates per year should go into halfway houses.

Clements favored the halfway house plan rather than TDC Director W.J. Estelle's idea to send inmates home on work furloughs. The Estelle idea did not make it through the Legislature.

The House and Senate approved changes in the Board of Pardons and Paroles, giving the governor more control by allowing him to select the chairman and vice chairman of the three-member board.

In addition, the Legislature took away the independence of the six parole commissioners by making them employees of the board. This probably will cost Paul Mansmann and Helen Copitka their jobs. They had the highest percentage of parole recommendations and were the most vocal in criticizing the board.

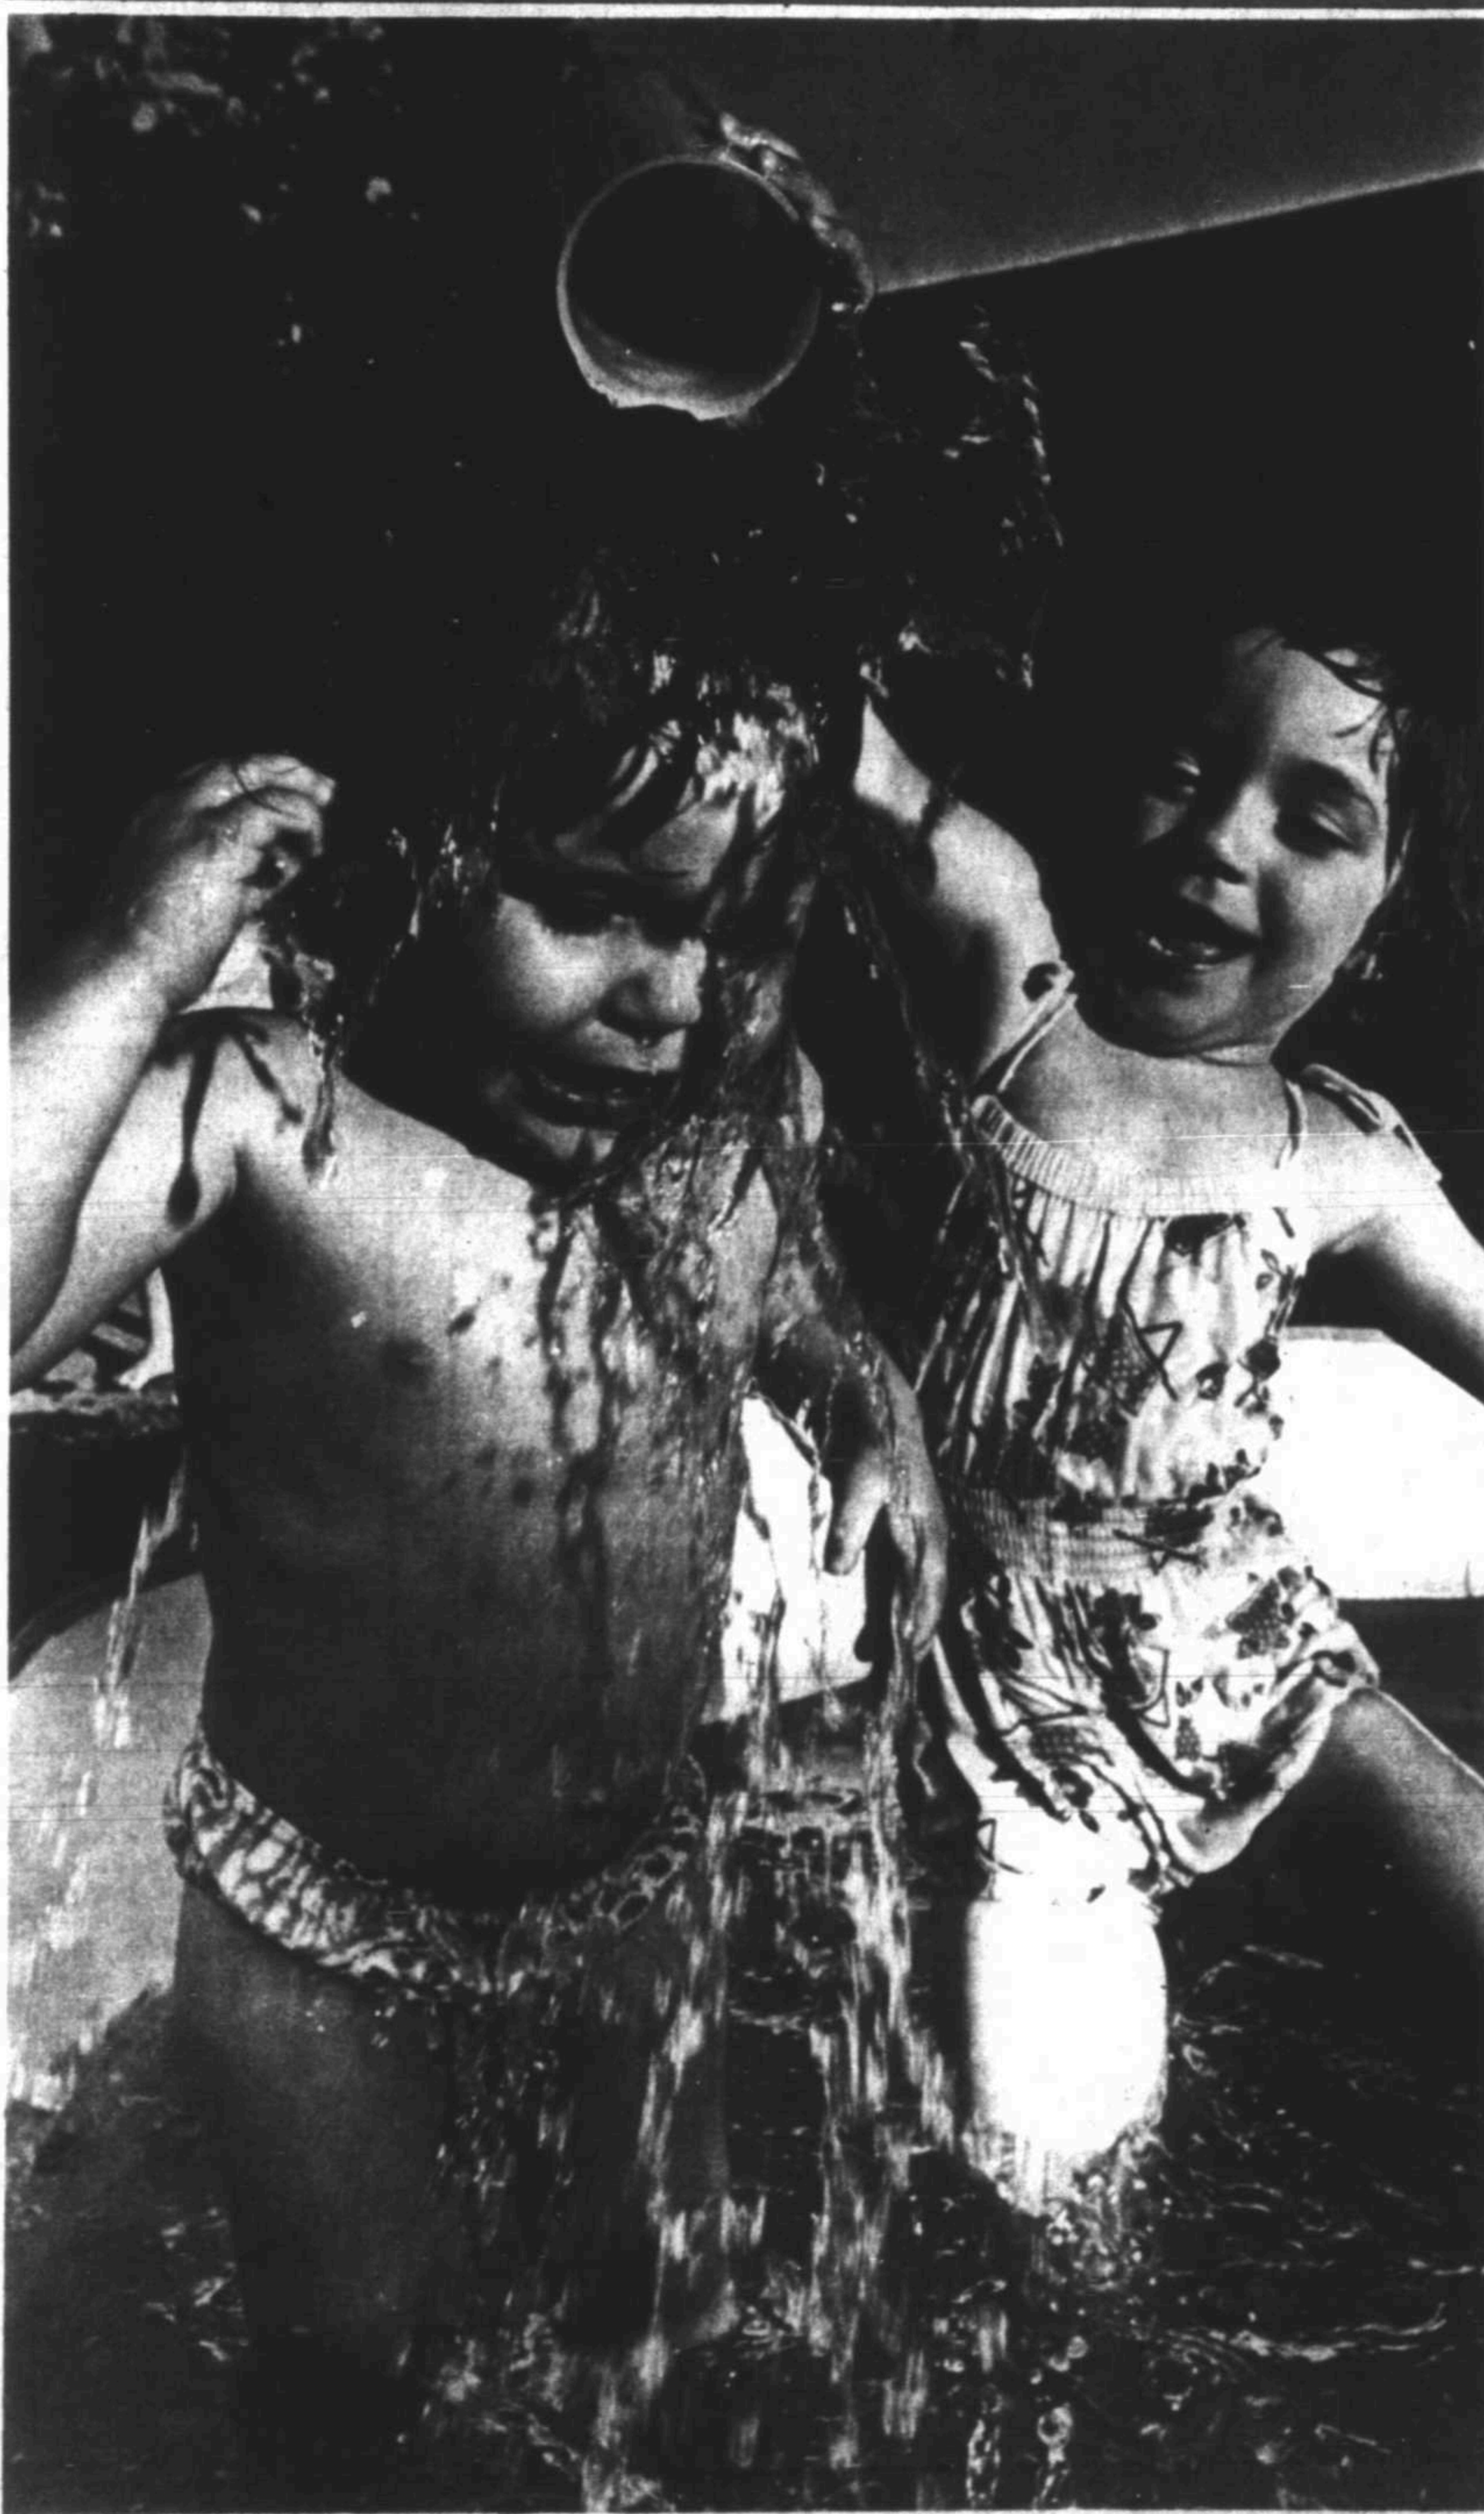

Despite all the efforts, the future of Texas prisons could be decided by the federal appellate courts which will review Justice's ruling.

Reactions mixed to reactor bombing

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli newspapers rang with praise today for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's decision to bomb an Iraqi nuclear reactor, and the voters who will decide his political fate June 30 seemed pleased with the daring raid.

Israeli planes, flying a circuitous route over Saudi Arabia, bombed the reactor outside the Iraqi capital of Baghdad on Sunday. A French technician was killed, but Iraq did not issue an immediate report on any Iraqi casualties.

Begin defended the raid, saying Iraq planned to use the reactor for manufacturing nuclear weapons to bomb Israel. Arab leaders condemned the attack as an "act of terrorism" and the United States condemned the action.

The mission met with widespread approval in Israel.

"Israel acted according to an old rule, hit them before they hit you," the conservative daily Maariv said in an editorial. The newspaper said Israel had a "complete right to act before the threat to her existence was realized."

The liberal daily Haaretz editorialized, "There is no doubt that the danger that threatens us from the eastern front has been diminished."

Haaretz' military writer, Zeev Schiff, said in a commentary, "What the Israeli pilots did in this complex and dangerous operation was like entering a beehive, taking the queen and getting away without being stung."

Davar, the paper of the opposition Labor Party, praised the execution of the raid as an "exemplary act," but it and the pro-Labor Jerusalem Post said the attack only postpones a resolution of the problem of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East.

The attack also apparently complicated U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib's peace mission to the Mideast. Habib, who has been seeking a peaceful resolution to the Israeli-Syrian missile crisis in Lebanon, was reported on his way to Beirut.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Beirut, who declined to be named, said Habib was expected in the Lebanese capital today to begin another round of talks.

Begin dismissed widespread foreign condemnation of the Israeli bombing.

"We are not afraid of any reaction by the world," Begin said in a broadcast Monday night. "We had to act to safeguard the safety and well-being of the Israeli people."

The Israeli government, which refuses to confirm or deny persistent foreign reports that it has built a dozen or more nuclear bombs, said the research reactor French and Italian technicians were building on the outskirts of Baghdad was being readied to manufacture nuclear weapons to be used against Israel.

Iraq denied this and asked for a meeting of the U.N. Security Council. It charged Israel with a "grave act of aggression."

Panel focuses on proper parking for cars, books

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Books and cars, which have relatively little in common, turned out to be major concerns Monday for Midland County commissioners.

Their interest, though, was in a building to house the books and in parking spaces to lodge cars in a downtown area that's growing skyward about as quickly as it is spreading out.

The commissioners' attention on the squeeze on parking came in a downtown Midland parking study made by Houston consultants Walter P. Moore & Associates and presented by Midland Chamber of Commerce leaders Joe Kloesel and Fred Tyler.

The what-to-do-about-the-library proposition was pursued by John Deats, head librarian of the Midland County Library.

Both projects were projected as costly but needed measures.

The proposed three-story library would cost $4 million or so if construction costs for the proposed 80,000-square-foot building is held at $50 a square foot. Furniture and equipment at $7 a square foot would add a half million dollars to the price. A contemplated fourth-story on the library would increase cost about 25 percent.

Deats' presentation was based on a 38-page report submitted by Hoyt Galvin & Associates, library consultants, of Charlotte, N.C.

A MAJOR consideration of the proposal was hinged on plans for Eagle Plaza, a proposed downtown high-rise office center to be built by The First National Bank of Midland. The bank's proposed site for the new library is between two envisioned 40-story bank office towers in a downtown area which includes the library at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

"The Midland County Library is an excellent institution, giving good service and these services are in demand and fully utilized by the highly educated residents," the Hoyt Galvin report said.

The existing 130,000-book library is a 27,000-square-foot structure built in 1958 and apparently not designed for

Pair indicted on murder charges

Two men remained jailed this morning under bonds totalling $400,000 in connection with the shooting deaths last week of two persons at a westside Midland residence.

Charged with capital murder are 22-year-old Milton Clyde Keith of 1603 N. Edwards St. and 21-year-old Ollie Glen Kemp of 1306 E. Walnut Lane.

Keith and Kemp were indicted by a special session of the grand jury Monday.

Keith was arrested at his home about 12:15 p.m. Friday on a bond forfeiture charge stemming from an unrelated case, according to police. Kemp was arrested 11 hours later in front of a residence at Stonewall Street and Indiana Avenue.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond of $100,000 on each of two charges accusing the men of shooting 26-year-old Charles Cole and 18-year-old Tracy Endres to death in a house at 507 Spraberry Drive May 31 or June 1.

They had been shot in the head with a large caliber weapon and had been dead 12 to 14 hours before their bodies were discovered by friends about 1 p.m. June 1. The Endres woman graduated from Midland High School May 29.

Police this morning said they were continuing their investigation into the case and further details would be released at a later date.

Presidents present public picture of trust

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, publicly submerging any differences, are stressing trust and neighborly cooperation in their talks at this mountaintop retreat.

Devoting extraordinary personal attention to his guest, Reagan spent more than 3½ hours Monday in discussions with Lopez Portillo, took him horseback riding and capped the day with a candlelight dinner on the terrace overlooking Reagan's pool.

"While we deal with you as a representative of a great nation, we can't help but think of you as brothers," Reagan said in a toast following the roast sirloin dinner.

He pledged that "any action we take will be consistent with the principles of sovereignty, good neighborliness and hospitality."

Lopez Portillo, who issued a stiff rebuke to then-President Carter in a toast at a 1979 state luncheon in Mexico, took the occasion Monday night to tell Reagan: "We wish to know and understand each other, but most important we trust each other."

He said there was "no tension and much understanding" between the two nations.

The two leaders met over breakfast for nearly an hour. Then, at mid-morning, they walked under an umbrella in the rain to a helicopter that carried them back to the White House for more talks and a formal luncheon. Any agreements they make will be announced afterward.

Leaving their wives at home, Reagan and Lopez Portillo arrived here Monday morning with an entourage that filled five helicopters.

Wearing dark blue jackets bearing the presidential seal and the flags of the United States and Mexico, the two leaders and 12 aides ate lunch on a terrace outside Reagan's lodge overlooking a meadow and discussed his plan to spur economic development in the Caribbean basin. An interpreter sat between them.

A senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on the condition that he not be identified, glossed over the discussion of the two leaders' divergent policies toward the turmoil in Central America.

The U.S. official said the subject was broached, but "each side just described its own view of the situation as opposed to coming to any agreement or any more than a declaration of each side's point of view."

While the Reagan administration has provided military aid and advisers to the civilian-military junta in El Salvador to counter what it says is Cuban-led aggression, Mexico opposes that aid.

"We're much more happy with this plan (new library) than the expansion," said Deats, who also noted that "a lot of libraries find out too late that they have underbuilt."

"When are you going to start building?" teased Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

Deats had no answer on that or from whence the money to build the $4 million-plus library would come from.

But Davis, who said he reviewed the Hoyt Galvin report on Sunday, indicated he was ready to take some sort of action.

"I already have a motion written out," he said with exuberance, but proposed nothing further.

However, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders cryptically implied that financing may be in the offing: "We're hoping somebody else (other than the county) will pay for that. We're not mentioning any names," Ahders said.

"I personally like everything here (concerning the proposed new library)," the judge said, "and I haven't heard any dissension."

None of the commissioners mentioned financing, such as bond issue, for the proposed library. But two months ago, First National Bank President Charles Fraser indicated that the bank would help with the financing of the library but would not underwrite the entire cost.

Too, indications were that the bank would pay handsomely for the present library site, which would be part of Eagle Plaza.

THE HOYT GALVIN report further said that "when the population of Midland reaches 100,000, the need for branch libraries should be studied."

That time may not be so far off. "The city is growing rapidly," the report said. "The current (U.S. Census Bureau estimated) population of 76,400 in the city is conservatively projected to increase to 131,000 by the year 2000."

"Midland residents are affluent, highly educated and oil-industry oriented," the report said. "Employment levels are among the highest in the nation."

THE DOWNTOWN parking problem has concerned the Midland Chamber of Commerce in recent years.

Kloesel, who heads up the chamber's task force on downtown parking, noted that downtown parking spaces in an area bordered by Louisiana, Carrizo, Front, and Weatherford totaled 11,147. The need in 1990, when the downtown area is projected to have 8 million square feet of office space, will be 22,400, Kloesel said.

At present, downtown office space totals 3.9 million square feet, Kloesel said.

"They (the Houston consultants) are recommending that the city take some steps immediately, modifying traffic codes, set new traffic controls."

Free Sundays

Some 400,000 workers from all over southern Poland gathered in the town of Piekary on May 31 to "thank the Lord for work-free Sundays" — the theme of this year's Pilgrimage to the Miraculous Figure of Our Lady in Piekary.

Area temperatures expected to remain near century mark

The mercury will remain near the century mark at least through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for temperatures near 100 degrees following tonight's low, which should be in the low 70s.

Winds tonight will be out of the southwest at 15-30 mph. The weatherman is predicting Wednesday's winds to be out of the east at 15-25 mph and gusty.

Monday's high was a hot 101 degrees, nearing the 1964 record of 104 degrees. Today's record low was set in 1955 at 55 degrees.

A scorching was on tap today for Texas with temperatures expected to hover around or slightly above the 100-degree mark over most of the state.

Forecasts called for clear skies and hot temperatures statewide. Highs were to be around 100 over all of the state except along the coast and in portions of Southeast Texas where readings were to be in the 80s and 90s. There was no mention of rain in the forecasts.

A few clouds were reported over southern and southeastern sections of the state with clear skies reported elsewhere.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and low 80s.

Robbery complaints head list of criminal activity

Two robbery complaints topped the list of criminal activity reported to city police during the past 24 hours.

A clerk at the Rodeway Inn, 3601 W. Wall Ave., told officers four men entered the motel Monday, and while one man engaged the clerk in conversation, one of the other men entered an office and took $450 in cash.

In the second robbery complaint, 37-year-old James Aubrey Markham Jr. of Irving said three men had seen earlier Monday stripped him of his clothes, tied him up and made off with $32 in cash and his pants and boots. The robbery took place early this morning in an abandoned house at 206 W. Louisiana Ave., according to Markham.

In burglary complaints, A.C. Clark

valued at $5 were missing from his room at the Affordable Inn, 3838 W. Wall Ave.

And a CB radio worth $200, along with clothing valued at $130, were reported stolen from a vehicle at the Best Western Motel on Interstate 20 near the Rankin Highway.

Polish Central Committee meets

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Central Committee of Poland's Communist Party met today under Kremlin pressure to curb "counter-revolution."

The Czechoslovak press said "political opposition in Poland was 'identical' to the ferment that led to the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

However, the independent union Solidarity and the government reached an agreement that could avert a regional strike Thursday and buy another four weeks of labor peace, sources said.

The Central Committee was addressed by the party's general secretary, Stanislaw Kania. Details of his speech were not immediately known. The purpose of the session was to discuss the July party congress that will accept, modify or reject the sweeping reforms proposed by Solidarity leaders and the party's rank and file since the strike wave last summer.

Officials said a letter from the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee urged its Polish counterpart to take a tougher stand against reformers and dissidents. The Kremlin wants a reversal of the political and social liberalization that has made such headway in Poland since the nationwide labor unrest last summer, the officials said.

The Slovak Communist Party paper, Pravda, said "the advance of counterrevolutionary forces" in Poland was "identical with the advance and destructive activities of counterrevolutionary forces in Czechoslovakia in 1968."

It said recent developments in Poland were similar to the pre-intervention period in Czechoslovakia in 1968 on a number of counts, including "attacks" against the Communist Party, the economy and the legal order, as well as praise of private enterprise.

The Soviet trade union newspaper

Trud said the strike threatened for Thursday in northwest Poland was like "aiming a pistol" at the "vital interests" of Polish workers.

It accused Solidarity of usurping trade union duties and trying to "further aggravate the situation and dismantle the socialist system in Poland."

Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces recently held spring maneuvers in and around Poland, and there have been unconfirmed reports that new exercises might begin soon either as a pretext for intervention or to pressure the government to curb Solidarity, the first union free of Communist Party control in the Soviet bloc.

A Solidarity spokesman, who announced the accord that could avert the regional strike Thursday, said all strikes would be postponed until July 3, apparently to give the government time to conclude its probe of the beatings of three unionists in the northwestern city of Bydgoszcz in March.

Sources at the union's headquarters said the "matter has been settled," but would not give details.

The Polish news agency PAP said Krzysztof Gotowski, the No. 2 leader of the independent union in Bydgoszcz, had issued a joint appeal with a leading parliamentary deputy for suspension of the strike threat.

The government's chief labor troubleshooter, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, warned earlier that the patience of the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact allies was wearing thin.

Solidarity called the strike to pressure the government to issue a report on its investigation into the police beating of three local union leaders in Bydgoszcz on March 19. It would be the first strike in nearly three months.

The Catholic episcopate asked the union's leaders to avoid any action that would jeopardize Polish independence and threaten Solidarity's "huge achievements."

Teen-ager charged with beating baby to death

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A high school senior who reportedly gave birth to a baby girl, alone and unaided in her home, has been charged with beating the infant to death on the day of its birth.

The case came to light, according to a published account, when a girlfriend who knew of the death began suffering nightmares and told another girl the story.

Anita M. Garvey, 18, is accused of murdering the infant identified in court records only as "Baby Girl Garvey." She has pleaded innocent and is free on her own recognizance.

At a pretrial conference scheduled Thursday, a date is expected to be set for a hearing to determine whether there is enough evidence to try Miss Garvey, described by friends as popular.

woods near Easthampton, a nearby community.

The Gazette said its story was based on interviews with two of Miss Garvey's girlfriends plus accounts given to police and an attorney.

Gazette editor Edward K. Shanahan said the girlfriends were not identified by name because he "didn't think that, based on their participation, they had to be identified."

The newspaper said Miss Garvey attended her senior prom the night of May 22, a Friday. Friends said Miss Garvey was smiling and happy at the prom and showed no sign of any problems, the newspaper reported.

Authorities said Miss Garvey gave birth the following Sunday and killed the infant the same day, the newspaper reported.

A girl described as Miss Garvey's best friend said the baby was born unassisted at the Garvey home.

After the death, Miss Garvey reportedly telephoned a close high school friend, and the two girls took the body to a wooded area, the newspaper said.

Miss Garvey attended school Tuesday, May 26, the first day of classes after the three-day Memorial Day weekend. When some friends commented on her sudden loss of weight over the weekend, Miss Garvey told them she had taken a lot of diet pills,

However, the second girl began having nightmares, could not sleep and eventually told a third high school senior what had happened, the newspaper said. The third girl told her mother the news May 29. The mother called police, who found an infant in a wooded area of Easthampton.

On June 2, three days after discovery of the body, Miss Garvey participated in commencement activities and celebrated with friends at an all-night party, according to the newspaper.

Miss Garvey and her family have refused to comment on the case.

Thousands attend program

ATLANTA (AP) — Thousands of running, squirming children poured into city recreation centers for the opening of "Safe Summer '81" — a multimillion-dollar program aimed at protecting youngsters from whomever has slain 28 young blacks.

The recreation program, which got under way Monday at 61 sites, was conceived during the winter as officials sought ways to keep children under close supervision once schools close for the summer.

All but five of the 28 young blacks found slain in the Atlanta area since July 1979 have been 17 or younger. A special police task force has been investigating, but no one has been charged in any of the cases.

Police are continuing their surveillance of a 23-year-old black man questioned for 12 hours last week in connection with the slayings, but authorities say they do not have sufficient evidence to make an arrest "at this time." His house is being watched by both police and journalists.

At the city's Thomasville recreation center, Mayor Maynard Jackson told 210 children, "You need to keep an eye out for each other."

The program, which will cost about $4 million, is being financed in part by about $800,000 in federal grants and about $300,000 in donations and proceeds from a spring concert, said Richard Montelth, coordinator for the city program. The remaining money comes from city funds normally budgeted for summer recreation.

Jackson and Montelth both estimated about 10,000 children attended the first day, and Jackson predicted that, by the end of the week, 47,000 would be enrolled in publicly and privately operated programs.

City officials have touted the tight supervision that will be exercised at the centers. Special T-shirts were ordered for the children to enhance security, and news reporters were allowed into the centers only if they first obtained special permits.

The shirts had not arrived by Monday afternoon.

"It's going to take a couple of weeks to work all the kinks out," said Parks and Recreation Commissioner Geri Elder, adding that the shirts will be distributed "after we get an accurate enrollment count."

The children will take part in volleyball, softball, basketball, swimming, dancing and arts and crafts.

Jackson said the program will continue through the summer even if the case is cracked, and another is planned for next year.

Similar programs in Fulton and DeKalb counties are scheduled to get under way after the counties' schools close Wednesday. Atlanta is situated almost entirely within Fulton County, and DeKalb is a suburban county lying east of the city.

Meanwhile, Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton met behind closed doors Monday with top police officials investigating the killings.

Afterwards, he said "an arrest is not imminent. We're looking toward discovering the truth, whatever it might be. At this point the evidence has not been shored up enough to where we can make an arrest."

The 23-year-old man, whose north-west Atlanta home has been staked out by police and journalists for the past five days, came to police attention on May 22 when, according to police sources, he was stopped on a bridge over the Chattahoochee River in the early morning hours.

Officers watching the river, where the bodies of six of the victims have been dumped, stopped the man after they heard a splash, the sources said.

Several days later, the body of the 28th victim — Nathaniel Cater, 27 — was found in the river.

U.N. must not be editor

It came as a surprise and shock to a lot of people to learn that the United Nations has given $432,000 over the past two years to 15 foreign newspapers to print U.N. promotional propaganda on aid to the Third World. This cast the United Nations in the role of an editor, capable with the help of cash of slanting the news and dictating what kind of information should be published for the public.

It was even more surprising and shocking to note that U.N. officials did not immediately denounce this sort of editorial arrogance, or at least say they were sorry and that it would not happen again.

On the contrary, no less a spokesman than the secretary general himself, Kurt Waldheim, condoned the so-called subsidies. He said the newspaper supplements paid for with U.N. cash would "help to foster a better understanding of the vital objectives of the new international economic order."

Another U.N. official, Yasushi Akashi, Under Secretary General for Public Information, also condoned payments to newspapers for printing promotional material not so labeled. He went so far as to regret that American and British newspapers turned down the offer. This speaks well for these nations' attitude toward a free and independent press.

This story does not have a happy ending yet, but it came closer to it as the U.S. alternate representative for special political affairs, Charles M. Lichtenstein, rose on the side of the opposition. He said it was "obviously inappropriate to expend a dollar of U.N. funds for this purpose."

The U.N. was careful to point out that the funds in question did not come from regular contributions from member states but were donated by a Japanese businessman who has given money to the world body in the past.

Mr. Lichtenstein said he thought the U.N.'s action was wrong regardless of where the money came from: "We feel that it is probably inappropriate for the U.N. to lend its name to this sort of promotion, whatever the source of the funds."

American officials have expressed the hope that the U.N. will not become a conduit through which private funds can be used for pressuring newspapers into printing stories favorable to the U.N. They expressed hope that Secretary Waldheim could be so persuaded.

Let us hope so, for the free press is too much of a treasure to be tarnished by promotional cash. The United Nations should not be an editor, or even an associate editor, of any of the world's newspapers.

INSIDE REPORT:

Tass dispatch renews fears of Soviet invasion of Poland

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The White House on June 3 secretly revived its around-the-clock Poland-watching operations, making the move after a Soviet news dispatch a day earlier renewed fears that the Kremlin might intervene against the Polish democratic movement.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, on June 2 reported an anti-democratization meeting in Katowice by hard-line Communist Party members. What made U.S. officials sit up and take notice was the reference by Tass to "subversive activity of the counter-revolutionary forces in the country." "Unlike us," commented a Reagan policymaker, "the Russians do not use their rhetoric lightly." The fear at the White House: If Moscow labels the emerging Polish system as "counter-revolutionary," it has no alternative but to intervene — perhaps militarily. Until the Tass dispatch, U.S. analysts had counted on the 30-day mourning period for Cardinal Wyszyński to keep the lid on in Poland.

NIXON'S REVENGE

Talk in Washington about the Washington Post-Pulitzer Prize scandal has almost stopped, but it is still very much on the mind of the Post's arch enemy: Richard M. Nixon.

In hopeful tones, Nixon asks visitors from Washington to reassure him that there is still lots of commotion there about the Janet Cooke affair. Nixon feels the scandal somehow vindicates him by undermining the newspaper whose investigative reporting led to his fall.

A footnote: Nixon is far more active politically than is shown to the public. He regularly invites groups of six or eight to dinner at his Manhattan apartment, with both the guest list and the table talk highly political. Prominent Republicans in Washington are on the receiving end of a stream of scrawled Nixon notes, offering congratulations and advice.

BUSH'S MODEL

One reason George Bush is getting on so well as vice president is the private advice given him by his Democratic predecessor, Walter F. Mondale: If you disagree with the president or even want to give him advice, "it's better to do that in private."

According to Bush, that's what Mondale told him when he sought him out for advice. Bush quotes Mondale, who got along with his chief better than any vice president in recent memory, as saying: Tell him (the president) what you think, but then don't make some crusade if everything doesn't go exactly the way you want."

Bush exercises discretion even beyond Mondale's model. He agrees to very few interviews, stipulating in advance he will not discuss personalities, not disclose anything that went on behind closed doors and not give any information on a background or off-the-record basis.

AMENDING AWACS

High-ranking Pentagon officials now admit that the Senate will never endorse the deal sending AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia unless a new agreement is renegotiated that reassures Israel by substantially increasing U.S. control over the weapons — a most difficult task.

The blame for this state of affairs is placed by Defense Department civilians on Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He rushed through agreement on the AWACS deal before Reagan administration officials were in place at the State and Defense Departments. That reinforces strong feeling among these officials that President Reagan should have fired Jones, a Carter administration holdover.

"The restraints on Saudi use of the radar planes that might have been negotiated in the first place," one Pentagon official told us, "now look like surrender to pressure from the Israeli lobby." Consequently, original optimism that the AWACS deal could be coaxed through the Senate has all but vanished.

GLENN FOR PRESIDENT

The Democratic Party establishment, previously thought solid for former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, is showing increased interest in Sen. John Glenn of Ohio as presidential nominee in 1984.

Robert S. Strauss, a constant backroom participant in Washington and a major Democratic tastemaker, has been quietly passing the word that Glenn looks good to him and might be what the party needs in 1984. With speculation high that Ronald Reagan will not seek re-election, serious Democratic politicians do not regard the 1984 nomination as a throw-away.

Ex-astronaut Glenn is no favorite of the party's liberals and is several cuts below average on the speaker's platform. But Strauss and other party leaders believe he has the moderate image that could lead middle-class Americans back into the Democratic Party.

CHARLEY REESE

King of the whopper-tellers can't fool typical Americans

One of my favorite comedians is Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, minister of petroleum and mineral resources for Saudi Arabia. He is one of the best whopper-tellers in the business.

Yamani spoke to the Foreign Policy Association in New York not long ago and he spread it so thick, they must have issued hip boots at the door to protect the trousers of his audience.

"The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia look upon the U.S. as an important friend and essential ally, for whom they have the greatest respect and admiration," he said.

The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia, those who are aware that there is such a place as the United States, look upon it as a bastion of Western imperialism. Yamani must think the only source of information we have is his speeches.

The big lie he has been peddling is that Saudi Arabia, out of the goodness of its heart, increased its oil production in order to create a glut on the market and keep the price down. Anybody who believes that deserves a free trip to Mecca.

Saudi Arabia has raised the price of its oil from $12 a barrel to $32 a barrel. It has raised or lowered its production solely for the reason of maintaining an optimum cash flow into its coffers. When Iraq and Iran went to war and blew up each other's oil facilities, their Arab brothers scrambled to grab their customers. That is the main reason for the increase in Saudi production, plain old greed.

Charley Reese

What created the oil glut was a sizeable drop in Western consumption and an increase in the production of non-Arab oil. Yamani has not explained why our good friends in Saudi Arabia have strenuously opposed our desire to fill the U.S. strategic petroleum reserves.

He said in his speech that the Saudis believe it is in the interest of the United States and the West that peace and stability reign in the region. He did not explain why, if that is so, Saudi Arabia has tried so hard to sabotage the Camp David peace treaty, the first and only step toward peace and stability in the Middle East in 30 years.

Yamani's at his funniest, however, when he talks about the economic favors Saudi Arabia has done for the United States.

"Saudi Arabian oil, through the vast profits it brings to the oil companies that handle it, has had a salutary effect on the American balance of trade," he said. Can you believe he said that with a straight face? Saudi oil may have had a salutary effect on oil company profits all right, but the U.S. balance of trade is in bad shape and mainly because of the massive transfer of capital from American pockets into Arab robes.

But, don't worry. Saudi Arabia has saved our dollar by investing its capital in our country, he claims. Sorry, Sheikh, we aren't that stupid. What Saudi Arabia has done is contribute to our inflation by (1) hiking the cost of energy and (2) using those excessive profits to bid up the prices of real estate and other assets in the U.S. Furthermore, the Saudis have used the threat of withdrawing their deposits in U.S. banks as a political weapon. They have also demanded that we pay them interest on the money they deposit for the purchase of weapons.

Actually, to put it diplomatically, the Saudis are a bunch of blackmailing camel thieves who despise Americans for being such fools as to believe the nonsense Yamani peddles every time he steps ashore. One of these days he's going to discover that the members of the New York Foreign Policy Association are not typical of the American people. Typical Americans are a lot less gullible and forgiving of arrogance.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 9, the 160th day of 1981. There are 205 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 9 in 68 A.D., the Roman Emperor Nero committed suicide.

On this date: In 1940, Norway's army surrendered to the Nazis in World War II. In 1964, the former head of Congo's secessionist Katanga Province, Moïse Tshombe, was named premier of the Congo.

In 1967, Gamal Abdel Nasser resigned as president of Egypt after his country was defeated in the war with Israel.

In 1971, the United States and Japan announced final agreement on terms for the return of Okinawa to Japan.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon ended a 21-year-old trade embargo against China.

Five years ago: Former Postmaster General James Farley, a key figure in the Franklin Roosevelt administration, died.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Danger ever-present in search for Kurds

WASHINGTON — This is an account of the odyssey of a reporter who tried to join the Kurdish underground, which operates in the no-man's-land of the Iran-Iraq war.

The reporter is my bewhiskered associate, Peter Grant, who sought out the fierce mountain tribesmen who move dangerously between the warring sides. All he had was a portable typewriter, a camera and a letter of introduction from Kurdish leaders to a contact in a remote village on the Turkish-Iranian border.

He also possessed youthful enthusiasm and some fluency in French (but none in Turkish). By battered bus, he traveled into the wilds of Turkish Kurdistan. The military regime keeps tight control over the border regions, and contact with Kurdish separatists is strictly forbidden. So Grant adopted the unlikely guise of a tourist far off the sightseeing circuit.

He quickly discovered that it was impossible to avoid instant and overwhelming attention. Merely asking directions to the next village drew dozens of curious spectators. "What I was trying to do, I realized, was something like leading a camel caravan through the streets of a small Midwestern town and asking to see the mayor — without attracting the attention of the barbershop crowd," Grant reported.

Because of the ever-present danger of bandits, buses traversing the mountain passes are provided with submachine-gun-toting soldiers for protection. Additional soldiers are stationed at military checkpoints where the passengers were repeatedly searched for contraband — though fortunately not thoroughly enough to uncover the incriminating letter hidden in Grant's camera case.

Jack Anderson

Grant got past the checkpoints by repeating the word, "Tourist," with shrugs of incomprehension until he reached what turned out to be the last checkpoint. He reported:

"Suddenly I heard behind me in perfect English, 'Just what are you doing here, Mr. Grant?' I whirled around to find the commanding officer of the district, who happened to have spent a year in the United States on a Pentagon training program.

"He did not buy my tourist story. When I told him the village I was heading for, he said: 'There is nothing touristic to see there.' He ordered me outside and had one of his men frisk me. After I passed the search, he said apologetically, 'You know the problems we have in my country. It is terrible the things we have to do.' "Then, to show there were no hard feelings, he offered me a seat and gave me a cup of sweet milk to drink while he roughly interrogated other passengers."

When Grant finally reached the village, he ducked into a native restaurant, ordered some food and — as casually as he could — mentioned the name of his contact to the waiter.

The waiter passed the name to another customer, who left briefly and returned with a third man. The three of them then led Grant out and down the street — picking up a dozen curious villagers along the way. They escorted him to an office and pointed to a mustachioed man seated behind a desk.

One of the crowd spoke French, and gladly served as interpreter. The man at the desk was the son of Grant's contact.

"Where is your father?" I asked. "He is dead," the man answered. "What did you want with him?" Grant could hardly explain his purpose in front of half the village. "I murmured something about just wanting to say hello. Then I shrugged, said goodbye and walked back to the bus station for the long trip to Ankara."

In the capital, Grant made one last try. He knew that his supposed contact had another son living in Ankara, and after two days of searching, he found the man and gave him the letter.

"His hand shook as he read it," Grant reported. "He handed it back to me and told me if I tried to contact him again he would call the police."

The next day, Grant found two plainclothesmen waiting for him at his hotel. "Where is the letter?" they demanded. "I threw it away," Grant replied. "What did it say?" "I don't know. I was just delivering it as a favor for a friend in America."

For some reason, the detectives believed him. The visions of "Midnight Express" faded from his mind. But after they left, Grant decided he had used up all his luck in the search for the Kurdish underground. "Next time," he wrote, "I'll let them find me."

WATCH ON WASTE: The buddy system is thriving in the Defense Nuclear Agency. Pentagon auditors discovered recently that out of 115 contracts, worth $41.9 million, all but one had been awarded without competitive bidding, and the same 10 major contractors get the lion's share of the agency's contracts. So cut-and-dried has the contract procedure become, the auditors found, that the "bargaining" is often done over the telephone.

"White Alice" was a $250-million communications system the Pentagon built in Alaska in the 1950s. Rendered obsolete by satellites in recent years, "White Alice" was largely abandoned, with little thought to her possible salvage value. Government inspectors report that some of the 69 sites have quantities of valuable furnishings and equipment that could be made usable with little or no effort: precious metals like gold, silver and copper; furnaces in good working condition; tank trucks, bulldozers and road graders.

Lebanese cease-fire short-lived

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An attempt by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to mediate between the warring Syrians and Lebanese Christians produced another cease-fire, but the Christians immediately accused the Syrians of breaking it.

The Christian radio station, the Voice of Lebanon, said Syrian troops opened up with artillery, rockets and tank cannon on the besieged Christian city of Zahle, in east central Lebanon, just before the cease-fire was announced Monday.

Lebanese police in Beirut said they had no confirmation of the renewed shelling after a two-day lull in the Christian-Syrian fighting, which has spawned an Israeli-Syrian missile crisis that threatens to start a new Arab-Israeli war. There have been dozens of cease-fires, most of them very brief, in the 10 weeks since the Syrians began attacking the Christians in Zahle.

At least 644 Lebanese have been reported killed in the fighting in Zahle and Beirut. Syria has not announced its casualties.

The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and the secretary-general of the Arab League met for the past three days with the foreign minister of Syria and leaders of Lebanese Christian and Moslem factions in the mountain resort of Beiteddin, 19 miles southeast of Beirut, in an attempt to work out a comprehensive peace agreement for Lebanon.

A communique said "all parties involved have pledged to abide by a cease-fire on Lebanon's entire territory." But it indicated there was no agreement on arrangements to end the fighting that has erupted periodically in Lebanon since the 1975-76 civil war.

The communique said the three foreign ministers — Prince Saud al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria and Sheikh Sabah al-Sabah of Kuwait — would meet in Saudi Arabia on June 23 to prepare for another conference on July 4 with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, a Christian, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem.

Informed sources said Syria's insistence that the Christians renounce Israel's support blocked a comprehensive truce. The sources said the Christian leaders agreed only to acknowledge "a unity of destiny between Lebanon and the rest of the Arab world," without specific reference to Israel.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been trying for the past month to ease the Syrian-Israeli standoff over Syrian missiles in eastern Lebanon, left Paris on Monday to resume his shuttle between capitals in the Middle East. His itinerary was not announced, but Arab reports said he was going first to Saudi Arabia.

U. S. bracing for Mideast tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is bracing for what officials say may be an ominous escalation of tensions in the Middle East following Israel's destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor with American-made jet fighters.

Administration officials and congressional leaders condemned the attack and voiced fears Monday that it might generate anti-American anger in the Arab world, sabotage ongoing U.S. peace initiatives and even produce a cutoff of American arms sales to Israel.

The State Department said Sunday's raid could accelerate existing tensions in the region. Despite Israeli claims that the French-built reactor posed a "mortal danger" to Israel, available evidence suggests that American-made equipment was used by Israel in "possible violation" of U.S. law, the department said.

U.S. military equipment supplied to foreign countries can be used only for defensive purposes, and the administration is preparing a report for Congress on whether Israel violated that provision.

After a briefing by Deputy Secretary of State William Clark, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told reporters that if Israel were in violation of the statute, "there would be a prohibition for a period of time on selling more arms to them."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the State Department expects to complete the report in two or three days. "There are still a lot of unanswered questions. As far as what action we should take, that is still yet to be defined," Glenn said.

Earlier, Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the Israeli raid "an offensive act, not a defensive act," which "may destroy" the Camp David peace process.

Administration officials said the attack could complicate special envoy Philip Habib's attempts to defuse tensions between Israel and Syria.

Habib left Paris on Monday for the Middle East to resume his peacekeeping effort after a 12-day pause. His destination was not announced.

Beyond the Habib mission, officials wondered where the seemingly endless spiraling of tensions in the Middle East would end. By flying 600 miles deep into hostile Arab territory, one official noted, the Israelis added a new military dimension to their decades-long conflict.

The administration adamantly insisted it had no prior knowledge of the Israeli attack. But Pressler, echoing a sentiment heard around the State Department, said the Arab world undoubtedly perceives otherwise.

Given American intelligence capabilities, Pressler said, the Arabs probably "look upon this as though we're almost silent collaborators."

Judge makes his injunction permanent; EDS funds held

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert O. Porter says former President Jimmy Carter overstepped his constitutional authority when he ordered $20 million in frozen Iranian assets transferred to a New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Porter made permanent a temporary injunction he granted in February 1980 at the request of Electronic Data Systems, halting the transfer of $20 million in Iranian funds frozen by Carter Nov. 14, 1979.

The money is being held under court order in New York's Midland Bank while the Iranian government appeals Porter's May 9, 1980, award of $20 million to EDS in a breach-of-contract suit that involved Iran's failure to pay for a data processing system.

About 450 claims have been filed by U.S. companies against Iran since the American Embassy was seized in November 1979.

The money is part of $4 billion that was to have transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York July 19. An international claims commission was to have settled any claims against the Iranian government.

Carter ordered all claims against Iran suspended and ordered companies to file claims with the international commission.

The three American and three Iranian arbitrators announced their choices in a communique after three weeks of closed-door meetings in the Peace Palace.

The agreement signed January 19 in Algiers ending the 44-day-long crisis called for a tribunal of Americans, Iranians and neutral third parties.

U.N. must not be editor

It came as a surprise and shock to a lot of people to learn that the United Nations has given $432,000 over the past two years to 15 foreign newspapers to print U.N. promotional propaganda on aid to the Third World.

This story does not have a happy ending yet, but it came closer to it as the U.S. alternate representative for special political affairs, Charles M. Lichtenstein, rose on the side of the opposition.

It was even more surprising and shocking to note that U.N. officials did not immediately denounce this sort of editorial arrogance, or at least say they were sorry and that it would not happen again.

The U.N. was careful to point out that the funds in question did not come from regular contributions from member states but were donated by a Japanese businessman who has given money to the world body in the past.

On the contrary, no less a spokesman than the secretary general himself, Kurt Waldheim, condoned the so-called subsidies. He said the newspaper supplements paid for with U.N. cash would "help to foster a better understanding of the vital objectives of the new international economic order."

Mr. Lichtenstein said he thought the U.N.'s action was wrong regardless of where the money came from: "We feel that it is probably inappropriate for the U.N. to lend its name to this sort of promotion, whatever the source of the funds."

Another U.N. official, Yasushi Akashi, Under Secretary General for Public Information, also condoned payments to newspapers for printing promotional material not so labeled. He went so far as to regret that American and British newspapers turned down the offer.

American officials have expressed the hope that the U.N. will not become a conduit through which private funds can be used for pressuring newspapers into printing stories favorable to the U.N.

Tass dispatch renews fears of Soviet invasion of Poland

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The White House on June 3 secretly revived its around-the-clock Poland-watching operations, making the move after a Soviet news dispatch a day earlier renewed fears that the Kremlin might intervene against the Polish democratic movement.

EVANS NOVAK

Tass, the Soviet news agency, on June 2 reported an anti-democratization meeting in Katowice by hard-line Communist Party members. What made U.S. officials sit up and take notice was the reference by Tass to "subversive activity of the counter-revolutionary forces in the country."

A footnote: Nixon is far more active politically than is shown to the public. He regularly invites groups of six or eight to dinner at his Manhattan apartment, with both the guest list and the table talk highly political. Prominent Republicans in Washington are on the receiving end of a stream of scrawled Nixon notes, offering congratulations and advice.

NIXON'S REVENGE Talk in Washington about the Washington Post-Pulitzer Prize scandal has almost stopped, but it is still very much on the mind of the Post's arch enemy: Richard M. Nixon.

BUSH'S MODEL One reason George Bush is getting on so well as vice president is the private advice given him by his Democratic predecessor, Walter F. Mondale: If you disagree with the president or even want to give him advice, "it's better to do that in private."

In hopeful tones, Nixon asks visitors from Washington to reassure him that there is still lots of commotion there about the Janet Cooke affair. Nixon feels the scandal somehow vindicates him by undermining the newspaper whose investigative reporting thing doesn't go exactly the way you want." Bush exercises discretion even beyond Mondale's model. He agrees to very few interviews, stipulating in advance he will not discuss personalities, not disclose anything that went on behind closed doors and not give any information on a background or off-the-record basis.

CHARLEY REESE

King of the whopper-tellers can't fool typical Americans

Charley Reese

One of my favorite comedians is Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, minister of petroleum and mineral resources for Saudi Arabia. He is one of the best whopper-tellers in the business.

Yamani spoke to the Foreign Policy Association in New York not long ago and he spread it so thick, they must have issued hip boots at the door to protect the trousers of his audience.

"The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia look upon the U.S. as an important friend and essential ally, for whom they have the greatest respect and admiration," he said.

The majority of the people in Saudi Arabia, those who are aware that there is such a place as the United States, look upon it as a bastion of Western imperialism. Yamani must think the only source of information we have is his speeches.

The big lie he has been peddling is that Saudi Arabia, out of the goodness of its heart, increased its oil production in order to create a glut on the market and keep the price down. Anybody who believes that deserves a free trip to Mecca.

Saudi Arabia has raised the price of its oil from $12 a barrel to $32 a barrel. It has raised or lowered its production solely for the reason of maintaining an optimum cash flow into its coffers. When Iraq and Iran went to war and blew up each other's oil facilities, their Arab brothers scrambled to grab their customers. That is the main reason for the increase in Saudi production, plain old greed.

What created the oil glut was a sizeable drop in Western consumption and an increase in the production of non-Arab oil. Yamani has not explained why our good friends in Saudi Arabia have strenuously opposed our desire to fill the U.S. strategic petroleum reserves.

He said in his speech that the Saudis believe it is in the interest of the United States and the West that peace and stability reign in the region. He did not explain why, if that is so, Saudi Arabia has tried so hard to sabotage the Camp David peace treaty, the first and only step toward peace and stability in the Middle East in 30 years.

Yamani's at his funniest, however, when he talks about the economic favors Saudi Arabia has done for the United States.

"Saudi Arabian oil, through the vast profits it brings to the oil companies that handle it, has had a salutary effect on the American balance of trade," he said. Can you believe he said that with a straight face? Saudi oil may have had a salutary effect on oil company profits all right, but the U.S. balance of trade is in bad shape and mainly because of the massive transfer of capital from American pockets into Arab robes.

But, don't worry. Saudi Arabia has saved our dollar by investing its capital in our country, he claims. Sorry, Sheikh, we aren't that stupid. What Saudi Arabia has done is contribute to our inflation by (1) hiking the cost of energy and (2) using those excessive profits to bid up the prices of real estate and other assets in the U.S. Furthermore, the Saudis have used the threat of withdrawing their deposits in U.S. banks as a political weapon. They have also demanded that we pay them interest on the money they deposit for the purchase of weapons.

Actually, to put it diplomatically, the Saudis are a bunch of blackmailing camel thieves who despise Americans for being such fools as to believe the nonsense Yamani peddles every time he steps ashore. One of these days he's going to discover that the members of the New York Foreign Policy Association are not typical of the American people. Typical Americans are a lot less gullible and forgiving of arrogance.

A communique said "all parties involved have pledged to abide by a cease-fire on Lebanon's entire territory." But it indicated there was no agreement on arrangements to end the fighting that has erupted periodically in Lebanon since the 1975-76 civil war.

The communique said the three foreign ministers — Prince Saud al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria and Sheikh Sabah al-Sabah of Kuwait — would meet in Saudi Arabia on June 23 to prepare for another conference on July 4 with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, a Christian, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem.

Informed sources said Syria's insistence that the Christians renounce Israeli support blocked a comprehensive truce. The sources said the Christian leaders agreed only to acknowledge "a unity of destiny between Lebanon and the rest of the Arab world," without specific reference to Israel.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been trying for the past month to ease the Syrian-Israeli standoff over Syrian missiles in eastern Lebanon, left Paris on Monday to resume his shuttle between capitals in the Middle East. His itinerary was not announced, but Arab reports said he was going first to Saudi Arabia.

U. S. bracing for Mideast tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is bracing for what officials say may be an ominous escalation of tensions in the Middle East following Israel's destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor with American-made jet fighters.

Administration officials and congressional leaders condemned the attack and voiced fears Monday that it might generate anti-American anger in the Arab world, sabotage ongoing U.S. peace initiatives and even produce a cutoff of American arms sales to Israel.

The State Department said Sunday's raid could accelerate existing tensions in the region. Despite Israeli claims that the French-built reactor posed a "mortal danger" to Israel, available evidence suggests that American-made equipment was used by Israel in "possible violation" of U.S. law, the department said.

U.S. military equipment supplied to foreign countries can be used only for defensive purposes, and the administration is preparing a report for Congress on whether Israel violated that provision.

After a briefing by Deputy Secretary of State William Clark, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told reporters that if Israel were in violation of the statute, "there would be a prohibition for a period of time on selling more arms to them."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the State Department expects to complete the report in two or three days. "There are still a lot of unanswered questions. As far as what action we should take, that is still yet to be defined," Glenn said.

Earlier, Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the Israeli raid "an offensive act, not a defensive act," which "may destroy" the Camp David peace process.

Administration officials said the attack could complicate special envoy Philip Habib's attempts to defuse tensions between Israel and Syria.

Beyond the Habib mission, officials wondered where the seemingly endless spiraling of tensions in the Middle East would end. By flying 600 miles deep into hostile Arab territory, one official noted, the Israelis added a new military dimension to their decades-long conflict.

The administration adamantly insisted it had no prior knowledge of the Israeli attack. But Pressler, echoing a sentiment heard around the State Department, said the Arab world undoubtedly perceives otherwise.

Given American intelligence capabilities, Pressler said, the Arabs probably "look upon this as though we're almost silent collaborators."

Judge makes his injunction permanent; EDS funds held

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert O. Porter says former President Jimmy Carter overstepped his constitutional authority when he ordered $20 million in Iranian funds frozen by Carter Nov. 14, 1979.

The money is being held under court order in New York's Midland Bank while the Iranian government appeals Porter's May 9, 1980, award of $20 million to EDS in a breach-of-contract suit that involved Iran's failure to pay for a data processing system.

About 450 claims have been filed by U.S. companies against Iran since the American Embassy was seized in November 1979. The money is part of $4

Heavy attendance expected at MC summer short courses

Among the summer recreational activities in Midland, short courses at Midland College appeal to many people.

As one student put it, "Taking a short course is a terrific way to spend the long summer evenings. I love learning something new, and it's even better when I can do it in surroundings like those at MC."

Eleanor Maxey, Midland College Community Services secretary, pointed out that heavy attendance in the summer short course session is nothing new.

"We have hundreds of students in summer classes who have been taking short courses since the program was initiated in 1960," she said. "But the most rewarding thing to me is the older students. So many of them hesitate even to set foot on campus, but once they join us — they keep coming back. Many have advanced to regular MC credit courses."

Of the five short courses scheduled to begin at the college next week, four will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. and the fifth from 7 to 10 p.m. The latter course, "Camera, An Eye On Tomorrow," is taught by H.A. Tuck. Tuck explained that the course requires three hours per evening to allow students adequate time to ask questions and receive detailed explanations.

Tuck explains how to shoot portraits, landscapes and action photos using available light as well as artificial light.

Students participate in on-campus field trips during class hours and are offered instructor critiques of their individual work.

Classes are limited to 20 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday for three weeks, beginning June 16. The course fee is $27.

A three-week course in Powder Puff Mechanics, taught by Ernest Beck, is open to women of all ages and also is suited for boys in their teens.

This is a basic course explaining the rudiments of a car's operation. It helps uncover the mystery of "what's under the hood."

Students learn necessary maintenance requirements, minor repair work and which parts of a car need to be serviced by a professional mechanic.

Classes are limited to 24 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $15.

Jody Hawkins' popular beginning course in Cake Decorating is available to new students who would like to learn the secrets of "icing with frills."

Well-known in Midland for her spectacular cakes, Mrs. Hawkins shares her knowledge with students at MC several times each semester.

Those who succumb to the art and have a taste for learning more may proceed into an advanced course offered later in the year.

Cake Decorating I is limited to 25 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $15.

And for those ladies who would like to learn to pound out a letter or perhaps even a short story on an electric typewriter, but feel they need more practice with the machine, Maxine Jarnagin holds a three-week course in Typing Brush-Up.

"This course is for those who are familiar with typing techniques, but are not especially fast or accurate," Mrs. Jarnagin noted. "We'll have typing drills during each class meeting, and students will learn a great deal about the operation of electric typewriters."

Classes are limited to 20 students and meet 7-9 p.m. each evening. First class is Tuesday, June 16. Second class meets Thursday, June 18. After the first week, classes meet each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, ending July 7. The course fee is $25.

Dan McAngus answers all your questions about the stock market, and touches on points you've perhaps never thought of in his three-week course, Introduction to the Stock Market.

McAngus, a well-known figure on the local stock market scene, leads his students through the ins-and-outs of buying, selling and speculation. He explains how to read the financial page in the newspaper, what quotations mean and how to read them, what a broker can and cannot do, how to select securities and how the stock exchanges work.

Classes meet Tuesday and Thursday, and the course fee is $18.

Because four of the five courses offered can accept only a limited number of students, pre-registration should be completed as soon as possible. This may be done in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building. Hours for this are 7 a.m.-noon and 12:30-5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Baptists, open three days of talks

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaders of the Southern Baptist Church opened a three-day convention today amid a dispute over how the Bible should be viewed.

Convention-goers found their credentials scrutinized to prevent double or unqualified registrations and other violations discovered in past meetings of the nation's largest Protestant body.

With up to 10,000 "messengers" expected, registration secretary Lee Porter said credentials were being "more closely checked" to insure "integrity of the registration and voting process."

Rousing hymns, prayers and Scripture readings resounded through the Los Angeles Convention Center during preliminary devotions Monday as corridors bustled with religious displays. Sales of alcoholic beverages were halted at restaurrants and snack bars in the center to accommodate the mostly teetotaling members of the church.

What was described as a "watershed convention" for the Baptists pitted a newly risen, strongly conservative bloc against moderates long in charge of denominational institutions.

Conservatives charge doctrinal laxity and say the literalist view of the Bible as being totally without error should be required. Moderates call this a smokescreen for a power grab, saying Baptists always have emphasized authority of the Bible.

Dorothy Elliott Sample of Flint, Mich., elected Monday as president of the Southern Baptist Woman's Missionary Union, voiced hope that "the living Word will unite us in this time of stress."

She told a news conference that Southern Baptists always have believed strongly in the authority of the Bible, and she pleaded for keeping the convention's "main focus" on evangelistic mission.

Getty presents grant to Texas Tech for petroleum engineering program

Lubbock — A $25,000 grant from Getty Oil Co. was presented to the Texas Tech University College of Engineering recently to purchase laboratory equipment for the Petroleum Engineering Department.

The College of Engineering is conducting a $1.5 million fund-raising drive to equip a $4 million expansion of Texas Tech petroleum engineering drive. Construction on the new building will begin in the fall.

The Getty contribution brings to more than $350,000 the amount collected in the Texas Tech petroleum engineering fund drive.

Smith said dramatic increases in petroleum engineering enrollments have strained Texas Tech's existing facilities. This past fall the department had 434 majors, compared to only 55 majors in the fall of 1970.

Two finals, tests filed in District 8

Two completions, two wildcats, a re-entry and three field tests have been filed with the District 8 office of the Texas Railroad Commission for the counties of Pecos, Andrews, Crane, Howard and Ward.

ATAPCO of Midland will re-enter and clean out to a depth of 18,040 feet the H.L. Brown Jr. West Cohanosa Unit No. 1-26 in Pecos County, four miles southwest of Cohanosa.

The perforations were acidized with 3,250 gallons and fractured with 77,500 gallons and 136,100 pounds of sand.

The east line and 825 feet from the south line of the section.

PECOS COUNTY
Danco Energy Corp. of Midland has completed the No. 1 Roxie Neal in the Gomez (Devonian) field of Pecos County, 12 miles west of Fort Stockton.

Designated the No. 1 Max, the project will be drilled as a wildcat to test the Wolfcamp at 10,700 feet.

Location is 1,910 feet from the north line and 780 feet from the east line of section 25, block A-34 of the Public School Lands survey.

CRANE COUNTY
A.N. Norwood Inc. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Wilson to a depth of 2,400 feet in the W.E.R. (San Andres oil) field of Crane County, 11 miles southwest of Crane.

The well is producing 7,700,000 cubic feet of .694 gravity gas through 2,250 choke from Devonian perforations at 18,550 to 18,710 feet which had been acidized with 50,000 gallons.

Producing from San Andres perforations at 4,620 to 4,844 feet, the well is potential to pump 10 barrels of 32.5 gravity oil plus 50 barrels of water with a gas to oil ratio of 850 to 1.

Contract approved because wives nagged UMW members, miner says

CABIN CREEK, W.Va. (AP) — About an hour before today's shift began at Cedar Coal Co., Ernest Rose and his father arrived at work together — the first time since the United Mine Workers strike started eight weeks ago.

His father, saying, "I'm company," declined to comment on the specifics of the agreement.

He said he expected it to be a "rough adjustment."

He tossed a lighted cigarette, smiled, and said, "I'm nervous. I'm always nervous. After dark, anything can go wrong."

Rose, a 32-year-old East Bank coal miner, was headed back to his job as an electrician at the Kanawha County mine. His father, Ford Rose, 58, a maintenance foreman, worked during the union strike that began March 27.

Charles Perkins, a security guard at the mine, said about 90 men were expected for the early shift. A steady stream of cars and pickup trucks drove quickly through an opened gate to the mine.

He said he expected it to be a "rough adjustment."

Changing the subject, Duff added, "I'll be glad to see my friends."

"I don't like it, but I got to go with it," the younger Rose said, referring to the newly approved accord. "There's not enough money for them."

Ken Duff, 36, of Charleston, leaned against his car and said, "It's good to be back to work, I guess."

He said he expected it to be a "rough adjustment."

Changing the subject, Duff added, "I'll be glad to see my friends."

DOE grants to develop alternative fuel sources favor large corporations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Department grants to develop alternative fuel sources have been biased in favor of large corporations, with more than one-third of available money funneled to companies with assets of more than $5 billion, the General Accounting Office charged today.

dian tribes, governmental bodies and international ventures.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

"It amounts to nothing less than a backdoor rebate of the windfall profits tax," Eagleton said. The windfall tax was imposed on the extra revenues taken in by oil companies after decontrol of oil prices.

"Large corporations, who are more likely to have considerable proposal-writing resources and experience to draw upon, had an advantage over small business proposers," the GAO said.

Eagleton conceded that large companies would have to be relied upon to develop alternatives to oil and natural gas, but he added, "These are the companies least in need of a federal handout to get the job done."

Fertilizer trade with Soviet Union resumes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. has shipped its first load of superphosphoric acid to the Soviet Union since President Reagan lifted a year-old trade embargo imposed following the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The Oxy Trader, carrying 30,000 metric tons of the liquid fertilizer, left Jacksonville Saturday, company officials said.

Occidental has a $20 billion deal to ship 500,000 tons of the liquid fertilizer to the Soviet Union by year's end.

The Oxy Trader is the first of three integrated catamaran-type tug-and-barge vessels specially built to carry superphosphoric acid. The Oxy Provider will also carry the fertilizer to the Soviet Union, company officials said.

President Jimmy Carter banned trade with Moscow in January 1980 after the Soviets intervened in the south Asian nation.
