Fed slashes discount rate to 7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board cut its discount rate to 7 percent Friday, the lowest level for this key lending figure in almost eight years, as major banks rushed to follow suit by lowering their interest charges as well.

The cut, from 7.5 percent, was announced minutes after the Labor Department reported that civilian unemployment soared to 7.3 percent in February, an increase of 0.6 percentage point.

A change in the discount rate, the interest the Fed charges for loans to financial institutions, is the most dramatic move the central bank can make to signal its intentions on interest rates.

The discount rate cut was the first since the Fed cut the discount rate from 8 percent to 7.5 percent last May.

The country's major banks, which had not reduced their prime lending rate since June, immediately announced they were cutting this benchmark lending rate to 9 percent, down from 9.5 percent.

The bank move was led by two major New York banks — Chase Manhattan and Chemical — but within hours all the country's leading banks had followed suit in lowering the prime rate, which is used in computing interest charges on short-term business loans.

Analysts predicted that home mortgage rates and a variety of other interest rates will head lower as well in coming weeks, although they said the declines may not be as dramatic as those that have already occurred.

A variety of interest rates have fallen sharply in recent weeks, with home mortgage rates in some parts of the country dropping below 10 percent for the first time in more than seven years.

The rate declines have been spurred by the sharp declines in oil prices which have eased fears of inflation and made lenders willing to cut their interest rates.

The Fed said its action was based on the favorable oil price declines, the declines in other interest rates and also the actions by the central banks of West Germany and Japan to cut their own discount rates.

Only hours before the Fed announcement, the Central Bank of Japan cut its discount rate from 4.5 percent to 4 percent, the second reduction this year. The West German Bundesbank trimmed its discount rate the same 0.5 percentage point to 3.5 percent on Thursday.

The Reagan administration, which has been pushing for lower interest rates both in America and other industrial countries to spur econonmic growth, hailed the decisions.

"I strongly support moves by Germany, Japan and the United States to lower their discount rates," Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said in a statement. Baker met with the finance ministers of other industrial countries in London in January, with interest rates one of the prime topics of discussion.

Only last month, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker had expressed reluctance to lower the discount rate despite administration pressure to do so. He expressed fears

Mark: Area has 'strong suits' for collider project

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — The stakes are high in the competition for the massive Superconductivity Super Collider.

University of Texas System chancellor Dr. Hans Mark, addressing a luncheon meeting of San Angelo Rotary Club members and West Texas Chamber of Commerce representatives Friday, said the SSC work force would number about 2,000, with an annual payroll expected to range from $300 million to $400 million.

Should the SCC be located in West Texas, he said, he believes benefits would be realized by everyone within a three to four hour driving distance of the facility.

Mark said it is virtually impossible to calculate the "spinoff" that would be generated as a result of the SSC project, but he believes it would be significant.

Location of the SSC in Texas, the chancellor told a news conference following his Rotary address, would put the area in a competitive position with research centers such as MIT and Stanford and allow attraction of top caliber scientists.

How likely is it that the Department of Energy will choose the proposed four-county area south and east of Midland?

While no one knows for sure, Mark said the area has some strong suits — the country is ideal, there is sparse population and low demand for real estate in the proposed area.

In addition, there are several other things in the realm of technology that auger well for a Texas siting of the SSC project, he added.

According to Mark, Dr. Peter McIntyre, a physicist at Texas A&M, has developed superconductor magnets and other phases of technology required to make the SSC work.

According to Mark, the hottest competitor is the Fermilab in Illinois, but he added the firm has had trouble developing superconducting magnets necessary for the proposed design.

Steve Hardin, acting executive director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said the Fermilab design is an underground tube 60 miles in circumference that requires much larger magnets than the 100 mile version proposed for the West Texas location. The magnets developed by McIntyre, Hardin said, have held up under all tests and will work.

As proposed, the SSC would straddle the boundaries of Midland, Glasscock, Upton and Reagan counties. Designated as the "Garden City Site" by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, the SSC tunnel, approximately 10 feet in diameter, would be constructed totally underground without disturbing Texas Highways 349 and 137, as well as a number of farm-to-market roads that criss cross the area.

According to McIntyre, the tunneling would be accomplished with new techniques that will ultimately be invaluable in the commercial construction of subways and tunnels. Additionally, he said, the technique could be utilized by Texas cities without storm drainage systems and would cost far less than currently accepted methods.

The SSC is a massive, though highly sophisticated, atom smasher that will enable physicists to probe the secrets of the tiniest subatomic particles and, perhaps, discover others now unknown.

The SSC is also expected to probe the origin of matter.

MMH, local physicians announce plans for 'PPO'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital leaders and local physicians joined a national movement Friday morning when they announced plans to form a preferred providers' organization (PPO).

The PPO is a special arrangement between employers and the providers (hospitals and physicians) in which employees may get a reduction in overall costs due to careful review by the providers.

"We recently completed a feasibility study which showed that Midland would support and benefit from such an organization," said Dr. Richard Reese, chairman of the steering committee which examined the need for the PPO.

"The managed health care system we're developing is commonly called a PPO and it offers employers some control over rising health costs."

Reese, a Midland internist, said that rigorous examination by a "utilization review committee" would limit the use of overly expensive tests and unnecessary surgeries.

"This system is in place in many cities already and is generally shown to be a benefit to employers while maintaining — and in some cases — improving the quality of medical care," he said.

A report from MMH further defines the PPO as "a contractual agreement between a group of health care providers (hospital and physicians) and buyers of those services (employers) for a defined pool of patients (employees)."

According to the report, physicians who wish to be members of the PPO, will have to meet "the strictest criteria" and includes practicing "high quality, cost-effective medicine." Physicians would have to be willing to submit to strenuous scrutiny by a peer group, usually a quality control committee.

Reese indicated that about 90 percent of the MMH staff physicians would be involved in the venture, although those who did not comply with strict reviews would probably not last.

"If one doctor is keeping patients in for eight days and all the others are keeping patients for only three days, obviously that's not cost-effective," he said.

The PPO would be targeted mainly toward larger employers, including the City of Midland, Midland County and Midland Independent School District, said Chairman of the MMH Foundation's Board of Trustees Tom Bruner.

White calls for oil tariff in wake of jobless rate

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — More than 160,000 Texans joined the unemployment lines in February — the largest one-month unemployment increase in state history — bringing the Texas jobless rate to a three-year high of 8.4 percent.

Gov. Mark White called on President Reagan to immediately impose the temporary fee on imported oil and refined products that he recommended three weeks ago.

"If the federal government does not take immediate action to protect the domestic energy industry so essential to our national security interests, then the list of economic casualties can only grow as more and more Americans find themselves out of work," White told reporters at a hastily called press conference Friday.

The seasonally adjusted Texas unemployment rate increased by 2 percentage points in February, up from January's 6.4 percent, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Friday. The number of Texans filing for unemployment benefits jumped from 510,000 in January to 671,000 last month.

The national unemployment rate for February increased by just over one-half percent from January to 7.3 percent.

Texas' jobless rate last month was the worst since the 8.6 percent reported in February 1983 — the lowest point of that recession. Brian Richey, southwest regional commissioner for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the oil and gas crisis, combined with major problems in the agricultural sector and the continuing devaluation of the Mexican peso has produced "a volatile situation" in Texas.

Richey cautioned against panic.

"While the month-to-month change is up very sharply, I don't think it's indicative of a trend," he said. "It's unlikely to occur next month."

White, however, called the news "another grim casualty report from the battle front over oil prices," and said Reagan must help stem the flow of cheap foreign oil.

"Why won't the president act now?" he asked. "How many Americans have to lose their jobs and how dependent must our country become on foreign energy supplies before this administration realizes that doing nothing is tantamount to saying last rites over domestic energy vital to our national security interests?"

Former Sen. Jacob Javits dies

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jacob K. Javits, a liberal Republican and civil rights champion who overcame the clubbiness of the U.S. Senate and became one of its most respected members, died Friday night. He was 81.

Javits, who suffered from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a progressive muscle and nerve disorder also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, died at Good Samaritan Hospital after being brought in earlier in the day, a nursing supervisor said.

"He was a truly great American leader, courageous, committed, compassionate," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "To the very end, he taught us with his own inspiring example to care about those less fortuate than ourselves."

"Perhaps his greatest contribution to us was his demonstration of courage in refusing to surrender to his illness," said New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

As his condition deteriorated, the disease hampered his physical movement but never dulled his sharp mind.

"Life does not stop with terminal illness. Only the patient stops if he doesn't have the will to go forward with life until death overtakes him...." Javits said in 1984.

Javits represented New York in the Senate for 24 years, a record for the state. He was a minority within a minority — a Republican in a Democratic-controlled chamber, a liberal in a generally conservative party. His liberalism, his Jewish faith and a personality more arrogant than outgoing kept Javits from gaining easy acceptance from his colleagues.

"When I rose to speak in those early days, the whole chamber was absolutely still. Still and cold," he recalled many years later.

Javits survived those who snubbed him, growing in reputation and importance. In the early 1970s, a poll of Senate staffers named Javits the most intelligent member of the Senate and the second most effective. When he left it, he was the top Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, consulted frequently on world affairs by presidents of both parties.

He was born Jacob Koppel Javits on May 18, 1904, on Manhattan's Lower East Side. His father, a former rabbinical student in Austria, worked in the garment industry and as a janitor; his mother, from Palestine, sold dry goods from a pushcart.

Board sets rules for private schools

AUSTIN (AP) — A State Board of Education committee Friday approved regulations for private and church schools as hundreds of angry parents and church people claimed the panel was acting illegally.

"It would take the National Guard to stop our church from educating our children," said Aubrey Vaughan, a Houston Baptist minister. "We are concerned the state bureaucracy is trying to control our life."

The proposed rules would set definite standards for teachers and curriculum in private and church schools. Also opposing the rules are parents who want to teach their children at home.

The recommendation of the board's committee on students goes to the full 15-member board today for a preliminary vote.

The mass of men, women and children, many of them traveling in church buses, promised they would return in April for a three-hour public hearing before the April meeting of the board.

Many of the protesters gathered on the south lawn of the Capitol Friday afternoon for a rally after the committee's desision.

Rep. Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, told the committee he did not feel the state board had authority to set regulations on private and parochial schools. "The only rulemaking authority the board has is with public schools supported by tax money," he said.

Roberts said the proposed rules apparently would allow a student violating the rules to be placed in foster home or with the Texas Youth Commission.

Rep. Tom Waldrop, D-Corsicana, also said he opposed the rules.

Janis Petronis, executive vice president of the Texas Association of School Boards, said state officials need to regulate private schools.

"There is no point to this (public school) reform if a whole group of children are allowed to fall through the cracks," she said.

After a stormy session with the board committee Friday morning, many of the protesters went to the Capitol seeking out their hometown legislators to register their complaints.

The proposed rules say students must attend public schools unless they are enrolled in private or parochial schools that meet state standards for qualified teachers and basic curriculum. The only requirement now for private and church schools is they must teach a course in good citizenship.

Jack Strong, chairman of the students committee, offered the several hundred protesters a compromise Friday morning that quieted at least some of them.

Strong said the committee had agreed to make the rules effective in September 1987, not 1988, so the Legislature that meets next January can change the regulations, if it decides to do so.

Also, Strong proposed a public hearing before the board's meeting in April to let everyone be heard.

Many of the protesters said they did not hear of the proposed changes until the last day or two.

"You took God out of the public schools and we want to keep God in our schools," protested Frank Fore, a Baptist pastor in the Fort Worth-Dallas area. "The state has no right to tell me how to raise my children."

Outside the Texas Education Agency building, Jerry Waddle, Baptist pastor in the Houston area, carried a sign reading: "No law restricting an establishment of religion."

"You have no jurisdiction over a private or parochial school," Sandy McKasson of Dallas told the committee. "This subject should not be even discussed at this state body."

"Any attempt of the state to regulate the private school affairs violates the Constitution," said Heather McDonald of Fort Worth. "Parents should be allowed to choose what form of education they want for their children."

"We beat you academically all across the state," said Blain Shaw, an Arlington pastor. "Now you're trying to tell us how to run our schools."

The proposed new regulation would require that teachers in a private or parochial school must have a baccalaureate degree from a recognized college or university and must be qualified by education or experience to teach.

Private schools would be required to teach the basic curriculum required by the state, including a course on good citizenship. Additional courses could be taught, such as Bible study.

The rules do not say where private schools must be located. They do require that state laws on the length of the school day and the school year must be followed.

If the amended rule is adopted by the full board today, it would be reviewed a month from now and voted on a third time in May.

Texas Coalition for Life endorses Loeffler

AUSTIN (AP) — The anti-abortion Texas Coalition for Life on Friday endorsed Republican gubernatorial candidate Tom Loeffler, saying Bill Clements and Kent Hance lack Loeffler's track record on pro-life issues.

Although all three GOP candidates have voiced pro-life positions, Loeffler is a longtime supporter, said coalition director Bill Price.

"Congressman Loeffler has stood by our side when very few other people were standing there. His record is one that we can support," Price said.

Calling it a "delightful position" to have all the Republican candidates on their side, Price said many of his group's members found problems with Clements and Hance.

"It was a tough call. But I think there's something to be said for loyalty," he said.

"Bill Clements contends that he has always been pro-life, but he never gave us any support as leader of the Republican Party or as governor.

"Mr. Hance proclaims that he has changed his mind on abortion, and we are grateful for that. However, the fact remains that as a congressman in a conservative district he had a 100 percent pro-abortion voting record," Price said.

The Dallas-based coalition is made up of about 25 groups, representing some 100,000 people, Price said. He said most would be voting in the Republican primary on May 3.

"In a close race, the pro-life vote can be the margin of victory. It can't turn a campaign by itself, we can't make up 25 or 30 points, but in a close election...it can be the margin of victory," Price said.

Price also downplayed this week's endorsement of Hance by television evangelist Pat Robertson, a prospective 1988 presidential candidate.

"I was surprised that a candidate running for president, as it appears he is, would take sides in this contest. I was a little bit disappointed," Price said.

- The Texas AFL-CIO said it will hold a convention in Austin on Tuesday and Wednesday to endorse candidates in the Democratic primary. Approximately 1,200 delegates are expected from local unions statewide.
- Diana Denman of San Antonio, vice chairman of the Texas Republican Party, announced she will seek the party's top job. GOP Chairman George Strake of Houston has said he doesn't intend to run again.

Husband's shooting pushed Sarah Brady into lobbying campaign for gun control

Brady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after her family's life was shattered by bullets intended for President Reagan, Sarah Brady is waging a personal lobbying campaign for gun control.

Deliberately and calmly, Mrs. Brady, the wife of White House Press Secretary James Brady, set out last September to work against a hotly contested bill on Capitol Hill and, over time, educate the public about gun control.

Gun control was on Mrs. Brady's mind long before her husband was shot during the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan. Back in the 1970s, one of her girlfriends was shot to death with her own revolver in a lover's spat.

It is Brady's situation, however, that makes Mrs. Brady's appeal so poignant. "Our happy lives were changed forever," she said in a fund-raising letter for Handgun Control Inc.

The Senate's passage of the so-called McClure-Volkmer bill, which would generally weaken the 1968 federal gun control law, "mocked my husband's suffering," she said. "And it mocked the survivors of those 20,000 handgun victims each year who were not as 'fortunate' as Jim was."

Brady, who has brain damage and wears a leg brace as a result of the shots fired by John W. Hinckley Jr.'s .22-caliber pistol on March 30, 1981, is not involved in his wife's lobbying.

"It's your show," he told her in refusing to be photographed during an interview at their house in Arlington, Va., a few miles from the Washington Hilton, where he and Reagan were shot.

Mrs. Brady's outspoken stand against the McClure-Volkmer bill, named after its chief sponsors, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., puts her at odds with the Reagan administration's support of the measure.

But that doesn't bother Mrs. Brady, who, as a volunteer for Handgun Control Inc., has written letters and editorials, testified before a House committee, appeared on television and buttonholed Republican friends at social functions.

"I have not run into Ed Meese (the attorney general) recently, but I have written to him....He himself has admitted there are problems with the bill," she said.

Mrs. Brady, 44, said she's not completely comfortable with the public spotlight.

"My husband's accident made me more visible," she said.

Since the shooting, she has spent most of her time caring for her husband, who cannot be left alone, and running her household. Although the Bradys have lent their names to causes benefiting the handicapped, gun control is the first "issue-oriented" campaign Mrs. Brady has undertaken.

The McClure-Volkmer bill was passed by the Senate and is pending in a House committee. Among other things, the measure would permit currently banned interstate sales of firearms and ease record-keeping.

The National Rifle Association, a principal backer of the bill, contends the 1968 law is unduly burdensome for law-abiding gun owners and dealers. Police groups oppose the bill on the grounds it would make it easier for criminals to buy guns.

Mrs. Brady said she has urged a "common sense" approach to gun control, and she finds few people disagree with her position. "One guy called me a communist and told me to go back to Russia," she said. "Other than that, most people have agreed with me."

"I am trying to say, 'Look, nobody is trying to take your guns....What we are trying to do is...tighten up,'" she said, claiming that many people have a "cavalier, careless attitude with guns."

Audrey Benson, a spokeswoman for the NRA, said the organization is sympathetic to Mrs. Brady's situation, but doesn't believe the defeat of McClure-Volkmer or other Handgun Control Inc. positions could have stopped the Reagan assassination attempt.

Mrs. Brady disagreed. Besides the defeat of the McClure-Volkmer bill, she wants manufacturers to register all guns so they can be traced. She also advocates a "cooling off" period for officials to check police records after someone applies to buy a gun.

Such a waiting period, she contended, could have stopped Hinckley from buying a gun in Dallas. "He just walked into a pawn shop, purchased a cheap 'Saturday Night Special' with no questions asked of him," she said.

"Had there been a federal law requiring a waiting period, police would have stopped him from buying a handgun in Texas," she said.

At trial, Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity and is incarcerated at a mental hospital.

Stolen credit card 'Visa' to $140,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — A suburban Virginia man has pleaded guilty to fraud in using a stolen Visa credit card to obtain more that $140,000 from three automatic teller machines in one weekend.

Each of the cash withdrawals from bank machines tied to the Visa network was approved by the credit card company's 10-year-old computer authorization system, which "had not anticipated that such a situation would arise," a company official told the Washington Post.

Caputo used the credit card 400 times on Oct. 19 and 20, receiving a total of $140,130, averaging $300 per withdrawal and all in $10 and $20 bills, according to court records and law enforcement officials.

"The transactions were authorized not because of the cleverness and smartness of Mr. Caputo, but because of a glitch in the system," said the official, who was not identified. The authorization system has since been changed.

Caputo, smiling broadly, was photographed by remote cameras as he made repeated transactions at bank machines in Washington and northern Virginia. He was seen making a cash transaction and then moving to the rear of a line of customers to wait his turn before making another transaction, officials said.

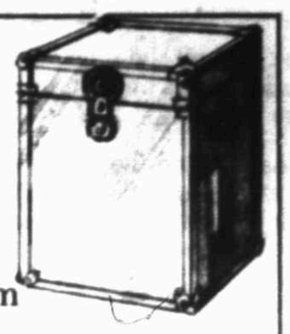

It was not clear how Caputo obtained the card, which belonged to John D. Schrott Jr., of McLean, Va., along with the personal identification number needed to make the card work, John Magaw, special agent in charge of the Washington field office of the Secret Service, told the Post.

RATES

that such an action would accelerate the already-rapid decline in the value of the dollar.

The move by West Germany and Japan to cut their discount rates gave the Fed additional leeway because it took some of the downward pressure off the dollar, some analysts reasoned. The value of a country's currency is strongly influenced by interest rates as investors transfer capital from country to country in search of the highest rates.

Analysts predicted that a variety of interest rates, including mortgage rates, will decline by between one-half to three-fourths of a percentage point in coming months.

While fixed-rate mortgages are being offered for as low as 9.75 percent in some parts of the country, the nationwide average is 10.5 percent, still down sharply from rates above 13 percent just a year ago.

The low rates have spurred a boom in housing construction and sales and many economists feel the strength in housing will filter through to other areas of the economy, boosting economic growth substantially this year over 1985's performance.

However, the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate shot up to 7.3 percent in February from 6.7 percent the month before. While this was the biggest rise in six years, it was attributed not to a weaker economy but to bad weather and other special circumstances in states with large labor forces.

The Fed action put the discount rate at its lowest point since May 1978. The central bank in late 1979 began tightening its controls on credit, pushing interest rates to record levels in an effort to halt soaring inflation. The effort succeeded, but not before the prime rate had been pushed to 21.5 percent, and the country had been plunged into the steepest recession since World War II.

Volcker has expressed fears recently that the decline of the dollar posed the danger of re-igniting inflation once more, but he joined with five other board members in approving the cut Thursday evening. Board member Martha Seeger was absent.

The action capped a week in which the financial markets had been buffeted by rumors that the four members of the Federal Reserve Board appointed by President Reagan were determined to push for a discount rate cut even if Volcker was opposed.

In announcing the decision, the Fed said: "Prospects for sustaining improved price performance and continuing restraint on costs have been further enhanced by the recent sharp declines in oil prices and the economic expansion appears to be proceeding within the nation's growth potential."

Midlander charged with possession

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Midland man was being held in county jail in lieu of a $50,000 bond Friday night after being charged with possession of cocaine.

Jose Cruz Iglesias was arrested Thursday night at his home at 1705 Checotah by sheriff's investigators executing a search warrant. They found 7.3 grams of suspected cocaine on his person, according to Midland Sheriff Gary Painter.

The street value of seized drugs was $900, Painter said.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

In other reports, Tom Moses of Framing Square Lumber Co. reported that someone broke into the business on County Road 1285 North sometime between Thursday night and Friday morning by jumping a fence and kicking open a door, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

The burglar caused $250 in damage to a Coke machine, from which he took about $20 in assorted coins. There was also about $150 in damage to a door frame in the burglary, reports said.

Oilfield company declares bankruptcy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Smith International Inc., the oilfield services concern staggered by a $207 million patent-infringement judgment last month, Friday filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court for Chapter 11 protection from creditors.

The action had been expected since a U.S. District Court judge on Feb. 14 ordered Smith, based in the Orange County community of Newport Beach, to pay the $207 million judgment to Hughes Tool Co. of Houston.

Smith, which has indicated it is considering appealing, said it will continue operating while it reorganizes its finances under Chapter 11.

Smith, which has been fighting the patent case in the courts for 14 years, won initial skirmishes. But last year a federal judge ruled in favor of Hughes, postponing setting the size of the judgment until February.

Smith had set aside $22.8 million in a reserve to pay expected damages in the case but indicated it felt the award might be as large as about $60 million.

At the time, it warned that a substantially larger judgment "could be material to the company's financial position."

Less than a week after the judgment was handed down, Smith warned that it could be forced to default on some rules covering virtually all its $260 million in debt.

Those rules require Smith to maintain a net worth of at least $350 million.

As of last June 30, the company had a net worth of about $399 million.

Smith is a worldwide supplier of products and services in the oil and gas drilling industries.

Its dispute with Hughes was over Smith's use of a seal ring for rock drilling bits patented by Hughes in the 1960s. Smith argued that Hughes' patent was invalid and that Smith's variation of the device wasn't patent infringement.

Smith produced 470,000 bits using the device between 1972 and 1984 and sold them for a total of $1.3 billion. Hughes had sought damages and interest of about $1 billion.

CBS journalists expelled from South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government on Friday ordered three CBS News journalists expelled after the network broadcast film of a funeral for black riot victims, violating a court ban on cameras at the service.

The expulsion was the latest in a series of conflicts in recent months between the government and the media.

Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha said a court had rejected an appeal Tuesday night by CBS and other networks against a police ban on audio-visual equipment at a funeral on Wednesday for 17 black riot victims in the township of Alexandra, near Johannesburg.

American producer William Mutschmann, Canadian reporter Allen Pizzey and Dutch cameraman Wim de Vos were ordered to leave the country by Tuesday.

OIL

Without help from Reagan, the governor said, "Texas, alone, stands to lose $10 billion in gross production and as many as 170,000 energy related jobs." For the 12 months ending in January, the state lost 32,000 jobs in oil and gas extraction, oil field machinery manufacture and petroleum refining.

On Feb. 21, White asked Reagan to use his emergency powers to impose a temporary tariff on imported oil and refined products.

The president emphatically rejected the idea of any kind of an oil tax Wednesday. In addition, some members of Congress from cold climates are resisting so strongly that a bill imposing the same tariff is given little chance of success, with or without the president's support.

White said he has a strategy — unsuccessful so far — to convince northern Congressmen that their constituents benefit as much from a strong Texas oil and gas industry as they do from cheaper fuel bills.

"This is a vital national security issue," he said. "Our bombers and tanks and many of our ships are only so much scrap metal if they have no dependable domestic fuel source in times of national emergency."

White said he doesn't believe Reagan has made a final decision, adding that the president hasn't always rejected import tariffs on ideological grounds.

"Somehow or another they've found a way to put a (25 percent) tariff on asparagus," he said. "Asparagus may be a national security issue, but I don't think so."

The governor rejected the notion that artificially boosting oil prices with an import fee hits the poor the hardest. "The worst thing you can do to people is to put them out of a job," he said.

White also brushed off questions of how the economic slump would effect his re-election campaign. "We're not worried about that," he said. "We're worried about Texas."

TRANSTAR

Many of the routes being eliminated are in direct competition with flights operated by Southwest Airlines, which recently purchased Muse and renamed it TranStar. According to a company spokeswoman, TranStar is moving its hub from Dallas, where Southwest is centered, to Houston, and changing its emphasis from short-haul to long-haul.

TranStar currently operates four daily flights between Midland and Love Field in Dallas. Southwest operates six flights to and from Love Field, and American Airlines operates four flights to and from Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

PPO

"We're only talking about 20 percent of the population who are even eligible for this kind of service," he said.

According to Reese, the hospital can only approach employers who pay out-of-pocket medical expenses.

"A large employer with 1,000 employees may pay $1 million out of pocket before their insurance coverage goes into effect," he said. "We're targeting that $1 million."

MMH President Ray Branson said that the hospital would be the first employer to be included in the PPO. MMH employs approximately 800 workers.

The idea for the PPO first surfaced in late summer 1985, said a MMH report, when a group of physicians approached the hospital to discuss the changing health trends that are occurring in both Midland and nationwide.

"These discussions led to a series of educational sessions for which noted outside health care experts were invited to speak," said the report. "From these sessions, the group of physicians became convinced that the changes in health care that were taking place in virtually every metropolitan area would likely be coming to the Midland-Odessa area in the near future. These physicians became acutely interested in preparing the physician community to influence its own destiny."

The result was the feasibility study conducted by The Oakmark Corporation of Austin, which pinpointed the PPO out of several options which included health maintenance organizations (HMOs) and independent practice associations (IPAs).

The PPO is a three-stage project, said MMH, which includes feasibility, development and implementation.

"If the project continues through the implementation phase, it is possible to have the system up and running in nine to 12 months," said MMH officials.

JAVITS

He worked his way through New York University Law School as a bill collector and went on to become a successful attorney in practice with his older brother, Ben.

He got his first taste of politics in the 1941 mayoral campaign of another liberal Republican, Fiorello LaGuardia, then served in World War II with the Chemical Warfare Service, returning home as a lieutenant colonel to resume his practice.

His first run for public office, in 1946, was for Congress in a strongly Democratic district on the Upper West Side that included Columbia University and part of Harlem. He won the seat and held it for four terms.

The odds also were against him in his next race, for state attorney general in 1954. He faced a famous political name, Franklin Roosevelt Jr., and defeated the son of the former president, bucking a Democratic sweep.

In 1956, Javits ran for the Senate against Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr., son of another Democratic Party stalwart and a proven vote-getter in his own right. Again Javits came from behind and won.

For more than 20 years, Javits was immune from strong Democratic challenges. But in 1980, one year after he felt the first symptoms of his disease, he was unseated by a virtual unknown from his own party, Alfonse D'Amato. The conservative used what Javits described as a "ghoulish" campaign, attacking the incumbent's health and age.

D'Amato on Friday praised Javits for "a record of service and achievement that will be long remembered. His dignity in the face of a chronic debilitating disease underscored Senator Javits' courage and personal strength."

Javits frequently said he became a Republican not in spite of his liberal beliefs, but because of them.

"I joined the Republican Party because it was the reform party," he said, adding that when he first entered politics, he associated Democrats with corrupt big-city machines and Southern racism.

Javits saw himself as the last of a line of liberal New York Republicans that began with LaGuardia and extended through Govs. Thomas Dewey and Nelson Rockefeller.

It was Rockefeller, as dean of New York Republicans, who for many years protected Javits from conservative challengers within the party. Ironically, it was also Rockefeller's presidential ambitions that thwarted Javits' dream of being the first Jew to win, or even to seek, the office.

"Every politican wants the gold ring," he said late in life, and called his inability to run for president his "greatest disappointment."

Javits was proud of his role in limiting the war powers of the White House, establishing the model cities program, aiding the arts and providing education to the handicapped.

He was a steadfast supporter of Israel, but spoke out against the Israeli policy of settling occupied territories when he felt that policy jeopardized peace in the Middle East.

It was Javits' leading role in the civil rights battles of the 1950s and 1960s that brought him the enmity of the Senate's ruling Southern clique.

"I don't like you or your kind," the late Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., once said, glaring at Javits across a committee bench. In 1967, Sen. Richard Russell, D-Ga., reduced the size of the Appropriations Commitee, "I think just to eliminate me," Javits recalled.

Javits' first marriage, to Marjorie Ringling, a Catholic and a member of the famed circus family, ended in divorce after three years, in 1936. In 1947, he married Marian Borris, 20 years younger.

She disdained Washington as "a company town," refusing to move there. Hc commuted between New York and Washington, and they had three children — Joy, Joshua and Carla.

SCC

The SSC is, in actuality, a massive particle accelerator that would allow selected particles to travel in the 100-mile circle at speeds just short of the speed of light. The tunnel would house about two billion feet of special wire (niobium-titanium), enough to circle the Earth 16 times. The 150 megawatts of electricity that would be required to power the SSC would be enough to provide lights for a city of about 15,000 people, according to project supporters.

Estimated cost of the SSC is about $6 billion, according to Mark.

The chancellor said he doesn't expect the SSC to be funded by Congress until about 1988 and construction could begin shortly thereafter.

Although the future site for the project remains undecided, Mark believes the technological work done by McIntyre and ground work conducted done by West Texas chambers of commerce may well influence the decision when it is finally made by the Department of Energy.

Tunnel under Cumberland Gap pioneers diverse layers of geology

MIDDLESBORO, Ky. (AP) — Engineers who have started digging a tunnel under the Cumberland Gap, the only natural break in a mountain ridge extending from Georgia to Maine, hope to improve travel while turning back time to the days when Daniel Boone cleared the Wilderness Road for settlers.

Laborers working on the $156 million project are to use 300,000 cubic yards of rock dug out of the mountain while making twin 36-foot-wide, 32-foot-high tunnels to cover the steep, twisting three miles of U.S. 23 through Cumberland Gap National Historical Park and recreate the rude wagon trail of the 1700s.

Since the 1960s, studies have recommended a tunnel to improve the road without further damage to the historic gap, where 300 years ago the trail was a buffalo trace and later an Indian "Warrior's Path."

After years of on-again, off-again battles over the appropriation in Congress and a five-month funding freeze by the executive branch last year, the pilot bore finally started in December.

By December 1992, four lanes of traffic are to sweep through corridors nearly a mile long and nearly 1,000 feet beneath the mountain separating Middlesboro, Ky., and Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

The project promises to eliminate the last two-lane chokepoint in the 100 miles of U.S. 25E between Interstate 75 at Corbin, Ky., and I-81 at Morristown, Tenn.

Some of the aura of the unknown from Boone's day remains.

The gap's potentially dangerous geology, for example, calls for unusual precautions, including the use of spark-free equipment approved for mining in explosive atmospheres.

The work began with immense earthmoving efforts at the tunnel approaches and with a crew starting into the depths of the mountain, like scouts of old, with a 10-foot-square pilot bore.

"No tunnels are easy," said project engineer Bob Campbell, a veteran of 27 years with the Federal Highway Administration.

On a recent tour of the site, Campbell's four-wheel-drive truck lurched as he maneuvered to avoid heavy machinery swarming over mountains of fill at the Kentucky and Tennessee ends of the projected tunnel, clearing the future swath of the four-lane highway through the hills and woods.

"This is ancient geology," he said. "It's not wise from an engineering standpoint to start into the mountain with a 36-foot tunnel."

Campbell returned to the United States in 1983 after a two-year tour as one of 16 engineers sent to develop roads in Saudi Arabia. The tunnel was his next assignment. "I've studied and read everything I could about the project," he said.

The gap cuts through a ridge, or overthrust, created when the Earth's crust cracked and one edge rode up over the other. "This mountain runs all the way to Maine and there's no other natural gap in it," Campbell said.

The road, built in 1916 and reconstructed in the 1960s, averages 17,600 vehicles a day. Sixteen percent are trucks that crawl over the grade at an average of 16 mph. Deaths, injuries and property damage in accidents are six times the national average.

The small pilot tunnel, which will take eight months to drill and blast, will be enlarged to form one of the final corridors. Thirty-six feet into the mountain it was in a sandstone layer, the first of about 15 sloping strata of sandstone, limestone, shale and dolomite Campbell expects to encounter.

The rock is under 150,000 pounds of pressure from the mountain above, he said. "If you make a hole is it going to stay there or is it going to move? We don't know that until we get there."

In the heavily instrumented pilot bore, some gadgets will measure almost to the millimeter how thick a section moves in any shift of the rock. Other indicators will tell the direction. Convergence points will confirm whether it is the roof, walls or floor moving, and stress and strain gauges will detect any potential "catastrophic failure," Campbell said.

Project engineer Bob Campbell walks from the mouth of the 10-foot pilot bore which us digging through diverse geological layers to start construction of twin highway tunnels under Cumberland Gap, between Kentucky and Tennessee.

TWA cancels half its flights

Frankovich

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines canceled half its flights on Friday as it squared off against flight attendants who walked out rather than accept pay cuts the airline says it needs to survive.

TWA Chairman Carl Icahn claimed strong support from other employees, but several hundred machinists honored picket lines at the airline's major maintenance base in Kansas City.

TWA canceled half the flights from its domestic hub in St. Louis, all service from Newark Airport in New Jersey and flights to Copenhagen, Denmark; Barcelona, Spain; Tel Aviv, Israel, and Athens, Greece, on the first day of a strike by 5,700 members of the Independent Federation of Flight Attendants.

Drawing on 1,500 newly hired flight attendants and as many ticket agents and other employees trained for cabin duties, the airline aimed to resume normal operations within four days, said Icahn.

"TWA, I can tell you now for sure, is here to stay," Icahn said. "Contrary to what you might have heard, all of our employee groups are supporting us. Many of them were up all night and they are working around the clock."

U.S. District Judge Howard F. Sachs in Kansas City, Mo., denied TWA's request for a temporary order to keep 10,000 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers on the job, including nearly 3,200 who work at the airline's maintenance base there.

TWA spokesman Vic Segale in Kansas City said that only about 100 workers reported for the day shift at the maintenance base, while more than 800 stayed away. In some cities, however, machinists continued working and the airline claimed that most were reporting.

Half the airline's flights were suspended on Friday, Icahn told a news conference in Washington, and he estimated TWA would lose as much as $50 million even if it restores full service as quickly as he hopes.

"The board of directors and management of TWA finally stood up and did something that we had to do," Icahn said. "In the first quarter we're losing $125 million. We cannot exist when we are paying our flight attendants close to $50,000 a year with perks. The average salary is $35,000 per year, and we pay them this to work 11 days a month."

Sally McElwreath, TWA's director of corporate communications, said at least some service was maintained to all domestic destinations.

"It's not a lark," flight attendant Nancy McGuire said on a picket line in Kansas City, Mo. "We feel that no matter what the elements, we're fighting for our livelihoods."

"We're going to shut this place down," union President Victoria Frankovich said after talks collapsed early Friday morning. "We went as far as we could...far beyond what other groups in this property were required to do."

Pilots, who signed a no-strike contract in January, were not honoring the picket lines, Ms. McElwreath said.

From New York, TWA canceled 12 of 14 flights from La Guardia Airport and 15 of 53 from Kennedy.

Also suspended were 13 of 19 flights from Chicago, 40 percent of the service at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, seven of the 11 daily departures from Indianapolis, 10 of 14 flights from Kansas City and two of the four flights from Minneapolis-St. Paul, according to airline officials in those cities.

Several international flights were canceled: a leg from Madrid to Barcelona; a leg from London to Copenhagen; and flights from New York to Tel Aviv and Athens. TWA's Chicago-London service and flights from Boston to London and Paris also were canceled.

Icahn, the financier who took over the airline in January, said the carrier was prepared to weather the strike.

"With the cost-cutting that we're doing, we think we are going to be OK," he said. "We have $600 million in cash right now and we are going to survive."

TWA, under pressure from low-cost competitors and declining traffic, reported losses of $193.1 million last year. Icahn, who won wage and work-rule concessions from pilots and machinists, had sought a 22 percent wage cut from flight attendants.

The airline also cut pay 15 percent for its managers and 5,400 non-union employees earlier this year. Company officials had estimated the annual savings from all those cuts at $275 million.

Analysts say strike by TWA flight attendants not immediate threat

NATION

NEW YORK (AP) — The walkout by Trans World Airlines flight attendants is not an immediate threat to the money-losing carrier because it came during the slack season and other employees are working, industry analysts say.

But if pilots or machinists refuse to cross picket lines in a prolonged strike, then TWA could suffer and Pan Am, American and United likely would benefit the most because their routes compete most directly, several analysts predicted.

"There'll be minimal hurt, particularly if TWA can keep flying, and it sounds as if there's at least that possibility," said Lee Howard, vice president of Airline Economics Inc., a Washington consulting firm. "As long as nobody else honors the picket lines, they should make it."

TWA's 5,700 flight attendants, represented by the Indepedendent Federation of Flight Attendants, struck the country's fifth largest airline Friday after talks deadlocked on labor concessions that TWA chairman Carl C. Icahn had demanded to save money. About half TWA's flights were canceled Friday, the airline said.

The carrier lost $193.1 million in 1985 because of declining traffic, high labor expenses and competition from low-cost rivals. It expects to lose up to $125 million for the first three months of this year, even without the strike.

Industry analysts emphasized flight attendants are the easiest part of a flight crew to replace. Icahn had prepared for a possible walkout by hiring 1,500 replacements and training 1,500 non-union employees as backups.

Moreover, TWA pilots must work under a no-strike clause in their contract. But some machinists honored picket lines, and TWA said only about 100 reported for the day shift Friday at the carrier's key maintenance center in Kansas City, Mo.

The strike coincided with TWA's slowest season, particularly in the North Atlantic market, which it dominates with 18 percent of the traffic, followed by Pan Am with 12 percent and British Airways with 10 percent. Analysts said the slack period would cushion the strike's impact.

"Provided the pilots and mechanics continue to work, then TWA can certainly mount a limited operation to begin with and gradually build up a normal operation," said Louis Fourie, an analyst with the New York investment firm Mabon Nugent & Co.

"This sort of strike, where the company is able to mount a rather large operation, probably won't change the outlook for their loss at all," he said. "If anything, they might lose less."

He noted that about 75 percent of TWA's fleet of 165 planes are wide-body jets, so the airline can fly large numbers of passengers with fewer aircraft, therefore requiring fewer flight attendants.

At the same time, some analysts remained skeptical of TWA's ability to survive in the era of deregulation, particularly in the hands of Icahn, a New York financier familiar with company takeovers but not airline management.

Icahn has claimed repeatedly that he wants to make a success out of TWA. Earlier this month he announced plans to buy Ozark Air Lines for $250 million, but said a crippling strike might force him to consider the possibility of dismantling TWA and selling it piecemeal. He later backed away from that option.

Some analysts expressed doubt that TWA could endure a protracted strike, recalling the 29-day walkout by United Airlines pilots in 1985 that caused a severe drop in traffic for that carrier and a $48.7 million loss for the year.

"It will depend very much on how long the strike lasts," said Thomas Canning, who follows airlines for Standard & Poor's Corp. "A short strike is not damaging. Four or five days or a week won't be disastrous."

Alfonso Garcia, left, and Hector Recio, cook fajitas over mesquite coals near Recio's home in Premont, Texas.

Fajitas' popularity spreading

PREMONT, Texas (AP) — Hector Recio can't understand why fajitas, the sizzling Tex-Mex cuisine making its way north, has become so popular in recent years.

He can remember the beef skirts used as scrap meat 50 years ago, when he was 8 years old.

"...I was raised on them. And who would have thought that fajitas would ever pick up like they did," he said.

Recio's father was a butcher northwest of this South Texas community and Recio had to get up early to help him slaughter steers.

"The first thing they did after slaughtering it was to get the liver and the fajitas and to put them right on the coals," he said.

The beef skirt has been popular in the Southwest and particularly among Mexican-American families in South Texas for generations. Within the last five years, however, the popularity has extended beyond the Red River.

Beef industry officials hope the fajita will change the minds of weight-conscious consumers who are staying away from red meat.

"We feel it is answering some of the consumer demands in that it can be a lighter product in a small portion size. It can be an appetizer or an entree," said Mary Adolf, director of food services and retail program for the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Fajitas — little belts in Spanish — hold in place the cattle's heart and lungs. There are only two fajitas on each calf or steer and they range in size from 12 to 18 inches in length depending on the animal.

Fajitas also were used for ground meat, but are now making their way to the Midwest and Manhattan.

"I think that Mexican food is becoming more popular and more widespread...and it has [illegible] as more traditional foods, like fajitas, become better known," said Bill McMillan, a former [illegible] Department of Agriculture.

"It's good food, good flavor and different. They had been [illegible] confined to the border states until more recent years and now have become more widely known and widely accepted," said McMillan, former USDA assistant secretary for marketing.

Because of their demand the most tender fajitas are becoming expensive — about $3 a pound in grocery stores and more for prepared dishes in restaurants across the country.

That price compares with about 10 cents a pound for fajitas in the 1960s, Recio said.

Ms. Adolf said that northern Mexican restaurants have added fajitas to their menus and that hotels across the country also have included it in their restaurants.

Restaurants have different ways of preparing fajitas. Some marinate them, using special spices to tenderize and season the meat. Some even have substituted more tender cuts of meat.

Others prepare them with green peppers and onions. Some have added chicken fajitas to their menus.

Many restaurants are broiling them over mesquite coals.

Most serve the beef fajitas in strips, sizzling hot with flour tortillas and such toppings as guacamole, cheese, sour cream and "pico de gallo," a mixture of onions, green peppers and tomatoes.

"It's a real tasty piece of meat if you fix it right," Recio said. "You can ruin a fajita..."

Two years ago, Recio and his son, Homero, traveled through South Texas and northern Mexico in search of the origin of fajitas.

Homero Recio, a lecturer of animal science at Texas A&M University, obtained a fellowship to find out more about fajitas. His research led him back to his own family.

"I think it was daddy who was the first, according to mother who is still alive, to come up with the term — fajita," the elder Recio said.

He said when he was growing up barbecue pits or grills were unheard of and meat had to be placed directly on the mesquite coals. Fajitas had skin on them and that kept the juices inside.

Recio said the emerging popularity of Tex-Mex food, especially fajitas, is ironic.

He remembers when he used to be ashamed of it when he was going to school with Anglos. Back then, tacos and sandwiches, like the children that brought them for lunch, did not mix, Recio said.

"We were taught to respect and to be ashamed, I guess, of what we were," Recio said.

Couple last remaining residents of smallest city

HOVE MOBILE PARK CITY, N.D. (AP) — Every four years, Howard and Marion Hove scratch each other's backs.

She votes for him as mayor; he votes for her as auditor.

Together, they run Hove City, population 2.

"The official population is still three because the census hasn't been taken since our son moved," Mrs. Hove said.

Hove City is the smallest incorporated community in the state, edging out Grano, pop. 4.

Hove City, incorporated in 1972, lived and died by the antiballistic missile site built near Nekoma in the early 1970s. The $6 billion missile project drew hundreds of construction workers to the area and pumped millions of dollars into local economies.

But the site, designed to intercept enemy missiles before a strike, closed just after it opened on Oct. 1, 1975. Congress stopped funding in January 1976 because lawmakers found the operation too costly and vulnerable to an attack.

The site closed Feb. 10, 1976, one day after President Jimmy Carter signed the bill into law. The U.S. Army Strategic Defense Command still owns the main complex, but there are no plans to use it, according to spokesman Jerry Berg.

The Hoves have held onto their town all these years with the hope the site would reopen one day. Now that they have retired, they are planning to sell their land and dissolve the city.

The Hoves never planned on running a town anyway, just a trailer court. They cleared out a wheat field on their farm in 1970, and pumped water to the park from their well, built by Hove's grandfather a century ago.

By 1972, the Hoves had 79 neighbors in 27 trailers. They also had more problems than they bargained on. Neighbors who had problems with other neighbors saw the Hoves as mediators.

"It was a lot more fun after we incorporated," Mrs. Hove said. "It developed more of a feeling of camaraderie. Neighbors started to work together, rather than sort of against each other."

Hove was elected mayor in the city's first election, and he's still listed as mayor in the Directory of North Dakota Cities. Four others were elected to the City Commission.

The Hoves don't remember how residents came to settle on the rather cumbersome name of Hove Mobile Park City — but they do remember they had quite a time being recognized.

"The state wouldn't give us a sign," Hove said. "They said, 'Well, we can't give a sign to every little thing that comes up.'"

Town meetings were held in the Hove kitchen, and their den later became an official polling place. Hove recalled that the 1972 presidential election "went Democrat, no question about that. There were only four Republicans living here — well six, including my wife and I."

The annual budget, usually about $800, took care of the city's biggest expenditure — snow removal. The mayor drove the plow.

There were no businesses in Hove City, although two liquor licenses were available. The Hoves donated land for a park, and the city bought playground equipment for the children.

The trailer park closed in 1976, and with it went every resident in the city except for the Hoves. The city still receives monthly revenue from the state highway tax — about $6 — and every six months, it receives $6 from the state cigarette tax. The Hoves use the money to maintain a church steeple that sits in their yard.

Today, the area that was once a trailer park is barren. The Hoves sold the six trailers they owned and removed the mailboxes that lined their driveway.

Town reports open door on life in Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — In Barnard the big news is picnickers can relax: the pig problem has been solved.

In Fletcher, town officials report that Derek Geno received $74.35 for mowing the town lawn last year.

And in Chelsea the word is that the Park Commission started its tree planting project last fall — and members hope to continue planting this year.

Annual town reports are out, providing a snapshot of life in Vermont 1985.

The reports are prepared by local officials for this week's town meetings, the one time a year when residents are free to grill their elected and appointed officials about town affairs. And they are must reading in every community.

How else could residents in Barnard know that there were six births, six marriages and eight deaths in their town last year? And without a town report, Whitingham residents may forget which of their neighbors hold such high offices as fence viewer, tree warden and weighers of coal.

Town reports also provide communities with an opportunity to trumpet their accomplishments.

Manchester officials boast that 1985 saw a new water system come on line; Athens officials report that "for years the town has dreamed of building a town garage. Today the town garage is no longer a dream, but a reality."

In Peacham, the town clerk reports that "Duncan Bond painted the town office and garage after Ralph Page did some much-needed repairs. He nailed down clapboards, replaced bad ones, closed in some old windows and put vents in the two buildings."

And in Rochester, Fire Chief Terry Severy details the 19 fire calls answered by his volunteer department. There was "one house fire, one barn, two cars, two furnaces, seven chimney, three grass, two forest and one dump." Adds Severy: "Fires were down from last year, which we are glad of."

No town official seems prouder, though, then Kenneth Cooper, the first constable of Barnard:

"Thanks to the cooperation of Jim Maynes, our pig problem was solved and the neighbors of the 'Wild Bunch' were able to go about their summer without sharing picnics with the little porkers," Cooper writes.

The prime purpose of the reports is to provide a picture of town finances. The origin of the annual financial statements is an 1894 state law, asking communities to provide an annual auditor's report.

Readers can thus find complete listings, down to the last dime, of the town's assets, payments and liabilities.

In Fletcher, readers can find out that $54.34 was paid to Aubuchon Hardware for paint; $93.57 went to Dowlings for a calculator; and the tax collector was reimbursed $10.16 for telephone calls.

In Hancock, interested townspeople can scan the complete inventory of equipment at the local fire department. Included in the listing is a 1937 Chevrolet truck and 1,400 feet of single jacket hose.

The budgets are carefully read by townspeople, and every town has at least one person who carefully checks how much sand and salt were spread on roads. In Warren this year, town officials need not worry about that: the annual report shows $45,000 was budgeted last year for winter sand and salt — and only $17,764 was spent.

Over the years the reports have evolved into more than just a set of figures. They offer a detailed picture of the town, its people, problems and potential.

Included in the reports are the minutes of the 1985 meeting, so residents in Lunenburg, for example, can be reminded that "Jeremy York led us in the flag salute."

Most towns dedicate their reports to someone special.

On the cover of the Chester town report is a picture of town highway and water and sewer department employees. "These dedicated individuals have a combined total of 102 years service to the town of Chester. These men keep the town's 88 miles of roads open and the water and sewer system functioning, under all weather conditions," the report says.

And West Rutland, celebrating its 100th birthday, includes a reprint of its original incorporation.

The selectmen note the birthday by saying, "This will be a year of reflection on our proud past, a celebration of the spirited present and visionary looks into the future."

Tight security planned for Palme funeral

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police said Friday they would stage the biggest security operation in Swedish history for the March 15 funeral of Prime Minister Olof Palme.

French President Francois Mitterrand, Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar are among the 600 foreign envoys, guerrilla leaders and party officials expected for the ceremony in Stockholm's neo-medieval City Hall.

Palme, 59, was shot dead Feb. 28 by a man wielding a .357-caliber Magnum revolver as he walked the streets of Stockholm with his wife Lisbet, 55, without bodyguards. She was grazed by a bullet but not seriously hurt.

Kenneth Karisson, a police spokesman, told The Associated Press that funeral guests would be protected by "the largest security apparatus Sweden has ever seen," about 1,000 uniformed and plainclothes police officers.

The gathering of international mourners will be the largest in Sweden since the funeral in 1961 of U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold, a Swede who died in an airplane crash in Africa during the Congo crisis.

King Carl XVI Gustaf will speak at Palme's funeral, said Social Democratic Party secretary Bo Toresson, adding that he believed it will be the first time a monarch has addressed the funeral of a prime minister.

Palme's Social Democratic Party is handling the arrangements.

Invitations were not extended to Paraguay or Chile, ruled by right-wing military governments, or South Africa, which practices legal racial segregation.

Afghanistan, where about 115,000 Soviet troops are helping the Marxist government fight Islamic insurgents, and Cambodia, which is occupied by Vietnamese troops, were also not invited.

Leaders expected to attend include: Prime Ministers Bettino Craxi of Italy, Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe, Felipe Gonzales of Spain and Andreas Papandreou of Greece; Presidents Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Samora Machel of Mozambique, Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua and Erich Honecker of East Germany; guerrilla leaders Oliver Tambo of the African National Congress, which is fighting apartheid in South Africa, and Sam Nujoma of the South West African People's Organization.

Meanwhile, the police commissioner said Friday he believed the underworld might help track down the assassin of Prime Minister Olof Palme so police would call off the biggest manhunt in Swedish history.

"Experience tells us that criminals will want to help, to get police off their backs," said Hans Holmer at his daily news conference.

He said police were investigating a growing number of tips and predicted they would find the slayer.

"It's a tough case, but I think we're going to solve it," Holmer said. "The thing is to keep the puzzle alive."

Holmer said police were building a computerized file of the information they collected to analyze the clues for connections.

Also, in West Germany a federal police official said experts there are examining the two bullets that killed Palme.

Two Swedish police officials brought the bullets to West German federal police headquarters in Wiesbaden, said the official, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

He said the .357-caliber Magnum bullets would be examined by experts of the West German Criminal Technical Institute in Wiesbaden and then by the FBI in Washington.

The official declined to give details of the examination and said the results would not be made public by the West Germans.

"It would be up to Swedish officials to announce the results of the investigation," he said.

Nobel won't be awarded since Palme not nominated before death

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Nobel Peace Prize cannot be posthumously awarded to Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme because he was not nominated prior to his assassination, a Nobel Committee spokesman said today.

He was responding to a report from Denmark saying some Norwegian politicians were suggesting the prize should be awarded to Palme.

"According to the rules, the Nobel Peace Prize cannot be awarded to dead persons unless they were already nominated before their death," said Jacob Sverdrup, secretary to the five-member Nobel Committee.

"Palme was not nominated before the annual Feb. 1 deadline," he said. Palme was shot dead Feb. 28.

U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden won the award posthumously in 1961. He was on the list of nominated candidates that year and died in a plane crash in September 1961.

For some Midlanders, Oil price trend a test of faith*

* as reported in The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Oil, gas industry contracts in 1985 as local unemployment rate rises*

The rig count continued its downward spiral, both locally and nationally, falling at a rate comparable with the past month's decline. The Basin count fell another 14 rigs, to 218; the U.S. count dipped a hefty 120 rigs, to record a low 1,376 tally.

THE ECONOMY, DESPITE all efforts to diversify, is "totally based on the petroleum industry," said Steve Hardin, economic development director with the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

A cold front moved slowly south Friday from Wichita Falls into the Edwards Plateau, as clouds covered most of the state.

Portions of East and South Texas had partly cloudy skies. Widely scattered rainshowers and a few thunderstorms occurred over the Trans Pecos and the western portion of the Edwards Plateau, the National Weather Service said.

Northerly winds at 10 to 20 mph prevailed behind the front, while south to southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph were common elsewhere except for the Trans Pecos, where winds were light and variable, the weather service said.

The forecast for today called for clouds over northwestern and southern Texas with scattered showers over the western portion of South Texas spreading to the east. Patchy fog was expected over the coastal plains during the morning but elsewhere skies should be fair, the weather service said.

Chaps barely gain finals

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

SNYDER - The Region V basketball odds were stacked against the Midland College Chaparrals here Friday night at the Scurry County Coliseum, but the undefeated, 32-0 Chaps rolled the dice for a heart-stopping 88-86 victory over Western Texas.

Here's the odds the Chaps faced:

1. MC had beaten the Westerners three times this year and those odds usually catch up with you.

2. The Chaps were also playing in WTC's backyard for a berth in today's 7 p.m. Region V finals against South Plains. That doesn't bode well for any contender.'

3. WTC also came into the game with high riding emotion that came from their last meeting with Midland at Chaparral Center. That game turned into "brawl ball," leaving WTC's Alvin Hicks with a fractured jaw and thought to be lost for the season.

4. Hicks, with mouth wired together, played his first game since that incident, giving the Westerners some timely motivation.

BUT WHEN all was said and done, it was the Chaps on top, thanks to a key 10-foot jump shot by Lincoln Minor with 26 seconds left and two key free throws by Mookie Blaylock with six seconds left that provided the margin of victory.

Many feared that this contest would turn into a revenge match by the two teams after the Midland incident, but what actually occurred was one of the finest played games by two teams this year.

With 2:05 left to play, WTC took an 84-82 lead on a jumper by Alvin Lewis. MC's Blaylock countered with a key shot to knot the score at 84 with 1:50 left. Lewis then missed a long, low percentage shot and Minor broke on the fast break to pull up with his 10-foot zinger for an 86-84 lead with only 26 seconds left.

"I had been pretty hot all night, so I took the shot," said Minor, who led MC with 19 points, heading a list of five Chaps in double figures. "I knew if I missed it, Western could go down the court and win the game, but if you think about those things too long, you lose your chance."

Then WTC lost it. Lewis threw the ball into MC's backcourt for a key turnover, forcing WTC to foul Blaylock, who sank both free throw attempts to give MC its four point lead and the victory. The Westerners did get a bucket from Lewis at the buzzer, but this game had been written.

"I knew I was going to make both free throws," said Blaylock, who had 18 points, but none more important than the icing free throws. "I was nervous because if I missed the free throws, they could force an overtime, but I knew I was going to make them. I had to."

WTC LED only two times in the game with a two-point margin being the largest. The Chaps led by 10 points on three different occasions, but this game was destined for the finish that came between clinched teeth.

"I'm relieved that this one is behind us," said MC coach Jerry Stone. "I can't think of a worse position to be playing for the Region V finals. We're at Western after that scuffle we had with them. You talk about incentive. It was there.

"I've never been prouder of two teams. There was no rough stuff and I really didn't expect it. There was just too much at stake in this game. I thought we showed a lot of poise when we needed it. It's hard to beat someone four times in a year, and especially when they are a good team."

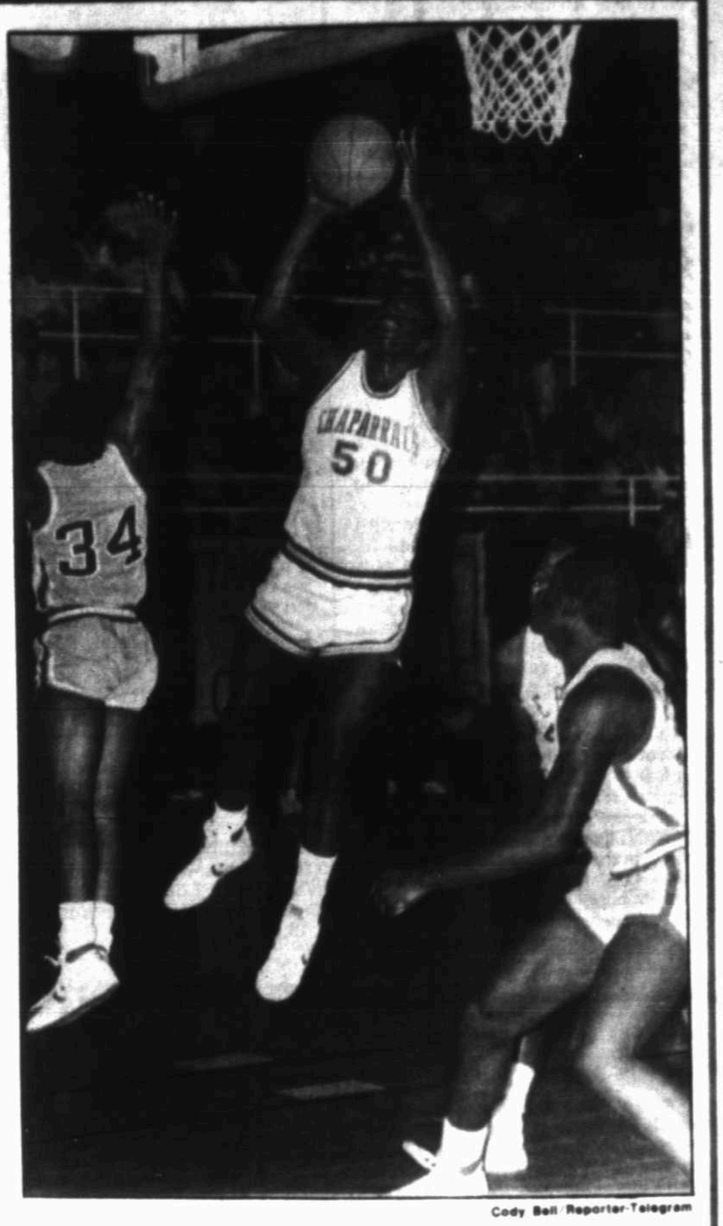

There was no mention by either team of this one being a poorly played game. Western hit 62 percent from the field while MC hit at a 51 percent clip. Western also had a 23-22 edge in rebounding, but the Chaps hit 14 of 22 free throws to win the game while Western got only eight points at the free throw line.

Another thing that hurt the Westerners was the fact that the Chaps spread the attack among so many guns, that you never knew where they were coming from.

In addition to the 37 points by Minor and Blaylock, Ricky Grace scored 15 while the double post combo of Eddie Frazier and Tony Wright each posted 14 points.

WTC got a game high 22 points from Lee and 20 from All-America candidate James Dawn. John Lewis had 14 and 6-9 Cliff Langford had 12.

Midland College Chaparral Eddie Frazier goes up for two under the basket during Region V tournament play in Snyder.

'Dogs stumble to tourney finals

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Like the stumblebum Dagwood Bumsted, Midland High bumped and bobbled its way through the Tournament of Champions Friday at Angels Stadium.

And like well-intentioned Dagwood, the Bulldogs came out ahead of where they started, knocking off two highly touted teams — both in eight inning thrillers — to advance into today's finals. The Bulldogs, 4-3, won despite themselves.

MHS toppled Thomas Jefferson, 5-3, in a late nighter, with a two-run outburst in the eighth to conclude the first day of play. The 'Dogs now advance into the championship, against an opponent from the loser's bracket. The first game is slated for 5:30 p.m. A second, if necessary game will be played immediately following.

It was a sharp opposite field single off the bat of Jaime Salazar that ricocheted off the first base bag that brought home Tommy Yorkman with the go-ahead run as the clock drew near midnight. First baseman Matt Sears followed with another run-producing single one out later.

Throughout the game, MHS fought off the sometimes overpowering, sometimes recklessly wild Patriot pitching staff to squeak in their runs. While the Thomas Jefferson bats were nearly silenced by the pitching of Rickey Castaneda.

The Bulldogs opened the scoring with a run in the second thanks to a defensive lapse by the Pats. Moss struck out Rickey Castaneda to open the inning, but the ball skipped by Tim Galvin, the catcher. Galvin's throw in turn skipped by first baseman Monty Jones.

A WALK to Anthony Deande and a single by rightfielder David Malone plated Castaneda for a 1-0 MHS lead.

MHS nearly booted away the ballgame before they ever really got rolling, however.

TJ went ahead with a pair in its half of the inning when the 'Dogs slipped into thier own defensive lapse, what Whalen calls the "Bermuda Triangle."

MHS has been plagued by a rash of outfield errors this season, developing an uncanny resistence to catching all but the simplest flyballs. And the worst part is, they seem to come in bunches.

With a runner on first and two out the Bulldogs entered the forbidden zone. Jamin Castleman lifted a fly to Salazar in center - which he dropped. As TJ's Gary LeMoyne rounded third to score, he fell.

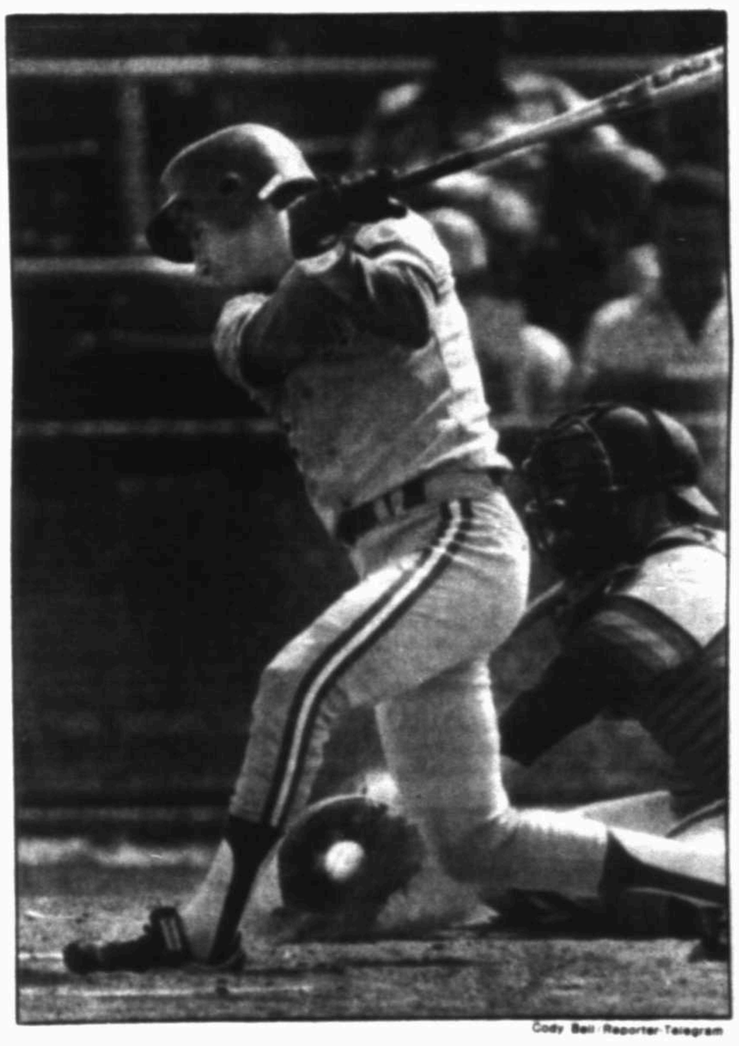

But when the relay throw finally arrived, it went through the outstretched mitt of Tommy Yorkman. Galvin followed with a double to give the Patriots the lead, 2-1.

IN PURE Bumstead fashion, the 'Dogs stitched together a two-run rally of their own.

Walks to Deande and Malone, sandwiched around a pair of Moss strikouts, gave Yorkman a chance to drive in a run with his single. A second pair of free passes, the last to Kenny De La Garza with the bases full, forced in the go-ahead run.

But the Patriots rallied for the tying run in the bottom half of the sixth.

When Landry's gone, who will coach?

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Landry is entering his 27th year as head coach of the Dallas Cowboys, and there is much speculation on how long the 61-year-old will remain.

There is even more speculation as to whom the Cowboys will hire as head coach when Landry retires.

Mike Ditka, head coach of the 1986 Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears, told the Dallas Morning News that he is interested in the job.

Two other men are considered front-runners to be the Cowboys' future coach: Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves and newly hired Cowboys passing coordinator Paul Hackett, hired from the San Francisco '49ers during the off-season.

Landry has discussed with Cowboys President Tex Shramm the possibility of Hackett replacing Landry after retirement.

"Schramm and I talked about the Hackett thing and I told him I wouldn't be coaching much longer. What I'm trying to do is help the transition," Landry told the newspaper.

Schramm, reached in Maui, Hawaii, where he is heading the annual meeting of the league's competition committee, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he and Landry have talked about the transition, but he said they did not talk about Landry retiring at the end of this season and said Hackett has not already been named the successor.

"It's the absolute truth that we've talked about a transition, but there is absolutely no time context on it," Schramm told the Star-Telegram. "In two or three years it's something we should be thinking about so that, when it occurs, it will be orderly instead of an upheaval."

HACKETT DOES not deny that he aspires to become Landry's replacement.

"It's not the primary thing, but it's certainly in the back of my mind," he said. "When I was hired, we did not talk about it specifically.

"But he (Landry) made it clear to me that he was not going to coach a lot longer. He said it was his 27th year and he didn't know how much longer he wanted to coach," Hackett said.

Schramm told the Morning News that Ditka and Reeves, both former Landry assistants, "would both get very early consideration since we know them and know their capabilities."

Reeves, a Cowboys player and coach from 1965 to 1980, said that when he left Dallas he thought he would want to return, but he has changed his mind because he is happy in Denver.

Ditka, a Cowboys tight end from 1969 to 1972 and a coach from 1973 to 1981, said his thoughts were just the opposite. When he left, he thought he would never want to return.

"When I came to Chicago to coach, I had only one goal and part of that goal has been fulfilled," Ditka said from Chicago. "To me, life is paying dues. And I am paying dues. Three years ago, I never would have thought about going back to the Cowboys. Today, I would think about it.

"I owed a lot of dues to Mr. (George) Halas (the Bears' late owner). I will have to pay them for the rest of my life. But I spent 13 great years in Dallas and it is a great organization," Ditka said. "I wouldn't be where I am without the Cowboys and there are always debts to repay. I have an allegiance to only two teams. I would be interested in going back to Dallas if the opportunity came about."

BUT DITKA says he doubts he would be offered the job, though he was one of Landry's favorite assistants.

"Mike Ditka is a little bit different breed than the Cowboys have in mind," Ditka said. "Maybe I'm too brutally frank at times. I put my foot in my mouth and have a lack of diplomacy at times. I don't think they are the kind of organization that craves that."

Red Raiders stun Mustangs, 45-40

DALLAS (AP) - DeWayne Chism's three-point play with 18 seconds on the clock and Sean Gay's resounding dunk at the buzzer lifted underdog Texas Tech to a 45-40 victory over Southern Methodist Friday in the quarterfinals of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic.

The defending SWC champion Red Raiders, 15-13 for the season, will play the winner of the Texas Christian-Rice game in Saturday's semifinals.

SMU rallied from an eight-point deficit to tie the game 40-all with 33 seconds to go on a bucket by Terry Williams.

Chism was fouled by Terry Thomas, who inadvertently tipped the ball in the basket on the play. Chism then made the free throw.

The desperate Mustangs called time out, but Chism stole the ball and fed it to Gay, who made up for a dunk he missed three weeks ago that cost Tech a game against Rice.

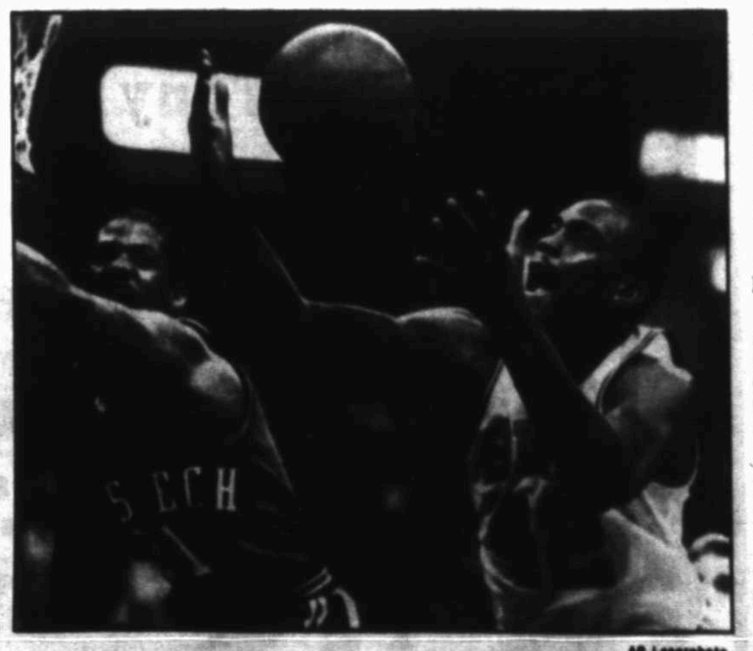

Gay, the league's Freshman of the Year, scored a game-high 14 points and Tony Benford had 10 for the fifth-seeded Raiders, who were four-point underdogs to the fourth-seeded Mustangs.

Williams led the cold-shooting Mustangs with 11 points. SMU's record dropped to 15-10 for the year.

Both teams had their shooting problems in the second lowest scoring game in the 11-year history of the tournament.

The futility of the first half was such that Tech missed its first eight shots and went 6:34 without scoring after tipoff, yet led 16-13.

It was SMU's second-lowest total of the year. The Mustangs scored only 10 points against Kansas in the first half of a non-conference game.

SMU forward Kevin Lewis (42) reaches for a rebound as Texas Tech forward Greg Crowe (31) takes a swing at the ball Friday in Dallas.

Although Tech started off ice cold, SMU could build only a 4-0 lead before Gay caught fire and scored eight points.

SMU hit only 8 of 18 shots for 27 per cent from the field in the first half while Tech could make just 8 of 23 for 34 per cent.

Kevin Lewis, who averaged 18.7 points per game for the Mustangs, was held to only seven points by the tight man-for-man coverage of the Red Raiders.

Lewis hit only 3 of 11 from the field and 1 of 2 from the foul line.

Tech shot just 42 percent from the field to only 34 percent for the Mustangs.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers said, "Both defenses really played all out. I think both teams started out a little tight but the main reason the score was low was because of the hard defenses."

MYERS LAUGHED about Gay dunking the ball at the end of the game, the first for Tech since Gay missed one against Rice.

"As you see the dunk is still in at Texas Tech," Myers quipped. "I was really glad to see him (Gay) go for that dunk at the end just to show we can do it."

Sandies rip Rams to gain 5A finals

Dripping Springs' Pat Leonard (14) puts up a jump shot over the defense of Sabine High, Gladewater's Charles Boyd (32) in the Class 2A semifinals Friday in Austin.

AUSTIN (AP) — Behind 11 second-half points by Brant Capps, Amarillo overcame a five-point halftime deficit to beat Austin Johnston 57-43 Friday night to advance into Saturday's Class 5A championship game.

In the other 5A semifinal, Leonard Perry scored 32 points and his cousin Andrea Perry made two free throws with no time on the clock in overtime as Dallas Kimball edged Houston Wheatley 53-51.

In the Class 2A semifinals, Morton ran past Grandview 87-69 and Dripping Springs withstood fourth quarter pressure to defeat Gladewater Sabine 55-48.

The Rams, who were averaging 74 points a game coming into the semifinal, suffered a cold spell in the third quarter when they hit just four of 15 shots while Amarillo outscored them 17-8 for a 39-36 lead.

The Sandies, making their first appearance in the tournament since 1948, padded the score in the fourth quarter while holding Johnston to just two field goals.

Sammy Simpson led Amarillo with 16 points. Sherman Ray added 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Johnston's Jason Shead scored seven of Johnston's first nine points to get the Rams off to a 17-10 lead at the end of the first quarter. He finished with 14 points, followed by George Walker with 12 points.

IN 5A, Leonard Perry banked in a 12-foot shot on the run with four seconds left in regulation play to tie the Kimball-Wheatley game 51-51.

Andrea Perry was fouled by James Marshall as the buzzer sounded ending the three-minute overtime. He made both free throws.

Both teams had turnovers in the last 33 seconds to set up the final play. Roderick Hampton of Kimball came up with the ball after Eddie Cumbo lost control with nine seconds left.

Willie Williams, a 6-foot-7 tight end in football who has accepted a scholarship from Louisiana State, led Wheatley with 12 points and raked in 18 rebounds.

Cumbo and Isiah Davis each had 11 points for Wheatley, which had won five state basketball titles. The game was Kimball's first in the tournament.

MORTON SET a record-breaking scoring pace in the first half for a 50-27 lead and coasted in the second half to gain a shot at its fourth state basketball championship.

Morton led by as much as 30 points late in the third quarter but missed out on the 2A scoring record of 92 points in a single game.

Jerry Joyce scored 20 points at halftime for Morton and finished with 24 as Coach Tony Mauldin substituted freely among 10 players. Jimmy Moore scored 22 for Morton, and Keith Hawkins, an all-tournament choice last year when Morton lost in the finals, had 17.

Grandview was its own worst enemy, trying to play a running game with Morton and committing 30 turnovers, which Morton converted into 31 points.

Gerald Washington scored 31 points for Grandview, which actually outscored Morton in the second half and at the free throw line 15-1.

PAT LEONARD also had 31 points for Dripping Springs, which took advantage of poor free throw shooting by Sabine to gain the 2A finals in its first tournament appearance.

Dripping Springs led only 49-48 with 1:36 left in the game but scored its last six points on free throws.

Sabine's Ronnie Davis missed two one-and-one free throw situations and teammate Brad Baker also missed the first of a one-and-one in the final 1:36.

Sabine scoring leader Charles Boyd, who tossed in 27 points, fouled out with 14 seconds remaining and Leonard made both free throws to clinch the victory.

Mike Escobar of Dripping Springs with 10 points was the only other player in double figures for either team as Dripping Springs outshot Sabine 60 percent to 35.8 percent.

"It was real tough underneath the basket," said MC's Wright. "I knew we were going to forget about what happened in Midland and play for a regional championship. I also knew that they were too good to worry about fighting. I think it was the best game we played all year. We've had to turn in a best game every time we play these guys."

Stone countered, "Both teams are sorry that the fighting happened the last time. These teams basically like each other. They talk to each other before the games."

WTC COACH Phil Spradling said, "It was a great game. I knew nothing was going to happen that would ruin a good game. I told our kids that I needed them on the floor and not on the bench before the game.

"I'm sorry that we really beat ourselves. We took a long shot when we had a two-point lead and that wasn't a good choice. And then we throw the ball away when we have a chance to tie the game."

MC assistant coach Reggie Franklin put the game in perspective for his Chaps, "I don't think either team could have played any better. I guess this is what the playoffs are all about. At this time of year, it doesn't make any difference how many times you've beaten the other team you're playing. This one is really the one that counts. And it's tough to do it again and again. We did it and that says a lot."

Tonight the Chaps shoot for their fourth Region V title in the last five years when they face South Plains for the third time this year. South Plains defeated New Mexico Junior College, 75-74, in the late semifinal game Friday night. Two free throws in the final 15 seconds iced that decision. South Plains placed second to MC in the Western conference race.

After Friday's emotional encounter with Western Texas, today's matchup could be a little scary. MC will have to be emotionally drained. The key remains now - just how bad does MC want this title? They may have to reach down deep to get it. And they showed they can reach pretty deep against Western Texas.

Aggies send Razorbacks home, 67-51

DALLAS (AP) — Winston Crite's powerful inside moves gave him 22 points and second-seeded Texas A&M University outmuscled the seventh-seeded Arkansas Razorbacks 67-51 Friday night in the quarterfinals of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Tournament.

Arkansas, 12-16, played an aggressive defensive game against the Aggies, holding Don Marbury, the SWC's leading scorer, to only 11 points, his lowest total of the year.

However, Crite found holes in the Hogs' zone defense and worked inside for buckets from point blank range. Arkansas center Andrew Lang fouled out with less than four minutes to play trying to handle Crite.

Lang, who spent most of the game on the bench saddled with fouls, scored only two points.

A&M built an eight point lead early in the first half but Arkansas rallied after intermission to lead 31-30 on a basket by Mike Ratliff.

However, A&M went on an 11-2 surge to put away the scrapping Razorbacks, who lost three games to the Aggies this year under new Coach Nolan Richardson. It was the first time the Aggies have ever done that to the Razorbacks.

A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said Arkansas scared the heavily favored Aggies.

"It was anybody's game until Al Pulliam gave us a lift coming off the bench," Metcalf said. "And Winston was great. He was his usual tournament self. He's a great big game player. It's a shame he doesn't play that way all year."

Metcalf praised the heavy contingent of Arkansas fans.

"If every school supported the tournament like Arkansas does, it would be SRO (standing room only) every year," Metcalf said.

Coach Richardson of Arkansas said, "All we could do was try to stay within striking distance and pray for a miracle. We didn't get it."

Richardson said Arkansas was missing Kenny Hutchinson and William Mills, who were dismissed from the team.

For a change, it was the Rebels that led the tournament in hard luck stories this season. If Lee is going to make another run at the tournament title, the Rebs will have to do it through the loser's bracket after winning their first game over Amarillo Tascosa, but dropping the second to TJ.

After 11 grueling, stomach turning, scoreless innings, it was a two-out, bad hop single by Monty Jones that opened the floodgates and buried the Rebels. Durian Jenkins, in his first inning of relief, absorbed the loss.

Lee not only was broken by that bad hop single in the 12th, they lost the services of ace right-hander George Matta indefinitely when his right elbow popped on a pitch in the fourth inning.

BUT LEE'S failure to push across a run in any one of four golden scoring chances had already doomed the Rebels to defeat.

No. 1 Devils survive Wake Forest

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Mark Alarie scored 22 points and spearheaded a second-half rally Friday as top-ranked Duke held off peaky Wake Forest for a 68-60 victory in the opening game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

The eighth-seeded Demon Deacons kept the game close in the first half with a zone defense that forced Duke to shoot from the outside. Wake Forest was within 37-36 at halftime and 39-38 on Charlie Thomas' short baseline jumper with 17:37 left. 1

Duke then fashioned a 12-4 run that expanded its lead to a comfortable 51-42 en route to improving its record to 30-2. Alarie scored six points in the surge that helped send the Blue Devils into Saturday's semifinals.

Wake Forest, 8-21, pulled within 55-52 after Thomas hit two free throws with 5:24 left, but it was the last threat posed by the Demon Deacons. Alarie scored two straight baskets, increasing the lead to 59-52 with 4:07 left and Wake Forest was forced to foul in an attempt to catch up. That effort failed as Duke hit five of seven free throws in the final 2:05.

Kansas 74, Kansas State 51

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Greg Dreiling scored 19 points as second-ranked Kansas breezed past Kansas State in the first round of the Big Eight tournament and brought an end, in all probability, to the illustrious coaching career of Jack Hartman.

Hartman, 60, announced last month that he would retire at the end of this, his 16th year as Kansas State coach. Barring an unlikely bid to the National Invitation Tournament for the Wildcats, 16-14 overall, this was his final game and his 16-year record will read 295-168. 2

The easy triumph raised Kansas' season record to 29-3 and established a single-season victory record for the Jayhawks, who won the regular-season Big Eight title with a 13-1 mark.

Kentucky 61, Louisiana St. 58

LEXINGTON, Ky. — James Blackmon ignited a rally in the final four minutes with two baskets and a steal to set up the go-ahead score as third-ranked Kentucky edged Louisiana State to move into the final of the SEC tournament.

Kentucky, which rode Blackmon's flurry to an 8-0 run that erased a 56-51 deficit, will meet Alabama in the title game Saturday, with the winner claiming the SEC's automatic bid to the NCAA playoffs. 3

It was the 10th victory in a row for the Wildcats and their 18th consecutive over an SEC foe, but it didn't come easy.

Blackmon moved across the lane to put back Kenny Walker's missed free throw with 3:53 left to cut the lead to 56-53, then hit a fast break layup off a steal by Winston Bennett to slice the lead to one with 3:21to play.

Blackmon swiped a pass 30 seconds later, and Bennett put the Wildcats ahead with 2:10 left, drilling a jumper from deep in the right corner.

Bennett hit from close range off the right baseline with 1:13 to play before John Williams, completing a spectacular 28-point performance, trimmed the margin to one on a 14-footer for LSU with 52 seconds to play.

Kentucky then ran the 45-second clock down to the limit before Roger Harden iced it on a 20-footer with eight seconds left.

Harden had beaten LSU in Baton Rouge on a long shot at the buzzer earlier in the season and the Wildcats beat the Bengals 68-57 in the regular season finale at Rupp Arena last Saturday, when Williams was held to 8 points.

Maryland 85, N. Carolina 75

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Unranked Maryland, behind 21 points from Jeff Baxter and 20 from Len Bias, beat fourth-ranked North Carolina and joined top-ranked Duke, sixth-rated Georgia Tech and Virginia in the semifinals of the ACC tournament.

The Terrapins will face Georgia Tech, which ran away from Clemson for a 79-61 victory in the opening game of the evening session. In the daytime doubleheader, Duke held off Wake Forest 68-60 and Virginia nipped 20th-ranked North Carolina State 64-62. 4

It's the first time North Carolina has been knocked out in the first round of the ACC tournament since a 54-52 overtime loss to Wake Forest in 1973. The Tar Heels have lost four of their last five and dropped to 26-5.

Top 20 Roundup

Maryland, 18-13, got an 18-9 jump on the Tar Heels to start the second half, hitting eight of their first nine shots. From a 34-28 halftime deficit, the Terrapins raced to a 46-37 edge with 13:42 remaining.

Quickly, North Carolina cut the gap to 46-41 on a pair of Steve Hale baskets. The Tar Heels whittled away until a pair of Jeff Lebo free throws with 9:11 left trimmed Maryland's lead to 53-51. That was as close as North Carolina would get, and Maryland went on a run of 16-4 that raised its lead to 73-57.

St. John's 75, Villanova 64

NEW YORK — Fifth-ranked St. John's, led by Walter Berry's 29 points and 14 rebounds, defeated Villanova 75-64 Friday night to set up a showdown with No. 8 Syracuse for the Big East Conference tournament title.

In the first game at Madison Square Garden, Syracuse defeated No. 14 Georgetown 75-73 in overtime to earn the other berth in Saturday night's final. St. John's and Syracuse split their regular-season meetings and tied for the regular-season title with 14-2 records. 5

The victory was the 400th in 18 seasons for Redmen Coach Lou Carnesecca.

St. John's, 29-4, led 32-24 at halftime and pulled away 42-28. But the Wildcats, fighting to defend its NCAA title, used fullcourt pressure to go on a 12-4 spree behind freshman guard Kenny Wilson's seven points that cut the margin to 46-40.

Villanova never got any closer as Berry scored 16 of his points in the second half. Harold Jensen's goal cut St. John's margin to 59-50 with 5:30 left, but the Redmen pulled away to their biggest lead, 72-56, with 2:32 to play as Mark Jackson hit a three-point play and another goal.

Willie Glass added 13 points, and Jackson had 11 points and 14 assists, breaking by one the Big East tournament record he set Thursday night against Seton Hall.

Georgia Tech 79, Clemson 61

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Mark Price and Duane Ferrell scored 20 points each as sixth-ranked Georgia Tech pulled away from Clemson for a victory in the ACC tournament.

The Yellow Jackets, 24-5, joined top-ranked Duke and Virginia in Saturday's semifinals. The Blue Devils held off Wake Forest 68-60 and the Cavaliers nipped North Carolina State 62-60. Duke and Virginia meet at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the semifinals. 6

Georgia Tech never trailed but found itself in a physical and verbal war with the Tigers in the first 10 minutes. Twice in that span, members of the two teams squared off, only to be restrained by referees.

It appeared the fight went out of the Tigers when they lost an appeal on a goaltending call midway through the period. Georgia Tech held a 25-20 edge at the time and stretched the lead to 33-24 on Ferrell's baseline jumper with 4:04 left before halftime. Georgia Tech led 35-28 at intermission.

The Yellow Jacket lead jumped to 50-36 when Ferrell hit a baseline jumper from the left side with 13:28 to play. The basket capped a 17-8 spree at the start of the period.

Syracuse 75, Georgetown 73, OT

NEW YORK — Rafael Addison made 7-of-8 free throw attempts in overtime to lead No. 8 Syracuse to a victory over No. 14 Georgetown and put the Orangemen in the championship game of the Big East tournament.

Syracuse, 25-4, will play either fifth-ranked St. John's or Villanova in Saturday night's title game. St. John's and Villanova met in the second game Friday night at Madison Square Garden. Regulation ended in a 65-65 tie after Georgetown's David Wingate hit a jumper with nine seconds remaining. 8 14

In overtime, Addison and Rony Seikaly each hit two free throws to put Syracuse up 69-65, but Reggie Williams made two steals for Georgetown, one leading to a goal of his own and the other setting up Wingate for two free throws.

Addison hit four more free throws, and Dwayne "Pearl" Washington had one foul shot for a 74-69 Syracuse lead with 14 seconds left. Georgetown cut it to 74-73 on goals by Michael Jackson and Wingate. After Wingate's goal, Georgetown called timeout with one second left, despite having no timeouts remaining.

Addison, who had been in a month-long shooting slump, hit one of two technicals for the final margin.

Georgetown, which had won the previous two Big East tournament titles, fell to 23-7.

Memphis St. 100, S. Carolina 59

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Vincent Askew scored 18 points and Andre Turner had 14 and dished out 15 assists as 10th-ranked Memphis State routed South Carolina in the Metro Conference tournament.

Memphis State, 26-4, will face the winner of Friday's first-round game between Virginia Tech and Florida State on Saturday in the semifinals. The loss was the eighth straight for South Carolina, 12-16. 10

Memphis State put the game away in the first half by outscoring South Carolina 18-5 to take a 36-20 lead with 3:57 left before intermission.

South Carolina, forced to shoot from the outside by a tough Memphis State zone, hit only 32 percent in the first half and scored just 10 points in the final 11 minutes to trail 47-25 at halftime.

Things got worse at the start of the second half as Memphis State shot 84 percent from the field in the first 10 minutes, mostly on layups off the fast break, to take a 79-41 lead.

South Carolina, with three key players saddled with at least three fouls after the first half, never found its game and managed just 29 percent from the field for the game. Memphis State connected on 42 of 71 for 59 percent.

UNLV 75, Fullerton St. 65

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Anthony Jones scored 25 points and 13th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas pulled away midway through the second half to defeat Fullerton State in a semifinal game of the PAC tournament.

With the victory, the Runnin' Rebels advance into Sunday's tournament final against the winner of a semifinal game between New Mexico State and Pacific Saturday night. Holding a six-point lead midway through the second half, the Runnin' Rebels scored eight straight points to open a 62-48 lead with 8:11 to play. 13

Fullerton State was unable to get within 10 points until the game's final minute.

Freddie Banks had 18 points for Las Vegas, which improved its record to 30-4. Armon Gilliam added 13 points for the Rebels.

Herman Webster and Henry Turner each scored 15 points to lead Fullerton State, 16-16.

Nevada-Las Vegas jumped to a 20-8 lead in the opening eight minutes of the game, but Fullerton battled back within a single point on two occasions, the last time at 26-25 with 5:01 left in the first half.

Jones scored five points in the last three minutes of the first half as the Rebels extended their lead to 39-29 by halftime.

Oklahoma 76, Missouir 75

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tim McCalister swiped a Missouri pass and David Johnson scored on a short layup seconds later, boosting No. 15 Oklahoma to a victory over Missouri in the Big Eight tournament.

Missouri was leading 75-74 when the Sooners' Anthony Bowie tipped the ball into McCalister's hands in the final seconds. After Johnson's basket, the Sooners clinched the victory when Linwood Davis stole Dan Bingenheimer's inbounds pass with six seconds to play. McCalister was then fouled and hit two free throws for the final margin. 15

Lynn Hardy had put the Tigers ahead 75-72 with a basket with 1:23 left, then Johnson sank two free throws, cuting the margin to a point with 1:03 left.

Missouri quickly erased a four-point halftime deficit and led most of the second half, but never by more than four points. A three-point play by Chievous gave the Tigers a 68-65 lead, but moments later the Sooners pulled within one point, 73-72, on a field goal by Kennedy.

Virginia 64, N. Carolina St. 62

GREENSBORO, N.C. John Johnson's driving layup with 1:19 left proved to be the winning basket as Virginia held on for a victory over 20th-ranked North Carolina State in the ACC tournament.

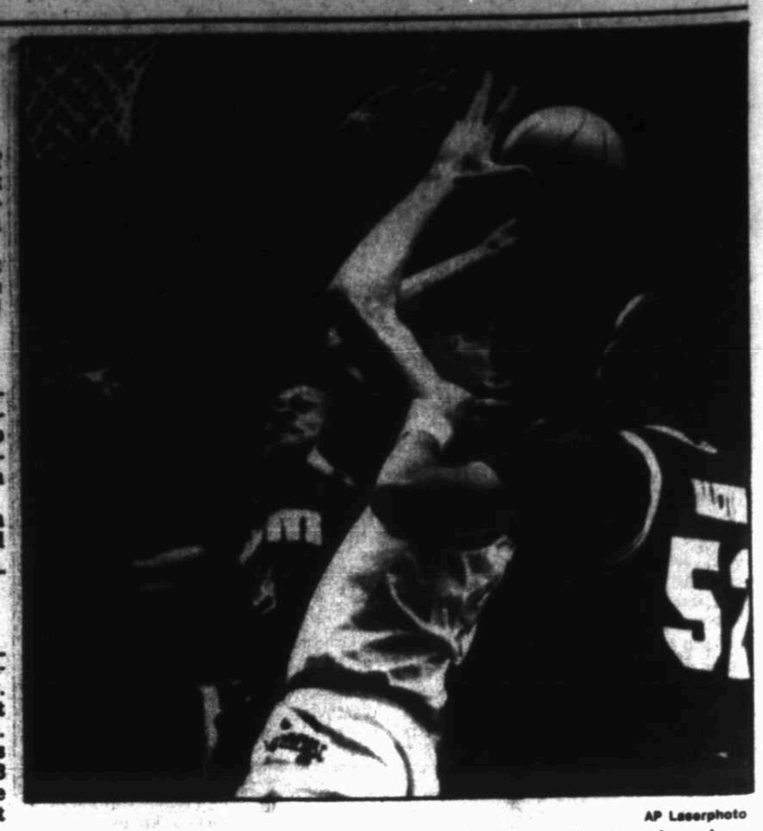

Virginia's victory pits the Cavaliers against top-ranked Duke in one semifinal matchup Saturday in the 33rd annual tournament. The Blue Devils held off Wake Forest for a 68-60 triumph, its 30th victory in 32 games. 20

The Cavaliers, 19-9, held a 56-51 lead after Mel Kennedy's short jumper at the 6:46 mark of the second half, but a 5-0 Wolfpack run pulled N.C. State within 58-56 on Charles Shackleford's free throw with 4:18 remaining.

The teams traded the next three baskets and the Wolfpack trailed 64-62 after Nate McMillan's running jumper in the lane with 1:01 left. Tom Sheehey went for what would have been a clinching basket, but his underhanded layup with 23 seconds left bounced off the back of the rim.

After a Wolfpack timeout with five seconds remaining, McMillan passed to Bennie Bolton, whose corner jumper missed as time expired.

N.C. State is 18-12 after entering the tournament as the fifth-seeded team.

NHL Roundup

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Dave Babych scored once and added two assists as the Hartford Whalers defeated the Buffalo Sabres 6-2 Friday night in NHL action.

The victory, Hartford's fourth in four trips to Buffalo this season, gives the Whalers 64 points, four less than Buffalo in the race for fourth place and the Adams Division's final playoff spot.

Dean Evason, Doug Jarvis, Paul MacDermid, Sylvain Turgeon and Kevin Dineen were the other goalscorers for the Whalers, who have now won three straight games, all against Adams Division competition.

Gil Perreault scored the 499th goal of his career, and Doug Smith added the other goal for Buffalo.

The Whalers built a 2-0 lead after the first period on goals by Evason and Jarvis, and had a 4-1 lead at one point in the second period.

Oilers 5, Penguins 3

EDMONTON, Alberta — Wayne Gretzky set an NHL assist record by helping to set up Paul Coffey and Jari Kurri, who each scored twice as the Edmonton Oilers defeated the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The two assists gave Gretzky 136 for the season, shattering the mark of 135 he set last season. Coffey also set a record with his ninth short-handed goal of the season, erasing the mark for short-handed goals by a defensemen he set last season.

Coffey's goals were his 39th and 40th goals of the year and tied his own personal best, also set a year ago. Kurri scored his 52nd and 53rd goals, tops in the league.

Craig MacTavish scored the winning goal at 11:49 of the third period.

Edmonton boosted its lead in the over-all NHL standings to 12 points over Philadelphia. Pittsburgh remained three points ahead of the New York Rangers in the race for the final playoff berth in the Patrick Division.

Blazers pound Mavs, 125-114

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe scored 34 points and the Trail Blazers pulled away in the final period Friday night for a 125-114 NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

The Blazers, who won their third in a row after losing 12 straight, led 95-94 one minute into the fourth quarter. But they outscored Dallas 19-4 over the next 6½ minutes to build a 114-98 lead with 4½ minutes remaining. Jim Paxson had eight points, three steals and two assists during the decisive spurt.

Dallas, which had won three in a row, pulled within nine on seven straight points by Mark Aguirre but could get no closer.

Portland led 65-58 at halftime but the Mavericks scored the first eight points of the third quarter to take the lead. Portland regained the lead for good at 79-78 on Vandeweghe's tip-in with 3:57 to go in the period.

Kite pulls away to three-shot lead

Doral Open

MIAMI (AP) — Tom Kite, playing on one of his favorite golf courses, shot a 5-under-par 67 to open a 3-stroke lead Friday after the second round of the $500,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

"It's become a kind of mental thing with me," Kite, the Green Tree Country Club touring pro, said. "I have good memories here, good thoughts. I feel good, feel I'm going to play well here."

Tied for second at 136, eight under par, were Ed Fiori, Ken Brown of Scotland and D.A. Weibring. Fiori and Brown each had another 68 and Weibring shot 67.

And he has a history of playing well on Doral's Blue Monster course.

Kite, the winner of this title two years ago, has finished in the top 10 in seven of his last eight appearances in this event.

This time, he reached the tournament's halfway point with a 36-hole total of 133, 11 shots under par.

"If you drive the ball well, it's a good golf course to maintain a lead on — I hope," he said.

"I'm basically doing everything I want to do. I'm driving well, hitting the ball well, making some putts. I'm not making many mistakes," he said, but pointed to one exception.

That was on the 18th hole — his ninth of the day — where a drive got away to the left, found the water and provided Kite with his only bogey of the day.

Mark Calcavecchia, the man who worked as a caddy last week in the Honda Classic and led the first round of this event, slipped to a par 72 and led a group at 137.

Also at that figure were Tom Purtzer, Jim Thorpe, Tom Sieckmann and Mark O'Meara. O'Meara had a 67, Thorpe 69, Purtzer and Sieckman 71s.

Jack Nicklaus recorded another 70 and was four under par at 140. Tom Watson had 70-139.

Kite, a former leading money-winner and Vardon Trophy champion, hit short irons inside of 10 feet and birdied the first two holes he played.

He dropped birdie putts of 15 and 25 feet on his fifth and sixth holes, then had a little lapse. He missed from short range on the next two holes and then hit into the water.

Kite came back immediately with an 18-foot birdie putt on the next one, which, he said, "turned things around again."

He stretched his lead with a 15-foot putt on his 15th hole and parred in.

Houston's Rickie Winslow (41) and Texas' John Brownlee fight for control of the ball during Friday's SWC Classic in Dallas.

Brownlee paces 'Horns to victory

DALLAS (AP) — Center John Brownlee scored 33 points and the third-seeded Texas Longhorns overwhelmed sixth-seeded Houston 78-62 in Cougar Coach Guy V. Lewis' last game Friday night at the quarterfinals of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Tournament.

The red-hot shooting Longhorns burned the Cougars early as Lewis finished his career with a record of 592-279 for 30 seasons.

Houston closed out its year 14-14, only the second non-winning season of Lewis' career. He had 27 straight seasons without a losing record.

Brownlee was just one point short of his career high.

Texas' sensational shooting gave the Longhorns a 35-24 halftime lead.

The Longhorns hit eight straight shots to pull away from Houston. The Cougars tied the game 20-all, but were outscored 15-4 in the final four minutes of the first half.

Texas owned as much as a 19-point lead in the second half as the Longhorns beat the Cougars for the third time this year.

Houston made a run at Texas, cutting the deficit to 58-48 with 6:29 to go, but the Longhorns quickly shut down the rally.

Raynard Davis added 21 points for Texas.

Houston was led by Alvin Franklin and Greg Anderson who scored 16 points each.

Texas outrebounded Houston 39-27 and outshot the Cougars from the field 50 percent to 47 percent.

Coach Bob Weltlich said, "I kind of regret being the person to play against and beat Guy in his last game. He's been such a credit to this league and the game. But then, us coming off two disappointing losses, I was glad to win one again."

Lewis said his retirement "is beginning to sink in. I didn't play this up as my last game to the team because I didn't want it to be. I was planning to play tomorrow.

"I told my team to get their heads up. It wasn't the end of the world and it's not, either, you know."

Asked about his replacement, Lewis said, "Ask that janitor, he might know."

Lewis walked into an interview room after the game, threw a fist into the air and yelled "Yippee, it's over."

Johnson's 66 good for one-stroke lead

Kemper Open

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Chris Johnson shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after the second round of the 72-hole LPGA Women's Kemper Open.

Johnson, with a two-round total of 9-under-par 135, leads Juli Inkster, who set a competitive record for the 6,210-yard par-72 Princeville Golf Course on Kauai Island with an 8-under 64.

Two strokes behind Johnson, with at 7-under 137, was Marci Bozarth, who led the first round with a 5-under 67.

Johnson went into Friday's round with a 3-under-par 69. Her first shot off the tee landed in the fairway bunker. Sinking a 10-foot putt, she managed to save par. Johnson, 28, who joined the LPGA in 1980, continued to hit regulation pars until the 493-yard par-five fifth hole when she surprised herself by sinking a 20-foot putt.

She birdied again on the seventh hole, 151-yard par three, but missed a 10-foot putt on the 356-yard par-4 ninth hole for a bogey. She finished her first nine holes with a 1-under-par 35.

"My game really fell together on the back side," a smiling Johnson said after Friday's round. She birdied the 12th, 13th, 16th and 18th holes, giving her a total of 6-under-par 66 for the day.

Inkster had an even better round. The 25-year-old Los Altos, Calif. resident, started Friday's round at par 72. Inkster shot eight birdies, including six in a row from the sixth through the 11th holes.

"Once the first ball dropped for a birdie, the pressure was off my back," Inkster said. "Then I had five birdies in a row and was going into the sixth with a 10-foot putt. I felt the pressure back again. Now the hard part is to come back after shooting a 64 and shoot well tomorrow. I feel I can do it, I just have to be patient and I know it will happen."

Spurs outgun Clippers, 142-126

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Alvin Robertson scored 30 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to pace the San Antonio Spurs to a 142-126 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers Friday night in the NBA.

Wes Matthews added 22 points and 16 assists and Mike Mitchell tallied 22 points for the Spurs, which snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Norm Nixon led Los Angeles with 33 points, including a team-record six three-point baskets.

Cedric Maxwell and Marques Johnson added 20 each for the Clippers, which lost their second in two nights and eighth in the last 10 games.

The Spurs played the game without starting center Artis Gilmore, who was out with a pulled hamstring.

San Antonio scored the first eight points and raced to a 45-27 lead at the end of the first quarter as Johnson scored 13 and Robertson and Matthews added 10 each.

NBA Roundup

Celtics 115, Knicks 108

BOSTON — New York squandered an 11-point lead and Danny Ainge scored 10 points in a 24-7 third-quarter surge as Boston beat the Knicks 115-108 to reach the 50-victory mark for the seventh consecutive season.

Trailing 43-32, the Celtics took the lead for good with a 21-4 run that gave them a 53-47 advantage with 3:36 left in the first half. They led 60-55 at the intermission and 71-66 with 7:52 to go in the third quarter.

Then Boston took control with the decisive 24-7 spurt that made the score 95-73 with 1:24 left in the period. The lead didn't drop below 10 points until the final minute.

Pistons 104, Nets 102

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kelly Tripucka scored 34 points, including 15 in the fourth quarter, and Joé Dumars hit a crucial jump shot in the final minute as Detroit downed New Jersey.

After Tripucka's with 1:25 to play snapped a 100-100 tie, Dumars hit from the right side with just one second remaining on the 24-second clock to give the Pistons a 104-100 lead with 38 seconds left and secure their 12th victory in the last 13 games.

Albert King made hit two foul shots for New Jersey with 32 seconds left to bring the Nets within two points. After Tripucka missed a jumper from the left side, the Nets called a timeout with five seconds to go but Kings three-point shot rimmed the basket.

Hawks 112, Bulls 108

CHICAGO — Dominique Wilkins scored 42 points and Kevin Willis added 19 and grabbed 21 rebounds Friday night to lead Atlanta to a come-from-behind victory over Chicago.

Willis hit a key rebound basket with 16 seconds left as the Hawks recorded their 24th triumph in the last 34 games. George Gervin led Chicago with 37 points.

Bucks 125, 76ers 95

MILWAUKEE — Ricky Pierce and Terry Cummings each scored nine points during a 35-16 third-quarter burst that carried Milwaukee to a victory over Philadelphia.

Pierce, again filling in for the injured Sidney Moncrief, and Cummings finished with 19 points apiece to help Milwaukee to its 13th victory in the last 14 games. Charles Davis led the Bucks with 21 points while Bob McAdoo came off the bench and scored 20 for Philadelphia.

Nuggets 134, Pacers 117

DENVER — Alex English scored 34 points to lead the Denver Nuggets to an easy Indiana. Calvin Natt, who had 20 points, broke a 6-6 tie with a short shot two minutes into the game and the Nuggets were never headed. English scored 12 points and Wayne Cooper 10 in helping Denver to a 34-30 first-period lead.

The victory left Denver just one game behind idle first place Houston in the Midwest Division.

PGA Tour plans to discipline O'Grady

MIAMI (AP) — The PGA Tour on Friday announced it will discipline outspoken tour player Mac O'Grady for his public criticism of tour Commissioner Deane Beman.

The unsigned memo did not disclose the nature of the discipline.

O'Grady is playing in the Doral Open in Miami, but had left the course when the announcement was made public. He was not immediately available for comment. He has 30 days to respond to the proposed disciplinary action.

Although O'Grady, 34, has yet to win a tournament, he has been a frequent challenger.

The notice said the action was taken "for recent press statements at the Hawaiian Open, the Los Angeles Open and elsewhere in apparent violation of PGA Tour Tournament Regulations."

At the Hawaiian Open, O'Grady was quoted in the Honolulu Star-Bulletin as referring to Beman as "a thief with a capital T." He also criticized Beman in a nationally televised interview during the Hawaiian Open.

Although O'Grady refuses to speak to reporters on the golf course, or to discuss his play, he has, on occasion, granted interviews away from the course but said in Hawaii he would do so only to attack Beman.

His dispute with Beman apparently arises from a 1984 incident in which O'Grady was fined by Beman for remarks the player allegedly made to a courtesy car driver during a tournament in New Orleans.

The tour notice said that "since the (newspaper) articles in question consisted mostly of personal attacks on Commissioner Deane Beman," the commissioner had referred the matter to PGA Tour Tournament Director Jack Tuthill for review and determination of whether O'Grady violated tour regulations.

Tuthill declined to discuss the situation.

At the same time, the tour notice said O'Grady had chosen to release portions of his disciplinary file to the news media.

In Southern Pines, N.C., Golf World magazine confirmed that O'Grady had contacted them and released portions of his file. The contents were not disclosed.

The tour said the files are confidential and would not be released.

Morris will miss growth of next season's corn crop

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

FLORIDA CITY, Fla. (AP) — His voice was happy, almost gleeful, mirroring the joy of a man whose drug conviction had just been overturned by the Florida Supreme Court.

The real story, though, was in Mercury Morris' eyes: sad eyes, the eyes of a former pro football star who has been looking at the world from behind the walls of the Dade Correctional Institution for more than three years now.

"I've watched that cornfield grow out there for three seasons," the ex-Miami Dolphin running back said softly. "I've always prayed to God that I wouldn't see it grow another season."

Morris was sentenced to 20 years — "One day at a time," he said. "You can't do 20 years before you do 20 minutes," — for conspiracy to traffic in and possess cocaine. On Thursday, that conviction was reversed with the court ruling that entrapment evidence had been "erroneously excluded" in the first trial.

"On Nov. 5, 1982, I walked across that walkway (leading to the prison)," Morris said. "A guard said to me, 'You're Morris, huh. Don't worry. They'll forget about you in two months.'

"They did things to show me that I was nothing special, that I was just another prisoner, a convict," he said. "One time, I spent 24 days in the lockup when an officer lied and said I cursed him out. I have too much control of English to do that.

"You have to walk above those circumstances. I did not let things get me."

This from a man who admitted that when he played, a late hit might cause him to hurl the football in an opponent's face.

MORRIS SAID he had grown during his time in prison. "If you don't grow, you won't get over the (drug) problem," he said.

"You could turn the whole state of Florida into a prison if you went around arresting everybody who ever had an inkling to use or used drugs. Anytime you can't pull away from a pipe or a line of coke, that's a serious psychological problem. I readily acknowledged my involvement at the time (of the trial). I picked up a hot horseshoe one time. It only takes one time."

Morris has been a model prisoner, often trotted out by the authorities to speak about drugs. He does not believe that rehabilitation works unless the addict wants it to.

"I've had a lot of time to think about, study and research the problem," he said.

"Micheal Ray Richardson is battling life because of a problem he can't control. They don't understand the magnitude of the psychological grasp chemicals can have.

"(Baseball Commissioner) Peter Ueberroth can't walk you into a clinic, have you stay there six weeks and come out clean. It has to come from within the person."

MORRIS HAS kept up a steady correspondance with elementary school children at nearby Homestead, Fla. He was writing to one of the children when his attorneys called with news of the Supreme Court decision.

"These are kids who never saw me play a down of football, and for me they represent a greater challenge than the NFL. I give them background on the choices and decisions they must make in life. These are important things.

"You know, when a football player breaks a bone, it's the weakest part of him. When it mends, it is the strongest. Drugs was my weak point. Now it is my strong point."

His attorneys say Morris may be free within a month, pending the retrial ordered by the court.

"The way I look at this is it's all happened for the good. The positive aspects of growing outweigh the negatives. It was an opportunity to grow or be bitter. Hostile persons create a hostile world. Why should I have animosity? I live in a safer environment than you do."

And with that, Eugene Morris, who used to be wear Dolphins' No. 22 and now wears a blue prison coverall with No. 068586, returned to serve the next 20 minutes in his 20-year sentence that could be over in 20 days.

Tigers use triple play to beat Bosox

Associated Press

A triple play and an apology highlighted a full day of baseball spring training activity Friday as most major league teams got into exhibition action.

The Detroit Tigers, playing their second game of the spring, came up with the triple play in the ninth inning of a 3-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox at Lakeland, Fla.

After Mike Stenhouse and Mike Greenwell both singled off Tiger reliever Bill Campbell, Boston pinch-hitter LaSchelle Tarver hit a looping liner that shortstop Doug Baker caught at his shoetops. Baker stepped on second to get Stenhouse and threw to first baseman Mike Laga before Greenwell could get back to the base, completing the triple play.

That helped the pitching quartet of Dan Petry, Chuck Cary, Brian Denman and Campbell complete a combined five-hitter. Lance Parrish, Nelson Simmons and Kirk Gibson each drove in a run for the Tigers.

In Phoenix, Ariz., pitcher Joaquin Andujar, who was traded to the Oakland A's by the St. Louis Cardinals Dec. 12, shook hands with umpire Don Denkinger and apologized to the fans for his blowup in Game 7 of the 1985 World Series.

"I wish to apologize to the baseball fans of America, the Dominican Republic and especially St. Louis for my conduct in the seventh game of the World Series. I was frustrated by the outcome of the sixth game and by the course the seventh game was taking."

Andujar argued with Denkinger over two close pitches in the fifth inning of Game 7 and was ejected after charging the umpire and bumping him. Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth fined Andujar $500 and suspended him for the first 10 days of the 1986 season.

Friday's meeting occured when Andujar brought out the lineup card prior to the A's game with the San Francisco Giants.

"No problem," Andujar said of his meeting with Denkinger. "He's my friend. He's the boss." The umpire said he had "no ill feelings" toward Andujar and "I'm ready to put this behind us now."

Exhibition Baseball Roundup

Giants 10, A's 6

Rookie Will Clark drove in four runs with a homer and a double and Jeff Leonard added three runs batted in to pace San Francisco. Juan Berenguer got the victory with four innings of two-hit shutout pitching. For Oakland, Dwayne hit a homer and had three RBI.

Braves 8, Astros 5

Omar Moreno sparked a five-run, ninth-inning rally off Bill Dawley as Atlanta beat Houston in the debut of Braves Manager Chuck Tanner and Astros skipper Hal Lanier. Gerald Perry added three hits, including a home run, to help Gene Garber clinch the victory.

Tony Walker hit an inside-the-park home run for the Astros in the ninth.

Mets 17, White Sox 8

Shawn Abner, the first player picked in the 1984 amateur draft, hit two home runs and drove in seven runs to pace New York. The 19-year-old also doubled off White Sox starter Tom Seaver, who yielded six runs on eight hits in three innings. Danny Heep and Gary Carter also homered for the Mets, while Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines homered for the White Sox.

Seaver said he wasn't disappointed in his first outing of the year. "I accomplished the things I wanted to," he noted. "I threw strikes and didn't walk anybody. I threw all fastballs in the first inning and didn't start with breaking balls until the third."

Angels 11, Padres 1

Reggie Jackson and rookie Wally Joyner each hit a solo homer in California's victory over San Diego, spoiling the debut of Steve Boros as manager of the Padres. The Angels put the game away with an eight-run eighth inning. That outburst was highlighted by a three-run triple by Rick Burleson, making a comeback after missing the entire 1985 season with a shoulder injury.

Cubs 7, Brewers 4

Back-to-back doubles by Chris Speier and Brian Dayett sparked a four-run rally that brought the Cubs back from a 4-1 deficit. Non-roster player Matt Keough, released by the St. Louis Cardinals after last season, earned the victory with three innings of three-hit shutout pitching.

Changes redefine baseball lingo

By TOM SINGER
Hearst News Service

MESA, Ariz. — Fringe ballplayers may not be elated with the advent of 24-man rosters. But writers are.

If nothing else, it rings the death knell for one of the manager's pet sayings: "It'll take a 25-man effort for us to win."

That's only the latest baseball sagism to bite the dust, however. In case you haven't been paying attention, here are some others that no longer apply:

"He comes to play." — With today's secure salaries, he comes to collect.

"Free base." — That's what they called walks B.C., Before Cocaine.

"You can't give this guy anything good to hit." — Another relic of the B.C. era.

"Home-run hitters drive Cadillacs." — When's the last time you saw a ballplayer emerge from anything but a Jaguar, Mercedes Benz or Porsche?

"A hit's as good as a walk." — Try telling that to a salary arbitrator.

"That ball had eyes." — More than likely, it just had some inferior Tahitian cowhide.

"It ain't over till the Fat Lady sings." — Now she has a weight clause, too.

WEIGHT AND SEE — If it's true ballplayers come to camp in better shape than ever, as managers keep claiming, why the need for the proliferation of weight-control contract incentives?

Some heavy angles: Bill Caudill shed 31 pounds to 208, Gary Lavelle went from 223 to 203 and Curt Wardle from 235 to 205.

The punch-line on Wardle, 6-5, is that management had ordered him down to 215. He misunderstood and went 10 pounds lower. Indians camp watchers now describe him as "a borderline anorexic."

Then, there's the plight of Houston Astros pitcher Charlie Kerfeld, who went from a November weight of 284 pounds to 240 without any monetary incentive. He was embarrassed into dieting.

Astros President John McMillan asked him last season, "How can you come in to get your paycheck looking the way you do?"

During a game against the Padres, San Diego's Graig Nettles placed a dugout-to-dugout phone call to ask, in reference to the rotund Kerfeld, "How were you guys able to bail Denny McLain out of jail?"

RICHIE WHO? WHAT STORY? Richie Allen, the former controversial slugger working as a batting instructor in the White Sox' camp, still feels his reputation was unfairly smeared.

"I might still write a book, giving my side of the story," Allen says.

CAPT. EDDIE — Manager Earl Weaver first approached Eddie Murray about assuming the Orioles' captaincy last season.

"No. Never. No way. And I don't mean maybe," said Eddie.

Last week, Murray was named the first Orioles captain in history.

TORONTO VS. SEAGULLS, PART II The joy of Glenallen Hill, invited to the Blue Jays' camp after spending last season in Single-A ball, was cut short by a batting practice incident last week.

Hill ripped a liner to right that hit a seagull, broke its wing and led to its humane destruction. Hill was left in little better shape.

"For a minute, I couldn't even think," he said. "I killed a bird. That can't be a good sign."

Part I, of course, featured the Yankees' Dave Winfield, who got into trouble with Ontario police a couple of years ago by bouncing a warm-up throw off a seagull.

QUOTE RACK

"You're going to have to realize this is your last-chance gas station to fill your tank before you head into the baseball desert." — Cleveland exec Dan O'Brien, to pitcher Rick Behanna, who is holding out after suffering through a 3-8 season and a rotator cuff injury.

UTEP holds off SDSU, 78-76

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Quintan Gates scored 22 points and Hernell Jackson hit clutch free throws down the stretch as Texas-El Paso held off upset-minded San Diego State 78-76 Friday to move into the championship game of the Western Athletic Conference basketball tournament.

Jackson hit six free throws in the final two minutes, 38 seconds, including two with only six seconds remaining to ice the game for the Miners, who ran their record for the season to 26-5.

San Diego State, which had upset WAC co-champion Utah 73-71 in the tournament quarterfinals Thursday night, ended its season at 10-19.

The Miners, who shared the WAC regular season title with Utah and Wyoming, traded baskets with San Diego State throughout the first half with neither team able to move out by more than four points. UTEP held a seven-point lead early in the second half but San Diego State came back to go ahead by five with just over 10 minute remaining.

The game was tied with seven minutes remaining and the two teams traded baskets up until the end.

Mike Richmond had 19 points for the Miners and Juden Smith added 12, including 10 in the second half. Anthony Watson, the WAC's leading scorer, led the losing cause for the Aztecs with 27 points.

UTEP beat Colorado State University 58-50 in the quarterfinals.

The Miners and San Diego State had split during the regular season with UTEP losing 67-66 at San Diego State and winning at home 91-64.

Michael McDonald sets slow pace for solo career

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael McDonald doesn't think of himself as working in the fast lane.

"I look at myself as a turtle compared to a lot of hares around me," said the former lead vocalist, keyboardist and songwriter of the now defunct Doobie Brothers.

"If I've learned anything, it's to go ahead and take the pace that's best for me. I don't try to match other artists lick for lick."

McDonald and Kenny Loggins wrote the 1979 Grammy song of the year, "What a Fool Believes" and Loggins' hit "This Is It." With Carly Simon, he co-wrote her hit, "You Belong to Me." His first solo album, "If That's What It Takes," came out in 1982 and his second, "No Lookin' Back," was out in 1985. He's now working on a third.

Still, his solo career is almost reluctant.

"With the Doobies, I knew I held one niche and I was very comfortable," he said in an interview. "If the band were still going, that's exactly where I'd be now. The solo thing is something I knew I should try. If I never tried it, I would always wonder."

For the Doobie Brothers, which formed in 1970 and folded in 1982, McDonald wrote a legion of hits, including "Takin' it to the Streets," "Minute by Minute" and "Real Love."

He was born in St. Louis where he played in every band he could join. He moved to California when he was 18 years old and made his first record in 1970. He joined Steely Dan in 1974.

Michael McDonald, former lead vocalist, keyboardist and song writer for the Doobie Brothers, says his work output in his solo career isn't in the fast lane.

"I think by the time I got to the Doobies, I had learned to depend on people, but not in a bad way," McDonald said. "It was comfortable for me. I enjoyed my time for the band, enjoyed the people."

So why did the Doobie Brothers disband? Said McDonald: "Nothing spectacular. We kind of accepted Patrick Simmons (guitarist-vocalist) as leader. Everybody got to chime in and feel a little bit of themselves in the end product. Then the last two albums were like things assembled around us. Patrick quit. It took us awhile to come to terms with the idea that it was really over."

McDonald quit next. "I was caught between knowing the other guys wanted to keep going and knowing this was my chance to finally take the initiative on my own solo career."

The band wanted to be more of a "brutal rock 'n' roll entity," he said, and felt they were being forced into middle-of-the-road music.

"Our destiny was getting away from us," he said. "The record label pretty much started telling us what they wanted in albums. Money was tight; labels were doing that a lot. It's a very hard line to toe. I think bands like the Doobie Brothers will go extinct at times like that."

By February, McDonald's album, "No Lookin' Back," had been on the best-selling charts for 23 weeks.

"'No Lookin' Back,' done with one engineer and myself and a lot of old equipment in my backyard, turned out to be the best project I've ever done — at least one of the best," McDonald said.

"Composing was pretty much the same. The luxury was, I would go into the studio and write. In some cases, I'd actually go ahead and initiate the track myself, put down a drum pattern. Right about the point I was writing I was recording. There's a certain sponteneity to that that is irreplaceable."

McDonald's first LP came out in 1982 just as the Doobie Brothers' farewell tour began, and he toured solo in 1983.

"Then I pretty much put performing on the back burner," he said. He produced a record for Delta, which has his sister Maureen as lead singer and one for his wife, Amy Holland.

Producing made McDonald put a studio behind his house.

"More than anything, the studio helped me break out of something I was burning out in — writing pop music," he said.

"I had been writing pretty much the same way for 20 years....Not until I rehearsed with the band or came into a studio did I start to arrange the music."

ENTERTAINMENT

"With the Doobies, I knew I held one niche and I was very comfortable. If the band were still going, that's exactly where I'd be now. The solo thing is something I knew I should try. If I never tried it, I would always wonder."

New Orleans Symphony scales up from doldrums

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — The New Orleans Symphony Orchestra, silenced last year by a musicians' walkout, is on a crescendo of success with a new conductor and new management.

"The organization of the symphony business sometimes makes possible this situation (money troubles). Even with the greatest orchestras," said Maxim Shostakovich, 47, the symphony's new conductor.

"But what is good," he said, pausing to translate his thoughts from Russian to English before speaking again, "is that much much often, the situation has a happy end."

His arrival is a big step forward for the symphony, which made a critically acclaimed European tour last year with Philippe Entremont but has never had a music director who was both a well-known musician and trained as a conductor.

Entremont, internationally renowned as a pianist, is winding up a five-year stint at New Orleans' podium and will direct the Denver Symphony next year.

Shostakovich, son of the great Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich, studied piano and conducting at the Moscow Conservatory. He conducted the U.S.S.R. Radio and Television Symphony Orchestra for 10 years before he and his son, a pianist named Dmitri who now studies at the Juilliard School, defected in 1981.

He was guest conductor for a concert featuring his father's Fifth Symphony last year, returned to New Orleans last month for a concert of contemporary music and will permanently take the podium next fall.

"When I was here for the first time, I remark the good level of musicians," he said. "It was easy to work, nice to work with these people."

That concert was the symphony's first one after a two-week walkout last April. The musicians had cut their season and put off pay raises to keep the orchestra going, and had suffered through months of late paychecks. But after two weeks without any pay, they put down their instruments.

A frantic two-week fund-raising drive brought in the $150,000 they were owed, and they returned to work.

Jim Reeves, the symphony's first full-time manager, said he's confident the payroll will be met every week.

Austin singer writes, performs songs for children

Scruggs

PFLUGERVILLE, Texas (AP) — Casey Scruggs, age 1½, knows the magic of words to request her favorite song from her folk-singing father, Joe.

"Goo goo, ga ga," she insists, clinging to his knee as he reaches for his acoustic guitar.

Some parents may object to baby talk from their children, but in this case "Goo Goo Ga Ga" is the title of a catchy little song from Joe Scruggs' second album, "Traffic Jams."

Austin parents and their children have enjoyed Scruggs' children's music since his first album, "Late Last Night," was released in Austin stores two years ago. But this spring, the rest of the country will have a chance to wiggle their toes to Scruggs' bouncy melodies as both "Traffic Jams" and "Late Last Night" have been picked up for national distribution.

For Scruggs, 34, who lives in Pflugerville with Casey and his wife, Linda, the national deals meant that he could quit his job as a computer technician and devote himself full time to the business of writing and singing songs, that keep the little ones bouncing and their parents humming alone.

That parents enjoy the same songs that children love is quite an accomplishment in these days of sugary Rainbow Brite albums. Scruggs' songs have a folk-country sound that is jazzed up by lively background singers. He credits producer Gary Powell with developing sophisticated and interesting arrangements.

"A lot of what you hear on the albums is his inspiration," Scruggs said. "I tend to sing everything in the same bubble-gum time."

But that bubble-gum time, as he calls it, combined with his sweet and comforting folk voice, serves his songs well. He sings of snowmen in the freezer, of a child's nighttime imaginings, of candy falling from the sky, and of a child's plea for his parents to buckle their seat belts.

Scruggs' musical background hails back to his college days at the University of Texas at El Paso and Texas Tech, where, he said, "I educated myself into oblivion," and played a lot of folk music with friends.

Although daughter Casey is an enthusiastic fan, she's really too young to provide the inspiration for most of his songs, which tend to aim at slightly older children. So Scruggs depends on his wife, a 14-year veteran of kindergarten classrooms, for many of his ideas.

In fact, it was through Linda's need for little songs to sing at school that Joe began writing children's songs. One of the first songs was to help calm down the kids before a movie. The words ("Please look at the screen, and put your hands in lap ...") are set to a melody that is easy for 5-year-olds to sing.

"Kids do so much better when they're singing. It makes for an orderly transition," he said.

That song led to "Songs to Brighten Your Day," a 1984 collection of transition songs, movement songs and circle songs that Scruggs wrote with Dee Gibson, another kindergarten teacher.

At about the same time he was putting together the book, Scruggs was in the studio recording his first album, "Late Last Night."

Both efforts were accomplished with entirely local talent, and so rather than turn over the finished products to a publishing company elsewhere, Scruggs and a few others organized Educational Graphics Press.

The song collection and his two albums are distributed by Education Graphics to record stores and children's bookstores in Austin.

The records have been extremely popular with parents, teachers, day care centers and even children's dance classes.

"It's really a thrill to see the kids jumping up and down to the songs," he said. In Austin alone, 5,000 copies of the two records have sold.

But Scruggs hopes that "Late Last Night" will become a million-seller when Discovery Toys, a national home demonstration toy company, distributes it this spring.

Additionally, "Traffic Jams," which are songs designed to be sung in the car, has been included in a travel survival kit for families being distributed by Rand-McNally.

In the meantime, Joe Scrugg's Austin fans can look forward to another album this year. A 30-minute video from his songs may also be in the offing.

'Sky boxes' at rodeo cater to rich

By PETER APPLEBOME
New York Times News Service

MESQUITE, Tex. — The painting on the wall across from Neal Gay's desk shows Gay in a blue Western shirt and white cowboy hat looking wistfully toward a dusty rodeo arena, with a sign reading Mesquite Championship Rodeo. Its title is "The Way It Was."

Gay's plans for the ways it will be in the rodeo business are different. When his 28-year-old rodeo reopens, in April, he hopes, it will provide 78 "sky boxes" on the third floor with bars with running water and color-coordinated Western decoration, corporate sponsors and "television-friendly lighting."

In a world where almost everything seems susceptible to demographic tinkering, Gay and his son Don are doing their best to see if they can cause the once aromatic and gritty rodeo to scoop up some of the white-wine-and- BMW crowd at the upper end of the market.

"There are a lot of people who, for various reasons, just won't sit in a grandstand with everyone else," said Don Gay, an eight-time national bull-riding champion who retired this year at the age of 32 to help run the new arena. "If a man is wearing a $600 suit or a woman has a nice new dress, they might not want to get what you call some cow plop all over it."

Neal Gay started the arena in this town just outside Dallas with five other rodeo cowboys 28 years ago. Since then the land has appreciated to the point that it became too valuable to keep just for the rodeo. Faced with the option of selling out or finding a way to keep going, the Gays decided to raze the rickety old arena, sell the 11-acre site it was on and build a better one on 18 adjacent acres with the aim of appealing to a more diverse audience.

They hope to open the new $6.5 million arena in April. Its most notable feature will be the sky boxes, modeled after the suites at Texas Stadium, home of the Dallas Cowboys. They lease for $10,000 a year.

Purchasers have included local sports figures like former the Dallas Cowboys Roger Staubach and Walt Garrison, the owner of Dallas Mavericks basketball team, Donald Carter, and businesses, including banks.

In addition to the bars, the sky boxes will provide closed-circuit television, privs e elevator service, drop-leaf buffet tables and other amenities. There will also be a reception area available only to the box holders. The idea is to provide cachet for corporate executives and local celebrities in Dallas, where cachet is everything. The arena will hold 6,000 people in all, with general admission fees a less awesome $5.

"A lot of people in the upper echelon are always looking for something different and a different way to entertain business clients," said Don Gay. "This is something different. You can only go to Las Vegas or Monte Carlo so many times."

The owners also plan to customize rodeos for various corporate clients, adapting the format and time on request.

Although the sky boxes are the first of their kind in the rodeo business, the Mesquite arena is not the only one trying to keep rodeo going by making it a more general entertainment.

The year-old $8 million Lazy E Arena in Guthrie, Okla., is a fully enclosed auditorium with a $600-a-year private club above the livestock chute.

People in the tradition-conscious rodeo world are watching both developments with interest.

"Nothing like this has ever been done before with rodeo," said Willard H. Porter, director of the rodeo division of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. "I think it might work, but you already see a backlash in rodeo against things getting too commercial and too professional.

"That's why you now see a lot of these ranch rodeos featuring crews from different ranches. That's where you're more likely to see people thrown off horses or having a cow step on their stomach."

Don Gay admits the arrangement loses a bit of romance, but he thinks it's inevitable.

"I'm someone who believes the best rodeo is held outdoors in the sunshine when it's warm and dusty and there's something like a county fair going on," said Gay. "I've read every one of Louis L'Amour's books and some of them more than once. I love the old romantic image, but you can't go back to it and in some ways the good old days weren't so good.

"When I was rodeoing I flew my private plane and, believe me, that beats riding in a car with four guys the way I had to do at the beginning of my career.

Tire tester logs thousands of miles

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — Marcel Gaboriault has logged more than 1.5 million miles on his appointed rounds but has never had an accident on his jobsite, a three-lane asphalt track near the Davis Mountains of far West Texas.

Gaboriault puts in eight-hour shifts on the track — not to race cars, but to test tires.

"This car only has 171,000 miles on it," he said as he banked through a turn at precisely 70 mph while cruising the 7.7-mile track. "That's not bad for a car two years old."

The Vermont native has driven cars at the Fort Stockton Test Center for 19 years. He tests tires under development and those already offered to the public at the site 12 miles west of the community.

"I grew up in Vermont," the 48-year-old Gaboriault said. "I worked in the sawmills and cheese plants."

Gaboriault glided past a slower-moving truck that is making a thumping sound, a sign of tire treads wearing out. He works for Firestone, which has operated the tire testing facility on a 6,000-acre piece of flatlands since 1966.

He served four years in the Air Force and had a gas delivery job before he hired on at the test center.

Tires manufactured in Akron, Ohio, are shipped to the test site. The site originally was selected because of the climate, interstate highways and the availability of land and road-building materials.

Worth 98¢ Plus

An insurance agent is an interesting person. He will sell only so much insurance for your auto or house or business. But he will sell all the life insurance you can afford for yourself, your spouse, and all members of your family.

Now, he's a business man. He knows that an auto or house is worth only so much, and its worth can be calculated almost to the dollar.

But not so with the human being! No calculation can determine the worth of a person. No price is too great, no sacrifice too severe for one individual life.

Someone calculated years ago that "the human body contains:

— enough lime to white wash a chicken coop.
— enough fat to make two bars of soap.
— enough potassium to set off a toy cannon.
— enough sulfur to rid a dog of fleas.
— enough iron to make a twelve penny nail.
— enough phosphorous to tip a box of matches.
— enough gases to fill a few jars.
— and the rest is water.

Total worth at pre-inflation prices: 98 cents.

But we, along with the insurance agent, know better. We are created in God's image. Dust, yes, but dust that's been in Divine Hands.

For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son ..... (John 3:16)

The Rev. A.L. Jackson will be honored at a 7 p.m. banquet today at Midland Center, Room 5.

Jackson was appointed State Sunday School superintendent for Texas Northwest by the Bishop W.H. Watson, Jurisdictional Bishop of Texas Northwest, in April of 1985. Participants from Lubbock, Amarillo, Abilene, Fairfield, Kermit, Pecos and all towns in the Midland are involved.

Guest speaker is the Rev. W.C. Kenan of Faith Temple Church of God in Christ. Also, an added attraction is the Rev. C.S. Johnson, pastor of Alexander Temple and District Overseer of the San Angelo District, who will be giving his testimony.

With Jackson is Sheena D. Parker, who is competing for a free trip to Wichita Falls to the State United Auxiliary Convention in June.

Sheena D. Parker and Rev. A.L. Jackson

Miss Parker, 14, is competing against the Lubbock, Odessa, Midland, and Kermit districts. She represents the San Angelo district.

She is a member of the Holy Trinity Church of God in Christ where Jackson is pastor. There she is a member of the choir, the usher board, and the Sunday School. She attends school at San Jacinto Junior High, where she is active in basketball, volleyball and track. She lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Manley.

Kids for Christ International announces special Bible bee

Kids for Christ International announces the kickoff of the 1986 Texas Sesquicentennial Bible Bee, an annual, interdenominational contest of Bible skills in six categories.

Coach Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys heads the contest as honorary chairman. State winners in the Kids (grades 1-6) and Teen (grades 7-12) divisions will win $500 and the grand championship trophy. The state finals at the Dallas Convention Center will be televised on a Dallas station.

All Texas churches are invited to participate in the bee by enrolling through Kids for Christ International at 1212 Josey Lane, Suite 375, Carrollton, Texas 75006.

Each participating church will hold a local Texas Bible Bee contest. Qualifiers advance to area, county, and regional competitions. Fifteen regional winners in each division will compete in the state finals September 27.

Bible Bee was conceived by Dr. Jack Gray, evangelist and president of Kids For Christ International, as a means of motivating children to learn the Bible. The study book is designed to help parents begin to train their children in basic Bible facts and passages.

"We are guilty of child abuse," Gray says, "if we neglect the spiritual training of our children in the Bible. You can see a black and blue little arm. You can't see a black and blue little spirit, but it's there just the same. This kind of neglect will reap horrible repercussions in the life of the nation and in the lives of the children entrusted to our care."

The Texas Bible Bee will give focus for parents and churches to the task of biblical training for children. "Our goal is to involve at least 78,000 children in 2600 churches," said Amy Simpson, Bible Bee director. "We want to promote constructive, ecumenical interaction on behalf of children through the administration of the contests beyond the local church."

Bible Bee began in 1985 with a Dallas pilot, and plans are underway for Bible Bee USA in the near future. Any church interested in participating in the 1986 Texas Bible Bee are to contact Kids For Christ International.

Midland families learn how to store year's food supply

In the February Homemaking meeting of Relief Society, the women's organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, families in Midland learned how to store a year's supply of food in their homes in the event of a personal or national tragedy.

The families are mostly members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which advises its people to have on hand enough food, clothing, medicine and other necessities for one year, said Kathy Marchant, Relief Society president.

"Food storage can be helpful when a family is in financial trouble, whether from unemployment or injury," Ms. Marchant said. "Of course, in case of a natural disaster, food storage would come in very handy — but there are many other practical reasons for it."

People need to store those items which they normally eat. This might include flour, sugar, rice, beans, oil, canned fruits and vegetables, and powdered milk. However, measures for protecting such foods from bugs and moisture need to be taken, said Ms. Marchant.

The class was taught by Alma Holst. She explained what to store and how to store and rotate it. "Water is also important," said Ms. Holst. "A minimum of one gallon per person per day should be stored.

For more information on food storage contact Ms. Holst, 694-4782.

First Church of Nazarene hosts special speaker

The Rev. Dwight E. Neuenschwander will be the special speaker for services being held at 7 p.m. today and 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday at the First Church of the Nazarene, Wall and F. Street.

The services are evangelistic in nature, with the Sunday morning service including a faith promise commitment for world missions.

Following military experience in both the U.S. Navy and Air Force, Neuenschwander graduated from Bethany Nazarene College, Oklahoma City, where he prepared for the ministry. He also holds a master's degree in higher education administration from the University of Northern Colorado.

Having pastored churches in Oklahoma, Kansas, and Colorado for 20 years, he also served on the administration of Nazarene Bible College at Colorado Springs for 10 years. Following this assignment, he served with the Church of the Nazarene International Headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri, in the Department of Evangelism, of which he was head for a period of that time.

After traveling extensively throughout various world areas as an evangelist and conference speaker, he served from 1980-85 as District Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene in New Zealand. He has also conducted missionary tours and Faith Promise Conventions.

Neuenschwander moved to Nebraska in September 1985, to acquire the superintendency of the Nebraska district, Church of the Nazarene.

The Rev. Harold L. Quarles, the church's pastor, invites the public to attend.

Prior to his appointment, he served as pastor of Reece Prairie Baptist Church, Burleson. He has served as church extension field consultant of the Baptist General Convention of Texas and director of missions for Denton Baptist Association.

In the 11 a.m. Sunday service, Oakes will bring a message on "The Mandate for Missions." The film "Planned Parenthood for Missions" will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday. A discussion of home missions will follow.

Carl Teel, minister of Eylau Christian Church in Texarkana for the past 10 years, is leading the Christian Church of Midland in a "Spiritual Renewal Crusade" this weekend. The crusade, which began Friday evening, will continue through Sunday. Teel has preached meetings of this type throughout the Southwest.

Carl Teel

Since beginning his ministry at Eylau, the church has begun a Christian Grammar School and established the Christian Heritage School of the Ministry.

Teel will lead services at 7 p.m. tonight and Sunday night. He will also teach the joint Sunday School classes at 9:45 a.m. and preach at the 10:45 a.m. worship service. Special music will be provided for each service and Steve Littell will lead the singing.

The public is invited to attend.

New Dobson films aired

"Turn Your Heart Toward Home," a new film series from Dr. James Dobson, is being shown Wednesday evenings at First Presbyterian Church at 800 W. Texas. FPC is among the first churches to show the new series anywhere in the country. Because of Dr. Dobson's popularity, FPC is inviting all interested Midlanders to attend the films.

The six-part series began March 5. The next film, "Power in Parenting: The Young Child," will be shown March 12 in the FPC sanctuary. All interested citizens are invited to attend. A nursery will be provided. The series continues each Wednesday evening through April 16, with the exception of April 2.

Throughout the series, Dr. Dobson and his wife, Shirley, share their lives and insights in a very personal and moving message. The film series is an impelling call for America to return to traditional values; addressing issues such as mid-life crisis, guilt in parenting, and loving toughness. A nursery will be provided.

Dallas firms tend to employees' spiritual needs

DALLAS (AP) — When the young daughter of the sales manager of SYSCO Food Systems was diagnosed as having cancer in 1984, SYSCO president David E. Wicker III called Gil Strickland.

Strickland, a chaplain under contract to the Dallas food distributor, rushed to the employee's home to meet with the family.

SYSCO is among corporations that traditionally have tended to the physical needs of employees — through health care and insurance programs — that now are retaining corporate chaplains to add a spiritual and emotional dimension to benefits.

It was only a matter of a few weeks between the diagnosis and the death of the sales manager's 6-year-old child. But in that time, SYSCO's chaplain spent endless hours with the family, in the hospital and at their home.

"It was a very traumatic experience," Wicker said. "I called and visited a couple of times, but (Strickland) spent time doing what I would not have been able to do. The family thought so much of him, they asked him to perform the funeral service."

Wicker's Dallas food distributorship employs the services of Marketplace Ministries Inc., an industrial chaplaincy corporation founded two years ago by Strickland, who is its president. It is a non-sectarian program, with seven full-time and two part-time chaplains — representing Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths.

Companies sign contracts for the service, for which they pay hourly or monthly fees.

"The chaplains are on call for employees," Wicker said. "It's a personal matter between them and Gil (Strickland). He gives me no names, and I do not ask for any. I just felt a need to give our employees something more than a job and a weekly salary. I know it is successful because of the letters I receive from the employees."

The Marketplace Ministries' chaplains, who are all trained in seminaries and have business experience, offer services ranging from counseling for drug problems and family crises to marriages, baptisms and funerals.

The companies that use Marketplace Ministries include a bank, a printing company and a sunglass distributor, Strickland said. The seven firms employ about 2,000 persons. When the employees' families are included, the chaplains have a congregation of more than 6,000.

There are an estimated 30,000 full-time chaplains in the nation, and probably nearly that many part time, said Edward Dietrich, the Milwaukee-based executive director of the national Association of Catholic Chaplains. The health field uses about half of all the chaplains, and Strickland estimates that business and industry use nearly 300 chaplains nationwide.

The concept of industrial chaplains, which is just beginning to increase, isn't new.

The oldest existing chaplaincy was started in 1931 by R.G. LeTourneau, an earth-moving equipment company in Longview in Gregg County. It is now known as Marathon-LeTourneau.

Gil Thornton celebrated his 10th year as the full-time chaplain at LeTourneau this month. He has married couples, baptized their children and counseled them in times of emotional stress.

Lamesa church sponsors farm family weekend

LAMESA — In an effort to offer help and hope to farm families in the midst of the national farm crisis, First Baptist Church, Lamesa, is sponsoring a "West Texas Farm Family Weekend," Friday through March 16.

"The agriculture industry is doing all it can to help save the farm. Our goal is to help save the farm family," said C.H. Murphy, Jr., pastor at First Baptist Church. At least 800 people are expected to attend the interdenominational weekend program, which is open to the public.

The program will begin at 7 p.m. Friday at FBC, S. 1st Str., Lamesa, with a general rally featuring John Johnson, a motivational speaker from Minneapolis, Minn. Another rally is scheduled for 7 p.m. March 15 featuring Stanley White, a Christian humorist from Stephenville.

Beginning at 9 a.m. March 15 and continuing in 50-minute intervals throughout the day, a variety of seminars will be offered on subjects ranging from financial planning to strengthening the family.

Topics and speakers include: "Coping with Change," Bob Pender, professor of home and family development, Texas Tech University, Lubbock; "Bankruptcy and Foreclosure," Byrnie Bass, attorney; "Bankruptcy and Christian Ethics," Clyde Cain, pastor Calvary Baptist Church, Lubbock; "Self-Esteem" and "Money Management and Financial Planning," Lewis and Rose Canley; "Stress and Grief Management," Lane Powell, Crossroads Samaritan Counseling Center, Lubbock; and "Strengthening the Family," Neal Beaumwart, pastoral counselor, Crossroads Samaritan Counseling Center.

Murphy will lead a seminar on "The Bible Basis of Turning Tragedy into Triumph," and he will lead a Bible Study for farm families during the Sunday morning service, March 16.

"To our knowledge, this is the first response of this type to the farm crisis by any church in Texas," said Ken Coffee, chairman of the Texas Baptist Farm Crisis Task Force, Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The guest preacher for the 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. services Sunday is the Rev. Dr. Lynn R. Mims of Dallas. Lunch will follow the 11 a.m. service in the fellowship hall of the church.

Mims is presently the associate director of Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology Intern Program, assistant professor of Ministry, teaching "Ministry in the Black Church" and is advisor to black seminarians at Perkins.

He grew up in Amarillo and was an active member of Wyatt Memorial UMC as a youth and young adult. FBC hosts second session in relationship seminar

First Baptist Church of Midland is hosting the second part of a relationship seminar from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. today. The Rev. Gary Smalley, a well-known Christian counselor, author and lecturer, is the featured speaker.

Alan Schroeder, publicity chairman for the seminar, says the real problem in relationships is "a lack of individual commitment to building loving and lasting relationships, which can only happen through Jesus Christ. He is the author of love and it is only through him that we can successfully learn how to love one another.

"Smalley has dedicated his life to teaching and writing about the essential Biblical ways to forming godly relationships," Schroeder says. "The seminar is not just for people having trouble, but anyone who wants to improve a relationship, be it with a spouse, their children, parents or employers."

The author of two best-selling books on marriage, "If Only He Knew," for men, and "For Better of Best," for women, Smalley is a graduate of the University of California at Long Beach with a degree in psychology. He received a master of divinity degree from Bethel Seminary in St. Paul, Minn.

As he began his career working with a variety of churches across the country, Smalley said he began to see a tremendous need for counseling and instruction among families.

"As I worked with families I began to discover how different men and women are — not only psychologically but also in their response to situations," Smalley says. "Women are more relationship minded. Men get satisfaction through conquering, getting ahead in a job, facing challenges. Women are more satisfied through personal relationships."

Topics being discussed include turning disagreement into harmony without hurting each other; eliminating chief causes of rebellion in children; establishing and maintaining harmony; recognizing and applying a proven secret of becoming a close-knit family; discovering the primary reason wives resist husband's sexual advances; money; sex; and power issues.

The seminar is being held in two sessions. The first session was Friday.

For more information call First Baptist Church, 682-1646.

Both men are graduates of Southwestern Baptist Seminary and have 20 years experience in marriage enrighment.

Tens of thousands have attended Brecheen and Faulkner's live seminars across America. Their book, "What Every Family Needs," has more than 125,000 copies in print.

The eight films contain live presentations plus illustrative dramatic scenes. The titles of the films are: "Made for Each Other," "The Trouble with Us is Me," "What Husbands Need to Know," "What Wives Need to Know," "How to Kill Communication," "The Communication Lifeline," "Speaking Frankly about Sex," and "Renewing Romance in Marriage."

This series was produced by Earl Miller, producer of James Dobson's "Focus on the Family" films and "The Prize." Miller says, "The films contain some of the best material I have seen anywhere. From the point of view of both content and production quality, they are excellent."

Popular author and Christian psychologist, Gary Collins, Ph.D., of Deerfield, Ill., observes, "...their humor is captivating — but not overdone — and their psychological understanding is sound. Best of all, they bring clear, biblical perspective to their films."

Reagans, government officials disclose foreign gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos presented Nancy Reagan with two gowns valued at $10,000 and joined her husband in giving New York Rep. Jack Kemp jewelry worth $10,420 last fall, a report showed Friday.

President Reagan received valuables from foreign heads of state ranging from an ivory elephant studded with diamonds and other gems from Thai Queen Sirkit to two bottles of vodka from Soviet party chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

Now in government storage in compliance with federal law, the gifts were detailed in an annual report on thousands of dollars worth of items lavished on U.S. officials by foreign governments in 1985.

Saudi King Fahd presented a $12,500, gold-plated, diamond-studded clock to the Reagans as well as apparel and art work costing even more. Gorbachev sent 12 jars of caviar along with the vodka and other items.

Central Intelligence Director William J. Casey, not required to reveal the sources of gifts, reported a French, d'Armes St. Etienne revolver, a bone-handled, silver-sheathed sword and assorted African and Chinese art objects. Gifts to other CIA officials — some not obliged to give even their own names — included a Lugar pistol and a "Mideastern sultan's dagger."

The vast bulk of the gifts is destined for display in museums or to gather dust in government warehouses. Under federal ethics law, officials may not accept gifts worth more than $165 from foreign governments, except on behalf of the U.S. government.

Eye-catching items are sometimes cleared for display in the recipient's office but must remain behind when he or she leaves the job.

Under the law, those receiving the gifts must state the justification for accepting them. The standard entry is: "Non-acceptance would have caused embarrassment to the donor" or similar wording.

Such exchange of gifts is an ancient custom that greases diplomatic wheels.

The White House report said that on Oct. 21, Mrs. Reagan received from Mrs. Marcos: "Two gowns: One is black velvet and floor length with a silver sequined and rhinestone Phoenix bird design; the other is a red silk strapless gown with a rhinestone butterfly design at top and a matching jacket with same designed repeated at top. Both unsized and sewn by J. Moreno, Manila."

The gowns, with a total value of $10,000, have been sent to the National Archives, the report said.

Elaine Crispen, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said they were given to the first lady by Mrs. Marcos in New York at a conference held in conjunction with the 40th anniversary of the United Nations.

Kemp reported that in September he received from then-President Ferdinand Marcos and Mrs. Marcos: "Earrings, rings, cufflinks, studs, broach and necklaces." The jewelry, valued at $10,420, has been sent to the House clerk's office, the report said.

John Buckley, Kemp's press secretary, said the gifts were presented to the congressman and his wife, Joanne, in Manila while they were on a privately financed fact-finding tour of Asia. He said it was customary for Marcos to bestow expensive gifts on foreign dignitaries and that Kemp "was accorded the treatment of someone who could be a presidential candidate in some future year."

The president and Mrs. Reagan, unsurprisingly, received most of the treasure. Their report of 120 gifts and parcels of gifts covered more than seven pages of fine print in the Federal Register.

Among top donors:

• Colombian President Belisario Betancur and his wife: 2,000 long-stemmed, red roses, $9,000; a sculptured metal figure of a nude woman with a bow in her hair, $20,000; an atlas containing reproductions of early Spanish maps, $20,700.

• Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres: Set of 10 color serigraphs (silk-screen pictures) of the late Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, $10,000; an antique glass necklace made during the Roman occupation of Israel, $5,000.

Man gives Reagan shirt off his back

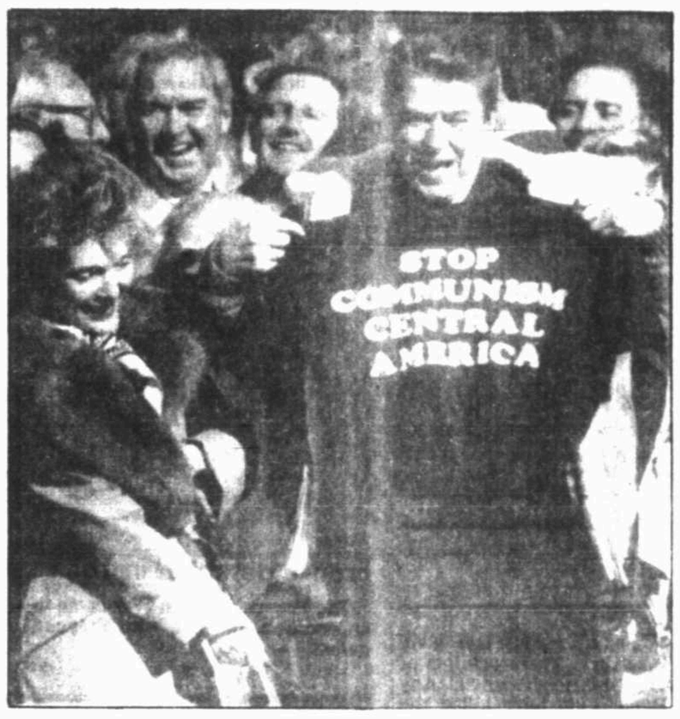

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, walking to his helicopter to fly to Camp David, stopped at a crowd of well-wishers Friday to accept a burgundy T-shirt emblazoned with the words, "Stop Communism (in) Central America."

Frank Santana, a stockbroker from Chicago who said he was a Cuban refugee, was wearing the shirt over his overcoat and motioned excitedly to Reagan as the president and his wife, Nancy, left the executive mansion and walked toward the aircraft parked on the South Lawn.

Santana hurriedly tugged his shirt off and gave it to the president. A woman next to Santana wore a similar T-shirt over her fur coat but did not remove it.

Reagan held Santana's shirt up against his chest, posing for pictures, and took it aboard his aircraft.

Santana was among 100 members of the Million Dollar Club of top performing stockbrokers of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith who were visiting the White House.

Adelman: U.S. patience with Soviets 'limited'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S disarmament director said Friday that Reagan administration willingness to reach new superpower arms control treaties is dwindling because the Soviet Union continues to violate previous pacts.

Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency told a news conference, "our patience is limited. You cannot have a viable arms control agreement in the future if the Soviet violations continue."

"Parties to agreements must honor all their obligations and commitments. We all believe that there cannot be an arms control arrangement based on a double standard — one of our complete compliance and their cheating," he said.

Asked at what point the United States would stop negotiating with the Soviets if the violations continue, Adelman said, "You can't say 'at Wednesday at 2 o'clock we've had enough,' but it calls into question the future of the arms control process and we consider this the biggest problem in the process."

Adelman released what he said was the most comprehensive public report the administration has made about Soviet violations. He said there were no new allegations in the document or indications that the violations had worsened in the past three years, but that the report was issued to remind the Soviets and the American public about U.S. concerns.

Continuing an effort to enlist support for U.S. arms control policies among allied governments, Adelman said the report would be offered to "foreign audiences as well."

For years, the Reagan administration has been accusing the Soviets of violating agreements and has talked of looking at political, military and negotiating options to deal with the issue. Adelman declined to discuss the options or say how long they would be under study.

Among the most serious concerns repeated in the report is a radar station near the Soviet city of Krasnoyarsk that is said to violate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. Also cited is a charge that the Soviets use codes to hide missile telemetry, which both sides agreed to keep in the open so that compliance with strategic arms pacts could be more easily verified.

"The report is careful to make clear that not all Soviet violations and probable violations are of equal severity, clarify or impact," Adelman said. Yet he added, "Any violation inherently carries serious implications for arms control. The integrity of the process and the sanctity of a nation's commitments are critical. So we dare not ignore even small Soviet violations, much less large ones."

U.S. officials honor Palme at memorial service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Olof Palme, Sweden's assassinated prime minister, was honored at a memorial service Friday by officials, diplomats and prominent and ordinary Americans.

Among them was former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, a target of Palme's criticism of the U.S. war effort in Vietnam.

Walter Mondale, the defeated presidential candidate in the 1984 election, Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush, Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead and Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., were among 1,000 mourners at Washington's National Presbyterian Church.

Bush was scheduled to sign the Swedish Embasssy condolence book.

In a eulogy, Mathias called Palme a politician who despite local problems "made time for a broader constituency, the human race...He applied his thoughts to...the awful fear of living in the nuclear age."

The senator added that whenever Palme criticized America, "I always felt it was because he knew how fine we might be and he hated to see us fall short."

Kennedy said Palme was the rarest of modern men because he was both a prophet and a prime minister.

"His compatriots in spirit, (Mahatma) Gandhi and Martin Luther King, led movements" but not governments, Kennedy said. "Olof Palme proved anew that what counts most is not the size of a man's country but the scope of his vision and the depth of his soul."

Kennedy, surviving brother of two assassinated American political leaders, President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert Kennedy, brought some mourners to tears when he said, "Today I regard him (Palme) as a brother, and if I may be permitted I would apply to him now some words I spoke of Robert Kennedy."

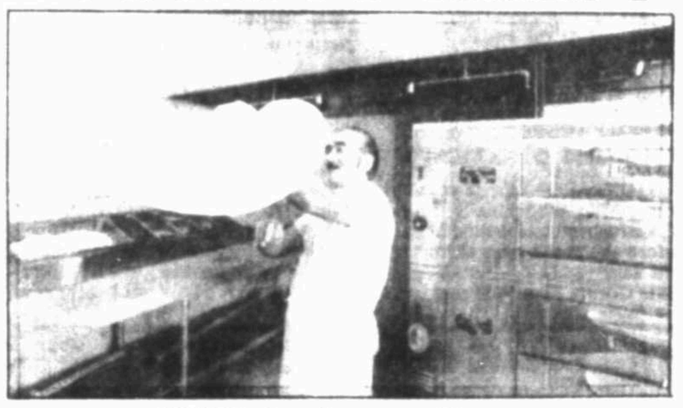

The senator then paraphrased his 1968 eulogy for Robert Kennedy. "Olof Palme saw war — and tried to stop it — let us pray that what he was for us and what he wished for others will some day come to pass for all the world."

It's getting harder and harder to make ends meet. We all face high food prices, energy bills, interest rates, inflation, and on and on. Because of all these, and other pressures of life, people are seeking escape through pleasure.
We all need pleasure in life. We all want to experience joy — to have a ball. But when we try to get meaning from our pleasure, we find that having a ball is more binding than liberating.
Jesus was a joyous person. He had a game that your joy might be complete. He gives a new perspective that helps us attack the pressures and enjoy the true pleasure of living. He sets us free to enjoy Life as He meant it to be!

Oriental honored as Austin's 'most worthy citizen'

AUSTIN (AP) — A Japanese-American who was imprisoned in Texas after the attack on Pearl Harbor and who later created the Oriental Garden in Austin's Zilker Park has been named as the city's "most worthy citizen."

Isamu Taniguchi, 89, was named to receive the award from the Austin Board of Realtors, which has sponsored the annual honor for 37 years.

An estimated 100,000 people a year visit the three-acre Oriental Garden.

Taniguchi was born near Osaka, Japan, in 1897. He arrived in the United States when he was 17.

He farmed in northern California for almost three decades, but in 1941 he and his family were among the thousands of West Coast Japanese-Americans rounded up and sent to detention camps after the Japanese Navy attacked Pearl Harbor at the start of World War II.

He eventually was sent to a detention camp in Crystal City in South Texas.

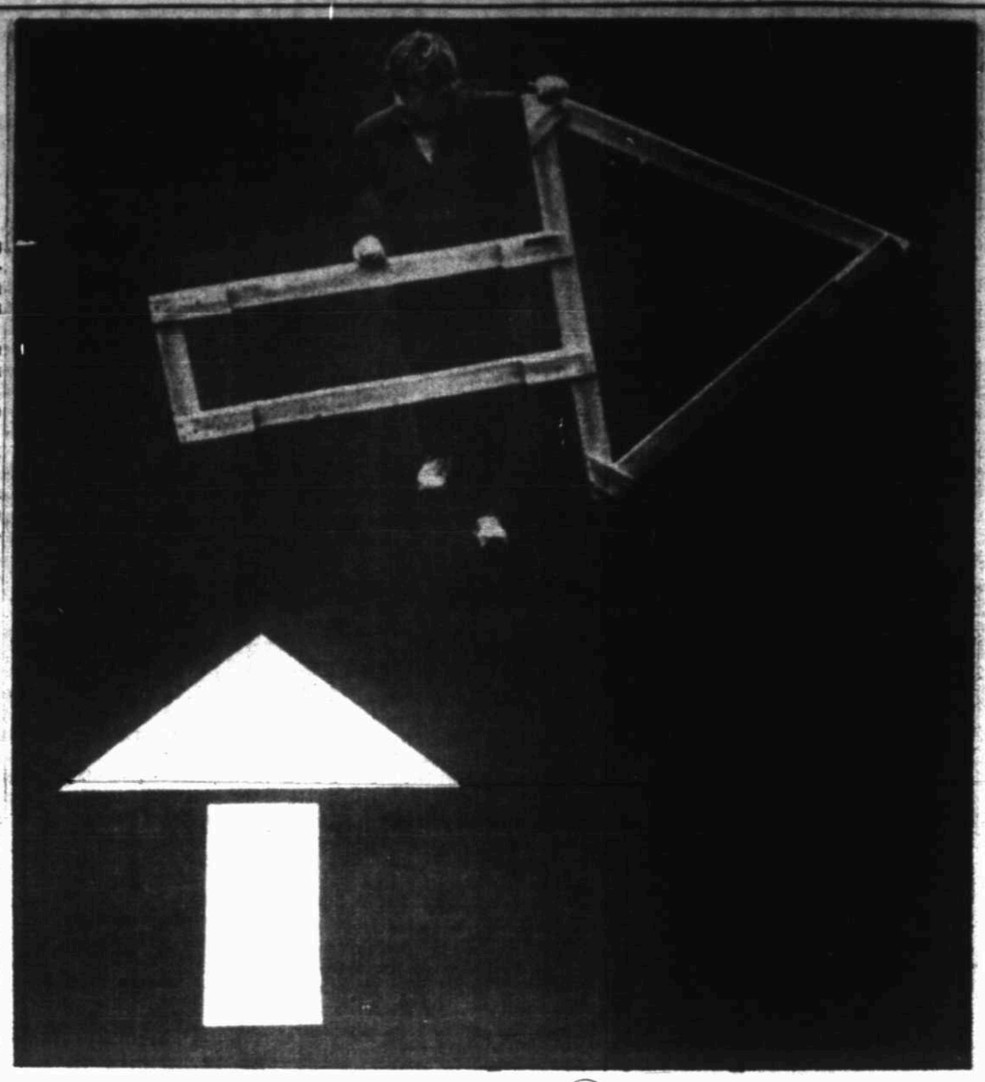

After the war, Taniguchi began farming in the Rio Grande Valley and moved to Austin in 1967.

Rather than expressing bitterness about his experiences, he decided to pay tribute to the opportunities he found in America by persuading the Austin Parks and Recreation Department to allow him to design and build the garden in Zilker Park.

Taniguchi worked on the cliffside plot of land every day for 18 months, building a bridge, growing lotus plants and erecting a bamboo and cedar Oriental teahouse with a thatched roof. He received no salary.

After the garden was completed, Taniguchi said, "We are all so much in a hurry that we never take the time to look and see the beauty around us. We spend all our time chasing money and power, and no good will come of that."

Taniguichi said he still visits the garden once a week.

Woman gets three years for nude modeling business

Hatteras

HOUSTON (AP) — A 33-year-old woman convicted of operating an interstate prostitution ring has been sentenced to three years in prison for operating a nude modeling business while on probation.

U.S. District Judge John Singleton sentenced Penelope Hatteras on Thursday after defense attorneys said she flouted the conditons of her probation by setting up a modeling and escort service as a front for prostitution.

Ms. Hatteras and co-defendant Ed Wallach were motivated by a desire to "laugh at the court's generous sentence," Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve Shaw said.

Wallach, 31, was sentenced Thursday to one year in prison for working at the modeling business.

Singleton sentenced Ms. Hatteras to five years' probation in September after she was convicted of running an interstate prostitution ring. She was found guilty of conspiracy, white slavery and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

Wallach, described as Ms. Hatteras' assistant, was sentenced to three years' probation after he was convicted on 21 prostitution charges.

Gorilla dies of cancer

HOUSTON (AP) — An 18-year-old lowland gorilla who finally found love at a Brownsville zoo died of cancer before she could bear offspring, officials said.

Vanilla Gorilla died Wednesday at the Gladys Porter Zoo, where she was sent in September and introduced to LaMydoc, a 21-year-old, 300-pound gorilla. The pair hit it off and "it was all working out," said zoo Director Don Forest.

A post mortem examination revealed a grapefruit-size tumor at the juncture of the large and small intestines, Forest said. Tests also showed Vanilla had not been impregnanted.

Vanilla was being treated for what officials believed to be a salmonella infection, said Florence Davis, spokeswoman for the Houston Parks and Recreation Department. She appeared to be responding to treatment, but her condition worsened late Tuesday.

Vanilla arrived at a Houston zoo in January 1968 and quickly became a favorite of visitors. Over the years, she was introduced to numerous suitors but never showed interest because "she was very selective about who she mated with," said Parks Superintendent Sylvia Royster.

Truan governor-for-day

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Carlos Truan, a state legislator for 18 years, will serve as Texas' governor-for-a-day today.

The Corpus Christi Democrat was elected by his colleagues at the end of the 1985 Legislature to be president pro tempore, or assistant presiding officer, until the Legislature meets again. The next regular session is in January 1987.

By senatorial tradition, the president pro tem serves as governor-for-a-day when the governor and lieutenant governor are technically out of the state.

Truan will sworn in at noon by State District Judge Raul Longoria of Hidalgo County.

Another feature of Truan's inauguration will be the dedication of the State Archives and Library Building in honor of Lorenzo de Zavala, one of the original signers of the Texas Declaration of Independence.

CLUTE (AP) — Douglas, the pit bull terrier, is a jailbird.

Animal control officer Keith Mooney arrested the dog Thursday on a warrant issued by Municipal Judge Bobbie Smith. Douglas was released Friday after his owners paid $11 in pound fees.

"I was handed the warrant and told to pick up the dog," Mooney said.

Douglas' problems began last month after neighbors claimed he killed a Manx cat, valued at $350.

Owner Yolanda Salazar claims Douglas couldn't have killed the cat because he was at home.

"He was tied up. He just lays down most of the time. There are lots of loose dogs in this neighborhood. Any one of them could have killed the cat," she said.

Ex-police chief sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors have convicted a former suburban police chief on charges of stealing $11,000 from a special fund set up to investigate illegal drug trafficking.

Leonard Hendrick, former police chief in the Houston suburb of Humble, was convicted Thursday. State District Judge Doug Shaver said Hendrick will be sentenced April 3.

Prosecutor Jim Lindeman alleged Hendrick stole the money by forging endorsements on two checks and pocketing cash on several occasions. The thefts occurred during a five-month period in 1984, Lindeman said.

Iraq says forces retake heights from Iranians

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq claimed Friday its forces recaptured strategic heights from Iranian invaders in the northeast and continued to push Iranian forces from the Faw peninsula in the south.

There was no immediate comment on the Iraqi battle claims from Iran, which reported no battle activity Friday. Independent verification of the claims was not available.

The Iranian forces suffered "massive losses in men and equipment" during a battle that started Thursday evening and lasted almost until dawn Friday, according to an Iraqi military communique broadcast on Baghdad radio.

The communique said the Iraqis routed out the Iranians from the Chwarta heights overlooking the northeastern city of Sulaymanyah. The area included two mountains, Kajal Bir and Gana Sur, it said.

"The situation has settled completely in favor of the Iraqi forces with the corpses of the enemy dead littering the mountains and the valleys," said the radio, which is monitored in Nicosia.

Iranian troops Feb. 24 launched its Dawn 8 offensive into the mountainous northeastern Kurdistan region, capturing a series of heights. Iran has claimed that its forces captured 132 square miles inside Iraq's border, and was within 10 miles of Sulaymanyah, one of two major cities in northern Iraq.

Dawn 9 was launched about two weeks after a Dawn 8 offensive began in the southernmost part of the 730-mile border. In that offensive, Iranian forces crossed the Shatt al-Arab waterway and captured the Iraqi oil port of Faw on the northwestern tip of the Persian Gulf.

Iraqi forces have been trying hard to dislodge the Iranians from the Faw peninsula on the Iraqi side of the waterway, and Iraq has claimed its forces have recaptured most of the 320-square-mile area the Iranians had held on the peninsula.

Ex-political prisoners celebrate freedom

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — They ate, drank and danced Friday evening in the fresh smell of a garlanded garden — a priest, soldier, government official and others Ferdinand E. Marcos had jailed for opposing him.

More than a dozen newly released political prisoners came to Armando Malay's party to laugh and cry with friends and relatives.

Guests included Joaquin Roces, a former publisher who had led demonstrations against the former president, students, professors and activists who themselves had been released from prison months or years earlier.

Entertainers sang and danced under a mango tree. Two tables were laden with food and beer provided by Malay, a former journalism school dean who heads a group of prisoners' relatives called Kapatid, which means "Brother" in Tagalog, the Philippine language.

Malay's son recently escaped from military custody and joined his wife. They still are in hiding.

Celebrants broke into cheers, throwing red and yellow confetti, when former Lt. Victor Corpuz was given a small cake. "Happy Freedom" was written in red on the white icing, and Corpuz did not cut it in order to preserve the message.

The former lieutenant, a graduate of the Philippine Military Academy, told reporters later of an emotional reunion he had two days before with former classmates who belong to the reformist military group that rebelled against Marcos in his final days.

Freed prisoner Alexander Birondo chatted with relatives and friends in a corner of the garden, pausing frequently to kiss the 6-year-old son he held in his arms.

The Rev. Edicio de la Torre, a Roman Catholic priest, was among those most sought after.

"I'm still in a daze. There are so many people to greet," he told a reporter.

Groundbreaking held for Mexico school sponsored by Texas

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The groundbreaking was held Friday for an elementary school sponsored by Texas to replace one destroyed by the September earthquake here.

"Mexicans and Texans live on opposite sides of the Rio Grande. But Texans want to stand together with the people of Mexico as neighbors and friends," Bob Krueger, co-chairman of the Texas Response non-profit group, said at the ceremony.

"All the world knows also that the people of Mexico stand taller and prouder than before because of the courageous manner in which they met their natural disaster. Yet, even as the buildings broke open in Mexico, the hearts of the people of Texas opened in response," he said.

Krueger, a former congressman, was ambasador-at-large for Mexico during the Carter administration.

Texas Gov. Mark White appointed him and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros co-chairmen of the nonprofit earthquake relief effort that Krueger said has raised about $500,000 so far from 35,000 Texan donors. He estimated that other Texas groups have donated about $10 million for Mexican earthquake relief.

Krueger said that Texas Response hopes that attention drawn to the groundbreaking ceremony for the school will be instrumental in speeding up the campaign to reach a goal of $4.5 million to be used to build a hospital.

Krueger said the school will cost about $350,000, and any funds left over from those collected so far then would be used for the hospital.

The Jose Lopez Portillo y Weber elementary school in the Coyoacan district of southern Mexico City collapsed when the earthquake measuring 8.1 on the Richter scale struck on Sept. 19.

Teachers interviewed Friday said only one teacher and the custodial crew were present at the time of the quake, 7:19 a.m., and no one was injured.

They said students attended classes for half-shifts at a nearby school after the quake and about three weeks ago moved into prefabricated temporary classrooms at their own school site.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Soviet U.N. misisons ordered to cut staffs

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, in a surprise move, ordered the Soviet U.N. missions on Friday to drastically cut their staffs over the next two years, saying they were unreasonably large and posed "a threat to U.S. national security."

The cuts, which are to begin on Oct. 1, are to take place in four stages and reduce the number of Soviet diplomatic personnel at the United Nations from 275 to 170 by April 1, 1988.

"The current size of the Soviet U.N. mission is not warranted by the staffing needs for official U.N. business," the U.S. mission said in a note to correspondents. "Moreover, it poses a threat to U.S. national security."

The note said the United States government had long been concerned that Soviet mission personnel had "engaged in inappropriate activities."

"The Soviet U.N. missions unfortunately, have continued to engage in activities unrelated to U.N. business including espionage," the note added.

American hurt in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — A rock-throwing mob grazed the head of an American tourist in Jerusalem's Old City on Friday, a hospital spokesman said.

The tourist, identified as David Blumenfeld, 50, of Great Neck, N.Y., was treated at Hadassah Hospital for a scratch from a bullet fragment in the emergency room, spokesman Rabbi Koby Cohen told The Associated Press by telephone. He said Blumenfeld would be released shortly.

The clerk said he did not know Blumenfeld's hometown.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy said pistol shots were fired on David Street at about 7:30 p.m. He said a man with a slight wound in the head was rushed to Hadassah Hospital.

The gunfire broke out in the predominantly Palestinian sector of Jerusalem captured and annexed by Israel in 1967. The area of the attack is near Christian, Moslem and Jewish holy sites and is a frequent site of Arab-Israeli violence.

Pilot surrenders license

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The New Zealand pilot blamed by a government inquiry for the sinking of a Soviet cruise liner last month has surrendered his pilot's license, the transport minister said Friday.

The minister, Richard Prebble, said there would be no further inquiry into Capt. Don Jamison's conduct in the Feb. 16 sinking of the 20,000-ton Mikhail Lermontov.

The ship was on a 14-day cruise of the Pacific islands when it sank at the northern tip of New Zealand's South Island. One Soviet sailor drowned, but 739 passengers and crew were evacuated safely.

It said the ship's master, Capt. Vladislav Vorobyev, was not on the bridge at the time. The Soviet skipper's whereabouts were not disclosed.

The ship sank in 100 feet of water in the Marlborough Sounds. Soviet maritime experts are in New Zealand studying whether it can be salvaged.

Six Czechs defect to west

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Six Czechs defected to the West this week while touring Munich, and eight others from the same group are missing, Bavarian state border police said Friday.

The group arrived Tuesday in Passau, West Germany, on a Soviet tour ship carrying 189 Czechs, a border police spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Passau is on the Danube River.

The Czechs traveled to Munich by bus Wednesday to tour the city. Fourteen of them did not return to Passau, police said.

Six Czechs reported to Bavarian police and asked for political asylum. Normally, such requests are granted after examination by authorities.

The other eight are missing, said the police spokesman, adding: "We'll find out in the next few days whether they want asylum or whether too much strong beer has delayed their return home."

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This is the year to get organized. Many will find managerial and other educational courses are the key to increase productivity and income. A competitive and self-confident attitude assists you in your dedicated climb to the top. Romance intensifies in midsummer, and those who are eligible may find themselves on the way to the altar by the year's end. Travel arrangements bring a flourish of new business and job opportunities.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Mike Hammer, creator of Mickey Spillane; Italian navigator for whom America was named, Amerigo Vespucci; singer extraordinaire Keely Smith, actor Raul Julia.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An early-morning sermon brings renewed hope and a real spiritual uplift. An elderly member of the family is more congenial than in the recent past. Self-discipline helps you set important, new priorities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make this a family day; do something unusual but inexpensive. Include a lonely neighbor or relative in your plans. A mate or partner confides joyful news with you before sharing it with the world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance takes top priority throughout the day. Trust your intuition about people and situations. A small family gathering may prove a bit tiresome. Keep family secrets to yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Consult a loved one whose advice is invaluable when making an important decision. Today is a day for looking at real estate but not for buying. Older relative offers an interesting proposal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If attending large family gatherings refrain from discussing business matters, yours or theirs! Diplomacy is the key. Old-fashioned parlor games hold special appeal if weather is inclement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An article in the Sunday paper could trigger a creative idea which could be financially rewarding. Commit your thoughts to paper when they are fresh in your mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A change in your routine makes for a more interesting day. For those who know what they want, romance proves challenging. A change of attitude could affect your marriage plans. Consider setting the date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Watch what you say and do today; your imagination could be working overtime. Guard against impulsive accusations, especially if money is involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not lose your temper even if someone is rude to you. A calm response will be your strongest weapon. Enjoy platonic relationships as romance may be a bit turbulent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone you know is going through a difficult period; be understanding and supportive. He/she will repay the kindness in the near future. Physical exercise is a source of fun and renewed energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A domineering person attempts to dictate your every move. Stand your ground. Enjoy entertaining at home, but keep expenses to a minimum. Share the household chores.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spontaneous activities are far more exciting than most carefully planned events. Window shopping is fun and free, especially if you leave your credit cards at home.

Parker abandons running for senate

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Fess Parker says he's abandoning a real-life try at what he did on television — go to Washington as a U.S. senator.

Parker, 60, had said last August that he was exploring the idea of seeking the GOP nomination for the U.S. Senate seat held by California Democrat Alan Cranston.

"After lengthy deliberation, and due to personal affairs requiring my attention, I have decided not to seek the Republican nomination to the United States Senate," Parker said Friday in a statement.

He'd been to Congress before as television's Davy Crockett, who once served in the House of Representatives, and as the lead in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a short-lived TV series about a senator.

Parker has been in court frequently in recent months in a dispute over a Santa Barbara beachfront hotel-convention center now under construction.

In the 1970s, Parker had considered challenging then-Sen. John Tunney.

But his attitude this time may have best been summed up when he first disclosed he was pondering a race.

"I'd be sort of relieved if I were dissuaded or if I dissuaded myself" from running, he said.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Haing S. Ngor, the Cambodian physician who won an Oscar for his portrayal of a journalist in the movie "The Killing Fields," says the film barely touched on the bloodshed that occurred when the Khmer Rouge took over Cambodia.

Haing S. Ngor

"The movie is not bloody enough. It is not stark enough," said Ngor, who received his medical degree in Phnom Penh the year before the Cambodian takeover in 1975.

In "The Killing Fields," Ngor, 36, played Dith Pran, a Cambodian journalist who worked with New York Times reporter Sydney Schanberg. Ngor won an Academy Award for best supporting actor in the 1984 film.

During his speech Thursday at during a conference on refugee health, Ngor encouraged doctors, nurses and social workers to visit refugee camps in Thailand to help curb the spread of disease.

Ngor spent four years in Cambodian work camps before escaping in 1979. He came to Los Angeles in 1980. His acting career was launched when a casting director met him at a wedding and offered him the role of Dith Pran.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Judy White says she isn't about to give up her concert tickets for Prince Charles and Princess Diana even though she has nothing against the royal couple.

Mrs. White and her husband, Gordon, are among several concert-goers being asked by the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra to give up their seats in the Orpheum Theater. The Whites bought the best seats in the house for a May 5 concert featuring New Zealand soprano Kiri Te Kanawa. The royal couple will be in the city to open Expo 86.

"Why didn't they book in advance if they wanted to see the concert so much?" Mrs. White said Thursday.

Ms. Te Kanawa sang at the royal couple's wedding 3½ years ago. Mrs. White, who is from New Zealand herself, said a caller from the symphony told her "Charles and Di had expressed a wish to go to the concert. ... They require two front rows in the first balcony."

But Mrs. White decided not to give in, even though the symphony offered a refund or other, less well-placed seats. She said she has been looking forward to the concert for "months and months."

Marjorie Hamilton, executive assistant to the symphony's managing director, confirmed the symphony was "attempting to facilitate" on behalf of the royal couple.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Character actor Adolph Caesar, who died of an apparent heart attack on the set where he was working in his latest film, had believed his career was only beginning after last year's Oscar nomination for "A Soldier's Story," director Steven Spielberg said.

Caesar, 52, who co-starred in Spielberg's "The Color Purple," suffered an apparent heart attack Thursday on the second day of shooting "Tough Guys," a Walt Disney film starring Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas, according to Caesar's New York agent, Marvin Starkman.

"After 'A Soldier's Story,' his career took on a new life and Adolph often told me that this was just the beginning," said Spielberg. "He was a gentle soul with a crusty surface and I am very saddened by this loss."

After an autopsy, the actor's body will be flown home to Harlem for a Monday evening wake.

A private funeral will be held Tuesday, and a full memorial service will be held March 17 at a site to be announced, said Debbie McGee, a spokeswoman for the Negro Ensemble Company.

"We are trying to find a large theater to hold the memorial service," Ms. McGee said. "Hattie Winston will be singing at the funeral service. Douglas Turner Ward, one of the cofounders of the Negro Ensemble Company, will speak."

She said Caesar had appeared in many of the company's productions over the years, starting in 1970, including "A Soldier's Play," which eventually became the Oscar-winning film, "A Soldier's Story," about bigotry on a Southern military post during World War II.

Disney spokesman Gary Kaikin said Friday that Caesar actually hadn't yet appeared on camera in his supporting role in "Tough Guys," so no scenes will need to be reshot.

"We both admired Adolph as an actor, and in the short time we worked together, we both liked him as a man — filled with humor as well as talent," Douglas and Lancaster said in a joint statement.

In "The Color Purple," nominated for 11 Academy Awards, Caesar played the father-in-law of Celie, the main character in the tale of family life in the South in the first half of the century.

Caesar won both the Obie and the New York Drama Desk Award for the Sgt. Waters role in "A Soldier's Play," which won its author, Charles Fuller, a Pulitzer Prize.

Caesar is survived by his wife, Diane, two daughters, a son and a brother, Herbie.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Jerry Austin, in his seventh Iditarod Sled Dog Race, led 70 other mushers in a 60-mile dash to Cripple as the 14th annual race neared its halfway mark Friday.

Austin, who arrived in Ophir about a half-hour ahead of Terry Adkins of Sand Coulee, Mont., on Thursday, left 59 minutes ahead of Adkins. The first one to Cripple wins a trophy and $2,500 in silver.

The 1,100-mile race from Anchorage to Nome has a purse of $200,000 for the first 20 finishers.

Meanwhile, 15th-place Vern Halter of Trapper Creek was fined $500 for beating a dog, said Burt Bomhoff, president of the Iditarod Trail Committee.

The dog was not injured, but another animal-care infraction will disqualify Halter from the race, Bomhoff said.

Halter was filmed hitting and kicking one of his lead dogs, apparently frustrated by its refusal to obey orders. The dog was later seen back in harness at the lead of the team.

"When I looked at the film, I thought the fine was probably appropriate," said Halter. "It looked awful, didn't it? I didn't think I was hitting him that hard."

Expert: Finding fossils only part of the fun

McKenna says business of science to keep testing theories

By MALCOLM RITTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Malcolm McKenna has an aluminum ladder stashed on a Montana mountaintop, an expedition planned for Patagonia and access to some 300,000 fossils in storage, all to pursue what he calls the business of science:

Trying to show that current beliefs might be wrong.

"The business of scientists is to look for things, not to corroborate previous beliefs, but to keep testing them," the fossil expert says. "We keep gnawing away at textbooks and keep destroying what people fondly believe in.

"We're trying to improve on the model of reality."

McKenna, 55, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, has even found fault with his own theories in the 40 years since he dug up his first fossil. But that's the business: a succession of theory, contrary evidence, new theory and evidence contrary to that.

This might seem as frustrating as trying to stand on a slippery rock. Not so for McKenna. "Certainty is dull and boring," he says. "And it's not really achievable, either."

A specialist in ancient mammals, McKenna has looked for fossils in places so far north that a compass points south, and as far south as Chile and Patagonia in southern South America, where he plans to seek whale bones in the Andes this month. He keeps the ladder atop a 10,000-foot mountain in southwest Montana to reach a productive cliff he found while looking for fossils to help determine the age of some rocks.

McKenna singles out some fossils for study and adds others to the museum's vast collection, which he estimates is big enough to leave one specimen every 100 feet from New York to San Francisco.

BUT GETTING fossils is only part of the job. "We are not stamp collectors," McKenna says. "What's fun is what you can do with these things.

"Basically what we are trying to find out is, what has been the natural history of the world...I'm interested in using practically every tool I can to get at that history."

Those tools can come from geology, chemistry, physics, astronomy and other areas as well as McKenna's own paleontology, which is the study of prehistoric plants and animals. The idea is "to bring completely different disciplines to bear on a problem," he says. "The cutting edge is interdisciplinary, in my view."

If different disciplines give the same answer to a problem, he says, "you tend to pick up a little confidence in your results."

When geological theory suggested that about 60 million years ago, lava spewing from Iceland began to form a land bridge between Greenland and Scotland, it was possible to find confirmation through biology. Fossil remains of crocodiles, turtles, giant salamanders, snakes and other beasts found on Ellesmere Island in far northern Canada show that animals from Europe and North America traveled the land bridge for a few million years.

"The geology and the biology start telling you the same thing," McKenna says. Pitting one discipline against another "is a way of applying a test, which is what makes it science."

Interaction between disciplines produced one of paleontology's best-known theories: that a huge meteorite struck the Earth 65 million years ago, kicking up enough dust to block sunlight and lead to the extinction of the dinosaurs. The theory is based on a widespread layer of iridium — a substance more common in meteorites than on Earth — that was laid down about the time that fossil evidence says dinosaurs died out.

McKENNA, HOWEVER, is skeptical. For one thing, few examples of iridium have been found in association with bones of the last dinosaurs, he says. For another, dinosaur species became extinct over time rather than simultaneously, he says. And one paleontologist claims to have found evidence in Montana that some dinosaurs were alive after the extinction date.

Changes in sea level and gradual deterioration of the climate are more plausible explanations for the end of the dinosaurs, McKenna says.

His own current research areas are less likely to capture headlines. One is a study of how mammals, living and extinct, are related to each other, to shed light on the evolution that produced them.

To uncover the degree of relatedness, McKenna analyzes other scientists' studies of minute variations between species in the chemical makeup of substances the animals all share. The idea is that the substance had one makeup in some ancestor, then began to change slightly as different species evolved from that common ancestor.

It's a little like the way a family legend changes over time. If two branches of the family each pass along the story of what happened to great-great-great-grandpa Ed, each version is likely to get more and more unlike the other as it passes from generation to generation. What began as a single story, from the lips of Ed himself, turns into two progressively dissimilar versions.

McKenna is essentially studying that process in substances like myoglobin, which stores oxygen in muscles. By interpreting similarities in the kinds of myoglobin used by three animals, for example, he tries to figure out which two animals have a more recent common ancestor than they both share with the third. From such studies, family trees can be constructed.

It's not easy. One of McKenna's current analyses, for example, deals with about 60 animals, including fish, alligators, chickens, penguins, the duckbill platypus, dogs, horses, sheep, rabbits, two kinds of elephants, and man. He is checking the results of the analysis against the fossil record to see if they say the same things about the family tree.

FOSSILS GIVE their own insights, sometimes unexpected, into how ancient animals were related. When McKenna examined a jaw unearthed recently in Washington state by a Smithsonian Institution colleague, he agreed the unknown animal was related to elephants. But the jaw had been found in marine sediments, suggesting it came from an oceangoing beast.

"Suddenly it dawned on us," McKenna recalls. The jaw was from an early order of mammals called desmostylians, which were considered close relatives of the manatees and dugongs that sailors thought were mermaids. Further research by McKenna, Daryl Domning of Howard University and Clayton Ray of the Smithsonian showed that the beasts were actually more closely related to elephants than to dugongs and manatees.

The tipoff was the teeth, which looked clearly elephant-like 35 million years ago when the fossil jaw was formed, but lost that character about 10 to 15 million years ago, the period of previous desmostylian fossil finds.

McKenna didn't find the key fossil, but "I had part of the joy of figuring out what it is," he says. He calls that one of the "levels of discovery" for fossil finds, beyond just finding the fossil and recognizing what beast it came from.

Standing in one of the huge rooms where the museum stores fossils, McKenna described "the fun of following your nose" to see what significance a fossil might have.

"There are specimens all around you here that we have no idea of what they mean," he says. They may be keys to solving a scientific problem, and "we might not even know that problem exists," he says.

Science appeals to McKenna because "it is so rich in different approaches and different subjects that can be brought to bear on central problems...There's an awful lot of enjoyment in bringing different approaches to bear on a given problem, to do detective work," he says. "Doing the detective work is just plain fun."

"GOOD SCIENCE is not dogmatic. It's open-minded stuff," he says. It is "a testing and therefore humble activity. In a sense we are willing to admit we are wrong."

McKenna, for example, did that after he published a paper in 1975 that addressed why five premolar teeth had been observed in mammals of 80 million years ago, while only four were seen in modern-day placental mammals. He wrote that some common ancestor apparently made the switch, which was inherited by later generations.

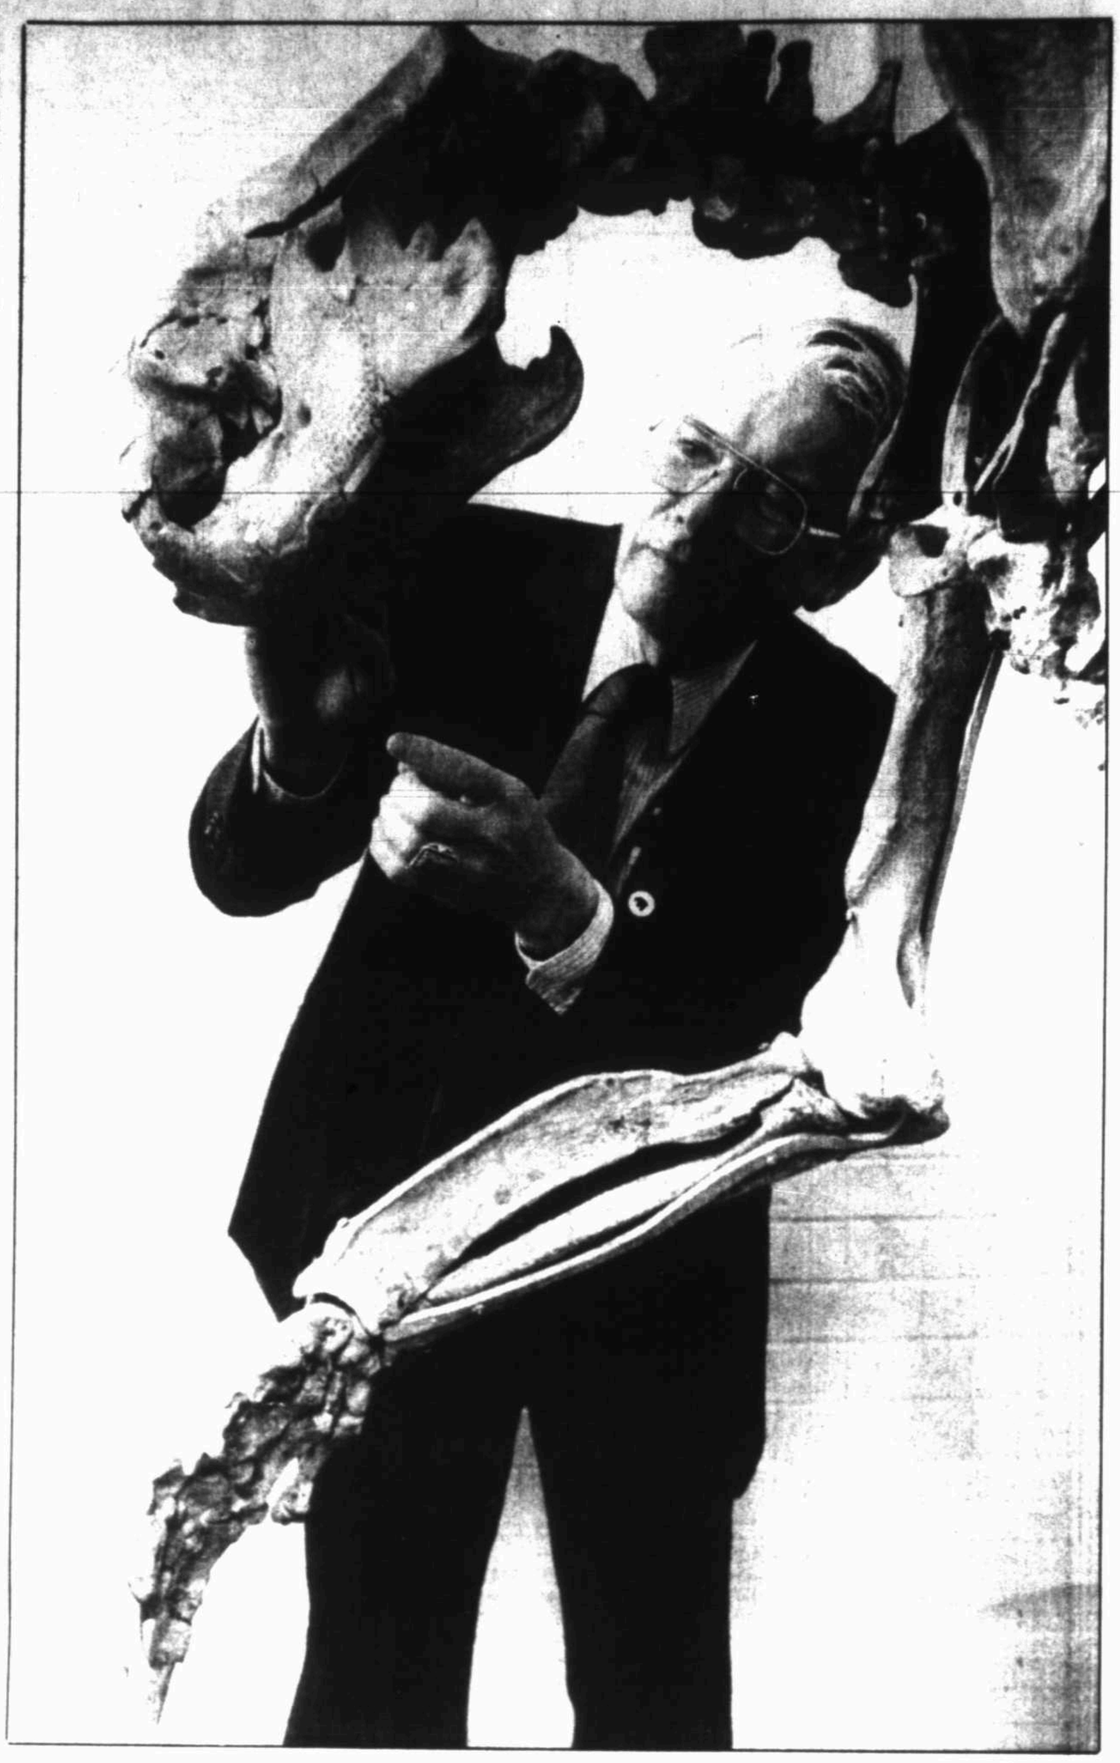

But fossils then showed that a fairly advanced group of mammals still had five premolars. McKenna now believes different groups of mammals lost the fifth tooth independently, rather than through a common ancestor.

Theory, contrary evidence, new theory, new contrary evidence.

"You never necessarily get to the end of this," McKenna says.

But "real progress is made when things do not work. That's when you realize what the problem is," he says.

"The fun is when you don't get the right answer. Then you've got something to study. If you get the right answer, you might as well go home."

Mystery surrounds black-footed ferrets

By EARL GUSTKEY
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MEETEETSE, Wyo. — At about 3 a.m. Sept. 26, 1981, cattle rancher John Hogg and his wife, Lucille, were awakened by furious barking by their dog just outside the bedroom window.

"I figured Shep got in a tangle with a porcupine, so I went back to sleep," Hogg recalled recently.

Later that morning, Hogg investigated. He found the carcass of a strange little animal. He had never seen one like it before, although he had lived all his life in this part of northwestern Wyoming. Resembling a mink, it had a black mask, black feet and a black-tipped tail. It also had a broken back.

Hogg thought it was a mink. He showed it to his wife, then threw it over the front-yard fence, into a field. Later that morning, Mrs. Hogg asked her husband to retrieve the animal, explaining she wanted to take it to a Meeteetse taxidermist for mounting.

When the taxidermist examined the carcass, however, he looked up and said: "I can't touch this. This is an endangered species. It's a black-footed ferret."

The black-footed ferret is one of 23 mammals on the federal list of endangered species. Even though it was on the list before 1981, however, more than a few biologists had given up on the continued existence of the little animal, which is every bit as mysterious as its black mask suggests.

They believed that the ferret, once found in at least 12 plains and western states, was extinct.

SAID DAVE BELITSKY, the biologist in charge of the black-footed ferret advisory team: "We figure it's a tossup right now as to which is the rarest North American mammal — these ferrets or the Florida panther."

Until 1981, no one had seen a black-footed ferret anywhere in North America after 1978. But since Shep encountered Ferret I that morning in 1981, biologists have counted at least 130 of them in a 53-square mile area near this ranch community 20 miles south of Cody, Wyo. About 70 percent of the ferrets have been found on the 120,000-acre Pitchfork Ranch, but others have been found on property owned by four other area landowners.

With the frequent comings and goings of federal and state biologists, occasional media visitors and wildlife film-makers, at least a mild dose of ferretmania has afflicted Meeteetse.

For instance, the same Lucille Hogg who once wanted a mounted ferret now jokingly lists Ferret Nuggets on the menu at her cafe. The entree really is a chicken dish. She also sponsors a women's softball team called the Ferrettes.

The gas station sells black-footed ferret T-shirts, and someone is said to be working on black-footed ferret postcards. Eventually, biologists figure, a sign will go up at the city limits proclaiming Meeteetse the black-footed ferret capital of the world.

Black-footed ferrets are 21 to 23 inches long and weigh two to three pounds. They are short-legged but have long canine teeth and powerful jaws. It is believed that they kill prairie dogs, which often outweigh them, by biting deep into a prairie dog's throat and holding on until the prairie dog bleeds to death. Ferrets are almost always found living in prairie dog burrows.

Biologists today believe that black-footed ferrets were never common, even in areas abundant in prairie dogs. Little is said of them in Western literature.

The little animals were important enough, however, to have a role in the culture of plains Indians. The Sioux, Blackfeet and Cheyenne used ferret skins in chiefs' headdresses. Sioux medicine men had ferret skins in their medicinal paraphernalia.

"THE FACT THAT ferrets were important in plains Indian ceremonies is interesting," Belitsky said. "Does it mean they were rare or common? We don't know."

By the mid-20th century, when prairie dog populations had plummeted, so too had the colonies of the long, little animal with the black mask. In the late 1960s, the only known ferret population left in America existed on a South Dakota cattle ranch.

In 1972, after it had been studied for several years, that colony simply disappeared.

Today, even after three years of intensive study of the animals around Meeteetse by about two dozen biologists, not a whole lot more is known about them than was known before.

Biologists also have learned that the Meeteetse population is more viable than the one studied in South Dakota. "The South Dakota team counted 11 litters in seven years," Belitsky said. "We've counted 20 in one year.

"We have learned that they bear their young in May and that females need a quiet, secure, dry place to raise their young. We also know they're subject to long patterns of inactivity. In 1982, a ferret we'd collared with a small radio ran down a burrow and stayed down for nine straight days. It was wintertime, very cold, and we figured he'd killed a prairie dog and simply stayed down where it was warm and dry.

"One of the reasons why we know golden eagles prey on ferrets is that one killed one of the ferrets we'd collared. When we tracked the signal, all that was left was part of the carcass and the collar.

"An engineer at the university (of Wyoming) is working on a little TV camera for us that can be inserted in their burrows. That will help, if it can be perfected."

FERRETS' ABOVE-GROUND activities have been routinely examined at night by biologists riding the range in vehicles equipped with spotlights. Surprisingly, ferrets don't seem the least bit disturbed by having spotlights shined on them. Belitsky has a videotape containing footage of nighttime ferret behavior, including juveniles frolicking in mock combat.

For all of the mystery surrounding the little animals, they do leave one strong clue to their presence. When they modify a prairie dog burrow, they remove dirt from the burrow in a characteristic trenching pattern, leaving an elongated pile of dirt up to four feet long and perhaps 18 inches wide.

Said Brian Miller, another biologist on the study team: "Prairie dogs will spread the ferrets' dirt around evenly, as if they're trying to give the appearance the ferrets were never around."

Still, the questions persist:

- Why were black-footed ferrets seldom caught by trappers in the last two centuries?
- Why have no more colonies been found?

Belitsky said: "Someone once researched trappers' records of Western states and counted only 12 ferrets caught in traps between 1920 and 1950. We know that a black-footed ferret skin was never considered a prime pelt and that many may have been caught and discarded. Or does it mean they have always been a very rare animal? Or does it mean they're too smart to be trapped? We just don't know, it's a mystery."

Is Meeteese the last stronghold of the black-footed ferrets?

"We don't know," Belitsky said. "But it does make a good case for a black-footed ferret breeding program, I think. If this is all that's left, then one huge winter could wipe them out. A captive breeding program would give us an option, like the biologists have who work with condors."

Most federal and state biologists agree on the need for some kind of facility where captured ferrets can be bred in captivity. The Wyoming Game and Fish Department has approved the spending of $250,000 toward the building of a facility near Laramie.

Wyoming biologist Brian Miller measures trenching activity at a prairie dog mound, a common habitat for ferrets. Biologists believe that ferrets take over the trenches by killing prairie dogs, which usually outweigh them. An endangered species recently believed to be extinct, ferrets have been sighted in Meeteetse, Wyo.

Volunteers of America embark on mission against invisibility

EDITOR'S NOTE: They're known mostly for thrift shops and bell-ringing Santas at Christmas time, but there's more to the Volunteers of America than that. While toiling in relative anonymity may have its virtues, the service organization wouldn't mind greater visibility.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The General looked at his army and put it out of the military business. He got rid of the uniforms, turned posts into branches and made lieutenant majors executive directors.

Part of the reason is that hardly anyone knew much about his army — the Volunteers of America. The VOA, in fact, ruefully calls itself "the invisible agency," an impression it would like to change.

The VOA recently commissioned a survey in 30 cities to find out just what people thought when they heard Volunteers of America.

"The people doing the survey told us to save our money after only four cities," says O. P. "Boots" Hoffman Jr., director of development. "The answers were all coming out the same: Santa Claus and thrift shops."

That is only a small part of what VOA is about. The thrift shops make up about 5 percent of VOA's activity and the bell-ringing Santas appear only in New York City.

They get a lot of attention, though, since the Santas ring their bells right under the noses of major television networks in midtown Manhattan and are a natural for a Christmas special.

The VOA began its services with the prison population. Maud Booth, who along with her husband Ballington Booth founded the VOA, was the first woman ever allowed into Sing Sing, where she worked with inmates.

In the past year, the VOA entered the jail business, taking over one of the few privately run facilities in the country. It's a 42-bed institution in Roseville, Minn., just outside of St. Paul. While this is the first jail the VOA is running, it operates about 16 centers throughout the country dealing with the prison population. Most of these are halfway houses.

Five years ago, the VOA was reorganized when Raymond C. Tremont took over as president and chief executive officer. He did away with the military trappings and strove to bring more accountability into the organization.

TREMONT, WHO IS still affectionately called "General," essentially gave up a benign dictatorship to become a leader, whose tenure, while not as precarious as that of a Notre Dame football coach or a Yankees manager, could be challenged.

"There were people who looked at me as though I were missing a few licks, but they eventually agreed with me. Maybe it was because I was their superior officer. But it's the best thing I ever did," says Tremont.

But before he handed over his crown, he moved the company store from its historic headquarters in New York City to New Orleans, his adopted hometown. The balding, silver-haired Tremont, 61, concedes he might not have been able to get away with that today.

The Volunteers of America began when Ballington Booth, a son of William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, severed ranks with his father's organization. Ballington and Maud Booth felt that the Salvation Army, whose roots were in England, was sending too much money from America back to Europe. They founded VOA in 1896 and since then the policy has been to stay American, not international.

"They were skimming off the top," jokes Hoffman, referring to the 19th-century Salvation Army. " Hoffman joined the VOA two years ago after a career with the YMCA and after working for the VOA as a consultant.

"When our founders left the Army there was quite a bit of friction," says Tremont. There is still a good-natured rivalry between the "Vollies" and the "Sallies," adds Richard Salyer, executive director of the VOA in New York.

The Salvation Army, far better known, is much larger than VOA and in many cases offers similar services to communities. The Army has maintained its military tradition and trappings.

Tremont says there wasn't much resistance when he abolished the uniforms.

"I WAS NEVER a great lover of the military trappings, but I thought there would be some clinging to the past," he says, "but there was very little." The VOA is in 165 cities and 37 states. Its 1984 revenues were $132 million, up from $91 million in 1982.

It's in small cities such as Llewellyn, Neb., where it runs a school clothing distribution center and a health and wellness clinic. In New York City it operates a variety of programs, including a residence for women, an 800-plus bed facility for homeless men, the largest such year-round facility in the country, an old-fashioned mission, a program for recovering alcoholics and more. Yet, there is no VOA presence in some large cities like Atlanta or Washington, D.C.

Georgia, one of the 13 states without VOA, has recently asked the organization to help set up a series of group homes for the developmentally disabled.

Visibility is very much part of Tremont's plans for VOA. "We started out saying that in five years we wanted one out of five people to know what VOA is. We got a little carried away with that one. I would be happy with one out of 100."

"I would like to think the mayors of cities where we run services know who we are, but that just isn't the case. We really are the invisible agency," says Tremont. "Part of that is because by the nature of our programs there are often not signs on the outside that say this is a Volunteers of America project. We just blend in with the neighborhood.

"Another part of it is our fault," he says. "We simply haven't been very good at blowing our own horn."

In fiscal 1984, the VOA helped over 750,000 million Americans and spent $149 on each person it served. Forty percent of VOA funding comes from government grants, federal, state and local. In service units, a figure in which many individuals are counted more than once, VOA says it met the needs of more than 10 million in 1984.

HOUSING IS A big part of VOA services, including housing for low- and middle-income families, the elderly, troubled delinquents, autistic children, unwed mothers, the emotionally or physically disabled in group homes and prisoners in halfway houses.

VOA also operates alcohol and drug rehabilitation centers, the thrift shops, meals on wheels programs, senior citizen clinics, the whole spectrum of social services.

Recently, VOA has embarked upon a literacy program, which has opened in five pilot cities: Houston; Boston; Harrisburg, Pa.; Oakland, Calif.; and Rochester, N.Y. The VOA is working with the Literacy Volunteers of America as well as the American Association of Retired Persons.

"No other organization can attack literacy the way we can," says Hoffman. "We don't need to look for facilities, we don't even have to look for clients."

The VOA is also looking for blue-ribbon donors, taking out twice-monthly ads in the Wall Street Journal. Instead of used parkas and sofas, they're looking for people who want to donate automobiles, yachts, apartment complexes and the like.

"Right now, we've been offered a 90-foot yacht in Florida, a 280-unit apartment complex in Houston and a 38-foot yacht in Lake Pontchartrain," says Hoffman.

All of these gifts must be worked out with the IRS, a strong motivating force in some giving.

It's called the enterprise program and when it started up in Rochester, N.Y., the VOA suddenly had 570 automobiles on its grateful hands.

VOA is a Christian, nondenominational church without distinct dogma. It calls itself a ministry of service and its leaders are ministers of the VOA. Many of the ministers are practicing members of other churches, such as Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hogie Jr. of Minneapolis. Both are ordained ministers in the VOA, and are also members of the Lutheran Church.

MRS. HOGIE POINTS out that the VOA was well ahead of its time when it came to women in the ministry.

"The Booths always said that the man and wife stand side by side," she says. "That was the policy before women even had the right to vote."

The VOA is not evangelical. You need not say a prayer to eat at the soup kitchens. "The Booths always said that you feed a man first and then take care of spiritual needs," says Hogie.

A major change Tremont made in VOA was to shift power from the ministry to a lay board composed of people from all walks of life, a move that VOA officils say increased accountability within the organization and greater responsiveness to community needs.

The VOA is also trying to get a more systematic idea of what it is doing.

"What we have had is a number of dedicated people out there reinventing the wheel everytime a new program was started," says Pam Olson, director of management systems.

The VOA says it doesn't know how many employees it has, nor how many volunteers. The word "volunteer" in its name refers to military volunteerism, not the ladies club notion of volunteer.

"There might be 8,000 volunteers in Denver and 10 in New York," says Hoffman. "We just don't know."

"I suppose it would be impressive to rattle off those kinds of statistics," says Ms. Olson, "but the figures we are trying to come up with now are more important. We want to be able to tell an executive director in a new VOA city how many people it will take to run a group home for eight troubled teen-age boys or how to go about setting up a meals on wheels program."

Salyer, who was a lieutenant major before the military titles were dropped, says the real strength of the VOA is the commitment of its people. "There is a real spiritual commitment that is a little deeper than just charity."

Wilma Simoneaux, the daughter of an old Arcadian family who grew up on a sugar plantation, runs a home for unwed mothers in New Orleans in a 100-year-old mansion that would fetch about $3 million on the open market. "I was a Benedictine nun for 30 years and then found out I had cancer," she says. "I knew that whatever time I had left I wanted to be of service. I didn't want any hassle, I just wanted to serve."

Tremont's father, now dead, spent his career in the Volunteers of America and now Tremont's son is the regional director of New Orleans.

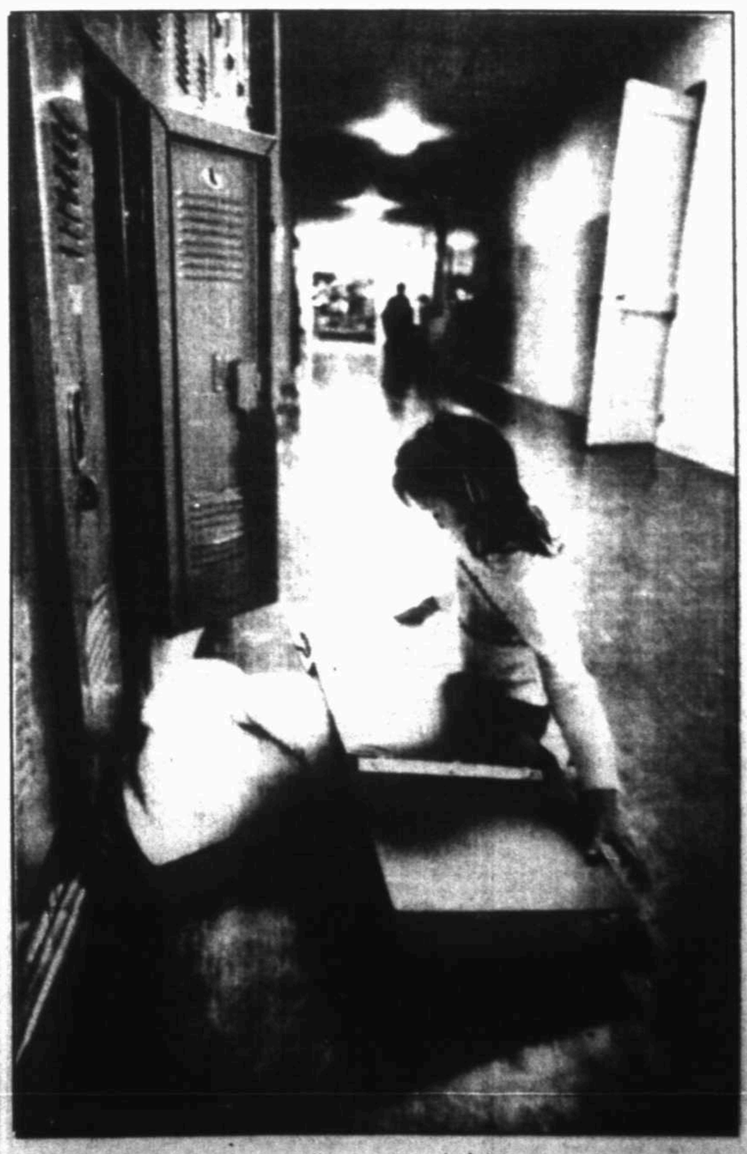

"The General asked me what I thought we should do about nepotism," says Hoffman. "I told him we should encourage it. It's the very strength of the organization."

Dwindling enrollment to close doors on Panhandle school

ESTELLINE, Texas (AP) — It was the first classroom Patti Nivens saw as a first grader and it may be the last she sees unless she finds another teaching job.

She will not be around for her 22nd year of teaching at Estelline School, which will close next year — a sign of the times, a victim of numbers.

"When it's over, it's over," she said nostalgically, "...And now is the time. The doors have been open too long. Two years too long, I'd say. This is the last year."

Estelline School, nestled on the plains of Hall County in the eastern Panhandle where a cattleman can see 20 miles from horizon to horizon in any direction, apparently will go the route of many of the state's smaller school districts, which will close the doors and walk away.

Already gone are the junior high and high schools, which were abandoned several years ago, with students shipped to Memphis or Childress.

One day recently, Mrs. Nivens' seven young students stood ramrod straight singing the National Anthem a bit off-key, but with gusto They will be the last class to call the room home.

The modestly furnished classroom where Mrs. Nivens has taught for 21 years sits on the same foundation that supported a new brick-and-mortar schoolhouse in 1909. The first students, numbering more than 200 at one time, walked or rode to the school in mule-drawn wagons.

BUT, GONE ARE the days of football lore, the excitement of basketball competition with neighboring schools, dances, commencement speeches and the proud walk down the aisle of the auditorium on graduation day.

Trying to keep a country school operating as the enrollment of the entire school district dropped to 25 has become a losing proposition.

"Until four years ago, as far as our elementary and junior high were concerned, I'd put the system up against any in the state academically," Mrs. Nivens said.

Dea Evans, a first-grade teacher at Estelline School, aids her class, which will not return to the school next year, as the school will be closing due to the lack of funds.

"...But when parents started to move their kids to Memphis or Childress for school, well..."

Estelline's student body today includes only kindergarten through the sixth grade.

Yet it is not the smallest school on the windswept plains. Fifty-five miles away, the Dougherty Independent School District in Floyd County has only 14 students, through the fourth grade.

State records show that there are 444 independent school districts in Texas with 500 or less students.

A proposition to consolidate Estelline ISD with Childress failed at the ballot box during the last election, and the machinery was scheduled to run toward a consolidation election Jan. 18 with Memphis ISD.

The eloquent, articulate schoolmarm who graduated from Estelline High in 1947, said, however, that she is a realist.

SHE IS AMONG five of a vanishing breed of country schoolteachers at Estelline who will be out of a job next year. There has been a school in Estelline since 1893, a year after the town was platted and named for Estelle D. Shields, daughter of an early settler. No problem at Estelline with student-teacher ratios. It is 5-to-1, or less most days, occasionally 7-to-1.

That turns out to be a blessing and a curse.

"I teach 16 subjects from 8 in the morning until school is out," she said, thumbing through state-mandated lesson plans. "The kids don't get a fair deal. If we were just teaching reading, writing and arithmetic, we could do it.

"I was against closing the school 10 years ago. In fact, I fought it and had it defeated. But no more. The time has come," she said. Her young charges, she said, will be better off in a larger system.

Mrs. Nivens, though, cannot keep from exuding pride in what was accomplished in the brighter days.

"When I was in college, I thought about doing a paper on small schools, comparing accomplishments of Estelline grads with other schools. I never did, but I wish I had," she said.

She reeled off the list a college president, a space agency engineer, a swarm of teachers and Cherri Rapp, who made the U.S. women's basketball Olympic team in 1980, but never got to compete when the U.S. pulled out of the Games in a rift with the Soviet Union.

THE EMPTY HALLWAYS at Estelline, punctuated only occasionally by the laughter of the few remaining children, echo the past. Graduation pictures adorn the walls and the sports trophy case is full.

"I don't know what we'll do with the class pictures," said superintendent Gene Conway, stopping by one photograph dated 1909. "And the sports trophies? Don't know where they'll go, either."

Across the way, the building that once housed the junior high stands empty.

The sports fieldhouse with its basketball court is locked, unused. Conway said that the basketball scoreboard time clock was sold to Memphis last year. He said he knows of no plans for the buildings to be used for some other purpose when the school closes.

Lease this 1986 Audi 5000S for $279.98* a month.

Most astute people would rather put their money in stocks, bonds or municipal funds than in a car. We can appreciate that. That's why we're offering an exceptional alternative to buying. Consider this 1986 Audi 5000S. Consider, too, the impressive list of standard features: cruise control, power windows and door locks, and electronic climate control system, plus the base price includes a AM-FM stereo cassette and automatic transmission. Come in for lease details, and a test drive. You can lease this 1986 Audi 5000S for $279.98* a month. And feel comfortable about being comfortable.

*This offer is available only from a participating Audi Leasing dealer as a 60-month closed-end lease through March 31, 1986. No purchase option. No down payment is required; 1st month $279.98 payment and $350.00 security deposit are required in advance. Monthly payments are based on manufacturers suggested retail price plus special lease terms extended by VCI Leasing. Total lease payments $16,798.80 plus 10¢ per mile over 72,000. LET'S TALK REAL ESTATE

Is this really a good time to Buy?

This week the VA lowered its home loan interest rates to 9.5%, the lowest level since 1979. This action lagged only slightly behind a National trend on the part of other mortgage lenders to single digit fixed rates, the first in nearly 8 years! Our own local firms are following suit, with rates on 30 year mortgages in the 9 ¾ %-10 ½ % range readily available at minimal or no points.

Is it safe to wait and hope the market gets even better?

The result of this for the home owner is a P and I payment of only $702.05 on an $80,000 30 year fixed rate mortgage at 10%, $182.90 less than the $884.95 payments necessary to fund the 13% mortgages of only 12 months ago. Again, let me emphasize that these highly desirable rates, coupled with the leveled prices found on our over supplied local residential market, makes this the best time since the late 70's to buy new or to buy up! Please call if we can help.

So What is the message?

Let me also remind you that our services are not only for prospective buyers or sellers. If you want to stay put, but purchased your home 5 or 6 years ago and financed at rates higher than today, let us assist you in financing. We will gladly share our daily update on all lenders rates and our knowledge of the wide range of mortgage options available on today's market; no charge or obligation of course!
