RASPBERRY VINEGAR IS SUPERIOR FOR MANY SALADS AND BEVERAGES

In Salads and Other Table Delicacies the Raspberry Flavor Will Be Found Very Agreeable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An excellent vinegar may be made from raspberries which will retain indefinitely the odor and flavor if properly preserved. Experiments carried out in the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, have shown that this delicious vinegar can be made in the home when the garden affords a liberal supply of this fruit.

Vinegar made from raspberries is dark in color. Samples made in the bureau of chemistry and properly bottled were found after three years to have retained not only the original degree of acidity but the color and flavor. In salads and other table delicacies the raspberry flavor is very agreeable. A refreshing hot-weather drink can be prepared by adding a small amount of this vinegar to water, and being and sweetening to taste.

How to Make Vinegar.
Two fermentations, the alcoholic and the acetic, are necessary in making vinegar. The method is as follows: Use ordinary straight-sided open-topped stone jars as receptacles. With the aid of a potato masher, mash up eight quarts of good, ripe raspberries of either the red or black variety. Stir thoroughly into this mash one-half cake of compressed yeast which has first been macerated in a small amount of the juice. Let jar stand in a warm place (about 75 degrees F.) and keep covered either with lid or with cheesecloth to protect from insects. Stir well every day. About one week is required to complete the alcoholic fermentation. The time needed to utilize the sugar in the berries completely may be determined by one of two methods: (1) Weigh the jar carefully each day and record the weight; when loss of weight ceases, the fermentation is complete; (2) test some of the juice with a Brix or Balling hydrometer. The reading of a juice suitable for making a satisfactory vinegar should not be less than 10. As the fermentation proceeds, this will decrease daily until it is not more than 1 or 2, which indicates that the sugar has practically all been utilized.

Action of Yeast.

The action of the yeast on the cells makes it easy to separate the juice from the berries, squeezing it by hand through cheesecloth. The juice is then returned to the jar; and, to insure a proper acetic fermentation, a small amount of vinegar should be added as a starter. An unpasteurized vinegar is best for this purpose, but if this is not at hand, use any good vinegar in the proportion of 1 part to 4 of the fermented juice. Cover as before and allow to stand without agitation in a warm place. A scum or film will soon form. This should not be disturbed.

The acetic fermentation sometimes takes place very rapidly where berries are used. The acidity should be determined daily by withdrawing a small amount of the vinegar by means of suction through a pipette or glass tube and submitting it to a test by the use of a vinegar tester, or in the absence of this, determining by the taste when it is sufficiently acid. As soon as the vinegar reaches a proper degree of acidity (it should contain 4 per cent acetic acid), the fermenting process should be stopped. This is done by first filtering through paper or filtering-cloth, and bottling. Bottles should be well filled and sealed tightly with paraffined corks.

THINK THIS OVER

This happened at the Chicago Live Stock show. A doctor stood admiring a large, fat hog when a small boy standing by piped up, "That's my father's hog. He got the first prize."
"Wonderful," said the doctor. "Certainly a very fine hog. Then he looked at the boy. "How old are you, son?" he asked.
"I'm twelve past," said the boy.
"Why," said the doctor, you are small for a nine-year-old. What do you eat and drink?"
"Just what the rest of the folks do—bread, meat, pie, potatoes, cake and tea."
"But," queried the doctor, "don't you drink milk?"
"Naw," said the boy in a tone of disgust, "we feed milk to the hogs."

PROPER TIME TO BEAT MOTH

Brush and Clean Heavy Garments and Pack Away for Summer—Label All Packages.

Now is the time, to brush and clean and sun heavy outside garments and put them in mothproof wrappings. Wash, mend and wrap mittens, mufflers, stockings, etc. Mark all packages before putting them away; it will save time and energy later on. Clean and rearrange bureau drawers and closets. Heavy bedding which is being laid aside and is not washable may be aired, brushed, sunned and packed away for the summer.

TASTY TURNIP SOUP RECIPE

Cut Two Pounds of Vegetable into Small Squares, Add Lard and Stir Over Hot Fire.

Take two pounds of peeled turnips, cut into small squares, place in a stewpan with four tablespoonfuls of lard, stir them over a quick fire, add a pinch of salt, one tablespoonful of flour, three pints of stock, simmer gently for one and one-half hours and pass the whole through a sieve. Put back in the stewpan and add a little seasoning. Bring to a boil and just before sending to the table add one cupful of good cream.

Sausage Retains Flavor.

Sausage rolled in flour and sprinkled with cold water will not break in frying and will retain the good flavor.

FARM LIVE STOCK

IMPORTANT WORM DISCOVERY

Zoologists Find That Carbon Tetrachloride Is Effective in Destroying Parasites.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The toll exacted from the live-stock industry by internal parasites such as worms is enormous, and because of this drain on the herds and flocks the zoologists of the United States Department of Agriculture keep up an unrelenting search for chemicals and treatments that may be used to combat these organisms. Recently they have discovered that a certain chemical once used in medicine as an anesthetic and now used variously as a fire extinguisher, cloth cleaner, insecticide, and solvent for fats and gums, is very effective as a destroyer and expeller of intestinal worms. The name of this chemical is carbon tetrachloride.

The effectiveness of this chemical against certain round worms has been announced by the department, but what may be the most beneficial use has just been brought out by tests on animals infested with hookworms. In the case of sheep the minimum effective dose has not yet been determined, but all the doses used, from 12 cubic centimeters to 43, in each case given in two ounces of castor oil, removed all stomach worms and all hookworms. It has been equally effective for hookworm in dogs and faxes, and has been used with success against some of the various kinds of worms that infest the digestive tract of pigs.

The fact that a species of hookworm also affects man makes this discovery of the efficacy of this chemical, against hookworms in various animals of interest to medical men as well as to veterinarians and live-stock growers. Medical men are now trying it out at several places as a possible cure for hookworm disease in man, and it gives promise of success. As a result of the work so far completed, scientists in the bureau of animal industry consider that this drug will prove of special value in the removal of the various kinds of blood-sucking worms in domestic animals.

FEED FOR FATTENING STEERS

Corn and Corn Silage With Cottonseed Meal and Alfalfa Favored at Iowa College.

That corn and corn silage, supplemented with cottonseed meal, alfalfa hay and salt make the best ration for fattening steers was shown to Iowa farmers recently. Steers fed this ration made substantial gains in experiments at Iowa State college and although they were ordinary steers they made $13 per head. This indicates that the feeding business, properly handled and where good-quality steers are started with, will pay the farmer a profit.

Other roughages, such as clover hay, corn stover and mixed timothy and clover hays were experimented with. The red clover ration made a good showing but the other roughages lost money.

Cottonseed meal was used to an advantage in these experiments and made a fine balancer for the ration. In speaking of the use of this protein feed for steers the animal husbandry men say that during the last 12 years it has been used in experiments at the rate of three pounds to 1,000 pounds of steer. It was fed for a period of one to six months with corn silage and good results were obtained. Cottonseed meal, however, as a hog feed has caused some doubt as to its value due to toxic qualities but the Iowa station has found that when fed in rations where cottonseed meal is used at the rate of one part to four parts of ration no harm has resulted.

OBSTACLE IN RAISING SWINE

Round Worm Is One of Greatest Cause of Loss—Many Remedies, but Prevention Is Best.

One of the greatest obstacles encountered in hog production is the parasites which are found where hogs have been raised for a number of years. Probably the round worm is the one which is most numerous and causes the most losses. There are many worm remedies but the best cure is prevention.

DAIRY HINTS

SECRETS OF DAIRY SUCCESS

Two Big Things Are Proper Care and Feed, Says Specialist of Oklahoma College.

"Two great secrets in dairying which have been the reason for the success of thousands of dairymen are proper feeding of cows and proper care of cows," says A. C. Baer, head of the Dairy Husbandry department of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college.

"Thousands of cows would be profitable and good cows if they were given a chance; if they were properly fed, housed, and cared for.

"Good feeding means to give cows enough feed to produce milk and the right kind of feed to produce milk. Most of the feed for cows ought to be grown on Oklahoma farms. Alfalfa hay is the best dairy cow feed which can be grown. Corn and sorghums, such as kafir and darso, can be grown for the silo. Ensilage on a dairy farm or any farm where dairy cows are kept provides succulent feed and is indispensable.

"Most of the grain for cow feeding can be grown on the average Oklahoma farm. A good grain mixture for milk cows is as follows: 4 parts ground oats, 3 parts bran or alfalfa meal, 3 parts ground kafir, 1 part cottonseed meal.

"A dairy cow needs about one pound of grain for three or four pounds of milk produced. Dairy cows should be fed grain individually according to the amount of milk for growth if immature, and at times to produce gain in weight.

"Dairy cattle will respond to good care. Every Oklahoma farm where cows are kept should have at least a good shed to protect the cows from wind and weather and cold winds. A blanket in very cold weather will pay for itself in a very short time. Every dairy cow should be cleaned and brushed regularly. It helps to keep her in better health."

DAIRY COWS RETURN PROFIT

High-Producing Animals Are Usually Most Economical in Matter of Food Consumed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

High-producing dairy cows are nearly always economical producers, says the United States Department of Agriculture in replying to an inquirer who asked for a comparison of purebred and grade cows as to economy of production. If a herd of purebred cows has greater ability to produce milk and butter fat than a herd of grades, it will return more milk and butter fat for the feed consumed. As a rule purebreds are bred for high production, and just to the extent that they are higher producers than the grades they may be expected to return more for the feed they use. But purebreds are not always high producers.

The ratio is not constant between the quantity of feed consumed and the quantity of milk produced. The records of cow-testing associations show that the cows that produced 10,000 pounds of milk a year ate only 55 per cent more feed than those that produced 5,000 pounds of milk a year. The cows that made 7,500 pounds of milk a year ate only 21 per cent more than those that made 5,000 pounds of milk a year. These figures are based on thousands of records.

GRAIN BOOSTED MILK FLOW

Large Increase Obtained by Minnesota Community by Feeding Whole on Pasture.

Twenty-one dairy herds in the Blue Earth County Cow Testing association averaged 7,120 pounds of milk and 285 pounds of butterfat per cow in 1920. Nineteen herds in the same association averaged 8,500 pounds of milk and 345 pounds of butterfat per cow in 1921. The percentage of gain in milk in 1921 over 1920 was 19.3; in butterfat, 21. The tester in charge in his annual report to University farm says:

"I attribute this gain to better care and feeding. The cows were fed a grain ration the year round, thus keeping up the production during the late summer months when it usually drops because of short pastures."

Value of Boarder Cow.

Saving $55 or $60 worth of feed for a boarder cow added to what she'll bring as dressed meat means maybe a hundred dollars in the pocket, which isn't a bad price for a cow that's no good anyhow.

Get Cow Into Shape.

In order to get the cow into the best physical shape for the calving time, it is advisable to feed her some linseed oil, a quart of the raw product per dose, as this will clean out her digestive tract.

One is the famous reliable 30 x 3 1/2 inch Goodyear All-Weather Tread Clincher.

Its companion is the popular 30 x 3 1/2 inch Goodyear Cross Rib.

The Goodyear Cross Rib is built of the same high grade Egyptian cotton fabric that goes into the All-Weather Tread Goodyear.

It has a long-wearing but differently designed tread, and sells for less money.

More than 5,000,000 of these tires have been sold in the last five years.

Their fine performance has demonstrated the folly of buying unknown and unguaranteed tires of lower price.

The Answer Ted Received

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"You wish to end our engagement?" faltered Elizabeth Deering, her startled eyes fixed on Teddy Drummond's stern young face. "Why?"

"You are too rich, Elizabeth," he answered grimly.

She laughed. "Too rich? You are only joking, then, Ted?"

"I mean it, dear. Listen a moment, and you will understand what I am trying to tell you. I am the assistant superintendent at the Deering mills—I am getting $2,400 a year—in two years more, I may be superintendent—perhaps general manager, if I prove myself worthy; then, I will be that much better off! I am talking about now—I want to marry, and yet the home I can provide is merely one of the pretty houses in Forest Park. We might keep one maid—possibly none at all; I have a second-hand motorcar; my wife will have to work about the house—I hesitated and looked at her very tenderly.

"Yes?" she said breathlessly. "Go on, Ted."

"You—the girl I love and the girl I am engaged to marry, are the richest woman in Pederville—you have inherited the mills—you can afford to live where and how you please, you have been accustomed to plenty of servants, beautiful clothes, many motorcars, society—everything—"

"Not quite everything, Ted," the girl interrupted gently. "My mother died when I was a little girl and my dear father left me only last year. I am much alone save for Aunt Diana and cousins."

"I know—I know, dear—but I am trying to make you understand that I cannot afford to give you the luxuries you are accustomed to, and I cannot accept those things from a rich wife."

"Elizabeth, you are giving up your money, your cars, your—"

"Everything—beloved—so that I may come to you! Some day, when we have more wisdom, we will better know how to adjust things—now we are young and work is waiting for us to do. Will you look at the house now and then drive me home so that I may talk to Aunt Diana about my trousseau and the wedding?"

"How do you like it, Ted?" she asked suddenly, watching him.

"Great," he breathed sharply, and then he turned around and took her hands in his. "It was a house like this, Elizabeth—I could offer you one like this, but it is not enough—"

"How do you know that?" she laughed softly.

"Don't tease me, dear—I was to have your answer today."

She swept her arms wide and looked at him radiantly.

"This is my answer, Teddy. This house and all it contains are yours or they will be when you have paid Mr. Morris the amount I have spent you can afford to do that—refund to my guardian the money I have spent in furnishing our home—I have made an arrangement with my guardians that all the income from the mills will go to Aunt Diana and my cousins for several years—until you are as rich as you think you ought to be! And—now—" to send for him. He found it, feeling the old delicious thrill at sight of her handwriting.

"Dear Teddy: Drive your car around to 7 Primrose terrace at four o'clock and pick me up. I promised an answer today. Elizabeth."

After that he was very quiet for the rest of the afternoon, and at ten minutes before the hour he went down and looked dismally at his very good-looking roadster. "It will cut some figure among the handsome motors of Elizabeth's friends. Now, let me think—Primrose terrace is in Forest Park—must be having tea with some of her innumerable friends."

At four he was ringing the doorbell at number seven, a very delightful gray stucco house with charming windows and a pretty garden. In the rear was a wee garage and a bit of green lawn.

Elizabeth opened the door, clad in her pretty afternoon frock. "They do not keep a servant, so I just answered the bell. I knew it must be you," she said, ushering him through a small hall into a lovely living room, furnished plainly but with such a home atmosphere that poor Teddy longed to cry out and say, "This is the house of my dreams—cannot you come and live with me here?"

FATHER

SYNOPSIS.—In a preface Mary Marie explains her apparent "double personality" and just why it is a "cross-current and a contradiction"; she also tells her reasons for writing the diary—later to be a novel. The diary is commenced at Andersonville. Mary begins with Nurse Sarah's account of her (Mary's) birth, which seemingly interested her father, who is a famous astronomer, less than a new star which was discovered the same night. Her name is a compromise; her mother wanted to call her Viola and her father insisted on Abigail Jane. The child quickly learned that her home was in some way different from those of her small friends, and was puzzled thereat. Nurse Sarah tells her of her mother's arrival at Andersonville as a bride and how astonished they all were at the sight of the dainty eighteen-year-old girl whom the sedate professor had chosen for a wife. Nurse Sarah makes it plain why the household seemed a strange one to the child and how her father and mother drifted apart through misunderstanding, each too proud to in any way attempt to smooth over the situation. Mary tells of the time spent "out West," where the "perfectly all right and genteel and respectable" divorce was being arranged for, and her mother's (to her) unaccountable behavior. By the court's decree the child is to spend six months of the year with her mother and six months with her father. Boston is Mother's home. Mary describes her life as Marie with her mother in Boston and about her mother's "prospective suitors." Then Mary goes to her other home, to visit her father. Aunt Jane's questions.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

ONE WEEK LATER.

Father's come. He came yesterday. But I didn't know it, and I came running downstairs, ending with a little bounce for the last step. And there, right in front of me in the hall was Father.

I guess he was as much surprised as I was. Anyhow, he acted so. He just stood stock-still and stared, his face turning all kinds of colors.

"You?" he gasped, just above his breath. Then suddenly he seemed to remember. "Why, yes, yes, to be sure. You are here, aren't you? How do you do, Mary?"

He came up then and held out his hand, and I thought that was all he was going to do. But, after a funny little hesitation, he stooped and kissed my forehead. Then he turned and went into the library with very quick steps, and I didn't see him again till at the supper-table.

At the supper-table he said again, "How do you do, Mary?" Then he seemed to forget all about me. At least he didn't say anything more to me; for three or four times, when I glanced up, I found him looking at me. But just as soon as I looked back at him he turned his eyes away and cleared his throat, and began to eat or to talk to Aunt Jane.

After dinner—I mean supper—he went out to the observatory, just as he always used to. Aunt Jane said her head ached and she was going to bed. I said I guessed I would step over to Carrie Heywood's; but Aunt Jane said, certainly not; that I was much too young to be running around nights in the dark. Nights! And it was only seven o'clock, and not dark at all! But of course I couldn't go.

Aunt Jane went upstairs, and I was left alone. I didn't feel a bit like reading; besides, there wasn't a book or a magazine anywhere asking you to read. They just shrieked, "Touch me not!" behind the glass doors in the library. I hate sewing. I mean Marie hates it. Aunt Jane says Mary's got to learn.

After a while I opened the parlor door and peeked in. They used to keep it open when Mother was here; but Aunt Jane doesn't use it. I knew where the electric push button was, though, and I turned on the light.

I was just trying to play something, and I remembered that Father was in the observatory, and Aunt Jane upstairs in the other part of the house where she couldn't possibly hear. So I began to play. I played the very slowest piece I had, and I played softly at first; but I knew I forgot, and I knew I hadn't played two pieces before I was having the best time ever, and making all the noise I wanted to.

Then all of a sudden I had a funny feeling as if somebody somewhere was watching me; but I just couldn't turn around. I stopped playing, though, at the end of that piece, and then I looked; but there wasn't anybody in sight. But the wax cross was there, and the coffin plate, and that awful hair wreath; and suddenly I felt as if great stars were just full of folks with shivers, but I managed to shut the piano and get over to the door where the light was. Then, a minute later, out in the big silent hall, I crept on tiptoe toward the stairs. I knew then, all of a sudden, why I'd felt somebody was listening. There was. Across the hall in the library in the big chair before the fire sat—Father! And for most a whole half-hour I had been hanging away at that piano on marches and dance music! My! But I held my breath and stopped short. I can tell you. But he didn't move nor turn, and a minute later I was safely by the door and halfway up the stairs.

I stayed in my room the rest of that evening; and for the second time since I've been here I cried myself to sleep.

ANOTHER WEEK LATER

Well, I've got them—those brown and blue serge dresses and the calf-skin boots. My, but I hope they're stiff and homely enough—all of them! And hot, too. Aunt Jane did say today that she didn't know but what she'd made a mistake not to get gingham dresses. But, then, she'd have to get the gingham later, anyway, she said; then I'd have both.

Well, they can't be worse than the serge. That's sure. I hate the serge. They're awfully homely. Still, I don't know but it's just as well. Certainly it's lots easier to be Mary in a brown serge and clumpy boots than it is in the soft, fluffy things Marie used to wear. You couldn't be Marie in these things. Honestly, I'm feeling real Maryish these days.

I wonder if that's why the girls seem so queer at school. They are queer. Three times lately I've come up to a crowd of girls and heard them stop talking right off short. They colored up, too; and pretty quick they began to slip away, one by one, till there wasn't anybody left but just me, just as they used to do in Boston. But of course it can't be for the same reason here, for they've known all along about the divorce and haven't minded it at all.

I Was Having the Best Time Ever, and Making All the Noise I Wanted To.

Aunt Jane doesn't care for music. Besides, it's noisy, she says, and would be likely to disturb Father. So I'm not to keep on with my music lessons here. She's going to teach me to sew instead. She says sewing is much more sensible and useful.

Sensible and useful! I wonder how many times I've heard those words since I've been here. And durable, too. And nourishing. That's another word. Honestly, Marie is getting awfully tired of Mary's sensible sewing and dusting, and her durable clumpy shoes and stuffy dresses, and her nourishing oatmeal and whole-wheat bread. But there, what can you do? I'm trying to remember that it's different, anyway, and that I said I liked something different.

I don't see much of Father. Still, there's something kind of queer about it, after all. He only speaks to me about twice a day—just "Good-morning, Mary," and "Good-night." And so far as most of his actions are concerned you wouldn't think by them that he knew I was in the house. Yet, over and over again at the table, and at times when I didn't even know he was "round," I've found him watching me, and with such a queer, funny look in his eyes. Then, very quickly always, he looks right away.

But last night he didn't. And that's especially what I wanted to write about today. And this is the way it happened:

It was after supper, and I had gone into the library. Father had gone out to the observatory as usual, and Aunt Jane had gone upstairs to her room as usual, and as usual I was wandering 'round looking for something to do. I wanted to play on the piano, but I didn't dare to—not with all those dead-hair and wax-dress folks in the parlor watching me, and the chance of Father's coming in as he did before.

I was standing in the window staring out at nothing—it wasn't quite dark yet—when again I had that queer feeling that somebody was looking at me. I turned—and there was Father. He had come in and was sitting in the big chair by the table. But this time he didn't look right away as usual and give me a chance to slip quietly out of the room, as I always had before. Instead he said:

"What are you doing there, Mary?" "Just looking out the window."

"Come here. I want to talk to you."

"Yes, Father."

I went, of course, at once, and sat down in the chair near him. He hitched again in his seat.

"Why don't you do something—read, sew, knit?" he demanded. "Why do I always find you moping around, doing nothing?"

Just like that he said it; and when he had just told me—

"Why, Father?" I cried; and I knew that I showed how surprised I was. "I thought you just said I couldn't do nothing—that nobody could!"

"Eh? What? Tut, tut!" He seemed very angry at first; then suddenly he looked sharply into my face. Next, if you'll believe it, he laughed—the queer little chuckle under his breath that I've heard him give two or three times when there was something he thought was funny. "Humph!" he grunted. Then he gave me another sharp look out of his eyes, and said: "I don't think you meant that to be quite so impertinent as it sounded, Mary, so we'll let it pass—this time. I'll put my question this way: Don't you ever knit or read or sew?"

"I do sew every day in Aunt Jane's room, ten minutes hemming, ten minutes sewing, and ten minutes basting patchwork squares together. I don't know how to knit."

"How about reading? Don't you care for reading?"

"Why, of course I do. I love it!" I cried. "And I do read lots—at home."

"At—home?"

"I knew, then, of course, that I'd made another awful break. There wasn't any smile around Father's eyes now, and his lips came together hard and thin over that last word.

"At—my home," I stammered. "I mean, my other home."

"Humph!" grunted Father. Then, after a minute: "But why, pray, can't you read here? I'm sure there are books enough." He flourished his hands toward the bookcases all around the room.

"Oh, I do—a little; but, you see, I'm so afraid I'll leave some of them out when I'm through," I explained.

"Well, what of it? What if you do?" he demanded.

"Why, Father!" I tried to show by the way I said it that he knew—of course he knew. But he made me tell him right out that Aunt Jane wouldn't like it, and that the books always had to be kept exactly where they belonged.

"Well, why not? Why shouldn't they? Aren't books down there—in Boston—kept where they belong, pray?"

It was the first time since I'd come that he'd ever mentioned Boston; and I almost jumped out of my chair when I heard him. But I soon saw it wasn't going to be the last, for right then and there he began to question me, even worse than Aunt Jane had.

He'd been up on his feet, tramping up and down the room all the time I'd been talking; and now, all of a sudden, he wheels around and stops short.

"How is—your mother, Mary?" he asks. And it was just as if he'd opened the door to another room, he had such a whole lot of questions to ask after that. And when he'd finished he knew everything: what time we got up and went to bed, and what we did all day, and the parties and dinners and auto rides, and the folks that came such a lot to see Mother.

Then all of a sudden he stopped—asking questions, I mean. He stopped just as suddenly as he'd begun. Why, I was right in the middle of telling about a concert for charity we got up just before I came away, and how Mother had practiced for days and days with the young man who played the violin, when all of a sudden Father jerked his watch from his pocket and said:

"There, there, Mary, it's getting late. You've talked enough—too much. Now go to bed. Good night." Talked too much, indeed! And who'd been asking me to do all the talking, I should like to know? But, of course, I couldn't say anything. That's the unfair part of it. Old folks can say anything, anything they want to to you, but you can't say a thing back to them—yet a thing.

"And there—she told me. And it was the divorce."

Always the Same Dreams.

What is called science has always pursued the elixir of life and the philosopher's stone, and is just as busy after them today as ever it was in the day of Ptolemy. We call them by different names, immunization or radiology, or what not; but the dreams which lure us into the adventure from which we learn are always at bottom the same.—Bernard Shaw.

FROCKS OF DARK TAFFETA; VARIETY IN HAT STYLES

ALTHOUGH the extensive and long-lived family of crepes still shows a disposition to crowd all other fabrics off the earth, in the roster of summer dress goods a few irrepressible favorites hold their own. Taffeta, organdie, gingham, and foulard are among those present in every representative collection. The first three, having textures entirely different from crepey weaves, provide for variety in the styles, while foulard is a rival for crepe in suppleness and at the same time a wonderful medium for color combinations, in a season that is bent on making the most of color. Along with crepes it plays its part in simple chemise dresses and draped effects and we might even have too much of a good thing in these lovely straight-line frocks if it were not that taffeta and organdie and gingham make different but equally fascinating models that rescue us from monotony in the mode.

In the colorful company of slim, summer frocks along come pretty black taffetas for afternoon, like those shown here, neither colorful nor slim, but entirely confident of their charm. In black especially, and in navy or proceed to translate even day-dresses and nighties into headwear. Naturally variety in hats is unending—there are hardly two alike—but many of them have wide brims, and variations of the poke bonnet appear among late arrivals. Materials are airy, colors beautiful and very generously received, nevertheless the big black hat that belongs to midsummer is not without a following. A fine example of the all-black hat appears at the top of the group illustrated. It is made of hair braid, its brim curves upward, and is widened by a border of chiffon. Narrow silk braid forms a simple scroll design on the underbrim and a flat rosette of feathers centered with a jet cabochon brown, taffeta frocks know no such word as "fail" in their appeal to discriminating women. They have been developed in many ways, most of them with self-trimming, relying on the adaptability of the silk for decorative features, as in the frock at the right of the illustration. Here taffeta makes the plot-edged ruching that trims the long sleeves of georgette and the four panels of georgette that float from the waist line to the hem. The bodice is shirred into corded seams and extended into a girle.

In the frock at the left four panels, longer than the skirt, are attached to it with squares of heavy lace and edged with saw tooth trimming of the taffeta. The same trimming adorns the short sleeves.

EVEN CAREFUL CALOMEL USERS ARE SALIVATED

Next Dose of Treacherous Drug May Start Misery for You.

Calomel is dangerous. It may salivate you and make you suffer fearfully from soreness of gums, tenderness of jaws and teeth, swollen tongue and excessive saliva dribbling from the mouth. Don't trust calomel. It is mercury; quicksilver.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I had troubles that all women are apt to have, with pains in my back, weak, tired, nervous feelings and a weak stomach. SOME PEOPLE THINK HEDLEY OUGHT TO HAVE A BETTER PAPER. THE INFORMER MAN THINKS SO, TOO. We can publish a better paper as soon as we get some better equipment. We can get better equipment any old time we get the money to pay for it. Which reminds us of what we started to say in first place, to-wit:

IF EVERY INFORMER SUBSCRIBER would pay up his subscription -- and then pay a year in advance -- we feel pretty sure that we'd be able to have that new equipment on the road to Hedley within thirty days. We believe the improvement would be worth the money to all of us.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SILENCE

PLAY the silent part in all your joys and sorrows. Let neither excessive happiness nor great grief overwhelm you.

Control your speech and spirit under all conditions, even when the clanging din around you urges you to trumpet-tongued retorts.

When the storms of mischief-makers shake your house of clay to its very foundations and cause your soul to tremble with apprehension, hold your peace.

Be cool and calm and patient. To be otherwise is perilous as it invites fresh attacks from those seeking your destruction.

Curb resentment through the snarling tempest; lift up your face to the whirling clouds, and remember that beyond them there is always the clear, serene sunlight sky, indifferent to the clamorous noises below.

"Let not your heart be troubled." Think of the content that will ultimately be yours if you hold loyalty to the right course and continue in well doing.

Think of the eyes that are watching you, the loved ones who are depending on you, trusting and believing in the mobility of your soul.

Do nothing, think nothing and say nothing that will shake their faith in you, or cause you to lose faith in yourself.

By keeping still in great stresses of emotion the atmosphere around you becomes cooler, and your enemies or neighbors gradually lose their heat and become more easily susceptible to reason.

Silence is the most magnificent and impressive thing in the universe.

What more sublime than the hush of a starry night in the solitude of vast hills or endless plains?

What more than silence impresses so deeply, so profoundly, the thought, the man or woman of his or her insignificance?

These close intimacies with Nature, beyond all others, bring home to us long forgotten promises, old loves and friendships lost in the mist of years, with startling clearness.

But the best thing about silence, whether we be with it in the verdured fields or forest, or in our own rooms, is that we get a closer view of our faults and frailties in quite a new and surprising light, frequently dazzling our wondering eyes and changing us for the better.

ENJOY THE GAME

GENTLEMEN who play golf will tell you that the man who tries too hard never does very well at it.

Incidentally, he never gets any fun out of the game.

There are many parallels between golf and life, which is doubtless the reason that so many people are devoted to it.

Golf, of course, is a game, and only a game. Yet there are many of its followers who can see only the advantage of winning, and who come in sour and ill-tempered if they lose.

Others, while they try to win, get just as much fun out of it if they lose.

And they never stamp on their clubs or throw them away, or swear at the caddies.

It is very important to win in anything. But it is more important to get your allowance of fun out of it as you go along.

Sitting wearily in any rich man's club you will find old gentlemen who wanted to win more than anything else, and who did win fortunes, but lost their health and their happiness in the effort. And, with all their money, you can set them down as losers.

There is good sportsmanship in all human effort. There are things the good sportsman will not do, even to win. One of them is cheating; another is becoming so absorbed in the pursuit of victory that he forgets everything else as he goes along.

John Burroughs, who probably never had more than the necessities of life in all his existence, got full measure of enjoyment that was denied to many who made a thousand times as much money. Incidentally, he was a very successful man, for he added to the sum of human knowledge.

Win if you can. Get a fortune if you can. Money means independence, and the ability to do good in the world.

But never forget that there is enjoyment as well as trouble in life, and that if you are not too intent on winning what the world calls success, you will be happier as you go along, and stand just as good a chance of making your life worth while, and the world better off because you lived in it.

Cutting Off the Last Word.

Archeologists have recently been puzzled over the finding of the headless body of an Egyptian princess in an ancient tomb. It seems that the question as to how the lady lost her head is important in archeologic circles.

In certain Oriental countries it is customary for the head of the house, in the event of a domestic argument, to behead the lady, thus cutting the lady as well as the argument short. Doubtless, the last words that issued from the lips of the headless princess were: "Where have you been?"—Judge.

TIME HAD BROUGHT CHANGES

Aunt Jane Not Now Quite as Considerate as She Had Been in the Courting Days.

In the days when Uncle Joe and Aunt Jane were courting they sat in the garden one night under a summer moon, silent and adoring.

"Joe, dear," suddenly said Aunt Jane at last, "I want to ask you something."

"Ask me anything, darling."

"Something is tickling my neck," she whispered. "If I let go, one of your hands to drive it away would you mind very much?"

Their hands were now noted for their extreme neatness, and Uncle Joe has been thoroughly trained to keep it neat; how thoroughly is shown by the fact that on a recent afternoon he went into the kitchen to get a drink.

For a moment Uncle Joe stood before the sink gazing at the shining faucets. "Guess you've just washed up the sink, ain't you?" he inquired at last.

"Yes, I have," she replied. "Why?"

"Well," exclaimed Uncle Joe, with a slight sigh, "I did think I'd relish a drink of water, but I guess I can get along without it."—Los Angeles Times.

Sure of It.

Margaret looked up at her mother one day and said:

"Mother, Jesus has wash days, hasn't he?"

"Why, no, child," her mother replied. "But he has," insisted Margaret.

"Why do you say that?" the mother asked.

"Because, mother, didn't He wash my sins away?"

IN THE parts of the country where fish may be caught, cooked and eaten the same day, there is no more appetizing and healthful food. Fish should be cleaned and placed on ice, never leaving it until put into the oven or broiler; then the flavor will be good and the dish appetizing.

Pike, bass, pickerel and perch all abound in the fresh waters. There are many ways of serving them. Stuffed and baked, the pike and pickerel are excellent. The perch are usually fried until crisp and brown. They should be rolled in seasoned flour before cooking.

Peculiar Combination of Names Seemed to Be Almost Too Much Out of the Ordinary.

While Lieutenant Commander H. E. Parsons, navy recruiting officer at Houston, Tex., was sitting at his desk a few days ago a young man entered and said he wanted to enlist.

"What is your name?" the officer asked.

"Bryan Dry," was the reply.

"You are a namesake of William Jennings Bryan, I take it," suggested the officer.

"Yes, sir."

"What is your home address?" was the next question.

"Moonshine Hill."

Parsons found on further inquiry that there is a Moonshine Hill in Texas and that Bryan Dry was one of its young inhabitants. Without more questioning, the applicant was signed up for a term of service in the navy.—Kansas City Star.

THINK FOR YOURSELF

IT IS always good policy to read clean literature, to consider the advice of those who should know what they are talking or writing about, and to listen to good sermons, but no one ever was kept on the right pathway by what he read or heard spoken unless he used his brain.

Everyone's life is in his own keeping. Whether he is happy or unhappy, whether he is successful or unsuccessful, whether he is earning for himself an eternal home in heaven or hell depends on himself. Wise men and honest men may direct one to the proper road, but no one can make a human being do what is right if he refuses to do so.

Nearly every one remembers that old proverb, "You can take a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." But how often the lesson it is supposed to teach falls on deaf ears.

It is always dangerous to follow the mob. One may become quite popular with a certain class if he will do as that class wishes. But popularity of that sort is seldom worth a great deal. Those who find real enjoyment in life and those who stand out as leaders are seldom found in the midst of the most popular crowd.

If one's mentality is normal, whether he is educated or uneducated, he is likely to come near the proper goal if he uses his brain. But let him constantly depend on the judgment of others to direct his footsteps and the chances are ten to one that he'll be headed toward a fall.

No one knows as well as oneself what is good for him, except when illness comes and the skill of the physician or surgeon is necessary to mend the bodily damage. Yet millions constantly go whining about, seeking advice from their fellows, the while losing much of their just share of happiness.

When one accidentally stumbles or when he is pounced upon by the rattler hidden beside his path, his misfortune is excusable. But it is no excuse for man or woman of normal mentality blaming downfalls on others.

The wisest persons are those who don't think they know it all.

Alpine Peoples.

Alpine people are frankly Asiatic. They originally come from the Pamir uplands. Half of the Alpine types of the present world, the Turkoman, the Turkish or Tartar, the Armenian and the Levantine are still natives of Asia. Living men of Homo Sapiens Alpinus or the normal round-heads of France and Germany have been found in Afghanistan and Samarkand, places from whence their ancestors had never migrated.

QUITS HIS JOB

A negro employed at one of the movie studios in Los Angeles was drafted by a director to do a novel comedy scene with a lion. "You get into this bed" ordered the director, "and we'll bring the lion and put him in bed with you. It will be a scream." "Put a lion in bed with me!" yelled the negro. No, sah! Not a tal! I quits right here and now." "But," protested the director, "this lion won't hurt you. This lion has been brought up on milk."

"So was I brung up on milk," wailed the negro, "but I eats meat now."

T. C. Johnson, prominent Giles citizen, was a visitor in Hedley yesterday.
