Clayton's water fund bill 'in the bucket?'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House gave Speaker Bill Clayton what he wanted Wednesday and approved his proposal to dedicate half of future state treasury surpluses to water projects.

Representatives voted 113-19 to send the measure to the Senate, where Clayton predicts Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby "will lend his support" despite Hobby's lack of enthusiasm.

"I think the lieutenant governor is for the concept but is just not keen on dedicated funds," Clayton told reporters.

In an afternoon marked by the absence of debate, the House also sent the Senate, 129-5, a constitutional amendment repealing the virtually non-existent state property tax.

Representatives passed to the Senate, 112-19, Clayton's bill nailing down details of how the water fund would operate.

The constitutional amendments setting up the water fund and repealing the 10 cents per $100 state property tax would take effect only if approved by tne voters this November. Senators might attempt to change the water fund election to November 1982.

Clayton, who became rich farming irrigated land northwest of Lubbock, assured the House the intent of his proposal was not to finance pipelines and canals to export East Texas water to West Texas.

Population growth will require East Texas to hang on to all its water through 2030, he predicted.

Besides funneling half the surplus — which has exceeded $100 million each biennium since 1971 — into water, the Clayton proposal also would:

— Authorize the state to guarantee up to $500 million in water bonds issued by water districts, river authorities, cities and other political subdivisions.

— Raise from 6 percent to 12 percent the interest the state may pay on bonds, thus creating a market for $118 million in state water development bonds that have been authorized by the Legislature but never issued.

The implementing bill creates five funds to be administered by the Texas Water Development Board to help local governments build water projects, finance research and planning and buy storage space in reservoirs to assure they are built to the ideal size.

Contingent on passage of the constitutional amendment, the bill appropriates $40 million to get the water development assistance fund started.

The property tax repeal amendment is designed to head off the possible result of a suit filed by Midwestern University regents.

In 1979, the Legislature effectively repealed the tax by assessing it against 0.0001 percent of property values. But the Midwestern suit alleges that since the tax is imposed by the Texas Constitution, legislators had no right to cancel it without a vote of the people.

Clayton and other top state officials think Midwestern would win the suit.

The tax is dedicated to construction at 17 colleges — including Midwestern — that do not benefit from the Permanent University Fund, which belongs to the University of Texas and Texas A&M.

For most taxpayers, the state property tax never amounted to much because it was levied against county evaluations of property, which generally have been quite low. But the new Property Tax code levies all taxes on full market value. The result could be a total tax liability of $428.9 million for 1981, according to the Legislature Budget Board, if Midwestern wins its suit and the tax is not repealed by the voters.

County could be 'moved'

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland County will be moved from the 19th Congressional District to the 21st District under a congressional redistricting plan given preliminary approval Wednesday by the Texas Senate.

The Senate Committee of the Whole on Redistricting approved a redistricting plan, proposed by LaGrange Sen. John Wilson, that puts Midland County into the district presently represented by Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt. Midland has been represented by Kent Hance, D-Lubbock. The new district will stretch from Presidio County in the west to San Antonio.

The plan still must receive formal approval by the full Senate before going to the House for consideration.

As proposed, the 21st District will include Midland, Crane, Pecos, Presidio, Brewster, Terrell, Crockett, Upton, Reagan, Irion, Tom Green, Schleicher, Sutton, Edwards, Menard, Kimble, Real, Bandera, Kerr, McCulloch, Mason, Llano, Gillespie, Kendall, Comal and Val Verde counties and part of Bexar County.

Wilson's plan had proposed placing Val Verde County in the 23rd District but Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson gained approval of an amendment to move the county back to the 21st.

Snelson argued that Val Verde County has long been part of the 21st District and has a community of interest with the other counties in that district.

Ector County, which previously had been split between the 16th and 19th Districts, will be wholly contained in the 19th District under the Wilson bill.

The 19th District also will include Andrews, Gaines, Dawson and several other counties, while Glasscock, Sterling, Coke, Howard, Martin and other counties will be part of the 17th District.

Senators are expected to debate the redistricting bill on the Senate floor when they reconvene Friday morning.

'Labor truce' requested; Polish party expels seven

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa called today for a labor truce while a special Communist Party congress works on solutions to Poland's social and economic problems.

In a statement issued at the Baltic headquarters of Poland's independent labor federation, Walesa cited the election of new party leaders later this week and "provocations in relation to Solidarity members" in requesting a temporary halt to union protests.

He did not elaborate on the alleged provocations, and no strikes or protests were known to be in progress.

Negotiations between the government and Baltic dock workers broke off at 2 a.m. but were to resume later today, Solidarity headquarters in the seaport of Gdansk said. The dockers had threatened to call a strike this week, then said the government had "responded" to demands for improvement in working and living conditions.

The nearly 2,000 delegates returned to the congress hall today for meetings on party activity in "political, economic and social problems of the country." The official news agency PAP said the delegates would discuss international problems, party rules, economic policy, the mass media and party unity.

On Wednesday, the congress fixed blame for the nation's woes by expelling former party chief Edward Gierek and six leaders of his administration from the Communist Party.

Edward Gierek

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda gave prominent coverage today to a speech by a delegate who accused anti-socialist forces of trying to bring the Polish party "to its knees." Pravda made no mention of Gierek's expulsion, ignored a speech by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski critical of party conservatives, and made only an obscure reference to the decision to elect a new party leader by secret ballot.

Rakowski warned the delegates Wednesday that the alternative to accomodating the country's grassroots demands for change would be a bloody conflict between the government and its workers.

He said adapting to the workers' demands was "indispensable because the alternative could have been a great conflict, a clash between the authorities and the population, a blood bath, a national drama."

Rakowski blamed party conservatives for making necessary changes more difficult. He said the orthodox Communists "prevented the party from pre-empting events, and called reforms concessions."

The congress, which is expected to end Sunday, is to pick a new slate of party leaders later this week. The delegates broke with the standard practice of Soviet-style communism Wednesday by deciding to make the election by secret ballot.

Party leaders in other East bloc nations are elected unopposed in open, unanimous votes in the party Central Committee, which in turn is elected by acclamation on the floor of the party congress. Polish delegates said the closed vote would make party leaders more accountable.

A Soviet television commentary on Wednesday's session said the Polish delegates had considered "procedural questions" — but did not explain that the procedures had been changed to provide for a secret ballot.

Tax board to 'take up space'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Tax Appraisal Board, which has been looking for a home base for Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr. and his 25-member staff, finally opted for a 5,600-square-foot office space at Dellwood Shopping Mall.

"I'm getting scared; we need to do something (soon)," Joe Nuessle, board secretary and Midland city attorney, had said after the board seemed to waver on a temporary office site for Jones and staff. "We're supposed to go into business, and we're still sitting here."

The chief appraiser is to go into action by Sept. 1.

"I think it's important we tie down this space and get the work started," Nuessle said.

The board voted 5-0 on Wednesday to lease 5,600-square feet of space from Dellwood Mall Associates for $3,385 per month for two years. The rent comes to about $7.25 a square foot per year, and coupled with the seemingly ample parking at the mall, is viewed as a bargain by the board members.

At present, Jones, who is making his exit as the city of Midland's tax assessor-collector, and the mainstay of his staff are working out of the second floor of the City Hall.

In considering the Dellwood site for the appraiser, the board is still counting on the Midland County Commissioners' Court's informal pledge eventually to build office space large enough to house the chief appraiser's staff.

Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch, who sits on the appraisal district board, has indicated that space would become available within two years.

If not, Jones and his staff may be in for a longer stay at the shopping mall in central Midland. After the first two-year lease is up, rent there will

Another court ruling criticizes CIA director

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another federal court ruling critical of CIA Director William J. Casey's financial dealings says he and other directors drove a now-defunct farming corporation "deep and deeper into debt" by managing in a "pattern of self-interest."

President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and White House counselor Edwin Meese III had barely finished on Wednesday affirming their support for Casey and discounting a federal court ruling against him in New York May 19, when a year-old federal appellate court ruling in New Orleans surfaced.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes acknowledged that Reagan had first learned of the New York ruling by reading press reports Tuesday. It was unclear whether top administration officials were aware of the New Orleans decision when they took the line that Casey's business dealings did not affect his CIA job.

However, Speakes said today that Casey had listed the New Orleans ruling on disclosure forms submitted to the White House before his nomination as CIA director.

Reagan had told reporters: "There is no controversy (over Casey). I have complete trust in him." Bush, asked if Casey should resign, replied, "Oh, no!" and Casey's attorney said the CIA chief "denies any misconduct."

The president called Casey on Wednesday "to reassure him he had full confidence" in the director, Speakes told reporters today.

Both rulings involved Casey's role in Multiponics Inc., a failed New Orleans farming venture.

In the New York case, a judge ruled that Casey and other directors had knowingly misled potential investors in Multiponics in 1968.

In the New Orleans case, Casey and the other directors lost a bid to claim part of the failed firm's assets. That ruling was sought by a court-appointed lawyer for the firm's trustee as a penalty for the directors and was upheld July 16, 1980, by a unanimous three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

As a result, Multiponics' remaining $10 million in assets were divided two weeks ago among the firm's creditors, leaving no money to repay the directors for personal loans made to the firm, according to the trustee's lawyer, Peter J. Butler of New Orleans.

Casey's attorney in New York, Milton Gold, said the CIA director, a self-made millionaire, lost $150,000 in the venture. And Gold noted that damage claims against Casey and other directors had been dismissed in the New Orleans case.

Casey's legal troubles over Multiponics surfaced after his protege Max Hugel, a millionaire businessman brought by Casey to the CIA from the Reagan presidential campaign, resigned abruptly Tuesday morning as head of the agency's clandestine services.

Hugel's resignation came hours after The Washington Post printed allegations by two New York stockbrokers that they had participated in 1974 with Hugel in prohibited manuevers to boost the stock of a firm Hugel once owned. Hugel denied any wrongdoing.

In a telephone call to the Post Wednesday, Casey said he had known Hugel "for only 17 months, not 20 years," as Hugel had claimed.

Multiponics filed for reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act three years after its founding. In January 1973, Butler filed a motion arguing that all other creditors should take priority over Casey and the other directors who were seeking repayment of personal loans to the firm, because their management had contributed to the firm's difficulties.

Hot temperatures continue to reign

Hot temperatures reigned throughout the Permian Basin Wednesday, with the high of 101 falling only one degree short of the all-time record for the date set in 1964.

The high also topped all southwest temperatures received by the National Weather Service of Midland, as only Oklahoma City and Wichita Falls even reached the century mark.

Today's early morning low of 68 was well above the record 63 set in 1975.

More warm temperatures are expected Friday, with the high to be in the upper 90s.

Bensten blasts CIA security check

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency bungled its security check of Max Hugel, the administration's nominee for chief of clandestine operations, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

Hugel resigned Tuesday in the wake of charges he engaged in improper stock market activity seven years ago.

"It's obvious they made a very hurried security check. I understand they did it in approximately seven days, and that was too hasty for an agency that has a record for being very thorough," Bentsen told Texas reporters Wednesday afternoon.

"They obviously did a very poor job, and it obviously was a very serious mistake," the Texas Democrat said during his monthly press conference.

BENSTEN, A MEMBER of the Senate Intelligence Comittee, sid he was not given advance notice of Hugel's resignation, but didn't consider that improper. He learned the news during a meeting of the committee on Tuesday.

"It took them a short time, I suppose, to find out how severe the accusation was. I think once they found out, they acted very expeditiously."

Asked if the embarrassment would have any effect on his decisions concerning the CIA, Bentsen said, "Every time you see one of these things, it leads you to question more, to probe more."

Bentsen touched on several other topics during his press conference, including the decision by House Democratic leaders to leave Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station off the giant House-Senate conference committee concerning the bill Gramm drafted and helped sponsor.

"To be the majority party, we ought to work to pull people in," he added.

BENTSEN ALSO COMMENTED at length on his battle to win an exemption for the first 1,000 barrels of daily production for royalty owners and independent oilmen under the Windfall Profits Tax.

"It's going to be very tough because the administration obviously opposes it. We're on notice they're going to oppose it on the floor. But we're going to go ahead and pursue it," he said.

"If Republicans hang together, then I can't win. But there are a number of them who have supported it in the past, and I hope they'll support it again," the Texas Democrat said.

Bentsen has 15 co-sponsors, including Republicans Don Nickles of Oklahoma and Mark Andrews of North Dakota.

The administration says it opposes the legislation because of its timing. Any exemptions to the Windfall Profits Tax should be delayed until a second tax bill can be offered later in the year, White House officials contend.

Police probing numerous thefts

A 17-year-old El Paso man and an 18-year-old Midland man were arrested early this morning in connection with the apparent burglary of Boydstun Pest Control, 1419 N. Big Spring St.

No charges had been filed by early this morning, however.

According to police reports, a Midland police officer arrested the two in the 1400 block of North Big Spring at 2:10 a.m. today. Further investigation revealed that Boydstun's Pest Control had been entered through the roof.

Taken during that break-in were $228 in cash, a jacket, a recorder and a cloth dust mask, according to police.

Police also are continuing to probe an incident early Wednesday in which a 13-year-old girl was tied with an extension cord for a short time in the apartment in which she lives while two women robbed the apartment.

Police reports indicated the girl was alone in the apartment at 2928 W. Louisiana Ave. about 9 a.m. Wednesday when two women knocked on the door and asked to be let in.

The two women then tied the girl with an extension cord and robbed the apartment, reports indicated.

After the women left the apartment, the girl freed herself and then notified her mother of the incident. The mother notified police. The girl was unharmed, police said.

Police are looking for one woman in her 20s, 5 feet 5 inches and 120 pounds with long dark hair, a blue and white shirt, jeans and blue and white tennis shoes. The other woman is described as in her 20s, thin build, 5 feet 9 inches, with blond hair. She was described as wearing a red tank top and jeans.

Warren F. Knight of 3838 W. Wall Ave., No. 138, reported the theft of

Police, Fire Roundup

$110 worth of travelers' checks. He said the checks were taken from his motel room between 6:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Police reports indicated there was no sign of forced entry to Knight's motel room.

Joe Bradley of 903 S. Mineola St. reported the theft of a two-month-old white female German shepherd puppy valued at $150. Bradley told police the pup was taken from his yard.

Midland firemen quickly extinguished a fire at the home of Jesse Avila, 1520 S. Atlanta St. Wednesday.

Nine firemen responded to the fire in the one-story brick structure. Cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Midland County Sheriff's Department deputy Hal Heathington's patrol car was slightly damaged Tuesday night when it struck a deer. The accident occurred on FM 1787 a mile west of FM 1788.

Heathington apparently was uninjured in the mishap.

A 17-year-old Midland man was charged Wednesday with burglary of a building in connection with last month's burglary of the Water Wonderland amusement park between Midland and Odessa.

Tommy Rebal Bunch remained in Midland County Jail at noon today after being charged before the district attorney Wednesday. He is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Meanwhile, legal action is pending against a 15-year-old also taken into custody for questioning in connection with the Water Wonderland burglary. He is scheduled to be taken before the juvenile board Friday, according to sheriff's department investigator David Cobos.

Sheriff's department officers served a search warrant on a Midland residence Tuesday evening and made the arrests there. A large quantity of money was recovered, some from a bedroom inside the residence and some from the back yard.

The exact amount of the recovery is not being released although it's believed to amount to several thousand dollars. Initial reports following the break-in indicated as much as $20,000 may have been taken.

Officers recovered a large amount of coins and bills during the search, including a 10-inch by 16-inch plastic ice cnest full of quarters, dug up from the back yard.

It's unknown whether any more arrests will be made in the case, but the investigation is continuing.

Lunar eclipse to be visible over all of North America

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tonight's sky should be darker than usual for half the world as a rare lunar eclipse snuffs the moon from view.

The partial eclipse of the moon will pass through Earth's shadow beginning at 10:25 p.m. (CDT) today. The shadow will take a progressively larger bite from the moon's sunlit face until, at 11:47 a.m., a bit over 55 percent will be darkened. By 1:09 a.m., the moon will drift out of the shadow and the show will be over.

Barring clouds, anyone in the United States and "everyone on the dark side of the Earth will be able to see it," said Malcolm Cooper of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory.

However, the eclipse will not be visible to the half of the world that will be in daylight when it occurs.

Lunar eclipses "are of no real scientific value anymore, but they're fun to look at," Cooper said.

Unlike solar eclipses, which require care to avoid eye damage as the moon blots out the sun, "there's no reason in the world not to watch" a lunar eclipse, he said. "It's perfectly safe."

"It will look like a bite has been taken out of the moon," said UCLA astronomer George O. Abell. The area in shadow will seem quite dark compared with the rest of the moon's face, he said.

The dark, curving bite probably will appear a reddish, coppery tint as Earth's atmosphere bends some sunlight around into the shadow. The atmosphere allows more red light through than any other color.

Humans have been fascinated by eclipses for centuries.

"Aristotle reports that the shape of the shadow is curved on the moon and that's one of the earliest proofs ever cited that the Earth is round," Abell said. Other ancient Greeks used eclipses to deduce the size of the moon compared with Earth and the distance between the two bodies.

Abell noted that lunar eclipses are actually less common than the rare solar eclipses. But they're visible everywhere it's nighttime, while solar eclipses can be seen only along a narrow track.

A solar eclipse is on the way, at least for Siberia and a large chunk of the North Pacific, on July 31.

Twenty-eight more lunar eclipses will occur this century, although only about half will be visible in North America.

Bids opened on Odessa link

AUSTIN — Bids have been opened by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the construction of a section of what will eventually become a northern route linking Midland and Odessa.

The 6.5-mile section of State Highway 191 and State Highway 158 extends from Farm-to-Market 1788 to 0.4 mile east of Loop 250.

A portion of the proposed project follows existing two-lane highway route of S.H. 158, while part of the project, from S.H. 158 to F.M. 1788 is on a new location.

The construction will provide a pair of two-lane highways, which eventually will serve as frontage roads of a freeway facility. The initial project will provide a four-lane divided facility. Segments of S.H. 158 and F.M. 1788 will be reconstructed in the future interchange areas.

District Engineer Bill Lancaster of Odessa said John Aldridge of Midland will be the department's engineer in charge of supervising the construction, expected to require 300 working days.

PBRPC tables housing application

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board of Directors gave favorable comment to all resolutions except one on its agenda during their monthly meeting held Wednesday at the Odessa Country Club.

According to Ernie Crawford, executive director of the PBRPC, an application by A.P.S. Construction Company, Inc. of Midland for the Ocotillo Park housing addition in west Odessa was tabled.

The application had already been acted upon by the Federal Housing Association and could not be given favorable comment by the commission because the proposed subdivision is on a flood plane. However, FHA will accept the undeveloped property as individual lots, Crawford said.

Resolutions that received favorable comment were grant applications from: West Texas Opportunities, Inc., for community food and nutrition project; Can Casa Construction Co., Midland, to the Veterans Administration; the city of Iraan to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for an environmental review; and Larry Hambrick, Midland to HUD for an environmental review.

Favorable comment also was given to a continuation grant from Permian Basin Community Centers for MH/MR for Pecos county workshop and Odessa operating grant, and to the preliminary proposal from St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes, Inc., to HUD for rent subsidized housing for elderly and handicapped persons.

Dogs, humans to join in Frisbee toss

The city Parks and Recreation is sponsoring the city-wide Frisbee contest for youths and the K-9 Frisbee contest for dogs on Monday, but at different times.

The one for youths aged 6 to 15 will be at 9 a.m. in front of the Parks and Recreation building, 300 Baldwin St. Prizes will be awarded in each age division. Contestants may sign up the day of the contest.

Winners here may compete in the 1981 World Frisbee Contest to be held at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Mike Carter Baseball Park at Tyler.

Dogs who need to perfect their grip have only until 6:30 p.m. Monday when the city's Catch-n-Fetch World K-9 contest will start. This year's contest is being sponsored by the city, Wham-O and Cycle Dog Food.

Dog owners who want to prepare and train their animal for this event may go by the Parks and Recreation office, 300 Baldwin St. and show their dog's tags or license. They will be given a free Frisbee and instruction brochure.

Further information about the events can be obtained from the city recreation office, 683-4281, extension 280.

Tax board rents office space at local mall increase to $3,895 per month for the second two-year period.

In other action, the board decided to hold in abeyance a decision on contracting with Western Data Services Inc. of Waxahachie to keep the tax roll and related information, including assessed valuations, on the computers there. However, Midland Mayor G.Thane Akins just recently proposed that the board consider using the city's existing computer system, which currently has in storage the tax information. The city's computer would have to be programmed for keeping records of appraisals.

And the board re-commissioned computer consulting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. to evaluate the capabilities of the city's computer system to determine if it would be equal to or exceed the functions and reliability of Western Data's system. The board is to re-convene at 10 a.m. Aug. 3 on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse to consider Akins' suggestion and how it meshes with the findings of the computer consultants, who had leaned toward Western Data.

"Fact is," Nuessle said, "I don't like computers. As a matter of fact. I thought in terms of sharing what we (the city) had, since we're all in this together."

Jones cautioned the board that the tax money may not be put to optimum use if a decision on the computer system is delayed too long.

"You're going to waste some money if you're not careful," Jones said, "and a bunch of it."

The chief appraiser will be checking valuations for taxable property within the jurisdictions of six taxing entities: city of Midland, Midland County, Midland College, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Independent School District and the Greenwood ISD. He will collect taxes for four of the taxing agencies: the city, hospital, college and Midland ISD.

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield will continue collecting taxing for the county and Greenwood ISD.

The six-member board is made up of representatives of each of the agencies. Greenwood ISD representative Bud Lea was the only board member who missed the Wednesday meeting.

This flight was definitely for the birds

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Flight 417 from Mexico City has arrived — finally.

What usually is a three-hour trip aboard Nicaragua's state airline took three days for 100 hot and weary passengers who first boarded the Lanica flight Sunday and reached their destination Tuesday.

"We realize this was a terrible inconvenience for our passengers," said Lanica's Mexico City manager, Fernando Salcera, "but it was a mechanical failure, and we had no control over it."

A U.S. citizen, who asked that his name not be used because he makes the flight frequently, gave this version of Flight 417 and its false starts:

It was scheduled to leave Mexico City at 2 p.m., but was overweight and the company delayed the departure until 5 p.m. when cooler weather would provide more lift for the twin-jet BAC-111 aircraft.

"We taxied out, the pilot revved up the engines, and the plane shook so much, we taxied back in and they checked the plane," the American said.

"Two hours later, we got on the plane and it took off. We climbed out of Mexico City, and immediately lost pressure. The oxygen masks that are supposed to drop automatically, didn't.

"Babies were crying, people were fainting and screaming, and we made a forced landing in Acapulco," about 175 miles south of Mexico City. "They unloaded us on the runway, they worked on the plane and we got back on and took off, but had to land again.

"Then immigration confiscated our passports and we went to a hotel, which Lanica paid for, but our luggage stayed on the plane. The next day we went to the airport but had to come back because the plane still wasn't operational."

The passengers boarded the craft at 5 a.m. Tuesday morning, he said, and it left three hours later for the last leg of the journey.

Although the British-built jetliner is designed to accommodate up to 100 passengers, depending on the seating arrangements, some passengers getting off the tardy flight said it was so crowded they stood in the aisle for the 1,000-mile trip.

Salcera said a valve controlling the plane's heating and pressurization systems failed, there was no backup aircraft and it took longer than expected to get replacement parts to Acapulco.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Dr. Solomon: The elementary school my daughter attends has been carrying on a high-pressure educational campaign dealing with childhood diseases and the need for immunization. I understand these efforts are financed by the state, and that means tax money. Is there any evidence that such programs are worth the expense? — Mrs. B.H.

Dear Mrs. H.: All the indications are that any investment in the fight against childhood diseases has been very worthwhile. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) reports an all-time low for 1980 for rubella (German measles), rubeola (measles), mumps, tetanus, and diphtheria. In fact, there was only one case of diphtheria last year in children under 15 years of age, and five cases among adults. The CDC has set October 1982 as the target date for the complete elimination of rubeola among children in the United States.

All 50 states require children to be immunized before they are permitted to start school. The success of the program not only means a reduction in illness — a desirable goal in itself — but a financial savings as well because of the decreased need for medical care.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 19 years of age and have inverted nipples. Is there any significance to this? I used to think that calisthenics might help, but it hasn't done any good. Is there anything you can recommend that would help correct this condition? — Ms. B.D.

Dear Ms. D.: If inverted nipples have been present for a long time, they have no clinical significance except that breast-feeding may not be possible. Of course if they are the result of some underlying condition, it is important to investigate this condition and treat it accordingly.

I suggest you first check with your doctor. If he or she gives you a clean bill of health in terms of any underlying pathology you might then want to consult a plastic surgeon.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had the opportunity to read an article under your byline in our newspaper, the heading of which was "Vial of Life."

Some Vial of Life Programs are sponsored by government agencies, civic, religious or fraternal groups. In our case, our chapter of the American Red Cross Youth Services was fortunate enough to have funds to cover the cost of this program as one of Red Cross Youth Services' major priorities, "Youth Serving the Elderly."

We implemented this program on November 1, 1979, and to date we have distributed 114,291 vials, which covers over one fifth of the residents in our area. We were able to do this through the active participation of fire and emergency rescue units, police, condominium associations, church groups, ambulance firms, nutrition programs, trailer parks, teachers, youth, etc. We are grateful to the above for their community service involvement in helping the American Red Cross to serve the elderly and handicapped in our country.

We were most happy to see from your write-up in the newspaper that the Vial of Life is now in existence in at least 34 states and several foreign countries, as we have had requests from 10 states and Canada for guidelines to implement this program. — Phyllis R. Ryan, American Red Cross, West Palm Beach, Florida.

Readers: The Vial of Life is a small bottle containing appropriate medical information that is placed in a person's refrigerator.

Hot temperatures continue to reign

Hot temperatures reigned throughout the Permian Basin Wednesday, with the high of 101 falling only one degree short of the all-time record for the date set in 1964.

The high also topped all southwest temperatures received by the National Weather Service of Midland, as only Oklahoma City and Wichita Falls even reached the century mark.

Today's early morning low of 68 was well above the record 63 set in 1975.

More warm temperatures are expected Friday, with the high to be in the upper 90s.

Bensten blasts CIA security check

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency bungled its security check of Max Hugel, the administration's nominee for chief of clandestine operations, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

Hugel resigned Tuesday in the wake of charges he engaged in improper stock market activity seven years ago.

"It's obvious they made a very hurried security check. I understand they did it in approximately seven days, and that was too hasty for an agency that has a record for being very thorough," Bentsen told Texas reporters Wednesday afternoon.

"They obviously did a very poor job, and it obviously was a very serious mistake," the Texas Democrat said during his monthly press conference.

BENSTEN, A MEMBER of the Senate Intelligence Comittee, sid he was not given advance notice of Hugel's resignation, but didn't consider that improper. He learned the news during a meeting of the committee on Tuesday.

"It took them a short time, I suppose, to find out how severe the accusation was. I think once they found out, they acted very expeditiously."

Asked if the embarrassment would have any effect on his decisions concerning the CIA, Bentsen said, "Every time you see one of these things, it leads you to question more, to probe more."

Bentsen touched on several other topics during his press conference, including the decision by House Democratic leaders to leave Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station off the giant House-Senate conference committee concerning the bill Gramm drafted and helped sponsor.

"To be the majority party, we ought to work to pull people in," he added.

BENTSEN ALSO COMMENTED at length on his battle to win an exemption for the first 1,000 barrels of daily production for royalty owners and independent oilmen under the Windfall Profits Tax.

"It's going to be very tough because the administration obviously opposes it. We're on notice they're going to oppose it on the floor. But we're going to go ahead and pursue it," he said.

"If Republicans hang together, then I can't win. But there are a number of them who have supported it in the past, and I hope they'll support it again," the Texas Democrat said.

Bentsen has 15 co-sponsors, including Republicans Don Nickles of Oklahoma and Mark Andrews of North Dakota.

The administration says it opposes the legislation because of its timing. Any exemptions to the Windfall Profits Tax should be delayed until a second tax bill can be offered later in the year, White House officials contend.

Police probing numerous thefts

A 17-year-old El Paso man and an 18-year-old Midland man were arrested early this morning in connection with the apparent burglary of Boydstun Pest Control, 1419 N. Big Spring St.

No charges had been filed by early this morning, however.

According to police reports, a Midland police officer arrested the two in the 1400 block of North Big Spring at 2:10 a.m. today. Further investigation revealed that Boydstun's Pest Control had been entered through the roof.

Taken during that break-in were $228 in cash, a jacket, a recorder and a cloth dust mask, according to police.

Police also are continuing to probe an incident early Wednesday in which a 13-year-old girl was tied with an extension cord for a short time in the apartment in which she lives while two women robbed the apartment.

Police reports indicated the girl was alone in the apartment at 2928 W. Louisiana Ave. about 9 a.m. Wednesday when two women knocked on the door and asked to be let in.

The two women then tied the girl with an extension cord and robbed the apartment, reports indicated.

After the women left the apartment, the girl freed herself and then notified her mother of the incident. The mother notified police. The girl was unharmed, police said.

Police are looking for one woman in her 20s, 5 feet 5 inches and 120 pounds with long dark hair, a blue and white shirt, jeans and blue and white tennis shoes. The other woman is described as in her 20s, thin build, 5 feet 9 inches, with blond hair. She was described as wearing a red tank top and jeans.

Police, Fire Roundup

$110 worth of travelers' checks. He said the checks were taken from his motel room between 6:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Police reports indicated there was no sign of forced entry to Knight's motel room.

Joe Bradley of 903 S. Mineola St. reported the theft of a two-month-old white female German shepherd puppy valued at $150. Bradley told police the pup was taken from his yard.

Midland firemen quickly extinguished a fire at the home of Jesse Avila, 1520 S. Atlanta St. Wednesday.

Nine firemen responded to the fire in the one-story brick structure. Cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Midland County Sheriff's Department deputy Hal Heathington's patrol car was slightly damaged Tuesday night when it struck a deer. The accident occurred on FM 1787 a mile west of FM 1788.

Heathington apparently was uninjured in the mishap.

A 17-year-old Midland man was charged Wednesday with burglary of a building in connection with last month's burglary of the Water Wonderland amusement park between Midland and Odessa.

Tommy Rebal Bunch remained in Midland County Jail at noon today after being charged before the district attorney Wednesday. He is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Meanwhile, legal action is pending against a 15-year-old also taken into custody for questioning in connection with the Water Wonderland burglary. He is scheduled to be taken before the juvenile board Friday, according to sheriff's department investigator David Cobos.

Sheriff's department officers served a search warrant on a Midland residence Tuesday evening and made the arrests there. A large quantity of money was recovered, some from a bedroom inside the residence and some from the back yard.

The exact amount of the recovery is not being released although it's believed to amount to several thousand dollars. Initial reports following the break-in indicated as much as $20,000 may have been taken.

Officers recovered a large amount of coins and bills during the search, including a 10-inch by 16-inch plastic ice cnest full of quarters, dug up from the back yard.

It's unknown whether any more arrests will be made in the case, but the investigation is continuing.

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tonight's sky should be darker than usual for half the world as a rare lunar eclipse snuffs the moon from view.

The partial eclipse of the moon will pass through Earth's shadow beginning at 10:25 p.m. (CDT) today. The shadow will take a progressively larger bite from the moon's sunlit face until, at 11:47 a.m., a bit over 55 percent will be darkened. By 1:09 a.m., the moon will drift out of the shadow and the show will be over.

Barring clouds, anyone in the United States and "everyone on the dark side of the Earth will be able to see it," said Malcolm Cooper of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory.

However, the eclipse will not be visible to the half of the world that will be in daylight when it occurs.

Lunar eclipses "are of no real scientific value anymore, but they're fun to look at," Cooper said.

Unlike solar eclipses, which require care to avoid eye damage as the moon blots out the sun, "there's no reason in the world not to watch" a lunar eclipse, he said. "It's perfectly safe."

"It will look like a bite has been taken out of the moon," said UCLA astronomer George O. Abell. The area in shadow will seem quite dark compared with the rest of the moon's face, he said.

The dark, curving bite probably will appear a reddish, coppery tint as Earth's atmosphere bends some sunlight around into the shadow. The atmosphere allows more red light through than any other color.

Humans have been fascinated by eclipses for centuries.

"Aristotle reports that the shape of the shadow is curved on the moon and that's one of the earliest proofs ever cited that the Earth is round," Abell said. Other ancient Greeks used eclipses to deduce the size of the moon compared with Earth and the distance between the two bodies.

Twenty-eight more lunar eclipses will occur this century, although only about half will be visible in North America.

Bids opened on Odessa link

AUSTIN — Bids have been opened by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the construction of a section of what will eventually become a northern route linking Midland and Odessa.

The 6.5-mile section of State Highway 191 and State Highway 158 extends from Farm-to-Market 1788 to 0.4 mile east of Loop 250.

A portion of the proposed project follows existing two-lane highway route of S.H. 158, while part of the project, from S.H. 158 to F.M. 1788 is on a new location.

The construction will provide a pair of two-lane highways, which eventually will serve as frontage roads of a freeway facility. The initial project will provide a four-lane divided facility. Segments of S.H. 158 and F.M. 1788 will be reconstructed in the future interchange areas.

District Engineer Bill Lancaster of Odessa said John Aldridge of Midland will be the department's engineer in charge of supervising the construction, expected to require 300 working days.

PBRPC tables housing application

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board of Directors gave favorable comment to all resolutions except one on its agenda during their monthly meeting held Wednesday at the Odessa Country Club.

According to Ernie Crawford, executive director of the PBRPC, an application by A.P.S. Construction Company, Inc. of Midland for the Ocotillo Park housing addition in west Odessa was tabled.

The application had already been acted upon by the Federal Housing Association and could not be given favorable comment by the commission because the proposed subdivision is on a flood plane. However, FHA will accept the undeveloped property as individual lots, Crawford said.

Resolutions that received favorable comment were grant applications from: West Texas Opportunities, Inc., for community food and nutrition project; Can Casa Construction Co., Midland, to the Veterans Administration; the city of Iraan to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for an environmental review; and Larry Hambrick, Midland to HUD for an environmental review.

Favorable comment also was given to a continuation grant from Permian Basin Community Centers for MH/MR for Pecos county workshop and Odessa operating grant, and to the preliminary proposal from St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes, Inc., to HUD for rent subsidized housing for elderly and handicapped persons.

Dogs, humans to join in Frisbee toss

The city Parks and Recreation is sponsoring the city-wide Frisbee contest for youths and the K-9 Frisbee contest for dogs on Monday, but at different times.

The one for youths aged 6 to 15 will be at 9 a.m. in front of the Parks and Recreation building, 300 Baldwin St. Prizes will be awarded in each age division. Contestants may sign up the day of the contest.

Winners here may compete in the 1981 World Frisbee Contest to be held at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Mike Carter Baseball Park at Tyler.

Dogs who need to perfect their grip have only until 6:30 p.m. Monday when the city's Catch-n-Fetch World K-9 contest will start. This year's contest is being sponsored by the city, Wham-O and Cycle Dog Food.

Dog owners who want to prepare and train their animal for this event may go by the Parks and Recreation office, 300 Baldwin St. and show their dog's tags or license. They will be given a free Frisbee and instruction brochure.

Further information about the events can be obtained from the city recreation office, 683-4281, extension 280.

Tax board rents office space at local mall increase to $3,895 per month for the second two-year period.

In other action, the board decided to hold in abeyance a decision on contracting with Western Data Services Inc. of Waxahachie to keep the tax roll and related information, including assessed valuations, on the computers there. However, Midland Mayor G.Thane Akins just recently proposed that the board consider using the city's existing computer system, which currently has in storage the tax information. The city's computer would have to be programmed for keeping records of appraisals.

And the board re-commissioned computer consulting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. to evaluate the capabilities of the city's computer system to determine if it would be equal to or exceed the functions and reliability of Western Data's system. The board is to re-convene at 10 a.m. Aug. 3 on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse to consider Akins' suggestion and how it meshes with the findings of the computer consultants, who had leaned toward Western Data.

"Fact is," Nuessle said, "I don't like computers. As a matter of fact. I thought in terms of sharing what we (the city) had, since we're all in this together."

Jones cautioned the board that the tax money may not be put to optimum use if a decision on the computer system is delayed too long.

"You're going to waste some money if you're not careful," Jones said, "and a bunch of it."

The chief appraiser will be checking valuations for taxable property within the jurisdictions of six taxing entities: city of Midland, Midland County, Midland College, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Independent School District and the Greenwood ISD. He will collect taxes for four of the taxing agencies: the city, hospital, college and Midland ISD.

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield will continue collecting taxing for the county and Greenwood ISD.

The six-member board is made up of representatives of each of the agencies. Greenwood ISD representative Bud Lea was the only board member who missed the Wednesday meeting.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Flight 417 from Mexico City has arrived — finally.

What usually is a three-hour trip aboard Nicaragua's state airline took three days for 100 hot and weary passengers who first boarded the Lanica flight Sunday and reached their destination Tuesday.

"We realize this was a terrible inconvenience for our passengers," said Lanica's Mexico City manager, Fernando Salcera, "but it was a mechanical failure, and we had no control over it."

A U.S. citizen, who asked that his name not be used because he makes the flight frequently, gave this version of Flight 417 and its false starts:

It was scheduled to leave Mexico City at 2 p.m., but was overweight and the company delayed the departure until 5 p.m. when cooler weather would provide more lift for the twin-jet BAC-111 aircraft.

"We taxied out, the pilot revved up the engines, and the plane shook so much, we taxied back in and they checked the plane," the American said.

"Two hours later, we got on the plane and it took off. We climbed out of Mexico City, and immediately lost pressure. The oxygen masks that are supposed to drop automatically, didn't.

"Babies were crying, people were fainting and screaming, and we made a forced landing in Acapulco," about 175 miles south of Mexico City. "They unloaded us on the runway, they worked on the plane and we got back on and took off, but had to land again.

"Then immigration confiscated our passports and we went to a hotel, which Lanica paid for, but our luggage stayed on the plane. The next day we went to the airport but had to come back because the plane still wasn't operational."

The passengers boarded the craft at 5 a.m. Tuesday morning, he said, and it left three hours later for the last leg of the journey.

Although the British-built jetliner is designed to accommodate up to 100 passengers, depending on the seating arrangements, some passengers getting off the tardy flight said it was so crowded they stood in the aisle for the 1,000-mile trip.

Salcera said a valve controlling the plane's heating and pressurization systems failed, there was no backup aircraft and it took longer than expected to get replacement parts to Acapulco.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Dr. Solomon: The elementary school my daughter attends has been carrying on a high-pressure educational campaign dealing with childhood diseases and the need for immunization. I understand these efforts are financed by the state, and that means tax money. Is there any evidence that such programs are worth the expense? — Mrs. B.H.

Dear Mrs. H.: All the indications are that any investment in the fight against childhood diseases has been very worthwhile. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) reports an all-time low for 1980 for rubella (German measles), rubeola (measles), mumps, tetanus, and diphtheria. In fact, there was only one case of diphtheria last year in children under 15 years of age, and five cases among adults. The CDC has set October 1982 as the target date for the complete elimination of rubeola among children in the United States.

All 50 states require children to be immunized before they are permitted to start school. The success of the program not only means a reduction in illness — a desirable goal in itself — but a financial savings as well because of the decreased need for medical care.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 19 years of age and have inverted nipples. Is there any significance to this? I used to think that calisthenics might help, but it hasn't done any good. Is there anything you can recommend that would help correct this condition? — Ms. B.D.

Dear Ms. D.: If inverted nipples have been present for a long time, they have no clinical significance except that breast-feeding may not be possible. Of course if they are the result of some underlying condition, it is important to investigate this condition and treat it accordingly.

I suggest you first check with your doctor. If he or she gives you a clean bill of health in terms of any underlying pathology you might then want to consult a plastic surgeon.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had the opportunity to read an article under your byline in our newspaper, the heading of which was "Vial of Life."

Some Vial of Life Programs are sponsored by government agencies, civic, religious or fraternal groups. In our case, our chapter of the American Red Cross Youth Services was fortunate enough to have funds to cover the cost of this program as one of Red Cross Youth Services' major priorities, "Youth Serving the Elderly."

We implemented this program on November 1, 1979, and to date we have distributed 114,291 vials, which covers over one fifth of the residents in our area. We were able to do this through the active participation of fire and emergency rescue units, police, condominium associations, church groups, ambulance firms, nutrition programs, trailer parks, teachers, youth, etc. We are grateful to the above for their community service involvement in helping the American Red Cross to serve the elderly and handicapped in our country.

We were most happy to see from your write-up in the newspaper that the Vial of Life is now in existence in at least 34 states and several foreign countries, as we have had requests from 10 states and Canada for guidelines to implement this program. — Phyllis R. Ryan, American Red Cross, West Palm Beach, Florida.

Caught in change

All that grumbling back East is just U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland caught between Democratic political dogma and the winds of change. This time, though, we're afraid Leland has underestimated the breadth and depth of the political current inundating the American electorate, liberally speaking.

The congressman has embarked on what appears to be a one-representative crusade to taint the names of U.S. Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Phil Gramm of College Station for their parts in what Leland apparently considers political heresy — helping to get President Ronald Reagan's economy-salvaging spending and budget-cutting proposals through the Congress. In fact, he's pushing censure actions against all three, seeking to have the congressmen stripped of their party assignments and committee chairs.

Sadly, Rep. Leland seems to have missed the point that's obviously been staring every other Democrat squarely in the face the past few months — the old policies and economic tenets of the party are as much past history as the times they were intended to serve. Just a roll call of all the Republicans in the country who swore allegiance to the Democratic party six months ago will attest to that.

Anyway, the sad part of this entire episode is that with the Mickey Lelands around the political circles of today, it may be difficult for men like Hance, Stenholm and Gramm to recognize how true their arrows are flying. It probably isn't out of line to suggest a letter writing campaign expressing support for their actions. Letters can be sent to each of the congressmen at the House Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20515.

Out hats are off to the men for voting the convictions of their constituencies, even if it did mean crossing party lines and taking some lumps from others in the Congress.

Postmen bite back

When Herodotus, the ancient Greek historian, described the hardships that couriers must overcome in the swift completion of their appointed rounds — snow, rain, heat and gloom of night — he overlooked perhaps the worst of all, the biting dog. About 8,000 letter carriers are bitten annually in the United States.

The average dog bite costs the U.S. Postal Service about $300 in medical bills and lost work. Dogs, in fact, bite an estimated $2.4 million out of the Postal Service's annual budget. Moreover, last year the Postal Service spent $264,021.12 on containers of dog repellent. Those are just two more reasons why a postage stamp now costs 18 cents and is headed, they say, to 40 cents in the not-distant future.

No wonder the Postal Service has decided to bite back by suing dog owners for damages. But we don't expect any large awards that could reduce the cost of postage stamps. Dogs can count on friends in any jury.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 16, the 197th day of 1981. There are 168 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 16, 1945, the atomic age was heralded when the U.S. exploded the first atomic bomb over the desert in New Mexico.

On this date:

In 1790, the District of Columbia was established as the seat of the U.S. government.

In 1918, Russia's Czar Nicholas II and his family were executed by the Bolsheviks.

In 1969, the U.S. Apollo 11 spacecraft was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. to attempt the first manned landing on the moon.

And in 1973, the White House confirmed that nearly all of President Richard Nixon's meetings and phone conversations in the executive mansion had been secretly recorded.

Ten years ago: Nationalist China expressed dismay at the planned visit of President Richard Nixon to the People's Republic of China.

Five years ago: Archbishop Makarios, deposed as president of Cyprus, flew to Malta en route to New York to plead his case before the United Nations.

One year ago: Ronald Reagan won the Republican Party's presidential nomination and announced that his chief rival in the primaries — George Bush — was his choice for running-mate.

Today's birthdays: actress Ginger Rogers is 70 years old. Actress Barbara Stanwyck is 74.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Trade proposal favors Caribbean nations

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's foreign policy team has completed a secret development program that would give Caribbean nations unprecedented trade concessions to market their goods in the United States.

Jack Anderson

The cost to the U.S. taxpayer is expected to reach $325 million to $350 million by fiscal 1983 — but administration officials believe that will be a bargain if the Caribbean Basin blueprint accomplishes what they hope it will. The ultimate goal is to make the member nations self-sufficient, thereby eliminating the economic miseries that make leftist propaganda so beguiling to the downtrodden masses.

At the same time, the administration will take pains to avoid any taint of "Yankee imperialism" or "dollar diplomacy."

One way it will do this is to focus solely on economic aid, leaving out military or "security" assistance. My sources say that U.S. embassy officials have been told to deflect any questions about military aid by saying, "We are attempting on a multilateral basis to reduce tensions in the region by attacking their root causes; that is, inadequate economic development and social imbalance."

Another means of averting suspicion of U.S. motives is to gain support from other nations, and here the president has stepped in personally. He has discussed the concept with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. Other administration officials have contacted Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and trade bigshots in France, Britain and Venezuela.

State Department sources told my associate Bob Sherman that the president is hoping to schedule a four-party meeting this summer or early fall with Trudeau, Lopez Portillo and Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins. Reagan is hopeful that Lopez Portillo and Herrera Campins will play a leading role in organizing and running the Caribbean Basin program.

Ironically, the feature of the administration's proposal most likely to reassure the Caribbean nations of Uncle Sam's good intentions is the very one that will cause the most trouble at home. This is the plan to establish a one-way free trade program, under which the Caribbean nations could sell their goods in the United States with no restrictions — but without granting American companies similar concessions.

This will obviously encounter opposition from U.S. industry and labor, which would be undercut by unrestrained importation of Caribbean products. Similar complaints can be expected from Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, which already enjoy trade concessions equal or similar to those proposed for the Caribbean Basin nations.

Beyond the one-way free trade opportunity, the Reagan plan would also create a Caribbean Basin Insurance Consortium to provide at least partial protection against the political risks businessmen in the region face from war damage and government expropriation.

Reagan insiders are hoping the Caribbean initiative can be in action by fiscal 1983. They estimate the U.S. costs to be up to $350 million per year for the first three years, with another $100 million from other governments.

State Department planners hope that the ambitious plan will increase agricultural and industrial productivity in the economically hard-pressed Caribbean to the point of self-sufficiency in 10 or 15 years. The initiative would include all the Caribbean and Central American nations except Cuba, Grenada and possibly Nicaragua. Guyana and Surinam in South America would also be included.

UNDER THE DOME: Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the normally amiable chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was outraged at what he considered the administration's unreasonable demand for speed on the tax-cut bill — and the "twisting" of his position on it. "The president's demand for a tax bill on his desk by August 1 is high political theater at best," he wrote Treasury Secretary Donald Regan. "I believe that prudence — rather than a media horse race — would better serve the nation's taxpayers."

— Rushing in where angels fear to tread, a Justice Department bureaucrat named Bob McConnell unilaterally canceled a meeting that had been set up between the Florida congressional delegation and Justice representatives. One reason: The arrangements for the meeting had not gone through the congressional liaison office. Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., told McConnell he had never heard of such impertinence in all the years he's been in the Senate. The meeting was held the next day.

— The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, in a biting press release, attacked Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla., for junketing off to the Paris Air Show. "The only thing Rep. Shaw knows about belt-tightening is when his stewardess tells him: 'Fasten your seatbelt, Congressman,'" the release said. One trouble: Shaw didn't make the trip. He demanded a retraction, and got it.

WATCH ON WASTE: When the pressure gets too heavy to bear at the Defense Logistics Agency in Alexandria, Va., employees can now head for a heavily draped "meditation room," installed to enhance their morale. A memo announcing the opening of the room described it as "a place where individuals could reflect upon their problems or just find a brief, quiet respite where the stresses and strains of daily life could be put aside for a while."

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

The banning of topless dancing in establishments serving alcohol is the right of the state. So says the Supreme Court. This means topless dancing will probably be abolished everywhere except Nevada, where it will be required.

●

This differs from the recent New Jersey case in which nude dancing was permitted; the establishment in question being a bookstore. Let us hope the court has not ushered in the era of the topless librarian.

●

The court makes no judgment of nudity or alcohol per se — only the combination of the two. So, topless bars are out. As for hardware stores, Radio Shacks and office repair shops — no problem!

●

Another decision required religious groups to set up booths at state fairs instead of roaming around trying to convert the people. Good. When I'm entering the pie-eating contest, I don't appreciate some Hari Krishna trying to sell me a book on self-denial.

Britons missing the point by explaining away rioting

WASHINGTON — Britain may soon learn what America learned: Worse than the physical damage done by rioters is the moral damage done "explaining" them.

George F. Will

Britain has unemployment, racial tensions, and riots. But Zurich's rioters complain about the boringness of prosperity. In Amsterdam the rioting is supposedly about housing; in West Berlin, about something else.

Some British disturbances have been racial. But some mobs have been integrated. Unemployment? Many rioters are too young to be rioting for anything but the fun of it, something they may have learned from Britain's soccer fans or youth gangs. (People who think the British are uniformly placid know Britain only from Trollope.) Riots that began spontaneously became organized, with cars stolen to carry away the loot.

Before the smoke clears from any rioting, advanced thinkers are explaining that the rioting was a "cry for help" from people oppressed by some social inadequacy. But then come photographs (as from Britain) of people excitedly looting appliance stores. From Watts to Detroit to Liverpool the "cry for help" seems to be a cry for a free color-TV.

Newsweek reports from Liverpool: "As the officers fell back, looters followed, including local women with shopping bags and children as young as eight. Some stood calmly in line waiting for their turn to steal food, television sets, suits and dresses. Housewives hurried away with baby carriages piled with loot." Only British looters would queue up. But the basic story is familiar.

During the New York riots of 1977, a woman looter wandered through the second floor of a furniture store looking for end tables and complaining to other looters, "I just can't use a thing up here."

During the 1960s many Europeans blamed America's disorders on "the streak of violence" in American life (the frontier, John Dillinger, John Wayne, etc., etc.), and America's "racist society," and, of course, "alienation." Recently, Europeans have been a bit too busy to condescend to Americans — too busy failing to deal with their comparatively trivial ethnic problems. But if the British would like to benefit from our experience, they should read Midge Decter's "Looting and Liberal Racism," published in Commentary magazine after the rioting that followed the New York power failure of July 13, 1977.

The 1965 power failure had occasioned no rioting. What had changed by 1977? The moral climate, says Decter.

In the intervening 12 years the flow of government money to the urban poor had become a flood. The urban poor had become the focus of a social-work industry with a professional stake in convincing its clients that they were not just disadvantaged, they were "victims."

The looters of 1977 "had been given permission" to riot, Decter said, by attitudes and policies "proclaiming that race and poverty were sufficient excuses for lawlessness." Permission had been given by politicians who clearly believed that appropriations were the correct response when minority "leaders" (you remember — Huey Newton, H. Rap Brown, Stokely Carmichael) threatened "long, hot summers."

Decter wrote: "Young blacks are getting the message from the liberal culture, more subtly but just as surely as from any old-time Southern sheriff, that they are, inherently and by virtue of their race, inferior. There are virtually no crimes they can commit that someone with great influence does not rush in to excuse on the grounds that we had no right to expect anything else....They must not be judged by the standards that apply to everyone else in schools or in applying for or performing a job." The "very liberal and very racist idea" was "that being black is a condition for special moral allowance."

But throughout American cities in the 1960s, as in New York four years ago, the vast majority of blacks did not riot. And they must have wondered why not, by the time white liberal "explainers" were finished.

It is dismaying to note that British officials are reading the Kerner Commission report which fatuously blamed America's riots on "white racism." A danger Britain faces is the emergence of an official "explanation" that will demoralize the vast majority of unemployed whites and immigrants who are not lawless.

British officials would do better to read Decter, who reports that after the 1977 riots, two young black boys were asked why they had not participated in the looting that had swirled around them. One said: "I was scared of the cops." The other said: "Because my mamma would have killed me." There is more to be learned from those two boys than from a thousand volumes from the liberal "explanation industry."

Reagan wrong

To The Editor:

The Reagan administration's ruling Wednesday to relax or even eliminate anti-trust investigation and prosecution is wrong. The free market concept depends on competition that is genuine and unrestricted.

Any attempt to hinder the enforcement of anti-trust standards will result in a swirl of collusion and monopolistic practices such as we have not seen since the turn of the century before such legislation was passed. This reversal of policy must be stopped if we are to protect the competition and rivalry that ignites free trade. We want a consumer market not a barons system.

Reese supported

To The Editor:

I have heard several, a dozen or more, favorable comments on the Charley Reese column about "the Poor" (June 29) and no complaints.

Lois Carpenter was extremely critical of this Reese column (July 5 Letter to the Editor). Perhaps she is an advocate of "The Great Society" and is unable to differentiate between the truly needy and the poor.

Abortion evil

To The Editor:

One of the social evils of our time is abortion. It is a crime that calls to heaven for vengeance since the defenseless infant who is being attacked can make no outcry, can make no protest march nor have his vote counted in Congress.

The abortion rate in this country is astounding. More than eight million babies have been aborted since the 1973 Supreme Court decision making legal abortion-on-demand.

And what does the Bible say of abortion? There are many references to life in the womb —

"Before I formed you in the womb I knew you, before you were born I dedicated you, A prophet to the nations I appointed you." Jer. 1:5-6.

"When Elizabeth heard Mary's greeting, the baby leapt in her womb. Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Spirit and cried out in a loud voice: "Blest are you among women and blest is the fruit of your womb. But who am I that the mother of my Lord should come to me? The moment your greeting sounded in my ears, the baby leapt in my womb for joy." Luke 1:41-44.

So Christians cannot remain indifferent to this horror. We must work with whatever pro-life forces are available and make our voices known.

Letter criticized

To The Editor:

In a Letter to the Editor (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Sunday, July 5, p.7G), Lois Carpenter upbraids the Reporter-Telegram for running Charley Reese's column. She then turns on Reese and vilifies him for his editorial views, calling him un-American.

She then attempts to cajole the editor into dropping the column from the paper, which is merely an appeal to establish a censorship in favor of her views. This is what is truly un-American, flying in the face of the First Amendment.

Whether one agrees with Charley Reese or not, this marks a deplorably growing trend to interfere with a free press. Possibly Carpenter should be just a bit more selective in her reading material; or she might assimilate the entire message rather than taking statements out of context. After all, even the Devil can quote Scripture.

BIBLE VERSE

Is any among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. Jas. 5:14

The Newspaper BIBLE

WILLING TO BE JAILED FOR JESUS!

Paul was going by land to Assos, and we went on ahead by ship. He joined us there and we sailed together to Mitylene; the next day we passed Chios; the next, we touched at Samos; and a day later we arrived at Miletus. Paul had decided against stopping at Ephesus this time, as he was hurrying to get to Jerusalem, if possible, for the celebration of Pentecost.

But when we landed at Miletus, he sent a message to the elders of the church at Ephesus asking them to come down to the boat to meet him.

When they arrived he told them, "You men know that from the day I set foot in Turkey until now I have done the Lord's work humbly -- yes, and with tears -- and have faced grave danger from the plots of the Jews against my life. Yet I never shrank from telling the truth, either publicly or in your homes. I have had one message for Jews and Gentiles alike the necessity of turning from sin to God through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

"And now I am going to Jerusalem, drawn there irresistibly by the Holy Spirit, not knowing what awaits me, except that the Holy Spirit has told me in city after city that jail and suffering lie ahead. But life is worth nothing unless I use it for doing the work assigned me by the Lord Jesus -- the work of telling others the Good News about God's mighty kindness and love. And now I know that none of you among whom I went about teaching the Kingdom will ever see me again." Acts 20:13-25

Navy trains whales to help recover torpedos

By LARRY LANGE
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE -- Beluga whales are friendly, playful, docile and, observers say, intelligent enough to learn tasks taught to them by humans.

That's why the Navy has inducted them as torpedo recovery assistants and is putting two of the whales through a training program off Vancouver Island to see how much they can do for Uncle Sam.

From last October until a few days ago, they were in training in Dabob Bay, near the Navy Undersea Warfare Engineering Station at Keyport, Wash., helping recover unarmed torpedos that sank during testing.

The Navy is delighted with the performance of the two unnamed whales, an 8-year-old male weighing 1,100 pounds and a 6-year-old female weighing 900 pounds. Spokesmen say the whales have a future as regular Navy servants, but they'll be in "basic" training until at least the end of this year and results won't be known until then.

"We're very satisfied with their progress," says Joel Meriwether, spokesman for the Naval Ocean System Center in San Diego, which runs the whale training program. Dick Meyer of the Keyport base says the training "worked beautifully."

Navy spokesmen said the defense agency has tested the whales only for safe, noncombat tasks, and has no other intentions.

Nevertheless, the Navy is relatively tight with information about the whales. The service issued press releases announcing the arrival and departure of the whales on Dabob Bay, but both Meriwether and a superior at the Pentagon refused a request for admission to the Vancouver Island test site.

The secrecy surrounding the training has fueled the suspicion of Greenpeace, the international marine conservation organization, which is skeptical about the Navy's plans for the gregarious white whales. "If there's national security revolving around these two Belugas, then our security is shakier than I thought," says Jon Hink, a Greenpeace spokesman. "Our ultimate objective would be to see these animals released."

Hink, who said the Navy got the National Marine Fisheries Service to approve whale testing with "a dearth of information," said Greenpeace plans to initiate actions under the Freedom of Information Act to obtain more data about the testing.

He said his organization also has questions about how the whales were being captured, their holding pens, references to chemically-treated foods they're fed and whether the mammals will be returned to their natural environment when the Navy finishes the tests.

"The Navy has already invoked its right to withhold information about what they're doing. . . . Where is the outside review questioning whether this is proper?" Hink asked.

He and Kay Treakle of Greenpeace describe Belugas as "peaceful, playful" creatures and said the organization generally opposes their military use, although the Belugas are not classified as an endangered species.

"To be aiding a military establishment. . .is just contrary to the nature of these creatures," Hink said. "Start involving them in warfare and they'll be an endangered species real soon."

The whales have been in Navy training since they were captured in Canada's Hudson Bay in 1977. In exchange for rewarding morsels of fish, they have learned to grab a special tong-like recovery harness, dive to the bottom with it and bump it with their heads so it can latch onto submerged torpedos.

The procedure is an extension of 10 years of Navy marine mammal research into use of small whales, porpoises and sea lions to perform basic military tasks.

The research has resulted in one fully functional recovery program: Operation Quick Find, which began in 1975 and uses sea lions to dive to depths of 500 feet to recover unarmed missiles. The lions work with a crew of two or three handlers and a rubber boat.

A similar project, "Deep Ops," using killer whales to recover objects from greater depths, is under study by the Navy at the ocean systems center but is not yet in regular use.

The Beluga whales were captured after the Navy began wondering whether they could be used as models for underwater torpedo, radar and sonar designs. The animals soon showed their intelligence and were shifted into torpedo recovery studies. They are Arctic whales whose thick layers of fat insulate them so they can perform in cold, deep water.

"They travel well in open water and are responding to the exercises or commands that we're putting them through," Meriwether said.

California Governor Edmund Brown Jr. talks at a press conference where he disclosed that he had asked President Reagan for help in fighting the Mediterranean fruit fly. A grim faced Jerry Scribner, head of the fruit fly project, listens as Brown speaks.

Fruit flies spreading out of control

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Fruit flies spreading out of control threaten California's $14 billion farming industry with virtual shutdown and the federal government should take emergency steps to help fight them, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. says.

Brown asked President Reagan on Wednesday to declare three San Francisco Bay counties a federal disaster area after fruit flies were discovered 10 miles outside a region designated for aerial spraying with the pesticide malathion.

OFFICIALS made arrangements to widen the spraying area, and two helicopters sprayed fine droplets of sticky pesticide-laced bait over a populated area north and west of San Jose early today to kill flies on backyard fruit trees. Three other helicopters were being prepared for trips today, the third day of aerial spraying.

"The increased magnitude of the infestation constitutes a disaster which is now beyond the control of the services, personnel, equipment and facilities" of the state and the three counties, Brown said in a letter to Reagan released Wednesday.

HE ASKED for federal funds to help pay for the eradication program, which has already cost $23 million, and he asked for low-interest loans for residents from the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration.

The White House said it had not received a copy of the letter, and Brown said he had no indication that help would be forthcoming.

Officials confirmed on Wednesday that maggots of the fast-breeding pest had been found 10 miles north of the infestation area in San Mateo and to the east in Milpitas, as well.

IN THE FIRST two days of pre-dawn spraying of the pesticide malathion, only 7½ square miles were covered in the the heavily populated infestation area of more than 129 square miles. The first night, a pump on the lone helicopter broke down. The second night, one of two helicopters used for the spraying malfunctioned.

Officials had hoped to spray 45 square miles in two days and the full area in a week.

The entire zone is targeted for at least six sprayings of malathion, a common garden pesticide which many experts have said is safe.

THE SPRAYING, which began early Tuesday, aroused fierce opposition among local governments in Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo counties. They went to court to stop the spraying, but were rebuffed.

Red Cross centers, set up to handle thousands, were open for residents fleeing the largely invisible bombardment, but attendance was less than 100 in each of the first two days.

"California faces the threat of an economic disaster of unprecedented proportions by the virtual shutdown of the state's $14 billion agriculture industry by federal order," Brown said in his letter to Reagan.

BROWN, WHO initially refused to allow aerial spraying, has said he was forced to revese himself by the Reagan administration's threat that all unfumigated California produce would be quarantined.

California farm leaders and agriculture officials in other states demanded the aerial spraying program as medfly discoveries expanded so quickly in the South San Francisco Bay area that state officials compared them to an out-of-control forest fire.

AND AS AN added precaution, officials in North Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia, Florida and Alabama have announced they will examine California fruit to make sure it is medfly-free.

None of the flies have been found in commercial orchards, according to agriculture officials, but farmers fear they could spread to the nearby San Joaquin Valley, the nation's vegetable and fruit center.

Brown said the quarantine of three infested counties already has caused a loss of $4.2 million to 11,000 farms, ranches and businesses unable to sell produce without fumigating it. The governor said the total could reach $93 million.

OFFICIALS THINK the flies came to California on fruit from Hawaii.

State officials launched a massive fruit-stripping and ground-spraying fight against the pests after they were found 13 months ago in the backyard orchards filled with peach, plum, orange, apricot, lemon and other fruit trees.

Millions of sterile medflies were released — and are still being released weekly — in efforts to breed the pests out of existence.

But after a dormant winter, the flies broke out again in June. And maggots have been found on more than 142 properties since then, despite the efforts of some 3,000 Medfly Project workers and tens of thousands of residents who were ordered to strip fruit from backyard trees.

Disease center studying malathion

ATLANTA (AP) — Officials of the National Centers for Disease Control say they don't expect to find any problems with the pesticide malathion in their study of whether it causes birth defects.

Malathion is the pesticide being used in aerial spraying against California's Mediterranean fruit flies and there have been claims by some local officials in that state that malathion could cause health problems. State officials have said the substance is safe and is essentinal in stopping the spread of the pests, which are threatening the state's large fruit and vegetable industry.

The Atlanta-based CDC will try to match the birth defects data it has collected over the years to areas where malathion has been sprayed, said Dr. Godfrey Oakley, chief of the CDC's birth defects division.

The CDC's project began when the center received a request for the information from California medical school doctor.

"It's a very legitimate question," Oakley said. "We have the (birth effects) data. Are there data available on the spraying?"

"We're not expecting to find any problems with malathion, but obviously it's an issue of some public importance of late," said Oakley.

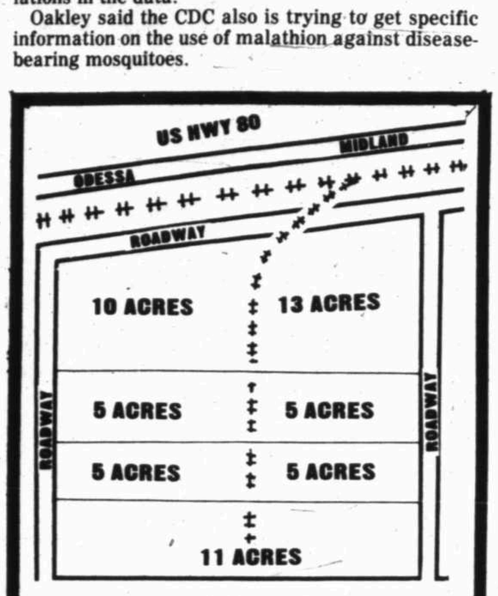

Oakley said it would take "about a week" to find out whether CDC has birth defect data from the times and areas were malathion has been used. Any results from the study would come after that, when CDC officials could begin looking for possible correlations in the data.

Oakley said the CDC also is trying to get specific information on the use of malathion against disease-bearing mosquitoes.

Redistricting vote scheduled Friday

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senate Republicans — led by a Democrat — have won approval of a plan that could guarantee the election of a black congressman from Dallas while making political life hard for two incumbent Democratic congressmen.

A final Senate vote on the plan is set for Friday, but the result should be similar to the 20-11 approval on Wednesday when the Senate met as a Committee of the Whole.

Most Democrats opposed the plan, saying it would sacrifice two white Dallas County congressmen with a feel for the views of blacks in favor of setting up a single minority district.

Sen. John Wilson, D-La Grange, steered his plan through a maze of traps set by Democratic opponents. A key vote to kill the Wilson plan failed 14-17. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the titular head of the Texas Democrat Party, voted with all eight Republican senators in approving the Wilson plan.

Democrats claim the boundary lines drawn by Wilson would make it extremely difficult for U.S. Reps. Martin Frost and Jim Mattox, Dallas Democrats, to be re-elected.

However, Hobby said he voted with the Republicans because the Wilson plan "is the more able to withstand legal attack." Several senators have said a court battle is inevitable, no matter what plan is finally approved.

The Wilson plan faces a possible conference committee fight unless the House approves it. Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, predicted the House would not approve Wilson's proposal.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, tried to fend off the Wilson proposal.

"You're giving Republicans another box they don't deserve," Parker said.

One theory is that by packing minorities in a single district Republicans would have a better chance to win elections in three other districts.

"You're taking away an extra voice, an extra vote," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas. "You're giving away two votes (of congressmen) who are sensitive to the citizens of Dallas County, Texas, and getting one...that's not good arithmetic."

Interest surprises organizers of private space shot project

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of a Texas company planning to launch its first test rocket from a South Texas island later this month are scrambling to accommodate a flood of media interest which they say has caught them somewhat by surprise.

"The engineers would really like to go to the launch stand very quietly," said Walter Pennino, spokesman for the Houston-based Space Services Inc. Wednesday. "But I convinced them that there was really no way to sneak upon the launch stand and fire this baby."

President David Hannah Jr. said in May when the press first learned of the project that he would have preferred to work in private, but he said he was warned that investors would be suspicious if it appeared the firm was being secretive.

Access to the Matagorda Island launch site will be limited because of transportation and safety problems, Pennino said. He said no more than about two dozen media representatives will be allowed on the island.

The handful of reporters and broadcasters will join a herd of cattle, billions of mosquitoes and an alligator.

"The first time I went there, one of the engineers had something in his hand and was trying to shoo the cows away," said Pennino, who was NASA's director of public affairs for 11 years.

Appeals court upholds conviction

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday upheld the conviction and 40-year sentence assessed Cedric Jefferson in Howard County for aggravated rape.

Jefferson had pleaded guilty to the charge, but appealed on grounds there was insufficient evidence to prove aggravated rape.

In upholding the conviction, the court noted that the evidence indicated Jefferson broke into the victim's home in the early morning hours, struck her in the face with his fist, told her he had a knife and threatened to kill her.

The court also upheld the revocation of probation of Delbert Drake Hancock, convicted in Ector County of felony theft and burglary of a habitation.

The Ector County trial court ordered Hancock's probation revoked on grounds he had violated the conditions of his probation by stealing two steaks at an Odessa supermarket on Oct. 21, 1980.

The trial court reduced Hancock's punishment from 10 years to seven years at the time probation was revoked.

Hancock appealed on grounds the state had failed to prove the supermarket owned the steaks but the appeals court disagreed.

Support sought for El Salvadoran policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is moving U.S. involvement in El Salvador back to the forefront in hopes of reversing a perceptible decline in public support for its policy toward the strife-torn country.

Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, planned a major speech late today that U.S. officials said would attempt to rebut criticism that President Reagan's policy is concentrated on achieving a military solution to the Salvadoran conflict.

The speech comes after an extended period in which the administration has made a studied effort to deflect public attention from El Salvador.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Enders would emphasize that the administration, through large-scale economic aid, is trying to help El Salvador's civilian president, Jose Napoleon Duarte, implement sweeping social and economic reform, including political democracy.

The administration already has sent $35.5 million in military equipment to El Salvador along with 54 military trainers.

Officials said Enders would not use the speech to request additional military aid, even though the U.S. Ambassador in San Salvador, Deane Hinton, has said more arms and training are needed because the Salvadoran Army and leftist guerrillas have fought to a draw.

According to one official, the administration agrees with Hinton's assessment but is reluctant to seek more military aid because it senses there is limited popular support for expanded American involvement.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of a House subcommittee on inter-American affairs, said in a telephone interview that the reaction in Congress for a substantial military aid increase would be "very negative."

"The mood of skepticism with respect to American policy in El Salvador is growing, not receding," Barnes said, citing continuing reports of human rights violations and the "inability of the civilian forces to gain control over the military."

Last Sunday, the acting archbishop of San Salvador, the Rev. Arturo Rivera y Damas, blamed security forces for the murder of 28 persons found dead under a bridge in Chalatenango Province.

State Department officials said Barnes' assessment of the public mood is accurate. They said there is no detectable public support for a major American-sponsored effort to defeat the guerrillas.

"There are no hawks out there," said one official who has traveled the country extensively explaining administration policy.

As officials see it, the administration's early attempts to depict El Salvador as a victim of massive Soviet-bloc penetration generally have fallen on deaf ears.

Abroad, the attitude toward the administration claims generally has ranged from skepticism to outright hostility. President Francois Mitterand of France has said the problem in El Salvador is popular rejection of "poverty and abasement," not communist subversion.

Crew flies back to Singapore

HOUSTON (AP) — Eighteen "dissatisfied and homesick" crewmen who held the captain of a Singapore-registered ship at knifepoint until they got a one-way plane ticket home will fly back to the Orient today, a spokesman for the ship's agent says.

"As far as the company is concerned, they were just dissatisfied and homesick and wanted to go home," said the spokesman, who did not want to be identified. "They will be flying out of Intercontinental Airport for Singapore early Thursday."

The crew, which went aboard the bulk carrier "Mercury" a month ago in South Carolina, apparently had been drinking, said Ed Horn, a spokesman for the Port of Houston Authority.

The captain was freed and unharmed, authorities said.

Saudi Arabia to pay for Iraq's reactor

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Iraqi nuclear reactor destroyed in an Israeli air attack last month will be rebuilt by the Saudi government at the order of King Khaled, the Saudi information minister said.

Crown Prince Fahd received the orders directly from the king, Mohammed Abdu Yamani said Wednesday.

He said the decision to rebuild he reactor stemmed from Khaled's policy of standing by other Arab nations for "better or for worse."

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in a speech in Baghdad, called on all peace-loving nations to help Iraq develop its own nuclear technology.

"Prince Fahd said his majesty King Khaled had discussed this question with French President Francois Mitterrand," Yamani said, and the king "told the French president during their recent meeting in Paris that the kingdom will bear the costs of rebuilding the reactor."

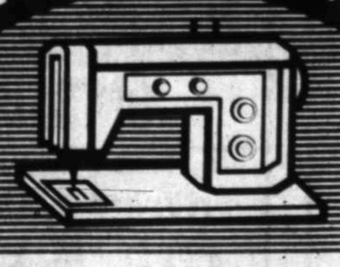

Israel justified its June 7 atack on the research reactor on grounds of self-defense, saying Iraq intended to use it to make nuclear weapons. Iraq denied any such intent and the International Atomic Energy Agency has said it was not being used for that purpose.

Reports at the time of the Israeli attack, indicated Saudi Arabia was not unhappy about the destruction of the Iraqi reactor, because the Saudi regime was nervous about how the socialist Iraqi government might use it.

DA opposes O'Connor appointment

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Sandra Day O'Connor's place is in the home rather than on the U.S. Supreme Court because "a woman in a position of authority is not compatible with the scriptures in the Bible," says a Brazos County official.

District Attorney Travis Bryan III says he's "certainly not prejudiced" but believes women should stay at home and raise children.

They should not be judges, law enforcement or military officers or even district attorneys, the 34-year-old fundamentalist Baptist said Tuesday. "The world is a better place because of women. But there are too many women competing with men for jobs," he said.

But Bryan's conservative views raised the ire of some local citizens.

Elizabeth Cowan, assistant to the president at Texas A&M University, called Bryan's remarks "very sad," but said they didn't merit an argument.

Irene Hoadley, director for Texas A&M Libary Services, said she was shocked.

"Basically, I think he's living in the past century," she said.

O'Connor battle continues

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sandra D. O'Connor, leaving at least two anti-abortion senators undecided about supporting her for the Supreme Court, now faces the most powerful potential obstacle to her confirmation: Sen. Jesse Helms.

Mrs. O'Connor, who sidestepped specific questions about abortion Wednesday but was quoted as saying legal precedent should be followed, was to meet the North Carolina Republican this evening at the end of her third day of courting Congress.

Helms, an abortion foe and leader of the Senate's far conservative wing, has expressed the most outright skepticism about Mrs. O'Connor's nomination.

The 51-year-old Arizona appeals court judge came away from Wednesday's rounds with one staunchly anti-abortion senator supporting her and two others undecided.

She also received encouragement from President Reagan, who nominated her to succeed retired Justice Potter Stewart and confidently predicted that she would be approved by the Senate.

The two undecided senators were Republicans Roger Jepsen of Iowa and Charles E. Grassley of Iowa.

Utah Republican Orrin Hatch, who favors a constitutional amendment against abortions, said he would support Mrs. O'Connor's nomination but only after asking her "tough questions" during confirmation hearings likely to start in September.

Jepsen said he will not make up his mind about Mrs. O'Connor until talking to Reagan and observing the committee hearings.

Jepsen said he asked Mrs. O'Connor to comment on the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion during the first six months of pregnancy but "she said that she didn't feel that she could.... She doesn't want to go onto the bench and be disqualified for giving her opinions ahead of time."

Grassley, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee which will consider the nomination, said Mrs. O'Connor "stated again her position that...she was personally opposed to abortion and she considered it a legitimate area of legislative activity."

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., another Judiciary Committee member, said he learned during his 40-minute meeting with Mrs. O'Connor that she believes Supreme Court justices should follow the high court's own rulings — including those on abortion.

According to Mathias, Mrs. O'Connor said she believes it is the role of judges, including Supreme Court justices, to apply existing legal precedents. Asked specifically whether she applies that philosophy to abortion rulings, Mathias said their conversation convinced him that she does.

Titanic found?

BOSTON (AP) — Explorers searching for the sunken Titanic said Wednesday they hope that film of debris lying on the bottom of the ocean will prove the wreckage is part of the British luxury liner.

The film "could be from the hulk of a ship," said oilman Jack Grimm, who is leading the expedition. "But until we get the films we can't be sure what it is."

Navon 'flies' to Begin's rescue

JERUSALEM (AP) — There was a fly in the anointment when Israeli President Yitzhak Navon conferred on Prime Minister Menachem Begin the task of forming Israel's next government.

As Begin was making an acceptance speech on Wednesday in the cavernous reception hall of the presidential mansion, an intrepid fly settled somewhere between his shoulder and his ear.

Navon, standing next to him, watched the fly nervously, then reached to flick it away.

"This doesn't come under my presidential authority," deadpanned Navon as TV cameras recorded the event, "but I was afraid the fly was bothering you."

Begin graciously thanked the president. The 67-year-old Begin said he had learned during his army days that while standing at attention you could not flick a fly away "even if it landed on your nose."

He then completed his acceptance speech with the unflappable fly perched on his lapel.

Lerner

But a new book claims that the columnist and the actress had a two-year love affair 20 years ago, while both were married.

According to "Elizabeth Taylor: The Last Star," by Kitty Kelley, the affair was serious. But Lerner purportedly called it off because he felt that "she would use me the way a beautiful woman uses an older man — as a front while she goes to bed with everything in sight."

Taylor

Excerpts of the book, to be published this fall by Simon & Schuster, appear in the August issue of Ladies' Home Journal.

Lerner told The Associated Press in an interview Wednesday that Ms. Kelley "ran away with the facts." More he would not say, explaining that he plans to write about the dispute himself.

B.J. Wilkins, a spokesman for Miss Taylor, who is now married to U.S. Sen. John Warner of Virginia, said the actress would not respond to the book's claims.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Eighteen-year-old Steven Nicklaus is free on bond, charged with driving while intoxicated along the Jack Nicklaus Freeway, named for his golfing father.

The Ohio Highway Patrol arrested the younger Nicklaus Wednesday after he overturned a station wagon. A patrol spokesman said Nicklaus was southbound on the outer belt of Columbus at about 2:30 a.m. when his vehicle veered off the road, hit a culvert and went through a chain-link fence.

Nicklaus was not injured, but police said the 1981 station wagon leased to the Muirfield Village Golf Course was demolished.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting next week, 38-year-old John Lehman will put in two weeks of Naval reserve duty.

Which is only fitting — Lehman is, after all, the secretary of the Navy..

He's also a lieutenant commander in the naval reserve and went on "non-pay" reserve status when he became the Navy's top civilian earlier this year.

According to a Navy announcement on Wednesday, he will serve his stint at the Naval Air Station at Oceania, Va., near Norfolk.

Pope's failure to appear darkens religious meeting

PARIS (AP) — Pope John Paul II's absence from today's opening of the 42nd Eucharistic congress has taken some of the enthusiasm out of the eight-day religious meeting and dampened the spirits of some businessmen.

The pope had been scheduled to attend the closing sessions of the Roman Catholic congress at the Lourdes pilgramage site in the French Pyrenees. The pontiff's visit was cancelled after an assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square May 13 in which the pope was wounded.

Some Lourdes hotel keepers and restaurant owners are grumbling because plans for 70,000 visitors have been reduced to 30,000 and produced massive cancellations of bookings in the middle of the summer tourist season.

French church officials, however, said the absence of the pontiff "will neither cloud the significance of the gathering nor reduce its spiritual impact."

Cardinal Bernardin Gantin, 59, will represent the pope at the congress. He is a Vatican-based prelate born in what is now the West African country of Benin. Gantin is the chairman of the Pontifical Commission for Justice and Peace.

The French Episcopal Conference planned the conference as a huge "demonstration of joy and faith," but some of the zeal has been removed by the absence of the pope, who is suffering from a persistent virus that is hampering his recovery from gunshot wounds.

Eucharistic congresses, which are held on an irregular basis — usually two-to-five years apart — consist of liturgies and other solemn religious exercises, exhibits, speeches, processions and seminars.

They are designed to honor and increase devotion to the Eucharist, or the presence of Christ in bread and wine. In the Roman Catholic sacrament of the Eucharist, or Holy Communion, consecrated bread and wine are received as Christ's body and blood.

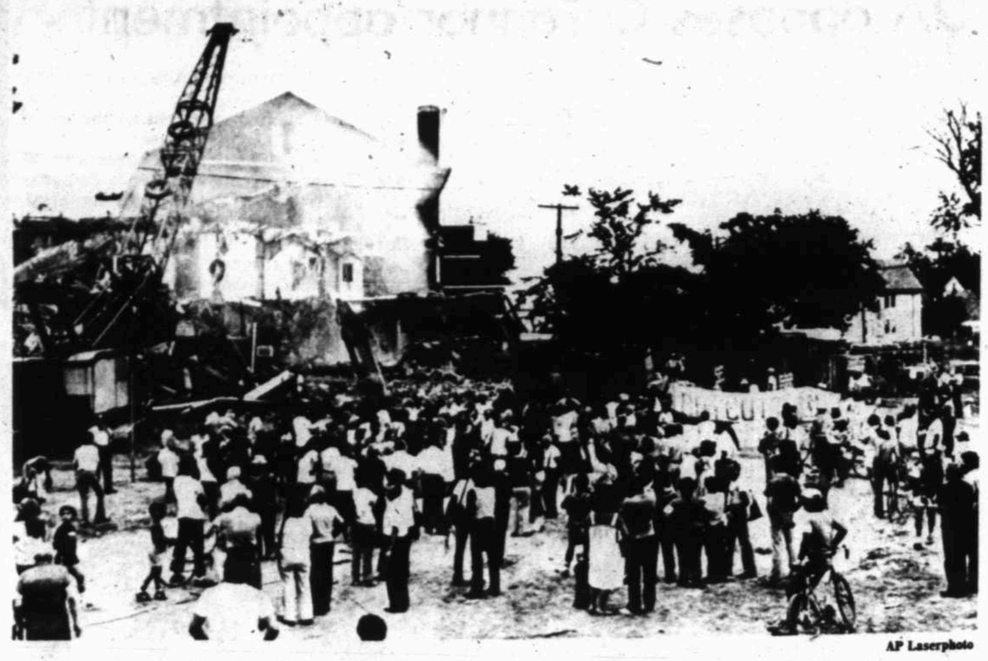

The last Eucharistic Congress was held in 1976 in Philadelphia. The first such meeting was held a century ago in Lille, France.

"It is above all a spiritual event," said Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, archbishop of Marseille and president of the French Episcopal Conference. "It will be an evaluation of the practice of the Eurcharist in the life of Christians."

The accent of the congress will be on sharing, church officials said. The French bishops will be talking about "bread wasted by consumer societies, bread that is not available to those who are dying of hunger, bread whose manufacture to feed all men is being sacrificed for arms, war and death."

Lourdes, which hosted congresses in 1899 and 1914, is the site where Catholic tradition says the Virgin Mary appeared 18 times before a poor, 14-year-old girl named Bernadette Soubirous over a five-month period in 1858. A spring appeared at the site and people who later prayed and bathed in its waters reported it had healing effects.

Since that time, it has become one of the most famous pilgrimage sites in the world and more than 4 million people visit it each year.

Bystanders watch Wednesday evening as a cloud of dust rises and the rectory of Immaculate Conception Church falls. Despite continued protests from area residents, the 63-year-old building in the Poletown area of Detroit was demolished.

Poletown church finally falls

DETROIT (AP) — When the walls of Immaculate Conception Church came tumbling down from a wrecking ball, it marked the end of a symbol of resistance by the residents of a vanishing ethnic neighborhood.

Hundreds of people, some kneeling in the dirt praying and crying as dusk approached Wednesday, watched as the baptismal place of their babies and requiem site for their dead was razed to make room for an automobile factory.

"It's like watching someone die and their body being ripped apart," said Walter Jakubowski, 74, a resident of Detroit's Poletown neighborhood, which has lost a six-month fight for survival against General Motors Corp.. Mayor Coleman Young and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese.

It was "like watching a part of your body being torn off," he said.

The $500 million factory will replace another plant in town where Cadillac cars are assembled. GM said 3,000 to 4,000 people will work there. Parishioners have said the church and plant could coexist, but the city and the giant automaker have said that was impossible.

The project also involved demolition of a hospital, two schools, 114 small businesses and 1,300 homes.

One month ago, when the church in the predominantly Polish area was closed by the diocese, a group of people moved into the darkened basement and refused to move.

Kidnap victims now more interested in growing up

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — A plaque attached to a granite block outside city hall is the only outward sign that one of the strangest kidnappings in recent history took place near here five years ago today.

Above a list of 27 names, the plaque says, "With heartfelt thanks, the people of Chowchilla commemorate the safe return of 26 school children who were abducted July 15, 1976, and who escaped unharmed 30 hours later." The bus driver also escaped.

Most of the children weren't yet in their teens when their school bus was hijacked and they were locked in a sweltering moving van buried at a rock quarry.

Now, many are in high school, more interested in looking forward to growing up than looking back to the hours they spent as kidnap victims before digging their way to freedom.

The kidnappers are in prison. The driver, Ed Ray, still drives a Dairyland bus and grows cotton.

Thirteen of the children still live in this central California farming community of 5,000 residents. Eleven have moved, one is in college, and one was killed in an accident a month ago.

Those still here say they're treated no differently at home, in school or by the community because of the kidnapping. They say they're too busy with normal teen-age activities, such as sports, to think about the kidnapping very often.

"It doesn't bother me now," said Shelley Robison, 16, a high school junior active in volleyball. "I'm just one of the kids."

Darla Daniels, 15, was reminded that she told reporters after her safe return that she wanted to grow up to be a movie star.

"I did?" she asked. "I want to be a secretary now."

Laura Yazzi, 10, keeps busy with baseball and swimming. Sixth-grader Andy Gonzales is the only youngster among the 26 who still attends rural Dairyland School, where the group had been in a summer session before their abduction.

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates, who led much of the investigation, has retired but is talking of running for the Legislature.

Several children expressed reluctance to have the kidnappers, three young men from prominent San Francisco Bay area families, released anytime soon from prison. As a precaution, the grandmother of one girl who has moved won't reveal where she now lives.

The kidnappers have said they didn't intend to harm the youngsters.

Judge changes benches

MIAMI (AP) — A circuit judge nicknamed "Let-'Em-Go-Joe" whose soft sentences and belief in the basic goodness of people drew outrage and a lawsuit from a crime-weary community, is moving to a court where almost everyone gets a second chance.

After nearly seven controversial years on the adult criminal bench, Dade County Circuit Judge Napoleon Joseph Durant Jr., 52, will become a juvenile court judge on July 27.

"I'm looking forward to juvenile court," he said after the move was announced this week. "I think I can really do some good there."

"All kids make mistakes," he said in an interview before his decision to transfer. "People scream at some of my sentences. But if one of their kids gets into trouble, they pray his case falls into my division because they know he'll get a fair trial and have a chance of getting probation."

Chief Administrative Judge Gerald Wetherington said the transfer wasn't the result of pressure or criticism from anyone.

"The criminal division is a really stressful division of the court, and sometimes we like to rotate that assignment around," he said.

Durant, who described himself as "compassionate — perhaps to a fault," has certainly felt stress, pressure and criticism as a criminal judge.

Miamians were angered in 1977 when he sentenced two Miami Dolphins football players, Don Reese and Randy Crowder, to probation and one year in the Dade County jail for a cocaine-selling conviction. He also withheld adjudication of guilt, so their records stayed clean.

Both men are now playing with other National Football League teams. Neither has been in trouble since his release. Durant said he feels vindicated in that case.

"I knew I was right — it wasn't even a guess," he said triumphantly. "If a year in jail doesn't teach someone a lesson, they'll never learn."

Last fall, he unleashed more fury when he sentenced a young man who admitted two killings to serve three years in a youthful offender program.

Court rules in favor of new trial

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday let stand a decision by the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals ordering a new trial in a worker's compensation case from Ector County.

Dever Lee Applewhite had appealed the ruling of the appeals court ordering a new trial after it concluded there was no evidence to support the ruling by the 244th District Court that Applewhite had suffered total and permanent disability as the result of a fall on Sept. 29, 1978, at the Meither Machine Works in Odessa.

The suit was brought against Liberty Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Applewhite had been awarded $5,676 plus $105 per week for 348 weeks.

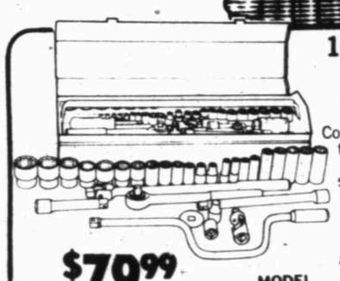

The appeals court said there was evidence to show some disability but not permanent and total disability.

Iranian funds remain frozen

By SCOTT F. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld millionaire H. Ross Perot's attempt to block a bank from transferring $20 million to Iran, but says he can get the money himself only if an international tribunal agrees.

Perot, who claims Iran owes his Electronic Data Systems Corp. $19 million, has been attempting to collect from $20 million in Iranian assets on deposit in a U.S. bank.

In its ruling Wednesday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals suspended Perot's $19 million judgment for the Iranian government's breach of contract and told him that he must take his case to the international tribunal set up after the 52 U.S. hostages were released.

Pending a decision by the tribunal, the 5th Circuit upheld an injunction that bars Marine Midland Bank of New York City from transferring $20 million in Iranian funds to the Federal Reserve Bank for return to Iran.

Iran's social security system contracted with Electronic Data for a data processing system. But after 18 months, Iran stopped payments in June 1978. EDS broke off the contract in January 1979 and filed suit for $19 million.

On June 11, 1979, a federal judge in Dallas granted EDS the preliminary injunction that tied up a $20 million certificate of deposit at Marine Midland pending settlement of the suit, which ended May 9, 1980, in victory for EDS.

Before Iran's appeal could be heard, the United States and Iran agreed on terms for the release of the hostages with a series of accords signed in Algeria on Jan. 19, 1981.

As part of the deal, then-President Carter ordered Iranian assets restored to Iran and swept aside court orders and lawsuits involving those assets. That action was recently upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

One of the accords signed in Algeria, the "Claims Declaration," provided for creation of the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal to settle contract claims between U.S. companies and Iran.

EDS argued that it won its judgment before the agreement that free the hostages, and that its injunction freezing the $20 million account predated Carter's freezing of all Iranian assets on Nov. 14, 1979.

But the 5th Circuit cited the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling upholding "the President's power to suspend claims ... because the President's suspension of claims, tacitly approved by Congress, was essential to the resolution of a major international crisis."

"Because the United States does not seek nullification of attachments accomplished prior to the freeze, we preserve the status quo by permitting EDS' attachment of Iran funds ... pending litigation before the Claims Tribunal," the 5th Circuit said.

In February 1979, Perot bankrolled a commando-style prison break in Tehran to free two EDS employees imprisoned for three months on charges of official misconduct in connection with the computer contract.

Three dead in theater bomb blast

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — A movie theater explosion that killed three people and injured 18 is seen as the latest in a series of violent incidents directed at French residents here.

By today, no group had claimed responsibility for the bombing Tuesday night at the Cinema Le Club, frequented mostly by Europeans. But anti-French feeling has been building since the election of David Dacko as president in March.

DEAR ABBY

Another can cap quarrel over teeth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are having a big fight with her dentist. My wife is getting a full set of dentures. All her life she was ashamed of her teeth because they were yellowish, and now she wants snow-white teeth, but her dentist won't give them to her. He says snow-white teeth look unnatural. Abby, she doesn't care; she says movie stars have snow-white teeth and they look beautiful, and she wants beautiful white teeth too.

Meanwhile her dentist keeps telling her that his job is to give her teeth that will look natural, and if she suddenly comes out with snow-white teeth, people will know the teeth are dentures and they'll think her dentist did a poor job. We are deadlocked. Should a dentist give a patient what she wants or what he thinks she ought to have?

We live in Maine, but if we have to go to California to get what we want, we will go there. And I wouldn't begrudge the cost, either. Help us. — UNHAPPY SENIOR CITIZENS

DEAR UNHAPPY: The dentist discharged his professional obligation when he told your wife that the kind of teeth she wants will look unnatural. Having said this, and being overruled, he should give her what she wants. If he refuses, there are plenty of other dentists in Maine.

DEAR ABBY: A young woman who attends our church brings a large bag containing some kind of needlework, and all during the church service she either knits, crochets or does needlepoint.

I find this very distracting, and from the looks cast her way from others sitting near her, they too are annoyed.

I don't have the nerve to say something to her, and apparently neither has anyone else. She sits toward the back, so the minister can't see what she's doing. It's irritating to see her knitting away during the sermon. Maybe if you mention it in your column, she'll stop. — DISGUSTED IN YAKIMA, WASH.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Here's the needle. I hope she gets the point.

Midlander ends beauty reign

Teresa Anderson

Teresa Anderson, now a resident of Midland, ended her reign as Miss New Mexico when she crowned her successor recently at the New Mexico pageant.

Teresa won the state title last summer and has spent the past year traveling and entertaining as Miss New Mexico.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Anderson of Hobbs, N.M., formerly of Midland. Anderson is area production manager for Gulf Exploration and Production Co.

Not surprisingly, the most memorable event of her year was the Miss America Pageant held in Atlantic City last September. She says that she was impressed with Oklahoma's Susan Powell who was crowned Miss America.

Another year's highlight was the invitation with only seven other contestants to entertain at Miss America's Homecoming and Talent Review in Tulsa.

Other appearances she has enjoyed include appearing at the New Mexico State Fair and Rodeo with Loretta Lynn and the Oak Ridge Boys, taking her first balloon flight at the Albuquerque Balloon festival, having a horse race named for her at Ruidoso Downs, and entertaining vets in conjunction with the USO.

Her most exciting trip was to President Reagan's Inauguration. Besides being honored at receptions given by U.S. Seantors Schmidt and Domenici, she attended the Inaugural Gala and Inaugural Ball. She also spent her week in Washington rubbing shoulders and attending parties with Charlton Heston, Ethel Merman, Robert Stack, Brooke Shields and Erma Bombeck.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Oops! Film on glasses

DEAR HELOISE
What can be done about glasses that become cloudy or milky? Only one or two of mine got this way, although all of them, at one time or another, have been through the dishwasher several times.

We have tried everything, including the cleanser used in dishwashers to avoid spots on glassware but we haven't tried Heloise, so here goes! — Robert Develle

+ + +

Oh dear! I'm afraid I'm not going to be able to solve your problem this time. You see, when a film forms on glassware that you can't remove, it almost always means the glassware is etched. And once it has been etched, I know of nothing which will remove it.

Why etching appears at random on some glasses and not on others (as happened in your case) is rather complex, the main culprit being improper loading or overloading of the dishwasher.

Sometimes we place items in the dishwashwer in a way that blocks the proper action of the water, thus allowing the detergent to remain on the glassware too long without being rinsed off completely.

The best advice I can give you (after the fact, I know) is to make sure the dishes are loaded correctly in the dishwasher and to follow, as closely as possible, other usage guidelines given by the maker of your particular dishwasher.

This usually involves having the correct water temperature, the right amount of detergent relative to the softness or hardness of the water in your area, and a dishwashing detergent compound which is not so old it has lost its punch.

Don't buy a box of compound that sounds "lumpy" when you shake it, and do not store the detergent in a warm, moist place. It wil deteriorate much too fast, thus losing its effectiveness.

Another important thing to remember is the filter in the bottom of your dishwasher. Be sure it is clean and properly in place.

Sometime something can become lodged under the filter, which in turn prevents the spray arm from turning properly, which in turn prevents the dishes from being washed and rinsed properly thus possibly causing etching.

I know I can't help you remove the film which is already there, but I sincerely hope these few tips will help prevent a reoccurence of the problem in the future.

Vegetable maturation information

By TOM STEVENSON
The Washington Post

Q: How long does it take for tomatoes to ripen after they form on the plant? Is there a guide for them and other vegetables?

A: Tomatoes mature in 30 to 45 days, depending on variety and time of planting; snap beans usually in seven to 10 days after flowering; cucumbers in four or five days; summer squash five to six days; winter squash such as Hubbarb in 11 to 12 weeks; sweet corn 18 to 24 days after silk appears; and, sweet peppers 40 to 50 days.

Q: The brick pavement of our patio is covered with moss. How can we get rid of it?

A: Burn it off with ammonium sulfate, a high-nitorgen fertilizer. Wet the moss and spread the fertilizer over it. Later on use a wire brush to remove the dead roots.

Q: Out tomatoes and beans are getting ripe and we are going away for two weeks on vacation. Any suggestions.

A: You can make a big hit with friends or neighbors by inviting them to help themselves. Before leaving be sure to pull all the weeds in sight.

Q: My hydranges are getting too tall. When is the best time to prune them?

A: The time to prune is immediately after the plant finishes blooming. Stems can be cut back to the second or third set of leaves, or nodes. Be careful not to injure the buds in the axils of the leaves where the cut is made. These will start into growth that will produce next years flowers.

Q: I planted radishes this spring and all I got was leaves. Why?

A: Sowing the seed too thick and not thinning when they come up is the usual cause. The plants need to be spaced at least an inch apart after they come up.

Large families are encouraged in Soviet Union

By JEAN-PIERRE DEPLANQUES
Agence France-Presse

MOSCOW — Big families are paying concerns in the Soviet Union.

Take the case of Vladimir and Valentina Sviranenko, who live in the Ukranian town of Kramatorsk (population 200,000). Proud local officials have just presented them with a mini-bus to celebrate the birth of their 15th child. The event was given national coverage by the Soviet News Agency, Tass.

Vladimir, who has worked for a mechanical engineering firm for 20 years, has also been given a large new apartment for which he will pay only half the going rental rate.

Large families are granted certain special favors in the Soviet Union, according to press reports here, but not all of them on the same scale as the Sviranenkos.

The daily Komsololskaya Pravda, a publication of the Young Communists, recently told the story of a mother with a large family whose apartment was much too small for comfortable living conditions. She also complained that the authorities did not see to it that big families are given priority for telephones.

She told the newspaper: "Being the mother of many children gives me status only on paper — but the truth is that nobody is really interested."

It also seems to be true that not many Soviets want a large family. About 30 percent of married couples in the Soviet Union are childless, according to the Novosti feature agency.

Reasons generally given to explain this include housing problems and an extremely high divorce rate. One in three marriages here are failures.

Many Soviet citizens — 20 percent of all couples according to official figures — are still living in communal apartments in the heart of heavily built-up areas.

Meanwhile, more and more couples are divorcing, aided by greatly relaxed administrative procedures. This is a big worry for Soviet officials who are continually proclaiming that the family unit is the kingpin of society.

Ironically, the largest families in the Soviet Union are reported among religious communities, which are considered almost as moral outcasts of this socialist society. Members of certain protestant sects often report having families of more than 10 children. But because the Sviranenko family is not a member of one of these sects, their 15 children shine as an outstanding Soviet example.

These days "mother heros of the nation" — an honorary title for having 10 children or more — can only be found in central Asia. estern experts believe the Kremlin is not all that happy at this state of affairs, for the central Asians are mainly Moslems, and their rising numbers are of great concern. The birthrate in European Soviet Union — Ukraine, Byelorussia and the three Baltic republics — is much lower.

Last March the government decided on certain steps to help big families.

The measures involve building more kindergartens and nursery schools, and childrens' holiday camps, with the state paying most of the costs. Families with more than four children have the right to go to special counters in state shops that will provide them with food unobtainable elsewhere in the Soviet Union.

But young couples do not seem to be tempted by these enticements. The abortion rate is as high as evr in the Soviet Union. It is not unusual here for one woman to have five or six abortions between the ages of 18-30.

Tower party

CINCINNATI (AP) — For the months of October through December, this city will house some of the treasures of the Tower of London. The Cincinnati Art Museum will be the scene of an exhibition of treasures of arms and armor from the Tower of London.

This is the first time in over 900 years that the artifacts have been allowed out of England, according to museum director Millard F. Rogers Jr.

The Ritz is made with heavy-duty, all-metal parts. (The motor is cast iron.) It runs quietly, never needs oiling, comes with a variable speed control, and has a 5-year factory warranty.

Study says episiotomies needless

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is little evidence to support the widespread practice of surgically enlarging a woman's vagina during birth, but the practice has become routine in many delivery rooms, a new study says.

Drs. Stephen B. Thacker and H. David Banta said Tuesday that the procedure, called episiotomy, is useful in difficult deliveries but has become a routine and unnecessary practice in many cases.

The use of an episiotomy to provide a bigger opening for the emerging baby increases the risks of infection and protracted pain after delivery and should be used sparingly, they said. The surgical cut can measure up to three inches.

National health statistics show that episiotomies are done in about 70 percent of all non-Caesarean section births, the researchers said.

And their study of medical literature indicates that up to 90 percent of all American women giving birth for the first time have episiotomies if they don't have Caesareans, they said.

"Arguments for the widespread use of episiotomy do not withstand scientific scrutiny," the researchers say.

Thacker is chief of surveillance at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, and Banta is health programs manager for the Office of Technology Assessment in Washington. Their report will soon be published through the medical journal, Women and Health.

In an account of the study published by the International Medical Tribune Syndicate, an official of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists disagreed with the new report.

Dr. Ervin Nichols, director of practice activities for organization, said the report is "anecdotal" and "inconsistent," and that the routine use of episiotomy has never been recommended.

The operation, he said, is valuable in specific circumstances, such as when the tissue surrounding the vagina and rectum is unusually firm and in danger of tearing during labor. This is more often the case in first births, with very large fetuses or when fetuses are in unusual birth positions.

Banta said in an interview that episiotomies were valuable in such cases.

But he said many doctors routinely are using the procedure, which requires up to six stitches to close, in less complicated cases, and that it has become standard practice even though its value has not been proven in scientific studies.

"This is an example of a valuable procedure getting more and more popular over time and being used because it's easy to do so," Banta said.

"We tried to fairly summarize the existing literature on the subject," he continued. "If what we have is anecdotal and inconsistant, it's because evidence for the proeedure is that way. We found no good literature on the benefits or direct risks to mothers and there should be."

Banta said the risks to mothers include infection, increased blood loss and protracted pain, but that they generally are not great. However, these infections have been linked to a few deaths, he added.

Studies indicate the operation can cut delivery time by up to 15 minutes and decrease the immediate pain of delivery, he said, but the cut would increase long-term pain during healing.

The latest study is the second in three years to put Thacker and Banta at odds with the obstetrician community. Their earlier study on electronic fetal monitoring spurred congressional hearings and a number of studies on the value of this practice.

The researchers charged that monitoring the fetus during labor contributed to the increasing numbers of Caesarian sections in this country. Many obstetricians denied the allegation.

Canning vegetables

By TOM STEVENSON
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Vegetable gardeners often have more beans, tomatoes, beets, broccoli and leafy greens than they can use. Canning them can provide safe, inexpensive, quality foods if tested, approved methods are used.

Properly canned and stored foods should be safe to eat for more than two years. However, for top quality it is best to can only enough for use in one year.

Freezing garden vegetables also can be done. If you have doubt about how well something will freeze, test it before freezing large quantities. To test, freeze two or three packages and sample the food a couple of weeks later.

Home canners should not take shortcuts, according to specialists. Organisms that cause food spoilage — molds, yeast, and bacteria — are always present in the air, water and soil.

A possible answer to lemons

By ERMA BOMBECK

In Sacramento, Calif., history is in the making.

The state assembly has just sent to the Senate a "lemon" car bill that would give dissatisfied automobile buyers a new car or their money back.

Good grief, people! If this bill were passed, it could significantly lower the GNBP (Gross National Blood Pressure) and elect a car salesman king of the White House by 1984.

Everyone in the world has, at one time or another, bought a lemon. We had a car once that made you pucker when you kicked the tires. Engineering-wise, it was a monument to the committee who constructed a camel and thought they had solved the problem of tall men who needed more leg room.

The sun visor blocked the rear-view mirror.

The carpet under the accelerator had no resistance to the touch.

The radio was wired for static.

The steering mechanism quivered at anything over 35 mph.

And you couldn't get to the back seat from the driver's side of the car.

I don't understand it. This country is the only one in the world where men tolerate a lemon of a car longer than they will endure a wife who has run out of gas.

Think about it. Would your husband pay $50 to have you towed anywhere?

If he couldn't keep you running without stalling at every traffic light, would he talk nice to you and let you idle?

If your warranty ran out would he stand you to a tune-up out of his own pocket?

When your mileage started to deteriorate, would he still stop at every station and fill you up?

If you heated up coming back from the ballpark, would he pull off the road and let you cool off?

Would he still take you out to dinner if you had a crack in your windshield?

The Taipei collection.
New twist on an old Oriental idea.

The willow and the oak.

It is a classical saying in the East that the willow is wiser than the oak. For the willow knows how to bend with the wind. But the oak fights against every storm, and one day will be broken.

This wisdom of the willow is the reason for the remarkable durability and comfort of our exclusive new line of Taipei cane furniture.

Dress-up rattan.

Because supple rattan survives monsoon winds, jungle rot and clawing tigers, there was once a tendency to relegate rattan furniture to the porch or backyard.

Now, however, rattan has come indoors. Today's high style rattan belongs in elegant rooms amidst crystal stemware, art nouveau incidentals and Persian carpets.

Such is the case with our new Taipei cane collection.

The main members of each piece are finished in a honey brown and bound with blond peel rattan. Cane seats and backs are almost wheaty in color. There is a special quality to all these pieces that makes them at once remarkable in themselves and friendly within room arrangements.

Treasures from an unlikely place.

Taipei, interestingly enough, has never been known for rattan. We failed to call on the maker of this furniture for two years, because we didn't believe the rumors of fantastic quality and beautiful design. Fortunately, he finally cornered us in Kaohsiung at the other end of the island of Taiwan. Instantly, we fell in love with his beautifully crafted work, and had to admit that treasure is where you find it.

As far as we know, we are the only importers to bring Taipei cane home to America. We invite you to stop by and share our delight in this new rattan that you won't want to leave out on the porch.

Weinberger considering claims of MX opponents

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON---Major contractors involved in the planned, multi-billion-dollar MX missile project are rejecting arguments that the project will harm the environment, be too expensive or that it will fail to counter growing Soviet strategic power.

These and other claims by opponents of the project are under consideration by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as he waits for a report by a panel of experts on where to base the MX system, designed to minimize U.S. vulnerability to a Soviet "first strike."

The planned MX system, as devised during the Carter Administration, consists of 200 nuclear-tipped intercontinental ballistic missiles dispersed in mobile fashion among 4,600 hardened shelters in Utah and Nevada. The system is designed to replace present static Minuteman and Titan missiles.

The contractors are advancing their views through the "MX Education Bureau," located in Rosslyn, Va., which is near Washington D.C., and in Las Vegas, Nev. According to a spokesman, John Walker, the MX Bureau is supported by the Martin-Marietta, Boeing Aerospace and GTE Sylvania companies..

One publication issued by the bureau, called "The MX: Some Questions and Answers," also lists a number of other firms as "major contractors involved in the MX program." These include Rockwell International, TRW, Northrup, AVCO and General Electric.

The publication poses a question on "what criteria were used to select Nevada and Utah"---where widespread environmental opposition to the MX exists---as a deployment site for the MX system?

The publication's answer states that the "main objectives" of the criteria were to find areas in which..."environmental impact and cost could be minimized." It adds:

"Federal and state forests, parks, monuments and recreational areas were rejected. Federal and state wildlife refuges, grasslands, ranges and preserves were rejected.

"Indian reservations and areas of high potential economic resources, including oil and gas, strippable coal, shale, uranium deposits and hydrothermal resource areas were rejected.

"Any area 20 miles around cities with populations of 25,000 and more was rejected."

The publication also said that a "key misconception" about the MX was that it will remove vast amounts of land from public use. It said that "while the proposed deployment area is 8,500 square miles, only a small fraction of that land will be actually closed off to the public permanently."

The publication added that about 35 million acres of public land were available for grazing in the MX area and that of this "about one-half of one percent might be disturbed during peak MX activity." When construction of the system is completed, it added, about half of this will be returned to public use.

"Since the last land-based defense system was deployed in the late 1960s a great many new laws which provide stringent safeguards of the environment have been enacted," the publication states. "As a federal project on federal lands MX must comply with all of these laws."

In reaction to suggestions that Utah and Nevada lack the water resources required to support a project of MX dimensions, the publication asserted that "tests done to date indicate that there is sufficient water to support MX as well as other anticipated growth" in the region.

The publication added that an official Utah report entitled "State of Utah Water-1980" said "the problem was not the availability of water, but the ability to trap and utilize water where it is needed." It added that there is "sufficient water in the state available for MX."

A Utah state spokesman confirmed the existence of the report but said "the water is underground and somebody has to go get it." The spokesman added: "It's not certain, too, that Utah wants to allocate that water for the MX."

Regarding estimated costs of the MX system---these have been placed at up to $100 million---the MX Education Bureau posed the question: "Is MX the most expensive weapons system ever built?"

Answer: "No, when computing the costs of other weapons systems in today's dollars. For instance, in fiscal year 1980 dollars the cost of the Minuteman system was $40 billion; the Trident (submarine) program cost $39 billion; the B-52 force...$54 billion.

"The projected cost of MX, also in fiscal year 1980 dollars, is about $34 billion," the bureau said.

The bureau acknowledged that the Congressional Budget Office had placed the cost at about $60 billion and the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, at $70 billion. But it added:

"If the GAO and the CBO used the same targeting and allocation figures as presently planned, and included only the acquisition costs (not adding operations costs), the results of all studies would come out to about $33.8 billion."

The bureau said that "some 30 alternative basing methods for a new missile system have been studied since the mid-1960s to arrive at the land-based, mobile MX system that best meets all of the criteria."

In fact, the "best" MX missile system remains a subject of debate, with arguments being advanced on the relative merits of basing the MX on land, sea, under the sea, in the air and in space.

Residents of Norway town live on knife edge

By EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

KIRKENES, Norway -- If World War III should come, it might very well start here on the Soviet border, not far from the icy Barents Sea.

That is what the folks of this small city of 4,000 on the Veranger Fjord and the battalion of 450 troops that guards this side of the Iron Curtain believe and live with.

They remember a terrible day 13 years ago when they feared the worst. So does Col. Tore Oppegaard, the Norwegian border commissioner, who recalled it during a briefing in his office in nearby Storskog.

"The Soviets moved an army division up to the border, with its tanks pointing their guns at Norwegian observation posts," he said. "They came out of the fog early in the morning and were suddenly at the border."

The Kremlin caper fortunately turned out to be scare tactics. According to Oppegaard, a tall, blond, slightly tubby man, the Soviets apparently wanted to demonstrate their opposition to any allied military exercises in northern Norway.

After three tense days, the division withdrew. The brief foray had been against Norwegian law, which prohibits such exercises in the north. Even equipment belonging to the U.S. Marines must be stored at Trondheim, 750 miles southwest of here.

"We never permit allied forces to come into the border area," Oppegaard said. "We have a common and closed border. We have decent and correct relations with the Soviets."

The 140-mile-long border is a northern extension of the Iron Curtain. There is double fence of barbed wire strung alongthe entire way -- mostly to keep Soviet citizens in their own country.

While no mines have been planted, there is a lane of sand on the Soviet side concealing a sensor system that sounds an alarm at the nearest border station when triggered. Soviet citizens are not allowed to approach within two miles of the border.

Oppegaard, whose Soviet opoposite number is a lieutenant colonel in the KGB, said "illegal agents" cross the border "both ways," but he declined to elaborate.

The modest tourist traffic is mostly one-way -- to the Soviet Union.

Book can help you put more time into life

By PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

Nod in agreement to any of the following questions and this author's got you:

-- Do you want to excel at work without being a workaholic?

-- Do you want to take care of your house without letting it be your prison?

-- Do you want to stop procrastinating, being late, feeling one step behind and snowed under?

Psychologist Dru Scott, who runs a San Francisco-based time management firm, says the working answer to these and other timely questions can only be realized with equal parts of "desperation and desire."

Everybody's a consumer of time, but those who work out a thoughtful time-use plan can feel more satisfied while enjoying life, the author indicates.

She has put her thoughts down on paper and offers the public her observations in "How to Put More Time in Your Life" (New American Library, $2.75).

"Following my advice won't magically put that 25th hour in your day," the author says, "but it will do something more realistic. It will help you experience more time in your life through a commitment to quality time."

The secret, she says, is to balance your life with "time in" and "time out."

Anyone who doesn't take time to recharge his or her batteries is asking for a breakdown, she says.

She insists that one way to organize your life most practically is by learning to use -- even to lean on -- a personal calendar: "A calender helps us not to say 'yes' when we need to say 'no.'

"Too, our minds are incredibly complex creations and if we don't jot down an upcoming event or appointment, we'll keep reminding ourselves of it again and again, cluttering our thoughts."

She offers this advice: "Decide what's important and get going. Waiting until ... 'is probably the biggest waste of time."

Scott offers a five-minute time management plan for beginners and takes the reader by the hand in helping to design a practical program. She emphasizes these five points:

-- Analyze how you use time.

-- Improve your lifestyle and set objectives so you can get organized.

-- Keep yourself going.

-- Create ways of coping with everyday time demands.

-- Put your time to work on and off the job.

"It all boils down to knowing what it is you want out of life," she said. "The problem with most people is that they aren't sure exactly what it is that they want -- other than to just be happy. But that's not enough. Being so vague will lead you nowhere."

She says that the time plan has brought her great peace of mind and much success: "It's not that I'm smarter than anybody else, it's just that I make more time to think about the things that really count.

"Too many people feel guilty about not accomplishing the trivial, like straightening the socks drawer or organizing last month's trip slides."

Scott didn't waste time getting right to the point in her book.

Houston council approves budget

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston City Council has adopted a 1981 city budget totaling $872.4 million.

City officials said te new speding measure, up 17 percent over last year, would not require an increase in property taxes and would fund the training of 560 new police officers.

The council has been deliberating on the budget since it was proposed by Mayor Jim McConn in March. The measure was approved Tuesday.

The new budget contains a three percent wage increase for eight-year veterans of the police and fire departments.

Raiders looting art from Mayan sites

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the most prized archeological sites of the Mayan Indians are being destroyed by looters motivated by the high prices paid for artifacts in the United States and other countries, experts said today.

The problem is particularly critical in Guatemala — the heart of what was once the great Mayan civilization — where the present pace of looting could destroy everything of archeological value in less than 20 years, they said.

"It's a race between scholarship and thievery," said George E. Stuart, an archeologist with the National Geographic Society, which sponsored today's briefing.

Stuart said the looters often are winning the race, destroying some sites before archeologists have a chance to study them or authorities know the sites have even been found.

Half the knowledge that could have been obtained about the mysterious civilization from Guatemalan artifacts, such as sculptures, pottery and wall carvings, may already have been lost forever, Stuart said.

"Guatemala has become the most seriously endangered archeological area in the Western Hemisphere," added Clemency Coggins, a Mayan scholar from Harvard University.

"The scale of depredation there is appalling," she said, even when compared with looting in countries like Peru, Mexico, Ecuador, Columbia and Belize.

The Mayan empire stretched through this area a thousand years ago, reaching its zenith between 250 and 900 A.D. The civilization, advanced in astronomy and mathematics, built huge cities and developed the most complex writing system in the New World before it mysteriously vanished.

The experts said the core of the looting problem is the high price fetched by artifacts in the inflated international art market.

The best items, such as vases and bowls painted more than 1,000 years ago, go to art dealers, private collectors and museums in the United States who pay as much as $50,000 each. Buyers often ask few questions about where the artifacts come from, they added.

There currently are no U.S. laws banning import of such artifacts. But the experts said the best hope of slowing the illicit art traffic is a bill pending in the Senate Finance Committee which is based on a United Nations' convention banning illegal commerce in cultural property.

The archeologists said only a few major art collecting countries have signed the convention and no hearings have yet been set on the U.S. bill.

The measure is opposed by the American Association of Dealers in Ancient, Oriental and Primitive Art, and others, who say each country should be responsible for protecting its own artworks.

But researchers disagree, saying many developing countries do not have the resources to protect their archeological sites adequately.

Dr. Francis Polo Sifontes, the Guatemalan official charged with protecting his country's sites, said in a statement that he has only 120 guards and inspectors to protect more than 1,000 registered sites.

"That is not enough," said Sifontes, general director of Guatemala's Institute of Anthropology and History. "To stop this unfortunate traffic, we would need the whole Guatemalan army."

28 accused in auto theft ring

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The FBI says 18 Mexican government officials are among 28 people charged in connection with a multimillion-dollar auto theft ring which extended from San Francisco to San Antonio, Texas.

Norman Zigrossi, special agent in charge, said Wednesday that as many as 4,000 high-priced cars worth between $30 million and $40 million were stolen since 1975 and taken to Mexico for low-cost sales to high government officials.

"The officials would come up into the San Diego area and their 'mules' or thieves went out and stole the vehicles," Zigrossi told a news conference. "Lately, a large number were going through Juarez because they were having difficulty getting through San Ysidro (border crossing)."

A MAJORITY OF THE CARS were taken to Mexico City and Guadalajara in the interior of Mexico, Zigrossi said. He said efforts will be made through the state department to pressure Mexican officials to prosecute those involved south of the border and to recover the stolen cars if possible.

Alejandro Rosas Romandia, state attorney general of Baja California, said, "Our intention is to help federal and American authorities in investigating this group of people that has been charged," adding that he is awaiting instructions from Mexican authorities.

Targets of the ring were mostly Mercedes-Benz, Maseratis, Ferraris and other expensive cars in San Diego and Los Angeles dealerships, Zigrossi said.

U.S. Magistrate Edward A. Infante unsealed complaints Wednesday filed May 15 against the 28. Ten of those charged were arraigned Wednesday in San Diego.

In Lukeville, Ariz., two more Mexican officials were arrested by agents from Phoenix and San Diego, according to John Hinchcliffe, special agent in charge.

THEY WERE IDENTIFIED as Francisco Arrendo, a customs inspector in Sonoita, Sonora, Mexico, who lives in Lukeville, and Raymundo Rangel, chief of federal registration of vehicles in Sonoita, where he lives, said FBI spokesman Ken Oliver.

FBI officials in Arizona also say they arrested Alejandro Cecena-Coronado and Alejandro Barrera Jr. in connection with the ring.

Some of those arrests in San Diego were made, and at least five automatic weapons seized, following a high-speed chase Tuesday night involving California Highway Patrol and San Diego police officers, Zigrossi said. Other arrests were made at hotels and in homes.

The FBI investigations began in early 1975 after two stolen vehicles were stopped near Del Mar, north of San Diego. As a result, Zigrossi said, "We developed information quite by accident that put us on to the ring."

At least five FBI agents infiltrated the ring, spending several thousand dollars to buy stolen cars "that were stolen on request," he said.

ZIGROSSI SAID the suspects were charged with conspiracy and interstate and foreign transportation of motor vehicles.

Francisco Torres-Cons was being held in San Diego County jail while Barvo Morales was being held in Los Angeles. Except for the four arrested in Arizona, others were in custody at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in San Diego.

Soviets give coverage to Polish Communist Party

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda gave extensive coverage today to remarks by a Polish Communist Party congress delegate who accused anti-socialist forces of trying to bring the party there "to its knees."

The newspaper ignored a speech criticizing Polish Communist Party conservatives for blocking reforms, and failed to mention the party's expulsion of former leader Edward Gierek.

Quoted at length by Pravda, the Soviet Union's most authoritative newspaper, was G. Bednarski, a leader of the Bydgoszcz chapter of the Polish Communist Party.

Pravda quoted him as saying: "In Poland, there are forces which ... strive to reduce the history of the party to an unending series of errors and distortions, dreaming of a party endlessly called to account for errors committed and non-committed, of a party brought to its knees."

He also was reported to have called for a "sharpened political struggle" to defend Poland's socialist system and to have accused the independent trade union Solidarity of being of an "opposition and anti-socialist character."

"The extremist point of view of the leaders of Solidarity oblige the party and its active members to wage a sharpened political struggle," Bednarski was quoted as saying.

Soviet government-controlled newspapers and state-run television and radio, meanwhile, made only oblique references to the decision that all delegates to the congress will elect a party leader in a secret vote.

A commentary by Alexander Kaverznev on Wednesday night's nationally televised evening news program "Vremya," said simply that the congress had considered "procedural questions."

Soviet media also ignored the speech Wednesday by Polish Vice Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who accused Polish Communist Party conservatives of blocking needed reforms.

A report from Warsaw by the official Soviet news agency Tass said delegates to the Polish congress are "examining ways of taking the country out of the crisis, discussing tasks pertaining to the strengthening of the Polish Communist Party, enhancing its authority with the masses and its leading role in the life of society."

The Tass account, which closely resembled the article in today's editions of Pravda, also said Polish workers realize it is impossible to resolve the nation's problems in "one stroke."

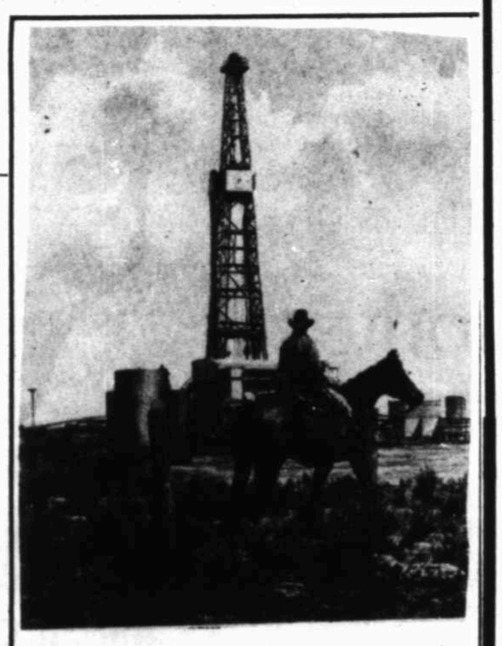

"However," it added, "they believe that the congress will elaborate on a program which will strengthen the party and guarantee its return to the solid Leninist norms of intra-party life."

An unidentified woman swings a bag of seed to the pigeons recently in Chicago's Grant Park. The birds seem to like it and the woman just seems to enjoy doing her own thing. As the saying goes, it is better to give than to receive — even if it is just to a feathered friend. The pigeons may even return the kindness with a bit of clucking and cooing.

Survey sees GOP as a winner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican candidates would receive a slight majority over Democratic nominees if congressional elections were held today, a GOP-commissioned survey concludes.

But pollster Robert M. Teeter said the findings, while boosting hopes for a GOP takeover of the Democratic-controlled House in 1982, also raises several warning flags for Republicans.

Teeter said the findings suggest that GOP candidates could lose votes if they identify too closely with emotional social issues or administration-backed Social Security cutbacks.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, which commissioned the survey, said the issue of whether to extend the Voting Rights Act may pose the biggest political minefield for candidates.

The Michigan Republican said the Reagan administration's failure to endorse a straightforward extension of the act, which expires next year, was a major factor in last week's GOP loss in a special congressional election in Mississippi.

"It enabled a successsful mobilization of the black vote" behind the Democratic candidate, Vander Jagt said.

The new survey, to be formally presented Wednesday at a workshop for would-be 1982 Republican candidates, showed that 27 percent now consider themselves Republicans, 34 percent Democrats and 39 percent independents.

It asked voters whom they would vote for if the 1982 congressional electorate were held now — the Democrat or the Republican.

Among committed voters, 51 percent said they would vote Republican while 49 percent said they would vote Democratic.

"This is the first time since we started polling that we have run ahead of the Democrats nationally," Vander Jagt said.

He and Teeter announced results of the survey at a Tuesday night briefing for reporters.

The survey also showed that, by margin of 35 percent to 19 percent, those interviewed believed their families would be in better economic shape under President Reagan's economic program.

Forty percent of those interviewed said they felt economy-inflation was the single most pressing problem in the United States today.

Trailing far behind in second place was national defense and foreign policy at 12 percent, followed by unemployment and lack of jobs, 7 percent; social isssues, 6 percent; and crime, 6 percent.

Other issues mentioned — including energy and the importance of cutting federal spending — all drew responses below 5 percent.

The survey reported that 67 percent of the respondants approved of Reagan's performance overall, while 22 percent said they disapproved of his handling of the presidency.

Economists say Reagan erred

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's latest prediction that inflation will slow to 6.2 percent next year appears overly optimistic, several private economists contend.

"That errs a bit on the side of optimism," said Thomas D. Thomson, senior vice president and chief economist of San Francisco's Crocker National Bank.

"Once we have had this disease as badly as we have for the past 15 years, it doesn't go away that quickly," he said. "It takes a long time to erode the inflationary expectations" of consumers, business executives and workers, he said.

Inflation, as measured by the consumer price index, was 12.6 percent last year, and the administration's forecast Wednesday placed this year's inflation at 8.6 percent, dipping to 6.2 percent in 1982.

Those figures were revised downward from earlier forecasts of 10.5 percent this year and 7.2 percent in 1982. The figures are a measure of the percentage change from the fourth quarter of one year to the fourth quarter of the next.

"That's very optimistic," economist Allen Sinai said of next year's forecast.

But Edward Yardeni, chief economist and vice president of the brokerage house of E.F. Hutton, said, "It's doable."

The lower figure can be achieved, he said, as long as the Federal Reserve continues its tight control over the growth of the money supply and no serious weather problems or other changes boost consumer prices.

The inflation forecast was contained in the mid-year budget review that also said lingering double-digit interest rates will force the government to spend $10 billion more next year than it had planned. That would bring the total budget to $704.8 billion in fiscal 1982, which starts Oct. 1. The deficit would be $42.5 billion.

Interest rates also are boosting spending for this year, raising the budget total $6 billion to $661.2 billion, the report said. The deficit was put at $55.6 billion.

When interest rates are high, the government has to pay more for interest on the public debt, guaranteed student loansand federl housing programs. It also has meant more government spending on loans to help bolster financially ailing savings and loan associations.

The budget report said short-term interest rates, based on three-month Treasury bills, will stay above 10 percent in the next two years — running 13.6 percent this year and 10.5 percent next year. That's up from the earlier administration forecast of 11.1 percent this year and 8.9 percent in 1982.

The administration did not back off on its forecast of a balanced budget in 1984, but economists outside of government were dubious that the goal could be met.

"It will require a lot of luck," said Sinai, vice president and senior economist of Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass. "It will require much bigger spending cuts than what they're talking about now."

"It hinges a great deal on whether they're right on inflation," said Sandra Shaber, senior economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "That's rather overly optimistic."

The economists also were skeptical about the administration's prediction that the economy, stimulated by Reagan's tax-cut package, will grow a robust 5.2 percent next year, after adjustments for inflation.

Donald Ratajczak, director of Georgia State University's economic forecasting project, said the economy would have to take off from virtually "dead center" at the end of this year and be "really running" to achieve that.

Democrats team up against automatic tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a rare alliance with Democrats, the Reagan administration is opposing a Republican plan in the Senate to automatically cut income taxes each year to offset inflation.

President Reagan favors such an "indexing" idea but doesn't want to add it to this year's tax-cut bill. Democrats and some Republicans fear such automatic tax cuts would deprive the government of money for social programs and make it difficult for Congress to react to the ups and downs of the economy.

The Republican-controlled Senate Finance Committee endorsed the concept and wanted the Senate to add the amendment today to Reagan's plan for cutting personal tax rates by 25 percent over 33 months, starting Oct. 1.

The indexing proposal, whose chief sponsor is Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., was the first issue raised as the Senate began debate on the tax bill Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee is trying to wrap up the first round of voting on its own two-year, 15 percent tax-cut plan. The panel agreed Wednesday to a reduction in estate taxes that was even more sweeping than the version in the Senate bill.

Under Armstrong's amendment, tax rates, the $1,000 personal exemption and the standard deduction would be adjusted each year, starting in 1985, to offset inflation of the previous year.

For example, if the consumer price index measure of inflation went up 10 percent in 1984, the personal exemption would be raised to $1,100, the $3,400 standard deduction for a couple would go up to about $3,750 and tax rates would be cut accordingly.

Armstrong said that when inflation hits the tax system — "taxflation," he calls it — it penalizes the poor, wipes out periodic tax cuts passed by Congress, discourages savings and gives the government a "windfall" of revenue.

"Indexation will stop taxflation dead in its tracks and it will keep the federal government from profiting from inflation," he said.

As an example of how taxflation works, Armstrong noted that in 1972, the median income for a four-member family was $10,036. The family paid about 8.5 percent of its income in federal taxes.

Winning just enough cost-of-living pay raises to offset inflation since 1972, that family now would be making $23,500. But because those raises nudged the breadwinner into higher tax brackets, the family now pays 10.8 percent of its earnings in federal income taxes. And purchasing power has not risen at all, Armstrong said.

Opponents say indexing amounts to a surrender to inflation.

"This is a disastrous route to follow," Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said when the Finance Committee considered Armstrong's amendment. "It would just insulate one group of people from one effect of inflation. It would reduce the outrage people feel about inflation."

Reagan has said he favors the concept of indexing but has asked Congress to delay consideration until some time in the future. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has stated his outright opposition to it.

The tax bill being considered by the Republican-controlled Senate is patterned closely after Reagan's recommendations. The version being developed by the House Ways and Means Committee, which is controlled by Democrats, is considerably different.

One area of agreement is that estate taxes should be cut sharply. When fully effective, either bill would exempt from estate taxes any estate worth less than $600,000. A person could avoid any tax on any estate by bequeathing all property to the surviving spouse.

The Ways and Means Committee went a step beyond the Senate bill and agreed to cut from 70 percent to 50 percent the maximum tax rate applied to the relative handful of estates that would remain taxable. The full benefit of such a change would go only to estates worth $2.5 million or more.

The Senate bill would reduce estate taxes by $12.9 billion over the next five years, the House bill by $15.6 billion.

Cubs beat Mets in 9th

Midland takes 4-of-5 from Jackson

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Fritz Connally, who ended a 1-for-12 slump with a single in the fifth inning, celebrated by lining a game-winning single off the left field fence to send Mel Hall trotting home from third as the Midland Cubs completed a four-of-five sweep of the Jackson Mets, 8-7, at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

It was Midland's most decisive series victory of the season and gave the Bruins a 15-8 second half Texas League West record with Arkansas' angry and weary Travelers opening a five-game series here tonight. Lefthander Mike King, 4-0, will pitch for Midland.

Cubs at Home

TONIGHT—Arkansas-Cubs, 7:30 p.m.
FRIDAY—Arkansas-Cubs, 7:30 p.m. 25-cent Beer Night.
SATURDAY—Arkansas-Cubs, 7:30 p.m. 25 cent Beer Night.
SUNDAY—Arkansas-Cubs, 6 p.m. 25-cent Soft Drink Night.
MONDAY—Arkansas-Cubs, 7:30 p.m.

Rob Blyth came in for the last inning and a third to gain his fourth win in seven decisions after starter Randy Clark, 5-7 and decisionless in his last four starts, pitched in the kind of luck that has dogged him all season. When Randy left after seven, it was 7-7, but only three of the runs Clark had allowed were earned.

JOHN SEMPRINI, the Texas League's Save leader, 12, took over to start the ninth and Hall greeted him with a single to right. First baseman Rick Poe then fired Jack Upton's bunt into center field trying for the force and that brought up Connally, who missed the game Sunday when Semprini came on to get the win in relief.

"I hadn't seen him, but they said he threw a lot of sliders, so that was what I was looking for," the former All-SWC third baseman from Baylor said.

"No, I didn't give Connally any instructions," said Manager George Enright, "I was thinking squeeze, but not with his (Semprini's) breaking ball."

FOR A while, it looked like the team which got a chance to bobble the ball last would lose and, as it turned out, that's the way it was. Jackson scored four runs in the first, three unearned, but by the third inning Midland had a 5-4 lead. David Pagel doubled and scored on a force out in the first.

The Cubs scored three in the second, but missed a chance to blow it open when shortstop Al Pedrique turned Mike Diaz' liner into a double play. Joe Carter beat out an infield hit, Carmelo Martinez singled up the middle and Randy LaVigne, getting his fourth hit in five at bats, singled to right for one run before Diaz lined into the DP that caught Martinez off second.

Pagel then singled and Javier Fierro, guilty of two rare errors afield, doubled two runs home.

In the third, Martinez doubled behind an error for another run and after that it became a run-swapping contest until it reached 7-7 in the seventh.

UPTON'S TRIPLE and Connally's slump-ending single to left produced a fifth inning run for Midland and Hall doubled and scored on Martinez' third hit of the night in the seventh.

The game's defensive play was turned in by shortstop Dave Owen, who came into the game in the sixth after LaVigne hurt his hand on a slide into third.

Pedrique drilled a sharp grounder to the left side and Owen backhanded the ball deep in the hole, stumbled and some how leaped, twisted and got off a throw to first that nipped the runner. It just may have been the game because Shake Moore, next up, reached first on a similar type ball, "Only it was deeper," described Owen. Poe skied out and Bill Haselrig walked, which would have loaded the bases with one out. That's when Blyth entered the game for Norm Churchill, who had started the eighth.

"It was a do or die play," Owen said of his impossible defensive gem, "I just tried to get rid of the ball as quickly as I could."

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Arkansas arrived in Midland after an all night drive from Amarillo to find the Mets hadn't checked out of the motel and since both teams use the same motel and rooms, guessed who slept in the bus...That probably makes up for the all night bus trip Jackson had recently to Tulsa, arriving at 6 a.m. to discover the Drillers had scheduled an afternoon doubleheader...The Cubs are now 27-21 at home and 25-16 under Enright...With two hits Wednesday, Rusty Tillman wound up 9-for 16 against the Cubs Hall had a 9-for-22 series, Joe Carter was 8-for-21, LaVigne 8-for-19 and Martinez, the hottest bat of all, 11-for-21...Martinez, Carter and Hall all have seven-game hitting streaks going...

Donovan gives talks a big shove

NEW YORK (AP) — The Secretary of Labor gave the baseball talks a shove — a good one, he thinks.

"I think the country should be encouraged," Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said Wednesday after his dramatic visit here from Washington. "What I can tell you is we're excited about the fact they're back talking in a serious way.

"I've asked them to get back to serious bargaining. They have done that, and I'm pleased. The collective bargaining system is working."

Later in Washington, Donovan said further, "There is some room for optimism" about the chances of ending the first mid-season strike in baseball history.

DONOVAN INDICATED, however, that if there is no reasonably quick movement in the talks between the players and owners, they could move to Washington for closer scrutiny by government labor officials. "It is a possibility," he said.

Federal Mediator Ken Moffett had asked Donovan to step into the talks "in an effort to add new leverage to the bargaining process" and himself was optimistic about a fast settlement because of it.

"I hope it gets done tomorrow (Thursday)," Moffett told reporters Wednesday night in one of the shortest news conferences since the strike began on June 12.

With a sudden news blackout blanketing the talks in the 34-day old strike, Moffett told newsmen after four hours of negotiations Wednesday: "Both sides have decided to make no press comments. Other than that, there's not much to report."

Despite the outward hopes of Donovan and Moffett, at least one negative voice was heard in the crowd. Peter Rose, associate counsel to the players' association, just shook his head when Donovan's name was brought up.

"Nothing happened today," he said. "I am not optimistic. I've given up trying to figure this thing out. I just don't know."

Rose said that the owners made no proposals Wednesday, but that one was expected from them today.

"We're just waiting for a proposal from them," he said. "That's the only thing I can say for the record."

Donovan's appearance was the major news Wednesday in a painful strike that not only has meant the cancellation of 406 games thus far — nearly 20 percent of the season — as well as postponement of the All-Star Game, but caused some damage to the American economy.

THE CITY of Cleveland, for one, reportedly dropped $4 million as a result of the sideline of the All-Star Game last Tuesday night and other major league cities have suffered big losses as well. Cincinnati, for example, has estimated direct losses to the city of close to $500,000.

Meanwhile, a Los Angeles insurance firm reported that it made a $2.175 million payment to baseball owners Wednesday as part of a $50 million strike insurance policy carried by the teams.

"They reinsured and laid off their liability to other insurance companies and brokers," said a spokesman for Allianz Underwriters, Inc, Los Angeles attorney Leonard D. Venger.

Allianz originally handled $19.5 million of the insurance policy, including $7.5 million of the $20 million second level that began about July 3, and it would pay $12 million of $20 million third level if the strike continues, Venger said.

Of the various insurance companies involved, Allianz is ranked second only to Lloyd's of London in the amounts carried.

The Reagan administration reportedly became involved in the deadlocked talks because of concern about the economic impact of the strike.

Donovan's appearance at Wednesday's session, the first since the owners rejected Moffett's settlement proposal last Saturday, marked the administration's initial intervention in a strike.

"He hopes it's settled quickly," Donovan said of President Reagan's views of the walkout.

The secretary added, however, that his message to the players and owners did not come from the president.

"The message was from me," said Donovan.

Donovan's appearance, plus the continued negotiations, were seen as two positive signs after last weekend when both sides broke off talks in an atmosphere of bitterness as management rejected Moffett's compromise plan on compensating teams which lose free agents in the re-entry draft.

THE MAJOR League Players Association had accepted the plan, and it appeared that a settlement might be close at that time. But when the owners turned it down, it seemed the two sides were farther apart than they had been for some time.

However, Wednesday there was no apparent bitterness, and no angry charges of the type that had filled the air following previous breakdowns in the talks.

Moffett admitted that he was not being as candid as he might have been with the media.

Al Rosen wants baseball season played in halves

CINCINNATI (AP) — Houston Astros President Al Rosen says he favors a playoff at the end of the baseball season between teams that were in first place when the strike began and teams in first place at the end of the season.

Rosen suggests declaring first-place teams the winner of the "first half" of the season. Thus the Los Angeles Dodgers would be the National League West first-half champions.

"With Cincinnati being one-half game behind, (Reds President) Dick Wagner would probably scream. But I know Dick Wagner will have the best interest of the game in mind," Rosen said in a telephone interview with the Cincinnati Enquirer.

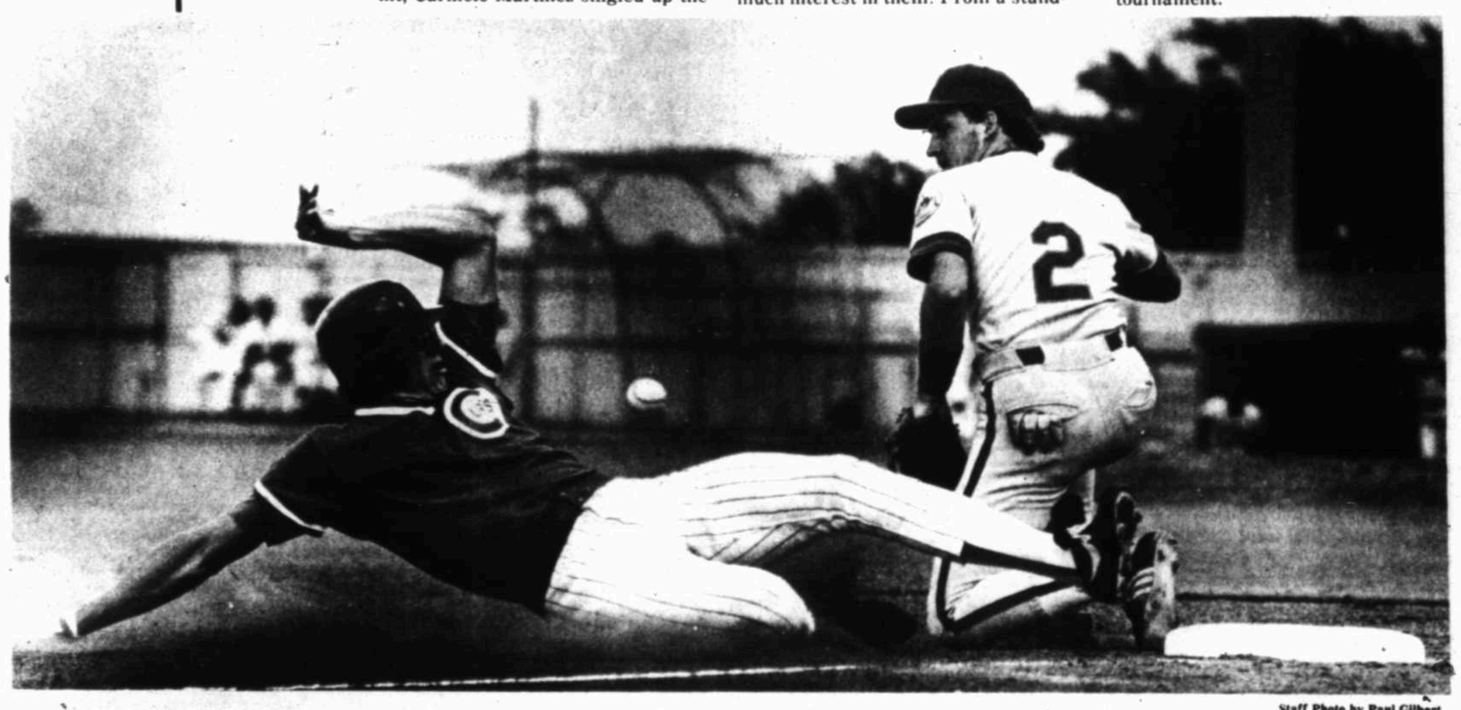

"If we start again Aug. 1, you've got about 60 games left. There are some clubs so far out that there wouldn't be much interest in them. From a standpoint, this (plan) has got to create some interest."

But Wagner was not enthused by the plan, which would benefit the Astros, who were eight games behind the Dodgers when the strike began June 12.

"That's what you do when you're 10 games behind. You take everything away from the clubs that have played hard to get where they are," Wagner said when advised of Rosen's plan.

"The history of this game is based on finishing what you start. In my minor-league experience, I never saw anything gained when teams tried to split the season in half or rearrange the playoffs. My friend Al is talking like a true American Leaguer."

Rosen said he has not formally offered the plan to baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. But Kuhn is known to be studying a number of possibilities, including a round-robin tournament.

Minor leagues... they're still going

When the Arabs shut off the world's oil supply a few years back, the long forgotten coal mines made a come back.

And now that America's supply of major league baseball has been shut off, like the coal mines, the long forgotten minor leagues are enjoying a revival, which makes one wonder where they have been and where they are now.

IF YOU were a fan cut off by the Japanese during World War II and had just fought your way out of the Malayan jungle, you wouldn't recognize what you see today.

When you left in 1941, there were 41 minor leagues, maybe not the record 46 of 1910, but still a pretty healthy spawning grounds for future major leaguers with no TV or area blanketing major league broadcasts to detract interest.

In fact, International League clubs in Newark and Jersey City could thrive little more than a ferry boat ride and short subway trip from the Dodgers, Yankees and Giants. Baltimore could successfully support an Int team less than an hour's drive from Washington.

When you left, the minor leagues began with the Class AA American Association, International League and Pacific Coast League. Below them were the A-1 Texas and Southern Associations while the Eastern League was alone in Class A. There were six B leagues, 10 C leagues and 17 Class D circuits. Texas had teams in the C Arizona-Texas (El Paso) and the D West Texas-New Mexico, composed of Big Spring, Borger, Amarillo, Lubbock, Lamesa, Pampa, Wichita Falls and Clovis, N.M.

THE TEXAS League listed Dallas, Houston, Shreveport, Beaumont, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth and San Antonio. Today only Tulsa and San Antonio remain. Dallas and Houston no longer have baseball. Little Rock was a member of the Southern Association, which annually played a Dixie Series with the Texas League. Among future major leaguers toiling in the Texas were Danny Murtaugh, Houston; Ed Waitkus, Tulsa; Howard Pollet, Houston; Eddie Lopat, Oklahoma City; and the legendary Thurman Tucker, Oklahoma City.

The AA leagues were the last step before the majors. Joining Newark, Jersey City and Baltimore in the International were Montreal, Toronto, Rochester, Syracuse and Buffalo. Annually, the playoff winner faced the American Association, composed of Columbus, Minneapolis, Louisville, Toledo, Kansas City, St. Paul, and Indianapolis, playoff winner in the Little World Series.

THESE WERE the primary developing grounds for the stars of the future. For one thing, they were handy in a day of rail travel, and teams like the Yankees (Newark and Kansas City) and Cardinals (Rochester and Columbus) had farm clubs in both leagues.

The PCL was something of an old folks league. A lot of former major leaguers finished out their careers here. Stretching from San Diego to Los Angeles-Hollywood, Sacramento, Oakland, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, distance was great and teams usually played weeklong series. The PCL started earlier and finished later than other minor leagues.

It had something the other leagues didn't have, like the Hollywood Stars, who played at old Gilmore Field, near the LaBrea Tar Pits. The matinee-idol crowd was as much an attraction as the ball club, until Bobby Bragan came along later and put the Stars in shorts to leave all baseball blushing.

Across town the Cubs' farm team, the Los Angeles Angels played at Wrigley Field, which bore a striking resemblance to a Wrigley Field in Chicago. Just as Boston's Braves Field and Fenway Park were the only major league stadiums without an upper deck, LA's Wrigley had the distinction of being the only double-

One-legged star signs

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bethune-Cookman College has signed a one-legged player to a football scholarship.

Carl Joseph, who starred as a nose guard at Madison High School in North Florida, said he would be used primarily as a blocker on the field-goal kicking team.

Joseph, 20, an agile, 6-foot-2, 190-pounder who was born without a left leg, does not use an artificial limb. There was some question whether he would be able to play college football under rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Officials say the rules are still unclear, although they prohibit handicapped players from using an artificial limb on the field.

Midlanders fall in net tourney

DENVER — Midland's Pete Barizon and Dennis Brittain both lost first round matches here Tuesday in the USTA National Men's 40 Hard Court tennis championships.

Barizon dropped a 6-2, 6-2 decision to Mike Makaroff of Denver in the first round and Brittain was eliminated by Aspen's Jim Garcia, 6-2, 6-2. Barizon and Brittain will team up in the doubles competition today.

Unwanted Pearson calls it quits

IRVING, Texas (AP) — For a man who never played a down of college football and was not drafted by the pros until the 12th round, Preston Pearson admits he did all right for himself.

His name is in the National Football League record book as one of seven players to appear in five Super Bowls and the only player to make the Super Bowl with three different teams.

But after 14 years in the NFL, the veteran Dallas Cowboy running back called a news conference Wednesday to announce his retirement. He said only regrets leaving the game before he was ready.

"I would drop everything I have right now to go to training camp. But ... I will not be there. I do not expect to be asked to be there and, if they do ask me, I will not go," Pearson said.

Pearson was drafted by the Baltimore Colts in 1967, after making the All Big-10 team as a basketball forward at Illinois.

In 1970, he was traded to Pittsburgh and, in 1975, was released by the Steelers and joined the Cowboys. He played six seasons with Dallas and holds the club record for pass receptions by a running back.

But Coach Tom Landry told Pearson three months ago that he did not fit into the team's plans for the coming season and would not be invited to training camp.

His reaction at the time? "Complete surprise," he said. "At this very moment I don't understand the reasons. I hear the reasons but I don't understand them."

But Pearson, the only player ever to perform in Super Bowl games for three different teams, said he is not bitter at the decision and will now devote his full attention to two business enterprises.

"I don't have any sorrow, or misgivings or sour grapes about the Cowboys organization. I love the players on that team, I think they will do well. ... I would have liked to have been there."

"I feel that I have two good years of productivity left ... but mine is not to question why. I am now through."

Pearson claims credit for "inventing" the position of third-down offensive specialist, his major role for the past 2½ seasons.

"I take great pride in the fact that I started the so-called third-down specialist role," he said. "The Cowboys ... won't miss me after the first two games, there will be somebody to take my place. But they (replacements) will never, ever be able to do what I did. I started it all."

He also says an event that was, at the time, the low point in his life turned out to be his biggest break.

"There's only one thing I might change in my career — that's when Pittsburgh put me on waivers. However, that is probably the single most important thing that ever happened to me. I had the opportunity to choose the team I wanted to go to, I chose the Dallas Cowboys, ever since then my career has escalated."

Putting aside a game he has played for 14 years will not be easy, but is something he must do for his own good, Pearson said.

"I know I will feel some kind of withdrawal pains, of some nature. But I guarantee you I will not dwell on the fact that I'm not there. There are too many things to do. Life does go on, believe me, without football."

Itchy feet prompts Foyt to join Michigan 500 field

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — A.J. Foyt just wants to go racing.

A virulant case of itchy feet brought about the sudden change of mind which moved Foyt to become a member of Championship Auto Racing Teams and enter Sunday's $500,000 Norton Michigan 500 Indy car race.

The 46-year-old Texan, the only man ever to win the Indianapolis 500 four times and the all-time winningest driver in Indy car racing, said Wednesday his decision was based entirely on his desire to get back in competition.

"I'm here because I want to race," Foyt said. "It had nuthin' to do with money. No amount of money could have brought me here if I didn't want to race.

"My bankers and some of my friends have been trying to talk me into retiring from racing for about 10 years, so it's not the money."

Foyt, acknowledged as one of only two or three name drivers who bring fans through the gates just by their presence at an event, has tried to remain neutral in the long-running dispute between CART and the U.S. Auto Club, the sanctioning bodies battling over control of Indy car racing.

But Foyt was forced to get a USAC license to race in the USAC-sanctioned Indy 500. And he had to become a member of CART in order to take part in this weekend's ract at Michigan International Speedway.

"I think these kind of things are petty," Foyt said. "I tried to remain a neutral by running on my FIA (international) or NASCAR licenses, but USAC and CART wouldn't let me."

"I've got mixed emotions about this whole thing. This is like the baseball strike," added Foyt, part-owner of the National League's Houston Astros. "I don't think nobody knows what that squabble's really about. And I don't think anybody really knows what the USAC-CART thing is about. It's just everybody squabbling.

"But, I also know that I can't expect to run in one or two races a year and still be competitive with these other guys who are racing 10 or 12 times a year.

"If I want to be competitive, I can't be playin' with my horses or be cuttin' hay with my tractor, like I was yesterday," the burly veteran explained. "I've got to get out here and work on the car.

"Besides, I still want to race. The day I lose the desire to win, I'll get out. But it still kills me to watch a race."

Minors are streamlined to fit today's demands

YOU'LL note that 10 of those AA clubs in 1941 are now major leagues clubs.

Minor League baseball reached its popularity peak after World War II with 42 leagues in 1946. Farm systems were extensive. The classifications had been revised and the International, American Association and PCL were now AAA. The Texas and Southern were AA while the Eastern and Sally leagues were A. Major League farm systems were extensive. The Yankees, for example, had 20 farm teams, 2 in AAA, one in AA, three in A, four in Class B, six in Class C and four in Class D.

By 1947 there were 52 leagues and they were springing up all over Texas...the East Texas, Big State, Arizona-Texas, and Longhorn, listing Midland, Vernon, Odessa, Ballinger, Big Spring and Sweetwater. Midand's Jim Prince hit .429 that year to post the highest average in all of Organized Baseball.

By 1952, the tide was receding. There were still 43 minor leagues, but the Yankees' farm system had dwindled to 10. The PCL had been declared an Open league, by this time, a move that was supposed to lead to it becoming an eventual major league.

Leagues continued to abound in Texas with the AA Texas, B Big State, C Arizona-Texas, Longhorn and WT-NM leagues plus the D Gulf Coast.

In 1957, there were only 28 minor leagues and the only leagues left in Texas were the Texas, and Class B Big State and Southwestern loops. The Big State was made up of Victoria, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Abilene, Port-Arthur-Temple and Wichita Falls. The Southwestern came from the merging of the Longhorn-WT NM and listed Hobbs, Ballinger, Carlsbad, Midland, Clovis, El Paso, Pampa-San Angelo and Plainview as members. By mid season, the league was down to only four. Midland's franchise was moved to Lamesa August 1.

MIDLAND became a member of the Sophomore League in 1958-59, a new concept in which major league teams sent their most promising second-year players and some rookies to play here. As a Milwaukee Braves farm team, Midland won the pennant in a runaway in 1958. But by 1960 the minor leagues dwindled to 21 and in 1963 only 18 were left.

It was in 1963 that the minors were drastically revised. Scrubbed were the B, C and D leagues. All that remained were the AAA, AA and A circuits with Rookie Leagues to be introduced later. Since then minor league baseball has remained relatively stable.

The stream-lined version emphasizes player development. No longer is the former major league player who had seen his day carried on the roster. Despite te economy, it's a loss. The younger players no longer benefit from the experience and know-how gained by playing beside and against the wise old vet, but the parent clubs try to make up for this by a system of roving coaches who devote full time to batting, fielding and pitching instrcution.

IF YOU were just now emerging from that Malayan jungle, you would be confused by the change. The International League lists such strangers as Columbus, Richmond, Tidewater, Pawtucket, Toledo and Charleston. Only Rochester and Syracuse remain from the olds days. Buffalo is in the Eastern League, Montreal, Baltimore and Toronto in the majors, Newark and Jersey City have been swallowed up by the Meadowslands.

Just as strange is an American Association that embraces Evansville, Indianapolis, Springfield, Iowa, Omaha, Denver, Wichita and Oklahoma City. The PCL? San Diego, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco and Oakland are major league cities. Only Portland remains from the old gang.

Perhaps the minors are fewer than in days of yore, but it's the only game around.

Lambert wants talks stopped

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jack Lambert's agent says the Pittsburgh Steelers middle linebacker ordered contract talks with the team broken off by today's opening of training camp.

Without a new contract, the 29-year-old Lambert will become a free agent after the 1981-82 season. The Steelers' media guide calls the eight-year veteran and six-time All-Pro "indispensable" on defense.

"We have withdrawn our last offer," said agent Greg Lustig. "We've had several new proposals in the last two weeks from the Steelers, but we can't meet on a low figure."

After a 39-day holdout in 1977, Lambert signed a five-year contract with Pittsburgh reportedly worth some $1.25 million. Lustig wouldn't discuss details of the now-suspended negotiations.

Tornado ends losing streak

DALLAS (AP) — The North American Soccer League's longest losing streak ended Wednesday night as Cliff Calvert's first-half goal earned the Dallas Tornado a 1-0 victory over the Portland Timbers.

The win snapped the Tornado's 20-game losing streak, dating back to an April 12 1-0 shootout win at Toronto 95 days ago.

The Tornado streak, which started April 18 with a 3-0 loss to the Cosmos, was the third longest in North American sports history, topped only by the 26-game NFL losing streak of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the 22-game losing streak of the 1899 Cleveland Indians.

Calvert's first-half goal at 37:49 came after he stole the ball deep in the Portland zone from Timber defender Young Jeung Cho, the NASL's only Korean player.

"Only the people closest to the Tornado family can know what this victory means to our organization," said Dallas coach Peter Short, "Obviously, the players took each loss very hard. But it was obviously also difficult for every member of the Tornado family.

"I felt the difference tonight obviously was the fact that we didn't make any silly mistakes that let them get back in the game. That obviously always helps when you score more goals than they do."

Oiler camp features 'names'

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A pair of "name" athletes will among 51 rookies and free agents trying to break into the Houston Oiler organization beginning today when the Oilers open the team's training site at Angelo State University.

Lawrence McCutcheon, a five-time Pro Bowl performer for the Los Angeles Rams and Mack Mitchell, a former starting defensive end for the Cleveland Browns, were expected to be among the early arrivals.

New Oiler head coach Ed Biles and a revamped coaching staff will hold the team's first workout Friday to begin gearing up for the first exhibition game Aug. 6 in the Astrodome against Super Bowl finalist Philadelphia.

Oiler veterans won't report until July 22 and begin workouts the following day. The Oilers finished with an 11-5 record last year before a disappointing first round playoff loss to Super Bowl champion Oakland.

All of Houston's draftees have signed their contracts and are expected by Thursday's 6 p.m. deadline including wide receiver Michael Holston, who was the Oilers' first pick in the draft. Holston, 6-3, 183, from Morgan State, was taken in the third round.

The Oilers did not have selections in the first two rounds.

Other Oiler draftees are: Nick Eyre, offensive tackle, Brigham Young; Delbert Fowler, linebacker, West Virginia; Bill Kay, defensive back, Purdue; Don Washington, defensive back, Texas A&I; Willie Tullis, wide receiver, Troy State; Avon Riley, linebacker, UCLA; Larry Jones, running back, Colorado State; Claude Matthews, offensive tackle, Auburn and Bill Capece, kicker, Florida State.

Midland Eastern takes 2-1 victory

BIG SPRING — Carlos Lozano stole home in the top of the seventh inning to lift the Midland Eastern All-Stars to a 2-1 victory over Big Spring National in the Big Spring All-Star district tournament Tuesday night.

Midland picked up its first run in the first inning on a RBI-single by Tommy Yorkman. After giving up the first run, Carey Fraser settled dowm and kept the Midlanders at bay until Lozano reached base leading off the seventh and came around to score the winning run. Frazer allowed only two hits and struckout nine batters in the losing effort.

Joe Rendon went the distance for Eastern to claim the win. Rendon gave up two hits and fanned 11 in his evening of work.

Midland will be idle until Monday at 8 p.m. when they play an opponent that still must be determined in the double elimination tournament.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: James Cagney, Luci Arnaz and Phyllis Diller share this birthday with you. Saving money is the key to greater success and happiness in the year ahead. Those who build a comfortable nest egg for themselves will reduce the tension in their lives and enjoy more meaningful personal relationships. Count on several important business projects coming to fruition. A career change is possible. Do not hesitate to change course if you feel you are on the wrong track! Romance is rewarding so long as you choose a partner who shares your goals. Married people should think twice about engaging in "innocent" flirtations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Working late and bringing home business papers creates tension. Seek a compromise with loved one. The financial outlook looks brighter than in the recent past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Marriage will be on the minds of those who are deeply involved. The less said about what a friend is doing, the better! A change in family plans works out for the best.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You learn something that will have a soothing effect on what has been a troubled relationship. Friends are privately supportive. A trend will work in your favor where money is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Revise your budget so that you can meet a financial emergency. Moonlighting at a second job could be one solution. Clear up any domestic misunderstandings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work diligently to complete those tasks already under way. Teamwork is favored. Finances show signs of improvement. A community group or fraternal organization may reward you for your past efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work at a steady pace today. Check your resources and assets. Welcome ideas from someone older or more experienced than yourself. Share confidences with mate or romantic partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Improve your property. You could sell your home for a tidy profit. Have more patience. A late afternoon trip could prove fruitful. Keep a date with that special person!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Select your words very carefully to make certain that your meaning is absolutely clear. A new feeling of self-confidence enables you to express what you really think. Be courageous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 22): Keep a tight rein on your purse strings no matter how hard loved one may try to twist your arm. Display your artistic abilities for all to see! It could advance your career.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A lack of funds may handicap you when it comes to romance. Do not despair! Relief is on the way. A job project which could solve your cash shortage gets the "green light."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look out for your physical welfare by taking steps to eliminate unnecessary tension in your life. Developing better rapport with your loved ones would help more than you realize.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The outlook for both romance and finance will improve soon. In the meantime, keep your nose to the grindstone and maintain a low profile.

North's raise to three no trump was well reasoned. With a hand that rated to produce five tricks, his nine points were a lot better than many 11 or 12 point hands.

West led the king of diamonds, and the spots in clubs were unfortunate. Unless clubs were 2-2 or the jack of clubs was singleton, declarer would have to win the fourth round of clubs in his hand and he would have no entry back to the table to enjoy the long club. It seemed that declarer might have to rely on the heart finesse for his ninth trick. But declarer found a far more elegant method to secure his contract.

Declarer allowed the king of diamonds to win the first trick and won the continuation with the ace. He cashed the ace and king of clubs in the hope that the suit would break or that the jack would drop, but neither happened. However, declarer did not mind. He simply led a diamond from dummy and discarded a club from his hand!

The defenders were helpless. West could cash his diamonds or not, as he saw fit. No matter what he did, declarer had nine tricks via two spades, a heart, a diamond and five clubs.

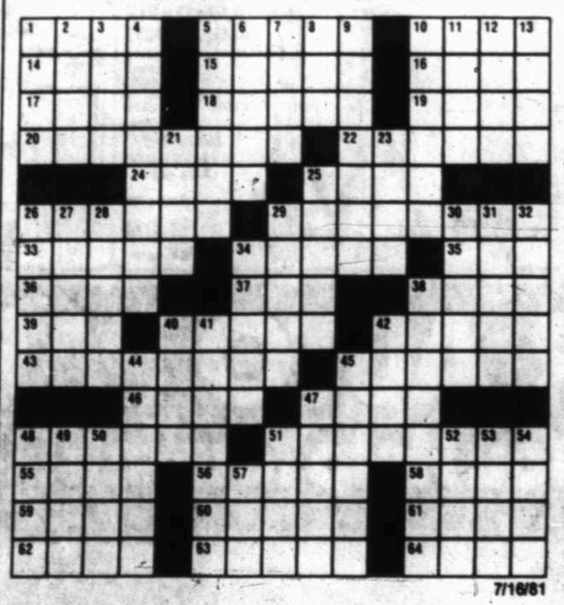

There are a few points of interest in declarer's technique. Note that it is necessary to hold up one round of diamonds. If you win the first diamond and then exit with a diamond later, you can be defeated if the suit breaks 6-1. Also note that it won't help the defenders to shift to a spade at trick two. Declarer wins and cashes the ace of diamonds, then proceeds as above.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Practicing a scene from The Friends of Music upcoming opera are, from left, Jane Clancy Huddleston as the plaintiff, Dan Wright as the learned judge, Jeff Woods as the usher, Bob Cox as foreman of the jury and Tom Roberts as the defendant. The opera will open July 23 in Threatre II.

Friends of Music will Present 2 short operas for Midlanders

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Fun and merriment for the whole family will be playing Theatre II when two short operas open July 23. Both are being presented by the Friends of Music.

"Can opera be fun? Can the whole family enjoy 'an evening at the opera?' The Friends of Music have set out to answer these questions," Jane Clancy Huddleston said in a recent interview.

Ms. Huddleston is a member of the Friends of Music. The other two members are Darryl Knapp and Tom Roberts. Operas to be presented are Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury" and Seymour Barab's "Little Red Riding Hood."

"At lunch one day we (Knapp and Ms. Huddleston) decided we wanted something for our choirs to do for the summer. We had just finished our Easter 'Messiah' production and were wondering what we could do next," Ms. Huddleston said, adding, "Neither of us is happy unless we have too much to do."

"Then we talked Tom Roberts into joining us in this wild venture of opera on a shoestring. We decided to call in our friends and see if they would work for nothing because neither of us had a budget.

"Summer opera can be light and fun — we don't have to take ourselves too seriously," she said.

Costs are being kept to under $2000. Only two performances were originally scheduled, however, a Saturday night show has been added because Thursday and Friday are already almost sold out.

Performances are being held at Theatre Midland in Theatre II.

"We started looking for a place to have the opera and never dreamed Theatre II would be available. We were told it was dark this summer and we were welcome to have a production there. We were so thrilled their rental was within our budget.

"In fact, the theater and everyone connected with it have encouraged us from the word go," Ms. Huddleston said.

The productions represent a joint effort of the music departments of First Christian Church, directed by Knapp, Trinity Presbyterian Church, directed by Ms. Huddleston, and First Presbyterian, directed by Tom Roberts.

Dan Wright of El Paso is directing "Trial by Jury" and Don Bachmann, executive director of Midland Community Theatre, is directing "Red Riding Hood."

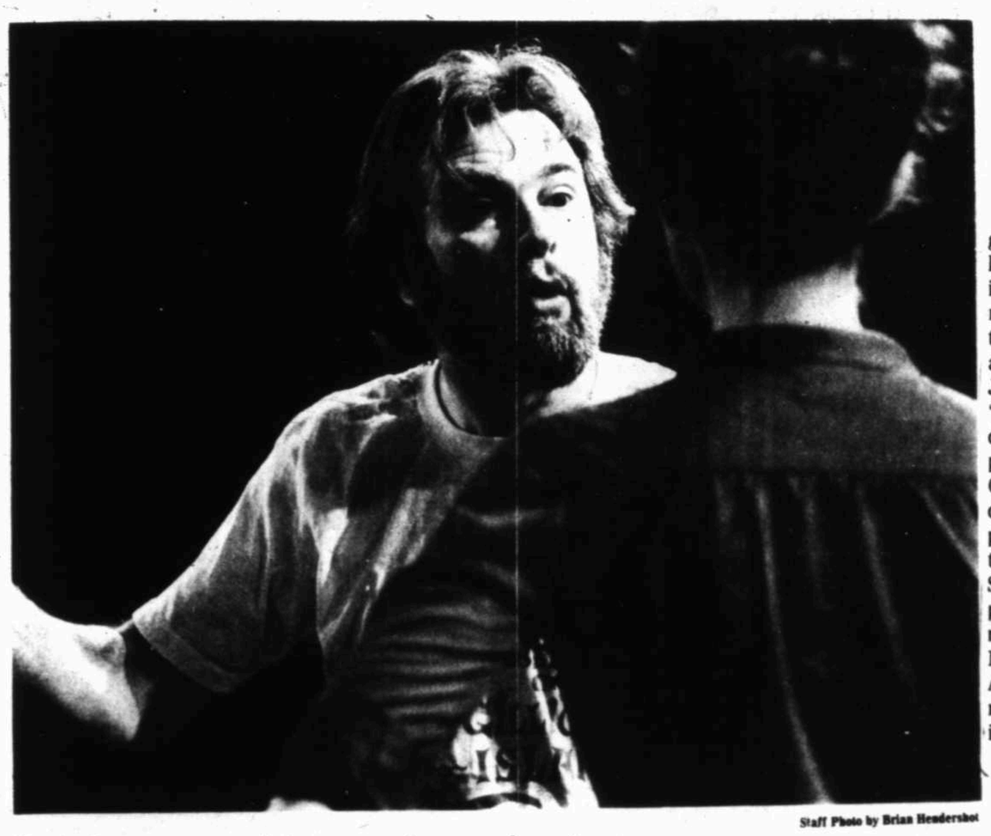

"Gilbert and Sullivan's 'Trial by Jury' is set in a court during the trial of a breach of promise suit. The 'bias-free' jury and judge all fall for the plaintiff who has appeared in court in her wedding dress. The chorus is part of the audience which is also asked to participate in the action," Ms. Huddleston explained.

The cast includes Wright as the judge; Ms. Huddleston as the plaintiff; Roberts as the defendant; Shaun Gilstrap as the council for the plaintiff; Jeff Woods as the usher; and Bob Cox as the foreman.

The story line for "Little Red Riding Hood" is a familiar one. "The opera was written for adults to perform for children," Ms. Huddleston said, adding, "It's funny. Adults and children will enjoy it."

The cast includes Carrie Cole as Red Riding Hood; Scott Cresswell as the wolf; Janice Archer as the mother; Elaine Berman as the grandmother; and Stan Engebretson as the woodsman.

Tickets, priced at $3, may be purchased at the theater, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., beginning Friday at 10 a.m. For more information or to make reservations call the Friends of Music at First Christian Church, 682-2541.

Drilled to 3,150 feet,, with 5 1/2 inch casing set on bottom, it is plugged back to 3,133 feet.

KIMBLE WILDCAT

Study says less-developed countries more receptive

By HOBART ROWEN
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A Treasury Department study asserts that less-developed countries have become more receptive to exploration by private oil companies since recent oil-cartel price increases, diminishing the need for a new World Bank affiliate to encourage Third World oil development.

In an interview last week in which he revealed the existence of the study, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said that "if there is a pool of oil of any commercial value, the oil company that found it will exploit it, provided that it can reach a satisfactory return on its money."

Regan said that oil development by the private secrtor in the Third World has been frustrated in the past because the countries and companies hadn't been able to agree on terms. But a number of countries "which previously were reluctant to admit foreign companies are now permitting exploration," he said. Regan cited as examples India, Brazil, Argentina, Turkey and Chile.

The United States thus intends to convey to its partners at the Ottawa summit next week its belief that the energy affiliate many of them favor is not needed. At the same time, Regan said that the Reagan administration will encourage the World Bank to expand its energy-development role within its present structure. This appears to be a softening of a position taken earlier in the Reagan administration.

Moreover, Regan said that "without committing ourselves, we're willing to explore" the possibility of liberalizing the bank's "gearing ratio," not only for energy but for all bank lending operations. Presently the bank's gearing ratio allows only a dollar-for-dollar lending total in relation to capital.

"What we're saying on the energy affiliate is that this is something that we don't think has to be set up as a separate (entity) with separate funding and a separate staff," Regan said in the interview. "We think much of it can be done within the charter, the capital and the borrowings of the World Bank right now. What most of these countries and oil companies need is a middleman, if you will, somebody to divide the profits, to guarantee against exploitation on both sides."

Regan added that much of this can be done within the present structure of the World Bank, which should target its energy-development program in the Third World not only to crude oil, but to hydroelectric power, biomass and reforestation. "We tend to forget that in many nations, particularly in the tropics, wood is their chief source of energy.,"

Backers of an energy affiliate for the World Bank have argued that the private multinational oil companies are not anxious to get involved in many parts of Asia and Africa unless they are assured there will be significant exportable quantities of oil. Bank sources' said this effectively ruled out private exploration for amounts of oil that would be important for local consumption.

Not so, said Regan: "If the price is right" and "the private oil companies find ... enou h oil in a country to satisfy that country's needs, and the price of extracting the oil and the sale price at the pump or wherever it's being done warrants it, it can be done. Now what you've got to remember is that if it's a small pool of oil, it would hardly pay to extract that oil and then process it in that country."

The Treasury study shows that in the period 1967-76, private companies explored for oil in 93 of the 113 oil-producing nations that are not members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). The 20 countries with no private oil company activity are mostly small island nations where the geological prospects were considered poor.

The analysis goes on to point out that because actual activity occurs with a planning lag of as much as five years, most of these explorations were blueprinted or under way before the first oil price escalation of 1973-74, even at a time when oil prices were no more than one-tenth their present level. Thus, the study suggests that vastly higher prices now, combined with an improved investment climate in many countries, will accelerate the exploration process.

Senate urged to outlaw severance taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxes imposed by energy-rich states on their resources will drain billions of dollars from consuming states over the next decade unless restricted by Congress, a Senate subcommittee was told Wednesday.

Witnesses before a Senate Governmental Operations subcommittee said that unless Congress acts, the nation will see the creation of a domestic energy cartel that could have much the same impact within the United States that the Arab oil cartel has had on the nation at large.

"There will be at least 21 states consuming coal from Montana and Wyoming," said William P. Rogers, attorney for a number of utility companies that lost a Supreme Court challenge to Montana's 30 percent severance tax on coal.

"Ninety-five million citizens ...will be paying tribute to 1.3 million citizens of Montana and Wyoming under the guise of a tax because a large part of the nation's coal happens to be located in those states.

"Under these circumstances, it seems clear that the rights of the consuming states are paramount. And within this parameter of states rights, Congress should act," said Rogers.

The hearing before the subcommittee on intergovernmental relations was called by Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., who is sponsoring legislation to impose a 12.5 percent ceiling on coal severance taxes.

Durenberger said he also is looking at other severance taxes, including those on oil and natural gas. He noted that while Montana's tax rate is high, its dollar cost to consuming states is only one-tenth that paid to Texas in oil and gas taxes.

The Northeast-Midwest Institute, a research center tied to the Northeast and Midwest congressional delegations, has said that oil and gas severance taxes grew from $710 million in 1972 to $2 billion in 1978 and are still climbing.

A 1979 Treasury Department study predicted that oil taxes alone will funnel $127 billion to producing states over the decade, the institute said, ith 90 percen of that concentrated in the eight major oil producing states.

In addition, the institute said, decontrol of natural gas prices could raise severance taxes by $50 billion over the decade, while existing coal severance taxes are expected to bring coal states some $220 billion during the 1980s.

The spector of sharply increasing resource taxes follows the Supreme Court's July 2 decision holding that nothing in the Constitution prohibits Montana from imposing a 30 percent tax — the highest in the nation — on coal mined within its borders.

The energy-rich states defend their taxes as necessary to offset the cost of sudden energy development, including the cost of roads, schools and sewers in new energy boom towns.

"If we are all in agreement with the basic point that no state should become a 'colony' to be exploited and plundered by other sections of the nation, a question central to this hearing today is: Who should pay these costs?'' asked Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont.

But Rogers and other critics say the decision clears the way for states to sharply increase taxes on their natural resources, possibly leading to tax warfare among the states.

Some argue that process already is beginning. Rogers said the attorney general of Texas has proposed a retaliatory increase in oil and gas taxes. Durenberger said some i his home state of Minnesota are proposing sharply higher taxes on minteral resources.

"From the national perspective, if every state begins thinking — and acting — in these terms, the effect on the nation's economy would be disasterous," Durenberger said.

Watt to proceed with offshore lease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt announced Wednesday he is still plans the leasing of a billion acres of offshore oil land over the next five years, despite criticism that it will be environmentally risky or too much for industry to handle.

Watt made the announcement at a news conference at which he repeatedly sought to ridicule a survey released Tuesday by the nation's argest conservation organization that showed its members strongly opposed to Watt's policies.

The secretary referred to the National Wildlife Federation survey as "rigged" and "hilariously funny," and said he'd "dismissed it" after looking at only the first of the poll's 11 questions.

Watt also said that no decision has been made on whether to go ahead with plans to lease tracts off Northern California to which Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has objected.

He announced, too, that he had appointed a commission to investigate millions of dollars lost in payment of mineral royalties through theft or mismanagement. He noted that problem was a massive one in view of the $4 billion in oil royalties the government collects each year.

Speaking of his overall offshore leasing plan, Watt said he was going ahead with "area-wide environmental assessments and lease offerings of entire planning areas" because these would encourage development and foster a more efficient use of tax dollars.

The offshore leasing program had earlier been based on much smaller individual tracts that environmentalists maintain are more manageable. Watt, however, maintained his program was less environmentally risky than tankers carrying imported oil, which he said wider offshore leasing would replace.

"The thrust of the proposed program is to accelerate the inventorying of domestic oil and gas resources and, if discoveries are made, to make them available to U.S. consumers earlier," Watt said.

"There has been much concern that the area-wide concept will result in a weakening of environmental safeguards," he said. "This is not the case."

Watt referred to the nation's offshore leasing program as having "a tremendously favorable environmental record" and said he would use all the tools available to him to prevent environmental degradation.

Asked about suggestions the plan may be too sweeping for the oil industry to handle, he said. "We believe the marketplace will create the capacity."

Watt said minor modifications had been made in the plan as a result of comments from governors of coastal states since it was introduced in April but that the scope of it remained the same.

The plan would be sent to Congress, the attorney general and governors of coastal states and opened to 90 days of public comment, as required by law, before final approval. Watt said.

Asked about the National Wildlife Federation's call for him to be fired, Watt said he believes "the vast segment of the total public" supports his efforts to increase development of energy resources.

He referred to the survey the federation sent to 4,000 of its 800,000 national members as a "rigged poll."

Wallace says "limited" storage tanks are full

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace said today the nation's "limited" storage tanks are full, but "there is no oil glut in America."

Wallace told oil and gas executives he agrees with former presidential adviser Walt Rostow that the United States must be able to supply all of its own crude oil needs — and more — by 1990.

He said America is still almost 40 percent dependent on "unstable foreign sources for our daily crude oil needs," and he added "we cannot mount an economic policy that will provide high reliable growth without inflation so long as we are having to depend on foreign oil."

Wallace spoke after the Railroad Commission routinely set the statewide oil allowable for August at 100 percent of potential. As usual, however, the East Texas field was restricted to 86 percent production to avoid possible waste.

Wallace said "it is shocking" to hear complaints from "inside and outside" the oil and gas industry over the federal government's decision to lease more federal lands for energy development.

"Apparently," he said, "it is more profitable to drill overseas than to drill at home. ... Certainly, the industry can search for energy whatever there is a possibility of finding it. But our country's national interest requires that domestic exploration be given a much higher priority than foreign exploration."

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,525,715 barrels a day in August, a decrease of 32,584 barrels a day from July.

John Lee of Texaco Inc. said, however, his company's lower nomination for August "in no way indicates a reduction in demand for Texas-origin crude oil." He said the August request merely reflects what the company anticipates buying next month.

Chicken and Rice...Nice!

Chicken and rice seem to be a natural combination in many parts of the world . . . from our own United States to India, China, Spain and many more countries.

Why? Probably because of the versatility of each. Chicken can be baked, fried, broiled, simmered . . . whole or in parts . . . bone-in or boneless. It always tastes good.

Versatile rice can be cooked with the chicken or cooked in chicken broth and served with the chicken dish. Many flavors and ingredients can be added to rice to accent the chicken flavor and add to the overall appeal of the meal.

This combination of chicken and rice is becoming even more popular as food costs go up. Many times, chicken is the most economical buy in the meat market. And rice, at just about three cents per half-cup serving, is hard to beat.

Try these chicken and rice combinations for family or company and see what a delicious meal you can serve and still stay within your food budget.

TANZANIAN CHICKEN

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
1/2 cup flour
1-1/2 teaspoons salt, divided
1 teaspoon pepper, divided
1-1/2 cups peanut oil

1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup roasted salted peanuts, chopped

Heat oil, in large fry pan, over medium heat. Mix together flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper; coat chicken thoroughly. Place chicken in hot oil and cook for about 30 minutes, turning to brown evenly. Place chicken broth in saucepan and bring to boil. Stir in rice and 1/2 teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Cook rice, covered, approximately 20 minutes or until liquid is absorbed. Stir coconut and raisins into rice, cover and cook 5 minutes more over low heat. When chicken can be easily pierced with fork, remove from fry pan; drain oil, reserving drippings. Stir cooked rice mixture into drippings, mixing thoroughly. To serve, arrange rice on large platter, sprinkle with chopped peanuts and place chicken on top of rice. Garnish with fresh orange or mango slices.

If desired, serve with gravy made from chicken broth.*

When a recipe calls for cooked chicken . . . and when you need chicken broth for making gravy or cooking rice, here's the way it's done:

*COOKED CHICKEN AND BROTH

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
4 cups water, divided
1 small onion, quartered
1 rib celery, with leaves
2 teaspoons salt, divided
1/4 teaspoon pepper

In deep saucepan, place chicken with 2 cups of the water, onion, celery, 1 teaspoon of the salt and pepper. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Remove chicken from saucepan and refrigerate until chicken can be handled with ease. Remove all meat, cut into bite-size pieces and place in refrigerator until ready to use. To contents of saucepan, add chicken bones and skin, the remaining water and salt. Cook 10 minutes more. Strain out bones and skin. Chill broth until ready to use.

- If you don't plan to use the cooked chicken immediately, freeze it in left-over broth to retain its natural moisture and flavor.
- When cooking rice in chicken broth, just follow the directions on the rice package using chicken broth in place of the water. The flavor and richness that the broth adds to the rice will make this a favorite family recipe.

Plan bake sale specials

Not everyone is inclined to bake cakes, pies or cookies at home. Many who used to turn out family favorites are now working so there isn't time. Perhaps that's why home-baked pastries at bake sales are so popular and a good way to earn money for church, school or club.

It doesn't take the full membership of a group to do the baking since 10 to 20 people can usually make enough treats for the sale. Bless the person who can bake two pies as easily as one, or whose cake can be divided into two because it's so rich or whose cookies can be sold by the dozen!

Members who don't bake can contribute by filling orders, making change, supplying boxes, bags, labels or just bringing their friends to buy.

Set the sale rolling by asking what favorites members will supply. If they lack ideas, jog plans along with these starters: Lemony Buttermilk Pie, a unique old-fashioned pastry with a wonderful crust; Carrot Cake, an "in" variety; and Spiced Apple-Raisin Cookies, always delightful.

Carrot Cake is a moist and buttery delicacy that may be baked a few days in advance. Cream Cheese Glaze is added shortly before taking it to the sale. Spiced Apple-Raisin Cookies, made with butter, will mellow if they're stored in a covered tin with waxed paper between layers. They'll remain moist because of the fruit.

LEMONY BUTTERMILK PIE

Crust:
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- ⅛ teasp. salt
- 3 tblsp. butter
- 3 tblsp. lard
- 3-4 tblsp. milk

Filling:
- 3 eggs
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1½ tblsp. flour
- 2 teasp. grated lemon peel

- 1 teasp. vanilla extract
- 2 teasp. sugar
- ⅛ teasp. cinnamon
- ⅛ teasp. nutmeg
- Lemon slice, if desired

Preheat oven to 425 F. For crust, combine flour and salt. Cut in butter and lard until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk a tablespoon at a time, mixing just until flour is moistened. Roll out on a lightly floured surface to form a 13-inch circle. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Trim edges; flute; prick inside with tines of a fork. Bake until light brown, about 10 minutes. Remove from oven and cool completely on wire rack.

Preheat oven to 375 F. For filling, beat eggs and ½ cup sugar in small mixing bowl on high speed of mixer until thick and lemon colored, about 5 minutes. Stir in buttermilk, flour, lemon peel and juice and vanilla. Pour into cool crust. Combine 2 tablespoons sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Sprinkle over top of pie filling. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Cool completely on wire rack. Garnish with lemon leaves and a lemon slice.

- 2½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
- ½ teasp. vanilla extract
- 3 to 4 tblsp. milk

Preheat oven to 350 F. Cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in vanilla. Combine flour, baking powder, salt and spices. Gradually add to creamed mixture; blend well. Stir in carrots, pineapple, raisins and nuts. Spoon batter into well-buttered and floured 12-cup bundt cake pan. Bake 60 to 65 minutes, or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Fish Dijon makes perfect main dish meal for two

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DINNER FOR TWO

Fish Dijon — Potatoes
Corn on the Cob — Salad
Blueberry Pandowdy

FISH DIJON

Easy-to-make fish topping adds real flavor.

- 2 large or 4 small skinless flounder fillets (¾ pound)
- Olive oil
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice

If fillets are large, cut them in half crosswise. Dry with paper toweling. Cover a jelly roll pan with foil; oil the foil; arrange the fillets, well apart, on it; brush each with the oil. With a fork, whisk together the mayonnaise, mustard and lemon juice; spoon in a wide band lengthwise down each portion of fish. Broil, 6 to 8 inches from high heat, just until fish is cooked through and topping is golden — about 2 minutes. Remove from foil with a wide metal spatula. Makes 2 servings.

Avocado hints

Avocados are not tree ripened. Rather, they're sent to market at a stage of maturity which will permit the consumer to select the degree of ripeness he wants.

Then the avocado will ripen in two to seven days if held at room temperature. After it begins to soften, refrigerate until serving time.

Peeled avocados may darken unless you use them immediately. To retard this, add lemon or lime juice, leave the seed in the container with the fruit and store in an air-tight container in the refrigerator. If the avocado should darken in a place or two, cut that area away.

Bake several loaves of Whole Wheat Pear Bread now, then freeze some for later.

Whole Wheat Pear Bread is a great addition to any meal

Nothing perks up a simple soup and salad supper like fresh homemade bread. Homemade yeast breads never lose their popularity. Now they are enjoying an ever increasing interest. And with food preservation and make-ahead meals becoming a way of life, this Whole Wheat Pear Bread can be made ahead and frozen for future use.

Fresh Bartlett pears are high in dietary fiber and low in calories, containing significant amounts of several minerals and vitamins B and C. And Bartlett pears combine perfectly with whole wheat flour to produce a tasty and wholesome bread. Pureed fresh Bartletts, honey and whole wheat flour make tha foundation for this lemon-ginger accented dough.

Bartlett pears can be found in your supermarket from mid-July into November. Bartletts do not ripen properly on the tree, but you can ripen green pears at home by placing them together in a loosely closed paper bag or ripening bowl at room temperature for several days. When pears turn yellow and yield to gentle palm pressure, they are ripe and ready for use. Ripe pears should be stored a short time in the refrigerator. They taste best when slightly chilled.

There appears to be a correlation between the pear's ripening process and their disappearance at the hands of family members, so you'll need to purchase an extra quantity for your baking as well as out-of-hand eating.

You'll need one large pear for each loaf of Whole Wheat Pear Bread. Turn on your oven one cool morning and bake several loaves, remembering that they can be baked, cooled and frozen for future use. To freshen frozen breads, heat the defrosted loaves before serving.

Freeze several extra loaves for cozy winter suppers. But for now, you'll want at least one to serve as a special treat with sweet butter, honey and cheese. And you'll want several loaves to add a special touch to lazy summertime meals. Then sit back, relax or simply just — loaf!

WHOLE WHEAT PEAR BREAD

2 envelopes active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
1 large fresh Bartlett pear
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ cup honey
3 tblsp. soft shortening
1½ teasp. salt
¾ teasp. grated lemon peel
¼ teasp. ground ginger
1½ cups unsifted whole wheat flour
Oil

Sprinkle yeast over warm water in mixing bowl; let stand 5 minutes to soften. Meanwhile, core pear and dice fruit into blender jar. Blend until finely pureed (or puree in food mill or food processor; should measure ¾ cup puree). Add puree to yeast, then 1 cup all purpose flour. Beat smooth. Stir in honey, shortening, salt, lemon peel and ginger and beat until well blended. Add 1 cup whole wheat flour and beat well. Gradually blend in remaining whole wheat flour, then remaining all-purpose flour, mixing to a stiff dough. Turn out onto floured board and knead about 5 minutes until dough is smooth and rounds up. Place in oiled bowl and turn over to oil top of dough. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 1 hour. Punch down. Turn out onto floured board and press out with palms to an oval about 9x12 inches. Fold one long side over about 3 inches, pressing firmly together to avoid air bubbles and pinching edge against the dough beneath. Fold second long side, similarly, and pinch edge to seal. Round loaf by rolling against board making a loaf about 12 inches long, 3 inches wide. Place on greased baking sheet and brush with oil. Cover and let rise until doubled, about 1 hour. Set baking sheet on a second one. Bake below oven center in 350 F. oven about 45 to 50 minutes, until baked through and browned. If loaf begins to brown deeply, cover lightly with a sheet of foil after loaf is about half baked. Slide off onto wire rack to cool. Makes 1 loaf.

Tempeh — Newcomer from Indonesia

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

Tempeh, a tasteful Indonesian soyfood is a source of vitamin B12.

Among vegetarians who eat neither dairy products nor eggs, getting enough vitamin B12 in the diet is a matter of serious concern. Although it is needed in only very small amounts, B12 is extremely important.

Once thought to occur only in foods of animal origin (including all dairy products) recent research indicates that tempeh, a soy-based food of Indonesian origin, may contain significant amounts of vitamin B12.

According to research conducted by Dr. Keith Steinkraus, an experimental scientist at the New York state Agricultural Experimental Station at Cornell University, tempeh contains approximately 0.5mcgs. of vitamin B12 per 100 grams (three and one-half ounces) of food.

Although this small amount of the precious vitamin is still lower than the recommended daily allowance for an adult, the finding is nevertheless significant in that it establishes the presence of a needed nutrient once thought to occur only in foods of animal origin.

Tempeh is also a good source of non-animal protein. Ounce for ounce, tempeh contains about three-fourths as muchprotein as hamburger.

Although the food is still a newcomer to the United States (it was introduced here fewer than 10 years ago), it has been receiving an enthusiastic response from prominent people in the health food community. Among its ardent supporters is Margaret Nofziger, chief nutritionist at The Farm, a vegetarian community of more than 1,200 people in Tennessee.

Margaret, who has been experimenting with tempeh almost since its introduction, has just written a book on tempeh which will be published this fall. She has graciously agreed to share some of her recipes with us for this column.

CREAMED TEMPEH AND MUSHROOMS

10 oz. fresh muchrooms, washed and sliced
1 lb. tempeh, cut up in small pieces (like thick matchsticks.

7 cups soy milk
One and one-half tbps. flour
1 tbsp. salt
Black pepper
Parsley
Oil

Fry up onions. Add mushrooms and tempeh and fry for a few minutes. Blend or mix together remaining ingredients and add. Bring just to a boil and simmer, covered, 15-20 minutes. Stir occasionally.

CURRIED TEMPEH WITH FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

6 stalks celery, sliced
1 tsp. ginger root, minced (optional)
2 tbsps. curry powder
1 lb. tempeh, cut in long, thin strips
2 apples, cut in small pieces
One and one-half tbsps. sesame seeds (ground)
One-fourth cup soy sauce
One-fourth cup raisins
One-half cup water
2 tsps. cornstarch
Oil

Stir-fry onions and tempeh in oil until half-cooked. Don't be concerned with getting the tempeh evenly browned. Add celery, ginger, curry. Cook for a few minutes. Add apples, raisins, soy sauce, sesame seeds. Cook a little longer. Mix the cornstarch and water together, add to rest of ingredients. Stir around. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes on low heat, checking occasionally. Serves 4.

Math whiz chose career as restaurateur

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

One would think anyone brilliant enough to win a scholarship in mathematics at Britain's Cambridge University at age 13 would seek a career as an academician.

Michael Wharton did set his sights for the prestigious British Foreign Office, but all that changed when he came to America at the age of 20 and got a temporary job at Sherman Billingsley's famed Stork Club. Eventually innkeeping became a career.

Before long Wharton had worked up to assistant maitre d' at the Stork and became fascinated with the restaurant business. Today he is owner of Oliver's, a New York restaurant named after his young son. It goes in for English specialties as well as American dishes.

Wharton doesn't seem unhappy with his choice of career. "One of my boyhood chums is a member of Parliament, and another heads the language department at Cambridge, but I enjoy what I'm doing," he said.

One distinction of Oliver's is the fact that the waitresses are virtually all unemployed actresses whose main aim is to go before the footlights again.

"If they could think of nothing except roast beef and French fries, who would need them?" asked Wharton, whose own tall, tweedy figure would look well on the stage.

Wharton has strong views on food and this includes a pretty low opinion of nouvelle cuisine, which he says is too time-consuming to prepare and too expensive.

"Today people insist on their money's worth," he said. "I find the diet trend turning from red meat to chicken and fish. In fact we only sell half as many beef ribs as we did a year ago."

4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 quart milk, scalded
1½ cups tomato puree
1 quart fish stock
2 tablespoons medium sherry
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
4 ounces diced lobster meat
½ cup heavy cream

In medium kettle, melt butter, stir in flour, gradually blend in scalded milk. Cook, stirring till slightly thickened. Add tomato puree,heated fish stock, sherry, Worcestershire, salt, pepper and diced lobster meat. Heat to boiling, add heavy cream and serve. Serves 6-8 persons.

A big auction of wine

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

ST. HELENA — The Napa Valley Wine Auction descended upon this agricultural community like a typhoon.

Wine collectors, merchants and the purely curious showed up despite stifling heat to see what would happen.

Urbane London auctioneer Michael Broadbent kicked things off under a huge tent on a lawn at the Meadowood Country Club.

The tone of the day was set with the first bottle put up for sale. The 1937 Beringer Cabernet Sauvignon was estimated by the winery to be worth $165. Marvin Shanken, owner of The Wine Spectator newspaper and the trade journal Impact, won it for $400.

Expensive, yes, but consider: from now on, Shanken will be known as the first person to buy a bottle of wine at the first Napa Valley Wine Auction.

Which presumes, of course, there will be a second and succeeding auctions. From the enthuasiasm of the bidders, and the fact that the sale was for charity, a second auction will surely be held.

It was fun to see a jeroboam of Chappellet's 1969 Cabernet Sauvignon sell for $6,000, a case of '69 Heitz Martha's Vineyard Cabernet sell for $2,100, a case of '70 Mayacamas Cabernet draw $3,000.

But the wine that drew the most interest was the joint-venture wine of Robert Mondavi and Baron Philippe de Rothschild, owner of Chateau Mouton-Rothschild.

The first case of this heralded wine produced spirited bidding, and finally Charles Mara, owner of Green Hills Liquor Supermarket in Syracuse, won the case for a record $24,000 — $2,000 per bottle, a record for a single bottle of California wine.

Though succeeding lots sold for less, Mara had the publicity he wanted. The 20-case barrel of wine sold for a total of $68,200, helping make the Mondavi winery total sale $102,850.

That alone was proof that California wine has arrived as a FINANCIAL force. In all, some $300,000 in wine was sold.

This auction was not intended as a slap at the Heublein auction, which has not accepted wines from active California wineries other than those Heublein owns — Inglenook and Beaulieu vineyards. However, some wineries have been upset at Heublein's policy keeping them out. That policy was affirmed recently in a press release from Vintage magazine.

Hank Rubin, Vintage's managing editor and a former restaurateur, says he sold BV and Inglenook wines from his collection through the Heublein auction in the past, but other wines, "@such as those from Sebastiani, Martini, Charles Krug, were refused because, I was informed, it was contrary to company policy to handle them."

But Heublein has rejoined the Napa Valley Vintners Association, which sponsored the auction, so Inglenook and BV may be in next year's auction here. And, Heublein has indicated other California wineries may be included in its 1982 auction.

From a barrel tasting here, a few notes on impressive, unreleased offerings: 1979 Carneros Creek Pinot Noir: Ripe, earthy tones, lush fruit, a worthy successor to Frank Mahoney's classic '77 and '78. Trefethen Chardonnay, 1980: Unlike some '80 Chardonnays, this appears dry and intensely fruity. Niebaum-Coppola Cabernet Sauvignon, 1979: Francis Ford Coppola's first wine, made by Russ Turner, is impressive, French in style with green-herbal-olive aroma.

Diet may be solution

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I am one of those people who suffer with a lot of headaches. I have been to many doctors and nothing helps. All I get is a pain reliever and more headaches. Sometimes they are so bad I can't work and it costs me a lot of money.

Do you know of a diet that would help? What causes migraines. — Mrs. B.W., Mass.

Dear Mrs. B.W.: There are many causes of headaches, and people react differently to them. There is no specific diet to prevent or relieve headaches, but I do have some suggestions that I hope will help you. The most common causes of headaches are tension, depression, eye problems, excessive light and noise, foods and alcohol.

Try to identify what triggers your headache by writing down all your foods, beverages and activities for a few weeks. Note kinds and amounts of everything you eat or drink, when a headache occurs, how long it lasts and its severity. After a few weeks, you may notice a pattern emerging. A migraine headache is more intense, lasts longer and is not easily relieved with aspirin. Medical care is recommended for acute, prolonged problems.

Certain foods are more apt to cause headaches in some people — salty foods, MSG (monosodium glutamate) preserved meats, wine, beer, liquor, exotic cheese, excess coffee, tea, and colas. I suggest a diet that is low in salt, low in heavy meats, like steak, high in fruits and vegetables, some cereals, breads and bland cheeses, low-fat milk and two to three eggs per week. Eat fish and chicken as you wish, but avoid frying. The following tips may help you:

1. Don't get too hungry. Smaller, frequent meals may be more soothing than three big ones.
2. Get your eyes checked and wear tinted sunglassses in direct sunlight.
3. Avoid all MSG and do not add salt to foods.
4. Drink plenty of water, especially in the summer. Don't become dehydrated.
5. Watch the liquor. Sweet drinks may be better than wine, beer or straight hard liquor, but avoid any alcohol if it concides with the onset of a headache.
6. Try to pinpoint any tension areas in your life. Exercise is a great way to reduce tension.
7. Check any medications you are taking. Some may contain sodium that could contribute to water retention headaches.
8. Do you get enough rest?
9. Check your home and work areas for excessive noise. Take every step to reduce it as much as possible.
10. Avoid cigarette smoke. Nicotine tends to constrict blood vessels.
11. A hot shower and soft music helps relieve headaches.
12. Over-the-counter anti-histamines, aspirin, Tylenol, and diuretics that do not contain sodium may be helpful. Ask your doctor or pharmacist to recommend some for you.

Dear Shirley: I read somewhere that wheat bran has some kind of acid in it. What is it? Can it make you sick? I have been taking bran to help constipation. Should I stop taking it? I really need it. — Mrs. K.B., Iowa

Dear Mrs. K.B.: You probably heard about phytic acid that is in wheat bran. It causes calcium, iron and zinc in other foods to become insoluble and not absorbed by the body, so excessive amounts in a strict vegetarian diet could cause a deficiency of those minerals.

Mmm—peach palate pleasers

Ahh, summer. Ahh, peaches. What can possibly please the palate more than a bite of a fresh juicy peach? Sweet and succulent, the aroma and taste of a soft golden peach has to be one of summer's greatest pleasures.

Now while the season's here, enjoy their plentiful parade of varieties through September and into October. More than 130 types, many of them developed during the past decade, include such early mid-season varieties as June Lady, Flavorcrest and Coronet progressing on to the well-known Fay Elberta, Fayette (a younger relative) and the Rio Oso Gem.

Fortunately, peach lovers can savor their marvelous flavor well into October with such late prominent varieties as the O'Henry, a relatively new, highly colored peach that enjoys exceptional demand. Or how about a Carnival or Halloween, so named because its season extends into October.

Put some of these varieties to the test and try them in such recipes as Butterscotch Peach Pie, the Frosty Peach Mousse or the Fresh Peach Buttermilk Sherbert.

A purist might feel that anything done to a mouth watering fresh peach is gilding the lily. And though he certainly has a point, when the gilding is peach palate pleasers like these, who can possibly resist?

BUTTERSCOTCH PEACH PIE

pastry for 2-crust, 9-inch pie
3 lbs. fresh peaches, peeled and sliced
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tblsp. flour
2 tsp. lemon juice
6 tblsp. melted butter
½ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. almond extract

On lightly floured board roll out two circles of pastry. Fit one in bottom of a 9-inch pie plate. Arrange peaches (there should be about 6 cups) in pie shell. In small bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Sprinkle over peaches. Top with remaining crust, crimp edges and slash top for steam to escape.

Bake in 450 degree oven 15 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degress and bake 35 to 40 minutes more, or until golden. Serve warm or cold. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Curry Dressing: Blend ½ cup mayonnaise with 1 tablespoon milk. Stir in ¼ to ½ teaspoon curry, ⅛ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon lemon juice. Makes about ½ cup dressing.

FRESH PEACH BUTTERMILK SHERBERT

1 lb. fresh peaches, pitted and sliced
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1-1½ tblsp. lemon juice
¾ tsp. grated lemon peel
½ tblsp. vanilla
Dash salt
2 cups buttermilk

In blender, puree peach slices with remaining ingredients except buttermilk. Stir in buttermilk. Churn freeze in hand crank or electric ice cream maker following manufacturer's instructions. Store tightly covered in freezer. Makes about 5 cups sherbert.

DELLA ROBBIA PEACH SANGRIA

2 lbs. fresh peaches (about 6 medium), unpeeled
1 lime, thinly sliced
3 cups orange jucie
1 tblsp. lime juice
¼ cup sugar
1 fifth red wine
1 orange, sliced
2 bottles (10 ounces each) soda water, chilled

Into 1-1½ quart ring mold, slice three peaches. Add half of the lime slices; pour in orange and lime juice. Freeze. Into pitcher, slice remaining peaches. Add sugar, wine, orange slices and remaining lime slices; stir until sugar is dissolved. Marinate in refrigerator two hours or overnight. Just before serving, dip ice ring in warm water to loosen; unmold into punch bowl. Add peach-wine mixture. Slowly add soda water. Let stand 15 minutes to develop flavors. Ladle sangria and fruit into punch cups. Garnish with lime slices, if desired. Makes about 12 servings.

Non-alcoholic version: Substitute diluted red fruite punch for wine and omit sugar.

FROSTY PEACH MOUSSE WITH MELBA SAUCE

1 lb. fresh peaches, sliced (about 3 medium)
½ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup plain yogurt, stirred
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
Melba sauce

Puree peach slices in blender with sugar and egg. Stir mixture into yogurt, then fold in whipped cream. Pour into 2-quart freezer-proof mold. Cover with plastic wrap; freeze firm. Remove from freezer ½ hour before serving. Dip mold quckly into warm water; unmold onto serving plate. Spoon some of the Melba Sauce over mousse. Pass remaining sauce in small bowl. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Melba sauce: Defrost and puree two 10-ounce packages frozen red raspberries with sugar syrup. Combine in saucepan with 1 tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in 1 tablespoon water. Cook over medium heat, stirring, until sauce is clear and thickened. Strain; stir in 2 tablespoons kirsch and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Chill. Makes about 1-1½ cups sauce.

SWISS ALPINE PEACH SAUCE

3 lbs. fresh peaches (8 to 9 medium)
2 cups water
2 cups sugar
3 tblsp. cornstarch
2 tblsp. lemon juice
1 tblsp. kirsch or other fruit liqueur (optional)
Dash salt

Peel peaches: immerse in boiling water for about 30 seconds; with slotted spoon transfer to cold water. Slip off skins. Halve and pit. To keep from darkening, dip in solution of 1 tablespoon each salt and vinegar to 2 quarts water. Drain at once; set aside.

In saucepan, bring water and sugar to boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Simmer 15 minutes. In small bowl, dissolve cornstarch in ¼ cup water. Add gradually to sugar syrup, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until sauce is thick and clear. Stir in remaining ingredients. Slice and add peaches. Bring to boil; then remove at once from heat. Cool.

Pour into freezer containers or jars leaving 1 inch headspace. Adjust covers or lids; freeze. To serve: remove from freezer; let stand at room temperature just until slightly thawed. Serve as topping over warm cake, pudding or ice cream. Makes about 1-1½ quarts.

Variation: To cooled peach mixture, add 1 cup halved fresh strawberries.

THE BUTCHER

A reassuring report on what's in a hot dog

By MERLE ELLIS

July is "National Hot Dog Month," according to proclamation by the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council, and is a good time to look at what goes into one of my favorite foods.

No meat product in the world is more maligned or receives more unjust bad publicity than the all-American hot dog. Most of the criticism, according to a recent survey conducted by the Council, stems from consumer concerns for the parts of the animal used to make hot dogs — "all that stuff they put into them."

Pick up a package of hot dogs — any package, any brand — and read the list of ingredients on the label. "All that stuff they put in them" is listed on the label — it has to be, according to law.

The first thing listed will be the main source of what is called the "meat block." In most hot dogs, the meat block is a combination of beef and pork; in some cases, beef, pork and veal.

Unless the label specifies "With Variety Meats" or "With By-products," the meat used in the formulation is limited to skeletal meat. Obviously, they don't use the loins, ribs, rounds and chucks from Choice grade beef carcasses to make hot dogs. The finished product would exceed the fat content limitation if they did — and the hot dogs would cost a fortune.

They do, however, use the full carcasses of more mature bulls and cows. "Full carcass" means there are a top and bottom round, a chuck, a loin and a rib for each flank and plate. Other cuts of meat used are beef chucks, plates, shank meat and pork blade meat, picnic trimmings, cheeks and jowls. Some of the meats used are fatter than others. Bull meat, for example, is 90 percent lean meat, while pork trimmings can have as little as 12 percent lean.

The finished hot dog, however, can not exceed 30 percent fat content, which is no greater than that of hamburger and a lot less than many meats we put on our tables.

The next thing on the label will likely be water. The USDA allows 10 percent added water in the process of making hot dogs. Since the meats are run through grinders and choppers with high-speed blades, heat is generated within the mixture being processed. Water in the form of shaved ice is added to keep the meat at a proper temperature. Small amounts of water also are used to dissolve curing ingredients and facilitate the even distribution of spices.

Salt normally is the next thing listed. It is one of the most important ingredients in hot dog making. Without it, the meat would "bind" and a hot dog would have the texture of a hamburger. The amount normally used is 2.4 percent, although there currently are no regulations limiting the amount.

The next ingredient probably will be corn syrup and/or dextrose. Regulations limit the use of corn syrup to 2-and-a-half percent liquid or 2 percent dry. While there are no regulations limiting the use of dextrose, the norm is between 1 and 2 percent.

Flavoring will be the next ingredient and can vary, depending on the recipe. The standards for hot dogs usually include mustard, white pepper, coriander, nutmeg, cardamom and paprika.

Sodium ascorbate or sodium erythorbate probably will come next. Sodium ascorbate is better known as a form of vitamin C. Its use is not required in sausage products, but it performs the very important function of protecting the pinkish color normal to hot dogs. At present, its use is restricted by inspection regulations to 7/8 of an ounce per 100 pounds of meat.

Sodium erythorbate is another form of sodium ascorbate, except that it has no vitamin C. Its use also is limited to 7/8 of an ounce per 100 pounds of meat.

Finally, the hot dog label will list sodium nitrite. The nitrite levels in hot dogs have been reduced voluntarily by the industry and today the standard is an almost infinitesimal 100 parts per million.

Don't be turned off to hot dogs by some of the awful things you hear about them and what goes into them. They are a good, wholesome product. They don't have as much protein as a piece of beef jerky and they do have more fat, but they taste a lot better on a bun with mustard.

A dessert

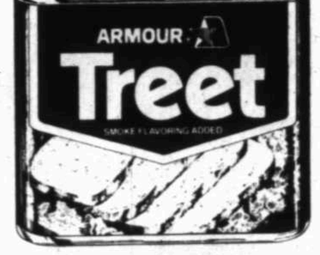

COCOA MOUNDS

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
½ cup butter
1-3rd cup sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
⅓ cup chopped (medium fine) walnuts
2 tablespoons sweet cocoa mix

Stir together the flour and cocoa. With an electric beater, cream the butter, sugar and vanilla; gradually, at low speed, beat in the flour-cocoa mixture until blended. With a spoon, stir in the walnuts. (If necessary, cover tightly and chill until firm enough to handle.) Using 1 tablespoon for each, shape into balls; place about an inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until set looking and lightly browned — 12 minutes. Let stand before removing with a wide metal spatula to wire rack to cool completely. Roll in the sweet cocoa mix.
