Ruling sends team to state

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ended a legal tangle that delayed the Class 4A state baseball tournament for a week.

Brenham, Mercedes, Snyder and Austin Westlake will play for the title on Friday and Saturday. Waco Richfield, which went to court to try to get into the tournament, is out.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday overruled a Waco judge's order that had barred the tournament from continuing without Richfield. The high court's written opinion will not be issued for several days.

The decision came after a University Interscholastic League lawyer told the justices that Waco school officials had no legal right to challenge UIL rules that eliminated Richfield after it lost to Westlake.

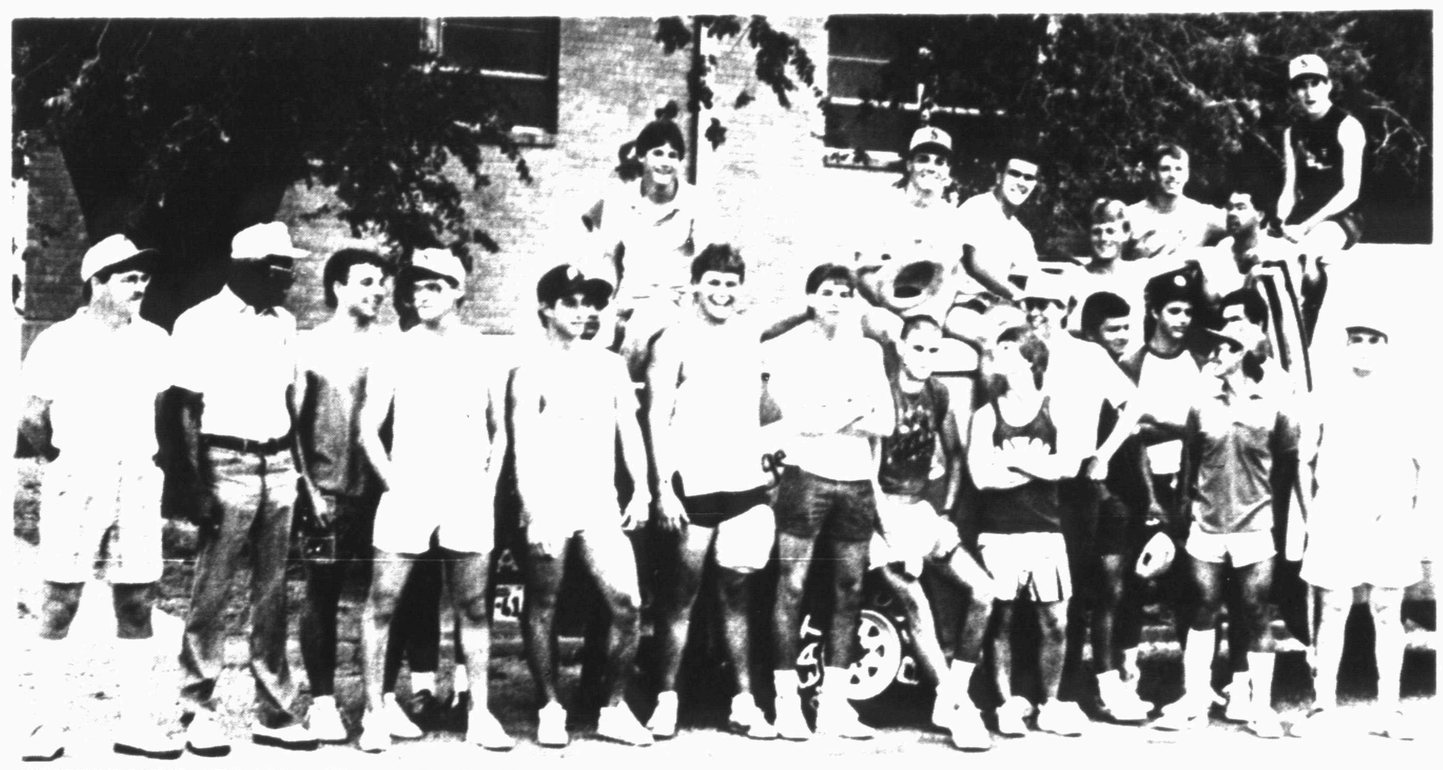

"We are talking about one team that didn't like the way the rules affected them," Lucius Bunton said.

Phillip McCleery, lawyer for the Waco school district, said he had given "no thought at all" about whether to seek further legal action in the case.

Championship games were played here last weekend in the other four classes while the 4A teams waited to see if they would play any more games this year.

Westlake beat Richfield 4-3 in 11 innings June 5 in the first game of a scheduled three-game series. Games two and three were rained out. Westlake moved to the semifinals when the UIL denied Waco's request to allow the Richfield-Westlake series to continue after the June 7 deadline.

State District Judge Bill Logue of Waco then barred the Class 4A tournament from proceeding before Westlake and Richfield could complete the series.

Social Security pullout prohibited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that state and local governments may not withdraw their employees from the nation's Social Security system.

In a 9-0 ruling, the court upheld a 1983 federal law designed to protect Social Security's economic integrity by barring state and local governments from pulling out.

The decision is a victory for the Reagan administration, which said more than $3 billion could have been drained from Social Security by 1990 if state and local governments were allowed to withdraw.

The law was challenged by California officials and others who said the law unconstitutionally allowed the federal government to break its contract with the states.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said, "The contractual right at issue in this case bears little, if any, resemblance to rights held to constitute property" as defined by the Constitution.

He said the law "simply was part of a regulatory program over which Congress retained authority to amend in the exercise of its power to provide for the general welfare."

The court overturned a 1985 ruling by a federal judge in California.

States and local governments have been allowed to enroll their employees in Social Security since 1950, and local government workers in all 50 states are enrolled today.

As of 1983, some 9.4 million of an estimated 13.2 million state and local government employees participated in Social Security. Only five states — Alaska, Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada and Ohio — do not have their own employees enrolled in Social Security.

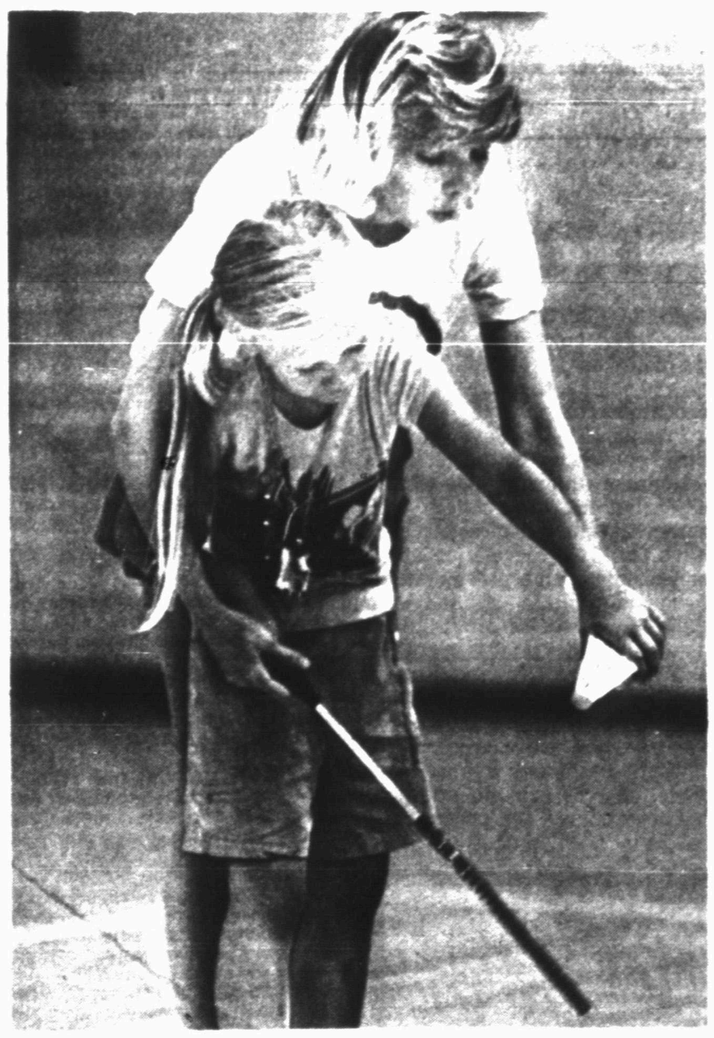

Under a 1950 amendment to the Social Security Act, each state was authorized to withdraw its employees on two years' notice, and also could do so on behalf of the local governments within that state.

But from 1950 to 1966, only 319 public employees withdrew from the system.

As apprehension grew in the 1970s over the financial future of Social Security, withdrawals became more numerous. Between 1977 and 1981, 96,000 state and local employees dropped out of the system.

And in 1983, termination notices were pending from 634 state and local governments representing 227,000 employees.

California had filed such a notice on behalf of 70 local governments within the state.

Reunion plans set at Lincoln School

The first ever Lincoln School Reunion begins Friday and will continue here through Saturday at the school.

Thursday morning, Mayor Rod Waller declared Friday as "Lincoln School Reunion Day" in Snyder.

Planning for the first-time reunion was organized by a group of local exes. They include Jack Newsome, Evelyn Malone, Elizabeth Jenkins, Veronica Davis, Vernon Clay, Vera Newsome, Emma Garrett, Louline Collins and M.C. Powell.

Registration of ex-students will be Friday from 2 until 6 p.m. at the school.

Saturday activities will be from 2 until 6 p.m. at the school, concluding with a Saturday night banquet at Willow Park Inn.

On Sunday morning, a memorial service is set at 8:30 a.m. at the school.

The building was built in 1952 and served the black community of Snyder until the integration of the Snyder school system in 1965 — a span of 13 years.

The history of education for blacks here dates to 1926, when a black teacher was hired for a three month term to instruct 10 students. The stipulation at the time was that the school would be closed if enrollment ever fell below eight.

In 1928, the school was closed and was not reopened until 1930. It then continued operation through the 30's and 40's.

In 1947, a delegation from the black community asked the Snyder school board to construct a new school building.

Following that request, a building was purchased from Camp Barkley in Abilene, and land was acquired.

In 1952, the new brick school, named for Abraham Lincoln, was built. At that time, instruction was offered for grades 1-8 only.

Black students wishing to attend high school were required to go to San Antonio until 1956, when the Snyder school board expanded education at Lincoln School to grades 9-12.

During this period, the school's athletic teams were well known, particularly in basketball and track. Also during this period, the school's track team was a winner at state competition.

In 1964, integration for all U.S. schools was mandated with the passage of the Civil Rights Act. Snyder integrated in the fall of 1965.

North county sections receive some rainfall

The northern sections of Scurry County received measurable rainfall Wednesday afternoon, causing some inflow into both Deep Creek and Ennis Creek.

The majority of the county received only a sprinkle of rain, however, despite cloudy conditions during the afternoon and night.

Measurable amounts were received at Lloyd Mountain, where .10 of an inch fell; and at the Scurry-Kent County line near Polar, where .25 of an inch was reported.

Heavy rain showers in nearby counties brought some brief flooding of streets Wednesday. Flooded conditions were reported in both Lubbock and Abilene from afternoon showers.

The rainfall this week in Snyder has brought the year-to-date totals to near average amounts for this time of year.

Traditionally by July 1, Scurry County has received some 9.66 inches. The total to date, with 11 days remaining in June, equals 9.59 inches.

The Thursday forecast for both the Snyder area and most of West Texas holds the promise for more moisture.

Snyder and vicinity has a 20 percent chance of mainly evening thunderstorms Thursday.

The long range forecast for all of West Texas calls for partly cloudy conditions with isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There are three big college sports–football, basketball and fund-raising."

Coach Albert Lewis doesn't get a lot of sleep during the playoffs. He's been known to stay up all night with a case of nerves.

According to him, it all ends when he arrives at the state tournament.

"I'm nervous when we're trying to get to state but once we're in, it really doesn't bother me anymore. Seriously. . just relax. It's all gravy now. I'm relaxed."

Well, almost...

"Now what I worry about is what the kids are doing away from the field while we're in Austin."

Maybe, but Lewis was so excited after Saturday's win over Pecos that he couldn't remember putting the motel reservations back in his billfold after showing them to SDN sports editor Bill McClellan.

"What did you do with that paper I gave you?"

"You've got it, Coach. You just put it back in your wallet. Just now."

"No I didn't. Come on, don't do that to me. You never gave it back."

"Really, I did, Coach. Look in your wallet."

It took some further convincing, but Lewis did eventually check his billfold, and found the reservations.

"You're not excited are you, Coach?"

"Well, I guess I am. But I didn't know I was that excited."

McClellan didn't bother to point out that Lewis went back to the dugout three times to see if the team had forgotten anything.

It's no wonder Lewis gets so worked up. At home, he gets the royal treatment.

McClellan called to get some information about the state tournament and his wife, Daisy, answered the phone.

"Yes?"

"Is Albert there?"

"Yes, MISTER Lewis is in. Just a minute, please. I'll get him for you."

A second later...

"Hello?"

"MISTER Lewis, huh?"

"Oh hi, Bill. Yeah, that was my wife. She's just making me feel important."

Convicted killer is executed for murder

HUNSTVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 37-year-old convicted killer was put to death by injection early today for the 1974 shooting death of a Houston convenience store clerk despite pleas from the victim's father and a prosecutor.

"Naw, I'm ready," said Kenneth Albert Brock of Houston when asked if he had any final words before the lethal drugs flowed through his veins.

"Take care of yourself Bob, Nancy (Dodson)," he told his brother-in-law and sister who were his personal witnesses. "Thanks."

Bob Dodson gave the 37-year-old inmate a thumbs up as he entered the death chamber.

After he took a deep breath Brock said "OK, bye."

Mrs. Dodson told her brother, "Kenneth, I love you." He replied, "I know."

Brock, who was wearing his glasses, then took about eight deep breaths and then snored before going silent.

Mrs. Dodson called for her brother three times as she leaned against a rail, crying softly and holding a Kleenex in her hand while her husband had his arm around her.

"Kenneth, can you hear me?" she asked.

Doctors pronounced him dead at 12:18 a.m., eight minutes after the last lethal solution was injected into his right arm.

Brock was convicted in the May 21, 1974, shooting death of 31-year-old Michael Sedita, a manager of a northeast Houston 7-Eleven convenience store.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles on Tuesday refused to commute Brock's death penalty to life imprisonment. Gov. Mark White on Wednesday also refused to grant a 30-day repreive.

"Killing Kenneth Brock is wrong. It will not change what has happened to my son," Joseph M. Sedita, the victim's father of Houston told the board in a sworn statement Tuesday.

"Killing Kenneth Brock will not ease my suffering."

Crash may end canyon flights

GRAND CANYON VILLAGE, Ariz. (AP) — The collision of a helicopter and a twin-engine sightseeing plane over the Grand Canyon that killed 25 people may help end unregulated flights over national parks, a congressman says.

"As is so often the case, it takes a sad tragedy like this to point out the need for some reasonable safeguards," Rep. Richard Lehman, D-Calif., a member of the House Subcommittee on National Parks and Recreation, said of the collision Wednesday morning.

Emergency crews reached the crash site on a sloping shelf one mile from the Colorado River and 2,000 feet above it, and were to begin removing bodies today to a temporary morgue and then to Flagstaff 130 miles away.

The plane's tail section was found roughly one-quarter of a mile away from the rest of the wreckage and probably was sheared off in the collision, said Park Ranger Charlie Peterson, the first to reach the crash site.

The pilots of both craft had been keeping track of other aircraft visually and neither was being tracked by FAA radar, said Larry Bjork of the Federal Aviation Administration's flight service at Prescott.

Those aboard the Grand Canyon Airlines plane included 11 Dutch, two Swiss, one South African and six Americans, said Charles Farrabe, a National Park Service management assistant.

Coffee drinkers face increased cancer risk

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Heavy coffee drinkers may face an increased risk of cancer but they suffer no greater risk of heart attacks than other people, separate studies have concluded.

Colorectal cancer, or cancer affecting the intestinal area, occurs 2½ times more often among people who drink more than two cups of coffee a day than among those who consume fewer than two cups, researchers found in one study.

The results were outlined to the Society for Epidemiologic Research on Wednesday by Cedric Garland, assistant professor of epidemiology at the University of California at San Diego.

But other researchers also reported Wednesday that they found no correlation between coffee drinking and heart disease in a nine-year study of 12,866 men around the country, contradicting earlier reports linking the two.

A estimated 60,000 people are expected to die of colorectal cancer this year, and 140,000 new cases of the disease are expected to be diagnosed, according to the American Cancer Society.

Garland's findings are based on a 10-year study of 703 people living in Rancho Bernardo, Calif., a retirement community that is part of San Diego.

Of the 703, most of whom were in their 60s, 14 developed colorectal cancer, said Garland. Seven of the cases were fatal.

Three percent of those drinking at least two cups of coffee a day eventually developed the cancer, Garland said. The incidence rate was 1.4 percent for those consuming less of the beverage or none at all.

Smoking and other high-risk factors were taken into consideration, Garland said.

"It's a big difference, but I'm cautious," he said. "This is the highest relative risk that has ever been reported. At this point, we don't have enough information to be able to make a dietary recommendation."

Previous studies have shown a link between coffee and colorectal cancer among people 65 and older but not for younger consumers, while other researchers have found no correlation at all or possibly even a preventive effect.

"We need to do studies that determine how coffee is prepared and the method of preparation," Garland said, adding it may not be caffeine that is responsible for the increased risk of cancer.

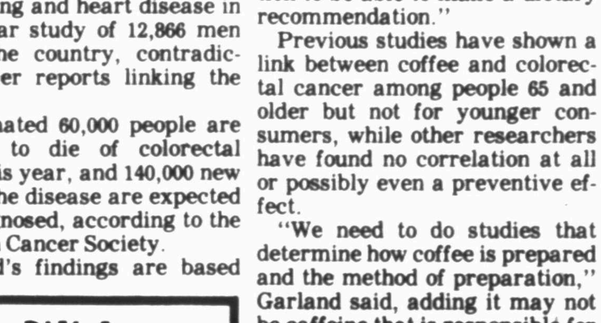

"Caffeine is only a small part of coffee," he said. In addition, "coffee reduces the presence of calcium."

Tuning in to the count

By James Jacoby

Today we have a sparring contest at the bridge table. East-West had subsided in a two-club contract when South came in with two spades. When West continued with three clubs, North raised his partner's bid. Perhaps East should have gone on to four clubs, but he thought of his queens and jacks as too much garbage. He passed and South had to find nine tricks.

After the opening lead, West continued with a second heart. South could see four sure losers in the side suits and so had to bring in the trump suit without giving up a trick there. Alas, in pedestrian fashion he simply laid down his spade ace and played to dummy's K-J. That left him with a trump loser in addition to his other losers, and the contract was set. Declarer should have cleaned out his ears and listened to the bidding. West had first bid diamonds and then bid and rebid clubs. He had also shown up with two hearts. How could he have two spades? So South should first attack the trump suit by playing dummy's king. When West's 10 appears, he should mark it for a singleton and take the finesse against East's queen.

West could make this play tougher by not playing a second heart. Now declarer might think that West held the lone heart ace originally. Declarer would therefore be more likely to take the normal but losing play in the trump suit. Because South had played the heart nine to trick one, West believed that East's eight was an encouraging card, and so cannot really be faulted for continuing the suit.

Sleepless nights and mattresses

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The average American couple sleeps on the same mattress for 12 to 15 years. But according to the Better Sleep Council, a bedding manufacturer group, it's time to go shopping for a new bed when you're no longer getting a good night's rest.

Waking up in the morning with aches and pains is one symptom that suggests the need for a new mattress. Others include a mattress that puckers or sags when you sit or lie on the edge, a foundation with an uneven and sagging surface and creaks and wobbles in the mattress or foundation when you turn over.

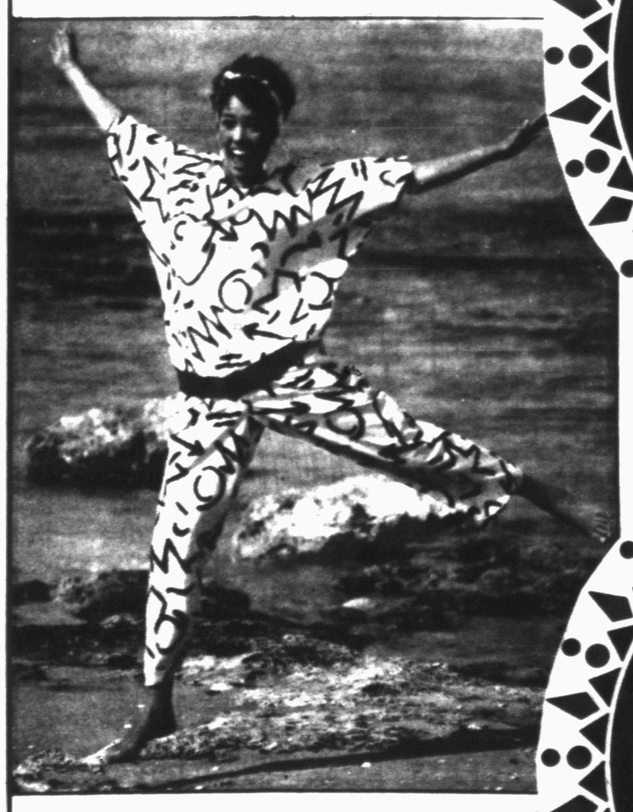

Soiled, stained or torn mattresses should also be replaced. Other questions to ask: Is the bedding firm and resilient when you lie on it and can you and your partner lie comfortably alongside each other when you retire?

Let's say you do decide to look for a new mattress, the council advises trying out the bed before you buy. Wear comfortable clothes when you go shopping. Take your sleeping partner along. Get a pillow and lie down in the position you normally take to fall asleep. The group advises trying the bed for at least 10 minutes, checking to make sure you both have enough space to stretch out.

Today, shoppers have more bedding choices then they did in the past. Nevertheless, most people — 75 percent in 1985 — still choose innerspring bedding which employs steel springs to give support.

If a family in Banaras, India, cannot afford enough firewood to burn their dead, sometimes they throw the corpse into the sacred Ganges, says National Geographic.

Wasted Pills, Wasted Pennies Result From Overprescription

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You seem to have a lot of compassion for us senior citizens, so maybe you can do something about this problem.

I am not the only one this has happened to; many of my friends complain of the same situation: The doctor writes a prescription for $90 worth of medicine. You take four of one kind, two of another kind and three of the third kind every day. You get all kinds of bad reactions from the pills, so the doctor changes your medication, leaving you with about $80 worth of pills you can't use. "Flush them down the toilet," he says, "so you won't take them by mistake!"

Why can't the doctor prescribe a small amount to begin with? You can always get a refill if the medication works, and if it doesn't, you won't be stuck with a lot of pills you can't use.

The druggist says it's against the law for him to take back pills once they are out of the store. Too bad I don't know another poor person who could use these useless pills prescribed for me. I would be glad to give them mine. I have a medicine cabinet full of them.

DEAR FIXED: You make an excellent point. Physicians, please take note, and consider the patient's pocketbook PRN.

DEAR ABBY: Rita (not her real name) and I just split up after a three-year relationship. She's 25 and I am 28. During the time we went together, I gave Rita many gifts. Some were expensive and others were not, but I asked her to return all my gifts. (She had given me some gifts, too, which I returned, although she told me she didn't want them.)

Well, last Sunday morning I found all the gifts I had given her dumped on my front lawn! Of course my neighbors saw this stuff on my lawn, and now I'm the laughing-stock of the neighborhood.

How would you handle this? I had given Rita a three-piece set of patio furniture, a microwave oven, a stereo, and about 20 stuffed animals. And to think I almost married her!

BURNED UP IN ALABAMA

DEAR BURNED: A gift is a gift — not a loan. True, Rita was spiteful to have dumped your gifts on the lawn for all to see, but it was tacky of you to ask her to return them. The exception would have been an engagement ring, which carries with it a promise to marry, in which case if she broke that promise, the gift should have been returned, quietly.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I've been living with a man for nine years. We have a 7-year-old son together, and I now feel as though it is important for us to get married and become a real family.

Whenever I bring this up, my boyfriend gives me a lot of excuses why he can't marry me. None are legitimate. This does not leave me feeling very good about myself. How can I get him to marry me?

DEAD END

DEAR DEAD END: You can't force a man to marry you if he doesn't want to. If you are concerned about your "rights," see a lawyer and find out if you are living in a state that recognizes common-law marriages. You may have all the legal rights of a wife, although what you really want is a ring on your finger, a certificate of marriage and a "Mrs." in front of your name.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 13-year-old kid who complained about her elders always telling her how hard they had it when they were kids struck a nostalgic note from my childhood. My grandfather loved to tell about his long treks to school when he was a boy. He'd say the snow was up to his waist (it got higher every year). As I got older, I got wiser, and finally reminded him that back in those days he was three feet shorter.

After that, I became his ex-favorite, and even though we remained buddies till he passed away, I wish I hadn't spoiled one of his favorite stories.

Foreign bankers concerned

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Foreign bankers have expressed concern that the surprise dismissal of Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog signaled a change in Mexico's negotiating position on its huge foreign debt.

Bankers, both in Mexico City and New York, also said Wednesday they were worried that President Miguel de la Madrid might move to oust other, well-regarded officials in his economic cabinet.

Local financial columnist Luis Mercado, considered to have well-placed government sources, reported there was talk that Miguel Mancera would resign his position as head of the Bank of Mexico, the nation's central bank. Officials at the central bank did not return repeated telephone calls.

Silva Herzog's departure, announced late Tuesday afternoon in a curt statement from the presidential office, came at a time the government is holding critical talks with the United States and the International Monetary Fund on a fresh financial aid package.

Gustavo Petricioli, director general of the Nacional Financiera, a government development bank, was sworn in as treasury chief just hours after the announcement of Silva Herzog's dismissal.

In Washington, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, a close friend of Silva Herzog, said he does not believe the firing means Mexico will default on payments on its $97.6 billion foreign debt.

"I would certainly not interpret it that way and I have no indication that it is a signal of that sort," Volcker told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he did not expect the cabinet change to alter U.S.-Mexico relations.

A knowledgeable Mexican government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, was asked whether Silva Herzog's dismissal meant a change in economic policy. He replied, "Absolutely not."

There have been widespread reports in Mexico City of dissension in the economic cabinet over how tough to be in negotiating the new financial aid package, expected to be worth $5 billion to $6 billion.

De la Madrid has repeatedly said the collapse in world oil prices has changed the outlook for the Mexican economy. He wants the international financial community to give Mexico easier terms on the debt.

Because of the sharp decline in oil prices, Mexico is expected to lose at least $6 billion in foreign sales of crude. It earned $13.3 billion in 1985.

According to bankers and local press reports, Silva Herzog had been opposed in the cabinet by officials who wanted Mexico to take a harder line on the debt, even to the point of declaring a moratorium on payments. There also was disagreement over making further cuts in the federal budget and getting rid of state-owned companies to save money.

Mercado reported in his column in the newspaper El Universal that Silva Herzog had threatened to resign several times in recent weeks as a means of pressuring the administration to adopt economic measures he favored.

Silva Herzog, who had been treasury secretary since March 1982, was highly regarded in the financial community.

Second poisoned capsule prompts Excedrin recall

SEATTLE (AP) — Investigators testing Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules following the death of a woman from poisoning found cyanide in a second bottle, prompting a nationwide recall of the product and an investigation of an earlier death.

The Food and Drug Administration late Wednesday issued a warning against use of the medication, and the manufacturer, Bristol-Myers, followed that with a recall of Extra-Strength capsules.

"The bottle shown to us did show positive for potassium cyanide," said Sue Hutchcroft, an FDA spokeswoman in Seattle, after a lab inspection.

That second bottle was taken to authorities by Stella Nickell of Auburn, Wash., whose husband's death June 5 was initially attributed to natural causes.

Ms. Nickell noticed that the lot number, 5-H102, on the bottle from which her husband reportedly took capsules matched those on a bottle used by Katherine Sue Snow, 40, of Auburn, who died June 11 of cyanide poisoning, authorities said.

The death of Bruce Nickell, 52, "is now being investigated as a cyanide-related death," the King County medical examiner's office said in a statement Wednesday night.

Test results on Nickell's remains were expected late today, said Bob Hill, spokesman for the medical examiner's office.

Cora Rice, Nickell's mother-in-law, said her daughter "has had a real tough time with this. It's going to take her a while before she can sort things out."

A neighbor of the Nickells', Jim Rogers, said the two Auburn deaths linked to cyanide have made him think for his own safety.

"The Tylenol thing was no big deal to me because that was back East," he said," referring to seven deaths in Chicago in 1982. "But when I heard it the other day, I went to the medicine cabinet and made sure I didn't have any. I won't take capsules again."

Bristol-Myers asked all consumers who have Excedrin capsules to return them in exchange for Excedrin tablets or a cash refund. Only the Extra-Strength form of Excedrin comes in capsules.

The company had earlier asked all major chains, wholesalers and distributors to remove the product from their shelves.

Jerry Parrott, company spokesman in New York, said the company had received no threats or other communication in the case.

Bristol-Myers asked all consumers who have Excedrin capsules to return them for Excedrin tablets or a cash refund to P.O. Box 1000, Baltimore, Md., 21268.

HOUSTON (AP) — A 70-year-old man who blows himself up inside a dynamite-filled coffin has pleaded innocent to charges he violated a federal law against storing explosives too near to a residence.

Patrick Albert O'Brien, alias "Captain Dynamite," denied the charges Wednesday and said: "I don't blow anybody up but myself."

'Even more excited now...'

Tigers finally Austin-bound

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

It wasn't state playoff caliber, but it was fun. Even Coach Albert Lewis let out a guffaw when Mike McWilliams' attempted throw-in from centerfield slipped from his hand and rolled several feet behind him.

"I think we're even more excited about going now than we were before," grinned McWilliams as the Tigers wrapped up a rain-soaked scrimmage with Big Spring and prepared to return home and pack for Austin.

The Tigers learned only a few hours before that the Texas State Supreme Court had ruled the Class 4A State Baseball Tournament would go on as scheduled - or rescheduled, since a series of lawsuits forced its postponement a week ago.

"It was getting tough concentrating in workouts, you know. You'd get out there and you were wondering if you were ever going to really get to play or not," the senior outfielder said.

His thoughts spoke for the whole team.

"You wondered if you were practicing for nothing," agreed third baseman Justin Webb, one of the Tiger captains. "Now it (the worrying) is over. We're real fired up about it."

Snyder got an abundance of hits, including a three-run homer from designated hitter Kenneth Pickering, and easily outscored the Big Spring Babe Ruth league team.

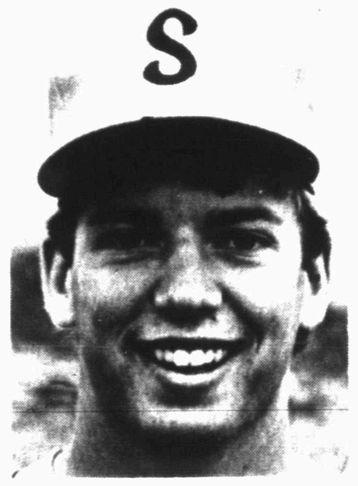

But both McWilliams and Webb agreed the scrimmage didn't provide the type competition they'll see at Austin when they square off against Brenham at 8:30 p.m. Friday on Disch-Falk Field.

"It's hard to tell anything because we know it won't really be like this at the state tournament, but we were glad to play somebody else for a change. We've been working out together so long now that it's been tough to have any intensity," said Webb.

"I know the pitching in Austin will be better but it was good to see some live pitching," agreed McWilliams.

Coach Albert Lewis said the scrimmage went "about like I expected. Monday we had a terrible workout but Tuesday the kids came back and had a real good workout. Today, they showed well. I was impressed.

"This (the scrimmage) will give us something to talk about. We made some mistakes that we won't be able to afford to make at the tournament and we can talk about those. They were mainly just mental errors. I thought we hit the ball real well. It wasn't against the type pitching we'll be seeing but it was much better work than the pitching machine would have given us. We're real grateful to Johnny Velasquez and his team for scrimmaging with us," the coach added.

Sutton cops 300th career win at expense of Texas Rangers

by The Associated Press

By hook or by crook, Don Sutton has joined baseball's select circle of 300-game winners.

"I've been trying legally ... and illegally ... to get here for years," the 41-year-old right-hander, who often has been accused of doctoring the ball, said Wednesday night after earning his pitching doctorate and becoming the 19th 300-game winner in major-league history. He tossed a three-hitter as the California Angels beat the Texas Rangers 5-1.

In his second try for No. 300, Sutton did not issue a walk and struck out three in handing the Rangers their fifth consecutive setback and slicing their lead in the American League West to one-half game over the Angels.

He retired 15 batters in a row at one stretch and the only Texas hits were by rookies - singles by Ruben Sierra in the second and eighth innings and Pete Incaviglia's homer in the seventh.

"What it means is that I just stayed around 21 years to win 300," said Sutton, 300-233 in his career and 5-5 this season. He got his first victory for the Los Angeles Dodgers against the Houston Astros on April 18, 1966, and collected 230 victories with the Dodgers from 1966-1980. He won 24 with the Astros, 26 with the Milwaukee Brewers and 13 with the Oakland A's before coming to the Angels late last season and splitting four decisions.

In other AL games, Oakland edged Kansas City 1-0, Boston trimmed New York 5-2, Detroit downed Baltimore 6-1, Minnesota outslugged Chicago 10-9 in 10 innings, Milwaukee beat Toronto 3-1 and Cleveland stopped Seattle 5-1.

A's 1, Royals 0

Dave Kingman's second-inning homer, his 15th of the season and 422nd of his career, enabled Curt Young to win a battle of four-hitters from Bret Saberhagen.

The Royals got their leadoff batter on base in six innings but did not get a runner past second base until the eighth when Mike Brewer doubled and was sacrificed to third but was out at the plate on Lonnie Smith's grounder to shortstop Alfredo Griffin. Young, a left-hander, who began the season in the minors, struck out two and walked two.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 2

Don Baylor, traded from New York in March, ripped a tie-breaking three-run double with one out in the ninth inning and Boston completed a three-game sweep behind Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's eight-hit pitching. Baylor's double came on a 3-2 pitch after he fouled off four consecutive pitches from Brian Fisher, who relieved Bob Shirley with runners on second and third and one out.

The loss was the fourth straight for the Yankees, their longest losing streak of the season.

New York's Ken Griffey, who was fined $10,000 earlier in the day for missing Tuesday night's game, homered with two out in the sixth to tie the game.

Longhorn duo named SWC Athletes of Year by media

DALLAS (AP) - University of Texas athletes Greg Swindell and Kamie Ethridge have been named by the media Southwest Conference Athletes of the Year, officials said Monday.

Swindell was college baseball's player of the year in 1986 and a three-time unanimous All-SWC choice. He won 43 games at Texas and led the Longhorns to three consecutive SWC titles.

As a freshman and sophomore, Swindell led the Longhorns to the championship game of the College World Series. He struck out 180 batters last spring to make his career total 501. Only three pitchers in college baseball history have struck out 500 or more.

Swindell compiled a 10-4 record as a junior. The Houston native will pass up a final year of eligibility after being drafted second overall by Cleveland June 2.

Ethridge was a consensus All-America in 1985-86 for the Lady Longhorn basketball team. As a senior, she led Texas to an unprecedented 34-0 record and the NCAA title.

Ethridge received the Wade Trophy as the top player nationally in women's basketball. She set a Final Four record with 20 assists.

Ethridge also has been active in her sport internationally, directing the U.S. to a silver medal in the 1985 World University Games and serving as an alternate on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team.

Ethridge earned All-SWC honors three times and was a Kodak All-America twice. She was rated first by media members on all but three ballots.

The following athletes also were nominated:

- Men Ralph Kraus, Arkansas, baseball; Tom Muecke, Baylor, football; Alvin Franklin, Houston, basketball; Gawain Guy, Rice, track and field; Reggie Dupard, SMU, football; Johnny Holland, Texas A&M, football; Jim Sorenson, TCU, golf; and Tony Benford, Texas Tech, basketball.

- Women: Debra Williams, Arkansas, basketball; Sandy Forsythe, Baylor, track and field; Sonya Watkins, Houston, basketball; Regina Cavanaugh, Rice, track and field; Martha Foyer, SMU, golf; Lisa Langston, Texas A&M, basketball; Rene' Simpson, TCU, tennis; and Debbie Crown, Texas Tech, volleyball.

UIL strips golf crown, names Stanton champ

AUSTIN (AP) - The University Interscholastic League has stripped the Class 2A state golf championship from Weimar for violating a UIL rule despite pleas from the players' parents, including one couple who said the coach had always played by the book.

The UIL state executive committee Wednesday also disqualified 3A golf runner-up Abilene Wylie and called for a statewide study of alleged widespread violations of UIL golf rules.

UIL director Bailey Marshall said Weimar would have to forfeit its championship trophy and medals. He said the second-place team, Stanton, would be declared champion.

In 3A, Devine would advance from third to runner-up to replace Wylie.

The UIL executive committee disqualified Weimar on a finding that its team, with the exception of one player, had violated a league rule by playing a practice round on the Colony Creek Country Club Golf Course at Victoria on Sunday, April 20, prior to the regional tournament on Monday.

The coach, Jack Kroll, who drove the team to the course on the school bus, was given a public reprimand and was placed on one-year probation.

"There were probably 10 other teams practicing at the same time we were practicing," said Kroll. "If there was a violation, it was in complete ignorance, and it's my fault."

Weimar Superintendent Wayne Wise testified, "There was no intent on anybody's part to violate a particular policy."

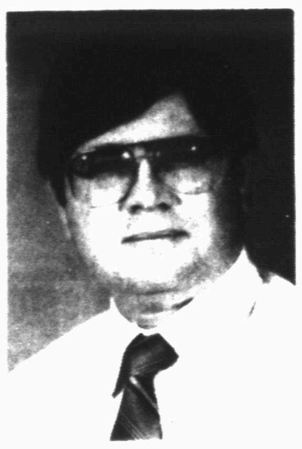

Frank and Genie Kainer, the parents of a team member, wrote that Kroll was "an excellent coach who always stayed within the Western needs strong finish to place well at finals rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. -- Coach Bob Doty had good news and bad news concerning his Western Texas College rodeo team at the College National Finals Rodeo here.

The good news is the WTC men's team is tied for second place in the team standings. The bad news is, unless they pick up some points in a hurry, they won't be there long.

"It's misleading," said Doty, of WTC's 120-point outing, which is tied with Montana State for second place. West Hills College leads with a whopping 247½.

"Some of the other teams have kids that maybe finished fifth (out of the points) in the go-rounds but they'll qualify for the finals. We need everybody from now on out to do well and place in the second-go. Hopefully we can get some people to the finals."

Tobin Tate won't make the finals in the bull riding, but his score of 73 Wednesday night is tied for first place in the second go-round. Unfortunately, he bucked off in the first-go, which knocks him out of a chance to make the average, or finals. First-go and second-go points are 120 for first place, 90 for second, 60 for third and 30 for second. They are 72, 54, 36 and 18 in the finals, but bulge to 168, 126, 84 and 42 in the average (total on three head).

Only the top 10 cowboys and cowgirls in each event qualify for Saturday's finals, and thus have a chance at the average points.

In the only other action involving WTC from Wednesday, Tate and Jim Smith clocked a 14.6 in team roping. Their total on two head is 23.10, 11th place overall.

Doty said WTC's other team ropers, Paul Yorks and Chuck Smith, have been moved down to ninth place with their 21.9. Keith Hudson stayed at eighth in the calf roping with a 24.8 on two head.

"There's almost no way Paul and Chuck will make it back (to the finals). There are about four calf ropers left that could move Keith down so we'll just have to wait and see on him," said Doty.

In other results from the rodeo, Odessa's Jim Sharp scored a 70 in the bull riding and is winning the average with 146 on two; and Karen Cochran of Howard timed a 2.3 and is in second place in the second-go of the breakaway roping.

Out tonight for Western are Tony Hecksher, Bliss Mayhan and Mike Carrillo in the bareback; Jim Smith in the calf roping and Niki Moist in the goat tying. Mayhan is also out in the bronc riding.

Aguirre would be happy just to remain in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) - Mavericks' forward Mark Aguirre, apparently close to being traded to the Los Angeles Lakers on NBA draft day, says he is just as happy to stay in Dallas.

"I love Dallas and I'd love to keep on playing here," Aguirre said. "I hope we play the running kind of game we did against Los Angeles in the playoffs. I feel that type of game is more suited to me."

Aguirre was at Reunion Arena, headquarters for the Mavericks, for Tuesday's draft and was aware of the rumors that Los Angeles was engineering a deal.

The hottest rumor would have sent Aguirre and power forward Roy Tarpley, drafted seventh by the Mavericks, for forward James Worthy and either Michael Cooper or Byron Scott.

"I'm sorry there is no trade announcements," said Dallas personnel director Rick Sund. "There have been a lot of rumors floating around with no validity."

Aguirre himself fueled speculation.

"I heard from an inside source that the Lakers are really interested," he said. "I talked with Magic (Johnson) the day before. He's actually pushing it quite a bit."

Aguirre, who is a longtime friend of Johnson's, said he wouldn't mind playing with the Lakers. "Who wouldn't? I'd like to play with Magic. He would love to play with me.

Aguirre, the Mavericks' star scorer, has been at odds with Coach Dick Motta at times and a trade would surprise few who follow the team.

"There's a conflict of styles," Aguirre said. "I can fit in any style but there comes a point where talent level comes into play.

"And right now that talent is dormant. I have to be allowed to show that talent."

He says a trade still is possible.

"As hard as they seemed to be trying, it looked like it might happen," he said. "There are times when I think Dallas will deal me. Of all the teams they could deal me to, the Lakers would be a good place for me to go."

He said he's taking a weight-training class and doing a lot of running to be ready for a quick start next season.

"That way, if I'm here people won't be upset with me. And if I'm not my new team will be pleased."

No matter what happens, he said, he bears no resentment toward the Mavericks.

"It would be hard to leave here," he said. "But if they think that trading me will help them get better, I can't blame them."

Tigers 6, Orioles 1

Rookie Eric King pitched a five-hitter for the first complete game of his major-league career and Larry Herndon hit a two-run homer. The Tigers had lost 12 of 16 games before winning three straight over the Orioles, who have dropped eight of their last 10. King walked two and struck out 10 in his third major-league start.

Wise said in a May 19 letter to the UIL, "Coach Kroll has been in the coaching profession for 27 years, and to my knowledge, he has never knowingly violated a UIL rule or policy."

Abilene Wylie was disqualified for playing at its regional site, the Mission Country Club Course in Odessa, on Sunday, April 20, eight days before the tournament, and also was disqualified for playing the course again on Sunday, April 27.

The UIL executive committee ruled May 7 that any school prior to regional competition which played more than 18 holes at the regional site or practiced on Sunday at the regional site should forfeit.

A motion to issue a private reprimand of Wylie golf coach Terry Lambert, which is the minimum penalty, failed on a 2-2 vote with one committee member abstaining.

Lambert said the first practice round came about when a parent drove the golf team to Odessa and he did not accompany the team. He added that he had been advised by the regional director that it would not be a violation if the team members used their own equipment.

Lambert said of the 32 teams in Wylie's region, "only one did I not see at the regional site on Sunday (April 27). Sunday practice was violated by everyone at the regional except one, and they may have."

"We've got a mess, to say the least," said UIL committee member James Havard.

Committee member Lynn Anderson called for a statewide study of compliance with UIL golf rules after citing "alleged and apparent random and wholesale violations." His motion was approved without objection.

The study would include consideration of revising the rule, the committee agreed.

In yet another golf ruling, the UIL committee dismissed a case in which Liberty Hill Principal-Athletic Director Charles Braun turned in his golf team for playing a Sunday practice round prior to regional at Victoria.

"Our league is going to be strong only if schools who do commit violations turn themselves in," Braun told the committee. "I know of a number of schools who did not report themselves."

Liberty Hill did not qualify for the state tournament, so the ruling had no effect on the state tournament results.

In other action Wednesday, the UIL committee:

- Placed Dallas South Oak Cliff track coach Leonard Grant and SOC football coach Edmond Peters on one-year probation for allegedly verbally abusing the referee at the Region II-5A track and field meet at Mesquite May 3. The coaches also will be given public reprimands.

Referee Pat Mitchell said the incident occurred after he had overruled a protest by Grant, who claimed his fourth runner on the 1,600-meter relay had been fouled by a runner from Texarkana.

Athletic Director John Kincaide of the Dallas Independent School District said his investigation of the incident showed that the "environment had been damaged, and the coaches were guilty of damaging that environment."

However, Kincaide said, "It was not an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation."

He noted that the Dallas ISD already had placed Grant and Peters on probation for one year and assessed a public reprimand.

The UIL committee said it was reaffirming the district and also commended it for its action.

- Placed Gilmer coaches Ron Dupree and Joe Black on probation for one year after a UIL investigator - acting on a call from an "interested citizen" - found the coaches watching from the sideline as five players passed a football before school at an elementary school gym. The coaches also will be publicly reprimanded.

Investigator B.J. Stamps said he told the coaches that he felt that tossing the ball around at 7 a.m. was in violation of the off-season workout rule.

Other complaints were that two ninth graders, including high school principal Harvey Rayson's son, had been pulled out of class to work out with upperclassmen and that football players were required to work out all summer.

NBA's second draft pick...

Maryland star dies suddenly

RIVERDALE, Md. (AP) - Len Bias, the 22-year-old University of Maryland basketball star drafted Tuesday by the National Basketball Association's Boston Celtics, died suddenly early today after suffering an apparent heart attack, a hospital official said.

Bias was brought to Leland Memorial Hospital, outside Washington, at 6:50 a.m. after suffering cardio-respiratory arrest, said Frank Berry, a spokesman at Leland Memorial Hospital. He was pronounced dead at 8:50 a.m.

Bias was brought to the hospital in an ambulance, said Berry.

Jack Zane, the University of Maryland's sports information officer, said Bias was stricken ill at his campus dormitory. He said his teammates summoned help.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell and members of the team also went to the hospital, Zane said.

Bias was the second man chosen in the first round of the NBA draft.

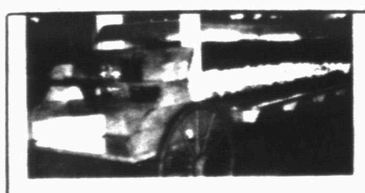

A two-time Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year for Maryland, the 6-foot-8 forward averaged 23.2 points during his senior, All-American season.

Shortly after the draft Tuesday, Bias, and his father, James, left New York for Boston and a chance to meet the Celtics media. The trip forced postponement of a celebration party for Bias and his family at their Landover home.

Bias is the third University of Maryland basketball player to die suddenly, either while still a student or shortly after graduating, in about the last 12 years, Zane said.

In 1974, about a year after he graduated, Owen Brown died while playing in a pickup game. Also during the mid-1970s, Chris Patton, while still enrolled at Maryland, died after being stricken ill while playing basketball near Byrd Stadium, said Zane. Both were found to be suffering from Marfans Syndrome.

Oil slump...

Cities in financial squeeze

DALLAS (AP) — City workers in Dallas recently received an unwelcome reminder of how the oil industry slump is affecting government — their pay was cut.

In Houston, officials are considering laying off more than 700 employees, and throughout Texas, cities are scrambling to ward off huge projected budget shortfalls, brought on as the municipal mainstays of sales and property tax funds sink under the weight of declining oil revenues.

Most cities are reporting flat sales tax revenues, a radical change from the years when the Sunbelt state seemed immune from the economic ailments of the rest of the nation, said Ted Willis, executive director of the Texas Municipal League in Austin.

"Although we may have weathered some previous dips better than other parts of the nation, by Texas standards we're in a very serious situation," Willis said.

League members are considering such measures as layoffs, tax hikes, reduction of services and switching to a 37-hour work week, Willis said.

Dallas officials were caught by a $7 million deficit this spring, necessitating a pay cut that took a 5 percent chunk out of administrators' pay checks and 1 percent from rank-and-file employees.

The deficit was due partly to disappointing sales tax revenues and partly because the city had to pay back money it had erroneously received in previous years, said deputy city manager Jan Hart.

Next year, city revenues are projected to fall $45 million short. Hart said that figure assumes some planned expansion will take place. She said officials have not decided whether to go ahead with the expansion and raise taxes or to scale back operations further.

Despite the deficits, Hart said the city likely will bear less of the brunt of falling oil prices because it is more diversified, with oil accounting for about 10 percent of the area's economy.

Dallas' economic growth rate dawdled to 1 percent last year, compared to 3 percent in 1983, but did not actually take a step backwards, said Bernard Wein stein, director of the Center for Enterprising at Southern Methodist University.

"I think the long-term outlook for us is still very positive, number one because of our diversity. We're not heavily wedded to one particular industry," Weinstein said.

In Houston, the problem of dealing with a projected $70 million deficit next year stretched a recent council meeting into a 12-hour marathon.

Mayor Kathy Whitmire proposes to make ends meet by axing 770 positions, contracting out some city services and instituting a new garbage fee, said Mike Loftin, assistant director of finance and administration.

Eight council members have said they will not support the garbage fee, previously paid out of property taxes.

Aliens to receive jobless benefits

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler on Friday will consider approving an out-of-court settlement that would extend unemployment benefits to some aliens and refugees living in Texas, the Longview News-Journal reported today.

The agreement stems from a lawsuit filed against the state in 1983 by Fred Ibarra, who was denied unemployment benefits because he wasn't a U.S. citizen.

Ibarra is represented by the federally-funded East Texas Legal Services Inc., which represents the poor and indigent.

The Texas Employment Commission has authorized the attorney general's office to settle the lawsuit with the proposed agreement, Assistant Attorney General Carla Crisford, who is representing the state, told the newspaper.

Ms. Crisford said she did not know what it would cost the state to extend the benefits, but she said that the number of previously rejected applicants who would qualify if the agreement is approved is about 1,500.

"In my opinion those people are not eligible for these benefits, period," said William J. Chambers, a member of the board of the Federation of American Immigration Reform, which is opposing the agreement.

"My prime point is that only those who are permanent residents are eligible, and none of these categories they list are permanent residents, and none of them are legal residents," said Chambers, who also is a retired director of the Dallas office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

According to the News-Journal, under the terms of the agreement the following persons could qualify for benefits:

— Refugees.
— Aliens conditionally admitted.
— Aliens paroled into the United States.

Neighbors shun 'terrified' label

DALLAS (AP) — Countering their ugly label in the British press as "terrified Texans," the newest neighbors of Mark Thatcher want to invite the son of the British prime minister to tea.

Ruby Beene, assistant manager of the condominium complex where Thatcher recently moved, said there has been "very little" support for a memo circulated by one resident who said Thatcher should be forced out because he was a terrorist target and posed a threat to his neighbors.

"Most of it's (the reaction) the other way," she said Wednesday. "They would like to invite him to tea."

She later amended that: "They said if he's here, they want to invite him to tea."

Ms. Beene said she couldn't verify that Thatcher actually lives in the luxury high-rise. "We have nothing official," she said, although one unidentified resident said management had confirmed Thatcher lived there.

Thatcher was evicted from one Dallas apartment where his landlords said they couldn't protect him from terrorist threats that followed the U.S. bombing of Libya, which garnered the support of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

After his move into a condominium complex, one of the residents last week circulated a memo to neighbors asking them to urge management to force him out again because his protection by the U.S. State Department doesn't extend to other residents.

News of the memo prompted former U.S. Sen. John Tower to say the fearful resident made Texans look like "a bunch of yellow-bellies."

"This reads bad back in London," he said.

In a Monday story, the tabloid London Daily Mail said, "Mark Thatcher is being hounded from his home for the second time by terrified TEXANS."

Berry's World

States pool resources in anti-drug effort

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — No money has been allocated to a four-state effort to stop narcotics traffic from Mexico into the United States, but pooling resources should make drug interdiction more effective, a Treasury Department official said.

"The initial commitment is to work within existing resources," said Francis A. Keating, assistant secretary of the Treasury Department for enforcement. "We're facing Gramm-Rudman and diminished resources."

He said it would be up to Congress to appropriate more money for the anti-drug effort along the U.S.-Mexico border, called the Southwest Border Initiative.

Expanding the search and seizure powers and jurisdiction of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, the U.S. Customs Service and the Border Patrol, will also give U.S. law enforcement officials an advantage in dealing with drug smuggling, he said.

Keating, appointed by Attorney General Edwin Meese to chair the SBI, is in charge of overseeing the enforcement of laws by such Treasury Department agencies as Customs and the Secret Service. He was in this border city Wednesday to head the first meeting of the SBI, attended by some 40 representatives of law enforcement agencies from California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

"We ... cannot wait idly by for America's appetite for drugs to subside," Keating told reporters at a news conference.

He said about a third of all cocaine, heroin and marijuana consumed in the United States is either grown in Mexico or reaches this country through our southern neighbor.

"This is not to point the finger at Mexico," he said. "They may be the retail liquor store, but we are the drunks."

The meeting, involving federal, state and local officials, took place at Fort Bliss, although military officials did not attend. However, military equipment such as planes has been employed in drug interdiction and will continue to be used for those purposes, Keating said.

Customs Commissioner William von Raab and other administration officials in recent weeks accused Mexican authorities of corruption in dealing with the drug traffic.

Keating called von Raab's allegations of Mexican corruption "very real" and said those comments have "put everything on the front burner."

"We are seizing much, much more in terms of the three major commodities — cocaine, marijuana and heroin — along the Southwest border, the main reason being Mexico," said Con Dougherty, a spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Adminisstration in Washington, D.C.

"They (Mexico) are resurging as a major supplier. Another new wrinkle is that Mexico is being used as a transshipment point, a springboard," for the drug traffic from South America to the United States, he said.

Florida is still a major entry point, Dougherty said.

Diet, activity and constipation

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is rice constipating?

DEAR READER — Rice is not generally considered to be constipating. Although starchy foods are not effective bowel stimulators, they will not ordinarily cause constipation unless a person takes too little fluid in the diet or has a tendency to sluggish bowels. Constipation has less to do with what we eat than with physical activity, adequate fluid intake and normal bowel function. As they age, some people experience constipation no matter what they eat. At this stage, increasing dietary roughage and potassium-containing fruits (like apricots and prunes) may help.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Are natural and anabolic steroids related?

DEAR READER — The term "steroid" usually refers to a group of cortisone-like drugs. But, in fact, many compounds made in the body are steroids. These include cortisone and related substances, sex hormones and bile acids. Some hydrocarbon carcinogens (cancer-producers) are members of the steroid family. Anabolic steroids are synthetic drugs that are derivatives of the naturally occurring male hormone testosterone. These compounds are sometimes used to promote tissue growth in patients who are debilitated and chronically ill. Although anabolic steroids are related to testosterone, they don't work in precisely the same way.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After I lost 40 pounds, my blood pressure returned to the normal range. I take 50 milligrams of Hydrodiuril and 40 milligrams of Lasix, but still get fluid retention in my ankle and one leg. What can I do for this problem?

DEAR READER — Unilateral edema (one-sided swelling) may be caused by circulatory abnormalities in one leg and not the other. Venous blockage or vein damage can cause this. Hydrodiuril is a mild diuretic compared to Lasix. I doubt that you need to take both. Elevate the swollen leg when possible, and check with your doctor to determine if your treatment can be altered or reduced.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 61, about 25 pounds overweight (and trying to lose) and work standing up all day. I have phlebitis in my ankle. What is the outcome of this disease. What can I do to help it?

DEAR READER — Phlebitis means inflammation of a vein lining. It can progress to phlebothrombosis, when a blood clot may form and adhere to the inflamed segment. This causes pain and swelling — ordinarily not a dangerous situation unless the affected vein is deep in the leg muscle. I suggest that you wear elastic support stockings or anklets while you are standing and try to elevate the leg whenever possible while at home or after work.

'Babies' may retire before physician

WACO, Texas (AP) — Back in 1926, the newly-graduated Dr. Hannibal L. "Joe" Jaworski often got night-time calls to pinch-deliver babies for other, drowsier doctors.

"Many times, the wives of the older doctors would call me to say I was needed to deliver a baby while their husbands were delivering another baby — but really, they were sleeping," Jaworski said. "I'd deliver in the country, in the little side streets. Often, the grandmother was giving the chloroform, and I delivered the baby by the light of a coal oil lamp."

Now, after six decades, it's a pretty solid bet that some of the babies he delivered under the kerosene glow will retire before he does. Still steady of hand at 84, Jaworski keeps his office open for patients half of each day and assists surgeons in their operations. Although he no longer operates on patients himself, other doctors often call him for consultations.

Known as "Dr. Joe" to thousands of patients, Jaworski began his medical career in Waco after graduating from Baylor College of Medicine in Dallas on May 31, 1926.

The following day, he began work as an intern at Central Texas Baptist Hospital, now Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center.

With him came a caring attitude and a penchant for innovation.

His philosophy of "be good to my patients, be honest with them and do the best I can" led him to:

— Help test penicillin on wounded soldiers in World War II. He remembers giving a patient what is now considered a tiny dose of penicillin — and staying up all night worrying, afraid the drug would kill the patient.

— Setting up the construction of surgical instruments to assist doctors in the first "blue baby" operations.

— Becoming the first local doctor to use an electrocardiogram.

— Becoming one of the first physicians to perform a Caesarean section — a procedure frowned upon at the time.

"They told me if I couldn't deliver babies in the 'normal' way, not to do it," Jaworski said. "They said if the baby died at birth that was the way the Lord intended it."

— Developing in 1937 the surgical technique of modified mastectomies as teatment for breast cancer. The technique is still in use, he said.

Jaworski went into medicine at the persuasion of his father, a minister who came to the United States from Germany when Jaworski was a baby.

Jaworski's late brother, Leon — who grew up to gain national fame as the Watergate prosecutor — originally wanted to be a doctor. The boys' father wanted them to practice together.

Before deciding on a career, "Joe" Jaworski tested himself in a hospital job to "see if I could stand the blood."

The nickname "Joe" was inherited from the orderly — named Joe — he replaced on that first job. His supervisor began calling Jaworski "Joe" — and it stuck.

"I was later Dr. Joe when I came back with my medical degree, Col. Joe in the Army, and Bwana Joe when I went game hunting," Jaworski said. "Half of my patients don't know my first name."

After his internship, he worked as a junior surgeon, one of several who "worked ourselves to death" for $100 a month.

The going rate for office calls was $1, house calls $1.50. "We got paid for very few of them," he said.

In 1929, he left Waco for postgraduate work in New York.

"Many surgeons advised us young doctors to go to Vienna, if only for a few months, and observe the surgical procedures. Vienna at the time was the center of surgery, as America is now."

Jaworski studied in Vienna and later in other European cities, before returning to Waco.

In 1942, Jaworski volunteered for Army medical service. "I was told by Selective Service here that I was not necessarily eligible," he said. "I was 40 years old and had the largest practice in Waco."

During the war, he supervised McCloskey General Hospital in Temple as director of surgical service.

"At the time, McCloskey was considered one of the largest Army hospitals with outstanding service to World War II casualties," he said.

Jaworski was transferred to the Philippines to set up hospitals in preparation for the anticipated American invasion of Japan. Doctors were told to expect 1 million casualties, but the invasion was canceled with the dropping of the atomic bomb.

When the war ended, Jaworski returned to set up practice in Waco, but he didn't stop seeing action.

In 1950, while at his home near Lake Waco, he heard cries for help one morning. "I got up to take some medicine because I had the flu," Jaworski said.

Jumping into a rowboat while still in his pajamas, Jaworski pulled two fishermen out of the lake — and broke some ribs in the process. For his efforts, he was given the Carnegie Hero Award.

Jaworski also is a big game hunter and avid fisherman.

Committee hears former employees

AUSTIN (AP) — Former employees of the Texas Supreme Court told a House investigating committee that all judges and their staffs were warned in 1983 about contact with attorneys with cases before the court.

Former Chief Justice Jack Pope sent out an "All Hands" memo warning everyone on the third floor, where the justices' offices are, to beware of contact with information-seeking attorneys.

Jeff Armstrong, former briefing attorney for Justice C.L. Ray, said another briefing attorney for another justice "was uncomfortable because he had heard a judge discussing a case with attorneys like he would his staff."

"He wrote a letter to Chief Justice Pope asking guidance on contact with attorneys and Justice Pope's memo came out the next week," Armstrong testified before the House Judicial Affairs Committee. He was ordered to appear under threat of contempt of the Legislature.

Another witness said that one Supreme Court justice promised a campaign contributor help on a matter before the court while another justice showed a confidential court file to a state senator.

"We learned some things today but we will have to review the transcript to see where we go from here," said Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, chairman, after almost five hours of testimony.

Tejeda said the committee also must decide when it will meet again and if it will subpoena more witnesses.

Houston investor Henry J.N. Taub told the committee that Associate Justice C.L. Ray told him at a fund-raising affair in Houston that he would help Taub in a matter before the court. Taub said he found out later the court already had ruled against Taub, who wanted a rehearing in a Webb County oil and gas lease case.

Armstrong, Austin attorney who formerly was a briefing attorney for Associate Justice Franklin Spears, said he was present when Associate Justice William Kilgarlin came into Spears' office and asked to see Spears' file on a pending court case.

Armstrong said another Spears assistant gave the file to Kilgarlin who turned and handed it to a man, that Armstrong later learned was state Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, who also is a Dallas attorney.

Grain war threatens recovery in Africa

ROME (AP) — U.N. crop specialists say a grain war between the United States and Europe threatens agriculture in Africa, which is emerging from deadly drought, with the crippling effects of too much food at bargain prices.

Delegates to the annual World Food Council ministerial conference that ended here Wednesday differed in heated discussion over how to prevent such a crises on the African continent.

Said U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng, "Unless developed countries cooperate to reform their agricultural policies, I see no end to the pitiless cycle of economic crisis ... in Africa."

Later, he said there was American ambivalence over U.N. efforts to raise money to move food from surplus to deficit countries within Africa.

"The idea of surpluses in Africa is something we hadn't anticipated," he said with a slight laugh. "We are concerned about our own surpluses."

New U.S. legislation allows the government to subsidize food exports to help recover what it considers to be its share of the world market. U.S. officials want farm products covered by general world trade agreements.

Opening the three-day ministerial session Monday, Italian Agriculture Minister Filippo Maria Pandolfi warned that not only Africa but the entire Third World risked suffering from the U.S.-European price war.

"Remarkable progress in the Third World risks being made useless by competition — often heavily subsidized — from industrialized countries," he said.

Suicide suspected in cyanide death

AUSTIN (AP) — The discovery that cyanide found in Anacin-3 capsules had come from a university laboratory has led the Travis County medical examiner to believe an ex-chemistry student committed suicide.

"The evidence is very strong he committed suicide," Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo said Wednesday.

The latest evidence was a conclusion by a U.S. Food and Drug Administraton lab in Cincinnati that the poison found in a capsule found in the apartment of Kenneth Wayne Faries, 24, came from a University of Texas laboratory to which he had access.

"One of the samples that was gathered from a chemistry lab that the victim had access to as a student was identified as matching the cyanide recovered from the Anacin capsule," said Sgt. David Parkinson of the Austin police department.

Faries was a chemistry student at UT in the fall of 1985 but later dropped out, officials said. His death was ruled a homicide last month after the cyanide was found in the capsules.

Bayardo said he made that preliminary ruling to ensure a full investigation.

"I based the preliminary ruling on previous cyanide deaths. At that time, there was no evidence of personality or school problems," said the medical examiner.

He did not elaborate on what personal problems he had uncovered.

Escalated arms race may result from SDI spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,600 scientists at top government and industrial laboratories warned Congress today that the Reagan administration is trying to boost "Star Wars" spending too quickly and is thereby risking "a significant escalation of the arms race."

Many of those who signed the letter work at laboratories engaged in Star Wars research, including the government's Livermore, Sandia and Los Alamos laboratories, and at private defense contractors such as Boeing, Bell, Raytheon and the Lincoln Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, "has grown into a major program without the technical and policy scrutiny appropriate to an undertaking of this magnitude. We therefore feel that we must speak out now," the scientists said in a letter to Congress.

The letter was delivered to a news conference sponsored by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Dan Evans, R-Wash., who have put together a bipartisan coalition of 48 senators opposing further increases in the SDI budget. The coalition is three members short of an absolute majority in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Reagan has said the United States should develop the Star Wars technologies to decide in the early 1990s whether to deploy such a system, which is envisioned as a space-based defense against ballistic missile attacks.

Last year, the administration asked Congress to approve $3.77 billion in Pentagon spending on SDI, and nearly $400 million by the Energy Department. Congress approved $2.76 for the Pentagon and $282 million for the Energy Department.

This year, the administration is seeking $4.8 billion in SDI spending by the Pentagon, and $606 million for the Energy Department, a total of $5.4 billion.

But the House Armed Services Committee staff is proposing just $3.1 billion for SDI, and the Senate Armed Services Committee is considering a proposal to cut Reagan's request to $4.6 billion, according to congressional sources speaking Wednesday only on condition of anonymity.

Evans, noting that Congress has appropriated $5.5 billion for SDI research since 1984, said, "I do not believe that we will continue to have a responsible, manageable research effort if we elect to spend as much in the next year on SDI as we have spent in the last three years"

"A highly accelerated research program will inevitably result in waste, overburdened management and incomplete technical scrutiny," he said.

The scientists and senators did not call for a total halt in research on technologies which might be used in a defense system such as Star Wars, but urged what Johnston called "a realistic program."

The scientists said that "the stated goal of SDI is developing the means to render nuclear weapons 'impotent and obsolete,'" as the president declared in a March 1983 speech that launched the program.

"We believe that the realization of this dream is not feasible in the foreseeable future," said the scientists, who include three Nobel laureates and are drawn from 26 government and 70 industrial labs.

Amendments delay tax revision proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's effort to approve the most thorough revision of the federal tax code in a generation is being delayed by a last-minute flurry of amendments to grant special tax breaks.

The tenth day of Senate debate on the landmark measure was beginning today with legislators scrambling to try to have amendments protecting special interests attached to the bill before it is finally passed.

Predictions of when there will be a final vote on the legislation drafted by the Senate Finance Committee have slipped all week as legislators sought support for their particular amendments.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., becoming increasingly frustrated at the pace of activity, said the Senate's pace was "like watching paint dry."

He also noted that at 8 p.m. Wednesday, about 20 amendments were pending. Senate debate droned on through the evening and by 11:20 p.m., Dole announced that "50 some" amendments were pending.

The number grew as the Senate remained in session past midnight for the second night in a row.

In general, the bill would compress more than a dozen individual tax rates into two rates: 27 percent and 15 percent. The top individual rate is now 50 percent.

It also would cut the top corporate rate of 46 percent to 33 percent. Small businesses would pay as little as 15 percent.

In addition, the legislation would end an array of popular tax breaks for individuals and businesses.

Deputies seize alcoholic beverage

Scurry County sheriff's deputies seized a load of alcoholic beverages allegedly bound for illegal sale in Snyder Wednesday afternoon.

Investigators said they stopped a 1975 Chrysler near the intersection of 37th St. and Ave. B at 1 p.m. and found a large quantity of beer, whiskey and gin.

A 54-year-old Snyder man — driving the car — was arrested and charged with a single misdemeanor count of illegally transporting alcoholic beverages in a dry county.

The beverages and the vehicle were seized by county authorities as evidence in the case.

The suspect was released from custody later Wednesday afternoon after posting a $500 bond on the charge.

Mailbox struck in rural wreck

Snyder-based Department of Public Safety highway patrolmen investigated a minor one-vehicle accident west of the city Wednesday afternoon.

According to reports, Thomas Harold Crane of Ira apparently lost control of his 1976 Honda car, striking a mail box near the intersection of Farm Rds. 1609 and 1606 at 4:45 p.m.

A non-contact vehicle which fled the scene is thought to have pulled onto the roadway in front of Crane's car — causing him to strike the mailbox while avoiding a collision with the other vehicle.

Wednesday has four city wrecks

Police investigated four minor traffic accidents in the city Wednesday.

The first was reported in the 2300 Block of 25th St. at 11:25 a.m.

Involved in it were a 1982 Ford driven by Cecil Higdon Fulks and a 1982 Ford driven by Gerald Ray Hope of Sweetwater.

Involved in the second — at 11:46 a.m. in the 1800 Block of 37th St. — were a 1978 GMC pickup and boat trailer rig driven by Harold Shelby Armour of Odessa and a 1985 Ford driven by Nancy Featherston Freeman of Ingram.

The 200 Block of 26th St. was the scene of the day's third mishap at 4:19 p.m.

Involved in it was a 1975 AMC [illegible] driven by James Earl Powell of [illegible] 25th St. which struck a City of [illegible] owned trash dumpster.

Arrests, theft noted by police

Police logged three misdemeanor arrests and began investigating a single bicycle theft complaint Wednesday.

Mickey Burnett of 2711 Ave. R filed the bike theft report at 7:04 p.m.

Police were told a 20-inch BMX bike had been taken from outside the residence sometime earlier in the day.

Misdemeanor arrests included one suspect for driving while intoxicated, one for public intoxication and disorderly conduct and one for driving with a suspended license.

Students want university open

ALPINE, Texas (AP) — Kay Odell takes talk about saving state funds by closing down Texas colleges very personally.

With an infant son to support, she is a psychology major at Sul Ross State University hoping to better her income and her family's future. But the talk by the Select Committee on Higher Education about closing Sul Ross and three other Texas schools to trim state expenses is clouding that dream, she said.

"The only reason I'm here is for my son. His hopes for a bright future are relying solely on me and what I do with myself," said the 29-year-old student.

Ms. Odell and son Ross live in a $225-a-month, university-owned apartment. She receives $100 a month from a state welfare program and makes slightly above minimum wage from a part-time secretarial job.

"If they close Sul Ross, I won't have anywhere else to go," she said. "You finally find a way to better yourself, and they take it away from you."

The four apparently endangered institutions — Sul Ross, the University of Texas Permian Basin in Odessa, Texas A&M at Galveston and East Texas State University in Commerce — are also candidates for mergers, according to the June 2 memorandum from the committee.

The memo asked university adminstrators to furnish committee members written statements and other information concerning possible closures, mergers or changes in governance.

It listed Sul Ross, located about 155 miles southwest of Odessa, as eligible for merger with either Angelo State University in San Angelo or Lubbock's Texas Tech University.

Last fall, 1,667 students enrolled at Sul Ross, down about 5 percent from the previous year, school records show. But despite the relatively small size, President Jack W. Humpries said Sul Ross is the only alternative for many area residents isolated from other colleges in Texas.

His comment is echoed by Sul Ross students, who say closing the 69-year-old university would jeopardize their hopes of an advanced education.

Roland Cedillo, a 20-year-old industrial arts major, said he could attend another university but that his career eventually would suffer.

"I've been able to get hands-on experience at Sul Ross, and that's something that a lot of the other schools can't offer like they do here," the second-year student told the Odessa American.

"Those people in Austin pass it off as being just Sul Ross. It's more important than just Sul Ross to us. It's our life. And they want to close it down?" he asked. "This university serves a purpose for every student here."

If Sul Ross had not been available in Alpine, one recent graduate of the university said, his education would have stopped after high school.

"There's no way I could have afforded to go anywhere else," said 23-year-old Gabriel Garcia, a native of Marathon, a small community about 30 miles southeast of Alpine.

Cedillo and Garcia said fellow Sul Ross students have begun collecting information about a possible closure. But, they said, the student body has yet to organize public protests or demonstrations.

Humpries says southwest Texas has a dire need for a local university.

"There would be no educational opportunity available to them if we weren't here," he declared.

The school's cost per student is $3,500, slightly lower than the state's average of $3,811, he noted.

Because of depressed oil tax revenues, the dollar-chopping ax also is being wielded on Sul Ross' budget, Humpries said. State coffers provide about 75 percent of the school's annual $11.5 million operational budget.

University backers, he reported, have been reluctant to initiate a support rally until they know what action will be taken by the Texas State Universities System, of which Sul Ross is a member.

Select committee members have said they plan to make a decision on the proposed closings by July 11.

"I think the committee needs to marshal together the facts and the need for higher education in West Texas," Committee Chairman Larry Temple said last week.

Lincoln School history retold

School continued, however.

Beginning in 1967, the school district used it for its Head Start program. This continued for two years, ending in the spring of 1970.

During this time, the Western Texas College district was approved by county voters, and the Lincoln School was used to house college classes while the campus buildings were under construction in 1970.

Shortly after this, the school district deeded the building to the Industrial Foundation. The building passed from public hands when the foundation sold it.

TECAT to court

AUSTIN (AP) — In raising teacher salaries, the Legislature also demanded competency in the classroom, a lawyer defending the teacher literacy test has told the Texas Supreme Court.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon was asked by Chief Justice John Hill on Wednesday if teachers had been "singled out" among other employees to pass a reading and writing test to keep their jobs next fall.

"No, they're not," O'Hanlon responded. He said certified public accountants, lawyers, medical students and engineers all must pass multiple-part tests to be certified.

O'Hanlon said House Bill 72 had raised the national rank of Texas teaching salaries from 34th to 21st but also had required competency from those "who received benefits of the state's largess in this area."

He said the test "comports with the intent of the Legislature, and that is to make teaching truly a profession in this state."

O'Hanlon's arguments before the Supreme Court involved a plea on behalf of 350 Starr County educators against the literacy test.

The court was advised, however, that the lawsuit did not include all the issues raised by educators against the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers, or TECAT.

The Texas State Teachers Association had asked the court to delay the Starr County suit and consolidate it with the TSTA suit in which the 3rd Court of Appeals at Austin ruled last Friday that the literacy exam was a legal exercise of the state's "police power."

The Supreme Court denied the TSTA motion.

"Ours is the only case which includes all the issues — both statutory and constitutional — and ours is the only case which represents all administrators and teachers in Texas," TSTA President Charles Beard said in a statement.

Representatives of TSTA were in the courtroom for arguments on the Starr County case filed by Project Principle, Inc., a nonprofit teachers' organization.

The organization obtained a temporary restraining order from State District Judge Ricardo Garcia that said the state could not take away the educators' teaching certificates if they failed the exam.

G. Allen Ramirez, a Rio Grande City lawyer representing Project Principle, argued that the Legislature had deleted provisions providing state funds for recertification of teachers yet the State Board of Education had used state money for that purpose in connection with the TECAT.

Chief Justice Hill asked Ramirez if that was "best" argument, and Ramirez replied, "I think it's one of the strongest."

"The Legislature did not intend to deny certification on one test alone," he said. He added that a test on subject matter would be a 'better gauge" of a teacher's competency.

Alice lawyer Jaime Garza, also representing Project Principle, said public reform legislation required at least three — "I count five" — exams but the TECAT was presented as subordinate. To rely on that test, he said, "is the tail wagging the dog.

Escalated arms race may result from SDI spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,600 scientists at top government and industrial laboratories warned Congress today that the Reagan administration is trying to boost "Star Wars" spending too quickly and is thereby risking "a significant escalation of the arms race."

Many of those who signed the letter work at laboratories engaged in Star Wars research, including the government's Livermore, Sandia and Los Alamos laboratories, and at private defense contractors such as Boeing, Bell, Raytheon and the Lincoln Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, "has grown into a major program without the technical and policy scrutiny appropriate to an undertaking of this magnitude. We therefore feel that we must speak out now," the scientists said in a letter to Congress.

The letter was delivered to a news conference sponsored by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Dan Evans, R-Wash., who have put together a bipartisan coalition of 48 senators opposing further increases in the SDI budget. The coalition is three members short of an absolute majority in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Reagan has said the United States should develop the Star Wars technologies to decide in the early 1990s whether to deploy such a system, which is envisioned as a space-based defense against ballistic missile attacks.

Last year, the administration asked Congress to approve $3.77 billion in Pentagon spending on SDI, and nearly $400 million by the Energy Department. Congress approved $2.76 for the Pentagon and $282 million for the Energy Department.

This year, the administration is seeking $4.8 billion in SDI spending by the Pentagon, and $606 million for the Energy Department, a total of $5.4 billion.

But the House Armed Services Committee staff is proposing just $3.1 billion for SDI, and the Senate Armed Services Committee is considering a proposal to cut Reagan's request to $4.6 billion, according to congressional sources speaking Wednesday only on condition of anonymity.

Evans, noting that Congress has appropriated $5.5 billion for SDI research since 1984, said, "I do not believe that we will continue to have a responsible, manageable research effort if we elect to spend as much in the next year on SDI as we have spent in the last three years"

"A highly accelerated research program will inevitably result in waste, overburdened management and incomplete technical scrutiny," he said.

The scientists and senators did not call for a total halt in research on technologies which might be used in a defense system such as Star Wars, but urged what Johnston called "a realistic program."

The scientists said that "the stated goal of SDI is developing the means to render nuclear weapons 'impotent and obsolete,'" as the president declared in a March 1983 speech that launched the program.

"We believe that the realization of this dream is not feasible in the foreseeable future," said the scientists, who include three Nobel laureates and are drawn from 26 government and 70 industrial labs.

Amendments delay tax revision proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's effort to approve the most thorough revision of the federal tax code in a generation is being delayed by a last-minute flurry of amendments to grant special tax breaks.

The tenth day of Senate debate on the landmark measure was beginning today with legislators scrambling to try to have amendments protecting special interests attached to the bill before it is finally passed.

Predictions of when there will be a final vote on the legislation drafted by the Senate Finance Committee have slipped all week as legislators sought support for their particular amendments.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., becoming increasingly frustrated at the pace of activity, said the Senate's pace was "like watching paint dry."

He also noted that at 8 p.m. Wednesday, about 20 amendments were pending. Senate debate droned on through the evening and by 11:20 p.m., Dole announced that "50 some" amendments were pending.

The number grew as the Senate remained in session past midnight for the second night in a row.

In general, the bill would compress more than a dozen individual tax rates into two rates: 27 percent and 15 percent. The top individual rate is now 50 percent.

It also would cut the top corporate rate of 46 percent to 33 percent. Small businesses would pay as little as 15 percent.

In addition, the legislation would end an array of popular tax breaks for individuals and businesses.

Deputies seize alcoholic beverage

Scurry County sheriff's deputies seized a load of alcoholic beverages allegedly bound for illegal sale in Snyder Wednesday afternoon.

Investigators said they stopped a 1975 Chrysler near the intersection of 37th St. and Ave. B at 1 p.m. and found a large quantity of beer, whiskey and gin.

A 54-year-old Snyder man — driving the car — was arrested and charged with a single misdemeanor count of illegally transporting alcoholic beverages in a dry county.

The beverages and the vehicle were seized by county authorities as evidence in the case.

The suspect was released from custody later Wednesday afternoon after posting a $500 bond on the charge.

Mailbox struck in rural wreck

Snyder-based Department of Public Safety highway patrolmen investigated a minor one-vehicle accident west of the city Wednesday afternoon.

According to reports, Thomas Harold Crane of Ira apparently lost control of his 1976 Honda car, striking a mail box near the intersection of Farm Rds. 1609 and 1606 at 4:45 p.m.

A non-contact vehicle which fled the scene is thought to have pulled onto the roadway in front of Crane's car — causing him to strike the mailbox while avoiding a collision with the other vehicle.

Wednesday has four city wrecks

Police investigated four minor traffic accidents in the city Wednesday.

The first was reported in the 2300 Block of 25th St. at 11:25 a.m.

Involved in it were a 1982 Ford driven by Cecil Higdon Fulks and a 1982 Ford driven by Gerald Ray Hope of Sweetwater.

Involved in the second — at 11:46 a.m. in the 1800 Block of 37th St. — were a 1978 GMC pickup and boat trailer rig driven by Harold Shelby Armour of Odessa and a 1985 Ford driven by Nancy Featherston Freeman of Ingram.

The 200 Block of 26th St. was the scene of the day's third mishap at 4:19 p.m.

Involved in it was a 1975 AMC driven by James Earl Powell of 100 25th St. which struck a City of Snyder owned trash dumpster.

A Lamesa man filed the day's last accident report at 9:30 p.m.

Joe Dan Earnest of Lamesa told police that his 1973 Volkswagen van had apparently been struck by an unidentified vehicle while parked in Towle Park earlier in the evening.

No injuries resulted from any of the Wednesday mishaps.

Mickey Burnett of 2711 Ave. R filed the bike theft report at 7:04 p.m.

Police were told a 20-inch BMX bike had been taken from outside the residence sometime earlier in the day.

Misdemeanor arrests included one suspect for driving while intoxicated, one for public intoxication and disorderly conduct and one for driving with a suspended license.

Students want university open

ALPINE, Texas (AP) — Kay Odell takes talk about saving state funds by closing down Texas colleges very personally.

With an infant son to support, she is a psychology major at Sul Ross State University hoping to better her income and her family's future. But the talk by the Select Committee on Higher Education about closing Sul Ross and three other Texas schools to trim state expenses is clouding that dream, she said.

"The only reason I'm here is for my son. His hopes for a bright future are relying solely on me and what I do with myself," said the 29-year-old student.

Ms. Odell and son Ross live in a $225-a-month, university-owned apartment. She receives $100 a month from a state welfare program and makes slightly above minimum wage from a part-time secretarial job.

"If they close Sul Ross, I won't have anywhere else to go," she said. "You finally find a way to better yourself, and they take it away from you."

The four apparently endangered institutions — Sul Ross, the University of Texas Permian Basin in Odessa, Texas A&M at Galveston and East Texas State University in Commerce — are also candidates for mergers, according to the June 2 memorandum from the committee.

The memo asked university adminstrators to furnish committee members written statements and other information concerning possible closures, mergers or changes in governance.

It listed Sul Ross, located about 155 miles southwest of Odessa, as eligible for merger with either Angelo State University in San Angelo or Lubbock's Texas Tech University.

Last fall, 1,667 students enrolled at Sul Ross, down about 5 percent from the previous year, school records show. But despite the relatively small size, President Jack W. Humpries said Sul Ross is the only alternative for many area residents isolated from other colleges in Texas.

His comment is echoed by Sul Ross students, who say closing the 69-year-old university would jeopardize their hopes of an advanced education.

Roland Cedillo, a 20-year-old industrial arts major, said he could attend another university but that his career eventually would suffer.

"I've been able to get hands-on experience at Sul Ross, and that's something that a lot of the other schools can't offer like they do here," the second-year student told the Odessa American.

"Those people in Austin pass it off as being just Sul Ross. It's more important than just Sul Ross to us. It's our life. And they want to close it down?" he asked. "This university serves a purpose for every student here."

If Sul Ross had not been available in Alpine, one recent graduate of the university said, his education would have stopped after high school.

"There's no way I could have afforded to go anywhere else," said 23-year-old Gabriel Garcia, a native of Marathon, a small community about 30 miles southeast of Alpine.

Cedillo and Garcia said fellow Sul Ross students have begun collecting information about a possible closure. But, they said, the student body has yet to organize public protests or demonstrations.

Humpries says southwest Texas has a dire need for a local university.

"There would be no educational opportunity available to them if we weren't here," he declared.

The school's cost per student is $3,500, slightly lower than the state's average of $3,811, he noted.

Because of depressed oil tax revenues, the dollar-chopping ax also is being wielded on Sul Ross' budget, Humpries said. State coffers provide about 75 percent of the school's annual $11.5 million operational budget.

University backers, he reported, have been reluctant to initiate a support rally until they know what action will be taken by the Texas State Universities System, of which Sul Ross is a member.

Select committee members have said they plan to make a decision on the proposed closings by July 11.

"I think the committee needs to marshal together the facts and the need for higher education in West Texas," Committee Chairman Larry Temple said last week.

Lincoln School history retold

School continued, however.

Beginning in 1967, the school district used it for its Head Start program. This continued for two years, ending in the spring of 1970.

During this time, the Western Texas College district was approved by county voters, and the Lincoln School was used to house college classes while the campus buildings were under construction in 1970.

Shortly after this, the school district deeded the building to the Industrial Foundation. The building passed from public hands when the foundation sold it.

TECAT to court

AUSTIN (AP) — In raising teacher salaries, the Legislature also demanded competency in the classroom, a lawyer defending the teacher literacy test has told the Texas Supreme Court.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon was asked by Chief Justice John Hill on Wednesday if teachers had been "singled out" among other employees to pass a reading and writing test to keep their jobs next fall.

"No, they're not," O'Hanlon responded. He said certified public accountants, lawyers, medical students and engineers all must pass multiple-part tests to be certified.

O'Hanlon said House Bill 72 had raised the national rank of Texas teaching salaries from 34th to 21st but also had required competency from those "who received benefits of the state's largess in this area."

He said the test "comports with the intent of the Legislature, and that is to make teaching truly a profession in this state."

O'Hanlon's arguments before the Supreme Court involved a plea on behalf of 350 Starr County educators against the literacy test.

The court was advised however, that the lawsuit did not include all the issues raised by educators against the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers, or TECAT.

The Texas State Teachers Association had asked the court to delay the Starr County suit and consolidate it with the TSTA suit in which the 3rd Court of Appeals at Austin ruled last Friday that the literacy exam was a legal exercise of the state's "police power."

The Supreme Court denied the TSTA motion.

"Ours is the only case which includes all the issues — both statutory and constitutional — and ours is the only case which represents all administrators and teachers in Texas," TSTA President Charles Beard said in a statement.

Representatives of TSTA were in the courtroom for arguments on the Starr County case filed by Project Principle, Inc., a nonprofit teachers' organization.

The organization obtained a temporary restraining order from State District Judge Ricardo Garcia that said the state could not take away the educators' teaching certificates if they failed the exam.

G. Allen Ramirez, a Rio Grande City lawyer representing Project Principle, argued that the Legislature had deleted provisions providing state funds for recertification of teachers yet the State Board of Education had used state money for that purpose in connection with the TECAT.

Chief Justice Hill asked Ramirez if that was "best" argument, and Ramirez replied, "I think it's one of the strongest."

"The Legislature did not intend to deny certification on one test alone," he said. He added that a test on subject matter would be a 'better gauge" of a teacher's competency.

Alice lawyer Jaime Garza, also representing Project Principle, said public reform legislation required at least three — "I count five" — exams but the TECAT was presented as subordinate. To rely on that test, he said, "is the tail wagging the dog.
