San Antonio residents getting taste of crisis

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Iranian students who have launched a hunger strike on the steps of City Hall are getting a taste of local sentiment on the Iranian crisis, often in the form of obscene comments from passersby.

The five San Antonio College students began the hunger strike Monday to protest the presence of the deposed shah at nearby Lackland Air Force Base.

Spokesman Mohsen Towliat said they also are protesting the city's refusal to issue a parade permit for a rally that had been planned for last Friday near Lackland.

Several persons who walked past the SAC students stopped just long enough to fling an obscenity or two at the protestors.

"Someone ought to shoot those SOB's," said one man.

A woman in a car stopped and made a common obscene gesture at the students.

Police officers kept a wary eye of the situation.

The students merely sat silently with their anti-shah signs and a poster of new Iranian ruler Ayatollah Khomeini. They took a prayer break at 1 p.m., chanting and bowing to the East in Islamic tradition.

Towliat, 22, said, "This (the hunger strike) is the only way we can express our opinion of what is going on. We'll do it as long as we can survive."

As the students dodged insults and intermittent raindrops, the former monarch spent a quiet ninth day at Lackland. He is secluded at the base for an indefinite stay while American diplomats try to find him a home.

During the early hours of the hunger strike, one white-haired woman stopped on the stairs to challenge Towliat and the others.

"Do you think if I was in Iran they would allow me to sit on the steps of your city hall and do what you're doing?" asked the unidentified woman.

"Yes," responded Towliat.

"No," the woman fired back. "An American would be killed for doing what you're doing. That's the kind of country your country is under that ruler (Khomeini)."

Economy blamed for Pampa heists

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Pampa police officers responded to two armed robberies within nine hours of each other Monday — both allegedly committed by persons wearing ski masks and brandishing a pistol.

Approximately $180 was taken from the Allsup's convenience store located at 859 E. Frederic Street Monday afternoon by an unknown person carrying a gun.

Sandra Brummett, the clerk on duty at the time, told officers a person entered the store wearing green coveralls, a ski mask and dark gloves. The person told her — in what she believed was a man's voice — to remove the money from the cash register.

"Not hearing what was said, Brummett asked, 'What?' The alleged robber then pulled a pistol, dark blue in color, partly out of the overall pocket and exposed it to the clerk.

Brummett began to remove the money from the cash register and put it in a sack, according to the instructions she was given. She was placing change in the sack, she reported, when she was told by the person not to put in the change. The person then reportedly took the sack containing the cash, turned and left the store.

According to Lt. Charles Morris, Patrolman Jesse Wallace arrived on the scene at 2:19 — one minute after receiving the armed robbery call — and conducted the initial investigation and received the description.

Six other police units were dispatched to the location as they became available to saturate the area and attempt to find the alleged robber, Morris said.

The person's description was broadcast to the Department of Public Safety and Gray County Sheriff's Department. Units from both departments assisted in the search.

The victim was brought in for questioning, Lt. Roy Denman said, adding, "We're just getting the facts from her about the robbery."

She was not actually threatened, he commented.

No suspects are in custody at this time, police say. Detective Lynn Brown is continuing the investigation into the robbery.

In a news release submitted by the police department this morning, it was reported that the Long John Silvers restaurant was also robbed Monday at about 11:40 p.m. by two men wearing ski masks.

According to the report, Eddie Ray Howell, manager of the eating establishment was closing for the day when two masked males approached him from behind.

One of the suspects reportedly struck Howell on the chin and a displayed a pistol. Howell was forced back in the restaurant, made to open the safe and the suspects took the contents.

Howell was then handcuffed to a rack in the back room and the men left the premises.

The amount of money taken in the robbery has not been released at this time, a police spokesperson said. Officers said an investigation into the robbery was continuing.

Michael Lowe, area supervisor of the Long John Silvers restaurants was called in from Amarillo immediately after the robbery. He said the Long John Silver establishments do not have an increased amount of robberies this time of the year. He thinks there is an overall increase at this time, "especially with the economy the way it is."

Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said seven robberies have occurred this year. He added all of the seven have been robberies of convenience stores.

Shariat-Madari says Khomeini faces civil war

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today international observers will see the American hostages in the occupied U.S. Embassy "in the very near future."

Meanwhile, the spiritual leader of the Azerbaijani Turks who are rebelling against government authority in the northwest, said in an interview today that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini would face civil war if he did not liberalize his policies toward Azerbaijan.

Today the dispute between Iran's two highest-ranking holy men intensified when Shariat-Madari, second most senior religious leader, said in an interview with Associated Press Correspondent Maureen Johnson at his home in the holy city of Qom, "If the executive makes mistakes again, the disturbances will continue in Azerbaijan, tension will increase, people will start to kill each other, civil war will take place."

"We are not frightened of economic blockades. These brazen superpowers, think that now they have such power all the world, all the universe should follow them," Khomeini said Monday in response to Carter's threat of more severe economic measures against Iran if the 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4 are not freed.

"America should remove Carter from its political scene," the religious leader of the Iranian revolution asserted in a speech to Moslem students at his headquarters in Qom.

"He was a bad president for America. He disgraced America in the world. He mobilized Moslems against America. The nation of America should know that they should not vote for Carter because Carter has betrayed America."

Khomeini also accused "American spies" of fomenting the rebellion, now in its sixth day, by the Azari Turks, the largest of Iran's ethnic minorities, in Tabriz, the capital of the northwestern province of Azerbaijan and Iran's third largest city.

Angered by mob attacks on the Qom home of their spiritual leader Ayatollah Mohammad Shariat-Madari and by the failure of Khomeini's new Islamic constitution to grant them autonomy, the Turks seized control of Tabriz last Thursday and battled government troops and revolutionary guards through the weekend for control of the local radio station and other government buildings.

Khomeini's forces regained control of the radio station Monday and broadcast government programs and pro-Khomeini slogans. Tehran Radio said a "group of armed people" tried to attack the station but were repulsed and 72 were arrested. Reporters in Tabriz said rival groups demonstrated in the city but they saw no attack on the station.

Khomeini sent a peace delegation to Tabriz headed by Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr, but leaders of the the Turks' Moslem People's Party, refused to meet with them. The party's three-story headquarters was filled with armed men.

The Turks reported nine of their men killed and 60 wounded in the rebellion so far.

Meanwhile, one of the embassy hostages, Marine Cpl. Billy Gallegos, 21, of Pueblo, Colo., said in an NBC-TV interview that the students holding them "have really been good to us. It's hard to believe. I know, but we haven't been asked any questions about what really our job was."

U.S. diplomatic efforts praised

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

U.S. diplomatic maneuvers in the 38-day crisis with Iran have gained the praise of local legislators both on the state and national level.

U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, said by telephone from his Washington office that he supports President Carter and the initiatives he's taken.

"This is a very critical diplomatic matter," Hightower said. "It must be handled very gently and diplomatically because a loss of lives is possible."

State Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, believes the situation is "being handled in a manner that protects the hostages."

"This is a time for diplomatic maneuvers and patience," Whaley said. "We can't get tough with them because the lives of 50 of our fellow Americans are at stake."

State Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, views American diplomatic restraint as an admirable trait.

"At the same time, we must have contingency plans available if the situation is not resolved through diplomacy," Price explained. "The key thing diplomatically is to find a way for the Ayatollah Khomeini to save face — that's the solution."

Price said he believes no countries will deal with Iran after the crisis is over and the country cannot exist by themselves. He added "Khomeini is hurting Iran for years to come."

Whaley believes some politicians are making political hay "out of the crisis situation."

"Every office holder should be careful about what they say and ask themselves if they want it played on TV," he said. "They should think about the hostages before they open their mouth. Look at Teddy Kennedy — if he had a son over there as a hostage, do you think he'd have said what he did?"

Whaley was referring to Sen. Kennedy's comments last week that the Shah of Iran should be returned for the crimes he committed against the Iranian people.

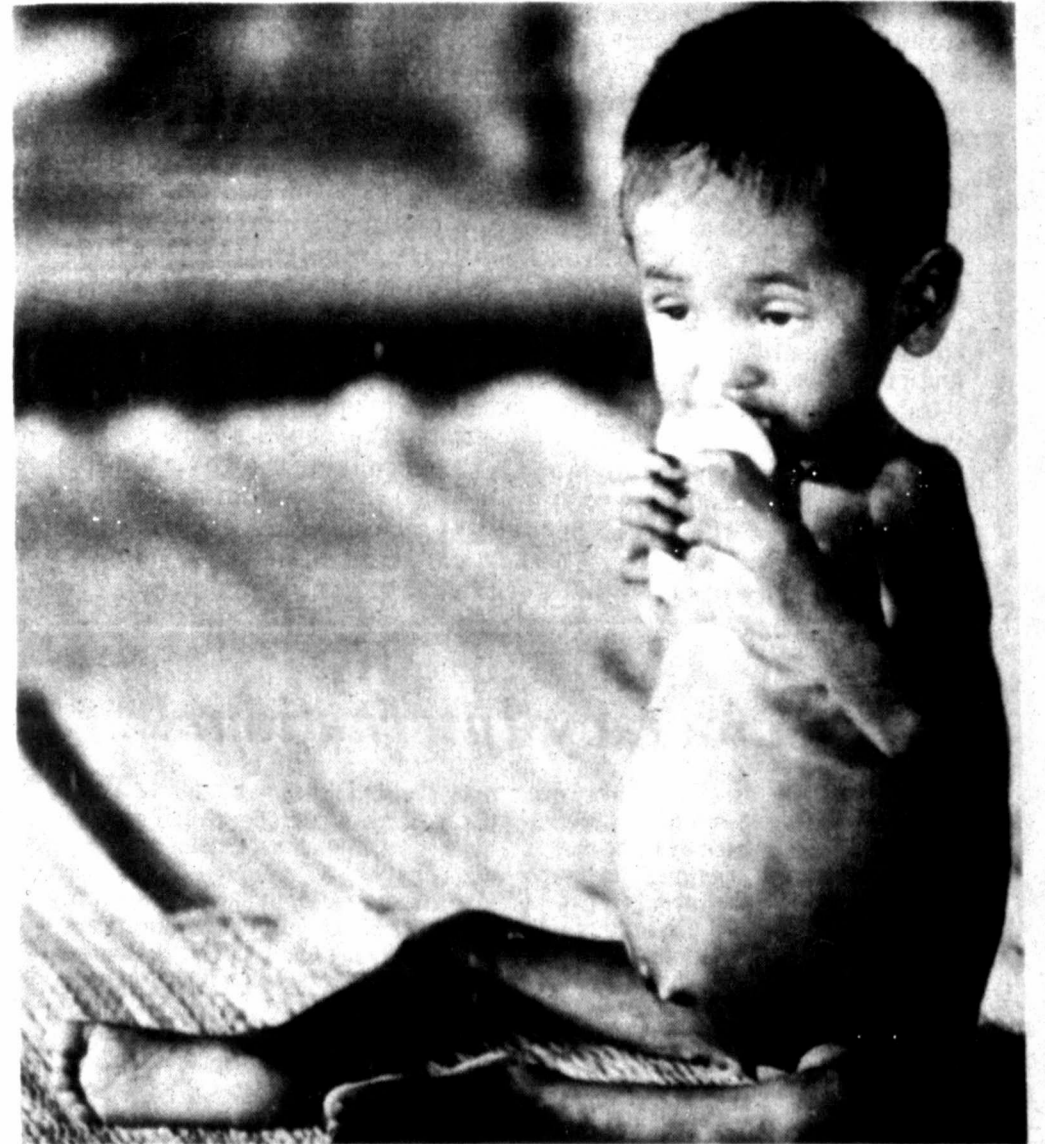

Whaley added that the hostage situation is wrong, but "there's not much we can do about it — it's a touchy situation."

Both Whaley and Hightower agree that the statements made by Col. Billy Gallegos, a Marine hostage in the embassy, on national television Monday night should not be taken seriously.

"Anytime anyone is confined like he is, you must question what he is saying," Hightower said.

Whaley said Gallegos' statements were obviously made under duress and should not be held against him.

"They probably held a gun to the back of his head," he said. "It was very obvious that he's probably been brainwashed."

Hospital report given to city

A representative of Merriman and Barber Consulting Engineers of Pampa reported to city commissioners on bids for the water and sewer lines for the new hospital in this morning's commission meeting.

Gene Barber told commission members his firm had reviewed the bids received in the last meeting. After some insignificant changes in the totals of the bids, — which he said did not change the low bidder — Taylor Construction Company of Canyon was found to have the low bid. All bids met specifications, he said.

Speaking of the Taylor bid, Barber commented, "It appears to be in good order." After speaking with the Canyon construction firm, he said they wished to be considered by the commission in early March, "as soon as the paper work is complete" concerning the crossover of the hospital from Gray County to Hospital Corporation of America. The construction company wants to be put on a "hold basis" until the legal process is complete, Barber added.

The cost of the project to the city will be small, he said, quoting the developer's cost at $104,312.82. The city will be paying $13,152.00 for the cost of the extra lines which will fully develop the land around the hospital, Barber said.

According to him, a representative of the Hospital Corporation of America in City Manager Mack Wofford's office recently, confirmed there would be a hearing in Austin the last of January or possibly the first of February to obtain approval for the hospital's change of ownership.

Two bids were received by the commission for the purchase of two vehicles for the Pampa Police Department and the utility department of the city. Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet submitted a package bid for the two sedans at a cost of $11,749.59. The low bid was presented by Harold Barrett Ford at $11,583.11.

Wofford felt the awarding of the bids should be held until the next meeting so the bids could be assessed as far as meeting specifications set by the city.

The commission decided to wait until the next meeting to consider awarding the bid.

A public hearing was conducted concerning the rezoning of Purviance Street between Buckler and Browning streets from multi-family to retail. No one was present to oppose the rezoning.

In other commission business, Dec. 27 was selected as the alternate date for the regular commission meeting to be held on Dec. 25.

Son trying to help

A teen-age son is attempting to help his parents and finish school too.

To offset the high doctor and hospital bills created by his mother's illness, the boy is working part-time and going to school the rest of the day.

His mother has been in and out of the hospital several times over the past few months.

The father is disabled and can provide on his social security benefits for his family.

Chittenden resigns

S. M. "Chick" Chittenden, Pampa's city secretary and director of finance for 16 years, has resigned, Mack Wofford, city manager, said today after emerging from an executive session of the city commission.

The resignation, turned in Dec. 7, is effective Jan. 31, 1980.

"At this time that is everything I know about," Wofford said.

Chittenden was not immediately available for comment.

Rumors concerning the possible resignation of a high city official have been circulating since late last week.

The city commission opened its meeting at 9:30 a.m. today with routine business and accepted a report on Highland General Hospital from Merriman and Barber Consulting Engineers of Pampa for water and sewer lines.

Following its regular session, the commission went into executive session, apparently to discuss and accept Chittenden's resignation.

Chittenden went to work for the city of Pampa in Dec., 1963 as city secretary.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

How many will Earth support

By Oscar Cooley

How many people will the planet Earth support? No one knows, but there must be a limit, since the Earth's total resources for providing food and shelter are limited.

Students of population tend to be pessimistic. They continually warn us that world population, over the period that dependable censuses have been taken (the United States pioneered census-taking in 1790), has been increasing at an ever more rapid rate. Five years ago, they were saying that if the world population continued to increase at the 1974 rate, it would double by the year 2000 or thereabouts.

They also point out the disturbing fact that people are increasing most rapidly in countries that can least afford it, that is, the "developing countries" of Africa, Asia and especially Central America.

The population of the United States is increasing and probably will continue for at least another 40 years, but interestingly in Western Europe the population is growing at a slower and slower rate, and in at least one country, Germany, is decreasing. It has been since 1972.

Some European countries pay family allowances, that is, government subsidies to parents in proportion to the number of children they have. Germany and France have increased their family allowances to check the decline in their population growth. So has Sweden, but little Netherlands, a most thickly settled country, has reduced hers.

The apparent reason for this reversal in Europe of the world trend is that European women of age 15 to 49, the child-bearing period of their lives, are having fewer babies.

And they are having fewer babies because more and more of them are holding wage jobs. As one German authority says, "It is hard to combine work and children." The women are too busy to be mothers.

In many European families — and of course the same is true of Americans — both husband and wife hold jobs. They get used to having two pay envelopes and are loath to return to one in order that the wife can take time out to have a child.

Further, modern contraceptives have made it easy for women to avoid becoming pregnant. And if they do, legalized abortion makes it easy for them to avoid bearing the child.

In Western Europe, women are marrying at a later age or not at all, for they are less dependent, economically, on men. And more women and men live together without being married. These trends are not conducive to establishing families and having children.

These changes in the way of life prevail in the United States, too, though perhaps not to such a large degree because of our large rural population. Urban life always has been hostile to the large family. Eventually, if the present trend continues, the rate of population growth will slow to a halt here, as well. At present our birthrate is high because the many females born during the postwar "baby boom" are now in the child-bearing period.

Would a declining population be economically beneficial? Some think it would for a time, but not for long. It would depend on the extent that the people are self-supporting. If one is producing more than he is consuming he is an economic asset to society. The more such people a country has, the more economic growth it will enjoy. If one consumes generously but produces little or nothing, he is a liability. Others must produce more than they consume in order to feed him. If they do not, he will dissave, that is, use up capital, and the whole will be poorer.

Many consume but do not produce because they are either too young or too old. The population of elderly in both Europe and the United States is increasing, due to the increasing span of life. This presumably is due largely to modern medicine.

To the extent that the young, the old and the disabled are non-producers they become an economic burden on the earners. This is not to say they are a detriment, for they contribute a great deal to society which is not measured as a part of the Gross National Product. Much of it is non-measurable in dollars and cents, because it is intangible or psychic in nature. Much of man's most satisfying income is psychic.

The population trend, like the weather, is for the most part beyond the control of man. Probably this is just as well. If we could control the population, it would become one more bone of everlasting contention. Men could never agree whether there should be more, or fewer, of them.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Dec. 11, the 345th day of 1979. There are 20 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
In 1941, the United States declared war on Germany and Italy, after they had declared war on the United States.

On this date:
In 1816, Indiana became the 19th state.
In 1936, George VI became King of England upon the formal abdication of Edward VII.

In 1946, John D. Rockefeller Jr. offered to donate a six-block piece of Manhattan real estate for construction of United Nations headquarters.

In 1961, two American helicopter companies arrived in Saigon in the first direct U.S. military support for South Vietnam's battle against communist guerrillas.

In 1972, Apollo 17 astronauts landed on the moon to begin extensive exploration of the lunar surface.

Ten years ago, 75 black students were suspended from Harvard after they occupied the dean's office, faculty club and a major construction site. They had been seeking more black construction workers on campus projects.

Five years ago, New York City trimmed its payroll by 6,400 people, including 3,700 who were laid off, in a budget-cutting move.

One year ago, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance held meetings in Cairo, as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat called for active American participation in the Mideast peace process.

Organized Crime is next project

The chairman of the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on investigations recently announced that he intends to call federal hearings to probe organized crime. The public has not been offered such entertainment since the Kefauver hearings of the late 1950s. Hearings into organized crime are a sure way to attract public attention. Looking into UFOs might serve the same purpose.

At a time when government is suffering a defeat in its war on drugs, a scapegoat has to be found. There is little doubt organized crime, which is more of a concept than an organization, will be blamed for the government's failure.

In a letter to West Coast District Attorney John Van de Kamp, the Senate subcommittee chairman said "the time is right for the Senate subcommittee to focus public attention on the growth and diversification of organized crime activity." Apparently the government is looking for someone to blame for the continued existence of a host of profitable activities that have been declared illegal. Revenues from these activities — including drugs, loan-sharking, gambling, labor racketeering, land fraud and pornography — may be as high as $50 billion.

Most of the activity that G-men claim is controlled by organized crime should not be illegal in the first place. Unless someone is using force or fraud when dealing with another individual, it is none of the government's business what transaction is taking place. Obviously people do many things that are self-destructive — drinking and taking drugs are examples — but unless force or fraud are involved, the government should stay out. In short, some people have a right to make decisions for themselves, even if the rest of society disapproves of the choice. The logic of this applies to prostitution, gambling and a number of other crimes commonly labeled "victimless crimes."

Most providing these illegal goods and services are small businessmen who differ from their chamber-of-commerce counterparts only inasmuch as their goods and services are illegal. The degree to which they are organized is the extent they can be called "organized crime." Obviously, there are suppliers who wholesale illegal products to retailers, but the wholesalers generally do not fit into the "Godfather" image.

All government has managed to do by creating victimless crime laws is to raise the price of the goods and services in question. An act of prostitution has a much higher price than it would be if it were legal to sell sexual favors. Because of the higher prices, people are attracted to it as a means of earning money. This same result is true of any of the other victimless crime activities.

Herbert Alexander, a California professor and director of the Citizens Research Foundation told a conference on organized crime that the underworld has been investing in politics. He estimated that organized crime donations to various political campaigns in 1976 alone could be as much as $36 million. The important aspect of these donations is that they are not being made in an attempt to legalize anything. Legalized, prices would go down and criminals might not find it profitable to stay in the same business.

Instead of investigating the activities of organized crime, the Senate subcommittee should examine the laws that take goods and services out of the legal marketplace. Demand for the products the government has declared illegal is the major stimulus for the growth of organized crime in America. At least the peddlers of illegal items usually give potential customers a choice. The tax collector takes your money whether you like it or not. Now that's organized crime.

Democracy International

It is not exactly a secret any more that the democracies of the world have become fewer and more isolated over the past 25 years, while the regimes hostile to democracy have proliferated, grown more vocal, and strengthened one another with all kinds of international aid and sustenance. The U.S. response to this so far has been to withdraw from the scene and cut down even further on our contacts with the politics of other nations. But the other day we heard about a new organization, the American Political Foundation, whose birth gives us hope that at least someone out there knows what's wrong and is trying to help us recover our bearings.

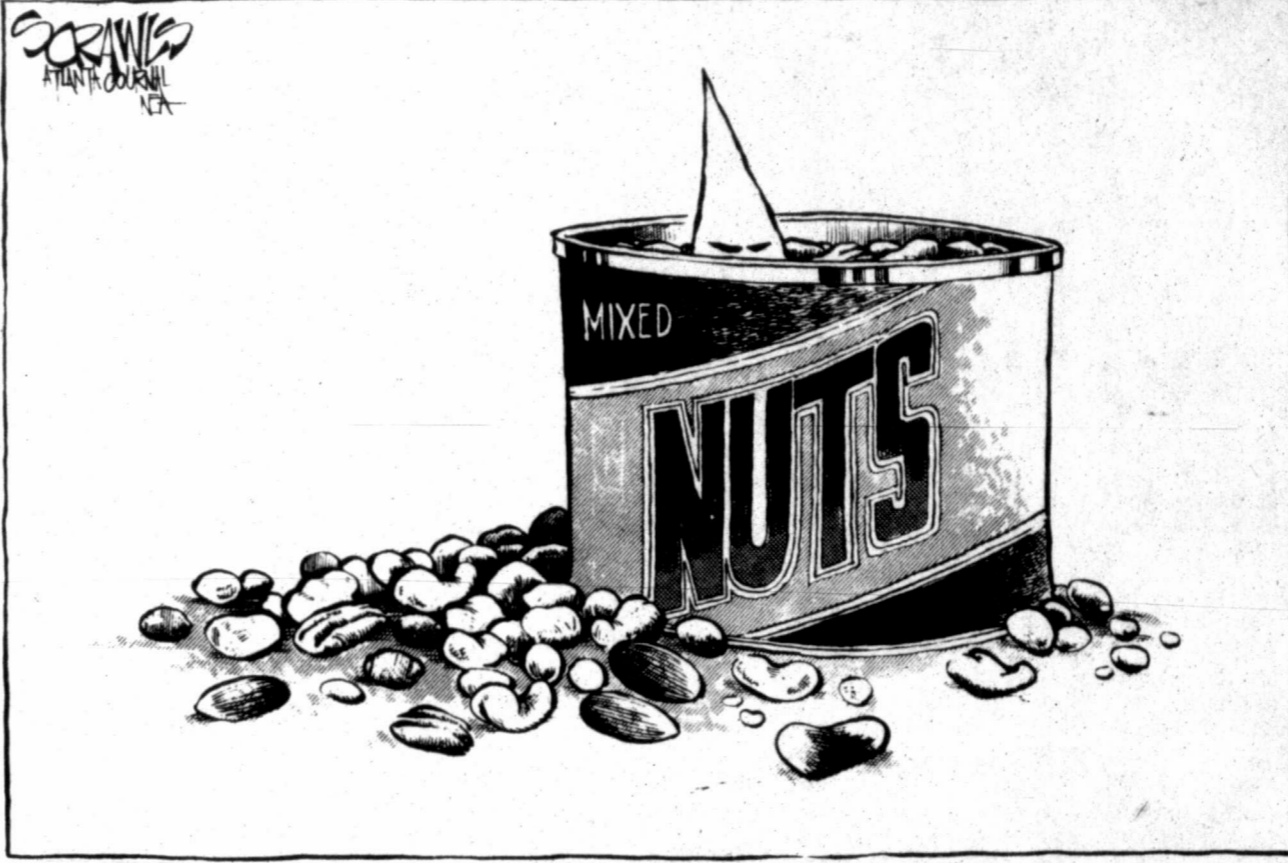

We all know, the APF people point out, that the Communist movement around the world has gained tremendous force from its formidable networks of international parties, funds and connections. But few Americans know that most of the important democratic political parties of the industrialized nations have also established international networks for themselves and have used these connections to give significant aid to democratic forces in various parts of the world.

The European democratic parties sent money and volunteers to help avert a Communist takeover in Portugal. They have sent public opinion and organizational experts to advise Turkish political parties during recent economic crises. They're supporting schools in Latin America to train democratic leaders. They're aiding the moderate Democratic Turnhalle Alliance in Namibia. Unlike American democrats, the European parties supporting these activities still seem to know that helping your democratic friends like this is not necessarily illegitimate interference in another nation's internal affairs.

The American government, needless to say, does not much participate in this kind of activity nowadays. More to the point, our Republican and Democratic parties, the counterparts of the European democratic party organizations, haven't been in close enough contact even just to keep abreast of what their European colleagues are doing. But now the American Political Foundation has gotten Republican National Committee Chairman Bill Brock and DNC Finance Chairman Charles Manatt to take its top offices and will begin a program of meetings, visits, services and research to get the American parties in touch.

It's not likely that American Republicans and Democrats are ever going to be cohesive enough to mount the kind of international operations that the Europeans routinely carry out. But there's not much doubt that it would improve the quality of our public decision making if our politicians could bear in mind some of the activities and experiences of their colleagues in other countries. It's nice to see that the U.S. national committees are taking a step to make this a little more likely.

Don't let yourself be used by Paul Harvey

When the preacher in the pulpit or on television emphasizes what his ministry is doing for overseas missions every widow in the audience is led to feel that her contributed "mite" makes her personally important, part of a worldwide ministry.

And, after all, we are admonished by Scripture to "go unto all the world" with the Gospel message.

Thus a church "with outreach" is fulfilling its mission.

Recently, however, a new church emphasis on resettling Indo-Chinese in the United States has further loosened purse strings in the pews.

You do what you are divinely guided to do but don't let yourself be used!

Americans generally are getting fed up with parasitism, are rightly resentful of the Welfare Cadillac, the professional unemployed and food stamps misused to buy booze.

Hard-working, behaving, dues-paying Americans have had enough of red ink on their books because of goldbricks on their backs.

Yet now we are urged to extend our charity to other than homefolks.

And some of the outsiders now inside are using our freedoms to demonstrate against our government.

Some bring with them old world ways in diametrical contradiction to ours. They buy and sell their teen-age daughters; they skin and eat dogs and cats; they ravage our fishing grounds.

Transporting them here is cruel to them and a rude affront to our own jobs.

Recent resentment against Iranian students flared into violence in some cities, resulted in deportation of many. That should be a warning.

There is no more toxic way to pollute our environment than recklessly to overpopulate it.

And there is no more effective way to subvert our political, economic and social system than to dilute it.

The import-anybody promoters, whether for mercenary or entirely altruistic motives, are playing a dangerous game with our already precarious balance.

Again—

When the preacher in the pulpit or on television emphasizes what his ministry is doing for overseas missions every widow in the audience is led to feel that her contributed "mite" makes her personally important, part of a worldwide ministry.

And, after all, we are admonished by Scripture to "go unto all the world" with the Gospel message.

Thus a church "with outreach" is fulfilling its mission.

Recently, however, a new church emphasis on resettling Indo-Chinese in the United States has further loosened purse strings in the pews.

That is not traditional charity. Anybody we can help we should help—but that does not include bringing them home to live with us—or pretty soon we'd not have a home any more.

Now, if your heart tells you otherwise, follow your heart.

But don't let yourself be used.

Superstars meet to munch

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Both politicians and football players often engage in bruising battles whose outcome isn't certain until the final minutes of the contest. The superstars in both fields are nationally known celebrities.

With so many similarities, it probably was inevitable that pro football and pro politics would meet — and that's exactly what will occur in Los Angeles, the Super Bowl host, on Jan. 19, the eve of the championship contest.

The Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee will sponsor a $500-per-plate fund-raising party designed to attract political leaders and well-heeled GOP donors as well as owners, coaches and players from the National Football League.

The co-hosts will be Republican senators from the two states that produced last year's Super Bowl participants: Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, representing the Dallas Cowboys, and Sen. H. John Heinz III of Pennsylvania, representing the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The only known previous efforts to link politics and football were made by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a former Buffalo Bills quarterback who has sponsored more modest parties for his supporters at past Super Bowls.

The Los Angeles party, expected to raise $100,000, is being coordinated by Washington political consultant Brad O'Leary, who last year raised $150,000 at an equally impressive event — a party in the Palm Springs, Calif. backyard of former President Gerald R. Ford.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has been surprisingly restrained in his criticism of President Carter, confounding ardent Kennedy supporters and frustrating journalists who like nothing better than a no-holds-barred political fight.

But as one astute political observer, Washington pollster and campaign consultant Vic Fingerhut, suggests, Kennedy may be forced to remain very cautious in his effort to wrest the Democratic presidential nomination from Carter.

"If Kennedy's condemnation of the Carter presidency is too severe and Carter's performance ratings sink to new lows, Kennedy may win the Democratic nomination but increase the chances of a Republican victory in November," says Fingerhut.

"Kennedy benefits from measured displeasure with the performance of Carter's Democratic administration, but he could be hurt if this displeasure turns into a widespread feeling that the Democrats have been a total failure in office," adds Fingerhut.

A sign of the times: Several major oil companies have gone underground, at least as far as identifying the location of their Washington offices.

The Shell Oil Co. leases a suite of offices in a downtown office building here, but the company's name appears on neither the building directory in the lobby nor the office door. "We've been in hiding since 1973, when one of our offices in California was bombed," says a company official.

The Continental Oil Co. houses its Washington representatives in the same building — but it also eschews any public designation. "We're afraid of possible violence," says a Conoco spokesman. "It's just a fact of life."

No job is immune to the dangers that could produce employee fatalities, according to newly released Labor Department statistics.

The two most dangerous industries are mining, which employs only 1 percent of the work force but accounts for 8 percent of job-related deaths, and construction, with 5 percent of the workers and 20 percent of the fatalities.

But the finance, insurance and real estate businesses — generally believed to be safer than most — account for the largest percentage of workers killed in auto accidents.

Workers in another supposedly safe field, wholesale and retail trade, face a very different but equally lethal danger — being shot in a robbery. That job classification accounted for almost 80 percent of all work-related gunshot deaths in 1978.

Justice takes stand in final day of hearing

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Peace Justice Charles Cashell returned to the witness stand today, on what was expected to be the final day of testimony in the federal corruption trial of Cashell and four other current or former Gregg County officials.

Cashell began testifying Monday, the last of the five defendants to take the stand. All five denied they took bribes to permit illegal gambling or conspired to commit murder, as the government charges.

The defendants are Cashell, Sheriff Tom Welch, County Commissioner Bill Satterwhite, and two former deputies, Billy Ray Roach and Jim Cochran.

All are accused of bribery, facilitating gambling and obstruction of law enforcement.

In addition, Satterwhite, Welch and Cochran are charged with murder conspiracy in an alleged ambush of three men in 1974.

Cashell told the court he received money from the midway manager at the 1978 Gregg County Fair, but insisted it was payment for services rendered, not a bribe to ignore illegal gambling booths on the fairgrounds.

Earlier, Roach testified he took $350 from the manager when the 1978 fair ended, but also insisted it was payment for services, not a bribe. Roach said he worked as a security guard at the fair while off-duty from the sheriff's office.

He received similar payments from fair officials every year since 1971, he said.

He testified he saw no gambling on the fairgrounds, and citizen complaints he received about the game booths on the midway were handled "on the spot" to everyone's satisfaction, but did not involve gambling.

Concerning the alleged murder plot, Cochran said he knew there was an effort directed against the three intended victims, but said he understood it was to be a trap for the men, not a murder plot.

Cochran said the sheriff's office was attempting to catch the men in a burglary attempt.

Satterwhite told the jury he ordered county employees to use county equipment and, on county time, to widen and pave a driveway at a farm later alleged to be a gambling casino.

However, he said he did not know the "New Foster Farm," as the place was known locally, was a gambling establishment. He denied seeing gambling equipment stored there, and said he never heard reports from county employees about the equipment.

Presiding judge William Steger told the court he expected the case would be in the jury's hands by Thursday, perhaps earlier.

Price talks on South America

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

State Sen. Bob Price believes that in time, South America, most especially Argentina, will be able to grow into a stable, respected power.

Price should know — he just returned from a two-week trip to that hemisphere.

While there, he attended a special conference to discuss Argentinian problems, along with two other state senators from Idaho and North Carolina. Price was invited by the "Foundation for the Study of Argentine Problems," a non-partisan group of businessmen interested in solving their country's problems.

"All the political parties have been outlawed in Argentina because they have a military government," Price said. "The conference brought together groups from six countries in South America and they each gave their version of what needed to be done there."

He said he and the other two legislators were brought in to make comments when asked.

"Their primary thrust was that they want to come together as an economic bloc but also keep their solidarity as separate nations," Price explained. "With a bloc, they could have power against such groups as OPEC."

He added that once they are able to form — the countries include Colombia, Venezuela, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, Ecuador and Argentina — the group would ask Brazil to join also.

"With Brazil in the group, it would make it easier for them to be together as an economic bloc," Price said.

Price said the conference reminded him of children playing government.

"The thing that was driven home to me was the fact that here were all these educated people, both men and women, who were trying to form a government in their country," he explained. "They had all been legislators and in the end, their government consumed them by nationalizing everything."

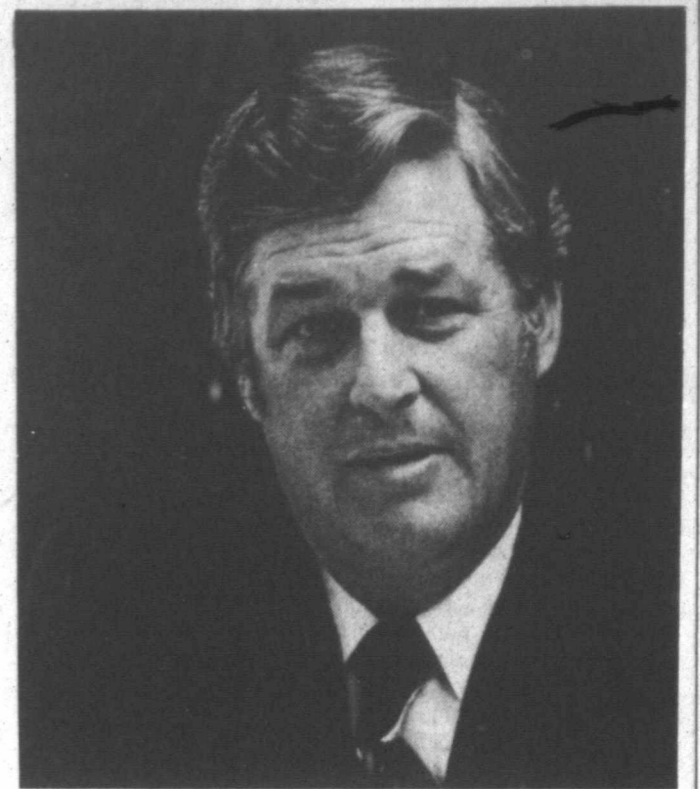

"Their Congress building looked just like ours in Washington, but it was all boarded up," Price said.

The senator also used the trip to examine opportunities for agricultural markets in South America.

"I'm convinced that if we made a concerted effort to sell agriculture products there with the Department of Agriculture and the State Department, it'd be a good market for us," Price said. "For example, Brazil is the greatest vast of country in the world yet to be developed, even though the Spaniards settled it in the 1400s."

He added that Brazil has vast agricultural lands, forests and minerals, including some oil and gas.

Most of the countries suffer from a rising inflation rate. Argentina alone has an inflation rate of 150 percent and an interest rate of 90 to 105 percent. Price said the exchange rate for U.S. dollars is 1551 to one.

FBI searching for mangled body's identity

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The FBI has received an autopsy report that may help determine if the mangled remains of a man found on the beach at Padre Island National Seashore are those of a missing San Antonio realtor.

Joseph Paul Rupp, medical examiner for Kleberg County, declined to comment on the autopsy except to say that the death was "unnatural."

The body found Saturday by a pair of beachcombers was badly disfigured by animals, and Kleberg County officials said from the appearance of the remains, they could have been there anywhere from 48 hours to two weeks.

An FBI spokesman confirmed the agency was looking into the disappearance last Tuesday of Julius A. Dess, 73.

The day he disappeared, he was believed to be showing a man and woman a piece of ranch property near Poteet, in Atascosa County about 30 miles south of San Antonio and about 140 miles northwest of where the body was found.

Dess' blood-stained automobile was found last Tuesday night at San Antonio International Airport.

Mistrial declared in capital murder case

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A mistrial has been declared in the month-long capital murder trial of a 28-year-old man charged in the murder of a Fort Worth woman 11 months ago, but the prosecution says it will try him again.

Jerry Lee Hogue, a Colorado ex-convict, is accused of setting a house fire last Aug. 13 that killed Jayne Lynn Markham, 24, while she tried to get loose from bonds on her hands and feet.

Hogue — who had lived with his wife in the house before the victim and two others moved there from Wichita Falls — had harassed the new occupants for several days, the prosecution told jurors. The state said Hogue went to the residence and asked for a Zodiac calendar he had left on a wall.

The jury foreman reported the panel was hopelessly deadlocked, 10-2 for convicting Hogue on a lesser charge of murder, after three days of deliberation.

District Judge Randall Riley asked the jury if more deliberation would break the stalemate.

"Absolutely not," the foreman replied.

Hogue, formerly of Boulder, Colo., served a prison sentence in Colorado in 1974 for raping his ex-wife and was tried in 1977 in Denton County, Texas, for sex abuse. That trial ended in a hung jury, and charges against Hogue were dismissed when the victim of the alleged attack refused to testify against him a second time.

'Foolproof' evidence revealed

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors unveiled the key evidence in a capital murder trial — "foolproof" tapes of conversations between the defendant and an undercover investigator — then indicated they probably would rest their case today.

The defendant is 19-year-old Donald Edward Smith, of Tampa, Fla., charged with two Aug. 2 murders near Brady. The victims were Molly Farr, 55, and her daughter, Tandy Bennett, 25, shot to death in their mobile home.

A 40-year-old man, Robert Shirl Gandy, was also killed in the mobile home that night, but no charges have been filed in his death.

The state introduced Monday three tape recordings of conversations between Smith and Hillsborough County, Fla., deputy Al Luis.

"They're foolproof," prosecutor Ron Sutton said of the tapes. "It's the defendant describing how three people were killed in Brady, Texas, on Aug. 2."

Five days before the killing, Smith talked to Luis on the secretly-recorded tape of going to Texas "to waste a dude" for pay.

Luis talked to Smith several times after the murders, and recorded two of those conversations. In a tape made Aug. 7, Smith recounted several details of the mobile home's interior, including a fireplace, some decorative swords on the wall and a small white dog that nipped at his heels.

The description was consistent with what Texas Ranger Bob Favor testified he found when he investigated the killings, although Smith described the night of Aug. 2 as clear when, in fact, it had been raining, according to witnesses. In an Aug. 15 conversation, Smith told Luis he liked shotguns and used a double-barrelled shotgun in Texas.

"Did you do the ladies?" Luis asked on the tape. Smith replied he shot the women while "Rocky" killed Gandy.

"I opened the door and she (Mrs. Farr) looked up at me," Smith said on the tape. "Just as she got up I let off a shot and she leaned over this way. I let go with both barrels and it took a chunk out of her."

"The other one (Ms. Bennett) never seen it coming. Everything went right through her."

Defense attorney Richard Mosty said the tapes were "not terribly convincing." "It's obvious they have their best impact when the state first plays them before the jury," Mosty said. "When we have a chance to explain, I think the contrast will be clear."

Pearce reappointed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced the reappointment Monday of Louis Pearce Jr. of Houston as chairman of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Pearce, 62, is chairman of the board of Waukesha-Pearce Industries, Inc., and Texas Iron Works.

Other appointments by Clements Monday included: —Ted Bowen, president of Methodist Hospital in Houston, as a regent at Stephen F. Austin University.

—Dr. Louis Gibson of Corsicana to the Statewide Health Coordinating Council.

—James Chambers Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Dallas Times Herald, to the Texas War on Drugs Committee.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press
 A cold front moved into the Texas Panhandle early today, bringing with it gusty winds, much colder temperatures and the threat of occasional snow flurries.

The prospect of snow flurries appeared far away for the rest of Texas as dawn broke with temperatures mostly in the 60s, unseasonably warm readings 14 days before Christmas.

Forecasts called for the front to move southward today, bringing with it colder temperatures, gusty winds and clearing skies.

Highs were to range from the 40s in Northwest Texas to the low 80s in extreme South Texas.

Dense fog reduced visibility to near zero in the Beaumont area during the pre-dawn hours and fog was reported elsewhere along the Texas coast and in the Permian Basin. Some light rain and drizzle was reported in the Hill Country.

Early morning temperatures remained unseasonably warm with readings ranging from the 40s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to about 70 in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Most of the state had readings in the 60s.

Early morning extremes ranged from 45 at Wink to 70 at Brownsville.

NATIONAL

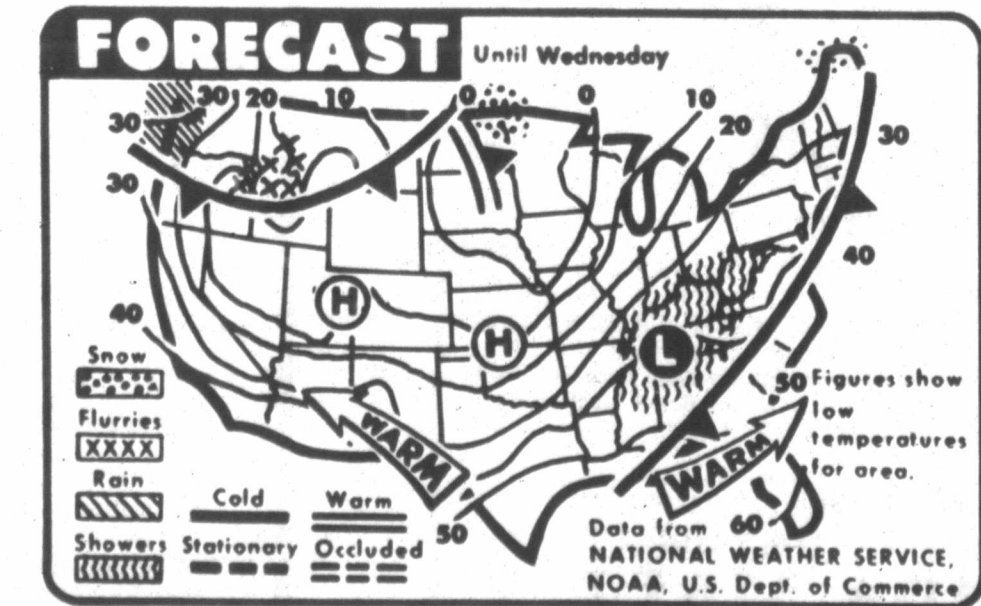

Snow cloaked the Northern Plains today from Colorado to North Dakota, with heavy accumulations reported in Montana and Wyoming.

Winter storm warnings were posted for most of Colorado, Wyoming, North Dakota and Minnesota and a winter storm watch was issued for the mountains of New Mexico.

Winds gusting to nearly 50 miles per hour combined with a mercury reading of 19 degrees at rapid City, S.D., for especially bitter conditions.

In contrast, Kansas and Missouri residents enjoyed unseasonably mild temperatures, with readings in the 60s over most of the area.

Partly cloudy skies stretched from the Lower Mississippi Valley to the Central Plains, with some scattered showers along the Northeast and along the Gulf Coast.

WARMER weather is expected for most of the nation until Wednesday morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Gold Prices

Gold soars hits new record

LONDON (AP) — Gold soared $15 to hit a record $446 an ounce in Zurich today. The dollar rose against the Japanese yen but fell in Europe.
 In London, the metal was quoted at $443.75. Gold closed Monday in Zurich at $431 and in London at $431.75.

The previous high for gold, an investor's traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty, was $444, hit in Zurich Oct. 2 amid a crisis of confidence in the dollar.

Dealers said the gold price was boosted by Iranian plans to cut oil production next year, the expectation oil producers will increase the price later this month, and a weaker dollar.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a low of 229 yen during trading today, then rose to close at 235.85. On Monday it closed at 231.25.

One foreign banker said: "Importers came into the market at the end of the day and Japanese banks were caught without dollars, creating a sudden upsurge in demand to settle commercial transactions."

In Europe the dollar dropped against foreign currencies in generally thin trading.

Morning dollar rates in Europe, compared with Monday's late rates:

Frankfurt — 1.7456 West German marks, down from 1.7514.
 Zurich — 1.6075 Swiss francs, down from 1.613.
 Paris — 4.1067 French francs, down from 4.112.
 Milan — 816.25 Italian lire, down from 817.95.

Masons choose new grand master

WACO — Sam E. Hilburn of Midland was recently installed as the new grand master of the Grand Lodge of Texas Masons during the 144th Annual Communication of the Lodge held in the Grand Lodge Temple in Waco.

In the traditional masonic fashion, Hilburn — the deputy grand master — stepped up to the highest state office a Mason can hold.

He was succeeded by Tom Land of Fort Worth who presently served as grand senior warden. Land, in turn, was followed by J. M. (Jimmy) Willson of Floydada, the former grand junior warden. The newly-elected grand junior warden is Jimmy (Buddy) Bacaus.

Under the masonic election procedures, whoever is selected grand junior warden can expect to become grand master at the end of three years after moving up one office each year.

Eleven Pampa Masons attended the conclave — all principle officers of the Pampa Lodge No. 966 and Top O' Texas Lodge No. 1381. Right Worthy Grand Masters of these lodges are Manny Holden and Bob Keller, respectively.

The new district deputy grand master for the Masonic district No. 98 is David A. Rife of 1901 Chestnut. He is deputy grand master over two lodges in Pampa, one each in Mobetie, Wheeler, Shamrock and McLean.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total revenues for the nation's nearly 6,000 radio stations climbed 15.9 percent to $2.6 billion last year, the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC said Monday that pre-tax income for the radio industry was up 26.4 percent to $311 million in 1978. The FCC said that based on annual reports submitted by the nation's radio stations, 67 percent of the AM and AM-FM operations made a profit in 1978, about the same as in the past few years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The College Board says white youths are scoring higher on the Scholastic Aptitude Test but officials add that family income is a major factor in the gap.

The statistics show that the average white student scored 449 on the verbal exam and 490 on math in 1977. The average black scored 329 on the verbal test and 355 on math. College Board official Lois Rice said Monday the higher the family income, the higher the average test score. She noted that student questionnaires show the median parental income for blacks was $10,200 compared with $22,000 for whites in 1978-79.

TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Public Utility Commission began hearings Monday on Central Power & Light Co.'s request for rate increases totaling $95 million a year.

CP&L serves 44 counties covering 44,000 square miles in the southern one-sixth of the state. It has approximately 410,000 customers in 215 communities and surrounding areas.

Commission staffers have recommended revenue increases totaling $71 million.

No witnesses were heard Monday, as all sides wanted time for negotiations that might narrow the issues for the commission to consider.

One major question — which the PUC staff has not addressed yet — is how to divide CP&L's revenue requirements among its various classes of customers.

"We don't want to hold out hope we can solve all our problems, but we can at least try," said PUC general counsel John Bell.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "Wake Up, America" — a song written by John Connally's daughter, Sharon Ammann, has been selected by Connally as his presidential campaign song.

Mrs. Ammann said she wrote the words and guitarist Judy Barber, also of Floresville, Texas, wrote the music "over a cup of coffee while the kids were tumbling around under our feet."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission gave itself an extra 30 days Monday to review a $40.9 million rate increase request by Lone Star Gas Co.

The commission said hearing examiner Glenn Johnson of the Gas Utilities Division recommended the additional time because of the size of the record and the complexity of the issues.

The commission now has until Feb. 2 to act on Lone Star's request.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission approved Monday a request by Entex, Inc. to raise rates for 40 industrial customers near 11 cities and towns in the Beaumont district.

The commission said all the customers have consented to the new rates.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jerry Johns, a spokesman for the insurance industry, said Monday that Texas state and local police are not energetic enough in enforcing the 55 mph speed limit.

"A 1979 survey by the federal government revealed that Texas has the highest average speed of any state in the nation with 59.6 mph," said a statement from Johns, president of the State Insurance Information Service Inc.

"Thus far this year 3,525 people have been killed in traffic accidents in Texas. Texas law enforcement officials could help reduce this tragic loss of life if only they would stop and ticket every driver exceeding the speed limit rather than selectively ticketing motorists at the discretion of the officer."

He said the governor of an adjoining state ordered his state troopers to stop and ticket drivers exceeding the speed limit by even one mile per hour.

"Department of Public Safety officials should publicly announce their intention to stop every driver exceeding the speed limit by as much as one mile per hour," he said. "Why should any motorist be excluded from the law just because he or she may only violate it a little?"

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton named a Select House Committee on Junior College Funding Monday to prepare recommendations for the 1981 Legislature.

He said the 10-member committee was being asked specifically to determine how current funding formulas need to be adjusted to meet costs, the problems of small taxing districts and small enrollments and how to deal with declining as well as fast-growing enrollments.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, was named chairman. House members on the committee include Reps. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville; Tom Uher, D-Bay City; Billy Hall, D-Laredo; and Erwin Barton, D-Pasadena.

Private citizens named to the committee were Marvin Baker, Levelland; Tony Bonilla, Corpus Christi; H.J. Shands Jr., Lufkin; Dr. Jerome Weynand, San Antonio; and Dr. A.G. Langford, Midland.

HOUSTON (AP) — Five weekend murders raised Houston's 1979 total to 596.

There had been 416 adult murders the same period last year, when Houston recorded a record 464 for the year.

DALLAS (AP) — After five weeks of testimony a federal court jury Monday found John H. Murfin guilty of failing to file tax returns for three years, a month after his wife was convicted and sentenced for the same offense.

Murfin, of Richardson, had claimed he was not required to file returns for 1974, 1975 and 1976 because his income for those years was in the form of Federal Reserve Notes, which he said were not money for tax purposes.

U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes will pronounce formal sentence Jan. 11. Maximum penalty is one year in jail and a $10,000 fine on each count, plus the cost of prosecution.

Murfin's wife, Jean, was convicted in November of failing to file tax returns for the same three years and was sentenced to six months in prison, plus three years probation.

Agriculture Department report shows

Japan open market 'mind-boggling'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility that Japan, already the leading customer of U.S. farmers, some day could be a completely open market raises "mind-boggling" possibilities, says an Agriculture Department report.

Japan recently made a number of concessions to the United States in multilateral trade negotiations that have helped open the door wider to a number of U.S. goods, including beef, citrus products, poultry and protein concentrates, the report said.

"It has been estimated that the quota increases alone could boost annual import value (of beef, oranges and citrus juices) by nearly $125 million in 1983 when the increases will have been fully implemented," it said.

The report, in a new issue of "Foreign Agriculture" released on Monday, was written by Beverly Horsley of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Japan, for many years, has been the leading foreign buyer of U.S. agricultural products. In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, those purchases total about $5.1 billion and are expected to rise to another record in 1979-80 of $5.3 billion.

In other words, of an estimated $38 billion in farm exports predicted for this fiscal year, Japan will buy about 14 percent of the total.

Ms. Horsley said that in addition to liberalized trade policies, there has been "continuing growth in demand" for food products such as beef in Japan, where per capita consumption is low compared with that of most developed countries.

"Still another is the economic advantage enjoyed by U.S. producers in a market where cost factors for raw materials — and now increasingly for labor — favor them over Japanese and other suppliers," the report said.

The big U.S. items in the Japanese market still are wheat and flour, feedgrains, soybeans, cotton, livestock products and fruits and fruit preparations.

In a recent interview with John S. Beshear, U.S. agricultural attache in Tokyo, Ms. Horsley said Japan is an even greater potential market for American beef.

Japanese consumers eat an average of about 10.1 pounds, compared to about 123 pounds per person in the United States last year, the report said.

Beshear said that "prices like the $31 per kilogram recently charged for boneless sirloin steak in Tokyo still suppress demand" but that marketing factors and consumer pressures could help reduce prices in the future.

"The publicity surrounding our negotiations last year on beef, where we were pressing for access and the (Japanese) producers were resisting because they felt this would harm their interests, got a lot of Japanese interested in trying high-quality beef," Beshear was quoted as saying.

"And it sensitized people to the fact that they are paying an incredible price for beef."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 1.49 million metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery through next Sept. 30.

Also, officials said Monday, China has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of corn for delivery in 1979-80. The order had been designated by the exporter for the Soviet Union but was switched to China.

Orders of U.S. grain by China for 1979-80 now include more than 1.1 million metric tons of wheat, 734,000 of corn and 427,000 of soybeans.

The Soviet Union's grain orders now total nearly 14.2 million metric tons, including more than 4.4 million of wheat and 9.7 million of corn. Its orders also include more than 1.1 million metric tons of soybeans.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says Japan is buying some of its rice wine — sake — from the United States.

A report Monday said Japan is finding it cheaper to import some processed items from the United States than to bother with the raw materials.

"The country, for instance, has a five-million-ton rice surplus but still imports rice in one form — sake," it said.

The report quoted John S. Beshear, U.S. agricultural attache in Tokyo, about the sake situation.

"One California company is exporting sake to Japan and still another is lining up a joint venture in the United States," the report said.

William T. Coyle, a Japanese trade specialist in the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, told a reporter he had no solid figures to show how much U.S. sake is being sent to Japan but that the amount probably "is not real significant" at this point.

Coyle said, however, that there is considerable economic attraction in Japan for American sake and, particularly, a joint venture in this country for its manufacture.

Parmesan tickles both palates and pocketbooks

PARMA, Italy (AP) — It's been a rough season for Parmesan cheese makers. Competitors are marketing a successful imitation, consumers are rebelling because of rising prices and the "Cheese Gang" steals regularly from the cavernous cheese storerooms.

Scarcely a week goes by without a nighttime raid by trucks driven out of the fog-shrouded plains surrounding Parma, police say.

The prize is Parmigiano Reggiano, commonly called Parmesan, the costly cheese which has tickled people's palates since Roman Days.

Because of the insatiable appetite of most Italians for grated cheese on their spaghetti, Parmesan — fetching as much as $8 a pound — has developed into a billion-dollar business in Italy.

Banking on that appetite, speculators buy up stocks of the cheese while it's still maturing. Then, after the mandatory maturation period of 18-24 months, the speculators cash in for huge profits.

Trying to beat the middlemen, imitators outside the circumscribed production area of Parma, Modena, Reggio Emilia and Mantua have created an inexpensive look-alike cheese called Grana Padana. It matures faster than Parmesan by using chemicals rather than the enzymes from the linings of calves' stomachs.

In the past two years, converted cheese factories in 27 provinces up and down the Italian boot have been churning out the new Grana.

But thieves are also after a piece of the curd, hijacking trailer trucks or rolling the wheels of cheese out of the depositories with the complicity of "insiders," police say.

One typical night raid occurred last month, at the end of the April-November Parmesan production season, when thieves stole a big milk rig as driver Bruno Grassi ducked into a roadside men's room.

They dumped the load of milk cartons, drove the truck past electronic surveillance into the Consorzio Agrario storeroom and loaded more than 300 wheels of Parmesan, each weighing 77 pounds, in a couple of hours.

Their haul was worth more than $100,000.

"The next day it probably was already on the grocery shelves, retailing at high prices," lamented Lorenzo Cattabiani, secretary of the Parmigiano Reggiano Association. "The product is as good as gold, and thieves always find fences for their loot."

More damaging than the weekly robberies has been a recent consumer rebellion against escalating Parmesan prices. Since 1974, retail prices have tripled from about $2.40 a pound to almost $8.

Many Italians switched from Parmesan to Grana, and as a result 45 percent of the 1978 production — maturing for retail in 1980 — lies unsold in the storerooms. Parmesan thus earned the distinction of being one of the only food staples to drop in price.

The concern of the Parmese these days is how to get Italians and foreigners munching on Parmesan again.

Texas farm workers placed on back burner

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — There can be no major United Farm Workers Union effort to organize Texas farm laborers until the UFW completes numerous labor battles still being fought in California, says union leader Cesar Chavez.

"Once we get our battles consolidated in California, we can concentrate on Texas," the UFW president said here Monday in the first stop of a five-day swing through Texas.

"We can't be effective in two places. All of our resources now are committed to California. We've never been able to come down with all our might in Texas," he added in an interview.

Chavez, 52, said the UFW is engaged in seven strikes in California with 13 companies that have not signed union contracts. Chavez' trip to Texas is aimed at promoting the UFW's 11-month-old California lettuce strike.

Chavez' final stop will be Friday in San Juan, where he will inspect the labor situation among farm workers in the Rio Grande Valley.

Valley growers have headed off organizing efforts by the Texas UFW and the Texas Farm Workers Union. The UFW's most concerted effort was a major strike attempt in 1966 that ended in violence.

Antonio Orendain, once a Chavez lieutenant who split with the California UFW, formed the thus far ineffective TFW. Orendain's group has also failed in attempts to secure a state law guaranteeing the farm workers' right to collective bargaining.

When the powerful UFW is finally able to concentrate on Texas, Chavez said it would do so in direct competition with Orendain's group.

"It will make it more difficult for the organizations, but it will be good for the workers. The organizations will have to compete for the workers' loyalty and work harder to get the best contracts," said Chavez.

Chavez said he didn't think such competition would prevent the UFW's effort.

Texas, unlike California, is a right-to-work state, meaning union membership cannot be required as a condition of employment.

Texas man killed in kidnap spree

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — A 25-year-old man abducted in Louisiana is dead and a suspect is under arrest following a three-state kidnaping spree that began with a bungled burglary in Texas, authorities say.

A second hostage, the dead man's girlfriend, was rescued late Monday night.

"She watched him shoot him," said police Capt. John Baker of Vicksburg. "She's not in any shape to tell us anything right now."

Police said the gunman, who kidnaped a Texas man earlier in the evening, abducted Michael Wayne Hardaway and Cynthia Baxter, 19, as they left a Bossier City, La., restaurant.

The Texas man, Jim Rogers, 47, escaped, and the gunman forced the young couple to drive him toward Mississippi.

Not long after that, Hardaway was shot in the chest and killed, police said. His body was dumped at a car wash near Delhi, La.

Baker said a roadblock was set near Vicksburg and the suspect was trapped between Louisiana authorities coming up behind him and Mississippi authorities waiting in front.

Baker said Miss Baxter was not harmed. "We did get the hostage without any gunfire," he said.

The suspect was identified as Jodie Ray Craig, 22, of Rusk County, Texas.

Authorities said the chain of events began Monday evening near Tyler, Texas, in Smith County.

J.B. Smith, sheriff of Smith County, said the chain of events began at a house near an interstate highway at Tyler, Texas.

"We had a citizen close to 1-20 who came home and surprised a burglar," said Sheriff Smith.

"The burglar took the man hostage leaving, took the hostage's car and proceeded to the Louisiana area."

DARNELL HILLMAN of the Golden State Warriors puts up the ball as Tom Boswell of the Utah Jazz defends Monday night at the Salt Palace in Salt Lake City. The Jazz won, 100-93.

(AP Laserphoto)

Last place Jazz defeat Warriors

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Jazz Coach Tom Nissalke says his team has "more overall balance" now than it did at the start of the season.

To prove it, he points with pride to his 5-2 record since some recent key personnel adjustments, including Monday night's 100-93 triumph over Golden State.

The game was the only National Basketball Association regular-season contest of the night. In the Hall of Fame Game in Springfield, Mass., the Kansas City Kings edged the Atlanta Hawks 100-98.

Winning five of seven games may not sound impressive, but it's a considerable improvement for the Jazz, which lost 19 of its first 21 and is now 7-21.

The Jazz is still in last place in the NBA's Midwest Division, but Monday's victory, the third straight for Utah, indicates there may be brighter days ahead for Nissalke and his crew.

Three recently acquired players, Terry Furlow, Mack Calvin and Tom Boswell, were key factors in Monday's victory, coming off the bench to score 16, 11 and 10 points respectively.

But the spotlight belonged once again to Utah's Adrian Dantley, who drove, twisted and jumped his way to 39 points to lead all scorers.

Wayne Cooper was the top point producer for Golden State, with 22 points. He had help from John Lucas, who finished with 19, and 7-foot Robert Parish, who had 17.

After being down 49-47 at the half, despite a 25-point first-half show by Dantley, the Jazz came back to move ahead 70-68 after three quarters.

Furlow scored 10 of his total in the fourth period as Utah pulled away by 14 at one point before the Warriors managed to trim the margin in the final minute.

Kings 100, Hawks 98

Otis Birdsong scored on a layup and then hit a free throw with 58 seconds to go, clinching Kansas City's victory over Atlanta in the Hall of Fame exhibition game. Birdsong's points provided the Kings with a 100-96 lead and their eventual winning points.

After Kansas City took a 52-51 halftime lead, Phil Ford scored 15 of his game-high 21 points in the second half to keep the Kings ahead. Steve Hawes' two free throws with 1:13 remaining brought the Hawks to within one point, at 97-96, before Birdsong sewed it up for Kansas City.

Birdsong scored 16 points overall, the same as Atlanta high-scorer, Eddie Johnson.

McGuire suffers worst defeat

Frank McGuire spent 16 years building up the South Carolina basketball program...and Joe Hall's Kentucky team tried to shoot it down in one night.

"That's the highest score ever made against one of my teams and the worst defeat I've ever experienced," said McGuire, a bit stunned after Monday night's 126-81 rout by fifth-ranked Kentucky.

"We tried everything, but you can't use a zone against Kentucky," McGuire added. "Kyle Macy (who scored 24 points for Kentucky) is just too good a shooter. He couldn't miss. Joe used everybody, and those guys coming off the bench are good."

The 126 points is the most ever scored by Kentucky in a home game and is exceeded only by the 143 rung up by the Wildcats in a 1956 romp over Georgia. Included among Kentucky's fancy figures Monday night was a brilliant 28-of-34 shooting from the free-throw line.

Third-ranked Ohio State and No. 11 DePaul were the only other ranked teams in action Monday night, and both were successful, as the Buckeyes beat West Virginia 72-55 and the Blue Demons defeated Texas 66-60.

Forward Jim Smith scored 17 points as Ohio State whipped West Virginia in a rough game marked by 49 fouls. The Buckeyes jumped out to an early lead and were never threatened.

The Buckeyes led 33-23 at halftime, but it would have been closer had the Mountaineers shot better than their pathetic 17.6 percent.

Tickets still on sale

Oklahoma State head coach Jimmy Johnson, who will speak at the annual Pampa High School football banquet Thursday night, was rewarded last week for leading the Cowboys to a third-place finish in the Big Eight Conference.

Johnson, who is in his first year at the Stillwater school, had his salary increased by $4,136 to make his yearly pay $41,616.

The Cowboys compiled a 5-2 league record to tie for the all-time best mark in OSU's conference history. Overall, the Cowboys were 7-4.

The banquet will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium. Tickets are five dollars apiece and may be purchased at the high school athletic office, Citizens Bank, or from Harvester Booster Club president John McGuire.

Officers election

Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club will meet to elect officers at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Rodeo indoor range.

Club official Fran Gross said annual dues should be paid Thursday night, and all members are urged to be present to determine next year's activities.

The club will also host a Hunter's Metallic Silhouette Tournament at 1 p.m. Sunday at the outdoor range 6 miles west of Pampa on 23rd Street.

Awards for the NRA-sanctioned match will have classes in AAA, AA, A, B, and unclassified. Separate classes for men and women are planned.

The match will consist of 40 shots, 10 fired at chicken targets at 25 meters, 10 at pig targets at 40 meters, 10 at turkeys at 75 meters, and 10 at rams at 100 meters. Each target knocked down counts one point, while a miss is zero.

Nadia goes home

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Nadia Comaneci, the Romanian gymnast who made headlines by not winning a world gymnastic championship because of an infected left hand, departed the United States for home Monday.

The 1976 Olympic champion withdrew from the 1979 World Gymnastics Championships here, because of what doctors described as an infected hair follicle that required surgery.

She left All Saints Episcopal Hospital before dawn to catch the team flight back to Europe, despite advice from U.S. doctors that she stay in the hospital for a few more days to let the injury heal.

Crazy clauses hamper trades

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP special correspondent

TORONTO (AP) — The annual baseball meetings are now history. The moguls labored and produced a mouse. They wound up virtually exchanging bubble gum cards but not too much real live flesh.

Fizz, fizz, pop, pop. The old talent-swapping bazaar — once the exciting highlight of the hot stove season — ain't what she used to be.

"It's not the dollar marks any more, it's all those crazy clauses down in the small type of the contracts that's botching up the trades," commented Sparky Anderson, the silver-thatched shaper of world champion teams at Cincinnati now plotting another empire with Detroit's kiddie corps.

"You wouldn't believe some of the conditions that these guys, with the help of their agents, get incorporated into these agreements."

Oh, yes, we would, Sparky.

Take Rico Carty, the Toronto infielder. His contract includes 32 pages, provoking teammates to kid, "Hey, Rico, you can't carry that around in your hip pocket."

Rico doesn't talk about the details. Neither does his agent. The club similarly respects his privacy. But it has leaked out that among Carty's provisions are that he be allowed to play winter ball, serve as a scout in the Dominican Republic in the off-season, drive a private limousine (Is it really a Mercedes?) and always get a king-sized bed on the road.

Since free agency came along and ball players feel naked without an agent or a lawyer at their elbow, such provisions have become commonplace.

The society word for them are "special covenants."

More than exorbitant salary demands, these little legalistic jewels stuck at the end of agreements are the bane of club owners and general managers.

M. Donald Grant, the New York Mets former chairman of the board, reportedly unloaded hard-hitting Rusty Staub because Rusty insisted that so many of his unusual demands be agreed to in writing.

For instance, it's said he refused airplane flights to fields without certain-sized runways and insisted on a 30-minute break before game time for personal preparation. This upset normal batting and infield practice.

Doc Medich of the Texas Rangers has a clause which will elevate him to team doctor when his pitching days are over.

Questions & Answers

Q. Can you please settle a hotly contested argument? I claim a starting lineman in the NFL makes about $100,000 a year. My friend says $50,000 a year. Who's right? — Steve Riehl, R. F. Haydel, Sacramento, Calif.

The overall average for offensive linemen in the NFL is $60,241 annually, based on a 1978 survey. The highest-paid individual offensive lineman in the league gets $173,966. The average second-year man gets $45,220; the six-year linemen peak at $76,311.

Q. If the New York Giants left New York for New Jersey, why aren't they called the New Jersey Giants? If the Rams move to Anaheim and the Colts move to Jacksonville, will they be the Anaheim Rams and the Jacksonville Colts? — Flint Holly, Deland, Fla.

They should be the N.J. Giants, just as they should be the Bloomington (Minn.) Vikings, the Pontiac (Mich.) Lions and the Irving (Texas) Cowboys. And I don't think the Colts will be moving to Jacksonville, Fla.

Q. How many records did Jesse Owens and Wilma Rudolph set in the Olympic Games? — Todd Grimes, Carolina, R.I.

In the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, Owens tied the 100-meter mark at 10.3 seconds, set a new record of 20.7 in the 200, stretched the long jump standard to 26 feet, 5 5/16 inches, and anchored a record-breaking 400-meter relay in 39.8 seconds. Rudolph's lone record effort in 1960 was 11.0 seconds in the 100 meters, a women's Olympic mark that still stands. All of Owens' efforts have been exceeded.

Oilers hold off Steelers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, following sage advice, declined to spit into the wind or step on Superman's cape Monday night.

Having come within one second of defeating the world champion Pittsburgh Steelers, Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini politely fell on the ball for the final play of the game at the Steeler one-yard line and the Oilers trotted into the dressing room with a 20-17 victory.

The Oilers had better sense and sportsmanship than to rub the Steelers noses in the Astroturf.

"Pittsburgh is too good a team to rub their noses in a loss," Oiler Coach Bum Phillips said.

"If the touchdown would have made a difference in the division championship, we could have scored," Pastorini said. "We weren't trying to rub their faces in it."

The Oilers had accomplished their goal. They kept the Steelers from clinching their sixth straight American Football Conference Central Division championship and kept alive their own chances of claiming a title for the first time since 1967.

"After the way we lost to them the first time we played this year we had to be a little psyched up," Pastorini said. "So we just went out and got a little sweet revenge."

The Oilers, who lost to the Steelers 34-5 in last season's AFC championship game and 39-7 in their first meeting this season, clearly were ready for the challenge this game.

Houston held the Steelers to four first downs and took a 7-0 halftime lead on a 25-yard pass from Pastorini to Ken Burrough. They went ahead 13-3 on field goals of 24 yards and 34 yards by Toni Fritsch in the third and fourth quarters.

The record crowd of 55,293 in the Astrodome and a national television audience kept waiting for the sleeping giant Steelers to wake up and they finally did.

Matt Bahr kicked a 37 yard field goal in the third quarter and Lynn Swann ran nine yards for a touchdown on an end around play that narrowed the Oiler lead to 13-10.

But the Oilers didn't fold. Rob Carpenter ran four yards with 2:10 to play to boost the lead to 20-10 for what proved to be the winning margin.

Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw whipped the Steelers to the game's final touchdown with a 34-yard bomb to John Stallworth with 1:18 left in the game. But the Steelers tried an on-sides kick that found its way to Oiler tight end Mike Barber.

"They took that damn football and ran it down our throats for five minutes and scored a touchdown," Steeler defensive tackle Joe Greene said of Carpenter's touchdown. "That was as disappointing as anything that happened and they did it the way they weren't supposed to."

The Oilers weren't supposed to be able to run on the Steelers but that's where Oiler running back Earl Campbell came into the picture with 109 yards on 33 carries, his first 100-yard performance ever against the Steelers.

The Oiler performance brought words of praise from Steeler Coach Chuck Noll.

"I thought the Houston Oilers played the best game I have ever seen them play," Noll said. "I'd like to play Houston every week of the season. That would be interesting, wouldn't it?"

Following Bradshaw's 34-yard touchdown to Stallworth, the Steelers tried an on-sides kick and Bradshaw couldn't wait to get on the field.

"We had them right where we wanted them," Bradshaw said. "They couldn't play us tight. I had it all planned. We were going to go for the field goal."

Bradshaw took the blame for the loss. "I haven't been playing as well in the big games as I should," he said.

It was suggested to Brazile that Bradshaw, recovering from a sprained wrist, was not throwing as well as usual.

"I don't know," Brazile quipped, "he threw me a perfect strike."

Drake cager honored

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Drake basketball Coach Bob Ortegel labeled Lewis Lloyd quickly as an exciting basketball player after he transferred from New Mexico Military Academy.

Lloyd proved his coach's prediction true in the first four games of the season and Monday was named Missouri Valley Conference player of the week.

The 6-foot-6, 215-pound junior, leads the Valley in scoring with a 31.7-point average, rebounding with 13.5 and field goal percentage with 71.

While leading Drake to a 4-0 start for the season, the Philadelphia native has equalled last year's individual season best on the squad for blocked shots with 12, and his eight steals lead the team.

In his first outing on a major college team, Lloyd hit 14 of 18 field goal attempts while scoring 33 points and grabbing nine rebounds as Drake defeated Nebraska-Omaha 104-90. He had 25 points and 13 rebounds against Missouri-Kansas City, 37 points and 17 rebounds against Oral Roberts and 32 points and 15 rebounds against Iowa State.

Aggies victorious

When the Texas Aggies lost to tiny Iona and cross-state rival Lamar in a basketball tournament in Alaska, people were beginning to wonder what was wrong with the Aggies, the pre-season favorite to win the Southwest Conference basketball crown.

Vernon Smith, who was suspended for three games because of participating in an unauthorized summer league and was not in the lineup for the two tournament losses, is back and no one's wondering about the Aggies. Just ask Sam Houston State's basketball team.

Smith and teammate Rynn Wright combined for 31 points to lead the Aggies to an easy 71-47 non-conference victory over the Bearkats Monday night. It was the first loss for the Lone Star Conference team after six victories and boosted the Aggies, who were once 0-2, to 5-2.

Overall, the conference wound up the night Monday with a 3-3 record against non-conference foes.

Texas Tech beat Air Force, 58-54, and Arkansas beat Athletes in Action, 68-67, in overtime for the other victories.

Texas dropped a 66-60 decision to DePaul, Tulane edged Rice, 56-53, and Illinois beat Texas Christian, 79-64, to account for the three losses.

Two games are to be played tonight. McMurry takes on Baylor at Waco and Houston hosts Texas Lutheran.

Ben Hill had 15 points, including a go-ahead slam dunk with five seconds remaining at Texas Tech beat the Air Force, 58-54. Kent Williams had 12 points each to help the Red Raiders. Rick Harris had 15 for Air Force.

Texas managed to keep close to DePaul in the first half.

Fighting Irish of 1966

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1966 the Notre Dame football team won a national title and played an historic 10-0 tie against Michigan State. The squad had 29 players drafted by the National Football League. But as the years passed, the members of that Fighting Irish team went their separate ways. This story, the first of a five-part series, explores the mood on the Notre Dame campus in 1966.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Lyndon Johnson was in the White House and Ara Parseghian was at the Golden Dome. All was right on the Notre Dame campus.

It was 1966 and for one glorious year, an undefeated football team helped Notre Dame avoid the student stridency and Vietnam War passions that were turning other schools into battlefields.

"We were caught in the middle, between the romantic Kennedy years and the war years," halfback Dan Harshman recalls. "It was a very unusual situation."

That year, the battleground at Notre Dame was the football field. In South Bend, Ind., Saturday was as much a religious day as Sunday and the pursuit of the national championship was a crusade for the entire student body. With no separate athletic dorms, students and athletes shared their lives, ideas, good times and the dream of a final No. 1 ranking.

"Whether we could beat USC or not was the big issue on campus," says quarterback Terry Hanratty, who was in high school in 1964 when the undefeated Fighting Irish blew a 17-0 lead to Southern California and lost the national championship in their final game of the season.

The Irish did beat Southern California in '66. They wiped out the Trojans 51-0 in Los Angeles to end a 9-0-1 season that gave Notre Dame The Associated Press college football crown.

But that team is not best remembered for the national title or the nine games it won, nor for the army of players it sent into the pros. That team went down in history for the one game it didn't win — a 10-10 tie against Michigan State, a deadlock that has as much right to be called "The Game of the Decade" as any other.

"It was the best of times and the worst of times," says Jim Lynch, the Notre Dame captain who later starred with the Kansas City Chiefs. "The season was something special, but the tie was so frustrating. We came back from a 10-0 deficit, and I'm very proud of that. But when the dust settled, the game hadn't proven anything."

In his own way, Lynch represented the old order.

"I'm a conservative, a traditionalist," he said. "I was on campus when we had party raids. Then, when I was a senior I remember a few freshmen coming in with long hair. I didn't know anybody who knew anybody who had marijuana. It was the lull before the storm."

"We had the same issues in 1966 that we had in 1955 — curfews and girls in the rooms. A new issue in my senior year was girl cheerleaders. I thought the student body should have a say. There were buttons that said: 'Better Dead than Co-ed.' We voted it down."

Notre Dame was, and still is, a relatively conservative school.

"We didn't have many radical students. The school was very middle class," said quarterback Coley O'Brien, who later became a lawyer and worked in Sen. George McGovern's unsuccessful presidential campaign.

For some, the white, middle class nature of the school has meant less than fond memories of that championship year. "The school was not very integrated. There were maybe two other minority ballplayers," says defensive lineman Alan Page, a lawyer when he isn't playing for the Chicago Bears. "As people, we were living in our own little football world without much of a social conscience."

"The fact that I was in a school that had 25-30 minority students had an impact on my memories," he says. "That's why they're not as fond as some others. I really didn't have much of a social life."

Page is an exception. Of the 40 players and coaches recently interviewed by The Associated Press, nearly all of them recalled their time in South Bend, particularly the '66 season, as some of the best years of their lives.

"It was my most memorable time in 20 years of competitive football," says offensive lineman Paul Seiler, a real estate salesman whose home in Old Station, Calif. has become a religious retreat.

"It was my Super Bowl," recalls linebacker John Pergine, a sales representative for a company near Philadelphia that sells parts for refining furnaces.

"The team had the classiest bunch of guys I've ever been around," says offensive lineman George Kunz, who ended his professional football career last year and now is a commentator for NBC.

And to some of the players, they were THE best years of their lives.

Perhaps it is somewhat sad to think of the ages 18-21 as the peak years of one's life. But Notre Dame-quality athletes are tops in their field. And when you've had the spotlight and won the Academy Award, it isn't easy to let the stage go dark.

"The hardest adjustment I had was coming off the magic carpet ride," says offensive lineman George Goeddeke, now an investment appraiser in Detroit. "Where do you go from winning the national championship and then playing pro football? Believe me I enjoy what I'm doing. I'm not despondent. But I've never found total satisfaction, and I'm afraid I never will."

For one player, whose identity is being withheld at the request of his family, the Notre Dame football memories are what keeps him going. The player has spent much time during the intervening years in public mental health institutions for psychological problems that never appeared during college but, according to his psychiatrists, are deep-seated and family-related.

According to his guardian, the player will never be able to work for a living, have a family or a semblance of a normal life. "But his most real, solid memory is that he was part of that Notre Dame team," the guardian said. "He talks about it all the time."

Hayes speaks

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Woody Hayes, a legendary football coach while at Ohio State, says there is a movement underway to reinstate him.

He made the tongue-in-cheek comment to more than 400 persons at Monday's Pro Football Hall of Fame Club luncheon meeting here.

"I hear there is a movement to get me back at Ohio State," he said. He paused for a few seconds, then added, "The only trouble with that movement is that it's all in Michigan."

Hayes noted that his successor at Ohio State, Earle Bruce, coached in 1964 and 1965 at nearby Massillon and that his teams had 10-0-0 records both years.

East title up for grabs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coach Jack Pardee likes the idea of having the NFC East title decided on the final weekend of the season in a game between arch-rivals Washington and Dallas.

Asked for his thoughts on the game Monday, the Redskins coach replied: "Before the season no one had any reason to think that the 16th week of the season would determine our divisional winner, whether ourselves or Dallas."

"I thought we would have a good shot at making the playoffs but I really didn't think anybody could beat them (for the division title) with Dallas being a Super Bowl team last year. I thought they would have the division wrapped up by now."

"But the way it's falling, with them having problems, and us playing a little better than most people thought, it makes it a little bigger and better."

"We still have our destiny in our hands," he said. "It's ours if we're good enough."

The Redskins, Cowboys and Philadelphia, each with 10-5 records, are in a three-way tie for National Football Conference East Division title but only Dallas and the Eagles have been assured at least a wild card playoff berth. Because of the rules, the winner of the Dallas-Washington game will be declared the division champion, no matter what Philadelphia does against Houston.

Several things can happen to Washington in Dallas, ranging from winning the division title to being eliminated from post-season play.

"We'll have a good week," said Pardee. "The emotional level of the team has been pretty good all along. It picked up after Dallas beat Philadelphia in that Saturday game. They were riding high in Saturday night's meetings. The whole team was loose enough but I could tell they were ready."

As for the outcome of the Dallas game, Pardee said, "As far as we're concerned, it would be easier to win this one on the road than have to play three times on the road."

He was referring, of course, to the fact that the division champion gets the home field advantage while wild card teams must play all their games on the road.

Texas sports at a glance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Longhorns got back to work on the football practice field Monday, preparing for their Dec. 22 date in El Paso against Washington in the Sun Bowl.

"We're not as rusty as I thought we'd be," said coach Fred Akers after the 90-minute drill. "They (the players) didn't forget everything."

Two players are still nursing injuries suffered in Texas' 13-7 upset by Texas A&M at the end of the regular season. Defensive tackle Steve Massey has a sprained ankle and linebacker Conny Hatch a hamstring pull.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Tornado on Monday drafted high school student David James, 16, the youngest U.S. athlete ever drafted by a U.S. professional sports team, according to Tornado officials.

James, of Richardson, a Dallas suburb, was eligible for the North American Soccer League draft since he participated in an accelerated scholastic program and is to graduate from high school this spring, said Tornado public relations director Thom Meredith.

NASL rules, however, prohibit the Tornado from talking contract with James until he actually graduates.

"James is an excellent athlete, very intelligent and has all the tools to be a great pro and great defender," said Tornado head coach Al Miller.

James has participated in youth tournaments in Canada and Mexico.

Miami girls take title

MIAMI—Unbeaten Miami girls swept past Gruver, 60-46, Saturday in the championship finals of the Miami Tournament.

The Warriorettes, 10-0, were led in scoring by Susan Bean with 25 points. Karla Stone and Tracy Klansek netted 12 and 11 points respectively. Carla Daughterty added 7, Debbie Bass and Sherry McCullough, two each, and Brenda McCullough, 1.

Gruver blasted Miami, 93-62, in the finals of the boys division.

Gruver's scoring assault was led by Bruce Ammons with 33 points.

Ron Francis was Miami's top scorer with 27 points. Robbie Graham added 10, Brad Billingsley, 7, Kevin Jenkins, 4, David Haws, Darrell Dodson, Jason Klansek, Bill Burgoon, Tony Hamby, Steve Bright, and Keith Gray, 2 points each.

Halftime score was 52-31, Gruver's favor.

In the third-place game, Canadian routed Claude, 70-42, behind Craig Young's 23 points. Terrel Hardin and Bear Schafer helped out with 12 points each.

Jason Cartwright led the losers with 20 points.

Sabres clip Red Wings

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — While declaring that he had "very few tough saves" in Monday night's 4-0 Buffalo victory over the Detroit Red Wings, Sabres goalie Don Edwards is still happy to have recorded his first National Hockey League shutout of the season.

"It was a long time coming," he said, after the red-hot Sabres grabbed their eighth straight win — their 11th in 12 games. "I had a couple of one-goal games. But the truth is, I hardly did anything tonight."

It was the only NHL game played Monday night, and Coach Scotty Bowman's 900th game as an NHL coach as well.

Rick Martin scored twice for the Sabres, who brought a six-game Detroit unbeaten streak to a screeching halt.

"We didn't skate. We didn't hit. We didn't move the puck," moaned Red Wings Coach Bobby Kromm afterwards. "But you have to give Buffalo credit. They were on top of us all night."

Edwards was called on for only 14 saves, while the Sabres were putting 31 shots on Rogie Vachon. It was Edwards' 10th NHL shutout.

Buffalo went ahead early in the first period on Martin's 16th goal of the season.

Pampa eighth grade wins, but freshmen lose Monday games

CANYON—Pampa's eighth grade Red team turned in a strong defensive game to defeat Canyon White, 36-19, Monday in junior high basketball activity.

Coyle Winborn was Pampa's top scorer with 14 points while Charles Fite led Canyon with 6.

"Canyon White is a very good team," said Pampa Coach Al Clark. "They are very well-coached by coach Solis."

Clark said the key to victory was a good defense by his team. The Reds also scored several fast break baskets to help the cause.

Pampa Red meets Borger Red for the third time this season Monday in the junior high gym. Gametime is 4:30 p.m.

Dumas defeated Pampa Blue, 45-37, last night in the ninth grade game. Devin Cross was top scorer for Pampa with 17 points.

From Lubbock to Thailand

A Lubbock doctor, Dr. Barbara Murray, is one of the American doctors aiding Cambodians at a refugee camp in Sa Kaew, Thailand. She takes head-count in a field hospital that has over 100 refugees in the small tent. Although she speaks no Cambodian, she uses an interpreter to make diagnoses for patients in her tent. Murray has no facilities for major surgery, but can perform minor surgery, such as removing parasites from an open wound with a pair of forceps.

Story of a star

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "Hey," said the barber. "You've been there a couple of times: has anything good ever come out of Iran?"

"Caviar," I told him.

"Hate the stuff," he rasped. From the brisk way he massaged my scalp he didn't have to tell me, but he did, that he had had it up to here with the Ayatollah.

So had the fellow in the men's shop, where I bought a wool ski cap to replace the genuine Persian lamb hat a friend's dog had chomped into.

"Why don't they send all those Iranians back on the Kitty Hawk?" asked the haberdasher. He had a tale of woe about two Iranian students "or Arabs or something" who had stuck him with a hot check for a couple of shirts.

Back home the gloomy international outlook persisted. The TV news film from Iran, with the students flogging themselves with chains and parading before the captive U.S. embassy with chants of "Kill Carter" and "Death to the Hostage Spies," was a real-life remake of Big Brother's "Hate Week" in George Orwell's chilling novel "1984."

Then from out of nowhere in the flickering shadows cast by the TV screen came other voices from other rooms.

"Where did the Wise Men come from?" a little girl asked.

"From the East," my wife told her.

"Where in the East? New Jersey? My grandmother lives in New Jersey..."

The weekly religion class was in session, five 7-year-olds in search of truth along the path to their first Holy Communion. Now with Christmas at hand and the creche figures spread out before them on the family room rug, they were learning the story of the Nativity.

"Far from New Jersey," my wife took the question seriously as she always does with those serious theologians. "Probably from Persia, although we don't know for sure..."

"Where's Persia?" a little boy asked in the same earnest voice he uses to inquire if there are any cookies left.

"They call it Iran now. You hear about it on television every evening on the news..."

I wanted to get on the phone and let the barber and the haberdasher know that something good once did come out of Iran, that they even had Wise Men there long ago.

TOKYO (AP) — Cambodia's deposed prime minister, Pol Pot, is alive and appears in good health, according to Japanese reporters who met and talked with him for four hours near Cambodia's border with Thailand. Japan's Kyodo news service said today.

It said the meeting Saturday was the first time Pol Pot was seen by foreign reporters since Vietnamese invaders overthrown his government 11 months ago and replaced it with a pro-Hanoi regime headed by Cambodian communist Heng Samrin. Pol Pot's deputy, Ieng Sary, also was at the meeting, Kyodosaid.

Pol Pot claimed to have 50,000 troops under his command. "We have a complete network of contacts linking the east, central and west" of Cambodia, he said of his guerrilla army. "If a certain place is attacked, then we resort to the offensive in another place to keep enemy forces stationary."

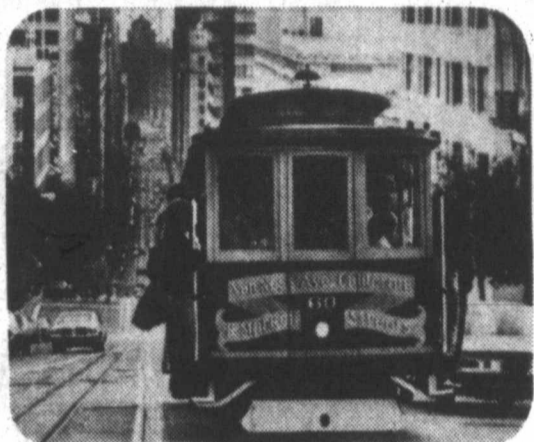

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia has purchased two squadrons of McDonnell Douglas A-4 Skyhawks from the United States. The defense minister, Gen. Mohammad Jusuf, said the 32 planes would arrive next year.

The air force chief of staff, Ashadi Tjahjadi, said Saturday the planes were paid for in cash but he did not give figures.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian army was called out and a guard ordered today in parts of northeastern Assam, where a mass movement has been mounted by the Hindu majority to protest the alleged influx of Moslem Bangladesh immigrants, the United News of India reported.

The Hindus claim tens of thousands of Bangladesh Moslems have crossed the border to register as voters in the January general election. Indian Moslems, who have a sizable minority in Assam, traditionally have given support to former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's party.

FOCUS

A City That Grew

Old-fashioned cable cars clanging up steep hills are still a familiar sight in San Francisco, one of America's most colorful cities. In 1848, San Francisco had only 200 houses and a population of 820. But the California Gold Rush, the completion of the transcontinental railroad, and trade flowing into the city's large natural harbor, all contributed to San Francisco's rapid growth to a city of more than 700,000. Despite a severe earthquake that destroyed much of the city in 1906, San Francisco has remained an important center for shipping, finance and the arts. Today, citizens of San Francisco go to the polls to vote in an important mayoral election.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the incumbent mayor of San Francisco?

Toys, toys, toys!

Doctor, lawyer, police chief, farmer — the pre-schooler moves in and out of dozens of make-believe roles all in the course of a day. Pre-school play is, in fact, one of the most uninhibited of all creative experiences. As young children dream up new characters and situations to act out, they are actually exercising their ability to grow and learn.

For the special creative abilities of the active pre-schooler, special toys are available to help them expand this fun adventure into the world of learning-by-make-believe.

What should parents look for in a pre-school toy? First, pre-school toys should be scaled to a tiny tot's size; children don't want to feel dwarfed by their play objects, yet they want toys large enough to help them act out their bigger-than-life fantasies.

Take a look at any youngster's first drawings and you'll get another clue to the things they like best. From Rudolph's red nose to Santa's bright clothes, children love lots of color.

Subtle may be the latest word in modern decorating, but in the small world where chickens are sometimes green and trees can sprout up red, bright basic colors are always preferred.

Most of all, pre-school toys should be FUN, geared to the imaginative interests of younger ones. And, the simpler the basic scheme of the toy, the more room it leaves for expanding imaginations.

For example, what child doesn't know the story of the old woman who lived in a shoe? She had so many things going on around her, she just didn't know what to do!

Children will be kept just about as busy with a new compact play environment in a boot, which comes with its own handle for easy carrying and storage.

Open it up, and kids will discover as many creative new ways to play as the old woman had children!

There's a brightly colored clock on the top of the boot for telling time. An alphabet wheel spins the boot's little figures around, stopping on letter after letter.

The Live-N-Learn Playboot closes with a real shoe lace, so little hands can learn how to tie a bow.

Finally, the five tiny inhabitants of the boot and their collection of furniture, slides and swinging gates all add up to hours of creative fun as they move from one situation into another.

Shuffle through the rolling hills and dales of a brightly colored country setting, where little "city slickers" can learn all about life on the farm. With Live-N-Learn's Shuffle Farm, young make-believe farmers can move along with the charming gait of the Shuffle family of people and animals.

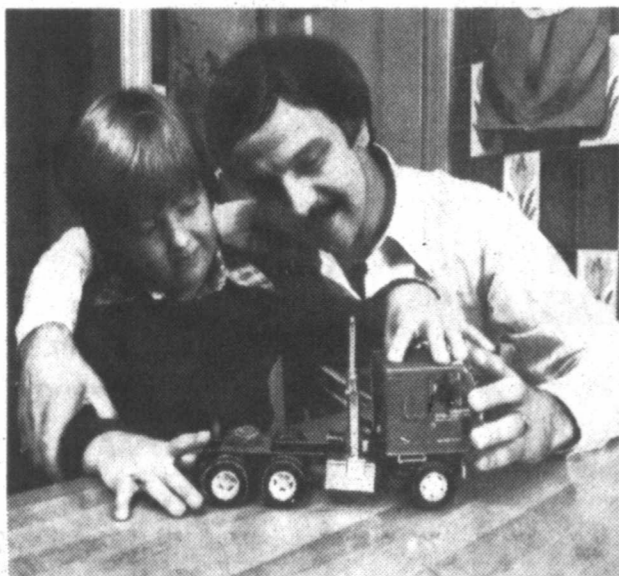

There's even a wheelbarrow, watering pot, truck and basket — everything needed for a bumper crop.

For future physicians and crime-busters, other complete play environments let the little ones enjoy the wonders of those worlds while growing through creative play and having lots of good fun.

WITH A SHUFFLE here and a shuffle there, pre-schoolers can enter into a whole new world of fun and learning down on the Live-N-Learn Shuffle Farm. This colorful total play environment comes complete with two Shuffle people, a Shuffle sheep dog, sheep and cow — all designed to shuffle along on their own down the path to fun. Children can use their imaginations as they tend farm with the wheelbarrow, basket, watering pot and rubber farm truck included in the set.

PUTTING THE finishing touches on a model kit is an exciting moment for father and son alike. Building a model kit together is a great way for family members to share in a creative and rewarding experience. When it's all completed, dad and son can shake hands and take pride in a job well done.

Be a cautious toy buyer

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The multi-billion dollar toy industry has been geared up for the holiday rush for quite a while now.

So, while television advertisements pitch the latest playthings to the youngsters in your life, you might think about what's being offered — and, more important, how safe the toys really are.

Although the federal government and the industry itself have toy safety regulations and guidelines, there is no guarantee that the youngster who receives the latest gizmo on the market won't be injured by it.

In fact, Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) figures indicate that 275,994 children were injured in accidents involving toys — bicycles excluded — in fiscal 1978 (Oct. 1 through Sept. 30).

And 109 children died in toy-related accidents — again, bicycles excluded — in calendar 1977, the latest year for which CPSC figures are available. There were 439,567 bicycle-related deaths in the respective periods, according to the commission.

Officials of the CPSC, the National Safety Council (NSC) and the Toy Manufacturers of America, Inc., say that you can prevent many accidents by keeping safety in mind when choosing a gift for a child.

First, never buy a toy that you haven't handled. You can't get an accurate idea of a product's pitfalls by looking through a plastic wrapper.

Avoid toys with sharp edges or brittle plastic or glass parts that could easily break. And, if the toy comes with instructions, read them yourself to make sure you understand them. When the gift is unwrapped, read the instructions again with the child.

Make sure the toy is suited to the child's age, interests and abilities. A chemistry set could be dangerous in the hands of a 6-year-old, and a construction kit with tiny pieces may pose a danger to a toddler who could choke on a swallowed part.

Consider washable toys for a child who is likely to put objects in his or her mouth. Ask yourself, for instance, if the child is ready to handle scissors or other cutting toys. Is his or her coordination developed enough to handle a bike, and is there a safe place to ride it? Is the child mature enough to understand the potential hazards involved in sledding?

Finally, if you're buying an electric toy, a chemistry set or a hobby kit, make sure the youngster can read and follow instructions. And, with electric toys, look for the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) label.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Sun allergy can be treated

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 61 years old and I am allergic to the sun. My daughter wants me to come to Hawaii to live with her and I'm wondering if you know of something I can take or do to help me with this problem. I can tolerate the sun for a few minutes and that is all. I sure would appreciate it if you would help me with this. Thank you.

DEAR READER — Yes, there is such a thing as being allergic to the sun. It can cause hives. Technically, we call this solar urticaria. Even the specific lengths of the sun's rays that cause such reactions have been identified. It's understood to be an allergy. Individuals who have a severe form of this really should avoid the sun because it can even cause the person to collapse.

It can be treated. Antihistamines sometimes help as they do with other allergies. And then you can use barrier creams on the surface of your skin. These will filter out the sun rays. I would like you to see either a dermatologist or allergist to discuss this problem with him. Some specialists in allergy think that hydroxychloroquine (Plaquenil) will protect some sensitive people who anticipate exposure to the sun.

There are a number of skin disorders that are caused or made worse by the sun. I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots And Cancer. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Many people can profit from sun protection in the winter as well as summer to prevent skin aging.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My brother passed away from acute myelomonocytic leukemia. He died 10 days after the onset of his symptoms. I've made numerous inquiries to determine the approximate length of time that he had this condition prior to his symptoms. The opinions have varied from one year, eight months, three months or to the day the symptoms were detected.

I'd like your opinion on a more definite length of time. My brother was 72.

DEAR READER — Unfortunately, no one can give you a definite time. Untreated acute leukemia usually has a stormy course and ends in death in less than one year. Treatment in recent years has altered this picture in many instances.

You must remember that we do not know the exact cause of leukemia although there is a body of evidence that suggests certain forms of leukemia may be related to viral infections that alter basic cell reproductive mechanisms.

To make matters more complex, a chronic form of leukemia can change suddenly to an acute form. A person may live for years in relative comfort with no symptoms at all with chronic leukemia, then suddenly it changes to the acute form and the life expectancy may be very short indeed.

It's not unusual for a person to have leukemia, particularly the chronic form, and have no symptoms. The acute forms usually cause symptoms by affecting a certain organ or by causing a severe anemia, bleeding or what appears as a respiratory infection. When the doctor examines the patient for the symptoms, he finds out there's an underlying leukemia.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Develop your own holiday traditions

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and around holiday time someone always asks, "Should we go to HIS mother's or to MY mother's for Christmas dinner? And your answer is always, "Why not alternate?"

Abby, my husband and I struggled with that problem for years, and we resolved it according to your suggestion. Both sets of parents lived nearby, and it seemed the only fair thing to do. So for 22 years, we spent Thanksgiving and Christmas in parents' homes instead of our own.

It never dawned on us until this year — as our children are ready to strike out on their own — that we never developed our own holiday traditions. We always went to Grandma's for the holidays. She insisted on doing all the cooking herself — and then complained for months about how much work it was and how tired she got. When we, her daughters and daughters-in-law, asked if we could bring something for dinner, she wouldn't hear of it. When we brought food without asking her, she refused to serve it, so we finally gave up.

I realize now what a high price I've paid over the years for peace in the family. I wish I hadn't. Abby, please urge young marrieds to have their own holiday celebrations in their own homes. Suggest that they invite their parents and grandparents, who might even be relieved to be finally free of the burden of entertaining three generations.

"DOING MY OWN THING"

DEAR DOING: You make an excellent point. Your answer was better than mine.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas Eve, during my busy preparations for 18 dinner guests (and also during our meal, I was called to the phone three times and kept there from 20 to 30 minutes while the callers wished me a "Merry Christmas." Each said, "I decided to phone rather than send cards this year," then proceeded to bring me up to date on their health, families and activities!

I appreciate their thoughts, and realize that by placing such calls they probably filled an otherwise lonely Christmas Eve, but if they must save the expense of sending Christmas cards, why can't they wait until the holiday is over, and then phone with their annual accounts of joys and sorrows?

Am I the only one who feels such phone calls are impositions?

UNAPPRECIATIVE IN OREGON

DEAR UNAPPRECIATIVE: Probably not. But if it's inconvenient for you to take the call, say so. And ask if you may return the call when you're able to visit longer.

DEAR ABBY: Our employer used to give Christmas bonuses to all employees, based on their length of service.

In the last couple of years, he eliminated the holiday bonuses in favor of a Christmas party. Well, the only ones who attended these parties are the young, or those who want to act young. Most people drink too much, the music is deafening, and there is more food wasted than eaten.

Many of us here are not party-minded because of finances and inability to get sitters, and we would much rather have the money instead — whatever the amount.

So how about running this letter to ask the boss people — foremen, administrators, managers, etc. — to let the employees have a choice.

JOPLIN, MO.

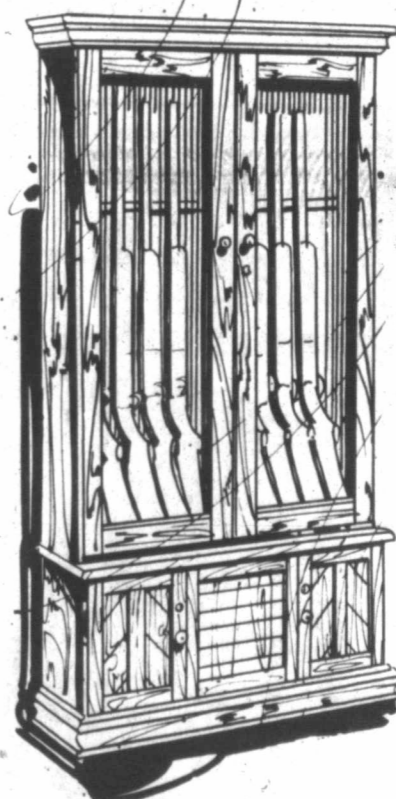

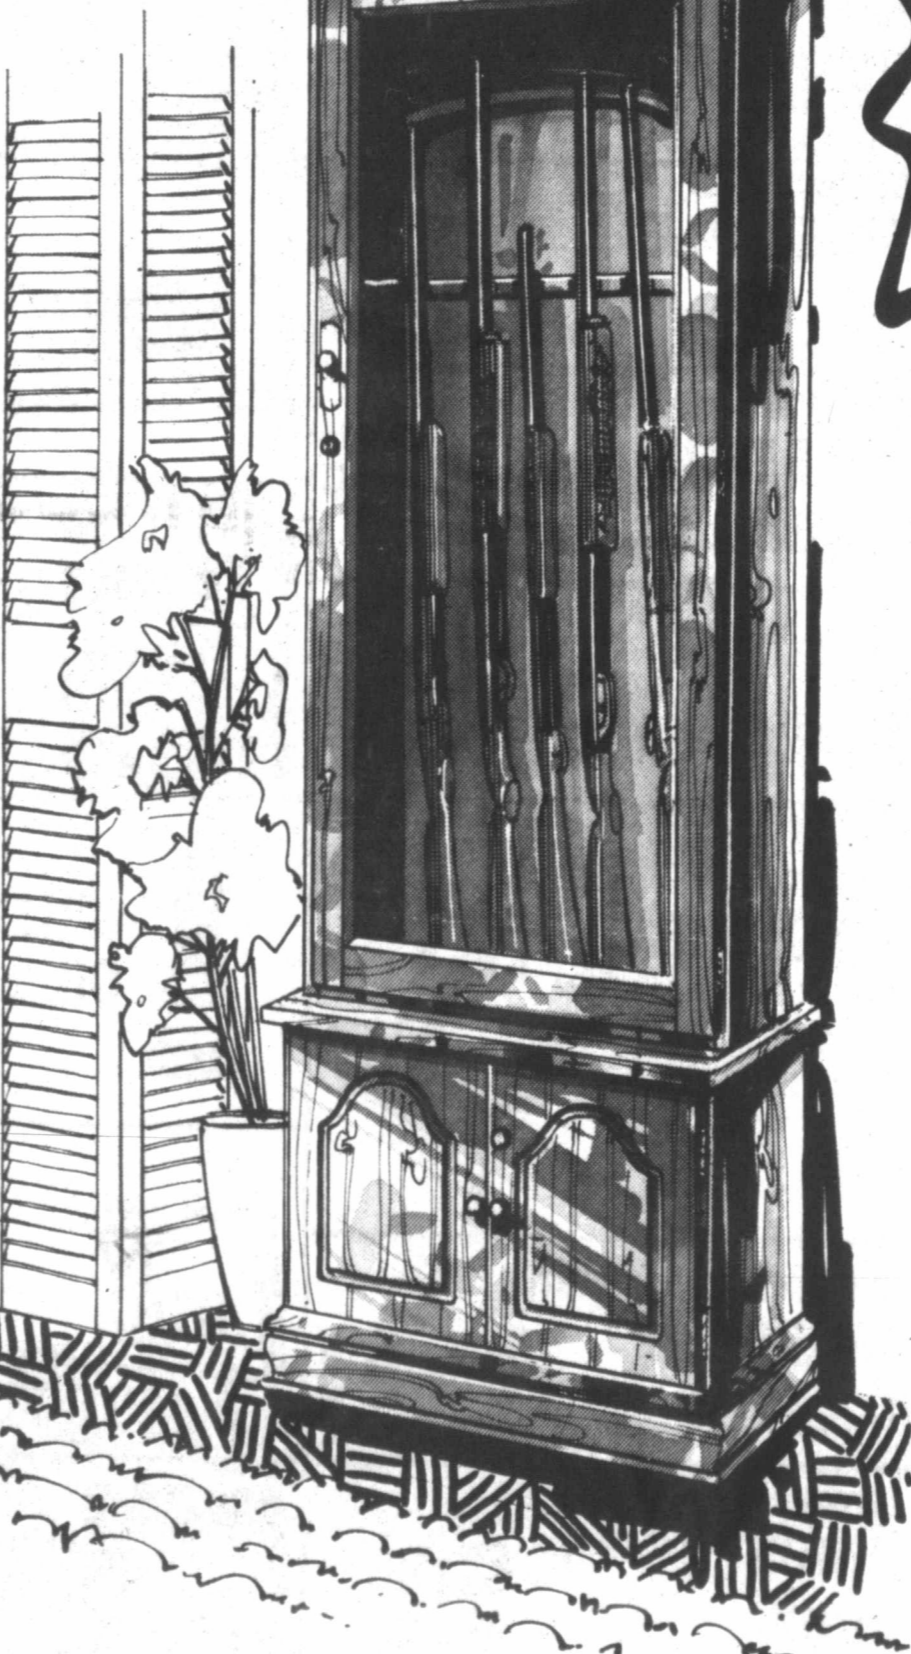

DEAR JOPLIN: It seems fair to me. Bosses?

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE By Louise Pierce

'Success' isn't what it used to be

Hindsight is convenient, conversational and often packed with excuses for failure. A recent letter mentioned this.

DEAR LOUISE: Every day my 69-year-old husband says, "If I could go back 40 years, I'd do everything different." And he rattles on for hours about his regrets over things he didn't do when he was young, the successes he thought he deserved but never received, the promotions that other men got instead of him, and so on. I am so sick of hearing about the goals he never attained that I'm thinking of moving in with my widowed sister in another town before I lose my mind. Would you recommend it? Sick Of His Regrets.

DEAR S.O.H.R.: Not at all. It seems to me that you are the only steady influence in your husband's life and you'd pull the last rug from under him if you left him permanently. A short visit to your sister, say for a week or so, might refresh you and also cause your husband to realize that he needed to brighten his attitude, for your sake as well as his. But don't force him into mental depression by putting him completely on his own. He obviously needs you.

Sit down with him and make a list of what he lost in life — and what he found. The chances are good that he gained more than he lost. You didn't mention any lack of affection between you or any poor health, poverty, lack of friends or other unhappy circumstances that plague so many older couples. So you've got that for leverage to start with. Think of enough good things to outweigh the bad ones. You can if you try.

Otis and I seldom regret the failures or disappointments that we shared through the years. We manage it by never getting "historically historical" at the same time.

Once he said, "When I came home from World War II, if I'd done so - and - so, we'd be rich now." I asked, "What's rich?" And he laughed happily. "It's what we've got, isn't it? Money isn't everything. Neither is worldly success. Adjustment to your present life, whatever it is, is what gives you your happiness."

I said, "You're writing my column for me." He asked, "Don't I always?" And I said, "You certainly do. I couldn't mend other couples' marriages if we didn't have a good one ourselves."

If any of you older couples are mired in misery over the rebuffs, the bad deals, even the heartbreaks you suffered in your pre-retirement years, you need to read an article in the "U.S. News & World Report" of July 30, 1979. It is entitled, "Why Success Isn't What It Used To Be". It tells us that scrambling up the corporate or personal ladder is no longer considered the "in" thing for young couples who want to reach mature marriage in joyous compatibility.

This wonderfully assuring article says that the drive for money and power seems to be losing favor as a human motivator. It states that the "man in the gray flannel suit" who used to take loads of work home at night and uprooted his family from city to city in order to get ahead, is, for all practical purposes, "out".

The young people are now questioning, as we should have done 20 or 40 years ago, whether the struggle for power and dollars is worth the sacrifice it requires. Husbands and wives in industry now seem to be more concerned about their working and living environment and what's good for family happiness.

The "U.S. News & World Report" says that it would have been blasphemy, 15 years ago, to turn down a transfer to higher salary. But nowadays, more and more, young couples are putting marriage stability ahead of everything else. One company executive said, "Success is more than food, clothing and shelter."

Since the children and grandchildren of our generation are now coming to terms with what's essential to a good marriage, isn't it time that we older married couples did the same?

If we're harking back to our choices of stress, fierce competition for promotions and disregard for conjugal happiness over joyful marriage, then we ought to turn our thinking around.

The kids are on the right path. They're learning to walk happily with their mates. Let's join them. Real success is the accomplishment of mature enjoyment of our older years.

Let's quit crying over our failures of 10 to 30 years ago. Let's stop longing for "the good old days", which weren't really that good. Who wants to go back to coal oil lamps and outdoor inconveniences and cars without heating or cooling? Not I, says Louise.

Lone Star Ballet to give special rates to third graders
at 'The Nutcracker'

Every third grade child in the area has a special invitation to celebrate Christmas by seeing "The Nutcracker" as a guest of the Lone Star Ballet Company.

Performances for the hundred-year-old holiday fantasy will be Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Amarillo Civic Auditorium.

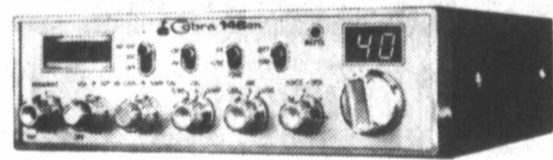

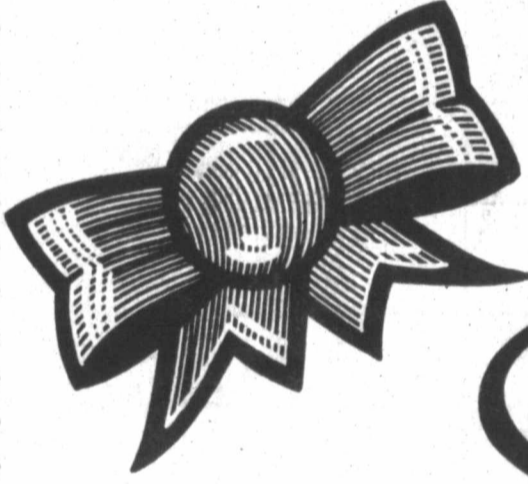

Swords and crowns, a wand, a sleigh and a throne, and a Christmas tree which grows to three times its original size — all these are a part of the magical ballet where Clara receives the mechanical doll and the Nutcracker as gifts, where she dreams that the toys come alive and the toy soldiers battle the giant mice, and where the Nutcracker becomes a Prince and carries her to the land of snow.

Seventy-five performers will take part in the ballet, presented by the company for the ninth Christmas season.

Santa Lane will open an hour before each performance, featuring the jolly fat man, moving toys, Christmas music and other festivities.

Packages of invitations have been sent to area schools with a Christmas tree ornament for each child to present at the box office as his admission ticket. In case a school did not receive ornaments, any third grader may write his name, school, and teacher's name on a round ornament and get into any performance.

Tickets are on sale at the Amarillo Civic Center Box Office at Third and Buchanan, at Gattis Shoe Store in Woflin Village and at the "TEXAS" office, 2010 Fourth Avenue in Canyon; they may be ordered by writing "Nutcracker", P.O. Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015. A ten percent discount will be given for groups of ten or more. Call (806) 655-2181 for more information.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and my parents and I have a great relationship. There is no generation gap between us.

My problem is that my parents will not allow me to see "R" rated movies. I would not want to see a movie just because it might have some sex in it.

I feel that I'm mature enough to handle any movie that I'd like to see.

Please give me your thoughts. I know my parents will respect your opinion. — Linda, Lodi, Calif.

Linda: You are not permitted to see a picture rated "R" by yourself until you are 18. You could see an "R" picture with your parents.

This is an odd rule. Either the picture is suitable for all under 18 or all 18 and over. What difference does it make if parents are in attendance?

But to answer your question, no, I don't believe 15-year-olds should see "R" rated movies. In fact most "R" rated movies are not fit for anyone of any age.

Dr. Wallace: I liked Stan and he liked me so he asked me to go steady and I said yes. After a couple of weeks I was informed that my so-called "best friend" was flirting with him at school. This was possible because I didn't have any classes with him.

Last night Stan called me in the evening but asked me for my "best friend's" phone number. Like a dummy, I gave it to him. Today at school my "friend" had "Stan" written on her wrist.

I took this to mean that Stan and I are no longer going steady. Do you agree? — Carole, Astoria, Ore.

Carole: I think you just lost a boyfriend and a girlfriend but it appears you didn't lose too much.

Dr. Wallace: I'm writing regarding a letter sent to you by a very lucky 15-year-old girl. You said a good relationship with her 22-year-old guy is as rare as a five-cent cup of coffee.

Well, I'm one of those rare cups of coffee and I've never been happier. The same is true for my 24-year-old husband. Our parents are thrilled we are married and it doesn't bother any of them that I'm only 16.

I've met several couples with this age difference and they, too, are happy. — Penny, Ogden, Utah.

Penny: Thanks for sharing your happy situation. Happy marriages are successful regardless of age. But in most cases, 16-year-old girls are more comfortable taking a family living course in high school.

Flowers -- accessories to add flair to any day

Pick an ordinary day — today, for instance. On your way to work, or in the course of your travels, drop into a florist shop and select a flower that you like.

Then wear it — fastened to the comb in your hair, wired around a buttonhole, pinned to your hat.

People might ask, "Why the flower? Is today special?" And suddenly this ordinary day will seem a bit extraordinary.

More and more women are wearing flowers as fashion accessories for all occasions. It's common for women to walk into florist shops spontaneously and ask for a flower to fasten to headbands, jacket lapels — anywhere.

After styling women's hair for special occasions, many beauticians refer them to nearby florists for the finishing touches.

A velvet bandeau is a perfect base for miniature flowers with distinctive shapes: tea roses, baby's breath, freesia, pompon mums. They can be attached to the headband with florists' wire.

Flowers can be wired easily to combs, hair pins and clips to pull back free-flowing long hair. Flowers winding around a chignon appear to be growing from the hair in an organic sweep.

A pendant of hardy, small flowers, such as roses, is a playful substitute for conventional jewelry. Chokers, too, can be made easily, at low cost, with velvet ribbon. Velcro fastening tape and glue.

Cut the ribbon to size and glue Velcro fastening tape to the ends. Fasten a flower to the ribbon with a safety pin or thread. You can complement this neck piece with a matching flower pinned to your hat, or with a wristlet.

On these cold days, scarves are welcome accompaniments to open-neck tops. Secure a flower with a safety pin to the knot of the scarf. Large flowers — carnations, mums and daisies — stand out best and won't get lost in the folds of the material.

One way to go formal with flowers is to take a tip from your great-grandfather. Instead of the pocket watch he used to wear on a chain in his vest pocket, attach an orchid or carnation at the waist to a spaghetti strap.

To prepare the flower, regardless of how it will be worn, pierce wire through the base of the bloom and wind it down the stem. Cut the stem and wire to the desired length and curl the ends slightly.

Cover the wire by wrapping the stem with florists' tape. Blondes and redheads should use green tape. Brown is most suitable for brunettes.

For arrangements of more than one flower, follow the same procedure and tape the two stems together.

The flowers you wear dancing Friday night should be fresh enough to wear out to dinner Saturday, if they're given the proper care.

WEARING FLOWERS can make an ordinary day a bit extraordinary. A pendant of hardy, small flowers, such as roses, is a playful substitute for conventional jewelry.

Cider is a treat

HOW TO MAKE A MERRY CHRISTMAS

Heritage Art Club has two programs

Two demonstrations highlighted last week's meeting of the Heritage Art Club.

Ellen Boyd demonstrated hosiery art and Pearl McBroom showed the group how to make match holders from tobacco cans.

Two new members, Marguerite Hyatt and Marie Bohlander, joined the club. Clara Addington was welcomed back after her absence.

Yvonne Scrimshire will host an open house Dec. 16 for members. The club's Christmas party will be Dec. 21 in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Company.

Hostess for the meeting was Virginia Bookout.

Mrs. Gross leads Republican Women

Mrs. Arthur Gross was installed as president of the Top Of Texas Republican Women during a recent covered dish luncheon at the home of Mrs. Scott Nisbet.

Other officers installed were Mrs. Joe Curtis, vice president; Mrs. S.M. Goodlett Jr., secretary; and Mrs. Jones Seitz, treasurer. Mrs. Bob Price conducted the installation ceremony.

Budget-buy steaks for dollar values

You'll find that full-cut round steak containing top, bottom and eye muscles and the small round bone usually represents the best round steak value for your dollar.

If a recipe requires only one pound of round steak, buy a full-cut steak, divide it along the natural seams and freeze the remaining portion as a budget bonus for a later meal, advises the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Beef blade steaks are a good choice around the holidays when budgets are strained, for they are among the most economical beef steaks available. If they are to be broiled, marinate first in a mixture containing a food acid such as lemon juice or vinegar, suggests the board.

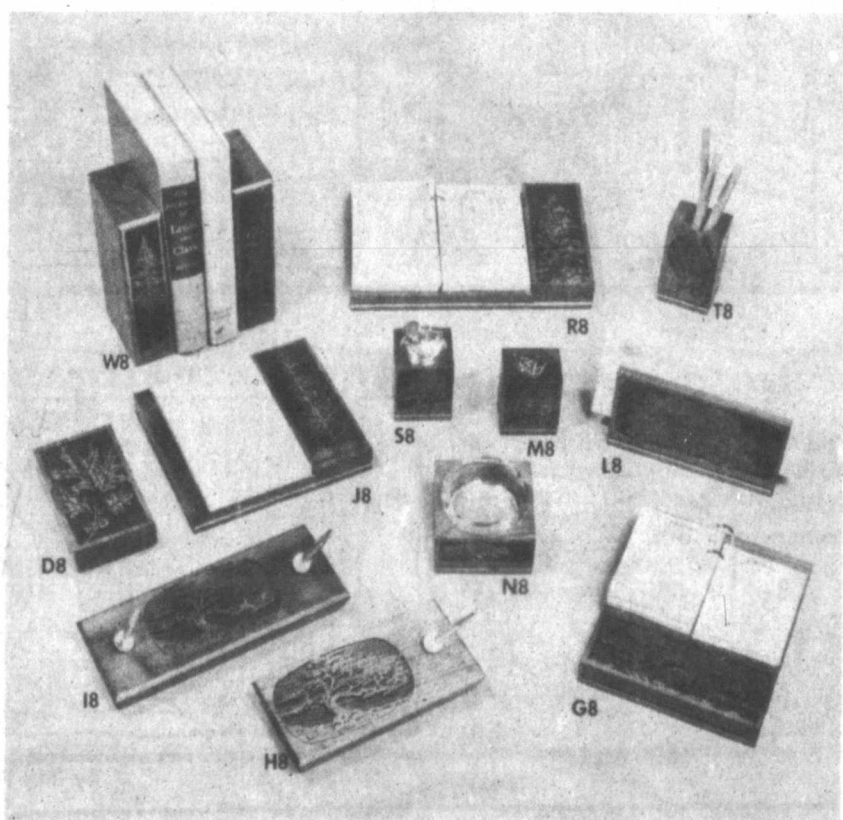

We have lots of Merry Christmas friends, All huggably Dakin!

Supreme Court refuses Hunt family request

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to revive an attempt by the wealthy Hunt family of Texas to collect money from a Houston petroleum company for Libyan oil lost in 1973.

The justices, for the second time in two years, rejected the Hunts' request to overturn or alter an 82-year-old legal doctrine that bars U.S. courts from hearing cases involving official acts of foreign governments.

On Dec. 5, 1977, the court let die a $375-million lawsuit Nelson Bunker Hunt, Herbert Hunt and Lamar Hunt had filed against the world's seven largest oil producers.

The Hunts charged that the oil producers entered into an illegal conspiracy that led to the nationalization of Hunt oil interests in Libya.

The Supreme Court's 1977 denial of the Hunt appeal left intact rulings that the so-called "act of state" doctrine lacked federal court jurisdiction in antitrust cases questioning the validity of a foreign government's actions.

The appeal acted on today also stemmed from the 1973 Libyan action.

The Hunts in 1973 sued Coastal States Gas Producing Co. and its subsidiary, Coastal States Marketing, Inc. The suit charged that Coastal States illegally bought from Libya oil that really belonged to the Hunts.

Hunt in 1957 had signed a contract with Libya's since-overthrown government to explore for and set up operations in the Sarir field. Rich deposits of oil were discovered there four years later.

In 1969, Moammar Khadafy's Revolutionary Command Council seized political power in Libya and soon announced a policy for increasing the price of Libyan oil as well as the government's share in the price.

Hunt oil interests finally were nationalized in June 1973 after the company had resisted efforts to hand over bigger and bigger shares of petrodollars to the government.

In response, the Hunts published notices in newspapers world-wide to denounce the Libyan nationalization as a violation of international law and threaten suit against anyone coming into possession of the Sarir oil.

Just a month before, Coastal States had signed a contract with Libya's government-owned Arabian Gulf-Exploration Co. to buy oil from the Sarir field.

Global hunger crisis likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — A global hunger crisis is likely over the next 20 years that may pose even greater problems than current energy woes, a presidential commission said today.

Even after three straight years of good harvests, hunger around the world is still growing, the panel said, and called the Cambodian famine but a vivid reminder of the larger problem.

The panel urged that the United States:

- Double its non-military foreign aid and take other steps to "help others feed themselves" through better farming methods and higher standards of living.
- Mobilize support for such an anti-hunger program, which, if successful, could bring economic harm to some American farmers and factory workers.
- The recommendations are in a preliminary report by the Presidential Commission on World Hunger that was being formally presented to President Carter today in a White House ceremony.

The commission, headed by Carter's special Middle East peace envoy, Sol Linowitz, said, "Even after three years of successive good harvests, the world food situation is still precarious."

One person in eight now suffers from malnutrition "severe enough to shorten life, stunt physical growth and dull mental ability," the panel said.

Unless the United States and other nations act to increase food supplies, the report said, "a crisis...of even more serious dimensions than the present energy crisis appears likely within the next 20 years."

Two successive years of bad harvests in any of the major grain-producing nations could cause "widespread famine and political disorder" in poor countries and "would severely disrupt a fragile world economy already weakened by energy shortages and rampant inflation," the report said.

It urged a doubling of U.S. economic development assistance "within a few years" and asked that elimination of hunger be made "the primary focus" of America's relations with poor nations.

It also urged that the federal government drop its policy of not spending tax dollars to promote its programs and instead "initiate a nationwide, long-term educational effort" designed to garner public support for anti-hunger efforts.

This would be needed because helping poor nations develop their own agriculture and industry doubtless will cause "some dislocation" economically among U.S. farms and factories, the report said.

Oil import ceilings to be imposed

PARIS (AP) — Ten other industrial nations are expected to join the United States and the members of the European Common Market today in setting individual ceilings on their oil imports for the first time since the energy crisis began.

The decision is expected at a meeting of the governing board of the International Energy Agency (IEA), a group of 20 leading oil-buying nations formed in 1974 as a counterweight to the Organization of Petroleum-Exporting Countries.

IEA officials are confident that the energy ministers will commit themselves to individual import ceilings for the first time instead of vague collective "targets."

"Watch for an interesting change in terminology," predicted one American energy official. "They aren't talking about targets any more but about ceilings. That word makes for a much more solid commitment."

The prime sponsor of this change has been the United States, which has taken a leading role in the energy war. A year ago it was on the defensive, attacked as a gas guzzler consuming twice as much oil per capita as its European allies.

"There's evidence of a psychological breakthrough," said the American official. "Nations are seeing that America is really trying hard. We've decontrolled oil prices and cut our imports by 8 per cent in the last quarter."

The United States is committed to import no more than 440 million tons of oil a year by 1985. Last week, the nine Common Market nations also adopted specific individual ceilings ranging from 143 million tons in 1985 for West Germany to 1.5 Million tons for tiny Luxembourg.

Youth taking part less in elections

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Voter registration is up in Texas but there is one group taking part less and less in the political process, says Texas Secretary of State George Strake.

"That is our youth," Strake told election officials from 10 southern and western states Sunday at the opening session of the regional conference. "This is an alarming trend."

Strake said his office would launch a drive to register eligible high school seniors before the Texas primary in May 1980.

The 400 officials attending the conference met today in a series of workshops on 10 different subjects, including training of election workers, absentee voter registration, and effective planning of elections.

Gary Greenhalgh, director of the National Clearinghouse on Election Administration, told the conference that state and local election officials are coming under increasing pressure in recent years.

One factor is the application of data processing techniques to voter registration and vote counting, he said. Another is increased costs of elections.

"It costs $1 billion every four years to run the country's election machinery," he said, "and all the money comes from local property taxes."

Still another factor complicating the work of election officials is the mobility of the American population.

"More people move in this country each year than the entire population of France," he said. "It raises problems with absentee voting. It's a tremendous administrative burden."

Unusual life in lighthouse

CHICAGO (AP) — For years, Stirling Bemis was in love with a lighthouse off a breakwater near Navy Pier.

He gazed down at the Lake Michigan sentinel from his 23rd floor apartment, cruised by it on his sailboat and dreamed of making the nine-story tower his home.

Now he's preparing to move in. A year and a half ago, Bemis, a salesman for Good Housekeeping Magazine, learned the lighthouse was being automated and the four coast guardsmen assigned there were pulling out.

So he hired a lawyer, and started negotiations that lasted more than nine months. At first, the Coast Guard's attitude was, "Go away kid," Bemis, 37, recalled.

Then, Bemis's lawyer quit, saying there was nothing more he could do and that he would be wasting his money.

"But I continued," Bemis said.

The breakthrough came when he argued that his presence would prevent both deterioration and vandalism at the lighthouse. Two weeks ago he signed a lease with the Coast Guard, but he declined to disclose the terms.

The lighthouse, standing since 1920 and accessible only by boat, rests on a concrete base 28 feet above water level. Inside, a spiral staircase winds its way to the top where a beacon flashes a red light every five seconds and is visible for 23 miles. There are several living areas, a new kitchen, storage rooms and an office.

"During the winter, weather permitting, I'll be going out there and getting the south room ready for insulating," said Bemis. "This is where I'll live at first. There are nine levels from the water level to the lantern deck on top."

"I'll have to do some insulating for noise, too, from the foghorn," he said. "It's 113 decibels and that could be harmful to my hearing. Any improvements I make become Coast Guard property. I'll work my way up from the south room as time and money permit."

Bemis will have no responsibility for, or access to, the foghorn, the light and a radio transmitter. That section will be maintained by the Coast Guard and kept locked.

While he negotiated for the lighthouse, his friends thought of him as a Chicagoan Don Quixote, chasing a waterbound windmill.

"Half of my friends thought it was the best idea they ever heard of. The other half thought I should be fitted for a straitjacket," Bemis said.

Why live in the cold, military gray atmosphere of an aging, isolated building that bleats loudly to sailors in foul weather?

"From there (the lighthouse) I'll get one of the most beautiful views of the city. And I'm a view freak. Besides, I just love that lake," he said.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

DETROIT (AP) — A 1964 limousine which once belonged to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis has been put up for sale by a Detroit car dealer.

The limousine, which was driven in President John Kennedy's funeral procession in November 1963, was the former first lady's personal vehicle for about a year. For the past 10 years, it has belonged to Redford Sales Service of Detroit.

The dealership, however, is closing and is selling its entire stock. The car, which seats seven, has a radio, air conditioning and gray lamb upholstery and carpeting. A power-driven window separates the chauffeur from the passengers and the vehicle has been driven only 13,068 miles. The a king price — $14,000.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The Hollywood Women's Press Club turned thumbs down on John Travolta while honoring comedian Carol Burnett for person and professional achievement.

John Travolta, star of "Saturday Night Fever" and "Grease," would have left the Sunday ceremonies with the club's "Sour Apple" award if he had shown up. Club spokeswoman Betty Anderson said the "Sour Apple" scroll is awarded annually to the "celebrity who most believes his own publicity."

Top honors at the 39th annual fete, the Golden Apple, went to comedian Carol Burnett, who was lauded for her achievements "as a performer and as a person," Mrs. Anderson said.

The award was established in honor of Louella O. Parsons, charter member and first president of the 200-woman organization that began nearly 50 years ago when 10 newswomen met for lunch at the old Brown Derby.

Bette Davis presented "Entertainer of the Year" awards to Jill Clayburgh and Alan Alda. "Discovery of the Year" honors went to Mariette Hartley and Dudley Moore.

ON THE LIGHT SIDE

ATLANTA (AP) — Tire dealer J.K. Ramey erected a billboard atop his store to warn people about Atlanta's high crime rate. But it didn't keep burglars out.

And Ramey, a victim of crime in the past, said he was doubly frustrated and perplexed by the latest incident Saturday.

"I'm telling you, I don't know what's wrong. We've got something wrong in this city," said Ramey.

The businessman attracted national attention when he erected the enormous sign warning citizens to use "extreme caution" while in Atlanta, "where police are underpaid, undermanned and underequipped."

Ramey said someone threw a brick through a plate glass window, broke in the front door and stole an estimated $5,000 in tires, wheels, office equipment and a shotgun.

When the sign was being made, burglars stole parts of it. And when the 22-by-96-foot billboard was being hoisted atop his dealership, vandals cut the brake lines on the crane which was used to raise the sign.

— Record Stocking? Maybe
MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — If the party doesn't set a record, maybe the Christmas stocking will, say sponsors of a party at New Hampshire College.

The sponsors wanted to set a world record for the largest Christmas party ever. But the 1,000 children who assembled Sunday won't know for a while whether they made the record books.

The children attended a party thrown by the New Hampshire Children's Theater and a fraternity and sorority at the college, billing it "New Hampshire's Holiday Event of a Lifetime."

NATIONAL

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — The nation's most capable chemistry students are turning away from test tubes and opting for more attractive careers in medicine, according to a national study.

Dr. Douglas Neckers, chairman of the chemistry department at Bowling Green State University, who conducted the study, said recently he thought the shift was due to a decrease in research funds and an adverse climate of public opinion toward chemicals and chemistry.

"The upshot of all this is that the shine has gone off science's star, in the public's eye, and it's having a deleterious effect on the nation's future scientific potential," Neckers said.

CLEVELAND (AP) — A 6-year-old girl apparently was shot and killed by accident as she struggled with a 7-year-old brother over possession of a revolver, police said.

Margery Petway left her three children at home Saturday morning while she kept a doctor's appointment, police said. During her absence, 11-year-old Holland told his brother, London, and sister, Wendy, that he would give a dollar to the one who found their mother's gun first, officers said.

The two rushed to their mother's bedroom where they found a loaded .32-caliber revolver, which apparently fired as they struggled over it, police said. A bullet struck Wendy in the face, killing her.

MORIARTY, N.M. (AP) — Dr. Carol Rymer-Davis has set a 31,500-foot altitude record for hot air balloons after braving 41-below-zero temperatures.

Ms. Rymer-Davis, head of the nuclear medicine department at Lovelace Medical Center, took off just after dawn Saturday from a field near this small community about 30 miles east of Albuquerque. Temperatures on the ground were in the 30s.

It was her second record-setting flight this year. She made a 25,400-foot flight Feb. 19, which was the altitude mark for balloons the size of the one she flew that day.

Navy boat fired on

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Two men fired on a U.S. Naval patrol inside a Navy base on Puerto Rico's east coast, in the second attack in seven days on Navy personnel based on this Caribbean island.

No one was injured in the Sunday night shooting inside the sprawling Roosevelt Roads Naval Base, and the gunmen got away, Rear Adm. Arthur Knoizen said.

Knoizen, commander of U.S. naval forces in the Caribbean, refused to give details of the attack on the base, which is his headquarters and the Navy's largest center on this island for training the Atlantic Fleet.

By midday no group had claimed responsibility for the attack.

Police in Humacao, a town near the base, said Marine Lance Cpl. Christopher J. Pruitt was alone in a pickup truck near a munitions dump when the truck's front and back windows were shattered by gunfire. Police were unable to say how many shots were fired.

Pruitt saw two men at a distance a short time later on a runway ramp used by small planes, police said. One of the men grinned and brandished a .45 pistol. Pruitt shot once at the man but missed, and they leaped over a fence and escaped, police said.

Three pro-independence terrorist groups have claimed responsibility for the Dec. 3 ambush in which two Navy men were killed and 10 Navy men and women injured. The FBI is investigating, but no arrests have been reported.
