Russian hardliners surrender

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Army tanks blasted holes in the parliament building just after dawn today and commandos stormed inside through smoke and flame to crush an armed challenge by hard-liners opposed to President Boris Yeltsin. Hundreds surrendered, but sporadic gunfire persisted after sundown.

The hard-liners' leaders — Vice President Alexander Rutskoi and parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov — were in custody, Yeltsin aide Dmitri Rurikov told CNN.

What appeared to be a crucial victory for Yeltsin in the fight for political control in Russia came with a high price. Soldiers piled dozens of bodies outside the building after the nearly 10-hour battle, which climaxed the worst political violence in Moscow since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

Hundreds of lawmakers and supporters, hands on their heads, filed out of the burning building and were ushered by troops onto waiting buses in late afternoon. Gunfire erupted several times during the surrender, scattering crowds of onlookers outside the white marble building known as the Russian White House.

After nightfall, snipers periodically shot glowing tracer bullets from the White House and neighboring buildings, indicating some parliament supporters were holding out.

Vladimir Polyakov, spokesman for Yeltsin's chief of staff Sergei Filatov, said hard-line lawmakers themselves had capitulated.

As convoys of tanks and other army vehicles moved into the area after dark, fire raged along much of an upper floor of the shattered parliament building. Orange flames flared from windows elsewhere in the 19-story structure.

The government's assault came in response to Sunday's violent attempt by the hard-liners to seize some government buildings and topple Yeltsin. The sides have been at bitter odds since Yeltsin ordered parliament dissolved two weeks ago and set early elections for December.

Leaders of parliament had barricaded themselves in the White House with armed supporters, challenging Yeltsin's effort to establish himself as the supreme authority in restructuring Russia. The parliament, which was elected before the Soviet collapse and was dominated by Communists, tried to hinder his reforms.

The army's assault opened about 7 a.m., flames spitting from the barrels of T-72 tanks as they pounded the White House. Papers fluttered from the shattered windows, followed by heavy black smoke. Machine guns blasted from a neighboring hotel and apartment house.

The parliament's defenders threw firebombs and fired back from the barricaded building as well as from the nearby mayor's office they captured Sunday.

No accurate casualty count was available. Yeltsin's military adviser, Gen. Dmitry Volkogonov, initially told reporters that up to 500 might have been killed inside the White House, but stressed "that's not confirmed." Government officials later said that estimate was too high.

The attack came after anti-Yeltsin forces overwhelmed police lines surrounding the parliament Sunday and then captured the mayor's office. Supporters of parliament leaders also tried to take the state television complex, battling troops for hours overnight.

Yeltsin's forces ceased fire at noon to give parliament members a chance to surrender. About 72 people, mainly women, came out with their hands up, government officials said.

Yeltsin's defense minister, Pavel Grachev, arrived later in a limousine to negotiate on a bridge over the Moscow River with a group of hard-liners who came out of the White House waving a white flag.

Russian TV said Grachev handed the parliament supporters a piece of paper that was believed to be an ultimatum to give up or face destruction.

"The time for talks is over," Yeltsin spokesman Anatoly Krasikov told The Associated Press earlier. "Now the only thing they can do is to hang out the white flag."

One final barrage of heavy gunfire briefly raked the parliament building after the talks. Hard-liners then began filing out.

Hundreds of spectators, some holding children by the hand, watched the battle and surrender from a bridge and nearby streets. They ignored attempts by soldiers to wave them back out of danger.

An 11 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew was imposed throughout the capital. Police said 5,000 men also would patrol the streets and check vehicles at random for weapons.

Yeltsin had promised not to use force to end the standoff with lawmakers who defied his Sept. 21 decree dissolving parliament and calling new elections. He changed his mind after Russia's long political crisis exploded into riots by parliament supporters Sunday.

12 more U.S. soldiers killed in Somalia

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 12 U.S. Army soldiers died, 75 were wounded and "a small number" were feared taken captive in Somalia as U.N. forces attempted to destroy the command structure of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, Pentagon officials said today.

As the battle raged in the streets of Mogadishu, the Pentagon prepared to send about 200 infantrymen, bolstered by tanks and armored vehicles, to bolster the U.S. forces battered in the latest round of fighting, other officials said.

Two senior Pentagon officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said reports indicate at least 12 U.S. soldiers have been killed in the recent fighting in Mogadishu and that 75 have been wounded.

"It could go higher," one of the officials said of the death toll.

The Pentagon officials said they could not verify reports that about seven U.S. Army Rangers had been taken hostage by Aidid's forces.

"We think it's a small number. We think very few have been captured, but we can't be sure they're not still out there and just haven't reported back," the second senior official said. "It's possible, however, that they're not alive."

The second official said the decision to deploy new forces from the United States had been made given the high number of injured in the latest outbreak of violence.

"They are being sent to reinforce the QRF," the official said, referring to the Quick Reaction Force that has been fighting alongside U.N. forces in the push against Aidid.

The troops are expected to be sent from the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), located at Fort Stewart, Ga., said two Pentagon officials, both of whom spoke on condition of anonymity.

"We're sending in the heavy armor," said one of the officials.

The forces were expected to begin preparations today for movement from Hunter Army Airfield near Fort Stewart, and be flown to Somalia aboard C-5A transport planes.

The troops were expected to take at least four of the Army's top-of-the-line tanks, the M1-A1s, which will be specially outfitted with mine plows.

As well, they will also take about one dozen Bradley Fighting Vehicles, which are armored troop transports.

The official explained that such heavy weaponry hasn't been available to the U.S. forces on the ground in Somalia since the Marines left.

The deployment preparations came as chief U.N. military spokesman David Stockwell confirmed that some U.S. troops are unaccounted for after the latest round of fighting in Mogadishu.

"We acknowledge that there are some U.S. soldiers missing," he said, referring to reports that some U.S. servicemen had been taken prisoner by Aidid's forces.

"We don't know their status at this time. We can't confirm if they are dead or alive," Stockwell's comments, made at a briefing in Mogadishu, were monitored at the Pentagon by reporters.

Stockwell said that if the Americans are being held by the Aidid militia, they should be given food and adequate medical treatment.

New fighting erupted today in Somalia on the second day of a major U.N. assault aimed at shattering Aidid's military command structure.

The new developments came as President Clinton, speaking in San Francisco, said the United States must not waver from its commitment to help erase "brutality and anarchy" in the East African country.

Upon his arrival Sunday at McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento after a flight from Washington, Clinton called for support for "the brave men and women in our armed forces, including those in Somalia today who lost their lives in a very successful mission against brutality and anarchy."

He said the events in Somalia prove again "that we still live in a dangerous world."

"The U.S. supports the mission of the United Nations in Somalia," the president said in a statement issued by the White House. He said the goal is to bring political stability to the country so chaos and starvation do not return when international troops leave.

Clinton's statement expressed sympathy to the families of the slain servicemen.

"These brave Americans were engaged in a vital humanitarian mission, to prevent recurrence of mass deaths that resulted from the anarchy and starvation in Somalia," he said.

Some lawmakers want U.S. soldiers out of Somalia because hit-and-run attacks by Aidid loyalists are targeting Americans. Critics note the role of the U.N. force has turned away from providing humanitarian aid to hunting down Aidid.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Jim Bishop checks the Pontiac Grand Am involved in a two-car collision Sunday evening at the Price Road and Alcock intersection.

Five injured in two-car collision

An 84-year-old Pampa man was listed in satisfactory condition at a hospital in Amarillo this morning after a two-vehicle accident at Price Road and Alcock on Sunday evening that left five people injured.

The patient, Marrison Watson, 2118 N. Banks, was taken to Coronado Hospital and transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo and later to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

Watson was driving eastbound in a Ford at about 7 p.m. Sunday when his car collided with a westbound Pontiac driven by Marcia Frazier, 40, Borger, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Frazier was taken to Coronado Hospital, where she was reported in stable condition this morning.

A citation was issued to Watson for failure to yield the right of way in turning left, said DPS Trooper Jim Bishop, who investigated the accident.

Three passengers in the car driven by Frazier — Jeremy Frazier, 16, Borger; Brian Frazier, 12, Borger; and Delvin Lemans, 36, Texhoma, Okla. — were taken to Coronado Hospital, where they were reportedly treated and released.

Both vehicles involved in the accident were heavily damaged, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

The impact of the collision was so strong that the Ford driven by Frazier landed in a weed-covered lot northeast of the intersection of Price Road and Alcock.

Three units of American Medical Transport ambulances were dispatched to the scene, as were three units from the Pampa Fire Department.

Hundreds line Hobart to stand against abortion

Representatives from 15 churches took to the streets in Pampa Sunday under blue skies and in 70 degree temperatures in a stand against abortion.

Over 500 demonstrators lined both sides of North Hobart Street for an hour Sunday afternoon holding signs protesting abortion.

The lines of demonstrators — men, women and children — stretched along Hobart from Red Deer Creek to near the intersection of Hobart and 18th from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday as part of a nationwide demonstration called Life Chain '93.

"This is being done all over the nation from 2:30 to 3:30," said Shiree Hendrick, a volunteer worker from the First Baptist Church. "I don't know why we're doing it from 2 to 3."

Pro-life activists in Amarillo, Wheeler, Miami, Borger and Shamrock demonstrated Sunday, according to Pampa Life Chain '93 coordinator Marcia Hoover.

"People are doing this all across the U.S., Australia and Canada," she said. "They expect 300,000 people to participate. Last year, there were 97,000."

In Pampa last year, more than 500 people took part in the protest. Hoover reported that 580 participated this year. This was the second year for the demonstration, she said.

"Its purpose is to take a stand against abortion," she said. "We have volunteers from different churches."

Among the churches represented along the street were the First Baptist Church, Mary Ellen Church of Christ, Central Baptist Church, Church of the Nazarene, Highland Pentacostal Holiness Church, Calvary Baptist Church, Briarwood Church, Zion Lutheran Church, Hobart Baptist Church, Trinity Fellowship Church, Highland Christian Church, St. Vincent De Paul Catholic Church, Grace Baptist Church, Bible Church of Pampa and New Life Assembly of God.

"We got a pretty good response from most of the churches," Hendrick said. "People here have been real positive."

Riot quelled in Childress prison

CHILDRESS (AP) — Eleven prison inmates remained hospitalized today after law officers and guards used tear gas to quell a weekend disturbance at a minimum-security facility.

Authorities say four inmates were at Amarillo hospitals for treatment of severe head wounds.

Seven inmates who suffered lacerations remained in satisfactory condition at Childress Regional Medical Center, said administrator Frances Smith.

Fourteen inmates had been treated at the Childress hospital Sunday night, she said.

Prison system spokesman Charles Brown said the disturbance at the T.L. Roach Unit broke out among 250 to 300 inmates.

"It broke out in the recreation area," said spokesman David Nunnelee. "It was primarily a confrontation between black and Hispanic inmates."

Nunnelee said inmates broke up a laundry cart and chairs and used the boards to inflict damage.

Brown told The Amarillo Daily News that inmates were returned to their cells starting at about 10:30 p.m. Sunday.

In December 1991, several fights broke out at the prison between minority inmates. Prison officials said they confined inmates to their cells for about a week.

Officials said at that time that 18 inmates were involved in the violence and were ultimately transferred to maximum-security units around the state.

The prison is a 1,000-bed unit.

Well water site back in park

The location for the free water pick-up station will be changing back to its original site as construction is scheduled to continue on the city's remaining water pumping facilities.

Beginning today, Pampa residents who have picked up water from the city at pump station #3, located on South Barnes Street, will now have to return to picking the water up at Pump Station #2, located at Hobart Street Park.

Pump Station #3 will soon be under the same type of construction that was recently finished on Pump Station #2. The construction plans call for the sand-blasting and re-finishing of the two huge holding tanks.

For questions or comments, contact the city's water treatment plant at 669-5830.

State back in court on school finance

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — A state judge today narrowed the focus of a trial over the state's new school finance law.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown said he would limit arguments of a trial that opened today to the legality of the way the state funds its schools.

That would put off for a separate trial the question of whether more money is needed for public schools and whether the state should be forced to pay for the programs it requires schools to provide.

The current case involves a challenge by poor school districts to the way about $7 billion in annual state aid is distributed under the newest finance law. Local taxes contribute another $8 billion-plus to the system.

The trial also includes arguments by wealthy school districts against the structure of the funding law and arguments that the state relies too heavily on local property taxes.

McCown said he would decide at the conclusion of the first trial whether the second trial would begin quickly or "at a more distant time."

The fact that property-rich and poor school districts are challenging Texas lawmakers' latest effort to reform education funding may be a good sign, quipped Texas Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter.

"They say when you make everybody unhappy, you've got the right solution," Ms. Hunter said.

The trial is the third round in the courthouse for officials trying to meet a 1989 Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth. Schools rely primarily on state aid and local property tax money.

Two other reform laws passed since the 1989 decision have been ruled unconstitutional: one on a challenge led by poor districts, the other by property-rich ones.

This time, both have gone to court. "I think we're all tired," said Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center, a group of property-poor schools involved in the long-running court fight for equity.

But not tired enough to give up what's been called "a life and death struggle" by lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Compared to the funding system used last school year, about $165 million in state money is shifted from poorer to richer school districts, according to lawyers for the poor districts.

The law decreases the state's basic per-student funding grant, and it changes and limits state matching funds that are based on local tax rates.

Districts with a poor property tax base say it's unfair to cut allotments across the board because they require much higher local tax rates to try to make up the difference.

The law would leave at least a $600 gap per student in funding between rich and poor school districts, say poor districts, who add that it virtually ignores classroom construction funding needs.

Wealthy districts also are unhappy with the law, which is meant to ensure none of the state's 1,048 school districts has property wealth of more than $280,000 per student. Previously, values have ranged from more than $4 million to less than $10,000.

Gen. Joulwan named to take over as NATO chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton today appointed Gen. George A. Joulwan, commander of U.S. forces in Latin America, to be the top NATO commander in Europe.

A Pentagon announcement today said the NATO member countries already had approved the choice.

The appointment cleared the way for Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, the current Supreme Allied Commander Europe, to be confirmed by the Senate as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, had insisted that Shalikashvili's replacement be named before the Senate confirmed Shalikashvili as Joint Chiefs chairman.

Shalikashvili sailed through his confirmation hearing two weeks ago but returned to his NATO post at Mons, Belgium, to await Clinton's decision on who would replace him there. Juhl'-wahn.

Joulwan (pronounced Jahl'-win), 53, a Pottsville, Pa., native, is commander in chief of the U.S. Southern Command, based at Quarry Heights, Panama. He has extensive experience in Europe.

The post of Supreme Allied Commander Europe has always been held by an American.

Joulwan also will hold the title of Commander in Chief, U.S. European Command, in charge of all American forces assigned to the European theater, which includes Europe, Israel and parts of Africa.

Joulwan, an infantryman by training, served as commander of the Army's 3rd Armored Division in Germany in 1988-89 and then became commander of V Corps in Europe. He also had been chief of staff at the 3rd Infantry Division in Europe and was deputy chief of staff for operations for the U.S. Seventh Army in Europe.

In 1973-74 he was a special assistant to the president in the Nixon White House.

He is a 1961 West Point graduate. Joulwan had two combat tours in Vietnam.

Joulwan has commanded U.S. forces in Latin America since November 1990, and he had been considered a leading candidate for the top NATO post. It was reported two weeks ago that Defense Secretary Les Aspin was expected to recommend him to Clinton.

At least 24 people were reported killed Sunday afternoon when the crowds smashed through police lines, stormed the mayor's office and attacked the television complex.

While the storming of the White House could break the hard-line opposition, it also could provide Yeltsin's opponents with martyrs and ruin his reputation as a man of peace.

When Yeltsin stood up to the Communist coup attempt in August 1991, his opponents either balked at storming the White House or were unable to get the military to attack the building, ringed with civilian demonstrators.

But the army struck today with overwhelming force.

Believers, excited by car-fender image of Virgin Mary in South Texas

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

ELSA (AP) — The latest sighting of the Virgin Mary in South Texas, this time on the rear fender of a 1981 Camaro, is a miracle for believers in a humble neighborhood of gravel streets.

"We are very proud that the Virgin visited us," said Aurora Quintero. Miracle seekers came to her home for weeks after her brother told neighbors that the image, less than a foot tall, appeared on a piece of galvanized steel he was riveting to his rusty fender.

"Everyone who comes is friendly. All of them believe in the Virgin," said Mrs. Quintero, 50. "We are not charging or selling anything. We are letting people see the Virgin."

The maroon Camaro has become an attraction for the devout and the curious, as had a Brownsville boarding house where believers saw the Virgin Mary in a cottonwood tree this summer. A few years ago, a similar sighting drew attention to the floor of an auto-parts store in the border town of Progreso.

Many people in the Rio Grande Valley believe such images are signals from God. Many others say they are natural events, made spiritual only through the fervor of the believers.

Although the crowds at the Virgin Mary sightings in this low-income, predominantly Roman Catholic area usually taper off after a few weeks — as they already have at Mrs. Quintero's small but well-kept place — experts say the devotion of believers is very real.

"This is called faith and belief, and it is serious stuff," said anthropology professor Tony Zavaleta, dean of liberal arts at the University of Texas-Brownsville.

"The novelty does wear off," Zavaleta said. "It can start back up. All it would take is a rumor of miracle, a rumor of apparition. It would start the whole process over again."

Mark Glazer, anthropology professor at University of Texas-Pan American, said many Mexicans and Mexican-Americans hold a deep veneration for the Virgin Mary and the Virgin of Guadalupe — the dark-skinned patroness of Mexico.

What's more, Glazer said, many believe such events can signal a miracle to relieve their sorrows.

Apparitions of the Virgin play an important role in the Mexican culture, including the story of the Indian peasant Juan Diego. His vision of the Virgin of Guadalupe in 1531 convinced the Catholic Church to build a shrine in her honor on an old Aztec holy site.

Many Mexicans believe the Virgin of Guadalupe, whose basilica remains a popular pilgrimage site in Mexico City, is the protector of the poor.

Mrs. Quintero has repeated her family's own story to perhaps hundreds of visitors.

Her brother, Dario Mendoza, was working on his car at 9 p.m. of Sept. 8 when he noticed that a black spot grew on the thin strip of galvanized metal. He wasn't using a blow torch or chemicals that could have stained the metal, she said.

The image grew until Mendoza and neighbors became convinced it was the mother of Jesus wearing a hooded robe.

Mrs. Quintero said her brother, a 34-year-old migrant laborer, had planned to take the car to work in Louisiana cotton fields. But he decided to ride with others and leave the car in Elsa with his sister.

She said she believed God sent the image as a message. "There is so much violence. People killing and killing. We think that's why the Virgin appeared," she said in Spanish. "And this colonia is very poor, also. We do not have paved roads or anything."

Maria Luisa Rodrigues, a 75-year-old neighbor in the colonia, or poor neighborhood, north of Elsa, said: "We are very happy and grateful that the Virgin chose this place. We are very poor, but she doesn't distinguish between the rich and the poor. For this we are very grateful, very proud."

The family used donations from neighbors and pilgrims to build a new shelter for the Camaro. Mrs. Quintero called it an "iglesia," or little church, with a concrete floor and plywood walls.

The faithful have adorned the car with flowers, candles, written prayers, and pictures of sick relatives for whom they came to pray.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, which counts four in five Rio Grande Valley residents as adherents, has neither encouraged nor discounted the sightings in Brownsville or Elsa.

"The reason the Church doesn't take a position is because there's no way to really determine: Is it from God or is it from nature?" said Pam Downing, spokeswoman for the diocese.

Mrs. Downing said the Church distinguishes between "public revelations" such as the miracles in the Bible, which clergy say have meaning for all followers, and "private revelations" such as the unconfirmed sightings of the Virgin.

The Church does not teach Catholics to believe in the private revelations of others, she said, but neither does it teach that all such revelations are without merit.

She said a sighting of the Virgin can be positive if it causes people to pray and grow in their faith, but it can be negative if it becomes an obsession or is exploited by merchandisers.

In Brownsville, for example, police chased away people who were selling high-priced T-shirts and snapshots to believers who had gathered around the cottonwood tree.

Warren Buffet vaults to top of Forbes' list of U.S. rich

By PAUL REINHARTSEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He wears rumpled clothes, drives his own car and likes to snack on Cracker Jack. But appearances can be deceiving, especially when it comes to Warren Buffett. The modern-day investment legend nearly doubled his money in the past year to $8.3 billion, earning him the title of richest American.

Buffett vaulted from eighth place on last year's Forbes 400 list to unseat Microsoft's Bill Gates, the magazine reported Sunday. The list appears in the Oct. 18 issue of Forbes.

A passionate investor since his pre-teen days, Buffett parlayed an aging textile firm, Berkshire Hathaway Inc., into a conglomerate with interests ranging from insurance to newspapers to soda pop to shoes. Today, his utterances can move markets.

Berkshire Hathaway is the highest priced issue on the New York Stock Exchange — worth $16,700 a share Friday. The stock was valued at less than $10,000 per share a year ago.

He also defies the stereotype of the mega-rich, preferring Omaha, Neb., to Wall Street. He rarely vacations, lives in a nondescript house and relaxes by watching the Omaha Royals, a minor league baseball team he part-owns.

Buffett, 63, told Forbes a charitable foundation eventually will inherit his accumulated wealth. The magazine reckoned the Buffett estate could be worth $100 billion in another 20 years, dwarfing the legacies of names such as Rockefeller, Ford and Carnegie.

Gates, who at 36 was the youngest person to ever top the list in the 1992 Forbes ranking, slipped to second place this year with an estimated net worth of $6.165 billion, down from $6.3 billion. The founder of the Redmond, Wash.-based Microsoft Corp. makes money from every machine that uses MS-DOS — the world's most widely used computer software.

Entertainment mogul John Kluge also fell back one spot on the list to third. Kluge, of Charlottesville, Va., topped the rankings from 1989-91.

His estimated worth of $5.9 billion was $300 million better than Sumner Murray Redstone, who, at No. 4, was one of only two newcomers to the Top 10. Fellow media magnate Rupert Murdoch was 10th, up from 15th last year.

Five heirs of Wal-Mart stores founder Sam Walton — widow Helen and children S. Robson, John T., Jim C. and Alice L. — held spots five through nine with approximately $4.5 billion each.

Seventy-nine of the Forbes 400 were billionaires, up from 73 in 1992. It took a net worth of at least $300 million to qualify for a 1993 listing, $35 million more than last year.

Other well-known billionaires listed included H. Ross Perot ($2.4 billion) and CBS Chairman Laurence Tisch ($1.3 billion).

California was home to most members, 77, while 57 others resided in New York state. The city of choice for America's rich? New York — where 50 listees reside.

Two ATF officials resign after report on cult raid

DALLAS (AP) — Two top federal agents have resigned following a government report that accused them of lying and misleading the public after the failed Branch Davidian raid.

Dan Hartnett, associate director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and Dan Conroy, deputy associate ATF director, quit Saturday, according to The Dallas Morning News' Sunday editions. They were the top ATF officials in Waco after the Feb. 28 raid.

Hartnett, 53, had been with the ATF for 24 years, and Conroy, 50, was with the agency for 26 years. They were among five ATF officials placed on administrative leave last week after release of a Treasury Department review into the raid. The Treasury Department oversees the ATF.

"We are resigning because we do not agree with the findings of the Waco administrative review," Hartnett and Conroy said in a statement. "The report does not reflect the facts of what occurred in the aftermath of the Waco tragedy."

Four ATF agents and six cult members died in the shootout. A standoff lasted 51 days, ending April 19 when fire consumed the compound, killing Koresh and more than 80 of his followers.

The Treasury report said the raid should have been canceled after an undercover ATF agent told commanders that the Branch Davidians knew the government was coming.

The report said Hartnett, Conroy, and others in Washington failed to take into account the inexperience of raid commanders in planning the assault, and did not recognize the need for less risky contingency plans.

The report also said the men made misstatements to the public or allowed them to be made, and failed to keep superiors fully apprised of key reasons for the raid's failure.

In their first public comment since release of the report, the men said they never lied or intentionally misled anyone. Hartnett and Conroy were unable to be reached Sunday night.

Dick DeGuerin, a Houston attorney who represented Koresh, said Sunday that further investigation was needed.

"Conroy was caught in many lies. He was lying through his teeth and knew he was when he was meeting with the press in Waco," DeGuerin told The Associated Press. "He doesn't have any choice but to turn tail and run."

"I assume there will be referral of findings to the Justice Department and that Justice will treat their misleading statements and testimony as seriously as it would if someone, not a government agent, had lied under oath."

Two religious scholars who analyzed a manuscript Koresh was writing told Newsweek that they believed the cult leader intended to keep his word to authorities and surrender when he had finished the work, according to the magazine.

"I agree wholeheartedly," DeGuerin said. "That is what he put in writing to me."

Hartnett and Conroy said before the Waco operation that they had planned to retire at the end of the year. Their resignations, delivered to Treasury Department officials in Washington, were effective immediately.

Stephen Higgins, the former ATF director, announced his resignation Monday before release of the report.

Another report is being prepared on the FBI's April 19 tear-gas assault on Koresh's compound. That attack, which ended in fire, was ordered by Attorney General Janet Reno and former FBI Director William Sessions.

FBI officials' efforts to understand the Branch Davidians' psychology and religious motivations during the standoff may be among the most critical sections of the report, officials say.

Nancy Ammerman was one of 13 outside experts assisting in the review. Ms. Ammerman, a sociology and religion professor at Princeton, said FBI commanders in Waco didn't seek out recognized religious experts who may have understood Koresh's mindset.

FBI officials also ignored the own behavioral specialists who warned early in the standoff that Koresh was a serious suicide risk, said Ms. Ammerman.

"I think they had a very decent level of understanding, and were passing that information to their superiors," she told The Dallas Morning News. "It then disappeared into the system."

FBI officials have said that their behavioral consultants didn't consider Koresh a suicide risk.

Time magazine, in another report, said that results of a Justice Department study expected this week on the raid will be relatively mild in its criticisms of mid- and lower-level FBI agents for the operation.

"Hopefully, when the tape recordings are released of the listening devices that the FBI had put in there (the compound), we will hear David dictating all that stuff" for the manuscript, said DeGuerin.

Ranks of poverty grow in U.S.

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — Lingering unemployment amid a slow recovery from the recession pushed hundreds of thousands of Americans into poverty last year, analysts say.

The Census Bureau planned today to release poverty and income statistics for 1992, the first full year of the economic recovery and the last year Republicans were in the White House.

In 1991, 35.7 million Americans lived below the poverty line, the highest number since 1964. Altogether, 14.2 percent of the population was poor, the highest rate since 1984.

Robert Greenstein, executive director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a Washington public issues group, projects the 1992 poverty rate was near 15 percent, putting the number of poor near the 1962 level of 38.6 million.

"It's the combined effect of higher unemployment, a sharp increase in long-term unemployment, a continued decline in wages and sharp cuts in a number of states in basic safety-net programs."

Unemployment last year averaged 7.4 percent, higher than the 6.7 percent record in 1991, the year the recession ended.

No winning ticket in Saturday's Lotto

By The Associated Press

No tickets purchased in the latest Lotto Texas correctly matched all six numbers drawn for the twice-weekly game, state lottery officials said Sunday.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 3, 8, 29, 34, 48, 49. The estimated jackpot was worth $10 million.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $17 million if sales continue as expected.

In Saturday's game, 130 tickets were sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,073. Another 7,844 tickets had four of six numbers, with each winning $124.

And there were 163,897 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Sales from Wednesday to Saturday's draw were $10.7 million.

Aspin says decision on top Navy officer could come soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, the Navy's top officer, returned to work today in an awkward limbo as he awaited word from Defense Secretary Les Aspin on whether he will be fired over his handling of the Tailhook sexual harassment scandal.

A Navy official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said that besides the obvious options of firing or retaining Kelso, Aspin was considering a third choice: to keep the admiral on board but give him a letter of "caution."

Kelso is due to retire from the Navy next July.

Aspin said Sunday he was reviewing the facts surrounding the Tailhook incident two years ago at a Las Vegas hotel — and its aftermath — to determine whether to concur with the secretary of the Navy's call for Kelso's resignation. The recommendation to fire Kelso was supposed to have been kept confidential but it was leaked to the news media on Friday and widely reported.

"What we're doing is we're looking at the report of the secretary of the Navy and trying to figure out whether, in fact, we agree with the conclusions," Aspin said Sunday on CBS' Face the Nation.

Aspin said he expected to decide today or Tuesday.

"It's an excellent report, and the report lays out the facts very, very well, very carefully. We're trying to make a judgment here, and it's important, as to whether the conclusion of those facts is the (same) conclusion that the secretary recommended."

Meanwhile, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said any action against Kelso should depend on whether he took part or observed some of the questionable conduct at the Tailhook convention.

"If it's 'captain goes' down with the ship' philosophy, that's another matter," said Nunn on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley.

Kelso, the Navy's top officer as chief of Naval operations, has never been accused of participating in the debauchery in 1991, which included drunken Navy and Marine aviators grabbing and fondling women in a hotel hallway during a convention sponsored by the Tailhook Association, an association of current and retired aircraft carrier pilots.

Navy Secretary John Dalton, in an internal report leaked to the public last week, argued that Kelso failed to show proper leadership in allowing what the Pentagon inspector general has characterized as "an atmosphere of debauchery" at the convention.

Kelso gave a speech at the convention, but repeatedly has denied seeing any of the activity that sparked the outcry.

Dalton, a former banker and a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, reportedly sought Kelso's resignation last Friday, but that the admiral has refused to resign unless asked to do so by Aspin. As chief of naval operations, Kelso is a presidential appointee and a decision would have to be approved by President Clinton.

Kelso, 60, is scheduled to retire next July. More than 40 Navy and Marine officers, including three admirals, have been disciplined and 11 others await court-martial or other inquiries stemming from the Tailhook incident that rocked the Navy and brought renewed focus on its policies toward women.

Amendment could be first step to Texas tax system overhaul

DALLAS (AP) — Texans next month will vote on a constitutional ban on a state income tax. But regardless of the outcome, a state income tax still could eventually become a reality.

"I think it could be a Trojan horse," Richard Ford, who heads Texans Against State Income Taxes, was quoted Sunday in The Dallas Morning News.

If the proposal on the Nov. 2 ballot passes — as many believe it will — the amendment would prohibit the Legislature from implementing an income tax on its own. The Legislature could, however, impose the tax if voters approved it and if it were coupled with a property tax reduction.

Texas is one of only seven states without an income tax, but it levies a dizzying array of other taxes that are among the highest in the nation. Some say they also are among the most unfair.

The publication State Budget and Tax News, in its April 20 issue, ranked Texas 19th in terms of state and local taxes. It used raw Census Bureau data in its analysis, which showed that the average Texan paid $1,757 in taxes in 1991.

The state sales tax of 8.5 percent is the sixth highest in the country. That tax, along with levies on everything ranging from imported cement to sulfur and bingo halls, are what some groups say makes the Texas system so unfair.

The nonpartisan Citizens for Tax Justice ranks Texas among its "Terrible 10." In a 1991 report, the group ranked Texas second behind Washington on a list of "states with the highest taxes on the poor."

"The richest Texans aren't paying anywhere near their fair share," the group's director of tax analysis, Doug Kelly, told The Morning News.

For example, a Texan pays 20 cents' tax on each gallon of gasoline, regardless of how much money that person makes.

Income taxes, on the other hand, are graduated so that the more you make the more you pay.

According to Citizens for Tax

Justice, a Texas family making $10,600 annually paid 17.1 percent of taxes in 1991.

A family earning $35,300 paid only 8.4 percent of its income in state and local taxes, while the wealthiest 1 percent of Texas residents — those earning more than $945,000 a year — paid just 3.1 percent of their income in state and local taxes.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

The time has come to reinvent the U.N.

Last week, just two days after three more American military people were killed in Somalia, President Clinton unveiled his so-called "Clinton Doctrine" before the United Nations in New York. It looked much like his domestic program: More power for government (in this case, the U.N. mega-government) combined with alleged efficiencies through "an effort to literally reinvent how government operates ... Now the time has come to reinvent the way the United Nations operates as well."

Clinton criticized the high cost of U.N. peacekeeping actions and noted, "Yet until recently, if a peacekeeping commander called in from across the globe when it was night time here in New York, there was no one in the peacekeeping office to answer the call. When lives are on line, we cannot let the reach of the U.N. exceed its grasp."

In his call for efficiency, the president insisted, "The United Nations simply cannot become engaged in every one of the world's conflicts. If the American people are to say 'yes' to U.N. peacekeeping, the United Nations must know when to say 'no.' Of course, with Clinton saying "yes" to every domestic big-government scheme on the table — from socialized medicine to environmental over-regulation — he isn't setting much of an example.

The key is that, in return for some tighter controls on how the money is spent, Clinton will turn over to the United Nations more of U.S. taxpayers' money and more of the U.S. military's troops.

Earlier this year, Clinton approved allowing foreign commanders to take charge of U.S. troops. Now he's advancing the ideological framework — the Clinton Doctrine — for such command. After all, if he really were worried about the U.N. command center being closed in New York, he would insist that all U.S. troops remain under the exclusive control of the Pentagon, which never closes.

In addition to the 4,700 U.S. troops stationed as targets in Somalia, Clinton soon could send 25,000 to Bosnia for similar duty, perhaps thousands more to Haiti. But what national interest explains such adventures? Somalia already is a quagmire, and Bosnia and Haiti could become quagmires, with U.S. troops ordered around by foreigners while becoming bogged down in civil wars. Given the potential mischief in Haiti, the Clinton Doctrine amounts to voodoo foreign policy.

Congress should cancel the Clinton Doctrine by cancelling the funds used to support the troops in Somalia, by refusing to fund similar fuzzy-minded escapades in Bosnia and Haiti, and by cutting back funding on the United Nations. U.N. quagmires no longer should lead to U.S. troops coming home in body bags.

All that fuss and bother ...

Bill Clinton looked America in the face on Sept. 22 and said that he was guided in drafting his health plan by six criteria, and that one of these was his search for "simplicity."

Here is The New York Times account of how the Clinton plan would affect one category of Americans:

"Self-employed individuals would pay under a ... formula that treats them like a small business, potentially eligible for subsidies, and an employee. As a contribution toward the employer share — 80 percent of average premium cost — they would pay from 3.5 percent to a maximum of 7.9 percent of business income, depending on income level. They would also pay employee's 20 percent share, or less if family income was below 150 percent of poverty. Combined payments would approach full cost of premium at income of about $30,000. All premium payments would be tax deductible, compared with 25 percent now."

In such fashion, Clintonomics approaches simplicity.

Everyone should stop just long enough to remind ourselves what it is that we are engaged in. It is: redistribution. The irony is that redistribution will be substantially from the middle class to the middle class. The upper-income class is depleted. The poverty class will be looked after by the straitened middle class.

— If all arrangements affecting health were left, so to speak, in a state of nature, then each of us would pay his own health bills.

— But health bills can overwhelm personal finances, even as fires can burn down whole houses. For this reason, the idea of insurance arose. People would pay into a pool every year, and when catastrophe struck, draw out from that pool the price of rebuilding your house or your liver.

— What transpires is that some people cannot afford to pay into that pool. Societies that acknowledge a fraternal concern for those who cannot pay their own way step in to do this for them.

All that was needed, in order to reform the health system, was to devise a way to look after the health bills of the poor. That task does not overburden the imagination. Instead, the big thinkers have come up with alliances, health maintenance organizations, combination plans, fluctuating deductibles, under-the-table subsidies, and distinctions between glasses, eyeglasses and contact lenses. We were only spared, by Hillary, the correct prescription for every malady.

It saddens that bureaucratic antecedents tend to pave the way for the next, and the following generation. Shortly before the president spoke, Mrs. Clinton, exasperated by a questioner, put it this way:

"When Franklin Roosevelt proposed Social Security, he didn't go out selling it with actuarial tables and books of regulations. He basically said, 'Look, here's the deal: You pay in; you're taken care of; you have Social Security in your old age.' If he'd had to have been pressed to the wall saying, 'Well, what about the spouse who didn't work, and what about somebody who only worked 20 quarters instead of 24 quarters' — I mean, we would never have had Social Security."

When jolly old FDR proposed Social Security, the design was to help the indigent when they became old. Accordingly, a levy of 2 percent of one's paycheck, not to exceed $30, was withheld. A generation later, that 2 percent had climbed to 15.3 percent, and the $30 rose to $5,500. And 10 years after the last hike, President Clinton proposed taxing 85 percent of half the proceeds of Social Security for the more affluent (income over $32,000).

Once again, we are engaged in redistribution. Why not call it that, and why not do it directly?

The New York Times writer reports that "Mr. Clinton all but glows with his confidence in government to pull off this extraordinary feat." And another reporter, surveying the impact of the plan on the states, writes, "Mr. Clinton's proposal would open a new chapter in the history of federal-state regulations, placing huge new obligations upon the states to run a social welfare program that would dwarf Social Security in terms of money."

Where the welfarists always make out is in the matter of private calculations. Millions of individuals convince themselves that they are net better off with the state writing the checks for their welfare. And, of course, the statist glow with satisfaction.

There are about 12 percent of Americans whose income is below the poverty level, and to take care of their needs, we are going to reinvent health care.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Oct. 4, the 277th day of 1993. There are 88 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 4, 1957, the Space Age began as the Soviet Union launched Sputnik, the first man-made satellite, into orbit around the Earth.

On this date:
In 1822, the 19th president of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, was born in Delaware, Ohio.

In 1931, the comic strip Dick Tracy, created by Chester Gould, made its debut.

In 1958, the first trans-Atlantic passenger jetliner service was begun by British Overseas Airways Corporation with flights between London and New York.

In 1965, Pope Paul VI became the first reigning pontiff to visit the Western Hemisphere as he addressed the U.N. General Assembly.

In 1970, rock singer Janis Joplin, 27, was found dead in her Hollywood hotel room.

You are denied buried riches

For all the Clinton administration's declarations that our economy must and will be stimulated, oil production in the United States is the least it has been in 35 years — in Texas, the least in 50 years — yet our federal government refuses to allow exploration of offshore waters and of the vast Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska.

Our nation's balance of trade is unbalanced "in their favor" largely because we are importing half of all the oil we are using — while refusing to allow development of enormous reserves of our own.

Ed Murphy of the American Petroleum Institute notes that the same environmentalists who fought the Alaska pipeline are behind this present boycott which we are imposing on ourselves.

They wanted to close Prudhoe Bay in the '70s. Had they succeeded, they would have cost us the $560 billion our country has harvested from that source over the past 16 years.

John Paul Pitts of the Midland, Texas, Reporter-Telegram is a longtime observer of the oil patch. He notes that the North Slope accounts for 25 percent of our nation's total oil production and has been a major factor in controlling world oil prices.

Paul Harvey

An abundant world supply of oil inevitably exerts downward pressure on OPEC prices. This was demonstrated when Iraq recently proposed selling 550,000 barrels a day and that announcement sent oil prices tumbling from $20 a barrel to $17.50.

Pitts says, "America is cutting off its own nose to spite its own oil business."

If Wally Hickel had not been able to shout down misguided environmentalists a generation ago, not only would we be out that $560 billion worth of oil — but also the thousands of jobs generated by that project.

The most President Clinton expects to raise from his new 4.3 cent a gallon gasoline tax will not even come close to the $35 billion a year we receive from Prudhoe.

Inevitably, North Slope oil reserves are shrinking. From 2 million barrels a day in 1988, it's now down to 1.6 million barrels a day.

If government would open up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to carefully controlled exploration, we might discover enough resources to keep us from running on empty until alternative fuels prove viable.

The alternative, very shortly, will be $4 A GALLON GASOLINE.

Ed Murphy says, "Ours is the only nation in the world that does not produce all the oil and gas it can produce; the only nation which is openly hostile to energy exploration and puts its most promising exploration areas off limits."

Paul Harvey was in the vanguard of environmentalism years before it became a business.

When humans become the most endangered species, I backed off just enough to make room for them, too.

Readmit Taiwan to United Nations

In 1971, when the United Nations voted to recognize the People's Republic of China as entitled to China's seats in both the Security Council and the General Assembly, the excuse on everyone's lips was "realism." It simply wasn't realistic, advocates of the change argued, to go on recognizing the (Nationalist) Republic of China, which controlled only Taiwan and some small offshore islands, as the government of the 1 billion people on the Chinese mainland.

So the pro-Peking steamroller barged through the United Nations — which refused, in its zeal to admit the communist regime, even to allow the R.O.C. to retain a seat in the General Assembly, despite the fact that it remained indisputably sovereign on the large and populous (21 million) island of Taiwan.

For a number of years it didn't seem to matter. Especially after Jimmy Carter pulled the rug out from under the R.O.C. in 1979 by "de-recognizing" it and terminating America's security pact with it, it was widely assumed that Taiwan would wither into irrelevance.

But fate has a way of playing tricks, and in the 1980s Taiwan surprised the world by its resilience. Its economy, which had already earned the name "the Taiwan miracle," grew even stronger, and this was followed by a sweeping liberalization of the political system. Today Taiwan is a flourishing democracy and also an economic powerhouse, with the 25th highest per capita income on Earth, the 20th largest gross national product and the second largest foreign exchange holdings of any nation ($85.6 billion). It is the 14th largest global trading partner, and ranks seventh in total overseas investment.

So, if "realism" is the United Nations' watchword, the case for Taiwan's readmission to the General Assembly is unassailable. Small wonder that the government of the Republic of China in Taipei has launched a major diplomatic drive to achieve exactly that. President Lee Teng-hui has called on the international community to "seriously consider the issue within the next three years."

R.O.C. officials know very well that the task ahead of them is an arduous one. But, being Chinese, they also know the old adage that "the longest journey starts with a single step." No doubt the communist regime in Beijing will have hysterics over the prospect of Taiwan's readmission — "realism" be damned.

But there may be ways in which the United Nations could make the bitter pill more palatable: for example, by recognizing that one country (China) has two governments controlling different parts of its national territory — much as North and South Korea do, and as East and West Germany long did. It would thus not be necessary to admit Taiwan as a separate nation (something its Nationalist government has never claimed it is anyway).

Nobody seriously expects that the small nations that dominate the General Assembly (three-quarters have populations smaller than Taiwan's) are likely to want to defy Beijing's rage merely because realism demands the seating of Taiwan. But here is where the United States, and the other major nations that have substantial trade with Taiwan, can be of special help. Will the Clinton administration have the courage and foresight to lead the way?

After all, what Taiwan is asking of the United Nations is only what has already been accorded by such diverse organizations as the Asian Development Bank, the Association of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the international Olympic movement: its recognition as an independent political entity.

In the long run, even the P.R.C. may be brought to realize that its own best interests will be served, not by a blind ideological resistance to change, but by pragmatic policies that recognize political reality. Certainly the foreign investors that Beijing needs so badly are watching and hoping for such a development.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Let son's death be a lesson for those pursuing a dream

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Unsure in Framingham, Mass.," whose fiancée refused to marry him because of the high risk involved in his chosen career as a state trooper.

Our son served four years in the U.S. Army, returning home to become a Pennsylvania state trooper. His wife and we, his parents, feared for him in that hazardous profession, but we accepted it and were very proud of his achievements.

He got to live the life he wanted for just three short years - then while on vacation this summer, he died in a drowning accident.

So, to "Unsure": Follow your dream; you never know how - or when - your life will end.

BEREAVED PARENTS IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR BEREAVED PARENTS: Please accept my heart-felt condolences on the loss of your beloved son. Most people expect to bury their parents eventually, but for a parent to bury a child - of any age - is probably the most painful experience of a parent's life.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, you printed a letter from a woman who was distressed because a young man, apparently trying to reach his father on Father's Day to bury the hatchet after a longtime dispute, reached this woman's answering machine, but did not leave his own telephone number; so there was no way of letting him know that he had reached the wrong number.

Abby, this unfortunate situation was partly the woman's fault. Her answering machine must have had one of those messages that says, "Sorry, we are not at home" - without saying who "we" are.

Abby, please spread the word that all answering messages should begin with: "You have reached the residence of John and Jane Doe at 555-1234." Then, this kind of confusion would be less likely to occur.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL —NOT!

DEAR ALEX: I disagree. Why disclose to strangers who many have dialed your number by mistake that you are "Lord and Lady Gotrocks" and your telephone number is Pennsylvania 6-5000?

It would be wiser to have the following message on your machine: "You have reached Pennsylvania 6-5000. If you wish to leave your name and telephone number, we will return your call as soon as possible."

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter in your column regarding slamming doors to anger, it brought a smile to my face remembering the last time I slammed a door.

Once, out of anger, I slammed my refrigerator door only to hear a sickening sound inside. I opened the fridge door and found all 18 eggs had been propelled from their slots in the door to the interior of the refrigerator!

It took me an hour to clean the mess I had made, but I chuckled the whole time at the consequences of my angry door-slaming. Needless to say, I have not slammed a door since.

KAY SANDERS
COMMERCE, TEXAS

DEAR KAY: I know exactly how you must have felt.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HAD IT" IN SAN DIEGO: Don't give up - it's part of the training, and separates the men from the boys. Besides, a kick in the pants is a step forward.

Volunteers vital to 4-H

By Donna Brauchi
County Extension Agent

The 4-H youth development program, like other youth programs, is dependent on adult leaders who share their time and talent with kids.

National 4-H Week, Oct. 3-9, is a time to recognize the volunteers - not only for dollars, hours or years of service, but more importantly for the results of their efforts.

Richard Williams, 4-H Ambassador Club president, says, "All 4-H leaders give 4-H'ers a very good example to follow. They are not selfish with their time and abilities."

There are approximately 72 leaders in Gray County. Three of these 4-H leaders were recently recognized at a District 4-H Volunteer District Association event.

Henry Dawes, a 4-H rabbit project leader, and his wife Marion started a small 4-H rabbit project seven years ago which has grown into a well-established 4-H club. Henry shares his time and his experience with all ages of 4-H'ers and their parents, resulting in a quality youth development experience for all.

Another leader recognized for her 4-H leadership was Martha Hadley of Pampa. Martha has given of her time and effort for over 12 years. From project leader to fund raiser, to activity chaperon, you can find Martha promoting 4-H.

Providing leadership for the District 4-H Volunteer Leader Association this year is Katie McDonad. Katie has been an active 4-H leader in Gray County for over 15 years. Having had three outstanding 4-H'ers graduate and move on to college and careers via 4-H scholarships, she has one more to go.

To find out how you can become a 4-H leader, contact your Gray County Extension Service at 669-8033.

Homemakers change name

The National Extension Homemakers Council, Inc. changed its name in February, 1992, to become the National Association for Family and Community Education, or TAFCE.

The delegates to the 1993 Annual TEHA State Convention in Waco in September addressed this proposal, presented from McLennan County and recommended by the state bylaws committee. The proposal passed with the two-thirds majority vote necessary for a bylaws amendment.

This mission of the organization has not changed. The mission continues to be continuing education, leadership development and community service.

The Gray County Extension Homemakers Council will be known as the Gray County Family and Community Education Council, or Gray County FCE Council.

A whole lot of bull

The bulls as well as the cows at the J.T. Rogers ranch are all purebreds

By DAVID BOWSER
Managing Editor

The J.T. Rogers Jr. family is active in church, school and sports. In their sparetime, they raise registered cattle.

"We've always had cattle," Rogers said, "but I bought my first Hereford heifers from Claude and Jerry Harland in Texhoma, Okla., in 1980."

Since then, the Rogers have been raising registered Hereford cattle on their ranch northeast of Pampa.

"Herefords are the hardest to breed for," Rogers said. "Angus are black. With Herefords, you can have too much white, too much red. It's hard to get the color pattern everybody wants."

Rogers experience with Herefords goes back to his high school days.

"I had the Grand Champion show calf in Pampa that won in 1966," he said. "I've just always liked Herefords."

The Roberts County rancher said Herefords have a gentle disposition and weather well in this climate.

"A crossbred with a Hereford is hard to beat," he said.

Rogers indicated that his decision to start raising registered cattle in 1980 has paid off. The last two years, he's had the top gaining bull in Panhandle State University's all-breed bull test at Goodwell, Okla.

Two years ago, he had not only the top gaining bull but also the top gaining pen of bulls, the highest feed efficiency and the top selling bull. Late last month, he hauled another load of bulls to Goodwell looking for a third straight year of honors.

This month, he'll taken another load to Tucumcari, N.M., for a University of New Mexico all-breed bull test.

"The New Mexico bull test is difficult to get into," Rogers said. "It was started years ago by some ranchers over there. They built the facilities. Then the University of New Mexico took it over, but the ranchers still owned the facilities. To get into it, you have to rent a pen from them, if there's one available, and New Mexico cattlemen have priority."

In a test that particularly tough to enter for Texans, Rogers quiet manner and reputation for good cattle paid off.

"We lucked out," he said. "We went out there last year and visited with them. They called back in August and said we had a pen."

Of the 32 bull calves he's weaned this year, six are in the test at Panhandle State. Four will go to the test at Tucumcari.

"It's the same type tests," Rogers said. "They take the average daily gain, weight per day of age and feed efficiency. Both tests will have a sale and the average of those figures will determine the sale order."

Specializing in a registered herd, most of Rogers cattle are spoiled since they will be used for breeding purposes before going to slaughter.

"We keep all sorts of records on them," Rogers said. "The day they're born, we weigh them, tattoo them and put an ear tag on them. We use acid to dehorn the heifers. I'd like to dehorn the bulls, but people won't buy them if they're dehorned."

Rogers also brings them in when their seven months old, weans them, weighs them and vaccinates them.

"We send the 205-day weight to the American Hereford Association," Rogers said, "and they send us back a computer sheet that reaches to the floor."

The reason behind all the records is to raise bulls that put on weight quickly.

"You pick the best bulls for breeding," he said. "A heavy birth weight, a good weaning weight, you bet they'll keep on gaining."

The ability to gain quickly is a trait that can be passed on to the next generation. Therefore, commercial cattlemen look for fast-gaining traits in cattle that can improve their herds.

"The bull tests are really becoming selective," Rogers said. "For the Panhandle test, the bull had to be born between Jan.-5 and March 1. Our best bull was born Dec. 28. He's going to be a good one."

The crops raised on the family farm that he and his father have mostly go to feed the cattle. While his boys have various farm chores to do around the place, they just now starting to become involved in the operation - when they're not playing soccer.

"I have two boys," Rogers said. "Hal, 8, and Trey, who's 11."

Trey's playing soccer, and Hal appears to be more interested in that than in cattle, his father laughed.

"Trey's team went down to the Amarillo tournament and did real well," Rogers said. "There wasn't an opposing team that scored a point on them."

When she's not helping her husband or taking care of the kids, Rogers' wife, Tandra, is helping at the St. Matthews day school, then there's the Austin School Booster Club. She's also involved in the Junior Service League.

"I don't see how she gets any sleep," Rogers said.

Defense wins the game in A&M, Red Raiders tilt

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The best matchup in the Southwest Conference pitted the league's top cornerback against the league's premier receiver.

SWC notes

Defense won. Texas A&M's Aaron Glenn, who had an interception, teamed with fellow cornerback Ray Mickens Saturday to control the nation's seventh-best offense as the Aggies whipped Texas Tech 31-6.

Their outstanding coverage on all-conference receiver Lloyd Hill and the Red Raiders' other receivers allowed the rest of the A&M defense to focus on stopping Byron "Bam" Morris, the league's leading rusher entering the game.

Morris had his first sub-100-yard performance this year, getting 96 yards on 20 carries. Tech finished with 169 yards of offense, just two first-quarter field goals and a 1-4 start, including 0-2 in conference.

The Aggies (3-1, 1-0) haven't lost to an SWC opponent since 1990.

"For the defense to hold them without a touchdown is excellent," said Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum. "This is probably the best performance we have had all year."

Hill needed just 57 yards to become the conference's all-time leading receiver. But he was held to just 22 yards on three catches. Quarterback Robert Hall, sacked seven times, threw to Hill eight times.

Glenn swore Hill wouldn't get the record against him, and he was right.

Also Saturday, Houston and Texas ended three-week winless skids, the Cougars upsetting Baylor 24-3 and the Longhorns extending their dominance of Rice to 28 straight seasons with a 55-38 victory.

TCU lost to Oklahoma State, 27-22, and SMU managed a 10-10 tie at Missouri.

NOT THIS TIME I: Baylor finally dug too deep of a hole Saturday. The Bears had used fourth-quarter comebacks to beat Fresno State, Utah State and Texas Tech this year.

But in Houston, the Bears fell behind early and never recovered, losing 24-3 to the Cougars as Jimmy Klingler unloaded for three touchdowns and Houston's defense stepped up under new defensive coordinator Gene Smith, who replaced Melvin Robertson on Tuesday.

Houston began the game ranked 105th in total defense among the 106 NCAA Division I-A schools but held the Baylor (3-2) offense to a field goal and had goal line stands at the 1 and 2 yard lines.

Baylor's offense ranked No. 22 nationally at the start of the game and the Bears had scored touchdowns on 14 of 15 possessions inside the 20 before confronting the Cougars.

The Cougars (1-3) lost their first three games by a combined score of 129-52 and hadn't led in a game all season until they marched 80 yards on the first series, ending with Klingler's 2-yard TD pass to Sherman Smith.

It was the first victory as head coach for Kim Helton, who said, "You can't imagine what a great lift this is for our football team."

"We got outplayed, out-hustled, out-hit, outsmarted and out-coached," Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said.

NOT THIS TIME II: TCU hasn't had much to celebrate this last several years, but Oklahoma State always provided some success. Not on Saturday in Stillwater, when a freshman quarterback and a big-play defense finally allowed coach Pat Jones to smile after a game with Texas Christian.

The Horned Frogs had won three straight over OSU in the past three years, by a total of 15 points. Saturday the Cowboys made just enough plays to hang on and win 27-22.

The defense came up with three turnovers, all of which led to touchdowns, and Tone Jones was impressive in his first start at quarterback as the Cowboys improved to 3-1 for the first time since 1988.

Texas Christian fell to 1-3 despite moving the ball well against the nation's sixth-ranked defense. The Horned Frogs, behind the passing of Max Knake, out-gained Oklahoma State 417-296 and made a game of it after falling behind 27-6.

But they didn't have much luck inside the 20, scoring only two touchdowns on six trips. Twice they had to settle for field goals after having first and goal.

"All you have to do is look at turnovers," coach Pat Sullivan said. "Our offensive numbers are encouraging. The sad thing is the turnovers and other missed opportunities."

LOSING ANTIDOTE: The Rice Owls were just what Texas needed. Rice had visions of beating the Longhorns for the first time since 1965, with a 3-1 start and the Horns reeling from a winless first three weeks.

But the outcome was the same as fullback Phil Brown ran for 184 yards and Shea Morenz threw three TDs in Texas' 55-38 victory in Austin.

The victory was the first of the year for the Longhorns (1-2-1, 1-0 SWC), who were winless in their opening three games for the first time since 1938 and for only the second time 101 years.

It was a game of big offensive plays by both teams. Texas rolled up 566 yards and seven touchdowns while Rice (3-2, 0-1) had 464 yards and its highest point total ever against the Longhorns.

Little consolation for the Owls, none of whom were alive the last time Rice defeated Texas.

As much as anybody, Brown has made a career of beating the Owls.

Brown, a 5-11, 209-pound senior, sparked Texas with runs of 48 yards to set up Texas' first touchdown and 44 yards to set up their second score. His own touchdown came on an 8-yard run.

Brown's previous best game, two years ago, was 119 yards on 18 carries. That also came against Rice.

IT'S A BIRD ... The longest pass in the short career of Ramon Flanigan couldn't have come at a better time, even if it wasn't pretty.

Erwin Wilburn caught a floating 40-yard pass from Flanigan and jogged in for a 67-yard score with 12:09 to give SMU a 10-10 tie with Missouri in Columbia.

Flanigan is a redshirt freshman who got his second start after leading the Mustangs past Texas Christian a week before.

It was the first career touchdown for Wilburn, a junior.

"It was hanging up there," Wilburn said. "It was hanging so much it felt more like a punt return and I thought I'd better fair-catch it. I tipped it myself and kind of batted it up, and just tried to concentrate on watching the ball come down."

Flanigan said the pass would have looked better, except he injured his right shoulder on the first play of the game.

"It really hung up on me," Flanigan said. "I was just hoping Erwin would go up and knock the ball down to avoid an interception."

But all that wouldn't have mattered if it weren't for Chad Patton.

He blocked a 47-yard field goal attempt by Missouri's Kyle Pooler with 23 seconds left.

He also had two sacks.

NEXT WEEK'S GAMES: Saturday, Oct. 9: BAYLOR at SMU, 2 p.m. SMU has two close losses, last one on Sept. 11.

HOUSTON at TEXAS A&M, 2 p.m. Aggies escaped last year, 38-30.

RICE at TCU, 2 p.m. Owls try to recover from 28th straight loss to Texas.

TEXAS vs. Oklahoma, 2 p.m. UT catches 5th win in row over OU at Cotton Bowl.

N.C. State at TEXAS TECH, 7 p.m. 5th Tech opponent to be ranked this year.
