Beautiful sight

While the morning sun glinting off a pump jack can be a breath-taking sight (especially for the owner), it all depends on the point of view. Looking just a few feet lower may reveal one of the dirtiest scenes imaginable. Find out more on Page 1G.

Reagan reveals aid plan to Hispanics

EL PASO (AP) — President Reagan courted Hispanic voters Saturday with a plan to aid economically depressed communities on the Texas-Mexican border. He saluted the growing political power of Spanish-speaking Americans.

Announcement of the aid package brought cries of disappointment from local officials who said it was inadequate.

Texas Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, said, "President Reagan's prescription for the economy along the border with Mexico is like the emperors of Rome handing out aspirin to the Christians after they've been mauled by the lions."

White, who gave the Democratic response to Reagan's radio address, said, "President Reagan came to El Paso and talked about the confusion of the American people about Central America.

"I agree we need to get away from fairy tales and get back to reality — but the president ignores the reality of the massive economic devastation in this very city," said White.

In his speech to the American GI Forum, an Hispanic veterans group, Reagan portrayed himself as an alternative to "special interest politicians" whom he blamed for the nation's economic troubles, high taxes, a decline in U.S. prestige, a weakened national defense, mandatory school busing, and racial quotas.

"Don't let America sink back into the boredom and mediocrity of collectivism, into the politics of envy, protest and special interests," Reagan said.

Former Rep. Bob Kreuger, D-Texas, who is trying to unseat Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, told the same audience, "Republicans like John Tower and Ronald Reagan come here seeking your votes, but they've never been leaders of your causes."

The president's speech followed a private meeting here with Hispanic leaders Friday night. Jose Cano, chairman of the organization, said they were disappointed with Reagan's answers on questions about social spending cutbacks, Hispanic appointments and legislation to sanction employers who hire illegal aliens.

Both Republicans and Democrats are making an all-out push for support among Hispanics, the nation's second-largest and fastest-growing minority group.

"Hispanic Americans are at the threshhold — I think you can sense your own power, your ability to influence America in the future," Reagan said.

Delivering his weekly radio address from this border city, Reagan complained that most Americans are confused about his policies in Central America, and he said the United States is trying to combat the installation there of "ruthless, communist dictators such as we see in Cuba."

The president lamented that "there have been such distortions about U.S. policy in Central America that the great majority of Americans don't know which side we are on...

Soviet teen-ager in middle of diplomatic standoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a major diplomatic standoff, the Soviet Union refused Saturday to permit U.S. authorities to talk with a Soviet diplomat's 16-year-old son who reportedly begged President Reagan to permit him to remain in the United States.

And in a counterattack, it accused FBI agents of harrassing and illegally detaining the family of a correspondent for the Soviet news agency Tass until the journalist's teenaged son told them he wanted to return home and had no intention of remaining here.

The diplomat's son, Andrei Berezhkov, is still in the United States, a top Soviet diplomat told reporters.

"We categorically reject the attempt of the American authorities to assume the right to put obstacles to the departure from the United States of Soviet diplomats and members of their families or impose some conditions to this effect," the embassy said in a statement directed at U.S. attempts to interview the youth.

"We regard this attempt of the American authorities as unprecedented and a gross violation of international law," the statement said.

"Moreover, this case is aggravated in that it concerns a Soviet diplomat's son who is a teenager and has not reached his majority age."

The refusal to permit U.S. officials to interview young Berezhkov, son of Valentin Berezhkov, was delivered by Minister-Counsellor Oleg Sokolov, the No. 2 official at the Soviet embassy here, during a 30-minute meeting at the State Department with Richard Burt, the assistant secretary of State for European affairs.

Sokolov denied reports that the youth had been spirited out of the country, replying "yes" when asked by reporters at the State Department's diplomatic entrance whether young Berezhkov was still in the United States.

When asked if the youth will be allowed to be interviewed he replied with a terse, "No."

State Department officials refused to comment on the substance of the Burt-Sokolov meeting.

Meanwhile, the Soviet embassy accused FBI agents and U.S. immigration authorities of harrassing the family of Tass correspondent Vyacheslav Kouharenko as it tried to board a plane for Europe on Friday at Dulles International Airport in nearby Virginia.

An embassy spokesman said Sokolov "launched" a formal protest over the incident to Burt, accusing the FBI agents of "acting contrarily to international law and practice."

JFK made movie about his death, reports new book

NEW YORK (AP) — President Kennedy made a home movie depicting his death two months before he was assassinated in Dallas, according to a new book and a former White House photographer.

"I did one special movie," says Robert L. Knudsen, who said he shot the movie during a weekend in Newport, R.I., in September 1963. "The president wrote the script. It was kind of personal and he didn't want anyone to know about it.

"He just called me over one day and said they wanted to have some fun and shoot a movie," the former White House photograher said. "I said I had camera equipment in the car and he said, 'good.' "

The movie is detailed in Ralph G. Martin's, "A Hero for Our Time," published by Macmillan Publishing Co.

"The man with the binoculars watched President Kennedy as he got off the Honey Fitz (the Kennedy yacht) at Newport and walked down the long pier at Hammersmith Farm (the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, parents of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis)," the book says.

"Suddenly Kennedy clutched his chest and fell flat on the ground. Walking behind him was the dignified Countess Crespi and her small son. Both simply stepped over the President's body — as if he were not there — and continued walking toward the shore.

"Right behind the countess came Jacqueline Kennedy, and she, too, ...stepped over (the)...body. Behind her was Red Fay, undersecretary of the navy...He stumbled and fell on (Kennedy)..."

Drug user can't wait to be freed

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a five-part series on drug use in Midland. In cases where first names only are used, the names are fictious. The people, however, are real.

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Jeff came to Midland, he had no intention of spending his twenty-second birthday in jail.

"I was beginning to get tired of it — the sex, drugs and rock 'n roll everyday. So then I got out here and I wasn't looking for it as hard as I had before. But it's easy to run across it anywhere you go, I guess. Money attracts drugs."

Money.

Some say Midland's rich-man reputation has made the Tall City the cocaine capitol of Texas. Others say alcohol, marijuana, speed and heroin are the abundant drugs.

From the liquor that one police officer said "flows down the gutters of Racquet Club Drive on the weekends" to the children spotted sniffing glue on elementary school playgrounds, most of the same drugs are known to be used on both sides of the tracks.

"We have less trouble from students hanging around Washington Elementary than we do from those up north," one law enforcement officer said.

"About the only thing you'd buy on the southside that you can't get on the northside is heroin," said another.

But others disagree. They say heroin has no social distinction.

A Midland drug counselor, for example, told of trying to help a wealthy businessman, who was "high up in one of the oil companies here" and whose tailored suits hid the needle marks in his arms. He failed.

And so did Jeff. His face was gaunt, his eyes sunken and his skin pale yellow under the fluorescent lighting of the cramped interview room in the Midland County Jail.

He was staring at a three-year prison sentence.

He drummed his fingers nervously on the table before him.

"I feel like an animal there," he said, jerking his head toward the cellblock as he chain-smoked. "In the pen, it's going to be better 'cause I'll be working. You get to fill your days. I'm looking forward to getting out, getting that crap over with — one step closer to freedom."

He tapped his foot and snubbed out the cigarette in the ashtray.

"In another way, I'm anxious — not scared — but anxious. No matter how many people tell you about prison, you never know until you're there. It's like the Navy."

With the face of a sheriff's deputy occasionally pressing against the window, Jeff talked of his lifestyle; of growing up on the outskirts of Chicago; of being sent to numerous county jails along the way; and of the easy money selling drugs in Midland.

Until he sold to an undercover cop. Two undercover cops, in fact, on two separate occasions.

Judge bars obscenity arrests at stores

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge has barred police from making any more obscenity arrests at several adult bookstores until a hearing is held on a lawsuit filed by the stores against the city.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Collins scheduled an Aug. 24 hearing in the suit, which accuses city law enforcement and health officials of a campaign to shut down the stores.

But District Attorney Harry Connick said Friday, "The police are trying to enforce the law and for the judge to enjoin them from enforcing a criminal law of the state of Louisiana is unbelievable."

Decision expected on nuclear reactor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's top nuclear safety official will decide this week whether to try again to shut down five commercial nuclear reactors whose pipes inspectors say are riddled with deep cracks.

Harold Denton, director of reactor regulation for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, appeared to be ready to seek another shutdown order but said he wanted to discuss the matter further with the utilities that own the five units.

Last month, the industry fended off an attempt to close the General Electric reactors, persuading the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to overrule a temporary shutdown order issued by Denton.

Since then, however, tests by the utility industry's Electric Power Research Institute indicate that cracks may be much deeper than previously believed.

An investigation by that industry group found that a majority of the 17 inspection teams that examined the nuclear plants "significantly underestimated" the depth of the cracks they found.

In addition, the commission's Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, a panel of 14 experts outside the government, last week called the industry's chief scientific argument for allowing the plants to remain open a "delusion."

Despite the Electric Power Research Institute test results, GE and utility officials have continued to maintain there is no need to shut down the five plants now. They argue that a water leak would be noticed well before any crack developed into a pipe break and caused a loss-of-coolant accident similar to the 1979 incident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania.

The officials also said shutting the five plants down during the summer when air conditioning creates the largest demand for electricity would cost tens of millions of dollars because expensive oil-burning turbines would have to be used in their place.

Responding to the industry's arguments, NRC Commissioner Victor Gilinksy, usually an industry critic, led the move last month to overturn Denton's order.

Some NRC officials said privately they were stunned by the commission's reversal only the day after it had approved Denton's order. Critics such as the Union of Concerned Scientists called the action a "capitulation" to the industry.

East Germans: Berlin Wall 'great deed for peace'

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany marked the 22nd anniversary of the Berlin Wall on Saturday by calling the construction of the wall dividing the city a "great deed for maintaining peace."

The anniversary drew bitter commentary from the West German press. Bild Zeitung, a conservative mass-circulation tabloid, called the 102-mile concrete barrier "a prison wall," designed to prevent East Germans from escaping to West Berlin.

In a lengthy editorial, the East German Communist Party newspaper Neues Deutschland said: "The imperialist forces have again started a course of confrontation," an apparent reference to NATO's plans to install new nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

"And again we — the Soviet Union, East Germany and other states of the socialist (communist) community, have the duty to do everything in our power to protect peace.

"On August 13, 1961, East Germany performed a great deed for maintaining peace."

Before the wall was built, better living conditions in West Germany led to a mass exodus from the East to the West.

Police seize 20 people in Lourdes bombing

LOURDES, France (AP) — Police seized 20 people Saturday in connection with the bombing at the Lourdes shrine, which Pope John Paul II is to visit this weekend, authorities said.

They said they planned to file charges against three of those picked up — two women and a man who police say have links to anarchist groups. Police said the three were between the ages of 25 and 30, but their identities were not revealed.

Police said one of the women lived in Toulouse and that explosives had been found during a search of her home.Seventeen other people were taken into custody at the same time and were being questioned in nearby Toulouse, police said.

An anti-clerical group calling itself "Stop the Priests" claimed responsibility for blowing up a statue of Pontius Pilate at Lourdes on Friday and warned of more attacks during the pontiff's visit Sunday.

Despite the threats, about 130,000 pilgrims, some in wheelchairs, poured into Lourdes in anticipation of John Paul's visit.

Crowds milled through the streets of this Pyrenees mountain town while hundreds of souvenir shops did a brisk business selling statues of the Virgin Mary, religious medallions, busts of the pope and bottles to fill with water from the shrine's spring, which many believe has healing powers.

Thousands of the faithful, including those in wheelchairs pushed by nuns and young volunteers, paraded slowly around the shrine while streets near the papal route were closed to traffic for security reasons. Pilgrims will not be allowed to carry bags or packages near the pope's scheduled stops.

The papal visit will be the first by a pontiff in the 125-year history of the shrine at Lourdes.

French bishops originally objected to the tight security, fearing police would block the crowd's access to the 63-year-old pontiff and discourage pilgrims from coming to the town of 20,000 people.

But the objections were quickly dropped after a bombing that destroyed a half-ton bronze statue of Pontius Pilate along the route John Paul will travel.

An anonymous telephone caller to a French news agency, claiming to speak for the previously unheard of group, warned that "other anti-clerical actions will take place this weekend."

Irish gunmen fire on checkpoints

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gunmen opened fire on police at two checkpoints near the Irish border Saturday, wounding two officers and a civilian, police said. Two gunmen were killed in return fire.

In Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second-largest city, 12,000 Protestants marched in a show of strength against Roman Catholics.

Police said five gunmen drove up to a checkpoint in the center of Dungannon, 12 miles from the border, and shot and wounded a policeman at the entrance to a security hut. A second policeman opened fire, killing two of the gunmen. The three others escaped.

Police said two other gunmen opened fire on an officer at a checkpoint in Markethill, about 13 miles from the border, slightly wounding him. The two attackers escaped.

Among those who marched in the traditional Protestant "Apprentice Boys" parade under hot sunny skies in Londonderry were Americans, Canadians and Australians and the militant Protestant leader, the Rev. Ian Paisley.

Hundreds of police and army reinforcements joined security forces to maintain order as the marchers, wearing traditional Derry crimson sashes, paraded without incident along a five-mile route.

Several dozen masked youths in the Catholic Bogside hurled gasoline bombs at police patrols while the marchers were parading on the other side of the River Foyle in the Protestant Waterside district several miles away. Police said two security vehicles were hit but nobody was hurt.

The march marks the 294th anniversary of a Protestant victory over King James II's Catholic forces after a 105-day siege. The Apprentice Boys of Derry were founded to commemorate the original 13 apprentices who shut the gates of Londonderry in 1688 as King James' forces approached.

Official: MNF too small

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lebanon's ambassador, in an hour-long meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, expressed renewed interest Saturday in increasing the size of the international peacekeeping force standing guard in his country.

Ambassador Abdullah Bouhabib said he and Shultz discussed the possibility of doubling the size of the multinational peacekeeping force now in Lebanon but said no decisions were made. Lebanon has repeatedly asked for an increase in the size of the MNF force which up until now has been confined mainly to the Beirut area.

That force now stands at about 5,400 soldiers from the United States, France, Italy and Britain, including some 1,200 U.S. Marines.

The ambassador told reporters that the question of increasing the size of the U.S. contingent was not raised at the meeting.

Bouhabib also said Lebanon is interested in working with the United States in coordinating the deployment of Lebanese military forces into the contested Chouf Mountains to prevent a new wave of "death and destruction" after the expected pullout of Israeli forces.

"We were reassured by Secrertary Shultz that the American commitment to Lebanon will continue until the last non-Lebanese soldier leaves Lebanon," Bouhabib said, referring to the occupying forces of Israel and Syria.

"We had a very bad week last week," the ambassador said, referring to the outburst of fighting between Druse militiamen, Lebanese troops and Christian forces in the Chouf region south of Beirut.

Drug user can't wait to be freed

"The opportunity to make good money off of selling weed alone was there — so I took advantage of it. I knew if I got caught this time, it'd be Huntsville."

He came to Midland from Louisiana to live with a relative while on probation for another drug-related arrest in New Orleans. He wanted to get away from his drug-using friends in the French Quarter.

He wanted to stay clean.

"The almighty fast buck — about half of the people up there for burglary and selling dope will tell you the same thing. It's damn easy."

Jeff began using drugs when he was 13 and in the seventh grade. "We did lots of drugs at that age. But sure, lots of people I know here are 14-year-olds — and they're all whacked on dope. They're getting high, doing acid, smoking weed."

Jeff started with marijuana, "then to speed, to acid, to everything. Downers, the ludes (quaaludes), pharmaceutical heroin.

"But I didn't start shooting up until I was in the Navy. I've never seen more drugs in my life than when I was in the Navy. There was nothing else to do but go down to the engine room and shoot up."

He did admit to being a speed freak in high school.

"I'd take a couple of black beauties (a form of speed)," he said, smiling for the first time during the interview and snapping his fingers. "The day would go by like that. School's out. I didn't care 'cause I liked drugs."

He liked them later, too, and was up to a $300-$400 a day habit shooting up Dilaudids in New Orleans. "Fifty dollars apiece," he said of the pain-relieving drugs. "They surpass quaaludes and valiums. I'd sell 20 to 30 a day. I was making enough money to shoot it up.

"I moved here to get out of the rut I was in there."

But he fell back in.

"About the first couple of months I'd been here, I didn't know any big dealers. I was riding around with another guy, bought a bag (an ounce of marijuana) and kept running into people looking for bags. I said I'd get them some for $60 and I'd get it for $40 or $50. A guy fronted me a quarter of a bag, then it got to where he was fronting one or two bags."

He talked of the construction sites and bars visited during late afternoons trying to sell drugs; of the parties that lasted until 7 a.m.; waking up at 3 p.m.; hitting the streets and riding around; drinking and smoking; playing beer games and making drug scores; buying, selling, and bargaining.

"There was a lot of driving around, a lot of drinking. Generally, it's so damn boring here in Midland except for sitting around playing quarters (a beer game) and smoking a lot of dope."

Although the big business of big bucks is what makes dealing in Midland easy, Jeff said the rumored use of cocaine is overrated.

"The big thing around here is snortin' heroin instead of shooting up. And I don't think Midland is the coke capitol of Texas. Austin is, from what I heard.

"I never ran across any good coke here. Then again, the people I associated with didn't have the money to buy coke. I'm not into hanging around high-society people and it's the high-society cliques that have coke here."

Police agree: "We've got more coke in a town this size than usual — but take any place with a big college campus (like Austin) and you're going to have a wave of drugs."

Drugs are cheaper elsewhere, according to Jeff. While a gram of cocaine can cost as little as $90 to $100, Midland's price is $125, he said. Others say the price can climb to $150 here.

"One thing, the availability of hard drugs isn't like it was in New Orleans or Chicago," Jeff said. "It's here but you gotta look for it."

"There's a lot of speed coming in from Austin," a narcotics officer said.

"But we're getting more LSD now," another said. "I hadn't seen acid here in a long time. But we've made several arrests. There's been an increase more than in the last years."

According to Jeff, marijuana, acid and heroin are the easiest illicit drugs to find in Midland. Mail-order speed is available through classified ads in some pornographic or drug paraphernalia-related magazines.

"But my advice out here is not to buy any drugs — it's a rip-off," Jeff said. "A hit of acid anywhere else is $3, here you can sell it for $10. A bag of commercial pot here goes for $50-$60. Go to Arlington or Dallas and get it for $35 a bag. There's a $2 average for a hit (of speed) in Midland. Figure it out — they were dollar hits in New Orleans.

"You can sell an ounce for twice as much 'cause it's Midland, that's why. Just because this is Midland and there is so much money here. That's why everybody charges so much for dope."

Dealers should deal with cash, advised Jeff, who admitted steaming marijuana to make it heavier. Buyers, he added, shouldn't buy in Midland, period.

"When I go down to the penitentiary, I'm going to go to the drug counselor," Jeff said. "I can't afford to spend anymore of my life in jail.

"One year, a big chunk out of my life," he mused, referring to the possibility of a parole. "I hope when I'm 26-years-old I'm ready to get my act together: go to work, work steadily, just quit messing around with it like I have been.

"I get that paranoid feeling that I'm not moving fast enough."

Book: JFK made movie about death

An Associated Press story dated Sept. 21, 1963, details a movie made in Newport, but says that it was Fay who lay down on the dock and Kennedy stumbled over him. The book says the movie was made over Labor Day weekend.

Knudsen, who worked in the White House from the Truman administration until the Ford administration, confirmed the book's account and said the sequence had been shot several times, perhaps with a change of cast. Reporters observed the action, but none was close, he said — thus the reference to "the man with the binoculars" in the book's passage.

He refused to say what had become of the movie. He said Mrs. Onassis was the only member of the family who had seen it. No such film is in the archives of the John F. Kennedy library in Boston, said Mary Lee Quinn, an audio-visual curator, although the libary does have another Kennedy film shot by Knudsen.

"I know, because I was custodian of the film," said Knudsen in a telephone interview from his beach house on the Virginia shore.

"There were about four other couples there," he said. "They thought it would be kind of fun to do it. There was a little dialogue, but I'm not about to repeat it. It was done in confidence, and even though he's dead, it's still in confidence.

"I was quite close to him and I knew he enjoyed a good time."

When Kennedy was killed Nov. 22, 1963 while riding in a motorcade in Dallas, Knudsen said he thought back to the home movie.

"I wondered if it was a premonition he had or a quirk of fate," he says.

Martin said in an interview that Kennedy was preoccupied with death. "He had a feeling about death," Martin says. "He'd come back from a trip and say, 'Thank God I wasn't killed today.'

"He always asked his friends how they'd like to die. Someone finally asked him and he said, 'airplane.' Why? He said, 'quick.' "

Martin said he traveled with Kennedy during the presidential campaign in 1959 and wrote the book, "Front Runner, Dark Horse" — a political story about the race.

He said he spent five years compiling material for "A Hero for Our Time," and conducted hundreds of interviews. "I tried to doublecheck everything in the book," he said. "But what I have I stand by and feel very strongly about."

He has not interviewed Mrs. Onassis since she was first lady. At that time, Martin said, "we sat and drank all afternoon and she lost that little girl voice and told me things she probably shouldn't have, like... how she hated touch football.

"I never used that stuff for the first book because it was a political book."

Other highlights of "A Hero for Our Time" include:

—Kennedy confided to his friend, Larry Newman, that President Eisenhower was "a lying son of a bitch" because "he had told him that we wouldn't need any more people in Vietnam to handle the situation because most Vietnamese were pro-American."

—The former president called the Vietnam situation "a white man's war against the natives."

—According to former White House press secretary Pierre Salinger, Kennedy and former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev had carried on "a wonderful dialogue in private letters — things they couldn't possibly say aloud." The secret correspondence helped hasten the nuclear test ban treaty.

"Some of that stuff is absolutely mind-blowing," Salinger says in the book, "and will be kept secret until 1988. But the two men really got to know each other...There were some 60 letters between them...In the language they used, the references they made, it was like a peasant writing to an intellectual — but they were on the same wavelength."

Martin says: "Pierre's feeling is that that relationship was so strong, that it would have led to disarmament. Nikita Khrushchev cried when Kennedy died."

Midlander dies in one-car accident

A Midland man is dead following a one-vehicle accident near Tyler Saturday morning. The Department of Public Safety says Leonard Wayne Saverance, 38, died when the 1983 GMC truck-tractor semi-trailer he was driving ran off the road.

The accident occurred at 6:15 a.m. on Interstate 20 nine miles northeast of Tyler. Saverance was heading east when he apparently lost control of his vehicle, ran off the road, struck a bridge railing and came to a stop in a creek, officers said. No other persons were involved in the incident.

Odessan dies in cycle-pickup wreck

An Odessa man was fatally injured following a motorcycle-pickup collision Saturday morning. Dead is 21-year-old Dean Wesley Anderson, an employee for Muse Air.

The accident occurred at 8:15 a.m. just south of U.S. Highway 80 on Farm-to-Market Road 1788. According to Department of Public Safety reports, Bruce Wilson Swingle of Odessa was leaving a private driveway and turning south on 1788 when his pickup collided head on with the northbound Honda motorcycle.

Anderson, who was wearing a helmut, died in surgery at Midland Memorial Hospital at 1:56 p.m. Swingle was not injured in the incident.

Storms spawn 90 mph gusts

By The Associated Press

A fast-moving, pre-dawn line of thunderstorms spawned winds gusting as high as 90 mph in North Texas, wet South Texas had another day of thunderstorms Saturday and new showers developed across the Panhandle along a weak cool front.

The high winds damaged barns, uprooted trees and snapped power lines near the Texas-Oklahoma border but caused no injuries, authorities said.

Descendants of black slave renew family ties

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — For the many descendants of a slave named Cunningham, their family reunion gives them more than a chance to renew ties — it helps them fight for "the continuity of the black community."

Hundreds of people gathered in a North Chicago park on Saturday for the Cunningham-Pea reunion, and as many as 1,000 were expected by police.

The roots of the family are traced to Barry Cunningham and Madora Pea, his wife. After the Civil War, Cunningham, born a slave nearly 130 years ago, settled in Spartanburg, S.C., and went on to become a wealthy sharecropper, family historians say.

The couple moved to Waukegan, about 30 miles north of Chicago, in 1918. They had 12 children, many of whom worked in a steel wire mill here.

The original family home still stands in Spartanburg and is still inhabited by a Cunningham — grandson Paul Cunningham, 37, a machine operator.

He was at this weekend's reunion with his 10-year-old daughter, Angie. His father, the last living son of Barry Cunningham, was ill and could not attend.

"This reunion represents not only family ties, but the continuity of the black community," co-organizer Sonny Ballenger said in a brief speech as the reunion opened Friday. "Black families here are unstable — most are headed by women. We have an obligation to beat that cycle. Challenge it."

The gathering attracted people from as far away as South Carolina, California, Ohio and Jamaica, and was honored by a proclamation from Chicago Mayor Harold Washington, who designated the weekend as "Cunningham-Pea Weekend."

Reagan reveals aid plan to Hispanic voters

"Well, it is time to get away from fairy tales and get back to reality," Reagan said. The president said the United States is "on the side of peaceful democratic change in Central America and our actions prove it daily."

While acknowledging human rights abuses by the U.S.-backed regime in El Salvador, Reagan asked, "Can anyone really believe that the situation would improve if our influence for moderation were removed?"

Defending his Central America policies, Reagan said nations there "will never have a chance to build their future of freedom and prosperity if they are surrendered to the tender mercies of Fidel Castro, Col. (Moammar) Khadafy and their superintendents in Moscow.

Reagan saidthe United States supports "the elected government of El Salvador against communist-backed guerrillas who would take over the country by force, and we oppose the unelected government of Nicaragua, which supports those guerrillas with weapons and ammunition.

"That, of course, puts us in sympathy with those Nicaraguans who are trying to restore the democratic promises made during the revolution, the so-called Contras," he added.

In his radio address, Reagan said the United States is not the only power interested in Central America. "The Soviet Union and Cuba are intervening there because they believe they can exploit the problems so as to install ruthless communist dictatorships such as we see in Cuba."

Soviet teen caught in middle of diplomatic standoff

Embassy Second Secretary Vladimir Grachev said in a long statement telephoned to news organizations that after detaining the family for 15 minutes, immigration officials gave it permission to depart.

He said FBI agents then intervened and tried to persuade the correspondent's 15-year old son not to return to the Soviet Union.

"Only after the boy...stated that his only wish was to return to his homeland as soon as possible was the family allowed to board the airplane," Grachev said.

"All these facts show that a provocative campaign is being waged against Soviet representatives in Washington, which creates obstacles to the normal functioning of the Soviet offices here," the Soviet diplomat said.

An FBI spokesman who asked not to be identified said the agency would not comment on Grachev's accusations.

FBI agents were observed Saturday staked out outside the walled Soviet diplomatic compound in Northwest Washington, peering into all automobiles entering and leaving.

Earlier Saturday their were conflicting reports about whether the teen-ager was still in the country, but State Department officials were said to accept Sokolov's assurances that he had not departed.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, with President Reagan in El Paso said the United States and the Soviet Union have exchanged formal diplomatic notes earlier on the boy's case and that there are continuing conversations between the two governments.

The Berezhkov incident began as a report of a runaway teen-ager taking a joy ride in the family car. It now has involved the governments of both superpowers and commands the attention of the president, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and many of their key aides.

Young Berezhkov was said to have written Reagan: "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country. I want to stay here."

The State Department has insisted the Soviet embassy make the teenager available for an interview with federal officers so they can learn if he wrote those words — and if he mesins them.

The Soviet embassy earlier had dismissed the entire affair as a deliberate provocation based on forgeries.

John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said Friday, "We continue to insist that the young man not depart (the United States) prior to an interview which would permit us to ascertain his intentions."

"Our insistence on the interview is consistent with United States law," Hughes said.

Hughes said the youth has been at school in the Soviet Union and was in the United States this summer to visit his parents. That fact apparently complicates the teenager's legal and diplomatic status.

"I can't give you a clear-cut answer on whether he does have diplomatic immunity," Hughes said.

As related by Hughes, the incident began to unfold on Wednesday morning when American diplomats were told by the Soviet Embassy that the boy was missing from his home and could not be found.

Questions answered on U.S. nuclear missile emplacement in Western Europe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States will begin deploying 572 medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe by December if there is no accord with Moscow to limit them. Chances of such an accord appear slim and deployment will cap four years that turned into an unprecedented test of allied solidarity.

The debate has raised the political significance of the missiles, NATO officials say. Opponents, asking if the missiles will make Europe safer, call 1983 the "Year Of The Missiles" and are planning more demonstrations in several nations.

Here are some of the issues in the debate in question and answer form:

Q. When was it decided to deploy the U.S. missiles and why?

A. In 1977, Helmut Schmidt, then the chancellor of West Germany, expressed concern about the Soviet deployment of SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe. These mobile, triple-warheaded arms can strike anywhere in Western Europe and most of Asia from Soviet soil. Schmidt said they threatened the balance of power as the West had no similar weapons and would have to answer a Soviet attack with bigger missiles.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization agreed in December, 1979, to deploy 464 cruise and 108 Pershing-2 missiles, each with one warhead, to offset the SS-20s. Moscow has to date deployed 351 SS-20s, according to Western intelligence. Roughly two-thirds of these are aimed at Europe, one third at Asia.

Q. What arms negotiations are taking place and where?

A. At the same time that it agreed to deploy, NATO offered to negotiate an arms control accord with the Soviets. It argued that, without the U.S. missiles, Moscow would not negotiate the existing SS-20s. The negotiations began Dec. 1, 1981 in Geneva, Switzerland.

Q. Where are the U.S. missiles scheduled to be deployed?

A. All Pershing-2s will be deployed in West Germany. This is the line-up for the cruise missiles: West Germany (96), Italy (112), Great Britain (160), Belgium (48) and the Netherlands (48). By December, Italy and Britain will each get 16 cruise missiles. Nine Pershing-2 missiles will be deployed in Germany. The complete deployment will take six years.

Q. Have all those nations given final agreement to accept the missiles?

A. The Netherlands and Belgium, although backing the deployment of the missiles in general, have yet to formally agree. The missiles issue is politically very sensitive in both countries. Deployment in the two countries is scheduled for 1985. The others countries have given their okay.

Q. How have the missiles performed in tests?

A. Tests of the Pershings have been 75 percent successful. For deployment, an 80 percent rate is needed and it's expected that target will be reached by December.

Q. How are the U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations going?

A. They recessed July 14 in a stalemate. They will begin again Sept. 6.

Q. What do the Soviets want most of all in Geneva?

A. To freeze deployment on both sides. The Americans oppose this, saying it would leave Moscow with its already deployed SS-20 arsenal and the West with nothing.

Q. What do the Americans want most of all?

A. The "zero option," a term meaning that no NATO missiles will be deployed, in return for a dismantling of all Soviet SS-20, SS-4s and SS-5 missiles. The latter two missiles are single-headed nuclear weapons of medium-range. NATO says there are 248 of such missiles. The Soviets say they are gradually retiring these as more SS-20s are deployed.

Q: Why does Moscow oppose the zero option?

A: It argues the balance of power in many other ways already favors NATO and that SS-20s are simply replacing the aging SS-4s and SS-5s.

Q. Has Moscow offered an alternative a deployment freeze?

A. Yes. If no U.S. missiles were deployed, the Soviets would cut the number of SS-20s to 162. This equals the number of French and British medium-range nuclear missiles. France and Britain, backed by Washington, say their forces are independent and cannot be included in a U.S.-Soviet equation.

Mixed couples welcomed

By The Associated Press

A group of women, all raised as Christians, crowds into a kitchen in San Diego to learn how to cook traditional Jewish foods like latkes, or potato pancakes. It's one lesson in Temple Beth Israel's year-long "Mixed Doubles" program to integrate interfaith couples.

In New York, the Temple of Universal Judaism, created especially for mixed couples, holds Friday services in a borrowed church. Afterward, couples meet over coffee and share advice on raising children in a mixed-faith family. Mingling happily is the temple's founder, Rabbi Roy A. Rosenberg, who bucks convention by officiating at multi-faith weddings.

Not many years ago, such overtures in organized Judaism would have been unheard of. Judaism, more than other religions, has steadfastedly resisted interfaith marriage.

Such marriages, tradition holds, dilute the relatively small Jewish community of about 6 million worldwide — and the faith itself. Jews who have disregarded this tradition have often been rejected by families, friends and the Jewish community at large.

But Jewish resistance has begun to relax. Grappling with a dramatic increase in the rate of mixed marriage — to an estimated 40 percent — and a steady decline in Jewish birth rates, many Jews believe they no longer can afford the attrition that results when mixed couples are shunned.

Egon Mayer, a Brooklyn College associate professor of sociology who lectures widely on the subject, says a prevailing mood among Jews today is, "Let's not alienate mixed couples. Let's see what we can do with them."

While 30 percent of the non-Jewish spouses do convert to Judaism, Mayer believes there is little hope of converting many more.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Pursuant to Substantive Rule 052.02.03.033(b)(2) of the Public Utility Commssion of Texas (PUC), no automatic fuel adjustment clause will be allowed in tariffs of investor owned generating electric utilities beginning with the September 1983 billing period. As required by that Rule, Texas Electric Service Company will, on or about August 15, 1983, file the data required by that Rule necessary for the determination by the PUC of an interim fixed fuel factor to be charged to customers beginning with the September 1983 billing period and will thereafter, on September 1, 1983, file a request for the PUC to determine an interim fixed fuel factor to be charged to customers beginning with the September 1983 billing period and to determine its allowable fuel costs to be recovered through the energy portion of base rates, subject to reconciliation as provided by that Rule, during calender year 1984.

Man drowns during baptism

NATICK, Mass. (AP) — A 37-year-old man who couldn't swim drowned while he was being baptized in a lake by a minister who also couldn't swim, police said.

Officers said the minister was the only other person involved in the immersion ceremony Friday in Lake Cochituate near Prime Park.

Police Detective Alfred Morgan said John Edward Blue of Boston apparently lost his footing when he leaned back to be baptized. Morgan said there was a sharp dropoff on the gravel bottom of the lake.

"We were lucky there weren't two drownings," he said.

Representative nabs vandal

SHARON, Mass. (AP) — The vice chairman of the Criminal Justice Committee in the Massachusetts House has nabbed a 9-year old boy for breaking into his home.

On the advice of his brother, who is a police officer, state Rep. William Keating left his home one morning last week, parked a block away, then sneaked back on foot through his backyard.

Keating heard noises and found a broken window. After he announced police had all the entrances covered, the boy emerged. The youth later told police the names of four others who allegedly had vandalized Keating's home with him last Tuesday.

All were placed in a Norfolk County juvenile program.

Utilities restored for cultists

KILLINGLY, Conn. (AP) — Utilities have been restored to a motel room where four members of a religious cult called God's House had gone without water and electricity for two weeks.

Glenda Bellacove, manager of the Bon Aire Motel, restored the utilities Friday on orders from local health official.

The cult members have lived in the motel for 11 months and have not paid for their room since March, but they refuse to leave.

Paul Schure, director of the environmental health section of the state Department of Health Services, said his office would continue to investigate.

Lucas pleads innocent in death

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A former mental patient who claims to have killed more than 100 women in 16 states has pleaded innocent in the death of his 15-year-old common-law wife.

State District Judge Sam Houston on Friday set an Oct. 17 trial date for Henry Lucas, 46, who was convicted of murdering his mother. Houston scheduled an Oct. 7 hearing on pre-trial motions in the death of Freida Lorrain "Becky" Powell, whose body was found in a field near Denton.

Ms. Powell, who met Lucas in Florida and became his traveling companion, disappeared about a year ago.

Progress not made in talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Communications Workers of America and other union representatives met with officials of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Saturday but no progress was made toward settling the week-long strike against the company.

"As of this time, there is no indication of movement on the part of the company," CWA President Glenn E. Watts said in a statement issued through union spokesman Duayne Trecker.

Trecker said the informal discussions "centered on a careful review of all the outstanding issues."

AT&T spokesman Charles Dynes said nothing new came out of the meeting.

Trecker said that Watts has indicated the union is willing to continue such exploratory talks, but gave no indication that the two sides are ready to resume full-scale bargaining. The bargaining broke down last Saturday, an hour before the CWA called its 525,000 operators and technicians off the job.

Two other unions, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International Union, also joined the walkout led by the CWA.

Those two unions, which were not represented at Saturday's discussions, represent another 150,000 workers. The smaller unions will likely follow the pace of CWA.

At the outset of the strike, CWA officials indicated the union had a $24 million strike fund, but that with more than a half million workers such payments would have to be made on a hardship basis.

'We Got it Made' worst show of upcoming season

By SUSAN PAYNTER
Hearst Feature Service

Please do touch that dial:

— There's a TV sitcom called "Just Our Luck" about a 3,000-year-old black genie named Shabu who sleeps in the closet of a mild-mannered TV weatherman.

— Ann Jillian, former TV Mae West and before that an employee of Factory Direct Draperies on Aurora Avenue, has a new series. In "Jennifer Slept Here" she plays a deceased Hollywood star who comes back to haunt her Hollywood house, especially the bedroom of a 14-year-old boy.

— There's an NBC action series called "Manimal" about a crime fighter who can turn himself into any kind of animal.

And much, much more.

With so much to choose from, it's hard to select the worst new show for fall '83, but my vote goes to a new sitcom called "We Got It Made" already being heavily hyped on NBC.

With its hard-won success with the quality "Hill Street Blues," its decision to stick with the Emmy-nominated but low-rated "St. Elsewhere," the wit of "Cheers" and the chance-taking of "Buffalo Bill," NBC was in danger of getting a high-class reputation. The network is even advertising itself as the most Emmy-nominated network this year.

"We Got It Made" will save NBC from itself.

Premise: To please their girlfriends, two young bachelors, David and Jay, hire a live-in maid to clean and cook in their messy apartment. (They haven't the money or the space to make this practical, but this is television.)

They expect a middle-aged woman to apply. Guess who applies instead? Oh, come on, guess. That's right! A beautiful, shapely, none-too-bright blonde! And, surprise! Their girlfriends aren't pleased after all!

This is a sitcom to make you long for Suzanne Somers. And the star, Teri Copley, will make you nominate Somers for Mensa.

It's no coincidence that Fred Silverman, who was responsible for "Three's Company" while president of ABC, is co-executive producer of this new low in communal comics. But the big credit goes to Gordon Farr and Lynne Farr Brao.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE!
You can still get a Lawn started this year and be ready for Spring. Plant "Tex -Turf-10" hybrid bermuda, a superior grass. No ugly seed heads, less mowing, dense turf, won't freeze out. Sod sprigs. Call 694-4048 to place order and receive information.

M*A*S*H fanatics swamp Smithsonian

ENTERTAINMENT

By PAUL M. BARRETT
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Two hundred people are milling around outside the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History 20 minutes before the 10 a.m. opening time. Is the story of naval ships back in vogue? A special exhibit on the life and times of Daniel Boone?

Neither. The crowds have come to celebrate television, specifically "M*A*S*H," the smash show of the '70s about wacky but compassionate military doctors during the Korean war.

More than 18,000 people have seen the exhibit since it opened July 30, a turnout that breaks all museum attendance records for special exhibits.

In a shrine that already contains TV-age icons such as Fonzie's motorcycle jacket and Archie Bunker's easy chair, a collection of relics from the original "M*A*S*H" set has incited unprecedented fervor among legions of sitcom faithful.

The exhibit, which some fans complain is too small, includes a full-scale version of the 4077th's grungy operating room; Hawkeye Pierce's tent, the Swamp (complete with gin still) and "Hot Lips" Houlihan's pink surgery duds.

"It's different; it's reality," says Mat Aigner, 13, who with his parents has made it to the middle of an unmoving line inside the museum.

"This is our second trip," Mat's mother Beverly says. "Yesterday there were so many people we couldn't get in at all." This time they will stick it out.

Museum officials, meanwhile, are happily scrambling for explanations as to why a twice-removed dramatization of a frustrating and bloody conflict would attract so much attention.

"There was something about the spirit of the show itself that touched a lot of people," says Gary Kulik, chairman of the museum's department of social and cultural history. "If we did a more historically sophisticated exhibit on Korea, it would not have been as popular."

Corey Lund, 10, a World-War-II-model buff from Minnesota, says he watches recycled "M*A*S*H" episodes "because they're funny, and Alan Alda (who played the protagonist, Pierce) is a good actor."

"Do you think the show showed that war was bad?" asks Corey's father, Gary.

The boy agrees with an emphatic "Yeah."

"M*A*S*H" ran for 11 years, through February, and collected 99 Emmy nominations among numerous other honors.

The show "dealt with a lot of tough issues in a human way," says Beth Hall, 25. "It made you look at yourself and your beliefs about important things that have happened."

The Smithsonian exhibit matter-of-factly describes the show's antiwar and antiauthoritarian sentiments, as well as its occasionally anachronistic references to social trends of the 1970s, such as feminism and homosexual activism.

"It was a more interesting show early on, when it was making more political statements," says Marv Shaw, 22. "Later, when Vietnam was not really relevant anymore, it didn't touch those issues as much."

One segment of the exhibit pairs scenes from "M*A*S*H" episodes with grim black-and-white photographs of actual American field hospitals from the Korean War.

Kiss cancels Argentine tour after death threats

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The hard rock group Kiss, known for its grotesque costumes and violent stage shows, has canceled a Argentina concert tour after a right-wing organization threatened to kill its members if they performed here.

The tour's local producers, who had scheduled concerts at the Boca Juniors soccer stadium for Aug. 19, 20 and 21, said they had been informed by Kiss' agents in New York that "technical problems" forced cancellation.

An organization calling itself the "National-ist Free Fatherland Command" sent a communique to news media last week threatening the assassination of the group's members if they came to Argentina.

Citizens Delight in having Glenn Campbell for benefit

DELIGHT, Ark. (AP) — Signs at the city limits say Delight is the home of Glenn Campbell, but Mayor Grace Ann Riley says Saturday night marks the first time the country western singer has performed there.

Campbell planned a benefit performance at Delight's American Legion Hall to help pay for the building's air conditioning, Mrs. Riley said Friday. He has been coming to the town 80 miles southwest of Little Rock more often recently because his father has been ill, she said.

"He just visits up and down the street, just like a normal person," she said. "He likes to be just a normal person when he comes to town, and we try to respect that."

• • •

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Shipping heiress Christina Onassis wants to become one of the first legal nudists in Greece, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Ms. Onassis, 33, only daughter of the late tycoon Aristotle Onassis, has already approached the newly formed Greek Naturist and Nudist Organization, according to the Athens daily Apogevmatini.

"Christina Onassis is keen to join the Naturists because their rules of clean living, no smoking, no drinking and no sweets will help her lose weight," it said, quoting "close friends."

• • •

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Astronaut Sally Ride says she wouldn't trade a crack at another space ride for a million bucks.

"I didn't go into the space program because I wanted to make money or be famous," she said Friday at a news conference when asked if she had received any promotional or advertising offers. "I went into this job because I wanted to go into space. I wouldn't trade this job for $1 million if they paid me tomorrow."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration forbids astronauts to make money endorsing products or appearing in advertising.

Ms. Ride and three fellow space shuttle crew members were in Las Vegas for an appearance Friday at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas and a dinner-dance in their honor Saturday night.

Williams drugged when he died

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Tennessee Williams was under the influence of barbiturates when he choked to death on a bottle cap seven months ago, the city's medical examiner has found.

Dr. Elliot Gross, the chief medical examiner, said Friday that toxicological tests completed in recent weeks showed levels of barbiturates in Williams' tissues.

At the time of his death, the investigation showed only that Williams had choked to death on a plastic cap used on a nasal spray dispenser.

Eileen Ruoff, assistant to Gross, said further tests showed "asphyxia due to obstruction of the larynx by plastic dispenser overcap while ingesting barbiturates."

The report did not identify the drug and it was not known if it had been prescribed.

The 71-year-old Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright, whose celebrated works included, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and "A Streetcar Named Desire," died Feb. 25.

Actor on top of series

By DOROTHY TRELOAR
Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Egan has the plum role these days on the daytime soap "Capitol," the first time a first-year soap made the top 10 (in ratings) in the history of TV.

"I play the head of one of two families on the show, very wealthy, a Howard Hughes type tycoon, politically ambitious, dealing in all phases of business. The two families are feuding all the time and my girls are falling in love with the boys of the other family.

"Capitol" is Richard's third TV series, the former being "Empire" and "Redigo," the name he used in "Empire." As long as I've known Egan, over 25 years, he's never been out of work. He's also very big on the dinner-theater circuit. His first big moment in acting was opposite Joan Crawford in "The Damned Don't Cry."

"That's when I got my first break," he says. "Joan was very good to me and wanted me for the part. She championed and encouraged me to keep studying. We remained friends and kept in touch until her death. I miss her so much."

Which brought us to present and past movie business, stars, celebrities and gossip columnists.

"So many of the stars I have appeared with are no longer with us. And you can have the gossip columnists of today. In our good days we had Louella, Hedda, Jimmy Fidler, Sheila Graham, that great Irishman Mike Connolly (of Hollywood Reporter fame), Harrison Carroll, Dorothy Manners, all of whom made life so much more interesting and exciting. They helped build up our industry. Now most (columnists) are trying to kill the business rather than building and supporting it.

"The excitement is gone. The love and entertainment is gone. Everything is a promotion. Strangers meet strangers. Today there's a specific reason for a party to be given — a picture to be promoted, or the wrap of a movie, a banker becoming a producer. You attend one of these affairs, and there's only a handful of people you know, and probably will never see again."

'Hill Street' succeeds despite breaking all of TV's rules

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The show had everything against it. Its format was unprecedented, its characters too real, its premise a cut too close to the bone. And its subject matter — a cop show — had been worn thin. What's more, its ratings were in the basement.

Yet "Hill Street Blues" went on to become a success story unparalleled since "All in the Family" made Archie Bunker a household word.

How "Hill Street Blues" could succeed in a business that is built on past successes is one of the wonders of modern-day television. Archie Bunker merely injected "hot" topics and stirred up controversy; "Hill Street Blues" broke every rule in the book.

In the beginning, before "Hill Street Blues" became a gleam in TV's eye, there was NBC. The network had been occupying the basement in ratings for years, and its project-development money had been running scattershot through a host of series failures. But it wanted a new cop show.

Cop shows had long since run out the string. They'd been done every which way, and they'd had their day in the sun. In fact, cop shows were out; detective shows were in.

That was three years ago, and at that time Fred Silverman had become the top man at NBC. Silverman had been called a programming genius, but more accurately, he is a people genius. And not surprisingly, he went to the right person.

The right person was Steven Bochco, a man who had been writing since he was a kid of 8, and who had spent his entire career doing cop shows. The shrewd New Yorker worked at Universal Studios while still a student at Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh. He joined the staff permanently right out of college, producing cop shows for Universal for 12 years before he shifted to MTM Enterprises five years ago.

Bochco's then-partner Michael Kozoll, co-creator of "Hill Street Blues," had also spent his whole life doing cop shows. Neither wanted to do another one.

"Basically, we started from the point of view of what we didn't want to do," Bochco said. "We based it on wanting to do something different, something fresher than had been done before."

But in television that's a no-no. That would require nothing less than a dispensation from the pope or a presidential edict, certainly nothing a couple of cop-show producers could hope to achieve. An obvious impasse.

"We didn't want to do a cop show, and NBC wanted us to do a cop show. We said, 'Okay, if you leave us alone'...One of the reasons the show is as successful as it is is we demanded from the network, and got, creative autonomy."

Unheard of. Another strange thing about "Hill Street Blues" is that it was critically acclaimed — normally the death knell for a TV series — and yet it appeals to the average viewer as well as the intellectual. The secret is that unlike other TV scripts, "Hill Street" does not talk down to its audience.

"I wouldn't want to underestimate anyone out there," Bochco said. "Everyone enjoys our humor."

Musical's goal to humanize homeless street people

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A musical production that hopes to make audiences look at the homeless as human beings, not "eyesores," has cast real street people in its chorus line.

"The Rains Are Coming" opens later this month in an elegant hall that normally stages violin recitals and string quartets for well-heeled audiences.

Ticket prices range from $16 to $25, and 90 percent of the proceeds will go to agencies that aid the 1,200 people per night who seek emergency shelter in this city of 650,000.

The drama will convey to audiences that "a person is a person, whether they own anything or not," said the author, Brother Karl LeClaire of the Society of the Divine Savior, a Roman Catholic order.

"Maybe if they see street people as human beings, the next time they see one sleeping on a bench, they'll remember the one on the bench in the play and not be frightened.

"If we look at them as people rather than as eyesores, then maybe we'll be able to help," he said.

LeClaire's interviews with scores of homeless people were the basis for the musical's four main characters: Bill, the veteran street person; Myrtle, the bag lady; Paul, the teen-age drifter; and the Martins family, living under a bridge after being shunted from agency to agency.

While professional actors play the main characters in the cast of 27, several street people successfully auditioned for the chorus, and a half-dozen are working backstage.

"They're very proud of what they're doing," said LeClaire, who is directing the production.

Card's European custom

A 15th-century forerunner of the modern Christmas card was the European custom of leaving special visiting cards when making New Year's calls. These were often small woodcuts or engravings of the Christ Child, bearing good-will messages.

Three years of street fighting decimate capital city of Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The creepers and the lush tropical grass grow quickly over the debris of unending war, but they cannot hide the gaunt, shrapnel-spattered ruins that line every street of Chad's capital.

With the onset of the rainy season, the black clouds burst open from time to time, leaving the muddy streets deep in coffee-colored water and most telephone lines out of action.

Hardly a building in N'Djamena has escaped serious damage in three years of intermittent street fighting between the followers of Hissene Habre and Goukouni Oueddei, Moslems of the same nomadic Toubou tribe whose traditional pastures line the Libyan border in the far north of Chad.

Goukouni's Libyan-backed forces are again battling Habre's troops several hundred miles north of the capital in another struggle for control of Chad.

A little over a year ago, Habre's forces overran N'Djamena and brought a fragile peace to the shattered city. The mayor, Mahamat Djibert, estimates that 20,000 of the 350,000 inhabitants were killed in three years of fighting. An additional 100,000, mostly Christian southerners, fled and never returned.

THE MOURSAL quarter where they lived remains empty, looted and abandoned, a square mile of half-ruined mud brick houses. Only emaciated dogs can be seen moving in the streets overgrown with grass.

The Roman Catholic cathedral, one of the largest in Africa, was burned out in April 1980. The bricked-up ruin still dominates Independence Square in the city center. All round the square stand the broken shells of former government offices, army barracks and private homes.

Goats graze peacefully amid the ruins of the presidential palace of former President Felix Malloum. Malloum, a Christian, tried to end 15 years of war between the Moslem north and the Christian and Animist south by installing Habre, the most powerful northern warlord, as his prime minister.

Habre's guerrillas ousted Malloum in 1979 and the former president now lives in exile in Nigeria. His predecessor, Francois Tombalbaye, the first president after the end of French colonial rule, was murdered by Malloum's soldiers in a 1975 army coup.

N'Djamena's inhabitants shrug off the years of violence and destruction as the hand of fate. "If Allah wants us to have peace, he will bring peace," said Mahamat Moussa, a veteran of France's colonial army, who was selling cola nuts at 12 cents each in N'Djamena's busy market.

HABRE'S GOVERNMENT seems to have had little success in stirring up nationalist fervor against "Libyan aggression" in the north. Photographs of the tall, bearded president are pasted up everywhere but few passers-by throw even a glance at the excerpts from his speeches calling for national reconciliation and resistance. There were no parades, no flags and no speeches to mark the 23rd anniversary of Chad's independence Thursday.

The fighting is far away and many of the city's inhabitants seem confident that the return of 500 French paratroopers after a four-year absence is enough to keep the Goukouni-led rebels and their Libyan allies bottled up in their northern desert.

So they concentrate on keeping alive, avoiding trouble and rebuilding their homes. Hundreds cross the Chari River every day to neighboring Cameroon, bringing back bags of rice, sugar, soap and other necessities in short supply on the Chad side.

On the Chad shore, they scatter quickly to avoid the customs men who would rob them of their profits.

Mayor Djibert says "smuggling is now the city's main industry." More than half the working population of the city is unemployed and nearly all the small factories, assembly and bottling plants and workshops stand destroyed or closed.

THE GOVERNMENT'S first priority is the war effort, says Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat.

Nonetheless, government offices, banks and essential services are being rebuilt. "It is amazing that there is no epidemic," said Vivianne Braconnier, a French doctor working in one of the city's two hospitals.

"Our main problem is malnutrition," she said. "Nearly all the babies I see are critically undernourished and dehydrated." But there are few deaths from starvation. Every day, mud-covered Nigerian trucks bring in tons of food donated by the United States and Western Europe.

world in brief

Somalia says Ethiopians attacked

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalia claimed Saturday that Ethiopian soldiers attacked two areas in northwest Somalia and 40 of the invaders were killed.

The official Radio Mogadishu said many Ethiopians were wounded, and five Somalis were killed and wounded in the assault Friday.

"The enemy has been expelled from all areas it attacked," the radio said in a broadcast monitored here.

Ethiopia has not confirmed any clashes along its border with Somalia. An Ethiopian-based Somali rebel group claimed it attacked northwest Somalia a week ago.

Ethiopia and Somalia last fought a major war over Ethiopia's Ogaden region. Somalia started the 1977-78 conflict, but Ethiopia mounted a counteroffensive after the Soviet Union — then Somalia's main arms supplier — turned to help Ethiopia.

Indian floods kill at least 71 people

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Floods from monsoon rains killed at least 71 people in two central Indian states, officials said Saturday.

In Maharashtra state, at least 47 people were reported dead and 13 missing when rain-swollen rivers spilled their banks.

In the hardest-hit district, Nanded, about 20 villages were cut off from the rest of India for three days, and Indian air force planes dropped food and medicine to thousands of marooned people, the United News of India reported.

The government was also giving emergency aid to Andhra Pradesh state, where 24 people drowned.

Desperate farmer wins $1.6 million

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A desperate farm owner bet the family's last $50 on Brazil's lottery game and won the top, $1.6 million prize, according to news reports.

The man, whose name is being withheld at his request, had told friends he had was worried because he had not told his wife he bet their savings in the government-run lottery.

He filled out many cards for the game. The five numbers are chosen each Friday by the bank.

The winner has a small, marginally productive farm in the southern state of Parana, where he lives with his wife and a young daughter, local press said.

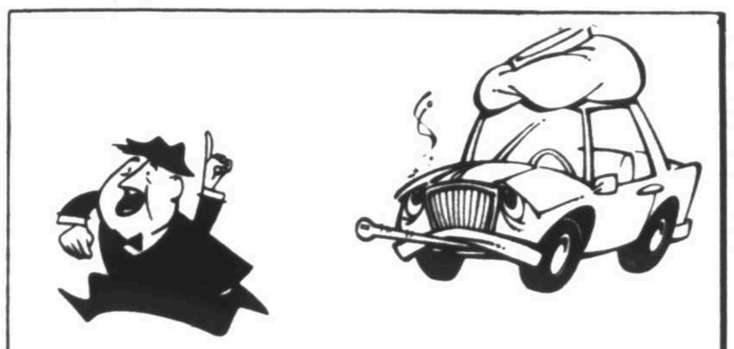
Life's most traumatic minutes...

...Occur during driving test

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

I can still remember the sweaty palms and upset stomach I suffered when I took the road test to get my driver's license. The examiner could spot my nervousness at once. I don't know what gave me away, unless it was the five minutes I spent trying to put the key in the ignition of a car that wasn't mine. (Well, it was blue. So what if it was a Ford and mine a Chevy.)

Recalling that day when I drove the first two blocks with my parking brake on, I decided to interview our friendly neighborhood Department of Public Safety driver's license examiners, who risk their lives each day that we might spend half our paychecks on automobiles.



Learning to drive has produced some of life's most frustrating, exasperating, exhilarating and hilarious moments since Grandpa drove through the barn wall screaming "WHOA" at his new Model T.

Even though the road test only takes 15 to 20 minutes, those are probably the most traumatic few minutes of a teen-ager's life. Each minute detail remains firmly etched in the memory. But for the examiner it's all very routine and uneventful. That is, most of the time...

There are those times when things don't go quite as planned. For instance, there was the motorist in Sweetwater who, following the so-called "quick stop," watched in horror as the car's motor flew out from beneath the hood via the radiator. Needless to say, the driver didn't pass, or even finish, the test.

But some applicants are not so easily thwarted, recalled Sgt. Steve Carter, who had 14 years of experiences to fall back on. When he worked in Dallas, where the waiting lines were usually extremely long, one man had finally made his way to the front of the line when his wife burst in the room yelling the car was on fire.

"I've been waiting here in line all day and I'm not moving," the man shot back. Fortunately a quick-thinking trooper spotted a six-pack of beer in the back seat, shook the cans and proceeded to put out the blaze.

But don't think such mishaps don't occur closer to home. Carter said the DPS used to perform the parallel parking part of the road test on a residential street in Midland. One rookie was testing an applicant who hit the accelerator instead of the brake and drove through a nearby fence.

"We ridiculed that trooper for two weeks for letting the situation get out of control, until it happened to me," Carter said. "The poor fellow whose fence we kept going through finally called us and asked us to move the site for parallel parking."

Asked what his most frightening experience was, Carter recalled a road test he tried to give to a Spanish-speaking woman in Alpine. "I thought she wanted a driver's test," he said. "All she wanted was a beginner's license. I should have suspected something when I had to show her how to turn on the car. When we got on the road she just let go of the steering wheel."

Capt. Julian Whitley, a 29-year veteran, said a similar incident happened to him. A woman in Hamilton came in asking for a license, and Whitley misunderstood. They got in the car, she started the engine, jumped over a curb, crossed the street and hit a foot-high curb on the other side. "I asked her if she'd ever driven before and she said she just came in for a beginner's permit."

"The most common mistakes are just due to complete nervousness," Carter said. He remembered one anxious applicant with an unusual name. "The trooper looked up and said 'What's this middle name, here?'. The kid just rolled his eyes up in the back of his head and fell over."

"Most of the things that happen that are funny you just can't print," Whitley commented, saying it was not uncommon for many drivers to leave the car with the seats a bit more damp than when they entered.

And there are times when people simply get their signals crossed. Carter told of one trooper who tried to grab the steering wheel during a road test to prevent an accident. He missed the wheel, but got the woman's leg. Naturally assuming the officer was getting fresh, she quickly taught him that passing her was acceptable, but throwing her a pass was not.

Another young girl thought she would do Trooper Jim Matthews a favor by rolling up the power windows of the car and turning on the air conditioner. It's the thought that counts — she didn't mean to close the window on his finger.

And even once the dreaded test is passed, the worst may not be over. There's the photograph. "We tell them to put their toes on the red line," Carter said, "and a lot of them turn their back to the camera."

He said the DPS does not shoot people in the back.

Judge Bunton pleads for resident U.S. prosecutor

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton's appeals for a resident United States prosecutor in Midland so far have gone unheeded.

"It's a crying shame," said Bunton, presiding judge for the Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions of the federal court system's Western District of Texas. "We do not have a resident assistant U.S. attorney. We have never had one for the Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions."

The judge has tried to get just one. There are 27 assistant U.S. attorneys in the Western District and 2,000 in the nation's 94 districts.

"I have requested on numerous occasions that we have an assistant U.S. attorney."

Bunton, U.S. District judge since December 1979, said law-enforcement agencies and the "local populous need the services" of a resident prosecutor.

Since the Midland-Odessa Division was established in December 1967, it had been without a resident judge until Bunton's 1979 appointment. Until then, visiting judges, beginning with Ernest Guinn and including D.W. Suttle, William S. Sessions and John H. Wood, had served the district.

Bunton, who was nominated to the judgeship by President Jimmy Carter the year Wood was assassinated in San Antonio, has chambers in the George Mahon Federal Building in Midland. The building, which opened in 1974, has an imposing and stately courtroom and has offices for one or more prosecutors.

Bunton said he repeatedly has requested a prosecutor through U.S. Attorney Edward Prado of San Antonio, headquarters for the sprawling district. Before Prado, a Republican appointee, Bunton made the request through Prado's predecessor, U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, a Democrat. "I got nowhere with him," the judge said. After Boyd was displaced, he was named a full-time magistrate in San Antonio. "He was very cautious," said Bunton. "He got what he wanted."

But Bunton's pleadings have been for naught.

"WE'RE THE step-children," he lamented.

"I write ugly letters once a month, and he (Prado) won't even answer them," Bunton said.

"He says it's up to Washington, D.C." to assign a prosecutor to the Midland-Odessa Division.

Judge Lucius D. Bunton

Reporter-Telegram telephone inquiries to the U.S. Attorney General's executive and public affairs offices in the nation's capital to find out the procedure for assigning a resident prosecutor to a division were unanswered.

Bunton noted that a change in politics — from a Democratic administration to a Republican — didn't even net the division a prosecutor.

He cited Prado's Republican connection.

"If any area in Texas ever supported the Republicans, it's been Midland-Odessa, and we can't even get one (prosecutor) put in." Recently, he noted, an additional prosecutor was assigned to Austin.

"What Travis County has done for the Republican Party I haven't been able to find out yet."

Bunton said Prado believes that "statistics do not justify" a permanent prosecutor here.

BUT THE JUDGE reasoned that "if you don't work" an area to uncover violations of federal law and don't have an available prosecutor to work with federal agents and to present cases to the grand jury, "you're never going to have the statistics to justify it." A resident prosecutor would work with and advise federal agents — including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Secret Service, U.S. Postal Service inspectors, Internal Revenue Service agents — from the inception of cases through their conclusion.

"I believe the people in West Texas are entitled to it," Bunton said.

The judge noted the Midland-Odessa area has the population (at least 250,000) to justify a prosecutor and, along with the Pecos-to-Big Bend Pecos Division, has the investigative force and enough federal agencies to warrant a prosecutor.

"You can't tell me that we in the Midland-Odessa area have that much less crime."

When Bunton calls criminal cases for trial or defendants for arraignments, sentencing or hearings, he must request that a prosecutor be flown in from either San Antonio or El Paso. Both cities are about 300 miles from Midland. Flights from El Paso to Midland are direct and readily available. But flights from San Antonio to Midland are more difficult to come by.

The Midland-Odessa Division includes the counties of Andrews, Crane, Ector, Martin, Midland and Upton. The Pecos Division, which was established in 1913, includes the counties of Brewster, Culberson, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Loving, Reeves, Pecos, Presidio, Ward and Winkler.

CRIMINAL MATTERS handled in recent months in the Midland-Odessa Division include bank embezzlements and robberies, violation of federal wildlife laws, firearms and tax violations, counterfeiting, mail fraud, and violations of drug laws.

Seven indictments are pending here in court.

The docket in Pecos largedly is made up of drug and immigration violations, since much of the division borders Mexico along the Rio Grande.

"There is mostly drugs and wets...They have guns, dope, all kinds of things coming through" the border check points, the judge said.

"I don't understand it," said Bunton. "I've told Prado I don't understand why we get treated like stepchildren. All I'm asking for is one (prosecutor), and he'd serve both divisions."

"The FBI wants an assistant here," said the judge. "The DEA (Drug Enforcement Administration) wants one. All the federal agents want this service....The magistrate courts (in Midland, Pecos and Big Bend) want one."

But Prado apparently is not convinced the Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions need a full-time prosecutor.

"IT'S HARD TO justify putting in a full-time assistant," Prado said in a telephone interview from his office in San Antonio.

He cited these statistics within the seven divisions in the Western District of Texas:

—Midland-Odessa has seven indictments pending, 11 defendants, no resident prosecutor.

—Pecos has 19 indictments, 24 defendants, no resident prosecutor.

—Waco has 20 indictments, 26 defendants, no resident prosecutor.

—El Paso has 34 indictments, 50 defendants, four prosecutors.

—Austin has 54 indictments, 89 defendants, three prosecutors.

—San Antonio has 64 indictments, 109 defendants, seven prosecutors. An additional 13 assistant U.S. attorneys in San Antonio specialize in civil matters.

Prado did not say he was against Midland-Odessa and Pecos getting resident prosecutor.

"I'm all for it, but it's a matter of what comes first," he said. "The United States attorney doesn't make the cases; the law enforcement does."

Local men see need for prosecutor

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A West Texas federal judge's campaign to get a resident United States prosecutor assigned to Midland has support in Midland, Odessa and Pecos.

Dallas Smith

"I think we need and deserve an assistant U.S. prosecutor out here," said Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin. The criminal element here warrants a prosecutor, he said. "And a lot of that is stuff that we (the state) can't touch."

Vern Martin

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, presiding judge of Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions of the federal court system's Western District of Texas, is seeking a resident assistant U.S. attorney. Under the current setup, prosecutors fly out of El Paso or San Antonio to try cases here. The Western District is headquartered in San Antonio.

Bill Ahders

"I don't know why we don't have a federal prosecutor here," said Sheriff Dallas Smith. "The prosecutor (Martin) plays a big part in our investigation of cases here, and I think it would be the same at the federal level."

John Hyde

County Judge Bill Ahders supports Bunton's efforts. He wrote the U.S. Attorney, Edward C. Prado, in urging the assignment of a federal prosecutor in Midland.

"I wrote a letter to Prado, and I never got an answer," he said. Ahders, a former Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent, said the presence of a federal prosecutor here would "sure benefit the FBI agents working here. They've got to ferret out crime anywhere."

Presidents of the bar associations in Midland, Odessa and Pecos voiced support of Bunton's drive.

"I don't think that there's any question that the Midland County Bar Association would favor an assistant U.S. attorney in Midland-Odessa," said John Hyde, bar president.

"The court needs to have a resident assistant U.S. attorney here. I think it would add to the efficiency of the prosecution of cases in this area," he said. "The Midland-Odessa area has achieved a growth that can justify the placement" of a federal prosecutor here. Hyde said. "We've reached a point where it's a logical move."

Reagan Legg

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher, who is president of Ector County Bar Association, backs Bunton. Bunton, who was raised in the ranching country around Marfa near the Big Bend, practiced law in Odessa before he came into the federal judgeship in December 1979.

"If Judge Bunton feels it's necessary, I would absolutely go on the line with his recommendation," Judge Fisher said. "I have the utmost respect for him. He has done an incredible, wonderful job with the federal court in Midland. I would support his recommendation."

John Tomlin, a Pecos lawyer who is president of the Reeves County Bar Association, said he "certainly would be in favor" of a resident federal prosecutor to serve the Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions.

"I think it would be highly beneficial to this area."

Tomlin noted that the Pecos Division is particularly plagued by drug and immigration cases.

"They (San Antonio headquarters) think we're off here in the wilderness and that nothing is going on."

Midland lawyer Reagan Legg said that "the crime business unfortunately is on the rise." That situation alone and the demanding federal Speedy Trial Act offer evidence for a resident prosecutor here, he said. "We need it."

GARY OTT

Journalists love sleeping late, off-color jokes, Scotch

Probably the most common complaint leveled against the news media these days is that nothing but bad news ever gets reported.

"How come I never read about nice things?" people (usually politicians who are in office) are always saying. "Murder, rape and corruption. It's sickening. Can't you people write about anything else?"

Then they get personal.

"Ya'll must enjoy all the blood and guts," they add, with just a tinge of hatefulness in their voice. "You're so cynical. You seem to like tearing everything down. The president. School prayer. Patriotism. Is nothing sacred?"

Then comes the clincher.

"Don't you people like ANYTHING?" And, the tinge of hatefulness is suddenly replaced by outright anger.

Well, hold on to your britches people. I'm here to tell you that journalists are just normal human beings and, yes, there are things that we thoroughly enjoy. For example, I'm just crazy about...No, wait a minute. I hate that. But there is... No, I detest that even more. Good Lord, this could take awhile.

It is now three weeks later and what follows is a complete list of items that any journalist worth his weight in salt truly loves:

—Sleeping late, followed by a nourishing breakfast of cigarettes and coffee;

—Catching errors in the competition's stories;

—Repeating off-color jokes...over and over and over;

—Relaxing after a hard day at the office with a tall Scotch and water, though, in a bind, a cold beer will suffice;

—Poking fun at the Jesse Helms crowd;

—Poking fun at limousine liberals;

—Realizing that today's paycheck got to the bank before the one you wrote yesterday bounced into the next county;

—Informing the public that not all journalists are as pompous as Barbara Walters;

—Informing the public that not all journalists make as much money as snooty Barbara Walters;

—Being recognized in public, especially if the people doing the recognizing keep their irrelevant criticism to themselves;

—Whining about not having enough time to do what the vicious editor has assigned;

—Whining about the loss of "Doonesbury" from the comic page;

—Whining in general;

—Conducting an interview and then having the subject say, "Write anything you want. Just make sure I come across as intelligent;"

—Realizing, after having finished the story, that that person looks the fool.

—Three day weekends;

—Learning that the regularly-scheduled city council meeting, which according to the agenda promises to be more mundane than usual, has been postponed;

—Finding an extra pack of cigarettes in the desk drawer, especially if that glorious event occurs shortly before deadline;

Thank God for small miracles.

She died Friday afternoon at a Midland Hospital following a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Raney was born Jan. 5, 1907, in Mt. Vernon and grew up in Hamlin. She married the late Robert L. Raney in 1923. He preceeded her in death in 1934. In 1938 she moved to Midland, where she was a member of the Church of Christ, the Palette Club and the Audubon Society.

She is survived by a brother, L.C. Houghton of Irving.

Ben Stuteville

BIG SPRING — Services for Ben Stuteville, 95, of Big Spring, were Saturday at Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial at Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Stuteville died Wednesday night in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was a retired car salesman and had lived in Howard County for 25 years. He was a member of the Trinity Baptist Church.

Evelyn Cruz

BIG SPRING — Services for Mrs. Edward (Evelyn) Cruz, 74, of Big Spring, will be at 10 a.m. Monday in the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial at Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Cruz died Thursday evening at a Lubbock hospital following a brief illness.

She had worked as a nurse and had been a resident of Big Spring for 52 years. She had been a member of First Methodist Church.

Mattox: Press 'chasing shadows'

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says the Capitol press corps is "chasing shadows" and even if all the accusations made against him this summer were true, they're "trivial."

A grand jury has been investigating Mattox's 1982 campaign finance reports challenging the source of a $125,000 loan, and an accusation that the attorney general threatened to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski out of the public bond business because of a personal dispute.

More recently, several newspapers have reported that two of Mattox's friends stood to benefit by legal deals Mattox has helped engineer, one involving Exxon U.S.A and millionaire rancher Clinton Manges, and the other involving Galveston millionaire Shearn Moody Jr.

"All this stuff is all rather trivial," Mattox said in an interview in his office. "Take the campaign loan. A $200 fine. Trivial."

Regarding the alleged threat, Mattox said, "If I had threatened the Fulbright & Jaworski folks, which I didn't — a $200 or $300 fine."

He said it has been a "slow summer" for news writers, and "you all haven't got anything else to write about over there."

"YOU GUYS are out chasing shadows. You're chasing ghosts. It's unbelievable. It's absurd. You guys have gone crazy over there, you really have," Mattox said.

"You all live in a little shroud over there. It's a whole lot different than what the people out in the street think," he said.

Mattox was interviewed Friday at the end of a week in which newspapers carried daily revelations about his past dealings.

In the Moody case, which involved a multimillion dollar judgment against Moody in a private lawsuit that is being appealed, Mattox intervened on behalf of the Galveston financier in a "friend of the court" brief, and 10 days later, Mattox's former law partner, A. Don Crowder, was paid $20,000 by Moody.

Jim Mattox

"The implication is that Crowder got $20,000 for interceding with the attorney general's office. It's not true. That's poor journalism," Mattox said.

He said Crowder phoned him and said other lawyers might approach him about the Moody case, but Mattox said he never discussed the merits of the case with Crowder. He said the $20,000 was a retainer for future work and had nothing to do with Crowder's telephone call to Mattox.

TWO FORMER attorneys general, Gov. Mark White and John Hill, said they were similarly approached and rejected suggestions that the state intervene in the case.

"Despite prior actions by other attorneys general," Mattox concluded that Moody had been "mistreated" by the state. "I happen to have enough guts to go look at a man's case and decide that I didn't care how much good or bad publicity I got out of it," Mattox said.

In another case that came to light in the press this week, an Exxon lawyer said Mattox and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro held up a $4 million settlement because the two state officials wanted it specifically written into the agreement that Manges would get $1 million.

Manges donated $50,000 to Mattox's 1982 campaign, and $65,000 to Mauro's. The Exxon lawsuit involves disputed oil leases on 5,200 acres of land on Manges' Duval County ranch.

Exxon lawyer Gaylord Armstrong of Austin said he objected because the title to the land was also in dispute, and he did not want Exxon to be liable to a third, perhaps unknown, party.

Mattox said including Manges in the deal "was just the easiest way to resolve" the case.

"YOU HAVE everybody a participant in one lawsuit. You bottle it all together in one ball of wax," he said.

Manges and Mattox are also on the same side in a similar dispute with Mobil Oil Corp. involving more than 10 times as much land on Manges' range in Duval and Webb counties.

Mattox has accused Mobil and its lawyers of leaking adverse tips to the press in an attempt to coerce the state into being more cooperative in the $1.7 billion lawsuit.

Mattox said he did not have any evidence that Mobil was also behind his latest problems, but he said the information was leaked by "people who are going to make a lot of money" out of the cases.

"It's all part of the same pattern. You've somebody down there who's unhappy with my handling of that case (Moody) so they decided to in effect to attempt to blackmail the attorney general's office by going and talking to the press," Mattox said.

He said somebody in the press corps ought to investigate other reporters and write about whether the media have handled the situation professionally.

"I'M READY for somebody to write the story about the good job Jim Mattox has been doing over here," he said. "Take the lead suit I've got going up in Dallas. For 10 years they wouldn't do anything. I did something when I came in.

"Take Lake Houston, where they were polluting it. I went in despite other people not doing it and filed the lawsuit to try to stop it."

He said when somebody shows him he violated a law "I'll be standing over there at the bar taking my punishment."

"Somebody with a devious mind, probably a reporter, is trying to figure out some way because Mattox and Maurp got a contribution from Manges that some way or another we're trying to give him something," Mattox said. "That's foolish."

"He's the guy who brought the deal to the state. He's the guy who found out the lease was no good. It's on his land. It's logical he's probably going to share in some way," Mattox said.

"We used to have courts of inquisition, not for stuff that you did, but for what people hoped they could find that you did, and that's what the press corps is being today," he said. "The press corps is bineg played a sucker by people who are my political enemies."

"Is a Class C misdemeanor the most important thing we can talk about in this state?" Mattox said. "If I sit down and write a check for $200 and send it over there, have I solved this problem? What's a fellow who hasn't done anything wrong to do? Just sit back and take it, I guess."

Texas-sized sinkhole apparently stops growing

BOLING (AP) — A sinkhole that gobbled up trees, telephone poles, two pickup trucks and part of a rural road apparently has stopped growing at 200 feet by 300 feet, a Wharton County sheriff's dispatcher said Saturday.

"Deputies went out and checked it, and they said it hadn't grown overnight. We're holding our breath that it stays that way," said dispatcher Dorothy Malota.

The water-filled abyss was discovered early Friday when two trucks plunged into the crater.

Residents had complained recently that the road was sinking, "but it did no good," said Troy Cloud. His 18-year-old stepson was one of three men in the trucks who were forced to swim to safety.

The road had been inspected early in the week and again hours before the collapse, said Texas Highway Department engineer Clyde Schulz.

A permanent roadblock was erected around the hole Saturday to keep the steady stream of sightseers "from falling in" and Texas Department of Public Safety officers were watching the site, Ms. Malota said.

The Texas Highway Department plans to study the sinkhole before deciding how to repair the road.

"I didn't see anything until I hit," said Cloud's stepson, David Green. "When I tried to climb to the bank, it wasn't nothing under there. It was all water underneath that road."

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

MC board to consider financial-related issues

The Midland College Board of Trustees will deal with several financial-related issues when it meets Tuesday. Among items on the agenda include approval of the 1983-84 budget and tax rate, amendments to last year's budget and the appointment of a financial advisor for a possible bond issue.

The board will also hear the Texas plan for equal educational opportunity in higher education and listen to a report from the school's president. The meeting begins at 4 p.m. in the MC board room.

GISD

A public meeting of the Greenwood Independent School District will be 7 p.m. Thursday. The purpose of the meeting is to hear public opinion concerning a proposed tax rate increase from $1.30 per $100 valuaton to $1.50 for 1983.

Bunton pleads for resident U.S. prosecutor

He cited the seven Midland-Odessa indictments. "Of the seven divisions, Midland has the least amount of indictments pending."

"I can't believe there's no federal crime going on" in the Midland-Odessa area, Prado said. But he suggested that perhaps "cases aren't being reported" by the citizenry. Prado, however, plans to meet with supervisors of "all the (federal) agencies and see what's going on" and to make sure they file cases there...The bulk of the work is done by agencies investigating the cases....

"WE'RE ALWAYS available," Prado said of his assistants. "All they (the judges) have got to do is pick up the phone" and a prosecutor will be dispatched to a court to conduct grand jury investigations or to try cases.

Unlike Bunton, Prado said the presence of a resident prosecutor likely would not increase the caseload or indictments. "The attorney is not going to get out and do the investigating in bank frauds, drug cases, immigration violations," he said.

Prado alluded to Bunton's comments on politics in the system.

The U.S. attorney said that the U.S. Department of Justice is subject to the "least political influence" of any department.

To back up his case, he noted that U.S. Vice President George H.W. Bush, a Republican, is from Midland and alluded to Midland's strong Republican leanings.

"I can assure you," Prado said, "that you would have more than your share" of U.S. prosecutors in Midland were politics to influence the assignments of assistant U.S. attorneys.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Military personnel complete training

Marine Gunnery Sgt. David L. Kator, son of Lucille Kator of Midland, has completed the Supply Noncommissioned Officers Leadership Course.

The 12-week course was conducted at the Marine Corps Service Support Schools, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N.C. The course was designed to provide students with advanced formal training on the principles, procedures and techniques used in Marine Corps' supply operations at the unit level.

The course of study centered on supply accounting and reporting basic computer systems' fundamentals and computerized bookkeeping. Additionally, students were introduced to the Marine Corps' Supported Activities Supply System and received instruction on requisitioning, storing, and accounting for supplies and equipment.

Navy Airman Randy S. Tanner, son of Billy and Joyce Tanner of Andrews, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego, Calif.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid.

Marine Pfc. David C. Herrera, son of David and Mary Herrera of Big Spring, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with 1st Force Service Support Group, Camp Pendleton Calif.

Navy Aviation Machinist's Mate Airman Apprentice Tommy Chavez, son of Elias and Graciela Chavez of Big Spring, has reported for duty with Anti-Submarine Squadron 38, Naval Station North Island, San Diego.

Navy Ensign James B. Burnett, son of USAF Retired Lt. Col. James L. Burnett III of 2310 Gulf Ave., Midland, was commissioned in his present rank upon completion of Aviation Officer Candidate School.

The 13-week course at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla. was designed to prepare candidates for their future duties and responsibilities as commissioned officers and to prepare them to enter primary flight training.

During the first 11 weeks of the course, the prospective aviators received general military, academic, physical fitness and leadership training. In this phase, their studies included navigation, military justice, mathematics and physics. The final five weeks were devoted to preflight training and included study of aerodynamics, sea and land survival, aviation physiology and basic aircraft engineering.

Marine Pvt. Richard M. Ybarra, son of Mary Ybarra of Big Spring, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

During the 11-week training cycle, Ybarra learned the basics of battlefield survival. He was introduced to the typical daily routine he will experience during his enlistment and studied the personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.

He participated in an active physical conditioning program and gained proficiency in a variety of military skills, including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline were emphasized throughout the training cycle.

Midlander elected student president

Robert Kelly, a senior at The Orme School, a college preparatory school in Mayer, Ariz., was elected student body president for the first term of the 1983-84 academic year. He is the son of Sally Kelly, 2504 Seaboard, and Mike Kelly of Midland. A graduate of Trinity School in Midland, he has lettered in football, basketball and track at The Orme School and is also involved in drama.

Bush named to oversee communities on border

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan named Vice President George Bush to head a federal relief program emboldened with "a few hundred million dollars" to provide economic aid to impoverished U.S. communities that border Mexico.

Reagan said Bush's group will "mitigate economic hardship" along the 1,760-mile border that the U.S. shares with Mexico with a two-pronged program.

The president described the proram as one designed to create jobs and diversify U.S. border communities' economies in cities such as Laredo, which has the nation's highest unemployment figures, with one of every four workers unemployed.

Gov. Mark White, D-Texas, immediately branded the relief program, which will include the heads of eight federal agencies, as only cosmetic. White said the proposed remedies amount to about the same thing as "the emperors of Rome (handing) out aspirin to the Christians after they've been mauled by the lions."

Reagan announced the border aid package Saturday afternoon at the 35th annual national convention of the American GI Forum, a non-partisan group that has 165,000 members, 90 percent of whom are Hispanic veterans.

The aid package comes as an aftermath to a report on the dismal economic conditions on the U.S. side of the border that was filed last week by the Southwest Border States Working Group, a federal task force headed by Commerce Undersecretary Robert Dederick.

About 4½ million residents live on both sides of the U.S.—Mexico border.

Among the group's findings was that in the Lower Rio Grande city of Brownsville, Texas, store closures had increased 80 percent in September -after the second of three Mexican peso devaluations - as compared to September 1982.

In El Paso, the nation's poorest large city and across the river from Juarez, Mexico, per capita income is $7,360, the U.S. Commerce Department reports.

Mayor Jonathan Rogers told the Working Group June 16 about 40 businesses in South El Paso that depended on trade with Juarez had closed since the 1982 peso devaluations, which reduced the value of the peso from 27 to the dollar to its current 148 to the dollar.

The peso has been at 148 per dollar since January, but unemployment in Laredo is the highest in the nation - 27 percent in June. The jobless rate in Laredo now is 25 percent, state officials report.

Additionally, sales tax receipts in Laredo were off 51 percent for the first five months of 1983, compared to the same period in 1982. McAllen, another Rio Grande border city, reported sales tax receipts for the same period were off 41 percent.

Reagan said the distressed economic conditions in the Sa Diego border area, and in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas spurred him to create the agency "not next year, but today."

White House press aide Craig Fuller, however, said there would be no immediate figures of aid, saying only that the money would total "a few hundred million dollars."

Diamonds found

Almost 20 percent of the world's gem diamonds come from a southwest African region called Sperrgebiet in Namibia. In 1980 1.56 million carats were found there.

Only two Midlanders come to send off one-car convoy

Money prevents some veterans from joining convoy

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

All five of Bertha Taylor Nickels' sons were in the armed forces. Three served in Vietnam at the same time.

Fred Nelson served in Vietnam from June 1966 through July 1967 and from February through September 1968.

These two Midlanders were the only representatives of Vietnam veterans to gather Saturday morning and send a one-car convoy off on a trip aimed at drawing media and public attention to the health problems associated with Agent Orange.

"This is really the story about Vietnam vets," said Albert Reynolds, who organized the Texas Agent Orange Convoy. "They were drafted into the war one by one. They came back one by one."

Reynolds, who serves as vice president of funding for the Houston Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, left Midland to meet other veterans at the Vietnam Memorial in Eagle Rock, N.M. Convoys leaving from all over the state are expected to meet there.

Agent Orange, a defoliant containing dioxin, is believed to be the cause of physical problems found in veterans and their offspring. House Bill 1961 was introduced to provide veterans with limited compensation for Agent Orange-related cancers and disorders. The bill is in the House pending a final vote this fall.

According to Reynolds, the convoys were organized to draw attention to the bill and to prompt medical researchers to find a cure.

A similar convoy left Houston for Midland last Sunday, although Reynolds was the only veteran to pull into town.

"Looking for a cure is really what we are trying to do," Reynolds said of the organized convoys. "We're trying to stir them up. You can see how successful we are."

Money is one reason many veterans are unable to join the convoys, he said, adding he plans to seek money from businesses to provide air transport to Washington, D.C., for a Vietnam veterans' rally Sept. 16.

"The recession is affecting them (veterans) doubly," Reynolds said. "They've been running behind everyone since they came back. Last hired is the first fired."

Nelson suffered from numbness in his left leg and arm as well as severe stomach pains, he said. Although the symptoms were apparent before he was involved in a refinery accident, Nelson said the Veterans Administration blamed the effects on the accident rather than Agent Orange.

Mrs. Nickels, a member of the American Legion, doesn't know if her sons were exposed to the defoliant or not. "They don't talk to me about it," she said.

The low turnout was blamed on a lack of communication between veterans, according to Nelson. "For most of the functions we have we contact veterans on a phone list. But our president was out of town and we didn't have the list."

If money was available to fly local veterans to Washington, Nelson said he believes many would go.

"Most of the veterans that I've talked to out here seem to be pretty interested in it," he said.

Reynolds, in a car decorated with flags and bumper stickers proclaiming "We're dying to know the facts on Agent Orange," led the small caravan out of town.

"I may go as far as Big Spring," Nelson said. "That's possibly as far as I can go. But I'd like to go all the way."

Midlander to enter in 4-H fashion show

Kim Watson, a member of Midland County's Inner City 4-H Club, will be competing in the Texas State 4-H Fashion Show on Sept. 14 and 15 in San Antonio.

Miss Watson, 16, earned a place in the statewide competition by winning a first-place blue ribbon in the evening-and-specialty-wear category in the 1983 District VI 4-H Fashion Revue in Rankin last month.

"Kim is not only an avid and talented seamstress, but she's also very much into square dancing, which is what inspired her outfit," said Carmen Rodriquez-Gray, Midland County Extension agent for home economics.

Miss Watson is daughter of Charles and Janet Watson of Midland.

Among the 60 contestants in the district show, three Midland County 4-H'ers aside from Miss Watson won blue ribbons by scoring between 90 and 100 points in contests.

They are:

—Jeanne Pare, 16-year-old daughter of Louis and Judith Pare. Miss Pare, a member of the Inner City 4-H Club, competed in the active-sportswear category.

—Maureen Dunn, 18-year-old daughter of Charley and Rae Dunn. Miss Dunn, a member of the Greenwood 4-H Club, competed in the daytime non-tailored category.

—Wendy Smith, 10-year-old daughter of Danny and Linda Smith. Miss Smith was a Junior I Division winner.

Ms. Rodriguez-Gray was a judge June 1 in the Midland County Fashion Revue which preceded the district show. The judging happened on the same day she came to work as a county agent here.

Kim Watson

"I remember feeling very concerned about doing justice to the girls and taking a lot of time in determining who should be the county winners to represent us at district," she said and cited the honors the girls won. "I'd say I did OK for a first-timer," the home economist said. "I'm proud of our girls."

Midlander reports he, companion were robbed of $800

The Midland Sheriff's Department is searching for two men in connection with a reported aggravated robbery Friday.

Michael Eugene Jones, 26, of rural Midland reported he and a female companion were parked at Cole Park about 9:30 p.m. when two black males approached them on foot. The men threatened them with what appeared to be a blue steel snub-nose gun and demanded money, according to police reports.

Jones was ordered onto the hood of the car while the alledged robbers ransacked the vehicle and took his wallet and the woman's purse, police said. Nearly $800 was reported stolen. The men fled on foot.

Richard Haley Sr., 1501 S. Dallas, reported to Midland police the theft of an electric compressor valued at $450. Haley said the item was taken from his back yard between 9 p.m. Friday and 5 a.m. Saturday.

Mayor 'Tootsie' hits Houston airwaves

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Kathy Whitmire, frequently reminded she looks like actor Dustin Hoffman in drag, clamped on some earphones and for one-hour was known on Houston airwaves as "Tootsie."

Mrs. Whitmire has declined to make staged public appearances during her "strictly-business" administration. But the mayor, facing re-election in November, proved even she was willing to indulge in a bit of gimmickry.

Woman conquers inner doubts to become pastor

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STERLING CITY — The greatest obstacle of all was her own inner fear.

She had felt a divine summoning to Christian service — a calling not unknown to many women. But hers was one to the pastoral ministry, a position long regarded as the domain of men.

There were some tough moments, periods of insecurity, days when she thought about turning back.

But Kary Wilshusen persevered to gain ordination and become the first woman pastor in Sterling City's 92-year history.

"Growing up, I never dreamt I would be a pastor," she explained, relaxing in the manse of First Presbyterian Church. "I mean, I never thought about it. I suppose it's been 20 some-odd people, very significant people, that have said, 'Hey — this is where you're needed; you need to think this through again,' when I would think of pulling out."

The crucial moment came while she was working at a church in Charlotte, N.C.

"The people began to call me pastor," she recalled. "They began to call me when someone would die, or call me when someone was in the hospital, or come by, or refer to me as 'this is my minister.' And I grew into feeling more comfortable with that. I had an opportunity to preach at that point, and they listened. They wanted me to preach again."

"The people began to call me pastor. They began to call me when someone would die, or call me when someone was in the hospital, or come by, or refer to me as 'this is my minister.' And I grew into feeling more comfortable with that. I had an opportunity to preach at that point, and they listened. They wanted me to preach again."

—Kary Wilshusen

AND THE decision suddenly seemed already made.

"There came a point," she noted, "at which I realized this fits me like a glove. I love this and I want to do this — it feels right."

Without the robe of ministry, removed from the pulpit of Presbyterian Church, few would guess that Kary was anything but an attractive, 28-year-old brunette with a contagious smile and youthful enthusiasm. Talk with her and discover she enjoys many of the same things as do other single women: dating, dancing, swimming, sailing, jogging.

But her ultimate goal in life — "to be faithful" — lifts her above such temporal indulgences.

Pursuance of the goal began early for her, guided as she was by the hands of devout parents, each of whom was a Presbyterian elder. Spurred by a desire to live her faith, Kary looked beyond the shores of America upon receiving her bachelor's degree from Austin College in Sherman.

It was to be only for four and a half months, but its effect would be great.

AFRICA. The Gambia in West Africa, to be exact. A site where people both needed help and had something to give in return.

"We worked alongside the Peace Corps," recalled Kary of Operation Crossroads Africa, which sponsored her stay. "I've always been interested in traveling and in missions. This wasn't associated with missions, but it struck my fancy. We really did construction work. We built a castle of a chicken coop and strung barbed wire fences."

She was to have a parallel experience in Honduras and Nicaragua years later — this past June, in fact.

"I think the third world has a lot to say to us, both theologically and economically and politically, and we need to be open; we need to hear those words. Africa was the first taste of that, and it has been a voice that keeps ringing inside me."

Upon her return from Africa and her newly acquired insight, Kary enrolled in Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary. A year later she transferred to Presbyterian School of Christian Education in Richmond, Va., but the insecurities remained.

"I WAS not sure about being ordained at that point," she remembered. "And so I went ahead and got my masters in Christian education and while I was there...I decided I would get into Union Theological Seminary's program and re-think the possibilities of going into pastoral ministry."

She returned to Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary to graduate — and be ordained — only last May.

Meanwhile, First Presbyterian Church in Sterling City was going through a period of transition. The previous pastor had left in October, 1982, and since that time the 41 members had kept the church active virtually by themselves.

That fortitude and perseverance is what attracted Kary when she stepped behind the pulpit for the first time.

"They were sizing me up and I was sizing them up in terms of goals and priorities, in terms of what we were both looking for," said Kary. "It was exciting. These folks had been running this church since October and done a tremendous job. They have a very strong faith, a commitment in terms of leadership and also in terms of spiritual things. And that showed. It's a church that's willing to grow and willing to change and finds that kind of future exciting. Well, that's the kind of person I am."

GROWTH AND change in Christian denominations over the past few years has brought more and more women to the forefront — a development Kary views as a healthy one.

"All the leadership roles are opening up, which is exciting," said the self-confessed advocate of women's rights. "We still have a long way to go in all the denominations, but I think we're going in that direction. I think women bring some special qualities to those leadership roles...like the nurturing characteristic. People are interested to see how you'll preach, what you'll do, can you do it. I wouldn't say there haven't been hard places — there's always some opposition — but the opposition isn't so much hostile, I think, as it is, 'Gee, I didn't know what a woman minister would look like.' "

THE GREATEST opposition came from no less formidable a foe than the Apostle Paul himself, whose writings long were accepted as arbitrarily denying women the right to a pastoral ministry. Before Kary stepped into the pulpit, she had to grapple with such passages as I Corinthians 14:34-35: "Women should remain silent in the churches. They are not allowed to speak, but must be in submission as the Law says. If they want to inquire about something, they should ask their own husbands at home; for it is disgraceful for a woman to speak in the church." (New International Version)

"I think that it makes all the difference in the world," she opined, "how you interpret scripture. I have learned to read scripture from the original languages, and in doing that, putting an...analysis to the passage. It has enriched it for me and (I have) learned to read scripture from its own cultural setting. What was happening back then when it was written? What were they talking about when they were writing it? What significance did that have? And then what is the eternal meaning for that passage today? What do we hold on to? What is God's word for us today out of that?"

KARY SAID she asked herself those questions and came up with her own answer: "I would say those passages are pretty time-bound, and if we're going to take certain scriptures literally then we need to take all of them literally."

At any rate, Kary is forging ahead — so much, said one member of her congregation in an ad in the Sterling City News-Record — that she has "Satan on the run."

But then, perhaps, it's only natural.

"When you are a change," said the pastor with flowing locks and svelte figure, "you can produce more changes easily."

Ballet dancers discusss their craft

'Americans have to be putty,' says one

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"If you must ask, 'Should I be a dancer?' then you should not be one."

—American dancer, Martha Graham

"By the time you learn to dance, you're too old," quipped Tom Pazik, director of the Maryland Ballet and guest instructor for the Permian Civic Ballet Association's 10-day workshop which ended Thursday.

The other guest instructors, Kirt Hathaway and Linda Divin, laughed as they nodded in agreement.

Since the first ballet — Ballet Comique de la Reine — staged by Balthazar de Beaujoyeulx in 1581, this dance form has developed into a highly skilled, demanding craft.

"American dancers have to be putty," Pazik said. "They have to be able, ready and willing to do everything."

Dancers must spend years of months learning technique through hours of daily training. Yet, mastering the technique alone isn't enough.

When the curtain goes up, "Some give 115 percent; and others don't ever get there," Hathaway said. Formerly a principal dancer with the Dallas Ballet, Hathaway will be dancing with the Cincinnati Ballet this year. He has taught PCB's summer workshop for the past two years.

"A lot of dancers don't want to be ugly" Pazik said, although the role may call for that type of character portrayal. "They have to go that extra step to be willing to be unattractive.

"That extra step" means good dancers must be actors as well.

"Any individual who is performing a role can only bring to the role what they have as life experiences," Pazik said. "If they have not suffered a particular situation that character has suffered, they have to go back through their life and dredge up something similiar.

"That's the reason the best Juliets, who are supposed to be 13 years old, are around 30. Fonteyn was perhaps the greatest Juliet, and she was 45."

Names of internationally known ballerinas like Dame Margot Fonteyn, Dame Alicia Markova and Anna Pavlova, have inspired young women to head for ballet class. In the beginning, most aren't aware of the discipline, drive and dedication required to reach the top.

"Fonteyn said she had to work for everything she got as a dancer," Pazik said. Without that kind of work, often "there's no passion because they haven't had to fight for it."

Hathaway added to that statement: "I'm always looking and searching. When I do a role over and over, I take care to develop character. Through the performing experience itself, I find what works."

It is of utmost importance that a dancer's performance be honest.

"What generally will reach an audience is honesty; whatever is inside an individual can't be hid on stage," said Pazik. He once asked another professional, "How far can you go on stage?" The reply was, "You can go as far as you need to as long as it's honest."

Dancers must be able to move "beyond technique to have feeling with movement," Hathaway said.

"There's a real fine line between technique and movement," said Miss Divin, director of the Harlingen Ballet Center and guest instructor at PCB for the past three years.

"I harp on technique, then I see them become mechanical," she said. " Then I start pushing them to dance and move. When I see them get sloppy, I pull back. I'm always trying to find a balance between the two.

"When dancers like Yoko Ichino (ballerina with National Ballet of Canada) work at the bar, you're really not aware of their technique because it's so fluid and so natural to them," Miss Divin said.

"Turning has always been a nightmare to me," she said. Then she recounted an experience she had when she asked Cynthia Gregory (ballerina with American Ballet Theatre) how she executed her pirouettes. Miss Gregory responded with, "'You know, I never really thought about it.' Then she took her fourth position and turned four pirouettes. Shaking her head, she said, 'I never thought about it.' "

"The people who are really fine dancers," Pazik said, "have never had to analyze how their body has done what it has done."

Pazik's next comment received another round of affirmative nods.

"Most of us are not born turned out."

Instructors agree ballet classes need consistency

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Suitcases packed. Goodbyes said.

Attention turned from daily classes to preparing for academic studies when Permian Civic Ballet's summer workshop ended Thursday.

As the two-week session was coming to a close, guest instructors Tom Pazik, Linda Divin, and Kirt Hathaway compared this summer's experience with past PCB workshops.

"They need consistency," said Hathaway, who has guest taught here for the past two years. Formerly a dancer with Dallas Ballet, he will be dancing with Cincinnati Ballet this year.

The others nodded their agreement as Hathaway continued: "They need more than a two-week workshop."

PCB is looking for a permanent director. It has been without a director since Anne Burton's retirement last year.

"This summer's workshop has gone better than they have in the past because the girls have grown, both technically and physically," Pazik said. Pazik, director of the Maryland Ballet, has been guest teaching here for three years.

The maturing process creates problems for dancers because they gain, as Pazik said, "that much more body to control."

"Young ladies try to hide their breasts," said Miss Divin, director of Harlingen Ballet Center, who has been guest teaching at PCB for three years.

Height gain can also be a problem.

"If you're tall and you're uncomfortable with you height, you start to move like a small person," said the 5-foot-6½ dancer.

Another point all agreed on was the potential in the intermediate class.

"The best company Midland's going to have is going to come out of the intermediate class," Miss Divin said.

To Miss Divin's comment that "the attitude of the students and discipline in class" has improved since she's been coming to Midland, Pazik said:

"There is a difference. I can see things carry over. Something I said last year, I see it happen this year. When you're only here once a year every August, it's nice to know someone heard you."

Number of syphilis cases increases

AUSTIN (AP) — The state health department said Saturday that although the nationwide trend in syphilis cases has leveled off, Texas continued to show an increase in 1982 and ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Texas ended 1982 with 6,336 cases of primary and secondary syphilis, a sexually contracted disease. This is a 19 percent increase over 1981 and a 66 percent increase over 1980.

For the first six months of this year, the total is 2 percent greater than in the same period of 1982, the department said.

I wonder who owns the lot on the northwest corner of Big Spring and New Jersey streets, on the south side of town? It needs to be cleaned off. There is an old pickup and another cab of another car, and a lot of trash. I am surprised the city has not had it cleared, as it has been there for years.

Taco Plaza built a very nice eating place next door, but had to build a high fence to hide the lot from the public. Even though it is on the south side of town it should be cleaned off. It is also a fire hazard. Thank you. — M. Mitchell

ANSWER: Warren Cloyd with the Zoning Department of the City of Midland has been notified of the situation and he said his department will check into the problem very soon.

Mr. Cloyd also pointed out that there are only two inspectors in his department for the entire city. At present the department is checking the different sections of the city. Mr. Cloyd said he is inspecting the east part of the city and in just a 30 block area discovered 175 violations. However, he said, complaints such as yours are taken care of as the department is notified.

Could you tell me when the City of Midland approved the annexation of property in northeast Midland? — M.F.

ANSWER: The Planning and Zoning Department of Midland says the annexation was approved on the second reading by the City Council Nov. 2, 1982.

Many people are asking why new office buildings are being built when so many offices are not rented that are already built?

Same question about apartment buildings. We see new ones being constructed when we know all the apartments that we have in Midland are not occupied. — Hilma Sanford

ANSWER: Information Answer Line was able to obtain indications that commitments were already made for the construction of many of the new buildings and apartments being erected. This is being done in spite of the current "slow down" in the Midland economy. There also are rumors that several of the larger oil companies which moved from Midland possibly are considering a return to the city.

I have read several references lately to something called "universal life" insurance. What is it? — J.C.

ANSWER: Universal life is a relatively new kind of life insurance product that has attracted considerable attention in the last few years, according to The American Council of Life Insurance.

It allows you to change the death benefit from time to time and to vary the amount of timing of premium payments. (When the death benefit is increased, you must provide satisfactory evidence of insurability). Premiums (less certain charges) are added to a policy account to which interest usually is credited at rates that reflect the current yields on short-term securities, giving a somewhat higher return than more traditional types of life insurance protection.

I realize this question may sound silly, but do you know the origin of the word "punch," as used applied to beverages? — G.T.

ANSWER: Well, here is one explanation. The vogue of mixing wine or water, lime juice, sugar, spice and water was brought to England from India and it seems to be named from the Hindu word "punch," meaning five, referring to the usual number of ingredients.

Business same as usual for Continental Airlines

HOUSTON (AP) — The machinists' union picketed Continental Airlines on Saturday, pulling 2,000 mechanics and maintenance workers nationwide off the job, but airline officials said it was "business as usual" for the nation's eighth-largest carrier.

The International Association of Machinists walked off the job at 12:01 a.m. EDT Saturday after the union and Continental failed to reach a new contract. No further talks were scheduled.

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks in Houston said the airline was operating at 85 percent of its scheduled flights, as planned. He said the strike was having "no impact" on the operations.

"Operations at the ticket counters are very, very smooth and passenger loads are what we had anticipated them to be," Hicks said. "There are no substantial flight delays; probably in most cases there are fewer delays. Essentially it's business as usual."

The Houston-based carrier has about 13,000 employees nationwide. Its routes are concentrated in the West.

In Houston, about 500 union members walked off their jobs. Fifteen members were walking the picket line in four-hour shifts at Houston Intercontinental Airport's Terminal C and the airline headquarters. About eight members picketed at Hobby Airport.

Continental has offered the mechanics $15 an hour and mechanics who work during the strike will receive that, officials said.

The walkout was called because the proposed pact "would have eliminated the jobs of up to one-third of the IAM work force at Continental and did not come up to industry standard wage scales," a union statement said.

Large turnout reported in mass transit vote

DALLAS (AP) — Voters in Dallas and 20 suburbs turned out in large numbers Saturday to decide whether to approve a regional mass-transit system and a sales tax to pay for it.

Balloting was "very smooth, very heavy," said Dallas County election aide Jack Beeson. An election worker at one precinct said "a voter a minute" was arriving. Few lines were reported, however.

Dallas County elections coordinator Michael Jackson said officials were prepared to handle a 50 percent turnout — about 360,000 voters. In most issue elections, 20 percent to 25 percent vote, he said.

Nearly 3,000 absentee votes were cast Tuesday, the last day of in-person absentee voting, setting a record for the most absentee votes cast in a single day.

Dallas Area Rapid Transit would be Texas' first rail mass transit system, with 160 miles of rail lines built over the next 27 years. Bus service would be doubled under the plan.

Residents voted Saturday on whether to allow a 1-cent sales tax to help pay for the $8.75 billion rail system. Voters would have to return to the polls later to approve a bond package backed by the sales tax.

At least nine grass-roots organizations charged that DART trains would run in predominantly white areas, while buses generally would be used in black neighborhoods, that the plan would waste tax money and that it would disrupt neighborhoods.

DART chairman Adlene Harrison accused opponents of massive deception. "I've been in a lot of campaigns, both issue and candidate campaigns," she said, "and I've never seen the magnitude of misinformation put out by the anti-DART people."

But many in the anti-DART camp conceded that the million-dollar DART campaign had made underdogs of its opponents.

"It boiled down to a bunch of independent campaigns up against the best-organized campaign this city has ever seen," said former U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, a leading DART foe.

As election day neared, pro-DART forces mobilized a bank of 250 phones — the largest ever used in Dallas, supporters said — and planned to make 100,000 phone calls by the time polls closed at 7 p.m.

Opponents used last-minute contributions of $17,000 to broadcast its first television commercials Friday.

Knob may be too much for Pentagon

FORT WORTH (AP) — Pentagon officials agreed to pay more than $400 apiece for plastic knobs from the Vought Corp. of Dallas until an Arlington company said it could make the same knobs for $60.

Pentagon officials in Washington told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that Vought was awarded a contact in January for $10,810.80 to supply 27 of the knobs. But the Defense Industry Supply Center in Philadelphia dropped the contract after receiving the unsolicited bid from Aero Components Co. of Arlington, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

"Even at $60, it's extremely overpriced," said John Williams, head of the Arlington company that employs 12. "You're really looking at a $15 part — it's a lot like the gearshift knob on your car."

Williams called Vought's bid "ridiculous."

When the Pentagon decided recently that it needed another 44 of the knobs, Williams sent in his bid.

Although the Pentagon informed Vought late last week that it was rejecting its bid, it has not accepted Williams' offer. Instead, officials asked Vought to submit a revised bid for the initial purchase of 27 knobs, which are used to release the cockpit canopy on the Vought A-7 jet.

"Yes, we think the (Vought) price is out of line," a defense spokesman told the newspaper. "However, the fact is that the item is out of production and has a critical application was a consideration in the price.

"We have initiated negotiations for price adjustment with LTV, and we told them to stop the shipment."

The spokesman was unable to explain why, if the knobs were "critical," the shipment was halted.

"Just because we agree to a price doesn't mean we're going to buy it," said an official of the Defense Logistics Agency, which supervises the Defense Industry Supply Center.

Vought, a subsidiary of the LTV Corp. with 9,600 employees, charged the government $37.25 apiece for the same knobs in 1979, the Defense Department officials said.

Republican Party off endangered species list

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Thank you for the concern, but you can take the Texas Republican Party off the endangered species list.

That's the word from GOP State Chairman George Strake, who reports Texas Republicans are healing their wounds and plan to be back in force for the 1984 campaign.

It will be, Strake agrees, a "big year" for the party, both in Texas and nationally.

Less than a year ago, Republicans were looking for expansion of their holdings in statewide offices.

But Gov. Bill Clements failed to win re-election and the Democrats carried the other statewide posts.

AND THE TEXAS party engaged in some bitter internal battles, which ended with the replacement of Mineral Wells oilman Chet Upham as party chairman.

Strake appears to have resolved the controversy within the party, or at least to have managed to control it so that it doesn't burst forth as it did at one well-publicized session at which one female activist slapped another.

"It really wasn't that much of a fight," one long-time party member says. "But it seems to be becoming something of a legend already."

The most recent meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee failed to produce that kind of excitement.

STRAKE DOESN'T really want that sort of excitement.

"The goal," he says, "was to keep the lid on all the folks," and to get them scrapping with the Democrats rather than with each other.

SREC's attention this time was on voter registration and an Oct. 27 fundraiser in Dallas which will feature President Reagan.

Re-electing Reagan and Sen. John Tower in 1984 are the key concerns for the GOP where Texas is concerned.

"Texas is generally conceded by all sides to be a key state, the key state, for 1984," Strake comments.

AND TOWER IS a key target for Texas Democrats who would love to see someone eliminate the GOP's senior statewide officeholder in Texas.

Tower, and his potential Democratic challengers (or at least some of those potential challengers), already are campaigning and raising funds.

Tower's last election didn't provide the sort of margin which necessarily comforts a politician.

Challenger Bob Krueger, who's eagerly seeking a rematch, calculates that two more votes per precinct would have given him the win and he's aiming at turning out those additional voters.

The Texas Democratic Party has approved spending $300,000 for a voter registration drive, aimed at adding 500,000 new voters by the 1984 election.

NEW ORLEANS consultant Dan McClung, who put together the highly successful telephone bank operations for Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in 1982, will be overseeing that effort.

SREC members have approved an attempt to register half a million Republican voters in time for the 1984 showdown.

That program, Strake says, isn't in any final form yet.

Part of the work, he reports, will be "the same standard thrust," using GOP county chairmen to conduct registration efforts in targeted areas.

The GOP, in 1978, had 186 county chairmen, while at last count there were 230 (with 254 counties in the state).

The GOP began 1983 in debt, so another goal, Strake says, "is to get ourselves on a sound financial footing."

TEXAS ALSO IS getting attention from the GOP at the national level, since Dallas will be the site of the 1984 national convention and the hosting state party wants to have everything in order by next August.

Strake believes the GOP will capture Texas in the presidential campaign and feels that Reagan can run successfully in the state on his record and policies.

Parents sue hospital over death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The parents of a 7-week-old girl have filed a damage suit against a San Antonio hospital after their daughter died following treatment there.

The child, Terri Lynn Garcia, was admitted to the hospital in July 1981 for treatment of diarrhea and dehydration, according to the suit filed Friday.

Jesse and Eloise Garcia's lawsuit makes no mention of the Bexar County grand jury currently investigating suspicious deaths at Medical Center Hospital from early 1978 to early 1982.

The grand jury has subpoenaed the records of all deaths in the pediatric unit between 1978 and 1982. The Garcia infant died Aug. 11, 1981.

Hospital personnel "negligently allowed her (the child) ventilatory pressures to become fatally altered" after the infant was placed on a respirator, the suit said.

A vocational nurse was indicted in Kerrville in May on charges she injected seven children with a powerful muscle relaxant, causing one death.

Lost in space?

The discovery of evidence that points to what may be another solar system in our own galaxy, the Milky Way, edges dangerously close to the age-old question of whether man's situation is unique in the universe.

Scientific imaginations are racing with the discovery that Vega, one of the brightest stars in the nighttime sky, is being circled by a 15 billion-mile shell of debris that could be a solar system or one of the formative stages of a solar system. The possibilities are endless.

The thought of whether this discovery even opens the door a bit wider to the possibility that man isn't alone in the universe isn't even in consideration at this point. Why should it be? Let's revel first and foremost in the realization that the tiny speck of light that our sun generates in the overall spectrum of the universe may not be the only such cosmic peculiarity "out there."

Of course, the unavoidable conclusion — if this discovery indeed proves to be another solar system — is that if there are other solar systems in this galaxy and, potentially, other universes in what may come to be known as the megauniverse, then surely there is a greater likelihood that somewhere another of those nighttime specks of light may harbor other forms of life.

But that is only interesting speculation at this point. For now, all that is known is that something is revolving around Vega, 150 trillion miles from Earth. During the next few months and years more will be learned and as it is, our concept of our own relationship in the universe likely will be altered.

Years ago, Carl Sagan said, "I would be very ashamed of my civilization if we did not try to find out if there is life in outer space." With the discovery of what scientists say may be yet another solar system, we think most people would agree.

Death of a gulf

While current estimates of the extent of damage to the Persian Gulf due to the Iran-Iraq war are almost as disparate as the victory claims made by both combatants, there is little doubt that all marine life in the gulf will become extinct if the conflict continues. And when that happens, Iran and Iraq will not be the only losers. The victims will include Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, Oman and Bahrain, whose shores are washed by the gulf.

Iraqi bombs and shells have caused blowouts in a group of Iranian wellheads in the offshore Noruz field which, over the past seven months, have been spilling a daily average of 5,000 barrels of oil into the gulf. The spills have created several massive slicks which can not be pin-pointed from the air because they lie a foot or two below the surface.

The World Wildlife Fund has reported that the spill already has killed extraordinary numbers of fish, turtles, dolphins, birds and sea cows, whose carcasses have drifted onto the tar-stained beaches of the bordering nations. The fund has stated, unequivocally, that the gulf is "rapidly dying."

World-wide horror over the situation is heightened by the realization that absolutely nothing can be done to halt the spillage while the three-year-old war grinds on. Efforts to obtain a cease-fire and to separate the conflict from environmental concerns have encountered an almost suicidal intransigence on both sides of the war.

However the Iran-Iraq war is eventually resolved, the loss of the gulf as a life-sustaining force is a loss that will have to be shared by the world.

Another View:

Invented in USSR

More than 20 years ago, the Soviet Union promised the people of the U.S.S.R. they would have "the highest standard of living in the world by 1980."

The year 1980 is long gone but the promise remains unfulfilled — and the Kremlin is still trying its con job.

The latest reform to be announced is a plan to loosen the current rigid controls over some selected industries. The experiments, which are scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1, supposedly are designed to boost the production of machinery, electrical equipment, food and other goods.

In the Soviet Union, that is more easily said than done. Agriculture is an example of Kremlin folly. Not too long ago, the Soviet Union was the world's biggest exporter of grain; today it is the biggest importer. Russia's formerly impressive steel production now is on the skids.

Western experts point out that the decree is unclear about how many enterprises were involved and how long the experiments would last.

The decree would give selected businesses a freer rein in determining how to reward good workers, introduce labor-saving technology and plow profits back into production.

There seems to be a familiar ring in the decree. If perchance the experiments ever should become reality, Moscow is likely to announce that it has invented the free enterprise system.

ART BUCHWALD

Quick! Send a chainsaw!

What happened was that a few years ago people started giving us houseplants instead of cut flowers. The children gave their mother a palm tree for Mother's Day; they gave me a philodendron for Father's Day and three dieffenbachias for Christmas.

Art Buchwald

My wife put them in the living room. The relatives brought a snake plant a few months later, and a friend presented us with a fatsia plant which my wife put in the library to help "cheer" it up.

She dutifully watered them and talked to them and they started to grow ... and grow ... and grow. Then she decided the living room looked bare and bought some grape ivy which she wrapped around the fake balcony and some aspidistras which she placed in the corner near the television set.

Someone sent us a schefflera for an anniversary, and friends who have a farm in the Shenandoah trucked in two spider plants which were put in the dining room. A future son-in-law presented us with three rubber plants, and on my birthday I was given a potted elephant's-ears all of my own. My daughter, who was going away to college, asked us if we would keep her weeping fig plants while she was away, and someone, I can't remember who, sent us a box of screw pines.

The house looked green and lovely for a short while. But then a strange thing happened. The plants kept getting larger and larger. First they took over the living room. We realized this when the man who came to fix the TV set got lost and was never heard from again. My wife wanted me to search for him, but I said to her, "Are you kidding? That living room's a jungle."

One Saturday I bought a machete and tried to chop a trail through the living room to my library. But after four hours I realized it was hopeless. The more I hacked away, the faster the houseplants grew. We closed off the living room.

We were sitting in the dining room one evening when I noticed I couldn't see anyone at the table. It was an eerie feeling as I shouted through the palm leaves: "Is anybody there?" I thought I heard a voice coming from the end of the table saying, "You Tarzan, me Jane," but it could have been the wind. I looked up and saw one of my children sitting in a branch of the palm tree. "What are you doing up there? Sit down and eat your dinner."

"Where can I sit?" she wanted to know.

"In your chair," I said.

"I can't find my chair," she said.

"Do you think they'll ever send a rescue ship to find us?"

That night I said to my wife, "We've got to move out of the dining room. It's not safe to eat there any more."

"They're only plants," she said.

"What about scorpions and snakes? You can't have that much foliage without scorpions."

We put some defoliant down between the dining room and kitchen and started to eat all our meals in the kitchen. Occasionally, a kangaroo vine or the grape ivy tried to sneak in, but I kept an ax by my side and every once in a while I chopped off a length of it before it crawled to our food.

My doctor warned me to stay out of the library unless I wanted to take a gamble on catching malaria or yellow fever.

Despite our efforts to keep the plants from getting into the kitchen, a yucca tree crushed the door down and in a matter of a week the kitchen was a forest.

One evening I lost my wife for four hours, and only by luck stumbled over her next to the Waring blender. Worse, both the dog and the cat had become wild and we decided to free them to live the life of their ancestors, before they had been domesticated by man.

Two weeks later we moved everyone up to the second floor of the house but the plants followed us. At first we kept them at bay by starting small forest fires and removing the staircase, but the vines began climbing the walls.

I am now writing this from our attic on the third floor. If anyone reads this please send help! We have enough food to last us one more week. Tell the helicopter pilot we have a gray mansard roof. That's the only thing he can see from the air.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Candidates possess good health

WASHINGTON — The American presidency is one of the toughest jobs in the world, even for someone as laidback as Ronald Reagan. The job has drastically aged most of those who have served in the White House — and has rushed some of them to an early grave.

Jack Anderson

So you might think anyone running for president would not only want to be in tiptop physical shape but would want the public to know it. Betting that my readers are also curious about the candidates' health, I assigned reporters Laurie Siegel and Lucette Lagnado to ask all the candidates for details of their physical condition. The information was sought from each candidate's personal physician, which of course required the patient's permission.

The results of the inquiry were a little surprising. Some candidates were extremely cooperative. Some were not. Here's the rundown:

— President Reagan: Following standard practice, the Reagan White House refused to divulge any information about the president's health. This reticence is worrisome. If re-elected, Reagan would be less than three weeks shy of his 78th birthday by the time he finished his second term. That's beating the actuarial tables by several years.

Yet despite some obvious infirmities of age — such as the fact that he's hard of hearing — all the public gets from the White House is reports of his remarkably robust health, along with an occasional story about him chopping wood like some young Abe Lincoln.

As for the Democratic hopefuls:

— Reubin Askew: The 54-year-old former Florida governor is in overall excellent health, according to his physician. Askew does have a chronic, degenerative disc problem in his lower back, but it hasn't bothered him in years, the doctor said.

Askew recovered normally from a hernia operation in 1981, and had no significant complaints during his last physical exam at about that time. He used to jog and play tennis, but restricts his exercise to calisthenics while he's campaigning.

— Sen. Alan Cranston: The Californian is 69, but the latest general information on the state of his health was a memo issued by his press secretary in 1979. The only updates have been periodical announcements of his current weight. Last February, it was 180 pounds.

The memo four years ago was a curiously second-hand document: It summarized a telephone conversation between the press secretary and Cranston's physician. The senator's condition was described as "excellent," with "no significant health problems." Though he would be the oldest president ever inaugurated, no current information was available. Despite Cranston's jocular description of himself as looking like "death warmed over," he is a devoted jogger and appears to be in good physical shape.

— Sen. John Glenn of Ohio: For more than three weeks, the senator's office promised to provide information on the candidate's health, but none was forthcoming. Glenn's press secretary said a health report would be made available sometime this summer.

As a decorated Marine combat pilot in World War II and Korea, and later one of the original astronauts, Glenn was clearly in above-average physical condition in his younger days. He had to withdraw from his first Senate race in 1964 after cracking his skull in a bathroom fall. His staff said there were no lasting effects. Glenn is 62.

— Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado: At 45 the youngest of the candidates, Hart takes synthroid, a medication necessitated by an operation in 1972 that removed a benign thyroid nodule. His doctor stated that Hart was in excellent health at the time of his last physicial in August 1982.

— Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina: The 61-year-old World War II artillery officer seems to be in good health, but his office provided little information to judge by. A letter from his doctor in South Carolina to his Washington physician stated that a physical exam in May 1982 showed him to be in normal health.

— Walter F. Mondale: The 55-year-old former vice president provided the most extensive data on his health. On Mondale's instructions to withhold nothing, his doctor for the past 20 years sent me a detailed statement.

In generally excellent health, Mondale does suffer from mild hypertension and takes two antihypertensive medications to control it: 50 milligrams of hydralazine and a capsule of dyazide three times a day. Concerning this drug use, the doctor wrote:

"Because of his concern with his duties as a public office holder, he has always been insistent that we try to avoid any drugs that might in any way be mood altering or fatigue producing, and it is because of this that he is on his current medication rather than some of the newer antihypertensive drugs."

Mondale sprained his ankle playing tennis last May, but he had no other complaints during a physical exam four days later, the doctor wrote. Mondale smokes three or four cigars a day and has one or two drinks.

Finally, the independent candidate:

— John Anderson: At 61, the former congressman has what his doctor described as a minor heart murmur, and because of this he takes penicillin before and after trips to the dentist. That's the only medication he takes, and his doctor said Anderson is in excellent health.

He swims regularly for about 40 minutes at a stretch, has one or two drinks an evening, and had no complaints at his last physical exam in December. At various times in the past 15 years, Anderson has broken each arm and dislocated his right shoulder. Everything healed normally.

GEORGE F. WILL

Flashdancing to happiness

WASHINGTON — On the morning of what was to be a momentous day, I decided to dip a toe into the rushing stream of the modern world by seeing the movie "Flashdance." Little did I then suspect that this movie, about which the intelligentsia has been quite rude, actually unlocks the mystery of the human race's place in the cosmos.

George F. Will

It is about a young lady welder (no kidding) in Pittsburgh who in the evenings performs in a blue-collar bar where she dances like a dervish and twists her comely self as though she is auditioning for the role of a soft pretzel.

Like "Breaking Away," which was set in Bloomington, Ind., and "Personals," which was set in Minneapolis-St. Paul, and "Diner," which was set in Baltimore, "Flashdance" is almost lyrical about a place that does not often evoke lyricism. ("O, Pittsburgh"? "Let us now praise Bloomington"?)

Our lady welder is to her gender, and her end of Pennsylvania, what "Rocky" was to Philadelphia. She is a monument to upward mobility through sweat. By grit and pluck (and pumping iron) she dances her way into, yes, of course, our hearts, but also into ballet school. In the last scene she is in the arms of her lover, another upwardly mobile type who has risen from a rough neighborhood to a Porsche, and owns the dark, satanic mill where our lady welds.

Her language is, I gather, a badge of emancipation these days. That is, it would cause blushes beneath deck in a troop ship. But her clothes have become a commercial force. In the Juniors department at Woodward & Lothrop in Chevy Chase, Md., and across this broad land, you can buy the "Flashdance" look.

When our heroine wends her weary way home after a hard day over the acetylene torch, she slips into something...well, "comfortable" hardly does justice to it. It is so loose she almost slips right out again. The Flashdance look is a ragged sweatshirt hanging off one fetching shoulder and barely hanging on the other. A tear or two is required, and at stores that know their stuff you can now buy pre-torn and elegantly unfinished garments. For half-hearted flashdancers, some garments come equipped with snaps that can snap up the torn look and make the thing whole for, I guess, formal occasions.

What is the world coming to? To a place it has been before. In his new book "Lost in the Cosmos: The Last Self-Help Book," Walker Percy recalls that when Wallis Warfield Simpson appeared at Ascot with the second button of her blouse inadvertently unbuttoned, lots of women began leaving their second buttons unbuttoned. And when John Wayne was filming "Red River," and his belt buckle slipped to one side, lots of men slipped their buckles sideward.

What is going on in such cases? The pursuit of happiness, of course. But why, Percy wonders, does such behavior produce happiness?

Cosmos? I thought we were in places like Pittsburgh. Percy says: Pittsburgh, cosmos, what's the difference? The fading of religious explanations of mankind's place in the cosmos has left the self dislocated and without identity. So people put on new identities — Mrs. Simpson's, or John Wayne's, or our lady welder's.

Liberated by skepticism from the restraints of religion, by democracy from social oppression, by technology from drudgery, the modern individual is free to do as he or she pleases. And what does it please him or her to do? Unbutton the second button, slip the belt sideward, don a pre-torn jersey.

This is not to say that modern life is problem-free. Percy cites this letter to Dear Abby: "I am a 23-year-old liberated woman who has been on The Pill for two years. It's getting pretty expensive and I think my boyfriend should share half the cost, but I don't know him well enough to discuss money with him." That lady may be lost in the cosmos, and so may we all be, whether we know it or not. But the lady welder, unlike those derivative selves who want to dress like her, is comfortable in the cosmos, and not just because her clothes are so comfortable.

EDITOR'S REPORT

SAN SIMEON — There is not a day goes by since his death 32 years ago that I don't miss Pop and appreciate him as a thoughtful, loving father and a great newspaperman.

As usual, I think about him even more deeply when I'm here at his ranch.

In February 1941, Pop composed a moving poem near where his mother had a home. It is generally recognized as a touching and important contribution to American poetry.

Song of the River

The snow melts on the mountain
And the water runs down to the spring,
And the spring in a turbulent fountain,
With a song of youth to sing,
Runs down to the riotous river,
And the river flows to the sea,
And the water again
Goes back in rain
To the hills where it used to be.

And I wonder if life's deep mystery
Isn't much like the rain and the snow
Returning through all eternity
To the places it used to know.

For life was born on the lofty heights
And flows in a laughing stream,
To the river below
Whose onward flow
Ends in a peaceful dream.

And so at last,
When our life has passed
And the river has run its course,
It again goes back,
O'er the selfsame track,
To the mountain which was its source.

So why prize life
Or why fear death,
Or dread what is to be?
The river ran its alloted span
Till it reached the silent sea.
Then the water harked back to the mountaintop

To begin its course once more.
So we shall run the course begun
Till we reach the silent shore,
Then revisit earth in a pure rebirth

From the heart of the virgin snow.
So don't ask why we live or die,
Or whither, or when we go,
Or wonder about the mysteries
That only God may know.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Lawful concern

To The Editor:

It has been recently stated in a Reporter-Telegram editorial that society will not condone those who break even the "basic of rules." It was stated that the breaking of basic rules leads to the destruction of social order.

In recent times, though, two Midlanders who admittedly broke one of our game laws will now be required to be removed from our society.

Nothing done by these two men could possibly affect the future destruction of our society's moral fiber like that caused by the simple existence of a video arcade or a skating rink. Where were your children last night?

These are native Midlanders who instead of continuing to work and add to the growth and stability of Midland, will, for the next six months, be the taxpayers burden. I feel the future will reveal that these men and their families will suffer more from the killing of a black bear than some have had to from the killing of a black man. Is taking another life not one of our most basic rules?

It is now J.C. Short's time to rely on his society for a fair trial. His only handicap is facing an all-out attempt by United States Fish and Wildlife Service agents Jim Stinebaugh and Jesus Bustamente to use all available tactics to cripple him at our expense.

On July 27th, three Midlanders were allowed to post bond of $2,500 in Midland County and go home to their families. Mr. Short, after receiving this information, started his trip to Texas. He had made arrangements with his attorney and the U.S. marshal to appear in Midland at 1:30 p.m. July 29th. He was arrested at 8 a.m. July 29th by Stinebaugh and Bustamente at DFW. His trip to Midland was cancelled. Being only hours from where he had agreed to be, he was arrested, denied a bondsman, required to post $25,000 cash bond in full and as of August 2nd was still being detained at our expense. Credit Stinebaugh and Bustamente, of course.

There were times in Midland if we needed a patrolman we felt secure knowing all we probably needed to do was drive a one-ton truck past Tom Sloan's house. Again we sleep secure, for should we need a game warden, they are probably at the courthouse building a gallows for J.C. Short.

Clean commons

To The Editor:

A common is a tract of public land. More specifically, it is any area where the public might converge, or trespass, even if it is privately owned. Roads, roadsides, grocery stores, malls, parks, our perhaps less-than-scenic-to-some countryside are examples of commons.

A basic moral value, based on respect for ourselves, others and this beautiful delicate earth (the only one we have — but still so, even if it wasn't) is that we ought to clean up after ourselves and keep our commons clean. It would seem to me that this is a universal value.

Locally, we try to deal with our wastes by having sewer systems, trash canisters, a trash collecting system and designated waste disposal areas. We have these systems for health, moral and aesthetic reasons. Should we not do these things for ourselves and our environment?

Then please try to explain to me why so many people treat our commons like garbage cans. Why do they think they can dump their trash wherever they please without regard toward others or the land? These selfish slobs exist in excess in Midland. I wonder why that is?

At Cuthbert and Andrews Highway the other day, a child in the car next to me opened his door and set out some trash in the road and shut the door. I was aghast. His mother just let him do that. Did they feel they had a right to do that? What did they think would happen to that trash? Did they think that we all have so much money we'd like to spend it on taxes for street cleaners? Did they think the winds here are so calm that the trash stays in the streets long enough to be swept up? Perhaps they think that Midland is so ugly that a little more trash wouldn't hurt.

I got out of my car and picked up their trash. I looked over at them and the mother laughed at me. This group looked like a nice family. How could they be so crude? I've seen many people toss things out of their cars, but this is the first time I've come face-to-face with one. They laughed, but they wouldn't look at me. The boy covered his eyes. Good. I hope, when he got home and was all by himself, that he felt bad.

After my anger subsided, my heart felt wrenched from my chest. I felt embarrassed for the mother, I felt sorry for her children being raised to believe it is alright to defecate in the middle of the road or on any common.

Unfortunately, this woman will probably not read this letter. I doubt she cares about the opinions, rights, beliefs and feelings of others enough to read what they have to say. But, as common as littering is, I cannot believe it is the consensus of this city that it is alright to be a filthy slob outside the privacy of one's home.

Please teachers, ministers, parents, teach the children that it is wrong to litter. Show them why it is wrong to arbitrarily trash out God's precious earth. Maybe they will grow up to be better, more decent human beings than their parents.

Poor streets

To The Editor:

Ditto! Amen! and Right On! to Richard Posey's letter in your publication of Friday, Aug. 5 pertaining to the "atrocious traffic management by the city."

While Mr. Posey was complaining primarily about the random striping of low volume two-lane streets as opposed to no striping of high volume six-lane streets, my concern with traffic hazards in the city has to do with the sorry condition of the street surfaces. It is impossible to drive any street in Midland without hitting a chug hole, ditch dug across the street and not properly filled, ruts grooved out due to improper paving, rocks, and the list goes on.

Now we are told that our taxes will be increased again so that the city can repair the streets. How long has it been since our taxes were increased for the same purpose? Perhaps instead of spending the increase on materials to repair the streets the money was used for more machinery to tear up the streets so another tax could be levied to buy materials to repair the streets.

The logic of our city's traffic management makes about as much sense as the foregoing sentence. And, by the way, no street in Midland is sacred. They just yesterday dug a ditch across the street on which I live and, yes, you guessed it — they left the dirt about three inches below the pavement when they refilled the ditch.

Veteran disability

To The Editor:

It wasn't a crime for our government to take us into the military service and send us off to fight senseless wars that no one understands or knows why they were fought.

There were some of us sent on duty with a pistol, rifle or some other kind of gun, but — you guessed it — no ammunition in our guns. Now don't you agree this is worse than no gun at all?

We came home from this to find no one cared enough about our disabilities to compensate us. Yes, we're the forgotten ones. The lawyers are all tied up protecting and taking care of the criminals' civil rights. You know the ones you people out there, when you get on the jury, are afraid of. Too afraid to bring in a verdict of guilty against them because a smart lawyer might get them out on bond or get them completely free to go commit another crime against you people we fought for so you could be free. Then you turn this freedom over to the criminal.

I ask you is it such a crime now that we only ask for fair compensation and medical treatment for our aggravated illnesses, wounds, terrible night mares of what we've been through as a prisoner of war or other affliction, even when our own people afflicted us with Agent Orange? Yes, we're still silently dying for your freedom. Thank you, you criminals that commit a crime many a time so you'll go to prison, so you won't have to fight for the freedom of others. Why! Why! Why!

Media terms

To The Editor:

It is bad enough this country has had to suffer through the long trials and tribulations of Watergate. Now Americans have to put up with all sorts of scandals that government officials have supposedly done and who are already guilty before the jury has sentenced the accused.

I am not knocking the media on Watergate, but I do get tired of hearing all these new terms the media comes up with. For example, since Watergate, Americans have had to put up with Abscam and Debategate.

I wonder what the media will call this recent incident with Senators Crane and Studds? The media will probably coin this as Sexgate. It wasn't too many years ago that people didn't even now the word scandal!

SPEAKING OUT

Persons in interracial links...silent minority

By J.R. HUNT

J.R. Hunt came to Midland three years ago from the Houston area. In March of this year, she started Interracial Families and Friends, a group that provides support and friendship for those involved in interracial relationships.

There is a silent minority in America today. Thousands of men, women and children who are trying to make their way in a world that tries to pretend they don't exist. Who are these people? They are the people involved in interracial relationships. Have you ever wondered, even idly, where these people come from? Are they "different" from the rest of the world? I have discovered that these people come from all segments of society, from the high to the low. They are just people, from no special group or class.

The big question however, is whether they have problems dealing with our society at large. When I first talk to someone in this type of relationship, the invariable answer to the above question is "no." "No problems," they say. "Everything is just fine," another responds. But, when I get to know them a little better, their feelings start coming out in the open. The anger, fear, frustration and rejection that they all experience to a greater or lesser degree lies just below the surface. Especially the children. Most of all the children whose grandparents have disowned them, or who will see them only in a secretive manner away from the prying eyes of neighbors, friends and other relatives. These children hurt.

An anglo woman approached me in the store a few months back while I was wheeling a shopping cart along with my obviously interracial baby seated in it.

"Excuse me," she said, "but are you adopting your baby?"

A LITTLE annoyed, I looked at her for a moment before answering. "Yes, I am," I finally said. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, that's great," she replied in a relieved voice. "My husband and I have just adopted this little Mexican baby and I have been dying to talk to someone in the same situation."

I looked at her baby sleeping in the cart. A gorgeous baby, fat, with skin as white as snow. He had coal black hair and beautiful long black lashes.

"Well," I smiled, "I would say you were very lucky to get this little one."

"WE FEEL THAT way," she said a little nervously. "But there's no one to talk to about the, ah, unique situation we're in. Not that we expect to ever have any problems with it."

"No, of course not," I replied, making myself equally guilty of the sin of denial.

We talked for a few minutes. Both of us were nervous, slightly suspicious and needy. We exchanged phone numbers, both promising to call the other. She never called me, but I called her a few weeks later. The conversation went as follows:

"Hi Betty, this is J.R. Remember me?"

"Who?"

"You know, the lady with the interracial baby."

"Oh ... yes," silence.

"How are things going?"

"Oh fine, fine."

"Any problems with your baby, any of the things we talked about?"

"No, everything is fine. Everyone has been just wonderful. All my family has accepted him. No discrimination. After all, it's so hard to get a white baby. We were on a waiting list for so long. I think everyone understood when we took a Mexican baby," she finished with a slightly hysterical tone.

"WELL, I REALLY didn't mean to upset you," I said.

"Oh, you didn't, not at all, no problem," she said quickly.

"I just wanted to let you know I am starting a little group for people like ourselves, people involved in interracial relationships. I thought you might be interested."

"Sure, sure, sounds great," Betty replied. "I don't know that we will ever need anything like that," she added, "but I'm sure it will be good for a lot of other people."

I hung up feeling pretty foolish and confused. The next time I called her, her phone had been disconnected.

I HAVE SINCE learned the problem of denial is foremost. Denial that there is any kind of problem with friends, relatives, co-workers, neighbors or anyone else. Denial until there is too much suffering to deny anymore. I wish I had known that when I talked to Betty. Maybe I could have helped.

Interracial Families and Friends is a group formed to deal with various problems that come up as a result of the interracial relationship. We also hope to form a community of friendship. A community of people with whom we can share the good times as well as the bad. We want a group for the children who are in these relationships so that they might have someone to talk to, laugh with and be a part of. The group is based on Christian principles, such as love and tolerance of others. IFF is not a political organization; it doesn't support or oppose causes. IFF does not encourage or discourage interracial relationships. We believe that such things are personal matters and everyone must make up their own mind about it. IFF is here for the simple purpose of encouraging and supporting those persons already involved in interracial relationships.

The promotion of harmony and meaningful dialogue between the various ethnic and racial groups is a goal worthy not only of IFF, but of all caring persons.

BILL MODISETT

Diminishing value of life increases our responsibilities

Bill Modisett

Mark Twain used to observe, "When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be 21, I was astonished at how much he had learned in seven years."

My, the passing of time does clear the field of vision.

Abortion wasn't a pretty topic when it was being debated a decade ago; it's not a pretty topic today. But in the past 10 years we've had an opportunity to look at the concerns voiced by pro-abortionists during the great debate prior to the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized it.

During the carnival atmosphere of the 1970s, we were swept up by a wave of liberalism that rode the crest of the Vietnam War protest, tore homes apart and ushered in the sexual revolution. With the sexual revolution came an explosion of unwanted pregnancies. All of a sudden there were literally thousands of men and women who seemed to believe the sexual revolution diminished their role as human beings, their responsibility for their actions. It didn't.

The liberalized ideas given in justifying abortion — the women who died in sleazy backrooms under untrained and uncaring hands, the rape victims, the unwanted children whose lives seemed to justify the hope of never having been born — all were legitimate concerns of a civilized society. But were those concerns so pressing that they justified the taking of life? Not hardly.

The core reason for justifying abortion — supposedly providing men and women an "option" that relieved them of responsibility — was doomed from the beginning.

Attempts to escape responsibility for your actions always come back to haunt you. What has the new sexual freedom given Texas? The Texas Department of Community Affairs says that more than half of all teenagers in the state 15-19 years of age are sexually active now. Gonorrhea in teenage girls jumped by 313 percent in the state between 1970 and 1977. One-third of all legal abortions are now obtained by teenagers. And that's just one aspect of the abortion impact.

Sexual freedom doesn't eliminate responsibility; it increases it. There's more of a social burden today than there was 10 years ago when the pro-abortionists convinced the Supreme Court it could eliminate a lot of our problems by making abortion a legal birth-control method. But whose life is at stake here? Who is to say that a fetus is not alive until its lungs are filled with air when modern medical research has shown that patients under hypnosis can remember sounds, emotions, feelings, experienced when they were in the womb?

In the United States today, even in the worst New York City slums, there is no justification for ending life. That decision is made only in the hope of relieving responsibility which is an impossibility.

No, in 10 years we've merely confirmed a principle stressed to us by anti-abortionists and clergymen during the great abortion debate: Life is precious. If we diminish the value of that life in any way, we will increase, not diminish, our responsibilities.

With every freedom goes a responsibility that can't be avoided. So it is with our new sexual freedom and our controversial method of birth control.

As Mark Twain noted, it sometimes takes the passing of time to see a subject clearly.

Landry announces 10 lineup changes

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry has announced an unprecedented 10 lineup changes for Dallas' preseason game against the Los Angeles Rams on Monday night, including Gary Hogeboom at the starting quarterback position.

Landry says he is making good on an off-season pledge to give the second string a chance in preseason, although he has never made so many lineup changees in his 24 years as Cowboys coach.

Landry said Friday that no players have lost their starting positions and said he plans to put starting quarterback Danny White in during the second and fourth quarters, and play backup Glenn Carano, who did not play in the Cowboys' win over Miami last week, during the third and fourth.

Hogeboom saw the lineup decision as his shot at White's starting position, but Landry said he "has all the confidence in the world" in White.

"I think Danny has earned his position and he has performed well," Landry said.

Other new starters on offense will be wide receivers Doug Donley and Butch Johnson and guard Howard Richards. The changes on defense give starting positions to end Larry Bethea, tackle Don Smerek, linebacker Jeff Rohrer, cornerbacks Rod Hill and Ron Fellows and strong safety Monty Hunter.

With Pony Express gone...

Who will deliver mail for SMU?

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist hasn't lost a game since Oct. 24, 1981, but the "Pony Express" is long gone. So who will deliver the winning messages in 1983?

That's the big question for the Mustangs, who lost their tailback tandem of All-America Eric Dickerson and Craig James, both consistent 1,000-yard rushers.

SMU, seeking its third consecutive Southwest Conference title, finished the 1982 season as the only unbeaten team in collegiate football.

A tie with Arkansas cost the Mustangs the mythical national title as they finished second to Penn State in the final Associated Press poll.

SMU defeated Pittsburgh 7-3 in the Cotton Bowl Classic to close out Coach Bobby Collins' highly successful campaign. Collins gave all the credit to his seniors.

"Several times we were down and in trouble, but our seniors brought us back each time," Collins said. "They brought us through when it didn't look good at times."

But don't feel sorry for the Mustangs, who have some talented underclassmen available this fall.

Reggie Dupard, Gary Hashaway and freshman Jeff Atkins, the most highly sought running back in the Texas schoolboy ranks, give the Mustangs some tailback threats.

And then there is quarterback Lance McIlhenny, who scored the winning touchdown and was the Most Valuable Offensive Player in the Cotton Bowl game.

SMU is 24-1-1 since McIlhenny won the starting job in 1981. He's slow of foot and erratic of arm — but he wins.

"He's a tremendous competitor," said Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz. "One of the best I've ever seen."

"We feel very comfortable offensively with Lance at quarterback and with an experienced line," Collins said.

Defensively, SMU lost some big horses, including 270-pound noseguard Michael Carter, who decided to forego football to concentrate on the shot put in the Olympics.

Also missing will be defensive tackle Kevin Chaney, end Russell Washington, linebacker Gary Moten and crack safeties Blane Smith and Wes Hopkins.

SMU does return one of the most celebrated cornerbacks in the country in Russell Carter, a tough tackler and a ball-hawk supreme.

"Our defense will be stronger than people realize although we lost some very good talent," Collins said.

Dodgers rip Cubs, 14-8

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After the excellent baseball seen at Cubs Stadium during the current homestand, Saturday's 14-8 victory by the San Antonio Dodgers over the Midland Cubs was a backward movement in entertainment.

Oh, the bleary-eyed, late night fan, who likes his offense, would have loved this one. The baseball purist wouldn't and didn't.

The teams combined for 22 runs, 33 hits, six errors, eight extra base knocks, including four homers, and eight swinging away infield singles.

Toss in four wild pitches, the Cubs' inability to score with key runners in position and some bad base running and you have Saturday's game in a nutshell. It almost seemed to be one of those games where nobody won and nobody survived.

San Antonio would probably dispute that, especially first baseman Dale Holman and third baseman Larry See. Holman got five hits in six trips to the plate and knocked in two runs, one with his 10th homer of the year in the third. See got four hits in five official trips up and knocked in two runs with his all-singles attack.

Robbie Allen, however, set the tone for the night in the second inning when his one-out, three-run homer off Cub starter and loser Darrly Banks (11-10) gave the Dodgers a lead they never relinquished. The Dodgers ended up with five second inning runs to erase a 2-0 Cub lead and it was downhill the rest of the way.

Holman connected off Banks to lead off the third and by the time the inning was over, San Antonio held an 8-2 margin. Eventually the Dodgers led by as much as 11-3 before winner Charlie Jones (2-1) tired in the seventh when Midland scored three times with four infield singles and Mike Anicich's 20th homer of the year, a two-run shot to left.

Trey Brooks also got a homer, his 10th, in the sixth. That one was a solo shot to left, but it marked the third time this year that Brooks has belted a homerun in the sixth inning, which is the Homerun for the Money promotion inning.

The Midland offense did a pretty good job producing eight runs with the wind blowing in, but every time the Cubs would cut the margin, San Antonio added to the damage off four Cub hurlers.

Still, Randy LaVigne kept his torrid on-base show going in full gear. LaVigne has been on base 16 times in his last 22 plate appearances. His 2-for-3 night Saturday gives him nine hits in his last 15 official trips to the plate and he has walked seven times in that span.

The Cubs' biggest enemy, however, was the inability to hit with runners in scoring position when they could have done some real damage. The Cubs had runners at second and third in the second and didn't score. They left a runner at second in the third without scoring and left a runner at third in the one-run sixth.

In the seventh, the Cubs scored three times, but may have short-changed themselves. LaVigne tried to score from second on a high bouncing infeild single by A.J. Hill, but was thrown out at the plate. It was not a good time to be taking the extra base down four runs and two out.

The Cubs also had the bases loaded in the ninth with no outs, but Don Hyman got only one run home when he bounced into a double play and reliever Morris Madden KOed Hill on strikes to end the game.

None of the Cub relievers proved to be effective as 21 San Antonio hits might indicate. The Dodgers had a five-run second, three-run third, three-run sixth and two-run eighth for the victory.

CUB PRINTS: The two teams meet again today at 7:30 p.m. with Cub newcomer Richard Buonantany scheduled to get his first start with Midland since being called up from Class A Salinas this week...Monday's 7:30 p.m. contest will feature an appearance by the San Diego Chicken and tickets for that game are on sale at Cubs Stadium now. State Slo-pitch Open finals today

Four teams were still undefeated as the Texas Men's Open Slo-Pitch softball tournament moved into games late Saturday night. Champs of Amarillo, Texas Federal Mortage of Conroe, Texas Capitals of Seguin and Norton's of Stephenville were leading the way.

Teams with one loss included Empire of Lubbock, B&I Testers of Goldsmith, Alvin Gunners of Alvin; Luke Grace Drilling of Wichita Falls, Stadium Sports of Midland; Bowie Steers of Bowie; EPS Raiders of Woodsboro and the Alvin Rascels.

Play resumes today at 9 a.m. in the 32-team double elimination tournament. Finals are scheduled at 1 p.m. today at the Hogan Park complex.

Tampa Bay nips Houston at wire

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Jerry Golsteyn completed three consecutive passes in a game-winning drive and James Owens scored the winning touchdown on a one-yard run with 57 seconds left in the game as the Tampa Bay Bucs rallied past the Houston Oilers 23-17 Saturday night in a National Football League exhibition game.

Golsteyn, who engineered a 20-point fourth quarter last week that rallied the Bucs past New Orleans, hit on consecutive passes of 11, 16 and 17 yards with time running out to keep Tampa Bay unbeaten in preseason play with a 2-0 record.

A 25-yard pass interference call against Houston safety Mike Reinfeldt gave the Bucs a first down at Houston's 10. From that point, Melvin Carver rushed for 6, 2 and 1 yard prior to Owens' TD plunge.

Houston's Earl Campbell, seeing his first action of the season, rushed 67 yards on 16 carries and scored on a one-yard dive as the Oilers took a 17-13 halftime lead.

The Oilers, 0-2, also scored in the first half on quarterback Archie Manning's two-yard pass to rookie tight end Mike McCloskey and Florian Kempf's 39-yard field goal.

Tampa Bay quarterback Jack Thompson ran four yards for a touchdown early in the second quarter and then hit Gerald Carter with a four-yard touchdown catch with 36 seconds left in the half.

Story says half NFLers use coke

NEW YORK (AP) — Cocaine is used by as many as 50 percent of the players in the National Football League, according to a copyrighted newspaper story.

Quoting unnamed sources within the league, Sunday's New York Daily News also said that "hardcore" users make up more than 20 percent of the league's 1,372 players.

"On the average," according to a source, "there are about 10 players on a team that are hardcore. The numbers are higher than many people could ever imagine."

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle told the newspaper, "You have done your research well." He did not give any specific figures.

Baylor's Teaff all for raised entrance standards

Colleges took a drastic step last winter by upping admission standards for freshman athletes. They are now supposed to be able to read and write. Although the action resulted in a howl of protest over the injustice of it all, Baylor Coach Grant Teaff believes it is "a step forward."

Teaff feels a failure to do well in the ACT test does not necessarily mean a student can not do college work, "and I think that will be changed."

"Baylor University feels that if a student can go through a Texas high school with a C average, he can graduate from Baylor," says Teaff.

Baylor, Teaff says, already is ahead of the game in that freshmen are informed that they must reach certain goals and are assured they will receive help where necessary.

PLAYERS ARE tutored in the area in which they are weakest—usually English. They are required to take courses, without credit. "They come out with the capacity to pass," says Teaff.

"If a player misses more than one class, no cuts are allowed, he is docked one day participation in practice. If you miss a practice, you don't play in a game."

"It leaves Grant Teaff open to criticism," says the Baylor coach, "but last spring three players in 122 missed workouts."

As a result of the strict monitoring of athletes, Baylor graduates from 63 to 65 per cent of the players who go into their sophomore year. This is based on the CFA's four-year retention factor. Considering the criticism some colleges have received regarding the appalling graduation rate of its athletes, this is an impressive figure. The general student body's graduation rate, for example, is only 50 percent.

"Joe Paterno claims a 90 per cent graduation rate at Penn State, but that's for those starting their senior year," says Teaff. "Last year, 28 of our 31 seniors graduated."

What probably pleases Teaff as much as anything about the NCAA's new get-tough policy is that the coaches are the ones who pushed for it.

ANOTHER SECTOR that has paid dividends, in Teaff's estimation, is the 30-scholarship rule. It was supposed to bring some form of parity to college football by preventing the USCs, Notre Dames, Penn States, Alabamas, Texas' and Arkansas' from hogging all the talent.

Those teams are still prominent factors in college football each year, but Teaff points out that Arkansas and Texas no longer dominate the SWC the way they once did. "Look it up, Baylor and SMU, both privage schools, have won two titles in the last 10 years."

"Before the 30 scholarship rule, Texas had won six straight at one point and Arkansas won the other two. Since the rule was adopted, Baylor has won one, SMU two, Texas has won only one and Arkansas hasn't won any."

Still, when it comes to this year's race, Teaff likes the chances of Texas, although the Longhorns don't have a proven quarterback and they have the usual graduation-caused holes to fill.

"Texas moves head because of its depth in the offensive and defensive lines." Teaff feels that the team with line domination will usually win, although he admits his 1980 Baylor team was one of the few teams to win without that domination.

Teaff adds, "When we met Texas in our last game, they were the best team we played all year."

ELSEWHERE in the SWC, Teaff thumbnails:

"Arkansas—any team coached by Lou Holtz will be in the top two or three."

"Texas Tech—one of the most improved, and came on strong in 1982."

"Houston—keep an eye on the Cougars. They have a good quarterback and Yeoman is seldom out of it for long."

"SMU—They will be good, if only because McIlhenny is back at quarterback."

"TCU—probably has its best athletes in several years. Jim (Wacker) is a winner and his job will be to transplant that winning attitude, which may take a while."

"Rice—hard to evaluate."

It's perfect way to pass time

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A real baseball fan is a guy who knows that Bobo Newsom's real original nickname was Buck. He knows the answer to, "What was Babe Ruth's number when he first broke in?" ("Nothing. They didn't have numbers in those days.")

He doesn't consider this trivia. This is important, not trivial. I mean, would Toynbee consider knowing the dates of the War of the Roses or the accession rate of the Sun Kings of France "trivia"?

There is a book out to gladden the heart of this true baseball fan, this scholar, this believer. It is "My Baseball Scrapbook," by Bob Broeg, an old pal and a longtime chronicler of the grand old game, especially on the old St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which Bob likes to refer to as "Pulitzer's Prize."

It is not one of those books with lines like, "And then he hit a triple, which gave him 100 runs batted in for the season and helped the team tie for third place." Bob concentrates on the human element, not the statistical. He is more interested in what Yogi Berra had for breakfast — which, incidentally, was likely to be a banana sandwich laced with mustard — than what he had at the plate that afternoon or night.

For the true baseball fan, the little boy in all of us, it's like spending an afternoon in a candy store. Or talking bubble-gum cards. A doubleheader the home team wins. The flip side to "Take Me Out to the Ball Game." Casey comes through in this poem. The book is redolent of hot dogs and peanuts roasting on a hot summer afternoon, horse trolleys, straw hats, barbershop quartets. It's not nostalgia, it's Americana. A Meredith Wilson musical.

For instance, would you like to know:

– That Walter Johnson, probably the world's greatest pitcher, once batted .433 for one season?

– That Grover Cleveland Alexander was nicknamed "Old Low-And-Away"?

– That the first big league pitch Hall-of-Famer Bob Gibson ever threw was hit for a home run? (By the Dodgers' Jim Baxes, of all people.)

– That Bill Terry, one of the great first basemen of all time, a lifetime .341 hitter and the last man in the National League to hit over .400 (.401 in 1930), was snubbed by the baseball writers in Hall-of-Fame balloting for over 18 years before finally getting voted in?

– That Roberto Clemente only gave up fighting with umpires when his kid brother begged him to on his deathbed? Roberto had been suspended 10 days and fined when the brother told him, "You'r too good a ballplayer to hurt your career worrying about umpires."

– That Warren Spahn, once offered a contract that would pay him 10 cents a head for the attendance, spurned it in favor of a straight $25,000 salary? The team, the failing Boston Braves, was transferred to Milwaukee over the winter and Spahn's take would have been $182,639.70.

– That Joe Cronin, then of the Washington Senators, once threw out two men at home plate with the same throw? The Yankees' Lou Gehrig, on second, and Dixie Walker, on first, took off on a hit by Tony Lazzeri. Cronin took the outfield relay, fired home. Catcher Luke Sewell tagged both Yankees out as they went by for a double play, as Walker, swifter than Gehrig, had almost caught up with The Iron Horse.

– That Hack Wilson in a pennant game once charged off first base in pursuit of a dugout heckler from the other team and was not only thrown out of the game but called out on base for not calling time?

– That the Ted Williams Shift was put into effect a dozen years ahead of Lou Boudreau's tactic, for Hack Wilson, when Cardinals' second baseman Frankie Frisch played 40 feet behind second base when Hack came to bat.

– That Cool Papa Bell, of the old Negro leagues, was so fast that when he once hit a ball through pitcher Satchel Paige's legs he was called out after he rounded first and slid into second because he was hit by his own batted ball? Satch told that story, and also said Bell was so fast he could turn off a light switch in a room and jump into bed and pull the covers over him before the light went out.

– That Satchel Paige once boasted he retired three men on one pitch? Or windup? Satch said he palmed two balls, threw one to third, picking off the runner there, one to first with the same motion to pick off the runner there. "And my motion was so good," Satch explained, deadpan, "that the batter swung and missed. Strike three!" Honus Wagner used to say he hit a ball so hard it split and he got a triple and a fly-out on the same pitch. He also said a dog ran out and grabbed a grounder in his teeth one day; so Honus threw the dog over to second for a force out.

– That the $29,240,000 judgment against Standard Oil that won Judge Landis his reputation and job as baseball commissioner was reversed by a higher court?

– That Ty Cobb used to lie with his feet propped up in the hotel bed between games to save them for base running?

Foster, Thompson win World Golds

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Greg Foster hit the last three barriers and almost fell, but regained his balance for a narrow gold-medal victory in the 110-meter hurdles in 13.42 seconds at the World Track and Field Championships Saturday night.

Foster barely held off Arto Bryggare of Finland, while Willie Gault was third.

Britain's Daley Thompson re-established his claim as the "World's Greatest Athlete" by winning the decathlon with 8,666 points.

Saturday's other gold medalists included East Germany's Bettine Jahn in the women's 100-meter high hurdles; Gennady Adveenko of the Soviet Union in the high jump, and Finland's Tiina Lillak in the women's javelin.

Meanwhile, American Steve Scott won his semifinal in the 1,500 meters in 3:36.43 and advanced to Sunday's final. But two U.S. hopefuls, Sydney Maree and Tom Byers, failed to qualify. Maree's time was 3:38.65 and Byers was timed in 3:43.97

Foster's gold medal was the sixth won by U.S. athletes.

In the decathlon, Thompson, the 1980 Olympic champion, led through all 10 events, warding off a strong challenge by West German world record-holder Juergen Hingsen, who finished with 8,561. Siegfried Wentz, also of West Germany, was third with 8,478 points.

Aoki leads Buick by one

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Isao Aoki, recreating his stirring February duel with Jack Renner in Honolulu, fought off Renner and three others to take a 1-stroke lead into the final round of the $350,000 Buick Open.

Aoki, who started the day with a 2-stroke lead, fired a 2-under-par 70 in the third round Saturday to drop to 12-under 204 for the tournament over the 7,001-yard layout at Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club. He bogeyed eight and nine on the front side before coming back with four birdies on the last nine holes, then credited a pep talk from his wife for his turnaround.

"I played the front nine and the back nine like a different person," Aoki said through an interpreter. "I played much more aggressive on the back."

Tied with Renner were defending champion Lanny Wadkins, 1980 champion Peter Jacobsen and former tennis pro Frank Conner, seeking his first PGA Tour victory.

Carner ties for LPGA lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, charging her putter had been sabotaged prior to the tournament, fired a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to tie Patty Sheehan for the lead after the third round of the $180,000 Henredon Classic.

Carner had said that her head was not in the proper position when she addressed the ball on the green. But after her eight-birdie, two-bogey round, which gave her a 10-under-par 206 total, she said her putter had been bent in two places.

Originally, the putter belonged to Carner's husband, Don. He discovered the flaw on the practice green and told his wife.

Sales Representatives

Ionicron Inc. has become the fastest growing full service water conditioning company in the nation. The water quality association rated us as the largest private label distributor in the nation and its no wonder. We market only top-shelf equipment through a proven successful program. Our growth potential is unlimited as we are expanding nation wide.

We are looking for representatives who realize the potential in water conditioning as a growing need in residential and commercial applications, as the water quality all over America is on a rapid decline. Career oriented men and women will have a long and rewarding future with our company. Your sales experience will put you ahead of the rest. We offer excellent money on a commission basis with complete training.

GM QUALITY SERVICE PARTS — GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION

Keep That Great GM Feeling With Genuine GM Parts.

The spoiler.

The Civic 1500 S Hatchback is new on the block. And it's so much fun to drive, it's already giving sports cars a run for their money.

It offers special performance features like a 5-speed manual transmission, sport suspension, a rear stabilizer bar, Michelin steel-belted radial tires and a front air dam.

Plus all the standard engineering features you've come to expect from a Honda Civic. And the total economy.

In fact, the only problem you'll have with the new Civic 1500 S is deciding which color you want. Red or black.

INTRODUCING THE CAR THAT WILL MAKE ALL CARS PERFORM BETTER.

AutoWeek called it "The finest quality car available." Car and Driver used the seldom-used words "magnificent," "lovely." "New levels of refinement," agrees Autocar.

Just what new car are they referring to? The BMW 318i. A sports sedan whose engineering is so technologically advanced, we fully expect it to inspire the next generation of "technological breakthroughs" in competitive models.

For a thorough evaluation of the sports sedan that will send the automotive community scurrying back to their drawing boards, contact us for a test drive of the BMW 318i.

THE ULTIMATE DRIVING MACHINE.

'Yes, I am the REAL one!'

Text by David Lee Forrest

Lucille Ball, Charlie Brown, Jack Daniels, Gary Hart, Robert E. Lee, Rich Little, Jimmy Stewart and Woodrow Wilson are alive and well and living in Midland.

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet."
— William Shakespeare

"There is everything in a name. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but would not cost half as much during the winter months."
— George Ade

"Names are not always what they seem. The common Welsh name Bzjxxllwcp is pronounced Jackson."
— Mark Twain

Perhaps every rose may smell as sweet, but not every Jimmy Stewart is a movie star, not every Gary Hart is a Democrat running for president and not every Rich Little does impressions.

Most Midlanders who happen to share such well-known names with famous individuals said they do not have much in common with the other, better known, Lucille Ball, Charlie Brown or Jack Daniels.

Many have to accept kidding and a few problems because of their names, but some have enjoyed an occasional advantage from them.

For most of them, as long-time local resident Woodrow Wilson put it, "It's just a name."

LUCILLE BALL
Homemaker
Age 64

"I get laughed at a lot," Lucille Ball said, "but I don't pay attention to it.

"I say, 'This is my real name.' People don't know how to take it," she added.

Mrs. Ball once saw the famous red-headed comedienne during a trip to California several years ago.

"She's white and I'm black, but she's all right," Mrs. Ball said. "I like to look at her play."

Mrs. Ball said she does not feel that she has anything in common with the actress, "cause I don't have any money."

RICH LITTLE
Engine and compressor analyst
Age 34

Having the same name as a famous impressionist is not really a problem, Rich Little said, but people do notice it.

"They want you to do impressions of John Wayne or ask you if you're the real Rich Little," he said.

He also has an occasional prank telephone call.

"I've had a couple since I moved to Midland," said Little.

Little said that his name has worked to his advantage at least once when his secretary made a reservation over the phone for him to stay in a crowded, busy hotel in Colorado.

"They told her they were sure they could find a room for me," he said, after the secretary told them she needed a room reserved for Rich Little.

"Everybody was waiting behind the counter for me," he said. "That's one of those times you walk in and they say, 'You're Rich Little?'"

Most people, of course, do not have an unusual name. Listed below are the 10 most common names parents are giving their children. This list was compiled by the American Name Society in order of descending popularity.

BOYS

1. Michael
2. Jason
3. Matthew
4. David
5. Brian
6. Christopher
7. Jonathan
8. John
9. James
10. Jeffery

GIRLS

1. Jennifer
2. Ann (including combinations, such as Mary Ann, Sue Ann, etc.)
3. Jessica
4. Karen
5. Michelle
6. Katherine
7. Rebecca
8. Deborah
9. Robin
10. Megan

As for the impressionist, Little said, "I think he's pretty good. I wish I could do it."

JIMMY STEWART
Xerox senior customer representative
Age 38

The biggest problem Jimmy Stewart has ever had with his name occurred when another Jimmy Stewart — who also was not a famous actor — moved without paying off all of his bills.

The finance company then picked the wrong Jimmy Stewart out of the Midland phone book to threaten to sue.

Other than that, Stewart said, he has experienced "not really anything adverse," because of his name, which he received by being named after a great-uncle, not the actor.

Stewart was born on the same day President Franklin Roosevelt died — April 12, 1945 — and said he has "had as much comment on that as on my name."

Even the few prank calls he has had were not because of his name, he said.

"Of course, I'm constantly kidded about it in banks when I cash checks."

"It's sort of an icebreaker" for starting conversations with bank tellers, said Stewart.

When he attends classes sponsored by Xerox, he said, "The instructors all have their own Jimmy Stewart imitations.

"I haven't put in the time to attempt to learn one," said Stewart.

Stewart does not seem to mind sharing his name with a famous actor.

"I certainly admire the man, as most everyone does."

GARY HART
Manager Roberts Auto Supply,
Age 31

Gary Hart said he does not get as many comments now on his name as he did when the politician Gary Hart, a current presidential hopeful, was the national campaign director for George McGovern's presidential campaign.

"If he becomes the Democratic nominee it might become interesting," he said.

Beyond their names, he said, the two Harts don't have much in common.

"He's fairly liberal and I'm not," Hart said, "I lean pretty heavily toward the Republicans."

JACK DANIELS
Roofing and general contractor
Age 30

Jack Daniels said his name is not the butt of many jokes.

"No, I'm 6'2" and I don't like a lot of mouth," he said.

"I don't get anything out of the ordinary, nothing too antagonistic.

"When a man's littler, they pick on him more," Daniels said.

"It's a shame people are as cruel as they are and take everything as a joke. As far as I'm concerned, my name is not a joke. It's my family name."

Jack Daniels was the name of his father, grandfather and great-grandfather, he said.

He has also had friends with the names Johnny Walker and Robert Browning.

He noted that such a name does at least have the advantage of being memorable.

"When people have a name like that, people don't tend to forget it," he said.

ROBERT E. LEE III
Geologist
Age 33

Robert E. Lee III said he has no special problems because of his name.

"None," he said.

Lee is also proud of his name and its noble connotations.

"Well, anybody from the South would be," he said.

He does not, however, plan on passing the name on to another generation.

"I can't see naming anybody the 'fourth,'" Lee said.

CHARLIE BROWN Jr.
Landscaper
Age 54

Children often call up and ask him, "Is your name really Charlie Brown? Are you the one in the cartoon?" said Charlie Brown Jr.

"I tell them that I'm him all right. I just changed colors," he said.

Sometimes kids make prank calls singing the old Coasters song "Charlie Brown."

"It doesn't bother me or nothing," said Brown.

He does not have too much trouble convincing people that his name really is Charlie Brown, he said.

"I just show them my driver's license."

He also has no trouble getting people to remember his name.

"I tell them to think of the cartoon."

WOODROW WILSON
Retired
Age 65

Woodrow Wilson described his name as "just one of those things."

"I took a lot of ribbing and kidding, that's all," he said. "I don't pay any attention."

He said he does not have any major problems with his name now.

"I'm a pretty well-liked fellow," said Wilson, who has lived in Midland since he was two years old.

Wilson said his parents named him after the president "a little bit."

"I guess they run out of names. There was 10 of us and I was the last one."

"I'm not ashamed of it; I'm just not real thrilled about it either," he said. "It's just a name as far as I'm concerned."

Celebrities' homes haunted with murder history

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES – For $2,650 a month rent, Stacy and her husband, a jewelry store owner, didn't figure their house should have problems of a real-life Amityville Horror.

Only after they rented the house at what is now listed as 3311 Waverly Drive did they find out it was worse. Neighbors, not their landlord, told them they were living in the house where Rosemary and Leno LaBianca were brutally murdered by members of the Manson family Aug. 10, 1969.

"I don't believe in ghosts or anything like that," Stacy said recently. "But this house has a very bad aura. A very negative and dark spirit. I think it's haunted. I've been very terrified here alone at night."

The problems started the day they moved in. "Someone had vandalized the house the night before," said Stacy, who asked that her surname not be used. "They tore and burned the curtains, and broke some windows that didn't get fixed throughout the big rainstorms. I caught pneumonia. Then, one night we came in and turned on the light and with a big snap, the fuse blew on all the lights in the house."

The house itself is potentially beautiful; it once belonged to Walt Disney. But Stacy said she was deeply disturbed by the thoughts of what had occurred in the house. "I can't sleep here alone at night," she said. "One week, my husband was out of town on a business trip. I dreamed Charles Manson was crawling up the hill to the house with a knife in his hands. I dreamed I would be forced to kill him if he got in. I woke up and ran out of the house." Stacy declined to use the former master bedroom where Rosemary LaBianca was stabbed 41 times. In the living room – where grocery chain executive Leno LaBianca had been bound, stabbed and left to die with a fork in his stomach, and the words "Helter Skelter" and "Rise" and "Death to Pigs" had been scrawled in blood on the walls and washed away 13 years before – Stacy's family belongings were in packing boxes, ready to move.

BUT NOW, A recent California Court of Appeal decision, in what may be the first ruling of its kind, has strengthened the full disclosure laws for real estate transactions. Stacy and others like her who have wandered unknowingly into houses with notoriously bloody, tragic or just plain haunted histories may now have a legal right to get out of sales or rental agreements.

And unless the appeals court decision is reversed by a higher court, landlords and sellers and real estate agents would apparently be required to disclose to buyers and renters in the state if spectacular murders or famous suicides occurred in a dwelling for sale – or if the place was thought by some to be haunted.

The appeals court ruled in late July that a woman could proceed with her legal attempts to get her money back from a seller who didn't tell her a woman and her four children had been murdered in her house 10 years before.

Los Angeles and Hollywood, long on tragic deaths of movie stars and other lost souls, is certain to be affected by the ruling. But, as many experienced real estate brokers point out, the effect of such a ruling is never as simple as it might seem.

"When there is a tragic history attached to a house, it can raise or lower the value," said star Realtor June Scott. "One person's dream house can be another's horror."

Scott noted that when Sharon Tate was killed with four others in her rented home at 10050 Cielo Drive in Benedict Canyon on Aug. 9, 1969, "Four or five people called me soon after and said they would like to buy the house."

SCOTT RECALLED that one of the conditions was that the blood not be washed away. Scott, not the agent for owner Rudy Altobelli, who has rented out the house to several clients since then, was appalled but not surprised. "There's no accounting for taste in this town," she says.

A survey of the present residents of some of the most famous murder and suicide houses in Los Angeles turned up a wide variety of reactions to the reality of living in a house with a tragic past. Some were told, others were not. Some are scared by the history, others ignore it, and some even revel in the grisly past.

Some find they sense the presence of benign spirits in the aftermath of a tragedy. Many feel that the ghosts are nothing compared with aggressive and insensitive tourists who hound their houses, with their addresses available in guidebooks to Hollywood history.

THE GARY HINMAN house on Old Topanga Canyon Road:

Hinman was shot, stabbed and hacked to death on July 27, 1969, by Bobby Beausoleil and other members of the Manson family. During court testimony, it was alleged that Manson himself cut off Hinman's ear with his sword after a long siege in which Manson was trying to get Hinman to contribute a large sum of money to the family's planned escape to Death Valley.

One of the Manson killers had scrawled the words "POLITICAL PIGGY" on the wall in the living room in Hinman's blood as Hinman slowly bled to death.

Archie Nagel, 42, moved into the old Hinman house two years ago and has done a lot to improve and enlarge it. Nagel, an interior designer, decorator and painter, said he was informed that some tragedy happened at his house, but he wasn't at first aware that it involved Manson.

"I was told something had happened here," recalled Nagel. "The point was, I bought it without my wife seeing it. She kind of liked it for its potential. Then she was told about Manson. She went into a slight shock."

Nagel points to the ever-present blue, smogless skies in Topanga, and his great, watchful neighbors, and to his peaceful garden as signs he doesn't want to sell. "We joke a few times – if he (Manson) ever gets out he might come back here. But I don't think they'll ever let him out."

The Marilyn Monroe suicide house on Fifth Helena Drive in Brentwood:

A slim woman in her late 40s answered the bell at the pretty little bungalow where Monroe died in August of 1962. Her only problem with the house, she said, was the thousands of Monroe fans and conspiracy buffs who end up knocking on her door.

Szor-Diener of Dallas Expands to West Texas

An intimate letter from Sam Szor and Paul Diener.

You may not know us yet. But you do know the sensation of our handiwork . . . fur. It is every woman's dream. After all, owning a fur is an intimate affair. And at Szor-Diener Furs, we strive to make it a lasting affair.

When you visit our new Midland salon on opening day in September, you'll find a large selection of furs in the styles and colors you love. And the prices? Well, they are quite reasonable.

We would like to introduce you to our brand of personal service. Whether you're purchasing a fur, being measured for alterations, dropping off your coat for storage, or just browsing, you can be sure we will serve you with pride.

Our new Midland store centrally serves the Great Plains area. It is the sixth store of its kind in Texas, Louisiana, and Oklahoma. We hope you find it to be a welcomed addition to your community. Especially since this store is for you.

For years we've designed the furs you've longed for. Now, let us put you into one. Please stop by soon for a personal evaluation.

Sincerely,
Sam Szor and Paul Diener

P.S. Come help us celebrate our opening during September. We'd very much enjoy having you drop by the salon in the Courtyard at Midland Park, Midkiff at Loop 250, to get acquainted.

The Minuet Club board entertained with a lovely tea recently to introduce this year's fifteen debutantes to the club's female membership. The home of the president, Suzy (Mrs. James P.) Boldrick was the setting for the party, which was so well received that there are plans afoot to make it an annual event. Attending along with the honorees were their mothers and many of their grandmothers.

Assisting Suzy with the party were the other officers, Ann (Mrs. Ronnie) Williams, vice-president, and Eileen (Mrs. M.T.) Stallter, secretary-treasurer, and the board of directors, Nancy (Mrs. Buddy) Anguish, Ruth (Mrs. Kelly) Bell, Norma Jean (Mrs. Bud) Boles, Mary (Mrs. Henri) deCompiegne, Mary (Mrs. W.D.) Kennedy and Frances (Mrs. John A.) Mills.

SO LONG and best wishes to Carol and Jay Stiles, who moved to Flippin, Arkansas, this past week. They are the new owners/operators of Stetson's Fishing Resort, which is located on the famed White River in the Ozarks. Their children, Kip, 12, and Katie, 6, are looking forward to country and resort life.

Carol was a special education teacher for the Midland public schools and Jay a pilot during their stay in Midland.

HOME FROM A three-week trip to Europe are sisters Jean (Mrs. Pat) Thomas of Midland and Rosemary (Mrs. Callie) Smith of San Antonio. They devoted a week to touring the English countryside, including visits to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon and the campus of Oxford University, and another week based at the mountain resort town of Grindelwald, Switzerland, from which they made several interesting side trips.

They enjoyed the highlights of London, Paris, Edinburgh, Scotland, Frankfurt, Germany, and points in Wales. On the London stage, they saw "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Dead Ringer," a new thriller based on the book, "The Prime Pretender."

FORMER MIDLANDER Doris (Mrs. Bill) Turner of Twisp, Washington, has enjoyed a visit here with family and friends over the past month. Her husband joined her in Midland last week, and they will return home by way of Yellowstone National Park and other scenic spots.

Doris has been a houseguest of her daughter and son, Betty Barnes and Roger Barnes, and another son, Kelly Barnes, his wife, Susan, and their children, Julie and Tyler.

LONG-TIME MIDLAND HIGH chemistry teacher Dan Kallus has returned to Midland after spending seven weeks on the campus of Oklahoma State University at Stillwater. He was selected as one of the team members from across the United States to write a new high school chemical curriculum for the American Chemical Society this summer.

Dan was joined by his wife, Martha, for a visit while he was participating in the writing project. The couple enjoyed several social occasions in Stillwater, including a dinner party they hosted in honor of the writing team. They also were entertained in the homes of Dr. I. Dwaine Eubanks and Dr. Tom Johnsten, who are associated with OSU. Both men are known in the area, Dr. Eubanks having roots in West Texas and Dr. Johnsten a past visitor to Midland on science education projects.

BETTY LLOYD (MRS. DON) ROSS, a long-time supporter of the symphony, has followed the career of flutist Toshiko Kohno with interest. Toshiko was a finalist in the 1971 National Young Artists Competition sponsored here by the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

Betty Lloyd recently received reviews from the Washington Post of Toshiko's performances. The young man, who has won critical acclaim, is now principal flutist with the National Symphony in Washington, D.C. In a recent concert, Toshiko played a concerto for two flutes with the the world-famous Jean Pierre-Rampal at Kennedy Center. On the Fourth of July, she was a featured soloist when a National Symphony outdoor gala was televised.

Table decorations formal

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Observers have noted that home entertaining has become more elaborate recently. Preparing gourmet meals and serving them to guests with all the right flourishes is a pastime that gives pleasure to many.

Today's fussiest hostesses, however, would find themselves clearly outclassed if a time machine could transport them back to the 18th or 19th century, according to Louise Belden, author of "The Festive Tradition," a book about how Americans entertained from 1650 to 1900.

Mrs. Belden, a former curator at Winterthur Museum in Wilmington, Del., whose field of expertise is antique silver and table settings, spent 15 years studying home entertaining in America. She became intrigued with the subject because of a large number of unidentified silver utensils for which no use was known and set out to find out about them.

Based on her research in documents of the time, she has found that table decoration was once far more elaborate than it is today. What would be considered excessive nowadays was just the thing in many American homes in bygone days.

As a stay-at-home group with few chances for public socializing, wealthier women enjoyed planning and giving elaborate dinner parties or after-dinner dessert parties sometimes called "routs."

Even at the very beginning of colonization — when resources and leisure time were scant — American tables were embellished to provide a festive touch. At first, all that could be managed was a raised centerpiece. Colonists used a simple metal dish ring as a pedestal to raise one dish above the others. This exalted dish usually held a roast or an arrangement of vegetables which was consumed as part of the meal.

Later, a variety of wood or mirrored platforms were set in the center of the table and provided a raised surface on which to display pyramids of fresh fruit or sugar-coated fruit, flowers and nuts known as sweetmeats, vases of flowers, and candlesticks.

During the 18th century, symmetrical table arrangements were considered essential. What was placed on one side of the table was exactly duplicated on the other. By the early 19th century, however, lavishness, not symmetry was the watchword. The tradition of the groaning board which had been brought over to the colonies by the English was duplicated by all who could afford it.

Novelty was much admired, not only in table decor and arrangement, but also in the very shape of the food served, according to Mrs. Belden.

Electronic phones popular

Five million consumers purchased their own telephones in 1982, and another 10 million are expected to do so in 1983.

Electronic telephones are becoming an increasingly popular choice for those who buy phones, says Bonnie Piernot, a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System.

Electronic phones differ slightly from standard push-button phones because they send out pulses instead of electronic beeps.

Although phone companies will often charge extra to handle the electronic beeps of push-button dialing, there is no extra charge with electronic phones, says Piernot.

Another advantage of electronic phones is they can be programmed to perform special functions, such as dialing frequently called numbers.

NEW TAX CHANGES TAUGHT BY BLOCK

H & R Block is offering a Basic Income Tax Course and an Advanced Income Tax Course starting September 1, 1983. There are morning and evening classes available in the Odessa area including Odessa, Big Spring, Midland and Monahans.

There are numerous tax changes for 1982 and 1983 which will be taught in the approximately three month course for a total of seventy-five hours by experienced H & R Block personnel. These courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems.

While qualified graduates of the course will be offered Job Interviews, they are under no obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.

The course is ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers, or anyone wanting to increase his tax knowledge.

For more information and a brochure please contact the H & R Block office at 1307 E. 8th - Odessa, Texas 79761 Phone 332-7801 - Collect (Adv.)

Starchy foods not fattening

Carbohydrate foods like pasta, potatoes, corn and bread are often portrayed as the fattening "villains" in American diets.

But they are actually full of energy, nutrients, fiber and protein, and not all that fattening, says Mary K. Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System.

According to the specialist, the chemical composition of carbohydrates is indicated by the name -carbo for carbon and -hydrate for water.

Simple carbohydrates are the sugars and sweeteners found in fruits, vegetables, dairy products and processed sugar. Complex carbohydrates are many simple carbohydrates joined together in growing plants. They form the starches and fiber of vegetables, fruits and grains.

Carbohydrate foods provide an efficient source of energy essential for functioning of the muscles, brain, and nerves for good use of other nutrients in the body, explains Sweeten.

They act as carriers of many essential nutrients, including vitamins and minerals. They are also a good source of dietary fiber, and an inexpensive source of protein.

Now is time to prepare fireplace for winter use

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The time to get your fireplace ready for safe and efficient operation is when the weather is warm and you are not using it.

Leading the list of preparatory steps is an inspection of the chimney. If the system has been maintained properly over the years, you may be able to do this yourself via observation and a look up the chimney with a mirror and flashlight. But a chimney that has been neglected will require the services of a professional to see that it doesn't leak, isn't blocked and is free of soot.

Anyone with a fireplace must have learned during this energy-efficient era that most of the heat generated by the fire goes up the flue, with only a small percentage of it, perhaps as little as 10 to 15 percent, staying inside the house to warm it. You can reverse this condition so a large percentage of the heat stays on the inside by installing a heat-circulating fireplace or one of the many adapter systems on the market.

Even if you make no material changes in the design of your fireplace, being content with its aesthetic qualities or for some other reason, there are certain fundamentals that can be observed to get a better performance. Whatever the purpose of the fireplace, it loses its appeal when smoke enters the room in which it is located.

Sometimes a simple thing like reducing the size of the fireplace opening will prevent smoke from entering the room. Sometimes the branches of a tree hanging over the chimney can cause a downdraft that sends smoke back down the flue into the room.

Downdrafts, by the way, can often be eliminated simply by providing a little ventilation in the room where the fireplace is, either through a slightly opened window or a vent in the outside wall. Sometimes the trouble is caused because two stoves are attached to the same chimney, which cannot handle the load and may be in jeopardy of catching fire because of a soot buildup.

You are lucky if your own property supplies enough wood to keep your fireplace crackling. If it is, the wood will burn better if cut many months earlier and allowed to season. If not, you will have to buy it by the cord, which is 128 cubic feet or a stack 4 feet long by 4 feet high and 8 feet across.

When you find out what it costs, you'll burn it with care or you may switch to charcoal at least part of the time, as many people do. Such a switch calls for extreme caution which consists mainly of providing plenty of ventilation.

FABRIC SECRETS

BETTY MARTIN

These are cases which call upon you to gather long lengths of fabric without being absolutely precise, such as ruffles on costumes for curtains. There is an industrial technique which will let you gather two inches of fabirc into one inch of stitching. First, finish the hem on the section to be gathered. Next, tighten the upper tension slightly, using a short stich. Then, place both index fingers ahead of the presser foot which sould be centered between them. Push the fabric toward the needle, while stitching, forcing extra fabric into each stitch. Continue until the gathered piece is the desired length.

Have you begun to price fall and winter clothes yet? At LEGGETTS FABRICS we have a wide selection of patterns that allow even the beginners to create garments for the whole family. Not only will you thrill at the sense of satisfaction you will feel when the garment is completed,but we guarantee you'll be delighted with how much money you will save. Wedding Notes by Tony L. Corbell

THE WEDDING BUDGET

Since the wedding day activities are a cross between the bride's dreams and her family's pocketbook, the budgeting of the wedding is wise. A memorable day can be achieved without lavish expense.

If the budget is very limited, decide what is most important to you and spend most of your money in that area. You can then compromise or eliminate the items of lesser importance.

The most accurate approach is to list on paper the activities and items in the order of importance and find the costs by shopping around. Then start adding the costs as you move down the list and stop when you reach the limit of your budget. Any remaining items can then be eliminated if necessary.

When planning your wedding be sure to call on the professionals at:

TONY'S STUDIO OF PHOTOGRAPY

They are experts at providing excellent photographic coverage to fit any size budget. Call 689-0791 or stop by at No. 5-B Dellwood Mall.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials shoudd anclude the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office watin gne month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Americans urged to walk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Integrate walking into your daily routine, suggests Gary Yanker, editor of American Health Magazine, who told the Health Insurance Association of America that walking is "a mass sport that fits a broad possibility of body types."

Walk to and from work, he advises, or if the distance is too great, get off a bus or park your car at a place that requires 20 minutes of walking time.

Take a walking break whenever you can, he adds. Walk up stairs and other inclines instead of using elevators and escalators.

Author predicts more romance, monogamy

Hearst Feature Service

George Leonard chronicled the beginnings of social movements and cultural phenomena as a senior editor for Look magazine for 17 years. These days, he's predicting the end of sex.

In a book called "The End of Sex: Erotic Love after the Sexual Revolution," Leonard pronounces the death of the sexual upheaval that began in the '60s and swept across the morals and attitudes of America. Instead, he says, romance, commitment and erotic love are coming out of the closet.

"We split sex from love, from creation and from common politeness," says the tall, 59-year-old, white-haired writer. "It got to the point where it was kind of bad to be in love."

Leonard, who lives in Mill Valley, Calif., is trying to change that with seminars he conducts on "the art of love" with his third wife, Annie Styron Leonard. The goal of the course is to change people's attitudes about relationships, not to teach them new techniques, Leonard emphasizes.

While Leonard credits the sexual revolution with razing many repressive, harmful Victorian attitudes about sex, he says the pendulum swung too far in the opposite direction. The results were open marriages, recreational or casual sex, manuals that emphasize technique but don't mention love or caring.

The new ideology, Leonard says, became one of prescription, rather than proscription, so that people began to have sex as they would have dinner or a game of golf. This crucial area of our lives, Leonard says, was depersonalized and dehumanized.

"What I want to do is reconnect this profound act to society, to nature and even to the spiritual" he says. "I think the attempt to fragment life is a dangerous modern sickness. We've become jaded. When we can take it as casually as a game of Ping Pong, I think we're in trouble."

Leonard presents an option that has rarely been proposed in books about sex during the past 15 years — that of monogamy. More specifically, he is proposing "high monogamy," an erotic, exclusive relationship between two people who enter into it not because of religion, morals or lack of opportunity, but because it is a challenge, like climbing Mount Everest. The concept also demands a commitment to remaining totally open, honest and psychologically growing.

Creating and nurturing that kind of relationship is not easy, he acknowledges. In a relationsip where two people are together, sharing and revealing themselves, blocks or difficulties are inevitable, he says. And when they occur, one reaction is to jump into somebody else's bed.

"Each jump into another bed is the avoidance of change," says Leonard. "If you stay with that one partner and fight it through, you're going to have to change. And it's really tough. High monogamy's not for everybody. It's an idea put out there for anybody who wants it."

The idea that the sexual act should be personal connected to love and commitment, is not new Leonard grants. Priests, ministers and rabbis have been preaching it throughout the ages.

But erotic love as a transformational act is not something heard often. And it may be for that reason that "End of Sex" has received extensive coverage in the media. Esquire started the ball rolling in December, before the book was released, with a cover story on it. Since then major articles have appeared in Readers' Digest, The Futurist, Christianity Today, Yoga Journal, New Age and Forum, a sex magazine put out by the publisher of Penthouse. In September, Cosmopolitan is coming out with an article on Leonard.

"Maybe people wanted love all along," suggests Leonard.

This pizza-pan Fruit-A-Plenty Pie is full of apricots, grapes, strawberries and pineapple on a whipped lemon-cream cheese filling.

Pizza-pan pie full of fresh fruit

Dessert lovers agree that pies are a specialty. Especially a pie as big as a pizza and layered with plenty of fruit. When you add apricots, it's certain to be a winner.

The delicate flavor of apricots complements a potpourri of other fruits from grapes to luscious strawberries. Not only do apricots taste good but they are loaded with vitamins and minerals.

The pie crust begins with a buttermilk biscuit mix, plus some cream cheese and milk for a richer texture and extra flavor. Those who find rolling out a crust difficult, will really like this one. No rolling is necessary. Just pat the dough into a 12-inch pizza pan, bake and you're ready for the filling.

When the crust is cool, spread with a whipped lemon-cream cheese filling. Now let your artistic talents be revealed: arrange the top of the pie with fruit, making sure to select fruits that hold their shapes.

Unpeeled apricot halves are firm and uniform, firm strawberries and just-ripe green grapes are easy to arrange. Either fresh or frozen pineapple chunks or canned chunks packed in syrup will work well.

Begin with the apricots around the outer rim, progressing toward the center with strawberry halves, then grapes and finally a ring of pineapple. You may wish to cluster a few apricot halves around the center. Add the glaze and your masterpiece is complete. Now wait for the rave reviews.

FRUIT-A-PLENTY PIE

1 can (30 oz.) apricot halves
1 package (12 oz.) frozen pineapple chunks, thawed
1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup buttermilk baking mix
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon lemon juice
1 pint strawberries, halved
1 small bunch (⅔ cup) seedless grapes

Drain apricots reserving syrup. Drain pineapple chunks reserving syrup. Set all aside.

To make crust: Cut 3 ounces cream cheese (reserve remaining 5 ounces for use in cream cheese spread) and butter into baking mix until mixture resembles coarse crumbs; with hands form into ball.

Pat out dough on a lightly greased 12-inch pizza pan; flute edge (Crust will be very thin). Bake in 425 degree oven for about 8 minutes, or until crust is lightly browned. Cool.

To make cream cheese spread: Stir in remaining cream cheese, 2 tablespoons reserved apricot syrup, ¼ cup of the sugar and lemon peel until smooth. Spread on cooled crust.

To make glaze: In a small saucepan, combine remaining ¼ cup sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add 1 cup of the reserved apricot syrup, ½ cup reserved pineapple syrup and lemon juice. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and begins to boil. Boil and stir 1 minute. Cool.

To assemble pie: Arrange fruits in circles on cream cheese spread as follows. Place apricots around outer edge of pie, overlapping slightly. Next, make circle of halved strawberries, then circle of grapes and finally a circle of pineapple chunks. Arrange 3 apricot halves in center of pie. Brush some of the glaze over fruits. Cut pie into wedges, serve with remaining glaze mixture. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Tart made with blue cheese

Copley News Service

BLUE CHEESE TART, FRESH ASPARAGUS

3 ozs. Iowa blue cheese
6 ozs. cream cheese
2 tbsps. butter, softened
2 tbsps. heavy cream
2 eggs
1 tbsp. chives, minced
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Pinch of cayenne pepper
6 3-inch pastry shells
24 medium asparagus, poached

Method: Blend the cheese, butter and cream until smooth. Add eggs, chives, salt, pepper, cayenne and mix well.

Divide mixture evenly among the pastry shells and bake in 375-degree oven for 15-20 minutes or until done.

Garnish with poached asparagus.

Tarts may be garnished with a small bunch of grapes, strawberries or other seasonal fruits.

Wine prices spur ideas for cellars

Copley News Service

As wine prices drop, due to the huge wine surplus in California and worldwide, those interested in starting a wine cellar or expanding a small one wonder what to buy.

It's hard to answer that question in general terms, because each person has unique tastes. But there are a few general guidelines that apply to all new wine cellars, the most important of which is: Get a place to store the wine where it won't be subjected to high or fluctuating temperatures. A constant temperature of 52 degrees may be ideal, but it isn't necessary for a small home wine cellar.

In fact, wine storage at 70 degrees isn't likely to harm most wines; all that sort of temperature does is accelerate the aging process, and make most wines ready to consume at a younger age. Constant moderate temperature is more important than low, variable temperatures.

Now, as to what to buy. Here are a few general suggestions, assuming someone is starting a 10-case (120-bottle) cellar from scratch:

Cabernet Sauvignon: The classic variety from California, many of these wines improve with bottle age. I'd have two cases, and at least half of it would be wines from wineries such as Stag's Leap, Burgess, Beaulieu, Shafer, Clos du Val, Sterling, Heitz, Jordan, Freemark Abbey, Caymus, Rutherford Hill, Simi, Markham, Carneros Creek, Mondavi, Martini, Kenwood, or Chateau Montelena. Best recent vintages are 1978 and 1979, but the 1980s reportedly are superb.

Also, I would have a few bottles of ready-to-consume Cabernet, which are usually less expensive, and can be opened without waiting five to 10 years.

Bordeaux: Novices are often put off by imports, unable to distinguish a good wine from a terrible one. However, a fine, aged Bordeaux — like a fine aged Cabernet — can be a great joy.

Tea loaf features diced nectarines

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Now that Americans are appreciating fresh vegetables and fruit once again, quick breads made with them have come into high favor.

These days there's something comparatively new on the scene — a tea loaf made with fresh diced nectarines.

FRESH NECTARINE TEA LOAF

1½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
½ cup whole wheat (graham) flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cardamom
¾ pound (about) ripe nectarines (3 large)
½ cup (8 tablespoons) butter
2-3rds cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 large eggs

On wax paper or in a bowl thoroughly stir together flours, baking powder, salt and cardamom.

Wash and dry nectarines; quarter and pit; with a sharp knife dice fine (⅛ to ¼ inch) — there should be about 1½ cups.

In a large bowl cream butter, sugar and lemon rind; beat in eggs singly until blended each time. Add nectarines and beat gently until uniformly distributed — mixture will look curdled. Add flour mixture; stir gently just until flour mixture is moistened.

Turn into a buttered 8½ by 4½ by 2¾-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted comes out clean — 55 to 60 minutes. (Top will be cracked.)

Let stand on a wire rack for 10 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and turn out on wire rack; with another rack turn right side up. Cool completely. If served at once, slice thick, then halve each slice. For easier and thinner slicing, place in a plastic bag and secure twist tightly; refrigerate overnight for crust to soften; slice, but bring to room temperature before serving. Store in refrigerator. Good served with butter or cream cheese.

'Liver' recipes different

MOCK CHOPPED LIVER

The way Selma Sorkin of Minneapolis makes it.

3 medium onions, sliced (about 1½ cups)
¼ cup margarine
2 cups pole beans or green beans, cooked and well drained
1 hard-cooked egg, cut in chunks
¼ teaspoon salt, or to taste
⅛ teaspoon pepper, or to taste

In large heavy skillet over medium-low heat saute onions in margarine, stirring occasionally, 10 minutes or until tender. Place onions (and margarine they were cooked in) in food-processor bowl with remaining ingredients. Process until finely chopped and of spreading consistency, but not pureed. Serve at room temperature with bread or crackers. Makes about 1½ cups.

SWISS LIVER

May be prepared in the quantity needed.

Cook bacon (1 or 2 slices for each serving) until crisp; drain on paper toweling and keep warm. Coat thin slices of baby beef liver with seasoned flour. In a large skillet in a little hot butter cook liver rather briskly, turning to brown both sides, until barely cooked through. Remove liver and keep warm. In the clean dry skillet in a little butter cook bananas (quartered crosswise and lengthwise) just until hot through. Arrange liver and bananas on a hot serving plate and garnish with bacon and watercress.

Soybean more popular now

Copley News Service

Used for centuries as a food source in Eastern countries, the soybean has only recently begun to be appreciated in the West. And its growing popularity here is largely due to its use in vegetarian diets.

Oriental cuisine employs the soybean in fermented form as a base for soy sauce. Tofu, a bean curd similar in texture to soft cheese, is another popular Oriental soybean product.

Among vegetarians, the soybean is prized because it contains around 40 percent protein. And two-thirds of a cup of cooked soybeans has about the same amount of protein as a 6-ounce steak. Because it is so nourishing, the soybean has become an indispensible part of most vegetarian diets.

While soybeans can be used to feed livestock, this seems an ecologically wasteful method. It is much more effective simply to eat the soybeans ourselves, rather than wait for them to be converted into meat. Soy powder is often used as a nutritious food supplement in relief programs to undernourished countries.

Rich in lecithin, with a good supply of calcium, phosphorus, iron and other minerals, the soybean is also a major source of cooking oil. The bean itself contains about 20 percent oil. This is a major ingredient in most commercial mayonnaise. Soybeans are also sometimes used in making soft ice cream, soy milks and soy flour.

TVP, or "textured vegetable protein" is made from spun soy fibers, which are then pressed into blocks. This is popular as a meat substitute because the fibers closely resemble meat.

Following are several tasty recipes to help you incorporate the nutritious soybean into your diet.

BASIC COOKED SOYBEANS

1 cup soybeans
3 cups boiling water
1 tbsp. oil
1 small diced onion
¼ cup diced celery
2 bay leaves
1 tsp. salt
Dash pepper

Add soybeans to boiling water and soak overnight. Drain beans and rinse. Pice beans in a medium-sized pot, and add oil, onion, celery and seasonings. Add water to cover, bring to a boil, then lower heat and simmer for about 2 to 2½ hours. Serves 4-6.

SOYBEAN PULP

1 cup soybeans
3 cups boiling water
1 tbsp. oil
¼ tsp. salt

Add soybeans to boiling water and soak overnight. Drain beans and rinse. Pice beans in a medium-sized pot, and add water to cover. Bring to a boil and then lower heat; simmer for about 2½ hours. Drain cooked beans through a colander, then puree to a pulp in a blender or mash by hand. Store in refrigerator and use as needed.

CREAM OF SOYBEAN SOUP

1 cup soybean pulp
1 tbsp. finely chopped celery leaves
2 tbsps.chopped onion
1 cup vegetable stock
2½ cups milk
1 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

In soup pot mix soybean pulp with celery leaves, onion and vegetable stock.Simmer over low heat until vegetables are tender. Then mix milk with flour and seasonings, and add to pot. Continue to simmer until milk is heated through. Serves 4-6.

SOYBEAN CASSEROLE

2 cups cooked soybeans (basic recipe)
2 cups cooked corn
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
½ tsp. salt
2 cups canned tomatoes, or 2 cups fresh tomatoes, peeled and chopped
1 scant cup wheat germ

Thoroughly oil a large backing dish. Alternate layers of beans, corn, chees and drained, chopped tomatoes. Mix salt with tomato juices and pour over mixture. (If using fresh tomatoes, you might want to add a little water.) Cover top of casserole with wheat germ, and dot wiht butter or margarine, if desired. Bake a 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Corn fritters tasty

SUMMER BRUNCH
Corn Fritters & Bacon
Fresh Fruit & Cheese

CORN FRITTERS

These little pancakes are usually gobbled up.

6 to 8 medium or large ears of fresh corn
2 large eggs
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
3 tablespoons unbleached all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ cup (about) butter

With a sharp knife cut lengthwise down center of each row of kernels; with dull side of knife, scrape lightly downward to extract milky pulp — you should have 2 cups packed. Beat eggs and salt until thick and ivory color; add sugar, flour and baking powder; beat gently just until smooth. Heat 1 tablespoon butter in a 10- to 12-inch heavy skillet; drop rounded tablespoons of the corn mixture, well apart, into hot butter. When some bubbles appear on top, and bottom sides are browned, turn and brown other sides. Keep hot. Add butter to skillet as needed for other batches. Serve with maple syrup. Makes about 32.

Thirty years of Service and Over $300 Million Strong

AT WIT'S END

Sleep needed

By ERMA BOMBECK

There have always been conspiracies afoot to keep me from the 15 hours of sleep each night that I so desperately need to function.

If it wasn't small children who wanted an audience when they threw up in the middle of the night, it was a new puppy who thought just because I was tall, I was the only one in the house who could reach the doorknob to let him out at 3 a.m.

There was the snoring husband who is as close to sleeping on the San Andreas Fault as I want to get, who also made my year by mumbling just before going to sleep, "Did you lock the front door?"

And who could forget the teenage years when the kids kept hours like roaches while I rolled and tossed waiting for the sound of the car in the garage or the key in the door?

Now it seems Ma Bell has come up with a plan that will send me from my bed faster than a bug crawling up my leg . . . the cut-rate nocturnal phone call.

It's just an experiment now in Arizona, but given any encouragement, it could spread to other states. Here's how it works. Just after 10 p.m., a television commercial offers a 30-minute long-distance call to any point in the state until midnight for $1.49. Well, you can just guess what happened after that announcement was made. In a two-hour period, 24,000 Arizonans "reached out and shook some poor slob out of a sound sleep" to say, "Guess who this is and how much this call costs me?"

I see this as a rally by one of the most aggressive minority groups in this country: the night people. Already they have a network that provides them with nocturnal news, supermarkets that stay open all night so they can shop, and round-the-clock movies. I cannot imagine for a moment that one night person will call another night person. There just aren't that many to go around.

Frankly, I'm frightened. We have three grown children . . . living out of state . . . in another time zone . . . who finance their shampoo. In the past, we have instructed them if they call after 9:30 p.m., they had better be (a) bleeding or (b) held hostage.

God forbid at a buck forty-nine they might start confiding in us again.

Amish children leave old lifestyle

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Linda Miller Espinosa, now 30, remembers the morning very clearly. She got up and, instead of putting on her Amish clothes and putting up her hair, let her hair hang and put on the "worldly" clothes she had hidden away for the occasion.

Then she walked downstairs, holding her breath in preparation for the unfavorable reaction she knew awaited her. Leaving her family at the table, she walked outside and down to a store five houses away.

It was, she remembered, a very strange feeling.

She was almost 15 years old and no longer part of the Amish world.

Anna Mary Pickel looks as if she shops through fashion magazines. Her black slacks, buttoned at the ankles, and white jacket and red silky blouse are the height of this season's chic. Her makeup is perfect.

With a mischievous smile, she goes to a drawer and pulls out a postcard of several Amish children walking to school.

"That's me," said Mrs. Pickel, 35, pointing at a young girl in heavy black stockings and traditional Amish dress. "That picture was taken 20 years ago."

For every three Amish children who dress in what the tourist brochures describe as "quaint attire," one leaves the Amish faith sometime during the teen years. Some leave because they want to dress in what the Amish describe as "gay" or "fancy" clothes.

Others want to exchange those slow-moving horses and buggies that so fascinate tourists — and infuriate locals — for sleek, sporty cars. Still others leave because they feel their particular religious and spiritual needs are not being met within the insular world of the Amish faith.

Dr. John A. Hostetler, a professor of sociology and anthropology at Temple University in Philadelphia, and author of "Amish Society," says his research shows that 25 percent of all Amish children decide no to join the society.

Hostetler is himself part of those statistics; he decided not to join the church partly because he wanted to further his education, and Amish children stop their schooling after eighth grade.

"I don't think there are more Amish children leaving the church than 25 years ago," he said. "I think there are more that are staying. There's no threat to the Amish population."

There are good reasons to stay within the Amish community. It's safe and secure. People care about each other and help each other in times of need. The strict rules — and the punishment that follows from breaking the rules — shelter the Amish from the 20th-century choices and anxieties facing the rest of the world.

The Amish allow their teen-age children a brief glimpse of that other world. "Hoedowns," where teen-agers dance and drink and sometimes even dress like the rest of the world, are one example. By his or her late teens, however, an Amish person is expected to make a choice: the "plain" Amish way or the "fancy" way of the world.

The reason so few leave the church, Hostetler said, is because the bond of the Amish is so strong.

"There are two basic reasons for deviancy from the Amish church," he said. "One, a child who leaves the Amish church generally had parents who broke the rules, took exceptions to the rules in very subtle ways. Their children are then 10 times worse.

"I was brought up 'love thy neighbor' and when I got on the road it was definitely 'dog eat dog.'"

EDITOR'S NOTE: Rochelle Rabouin, who played Jewel in Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," is performing at Le Bistro in the southeast corner of Plaza Shopping Center with pianist Cy Roland in the duet "Just Friends." During a break one night, entertainment writer Georgia Temple talked with Ms. Rabouin about her life and career.

At 17, Rochelle Rabouin knew what destiny she wanted to capture from life's seemingly endless horizon.

"I always wanted to be a famous entertainer," Ms. Rabouin said, her brown eyes staring intently across the table.

The question was "how?"

Her 1973 graduation from El Paso's Andress High School was followed by a phone call from her brother Michel Henri. He was a percussionist touring with the Earl White Revue of Chicago. His query seemed to be her answer.

"You want to come on the road?" he asked."We need a singer."

"I was pretty naive," she said. "I had big ideas and big dreams."

Those dreams included performing in "big cabarets, big night clubs and singing on Johnny Carson," the 28-year-old jazz singer recounted, her voice tinged with the bittersweet laughter of one remembering the loss of adolescent naivete.

"When I got to Dallas-Fort Worth, the Earl White Revue consisted of nine musicians, the owner-manager of the band, a male vocalist and a dancer. The male vocalist and dancer were considered part of the revue and the band was a show band — the band and revue were separate.

"It wasn't what I expected it to be. I expected to see glitter, and all I saw was a bunch of people who got onstage in street clothes and sang and danced."

The first place the group performed after Ms. Rabouin joined them as female vocalist was "a little R 'n' B (rhythm and blues) club, a little dive."

She leaned forward; a slight shudder ran through her body at the memory. "On top of all that we were staying in a hotel that was not only occupied by people but also by cockroaches and rats — things that I wasn't used to."

Born in Chateauroux, France, Ms. Rabouin spent the first four years of her life in France, the next three in Germany and the last 10 in the United States. When the Rabouin family arrived in the United States, they lived in temporary quarters in New York and Missouri before settling in El Paso.

She was a "military brat" (Army) who had performed in plays at Fort Bliss and toured with the local USO troupe along with her two sisters, Denise and Patrice, and Michel Henri, as the "We Four." Still, she was in no way prepared for the life lessons she promptly experienced when she began touring with the Earl White Revue.

"I had heard of pimps, prostitutes and punks, but I had never seen any. It was a culture shock. I was brought up 'love thy neighbor' and when I got on the road it was definitely 'dog eat dog,'" Ms. Rabouin said. "After the initial shock of what was happening wore off, I stuck to my main goal of entertaining people. I didn't get sidetracked. My brother and I were the squares of the group."

Cy Roland and Ms. Rabouin, left photo, collectively known as "Just Friends," recently performed for an appreciative weeknight audience at Le Bistro. The duet plans to continue performing there. Cy, a former tuba student at the Boston Conservatory of Music, is studying engineering at The University of Texas at Austin.

Singer knows stage is not all glitter

Rochelle Rabouin sings the music she loves — jazz.

"I learned that being female and being on the road automatically puts you in the category of being a prostitute," she said. "One of my projects for the future is writing a book about being on the road — a guideline for women."

Besides the problem of the other members of the group "being older than us and having different attitudes," there was a communication gap.

"Everyone in the group was originally from the South. My parents never tolerated us using slang in the house and we never did. The language they spoke, we didn't understand."

But that wasn't all Ms. Rabouin experienced.

"We never really saw prejudice. When we got on the road, we saw it.

"My first incident of an actual racial incident was (in 1977) at Lawton, Okla. We went out to lunch, and I went up to get my lunch and an older white lady standing next to me told me, 'Niggers aren't allowed in here.' Ironically, the cooks were black and so were some of the waitresses."

Regardless of the problems she encountered, Ms. Rabouin "loved traveling and touring, especially to other countries (Canada and Mexico)."

Five years of touring brought her to the decision "to go back to school." She returned to El Paso Dec. 31, 1978.

"But music kept interrupting," she said, recounting how she met Roland Jones (stage name Cy Roland) at the Fort Bliss Recreation Center. "He was fooling around on the piano, and I was looking for a piano player." The two began performing together as Just Friends for private parties and on base at Fort Bliss.

Still, the same question nagged at her: "Can I really make it?" Although she didn't quit performing, she did enroll in courses in social sciences, journalism and human development at The University of Texas at El Paso.

She was 23 years old.

"I even started working at a job. I didn't like it, but I knew I had to make some money. I couldn't live with my parents the rest of my life."

Then Ms. Rabouin, who had once held the title of Miss Black El Paso, married Gary Bell. The couple has lived in Odessa since 1980. She received a jazz scholarship through Bernard Rose at Odessa College and took private lessons from Janice Archer of Midland.

The scholarship provided her the opportunity to pursue the kind of music she loved: the music that had been a constant childhood companion.

"My father was a jazz musician during the jazz era. When he married my mother, he went into the Army because he knew he'd have to have a steadier income," especially when "at that time there were limited places where a black jazz musician could play.

"That's where we all got our musical background. He'd help us in a lot of ways. If we wanted to play a musical instrument or sing, he'd say, 'Go ahead and do it. Do the best you can.' We took it from there."

Smiling, Ms. Rabouin recalled the family cornet all six children played, before she added, "There was nothing allowed in our house but jazz music."

— Rochelle Rabouin is performing at Le Bistro through Sept. 24. Call Le Bistro for the performance dates.

Good books list for kids

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents who are wondering what books are good for their children to read will find suggestions in reading lists published by the American Library Association and available in many libraries.

"Notable Books for Children" highlights books exhibiting venturesome creativity, including fiction, information, poetry and pictures for children through age 14. The books are among those an expert committee selected because they reflect and encourage children's interest in exemplary ways.

The Caldecott Medal is awarded annually to the artist of the most distinguished picture book for children published in a given year. ALA lists the Caldecott award-winning books, beginning in 1938.

A third suggested reading list features Newbery Medal books. This award is given annually to the author of the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children. The list includes titles beginning in 1922.

Accidents claim many preschoolers

Between the ages of 1-4, children need constant adult supervision, as their natural curiosity and exuberance can lead them into danger.

Accidents are the leading cause of death in the United States among very young children. In 1979, the latest year for which official figures are available, more than 3,300 children aged 1-4 died as a result of accidental injuries, a death rate of 27.1 per 100,000 population, according to a study published in the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Foundation.

At ages 1-4 accidents were responsible for nearly 3.5 times as many deaths as resulted from congenital diseases or defects, nearly six times the number of deaths from cancer, and about 11 times the number of deaths from influenza and pneumonia.

Motor vehicle accidents are the most frequent cause of accidental death at ages 1-4. The death rate among preschoolers as pedestrians increased with age, rising when children become more active, and were much higher among boys than among girls.

Device sheds light

NEW YORK (AP) — An Army device used to penetrate the darkness is working in peacetime for people with night blindness.

A three-pound "optical device," used by medical corpsmen and air rescue teams who need to see in the dark, has been converted by ITT Corp. into a 12-ounce night-vision aid resembling a monocular operaglass.

The new instrument is aimed at helping the nation's more than 100,000 victims of retinit is pigmentosa (RP).

She promotes consumer awareness

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — "Can you mention," Teresa Nasif reminds a reporter for the fourth or fifth time, "that it's the 'Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.'?"

With unabashed exuberance, Nasif is the government's premier promoter of consumer publications.

With a staff of 19 and control over a Government Printing Office distribution center in Pueblo, she works to get federal agencies to offer quality consumer-oriented publications through her quarterly catalog, which goes to 4.5 million subscribers, libraries, consumer groups, congressional offices, national parks and others. Last year, more than 14 million government booklets were distributed through the center.

But there's been a change in the center's listings since the Reagan administration took office. Seventy percent of the approximately 200 publications listed in the catalog for Spring, 1981 were distributed free. Now 40 percent are free.

The offerings range from a Securities and Exchange Commission handbook called "What Every Investor Should Know" to "Family Folklore" from the Smithsonian Institution's Office of American and Folklife Studies to "House Bat Management" from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We really aren't needed if the consumer is knowledgeable enough to know which agency to write to to get a publication he or she knows exists," Nasif said. "Since that just isn't the case, we were created to provide a more cost-effective way for the government to distribute information."

At Nasif's side, in a modern office in the bowels of an old federal building, are stacks of the publications she reviews to make sure they are current, informative and put together in attractive form. Before an agency prints a publication that is destined for the center's catalog, Nasif and her staff must approve its text and format.

Nasif said that the Agriculture and Health and Human Services departments traditionally have had the best publications but that the USDA recently pulled out of the distribution program because of budgetary constraints.

Recently, Nasif held up some publications of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the National Institutes of Health because they were not written in language that could be understood easily.

"At some agencies the people who are working to create the publications are too close to the program and can't explain it well," she said. "So, we will often make suggestions on how to make the booklets more usable."

Because of the Reagan administration's determination to have readers pay for publications whenever possible, Nasif said the center's distribution will fall from 14 million copies in 1982 to less than 10 million this year. Most of that is attributable to the loss of 25 free publications that the USDA said it can no longer afford to distribute.

In her General Services Administration office in Washington D. C., Teresa Nasif shows some of the publications distributed by the Consumer Information Center, which she directs.

Pickle making perturbing

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Problems with pickle making can be perturbing. Some common problems are shriveled, hollow, soft, slippery and dark pickles.

Shriveled pickles may result from using too strong a vinegar, sugar or salt solution at the start of the pickling process. In making very sweet or very sour pickles, it is best to start with a dilute solution and increase gradually to the desired strength. Overcooking or overprocessing may also cause shrinkage.

Hollow pickles may result from one of several causes. Poorly developed pickles may become hollow. Holding cucumbers too long before pickling is another cause. Hollowness may also result from too rapid fermentation or too weak a brine during fermentation.

Soft or slippery pickles usually result from microbial action which causes spoilage. Once a pickle becomes soft it cannot be made firm. Microbial activity may be caused by too little salt or acid, cucumbers not covered with brine during fermentation, scum scattered throughout the brine during fermentation, insufficient heat treatment, a seal that is not airtight, or moldy garlic or spices.

Blossoms, if not entirely removed from the cucumbers before fermentation, may contain fungi or yeast responsible for enzymatic softening of pickles.

Dark pickles may be caused by ground spice, too much spice, iodized salt, overcooking or minerals in water especially from iron utensils.

For best results with pickles use only quality cucumbers or other vegetables or fruits and follow tested recipes.

HOW TO MAKE PICCALILLI

Does your family enjoy relishes? How about piccalilli? Why don't you try making it home?

Combine one quart of chopped tomatoes, one cup each of sweet red and green peppers chopped, five cups of chopped cabbage and one-third cup of salt. Mix and let stand overnight. Drain and press in a clean, thin, white cloth to remove all of the liquid possible.

Then combine three cups vinegar and two cups of firmly packed brown sugar. Place two tablespoons whole mixed pickling spice loosely in a clean cloth and tie with a string. Add to the vinegar mixture and bring to a boil.

Add the vegetables, bring it to a boil and simmer about thirty minutes or until there is just enough liquid to moisten the vegetables. Remove the spice bag and pack the hot relish into clean, hot pint jars. Fill the jars to ⅛ inch of the top and close with lids according to the manufacturer's directions.

Process the piccalilli in boiling water for five minutes. Start to count processing time as soon as the water in the canner returns to boiling.

Remove the jars and set upright on a wire rack to cool.

If you want to know more about making piccalilli call or write to me at the Midland County Extension Service, 218 W. Illinois Ave., Midland, 79701, and we will provide you with a copy of MP-1137, "Quick Pickles and Relishes."

Mind is complex

LEVIS OPEN MON. thru SAT. General Clothing 300 E. Florida

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — What's big and gray and has four legs?

A correct answer: An elephant — but how do we know that?

University of Rochester Professor Patrick J. Hayes, a researcher in cognitive science, is studying how the mind works, using computer programs as models. But computers have a long way to go before they can answer the elephant question, he says.

"The mind works through an incredibly complex set of associations," Hayes explains. "A computer or a dictionary can take the word 'elephant' and tell you some of its characteristics, but to arrive at 'elephant' from its description — we don't really know how that's done."

DEAR ABBY

Affair fertile grounds for couple's court action

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I had an affair with a man I work with. I'm well over 21 and should have known better, but he told me he was "fixed" (vasectomy), so I didn't have to worry.

Well, he wasn't as "fixed" as he said he was because I turned up pregnant! When I told him, he didn't believe me, but after I showed him the lab report and my doctor's bill, he believed me. Marriage is out of the question because he isn't my type (for marriage). Besides, he is twice-divorced and says he will never marry again.

He went back to the doctor who performed his vasectomy and had some tests made that proved his vasectomy didn't hold. He's considering suing the doctor. In the meantime, I had an abortion, which cost me $300.

I was advised to sue him for leading me to believe that I was safe with him.

Two questions: Can I sue him? And can he sue his doctor? -- LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: You can sue anyone you want to sue. And so can he. Whether you (or he) can collect is another matter. There's a valuable lesson here. In matters as serious as contraception, leave nothing to chance. Assume that the responsibility is all yours - because it usually is.

DEAR ABBY: I know you asked to hear from men on the subject of whether the woman should call the man, or wait for him to call her, but I hope you will find the following gathered from my own experience worth sharing with your readers:

When I give my phone number to a man, I always ask for his because it's a very easy way to separate the married men from the single ones.

Men who have something (or "someone") at home to hide can be flushed out quickly, as they either refuse your request or give you a phony number.

Those who give you only the number of the place they work (with the lame excuse, "Well, that's where I usually am") merit suspicion.

Having a man's number can be very important if you make a date and for some reason have to cancel it, or want to tell him you'll be running late.

In these times a woman can't be too careful. Right, Abby? - TAKING NO CHANCES

DEAR TAKING: Right! (And neither can a man.)

DEAR ABBY: My father is in a wheelchair (spinal cord injury) and will never walk again. I am being married and would like to have my father "walk" me down the aisle and give me away in marriage, which presents a problem.

Would it look funny if Dad accompanied me down the aisle in his wheelchair? He can operate it himself, so it's not as if I would have to push it. He's not sensitive about being in a wheelchair and says he will do anything I want him to do. Has anybody ever done this? I'm afraid it wouldn't look right.

Could I have my older brother walk me down the aisle and have my father waiting for me to give me away in marriage?

Could I walk down alone and have my father waiting for me? Please give me some ideas.

Thank you. -- DECEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Any of the options you mentioned is perfectly acceptable. Do whatever is comfortable for you and your father. It's your day.

American Royal western event

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City celebrates its western heritage each year at the American Royal, the world's largest combined livestock, horse show and rodeo.

For three weeks in November, the Royal, 85-years-old this year, combines prize-winning livestock and horses and one of the nation's top rodeos, conjuring up images of the days when Kansas City was a frontier outpost and gateway to the west.

American Royal events, including an annual parade, draw thousands of visitors to the city. Among those visitors are more than 20,000 members of the Future Farmers of America youth organization, which holds its yearly convention here in conjunction with the Royal, according to ITT.

Ways to kill weeds

AP Newsfeatures

Lots of weeds growing in your garden these days? What is a weed? Where gardeners are concerned, it is a plant growing where you don't want it.

For the home garden, there are several ways to control weeds — cultivation and mechanical removal; hoeing and pulling; mulching or smothering; and herbicides or weed killers.

Here are suggestions to ease some weed problems:

Eliminate a lot of existing vegetation when establishing your garden by plowing or tilling under all plants. This perhaps is the safest and most common method of controlling small home garden weeds. Because only weeds actually present while hoeing can be controlled, you'll have to repeat the process several times during the growing season.

Shave weeds off with a sharp hoe. You do this while gently breaking the earth crust. Don't till deeply because you may severely injure shallow-rooted garden plants. Also, you may shift a fresh supply of weed seeds into position to germinate.

Southwest desert blew a wet kiss

By VICKI TORRES
Copley News Service

Late July to early August is the monsoon season in Arizona and New Mexico when purple thunderheads pile high and fierce desert winds blow helter-skelter until quarter-sized raindrops pelt down and lightning and thunder tear the sky.

Children, from the safety of porches, hold hands over ears and blink at the white bolts while horses run full-tilt across the desert.

Then it's over, leaving the land sweet with the smell of damp brush and the buzz of cicadas.

Taking advantage of this yearly drama, a friend and I decided to drive to Sedona, Oak Creek Canyon and the Grand Canyon in Arizona, and Santa Fe and Taos in New Mexico, despite the warnings of saner friends who told us of desert temperatures of 112 degrees. But we found the monsoons a constant, beneficial companion, scooting through the two states and lowering temperatures by 20 degrees.

Entering Phoenix we were greeted by a sudden, cooling squall, a 15-minute downpour that brought out a rainbow over the city, an omen of our trip to come.

After an overnight stop, we continued north to Cordes Junction, a typical diesel stop on a grassy mesa, except for the presence of Arcosanti, architect Paolo Soleri's dream city of the future.

Little more than a small complex of arcs and skylights, the community is built of wood and concrete and clings to the side of a narrow canyon, housing a small cafe, college students who are building the city and a unique ecological and technological vision of the future.

For $3 we toured the complex and got a heady dose of idealism, made all the more dramatic by a desert thunderstorm that made us race from one building to the next. When it was over, we stood enchanted by the smell of the freshly washed land and dreams of the future that tinkled in our minds like the strange, hauntingly musical brass wind chimes made and sold at Arcosanti.

Back on the highway we took the Sedona and Oak Creek Canyon cutoff, a two-lane, twisting road that rounded a bend and deposited us smack in front of spectacular, pink buttes towering overhead. Dreams of the future disappeared in dreams of Montgomery Clift in "Red River" as we gazed at classic, Western movie-set landscapes.

In Sedona, once a burger-and-malt stop and now a fashionable artists' colony, we pulled into Tlaquepaque, a shopping center modeled after a Mexican village. Visitors strolled through jewelry stores and art galleries but we hunted for lunch and ended up at the incongruous Rene at Tlaquepaque, where waiters in ruffled shirts, cummerbunds and tuxedo pants waited on diners clad in shorts and sandals.

After lunch, we drove through the canyon's leafy green shadows until oak trees gave way to tall pines and we reached Flagstaff, a winter ski resort and home of Northern Arizona University. The air was crisp and damp with puddles on the roadway from a recent shower, a welcome change from the desert, but we pushed on and reached Grand Canyon National Park at sunset.

CNS Photo

Tlaquepaque, in Sedona, Ariz., is a charming crafts center modeled after a Mexican village. It has shops, studios and its own chapel.

Reservations are required to get a room on the south rim in Grand Canyon Village and the choice is varied, from the roughing-it charm of the Bright Angel Lodge to the faintly European sophistication of El Tovar Hotel. Our choice was the dormitory-styled Kachina Lodge that gave us a picture window of the canyon for $60 a night.

Rain ponchos came in handy during our stay. Although clouds obscured the sunsets, they also brought daily cooling showers, spectacular lightning bolts over the canyon, and shifting rays of light from the clouds.

Leaving, we drove east along the south rim, a flatter, more expansive view that looks toward the Painted Desert and the unending Indian reservation with its desolate, dry washes and occasional Navajo roundhouse.

We zipped again past Flagstaff and on through the flat, grassy deserts near Holbrook and Winslow while rain squalls swept our way, the wind blowing and horses galloping in panic along the side of the road.

We spent the night in Gallup, N.M., where Stetson-attired Indians thronged the sidewalks and in the morning whipped past Albuquerque to reach Santa Fe, just as rain clouds were threatening again.

A stay in Santa Fe requires reservations weeks ahead. Ours were at La Posada, a hotel of small adobe bungalows north of the city on six quiet acres where aspen trees waved in the wind. For $64, we had a suite of rooms complete with a wood-burning kiva (Indian-style fireplace), a balcony and kitchenette.

In the hills behind the hotel, we found unpaved streets with goats in the front yard of one house and through the open door of another, someone's uncertain tenor singing along to a recording of "La Traviata." Santa Fe is that kind of city, a still-rural and unspoiled area with a veneer of sophistication and culture.

Scouting the city, we found nearly every house, building and hotel is adobe. They are really cinderblock with pink stucco plastered on top but they give the city a warm, human scale. No mirrored glass skyscrapers pierce the sky here.

Cruise out of ordinary

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A CRUISE OF ANOTHER SORT: A swamp may not sound like the most attractive of places to visit, but there is a quiet loveliness in the forests of tupelo gum and cypress draped with Spanish moss found in the Great Dismal Swamp on the eastern border of Virginia and North Carolina, about an hour south of Norfolk.

For $1 an hour, travelers passing through the area can rent a canoe at Merchants Millpond State Park, just off U.S. 158 a few miles north of Gatesville, N.C., and explore a wildlife sanctuary and garden little changed in the years since George Washington visited the area.

Water lilies float on the 700-acre millpond, and occasionally wild swans or an otter can be seen gliding by. There are hiking trails, and primitive drive-in, canoe and backpacking campsites are available. Reservations are necessary for camping and canoeing.

Tour Britain for $20 per day

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

TRULL, England — Doing Britain on $20 a day is the title of this little opus. (Are you listening, Arthur Frommer?)

Travelers who've had their fill of Buckingham Palace, theater in Oxford and the waters in Bath now may escape into the boonies for the good life on a farm.

Strung out across Britain are more than 600 farmhouses that offer solace to the vacationer. What better way to knock heads with the country's little people while ringing down the curtain on stress?

Picture a herd of dairy cows, scads of chickens, a vegetable garden and miles of pasture that collide with the brooding Blackdown Hills and there you have it, Higher Dipford Farm in the rural community of Trull. Only put away the atlases. Trull is so obscure that frequently the cattle can't find their way home at night. But never mind, because all of this is just fine with Maureen and Chris Fewings who keep the butter churning at Higher Dipford.

AS FARMERS IN England's West Country, the Fewings have no hankering for the crowded cities. They've made their peace in Trull and are willing to share it with travelers weary of body and mind for 12 British pounds a day, which figures out to under $20. What one gets for this sum is a bedroom with private bath, along with a huge breakfast and an evening meal that'd satisfy an Olympic miler.

Maureen Fewings, running about in her stocking feet, tells of a love of cooking and her menu bears this out. It runs the gamut from pheasant and spring lamb to milk-fed pork, duck, turkey, fresh salmon and scallops. Vegetables are garden fresh. So, for that matter, is the fruit, which frequently ends up in a trifle heaped with clotted cream.

This is a working dairy farm with cows, calves, pigs and free-range hens. Besides Chris and Maureen Fewings there are James, 9, a couple of cats (Gertrude and Albert III) and a dog named Khyber who share this 600-year-old farmhouse with its elm beams and inglenook fireplaces that flame with logs.

Guests help hay, gather eggs or just loaf. The choice is theirs. An Austrian couple who dropped by for six days recently got so involved with life on the farm they stayed on for three weeks, exploring Devon and the Somerset countryside, attending cattle markets, and joining Maureen while she canned raspberries, blackberries, plums and apricots, collected honey and turned out marvelous cakes and pies.

DURING THE HOLIDAYS this farmer's wife cooks 30-pound turkeys and plum puddings, and pours the sort of mead that brought a quiver to the lips of Henry VIII. Meanwhile, guests gather holly and mistletoe and join the search for the perfect Christmas tree.

The Fewings belong to a group called Somerset Farms & Country Holidays that numbers a total of 18 farm and country homes, including a slick spread operated by neighbors Jenny and Richard Leigh. The Leigh farm is shared by sons Andrew, 16, and Thomas, 10, a daughter, Bridget, 14, three cats, a donkey (Angelina), a pony (Danny), sheep, chickens and 112 dairy cows that keep everyone hopping from daybreak till well after sundown.

Jenny is a joy. Exactly five feet tall, she wears a constant smile while puttering about the kitchen preparing steamed treacle puddings, apple crumble, meringue nests, scones, cookies, marmalade, cottage pie, roasted chickens, fish and chips and a variety of other good things in her 16th-century farmhouse.

AT LEIGH FARM — it stretches across 120 acres — guests dip into a heated swimming pool, and there's a game room with murals of Mickey Mouse, Pluto and Donald Duck. Honeysuckle vines crawl a split-rail fence, and the air is as fresh as the stream that flows nearby.

In the evening a fire crackles in the lounge. A teakettle hums in the kitchen. Life is relaxed. A pox on formality, says Jenny, who charges only 11 pounds per person for shelter and meals, which figures out to about $17 a day. Guests share five bedrooms, and there's a cottage with additional accommodations. At Leigh Farm, youngsters play cricket and football and grown-ups sunbathe beside the swimming pool or help round up the cows. Or just do nothing. It's that sort of place. No rules, no pressures, no commitments.

Beyond here, in the foothills of the Quantocks, there's Ball's Farm with its beef cattle, chickens, ducks, geese, and ponies for the children to ride. Each farm presents an individual profile. A trout stream runs through Frog Street Farm in the village of Beercrocombe. And at Greenway Farms in North Newton guests picnic in an orchard and catch carp in a pond. Or, there's Rydon Farm with its mullioned windows and a private road that stops at its door.

ANGELINA HAWKINS IS the mistress of Little Cutsey, a farm that sets smack in the middle of pasture not far from Jenny Leigh's place. Little Cutsey is home to 120 dairy cows and seven puppies in addition to Mrs. Hawkins. A huge guest bedroom on the second floor has its own bath and a stunning view that unfolds clear to the Blackdown Hills. An oak tree and an immense copper beech spread their shade for guests in the farmhouse, as well as a self-catering cottage with three bedrooms. The entire cottage is yours for less than $25 a night or about $150 a week. For guests who write ahead, Mrs. Hawkins will stock the larder and fresh milk and eggs are always available.

It was Mrs. Hawkins who recruited the farmers who host the tourists. For only a buck she'll mail you their brochure describing each property. (Write to Angelina Hawkins, Little Cutsey Farm, Trull, Taunton, Somerset TA3 7 NY, England.)

Somerset and Devon with their moors and rolling pastures, ancient boroughs and coastal villages provide a variety of scenes for the Instamatic crowd. The farm guests explore Exmoor and Dartmoor with their brooding hills, gorse, heather and bright wildflowers. At the picture-postcard village of Winsford they stop for a pint at the Royal Oak, and later they take lunch at Simonsbath House Hotel, a charming nine-room inn and restaurant operated by a couple of Scottish expatriates, Archie and Margaret Brown.

Ireland paving the way for industrial revolution

By JUDITH G. RHOADES
Copley News Service

With the pace that Ireland has set for itself to encourage and assist foreign investment, within the next few years, it will be in the midst of an industrial revolution. Already, there are signs of increased population on the south side of Dublin. Housing tracts appear to be springing up overnight. Factories are looking for more and more trained personnel. And there is a constant complaint about the inadequacy of telephone service.

In response to the poor telephone service, Ireland has committed 800 million pounds over the next two years for improvement of the phone system. This huge capital outlay should give this small country the most modern system in Europe.

Technical employees are being trained and retrained for various industries through the Irish training center, Anco. The Anco facility which I visited was housed in a modern brick building in Cork. The school has a faculty of 84 instructors and teaches 32 subjects — everything from papering with wallpaper, to advanced electronics, with cosmetology and carpentry in between. The facility is impressive, and people are waiting in the wings to enter if one applicant does not appear. Anco also tries to place each student after completion of the curriculum. Anco would be similar to American community or junior colleges or vocational schools except that the students receive monthly stipends. Anco hopes that these students will fulfill the needs of technical personnel required by the new companies coming to Ireland.

One company which is very happy with its location in Ireland is Verbatim.

Ireland is changing its image. Yes, it has its beautiful castles and ruins, magnificent green countryside and friendly people. But the only shamrocks and shelaigehs one can find are those in the duty-free shop at the Shannon Airport. I found it a wonderful country and am looking forward to making another visit.

Old Boston waterfront called "Sleeping Beauty"

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BOSTON — Port Point Channel, a mile-long ditch filled with seawater and sewage, is the demarcation line between the old Boston and the new.

To the west stand glass and steel skyscapers, a multibillion-dollar investment in the city's future as an international center of finance and high technology.

To the east lie 300 acres of weeds, abandoned piers and little-used waterfront buildings, the ruins of a city of seafarers.

The channel, spanned by three old and rickety bridges, has stopped the downtown development frenzy from spreading to the South Boston waterfront. But today, with the downtown nearly full of new buildings, developers are poised to bolt across the barrier.

The waterfront, Daniel Rose, architect for one of the developers, said, "is a Sleeping Beauty waiting to be kissed awake."

Development on the South Boston watefront, Mayor Kevin H. White said, will exceed the downtown development that has been proceeding at a rate of $1 billion a year the past three years.

Waterfront plans already on architects' drawing boards amount to $1 billion in new construction.

The plans include office towers, condominiums and at least two new hotels.

Commonwealth Pier, a nearly empty waterfront building the site of three football fields, is to be converted into an international marketplace for the area's computer industry.

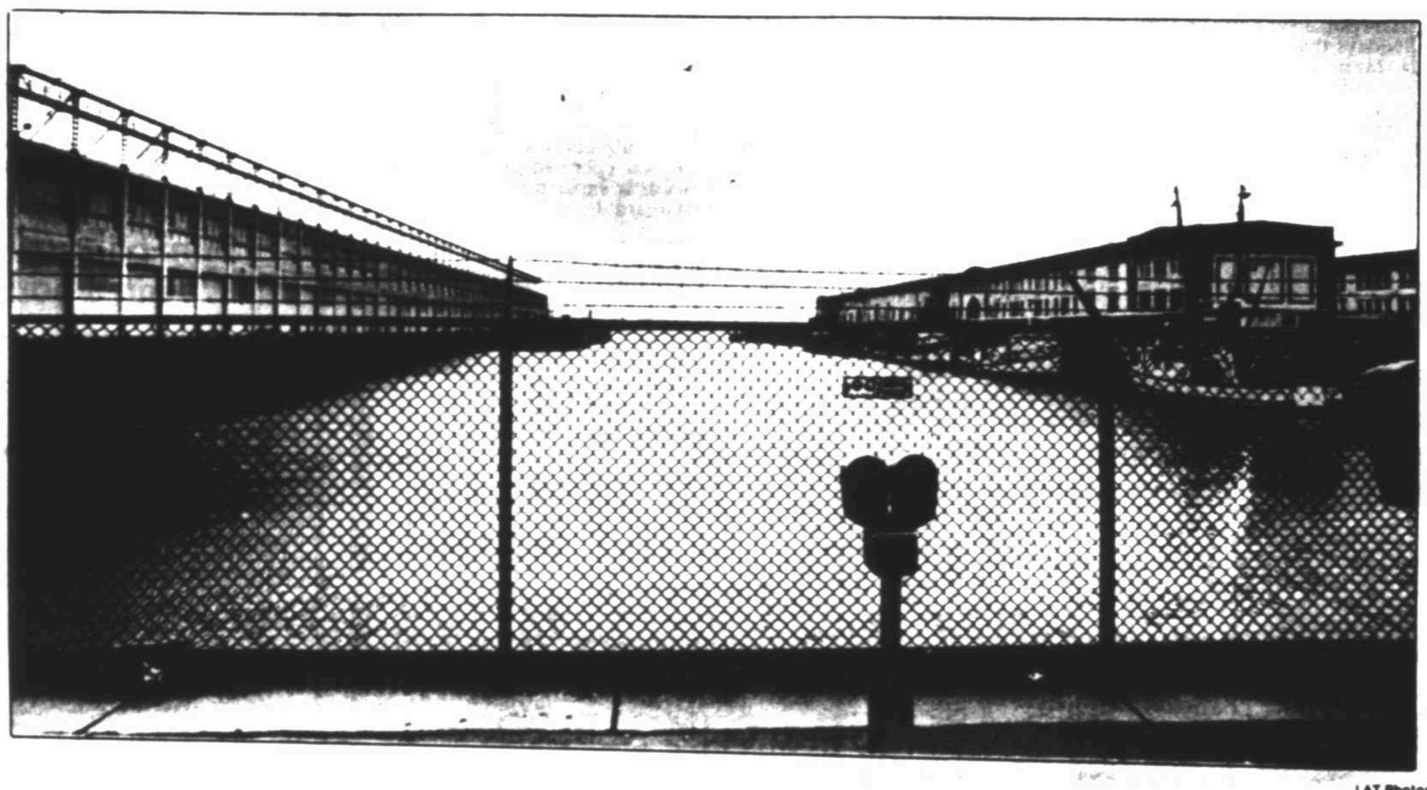
Developers expect 600,000 buyers a year to fly to Boston from around the world to shop for computers at the center when it opens sometime next year.

Some of the other development proposals will take longer to be completed. However, Thomas Ennen, executive director of The Boston Harbor Associates, a non-profit group concerned with harbor issues, predicts that the entire South Boston waterfront will be developed within 10 years.

The planned development, he said, "amounts to the fabrication of a new neighborhood on a scale rarely possible in the constricted confines of an old eastern seaboard city."

Few of the development plans involve maritime use. Boston is growing as a center of finance and high technology, but it has become and is likely to remain a second-class port.

Relics of the once-great port hang on the walls of Anthony's Pier 4 Restaurant, the lone modern structure on the South Boston waterfront. There are brass divers' helmets, ships' bells, fishermen's nets and a mounted swordfish.



LAT Photos

Anthony Athanas, top, owns Anthony's Pier 4 restaurant and 35 acres of nearby piers in Boston. He plans to build a hotel, offices and condominums, and the Boston Fish Pier, bottom, will be renovated for offices and the area's fishing industry.

Anthony Athanas, the "Anthony" in the restaurant name, entered America through the port of Boston about 60 years ago as an immigrant from Albania. Today, he is a central figure in development plans for the South Boston waterfront.

One of Athanas's first jobs was washing dishes in a Lynn, Mass., restaurant. When the restaurantg went bankrupt, he bought it at an auctionsale. Soon he was running a string of successful restaurants in the Boston area.

In 1959, he bought Pier 4 on the waterfront as a site for a new restaurant. He had to finance construction of the restaurant himself because bankers did not believe anyone would come to that decaying area of the city to eat. The bankers were wrong, and the restaurant has become nationally famous for its great seafood.

Athanas "kept the chowder good and hot put my money into land." He bought 35 acres of huge stone-and-earth piers near the restaurant in the early 1960s for a total of about $2 million."

"I knew," he said, "that one day this would be one of the most beautiful areas in the country." Today his land is considered among the most valuabble pieces of undeveloped real estate in the United States.

Athanas, a short and thin 72-year-old man with hispy white hair, said he would develope eight of those acres himself. His plans include a small hotel, an office building and condominiums.

He will develope the rest of the property in partnership with Hyatt Corp. of Chicago. Plans call for a 1,000-room hotel, an office building and waterfront condominiums in four towers and a row of townhouses.

In all, buildings with 3 million square feet of floor space are planned for Athanas's property at a total development cost of up to $500 million. A marina, to be dug behind the condominiums, will be the only marine use in Athanas's plan.

At the Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport), the state agency responsible for operating the port of Boston, there is no dismay over the loss of these huge piers to marine use. Anne Aylward, maritime director, said there are no prospects that these piers will be needed again for port operations.

The port of Boston was the first great U.S. port. It led the colonies in shipping through the colonial period. It lost its lead to New York City during the War of 1812, then regained it in the mid-19th century days of clipper ships and the China trade. But for the past 125 years, the port of Boston has suffered one setback after another.

Boston was late in entering the steamship era. When the railroads made New York City the terminus for major lines from the Midwest, Boston lost any chance of sharing in the shipment of agricultural products to Europe. Early in this century, the Boston area's manufactured goods such as shoes and machinery were high in value but low in bulk; and much of it was sold locally. Thus, ships that unloaded raw materials here left mostly empty.

The automobile ended coastal passenger service; and by the time the airlines ended the era of the trans-Atlantic passenger travel, most of the traffic had long since been transferred to New York City anyway. The latest major blow came in the 1970s, when the city was late to convert its piers for the handling of containerized shipping.

Today, according to Massport figures, Boston has fallen to fifth in tonnage among ports on the Atlantic coast. The total cargo passing through the port is about 26 million short tons — not much more than it was in 1929. The bulk of it, Aylward said, is petroleum and liquefied natural gas. Massport is busy rebuilding the port, but on a relatively small scale. Nineteen million dollars is being spent to convert the old Castle Island Terminal in South Boston into a two-craned berth for container shipping. Eighty million dollars is being spent to build the Massport Marine Terminal, a 47-acre South Boston site for container shipping.

The agency and private interests are spending $19 million to renovate the old Boston Fish Pier in South Boston for the vigorous Boston fishing industry. However, 80,000 square feet of floor space in the three, huge pier buildings will not be needed for the fishing business and will be leased as office space.

Except for a portion of the old Boston Army Base — being reserved in hopes that the Navy will station its new battleship surface action group there — the rest of the South Boston waterfront is open for development.

Plans for 68-year-old Commonwealth Pier, once a busy cargo and passenger terminal, are a dramatic example of the city's growing investment in high technology.

Greek bargains in '84

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

If you couldn't make Greece this year, the National Tourist Office of Greece sends along heartening news. By agreement of the organization of Greek hoteliers, the price for a hotel room in 1984 will be the same as in 1983.

American tourists find dollars go further abroad

By The Associated Press

A pint of beer in a London pub will cost a thirsty American tourist the equivalent of $1.16 this summer, about 5 percent less than it did last year.

The price of the pint hasn't gone down. In fact, it's gone up — from 70 pence to 76 pence, a rise of 9 percent.

But the value of the dollar has gone up even more — about 14 percent. An American had to spend $1.74 to buy a pound in July 1982; it takes only about $1.53 today.

That means the pint is cheaper. So are many hotels, restaurants, tourist attractions and souvenirs all over Europe, and the favorable rate of exchange is drawing Americans abroad. The U.S. Travel Data Center, a national, non-profit information center in Washington, D.C., predicts 7 percent more Americans will travel overseas in 1983 than in 1982.

"The Americans are back and they are welcome," said a spokesman for the British Tourist Authority, which expects 15 percent more U.S. visitors this year than last.

French officials also expect a 15 percent rise in the number of visiting Americans and a spokesman said, "The rate of the dollar is mainly responsible." The dollar buys 7.78 francs this year, up 15 percent from the 6.78 francs it would have bought in 1982.

It will cost 310 francs to see the cabaret at the Crazy Horse Saloon in Paris, up 11 percent from the 1982 price of 280 francs. But translate those francs into dollars and it costs $39.85, down about 4 percent from the $41.30 of last year.

A meal at the three-star Tour d'Argent restaurant starts at about $36 per person, without wine — down from about $40 last year. At the more modest, no-star Chez Maitre Paul in the Latin Quarter, the starting price is a little over $10, down from almost $12 a year ago.

The price of a 118-milliliter or 3¼-ounce bottle of Chanel No. 5 perfume has gone up by 25 francs or 14 percent — from 180 francs in 1982 to 205 francs today. But in dollars, the price has dropped 20 cents — from $26.55 to $26.35.

In a few cases, inflation has outstripped the rise in the value of the dollar. A double room at the medium-priced Piccadilly Hotel in London, for example, has gone up 18 percent, from 55 pounds to 65 pounds — an increase of about $3.50. But prices for other items are unchanged. The top price for a ticket to the hit musical, "Cats," has stayed at 13.50 pounds, and that translates into a decrease of about $3.

Prices at several West German hotels also are unchanged from last year, while the dollar is worth 5 percent more marks — about 2.57 today versus 2.44 in the summer of 1982.

A double room and breakfast at the Hotel Atlantic in Hamburg will cost 280 marks — about $115 a year ago or $109 today. The cheapest ticket to the Bayreuth Festival, featuring Richard Wagner operas, also is unchanged; at 6 marks, that works out to a drop of about a dime in U.S. currency. A 400-milliliter or 12-ounce bottle of the local 4711 Eau de Cologne is more expensive if paid for in marks — 47.50 this year compared to 46.50 last year. Converted into dollars, however, the price is down — from $19.05 to $18.50.

The number of U.S. tourists, meanwhile, is up. German hotels registered 2.83 million overnight visits by Americans in 1982. Registrations are running 9.6 percent higher so far this year.

The summer-to-summer increase in the value of the dollar in Europe has been particularly high in Spain and Italy. Travelers are getting 147 pesetas for their dollars this year, up 32 percent from 111 pesetas last year. And the dollar is worth about 1,500 lire today, up 22 percent from 1982.

ONE OF THE DIRTIEST JOBS IN THE OILFIELD

Imagine yourself and your overalls covered with oil, dirt, black iron sulfite, and rust. You're not soaking in Palmolive; injection water soaked you while you were pulling pipe.

No doubt about it: Your job, oilwell servicing, is one of the dirtiest around.

"There's not much that's worse," said one well service hand. "Most of the time it's pretty nasty work."

The money is just alright, with pay starting at $9 per hour for a rig operator, head of a crew, and $5.25 per hour for an inexperienced floorhand, a man who works at ground-level — where the hole is, he is. You will not get rich — overtime is rare since the oil boom slacked off.

A well servicing job could take a couple of hours or a couple of 93-hour weeks. The day starts at 7 a.m. and ends at 6:30 p.m., with most of the time in-between occupied by wire rope, power tongs, hopper rigs, rubber swab cups, a blowout-preventer, a tubing spider, and avoiding hydrogen sulfide (H2S) gas — which can be deadly.

YOUR OWN SAFETY, and others', is one of the chief considerations in doing a well servicing job.

Charles J. George Well Servicing, Odessa, has won industry safety awards and recently won the Oilfield Olympics at the city's Boomtown Days. One of the company's crews recently spent 93 hours one week, and a good deal of time the next, refurbishing a water disposal well in a major field near Goldsmith. The well usually takes in 5,000 barrels a day of water from more than 200 wells.

That well was extremely dirty. Once it was cleaned and refurbished, it wouldn't hold pressure — it had held before — and the crew started all over again.

"I've been having nightmares about that job," Tim Westbrook, a floorhand, said. But this job was an exception. Things usually go smoother.

John Sealy, a well servicing rig operator with George for two and one-half years, recently lead his crew through a more routine job — a "rod job" as it's called in the oil field.

PRODUCTION pumpers noticed black shavings coming out of a stuffing box — and an absence of oil on the polish rod that is at the top of the string lifting up the black gold. They told Sealy electrolysis had probably damaged a few rods.

Sealy said he and his crew can do four or five 4,500-foot well jobs a day — replacing all the rods and even changing the downhole pump — if everything goes right. "It's very seldom everything does go right," he said.

Westbrook, Kenneth Diamond, and replacement hand George Bissy, made up Sealy's crew.

They went to work first stopping the 440-volt automatic pump jack and disassembling the well head.

All that could be seen of thousands of feet of tubing, casing and rods in the ground was a small valve-stem with a hole in the top and pressure gauges on the side. There isn't much to see around an oilwell, except the pump jack.

THE CREW worked fast. They lined up — "spotted" — the service rig at the well, untangled wire ropes, placed the rig 'feet' on wood planks, extended it to full height and tied down guy wires, all within 30 minutes of pulling the rig up to the site in a dusty cloud.

Sealy opened a valve at the well head to let off excess pressure. A gray, oily gas escaped. Soon, he had a good idea of what needed to be done to get the well pumping.

Sealy said, "The rods are parted real shallow. Something got to them. They are corroded and pitted away.

"We'll pull the rods until we get to the part," he instructed, "then we fish for and replace that piece and put the well back in service."

His team had to get new rods and connecting "boxes" from the production staff to complete the job.

THE DERRICK hand, the man who works at the top of a rig, normally has the safest job. Nothing can be dropped on his head. But on the rod job the derrick hand, two floor hands (working tongs and elevators) and Sealy all worked from the ground. Sealy ran the whole show. When he shouted directions crew members jumped.

A hundred different things can happen during well service jobs, Sealy said. "You never know what you'll be doing until you get into it."

A fishing tool was rigged, lengths of rod were added and lowered into the hole. Sealy handled the fishing tool himself, feeling around the hole, as the rod he wanted to hook might have been off to the side.

Sealy knew when he had hooked the broken rod on the fishing string. He felt the increased weight.

There are so many corrosives involved in oil recovery, especially in enhanced CO2 and nitrogen recovery projects, that wells deteriorate faster today, Sealy noted. Downhole tubing and rods are better quality, but anything wears out eventually.

Sealy and crew replaced the bad rods and boxes and sealed up the wellhead in just a couple of hours.

It was pumping again; Sealy was off to another job.

Energy Legislation Report

By GARDNER SELBY
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The following list gives the purpose and status of major energy-related bills pending before the 98th Congress as compiled by the House Office of Legislative Information.

Bills with a change in status, such as a hearing, amendments or committee referral, are included. Bills from previous charts not included in this list are still pending, and no new action has been taken.

States News Service issued the last list July 12.

New Energy Legislation

House of Representatives

HR 3660 ..... Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Purpose: Amend the Federal Power Act to specify annual charges for projects with licenses issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for the use of federal dams and other structures.

Status: Introduced and referred to House Committee on Energy and Commerce July 26.

Senate

S 1780 ..... Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ala.

Purpose: Entitled the Solar Energy National Security and Employment Act of 1983, it aims to stimulate solar energy applications by expanding tax incentives and encouraging jobs training programs to include solar-energy related programs.

Status: Introduced and referred to Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources Aug. 4.

S 1768 ..... Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Purpose: Amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide energy tax credits for equipment used aboard or installed on fishing vessels.

Status: Introduced and referred to Senate Committee on Finance Aug. 4.

S 1732 ..... Sen. Arlen Specter, D-Pa.

Purpose: Amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to increase the energy investment tax credit for conversions to coal-fueled facilities and other purposes.

Status: Introduced and referred to Senate Committee on Finance Aug. 3.

Changes In Status

House of Representatives

HR 3244 ..... Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Purpose: Re-establish a state's authority to formulate or enforce any energy efficiency standard or similar requirement if a federal standard has not been established.

Status: Reported out to House by House Committee on Energy and Commerce on July 26.

HR 3132 ..... Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala.

Purpose: Making appropriations for energy and water development projects for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1984.

Status: Signed into law by President Reagan July 14.

HR 2615 ..... Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Purpose: Provide for the weatherization of remaining eligible low-income dwelling units throughout the United States and create weatherization-related employment.

Status: Reported to House, with amendments, by House Rules Committee on July 20.

HR 1865 ..... Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Mich.

Purpose: Amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to prohibit take-or-pay clauses or similar minimum purchase requirements; prohibit indefinite price escalator clauses; and allow the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to prohibit pass-through of natural gas prices.

Status: Sent to full House Committee on Energy and Commerce by Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels on July 29.

HR 1441 ..... Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill.

Purpose: Establish new import prices for natural gas and liquefied natural gas as approved by the Department of Energy for importation.

Status: Sent to full Committee on Energy and Commerce by Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels on July 29.

HR 1398 ..... Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Purpose: Promote energy conservation by expanding daily saving time.

Status: Rejected by full House, 211-199, on July 14.

HJR 58 ..... Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

Purpose: A joint resolution requiring the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to begin rulemaking related to natural gas pipeline rate designs, and to report findings, conclusions and recommendations to the Congress.

Status: Sent to full House Committee on Energy and Commerce by Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels on July 29.

Senate

S 1132 ..... Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

Purpose: Specify the annual charges for projects with licenses issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for the use of federal dams and other structures.

Status: Hearings held by Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources on July 25.

S 1107 ..... Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

Purpose: Authorize Department of Energy appropriations for fiscal years 1984 and 1985.

Status: Unanimously approved by Senate Armed Services Committee and approved by Senate, as amended, by unanimous consent July 28.

Entrepreneurial expert enthusiastic

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The future for entrepreneurs, especially those who specialize in small businesses, has never been brighter, claims a nationally known expert on entrepreneurism.

And it is small businesses which will lead to the recovery and diversification of Midland, the state and nation.

Albert Shapero, who holds the William H. Davis Chair in the American Free Enterprise System at The Ohio State University, is an acknowleged expert on management, industrial development, entrepreneurship and small business. He spoke last week in the third and final evening program sponsored by the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

Shapero said in the long run, it will be entrepreneurism which will add jobs and diversification to any city. He defined an entrepreneur as a person or group of individuals which takes the initiative to do something and do it with relative autonomy.

The entrepreneurial spirit can be seen in new business formation, civic life, corporations and within government, he said.

Statistics show that small businesses, which are products of the entrepreneurial spirit, provide the bulk of new jobs and new innovations in the economy, he said.

"The logic is inescapable: small businesses can only go up in size and are more likely to be innovative. In a big company, productivity eventually means eliminating jobs."

Shapero said he firmly believes encouraging small businesses is a better way to improve the economic base of a city than is courting big corporations. As competition to attract "high-tech" business heats up between American cities, Midland included, the effectiveness of the chase will dwindle, he warned.

"There is just too much competition there," he said. "Go help your small businesses market better, improve their efficiency, and you'll add one fourth as many jobs."

According to the Internal Revenue Service, there are between 14 million and 15 million small businesses in the United States; last year, during a supposed recession, they were joined by almost 1 million new businesses, Shapero said. The profitability of new enterprises is between 25 percent and 105 percent, while big corporations feel themselves lucky to report profits of 17 percent, he added.

Shapero said it is a myth that 90 percent of new businesses fail after the first year. He said the myth discourages young people from trying to start their own ventures.

"It's a crock of nonsense. No one in the U.S. has the slightest idea of the failure rate. Besides, is failure all that bad? Lots of successful businessmen have failed once or twice or even more.

"Failure may be a bruise to the individual ego, but the resources of that person are not lost to the community. Failure may be the best substitute for a poor business education."

Most people who fail in a new business venture learn enough by the experience, and grow to love their independence so much, that they start another business eventually, Shapero said.

One of the main reasons people start their own business is because they are fired from an existing job — or they become frustrated by it and quit.

"It happens in Midland all the time," he said. "You see engineers getting laid off and six months later, the number of engineering consultants is up. Or, a landman says to his geologist buddy, 'Hey, I'm sick of this major company. I'm a good landman and you're a good geologist — let's start our own business.'"

Other entrepreneurs who go into business for themselves include:

— Women who, suddenly divorced, widowed, or suffering from the "empty-nest syndrome," realize they must do something to make a living;

— Mature adults who, believing they will soon be too old, think, "I've always had this idea for a business, and it's now or never;"

— Creative types who come up with a great idea, only to have it turned down by their boss or stifled by corporate red tape.

Shapero has made a study for 20 years of the characteristics of an entrepreneur and how his or her typical optimism can be transmitted to business graduate students.

By interviewing small business entrepreneurs in countries all over the world, Shapero said he found common things which linked a Ph.D in Texas with a Zulu shoe repairman in Africa. They each display optimism for the future and a belief they can control their lives.

The most important difference between small business owners and other people is that the entrepreneurs believe they have free will and independence. Shapero said studies have shown that the human race can be divided into two basic groups: those who act like they have free will, and those who act like they don't.

"Interviewing entrepreneurs is fun," Shapero said. "They keep you lively. They always think there is a future."

He cited a Zulu man who, at the age of 102, started a shoe repair business. He believed there was a future; he did not dwell on the past.

According to Shapero, money is not the main motivation for an entrepreneur. Freedom is. "What drives them is wanting to take control over their own lives."

Entrepreneurs usually have a high energy level, enthusiasm and lots of creativity. In addition, they don't perceive certain actions that others think are risky as being risky.

They often tell Shapero, during interviews, "I didn't know it couldn't be done. No one told me this was impossible, so I did it."

The choice to start a new business comes from two perceptions: that a person thinks it's a desirable thing to do, and he thinks it's feasible or possible.

People need to feel they can do it, Shapero said, because they think they have the skill, resources, experience, or encouragement to do so.

Although having a mentor to provide advice and encouragement is good, Shapero said, "The most important thing is to see someone else, whom you don't think is all that special, succeed. Then, you think, 'If that jerk can do it, I certainly can do it.'"

Texas entrepreneurial conference slated

Former Texas Governor Bill Clements; John Cater, chairman of the board of Southwest Bancshares; and Benjamin Woodson, retired chairman of the board and CEO of the American General Companies, are among the featured speakers at the 1983 Texas Business Entrepreneurial Conference.

Formal daily three-hour conference sessions will be supplemented by the opportunity throughout the week for informal one-on-one discussions with the speakers.

The conference, sponsored by Texas Business magazine and a tour company, takes place November 12 to 19 onboard American Hawaii Cruises' liner Independence, as it cruises from port to port in the Hawaiian Islands.

The cost of the trip, including the cruise and conference, ranges from $1,395 to $2,795, depending on the level of accomodations aboard ship. The maximum deduction allowed by the IRS is $2,000 per taxpayer, per year. Airfare to Honolulu is not included in the package price, but special rates are available to conference participants from most cities.

A $100 tax-deductible contribution, per participant, to the Texas Business Hall of Fame Foundation is part of the total price of the cruise/conference.

Economists still question interest rates' affect on U.S.

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — As usual, the economy has confounded most of the experts this year. The recovery so far is much stronger and more vigorous than most economists predicted, just as the recession that preceded it was both deeper and longer than expected.

A surge in Gross National Product in the second quarter of this year was the major blow to the forecasts of a weaker than average recovery.

Much of the early evidence points to a very strong third quarter as well, although Wednesday's disappointing report for July retail sales suggests that consumers may have taken a breather after their spring buying spree.

But while most forecasters have joined those in the White House and revised upwards their predictions for economic growth this year, many still worry about the prospects for recovery thereafter.

THEIR CONCERN is focused on the high and rising level of interest rates. In the past few months rates have risen by close to 2 percentage points. They were already unusually high in relation to inflation, and this week's decision by banks across the country to raise the prime lending rate sent tremors through the stock market.

Financiers clearly worry that the recovery may peter out.

Today's nervous market contrasts strikingly with the stocks boom of a year ago. That was fueled by expectations of lower interest rates and, as it turned out, the stock market anticipated the economic recovery.

As presidential economist Martin S. Feldstein noted earlier this week, the recent interest rate increases could harm that recovery in coming months.

BUT WHEREAS many economists are concerned that the high cost of money could choke off recovery, there are also those who attribute at least part of the recent rise in rates to the strength that is already in the economy.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker has said that the momentum behind the recovery is strong enough to withstand a small uptick in rates. He has also listed rapidly rising private credit demands as one factor pushing rates up, and strong federal credit demands as another.

There is in fact a two-fold explanation of high interest rates. First, the demand for money has risen strongly in recent months because of the unexpectedly rapid GNP growth together with large Treasury borrowings. But second, the Federal Reserve has tightened the supply of credit.

Although rising interest rates can be a signal of strength in the economy — when they are caused by rising credit demands — they can also be a reflection of a tighter monetary policy that will lead in turn to slower growth.

"I WOULD guess that it's a bit of both," said Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Carter.

In either case — whether the rise came primarily because of increased demand, or primarily because of a tightening on the supply side — its effect will be the same: to slow down the recovery in housing and other interest-sensitive sectors.

Volcker himself has told Congress that the Fed has tightened credit conditions mildly since May.

Some monetarists say that rapid growth in the money supply this year — in particular in the narrow M1 measure which includes cash and checking accounts — indicates that the Fed has been too loose, rather than too tight.

John Whitehead, new manager of the Adventure Travel office located at 2910 LaForce Blvd., air terminal, can offer you service, quality, and convenience. For the very best in personal travel planning, call Adventure Travel at 683-4211 or 561-8101.

Convenience, service makes the difference

Summer's almost over, and that most definitely means the end of vacationing. Or does it? For many people, the vacation fun is just about to begin. What about you? If you are planning for a vaction, now or in the future, here is the most important thing you should know. Adventure Travel.

For the absolute best in personal travel planning, you need Adventure Travel. And we're proud to serve you from two convenient locations; 16 Oak Ridge Square in Midland and our new office at 2910 LaForce Blvd. at Midland Regional Airport. The first-rate service you have come to expect from Adventure Travel has been teamed with the added convenience of an airport location. So now what can you expect at the new office?

The office at air terminal is now under new management. John Whitehead, with over 16 years experience in travel, is able to meet every travel planning need you may have. You can expect from John the very best due to a loyalty and dedication to giving the very best service to the customer. He can help you with all of your travel arrangements quickly and efficiently, business or pleasure.

You can still expect the same top-quality service at the new Adventure Travel office that you grown accustomed to at the old. Add convenience to the service and you have a wonderful new place to make your travel arrangements. Why stand in line at the airport ticket counters when we can make the same arrangements for you with no hassle and no headaches only a couple of blocks away? Come relax in our pleasant atmosphere and forget those long lines. Forget the hussle and bussle of the airport and let us do the worrying. Adventure Travel will make your travel arrangements and have your tickets waiting for you before you leave. All you have to do is go home, pack, and pick your tickets up on the way to the airport.

Besides the pleasure trips, let us handle your next business trip. Adventure Travel is fully automated and can make your arrangements not only for airlines, but hotel and rent a car reservations as well. It's as simple as that. We do the work, you have the fun. We can also handle your seat selection and boarding passes on American Airlines.

Dallas Cowboy fans, here's your chance! Adventure Travel has limited access to the Cowboy home games. We have a package which includes 1 night lodging in a Dallas hotel, reserved game ticket, round trip transportation to and from the game and to and from the airport. For more information, contact Adventure Travel.

At Adventure Travel, we can offer you the best in travel planning, business or pleasure. You have the option of either a custom-designed vacation or one of our package deals. We have fantastic packages, including specials presently to Jamaica, Nassau, and Mexico. Give us a call.

With all of the details that must be attended to before making a trip, wouldn't it be easier to let Adventure Travel handle your arrangements? We have a friendly, experienced, and efficient staff in both offices eager to serve your needs for travel. Take the first step to a truly enjoyable experience by visiting with us at 16 Oak Ridge Square or 2910 LaForce Blvd. in the Grand Slam Building. The Midland office number is 683-4211 and the air terminal office number is 561-8101. Give us a chance and we'll show you the very best in personal and business travel planning.

ARC adds windshield repair service

Those of you who have had the unfortunate occasion to need either a tow truck or need body work on your automobile are probably familiar with the need for something more than just an average body shop. Your car is one of your prime investments, and you must protect that investment. Those of you who have been around Midland for a couple of years are probably familiar with the largest independent body shop in town and are aware of the service it took to make it that. Those of you who do not know, or have not been in town long enough to know, here it is: ARC Truck & Auto Body is the largest independent body shop in town because they are more than just an average body shop.

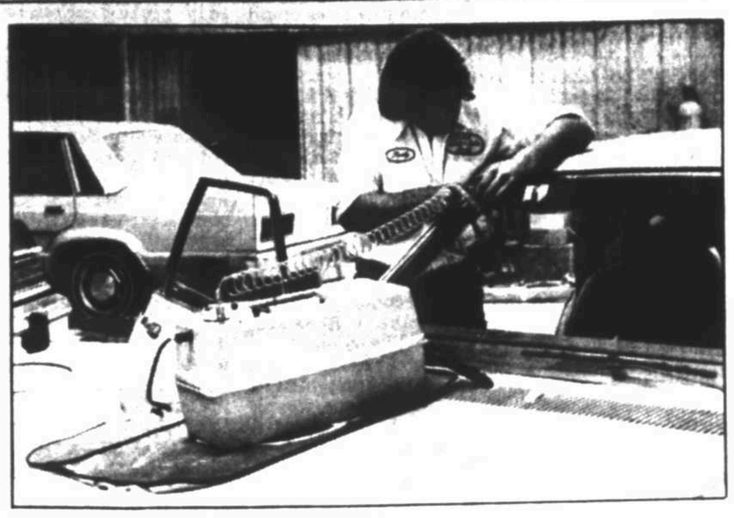
In only five years, ARC has grown to be the largest independent body shop in town due to service and quality. ARC will give each and every car the special care and attention as if it were the personal property of owner Allen Frasier. They pride themselves on doing the highest quality repair work around, and are always striving to find better ways to serve the customer.

A recent acquisition at ARC is the Sav-a-Shield windshield repair, pictured above. Sav-a-Shield will fill chips and cracks in your windshield up to 6 inches to keep it from "running" across your windshield the rest of the way. It works by forcing liquid glass into the crack or chip in your windshield and allowing it to harden at several different pressures. In only one short hour, and for only a few dollars, you can put your mind at ease about your windshield. Initial fee for one crack or chip is $45., and only $10. per crack or chip after that. Compare that to the cost of replacing your windshield, and you will see that ARC has come up with one more way to satisfy the customer.

Painting and pinstriping your car is no problem at ARC. Again, during these services, your car is treated as if it were the personal property of Allen Frasier. The paint room is large enough to even accomodate a diesel! Give them a try next time you feel like adding a little class to your car. Your car will come out looking at least as good as it did when it left the factory.

In addition to the paint and body shop, ARC also operates a 24-hour wrecker service. Next time your car breaks down, let them show you that there truly is a difference in wrecker services. And if you should be involved in an accident, give them a call and they can bring your car in to begin immediate repairs.

Quality and service make the difference at ARC Truck & Auto Body. Satisfied customers are why they are in business. So if it has been a long time since you have been satisfied with automobile repairs, give ARC Truck & Auto Body a call. They are located 2700 W. Francis. Or call 682-9722. You deserve the best. You deserve ARC



Monty Brewster demonstrates the windshield repair service, a recent acquisition at ARC Tuck & Auto Body. This process can save time and money later on a costly new windshield. For more information, call them at 682-9722.

Summer has come and is fading fast, vacations are but a memory, and the cool fall days are fast approaching. What does fall mean to you? Well, to many of us, fall means cool breezes, the changing colors of leaves on the trees, some of the most beautiful sunsets in the world, and that old housewives' nightmare: football. Fall is a time of memories, brings views of sweethearts taking a romantic evening walk, totally wrapped up in one another. Memories to last a lifetime. And how do you protect these memories? Troy Davis Qwik One Hour Photo Service can do wonders for those moments that you would like to capture for a lifetime.

But nobody likes to take a roll of film and then have to wait a week or more to get their pictures back. When you take a roll of film, you want to relive those wonderful times as soon as possible! Troy Davis Qwik Photo is open from 7am to 6pm, Monday through Saturday, and offers quick one hour processing from 9am to 5pm every day. They have only the latest and most modern equipment available, all of which are enclosed in a seperate, dust-proof room to keep the nasty West Texas dust from spoiling your memories. With over ten years continuous experience in film developing, you can rest assured that the job will be done right, every time!

Troy Davis Qwik Photo offers convenience, too. They offer the customer two drive-up windows for those who would care to just drop their film off quickly. They sell Kodak film for those who need it. You can save yourself further time and lots of money in the future by purchasing a VIP card. Call them or go by today to see how the VIP card works.

The employees at Troy Davis Qwik Photo not just friendly, they are well-qualified and experienced. They offer you the friendliest, fastest, best service available anywhere. You can get an instant passport photo at Troy Davis'. The staff is willing to sit down and discuss with you any questions about film or processing you may have, and are willing to help in any way possible. It is almost impossible to find that kind of personal attention and genuine concern for the customer anywhere anymore. At Troy Davis Qwik Photo, the customer truly comes first!

Next time you need to have film developed or purchase film, remember Troy Davis Qwik Photo. They offer not only the best service and equipment available, but also the personal attention that you deserve. You are assured of a job well-done every time! Troy Davis Qwik Photo is located across from Gibsons at 3102 W. Cuthbert, or call 689-0761. Come by today and relive some of the most precious moments of your life.

Hank's moves to new location

After 20 years in the present location, Hank's Flite Center, the oldest flight school in the area is relocating! Hank's Flight Center is moving into the old Memphis Aero lounge, pictured above, by the end of August. The new location offers more to those learning to fly.

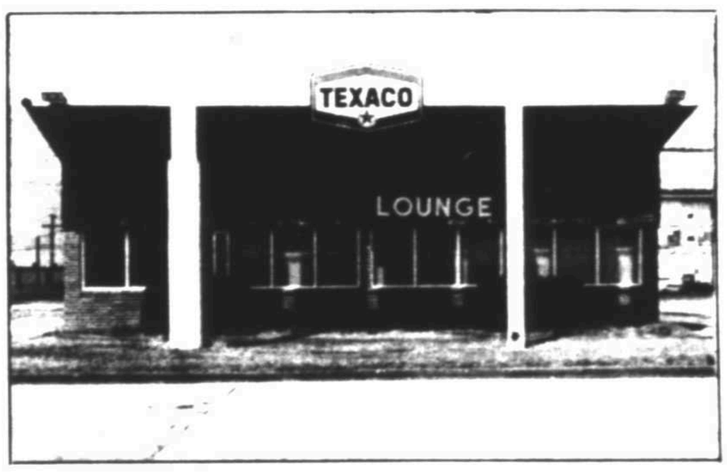
The new location is just south of the air terminal and offers the advantage of being right on the flight line. This will give students an oppurtunity to observe incoming and departing aircraft. Students learning to fly at Hank's are given the best instruction available in this area. The training is comprehensive and covers every aspect of flying an airplane, both in-flight instruction and ground school. It is the most advanced and offers you the one thing that is very important in anything you do: self-confidence. When you leave Hank's Flite Center, you know that you have been taught by the best and you know that you are able to fly that airplane. Very few others offer that.

Ground school starts September 10 at Hank's. This will be a 4-day ground school covering two weekends. If you have been wanting to learn how to fly, here's your chance to be taught by the best! For more information on the ground school and how you may enroll, call Hank's at 563-192.

Besides private pilot lessons, Hank's offers complete training for commercial, instrument, flight instructor, multi-engine, and air transport pilot. Here again, when you learn to fly at Hank's, you leave with confidence in yourself and in your ability to fly. Anyone can teach you to fly, but self-confidence is the difference at Hank's.

Hank's also sells both new and used airplanes in excellent flying condition. Planes are also available for rental. Contact Hank's for more information.

If you have been wanting to learn how to fly, there is no better time than now! The advantages of having are private pilot license are numerous. Think of the time you could save on business or pleasure trips. No long lines to stand in, no 3-hour layovers, and you can fly to almost any location in the world, not just where there is a major airport. Look for Hank's Flite Center at their new location at Midland air terminal. Ground school is only a few short weekends away, so don't delay! Call Hank's today at 563-1192.



After 20 years of service to the Permian Basin, Hank's Flite Center is moving to the old Memphis Aero pilot lounge. This location is right on the flight line and offers direct observation of incoming and departing airplanes. You can learn to fly by calling Hank's at 563-1192.

Texas oil discoveries up, gas down in July

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas operators reported 111 gas and 67 oil discoveries in July 1983.

In the same month a year ago, 141 gas and 51 oil discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

So far this year, there have been 497 oil and 780 gas discoveries reported to the Commission. There were 368 oil discoveries and 871 gas discoveries to date in 1982.

Gas discoveries in July included 29 in deep South Texas, 28 in the Refugio area, 16 in Southeast Texas, 14 in West Central Texas, 11 in East Texas, six in the San Antonio Area, two each in North Texas, the Panhandle, and the San Angelo area, and one in the Midland area.

Oil discoveries included 17 in deep South Texas, 15 in Southeast Texas, eight each in the Midland and Refugio areas, six in east Texas, five each in West Central Texas and North Texas, two in the Panhandle, and one in the Lubbock area.

In July, operators reported 320 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes.

New applications for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 2,826 in July, as compared to 2,245 during the same month a year ago. So far this year, there have been 17,673 such tests compared to 17,794 to date a year ago.

Applications to drill, deepen, plug back and for service wells in July amounted to 3,204 against 3,166 in the same month a year earlier. To date, there have been 20,286 similar applications, while to date a year ago there were 20,093.

• • •

Wallace also announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 446,439,498 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in May, down 10.41 percent from field runs a year earlier.

That brings total production for the year through May to 2,268,876,425 Mcf of gas. Through May of 1982, Texas had produced 2,586,557,821 Mcf of gas.

Marketed gas production in May totaled 369,820,700 Mcf and reflected a 8.56 percent decrease from the May 1982 volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines and for carbon black, plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in May totaled 197,830,080 Mcf. Exports of Texas-produced gas in May totaled 147,663,60 Mcf, and reflected a 17.04 percent decrease from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in May came from 234,518 oil and gas wells.

In April 1983, Texas wells produced 439,716,283 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in April totaled 359,407,312 Mcf. April exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 168,310,478 Mcf.

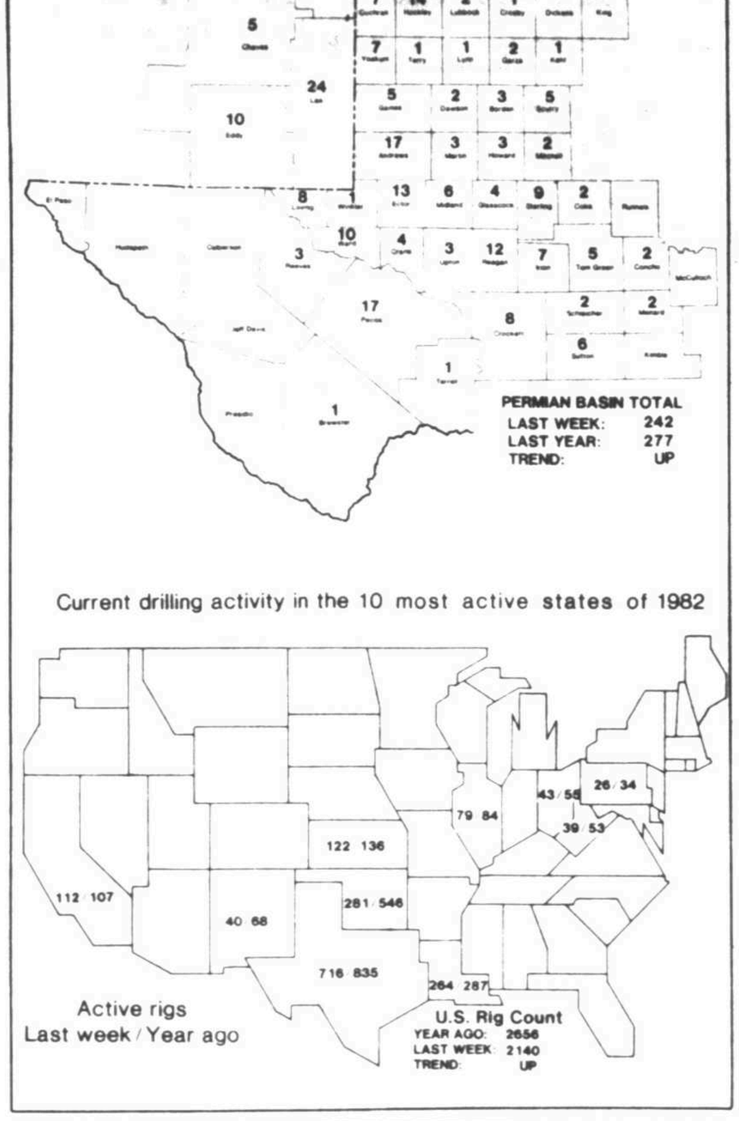
• • •

The RRC said it granted 45 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas in July. In June, the Commission approved 21 permits, and 31 were granted in July 1982.

Thirty-five of the new permits were for gathering pipelines, five were for trunk transmission lines, two were for gas plant lines, and three were for other types of lines. Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while a trunk transmission line is larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect. At gas plants, gas is stripped of the liquid hydrocarbons usually present in wellhead gas.

Forty-one of the newly-permitted lines will transport gas, three will carry products, one will carry crude oil and condensates.

In July, 15 permits were granted to operate pipelines in deep South Texas; 12 in Southeast Texas; eight in the Refugio are; three in East Texas; two each in North Texas and the Midland and San Antonio areas; and one in the San Angelo area.



Albertson's to open new store, use 'POSItalker'

Albertson's will open a new 59,775 square foot, one-stop shopping center for food and drugs at the corner of Midland Drive and Wadley. It will open its doors 8 a.m., Wednesday.

The store will offer a full service deli, snack bar, bakery and a complete pharmacy. In addition to the regular grocery items, this store will have a wide selection of merchandise such as toiletries, sundries, household appliances, cameras and one of the largest selections of name brand cosmetics in the Sunbelt region.

The new store will have talking cash registers called "POSitalkers". The first POSitalker register, introduced by National Semi-Conductor, was installed at an Albertson's in San Jose, California, in July 1981. The machines are capable of being programed in Spanish, Swedish, German, French and Italian.

Albertsons is the eighth largest supermarket company in the United States and operates in the western and southern states.

SEC charges Schwab & Co. with lax audit procedures

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Charging that Charles Schwab & Co.'s "grossly negligent" supervision of its branch in Newport Beach, Calif., in 1980 allowed one of its salesman to operate an $850,000 fraud scheme from his desk, the Securities and Exchange Commission staff has asked that Schwab be barred from opening any new branch offices until it improves its training and audit procedures.

Those procedures were so lax, the SEC charges, that they "demonstrate a total disregard for the supervisory responsibilities of a brokerage firm under the federal securities law."

The nation's largest discount brokerage house, San Francisco-based Schwab operates 59 branches and is now owned by BankAmerica Corp. Schwab executives said last week that on their own they had earlier instituted many of the safeguards requested by the SEC staff. At the time of the alleged fraud, Schwab had only about 20 offices.

In any event, Richard W. Arnold, a senior vice president and the chief financial officer, said that Schwab did not expect the SEC's position, embodied in filings before an administrative law judge here, to affect its plans to open as many as 30 new branch offices before the end of this year.

The SEC staff's request must be reviewed by an administrative law judge and is subject to further appeals, a process that could take months.

Arnold also noted that the National Association of Securities Dealers, a self-regulatory group for brokers, "after full hearings found us to be completely in compliance with supervisory procedures" in the case.

But the SEC's filings strongly suggest that the brokers association conducted an incomplete investigation, in which not one of the salesman's 31 alleged victims or any of his co-workers testified. The agency also flatly contradicts some of the key testimony presented to the association by Schwab executives and lawyers at the hearing.

The SEC's complaint focuses on the activities of Marion Albert Arture, a Schwab salesman from 1978 until he was fired Oct. 8, 1980. Arture has settled an SEC civil suit with a consent decree that prevents him from ever working again in the securities industry, although he did not admit or deny guilt. He could not be reached for comment.

Starting in early 1980, according to SEC officials, Arture began soliciting customers for a "discounted securities" program, telling them that they could buy securities for as little as half the market price from sellers who needed immediate cash.

In fact, no such program existed, and the money Arture solicited was not used to buy securities. Some, instead, was used to pay off earlier investors, in what the SEC says was a "pyramid" or "Ponzi" scheme. Arture also used some of the money to help finance his purchase of a San Clemente home, the SEC said.

Arture managed to operate his scheme in the tiny office even after his behavior became bizarre. At one point he told William C. Vosburg, the branch manager, that he needed $500,000 within 24 hours. "While on his hands and knees, crying, he begged the other employees ... to lend him money," the SEC said. And he told a coworker that unless he paid some "people" money, "they were going to get his kids."

Nevertheless, Vosburg had promoted Arture to assistant manager, and often left him in charge of the office. Vosburg was fired by Schwab as a result of the episode, and could not be reached.

PLAN NOW TO DEFEND AGAINST YOUR 1983 TAX BILL!

Tax advantaged investments are now available to virtually all investors, not just the wealthy. They are for anyone who searches for a legitimate method of reducing tax liability and should be valuable assets, as well as providing tax benefits.

Robot business science facts

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

"What this business is about is turning science fiction into science fact," says Nolan Bushnell, inventor, entrepreneur and the man who founded Atari Inc.

The business is the mass manufacturing of robots for home use. The ultimate symbol of man's arrival to the threshhold of the future, robots have played an important role throughout popular culture. Remember C-3PO and R2D2 in the "Star Wars" movie trilogy, or the omniscient robot in the television series "Lost in Space."

The future may now be here; a handful of companies are introducing the first generation of commercially produced personal robots. Hero 1, a 2-foot-tall, 70-pound robot designed and marketed by Heath Co., the Benton Harbor, Mich.-based company that also makes the Heathkit radio, made its debut in stores last January. So did RB5X, created by RB Robot Corp. of Golden, Colo.

Bushnell, the founder of Atari and Chuck E. Cheese Pizza Time Theater, is entering the market as chairman of a new, Sunnyvale, Calif.-based company called Androbot Inc. with two creations — B.O.B. (Brains on Board) and its less sophisticated brother, Topo. B.O.B.'s entry into retail stores has been delayed until late this year or early next, but Topo began rolling into stores in March.

Manufacturers are optimistic that the industry will follow the highly successful patterns set by video games and home computers. However, some Wall Street analysts and high-tech engineers who watch the computer industry caution that hope and hype may be outpacing product development.

FUTURE COMPUTING INC., a Richardson, Texas-based research and consulting firm specializing in personal computers, has projected that the market for personal robots will total $2 billion by 1990. That projection was based largely on the success of the personal computer industry, which soared from U.S. sales of $200 million in 1978 (for hardware only) to $4.3 billion in 1982, according to Dave Wilson, head of engineering for the firm. "It's viewed here as the obvious extension of the home computer," Wilson said.

Despite the current difficulties of individual computer hardware and software companies, analysts say the industry remains strng Future Computing expects the U.S. hardware market to reach $22.5 billion by 1987. Moreover, Carl Helmers, publisher of the Peterborough, N.H.-based bimonthly magazine Robotics Age, estimates that the personal robot market eventually will reach 10 percent of the country's 5 million home computer owners.

Sandy Green, a robotics analyst with the San Francisco firm of Hambrecht & Quist, is more cautious: "There is an enormous gap between publicity and reality. People are cranking out product, but the application is more as a toy."

But Robotics Age publisher Helmers warns against brushing off the personal robot as a mere toy. "In one sense, it's a rich man's toy," he said. "But then, so was color TV."

What has led to this brave new world of personal robots is the development of low-cost silicon chips and other technology for computers that has helped make an affordable personal robot possible. For instance, B.O.B., which looks like a 3-foot-tall polyethylene snowman (Topo is a virtual twin), will retail for $2,995. Topo, which must be linked to a computer to operate, sells for $795. RB5X, packaged in a two-foot-high aluminum cylinder topped with a clear dome and looking a bit like R2D2, is priced at $1,495. Hero 1 sells as a kit for $1,500 or assembled for $2,500.

ROBOT MAKERS already offer a host of extra-cost options. An Androwagon for B.O.B. costs $95. If you want your RB5X to have a better memory, RB Robots will sell you a larger memory option for $125, and this fall it plans to offer a vacuum attachment for $595.

Along with B.O.B., Androbot plans to introduce F.R.E.D. (Friendly Robot Eductional Device), a mini-robot that, like Topo, is an extension of the home computer, and Andromman, a video game robot for children. "Topo, F.R.E.D. and Andromman are very much for the mass market," said Nina Stern, Androbot spokesman.

The robots are crammed with enough high-technology features to satisfy the most ardent computer enthusiast.

All, except Topo, have on-board programmable microprocessors (RB5X and B.O.B. need a separate programming terminal) and can be directed to move through a preset course. They can sense an object in their path and avoid it, and they can talk with varying degrees of proficiency, although RB5X requires a $195 sound-synthesis program to speak. Hero 1 can be programmed for rudimentary voice recognition. RB5X and B.O.B. offer voice recognition as extra-cost options. Hero 1 and RB5X can pick up light items with their arms (a $595 option on RB5X).

Other robots on the market include the $300 X-1 kit by Robot Shack of El Toro, Calif., and DC-2, a 400-pound promotional model made by Android Amusement Corp. of Irwindale, which sells for $10,000 to $15,000 depending on options. Next year, Robotics International of Jackson, Mich., plans to offer Genus 1 at about $6,000.

THESE EARLY MODELS do not have many practical uses. Much of their attraction is their potential to fulfill the fantasy of a machine that will perform the mundane tasks that burden most mortals. A machine that will fetch a drink from the refrigerator, wash the dishes, take out the garbage — and not complain.

Consumers, however, do not seem to be disturbed by the lack of practical uses for the machines. By April, Heath had sold as many units as it expected to sell in all of 1983, said Rob Boatman, public relations coordinator. Sales already are "in the thousands" he said, and, until recently, customers had to wait as much as 30 days or more for delivery of their robots.

RB5X sales are expected to reach $3 million to $5 million this year, which roughly translates to between 2,000 and 3,000 unit sales, according to a source familiar with the company. An Androbot spokesman said the company has sold about 600 Topo robots, mostly to schools that use it to teach basic computer skills.

However, some companies have yet to show a profit. Since both RB and Androbot are in the midst of initial stock offerings, company officials are reluctant to discuss some financial details.

Still, public information shows the difficulties of starting a company in an untested field. RB's prospectus, for example, shows that the company lost $190,000 from its founding last August through February 1983. It issued 24 million shares of stock on the over-the-counter market at 10 cents a share bid. The stock, which is underwritten by Chesley & Dunn Inc., a Denver brokerage house, has been selling recently for 37.5 cents a share bid.

THE ANDROBOT prospectus lists income of $47,000 against an investment of more than $1.3 million since its 1981 incorporation. The company plans to issue 1.5 million shares at between $10 and $15 a share underwritten by Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Bushnell said before the stock offering that he had invested almost $2 million in Androbot. At that time, company officials anticipated $9 million in sales in 1983 and $35 million in 1984. It is uncertain whether those goals can be met because of delays in marketing B.O.B.

Green and others believe that a mass market will not develop until prices drop and personal robots become more useful.

"The prices are not too high to start out, but they are too high for eventual mass marketing," says Hambrecht & Quist's Green. "The mechanics are going to remain costly, so they will have to substitute computer technology. Eventually, there is a (mass) market there, but my guess is it's a minimum of 5 to 10 years (away)."

Wilson of Future Computing adds: "You can draw a close analogy with the way personal computers started in 1973. It has a lot of potential but suffers from a lack of application.

"A robot for $3,000 that doesn't do much is too high-priced for the mass market, but not high enough to keep them from selling 10,000 or so," Wilson added. "If they offer a robot that can do two useful things (such as security protection and vacuuming) — that seems to be the magic number that other inventions have had to do — then $2,000 is a realistic price point to get to 50,000 or 100,000 unit sales."

Machines start talking back

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — If a computer hasn't yet seized an opportunity to speak to Americans, it will happen soon. The telephone company is joining the legions determined to put computer conversation in your life.

In a "cost avoidance" move, Bell companies around the country are switching to an operator-computer partnership for directory-assistance calls.

Audio Response Unit, as the computer service is called, will come on the line after the operator answers to take the request. The computer will recite the requested number in either synthesized or human voice patch — that is, either a voice created by a computer or a recorded human voice patched together by computer to give the requested information.

Bell projects that the innovation will save its seven regional telephone companies between five and nine seconds a call, which average 22 to 34 seconds, by reducing the time that customers and operators talk to each other. The local phone company here, C&P Telephone, says the calls now cost roughly a penny a second. Last year Bell operators answered nearly 4.7 billion directory-assistance calls.

"Anytime we can cut off that customer-operator interaction, especially with technology, for cost avoidance, we're going to," said spokesman Alan Holder of C&P.

Indiana Bell is the only system in the country that has switched completely to computer voice synthesis for directory assistance. When customers complained — and Bell says people in some areas of the country object to hearing synthetic speech — the sound chip was reprogrammed.

All regional Bell companies are in the planning or implementation stages of computer-controlled answering, and are scheduled to switch to it by 1985.

Bell's ambitious computer exercise might be the most pervasive example, but computers that talk are becoming common consumer fare.

In a recent "On the Road" CBS broadcast, a perplexed Charles Kuralt furrowed his brow while waiting in a supermarket checkout line as the cash register carefully recited the price of each item. He frowned at an alarm clock as it calmly told the time, and wrestled in frustration with a seat belt and door as his car politely reminded him to buckle up and close the door.

Computers almost always say, "Thank you."

Little Charlie doesn't feel sorry

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Charlie is only 3 1-2 years old and nearly blind and spends these dog days of summer locked in a hot, dark room waiting for his guardian to come home.

But Charlie doesn't feel sorry for himself. He can't. He's a strapping, 6-foot, 225-pound robot who lives in the garage of his master's Covina, Calif., home.

Besides, Charlie's better off than most of his ilk. Although he may be legally blind by human standards — the robot doesn't see much beyond six feet — he "sees" better than most other home-built robots.

A series of three systems using a light beam scanner, a video camera and sonar sensors re-creates images in his computer memory and enables him to recognize objects, measure their distance and handle them. Charlie not only can "see," but he also has hand-eye coordination, which is essential to performing most practical tasks.

That makes him one of the most sophisticated home-built robots in the world, according to Tom Carroll, who heads Rockwell International Corp.'s robotics task group in Downey, Calif. Other hobby robots can only sense. Only a few research robots have the equal of Charlie's optical system. Carroll estimates that it would cost more than $250,000 for his company to match the efforts of Charlie's creator, Jim Hill.

What's more, Hill is no degree-laden engineer. He's a self-taught, high-tech jack-of-all-trades with barely two years of college who is the parts manager at a Chrysler dealership. He assembled Charlie in 3 1-2 years in his spare time with an investment of about $5,000.

"Electronics has always been my hobby," said Hill. "I've fooled with cars all my life. I'm self-taught. When computers came along, I trained myself. I didn't know a thing about programming and I had to learn the hard way."

Hill, who has been working on robots for more than 15 years, draws his inspiration from the challenge of meshing skills in several technical fields to build the ultimate machine.

"There are very few people who are versatile enough to build mechanical stuff and electronic stuff and optics and computers," he said. "To me, a robot is the ultimate machine."

Charlie's enameled white body is a boxy amalgamation of aluminum, wiring, computer chips and sensors with movable arms, clamps for hands and a head that swivels and moves up and down. His angular aluminum nose is the only concession to frivolity.

The robot can talk through a voice synthesis device. Hill already has built a robot that walks, another feature generally thought to be crucial to producing a useful machine.

Someday, Hill says, Charlie will set the table, open doors and even paint the house — all on voice command.

"Ultimately, the robot is to serve you so you can reach the point where you can leave the house and he'll do everything," he said. "Look at the development of airplanes. There isn't anything that can't be done. I think the limitations will be in what you can actually program. I've gone through the conceptual stuff. I'm down to the nuts and bolts."

Personal robots will be a common household item in the years to come, Hill predicts, but they will be a once-in-a-lifetime purchase for most people, costing $100,000 in 1983 dollars. "It will be something that everybody feels they have to have," he said.

To Hill, who says he has no sentimental attachment to his creation, Charlie is not a "him," but an "it."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 251 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $450.5 million to $162.4 billion for the week ended August 10, 1983.

The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.57% from 8.47%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.46% from 8.37%.

The funds' average maturity figure decreased to 36 days after two weeks at 37 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Excluding institutional money fund investors, who are looking for higher rates in the wholesale money market, investors poured almost $700 million into money funds this week. "Consumers are temporarily moving out of equities and into the money market as the stock market corrects. Investors comparing money market investments are choosing money funds, whose yields now average above bank and thrift money market deposit account rates."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability. Banking Board votes to publish proposed rules

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Banking Board members voted to publish proposed rules changing procedures on the handling of bank chapter applications, and agreed to take up rules on point-of-sale (POS) terminals at their next meeting.

That session is set for August 25.

It hasn't been determined whether a public hearing will be held on the chartering revisions, but a spokesman for State Treasurer Ann Richards says that "if someone wants a hearing, the board will consider it."

Action on the final version of the rules isn't expected until the board's September meeting.

One major change being considered is to have the hearing officer on charter applications make a recommendation for decision to the board.

Under the current system, no recommendations are made.

The board had looked earlier at POS rules but withdrew those proposals because of new legislation passed by this year's Legislature.

The POS terminals allow funds to be transferred from a customer's account to the account of a merchant for payment of a debt.

Several POS systems, including those for gasoline sales, are being developed. The board asked the Department of Banking staff to draft proposed regulations to cover such transactions.

A briefing on POS operations is planned for the board at its August 25 meeting.

State Board of Insurance Chairman Lyndon Olson says state regulation of insurance continues to have benefits for both the insurance industry and the insurance consumer.

At a meeting of the National Association of Life Companies, Olson commented that he doesn't expect Congress to attempt to preempt state regulation on any wholesale basis, although federal legislation continues to affect actions by the states.

Olson said court actions also have an impact on insurance regulation. At present, Olson said, there is a trend to deregulation at the state and federal level.

Olson said there are "substantial reasons" why state regulation is preferable to federal regulation, saying that "all interests" have access to the regulatory process at the state level.

But such regulation requires a strong state agency, he says, and that has produced some industry opposition.

Consumer groups, Olson told the companies, "are not enemies of state regulation but rather are worthy adversaries."

The State Finance Commission meets in Austin August 24, with an agenda including adoption of rules for the SFC to comply with legislation renewing the commission under the "sunset" review process.

Other items including setting of bank examination fees and adoption of rules relating to prepaid funeral contracts — which are under the Department of Banking.

SFC also is to review proposals for an addition to the Department of Banking offices to house the Texas Savings and Loan Department and Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner.

Those agencies currently are using leased space.

Texas Credit Union Commission has begun work on new regulations and amendments to existing regulations under the new credit union act, which takes effect Sept. 1.

TCUC members began looking at provisions relating to credit union service organizations, which are expected to be more common and more significant in coming years.

Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons has proposed regulations to require that credit unions planning to establish credit union service organizations (CUSOs) receive advance approval from the Credit Union Department.

The CUSO regulations are to contain provisions assuring access of the department to CUSO books and records — which Parsons says hasn't been a problem in the past, but which could be of concern with the anticipated growth of such services.

The commission also is working on regulations on public notice on applications for charters, and loans to credit union officers.

Some credit unions want provisions for board approval of such loans changed, or the amount of the loans (increased to $10,000 under the new act) requiring such approval to be raised.

Koch plans area CO2 line

Koch Carbon Dioxide Corporation, a subsidiary of Koch Industries Inc., Wichita, Kansas, announced this week plans to construct a large diameter carbon dioxide pipeline from Denver City, Texas 92 miles east to Post, Texas.

The pipeline is designed to serve planned carbon dioxide tertiary recovery projects near Post, and to provide future capacity for projected carbon dioxide floods near Welch, Texas. Capacity will also be included for possible future extensions of the pipeline to Kent and Scurry Counties in Texas.

Projected start-up date for the pipeline is scheduled for December 1, 1984. Final line sizing and routing details are scheduled for completion by October 1, 1983.

According to a Koch spokesman, "The planned completion of the Cortez Pipeline in the summer of 1984 and the number of potential carbon dioxide flood projects to the east of Denver City have created an obvious need for the timely development of a carbon dioxide distribution system.

Making Midland A Better Hometown
WAITING CA BE COSTLY
Potential homebuyers who are delaying their purchasing until interest rates drop substantially below their current level should think again. Market interest rates will not come down much over the forseeable future. Without a doubt, delays in home buying will prove costly.
The housing market is predictable in one way. When you shout: "Huzzah, the interest rates are dropping!", you can bet your bottom dollar that you will also yell "Wow, the prices of homes are going up just as fast!" That's the way it works. The only problem is that the increase in price will always outstrip the decrease in interest rates. The end figure will mean that despite a lower mortgage rate, it will cost you more in monthly payments and down payments due to the commensurate increase in price.
So what's the bottom line? Those who play the waiting game run a real risk of having to pay more for their housing. The smart homebuyer can come to only one decision: Buy Now!

Fred Hansler, Buckingham Development Company, recently announced plans for Buckingham Place, a planned unit development of single family homes three miles south of Midland.

The development will be within an existing pecan orchard and each lot will have more than twenty established trees with a drip irrigation system installed. The trees and irrigation system will be tax deductable, Hansler said. The suitablity of the soil and water for growing trees, gardens, etc. is not guaranteed, however.

The development will be enclosed by a security fence. Access will be by key card only.

Hansler said all homes in the development will be required to be no less than 1,500 liveable square feet in size, and to be of no less than 80 percent masonry construction. All homes will be built on cul de sacs branching off main streets through the project. A building committee will have approval of all construction.

Residents will be required to participate in a neighborhood watch system and to be members of the development home owners association.

Residents will not be allowed to park on the streets. All vehicles must be in the home owners' garages, or parked in a special storage area.

Residents will be permitted to keep two horses and one calf, provided they do not become a nuisance.

A small swimming pool, short jogging trail, club house/day care center, basketball court, baseball diamond and other amenities have been proposed for the development.

Buckingham Development Company is at 2002 W. Wall, phone 699-5155.

Tax cheats cost federal government billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A good share of the $82 billion the federal government loses to tax cheats each year is pocketed by home repairmen, roadside food sellers and similar "informal suppliers."

That's the conclusion of a new study by the Internal Revenue Service, which estimates Americans bought nearly $42 billion worth of goods and services in 1981 from these vendors, who often avoid buying local licenses or meeting performance codes.

Only one-sixth of the $42 billion was reported as income and, although the loss is sizable, no one has put a figure on it. But not all the remaining $35 billion has to be reported; like any business, these sellers may subtract business costs in arriving at taxable income. Also, some of the money was earned by teen-agers — babysitting or mowing lawns, for example — and by low-income adults who were not required to file a tax return.

By interviewing 2,100 households, IRS determined the largest single chunk of the $42 billion — $12.2 billion — was paid for home repairs. Next came food purchases, such as from roadside stands and door-to-door vendors, $9 billion; $5 billion for child care; $3.9 billion for maids and other domestics and $2.8 billion for "shade-tree mechanics" who repair cars.

The energy crunch has had its effect on this segment of the underground economy. The IRS estimated $750 million worth of firewood was bought in 1981 from people selling it on the side.

A recent Tax Court ruling that cost a professional gambler $419,692 in back taxes plus $82,300 in penalties carries a lesson for the average taxpayer: hold on to your records.

Peter Bershesky of Margate, Fla., averaged winning more than $100,000 a year but was unable to prove he had any gambling losses, which, to a great extent, would have offset the winnings. He kept meticulous records over the years, he said, but routinely destroyed them after three years.

Under most circumstances, a taxpayer is safe in disposing of records after three years, since that normally is how long the IRS has to assess additional taxes after a return is filed. But the court noted the law states that records must be retained "so long as the contents thereof may become material."

Bershesky had another problem. The three-year statute of limitations does not apply for any year in which no return was filed. He failed to file four years out of six.
