MANY LIVES LOST IN ADDIS ABABA RIOTS

About Our Friends

It is said that Charley Hartman in sleep in peace now that the mice have killed the old white cat that has been haunting the roof over where Charley sleeps. The cat has been walking the roof during the past two weeks... It was thought that Tom might be dead and you can imagine the kind of nightmares Charley has been having as his semi-dreams embody the frothing mouth of old Tom growling over him, and how he would awaken in a cold sweat, only to hear old Tom tramp...tramp...tramp...over-head.... "What he gets inside?...that must have made it very pleasant as he lay awake listening...."

Joe Clements hurrying to the bank with the church money before any of the police force catches him with it.... R. H. Boon still regretting that he didn't get in on that city barbecue... those cakes have been described to him over and over... his mouth still waters at the descriptions that Gus, Henry and Ernie give him of the affair.... and date shows him how much quatorial expansion he has accumulated since the affair.... No, it is said that Bible eats and cats and bats, but never gains... just got used to it....

A. G. Tuttle rather gruff today to his friends... went with Horace Pondley fishing and saw a man get over fifteen feet away land 15 pounder but no luck for him.

Nick Miller talks interestingly of bats, fishing and motors... and getting drowned... while sipping his morning's coffee.... Joe Wilson says it's quiet.... K. H. Pittard with a road smile... must have had luck.... O. J. Tillinghast and Barton Philpott just couldn't get their hands on Roquet... thinking of the big bass someone else might be finding and them fooling away their time knocking a ball around... that would tend to make a fellow miss or disconnect his aim....

P. G. Berry had everything shined up for the opening of the swimming pool but the rain and hail rather dampened the ardor of swimmers during the morning hours as the sun beamed stronger, business picked up—water beautifully clear and blue... some fancy living... and crazy stunts by towns. Ancil Cagle and Charles Tucker... added interest....

Aaron L. Mayhew Dies After Long Illness

FUNERAL WILL BE HELD AT THREE O'CLOCK

The life of Aaron L. Mayhew, age almost 70, who passed away at his home on the corner of F avenue and Ninth street, Sunday, May 3, at 3:25 a. m., after a lingering illness of about 8 weeks, is so intertwined with the development of Cisco that a delineation of the one is a history of the other.

Mr. Mayhew will be laid to rest in Oakwood cemetery by the side of his father, W. C. Mayhew, this afternoon at 3 o'clock with ceremonies in charge of the Cisco Masonic body, of which he had been an honored member for the past 30 years, he being a 32nd degree mason. Mr. Mayhew had also been a member of the Modern Woodmen of America for the past 40 years.

A beautiful tribute to the memory of Mr. Mayhew, was given by his step-mother, Mrs. Blant Kimbrough, of Ralls, Texas, who reared Aaron and the other boys from a young age and has loved and cherished him as if they were her own children, she says: "Aaron and his sons, W. H. and Charley, have always been very dear and thoughtful of me and could have not been more so if they had been my own child and grand children. He makes a fine corpse, but not finer than he was a man and step-son," said this fine motherly woman, who beamed on his dead body and thought of the years of fine young manhood that she had directed in her place as step-mother.

Aaron Mayhew was born at Pontotoc, Miss., Nov. 29, 1866, and would have been 70 years of age had he lived until next November. He came to Texas when he was 16, living in Coryell county until 1900, when he landed in Cisco on January 1. He immediately embarked in the grain business, later enlarging his activities to the general mercantile business, real estate, building, and oil development.

His first building was the one-fourth block on East Eighth street, now occupied by a service station, milk plant, and cleaning plant. It is said that Aaron Mayhew built more brick buildings than any other man in Cisco. The Palace theater, Commercial Printing company and all the bricks on West Broadway from the telephone building west, are the results of his building. He believed in Cisco and built for permanency.

When the oil activities began to occupy the minds of Cisco people, he turned his attention to oil development and trading. The Luse well at the south city limits, was drilled and abandoned, but Mr. Mayhew believed in the possibilities of the well and finished it into a small producer.

For the past ten years Mr. Mayhew ceased his business activities and retired for a well earned rest at his lovely home on the corner of F avenue and West Ninth, where he died surrounded by a large number of loving friends and near-relatives, after a brave fight against an illness that had consumed him during the past three years, becoming serious during the past eight weeks.

CALIFORNIA DEMO TESTS ON TUESDAY

By GEORGE HELMER United Press Staff Correspondent SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 4.—(U.P.)—Comparative strength of the New Deal and the Hoover drive for un-instructed convention delegates will be illustrated Tuesday when California voters record their choice of presidential nominees.

The primary contest, after weeks of maneuvering had eliminated all but five tickets, is divided into clear cut issues.

Democrats have three choices. President Roosevelt, Upton Sinclair and Representative John Steven McGroarty. Republicans have to choose between Governor Alf Landon of Kansas and an unstructured delegation headed by Earl Warren, chairman of the state central committee.

The primary will determine which delegations will represent California at the national conventions next month.

Two Roosevelt Tickets Although three groups of delegates appeared on the Democratic ballot, two of them were regarded as Roosevelt tickets. Sinclair, author and former Socialist who organized the EPIC movement two years ago, said that if his delegation won the primary, he would release its votes to Roosevelt after one complimentary ballot for himself.

The president, therefore, has little to worry about so far as California's democrats are concerned, since a victory for either the McGroarty or Sinclair slates means 44 votes for Mr. Roosevelt at the convention. Observers expected the McGroarty ticket to run third.

Result of the Roosevelt-Sinclair contest, however, is expected to show the comparative strength of regular and EPIC democrats in California. Sinclair's main purpose in entering the race is to further the aims of his followers and attempt to carry the "production for use" plan to the convention, with the idea of placing it in the party platform.

Sponsor of Townsend Plan McCroarty, who introduced the Townsend pension plan in congress, relies upon Townsend followers for his support. It is admitted that if all Townsend democrats in California vote for him, he would be an important factor in the primary fight.

The republican race, which for weeks had threatened to become a complicated free for all, simmered down to a two sided affair which split the party wide as the Sinclair-McGroarty feud divided the democrats.

Opposing the organized drive for Landon are Old Guard members the state central committee and younger republicans alike who insist the California delegation should be unpledged, free to vote for the best available candidate at the convention.

Hoover Support Shown The unstructured group, organized along the lines advocated by former President Herbert Hoover, has the support of many influential republicans who backed Mr. Hoover four years ago. It also has the approval of the republican assembly, a state wide organization of

Italians' Mustard Gas Takes Toll in Ethiopia

Proof of charges that the Italians have spread death and injury through Ethiopia by use of poison gas, an action angrily protested by England, is given in this picture of bandaged victims on stretchers at the British Red Cross station in Ala Mata. Many natives have died of asphyxiation and the agonizing burns also have caused the deaths of many patients, say dispatches. A helmeted attendant is standing behind one of the gas bomb containers in the photo.

WACOANS HERE TOMORROW FOR GREETING ONLY

A large gathering of Cisco men and women are wanted to meet the Waco trade trippers who will arrive in Cisco at 12:40 Tuesday, May 5. In their letter of announcement, the Wacoans say they will remain 45 minutes during which time they want to meet as many Cisco people as possible.

However, since it is purely a business trip, no program more than a friendly greeting, is expected they say. It speaks well for the hospitality of a town when its citizens turn out in large numbers to greet visitors.

Ciscoans Return From Austin Meet

STALCUP GOES TO DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

HUNTSVILLE, May 4.—(U.P.)—Virgil Stalcup, West Texas outlaw, paid with his life today for the murder of Sheriff W. B. Arthur of Dickens county.

Stalcup kept his composure through the last. He walked unassisted the few steps from his cell to the electric chair. He calmly set down and appeared unconcerned.

"Have you anything you'd like to say?" Warden W. W. Waid asked. "No I haven't." Was his curt answer.

Stalcup was sentenced to death for the murder of Sheriff Arthur during a jail break at Dickens in October 1934. The officer was attempting to stop Stalcup and companion, Clarence Brown, from escaping.

In accordance with prison custom Stalcup was asked what he wanted to eat at his last dinner. He said he did not care to eat anything.

Brown attempted to take blame some time ago for firing the shot that took Arthur's life. But authorities believed that he was trying to leave Stalcup. Since Brown already was serving a life term he had nothing to lose by such a move and could not be resentenced.

Before Stalcup finally was sentenced to death he had been sentenced to 254 years in prison on various charges, with numerous charges pending against him.

Funeral services will be at Huntsville.

AMERICANS MAKE APPEAL TO BRITISH

(Copyright, 1936 by United Press) Pillaging natives inflamed by impending Italian occupation of Addis Ababa attacked the American and other foreign legations today. Many white persons were killed or wounded.

A stalwart little band of Americans in the U. S. legation fought off the attack but was so hard pressed that an appeal had to be made to British for machine guns and soldiers.

Two native women in the American quarters were wounded. Previously Mrs. A. B. Stadin, wife of an American missionary doctor, had been killed by a stray bullet.

All regular communications had failed long ago as Emperor Haile Selassie fled from the capital for Jerusalem and the natives burned much of the city. The story of bloodshed and rioting in the capital pieced from these dispatches were sent over the United States, British and French diplomatic wireless stations.

Restoration of order awaited arrival of the Italians. Natives contention already were encamped on the outskirts of the city. They waited there for the main column headed by Marshal Pietro Badoglio. Latest announcement from Rome said this force was 21 miles away.

Plight of the handful of Americans barricaded in the legation was graphically told in messages to Washington from minister Cornelius Van H. Engert.

Ethiopian bandits attacked at 9 a. m. All white women except Mrs. Engert had been taken to the fortified British compound previously. She was in the garden when the natives opened fire. Some of the men had to go to a hospital.

With revolvers, rifles, shotguns, swords and spears, the few remaining Americans bent off the attack, killing one bandit. Then the infuriated natives returned.

Engert twice tried to send an appeal for help to the British, four miles across the city. The messengers could not get through. Finally to get his appeal through four miles he had to send it thousands of miles by radio.

By radio he asked the state department in Washington to have the British send a "Lewis Gun" and new soldiers. Washington telephoned the request to London with the request that it be relayed by wireless to British legation in Addis Ababa.

ASKED AID FOR AMERICANS IN ADDIS ABABA LONDON, May 4.—(U.P.)—The foreign office advised late today by Sir Sidney Barton British minister at Addis Ababa that a truck load of armed Sikh troops had been sent to the beleaguered United States legation from the British compound.

At the request of Robert Bingham U. S. Ambassador the foreign officer instructed Sir Sidney to furnish all possible aid to Americans.

Is Thrift Wrong?

There are certain economists who maintain that it was thrift which caused the recent slackening of American industry. The argument is that by putting money into savings accounts and industrial investments, people kept financing new industries and increasing production while diminishing their own purchases. Thus production ran ahead of demand. They should have kept on spending and absorbing all the goods produced. It is a clever argument, but a specious one. No doubt industry could have been kept running at full speed if people had made a practice of spending all their earnings, increasing their purchases as production increased. But that is always a perilous proceeding. If the economic machine keeps speeding up, finally it runs away with itself, and there is a big crash. That is the way to bring on business panics and periods of calamitous depression. Stinginess is almost as bad. But thrift in reasonable degree, which is what we have had these last few years, is a stabilizing force. It provides funds needed for new enterprises, funds to preserve sound credit, funds to carry on in times of temporary dullness or unemployment. No boom is worth while when followed by a panic. We have learned that lesson by bitter experience. It is better to avoid both extremes and follow the same, middle course of moderate assured prosperity.

Men and Women Valued

All good things are valued according to their scarcity, including men and women. An American traveler finds that Tibet, supposedly one of the "backward countries," is very forward as far as women are concerned. Every year there is leap year. Women's rights have gone to a length never dreamed of by our western feminists. Women not only choose their own husbands, but choose as many as they like, and the woman rules the roost. The men act like slaves. That is because women are a minority in Tibet. The fewer the women, the greater their power. Where men are fewer, as in Turkey and Arabia, the men dominate. We might have known this before, from our own observation of social parties and summer resorts. One man in a crowd of girls is a lion, just as one girl in a crowd of men is a princess. Political power of either sex may depend on numbers, in free countries, but social power depends on scarcity. We see this principle working clearly in Europe and America. Men are fewer than women in Europe, and have been for centuries, because of destructive wars, and men dominate European life. Woman has always held a higher place in American life, because women were scarcer here. There is still more chivalry in our west than in our east, because the west has fewer women, and so values them more highly.

It has taken civilized man thousands of years to discover the dietary merits of liver. Animals have always known it. An American surgeon says that beasts of prey eat the liver first. Gulls and eagles do the same with fish livers.

Some undertaking establishments make their advertising so attractive that sometimes it makes a fellow believe he can nearly afford to die.

Traveler back from Tibet says women rule the roost in that country. Well, does that make it any different from America?

Germany will launch a new Zeppelin named the Von Hindenberg. Well, let's see, that's three windbags they have now—two Zeppelins and Adolf Hitler.

CONGRESS RACE IN ALABAMA HOLD INTEREST

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 4—(AP)—Three lively congressional fights hold the chief interest in Alabama's May 5 Democratic primary.

Rep. George Huddleston, of Birmingham, faced five foes, but with good prospects of defeating them. Rep. Frank Boykin, of Mobile, has found the opposition of Frank Bunkley surprisingly stout. Six aspirants to succeed Rep. A. H. Carmichael, who declined to run, engaged in a battle royal in the 8th district.

A handpicked slate of delegates, appointed by the state executive committee, assured President Roosevelt of Alabama's 22 votes at the Democratic National convention.

Pledged to Roosevelt
Except in a few districts, voters have shown little interest in the primary, with the state pledged to Roosevelt as few state officers are running, and a light vote is forecast.

Hugh White, president of the public service commission, has waged a strenuous campaign against W. W. Ramsey, of Russellville National Democrats' Committeeman Leon McCord faces the fight of his political life against Mathew Murphy, of Birmingham.

However, all but one of the state's nine congressmen have opposition that is more or less troublesome, with the certainty that two new faces from Alabama will appear in congressional halls next term.

Rep. William B. Oliver, like Rep. Carmichael, did not seek reelection. So, in the Sixth district, Pete B. Jarman, Jr. former secretary of state, who lost to Oliver by a narrow margin last election, is expected to have a walk-away.

In the 8th, Judge B. L. Malone, of Decatur, who presided over one of the Scottsboro trials, is figured to win Carmichael's seat.

Steagall Runs Strong
In the 3rd, Henry B. Steagall, of Ozark, is finding little opposition in James E. Folsom, of Alba. Rep. Lester Hill, of Montgomery, is unopposed.

Rep. W. B. Bankhead faces two opponents in the 7th, G. W. Posey, of Jasper, and Walter L. Totten, of Winfield, but his opposition is not strong.

In the 9th district, Rep. George Huddleston is fighting against more bitter opposition than any of his colleagues. Lewney Robinson, city commissioner, Luther Patrick, Roy Ingram, M. B. Grace and F. H. Bethea, all of Birmingham. Political observers believe either Patrick or Robinson will oppose Huddleston in a run-off election.

Senator John Bankhead likewise has opposition, but slight. In H. L.

Educated Boys Lead In NYA Employment

AUSTIN, May 4—Thirty-three thousand Texas youths have availed themselves of the opportunities offered by the National Youth Administration since it went into operation in September, 1935. London B. Johnson, state director of the youth administration announced today.

A summary of major Texas activities reveals that the student aid program leads with 16,935 high school and college students holding part time jobs. Of this number 11,030 were employed in high schools and 5,905 in Texas colleges. High school student jobs pay $6 per month and college students are paid an average of $15 per month.

Under the works projects program, 12,911 Texas out-of-schools youths—7,414 boys and 4,597 girls—have part-time jobs. NYA projects are sponsored locally and adapted to the needs of individual communities.

The Texas NYA has 20 freshmen college centers in operation with a total enrollment of approximately 900 students and with 24 teachers employed. The centers offer college work of the first year level to students unable to enroll in regular colleges and universities.

Under the vocational guidance and job training program of the NYA, a junior employment service has been established at Fort Worth. In 60 days of operation, 2,119 boys and 1,155 girls have been interviewed. A total of 136 firms have been visited and 22 youths have been placed in marginal jobs in private industry.

Of the 160 young women who attended NYA camps, 85 per cent obtained employment at the end of the camp period.

FOLLY and FAREWELL By Marie Blizard © 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty, is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father.
PETER GARDNER, newspaper reporter, helps her get a job writing society news. Linda is in love with DIX CARTER, but he goes ahead to study singing. When Peter asks her to marry him she agrees, but postpones the wedding.
HONEY HARMON, Slim star, comes to Newtown, making a "society" of her. Peter goes to interview her and sells her a scenario written by Linda. Honey agrees to a job in Hollywood, but he refuses. Later, however, when Linda is offered a job there she accepts.
Peter says, "I guess that means you don't want to marry me."
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI
PETE had his answer from Linda when he looked into her eyes, lowered before his steady gaze, but not before he had seen them mist with tears. Then, for the first time, he understood that Linda loved him, but not with all her heart. Linda had given him her affection, but not even a small measure of the love that he had for her.
He drove her to the railroad station and the train that would take her away, and they found few words to say to each other. Linda wanted to tell him things that she found herself too inarticulate to put into words. Pete knew why she wanted to say, and he didn't want to hear it.
"Goodby, darling," he said. "Write me about how wonderful Hollywood is, and I'll send you sour-grape letters."
She put her arms around him, and pressed her head to his shoulder. "Goodby, Pete, don't ever forget me. I'll always think of you, and I'll write you the minute I arrive."
Forget her? Pete asked himself if it was possible when, that night and many other nights, trying to forget her, he sat and labored over the play he was to call "Remembrance."
And Linda, speeding west, thought of Pete and missed him and knew that she was going to miss him.
ONCE before Linda had faced something that was important to her, and put it behind for all time. There had been Dix, and now there was Pete. She had not been fair to him. Selfishly she had taken his love because she needed it and because she had cared for him, but never the way that he deserved. Linda with her eyes closed, she thought how many women would give Pete the kind of love he offered, and she felt a little sorry for herself that she couldn't feel that way. Well, it was ended now. She had been selfish too long. She would not try to hold him any longer with vague promises of the future. She, Linda Bourne, was on her way to a career in a place where anything could happen, and she must be free and leave him free for what might come.

She had a moment of longing for Newtown, the dusty, ink-scented smell of the Blade office, rising from its shadows, when she arrived at Los Angeles on that late March afternoon, alone and a little frightened, and went direct to a fashionable hotel she had heard of.
She dressed in a simple evening gown, dined in lonely splendor in the main dining room, lingering over her coffee. She felt so alive, so young and so lonesome. If only she knew one person!
SHE bought a book and took it to her room. Her first night in California was not to be an auspicious one. It might have been a melancholy one had there not been a telegram from Pete. Linda fell on it with a whoop of joy and read and re-read its seemingly silly words.
"DON'T BE LONELY STOP THINKING OF YOU BESIEGED BY ANXIOUS DIRECTORS STOP CONNOLLY FIND TODAY WON SWEETAKES MONDAY WIFE BOUGHT COW AND SEQUIN DRESS WHATEVER THAT IS STOP HARPER'S HAVE FIRST SPRING VIOLETS STOP ASK PRODUCERS WHY COOPER VENELL PLAYING GANGSTER PARTS IS POET STOP READING MYRON'S LIFE OF KEATS MAKE SWELL MOVIE STOP CAN'T HELP LOVING YOU NO STOP PETE."
Harper's, Newtown's only first-list, had the first spring violets! Last year Pete had brought them wet, dark, fragrant—to Linda, and told her they were like her eyes. And Connolly, the Blade's irresponsible night-watchman, had been fired. But he had won a Sweepstakes fund. How sweet of Pete to tell her that. A long letter couldn't have been more like him. She smiled at the telegram as though it had been Pete himself, and she didn't know how tender her smile was. Or how binding a bond that is born of tenderness. Tenderness is a tender that twists around the heart and grows there as part of it, clinging, shaped to the contour of it forever, even when its core of passion has flamed and burned its center out.
Dressing in her simple knitted frock the next morning, she slipped the telegram into her handbag. "Moral support, as usual," she said, snapping its clasps.
There was only one way to get out to Commonwealth City, the hills over which the Commonwealth Century studios and sets were splashed. Linda rode in a taxi, with quaking knees and a digitized speech of introduction rehearsing itself automatically on her dry lips.

But she didn't get a chance to try her speech that day. She didn't get into the studio and she didn't get past the gateman. She had no pass, no words that would substitute. There was only one way to get in, even if she wore a Garbo, and that was with a pass.
Frantically that whole day, Linda tried to find some way to get into the Commonwealth lot that had engaged her at a tremendous (to her) salary.
SHE tried to reach Honey Harmon by telephone. "Miss Harmon's number is private. We cannot give out that information." After four days of wasted effort, Linda wired Pete for advice.
"SEE MOVIE EDITOR OF LOCAL PAPER," he wired.
Linda did that, and found herself in a small office on the Commonwealth lot with a telephone, a Persian carpet, a desk she could have slept on but didn't, even though she had little else to do. Apparently Commonwealth forgot why they had brought her to Hollywood. No one could tell her what to do. No one had anything for her to do. "Bleak Spring," which was to be called "Take a Letter," wouldn't be in production for two or three months. Linda read newspapers, wrote long letters home to Pete, Wilda, and her other friends, and read all the old scripts she could lay her hands on.
Then came the day of a writers' conference. All the writers on the lot were called. Linda welcomed the change from her lonesome, useless routine. She loved the shouting, the excitement, the arguments. Not that she had any idea what it was all about until Pytak, the Russian director, tore his hair and shouted in her face shaking a fist at them all:
"Not one ting dass he doo! Dis Venell he dreamss! De box office is not good! And you blame Pytak! Gif me . . ."
Linda didn't know why she said it, but she found herself on her feet.
"But Cooper Venell isn't a gangster type. He's a poet! There's a new life of Keats that was just written for him. It's by James Myron. Venell, in spite of his size, has the face of a dreamer of poetry. Can't you see it?"
Linda was aghast at her own temerity. The others were also aghast, but not for the same reason. It suddenly occurred to them that Venell was a miscast.
If Hollywood was incredible to Linda, Linda was incredible to Hollywood. From that moment, she became an important person!
