New chief of police chosen

Search nets commander from Tucson, Ariz.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The appointment of Midland's new chief of police, 53-year-old Richard Czech, was approved unanimously late this morning by the City Council.

Czech, currently a commander in the Tucson, Ariz., Police Department, was picked for the job following an extensive nationwide four-month search.

Czech, in a telephone interview from his office, said he plans to "build the department on top of what is already there," and he said he expects to make no immediate sweeping changes.

"I have looked at the facility and talked to a few of the commanders," Czech said. "And I was very much impressed with the city. It looks modern and looks like it is progressive. And it is in the Southwest and I love the Southwest."

In announcing the appointment, City Manager James Brown said the city was "fortunate" to get Czech. He said all four finalists considered were "extremely well-qualified," and he said the city staff conducted a "thorough investigation" of the background of each.

Czech, a 24-year veteran in the Tucson department in charge of operation support there, said he has read and would consider implementation of a management study commissioned by the city and issued May 13 that criticized organization of the department.

Following release of the study to the City Council, Chief Wayne Gideon, who held the top post since 1976, resigned abruptly. His assistant chief, Maj. Sid Corley, has run the department since Gideon left office June 30.

"I think I need to study the report and discuss some things with the city manager," he said. "I think it was very professional and very well done, and from what I could see I would institute some of what I saw in it."

Czech was not specific about any changes he might make, but he did say he would probably replace the current assistant chief position with at least two, perhaps three deputy chief positions. He said that move would improve communication in upper echelons of the department and around the chief.

Czech said he is excited to come to Midland and is proud of what he can bring to the department here.

"I have obtained all of my goals here, and I have been looking for that opportunity (as chief)," he said. "I have tried to be a good commander here and I think I have."

Czech said his greatest attributes are his management style, leadership ability and insistence on communication within the department.

He said he and his wife Karen would travel to Midland "as soon as possible" to find a place to live.

Sources say accused spy wanted to embarrass U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former Air Force sergeant dismissed for poor performance in his work on aerial reconnaissance cameras "wanted to embarrass the United States" by delivering secrets to the Soviet Union, officials say.

Allen John Davies, 33, of San Jose, showed no emotion Monday during arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Frederick Woelflen and was held without bail pending a hearing Thursday.

Davies was arrested Monday by FBI agents in Palo Alto, where he has an unclassified job as a laboratory technician for Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp., said U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello.

The naturalized American faces up to life in prison if convicted.

"His apparent motive was spite," Russoniello said, adding that Davies had been discharged from the Air Force in 1984 for "inadequate job performance" and felt his dismissal was unjustified.

A service record released by the Air Force at the Pentagon, however, said Davies received an honorable discharge.

One Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Davies did not appear to pose a significant threat to U.S. military interests.

The official said Davies had spent his 10-year Air Force career working on photo-reconnaissance camera systems and other sensors "employed on tactical reconnaissance fighters."

"He was not working on stuff that goes in satellites or aboard U-2's" and other high altitude planes, the official said.

According to a sworn statement by an FBI agent filed in federal court, Davies said he offered the information to an undercover FBI agent "out of revenge because of the unfair way he was treated while in the Air Force." The agent said Davies "stated that he wanted to do something to embarrass the U.S. and to interfere with the effectiveness of its reconnaissance activities."

Russoniello declined to give details about materials Davies had offered, except that they dealt with photographic reconnaissance.

FBI Agent Roger Edstrom's court statement quoted the director of the reconnaissance program, Air Force Major Boyd Lease, as saying much of the information Davies provided was classified as secret.

Edstrom said Davies met in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park on Sept. 22 with an undercover agent posing as a representative of the Soviet consulate.

Davies provided "detailed verbal information" about the reconnaissance program, as well as a "hand drawing depicting various aspects" of the program, Edstrom said, quoting a transcript of the meeting.

"If the government found out I was doing this ... they could put me in jail, I think," Davies said at the meeting, according to the transcript.

The undercover agent met with Davies on Oct. 5 at a San Francisco motel, where Davies gave additional information about the program, Edstrom said.

Pat Watson, head of the FBI unit that arrested Davies, said Davies apparently had been unaware of the investigation.

Some commissioners unhappy about study

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Some commissioners are upset with a $57,000 long-term study that recommends the county expand the courthouse and keep the criminal justice system downtown.

"I'm just really not happy with the total proposal. I think it was a total waste of energy. In one aspect they're echoing what we think is the worst thing that could happen," said Commissioner Winfree Brown.

The Commissioners' Court heard the final study results today, which gives the county a course to follow over the next five years and into the year 2006.

Brown said unless the county makes a separate criminal justice complex, more money will end up being spent transporting prisoners and buying downtown land for expansion.

Until state-mandated renovations are made, the county is spending about $200,000 a year taking prisoners to other jails to keep its population below 85 inmates.

Commissioner Durward Wright said, "I'm kinda disappointed with it. All the short-term aspects of it call for far more money than we have available."

Construction costs for the short-term plans range from $3 million to $4 million.

Wright said the short-term recommendation is similar to a $14 million bond that failed in 1981.

He said over the next few years it would be more economically feasible to locate a separate criminal justice complex near east U.S. Highway 80.

But Wright said, "It has some good in it that will perhaps be of some value when our economy turns around."

Commissioner Scott Welch, who supports keeping the criminal justice system in the courthouse, said he was "pleasantly pleased" with the study's findings.

"It's basically said what I said all a long. It (the criminal justice complex) needs to stay in the courthouse," Welch said.

More medals presented at Ellis Island

NEW YORK (AP) — Another round of ceremonies marking the Statue of Liberty's centennial got off to a chilly start Monday when 56 people received medals intended to placate ethnic groups who felt excluded by Liberty Weekend awards.

Fewer than three-quarters of the medalists attended and three featured speakers, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean and Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca, did not show.

The no-shows included Walter Cronkite, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, Barbara Walters, Gregory Peck, Kirk Douglas, Helen Hayes, Martina Navratilova, Arnold Palmer and Coretta Scott King.

Peace justice race has 'newcomers' facing off

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The race for Midland County Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1, Place 1, pits two newcomers against each other for a first-time spot in the political arena.

Both believe they have the qualifications necessary to oversee the office left vacant by Charles Sprayberry.

Democrat Aquilla Watson has been a Midland resident for 18 years and owned and operated Aquilla's Snack Bar for six years.

ELECTION '86

Making sure that the JP's office is run effectively is a major issue in the campaign, she said.

If elected, Mrs. Watson said she would "make sure that the workload flows as smoothly and efficiently as possible."

Mrs. Watson said she chose to run because the Justice of the Peace has the most contact with average citizens. She added that her business background, rather than law enforcement, is an asset to running a smooth ship.

"Not being directly tied to law enforcement, I would be more able to judge fairly with an open mind and not be lenient toward the courts of law or law enforcement," she said.

To be an effective Justice of the Peace, one doesn't necessarily need a background in law enforcement, Mrs. Watson said.

She said "The Texas Constitution states that any ordinary citizen can be JP...The state requires every newly elected JP to complete 40 hours of classes the first year and 20 hours each year after, regardless of previous education or experience.

Pipeline deregulation encouraged at IPAA annual meeting in Dallas

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

DALLAS — "There are good markets waiting to be served, but regulatory rigidities in the functions of pipelines and local distribution companies are keeping willing buyers and willing sellers apart," said Irene Wischer, chairman of the natural gas commitee of Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), speaking at the association's annual meeting here.

Ms. Wischer said it is impossible to move gas from seller to buyer without paying huge ransoms to pipelines. She said if pipelines were deregulated and rates reformed, it would put many rigs and people back to work and result in consumer dollars flowing to domestic gas producers rather than foreign oil producers.

The natural gas expert said that 40 percent of the natural gas market, or 6 to 8 trillion cubic feet, was the swing market, able to use heating oil or natural gas. Said Ms. Wischer: "It is not unreasonable that gas could replace 500,000 to 750,000 barrels per day of crude oil," adding that "the 2 trillion cubic feet natural gas "bubble' amounted to 1.2 million barrels per day of crude oil."

She said the argument that gas surpluses were temporary and that gas drilling would not keep pace does not hold up.

Bombs explode at U.S. facilities in Puerto Rico; One wounded

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Bombs went off today at two U.S. armed forces facilities, wounding one person, police said. Bombs were found at five other U.S. facilities, but were defused.

The extent of the damage was not immediately known.

The Macheteros, a group seeking Puerto Rican independence, claimed responsibility for the blasts. The group has used violence in the past to draw attention to its political demands.

A telephone caller who said he spoke on behalf of the group told The Associated Press the attacks were to protest reported plans to train Nicaraguan rebels in Puerto Rico.

Sources in the Reagan administration said Monday the Pentagon is developing plans to train the rebels, known as Contras, in the United States and that Puerto Rico was one of three sites being considered.

Bombs went off at a U.S. Army recruiting office in Fajardo, about 25 miles east of the capital of San Juan, and a U.S. Naval Reserve office in Bayamon, about 5 miles east of San Juan, police said.

The Fajardo blast injured a passerby, Rafael Ocasio Figueroa, 30. He was wounded in the face and taken to a hospital, police said.

Homemade bombs were found and safely defused at five other U.S. armed forces facilities, police said.

It was initially reported incorrectly that eight bombs went off.

U.S. to propose reduction in strategic weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sweeping U.S. proposal to reduce superpower strategic nuclear weapons by 50 percent in five years and to rid Europe of all intermediate-range weapons will be submitted to the Soviet Union at the Geneva arms talks later this week, an administration official said today.

The proposal, which also sets as a goal eliminating all ballistic nuclear missiles in 10 years, was approved at a White House meeting of President Reagan and a planning group of the National Security Council on Monday, said the official, who demanded anonymity.

The decision carries out the thrust of Reagan's discussions at the Iceland summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader.

The Soviets have insisted that Reagan went further at Reykjavik, suggesting the United States and the Soviet Union work to ban all strategic nuclear weapons by 1996, not just ballistic missiles.

One official, who said U.S. records of the conversations between Reagan and Gorbachev had not yet been prepared, acknowledged the president "may have said that at one point."

But the official stressed that Reagan undoubtedly told Gorbachev many more times he was seeking only a ballistic-missile ban since this is the U.S. position.

Among those endorsing the package at Monday's meeting, which was put in the form of new instructions to chief U.S. arms negotiator Max M. Kampelman, was the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William J. Crowe, other sources said.

With American and NATO conventional forces outnumbered in Europe by the Soviet Union and its allies, U.S. military officials are concerned that eliminating U.S. nuclear weapons there would be a dangerous step.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and others have noted that nuclear disarmament would leave the Soviets in a commanding military position.

In the hours immediately following the conclusion of the summit in Reykjavik on Oct. 12, U.S. government spokesmen indicated the all-out elimination of nuclear weapons was the administration position. Now they maintain that while Reagan discussed elimination of all nuclear arms, he never proposed more than destruction of all ballistic, or long-range guided missiles, in two five-year phases.

The distinction is strategically important because the U.S. position as now stated would leave both sides with substantial arsenals of cruise missiles, nuclear bombs and tactical nuclear weapons fired from conventional artillery pieces.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes insisted Monday that he had seen written notes from the two-day meeting, and he did not challenge a Reagan quote disclosed by the Soviets over the weekend.

The Soviets quoted Reagan as telling Gorbachev at the summit, "If we agree that by the end of the 10-year period, all nuclear arms are to be eliminated, we can refer this to our delegations in Geneva to prepare an agreement which you could sign during your visit to the United States."

"There was discussion of the ultimate goal of elimination of all nuclear weapons from the face of the Earth, which has been the president's goal and dream for many years," Speakes said Monday. "However, in the formal presentation and exchange of proposals between the United States and the Soviet Union, the Soviets proposed 'all strategic,' and the United States took the paper and scratched through 'strategic' and put 'ballistic.'"

Asked if the White House would release its own notes of the meeting taken by an official notetaker and an interpreter during the talks Oct. 11 and 12, Speakes replied, "No."

Asked why, he replied, "We just don't."

Speakes also refused direct comment when asked about the accuracy of the quote attributed to Reagan and complained that its release by Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh violated "the usual practice in diplomatic discussions."

The spokesman added there is no official transcript of the session, inasmuch as no stenographer was present and no tape recording was made. But the United States reconstructed the talks from the notes available, and Reagan has reviewed a written account of the meetings, the spokesman said.

Reagan and his spokesmen have insisted the United States is prepared to "pick up where we left off" in Reykjavik to attempt to negotiate substantial weapons reductions. But the two sides still differ on where those talks were left when they ended in stalement on the evening of Oct. 12.

The Soviets contend the two sides left off with an understanding that all offensive nuclear weapons would be destroyed if some accord could be reached on the future of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, a research program to develop a shield against nuclear weapons.

Reagan urges GOP vote, says nation 'headed for boom'

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — President Reagan, touring Dixie on behalf of GOP Senate candidates, claimed today the nation's economy is "headed for a second boom" and urged voters to reject Democratic leaders who he said nearly brought the economy to its knees in 1980.

At the first of three campaign stops in states where Senate GOP candidates are in close races, the president painted a glowing picture of the economic achievements of his six years in office.

"You know, I could tell it was working when they stopped calling it 'Reaganomics'," he said.

Reagan's first stop of the day was on behalf of Sen. Mack Mattingly of Georgia. His schedule called for a later appearance in Alabama for Sen. Jeremiah Denton and a hurriedly arranged airport rally for North Carolina Sen. James Broyhill.

Before addressing the campaign rally in Columbus, near the large Fort Benning military installation, Reagan signed legislation providing a 1.5-percent cost-of-living increase for 2.2 million veterans who receive disability compensation, effective Dec. 1. The legislation also makes improvements in veterans' health care, education, housing and other programs.

Reagan struck familiar chords in his campaign speech for Mattingly, saying Democratic leaders in the Senate have tried to "torpedo our choices for judges" and repeating his oft-made statement that after his six years in office, "not one square inch has been lost to communism, and one small country, Grenada, has been set free."

Reagan also made a plug for his "Star Wars" space-based missile defense system. "Our goal is to save the West from mutual nuclear terror, to make ballistic missiles obsolete, ultimately eliminate them from the face of the earth," he said.

It was not clear whether Reagan was signaling a change in policy with that remark. Spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters several days ago that the administration's goal is to eliminate all nuclear weapons, not only long-range ballistic missiles.

Reagan offered few specifics to bolster his claim that the economy is headed for a second boom. He cited last week's report of 2.4 percent economic growth for the third quarter of the year, and said that "some other indicators show our economy gathering momentum for even more growth, higher take-home pay and more new jobs. In short, we're headed for a second boom," he said.

While the third quarter growth was 2.4 percent, the GNP grew at an anemic 0.6 percent in the second quarter, and expansion is running well below the administration's official forecast of 3.2 percent for the year.

Some economists believe the economy could wind up in recession over the next year unless there is improvement in the massive trade deficit.

But Reagan made no mention of those forecasts, and said the Democrats who held office until 1980 handed Republicans "the worst economic mess since the Great Depression."

He urged voters to reject "the Democratic leaders who in 1980 weakened our nation and nearly brought its economy to its knees."

The president's trip kicked off what amounts to a full-time campaign schedule in the final days of a hardfought campaign for control of the Senate, currently controlled by Republicans.

Reagan has visited all three states within the past several weeks in an effort to protect the GOP's 53-47 Senate majority. Public opinion polls suggest all three races have tightened since those earlier visits.

Reagan's schedule called for him to be back at the White House by early evening. But he sets out again on Wednesday on a seven-day, nine-state swing.

Two recipients of toe-to-thumb transplants display the results — replaced left thumbs. After cutting off big toes and using them to replace damaged or missing thumbs on 60 patients since 1972, a group of pioneering microsurgeons feels the operation should be considered safe and reliable.

While it may look big, surgeons say big toes make great thumbs

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Big toes may look a bit large when attached to the hand, but they make reliable replacements for thumbs destroyed in accidents, say doctors who performed 60 successful toe-to-thumb transplants.

"There are problems with them being a little bigger and leaving a defect on your foot, but those are very acceptable tradeoffs," said Dr. Fredrick Valauri, who told a medical convention Monday that the controversial transplants should be considered safe and effective.

Critics have argued patients risk losing a toe besides the destroyed thumb if the operation fails. They advocate alternative operations, including moving the index finger to the thumb position while keeping nerves and blood vessels intact, or reconstructing the thumb using pieces of hip bone and skin from toes or other body parts.

But since 1972, Dr. Harry Buncke's surgical team at San Francisco's Davies Medical Center succeeded in all 60 toe-to-thumb transplants it performed, and hundreds of such transplants elsewhere also had a high success rate, said Valauri, a plastic surgeon who works with Buncke.

Toe-to-thumb transplants have restored accident victims' ability to grasp objects, tie their shoes, pop champagne corks and even thumbwrestle, Valauri, Buncke and their colleagues said Monday in a paper presented to the annual meeting of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

They said transplanted big toes make thumbs with better sensation, appearance and grip strength than those created by other surgeries for people whose crushed or severed thumbs couldn't be reattached.

Toes were used to replace missing fingers as early as 1900, but such transplants often failed or yielded poor results without modern microsurgery, in which tiny nerves and blood vessels from the toe are sutured to those in the thumb stump, Valauri said.

Buncke performed the first microsurgical toe-to-thumb transplant on a monkey in 1964. The first human transplant was done by Dr. John Cobbett in England in 1968. Buncke performed the first such surgery in the United States in 1972.

"These chaps have done an awfully good job, and I have only the highest esteem for what they have been able to accomplish," a one-time critic, New York plastic surgeon Dr. J. William Littler, said in a telephone interview.

Littler and Valauri agreed that patients who undergo toe-to-thumb transplants should be told they will suffer slight impairment of the donor foot, as well as cold sensitivity in the toe stump and new thumb. Valauri said the transplanted toe often shrinks to a more acceptable size in about 18 months.

The surgery costs $20,000 to $30,000 for surgeons' fees, hospitalization and therapy, but accident insurance often covers much of the cost.

Buncke's team also performed 61 transplants in which smaller toes replaced fingers other than thumbs. Only two of those failed, Valauri said, adding that thousands of other toe-to-finger transplants have been done worldwide.

One patient was a surgeon whose right hand was crushed in the 1985 Mexico City earthquake and had two fingers replaced by toes, restoring his ability to operate.

Mrs. Watson said her priority would be to "go in and learn as much about the law so I would be able to execute it properly."

Republican challenger Keith Jobe has a bachelor's degree in public administration/criminal justice and an associate's degree in police science.

He is a former Marine Corps captain and currently is an investigator with the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Jobe said there is more to running the Justice of the Peace office than performing marriage ceremonies and acting as county coroner.

Justices of the Peace preside over Justice Court and Small Claims Court. Their criminal jurisdiction includes Class C misdemeanors; issuing warrants and setting bonds. Their civil jurisdiction includes Small Claims Court; all forcible entry and detainer cases; and disputes of $1,000 or less.

Justices also conduct hearings on driver license suspensions and revocations; preside over inquests in cases of unattended death; perform marriage ceremonies; and serve as a notary public and registrar of vital statistics.

If elected, Jobe said he would work diligently to brink back integrity and respect to the Office of the Justice of the Peace.

He said he will work closely with Peace Justice Robert Pine for a smooth and speedy transition and to ensure and effective and efficiently run joint office.

"Because I'm associated with law enforcement adds to my ability to be fair and impartial," he said.

Jobe said he believed former JPs have strayed away from the fundamentals of the office and if elected, he would work to see that the office is run jointly.

"I don't feel there was a good working relationship between the former JP and Judge Pine," Jobe said. "That, in itself, didn't make it (JP office) as effective as it should have been."

STUDY

The study said a separate criminal justice complex would only be needed if the county grew to be six times its size.

The study said, "... a solution that reinforces this centralization concept would be preferred over a solution which divides the system."

Commissioner Wally Craig said "I think idealistically its fine. I think practically and economically it's something not likely to be put together."

Craig was also in support of a separate criminal justice complex on county property off east U.S. Highway 80.

County Judge William Ahders said the study didn't tell the commissioners anything new, but it did make suggestions "more professionally."

"I know what the needs are. It (the study) will be saying the things we know, but we've got professionals telling us it should be done," Ahders said.

Welch said the study will be worth its cost if it unites everyone behind one solution for the county's space and jail problems.

"The reason I backed the study is hopefully it will back the people behind one direction instead of running in different directions. If it does that it will be worth the money," Welch said.

"But if it will still be used as a political toy, then it didn't do us much good," he said.

During the remainder of this year the plan recommends the county continue with the renovation of its jail and the relocation of several offices.

Offices of the County Attorney, District Attorney, County Auditor and County Treasurer should be moved into rental space near the courthouse, the study said.

Two short-term plans were given by the Dallas firm Henningson Durham & Richardson, which conducted the study.

The cost of these two plans range from $3 million to $4 million in construction and from $732,950 to $672,000 a year in operating costs.

The option, known as "Plan B" in the study, costs the county $50,000 a year less because although construction costs are higher, yearly operation expenses are less at $672,000 a year, the study said.

"Plan B is the recommended short-term solution because it costs less and retains an integrated criminal justice system," the study said.

"Plan B" would also give the county 10 more jail beds then "Plan A," which would give the county 144 jail beds.

The additional jail bunk space would be built underneath the northside parking lot.

The long-term plan includes building an addition to the courthouse over a northside parking area and buying some empty lots across the street north of the courthouse.

"When I talk to producers today, I find that today's deterrent to gas drilling is as much a function of no marketability assurance as it is the $1.50 it would bring if the market existed. In fact, at today's drilling cost, $1.50 to $2 per Mcf would make many prospects work if only there was a market and non-discriminatory transportation to get the gas to those markets."

Ms. Wischer added that there was still too much $3 and $4 gas in the system, and that it was hurting the entire process of attempting to improve wellhead prices for new gas while keeping the fuel competitive at the burner tip.

"Unfortunately for independents, most of the $3 and $4 gas belongs to the large companies, and it remains high because of their market leverage and willingness to fight for their contract rights in court. Thus the independents have not only lost their higher prices, but see higher prices paid to majors continue to depress new prices," said Ms. Wischer.

She said that while the value of oil production doubled revenues from natural gas for oilmen in 1982, in 1986 it represents only 1 1/2 times the value of gas. "Natural gas is of growing importance to producers in the total revenue picture, a 10 percent increase in total wellhead gas revenues in the short run could lead to a 20 to 40 percent increase in the next 3 years, even at today's prices."

Ms. Wischer warned that any policy which is developed to improve price and production stability or to improve national security must not overlook the significance of natural gas.

Among the Ellis Island Medal of Honor recipients were former boxer Muhammad Ali, former baseball star Joe DiMaggio, developer Donald Trump and a number of less celebrated Americans whose accomplishments were said to typify immigrant ethnic groups' contributions to the United States.

Later, at a banquet attended by 64 medalists at the Waldorf-Astoria, four special medals of honor were presented to Cardinal John J. O'Connor; comedian Bob Hope; Lee Iacocca, Chrysler Corp. chairman and head of the Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation; and William May, president of the Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation.

At Ellis Island, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, speaking in the governor's place, said those wishing to honor America's immigrants "have to get beyond Emma Lazarus' wonderful, wrong, sonnet," "The New Colossus."

"They were not huddled and they were not wretched," he said. "They were the most capable, confident immigrants in the history of mankind."

Reagan administration's aid not enough for Clements, White says

ORANGE, (AP) — All the help the Reagan administration can give former Gov. Bill Clements won't be enough, says Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Interviewed during a day-long campaign swing across East Texas, White said he isn't worried by the big guns Clements has brought in to campaign for him.

Clements' list includes President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Treasury Secretary James Baker, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

"The only thing I've been able to see this administration's done for Bill Clements is try to raise him some money," White said.

"They've been spending a lot of their time down here trying to campaign for him. Quite frankly, as many problems as they've got in Washington, they ought to tend to their knitting up there before they come down here and start telling people in Texas how to vote."

White, who has been campaigning only with Texas Democrats, also said Clements had his chance but failed the leadership test.

The Democratic incumbent said he has proven that he can battle for the state's interests in Washington when Clements could not.

"When the Republican administration, the national administration comes down here, he looks like a lap dog. The first thing he does is jump right up in their lap. He won't do anything but whimper the whole time," White said.

"The state of Texas is deserving of a governor who'll stand up and fight, be it Democrat or Republican. I don't care which party's in the White House, when it comes to Texas the governor of Texas is supposed to stand and fight."

White said he was able to win Texas some $500 million in royalties from Outer Continental Shelf oil wells, when Clements had been reduced to pleading unsuccessfully for less money.

White said that as attorney general he fought in court to void the federal windfall profits tax on oil and gas. But Clements failed to use his influence with President Reagan to keep the federal government from appealing a court victory White had won, he said.

"Bill Clements was in a position at that time to have stood up and fought for Texas. But he really was kind of whimpering. He wouldn't stand up and fight," White said.

White also charged that Clements this year was quick to take credit for something Democratic congressmen did — keep about 2,000 NASA jobs in Houston.

Clements says White's outrageous remarks just hurt him, not Clements

HOUSTON (AP) — GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said that comments by his opponent, who called him a "lap dog," are only hurting himself.

"I just hope that he keeps saying these outrageous things because it's not hurting me. It's hurting him," Clements said about his opponent, Gov. Mark White.

White defeated Clements in 1982 and the two face each other Nov. 4.

Clements has charged that White's criticism of President Reagan has hurt Texas because the White House is not responding to the state's pleas for help during its financial crisis.

Clements blames White for being too eager to tax and for the "economic deterioriation" of the state.

White, during an East Texas campaign swing Monday, criticized Clements for bowing too easily to federal officials.

Clements, prior to speaking at a rally in Houston, laughed when told about White's comments.

"The more he says it, and the more shrill he gets and the more violent he gets in some of these statements, it's not hurting me. It's hurting him," Clements said.

He also said White's campaign was focusing on scare tactics.

"This idea of his of installing or instilling (fear) and playing on the emotions of the poor and the indigent and the elderly and the minorities, I think that is a disgusting performance by a governor of the state of Texas," Clement said.

Clements was joined at the rally by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who said Texans cannot afford four more years of White.

The former governor told the crowd he knew he had the votes to win on election night, but said it was up to them to get voters to the poll.

"If we let apathy set in, if we get overconfident, if we get complacent, it's a fatal disease," Clements said. "I have a vivid, vivid memory of what happened in '82; under no circumstances (should we) allow ourselves to lose our momentum, our sense of enthusiasm."

Earlier in San Antonio, Clements said White was to blame for the state's economic woes and said part of Clements' six-point jobs plan was to increase commercial ties with Mexico.

Former controller gets 11 years for embezzlement

HOUSTON (AP) — A former controller of the Houston-Galveston Area Council will serve 11 years in prison and repay more than $1 million embezzled from the agency, a federal judge decided.

William B. Prince Jr., 36, of Houston, was sentenced on Monday by U.S. District Carl O. Bue. Prince pleaded guilty earlier to siphoning the money in a scheme that included laundering the funds through a phony business.

He apparently used the money to buy luxurious homes, an expensive car and several gold watches, Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward said.

Prince was fired in December after serving as the agency's top financial officer for nine years, Woodward said.

The council is a regional planning agency that each year disperses millions of dollars of state and federal funds to local governments in a 13-county area.

The beleaguered agency is still feeling the pinch from the director's theft, Woodward said. The council was forced to borrow $800,000 to cover expenses, he said.

If there is one attribute that all great players possess it is table presence—the ability to sense what is happening. Watch the late, great Lew Mathe in action against Italy's famed Blue Team on this hand from the 1962 World Team Championship.

Mathe, South, and Bobby Nail were opposed by Giorgio Belladonna and Walter Avarelli. Nail's leap to six diamonds was well judged—it was quite possibly a makable contract and, even if not, it might have tempted his opponents into six spades.

After much thought Belladonna led a low spade. Mathe ruffed in dummy and led the king of clubs. When Avarelli followed low without any pain, Mathe decided he did not have the ace of clubs, so he trumped in hand, ruffed a spade, and then used a heart finesse and the ace as two entries for further spade ruffs. Finally, he ruffed a club back to hand and led a trump, losing only one trick to the ace of diamonds.

That might not seem like a very difficult hand, but watch what happened at the other table where Eugenio Chiaradia went down one for Italy—in five diamonds! He, too, received a spade lead, ruffed in dummy, and played the king of clubs, but he elected to discard a spade. West took his ace and shifted to a trump. East rose with the ace and returned a trump for the second trick for the defense.

Now Chiaradia spurned the simple line of a heart finesse in favor of a heart-club squeeze. He ruffed a spade in dummy, discarded one on the queen of clubs and then led out all his trumps. Unfortunately, the queen of hearts was not in the hand with the long clubs, and so he ended up losing a trick to the lady.

Rockefeller Center's ice rink opens

NEW YORK (AP) — Liberace took a couple tours of the ice in a sleigh before cutting a ribbon to open the 50th season for the Rink at Rockefeller Center.

Professional dancers performed and gold balloons were released Monday on the rink beneath the statue of Prometheus, adorned with a skicap, scarf and huge skates. Another immense skate was perched on a giant birthday cake.

No one knows how many skaters have twirled magnificently or collapsed embarrassingly on the surface. Stars ranging from Sonja Henie to Jack Nicholson have been filmed there; Rockefeller Center estimates that more than 100,000 people use the rink each year.

"That's a lot of figure eights," said Donna De Verona, Olympic medalist and mistress of ceremonies Monday.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Ava Gardner, the leading lady whose stormy personal life often overtook her movie roles, is fighting pneumonia she contracted after she entered a hospital for a checkup, authorities said.

Miss Gardner, 64, who starred in such films as "The Killers" and "The Barefoot Contessa," flew from her London home and checked into Saint John's Hospital and Health Center on Oct. 6, said spokesman Armen Markarian.

Miss Gardner was supposed to have undergone a general checkup and routine tests, but a virus she had when she entered the hospital turned into pneumonia, Markarian said Monday. She was being attended by her physician of the past 40 years, Dr. William Smith, who expected her to be released next week.

Miss Gardner, daughter of a poor North Carolina tenant farmer, became an MGM contract actress in 1940 after a picture of her taken by her brother-in-law found its way to the studio's casting department.

She performed in several "B" movies but was discovered by the public in 1946 when she starred with Burt Lancaster in "The Killers."

Her movies since then included "Showboat," "The Barefoot Contessa," "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "On the Beach," "The Night of the Iguana" and "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean."

Her marriages to Mickey Rooney, Artie Shaw and Frank Sinatra caused a storm of publicity, and after Miss Gardner and Sinatra were divorced in 1957, she left the United States for Spain.

PEKING (AP) — Britain's Prince Philip, head of the World Wildlife Fund, visited the Wolong Nature Preserve in Sichuan Province and visited a research center funded by China and the fund to study endangered giant pandas.

Philip, the husband of Queen Elizabeth II, climbed Monday to an observation post 8,200 feet above sea level to meet panda experts, the official Xinhua News Agency reported today. He said he was encouraged by the financial and material support China had provided for the 480,000-acre reserve.

Most of China's estimated 1,000 giant pandas live in mountainous areas of Sichuan, with about 100 in the Wolong Reserve. Pandas have been threatened by starvation because their main source of food, arrow bamboo, has been made inedible by a rare flowering cycle.

Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, is scheduled today to visit the Simao tropical forest zone in southern Yunnan Province.

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — About 709,000 turned out over 10 days for the 1986 Louisiana State Fair, which ended Sunday, and jubilant officials said Monday that came within 2,000 of equalling the record number of people who jammed the fairgrounds in 1977.

Attendance also was about 14 percent more than the 620,000 visitors last year, even though inclement weather forced cancellation of a Gatlin Brothers concert and only 12,301 paid to see Northwestern State play Louisiana Tech to a 13-13 tie in 55,000-seat Independence Stadium, officials said.

General Manager Ed Nelson said the near-record turnout was due in large part to mostly fair weather, comfortably cool temperatures and a mud-free, newly paved midway area.

"I thought that spending was probably pretty good. Some of the shows were standing room only," Nelson said. "I thought it was excellent. "This year, we had good weather and a real festive fair."

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Sherman Adams, who served as Dwight Eisenhower's counselor and wielded so much power he was known as "Assistant President," died Monday of respiratory arrest and renal failure. He was 87.

Adams

He took charge of the country's affairs during Eisenhower's hospitalization for a heart attack in 1955. Adams resigned in 1958 after it was learned he had accepted expensive gifts, including a vicuna coat, from an industrialist.

His Broadway credits included "Gideon," "The Investigation," "JB," "The Devil's Advocate," "Lorenzo," and "A Rainy Day in Newark." Like many anarchists, Sanz never returned to live in Spain, even after the return to representative government in 1977. He wrote several books including "Those Who Went to Madrid," "The Durruti Column" and "26th Division."

Civilized Harry?

The "Dirty Harry"-style of law enforcement is well known to all Americans who've seen a Clint Eastwood movie in recent years. He is the cop who wades into the middle of a law-breaking spree and — with no concern for the civil rights of potential defendants — blasts his way free of criminals.

That's the old shoot-first-and-ask-questions later approach which may be fine for the movies. But that variety of law enforcement should end at the doors of the theatre. Beyond is a world a bit more realistic. The statistics bear that out, as they do the fact that a new breed of law enforcement officer is on the streets today.

Although the rate of homicides and other violence in the nation's major cities has continued with little change, there has been an encouraging decline in the number of people killed by police officers.

The crime Control Institute, a research organization based in Washington, has reported that in 1984 police officers killed a total of 172 persons in 50 cities, a drop of 50 percent from the 353 slain by police bullets in 1971. There has been a corresponding decrease in the number of policemen killed by civilians. Both decreases are encouraging to those who believe too many unnecessary deaths occur.

Spokesmen from the Crime Control Institute say the decline reflects a substantial drop as well in the number of black people killed by police. This has been attributed by some to the growing political influence of blacks and the enormous judgments rendered in civil litigation following the shootings.

However, Prof. Lawrence Sherman, president of the Crime Control Institute, appears to have sized up the improved picture more accurately by calling attention to the new breed of police leaders and their restrictive shooting policies.

In other words, the one-time trigger-happy cop is being supplanted by the cooler professional. And professionalism should be what it is all about in sound police procedure.

Can Snelson say no?

I asked Pete Snelson the following question: A freshman congressman was once told, by Sam Rayburn I believe, that "to get along you got to go along." Do you feel that when Jim Wright, as Speaker of the House, asks you to vote for some liberal program that you will fare any better than did Phil Gramm or Kent Hance when you try to tell him no?

Essentially, the answer was:
1. "You obviously don't understand how things work";
2. Phil Gramm couldn't stand up to "them" and Kent Hance only changed parties when he wanted to run for governor;
3. I have got the integrity and backbone to stand up to "them."

The answer was about what I expected. I don't question Snelson's integrity but I do take issue with the claim that he will be able to resist the pressure to vote the Democratic Party line, particularly when it comes from a man so powerful and savvy as Jim Wright. Snelson's much-touted legislative effectiveness was in a one-party legislature in a generally conservative state. Washington is different. The liberal Democratic Party leadership will not tolerate those in the party that they can't control. As was the case with Gramm, that intolerance will be manifested in unimportant committee assignments and the failure to support those programs which Snelson would support, those benefiting West Texans. Sure, he may succeed in resisting once or twice but inevitably he will be hobbled and compromised. A Republican congressman may be defeated in Congress but it won't be by his own party.

Snelson has attempted to portray his candidacy as being above partisan politics. The obvious reason is that he is trying to avoid association with the liberal Democratic Party in a conservative and largely Republican town. If this is not the case he is either not a conservative or he is in the wrong party.

Pat political answers and nonpartisan rhetoric are not going to help Snelson when Jim Wright says, "Pete, to get along you got to go along." He won't have a party to back him and won't have any favors to collect on, unless of course he goes along.

A vote for integrity

For Attorney General this Nov. 4, readers of the Midland Reporter-Telegram have the opportunity to vote for Judge Roy Barrera Jr., a man of sterling reputation, intelligence, competence and legal ability.

Judge Barrera is committed to returning honor and respect to the Attorney General's office, something that has been sadly lacking under Jim Mattox. Mattox's shady dealings on the fringes of the law are well documented. Also known are the heavy support and financial contributions of special interest groups, which have led to a lack of enforcement of the law concerning these groups, such as in the case of the anti-sodomy statute.

Roy Barrera, by contrast, has that most-essential quality for an Attorney General — integrity, something the voters in Midland County and the rest of Texas are vitally interested in.

Too much greatness!

Mark White likes to brag about all the "great things" he has done for Texas. Let's take a look at what's so great.

Greater state bureaucracy — the number of state employees has increased by 13,094 during the past four years.

Greater state spending — The budgets that White has submitted to the legislature have been balanced through increases in taxes, fees and tuitions.

Greater school taxes — White's new school legislation has forced local taxes up over $7 billion, that's $1,466 per household.

On the other hand, Bill Clements has a proven record of fiscal restraint and responsibility.

State spending, per person, declined by 5.4 percent.

Smaller state bureaucracy — the number of state employees was reduced by 3,631 during Clements' term of office.

And best of all, Clements left office with over $1 billion in the state treasury.

We have a clear choice in November. Do we want four more years of White with a proven record of greater spending, greater taxation and greater bureaucracy, or do we want four more years of Bill Clements with a proven record of less spending, less bureaucracy and fiscal restraint. There's only so much "greatness" Texas can stand. I'm voting for Bill Clements.

Louisiana oilman sought Bush favors

WASHINGTON — Did a Louisiana oilman who contributed heavily to Republican Party candidates, and who had himself paid a fine for price gouging, improperly prevail on Vice President George Bush to press for an end to federal regulations that made possible the prosecution of oil price-control violators?

Jack Anderson

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., suspects the worst.

General Accounting Office auditors investigated the situation and concluded that "there appears to be nothing illegal or improper about the oil producer opposing" the regulations, and they "could not determine to what extent, if any, the producer influenced" changes in the rules.

Dingell, chairman of the House Energy Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, acknowledges that the oilman's solicitation of the White House was not illegal, but the congressman is concerned that high-level administration officials allowed themselves to be influenced unduly by the oilman. Dingell has asked the GAO to take a close look at this aspect of the affair.

The Louisiana oilman, Dalton Woods, hasn't exactly run for cover. He told us he considered Dingell's actions "harassment," and pointed out that the GAO had cleared him after a full investigation. The GAO auditors, he fumed, would do better to "investigate Dingell."

As for the $51,000 refund he was ordered to pay by the Energy Department for overcharging on his oil during the period of price controls, Woods responded with the succinct outrage of an aggrieved sports fan. "I wuz robbed!" he told our associate Lucette Lagnado.

Woods had appealed the department's finding administratively and lost. He eventually wound up having to pay a total of $93,000, including interest, for the price-control violation.

The oilman believes there is no need to apologize for his determined efforts to eliminate the Energy Department regulation that required oil companies to retain records on the price-control period, 1973-1981. The records were vital to the government's prosecution of violations.

In a letter to Bush in February 1984, Woods recalled discussing the record-keeping requirement with the vice president "during the Reagan Finance Committee reception at your home in Washington," and asked Bush's help in eliminating the rule. He even suggested as a "political move" that the rule be eliminated as part of the Paper Work Reduction Act — a stratagem that was in fact followed.

Woods also raised the specter of "a hostile administration being elected at some future time (that) could reopen a wave of audits and arbitrary assessments of punitive charges and fines against our industry" if the oil companies' records were retained.

He closed with an appeal for "your help in bringing this issue to a close" by the issuance of a rule change eliminating the record-keeping requirement.

On the same day, Woods wrote to then-Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, recalling their discussion of the detested regulation "during the Louisiana Mardi Gras in Washington." He added: "I have also discussed this issue with Vice President Bush, and he was visibly disturbed by the postponement of the proposed (rule change) and offered to lend his support if needed."

Woods received replies from both the vice president and the energy secretary — courtesies befitting a Republican stalwart who had, the GAO reported, contributed $51,950 to GOP causes in 1979-80, $80,000 in 1981-82 and $68,800 in 1983-84. Woods was informed that the record-keeping rule was being reviewed.

The regulation ultimately was changed. Dingell wants to know just how much the bureaucrats who changed the rule were influenced by oilman Woods.

For his part, Woods is standing his ground. "It is my duty and my pleasure to work on behalf of the oil and gas industry," Woods said. He characterized the regulation as "designed to harass and rob the gas industry."

Regarding contacts with Bush and Hodel, Woods said: "I am a Republican. I have worked with these people ... I fought a clean battle."

REFORMING TAX REFORM: Even before the ink was dry on the sweeping tax bill produced with such supposedly Herculean labor, we were hearing murmurings from congressional sources about the need for "technical corrections" next year. This should be a warning to all taxpayers to check your wallets and the gold in your teeth. The special-interest lobbyists were wisely lying low under the onslaught of popular support for the tax bill, but they're already beginning to emerge from the bunkers. They'll be working next year to overcome the reverses they suffered this time — and in a non-election year they could succeed.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The recent revelation that the unfinished American embassy in Moscow is honeycombed with KGB bugging devices has caused concern on Capitol Hill. The problem, according to Senate Foreign Relations Committee sources, is that the United States is planning new embassies in Soviet satellite capitals of Eastern Europe, including Prague, Budapest and Warsaw, so there is understandable concern that the KGB's willing pupils will be up to the same tricks.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The Greek Socialists were roundly trounced in municipal elections last week by their conservative rivals. While this has no direct bearing on Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's control of the national government, we can't help hoping the election results will have a chastening effect on the loud-mouthed leader. We're fed up to here with his constant anti-American, anti-NATO rhetoric; if a few conservative mayors can draw his attention away from foreign affairs, fine and dandy.

TOM WICKER

Fresh from Iceland comes Dr. Spin with hope

NEW YORK — "Spin doctors" are the hot new item in 1986 politics, though they have long been with us under other pseudonyms. However called, they "put the right spin on the ball" in 1968, when they saw light at the end of the tunnel in Vietnam; and in whatever guise, they were setting up the hitters in 1981 with the message that taxes could be cut, military expenditures raised and the budget balanced nevertheless.

Tom Wicker

Spin doctors will discover "encouraging progress" in a poll showing their candidate 20 points behind; or if he is 20 points ahead, their fund-raising letters will declare him in mortal peril. If unemployment is 7.15 percent this month as against 7.25 last month, spin doctors see the economy on a roll.

Now, in our time, we've been privileged to meet the one and only Doctor Spin himself, the master curveballer, illusionist and smoke-blower of the day, maybe the all-time champion of dipsy-do. He turns out to be — not unlike the Wizard of Oz — President Ronald Reagan, as friendly and lovable as Frank Morgan.

How do we know? The recent achievements of the maestro provide the only needed verification (one of his terms of art):

1. Who but he could have swapped a Soviet spy for an American journalist while assuring the nation that it wasn't really a swap — or, if it was, our horse-trader got the better of their horse-trader?

2. When leaked White House documents documented a government "disinformation" campaign aimed not at the Soviet press but at the U.S. press, was the doctor dismayed? Not in the least; he denied that disinformation had been planned or planted — while junior spinners asserted that if it had been, it would have been justified.

3. When a U.S. plane formerly used by the CIA and owned by a company with links to the CIA was shot down in Nicaragua, a surviving American crewman said he had been told that he worked for the CIA, then named a supervisor with links to the CIA and to Vice President George Bush. A former CIA director, Doctor Spin and all the little spinners explained that they knew of no links between the plane and the CIA — and anyway, since the Sandinistas are a bunch of Reds, what's the beef?

But all of this masterful bridging of Credibility Gap was eclipsed by the legerdemain of Doctor Spin and his stage hands in the aftermath of the Iceland summit's collapse. PR men as yet unborn will some day curse the fate that denied them an eyeball view of the master's peak performance.

Secretary of State George Shultz, seeming near tears, told a national television audience on Sunday night that he was "deeply disappointed" by the summit failure. But by Monday a fully orchestrated administration, with the Doctor on the podium, was spinning out the melody that "breakthroughs" and "sweeping potential agreements" (breathtaking phrase!) had been achieved.

In this "post-summit phase" (more genius), White House spinners logged 71 "media events" (a golden oldie), 53 involving top spinners like Donald Regan and Shultz — who, quickly recovering from his disappointment, personally spun out the good news for the networks and The New York Times. Peter Roussel, a deputy spinner, was moved to speak pridefully of a "media blitz."

Some carping was heard. Mikhail Gorbachev, unfortunately, does not seem to believe that the superpowers are as close to an agreement on nuclear testing as U.S. spinners say they are ("No, no there couldn't be such, and there wasn't," he insists), and the records of the summit talks in Iceland, such as they are, suggest that the two sides only reiterated their basic incompatible positions.

Gorbachev declared also that any concessions he had made at Iceland were part of a package that represented "a balance of interests and concessions" and concluded: "No package — no concessions." But that was duck soup for the doctor, who knows the value of an up beat: "It's heartening," he said in Missouri, "to find Mr. Gorbachev agreeing with me that the proposals we made in Iceland are still on the table."

Even at home cynical senators want to know if the president agreed at the summit to the ultimate elimination of strategic ballistic missiles, or — as Gorbachev asserts and Reagan himself once seemed to confirm — to doing away with all strategic nuclear weapons, a far different matter.

The White House hasn't yet found just the right spin to put on that ball; but the polls are up and Doctor Spin is on the campaign trail. One more win for the Gipper may be in sight and that, fellow rubes, is the name of the game.

CHARLEY REESE

SDI could be nation's last hope for survival

If you believe, like Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that President Reagan missed an historic opportunity in Iceland, then you are necessarily operating on the premise that the Soviet Union sincerely wishes to reduce nuclear arms.

Charley Reese

The contrary premise is that the Soviet Union is totally insincere and merely laid a propaganda trap to give them additional ammunition in their campaign to derail the American Strategic Defense Initiative.

I can find no evidence for the first premise. The current excuse, created entirely by Americans long on hope, is that Soviet boss Mikhail Gorbachev wants — for some unexplained reason — to redirect more of the Soviet Union's resources to the civilian sector.

First, remember that the Soviet Union will not go broke building up its armaments. The Soviet Empire operates a closed economic system. It issues the money, it sets its value, it owns the mines, the railroads, the factories, the workers, and the places where the workers can spend their money. It controls both wages and prices.

In short, market considerations are not a factor in the Soviet Union. The only limitation on their arms buildup is physical — natural resources, machines, manpower and factory space. If their civilian sector is slighted, it is not by accident. It is because the Soviet leaders have chosen to direct most of their resources to the production of armaments.

Secondly, the Soviet Empire remains a tightly controlled, highly secretive police state. Gorbachev has not eased up on human rights. After all, he is not some ex-insurance salesman who got into politics. He is a party hack who spent part of his time in the KGB and who is a protege of the KGB. Three of the 10 Politburo members in Moscow — the ruling elite — are KGB generals.

There is a third premise to consider: The Soviet Union intends to defeat the United States either by a first strike military action or nuclear blackmail.

Dr. Edward Teller, an American physicist with a genius IQ who has spent his life in the murky world of nuclear and thermo-nuclear weapons, believes the Soviets have made breakthroughs in X-ray lasers and small nuclear weapons, both of which have enormous consequences for anti-ballistic missile defense.

If the Soviets beat us to a strategic defense system, then the end of the United States could come either with a salvo of SS-18s or with an ultimatum. We are walking on new ground. No great power has ever been destroyed by a negotiated surrender before, but no great power in the past ever possessed the military capability to destroy another great power in one decisive exchange.

It's quite possible that the Strategic Defense Initiative is not a bargaining chip but rather America's last hope for survival as an independent nation. If so, then we'd better pursue deployment as rapidly as possible.

One positive note. With the Soviet Union going to so much trouble to kill the U.S. Star Wars, you know for a certainty that the people who claim it won't work know a great deal less about it than the Soviets. If it weren't possible, the Soviets wouldn't be interested in it one way or another.

In these times with these weapons it may be possible to be optimistic about arms control and suicidal at the same time.

Education activists stump for White; Loeffler hits the road for Clements

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Stand-ins for Texas' gubernatorial candidates kicked off statewide tours Monday, with educators stumping for Democrat Mark White and Congressman Tom Loeffler campaigning for Republican Bill Clements.

Six education activists began a weeklong, 13-city tour for White, trying to convince teachers to shake off the TECAT blahs and vote for a governor who "has the best interests of teachers at heart." Linda Gale White and former Dallas Cowboys fullback Robert Newhouse will join the tour later in the week.

Most of the group admitted that some teachers still hold some resentment against White for his support of the Texas Assessment of Current Administrators and Teachers. The high passing rate and the passage of time, however, has dulled some of the anti-White enthusiasm evident during the spring primary elections, they said.

"The TECAT issue is passed," said Barbara O'Neal, past president of the Texas State Teachers Association. "They were angry about having to be tested, but it was a one-time thing."

Will Davis, former member of the State Board of Education and past president of the National Association of School Boards, said teachers are also beginning to accept the career ladder, bonus-pay plan for outstanding work in the classroom. "The sole and only purpose of it was to maintain an attitude by which you could maintain teachers, competent teachers, in the profession," he said.

Davis said he would stress White's positive accomplishments for teachers: a large salary increase, smaller class sizes, pre-kindergarten programs and duty free lunches.

June Karp, assistant to the president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, said she wants to remind teachers why they worked so hard for White's election in 1982. "Teachers now are remembering four years ago or six years ago or eight years ago, in what they had as a goveror then — that person (Clements) was not atuned to education," she said.

Ms. Karp's group has formally endorsed White. The TSTA issued no endorsements in the governor's race. Others traveling with the group said their organizations take no stand on political races.

Meanwhile Loeffler, whom Clements beat in the May 3 GOP primary, started a 47-city campaign for Clements by attacking White's record on higher education.

"Higher education, in my judgment and in Bill Clements' judgment, is the link to the future for us," Loeffler, R-Hunt, told the Texas Association of Mutual Insurance Companies. "Bill Clements will never reduce funds for higher education. Mark White has."

Loeffler, a top House Republican who gave up his seat to run for governor, also said White cannot work with the Republicans or the White ~~House;~~ while Clements knows how to deal with Washington officials in both parties.

"I can tell you that as long as Mark White has been coming to Washington, he's been lobbing bombs at every one of us on the other side of the isle," he said. "He would only come in and level a demagogic blast, never to follow up."

Loeffler also took White to task for promising lower utility rates, then eliminating the fuel adjustment clause, which would have allowed power companies to automatically pass along changes in fuel costs to consumers. "That's one of those things Mark said (but) he could never live up to-it," he said.

"It was a sham then and now it's a rip off."

Kent Hance, the other loser in the three-man Republican gubernatorial primary, will start a statewide campaign swing for Clements Wednesday.

Anti-nuclear activist's perseverance pays off

DALLAS (AP) — Finding a place to sit in Juanita Ellis' living room takes a lot of luck.

Her house, and her life, are consumed by a 12-year fight with builders of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant. The facility is under construction near Glen Rose, about 80 miles south of Dallas.

Ms. Ellis, a 50-year-old former bookkeeper, has almost single-handedly slowed construction of the plant.

"Frankly, Juanita is the opposition to the plant," said Billie Garde of the Government Accountability Group, a Washington-based watchdog that has helped Ms. Ellis.

"Her single-minded perseverance, which I'm sure the opponents sometimes call obsession, has not let anything significant fall through the cracks."

Her house is a pack rat's dream. The place is full of documents on the nuclear industry. She gave up on using her couch, carting it off and replacing it with tall metal shelves stuffed with records.

Ms. Ellis is president of Citizens Association for Sound Energy. Her weapons include a desktop copying machine and computer, more than $100,000 in contributions and help from about 100 whistle-blowing former plant workers.

The plant is 94 percent complete and its price tag is $5.46 billion and climbing. The facility faces at least two more years of licensing battles before it can open.

Ms. Ellis said she has often been at the breaking point, but she keeps going because "it's just about impossible to stop in midstream and walk away from it."

Tony Roisman, a lawyer who has joined the Comanche Peak case, said Ms. Ellis has a "natural instinct" for working within the legal system during licensing hearings.

STATE in brief

Immigration bill's impact hard to judge, Bullock says

AUSTIN (AP) — Judging the economic impact on Texas of the federal immigration reform law is difficult, Comptroller Bob Bullock said.

"There's going to be little effect on the state's finances or the Texas economy in the short run and there's simply no concrete evidence to predict an impact for the long-term picture," Bullock said in a statement Monday.

Bullock said his office has estimated as many as 600,000 of the one million estimated illegal aliens in Texas might be eligible to apply for American citizenship under the new law.

However, Bullock said if there is strict enforcement of the sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, the action might dry up a source of cheap labor for many Texas businesses and industries.

"For the most part, illegal aliens in Texas are paying virtually all the same taxes — sales taxes, gasoline taxes and excise taxes — as you and me," Bullock said. "If they become permanent citizens we aren't going to see a big jump in state revenue."

He said the federal government will make $220 million in federal impact payments over the next five years to help the state adjust for aliens' use of public services if they become citizens.

TYC reorganizes division

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Youth Commission's community services division has been reorganized into five regions, TYC officials said Monday.

"The changes affect the agency's child placing system and reflect the agency's philosophy regarding how to approach assessment, placement and services for the youth committees in TYC," said executive director Ron Jackson.

Jackson said the reorganization will give the agency the opportunity to align staff and services with the growing number of youth placed in community-based programs.

Four new regional directors are Michael Harrison, Central Texas region; Pam Bhagwat, North Texas region; Chester Clay, East Texas region, and Jesus Bonilla, West Texas region.

A fifth region for South Texas served as a pilot project and will continue under the supervision of Joseph Martinez.

Man killed at airport

AUSTIN (AP) — Joseph James Schindler, 33, of Sherman, was killed and his small daughter seriously injured when they were struck by a speeding car as they watched airplanes take off at Robert Mueller Airport, authorities said.

The three occupants of the car abandoned the vehicle and fled on foot before police arrived at the scene of the Sunday afternoon accident.

Austin police said Monday that the driver of the car and one of the occupants had been arrested. No charges had been filed late Monday.

Police said Schindler and his one-year-old daughter were struck as they stood next to a fence watching planes take off and land. Witnesses said they were struck by a car that apparently was out of control as it rounded a curve.

Augesen: Early release program 'joke'

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen has strongly objected to the parole of a 32-year old man convicted of a brutal murder who was sentenced to death but had his sentence commuted to life in prison.

Discussing his protest during an interview Monday, Augesen described the state's current parole system and the practice of "furloughing" convicts as making a joke of the state's legal system. "We send them down for a 10 year sentence," he said, "and they're back out in only a few months."

In protesting the parole of James Paul Burns, who was convicted in 1974, Augesen told the Texas Board of Pardons and Parole, "This man, if you can refer to him as that, has served 13 actual years since being assessed the death penalty. Our citizens have said, LOUD AND CLEAR that they do not ever want this man to walk the streets of our city or the roads of our county again," he said. "Surely the wishes of our people, our citizens, mean something."

Prison officials have repeatedly defended the early release program because of overcrowding in the state prisons. They contend that without additional prison space, their hands are tied.

Referring to remarks of the reversing court in April 1979, Augesen quoted the high court opinion in part as saying, "Suffice it to say that if any crime merits such punishment (the death penalty), it is thoroughly deserved by Burns."

In May 1977, in upholding Burns' conviction and sentence, the Court of Criminal Appeals held that the prosecutor's reference to Burns as "an animal" was not unwarranted because "the record in the instant case reflects a 'bestial aspect.' While the cases may be rare where evidence justifies a prosecutor in referring to a defendant as an 'animal,' we find that the use of such a term was warranted in the instant case and not an improper deduction from the evidence," the appellate court held.

AUGESEN, WHO noted he was not the prosecutor in the case, "nor am I the prosecutor who made the egregious mistake of recommending that his (Burns') sentence be commuted to life," enclosed "a very short statement of facts taken from the state's brief on appeal which recites only a few of the atrocities committed on the victim (G.W. 'Pete' McDonald) on Aug. 3, 1973. The was the most vicious, brutal, cold-blooded murder ever committed in Ector County," the district attorney told the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The brief referred to by Augesen related that 54-year-old McDonald, who was partially disabled, had received his $120 Social Security check and his sister had taken him downtown to a barbershop to get a haircut and was next seen at a cafe, where he ate supper with two acquaintances.

"The other two men became angry when Mr. McDonald would not pay for their meals, causing him to exit the cafe," the state's brief said.

"At this time," the brief stated, "James Paul Burns, his brother and another man, Roy Dean Owens, called Mr. McDonald over to their car, 'rescued' him from his angry friends and spirited him away to a caliche pit west of Odessa."

The brief relates he was forced to smoke marijuana and "after being stripped, he was placed on the car where the appellant kicked him so hard it caused him to defecate on the car. Mr. McDonald was forced to eat it," stated the prosecutor's brief.

McDonald was robbed of his money, his clothes, boots, watch and false teeth. The brief continues to recount acts of anal sodomy, brutal beatings and kickings that left him unconscious. He was found early the next morning and taken to Medical Center Hospital where he underwent two operations to remove blood clots and fluids from his brain. He died Sept. 16, 1973, after celebrating his 55th birthday in the hospital.

"THAT WAS one of the most horrendous murders that I've ever heard of," Augesen said, "and I probably know more about it than most people because I got all the information from Toby (Burns' brother) and then I got information out of the trial and so I know what went on out there," he said. Augesen was the court-appointed attorney for Toby Burns in the case.

Augesen wasted no time responding to the notification received by his office Oct. 22, which showed that during the 13 year Burns has spent in prison he has "earned" credit for 32 years and 9 months. "That's nearly three days for every one he's served," the district attorney said.

The Board of Pardons and Paroles notice of intent to parole noted Burns had been convicted of capital murder in Ector County. Under TDC policy, according to Augesen, because he has been a "model" prisoner, Burns has been elevated to "Trusty III," which puts him in line for parole.

Augesen said he's been told that virtually every prisoner held by TDC has been elevated to Trusty III, which means almost every prisoner is eligible for parole.

As to the "good time" given Burns, Augesen said TDC is obivously giving some inmate more than nearly three days for every one served. "They're obviously giving a lot of people more days than that," he said. "We send them down for 10 years and they come back in 10 months. That means that they're giving them (prisoners) one year per month," stated Augesen. "We send them down for five years and they're back in about six months."

CONCERNING TDC furlough policies, under which convicts still serving time are allowed to come home for five days or longer, Augesen said legislation has been submitted that bars TDC officials from notifying counties to which a convict is to be furloughed.

He noted there are some felons he has sent to prison "that I sure want to know about if they're going to be in town because they have threatened to kill me as well as other people," Augesen stated.

He plans to protest the furlough of 47-year-old Ralph Clyde Palmer, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to 25 years in prison in December 1980. Augesen noted Palmer has a record that dates back to 1955 and has been convicted on a variety of charges, including attempted murder.

The furlough notice states that Palmer has been previously furloughed twice to Tarrant County and three times to Ector County.

The new furlough, that would run from Nov. 6 through Nov. 10, will be granted, the notice says, "unless you contact this office with an objection."

Augesen says he has objected and that Sheriff Bob Brookshire is joining him in the objection.

What's the answer to early releases?

"Build more prisons," Augesen said.

Asked if he thought the operation by private businesses would be a solution, Augesen said, "It's a well-known fact that private business operates most anything less expensively than does any governmental entity."

The district attorney speculated that privately operated prisons could probably be constructed for far less money than state facilities. All you'd need to do, he said, is build military barracks structures, enclosed by two separate fences. "Put barbed wire on atop of the fences and turn guard dogs loose in the vacant area between the two fences and you wouldn't have to worry much about security," he said.

Testimony continues in wrongful death suit

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Testimony continues this afternoon in the wrongful death suit of 23-year-old Mitchell Olguin, who hanged himself in April 1984 in his cell at the Midland County Jail, just hours after he had been sentenced to state prison for 25 years.

Olguin's parents, Joe and Goldie Olguin, are claiming negligence and seeking $750,000 in damages from former Sheriff Dallas Smith, sheriff's deputy and former jailer Gary McLaughlin and jail physician Dr. Patrick Leung. The lawsuit claims officials knew Olguin was a heroin addict and would likely suffer severe withdrawal, but refused to adequately monitor him while he was in his cell.

The trial, before a jury of five men and seven women, is being held in Judge Vann Culp's 238th District Court.

In testimony Monday, plaintiffs' attorney Michael McLeaish called a parade of witnesses that were with Olguin at various times, from his sentencing in late afternoon on April 25 to 8 a.m. the next day, when he was found hanging from a strip of blanket in his cell.

One of the witnesses called was the man who sentenced Olguin to 25 years in prison following his conviction of delivery of cocaine.

State District Judge Pat Baskin, who presided at Olguin's trial, said following his sentencing, Olguin's attorney, John Green, approached the bench about his client.

"He told me Mitch's family tells me he has a $1,000 a day habit," Baskin said. "And they told me they were afraid he would die in jail from withdrawal."

Baskin said he informed a sheriff's officer, Richard Sexton, of Olguin's condition. Sexton took the stand and testified that he assured Baskin Olguin's condition would be noted, and "we would do everything we could."

The absence of a television monitor in the cell where Olguin took his own life is a major contention of the plaintiffs' suit. Sexton, now a captain in charge of the jail, testified the jail has about 15 monitors, in hallways and other areas, but none inside any cell.

Dr. Richard Schneidmann, who performed the autopsy on Olguin's body, said needle tracks and vein damage in one arm and the tops of both feet, as well as substances trapped in his lungs, indicated the man was a chronic drug user. He said Olguin's body fluids were sent to the Department of Public Safety laboratory in Austin, but no traces of the drug prescribed for his addiction, Mellaril, were found.

Schneidmann said only traces of Chlor-Trimetron, a common antihistamine, and aspirin were found.

Land commissioner's race clouded by alleged drug use, shady deals

By JANE MARLER DEES

Garry Mauro

Allegations of shaky land deals, drug use and X-rated movies shroud the Texas land commissioner's race, but incumbent Garry Mauro said he's confident his record will lead him to re-election.

M.D. Anderson, the Republican candidate for the office, is not in any way related to the famous cancer hospital in Houston, and is, instead, the owner of the Cedar Creek Plowboys nightclub in Seven Points, Mauro said Monday during a press conference.

Mauro has maintained throughout the campaign Anderson is attempting to capitalize on his name to sway voters his direction.

The Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau reported August 2 that State Republican Party Chairman George Strake had considered asking Anderson to withdraw from the race.

Strake's concern stemmed from Andersons's political foes' accusations that police watched X-rated movies at Anderson's nightclub, that he owned a building in which a renter operated a drug paraphernalia shop and that he was once arrested for marijuana possession. The charges were later dropped.

Anderson has in the past said, "I don't have one damn thing to hide. I'm not ashamed of anything."

Anderson also said on September 30 at a Capitol press conference that Mauro and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby might be involved in shaky Houston-area land deals.

Of the land deal story, Mauro said Monday that "radical Republican fringers had been trying to feed the story to Texas journalists for six months.

"Finally, the Moonie paper in Washington D.C. (the Washington Times which is owned by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon) ran it," Mauro said.

Mauro said the latest version of the story run by news organizations, including the Associated Press, is that Mauro had not paid his fair share in a limited partnership in an office building in Houston.

"The only thing I'm guilty of is being silly enough to buy land in Houston."

Commissioners seek to plug leak in fly-by-night problem

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The solution to the Midland County Courthouse's bat problem will be up to the Sheriff's Office, but a complete success is not expected, the commissioners court said Monday.

Sheriff Gary Painter said he would get two people to watch the courthouse around sundown to see where bats are entering and leaving. The holes will then be plugged up, Painter said.

In a letter to the commissioners, County Extension Agent Earnest Kiker said, "It is our consensus and recommendations that the only control measure that is feasible and economical is for the Sheriff's Department, with their manpower, plug the holes as they are located, which in all likelihood is impossible."

"While some holes may be found and plugged at floor levels, it will be impossible to find all the holes and completely eliminate the bat problem, Kiker said.

Poison and pesticides were not recommended because once a bat gets drugged, people might try to pick it up and then get bitten, Kiker said.

In other action, the commissioners allowed the Sheriff's Office to accept a $42,637 grant from the Criminal Justice Division of the Governor's Office. The county will fund about half the grant to buy six mobile digital terminals.

The mobile terminals, placed in patrol cars, save time and work for an already overworked dispatcher, Painter said.

Patrolmen can check on suspicious license plates and driver's license numbers directly through their mobile terminals, without having to go through the dispatcher.

The commissioners also accepted Cook & Company as their independent auditor for 1987.

The Midland business has audited the county for the past four years. The estimate cost of next year's audit is between $19,000 to $22,000, said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin.

GARY OTT

Most neighbors nowadays close only in physical sense

We were sitting around his living room, this friend and I, when he started talking about his neighbors.

"You mean you know your neighbors?" I didn't know whether to be shocked or to accuse him of an outright lie.

"Sure," he said. Then he started rattling off names. He listed them all from up and down the block. He even knew a few families from two blocks over.

I live in an apartment and don't even know the people who live directly to the west of me.

A wall is all that separates us and yet the only thing I know about them is that they drive a brown car that has a hard time starting in the morning and they seem to prefer rock music over country-western.

Something has happened over the years. No longer, it seems, do we get close to our neighbors.

It wasn't always like that.

When I was growing up in a small West Texas town I knew every family on our block. Most of them had children my age and we would spend hours playing games at each other's homes.

There was always a pattern.

Football was played at the Pyatt's house because they had no trees to get in our way.

Baseball was played at the Nicholsons' because they had a big backyard and a fence so the home runs would seem more real to life.

And, since I had the best basketball goal, the Ott driveway served as the neighborhood version of Madison Square Garden.

It wasn't just the kids. Our parents were close, too.

On a late summer afternoon it was not unusual to see a group of six or seven adults standing around in a front yard fighting off mosquitoes and visiting about nothing in particular. Everyone kept up with everyone else. If an emergency arose, a parent could drop off the kids with a neighbor and be assured everything would be OK when they returned.

In effect, we kids had more parents than we knew what to do with, which, of course, caused us all kinds of grief since the adults served as a spy network that rivaled anything the CIA had.

Now all of that closeness seems to have disappeared. Maybe in some older, more established neighborhoods it still exists, but for the most part it is becoming a thing of the past.

Experts contend it has something to do with us all being busier than before with outside interests. We have become a more mobile society. We are constantly on the go and spend less time doing the simple things in life, like participating in neighborhood get-togethers.

It is understandable. We are busy and when that limited free time does exist we tend to become protective of it.

Also, because of the increased mobility, people don't live in the same neighborhood for as long as they did in the past. With families moving in and out so often it is difficult to get to know them. There is less continuity.

I'm sort of rambling here and don't really know what point I'm trying to make — none, I guess. But, it does seem sad that you can live next door to a family for several years and never get to know them.

Of course, like with anything, it is important that someone make the first move.

In my case, I think I will. Tonight, after getting off work, I'll introduce myself to my neighbors and present them with a Merle Haggard album.

And, what must they do in return?

Nothing really. Just burn all their Led Zeppelin tapes and get a new starter for their car.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

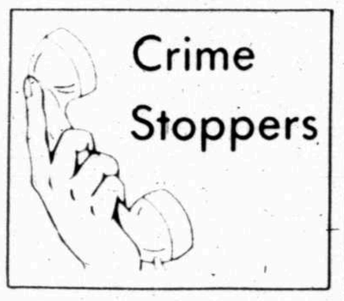
Information sought in aggravated robbery



Crime Stoppers is seeking information from the public on the aggravated robbery of Taylor Petroleum, 2500 W. Front St., in Midland.

At approximately 10:30 p.m. on Sept. 23, the assistant manager of the business was doing bookkeeping work when she heard the front door open. A black man holding a knife bolted toward her, told her it was a robbery and motioned the woman to go to the cash register. The man took three Texas American Bank bags and a brown paper bag filled with money. Before he left, he locked the woman in a storage building next door.

The suspect is described as a black man, about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weighing approximately 150 pounds. He was wearing a gray thermal jacket, blue jeans and a dark stocking mask over his head. The knife he carried was a "survival" type with a black handle.

City concerned about drainage problems

JIM BROWN

Rain, rain and more rain.

That's what Midland has been getting lately. And with all of this rain comes flooded streets and, sometimes, flooded properties. Of primary concern to the residents and the City of Midland are drainage problems caused by the heavy rainfall.

It would seem timely, therefore, to present an update of steps being taken by the City of Midland to alleviate drainage problems which tend to exist following a heavy rain.

The Public Works Department is currently implementing some changes in the drainage system in various sections of the city that will, hopefully, bring about desired results.

As indicated by the recent heavy rains, improvement of the northwest drainage channel, which winds its way through the city, is needed to provide sufficient capacity to safely conduct the storm water through Midland. This drainway, which extends from north of Wadley at Air Park northwesterly across Loop 250 at Holiday Hill Road, was constructed to intercept and conduct all storm water that falls in the watershed from the Jal Draw through the developed portion of Midland.

This draw extends westerly to the northside of Odessa and serves a very large area.

During the recent rains, the drainage way at Air Park was almost completely full with the water depth within one foot of the parking lot of Chaparral Center.

Removal of the "semi-low" water crossing at I Street behind the Chaparral Center prevented the flooding of properties upstream.

Improvements to the northwest drainage channel have recently been made from Air Park to Maxwell Street, which increases the channel to the desired capacity for handling a 100 year frequency rain.

Plans have been made to widen the channel from Maxwell Street to the west to the full width of the available right of way in order to accommodate the estimated 5,500 cubic feet per second of flow.

A contract has been let for the improvements of the crossings of Maxwell and Haynes streets, as well as the drainage channel. As a temporary measure, the roadway at these locations is being lowered to provide additional capacity for overflow.

Permanent installations of large concrete box culverts at these crossings and the crossing at Midkiff Road are to be made during the next few years in order to accommodate the anticipated increased water flow.

Heavy rainfalls are not the only cause of drainage problems. As streets are paved and other improvements are made along the drainway, the amount of runoff increases dramatically. The capacity of the drainage facility must be increased to handle the additional flow.

The Public Works Department constantly monitors the effect of heavy runoff into the drainage channels and is aware of the problems unique to the City of Midland.

They are, therefore, constantly striving for the improvement and betterment of the drainage systems.

Jim Brown is Midland's city manager.

Midland Jaycees host annual spookhouse

From Staff Reports

Ghoulish Midland Jaycees will host their annual Halloween Spookhouse this wicked Wednesday through frightful Friday.

"We enjoy getting out there and scaring people," Bradford Sincock, vice president for community development said.

The spookhouse will be at "the old Safeway building," located in the 2500 block of West Illinois two blocks west of Andrews Highway.

"It's twice the size it was last year.

"We've partitioned off about 10 rooms and they have different themes. Some of these things could really happen in a gruesome type of way," he said, later adding that Hutch's Meat Processing Co. was one of the materials donors.

Groups of eight to 10 people will be led through the house by tour guides. Sincock advised parents to attend with children under the age of nine.

He said the Midland Jaycees have spent over $1,000 on the house and hope to "just break even."

"Most Jaycee chapters can raise $5,000-$10,000 (from a spookhouse) for their operating expenses for the coming year by charging $4 or $5 a person.

"The Jaycees here consider this one of our community projects and any money we should make off the house will go to either sponsoring the Midland Association of Retarded Citizens basketball tournament in February or the Children's Christmas Shopping Spree," Sincock said.

The spookhouse has been sponsored by several area businesses including Safeway, City Savings, Handy Dan and Core Laboratories.

It will be open Wednesday, Oct. 29, and Thursday Oct. 30, nights from 6:30 to 10 p.m. and on Friday night, Halloween, from 7 p.m. to midnight.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

Tech student suspected of selling fake meal tickets

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Texas Tech University student and a former student are suspected of selling more than $2,300 in counterfeit dormitory meal coupons, authorities say.

The coupons are believed to have been printed by a former student who now lives in Pakistan and sold on campus by a 21-year-old student from Pakistan, said detective Jay Parchman of the Texas Tech Police Department.

The student has not been arrested, but the U.S. attorney's office is investigating, said Special Agent Dave Freriks of the U.S. Secret Service. He said he expects the case to be presented to a federal grand jury Dec. 9.

Students use the coupons to buy meals in dormitory cafeterias.

A book of 40 coupons cost $38.70. Parchman said the fake coupons were sold for $25 to American students and $26 to foreign students.

Police recovered about 3,500 counterfeit tickets, and authorities believe 90 books were sold.

Police investigate theft of jewelry valued at $5,700

From Staff Reports

Midland police detectives are investigating the theft of jewelry valued at more than $5,700 from a residence in the 1600 block of H St.

The victim, Norman Williamson, told police the items were taken sometime between Oct. 24 and 27 when the home was vacant. According to reports, someone entered the home by breaking a window on the east side of the residence.

Among the items taken were a yellow gold bracelet valued at $1,500, a yellow gold dome ring valued at $1,000, a 14 karat gold watch valued at $1,000, a pair of diamond stud earrings valued at $500, and assorted other earrings and necklaces.

Police are also expected to file charges of cocaine possession today against a 22-year-old Midland man arrested early this morning.

According to reports, the man was observed by a patrol officer driving a vehicle slowly through a parking lot near the Albertson's in the 1900 block of Midland Dr. The officer, who had been alerted of several burglaries in that immediate area, stopped the vehicle and found the man in possession of substance believed to be cocaine.

Police Roundup

In other reports, police are also investigating several other burglaries, including that of a local residence of weapons.

According to police, a nine millimeter pistol valued at $470 and a Bowie knife valued at $70 were stolen from a residence in the 1900 block of N. Midland Dr. The items were stolen Monday between 4 p.m. and midnight, reports said.

Two AM-FM cassette car stereos were reported stolen to police in separate incidents.

Tom Mallan told police a stereo valued at $250 was reported stolen from a vehicle in the 4400 block of Lanham, sometime between 10 a.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday.

A stereo valued at $180 was reported stolen from a vehicle in the 4400 block of Dalton Dr. Tom Heller, who reported the burglary, told police the item was stolen sometime between 10 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday.

"My opponent has no experience in bringing new industry to West Texas. He has never been to West Texas.

"I have also started an 'adopt-a-beach' program that encourages the private sector to take responsibility for cleaning up sections of our Texas beaches.

"The only thing M.D. Anderson has ever cleaned up is beer bottles at his honky-tonk," Mauro said.

Under questioning from County Attorney Mark Dettman, Schneidmann said the particular drug screening in question "does not do a wonderful job." He said it was possible the Mellaril was given and did not show up on the DPS test.

Tammy Halfmann, who was the county jail nurse when Olguin was an inmate, testified she had been told of the $1,000 daily habit, and she said she passed the information along to Leung in a phone conversation. She said she administered the first dose of Mellaril to Olguin, but could not testify if he received the other doses of the anti-anxiety medication.

Halfmann, responding to Dettman's queries, told the jury there was "nothing unusual" about Olguin's condition just before she got off duty about 5 p.m. April 25.

BATS

This figure is a 7.5 percent decrease from last year, said auditor Randolph Thompson.

It is costing less to audit the county because the firm is becoming more familiar with the county's accounting procedures and there is less to audit with the county losing a Community Development Block Grant for low-income housing this year.

A new accounting system has also made the county audit less expensive, Thompson said.

The commissioners also accepted a $25,350 bid from Manley Metal Buildings to re-roof the voting machine storage building. The roof has leaked causing damage to several voting machines.

The other bid rejected by the commissioners was $26,345 from Texas Permian Corporation.

Gas monitoring equipment OK'd

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County commissioners Monday approved a proposal that will provide the sheriff's office with hydrogen sulfide gas monitoring devices and safety equipment.

The equipment was requested by Sheriff Bob Brookshire following an Oct. 3 incident that required evacuation of more than 1,000 residents from a nearly one square mile area bounded by West 57th Street, Yukon Road, Andrews Highway and West County Road.

Under the lease agreement, Safety International Inc. will provide the sheriff's office with 11 H^2S monitoring devices and self-contained apparatus at a cost of nearly $3,000 a year. The company will also train sheriff's deputies in the use of the equipment.

Brookshire told the court he believes all his deputies can be trained within a 30 day period.

The H^2S leak Oct. 3 occurred at a water injection well being serviced near the intersection of North Golder Avenue and West 61st Street. According to Texas Railroad Commission personnel, H^2S concentrations at the wellhead were measured as high as 8,000 parts per million. Concentrations of 700 ppm can be fatal.

MMH offers Halloween safety tips

From Staff Reports

To stress the importance of safety at Halloween, Midland Memorial Hospital will hand out Halloween safety tips at Midland Park Mall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Additionally, the Radiology Department at MMH will X-ray candy on Friday night.

The safety tips include the best times to trick-or-treat, where to go, proper visibility and what to eat. In addition to cards with the tips, hospital personnel will also hand out trick-or-treat bags and balloons.

Candy will be x-rayed on Friday from 7 to 9 p.m. at no charge. The X-rays will show if there are any metal objects in the candy including needles and razor blades, and certain types of glass. X-raying the candy does not produce any negative side effects on the food.

Those wishing to visit the Radiology Department for this service are encouraged to park in the visitors' parking lot on the north side of the hospital and enter through the "Entrance 3" doors near the emergency room.

For more information, contact the Radiology Department at 685-1580 or Public Relations at 685-1541.

Trick-or-Treat Day sponsored

From Staff Reports

The Children's Protective Services of Midland is sponsoring a Trick-or-Treat Day for foster children and children of families who are working with the agency itself.

The event will be on Friday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at 2301 N. Big Spring. All the staff will be getting into the spirit by decorating their doors and donning costumes to delight little spooks and goblins. Candy and goodies will be passed out at each office door.

The safe alternative to neighborhood trick-or-treating will give everyone an opportunity to meet the Child Protection staff.

Lee, Midland bands garner firsts

From Staff Reports

Both the Lee and Midland High School bands received First Division Ratings at the District UIL Marching Contest on Saturday evening.

The Midland and Lee Freshman bands received Second Division Rating.

In addition, the Lee High School Band was named as the Outstanding Band of the contest.

As a result of this honor, the Rebel Band will advance to the regional contest which will be held at Ratliff Stadium this Saturday.

The Rebel Band was the unanimous choice of all the judges at the competition.

Probe of police shooting requested

DALLAS (AP) — A City Council member says she will ask the panel to hire an independent investigator to look into the shooting death of a 70-year-old woman by a police officer.

Diane Ragsdale said she is concerned about conflicting statements from witnesses and police concerning the death of Etta P. Collins.

Police said Mrs. Collins was shot early Sunday because she refused to stop pointing a revolver at officers responding to her call about a burglary next door. Mrs. Collins fired at least one shot toward the duplex next door as police moved toward her house, officials said.

The officer who shot Mrs. Collins, M.E. Krause, returned to work Monday night after a routine day of administrative leave, police said.

Ms. Ragsdale and other community leaders spent much of Monday outside Mrs. Collins' home, taking photos and interviewing witnesses.

Shopping in downtown LA adventurous

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — If you were born to shop, this is where you were born to be — 2:30 on a Friday afternoon at the corner of Ninth and Los Angeles streets in downtown LA.

Forget Rodeo Drive — unless you can afford it, of course. Forget Macy's, the May Co., Bullocks and Bloomies. Here, in the course of a few blocks, is the center of Los Angeles' garment district, the second most productive in the country.

For people who love bargains, it's the center of the universe. The sidewalks are as jammed as the streets, which are almost at gridlock. The hurring pedestrians, most of them women, are heavily burdened with monogrammed tote bags, department store shopping bags, even heavy-duty plastic garbage bags.

Inside the California Mart on Ninth Street, headquarters of the California fashion industry, the escalators up to the designer showrooms are crowded with chattering people. Across the intersection on Los Angeles Street, a five-deep crowd waits for the elevator at the Cooper Building, an aging office complex that houses dozens of discount clothing, jewelry and leather-goods shops.

Lining the streets are shops crammed with close-outs, overruns, past-seasons, samples, remnants and returns ranging from one-of-a-kind couture designs to mass-produced budget items.

And, on Friday afternoons and some select Saturdays, the dozens of California Mart showrooms suspend their usual rule against public sales. Knowledgeable Los Angelenos crowd the offices to paw racks of samples, often at ridiculous markdowns.

Shopping the garment district is admittedly a hit-and-miss business. Shops come and go as rapidly as the styles they carry; you may find a favorite this trip, and look for it in vain the next. Though there are a number of shops for large, petite and half-sizes, the stock in many stores leans heavily to smaller sizes, especially samples at the California Mart, where sizes usually are 8 or 10.

It pays to know labels and marks of quality, because some items that look like bargains may be flawed; while others are knockoffs of the real thing. However, there are jewels among the junk, and they're not hard to find. Strolling Los Angeles Street on a recent afternoon, I saw:

■ A Warren Z dress in floral-print rayon with a fashionable close-to-the-body cut for $29.99.

■ Linen button-front coat dresses by Laine for $19.99.

■ Paco Rabanne silk ties for $9.99.

■ Classic Bass leather-soled pumps for $19.99.

■ Jumping Jack unitards for $15.

■ Thick, rib-stitched men's sweat shirts by Kamikaze (the exact numbers seen in Gentleman's Quarterly) for $25.

■ And a Liz Claiborne silk-look dress for $60.

In the Cooper Building, I bought a basic black Forenza knit skirt for $24 and, in a different shop down the way, a matching Forenza sweater for $19.99. For my impossible-to-fit husband, I found a smashing Williwear crew neck in Willi Smith's California Mart showroom for only $45.

I could go on — and did. An afternoon of tramping the streets yielded many more bargains, and feet so swollen I could barely keep my shoes on. So I bought some cute, bow-fronted slip-ons for $3.99.

The garment district is especially worth a visit if people-watching ranks next to shopping on your list of favorite activities. Workers push garment racks down the sidewalk. Bums lounge in corners, occasionally panhandling.

Cars blaring rap music roll down the street. Lonche stands advertise carnitas, menudo con pata and carne adobado. Tailors crouch uncomfortably over their work in the windows of their shops.

No-holds-barred shopping tips given

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — My first exciting and sometimes painful foray into the L.A. Garment District prompt the following words of wisdom:

■ Know where to go. From a shopper's perspective, the district is concentrated within roughly a five-block area. Get a street map and have a cab driver drop you at 9th and Los Angeles.

The borders of your world are East 7th on the north, East 12th on the south, Broadway to the west and Wall to the east. Hot spots are Los Angeles between 7th and 9th; 9th between Broadway and Wall; Broadway between 8th and 11th; and the alley between Santee and Maple Streets.

If this is confusing, you need remember only one address: 860 S. Los Angeles, the location of the Cooper Building, which alone contains enough shops to keep even an industrious shopper busy all day. The hours are 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays; 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays. The phone number is (213) 622-1139.

The California Mart is kitty-corner from the Cooper Building. Usually it's wholesale-only, but if you're in town on a Friday or Saturday, it's worth calling ahead to see if they're selling samples to the general public. The number is (213) 620-0260; the address is 110 E. 9th Street.

■ Dress for change. You could be trying on several outfits an hour. My favorite shopping ensemble is a unitard (one-piece leotard and tights) under a bulky knit sweater dress. The sweater dress shrugs off and never wrinkles; when I'm in a hurry, I just let it drop to the floor. The unitard saves embarrassment in communal dressing rooms, the rule in the Garment District.

For the same reasons, wear a no-muss hairdo and light make-up or none at all. Lipstick, especially, is a problem when you're pulling clothes over your head. Fancy shoes are a bad idea; wear your most comfortable walking shoes.

■ Leave home without it, if it's negotiable and dear to you. I've been told that pickpockets and purse-snatchers work this area. Take only a little cash, and plan to pay for purchases with credit cards (MasterCard and Visa are widely accepted) or traveler's checks. Leave everything else at home.

Use a handbag with a long strap and wear it bandoleer-style, over your head and across one shoulder. Never carry a clutch and never put your bag down except when changing clothes. Even then, keep it close by or even put the strap around your ankle if conditions are crowded.

■ B.Y.O. bag. Most stores offer plastic bags, but many of these don't have handles, so they grow cumbersome once you've accumulated a few. Bring along a sturdy shopping bag or tote (and keep an eye on it!). Designer showrooms at the California Mart don't have bags.

■ Be mentally ready. It's not I. Magnin's. The sales people may be distant, surly, ignorant or unable to speak English very well. The merchandise may be jammed onto racks, tumbled into piles or stacked all out of size-order. They'll invariably be out of your size in many of the things you like. And if there's a big sale you on, the mood may grow somewhat competitive — full-body shopping, no holds barred.

The point is to save money and have an adventure. If it's graceful living you want, there's a lovely new shopping area down at 7th and Figueroa.

Books on shopping in LA's Garment District useful tools

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — Entire books have been written about shopping in L.A.'s Garment District. It isn't a bad idea to pick one up before you set out — any general bookstore should carry them.

■ "Guide to the Los Angeles Garment District" by Barbara Moe ($5.99, self-published, revised annually) is the most inexpensive and straightforward. You get alphabetically-arranged chapters (ladies' wear, men's wear, jewelry, etc.), maps, indexes and tips.

■ "Glad Rags II" by Leigh Charlton and Annette Swanberg ($8.95, Chronicle Books) ventures outside the Garment District to include all of L.A. and Orange County.

■ "Bargain Hunting in Los Angeles" by Barbara Patridge ($9.95, Peregrine Smith) goes beyond fashion to list dealers in bargains from antiques to travel arrangements. It's meticulously researched.

Spending habits studied

Hearst News Service

The working woman is fashion's darling today, and that's not just because she has a high profile.

A new study of clothes-shopping habits among working women shows that those with no children account for 44 percent of the total dollars spent on clothes, though they represent only 29 percent of the buying market. Typically, this woman bought 55 items in 1985, compared to the working mother, who bought 37 items. The traditional homemaker bought 30 items.

The unemcumbered working woman has accelerated her clothing purchases more than the other two groups over the past three years. Her 55 items represent a 26 percent increase over 44 items purchased in 1982. The working mom bought exactly the same number of items in 1982 as last year. The traditional homemaker accelerated 20 percent since 1982, up from 25 items.

The working woman spends an average of $11 per item, $2 more than working moms and traditional homemakers. Working women spend an average of $605 a year for clothes, working moms spend $333 and traditional homemakers spent $270. Though prices rose between 1984 and 1985, the working mom actually paid less in 1985 than in 1984 for half the items she purchased.

All the women represent a national demographic cross-section based on U.S. Census figures, says David Zuger, spokesman for MRCA, a market survey firm that has been in business since 1938.

The 11,500 women who kept exact diaries for this study also told where and how they shopped for clothes. The working woman favors upscale outlets such as department stores and specialty stores, spending 57 percent of her clothing budget there. The working mom spends 31 percent, and the traditional homemaker spends 29 percent in this way.

AT WIT'S END

Memories golden

By ERMA BOMBECK

I'm at the age of my life where every time I buy something of any value, I have visions of my kids marking it down to $2 at a garage sale. I don't know if that kind of anxiety has a name or not, but for the sake of reference I'll call it the "I'm-Not-Going-Syndrome."

Sometimes I wake up at night in a cold sweat just thinking that my cup and saucer collection will fall into the hands of someone furnishing a summer cabin who doesn't mind dishes that don't match. A friend who is older and wiser than I suggested I start early to find homes for all my treasures and not leave my legacies to chance.

I got out my 17-year-old mink stole the other day and came to a decision. I was going to spread joy while I was still alive to see the excitement on the face of my daughter when I gave it to her. When she came to dinner, I unzipped the plastic garment bag and said, "Do you know what this is?"

She put on her glasses and came in for a closer look. "Help me," she said.

"Christmas. Severely depressed. Family. Daddy. Surprise."

She shook her head excitedly. "Daddy killed this and we ate it for Christmas dinner."

"It was my first mink coat," I said. "And its yours."

I placed it around her shoulders. She was speechless.

There are so many priceless bits of memorabilia in my possession, I hardly know where to begin. I want to be fair. There's a glass lid that belonged to a cast iron skillet given to me by my grandmother ... God rest her soul. The skillet's lost, but the lid doesn't have a crack in it. No sense having some attorney rip it off. I offered it to the child who would take care of it. Each one humbly refused it. Those little monkeys always surprise you.

So far, I've dispersed a hand-blown glass sea urchin I bought at Disneyland, a coconut shell necklace from Hawaii and a book of Emerson's essays that looks real old, plus a piece of sheet music with a picture of Martha Raye before she had dentures, and Christmas ornaments that we had on our first tree.

It isn't easy. Every time I part with my class ring or a clothespin painted like a pig that holds a recipe, a little of me dies with it. The other day when my son was visiting, I placed a box before him and smiled, "We only have our todays."

"Is this another 'living bequest'?" he said.

"This is the little rug I hand-hooked for your nursery. Remember the little sailboat and the seagulls?"

"I remember," he said solemnly.

"I want you to remember that it took your mother 12 years to finish it at an expense of $140 ... $90 in yarn alone."

Last night I saw the rug in his apartment. It was lining the dog bed.

I TELL YOU I'm not going until all this is settled!

DEAR ABBY

Past loves may drive present man out

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 46-year-old woman. I have been divorced for three years, during which time I dated several men. I was intimate with two, but not at the same time.

I met "Jimmy" eight months ago and haven't dated anyone else since we met. I told him the truth about my past relationships with both men. He grew very fond of me and we were having a very loving romance when both of these men from my past dropped in to see me during the same week! I had not had any contact with either of them, and was completely surprised when they showed up at my door!

Unfortunately, Jimmy was here both times, which upset him terribly. I tried to explain that neither man meant a thing to me now, but I suppose I acted flustered and guilty. He doesn't believe me, Abby. I swore that I have had no contact with either man since I met him, but he is not convinced of my innocence.

How can I prove to Jimmy that I have been entirely faithful? We were discussing marriage before this happened. Now he's unsure. Please help me. — HURT IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR HURT: Your word should be sufficient. And if it isn't, don't knock yourself out trying to "prove" your innocence. I suggest you take a good hard look at Jimmy and be grateful for a preview of this stubborn, suspicious man. He has insulted your integrity. Is this the kind of person you want to spend the rest of your life with?

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I hope to curb before it gets too far out of hand.

Our 6-year-old son lies to us and others. We've tried grounding him, depriving him of things, but he still looks us right in the face and lies. I know it's not a huge problem, but I don't want it to go unchecked.

Our 4-year-old is starting to do the same thing now. Some people say it's just a phase all children go through, but I don't want to have my sons grow up to be the kind of people no one can trust.

Thanks for any help you can give me. — F.E.D. IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR F.E.D.: You are to be commended for wanting to instill truthfulness in your children, and the time to do it is now. All children tell small lies. Some actually confuse facts with fantasies; some lie in order to escape punishment; others just have vivid imaginations.

When your sons lie, let them know that you don't believe them. Don't come on as though they had committed a cardinal sin, but do "discuss" it, and impress upon them the importance of being truthful. (The parable about the little boy who cried "wolf" can be used.)

I realize that there are just so many things a parent can harp on, but making truthfulness a top priority will do more to build a child's character than anything else.

DEAR ABBY: I've read many anti-smoking letters in your column, but I've never seen my biggest gripe: smoking in public rest rooms.

I have seen employees standing in rest rooms doing nothing but smoking. They use the rest room as an excuse to take a cigarette break when they should be on the job.

Department store and restaurant employees are the worst offenders. It is maddening to go into a rest room and practically gag on the smoke, then have another employee or two come in for a smoke.

What can be done? I hope a lot of business owners/managers will see this and take action. — HOLDING MY BREATH

DEAR HOLDING: A complaint directly from the customer to the owners and managers would be more effective than a suggestion from a newspaper columnist. Perhaps one day we will see "Thank you for not smoking" signs in public rest rooms.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JUANITA JAMISON: I thought your answer was wonderful, but how did you expect me to respond when you failed to give me your address, the name of your newspaper or even the city in which you live?

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Untreated rebellion faces 'surgery of warfare'

WORLD

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino told a nurses' convention today that, should Communist insurgency prove unresponsive to her treatment, it must be removed by the "drastic surgery of warfare."

Mrs. Aquino, speaking to about 1,000 nurses at a suburban army camp, compared the 17-year-old leftist guerrilla campaign to a "lingering illness," which she said she is trying to cure through dialogue and "the promise of reconciliation."

The president, under fire from Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile for her peace overtures to the Communists, said that as a Christian, she was duty-bound to save lives rather than destroy them.

"You know that an ounce of prevention is always better than a pound of cure, especially if the remedy is as bitter as pitting Filipino against Filipino," she said.

But, she added, "Should it prove to be as incurable as a cancer, then it must be removed by the more drastic surgery of warfare."

Meanwhile, police said gunmen early today fired two or three shots into a Wendy's fast-food restaurant in Makati, the capital's financial district. The restaurant was closed at the time, and there were no injuries, police reported.

It was the third attack since Friday in the Makati area. On Friday, two people were injured when a small bomb exploded outside a McDonald's restaurant.

On Saturday, assailants fired a grenade into a vacant office building that houses the Aquino Foundation, an organization established after the 1983 assassination at Manila airport of Mrs. Aquino's husband and leading anti-Marcos politician, Benigno.

Government television quoted police as saying the recent attacks appeared aimed at instilling fear and destabilizing the Aquino government. Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, commander of the capital district, urged the public to remain calm.

Some Manila newspapers Monday claimed the attacks were the work of extremist supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos, but officials refused to confirm the report.

Earlier today, Marcos was quoted as saying he could forgive Enrile for helping oust him as long as he fights communism.

"I can only forgive him when he fights the communists," he said of Enrile, a leader of the civilian-military uprising that ousted Marcos in February after 20 years in power.

The interview appeared in several Manila newspapers. The dailies said Marcos spoke with a group of Filipino reporters Wednesday in Hawaii, where he has lived since his downfall.

The newspapers quoted Marcos as saying Enrile has been criticizing Mrs. Aquino's policies because he is not being consulted in decision-making.

"He was not as critical of the administration before because he was a member of the team that formulated government policies," Marcos was quoted as saying. "He does not feel the same way now."

Before Mrs. Aquino's speech, Manila Archbishop Cardinal Jaime Sin, in a Mass for the nurses, said the Philippines was a society "rocked with conflict and dissension."

Sin appealed for national unity and urged Communist rebels to heed the government's call for reconciliation.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos also attended the conference but refused to comment when asked by reporters about the rift in the government over Enrile's calls for tough action against the rebels.

"Let's leave it to the president, who has diagnosed the cure," Ramos said.

Ethiopia's foreign minister resigns in protest

Goshu Wolde

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Ethiopia's foreign minister, saying his country's Marxist regime has forfeited the moral right to govern, resigned to protest what he called Ethiopia's slide into dictatorship.

"All efforts to moderate its policies from within were to no avail," Goshu Wolde told reporters at a news conference Monday.

Ethiopia, on the Horn of Africa, is the Soviet Union's staunchest ally on the continent.

Goshu said he was resigning immediately from his ministry and as a member of the Central Committee of the ruling Marxist party, but had not decided whether to seek political asylum.

Goshu studied at Yale law school and said he has some family members in the United States.

"While I have yet to decide about my future, I shall, nevertheless, pledge to continue to work for and promote the best interests of the Ethiopian people — social justice, genuine democracy, territorial integrity and independence," he said, reading from a statement in a calm, composed voice.

Goshu, who made his announcement in the lobby of the U.N. Plaza Hotel, across the street from U.N. headquarters, said he had notified the Ethiopian head of state, Mengistu Haile Mariam.

Mengistu was among a cadre of army officers who ousted the pro-Western emperor, Haile Selassie, on Sept. 12, 1974. He eventually emerged as the dominant figure in the Provisional Military Administrative Council and in 1977 pushed Ethiopia into the Soviet orbit.

American officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, described Goshu as the most moderate member of his government and as having promoted an improvement of Ethiopia's ties with the West.

Goshu, foreign minister for four years, accused Ethiopia's government of "short-sighted and rigidly doctrinaire policies" and said it has lost the moral right to govern.

"I have recently watched with helplessness as my country slipped further and further into totalitarianism and absolute dictatorship, with the inevitable consequences of intolerance and repression," Goshu said.

"The government is surely out of touch with the genuine aspirations of and insensitive to the plight of the Ethiopian people, while increasingly determined to rule against their grain," he said.

U.S. officials said Goshu had entered the country on a diplomatic visa, which expired with his resignation, and if he wished to remain in the United States his options would be to obtain a tourist or business visa, apply for political asylum or ask for refugee status.

Goshu's actions follow the defections of Ethiopia's two top famine relief officials in the last year.

Dawit Wolde Giorgis, commissioner of relief and rehabilitation, defected last October. His deputy, Berhane Deressa, announced in June that he had resigned and would not return home.

Berhane issued a statement at the time saying he could no longer serve a regime "whose primary purpose is implanting a foreign ideology and an alien socio-political system."

Last month, Ethiopia's ambassador to France also quit his post.

WORLD in brief

Soviet emigrees go home, say leaving 'tragic mistake'

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviets who emigrated to the United States and then asked permission to come home have returned, and one of them said leaving had been a "tragic mistake," a Communist Party newspaper reported today.

Sovietskaya Rossiya, a publication of the party and the government of the Russian Republic, said the two former emigrants, Israel Glickman and Yefim Belikin, were met by members of their family Monday at Moscow's Sheremetyevo airport.

Both participated in a news conference at the Soviet Embassy in Washington before returning home, along with two other Soviets who were given permission to come back to this country, Yuri Chapovsky and Rashid Atamalibekov. At the time, Belikin used the first name Alexander.

The idea that Soviet emigres are miserable in their new countries is a central theme of Soviet press commentary on the emigration issue.

Lufthansa building bombed

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — A bomb exploded today at the main administration building of West Germany's Lufthansa airline in Cologne, causing damages but injuring no one, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman, requesting anonymity, told The Associated Press the bomb caused about $50,000 in damage. He said there was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast.

The bomb was placed next to an outside wall of the administration building and exploded at 2:30 a.m., the spokesman said.

Storms halt oil fire fight

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Storms in the Bay of Campeche hampered the fight to control a fire at the Abkatun 91 off-shore oil well Monday, an official in the government oil monopoly Pemex's information office said.

"Since yesterday the bad weather started. Flights are suspended," he said in a telephone interview. "Today, the people in the area are trying to continue with the work as planned. They are continuing with the work program despite the bad weather."

Pemex reported previously that none of the 69 oil workers on the platform were injured in the fire at the well, located off Ciudad del Carmen, an island city in the Bay of Campeche, 500 miles southeast of Mexico City. The well has a flow of 17,000 barrels daily.

The oil company said Abkatun 91 went out of control late Thursday after a fire in the pipes. A Pemex environmental protection squad was on the scene through the weekend to handle any oil spills from the well, but the company said little had escaped so far.

Pemex Director Mario Ramon Beteta went to Ciudad del Carmen for meetings with other company officials about the fire.

On Sept. 20, the Luna II well in the southeastern state of Tabasco went out of control and burned for about two weeks. No injuries were reported.

Beth Slaton of Temp Time is working for you here and in Austin

Beth Slaton, President of Temp Time Inc., is Senior Director fof Temporary Help Services Association of Texas (THSAT) and serves on the trade association's Political Action Committee. As a member of this important committee, Slaton reports that they are working on a number of vital issues, many of which affect not only temporary companies but other Permian Basin industries also.

There are four items currently being addressed by the committee and their lobbyist Cissy Woomer: the possibility of sales tax on service, changes in worker's compensation classification codes, the implementation of local measured service and modification in the unemployment compensation system.

With all sales tax exemptions to be reconsidered in the next regular session, THSAT hopes to head off any legislation that would make "services" taxable. Obviously, such a change would have a tremendous impact on the temporary industry and other service industries.

Worker's Compensation is another area of concern for many businesses. "The current movement to move the industry back into the manual rate is being done through the State Board of Insurance, but the need for legislative mandate may be around the corner," Slaton says.

Relevant to an even greater number of Permian Basin businesses is implementation of local measured phone service, which Slaton labels, "a constant threat." She says this will "definitely be considered during the upcoming session." The committee is gearing up to lobby heavily against such legislation which could increase the cost of doing business in any industry.

The committee will also be busy during the next regular session, pushing for a modification in the unemployment compensation system. Too often, they maintain, the employees have representation, but the companies involved are not adequately represented in the process. The PAC committee is working with the Texas Employment Commission on this issue.

To sum up this committee's purpose - it's to keep cost down for the temporary industry, as well as other industries.

When THSAT is successful at holding the costs of doing business to a minimum, then clients of companies like Temp Time reap the benefits in lower temporary costs.

Temp Time offers qualified temporaries with a wide variety of skills. An expert bookkeeper, executive secretary, file clerk, receptionist or other professional Temp Time temporary, can be on the job saving you time and money during peak work loads, vacations and sick days.

With the holiday season coming up, Slaton points out that they can provide qualified people to help retailers cope with the increased traffic and to assist non-retailers in completing those time-consuming year end tasks.

Temp Time also has a payrolling service for companies who would like to have a particular professional work for them, but would want Temp Time to handle the payroll. This can even be used for professionals who are working as consultants.

Whether you utilize a Temp Time temporary or the company's convenient payrolling service, Temp Time will take care of all the income taxes, social security taxes and workmen's compensation insurance. Just call Temp Time at 687-1545.

When you call Temp Time, you can be confident that your doing business with a local company that's working for your benefit here and in Austin, year around.

While lobbying recently in Austion on behalf of the temporary help industry, Beth Slaton, President of Temp Time, stopped in to visit with local representative Tom Craddick.

Fancy Fans and Gifts helps you spruce up the holidays

"Deck the halls with boughs of holly...."

Yes, it's getting to be that time of year, again. And, Fancy Fans and Gifts in San Miguel Square will help you spruce up your home or office for the holidays with wreaths, garlands, silk arrangements, ficus trees, candles, baskets and a world of other decorating items. Whether you want to make your own arrangements or have the designers at Fancy Fans do it, you'll not find a better selection anywhere else.

Perhaps, you've always wanted to get into the holiday spirit with your decorating, but the over abundance of red and green somehow dampened your interest. Jane Drennan, manager of this mother/daughter store, offers some real consolation.

Christmas arrangements, she says, can be color coordinated with your decor. Fancy Fans and Gifts' selection of exotic silk flowers in a wide variety of colors makes this easy. They even have poinsettias in popular decorator colors.

Just tell the ladies what you'd like and the price range you are working in. They'll make it all so easy and beautiful. In fact, they'll even make house calls when you're ordering silk arrangements and greenery.

Imagine a hanging basket full of poinsettias in your favorite color. Or, how about a wreath with colorful ribbon and special accents. The possibilities are almost endless with all the containers at this quaint store. There are grapevine wreaths, baskets, grapevine bows and cowboy hats, heart pocket wreaths, brass and ceramic containers (even large enough for the ficus trees which they can special order in any size).

A selection of ribbon including moire, cotton and plaids; large pine cones that have been hand dipped in decorator colors; Christmas music boxes; very special ornaments; taper and column candles in all sizes and colors will help complete your arrangements. And, no holiday fireside would be complete without one of the precious ducks, cats or Christmas geese. The signature series of hand carved Tomtaber ducks are especially eye catching.

Of course, many of these items would also make terrific gifts. And, the ladies at Fancy Fans and Gifts are always ready to assist you with your selection, but you'll never find them pushy.

Men especially appreciate this helpful service and the free gift wrapping on items purchased at Fancy Fans.

Potpourri is one very popular gift item at the store. There are many, many scents, including special ones for the holiday season.

Gift baskets from Fancy Fans are ideal for teachers. The antiques scattered throughout the store make special gifts, as do the beautiful rugs to hang on the wall.

Fancy Fans also has quality Emerson and Hawaiian Breeze ceiling fans with a limited lifetime warranty. Both four and five blade fans, antique white and polished brass fans are available. Purchase a fan and get 20 percent off the light kit.

If you just can't decide what to get, ask for a gift certificate.

Whether you are decorating for the holidays or shopping for presents, now is the time to do it. The selection will never be better and ordering your custom arrangements early will assure you of little waiting time.

Lay-away, VISA and MasterCard are all acceptable, Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mark November 30 on your calendar - Fancy Fans will have a special open house. Then, in December they will also be open on Sundays, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

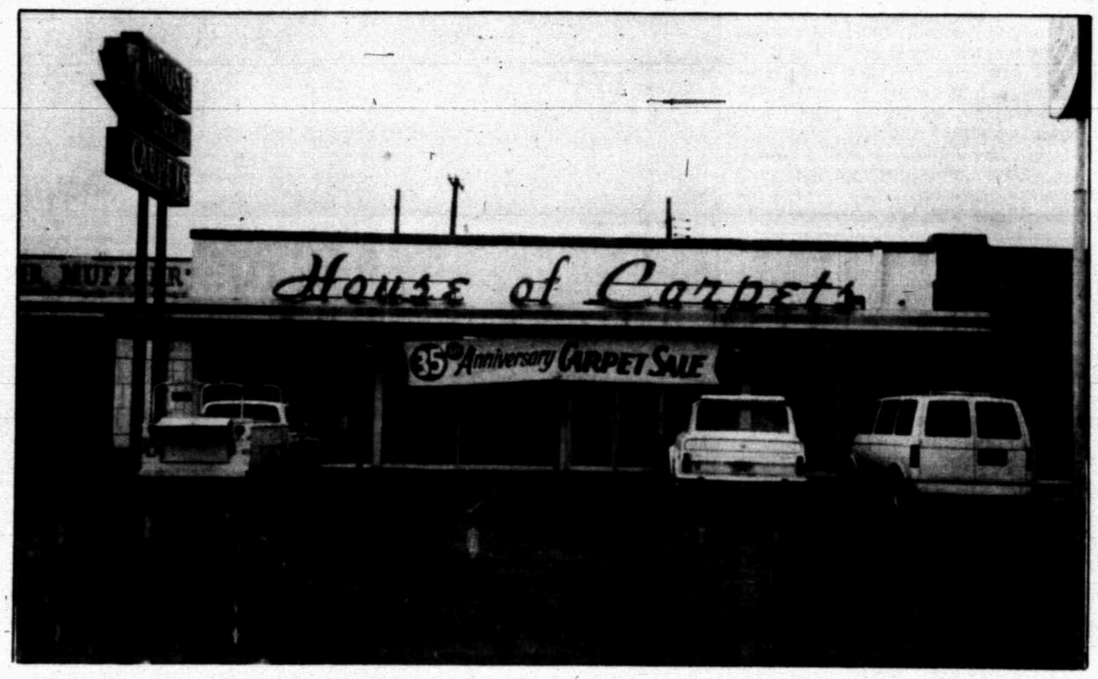
Midland's House of Carpets rates tops in nation



House of Carpets, Midland's #1 carpet store since 1951, is celebrating its 35th anniversary with a sale. Go by the store in Village Shopping Center on Wall Street and you'll see why it's #1.

Most Midlanders know House of Carpets is the area's number one carpet store. House of Carpets also enjoys a top ranking in the state and the entire nation.

When the national organization, Retail Floorcovering Institute was first formed, the first Texas carpet store invited to become a member was House of Carpets of Midland, and its owner, Felix Welmaker, was elected to its first national Board of Directors and served for several years in that capacity.

When Clint Murchison Jr. built Texas Stadium, the home of the Dallas Cowboys in Irving, Texas, he purchased the carpet from Felix Welmaker and House of Carpets of Midland, even though there were hundreds of carpet dealers in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area.

In 1985, when Carpet One, the world's largest carpet-buying group was issuing invitations and accepting applications for members in Texas, House of Carpets in Midland was one of the top three dealers in the state elected to that prestigious organization. As a result, Midlanders now enjoy the most competitive carpet prices anywhere...at Midland's own House of Carpets.

There are only seven RFI Certified Floorcovering Specialists in the State of Texas, and one of them, the only one in Midland, is House of Carpets' owner, Felix Welmaker. No wonder when Midlanders want the very best values in carpet, carpet care, or other floorcovering products, they go to House of Carpets, Midland's most respected name in carpets since 1951.

The sales counselors at House of Carpets attend weekly training sessions designed to keep Midlanders as up to date as the people in New York or San Francisco or Miami, concerning the latest and best in floorcoverings and floor care products.

If you haven't been to House of Carpets lately, drop by the store on West Wall Street in the Village Shopping Center this week, during their 35th Anniversary Carpet Sale! Bring in this article and trade it for a free gift bottle of their famous "Unbelievable!" spot cleaner (limit one). For value, the best in advice and the most competitive prices, in Midland it's the House of Carpets, #1 in Midland since 1951!

Your Graphics are Showing: there's never been a sale like this Percy and Pat Tate of Your Graphics Are Showing, located in Plaza Shopping Center, have announced an unprecedented sale. Nearly every print in the store is 30 or 50 percent off!

Pat says that in almost 11 years of business, Your Graphics Are Showing has never had a sale like this. It's not just one little bin of prints that are on sale, you'll see red (30 percent off) and blue (50 percent off) tags all over the store.

Impressionistic, contemporary, Southwestern, wildlife and landscape works are included in this big sale. Pat says some real "favorites" are on sale.

Everything is framed and ready to go for your home, office or gift, but don't wait too long. The sale ends October 31.

Approved charges can be made on VISA, MasterCard, American Express and Discovery - even at these tremendous sale prices. You can also put prints on layaway for Christmas, again this is at sale prices and all sales are final.

You are sure to find something you like at this art gallery. The selection at Your Graphics Are Showing is one of the most diversified found anywhere in West Texas.

In addition to the many prints the gallery has on sale, there's a nice selection of brand new works Pat and Percy just brought back from market. Though these are not marked down, you are sure to find they are well worth the regular price. Impressionism is really "big" this year and a number of new Amish prints (resembling those by Moss) will also capture your heart.

Your Graphics Are Showing is open Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Don't miss this unprecedented sale!

Pat and Percy Tate, owners of Your Graphics Are Showing, invite you to come in during their unprecendented sale, where nearly all their prints are marked 30 or 50 percent off. The sale ends October 31, so don't wait. While you are checking out the sale items, also look over the new pieces, like this beautiful landscape, they just brought back from market. The new prints are great values, though they are not on sale.

Cattleman's Steak House announces new menu, same quality service

Cattleman's Steak House, 3300 N. Big Spring, is known for their outstanding service and a terrific menu. Dine there this week and try one of the delicious new items on the menu.

Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, has added some mouth watering treats to their new menu. Veal and chicken parmesan have been added, along with ham and cheese croissants. UMMMM. For fish lovers Bill has added a Fisherman's Platter which includes shrimp, oyster, scallop and catfish. You may also notice the new chickem kiev, which Bill says is really good. There's one other very special thing on the new menu - an 8 oz Ribeye for the ladies.

Of course, you'll still find all your old favorites that will "stick to your ribs."

Cattleman's Steak House has long been known for the "Best Steaks in the West." And the big, tasty chicken fried steaks with delicious cream gravy and french fries or baked potato are only the beginning of an extraordinarily good, Texas-style menu.

It starts with a huge, irresistible salad bar where you can pile on the crisp lettuce, cherry tomatoes, carrots, sprouts and more toppings than you can imagine. Finish it off with the dressing of your choice and add a dab of potato or pea salad or peaches. Cattleman's knows the meaning of fresh salad and selection.

Appetizers range from mountains of golden onion rings to fried zucchini and sauteed or fried mushrooms. This is only the beginning for those Texas-size appetites.

Your choice of fine steak, seafood, or even prime rib will arrive, cooked to your order of perfection. Dinner steak, ribeye and club steak have always been delicious choices. Sirloins come in many sizes and the T-Bone steak, an old favorite, will satisfy even the biggest appetite. And, of course, Cattleman's always has the best chicken fried steak to be found anywhere around. That's because they make their own, instead of using pre-battered steaks like many places do.

Their selection also includes lasagna and spaghetti. And, it ranks right up there with the other fine dishes on the menu.

Cattleman's chicken strips, steak fingers, hamburgers and club sandwiches are always favorites.

In addition to the new seafood platter, Cattleman's serves delectable fried shrimp, oysters, catfish, frog legs and scallops. Their flounder, lobster, sole, trout, salmon, and red snapper are equally tasty.

Whatever you select will be great with fries or a big baked potato with butter, sour cream, cheese and bacon bits.

Children love the "Kiddie Corner" on the menu. The same great food is served to satisfy their appetites.

A glass of delicious ice tea, a soft drink or cup of coffee will be perfect with your meal. Cattleman's also has a good selection of wines, champagnes and premium beers.

Blueberry cheese cake, pecan pie, ice cream, cherry cheese cake or apple pie at Cattleman's will make your lunch or dinner even better.

Bill and Pat point out that Cattleman's Steak House is famous not only for delicious food, but also for an efficient, friendly staff. That's what makes Cattleman's come to mind on those special occasions.

In the middle of a busy day at the office, you deserve to have a relaxing lunch at Cattleman's Steak House, and after a long day the whole family needs to experience Cattleman's food and friendly atmosphere.

Enjoy lunch or dinner at Cattleman's, Monday-Friday. On Saturday you can have the best dinner of your week at this fine steak house.

If the parking lot is full, don't worry. It's nearly always full and the wait is never too long at 3300 N. Big Spring.

Start spreading the news: It's the Mets

By Mark Kreidler

NEW YORK — Ah, yes. The Mets. Just as we expected.

New York has won the 83rd World Series for all the wrong reasons. The Mets were supposed to be faster, with better pitching and a deeper bench, but fortitude ... no one ever said anything about fortitude.

Prohibitive pre-Series favorites, they were pushed to the limit by a Boston team that struggled in vain to overcome its history, an incredible 68-year legacy of wrenching failure.

But when it was over Monday night, and the Red Sox had succeeded in giving back a three-run lead after five innings, and the Mets had scored eight times in three frames, their second world championship in 25 seasons of existence could not be denied, nor this fact: New York ultimately had the character to win.

The Mets have been called lots of things this year; courageous was not necessarily one of them. Yet, their 8-5 victory in Game 7, before 55,032 frenzied Shea Stadium fans, was the definitive gut check.

"Like any winning club — it's the ability to come back and win," said Keith Hernandez, whose two-run single in the bottom of the sixth keyed the 3-3 tie that somehow broke Boston's spirit. "It just shows the character of this club. We had to come back in the playoffs, we had to come back after being down 2-0 in this series, we had to come back in Game 6 ..."

AND, FINALLY, they needed one more touch of magic Monday night, needed to find some way to get to Bruce Hurst, who'd stifled them in Games 1 and 5 and allowed them one hit through five innings of the decisive contest. They found a way.

"It's a young ballclub with a lot of character, lot of desire, a never-say-die attitude, and that's what makes me so proud of them," said Manager Davey Johnson, who wore his champagne like a badge. "There were uptight and pressure situations ... I thought we played exceptionally well for being such a young ballclub."

Boston manager John McNamara, who was denied the World Series championship in his first try, apparently agreed. He was seen in the Mets' clubhouse, quietly shaking the hands of the winners and accepting their condolences.

FOR THOSE five fleeting innings, the Red Sox unshackled themselves from Saturday's stunning loss, in which the Mets scored three times in the bottom of the 10th inning — the winning run scoring on a Bill Buckner error that will live in Red Sox infamy — and took a 6-5 victory to force Monday night's game, postponed a day by rain.

Dwight Evans ripped a home run off the Mets' Ron Darling leading off the second inning. A couple of pitches later, Rich Gedman took Darling deep. Then a walk, a bunt, a single — Boston had jumped to a 3-0 lead.

Meantime, McNamara's off-day decision to use Hurst on three days' rest rather than a fully rested Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd paid dividends — for a time. In the first five innings, Hurst allowed one man to reach base. He was flawless.

But Hurst faded quickly, as he had in his only other post-season start on three days' rest, in Game 5 in Anaheim. Pinch hitter Lee Mazzilli singled to left with one out in the sixth. Mookie Wilson singled. Tim Teufel walked. Keith Hernandez stepped in.

MCNAMARA FOLLOWED Hurst with Calvin Schiraldi, whose 10th-inning collapse in Game 6 was tablesetting for what was to come. Knight hit a 2-1 pitch over the left field fence. Pinch hitter Lenny Dykstra, the fireplug held out of the starting lineup because of Hurst's presence, singled. Schiraldi made a wild pitch on a pitchout.

Suddenly, surely, with finality, the game was out of hand. Hernandez would bring home another run with a fly ball, and McNamara would go through four pitchers in the ensuing 1⅓ innings, with jarring, numbing results.

Unwanted Met a Series hero

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — When Ray Knight left for spring training with the New York Mets last February, he took with him an encouraging word from his wife, champion golfer Nancy Lopez.

"She said, 'You can win the third base job,' " Knight recalled.

And what did he say?

"I said, 'No way.' "

The man was just being realistic. Knight knew the Mets had tried hard all winter to trade him and the only reason he was still around was that General Manager Frank Cashen could find no takers for a 33-year-old infielder coming off two straight sub-par seasons.

Knight, however, had one important person in his corner. Manager Davey Johnson saw him as important, veteran stability for a mostly young Met team.

"He was always in my ear, always telling me how good he was," Johnson said. "He came to spring training in great shape. He had lost some weight and worked hard. You can tell a guy with tremendous desire, tremendous fight. The situation on my ballclub was such that Ray was instrumental in solidifying our team."

Knight started the season platooning at third base, but a sizzling April — six homers in the first nine games, a .333 average for the first 31 games — made him the everyday starter. Just as Nancy said.

He finished the season with a .298 batting average and was an important bat in the middle of the lineup. In the World Series, he became the most important bat.

Three hits, including a tie-breaking, seventh-inning home run in Monday night's 8-5 seventh-game victory, clinched the Series MVP award for Knight. He batted .391 with nine hits, five runs batted in and four runs scored.

Knight was in the middle of the dramatic 10th-inning Met rally that won Game 6, singling home one run and then scoring the winner. And he was the catalyst in Game 7 with a home run that put his team in front to stay.

"I've come a long way," he said, as he claimed his MVP trophy, "but a bunch of guys deserve this thing.

"I'm a positive thinker, but the last two years there was nothing to think I would be an integral part of this club."

While for Wade Boggs, right, Bruce Hurst and Calvin Schiraldi, the scene is hard to watch.

Some Sox take it hard

By DAVE O'HARA

NEW YORK (AP) — Wade Boggs' face said it all.

As the New York Mets celebrated their World Series championship on the field at Shea Stadium, the American League batting champion sat in the dugout and cried.

The 8-5 loss to the Mets in Game 7 Monday night left the Boston Red Sox hurt and disappointed, but not ashamed, they said.

"There's nothing to be sorry about, it was a great Series," Boston first baseman Bill Buckner said.

"We gave it a good shot, but those guys hit when they had to," slugger Jim Rice said.

"It hurts, coming so close, but we never gave up," Boston reliever Bob Stanley said.

Boggs, Boston's third baseman, appeared to be taking the defeat the hardest. He sat in the dugout, tears streaming down his face, for several minutes after the game, then showered and declined comment in the crowded clubhouse.

"It's real frustrating," said catcher Rich Gedman, who lined out in the eighth inning with the score 6-5 and the tying run on second.

As they have all season, the Red Sox tried to ignore seventh-game World Series failures by the Boston teams in 1946, 1967 and 1975.

"Those teams had nothing to do with what happened tonight," said pitcher Bruce Hurst, who started Game 7. "We had a chance to win Game 6, but we didn't put it away."

And they haven't won a World Series since 1918, when a guy named Babe Ruth was pitching. Red Sox' postseason woes include a pennant-playoff to Cleveland in 1948 and a division title playoff to the New York Yankees in 1978.

"We can't hang our heads," said Hurst, who blanked the Mets on one hit for five innings before being tagged for three runs, which tied the score 3-3, in the sixth.

Hurst's start Monday night was only the second time this year he has gone on three days' rest. The other time was in Game 5 of the AL playoffs against the California Angels when he also went six innings.

Asked about the sixth inning, when the Mets tied the score on a two-run single by Keith Hernandez and then a forceout at second on Gary Carter's fly ball to short right, Hurst said:

"I made some decent pitches in that inning and they skipped through some holes. Keith Hernandez is a great hitter. He has a great eye, and coming into the Series I felt he was one of the guys I had to get out. On his hit, I got the ball up and he punched it through the hole (to center)."

Boston Manager John McNamara said Hurst "lost his location and a little bit of his velocity, but he kept us in the game. He did his job."

Giants win knots East three ways

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — There was a strange quality to the New York Giants NFC East showdown victory over the Washington Redskins, both on and off the field — and some of it had nothing to do with football.

Maybe it was the fact that most of the 75,923 fans at Giants Stadium Monday night spent much of the game with one eye on the field and another on one of the numerous portable TV sets tuned to Game 7 of the World Series between the New York Mets and the Boston Red Sox.

"World Series ... what World Series," quipped Washington Coach Joe Gibbs after the Giants downed the Redskins 27-20 Monday night to move into a three-way tie with Washington and Dallas in the NFC East.

The ups and downs of the World Series finale made for raucous cheering at odd moments in the Giants-Redskins game. Washington players admitted crowd noise that was a reaction to happenings elsewhere drew them offsides on at least two occasions — one of which cost the Redskins a touchdown in the second quarter.

"It was weird," said Redskins linebacker Neal Olkewicz. "For a while we didn't understand what all the noise was about. We finally figured it out; they were making noise for the World Series."

The noise at odd times wasn't the only thing out of the ordinary.

The Giants defense, which entered the game ranked No. 1 in the NFL, didn't play like the best in the league, while the club's struggling offense worked well.

Chaps to scrimmage away from spotlight

By TED BATTLES

The World Series is still warm.

Midland Lee is reveling in the pleasant afterglow of its biggest football victory since its last win over Odessa Permian with yet, possibly, an even bigger game and victory at San Angelo Friday night.

The pro football season is still so young the fans haven't started asking "What's wrong with the Dallas Cowboys?"

So what are these guys doing running around in their shorts and jamming oversized round spheres into undersized iron rings draped in fetching lace?

Sunday West Texans were supposed to have turned back the clock, but Wednesday at Chaparral Center, it will seem more like the clock has been raced forward.

The Chaps stage a preseason scrimmage for the fans at 7:30 p.m. after a Meet-the-Chaps social starting at 6:30 p.m.

All of the MC athletic teams will be present to meet the fans and boosters.

While the scrimmage may seem early, the basketball season opens Nov. 6 with the three-day Chaparral Classic which brings eight teams to the Chap Center.

With a field that will include Odessa College, South Plains College, Cisco JC, and Grayson County from Texas plus Garden City and Barton County from Kansas, the tournament looms as an early season treat.

In Wednesday's scrimmage, fans will have an opportunity to see how well Coach Jerry Stone has filled the holes left by graduation from last year's 33-1 team.

Although MC lost All-America Ricky Grace (University of Oklahoma), replacing the big inside guys like Eddie Frazier, Tony Wright and Derrick Lewis may prove the big job.

Six-seven Bruce Nix, Leaksville, Miss., 6-4 Mike Smith, Cocoa, Fla. represent Stone's experience inside. Six-six Rob Cunningham, Roundrock; 6-7 Tracy Davis, Washington, D.C.; 6-6 Herman Henry, Dallas; 6-8 Juan Hewitt, New Orleans, and 6-5 Billy R. Smith, Dallas, are the newcomers bidding for recognition.

Six-one Daron Blaylock, Garland; 6-0 Todd Duncan, Lubbock; 6-3 Lincoln Minor, Houston, return and are joined by 5-8 Stewart Barnett, New York City; 6-4 Nathaniel Curvey, Houston; 6-2 Wilbur Griffith, El Paso; 6-4 Clifton Jones, Texas City; 6-2 David Martin, Lexington, Ky.; 6-3 Matt Sears, Midland.

In addition to Wednesday's intra squad scrimmage, MC also has a Friday scrimmage against Fort Hood scheduled at the Chap Center.

McCamey's Terry may walk away while he can

West Texas football fans may have had their last glimpse of one of its finer performers, Rodney Terry of McCamey, a few weeks ago against Reagan County.

Terry has been the cornerstone of the option-based philosophy of Badger coach Buster Leaf for four seasons, but persistent ankle troubles have left Terry hobbled the past three years and Leaf searching for other ways to get the job done.

Now, after injuring his ankle for the third straight season, it looks as if Terry will walk away while he still can.

In Big Lake Oct. 3, Terry burst out around right end to pick up a Badger first down before being dragged out of bounds. But per usual with Terry's career, the Badgers were called for illegal procedure on what could be Terry's last carry as his left ankle once again was left hanging by the threads of thrice-damaged ligaments.

As a freshman, Terry burst on to the scene with nearly 1,000 yards in split time duty as McCamey roared into the state semifinals. Leaf, then in his first season, looked to have a jewel in his backfield for three more seasons.

BUT LIKE many of the best laid plans, Terry's future was torn asunder. Terry's freshman season was his only full, injury-free season.

The fourth of five brothers, all outstanding high school athletes, Rodney Terry may have shown the most potential of all. The eldest Terry, Billy Ray, set a state Class 2A record in the 100-meters at 10.7, and like the rest of the Terry clan — B.J. and Kenny — he was an exceptional football player.

But fate would never let Rodney Terry perform to his full capabilities.

His problems began as a sophomore when Leaf, entering his second year, had hoped Terry would blossom into full form. Still, 900 yards in half a season gave Leaf and the Badgers promise for Terry's best to bloom in his final two season.

That plan soured in the first district game of the season, also against Reagan County, when Terry injured his left ankle again. This time the talus bone in his joint had been fractured, leaving Terry out but for a cameo role in McCamey's return to Bi-District playoff play.

Now Terry, who has had his hopes of running track and playing basketball curtailed in three straight seasons, could be out for the season after his third severe ankle injury. Terry has not been given medical clearance to play in the last three weeks as McCamey has breezed through District 5-2A play.

And it's not certain he would risk further injury should he receive clearance later this season. The danger of further, more permanent injury, seems too great.

INJURIES ARE a serious threat to football players on any level even with improved safety equipment and strict adherance to clean play regulations. It's a risk each player realizes and accepts.

It is sad however, when injuries rob young athletes of a chance at athletic achievement. More so it seems, when those youngsters hold so much promise of greatness.

But yes, there are more important things in life than running with a football. It's all right for a 36-year old Bill Buckner to sacrifice his life and limbs in the World Series, but it's good to see 17-year olds with a little more common sense.

AREA RUMBLINGS: Stanton was rudely bumped from the District 6-2A lead in Forsan last Friday, as the home Buffaloes scored two quick touchdowns just before the half to handcuff the visiting Buffaloes.

This week coach Dale Ruth gets a "second chance" to boost Stanton's playoff stock against Reagan County. The Owls breezed by Ozona, 55-0, after the tie with Forsan.

The Stanton-Reagan County winner is virtually assured of a playoff berth, as is Forsan if they can get past Eldorado, 2-1, and Rankin, 0-3.

The Red Devils were left holding the bag against Eldorado Friday, blowing a 14-point lead in the fourth quarter. Injuries have taken a severe toll on the already-thin Rankin club.

Andrews returns to 2-4A action this week at Lake View after taking its open date. The Mustangs, 2-3, 2-5, losers of three straight before the break, are looking to put together a string of victories to end the season on. The return of defensive backs Mundy Hernandez and Michael Wells, as well as fullback Lut Anderson should help an Andrews resurgence.

Lamesa is also looking to rebound from a three-game losing streak when they host Pecos this week. The Tors fell to Fort Stockton as the Chiefs shredded the Lamesa defense for 25 points, 12 more than they had scored in five previous district contests.

Pecos dropped by the wayside in the playoff chase losing 33-20 to Big Spring Friday while previously unbeaten Monahans tarnished this Friday's showdown with the Steers by stumbling, 34-14, to a rejuvenated Sweetwater.

The playoff picture in 2-4A could clear with the Big Springs-Monahans game — or it could turn to a muddled mess that only a coin flip could sort out.

Fiesta wants the unbeatens

NEW YORK (AP) — The Fiesta Bowl is willing to pay more than $2 million per team if it can get a game for college football's national championship, according to a published report.

Tuesday's New York Times quoted Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl, as saying his game would pay "$2 million plus" to each team if a national championship game can be arranged.

The Tempe, Arizona-based Fiesta Bowl is one of six bowl games played on Jan. 1.

Miami of Florida and Penn State, the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the latest Associated Press college football poll, are both independents and are not bound to any conference or bowl game. Both are 7-0 with four games remaining and, barring upsets, should be undefeated when invitations to bowl games are officially issued on Nov. 22.

Of the New Year's Day games, the Orange Bowl takes the Big Eight champion, the Sugar Bowl takes the Southeastern Conference winner, the Cotton Bowl has the Southwest Conference winner as host and the Rose Bowl matches the Big-10 and Pacific-10 Conference champions.

No. 3 Michigan, 7-0, is in the Big 10, No. 4 Oklahoma — which already has lost to Miami — is in the Big Eight, and No. 5 Auburn, 7-0, is a member of the Southeastern Conference.

Like the Fiesta Bowl, the Florida Citrus Bowl, which is moving to Jan. 1 for the first time this season, is unaffiliated with a major conference.

"Obviously, if we can match them, we'd love it," said Skinner. "In previous years, we have not been in a position where we were able to pay equally with the other Jan. 1 games.

"For a game of that caliber ... the payout would be $2 million plus — maybe $2.1 or $2.2. We would pay around $1.1 million, as we did last year, for any other match."

Ruling strikes random testing plan in NFL

Associated Press

An arbitrator's ruling that struck down NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's plan for random drug testing of players is "a victory for collective bargaining," according to Gene Upshaw, executive director of the players union.

"It reaffirms the agreement we made in 1982 and says that changes in what we agreed to then cannot be made unless the union agrees to them." Upshaw said of the ruling issued Monday in Washington, D.C., by arbitrator Richard Kasher. "It confirms that the clubs cannot have Rozelle do independently what they cannot do themselves under the agreement."

Kasher ruled that Rozelle's plan conflicted with the league's bargaining agreement with the NFL Players Association, which expires in August, 1987.

Rozelle's edict last July, following the cocaine-related deaths of Cleveland Browns safety Don Rogers and University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias, would have made the NFL the only professional sports league to require mandatory random drug testing for all players.

Kasher noted that the 1982 collective bargaining agreement addressed the drug issue by calling for preseason tests of all players as well as individual tests when club physicians suspect a particular player of drug dependency.

Game 7: Tale of two pens

By HOWARD ULMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — One bullpen came through. The other bullpen fell through. And a World Series championship went to New York.

Strong relief pitching by the Mets shut down Boston, while weak relief pitching by the Red Sox spurred New York to a come-from-behind 8-5 victory Monday night in the seventh game of the World Series.

"I have confidence in our bullpen," Mets' Manager Davey Johnson said.

Sid Fernandez killed Boston's momentum when he came in with the Red Sox ahead 3-0 in the fourth inning. Then Jesse Orosco came in with New York ahead 6-5, the tying run on second and no outs in the eighth. He killed Boston's title hopes with two perfect innings to end the game.

MEANWHILE, BOSTON'S bullpen was blowing a 3-3 tie that starter Bruce Hurst handed it after six innings.

"I wasn't nervous. I was pretty calm," said Boston's ace short reliever Calvin Schiraldi, who lost the last two games of the World Series. "I thought I had good stuff, but I just wasn't throwing strikes."

Before the first game, Johnson said the Mets would be in good shape if they could get Boston to go to its bullpen. In a World Series of unexpected turns, that was one forecast that came true.

The Red Sox relievers allowed 12 earned runs in 15⅓ innings for a 7.05 earned run average. In the last two games, they gave up eight earned runs in 4⅔ innings for an ERA of 15.42 and let 20 of the 33 batters they faced reach base.

New York's bullpen posted ERAs of 2.70 for the Series and 3.86 for the last two games.

Fernandez, who was upset when Johnson left him out of the starting rotation for the Series, was New York's most valuable fireman Monday night.

BOSTON WAS ahead 3-0 and had a runner on second and two outs when he replaced starter Ron Darling in the fourth. Fernandez walked the first batter he faced, then retired the next seven, four on strikeouts, before giving way to Roger McDowell in the seventh.

"He kept us off the scoreboard when we had a 3-0 lead. We were hoping to build on that," Boston Manager John McNamara said.

After Jim Rice led off the third with a single, Boston didn't get another hit until it started the eighth with three hits off McDowell. Johnson then brought in Orosco.

"Orosco did an unbelievable job," Darling said, "but Fernandez was the guy who really picked us up."

"No doubt about it, he was the hero," Johnson said of Fernandez. "He shut them down and got the crowd back on our side. If he can shut them down, we can come back."

NO COMEBACK seems impossible against Boston's bullpen. And McNamara's decision to start Hurst on three days' rest virtually guaranteed he would have to rely on his relievers.

"I knew I wouldn't go the whole way," Hurst said. "I just wanted to go as long as I could."

In Game 6 Saturday night, the Red Sox led 3-2 when starter Roger Clemens went out and Schiraldi took the mound to start the eighth. He allowed four runs in 2⅓ innings in New York's 6-5 victory in 10 innings. The tying run scored on reliever Bob Stanley's wild pitch.

Schiraldi entered Monday night's game in the seventh. Ray Knight, the first batter he faced, hit a home run that made the score 4-3 and gave New York a lead it never lost. Schiraldi was charged with three runs in just one-third of an inning.

METS

Still, the Red Sox had not abandoned hope. They reached Mets reliever Roger McDowell for two singles and Evans' two-run double in the eighth, pulling to within 6-5.

Then Johnson called on Jesse Orosco, the left-handed reliever with the nasty breaking pitches and a victory in the final game of the N.L. playoff under his belt.

"I wasn't thinking about baseball. I was looking for the bathroom," Orosco said. "I was pretty nervous. I told myself, 'This is no time to fold.' "

For the Mets this year, no. Orosco set down all six batters he faced, and when he struck out Marty Barrett for the last out of 1986, New York had withstood the final charge.

"I feel like dying," Gedman said.

Penn State jumps to No. 2

Associated Press

Penn State's convincing 23-3 victory over Alabama catapulted the Nittany Lions into second place today in the Associated Press college football poll and sent the Crimson Tide plummeting to eighth.

Nebraska was another big loser, skidding from third place to ninth after being upset by Colorado 20-10. Meanwhile, Michigan, Oklahoma, Auburn, Washington and Arizona State all moved up.

Top-rated Miami was idle last weekend. The Hurricanes entertain Florida State this Saturday, and the Seminoles climbed back into the Top Twenty after a four-week absence.

Miami received 55 of 60 first-place votes and 1,193 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters, to Penn State's four first-place votes and 1,107 points. Both teams are 7-0.

Michigan's 38-14 trouncing of Indiana lifted the Wolverines, 7-0, from fourth place to third with 1,081 points. Michigan received the remaining first-place vote.

Oklahoma, the preseason No. 1 pick, continued its climb back toward the top since a loss to Miami late last month. The Sooners whipped Iowa State 38-0 and jumped from fifth to fourth with 1,017 points.

Auburn trimmed Mississippi State 35-6 and moved up from seventh to fifth with 986 points, followed by Washington, which rose from eighth to sixth with 818 points after a 38-3 drubbing of Oregon.

Arizona State's 52-7 pounding of winless Utah sent the Sun Devils from ninth place to seventh with 798 points, followed by Alabama with 792 points and Nebraska with 684.

Texas A&M, No. 10 last week, again rounded out the Top Ten with 679 points after crushing Rice 45-10.

The Second Ten consists of Iowa, LSU, Arkansas, Arizona, UCLA, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Southern Cal, Mississippi State and Florida State.

Last week, it was Iowa, LSU, Mississippi State, Arkansas, Arizona, Clemson, UCLA, Stanford, Southern Methodist and North Carolina State.

Ohio State returned to the Top Ten after a six-week absence by blanking Minnesota 33-0. Southern Cal reappeared after a one-week lapse by downing Stanford 10-0 and Florida State made it back after a four-week absence by crushing Louisville 54-18.

Meanwhile, Clemson lost to North Carolina State 27-3 and fell out of the rankings, Southern Methodist dropped out after losing to Texas 27-24 and Stanford's loss to Southern Cal cost the Cardinal its spot in the rankings.

Spiders' song and dance matter of life and death

ALBION, Mich. (AP) — Music may enhance romance in the human world, but the right song-and-dance routine is a matter of life and death for wolf spiders, a biologist says.

Albion College researchers have found that two nearly identical species of the common wolf spider can't interbreed only because the males sing and dance differently.

Male spiders don't care which species they breed with, but the female does, said Gail E. Stratton, an assistant professor of biology.

"I only had one female out of 100 that didn't care," she said Thursday. The spiders use their legs and mouths to create distinct routines, she said. One species does a series of bounces while making a staccato buzzing sound, while the other walks around and makes a rapid rattling sound, she said.

The female, when confronted with the advances of a male from the other species, frequently attacked and ate her suitor, or else ran away, Stratton said.

Stratton said she forced the spiders to interbreed and create hybrids by anesthetizing the females, making them more receptive to the advances of males from other species.

Dollar slides

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in Europe early today against all key currencies except the Canadian dollar after heavy selling pushed it sharply lower in the Far East. Gold prices were mixed.

Foreign exchange dealers said the dollar plunged 1.80 yen in Tokyo as investors who had overbought the dollar late last week switched to selling.

It closed at 159.30 Japanese yen, down from 161.10 yen at Monday's close. Later, in London, it fell further to 159.10 yen.

The dollar had climbed 6.95 yen in six trading days to its highest level since early July before today's fall. Dealers said there were no new developments that triggered the dollar sales except that many investors believed that the dollar had peaked.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—2.0315 West German marks, down from 2.0425

—1.6747 Swiss francs, down from 1.6900

—6.6385 French francs, down from 6.6800

—2.2965 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3105

—1,403.75 Italian lire, down from 1,413.50

—1.3873 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

In London, the dollar also fell against the British pound, which cost $1.4168 — more expensive than Monday's $1.4075.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $410.50 a troy ounce, up from $410 bid late Monday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $409.55.

In Zurich, the bid price was $410.40, down from $411.25 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 80 cents to close at a bid $409.43.

Researcher: Oil industry suffers from media bias

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

DALLAS — The oil and gas industry has suffered from a bias in the news media. That was the conclusion of researcher Robert Lichter, author of The Media Elite.

Speaking to the Independent Petroleum Association of America at its annual meeting here, Lichter's presentation was entitled: "Looking for J.R.: How the Media Covered the Energy Crisis."

The Washington, D.C.-based researcher said he had studied 400 news stories between 1973 and 1980, and compared them to what the academic community was saying in its economic literature. He said this comparison provided a view of what the press was saying as opposed to the reality of the facts surrounding the energy crisis.

"We were hearing a lot of talk in the media about obscene profits and tankers waiting off the coast for oil prices to go up as consumers waited in long gas lines. We also heard about the famous oil monopoly," said Lichter.

He said that while negative news stories about obscene profits outnumbered positive ones 15 to 1, oil company's profits were found to be not out of step with other industries. "In fact," said Lichter, "our studies found oil company profits to be somewhere in the middle, around 9th of 25 manufacturing groups."

And while three out of four news stories about competition in the oil industry were negative, the study showed that the oil industry was actually more competitive than many other industries.

Said Lichter: "While three out of four stories in the printed media thought oil companies were monopolistic, it was even higher for TV. On TV, the stories were 6 to 1 against the oil companies, while at the same time two of three economists were saying that the oil industry was not monopolistic."

He said that throughout the energy crisis the main villains presented in the media were the government, OPEC and the oil companies. And the television networks were the most negative. He added that there was not much variation between the three networks, that one did not appear more negative than the others, that all three were approximately equal in their negative coverage of the oil crisis. In the print media, he listed the New York Times as the most biased against the oil industry and Time magazine as being one of the most balanced in its coverage of the energy crisis.

"The media saw a conspiracy in all of this biased coverage," said Lichter, "But I don't think it was a conspiracy. I don't think there was a conscious effort made to persuade the public against the oil industry."

Moreover, Lichter says he feels the bias is the result of most journalists coming from the same urban liberal mode.

"According to a recent survey, three out of four 4 journalists see themselves as political liberals and skeptical of business," said Lichter.

But in spite of this, Lichter, who calls himself a liberal, says most journalists see themselves as objective reporters, but added that it is hard to disassociate one's personal feelings from news coverage, despite great effort.

Lichter said that bias in the news media was a topic that needed further study.

Oil prices fall on rumors of discount

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Oil prices skidded on world oil markets Monday amid reports Saudi Arabia, OPEC's most influential member, has offered to discount its crude by 50 cents a barrel to one large U.S. customer.

In Mexico City, a spokesman for Petroleos Mexicanos, the state oil company, denied reports Mexican had trimmed its light Isthmus crude exports by 50 cents a barrel for U.S. and European customers in a bid to raise sales to the government target of 1.35 million barrels a day.

"Pemex is not taking that type of measure to reduce the price of its crude oil to increase its market," the spokesman said.

Industry sources said Saudi Arabia has offered a 50 cent-a-barrel reduction on its Arab light oil to an unidenfied U.S. buyer under its so-called netback deals, which link the kingdom's crude to the value of petroleum products refined from each barrel.

The Saudis appear to be using the price cut as an incentive to persuade a major U.S. company to buy more of the kingdom's light crude and match heavy crude purchases, the sources said.

Market observers said the Saudi action seemed to involve only one U.S. client and did not signal an across-the-board cut in the kingom's oil prices.

Last December, Saudi Arabia spearheaded OPEC's eight-month pricing war against outside producers by turning up the taps and using netback deals to increase its share of the world market.

But Saudi Arabia's King Fahd personally intervened in OPEC's marathon meeting in Geneva earlier this month and helped remove obstacles to an extension of the cartel's temporary production ceiling aimed at bolstering oil prices.

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Britain's North Sea Brent crude fell 45 cents to $13.60 a barrel. The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light — a key OPEC crude — slipped 10 cents to $12.90 a barrel.

UAE Oil Minister Mana Saeed al Otaiba, in an interview with the semi-official al Ittihad newspaper in Abu Dhabi, proposed that OPEC and non-OPEC producers hold a joint meeting to set world oil prices. He also said the UAE would honor its official OPEC output quota even though the Gulf nation has been overproducing.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate — the benchmark U.S. crude for immediate delivery — dropped 61 cents to $14.41 a barrel.

Analysts said selling also was spurred by concern over bloated oil inventories in the United States and Europe.

West Texas intermediate lost 30 cents to $14.65 a barrel on the spot market.

Unleaded gasoline for immediate delivery on the Merc nosedived by 1.66 cents to 39.74 cents a gallon and leaded gasoline by 1.65 cents to 40 cents a gallon.

Louisiana has highest unemployment rate

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana is again saddled with the nation's highest unemployment rate, and officials say they can't see an end to the oil field depression that sank the state's economy.

The state Labor Department announced Monday that 12.5 percent of Louisiana workers were jobless in September, up from 12.4 percent a month earlier and almost double the national unemployment rate of 6.8 percent.

Mississippi, which had led the nation's unemployment since July, improved to No. 2 with a jobless rate of 11.2 percent.

Labor Department spokesman Allen Johnson said most of the 251,000 Louisianans out of work are victims of the drop in oil prices which led to a virtual shutdown of new drilling and a corresponding decline in manufacturing and construction.

"The oil and gas sector is still going down," he said. "That's the meat of the coconut."

The oil and gas industry lost 1,200 jobs in September and has lost more than 40,000 jobs since the drilling boom ended in the early 1980s.

Louisiana's unemployment became the nation's worst in February, after oil prices were suddenly cut in half, and held that ranking until July, reaching a peak of 13.6 percent.

Johnson said most of the statistical improvement seen since then is due to frustrated workers moving out of state, not the creation of more jobs.

Unemployment in the drilling industry may already have peaked, said Robert Brookshire of the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Housing sales reach seven year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes, bolstered by falling home prices and low mortgage rates, climbed 4.4 percent in September to the highest rate in seven years, a real estate trade group reported Monday.

Existing single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.77 million units last month, up from an August sales pace of 3.61 million units, according to the monthly survey by the National Association of Realtors.

The median sales price for an existing home dropped $1,200 from August to September, the third decline in the past four months. The survey found the median price was $79,700 last month, down 4.2 percent from the high point this year of $83,200 in May.

Analysts said the lower home prices and further declines in mortgage interest rates had helped spur home sales to their highest level since October 1979.

"Affordability conditions are better now than they have been since the late 1970s, luring thousands of home buyers into the marketplace, both first-time and repeat buyers," said Clark E. Wallace, Realtors president.

Clark predicted that sales for all of 1986 would be 8 percent higher than 1985, when 3.21 million homes were sold, and he said this year's strong sales pace should continue in 1987.

Average mortgage rates on loans for existing homes dipped to 10.08 percent last month, according to association economists. This was the lowest rate since December 1978 and more than one percentage point lower than September 1985, when mortgages on home resales were averaging 11.20 percent.

The September sales increase followed gains of 4 percent in August and 2.4 percent in July.

The activity in the resale market has been in contrast to sales of new homes. The latest information, for August, showed sales of new homes were down a sharp 13.4 percent, the fifth consecutive decline and the biggest monthly setback in more than four years.

Analysts have speculated that sales of new homes are being depressed in some parts of the country by a shortage of supply rather than weakness in demand. The Commerce Department will report on September new home sales on Thursday.

Sales of existing homes showed improvement in all parts of the country in September, except the West, where they declined 4.6 percent from the August level to an annual rate of 620,000 units.

Home resales were up 10.3 percent in the South to an annual rate of 1.39 million units, the highest rate since September 1979. This region has only had three monthly increases this year as troubles in the energy and farming industries have depressed activity.

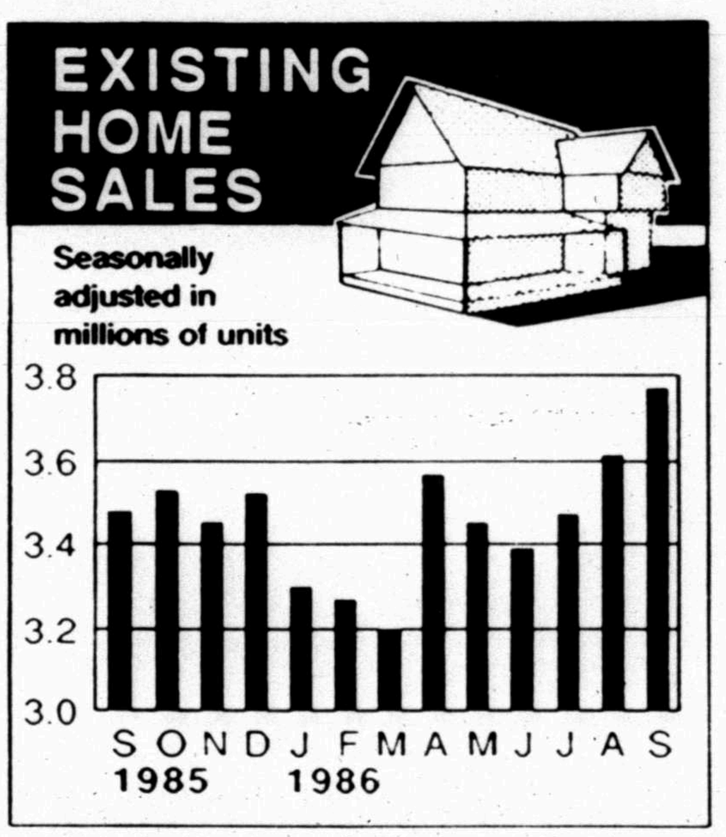
The Midwest had a 5.1 percent increase to an annual rate of 1.04 million units, 8.3 percent ahead of the sales pace a year earlier.

The Northeast had a 1.4 percent September sales gain to an annual rate of 720,000 units, close to a record high for that region.

The $79,700 median sales price put home prices 3.4 percent higher than a year ago. The median is the point at which half the homes sold for more and half for less.

The largest annual price increase by region of the country occurred in the Northeast, where homes were selling for a median price of $106,400 in September, 19.7 percent higher than a year ago. The median home price was $63,100 in the Midwest, 8 percent higher than a year ago, while the West had a median sales price of $101,800 last month, 4.2 percent higher than a year ago.

Home prices in the South have fallen by 0.5 percent since September 1985, down to $74,900 last month, with the decline reflecting sluggish sales for most of the year.



Economist: Energy objectives needed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A long-term solution to the current stress in the energy industry requires the development of energy policy objectives, said an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

Tim R. Smith, writing in the September/October issue of the Fed's Economic Review, suggested three possible objectives for U.S. energy policy: maintaining national security, assuring efficient energy resource extraction and achieving economic stability.

"The first two of these objectives stem from markets that do not always provide a reliable supply of energy. And they may not always provide a reliable supply of energy. And they may not always extract energy resources at the rate society wants," he said in the article. "That is, market prices do not always reflect all social costs and benefits of private production and consumption decisions.

"The third objective, economic stability, arises from a recognition that political instability in world energy markets has clearly contributed to economic instability in the United States."

But current energy policy proposals may not be consistent with these objectives because they work against national and economic security and promote inefficient use of resources, he said.

Proposals to stop additions to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve work against national security and economic stability objectives, he said.

"The Strategic Petroleum Reserve provides a cushion against another embargo.... It provides some protection against risks to national security and eonomic stability," Smith said.

More oil firms report quarterly earnings

The Associated Press

Atlantic Richfield Co. said Monday that its earnings dropped by 75 percent; Occidental Petroleum Corp. said its profit fell by 90 percent and Pennzoil Co. said it lost money in the third quarter.

Atlantic Richfield, the nation's 6th-largest oil company, said it earned $102 million compared with $403 million in the year-ago quarter.

On a per-share basis, the company said its earnings represented 56 cents on each of about 182.2 outstanding shares, compared with $1.98 on 203.5 million outstanding shares in the third quarter of 1985.

The Los Angeles-based company said its revenue fell 36 percent to $3.5 billion from $5.5 billion in the third quarter of 1985.

It said its earnings were affected by an after-tax charge of about $30 million representing the net result of sales of various assets. The figure also included a favorable adjustment of about $11 million from the adoption of a new pension accounting system, the company said.

Atlantic Richfield, also known as Arco, reported significantly decreased oil and gas earnings, at $41 million for the third quarter compared to $304 million for the same period last year.

For the first nine months of 1986, Arco reported net income of $551 million, or $3.03 a share, compared with a net loss of $344 million, or $1.60 a share, in the same period of 1985. The 1985 net loss included the effect of a $1.5 billion after-tax charge taken in the second quarter.

Eleventh-ranked Occidental, which is also based in Los Angeles, said it earned $39.1 million on sales of $3.7 billion in the third quarter, compared with a year-ago profit of $381.7 million on sales of $3.4 billion.

On a per-share basis, this worked out to 12 cents per share, down from $3.04 per share in the third quarter last year.

The company said its 1986 earnings included a one-time gain of $106 million on the sale of its 20 percent holding of the common stock of the Southland Corp. In addition, it said its 1985 results included a $424 million gain, of which $181 million was a one-time capital-loss carryforward tax benefit, and a $243 million gain from the sale of Colombian interests.

Occidental's statement said oil and gas operations from both domestic and foreign sources resulted in a $2.8 million loss in the third quarter, compared with earnings of $328.2 million in the same period for 1985.

The company said it earned $161 million on $11.1 billion of revenue for the first three quarters of 1986, compared with $643.3 million on sales of $10.8 billion for the same period in 1985.

Houston-based Pennzoil said it lost $10 million on sales of $422 million in the third quarter, compared with a profit of $44.4 million, or 94 cents a share, on $564 million of sales in the year-ago period.

However, the company said its quarterly income included a $23 million extraordinary item which incurred in connection with an exchange of new debentures for old ones during the quarter.

The item, based on accounting requirements, will be amoritized over the life of the new debentures, or about 12 years, said Norman Luke a company vice president.

Net income before the extraordinary item for the quarter totaled $13 million, or 25 cents a share.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Energy, auto troubles slow income growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal incomes rose a modest 1.4 percent in the spring as overall income growth was held back by hard times in energy states and layoffs in the auto industry, the government reported says.

The Commerce Department said Monday that residents of six states actually suffered declines in incomes during the April-June quarter.

The hardest hit region of the country was the Southwest, where incomes grew by just 0.8 percent in the second quarter.

Bankers say banks need freedom to compete

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The banking industry's inability to offer some of the products provided by its non-bank competitors stems from the bankers' failure to educate consumers and the industry of the benefits of competition, leaders of several banks say.

At the same time, the bankers said, some of the industry issues raised by consumer groups, such as better disclosure and control of credit card interest rates, could be addressed by giving their banks more freedom to compete.

More companies unable to insure directors

BOSTON (AP) — A four-fold increase in liability insurance premiums has led a rising number of small and medium-sized companies to leave their directors unprotected against lawsuits by stockholders and the public, according to a new survey.

The nationwide poll of 41,000 companies by Growth Resources Inc. said Monday that only 31 percent of small company boards provided director liability coverage this year, down from 41 percent in 1985.

Dealers continuing to snap up new gold coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The popular American Eagle gold coin went on sale again with anxious dealers snapping up 134,000 ounces of the coins, officials reported.

Donna Pope, director of the U.S. Mint, said Monday that each primary dealer was limited to purchase 5,000 ounces even though the dealers have reported demand from the general public is far outpacing the supply.

The coins, the first general-circulation U.S. gold coin in 54 years, were put on sale for the first time Oct. 20. But embarrassed officials at the Mint were forced to suspend sales the very next day after the initial minting of 558,000 ounces sold out.

Exports of U.S. steel partially offsets imports

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Shipments of finished products containing foreign steel amounted to 16.1 million tons last year, aggravating the problems domestic steelmakers face in direct imports of the widely used metal, an industry trade group says.

Indirect steel imports in 1985 were only partially offset by exports of products containing 8.7 million tons of American steel, leaving a trade deficit of 7.4 million tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute said Monday.

Senators seeking re-election seem to be in 'safe seats'

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Politics is a perilous business but a dozen or more U.S. senators seeking re-election this year can probably relax: Barring the unforeseen, their seats are safe.

The reasons are as diverse as the candidates and the states they represent. For some, strong opposition never developed. Others are simply well entrenched. And still others are merely lucky.

Although the safe seats are nearly evenly divided between the two parties, that may give a small edge to Democrats simply because fewer of them are running.

Twenty-two of the 34 Senate seats at stake in the Nov. 4 election are Republican seats. Only 12 Democratic seats are at risk.

On the Republican side, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., was elected to a third Senate term with 64 percent of the vote six years ago. As he seeks a fourth, he may improve that margin.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., decided not to challenge Dole and his eventual opponent, Guy McDonald, an unemployed teacher, is raising almost no money, is not criticizing his opponent, and doesn't particularly like crowds.

In Oregon, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who had only a narrow re-election victory six years ago, has been buoyed by his success in steering a sweeping tax overhaul bill through Congress. A possible challenge by Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., evaporated when the House ethics commitee opened an investigation of Weaver's handling of campaign funds. State Rep. Rick Bauman ultimately got the Democratic nomination but was given little chance because of low name recognition.

Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, has converted his opposition to President Reagan on a variety of issues into a political plus in a state whose agricultural economy is in bad shape, a fact blamed on the Reagan administration by many Iowans.

New Hampshire voters have a reputation for frugality and Sen. Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., made himself virtually impregnable by his sponsorship of the now-famous Gramm-Rudman budget balancing legislation. His opponent, Endicott Peabody, is a former governor of Massachusetts who has been criticized for carpetbagging.

By all accounts, Sen. Daniel Quayle, R-Ind., is well on the way to an easy victory over Democrat Jill Long, a member of the Valpairaiso City Council.

And in Utah, Republican Sen. Jake Garn faces only token opposition from Democrat Craig Oliver, a real estate agent and property manager. Garn, who is chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the budget for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, became the first non-astronaut to fly on the space shuttle. He underwent surgery last month to donate one of his kidneys to his diabetic daughter.

On the Democratic side, former astronaut John Glenn is expected to score an easy victory in Ohio over GOP Rep. Tom Kindness to claim a third Senate term. Glenn won by nearly 69 percent of the vote six years ago and polls show him well ahead this year.

In South Carolina, Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, who first won office in the state in 1949, is a clear favorite for re-election to a fourth term over former U.S. Attorney Henry D. McMaster. Hollings is solidly entrenched and won re-election six years ago with 70 percent of the vote.

Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., went to work to shore up his Kentucky political base after the 1984 defeat of fellow Democrat Sen. Walter D. Huddleston by Republican Mitch McConnell. The GOP nominee, Louisville attorney Jackson M. Andrews, is given little chance for an upset.

President and Mrs. Reagan greet children, attending the signing Monday in the White House East Room, of H.R. 5484, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986.

Reagan signs tough anti-drug measure into law at ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan and Sen. Paula Hawkins are two of the driving forces behind America's changing attitude toward drug abuse, says President Reagan, who signed a tough new anti-drug bill into law at a White House ceremony.

Reagan was surrounded by senators and representatives Monday as he signed the $1.7 billion measure, which doubles the federal budget for chasing drug dealers and smugglers and stiffens penalties for traffickers.

Even though the measure was born of a strong bipartisan effort on Capitol Hill, Republicans outnumbered Democrats on the White House attendance list, and Reagan took the opportunity to single out Sen. Paula Hawkins as being the "driving force" behind the anti-drug abuse effort.

The Florida Republican is locked in a tough battle against popular Democratic Gov. Bob Graham and she has made her anti-drug efforts a hallmark of her campaign. Graham has stressed that his own tough law-and-order background has been as strong as his opponent's.

Reagan has traveled three times to Florida to aid Mrs. Hawkins' re-election campaign, one of the seats needed to keep GOP control of the Senate. On a visit last Friday, Reagan lambasted "the liberals," whom he accused of jumping on the anti-drug bandwagon after Mrs. Hawkins took up the cause.

Using the glittering East Room ceremony as a background, the president praised Mrs. Hawkins and his wife, Nancy, for making a commitment to fighting drugs "long before it was the popular thing to do."

Reagan saluted his wife for having "mobilized the American people" with her five-year effort against drug abuse among children. After signing the bill, the president handed his pen to the startled first lady, then rose from his seat to give his beaming wife a kiss.

Reagan also paid tribute to Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.; Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y.; and Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y. They had joined Reagan on the podium, along with Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

"Today marks a major victory in our crusade against drugs," Reagan said before signing the measure. "The American people want their government to get tough and go on the offensive."

The president, asserting that new money and laws alone will not solve the problem, asked the American people to "be strong in your intolerance" of illegal drug use.

"The vaccine that will end the epidemic is a combination of tough laws, like the one we signed today, and a dramatic change in public attitude," he said.

As part of his campaign against drug abuse that was begun in August, Reagan has voluntarily submitted to a urinalysis exam to test for illegal drug use and has required drug tests for federal workers in sensitive positions.

After the ceremony, Dole said the measure was "a bipartisan effort," but he said there was "a lot of politics" in regard to Mrs. Hawkins' campaign and the drug issue in Florida.

Dole accused the Democrats in the state of "trying to isolate" Mrs. Hawkins and pushing "an effort to discredit" her anti-drug activities.

The measure signed by Reagan was passed by the House on a 378-16 vote, while the Senate gave approval by a voice vote without debate. Senate passage in Congress' waning hours on Oct. 17 was assured only after some proponents relented on their demand for a death penalty in murder cases related to drugs.

Backers of the bill said it marked a significant change in Congress' traditional approach to fighting drugs because it authorized nearly $500 million for anti-drug education and rehabilitation, aimed at reducing demand for drugs.

Overall, the bill authorizes $1.7 billion in the current fiscal year for drug enforcement, treatment and rehabilitation.

Scavengers are put to work on Sugar Ditch shanties

By WOODY BAIRD

TUNICA, Miss. (AP) — Scavengers are picking apart the shanties along Sugar Ditch, but former residents say they had hoped for something more dramatic, like a bulldozer, to start demolition of the Mississippi Delta slum.

"It would give me great pleasure to see it torn down because I'm the one who slept in there with the rats and roaches," said Jearlean Simmons, a former resident who lived with nine children in a three-room shack.

She has moved her family into emergency housing on the other side of town but returned Monday expecting to see work crews start demolishing the shacks.

Sugar Ditch, which draws its name from a stinking drainage ditch slimy with human waste, attracted national attention in July 1985 when the Rev. Jesse Jackson paid a visit and called the slum "America Ethopia."

The federal government has since approved $4.6 million in loans and grants for subsidized housing in Tunica County, one of the nation's poorest.

Vice Mayor Ellis Darby said the city got the title last week to 17 houses along Sugar Ditch and work crews will begin soon to finish off any shacks left by the scavengers.

A half-dozen men who attacked the shanties with hand tools on Monday said they were out to scrounge up any usable lumber.

The city plans to purchase a three-block section along Sugar Ditch and must find housing for the 50 or so families still living in the area.

Many of those residents still at Sugar Ditch live in substandard housing, but their houses are in considerably better shape than the first group of shacks bought by the city.

Those 17 shanties and the land they sit on went for a total of $40,000, Darby said. The residents were moved earlier this year into house trailers with subsidized rents.

Mayor James Wilson apparently put out the word last week that residents willing to tear down the shacks could have them, Darby said.

Suspicion of Mideast terrorism restrained by Syria's Arab ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria's influence with radical Arabs and its potential role in a Mideast peace settlement have restrained the United States from following through on the suspicions of terrorism it harbors against the Middle Eastern country.

Eager to find all the help it can in gaining the release of the seven Americans listed as hostages in southern Lebanon, the Reagan administration repeatedly has turned to President Hafez Assad's government — even while accusing Damascus of giving terrorists safe haven.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz told reporters in New York earlier this month, after appealing for help to Foreign Minister Faruk Shara, "I never miss the opportunity to talk to the Syrians about the subject."

However, Shultz said, "How much influence they have is the question." Hostages have been held in Syria and released through their lines, he said, but, "that's different from being the party responsible for getting them released."

Terrorism experts in and outside the U.S. government credit Syria with helping at least three American hostages make their way to freedom after being released by their captors in southern Lebanon. They were Jeremy Levin, a Cable News Network correspondent; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; and the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest.

And yet, after Britain charged on Friday there was "conclusive evidence" Syrian diplomats and intelligence agents were involved in an attempt last April to bomb an Israeli airliner, the Reagan administration recalled Ambassador William Eagleton from Damascus.

The move could be a first step toward breaking ties with Damascus, as the British did, although Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman, on Monday stressed that recalling Eagleton was, in itself, "an extremely serious measure."

Reflecting the U.S. dilemma, the spokesman also sought to hold Assad to his pledge to assist the seven American hostages. "We would expect the Syrians to continue their effort," Redman said.

Syria is considered the dominant political force in Lebanon, and while Assad's government is philosophically too secular to please most Moslem fundamentalist groups allegedly involved in terrorist incidents, its political influence is substantial.

Assad has consistently denied the accusations that his country abets terrorists. Shara, meanwhile, dismissed the British allegations Sunday. "We are not threatening," he said. "We condemn terrorism."

However, he made an exception for "legitimate struggles against Israeli occupation."

Judith Kipper, Middle East specialist at the American Enterprise Institute, a private research group, questioned the decision to withdraw Eagleton.

"It's necessary to consult with our ambassador, but I think it's essential we send him back as soon as possible," she said in an interview. "In the political culture of the Middle East, public humiliation is not the way to get Syria to act in ways that will allow the United States to protect its interests and to get out its hostages, as well."

Experts on terrorism are convinced Syria plays a double role: Providing a safe haven for Abu Nidal, head of the Fatah Revolutionary Council, and others accused of terrorism, but also assisting American hostages, at least after they are released.

"Nobody here thinks Syria could press a button and get them out," a State Department official said. "But we feel they've tried to be helpful up to a point."

Syria is not considered the dominant influence with the groups believed holding the Americans. "These people, if they are influenced by anybody, are influenced by Iran," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "And Syria doesn't want to jeopardize its relations with Iran."

Privately, State Department officials have no doubt that both Syria and Iran use terrorism to advance their political aims. Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger branded both governments three years ago for the bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut that killed 241 U.S. military personnel.

Farm Belt's income improvements subsidized

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's Farm Belt enjoyed the best gains in personal income of any region during the spring, but the improvement came entirely from higher government subsidy payments, the Commerce Department says.

The department said Monday that Americans saw their incomes rise a modest 1.4 percent from April through June, down slightly from a 1.5 percent advance in the first three months of the year.

The overall gain masked wide disparities between regions, officials said. Several farm states had increases far above the national average as government subsidy payments rose dramatically. Without this increase, farm income actually would have fallen during the second quarter, government analysts said.

The biggest advance was a 13.4 percent rise in North Dakota, followed close behind by increases of 10.5 percent in South Dakota and 10.1 percent in Nebraska.

Other leading gainers were Iowa, up 8.5 percent, Kansas and Montana, both up 5.5 percent; Minnesota, up 4.1 percent; Illinois, up 2.7 percent; Wyoming, up 2.6 percent; and Indiana, up 2.4 percent.

By contrast, six states suffered declines in income during the spring. Arkansas was the biggest loser with a 1.4 percent drop.

The Commerce Department said Arkansas and other Southern states, with smaller corn and wheat production, did not reap the benefits in government aid that fell to North Dakota and other states in the Plains and Midwest.

Other states suffering declining incomes were Louisiana, down 1.3 percent because of the depressed energy business; Delaware, down 1.1 percent; Alaska, down 1 percent, also because of cutbacks in energy; and Vermont and Alabama, both down 0.1 percent.

The Delaware decline was blamed on cutbacks in the production of chemicals and new cars. Layoffs in the auto industry, blamed on record high inventories of unsold cars, hurt income growth in other states as well. Michigan, for example, had a tiny 0.3 percent income gain in the second quarter.

By region of the country, the Southwest had the poorest showing, a tiny 0.8 percent increase as energy-producing states continued to suffer because of sharp cutbacks in drilling and exploration followed by a 0.9 percent rise in the Southeast.

The Plains states had the strongest income growth of any region, a 5.2 percent rise that was far ahead of the nationwide average. Other regions posted more modest advances, including New England, up 1 percent; the Mideast states, up 1.2 percent; the Great Lakes, up 1.6 percent; the Rocky Mountain region, up 1.9 percent; and the West, which had a 1.3 percent income rise.

The overall income gain of 1.4 percent looked a little better because prices actually were falling during the period. After adding in a 0.3 percent drop in inflation, Americans' incomes rose 1.7 percent.

The figures reflect changes in total personal income from April through June. The department said that when farm incomes were removed, incomes were up 1 percent nationwide, reflecting declines in manufacturing and mining and gains in other non-farm categories.

Effects of meatpacking strike wane, merchants optimistic

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Effects of a 12-week strike at the John Morrell meatpacking plant are wearing off as the anniversary of the strike's end approaches, and merchants say they are more optimistic about the holiday selling season.

"Nobody likes to go through a strike," said Jim Lyons, business agent for Local 304A of the United Food and Commerical Workers Union. "But I think our people realize that what we did last year, first of all, was very hard on our membership. But I think they realize now that what we did had to be done."

The strike began Sept. 1, 1985, after negotiations between the company and the union broke down. A tentative settlement was reached Nov. 18, and about 2,500 striking union employees ratified the agreement Nov. 20.

The company is finishing a $2.1 million addition to modernize its pork operation. Company officials have said employment at the plant could increase by about 300 people when the new addition is in use.

Union officials say the company is not the same employer as when they began working 10, 15 or 20 years ago.

"As far as how they treat people, I think they're leaning toward being a high-pressure company," Lyons said. "Their line speeds are way up. Our employees work hard — I don't know if the rewards are in accord with that.

"Ten years ago everybody enjoyed going to work. Today, I know a lot of people have a hard time walking in the door."

The battles aren't over at the plant yet. In August workers twice staged sympathy strikes in support of fellow union workers at a Morrell plant in Arkansas City, Kan. A court battle in that dispute continues between Morrell and the union.

Meanwhile, merchants in Sioux Falls are more encouraged going into this year's holiday selling season, said Lee Brown, manager of public affairs for the city's Chamber of Commerce.

"People really felt that strike last year," Brown said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Economic sanctions against South Africa now in effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa are in effect since President Reagan signed an executive order to comply with the will of Congress.

"All affected executive departments and agencies shall take all steps necessary, consistent with the Constitution, to implement the requirements of the act," Reagan said in his order signed Monday.

The law bans imports of South African iron, steel, sugar and other agricultural products, uranium, coal and textiles. It also prohibits exports of petroleum products to Pretoria.

Est company owes taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parent company of the est movement, which said it taught people to change events shaping their lives, owes $3.3 million in back taxes and penalties to the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Tax Court ruled.

The tax court ruled that Erhard Seminars Training engaged in sham transactions to gain tax deductions.

The est movement is aimed at transforming "the ability of individuals to experience living so that the situations they have been trying to change or have been putting up with clear up just in the process of life itself."

The biggest portion of the back taxes and penalties arose from agreements under which Erhard purportedly sold "Body of Knowledge," a collection of writings about est, to foreign corporations, bought the exclusive license to use them in the United States and then wrote off the cost as an expense of doing business.

Special Trial Court Judge James S. Gussis last week wrote: "The sole purpose of this elaborate paper facade was to obtain tax deductions."

Elderly still go to homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Community services that perform housekeeping and other chores for the eldery make their lives easier but do not keep them out of nursing homes and hospitals, a government study said.

In addition to improving the quality of life for the elderly, community care also made life easier for the family and friends who provided most of their care.

The $45 million study, released Monday by the Department of Health and Human Services, was six years in the works. It involved 6,341 people in 10 states. These people were channeled into community care services from 1982 to 1984, and their average age was 80.

About 11.5 percent of those in the demonstration project were in nursing homes at the end of a year, compared with 13 to 14 percent of those in the control group. Those "differences were small and not significant," the study said.

Clandestine calls denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has denied any knowledge of a report saying telephone calls were placed almost daily to a National Security Council official from Salvadoran safe houses set up by a former CIA agent.

Even if the report were true, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday, "I don't know whether it would constitute any illegalities on its face."

Newsweek magazine said Sunday that calls were made nearly every day in mid-September to Lt. Col. Oliver North of the NSC staff from safe houses set up by Max Gomez, reputed to be a leader in the clandestine effort to resupply guerrillas trying to oust the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Asked about the report, Speakes said, "I don't know the answer to that. ...I don't know anything about it."

Soviets sending military equipment to Nicaragua in wake of aid approval

MIAMI (AP) — The Soviet Union has sent helicopters, missiles and other military equipment to Nicaragua in response to congressional approval of $100 million in aid to anti-Sandinista rebels, The Miami Herald reported today.

The equipment, including sophisticated attack helicopters and ground-to-air missiles, has arrived in the Central American nation in recent weeks, the Herald reported.

The new helicopters unloaded within the past two weeks from a Soviet freighter would have left Europe after the congressional approval of the Contra aid was assured with House action on June 25, the Herald said.

"With the $100 million (approved), the Soviets have definitely upped the ante," an unidentified Western diplomat in Managua told the newspaper.

The Contra aid package President Reagan signed Saturday may mean new cargo planes and possibly fixed-wing attack aircraft for the rebels. A large increase in supply flights is certain.

The Sandinistas acquired as many as eight new Mi-25 helicopter gunships, known as "flying tanks" because of heavy armor and armaments, the newspaper said. The Sandinistas were believed by Western officials to have had between six and 12 Mi-25s. Sandinista military officials claimed they had eight.

Since few Nicaraguan pilots can fly the Mi-25s, they have been used sparingly against the Contras. But when used, they are devastatingly effective, the newspaper reported.

U.S. officials maintain that Mi-25s are frequently flown by Cuban pilots, even in combat.

The first shipment of SA-3 ground-to-air missiles, which could significantly bolster Nicaruaga's air defenses, arriveo more than a month ago, the paper quotes sources as saying.

The two-stage SA-3 is small enough to be carried in pairs on a truck and can be used as a short-range defense against low-flying objects.

Western diplomats also said that at least three East bloc freighters were docked until last week at Corinto, the main port on Nicaragua's Pacific coast. A lot of military equipment unloaded from the freighters has not been identified by Western officials, the newspaper said.

More than a dozen transport helicopters arrived in Nicaragua between April and late July, according to the Herald, adding to a fleet of 10 or 11 Soviet transport helicopters.
